The question is not whether those increases were justified or not, the question is did the process allow for the checks and balances to ensure that there was justification. That's the question.

So, the profile that we see thus far is a project going on, the project manager is accepted by government as having all the expertise to see the project through. We have the ministry merely acting while that project manager is directly responsible to the ministry. They don't have the ability to employ checks and balances, we simply have the ministry operating as a collating device collecting the information being passed on to them by the project manager making sure that  $2 + 2 = 4$  to create the necessary documentation to pass down to Treasury to be double checked by them (meaning just to ensure the amounts are correct), and Treasury cuts a cheque back to the project manager.

In some instances, payments were made directly to subcontractors. But regardless of who the payments were made to that is what you ended up with. You ended up with that procedure taking place and throughout that entire process, at no point in time (in my view) was there any guarantee that any amount paid out was the correct amount that should have been paid out. Not suggesting that people were padding bills or doing anything. Simply saying that there is doubt there and will always be there, and it will never, ever be fixed because of how it was done. That's what I am saying.

I will be moving on to a new topic now, and since it is a few minutes, you might allow me to stop for the afternoon.

CONSTRUCTION PROJECT ACCOUNT

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Thank you, Madam Speaker. When we closed off yesterday, I had thus far been able to (in my opinion) paint the picture of exactly the scene that prevailed from 1992 going forward with regards to the implementation phase of the Pedro St. James Project.

This morning let me first of all go about using two little example to prove the point I was making yesterday afternoon. My point during the whole debate yesterday afternoon was that in having Financial and Stores Regulations waived in order to allow for CHRM to be appointed as the project manager, and not involving any other agency or any contractor (not necessarily a building contractor but any other contractor) to act on behalf of the Government, it left gaps within the system of financial accountability whereby the ministry was unable to justify having value received for money spent.

I want to go back to the year 1991 (I think it was), the Civil Aviation Authority engaged in a resurfacing programme at the Owen Roberts Airport runway. When that was done, it was the Civil Aviation Authority who was getting this resurfacing done on their property. The Public Works Department (who are not professional airport runway pavers, if I may use that term) hired an engineer to design and develop procedures, calculations and everything else so that a contractor could do the paving. But this was acting on behalf of the Civil Aviation Authority.

After this was done, the job was put to tender. Whoever won the contract to do the paving did the paving. Public Works then retained the consultant engineer as the resident engineer during the time of paving to make sure that everything was done properly. Now, this is Public Works acting on behalf of the Civil Aviation Authority. Public Works then ensured that what was contracted for was done, and that it was contracted for the price agreed upon before the job started. They also hired the technical expertise needed to see the job through.

Public Works at that time was acting for . . . while it is a statutory body it is still considered an arm of government. What did not happen at that point in time was that the entire system was bypassed because Public Works did not have the in-house expertise to ensure that the job was done right. What Public Works did was ensure that there was value received for monies spent.

Let us look at another example—the George Town Hospital, which is probably the single largest individual project by way of money spent that this government has engaged in. If I am not mistaken, that contract was in excess of $20 million, plus whatever else. How was that done? The ministry knew what it wanted. Public Works hired a specialist architectural firm from overseas. They went through the usual process and hired this one after acquiring a list of qualified firms. After plans were drawn and all of the changes and additions, agreements and whatever, the plans were approved.

Public Works did not hire anybody to do the job it. Public Works went through the normal procedure as set out in the Finance and Stores Regulations. Part of the expertise needed was not in-house so it was acquired from overseas, that is, the expertise with regard to the architectural design, drawings, plans and all of that. Then through a tendering process, bids were accepted. I think McAlpine Limited was awarded the bid for the hospital itself.

Now, Public Works Department was still not out of the picture after that. Because of the magnitude of the project, the Public Works Department was instrumental in hiring a project manager who was on site. Now, you have a contractor, Madam Speaker, a main contractor who is responsible to produce and deliver what the contract says at the price arranged. If there are any changes (because that can happen in anything you do) you have the methodology in place where you justify and verify what those changes are, what the additional costs are going to be, the variations, etcetera, and you move on with it.

But the point I make about it is that while you had your contractor—again I underscore that was the largest single contract from a dollar point of view that the government had engaged in to my memory—anyhow, while you have your contractor, Madam Speaker, there was a project manager directly responsible to the Public Works Department who was acting on behalf of the government ensuring that when bills were presented by the contractor that those bills were verified and justified.

But then he had to answer to Public Works too. Public Works had to say, 'yes, everything is fine' before any cheque was cut. You see, the Ministry did not go and hire this man to be the project engineer and tell him to hire McAlpine Limited or whoever he wanted to do the job and the Project Engineer send the ministry the bills and the ministry just send it to Treasury to get it paid. There were checks and balances. I use that example and the previous one to show what I am talking about when I say checks and balances.

Madam Speaker, let me interject here to say that the whole basis of the argument has nothing to do with anyone's incompetence—especially the staff within the Ministry of Tourism. It is all based on the fact that the whole thing from the very beginning left too many areas open for uncertainty because the proper checks and balances were not in place.

At the PAC Meeting which just took place, Madam Speaker . . . actually before I get to that . . . Officials from the ministry themselves have said that there was no formal agreement between the ministry and CHRM whereby the ministry assumed the full responsibility for the overall financial profile of the projects. For the first two years of the project, the ministry personnel did not even have the technology to provide the financials required to manage a project of that magnitude (that is, ministry staff themselves). That is not making excuses, that is simply stating the facts.

During all of this time, surely the minister must have recognised what was happening. When we look at the functions of the staff in the ministry and we hear about the overall financial profile of the projects, not having that ability the disadvantage that is immediately created is that no one can then look at a bill that is passed to the ministry and be able to know whether the bill is justified. All they can really do is add the figures up, make sure that is correct, and pass it on. They can't do anything else because they don't have the wherewithal to do it. It is nothing to do with whether they have the sense because at that point in time it was nothing to do with competence or intelligence, it was simply that they were not provided with the wherewithal from day one.

So, with that great disadvantage, at the end of the day we have to actually say they did well given the circumstances. But that is not the argument. The truth is they are not in the picture. The question is: why were the circumstances created to put everything at such a disadvantage and allow it to continue in that manner? I contend that staff should not have been exposed to that.

When I started off the debate yesterday, I went through after the conceptual stage and the consultancy stage creating the concept of what the project was going to look like at the end of the day. Everybody was exuberant and happy with the knowledge that seemed to be there. Somebody had to have been able to say, 'yes this is how we would like it to be, and we can use this knowledge to ensure that at the end of the day the project looks the way we want it to look. But beyond that we have to have due process and proper procedures to accomplish it' and that is where the breakdown took place, in my view.

Obviously, at the end of the day the big question all around is who was responsible for that? Accountability, Madam Speaker, that is the question. So, as has been brought into play by the Government Minute, we have the Historic Sites Committee, the staff at the ministry, the Minister, Executive Council and the Treasury. The only reason why I cannot name fifteen more is because you cannot get fifteen more dragged into it because as many as could have been would have been.

Madam Speaker, this exercise is not to take all the people involved from A to Z to find out how much wrong they did. This exercise is to prove, first of all, that at certain times during that whole process there was mismanagement. Mismanagement doesn't mean I went and took $200 out of the till and put in my pocket and ran away with it—that's theft! That is not what we are talking about.

Let's look at what you have to deal with and who you have dealing with it: The Government Minute says that on the recommendation of the Historic Sites Committee the ministry prepared a paper and took it to Executive Council to get section 8(1) of the Financial and Stores Regulations waived to get this man—or let me say it correctly, CHRM—to evolve from consultant to project manager.

No one in their right mind would expect the Historic Sites Committee—no matter what its composition, no matter who was on the Historic Sites Committee—to expect them to talk about the procedure that had to take place. They could only say what they wanted to say based on what had happened, and what they wanted to see in their just minds was to ensure that the project was completed in the way it was envisaged. They wanted to use the expertise of CHRM.

Now, I can promise the world . . . I don't have the facts in front of me but I will bet anyone if there were minutes of whatever meeting that decided that (the minutes of the meeting of the Historic Sites Committee) . . . I don't know exactly what took place, I only know what the Government Minute says. But I will bet anyone that if the truth were known about that, nothing about procedure came into the play with all of this; it was just simply what you wanted to achieve. That was somebody else's job so don't put in the Government Minute and try to make it sound like the government or an agency or an arm of the government acted on the recommendations of these people as if these people were qualified to recommend to get it to that stage in that manner. It could not happen and they knew it.

But I can read and I can understand and I know it too. You see, if you and I are walking down the road and

I take a slingshot out and I fire it and hit somebody else in the eye, I am going to spread the blame because two of us fired it (you and me) and the punishment might be less. That is how life is. You might simply have been in my company—a totally innocent bystander. It just happened, but, by association, culpability exists.

So, as far as I am concerned, if an error in judgment is to be placed it cannot be levelled with the Historic Sites Committee because the concept of what they wanted to achieve was not wrong. And I am not arguing that. I am arguing procedural matters. Madam Speaker. Our minister is a former financial secretary who continues to tell us about his experiences with government. I don't deny that and I don't argue about that. I know it is the truth. So, for me, he has to get up and justify why this procedure went the way it went. I will just have to wait and hear why it went that way.

But, if I am going to act responsibly, I cannot be expected not to bring a motion of this nature—I must bring a motion of this nature because otherwise until all of us are in the grave, the truth will not be known. We will be lucky if this will help to bring that process about. Anyway, that's all that is being sought, nothing more.

Madam Speaker, I don't often say this, but Darwin Kurt Tibbetts has no intention, no desire, no inkling to stand up and accuse anyone of anything if I know better. But I refuse to live my life in the shadow of doubt about all these things and not find out the truth. Then you say, 'if you are going to be a good person, you better say nothing about it because you really don't know the truth.' That cannot be normal procedure in life, it cannot be! Hence the call for transparency.

These contracts, whatever they were, everybody should be able to look at them because once everything was done properly, according to the contract, nobody has an argument. But that doesn't mean that I must either sit or stand and say, 'well, that's how it is so we have to live with it.' No! Hence the call for change. And if it takes a change in bodies to bring about a change in the system, let's get it on. My job as the mover of this motion is to build the case to show that the motion is legitimate and it must be replied to.

Madam Speaker, during the course of all of this, after CHRM was appointed the project manager for the implementation phase of the Pedro St. James project . . . if I am going to get this totally correct, I will have to crave your indulgence just to read for a short bit.

In the Auditor General's Report (which was discussed in a public forum at a Public Accounts Committee meeting on Monday of this week) at page 41 of this report under the heading of "Multimedia Contract" it says, "One of the main features of the Pedro St. James sight is the multimedia theatre. This theatre building was constructed as part of the visitor centre project, which was tendered. The main consultant, Commonwealth Historic Resource Management (CHRM) has confirmed to the ministry that the multimedia production contract was also tendered. Two Cana- dian consulting companies were extensively interviewed and, as a result of the interview and written proposals, the project manager recommended that the Ministry hire Steve Shaw Productions (SSP). The Audit Office was able to review only the winning technical/financial proposal. Other submission(s) were not made available to us, nor were the criteria by which the two competing bids were judged.”

I stop right there to prove one point, the Auditor General could not get the information as a check and balance to ensure that the bid was given fairly. The ministry (who the project manager was directly responsible to) obviously does not have that information. Having hired the project manager and trusting them to do justice to the project, they gave assurances that this bid was done fairly and openly, and two firms were consulted. But no one has the ability to look at any records to verify that.

Madam Speaker, I am not suggesting that all that is said is not true. I am not suggesting that SSP were not the right people to hire. But, again from the looks of this, we will go to our graves and never be able to prove it. That's the whole point. You must have your checks and balances. I just wanted to stop to make the point to reinforce my line of argument.

The Auditor General went on to say, “The Ministry met with the Chairman of the Central Tenders Committee and explained the reason for the recommended selection.”

The ministry now is going to go back to the Financial and Stores Regulation, but it has already bypassed via Executive Council . . . I don't know what, but they go back now to say that they are going to check with the Chairman of the Central Tenders Committee (CTC).

“The Ministry subsequently made a submission to Executive Council seeking approval to hire SSP as a sub-contractor to CHRM. The Ministry has advised us that CHRM also contracted with 11 other sub-consultants to provide services. We have no knowledge of these contracts nor any details of the financial and technical arrangements between the various consultants.” If the Auditor General's Office cannot get their hands on these documents, it must mean the ministry doesn't have them—and nobody has them that matters in Cayman. What that means, Madam Speaker, is that the ministry did not have the ability—not the individual ability of people. I am talking about the technical ability to ensure that that type of thing was done correctly.

You see, some people will use the argument that if you hire a project manager, you have to put your trust in the project manager to act on your behalf to do what's right. Certainly! But you must have your checks and balances. You must! Everywhere in the world—the smaller shops these days operate like that. You have your cashier and if you hire a cashier your immediate thought is that you must hire that cashier because you trust that cashier. You trust that cashier until that cashier does something to make you not trust him, but you have got your tapes and you have got your computer systems with the cash register which includes your inventory and all that as your safeguard. If you don't have a safeguard and if you have a cashier that is a thief, he could put you bankrupt and you not even knowing it. That is not assuming that every cashier you hire is a thief. That is simply having your checks and balances in place so that if something goes wrong you can find it out quickly before too much damage is done.

That's what it is about in everything you do. Probably the only thing that doesn't have that kind of thing is marriage, but outside of that you have to.

The Auditor General went on to say, “The sub-contractor's budget submission did not state the currency in which prices were expressed. The possibilities are Canadian dollars [since it is a Canadian firm] or Cayman Island dollars [because we are in Cayman].” I guess you could also add US dollars because lots of things are done in US dollars. So, you have three possibilities that could be wagered. “The paper submitted to Executive Council [that is, the paper from the ministry asking Executive Council to allow CHRM to subcontract with SSP for their part of the multimedia theatre] makes no reference to either Canadian or US dollars. It seems to have been assumed by all concerned that the SSP bid was expressed in Cayman Islands dollars, and this was confirmed by CHRM to the Ministry in June 1996. Subsequently, in March 1999, CHRM indicated that the SSP price was actually expressed in Canadian dollars. The intent was that this would be converted to Cayman Islands dollars to allow for CHRM's “consultant fee” for supervision and input on the multimedia subcontract. It was pointed out to CHRM representatives that this was not written into the contract provisions and the CHRM representatives could not produce any written confirmation.”

So, you have a situation where you have a contract not expressed in any currency and you work on the assumption that the contract was written in Cayman Islands dollars. You get it confirmed in 1996, yes; but then in 1999, you have another story coming from the same source which says, ‘you know, it actually was in Canadian dollars when I, the project engineer, contracted with a subcontractor. My contract with the subcontractor was in Canadian dollars but when I billed the government, I billed them to pay me for that contract in Cayman Islands dollars because my consultancy fee was the difference in Canadian dollars to Cayman Islands dollars.’

Madam Speaker, legitimate? Very possible. By coincidence, the consultancy fee could have worked out to the exact exchange difference between the Cayman Islands dollar and the Canadian dollar, that is possible. But, Madam Speaker, the procedure cast doubt on the whole exercise. I am not an evil person but it seriously casts doubt in me. How could I be working for you and just assume that it is okay to do it like that? You cannot do that. And then you are worse off because you don't have the ability to find out how I am doing it.

Therefore, with the best of intentions, I have you at a serious disadvantage. Here you are with so much trust in me that I can almost do as I please. That's the problem. The question is not whether I am a good person or I am not going to do anything that is wrong. That is not the question. The question is, in professional relationships such as this you must have proper procedures in place to allow for checks and balances because prevention is better than cure. That's all. That's the whole argument.

Madam Speaker, I do have the wind-up on the motion. What I have done thus far is try to make the case as to why the motion is being brought. The public has been concerned for a long time. Rumours will abound. By the time the story gets to the fourth and fifth ear, it keeps getting added to and you hear all kinds of things. I don't want that. I don't want to indulge or participate in that, Madam Speaker. I simply want the truth.

Now, I am basing all of my arguments on documentation that I have before me—not on any rumour whatsoever. Now, if that documentation is not authentic and valid and it's veracity is questionable, then let me hear it. My case has been built on what I have before me.

I am going to allow the government to reply, and, certainly, it will be the Minister of Tourism. Just before I close off, I want to use one final example to show why there has to be doubt and the government's job is to clear up all of that doubt.

Madam Speaker, I am going to try to do this in chronological order. I am going to use round figures. The cost of this project was roughly $8.7 million by the time Caribbean Development Bank got involved and a loan amount was being negotiated. They came here in 1996 and did all of their research and came up with a financial profile of the project from where they sat.

In the report of the Auditor General for the year end 31st December 1997, he said at that time his office was not able to satisfy itself with all of the invoices and everything else. Given what he had to work with, his best estimate at the time was $9.5 million for the project.

When witnessing before the Public Accounts Committee (when the PAC was addressing this report), ministry officials said that the actual project cost was $9.1 million. It's in the document. Madam Speaker, the PAC Report says it and anyone who wants to say that's wrong can go back to the meeting of the PAC. I am reading it in that report. It says, "Ministry officials say $9.1 million." Okay?

A question was asked in the House about what is the total cost of the Pedro St. James Castle project to date. Without going through all the details, in summary the answer says (this was answered by the Minister of Tourism), "The total cost to Government for research, planning and feasibility, restoration and construction, land acquisition, stamp duty, start-up cost and pre-operating expenses was $8,677,071." [Parliamentary Question 102, page 929 of The 1999 Official Han- sard Report] According to this answer—right on the button, but this answer was subsequent to the debate in the Public Accounts Committee, and subsequent to the Auditor General's guesstimate, with what he had to work with.

In this last PAC meeting, ministry officials said, "The final total construction cost of Pedro St. James has been determined, thanks to the help of our financial controller who has worked many long and tedious hours, and Mr. Max Jones of PWD, to be $6,937,010.97.

"If we add the land acquisition of $775,000, and the stamp duty paid of $77,500, we come to a total of $7,789,510.97. These are all Cayman Islands Dollars to the best of my knowledge and belief.

"Based on the estimates from Caribbean Development Bank, the final details of which we are waiting to receive any day now, the commitment fee of $41,000 and the interest during construction of $340,000 brings the total project cost to $8,170,510.97." [PAC Meeting 4 April 2000, page 14]

So, as of Monday, the total project cost is roughly $8.2 million compared to the $8.8 million that was given by the minister not so long ago.

In the answer given by the minister when it has the whole list of amounts that bring up the total, it has a commitment fee of CI$57,246 and loan interest of $203,437. When you add those in, that brings it up to the $8.7 million according to the answer. Commitment fee is $57,000, the loan interest is $203,437. But when they added everything up, it is $8.7 million.

Now in this one, the commitment fee is only $41,000 and the interest during construction is up to $340,000 but the total is down to $8.2 million.

I do not want to cast doubts, but I am saying when I look at that it . . . I don't know, somebody needs to explain that. But you see, Madam Speaker, I don't operate like that, so when I got this original answer . . . for the love of me, I don't know why I kept this single sheet of paper. That's why the Minister of Education laughs at the two boxes on the left-hand side of me wondering what all this stuff is.

Anyway, when I got this figure in an answer to a substantive question in writing from the minister, saying $8.7 million, I tried to determine exactly how much was spent during the years so that I could have a good idea and compare that with what amounts were budgeted. You know me, that's my style.

From the Treasury, came back this answer, it is in columns. It has the year, the number of the vote within the budget document, the amount that was budgeted and how much was actually spent. In 1995, this long number which was the vote number, the budget was $1 million. The actual expenditure says, "See Note 1." Now, there was a budget for $1 million for Pedro Castle in 1995—"Actual expenditure, See Note 1." Note 1 reads, "It appears that expenses for both the Botanic Park and Pedro St. James Castle projects were charged to this one vote. The total budget [was] $1,692,000, ex- penditure [was] $1,609,000.” The Treasury drew that from their information.

In 1996, there is the vote and nothing in the budget—“Actual expenditure, see Note 2.” Note 2 reads, “In 1996, payments charged to votes . . . appear to be both for the Botanic Park and Pedro St. James Castle even though the estimates show no budget for Pedro St. James Castle.” For those two votes of that year, the budgeted amount for the first one was $917,000 and the expenditure was $740,000.

For the next one, the budgeted amount was $400,000 and the expenditure was $380,000. For 1997, under the vote there was a budget of $1.5 million. The actual expenditure was $1,220,000. Again in 1997, under another vote, there was a budgeted amount of $295,000 and it says, “See Note 3.” Note 3 says, “The estimate shows this amount as Government contribution to Pedro St. James Castle Project Cost” (that is, $295,000). However, this note also includes payments made for the Botanic Park as well as Pedro St. James Castle. The total budget was $1.6 million and the total expenditure was $1.34 million.

In Monday’s meeting when they said they have a new controlling officer working in tandem with Treasury has come up with all—

The Deputy Speaker: Honourable Member, I think it was the Financial Controller not a new controlling officer.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Financial Controller. I am sorry.

The Financial Controller working along with Treasury Department has agreed that the total figure is $8.2 million (and I am rounding these figures off). What I just used, totally explains to me why that could happen because you have one vote in the budget and it involves two projects. How bills are presented and paid does not necessarily differentiate and allow anyone to reconcile properly exactly what amount is for what project.

When a line item that says “professional fees (off the top of my head) $300,000” is paid out you probably cannot reconcile exactly how much of that amount went to specific projects. Now, understand this: I am not questioning that methodology. But the question has to arise because there is no other agency with the ability to reconcile that. You cannot run a country like that, Madam Speaker! You cannot do that!

So, while the Treasury and the new Financial Controller agreed on these figures, that’s because that’s all they can work from. They cannot just look at this other thing like was shown to me here, they have an amount but it says that it was for both of those projects, for instance . . . but the Treasury has no way of discerning how to divide it up. They cannot split it in two and know that’s correct. They have something that shows that it is an estimate for the Botanic Park but obviously bills were paid out to it—how are they going to know all that?

Madam Speaker, when the Auditor General comes into the play, the information is not there for even them to create the miracle to put it together. That’s where the problem lies, and it is not because staff didn’t do what they were supposed to do. Madam Speaker, the world knows that, and I have repeated that to ensure that no one tries to say that that’s what this motion is trying to say—because it is not. It has nothing to do with them. The fact of the matter is they should understand who should be responsible for putting them through this. That is what they should do but I don’t have to say anymore about that.

So, Madam Speaker, that little example that I just used shows again that with the best of intentions it is going to be a long time coming before people are convinced that whatever figure they say is the correct figure. I am not suggesting that anybody is trying to juggle the figures, I am not saying that. I am not even trying to intimate that. I am simply using that to show that it went wrong from day one because the proper checks and balances were not in place and it should have been realised from then.

Madam Speaker, if I go to the shoe store and I buy a beautiful pair of shoes, and I just tried them on and they fit but I didn’t walk in them for very long, if I paid for them and went home and I got up the next morning to come here and I put them on but by 11.00 am I have to take them off and push them underneath my desk because it they hurt my toe, are you going to tell me that just because I paid for them, I am going to have to wear them until they wear out? No sir! So, I made a mistake. If because I wore them they are not going to take them back, I will have to buy a new pair of shoes. Am I not right? I am not going to punish myself because if I buy a pair of shoes to last me two years, I am not going to punish myself for two years just to admit that I made a mistake.

So, all this time it had to be known that it was going wrong. It cannot be at the bitter end when somebody questioned something that it was realised. It cannot be. I don’t know why. I don’t even know whether I should ask why now, but obviously something went wrong and it went wrong from the beginning.

Madam Speaker, it goes to prove that it is much better . . . well, not just to know but to admit something is wrong and correct it. rather than to try to go on pretending that it did not happen.

The Deputy Speaker: Honourable Member, is this a convenient point to take the morning break?

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Yes, Madam Speaker.

The Deputy Speaker: Proceedings will be suspended for fifteen minutes.

PROCEEDINGS SUSPENDED AT 11.31 AM

PROCEEDINGS RESUMED AT 11.59 AM

The Deputy Speaker: Please be seated. Proceedings are resumed. Private Member's Motion No. 6/2000 as amended, continuation of debate thereon. The First Elected Member for the district of George Town.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Madam Speaker, as I was saying before we took the morning break, I think perhaps I have built my case to justify the motion coming forward. And in summary, I would again ask for your indulgence just to quote one section, page 50 of the Auditor General's report.

This is under the heading of the "Role of the Ministry of Tourism." I think if anything is self-explanatory, this statement is. The Minister moved the motion and changed one of the WHEREAS sections—

The Deputy Speaker: Amended.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Amended one of the WHEREAS sections to say that all reports are "self-explanatory" as the original motion read, all reports "indicate mismanagement." I don't agree with that across the board, but if anything is self-explanatory, what I am amount to read now is.

Under the heading of the "Role of the Ministry of Tourism," the Auditor General says, "Normally, oversight of construction projects is the responsibility of Public Works Department who have considerable expertise in this area. For very large and complex projects, for example the George Town Hospital, a specialist in-house team is assembled. The development of Pedro St. James was complex and unique in many ways. Public Works was not involved until late 1997, after the date of most of the transactions described in the preceding paragraphs.

"During the early stages of the project, the role of Ministry personnel was restricted to processing payments authorised by CHRM. It is clear that both the Ministry of Tourism and Treasury personnel relied on the certification of contractor invoices by the main consultant, CHRM.

"As the role of CHRM changed from consultant to contractor, the role of the Ministry of Tourism became much more difficult. Due to the lack of proper oversight, the contractor seems to have been allowed to ignore obligations under the existing landscaping contract and was permitted to arrange sub-contracts to execute the works.

"The Ministry continued to rely on the consultant certifying invoices for payment, including his own as the contractor. Ministry personnel appear to have acted in good faith throughout."

Madam Speaker, let me just interject here. I have no doubts about that. I would even disregard the word "appear," because I am confident that the ministry personnel acted in good faith. However, as administrators they did not possess the technical expertise necessary to deal with a project of this complexity.

Again, Madam Speaker, the Minister was totally aware of this before the ministry started to act that role. "The consultant did not maintain appropriate financial records for the project as required and, as a result, the Ministry found it difficult to exercise meaningful control over contract claims. In hindsight, independent expertise should have been secured in order to monitor the contract/consultant's performance, enforce compliance with the terms of the various contracts and ensure that Government's interests were safeguarded."

Madam Speaker, that is self-explanatory and I believe that the motion is quite in order. I accept that the minister will have to reply to justify all of the actions that I have queried. I will simply listen to what those are and, hopefully at the end of the day, we can arrive at the truth, and that wherever anything needs to be corrected in whatever fashion that the lessons will have been learned.

I now wait to hear what everyone else has to say. Thank you.

The Deputy Speaker: Does any other Member wish to speak? (pause) If no other Member wishes to speak—The First Elected Member for the district of West Bay.

Mr. W. McKeeva Bush: I see the Minister—who should have really been on his feet—laughing like the Cheshire cat. I don't know what he is laughing about . . . nevertheless, I believe that it behoves members to say something on this motion.

Madam Speaker, I believe that the mover, the First Elected Member for George Town led a pretty good case. I thought that he made enough submissions for the Minister of Education or the minister responsible for the matter, the Minister of Tourism, to rise and answer. But I realise that the Minister of Tourism would not want to speak before I do, and perhaps others as well.

Madam Speaker, after a long time, this motion is finally before the House. But not before the Minister amended it so that the Treasury could take some blame too. It is a long time since this motion has been before the House. The Auditor General said last November or December that the ministry had the report from May. We were told that we could not debate the motion, that it could not go on the Order Paper because the report was not yet done.

The motion says that this Honourable House records its lack of confidence in the Minister's handling of the project. And, further resolves that upon completion of the technical audit of the landscaping contract for this project, any parties responsible for fraud, misappropriation or any other illegal action be identified and be the subject of appropriate legal action and that this Honourable Legislative Assembly be appraised of the proposed course of action.

Madam Speaker, I guess maybe a year or some years ago, I asked [some] questions to the Minister of Tourism: (a) Whether CHRM Cayman holds or has held a Trade and Business Licence under Cayman Islands Law? (b) Who are the shareholders and directors and their nationalities? (c) Was there any kind of investigations into the background of those persons?

Well they said they could not answer it. They kept putting it off day after day, week after week, month after month, and I kept getting into hot water with the Leader of Government Business over these questions because they were running, ducking, and hiding.

Finally, these questions were answered in writing and strangely enough, a couple of days after the prorogation of the House they answered it quickly. That is so because they didn't want to answer it publicly thereby depriving this member of any supplementary questions to further enlighten us on this whole issue.

But the answer to the question says, "No, the company [that means that the company has not held any local Trade and Business Licence] was recruited to do work for the Cayman Islands Government and it is not normal that the Trade and Business License are required." With that kind of answer, you can see why the minister was ducking the question for so long.

Certainly, if you hire a consultant or the government hires a consultant, then you [need] a Trade and Business Licence at least. Certainly, where the consultant became a sub-contractor he ought to have had a lawful Trade and Business Licence. So, they did all this work not as consultants but as sub-contractors and had no local Trade and Business Licence. How many people in this country would get away with that?

The next question that I posed that they didn't answer but put it in writing was "Who are the shareholders and directors and their nationalities?" It says, "on the advice from the Legal Department, we are unable to divulge this information." I wonder why. Why can't we, who are custodians of the people's money, know who is working for us? And it is supposed to be a local company? Why? I ask.

In fact, I could sum up this whole issue by saying why? Why? Why? Who? Who? Who? How much? How much? How much? I could sum up the whole thing with that because nobody knows. It seems like everybody is of a different opinion.

From the onset, the ministry, or somebody, said that the total cost is $8.2 million. The minister in his answer to the House said, 'no, no, its not $8.2 million but $8.6 million'. The Auditor General—the man charged with the responsibility of checking into matters to see that things are well balanced, charged by the Constitution to tell the truth—says, 'no, it's not $8.2 million, it's not $8.6 million but $9.5 million.' So, we have three huge differences. Who is right? What is the right figure? Who is telling the truth?

The third question. "Was there any kind of investigations into the background of those persons?" The minister answered in writing, "This company was successful in being awarded the contract in 1991 by Historic Sites Committee with members of the National Trust, National Archives, National Museum, Public Works and some private sector individuals in consultation with the Chairman of Central Tenders Committee to ensure that Financial Stores and Regulations were followed." I don't think my question was answered—"Was there any kind of investigations into the background of those persons?" That was the answer coming from the Minister of Tourism.

Is it any wonder, Madam Speaker, that the Minister of Tourism ran for so long from those questions? Is it any wonder that they were ducking and hiding when we get these kinds of answers?

I had no way of clarifying or even saying to the Minister, 'Look this is not the answer. Tell me what I asked. Give me an answer on what I asked.' Instead, they run, they hide, they duck, they play hide and seek with the matter.

Madam Speaker, from the outset, we need to make it absolutely clear that blame cannot be put on the civil servants of this country on this issue. The case before us is as clear as the day is long: The minister allowed a foreign company who had no trade and business licence to rip off this country! He allowed a project to start that was not well thought out and did not have the means to be prudently managed. The money belonging to the Cayman Islands was given to CHRM as if they had some right to it, or as if they had some secret agreement with somebody so he could behave or that company could behave with impunity and refuse to provide the Auditor General with sufficient reconciliation to clear the matter up. How sad!

In the Auditor General's Report, it says, "The Audit Office was able to review only the winning technical/financial proposal. Other submission(s) were not made available to us, nor were the criteria by which the two competing bids were judged."

Madam Speaker, what we have here is a lack of document and proper audit trail, and differing proposals for a contract (in this case the multimedia production contract). How can you speak of open government when at the end of the day adequate data is not maintained with something as critical as where the public's money is spent?

The Auditor General's Report says, "The sub-contractor's budget submission did not state the currency in which prices were expressed. The possibilities are Canadian dollars (the contract was between two Canadian companies) or Cayman Islands dollars, with US dollars as another alternative. The paper submitted to Executive Council makes no reference to either Canadian or US dollars . . . It was pointed out to CHRM representatives that this was not written into the contract provisions and the CHRM representative could not produce any written confirmation."

The currency that is not stated in a contract shows a complete lack of professionalism and attention to detail.

Did they not feel it necessary to be specific when spending the public's money?

The Auditor General further says, "The Audit Office has contacted both the main consultant and the sub-contractor to try to establish the facts. CHRM has declined to provide the information requested. CHRM has stated that the contract in question was between CHRM and the sub-contractor, and that the contract between CHRM and the Ministry does not require the sub-contractors to confirm receipt of funds nor the currency paid." The Audit Office disagrees with this interpretation.

Madam Speaker, is there something to hide here? It would appear to any reasonable person that CHRM was a key part of this arrangement and their agreement with Steve Shaw Productions (SSP) should be disclosed with the view to the public's interest. Why not? It's the public money. Why can't the Audit Office have the information? Why can't the Auditor of the Cayman Islands have the information? The Auditor, whom this government put in the Constitution . . . Why should a company that is spending the country's money decline to provide the necessary information requested to back-up billings and provide proper documentation? It's sad, sad, sad!

The Auditor General says, "The Audit Office has not received all the information and explanations required to complete its review of this contract. Although we are able to attest that the payments made are consistent with SSP sub-contract, we are unable to assess whether the contract price paid was reasonable. This case illustrates the dangers of single source supply arrangements where the client department has little or no knowledge of the prevailing market price for a good or service."

It is so bad that the Auditor General says, "The Audit Office does not intend to allocate any more staff resources to this contract."

At the end of the day, the public's money appears to have been spent with complete disregard to obtaining high value for the dollar spent. What sort of leadership is this?

The Auditor General says, "Invoices were submitted to the Ministry of Tourism for payment and were charged against the projects. However auditors were not able to locate a contract document and it is understood that there was no formal agreement for this arrangement. Auditors did however locate a memorandum addressed to the Ministry of Tourism advising that labourers would be paid $60 per day and that CHRM would add $30 per day to cover administration and insurance."

"As the Ministry's files did not contain the relevant memorandum, we supplied them ["we," meaning the Audit Officer] with a copy. We remain unsure whether the cost uplift agreement was ever approved by appropriate personnel." Madam Speaker, what this shows is that the CHRM administrative and insurance fee is 50% of the labour cost per day. Why so high I wonder.

Again, Madam Speaker, why so high I should ask and why wasn't it approved? Again, there is no documentation showing whether it was or not. Again, the conclusion is that this shows a completed disregard for public money and the lack of professionalism. Although the minister took out the word "mismanagement," you can be sure that by all indications there was a tremendous amount of mismanagement.

Madam Speaker, the Audit Office says in the report, "Following a request for information, auditors reviewed payroll sheets provided by CHRM covering the period, January 1996 to October 1997. The Audit Office is fully satisfied that gardeners were paid at the rates specified and we are satisfied that the work paid for was actually performed. However a number of invoices examined do not appear to comply with the cost uplift of $30 per day and it is estimated that an additional $30,605 has been paid to the contractor/consultant [that is, CHRM]."

"It was also noted that [and I am reading from the report] one salaried officer was paid through the direct labour contract. In this case the cost uplift was $1,500 per month, which is considerably more than the $30 per day stated."

If they had paid according to the $30 per day, it would have been $600 per month and not $1,500. I am reading again from this report, "The total paid for this employee was $45,000 over 10 months with $1,500 administrative costs added on. The consultant/contractor [that is, CHRM] was invited to provide an explanation but at the date of preparing this report had not responded."

Madam Speaker, this report I am reading from is the Financial Statements of the Government of the Cayman Islands for the year ended 31st December 1998—two years ago. No local Trade and Business Licence, does not respond to the Auditor General . . . who are they responding to?

A question on this matter, Madam Speaker, is why was an additional $30,605 paid to CHRM? Why was the salaried officer paid through the direct labour agreement? And, why did CHRM refuse to respond to the Auditor General's query? Is there something to hide? Madam Speaker, this is bad. Bad! And again, although the minister took out the word (with the majority in this House) "mismanagement," this is nothing but mismanagement!

The landscaping contract: We know that CHRM was allowed to act as contractor and consultant. What does the Auditor General say about it? Because of all the conflicts, the Auditor General decided to carry out a full financial and technical audit and they were assisted by an independent consultant quantity surveyor. What do they say about it? "What appears to have occurred in the landscaping contract is a hybrid arrangement whereby contract payments have been made against both the original contract and subsequent sub-contracts. Some payments were made direct to the sub-contractors concerned, whilst other sub-contract costs were invoiced by and paid to the main consultant/contractor.

“Although it has not been possible to determine precisely the total cost of the project, there appears to have been a substantial cost increase over the contract sum ($357,702) agreed in July of 1996. This cannot be attributable to an increase in the scope of the works.”

Madam Speaker, this is a complete lack of regard for accountability to the people of these islands. How messy this must have been as the Auditor General's Office could not ascertain the total cost of the landscaping contract. And these officers are trained professional auditors checking item by item, dot by dot, each piece of paper, each document that they had or could find or were given; talking to people, looking through this and that. How messy this must have been.

Madam Speaker, the First Elected Member for George Town, the mover of the motion, pointed out that this project is the responsibility of the minister—who is a former Financial Secretary. This does not speak well of good management style. Certainly, accountability was not employed. And if financial management had been applied properly to this project, you would not have these kinds of shenanigans in here.

Responsibility for fiscal management, the Auditor General says, “The consultant provided a budget report in March 1999 which indicates a total cost of $519,585. The Audit Office has reviewed this report and has raised a number of material observations which indicate possible errors and inaccuracies and has requested clarification from the Consultant.” The consultant, that is, CHRM—the one that has no local Trade and Business Licence—is doing landscaping work and not overseeing the project as a consultant would but actually doing the work.

“The Consultant has indicated [and I am reading again from the report] that it would not be possible to provide the information requested until October at the earliest. At the date of preparing this report, the information requested had not been received.” The report is one for 1998. Why has the consultant not been able to, or made to respond to the material observations of the Audit Office? Why has the ministry not stepped in to ensure that the people of these islands are provided with accountability as to where their money has gone? Why? I ask. Madam Speaker, only in the Cayman Islands could this happen.

According to the Auditor General (and I am reading from his report), “The Consultant told the Audit Office that the Ministry of Tourism was responsible for maintaining project records. The Consultant stated that the ministry decided to remove bookkeeping services from the Consultant's contract and assumed it was in-house. This appears to run contrary to the terms of the Consultant's contract and there is no record of any variation to the Consultant's scope of work.

“The Ministry was invited to confirm whether or not the Consultant's statement is correct. They confirmed that the contract between the Government and CHRM requires the consultant to maintain clear financial records of both projects. The consultant was contracted and fully compensated to provide the various services of project management.

“As a general rule, there is still no overall financial profile of the various elements of the project which have been reconciled to the Treasury's general ledger.”

Who is telling the truth? Was the ministry or the consultant responsible for maintaining project financial records? How can we have a project of this magnitude not being able to comply with basic financial transparency? What I am saying is that the Audit Office was not able to agree the financial records of the project to those of the treasury—no reconciliation. Is this not mismanagement? We are not looking to blame, but the responsibility lies with the minister. I would hope that with three lawyers working on it they would be able to answer when they get up.

Madam Speaker, “It is observed that most of the sub-contracts are not structured in accordance with consultant's contracts with the Government. This requires the consultant to invite tenders for the works and the successful tenderer to enter into a contract with Government direct. All payments under the contract are to be made by the client to the successful tenderer.

“In many instances, this procedure was not followed. Certain contracts are between the consultant and the sub-contractor, whose invoices were passed to the consultant, re-invoiced to the Government, and paid to the consultant. In the opinion of the Audit Office, this procedure is not appropriate.”

Why was there so much confusion over sub-contracts and who should bill Government and who Government should pay? So, the Audit Office has a right to conclude that there was a mess and that the arrangement was inappropriate.

Madam Speaker, under hard landscaping, here is what the Auditor General says, “There is no clear record of contract variations which justify an increase of 67% on the basic contract price. Auditors were not able to locate an invoice for $55,000 reported paid by the consultants, but did locate a paid invoice of $40,000 which was not included in the consultant's financial report. Information indicates that an amount of $7,082 was to be deducted from the contract in respect of fill material purchased direct. We could find no evidence that such deduction was made.” The conclusion of the Audit Office is that they are unable to determine final cost of this work or the justification for the cost increase.

Madam Speaker, why are there no records to support a 67% increase in the cost of the hard landscaping contract? The Audit Office could not locate an invoice for $55,000. The invoice was included in the records and they found a paid invoice of $40,000 that was not included in the records . . . if we can call them records. Who knows what else was missing from the records or included in the records but had nothing to do with the project. What a mess! It is disgraceful, to say the least, when the Audit Office is unable to determine the final cost of a contract or the justification of a 67% cost increase. Some $60,000 increase!

Again, with someone who says he has financial knowledge, he can manage financially, and there are other people who cannot do it so they have to run the country. Oh yes! Well, I can tell you Madam Speaker, this doesn't look too good.

The Deputy Speaker: Honourable Member, at your convenient point we can take the luncheon break?

Mr. W. McKeeva Bush: Yes, Madam Speaker.

The Deputy Speaker: Proceedings will be suspended until 2.15 p.m.

PROCEEDINGS SUSPENDED AT 12.49 PM

PROCEEDINGS RESUMED AT 2.31 PM

The Deputy Speaker: Proceedings are resumed. Debate continues on Private Member's Motion No. 6/2000. The First Elected Member for the district of West Bay.

Mr. W. McKeeva Bush: Madam Speaker, when we took the break, I was dealing with Pedro Castle's landscaping contract and subcontracts.

I am dealing substantially from the Auditor General's report because that portion of the report is public knowledge. Therefore, that's why I am referring to it. The motion speaks about the expenditure. That's the whole concern of the motion. Therefore, I think I am in good standing as far as the Standing Orders are concerned.

Dealing with plant material, the Auditor General said, "This is described as a sub-contract between the consultant and a supplier. In fact, invoices and payments are in the name of the Consultant. The Consultant's budget summary includes a figure of C$149,152 of the contract/budget sum.

"The only contract document seen by auditors was one for design and procurement consulting services in the sum of US$14,040. It is understood this relates to the Botanical Park. The Consultant's budget summary reports $194,974 against this element. Excluded from the Consultant's summary but referenced to the landscaping contract was an invoice for $67,000 dated January 1997 which apparently relates to services at the Botanical Park.

"Another invoice for $36,000 (not referenced to the landscaping contract) relates to fees for the Botanical Park and Pedro projects between January and March 1997 for structures, and planting design, shipping and installation. This payment was also excluded from the Consultant's budget summary. Another invoice for $104,010 paid to the Consultant is not adequately supported. The invoice is for 'equipment ($71,860), shipping ($7,000), contingency administration ($10,778) and duty ($14,372)—Totals $104,010.'

"The sub-contractor's supporting invoice does not describe the equipment purchased and is not adequately supported. The Ministry has commented that many of the plants have died [plants, that is, landscape]."

The Audit Office concluded: (a) "In the opinion of the Audit Office these invoices totalling $207,010 are questionable and do not confirm to the contract between the Government and CHRM.

- (b) "It is not possible to determine conclusively the total amount paid against this contract. Taking into account potential audit adjustments, total expenditure on phase 1 landscaping may have been as much as $607,585.
- (c) "It is possible that some of the invoices may relate to goods or services provided for the Botanical Park project.
- (d) "The Audit Office has not received all the information and explanations requested from the Consultant.
- (e) "Ministry personnel did not at any time assume the role of project manager. This was the reasonability of CHRM who were responsible for certifying invoices for payment. Ministry personnel relied upon CHRM's certification of invoices, as did the Treasury Department. It would not have been practicable to expect ministry officials to physically check the delivery of goods and services to sites against contractor consultant invoices."

Madam Speaker, the Audit Office was baffled at the lack of accountability and basic controls surrounding this contract. Invoices totalling $207,110 (as are reported by the Auditor General) are questionable and do not conform to the letter of the contract between government and CHRM, the Audit Office could not determine conclusively the total amount paid against this contract.

Madam Speaker, as I said earlier, these are trained auditors, professional civil servants who check everything—every document, every piece of paper, talk to people. That is their duty. The Audit Office reports that there are potential audit adjustments and that the landscaping contract may have been as much as some $607,585 due to the mess surrounding this project.

Madam Speaker, this is an atrocity. Imagine this: There was one invoice totalling $104,010, and it was not adequately supported. No asset supporting this contract could be identified. What in the world was the minister doing?

The ministry commented that many plants died. It sure must have been some plague up there if that amount of plants died. Then somebody should be responsible for it. Pedro Castle must have had some kind of pestilence, if they died. Then somebody still had to give account for them. Madam Speaker, it is an atrocity.

In conclusion on the landscaping contract, the Auditor General has found that $120,000 was paid over what the contract called for. In addition to this, in the opinion of the Audit Office, some $130,000 was paid. This brings a total of $250,000 being paid above and beyond the original contract. This is a quarter of a million dollars that cannot be accounted for!

Yet, the minister says that he is the former Financial Secretary; he has all of this financial management capability and yet he allows all of this to happen.

Madam Speaker, problems can arise in any situation. Things can happen beyond the control of any minister, but there ought to have been sufficient control on his part. At one point in Finance Committee, he told us that he had day-to-day knowledge of what was going on. So, there ought to have been sufficient controls put in and he was part and parcel of the Audit and Finance Law. I was in the House when we debated that.

Madam Speaker, this does not speak well. In a day and age when we are talking about accountability and openness we find this thing happening in the fifth largest financial centre in the world. We allow some CHRM, who wrote to me in a letter and said they cannot disclose who the directors are, does not have a local Trade and Business Licence. They allow them to samfie the government of this country and shylock with thousands of dollars because nobody can give account of it.

So, tell me what happened. There are too many unanswered questions in this whole thing and the minister has tried to answer them, but he cannot. I wait to hear how he is going to answer what has been said by the Auditor General because that's what we are debating.

There are too many unanswered questions in this whole thing—from the beginning. One said $8.6 million, one said $8.2 million, and the Auditor General said $9.5 [million]. So who is telling the truth? Or, who is fool-fool or doesn't know what's going on?

Madam Speaker, his report is final except for the Government Minute, which is what the government is going to say about it. I tell you that this is not good. They are certified public accountants with many, many years' of financial ability—knowledge and ability, that is. This is not good.

In the irrigation system, Madam Speaker, he says that the cost of the Pedro St. James irrigation system is reported to be $35,610 excluding in-house labour cost. But this figure has not been agreed by the Audit Office. The consultant quantity surveyor has reported that the system is no longer in use due to leakage problems, breaks in lines and electrical shorts and wiring. They say this is caused by crabs. Well, we know that Pedro Castle is on the ironshore, on some sandy ground, but when you are building, these are the kinds of things that professional people take into account.

They said that the consultant quantity surveyor has reported that the system is no longer in use, although you paid $35,000 for it due to leakage problems, breaks in lines and electrical shorts and wiring. Bodden Town has some rough people sometimes, but I didn't know they had crabs that could eat electricity!

And I continue reading from the report, "The supplier's report indicated that the system had not been installed to the correct levels and that maintenance of the system was not being carried out to the supplier's requirements. The consultant quantity surveyor has commented that the irrigation system designed and supplied is not suited to installation at Pedro St. James. The system is prone to damage by the indigenous crab population and would appear to be too complex for the maintenance staff at the site to install correctly, operate, and maintain."

"The consultant quantity surveyor has recommended that the terms of the contract warranty be investigated for any potential recourse and legal advice sought on the liability of the supplier for the design. The landscape is currently watered using hoses and sprinklers connected to the main water supply." No wonder the place looks so dry and worn out at times!

Madam Speaker, one would have thought that this consultant . . . I don't know if he did any work in regions where crabs are plentiful, but you would have thought that they would have had knowledge of the type of ground that they were dealing with. You would have thought so, Madam Speaker. You would have thought that they would have made preparation to deal with it. But they say, blame it on the crabs. Government blames it on the treasury, and now they blame it on the crabs.

Madam Speaker, the Auditor General says, "One of the difficulties experienced during the audit was the absence of any documentation in the Ministry recording variations or amendments to either the original contract or the sub-contracts. The independent consultant quantity surveyor has reported several variations."

- ♦ The scope of the landscaping work was altered as the layout of the landscaping features as installed differs from the drawings. The planted areas are configured differently on the site in several areas. The stone entrance feature has not been built—paid for, but has not been built. A large area noted as planting beds is now grass.
- ♦ Variations in design also occurred in the time between the CHRM contract and the letting of the sub-contract to other contractors. The CHRM contract included 835 linear feet of stonewall whereas the sub-contract was only for 500 feet. The Audit Office has confirmed that the sub- contractor was only paid for the actual work carried out."

So, he collected for 835 feet but the contractor only built 500 feet and was paid for that. Madam Speaker, what kind of shenanigan was this! Was this a fee by the consultant for the stone wall?

Madam Speaker, there are some observations, main conclusions and recommendations that I think are pertinent. "Due to incomplete and inaccurate financial and other records, the consultant quantity surveyor was not able to carry out the full scope of the review work requested by the Auditor General's Office. The consultant's main conclusion has been summarised as:

- ◆ There have been a number of instances where inappropriate and inadequate contract arrangements have been entered into by either the Government or on its behalf.
- ◆ The consulting contract contains clear directives with regard to the financial management, tendering and contracting of the works, which do not appear to have been adhered to. The consultant has not followed the established financial management procedures required to adhere to the terms of the contract and to administer the works with the diligence required by the Employer."

So, Madam Speaker, let's say that it was fair for the minister to recommend to Executive Council that the consultant who had been involved with the project from 1991 should continue with the project. What was not fair was for all these things to happen. They did not follow the clear directives with regard to the financial management.

The Auditor General continues:

- ◆ "The appointment of the Consultant as a contractor to carry out the landscaping works was extremely ill advised. Whilst the Consultant's expertise should have been utilised in the design and procurement of the landscaping works, this could easily have been dealt with as an extension to the existing consulting contract.
- ◆ "The Consultant would appear to have been allowed to enter into and sign contracts for the design and the landscaping works on behalf of the Employer [that is, the government]. The Government has in place established procedures for the letting of contracts that provide the necessary accountability for expenditure of public funds.
- ◆ "The lack of attention paid to the financial aspects of the work by the Consultant has resulted in the ability of the Auditor General to establish precise final cost for the landscaping works. The financial information provided by the Consultant is incomplete, confusing and unprofessional in structure and content, given the accountability requirements of public service clients.
- ◆ "It is apparent from the experience of this project that the appointment of an overseas lead con- sultant with experience in a particular field is not sufficient to ensure that all Government financial criteria are met. Coupled with the lack of technical expertise within the Ministry of Tourism, this would indicate that either an in-house or externally appointed project manager with a proven local track record, should be engaged to represent the interest of the Employer."

Madam Speaker, the Auditor General sets out exactly what happened. He points out that the ministry's personnel seemed to have acted in good faith throughout but they did not have the technical expertise. And no one here is attempting to blame those directly in the ministry handling the project, the civil servants. The responsibility lies with the minister to see that proper controls were put in place.

We don't know whether the Caribbean Development Bank loan is fully paid up. The Auditor General did say that a final claim of $1.5 million was submitted in July 1999, but there are insufficient funds remaining on the loan account to reimburse this claim in full. I did read something in the paper, which said that this was being dealt with or they were going to collect on it. I don't know how much they collected, but he made the observation that there were insufficient funds remaining to cover that amount (that is, $1,585,494.) If there were insufficient funds then the government would put up the difference again.

One of the problems they seemed to have had with Caribbean Development Bank was that they allowed the contracts to go out without being tendered, side-stepping Caribbean Development Bank's guidelines as the bank does not reimburse contracts which have not been tendered. This excluded much, of course, of the work implemented by CHRM and sub-contractors.

Now, how could this not be known by the minister? Let me read that again. "Some contracts were not tendered in accordance with the bank's published guidelines." The Caribbean Development Bank does not reimburse contracts that have not been tendered. How could the minister not know this? He dealt with the Caribbean Development Bank before. Is this good fiscal management? The conclusion has to be that it is not. It is mismanagement of the highest order.

Madam Speaker, one of the most vexing things here is that there were, according to the Auditor General, premature submissions of certain invoices by CHRM and large timing differences between interim payments and completion of works. For example, an invoice of $150,000 for fees and the purchase of electronic equipment for operating the multimedia show was submitted and paid in December 1995. Equipment bids were not actually received until April 1998. The multimedia show was not completed until second half of 1998. A payment profile indicated that CHRM had applied part of the $150,000, the other elements of the multimedia production, in late 1996 and early 1997.

Madam Speaker, what is this paying out money three years before getting the product? Again, nothing but shenanigans in financial management!

Madam Speaker, to say that all is well with this project would not be telling the truth. As I said, I believe that there were good intentions but there were some bad intentions in this too. Somebody was not up-front and all was not Kosher with this whole contract with CHRM—who didn't even have a local Trade and Business Licence. I believe that they meant well in trying to get a project that could entice tourists, another attraction. I have always said that we needed something like that, but not at that cost.

I don't believe that the minister had sufficient information for marketing. It was bad advice he got from whoever and they started the project from that perspective going downhill.

“The key [as the Auditor General says] determinant of project sustainability is visitor admissions.” For them to get the loan, they have to show what kind of revenue they could generate, and it shows that the “CDB revenue forecast was based on 235,000 visitors per annum by year 4 of operation, that is, two years from now. This forecast comprises of 150,000 cruise ship visitors, 80,000 long-stay visitors and 5,000 residents.”

“Another visitor forecast prepared in 1997 as part of the TAB's Business Plan shows a gradual build-up to over 300,000 visitors per annum by year 5 of operations. Both forecasts fall within the stated carrying capacity of the site of 306,000 visitors per annum. However the carrying was developed on the basis of a maximum flow of 100 visitors per hour, 8½ hours per day, and does not take into account external limitations.

“For example, many cruise ships visit for only half a day. This would suggest that much of the cruise ship potential is concentrated into a four-hour period. Most cruise ship arrivals tend to be mid-week with fewer arrivals on Mondays, Fridays and Saturdays, depending on season.” Well, we now know that they don't come on Sundays and Public Holidays—the minister stopped that too!

According to the Auditor General, “Based on a forecast of 150,000 visitors per annum, this limitation implies 500 - 800 cruise ship visitors required per four hour day. At present the maximum capacity of the site is only 50 visitors per hour, although this could be increased . . .”

Madam Speaker, when we asked about the total number of visitors and what they were doing about marketing, they could not answer, and Finance Committee could not tell us. I would hope that the minister has that kind of information because he needs to tell this House what he is doing to repay this debt.

Madam Speaker, there is quite a bit left that the Auditor General has said about the management, but that will be dealt with on another occasion because that is something to get into. When you hear about attempts to defraud, and fraud—check that one out—that cannot be done. You cannot get into that because that is not made public as yet. Madam Speaker, I contend that there is a case for investigation and I think that the House is right in recording its disagreement with the minister and the way he handled this project.

Madam Speaker, I would hope that Pedro Castle will one day be able to pay for itself. I would hope that good marketing and management is applied because so far it has been a failure. A nice place to go, yes, but thus far it has been a failure. Thank you, Madam Speaker.

The Deputy Speaker: Does any other Member wish to speak? (Pause) If no other Member wishes to speak, does the mover of the motion—

The Honourable Minister for Education, Aviation and Planning.

Hon. Truman M. Boddin: Thank you, Madam Speaker.

The motion before the House is one that is not well founded on fact. It is one that deals with a lot of suppositions and it is one that is aimed to directly attack the Minister of Tourism. That is the light that it has to be taken in.

The project of Pedro St. James is undoubtedly one of the best projects this country has. It's the first time that there has been extensive preservation of our Caymanian heritage in the form of one the oldest buildings in these islands. The project itself is one which clearly is complex, and that is borne out by the Auditor General. But it is also one that the people of this country can be proud of.

Anyone who has visited there will realise that this is a project that this country can be proud of and it's our heritage. It is extremely well done and it is one that could be looked at as a very good example of what can be done in this country to preserve our heritage. Also, while preserving our heritage, it is also a place that one can enjoy, Caymanians and tourists alike.

The other important fact about this, Madam Speaker, and why I say that (and I will show) this motion is in the form of an attack more on the minister than on the Pedro Castle Project . . . as everyone knows, this project came in under the estimates that were done for it. Madam Speaker, we all know that there are very few government projects that ever come in within the estimate, much less under it. So, we have established the first fact at this stage, the project has come in at several hundred thousand dollars, or, depending on the interest, a hundred or so thousand dollars under the estimates that were put forward. I understand they were looked at by the Caribbean Development Bank.

So, we really have a storm in a teacup—here's a project, firstly, a very good project, and, secondly, it is a project that has come in under the projected cost. So, what are we really therefore talking about, Madam Speaker? It may have been different if this project had overrun by several million dollars, but show me which other project in this country that size . . . and not just project but projects. Remember this was many projects over several years that led up to this.

Nothing can really be levelled at the minister in respect of the quality of the project or in respect of the fact that he had to have prudent management of the projects or they would not have come in total under what was projected.

The two members who spoke made reference to the Auditor General and the $9.5 million. Let me just show you why the arguments of those two members really don't carry that much weight. If we turn to that reference at page 82 of the 1997 Auditor General's Report, it shows very clearly . . . and I will just read it. The Auditor General said (and I quote), "It appears that the final cost of the project may be in the region of $9.5 million."

Madam Speaker, what does that tell us? At the time, the Auditor General did not have the facts upon which to base the final cost, he just started in his audit and he said, "It appears . . . [and he goes on to say] may be in the region"—three words that are imprecise and approximate: yet, a lot was made of that. Obviously, that destroys any argument that has been put forward or trying to say that this project is over the cost. That is not so. We know what the estimated cost was: it was $8.7 million. And we know that the project came in considerably under that.

We have the evidence given at page 13 on the 4th April 2000 before the Public Accounts Committee, where Mr. Harding Watler, the Permanent Secretary, stated "Based on the estimates from Caribbean Development Bank, the final details of which we are waiting to receive any day now, the commitment [and that's in relation to the commitment fee] and the interest during construction of $340,000 brings the total projected cost to $8,170,510.97." Very clear.

We have to remember that at this stage those costs had been signed off, or accepted, by Mr. Max Jones, who was the Project Manager. And it had also been signed off by the Financial Controller of the Tourism Attraction Broad, an accountant, and also by the Treasury of the Government. So, these are right. There can be no scope for speculation of talking about $9.7 million in the cost because if all of them were wrong to that extent then they would never have reached the positions they hold.

So, I accept that. And here I am only going to deal with facts because a lot of what has been said is really surmised, it is suppositions, and really an attempt to build a case where no case exists against the good Minister of Tourism who, I must say, has worked extremely hard to get that project in its complex, complicated form and to get all of the different pieces and the many contracts and sub-contracts and different projects in it, many of which were totally different. It is really a shame at this stage for anyone to attempt to cast any aspersions in relation to the management of Pedro Castle.

Madam Speaker, the test is very simple. It is well within the projected cost. Therefore, it has been properly managed—fiscally, financially, and otherwise. Now, several things bear out the fact that this project has been properly dealt with. If we go to paragraph 3.8 of the 1998 Auditor General's Report, in relation to the direct labour agreement (it's at page 43), the Auditor General said, "The Audit Office is fully satisfied that gardeners were paid at the rates specified and we are satisfied that the work paid for was actually performed."

This is one of the things that had been alleged. What can be clearer than that? Not only is the Audit Office satisfied, they are fully satisfied with the rates specified and that the work paid for was actually performed.

So, nothing can be levelled in that area and this was one of the three contracts dealt with by the members here, and I think also by the Public Accounts Committee. What we have to remember about this as well is that the three contracts that have been targeted mainly in this matter are three of the small contracts. Remember this is a project of $8.1 million and these contracts were in the area (I will have to get those exactly) of approximately $300,000, that was one. For example, the furniture contract was only $226,000 and we also saw that the other contracts were small.

So, what has been done here is that we have a storm in a teacup. The three small contracts out of the many contracts there were small in value, related to difficult areas. Remember, Madam Speaker, the museum (to complicate the minister's life) said we could not get the furniture here because it would deplete our heritage or whatever. We had to get this abroad. That was one of the other things that the minister faced.

The Deputy Speaker: Honourable Minister would this be a convenient time to take the afternoon break?

Hon. Truman M. Boddin: Thank you.

The Deputy Speaker: Proceedings will be suspended for fifteen minutes.

PROCEEDINGS RESUMED AT 3.40 PM

The Deputy Speaker: Please be seated. Proceedings are resumed. Debate continues on Private Member's Motion No. 6/2000 as amended. The Honourable Minister responsible for Education, Aviation and Planning continuing his debate thereon.

Hon. Truman M. Boddin: I would now like to turn to an area where a lot has been made of it. In fact, as I understand, one of the thrusts of this motion is saying that certain invoices that existed between the main contractor and the sub-contractor were not produced to show the cost of what the sub-contracts were.

Madam Speaker, the position on this, the law is one that is abundantly clear. There is no privity of contract between the employer (in this case the Government) and a sub-contractor. I think it is very clear. In fact, it's a common sense principle that if you employ a main contractor, you pay the main contractor and he pays whatever sub-contractors he wishes to pay. But the contract is between the government and the main contractor. It is not, therefore, a situation where the government can say that there is a contractual relationship between government and any of these several sub-contractors that has been referred to.

Indeed, Madam Speaker, when you hire a contractor to, say, build a house on the basis of a price, and they decide to sub-contract some of that work, then that is the business of the contractor. Because he or the company does not have the resources to do everything as the main contractor so they go out and they will find other people to assist. In fact, many Caymanian companies were employed, as many as the minister possibly could. I know he went to extremes to ensure that Caymanians who could do the work got the work.

I would like to support this by reading the law as it exists in Halbury's Laws of England, 4th Edition by Lord Hailsham of St. Marleybone, Volume 4. That, as you know, is the main works of English Law comprising probably in the area of 40-odd volumes. This is coming from Volume 4, and at paragraph 1264 under the heading "Sub-contracting," 1) "Relations between Sub-contractor and Employer—1264—No Privity of Contract. The contractor may secure vicarious performance of part of the work except when the contract prohibits it or is a personal contract. Although the employer or his architect often nominates a sub-contractor under the provisions of the main contract, there is no privity of contract between the employer and the sub-contractor."

What that means is that the employer has no contractual relationship with the sub-contractor and, therefore, cannot go to that sub-contractor and say, 'look, I need this and that,' nor can they give directions beyond what is permitted, obviously, by the architect in the contract. So, to try to say that there is a duty on the government to contractually require, or require in any other way . . . in fact, these invoices, or information, or whatever from sub-contractors, there is no contractual relationship. Therein lies the problem.

In fact, the Auditor General himself has fairly extensive powers under the Public Finance and Audit Law that go even far beyond what powers the department and the Ministry of Tourism would have. That relates to section 40 of that Law, which gives a statutory power to require different things—receipts, expenditure, documents.

So, to now come and say that a duty rests on the government to get invoices out of sub-contractors that a main contractor would have employed is bad in law. It cannot be done in law, when I say that. What has been put forward is really unlawful and not in accordance with the law.

I should, however, mention that there are rights that exist in relation to defects in tort between an employer, in this case the government, and one of the sub-contractors. That is found in Halbury's again, paragraph 1268. It says, "Rights and liabilities of principal contractor and sub-contractor. Except in certain circumstances the contractor has a right to sublet portions of the work to sub-contractors [that was done, Madam Speaker, and that is a right] and to be paid for the work performed by them."

So, under the contract, government pays the contractor and it goes on to say, "The contractor will be liable for defects in such work in the same way and to the same extent as if he had performed it himself. Then he moves through the sub-contracting process and he can go directly against the sub-contractor who also has a duty to ensure that the quality of work is there."

I wanted to just mention that because I think it is important to the relationship, as a whole. I have explained that there is a duty on the sub-contractor to perform in accordance with the contract from the contractor, who then has an ongoing duty to the employer (in this case, to the government). Obviously, if the sub-contractor has defects, then that is covered basically in the English Law and is referred to as the Royal Institute of British Architects (RIBA) Conditions of Contract, which is a very long and detailed document of many pages used on large contracts, either the full or short form.

So, at this stage, provided that the main contract . . . or, in this case for example, we take the contract with the main consultant. Provided that is in place, if work is sub-contracted out then that sub-contracting is a matter for the contractor and not a matter for the employer with the sub-contractor. I don't think that is a principle that isn't understood. Those of us who are not in the building business know, however, that whenever you employ someone to do work and you decide you are going to pay them a certain amount of money for the work that they have a right to sub-contract, that can be limited through a contractual relationship between the main contractor and the employer. But, generally, it is done in such a way that on big contracts the architect has a right, if he wishes, to name a sub-contractor whom the contractor is employing. That is there really to ensure the quality that may be needed, or that the performance appears to the architect to be what is necessary to perform the contract in time.

So, Madam Speaker, I submit, that one of the main statements that has been put forward on this motion is 'look, we want to see certain invoices or documents between the sub-contractor and the contractor'. We must remember, Madam Speaker, that nobody has shown . . . the Auditor General's Report makes it very clear. For example, I read earlier that not only was one of those three contractors properly done but he was satisfied that both the rates and the billings—whatever I referred to there (it didn't specifically say billings)—were in order. No one in here can allege anything other than the fact that these contracts have been dealt with in the proper way and indeed within the terms of the contracts, especially in relation to price.

So, Madam Speaker, we have the position that it is being put on the wrong basis that the government should attempt to seek to pierce through the contractor and the main contract and somehow try to reach the multiplicity of sub-contractors that have been employed by the main contractor. In effect, one of the arguments levelled [from] opposition members who spoke was that nothing has been proven to be wrong with those figures; but they still want to have a look at these documents that go behind it. That is why I will show further that the Auditor General (and I want to deal with this under another heading and really use it more at that stage) looked at the main contractor or the main consultant.

At page 49 of the Auditor General's Report under the heading, "Consultant Quantity Surveyor's Main Conclusions and Recommendations" at paragraph 3.20, the Auditor General said, "The consulting contract entered into with the main consultant is generally fair and reasonable to both parties." What could be clearer than that, Madam Speaker?

That was what the duty of the Minister of Tourism was in relation to. The Auditor General in relation to the main consulting contract has said, "I have looked at the contract between the government and the main consultant, i.e., the main contractor [in the consultancy area] and in my opinion is generally fair and reasonable to both parties."

So, the Minister of Tourism (at this stage having no duty to look beyond the main contract) cannot have a duty or an onus on him now because the First Elected member for George Town or the First Elected Member for West Bay wants some documents to go on some sort of a hunt in areas where legally he cannot go. That, I believe, is sufficient to destroy one of the main pillars of the arguments put up under this motion against the Ministry of Tourism.

The quality of the work and any problems with sub-contracts falls on the main contractor, and, provided the main contractor has performed in accordance with the contract between himself and the government, then it matters not how many sub-contractors were employed or how much paper flowed between the sub-contractor and the main—

Mr. Kurt Tibbetts: Madam Speaker, on a point of order.

The Deputy Speaker: May I hear your point of order?

POINT OF ORDER

Mr. Kurt Tibbetts: Madam Speaker, just a couple of minutes ago the minister referred to this motion being against the ministry. Obviously, he is referring to the Ministry of Tourism. Madam Speaker, this motion is not against the ministry and nothing has been said to infer that the motion is against the ministry. The minister is, therefore, misleading in his statement.

The Deputy Speaker: I think the Honourable Minister said that earlier on but just a moment ago he was referring to sub-contractors. Is this what you are talking about?

Mr. Kurt Tibbetts: Madam Speaker, he said it just before just he said that. Unfortunately I was on the way into the Chamber, but I heard him.

The Deputy Speaker: Honourable Minister, the First Elected Member for George Town has pointed out—

Hon. Truman M. Boddén: Madam Speaker, I am not sure what the member is referring to. Maybe we should get the records. If he can draw my attention to specific areas of that then I am in a better position because I have been talking on different areas.

Mr. Kurt Tibbetts: If I may, Madam Speaker?

The Deputy Speaker: The First Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. Kurt Tibbetts: I was not speaking about what he was talking to a long time ago. Immediately before he started talking about the sub-contractors, he referred to this motion which was against "the ministry," no longer than five minutes ago.

The Deputy Speaker: First Elected Member for George Town, I hear what you say. But unless a point of order is raised at the precise time it arises, I cannot rule that it is a point of order. So, I can only ask the Honourable Minister to continue with his debate.

Hon. Truman M. Boddén: Madam Speaker, I had not yet gone into that area, but it has just been pointed out to me that the fourth WHEREAS clause in this motion says this, "AND WHEREAS this said project up until July 1997 was managed directly by the Ministry of Tourism . . ." Therefore, this motion is dealing with management by the Ministry of Tourism, and I will deal with that at a later stage. But I will just refer you to that area that the Ministry of Tourism is not left out of this. It is clear that the controlling officer and other people within the ministry who dealt with this as well as the Minister, those people were not the Minister, but I will come back to that at a later stage.

So, I submit, that the curiosity of the mover and the supporter of this motion should not be allowed to override the law in that they are asking for something it appears clearly cannot legally be done. Therefore, the whole . . . and, by the way, you cannot just say, just because you don't see an invoice that it is wrong. Or, you cannot say that because you cannot get an invoice or a document there must be suspicion around it. That, Madam Speaker, and I am speaking generally, is the view of a mind that is not functioning in the normal way because there has to be in English Law, a presumption of innocence and not a presumption of guilt. Let's get that real clear at the beginning.

What has been done here is an attempt to say that because certain documents were not produced, therefore those documents will leave a shadow over a project that was completed well within the amount of money for the contract. If there is to be any presumption put on this and if we are to be democratic, fair, and legal, then there is a presumption of regularity. And transactions have to be presumed regular unless it is proven otherwise. While those transactions are regular there is no onus of proof, there is no duty on the Minister of Tourism, or on the Ministry of Tourism, to go off on some hunt overseas or wherever to try to scrape up documents between a sub-contractor and a contractor. There is simply no duty.

And it is unfair, I submit, for anybody to try to do otherwise because the very fundamentals of society are based on regularity not irregularity. If one allows one's mind to stray and concentrate too often on irregularities, I believe one may become irregular one's self.

So, the law on this is, I submit, clear. It leaves the Minister of Tourism in a very good position. And I read that from the Auditor General, and it is clear that the contract with the main contractor was fair and reasonable. It is very obvious that it was performed in the best way that contracts of this nature could be performed. Really, once there is no aspersion cast (and there can't be because the Auditor General substantiates this) on the main contract then, really, one needs to look no further.

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: Well, Madam Speaker, this late in the day it may be time for some more relevant law on this motion.

To take this somewhat further, the relationship of the contractor and the sub-contractor (at paragraph 1268 of Halbury's) it states that "by sub-letting part of the work the principal contractor impliedly contracts with the sub-contractor that he will not by any act or default of his own prevent the sub-contractor from performing his share of the work."

So, basically the sub-contractor has to be left free, provided that the quality of work is being performed, to do that work in such a way as the sub-contractor sees fit. And this is exactly what has happened here.

Madam Speaker, the quality of Pedro Castle cannot be challenged. It is a first class project and that is a shining example. If government could get all of its projects performed within the money and done as good as that, it would be a much happier world here.

In an effort to scrape up something against the minister, all of these other things have been pulled in to try to confuse the issue. You know, Madam Speaker, there has been a lot of talk and there has been a lot of opinion given, especially by the First Elected Member for West Bay. Most of what he gave was opinion really, no substance to it—nothing backing it up and nothing supporting it.

I want to now move on to deal with another area, which relates to the question of the management of the projects. Once again, the thrust of some arguments was that there was not sufficient management or not sufficient expertise within the ministry in relation to certain areas of management. That is the reason why I read earlier about the contract with the project manager.

If we look at the Auditor General's Report at page 50 we find what I submit is a very clear statement, again by the Auditor General. This is what the Auditor General said, "It is clear that both the Ministry of Tourism and Treasury personnel relied on the certification of the contractor invoices by the main consultant, CHRМ".

That shows that the ministry did what it was supposed to have done in that it hired a consultant whose contract was a fair and reasonable one, and they relied on that consultant in relation to invoices. Indeed, Madam Speaker, they had to rely on consultants for quality. This happens all the time in this type of contract, but it was even more so with this because what was being done was a highly specialised job on many of the contracts.

The idea of employing the main consultant under what the Auditor General stated was fair and reasonable to both parties. It would have been wrong otherwise, Madam Speaker, to have employed a consultant and then rejected his advice. That does not make sense, and the whole reason is that the Ministry of Tourism obviously has no one with the specialised knowledge in antiques, in the restoration of old things, and to look at the things like the presentation of the audio and the video programmes. There is no way that could be expected to be monitored from within the ministry—there was a consultant.

That consultant under a fair and reasonable contract—that is very important—then gave advice which included dealing with quality, payments and invoices.

I submit that in what I just read here not only did the Ministry of Tourism rely on the certification of contractor's invoices by the main consultant but the Treasury also relied on it. And, quite rightly, neither would the Treasury have the ability of the consultant. If the Treasury and the Ministry of Tourism had that expertise, they would not have employed the consultant. So, the purpose of the employment of the consultant was to do what he did and that cannot be faulted. In fact, I am sure the contract would have provided that the duty of the consultant was to give advice, was to certify invoices, was to certify quality and was to ensure that what advice was needed by the Ministry of Tourism or Treasury was received in a timely manner.

Madam Speaker, I am going to come back to these two headings because I used them under another head, that's why I am only going to be short on some of these. But to further vindicate the Ministry of Tourism, at the top of page 51, the Auditor General states this (and I quote), "Ministry personnel appeared to have acted in good faith throughout." Madam Speaker, what more can be asked of the Minister, his staff and the Ministry of Tourism but to act in good faith throughout?

If we look at the words, which were obviously well chosen by the Auditor General, he doesn't say, 'they appeared to have acted in good faith' because that would have left space for a devious mind to say, 'well, maybe not during a full period.' He was very careful and he said that the ministry personnel appeared to have acted in good faith throughout. There is no doubt about it. There is no deviousness that can be pushed into that because he has very clearly in those words vindicated the ministry of any acting otherwise than in good faith throughout this long period that these matters were being dealt with.

That, Madam Speaker, tied in with the fact that the Auditor General was also satisfied that the Ministry and the Treasury relied on CHRM, the main consultant. When you tie that altogether you have three very important things:

1. You have a contract that the Auditor General says is fair and reasonable to both parties.
2. You then have a relationship between the consultant and the ministry in which the ministry relied on the consultant; and
3. Throughout that full time, the ministry acted in good faith.

These are three ingredients of the transaction. So, as far as performance goes . . . and let me say this: Obviously no one is perfect. No consultant is perfect. No politician is perfect. And, I am not here trying to say that there were absolutely no problems because with so many contracts, there must have been some problems. But what I am saying is that the Auditor General has been prepared to make three very important statements—the contract was good; the Ministry and the Treasury acted and relied on the consultant, and the ministry acted in good faith.

The Deputy Speaker: Can we move on from those three points now sir? Or is this a convenient time for the adjournment?

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: This will be convenient to break, Madam Speaker.

The Deputy Speaker: I will entertain a motion for the adjournment of this Honourable House. The Honourable Minister for Education, Aviation and Planning.

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: Madam Speaker, I move the adjournment of this Honourable House until next Monday at 10.00 a.m.

The Deputy Speaker: The question is that this Honourable House do now adjourn until next Monday at 10.00 a.m. I shall put the question. Those in favour please say Aye. Those against No.

Ayes.

The Deputy Speaker: The Ayes have it. This Honourable House is accordingly adjourned until 10.00 a.m. next Monday morning.

READING BY THE SPEAKER OF
MESSAGES AND ANNOUNCEMENTS

APOLOGIES

The Deputy Speaker: I have apologies for late arrival from the Honourable Second Official Member, and apologies for absence from the First Elected Member for West Bay.

Presentation of Papers and Reports: The Cayman Islands Monetary Authority Annual Report 1998, to be laid on the Table by the Honourable Third Official Member.

PRESENTATION OF PAPERS AND REPORTS

THE CAYMAN ISLANDS MONETARY AUTHORITY
ANNUAL REPORT 1998

Hon. George A. McCarthy: I beg to lay on the Table of this Honourable House The Cayman Islands Monetary Authority Annual Report 1998.

The Deputy Speaker: So ordered.
Do you wish to speak to the report?

Hon. George A. McCarthy: Yes, Madam Speaker. As members of this honourable House are aware, during the year 1998, the Monetary Authority was involved in advising on various legislative initiatives and regulatory matters including development of the recently issued Code of Practice under the Proceeds of Criminal Conduct Law, amendment to the Insurance Law to protect local policyholders, and amendments to the Companies Law to permit segregated portfolio companies to be formed.

In keeping with the international regulatory standards, the Monetary Authority commenced on-site inspections in 1998 of financial institutions licensed in the Cayman Islands. The financial statements included in the report were audited by the Auditor General in accordance with the provisions of section 35(2) of the Monetary Authority Law (1998 Revision) and section 45(1) of the Public Finance and Audit Law (1997 Revision).

The Annual Financial Statements of the Authority as at 31st December 1998 are shown on pages 20 through 28 of the annual report. Total assets of $60.3 million include $59.2 million of currency reserve assets representing investments and current call and fixed deposits. Total returns of 5.7% were earned on assets for 1998. Total liability of $47.9 million including $44.8 million of demand liabilities for currency in circulation which are fully secured by the currency reserve assets as required by section 28(7) of the Monetary Authority Law, 1996, as amended.

Total reserves and capital is $12.4 million and general reserve is maintained at 15% of demand liabilities as required by section 6(2) of the Law.

Net income of $3.5 million for the fiscal year 1998 was mainly due to sound investment decision-making and implementing effective cost reduction techniques by the Authority.

The Monetary Authority Board approved the transfer of $310,000 to the currency issue reserve to provide for future currency reprints, and $640,000 was transferred to general reserves in accordance with section 6(1) of the Monetary Authority Law. Approval was also given for the transfer of $750,000 to the paid-up capital account. After these transfers, Madam Speaker, the Authority was still able to exceed its budgetary target of allocating $1.8 million to general revenue of the Cayman Islands Government.

In closing, Madam Speaker, and as chairman of the Monetary Authority, I would like to express my appreciation to the members of the Board, to the staff of the Monetary Authority and to you, Madam Speaker, for allowing this statement on the report.

The Deputy Speaker: The Annual Report of the National Trust for the Cayman Islands for the year ended 31st August 1999 to be laid on the Table by the Honourable Minister for Agriculture, Communication, Environment and Natural Resources.

THE ANNUAL REPORT OF THE NATIONAL TRUST FOR THE CAYMAN ISLANDS ENDED
31 AUGUST 1999

Hon. John B. McLean: Thank you, Madam Speaker. I beg to lay on the Table the Annual Report of the National Trust for the Cayman Islands for year ended 31st August 1999.

The Deputy Speaker: So ordered. Does the Honourable Minister wish to speak to the report?

The next item is the Cayman Islands Public Pensions Board Actuarial Valuation of Public Service Pensions as of January 1999 to be laid on the Table by the Honourable Third Official Member responsible for Finance and Economic Development.

The Honourable Third Official Member.

THE CAYMAN ISLANDS PUBLIC PENSIONS BOARD
ACTUARIAL VALUATION OF PUBLIC SERVICE
PENSIONS AS OF JANUARY 1999

Hon. George A. McCarthy: Madam Speaker, I beg to lay on the Table of this honourable House the Actuarial Valuation Report of the Public Service Pensions as of 1st January 1999.

The Deputy Speaker: So ordered. Does the Honourable Member wish to speak to it?

Hon. George A. McCarthy: Thank you, Madam Speaker.

As honourable members will note, the Report of the Actuarial Valuation of the Public Service Pensions as of 1st January 1999 is being laid on the Table of this honourable House in accordance with section 13(4) of the Public Service Pensions Law, 1999. The purpose of this valuation as set out in the law is threefold:

- to determine whether the fund remains capable of meeting its liability for the following period of at least 40 years at the rate(s) of contribution then enforced;
- if it is not so capable, to ascertain what rate(s) of contribution would be required to reinstate that capability; and
- to determine the amount to be reflected on the balance sheet.

Madam Speaker, Watson Wyatt Worldwide performed the actuarial valuation of the public service pensions as of 1st January 1999. Section 13(2) of the law requires the review be carried by the actuary using reasonable actuarial assumptions agreed upon by the actuary and the Public Service Pension Board. A summary of these assumptions is as follows:

|-------------------|----|
| Investment return | 8% |
| Inflation         | 3% |
| Salary increases  | 5% |

On the question of retirement age, it should be noted that although the retirement age of 55 has been used, the Public Service Pensions Law states that the normal age of retirement is 60 years. If it is that more persons are found to be retiring at age 60 than 55, using the assumptions, this could have the effect of significantly reducing the past service liability figure as shown in the fund.

To ascertain that the trend has been 55 versus 60, the Director of the Pensions Board will be asked to prepare a retirement profile for the past five years. It will be useful for this information to be available because, as I said earlier, the law states that the normal age of retirement is 60 and not 55. Therefore, if the retirement age of 55 is used as an assumption it means that there is a 5-year factor or differential for which assets will have to be accumulated over and above what is required in order to defray the pension cost of those persons that are going into retirement.

As I said, the profile will be conducted to ascertain exactly what has been the trend in terms of the retirement age. This will be provided and will be taken into account when they are assessing the reasonableness of the actuarial valuation as presented.

The actuarial valuation report presents the following findings in terms of actuarial deficiency:

|                        |               |
|------------------------|---------------|
| Past service liability | $173,418,000 |
| Assets                 | $ 40,350,000 |
| Actuarial deficiency   | $133,068,000 |

As I said, Madam Speaker, these figures are likely to be changed (especially the past service liability) and the deficiency once the trend analysis as to each profile of retirement has been completed.

Even with the deficiency standing at $133,068,000, this is a significant improvement over 1st January 1996 valuation by approximately $7 million. This improvement in actuarial deficiency was a result of changes in retirement and inflation assumptions than that offset, the increased liabilities arising from less than expected asset performance, increased number of participants, time and other factors.

The actuarial valuation report concludes that the contribution rates required to meet the current funding needs of the plan would be as follows:

|-----------------------|-----------------------------------|
| Employee contribution | 6% of salary of all participants  |
| Employer contribution | 6% of salary of all participants. |

An additional defined benefit costs representing a 10% of salary of all participants.

It will be useful for honourable members to just bear in mind when they are going through the report to look at page 9 in terms of the summary as presented in the report itself. It will show that the contribution (presumably for 1998) which became the basis of the 1st January 1999 figures were:

|                              |      |
|------------------------------|------|
| Participant's contribution   | 6%   |
| Government's contribution    | 6%   |
| Government's benefit payment | 9.5% |

This means that the direct payments that are now made by Government to pensioners, if these funds were made to flow through the Pension Board it would seem to me, subject to my review of the report (and I should mention that I received the report in my hand last Thursday at 4.30 p.m. and I want to look at it carefully), that on this basis the fund should be able to start meeting its pension obligations. But this is a matter that will have to be looked at. These 6% and 9.5% amounts to 21.5%, a differential of one-half of a percentage point of the 22% recommended by the actuaries.

The responsibility of setting contribution rates in accordance with the latest actuarial report is charged to the board in accordance with section 7.1(e) of the Public Service Pensions Law. The Board, at its meeting of 3 April 2000, prescribed contribution rates for government as set out in the actuarial valuation report. It was also determined that contribution rates for statutory authorities would be prescribed in accordance with the actuarial valuations being carried out on their behalf.

Currently, pension benefit payments are being made by central government out of general revenue. This, as I mentioned earlier, is factored into the contribution would have the effect of meeting the required funding that should be going into the fund itself.

With the prescribed contribution rates in place, pension benefits will be made from the Public Service Pensions Fund and the current provision will fall away as envisaged by the Public Service Pensions Law 1999. The falling away factor has to do with the direct payments being made by government, these payments will then flow through the Public Service Pension Fund.

Members of the Legislative Assembly should note that the actuarial valuation as of 1 January 1996 has been used as a comparative basis in the actuarial valuation report as at 1st January 1999.

Madam Speaker, I would like to thank you once more for allowing me to make this short statement and to thank the members of the Public Service Pensions Board, who have applied themselves to the report that we have got in hand, and also the staff of the Pensions Board for the amount of time spent in providing the relevant statistics to the actuaries.

Thank you once again, Madam Speaker.

The Deputy Speaker: Item 4, Other Business, Private Members' Motions. Before we get on to the motion, I would entertain a motion for the suspension of Standing Order 14(2) in order to allow Private Members' Business to be carried on a day other than Thursday.

SUSPENSION OF STANDING ORDER 14(2)

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: Madam Speaker, I move the suspension of Standing Order 14(2). The question is that Standing Order 14(2) be suspended in order to carry on Private Members' Motions.

The Deputy Speaker: I shall put the question. Those in favour please say Aye. Those against No.

AYES.

The Deputy Speaker: The Ayes have it.

AGREED: STANDING ORDER 14(2) SUSPENDED TO ALLOW PRIVATE MEMBERS' MOTIONS TO BE CARRIED OUT ON A DAY OTHER THAN THURSDAY.

The Deputy Speaker: Private Member's Motion No. 6/2000 as amended, continuation of debate thereon, the Honourable Minister for Education, Aviation and Planning.

OTHER BUSINESS

PRIVATE MEMBERS' MOTIONS

PRIVATE MEMBER'S MOTION NO. 6/00 AS AMENDED

INVESTIGATION INTO THE PEDRO ST. JAMES CONSTRUCTION PROJECT ACCOUNT

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: Thank you, Madam Speaker. A point was raised by the First Elected Member for West Bay about the three small subcontracts that are in issue here, whether there was a Trade and Business Licence by the company that carried these out.

Madam Speaker, as I understand it, the furniture could not be bought in the Cayman Islands and, therefore was bought somewhere in the West Indies. As we well know, Madam Speaker, it is not necessary to have a Trade and Business Licence to buy furniture from the US or from Canada or from any other country. This happens all the time. You can order goods from abroad without having a licence here.

I also understand things like the signage, TV, and vocal messages were also done abroad. Obviously, that was not done here therefore it seems that if there was no licence (which I don't know) then it may not have needed it. I read that. The third contract, Madam Speaker, was the labour contract and we know the Auditor General didn't really question that at all. It was at 3.8 of the Auditor General's Report of December 1998 in which he said, and I quote, "the work paid for was actually performed."

I think that this thing about a Trade and Business License is once again merely a smokescreen because in everyday life one does not constantly run around asking everyone who is going to do work, 'Do you have a trade licence?' in which case you really would have to ask them each day or every week or whatever 'Is it still in operation or not?' I built a house, Madam Speaker, and I didn't call about the Trade and Business Licence of the contractor or subcontractor. I wonder how many members in here, for example if they went into a restaurant—

The Deputy Speaker: I would rather if members did not debate across the floor. Each Member in this Chamber has a right to debate this motion and any points that need to be raised can be raised at that time so that we can get the debate on this motion completed and not waste time.

The Honourable Minister of Education.

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: Thank you, Madam Speaker. To take that even further, every time we purchase something from a store or from a restaurant, or a fast food restaurant, do we ask, 'Do you have a Trade and Business Licence?' There is a presumption of regularity and it is presumed that people who are trading will have the necessary licences when they are relevant. That is the point that I wish to make. Since the project came in at considerable savings—$600,000 or $700,000 under the independent projected cost—in any event, the question of a licence at the end of the day is a problem for whoever may not have it. But at this stage, I don't think that should be thrown in. It's really a smokescreen in my view, which adds further confusion to this issue.

While I know that the law says that Trade and Business Licences should be displayed where they can be seen, it is something where some do and some don't. But people in this country generally comply with the law on this.

Now, Madam Speaker, this project is in the Bodden Town district. It's probably one of the main projects that has brought business to the Bodden Town district, and it should be the pride and joy of Bodden Town and especially of the three MLAs from there. They should feel honoured to support the Pedro St. James project because it has put a first class project in their district. I am sure that the electorate in the district of Bodden Town will be listening carefully and with intent as to how the votes go in relation to Pedro St. James.

In fact, when Prince Andrew came, as you know, that is where the Members of the Legislature met him and it was good to see the number of Bodden Town people employed there, especially Mr. Terry, who took him around. I am sure that they will be looking to ensure in the vote that the support of the three Bodden Town members is there for this project. This is why, Madam Speaker, I think it is so important for us as MLAs to support good projects—especially when they are in our districts and also when it is good for the Cayman Islands.

So, I think that point is very important, and I too will look with eagerness to those three members from Bodden Town voting for that project which is so important to the district of Bodden Town. Madam Speaker, we are always hearing about walking the walk and talking the talk . . . well, this is the time to vote the vote. We will see.

I would like now to move on to another area, and it is a question of the waiver in relation to these three contracts. Madam Speaker, we have to once again remember that the three contracts are small contracts compared to the overall contract for the construction and those other matters, which would have been the bulk of the $8.7 million that was spent.

I quoted from the direct labour contract. I will get the exact amount again, but from what I remember its [approximately] $200,000. The signage is $242,000 and the furniture is $226,775. So, these are small contracts because the main contract was tendered. The main contract was the type of contract which, under the Finance and Stores Regulations, would have gone to the Central Tenders Committee. But where there are specialised contracts that have to be negotiated, it has been usual in the past for the Financial Secretary, normally with the concurrence of Executive Council (which is the position this time) to waive that in relation to those contracts because they are really not the type of contracts that can just be put out generally to tender.

Normally, tenders have to be invited from abroad. And it is not unusual when the Government employs consultants for example . . . it doesn't normally run through the tender's process under the Finance and Stores Regulations. I submit, Madam Speaker, there is nothing unusual. That procedure has been going on for a very long time. And today there may have been worry if the project that the Caribbean Development Bank independently estimated at $8.7 million had overrun—but it didn't. It came in some $500+ thousand under the cost. It was, therefore, properly done, I submit, in accordance with the law and with the Financial and Stores Regulations.

We have, firstly, the provisions of the law. The Public Finance and Audit Law (1997 Revision), at section 12(1) says this: "Without prejudice to any other provision in this Law, the Financial Secretary may make such administrative regulations and give such administrative directions and instructions not inconsistent with this Law as may appear to him to be necessary or expedient for the better carrying out of the provisions and purposes of this Law and for the safety, economy and advantage of public monies and public property."

So, quite rightly there is power in the law.

Now, there is also an extension of that in the Finance and Stores Regulations, in which paragraph numbered 1.5 states, "The financial limits prescribed in the various regulations are those which apply to the service as a whole. [And it goes on to say] In certain cases it may be suitable to specify different limits with individual departments. Where a Controlling Officer considers that a modification of the limits might be appropriate in respect to the moneys for which he is responsible, an application for such modification, giving full details of why it is thought to be required, should be made to the Financial Secretary. Any request for other variations of or dispensations from the provisions of these regulations should similarly be made to the Financial Secretary, giving detailed reasons why the variation or dispensation is thought to be necessary."

So, the power is clearly there to vary the Finance and Stores Regulations where the Financial Secretary deems it appropriate, and we know that as a result of these variations and as a result to the contract as a whole, a savings of $.5 million dollars to the public has proved to be a very good reason why this should have been done.

He can also vary it. In fact, the controlling officer can also apply (and this does happen at times) to the Financial Secretary to waive it. The power to waive rests with the Financial Secretary, and the power is there. I can assure you that what was done in this case is that the Financial Secretary exercised his discretion in accordance with the law and with the Finance and Stores Regulations, and this was supported by Executive Council.

So, to try to say that this is unusual without stating the fact that these are unusual contracts . . . they are not contracts that could be performed here because the furniture could not be bought here. The museum said that what we have here should remain in the country and not be purchased and what was needed should be purchased from abroad, which is what happened.

Also, we know when one looks at the things like the television programme when one first enters Pedro Castle . . . that sort of matter could not be done here. It is highly specialised. If you wish, it is a Disney World type of specialisation they created initially some years ago. The quality is high. There can be no doubt that both money-wise and from a quality point of view these three small subcontracts in the overall picture were different and unusual and therefore the power to waive the right to tender was properly done. That discretion is the Financial Secretary's as I said, confirmed by Executive Council.

There may be times when anyone exercises discretion and a lot of people don't agree. We find this in Immigration or in the Planning Board day after day. But it is their discretion not the backbenchers' discretion to make the decision on it. Sometimes we may not agree with that discretion. But once it is in accordance with the law, even as an appellate body, Madam Speaker, whether it is from a court or from Immigration or Planning, when it goes on appeal and it is looked at, if it's within the law then that has to be accepted by the appellate body.

Even if we are looking at this from that point of view, then the discretion being properly exercised must be accepted by this House because this House doesn't have the power to substitute its discretion, nor the opposition to substitute their discretion for a discretion that is given under the law. So, on that point, I believe that once again there is nothing to answer in relation to it.

Madam Speaker, I noticed that a lot was said on the television and in the press as well by the First Elected Member for West Bay in a direct criticism of the Minister of Tourism. The Minister of Tourism is a man with an impeccable record who has given his whole life to the service of this country. He not only rose to the point of being Financial Secretary—the highest and most powerful position that can be held in this country by a Minister or an official Executive Council Member—but he retired from that after a long and impeccable record with the government. That, Madam Speaker, is something that the First Elected Member for West Bay should definitely not be trying to criticise.

Madam Speaker, the attack on the Minister by the First Elected Member for West Bay was totally unjustified in relation to his ability. He has the proven ability—over three decades of experience, integrity, honesty, and ability. He is also highly qualified like our present Financial Secretary. We have been lucky to have had the highest calibre of people in the official Members' seats and specifically now I would be talking about the present Financial Secretary's position.

The people of West Bay appreciate what the Minister of Tourism has done for this country. In fact, the whole country appreciates it. He continues to be an extremely important and integral part of the negotiating team. In fact, the Minister of Tourism . . . and I first started negotiating in the United Kingdom and the United States back in the late 1970s, especially in the early 1980s. It was much different in those days. It was somewhat of a slower pace. Along with the Honourable Financial Secretary and the Honourable Attorney General and the Third Elected Member for George Town, we make up a very important team—a team that requires at times everyone within it to deal with the areas that are so important to them. In this case, we are looking at areas of finance and accounting. I am saying this because really the First Elected Member for West Bay has, in my view, attacked (verbally) the character of the Minister of Tourism.

But, you know, one of the things that I found to be so unusual is that the people of West Bay are much smarter than that, they understand politics—

The Deputy Speaker: Honourable Minister, could I ask you to move off that item now? I have heard you say those words at least three times. Thank you.

Hon. Truman M. Boddin: Sure, thank you, Madam Speaker.

Moving away the honest integrity of the Minister of Tourism, I now turn to the First Elected Member for West Bay who, because of his attack, I am therefore entitled to deal with.

Madam Speaker, the First Elected Member for West Bay should be the last person in the world to talk about financial mismanagement!

The Deputy Speaker: Honourable Minister, may I say something please? If it is the intention to get into any particular subject concerning the First Elected Member for the district of West Bay, it has nothing to do with Private Member's Motion No. 6/2000, as amended. I would rather if you steered clear of those words.

Hon. Truman M. Boddin: Thank you, Madam Speaker. I did not intend to go into anything specific, but to make the remark that the First Elected Member for West Bay is the last person who should try to either allege financial mismanagement, or attack the integrity of someone like the Minister of Tourism.

Madam Speaker, the Minister of Tourism is still in Executive Council and that in itself is proof that that Honourable Minister is an outstanding person.

Now, Madam Speaker, I believe I have covered all major points that have been raised by the two members. I am just checking my notes here briefly and I would really like to deal with summarising the—

The Deputy Speaker: Honourable Minister, would this be a convenient point to take the morning break?

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: It sure would, Madam Speaker.

The Deputy Speaker: Proceedings will be suspended for fifteen minutes.

PROCEEDINGS SUSPENDED AT 11.01 AM

PROCEEDINGS RESUMED AT 11.20 AM

The Deputy Speaker: Please be seated. Proceedings are resumed. Private Member's Motion No. 6/00 as amended. The Honourable Minister for Education, Aviation and Planning.

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: One other short point before I summarise. The motion calls . . . and I would just like to read this, “AND BE IT FURTHER RESOLVED THAT upon completion of the technical audit of the landscaping contract for this project, any parties responsible for fraud, misappropriation, or any other illegal action be identified and be the subject of appropriate legal action and that this Honourable Legislative Assembly be apprised of the proposed course of action.”

The Minister of Tourism has no objection whatsoever to having this matter looked at. We want to make abundantly clear that there has been no—and I repeat—no evidence whatsoever to show any type of fraud, misappropriation or any other illegal action. There could not have been, otherwise this would not have been called for on the landscaping contract. Whatever needs to be done there to clear any doubt, the government has no objection to [and] under the Constitution has no say over it anyhow. At the end of the technical audit of the landscaping contract it is then up to the Auditor General under the law to refer any matter that he wishes the police to investigate to the Commissioner of Police and under the Constitution that goes to the honourable Attorney General for decision, if it gets that far.

Indeed, the question of prosecution is not a question for this House. It is not a matter for Executive Council. Under the Constitution it is a matter purely for the police and the honourable Attorney General. By all means, the Auditor General has a duty. He doesn't need a motion by this House to do that. If he believes there is anything illegal he has a duty to refer the matter to the police who will then refer it on to the Attorney General. It therefore is a matter that then follows the normal prosecution.

This House can only be apprised of certain matters relating to a matter if it moves on for prosecution because of the sub judice rule. I assume that the latter part of this motion (and I believe the First Elected Member for George Town meant it to be that) is obviously subject to the sub judice rule.

So, there is no objection whatsoever. In fact, it is something that would be welcomed. But, once again, it is a decision for the Auditor General under the Law, and if he wishes to refer it to the police, neither government nor the legislature can refer any matter in this way. The ultimate decision rests with the Attorney General under the Constitution.

In summary, because I think I have dealt with as many of the points I have noted and can remember, . . . firstly, the motion . . . nor can anyone in this House say that there is any misappropriation of funds or anything illegal in this matter. Indeed, nothing has been proven to be that way. Like any large contract there are areas where an auditor generally will pick up and want further information and explanations. But that is not unusual. Indeed, that is the duty of the PAC. If there was nothing to be questioned in the running of a $300 million a year country then the PAC would have very little to do.

This happens many times every year. The PAC looks at different things. It is my view that this is a direct attack on the character of the Minister of Tourism. I submit that there is no substance to this motion and that therefore it is one that time will show was ill founded and should have never been brought.

The people of this country and in West Bay know who is behind it. So do I! So do we, I should say.

The Deputy Speaker: Can we cut the debate across the floor please?

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: The people of the Cayman Islands do not like this type of attempt to basically raise and allege matters whereon there is no (in my submission) good basis to do so. I think the people of the Cayman Islands will be happy to hear that the Caribbean Development Bank estimated the project at $8.7 million and in actual fact it came out at $8,170,510.97, a historic savings of $529,489.03.

If that is not prudent fiscal and financial management, what is it? Which other contract in these islands . . . and how many have been over and how many times have we come to this House to vote funds for extras for contracts that have been done here? So this House should be grateful to the Minister of Tourism for the prudent management and ability that minister has shown over the last three decades of bringing this in under the actual estimate, and an independent estimate by the Caribbean Development Bank.

Indeed, in relation to capital projects, a large part of my time goes struggling to try to keep the overruns on building and other projects within a reasonable amount over the estimated cost of it. So this is really one of the very few times that there has been such able management of such a large and diverse contract. Apparently there were some 11 subcontracts involved over quite a number of years on these projects.

The next point is that out of the many contracts and subcontracts, the only ones that anything could be alleged in relation to were three small subcontracts—the one relating to signage, $242,000; the one relating to direct labour, $318,202; and the one in relation to furniture, $226,775; and a very small part of the $8,170,000 spent on Pedro St. James.

On the question of fiscal management, anyone in government who can make a savings on the projected cost of a contract has to be good because there are very few of ministers, now or in the past (and I daresay in the future), who would be able to finish projects within the estimated cost.

We turn first to the question of the direct labour agreement and we see that the audit office stated clearly, that it is “fully satisfied that gardeners were paid at the rate specified and that the work paid for was actually performed.” That quotation comes from paragraph 3.8, page 43. That in itself removes any doubt from the main one, that this investigation is sought to be carried out. That’s why the government has no worry whatsoever because the findings in it . . . and there were invoices that there was confusion between the Botanic Park and the Pedro St. James, and yes that was so. But the money that was spent was still government’s, on government projects. A lot was done to try to sort this out and indeed I am not sure where any doubt can be left at this stage about criminal matters on this with such a finding.

In fact, if I may just read at paragraph 3.6 of the Auditor General’s Report, “A direct labour scheme seems to have been a very good approach, one in which in the circumstances offered several advances over conventional tendered contract including flexibility, training and potential cost reduction.” Therefore, the contract was good. This is a contract that is being targeted. Indeed, that’s what happened, the contract produced the results of saving this country in the end $5 million dollars.

So, nothing can be levelled at that contract, I submit, that will carry any weight. Obviously, where you have a lot of labour for the two projects, the Botanic Park and Pedro St. James, there could be cross ups. But that is being sorted out. At the end of the day, the money is for government projects. So I guess it does not matter very much that there may have been invoices for the Botanic Park that should have been under Pedro St. James, because the same people, I would think, were performing the same services at both. But, we are always talking about training. It sets that out clearly. The contract included flexibility and training. So there need be no extra cost for training the people to maintain the grounds in these lovely projects.

The other point I would like to make is that, in summary, the position was that the Ministry of Tourism quite rightly hired a main consultant, CHRM. And they relied upon the consultant for advice and to certify the invoices and on the basis of that they were entitled to do so. Indeed, if we look at the Auditor General’s Report, we will find at page 49, 3.20, where he said, “The consulting contract entered into with the main consultant is generally fair and reasonable to both parties.” What could be clearer?

He also said the use of specialist consultants, which is the point that I made earlier. We are dealing with specialist consultants here. He goes on to say, “The use of specialist consultants from outside the Cayman Islands presents particular problems in ensuring that the consultant is representing the employer’s interest and completing the full scope of their services.” Obviously a very complex contract, but the Auditor General was satisfied that the contract between the Ministry of Tourism and the main consultant was fair and reasonable to both parties.

Having employed a consultant to take their advice and rely on . . . and, indeed, that’s exactly what the Ministry of Tourism (the ministry, because I know there was some attempt to isolate the minister from the ministry) . . . because the motion states that the project up until July 1997 was managed directly by the Ministry of Tourism. So the Ministry of Tourism is involved in management. And that is also borne out at paragraph 3.21 at page 50 when the Auditor General said this, “It is clear that both the Ministry of Tourism and Treasury personnel relied on the certification of contract invoiced by the main consultant CHRM.” Indeed, that’s what they were entitled to do.

But there is no allegation there, the Treasury having done what the Ministry did. That seems strange and bears out that this motion is all about, in my view, West Bay politics. Both the Treasury and the Ministry relied on a contract that was fair and reasonable and now, having done what they should have done we get these allegations.

To put things in an even better perspective, the Auditor General was so pleased with the contract and the ministry and the reliance on it, at page 51 he said . . . and I believe it is undoubtedly all that can be asked of a person in this House or in government. He said this: “Ministry personnel appear to have acted in good faith throughout.” That’s extremely important. That’s all that can be expected of anyone in this life—to act in good faith throughout.

Obviously, the ministry did not have . . . and he goes on to state that they did not possess the technical expertise to deal with a project of that complexity so they relied upon their main advisor and “they acted in good faith throughout.” What a vindication by the Auditor General saying they have really done everything that could be expected of them. No one is perfect. Let him who is [without fault] cast the first stone. I can assure you, in this House there will be no stones thrown at all.

There were some problems, obviously. The contract was highly complex. But the Minister, the Ministry, and indeed the Treasury, did everything they were expected to do and in good faith throughout. Not just in good faith every now and then, but the Auditor General chose his words well. He said, "they acted in good faith throughout."

Earlier I dealt with the question of the waiver and in summary there is very clearly power for the Financial Secretary in the law that I read, as well as in the Financial and Stores Regulations, to exempt from going to public tender on specialist contracts. I am not saying they were specialists, Madam Speaker, I read from the Auditor General's Report and he regarded them as specialist contracts. That was done with the approval of the Executive Council. But they were small contracts. We have to remember that the bulk of this money, whatever it was to build (I don't remember now), millions on top of millions out of the $8 million, the larger part of it had been tendered. There's no question at all. There were 11 subcontracts and it seems that these three were chosen to be attacked.

I also understand that in those 11 subcontracts were contracts with Steve Shaw who did the multimedia aspect and who subcontracted to deal with the many different aspects of putting that together. The project of Pedro Castle is, in my view, and in the view of the public of this country, one of the best projects this country has seen. I thank and commend the Minister of Tourism for the many years he put in bringing this to final fruition because it is so important to this country that the birthplace of democracy has been preserved; so important to the district of Bodden Town. I would invite the three members of this honourable House from Bodden Town to vote for this project. I believe it provides to the people of Bodden Town and the district and to these islands and, in fact, the Caribbean because applause has come from all corners of the Caribbean and abroad—

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: —You might not like what I am saying, but I am going to finish—from the Caribbean and abroad how good this project is and how capably it has been finished. Indeed, all the people of these islands have enjoyed it, but especially important to the district of Bodden Town and the many Bodden Towners who work there, whom I am very proud of . . . and I believe the three members should make them proud and vote the right way.

The motion has been one of only two I have seen in this House. It has two facets to it, one is a direct attack on the Minister of Tourism himself, who I submit cannot be singled out in this way because throughout the Auditor General's Report the Auditor General dealt with the Ministry of Tourism. References throughout, in fact in what I read of it there were no references in there directly to the Minister: it's the Ministry and also the Treasury, in relation to the management of this project. Therefore, to take the attack of no confidence in the minister, and to try to leave out the other parties in relation to this, in my view is totally unjustified, as it was on the previous motion brought against another minister some time back.

The Minister of Tourism has given his life to this country. He has worked in government endlessly and tirelessly. And, most important, he has had the finances of this country throughout the important time when it was so crucial to have a Financial Secretary of his calibre managing this country's finances. He was succeeded by another very good Financial Secretary and we have to be thankful to these two men for keeping this country stable and for properly managing it.

It is unthinkable to believe that a man with three decades of properly managing and bringing this country to where it is now has to face at this late stage allegations of mismanagement which are totally unfounded. I read from the Auditor General's Report. It bears out clearly that these allegations are unfounded. Therefore, it is a sad day when the politics of this country reach such a low ebb.

I have no doubt whatsoever. I put my full faith, my full support behind the Ministry, behind the Minister, behind the Treasury. We know that in the end the Good Lord sees everything and He will ensure that it comes out right for those who believe in Him. I thank you.

The Deputy Speaker: I have been asked by the honourable Financial Secretary that we take the lunch break now for a meeting in the Committee Room. I have granted permission so we will suspend proceedings until 2.00.

Mr. Roy Bodden: Madam Speaker.

The Deputy Speaker: The Third Elected Member for Bodden Town.

Mr. Roy Bodden: Earlier this morning I raised a matter with the Leader of Government Business concerning the pace at which we are working, and I queried as to whether it would be acceptable and reasonable for us to go on a little longer than our normal adjournment hour in the afternoon in order to try to conclude the business within the next few days. It is Easter time next week and, as I understand it, certain government members are going on a delegation to the UK again. I wonder what is the disposition of government members, and whether the Leader of Government Business is in a position to say whether or not he had any success in raising any commitment from his colleagues.

The Deputy Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for Education, Aviation, and Planning.

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: Madam Speaker, the honourable member is correct. I did speak to members on this. Today there is one minister with a medical appointment at 4.30, there's one with a dental appointment at 4.30, and it seems like today may be somewhat difficult. The problem when we looked at Wednesday was that . . . and let me say this, whatever we can do to extend this and get out of here I am personally (and I am sure everyone is) with. To move on on Wednesday, I would need to cancel an Air Traffic Licensing Authority meeting of which there are licenses pending that need to be dealt with. I am wondering if it would not be better if we could begin, say, at 9.00. We would still get the hour in, but I believe that if I have to cancel the ATLA now, I don't see that getting done probably until after Easter, and there are charters for Easter that we should try to deal with.

I should point out that the only time I can fix meetings, or that ministers can fix meetings, is, well, after the Legislative Assembly. I set this some time ago and notices have gone out.

On Thursday, we are open. We could begin earlier and go on later if that would assist the member.

The Deputy Speaker: The Third Elected Member for Bodden Town.

Mr. Roy Bodden: I certainly appreciate the honourable minister's predicament, and I would not want him to have to cancel important meetings where people are waiting on licenses for air charters over Easter. But I have to say that I don't think it makes any sense for us to waste our time by deciding we are going to start earlier when we have a difficult enough time meeting at 10.00 AM. I certainly don't think we are going to be able to meet at 9.00 AM. So, it looks like we have to forego this and just bite the bullet and be in here for an extended time.

The Deputy Speaker: I think we understand very clearly that we cannot continue late this evening, and we cannot continue late on Wednesday. But should we be here until Thursday, can we all be prepared to work late on Thursday evening until we complete the business?

Proceedings are suspended.

PROCEEDINGS SUSPENDED AT 12 NOON

PROCEEDINGS RESUMED AT 2.19 PM

The Deputy Speaker: Please be seated. Proceedings are resumed. Debate continues on Private Member's Motion No. 6/00 as amended. Does any other member wish to speak?

The Fourth Elected Member for George Town.

Dr. Frank McField: I know the general public that has been listening to the debate on this Private Member's Motion (which originally used the word "mismanagement") is aware that the word "mismanagement" means that it could be just bad management as well as wrongful management; and that the word "wrongful" implied misconduct, where the word "bad" would apply to inability.

I would like to approach this motion from the point of inability rather than from wrongful conduct. I am talking about the bad management, meaning the inability. And the inability has to do with leadership. It has to do with the end. I always speak about leadership and how we need to apply the carpenter's rule of measuring twice and cutting once. If we are supposed to have leadership that is accountable, if we are to have in this parliament ministerial responsibility, it would follow that ministers have to be responsible in the beginning. So, management has to be good not only in the middle or at the end, it has to be good in conception.

We have to conceive the plan, and that is the beginning of management. The application of the plan has to do with a different stage of management, which is not the stage of management I am necessarily talking about. I am talking about the minister, the portfolio, the government's bad management—not just of Pedro Castle but of other issues in society.

The Leader of Government Business, as a lawyer was able to get up and speak on why this motion should not be before the House. In the first place, he said how the experiences of the Minister of Tourism puts him beyond where he might be questioned by members of this House; because the experiences (according to the Leader of Government Business) of the Minister of Tourism are so vast and tested that no motion should question his ability.

That's fine, because we know that good boxers who are champions can lose fights because they make one basic mistake in the beginning of the fight. That basic mistake made in the beginning could determine the results. So a lawyer who is well versed in arguing his case can make a mistake in the beginning that would have bearing upon the following conduct of his defence. As a matter of fact, in this world we could make one mistake and that could determine our lives forever.

The mere fact that the minister is an experienced member of this government does not mean that he is not a human being. It does not mean that he cannot err and therefore use bad judgment in his management style. He is dealing with a different kind of predicament. The Pedro St. James Historic Site was a different predicament. The way the project came about in the first place had to do with the Historic Sites Committee, the National Trust.

It started in 1991 with the purchasing of the property. It was an ad hoc development of a historic site that would act as a tourist attraction.

In the conception, the idea stage, the minister responsible might not have paid enough attention to the original stages that he should have. As a result, the project might have started on a level that might not have been compatible with the way we are used to believing that government should manage. If the Auditor General is saying that the principles upon which decisions were originally made did not complement the way in which government makes decisions, they have to show good reason why they would break with precedent in order to create another style. What would be some of these reasons?

They have said that the reason the contract did not go out to tender was because they did not feel we had the expertise locally. Public Works Department was not considered capable of managing the project because PWD did not have the expertise to manage the project. Was it therefore demonstrated to Executive Council, who made the decision not to send this project out to tender that the ministry had the expertise to manage this project? I should hardly think that if we had no expertise on the island at Public Works Department that we would have it in the Ministry of Tourism, which at that particular time was not responsible for Public Works Department.

We don't have to cast any aspersions on any person. We can talk about the inefficiency in management style, and how when an inefficient management style is conceived by one minister it is supported by other ministers in Executive Council and it impacts the way we expose our country and the resources of our country to further be exploited by someone who is not from this country.

Whether or not they succeed in gaining $5 over what they should have been able to achieve, or $100,000 more under a different management structure, is not the point. The point is that that type of exposure of our country's resources suggests that we continue to trust everybody that we come in contact with especially if those persons are from someplace else telling us they are honest and good and will do everything for our benefit.

I think that the Leader of Government Business cannot convince the Caymanian public of the idea that everything that is done by government can be justified and seen as good for the people. If we are condoning this type of management style now and in the future, what will happen if there is a new government in this country tomorrow dealing with a project they know nothing about? They go and hire a team of archaeologists that are going to give them some kind of concoction about what their culture is, their heritage, their values, and they are going to create for the present and the future a reconstruction of this thing that existed in the past.

First of all, they went into this project with a lack of historical understanding of their heritage, with a lack of cultural insight as to the significant value of the heritage, and they are taking the heritage and making it into a tourism product. Fine and good. I am not going to argue about that since the project happened to be under the Minister of Tourism. But the mere fact that a person who came to consult them on the first phase (which was the idea stage of the project) should now become involved in consulting them about the physical manifestation of the ideas is what I consider to be bad management in the first place.

I think that the separation of the physical conception of the project, the idea conception and the physical conception, would have been more prudent. So, when the Leader of Government Business gets up and talks about prudent management without understanding that he is not the only one with the ability to analyse and dissect and show people and give people an insight into things, he is talking nonsense. It is not prudent to put all of your eggs into one basket. We hear the old people saying that all the time. If that is so, then why hire the same people who were responsible for the idea to do the construction?

There are those who say that because they were involved in the idea creation that they should be able to best interpret the idea form of the development. But what are architects for? Why do most of the architectural firms in this country do the architectural renderings of projects and the engineers, contractors, and landscapers come in afterwards and give us what these people were dreaming of?

My submission is that this particular move by the Executive Council to waive tendering to allow the company that had been responsible for the idea stage should now become involved in all phases of construction, landscaping as well, to be involved in the total management and control of the project without the least bit of supervision, that although that might have resulted (like the Leader of Government Business said) in saving the country a little money (the original estimate was $8.7 million and it ended up costing government $8,170,000)—

Dr. Frank McField: Right. He says this, but we are not sure it's the fact. But even if there was a savings, we will find that we have degraded the system by which we have pledged to work because we believe that system allows for transparency.

That is the magic word—transparency! It is not to say that because I cannot see beyond the curtain that I am now going to say that something bad happened on the other side. But because we live in a democracy it would be more prudent to allow me to see beyond it at all stages since that is my right as a member of this Legislative Assembly. I should not be accused of wanting to ridicule the Minister of Tourism because I speak on a motion that was formulated in such a way as to raise questions about the actual transactions regarding Pedro St. James.

I am not from Bodden Town, at least not now. I guess originally that's where the McFields came from, Bodden Town. I know that much. And I don't know that we were involved in the democracy that took place at that time either. But I would like to say that I enjoy the atmosphere at Pedro St. James. I have gone to events there that have caused me to see the value of what has been done there. And that is not the point.

For the Leader of Government Business to get up here and try to put the elected members of Bodden Town, or what I believe he is doing to the Third Elected Member for Bodden Town, saying that if he is critical of the handling then he is critical of the project and therefore he is against something that provides employment for his people and enhances his district. That's the furthest thing from the truth!

The truth is that this motion is not asking whether or not it was a good thing to do. It's questioning the management style; the leadership qualities as can be seen by examining the outcome of the original contract, which the government of the Cayman Islands made with this Canadian firm.

I want to say that I have all the respect for the Minister of Tourism. I am certainly not going to criticise him for doing something wilfully wrong. And we are not allowed to do that by way of our Standing Orders in any case. I don't believe that is what the motion is doing. But certainly if we don't scrutinise the behaviour of one another, if the backbench opposition is not allowed to question the management style or the leadership skills of government members, then the status quo is so secure, so permanent, so fixed that no changes are possible, then you wouldn't need democracy.

Sometimes when I hear the Leader of Government Business speak I don't believe he seriously thinks that we need democracy because we don't need to question what he does, or what other members do. We don't need to suggest to the general public that the country could live without their leadership. But if this is the type of leadership he is encouraging then I think that we can disagree on that. I disagree.

I believe that more attention should have been paid to the fact that the Ministry of Tourism did not have the expertise to manage this project when it was brought to Executive Council. Ministers of government should have asked the minister if he was sure that his portfolio could take care of this project, especially when dealing with a foreign country; and if he was sure the public would understand if there was a question later on as to whether all the things done were done in the right and proper way. We have to be seen to be doing these things in the right manner.

That is the kind of counselling you would expect the Leader of Government Business to have given the Minister of Tourism when he brought the proposal to waive the tendering of the project, awarding this company from Canada the contract to build Pedro St. James and therefore subcontract whatever was necessary as a part of the project.

The way the contracts and subcontracts were structured causes us to believe that this had more to do with the motives and expertise and the desires of the main contractor rather than the ministry. So there is no point in my beating around the bush, trying to talk about the ministry, because once the ministry signed the contract it made the original sin—like Adam. The sin comes down the line. But the original sin is the sin of the ministry. If other sins are committed we understand because once you have the first sin, you have a sequence of sins.

I am not going to go into the little details of whether or not this ended up at the Botanic Park or Pedro St. James and all the suspicions. We are dealing with sin, the original sin. And it's the original sin I can talk about in this Legislative Assembly because as an elected member I am paid to hold government accountable for its policies and actions. This has to do with a choice in policy and action that deviated from the traditional more prudent way of doing this type of business.

I visited an older lady Sunday and she said that she listens to the Legislative Assembly debates all the time. She said that she believes the Leader of Government Business is always making explanations and excuses for the other ministers. In other words, people in the public believe this is a court.

I have heard members of the backbench say that because of a motion I brought they thought this was like a courtroom and we should take the court someplace else. One of the reasons it seems like a courtroom is because of the way the Leader of Government Business argues. He takes a little point and he goes around it like a mosquito—buzz, buzz, buzz—hypnotising you, droning you with boredom until you get to the point where you say 'I give up! Hallelujah! You're right, minister. You're so brilliant, so superior, you're so incredible.'

Dr. Frank McField: That's what happens in here. That's why some people think it's a court.

But let me tell you, the jury has not come back from deliberation as yet. The jury intends to deliberate for a very long time on the issue of whether or not that minister will be allowed to continue to make excuses for what goes on in this country that should not go on.

He mentioned another motion. He seems to want to tell the public that democracy would work best if he was permanently at the Glass House rather than down here having to answer our fresh feisty questions and criticism. He tends to be almost like a demagogue, and he confuses the whole essence of what our job is supposed to be.

I have spent a lot of time on Public Eye and other programmes trying to tell people that debate is helpful, healthy, and positive. It's only by way of exposing what you do to scrutiny that you will improve what you do in the future. If we are to invent a future that will be beneficial to all persons living in the Cayman Islands, then we have to invent that future democratically. If that is to be done, we have to be supporters of a system that is transparent and that can be scrutinised and questioned without people feeling that this is a personal vindictive attack upon one of our outstanding citizens. I don't think that I would be involved with that type of accusation.

And I want the general public to know that their country is better off at this moment because it has people in here with the intelligence to compete intellectually with one another in order to develop a much more progressive and creative system of government than in the years like 1976 and so forth when the Leader of Government Business considered himself to be the only educated and competent person in this country.

I give God thanks for the fact that the election in November will come soon and the people will be given a say as well as the Honourable Minister responsible for Education, Aviation, and Planning, for if he had spent the time dealing with education that he has obviously spent dealing with this Pedro St. James issue we might know where we are going with education. Obviously, we need some fresh creative ideas in that field as well.

I just hope that when other members get up to speak they make it quite clear that parliament is for debate, not for stifling the voices of the people. Thank you.

The Deputy Speaker: Does any other member wish to speak? The Third Elected Member for Bodden Town.

Mr. Roy Bodden: As the seconder of this motion, I was debating whether or not it was necessary for me to say anything at all. I considered that the mover and (up until that time) the First Elected Member for West Bay had done justice to the position that I was taking. Consequently, I was undecided. However, it is now incumbent on me to clear up the misconceptions he deliberately perpetuated—as is often the case after the Leader of Government Business speaks. For that minister to suggest that this motion comes here primarily motivated by West Bay politics is not only ludicrous and preposterous, but it borders on the disingenuous.

As that minister well knows, this motion has been around for almost one year and arose in the first instance out of a genuine concern and dissatisfaction of the handling of that project, namely the Pedro St. James construction project. And it is a pity that he is not here—as he is so often not when matters are being addressed emanating out of his comments. For him to suggest that I should be fearful and intimidated, or that I should stifle my conscience or suddenly be dumbstruck—because if I speak against this and take a position of principle against this the people of Bodden Town will vote me out—is as far from reality and truth as east is from west.

I am taking a position of principle. I have always stood on my principles; therefore, I have no fear. If I am voted out because of my principles, the next day (when I become Mr. Citizen Roy) I shall walk the streets with my head held high on my shoulders. That will not have been any disgrace as far as I am concerned. But, if I am a coward, and do not speak what needs to be spoken, and do not call a spade, a spade . . . even if I am voted in with the greatest majority ever, I shall be ashamed of myself for playing politics of convenience and abiding by situational ethics, rather than being true, fair, and honest.

I have always said that for me it is not a question of being popular; but it is always a question of being right. Oftentimes being right in the short term means not being popular. However, I am confident that if you are right and unpopular, in the long term you will become popular because people will find out that you were not playing any expediency, not playing to the gallery but representing the truth as it deserves to be represented. Consequently, I have absolutely no fear of the position I take regarding retaliation from my constituents because I know that there are significant numbers of them who share the same concerns I share regarding the construction project at Pedro St. James.

Now, let me say what this motion is not about. This motion, contrary to what the Leader of Government Business said—and he knows well—is not about any personal castigation. It is not about trying to destroy the Minister of Tourism; nor is it about trying to destroy anyone else. This motion is calling the attention of this honourable House to the inconsistencies and paradoxes in the way this project was handled. I shall go on to show that from day one the project went awry. From the very beginning, it went off track. It has nothing to do with trying to besmirch or destroy the career of any civil servant or politician. It calls into question certain basic weaknesses of which the minister, for all the experience he has, cannot extricate himself convincingly.

While I am not going to destroy the goodly gentleman (because I have no reason to), by the same token I also have no reason to paint him in any divine context. I have no reason to canonise or beatify him either.

My responsibility is to say that he abnegated his responsibility as a minister of some experience and long standing. He was duped! He was sammied! he relaxed his observation and was taken advantage of. That is how I see it. But that does not excuse him. And I cannot now say that the matter should be forgotten. I have to remind the minister that he should have been more diligent, less trustworthy, that he made some basic errors.

It is clear that the motion is not about destroying the minister when in the first resolve it says, “BE IT THEREFORE RESOLVED THAT this Honourable House records its lack of confidence in the Minister’s handling of the project . . .”—of “the project.” It never said “general lack of confidence in “the Minister.” It says “. . .lack of confidence in the Minister’s handling of the project.” So how can people take it out of context to say that this motion is about destroying the minister? I don’t like that.

While I agree that persons must have the democratic right to express themselves, I have to take umbrage with those types of suggestions. The Leader of Government Business is creating mischief. He is misleading. He knows—

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: Madam Speaker, I object! On a point of order.

POINT OF ORDER

The Deputy Speaker: May I hear your point of order?

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: I object to that statement. He has stated that I am misleading.

The Deputy Speaker: That you are misleading?

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: Right.

The Deputy Speaker: Honourable Minister, I do not take his point that you are misleading the country generally, I think that what he is saying is that in your debate, to say that this motion is speaking directly to the Minister is misleading, because it is saying “lack of confidence in the Minister’s handling of the project.” So I do not consider that a point of order.

The Third Elected Member for Bodden Town, please continue.

Mr. Roy Bodden: Thank you, Madam Speaker.

I want to go further to point out that the second resolve of the motion calls for completion of the technical audit. It is not laying any blanket charge, saying there was fraud or misappropriation. It is calling for a technical audit to verify this. So I take umbrage to the suggestions I heard made a short while ago.

Now, having cleared that, having set the parameters within I plan to debate, let me begin by saying that it is unacceptable for someone with the experience of the honourable Minister of Tourism to have allowed himself to have been carried away so that this project was so poorly supervised. And for that, the minister has to take full blame. He has to accept the responsibility.

Excluding the hospital this was the second largest construction contract undertaken by the National Team Government. I deliberately draw that comparison to destroy the notion that the Leader of Government Business gives, and indeed the Minister of Tourism on occasion gives, that they should continue to be voted into government because they are the ones with the experience and expertise to run the country.

The Minister of Health came into the construction of a hospital cold turkey! Plunked in the midst of not only the largest construction project, but one fraught with controversy, dissension, disruptions and objections. That minister came from outside, was plunked into that position and has constructed the hospital successfully. I would have to say that he has successfully constructed a hospital of greater sums than Pedro St. James, having to deal with many more (what does the Minister of Education call them?) complex issues and contracts. And yet, there is no question as to the efficacy of what happened. There is no question as to the regularity of the procedure.

So, if they are claiming ("they," being the Minister of Tourism and the Leader of Government Business) that it takes experience to be successful and do things, and that "they" must be kept there because "they" have that experience . . . then tell me, how do they explain the performance of the Minister of Health with a mammoth project like the hospital which is finished and not surrounded by controversy?

I don't even hear any of the usual political queries. So their argument, that it must be them always, is destroyed. By their own volition, they have destroyed themselves.

I am aware that for all of the sharpness we say we have (we being Caymanians) sometimes we fall into the company of slick-talking people, fast talkers. Some of these people can literally sell ice to an Eskimo! I believe this is the kind of situation to which the Minister of Tourism fell victim, an innocent victim. But the Minister of Tourism should have kept his eyes and ears open, and should have been on the alert.

I am not saying that something would not have still gone wrong, but I am saying that the minister would not now find himself in a position of looking back because of someone else's fault. I believe in all sincerity that his intentions were good.

In reply to the Honourable Minister responsible for Education, Aviation, and Planning and that web he was so cleverly trying to weave, I would like him or anyone else to substantiate anywhere that I have taken a position at any time against the construction of that project, even though I know it is not without its challenges to this day because the completion of the construction is one thing but the successful operation is another. But I have yet to go on record saying that I am against it.

The Minister of Tourism can speak for himself. I gave him moral support. I voted in favour of it. And I am still willing to give him the necessary support to get the project on its feet. So for the Leader of Government Business to suggest that I was trying to torpedo the project and sink it, appealing to the people of Bodden Town who work there to vote against me . . . Madam Speaker, he better spend his time shoring up his own constituency. He'd better be worrying about himself and doing a few things for George Town because Bodden Town has Pedro St. James, what has George Town got?

And he's a minister, Madam Speaker. I am just a poor backbencher!

Dr. Frank McField: Maybe we'll get the civic centre.

Mr. Roy Bodden: We have civic centres, we have Pedro St. James, what has George Town got? And he's the minister!

The Deputy Speaker: Can we get back to the motion?

Mr. Roy Bodden: I just wanted to remind the Honourable Minister responsible for Education, Aviation, and Planning that I can play those kinds of politics too. I can play dirty too.

Dr. Frank McField: And he gave two civic centres to East End!

Mr. Roy Bodden: And then I don't want to remind him that he gave two civic centres to East End.

Mr. Roy Bodden: When I said that the project was off on the wrong foot, I want to draw attention to the Auditor General's Report and the financial statements of the Government of the Cayman Islands for year ended 31 December 1997. Paragraph 3.8 on page 45, where, in commenting on the start-up fee for Pedro St. James, the Auditor General said, "A total of $307,261 was spent against this vote in 1997. But only $150,000 relates to the start-up expenses for Pedro St. James. Of the remaining $157,261, $114,000 relates to payments made to a contractor for the acquisition and installation of plants at Pedro St. James, $47,000; and the Queen Elizabeth Botanic Park $67,000. These expenses have been mis-classified and should have been charged to separate capital votes. The Caribbean Development Bank has refused to reimburse these costs from the Pedro St. James loan because the banks tendering procedures were not complied with."

I don't have any 25 years in high finance. I don't have any degrees in credit management. But I know that that is shoddy record keeping. I know from my experience that that is the kind of practice auditors rap the practitioners on the knuckles for. Shoddy record keeping invites all kinds of insinuations, aspersions and innuendo. I am saying that it was the minister's responsibility, because the Minister of Education talks about the minis- try. But who is the head of the ministry? Is it not the minister?

Regardless of the Constitutional arrangement, the minister should have picked this up and nipped it in the bud. How? By approaching the contractor and saying, 'Listen, this cannot be tolerated because we must not have any graying of the areas. There can be no admixture here. We have to keep proper records. You must remember that I am ultimately responsible to the Parliament of the country.' That would have been in order because do you know what happens when this kind of attention is brought to the contractor and he fails to abide by it? It is reason for reviewing the contract. So I am saying that the business got off on the wrong foot from the very beginning, from the outset, from the inception, because this should have been nipped in the bud. If it had, some of the more obvious glaring and odious practices would not have fallen on.

I am happy that the report casts no reflection on the bureaucracy. I am even happy that it casts no reflection on the minister other than to say that the minister was lax in his supervision of the project. And you can't even blame him beyond a certain point because his responsibilities do not exclusively end with the oversight of the Pedro St. James project. He has other responsibilities and the ministry has other functions he has to oversee. Nevertheless, the minister allowed these weaknesses to creep in.

Like the sign on Harry Truman's desk, the buck stops with the minister.

Another significant point needs to be made. With all of his experience—and indeed the Leader of Government Business touted how he was a former Financial Secretary—the minister should have clearly understood that there was a basic problem with moving a project of that magnitude out of the direct supervision of the Public Works Department to the Ministry of Tourism, which was not equipped (by virtue of the number of personnel and technical expertise) to fully supervise this project. That is the single most glaring weakness. That project should not have been moved to the ministry. The ministry was ill equipped.

As I read the Auditor General's Report, and as I heard the deliberations of the Public Accounts Committee on the radio, I realised that there are some basic lessons that we as policymakers, ministers, and responsible people, have to learn and understand in our dealings with other parties. One of those lessons is that we have to be (how should I put it?) a little more perceptive. We may even have to be less trusting in certain areas.

I believe that part of the breakdown here lies in the fact that advantage was taken of the informal laid back way we do business. Advantage was taken of the kind of trust that we are accustomed to using when dealing with one another. I believe these are nuances that we in the Cayman Islands have to shy away from now as a result of being burnt.

The consulting firm CHRM mutated itself in a way. It went from CHRM Canada, to CHRM Cayman. That in itself should have been cause for some close observation and supervision, giving rise to some skepticism. And for a situation to arise where the very consultant became a contractor and then subcontracted certain things is an unsavory, unnatural relationship. It is a symbiotic relationship that is normally frowned upon. I am not suggesting that it was illegal as much as it was unusual in these kinds of circumstances. Someone—certainly the minister—should have been following this more closely and realised that this kind of mutation would not bode well in the final analysis.

How can someone start as a consultant and then wind up as a contractor? In many other jurisdictions that would be cause for great alarm. The red lights would be flashing.

The Auditor General drew indirect reference to this kind of thing—the inability to produce records. It is clearly borne out that this is cause for suspicion. It is unfortunate that it happened this way and was allowed to cast aspersions upon the performance of the minister. Someone has to assume responsibility.

In the Auditor General's Report on the financial statements of the government for the year ended 31 December 1998 (and I am not going to read and comment extensively because others have done so) . . . I just wish to draw reference and raise concern about what I call a refusal to cooperate which serves to do nothing other than arouse suspicion.

On page 43, paragraph 3.3, "The subcontractors budget submission did not state the currency in which prices were expressed. The possibilities are Canadian dollars, the contract was between two Canadian companies; or Cayman Islands dollars, with United States dollars as an alternative. The paper submitted to Executive Council makes no reference to either Canadian or US dollars. It seems to have been assumed by all concerned that SSP (Steve Shaw Productions) bid was expressed in Cayman Islands dollars. And this was confirmed by CHRM to the ministry in 1996. Subsequently, in March 1999 CHRM indicated that the SSP price was actually expressed in Canadian dollars. The intent was that this would be converted to Cayman Islands dollars to allow for CHRM's (consultant fee) supervision and input on the multimedia subcontract. It was pointed out to CHRM representatives that this was not written into the contract provisions and the CHRM representative could not produce any written confirmation."

So, do you want to tell me that (after listening to the Minister of Education paint the Minister of Tourism in that context) having all that experience the Minister of Tourism allowed himself to be painted into a corner and did not raise any queries about these inconsistencies? And then other members on this side and I, who claim to be conscientious, are expected to say 'Well done, good and faithful servant'? No, Madam Speaker. Nothing could be further from the truth!

It was incumbent upon the honourable Minister of Tourism to have seen this and to have nipped it in the bud. These kinds of practices mutate into greater and greater practices and travesties. I cannot understand how, given the gentleman's experience—his three decades as said by the Leader of Government Business, 30 years (not an insignificant number)—he allowed himself to be so taken advantage of. He allowed himself to now have to explain to Parliament why this happened. It is unfortunate.

I believe that not only should the Minister of Tourism be here accounting to Parliament, but the principals of CHRM should be too. Sometimes I lament that we don't have a system like they do in the US where they could be subpoenaed to come here and testify and prove to us that nothing was wrong. But in the absence of that, I have to hold the Minister of Tourism to account.

The Deputy Speaker: Would this be a convenient point to take the afternoon break? Proceedings will be suspended for 15 minutes.

PROCEEDINGS RESUMED AT 3.41 PM

The Deputy Speaker: Please be seated. Proceedings are resumed. Debate continues on Private Member's Motion No. 6/00 as amended. The Third Elected Member for Bodden Town continuing.

Mr. Roy Bodden: Prior to the break I was highlighting some of the inconsistencies and obstinacy of the main consultant-turned-contractor, and I was quoting from the Auditor General's Report.

As one reads this report, one is struck by the obstinacy and downright disregard of cooperation. On page 43, paragraph 3.4, when the subcontractor's budget submission did not state in what currency the contract was written, the Auditor General says, "The Audit Office has contacted both the main consultant and the subcontractor to try to establish the facts. CHRM has declined to provide the information requested."

That should certainly not be allowed to go on like this. That is why I remarked earlier that in all candour the minister, although he must assume responsibility for the project, should not be expected to take the rap in situations like this. But in order to protect himself, the minister should have seen to it that such a situation did not exist.

The Auditor General goes on to point out on page 43, "The audit office has been unable to establish the total amount of fees paid to CHRM for its consulting services relating to the multimedia production. We are greatly concerned about the lack of transparency and accountability over this element of the project."

I have to again record my surprise and consternation that the minister allowed this to go forward under a cloud that was opaque. Certainly the Auditor General said it was not transparent. So, if not transparent, it must be opaque. I am surprised because the National Team adopted the buzzwords "accountability" and "transparency." But talk is cheap—they talk the talk, but they fail to walk the walk. That is why I am concerned.

I am saying that this should not end here. It should not end with the Auditor General's Report. It should not even end with any vote against the minister's mismanagement. It should end with a further investigation. These documents should be brought forward. This company should be made to produce these documents. They have taken money in good faith. Now, to get this matter cleared up they should be subjected to the audit as this motion says, and if they fail to produce these documents or if anything untoward has been realised, it should be taken to the next level. We have to send a message.

It is unfortunate that our authority does not allow us to pursue this matter outside of this jurisdiction. It is unfortunate that this project will come to its conclusion with clouds still hanging over the whole project.

On page 44 of the Auditor General's Report, paragraph 3.7, commenting on the direct labour agreement (and there were some positive aspects of the direct labour agreement as outlined by a previous speaker), he is talking about invoices submitted to the Ministry of Tourism for payments that were charged against the Botanic and Pedro projects. However, auditors were not able to locate a contract document and it is understood that there was no formal agreement.

I am not a lawyer. I am not even a legal scholar, but I know when these things happen it is grounds for negation of the agreement.

Not only was it shoddy bookkeeping, but there was no legal ground for the practice to take place. Someone should have seen that. Someone in the minister's position should have seen that and brought that to the principals' attention. And they should have been warned, if that kind of practice continued, that we would have no other alternative but to prematurely end the contract because you are going to get someone in trouble.

I listened intently to the submission by the Leader of Government Business. I was at a loss to understand what he was trying to say. Was he trying to say that the Auditor General had exceeded the ambit of his authority, or that the Auditor General was in water over his head? because this is the same Auditor General that the Leader of Government Business in 1996 used to verify the fact that (according to him, the Leader of Government Business) the National Team had $60 million in recurrent profit.

So, was he trying to say that the Auditor General was good enough for that, but not good enough to make a penetrating analysis of this arrangement between CHRM and all the other complicated entities? If that is what he was trying to say, his logic doesn't hold water. His logic is skewed.

I come back to the point that this project should not have been the responsibility of the Ministry of Tourism because it was too large. The Auditor General himself said on page 51, paragraph 3.21, when talking about the role of the Ministry . . . and this is the fundamental breakdown. I don't know why the Minister of Tourism believed that for all of his experience he could have handled this project from his ministry.

Here's what the Auditor General said, "Normally, oversight of construction projects is the responsibil- ity of Public Works Department who has considerable expertise in this area. For very large and complex projects [which this was], for example the George Town Hospital, a specialist in-house team is assembled. The development of Pedro St. James was complex and unique in many ways. Public Works Department was not involved until late 1997 after the date of most of the transactions described in the preceding paragraph. During the early stages of the project the role of ministry personnel was restricted to processing payments authorised by CHRM. It is clear that both the Ministry of Tourism and Treasury personnel relied on the certification of contractor invoices by the main consultant CHRM. As the role of CHRM changed from consultant to contractor the role of the Ministry of Tourism became much more difficult.”

I am going to pause here to interject a little humour. CHRM did what the Jamaicans call “samfie.” They samfied the minister. They started out as consultant, and wound up as contractor. The Jamaicans say somebody must have been the samfie man and the samfied the minister! That should not have been allowed to happen and when it did . . . it must have been something like how a magician evolves into another person. The Ministry of Tourism was at a disadvantage because they were not equipped to exercise that kind of oversight. It would confuse anyone when you start as A and wind up as B and later on you find out they went down to C, D and E.

The Minister should have spotted that. He should have distanced himself from that kind of questionable practice. He should have said, ‘No, no, no, no, no. This kind of unsavoury and unusual occurrence must not be allowed to happen under my watch because I don’t want the backbenchers questioning me and putting me under this scrutiny in the best of times, let alone this year being an election year.’

I am not so hardhearted that I am without sympathy for the Minister of Tourism, but he should not have allowed himself to get in that position. He should have examined the relationship. I don’t know what transpired, but I think that sometimes we in the Cayman Islands are a little naïve and too trusting in these kinds of relationships. We have to understand that the world is not made up exclusively of people of our nature.

I am reminded of the story told by the Italian sociologist Diego Gambetta. A certain Sicilian man of honour wanted to teach his son a lesson in trust. He persuaded his son to climb up a wall. And when he broached his son with the idea, his son refused and said he was not going up there to jump. The father said, “Go ahead, I will catch you.”

After some moments, he persuaded his son and he went up on the wall ready to jump. The father moved away and the son fell facedown in the sand. He said, “Now I want you to learn a lesson: In certain arrangements do not even trust your family. Do not take anyone’s word for granted. Life is like that. The rules must be clearly laid out.”

I believe that is what happened in this case. Someone, the minister or somebody, was too trusting. This should not have been allowed to happen.

The landscaping contract is a fiasco. Plants dying. Work that was supposed to be done was not done. Shoddy building practices. This project is a litany of things gone wrong. And the upshot of all of that is that the arrangement for the money was made with the Caribbean Development Bank. And that has a record of being hard nosed. I believe the Caribbean Development Bank is even more hard-nosed than the World Bank and the IMF.

So we have all kinds of breakdowns because many of these invoices invariably had to be presented to CDB for reimbursement to the Cayman Islands Government. And invoicing procedure being shoddy in the first place couldn’t pass the scrutiny of CDB. As a result, according to the Auditor General we have amounts now that CDB won’t honour invoices for. There is a litany of evils.

The good minister should not have allowed himself to be put in this position. It’s not the end of the world, but it is certainly an embarrassing position. It casts a cloud on his administration of this. I am alarmed that someone in his position should have seen what was happening before it got to this ridiculous conclusion, and then used all of the resources available, including the legal department, to nip it in the bud before it brought the minister this embarrassment. We have a motion here calling for the House to record its lack of confidence in his management of this project because that is what it is.

We are not inspired to have confidence in how he handled this project. If he didn’t have time to follow it up himself, I know it’s difficult doing a myriad of other things, but someone should have been appointed to keep tabs on these people. That is why I would like to hear the reason why PWD, given their previous experience in these kinds of projects, was not co-opted to handle this.

On page 46, the Auditor General comments, when talking about the structure of contracts and subcontracts, “In the opinion of the Audit Office, the contractual arrangements were wholly inappropriate.” Madam Speaker, that is being charitable. The Auditor General is being generous. How in the world could it be expected that it would be tolerated that someone who starts out as a consultant winds up as a contractor? A conflict of interests!

In some places there would be harsher accusations levelled. Why, in other jurisdictions it would have to be examined to find out why the role changed. I mean, when they had insider information. They knew all of this—the extent of the money paid, the work to be done—they benighted from inside information. It is sickening.

And then, as if that weren’t bad enough, operating a company without a local Trade & Business licence. So, it is difficult not to arrive at the conclusion that these principals saw a situation of which they became totally determined to take advantage to the point where they decided to be unscrupulous. They saw where they were taken in good faith. I can understand how the minister in his enthusiasm to get this project done, a worthy project . . . and I was here at the initial presentation myself. I was impressed.

In his enthusiasm, the minister was completely preyed upon—not prayed upon, that would have been good; but p-r-e-y-e-d upon by these parties. They took advantage of his enthusiasm, his desire, and his congeniality. I hope that at the end of the day the minister can learn the lesson he deserves to learn from this project. Not only the minister, but the rest of us can learn that when we have this kind of business we cannot rely on the old gentlemanly way of shaking hands. We can shake the hand, but we have to have our people lined up as supervisors, scrutinisers, people who are going to see that everything is done and that we are not taken advantage of.

At the end of the day . . . look in the gallery, I don't see anyone from CHRM. The minister is lonely. They are conspicuous by their absence. They were even so contemptuous that they wouldn't even respond to some of the requests of the auditor general. There's only the minister. And the minister, even with his six-feet-plus, shouldn't have to take all this blame. I hope if he meets them, that he gives them a good tongue-lashing to say the least.

There is one thing that gives me some satisfaction. For all the investigation carried out by the Auditor General, for all of the scrutiny, no blame can be laid. No untoward aspersions or comments can be laid at any bureaucracy. Indeed, the only conclusion that can justifiably be made against the minister is that he was lax, that he allowed himself to be taken advantage of. So, as bad as the situation may be, at least the conduct of the ministry personnel and of the minister is clear of any accusation that would bring them any major embarrassment and cast any doubt on their integrity and their honesty. That is the one good thing that we can hold on to.

But, by the same token, we cannot say that the minister does not bear some responsibility. He should reflect on the fact that the situation could have been worse. He could have allowed his ministry personnel to be placed in an invidious position through his lack of supervision, his being so trusting allowing these principals the leeway that he allowed.

In commenting on the business of the loan from CDB, the Auditor General said on page 52, paragraph 3.23, “There have been a number of difficulties associated with obtaining reimbursement of project expenses from the CDB. Some claims were not fully reimbursed for a number of reasons including ineligible or inadequately supported expenditure, expenditure incurred prior to the approval of the loan and expenses relating to the QE II Botanic Park.”

That highlights a glaring weakness and inconsistency. Why were expenses incurred prior to the approval of the loan? That doesn't speak well for sound financial practice. And yet I have to come back to this point: I often hear the Minister of Tourism and the Minister of Education—the Leader of Government Business—saying that they are the most eminently qualified people to lead the country because they have the experience and the qualifications.

Is this the behaviour of someone eminently qualified? Should I incur expenses prior to the approval of a loan? No, a thousand times no. Who is going to be responsible? No budging until the loan is approved. If the loan is not approved no money can be spent on that project. Why did the Minister of Tourism allow himself to be placed in that position? Could these parties not wait? No!

Do you know what? They saw a situation and decided to take advantage of it. They knew that there were certain weaknesses. They knew there was an enthusiasm, a need to complete this project. They realised that this would have enhanced the political status of the minister. But they didn't care about the minister, as is obvious. They are gone from this jurisdiction. They had no other obligation than to do the work and collect the money, even if some of it was collected under the guise of shoddy invoicing. They're gone. And now the minister has to take the heat in an election year.

Some contracts were not tendered in accordance with the bank's published guidelines. The CDB does not reimburse contracts that have not been tendered. Why were they not tendered? The Auditor General doesn't say. But I would like to find out. Why were they not tendered? I hope these are the kinds of answers the minister will give when he gets up to defend himself. He must not sit down under the cloud; these must be crystal clear. It is incumbent upon the minister.

There was premature submission of certain invoices by CHRM and large timing differences between interim payments and completion of works. For example, an invoice of C$150,000 for fees and the purchase of electronic equipment for operating the multimedia show was submitted and paid in December 1995. Equipment bids were not actually received until 1998. Not even in the creation of crabs would that be accepted as a sound business practice. Pay for something in 1995, but not receive it until 1998? No contract? No Bids?

This whole construction project leaves a sour taste in the mouths of many people. It goes to show that on occasion the best laid plans of men can go awry if we are not careful. The lesson we should learn from this is that advantage can be taken of even the greatest and most experienced person. We cannot afford to let our position allow us to become so arrogant that we believe we don't have to give account at some time.

I stand by the position outlined in this motion. We were very meticulous in putting the motion together because, among other things, we told ourselves that we had to be responsible. We did not want to besmirch anyone's character while at the same time we had a responsibility to bring this pressing matter to Parliament. The fact that we had to wait so long, and that there seemed to have been some reason to evade and avoid this motion . . . because June will have been one year. At times we got the impression that there was a conspiracy to prevent this matter from being aired.

The mover and I had many discussions. As I recall, we drafted and we redrafted the motion, and we sought advice outside of ourselves and our circle because we wanted to be fair but stern. So, I stand by the position in the resolutions, and I believe that we should vote for a technical audit to see if this matter goes beyond what the Auditor General said.

Why was the Auditor General refused certain documentation? Certainly, that does not bespeak of transparency and a willingness to be accountable. I believe that the people should get a true and proper accounting of the money. The public deserves to know. I am admitting again that the finished product is one that we can be proud of. I have visited there on several occasions. I am proud of the project. I am proud that it is in my constituency.

What I am not proud of is the way the construction project was handled. I want the minister to understand that I am not casting any aspersion on his ability, generally speaking. But in this case, he is at a serious disadvantage. I am waiting to hear how is going to extricate himself from this embarrassment.

My position in regard to the querying of the construction of this project has nothing to do with the many of my constituents who find employment there. I am not advocating any closure. I am not advocating any laying off of staff. I support the ongoing operation. What I would like to understand as a representative is why the construction project wound up this way. Where did it go wrong? Why is the minister cast in this bad light? That's all the motion is asking.

In so outlining and advocating that position, I am confident that the call of the Leader of Government Business will not be heeded by the sensible people of Bodden Town. The sensible people of Bodden Town have come to me—many of them—and said that they would like to know why these things happened. They are asking me to try to find out, because it just doesn't make sense for this project to be administered in this way by a senior minister with a longstanding record in the civil service. That is the question that begs an answer.

Presentation of Papers and Reports. Cayman Airways Limited Financial Statements as of 31st December, 1998, to be laid on the Table by the Honourable Minister of Education, Aviation and Planning.

PRESENTATION OF PAPERS AND REPORTS

CAYMAN AIRWAYS LIMITED FINANCIAL STATEMENTS AS OF 31ST DECEMBER, 1998

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: I beg to lay on the Table of this honourable House the Financial Statements of Cayman Airways Limited as of 31st December, 1998.

The Deputy Speaker: So ordered.
Do you wish to speak to the report?

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: Yes, thank you.
This set of accounts shows several very important things in relation to Cayman Airways. These are audited accounts that show that the loss incurred in 1998 has reached a low of $972,791. I believe it is the first time, maybe only the second time in the past decade, that Cayman Airways loss has been reduced to such a low and tolerant figure. This is after the government subsidy of C1$4 million that is the same amount that has been paid for the past eight years. There has been no increase in that subsidy.

There has been the sum of C1$600,000 or C1$700,000 in two years that was put in in relation to the advertising for the airline. Other than that, we have been able to hold the annual subsidy to what it was eight years ago. Since that time, the amount of revenue has increased tremendously. It is in the area of C1$300 million now. Therefore, this amount (which is probably C1$700,000) is really a small amount. And even the $4,700,000 is a very small amount when compared to the overall budget, and small when you look at the subsidies that go out in so many other areas. I can't remember exactly the total, but it is somewhere in the area of $50 million or $60 million in total for all subsidies and free services.

Cayman Airways has actually shown improvements. These have come about at a time when Cayman Airways is paying for its jets. We would have had payments on the two jets, and this went to the government's subsidiary companies. So this could have been increased if the jets had been owned by Cayman Airways by some $2 million that went out in leases to the companies owned by government less the cost of those jets for maintenance and other reserves.

This is in sharp contrast to the accounts of 30th June 1991 when the net loss for the year was $14,310,056. Its contingent liabilities at that stage were in the range of US$107 million. That contingent liability has been drastically reduced, as well as the court judgments that were against the company at that time abroad, such as in the United Kingdom and the United States. They were not small judgments.

In 1991, we changed from the 727-200s, which were then relatively new jets. The government that made the stupid decision to sell the jets got $12.4 million and it was spent by Cayman Airways by the end of 1991. So all the equity built in those two jets was spent in less than a year. They plunged to $14.3 million in losses.

So, while things are not all well with Cayman Airways (and indeed I would have liked to move into a profit), every small island country subsidises its airline, whether it's Air Jamaica or one of the eastern Caribbean companies, or in instances such as St. Kitts and Turks and Caicos a direct subsidy in the millions has been paid to American Airlines which, in the event of the strike about a year ago, would have left both of those countries without any airline to the outside world—a position that could totally cripple the country. In fact, we would still have had our jets running during that strike as they would during a hurricane, any other natural disaster, or any other time the Cayman Islands or its people needed it.

In fact, when we were called by one of those countries in trouble, we said if at all possible we would keep a link between Turks and Caicos and the United States, rather than see another Overseas Territory go down, which we could have done with the flights and chartering we were doing during that American Airlines threat of strike that was averted at the end. But the Caribbean flights were withdrawn because American Airlines had a duty to the United States of America—not to the Cayman Islands. The duty of Cayman Airways is to the Cayman Islands.

The accounts in 1998 show an improvement of $1,178,595 over the audited results for 1997. There is nearly a $2 million improvement. There have been problems in recent times with the scheduled checks on the aeroplanes, which we all know. But, thank God, two of the jets are now back and operational. We hope to have the third jet transferred from the US registry to the Cayman registry this week, and also the remaining maintenance that remains on that jet dealt with in the very near future at which time we will have a jet which is additional while running a two jet route. That will enable us to give extremely good backup and Cayman Airways will then be able to go fully back on schedule. If maintenance has to be done on a jet, we have a third jet that can be put in place.

That position will remain over the next few months until we are sure that we can give the public what the public wants, and that is leaving on time from Cayman and the US and Jamaican points that we now travel to.

The public has been very faithful and very tolerant. I am sorry for the delays that occurred during this period. A lot was beyond the control of Cayman Airways. Boeing (which builds the jets) went on strike and was unable to sign certain documents needed for the jets to fly. We were also hurt in relation to getting seats and galleys and the changes we may have been able to make we were not able to because of the truckers' strike in the southern Florida area.

Well, Boeing is back and I believe the truckers are also off strike. We are in a position again to put the time schedules in place. Within the next couple of weeks, I am certain that we will have the third jet in place and there will be considerable improvements in freight and some improvements in the short term in relation to hours of flights and in the long term, considerable improvements.

On the two jets we have removed seats and put a much better pitch. This is something the public was unhappy with. I feel sure that Caymanians and other flying on Cayman Airways will enjoy the extra legroom, which is now equivalent to, or exceeds, other airlines on short haul routes.

Perhaps something not too well appreciated is that the decision to buy the jets rather than leasing them has resulted in a considerable improvement of Cayman Airways' assets. We have paid off considerable loans on the first jet we purchased, over $5 million. We have been able to repay the bank, and all that is owed on the purchase of that jet is US$602,714.50. The jet registered as CAL is nearly bought. That is quite an achievement, one that should not be taken lightly. If we owned the 727s that were sold in 1991, Cayman Airways would have been in a profit at this stage. I have no doubt in my mind. As you know, we opposed that sale very vigorously, but the government of the day did it.

That jet was valued by a US valuation company at the end of 1998 at $7,943,000. So, when this loan is repaid and we have just done upgrades to engines, we hushkitted it to comply with the US, then we will have a jet valued at nearly US$8 million and less than C$5 million is still owed. I believe that will probably be just about totally repaid this year.

Along with that, we purchased the second jet, and, at present, the loan on that is US$5,078,634.10. At the end of December 1998, it had a value of $8,805,000. We have also upgraded the engines of that jet which was a further $1.2 million extra. So, we have $7.5 million equity in the first plane, and at present we have $4.8 million equity in the second plane which is about where we were—and this is ironic—with the equity in the two 727-200s in 1991 when they were sold. I hope that history never repeats itself in that respect. Anyone in his right mind who has purchased, should never go back to the disastrous days of leasing and the high cost involved with what was the fancy of the day—new jets that were worth probably $30 million flying here, there and everywhere. The public paid very dearly for jets they would never own. We were able to lease three 737-200s for the cost of one 737-400.

That is one good note, and if this government leaves Cayman Airways with nothing else, we have definitely put them on the right path there. But a lot needs to be done in Cayman Airways. There still has to be an understanding among the staff that it has to be profit-driven. The airline business is a fickle business. Unless substantial reserves have been built up, in a bad year Cayman Airways can lose millions and millions of dollars—as it did in 1991, $14 million. That is something that could totally destroy the company financially.

I thank the Chairman of the Board and the staff for their dedication. We have good staff there. But, the move has to continue to be toward driving the revenue up and retaining and reducing the cost of running the airline. It's the only way we can survive in the airline business.

For the first time in many, many years, we have reached a stage where the difference between assets and liabilities shows only a deficiency of US$5,750,000. In other words, on the balance sheet of 1998, if assets were sold and liabilities repaid, the deficiency stands at only US$5.7 million. Back in the 1990s we were looking in the area of $19 million or $20 million that government would have to pay out.

I think also important is that with the payments of some $50,000 per month, and I know that members of this House laughed at paying $50,000 on an overdraft that was originally $10,143,264, and some of it was put on loan, and we have reduced that loan, and paid all the interest on it. This is past debt I am talking about, debt we inherited. At that time, and I think we were paying the loan down at $50,000 per month, at the end of 1998 the overdraft stood at $243,222. The loan would have been paid down considerably. At the end of 1998, the residue of that loan together with the payments on the hushkits was $3.4 million. So, the debt has come down considerably.

But I want to stress that Cayman Airways has to continue to move towards achieving a profit, at least to reduce losses. This year is going to be difficult because of the high cost of hiring in during the time the two jets were out waiting on Boeing and others to certify them so they could fly.

In conclusion, I think that while the airline business will always be a struggle, we are getting much closer to seeing some financial stability within the airline. I would like to stress the one thing that is never compromised, that both the board, our acting managing director, our general manager, the team and I have always stressed is safety. That is of first importance and Cayman Airways has an impeccable record in regard to the safety of its aircraft. That is why we leased, to ensure that the very heavy and long checks necessary on these three aircraft were carried out and we took all the time necessary to ensure that these regular maintenance checks were carried out.

I would like to end by asking the public to please continue to support Cayman Airways. It is our airline. I have only flown Cayman Airways, and I can make that statement without fear of any challenge, on the routes it flies. Both the government and members of the backbench have full support of Cayman Airways. I believe, along with the staff doing its bit assisting the airline to move forward, that Cayman Airways will continue as a very important and vital business to this country.

The Deputy Speaker: We move now to Other Business, Private Members' Motions. I would entertain a motion for the suspension of Standing Order 14(2) to enable this House to debate Private Members' Motions on a day other than Thursday.

The Honourable Minister for Tourism, Commerce, Transport and Works.

AGREED: STANDING ORDER 14(2) SUSPENDED.

The Second Elected Member for the district of Bodden Town.

OTHER BUSINESS

PRIVATE MEMBERS' MOTIONS

PRIVATE MEMBER'S MOTION NO. 6/00 AS AMENDED

INVESTIGATION INTO THE PEDRO ST. JAMES CONSTRUCTION PROJECT ACCOUNT

Miss Heather D Bodden: Thank you Madam Speaker.

I rise to offer a short contribution to Private member's Motion No. 6/00 as amended, Investigation into the Pedro St. James Construction Project Account, brought by the First Elected Member for George Town and seconded by the Third Elected Member for Bodden Town.

Allow me, Madam Speaker, to begin by saying this is one project I fully support in several ways. First it happens to be in my district and I also have very close family connections to Pedro St. James. You see, Madam Speaker, Pedro Castle was owned by my grandfather the late Tom Jackson back in the 1950s and he was the gentleman that sold it to the late Tom Hubbell for a mere £100 or in those days US$280. So, I trust that everyone will understand and appreciate just how much significant value this place holds for me therefore my contribution will come directly from the heart.

When I was elected back in 1995, this was the project I became actively involved in. Realising what this would mean for the district and for my people, I longed for the day when it would finally be completed and jobs made available to my people close to home. To have something of this magnitude in one's community truly makes one feel proud that we finally have a tourism attraction in Bodden Town. But, this is so much more. This project embodies our history and our heritage. Knowing this project would be promoted as the birthplace of democracy and that there is so much history within the walls and the immediate surroundings of this Castle, I know everyone appreciates the Minister for his efforts in preserving this landmark and for turning it into a tourist attraction.

I clearly recall as a young child waking up one morning to hear that Pedro Castle had been burnt down during the night. I clearly remember everyone in that community feeling sad that such a horrible thing had happened. For many years it stood in shambles and looked very run down and decrepit. Today this landmark has been restored and transformed into a very beautiful, historical and educational site not just for the people of Bodden Town but for the entire Cayman Islands to be proud of.

I recall last year's week long Commonwealth Parliamentary Association (CPA) Conference held here in the Cayman Islands where members of the CPA took an island-wide tour, including a visit to Pedro St. James Castle. As they left the bus they were so taken back by the beauty and landscaping that at times these people stood in awe. I remember them looking out over the wide-open sea of Pedro Bluff and saying what a magnificent view. Madam Speaker, a visit to the Multi-Media Theatre leaves one spellbound. Hearing the thunder, seeing the lightening flash across the room and hearing the rainwater run down the old guttering makes one feel they have indeed taken a step back in time. It is so magical and captivating that one almost feels as if one were at Disney World.

Madam Speaker, just last month when HRH The Duke of York, Prince Andrew, paid a visit to the Cayman Islands, it was on the great lawn of Pedro St. James he met and greeted every Member of this honourable House, although each and everyone of us will recall it was a bit warm that afternoon, it looked as if someone had picked the Pedro St. James Castle's lawn out of a magazine. The Prince toured the Castle and was very impressed with what he saw and remarked that indeed that was money well spent.

Madam Speaker, like everyone else, I clearly understand the intention of this Motion. But, one must realise that although some things happened that should not have happened, there is no reason to doubt or question the integrity of the Honourable Minister of Tourism—who is very capable and professional, and who has given thirty unblemished years to the people of these Islands. He and his staff have worked long arduous hours to ensure that this project was completed and opened on time. I believe it is a matter of national pride to have an outstanding historical attraction of this calibre in the Cayman Islands. There is nothing else like it here.

I attended a meeting that took place with the technical team from the Caribbean Development Bank and I can attest to their enthusiasm and support for this project. They were willing to hold on to the end as they felt that they had indeed uncovered a significant piece of history. I would encourage other Member of this House to take a similar view in reviewing this project.

In closing Madam Speaker, although this motion is to place doubts in the minds of the people of possible mismanagement by the Honourable Minister of Tourism of the Pedro Project, is totally unfounded and unfair. What I think should be taken into consideration by each and everyone in this honourable House and the listening public, is that Pedro Castle came in under the cost by Caribbean Development Bank which must be one of the few projects in Government ever to come in under cost.

With that Madam Speaker, I thank you very much.

The Deputy Speaker: Does any other member wish to speak? The Third Elected Member for West Bay.

Mr. John D. Jefferson, Jr.: I rise to offer my contribution to Private Member's Motion No. 6/00 dealing with the Pedro St. James Project.

Let me start by quoting some excerpts of the [unedited] Hansard of 10 April 2000, and the remarks made by the Honourable Minister responsible for Education, Aviation, and Planning in respect to the Honourable Minister for Tourism, Commerce, Transport and Works, and it says, with your permission—

The Deputy Speaker: Honourable Member, may I have a copy of that Hansard please?

Mr. John D. Jefferson, Jr.: I will be happy to give you a copy, Madam Speaker. Do you want it now?

The Deputy Speaker: I would prefer to have it before me if you are quoting from it.

Mr. John D. Jefferson, Jr.: Well, if you will give me a minute, I can get it photocopied.

(Pause)

The Deputy Speaker: Honourable Member, you may continue.

Mr. John D. Jefferson, Jr.: Thank you.

The portion that I would like to quote is as follows: “The Minister of Tourism has given his life to this country. He has worked in government endlessly and tirelessly. And, most important, he has had the finances of this country throughout the important time when it was so crucial to have a Financial Secretary of his calibre managing this country's finances. He was succeeded by another very good Financial Secretary and we have to be thankful to these two men for keeping this country stable and properly managing it.

“It is unthinkable to believe a man with three decades of properly managing and bringing this country to where it is now has to face at this late stage allegations of mismanagement which are totally unfounded.”

That is why I personally am so disturbed in regard to this issue that we have been debating for the past three days. If this incident had been highlighted in the Ministry of Community Development, or the Ministry of Agriculture, or even the Ministry of Health, I could have said they really didn't know any better; but the Minister of Tourism (who happens to also be my uncle) . . . so it is very difficult for me to stand here and raise doubts or concern that may be connected to one of my family members.

Just to expand on what the Minister of Education had to say about the qualifications of the Minister of Tourism, my information is that when the Minister of Tourism was a civil servant, he served as Financial Secretary for 12 years. I think I am correct in that. It is also my understanding that the Minister of Tourism—the former Financial Secretary—was also the architect of the Financial and Stores Regulations calling for all contracts in excess of $100,000 to be secured by the Central Tenders Committee. In other words, through competitive bids. I agree 100% with these regulations. It allows government to determine value for money.

Like I said before, the Minister of Tourism knew the rules. So in my mind, there is no excuse for what we are dealing with today in regard to the Pedro St. James project that falls under the Minister of Tourism. He knew the rules. He knew how important it was to ensure that government got value for funds spent. I can't understand why he would be the architect of the rules, but feel that his ministry was not subject to those rules.

When I look at the information highlighted in the Auditor General's Report on Pedro St. James (and I can't even recall what Mr. John Stewart looks like, the owner of CHRM who was employed by government to carry out the work at Pedro St. James), I read there was not one contract associated with this particular project that was subject to the tendering process, including the contract appointing CHRM as consultant of the project. As I understand it, the Historic Sites Committee through its own inquiries came across this particular firm, that came highly recommended in the area we needed this speciality in. The Ministry of Tourism took a paper to Executive Council appointing the consultant.

That would have been bad enough, because it probably could have been justified because the firm was expert in that area. They could have gone through the tendering process. But at the end of the day, they would have come back to that firm because according to their information that was the firm they needed for this project.

But as we read, after that it was all basically down hill. If I had a consultant who was there to advise me on the difficult aspects of a project of this nature, for example the multimedia section of the project, I would have gotten him to go out and identify a number of firms in a position to offer this specialised service. I would have gotten the curriculum vitae on those companies and based on that information had the Minister of Tourism make the selection as to who got the multimedia contract.

There's no evidence that was the procedure taken. As I read it, what happened was that CHRM came back to the ministry and said, 'We have identified two firms: Steve Shaw Production, and another. Based on what we have researched about these firms, we recommend that Steve Shaw be recommended this contract.' Based on that information, a paper was taken by the ministry to Executive Council with a recommendation of CHRM for the appointment of Steve Shaw Production to handle this particular contract.

When the Auditor General went in to do his audit of the project, there was only evidence of one firm. That firm was Steve Shaw Productions. If you are recommending two or three firms, you must have basic information made available to the ministry on the firms that you are recommending. But they could only find information on one firm—Steve Shaw Productions.

That begs the question why. Why was CHRM recommending Steve Shaw Productions for this specific contract? What is the connection between Steve Shaw Productions and CHRM? Were they buddies? Were the principals of CHRM also principals of Steve Shaw Productions? Those questions beg to be asked because of the lack of evidence to the contrary.

The Deputy Speaker: Would this be a convenient time for the morning break?

Mr. John D. Jefferson, Jr.: Yes, Madam Speaker.

The Deputy Speaker: Proceedings will be suspended for 15 minutes.

PROCEEDINGS SUSPENDED AT 11.30 AM

PROCEEDINGS RESUMED AT 11.52 AM

The Deputy Speaker: Please be seated. Debate continues on Private Member's Motion 6/00 as amended. The Third Elected Member for West Bay, continuing.

Mr. John D. Jefferson, Jr.: When we took the suspension, I was dealing with the subcontract for Steve Shaw Productions (SSP). It is very confusing information concerning this particular contract. Let me just point out a few difficulties. The contract for SSP was for $611,800. When this was being discussed between CHRM, I guess, and the Ministry . . . and taking into consideration that CHRM and SSP are both Canadian companies, no one according to my information had the smarts to even question the currency of the contract. That's significant because if it's $611,800 Canadian dollars compared to Cayman Islands dollars is significant. If it's US dollars compared to CI dollars, it's significant.

Just yesterday I did a quick calculation. The Canadian dollar to the CI dollar was .53. If you apply $611,800 Canadian, and convert that to CI Dollars at the rate of .53, the difference between assuming the amount is in CI dollars, compared to Canadian dollars is approximately $257,000 CI. The ministry didn't question it; CHRM didn't volunteer what it was, even the paper that went to Executive Council did not name the currency. It was assumed that the contract amount quoted was in CI dollars.

This error was subsequently confirmed—not an error, Madam Speaker, an intentional attempt to deceive was later confirmed by Mr. John Stewart of CHRM that the Steve Shaw Production contract for $611,800 was actually Canadian dollars. But government paid CHRM for this particular contract 611,800 Cayman Islands dollars. That is a difference of CI$257,000 as overpayment.

It gets a little confusing at this stage because in the Auditor General's Report of 1998 on page 42 says, "A contract was subsequently entered into between CHRM and the sub-contractor in October 1995 for CI$430,800, including $49,000 for expenses." I assume this reference is in regard to the contract between CHRM and SSP. In that $611,000 was a budgeted equipment element of $190,000.

One of two things happened: Government paid CHRM CI$611,800. In addition to that, the consultant fees to CHRM amounted to $183,750. But the $190,000 element of the contract was not actually done by SSP. That element was further awarded—not tendered—to another company to complete by CHRM. So any way you cut it, CHRM received from government in excess of what they should have on this particular project.

When, in a subsequent meeting, this question was raised in regard to the currency, Mr. John Stewart said “Oh yeah, it was Canadian dollars. The contract sum of $611,800 was Canadian dollars. The reason I charged government CI$611,800 was because in order to give me sufficient money on exchange to cover the consultancy part of my contract.” Even if that was the case, he was still overpaid by CI$73,250.

Personally speaking, I don't think that's the way it went. I personally think that he received CI$611,800 and paid SSP the $611,800 Canadian, and the question is what happened to the difference of CI$257,000? Maybe the minister can explain, but I have a difficult time reconciling that difference.

Just so no one will draw the conclusion that I made that particular point up, that is CHRM's confirmation of the funds being in Canadian dollars, with your permission . . . I don't know if you want me to maybe give you a copy of this as part of our brief on Pedro St. James. We were given copies of supporting documentation or correspondence between the parties involved. This particular document I would request permission to quote from is a memorandum between the Principal Secretary of Tourism from the Chief Engineer.

The Deputy Speaker: Honourable Member, if I may. I have difficulty accepting that paper until the PAC Report is made and it's attached to it. Right now the only thing that's been made public is the Auditor General's Report.

Mr. John D. Jefferson, Jr.: I really don't have a difficulty with that. I don't have to read it. But that document confirms exactly what I have said.

I heard one member on national television say that there was some concern over weaknesses highlighted, but there was no evidence of fraud. That was the gist of the quote. In just this one contract I highlighted, there is a questionable difference of CI$257,000. You can assign whatever definition you want to that. To me it is evidence of wrongdoing, not necessarily by the ministry, but by the consultant, CHRM.

Where the minister went wrong was . . . and like I say, I can't even remember what the man looks like. I think he came here early in our 1992-1996 term and gave us a presentation on the project. But it is evident from what has been highlighted that the man is a charmer. Basically, the evidence shows that he took advantage of the Ministry of Tourism on this project to the extent that he starts out as consultant (and that is the role he should have maintained), in a position to offer his expertise in regard to the historic development of the project, and maybe even the technical side of it, but from the standpoint of an advisor.

And the excuse was given that PWD didn't have the expertise to serve as project manager in this particular project, even though later on when things broke down PWD was brought in to finish it because of the mess and delays. What happened subsequently was that CHRM, in the man of John Stewart, convinced the ministry to appoint him not only as consultant but as contractor and he assumed the role of project manager. What that did was eliminate whatever checks and balances were in the system.

That gentleman got the contracts, the landscaping contract for example, and this is where I have a problem. There is no evidence if in the initial stages the ministry sat down with CHRM and said, 'Okay, we are going to award you the overall contract. Caribbean Development Bank is saying that it's $9 million, or $8.5 million or whatever, we are going to award you the contract and you are then solely responsible to see that the work is done.' Then up front government would know what its commitment is. But that's not the way this project evolved. Costs were incurred as they went along.

All CHRM did as contractor . . . the difficulty also is that here you have in the main contract with CHRM the requirement that CHRM also do the accounting for the project. In other words, payments made and that type of thing, to whom and for what. So the ministry not only appointed him as contractor and project manager and in some cases subcontractor, but they also relied on him to do the accounting for what was spent. It totally eliminated all checks and balances in the system.

As a result, what CHRM did on these particular contracts was go out to whoever it was and say 'I got a contract for ya. I'll pay you $60 per day for this portion of it to provide the labour.' He then added something like $30 on top of that, and submitted it to the ministry for payment. They didn't even check it. They had a stamp. They stamped it and sent it out to Treasury saying, 'You take care of it. You account for it. If he submitted it it must be true.'

On the landscaping contract, the amount agreed on was CI$357,000. I have a problem with that. Do we need to bring in an expert from Canada to supervise a landscaping contract with all of the local firms we have here with expertise in this particular area? That's where the ministry went wrong.

That particular contract ended up costing government over CI$600,000. It was for $357,000 and ended up costing over $600,000. That would be bad enough, but Mr. Stewart had provided government with plans for landscaping, what it would consist of—a whole presentation. After he got the contract he did less, first of all, than he said he was going to do. And he also changed what became a part of the landscaping.

For example, in one particular area there were a number of proposed plants. He totally omitted the plants and put grass, or some other thing. But he was still paid according to the contract. So he did less, and government ended up paying him over $600,000 for a $357,000 contract.

The weakness in the system is that whenever there is a contract . . . and we know how it works. If we arrive at a figure, a contract price for whatever the task may be, if after the contract is signed we decide that we want to add something to the contract, that calls for the contract to be adjusted by the amount the additional work will cost. I request it, the contractor and I get together and arrive at the additional cost, and we go on. But there's no evidence that this took place in regard to this particular contract with CHRM.

I believe that the reason government ended up spending $600,000 dollars on a $357,000 contract was because the Ministry didn't do any accounting, Treasury was not responsible for any accounting, and the Ministry totally relied on the integrity of Mr. John Stewart of CHRM to only present invoices that were justified.

I am not an accountant. But if I were responsible even I would have enough common sense to say let's set up a rough accounting for this particular project in my ministry. At the top I would put $357,000 for landscaping, and as these invoices were presented for payment, I would deduct those payments from the original amount. So at some point when Mr. John Stewart comes with an invoice, I could say, 'Wait a minute. According to my records we already paid you $357,000 according to my records what are the extra invoices for?' The ministry did not have that ability. Not good at all, Madam Speaker.

The direct labour agreement, again $318,000. Not tendered. And CHRM is assigned the privilege of supervising that particular aspect of the project. Once again, arrive at a figure, submit invoices and get paid in excess of what was agreed upon.

Let me just read from page 43 of the Auditor General's Report. In regard to the direct labour agreement he says, "The Audit Office is fully satisfied that gardeners were paid at the rates specified and we are satisfied that the work paid for was actually performed. However a number of invoices examined do not appear to comply with the cost uplift of $30 per day [that's what was added on as a management fee by CHRM] and it is estimated that an additional $30,605 has been paid to the contractor/consultant."

Once again, all they did was contract a couple of common labourers to do the work pay them $60 per day and add another $30 on top. That's what they agreed on, but here the Auditor General is saying there is $30,000 unjustified. Not good, Madam Speaker.

I can't recall ever meeting John Stewart, but in my opinion, he was not a man of integrity. He was a con-artist. I recall reading in one of the contracts that CHRM was responsible for doing the auctioning for these projects. In the Auditor General's Report on page 46, paragraph 3.14 it says, "The Consultant told the Audit Office that the Ministry of Tourism was responsible for maintaining project records. The Consultant stated that the Ministry decided to remove bookkeeping services from the Consultant's contract and as- sumed it in-house." Now, he got paid for doing the accounting, but he didn't do it.

It says, "The consultant was contracted and fully compensated to provide the various services of project management." Including the accounting for the projects.

Let me just highlight a few of the differences that took place on these particular contracts. On page 47, under figure 3.2 Pedro St. James Landscaping Contracts/subcontracts. It says here:

|---------------------------------|------------------------------------------------------|--------------------------|--------------------------|
| Hard landscape, trees, planting | CHRM as agents for the Government and sub-contractor | 90,000                   | 150,965                  |
| Stone Walls                     | CHRM as agents for the Government and sub-contractor | 50,000                   | 61,829                   |
| Plant Material                  | CHRM & sub-contractor                                | 149,152                  | 194,974                  |
| Labour                          | CHRM and Government                                  | 50,400                   | 51,517                   |
| Material and rentals            | Various local suppliers                              | 18,150                   | 18,150                   |

Of all of those different elements of that landscaping contract the only one that was invoiced for what was agreed upon was the $18,150 for materials and rentals locally. That is just an example of what went on between CHRM as contractor and the Ministry of Tourism.

Madam Speaker, one of the other sub-contracts that was awarded to CHRM was the irrigation system at Pedro St. James. This particular service amounted to CI$35,610 excluding in-house labour cost. He charged $35,000 excluding the labour to install it and, at the present time, the irrigation system at Pedro St. James is totally non-functional. I understand what they are doing now is that they are using a hose to water the landscaping.

So, a lot went wrong with regard to the handling of this particular project. Now, Madam Speaker, I was trying to think of another major government contract that was performed during my tenure here in the Legislative Assembly, which is now at the end of 12 years. The one contract that came to mind . . . and we have to keep in mind that this particular contract for this project amounted to a total of Cayman Islands eight point something million according to the ministry. Madam Speaker, the contract that I thought of was the contract that was handled by the Minister of Health for our new health service facility, that is, the new hospital.

That particular contract was in the region of, I think CI$30 million. I think it is probably about two to three years since we have finished that particular project but do you know what happened? The Minister of Health does not have the (should I say?) financial and accounting background of the Minister of Tourism. Neither the Auditor General or any other soul has raised one irregularity with regard to that contract. Do you know what? It was done according to the rules. It went through the tendering process. It was awarded to one of the major contractors locally so government knew going in what was involved by way of a commitment with that particular contractor.

The contractor then did exactly what I was saying—went out and sub-contracted a lot of the services that were associated with this particular project. But Government knew up front what those costs were. The project went through the proper tendering process and as a result . . . I mean some people raised the issue that it was a lot of money. But we knew up front what it was going to cost. The Minister was very honest, he said, “He is what the projects are and if you are prepared to support it then fine” and we made a decision that we would, Madam Speaker. It went to tender and the project was completed and we now have a facility that we are proud of. But more than that, it was handled in the proper manner in regard to the tendering process.

Like I said, Madam Speaker, I have not heard one question raised with regard to the way that particular project was handed.

Let me get off the contracting side of Pedro St. James and let me deal with another concern I have, and that is the future financial viability of that project. Madam Speaker, things went wrong in the past. Hopefully, we can get beyond that. But the concern I have is the financial viability of that project.

Madam Speaker, as you are aware, we had a PAC meeting the other day on this particular issue. One of the questions asked was: What are you doing with regard to ensuring that the project is in a financial position to carry itself in the future? I remember as Chairman mentioning certain things that I thought should be done. The response was, “Well, you know, we are watching cost.” Watching cost at this stage with the abuse that took place during the contracting side of it?

You know, we get what we pay for. Because I am fair, I must say that I have been to Pedro St. James on two or three different occasions. It is a first class project and no one is disputing that. That is not the issue or concern. It is a first class project that I think the people of the Cayman Islands can rightly and justly be proud of. But that is not the issue. The issue is this: That project must be put in the position where it can carry itself financially. You and I know what I am talking about.

The forecasts by the CDB on this particular project . . . I think basically what they did, according to my information, they kind of took a look at the Turtle Farm and said, ‘If the Turtle Farm can do it by way of visitors, Pedro St. James can do the same. So let’s take a percentage of the traffic at the Turtle Farm and apply it to Pedro St. James and here is what it should look like.’ According to CDB’s projections (on page 53 of the Auditor General’s Report of 1998) from year one the project was forecasted to make a profit of $310,000. Madam Speaker, to me if in year one they even just covered costs I would have been satisfied, much less a profit.

In year two, $566,000; year three, $743,000; year four, $862,000 and year five, a forecasted loss of $620,000. I think it is at that stage when the Tourism Attraction Board assumed the liability for the repayment of the loan from CDB. Madam Speaker, if that had been realised with regard to this project I would be happy.

The former General Manager of Pedro St. James has been gone now, I think close to a year. No decision has been made to date that I am aware of to replace him. They just recently employed a Financial Controller, and I think that was after the PAC highlighted this particular need. With regard to a Managing/Marketing Manager, I think I read where the Tourism Attraction Board was saying it was being looked at. I believe if I am not mistaken that comment was made in 1997 or 1998, we are in the year 2000, and a proper marketing manager has still not been appointed.

Madam Speaker, what is also disappointing is that despite the projections by CDB with regard to the viability of this project, the operating loss for the financial year that accounts were done, I think was in the region of $657,000. In other words, the project at the present time is nowhere near even covering its recurrent expenditure. Like I said, the attitude of the permanent secretary of tourism was ‘We are watching expenses’. Like I said, you normally get what you pay for. If the Pedro St. James project takes a decision or the Tourism Attraction Board takes a decision to appoint a properly qualified marketing manager that would more than pay for itself.

The concern I have is that for many years in the future, if we are not careful, the Minister of Tourism regardless of who that person may be will have to come to this Legislative Assembly for a subsidy for Pedro St. James, which is a project that was forecasted to carry itself financially.

What was disappointing as well was that the comment was not only made with regard to the lack of proper financial controls or accounting but that same weakness has been highlighted by the Auditor General with regard to the operation within Pedro St. James. It says here, “The entity did not maintain proper accounting records and internal control systems.”

I recall, when I was in the civil service some years ago, having a discussion with the former Financial Secretary (neither of the two gentlemen who have previously occupied that position) . . . the point I am trying to make is this: In this day and age you do not rely on the integrity of any individual. You have to be in a position where you put in place checks and balances to discourage anyone from doing something wrong. If these are not put in place, those internal controls and checks and balances in the system; if you are taking advantage of it then you deserve it.

The Deputy Speaker: Honourable Member, if you are moving on to another subject would this be convenient point to take the luncheon break?

Mr. John D. Jefferson, Jr.: Madam Speaker, I have about five more minutes to wind up my debate.

The Deputy Speaker: Okay, continue.

Mr. John D. Jefferson, Jr.: Let me now try to summarise what I have tried to say for the last forty-five minutes. Personally, I am very disappointed. Let me put it this way . . . and I don't know if I will ever have the opportunity to become a minister on Executive Council but under my watch this could never happen.

You know, Madam Speaker, we have a very strange philosophy in government, that is, the elected ministers. We have a system that basically says, 'you are the minister and with regard to the day-to-day operation you should not get involved.' Do you know what happens with that philosophy? If something goes wrong under your watch, even though you are not responsible for the day-to-day supervision or the monitoring of those activities, at the end of the day, as minister you are going to be blamed in your ministry for whatever it is.

Do I personally believe that the Minister of Tourism intentionally did anything wrong? No, I cannot come to that conclusion. But it was under his watch that this type of activity was carried on. I don't know how much he was involved. I don't know how much he was informed. But on a project like this, knowing the political fallout if something goes wrong—and I am quite sure he probably did. I don't know . . . every once in a while I would call in my permanent secretary and say 'brief me as to where we are at.' I'd get a briefing and any questions I had hopefully he or she could answer them and that would be the way I would be kept informed as to what's going on in my ministry.

Madam Speaker, it is also very important for that particular reason that when you become a minister of Executive Council that you ensure because you have the responsibility for making sure things are done that the Governor provides you with the personnel necessary to get the job done. Madam Speaker, you and I kind of think alike. As a minister, if I walked into a particular ministry and I didn't see the support personnel that I though necessary for me to be in a position to carry out what I am responsible for then I have an obligation.

Do you know where we went wrong? I think it was in 1992 after the election when we were talking about the change in the Constitution and that type of thing. There was some little article in the paper saying because the ministers were assuming administrative responsibility for members of staff that was a move in the direction of independence. What a joke! We were silly enough or unwise enough to agree to that being removed from our Constitution.

If a member of staff steps out of line under my ministry, as the minister I have the right then to go and say, 'move him or her because he or she cannot operate under my ministry. He or she is not capable of taking care of the responsibilities.' A serious charge. A serious responsibility. But you know, like I said, I have never had the opportunity of being a minister. But it appears that something happens to us as elected representatives when we go on that fourth floor. I don't know what it is. I honestly don't understand what it is. But something happens.

If this is going to happen to me I prefer not to have an opportunity to serve as a minister—serious charges, a serious situation. You know, like I said before, I am personally disappointed that this could happen under the watch of the Minister of Tourism—a serious disappointment. The gentleman is qualified. He was responsible, as I understand, for putting in place rules and regulations. So there is no excuse.

There is a little saying: ignorance of the law is no excuse. There is no excuse, he knew better.

Now, Madam Speaker, I trust that the Minister of Tourism can explain all of these weaknesses that I have highlighted. I am a very humble person. I am not one of those individuals who claim not to make mistakes. I have made many of them. But I am gentleman enough to say, I made a mistake; I am sorry this happened under my watch, but I made an honest mistake. Now, most people if you take that approach will say 'well boy, you know, we are all human so we all make mistakes so carry on.'

I am waiting to hear what the minister has to say with regard to this project. Madam Speaker, the whole country is concerned.

I was toying with the idea of whether or not I should speak on this issue because of the relationship between myself and the Minister of Tourism. But I reminded myself of one thing: I recall in a different situation where we were dealing with the prison riot and I came down hard on the Chief Secretary because that was allowed to happen under his watch. As a matter of fact, I went to the extent where I asked for the resignation—

The Deputy Speaker: Honourable Member, lets not get into a debate on the prison.

Mr. John D. Jefferson, Jr.: No, I am just giving you an example, Madam Speaker.

I have always said that I am here to protect the interest of the people. It doesn't matter if it is the Chief Secretary, the Minister of Tourism, or anyone else that needs to be brought up. I won't say chastise, that is a little harsh. But, hopefully, by highlighting these weaknesses we will avoid seeing a repeat of this type of irregularity with regard to government contracts.

I came to the conclusion that I cannot recall any government contract in my 12 years here that was so poorly handled by a ministry. I cannot. That's what disappoints me. Thank you, Madam Speaker.

The Deputy Speaker: Proceedings will be suspended until 2.15 p.m.

PROCEEDINGS RESUMED AT 2.28 PM

The Deputy Speaker: Please be seated. Proceedings are resumed. Debate continues on Private Member's Motion No. 6/2000 as amended. Does any other Member wish to speak? The Honourable Minister responsible for Tourism.

Hon. Thomas C. Jefferson: Thank you, Madam Speaker.

I am going to begin by asking for your indulgence because I believe it is necessary to set the stage before we get into the details. I believe that the Pedro St. James project was a unique one requiring a variety of specialisation in order to ensure that the historical nature and otherwise in the restoration was accurate to the letter of the law. Having done some research, I want to try to set the stage for this whole matter.

In reviewing some information, I found some data that was done by the Historic Sites Committee. I will go on to explain who they are in a little while, but they did some work . . . and what I am reading from is dated 25th September 1990, many months before we even bought the piece of property. It is entitled, Pedro St. James Castle, and under the subject of "Cultural Tourism" they made these comments: "As tourism in the Caribbean becomes more competitive and sophisticated, increasing emphasis is placed on cultural tourism, the development of historic and cultural sites, buildings, and artefacts, as tourism resources. Because the Cayman Islands were not rich, we have very few important structures compared to our neighbours, who have plantation houses, forts and other grand buildings. St. James Castle in Pedro is one of Cayman's very few significant historic structures."

And we come on to the historic significance of that building and they go on to say, "Built in 1780 by William Eden, Pedro St. James is the oldest standing structure in the Cayman Islands; a building of incomparable historic value. It was built by slave labour with very thick coral stone walls suggesting that it may have been fortified. Hirst notes that from its exposed position it looks as if such a precaution was very necessary."

"When William Eden came to the Cayman Islands in 1765 and Eden Estates, as shown on the 1773 map of Cayman . . . William Eden was a magistrate as early as 1820 and was Custos of the records. As an early public recorder, he will have used this building as the Registry. The building was also used in the early 19th century as a jail, a courthouse and, as of 1823, the public pound."

"Probably the most historical significant event to take place at St. James Castle was a meeting on 5th December 1831, at which the decision to form an elected legislature was taken. Five days later, the first representatives were elected and met thereafter at St. James, as well as at George Town and Bodden Town."

"Over the next ten years, various laws were passed and amended here by the magistrates and representatives, who called themselves (after 1837) Justices and Vestrymen. This building is, therefore, a central symbol in the political history of Cayman."

He also makes some comments about the development of this building as a tourism resource. "The purpose of the acquisition is to preserve the historic remains, remove the later additions and restore the building to as close as it may be made to its original form as a two-storey manorial home. When restored, the building can be furnished with old furnishings, giving a unique view of Caymanian residential life. Interpretative displays will illustrate Caymanian history and the significance of this building. This will become a premiere tourism attraction located in an area of the island where tourist income is greatly needed."

"While this building will be presented as a historic structure with the attendant interpretative displays, it would also be likely to include a snack bar, gift shop and other basic facilities as most similar historic sites around the world do. The actual process of restoration starting with the archaeological research followed by the use of traditional building methods, such as the limekiln and the building of coral stone walls, will form a valuable tourism attraction in itself. If properly presented, allowing tourists and residents the opportunity to observe the process of preservation of the most significant building in Cayman, it will reinforce the view of the Cayman Islands as a country committed to the protection of its cultural resources."

They also speak about the value of this national park, as they call it. "The site on which this historic building is located comprised 7.85 acres on the unique Pedro Bluff with approximately 1,200 feet of coastline. The setting of the building on the bluff at Pedro will make it both an historic site and a beautiful park for tourists and residents to enjoy. Cayman is in serious need of national parks both as tourism resources and for recreation of residents."

"The park will be landscaped and equipped for a variety of recreation activities including picnic facilities, snorkelling, trails, and access to the excellent offshore dive sites in good weather. This park will be second only to the public beach as a recreation resort. The tourism facilities of the historic structure will also serve as facilities for the park."

"Environmentally, the Bluff at Pedro is unique in Grand Cayman in its bluff limestone formation and it is also the only location on Grand Cayman where the White-tailed Tropicbird breeds. Preservation of this breeding ground is also of great importance."

These were comments put on paper by the Historic Committee on 25th September 1990—months before they actually bought the property.

In November 1991, the Government purchased from the estate of the late Thomas Greg Hubble, the Pedro St. James property for $853,000—and this figure includes stamp duty—located on over 7.85 acres of prime sea-front land with the intent of restoring and developing the site as a heritage tourism attraction. Because of the role Pedro played in the history of the island, the end product must respect the historic integrity of the site while serving as an important education venue for Caymanians to learn more about their history, increase awareness of their heritage and its importance in shaping the century.

I just had a little thought, Madam Speaker, I just wonder, having paid $853,000 for 7.85 acres (almost 8 acres of land) in 1991, I just wondered what today's value of that 7.85 acres is.

I think it is important for the public to follow what happens on this particular project and that's why I am quoting these dates because I think it naturally flows into completion of what I have to say.

In January 1992 . . . and let me step back for a minute. My predecessor, the Executive Council Member responsible for Tourism, Aviation and Trade, formed the Historic Sites Committee. I believe what I am looking at is the Minutes of the First Meeting on 19th December 1991. It talks about the terms of reference: "Committee for Restoration of Pedro St. James."

The membership of the committee—Convenor, the Honourable Norman Bodden; designated Chairman, Kirkland Nixon; members—the Permanent Secretary for Communication and Works and Agriculture, Mr. Gomez; the Permanent Secretary for Tourism, Aviation and Trade, Mr. Watler; the Permanent Secretary for Environment and Education (among other subjects), Mr. Os- well Rankin; the Deputy Director of Tourism, Mr. Hubble; the Director of National Archives, Mr. Pedley.

The community representatives—Mr. Hubert Bodden and the National Trust Historic Building and Sites Chairman, Mr John Doak; the Director of the National Museum, Anita Ebanks; the Chairman of the Museum Board, Noel Bodden; the Chief Engineer, Mr. Donovan Ebanks and Mrs. Dace McCoy-Brown as the Secretary.

It goes on to set the purpose of the committee. "The committee's primary task shall be the oversight and direction of the restoration of the Pedro St. James Castle as close as possible to its original configuration in order that it be a high quality historic, cultural, environmental/tourism resource for the Cayman Islands. When completed, the site will represent as close as possible a well-kept estate of the era.

"The project shall be conducted as much as possible using local labour and contractors with the intent that the final park shall be managed through local management and concessions locally held. The committee shall also review the general environmental and historic resources of the island, recommend and oversee the implementation of improvements to those facilities." And it goes on, Madam Speaker.

In January of 1992, the Honourable Norman Bodden, the Executive Council Member for Tourism, Aviation and Trade, appointed this historic committee. We have heard some of the people who attended that first meeting and there are other members as well who were not there at the time.

"Under the guidance of this Historic Sites Committee, a three-phase process was established to achieve the above objective. Phase 1 would deal with the historic research including the archival, archaeological and historic research. Phase 2 would deal with the planning and the feasibility, and Phase 3 would deal with the implementation.

"In October 1992, research on the existing structure on the site began using local archival material, memory bank interviews, photographs and other resources. Between February and April of 1992 [and I have jumped around a little bit, Madam Speaker] the Committee advertised locally and abroad and sent out tenders inviting proposals for the consultancy for the restoration of Pedro St. James. Between April and May of 1992, in response to the invites for tenders, proposals were received from sixteen firms and a sub-selection committee was appointed and charged with the responsibility of short listing and selecting the appropriate team of experts. The selection was based on the experience, the feasibility and the creativity of the bidder.

"In June 1992, Commonwealth Historic Resources Management Limited, a Canadian based team of consultants, was awarded the contract to conduct a research and formulate feasibility study. The contract was signed by the Executive Council Member, Mr. Bodden, and John Stewart, the principal consultant for CHRM.

"CHRM's impressive list of credentials and vast experience included restoration projects in the region such as the Nelson's Dockyard Restoration in Antigua. CHRM offered five principal areas of expertise, starting with planning and research . . ." and in that we talk about master plans for communities historic sites, cultural attractions, research, inventories and evaluation of the cultural resources, and heritage planning policy.

"In addition, it also has expertise in the area of architecture and designs which [when we explain it, it goes on] . . . building evaluation, conservation techniques and management plans and revitalisation and rehabilitation of urban centres and historic properties, full architectural services with a speciality in integrating service for historic sites and resources."

So, I have named two of those five principal areas of expertise.

Another area of expertise is its landscape architecture. Their expertise includes concept development and design for parks, botanic gardens, streetscapes and heritage/tourism sites, environmental design for eco-tourism and cultural landscape, extensive knowledge of historic plant materials. So, I am now up to three of the five. Creative communications, exhibit designs and interpretation from museum and tourism attraction concept development and design of promotional package with a speciality in economic development and heritage tourism, graphic design for all forms of corporate identity including signage. I am now up to four of the areas of expertise.

The fifth, Madam Speaker, might be the most relevant today and that is project management—liaison and facilitation, scheduling and budget sites and construction supervision.

I just want to go back to these Historic Sites Committee minutes because I believe it is relevant (since I appear to be so gullible according to some members about this particular individual.)

When the Committee (in their Minutes of 20th February 1992) was dealing with the consultant selection task force and invitation to tender for general approval, “Mr. Donovan Ebanks’ concern was that if we don’t limit the number of firms we were inviting they wouldn’t put in the work to make a good proposal especially in the costing.” That was his comment.

It’s also here that “Mr. John Doak and Mr. Donovan Ebanks to agree location of fence. Public Works will then do sketch and apply for planning permission. Fence to be erected hopefully before the next meeting.”

The meeting of 26th March 1992, dealing with the consultant selection task force, “Anita reported progress on a consultant selection process. Despite efforts to keep the list small, there had been so many interested in the project that 32 firms have been sent invitations. Three of the potential bidders have been to Cayman to visit the site and possibly two more are expected.” Because of the delay in mail, the final response date had been set for 23rd April.

“The task force will meet in early April to sort out the final selection, weightings, et cetera, process. It is planned that they will spend one day reviewing the responses to weed out the obvious deletions and then begin a more detailed process including reference checks to come to the final shortlist. Donovan Ebanks will be recruited to help with this second stage.”

Then there is another Minute from 13th May 1992. “The consultant selection subcommittee submitted its report on the selection of consultants. Dace Ground reviewed the procedure used to reach the shortlist of two firms, Commonwealth Historic Resource Management and Design Collaborative [I think most members will remember that Dace Ground is the wife of the then Attorney General and a lawyer herself], and then compared the two proposals on seven points of comparison.

“Philip Pedley then reviewed his findings from extensive telephone interviews with members of the team and Anita reported any responses she had received to reference checks. The overwhelming choice of the selection team on every score was the team lead by CHRM.

“After discussion, the Committee agreed with the selection sub-committee’s choice and approved CHRM as the first choice. It was agreed that there were some issues presented by the fees and proposals but that the best solution was to have John Stewart, the team leader, come to Cayman as soon as possible and negotiate those in person.”

I want to just read one more, the relevant portions of it. “The Committee also did a report [that is, the Consultants Selection Sub-Committee] to the Historic Sites Committee at that meeting on 13th May 1992.”

I note that in their report they talk about step one. And that first step was for the committee to read each of the submissions to examine the qualification of the firm or group tendering using the criteria outlined in the Financial Secretary’s guide to the selection and use of consultant.

And then the report goes on to talk about the various persons. At this stage, the selection of the consultant is down to two firms, CHRM and Design Collaborative. This report also points to their views about certain people and they have a statement here, “CHRM, John Stewart, located in Canada, historic preservation specialist.” This is the consultant selection sub-committee making this statement. “We were very impressed with him when we met him and the proposal he submitted indicated that he had been listening carefully and sensitively to the issues and ideas expressed to him.”

So, am I still gullible? Or is there someone else with a similar kind of opinion about the man!

Madam Speaker, in July 1992, CHRM Project team conducted its initial background study and prepared a business plan and marketing strategy. This process included various research methods such as archaeological history, archival research, the gathering of history and information and photographic material and comparative architecture. In August 1992, the first archaeological dig conducted under the direction of the CHRM consultant, Dr. Mark Haughton, and Dr. Peggy Denton, museum archaeologist, a member of the Historic Sites Committee. Detailed analysis of the material found was undertaken.

Information provided from the structural pieces found included the style of the roofing and flooring which are representative of traditional 18th Century Jamaican architecture.

In mid-August of the same year, a workshop was conducted including CHRM’s research team and members of the Historic Sites Committee. All primary and secondary information about the site was presented, and discussions centred on the possibility for development as a tourism attraction.

The contract for phase 1 of the restoration work was signed on 21 August 1992 with the entire job being programmed in three phases already mentioned.

Maybe I shouldn’t leave it as “already mentioned.” The three phases were: Phase 1—historic research including the archival, archaeological and historic research; phase 2 planning and feasibility; and Phase 3 implementation.

September 1992 to May 1993 careful and detailed historic and archival research continued through a combined teamwork and expertise of CHRM and members of the Historic Sites Committee. The research included the collecting of all history and photographic evidence using sources in Cayman and Jamaica, England and Spain. Such research would determine the building’s origin, its relation to similar 18th Century buildings found in the Caribbean and the history of familiar associated with the site.

It also included research in the history of William Eden’s family. This research confirmed that the original structure was built in approximately 1780 as a large family dwelling house. The original structure was determined to have an architectural style similar to the early 18th Century English-speaking Caribbean structures which we can refer to as great houses.

When I assumed responsibility for the Ministry of Tourism in November 1992, we took a close look at what was going on with the project and decided that it was in the public's best interest to continue to work as the trend of the travel world was eco-tourism, cultural experiences, and also the history of the vacation destination that really attracted them.

Secondly, it was my intention to try to provide more attractions in the Eastern districts which would cause more economic activity in Savannah, Lower Valley, Bodden Town, and in the case of Botanic Park, more economic activity in the Frank Sound, North Side and East End areas.

"In December 1992, the second archaeological dig at the Pedro St. James site was conducted under the supervision of Dr. Denton and Dr. [?]-Denton at which time concentration centred on the main building and surrounding grounds. Numerous pieces of artefacts were uncovered and are now on display in the resource centre and in the halls of the multimedia theatre.

"Early September 1993, phase 1, research and evaluation completed as all of the variables including archival and archaeological, architectural and historical were combined to correlate as much information as possible on the history and configuration of the original building—the site in its historical context in the Cayman Islands.

"In September 1993, phase 2 began with CHRM conducting a two-day workshop opened by me. At this stage the Historic Sites Committee along with CHRM using the data gathered in phase 1 discussed the possible options for restoration.

"Sources of funding and required management of the site. The possible options entailed: 1) site left as authentic ruins with little development; 2) very little restoration; and 3) major restoration. This option would require large funding. Following lengthy deliberations the committee decided on option 3. As a completed attraction initial intent should be self-financing within a five year period. At [my] request, a special presentation was made to the Legislative Assembly detailing the results of phase 1 research and tentative options for developing the site. The proposed project plans were received [in my words] enthusiastically by members of the Legislative Assembly.

"In September 1994 a formal agreement in letter form was signed by CHRM to provide design services and project management services for Pedro St. James and the Queen Elizabeth II Botanic Park, requiring CHRM to work closely with the ministry, the steering committee and the Historic Sites Committee.

"In November 1994, Executive Council granted approval for CHRM to be the project manager of both Pedro St. James and the Botanic Park. We were from the beginning of the work assessing which Caymanian staff member we would train to help manage these two projects. In that same month Finance Committee approved funds to cover the first phase of restoring and developing Pedro St. James.

"In December 1994 it was formally agreed to train Teddy Ebanks, who is now one of the cornerstones of management at the QEII Botanic Park. Also in December an archaeological programme was established to monitor the site during construction.

"In November 1995 the ministry and committee on the advice of the chairman of the Central Tenders Committee caused a submission to be made to Executive Council seeking approval for the contract to be awarded to CHRM as project manager for the final phase 3 of the actual restoration of Pedro St. James and the Botanic Park."

I notice that the First Elected Member for George Town said this was my ministry's first mistake—to put the submission to Executive Council as Executive Council does not have the authority to waive FSR's only the Financial Secretary does. And the First Elected Member for George Town made a real meal of it saying that this is where it started to go wrong, that Council had no authority to waive FSRs and the argument then led into no checks and balances in the procedure.

I am pleased to say to him that it was not a mistake, as the proper procedure was followed. My ministry did not make the submission to Executive Council as he indicated. The Financial Secretary did the submission and sought Council's input before he, the Financial Secretary, waived the FSRs, which is the proper procedure. So, the information of the First Elected Member for George Town is wrong. The ministry did not make any mistake. The proper procedure was followed. So that part of his argument, to put it kindly, falls on its face.

"In 1995 the Ministry of Tourism moved the project forward to the implementation phase of restoration of what was then called Pedro Castle. It had already been decided that the castle would be restored to its original design and construction, that is a great house type of building. And in May of 1995, we laid the cornerstone at a groundbreaking ceremony marking the beginning of phase 3 of the restoration of Pedro St. James. About six days later the Ministry of Tourism signed the contract for restoration mason work with the late Caymanian contractor Crawford Dilbert of Master Stone Works. Restoration work began under the supervision of CHRM. The early work began with stabilising the stone core."

The late Crawford Dilbert provided that top quality work. We thank him for providing us with the benefit of his rare skill.

Many local subcontractors were used to carry out the renovation work on what we then called the "castle." In order to carry out the work to its original design a lot of the material needed to be carefully selected and ordered. A project proposal was submitted to Caribbean Development Bank requesting assistance in financing the development of Pedro St. James.

All of us may recall what it looked like in those early days—shrubby, Almond trees, Tamarind trees, guinea grass, in some places up to two feet high, pedestrian paths running through it, some leading to the iron shore and, yes a stone structure with an addition on the south which served as a restaurant and was also ruined by fire.

I hold in my hand a photograph of it when it looked decent, that is before the fire with a restaurant attached to the stone core. I will lay this on the Table of this honourable House. This photograph shows where we have come from with this building.

The Deputy Speaker: So ordered.

Hon. Thomas C. Jefferson: In September 1995, one of the first pieces of work on the property was our decision to move the old Steadman Bodden home from Spotts landing and place it on site. A contract was signed between CHRM and Russell Top Job for the restoration of Steadman Bodden's House. We may or may not remember that old style Caymanian building sitting at the Spotts Landing for many years in a serious state of disrepair.

We received agreement from Mr. Charles Adams to let us have it, and we moved it to Pedro St. James. The excellent renovation work was provided by Russell Top Job and that old Caymanian building now looks like new. It was and is a psychological lift for me to see Caymanian's performance change something that we felt sorry to look at into a brand new Caymanian style house. It was used in those early days as offices during the restoration and construction phase.

Do you really remember what it looked like sitting there at the Spotts Landing? Or are you having a bit of trouble remembering what it really looked like? Let me see if this photograph can help. I hold in my hand [a photograph of] what I call a dilapidated building which I will lay on the Table. And here is another of what it looks like today.

The Deputy Speaker: So ordered.

Hon. Thomas C. Jefferson: I can't help but say, whew, what a difference! But I also hasten to point out that the cost of moving and restoring that old building was not included in the Caribbean Development Bank estimate for the project cost of Pedro St. James which included the land purchase, which is not something that normally happens in government projects in any case. In government projects you buy the land one year and a year or so later you come back and construct a building and people just look at the cost of the construction and forget about the fact that you bought land.

But when you put land and everything in together, CDB's estimate was $8,676,000. A breakdown of that cost was: Land cost, including stamp duty, $853,000. And it was estimated to be $775,000. But the actual figure includes stamp duty of $77,500.

Looking at that estimate, and I want to take a little time to go through it in detail. The land cost was estimated at $675,000. The building acquisition was another $100,000 (that's how I reached $775,000). The Pedro Castle restoration was $887,000. The visitor's centre estimate was $1,097,000. The furnishings, fittings and multimedia was $1,651,000. And I am talking about CDB's estimates for this work. The external works was $1,012,000. The architecture and engineering was $444,000. The construction management was $267,000. And it went on into physical contingencies of $967,000. Operating expenses for six months of $330,000. Start-up expenses of $430,000 and price contingencies of $445,000, a commitment fee of $41,000 and interest during construction of $340,000.

When we add all those figures up we reach a total of $8,676,000. I will come back to this before I am finished.

The Deputy Speaker: Are you moving on to another area? Would this be a convenient time to take the afternoon break?

Hon. Thomas C. Jefferson: Yes, Madam Speaker.

The Deputy Speaker: Proceedings will be suspended for 15 minutes.

PROCEEDINGS RESUMED AT 3.40 PM

The Deputy Speaker: Please be seated. Debate continues on Private Member's Motion 6/00 as amended. The Honourable Minister for Tourism, Commerce, Transport and Works continuing.

Hon. Thomas C. Jefferson: When we took the break I was coming up to October 1995. I am doing this deliberately so that the listening public and others who don't know the details are aware of the process used as we went forward from month to month, year to year, so they can see the painstaking activities we got into in order to ensure that we were moving on solid ground as we moved from one step to the next on this very important project.

"In October 1995 the contract between CHRM and Steve Shaw Production, a Canadian company, for the development and installation of the multimedia element of the project was signed. In November of that year as well, a team of technical experts from CDB visited the site.

"In December of 1995 the Central Tenders Committee approved the recommendations of CHRM to award the contract for the mahogany framing work of the castle to CAT Construction.

"In January 1996 CDB compiled an appraisal report detailing the project's estimated cost and financing plans. These estimates were based on the CHRM documents and information gathered on the site visit in November 1995. CDB estimated capital cost of the project was $8.68 million of which funding in the amount of $4.83 million was requested from CDB as a loan."

I believe one member asked how you can spend money before the CDB loan is actually signed and agreed. I think that was the comment by the member. From day one this project shared capital expenditure between government and CDB. CDB did not undertake to fund the entire project. Actually, they undertook to provide funding of $4.83 million CI of a project they estimated to be $8.7 million. So, whatever government did prior to the arrangement of the loan and the signing is still good, except that you can't use that to claim against the loan. That is government expenditure.

"February 1996, CDB Board of Directors meeting: Approval was granted for a loan in the amount of US$5.79 million or CI$4.83 to assist the Cayman Islands Government in financing the Pedro St. James Heritage Project. In May 1996 submission to Executive Council requesting approval for the Financial Secretary to table a motion in this Legislative Assembly seeking to accept and sign the loan offer from CDB. On August 22 1996, the loan agreement between government and DDB was signed.

"Also in August of 1996, Executive Council granted permission for the Bill to establish the Tourism Attraction Board to come to the House. In February 1997 the business plan for the Tourism Attraction Board, prepared by CHRM and ERA Consulting Group Inc. In January 1997 the appointment of members to the Tourism Attraction Board was done.

"In April 1997 tenders for the construction of the visitor's centre at Pedro St. James were delivered to the chairman of the CTC. In September 1997, PWD at the request of the Ministry of Tourism took on the responsibilities of project management during the construction phase of the visitor's centre."

I think that when we look at the Auditor General's Report he says, "we terminated" the agreement with CHRM. That is inaccurate. CHRM was there to the very end dealing with the multimedia theatre.

May I say that although that particular part of the project, that is the visitor's centre, was estimated by CDB to cost $1,097,000, when we put the matter out to tender the lowest tender that came in was $1.7 million, almost $1.8 million, and actually at the end of the day when we take the actual cost of construction of the visitor's centre, it came in at $2.3 million. CDB's estimate of $1.1, the actual cost was $2.3 million.

When I compare that to the cost of restoring the castle, which was $887,000 versus $1.2 million, I wonder why the focus wasn't on the visitor's centre, which was twice the amount of the estimate.

But, be that as it may. . . In January 1998 both Pedro St. James and the Queen Elizabeth II Botanic Park projects were transferred to the management of the Tourism Attract Board. And on December 5 1998, which was the anniversary of the decision taken . . . the birthplace of democracy happened in 1831, it was the anniversary date. Not planned, but by sheer coincidence, it happened that we had the official opening of Pedro St. James and all sections of the site, including the multimedia theatre became operational.

The balance left to be drawn down on the loan from CDB is roughly $1.5 million. And last month we had a visit from staff members of CDB on the Pedro St. James project. It was confirmed to us then that the total loan amount was expected to be drawn down within a few weeks. We heard recently from them that this still holds true and we hope that we will have the cheque in the not too distant future.

I want to say that although the building was not opened until December 5 1998, about a year before then, probably January 1998, we discovered that many visitors from overseas were visiting the site. We decided at that stage that if it seemed that interesting to them to charge them something. So we charged $1. That's one of the items mentioned in the Auditor General's Report. That ended up with $91,000 being collected by the staff at Pedro St. James during that year, although the project was not officially opened and the multimedia theatre was not in operation.

I want to also lay on the Table of this honourable House, so that we have a proper comparison, these photographs which ably depict the quality of the work we have today.

The Deputy Speaker: So ordered.

Hon. Thomas C. Jefferson: There has been a series of items that we have been dealing with. One area in particular is trying to find the true asset cost of the project given that the project was combined with both Pedro St. James and the Botanic Park. In some cases items were charged . . . I think even the Auditor General realises that. Some items were charged to Pedro when they should have been charged to Botanic Park.

But the financial controller, who is a chartered accountant out of Canada, who has been with us for about one year now, has reconciled, together with Treasury, all of these payments that went through Treasury. They separated these items that were causing some confusion in the early years of 1995/1996. Their conclusion is that this project Pedro St. James which was estimated by CDB to cost $8.7 million, the actual cost was approximately $8.2 million. I think the actual figure was $8,175,110.97.

One of the points made by the Auditor General in his earlier report dealing with the accounts for 1997 was that we did not have a proper set of accounts at the Tourism Attraction Board or at Botanic Park or at Pedro St. James. Our words to him at that time were that we were concentrating on getting the project open. The Treasury, having a cash system could continue to account for the cash collected and the expenditure. Given that we had opened this facility and we are now moving into early 1999, we then commissioned, and we talked to the Auditor General about it and he said "Look, this is going to cost a lot of money." But he felt that they could not do this work. It was not right to do the work and then turn around and audit it.

So, we commissioned Ernst & Young, and paid the relevant sum of money. They produced a set of accounts, and he was asking for a set of accounts through June 1998. They produced a set of accounts through December 1998. As far as the financial statements of the Tourism Attractions Board, specifically on Pedro St. James, the balance sheet, the profit and loss, the cash flow of the accounts and the operation of it is now in place.

Let me hasten to say that it is absent of the total capital construction cost of Pedro St. James. It's the item we recently reconciled, meaning $8.2 million, which we have to reconcile . . . we have reconciled with the Treasury and the financial controller of the Tourism Attractions Board, who is a chartered accountant the project manager for the visitor's centre, that is Public Works Department have all reconciled these payments and have now talked to the Auditor General. They tried to speak to him on Thursday or Friday last week, but he was not available to do so. But I think they met on Monday. We are waiting to hear his answer.

Let me also say that there was a point there last year when we got a set of accounts from the Auditor General which he wanted us to put to the Tourism Attraction Board for approval to be laid on the Table of this House which did not have the capital cost of these projects, Pedro St. James or Botanic Park and I refused to do so. My words were that if you laid financial statements on the Table of this honourable House dated 31 December 1998 and do not have the capital cost, in other words the asset cost, what is the value of the assets, the statements would be erroneous and unacceptable to members. So, in case some member has heard that, it was my decision to not do so. But we hope to be in a position to do so as soon as the Auditor General decides on the reconciliation, whether or not he accepts it, and we move on from there.

In the Auditor General's Report back in 1997, he made that point about project financial records and the inadequacy and confusion. He went on to say that it appears that the final cost of the project will be in the region of $9.5 million. Well, it's an estimate it appears. What has now been reconciled I think will prove to be the true figure.

On page 82 of the Auditor General's Report which was produced by him in November 1998 on the December 1997 accounts, he also talks about the technical and financial oversight of the restoration element "was vested in the Ministry of Tourism."

"In hindsight it is evident that ministry personnel were untrained and ill-equipped to deal with such a complex project." It was a complex project. And if you talk to anybody who is involved in this kind of work they will tell you that no matter who the individual was it would still be a difficult project. But it was the ministry together with the steering committee that was taking these decisions about the oversight of technical matters, meaning that we wanted to be sure that the design of the project was accurate and that what we ended up with was a building identical to the way it was built in 1780 with all of its ingredients—mahogany, slate on the roof, slate on the ground floor among other things.

He made reference to a significant number of contracts awarded. He even put in stationery in this. The work they did on stationery was to put the logo on a piece of stationery for the Tourism Attraction Board. There were only three contracts that were not tendered. Only three. One was the interpretation, another way to say that is the production of signage. The other was furnishings and the direct labour when dealing with landscaping. Only the direct labour was not tendered. And the Auditor General said himself that what was put together was a good scheme to deal with the situation.

I think it's found in paragraph 3.6. The Auditor General, speaking about the direct labour agreement, part of the landscaping project. This agreement was dealing with landscaping. He said, "A direct labour scheme seems to have been a very good approach, one which in the circumstances offered several advantages over a conventional tendered contract including flexibility training and potential cost reduction."

So, what's this about landscaping? What I understand some members to be saying is that the entire landscaping contract was not tendered. If I am correct in my thinking, I just want to say to them that that is not so. The landscaping contract was tendered. We used Crawford Dilbert to build the stone wall. That was tendered. We used EMS to deal with part of it.

And then they talk about the irrigation system. The irrigation system which is also not part of the CDB estimate and cost almost $36,000 adding to the cost, yet the actual came in under the estimate, the irrigation system is a system we have at Botanic Park and it works almost perfectly. You know how irrigation systems are; you have to maintain it. It has been there for some time. And CDB staff, knowing that system and how well it works suggested to the steering committee that CHRM and the Ministry should put the system in and they would pay for it out of their loan. We decided to do that.

But there is a difference between what goes on at Botanic Park up in Frank Sound and what goes on at Pedro Castle on the Bluff near the iron shore. The crabs went in underneath the ground and chewed up the rubber hose among other things. That was the problem with it. You tell me how in the world could anybody predict that that would happen? Maybe someone has a crystal ball a little clearer than mine. I would ask him or her to let me look in it.

Do you know what I think this motion is about? It's about dethroning Thomas Jefferson in West Bay in 2000. But we will see if that is going to happen!

This motion is wholly political. There is a belief in this country that Thomas Jefferson is too popular and is going to win in November 2000, so let's find a way to tear him down. And let's walk all around Grand Cayman making all sorts of allegations, and let's come in here making all kinds of innuendoes trying to paint a picture of dishonesty. Yet, when you read the Auditor General's Report there is no fact that points to Thomas Jefferson being dishonest.

I will tell you this: I will go to my grave and they will not find it because I am not that type of person.

On page 51 of the Auditor General's Report dealing with the financial statements in 1998 he said right at the top, "Ministry personnel appeared to have acted in good faith throughout." Not just in good faith. Throughout the entire project— "Ministry personnel appeared to have acted in good faith throughout."

The Financial and Stores Regulations were crafted under my watch. And far be it from me to break them. There is no evidence that I did. Yet, some of the parties on that side of the table are trying to say that I did.

I think the Minister of Education was making the point . . . and I also had a chat with one of the senior persons in Public Works Department that when you have . . . I liken John Stewart's (CHRM) activities on this project, because it is a specialised project, similar to a general contract in this respect of a major project. Hadsphallic had the visitor's centre. They were the general contractor on the visitor centre. The visitor centre cost more than twice the estimated amount. I ask this question: Why isn't somebody trying to find out what the cost of the subcontracting work was there?

It is not normal that you would go beyond the general contractor because you have a contract with him and you are going to hold him responsible and he is going to organise between him and anybody who does subcontracting work for him on that job he will hold with an indemnity that if the quality is not right they will have to fix it.

From the time I heard that the Auditor General was up at Pedro Castle . . . it didn't come from us to ask him to go there. The Chairman of the Public Accounts Committee was the one who told the Auditor General there were irregularities up at Pedro St. James, go there and check it out. When you say that, most auditors will try to find what is there, if there is anything there.

From the time I heard that, I said, 'look out Tom Jefferson. November election is coming.' That's what this is all about. There is no evidence of any criminal activity. If there was the Auditor General has been up there since March 1999, over a year ago. Wouldn't it have come to light by now?

I am going to try not to get personal, because that's not like me. But I think I am going to make these remarks. There is a member of this House, the First Elected Member for West Bay, talking about mismanagement among other things. I think he should answer while he was the Minister of Community Development dealing with public assistance programme audit report done by the Auditor General I think he should answer why all of this money was given—

The Deputy Speaker: Honourable Minister, can I ask you to refrain from getting into another issue other than what is here? If the First Elected Member [for West Bay] referred to mismanagement, I think he was referring to the motion. So, let us not get into other issues that this motion does not concern please.

Hon. Thomas C. Jefferson: Thank you, Madam Speaker. I was just trying to refer to many people who say he gave away a lot of money, and this proves it.

The Deputy Speaker: But we are not discussing that report, sir.

Hon. Thomas C. Jefferson: Thank you, Madam Speaker. I am with you. Sometimes a lot of people like to give a lot of stuff. When it comes back there's a different story. They are going to sue everybody in the land. But we will leave the subject.

The Auditor General also made his remarks on page 83 of the financial statements dealing with 1997, that certain project costs from Pedro St. James and Botanic Park were invoiced together. They are now reconciled. He went on to make the point that the services of the main consultant were terminated in late 1997. That's totally untrue. CHRM's services were not terminated. They were still there dealing with the multimedia theatre right up to a couple of weeks before we opened it in December 1998.

He says. "There have been major problems in obtaining cost reimbursement from Caribbean Development Bank." Well, if you try to claim something that you did before the loan was approved there might be some problems, and there were. But, at the end of the day the CDB staff is saying that they are satisfied we are going to be allowed to draw down all of the loan, and that $1.5 million claim that we made they are going to honour it.

On page 83 the Auditor General also went on to talk about "no control over the various advance accounts open to account for Pedro project expenses pending reimbursement from DDB." That matter is resolved.

One member made reference to the 1998 accounts, page 44 when talking about what the Auditor General said in paragraph 3.8. Then he has a table figure 3.1 on page 45 where he is alleging overpayment. I think that's what he is doing. Both the Ministry and the Historic Sites Committee were concerned that Mr. Stewart who was supervising the project was not on island all the time. So we asked him to try to find a way to have somebody permanently here responsible to him. That person is Donny Ebanks. And that's what this $30,000 is about. I think we have accounted for that one. Some people might not like it, but we have accounted for it.

The Deputy Speaker: If you are going on to another point and the House will agree, I would ask for the adjournment. Certain members have a committee meeting that starts at 4.30. I would entertain a motion for the adjournment at this time.

The Honourable Minister for Tourism, Commerce, Transport and Works.

ADJOURNMENT

Hon. Thomas C. Jefferson: I move the adjournment of this Honourable House until 10.00 AM tomorrow.

The Deputy Speaker: The question is that this Honourable House do now adjourn until 10.00 AM tomorrow. Those in favour, please say Aye. Those against, No.

AYES.

The Deputy Speaker: The Ayes have it.

AT 4.20 PM THE HOUSE STOOD ADJOURNED UNTIL 10.00 AM THURSDAY, 13 APRIL 2000.

OTHER BUSINESS

PRIVATE MEMBERS' MOTIONS

PRIVATE MEMBER'S MOTION NO. 6/2000 AS AMENDED

INVESTIGATION INTO PEDRO ST. JAMES CONSTRUCTION PROJECT ACCOUNT

Hon. Thomas C. Jefferson: Thank you very much, Madam Speaker.

Yesterday afternoon I spent a great deal of time to say that even in September 1990—long before the government had purchased this piece of property out at Pedro St. James—the Historic Sites Committee was appointed by the former Executive Council Member responsible for Tourism to oversee this particular restoration process. The process has been broken down into three different phases: One was the research, the other one was the feasibility, and the third one was the implementation of the restoration process.

I moved in chronological order from 1990 to 1991, when we purchased the property, to 1992, 1993, 1994, 1995, straight through the years indicating the painstaking steps that were taken by the Historic Sites Committee, the ministry and the steering committee involved with this project.

I did point out the members of the Historic Sites Committee. It was chaired by Mr. Kirkland Nixon. Mr. Kearney Gomez was the Permanent Secretary for Communication, Works and Agriculture at the time. The Principal Secretary for Tourism was Mr. Watler; the Principal Secretary for Education was Mr. Oswell Rankine; the Deputy Director for Tourism was Mr. Hubbell; the Director of the National Archive was Dr. Phillip Pedley; Dr. Peggy Denton of the Museum; Mr. John Doak, the Chairman of the National Trust Historic Building and Sites. Mr. Hubert Bodden was the community representative, at the time. Miss Theresa Leacock was also a member. Anita Ebanks, the Director of the Museum and Mrs. Arthurlyn Pedley were also members.

Mrs. Dace Ground was the secretary of the Historic Sites Committee, Mr. Naul Bodden, the Chairman of the Museum, and Mr. Donovan Ebanks (who was the Chief Engineer at that time in January 1992) [were also members].

I went on to indicate the Historic Sites Committee painstaking process of selecting the consultant. I made reference to some Minutes of the Historic Sites Committee on 13th May 1992, and I also made reference to a report to the Historic Sites Committee from the Consultant Selection Sub-Committee, which I indicated a number of steps in this report.

The first step was for the committee to read each of the submissions, to examine the qualifications of the firms or groups tendering using the criteria outlined in the Financial Secretary's guide to selection and use of consultants.

At that stage this report also went on (and Madam Speaker, with your permission, I am going to table this report) to talk about the two companies that have risen heads above all the others and we had sixteen firms bidding for the project. Those two firms were Commonwealth Historic Resource Management (CHRM) and Design Collaborative.

Step Three (I just want to touch on this briefly) "The Committee then evaluated the two finalists against each other in detail on the criteria laid out below:

"A. Overall Team: The quality of the companies and individuals who make up the team.

"Commonwealth: The team is led by CHRM, one of Canada's leading and most experienced historic preservation firms joined by the ARA consulting group for financial, tourism and marketing expertise, Onions Bouchard McCulloch as local liaison and technical assistance; and several specialist consultants.

"Design Collaborative: The lead firm is a major project development firm from Barbados joined with two of the best known cultural tourism development firms, Gilmore, Hankey, Kirke and Lord Cultural Resources Planning."

The report goes on to just speak about CHRM and they make these remarks about John Stewart, who people are trying to paint in here as a criminal. "John Stewart, located in Canada—historic preservation specialist. We were very impressed with him when we met him, and the proposal he submitted indicated that he had listened carefully and sensitively to the issues and ideas expressed to him.

“Onion Bouchard McCulloch (OBM) would be their local liaison and joint project architect, with John Doak leading the team.” Now, we know who John Doak is. He is senior partner of the architectural firm of OBM and quite able as an architect.

Just one or two more quotes from this, Madam Speaker, briefly. They go on to talk about these two firms, CHRM and Design Collaborative. They go on to say, “Perhaps the biggest contract between the two teams is that between David Russell of CHRM and Gail Lord of Lord [who was a part of Design Collaborative, the other company] who both specialise in developing the kind of restored structure that will attract tourists. Mr. Russell appeared to be the master of his field, of the details of this project and of its Caribbean context.

“Ms. Lord spoke only in the most general terms about how her firm would be involved, its relationships to other firms and about work in the Caribbean.”

The last quote from this, I think is very relevant because people were saying whether any checks had been done. Step 5 in this report talks about reference checks. “Anita Ebanks [still the Director of the Museum] has called people she knows who have been involved with various projects in the Caribbean on which the two teams have worked to inquire as to how they performed. Although she inquired about both teams, since all indications favour the choice of Commonwealth, only the comments relevant to that team are presented here:

“During the initial process of hunting for a consulting firm to carry out the restoration of Pedro St. James, we contacted a number of regional and international organisations involved in the preservation of cultural heritage projects. Commonwealth Historic Resource Management Ltd. was recommended by the:

- Canadian International Development Agency [I think we know who that is];
- Canadian Association of Professional Heritage Consultants;
- Canadian Museums Association;
- Canadian Parks Service;

“Quite a number of individuals in Canada, Jamaica, Barbados and Antigua were quizzed on the work of the team members. Overall the comments were very positive [and I will list them]:

- Very professional, thorough, sensitive and reliable;
- Detailed reports and monitoring—work plans updated regularly;
- Timescale/schedules and cost/budget fair to good;

- Good listeners, receptive to ideas and suggestions, however they will stand up to what they believe.”

When you are dealing with a project like Pedro that was in ruins and we didn't know what to do with it, it is good to know that the person you are selecting will stand up and say, ‘this is the way it should be’ rather than be guided by other people who have all sorts of ideas—including Thomas Jefferson—about what should happen. They go on to say [regarding] CHRM:

- “The glue that holds it all together—the vision;
- Make things happen and run smoothly—good managers;
- The experience and professionalism of the staff, associates, other team members and subcontractors of the highest order experience;
- If not the best in Canada they are among the top few who are well known for their experience in the preservation of heritage resources.”

Thank you, Madam Speaker, for your tolerance of this. I beg now to lay this on the Table of the House.

The Deputy Speaker: So ordered.

Hon. Thomas C. Jefferson: Yesterday, too, I brought to light that the comment made by the First Elected Member for George Town indicating that the first mistake by the Ministry of Tourism was that we put a paper to Executive Council to waive Financial and Stores Regulation . . . I did point out to him that that statement, or that information he received, is not true. Actually, the way I put it, his statement is wrong. The proper procedure was followed in that the Financial Secretary in a submission to Executive Council sought their input and the Financial Secretary waived Financial and Stores Regulations to allow CHRM to continue to work with us.

The whole reason behind that is that, given their expertise (and I read that out yesterday—five different areas of it) . . . since they had been on the ground floor with the research and with the feasibility, and research being done by archaeological means, and they had supervised all that happened at the site and helped us to recognise what the building was like in 1780 and that the whole objective as I read from the terms of reference of the Historic Sites Committee was that we wanted to restore Pedro St. James as it was built in 1780 as accurately as we possibly could and we wanted to ensure that happened, our view, for continuity reasons, was getting on with the project. The experience of this firm made sense for us to seek to allow them to continue as they have, among their five areas of expertise, project management.

We formed the view in the early days that project management was needed to happen both at Pedro St.

James and Botanic Park simultaneously. Both projects were going on at the same time as we were planning it that way. We took the view that it was more cost effective to have one organisation as the project manager than to have two. Thus, we formed the agreement with CHRM to be the project manager (since they have that as part of their expertise vouched for by people around the Caribbean as well as Canada) and that we would employ them to be the project manager on Botanic Park as well as Pedro St. James and the total cost of it was $1,075,000 shared among the two projects.

I have to say that when I was looking through this 1997 report of the Auditor General, he made reference on page 82 that this main consultant, CHRM, the proposal for professional fees for this phase of the work amounted to $1,022,124, which included expenses. He goes on to say, “This represents 25% of the estimated project cost and appears high by any standard.” Now, I want to know how he did that calculation. How can $1 million be 25% of $8.6 million or $8.7 million? Forget about the percentage—25% expressed in a fraction is one quarter, and one quarter of $8.6 million is not $1 million. It has to be over $2 million. So, that statement by him I think is erroneous.

Yesterday, I also talked about (and I am still back on this 1997 Report) where the Auditor General said that the project financial records are inaccurate and confusing. I am not going to say they were not confusing. I didn't look at them. As the minister, I am not involved with that level of detail. But he then goes on to say that it appears that the final cost of the project may be in the region of $9.5 million and I emphasise, he says, “it appears [which means it is an estimate] that work has now been reconciled from all the payments that have passed through the Treasury of this Government by the Financial Controller of the Tourism Attraction Board [and she is located at Pedro St. James], by the Treasury and by the Project Manager of the visitor's centre portion of the total project of Pedro to be $8.2 million.”

We made contact with the Auditor General on Thursday or Friday of last week to present our reconciliation to him. He was not available, but I understand they met on Monday to look at this reconciliation.

He talks about technical and financial oversight of the restoration element that was vested with the Ministry of Tourism. Well, it wasn't just the ministry . . . and I am not saying that I am not responsible for it, but we established the Historic Sites Committee from December 1991 and they followed this project all the way through to the end. So, it's the ministry, the Historic Sites Committee, and the Steering Committee.

He also makes mention of many of the financial records including tenders, bids and purchase commitments held by the consultants and what is not available to support the audit payments is charged to the ministry's vote. CHRM says that is not so.

I would say, Madam Speaker, that when we compare the Pedro St. James, or the Castle part of this project, and the fees that I spoke about earlier—which I think are close to 12.5% and not 25%—information given to Public Works on this matter of contractors and sub-contractors relationships, it says, “It is normal that Government's contracting procedure is that Government enters into a contract with the main contractor.” If we take the visitor's centre, for example, it would have been Hadsphaltic. The main contractor employs sub-contractors. On a typical project there will be between ten to twenty sub-contractors dealing with plumbing, electrical, air-conditioning, roofing, security systems, cabinet works, paving works, etcetera.

The word from Public Works is (and they were the project manager of this visitor's centre), “Government has no direct contract relationship with the sub-contractor. Government pays the main contractor who in turn pays and is fully responsible for the performance of the sub-contractor. Typical main contractor mark-up on sub-contractor's costs is between 10% and 15%. These pay for the contractor's supervision, the co-ordination, the profile, et cetera, of the sub-contractor's work.” So, it's typical that it is varying between 10% and 15%.

I also spoke about the contracts that were not done by tender, and I will come back to that in a little while. This report also says certain project costs for Pedro and Botanic Park projects had been invoiced together. That was so in the years of 1995 and 1996 but it has now been reconciled and separated. Those that were incurred for the Botanic Park are on the account for Botanic Park, and those for the account of Pedro are on Pedro's account.

He also makes mention that “the service of the main consultant was terminated in late 1997.” That is not quite true. CHRM was there to the very end, just shortly before we opened the facility on 5th December 1998.

He also mentions that there have been major problems in obtaining cost reimbursement from Caribbean Development Bank, who agreed to fund C$4.83 million of an $8.676 million (or $8.7 million) project. I cannot say that I know some invoice was presented and CDB said it could not support it. What I do know is that the work from the very beginning on Pedro St. James (the $8.7 million part of it) was to be funded by Caribbean Development Bank to the tune of C$4.83 million. The difference between those two figures is what government would have to pay as part of the project. So, it's a shared costing.

Now, if somebody presented an invoice before the loan agreement was signed (because the project did start before the loan agreement was signed), then I am almost certain that Caribbean Development Bank would not pay that invoice. But, what is clear from the recent visit of the staff member from Caribbean Development Bank, with the view of clearing up all of the outstanding matters and dealing with the claim we submitted of $1.5 million, is that they are going to honour it and our loan will be fully drawn down. That being the case, all this knit picking goes away.

He also goes on to say on page 83 that there has been no control over various advance controls open to the account for Pedro St. James expenses pending reimbursement for CDB. Well, the procedure for CDB is that the government pays the sum, puts it in an advance account, claims it from CDB, and when CDB pays that amount, they then clear off the advance account and place it to expenditure. All this has been resolved. All this has been reconciled by the financial controller of Pedro St. James, who is a chartered accountant, and by the Treasury. Those matters are resolved.

Madam Speaker, before I come to some other points I just wanted to try to deal with some of the items listed in the 1998 report on page 55, where he gets into the operational side of the financial work and systems at Pedro. Page 55, paragraph 3.32, says, "The main outstanding action points recommended for Pedro St. James are summarised below: Install a proper accounting system and adequate internal controls."

Yesterday, Madam Speaker, I made the point that in 1998 (that's the accounts we are talking about here) the project did not officially open until 5th December of that year. We were concentrating on getting the project finished and opened, and we were not at that stage focusing on the need for accounts because the Treasury (which has a cash system) was dealing with the cash collected from visitors at Pedro St. James and was also accounting for the capital expenditure of the construction or restoration of Pedro St. James as well as the staff who were working up there.

His recommendations summarised: "Install a proper accounting system and adequate internal controls." That matter is done, actually we have accounts right up to the end of the year 1999. "Ensure effective marketing of the attraction to cruise line visitors and land based arrivals." We have started that process. There are tour operators who have arrangements with the various cruise ships that call in George Town and they take passengers to Pedro St. James as well as to the Botanic Park. So, that is in progress and there are several of them that are actually bringing visitors to the site so that we can collect their money and raise some funds.

"Review the 1997 Business Plan to reflect realistic visitor arrivals based on the proposed marketing campaign." This one is in the programme, but quite frankly, the ministry and I could say the minister's focus is that we have asked the Financial Controller to reconcile all these matters to get the proper accounting systems in place and to make sure that the reconciliation (which I referred to earlier) was done, and which is now done subject to agreement by the Auditor General. And then we get on with the review of the business plan.

"Determine the total cost of the restoration and development project and disclose this information in the 1998 financial statements." I think I just said that's done subject to the Auditor General, to be finalised with him.

On page 58, he goes on to say, paragraph 3.35.1, ". . . accounting and internal control systems had not been established." They are firmly in place, Madam Speaker. I am not saying they were at that time because I was not there when he did it. But they are now firmly in place so that matter is also resolved.

He also talks about no system for authorising purchases and no official purchase orders. The purchase order system is firmly in place. The Financial Controller is the only person able to sign a purchase order unless, of course, it is a maintenance item, which Mr. Teddy Ebanks has the authority to do.

He said, "There is reasonable control over cheque authorisation but authorised limits were at times overridden . . ." All cheques are now—

The Deputy Speaker: Honourable Minister, are you getting into the special report or are you just dealing with the Pedro Castle?

Hon. Thomas C. Jefferson: I am reading from the Auditor General's Report, page 58.

The Deputy Speaker: Could I see it? because there are two reports but there was only one that was debated publicly in the Public Accounts Committee Meeting. The one that says Special Report that was requested by XYZ was not debated publicly so I'd rather you not get into that, sir.

Hon. Thomas C. Jefferson: That is fine, Madam Speaker, that is fine.

I want now, Madam Speaker, to talk a little bit about the landscaping. It was in 1998 that the Auditor General approached the ministry to say that he was not quite satisfied with everything on the landscaping contract but he did not have any money to deal with it. We asked, 'what do you need?' He said, 'well, we need about $10,000.' Our view in the ministry was that we wanted to ensure that the Auditor General was satisfied with what the state of affairs was regarding the landscaping at Pedro St. James. So, we spoke to the Financial Secretary and we said to him on 22 February 1998, 'we would like you, sir, to allow us to utilise $10,000 of the funds provided under the ministry to allow the Auditor General to carry out his work on the landscaping.' He issued an allocation warrant, as such, which I am happy to lay on the Table for members to peruse if they so wish.

The Deputy Speaker: So ordered.

Hon. Thomas C. Jefferson: This is for the Auditor General to use to carry out whatever work he wanted to do to satisfy himself on the landscaping contract. We had no difficulty at all with providing him with that.

Now, the direct labour agreement, which the Auditor General said was a good scheme because it provided flexibility for training and other matters, I quoted that from his report yesterday. He also went on to say that there appeared to have been an overpayment of $30,605.

I pointed out yesterday that Mr. John Stewart who was the project manager for this part of the project, meaning the landscaping part, was not always on the island so we said to him that he should find a local person that could be on the site at all times. That person is Carson Ebanks and this $30,000 represents the payment for him.

Now, Madam Speaker, a portion of the landscaping contract was awarded to EMS and DDM. Both were tendered. Crawford Dilbert was contracted for the stone wall. That was not tendered. On the recommendations of the Historic Sites Committee, Mr. Dilbert was selected based on the limited skill for masonry restoration available on the island and having done an excellent job on the restoration phase of the great house.

DDM Horticultural Services initial contract was to provide design services for the Botanic Park. This contract was later extended to include services to Pedro. At the early stages, the Horticulturist at the Botanic Park with the assistance of selected committee members, was responsible for the selection, purchase, and shipping arrangements for plant material and equipment. This event was not successful as the purchasing team encountered various difficulties during the selection process. For example, they were not familiar with the US suppliers and were unable to locate many of the varieties specified.

A major difficulty experienced was that goods required immediate payment before shipment. This resulted in a container sitting on a dock in Miami for an extra week and some of the plant material was lost.

I heard members in this House making a remark that 'they just said the plants died.' I wonder if we have not experienced that in our lifetime in our gardens.

Commonwealth was asked by the committee and ministry to take over the management of the acquisition of the plant material and equipment. As a result, DDM, an American landscaping and design company of which Mr. Stewart had a previous working relationship, was recommended by CHRM and accepted by the committee to provide plant design and to assist with the installation of plant material for both sites, Pedro and Botanic.

Following the selection of supplies, equipment and plant material, these items were submitted to the committee for review. Once the appraisal was given, a requisition was sent for the supplies. However, due to a lack of credit, prepayment was required and CHRM advanced these payments then invoiced government for reimbursement of $47,000 for plant material and supplies, $104,010 for equipment.

The items under equipment included the purchase of a Mazda truck, club cars, lawnmowers, saw cutters, golf carts, weed eaters, chainsaw, hose and sprinklers, hydraulic dump system, chairs and benches, plant sprayer, sugar cane juicer, potter, chemicals and trash containers.

The plants actually died, Madam Speaker, they were sitting in Miami too long. That is one of the reasons why when you look at figure 3.2 on page 48 of the report of the Auditor General for 1998, the contract was for $149,152 and the total invoices at the end of the day having lost some of the plants was $194,974.

The labour, which we talked about, the contract, was $50,400. The actual cost was $51,517. CHRM was not the contractor. This could be the confusion because CHRM advanced the money to do this purchasing and then sought reimbursement. If you just look at the reimbursement portion of the exercise, you could easily think that CHRM was the contractor. But, in fact, they were not.

When we talk about landscaping, I just wonder if we remember what it looked like. It is easy to remember what it is now. But do you remember what it looked like? I have a photograph of some of it including what Pedro Castle looked like. When I talked about guinea-grass and shrubbery, and I am on trees and tamarind trees, certainly in this picture, which I am happy to place on the Table of this House but I ask the Serjeant-at-Arms not to move yet because I have many more.

Here is another picture of the landscaping on the site, garbage all over the place. Here is another picture of the landscaping, pretty bare except for the trees in the distance. Here is a seaside view of it, which I am happy to lay on the Table. More garbage. More of that shrubbery I talked about . . . and I am going to just hand these all to the Serjeant-at-Arms and ask that you allow me to lay these on the Table.

The Deputy Speaker: Honourable Minister, before I order these to be laid, maybe you need to provide a photograph album to Parliament. We can keep these for posterity. (Just a joke.)

So ordered.

Hon. Thomas C. Jefferson: I have more that I can offer too, Madam Speaker, and I am happy to do so. Thank you.

The Deputy Speaker: Is this a convenient point to take the morning break?

Hon. Thomas C. Jefferson: It is, Madam Speaker.

The Deputy Speaker: Proceedings will be suspended for fifteen minutes.

PROCEEDINGS SUSPENDED AT 11.08 AM

PROCEEDINGS RESUMED AT 11.32 AM

The Deputy Speaker: Please be seated. Proceedings are resumed. Debate continues on Private Member's Motion No. 6/2000 as amended.

The Honourable Minister responsible for Tourism continuing his debate thereon.

Hon. Thomas C. Jefferson: Thank you, Madam Speaker.

Since we are on landscaping and I have basically laid on the Table of this Honourable House, with your permission, what it looked like in the beginning, I think it fair to ask you to lay these pictures on the Table indicating what it looks like today.

The Deputy Speaker: So ordered.

Hon. Thomas C. Jefferson: Madam Speaker, as I indicated yesterday, the direct labour part of what took place at Pedro on landscaping was under the supervision . . . because the project appeared not to be moving fast enough to open it in 1998, we asked CHRM to take on additional staff so that we could finish this exercise.

That direct labour scheme which we put together amounted to $318,202. The Auditor General, on page 43, paragraph 3.6, says, "A direct labour scheme seems to have been a very good approach and one which, in the circumstances offered several advantages over a conventional tendered contract, including flexibility, training and potential cost reduction." So, we didn't tender that aspect of it but the Auditor General said what we put together was a good scheme. It was a very good approach and one, which offered several advantages over a conventional tendered contract.

The other contract that we did not tender for, as I mentioned earlier, was the stone wall around Pedro St. James. It was recommended (as I quoted earlier) by the Historic Sites Committee that the work be done by the late Crawford Dilbert. I think any of us who go to that site will see the quality of his work and certainly can admire the beauty of that stone wall surrounding Pedro St. James.

More importantly, Madam Speaker, as a young boy growing up in Cayman, many of the boundaries around properties were stone wall boundaries and that is still so in some parts of this island today. So, the stone wall depicts the era of the 1780s.

There is another item, the second item that was not tendered, which members spoke about, was the furnishings. We tried to tender it and the cost of that tender we thought prohibitive. Then we said, 'let's just see if we can do it ourselves.' So we sent a number of persons around the Caribbean, a lady by the name of Claudette Shaw, which someone might confuse as being some relative of Stephen Shaw, but in actual fact, she is not. So, I would say to members, please don't make that connection because it would not be accurate. No relationship at all to Stephen Shaw, who had the multimedia contract.

One of the reasons for having to go overseas is that the National Museum for their own reasons did not want us to purchase property of that era locally, furniture that depicts the 1780s, because it might damage their ability to collect things for free. If we paid the price, obviously it would cause them to pay substantial sums of money. I think those are the reasons.

So, we sent Claudette Shaw to Barbados, Antigua and also Grenada. Mr. Stewart and Mary Peavers who were on our staff went to Jamaica to select various pieces of furniture that fit that 1780 era. Part of the reason why the actual cost was more than the contracted or estimated sum is the fact that you have to build into this all these air fares and accommodation travelling to Barbados, Antigua, Grenada and Jamaica, as well as the government import duty and the shipping charges.

As one can appreciate, this is very specialised furniture and artefacts that depict the 1780s. I wonder really if you could find this altogether in one place. If you did, it would probably turn out like what we experienced—the cost of it would be prohibitive. Because of the fact that that type of furniture is so rare, they can charge whatever you want for it, and you either take it or leave it. We decided, of course, to leave it. That's the rationale behind that particular contract of furnishings.

But when we look at it, we find that (even building in all the import duty and the air travel and the cost of accommodation and other things) we also had to include props for the theatre, shipping and storage because when the furniture came, the building was not yet ready so we had to store it. That's another $6,000. So, when you take the additional less the contingency of $20,000, the addition to it was about $40,000—not prohibitive. Actually, if we had gone with the tender we would really have something to talk about.

The multimedia theatre, the original contracted sum was $611,800. And, how did the final cost come in? It was $580,118, less than the contract according to this Government Minute.

The multimedia contract according to our project manager was tendered. Two Canadian consulting companies were extensively interviewed. Steve Shaw was one and the other was Rod Huggins. They met with CHRM during the section process. As a result of this interview and written proposal, it was recommended by the project manager to hire Steve Shaw.

Madam Speaker, I haven't found one person yet, although this building has been officially opened since December 5 1998, who goes to Pedro St. James and who sees the multimedia production, who says it is no good. Actually, it is just the opposite. I find people who are well travelled, former seamen in some cases, who say to me, 'Tom, I have travelled around this world. I have been to Disney World, I have been to this national park and I have been to many different theme parks including Williamsburg, but I have never seen any production that is better than what you have.' So, the quality is there.

My father always told me, 'son, if you are going to buy something, buy it good; because it is going to be value for money in the long term.'

The main contract between government and CHRM includes a provision to allow CHRM to subcontract specialist elements of the project. The ministry met with the chairman of the Central Tenders Committee and fully explained the reasons for the recommended selections and subsequently made a submission to Executive Council seeking approval to hire Steve Shaw as a sub-contractor to CHRM to produce and set up the multimedia show. With this approval, CHRM then subcontracted with Steve Shaw along with eleven other sub-consultants to provide the service specified. These consultants include (and there is a whole slew of them here): Dennis St. Louis, Rod Huggins, Daniel Corvel, John Silvern, J. Doak, Mat Morris, David Busereat, Bill Greaves, David Russell of ARA, and Mat Lisage of Globalmic.

Steve Shaw also had a series of sub-consultants working for him including the actor of script and story line, a prop manager, the musical director as well as actors from Canada and Cayman.

Hal Calman (one of the CHRM principals) wrote the first version of the storyline and was very involved with the development of the final script. Beg Stanley and Dr. Busereat (and I am a little unsure that I am pronouncing this correctly) carried out research and managed sub-consultants, located archival data at archives in Cayman, Jamaica, Washington, Chicago, England and Spain. The material was used in a script and in the multimedia production.

John Doak and Jeff Huggins participated in the development of the storyline and worked with Dennis St. Louis who designed the space in which the production is presented. Their fees were in addition to the contract already in place. The contract between the government and CHRM for the production and hardware totalled $611,800.

CHRM was responsible for the proper performance of the sub-contractors, and all payments for such services were made to CHRM directly and in accordance with the contract on submission of properly authenticated invoices.

The multimedia production required ongoing development. An interpretative script depicting the history of the Caymanian people took lengthy research and information gathering to facilitate this process. An advance payment was made to CHRM in the amount of $150,000. The hardware component was awarded separately throughout competitive tender. The fees for the exhibit and the interpretation were for the exhibits and the interpretative programme and were separate from the multimedia production.

The report claimed that the Audit Office experienced difficulty in obtaining the appropriate information requested from the project manager. However, the ministry was told by CHRM that the Auditor General's Office was provided with a complete breakdown of fees and expenses and a list of subcontractors who were paid through the global contract between CHRM and government.

Madam Speaker, there was a document in August 1995 that really breaks down this cost and shows how all these persons that I have mentioned fit into the picture. The multimedia budget (the length of the multimedia should be fifteen minutes), the pre-production which is the planning, briefing outline, research, write, translation version and visuals and transcribe other miscellaneous items was $21,200.

Art design and graphics, which is the creative design, storyboard, art and graphics and stock shots amounted to $14,200. The shooting, meaning the photography, location scout, the camera, the videographer, the sound, the lighting, the assistance, the video tape shots (and we have the individual listings of dollar figures here but I don't want to cloud the whole thing with numbers), the crew expense, the set signs and props, the costumes, the makeup, the photography, the film and processing, the helicopter rental, catering, location expenses, vehicle rental and intercom adds up to $65,200.

Then the video post production, the time code burning, the logging, the online edit (one and two), computer graphics, titles, animation, motion control, online edit, special effects, optical duplication, supplies. Those items amount to $50,600.

The talent, principals, the secondary, the extra, the voice-over and the characters—$21,200.

The creative side of this exercise: the director, the production assistance—the cost of that for the creative, $44,000.

The soundtrack which deals with the recording studio, the original music, the music director, the recording studio music, the musicians, the production, the mix, the surround sound, the lay back and the supplies—$47,000.

The multimedia, the media design, the hardware design, the hardware test software, programming, test laser disc pressing, the show running, the laser disc mastering, shipping to site, hardware installation, equalisation on site, the site running—$36,400. I am going through this deliberately because we need to understand the full effect of this multimedia exercise. The hardware, project system, audio system, control system, the lighting, the miscellaneous hardware, the labour, special effects and additional effects. Those items total $235,000.

Administrative: the producer, the production manager, the travel involved, the shipping, the long distance calls—$77,000. All of these items that I have mentioned total $611,800 but it does not include the taxes and import duties on these items as well as it would not include the usual mark-up by CHRM. The Pedro pro-video budget, there is another item here for the research and the right and miscellaneous, this $2,300. There is the art design graft, which is the creative design there—$600. Location shoot, videography and the sound—$1,200. The audio, the recording studio, the music, the production, the mix, the layback, and supplies—$14,500.

The production, time code burning, off limit edit, online edit, computer graphics, duplication, supplies—$4,500. The talent on camera, voiceover—$400. The creative director—$4,400 and this adds up to another $16,850. The taxes and import duties are not included.

Madam Speaker, Steve Shaw subcontract causes him to be responsible to CHRM, and therefore to the government. So, we have to hold CHRM for any inadequacy in the production of the multimedia as is the normal case with most projects.

May I go on to mention that this project is a special project, a unique project, a project that is seeking to restore and to create simultaneously—restore the building with all of its detail as accurately as possible, and simultaneously from the multimedia point of view to create to create on a document which is now 24 minutes not 15 minutes—a documentary that fits the Pedro St. James into the environment of the Cayman Islands and the Cayman Islands into an environment of the Caribbean in the 1780s. I believe that having seen this multimedia show that we have created a masterpiece of work in its entirety.

Madam Speaker, signage was another item (let's call it the interpretation contract). It was another area that the historic sites committee was diligent and going through tedious details to ensure that the signage was respectful and high quality to the era of 1780s. By the time they finished with the designs of it, we came to the conclusion that it makes more sense to allow this exercise to continue with CHRM rather than we go out to tender because we might end up with a greater cost. CHRM produced these signs off island, in Canada, to try to achieve the best possible price for them.

Having completed that portion of the project, I don't see how members can talk about trade and business licences. For what purpose? A trade and business licence to produce a sign in Canada? A trade and business licence to collect furniture around the Cayman Islands? He was originally hired as a consultant to the government. Is there a need for a trade and business licence? Never before has it happened. But we know what this motion is all about—this motion is about politics.

This motion is about Thomas Jefferson. This motion is about elections in November 2000 and this motion is about seeing how they can damage Thomas Jefferson's image, for the populace in West Bay, in particular.

From the time I heard the call from the Auditor General who was then at Pedro St. James in March 1999 that the Chairman of the Public Accounts Committee had called him and said to him, "There are irregularities out there. Go out and check this out." From the time I heard that . . . and I have some understanding of how an Auditor General will react to that kind of statement—like a bull to a red flag. In normal cases, he is going to go out and turn over every little rock and gravel trying to find something because of the substance of the person, supposedly, who asked him to go there.

That's when I decided, 'look out Thomas Jefferson. Is it politics? Boy, November 2000 is here. They are going to find a way to fix your wagon.'

Pedro Castle, part of it came in a lot closer to the estimate. Actually, the Pedro Castle restoration . . . and all of us know when you start restoring something, you have no way of knowing when you pull that piece of board what you are going to find when you do that. When you start dealing with a stone wall or a stone core of a building that has been there since 1780, you don't know what the strength is until you really begin to deal with it. But the restoration was estimated at $887,000 and it came in at $1.2 million. The visitor's centre part of it, which was estimated at $1.1 million, came in at $2.3 million—double the amount. There is no question on that one. No question at all. I wonder why.

I received on March 10th a letter from John Stewart of CHRM actually talking about the 1997 Auditor General's Report. He said, "At your request [which was my request] I have reviewed excerpts of the Report of the Auditor General 1997 supplied to me by the Ministry and have prepared the following comments. The response focuses on Section 4.35 of the report pages 82-83. The report, to say the least, is misleading. Many of the comments are unsubstantiated, and a number of the statements are half-truths and many are factually incorrect. I realise the criticisms are directed towards you [meaning Thomas Jefferson] and your ministry.

"As many of the references also implicate Commonwealth I have passed the report on to legal counsel requesting their assessment of the situation. It is Commonwealth's opinion that if this document is made public and presented to the legislature in its present form Commonwealth will have no other recourse than to sue the Cayman Islands Government for libel.

"These comments that follow are in response to specific points and should be read in conjunction with Section 4.35 pages 82-83." He is talking about—"Many of the financial records including tenders, bills and purchase commitments are held by the consultant in Canada and are not available to support the audit of payments charged to the Minister's votes." I am reading directly from the Auditor General's Report on page 82, section 4.35.

"The main concerns are as follows: Point 1: 'Project financial records are inadequate and confusing.'"

Mr. John Stewart says, "This is not true. Commonwealth prepared and made available on an ongoing basis financial records. At our meeting with the Auditor's office on 4 March 1999 . . . claimed never to have seen any of the financial summaries. Throughout the course of the project both the Ministry and Commonwealth prepared progress reports on a regular basis. As well, year-end reports for both the Pedro and Botanic were prepared from 1995, 1996 and up until July 1997. A complete set of these reports was turned over to Max Jones PWD when he assumed the project management role.

"Each contract was supported by progress reports, summaries listing all invoices and addenda to contracts. These reports are updated on a regular basis. A full set of these reports were turned over to PWD."

He goes on, "Point 2: 'Technical and financial oversight of restoration.' As an outside consultant I can comment on this only as it operated and to state that compared to other projects we are involved in there was a very good system of oversight in place. There was a technical committee for each project with representation on the respective Committee by the Ministry. Commonwealth reported to these committees and took direction from them in technical matters . . . Budget for each aspect of the project were prepared and submitted to the respective committees before being approved by the Ministry. BCQS (Botanic) and Victor Warring JEC Quantity Surveyors (Pedro) prepared the cost estimates.

"The original cost estimate was prepared in 1993 and was used as a basis for proceeding with the project. The estimates were updated in 1996 and again in 1997 at the request of CDB.

"Point 3: 'The consultant in Canada holds many of the financial records including Tenders.' This statement is misleading and implies that Commonwealth is withholding records. To be more accurate, copies are held by Commonwealth. The original tenders, bids, minutes and invoices are with the Steering Committees, Ministry, Customs, PWD and Treasury. Invoices could not be paid without original receipts; goods could not be brought into the country without original documentation. We have records to prove that over the course of the contract we have supplied five (5) full sets of all documents and financial records.

"Point 4: 'The main consultant was appointed on a non-competitive bid.' The statement is incorrect, as is the statement that the fee represents 25% of the project costs [and I spoke about that earlier]. The contract for services was awarded through an international competition. There were 51 submissions; the committee selected 5 companies to submit tenders. The terms of Reference called for a three-phase submission (1. Research, 2. Feasibility, and 3. Implementation). The then Minister of Tourism Mr. Boddin, awarded and signed a contract based on the committee's recommendation.

"The National Trust of Cayman Islands managed the first two phases of the project. The Ministry, at the Historic Sites Steering Committee's request, managed the three-phase implementation. The development plan was used as a basis of work. It was presented to the Legislative Assembly and an approval to proceed was given by Executive Council.

"Our fee proposal was based on the approved plan. Under the terms of the Implementation Phase, the fees and expenses represent the cost of services to project manage both Pedro and Botanic. Our fees for design and project management for the combined projects are approximately 10.5% not 25% as stated in the auditor's report.

"Commonwealth became involved with Botanic while working on the Pedro Project. Commonwealth was one of the three firms who submitted tenders. The contract was awarded initially to Judith Parker. She withdrew and it was then awarded to Margaret Barwick. She did not feel she could manage a project of this scope at which point we were asked to take it over.

"Point 5: 'The Consultant was awarded six non-competitive contracts.' This statement is inaccurate. The furniture contract was tendered. The cost was prohibitive and Commonwealth was asked to act as agent for direct purchases. This was discussed with CDB and they initially agreed to reimburse for artefacts purchased and expenses. They outlined a procedure, which had been followed in Barbados. We used a consultant Claudette Shaw to frame the project, locate some of the pieces, and provide curatorial services. This project was further complicated by the fact that the National Museum would not allow Commonwealth to purchase antiques from the Cayman Islands.

"Landscape was tendered with the exception of the labour component. The contract was tendered, part going to EMS Landscaping, part to Crawford Dilbert, and the purchase of the material and plants to DDM Horticulture.

"The Supervision and Labour was not tendered. The Ministry and the Botanic Park Steering Committee wanted to ensure that trained gardeners were available to carry on the ongoing maintenance once the project was completed. Commonwealth agreed to supervise, direct and provide training. Major components such as installation of an irrigation system were taken on, as were clearing, building paths, the construction of lake, the traditional Caymanian stonewall, and the planting of material shipped from Miami under the DDM contract.

"In discussion with Caribbean Development Mr. Lawrence suggested that a similar system be put in place for Pedro. He agreed to cover off-the-shelf purchases for plant material and all tendered services. The cost of labour would be CI Government responsibility.

"The Multimedia Contract was tendered and the Steve Shaw bid submitted to Government as were components including the hardware contract that went to Globalmic. Commonwealth's role as research and facilitator was not tendered but was taken on as an extension of the original project management contract. The interpretative contract was not tendered [and that is the signage we talked about].

"Point 6: [Certain payments against these contracts are not consistent is the point he is now referring to]. CHRMs is not clear as to what point 6 is referring. The only Contract that has been brought to Commonwealth's attention is landscaping. We received a letter dated February 1999 asking for additional information that we are providing. The information was initially provided to Max Jones PWD. At our meeting in the Auditor's Office, March 4, 1999, we were told that none of this information was passed on. Max Jones claimed that the Auditor's office had taken away all of the documents supplied by Commonwealth.

“Point 7: ‘The Audit’s Office considers that Government’s interests were not adequately protected through contracting with a small company.’ This comment is absurd. Commonwealth is an established firm, which has been in business since 1984. Commonwealth is involved in contracts in the Caribbean valued at more than $40 million. We own property in the Cayman Islands and continue to provide services to other clients using the Cayman Registered Company. For promotion and marketing reasons the Cayman office and an international company were incorporated. It was at the recommendation of the government that the contract was awarded to the Cayman company. I would like to know who provided this information. It was my impression that it was confidential.

“Your concern about difficulty in recovering excess or inappropriate payments is, as you know moot. The Cayman Islands is and has been notorious for not paying its accounts. Many of the problems related to this project can be traced directly to chronic failure to meet obligations. In accordance with our contract Commonwealth is entitled to interest on unpaid invoices. At the present time there are accounts outstanding since 1996. At this date—six months after the project was completed—we are still owed in excess of $175,000 CI in fees and expenses plus interest on unpaid accounts totalling more than $75,000.

“Point 8: ‘The service of the main consultant was terminated in 1997.’ Commonwealth services were not terminated. We continued to provide services up until the completion of the project and the grand opening. The management of the visitor centre construction was taken over by PWD. All other aspects of Commonwealth’s contract were continued.

“The second point that considerable investigation effort is underway. It is Commonwealth’s understanding that responsibility for the investigation effort rested with the Ministry of Tourism who is also responsible for PWD. Commonwealth has continued to work closely with the Ministry responding to questions in full disclosure of all material related to contract issues and invoices approved for payment.

“Point 9: ‘A major problem in obtaining compensation from Caribbean Development Bank.’ It is Commonwealth’s understanding that with the exception of the Furniture Contract all aspects for which compensation was sought have been approved.

“This is the first historic site that the CDB has financed. Their rules and regulations are inadequate for dealing with the specialised nature and unique requirements of a restoration project. When dealing with the development of a country’s cultural resources the criteria are more different than building an airport. To apply the same rules and at the same time protect resources and respect to community is, as we found out, an impossible task. How do you tender the purchase of one-off artefacts? How do you protect an archaeological site while at the same time undertaking landscape construction? These are the safeguards, which Commonwealth provided as part of our services—historical accuracy and respect for the integrity of the site’s history.

“A case in point is that during the construction of the visitor centre a major archaeological deposit relating to the historic site was bulldozed without any effort or acknowledgement to document the remains. For PWD and CDB this was not an important consideration and as a result the Cayman Islands lost an opportunity to learn more about their premiere historic site.

“Similarly, when the Watler House was moved onto the property, no as-found records were prepared and when the footings were installed the building was set 1½ inches above its original grade. Which means the building is too high and as a result the public will receive incorrect information about this historic building being interpreted as a restored Caymanian house.”

That was the end of the letter, Madam Speaker.

The Deputy Speaker: Honourable Minister, could I ask you to lay a copy of that on the Table? When the Serjeant-at-Arms comes back, he can do a copy.

Hon. Thomas C. Jefferson: Certainly.

The Deputy Speaker: Honourable Minister, is this your original copy? Could we have the Serjeant-at-Arms photocopy it so that a copy can be laid on the Table?

Hon. Thomas C. Jefferson: Madam Speaker, when we came to the end of this exercise (and many toes have been stepped on, including John Stewart’s) I was asked to help talk to Mr. Stewart and to see if we could finalise the accounts of Pedro St. James with CHRM.

There was a point when (as we read in the letter) Mr. Stewart was seriously thinking about taking legal action. Mr. Jones who was then the Project Manager for the visitor’s centre, who was trying to finalise these accounts with CHRM, did call and ask me to assist in the process. He did that in a memorandum to me.

In one of the paragraphs, he said, “Prior to the conference call, the Permanent Secretary for Tourism, Minister Jefferson, and Max Jones agreed that it was essential that these contracts be settled without resorting to legal action.” This was written by Mr. Jones of Public Works.

“Government’s position in any legal proceeding would be weak as the original project management contract was based on the Botanic Park project and the Pedro Castle project proceeding concurrently. The decision to use CDB’s funding delayed the start of the Pedro Castle project and subsequently the two projects did not proceed concurrently. In any legal proceeding, it is most likely that CHRM’s council would request that as the project management con- tract was not carried out as intended that it be evaluated as two separate project management contracts. This would likely prove successful and much more expensive to Government than CHRM's current claim. Hence it is essential to settle the CHRM contract at as low a price as possible while bearing in mind the above."

We were successful in settling that claim to the satisfaction of Public Works and CHRM.

One member made a remark about the length of time before this motion was debated. The rationale is because the Auditor General was still carrying out his work and we thought it was fair to allow him to finish his work so that we see whether there is any substance to the many remarks on the marl road as well as innuendoes about irregularities.

Having been at the site since March 1999 (and I am not trying to say that he was physically sitting there from that period of time but he had it under his examination since March 1999), which is a year ago. I haven't heard any evidence to proceed on criminal matters, and I would have thought that if there was evidence that it would have shown up by now. But I can go on to say too, Madam Speaker, that while he carries out his exercise now or in the future, if it is evidence on Thomas Jefferson's dishonesty he is looking for, he should not waste his time. He will never find it.

I know there are people walking around Grand Cayman, particularly in West Bay but they venture to George Town sometimes too, making all sorts of wild accusations about what went on at Pedro St. James and trying to pinpoint and cloud the public's mind that fraud has been created. The Auditor General has not found any evidence after a year. But this is all tied up with some other matters and it is wholly political. It is nothing to do with the minister not believing that he is accountable or the minister believing that he should not be questioned. That is not the point. I have been in here answering questions for a long time and I know that when you reach the top, you are going to get criticism. I know that when you stick your nose out and say that you are going to be in politics, there is one way they damage you and that is to spread rumours that speak to your integrity and try to cloud the minds of the public about your integrity.

Madam Speaker, there are a lot of people spreading these rumours. I am not pinpointing anybody at this particular time. I think if we are all listening I would say initially it is happening in West Bay and sometimes it wanders up to George Town. I don't think you need to be an Einstein to figure out what I am talking about. But it happens in Bodden Town too because I have heard it from Bodden Town people. Those who are speaking the loudest, making the wild statements about irregularities and fraud . . . you know, if you live in a glass house you should not be throwing any stones.

The financial side of Pedro St. James, or should I say the Tourism Attraction Board which also includes Botanic Park . . . the financial statements are not to the end of December. Actually, this was done some months ago. The asset value of what we have at Botanic Park and Pedro has now been reconciled subject to the views of the Auditor General, so that we are now in a position with his agreement to table the financial position of the Tourism Attraction Board. Yesterday I made reference to the fact that we are beginning to move into the cruise ship tour packages on land. We have a number of tour operators that are bringing visitors to Pedro as well as to the Botanic Park and we see this number.

I remember when we tried to do this with the Turtle Farm. People were not certain it would happen, but there was a little trickle, and the trickle went forward to a bigger trickle and finally we reached the stage where the total number is now a number that people respect. The same thing will happen with Pedro St. James, I have no doubt about that.

I know too that the operation at Pedro St. James, which is under my Permanent Secretary, who is the temporary General Manager . . . and we are working closely with the staff at Pedro St. James as well as the Botanic Park. We will do whatever it takes giving fair play to all staff and dealing in a professional manner with the way forward with this statutory authority, the Tourism Attraction Board, to ensure that we make a success of this project.

I believe we have a golden opportunity. I certainly believe the fallout on this that has been going on for the last year is not any help to the project. I am not suggesting that any matter be stifled, but I think common sense dictates that when you have a project that becomes a political football it damages the operation of the project. In every department, there are weaknesses. In every statutory authority, there are weaknesses. And when you put it under the political microscope each person picks out that portion that he or she wants to make an issue out of and therefore dampens the attractive image of the project to the public.

I know that I could really take issue with many of the things that were said here and really get personal about it. I think sometimes when we make wild statements without facts—when they say that Steve Shaw's buddy of CHRM, Mr. John Stewart, was not a man of integrity—I think they should make these statements outside of the House where they have no immunity and let's see what happens. I will bet that they end up in court and I have serious doubt that they have the facts to back it up.

I have no axe to grind for or against Mr. Stewart. Some people would say, 'you didn't answer my question when I asked whether this organisation and this individual, John Stewart, was investigated in the early days.' I cannot answer about the early days. I wasn't here in the early days when they selected him. But I can tell this House and the public of this country that I have investigated and there is no evidence of him doing anything wrong. Yet, some people say I am gullible. But I guess they have to say something. It is all politics, Madam Speaker.

You know, when you think about the Cayman Islands and you look at the political history of it, even if you go back over the last thirty years from 1972 coming forward, most of the people who lost the election, lost it by some politician damaging his or her name in the public. That's how they lose it in the majority of cases. This motion in my view is seeking to do just that about Thomas Jefferson. I think quite frankly that some people should not have perhaps entertained the wish of somebody else to put this motion here.

Madam Speaker, I think I have covered all of the matters I wanted to cover. I believe I have taken the time to try to answer in a chronological way beginning from September 1990 and moving forward on this project. I believe I have indicated the painstaking methodology used in moving forward on this historic project—this unique important project—to get it right for the people of the Cayman Islands so that what we have is something that represents the building that was constructed in 1680.

I believe, Madam Speaker, that if you look at projects of this complexity and magnitude, you will find something that didn't go right. I believe at this particular time that is also true of Pedro. But a lot of this is really history. We are dealing with 1997 and 1998 and we have looked at invoices. We have called for additional back-up information. According to Mr. Stewart, he has supplied it and I do not know what else will help to clarify matters further.

I believe we have ended up with a project with a construction cost of $6.9 million, which includes the project management fees of CHRM. And when you build the other items into the exercise—construction, interest due on construction, commitment fees and the cost of the land, it is now reconciled to be $8.2 million of a project that was estimated at $8.7 million. I believe that we have done well and I, therefore, now end my contribution or response to this private member's motion.

The Deputy Speaker: Proceedings will be suspended until 2.15 p.m.

PROCEEDINGS RESUMED AT 2.55 PM

The Deputy Speaker: Please be seated. Proceedings are resumed. Debate continues on Private Member's Motion No. 6/2000 as amended. Does any other Member wish to speak? The Honourable Minister responsible for Community Affairs.

Hon. Julianna O'Connor-Connolly: Thank you, Madam Speaker. First, let me apologise to you and all other honourable members for the poor quality of my voice. Nonetheless, I deem it necessary to speak on this debate so I trust that I will have your full indulgence throughout. Thank you.

Like most other honourable members in this Parliament, I now rise to give my contribution in respect of Private Member's Motion No. 6/2000 as amended, which as we have all heard deals with the investigation into the Pedro St. James construction project account.

Madam Speaker, you would be fully aware of the fact that the Auditor General Report, that is the 1997 Report, included an interim report dealing with the Pedro St. James Project. In that report it's a given factor that the Pedro St. James is a major new tourism attraction, which the Ministry of Tourism sought to develop as part and parcel of the tourism product even from the time when Mr. Norman Bodden was responsible for the Ministry of Tourism.

Back in 1991 (that is about some nine years ago) the former government purchased the piece of property as an initial step towards developing this as a tourism project and subsequent to that they established a Historic Sites Committee. As I understand it, the main function of the Historic Sites Committee was to oversee the Pedro St. James project.

I also believe that there are many historical values of the Pedro St. James project and from as early as 1780, we see that the Pedro Castle (as it was then referred to) served for many different purposes and functions. For example, history reveals to us that it was used as a meeting place, a prison, a pound, and even a court house, and at times, a restaurant and a spell as a private residence.

Madam Speaker, if one would turn their attention to page 81 of the 1997 Auditor General's Report, the Auditor General states, "Through restoration and modern use, the property [that is, the Pedro St. James property] will provide a legacy for future generations." So, Madam Speaker, there is absolutely no doubt in my mind that the restoration of Pedro St. James was and still is an important move and an important tourism product. Indeed not only this present generation but future generations that come will be able to see the significance of this project not only from a historical perspective but also that because it is one of the most beautiful tourism products in the region.

Presently, Madam Speaker, Pedro St. James, as I understand it, is managed by the Tourism Attraction Board. And, like all other government departments it is subject to an annual audit and I am sure the Auditor General would do likewise with this project, as he has just done. However, having said that, with any large project, especially new projects, it involves an element of financial risks as many of the financial presumptions are used to come to a financial analysis—and they are just that, Madam Speaker, they are presumptions. Some indeed are refutable. But we all know that nothing ventured is nothing gained.

As I understand it, the main concern appears to surround the restoration contract of the Pedro St. James Project. Initially, the Auditor General on page 82 of the 1997 Report made the presumption that the final cost was in the region of $9.5 million. One must however appreciate that this is a mere estimate and by the fact that he chose to use the terminology "appears" tells me that this was not a statement of fact. But he utilised the information he had at the time, and, given the circumstances, made an estimate or presumption with such information. Therefore, it is my respectful view that one cannot justify using the figure of $9.5 million as being edged in stone for the total project cost in the absence of other concrete information.

The Minister of Tourism has just concluded his contribution, as have other honourable members, and I believe many facts have been brought out on both sides of the argument.

As I understand from what the Permanent Secretary of the Ministry of Tourism said in a recent PAC Meeting, the figure (that is the total or the final project cost figure) when rounded off is some $8.2 million. It is also my understanding that the restoration part of the project rested with the Ministry of Tourism and the Historic Sites Management Committee. So, it was a combined effort and not the minister in isolation.

We also see, on page 82 of the Auditor General's Report, where he says, "In hindsight it is evident that the ministry personnel were untrained and ill-equipped to deal with such a complex project." This tells me two things: firstly, the words "in hindsight" gives rise to the presumption that no reasonable foresight of the Auditor General's findings and/or allegations by the two entities responsible for technical and financial oversight of the restoration element could be entertained. And, secondly, that the Auditor General clearly stated that the project was such a complex project.

In my view, these are two very crucial and important issues. In fact, they are independent circumstances or evidence that one should give the full consideration of prior to concluding that there is a lack of confidence in the honourable Minister responsible for Tourism.

I also believe that the following question should perhaps be posed by all and sundry. That is, firstly, did the minister and/or the ministry take reasonable steps to solicit assistance with this project taking into account that it was a new, large and complex project? And, if so, was this contract put out to bid? It is my understanding that it was deemed necessary to contract with a consultant, who apparently was a specialist in this particular field, that is, in the area of restoration. In fact, this contract was tendered, if my information is correct.

It appears that the consultant then evolved into the role of a contractor as well. And on page 83 of the 1997 Auditor General's Report, which again, in my view, he is a capable individual with equally capable staff, and even he admits, and I quote, "This is a highly complex area and the Audit Office has engaged specialists assistance to advice on the interpretation and execution of certain contracts."

Madam Speaker, one of the main attractions at the Pedro St. James project is the multimedia theatre and according to the 1998 Auditor General's Report, this multimedia production contract was also put out to tender. And, as a result, a company by the name of Steve Shaw Production (SSP) was awarded the contract. This was approved by Executive Council for the SSP to become a subcontractor of the CHRM.

Madam Speaker, on page 42 it also becomes quite evident that it was agreed that CHRM would be held liable. Let me repeat this: Page 42 of the Auditor General's Report says that "CHRM would be held liable for proper performance of the subcontractor and that payments for services would be made directly to CHRM." So, here we see a situation whereby a main contractor and a subcontractor are evolving and, therefore, according to law there then arose no privity of contract between the subcontractor and the Ministry of Tourism, and indeed the Minister of Tourism. Therefore, any transactions between the subcontractor and a main contractor . . . there is a confidential nature based on the Law of Contract that the veil of incorporation cannot be so pierced unless there is evidence beyond all reasonable doubt for a court or an arbitrary body to so order.

Madam Speaker, the subcontractual relationship was the sole responsibility of CHRM. This entity, in my view, was responsible for the day-to-day management or the day-to-day affairs of the project—and not the ministry nor the honourable minister.

If I could deal briefly now with the direct labour agreement that we heard quite a bit of mention about in the various contributions to this private member's motion as amended. We see that on page 43 of the 1998 Auditor General's Report, paragraph 3.6 says, ". . . the Caribbean Development Bank suggested that a similar arrangement be put in place for Pedro St. James." That is, as it relates to the trained gardeners who were available to carry out the ongoing maintenance. Similarly, they were referring to what had been put in place at the Botanical Park in the eastern part of Grand Cayman.

Again, we see that CHRM agreed to supervise, to direct, and to provide training—and not the minister. This therefore, in my view, created a fiduciary relationship between CHRM and the subcontractor. Therefore, I would submit that CHRM had a duty to act at all material times in the best interest of the ministry, the minister, and indeed the entire Cayman Islands Government.

Madam Speaker, before this honourable House can resolve to record any lack of confidence in the honourable minister, I would put forward that careful analysis must in fact be carried out first to ascertain who was responsible for the direct handling of the Pedro St. James Project. I believe that there is evidence in the Auditor General's 1998 report that the cost of the labour contract was government's sole responsibility. But let us take time to look and see what the Auditor General says about this direct labour report since this is one area that we can say solely rests on the responsibility therein.

On page 43 of the 1998 Report, he says, "A direct labour scheme seems to have been a very good approach and one which, in the circumstances, offered several advantages over a conventional tendered contract, including [these were the advantages] flexibility, training and potential cost reduction."

He further went on to state that the audit office is fully satisfied that the gardeners on the project were paid at the specified rate and that the auditors were also satisfied that the work paid for was actually performed.

So, we see here an example where the ministry had direct responsibility and the Auditor General clearly and categorically makes two very important statements of fact: first, that in the circumstances, the direct labour contract was a very important one and one that should have been done. And also he found that the work was indeed carried out and the funds paid were in keeping with established current rates at the time.

What is also of utmost importance is also borne out on page 43 of the said 1998 Auditor General's Report. It notes that one salaried officer was paid through the direct labour contract. One may ask why this is a significant factor. In my view, because prima facie this could be perceived as an element of mismanagement. I wanted to see who would be ultimately responsible so I took the time to look very closely at what steps or conclusions the Auditor General came to at this particular point in his report.

We see that on page 43, the Auditor General states, "The consultant/contractor was invited to provide an explanation . . ." It was not the ministry and it was not the minister who was invited to provide an explanation. I have to agree with the course that the Auditor General took at that particular instance because he had a legitimate expectation and he in turn called upon the person who he deemed responsible to give a response and that was the consultant/contractor.

Further, Madam Speaker, we see in the Auditor General's report that he gives confirmation that they (meaning the audit office) have provided full details of the cost uplift to the Ministry of Tourism who agreed to investigate this matter. This small piece of circumstantial evidence tells me that the ministry and the Minister of Tourism therefore cannot be deemed to be persons or a legal entity where one would want to express a lack of confidence if a matter is brought to their attention by the Auditor General and he confirms in the same report. So, there is no question of credibility because it is that same report that allegations are being derived therefrom—the same author of the report has said unequivocally that the Ministry of Tourism has agreed to investigate this matter.

Someone that has no credibility or takes no time to ensure that things are done above the board would not be anxious or would not confirm that they were willing to investigate the matter, and this cannot be said on behalf of the Ministry of Tourism. This is evidence that the ministry is responsible and they are prepared to act within the ambit of fairness and indeed accountability.

On page 45, we also see that it was the duty of the consultant/contractor to provide a budget and the report tells us that a report was in fact provided in March 1999. Apparently, this report had a number of apparent mistakes and, again, the Auditor General sought clarification from the responsible party—that is, the consultant. There is absolutely no inference, direct or otherwise, that the Auditor General sought clarification or response from the Ministry or the Minister. It clearly says that he sought it from the consultant/contractor.

This, in my view, was also confirmed by the Ministry of Tourism that the contract between CHRM required the consultant—and not the ministry—to maintain clear financial records for both parties. So, the functions are clearly set out. There is no clouding of the functions or the roles and the Auditor General being a man of high calibre himself has quickly picked up on the functions and, therefore, has gone straight to the accountability and the persons so accountable.

On page 47, we see the Auditor General also in his 1998 report saying (and I quote), "Ministry personnel did not at any time assume the role of project manager. This [he says] was the responsibility of CHRM who were responsible for certifying invoices for payment. The Ministry personnel relied upon CHRM's certification of invoices, as did the Treasury Department." That is why you hire a consultant, Madam Speaker, for such specialist advice.

The Auditor General further went on to say that it would not have been practical for the ministry officials including the Minister of Tourism to physically check the delivery of goods and services to the sites against the contractor/consultant invoices. I believe that this statement is extremely important and also because it is an independent statement, it is not merely coming from the Minister of Tourism or even from a government minister, it is coming from the Auditor General himself. I have every confidence in him, let me just say that at this stage.

Having said that, I truly believe that had the Auditor General had any reason to believe that the ministry or the Minister of Tourism was responsible for the certification of invoices he would have said so. More importantly, if he felt that they were involved in any criminal activities he would have asked the honourable Attorney General to consider the facts with a view of commencing criminal investigations and/or prosecution. Has this been done, Madam Speaker? I say no.

Attention should also be given, I believe, to page 49 of the Auditor General's Report. He says, "The consulting contract contains clear directives with regard to the financial management, tendering and contracting of the works, which do not appear to have been adhered to. The consultant [not the Minister] has not followed the established financial management procedures required to adhere to the terms of the contract and to administer the works with the diligence required by the Employer."

Who is the employer, Madam Speaker? It's the Ministry of Tourism. And here we see, again in black and white, evidence that the ministry and the minister required diligence to be carried out by the main contractor/consultant. Again, nothing here talks about the ministry or the minister having to administer the Pedro St. James Project. The onus therefore, in my respectful view, is clearly upon the consultant/contractor.

The Auditor General in dealing with the role of the ministry, which I thought was an important and necessary function to carry out, stated on page 51 of the 1998 Report, "Ministry personnel appear to have acted in good faith throughout." As other speakers have pointed out, from the beginning to the end the Auditor General was fully satisfied that the ministry's personnel acted in good faith throughout. I don't think that one could ask for a much better attestation from a man of the Auditor General's calibre.

Madam Speaker, can this honourable House then in good honesty resolve to record a lack of confidence in the Minister of Tourism for the handling of the project when in the very Auditor General's Report—which has been heavily relied on to try to prove the allegations—is a statement which says, "Ministry personnel appear to have acted in good faith throughout"?

The Auditor General concluded by saying, "In hindsight [as we all know hindsight provides us with the opportunity of 20/20 vision but we do not live in a perfect world], independent expertise should have been secured in order to monitor the contractor/consultant performance to enforce compliance with the terms of the various contracts and ensure that Government's interests were safeguarded."

I believe here that the operative words are 'in hindsight.' This tells me that the Auditor General was not of the opinion that any actions or indeed inaction on the part of the ministry or the minister were foreseeable and cannot be held to be intentional. Therefore, Madam Speaker, in order for one to record a lack of confidence in the honourable Minister of Tourism, I submit that they must prove beyond all reasonable doubt that he, himself, mishandled the Pedro St. James Project.

The answer to this is clear in the Auditor General's Report (that is, his 1998 report) when he makes specific reference that the ministry's personnel appeared to have acted in good faith throughout.

Madam Speaker, there is yet still another piece of concrete evidence which is borne out on page 55 of the 1998 Auditor General's Report (and I quote), "With the encouragement of the Hon. Minister of Tourism, the Audit Office has carefully reviewed the summary project cost information prepared by Public Works Department and performed a reconciliation to the Treasury general ledger as far as possible." Does this sound like someone who mismanaged the project? Or does it imply that such a person wants to see things right? It clearly states that this audit, this reconciliation was done with the encouragement of the minister.

In addition, according to the Auditor General's Report, which I believe is the report we can reliably refer to, I quote, "The Ministry of Tourism subsequently engaged a financial controller for the Tourism Attractions Board . . ." who we have heard is responsible for the management of Pedro St. James as well as the Botanical Park. Madam Speaker, to me this does not sound like a minister that you cannot put your confidence in.

There is much more that I could actually say if I was not having problems with my voice. I went to particular pains not to get into any personal elements of the motion because I believe that debate should not go there as far as I am concerned and I have no intention of going there. I tried to show that from the evidence as contained in the 1997 and 1998 Report that when one takes the time to look at the whole picture everything is not painted black. And I believe that we must look at all of the circumstances contained therein if we are going to make such a serious call a lack of confidence in any minister—the Minister of Tourism or otherwise. I am sure that all honourable ministers should know me well enough that if I am persuaded, regardless of collective responsibility, that any minister on this side has not conducted himself or herself in a proper perspective that I would be the first to ask His Excellency the Governor for permission to be removed from the collective responsibility to exercise a conscious vote. I did not deem it necessary in this particular instance and I felt it was my duty to stand up to contribute as to why I have arrived at that position.

Before taking my seat, Madam Speaker, I understand it's the birthday of the Honourable Minister of Tourism and I wish him a Happy Birthday. I thank you.

The Deputy Speaker: Does any other Member wish to speak? The Honourable Minister responsible for Health.

Hon. Anthony S. Edén: I would just like to make a few comments on this motion. As we all know extensive debate has taken place on this motion, which was first tabled in this Honourable House in June last year—almost one year ago.

The fifth WHEREAS section of the motion reads, "AND WHEREAS all reports thus far indicate mismanagement—

The Deputy Speaker: Honourable Minister, that has been amended to read, "are self-explanatory."

Hon. Anthony S. Edén: Thank you very much. I didn't have that part here with me. Anyway, most of this could have been based on that. I will say that what I have heard from the honourable minister in the last two days, the comprehensive approach that he has used, quite a bit of the information has been enlightening to me. As he pointed out, the firm CHRM was actually put in place before he took over the ministry.

Another area that he pointed out was that CHRM was not actually terminated as may have been suggested, but was in place until the official opening of Pedro Castle in 1998.

One other area that was cleared up was the area of the irrigation system, which, as was pointed out CDB actually suggested that they use a system similar to that which was used at Queen Elizabeth II Park. I must admit that when they spoke about the crabs cutting through, at that time I was under the assumption that it was a PVC type of fitting. I did not understand how that could happen. Now, that it has been pointed out that it was a rubber type of hose that does make sense.

The other area pointed out by the minister was that the ministry actually funded (to the tune of approximately $10,000) the Auditor General to look at the landscaping contract. I think that if it were anything that the ministry may have been concerned about, they would not have volunteered to offer these funds from within the ministry to try and get this resolved.

As was said earlier on, there was some concern, yes. But with what I have heard presented by the minister, I feel that he has vindicated himself of any possible misunderstanding or any other problem that may have developed while the construction was going on.

As was pointed out by a number of speakers when CDB did the estimate of $8.7 million . . . and the actual cost, which has now been reconciled to the $8.2 million. The project came in under the budget.

As a matter of fact, this was also reconciled through the assistance of Public Works and maybe when this information comes out, this will cast things in a different light than when the motion was done almost a year ago.

Madam Speaker, this Pedro Castle entertainment centre is in the district of Bodden Town, and I think all of us Bodden Towners are pleased to have such a wonderful facility that has provided a number of jobs for people from the district. I hope that as the situation evolves and goes forward, that it will be a profitable endeavour. And I feel it will be that as we go forward. As the ministry continues to do the promotion, it is just a year old and there is a degree of success that has taken place.

Madam Speaker, that is all I would like to say at this time.

The Deputy Speaker: Does any other member wish to speak? (Pause) If no other member wishes to speak, does the mover of the motion wish to exercise his right of reply? The First Elected member for the district of George Town.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Thank you, Madam Speaker.

Perhaps, Madam Speaker, as the Auditor General said during the last two of his annual reports with regard to the Pedro St. James construction project, in hindsight had the seconder and I realised that this motion would have allowed an opportunity for certain members of this honourable House to deal with many areas which are far outside the ambit of the motion, we might have crafted it in a totally different fashion.

So that I may feel comfortable in my doing what is called the 'winding-up' of the motion, I would like to seek permission from the outset to be able to refer to various statements made by every other member who has spoken on the motion. Perhaps it is best to deal with all of that first so as not to cloud my delivery. And when I am through with that, I will then sum up why I believe the motion was not ill founded, and why I believe the motion has merit.

Madam Speaker, the first person that I wish to refer to is the Minister of Education. And being the good leader of Government Business he is, he certainly set the tone immediately. As he started he said, and I quote: "Thank you, Madam Speaker. This motion before the House is one that is not well founded on facts. It is one that deals with a lot of suppositions and it is one that is aimed to directly attack the Minister of Tourism. That is the light that it has to be taken in."

So, from the very beginning, he made it very clear to his colleagues that his motion—regardless of what I may have said in presenting it—had to be taken in the light that it was a personal attack on the Minister of Tourism.

Madam Speaker, in my view, being the lawyer that he is, having the ability to twist everything the way he wishes it to be, the minister realises with a little bit of thought (that is, the Minister of Education) that the only way to reply to the motion and bear any fruit was to try to cloud the issue with other issues to divert the focus from what the motion was calling for—the things that he could wallow in and rub up in the way he usually does so that he would have something to say.

Now, if I or the seconder of this motion (and I think I can speak for him) wanted to gear the motion with any type of personal attack on the Minister of Tourism, the motion would not have been presented in this manner. By the . . .

Madam Speaker, I see the Minister for Agriculture is back, and all of the other ministers have spoken. Perhaps I need to pause and allow him to speak, if you would allow that.

The Deputy Speaker: Honourable First Elected Member, I gave every member in this Chamber an opportunity to debate this motion. I cannot at this time turn back to allow a member to speak. So would you continue with your debate, please?

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Thank you, I was just being generous at the time, but I kind of knew that it could not happen.

Anyway, as I was saying, the motion would not have been crafted in the manner it was, and we would not have gone to the pains that we did if the intent was to cast aspersions or make any direct attack on the minister. Let this be understood clearly: If it was my intention it would have meant that I felt it was justified to do it, and I would have done it. Here you have a bunch of individuals, either the blind leading the blind or some with blind loyalty who have simply taken what the Minister of Education said as a given, and that is how they have debated the motion.

Then, Madam Speaker, the worst one of all, I mean the absolutely worst one of all is for anyone in this Chamber or outside of the Chamber, any one of us as legislators to even think that there is anybody in this room that could either coerce or manipulate this fellow to bring a motion to suit their own means. He is sick bad in the head and it is either their memories are very short or they don't know where I come from or they don't remember how I got here.

I want to put this on record: when the seconder and I deliberated about this motion, it came as a direct result of what the first two Whereas sections in the motion relate to. They read:

"WHEREAS there is much public concern over the development costs of the Pedro St James project;

"AND WHEREAS many members of the public have approached some Legislators expressing concerns over these costs."

That is where it all started. When we were dealing with the motion at the very beginning, there was no other Member of this Parliament who had any hand in it. In fact, I am going to also go on record because I have nothing to hide . . . and not to cast aspersions at anyone, but I am going to go on record and categorically state that because the seconder and I were both aware of the political relationship between the First and Second Elected Members of the district of West Bay, we said, 'We want you to understand clearly if you take this motion, and because of the political adversity that exists, you use it in a manner that we deem to be unbecoming, on the floor on this honourable House we are going to disassociate ourselves from anything you might say in that manner.' That is the Bible's truth.

So, when I hear the Second Elected Member for Bodden Town—who has been coached by the Minister of Education in my view (because what she said was what he said) . . . let me tell you what she said. Obviously she knew what she was saying because she started by saying, "I rise to offer a short contribution to Private Member's Motion No. 6/2000 as amended, Investigation into the Pedro St. James Construction Project Account brought by the First Elected Member for George Town and seconded by the Third Elected Member for Bodden Town." She said a lot of things that in my view had no relevance to the motion. But that is her right if her emotions regarding the project . . . although as far as I am concerned it had nothing to do with the motion.

When she was nearly through, she said, "Madam Speaker, like everyone else, I clearly understand the intention of this motion. But one must realise that although some things have happened that should not have happened, there is no reason to doubt or question the integrity of the honourable Minister of Tourism, who is a very capable and professional man."

I want anyone to take any part of the Hansard where I as the mover presenting the motion or the seconder, the Third Elected Member from Bodden Town (who spoke on the motion), said anything that questioned the integrity of the Minister of Tourism.

There is no one in here or outside that I am going to accept any insinuations from when I know that is not my intention. Do not tell me what is in my heart. Whoever is penning these speeches should not only understand what "relevance" means but they should get their facts straight. That is what I have to say.

That same Second Elected Member for Bodden Town went on to say in closing, "Although this motion is to place doubts in the minds of the people of possible mismanagement by the honourable Minister of Tourism for the Pedro project, it is totally unfounded and unfair." There is the statement " . . . it is totally unfounded and unfair." I would think that when one makes statements of that nature, one would at least make a serious attempt to justify what one said. All that was talked about was who bought it and who sold it and nothing about what's fair or unfair.

The Deputy Speaker: Honourable Member if you are moving on to another point, is this a convenient time for the afternoon break?

Proceedings will be suspended for fifteen minutes.

PROCEEDINGS RESUMED AT 3.38 PM

The Deputy Speaker: Please be seated. Proceedings are resumed. The First Elected Member for the district of George Town continuing his debate on Private Member's Motion No. 6/2000 as amended.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: I want to take a few minutes now to look at some of the things said by the Minister of Education regarding this motion. I want to prove his convoluted style. He has this way of . . . I guess you would have to say it is not that he isn't telling the truth about anything, but he chooses to tell the parts he wishes to make his case with and leave the rest of the relevant information out. Perhaps, that goes with the profession. I don't know.

By the way, let me make it very clear, I was not casting aspersions at the profession when I spoke about the minister. That related only to him as an individual.

Madam Speaker, during the minister's lawyerly style of delivery, he hinged on three points that he considered to be the three main points which threw away all arguments beforehand and those that might come afterwards. Those three points are: (1) you have a contract that the Auditor General says is fair and reasonable to both parties; (2) you then have a relationship between the consultant and the ministry in which the ministry relied on the consultant; and (3) throughout that full time the ministry acted in good faith.

Just before he came to those three points he read from page 51 of the Auditor General's report of 1998 as follows: "The Auditor General states that, and I quote, 'Ministry personnel appeared to have acted in good faith throughout.'" He says, "what more can be asked of the Minister, his staff, and the Ministry of Tourism but to act in good faith throughout?"

Before I comment on that, let me remind everyone that when I was making my presentation at the very beginning of this motion, I read the same paragraph from that Auditor General's report, but I didn't just read that one sentence. I stopped at that one sentence and I went as far as to say that I would even have been prepared to take the word "appeared" out because I was satisfied that all concerned within the ministry acted in good faith throughout. That is not the question. I am satisfied with that. I am not questioning that.

The good faith and the actions of the ministry staff—including the minister—is not what I am questioning. I went to pains to make it very clear that I was not suggesting anything untoward with these actions. But he chooses to take that little line and make that statement and that clears the whole issue up because there was good faith. I know that. I believe that. I don't have any problems with that.

That entire paragraph reads as follows: "It is clear that both the Ministry of Tourism and Treasury personnel relied on the certification of contractor invoices by the main consultant, CHRM. As the role of CHRM changed from consultant to contractor, the role of the Ministry of Tourism became much more difficult. Due to the lack of proper oversight, the contractor seems to have been allowed to ignore obligations under the existing landscaping contract and was permitted to arrange subcontracts to execute the works. The Ministry continued to rely on the consultant certifying invoices for payment, including his own as the contractor [and I am going to take about that but I want to finish the paragraph]. Ministry personnel appear to have acted in good faith throughout."

But right after that, he qualifies his statement by saying, "However, as administrators, they did not possess the technical expertise necessary to deal with a project of this complexity. The consultant did not maintain appropriate financial records for the project as required and, as a result, the ministry found it difficult to exercise meaningful control over contract claims. In hindsight [several other members have quoted from this paragraph] independent expertise should have been secured in order to monitor the contractor/consultant's performance, enforce compliance with the terms of the various contracts and ensure that Government's interests were safeguarded."

Madam Speaker, when I made my presentation, I used this paragraph of the 1998 Auditor General's report to summarise the whole thrust of the argument. I want to take this paragraph right now and go through the sentences. I am now going to set the pace to explain why I still contend, having listened to everything everyone has said, that the motion has merit.

The truth of the matter is that I don't necessarily contend that I have a different opinion on the vast majority of what has been said. It is just that the vast majority plus three-quarters of the rest that has been said thus far trying to defend the position of the government is not addressing what the motion wants to address. They try to tie it in and come back and make logic out of what they are saying, but they have not addressed the thrust of my argument with the motion.

I am going to take this same paragraph now, take a few sentences one by one and explain where I am coming from then I will go on.

The Auditor General says, "It is clear that both the Ministry of Tourism and Treasury personnel relied on the certification of contractor invoices by the main consultant, CHRM." Let me explain what transpired because of that. The minister asked, 'where is the beef?' This is where my beef is, and I am going to explain it. Okay?

Let us take me, for example: I own a little company called Prestige Printers. On various occasions, I contract with the government to provide goods and services that my company does. I have a contract with Government Information Services to provide the Government Gazette. Whenever I am given a Gazette to do, I present a bill to Government Information Services. Now, for Treasury to pay that bill, Government Information Services has to check that what I am charging them for has been delivered to them.

They then certify my bill for payment to the Treasury because they have proven that I have delivered the goods at the price contracted for.

What happened in this situation, Madam Speaker, and this is where the real beef is. It is nothing to do with the Minister personally. Nothing to do with trying to—what did he say?—"dethrone Thomas Jefferson." I didn't even know he had a throne . . . anyway, it has nothing to do with that. I want to make the point, what was happening in this whole affair was that CHRM, who has been described in the documentation in front of me . . . by the way everything I have said before and I am going to say now is totally based on the documentation that I have.

So, CHRM as the "project manager/contractor" would send a bill from themselves and certify it themselves. Madam Speaker, listen to me carefully, if anyone doubts me they can test me anytime.

CHRM sent bills to the Ministry of Tourism and those bills on CHRM letterhead was certified by them to be true and correct. That is my beef! I am not questioning the good intentions and I am not suggesting that there was anything untoward. I am saying that the Minister, regardless of how technical the project was, should not have allowed that to be the system without an independent cost consultant verifying those bills. How could the Ministry staff say it was right?

How could Treasury whether it was right or wrong accept that the addition was right? That is the point, Madam Speaker.

They say that the ministry relied on these people. Nearly everyone who has spoken has said it. Of course they did; they had no recourse to say something else. In a memorandum to the Auditor General from the permanent secretary in that ministry, and I quote under the subheading of financial management, "There is no formal agreement between the Ministry and CHRM whereby the ministry assumed the full responsibility for the overall financial profile of the project. For the first two years of the project, the ministry personnel did not even have the technology required to provide the financials required to manage a project of this magnitude." This is from within the ministry. I am not making it up.

He goes on to say, "CHRM was responsible for the proper performance of the subcontractors and all payments for such services . . ." Hear this, Madam Speaker, I am going to say this again. "CHRM was responsible for the proper performance of the subcontractors and all payments for such services were made to CHRM directly in accordance with the contract on submission of properly authenticated invoices [which were properly authenticated by the same CHRM]." That is the whole problem.

Not one of them has addressed that problem and that is the problem. Because that is the problem does not mean that I stand here to accuse the Minister of Tourism of anything personally untoward or any dishonesty. Understand that. That is not what I am saying. If I wanted to say that I would tell him that, but none of them can tell me that what I am saying is not the facts, not my belief.

Madam Speaker, the whole point once again is that for Government's interest to be protected with proper procedure, there had to be an independent cost consultant, whether it be a quantity surveyor or any entity of that nature certifying that what CHRM was presenting was correct. They can talk about all of the committees they formed and they can name all of the good people. They are smart, Madam Speaker.

But, again, that is coming straight from the Minister of Education. When you try to hit him with anything about education that is not right, he talks about these 353 people that developed the Strategic Education Plan. Do you know what he does when he says that? He thinks that is going to scare any one of us from speaking the truth because he tries to say that if you go against it, you are going against them. That is not the case!

So they call Mr. Kirkland Nixon's name; they call this permanent secretary's name; they call these other professional names; the now Deputy Chief Secretary, who was then at some early stage in the game the Chief Engineer for Public Works, and all of those people. If all of these people whom we know and recognise as good and upright citizens were moving forward with the project, how can you question it?

The difference in the whole argument, when you get to the point I am talking about, is that they are out of it then. They have given all of their good abilities and resources to tell you what they want to achieve. They even go so far as to say that because CHRM had proven that all of the technical knowledge and expertise required is within that organisation, so that we don't lose track, and we make sure we get what we want at the end of the day, let's keep them and carry the process forward and convert them from contractor/consultant to project engineer, or whatever. I don't even have a problem with that.

When I argued early in the game about the minister taking a paper to Executive Council to waive Financial and Stores Regulations, and I questioned the ministry's ability or Executive Council's ability to waive it when the responsibility lay with the Financial Secretary, the minister said that I was wrong because it was neither he nor his ministry that brought any paper to Executive Council, it was the Financial Secretary. I accept that.

When I went through the Government Minute at that time I was reading a letter from the Permanent Secretary which addressed the multimedia situation that also went to Council, and I got crossed up. I accept that. That's no beef. But the point that I am making is after all the well intended circumstances drove the project to the point of the physical works, now you are out of the consultancy and you are going to build the restoration, you are going to do things now. You have created your concept. Everybody—National Trust, Historic Sites Committee, Ministry and all the good folks—yes, that is what we want. When it got beyond that, Madam Speaker, and the Financial and Stores Regulations were waived and it was time to contract these people, they have tried to justify that officials from Public Works said that the technical expertise called for by the nature of the project itself was not something that they had.

So, if the thought was that the normal procedure with government construction (government being the client which is usually handled by the public works) should be changed . . .

You see, when it got that far, I understand the minister's argument because she leaned her argument when it came to whether you wilfully did something but that is not my argument because I never told anybody they wilfully did anything.

I am not saying that. She has basically used the argument that because there is no proof that something was wilfully done you cannot record a lack of confidence because it is not something that was done with knowledge. That is what I understood the argument to be.

I am not arguing that anything was wilfully done the wrong way. But, having gotten to this point, if the procedure that is normally used is going to change, Madam Speaker, someone must have realised that the procedure was left with a void in it. It had to be.

You see, Madam Speaker, I used myself as an example about certifying the bills. I was saying that basically the way CHRM operated was as if I could certify my own bills and bypass GIS and send them straight to Treasury and they pay it because I said that was the case. That is what CHRM did!

Madam Speaker, I saw that with my own eyes so no one can tell it is not so. Okay? That's the problem. But you see, in this day and age you don't simply say because you have confidence in an organisation to perform the tasks that are supposed to be performed that you throw away your checks and balances. You just don't do that. You cannot do that.

Madam Speaker, however the chain of command decided on the procedure to follow, the fact is that void was left there and not addressed. The people in the ministry, and I can only imagine this, but they must have been tearing their hair out of their heads trying to keep abreast of all of these things that were happening. The various speakers used examples to show how many different things were done to make sure the things were done right. But none of the things that they talk about fill this void. Not one of them! That is why I contend that they have not addressed the thrust of the motion.

They have chosen by and large, every one of them who had any substance to what they said, to lean the arguments to look at it from the point of view of whether somebody did something wilfully wrong or not.

I am not arguing that, and I am not even suggesting that. But what has happened because that void was left there when the whole procedure began to take place is the marl road talk the minister is talking about. That's why it has happened and that is the whole point in my argument.

Meetings took place and independent sources were drawn on to try and make sense out of the whole mess. Do you know what those qualified people with scores and scores of years of experience said? In all of their experiences here and elsewhere they had never seen a mess as big as that. When it came to trying to take all of the pieces and line them up together, they never saw a mess like that. That's what they said.

When I choose to lay an argument down regarding the situation, I am not suggesting that mess was directly created by that minister or his staff. I am saying that because the void was created and there was no independent cost management in place to certify the payments that went on, hence the mess.

Let us take a picture, Madam Speaker, because, you know I am even trying to go by memory here without reading a whole pile of stuff and taking that long. But if my memory serves me right, the ministry was quick from the onset to say to CHRM, the project manager, 'look fella, you are responsible for creating and justifying the accounting profile of the costing as we have to pay'—not "us" but "you."

I think I better get that and read it right: "7th December 1994. Attachment to the Government Minute on the Report of the Standing Public Accounts Committee, April 3, 1999. A letter from the Ministry or Tourism, Environment and Planning.

"Dear Mr Stewart: I have been directed to inform you that His Excellency the Governor acting on the advice of the Executive Council has agreed that the contract for the project management of both the Pedro St. James and the Queen Elizabeth II Botanic Park should be awarded to Commonwealth Historic Management Resource Limited."

Let me take the opportunity (so that I don't have to read this again, Madam Speaker) to explain also to the minister where I took the position regarding who agreed to waive the Financial and Stores Regulation. This letter does not mention the Financial Secretary. The letter says, "I have been directed to inform you that His Excellency the Governor acting on the advice of the Executive Council . . ." No mention is made of the Financial Secretary there.

Now, in the last paragraph of this letter, it says, "The start-up fund of $70,000 has been processed already and we are currently processing the balance due under this year's allocation. You [and this is addressed to Mr. John Stewart, CHRM, Pert, Ontario, Canada] are responsible for providing us with a monthly accounting of the expenditure of these funds and also for allowing us the full inspection of your records on this account whenever this may be considered necessary."

So, you see, Madam Speaker, there and then is when it happened wrong. Right there! You are telling this entity that they are now being hired as the project manager—no tenders. Immediately they are responsible for providing the ministry with a monthly accounting of the expenditure of these funds. What that is saying is that as bills are sent in by you, the project manager—on your stationery, certified by you—that is what we are going to be taking as the authentic documents to send down to the Treasury and get the money paid. You are responsible for making sure that monthly accounts are kept on the money that is paid. No one to check it. That is where it went wrong.

As we speak of that, I want to tie this one in and refer to what the Minister of Tourism said with regard to the visitor's centre.

The Deputy Speaker: Are you reading from the Hansard?

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Yes, Madam Speaker, I am sorry. It is 12th April 2000.

The Deputy Speaker: I do not seem to have a copy of that Hansard.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Madam Speaker, I was working them overtime, I must admit, and they probably don't have everything produced. But if you have a similar document to mine, it will be on page 7 of 12th April 2000, right-hand top of the page.

The Deputy Speaker: Okay.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: The Minister of Tourism said, "In April 1997 tenders for the construction of the visitor's centre at Pedro St. James were delivered to the chairman of the CTC." That is, you send the stuff out and interested parties who are qualified take the big documents, look at what you want and they prepare a bid and they then give it to the Central Tenders Committee (CTC). "In September 1997, PWD, at the request of the Ministry of Tourism, took on the responsibilities of project management during the construction phase of the visitor's centre."

The minister said, “I think that when we look at the Auditor General’s Report he says, ‘we terminated’ the agreement with CHRM.” That is not important, let us go on.

“PWD, at the request of the Ministry of Tourism took on the responsibilities of project management during the construction phase of the visitor’s centre. October 1997, commence construction of visitor’s centre by Hadsphaltic.” That means Hadsphaltic was awarded the contract.

He goes on to say, “May I say that although that particular part of the project, that is the visitor’s centre, was estimated by CDB to cost $1,097,000, when we put the matter out to tender the lowest tender that came in was $1.7 million, almost $1.8 million, and actually at the end of the day when we take the actual cost of construction of the visitor’s centre, it came in at $2.3 million. CDB’s estimate of $1.1, the actual cost was $2.3 million.”

“When I compare that to the cost of restoring the castle, which was $887,000 versus $1.2 million, [which means the estimate was $887,000 and the actual cost was $1.2 million] I wonder why the focus wasn’t on the visitor’s centre, which was twice the amount of the estimate.”

What the Minister is saying here, Madam Speaker, is simply this: Public Works was asked to take on the project management of the visitor’s centre and they went through certain procedures. Now, the original bid was $1.7 million and it ended up being $2.3 million. But I want to paint the scenario now and compare the two to show the void that was one but not in the other.

You see, what the minister is trying to say is: Why are you not saying anything about the visitor’s centre when the end-of-day cost was half a million more than what the original estimate was? That was the minister’s point.

Madam Speaker, in 1997 when the Public Works Department was asked by the ministry to take over the project management of the visitor’s centre, let me tell you what happened. When the bids were awarded and Hadsphaltic got the contract, Public Works then became the project manager, which meant that any money paid from the Treasury had to be certified by Public Works. That’s how it works. But you have Hadsphaltic as the contractor. Let us compare that to the other situation.

The same ministry is the client. The project manager before Public Works took over project management of the visitor’s centre was CHRM. With this one, instead of CHRM, it is the Public Works Department.

With the visitor’s centre, Public Works is the project manager but Hadsphaltic is the contractor.

With CHRM, CHRM is the project manager and they are the contractor. Everything else is a sub-contract. There are lots of other things the minister said to try to validate his point, but it is not going to wash when I am finished.

Now, as I explained, what transpired with the CHRM system and how the ministry had to rely on CHRM au-thenticating CHRM’s bills . . . here was the difference with the visitor’s centre—and this was not mentioned in what the minister said. Public Works, after Hadsphaltic is awarded the contract . . . the minister can go and check this. I did not even speak to them, but I am wagering my bet because they don’t operate any other way. So, I am taking a chance but I am going to go with it because I am sure I am right.

Public Works (operating as a project manager for the Ministry of Tourism with Hadsphaltic as the contractor for the visitor’s centre) sent out a bid to a quantity surveyor, an independent cost consultant, to certify the bills that Hadsphaltic International kept sending in to them. So, your systems for Hadsphaltic (the contractor), to the independent quantity surveyor, to Public Works. When they do that, Treasury pays the Bill.

The other one, CHRM: CHRM, Ministry, Treasury—do you see the void? That is the void. That is the whole argument.

Now, the minister did not say what I just said about the visitor’s centre.

Let me tell you what will happen when you talk about an original contract of $1.7 million and it ends up to be $2.3 million. Again, I don’t know the details but because I have been in Finance Committee and staying up late so many nights trying to understand this and asking people a bunch of questions to understand this, I know how that works. If your system is in place, you get a bid awarded to a contractor for a certain amount of money but you have your contingencies and your variations.

If during the course of the contract somebody wants something changed in whatever fashion, therein lies where your end figure might vary. That figure will not change unless unknown and unaccounted charges are incurred that are not in the original contract.

Hadsphaltic could never write a letter to the ministry and say, ‘by the time we finish this it will be $500,000, here is our stamp, pay it.’ That is what CHRM did. That is the problem.

For Hadsphaltic to be able to get one dollar more, they have to prove to the independent cost consultant based on the financial profile and the contract that was originally awarded that they are doing something that was extra, over and above that contract.

That independent quantity surveyor then physically goes and says, ‘okay, you have sent me a bill for so much more square footage of this. Yes, I see that is there. Now, let me work out what the price should be. I really don’t agree with you Hadsphaltic, I am not going to certify this because it should be $20,000 less.’ That is how it works and then you row a little bit and then you come up with what is acceptable and then you go to Public Works on top of it.

The same man that we stand up in Finance Committee and give a holy hell to when we are ready, because we have our job to do, the same one that huffs and puffs sometimes at us . . . but we still make up and talk afterwards. Even when it comes to him, then he does another check.

Don't forget now that the independent cost consultant has to be paid too. So, he is not going to get paid if he doesn't do his job. After that entire exercise then they say, 'okay, Treasury here we go.'

However many examples I use it comes down to that one argument. Now, they will turn around—especially the Minister of Education, because that is just his style—and try to make it look like you are pointing figures at people in the ministry to say that they were not quite doing the right thing. Politics, you know Madam Speaker. They figure in something like this, you have to be very careful because you will turn the civil service against you and all this kind of foolishness.

Well, I am going to tell you what, I hope the civil service understands who thinks they are idiots from who doesn't because I don't have any fear of speaking the truth that I know.

I am not going to try to bend and twist anything to turn them against him. He doesn't stand much chance naturally anyhow, but that is another story.

The Deputy Speaker: Honourable member, would you please keep your remarks to the motion?

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Yes, Madam Speaker, thank you.

But the point at hand, in all seriousness, and I trust you will bear with me because anything that they said they said at least a dozen times. The point at hand, and I have used illustrations to prove the point and, in fact, the minister picked the right example for us to prove the point when he chose the visitor's centre.

You must have your system in place. You must have your checks and balances so that there is no risk when you are spending the country's money—risk meaning value received for money spent. That is the entire argument. It is a money argument. But it is not a money argument about anyone taking anything and putting it in his pocket.

The last resolve of the motion says, "BE IT RESOLVED THAT upon completion of the technical audit of the landscaping contract for this project, any parties responsible for fraud, misappropriation, or any other illegal action be identified and be the subject of appropriate legal action and that this Honourable Legislative Assembly be apprised of the proposed course of action."

The Minister of Education talked about sub judice, which I accept. I don't have any problem with that. But I want to explain why this resolve section is in the motion because the same Minister of Education tried to insinuate that that resolve section was leaning towards questioning the integrity of either the minister or his staff.

Let us just ease back for a minute and understand the genesis of this whole affair. This motion was brought in June 1999. At that time we had the benefit of the Auditor General's Report of December 31st 1997.

MOMENT OF INTERRUPTION—4.30 PM

The Deputy Speaker: Honourable member, may I interrupt you? We have reached the hour of 4.30. If it is the intention of this House to carry on to the completion of the business today, I would entertain a motion for the suspension of Standing Order 10(2).

SUSPENSION OF STANDING ORDER 10(2)

Hon. Julianna O'Connor-Connolly: Madam Speaker, I move the suspension of the relevant Standing Order for continuation until the business of the House is completed.

The Deputy Speaker: The question is that Standing Order 10(2) be suspended to complete the business before the House. I shall put the question. Those in favour please say Aye. Those against No.

AYES.

The Deputy Speaker: The Ayes have it.

AGREED: STANDING ORDER 10(2) SUSPENDED TO ALLOW THE CONTINUATION OF THE HOUSE UNTIL THE BUSINESS IS COMPLETED.

The Deputy Speaker: Honourable First Elected Member for the district of George Town, continuing his debate.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Madam Speaker, you have to forgive us, because it was comical seeing the Minister of Education flying in here not knowing what was happening, making sure that the votes were in the right place. All we were doing was going on late to make sure that we completed the business. But anyway, thank God his heartbeat is back to normal now and he is back to doing what he has to do. I will continue.

As I was saying, Madam Speaker, with regard to the final resolve section of the motion and what the Minister of Education trying to imply (that perhaps we were using this to aim at the Minister of Tourism or his staff at the ministry), this resolve section was put in there because we felt that it was not impossible (because of the lack of the benefit of an independent cost consultant to certify these payments) that somebody may have found something that was not correct.

Now, I don't for one minute believe that the Auditor General creates a report and is not as fair as he can be to all concerned. But from his report there seemed a distinct possibility that something of this nature might have occurred—not within the ministry, but elsewhere.

My view right now is that there was ample reason to have doubts. Because of the way things transpired I hold the view that there is ample reason now to have doubts. The minister doesn't have to worry about me fretting. I can go outside and say that, who wants to sue can sue. It is nothing about that. Because you have a doubt does not mean that you have cast an aspersion. If there is doubt in somebody's mind, it has to mean something is not clear.

Madam Speaker, when we say, "BE IT THEREFORE RESOLVED THAT this Honourable House records its lack of confidence in the Minister's handling of the project." I would like to explain that. People can take that sentence and read it as follows, "THEREFORE RESOLVED THAT this Honourable House records its lack of confidence in the Minister . . ."

While I am not figuring it now, more than one person has quoted that first resolve section in that manner. They have because you see for them to really give a good line of argument, to show why that must not be the case, they must make it all encompassing to show how serious it is. That is why all of them jump up and talk. That is why.

Madam Speaker, I have to laugh when I think about all of that and I am not making light of it. When I say as the mover of this motion that "BE IT THEREFORE RESOLVED THAT this Honourable House records its lack of confidence in the Minister's handling of the project." It is all to do with the argument that I have put down about the void that was created.

Madam Speaker, that resolve section is because that minister is responsible to this Legislative Assembly. Now, if the shoe were on the other foot, perhaps I would argue in a fashion similar to the way they have argued. If I argued that way, it would have simply been because I could not argue the point. As the lawyers would say, "I submit" that neither of them argued the point (nor all of them put together have argued the point). They have argued everything else.

They took pains to explain the whole history of the project. They took pains to go through all kinds of different phases, explaining the works from the birthplace of democracy and all that. The Minister of Education is going to single out the three members from Bodden Town saying that he hopes they appreciate the goodness for this project and will vote for the project in this motion. Madam Speaker, this motion has nothing to do with the existence of the project.

Let me tell you what he has tried to do with that. He wants people to go around saying that I, Kurt Tibbetts (the mover of the motion), do not want to see the Pedro Castle project in the Bodden Town district and the people of Bodden Town must understand that so that they must not talk to me and they must understand what I stand for in politics, et cetera.

You see, Madam Speaker, I know that any night he doesn't sleep comfortably is because of me. That is nothing new to me, and anytime he gets his little opportunity, he tries his little potshots. I will take this moment to clear the matter up.

I am impressed with the end results of the project, sincerely. I don't have a problem with it. My only problem at this point in time with the project is its viability from a dollar point of view. It is not that this is a problem. It is a worry, because whether I argue against the method that brought the project to fruition or not, that is my problem too.

So, not for one minute am I going to stand up and say, 'let's go and burn it down because it shouldn't be there.' It is here! It looks good! We now have to channel the energies in the direction of making it a more viable project.

I don't have a problem with that, but the little slimy way, the little sleazy way that people like the Minister of Education bring these little things in—

The Deputy Speaker: Honourable member, could we use a little better word than "sleazy"? I don't think that is too parliamentary.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Madam Speaker, I will not use slimy and sleazy again at the minister.

Madam Speaker, I am going to explain a different way because he is in the Chamber now. The Minister of Education has this way in which he takes the Queen's English and puts it into the shape and form that will cause one to misconstrue the truth, if he wishes to aim it at his opponent. I cannot figure any better way to say it than that, Madam Speaker.

[The Honourable Minister of Education, Aviation and Planning rose]

The Deputy Speaker: Honourable Minister?

POINT OF ORDER

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: Madam Speaker, I take a point of order there. What he is doing is misleading. I do not take the English language and put it in a way to misconstrue things.

The Deputy Speaker: Honourable Minister, I take your point of order, but I don't think he said that. I think he said he felt that way but I will ask the First Elected for George Town to withdraw that and to steer clear of these accusations.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Madam Speaker, we have a problem because if I need to prove that I will prove it. But because I respect the Chair and you personally, I will withdraw the statement.

The Deputy Speaker: Thank you.

The First Elected Member for the district of George Town.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: I wanted to take a minute to say that when the Minister of Education is going to say that the three members from Bodden Town should bear in mind that the project is in their district, that there are people employed from their district on the project and he is literally (although he didn't use those words) putting them on notice that they better vote for the project with the motion. The point I was making is that when the minister makes statements like that, it is clear that his intention to the public is to try to say that anyone who votes for this motion is voting against the project—and that is clearly not the truth. That is what I am saying.

But as I was saying (even though my choice of words was not the most appropriate), he has this way of doing things just like that. He cannot expect to enjoy the ability to do that continuously and not get it back. That is all I am saying.

So, I want to make it abundantly clear at this point in time that this motion has nothing to do with the existence of the Pedro St. James project. It is there.

What the Second Elected for Bodden Town said about how pretty it looks and when His Royal Highness the Duke of York was there . . . I agree with it. I was there. I don't have a problem with that. I have recommended people to go there to have functions. I made my little girl visit there and carry her class and have her birthday there. Do you think that was to please any one of them?

No!

The atmosphere was nice. They wanted to see the audiovisual presentation, and it is wonderful. That is not the point. The point is that during the course of the transition from consultant to project management, the relationship between CHRM and the ministry caused a void to be created in the checks and balances to ensure that the way in which the country's money was being spent was not only in a timely fashion but in an efficient and wise fashion. That is the point.

The Deputy Speaker: Since the House is going to be carrying on until we complete the business, proceedings will be suspended for fifteen minutes. Let us return within fifteen minutes, please.

PROCEEDINGS RESUMED AT 5.00 PM

The Deputy Speaker: Please be seated. Proceedings are resumed. The First Elected Member for the district of George Town continuing his debate.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: I do believe that I have re-enforced the point I was making when I presented the motion. Before I get to the summary, I want to just take a minute to make sure that this point is made very clear.

As I stated before, several members have chosen to take the line that the intent of this motion is a personal attack on the Minister of Tourism and to question his integrity. In his words, "election is right around the corner" and some people hold the view that he is too popular in this country so it is time to dethrone him.

Madam Speaker, you and I got here at the same time. When I was elected, I was elected by my little self—well, big self however you look at that. But little fish in a big pond, I admit that. To this day, regardless of the government and the opposition to the government, no member in here can honestly think that I am the type of person that would allow myself to be used. No one can think that I would allow myself to be used by anyone to further his own political cause.

If one were to say that, as a result of my bringing this motion, someone else might have chosen this opportunity to get on and play politics with their opponents, I probably would not even argue about that. It is not the reason why I brought the motion but that may have occurred as a result of the motion being brought. Just so that people will remember, no one has seen me running around any other district beside the district that I represent, hollering and telling anybody who to vote for because I believe the people of this country have their own good sense.

One thing I want the minister and everybody else to understand is that if he or any other incumbent in here from his district doesn't see eye to eye and they have differences, that is their problem.

Do you hear what I tell you?

That is their problem. Not mine. Do not drag me into it. There are a few things that I hold dear in my life and my ability to think for myself, to act for myself and to be accountable for my actions to everyone else . . . I take pride in that, Madam Speaker.

Back to the motion—during all of this debate many things have been said. But I forget to say one little thing that the Minister of Education said . . . he came in, but he is gone again. Anyway, I will still say it now. I am going to do my best not to laugh—oh! He is going back in. I will wait until he sits.

Madam Speaker, the last thing the minister said before he finally convinced himself he had overstayed his welcome and it was time to sit down was as follows, and I quote: "I have no doubt whatsoever, I put my full faith, my full support behind the ministry, behind the minister, behind the Treasury." Then he says, "We know that in the end, the good Lord sees everything and He will ensure that it comes out right for those who believe in Him." Madam Speaker, from the minister's argument it is fair conclusion that because I am the mover of the motion that I don't believe in God.

POINT OF ORDER

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: Madam Speaker, I take a point of order. I have never—

The Deputy Speaker: Honourable minister, may I hear your point of order please?

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: What I understand the member to say is that I imputed that that member does not believe in God. I never ever imputed or said that about anybody much less a colleague in this House.

The Deputy Speaker: Honourable minister, I do not think that is what the honourable member said. He said that he read from the Hansard that you said, “I have no doubt whatsoever, I put my full faith, my full support behind the ministry, behind the Minister, behind the Treasury. We know that in the end the good Lord sees everything and He will ensure that it comes out right for those who believe in Him.” What he says is that because you are opposed to the motion he has concluded that your belief is that it will not come out right for him because of his lack of faith.

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: Madam Speaker, that is not what that says. It is purely a positive statement and I resent anyone drawing the conclusion the member is drawing—that I have tried to impute that either he or anyone else does not believe in God.

I mean, this is getting into a very dangerous area, and I would submit one other thing: It is not good enough for someone to say, ‘I believe that someone is saying no good’ is the same as saying that person is no good. I did not impute that. I made a positive statement.

The Deputy Speaker: Honourable minister, you may not have imputed, but the First Elected Member for the district of George Town has the right to draw that conclusion from the words that were said. I cannot entertain a point of order.

Would the First Elected Member for George Town would continue his debate?

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: I am going to continue the debate and I am not going to make a big issue of this, but do you know something, Madam Speaker? They can shake their heads, and they can do what they want to do—

The Deputy Speaker: Honourable member, would you move off that point and let us get on with the debate?

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Yes, Madam Speaker.

The point that I wish to make is that when you say what you say, you must be careful to ensure that what you say comes out to mean what you are trying to say.

That is valid. I used that illustration to simply say that every time people like me come back and any one of them, or all of them together, doesn't like what I said, they must remember that they say things too. With respect, I knew that this was going to happen. I said what I said because I knew it was going to happen but I wanted to prove the point.

The Deputy Speaker: Can we move from that point, now?

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Yes, Madam Speaker, but I am only saying that I wanted to prove the point. When they get upset at what you seem to be trying to say, they must remember how they say things, and the same way it does it to them, it does it to other people. That is all I was trying to say and I will move on.

The Deputy Speaker: Thank you.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: So as not to lose the point that has been made, let me take a little time now to summarise. I wish to go back to the motion.

I have already said that the first two WHEREAS sections of the motion explain themselves once they are read, and that they are the genesis of this motion. There were many people who were questioning a lot of things. The public, by and large, gets very frustrated when they keep hearing a lot of stuff and they don't see a picture that is coming very clear. As a result of people coming to us asking us a lot of questions for which we did not have any answers . . . by the way, whether they believe me or not, I am not one of those people who is going to walk the streets of George Town, Bodden Town, East End, North Side or West Bay—and Cayman Brac is worse—trying to add marl road talk. I don't want it done to me and I, as a result, don't even begin to think of doing it to other people.

So, the motion was simply to get to the truth. The third WHEREAS of the motion, which reads: “AND WHEREAS the Honourable Minister bears ultimate responsibility to the Legislative Assembly for the development and management of this project,” which no one seems to have any argument with as there were no attempted amendments to that WHEREAS clause so that is a given.

“AND WHEREAS this said project up until July 1997 was managed directly by the Ministry of Tourism . . .” and that is where people like the Minister of Education tried to tie it in and say that the motion is directed at the ministry. We were simply paving the way with the facts. The Minister of Tourism did not seem to have a problem with that because his amendment only wanted to add to it, “ . . . with project management being carried out by Commonwealth Historic Resource Management Limited and accounting being provided by the Government Treasury;

“AND WHEREAS all reports thus far . . .” we said indicated mismanagement because at the time all reports did indicate mismanagement to us and the rest of the information that has come forward to us has not changed that but the majority of the people in this House changed that to say, “are self-explanatory” so as of now I have to debate the motion saying, “are self-explanatory.”

We now come to the two resolve sections. The first resolve section says, “BE IT THEREFOR RESOLVED THAT this Honourable House records its lack of confidence in the Minister's handling of the project.” It is worded like that because it is pointed squarely at the handling of this project—more so now than before because I have heard all the arguments. I contend that because the minister was responsible and because I have proven that the checks and balances that should have been in place were not put in place.

Regardless of all of the advice from every other committee or individual or group of people that came forward, when it came down to crunch time, proper procedures were not put in place. Because of that, I contend that this House should record its lack of confidence in the minister's handling of that specific project. Nothing more than that.

I understand the government and their supporters not being prepared to accept that. I have listened to all of the arguments they have put forward. They have their way of debating and I have my way of debating. They have their way of wanting to understand. I can guarantee the world that I try to understand as objectively as I can. Even if I want to win an argument, I am not going to simply sit and skew it because I know I can. I am not going to do that and I cannot say that for everybody that is in here—especially the Minister of Education.

Do you know what, Madam Speaker? If I had spoken to the minister regarding the motion and we had talked about that same point that I keep focusing on and I had been told, 'listen, I hear exactly what you are saying and the truth is, I cannot argue with what you are talking about because that is exactly what happened. In hindsight, we should not have allowed it to happen that way but we learn from our mistakes.' Madam Speaker, on my word of honour, I would have withdrawn this motion.

Now, I am not saying to you that I created the opportunity or tried to get us in a dialogue for that to happen. That is not what I am trying to say, but I am saying had that happened, I would have been happy to withdraw the motion. This whole thing—and they take it how they wish and they can politicise it how they wish—is not limited to this project.

This is our country and if the government is going to make arguments to say that this was right, that tells me that tomorrow they expect to operate in the same manner. That cannot be. I cannot accept that. That is what it tells me, and that is why I say what I say because the whole argument is that I don't want to see it happen again.

Now, someone could say, 'well, if you were in the same shoe it might have happened too.' I am not saying no to that, but I certainly would not have sat down and rallied the forces to give arguments of all the good reasons for everything else in the project when that is not the point at hand and try to cover up. When I say cover up, I don't mean any ordinary cover-up but a cover up that will take you weeks to get to the real point if you follow them. I would not have done that. But to each his own. If that is the style of the government, then that is the style of government. But do not expect me to accept that.

I say once again, Madam Speaker, that the point behind this motion is not just to expose that situation to make someone look bad, but to ensure that does not become the order of the day. If it happens once and you argue with me for days trying to justify it, how do I know it is not going to happen again? So, Madam Speaker, I stand behind the first resolve section of the motion. It is not meant to be personal. I cannot explain it any better. However it is taken, I cannot do anything about that.

The second resolve section of the motion, which is the more serious aspect of the motion, stems from the result of the first resolve section. Madam Speaker, when we look at the landscaping contract, where all the arguments that have come forth about the three contracts where the issue was with the very small parts of the whole thing . . . you see, it does not matter how small that was compared to the entire project.

It was the risk the country's money was put at. It does not matter—as the Minister of Education said exactly twelve times. I read the Hansard and he said it twelve times, and each time he spoke five minutes on it. It does not matter whether the estimate was $8.7 million and what is being said now is that it came in at $5.2 million. I am going to take two minutes to deal with that too.

It does not matter whether it came in under the estimate. The way the Minister of Education spoke, a good example would be, if I am driving down the road and I do not have my seatbelt on, and I get into an accident and I don't get hurt, and yet I draw the conclusion that because I drove down the road without my seatbelt on and got into an accident and I didn't get hurt then as a result of that I should not use my seatbelt.

The minister has said it is supposition. You are talking foolishness. This is probably the first project of this size that came in under the estimates so don't say anything. If you know that there is something that did not go right, forget it. The mere fact that it came in under the estimate . . . don't think again about anything. The mere fact that you didn't have your seatbelt on and you met in an accident that means that you must not use your seatbelt?

Madam Speaker, the way in which the project manager was allowed to conduct his billing procedure and collect monies from this government was incorrect and it was not in the interest of the people of this country. It could not have been!

The argument has nothing to do with the end result. The argument has to do with the correct way to do it compared to the incorrect way, which was the way that was used. That is the same kind of argument that comes forth from the government when we have serious issues at hand. Because we have not had a serious crime wave in this country—don't talk about education, don't talk about potential social problems.

No, no, you are preaching gloom and doom. You must not talk about those kinds of things. The same exact attitude.

All of the problems that we see facing us today stem from circumstances to do with education or lack thereof. That is the wildest statement in the world. How could you say something like that? Is it not right to stop and think, I wonder what he means by that? Might there be some merit to what he is saying? Oh, no, no, no. If he says something to do with education, it is a personal attack at me. That is the attitude and it gets us no where. That is the government.

I am part of the opposition. They have to do it their way but I have the luxury of not even wondering about anything and continuing to speak the truth.

I am going to make a rueful admission . . . Madam Speaker, if getting there turns me into that, I don't want a thing to do with it—and I mean that. Now, I don't believe that it has to be like that, but if my God told me in my mind that once you get there that is how you are going to become, I don't want to hear about it. I will stay in my little corner and I mean that because no one can tell me that this country can benefit from that type of style of governance.

Madam Speaker, they have also (and I have said the minister has said it) said that the project has come in under estimate. I know what procedures are in place but I am going to wager this and somebody has to certify this in writing to me because I am going to lay the argument once more. I am not going to go into all the details I went into before.

The way that CHRM was allowed to operate with their contracts, with their sub-contracts, with their billing procedures and with their lack of being held accountable for the type of accounting procedures and monthly reporting or regular reporting that should have been done in a certain manner . . . in my view (and I am going to contend this and no one is going to say it and prove it different to me) I sincerely hold the view that it is physically impossible for the Treasury and/or the Financial Controller of the Pedro St. James project and the Botanical Park project to be able to take what information they have and be totally satisfied that every dollar that was spent was accounted for in the correct area. Here is how the Minister of Education argues that point, he says, "So what if some of the money that was spent at Pedro Castle was recorded as if it was spent at Botanic Park or vice versa, what is the big deal? It's all government projects and all government's money." That is how he runs his show. A perfect example, Cayman Airways owes Civil Aviation for—

The Deputy Speaker: Honourable member, let us not go there please. Let us continue with the motion before us and bring it to a conclusion. Thank you.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Thank you, Madam Speaker. I won't say it but I thought it was a perfect parallel. And I still believe it is a perfect parallel, but I accept what you have said and I will move on.

The Deputy Speaker: Thank you.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Anyway, he said that three or four times during his delivery. That bears out the point that I am making.

You see, Madam Speaker, that's why he can stand up and pontificate with his legal jargon and argue the case. Not for one minute would I believe he doesn't understand. With those umpteen years of banking experience and those umpteen degrees, he must understand!

But he uses the same type of argument to show why I don't have an argument. You know, a little bit here and there, it is government's money and it is spending on government's causes so it does not matter how you account for it.

I take that example to say that in this last resolve, which I accept seems a bit piercing . . . but it drew their attention. It got every one of them up except one to speak. I contend that because the proper checks and balances were not in place, right now there is doubt in my mind whether anyone can truthfully prove that the monies that were expended for that specific project were all to the dollar spent in the right fashion.

They talk about the original contract for project management. The Third Elected Member brought up the point about the multimedia contract and where there was this problem about currency. No one has yet addressed where in the initial contract, the contract, that is, for the project management . . . I don't want to say no one addressed it, CHRM addressed it. I have a copy of that but only CHRM addressed it and the minister read what CHRM said.

That multimedia contract—which was not quoted in a specific currency . . . when the correspondence started between the ministry and CHRM only to discover at the end of the day, that while the ministry assumed correctly that it was Cayman Islands dollars, how it actually worked was that the contract amount between CHRM and Steve Shaw Production was in Canadian dollars.

By the way, there is one document in there that called it Claudette Shaw Production, I don't know if it was a husband and wife . . . anyway, we are calling it Steve Shaw Productions now. Steve Shaw Productions was paid an equivalent in Canadian dollars. The bill came from CHRM to the ministry, certified and authenticated by CHRM in Cayman Islands dollars. When the question arose—and only when the question arose sometime afterwards—the answer was simply: We billed you in Canadian dollars.

We paid them in Cayman Islands dollars and the reason why it was like that was because the difference just so happened to be my consultancy fee. That is how it worked and I am not trying to bend anything out of shape or skew it. That is how it worked!

Now, Madam Speaker, assuming that is correct, here are the questions. Did the original contracts (as I have not seen them because they said, 'No, you cannot see anything like that.' Okay, no problem.) But the original contract must have understood that this multimedia centre was going to have to be built.

So, when he got project management for a contract that includes that, are we going to say that you have an open-ended contract? You have a fee as the project manager but when you get to specific areas, it is not included in your fees so you just simply send us the bill as you please? That is what happened!

Madam Speaker, it is not to say that in truth and in fact (because I am going to be as fair as I can) it is not possible that these works may have been extra, over and above the contract because I don't know what the contract says. But even if they were, hence all the more reason why you must have an independent cost consultant to say, yes, what this person had to do extra is exactly the difference between the exchange rate of the Canadian dollars and the Cayman Islands dollars.

Madam Speaker, to say that that should not have been done is wrong! It has to be wrong from your shoe sole up.

Because that is not in place I cannot feel or believe in my mind that nothing happened that may not have been correct. To be fair I don't want to say that anyone personally or together meant anything untoward in the whole affair. But because of not having that procedure in place, it is only normal to have doubt. For the Minister of Education to talk about, 'if you think it regularly, it must be regular' he doesn't understand. I may be irregularly shaped but there is nothing irregular about me.

Madam Speaker, I believe that I have used every possible example that I can to reinforce my point. I say again the last resolve came into place because there were serious doubts as to whether or not the money that was paid by the government of this country was paid in the manner and in the amounts which it should have, regardless of what the end result was, whether it was under or over or whatever. You see, they come with this business about there is nothing about fraud—nothing proving fraud.

Madam Speaker, if you don't have a system like that in place, you will never be able to retrace your steps to verify all of this.

How can you say that there is no fraud?

What you can say is that there is no proof of fraud. I am not going to stand and argue that, but this last resolve section was simply in case there were and no one can say we didn't have a right to say that in the motion because it certainly looked like that but it had not to do with fraud from within.

I need you to understand that clearly. If that was what I thought, I would tell you that; but that was not the case. But because there was nothing in place to ensure with the extensions that everything was Kosher, that is how that came about.

Madam Speaker, even if the thought is thought to be biased, I believe that there is merit to this motion when you look into the ambit that you need to examine when you look through your whereas clauses and your two resolve sections. The government obviously will not support the motion. No one could convince me that I have wasted their time or the country's time by bringing the motion and I firmly believe that I have proven my point beyond a shadow of a doubt.

By not accepting the motion, the government is saying we hear what you say, we understand what you say but we cannot accept what you say because to do that is an admission. That is what is going to transpire now when the vote takes place. One thing I do know it has served is that it puts on notice any future projects and making sure that they are done correctly with proper procedures in place.

I believe after this, even those who may not have realised that that is how it should be, I am going to make sure it should be if you are even buying a pair of shoes. And that is all right too because it will have served its purpose in that respect. Thank you, Madam Speaker.

The Deputy Speaker: That concludes debate on Private Member's Motion No. 6/2000 as amended.

THE PUBLIC SERVICE PENSIONS (AMENDMENT AND VALIDATION) BILL, 2000

The Clerk: The Public Service Pensions (Amendment and Validation) Bill, 2000.

The Deputy Speaker: The Honourable Third Official Member.

Hon. George A. McCarthy: Madam Speaker, I beg to move the second reading of a Bill entitled, The Public Service Pensions (Amendment and Validation) Bill, 2000.

The Deputy Speaker: The question is that a Bill entitled, The Public Service Pensions (Amendment and Validation) Bill, 2000 be given a second reading. I think I need to go on to say that the motion is open for debate.

The Honourable Third Official Member.

Hon. George A. McCarthy: Madam Speaker, before I go into the details, this Bill will be dealing with two specific points. Essentially, point 1 is that those officers in the service who qualify for the receipt of a cost of living supplement will be exempted from benefits under the pensions scheme.

Point 2, persons who joined the service after the 14 April 1999, the present Law provides that those persons should be transferred or placed under the defined benefit scheme. Because of certain administrative arrangements not being in place or not being followed through, it became necessary for this date to be extended to 1st January 2000.

The third point (and as honourable members will note there is an amendment being posed to withdraw this section) had to do with section 34 of the Public Service Pensions Law in effect, which was being repealed. Specifically, the clauses in the Bill pointing to this specific area are clauses 5, 7, 8 and 12, which, when taken together, provide that no employee if he carries on working after reaching normal retirement age may receive both a pension and a salary/wage at the same time.

Madam Speaker, there is an amendment to defer dealing with this section. So, the existing provisions in the Law will stand.

So, in effect, the amending Bill that we have in front of us at this time will effect amendments to two areas in particular.

Just going through some specific deals: Clauses 1 and 2 deal with formalities. Clause 3 introduces a new subsection (23) to the principal Law. The effect would be to exempt from the new pension scheme all employees who receive contracted officer's supplement. Taken with Clause 11, this would be effective from the 14th April 1999.

Clause 4 repeals and replaces section 29(2) of the principal Law. The present section 29(2) prevents employees who joined after the 14th April 1999 being defined benefit participants. The proposed replacement would extend the deadline to 1st January 2000. This, however, would not apply to employees who are not contracted officers, temporary employees or group employees who, together with all employees who have joined after 1st January 2000, are and will be defined contribution participants.

I mentioned earlier, Madam Speaker, clauses 5, 7 and 8 are being withdrawn—

Hon. George A. McCarthy: I have not gotten to Clause 12 as yet, I am following in number order—and 12, Madam Speaker, since it has been mentioned.

Clause 6 repeals and replaces section 47 of the principal Law, which at present provides for non-participating employees under the old scheme to become defined contribution participants on 14th April 1999. The new section will bring forward the starting date to the 1st January 2000.

Clause 9 validates the failure of the government to transfer contributions in respect of employees who started work after 1st January 1998 to the defined contribution scheme on the implementation of the new Law on the 14th April 1999. As I mentioned, all such persons will continue on the defined benefit scheme and only those joining effective after 1st January 2000.

Clause 10 is also a validation clause. After 14th April 1999, new employees should have been made defined contribution participants but they continue to be put on the defined benefits scheme. This clause validates keeping those employees under the defined benefit scheme.

Clause 11 validates the failure of the government to make all employees, including contracted officers, participants as required under the principal Law. As mentioned earlier, Madam Speaker, those contracted officers who currently qualify to receive contracted officer's supplement will be exempted from pension benefits.

Madam Speaker, in substance, this represents the changes that are being sought under the amending Bill.

Thank you.

The Deputy Speaker: The motion is open for debate. Does anyone wish to speak?

The First Elected Member for the district of George Town.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: I am pleased to see the amendment come forward. I think that is a signal that there may have to be a slight rethink in that area and because these sections have been withdrawn, I won't delve into that.

Madam Speaker, I wish to draw the attention of the honourable House to a certain section of the proposed amending Bill, where the margin note says (on page 6 of the Bill), "Amendment of section 27, non-resident/non-Caymanians" and section 3, which is opposite that marginal note in the amending Bill reads, "Section 27 of the principal Law is amended by inserting a new subsection after subsection (2)(iii), the administrator shall exempt from the coverage of the plan an employee who is entitled to a contracted officer's supplement."

There is amendment I see to section 3, which basically reads, "An employee who is entitled to a contracted officer's supplement shall not be entitled to the coverage of the plan and the administrator shall exempt such an employee from the coverage of the plan." Different words meaning the same thing, as far as I am concerned. Perhaps language that is easily understood.

Anyway, if we just try to clearly understand what this is saying, by not addressing this area the 1999 Law basically had a loophole in it. While I don't think in practice it was allowed, it could have allowed for a contracted officer to receive the contracted officer's supplement of 15% plus be a participant in the defined contribution plan. In effect, this would have meant that the contracted officer would have received 15% of his or her base salary attached to that salary on a monthly basis, plus be able to have the adjustment of 6% added to that basic salary and then taken back to go into the pension plan along with a 6% matching amount from general revenue. That's basically what could have happened. As I said, I don't think that it was happening in practice but this is simply to rectify that circumstance.

Now, having established that, there is an argument I wish to put forth because I probably will only have this opportunity to do so. There are some people who believe that at this point in time there should be no separation when people are employed by government who go on the defined contribution pensions plan or those who are allowed a contracted officer's supplement of 15% of base salary.

There are also those who contend that if the contracted officers from overseas are not afforded this 15% contracted officer's supplement attached to their basic salary, that it could well lead to less qualified individuals being recruited from overseas.

Now, while this Law itself does not address the contracted officer's supplement, the validity in the argument I will prove as I move along. I want to go back to a document that was prepared in the form of a memorandum on 26th January 1990 by the then administrative secretary. It was addressed to principal secretaries. I will not deal with all of the information in that document but I want to come to the very last paragraph of the document, which is part and parcel of the conclusion of the document.

This document was dealing with the 1990 salaries review. The then administrative secretary in relating to the 1990 salaries review, in conclusion (and numbered

14) says as follows: “Government has recently confirmed by means of an actuarial review that the value of a civil service pension is presently 15% of salary. The contracted officer’s supplement allowance is set at an equivalent percentage but paid monthly in order to compensate for the effects of inflation and to take account of the cost of housing payable monthly.”

So, Madam Speaker, in effect, what the administrative secretary was saying at that point in time was that this actuarial review that was carried out equated the value of a permanent pensionable and established member of staff to 15% of his or her salary. Thus the 15% contracted officer’s supplement that was going to be given would be literally in lieu of a pension because the value of the pension was the same thing as the value of the contracted officer’s supplement. The only difference is that with a pension you are not collecting it monthly but with a contracted officer’s supplement, you would be. That is what that means.

Now, using that as the platform from which I bring this argument, what the 1999 Pensions Law (and if we include all the other amendments that are being proposed) will have, in effect, is basically out of your permanent pensionable establishment a number of individuals who will be on the defined benefits plan (which was the plan we all knew until this Law came into effect in April 1999), and from a certain date set forth within this Law, all employees who will be PPE and are not contracted officer’s will go on the defined contribution plan.

Now, what is consistent for whichever plan you are on is the contribution rate, which at present is 6% of salary plus a matching 6% by the government. So, whether you are on the defined contribution plan or the defined benefits plan, the contributions are the same. Remember, based on that actuarial review the pension is worth 15% of salary. What I don’t want to wager is whether or not it is worth the same now. But I want to propose that we don’t have to argue that point because the base that has been established, in my view will not vary to any degree that makes that much different in the line of argument.

So, if we go by the amendment that is proposed what we are going to have is some people employed in this country who are not on any pension plan. The purpose of the National Pensions Law was basically to say that all people employed in this country for over twelve months except for one or two categories are to be on a pension plan.

Now, the Government in my view is saying that because of the nature of this beast, we are creating this exception. Let me make it very clear that for those people who came here before whatever date that we might propose (let us use today’s date for example) . . . if those people were hired based on the fact that they received a contracted officer’s supplement, I am not proposing for a minute that they should not continue as long as they are employed whether the contract is renewed or whatever. So, as long as they are employed based on the terms of employment initially, I am not suggesting that should change.

But in the same manner that we have said that all locally employed people in the government service from a certain date will go into the defined contribution plan, then I hold the view that we could extend that thought to all new contracted officers. I am going to explain why and I am going to explain that I believe that the argument is fair and why we should do this.

Madam Speaker, if I am a contracted officer and history continues to repeat itself the way it has in the past, it is not impossible for me to come to this island as a young person and be hired as a contracted officer and never leave this island and continue in that employment until I stop working.

Now, if that happens then it goes against the entire principle of providing pensions for people. From the equation of parity, I am going to explain why I do not believe for a minute that if what I propose is an acceptable circumstance that it will create any disadvantage to any new employee who is a contracted officer if this is done.

I would propose that a contracted officer who is employed from here on in, be hired with the basic salary, whatever that is, and that person is put into the defined contribution plan with the same 6% added to the basic salary and taken back out, plus the 6% matched by government and put into the pension fund. Then, should that person at any point in time end a contract (and usually those contracts are in minimum 2 - 3 years but on many occasions they are renewed) . . . but if these persons were in that plan and you said to them, ‘the only difference between you and a person who is a PPE (that is a local on the plan) is that their plan becomes portable’ . . . portable in its normal sense meaning, if somebody is working for government and they are on the defined contribution plan and they leave the government and go to another firm, then whatever the benefits are within that plan they now have is portable to whatever the plan is that they might go into at another firm.

But if you are a contracted officer and you leave or complete a contract of service with the government and take up employment in the Cayman Islands again, the same thing happens to you—whatever your benefit is that has accrued during your tenure is portable to wherever you go to work.

But if you are leaving the service and leaving the country, your contract is completed and by mutual agreement in whatever fashion you are not renewing, then whatever benefits have accrued over that period of time, you get your cheque and you are gone.

When you go elsewhere, if you want to use that to go into another pension fund it is your right. If you want to spend it, it is up to you because you are not living within the Cayman Islands anymore and you are not within the principles of the laws of the land.

Where it is not a disadvantage, Madam Speaker, some people might say, ‘well, why ask them to do the defined contribution plan and why not just give them their 15% right away.’ I am saying that the principle that you wish to apply, on one hand there is a question of parity between the two different types of government employees and, on the other hand, there is the possibility of them remaining on contracts that are continually renewed, or leaving (as has happened on many occasions) the service at the end of a contract but getting a job elsewhere in the private sector and during that time you would have been making them participate in a pension plan.

By nature, the reasoning behind pensions is because the human being, by and large, does not have the discipline to think at 20 or 25 years old of what it is going to be like at age 60 and put this money aside.

That is the whole idea behind the pension, as far as I understand it. It is a forced savings. So, regardless of how a contracted officer looks at the position, what you are doing for him, you are not depriving him of anything but you are saying to him, 'we are simply putting you in a position that whatever happens at the end of the day, you are preparing for your future. If you leave us at the end of a contract, the same basic money that you would be receiving, which is 15% of your basic salary, by the time that money is vested in a pension fund (and I have not taken any figures and worked it out to extrapolate a position), I am certain that over 2 - 3 years, given the returns on the pension funds as they are, which are fairly consistent and they are much more enticing, rates wise than a saving account, then at the end of that tenure the amount of money that you will receive will be more than if you add up 15% which you got every month.' I think that is a fair evaluation of the situation.

So, the compromise (as I see it, Madam Speaker) would allow the individual at the end of the contract once they are leaving this jurisdiction to get their money and go. But there has to be a compromise if you are going to negotiate. I understand that it is not for us here to decide on that 15%, but I am proposing that argument because I know there is a big argument going on about it. I believe that this is a fair manner in which to meet the concerns of all parties, including contracted officers.

Bear in mind, Madam Speaker, those contracted officers who have been employed with that 15%, I would say, if you wish to revert to the defined contribution plan, you have the right to do so but because you are hired with the understanding that you would be getting 15% contracted officer's supplement on your basic salary every month, if you want to keep it that way, keep it that way.

But any new people, just like you have told the other employees who are new that they are not going to go on the defined benefits plan but they are going to go on the defined contribution plan, then any new people who are contracted officers go on that plan also

If you add the dollars and sense up, it does not take anything away from how much money they get at the end of the day. All it does is ensure that should that person remain in the jurisdiction then they are following the principles that have been applied by law that you are preparing them with a pension. That's all it is going to do in my view.

So, whereas the Governor has the right under General Orders to deal with this contracted officer's supplement, the fact of the matter is that it is relevant for this because if anyone hears my argument and somewhere along the line they can come to agree with it, then personally it would have to mean an amendment to this Law.

You would not then allow the exemption that is being allowed now to continue. The exemption would only be up to whatever given date that you are going to have as the start-off period, just as you are setting a date now for the start-off period of the PPEs in a defined contribution plan.

Now, I am in a quandary because it is not that I disagree with these amendments to the point where I want to say that I am not going to vote for this Bill. But, having thought about it for a little bit (and I must admit I did not even get a chance to speak to anyone at length about it because I was dealing with the other motion all day), I honestly believe that there should be consideration to the proposal that I made understanding that it has to be the Governor who does that.

Now, perhaps the mover (who is the Honourable Third Official Member) might make comments on that. I am not trying to suggest that there is a big issue on hand where I have a big problem and I am not going to vote. I am not saying anything like that. But I would like some assurance, that while I know it is not the decision of anyone here, that proposal be put forward with a view to arriving if possible at some type of agreement based on the premises that I have tried to explain in this motion.

I trust that the thought is one that will go further by way of discussions and I am not going to go into all the details of who is discussing what and that type of stuff. But I believe that type of outlook might go far with regards to arriving at a position where everyone will be satisfied to the point that they are willing to go forward with it like that.

I trust, Madam Speaker, that the line of argument which I have taken will be one that will be accepted with the spirit that I have taken it. Perhaps comments from the mover of the motion might allow me to easily and readily decide on whether or not I support the Bill.

Thank you.

The Deputy Speaker: Does any other Member wish to speak? The Fourth Elected Member for the district of George Town.

Dr. Frank McField: Madam Speaker, I am kind of tired, but since the First Elected Member for George Town has elaborated on this amendment to the extent he has, it has caused me to think of something. I would like to find out, when the mover of this amendment to this Public Service Pensions Bill comes to sum up, what is the particular philosophy that has informed them to do this.

The clause being amended shall exempt from the coverage of the plan an employee who is entitled to a contracted officer's supplement.

Now, what is being brought to substitute for that is that an employee who is entitled to it shall not be entitled to coverage in the plan. Basically, that is saying the same thing and I believe that this is deliberate—that the government would bring something to say that they are doing something but they are not really doing it.

With all of the debates that we have had with the civil service and certain persons in the civil service that are concerned about equity . . . because I think this comes back to the question, whether or not certain persons are being treated in a different way.

Now, if it is not an important concern of our government that all persons within our jurisdiction be forced to save, and if we can make exceptions when it is convenient, where do we stop? Is it being said that the person who comes from overseas is more interested in that 15% each month than they would be in having that 15% go into a pension plan they would get at a later stage in their lives and could be transferred from this jurisdiction to another jurisdiction if they left?

I think that somehow it is being said that there would be greater motivation for the person to come here and work in this country if he had that 15% extra at his disposal to spend. What about the person who lives here? Wouldn't it also be correct to assume that I would be better off if I could get my money and spend it too? Why are you keeping me from getting my money? Why are you taking my percentage and putting it in a plan? Why are you forcing me to put mine in the plan? I believe I would be better off too. I just cannot see how I am going to live when I am 65 anyway.

Let's say we argue that way. Let's say that the person who is now 27 years old and working with the civil service is much more interested in getting a mortgage, in getting a house, and therefore that 15% is important. There are all kinds of reasons why other persons might want to present the point that it is more important for them at this particular point to be exempt from the plan and to have that 15% available.

So, when you start bending the rules without consistent philosophies in order to suit circumstances and arguments . . . I don't know. It really weakens the resolve of the society to say in a very determined way that we believe it is not just good for Caymanians, it is good for all persons to make sure that they save something out of their salaries and wages for their senior period in life.

So, I think this clause, in making the amendment, weakens the strength of that resolve of the state. So, there is not very much I can say against this except to say that we have to be careful with this type of manipulation, this type of exemption. Well, we feel that people are going to complain if we give them pensions and give them the 15%. But we cannot take the 15% from them, so we have to go ahead and create a completely new condition for them.

It does not make much sense, Madam Speaker.

The Deputy Speaker: Does any other member wish to speak. Proceedings will be suspended for five minutes in order to allow the tape to be changed.

PROCEEDINGS RESUMED AT 6.39 PM

The Deputy Speaker: Please be seated. Proceedings are resumed. Does any other member wish to speak? If no other member wishes to speak, would the mover wish to exercise his right of reply? The Honourable Third Official Member.

Hon. George A. McCarthy: Madam Speaker, thank you very much. I would like to respond to the First Elected Member for George Town and the Fourth Elected Member for George Town by saying that I have noted the comments that have been so eloquently shared, and I will give the assurance that the views expressed will be conveyed to His Excellency the Governor who has responsibility for the civil service.

The Fourth Elected Member for George Town referenced the amendment that is being proposed to Clause 3. The amendment gives greater precision to the wording as now set out in Clause 3, but the substance remains the same. I would like to thank honourable members for their support.

SUSPENSION OF STANDING ORDER 46 & 47

The Deputy Speaker: Before I put the question, proper procedure was not followed earlier when I asked for the suspension of Standing Order 46. I should have asked the Honourable Official Member for the suspension of Standing Orders 46 and 47 to allow the two Bills to go through the three stages today. So, I would ask you before I put the question to move a motion for the suspension of Standing Order 46 and 47 to allow the two Bills to go through the three stages.

Hon. George A. McCarthy: Madam Speaker, I so move.

The Deputy Speaker: The question is that Standing Orders 46 and 47 be suspended in order to allow the two Bills to go through the three stages. I shall put the question: Those in favour please say Aye. Those against No.

AYES.

The Deputy Speaker: The Ayes have it.

AGREED: STANDING ORDERS 46 & 47 SUSPENDED TO ALLOW TWO BILLS TO GO THROUGH THE THREE STAGES.

The Deputy Speaker: The question is that a Bill entitled the Public Service Pensions (Amendment and Validtion) Bill, 2000 be given a second reading. Those in favour please say Aye. Those against No.

AYES.

The Deputy Speaker: The Ayes have it. The Bill has accordingly been given a second reading.

AGREED: THE PUBLIC SERVICE PENSIONS (AMENDMENT AND VALIDATION) BILL, 2000 GIVEN A SECOND READING.

The Deputy Speaker: Bills, Second Reading.

THE FINANCE BILL, 2000

The Clerk: The Finance Bill, 2000.

The Deputy Speaker: The Honourable Third Official Member.

Hon. George A. McCarthy: Madam Speaker, I beg to move the second reading of a Bill entitled, The Finance Bill, 2000.

Honourable members will recall that at the time of presenting the Budget Address on 26 November 1999, it was pointed out that the government, in order to assist the public to purchase necessities, had taken the decision to remove duties on various food items and to substantially reduce the licensing of bulk water distributors. Accordingly, the government stated that it was pleased to announce the removal and the reduction of selected revenue measures as set out in what was then given as Appendix A.

In addition, the government went on to say that being mindful of any potential harmful effects of the revenue measures introduced in 1999 on the tourism and other sectors of the local economy, it had established a task force to take input from the public and to make recommendations in regard to these measures.

Mention was also made that the study had been completed, and the consensus that emerged recommended the removal of the increases on alcoholic beverages with the exception of champagne.

Since that time, the government has also consulted with representatives of the agricultural society who had expressed concerns about the removal of duty from certain locally grown items. This Bill will reinstate duty on those items that are produced locally, but the exemption will remain in effect on those fruits that are imported into the island but which are not produced within the Cayman Islands.

Secondly, the government has also had consultation with the Restaurant Association in order to rationalise the fees. There were concerns expressed that there were varying rate structures within given bands. This has now been factored into the amending Bill. And for ease of reference, I have provided an analysis for the benefit of honourable members to see what the effect of these changes will be in terms of moving from the old to the new rates. Through you, I will invite the Serjeant-at-Arms to distribute these Bills.

Under the Trade and Business Law, honourable members will recall that the increase in 1999 put utility services, bulk water distributors rate up to $25,000. This has now been reduced to $5,000 as set out in the Bill.

It can be shown that previously, restaurants with seats for 30 or less the rate was $350; the new rate will be $325. Restaurants with seating capacity from 31 - 60, the annual fee used to vary between $600 - $1,100, this has now been standardised at $500. Seating capacity of 61 - 100 customers, previously $1,350 to $2,100; this has now been fixed at $1,000. Seating capacity of 101 to 150, previously ranged between $2,350 to $3,350; this will now be fixed at $1,600. Seating capacity of 151 to 200, previously ranging between $3,600 and $4,600, the new rate is $2,500. The seating for 200 or more customers, previously was $4,850; this has now been fixed at $3,500.

The effect of standardising these fees will bring about a reduction of $40,000 or possibly less in overall fees in this category to the government. So, overall this sends a very good message to the local economy and the restaurant association that the government is very much mindful of the concerns as expressed and when expressed.

Continuing under the Customs Tariff Law:

Madam Speaker, the rest of the items as set out in the Bill mirror those as advised to this Honourable House during the presentation of the Budget. As I mentioned earlier, this sets out very clearly what the overall changes to the fee structure will be after the safe passage of this amending Bill. Thank you.

The Deputy Speaker: The question is that a Bill entitled the Finance Bill, 2000 be given a second reading. The motion is opened for debate.

The Fourth Elected Member for the district of George Town.

Dr. Frank McField: Madam Speaker, as late as it is in the evening, I should want to know from the government, the type of logic that is involved in their duty system with how they reduce one day, and they put it up the next day and then they reduce it and so forth.

There should be a more precise methodology for arriving at what is fair and what actually provides the country with the type of protection it needs to give to local producers of whatever.

It appears strange also that at some late date like this we come in with the argument about farmers. All the time that certain people have spent in this job and the fact that they also have a Minister of Agriculture . . . could not this particular point or position have been integrated earlier? We have to wait to this stage to get this type of amendment?

Now, when I look at the fruits that are now going to be the suspect to protection (in other words, the persons producing these fruits will be protected by government levying a 15% duty on the importation of these fruits) they are now put into two categories—those fruits that are to be produced here locally, although those fruits still imported will now have a duty.

Now, you are going to put a 15% duty on the breadfruit, but you said the breadfruit is grown locally. What happens when the breadfruit might not necessarily be in season and it might be imported? What happens, for instance, when you get the sweet sops? I know I eat a lot of sweet sops when I can get them. Maybe these sweet sops are not anything more than luxury fruits these days and, therefore, it should not matter if 15% duty is placed upon them in order to protect the growers of sweep sops.

But are they grown in such a quantity that protection needs to be given to the growers? I mean, where are we now? Are you saying that you are putting the duties back on for some other reason than to protect local growers of pumpkins, star-apples and melon?

I had no discussion really with the farmers and the Farmer's Association. I had a discussion with one person who is the head of the Farmer's Association who really was against what I was doing with regard to trying to reduce duties on foodstuff in order to see if I could affect the cost of living since no one was doing anything to affect the wages for people in this country.

If you are going to do nothing to affect the wages and see a general improvement in the wages, if you are going to do nothing about a minimum wage, if you are going to do nothing to encourage, at least, collective bargaining in the workplace to see that there is an improvement in the wages, but you are going to be willing to work to maintain duties on certain foods in order to protect certain groups because the philosophy is at the end of the day, we need to produce food for ourselves so that we should at some point develop to where we are self-sufficient or almost self-sufficient with regards to local produce . . . it is a desirable point and the persons that argue this point to me, I understand their argument.

But was it such a difficult argument that the government needed to have the farmers lobbying the government in order to get them to retract and now do something different than they intended to do?

I am going to be honest and I am going to stay with my original intention because I believe that my desire to have duties reduced is really based upon the fact that I would like to see if I could help to improve the lives of working Caymanian families. Since there is not very much that we seem to be able to do in the Legislative Assembly to improve the lives of working Caymanian families—since we do not legislate wages but we do legislate Finance Bills that have an impact upon the price of consumption items—I decided that I would take up this position out of a desire to try to do something here.

Now, we find that the government is saying that plantains and bananas should have a 15% duty to protect the persons that are producing them. In what quantities are they producing them? Could they be protected in such a way as to protect the farmers and also protect the consumer, the persons who make plantains and banana a part of their weekly diet?

The farmers are well organised in this country. They have the agricultural show and, therefore, they have a united and collective voice. They have been able to impress upon the government why they should replace the duty on these items. Working people in this country don't seem to have the same type of united voice. The consumers that must pay the extra money for the mangoes, papayas, breadfruit, and the golden apples have no voice here today. Therefore, it is assumed that it will happen because if you don't do what the organised farmers say, you might lose votes in election.

I heard people speaking to me, as if I should know that if I don't go along with their particular interest they are lobbying I would be penalised.

So what? You win some and you lose some.

I am going to stay on the side of the majority if that is the fair side. I am saying that if government is going to use this to protect the farmers, why don't they put back the duties on bakery products? Why are we going to have bakery products, including biscuits, move from 20% and be [duty] free and not replace that? We heard that Wholesome Bakery has gone out of business because of the removal of duties. What about all of the other bakeries?

I am not arguing that we should replace this duty because I think that competitors, growers, and producers have to learn to be competitive—to give the consumer a break. Not everything must be paid for by the consumer. If I want to farm, that's a risk that I become involved with. It is not a risk that I feel I can divide equally among members of society without them having a choice or a say.

If you are going to protect these particular growers today, what about the people who might be producing cabinets? What about the people who might be producing other things in the society, like water? Are we going to get to a point in our society where we use tariff as a way of protecting certain local industries?

I think government's use of import duties as a means of making revenue is one thing. Traditionally, I think that is what we have done. But if we are going to now embark upon a course of using the tariff in order to produce locally grown goods, that is already the development of a different approach to economy.

We are saying the fact that there is no tariff on fruits grown in Florida is responsible for the depreciation in value of the fruits grown here. That is ludicrous because economics has told us over the ages that protectionism does not result in the improvement of the conditions of the persons that the tariffs are made to protect.

The old argument in America and other places is why you had to create tariff to restrict trade between the countries. This was so that the people who were working and labouring in your own country were not depressed and kept at a stage of poverty. Yet, the removal of protective tariffs and free trade in the world has improved the general living standard of working people all over the world.

The working people in Germany, England, America, Sweden, Ireland, and all these places have improved their standards as a result of the development of free trade. So, protectionism by using tariff does not necessarily protect the growers of these products at the end of the day.

I said before that we needed to find much more creative and dynamic ways of assisting the farmers because the farmers should be assisted. But the farmers, like everyone else, sell their goods—they do not give them away. They are involved in business just like anyone else is involved in business. I believe that what is important is that people have access to goods and services in this country at a reasonable price and that government does not interfere in making it possible for me to go to the supermarket or any place and have to pay a price simply because they limit the choice by using tariff in order to make one product more expensive.

Madam Speaker, I am not going to say much about the way in which the government has brought down the rates on restaurants, because I am quite sure this had to do with the task force they set up to study these things. You wonder why they don't set these task forces up before they go and do these things. Why can't they consult with the same people that they consulted after the reaction? It is almost like governing according to reaction—'we will do this and then when people react we will see what we have to do to pacify everyone.'

But it makes the people in the country feel that everything government does can be attacked by one group or the other and government does not have a serious philosophy, no permanency from the point of view of what they believe in. They believe in what they can be convinced of at the moment.

I think that especially when it comes to duties and increased duties, government needs to have a philosophy that is a little fairer. I think to put the duties back up on all these fruit items, while at the same time lowering certain types of cost on alcohol . . . when we are going to lower the cost on alcohol but we have not brought anything to lower the cost on school uniforms . . . I think that expresses the philosophy that government will react only when people learn how to act as a pressure group. So, I think that maybe in a few months or so when we come back to something, we will have our little pressure group from the point of the union able to bark sufficiently at the government to also get maybe a few things done.

[Prayers read by the Second Elected Member for Bodden Town]

The Speaker: Please be seated. The Legislative Assembly is in session. Item number 2 on today's Order Paper, Reading by the Speaker of Messages and Announcements.

READING BY THE SPEAKER OF
MESSAGES AND ANNOUNCEMENTS

VOTE OF THANKS

The Speaker: Honourable Members, I rise this morning to take the opportunity to extend my deepest appreciation to all Honourable Members, officers of the House, friends and well-wishers for their interest, concern and good wishes during my illness. I would like to take this opportunity to thank the Honourable Deputy Speaker who performed the task in my absence so ably, and I will forever be grateful to all of you.

OBITUARIES

Mr. Michael Foster

The Speaker: On a sad note, since we were last in session the First Elected Member for George Town had a tragedy in his family, namely, [the death of] his stepson, Michael Foster. On behalf of all Honourable Members I would like to extend our condolences to his wife and all the family.

Mrs. Sharon Knowlton

Also in my district, one of our very beloved young ladies, the sister of the Honourable First Official Member, passed away after a rather long illness. The whole community is deeply saddened by it. In addition, the First Official Member's father also sat as a Member of this Honourable House.

I want to express on behalf of all Honourable Members to the immediate family and to the community on a whole, our deepest condolences upon the loss of one of our distinguished young ladies.

Thank you.

The Speaker: I recognise the Honourable Minister for Education, Aviation and Planning.

ADJOURNMENT

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: Mr. Speaker, I move the adjournment of this Honourable House until Monday, 12 June at 10.00 a.m.

The reason for this is that several members of this Honourable House—the Honourable Minister of Tourism, the Honourable Financial Secretary; the Honourable Attorney General; the Third Elected Member for George Town and I will be leaving the island tomorrow for talks with the Financial Action Task Force (FATF) which has been set up by the G7 nations, the larger nations such as Japan, United States and UK.

It is really our opening talks with them. The talks will be similar in many respects to that of the OECD, but into a different area in many respects. These are extremely important and critical talks for the Cayman Islands and we would ask for everyone's prayers as we go off on this.

That is the reason why we have asked for this adjournment and we have spoken to Members of this Honourable House. Thank you.

The Speaker: I shall now put the question that this Honourable House do now adjourn until Monday, 12 June 2000. Those in favour please say Aye. Those against No.

Item number 3, Reading by the Speaker of Messages and Announcements.

READING BY THE SPEAKER OF

APOLOGIES

The Speaker: We have apologies from the Honourable First Official Member who is overseas on official business. The Honourable Second Official Member is also absent. I have apologies from the Second Elected Member for Bodden Town. I also have apologies for the late arrival of the Honourable Third Official Member.

HOUSE PROCEDURE

The Speaker: Honourable Members, I rise this morning to talk to you briefly on procedure. We have a long agenda ahead of us. Much is to be accomplished and there are many important things happening in the year 2000. I want to say there are many questions and motions. I want to say that it will be necessary that I watch relevance and repetitious debate very closely. I ask that you help me in order that this proceeding can go as rapidly and as correctly as possible.

I also want to speak to you on the times that this Honourable House will sit. In Standing Orders, we should commence proceedings at 10.00 a.m. I ask your cooperation. We are also entitled to two breaks—one in the morning and one in the afternoon if members so choose. I ask that we curtail these breaks to a maximum of 15 minutes and eliminate them when possible.

It is important that we get the country's business taken care of, but it must be done according to procedure. I thank you.

Item number 4 on today's Order Paper, questions to Honourable Members/Ministers. Question 1 is standing in the name of the First Elected Member for George Town.

QUESTIONS TO HONOURABLE
MEMBERS/MINISTERS

QUESTION 1

No. 1: Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts asked the Honourable Minister responsible for Agriculture, Communications, Environment and Natural Resources to state the production levels of turtle meat at the Turtle Farm for the past four years and to indicate the state of the present breeding stock at the Farm.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Agriculture, Communications, Environment and Natural Resources.

Hon. John B. McLean: The question will be answered in two parts (a) and (b) as follows:

- (a) Production levels of turtle meat at the Cayman Turtle Farm for the past four years:

| Years          | Turtle Meat Produced |
|----------------|----------------------|
| 1996           | 96,516 lbs.          |
| 1997           | 114,330 lbs.         |
| 1998           | 104,921 lbs.         |
| 1999           | 107,577 lbs.         |
| Jan - May 2000 | 48,093 lbs.          |

It is estimated that 74,440 lbs. of meat will be produced during the remainder of this year, an estimated total of 122,533 lbs. this year.

- (b) The breeding herd consists of 184 turtles from the wild, or wild eggs, and 115 first generation captive breed turtles. These animals are removed from the pond and examined each year prior to the beginning of the breeding season and unhealthy turtles removed for treatment. The breeding stock is, in our professional opinion, in good health.

SUPPLEMENTARIES

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Thank you. Can the Minister state if the volume of meat produced is based on the demand for that meat, or is it based on the ability to produce that amount?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Agriculture, Communications, Environment and Natural Resources.

Hon. John B. McLean: It has been based on the demand for meat.

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Can the Minister state, if the demand were increased, is the farm presently able to cope with an increased demand and to what level is it able to cope?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Agriculture, Communications, Environment and Natural Resources.

Hon. John B. McLean: While we cannot give a specific amount, we could increase the demand if we needed to.

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: I am assuming what the Minister meant was that you could increase the supply.

Can the Minister state if it has been the policy of management to try to get the stock to the point where the size of the turtles butchered is up to a higher weight? What is that weight now, and is there any intention to getting it to a larger weight since most members of the public prefer the meat of the larger turtles?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Agriculture, Communications, Environment and Natural Resources.

Hon. John B. McLean: The turtles that are butchered now are kept for about four years and average about 110 pounds. It is possible that the turtles could be grown out more like the Member has just mentioned, but it would be much more costly to actually produce the meat. So it would mean a couple of things: First of all, we would have to increase the price of meat, which we have been trying to keep down.

The Speaker: Before calling on the First Elected Member for George Town, does any other Member have a supplementary?

Did you have a follow-up the First Elected Member for George Town?

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Can the Minister state if the numbers given in the answer are considered to be acceptable to create continuity with the numbers of stock in the Turtle Farm? If so, is there any padding with regard to the amount kept there, or is it just on the border line?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Agriculture, Communications, Environment and Natural Resources.

Hon. John B. McLean: As the Member mentioned there is a padding, if we want to call it that, because we do realise a lot of turtles could have been kept and grown out. So, definitely we do have padding in there.

The Speaker: Are there any further supplementaries? If not, we will move on to question 2, standing in the name of the Second Elected Member for Bodden Town.

DEFERRAL OF QUESTIONS 2 AND 3

The Speaker: Unfortunately, the Second Elected for Bodden Town is off the island. So, with the permission of the House, we will set this down for a later sitting. Those in favour please say Aye. Those against No.

AYES.

The Speaker: The Ayes have it. That includes questions 2 and 3.

AGREED: QUESTIONS 2 AND 3 DEFERRED UNTIL A LATER SITTING.

The Speaker: Question No. 4 standing in the name of the Third Elected Member for Bodden Town.

QUESTION 4

No. 4: Mr. Roy Bodden asked the Honourable Minister with responsibility for Education, Aviation and Planning to state the Ministry's plans for the establishment of a third high school on Grand Cayman.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Education, Aviation and Planning.

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: Plans are underway to establish a third High School on Grand Cayman to be ready for students in September 2003. The school will take students in Years 7 – 12 and is proposed to be located in the Bodden Town area of the Island. The school will also serve as a major hurricane shelter for the Bodden Town area of the Island.

SUPPLEMENTARIES

The Speaker: The Third Elected Member for Bodden Town.

Mr. Roy Bodden: Can the Minister explain more precisely when he says, "the Bodden Town area"? Presumably, this school will serve the eastern districts of Bodden Town, East End and North Side. Am I to understand when the Minister says "the Bodden Town area" that it is going to be within the physical precinct of Bodden Town? Or is there any consideration of siting the school at a more central location where it would be equal distance from East End, North Side and Bodden Town?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Education, Aviation and Planning.

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: At present, land is being looked at in the Lower Valley area and is expected to draw its student body from around the eastern and mid-eastern districts of the island.

The Speaker: The Elected Member for North Side.

Mrs. Edna Moyle: Would the Honourable Minister say that this facility in Lower Valley will be serving the children from the district of North Side, since it is for the eastern district?

Before he answers that, would it not be better to put this facility somewhere in the area of either Breakers or Frank Sound, where it will serve that community? The school children in North Side right now are at the bus stop at 5.45 a.m. in the morning. They don't return to that district until after 6.00 p.m. in the afternoon, some of them.

Would the Minister say if he would look at an area where, as my colleague from Bodden Town just said, is an equal distance for all students from the eastern districts?

The Speaker: Honourable Minister of Education, Aviation and Planning.

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: By all means. Any suggestions that members have on this, if you get them into the ministry we will put this to the department and the members who are working on this within the department.

The Speaker: Are there any further supplementaries?
The First Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: I noticed in the answer that the Honourable Minister gave he said that the school will take students in Years 7 -12. I am certain that is inclusive. Now, at present, what we have is the George Hicks High School and the John Gray High School, which have those six years split. George Hicks deals with Years 7 - 9 inclusive, and John Gray deals with Years 10 - 12 inclusive. What will this do for the system itself bearing in mind that you are going to have two campuses: one separated dealing with Years, 7 - 12 divided into two, and another campus which will have all six years together?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Education, Aviation and Planning.

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: Mr. Speaker, with three schools we don't really have a choice on it. Ultimately, when there is a fourth school, then that aspect of the division can be looked at. The campus will have to be kept reasonably small, which it will initially but the only way that this third can work will be if we do a full junior high and high school together.

The Speaker: The Third Elected Member for Bodden Town.

Mr. Roy Bodden: I don't understand really what the objectives are. If it is expected to serve the three eastern districts, that is, Bodden Town, East End and North Side, and the initial plans are for it to be located somewhere in the Bodden Town area . . . and I noticed that it will also serve as a hurricane shelter for the Bodden Town area. Am I then to understand that somewhere in the original conception the school was only design to serve the Bodden Town area?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Education, Aviation and Planning.

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: The answer to that is no.

The Speaker: The Third Elected Member for Bodden Town.

Mr. Roy Bodden: I take the Minister's answer. Now, I wish to ascertain from the Minister to whom should we submit this suggestion to site the school an equal distance from all three district? Because we are quite serious about this and we would like to formally make this suggestion in the initial stages while it can be accommodated in the design and discussions of the plans.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Education, Aviation and Planning.

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: If the suggestions, together with the reasons, could be sent to the Ministry I will move it on to a committee that has been dealing with this.

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: I am a bit perplexed at the Minister's answer with regards to my question before about the third high school accommodating Years 7 through 12, which I am not suggesting it should not, by the way.

I am not satisfied with the answer that the Minister just gave me. First of all, perhaps the Minister could give us the reasoning behind the two high schools that now exist, each one only accommodating three years, that is, 7 through 9 for one and 10 through 12 for the other.

I understand he is saying that the better plan would be to have two more, that is what I understood him to say—one dealing with Years 7 through 9 and the other, 10 through 12. Can the Minister explain to us what are the advantages of having the system and campuses split two ways compared to Years 7 through 12 on one campus?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Education, Aviation and Planning.

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: Mr. Speaker, the basic reason had been to separate the middle school children, the first three years from the last three years. Especially once this school becomes large, dealing with a range of ages it becomes more difficult. I did mention a bit earlier, and I hoping this school . . . well, it obviously begins small because it will draw on areas where the present two schools are not, and we should be able to pull the three schools down to a better size.

The Speaker: Are there any further supplementaries?
The First Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Based on the answer the Minister just gave, does he still hold fast to the concept—given the atmosphere that prevails at present and given the history of those two schools which have existed separately now for several years—it is the right thing to separate those age groups in high school?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Education, Aviation and Planning.

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: The answer to that is yes. I think it would be better if we could build two high schools. At present, we do not have the funds. Therefore, I will be requesting the department to ensure that schools will be kept reasonably small and the proper guidelines will be in place for dealing with it. We now have two very good schools, the George Hicks and the John Gray. They are extremely good and I have no doubt that the third school will also be kept at a very high standard and that the necessary procedures will be put in place to effectively deal with the school.

The Speaker: Any further supplementaries?
The Third Elected Member for Bodden Town.

Mr. Roy Bodden: I would just like to ascertain from the Minister if the full implications of what he is proposing have been investigated because in essence what is happening is that you are having one system and two policies. Can the Minister say how this system is going to be managed administratively and sensibly if what he says is going to obtain come September 2003?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Education, Aviation and Planning.

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: While I would welcome any suggestions the member has, we are now doing exactly that in Cayman Brac. So we, therefore, have twenty-odd years of experience in doing this. There is a system in place in Cayman Brac and it works well. The school is kept small and it is a very good school, as the member knows. They have consistently had some extremely high CXC exam [results]—in fact, best in the Caribbean. That school has worked very well, so we do have the expertise within the school system, the department, and the ministry.

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for George Town. Two additional supplementaries after this.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: We will share them.

What the Minister has just said we accept to be a fact. Would it not be a better consideration then, given that the numbers would be much smaller in each location, for us to have three high schools and end up with a fourth high school in the Cayman Islands with all of them, Years 7 through 12, keeping them small?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Education, Aviation and Planning.

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: The member has not been following what I am saying in this respect. The two present schools . . . and the reasoning is that it is fairly easy to deal with a full middle and high school up to certain sizes, but once a school gets very large it then becomes far more difficult to deal with through high school. Cayman Brac, as I mentioned earlier, is a much smaller school. I would not propose to attempt to change two very good schools that are working well and which have very good results, which the parents are happy with, and turn them into totally different schools from that point of view.

Also, they are side by side up there so geographically it seems to me it would not help the travelling distance any more than it is now if this had been borne in mind.

The Speaker: Are there any further supplementaries? If not, then we will move on to question 5, standing in the name of the Elected Member for North Side.

QUESTION 5

No. 5: Mrs. Edna Moyle asked the Honourable Minister responsible for the Ministry of Education, Aviation and Planning what are the requirements and qualifications for persons who are appointed teachers' aides in government primary schools.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Education, Aviation and Planning.

Hon. Truman M. Boddén: The requirements and qualifications for persons who are appointed as teachers' aides in government primary schools are as follows:

- The person must have a high school diploma, a minimum of 5 CXC passes, which must include mathematics and English.
- The post holder must be computer literate, have a caring attitude and a strong desire to pursue teaching as a career after one to two years as a teacher's aide.

SUPPLEMENTARIES

The Speaker: The Elected Member for North Side.

Mrs. Edna Moyle: Would the Honourable Minister say if all teachers' aides or support assistant teachers, I think they are called, have these qualifications in government primary schools at this time?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Education, Aviation and Planning.

Hon. Truman M. Boddén: I would not like to try to answer now on support assistance, but I do know the position on the teachers' aides is as set out in this answer. The teachers' aides basically want to move on to teach.

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for West Bay.

Mr. W. McKeeva Bush: Mr. Speaker, can the Minister say after one or two years as a teachers' aide whether the government grants these persons a scholarship?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Education, Aviation and Planning.

Hon. Truman M. Boddén: Education and the teaching profession for scholarships is given first priority. Anyone who qualifies to become a teacher will get a scholarship, or I should say has gotten the opportunity to get a scholarship, and that is I think without exception, sir.

The Speaker: The Elected Member for North Side.

Mrs. Edna Moyle: I wonder if the Honourable Minister would be in a position to state the difference between the qualifications for teachers' aides and support staff?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Education, Aviation and Planning.

Hon. Truman M. Boddén: The basic difference is that the teachers' aides are looking at a career in teaching and looking to go off to become fully qualified teachers. The support assistants in effect can range from fully qualified teachers (if we can find them) through to persons who may have a high school certificate but who the department feels would fit into that position.

In other words, they could be older people (and so could a teachers' aide), but by and large they are really not people who are looking to go on to become a teacher.

The Speaker: The Elected Member for North Side.

Mrs. Edna Moyle: So, basically the only difference between the teachers' aide and the support staff is that the teachers' aide is looking to go on to become a qualified teacher, but the support staff is not. Am I correct in understanding that?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Education, Aviation and Planning.

Hon. Truman M. Boddén: That is basically correct, except that they may not necessarily have, say, five CXCs. What I would have to really do if the Elected Member for North Side wishes to have details on the support assistance—because I did not come really prepared on that—I could get any further details she may wish, sir.

The Speaker: The Elected Member for North Side.

Mrs. Edna Moyle: This will be my last supplementary. I wonder if the Honourable Minister would undertake to have the department investigate that all teachers' aides and support staff for the government primary schools do come in line with the qualifications that are required by the Department of Education.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Education, Aviation and Planning.

Hon. Truman M. Boddén: I so shall do, sir.

The Speaker: Are there any further supplementaries? If not, that concludes Question Time for this morning.

Moving on to Other Business, Private Members' Motions. Private Member's Motion No. 13/2000, Conflict of Interest Legislation, to be moved by the First Elected Member for George Town.

OTHER BUSINESS

PRIVATE MEMBER'S MOTION NO. 13/2000

CONFLICT OF INTEREST LEGISLATION

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Mr. Speaker, I wish to move Private Member's Motion No. 13/2000.

The Speaker: Do we have a seconder?

Mr. Roy Boddén: Mr. Speaker, I wish to second the motion, sir.

The Speaker: Private Member's Motion No. 13/2000 has been duly moved and seconded. Does the mover wish to speak to it?

The First Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: I will read the motion itself. The reason why I did not read it at the very onset is because I wish to draw to your attention (as I had discussed with you before) that there is an amendment to the original motion, which I seek to move.

Unfortunately, the amendment has not been circulated, and perhaps if we wish to just give members a couple of minutes, then I will continue.

The Speaker: I think that would be appropriate.

In the interest of time maybe the First Elected Member for George Town could read the motion if that's—

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: I don't have a problem with that, sir, I simply wanted to make sure members had it in front of them. Mr. Speaker, Private Member's Motion No. 13/2000 reads:

"BE IT RESOLVED THAT the Government consider enacting legislation which clearly establishes parameters which would avoid conflicts of interest on the part of Elected Ministers and Official Members of Executive Council in the pursuit of their public responsibilities and their private business interests."

Now, the amendment which I have sought leave of your good self to bring is simply an additional resolve section. If I could, I would like to read that.

The Speaker: Please go ahead.

AMENDMENT TO PRIVATE MEMBER'S MOTION 13/2000

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: [The amendment reads]: "In accordance with the provisions of Standing Order 25(1) and (2), I, the First Elected Member for George Town, Aviation and Planning, seek to move the following amendment to Private Member's Motion No. 13/2000 entitled Conflict of Interest Legislation by adding the following resolve—

The Speaker: Before you do that, let us do it right. Do we have a seconder for this amendment?

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: I was just going to read it, and get the seconder this time. But I can do it just like I did before. No problem, sir.

The Speaker: Bear with me.

Mr. Roy Boddén: Mr. Speaker, I respectfully beg to second the amendment, sir.

The Speaker: An amendment to Private Member's Motion No. 13/2000 has been duly moved and seconded. Please continue.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: To just go on, sir, that amendment reads, "BE IT FURTHER RESOLVED THAT the Government enact legislation based on the Guidelines for a Code of Conduct for Members of the Legislative Assembly as tabled in the Legislative Assembly on the 27th September 1996."

The Speaker: You may continue with your debate.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Mr. Speaker, I just need to ask you, before I continue, are we going to do what you have in the past preferred to do and deal with the original motion? Or the amendment together—

The Speaker: Let me put that to the House.

Honourable members in view of this amendment having been moved and seconded and presented to the House which adds an additional resolve section, would it be an agreement that we debate it as amended rather than having two separate debates?

If members would wish that we debate the motion and then come back to the amendment I have no problem, but I would just like to get on with proceedings.

The Third Elected Member for Boddén Town.

Mr. Roy Boddén: Mr. Speaker, in the interest of time and bearing in mind the position as indicated by the Chair, sir, it would seem in the best interest to debate the amendment at the same time that we are debating the substantive motion.

The Speaker: Do I have an indication from Government? The Honourable Minister for Education, Aviation and Planning.

Hon. Truman M. Boddén: Mr. Speaker, we have just seen this amendment, and I think we need a bit of time to consult on it. It may be better if the Honourable Member goes on and during the break we would be able to discuss this and figure out if we can go on jointly from there or whether—

The Speaker: The only problem I have with that is that this motion, which has been accepted, is on the floor, the amendment to the motion. So, if necessary, we could take a short break.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Mr. Speaker, if I may, sir.

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: I appreciate what you are saying. But my understanding of the situation that obtains at present is simply this: If we are not able to encompass both, then what is going to be debated right now is the amendment. The reason I was suggesting we marry the two, sir, is because they are so inter-locked with lines of argument; and, in the interest of time, if I debate those separately it is going to take much longer to deal with, than if the two of them were together. That is the only reason why I was saying what I was saying, sir.

The Speaker: It is a bit early for the morning break but I would suggest that we take the morning break. I shall suspend proceedings for fifteen minutes.

PROCEEDINGS RESUMED AT 11.58 AM

The Speaker: Please be seated. Proceedings are resumed. It is my understanding that we will now proceed with the amendment to the motion. Do you wish to speak to it? The First Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Mr. Speaker, just seeking your guidance, sir. I don't have a problem going either way, but are we going to be dealing with both? Or do we need to get one out of the way.

The Speaker: Maybe I should explain myself.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Yes, sir.

The Speaker: Once this motion is on the floor of the House, we will have to deal with it without the amendment. Once it is amended, we shall debate the motion as amended.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: In that case, Mr. Speaker, even if I am not 100 percent sure about the reception of the amendment I will have the opportunity to wind that up. Then I won't speak on it. I will hear what members have to say about it.

The Speaker: I shall now put the question that Private Member's Motion No. 13/2000 be amended—

Does any member wish to debate it? The floor is open to debate. (Pause) Does any member of Government want to debate? (Pause) If there is no debate then I will put the question.

The question is that Private Member's Motion No. 13/2000 be amended as follows: “BE IT FURTHER RESOLVED THAT the Government enact legislation based on the Guidelines for a Code of Conduct for Members of the Legislative Assembly as tabled in the Legislative Assembly on the 27th September 1996.” Those in favour please say Aye. Those against No.

AYES.

The Speaker: The Ayes have it. Private Member's Motion No. 13/2000 has been duly amended.

AGREED: AMENDMENT TO PRIVATE MEMBER'S MOTION NO. 13/2000 PASSED.

The Speaker: We shall now debate Private Member's Motion No. 13/2000 as amended. The First Elected Member for George Town, do you wish to move it?

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Just before I move into that motion as amended, there was another amendment. We just wish to know where that is going and then we will be able to continue sir.

The Speaker: It is my understanding that will be dealt with later in the debate.

Mrs. Edna Moyle: Mr. Speaker, if I may sir. Standing Order 25 (5) says, “When two or more amendments are proposed to be moved to the same motion, the Presiding Officer shall call upon the movers in the order in which the amendments relate to the text of the motion, or in case of doubt, as he shall decide.” [Standing Order 25(6) says,] “Any amendment may be withdrawn at the request of the mover . . .” but certainly, we should deal with both amendments to see whether they are negated or carried before we debate the motion as amended, I would think.

The Speaker: I beg to differ with that. It says in the motion on which they are presented. The First Elected Member for George Town asked to move his amendment, so I am moving that. When the Honourable Minister for Education, Aviation and Planning asks for his amendment, we shall then move that. It says “in the order they were received.” It does not say “consecutively.”

Please continue First Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Mr. Speaker, the motion as amended thus far will now read, “BE IT RESOLVED THAT THE GOVERNMENT consider enacting legislation which clearly establishes parameters which would avoid conflicts of interest on the part of elected ministers and official members of Executive Council in the pursuit of their public responsibilities and their private business interest.

“AND BE IT FURTHER RESOLVED THAT the Government enact legislation based on the Guidelines for a Code of Conduct for Members of the Legislative Assembly as tabled in the Legislative Assembly on 27th September 1996.”

Now, this business about a code of conduct for legislators, while that is the second resolve, I am going to begin by just talking about that for a few minutes. This is something that has been kicked around in this Parliament from before I got here. On more than one occasion, moves have been made to deal with this aspect of the activities of the country's representatives. It got as far as the guidelines mentioned in the motion actually being tabled on the Legislative Assembly on 27th September 1996, but nothing went any further. So, the real purpose of this motion at present is to deal with legislation.

As of now, we have this Guideline which was tabled, but that is exactly what it says it is—simply a guideline. We also know that there is something called a Guide to Executive Council, which I understand deals with certain aspects of the activities of the members of Executive Council with regards conflict of interest. In both instances they are simply guidelines. At present, there is no real legislation which can dictate specifically and clearly exactly what parameters one should be examining as a legislator with regards to one's activities in all the various areas.

So, this motion is seeking simply for legislation to be created to encompass both activities, that is, both the activities of members of Executive Council and the activities of all members of the Legislative Assembly.

Mr. Speaker, the fact is that while we actually have a ministerial system in place to a certain degree, constitutionally the reason why we have two sections in this motion now is because there are activities which members of the Legislative Assembly participate in, in the decision-making process, but you have a second tier where the Executive branch of Government makes other specific decisions which ordinary members of the Legislative Assembly don't participate in. It is for that reason why the motion is actually in two parts.

Mr. Speaker, when we talk about conflicts of interest, this motion is actually but a small point of a big picture that we are trying to create. It all has to do with the two words that you and others may hear us mention quite often and those two words are “transparency” and “accountability.” This is but another part of the whole scheme to create the machinery in the operations of government which are going to be not only conducive but are actually going to fall in line directly with the principles of transparency and accountability.

At present, the public you always hear rumours about this one or that one or the next one and what they did and what they did not do. And on many a occasion there is simply no mechanism in place to ensure that the accountability and the transparency exist so that you can put those types of rumours (if that is what they are at the end of the day) to rest.

We have access, Mr. Speaker, to other legislation, which has been put in place in other jurisdictions and we also have access to the Guidelines which were created, for a Code of Conduct for Members of the Legislative Assembly. Those guidelines basically deal with many areas that, once we have proper legislation in place, would take care of any risky situation that might occur either by perception or reality with regard to the activities of legislators. Once we have the legislation in place, there can be no question. And no legislator, present or future, once the legislation is in place, will be able to make any judgment calls and not have proper legislation as a guide for the activities that are acceptable and those that are not.

In the Guidelines for a Code of Conduct for Members of the Legislative Assembly, Mr. Speaker, if you would allow me, sir, I just wish to read one paragraph of those guidelines to explain the position that is being taken with the motion.

The Speaker: You may.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: It reads at the very beginning, “It is the personal responsibility of every Member of the Legislative Assembly to maintain those standards of conduct which the House and the electorate are entitled to expect, to protect the good name of the Legislative Assembly and to advance the public's interest. Members should observe the general principles of conduct which apply to all people in public life. Those general principles are: selflessness, integrity, objectivity, accountability, openness, honesty and leadership.”

It also address financial interests, and then it goes on to outline the various areas that need to be addressed and certainly would be addressed in any legislation that is coming forward.

I am not going to make the opening a very long one, Mr. Speaker, bearing in mind your talk to us this morning. But what I am going to do at present is to just give a basic outline from the very first resolve section and perhaps members can make their own comments with regard to that. Most of the working of this is not just debate, it is the legislation that needs to be created. Perhaps I don't have to go into all of the details of what such legislation will encompass in order to prove the motion, as I think most members were here before, and even those who were not here before, have a feel for what we are trying to achieve.

When we talk about the parameters we wish to establish that would avoid conflicts of interest on the part of Elected Members and Official Members of Executive Council in the pursuit of their public responsibilities and their private business interests, this is not to do with any individual, Mr. Speaker. It is simply something that we feel is quite necessary. Times have changed. Whereas in years gone by there would be no questions asked, the public is much more aware. The truth of the matter is that the political atmosphere is a bit more tense, and people are called to task more often by their peers, by their colleagues, and by the public at large. So, we find it very necessary to be able to have the type of legislation so that there won't be questions in the minds of the public and fellow legislators.

When we talk about financial interest in the Guidelines, it does not limit itself to Executive Council Members but it spreads throughout the entire Legislative Assembly. It says, "A Member must not promote any matter in the Legislative Assembly or the Executive Council in return for payment." It does specifically address certain other areas, which I don't need to go into. But I want to impress that while there is a separation in the two resolve sections and one might want to say that the second resolve can take care of the first, what we wish to impress in this motion is that there actually needs to be a differentiation in the rules and regulations because of the decision-making process and the level of that decision-making process between the Executive branch of Government and the Legislative branch of Government. So, that is the whole purpose of the motion.

What I am going to do now, Mr. Speaker, is simply allow members to give their input and depending on what that input is we will see how far we have to go with regard to any more detail about it. As I said, the important thing is the creation of the legislation.

The last thing I would like to say before I close off my opening remarks is that we mentioned nothing about a select committee in the motion. With anything of this nature, history has proven to us over ten years that select committees have not been able to get us to the point that we need to get to. There is a lot of research that has been done. A lot of information is held in the records and, of course, there is a lot of information which we have access to that we can put together and give to the people who draft such legislation for them to be able to draft it. So, we are not seeking a select committee because we are seeking to get this done as fast as possible.

The Speaker: The floor is opened to debate, does any other member wish to speak? The Honourable Minister for Health, Social Welfare, Drug Abuse Prevention and Rehabilitation.

Hon. Anthony S. Eden: Thank you, Mr. Speaker, just to speak briefly on the motion and to indicate Government's support of the motion. I would like to assure the mover and the seconder that we have certainly talked amongst ourselves and would not look at putting this motion into select committee, as most people know what happens to motions when they go that route.

I think it is a very good and timely motion. I don't have to say that this is an election year. It has a good basis as I see there are certain components already in place such as the Register of Interest and the Guidelines for a Code of Conduct for Members of the Legislative Assembly, which was dealt with back in 1996. I feel sure other members will go into more detail but, as I said, I feel this is timely and I think Government has no problem dealing with this.

As far as the legislation goes, as we all know there are certain areas that we cannot legislate. But I think we have basically a good Guideline in the Code of Conduct. I would like to assure the mover and the seconder that we have no intention of putting this motion into a select committee, and Government does intend to support this. Thank you very much.

The Speaker: The floor is opened to debate does any other member wishes to speak? The Third Elected Member for Bodden Town.

Mr. Roy Bodden: Mr. Speaker, the motion and its accompanying amendment fall into the category quite rightly articulated by the honourable mover, promoting transparency and accountability. There are those of us on this side who for many years now have been discussing amongst ourselves how best we can improve what some of us see as the fraternity of politicians. We have come to the conclusion that the best way for us to effect the kinds of changes we would like to see effected is if we do so ourselves. History has proven that when sanctions or improvements are forced from the outside usually they are harsher and are more like to meet with objection and obstruction than when they come from within.

That being the case, we believe that this move as it accompanies the Register of Interests is a move to further streamline and to serve to let the outside know that as politicians we are serious about projecting ourselves in responsible above board transparent and accountable ways.

Those of us on the backbench who hang together have been discussing this motion for quite some while. When we were in the throes of early discussion, the First Elected Member for West Bay floated the idea that we should have moved the motion earlier. But the consensus of opinion at that time (for a varying number of specific reasons) was that was not the appropriate time to move the motion. Therefore, the group decided that we would defer the move until this time when we believed we would have had a better grasp of where the motion should go, a better feel of members' attitude towards the acceptance of the motion and certainly we would have had a greater sounding of members' dispositions as regards transparency and accountability and how much turf members were prepared to yield.

As a consequence of that, Mr. Speaker, we have decided, after some wrangling among ourselves, that this would be the more appropriate time to bring the motion with its accompanying amendment. For obvious reasons one of the things we wanted to show is that we as representatives of the people are prepared to be as open and as transparent and accountable for our actions as we should be, particularly those of us who are seeking re-election. We did not want to convey any impression of arrogance, or that we were above any kind of control. And, certainly, we wanted to let the public know that we were prepared to be answerable.

Mr. Speaker, I am reminded that as early as 1989 there was a motion brought to this honourable House calling for a code of conduct for legislators. That motion came again in 1994, and was unanimously approved. But not much was done. Now, it is necessary to arrive at a situation where we have specific legislation, which sets out the parameters within which members should separate their public responsibilities from their private business interest—if for no other reason, Mr. Speaker, than because this is an accepted practice in other jurisdictions, particularly those jurisdictions who follow the Westminster style of Parliament.

It has also to do with the increasing importance ethics have come to play in the conduct and behaviour of Members of the Legislative Assembly, as well as Ministers of Government. It is my understanding that the ministers already have some guidelines by virtue of the fact that they are governed by some code, which sets out the practice and behaviour for members of Executive Council. But we also believe that in a world where it is recognised that there should be some freedoms, that Parliament should be such that it attracts the highest calibre of people. That is, not only people who are professional politicians, but persons who are free and who have a certain encouragement to carry on private, economic, and business activities. We believe that there should be some clear-cut rules and parameters that separate this conduct between a person's public responsibilities and their private business interest.

Perhaps the greatest example of the importance of this was some years ago in London with the tabling of the Nolan Report, whose official title was Standards in Public Life. I would like to briefly refer to a text entitled Parliament and the People: The Reality and the Public Perception, by Philip Laundy. Laundy is quoting the Nolan Report. Mr. Speaker, I will selectively choose some important and relevant short references, the first of which has to deal with Members of Parliament. The Nolan Report recommended that Members of Parliament should remain free to have paid employment unrelated to the their role as MPs.

I am made to understand that in Westminster many of the honourable Members have paid consultancies, so it was necessary for the Nolan Report to draw clear lines between conflicts which arose from paid consultancies and the behaviour which was strictly in order and in line with a Member representing his constituents.

When it comes to Ministers, Mr. Speaker, the problem is no less important. In some jurisdictions outside of the jurisdictions practising the Westminster system, there is a serious and clear-cut sanction against persons who grey the area or who mistakenly make the public responsibilities stream over into their private business interest.

Mr. Speaker, I am sure being a follower of the American system you will be familiar with the case of Wilbur Mills who was the Chairman of the Ways and Means Committee, and the trouble he got into with the employment of someone who could not even type let alone offer any other professional service. There are other celebrated cases of more recent history, so it is widely accepted in democratic systems of government that there should be a clear-cut separation that there can be no greying or blurring of the area at all.

To approach the matter from the perspective of laying out for elected officials the clear parameters is not to admit that elected officials are any more susceptible, but, rather, to highlight the willingness and the recognition that elected officials themselves would like to see the parameters set out so that there can be no misconstruing, no insinuation of any abuse of authority on the part of detractors.

Conflict of interests is a grey area of behaviour that is often unethical but not illegal. So I guess an important point to underscore is that we are saying that conflict of interests as it comes to affect elected officials is usually classed as unethical behaviour, but in most cases there is no illegality or no criminal intent. We would like to see that we in the Legislative Assembly of the Cayman Islands recognise that we have an obligation to abide by certain high moral standards. We would like to see going into the 21st century the highest code of conduct and the highest demand on present and future Members who inhabit this Legislative Assembly.

I want to underscore that by saying that the motion is not seeking to besmirch any honourable Member. It is not seeking to cast aspersions on any honourable Member. It is not seeking to belittle any honourable Member. It is seeking to address a need that we see should be addressed at this time in our Legislative Assembly development, and one that is also in keeping with current international trends and practices.

Mr. Speaker, the mover mentioned that there is specific legislation that deals with the business of conflict of interests. I would like to say (without stealing so much of the mover's thunder) that when we were discussing this motion we sought copies of this legislation. We have a copy (which was procured by the deputy clerk), which I am sure the mover will make available. I have already circulated a copy to your good self, and in discussing this with my colleagues to assure them and to inform them as to what we were doing, I gave some copies to them.

What is important to state at this point is that we are no different from many other parliaments that are trying to maintain a sense of professionalism, a sense of responsibility, and certainly to promote accountability. It is recognised that Members of the Legislative Assembly and Members of Parliament in many jurisdictions have ample and great opportunities to promote themselves and to promote their interests by virtue of the fact that they are privy to certain information and to certain decision making.

I believe that a certain amount of this exists in all parliaments and in all jurisdictions. Certainly, there are celebrated cases. I was reading some cases of the Ukraine shortly after they devolved from the old Soviet Union. There were about 160 members of the new Ukrainian Parliament who found themselves in very blatant conflict of interest situations. The Ukraine Government had to embark on drafting conflict of interest legislation that sought to extricate Members from such a position.

Mr. Speaker, it has to be realised and it has to be recognised that sometimes these situations are not necessarily of the honourable Members' own making or crafting. Sometimes, quite inadvertently, people find themselves in situations.

I am reminded too that recently in the United Kingdom there was a case where the Parliamentary Commissioner (responsible for pursuing charges of conflict of interest among honourable Members the United Kingdom) had an investigation into the conduct of one, Mr. Bowen Wells, who was a Conservative Member of Parliament, as a result of his association with the company called Belize Holdings and its association with Belize Bank. Well, after some torrid, incendiary, and long investigations, Mr Wells was exonerated of any kind of criminal behaviour, although the conclusions did on two counts find his conduct less than professional. He was exonerated of any serious charge which would have ruined his legislative career and ruined his tenure in the House of Commons. But it served the Members of the House of Commons to realise that even they themselves—the Mother of Parliaments, as we call them—still need to keep an eye out occasionally for potential conflict among Members and their private association.

This motion, therefore, has implications for better conduct. It, along with the Register of Interests we have in place, will serve to inform, encourage, and to notify the public that their representatives have every intention of setting a system where they are prepared to abide by the rules they set themselves.

Mr. Speaker, I often refer to the Members of the Legislative Assembly as a fraternity. And, indeed, it is. And I take it seriously. I believe that when I first floated the idea some Members were skeptical and may even have bordered on being cynical. But I believe that some honourable Members are now catching on.

Those fraternities which have the greatest respect, Mr. Speaker, are fraternities which draft their own code of practice and their own code of behaviour, and that sanction themselves and set their own standards. And we have in the Cayman Islands numerous examples. We have the whole business of the Bar Association, the Law Society, the Society of Professional Accountants, and the Medical and Dental Association. Why not ensure that sitting Members of Parliament (and also by inference prospective members, because there is no shortage at this time in our development of prospective members) having some kind of standard that people can see, identify with, and decide whether they want to apply these standards to themselves.

Mr. Speaker, if for no other reason I would think that is a good way of weeding out the goats from the sheep, and separating the tares from the wheat. It would be good if we had some kind of booklet at the beginning of the election campaign that contained the requirements for Members to behave and abide by. Then certainly, honourable Members themselves, as well as the wider public who will be the eventual judges and selectors of these people, will be able to have some yardstick.

Now, having said that, I want to make one clear and important distinction and differentiation: I am not inferring that Members do not have a right to their private behaviour. I am not taking about that. I am not [interested] if a Member wishes to go to a night-club or if a Member wishes to escort A or B. That is of no interest and of no consequence and has no bearings on the Member's ability to perform in the Legislative Assembly. It has no bearing for that matter on a Member's honesty. What I am speaking about is behaviour and conduct that directly impinges upon a Member's bearing and his responsibility and his conduct. That is, whether a Member is honest or whether a Member is truthful, that is a different matter.

I am not talking about whom the Member decides to keep as a friend, or whom the Member decides to spend his time with. I believe that such matters are largely irrelevant and should have no bearing on a Member's ability to be a good legislator or a good representative.

So, what the motion is talking about has strictly to do with things like honesty, integrity in business, ethics, and whether a person can be depended upon to uphold obligations and commitments given. Mr. Speaker, it is in this light that I believe that the motion and its accompanying amendment are timely. I am happy that the Government has seen fit to accept it, although there is still an amendment to be debated and elaborated upon. I am anxious to see what avenue that amendment is going to take.

I think that the Legislative Assembly in accepting this motion and its amendment is sending a clear and unequivocal message that honourable Members realise that they have obligations and that they are committed to being transparent in their actions and their activities and that they are prepared to be accountable.

I think also it is saying that we recognise that our conduct and our performance as representatives of the people and as legislators can best evolve and can best be developed by we ourselves bringing forward motions and bringing into play changes that we think should come from within. In other words, intrinsic rather than extrinsic, because if a movement comes from within there is a greater chance that the movement is sincere and that it will be respected. And it certainly will be accepted rather than if it is external and extrinsic forced from the outside as a result of some embarrassment, some breakdown, or some scandal.

For the most part, honourable Members of the Legislative Assembly in these instances have been amenable to these kinds of moves because we recognise that our role is important and that we are not above challenge and we are not above being held accountable. I think that it bodes well for us in the Legislative Assembly at this time to be sending the kind of message we are sending by accepting this motion. And, certainly, for it to be accepted by the Government with such graciousness means that even as we are entering into perhaps adversarial politics and election campaigning, Members still have the good sense to realise that there are moves designed for the general good of the fraternity.

Mr. Speaker, it gives me great pleasure to have been associated with such a move. And it would be remiss of me if I didn't mention, before I conclude, that in these times, many people—detractors as well as sincere people want to ask, 'What have you contributed in the last four years? What have you done?' Mr. Speaker, I suppose it is important to get streetlights, to get roads fixed, to get civic centres built, to get schools built, and to give people pensions and health insurance. That's very important. Often times the contributions we make are not so tangible and not so easily measured. What about the contribution of those people who set in place codes of ethics and behaviour for all to abide by so that they can be not only law-abiding and responsible but so that they can operate with integrity, honesty, ethics and with consideration?

Sometimes the greatest contribution (not taking anything away from those people who build buildings, fix and create roads, who give streetlights and civic centres) is having the sense to realise that it is also necessary to establish a code of behaviour and a code of practice so that the peace, good order, understanding and good relations can continue. Those people also make contributions. And sometimes it is difficult in the throes of battle and in the heat of the political campaign to take these kinds of accomplishments in the same light as one takes the building of a highway, or the building of a school, or some other such more visible edifice.

I contend that if Parliament had not evolved the way it has (that is, that the Serjeant-at-Arms is the only person authorised to bear a sidearm), we would have a much different place. I want to underscore the contribution that Members who support these kinds of motions and who bring these kinds of motions make. I want to caution against the interpretation of those persons who are successful at getting vast physical projects to the detriment of those persons who contribute in other ways by supporting motions such as this.

Mr. Speaker, I am optimistic. I can only look forward as one who has been on the record as promoting what are now the buzzwords of "transparency" and "accountability." And, as I should say and I never usually do this, but as one who was foremost in floating the idea that Members of the Legislative Assembly should view themselves as a fraternity (when I say "Members of the Legislative Assembly," I mean both the official and the elected Members) should view themselves as a fraternity and should be prepared to set these kinds of parameters and should also be prepared to respect one another as members of the fraternity. That does not mean that we cannot and we should not differ at times, but that we should be careful to contain such differences in the most respectful of terms as does the fraternity.

I am not suggesting that we should become some kind of secret society, but I believe that it behoves us, if we are to continue to act in a civilised way, to recognise that we ourselves should be the ones who set the standards in terms of a code of conduct and ethics and the parameters to avoid conflicts of interest if we are to continue to operate successfully. Thank you, sir.

The Speaker: Honourable Members, it is almost time for the luncheon break. I would suggest that rather than calling another Member to speak that we take the luncheon break.

But prior to that, under Standing Order 72(8) to ask a leave of the House that a select committee can be held commencing at 2.30 PM this afternoon in the committee room. Those in favour please say Aye. Those against No.

AYES.

The Speaker: The Ayes have it. The House will now suspend for lunch and we will reconvene at the completion of the select committee meeting.

AGREED: SELECT COMMITTEE MEETING TO BE HELD AT 2.30 PM.

PROCEEDINGS SUSPENDED AT 12.50 PM

PROCEEDINGS RESUMED AT 3.55 PM

The Speaker: Please be seated. Proceedings are resumed. Debate continues on Private Member's Motion No. 13/2000, as amended. Does any other Member wish to speak? We did have another amendment tabled for this motion—

The floor is opened to debate, does any other honourable Member wish to speak? (Pause) I am in the hands of Members. I cannot wait much longer.

The First Elected Member for West Bay.

Mr. W. McKeeva Bush: Mr. Speaker, I would just like to draw the Chair's attention that while no one is rising to speak, the Minister of Education has an amendment. If he allows the motion to be put then he cannot bring the amendment.

The Speaker: Does any other Member wish to speak? If not then I am going to have to call on the Honourable mover to exercise his right of reply.

Honourable Member for Education, Aviation and Planning, is it your intention to withdraw your amendment and we go ahead and wind-up this debate?

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: I would take that decision in accordance with the Standing Orders at a later stage if that is okay with you, sir.

The Speaker: Well, I have no choice, if no one wishes to speak, but to call upon the mover to exercise his right of reply.

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: That is good, sir, I appreciate that.

The Speaker: No other Member wishes to speak? Does the honourable mover wish to exercise his right of reply?
The First Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Mr. Speaker, I will be happy to do that, sir. But just seeking guidance from the Chair, if I reply to the motion as amended and the vote is taken, at that point in time is it automatic that the other proposed amendment, which is not being dealt with now will fall away? Or does the mover of that amendment have the right, after the vote is taken to deal with that amendment? which is what I understand from what he has said.

The Speaker: My understanding of the rules is that once they vote on the motion as amended and it has passed, that goes into the records as being a motion passed. What action is taken after that will be a separate issue.

The First Elected Member for George Town do, you wish to wind-up?

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Yes, sir.

Mr. Speaker, I think perhaps it is quite easy this afternoon, based on what has transpired, not to have to go into a bunch of details to justify bringing the motion.

I would like to do two things: I would like to call on the Government, understanding from the Honourable Minister of Health, who responded on behalf of Government, to ensure that the legislation being called for is actually brought forward to this honourable Legislative Assembly as speedily as possible.

In my own way, I also wish to just give a word of caution with regard to this motion. This is a very serious issue. It is one that every Member of this Honourable Legislative Assembly should find very comfortable to not only support but to assist in whatever way possible to get this legislation created. It is only aimed at a more efficient functioning parliament. It is also aimed for the public whom we serve to feel more comfortable with the integrity of this Legislative Assembly and its functions and the integrity of the Government on a whole.

I am confident that all Members, those on the Backbench and those in the Executive branch of Government, wish to be part and parcel of a Government that retains its high integrity.

Now, Mr. Speaker, I had a lot of information prepared that I would be happy to give anyone access to. The seconder of the motion in his delivery alluded to documents received through the goodly office of the Clerk with regard to relevant information from other jurisdictions. I am certain that will be helpful in the preparation of the legislation that is needed.

I sense something here, Mr. Speaker, and I trust your judgment with the information you provided when the questions were just asked before I wound-up this motion. I am going to leave it alone—

The Speaker: May I inject this? My decision was made in accordance with Standing Order 25(4) and I will read it for Members' benefit. “An amendment to a motion may be moved and seconded at any time after the ques- tion upon the motion has been proposed by the Presiding Officer and before it has been put by him at the conclusion of the debate thereon.” So, there is no further amendment.

It further goes on to say, “When every such amendment has been disposed of, the Presiding Officer shall either again propose the question upon the motion or shall propose the question upon the motion as amended, as the case may require, and, after any further debate which may arise thereon, shall put the question to the House.” So, my decision stands. Please continue.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Yes, Mr. Speaker, thank you very much.

As I said, bearing in mind the obvious support for this motion I will not go into the long details. I think that will probably be served best with regard to passing on of the information for the process of drafting the legislation, and I would sincerely hope that such legislation will come forward very quickly and perhaps if at all possible for this to happen before prorogation.

I would gladly table the documents that I have —

The Speaker: If you so desire, please do. So ordered.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: There are probably a few more which I might have access to, which I don't have at this point in time, but I will be happy to pass those on also.

So, without going into the details of this motion any further, I wish to thank Members for their support and notwithstanding the many hours of research that have gone into it, I am certain that once the legislation is realised that this Legislative Assembly, and, in fact, this country, will be better equipped to deal with the way forward as a nation. Thank you.

The Speaker: I shall now put the question on Private Member's Motion No. 13/2000 as amended. Those in favour please say Aye. Those against No.

AYES.

The Speaker: The Ayes have it. The motion is passed.

AGREED: PRIVATE MEMBER'S MOTION NO. 13/2000, AS AMENDED, PASSED.

The Speaker: Moving on to Private Member's Motion No. 10/2000, Establishment of a “Safe House” for Battered Women and Children.

DEFERRAL OF
PRIVATE MEMBER'S MOTION NO. 10/2000

The Speaker: I note that the Second Elected Member for Bodden Town is not present. With the leave of the House I would like to move on to the next motion. Those in favour of deferring this motion for a later sitting please say Aye. Those against No.

AYES.

The Speaker: The Ayes have it. Private Member's Motion No. 10/2000 has been deferred until a later sitting.

AGREED: PRIVATE MEMBER'S MOTION NO. 10/2000 DEFERRED TO A LATER SITTING

The Speaker: Moving on to Private Member's Motion No. 11/2000, In-depth Discussion on Increased Interest and Electrical Rates. This motion is moved by the First Elected Member for West Bay.

The First Elected Member for West Bay.

PRIVATE MEMBER'S MOTION NO. 11/2000

Mr. W. McKeeva Bush: Mr. Speaker, I am not prepared to take that motion today but I am prepared to take the one that was the first motion circulated in this honourable House, Motion No. 7/2000, which should not be any quibble with the Government because they have already spoken on it and given their position on it. So, I can deal with Private Member's Motion No. 7/2000.

The Speaker: I must deal with the order as set down by the Business Committee. If it is the wish of the House that we do otherwise we can yield to it, but if you wish to defer that motion, you can move a motion and we shall put it to the House. Do you wish to have that deferred to a later sitting?

Mr. W. McKeeva Bush: Mr. Speaker, do I need to move a motion?

The Speaker: Well, I have to get the leave of the House. The mover of Private Member's Motion No. 11/2000 is not ready to present it at this time. With the leave of the House, I put the question that we defer this to a later sitting.

The Honourable Minister for Education, Aviation and Planning.

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: Before this is dealt with maybe we could have a few minutes to consult.

The Speaker: Certainly, if you wish we will adjourn but I will ask that you make it very brief.

We shall suspend proceedings.

PROCEEDINGS SUSPENDED AT 4.11 PM

PROCEEDINGS RESUMED AT 4.30 PM

The Speaker: Proceedings are resumed.

HOUR OF INTERRUPTION—4.30 PM

The Speaker: We have reached the hour of interruption, I would entertain a motion for the adjournment of this honourable House, but before doing so, in an informal discussion we had last week we discussed the possibility of sitting later in the afternoons. I would like an indication as to what time, if we would want to do it on Wednesday.

The Third Elected Member for Bodden Town.

Mr. Roy Bodden: I think it was mooted that we would try to operate at least until 6.00 p.m. so that we could dispatch of the business at hand within a reasonable time, sir. But if today is an indication of that, I am much afraid we will have to extend it until 10.00 p.m.

The Speaker: I will now entertain a motion for the adjournment.

Mr. W. McKeeva Bush: Mr. Speaker, before you adjourn, can anyone say what happened? I mean we adjourned for something, and I was on the floor. At least we should have some explanation as to what their intentions are—what am I supposed to do?

The Speaker: I must follow rules. Our Standing Order says that no business can be proceeded on after the hour of 4.30 p.m. unless provisions are made for it. We have reached the hour of interruption.

Mr. W. McKeeva Bush: Mr. Speaker, I am really not trying to quarrel with you in any sense, but we suspended to hear what would happen.

Mr. W. McKeeva Bush: Yes, all can be said and I think the Standing Order do say for a short time afterwards that is, the adjournment—a short time after 4.30 p.m.

The Speaker: I really don't want to start reading Standing Orders all the time. But Standing Orders are very clear that no proceedings should commence beyond the hour of 4.30. If the mover wishes to indicate why, what their decision was, the proceedings will then again resume on 10.00 a.m. Wednesday, I presume.

The Honourable Minister for Education, Aviation and Planning.

ADJOURNMENT

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: Mr. Speaker, I think in the interest of time it is better that I just move the adjournment of this honourable House until Wednesday at 10.00 a.m.

The Speaker: The question is that this honourable House do now adjourn until 10.00 a.m. Wednesday the 14th. Those in favour please say Aye. Those against No.

The Second Elected Member for Bodden Town is off the island on business, and the Fourth Elected Member for West Bay is sick and off the island for treatment.

STUDENTS FROM GRACE CHRISTIAN ACADEMY

The Speaker: At this time I would like to welcome the students from the Grace Christian Academy in the gallery this morning. They are from grades 4, 5, 6, and 7.

Moving on to item 3 on today's Order Paper, Questions to Honourable Members/Ministers. Question 6 is standing in the name of the First Elected Member for George Town.

QUESTIONS TO HONOURABLE
MEMBERS/MINISTERS

QUESTION 6

No. 6: Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts asked the Honourable Minister responsible for the Ministry of Agriculture, Communications, Environment and Natural Resources to give an update on the multidisciplinary study which is now being conducted by CH2M Hill.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for Agriculture, Communications, Environment, and Natural Resources.

Hon. John B. McLean: Work on the study for the Provision of Construction Aggregate and Fill Material is proceeding on schedule and within budget with completion due in the first quarter of the next year. Of the 27 individual tasks detailed in the project description, nine have been completed and seven are nearing completion.

Meetings have been held with a wide range of stakeholders through workshops, briefings, and individual interviews. Those included have been quarry and dredge operators, developers, government agencies and NGO's, the Central Planning Authority, DAB and DCB, Executive Council, Members of the Legislative Assembly and the Governor. The consultation process was conducted on all three Islands.

A workshop has been conducted with government agencies involved in the review of applications for quarry and dredge proposals with the objective of refining the process to improve service to the applicant and to provide decision makers with better tools to evaluate the proposals.

The draft report for improvements to the application review process was received from the consultants on 2 June. Following the initial appraisal and comments from the project's steering committee and the senior management review team, the report will be made available to stakeholders.

The commitment was given during the initial stage of the study to make the process and results freely available to stakeholders and the public. To this end, we will be implementing a public information programme. The plan includes a web site with information about the study and the facility for public comment, a Government Information Service Journal video, additional stakeholder briefings by the consultant, and numerous news articles and feature stories.

SUPPLEMENTARIES

The Speaker: The Third Elected Member for Bodden Town.

Mr. Roy Bodden: Can the honourable minister tell the House whether there are any ongoing dredging situations while this study is being conducted?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for Agriculture, Communications, Environment, and Natural Resources.

Hon. John B. McLean: There are no new dredging applications that I can think of that are in progress.

The Speaker: The Third Elected Member for Bodden Town.

Mr. Roy Bodden: Are there any old applications continuing now?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for Agriculture, Communications, Environment, and Natural Resources.

Hon. John B. McLean: I knew of a couple of applications that were granted to remove small amounts from old projects that could be ongoing. But I will not commit myself to say that I know that as of right now they are ongoing.

The Speaker: The Third Elected Member for Bodden Town.

Mr. Roy Bodden: Can the Honourable Minister tell the House if there are any approved applications that have not yet started?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for Agriculture, Communications, Environment, and Natural Resources.

Hon. John B. McLean: The only applications that I can think of were smaller projects that had been tying the major project with the sea . . . in other words, removing a small plug for the development.

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: The Minister said that of the 27 individual tasks detailed in the project description, nine have been completed and seven are nearing completion. Can the Honourable Minister state if the completed tasks are made available prior to the completion of the study? If not, what information would be on the website?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for Agriculture, Communications, Environment, and Natural Resources.

Hon. John B. McLean: There are some that are completed. I could make it available. I don't think it has been given out openly. We are trying to keep everything together until most of it is completed before giving it out.

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Can the Honourable Minister state what is the plan to keep Members of the Legislative Assembly informed during the process? Or is it that it is only on completion that we will have dialogue with these people again?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for Agriculture, Communications, Environment, and Natural Resources.

Hon. John B. McLean: It is my intention to keep the Legislative Assembly abreast of what is happening. As a matter of fact, it was my intention to do as the question asked. But since the question came, I did not have to do that. If it is necessary for us to get the full Legislative Assembly together for a briefing with these individuals, I will be most happy to arrange that.

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Do the terms of reference for the study appear on the website so that the public would know exactly what the study contains and entails?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for Agriculture, Communications, Environment, and Natural Resources.

Hon. John B. McLean: What is meant here, as I understand it, is that once we have most of this study carried out it will be put on the website. I don't think that it is on the website at this present time. But any information that I can impart to the Legislative Assembly, I will be happy to.

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: If we are saying that the website has not yet been established, I accept that. But the answer said the plan includes a website with information about the study and the facility for public comment.

When it gets to that point, will the Minister ensure that such things as the terms of reference are included on the website so that the public may be able to comment from an informed position?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for Agriculture, Communications, Environment, and Natural Resources.

Hon. John B. McLean: I will give the undertaking that that will definitely be done.

The Speaker: The Third Elected Member for Bodden Town, two additional supplementaries.

Mr. Roy Bodden: The Minister said that meetings have been held with a wide range of stakeholders, for example, quarry and dredge operators and developers. Can the Honourable Minister say whether it is the intention of the organisation conducting the study to have further meetings with these stakeholders, particularly if there are any findings that would allow the conductors of the study to inform the stakeholders as to how they may more efficiently carry out their operations?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for Agriculture, Communications, Environment, and Natural Resources.

Hon. John B. McLean: Yes, as is laid out in the last paragraph, additional stakeholder briefings with the consultants will be done, and I am sure this will be beneficial to both sides. It definitely will be done if needed.

The Speaker: The Third Elected Member for Bodden Town.

Mr. Roy Bodden: At the conclusion of the report when it is circulated, can the Honourable Minister tell the House what perceived course of action will be undertaken by the government?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for Agriculture, Communications, Environment, and Natural Resources.

Hon. John B. McLean: Once the report is sent into the ministry, it will be my duty to take it to Executive Council, and I can say no more on that at this point in time because I really don't know what decision will be taken. I know what my opinion will be, but I can't give that.

The Speaker: Are there any further supplementaries? If not, we move on to question 7, standing in the name of the First Elected Member for West Bay.

QUESTION 7

No. 7: Mr. W. McKeeva Bush asked the Honourable Minister responsible for the Ministry of Education, Aviation and Planning to state: (a) whether Government has recently purchased property in George Town for the relocation of the Sunrise Centre; (b) from whom was the property purchased and at what cost; and (c) if the principal and staff, as well as the Public Works Department, were involved to ensure that the property was suitable.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for Education, Aviation, and Planning.

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: Government has not purchased any site for the relocation of the Sunrise Centre at this time. Government negotiated for the purchase of some property in the George Town area, but negotiations have now ceased.

The principal of Sunrise Centre, as well as staff from the Education Department, Ministry, Lands and Survey and Public Works, was involved in the initial site visit. All teachers from the Sunrise Centre have toured the facility at this time.

SUPPLEMENTARIES

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for West Bay.

Mr. W. McKeeva Bush: Can the Honourable Minister say which property that was?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for Education, Aviation, and Planning.

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: The facility was the old Cayman Kindergarten Building.

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for West Bay.

Mr. W. McKeeva Bush: Can the Honourable Minister say who owns the property, and whether it is a two storey building?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for Education, Aviation, and Planning.

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: A two storey building, sir.

Mr. W. McKeeva Bush: The first part of the question is still not answered. Who owns the building? And, Mr. Speaker, did the minister have any discussion with the staff in this matter?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for Education, Aviation, and Planning.

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: It is owned by Alice Sinclair [?]

Mr. W. McKeeva Bush: The last part of the question is still not answered, Mr. Speaker. Can the honourable minister say whether he had any discussion with the staff or members of the House on that matter?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for Education, Aviation, and Planning.

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: The group that reviewed the Cayman Kindergarten included Mrs. Hyacinth Connolly, a senior assistant PS; Mr. Doss Solomon, an assistant PS; Mr. Alan Jones, and Mrs. Becky Francis from Lands and Survey; Mr. Peter Riley from PWD; Mrs. Margaret Garcia and Mr. Ralph Beckles from the Education Department; Mrs. Roberta Gordon from the Sunrise Centre.

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for West Bay.

Mr. W. McKeeva Bush: Mr. Speaker, if I listened to the answer to the supplementary question, it seems that only the principal was involved in that selection. Can the Honourable Minister answer the last part of my question? Did he have any discussion with the Members of this House regarding the purchase? And did he have any discussion with the staff? Is he not aware that the staff is not akin to purchasing this property? They are not satisfied.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for Education, Aviation, and Planning.

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: The staff looked at the property and did put in a letter to the department where they felt that this location was not suitable. I am not too certain what the Member is referring to about Members of the House—

Mr. W. McKeeva Bush: What I will do is explain: I had a complaint in regard to the purchase. I alerted the Minister that there was going to be a conflict. The staff wanted the Sunrise Centre to be in West Bay. For many years we looked around and we found a property. The principal was not satisfied with that property. I alerted the Minister that we understood there were negotiations going on for the purchase of the site—one by someone who was renting somebody's house and was going to buy the house after Government bought the property. That's what I am referring to.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for Education, Aviation, and Planning.

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: The Honourable Member did speak to me on this. I wasn't sure exactly what he was referring to, but that is correct.

The Speaker: The Third Elected Member for West Bay.

Mr. John D. Jefferson, Jr.: Can the Honourable Minister say what the proposed purchase price was?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for Education, Aviation, and Planning.

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: As I understand it, negotiations are going on. As the Member knows, I don't come into land purchases in Government, there is a procedure. But from the Lands and Survey it seems the price was C$399,000 at last negotiation.

The Speaker: Two additional supplementaries. The Third Elected Member for West Bay.

Mr. John D. Jefferson, Jr.: Is the Minister aware that there is a property available for this purpose in West Bay . . . and I know that the former Minister for community development (now the First Elected Member for West Bay) had negotiated with this party about purchasing that property. As I understand it, that property was being offered for $250,000 and the owner was prepared to give Government terms for the purchase of that property. It was not only a dwelling house, but large additional pieces of property. The staff in West Bay felt it was adequate and ideal for the relocation of the Sunrise Centre.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for Education, Aviation, and Planning.

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: I don't have the details of that property. But there is a group that will be looking at this. I know they will be reviewing other property and I will refer that to them.

The Speaker: Final supplementary. The Third Elected Member for West Bay.

Mr. John D. Jefferson, Jr.: In light of the fact that the majority of students of the Sunrise Centre are from the district of West Bay, can the Honourable Minister say if he would consider finding a property in West Bay?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for Education, Aviation, and Planning.

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: The suitability of any specific site would really be a decision that the group of people involved in the department, and of those I read out earlier. I am sure they will bear in mind not only where the students are from, but also where they work. I will ask the Chief Education Officer if he will ensure that they do look at the site and the suitability of that, along with whatever sites they may wish to look at.

Mr. W. McKeeva Bush: Mr. Speaker, I know you said no more supplementaries, and I am not going to ask one, I am just rising—

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for West Bay.

Mr. W. McKeeva Bush: Thank you. I am just rising to ask the Minister if he would ensure that the staff of the Sunrise Centre be consulted and that the matter be discussed with them as well as with the principal?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for Education, Aviation, and Planning.

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: Sure, by all means. I will ask the Chief Education Officer to ensure that.

The Speaker: Moving on to question 8, standing in the name of the Third Elected Member for Bodden Town.

QUESTION 8

No. 8: Mr. Roy Bodden asked the Honourable Minister responsible for the Ministry of Education, Aviation and Planning what strategies are currently employed to eliminate gang behaviour and other disruptive practices at the two Government High Schools on Grand Cayman.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for Education, Aviation, and Planning.

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: Counsellors, teachers of life skills, and other staff are working with students on an ongoing basis to handle anger and peer pressure; for example, at the George Hicks High School, a Peacemakers Club is a part of a skills project.

There is now a strong insistence by all staff that students must not bring in to school, or wear items that may indicate they are members of a gang—for example, red bandannas.

There is increased vigilance by staff regarding gang signs and symbols. Such instances are reported by staff, and students are counselled in these instances.

Continued involvement and assistance from the Police Community Relations Department and Juvenile Bureau have assisted both schools in use of preventative strategies.

Parental involvement through workshops has increased. For instance, in May, the George Hicks High School Counsellors combined with Educational Psychologists from the Education Department conducted workshops for parents to strengthen parenting skills. The Department of Social Services has also assisted in the area of counselling students and parents and the Ministry of sports has spearheaded many useful alternative activities to encourage the active participation of all youth. CASA's Youth-to-Youth and other church youth programmes are other examples of good programmes with the emphasis of increasing self-esteem in youth.

It is important to note that from the period beginning January 2000, there has been less gang-related activity inside the two high schools. Since the year beginning January 1999, a considerable amount of work was done to solve problems of gang related activities through counselling and involving the police in meetings with students who were believed to be at risk of this type of anti-social behaviour. While it is alleged that there are still students who associate themselves with particular gangs, the schools have taken a firm position that this behaviour will not be brought into schools.

SUPPLEMENTARIES

The Speaker: The Third Elected Member for Bodden Town.

Mr. Roy Bodden: Can the Honourable Minister say if there are any early intervention programmes in operation which would allow the feeder schools to identify and inform the high schools of youth with particular leaning towards gang or antisocial behaviour?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for Education, Aviation, and Planning.

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: While we do not have any specific programme in relation to gangs in the primary schools, we do have the life skills programme that would detect this type of behaviour and they do exist in the primary schools.

The Speaker: The Fourth Elected Member for George Town.

Dr. Frank McField: I would like to ask the minister if he means to say now that there were gangs in the schools?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for Education, Aviation, and Planning.

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: There are gangs in the community, and the answer is, yes, some of those members go to our schools. But what I have set out . . . I would hope that the honourable member would see this is a very comprehensive policy to deal with this type of behaviour. I would also like to point out sir—and here we are spending a lot of time on this, but . . . for every one child involved with gangs, there are another 200 or 300 good children who are not involved.

This is a small and sporadic type of behaviour. We have many, many, many good children in the schools.

The Speaker: The Fourth Elected Member for George Town.

Dr. Frank McField: Mr. Speaker, I would like to apologise to the honourable minister for asking a sensible question this morning. I would like to follow up by asking him, since he made a statement in paragraph 6 that there is some low self-esteem among the youth, if he could say if the cause of this has been identified.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for Education, Aviation, and Planning.

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: There could obviously be varying and diverse causes for low esteem among children. This is a matter that each case would be dealt with on an individual basis. The reasons for each individual student's problem would have to be looked at by the specialist in these areas, and then establish the cause of it, sir.

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for West Bay.

Mr. W. McKeeva Bush: When the minister says there have been some sporadic cases, can he say how many, how often, and how serious?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for Education, Aviation, and Planning.

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: I don't have those details. But I can undertake to get them from the two schools and to the honourable member.

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for West Bay.

Mr. W. McKeeva Bush: Just to say that I would accept the minister getting those figures so we can know exactly what the position is.

The Speaker: The Third Elected Member for Bodden Town.

Mr. Roy Bodden: Can the Honourable Minister tell the House whether there has been any attempt on the part of the Department or his Ministry to investigate the background causes of gang behaviour to ascertain whether there are any environmental or social causes which could be identified and thus eliminated in an attempt to completely eliminate this kind of behaviour before it takes greater hold?

The Speaker: Before calling on the Honourable Minister for an answer, I would appreciate a motion for the suspension of Standing Order 23(7) & (8) in order for Question Time to go beyond 11 o'clock.

SUSPENSION OF STANDING ORDER 23 (7) AND (8)

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: I move the suspension of Standing Order 23(7) & (8) to allow Question Time to continue.

The Speaker: The question is that Standing Order 23(7) & (8) be suspended to allow Question Time to continue beyond the hour of 11 o'clock. Those in favour please say Aye, those against No.

AYES.

The Speaker: The Ayes have it. Question Time will continue.

AGREED: STANDING ORDER 23(7) AND (8) SUSPENDED TO ALLOW QUESTION TIME TO CONTINUE BEYOND 11 AM.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for Education, Aviation, and Planning.

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: We would provide the necessary professional help for the children who are believed to be at risk in this area. That would include case studies that would look at the background of the children, would try to identify causes, and would try to actually deal with providing solutions to these problems.

I should point out that normally not just one person would take that decision. A group would do the study and look at each individual case.

The Speaker: The Elected Member for North Side.

Mrs. Edna M. Moyle: In his answer, the Minister stated "The Department of Social Services has also assisted in the area of counselling students and parents and the Ministry of sports has spearheaded many useful alternative activities to encourage the active participation of all youth." Can the Honourable Minister state what alternative activities have been set up by the Ministry of Sports? And are these activities set up throughout the islands?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for Education, Aviation, and Planning.

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: I understand that these are within the districts. The CODAC committees, churches, and community development officers within the districts assist with these different programmes, including sports within the areas.

I should say that this is really not my direct responsibility, so I would rather not try to give much more detail on it because it could be made subsequently a substantive question. But that's what I understand.

The Speaker: The Elected Member for North Side.

Mrs. Edna M. Moyle: I agree with the Honourable Minister totally, that this is not his section. But it came in a reply in a question addressed to him. I am aware that CODAC's community development officers and the churches have been involved in the districts for many years. I was just wondering if there were new ones, and if we could get some idea of what the new activities are that will help the youth in the outer districts particularly.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for Education, Aviation, and Planning.

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: I will request those and get them to the member, but I really don't have the answer here, sir.

The Speaker: Two additional supplementaries. The First Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: In the substantive answer, the minister states, "The Department of Social Services has also assisted in the area of counselling students and parents . . ." Usually, in cases like this dealing with matters which one could consider to be extreme because of the subject we are talking about, there is a follow-up programme and information is gathered about the results of the counselling sessions and the subsequent activities of the individuals counselled. Has this been done? If it has, is it documented?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for Education, Aviation, and Planning.

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: I understand that notes of the counselling meetings, or minutes, are not kept as such, but confidential notes are kept by the counsellors which they keep confidential to themselves. They use them for reference.

The follow-up does go on because once the child is studied the counselling moves towards continuous solution to the problem. The counsellor and anyone else he needs . . . and let me just mention that these gangs, as such, that we referred to operate within the community. That is why the social service officers, while we also get them into the schools, they too have a role to try and cope with this within the society outside the school as well.

Those programmes are in place. But, yes, we do follow up and it is very important not just in this type of problem, but with all the problems that we follow up.

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for George Town, this is the last supplementary.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: I understand what the Minister just said. In another supplementary it was asked whether any background study was done to determine the cause of such activities within the confines of whomever it happens with. My question was tied in with that.

If the path is not followed and documented it is going to be impossible to draw on that to deal with the situation in the future. It has to be all of that information that paints the picture giving you some idea as to what is happening and why.

From what I can glean, it doesn't seem that the effort is pointed enough in that direction. I am asking the Minister to take on board my thoughts, which are from a layman's perspective but which I believe make some sense. I also understand that it involves the school psychologist and all of those areas. I am sure they have their own method of record keeping. But if the energies are to be channelled in one direction we need to get all the various points that are doing certain things channelled in that manner. I suspect that at present it is not being done.

Not to say there is any specific reason why it is not so, but I am asking the Minister to take on board and convey this to make sure that it is done in a more concerted manner.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for Education, Aviation, and Planning.

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: I follow what the Honourable Member is saying. I have the Chief Education Officer here with me and I will ask him to take that on board and raise it with the people who deal with these matters.

The Speaker: Moving on to question 9, standing in the name of the Third Elected Member for Bodden Town.

QUESTION 9

No. 9: Mr. Roy Bodden asked the Honourable Minister responsible for the Ministry of Education, Aviation and Planning to provide the projected enrolment for the Government Primary Schools on Grand Cayman for the upcoming school year.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for Education, Aviation, and Planning.

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: The projected enrolment for the Government Primary Schools on Grand Cayman for the 200-2001 school year are as follows:

| School                | Projected Enrolment     | Projected Enrolment | Total |
|-----------------------|-------------------------|---------------------|-------|
|                       | Year 1                  | Years 2- 6          |       |
| East End Primary      | 20(20 in reception) | 97                  | 137   |
| North Side Primary    | 8(12 in reception)  | 45                  | 65    |
| Bodden Town Primary   | 25                      | 119                 | 144   |
| Savannah Primary      | 50                      | 268                 | 318   |
| George Town Primary   | 70                      | 380                 | 450   |
| Red Bay Primary       | 60                      | 375                 | 435   |
| John A Cumber Primary | 90                      | 400                 | 490   |

This gives a net increase of 63.

It should be noted that the registration process, which began on 1 May, will continue throughout the summer. The numbers are a combination of actual registration and projected based upon the projected numbers of four year-olds. Experience over the past few years has shown that actual enrolment has run a little lower than projected enrolment.

SUPPLEMENTARIES

The Speaker: The Third Elected Member for Bodden Town.

Mr. Roy Bodden: Can the Honourable Minister say how the process is going in terms of new enrolments, that is children registering to attend school for the first time? And is he in a position to inform the House what kind of response has been received by the department since registration 1 May?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for Education, Aviation, and Planning.

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: The registration as of 6 June 2000 is as follows: North Side Primary 10, East End Primary 6, Bodden Town Primary 7, Red Bay Primary 70, John A. Cumber Primary 28, GT 39, Savannah Primary 51, Creek Primary 6, Spot Bay Primary 6, West End Primary and Cayman Brac High none.

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for West Bay.

Mr. W. McKeever Bush: I see that West Bay is close to 500 and could be over that by the time school begins in September. Government accepted our request to start the process of getting another school in West Bay by purchasing property. This has been done. Can the honourable minister say what the way forward is, and when can we expect to see this building project started?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for Education, Aviation, and Planning.

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: We have purchased the property. As I understand it, the plans are in an advanced stage. We are looking to try to begin early this coming year. I can see the member's concern. The school is very large and the splitting of this is now a high priority.

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for West Bay.

Mr. W. McKeeva Bush: When the minister says in the coming year, does he mean the year 2001?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for Education, Aviation, and Planning.

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: The aim is for the full school to open for the September 2000 . . . in two years. It will open in 2001. Next year.

The Speaker: The Elected Member for North Side.

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: From his answer I can see that the little school in North Side has the least number of projected enrolments. I wonder if the Education Department has carried out any survey to see why the North Side School is not growing and if there are any plans in place to try to boost registration at North Side Primary.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for Education, Aviation, and Planning.

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: The reception classes help, the after school programmes help. However, what we have tried to do is keep people within the catchment area. However, it is a good school. Small numbers have their advantage as well. By all means, we can look at further things to attract. But at present, we haven't gone outside the North Side catchment area.

The Speaker: The Elected Member for North Side.

Mrs. Edna M. Moyle: I was not really referring to going outside the catchment area. I am concerned that people in my district are bringing their children to another catchment area. I think we need to find out the reason why and do whatever necessary to put the North Side Primary School where all parents are prepared to send their children to the North Side Primary School because it's within their district.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for Education, Aviation, and Planning.

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: We are aware that parents take their children outside the catchment area for convenience. Sometimes the story that is given to the principals provides that justification. I have heard where the child stays with a grandparent . . . and things are stretched a bit, but we try to keep strictly to the catchment area. I appreciate the member's concern. I have the Chief Education Officer here and we will pass this on. I know she has raised this in the past as well.

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: With the projected figures for the Bodden Town, Savannah, George Town, Red Bay and John A Cumber Primary Schools, can the honourable minister give us the number of classrooms available at each school so that, based on these projections, we can see how many students are going to be in each class?

Can he also address whether the Bodden Town Primary, one of the older schools with small classrooms, is going to be able to comfortably accommodate those 25 children projected?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for Education, Aviation, and Planning.

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: We would like to see a maximum of 25 to 27 in each class, with the exception of Red Bay which has much larger rooms, as the member knows.

I have met with the PTA in Bodden Town. We hoped to have one room added on. We were told it was impossible for PWD to build one classroom, even though we had $250,000 in time for September. We were told a month or two ago. It is hoped that for the coming year, four extra classrooms will go on. But in Bodden Town Primary, we are not taking on extra students beyond this Year 1 (25). They should not be taking children in Years 2 to 6, so that would remain as it is.

I have been told that we have four extra classrooms that came on line at Savannah Primary. As I understand it, we presently have sufficient classes to take these children. But, as the member knows, I pressed, and pressed, and pressed very hard, because I would like to have seen . . . and I tried to get ten classrooms in the new Spotts Primary School which would have given us a lot of flexibility and eased the high numbers in these other schools. But members of this House know what happened there, and I was not able to get the planning approval. In fact, that is still in the appeal stage.

We have a committee that presses on with trying to get that school in place. Ultimately that, plus the West Bay Primary School, will be what we need to assist and to put us in good shape so that we can plan for some years to come. All I can do is undertake (notwithstanding not getting the ten classrooms at Spotts) to do everything in our power to ensure that the children are properly accommodated and classes kept to a reasonable size.

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: While the minister has gone into some detail, he has not answered what I was looking for. I wanted him to tell me how many classrooms were available for each of the schools I asked him about. I didn't want him to say there were sufficient classes. I wanted to find out exactly how many classes are available for each school. That will let us know directly how many students will have to be in a class.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for Education, Aviation, and Planning.

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: The numbers are as follows: Bodden Town, with a projected of 25 has one classroom; Savannah, with a projected of 50, they would go into two classrooms, but there are four available there. They have four new classrooms. George Town Primary, depending on what they need, has four, but with this amount would probably only take three. Red Bay has two, and John A. Cumber has four.

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Is the minister saying that since these numbers of classrooms are available for Year 1 it means that all of the other streams, Years 4 through 6, are without problems whatsoever? If so, can the minister give us an idea if these projections are higher than last year's? How do they compare?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for Education, Aviation, and Planning.

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: The Chief Education Officer told me that we do have sufficient accommodation for the other classes. The net increase is 63 in Year 1. I understand that the projected enrolment for Year 1 has been set high so it is not expected that we would have that high a percentage. In fact, West Bay has the highest number of extra ones. So, we have a total of 63 in Year 1 throughout the system.

If the honourable member wishes any further statistics, I can make them available.

The Speaker: Are there any further supplementaries? If not, we move on to question 10, standing in the name of the First Elected Member for George Town.

QUESTION 10

No. 10: Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts asked the Honourable Minister responsible for the Ministry of Education, Aviation and Planning to list the number of new students enrolled for the September term at the Government High and Middle schools and to state the year of entry.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for Education, Aviation, and Planning.

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: The number of new students enrolled for the Government High School and Middle School to date, by year of entry, is as follows:

|         | George Hicks High School | John Gray High School | Cayman Brac High School |
|---------|--------------------------|-----------------------|-------------------------|
| Year 7  | 276                      |                       | 18                      |
| Year 8  | 2                        |                       |                         |
| Year 9  | 2                        |                       |                         |
| Year 10 |                          | 281                   | 28                      |
| Year 11 |                          | 1                     |                         |
| Total   | 280                      | 282                   | 46                      |

SUPPLEMENTARIES

The Speaker: First Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Can the honourable minister say if these figures were arrived at using the same methodology as in the previous answer? I noted it's worded differently. And can he also say how these compare with the numbers enrolled last year?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for Education, Aviation, and Planning.

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: The numbers for Year 7 at George Hicks High School represent the 263 that are rising from the government schools to Year 7. We project 32 from private schools.

The 281 for John Gray represent the actual number of Year 9 students rising from the George Hicks High School and it is possible that 20 additional students could transfer from private schools.

The 18 at Cayman Brac High represent the students coming up from Year 6.

The member asked for the increases: George Hicks is 15; and the John Gray increase is 50; and the Cayman Brac High School decrease is projected to be 2.

The Speaker: First Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: If I understood, for George Hicks the figure of 276 is what has enrolled thus far. But according to the figures the minister just gave, it is very possible to have 294. For John Gray the 281 is what is expected to come over from the George Hicks, plus 20, that means it can well be 301. Is that correct?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for Education, Aviation, and Planning.

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: The numbers here are the numbers coming from the government and the private schools. So the private doesn't have to be added on.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: You said 263 and 31, George Hicks. That's what you said.

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: Let me just see, I am reading from the figures I was given . . . 263 and 32.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: And 32, right.

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: That's 295.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: So, 276 is what's done? That's what I don't understand now.

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: I will have to find out who in the Education Department needs to get a new calculator. I take the member's point. I will have to find out what that error is. But there is obviously an error in the figures I gave, for which I apologise. But I have been told by the Chief Education Officer that the projected amount is a total amount, notwithstanding the difference of 12 students in George Hicks.

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: I respect the fact that we may not be able to entertain a lot of questions now because of the unsure situation with the numbers, but I am assuming that . . . well, first of all I asked how they compare with last year's figures. I am assuming when he said 15 for George Hicks and 50 for John Gray . . . I am not sure if he was talking about last year's figures then.

Okay, if that's what he was saying (which, according to the calculations, the figures could be more than 15 and 50, but we are not sure of that so I won't assume that), I would like to know, given the prevailing circumstances at both schools at present, and without going into all of the details year by year for the past two or three years about the size and space available for students, has there been any discussion with the people who operate the schools? And is the minister satisfied that with these figures coming in they will be able to cope?

If you look at John Gray, and you are talking about 50 new students, you may say compared to 850 students (bringing it to 900) is a small percentage, but from my recollection, they too are bursting at the seams. I would like to know exactly what the position is.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for Education, Aviation, and Planning.

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: The Chief Education Officer assures me that these numbers have been discussed and they can accommodate them. Last year the graduating class was quite heavy. Therefore, there was a reduction. So the increase this year (and I am just passing this on, okay?) is because of a smaller graduating class. I don't have those numbers. I am just giving the reason.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: You shouldn't say it like that because you are going to make me ask questions that you're not going to want to answer now.

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: If I can answer it, I will! If I can't . . . well, I will get the figures for you.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: All right. I will leave you alone this morning. There's another time for that.

The Speaker: Are there any further supplementaries? If not, we move on to question 11, standing in the name of the Elected Member for North Side.

QUESTION 11

No. 11: Mrs. Edna M. Moyle asked the Honourable Minister responsible for the Ministry of Education, Aviation and Planning if the government is looking at providing a pre-school in the district of North Side, seeing that it is the only district without such a facility.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for Education, Aviation, and Planning.

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: The government has no plans to establish a pre-school in the district of North Side. Except for the pre-school in East End, which was run by the Parent Teachers' Association in a Government facility, and on Cayman Brac where Social Services runs their programme and District Administration administers it, all other pre-schools are operated by private operations in accordance with the regulations established by the Education Council.

SUPPLEMENTARIES

The Speaker: The Elected Member for North Side.

Mrs. Edna M. Moyle: Wow!

Can the honourable minister say, if government undertook to provide a pre-school in the district of North Side, that this would not be a good way to feed the North Side Primary School rather than parents taking their kids into George Town, Savannah, Bodden Town to pre-schools and then into schools in those districts?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for Education, Aviation, and Planning.

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: The member is right. This would obviously help with enrolment. I think maybe what needs to be looked at first is to see whether we could get a private operator of a pre-school, and government could try to encourage that or do what we can to assist. If not, by all means, I will ask the department to look at the feasibility of government running the school. In the other districts we have kept out of it, and it's been done privately. I will undertake to follow those two processes.

The Speaker: The Elected Member for North Side.

Mrs. Edna M. Moyle: I am certain that the reason a private pre-school has not been started in North Side is the sheer fact that the numbers are not there. But I wonder if the minister will undertake to discuss this with Social Services and give us a programme similar to that run by the District Administrator in Cayman Brac?

When parents have to get up at 5.00 in the morning to take their children to George Town to pre-school so that they can go to work, those kids do not get back to North Side until 8.00 or 9.00 at night. Whatever can be done to help parents would be most appreciated.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for Education, Aviation, and Planning.

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: By all means. I understand the inconvenience. We will look at this. It may well be that government along with social services may have to go ahead and set this up. I undertake to get back to the member in the future on this.

The Speaker: Are there any further supplementaries? If not, that concludes Question Time for today. We shall suspend proceedings for 15 minutes.

PROCEEDINGS SUSPENDED AT 11.45 AM

PROCEEDINGS RESUMED AT 12.11 PM

The Speaker: Please be seated.

Item 4 on toady's Order Paper, Other Business, Private Members' Motions.

OTHER BUSINESS

PRIVATE MEMBER'S MOTION NO. 10/00

ESTABLISHMENT OF A "SAFE HOUSE" FOR BATTERED WOMEN AND CHILDREN

(Deferred)

The Speaker: When the House adjourned on Monday (12 June 2000), the government was going to make a decision. When we came back, we had reached the hour of interruption. At this time I will call upon the Honourable Minister responsible for Education, Aviation, and Planning.

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: Mr. Speaker, we are now a couple of days later. I think the member may wish to say something in relation to his motion. Our view is that we will just go ahead and take these in the order they are in.

But in regard to Private Member's Motion 10/00, in the absence of the mover, I would like to ask that that one be moved on the Order Paper, with the consent of the House, and placed perhaps after number 5, or 6, or somewhere in that area. I believe the mover will be back tomorrow.

I would move under standing Order 24(11) that Private Member's Motion No. 10/00 be put down at a later stage.

SUSPENSION OF STANDING ORDER 24(11)

The Speaker: I shall put the question, that we suspend Standing Order 24(11). Those in favour please say Aye. Those against No.

AYES.

The Speaker: The Ayes have it.

AGREED. PRIVATE MEMBER'S MOTION NO. 10/00 DEFERRED.

The Speaker: Moving on to Private Member's Motion No. 11/00, in-depth Discussion on Increased Interest and Electrical Rates, to be moved by the First Elected Member for West Bay.

PRIVATE MEMBER'S MOTION NO. 11/00

IN-DEPTH DISCUSSION ON INCREASED INTEREST AND ELECTRICAL RATES

Mr. W. McKeeva Bush: Mr. Speaker, as I indicated on Monday (12 June), I am not ready to deal with this motion until later in this meeting. This is very important. I have to get quite a bit of information. I am prepared to deal with Private Member's Motion No. 7/00, as that was the first motion I tabled in the Office of the Clerk in March. I would move that I deal with that at this time. I am ready to deal with it.

The Speaker: I am in the hands of the House, but I am obligated to follow what's on the Order Paper.

Mr. W. McKeeva Bush: Well, Mr. Speaker, I would like to move that resolution, that I deal with item (7) on the Order Paper instead of item (2).

The Speaker: Do you have a seconder?

The Third Elected Member for Bodden Town.

Mr. Roy Bodden: I respectfully beg to second that, sir.

The Speaker: I shall put the question that in lieu of Private Member's Motion No. 11/00 standing on the Order Paper, that we move on to Private Member's Motion No. 7/00, which is also moved by the First Elected Member for West Bay. Those in favour please say Aye. Those against No.

AYES and NOES.

The Speaker: I think the Noes have it. It's very close.

Mrs. Edna M. Moyle: Can we have a division please?

The Speaker: Certainly.

Madam Clerk, will you call a division?

The Deputy Clerk:

Division No. 5/00*Ayes: 6

Mr. W. McKeeva Bush
 Mr. John D. Jefferson, Jr.
 Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts
 Dr. Frank McField
 Mr. Roy Bodden
 Mrs. Edna M. Moyle

Noes: 6

Hon. Samuel Bulgin
 Hon. George A. McCarthy
 Hon. Truman M. Bodden
 Hon. Thomas C. Jefferson
 Hon. John B. McLean
 Hon. J. O'Connor-Connolly

Absent: 5

Hon. Donovan Ebanks
 Hon. Anthony Eden
 Mr. D. Dalmain Ebanks
 Mr. Linford A. Pierson
 Miss Heather D. Bodden

SPEAKER'S CASTING VOTE
Standing Order 42(2)

The Speaker: The result of the division is six Ayes, six Noes. The responsibility falls upon me for the casting vote. It is required that the status quo prevail, so we will have to continue with the Order Paper as set down.

MOTION TO DEAL WITH ITEM (7) ON THE ORDER PAPER INSTEAD OF ITEM (2) DEFEATED BY MAJORITY.

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for West Bay.

Mr. W. McKeeva Bush: Well, Mr. Speaker, are you expecting me to carry on when I say I am not ready? This House surely can't expect that. You might want to move on to the next item, since you would not allow me to do something that I can do and am ready to do. Since the House has voted with the Speaker's vote as status quo, I can't carry on with (2). I am not ready for it. Therefore, since you would not allow me to do item (7)—which I am ready for—then you will have to move on to item (3).

The Speaker: Under Standing Order 24(11), which reads: "(11) If a Member does not move a motion or amendment which stands in his name when he is called on, it shall be removed from the Order Paper unless some other Member duly authorised by him in writing moves it in his stead . . ." I have no choice, but to remove it from the Order Paper.

MOTION TO SUSPEND STANDING ORDER 24(11)

Mr. W. McKeeva Bush: Mr. Speaker, we just went through a matter where we put back one motion for someone who is not here. I am not ready. I would suspend the relevant Standing Order to put item (2), Private Member's Motion No. 11/00, down for another sitting.

The Speaker: That is a different scenario. I shall now put the question . . . I need a seconder.

The Third Elected Member for Bodden Town.

Mr. Roy Bodden: I beg to second the motion.

The Speaker: The motion was clearly stated by the First Elected Member for West Bay. I shall now put the question on that motion if there is no debate. Those in favour please say Aye. Those against No.

AYES (and one audible NO).

The Speaker: The Ayes have it.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Clearly the Ayes have it!

The Speaker: I only heard one No.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: That's exactly right, and they can't do it again.

Hon. Thomas C. Jefferson: Mr. Speaker, can we have a division?

The Speaker: You certainly can.
 Madam Clerk, will you call a division?

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Mr. Speaker, begging and craving your indulgence, sir . . . If I may.

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Before you go any further, Mr. Speaker, not looking for any arguments today, but this is madness! I understand exactly what is going on, and I appreciate what everybody is doing here, but all that is going to happen when this is over is that there is going to be more bad blood, which is totally unnecessary. In my view, sir, it is totally unnecessary.

Understanding that the Business Committee set an Order Paper, but also understanding that on occasions when motions have been put down, information is being gathered at the same time, sometimes people are off the island, sir, and we understand all of that. But, surely, if there is an argument over one motion—even if the House has to take a break and the Business Committee has to meet, which is usually the case (they are courteous enough to speak to the movers and seconders of the motions to find out when what will be ready)—rather than go through this whole procedure and do a process of elimination and get into hot water, I would suggest that they take a small break and find something acceptable to both sides of the House. If we don't do that sir, believe me, none of us are going to want to go through the circumstances that are going to prevail during the time we are here.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for Education, Aviation, and Planning.

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: I understand that the member is ready on motion 12/00, which is the study to determine the long-term effects of spraying. What I think we can then do, as a compromise, is to put this one after that, if the Third Elected Member for Bodden Town is . . . and then we move on with 12/00. Maybe . . . I just wondered if the member could say when he may be ready on this because—

Mr. W. McKeeva Bush: Mr. Speaker, on a point of order. What the minister is saying is not new. That is the normal circumstance in this House—if one member is not ready, they try to go on with the next one. He has just said, “if the member for Bodden Town is ready.” I am not ready to deal with that motion. They know it is a complex motion. I am not ready to deal with it.

The one that I am ready . . . why can't they take that one? That has been from March. I am ready to deal with it. But what he is suggesting is not new.

Mr. W. McKeeva Bush: Yes. They knew he was there.

Mr. Speaker, the member from Bodden Town says he is ready. That is the normal way we do business in this House—if one member is not ready, we carry on with the next item if that member is ready.

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: What I am trying to ascertain from the member is when he will be taking this motion because following on what I said, this will fall behind the next motion. But we need to know what to do with the motion and when the member will be ready.

And let me just say it is normal that when one files a motion, that one should be ready within a reasonable time.

The Speaker: Before we have any further discussion, I am going to suspend proceedings for lunch. Informal discussions can be held during the break and we can come back with an amended Order Paper, or a firm understanding.

The House will now suspend—

Mr. Roy Bodden: Mr. Speaker!

The Speaker: The Third Elected Member for Bodden Town.

Mr. Roy Bodden: You know that as responsible representatives we are really our own worst enemies. Do you mean to tell me that we have a Business Committee—whose terms of reference I am going to ask you to read when I get through—that cannot agree and cannot accommodate us? And we talk about a fraternity? It has broken down. I mean, is the government so unreasonable that it cannot concede a favour for one time? And then we are going to sell ourselves to be re-elected as responsible people?

Mr. Speaker, a thousand shames upon us!

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: Mr. Speaker, the government has put forward a clear compromise to take that member's motion, and this one after. All we are—

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: —no, no let me finish, Mr. Member, please . . . and to get up and make a long speech when we have put forward this compromise, which is what the member wants . . .

All we have asked is when would the member be ready. If this motion is put down after and the member still is not ready, it means we have to go through all of this again. All I am asking is can the member tell us when he will be ready to put his motion forward. Then we can take Mr. Roy's motion and this one can be put somewhere further down. But I don't know how further down the member would like it to go.

The Speaker: Honourable Members, as I said, I am not going to entertain any further discussion. We are now going to suspend proceedings for lunch and hopefully when we come back we will have—

Mr. W. McKeeva Bush: Mr. Speaker, Mr. Speaker—

The Speaker: But before doing that, I will ask Madam Clerk to give me the results of the division.

Mr. W. McKeeva Bush: There was no division!

[Inaudible comments and general uproar]

Mr. W. McKeeva Bush: Mr. Speaker, can I just ask one question? because this involves me. I put a motion down that I am ready for. It's on the Order Paper, all we are asking is to move it up. Can the government say when it will be ready for that motion? I am not ready for the one they bounced up to the top, the last motion I put forward. Can they say when they will be ready for motion 7 then?

The Speaker: The result of the last division, I only heard one No.

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: May we have a division, then please?

The Speaker: Madam Clerk, will you call the division over please? That's procedure.

[Inaudible comments]

The Deputy Clerk:

The Speaker: Please read the division.

The Deputy Clerk: [Inaudible comments] Six Ayes, six Noes.

SPEAKER'S CASING VOTE
 Standing Order 42(2)

The Speaker: We have had two divisions. The first one as I announced, where there was only one No. We have taken the division over. The result of the second division is six Ayes, six Noes. It is again my responsibility to place the casting vote, and I am going to carry through the procedure I stated. I am going to suspend proceedings until 2.15 and let us come back with a corrected Order Paper that can be met by the members. Thank you.

MOTION TO DEFER PRIVATE MEMBER'S MOTION
 NO. 11/00 DEFEATED BY MAJORITY.

The Speaker: Proceedings are suspended.

PROCEEDINGS SUSPENDED AT 12.29 PM

PROCEEDINGS RESUMED AT 3.30 PM

(An amended Order Paper rearranging the order of Other Business was circulated)

The Speaker: Please be seated. Proceedings are resumed. I apologise for the late start, but we had an informal meeting on procedure.

Moving on to Other Business, Private Member's Motion 12/00, Environmental Study to determine the Long Term Effects of Aerial Spraying and Landfill Leakage, to be moved by the Third Elected Member for Bodden Town.

Mr. Roy Bodden: Before I move the motion, sir, I notice there are four motions for me, one standing right after the other. I would like someone to explain to me, given the circumstances that I said I will not be here next week, how this is going to happen, and how it is going to affect my performance when I am not here.

The Speaker: I can't answer that question. I thought that's why we met informally to discuss it. Let us please get on with this motion and we will work on that later.

Will you move your motion please?

PRIVATE MEMBER'S MOTION NO. 12/00

ENVIRONMENTAL STUDY TO DETERMINE THE LONG TERM EFFECTS OF AERIAL SPRAYING AND LANDFILL LEAKAGE

Mr. Roy Bodden: I beg to move Private Member's Motion No. 12/00.

Mrs. Edna M. Moyle: I would like to second the motion.

The Speaker: Private Member's Motion 12/00 has been duly moved and seconded. Does the mover wish to speak to it?

Mr. Roy Bodden: The motion is entitled Environmental Study to determine the Long Term Effects of Aerial Spraying and Landfill Leakage, and reads as follows:

"WHEREAS the Mosquito Research and Control Unit has been conducting aerial spraying over Grand Cayman for many years now;

"AND WHEREAS to date no scientific study, to our knowledge, has been carried out to ascertain what, if any, effects such long term spraying has on the environment, flora, fauna and the human population;

"AND WHEREAS some Members of the Legislative Assembly have received concerns from their constituents and other members of the public with regard to what many of these persons believe is an abnormal cancer rate in the Cayman Islands;

"BE IT RESOLVED that the Government consider commissioning a scientific study to ascertain what effects, if any, long term aerial spraying has on the flora, fauna, environment and people of these Islands; and whether there is any scientific evidence to support the notion that there is an abnormal cancer rate in the Cayman Islands which emanates from aerial spraying, hazardous leaks from the George Town landfill site or any other environmental cause.

"AND BE IT FURTHER RESOLVED that the report, in its entirety, be tabled immediately upon receipt in the Legislative Assembly for debate."

It has come to the knowledge of many persons that pesticides and insecticides used years ago have now been found to have harmful effects on human beings and other living things in the environment. Some of these pesticides and insecticides have been known to make their way into the soil, the water supply, and have the potential of being harmful contaminants for years. One of the most common ones used years ago contained DDT, which is the abbreviation for a very serious insecticide and contaminate. It was used, among other things, to protect lumber from termites.

Arising out of the Vietnam War, Americans came to realise that what was a common defoliant known as Agent Orange is one of the most dangers and potent pesticides that one can come in contact with. Indeed, with the Vietnam War being over for some 25 years now, persons who came in contact with Agent Orange are just now manifesting the symptoms of this dangerous defoliant.

It was marketed under various names, one being Round-up. I am aware that many of these products are no longer sold in the Cayman Islands. However, the point I wish to underscore is that while we have ceased to market and dispense these products, it does not mean that the harmful effects were neutralised or that they pose no threat. It is my understanding from the research that I have done that it takes some of these insecticides, pesticides, and contaminants as long as 25 years before symptoms manifest themselves in humans and in the environment.

I suppose that as it is an everyday fuel, many people do not realise that one of the greatest contaminants is gasoline. Not far behind is the lubricating oil we put in the engine, and the transmission oil we put in the transmission, as well as the coolant antifreeze we put in the radiator. For years, we have been disposing of these fuels and contaminants in ways that are far from safe. In the absence of scientific evidence to the contrary, I am saying that it would be prudent for us to find out—particularly at the landfill—what hazards have been posed by our disposing of these dangerous liquids in less than safe ways.

The matter of aerial spraying has been going on in the Cayman Islands for about 30 years now, if not longer. Questions have been asked in the Legislative Assembly regarding the chemicals used and we have been given assurances by the minister that the chemicals being used now pose little or no danger to human beings. But, I wish to underscore that the chemicals being used now are not the chemicals that were used at the beginning of this exercise.

Through experience gained elsewhere, I realise that at the beginning many of these products were dispensed in Third World countries on a purely experimental basis. That is, the products were manufactured in the industrialised countries, but to a large extent shipped to Third World countries for testing. Longitudinal studies were done on this basis. Sometimes they were given for gratis or little charge, just to monitor the effectiveness of the product.

According to scientific studies, these harmful effects do not usually manifest themselves immediately. Some poisons can remain in the liver for as long as 25 years, until the toxicity level builds up to the point where it is harmful. From my research, I understand that although it may be ingested by mouth that is not where the symptoms may be manifest. Travelling throughout the bloodstream, the symptoms can manifest themselves in any part of the body. Sometimes it is on the skin, which makes this business so dangerous and deceptive.

It is interesting to realise that even a commonly used fluid like gasoline is a very serious skin irritant. Anyone who gets gasoline on his skin and does not wash it off immediately will understand what I am saying—not to mention coming in contact with somebody's mouth or a sensitive place where membrane and nerves are exposed.

I am not trying to be an alarmist. I just would like to create awareness. By the time I am through with my introductory, some things I read will shock most of us, because we use these products everyday. It never dawned on us that they contained harmful substances.

But before I get into that, I would like to read something I got off the Internet that was published in The Miami Herald on Sunday 14, May 2000: "Banned Pesticides Invade Food Supply—Chemicals Stay in Soil for Years." The article reads: "Like unwanted dinner guests who will not go home, DDT, chlordane and some other pesticides keep showing up in the food supply many years after they were banned.

"It has been known that those chemicals, known as organochlorines, persist in the soil for decades after they were applied. That was one of the reasons they were banned. Now, research shows that at least one of the chemicals—chlordane—is more easily absorbed by plants than previously thought. Scientists planted a garden in ground heavily treated with chlordane thirty-eight years earlier. The chemical turned up in all twelve vegetables planted, including lettuce, zucchini, and root crops like potatoes and carrots.

"According to a study published in the May 15th Issue of The Journal of Agricultural and Food Chemistry, the residues were within the safe tolerance limits established by government. 'Chlordane can accumulate in the body and lead to digestive and nervous disorders. It is a sound precaution to thoroughly wash your vegetables and peel your root crops,' said Mary Jane Incorvia-Matina [?], a scientist at the Connecticut Agricultural Experiment Station.

"Homeowners should also avoid putting a garden in areas where chemicals like chlordane may have been heavily used, such as near the foundation of older homes,' she said. Chlordane was commonly used to control termites.

"The Environmental Protection Agency banned chlordane in 1988 as a probable carcinogen, but it was widely used all over the nation until then. It still shows up even in produce from farms that switched to organic production methods."

So, one thing comes out in this: Even chemicals used to control and treat termites pose a potential hazard and threat to human beings.

Being a simple man, I have a simple equation—whatever can kill insects must, over the long-term, affect human beings. Whatever we use to treat and kill termites, mosquitoes, roaches, or you name it, must over the long term affect us as human beings. These insects are part of the lifecycle, no matter how small or minuscule they are. If we as human beings ingest enough of this poison, it is bound to affect us. Experiments have shown that some of these things attack the nervous system.

I saw on television where one brand of pesticide attacks the nervous system of the ant. If it is designed to attack the nervous system of the ant, to disorient the ant and eventually kill it, if we come in direct contact with that, it must do something to the human body. It might not necessarily affect us in the same way, but if we keep using it, it is bound to affect us.

It goes without saying that infants and small children are particularly susceptible. That is why if we use these products we should carefully read how to apply them. If we apply them injudiciously and unwisely, we are bound to be detrimentally affected. It is not wise to lock a house up, turn off the ventilation system and fumigate it while inside—breathing that air. That is why some people arrange to be away for two or three weeks when having their home sprayed. Young children who come in contact with that on the dishes they use, are bound to be affected over the years.

What I found most interesting is this list that I will selectively read from because it is enlightening. Many of these products, which have been found to be cancer-causing chemicals, are found in everyday products that we use.

Dioxin: A potentially carcinogen by-product that results from the process used to bleach paper. Dioxin treated containers sometimes transfer dioxin to the product itself.

Fluorocarbon: A colourless non-flammable gas or liquid that can produce mild respiratory tract irritation. Fluorocarbons are commonly used as propellants in hairspray.

Formaldehyde: A toxic colourless gas that is an irritant and a carcinogen. When combined with water formaldehyde is used as a disinfectant, fixative or preservative. It is found in many cosmetic products and conventional self-care systems.

Glycerine: A syrupy liquid that is chemically produced by combining water and fat. Unless the humidity of the air is over 65% glycerine draws moisture from the lower layers of the skin and holds it on the surface, which dries the skin from the inside out. Although potentially harmful in skincare produces, when applied inside the moist cavity of the mouth its properties as a homeoecant are potentially beneficial. Glycerine aids dental products to retain moisture as well as improve product consistency and spreadability without negative effects.

Lanolin: A fatty substance extracted from wool, frequently found in cosmetics and lotions. It has been found to be a common skin sensitiser causing allergic contact skin rashes.

Lye: A highly concentrated watery solution of sodium hydroxide or potassium hydroxide. It is combined with animal fat to make bar soap.

I could go on, but I have said enough to underscore that even the products we use every day and have come to take for granted are potentially harmful—from shaving creams to deodorants and shampoos. Even some toothpaste contains potentially harmful ingredients.

All these years we have been dumping these containers at the landfill site—which is not sealed—where they have been allowed to deteriorate and where the remnants of these containers have been allowed to leach into the soil. To date, we not conducted any scientific study to find out which, if any, of these dangerous chemicals are in the soil leaching into our water system potentially harmful contaminants.

It is reasonable to conclude that with a growing population and increasing use of these, and with any lack of a formal awareness, or wide sense of education in terms of the ingredients of some of these products, we may not be without some risk. This fact is compounded when we realise that we have been practising aerial spraying of mosquitoes for probably over 30 years. And in the beginning years we were using DDT in some of the products.

All that stuff . . . it is fortunate for us now that people don't drink water from cisterns and catchment tanks any more on Grand Cayman. But, according to what I read, there is reason to believe that persons who may have been exposed to things like asbestos and these other insecticides may have accumulated some risk.

Other members and I have been approached by concerned constituents and members of the wider public. The motion is brought asking government to do something to ascertain whether or not the concerns have any substance, and, if not, to arrive at a scientific conclusion which reassures the people and allays their fear. It may be that the threat is more perceived than real; but I can tell you that one such person who approached me came with this unscientific yet startling statistic. He told me that he visited the endocrinology unit at Baptist Hospital, a unit with 24 beds. Twelve of those beds were occupied by Caymanian cancer patients. Now, if—and I have no reason to disbelieve my source—that is a coincidence, it is a striking coincidence.

We now find it necessary to ask government to do this study. I do not expect that the study will be completed in a day, but I certainly don't expect it will take a year either. Time is of the essence because we keep hearing of these cases of cancer, sometimes in very young people.

I have been in the company of medical practitioners who moot among themselves that it is indeed a striking occurrence that there are so many cases of cancer in its various forms in the Cayman Islands; and that there should be something done to ascertain what is the cause. If it is an environmental cause, then we can take steps to rectify and remove the threat.

I would refuse to believe that we, the Caymanians, have a genetic susceptibility to cancer because we are varied, and the genetic pool has significant variance. A layman like me would disqualify that as being a cause. I am aware that there is susceptibility among certain people, for instance the Ashkenazi Jews, who have a predisposition to certain ailments. But I would doubt that the incidence of cancer in the Cayman Islands is the result of any genetic predisposition of Caymanians.

I hope government will see fit to entertain the motion. I don't want to be an alarmist. I am just coming from the position as a representative of the people who is concerned himself. Upon speaking to my colleagues who share these concerns and who have been approached by constituents, we believe it would be a good thing. It would promote peace of mind and a sense of satisfaction if there could be some scientific study that would show there is no empirical evidence to suggest that it emanates from any past or current practice.

I want to say to my colleagues in the Legislative Assembly that we need to be very conscious of the products we use because we are a market very dependent upon advertisements. We are not like the industrialised countries, like the US, where the government has set standards and has machinery like the FDA which tests products and can pull certain things from the market if dissatisfied. We are left at the mercy of the market.

If we misuse products, we run the risk of harming ourselves. Sometimes we will not find out until it is too late. One thing we can do is make ourselves aware of what we use, and read the components that go into those products, including things like air fresheners. Certainly, there has been a widespread move against fluorocarbons that have been found to deplete the ozone level, causing the ultraviolet rays to penetrate the atmosphere, one of the leading causes of skin cancer.

Other products that we use everyday are harmful, like automatic transmission fluid, brake fluid, lubricating oils, gasoline. These are common contaminants, skin irritants, and poisons. If ingested they can cause serious harmful effects. And some of them, if ingested, will have long term effects. Insecticides and pesticides are commonly used in Cayman.

Many years ago, there was a move because the Third World was the great experimental station for these things. In the years of the Green Revolution, when the major chemical companies and the agri-industry was developing these chemicals, many of them were shipped to Third World countries for experimental use to chart the effectiveness. One could say that for the last 30 or 40 years we have been using these products, and yet it is only now coming to light that some of them have devastating and long lasting harmful effects.

There is now a big furore about genetically modified foods. Genetically modified crops were touted as a miracle development because they were drought resistant and insect resistant. Now it is being discovered that many of these have harmful effects on human beings. School is out on a lot of the developments marketed as saviours of the problems of the developed world.

I hope that government will take an open and sensitive approach. I eagerly await their response.

The Speaker: The floor is open to debate. Does any other member wish to speak? (Pause) The Honourable Minister responsible for Agriculture, Communications, Environment, and Natural Resources.

Hon. John B. McLean: The government is pleased to accept the motion calling for an environmental study to determine the long term effects of aerial spraying and landfill leakage.

I have said in this House before that the chemicals presently used for spraying are all US approved. But his motion and his presentation go beyond that. I was hoping that the motion would come at a later date because I was trying to get more information to give a more in-depth debate on the matter. Unfortunately, I did not.

I would like to say that government takes this as a very serious matter. The information put forward so ably by the member presenting this was noted. We will endeavour to have this study done because it is very serious. The high rate of cancer causes one to be concerned.

There is very little I can say beyond that. I was caught short by the motion coming now, but I would like to congratulate the member for bringing the motion, it's a timely motion, one government will not take lightly.

The Speaker: The floor is open to debate. Does any other member wish to speak? (Pause) The floor is open to debate. Does any other member wish to speak? (Pause) The floor is open to debate. Does any other member wish to speak? (Pause) Last call: The floor is open to debate. Does any other member wish to speak? (Pause)

If not, would the mover like to exercise his right of reply?

Mr. Roy Bodden: When things go as smooth as this inside here, I am deeply suspicious!

Mr. Roy Bodden: Not that I am looking a gift horse in the mouth, I graciously acknowledge the way government accepted the motion, and I am happy they did. But when you see the water so calm so early . . . the storm is coming somewhere. I hope I am wrong. But sometime before the Order of Business is finished, the storm is going to break out.

I welcome the approach taken by the honourable minister replying on behalf of government. I must say that was the response I expected. Nevertheless, politics being what it is, I have to be gracious. I note that the minister said it is a matter of the concerns of which are shared by government. I take that to mean that government is also aware of some of these concerns being held by our constituents and the wider public.

It is unfortunate that the motion came on such short notice that the minister was unable to provide a more in depth reply. Nevertheless, I believe that I gave enough information, and with his attitude we can get off on the right start to investigate into this matter.

I would like to underscore that the motion was not meant to alarm. I have no scientific evidence that there is any cause, environmental or otherwise. The motion is meant to satisfy a curiosity and a concern. I caution against anyone taking acceptance of the motion to mean that there is definitely something wrong. We don't know. In accepting the motion, government has undertaken to find out if there is.

We use many products in our everyday lives, which, from my information, would suit us to be very cautious about—cleaners, disinfectants, insecticides, paint, and acid . . . things of that nature. Some as common as shampoo, hair treatments, antiperspirants, and other kinds of deodorants. We have to educate ourselves how to use them. Most importantly, when discarding them we have to discard them very carefully.

Many years ago there was a move by the Department of the Environment to take harmful containers and dispose of them in a special way. I am not sure that practice continues. But when using insecticides and fumigating we have to be very careful, particularly where infants and young children are concerned.

A very common bathroom cleaner containing Lysol . . . if ingested or if we breath that in, it has the potential to suffocate us. We may think we are not choked so nothing is wrong. Sometimes it takes years. I live near a farm and sometimes I speak with the guys who work there. I have certain concerns. When I see people wearing suits, all masked up spraying stuff . . . I don't have a good feeling. If they have to be so attired to make plants grow, or to keep insects off . . . I don't want to eat that stuff!

What is more serious is that the stuff applied goes into the water table. It accumulates to such a level that it becomes dangerous and harmful. We have passed the stage where we drink groundwater, but sometimes we use it to shower with. Continued use could cause serious disease.

One caution I would like to leave with members is that we need to educate ourselves, we need to be aware of the effects that these products have. I hope that at the end of the exercise the fear can be more perceived than real. I thank the government and look forward to receiving the report, and hearing that all is well.

The Speaker: Those in favour of Private Member's Motion No. 12/00 please say Aye. Those against No.

AYES.

The Speaker: The Ayes have it.

AGREED: PRIVATE MEMBER'S MOTION NO. 12/2000 PASSED.

The Speaker: We are about 11 minutes before the hour of adjournment. Does the House wish to adjourn or go on to another motion?

The Honourable Minister for Tourism, Commerce, Transport and Works.

ADJOURNMENT

Hon. Thomas C. Jefferson: Mr. Speaker, I believe it is the wish of members that we adjourn at this time. I so move the adjournment of this Honourable House until 10.00 AM tomorrow.

The Speaker: Before putting the question on the adjournment, I have given permission to the Third Elected Member for Bodden Town, under Standing Order 11(6), to raise a matter of importance for which government has responsibility.

MOTION ON THE ADJOURNMENT STANDING ORDER 11(6)

20 PERCENT TAX ON CAYMAN NET NEWS

Mr. Roy Bodden: Since seeking your permission to raise this matter, I learned that government has reversed its position and has removed the imposition levelled. However, I consider this matter to be of sufficient seriousness and importance, that I would like to record in the Hansards of this honourable House my position and what I saw as a serious trespass to one of the fundamental freedoms.

I shall read the statement which was prepared before government reversed itself:

"I rise to bring to the attention of all Honourable Members of the Legislative Assembly a matter which puts at risk freedom of speech, freedom of information and constitutes a serious trespass on Caymanians' right to know.

"That matter has to do with the National Team Government's imposition of the 20 percent tax on the Cayman Net News publication. According to an editorial in the Thursday June 8 to Wednesday June 14, 2000 issue: 'After publishing ten issues of Cayman Net News weekly newspaper . . . as well as three earlier monthly editions of the Cayman Islands Business and Tourism News, the publishers are suddenly faced with a ruling by the Collector of Customs that their publication is now subject to duty.'

"The Cayman Net News publication is of recent establishment and presents an alternative view to the other newspaper which hitherto held a monopoly on news and certain advertisements in the Cayman Islands.

"In a society where literacy, freedom of speech, freedom of information and an informed public should be widely encouraged as pillars of democracy, one would have thought that another newspaper would have been welcome. However, as has often been the case, the government has attempted to shoot the messenger because it does not like the message.

"Taxing a newspaper with local content, while allowing in duty free at least one similar publication in the form of the Cayman Islands Community and Christian News (CICCN) as well as a significant number of foreign newspapers, smacks of incoherence, flawed logic and plain senselessness.

"Taxing the Cayman Net News publication must be seen as a political act to stifle a medium which the Government obviously views as a threat. That this is so is borne out by the fact that certain Ministers in the present National team Government are remnants from a past Government which first imposed such undemocratic sanctions to avoid criticism.

"The outside world must know what is happening in the Cayman Islands during an election year when an educated and informed electorate is the only guarantee, to a continued democratic society.

“Regrettably, there has been a reticence, if not reluctance by other media houses to close ranks and register their concerns with this serious trespass to one of the fundamental freedoms of democracy.

“There are those who would explain this reticence and reluctance as self serving and one can quite reasonably ask how can an ambiguity in the Customs Tariff Law (1999 Revision) Section X be allowed to deny Caymanians their right to know.

“The Government should remove this spiteful, speech suppressing and freedom stifling tax forthwith and encourage more media to inform and educate the Caymanian populace in this most crucial election year. To those whom by their silence on this issue seem to be smug and apathetic, I leave this poem by Pastor Niemöller, a victim of Nazi holocaust.

“First they came for the Jews. I was silent. I was not a Jew. Then they came for the Communists. I was silent. I was not a Communist. Then they came for the trade unionists. I was silent. I was not a trade unionist. Then they came for me. There was no one left to speak for me.”

“Honourable colleagues of the Legislative Assembly if we are serious about freedom of speech, freedom of information, transparency and accountability, we must remove this punitive tax and amend the law so as to avoid future recurrences. If we care for our people we must allow them to have access to the viewpoints offered in the Cayman Net News publication. To tax the publication out of existence is not only a strike against the publisher, it is a threat to one of our most fundamental of freedoms. This assault on the ability of Caymanians to be informed, this assault on transparency and accountability by the National Team Government is far more representative of the routine than it is an aberration.

“Those seeking explanations can find lessons in this case, for it speaks with an obscene eloquence. I conclude this statement by remarking as did Edmund Burke many years ago: ‘All that is necessary for the triumph of evil, is for men of goodwill to do nothing.’”

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Tourism, Commerce, Transport and Works.

Hon. Thomas C. Jefferson: It may be right to pick up with Edmond Burke and say, good men do things. It may also be accurate to say that the statement made about the National Team Government has some flaws in it.

The paper produced by this firm the third Elected Member of Bodden Town referred to is a law—not a law that this government put in place. And the Collector of Customs, in his able duty, does what he is supposed to do—and that is to carry out the law.

The principal of the firm wrote to government, including the Financial Secretary and me, and we, the government, saw the inequity (so to speak) in it, and decidated to waive the duty on this publication. I think that is the proper thing to have been done, and it is what the government did.

All of the words in the statement made . . . all of the statements that have been read here today, I believe are not at all accurate about the present government. It is the intention of this government to refund any duty that has been paid by this principal of the newspaper.

Hon. Thomas C. Jefferson: The only way we could act quickly to bring some relief to the principal of this newspaper was to waive the fee, the duty on the paper. It is the intention of government to—

[Inaudible interjections]

Hon. Thomas C. Jefferson: This government never put anything on. It was a law made years ago—long before this government took up any responsibility for the Cayman Islands.

Mr. Roy Bodden: But some members of the present government made the law then!

Hon. Thomas C. Jefferson: I want to say that the principal of the organisation we are speaking about will also receive a refund of any duty paid so far.

The Speaker: Thank you.

Mr. W. McKeeva Bush: Mr. Speaker, just to seek clarification—

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for West Bay, just a short question.

Mr. W. McKeeva Bush: Just a short enquiry as allowed under the Standing Orders.

The Collector of Customs, as they said, did his duty. But if you read the paper, it says that he was “instructed” that he had to do it, or words to that extent.

The Speaker: The Honourable Third Official Member responsible for Finance and Economic Development.

Hon. George A. McCarthy: As the honourable Minister of Tourism mentioned, about two weeks ago Mr. Seals wrote to the honourable minister, copied to me, advising that he has been bringing in his papers for the past several months. Upon this occasion when he went to collect his supply of papers, he was advised that duty would be applied at the rate of 20%.

I got in touch with the Collector of Customs to find out what was the basis, and the Collector drew my attention to section 49.02 of the Customs Schedule, which reads: “printed forms and similar stationery, greeting cards, newspaper printed overseas containing predominantly matters of local interest would attract duty at the rate of 20%.” The operative word here is “predominantly.”

The Collector of Customs said he would have no difficulty if government took the decision that duty should be waived or deferred on this until the law could be amended, or the issue examined by government. But he would have no choice other than to observe the requirements of the law.

This was then communicated to Mr. Seals and he was advised that the matter would be discussed in Executive Council. This was done yesterday, and government took the decision to waive the 20% duty and a further commitment recognising that there was an ambiguity in the law in that it could lend itself to various interpretations. A decision was also taken that this ambiguity would be addressed through an amendment to the schedule of the Customs Law in order to deal with this matter.

So, it was not a question of instructions being issued to the Collector of Customs. He was following the requirements as set out in the law.

The Speaker: The Third Elected Member for Bodden Town.

Mr. Roy Bodden: Mr. Speaker, you will recall that when I spoke to you, you instructed me to mention that I wanted to make this statement to the honourable Third Official Member. I did so. It is my contention that government moved after I conveyed my intention to the honourable Third Official Member on Monday. I am saying that that was the catalyst.

I always respect your advice, Mr. Speaker. I mentioned it to the gentleman, and the government moved after that!

The Speaker: Do you wish to comment Honourable Third Official Member responsible for Finance and Economic Development?

Hon. George A. McCarthy: I will admit that this was mentioned to me by the Third Elected Member for Bodden Town. But when he mentioned it to me, I pointed out to him at that time that this matter was under consideration by the government, that it had been brought to the government’s attention by Mr. Seals, and that action was in line to address the issue.

This matter was under review from the point in time that it was brought to government’s attention by Mr. Seals.

As I said, I will agree that it was brought to my attention by the Third Elected Member for Bodden Town. But I must say that this was under review. It was brought up in Executive Council at last week’s meeting, and a decision was taken at that time that a paper should be brought, and it was brought at yesterday’s meeting. At that time, a decision was taken.

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for West Bay.

Mr. W. McKeeva Bush: One last query, can the honourable Third Official Member say who drew it to the attention of the Collector of Customs?

The Speaker: The Honourable Third Official Member responsible for Finance and Economic Development . . .

I thought he said that the Collector thought it out himself.

Hon. George A. McCarthy: I cannot say who drew it to the attention of the Collector of Customs. When I spoke to him, as I mentioned earlier, he said that he recognised that the papers were being brought into the islands for several months. From what I gleaned from Mr. Seals’ correspondence, the papers were being brought in for the past nine months. But it was brought to his attention . . . and once it was brought to his attention, he would have no choice but to apply the relevant section of the law which stipulated the collection of duty at the rate of 20%.

I do not know . . . presumably it could have been one of his staff members. It must be recognised that there are several customs officers who have the competence of interpreting the Customs Law and the relevant schedule.

The Speaker: I shall now put the question that this House stand adjourned until 10.00 tomorrow. Those in favour please say Aye. Those against No.

AYES.

The Speaker: The Ayes have it.

AT 3.36 PM THE HOUSE STOOD ADJOURNED UNTIL 10.00 AM THURSDAY, 15 JUNE 2000.

EDITED
THURSDAY
10. 24 AM

[Prayers read by the Honourable Minister for Agriculture, Communications, Environment and Natural Resources]

The Speaker: Please be seated. Proceedings are resumed. Item number 2 on today's Order Paper, Reading by the Speaker of Messages and Announcements.

READING BY THE SPEAKER OF
MESSAGES AND ANNOUNCEMENTS

APOLOGIES

The Speaker: I have received apologies from the Honourable Second Official Member and from the Honourable Third Official Member who will both be arriving later this morning.

Item number 3, Questions to Honourable Members/Ministers, Question No. 12 is standing in the name of the Elected Member for North Side.

QUESTIONS TO HONOURABLE
MEMBERS/MINISTERS

QUESTION 12

No. 12: Mrs. Edna Moyle asked the Honourable Minister responsible for Agriculture, Communications, Environment and Natural Resources if the Auditor General commenced the audit of the Telecommunications Department as requested in Finance Committee.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Agriculture, Environment, Communications and Natural Resources.

Hon. John B. McLean: The Auditor General has commenced the audit of the telecommunications section of the Ministry. Due to a miscommunication, this audit was not requested until recently. And for this we apologise. According to information received from the Auditor-General's office, the audit will be split into two parts. The first part of the audit will involve the inventory and physical verification of all telecommunication equipment within government by unit, section, and department such as cellular phones, radios and beepers, and this exercise is expected to conclude by 30 June 2000.

The second part of the audit is more challenging and will involve an in-depth review of the entire programme as well as make recommendations. It is expected that it will involve various elements, including: understanding departmental requirements; technical standards and solutions; procurement; equipment and system support and maintenance; life-cycle costing; and system management.

SUPPLEMENTARIES

The Speaker: Supplementaries, the Elected Member for North Side.

Mrs. Edna Moyle: Thank you Mr. Speaker. I would like to thank the Minister for his in-depth reply to this question, but would he tell the House just how recently the Auditor General was requested to carry out this audit?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Agriculture, Environment, Communications and Natural Resources.

Hon. John B. McLean: I think it was about three weeks ago.

The Speaker: Are there any further supplementaries? If not, we will move on to Question 13, standing in the name of the Third Elected Member for Bodden Town.

QUESTION 13

No. 13: Mr. Roy Bodden asked the Honourable Minister responsible for Health, Social Welfare, Drug Abuse Prevention and Rehabilitation what strategies have been put in place to deter smoking, and alcohol and drug use among school children since the publication of the Drug Use Survey.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for Health, Social Welfare, Drug Abuse Prevention and Rehabilitation.

Hon. Anthony S. Eden: Mr. Speaker, there are a number of organisations in the Cayman Islands, both public and private, that provide services and programmes to deter smoking, alcohol and drug use among school children. As the Honourable Third Elected Member for Bodden Town correctly suggests in his question, a strategy has had to be employed in managing the many organisations involved.

The Ministry's strategy, under the 1994 Strategic Plan for Drug Abuse Prevention and Rehabilitation, has been to assign action plans to government agencies and non-governmental organisations to be implemented, and for this to be coordinated by the National Drug Council.

The National Drug Council was established by law for this purpose, and the government has provided grants to the non-governmental organisations to assist them in providing these services and programmes.

These agencies and organisations include Cayman Against Substance Abuse, the Cancer Society, Caribbean Haven Outpatient Services (on Cayman Brac and Grand Cayman), the Public Health, Education, Customs and Social Services Departments, as well as the Royal Cayman Islands Police.

The services and programmes provided by these organisations are focussed on: prevention through education; promotion of healthy lifestyles; direct intervention with those school children that are identified as being involved with the use of alcohol and controlled drugs; and also, supply reduction.

In particular, Mr. Speaker, since the publication of the Cayman Islands Student Drug Use Survey in 1998, a host of initiatives have been undertaken to deter substance misuse and abuse amongst the most vulnerable members of our society—our youth. I will now give a few examples:

THE NATIONAL DRUG COUNCIL

In the area of prevention and education, under the joint leadership of the National Drug Council and the Department of Education, in conjunction with the Royal Cayman Islands Police Community Relations Department, two major curriculum initiatives have been undertaken. These are the Police's Drug Abuse Resistance Education, or DARE, programme and the Lions-Quest programme sponsored by the Lions Club of Grand Cayman. Both provide a comprehensive education to the youth in the area of substance abuse.

The drug awareness programme of the last few years has been expanded from one week to one month, and in 1999, reaching virtually all youth in the schools with a special programme on drug abuse. This programme incorporated a motivational speaker, presentations to school children by local role models and distribution of educational materials to all schools. The annual Drug Awareness Supplement featured in the Caymanian Compass was written almost entirely by school children.

The National Drug Council is proposing a joint programme with the Merchants Association to address the problem of solvent abuse, and a community based intervention programme is underway in the former Racquet Club premises to provide our youth with a facility for the after school hours, beginning this summer.

In addition, the National Drug Council will undertake the second round of the student drug use survey later this year and the report will enable us to see the trend in substance abuse since two years ago and also allow us to evaluate and modify these programmes in order to maintain their effectiveness.

THE CANCER SOCIETY

The Cancer Society, along with the Public Health Department, has been focussing on tobacco products and in May this year, along with the National Drug Council, launched yet another joint initiative in observance of World No Tobacco Day. The theme was "Don't Be Duped—Tobacco Kills," and it was chosen in order to counter the advertising by tobacco companies that target young people. The Cancer Society's advertisements on this theme are still being carried by the local media.

CARIBBEAN HAVEN OUTPATIENT SERVICES

Caribbean Haven Outpatient Services (formerly the Cayman Counselling Centre) continues to routinely respond to school requests for presentations on the consequences related to alcohol and drug use.

Counsellors also work collaboratively with school counsellors, social workers and staff at Cayman Islands Marine Institute to ensure that students suspected of alcohol/drug use are seen at either the school or Caribbean Haven. An assessment is done of their condition and a treatment plan developed and carried out.

A new innovative programme that was piloted in 1999 involves offering an early intervention treatment programme for adolescents. The programme was first offered to adolescent girls referred by Social Services and Cayman Islands Marine Institute. It is a 12 week group co-sponsored by Caribbean Haven and the Women's Resource Centre and teaches young women to examine their self-esteem, roles and relationships as well as coping strategies. The second application of this group is aimed at adolescent girls from John Gray High School and is currently underway until the end of the school term.

In response to a need for an onsite intervention with adolescent males, two of the Caribbean Haven counsellors are currently facilitating a motivational enhancement group that meets weekly at John Gray High School for student referrals. This group teaches adolescents how to identify what acts as a trigger for their drug use and then teaches them other healthier strategies to use. It is ongoing until the end of the school term.

Counsellors from Caribbean Haven also work with Cayman Against Substance Abuse Youth to Youth Programme on an annual basis.

CAYMAN AGAINST SUBSTANCE ABUSE

Other organisations such as Cayman Against Substance Abuse are sponsoring prevention programmes such as Youth to Youth and events such as CASA Week held in June this year.

SCHOOLS AND COMMUNITY ORGANISATIONS

The schools are revising their alcohol/drug policies and procedures. Schools and churches and community centres are making afterschool activities available as an alternative to drug use.

Mr Speaker, the list of services, programmes and initiatives could be exhaustive. I believe that I have provided enough examples to give a good understanding of the extensive efforts underway. Many of these fall within the strategies and objective of the Strategic Plan for Drug Abuse Prevention and Rehabilitation. I thank you.

SUPPLEMENTARIES

The Speaker: The Third Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. Linford A. Pierson: I would like to thank the Honourable Minister for that comprehensive answer on behalf of my colleague, but I would ask if he could expand on the question of prevention of substance abuse through education—what programme is in place for that?

Hon. Anthony S. Eden: That is a pertinent question and I will always go back to when my Permanent Secretary and I took over the Ministry and we felt very high focus should be placed on education.

This started, thanks to the help of the Lions Club, with the Quest Programme, which is now into the schools. Of recent times, the Dare Programme, where our feelings were (not only my feelings but education and people that deal with this problem) that we had to get to the youth at a much earlier time. The Dare Programme is now in the primary schools.

I have always felt that the area we must deal with is the demand reduction. It is a longer process than supply reduction but for it to be of great benefit is for the education of our young people and also the parents of the tragedies that happen once a child abuses.

The Speaker: The Fourth Elected Member for George Town.

Dr. Frank McField: Would the Minister say how providing the Racquet Club as a premise for youth after school hours beginning this summer is related to any specific drug prevention programmes?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Health, Social Welfare, Drug Abuse Prevention and Rehabilitation.

Hon. Anthony S. Eden: Mr. Speaker, the reasoning behind that area is because we found that children when they get out of school, from 3.15 until 5.00 p.m. or 6.00 p.m. in the evening . . . and I am sure many of us have seen the [children] that are in the area of Subway. The programmes we plan to put there in the evenings will be to have someone there that the children can talk to, people that will help with their homework.

We find that some of the difficulties with the youth is integrating and getting into the homework philosophy and dealing with those things. We feel by providing in this area, a central part where the children will be monitored and where there will be counsellors available and other programmes, that this will be a very encouraging way to help the youth.

The Speaker: The Fourth Elected Member for George Town.

Dr. Frank McField: Can the Minister say if he is aware of the fact that in this particular area there is a long established tradition of drugs being sold, basically on both sides of the Racquet Club? Has any kind of consideration has been given to the possibility that this place could be taken over by youngsters who are in that frame of mind at this particular point? What arrangements are being made in order to actively involve the Police or whatever security measures have to be taken?

If he has gone into the actual social control problem what might such a venture cost the government?

Hon. Anthony S. Eden: That is a good observation the honourable member made. My understanding is that we were aware of the difficulties he mentioned, but we felt that this was one of the reasons we wanted to go in there. We were supported by the Community Relations Department. The facility will be staffed, and also on board with regard to security are the RCIP. This is really why we targeted an area like this, to try to push away and push out the dealers and the difficulties that have been experienced there.

The Speaker: The Elected Member for North Side.

Mrs. Edna Moyle: If the Fourth Elected Member for George Town has a follow-up I will give way.

Dr. Frank McField: I would like to thank the Elected Member for North Side for giving way. It is not that I am trying to make a problem out of this, but I am basically wanting to find out if some of the information that I am conscious of has been made available to the ministry and whether or not the ministry is conscious of it and therefore has involved this information in creating a strategy for that area?

Is this Racquet Club supposed to be an after-school centre, or is it supposed to be an after-school club? If the Minister says it is an after-school club, what is his specific meaning of an after-school club?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Health, Social Welfare, Drug Abuse Prevention and Rehabilitation.

Hon. Anthony S. Eden: We look at this not necessarily as an after-school club but more as a youth intervention centre where we will provide vocational, educational and sports activities to keep the youth occupied. As I indicated earlier on, there will always be someone there in supervision with the children and we see it more as for social and therapeutic reasons.

The Speaker: The Elected Member for North Side.

Mrs. Edna Moyle: I wonder if the Honourable Minister could explain to the House how these activities affect children from the eastern districts who must leave John Gray and George Hicks when the bus is ready to leave? And what after-school activities are put in place for the children of the eastern districts?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Health, Social Welfare, Drug Abuse Prevention and Rehabilitation.

Hon. Anthony S. Eden: Mr. Speaker, this is an evolving programme that we are working on. One of the things that I have been made to understand is that we are looking at providing late buses for the children in the outer districts. But as we try now to involve the schools and churches, we are hoping to have these activities within the districts themselves—not necessarily for the children to have to stay in town.

This is a comprehensive thing that we are looking at, and in talking with my colleague, the Minister of Education, we are looking at providing a more organised structure as it is now in West Bay and George Town. We want to move this into all the districts where we can provide help for the children once they come out of school.

The Speaker: The Elected Member for North Side.

Mrs. Edna Moyle: Seeing that this service is now provided in West Bay and George Town, would the Honourable Minister say how close we are to providing the service in the eastern districts? Is it two weeks? six months? one year? or five years?

Hon. Anthony S. Eden: I feel the focus should be of great urgency on this. I am made to understand that there is a very successful one that the Education Department has at the East End School and I would give the commitment in working along with my colleagues that we will put this in place with greatest urgency within a matter of months.

The Speaker: The Third Elected Member for Bodden Town.

Mr. Roy Bodden: It is my information that there are two new phenomena that should cause concern among drug use in the youth population: One is the emergence of ecstasy and rave parties, and the other is the targeting of youth by cigarette manufacturing companies. Can the Minister say if his strategies are designed to take these phenomena into consideration? And, if so, what is purported to be done to prevent these phenomena from taking any greater hold in the Cayman Islands?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Health, Social Welfare, Drug Abuse Prevention and Rehabilitation.

Hon. Anthony S. Eden: On the ecstasy and rave . . . as a matter of fact this was brought out in a meeting in Bodden Town last night, the great concern this is.

The National Drug Council has just had a presentation on a strategy to deal with that and also on the approach to tobacco which is greatly supported by the Cancer Society knowing the advertising that has been done in the past by the tobacco companies. We hope to also deal in more detail with this through the assistance of the National Drug Council and the Public Health Department as we go forward with this.

The Speaker: If here are no further supplementaries, we will move on to Question 14, standing in the name of the Third Elected Member for Bodden.

Withdrawn

Mr. Roy Bodden: I would grave the indulgence of the House to withdraw this question. I noticed that it bears a striking similarity to one that was answered yesterday. Not wishing to cause any delay or put the Minister of Education under too much duress this early in the sitting, I would respectfully beg to withdraw this question sir.

The Speaker: I will put it to the House. Those in favour of withdrawing this question please say Aye. Those against No.

AYES.

The Speaker: The Ayes have it. The question is withdrawn.

AGREED: QUESTION 14 WITHDRAWN.

The Speaker: Moving on to Question 15 standing in the name of the Elected Member for North Side.

QUESTION 15

The Chairman: The Honourable Minister for Education, Aviation and Planning.

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: The after-school programmes that have been put in place in the districts of North Side, East Side, and Bodden Town since the passing of Private Member's Motion No. 1/99 are as follows:

SUPPLEMENTARIES

The Speaker: The Elected Member for North Side.

Mrs. Edna Moyle: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Would the Honourable Minister say if these after-school programmes—computer club, instrumental music, creative dance, netball/football, and academics are all carried out by the North Side school teachers or is there assistance from any other section of government?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Education, Aviation and Planning.

Hon. Truman M. Boddin: Some areas are dealt with through the peripatetic teachers, such as the music and some of the sports. Also, the Sports Ministry assists in that area and other areas would be dealt with by the teachers.

The Speaker: The Elected Member for North Side.

Mrs. Edna Moyle: I wonder if the Honourable Minister would do me a favour and get some research done to find out how often the Ministry of Sports comes to the North Side Primary Schools to assist with netball, football and any other sports.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Education, Aviation and Planning.

Hon. Truman M. Boddin: I will sir.

The Speaker: Are there any further supplementaries? If not, that concludes Question Time for this morning.

Moving on to item number 4 on the Order Paper, Other Business. Private Member's Motion No. 15/2000 to be moved by the Elected Member for North Side.

OTHER BUSINESS

PRIVATE MEMBER'S MOTION NO. 15/00

WETLANDS

Mrs. Edna Moyle: Mr. Speaker, I beg to move Private Member's Motion No. 15/2000 entitled, Wetlands.

The Speaker: Do we have a seconder?
The Third Elected Member for Bodden Town.

Mr. Roy Boddin: I respectfully beg to second the motion.

The Speaker: Private Member's Motion No. 15/2000 has been duly moved and seconded. Does the mover wish to speak to it? The Elected Member for North Side.

Mrs. Edna Moyle: In dealing with the introduction I will be very brief, as I believe that the motion speaks clearly for what the seconder and I would like to achieve. It reads as follows:

"WHEREAS the Government of the Cayman Islands has a department that is staffed with technical expertise and has the facilities to provide the necessary input to Government on environmental issues;

"BE IT NOW THEREFORE RESOLVED THAT the Government immediately bring legislation to set up the Environmental Protection Fund as an interest bearing fund under the authority of the Department of Environment and that monies from this Fund be used to purchase properties that are for sale within the proposed Environmentally Protected and Environmentally sensitive areas (now known as the Central Wetlands);

"AND BE IT NOW FURTHER RESOLVED THAT those parcels of land within the Central Wetlands, not for sale, remain as zoned under the Development Plan 1997;

"AND BE IT NOW FURTHER RESOLVED THAT the Government review the National Trust Law with the aim of amending, updating, examining and defining the role of the National Trust in a present-day context to create a balance between development and conservation/preservation, taking input from members of the public."

I will deal with the first resolve of the motion, which is asking the government to set up the Environmental Protection Fund as an interest bearing fund to be used specifically for purchase of the properties for sale within the central mangrove Wetlands.

Mr. Speaker, I feel that the motion passed in this House to set up this fund should have been done this way from the beginning. Maybe some of the things that are happening now with the central wetlands may not have occurred. I know there are persons within the central wetland area that have said very clearly that their properties are not for sale. Mr. Speaker this fund must be used to purchase those that will be sold.

This fund cannot just be set up. And maybe I should have put it within the motion, but in my presentation I would ask the government to take note that there must be specific legislation for the Environmental Protection Fund as to how it should be used and otherwise. I have in my possession a copy of the Turks and Caicos Trust Fund Bill, which I am prepared to give to the government to look at with a view to bringing back legislation of a similar nature for the Cayman Islands.

Mr. Speaker, the second resolve is asking that parcels of land within the central wetlands not for sale remain as zoned under the Development Plan 1997.

For many years, the people of North Side and Bodden Town have used this land as agricultural land. They have never destroyed the property. They have never come forward with plans to develop it, and they have kept it in the original state as when passed to them by their grandfathers and great-grandfathers. Some have said that this property has been in their families for some one hundred and fifty years.

I personally believe that if we had not gotten into all of this rigmarole with environmentally protected and environmentally sensitive land, those lands would have continued to remain as they have over the last one hundred and fifty years. The argument of the landowners in these areas is that they should be given fair treatment, being able to develop their land as the people on the West Bay peninsula, in George Town, and in Savannah have done.

Mr. Speaker, I stand here today to defend the landowners in these areas. I do not believe that any one of them is not environmentally conscious. But they do have an argument.

The third resolve is “that the government review the National Trust Law with the aim of amending, updating, examining, and defining the role of the National Trust in a present day context to create a balance between development and conservation/preservation taking input from members of the public.”

Mr. Speaker, this law was brought into effect in 1987—over ten years ago—and these islands have changed in every respect. We believe that it is time to look at this law, putting in place whatever it takes so that people can develop their property, but with a balance. I personally believe (and I speak for myself) that any property can be developed. But certain guidelines must be put in place as to how the development takes place.

Mr. Speaker I have gone through the National Trust's home page on the Internet. I find it a little hard to accept that we are fighting the landowners—who have owned these properties for hundreds of years—on the ground that zoning of the central mangrove wetland as environmentally protected in the revised Development Plan in order to stabilise land values and prevent or restrict development activity in the wetland over the period needed to fund its purchase for conservation.

Mr. Speaker, a man's land in the Cayman Islands is very dear to his heart. I know that you know, and I guess some Members of this Parliament know, that we have had situations in this country where families . . . some have died and gone on to their eternal rest, but because of friction over property they have gone on without speaking to members of their own family. That is my reason for asking that we look at this law. Back in 1987 there was this same concern that the National Trust would come to a point where they wanted a piece of land and they would stop development on it.

It was not the intention of the Legislative Assembly in passing that law at the time . . . many members spoke out that there must be safeguards put in place and this is the reason.

We support the environment. We support the National Trust. But we have to come to some conclusion and some balance where we can deal with both the National Trust and the landowners.

Mr. Speaker, it only makes the situation worse when we see that the issue of Cayman Islands wetlands concerns has now reached the United Kingdom Parliament. Would it not have been better for the National Trust, or any other group for that matter, to make a report to the Legislative Assembly? and let us see how we could come to some conclusion and deal with this matter.

It says here in the Caymanian Compass of Friday, 9 June 2000, “Mr. Tam Dalyell asked the Minister of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what reports he had received about environmental degradation of the mangrove swamp in the central area of Grand Cayman.” I know of no development that is degrading that area at present.

Mr. Speaker, there is not very much development left to be done on the Seven Mile Beach area. For us to take 9,000 acres of land in the Cayman Islands—which is very limited as it is—and declare that no development can take there . . . Mr. Speaker, I cannot agree with that. I say we must look at this and see how development can take place balanced with environmental, conservation, preservation, whatever.

Mr. Speaker, with those few comments I seek the assistance of this House in supporting this motion and I hope my honourable colleagues will see fit to do so and I will now await the government's response and other members' debate. Thank you.

The Speaker: The floor is opened to debate, does any other member wish to speak? The Honourable Minister for Education, Aviation and Planning.

Hon. Truman M. Boddin: Mr. Speaker, this motion has three areas within it that deal with different aspects of the central wetlands. We know that to be, as the honourable member stated, close to 9,000 acres of land that stretches from within the area of the Duck Pond well out in the vicinity of the Cayman Kai area, to where the mangroves go in that area. So, that is really the area that we will be looking at and going back to the mangroves. It is a very large stretch of land.

I would like to first set out and deal with an area which more directly affects my ministry on this, and that is really to deal with the question of the proposed environmental zones.

Mr. Speaker, as members of this honourable House know, for twenty years—between 1977 and 1997—there had been no updating of the Development Plan. In that year, this Honourable House approved the Development Plan amendments in 1997 and produced for the first time an updated Development Plan. There had been many attempts over the past years with this highly political and very difficult matter, but the time had come when it was important that a plan from twenty years ago (which should have been revised at least every five years) was updated.

The last matters relating to the lead-up of that, Mr. Speaker, was that in February 1994 there started a 90-day public review of that plan with some 300 representations received. In relation to the environmental zone, as far as I can remember, it probably stretched (if you looked at each person) well into the thousands.

The Development Plan appeals tribunal sat in 1996, and published its report in 1997. The appeals tribunal recommended another study be made of the environmental zones to be brought back to the public. In other words, a second look should be taken at these.

The Development Plan 1997 on that recommendation was ultimately passed in December 1997, and it was passed without certain zones in it which included the environmental zones and it also included neighbourhood, hotel/tourism zones and the road corridors. The feeling was that it was better to have gotten through a substantial percentage of the plan in 1997 rather than having a plan that was twenty years out of date.

I need you to bear with me a bit as I give this history in relation to the environmental zone, sir.

Then at that stage the government gave a directive that the Central Planning Authority should carry out a fresh survey of the environmental zones, neighbourhood, hotel/tourism, and the road corridors. As far as I can remember, in September 1999 the Central Planning Authority presented the proposed amendments to the Development Plan 1997 to the public for review and comment.

I would like to mention here, sir, that one of the problems is that a very detailed and highly democratic process of objections arose because decisions the tribunal made on representations could have affected adjoining parcels of land. The law provided no procedure for those people to then be notified for a second hearing. So, there were grounds upon which to have excluded these zones. I need to just perhaps make that clear.

What could happen is that someone may say that they wished to have their property zoned from residential to commercial, and that could affect surrounding property. Under the process, they had not been notified when the hearing came up because there was no procedure for that. But that is being rectified and there will subsequently be amendments to regulations coming with the present amendments to the plan when that comes up.

I must tell you that politically to try to deal with two development plans within a space of eighteen months—when, after twenty years, governments could not get it through—has been quite an uphill battle.

So, these went out to the public in September 1999, which included the environmental zones, the other ones I mentioned, and the corridors. Many of the changes to these zones came as a result of recommendations made by the appeals tribunal, which were not put forward when the 1997 plan was done.

The public comment period for the proposed amendments expired on November 16, 1999, of which we had received over 900 representations. And this is the difficulty in trying to deal with a Development Plan. The vast majority of those related to the proposed environmental zones, both for and against.

On 1 December 1999, taking into account the public input that had been received, the Central Planning Authority resolved to move forward with the non-environmental aspects of the proposed amendments. However, regarding the environmental zones, they determined that a special committee should be established to discuss the proposed zones, and, if necessary, make suggestions relating to those or to others.

That committee (which is commonly known as the Wetlands Committee) should report to the Central Planning Authority within six months. I think those were the terms. That decision to form the Wetlands Committee was appealed by Mr. Ezzard Miller on 17 December 1999, and that effectively put the formation of the committee on hold, obviously, until the appeal could be heard.

On 10 May of this year the appeals tribunal heard the appeal and resolved that they did not have jurisdiction to hear the appeal, and it was dismissed. Therefore, Mr. Miller's appeal failed. That basically sets the history and where we are at present with this.

So, at present, we are moving ahead and hearings have been going on. I would like to take this opportunity to thank the Chairman and the members of the Development Plan appeals tribunal and also the Chairman and members of the Central Planning Authority especially our director and staff at the planning department for the untiring work they have put in to bring the second Development Plan amendment within a space of two years to where, at least, there can be partial fruition of it.

To sum up, at present the environmental zones have been required by the Central Planning Authority to be put into a Wetland Committee to study. I understand that committee could have been made up of members of the owners' group, members of the public, some of whom should be drawn from the environmental leaning, and some drawn from the department itself because there could be a fair amount of work to be carried out. In fact, it may well be that the Central Planning Authority (and I am not certain if what I am saying may have been meant, but they did refer to a study of the wetlands to really try to get a compromise position between the views of the owners) . . .

I must say that ownership of land in this country is a right that cannot be taken away without proper compensation preferably dealt with voluntarily. In my sixteen years in government, we have always been extremely reluctant to use the compulsory purchase powers.

So, I would just like to make my views, and these are my views, but I believe they have been shared by the four governments I have been in, in that one has to move cautiously and voluntarily when one deals with land that people own because these are rights, not only the legal rights but also sentimental reasons. Sometimes property is handed down from father to children or from mother to children, or parents to children rather. Against that has to be balanced the importance of this property, nearly 9,000 acres, ensuring that balance provides for the future children of this country that which is necessary to preserve and enhance the environment for the betterment of future generations.

Mr. Speaker, notwithstanding what was said in the House of Parliament in the United Kingdom that the mover of the motion referred, to and which was published in the Caymanian Compass, it is important to get the proper balance between the landowners and the environmentalists. This is where it is important that a responsible position be taken by both sides to work out a proper compromise.

I was discouraged that Mr. Miller stated that . . . well, he obviously did not want to have such a committee. But I believe the Central Planning Authority was right in trying to deal with this through a situation of mutual understanding between the two sides. It becomes impossible, I am sure, for that to happen unless we can have a meeting with the sides.

Now, I must say in fairness that I did have a good meeting with the landowners. I basically expressed to them what I have said today, and while this is not in my hands, and despite what may have been said in the Caymanian Compass, it is very obvious that the major driving force is the National Trust. The Reverend Alson Ebanks was correct in that the ultimate decision under the law rests with the Legislative Assembly itself—not Executive Council—as far as bringing in a development plan.

In fact, Mr. Speaker, the law is so clear on that, that it requires me to bring such amendments to the plan as the Central Planning Authority decides to this House. I have no choice but to abide by that process. That is a good democratic process, and ultimately the question of whether the zones in the plan (that is, any zones not just environmental) are made into law rests with this honourable House.

The section that states that is section 14(3)(a) of the Development and Planning Law, which says, “If any objection or representation with regard to any such plan or proposals is made in writing to the Authority within two months after the publication of the notice referred to in subsection (2), the Governor shall refer the matter to the Tribunal or a Development Plan Tribunal for an enquiry into all such objections or representation [and this has been done]; and the Authority shall, before submitting any such plan or proposals for the approval of the Legislative Assembly, take into consideration the objections or representations together with the report thereon of the Tribunal or a Development Plan Tribunal, as the case may be, and shall include such report with the plan or proposals submitted to the Legislative Assembly.”

So, it is a process in which the Central Planning Authority does not refer the matter to government for a decision, it refers it to the Legislative Assembly through me. That is why with the amendments that we have seen coming here from time to time for change of use of land . . . in fact, many times I just get these, and I know very little about them. But it is my duty and responsibility to bring them in here. I obviously do my preparation before they come to the House so I can defend the position of the Central Planning Authority if necessary.

Mr. Speaker, the middle resolution section where it says, “AND BE IT NOW FURTHER RESOLVED THAT those parcels of land within the Central Wetlands, not for sale, remain as zoned under the Development Plan 1997.” What would appear to be based on the facts that the Central Planning Authority has given to me, is that the new amendments will not go forward in the plan that will be brought here. Therefore, it seems that until the committee completes its study and review of the central wetlands, the position will remain as it was prior to these amendments going forward. That is, it will remain as zoned under the 1997 Development Plan.

So, government is happy to accept that status quo position bearing in mind that ultimately the decision, as I said earlier, does not rest with government but the changing of those zones is really a decision for this honourable House in due course.

Mr. Speaker, the next section of this states, “AND BE IT NOW FURTHER RESOLVED THAT the Government review the National Trust Law with the aim of amending, updating, examining and defining the role of the National Trust in a present-day context to create a balance between development and conservation/preservation, taking input from members of the public.”

Mr. Speaker, that law is now quite a few years old. It is always good to amend and update. I think it has to be most important to this society that while the National Trust, as a protector of our national environmental land, houses, historic sites, and everything else that is under it . . . and it is their duty to do that which they feel is right in relation to that. I fully support them—and my children and I are members, and I attend not only their fundraisers but where I can I meet with them and get their views from time to time. Indeed, on the 1997 Development Plan I met over extensive periods with them in an effort to get these brought forward into the 1997 zones.

I also believe it is their duty to create a balance (as the honourable mover has stated) between development and conservation/preservation. I know that bridging that gap is not easy. It is very controversial because you have two very opposed views, but I think it must be right to respect the views both of landowners and of the National Trust, and to ensure that balance is reached. I don't mind telling you, Mr. Speaker, anyone who thinks that working out a balance between the landowners and the National Trust is going to be an easy one . . . .

The 1997 plan had some amendments which helped landowners considerably, and which helped the Trust. And there was some balance in that. For example, the zones in this area were increased to 1000 feet (or there about) along the coast. But this was land that really had very little commercial value because there was already a mangrove buffer zone, as it was originally called, and it was merely an extension of that. The position now of dealing with all of the land, some of which is usable, is one that is not easily dealt with.

Mr. Speaker, in an effort to reach a compromise, the Central Planning Authority put forward (and I moved it in the meetings that we had with both the National Trust and with the landowners) that maybe a part of the solution would have been to ensure that where for example a person had 100 acres of land, the most important part is the part near the sea—the red mangrove area going progressively into black and white mangroves and into logwood—was whether it may have been possible.

And, quite frankly, I intended to forward to this House to transfer the building rights that existed on the land which the Trust wished to preserve (or a reasonable part thereof) to the other property, some of which is reasonably dry land. It had the advantage of doing several things: the land would still have the potential for building but the building would be on land that was more the dry part of it thus preserving and blocking the use of the land that the Trust wished to preserve.

That would also have the advantage that perhaps 20 acres of land, instead of the 100 acres, could be taken. And the person be allowed to build on the 20 acres what he would have been able to build on the 100 acre, in that the roads would be much shorter, and the density could be higher (because we must remember that this is an area where we are probably looking at basically larger areas of land per house, an acre or whatever). I thought it was a partial and attractive way of keeping the value of the land and developing a small part of it while preserving the rest.

In the course of the meeting we advanced that even further to say that the owners could transfer the rights to other land, not necessarily the wetlands but other land they may have had, and get the same building rights, the higher density on it and then preserve the whole or it could even be part of both. So, no loss of value of any consequence would arise to the landowner and we could preserve a substantial part of the wetlands without heavy compensation because the cost of buying 9,000 acres of land is going to be substantial and is something I can assure members of this House is going to go way beyond what either the Trust or the country can afford at one time.

Now, I support progressively buying parcels of land and preserving that. I support that fully. Once again, it has to be weighed against the demands for money within the country.

I don't have any solutions beyond those that were put forward and discussed with both sides. I must say that there are some owners who are not prepared to sell at any cost, and that is also a right that those people have. What I have always believed in life is that if we can get through 40% to 70% of a matter then sometimes we have to leave the remainder for another day and maybe fight for that at another stage. But we rarely get everything we want 100% as want it when we want it.

My advice to the Trust has been (and they did accept it in the 1997 plan) is that they were getting a percentage of what they wanted but obviously not everything. We have to remember that the wetlands now already have some zoning on them that goes a long distance in protecting them. For example, there would be restrictions now on dredging in front of that area or cutting through the mangroves there. In fact, there has been none. Those wetlands are still as pristine as they were a thousand years ago when they were formed.

As far as I know, there is the mangrove buffer zone which preserves the most important part near the sea where young fish hatch.

I must say, Mr. Speaker (and I am just speaking for myself because I intend to be frank in this motion despite knowing its political sensitivity), I do not believe that the National Trust should have the power to sell land. And I will be frank. I have told them this time and again. They are there to preserve, and therefore the power of sale of land, if I am around I will be asking that that be removed.

If government and the public are going to put property in their hands (and I know they have a say in that it can be condemned and not sold, inalienable and whatever), but if the power is not there, then, obviously, if land is given and it is not made inalienable then it can be sold. I don't think that should be there. I think they are there to preserve and the power to sell and transfer property should not be there.

So, the government is very happy with the last resolve clause as well, which I am sure the National Trust itself will accept the time has come to update and review the National Trust Law.

Mr. Speaker, I am wondering before I go on to the third part of this motion if we may perhaps have a break.

The Speaker: Certainly. We shall suspend proceedings for fifteen minutes.

PROCEEDINGS SUSPENDED AT 11.49 AM

PROCEEDINGS RESUMED AT 12.30 PM

The Speaker: Please be seated. Proceedings are resumed.

Continuation of debate on Private Member's Motion No. 15/2000, the Honourable Minister for Education, Aviation and Planning, continuing.

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: Mr. Speaker, with your permission, I would like to move an amendment to the first resolve clause. This is an amendment that has found favour with the mover and seconder, sir, and which will fall I think more in line with the laws and the structuring of the fund. With your permission, if I may move—

The Speaker: Certainly. The amendment to Private Member's Motion 15/2000 has been duly moved. Do you wish to speak to it?

The Honourable Minister for Education, Aviation and Planning. I will add that I waive the notice required under Standing Order 25(2).

AMENDMENT TO PRIVATE MEMBER'S MOTION NO. 15/00

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: Thank you very much. It says, "I, the Honourable Minister for Education, Aviation and Planning, seek to move in accordance with the provisions of Standing Order 25(2), that Private Member's Motion No. 15/2000 be amended as follows:

- (i) In the first Resolve between the words "immediately" and "set" add the words "bring legislation to";
- (ii) replace the words "the Department of Environment" with "the Financial Secretary"; and
- (iii) that the following be added immediately following the word "Wetlands)" "and any other area agreed by Finance Committee and for protecting and preserving the environment of the Islands."

Perhaps you could put it to the vote, depending on who wishes to speak. But, if not, I would then finish off on that part of the motion.

The Speaker: The amendment to Private Member's Motion No. 15/2000 has been duly moved. Does any Member wish to speak to it?

No debate? I shall put the question that the amendment to Private Member's Motion be passed. Those in favour please say Aye. Those against No.

AYES.

The Speaker: The Ayes have it. Private Member's Motion No. 15/2000 has been duly amended.

AGREED: AMENDMENT TO PRIVATE MEMBER'S MOTION NO. 15/2000 PASSED.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Education, Aviation and Planning, please continue.

Hon. Truman M. Boddin: The first resolve clause then reads, "BE IT NOW THEREFORE RESOLVED THAT the Government immediately bring legislation to set up the Environmental Protection Fund as an interest bearing fund under the authority of the Financial Secretary and that monies from this Fund be used to purchase properties that are for sale within the proposed Environmentally Protected and Environmentally sensitive areas (now known as the Central Wetlands) and any other area agreed by Finance Committee and for protecting and preserving the environment of the islands."

Mr. Speaker, the importance of this fund is that it should be extended into other areas. When we refer to areas there it also means other islands if necessary. That it be used along with other purposes for protecting/preserving the environment, for purchasing this property that is now an issue. I am sure that the landowners will appreciate the mover's wisdom in that section because I know many of them may wish to sell but they wish to have a fair and reasonable price on their property.

Mr. Speaker, I have to correct one statement I said earlier and that was that the first amendment was in 1997. I apologise for wrongly stating that. In fact, the Honourable Third Elected Member for George Town (then as the Minister responsible for Planning) did bring major amendments in 1991 and several other years. I commend him for that because I understand the difficulty of doing that and also the courage that it takes to bring such politically sensitive amendments to a development plan.

Government is happy with this motion in total, as amended. We are very pleased to play our part in ensuring the continued preservation and protection of the environment and our historic sites so that our children and our children's children inherit our islands and its land with substantially the same pristine environment that now exists above the land, below the water, as well as in the air.

I think it is most important that we find a compromise on this issue and find a meeting point between the landowners and the National Trust and the views put forward by both. What is most important, and this motion does provide that . . . in fact, the law clearly provides that compensation must be paid and it must be the fair market value of the property whether that is done by government or it is done privately. Land must not be taken, especially compulsorily.

As I said, sir, it has been extremely rare that we have ever used the Compulsory Purchase Law because personally I do not believe in that. I think if someone has property then we should pay the fair market value of it.

So, that balance I think is most important to get right and also the balance in the future between what is fair and reasonable to landowners and what is fair and reasonable to the National Trust and the environmentalist.

In conclusion I would like to really call on both sides, the National Trust and the landowners, to try to reach a resolution, at least get together, which I believe is an important starting point. And also to say in any way that either the government or I can personally assist in mediating or trying to reach some consensus, whether it be within the realms of what government has put up or even on the voluntary, I would be very happy to do so, sir.

I believe that this issue is one of the most important we have. Thank God, the wetlands are still preserved. As I said earlier they do have a certain amount of protection, in fact a lot of protection in the areas that are within one thousand feet of the sea.

I commend the mover and seconder of this motion and say that it has our support and we are prepared to assist in any way possible. Thank you.

The Speaker: The floor is open to debate. Does any other Member wish to speak? Would Members prefer to take the luncheon break at this time?

We shall suspend proceedings until 2.15 p.m.

PROCEEDINGS SUSPENDED AT 12.42 PM

PROCEEDINGS RESUMED AT 2.20 PM

The Speaker: Please be seated. Proceedings are resumed. Debate continues on Private Member's Motion No. 15/2000 as amended. Does any other Member wish to speak?

The Third Elected Member for Boddin Town.

Mr. Roy Boddin: As the seconder of the motion, and as one of two representatives who have been in contact with the concerned landowners, quite naturally I have a few observations to make.

Mr. Speaker, I believe that in the essence of clarity I should begin by saying what the motion does not seek to do. The motion does not seek in any way to denigrate or lessen the importance of the National Trust as an organisation. Rather, as has been mooted by previous speakers, particularly the mover, the motion seeks to put into a clear and unequivocal perspective the role of the National Trust as envisaged by us as legislators and rep-representatives of the people vis-à-vis the landowners' inalienable right to keep their lands or to dispose of their lands as they, the owners, see fit—because that is an inalienable right guaranteed by the laws of this land.

Having said that, I wish to underscore that the history of the relations between these landowners and the National Trust probably went a little awry from the beginning. If either party had taken the time to explore the possibility of an amicable discussion, I believe that matters would not necessarily have come to this. Nevertheless, the fact that they are before the Legislative Assembly cannot altogether be categorised as unfortunate because I believe that it is high time that legislators took a look at the National Trust Law. From time to time legislators have a responsibility to review laws and to assess the functioning of these laws. That is certainly so in cases where we have feedback from our constituents.

It is an essence of democracy that laws are built where there is flexibility to amend and change as is necessary. And, of course, it is the responsibility of the government to bring it to the parliament.

I was particularly happy with the tenor and direction of the debate by the honourable minister under whom planning falls, the Leader of Government Business. I have to be careful, in that while I want to be fair and generous, I don't want to make it look like there is no difference between us in an election year! But I am happy to report that on this occasion we are certainly on the same side. [I wish] that could exist for ever, but the closer we get to November probably the further apart we are going to pull. But, as I have said before, we are certainly not mortal enemies.

Mr. Speaker, I was particularly pleased with the approach taken by the minister and his acceptance of the motion and also the fact that the minister, using his good legal wisdom, brought an amendment that further achieves the purpose for which we were advocating and labouring. I believe that with this amendment, this motion cannot be improved and that is saying a lot.

Mr. Speaker, it is my understanding that the National Trust may have had some concerns as to the motives of those of us who brought this motion. Let me put that in perspective by saying that as representatives of the people our primary responsibility is to ensure that the views of our constituents and the wider public are being adhered to and being taken into consideration when we come to the parliament to represent them.

So, I see my role in here first and foremost as being a mouthpiece articulating the concerns of my constituents. Now, where does that place me with respect to the National Trust? Well, it is as one can quite logically accept on these occasions a rather ambiguous position because I also have to respect the fact that laws have been crafted which allow the National Trust to exist and to operate.

But, Mr. Speaker, let me put it into perspective by asking a simple question: Which comes first? The people or the National Trust? Quite logically, the people. It was the people of Bodden Town who voted me here and not necessarily the National Trust, which is made up probably of some members of Bodden Town but not exclusively of all Bodden Town.

So, my responsibility is clearly and unequivocally first to represent those people, and in representing those people I have to take into consideration the wishes that they have with regard to their land—how they want to use it, and how they want to have access to it, and how they want to preserve it.

Now, Mr. Speaker, I had occasion to visit with them initially. I went to one meeting at the civic centre in Bodden Town and another at the civic centre in North Side. I was impressed by the turnout. And, Mr. Speaker, I don't have to tell you that there is an old adage in the Cayman Islands which says, 'You may take a man's wife. You may take his car. You may take his boat. You may even take his children—but you cannot take his land.'

These people made it quite plain that they still live by that old adage. I can understand. And there were some mixed signals and mixed messages at the beginning, Mr. Speaker, and I quite sympathise with the position of my constituents and landowners, both of Bodden Town and North Side. What appears to me to have been portrayed is a double standard system.

They get the impression—mistaken or otherwise—that the people on the western side (what we sometimes refer to as the West Bay peninsula) were allowed to do whatever they wanted to do with their land. But these other landowners, those in North Side and Bodden Town, were suddenly faced with restrictions and indeed threatened with a disruption, threatened by some other organisation appropriating their lands and certainly handcuffed in terms of what they may be able to do with their land.

It was also my understanding and my information from those two meetings that not everyone was interested in selling or developing the land at this time.

Now, Mr. Speaker, the government set up an Environmental Protection Fund some time ago. In the recent past, we had some heated debate regarding that Fund and how it should be used and what should happen. It is my understanding that one of the purposes of that Fund is for the resources to be used to acquire properties, some of which are the subject of this motion. It can be used in other ways, as the amendment brought by the honourable minister stated. We have mooted that the resources may even be used for studies of an environmental or nature-preserving mission.

Now, it is also my belief and my information that the problem with the National Trust and the landowners emanates out of a difference in philosophy and vision. The National Trust while its foremost objective is education, preservation, and dissemination of the value and necessity to preserve some of these lands, it was also (and again perception or reality taken) interpreted as a trespass upon these landowners. Well, the very nature of land in this society would mean that from the very outset the two sides were diametrically opposed, and therefore it was incumbent upon both parties to gingerly state their positions. I have to say, in all deference to the landowners, that when I attended those two meetings I came away with a clear and distinct impression that there was a threat that they were going to lose control of their land. That's the impression I came away with.

Quite understandably, there was some representation made by these landowners to their representatives. It is regrettable and unfortunate that a situation could not have been arrived at whereby the two parties (that is, the National Trust and the landowners) sat down ideally in the presence of an independent and impartial body to settle the differences.

From information that I have, the National Trust in this instance may have been its own worst enemy. The Elected Member for North Side read a statement which was extracted from the Home Page of the National Trust where they are purporting to control the price of these lands—by inference, controlling its ownership and what can be done with it. Now that, to my mind, should be the furthest thing from the interest and the objective of the National Trust.

I have to say again that the landowners have every right and reason to feel strengthened to organise themselves to meet that kind of threat.

So, Mr. Speaker, the landowners resorted to the avenues which could best yield them results—they came to the persons whom they elected to represent them.

We brought a motion that we thought was fair to both parties, a motion which allowed the National Trust to exist and do what we saw clearly as its function, and the motion which would allow the landowners to retain their inalienable right and control over their property.

But, Mr. Speaker, I have to digress a little because I was very surprised to read in the Caymanian Compass of a few days ago where the National Trust had cause to be asked some questions in the House of Commons concerning the destruction of central wetlands in the Cayman Islands. In a democratic society, anyone is privileged to raise any matter. I am not questioning the ability of the National Trust, or the raising of this matter. But I have to say that the information contained some inaccuracies and irregularities and almost constitutes a contempt of this Legislative Assembly.

It was in the issue of the Caymanian Compass of Friday, 9 June. To my knowledge, there is really no destruction of the central wetlands because no development is going on in those wetlands now. I respect the right of the National Trust to raise this, but I am saying that the matter could have best been handled by also acquainting the Legislative Assembly of their concerns. So, it was most inconsiderate. I say that clearly and in all seriousness.

Here we are now in a struggle against the OECD and the G-7—and now the National Trust is going to have cause to visit the international environmentalist on us too? You know, that is why I say it constitutes a contempt. Really, it does. I would have thought that any organisation would have come either through you as the Speaker by writing to the parliamentarians and saying, 'we have certain concerns and we would like to know what is the position of the Legislative Assembly'; or by writing to the government and asking, 'what is the position of the government with regard to this?' But for us to have to read it so they are complaining on us as if they are complaining for the mother to flog us . . . .

Now, Mr. Speaker, you know it is a good thing that we are mature, because immature people would have countered with a retaliatory strike. The National Trust must realise that they were created by the Legislative Assembly in the Legislative Assembly, and the Legislative Assembly is the ultimate authority of the laws of this land. The Legislative Assembly has the authority to legislate something into existence or legislate it out of existence. And, Mr. Speaker, I want to say this (again, in all deference and respect to the government even in this election year): I say this under caution (because I don't want the government to look too good), they have never been irresponsible in these matters. So, for the National Trust to tattletale on us (as we used to say when I was growing up) to make us look bad, and to embarrass us at a time when we are already struggling with some international agencies, is grossly disappointing. We have never been unfair to the National Trust.

It is now difficult for me to negotiate with them in good faith. And I am going to give you an added reason why they have to impress me now so that I can really trust them.

Certainly, I have made my decision clearly and unequivocally. I love the National Trust and I respect it, but when it comes to a choice between the National Trust and my constituents, I am a politician. I am going with the people who voted for me. I would be stupid to do otherwise.

So, I want to say in all fairness that I believe a situation could have existed where the National Trust could have been satisfied with their position and the landowners could without threat feel that they retain their inalienable right to do with their property whatever their wishes were. But for the National Trust to purport to set themselves up like a cartel, to deliberately keep the values at a certain level so that they could buy it up, Mr. Speaker, I cannot—unless I have taken leave of my senses—support that position.

Now, yesterday afternoon we had a meeting. There were four of us—the mover, the First Elected Member for George, the First Elected Member for West Bay, two members of the National Trust, and I. We had informal discussions and they went well. I left at the conclusion of the meeting with the impression that we had satisfied ourselves as to our respective positions and had mutually agreed that everything was all right. Except, Mr. Speaker, when I came back from the luncheon suspension I received what I call a letter from the National Trust, which greatly surprised me. On the last paragraph of the first page, the National Trust says, "If this motion seeks to control how and when the Trust can represent the views of its membership, then the question must be asked how do you reduce the freedoms of a representative organisation without reducing the freedoms of its members."

Mr. Speaker, first of all, the motion is not seeking to limit or delimit how and when the Trust can represent the views of its membership. That is patently fallacious. I can only say that the author of this must not have read the motion. But that is not the part that really punches my alarm button. The penultimate paragraph reads, “In conclusion, to seek to review the law with intent of changing the role and function of the organisation would be to the discredit of those individuals who spent literally years carefully formulating the foundation of the organisation and the law.”

Mr. Speaker, the Honourable Legislative Assembly is not seeking to do that. But that is the role, responsibility, and function of the Honourable Legislative Assembly if it desires so to do. That is what fifteen people were elected to do—just that.

So, is the National Trust saying that we should become so impotent that we cannot even re-craft, re-create, or repeal laws that we feel in the essence of the country are to be re-crafted, amended, or repealed? Certainly, Mr. Speaker, to do that is to question the essence of the Westminster style of democracy.

The National Trust should ask itself if its function was to so control and influence the price of land that those landowners who own that land can have land which is essentially worthless because the prices were manipulated by some other organisation purposely for their selfish aims and objectives. That is what the National Trust should ask itself. And, if that is the case, who is going to give the progeny of those landowners land on which to build their houses to farm and to develop as they see fit? So, it seems to me that the National Trust is wearing rose-tinted glasses

It goes on, “To amend the role of the Trust would be a breach of faith and contrary to the spirit in which the Trust was set up originally.” Again, that is an unfounded fear because no one purported to amend the role of the Trust. We recognise that the Trust has a role to play. And all of us here would like to see the Trust play its role. But there are those of us who are concerned that the Trust has taken on a sense of self-importance and has puffed itself up much like the frog in Aesop’s fable. Like the frog in Aesop’s fable, it better be careful that it does not burst!

Mr. Speaker, we believe that there is room for sensible co-existence. And we don’t think that there should be any greying of the area and any confrontation. But with all due respect, the legislators have to articulate their concerns when ambiguities and misinformation is put out.

Finally, “It is our position that this portion of the motion should not be entertained or accepted.” Well, Mr. Speaker, that is within the democratic right of the Trust to say.

“Any review of the National Trust for the Cayman Islands’ laws should be at the request of the National Trust of the Cayman Islands.” Mr. Speaker, I have to exercise my democratic right and differ with that. Any review of the National Trust for the Cayman Islands should come from the government or from the Legislative Assembly, from the backbench.

So, I hope that I have articulated my position with regard to this communiqué and with regard to the headlines in the papers of Friday, 9 June 2000, with respect to the National Trust. I shall continue to support the role and function of the National Trust in the Caymanian society. But I cannot allow the National Trust to run roughshod over my constituents, or any Caymanians, by denying them and depriving them of their inalienable right to do with their lands what they think is in their best interest to do. We have not yet become any totalitarian society and land in the Cayman Islands still is the mother of all wealth. Mr. Speaker, there are those few Caymanians left of which the land is all the wealth they have.

I want to say before I sit down that, yes, there is a role for the National Trust to play. The National Trust has been in existence long enough to realise what that is, and they have been playing that role. Recently, it seems that the National Trust is becoming filled with its own self-importance and they cannot be allowed to win the trespass against the people who have ownership to these central wetlands. Clearly and unequivocally, these landowners must be able to do with their land what the law says their inalienable rights are. I have to side with them against any trespass on that inalienable right.

Mr. Speaker, as the seconder of the motion I am convinced of the rightness of the motion and the amendment. I am prepared to stand with landowners and give them my support just as I am prepared to allow the National Trust to continue its operation within sensible parameters. But I would add this footnote: that no law crafted in this Legislative Assembly is written in blood and cast in stone. All laws are subject to review from time—some, purely out of the age, others out of the practical necessities of operation.

So, the National Trust should not feel itself as untouchable. I don’t think that there are many laws and regulations that are that sacred and sacrosanct that they escape review from time to time. One of the roles and functions of the people’s representatives is to ensure that the laws are crafted and reviewed so that they serve the purpose of helping the people and allowing the society to function in such a way that emphasis on all elements benefit equally.

I hope that I have made my position clear and understandable. I hold no brief against the National Trust, but I have to rise to defend my constituents when certain trespasses are made on them because it must be remembered that there is mechanism for allowing them to come in here to speak for themselves. So, we—the persons whom they voted in—have to be their mouthpiece inside this hollowed and honourable chamber. I am happy to say once again that at this particular occasion there is no difference between my position and that position held by the government. I wish that were the occurrence more frequently, but politics being what it is I have to make the best of it when it occurs. Thank you.

The Speaker: The floor is opened to debate. Does any other member wish to speak? The Fourth Elected Member for George Town.

Dr. Frank McField: Mr. Speaker, sometimes in the debate it appeared as if we have two forces. On one side we have the landowners, and on the other side we have the National Trust. But my understanding of the National Trust, their interest and their activities so far, is that it, being a democratically constituted organisation, represents or at least allows there to be represented the views of the general population with regard to issues for which the National Trust is charged—being there to preserve artefacts and other objects of historical, cultural, and environmental importance.

So, to give the impression somehow that the National Trust is a dictatorial organisation, or an organisation that has now assumed those properties, is the result of the fact that we live in a society where people prefer to criticise rather than to participate. It is only at the point of criticism that we become excited, because, obviously, if we have organisations that are open to the general public to become members and to activate their interests with regard to these issues for which the National Trust was set out, and people do not become active, obviously, it means at the end of the day that they will not be able to share their views with regard to these very important issues.

Representing the constituents of Bodden Town or North Side, and representing the interest of the people of the Cayman Islands, could at certain times become a slightly a different kettle of tea. I believe that since we are talking about the national interest in this Assembly—since this is a national assembly, it is not a regional government, it is a national government assembly—sometimes we have to be very careful to make sure that the views we are putting forward are the views of the majority. In fact, what we are suggesting to be done or not to be done will be for the general good.

I don't have a problem with this position because it is always my position as far as I am concerned. Of course, when the landowners or some representatives of the landowners had meetings here with members of the backbench I was not included in that meeting. I don't know for what reason I was not included, but I can say quite clearly that I am not included in a lot of things that people do around here. That might be also because everybody knows that I have my own point of view when it comes to most things and I insist upon the right of expressing that point of view.

Also, I must say that when the National Trust came here to speak to people, they did not speak to me. So, I have the good fortitude of not having had that lobbying (or whatever some persons want to call it) done to me. But listening to what the government has tried to do . . . the National Team has tried to get themselves out of very difficult situations. And the reason why is because they had proposals made to them all the way back to 1996.

If they had listened and had implemented them and taken them seriously we would not have this conflict that we have today. The landowners would not be saying that the National Trust is their natural enemy because the problems would have been solved according to the proposals that the National Trust had made to the government. We would not be in this situation. But this is always how things happen here. We always wait until there is a crisis, and then we all charge in taking sides and we create perhaps at the end of the day more damage than we imagined.

I blame the government for this situation, Mr. Speaker. It would not have come to this point. The government used the Environmental Protection Fund, of course, and they could have put that to assist this. The government knew that the National Trust was leaning on them from 1996, and to do this politically correct would mean to compensate these people for their lands. They realised that it could have been zoned, and zoning would therefore have had that effect of devaluing the land thereby taking away the land from these people and depriving them—by way of zoning the land. And they tried to give the government the idea that this was not the correct way of doing so.

The National Trust cannot get up in the Legislative Assembly and defend itself, nor can the National Trust take a more political position in public, because then they would be criticised even more for taking a political position. But it is interesting that the government and the backbench seem to be agreeing to a certain extent with regard to the solution at the particular point because the solution is the same solution the National Trust was suggesting from 1996. These ideas did not come from no place.

I think that the fact that the government even brought in the environmental impact fund might have been an idea that they got from the National Trust.

So, I want to say that the National Trust is wanting to say that the law as it is now should not be amended without their recommendations or their being involved, or their suggesting that the law with regard to the National Trust should change. Now, I tend to agree with that. The reason why I tend to agree with that is that I don't want organisations to become the victims of legislators who feel that as soon as they have a problem or they don't like the way an organisation is behaving they run up in here and they make a law to impact the organisation. That is not fair. It is being suggested at a crisis time. It is being suggested at a time when people have come to a point to be frustrated with the National Trust and have come to a point to accept that the National Trust is the driving force behind this attempt to devalue the people's land in the wetlands—when, in fact, the government has only used the National Trust as a scapegoat!

So, the mere fact that we are going to now consider legislation that would so-call limit or curtail the power of the National Trust is what I am talking about. But the power of the National Trust is really having a lot to do with the fact that a lot of people that are members of the National Trust and that are leaders in the National Trust are very committed to the case. They try to influence people by using facts, by using persuasive arguments, by appealing to our national instincts I would say, to be a part of our environment and to be friendly to our environment and want to preserve our environment.

You cannot legislate that away. If somebody wants to counter what they are doing they can also form an organisation to do exactly that. When the landowners were invited to be on a committee, I thought that was at least a possibility for an exchange of information and for people to come to some kind of understanding as to how best to compromise and preserve the situation so that everyone would have their interest protected as much as possible. Not that everyone would be attacked.

The National Trust has been doing good work in this country. There are people that have been doing good work. We see it all the time. So, they are not someone that you just come out and call names and try to ridicule because it won't work. There are people out there who seriously know that the National Trust has done very good and serious work.

Now, all I am saying is that I did not bite the bait from the very beginning by saying, 'let's blame the National Trust.' I always said, 'let's blame the government.' Let's deal with the Minister of Planning. Let's deal with the Minister of Environment whom the National Trust addressed in 1996 with regard to these proposals, part of which we are now using here today to compromise.

Now, this is where I find it a bit strange. Believe it or not, if we have a problem with the National Trust we can talk to them. If we look at the National Trust Law (1997 Revision), we don't see anything in here that prohibits the establishment of a democratic collective trust. In the Trust we have the possibility to have district committees and the law talks about the district committees and the input of the district committees; that the government is ably represented by the law on the Trust. There is no way that anybody can say that this is the law of a dictatorial organisation. This is as democratic as you can get.

Now, the Minister of Education said that what he would like to see changed would be the fact that the Trust can sell land. That was all that he really suggested, and I would tend to go along with him in that perhaps I might view that a little critical, the fact that they might be able to dispose of land. And if you had the wrong people in control that they might be able to dispose of very important lands before any reinforcement could get in.

But I would like to mention the fact that it says quite clearly how members are elected to the Trust. The law describes that and the pattern in this is no different than the pattern in other public organisations. Obviously, when some of the landowners led by Mr. Ezzard Miller went to the Trust meeting, they did not go along with what the law said. They might have felt that they were right in principle in exercising their rights to protect their property, but if they had been actively involved in the National Trust they would have had an input from the very beginning. But to go in there at that particular point in order to try to take it over at that particular time, I think that smacks more of dictatorial behaviour than what the Trust can be accused of having done.

So, we have to make sure that this motion is not only accepted by this House, but that this House also accepts the responsibility to try to defuse the bad blood that has been created. We cannot stand in here and say that this motion is acceptable to us knowing that the Trust did contribute to this motion happening. They might not have been the people who came here and brought it, because they are not legislators. But all you have to do is look in their submission to Government, in their proposal on 10 April 1996.

Maybe this should be tabled in this Legislative Assembly. I would like to table this.

The Speaker: So ordered.

Dr. Frank McField: It is just that I feel that sometimes I get up to bat and I don't know exactly where the ball is coming from and I don't know exactly where I want to bat it to. But I feel inclined somehow to say just from my gut that I do not believe in a particular kind of behaviour. I don't believe that the Trust needs any more whipping than I have seen it get in the press already, from certain persons on Talk Today.

I have been accused of doing nothing with regard to this particular question, but I believe that people do have a right to their land. I don't believe that Government has the right to take these people's land away from them. I suggest also that the fund be used to buy the land from those persons that want to sell the land. If people do not want to sell their land, then there is no way that we can force them to give it up.

We can still continue to show good faith to the landowners to convince them that the government or the Trust is not interested in taking away their land without due compensation. We can continue to see that studies are done to enable us to know exactly how important it is. I was just talking to someone today about the fact that my father, when he used to go into the North Sound, used to use dynamite to blow fish and we did not know any better. We felt that it was our right to use the dynamite, although it was probably illegal at that time. I know there were at least two families from George Town that continued to use the dynamite when they were under pressure to get fish to sell and to feed their families.

So, we understand all the time that our way of life is being impacted not just by the environment but also by legislation of Government. Government imposes its will on the people—it taxes people, it asks people to serve in armies, to give their lives to the state. But the environment is what God made, and it was here before, and it has a sense and a logic that most of us don't understand and none of us will ever understand fully what God has put together, the mechanism that sustains life. We never truly understand.

We as human beings create science, and science solves the problem only to create another problem. That is not the case in God's environment. So, when we come to the point where we no longer need to destroy something in order to survive, we become more civilised, we become more advanced. And I think that is the natural progression that any human community should go in.

So, I think it is an honourable task to be able to afford to cherish your environment. Just like it is an honourable task to be able to cherish your art, culture, heritage, and your artefacts. But if you want to save an old tin pot somebody used eighty years ago or one hundred years ago, and you want to save an old crowbar from the 1950s because you think that is important to posterity, what about the marine environment also?

We know that we as a country have become more and more important in preserving all the things around us. But that has taken some time we have all learned. I don't believe the argument that landowners don't care about the environment. As a matter of fact, the mere fact that they own the land and that they have continued to own the land over generations shows their relation to the land and shows they care for the land. I would just like us to assist them in being able to preserve the land for themselves and their children, and the children of the people of the Cayman Islands as well. I believe that this can be achieved if the National Trust is respected and given credit for what it has done so far.

I would also like to mention before I finish that I have respect for the people of the cloth—the ministers, pastors—but the three that I have greatest respect for are my Brother George, Brother Al (who married me), and Brother Alson—those three Caymanians—because they gave up material things that they could have gotten and they decided to serve the community on a spiritual level, a much higher level than a material level.

If we believe that the spiritual is more important and higher than the material . . . that they serve the community in this way and you find somebody taking a job to be chairman of the National Trust because it is so hard sometimes to get people to come and be members of organisations, then we cannot sit by and allow that person to become the political target for those persons who want to just shoot away for elections or whatever it is. I am not going to necessarily say who it is, but I think that everybody knows who it is. And I am not saying that it is the Elected Member from North Side because I have never heard her say that.

I am sorry, Mr. Speaker, I am getting all these things confused today. I would just like to conclude with that because I don't think I can offer anything more with regard to the technicalities and legalities of this motion. I think it was a good compromise that the government made. I think it was a good motion that was brought here, and I am happy that at last we are able to come to some kind of conclusion that will give both parties involved in this conflict a possibility to all have an honourable conclusion. Thank you.

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for West Bay.

Mr. W. McKeeva Bush: Mr. Speaker, I hope I can be brief on this. I support the motion. But there are concerns in the memorandum that I received from the Executive Director.

The Trust has every right to be upset about the spending of the environmental funds. We, the backbenchers in this House, fought that issue very hard. The government paid us no mind and we said at that time that those funds should not be used to balance the recurrent expenditure—wasteful, extravagant expenditure by the present government. So, the Trust has every right to be upset. I am upset and other members have been upset about it.

I do not believe that the Trust should be spending the kind of energy they have spent, the time and money, on matters that I believe should be left to the Planning Department in this country. If they don't like the policy, they can do as I am trying to do, that is, to remove the Minister from setting the policy. That is what they should do. The National Trust is not the Planning Department. It was not set up for that purpose. It cannot set policy on any matter. That is for the Planning Department when it comes to planning and development.

Mr. Speaker, in the memorandum it says, “To review the law with the intent of changing the role and function of the organisation would be to the discredit of those individuals who spent literally years carefully formulating the foundation of the organisation and the law. Those individuals and the government recognise the need for the National Trust with its purposes and powers. They strongly believe that a National Trust for the Cayman Islands should exist and that it should serve a role independent from government.”

“To amend the role of the Trust would be breach of faith and contrary to the spirit in which the Trust was set up originally.” There is a lot of merit in what they are saying. I agree with this.

I was part of the House in 1987 that supported the law, and I know you were also, Mr. Speaker, a member at that time. I do recall the debate on that law and the purposes and some of the things told to us that it would be doing. It has never done. That is a fact and it is recorded in the Hansards. Unfortunately, Mr. Speaker, one of the members then is today a member criticising the National Trust when actually he set up, or assisted to set it up at that time. They would not even counter an amendment for the coming into force to make it effective because after the elections in 1988 they went ahead.

The National Trust Law is good. It must continue to be independent of government, certainly. But where it fails to be balanced and becomes obstructive or disagrees with the policy of government who funds it, then there must be room for dialogue. That is what I believe, Mr. Speaker.

Where the National Trust disagrees with government, there should be room for dialogue. What I would like to see is for the National Trust to be consistent and fair. It cannot ignore what one person does and spend enormous amounts of money, time, and energy on what somebody else is doing when both are doing the same thing. I would like to see some balance here, some consistency and fairness.

My support for the Trust has always been there, as much as I could give. I don't know whether my membership is current at the time, but I know I have been a member. I did try to attend a meeting one time and they told me that my membership was not current and I could not attend the meeting. I would have thought that after sending you an invitation to come to the meeting that they would allow you to come anyway, whether or not you were current.

Anyway, when an organisation that is funded by government gets to the point that we are having this kind of disagreement, it is time that the two sit down together and work it out. I believe government has to do that with the Chamber of Commerce, the Condominium Association, and other organisations. Government cannot ignore the Trust and the Trust cannot ignore government. I believe too much of that has gone on. That is not good for the country.

Mr. Speaker, in regard to the ongoing matter of the landowners of the central wetlands versus the National Trust, I am not in favour with the obstruction of the rights of any landowner in this country. If a person has property passed on by his forefathers and has been in his families for generations, or if a person has just bought a piece of land, whatever, that belongs to him.

We talk about international conventions and international agreements that the Cayman Islands is party to. Well, we should check to see which one is protecting the rights of people who own things like property where government or any organisation can walk in and obstruct them from what is rightfully theirs.

Now, when I say obstruction, whether it be by words or whatever, I believe what is happening is obstruction. If any organisation wants to protect that property for the national good (as they say) then it must be done in the right way. Government cannot just regulate, put in a zone on property in a manner that it becomes unsuitable or unusable by the owners without proper discussion and proper compensation for all around. What is theirs is theirs. That cannot be changed. And I believe what is needed in this whole matter is a serious balance, a compromise.

Mr. Speaker, wars have been started because of land disputes. This situation is doing the country hardly any good. Much time and energy is being put on this matter and it should be settled in a more amicable manner.

I, too, Mr. Speaker, have much respect for the chairman of the Trust, Pastor Alson, as I call him. He is a person that I have always had tremendous respect for. He is a man of God, and one who is genuine. He doesn't talk about it but he lives the life. That's what I appreciate about him. I don't think that anyone can say that he is a hypocrite in any sense, shape, or form.

Mr. Speaker, he is not just a preacher, but he is a well-educated man too in his own right. I have much confidence in him. What I believe happens is that there are other factions getting in for their own purposes and that changes the course of events sometimes.

As I said, there must be a balance. The Trust must realise that. It cannot be one sided. It has done some good work over the time that it has been in operation. It has a good education programme and it has raised the awareness of people about what is good for us and not good for us in terms of the environment—our marine life and so on. Not that I believe that all the information that they give is correct, I don't believe that, but I do know that since coming into operation there is more awareness and that is good.

I believe the Trust has been negligent in not protecting national monuments. That is one thing I think has been lacking, and I told them that yesterday afternoon.

When the Trust was set up (and I believe this is recorded in the Hansards), it was set up so that it could get funds to help in purchasing monuments and properties. And, of course, there has to be a right channel for all of that. I believe that we were told that we would even get funds from overseas. I don't know how much of that has happened, but I wish to God that would be the direction that they would continue in.

Countries need an organisation like the National Trust. As much as I sometimes take a beating from them, an organisation like the National Trust is good for the Cayman Islands. Let it work with the government and let the government get in a position where they are not ignoring the National Trust and the National Trust is ignoring them. That is not helping anyone. And, again I will be very political and say a good job for them is that they should remove the Minister that would not agree with them if they don't like him.

The Speaker: Does any other member wish to speak?

If no other member wishes to speak, would the honourable mover wish to exercise her right of reply? The Elected Member for North Side.

Mrs. Edna Moyle: I would like to start my winding-up, which will be extremely brief, by thanking the government for accepting this motion and for their amendment, putting in place legislation for this Environmental Protection Fund.

You know, Mr. Speaker, I could stand here and I could knock the government for the Environmental Protection Fund, but that is not what this motion is all about. I brought this motion so that we could get some conclusion to for this matter between the landowners and the National Trust. I think it was the Honourable Jim Bodden who said one time that only a dead man and a fool could not admit that a mistake was made.

Mr. Speaker, to now put the Environmental Protection Fund under legislation to be used for what it was set up for, I say this is a move in the right direction.

Much has been said about . . . not that we have presented here that we are against the National Trust but I have gathered from remarks made. I would like to make it very clear, neither the seconder nor I are against the National Trust. But it would be highly unfair for us as representatives of the people to come here and give the National Trust the right to do whatever they want to do and to ignore the concerns of the people of the Cayman Islands.

Mr. Speaker, we brought this motion hoping that we could get some conclusion to this matter whereby both parties can be happy.

Much was said about Pastor Alson, and I want to make it very clear that neither the seconder of this motion nor I have ever had anything bad to say about Pastor Alson. His good character speaks for itself and that was not the aim of this motion. Maybe there are people on the outside who are saying things about his character or his dedication in his field, but it certainly is not connected to the seconder or me. I would go a little bit further to say that I don't think there is anyone on the government bench or anyone sitting on the backbench in this Parliament who would stoop to disgrace the character of one of our good citizens.

So, Mr. Speaker, with those few brief remarks I would like to thank all those persons who spoke and have accepted this motion, and the government. Now, let us move forward to put in place immediately, as quickly as the government can the necessary legislation for the Environment Protection Fund so that discussions can now take place with those landowners down the road who may wish to sell.

We would like to make it very clear to the National Trust, as we did yesterday evening, it is not the intention of this motion asking for a review of the National Trust Law to tie the hands of the National Trust. We made that very clear, and I would like to emphasise it once again. Mr. Speaker, any law that is set up by this Parliament after a certain amount of years there is a need for review. But that review that we are asking for has nothing to do with stifling the National Trust in what they are doing. We want to look at it and we want to make it a balanced legislation. Let it be fair to all concerned.

The National Trust, as we have said with input from members of the public, will have their opportunity to have input into this review. So, they can rest assured that it is not the intention of this motion to destroy, stifle, or tie the hands of the National Trust.

So, I would like to thank all Honourable members once again for supporting this motion and I look forward to working with the government to set up proper legislation for the Environmental Protection Fund and meeting to review the National Trust Law. Thank you very much.

The Speaker: I shall now put the question on Private Member's Motion NO. 15/2000 as amended. Those in favour please say Aye. Those against No.

AYES.

The Speaker: The Ayes have it.

AGREED: PRIVATE MEMBER'S MOTION NO. 15/2000 AS AMENDED PASSED.

The Speaker: I think this would be an appropriate time to take the afternoon break. We shall suspend for fifteen minutes.

PROCEEDINGS RESUMED AT 4.04 PM

The Speaker: Please be seated. Proceedings are resumed. Private Member's Motion No. 16/2000, Equal Rights for Illegitimate Children and Parents of Illegitimate Children, to be moved by the Third Elected Member for Bodden Town.

PRIVATE MEMBER'S MOTION NO. 16/00

RIGHTS FOR ILLEGITIMATE CHILDREN AND PARENTS OF ILLEGITIMATE CHILDREN

Withdrawn

Mr. Roy Bodden: I rise to seek the indulgence of the Honourable House and the Chair to withdraw this motion at this time on the grounds that in consultation with the seconder and other honourable members on the back-bench, we would need to do much more research. I had not realised that the motion was not without some concern, and I was reminded by the Honourable seconder that the last time when we originally brought the motion the government members themselves intimated to us that they had some concerns and indeed had prepared an amendment.

In light of these circumstances I seek the permission of the Chair and the indulgence of other honourable members to withdraw the motion at this time in order to complete the research and bring the motion back in the September sitting.

The Speaker: Do we have a seconder to that motion?
The Elected Member for North Side.

Mrs. Edna Moyle: I beg to second the motion.

The Speaker: In accordance with Standing Order 24(14), which reads, "A motion my be withdrawn with the leave of the House; but if so withdrawn it may be made again at another meeting of the House, after notice has been given as required by paragraph (5)." I shall put the question. Those in favour please say Aye. Those against No.

AYES.

The Speaker: The Ayes have it. The motion has been withdrawn.

AGREED: PRIVATE MEMBER'S MOTION NO. 16/2000 WITHDRAWN.

The Speaker: Moving on to Private Member's Motion No. 14/2000, Public Education System to be moved by the First Elected Member for George Town.

PRIVATE MEMBER'S MOTION NO. 14/00

PUBLIC EDUCATION SYSTEM

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: I wish to move Private Member's Motion No. 14/2000, entitled Public Education System, which reads:

"WHEREAS in any rapidly developing country the level and diversity of education offered by the public system is of vital importance;

"AND WHEREAS it appears that the educational demands created by the rapid economic development in the Cayman Islands are not being adequately met by the present system;

"BE IT THEREFORE RESOLVED that the Minister of Education, acting under his constitutional responsibility to deliver policy in the area of education, set out a properly prioritised plan, including costs and specific timing of implementation to address the present needs in the public education system.”

The Speaker: Do we have a seconder?

The Third Elected Member for Bodden Town.

Mr. Roy Bodden: I beg to second the motion.

The Speaker: Private Member's Motion No. 14/2000 has been duly moved and seconded. Does the mover wish to speak to it? The First Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: This motion is a follow-up to a motion that was brought in 1998. It comes to the floor of this House because of a continuing concern that many of us have with the educational system in this country and the problems that continually seem to arise.

Now, before I go into the specifics of the motion, I want to take a minute to set the stage by explaining my opinions with regard to the wider ramifications in society as a result of problems that now exist in our public education system. In my view, the system has some cracks in it and too many of our young people going through the system are falling through those cracks.

Years ago we did not notice it anywhere near as much because the numbers were not to the level that they are today. In the past ten years (perhaps to use a figure), there has been a tremendous population increase in the country. The number of students going through our public education system has continued to rise and the number who have fallen through the cracks I am talking about also continues to rise proportionately to say the least.

Mr. Speaker, for many years, by my own experiences interacting with people of all levels, I have seen and witnessed these young people falling through the cracks. The system for what it is today is not one that I wish to criticise in this motion, because normally the way these things work, once we have a Minister who is in charge of education and you have a private member's motion talking about it, you simply have one side of the coin coming forth and then the minister is apt to simply defend what is there and it ends there.

At the end of this motion to I would like to see if we can at least head in a direction where we are going to see some results. I am going to point out as best as I can the areas that I see, and I am certain other members will have their own comments where problems are.

Mr. Speaker, I remember making a statement in here that the vast majority of problems especially the social problems that we find multiplying in the country today and causing much alarm in the wider society as a direct result of problems within the education system. The minister took personal offence to that and said that was the wildest statement he had ever heard. Perhaps that was simply an automatic answer in defence of himself, interpreting the statement to mean that it was being aimed at him for his lack of due diligence. That was not the intention, but if it got his eyebrows raised then it served its purpose because I meant it then and I mean it today.

Mr. Speaker, here is what is happening in our society. Anyone can look at it and see that there is truth in what I am saying. We have an educational system which until yesterday was boasted about when it came to the results of our external examinations which are now mainly constituted of the CXC examinations. It is touted that the Cayman Islands for years now has had the best results in the CXC in the Caribbean. That would be percentage wise, I guess, with the number of students taking the exams and the results forthcoming.

But while that is wonderful, this society today is not completely made up of students who take external examinations and who pass those external examinations. And whether we like it or not that cannot be the only focus of a system. Now, I would be extremely happy, I would be ecstatic if that was the case, but it is not the case. Mr. Speaker, I don't have to contend . . . or I don't have to use the terms of a lawyer to say "I submit"—I don't have to submit anything because that is a fact. So, what we have to do is to use a round figure.

In our public education, for instance, we may have 300 students who reach year 12 and we have a certain percentage who take the external examinations and we get good results from those examinations. Later on in the debate, I am going to dissect the levels of the examination. But I am not going to do that now because you have various levels of those examinations—you have those who take it at one level and those who take it at another level. You have those who don't complete year 12. You have those who, for a myriad of reasons, don't actually graduate. Mr. Speaker, what you end up with in the whole affair is every year there is a certain number of those students who leave the gates of our public education system either prematurely or at the end of their tenure with nowhere to go.

Now, who do we want to point figures at to say is the cause of that? I am not getting into that right now. I am just establishing certain facts.

We end up with a society that is growing with labour demands that continues to grow, and as time has gone on the labour demands, that is, the demands for human capital in the society have diversified. But our system has not diversified to produce those bodies to meet those labour demands. I want to explain that so that I don't see a whole pile of pen and paper, because they might think that I don't understand what I am saying.

I am not suggesting that the natural population growth in this country matches the demands for labour. What I am saying is the natural growth that the country has experienced and the numbers of bodies that we have produced, our system has not taken those bodies and run them through that system allowing them at the end of the day to go out into the workforce (those who don't choose to go on to tertiary education) and get to the level of earning power where the society retains stability. That is what I am saying—look at the society.

Mr. Speaker, if you look at the earning power of the people in this country . . . I don't have statistics, but I can say what I am saying and make my point without having to get to specific statistics. If we look at what is termed the middle class in our society, I am going to tell you exactly how it is. The majority of the people in our society today, what we call middle class citizens, are an imported middle class. There is nothing wrong with them. Many of them are my friends and many of them are friends of all of us in here, good people.

But those people find jobs in these islands because of the demands and because they have skills. I am not talking about managing directors, doctors, lawyers; I am talking about professionals who have skills or trades—the auto mechanic, the plumber, the electrician, the air conditioning technician, those kinds of people. I don't have to go into any more . . . that level of individual in this country.

Simply because of the tremendous growth in this country that demand has increased—the people who are entrepreneurs, the people who run businesses, the aspiring Caymanian who wants to operate or start a business, his first thing is where can he get a work permit approved from, which country, or who he can get because it is not easy to find Caymanians.

Now, the simple answer that one could give is that we don't have enough bodies to fill these jobs so the Caymanians are all employed. They can answer that easily, but why then do we have this constant cry about foreigners taking away their jobs? I am going to explain why, in my view. It is because those numbers who have fallen through those cracks multiply faster than the rest of us. It is a simple fact. That is where the single-family homes continue to multiply. That is where the crime stems from.

I am not making any political speech here. I know many of those people and they are not basically bad people—they are simply people with no hope. That is what they are. Here I am, an ordinary person who loves people, who wants to help, and by the time I talk to some of them that have gone through the system, at end of the road there's nothing to do.

'Can't you help me to get a job?'

'What skills do you have?'

'I have none.'

Mr. Speaker, the hard fact is that some of them cannot even sign their names—and they went through the system! Now, you might want to say, 'well, that is but the odd one'. I will tell you, whether it is odds or evens, they are multiplying to where they are the single most serious threat to the stability of this country and its future. That is where it is at today.

You would want to pretend and say that it is not so, they either fool themselves or they don't have enough sense to understand the truth. Mr. Speaker, it is a simple philosophy. If we know what the greatest threat to our society is and we refuse to take the time out to arrest that threat, then we have no regard for the future of our society. I don't know about anybody else, but I cannot pick up my mango trees out of Northward and carry them somewhere else, and I am not going anywhere else because I am not leaving them. Simple as that!

That may sound funny but I said it to lighten the moment. But this is a serious thing.

Now, they can get fancy and they can write all kinds of reports. They can do all kinds of studies . . . I don't have all of the answers to the problems, but I will tell you I know what those problems are. The fact is, the vast majority of the society knows what those problems are. We cannot say that it is okay. I will tell you we cannot say it is okay—because the problem is not getting less, it is escalating. If only by my encounters with people, I can afford to say that and know that I am telling the truth.

It has to be obvious, Mr. Speaker, because every year you have this set of people who go through the system. You take Government, for instance, and you have this constant problem with trying to balance sustainable development with the environment (like the motion that just went on about the National Trust and the landowners), and you want to make sure that you continue the economy at a certain rate so that the school-leavers can filter out into the workforce and find jobs.

Mr. Speaker, we keep putting the tablecloth on the table saying that we are laying the table, but we are not looking underneath the table for the wood lice that are eating away the legs and the whole thing will soon fall down. What good is a tablecloth then? Now, I don't want for this to sound like it is too far away the motion itself because it is directly because of this why the motion is on the floor of the House—we need to do something.

Mr. Speaker, this society which boasts of being multinational and everything like that has some problems, and the sooner we specifically identify those problems (which are the problems that I am talking about now) and accept them for exactly what they are, the better off we are going to be. Let me tell you what has been happening in my view. And I say this with total sincerity.

From the first day I sat in this chair, we have gotten into these arguments . . . and it is not today that I have been talking about this. And I am not trying to say that I am the greatest messenger in the world and nobody else understands that I am the only one—not for a minute. There are people in here who could say what I am saying in a much more acceptable fashion. But that is okay, I know what I am and I use what I am to the best of my ability.

From the day I got here, we have been talking about these problems. When we talk about the prison, it comes back to the same problem I am talking about now. When we talk about the crime statistics, it comes back to the same problem I am talking about now. When we talk about being afraid to allow our 16-year old daughters to go to the cinema by themselves, it comes back to what I am talking about now. We have to understand that.

MOMENT OF INTERRUPTION—4.30 PM

The Speaker: We have reached the hour of 4.30 p.m. I would entertain a motion for the adjournment of this Honourable House.

ADJOURNMENT

Hon. Truman M. Boddén: Mr. Speaker, I move the adjournment of this Honourable House until 10.00 a.m. tomorrow.

The Speaker: The question is that this Honourable House do now adjourn until 10.00 a.m. tomorrow.

I had given permission to the Third Elected Member for West Bay to make an explanation.

RAISING OF PUBLIC MATTER

Standing Order 11(6)

GOVERNMENT SCHOLARSHIP GRANTS

Mr. John D. Jefferson, Jr.: Thanks for giving me permission under Standing Order 11(4), (5) and (6) to make the following statement on a very current and important issue, that is, the grant of government scholarships.

It has come to my attention recently by a number of parents who have applied for grant of a government scholarship for their children that the scholarships have been approved under the condition that the student attend the Community College for the first two years of study. This decision has caused a great deal of hardship and difficulty for a number of students who have received admission at highly recognised colleges and universities overseas, and were making plans to start their bid for higher education elsewhere in the fall of this year.

Many of these students have also received financial assistance, or partial scholarships, from these institutions because of their high academic achievements. It was wrong for the Education Council to make such a blanket condition for all government scholarships, not taking into account that the courses for some majors are not presently offered by the Community College.

It is also wrong for the Education Council to assume that all students do not start their majors before the third year of study. And to require all students to attend the Community College for the first two years would place some students at a tremendous disadvantage when they transfer overseas for the last two years of study. It would mean in these cases that the students would not finish their degree in four years.

It was mentioned previously by the Minister of Education that the reason for the change in policy was an attempt to save some money and to be able to assist more students with scholarships. This reasoning is hard to accept when recently an agreement was signed by the Community College with the University of Miami to provide a teacher training programme.

First of all, the University of Miami is not known as a school for education and, second, the University of Miami is one of the most expensive universities in the United States.

In light of the fact that we have on the books of this country probably 16,000 to 17,000 people on work permits, it is hard to understand why efforts are being made to discourage and frustrate our young Caymanians who have the ability and the desire to further their education on a government scholarship overseas.

I must say that I fully support the Community College, and I have no problem with making scholarships available to Caymanians who want to further their education by attending this local institution. However, it is wrong to discourage a young person who has a desire and the ability to go overseas to further his or her education.

Just being away from the islands is an education in itself. Some students will not be able to further their education without the assistance from government and will not go to college because they have decided that they do not want to attend the Community College.

I believe that it is also wrong to have advised students so late in the school year that a condition of their government scholarship is that they attend the Community College. Due to the limited timeframe, some parents will be unable to arrange alternative financing for their child's education.

I am trusting that the minister will call a meeting of the Education Council with a view of reconsidering their decision of requiring all students who apply for a government scholarship overseas to attend the Community College.

Mr. Speaker, if the Minister and the Education Council fail to address this very serious situation, I pledge to address the matter of government scholarships through a private member's motion, or during the next sitting of the Finance Committee, where I will recommend that the Legislative Assembly or the Finance Committee set the conditions for the grant of government scholarships.

I trust that the Minister of Education will give this matter the urgency it demands and advise all honourable members in due course of the action taken by the Ministry of Education and the Education Council to address this very serious matter.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Education, Aviation and Planning.

Hon. Truman M. Boddén: Scholarships in relation to the local colleges, which are the Community College and the International College of the Cayman Islands and the Cayman Islands Law School, were brought within the realm of scholarships by a two-year scholarship to these institutions in subjects in which they could transfer to a competitive university, or in accordance with the Baron's Guide. The reason on this was several fold.

First, it was felt by the Education Council that many of our students had done much better when they have established a firm academic foundation in a familiar setting. This often offers them the opportunity to mature and to rise to even greater heights.

It also offers flexibility to those students who are unable or unwilling to take up full study abroad such as mature students or students who are with families. It allows them to complete half of their undergraduate programme in the Cayman Islands.

The third reason was that the policy of scholarships for two years to the Community College, ICCI or the Law School, was one which supported the further development of those three educational institutions. And, lastly, the local scholarships allowed the Education Council much more flexibility with actually granting Masters Degrees abroad. Under that aspect the local scholarship, because the student is still at home, is one which costs the government and the public $2,500 a year compared to $17,000 for doing those same courses overseas.

Now, where a student was not able to transfer the credits and grades that they achieved here in the first two years . . . this happened in some areas where the local institutions could not offer the necessary courses in the Cayman Islands, such as in the area of engineering and similar areas. Then those students would be granted the scholarship for the full years to be done overseas up to C$17,000 a year. Other areas were architecture and in relation to some of the sciences.

So, the rationale behind this . . . and if I recall this correctly this was questioned in the Finance Committee and, at least I was of the view that the majority of members here supported the local scholarships where they could be given and that the scholarships abroad would be given where they could not be dealt with locally.

Mr. Speaker, reference was also made to the University of Miami an arrangement that has been reached for teachers training. I think it is a feature in the cap of the Community College that this university would accept two years of study towards a BSc in Education locally. The University of Miami is a highly competitive university. In other words, it is one of the top universities in the United States, and I believe that with our stress on teacher training and the stress of this honourable House to ensure that we have more Caymanian teachers in the education system, then this will fill that role.

It is an expensive university, and there can be no doubt that the honourable member is right in relation to that. But to have the acceptance by a university in the top bracket in the United States, a highly competitive university such as the University of Miami, bears out the fact of the standards reached in this country by the three local colleges.

Now, Mr. Speaker, I realise and obviously I accept responsibility for the Education Council, of which I am chairman. What I will undertake to do in light of what has been raised by the honourable member is to take this issue back to the Education Council as he has requested. A meeting has been set for next Tuesday, June 20th to have a look at the areas where there has been dissatisfaction with the local scholarships.

The four reasons that I set out where local scholarships can be granted and can be effectively carried out locally, that is, the students will be able to transfer to good universities in the United States or elsewhere, then it seems to make good sense to have local scholarships here.

Mr. Speaker, I can say that the Community College Associate Degree is accepted in many universities in the United States and also by many of the English universities. In fact, in England we have fifteen universities that accept the Community College's Associate Degree. There are highly competitive universities in the United States beyond the University of Miami, such as the University of Tennessee, that accept these credits. Others are Stetson University, which I know is a good university and the University of South Florida.

I think in light of the concern that has been raised, I will take this back to the Education Council who has the power to grant scholarships by law, and ask them to review this policy. Hopefully there can be a common meeting of the different views on this to find a solution. Thank you.

Mr. W. McKeeva Bush: Mr. Speaker, I wonder if you would allow a question to the Minister?

The Speaker: A brief question.

Mr. W. McKeeva Bush: The Minister has said where scholarships could not be given locally then they would get a scholarship for overseas. I don't believe that a degree in medicine or behavioural science is offered locally, and I am wondering whether he could check why people have been refused for those two degrees. Why isn't the Council granting scholarships for such degrees?

I know this to be a fact because I have had complaints and I have files here on the matter. There is some difference in what he has said. So, if he could check into that I would appreciate it.

Hon. Truman M. Boddin: Mr. Speaker, by all means I will check into this. Unfortunately, I was not at the meeting when the scholarships were dealt with. But I still have responsibility, let me say that. I don't remember these, and I say that just for that reason. If two years of the degree cannot be done here and the other two years transferred to another college or university abroad for which we will give the two year scholarship in any event then the full four years will be given to go abroad.

I will check on those and let the honourable member know.

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for West Bay.

Mr. W. McKeeva Bush: I thank the minister for that, but children who could end up with teaching degrees are being told that they cannot get scholarships. Well, that is a fact. You really have to see what is happening there.

The Speaker: The Elected Member for North Side.

Mrs. Edna Moyle: I wonder if the honourable minister could say what part the SAT results play in children being given scholarships to overseas universities?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Education, Aviation and Planning.

Hon. Truman M. Boddin: Mr. Speaker, [a score of] 950 is the requirement.

The Speaker: The Third Elected Member for West Bay.

Mr. John D. Jefferson, Jr.: I have a suggestion for the Minister. That is, when he goes back to the Education Council, I think the right approach would be . . . and I support the Community College 100 percent. I think there should be a distinction between a student applying for a local scholarship to attend the Community College and a government scholarship to attend an overseas college or university. I think that is where the problem is.

Mr. Speaker, the other question I have is whether or not government considers the granting of scholarships to other community colleges be it locally . . . well, ICCI is not a community college, that is a university or a college. Does Government consider granting scholarships to any other community college other than the Community College of the Cayman Islands?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Education, Aviation and Planning.

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: Mr. Speaker, we grant local scholarships to ICCI and the local community college and to the Cayman Islands Law School. What perhaps would be good if I could ask the honourable member . . . is he saying that where students can do the first two years locally that they should be granted a scholarship to go abroad in any event if they wish? I guess that is what I need to get clear.

The Speaker: The Third Elected Member for West Bay.

Mr. John D. Jefferson, Jr.: Most definitely. If that young person has the desire and the ability to go overseas then all power to him or her. What I am saying is that it should not be a condition of the granting of any government scholarship to attend the Community College here for the first two years. That is my position, Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: The Third Elected Member for Bodden Town.

POINT OF PROCEDURE

Mr. Roy Bodden: Mr. Speaker, on a point of procedure.

It was my understanding when we discussed the conduct of business for this sitting that after we resumed on Monday, from this time hence we would be proceeding until 6.00 p.m. in an effort to dispatch the business on the Order Paper.

Now, I have been completely taken by surprise with the regular adjournment. I understand that we could not assume this practice on the first day out of respect and prior notice to the office staff and the Clerk. We would have to give them at least one day's notice.

I was under the impression that beginning from Wednesday that we would have done this and it is now Thursday. I have to admit that I have a vested interest because I will be off the island beginning Saturday on official business, and I have a distinct interest in the motion being debated now.

It seems in this election year, much to my disappointment, that I am going to be unable to make my contribution in a debate whose subject is dear to my heart through no fault of my own.

I would wish for some guidance and clarification as to this sudden change in what we had mooted was going to be our practice in order to deal diligently with the business at hand.

The Speaker: You will remember that I clearly said that I was available to go to any hour. The Chair was prepared, but I asked for 24 hours notice for the Legislative Department to be notified.

As of now, I have not received notice of extended time. But I am in the hands of the House whatever they wish.

The First Elected Member for West Bay.

Mr. W. McKeeva Bush: I just want to say that was my understanding as well, and I thought that we would be going on this afternoon as well. I had prepared for it.

The Speaker: As I said, I have not been notified.
The Third Elected Member for Bodden Town.

Mr. Roy Bodden: May I now ask what is the disposition of honourable members? I mean, it is rather late, and I would not expect anyone to do so at this time today, but what is the disposition of honourable members tomorrow?

I mean we have to be realistic. I know that I am not that far gone that that was a figment of my imagination. Can I then assume that honourable members will be so disposed to work a little later tomorrow evening? I am quite serious.

I regret leaving the jurisdiction without contributing to this debate which I am so interested in and which I deem so important to the development of this country. Can I then get an undertaking from honourable members that they will work late, at least until 6.00 p.m. tomorrow? which seems a reasonable time to adjourn.

The Speaker: I am in the hands of the members. Who will agree to continue proceedings until 6.00 p.m. tomorrow? Those in favour please say Aye. Those against No.

Hon. Thomas C. Jefferson: Mr. Speaker, I thought there was a Central Planning Authority tomorrow.

The Speaker: There is, starting at 5.00 p.m.

Mr. W. McKeeva Bush: Mr. Speaker, I am going to have to ask for a deferral of that meeting as Chairman. If it goes ahead, well so be it, but I have a funeral to attend as my grandaunt has passed away.

The Speaker: We will have to discuss that, as I think invitations have gone. It is clear that the Noes had that vote so apparently it is not the wish of the House that we continue beyond 4.30 p.m. tomorrow.

Mr. Roy Bodden: I never heard any Noes, Mr. Speaker!

The Speaker: Let's do it once again.
The Honourable Minister for Tourism, Commerce, Transport and Works.

Hon. Thomas C. Jefferson: Mr. Speaker, I am basically saying that I am unable to go until 6.00 p.m. tomorrow because I have a commitment that I have been planning for months with the Aviation Week.

The Speaker: Let me put it this way, Those in favour of adjourning at 4.30 tomorrow afternoon please say Aye. Those against No.

AYES.

The Speaker: The Ayes have it.
Those who want to go on beyond 4.30 p.m.?

Mr. W. McKeeva Bush: Mr. Speaker, it seems that some members might have to go, but, certainly, not all members have to go. So, Mr. Speaker, please take a division.

Mr. Linford A. Pierson: Mr. Speaker, I believe it would clear the matter up if we had a division.

The Speaker: Madam Clerk, please call a division.
Those in favour of going only until 4.30 p.m. was the question.
Will somebody move a motion that we continue until 6.00 p.m. or 4.30 p.m. whatever you want?
The First Elected Member for West Bay.

Mr. W. McKeeva Bush: I move that the House continues tomorrow afternoon until 6.00 p.m.

The Speaker: Do we have a seconder?

Mrs. Edna Moyle: I would like to second the motion.

The Speaker: The motion has been made and seconded that the House continues until 6.00 p.m. tomorrow. Those in favour please say Aye. Those against No.

AYES

The Speaker: The Ayes have it.

Mr. W. McKeeva Bush: Can I have a division, Mr. Speaker?

The Speaker: Certainly. Madam Clerk, please call a division.

The Clerk:

APOLOGIES

The Speaker: I have apologies for late attendance from the Honourable Third Official Member and from the Honourable Minister for Health, Social Welfare, Drug Abuse Prevention and Rehabilitation. I have received apologies for absence from the Fourth Elected Member for West Bay who has been hospitalised overseas.

Item 3, Questions to Honourable Members/Ministers. Deferred Question 2 is standing in the name of the Second Elected Member for Bodden Town.

QUESTIONS TO HONOURABLE
MEMBERS/MINISTERS

DEFERRED QUESTION 2

No. 2: Miss Heather D. Bodden asked the Honourable Minister responsible for the Ministry of Education, Aviation and Planning what consideration is being given to the additional classrooms needed at the Bodden Town Primary School for the new school year.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for Education, Aviation, and Planning.

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: Discussions with the PTA as well as the group dealing with the building have determined that no classrooms will be ready for the new school year at the Bodden Town Primary School. A site development plan is being completed for Bodden Town Primary that will include the addition of four classrooms in the near future.

SUPPLEMENTARY

The Speaker: The Second Elected Member for Bodden Town.

Miss Heather D. Bodden: I noticed that on my desk this morning there was a letter from the President, Mr.

Charles Clifford, in regard to a meeting set up for next week Tuesday. It says that the Minister of Education has graciously agreed to attend. I think at that meeting everything should be sorted out, and I thank him.

The Speaker: Are there any further supplementaries? If not, we move on to deferred question 3, standing in the name of the Second Elected Member for Bodden Town.

DEFERRED QUESTION 3

No. 3: Miss Heather D. Bodden asked the Honourable Minister responsible for the Ministry of Education, Aviation and Planning how many teachers and teachers' aides are now employed at the Savannah Primary School.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for Education, Aviation, and Planning.

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: There is one non-teaching principal; 13 teachers; one teachers' aide and seven support assistants employed at the Savannah Primary School. In addition, the school receives assistance from support staff members in the areas of music, physical education, English as a second language, learning behaviour disorder, computer, speech, and language and special assistance in pottery and ceramics.

SUPPLEMENTARIES

The Speaker: The Second Elected Member for Bodden Town.

Miss Heather D. Bodden: I guess everyone is able to see that this is a big improvement since the last time this question was asked. I would like to thank the honourable minister for putting everything on this list in place.

The Speaker: The Elected Member for North Side.

Mrs. Edna M. Moyle: Can the honourable minister state the responsibilities of the support staff and the one teacher's aide?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for Education, Aviation, and Planning.

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: The teacher's aide works with teachers in the classroom and the support assistants work both with the special child there as well as working within the classroom. I am not sure that covers what the member . . .

The Speaker: The Elected Member for North Side.

Mrs. Edna M. Moyle: Is the minister saying that the support staff at the Savannah Primary School specifically for two students with special needs are included in this seven? Or are there others?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for Education, Aviation, and Planning.

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: The two are in the seven and there are two wheelchair students. That's why I call them special students.

The Speaker: The Elected Member for North Side.

Mrs. Edna M. Moyle: Can the honourable minister say if every class in Savannah with over 25 students now has a support assistant, excluding these two that are specifically at the Savannah Primary for the two special needs students?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for Education, Aviation, and Planning.

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: I have been told that there are only four classes with over 25, so the answer to that would be yes, there are sufficient. I would like to thank the Second Elected Member for Bodden Town for her unswerving—

Mr. Roy Bodden: Loyalty!

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: —move in relation to this school and continuing to press for the good of it. I would like to thank her very much.

Mrs. Edna M. Moyle: What about me? I'm pressing for Savannah!

The Speaker: The Third Elected Member for West Bay.

Mr. John D. Jefferson, Jr.: This doesn't have to do with the Savannah Primary School specifically, but it has to do with teachers. Can the honourable minister say what the ministry or the department is doing to make it more attractive for Caymanians to not only go into the teaching profession, but to remain in the profession?

The Speaker: I am not positive that this comes under the substantive question, but if the minister wishes to answer it, he may. The Honourable Minister responsible for Education, Aviation, and Planning.

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: We give scholarships to any students who are eligible for them on a priority basis for teachers and nurses especially. As the member knows, in the salary review salaries were increased. There are other areas such as attaching a young teacher to another, the peer system, to encourage them to remain within the teaching profession. It's a very old and honourable profession, but in this day and age, the conditions of service are important. Hopefully the review has allowed for good increases in salaries.

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: In the 2000 Estimates under new services, there was prolonged discussion regarding these same support assistants for the various schools with classes over 25. Can the honourable minister say (since he stated that Savannah Primary is adequately staffed with these support assistants) if this is throughout the public primary school system?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for Education, Aviation, and Planning.

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: I don't have that information. I would have to get it. I came prepared for this one.

The Speaker: Are there any further supplementaries? If not, we move on to question 16, standing in the name of the Second Elected Member for Bodden Town.

QUESTION 16 (Deferred)

No. 16: Miss Heather D. Bodden asked the Honourable Minister responsible for the Tourism, Commerce, Transport and Works to provide an update on the progress of erecting light-reflecting signs such as: "Curve"; "No Overtaking"; "Cattle Crossing"; etcetera, throughout the Islands.

Miss Heather D. Bodden: The honourable minister and I discussed this, and we'd like to defer the question until next week, if that's all right.

STANDING ORDER 23(5)

AGREED: WITH LEAVE OF THE HOUSE QUESTION NO. 16 DEFERRED.

The Speaker: Moving on to question 17, standing in the name of the Third Elected Member for Bodden Town.

QUESTION 17

No. 17: Mr. Roy Bodden asked the Honourable Minister responsible for the Ministry of Agriculture, Communications, Environment and Natural Resources to state the Government's plans to develop farm roads in Bodden Town, East End and North Side.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for Agriculture, Communications, Environment, and Natural Resources.

Hon. John B. McLean: Government is still considering a request to provide a farm access road in Bodden Town. There are no immediate plans or requests for the construction of new farm roads in East End or North Side.

SUPPLEMENTARIES

The Speaker: The Third Elected Member for Bodden Town.

Mr. Roy Bodden: Can the honourable minister tell the House why government is still considering the request to develop the farm roads in Bodden Town when the request was made some time ago, and the road started? Why was that road not completed? And why is government still considering the request?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for Agriculture, Communications, Environment, and Natural Resources.

Hon. John B. McLean: The member is correct. Initially it was planned that the farm access road would start in the Cumber Crescent area, take a NW course and eventually end up in the Northward area. This plan has had to be revisited for several reasons, including distance to farmlands from the starting point, and passage through an existing subdivision. Furthermore, the Bodden Town Bypass Road will be passing through that area and will allow farmers access to their properties.

Currently, access to the farmlands in question is being considered from the Northward area. To this end the Chief Agricultural and Veterinary Officer has initiated contact with the prison authority to discuss what impact, if any, a farm access road would have on the plans the prison has for the development of the land government has acquired on their behalf, that is Block 37A Parcel 29. Many of the parcels that access is needed for are on the perimeter of the newly acquired prison land.

The Speaker: The Third Elected Member for Bodden Town.

Mr. Roy Bodden: Can the honourable minister tell the House why the road project started with the $25,000 of the $50,000 that was shared between farm roads in North Side and Bodden Town was abandoned after the money had been spent, yet not completed?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for Agriculture, Communications, Environment, and Natural Resources.

Hon. John B. McLean: Although it was roughed in, it was put on hold. No material was placed on it, simply because of what I have stated. It is not that it has been forgotten.

The Speaker: The Third Elected Member for Bodden Town.

Mr. Roy Bodden: Can the honourable minister give the House a timeframe as to when this project will be revisited? Also, can he further undertake to consult with some of the land holders in this area who are interested in developing farms along the perimeter he talked about?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for Agriculture, Communications, Environment, and Natural Resources.

Hon. John B. McLean: I am happy to give that undertaking. And I will keep the member appraised.

The Speaker: The Elected Member for North Side.

Mrs. Edna M. Moyle: The minister said in his answer, "There are no immediate plans or requests for the construction of new farm roads in East End or North Side." Who is responsible to request the building of farm roads?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for Agriculture, Communications, Environment, and Natural Resources.

Hon. John B. McLean: Normally the member for the respective district will receive requests from individuals who are interested in farming in the respective district. They, in turn, forward that to the ministry responsible, or the department, and we take it from there to have it costed and then it goes on to Finance Committee.

The Speaker: The Elected Member for North Side.

Mrs. Edna M. Moyle: Can the honourable minister say if the Agriculture Department and the Ministry still follow the Ten Year Agriculture Plan laid on the Table of this House and accepted?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for Agriculture, Communications, Environment, and Natural Resources.

Hon. John B. McLean: Certainly. We follow the plan as closely as possible. But with the passing of time some things change, and that's why the plan is constantly having to be upgraded. But we do follow it.

The Speaker: The Elected Member for North Side.

Mrs. Edna M. Moyle: Can the honourable minister say if one of the suggestions in that plan was that government should continue to build new farm roads to open up new land?

Hon. John B. McLean: That is correct. That is what is laid out. But the member knows, as does everyone else that we have been operating on a very tight budget. If there were any immediate requests, we would have treated that as priority. But, the way things have been going, we have not had funds available to just go out and build the roads.

The Speaker: The Elected Member for North Side.

Mrs. Edna M. Moyle: I thank the minister for that reply. I shall now put a request on the floor of this House that the farm road in the Hut Land towards Mr. Hubert Bodden's property (he has been so generous to allow North Siders to farm there) now be completed rather than just a little bit every now and then.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for Agriculture, Communications, Environment, and Natural Resources.

Hon. John B. McLean: I will instruct my department to have a costing done on it, and I will bring it back here to this honourable House. Hopefully Finance Committee will approve it, and we will be on our way.

The Speaker: Are there any further supplementaries? If not, we move on to question 18, standing in the name of the First Elected Member for George Town.

QUESTION 18

No. 18: Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts asked the Honourable Minister responsible for the Education, Aviation and Planning to outline the entire policy adopted by the Education Council in regard to issuing scholarships.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for Education, Aviation, and Planning.

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: (See Appendix attached)

The Speaker: I would appreciate a motion for the suspension of Standing Order 23(7) & (8).

SUSPENSION OF STANDING ORDER 23 (7) AND (8)

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: I move the suspension of Standing Order 23(7) & (8) to allow Question Time to continue.

The Speaker: Those in favour please say Aye, those against No.

AYES.

The Speaker: The Ayes have it. Question Time will continue.

AGREED: STANDING ORDER 23(7) AND (8) SUSPENDED TO ALLOW QUESTION TIME TO CONTINUE BEYOND 11 AM.

SUPPLEMENTARIES

The Speaker: The Fourth Elected Member for George Town.

Dr. Frank McField: Can the honourable minister say why there is a policy to grant $4,000 per annum to students attending the Cayman Islands Law School, and not an additional amount equivalent for living expenses in the Cayman Islands?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for Education, Aviation, and Planning.

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: In Grand Cayman, where the three institutions are, the grant is basically to cover the tuition and related fees. However, when a student comes from Cayman Brac or Little Cayman to Grand Cayman, where he would not be living in his normal environment, we grant $12,000 per annum which would cover the living expenses.

The Speaker: The Fourth Elected Member for George Town.

Dr. Frank McField: Can the honourable minister say what amount would be granted to a student at a law school in England or elsewhere?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for Education, Aviation, and Planning.

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: I don't have the specific amount, but I think we are probably looking at £15,000 per year (and this is just a guess).

I should say that we have tried to get some reduction in relation to colleges and universities in the UK. That may come about as a result of the White Paper. However, I believe that money can't be spent on anything better than scholarships and education for our young people. If the feeling is that we should go up on these, and we continue to expand with the money we have, we have now expanded into Masters, as the member heard yesterday. If the feeling is that we should increase this, by all means . . . I think it's money well spent on the students.

The Speaker: The Fourth Elected Member for George Town.

Dr. Frank McField: The minister was asking a question. I guess my suggestion would be that we need to make it fair so that if people are going to study here they know they are being compensated for their expenses just like somebody abroad.

The second question was to find out what happens to a student who has already done one year at the Community College without applying for a scholarship in regard to the Community College Associate of Science Degree. Can the student upon completion of one year apply to become a part of this scholarship programme?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for Education, Aviation, and Planning.

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: While these guidelines on local scholarships are new, the idea was that we would encourage the students to finish their two years and then we would grant the further two years. Those who finish the two years would get the extra two years abroad.

The Speaker: The Fourth Elected Member for George Town.

Dr. Frank McField: I think the minister misunderstood what I meant. I am asking about a student who starts at Community College, and not all students are getting scholarships because I know a student there who is not getting any scholarship. Provided the student does the first year, is there a possibility for the student to get the second year scholarship at the Community College? That is my question.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for Education, Aviation, and Planning.

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: By all means, a person who has done one year here, or who doesn't have the qualifications when they enter, even abroad, as I read once their GPA is all right, they can apply and by all means get the scholarship. We sometimes have students go into college who do not have the qualifications for the scholarship. They keep a good GPA and are then granted a scholarship. So, the answer to that is yes, whether it's local or abroad.

The Speaker: The Third Elected Member for West Bay.

Mr. John D. Jefferson, Jr.: On page three of the minister's answer guidelines adopted by the counsel for the granting of overseas scholarships are:

- 1) Students with seven (7) University of Cambridge (GCE/GCSE/IGCSE) passes at Grade B or above; or

- 2) Students with seven (7) CXC passes Grade 2 and above at the general/technical level.

- 3) Students with a combined score of 1300 on the SAT examination; or

- 4) Students accepted into architecture, engineering or medicine and who have the required mathematics and science background ('A Level equivalent).

Can the honourable minister say how many of our students coming out of our public education system and the private schools would qualify for such a scholarship?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for Education, Aviation, and Planning.

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: I understand that 36 of the students last year had these grades, about 12% of those graduating.

The Speaker: The Third Elected Member for West Bay.

Mr. John D. Jefferson, Jr.: The minister knows how I feel about scholarships for Caymanians. I mentioned to him this morning that I personally don't agree with these guidelines. I understand exactly what is happening and I want the minister to give an undertaking that when he meets with the Education Council that consideration be given to revising these particular requirements. I think they are very restrictive. I think it caters to the elite of our society and it restricts the opportunities of our young people who have the desire to go overseas to further their education. I would ask him to ask the Education Council to reconsider that situation and report back to this House about the Council's decision.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for Education, Aviation, and Planning.

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: I have given an undertaking to the member that we will be having an Education Council on Tuesday. We will put this back to the Council. But I would like to just reiterate the reasoning behind this. These guidelines are new. This is really the first time they have come in.

The rationale is sound. There needs to be some fine-tuning, but it has been recognised that students do much better when they have established a firm academic foundation in a familiar setting, such as they are here in these islands. It gives them the opportunity to mature within a stable setting. We must appreciate that some of them are young.

Secondly, it offers flexibility for students who really don't want to spend the full four years overseas, but want to spend two years here and two years abroad.

Third, it supports further development of the local three institutions, ICCI, Community College, and the Law School; and fourth, it frees up funds to use for Masters Degrees.

However, what I would also like to say, if the member will bear with me . . . the ratings of universities and colleges that accept the Community College—

[Inaudible interjections and general uproar]

Hon. Truman M. Boddén: I'd like to . . . just a minute and let me . . . the universities in the United States that accept transfer credits from the Community College Associate Degree Programme are: De Paul University, which is very competitive, Eckerd College, very competitive; Florida Institute of Technology, competitive; Florida International University, very competitive; Florida State University, very competitive, Howard University, less competitive; Loyola University, very competitive. The following are competitive: Nova, Oakwood, St. Leo, Stetson University, Texas Tech, University of Central Florida, University of Colorado, University of Miami, and there are several others, University of Tennessee, all very competitive.

Also, in Canada, for example, McMaster University accepts the Community College students into its programme. Queens College, University of British Columbia, University of Manitoba, Western University, and 15 in the United Kingdom, such as University of Trent, University of Birmingham, University of Brighton, University of Bristol, . . . all very good universities.

I would like to stress that the three colleges here have a very high standard and credits can be transferred within the areas that they do. There are some areas they don't, notwithstanding that I listed three in these guidelines. I would like the member to know that if there is a course that the two years can't be run here, then obviously the student would go abroad for that course.

The Speaker: The Elected Member for North Side.

Mrs. Edna M. Moyle: I refer to the same page my colleague from West Bay just referred to on Modification to Regulation for Overseas Scholarships in the Minister's answer. He referred to seven subjects of the University of Cambridge, 7 CXC's, combined score of 1300 on the SAT. We have American run schools in this country. I see no reference to a GPA that the children at those schools may attain during high school there together with their SAT exam that would entitle them to be sent overseas.

What is the GPA requirement of American schools, like Triple C and Wesleyan, along with their SAT results for them to be considered for overseas study?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for Education, Aviation, and Planning.

Hon. Truman M. Boddén: The Education Council does not use the internal grading of the schools. They apply the external exams, which is the SAT score, on the basis that it is an external exam and it is dealt with objectively. I take the point of the member. The scoring and the testing internally, even though I don't think the schools have all that structured, the GPA is more college. But that is something that could be looked at. But the SAT is the external exam that is now applied.

The Speaker: The Elected Member for North Side.

Mrs. Edna M. Moyle: Would the honourable minister not say that a student who attended the Triple C High School and left with a 3.5 GPA and an SAT of 1140, should not be given the same opportunity as a student with a 1300 SAT and seven subjects at CXC passes?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for Education, Aviation, and Planning.

Hon. Truman M. Boddén: We are going back to the Education Council on this. I will speak to them about the 1300 SAT. That's high. I admit that.

Let me just say that we spent a lot of time on this because we realise this is a delicate area. These are new guidelines. Obviously, there are areas that have to be reviewed. This is one I am happy to take back.

The Speaker: The Third Elected Member for West Bay. I am going to have to stop after two additional supplementaries.

Mr. John D. Jefferson, Jr.: I would appreciate your tolerance on this particular subject. This is an area near to many of our hearts.

Can the honourable minister provide this House with the names of the members of the Education Council?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for Education, Aviation, and Planning.

Hon. Truman M. Boddén: There are quite a few: Mrs. Marjorie Ebanks, Mrs. Rena Jefferson, Dr. Tudor, Mr. Sam Basdeo, Mrs. Mary Bowerman, Mrs. Joy Basdeo, Mrs. Ryan from Cayman Brac, our honourable Speaker, Mr. Marcus McLaughlin, and recently we added a representative of the Overseas Students Association, and me. I think that's everybody. There are about nine or ten.

The Speaker: Dr. Cummings is also a member. The Third Elected Member for West Bay.

Mr. John D. Jefferson, Jr.: I wonder if the minister can say if he sees any potential conflict of interest with the President of the Community College sitting on the Education Council, the President of ICCI, and I am not sure who represents the law school, and the mere fact that the president of the Community College and the Permanent Secretary for Education are husband and wife sitting on the same council.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for Education, Aviation, and Planning.

Hon. Truman M. Boddén: I should also have added Dr. Cummings, I am sorry.

In this small community I think the duty on a person who sits either in this honourable House or on the Education Council is that when he or she has a conflict of interest he or she should declare it and then be restricted, and, depending on how controversial it is, not take part in the decision making.

A vast amount of expertise is brought by people like Dr. Cummings and Mr. Basdeo. There will be times when they have conflicts, but the input overall outweighs any disadvantage. For example, Dr. Cummings understands the American system, as does the Chief Education Officer. They have both worked within it. They understand the American University system. I don't have that knowledge.

They all contribute. The mix we have now has been on that council for many, many years. Some of them were there from when I was the member for Education back in the 1970s, like Miss Marjorie. They have contributed a lot. However, like all human beings, we are not perfect. When problems arise, I think our duty is to (as we have undertaken to the honourable member) go back and have a look at these guidelines. We realise that they are controversial, they are new and we need to get them right. I think you have a council that will be sensitive to the feelings of members of this House. I give the undertaking, I mean, we will raise this and we will look carefully at the question of the local scholarships. I cannot do a lot more than that, Mr. Speaker, and otherwise to say that all members on that council do work hard.

The other thing that I should mention that I have not fully said is that the interviews for scholarships are normally done by a panel of three people, not by the full council. Then reports come to the council from those. They would access the students on all things that are relating to that scholarship.

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for West Bay.

Mr. W. McKeeva Bush: This is a very comprehensive document, and it is the first one that I have seen of its kind as far as the Education Council is concerned. It has made some changes, and my concern is that if a student fails to have the required GPA, why doesn't the ministry put a policy in place to ensure that the child goes to the Community College to improve the GPA so that he would have a chance to complete his university education rather than pulling his scholarship.

I know this has happened, Mr. Speaker. Something happens to a child midway in college, in fact, I know one that had just one year left and something happened and they failed to meet the GPA and the scholarship was pulled. Well, the child's financing has gone to pieces. The parents' investment, they have to pay that back and the child is left without a university education. So, I would ask that the Minister look at this issue.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Education, Aviation and Planning.

Hon. Truman M. Boddén: That is a very good suggestion, and I think it makes sense. By all means, I will put that to the Council because if the student can come to standard here at the College . . . sometimes the environment abroad is not that easy for students from a fairly protected society like we have here. If they are not performing then I think we have a duty to try to assist them at the College to come up to standard.

The Speaker: The Third Elected Member for West Bay.

Mr. John D. Jefferson, Jr.: Mr. Speaker, let me just make a comment and then hopefully I will ask a question afterward.

The Speaker: Are you turning it into a question?

Mr. John D. Jefferson, Jr.: Yes.

Experience has proven that Caymanian students who go overseas do as well as anybody. So the excuse about they going to the Community College in the first two years because it is a protected environment that provides a more ideal situation for them to be able to study, I think is total nonsense.

Mr. Speaker, I would just like to ask the Honourable Minister to ask the Education Council to revise these particular requirements. I promise if the Education Council fails to do so, that I will do so in Finance Committee. We will set the conditions for local scholarships and otherwise. Thank you.

The Speaker: This is the final supplementary now.

The Honourable Minister for Education, Aviation and Planning.

Hon. Truman M. Boddén: I would just say by all means I will pass that back, even though what I said about students in the environment here is my opinion. However, I respect the honourable member's differing opinion on that.

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for George Town, final supplementary.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Mr. Speaker, craving your indulgence, sir, I have tried to give everyone an opportunity to ask questions but I did ask the substantive question, sir. If it is only one supplementary that is left then I won't start, sir.

The Speaker: I will put you on a time frame. Go ahead with your question. I don't want to step on anybody's democratic right. Please go ahead.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Mr. Speaker, you must not think that I am upset. I understand. But I will deal with it in the debate because it will fit right in, sir.

The Speaker: That concludes Question Time for this morning.

Item number 4 on today's Order Paper, Other Business. Before I call on the First Elected Member for George Town to continue his debate, I have suggested to most members that we waive the customary break, this morning and this afternoon, in order that we can get in approximately an hour of additional time in the Chambers. If that is agreeable to all members I just want a show of hands.

Is that the will of the House?

[response not heard]

The Speaker: Thank you.

Moving on to Private Member's Motion No. 14/2000, Public Education System, debate continuing.

The First Elected Member for George Town.

OTHER BUSINESS

PRIVATE MEMBER'S MOTION NO. 14/2000

PUBLIC EDUCATION SYSTEM

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. What we dealt with yesterday, sir, was basically to try and set the tone for identifying some of the problems, looking at it from a wider purview that emanates from within the society that I think is linked to problems with our public education system. This morning I have just a few more points with that and then I will get more specific in my line of argument.

As I was saying yesterday, I do believe that there are many young people, too many, in fact, who fall between the cracks and end up in situations with no skills whatsoever and find it very difficult getting reasonable paying jobs because of the lack of these skills and attitudes sometimes. As the years have gone on these numbers have continued to multiply. And I would like with your permission to make a few references at this point in time. I wish to use the National Youth Policy draft that was produced a few months. I would just like to use a few excerpts from it. My effort here will be to prove that the citizens of this country are as concerned as we are about the problem.

In this document on page 24 under the heading of "Youth and Education," it reads, "At the very first National Youth Forum held in December 1998 the youth participants expressed the need for more college courses in the Cayman Islands [which supports the Minister's argument just a while ago] which would provide an alternative to young high school graduates to studying overseas or joining the work force."

More importantly, it goes to say, "They also stressed the importance of vocational training." Then in the very last paragraph on that same section, the document reads, "At the Youth at Risk Conference held at the Grand Pavilion Complex in January 22 - 23, 1999 one of the areas highlighted was interest based education for all students. Over 150 youth services professionals attended this conference and they all agreed that students would develop in a more positive manner if they were doing something that came naturally to them which they enjoyed and were willing to focus on." That's 150 professionals with the very same conclusion.

Mr. Speaker, this is going to be the crux of my argument. They said that students would develop in a more positive manner if they doing something that came naturally to them, which they enjoyed and were willing to focus on. Also in this document, you will read that the Community College had prepared several syllabuses for vocational training and had areas where students could come to learn, but many of these are no longer available because the students or the potential students seemingly have not taken advantage. So, without students it makes no sense to offer the classes, which is basically what seems to have happened.

But the point that I wish to make about that is that the Community College is an atmosphere which involves a lot of self-discipline because of the age that it caters to. The vast majority if not all of the students who might attend the Community College are post-secondary students. So, what happens is . . . and I have asked the Minister this question before and his answer which is quite rightly so is that if the Community College offers these courses and no one takes them up then the Community College basically cannot do anything more.

The problem is—and this is what I wish to point out—when you go into your secondary system which is a system that has a climate of discipline created because students in the broad sense are undergoing their formative years, you then create the circumstances for the discipline to be instilled. If you don't have similar circumstances prevailing at the secondary level you cannot expect those students when they are out of secondary school to have it in their heads that they are going to have the self-discipline to walk up to the Community College to enrol and just go and have their own will and volition to acquire these skills. I think that is a very important point.

Now, at the high school you have a very limited amount of technical and vocational training going on. That is only done on a very minor part of either the syllabus or the curriculum, depending on how broad a scope you are looking at. So, you don't have anything in place where someone who can learn the three Rs but who is more minded to deal with something else, where you can lean them in that direction while giving them the basics in the other areas of education that everyone needs. That is why I read that section where the 150 professionals agreed that students would develop in a more positive manner if they were doing something that came naturally to them.

Mr. Speaker, that point is simply to reiterate that we need to take a serious look at how we are doing what we are doing, and the diversity of the educational skills that we are delivering to the students.

Yesterday when I spoke about the immediate impact that the lack of policy directions with our educational system will have on the wider society, I talked about the crime and other areas.

I want to read from the next page, under "Youth and Social Services." I am using this document because this document has collated information from surveys done within the public. It has taken information from the public at large and it has taken information from professionals within certain areas. Now, it is not a question of using this document to prove any points, although I think that it will, this is simply telling all of us that the society understands what is happening and it is concerned. The society is depending on the Government, both from top down and from the bottom up, to deliver the changes and the innovations that are necessary in order to bring about more positive results.

On page 25 of the document, under "Youth and Social Services," it reads, "A comparison of statistics from 1995 to 1998 showed a persistent occurrence of juveniles displaying behavioural problems in the school system and the home environment." That is a comparison of statistics from 1995 to 1998. In 1995, there were 162 cases involving juveniles with behavioural problems, and in 1998, 168 such cases. Similarly, there was a growing incidence of juveniles convicted of criminal offences—in 1995, there were 39 cases and in 1998, 178 cases. The main age group for conviction was juveniles aged 15 to 16.

Now, Mr. Speaker, the easy way out is to say that there has been a breakdown in family values, in the home environment, which might well be a fact. But because that is a fact, it does not mean that there is no inherent responsibility within the educational system to make meaningful inroads into lessening this problem. So, the question is not to say that it is the educational system that is causing the problem, but we have to accept that we have to find ways and means within that system to help to cure the problem.

I accept that there is great difficulty in it because we cannot stop the world today and outline the problems, identify them, cure them, and move on. It does not work like that. It would be easy if we could, but because we cannot do that is why we have to have a continuous evolving situation of dealing with these problems. To try to separate the issues and say that responsibility lies just with the parents, whether you could justify that argument or not, is not going to cure the problem.

We have had three generations where this problem has continued to escalate and magnify itself over those generations. Right now, we are having parents who encountered the same situations, and their children, and their children's children at this point in time, are encountering similar situations and we have not identified the problem and it has continued to multiply—a perfect formula for total breakdown in any society.

When we speak of education in this day and age, we cannot limit it to the best CXC results in the Caribbean. We cannot get up and talk about those CXC results and figure that it ends there to say how good the system is, it does not end there.

Mr. Speaker, if you have 50 apples in a barrel and 48 of them are perfect and two are no good and if you don't get them out of the barrel, sooner or later all 50 will be spoiled.

I want to use a few more references. On page 59 of the said document—the Cayman Islands National Youth Policy draft—under "Policy Objectives," they say: "Based on the analysis of the National Youth Policy survey results, the information gathered at the various forums and from the relevant documents, the policy objectives outlined below were formulated:

"Goal B: The provision of a wider spectrum of educational opportunities for young men and women.

"Objectives B1: To support the thorough review of the existing formal educational system and access its relevance to the needs of the young people of the Cayman Islands."

Now, Mr. Speaker, this is not me with my preaching which some people interpret to be tainted with politics. It is not me who is saying that. I am going to read it again. "Objectives B1: To support the thorough review of the existing formal educational system and access its relevance to the needs of the young people of the Cayman Islands.

"B6: To provide general education to a sufficiently high level to enable young people to pursue professional/technical/vocational training according to aptitude and interest." Mr. Speaker, that is a big problem in our system at present.

Let me explain something before I go any further. Let me take from the Minister right down to the janitor. The Minister is in charge of policy. The civil service chain of command begins with his Permanent Secretary and then you have all the various attachments coming down. You have the Chief Education Officer and the department under the Chief Education Officer, you have all the schools, teachers, students, and right down the line.

The objective today is not to point any finger at any one individual in that whole chain of command. The objective is for us to be able to accept that there is a problem and to really, really, want to do something about it—not just to continue to talk about what are the right things that are being done trying to say that these things don't need to be addressed.

Mr. Speaker, let me show you where we go wrong with the best of intentions. We decide that we are going to create a new curriculum. So, we set up office within the department. Let's break that down—let's talk about a new curriculum for primary level . . . and I think if memory serves me right we have four basic areas that we are talking about—mathematics, language arts, social studies and science. Now, on occasion when the Minister is under fire he will have to answer certain questions that may be asked by someone else or by me. I am going to tell you what I know for a fact: you have a good principal for a school who has done well within the system and then you want to create the framework to work towards creating a new curriculum. You take that person out of being a principal of a school and put him in charge of one of those four areas to create this curriculum, and the person has never done that in his life before and there is not even the slightest regard for any specialist training to give that person the competency level to be able to deliver. That is not today!

I made it my point of duty not to speak to the person because if offence is taken, then I cannot help that because it is not geared at anyone. But I would like to show you the difficulty, in my view: that person is basically receiving a promotion, which is almost impossible to refuse. Any human being would be happy for a promotion. That person is also within a system that if you open your mouth something might happen so you keep your mouth shut. This is a specialist area. This is not something that you just pick up and do.

I will tell you exactly what has happened because it is my understanding that the curriculum for the primary level is completed.

I am not educator so the chances are I run the greatest risk in the world when anyone else gets up to speak, including the Minister, to tell me what I am not and what I think I know. But there are certain basic principles and common sense ideologies that you can apply to anything you are doing. There is a difference between a curriculum and a syllabus. A syllabus is limited to the subject matter that is going to be taught to a student on a given subject. A curriculum is all of those things dovetailed into one, making the person at the end of the day a whole being when he leaves that system. That is my layman's term, but I understand what it means. I will guarantee that if any professional went through what has been done now, all that has been created is a syllabus because it has been created from the bottom up and not from the top down.

That is just one point but it is no reflection on the hard work, the good intentions, and the basic ability of individuals involved. It is not to blame anyone. It is not to say that the person who is involved doing that does not have any sense. In fact, the converse to my argument is that there is also one of those people who was in charge of those subjects who made four attempts that I know about to get some training, and that training was refused. That is a fact!

Mr. Speaker, God help us if we don't open our eyes and understand what is happening around us. We cannot fool ourselves. Every time we make decisions that suit our own given circumstance we risk the future of this entire country because one decision that is made at a certain level can affect a thousand people who are existing below that, right then and there, much less the next generation. It is fact!

If we don't provide the system that is going to equip our youngsters to find meaningful positions as adults where their earning power equates to the education that they have, what kind of society are we going to have? Just think about it! It doesn't take an educator to understand. If what we are churning out of our public school system, by and large . . . and the vast majority of them don't find themselves able to have self-esteem, to be able to buy a car, to get married, to offer something in life, to have a family, to have a home, because they cannot afford it and they don't have the tools to be able to produce the labour to acquire the income to do that, what kind of society are we going to have? We have not been doing it! If we had been doing it we would not have the problems we have now.

You see, the moment you speak like this, the only thought in many people's minds is criticism and how they are going to counter that. Mr. Speaker, we need to grow up. We need to understand that when we take certain positions the responsibility that goes with that is beyond ourselves. If we want to limit our thought process to ourselves then we don't deal with those responsibilities, we take other responsibilities, and that is serious.

Let me give you another example. We talk about the school system, policy, and delivery of that policy and realising objectives. We had a question in here the other day [regarding] the middle school and the high school having Years 7 through 9 at one institution, and Years 10 through 12 at another situation, looking at the Cayman Brac example because that is a much smaller school. Therefore, Years 7 through 12 works well with that. The Minister said to me that is in place because that is what the people wanted.

How is it that out of eight professionals that I made it a point of duty to ask about it, seven of them were totally convinced that it should be the opposite?

And, the one who was not 100 percent sure, the question in that person's mind had nothing to do with the system itself, that person was worried about 17 year old boys mixing with 13 year old girls, which is a real concern as I have two daughters. The only difficulty there is that if you are trying to prevent that because of fear, then two things have to obtain: 1), you are assuming that all 17 year old boys have bad intentions; and 2) you are assuming that you will have your 13 year old daughter in your eyesight for 24 hours of the day. Neither one works.

You see, just talking about that, here is what we must stop doing that we have been doing. We had a 1995 to 1999 Strategic Educational Plan. We had all kinds of arguments about how it was delayed, and then we talked about it and there was an update and all this kind of stuff. Mr. Speaker, look at the development of a National Curriculum and the stage that has reached when the Minister initially said that in two to three years it would be completed. It is more like seven or eight years and you are just going into the secondary level and you don't even have the first one down pat because it was wrong from the very beginning.

Again, it has nothing to do with individuals. People are afraid to talk about something because it will give somebody else the advantage to go . . . and it has been done because it has come back to me and people have asked me questions. Do you know what you hear when people like me say what I am saying? The people involved, some of them who know me well would call and say, 'What kind of thing I hear you scandalising me?' because that is how it is put back to them. It has nothing to do with the rights and wrongs of it. It has nothing to do with individuals. It has to do with the future well being of this country.

For the love of me, I don't know how we are going to get beyond that. But we have to get beyond that and deal with the issues.

Mr. Speaker, there are individuals who at this point in time are at least as equipped or probably better equipped to deal with certain areas of relevance in this motion. I will be winding up the motion. I am not about to introduce the motion and go into everything because there are others who have their own little things that they want to say in certain areas. So, I am going to allow that.

I want to impress on everyone that this motion is not brought just to have something to say. It is brought out of genuine and real concern. It is not brought with a thought that I have all the answers and that the answers that are being done on a daily basis are not relevant or don't make any sense. But I tell you what, whatever we are doing, we are not catching up fast enough. We cannot continue to deal with what everyone terms "crisis management." We cannot just be reacting and outing fires. By the time we out one fire, ten more have started, and you cannot live like that.

The country can go nowhere like that. You have to get to the point where you have systems in place to prevent the fires before they start, and we are not doing that. I mentioned that in here last year—and I will bet you that it did not go an inch further than the door that I am looking at going out of this chamber.

Somewhere else in this National Youth Policy it talks about never being able to have a good grip on anything to do with the youth and be able to trace patterns and all like that unless records are being kept, which is not being done at present.

I mentioned a year ago, that if you wanted to really find out the true results of our public education system, look at a graduating class, every single one of them (including those who did not graduate but who got to year 12). and one year later find out where all of them are and what they are doing. That will tell you how well the system is working. If you have 300 students for that year and you can give a reasonably good account a year later for 250 of them, but you don't want to talk about the other 50, then we have problems. That is the point.

It is not that it is not right and good and just to make sure that those 250 fit in, either on to tertiary education or in the work force or whatever. But if you have 50 every year that you cannot account for a year later, Mr. Speaker, we are in trouble because in ten years that is 500—plus the babies that they make. I don't mean to sound raw but it is a fact. That is where our problem is coming from, and that is why the resources of this country continually have to be fuelled into the Social Services Department, more and more each year.

Now, no one is saying that you will never have any problems. But we can get it to where we can manage it a lot better than we are doing. In years gone by I would almost say that most of us took the attitude that it was not out of hand yet, so we did not have to worry about it. But you cannot live like that. You cannot wait until it gets out of hand before you say you are going to do something about it. Deal with your child like that and see how the child ends up—much less your country.

Mr. Speaker, I am going to close off now. The motion is simply calling on the Minister to act under his constitutional responsibility—to set out properly a prioritised plan including cost and specific timing of implementation to address the present needs in the public education system. I have tried to point out some of the deficiencies. There are more that can be pointed out and will be pointed out, but I only chose to use a few examples just to try to make my point.

The 1995 to 1999 Strategic Education Plan, which the Minister has explained from times gone by, is a plan which is continually being revised . . . I understand all of that. I contend today that plan has not addressed many of the areas that are relevant to problems that we are experiencing today, and that need to be addressed.

I don't want the Minister to come back and tell me about the 353 people who prepared the plan. We know that. Those 353 people gave many hours and sacrificed a lot of time and effort. We understand that. Nobody is questioning that. But if that was sufficient and it was being done in a manner that brought about the right results, we would not be wasting our time today.

From the top down and from the bottom up what I am saying is true. But inculcated in this system is that the first thing to do is to protect your back because everybody is out to get you. We need to shed that thought. It is not about whom wants to get whom. How much better can a man be than if he understands what is wrong even if it is with himself and correct it? He can be no better than that. But how much worse can a man be if he sees it staring him straight in the face and because it might expose him he refuses to address it? He can be no worse than that.

Mr. Speaker, I sincerely hope that what I have said has not gone on deaf ears because I contend this morning that not just the future well being but the very survival of this country depends on us dealing with this. No one is perfect. We accept that. No one knows it all. We accept that. But we cannot say that the problem does not exist. I cannot accept that because I know it does.

Mr. Speaker, I think perhaps at this point in time it is best for me to allow someone else to speak. Thank you.

The Speaker: The floor is opened to debate. Does any other Member wish to speak? The Third Elected Member for Bodden Town.

Mr. Roy Bodden: Mr. Speaker, I would not normally rise so early, being the seconder of the motion, but I have mentioned already to the Honourable House that I will be journeying shortly away for a week, so I will use the occasion also to tender by apologies for my absence.

I have listened to the mover, we have discussed this matter over many long hours, and for many years now we have been trading concerns, trading ideas, sharing moments and dreaming sometimes about the educational system that we would like to see.

In 1999, we even thought that it would do well for us to broaden our perspective and we went with our own resources to a conference. Unfortunately, we wanted to return this year, but as it was an election year, we decided that we could not spare the time to go.

Mr. Speaker, like the mover rightly said, the motion was not brought out of any attempt to make anyone look bad. Rather, it is out of a genuine concern and we hope that what emanates from the debate can serve as food for thought, can serve as a ground on which the Minister if he so desires can use to improve the system. Because while it is true that the system is doing well in some respects there is also much room for improvement in other respects.

I want to say that the position I will be taking will be a little different from what the mover is taking because I believe there is no need to repeat certain ideas, although repetition is perhaps the best base for learning. What I would do is to seek to offer as best I can a model beginning from the very earliest stage right up through the high school age of how I think we could improve the educational system that we have. In so doing, I am not going to be dwelling so much on the establishment of physical plants. And I am not going to be dwelling so much on figures, although from time to time I am going to leave with the Honourable House estimates of what I think will be necessary in order to set in place certain projects.

Over the years, and particularly at this time when an election is eminent, there is a tendency on the part of the Government and on the part of the Backbench to posture and enter into adversarial politics and debates. Mr. Speaker, those who know me will know that I don't have any ego to stroke. I believe that my tenure in this Honourable House has record enough of my abilities and capabilities. But when it comes to education practice and the business of teaching and developing and moulding character and minds, that is a calling that I hold close to my heart. I have on numerous occasions said that in this Honourable House.

Having laid that foundation, I want to begin by posing a few questions to encourage honourable members to think about what I am going to say and think about where we are. Mr. Speaker, have you ever wondered, in a country that boasts of being perhaps the leader in the Caribbean and one of the foremost international financial centres in the world, why is it we have no empirical figures which tell us our national literacy rate or the percentage of people in the Cayman Islands who are literate and numerate? Have you ever wondered it, Mr. Speaker? I have wondered it on many occasions.

Has it not also struck you, Mr. Speaker, that we don't have a national library per se? We don't have a sophisticated building where we could in a quiet sober atmosphere concentrate and do some extensive research on a project? Have you ever wondered, Mr. Speaker, why? Yet, we had a big debate here (you will recall, Mr. Speaker) when it was proposed that we set up a National Gallery. We are building a National Gallery but we don't have a national library. Have you wondered why?

Mr. Speaker, has it ever dawned on you that there is a contradiction of sorts in saying that we have a perfect educational system but we don't have a library where somebody can go on a Saturday morning to satisfy his curiosity in a particular subject, where he can read a journal or go and research a particular text in an area in which he may have an interest?

Are we not then measuring our progress on a faulty report card? Where are our priorities? Mr. Speaker, I contend there is a direct relation between young people who wind up in Northward and the education system. There is a direct relation, and were we able to measure it we could find it out. I requested some time ago in this House that one of the things that should be done among the young prisoners in Northward is that they should be tested to ascertain their level of literacy and numeracy. All I got was a pristine promise that it would be done, but yet nothing! And, until we begin to address these problems by seeing the interconnectedness and treating the problem from a holistic perspective, we are just treating the symptoms and not the problems.

Mr. Speaker, no serious attempt has been made that I know of, to incorporate the results of the Family Study into educational policies, into our social welfare policies, into our community development policies. That is the kind of thing I would like to see and that is the perspective from which I am coming. So, that is an excellent launching point for me.

What I would do from the very beginning, what I would set up is an integrated approach. I would set up an early intervention service. I would identify families at risk throughout these islands. Let me tell you what I mean by "at risk." I mean at risk because of poverty, at risk because of potential abuse, breakdown, and dysfunction of one or both parents; at risk because they may have young people in a neighbourhood riddled with drugs and alcohol, and other threats. I would ensure that by developing a programme . . . and you can call it whatever you want to call it. I, for the sake of argument would call it "Family Start." After identifying these families, I would then set in motion one or two people to deal with that particular family from pre-school.

There would be consultations. They would have access to a psychologist. I would ensure that they had access to persons from the church of their choice. I would ensure they were acquainted with the social service department, and I would take it from there. The case officer would be responsible for that family. There would be regular consultation between that officer and the family. I would work until those children were ready to enter school to ensure that there was no deprivation—financial, social, or emotional.

You cannot tell me that a country boasting of such wealth cannot afford to make that investment in human capital. If I were a wagering man, I would wager that if this programme were in place for five years the prison population (young prisoners) at Northward would drop significantly—by 50%. I would also lay you a wager that juvenile delinquency would drop significantly, that anti-social behaviour and alienation would decline similarly.

I would ensure that in this Family Start programme the parents are educated as to their responsibilities. It may be that some retraining would be involved in order to bring them up to a standard where they could of their own volition earn a dignified livelihood. It would not be any welfare state system, where they are supported by the state and stripped of their ambition and dignity.

I would focus on prevention rather than later intervention. I would provide intensive services for the people with the most need, and I would work from the strengths of the family. I would set it up to enable the families to access services in the community. I seriously would investigate the feasibility of starting an early childhood educational programme, preferably something modelled off the popular Head Start programme, so effective in the United States.

The focus would be the empowerment of the family, empowering families to become independent; to enable them to access the social support networks and to understand that the primary responsibility for bringing up the children is they themselves, whether the conventional two-parent family or the single-parent family. I would have the proper support groups set in place to give them whatever help they need—an integrated approach involving the ministries of education, social services and community affairs. From there, I would set it up so that when the child enters primary school there are similar continuing agencies enabling support.

Because the school operates in loco parentis, many parents feel that education is the sole responsibility of the government (the "State" as I like to say). They think that their obligation ends when the child reaches school age. More and more we get cases where people feel it's the government's responsibility, so they depend more and more on government and lean on government and sometimes twist government's arm to provide for them—lunches, uniforms . . . They never consider that government is already giving a lot of help and that government can only get the money to provide all these services by taxing them. So the more they lean on and expect from government, the more government has to squeeze out of them. When budget time comes and government has to impose taxes then they scream. I recognise that government is in a Catch 22 position in many of these circumstances.

What is needed is an educational awareness among the parents. And when I speak of empowerment, I mean not only empowering them to earn a dignified livelihood, but empowering them to make conscientious decisions in regard to the future of their children. So, while we are providing these support services, we also have to find ways to teach them their responsibilities and teach them where the parameters end.

There's no nice way to put this: We have to do some indoctrination too. That's what it's about. You can check any successful society. People think that indoctrination is only done in totalitarian societies and one party states. No! Indoctrination is a sound pillar of democracy. If we don't indoctrinate people in the right values and the correct knowledge democracy will fail. There has to be some propagandising effort so that these parents can understand that they cannot abnegate their responsibilities when the children become school age, farming them off to the government.

Now we have gone into the era of home school associations. I would improve the system from the very outset when the child enters formal schooling, that is the primary school, I would cause a contract to be established between the parent and the home school association. This contract has no legal basis. It's worth would be that it would consist of powerful statements of intent. It would clearly lay out the responsibilities of all parties involved in the education of the child. In other words, the contract would lay out the role and responsibility of the school vis a vis the role, responsibility and expectations of the parents.

This contract would not be universal in the sense of design and structure; it could vary from school to school. The level of contract at the primary level would have some significant differences from that of the middle or high school. But, essentially, there would be common elements including expectations about the standard of education, the ethos of the school, regular and punctual attendance, attitudes towards discipline, homework and the responsibility of the school as to what information the school would give out, reporting sessions. It would serve to help parents realise it's a partnership.

Mr. Speaker, this would be a good time for me to take a break before I launch into further debate.

The Speaker: We shall suspend proceedings until 2.15 pm.

PROCEEDINGS SUSPENDED AT 12.46 PM

PROCEEDINGS RESUMED AT 2.45 PM

The Speaker: Please be seated. Debate continues on Private Member's Motion No. 14/2000. The Third Elected Member for Bodden Town continuing.

Mr. Roy Bodden: Prior to the luncheon suspension, I was arguing for the development of home school associations which serve to enhance the relationship between parents and the school system. If effectively set up they serve to lay out clear cut parameters regarding responsibilities that each role player will have to carry out. These associations are important in helping parents raise the pupil's achievements and in combating truancy, bullying and unacceptable behaviour which generally undermines pupils' progress in school.

These associations and the contract I spoke about should also serve to involve parents in literacy and numeracy work. It is an ideal example of how a partnership should work. All schools should be encouraged to write a home school contract. I put that out for consideration by the Minister of Education.

I see home school contracts being of particular significance to students coming from disadvantaged families. An intensive early intervention programme should be based upon certain indicators I call "disadvantage indicators." These would be poor parental educational attainment, poor housing, low income, long term unemployment, sole parenthood, high residential mobility. We could also develop a symptom list that could be used to identify this disadvantage—poor family health, alcohol abuse, lower levels of parenting skills, truancy, and low educational achievement, involvement in criminal behaviour, and young motherhood.

I always had the idea that much more could be done to alleviate some of the problems our students face at middle and high school level. But I was also cognisant that these problems didn't just begin at that time. I was reminded a few evenings ago at the CASA District Meeting in Bodden Town where I heard anecdotes of students as young as six years of age being substance abusers.

If this is the level, the age where these problems start, it's no wonder we are so far behind. Further, it was pointed out that before many students leave the primary school, certain antisocial behaviours have almost completely manifested themselves in the student's lives. That being the case, it is hardly surprising that by the time the students reach Year 11 and 12, and are ready to matriculate from the high school that such a large percentage come out functionally illiterate—they cannot read and write well enough to hold jobs.

I want to emphasise this because I have heard the minister speak often of those who do well at the CXC exams. But nobody takes the time to follow up on those students who do not do well on the exams. What about the third who drop through the cracks? These are the people who make up the prison population at Northward, the juvenile delinquents, residents, and daytime students at CIMI. These are the ones we find in the alternative education system.

If we are going to progress and prosper in this country, we have to find a way to address the problem and stop it before it reaches this level. Otherwise, it makes no sense to boast that we have the best CXE exam pass rates in the Caribbean. Now we want to build an $11 million remand home. There's a fallacy in that because like Gresham's Law, which says work expands to fill time, these facilities will expand to accommodate the number of students we send to them. And we will continue to treat the symptoms. Meanwhile the problem will remain unaddressed. We have to attack the problem with an integrated holistic approach and set the family on a firm and secure footing.

That brings me to the primary school level, the level where the foundation for formal learning is laid. It is at this level that it is most critical for students to grasp skills and gain competency, where values are inculcated in them. If not, there will be problems later on. One of the conspicuous absences is the absence of anything having to do with who we are. To the best of my knowledge, there is no integrated system of teaching civics in the schools.

I can tell you what happens in Canada. Three mornings per week, there is a general assembly. The flag is unfurled. The pledge is said, the National Anthem is sung, and those students placed their fists over their hearts. They knew what it meant when the Maple Leaf was hoisted. They knew that their flag should not touch the ground because that would be a desecration. They knew what their National Anthem said. They knew their pledge.

Every four years or so they had what they called the Canada Cup in hockey, where the Soviet team and the Swedish team came to play. The Montreal Forum was a charged atmosphere. My friends used to say we couldn't beat Russia in war, but we could beat them in hockey. When the Canadian National Team played the Russian National Team, there were more Canadian flags . . . a whole nationalistic atmosphere. From primary school they understood what it meant to be a Canadian, and what these various national symbols meant. They were taught the various structures of government, and the people who made up the Federal and Provincial governments.

It is informal in Cayman. There is no formal structure. That's one of the problems at high school too. Politics should be taught as a subject. That's the best training ground. Civics should be taught. They should know what the country is about. That's the reason people are not registering to vote—they believe that it's not important. The apathy stems from way back. If they were politicised from those levels . . . that's where the training should begin.

I hope the minister is listening to this. There is much work to be done. I contend that we can have a much better system, but we have to use an integrated approach. I am still surprised that to this point there is no systematic and integrated approach to use computers in the primary schools. There are companies specialising in it.

There's a company called Creative Learning Systems, out of California. How do I know? The First Elected Member for George Town and I met these people. They did a presentation for us. I got a call from these people saying they were going to Bermuda, Grenada, and two other eastern Caribbean countries, would I like them to come here to give a presentation. I said, please don't because I didn't wish to get into trouble.

This company sets systems up in schools. You can have a school operating on the traditional classroom approach, or set up with computer aided construction. They can go completely on computer, or half-and-half. These systems start from $.5 million for an integrated system which incorporates some traditional teaching, or completely computerised for about $3 million for a school the size of the Bodden Town School.

Years ago I said we should have a pilot project. A School like North Side or East End would be ideal to operate a pilot project so that we could gage the effectiveness of the computers before moving it throughout the system.

That's the way the world is going. Why are we still taking the antiquated approach? If we do this, it will free up our teachers. With a little retraining, they could be much more effective. In the traditional classroom of 25 pupils, if we had sufficient computers, the teachers save a lot of energy. Why is that not being done at the primary schools? Why are we not ensuring that every child . . . and the Lighthouse School is ideal. Turn those children on to the world of computers and that would be therapy in itself.

The students could move entirely at their own pace. The ideal setting would be one like the Lighthouse School. Why is this not done? Certainly, the minister cannot say that it is foreign to him. For all the money we spend, I am saying we should have a better system. One reason why we are not getting better results is because we are still doing it the old way.

It is time that we take this approach. I know that the minister put a strategic plan in place. And I know it was arrived at by 353 people. But I am saying that if that plan is as good as it is purported to be, it should now be at the stage where it is incorporating some of these developments.

I learned that for the most part, for all we have heard in here, there are great disparities and confusion in terms of the after school activities as they are structured in some schools. I wonder why, on a Friday afternoon the bus lets out the future of the Cayman Islands to congregate at Elizabethan Square unsupervised. Those students should be participating in organised after school clubs, like Camera Club and Cadet Corp. Why are they out there on a Friday afternoon? Who assumes responsibility for that? The buses should pick the students up when the school calls—not when the bus drivers want to pick them up.

If I were assessing the system, these are the things I would look at. You cannot tell me that you have an effective system when I see the school children, some of them immodestly clad, on a Friday afternoon. . . and you should hear the complaints from the people in the surrounding offices about their behaviour. The minister has to take responsibility for that too.

For years, I have been singing about the development of a cadet corp. To this day, there is none. These are the places we have to start. Compare our system with the one they have in South Korea, in Singapore and even in countries in the eastern Caribbean, and Jamaica, particularly where the secondary level is concerned. We have a great start in aftercare, and several do well, like Rehoboth. But that is not near enough.

We should be making greater use of formalised computer instruction. Our country's educational system will never do well until we get more people interested in teaching and more people going into the teaching vocation. The only way we are going to do that is to make it attractive. We have to find ways of doing that.

When it comes to the middle school, these are the years that many of our young people experience the challenge of adolescence. They need guidance during these years. It is my theory that we can best help them by placing them in an atmosphere where they have role models and mentors. To thrust 700 students of the same age who are floundering because there are no persons who can say don't do this because of experience they know it is a mistake, is a serious challenge. These students are receiving signals from their bodies which they need help interpreting. Who will be the role models, leaders and mentors? For all of the positive things and good in our system, a significant number of the breakdowns begin there, particularly when you realise that there are already contributing factors.

There is a definite need to have a formal technical and vocational programme at the high school level. None exists now. Some of us have been preaching this for years. It is so obvious that blind Bartemeus could see that every student in the system will not turn out to be a white collar worker, or go on to tertiary education. I am not talking about a few token courses here or there. I am talking about programmes.

Before new labour came, the conservative government had a national programme they called TVEI—Technical and Vocational Education Initiative. Later, when the new government came they developed what they called the National Certificate of Vocational Qualification. Why is it that we don't have something that matriculating students who don't desire to do into the academic stream can get? I would like to see that beginning when students leave middle school that they are screened. This is where this should formally begin.

We should have at the end of Year 12, students coming out of the vocational and technical stream with internationally recognised qualifications. CXC has those exams, but enough emphasis is not placed on the programme.

The greatest failing of the high school here is that there seems to be no standard set for the matriculation. In most systems there is a competency-based examination that students have to attain a minimum in before they are awarded a school-leaving certificate. I would like to propose that we set up a competency-based exam as follows: Co-opt the Chamber of Commerce; it has an education subcommittee. Use the various organisations that make up the Chamber of Commerce—the Law Society, the Bar Association, the Bankers' Association, the Merchants' Association, the Society of Professional Accountants—along with staff of the Education Department. Using someone like Mr. Herbert Crawford, who is eminently qualified (as are others), draft a curriculum that would offer some competency based examination which these students could take, which would be recognised by the Chamber of Commerce and all its affiliate organisations.

Every student coming out of high school would sit this exam at some level. It could be structured with various levels, as the CXE. There would be a minimum of three tries at this exam, the first at Year 10; and if you were not successful, you would try again in Year 11. For those terminating their education at the high school level, there would be another try at Year 12. It is assumed that those going on to tertiary education would pass it at the first sitting in Year 10. They would be ready to move on and prepare for their external exams. Students going into the technical vocations would be similarly routed. But students who have difficulty attaining the competency would have a minimum of three tries at the exam before they matriculate. Any well-taught course should bring the students up to a satisfactory level of attainment by Year 12.

I would assure that the matriculating point is closer to 18 years of age, here's why: If at that point the student decides that his education will be terminal, he will be in a position to assume legal responsibility. That is, he could go and be a teller in a bank because he would be legally accountable. That is also the age he could vote, or even get married. It makes sense.

Finally, if he wanted to go to a college or university and did well, then he could move right in at that age. What happens when students matriculate earlier than that? We have a problem. Some have to wait until they reach a certain age to qualify for a scholarship or hold certain positions, or get accepted at a university. So, that seems to make sense.

I would go further in terms of social development. I would ensure that students have a sense of community and responsibility by encouraging them to enter an organisation, such as a national youth service. While they are going to school they would spend one afternoon a week doing something to help the community—reading for the elderly, visiting the Pines and the Hospital, doing volunteer work in a church or community group, teaching netball, teaching literacy classes, teaching basketball, working with infants, mentoring. I would encourage them to give a little back one afternoon per week.

Talking about mentoring, I would ensure that they themselves are mentored. In this country we have an agglomeration of multinational companies and corporations. I would encourage one day per month, preferably a Friday, that a senior staff member take some of these students whose education would be terminal at Year 12, into the office to afford them a hands-on experience of what office and corporate life would be. They could explain how an office works, the routine, and what their appetites for the world of work. It doesn't take billions of dollars to do that, just liaise with the Chamber of Commerce and the Education Department.

I am not talking about what's in place now, work experience. I am talking about something more formal. Even the work experience projects can be improved because I have seen students turn up at job sites and there is little to no exchange as to the role and responsibility of the people on the job. Even that can be better organised. I have even seen students sent for job experience on potentially dangerous work sites, ill equipped.

When I mention mentoring, I am talking about something entirely different. I am speaking about preparing people for middle management and upper level management by whetting their appetites and making them understand what is required in that role. The mentoring could also be expanded to take into consideration those who are about to fall through the cracks, those that suffer from lack of self-esteem or self-confidence.

These concepts did not originate with me. Many other members have similar ideas. I wonder why we are not implementing these kinds of strategies. Are we limited only to those emanating out of the Strategic Education Plan?

It is necessary for us to take this view. If we don't we will be here until the next century still saying the same things, and praising ourselves for high success rates. In the meantime, the prison is full, the youth detention centres are full, the counselling centres are full, and we still have problems.

It is crucial that we attract young people into the teaching profession. The only way we can do that is by dangling a carrot before them. I frequently mention the programme I saw in the US, called Teach for America. They have a big advertisement. What about Teach for Cayman? We will take two or three years for a start. Like the armed forces, they encourage you to enlist for a two-year tour of duty and hope that by the end of that they have so impressed you that you will sign on for a longer time. Some people make a career of the armed forces.

Teach for Cayman: Give us two years of your life after college. And some may find it so attractive that some people may stay (as Frenchie says) "feyeva." We can begin addressing the shortage by doing this. There are many longstanding non-Caymanian teachers in our community. We can begin by making them Caymanian! I believe these people deserve that. They have given many years of their lives teaching our children. We should sweep them up, encourage them to remain. We should set an example to similar persons by first recognising the contribution.

Many of them would love . . . some have been teaching here going on 30 years. I think that's the least we can do—recognise them! And if it's their desire, and they meet the criterion, they should apply to become Caymanians. Heaven knows we need teachers. And then try to attract a pool of younger ones.

It is my information that in one school alone, we have five young Caymanian teachers who will be leaving. Why? Because they have not been shepherded properly. They have been working in surroundings where they are not getting the kind of encouragement they deserve. You can't put some of these people into the kinds of situations we have now, cold turkey—no guidance, no orientation, no proper recognition. The system has to work for them.

It is clear to me that there is a breakdown in communication. I want to get something off my chest, and this is the opportune time: Let me tell you what kind of critic I am. When I look at the education ministry and department I can see that things are not in sync. One is across town from the other. They tell me that they have rats in the education department. Give me a break!

That building is not conducive to the atmosphere that you need to promote learning—a set of hodgepodge cubicles. And I wonder when the minister last visited the education department. He should visit there once a month. He should have coffee with the staff once per month. The department should be within walking distance of the ministry, not across town. And it shouldn't be anywhere the minister is afraid to go!

We have to improve the lines of communication. It must be a place the people who work there are proud of. Certainly, they shouldn't be working in surroundings that rats inhabit.

How? We have to find a way to encourage young Caymanian teachers to remain. I hope the minister is aware of and will investigate these five cases.

And there's something else, the organisation has to be structured in such a way that the staff can feel the minister is accessible to them any time they have something important to say. The minister should take it upon himself to visit them; he should not wait until he is called. I would have coffee with these persons at least once per month. I would set aside one morning where we have a two-hour coffee. I wonder if the minister will say, when he replies, if that is his practice now.

I have to wonder how the Minister of Education married Education with Planning and Cayman Airways. You can't relate them, by any stretch of the imagination. The Minister of Education should also be the Minister of Culture.

[Inaudible interjections]

Mr. Roy Boddén: Members are privileged to make a little jest. But, Mr. Speaker, this is what the honourable Minister of Education had to say on 11 November 1994. He said: "When the results are good, then it is obvious that the system, and myself . . . I have to say that I have put in a lot of effort in Education. I put more into Cayman Airways, but my heart has been with education for many years because I have quite a few degrees myself." What I want to emphasise is that he put more effort into Cayman Airways than he did into education!

Mr. Roy Boddén: I am not blaming the minister. But I am saying that something needs to be done. You give him education . . . Cayman Airways is failing and then Education is failing . . . we can't expect him to work miracles! And then, when you remove his PS to do the Vision 2008 exercise for 18 months, it's no wonder we are floundering and wondering if we have any kind of education system. We need to get better organised.

Long ago I suggested to the minister that for the functioning of the Education Council, he should remove himself as chairman, and set him instead where he would be the final court of appeal if necessary. But when the minister sits as chairman of the council, he is not in a position to do anything to any decision the council makes unless you want to appeal from Caesar to Caesar.

There is no greater example of the quandary the minister finds himself in than that raised by the Third Elected Member for West Bay yesterday afternoon, querying the awarding of certain scholarships. The minister is in an awkward position. The minister, were he not the chairman of the council, could take the decision to say to the council that there is a problem and they need to reverse the decision. Or, the minister could overrule the council if he so desired. But now we are in a quandary. The minister is the chairman. And although he wasn't there and not a part of that particular decision, he is stuck.

The minister promised he was going to look into that. Well, I assume he is still looking into it, because he's still the chairman of that council.

I believe that we have to develop lines of communication and trust where the minister can step aside. I am a great believer in delegated responsibility. I hold authority, but I delegate the responsibility. That's how my system would work. The buck stops with me, but I farm out the responsibility. Then, if it's not done, I will know what to do. I would not have to be the chairman. I don't need to know what went on. But I would set it out so that at any time I could say 'You haven't fulfilled your responsibility because these are your responsibilities. And let's not forget that it is I who holds the authority.' We can improve. We need to work on improving the system by effecting these kinds of changes.

We need to decide if we are going to duplicate resources. What is government's role and responsibility as far as this is concerned? We now have the Community College of the Cayman Islands (CCCI), which is the government's college, and we have the International College of the Cayman Islands (ICCI). ICCI is registered as an institution of higher learning, but it does not bear full government recognition. I don't know what government has been waiting on to give the college recognition.

If it needs help meeting certain criteria, why does government not offer that assistance? Certainly the government sends students there, awards scholarships. But, when it comes right down to it, government does not recognise degrees awarded by the institution, in terms of employing the graduates. There is no reason why ICCI and CCCI have to operate in mutual exclusivity to one another. They should complement one another and be encouraged to develop to the point where they utilise common resources, be that faculty, libraries, or surroundings. Otherwise, it's a waste of resources in a small country.

I want to say something about the debate over the awarding of scholarships. I have to say that there is a case to be made for Caymanian students to be encouraged to study in the Cayman Islands up to a certain level. But, on the other hand, one of the essences and functions of tertiary education is the broadening of the experience. So, I do not believe in legally constricting Caymanian students to study at the Community College when they are accepted at institutions abroad. Although, there is a sound argument saying there is a savings in money.

I have always argued that you can't equate saving money to education. While we may be saving a couple of thousand dollars in school fees, what are we doing for the development of the mind by offering our young people opportunities to mix and meet people from other jurisdictions, to gain an experience they can only gain by living in a metropolitan city, by developing a cosmopolitan attitude.

Ask anyone who is well travelled how they rid themselves of certain prejudices—they lived among these people! That is not written on the certificate or degree, but it is an experience carried in the soul. You can't restrict them to the Community College for the first two years. It's true we can save thousands of dollars, but what about . . . Mr. Speaker, have you ever seen an educated idiot?

Mr. Roy Boddén: They exist, I can assure you. They know it from reading, but they are so shallow that if you take them . . . 'I not goin' by them' . . . and they have no respect for persons from other cultures, who have other mores. These are the things we have to be careful we are not encouraging when we restrict them.

Unfortunately, we cannot always equate learning and savings. Sometime we have to spend. The greatest education is the education people get from travelling, conversing with strangers, living in cultures other than their own and so forth.

I want to talk about the move to develop a teacher education programme. I commend government for exploring the possibilities. But, were it I, I would have sought other institutions to align my college with other than the University of Miami. Here are my reasons: The University of Miami is one of the most expensive as far as tuition goes, in the United States. And significant too is that it is not a university known for its teacher education programme. There are other universities much more widely respected for their teacher education programme.

I have always held that the best teacher education programmes aware concurrent degrees. There are four universities in Ontario which offer concurrent educational programmes—Queens (of which I am an alumnus), York, Trent, and Lakehead. The advantage that Caymanian students would have is in foreign exchange. The concurrent educational degree programme is designed for school teachers. It's a four year programme that allows you to acquire in three years a degree in the discipline you are going to teach, whether that is sociology, history, economics, literature, and in the fourth year you get a Bachelor of Education Degree which is the teaching equivalent where you take courses in classroom management, educational psychology methodology and so on.

Compare the advantages of that—two degrees in four years to one degree in three years, which is only a Bachelor of Education Degree. A Bachelor of Education Degree only allows you to teach at the primary level and below. When you have two degrees, one in the discipline you are going to teach, and a Bachelor of Education, you are qualified to teach at the graduate level, that is high school and beyond.

I would think that it would be more advantageous for us to explore. It's interesting that Bermuda took that route. They had an agreement with Queens University in Kingston, Ontario to come down to Bermuda in the summer. All the University required was that they have 12 students and they would send a professor down. I would like to see us explore that possibility.

The final year is spent entirely in Ontario. The other times they go up for the summer and do course work in between. Certainly, with distance learning and computers we could access that. But the arrangement with the University of Miami is but a start. I don't want anyone to believe I am going to give them an A for excellence in that. I know we could get a better deal. I have always said that I would encourage young Caymanian teachers to go the concurrent route where in four years they get two degrees.

Most people who go into teaching want to work their way up as they get more experienced. So, the minister should think about that as a way to effect improvement. Get me right now, I am not criticising what has been done. I am saying that to my mind there is an alternate and better programme available. But what we have now with the University of Miami can suffice as a start.

I believe it is necessary to go back to the business of scholarships for the first two years at the Community College. I believe it is necessary for the minister to take that under advisement and be as flexible as possible. I would personally prefer a purely voluntary system. I would think that that arrangement could best be handled where persons are young and not sufficiently sure of themselves. Sometimes people coming from a small jurisdiction, like the Cayman Islands, into a large university setting are intimidated. I was at the Carrier Dome with 16,000 screaming basketball fans. You can imagine someone coming from Cayman . . . those kinds of experiences can be intimidating and not all Caymanians would wish to go. But it should be their decision.

What I would do, were I in a position to advise the government, is put a little candy on the Community College and make the students say it's more advantageous to go there. They can stay at home and it's less money . . . but to make it a blanket policy may be counterproductive. We have already seen some objection to it. What I have offered is not by any means comprehensive. It is but a skeleton of where I see the system could be improved.

I want to make some broader statements, taking into consideration some sociological and cultural perspectives. I don't believe that anyone in his right mind would condemn the education system that presently exists. But to say that there couldn't be significant improvement would be a stifling of one's conscience. To say that the system does not have some weaknesses would be to see out of Napoleon's eye.

In the past, when people like me tried to critique the system, we were shot down. They don't like the message, so they discredit the messenger. Well, I have come to a point in my life where it really doesn't matter to me, except that I speak the truth and say what my conscience tells me to say. I am not aspiring for anybody's seat—as we are sometimes given to saying. I am content within my soul. To say that I don't have ambitions to be the minister of education would be a lie. But for me that's not the end of the world. I believe that my constituents know my capabilities. That is why they have returned me three times, and will hopefully return me for a fourth. But I also believe that I have a lot to offer in terms of where the country should be going educationally. And I am prepared to offer that, even if it's only from the Backbench.

I hope that what I say is taken in the right light and my ambition is to one day get to the point where I can practice what I preach. I have to preach now, because I have never been in a position to put into practice what I preach. And what I preach is sound doctrine. That is the only thing I can lay claim to, the only certification and accreditation that I have. I am not an accountant. I am not a lawyer. I am not a legal secretary. I am not a doctor. I am just a trained teacher and qualified educational administrator. In spite of all the books I have read, that's the only thing I hold any accreditation in.

It's important to say that we have to recognise that one reason we are plagued with the crime we are plagued with is because we have a failing education system. That's a given. It's obvious. Check it out: all the people in the alternative education centre, CIMI, Northward Prison (the young prisoners), all of them have failed educationally. But what is so striking is that we have not learned anything. Our position is no different than it was in other countries a long time ago and still is in many countries.

I want to read from a book entitled Market Education: The Unknown History, by Andrew J. Coulson.

"In 1841 Horace Mann, the godfather of American public schooling promised, 'Let the common school be expanded to its capabilities. Let it be worked with the efficiency of which it is susceptible and nine-tenths of the crimes in the penal code would become obsolete. The long catalogue of human ills would be abridged.'"

That was spoken in 1841. Our school system has failed, and is failing because what it is not transmitting is knowledge, skills, and values necessary for our people to make it. We have to find a way to address this failure. It will have to be an integrated holistic approach in which not only education is responsible, but where there is a partnership between allied ministries—social services, community development, education.

I have to say that is why some of the things the First Elected Member for West Bay attempted when he was minister of community development grabbed my interest. I believe that his heart was in the right place. He saw that he could only be successful if there was an incorporation of efforts, allied efforts from other ministries. If only more of us would realise that we need to pool resources, share ideas, make concerted efforts.

The family in the Cayman Islands is at grave risk. Many times I have heard the Fourth Elected Member for George Town say this, using his sense of sociology and society. But I have heard other people say it too. We need to address this if we are going to have a better educational system. We need to stop this rot of the family, we need to stem the tide of the family backsliding. And we need to find a way to help those families at risk. But we first need to identify them.

I read a long list of criteria we can use. But it's important to do it in such a way that we don't strip them of their dignity, that we don't addict them to a social welfare system. We have to make them realise it's a partnership.

In an age where school fees are going up, where electricity, interest rates, and all these things impinge upon the poor, how are we going to do this? Clearly the old plan has not worked, and is not working. We need new ideas. We need a new approach. We need fresh energy. We may need to rework the minister's strategic plan. We may need to trim, cut and add on. So, don't get stuck like a broken record on the plan of 353 people that it can't be wrong, that we can't adjust it, that we can't amend or change it. And we need to do that by bringing in new concepts, mentoring, new people with new ideas, and an infusion of new energy.

We need to improve the lines of communication. We need to find a way to get the education department closer to the education ministry. We need to make the minister understand that although his primary responsibility is that of policy, he must get involved somehow in the administration because they overlap. And we need to give the staff confidence and make them feel comfortable that he's accessible and listening. He needs to have tea and coffee with them sometimes and just chat. Let them let their hair down, as the expression goes.

Lastly, he needs to adopt the skin of an armadillo, and stop taking criticism personally. He needs to develop a sense of differentiation so that he can absorb the constructive and ignore the destructive. Stop talking about who has what degree and what experience, and what wealth. Say, 'If you have something constructive to say, then say it brother, cause I'm a-listenin'.

That's the only way we are going to make it. We understand we have no control. The people put us here. We are all working for the betterment of the country.

These problems are mounting up on us and they need a solution. I hope I have made sense.

The Speaker: Does any other member wish to speak? The floor is open to debate. The Honourable Minister responsible for Education, Aviation, and Planning.

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: The motion that is before the House is an extremely important one. But the motion itself calls for a limited and specific matter. I would like to read the motion again to draw attention to this. It says:

“WHEREAS in any rapidly developing country the level and diversity of education offered by the public system is of vital importance;

“AND WHEREAS it appears that the educational demands created by the rapid economic development in the Cayman Islands are not being adequately met by the present system;

“BE IT THEREFORE RESOLVED that the Minister of Education, acting under his constitutional responsibility to deliver policy in the area of education, set out a properly prioritised plan, including costs and specific timing of implementation to address the present needs in the public education system.”

What is being asked for here is to set out a properly prioritised plan including costs and specific timing of implementation. We have a good education system in this country. It is not just me saying that the system is good, this has been said by other people in more objective and non-political positions. But, it's not a perfect system.

None of us are perfect, and none of our systems are perfect. My duty, as the last member mentioned in the latter part of his speech, is to keep the system under constant review, and to do my best to keep my department and my ministry, the schools and the people involved doing their best to improve the system of education in this country. It's not that we don't have what this motion calls for at present. While it involves considerable detail, I will deal with it.

The Third Elected Member for Bodden Town said that no one in his right mind would condemn the education system, but it has some weaknesses. That's a true statement. It's a fair statement.

The Education Development Plan, the first one (1995 to 1999), was the first education plan this country had in this detail. I originally dealt with a plan back in the late 1970s, in fact it was a plan for Health, Education and Social Services. This plan holds a sound and proven system and plan for that system, giving a lot of detail and it is one that has the acceptance of the people of this country and members of this honourable House and the government. So, we have a five-year plan, the first strategic plan this country has seen.

This plan is detailed. It has objectives in the action plans, sets out who is to carry it out, the cost and it sets a time or implementation date. So the ingredients are there. There are over 100 action plans, the vast majority of which are in operation. This plan deals with the specific strategies that are set out in that. The first nine set out the basis for a sound education system. I would just like to read those strategies because they form the basis on which the whole system gets the necessary momentum to develop.

“1: We will establish a national curriculum with standards at every level which will fulfil the needs of students of every ability.”

“2: We will develop personalised education for each student that ensures his/her success.”

“3: We will establish throughout the system individual and school accountability while preserving the unique character and effectiveness of each school.”

“4: We will identify and counteract the social problems affecting our students' education.”

“5: We will strengthen the relationship between parents, students, and educators.”

“6: We will develop the spiritual, moral and social character of each student to the highest possible standards.”

“7: We will ensure the continuous development of all staff, with emphasis on elevating the status of the teaching profession.”

“8: We will identify and capitalise on all available support services and resources within the local and international community, to achieve our mission.”

“9: We will provide and maintain all necessary facilities that are required to achieve and support our stated mission and objectives.”

Those strategies are good. They have stood the test of time and many of them have been implemented. If, having produced this plan, it had remained stagnant and developed no further, then I could understand some of the arguments that came forward in relation to this. I know the last speaker referred to an update to the education plan, new people new ideas, and improve. We have done just that. This plan has been updated annually, with the exception that Vision [2008] came out. So there are three updates to this plan.

I would have hoped that the member would have acknowledged the fact that we have had three updates to this plan. These have been done on an annual basis. In each year there is an assessment of the strategies and where they have reached. An implementation report is made and implementation update on the 105-odd action plans we have on the nine strategies.

So, there is an annual monitoring of the education plan; there is an annual update of the education plan and this is to a large extent done by the original 31 key members who put this plan together. From time to time those updates have recommended either that we change some of the plans and more recently, the last update done (which would have been the third update) recommended a 10th strategy, which reads, “We will create dynamic learning environments which will guarantee lifelong independent learners in a globally competitive society.”

This education plan is alive. It has been updated three times already, and again just recently. It has been extended and amended.

The Mission Statement has also been amended. My reason here is to show that this is not a stagnant plan, but a very live plan. The Mission Statement has been amended, and reads as follows: “The Mission of the Cayman Islands School System—a committed partnership of students, teachers and parents, and the community—is to guarantee the continuing development of the unique potential of each student through dynamic learning environments which are responsive and relevant to local and global demands and which promote the common good of society.”

Amending the Mission Statement shows that the things said by the last speaker about there not being change, and about my being thin-skinned and not being able to take change and criticism goes to show . . . here's the proof. This has been amended and I have accepted it. So I have no problem with that. I, of all people, accept that the human race is subject to error, and their duty is to reverse any errors that may arise. Therefore, I have no problem at all.

I listen to the suggestions coming from the public at large. But they have to be suggestions that come with some solution. Criticism can be done by anyone, but constructive solutions are what is needed to advance the education system. I have no problem whatsoever in guaranteeing to the public that the Five Year National Strategic Plan is good, vibrant, subject to change, and as long as I have been Minister of Education, I have never resisted anything that has come forward from the dedicated group, not only those who originally put this together, but those who update this annually.

We are not dealing with politicians, we are dealing with professionals experienced in the profession and they are people who have the knowledge, experience and education system at heart. They have also provided a number of action plans for that last strategy that stretch over quite a few pages. They have actually provided four action plans. These look at matters such as cost, benefits and the tangible and intangible aspects of each of these action plans. They set out the action steps, the same as the plan itself, and to who it's assigned, the starting date, due date and completion date.

It is far from correct that the education system is not well planned and that there is no necessary timing and costs in the highly detailed plan that exists. That is the reason why I can safely say that the education system in this country is equal to or better than what it is in other Caribbean countries, and comparable to education systems in the world. We only have to look around us.

If the education system is to blame for crime, as was alleged—and there are many contributing factors to crime, let me say—and if the other Caribbean countries have such great education systems, why are they so rife with crime? We are lucky in this country. When we look around us, where we are having serious crime every day, and then to try to compare us and say we are not up to the education standards in other Caribbean islands and that is the cause of crime is really using a very poor example. Crime in this country is lower—and I can say that without exception—than anywhere else in the Caribbean. But crime does not come about as a result of the education system alone in any country, it comes as a result of complex social, educational, political—political!—factors because many times the undercurrents in a country that caused the strife that destroyed them originated in politics. We have many examples of that.

There can always be improvements. Government knows that. I know that. This House knows it. But we have come a very long way and the facts are there to prove this. In fact, later on I will deal with some of the facts that relate to our position in education. We have what is undoubtedly a good education system, which is being improved.

I would like to look at areas that are important to the education system, but to come back to each in more depth. I will be giving an overview showing where the updating of the system has been.

Site-based planning is a vibrant part of the education plan. It has played a vital process in each individual school's uniqueness. During 1998 to 1999, the Lighthouse School, the Spot Bay School, Creek, George Town Primary Schools completed the site-based planning process. Five other site-based schools were monitored and some had updates from their original site base process.

The third educational plan update which was held, and a new mission statement created, that was to take into account and include in the new mission elements from the Vision 2008 National Plan. We have had to take into account the Vision 2008 Plan because concerns were raised. We polled 1000 people—

The Speaker: May I interrupt you for one moment?

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: Yes, sir.

The Speaker: In accordance with Standing Order 10(2), we have reached the hour of interruption. The Honourable Minister responsible for Education, Aviation, and Planning.

SUSPENSION OF STANDING ORDER 10(2)

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: I would move the suspension of the relevant Standing Order so that we can continue until 5.00 this afternoon.

AGREED: STANDING ORDER 10(2) SUSPENDED.

The Speaker: Please continue, the Honourable Minister responsible for Education, Aviation, and Planning.

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: The Vision 2008 National Plan, the Ten Year Plan for the three Cayman Islands, stated in relation to the Education Plan, suggested the new strategy of creating dynamic learning environment guaranteeing lifelong independent learners in a globally competitive society. Emphasis was placed on this in the Vision 2008 National Plan, the ten-year plan for the three Cayman Islands and we have already accepted the change in relation to that.

One important area that I will deal with in considerable detail is the inspection of schools. We no longer need to stand in this House arguing about what standards the schools have, or the education system. It can never be said that the education system is not transparent. An independent Inspectorate inspects the schools and publishes a report. I can assure members and the public that if I or my ministry, or the education department had something to hide, we would not be putting inspectors in and publishing reports.

In 1998 and 1999 the following schools were inspected: St. Ignatious Prep and High School; Cayman Brac High; Savannah Primary; Creek Primary; Red Bay Primary; John Gray High School; Triple C; George Hicks. These inspections were published. We also requested that the schools do action plans on how they will deal with the problems in the school.

Action plans have been received from: Cayman Brac High; Creek Primary and there has been one follow up inspection report published on the Cayman Brac High School.

It would have been good for members of this House to have seen what the children can do in the arts. There is always talk about more culture. I think reference was made by the Third Elected Member for Bodden Town about no teaching of culture and civics. At the National Cultural Acts I think maybe 200 or 300 areas of visual art performed. They won certificates and plaques for performances in songs, dance, instrumental music, speech and art. That's one of the ways we have developed areas that are not directly the three R's, but are important to building the overall child.

In that 1998/99 Report, the Wesleyan Christian Academy won the prize for the school with the most music cups on Grand Cayman. Spot Bay Primary won for Cayman Brac. Along with this we have seen the annual Math and Science Exhibition. These create the competitive atmosphere so important for advancing the education system in this country.

Unlike some of the countries that were mentioned earlier where there exists a public education system and where up until a decade ago socialist policies had snuffed out some of the best private institutions in those countries, we have allowed the private schools to flourish and compete with government schools. It's only through a genuine competition that we can push the system and the schools to their max.

With the exception of maybe one member, I don't think members here saw the Math and Science Exhibition. Once again I should say that it was also held on Cayman Brac at the Aston Ruddy Centre. On Grand Cayman it was at the Harquail Centre. I would like to thank the British American Bank for sponsoring it.

The Mathematics Association formed in September 1998 . . . members are drawn from government and private primary and secondary schools, and meets monthly to discuss professional issues. I am raising this to show that the education system is alive, vibrant and up to date.

We have the annual Spelling Bee that places children in the schools against one another in this important area of the three R's. That was held in mid-November of 1999 with Carla Nyak of the Creek Primary taking first place, and Sherri Smith of George Town Primary taking second, and third place also going to George Town Primary. That was perhaps the best example of how a school which was once not of that high standard, where George Town Primary under the very able principalship it now has, has come into a first class school, which took two of the three top trophies in the annual Spelling Bee. We thank the Royal Bank of Canada for sponsoring this. Sometimes we don't appreciate how much the private sector assists education.

National Education Week is held annually. This year it was held from 15 to 20 November. The theme was "Let's celebrate reading—dive into books." Over 3,000 attended that fair at the Lions Centre. We thank the Lions for their assistance. If the education system was not open to improvement, we would not see this amount of enthusiasm in it.

The primary school band is another area where we expand beyond the three R's. It was established in October and is a tremendous success. We have many other programmes that have contributed to the well-rounded school child. We have a marine environment project that with the help of our teachers, the department of the environment and the United States National Aquarium has assisted in broadening the children's horizons. These are good.

[Inaudible interjections, and members' laughter]

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: They appear to be laughing matters, but they are important to the children.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Don't start that.

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: These are serious and important areas, especially in the Cayman Islands where we have such an important marine environment. It's important to the very existence of these islands.

The summer school programme for primary age students is partly sponsored by the education department, the parents and the business community. It's a joint partnership effort. It's facilitated by the education department's principals, teachers and special needs staff. It is conducted at various primary schools in Grand Cayman and Cayman Brac.

The major goals for the summer school programme are to provide varied educational experiences that will motivate students desire to learn the basic subject areas and to teach students specific learning strategies that will assist them in mastering and maintaining appropriate scales in reading, writing and problem-solving. The stress is placed on the three R's, but we cannot confine our children to those alone. We have to have the well-rounded child.

Over the past five years (started during this government's time) the programme has grown from strength to strength. In 1999, I am very happy to say it attracted 375 students. These are children who otherwise would not have had sufficient to do within the community. So the education system is doing its part in society.

But there are many, many complex components that make up what creates the problems in society. But I would just like to mention once again, for every child that falls by the wayside, there are probably another 200 good students. We have at some stage to acknowledge them because many times the stress is only put on a system when in fact we have 99% of the students who are dedicated. They take their education seriously and no praise or acknowledgement is given to the education system for that 99%. The whole system is attacked because of that 1% that fail.

There are other areas, such as the Commonwealth Essay Competition. This country competed with some 8,000 essays internationally. A child in the Cayman Islands won in one of the alphabetical categories. The standards are there. The performance of our young writers is there.

We must remember that here we have both the private and government schools competing against the rest of the Commonwealth. That is basically against one-third of the world. There are 50-odd countries in the Commonwealth, and one-third of the people in this world live in the Commonwealth.

An important part of the continuing development of education in this country is the annual education conference. It started during this government's time. It basically pulls teachers from private and public schools together. Its aim is to ensure that the human side of teaching remains current and is not lost. It puts together many educationalists from varied backgrounds, different schools, in workshops and at the conference. They can look at the problems, the successes, weigh the advantages against the disadvantages of the school system. I repeat: We have to remember there is a highly competitive school system with one-third of the students of this country in it taking part in the national education conference, but in the system as a whole.

We don't have what has prevailed in some of the Caribbean countries in the past under a socialist system where there is a sole system of education that is dominated by government. There's no way of telling what the standards are. The only way to do that is to keep the education system democratic, open, competitive and thus vibrant. With so many private schools in the education system it is very easy to compare standards, results and to ensure that the system is run in the best development of the country.

The theme this year was brought by a consultant out of California.

[Inaudible interjections]

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: Mr. Speaker, I think it's about time . . . I am wondering if we can adjourn. With your indulgence, may I ask that we stop here?

The Speaker: I would entertain a motion for the adjournment.

ADJOURNMENT

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: Mr. Speaker, I move the adjournment of this Honourable House until 10.00 AM, Wednesday.

The Speaker: The question is that this Honourable House do now adjourn until 10.00 AM, Wednesday, 21 June. Those in favour please say Aye. Those against, No.

AYES.

The Speaker: The Ayes have it.

AT 4.45 PM THE HOUSE STOOD ADJOURNED UNTIL 10.00 AM, WEDNESDAY 21 JUNE 2000.

EDITED WEDNESDAY
21 JUNE 2000
10.50 AM

[Prayers read by the Honourable Minister for Tourism, Commerce, Transport and Works]

The Speaker: Please be seated. The Legislative Assembly is in Session. Item number 2 on today's Order Paper, Reading by the Speaker of Messages and Announcements.

READING BY THE SPEAKER OF
MESSAGES AND ANNOUNCEMENTS

APOLOGIES

The Speaker: I have apologies for late attendance from the Honourable Third Official Member who will be arriving later this morning, and I have received apologies for absence from the Third Elected Member for Bodden Town, who is off the island on official business.

Item 3, Questions to Honourable Members/Ministers. Question No. 19 is standing in the name of the First Elected Member for West Bay.

QUESTIONS TO HONOURABLE
MEMBERS/MINISTERS

QUESTION 19

No. 19: Mr. W. McKeeva Bush to ask the Honourable Minister responsible for the Ministry of Tourism, Commerce, Transport and Works who decides what road works and other Government projects are undertaken in the district of West Bay.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Tourism, Commerce, Transport and Works.

Hon. Thomas C. Jefferson: Road Works: Routine scheduled maintenance such as grass cutting, verge clearing, pot-hole patching, stripping and signs' maintenance and drainage related activities are programmed by the Public Works Department Roads Section. These works are authorised by the Chief Engineer based upon the funding approved in the Budget for Roads Maintenance. These maintenance activities are required to preserve the capital investment in the road network.

Minor road repairs are treated as maintenance activities. This is because of the importance of keeping major roads functional at all times. Major road repairs to collector or access roads are treated as capital projects and are done on a district basis. Annual road visits are made by district Members of the Legislative Assembly, Public Works Department and the Ministry of Tourism, Commerce, Transport and Works to view which roads require work. The Public Works Department then compiles a report containing the estimates for each project, as well as a recommendation of which projects should be carried out.

Recommendations are based upon criteria such as importance of the project to traffic safety, drainage and number of residents affected. Following review of the report and consultation with the district Members of the Legislative Assembly, the Ministry of Tourism, Commerce, Transport and Works then authorises Public Works Department to carry out the road project.

Capital and Minor Works: Capital and minor works' building projects are proposed by controlling officers at Budget time and approved through the Budget process by Finance Committee.

Social Services Housing Assistance Programme: Requests for projects under the Social Services Housing Assistance Programme are assessed by the Social Services Department who then instruct Public Works Department which projects to proceed on.

Maintenance Projects: Public Works Department schedules maintenance activities on all Government buildings in West Bay with the exception of the West Bay Clinic which is maintained by the Hospital's facilities management section.

SUPPLEMENTARIES

The Speaker: The Third Elected Member for West Bay.

Mr. John D. Jefferson, Jr.: Can the honourable minister say how many district MLA road visits have been scheduled in the last two to three years?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Tourism, Commerce, Transport and Works.

Hon. Thomas C. Jefferson: I don't know if I can give the details as to which year it was, but ever since I have been responsible we have had road visits in Bodden Town, West Bay, and George Town. We have had consultations with the Member for East End and the Member for North Side, from a list of roadworks prepared by PWD and recommended by them. Those two Members of the Legislative Assembly decided to act from the programme work proposed and recommended by PWD. So we didn't make a road visit in North Side and East End in the last year. We haven't done it this year.

But, as a result of the decisions by the MLA from East End and the MLA from North Side to agree with the recommendations of PWD, road works were carried out in both districts in each year.

The Speaker: The Third Elected Member for West Bay.

Mr. John D. Jefferson, Jr.: More specifically, I wonder if the minister can say when the last visit was scheduled and who accompanied him, that is, on the visit to West Bay?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Tourism, Commerce, Transport and Works.

Hon. Thomas C. Jefferson: The recent visit to look at roads in the district of West Bay was taken from a number of requests made to the ministry and directly to PWD by some Members of the Legislative Assembly. When we scheduled the visit, we made various calls to Members of the Legislative Assembly. We left messages and were not successful in getting together. But, because we were moving on to the rainy season, we felt it was in the best interest to carry out the road visits to look at all the roads being suggested, both to the ministry and PWD, and have PWD do an estimate of each of these roads, and once that estimate is prepared we can come together with Members of the districts and decide on what roads should be done.

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for West Bay.

Mr. W. McKeeva Bush: Can the honourable minister say when he expects to get that list? And what time did he actually visit the district? What month?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Tourism, Commerce, Transport and Works.

Hon. Thomas C. Jefferson: To the best of my knowledge it was about one month ago. I expect to have the estimate from PWD . . . the officer concerned is off the island, but I expect to have it within the next fortnight.

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for West Bay.

Mr. W. McKeeva Bush: Can the honourable minister say if he intends to meet with the other representatives of West Bay to go through the list, not only on road works but on proposed buildings or capital expenditure for the district?

The Speaker: I would appreciate a motion for the suspension of Standing Order 23(7) & (8).

The Honourable Minister for Tourism, Commerce, Transport and Works.

SUSPENSION OF STANDING ORDER 23 (7) AND (8)

Hon. Thomas C. Jefferson: I move the suspension of Standing Order 23(7) & (8) to allow Question Time to continue.

QUESTION PUT: AGREED: STANDING ORDER 23(7) AND (8) SUSPENDED TO ALLOW QUESTION TIME TO CONTINUE BEYOND 11 AM.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Tourism, Commerce, Transport and Works.

Hon. Thomas C. Jefferson: I said in answer to the Third Elected Member of West Bay and the First Elected Member for West Bay quoted me correctly, that once the estimates are available on road works we will get together and decide which roads are to be done. We expect to have those estimates in a fortnight. The officer concerned is off the island at the moment. Other works within the district, buildings and other work, we will undertake to discuss as well.

The Speaker: The Third Elected Member for West Bay.

Mr. John D. Jefferson, Jr.: I have been here as a member for 12 years. The policy has always been when road visits are scheduled for the district that they are scheduled as conveniently as possible to ensure that all representatives of the districts are available. Now, the present minister has only been in that position for the past two years. I am concerned that a visit took place in West Bay when the First Elected Member for West Bay was off the island. I got a voicemail the morning of the scheduled visit.

Can the honourable minister give us an undertaking that if any future visits are scheduled that every effort will be made to include the other MLAs from the district of West Bay?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Tourism, Commerce, Transport and Works.

Hon. Thomas C. Jefferson: The undertaking being sought by the Third Elected Member of West Bay has always been my policy—that all members be present. We called on a number of occasions, for him particularly. My office called and left messages. When I discovered that we had not had any reply from him, I called myself and left a message to basically say that the visit was on for that day at a particular hour. I did not hear from him.

While it is important for all members to be present, if PWD and the ministry have suggested roads to visit, it's a matter of getting PWD to the site and also for them to carry out the estimates which then come back to the MLAs for discussion and approval. So, I was not aware at the time that the First Elected Member for West Bay had not returned to the island.

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for West Bay.

Mr. W. McKeeva Bush: Can the honourable minister say what is happening with street lighting in the community? There have been a number of requests—

The Speaker: I think that is somewhat outside of the ambit of this question. But if the minister wishes to, he may answer. The Honourable Minister for Tourism, Commerce, Transport and Works.

Hon. Thomas C. Jefferson: I am not in possession of all of the requests that have been made to the ministry, and what has been carried out. I can assure that member and any other who has made requests for street lighting, that those requests have been forwarded to PWD who then forwards them to CUC. What we can do is follow up to see when exactly CUC will be installing the lights. I understand they ran out of lights.

The Speaker: The Fourth Elected Member for George Town.

Dr. Frank McField: Can the honourable minister say, in relation to the street lights, if he has done anything to see if there are any lights on the Fairbanks Road next to the sporting complex and Bobby Thompson Way? It's very dark, and I think I did mention that to him at some point.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Tourism, Commerce, Transport and Works.

Hon. Thomas C. Jefferson: The request came to me from more than one MLA of George Town. I can assure the Fourth Elected Member for George Town that a request has been made. I agree because I travel that road on many occasions going to functions. It is dark. We have made the request. We will follow up.

The Speaker: Are there any further supplementaries? If not, we move on to question 20, standing in the name of the Second Elected Member for Bodden Town.

QUESTION 20

No. 20: Miss Heather D. Bodden to ask the Honourable Minister responsible for the Ministry of Agriculture, Communications, Environment and Natural Resources if, due to the fast growing Island-wide litter problem, Government would consider appointing a Litter Task Force to deal with this matter.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for Agriculture, Communications, Environment, and Natural Resources.

Hon. John B. McLean: The Department of Environmental Health is involved, on a daily basis, in the collection of litter. In fact, approximately CI$878,000 (according to output budgeting) is allocated to litter collection on an annual basis. This figure does not include the effort put into the clean-up of illegal dumps which occasionally is required.

The Department is also involved through the media in anti-litter campaigns and has made inroads through public education, especially in the schools, to counter the idea that littering is acceptable behaviour.

Nevertheless, the littering problem persists, although the Ministry has no information to support the premise that the problem is growing.

Other entities, such as special interest groups and the Chamber of Commerce, have come forward to aid in the fight against littering and these agencies are to be commended.

The Ministry and the Department of Environmental Health would be pleased to play an active role in establishing a task force to control litter and illegal dumping. This is a fight that we all must wage if we are to succeed in dissuading certain members of the public from spoiling our beautiful Islands.

SUPPLEMENTARIES

The Speaker: The Second Elected Member for Bodden Town.

Miss Heather D. Bodden: I would like to thank the honourable minister for that in-depth answer. Can the honourable minister say where the department is to date with the Zero Litter Tolerance 2000 programme put forward a few years ago?

Hon. John B. McLean: The department continues to work on the programme. As I mentioned earlier, we are working with the schools. We have the support of groups such as the Chamber of Commerce. We stand by what we said, and we are making every effort to make that a success.

The Speaker: The Fourth Elected Member for George Town.

Dr. Frank McField: I would like to ask the minister if it is the policy of PWD or those responsible for the Environmental Health to charge persons who complain their properties are being used as a dump half the money in order to clean up the property.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for Agriculture, Communications, Environment, and Natural Resources.

Hon. John B. McLean: There are fees in place for cleaning up of litter, for abandoned old cars, and cases where we have to go in and clean up other litter. I would say, yes.

The Speaker: The Fourth Elected Member for George Town.

Dr. Frank McField: One of my constituents, Mrs. Madonna Williams from Sounds and Things, whose mother, Annie Bodden, has some property in the Watler's Road area where people have been dumping, has made it known to me that Environmental Health is requiring that she pay half. Can the honourable minister give an undertaking to look into this matter?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for Agriculture, Communications, Environment, and Natural Resources.

Hon. John B. McLean: I would appreciate if the member would give me the full details on the matter and I will have it checked out.

The Speaker: The Elected Member for North Side.

Mrs. Edna M. Moyle: Can the honourable minister say how effective the legislation covering litter in these islands is? How many cases have we been able to bring before the courts? Can he outline the procedure for bringing someone who throws litter from their car window to court?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for Agriculture, Communications, Environment, and Natural Resources.

Hon. John B. McLean: There is legislation in place. Sad to say, there have not been too many cases where individuals have been prosecuted. It is my understanding that on one or two occasions individuals have been taken to court and charged. I really can't give an answer as to why people have not been prosecuted. I guess I would have to get that information directly from the police.

The Speaker: The Elected Member for North Side.

Mrs. Edna M. Moyle: Maybe I can enlighten the minister before I ask my next question, having been involved in picking up litter from the sides of the roads in my district for many years. One has to get the car license number, the time the incident took place, the window the arm was seen coming from and stop and pick up the piece of litter to be able to prosecute.

Can the honourable minister undertake to look at the litter laws of these islands with a view to bringing them in line?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for Agriculture, Communications, Environment, and Natural Resources.

Hon. John B. McLean: I have no problem with that undertaking. But it is a fact that until the general public exercises some civic pride in this country, neither the department, the police, the laws, the ministry, or anybody else will be able to curtail the problem we are faced with.

God knows that the Department of the Environment has been doing an outstanding job throughout the Cayman Islands. As far as manpower is concerned, they go beyond the line of duty. If a cleanup is carried out this week, just driving along the next week you will see that the garbage is back. So, until we have some civic pride in this country, I think we are in for a lot of problems.

The Speaker: The Elected Member for North Side.

Mrs. Edna M. Moyle: I know the Environmental Health Department does a fantastic job in trying to keep these islands clean. But I think one of the easiest ways to teach people civic pride is to hit them in the pocket. Maybe if we do get one or two prosecutions before the court with some heavy fines it may teach people that the country is serious about the litter problem.

The Speaker: Would you turn that into a question please?

Mrs. Edna M. Moyle: To turn that into a question . . . I guess it would go back to the honourable minister undertaking once again to have a serious look at the litter laws.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for Agriculture, Communications, Environment, and Natural Resources.

Hon. John B. McLean: Thank you. I have given the undertaking.

QUESTIONS 21, 22 AND 23 DEFERRED

The Speaker: Are there any further supplementaries? If not, questions 21, 22 and 23 are standing in the name of the Third Elected Member for Bodden Town who is off the island on official business. I request a member to move a motion to have these deferred to a later sitting.

The First Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Given the circumstances, I so move that these questions be deferred until a later sitting when the member returns.

The Speaker: In accordance with Standing Order 23 (3), a motion has been moved that these questions be deferred to a later sitting. Is there a seconder?

The Second Elected Member for Bodden Town.

Miss Heather D. Bodden: I so move.

QUESTION PUT: AGREED: QUESTIONS NOS. 21, 22 AND 23 DEFERRED UNTIL A LATER SITTING.

The Speaker: That concludes Question Time for this morning. Moving on to item 4, Other Business, Private Members' Motions. Private Member's Motion No.

14/2000, Public Education System, continuation of debate thereon.

The Honourable Minister responsible for Education, Aviation, and Planning, continuing.

OTHER BUSINESS

PRIVATE MEMBERS' MOTIONS

PRIVATE MEMBER'S MOTION NO. 14/00

PUBLIC EDUCATION SYSTEM

Hon. Truman M. Boddén: When I spoke on Friday I started to deal with what had been accomplished in the area of education. I would like to develop that further by going back to where education has really come from, so that we can understand the position today in relation to where we have come from, and the heights we have reached in education.

I think it is important to the people of this country to see that education has been developing, not in the alleged ad hoc manner, but that the foundation of the modern education we have today has been painstakingly laid over a number of years by a number of governments.

I believe that when we look at the history of education and we look at where this country has reached in relation to other countries in the surrounding area, we can be very proud of the system of education.

Mr. Speaker, this motion seems to call for a review, a prioritised plan for education and we have reviewed the education system three times since 1990. Also, in 1993 for the National Education Plan and 1999 for the revised National Education Plan 2000 - 2005. To a lesser extent, it has been reviewed in the education strategy of Vision 2008.

Mr. Speaker, we know where the weaknesses of the education system lie, and we have put measures in place to counteract as many of these problems as we are experiencing.

Mr. Speaker, it is naïve to blame all the problems of youth on the education system. Many broad charges of a failing system have been made, but the people know the quality of education in these islands, and they know that by far the large majority of our students will be outstanding citizens of our community when they leave school.

Mr. Speaker, every community has some percentage of its citizens who do not become productive. Cayman is no exception to that. Every country has those problems but the duty of education, the duty of Social Services, the duty of the youth policies and the related policies must be to do everything within the joint power of Government and this Legislative Assembly to keep these numbers small.

Mr. Speaker, at present, we provide after-school programmes. We provide a range of extra-curricular activities. We provide summer school. We provide parenting classes for adults. We provide education for young parents. The government has assisted in the creation of a National PTA/HAS. The government provides counselling programmes, after-school programmes at all schools. There are drug awareness programmes provided by government, by QUEST and more recently by DARE. There are life skill programmes. There is moral and religious education, the service clubs, the churches, the youth clubs, CoDAC and society itself provides a vast range of programmes to assist young people.

We know much is left to be done, but we have done everything from the education side and from the Government side to assist all children, all youth in becoming outstanding and upstanding citizens of our community. The children who want to, can be involved in an ever increasing number of sports and the other activities I have just named. I don't think you will find a wider range or better managed activities in any other country.

Mr. Speaker, there are a few students who do drop out of mainstream society and we provide a safety net through the Social Services Department. What a young man or young lady decides to do with his or her life is largely a matter of motivation and attitude. We can work with students in these areas. They are not solely influenced by schools but by all areas that impact on a student's life—the physical, the emotional, and the social, some areas over which the schools have little control if any.

I guess, one of the difficulties that not only I as Minister of Education but I believe other Ministers of Education have faced, is that education is one of those areas where everyone is an expert. This is not unique to Cayman and it is true I am sure in many countries. I am not just talking about this House, let me just make that clear.

As Minister, I have to rise above the conflicting theories I get either from this House or from elsewhere and look analytically at where the problems really lie cutting through persons and their pet programmes. Until we see where the problems are then the solutions cannot be provided for them.

The education system was reviewed in 1990 by Mr. James Porter, CBE, and following this, a team from the University of the West Indies (UWI), which the United Nations Development Programme (UNDP) funded and which was composed of Dr. Brooms[?] and Miss Unipal[?]. With the help of local educators, [they] put together an implementation plan, which would put in place the Porter recommendations and which had in the main been accepted by the Government of the day—I was not in government at the time, sir. I guess, unfortunately, many good plans run aground when it comes to implementation and this is what happened to many of the good recommendations produced by Mr. Porter.

The implementation plan that was put together by the UWI team was unwieldy impractical and expensive. That is what I inherited in 1992. However, I realise that the Porter review, the document was a good document in many respects. And I had a duty of finding a practical way to implement the recommendations. To do so, not just because it may have been from experts but because I felt it was the right thing for the students of the Cayman Islands and would not just be solutions that were lifted or imported from abroad. In other words, it had practical applications to the Cayman Islands.

In 1993, faced with the prospect of finding a new examination system (because the one that we were then following the GCSE was changing), I took a team of ministry and education department staff on a fact finding tour to the Bahamas, Bermuda, and to two examining boards in the United Kingdom—the United Kingdom Cambridge Local Examinations Syndicate, and the Welsh Joint Examination Board. It was during the time in Bermuda that we learned about the Cambridge Strategic Model, which they had recently introduced. We decided to investigate this further as a possible way forward for implementing what I saw then as an implementation dilemma.

At that time what we did was to ask the Heads of Department at the two secondary schools to decide on the option of which examining body they wished to use. This resulted in some opting for the Caribbean Examination Council (CXC), which started in 1995, and some for the GCSE.

Mr. Speaker, I believe that history has proven and will continue to prove that the development plan of 1995 to 1999, the National Education Plan, was the most significant step for education in the last fifty years because for the first time, the Ministry, the Department of Education, and the schools, were all heading in the same direction.

This is a policy document. Its mission, objectives and its strategies and action plans divided into three phases were agreed by the people within the education system, the public, the government and by this Honourable House. This type of sectorial plan (which, incidentally, has been rolled over for another five years) has become the Education Plan 2000 - 2005. It was the first in the history of the Cayman Islands and it became the forerunner of many other good strategic sectorial five-year plans produced after that.

Its emphasis on partnership, I would like to stress, opened the doors of our schools to parents and the wider community, and it created a culture of stakeholders where parents were accepted as having rights and responsibilities in overseeing the education of their children. The National Education Plan and its new plan, the revised National Education Plan 2000 - 2005, is one that has set clearly the policies that have been accepted by the parents, teachers, educators, and by the public as a whole. So, there can be no doubt that there is clearly in place a National Education Plan for this country acceptable to this House, acceptable to the people of the country, and it clearly sets out the time lines as it shows there is a beginning date for implementation, a time when it is to be finished and who will carry out the action plan and how much will it cost. Those four ingredients bring precision to this policy document.

Mr. Speaker, what we did next was establish (by policy, again) that each school site would develop site based management plans, which would translate the National Education Plan for that school's individual site. And by the end of this year, each of our schools will have developed their own site plans. Many of the schools are already well into implementation. I believe that if you were to ask teachers if they preferred working in the school before the National Education Plan or working there after the plan, there is no doubt that they would respond overwhelmingly that our schools have improved as a result of sharpening our focus and concentrating on the agreed platform for action as set out by the National Education Plan.

Mr. Speaker, what I think this motion is calling for could well lie in the new strategy—strategy 10, which has been added to the National Strategic Plan and which I would like to just deal with at this stage. I read the strategy earlier, it says, “We will create dynamic learning environments which will guarantee life-long independent learners in a globally competitive society.” There are a number of action plans, and once again, I stress as this motion has set out and naturally in this specific plan which has just come into effect . . . the columns that I am referring to will not yet have been filled, but in strategies 1 - 9 we will find that they have already been updated and many of them are already on the way.

What an action plan has in it are action steps. Firstly, there is the specific object of the action plan and this is, strategy 10, plan number one, “To establish policies that will drive the implementation of the National Education Plans towards effecting the strategy.” That then sets out the action steps and following that is a column for who it is assigned to, the starting date, the due date and the date of completion. So, the precision that is asked for in this motion has clearly set out the policy in the area of education. There is a prioritisation within the plan itself and as I mentioned not as a motion has asked, the costs are included in the plan and the timing of implementation which deals with the starting date, the due date and the completed date.

These are updated annually with the exception of one year when Vision 2008 was being dealt with. There have been three updates already on this five-year plan and a new plan has been produced with a new action plan. This is somewhat long but it sets out a cost benefit analysis with the tangible, the intangible and that is done on each of the action plans.

So, there can be no doubt that we have in place a clear policy. We have the specific dates for implementation and on the vast majority of the action plans, which there are 105 in the strategies, 1 to 9 and then there is a further addition of strategy 10 that I referred to earlier. This, by the way, came out of Vision 2008 and this is what the planning team developed.

Moving on to facilities that have been carried on, the physical side in conjunction with this five-year National Education Plan, the following projects have been completed:

- The construction of the teachers' centre in Cayman Brac.
- Construction of the staff room, the principal's office and one classroom at West End Primary School.
- Construction of a two-classroom block at Creek Primary School.
- Construction of the school hall and hurricane shelter at the John A. Cumber School.
- Construction of a library, staff room and administrative suite at the John A. Cumber School.
- Construction of a lovely four classroom block at the George Town Primary.
- Construction of the administration block at the Red Bay Primary School.
- Construction of two additional classrooms at the Red Bay Primary School.
- Construction of the school athletic field at the Red Bay Primary.
- Construction of four classrooms at Savannah Primary.
- A bus shelter at Bodden Town Primary.
- Construction of a two-classroom block at the East End Primary.
- Construction of exterior wall and parking lot at the North Side Primary.
- Construction of a three-room art block at the George Hicks High School.
- Construction of new changing facility for physical education at the George Hicks High School.
- Construction of a purpose built kitchen at the George Hicks High School.
- Air conditioning of the hall at the George Hicks.
- Air conditioning of the Islay Conolly Hall at the John Gray High School
- Air conditioning of the school hall at John Gray High School.
- Most important, the air conditioning of all primary schools in Grand Cayman and Cayman Brac.

A tremendous amount of work has been done on the physical side and a lot of money spent. And I would like to thank the Government and Members of this House for supporting me on these projects.

I will go on to give an update on where we are with the other projects that are being carried out at this time. The schools have never in this history of these islands been better. We have ample and good physical school buildings. There is sufficient furniture and supplies, at least in the last five years. Teachers always remind me of the days when there was not sufficient supplies in the schools. We have increased transportation and we are even going further with that in areas relating to seating on the buses. There can be no doubt that the government schools of this country are in far better condition, physical condition included, and the best resourced in the Caribbean and elsewhere.

Work on the National Curriculum has continued. It was started in 1996 with 75% of the core subjects being completed in 1999. We are nearly there. I agree, as the First Elected Member for George Town mentioned, there have been some delays. I accept that. I do my best. But in this world, nothing is perfect. We are not perfect in here. There will be delays. But the important thing is that we move on in a proper way to upgrade and develop the school system.

We also completed development of the pre-school curriculum guide, a very important aspect. Unless we get a good base for the pre-schoolers, they will be less prepared to enter primary school. Those who have had a good pre-school curriculum fit better and improve quicker in the classes. We introduced the Spelling Bee Competition, and continued excellence in the National Children's Festival of the Arts.

We have also seen the introduction of the Week of the Young Child, all during the last few years, and expansion of the Book Fair to an all day event. We've had the development of learning packets in Years 1 - 6 for Cayman Social Studies. There's talk that we must in-grain in our children the history and culture of our own country, and we've gone a long way with that. We have seen increased numbers of music teachers at both the primary and secondary level. It is really good to hear the many bands that we now have within the schools. Four or five years ago it was nearly unheard of for government schools to have bands and music to the extent we now have.

Much has been done. Delays are not intentional. There are times when they are unforeseeable, or things take a bit longer. But when we look at this honourable House, the highest forum in the land, we get delays too. They are unforeseeable. It is a fact of life. But, I admit to the First Elected Member for George Town that there are delays at times. I admit that the system is not perfect—but it's good. Our aim is to improve the system.

The Speaker: Honourable Minister, can I interrupt you for just one moment? Is it the will of the House that we waive the morning break and continue until 12.45? Or do you want to take the break now?

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: Can we maybe have ten minutes, because I have been speaking for a length of time.

The Speaker: If we could go on to 12.45 and then take the luncheon break, waiving the morning break.

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: Sure, if it's your wish we can just go on. That's good.

The Speaker: Thank you. Please continue.

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: One plank of the national education policy recommended nearly ten years ago by Dr. James Porter, was the establishment of the School Inspectorate. I can tell you we are very proud of our Inspectorate. We are proud to see that a highly qualified Caymanian, Mrs. Mary Rodriguez, will be heading it starting in August.

I would like to take this opportunity to thank Mr. Victor Greene, CBE, our Chief Inspector, for a job well done, and for the fact that he has prepared and trained not only his replacement, Mrs. Rodriguez, but a cadre of occasional inspectors which will assist with the demanding inspection programme for both public and private schools.

I would like to say something about how this inspection works. It must be understood that it is not a matter of the inspectors going into the schools, merely saying what's right and wrong and leaving it at that. I would like to table a page to show an example of the action plan for the Cayman Brac High School that was developed by the principal and his staff following their inspection last year. So, it's not a matter of going in, as is sometimes thought, and just looking at the problems, coming back and reporting on the problems. It is one of assisting the school to fix the problems.

When the Inspectorate finds the problems, they ask the school to produce an action plan. This system is now advanced to a stage where . . . I will lay on the Table of this Honourable House a copy of one page of the action plan.

The Speaker: So ordered.

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: That, first of all, relates to teaching. And the action point that's referenced, "To provide more challenging teaching and work which is matched to the needs of all pupils."

There are columns for response, a time scale, who is to do it, the resources, the benefits. The response to that action point was "To review the scheme of work to include a full range of teaching strategies including IT, independent work, problem-solving, research techniques; Time scale: December 1999; Who will carry it out? All staff. Resources: meeting time, photocopy costs; Benefits: more motivated students/improved student scores."

The next response, "All schemes are worked to identify extension and support activities; . . . Benefits: lesson time more effective, and more appropriate work; Response: introduce targets in effective use of time limits in all lessons; Time scale: Easter 1999; Benefits: all staff; Clocks in rooms, faster lesson pace. Use of task list for students; Benefits: students will always have work and progression will be seen by students: Response: portfolios of excellence and examples of graded work to enable students to accurately assess their own work: Benefits: able students will be challenged, students will identify why specific grade is awarded enabling comparison with their own work and how to improve it; Response: make explicit aims and objectives for each lesson; Benefits: students will be aware of work to be achieved; Response: published levels of achievements within subjects so students and staff can set targets for improvement; Time scale: starting January 1999: Who will implement it: HODs; Resources: photocopy costs; Benefits: all students know how grades are awarded and how to improve."

This clearly shows that we are not dealing with an ad hoc system. We have a clear policy in place. The implementation is clearly set out.

The question of what standards exist in the schools of this country and where we have gone with the education policies have been clearly set out by the independent Inspectorate. We have inspected seven schools. Some private schools have also been inspected by the Inspectorate. Following the rule of transparency, no one can challenge the school system and say it is not transparent. We have seen where the reports are given to the parents and teachers. The reports are made public. If I, as minister, or the ministry of education or the department, had anything to hide, would we put independent inspectors in there and tell them to publish their reports? No. We would have done what had been done in the past—no Inspectorate, therefore no reports.

We have put beyond a doubt what the standards of education in this country are. And we are proud to publish it. It shows not only the strengths, but it also shows the weaknesses. One of the most important things with a body like a school inspectorate is that it puts beyond a doubt the talking and the rhetoric and the assumptions and presumptions within this House and in the public as a whole. If anyone wants to know the standards of the schools in this country, there's an inspection report. It goes to the parents and the teachers. It is nothing that is swept under the carpet.

We have a good system of education. Until a system is mature it cannot bear itself to the public, showing its strengths and weaknesses, and most important here is how the problems will be fixed. I have no doubt that even when those problems are fixed the Inspectorate team will go back and look at things again. But, they will go in a constructive way, not the destructive way we see so many times in politics.

I feel that we have nothing whatever to hide in education or in the schools. One of the things I know annoys one member, who is not here and on vacation, . . . I would just like to read something about the importance of the school Inspectorate, the importance of any Inspectorate. In the Caymanian Compass Editorial of 24 November 1999, headed "A Quiet Revolution." It said: "Last month with very little fanfare, reports on three local schools assembled by the School's Inspectorate were released to the public."

"The Inspectorate, a wholly independent branch of the Ministry of Education, came into operation in 1997, its job to monitor and report on educational standards in Cayman. The publication of the Inspectorate's first three reports, for distribution to the schools and parents, is a highly significant moment in the history of education in the islands."

"The ministry had a choice to publish or not, and, to its great credit, chose to do so. Going public with the strengths and weaknesses of local schools is an admirably positive step towards transparency and accountability within the education system. It has meant that, for the first time ever, objective and independent assessments of standards at local schools are available to parents. That is information that all parents and guardians in every country deserve—or perhaps have the right—to have, but too often do not.

“Publication of the reports establishes the honesty of the Ministry of Education, gives much credibility to its stated aim of raising educational standards, and encourages trust between the Ministry and parents.

“Now the reports have been published, the schools are using their own self-assessment reports in conjunction with the Inspectorate reports to produce action plans. The purpose of these will be to bolster areas which have been identified as weak. The Inspectorate is to monitor the implementation of the action plans, and each school will continue to evaluate its own work on a regular basis.

“If staff at the schools concerned can remain motivated to see through their action plans in the coming months, it seems likely that real improvement in standards will quickly follow.

“It remains to congratulate the Inspectorate staff for carrying out its mandate with such thoroughness and professionalism. The Inspectorate reports—detailed, concise, and objective as they are—provide an extremely valuable framework for upgrading the quality of education in the Cayman Islands.”

That summarises not only the honesty of the education ministry, but we have gone public with these inspection reports. Therefore, there can be no doubt—regardless of what anyone in this House, including me, may say—the education system of this country has been evaluated, it has gone public. There can be no doubt that we have a good system that is totally transparent.

They carried it even further. I requested an inspection of the education department. What more can I do? Yet, the system of education continues to be attacked or criticised not just inside this House, but outside as well. There seems to be a view as this private member's motion states, that we have not delivered policy in the education system. What more can be done? We have put the policy in place. We have put in an independent Inspectorate to evaluate it.

One of the problems with education is that there are no instant results in many instances, no vast majority of quick fixes. We are dealing with human beings, teachers, parents and students. Not everybody agrees on the same course of action at the same time. Change is not easy. We have brought in a tremendous amount of change, but in a co-ordinated way, a way where those involved are stakeholders. There's a partnership between the different sectors of the education system. We are dealing with 14 schools, over 400 teachers and some 5,000 students.

I will say it's not easy at times. Teachers are professionals. That is why, with the going into the ten year run of the education plan, it has seen the test of time. They know that when we find problems in it, it will be reviewed and we endeavour to fix it.

But the policy framework for education has been in place since 1994. At this stage, I can produce no more policy than I have produced. Its 105 action plans together with another 23 new action plans with the new strategy. We have policy running out of our ears! It is updated annually.

We now have a new rolled over education plan for 2000 to 2005. As far as policy goes, it speaks for itself—it's public. I think the public will have to decide for themselves. But I know the public is happy in most respects with that policy because it was put together by the public. It's not something produced by me, my ministry or my department. It has been a partnership.

The Third Elected Member for Bodden Town spoke on the importance of early childhood education. I strongly endorse that. I am very pleased that the Education Council during my tenure as minister and chairman developed guidelines for the regulation of pre-schools, and that the Education Department, with the help of the Early Childhood Association produced an early education curriculum guide.

Cayman is actually a founding member of the Caribbean Early Childhood Education Association. Each year teachers from our pre-schools and the operators of them go to the regional conference. The ministry provides a budget to assist them in that, so we are committed to training pre-school teachers and to ensuring that the highest standards are maintained so that children are given a good start in life.

I can agree with the statement made by the First Elected Member for George Town and the Third Elected Member for Bodden Town that improvements need to be made. I admit that. That is why I published (I shouldn't say “I published,” the Inspectorate published) the reports of the schools. And, as stated in the Caymanian Compass, I agreed for them to go public.

I also agree that we need to ensure that all graduates go into post secondary or into meaningful work. The National Education Plan has that as one of its objectives. But, education is not something that is just changed overnight. Let us look at some of the strides we have made. You will see that we have made very good inroads into producing a more educated workforce.

Over 80% of the approximately 2000 students who attended Community College this year were Caymanians. We can't say we don't have students furthering their education and preparing themselves for the workplace. Over 80% . . . quite a large amount. And these are both young and mature students.

We have heard a call for a technical school or college. Some people have called for better technical and vocational courses at our high schools. We heard the First Elected Member for George Town suggest that we are better off concentrating on technical and vocational subjects when students still have the discipline provided by the high schools, or words to that effect. There are many and diverse schools of thought on technical and vocational education. And different countries approach it in different ways.

I believe that one of the main issues is not just technical and vocational education, but also attitudes and motivation. We find that some students have no interest in math. But this does not mean that we can give them a curriculum that has no math in it and just concentrate on what they prefer. The three R's are the foundation to subsequently moving out in either the technical/vocational, the arts or otherwise. It is not just applying an interest-based education for all. We have chosen a comprehensive education because how many times on the floor of this House have we had the question raised? If we form a technical and vocational school we begin to split society.

I don't think that is good. We have a comprehensive system. All children move through the schools and there is no division. The first time that happens, we will hear that some children are going onto the equivalent of public schools and others will be in the vocational and technical schools and it may cause a rift within society. The decision on a comprehensive school wasn't made by me. It was made many, many years ago, the reason being that it keeps society cohesive.

To just talk about an interest based education for all, I think has to be not correct. We have to have what is necessary for students to reach their full potential. What I understand is that the professionals have recommended that students need a curriculum that is relevant to their lives, hopes and aspirations. That is the challenge that we are facing today and which we are addressing.

This was brought out by the public in the Vision 2008 pole when they stated that they wanted students to be equipped with 21st Century life skills, to be lifelong earners, guaranteed computer literate with technology understanding.

It is not correct to say that we don't have computers in primary schools. Computers are in all primary schools. IT is in all primary schools, not just the high schools. The private sector needs a workforce with the right skills and attitudes that are literate and numerate, who know how to think for themselves and how to learn. This is the thrust of the new education strategy. The policy on the new curriculum for high schools, which we are going to be developing next year, bears this out.

We need to use all the resources at our disposal. More particularly in the last three years of high school, we need to ensure that every student is literate, numerate and understands technology. I believe that one of the keys to this will be with the teachers. The teachers combined with the facilities, equipment, computers, are what will bring the results. What the House will see as policy on computers is that every three dollars spent in the area of computers, one dollar will be spent to train teachers.

In his Throne Speech, the Governor spoke about the P3 Initiative launched by DVID in the Caribbean. We will shortly be launching our own version of this education and training coalition. I look forward to the support of the House in this important area.

The Third Elected Member for Bodden Town spent some time stressing that he is a qualified teacher, and that it was important that education have good professionals; and that we who are involved also understand education. I accept that the member is a qualified teacher. That's good. It's good to have qualified teachers in this House. But, it is also important to bear in mind that many others of us who have lectured, as I have, at a much higher level, also understand what education is all about.

Those who appreciate and understand education are those who have taken advantage of education themselves. They have sought high qualifications and have worked hard to get those qualifications. I commend the Third Elected Member for Bodden Town, but I must also say that I have attained degrees through a lot of toil and sweat. I appreciate education because nearly 11 years after I finished high school were spent in further educating myself in very good institutions. I not only took advantage of education, as did the Third Elected Member for Bodden Town, but I can appreciate education. Like him, I am extremely well educated.

I don't take issue with him on that matter, just to say that education . . . I agree with what he has said. It's important to have it to fully appreciate what education means.

Mr. Speaker, I have actually just about lost my voice. I know we are ten minutes short, but maybe we could begin ten minutes earlier and just take a break now, please.

The Speaker: Certainly. We shall suspend for lunch until 2.15 pm.

PROCEEDINGS SUSPENDED AT 12.34 PM

PROCEEDINGS RESUMED AT 2.48 PM

The Speaker: Please be seated. Debate continues on Private Member's Motion 14/00. The Honourable Minister responsible for Education, Aviation, and Planning, continuing.

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: I would like to deal with another area that relates to a statement made by the Third Elected Member for Bodden Town. I don't remember his exact words, but he was worried about illiteracy and the Cayman Islands. I want to quote from the Pan American World Health Organization (PAHO) "Basic Indicators 1998." This clearly shows that as at 1995 (which is the most recent one we have) the Cayman Islands had 98% literacy. That is one of the highest we will find, not just in the Caribbean but anywhere in the world. The literate population in 1995 was 95%.

This goes to show that it's quite easy to make sweeping statements. I think people will accept that we have a high level of literacy. These are PAHO facts, an international body. We have 98% literacy. So, to say we are worried about literacy in the population . . . like I said, it's one of the highest in the world. We do strive for 100%.

Another area I would like to address is what one of the members read from the Youth Report. And this was only a draft report put out to the public. It stated that 24% of students entering Year 10 in 1996 did not graduate. When we look at that, we find that of the 294 at John Gray, eligible for graduation in 1996, ten transferred to the transition unit and six transferred to CIMI. They have separate completions for their students. That left 278 students eligible. Of this class, 17 students dropped out, five were expelled, one was dropped for a total of 23. An additional 24 students completed Year 12, but failed to meet graduation requirements.

I need to explain that the requirements for graduation go beyond meeting the requirements that relate to some areas, like people who have missed a lot of days and may need to make those up. But they have done reasonably well. Therefore, out of that alleged 24%, the actual number of non-completions was 8.27%. I just state this to show that the draft report on youth is a draft. It's dealing with specific areas such as education where there can be variations. I don't want to go into a lot of detail on that, but something was also mentioned about how many students went on for high training.

In fact, we find that out of a total enrollment in the secondary schools of 616 students, 305 went on to tertiary education, which represents 18.9%. That's a very high percentage.

We also know that students from the government schools have consistently been first in the Caribbean in CXC most years. We had an example where one child from the Red Bay Primary School actually won the Commonwealth Essay Competition throughout the Commonwealth—one-third of the population of the world, 50-odd countries. There can be no doubt that the standards are there. Yes, there are some children who need a lot more attention and we are endeavouring to give that. I don't have the statistics on that, but while on this I would like to show that we have also done a fair amount in the area of technical and vocational courses.

Offered at the Community College for either young or adult students, there are some 2000 students enrolled. Out of that 80% are Caymanians. So they are taking advantage of this. The ministry in collaboration with the two colleges and also the Law School has been working towards the creation of a learning society where lifelong learning is given priority. We have given scholarships to just about every child who is able to qualify under the guidelines.

We are very proud that unlike most other countries, we offer a space at the Community College to every student who has the basic admission requirement. Foundation courses in math and English are in place to assist those with deficiencies in those subjects. Once successfully completed a full time space is given at the College. During the academic year 66% of the 2000 students were over 20 years of age. This is good because it shows that we are looking at mature students joining younger students.

The College works with local public sector organisations in the introduction of many new courses and programmes. I agree with what the First Elected Member for George Town stated about the importance of vocational education. We find that the Cayman Islands enjoy much more economic prosperity than many of the other islands. But also, we have over employment to a very high degree since about half the workforce is not Caymanian. We find that people can get a job even if they don't advance themselves, and that is sometimes a disadvantage. I guess that's where economic prosperity doesn't have such a good effect on society as a whole, as it does on individuals.

I believe that this motion is really looking deeply into these areas and therefore, I would like to set out areas of achievement, but also to deal with areas of weaknesses in it. It is correct that the College had to cancel some vocational programmes because students were not enrolling in the programmes. However, despite the cancellations, the College works very closely with the local high schools to stimulate interests in these programmes. They go about it in this way: College staff speaks at school assemblies, and to small groups at each school. Students are invited to the College where additional information is supplied. The College has an open day where parents and students are invited to the Campus to have discussions with faculty and staff. The Community College is willing to collaborate with all sections of Caymanian society to offer courses and programmes as long as there is a need, that is at least six interested students.

I think the recent stress put on the new programme for training teachers is one that will assist us in putting more Caymanian teachers in the schools.

At present we have the following programmes offered at the College in the vocational and technical areas:

- Construction Technology: woodwork, joinery, and CAD
- Electrical Technology: wiring, electronics, drawing
- Hospitality Studies: Front office, food service
- Life Skills and Sanitation
- Computing Certificate: Accounting, Word Processing, Data Processing, Spread Sheet
- Accounting Certificate: Bookkeeping, accounts, computing, financial accounting, cost accounting computerised accounts

Even courses offered at Community College:

- Woodwork
- Electrical installation
- Electronics
- Drawing
- CAD
- Plumbing
- Air-conditioning
- Refrigeration

- Basic English and Maths
- Word Processing
- Data Processing
- Spread Sheet
- Accounting

The professional programmes offered there (more advanced certificates)

- Foundation banking certificate (which has 62 students, which is quite good as this is one of the main areas of our economy)
- Legal Secretary Certificate (which presently has 24 students)
- Banking Diploma
- A+ in Computing
- MSCSE (Microsoft Certified Systems Engineer, with 52 pupils)

Turning to the vocational and technical area of the motion, the Education Department has responded to the issue of vocational education raised at a Youth Conference, as well as in Vision 2008. The Chief Education Officer visited three sites in the United Kingdom to gain firsthand information regarding their new vocational efforts.

In the UK, as mentioned by the Third Elected Member for Bodden Town, The General National Vocational Qualification (GNVQ) was piloted through specific programmes since 1996, and expanded in 1997 to the year 2000. But it is not yet in full operation in the UK. It is being looked at. If this seems to be an area that we should move into, then we can move in that area when the UK has it at a more advanced stage. There were three levels under that: Foundation level (14 to 16 year olds); Intermediate (16 to 17 year olds); and Advanced (17 to 19 year olds).

That scheme, along with a programme in the United States is being studied with the intent of implementing additional vocational courses with external qualification. In the schools at present, we have the following vocational and technical courses offered. These are at CXC level: Child care, Food and Nutrition, and Technical drawing. Also the subject of woodwork, which is Certificate of Education, and graphical and material studies is also COE. Information technology is Cambridge and CXC, and Business Studies at the COE level and CXC, and also Auto mechanics at COE.

There are presently vocational and technical areas. However, I am prepared to admit that we obviously have to do much more in this area. I believe that coming out of the visits to the UK and US we will find a better way forward extending the vocational and technical courses already in place in the schools and in the College. I would like to stress that it is so important that the three R's be taught, because without a basic foundation in math and English, it is somewhat difficult to advance students.

I would now like to move on to deal with current status of capital projects. I think the motion is wide enough to also deal with that. It specifically talks about the . . .

Spotts Primary: Target opening date is September 2001. At present the CPA approved the site on 23 February 2000 and an official letter with conditions has been received. The land purchase process is underway at Lands and Survey. The drawings and specifications are 99% complete. The bill of quantities should be completed by now, and the construction will then move on as soon as an award can be done in relation to the contract. We have an approved budget of $9.2 million for that.

Boatswain Bay Primary: Target opening date is September 2002. The construction is set to start in June 2001 with completion targeted for June 2002. The budget is $9.2 million approved by Finance Committee.

Lighthouse School: The target opening date for the complete school is now April 2001. There's an approved amount of $7.6 million.

Red Bay Primary Assembly Hall: Likely to be opened in October of this year. That budget of $1.5 million has been approved.

Secondary School: Target opening date is September 2003. Design start for September this year, and construction to hopefully be started June 2001. The design brief is being prepared by the consultant and the draft is due anytime now.

East End Primary: Classroom block completed.

George Hicks High School: Hall converted to cafeteria and kitchen. Construction has been handed over to Education. Operational date, while ready now, is in the next school year.

Alternative Education Facility: Target opening date on hold due to the loss of the site to the women's prison. The budget is $1.4 million.

Savannah School: Addition of four new classrooms, to open in the new September term, with construction to be completed in mid-August of this year.

Bodden Town Primary: We had $250,000 for extending classrooms. We found that could not come about. The move is to put in four classrooms to be operational for the school year in 2001.

We have an approved budget of $1.1 million for the administration building at George Hicks and on the new library block, the completion date for the project definition document (not the building) is July 2000. I answered a question on Sunrise Adult Training Centre, so I don't need to go into that. So we have an up-to-date position with the times, the budgets in relation to the physical aspects of the schools.

The motion as it presently reads states, "BE IT THEREFORE RESOLVED that the Minister of Education, acting under his constitutional responsibility to deliver policy in the area of education, set out a properly prioritised plan, including costs and specific timing of implementation to address the present needs in the public education system." We have shown that there is policy in the area of education, that we have a properly prioritised plan; we have the costs, the timing. I think the motion is looking at a specific area. I don't believe the motion is really attempting to say there is no education plan in place. It is saying that more needs to be done in some specific areas.

I hope that during the long debate that I know will go on this, I will have an opportunity to discuss the possibility of making the motion more specific. But in the form it presently is, I cannot accept that we do not have policy in place, and that we do not have a plan. I have gone into an update on the physical side. I remain with an open mind on the motion. Hopefully we can look at specific areas.

As I mentioned, there has been a lot done in education over the last six years or so. In summary, we have in place a national education plan that has been revised on three occasions; it's a plan accepted by this House and carries the policy, the prioritisation, the cost, who is to do it. I am not saying that every action plan has all of those details worked out, but most do. There are over 105 action plans in the nine strategies. That has just been revised and rolled over as the National Education Plan 2000 - 2005. It therefore is now giving the ten-year extension of the 1995 plan.

With a policy revised annually with the new strategy 10 coming on line, which I think when viewed by members of this House they will appreciate that it relates to areas this motion goes into. It deals with creating a dynamic learning environment that will guarantee lifelong independent learners in a globally competitive society. That is something we all have to look carefully at. It was asked for in the Vision 2008 strategy and it is something that we are working on.

I don't think that too much criticism can be levelled at the achievement in many areas of education. There are areas where we need to do more work. I accept that. I am open to those specific areas and how to best deal with them. I think strategy 10 will go a long way towards dealing with them.

The schools are resourced. We have compulsory education in the high schools of this country. Many countries within the Caribbean do not necessarily have compulsory high school education. I have shown that the level of literacy in this country by PAHO is 98%, a very high percentage for any country. But, yes, we must do what we can to deal with the 2% of illiteracy.

We have also seen that the education standards in this country are no longer open to either debate by me having to state what they are, or any other member of this House or of the public. There will be criticism. Education is one of the most earthly and important things in any society. There will always be differing views. All of those views are looked at. Out of that has come the education plan. But we have an open system where the schools of this country are inspected by an independent Inspectorate. The inspection reports are made public. So there can no longer be any doubt. The one thing transparency should put beyond a doubt is where you have matters such as this, where we have the schools inspected independently and the reports are made public.

To get such a good editorial in the Caymanian Compass—which I believe I will frame! . . . but they quite rightly stated that where there is honesty in the ministry, no fear of putting the standards of education public, as we did, that has to speak for itself. No matter what I or any other member may say, the standards are independently assessed and those standards are good. But, I admit that they can be improved, as can anything in life.

I would like to give you what will be part of a press release that will be coming out from questions put to the Chief Inspector of Schools by GIS. One of those questions was, "Compare and contrast inspecting schools in Cayman with inspecting schools in the UK."

The Inspector's reply was as follows: "The system of inspection is now well established in Cayman and places a high level of responsibility on schools to be accountable for their own improvement. This is based on a belief that all organisations can improve and those who have to implement change need to be at the centre of the action. Teachers in Cayman are trained to carry out their own self-assessment using published criteria. Only after this stage is completed is the school inspected. This brings together the best of both worlds—school evaluation and the objective views of experienced and highly trained inspectors. It is this partnership, which is a dynamo for change and improvement. The model developed in Cayman is rapidly becoming the norm in many other countries. There are signs of its growing acceptance in the United Kingdom. At present, however, schools in the United Kingdom are less directly involved in the process. This can lead to a more confrontational and less productive outcome."

Another question posed to him was, "Overall, what is your opinion of the education system in the Cayman Islands."

His reply: "I hope other published reports which contain objective judgments—not opinions—speak for themselves. Like any system, Cayman's has many strengths. But, equally, there are areas where improvements are necessary. Cayman is fortunate in having very well resourced schools and an excellent ratio of teachers to pupils, one which stands favourable comparison with any other country. It is right and proper, therefore, that it should also strive, as it does, to identify where improvement is needed in order to deliver commensurate educational standards."

I have given 16 years of my life specifically to dealing with education. If there is one thing that is near and dear to my heart it is the education of our youth and our mature students in society. I believe, as has been stated independently, that we have good policies in place which are prioritised. We have a good school system, a good education system, it is transparent, inspected independently and the reports are published. I have nothing whatsoever to hide. If I did, I would not have allowed the reports to be published.

I believe the education system in this country can stand up to the education system in any other country. However, I will continue to do everything I can to advance it, improve it, and see that the necessary change to bring about the goal that every student should be able to reach his or her highest potential in this society and to be productive good citizens. The vast majority of children out there are good students. They do their work, they are obedient and we must give praise to those students who do their utmost best to advance their lives in this society.

I believe that we must take a joint approach and constructively assist the small number who need assistance. But we must not lose sight—and this is very important. We must give praise where praise is due to the many good students in these islands. I will personally do everything I can, for as long as I can, to assure that the education system of this country advances for the betterment of the future of this country—our youth.

May God continue to bless them. Thank you.

The Speaker: The Fourth Elected Member for George Town.

Dr. Frank McField: I would like to take up the challenge of entering this debate after the Minister of Education spoke for quite some time, giving us a detailed review of the educational strategies which have been developed for the country as the National Educational Strategies for a period of five years. The minister gave us notice that he has served this country as Minister of Education for 16 years. I believe that in being Minister of Education for that particular period of time, he should have as good a knowledge of the educational situation in this country as anyone—as a matter of fact, he should have a better understanding of the educational conditions in this country than anyone else.

I don't believe the minister has anything to hide. I believe the minister is telling the truth as he knows it, as he sees it. But, I would like to ask the minister . . . I mean, I know he brought his "educational specialists" here. . . I thought they would have been here for the entire debate so they could deal with what other members have to say because, believe it or not, we might have a new minister of education come November. They could have not just fed him details in regard to his debate, but they could also understand and comprehend the entirety of the debate and also appreciate other members' contributions and how they see the educational system could be improved.

I went to Northward Prison yesterday as a guest speaker in a human relations class to specifically talk about employer/employee relationships. A lot of us will say that education has nothing to do with jobs, therefore, these types of relationships should not come into play when talking about education. The reason I am bringing up the prison is that the former temporary director said before he left that 20% of the inmates at Northward are illiterate.

Now, if the director said that 20% of the inmates at Northward are not able to read and write, lack the basic arithmetic skills, and are at a very unskilled level, how is it that the Minister of Education will quote the Pan American Health Organisation to say that 98% of the people in the Cayman Islands are literate?

That's good for us to have that particular posture. But the reality is a little bit different as seen by those persons who are being disqualified from taking up meaningful positions in society simply because some people are saying they are not qualified for these jobs. Are we to believe that the people who say young Caymanians are not qualified are lying? If so, we need to know. If these kids are qualified and they do have the literate skills, then we have to have some kind of explanation as to why they are not getting the jobs they are applying for in the private sector.

If the statistics given by the prison director is reflective of our society, then we cannot say that 98% of the persons in our society are literate.

My other question is, Why does the Minister of Education not have his own statistics? Why do we rely on a foreign organisation that goes around comparing the literacy rates of countries? They are interested in comparative statistics. Their reason for having these statistics in the first place has to do with their purpose rather than with our purpose. That would really be the first question: Why is it that the Minister of Education—after 16 years of responsibility—has not seen fit to make sure that his educational ministry collects statistics regarding the functional literacy of graduating students?

It's good that we have strategic policies. It's good that the minister has seen fit to involve the general public in creating an educational strategy for this country so that all the stakeholders own the policy. He says that if we criticise the policy we are criticising the stakeholders, the people involved in creating this policy. He says the people will be upset with us, not him, because we are being critical of them since it was they who created the educational strategies that we have been using in the country since 1995.

That's an interesting position. I am not saying the educational system in this country is weaker than in other countries. I am not saying that we don't have good teachers in this country. I am not saying that we don't have a dedicated minister of education in this country. But, I agree with the mover of this motion when he says that because of the rapid development in the Cayman Islands, and the diversity in terms of the economic demands, the educational system has to be looked at. When asking whether or not it's a good system, it has to be from the point of its ability to maintain the system, to provide the system with what it needs to function as a system.

We cannot examine the educational system by itself and say it is good without taking into account the fact that the educational system is part of a wider system, to make that system harmonious and productive. To be able to debate educational strategies seriously, we have to also look at the social strategies.

The minister talked about attitudes and motivation, but he never talked about the actual meaning that values, attitudes, or motivation play in terms of his educational strategies. Attitudes, motivation is important. How important is it for educational psychologists and sociologists? Very important. Does the Ministry of Education hire a sociologist to advise them regarding the sociological aspects of education? Have they ever thought of training someone to look at how the attitudes and motivation the child brings with him into the system interacts with the values and ideas within the school environment educational system in terms of producing the kind of child society needs or wants?

We know what the ideal citizen is. We know what the ideal pupil is. But society does not always live up to the way it visualises itself. We know there are weaknesses in all societies. Until we come to the point where we can discuss the weaknesses, we cannot enhance the lives of the people who live in that weak part of society. For the minister to always talk about the success stories without the ability or courage to introduce one of the failures he has had to deal with, and how he turned that failure around making a success story out of that failure, shows that his perspective is focused in one direction.

The mover and seconder of this motion have more of an interaction with their constituents and therefore a better perspective. So, when they question the education system, it's not from an abstract position, or just from the position of teacher or administrator, they are looking at how they interact with their constituents and the difficulties they see their constituents facing. As a result of recognising these difficulties they ask if these difficulties have anything to do with the educational abilities of these people.

If a system has been put in place to make sure that weaknesses should not show up in these particular people, we are back to the question of whether or not it's the schools system that's responsible, or the people within the system.

People who come from the southern United States, the Carolinas, would probably come here and say it's the people rather than the system, because the system is perfect. It's the people who don't have the correct motivation, they don't have the correct attitude. But why is it that individuals from a particular class, or particular area do not have the motivation necessary to propel them through the education system, bound for social and economic mobility? We have to ask ourselves that question.

Being a sociologist, qualified to ask these questions and provide some answers as to why this is so, and having been excluded from making any kind of meaningful contribution to the education system in this country for at least twenty-something years, I am inclined to state that if the education system was so perfect, it would have at least involved my discipline to some extent in assisting it in redefining its role, not just as an educational institution, but as a social institution.

The mere fact that this motion is here today is because schools the world over are being asked more and more to play the role of a socialisation agency. The socialisation role has become a paramount part of the school system. That's the reason why the minister could talk about the pre-school programmes. If he recalls, I was one of the persons advocating a pre-school system back in 1978. As a matter of fact, I lost my job in 1979, based upon so-called accusations that I was being political simply because I was talking about the fact that unless we got to the children at an early age in order to socialise them with attitudes and motivation necessary for them to survive in the primary and secondary educational system, we would fail.

As we go forward perceiving a change in the leadership of this country, I think it's important that the general public understand that on one side we have someone telling us that everything is okay, when members of our community are saying it can't be okay because their children are failing.

The Rehoboth Centre, run by my sister Beulah at the T.E. Youth and Community Centre, is an after school programme initiated by the First Elected Member for West Bay when he was the Minister of Community Affairs. Why did the Member from West Bay believe that after school education would be significant? The First Elected Member for West Bay was more interested in the social aspects of people. He saw where parents were not able to provide the child with the time, care, and attention necessary in order for the child to be successful during normal school hours. So, not only did we have the pre-school education introduced into the system in addition to regular school hours, but we now have the after school system.

We have seen the attempts of the educational system to correct problems existing within the community, the family, and this is especially necessary when society is going through rapid economical and moral transitions. The Cayman Islands is moving from an agrarian situation to a more urban environment. We are moving from caring relationships to contractual, competitive lack of caring relationships in the community. As a result, the school is called upon to do more than in the days when I went to school, when the churches held Sunday School and the mothers did a lot of the socialisation on the primary and secondary level. But all the social institutions were healthy at that time, participating in the total management and empowerment of individuals within the society.

I should not be talking about the failure of the Minister of Education or the education system. We have to talk about the overall failure of the government. Obviously, there are members responsible for the social parts, like Social Services, and somehow they all have to work together. If the minister is saying that he's done his work, and if they have problems down in Harlem, George Town, Rock Hole, or wherever, that's a social problem—not an education problem—so we really can't complain about him. Well, how we define "problems" depends largely upon our disciplines, our perspectives, and what we hope to achieve.

Ultimately, all problems are social problems in the sense that it affects the entire society. So, whether or not we limit the problems to being educational problems, or if we see it further as a social problem, we know we have to deal with it. They say, He who sees it knows it.

If you see the young men at Northward Prison, or the young women at Tent City, you will see how healthy they look. You see them behind bars, and see the numbers of foreign workers in the Cayman Islands, and then you know that had these people been taught correctly they could have been playing a meaningful role in society.

Does that mean that we do not accept individual responsibility? Does that mean that those individuals did not have choices, and that they exercised those choices in choosing not to read? In choosing not to go to school? In choosing not to learn? I am not saying the individuals didn't make choices, but they were programmed right from the very beginning in the wrong way! As a sociologist, I understand that. I accept that as being the case.

If you are talking about parents, these are the same parents that went through the same system of education that the Minister of Education has been in charge of for 16 years! So the parents that are teaching the kids today, are the parents the Minister of Education is responsible for creating education policy for when they were going to school! That's a very, very important point.

When you stay in the system so long, you can get blamed for everything because you have created a history—not just of successes, but of failures too! You cannot just take the praise. You also have to take the fault for what goes wrong.

When I came back in 1977, I said that we needed a pre-school education, a head start programme, rather than getting a middle school. We would have been further ahead in the long run because it is at the point where kids are gathering attitudes, when they are collecting the attitudes and values. You cannot wait until they get set in their ways. At the end of the day, you become a social control instrument.

I recently had the good fortune to find out about a Caymanian-born professor, Dr. Charlene Barnes, at the University of Northern Iowa. She was coming down to Cayman to visit her mother and father. Her mother is Ethel Barnes, and her father is Charles Barnes, Jr. I understand she is involved in literacy and teaches teachers how to teach children to read. When she came here, we organised a meeting at the T.E. McField Youth and Community Centre where she gave a speech about the importance of literacy, and how to distinguish the difference between education and literacy. She showed us why it's important that we see the difference between somebody who is educated and somebody who is literate—because kids can be educated, but not literate. That's basically the argument being made in this motion.

She also said that in order to have an orderly, competent, and productive society literacy must play an important part in societal development. Why? The world functions as a lexicon society, it survives on print. In the United States, approximately 70% of all incarcerated persons cannot successfully read and write to keep a job. In America, 55% of the mothers on Welfare cannot read a bedtime story to their children. In America, employers spend millions of dollars re-educating their employees in basic reading and writing correspondence, such as a thank you note, party invitation, a job advertisement.

She talked about these things and gave us some very personal and interesting examples of why in the Cayman Islands we have to begin to see the importance of literacy and be able to distinguish.

According to experiences at the Rehoboth after school centre, they have found that approximately 95% of the children have to go through remedial reading and as great a number must do the math work to improve their skills. Are they lying? Do they have a reason to be lying about these kids?

Would the Minister of Education take a walk with us right now and go there where these kids are, and check it out? He's a lawyer. If this were a court, and Mr. Speaker, you were the judge, we could postpone and take the jury there and let the jury see for itself. The proof is in the pudding!

Parents in certain working-class neighbourhoods in this country—whether it be Watler's Road, Washington Blvd., Sound Road, Myles Road, Anthony Drive—know that the vast majority of their children have remedial difficulties. That is one of the reasons why the Rehoboth programme cannot take one single extra child, it is full to capacity. Parents have come to depend upon after school education as a way of complementing their children's educational instruction.

We know that parents should be involved in their children's education. But if the mother works, and has to get up to take the children to school, and if they live in the eastern districts the system demands that she gets up at 5.00 AM, and she has to work all day and she gets back home at 6.00 or 7.00, or even 8.00 PM, what type of mood will the mother or the father be in? Will they be in a mood to help the children with homework? Probably the only thing they feel like doing is watching Days of Our Lives, and then fall asleep. Some people don't even cook any more—it's Burger King, Domino Pizza, and places like that. Even with that, people feel burdened because parents are primarily focused on earning money to pay the bills. Therefore, they have no time to be teachers or socialisers with their children.

In order to maintain stability, the State has to take on more and more of that responsibility. We begin to take that on in many different ways, but we see it with the after school programmes. Why is it that we have our school programmes running until 3.00 when people work until 5.00? What do they do with their children? They have to run around in traffic picking up their schools. The employer has no time for that; he's interested in efficiency and profit. What does the school do? What does government do? Look at the parents out there trying to pick up their children. They are all coming from work at one time to pick their children up.

Not only do we have congestion in the mornings, now we have congestion at 3.00 and so forth. Try to get across Smith Road at that particular time. Why must the schools close their doors at this particular time, when all other economic institutions are open until 5.00? Everyone else works until 5.00, why is it that the schools must close at 3.00? Is it because it happens in America and in England?

We cannot borrow the educational plans of other countries. We must adjust our educational policies to deal specifically with the needs in our society. Those needs cannot be known by hiring educationalists from foreign countries, bringing them here and setting them up as Chief Education Officers and so forth. We won't accomplish that way, I am sorry!

With all due respect, we need people who perceive the weaknesses in our society, who are willing to have sympathy with those who are part of that weakness. That's what we need. I am suggesting that the schools be opened longer. Why do they close at night? These buildings that the country has spent millions and millions of dollars on are closed at night.

I went to night school in America, and I went to summer school too because I was far behind. I only learned to read and write when I was 15 or 16. And I still have some difficulties. But I went to school summer school in 1968, 1969, 1970. The schools were opened during the summer to help us catch up. When did you last hear about a Caymanian kid going to summer school to catch up? So, nobody needs to catch up in this country?

If they do it in the primary schools, they don't do it in the high schools. If they are catching up, I want to know how kids who really need to go there to catch up are not. Most kids want to go on vacation. Teachers have gotten used to long vacations.

Now, I am not going to take away any privilege that teachers have. I believe we need more teachers. I believe we need to have better paid teachers if we are going to readjust the school system. The Minister of Education was giving us the idea that he'd done all, and that nothing else could be done. I am saying that's not true. I am saying that this motion is asking the Minister of Education to look into what can be done. I am saying we could extend school hours—it would be better for parents, for private industry, the traffic . . . it would be better for everybody. Teachers would work longer hours. Teachers would be paid more. We would need more teachers. We would need to get money to pay more teachers, but we would improve our general education system.

As to what courses you could have after 3.00 . . . it doesn't necessarily mean that they would be doing the same thing they had been doing all day. For instance, there's drama, sports, civic groups, talking as a class discussing and learning about democracy and fair play, human rights and all those good old things a lot of people don't want the kids of this country to think about. I believe that if we had been more conscious of our civic responsibilities in school we wouldn't have the question about the kids not registering to vote, and not getting involved in politics.

The school is a good community base. It needs to become more conscious of the failures within the family, within the community as a whole. The school needs to become more conscious of the demands in the work place and it has to adjust itself to be able to better serve those classes of people who are now saying the school system has not benefited their children.

Approaching this as a sociologist, I believe much can be done. I could suggest other things, but what would be the point of doing that at this particular time. I believe the Minister of Education is convinced that he is not perfect, but almost perfect!

Dr. Frank McField: I believe the Minister of Education is convinced that all that he has done could not have been done any better by anyone.

I believe the Minister of Education will continue to seek political office, to be not only in education but in aviation because he wants to be where he feels he can exercise a certain amount of control. So it's not just altruism that causes the Minister of Education to be involved, it's also a certain amount of egotism as well. I think it's absolutely necessary to ask how he is going to be capable of running an educational system that needs to be run by a Minister of Education who will get down there with the teachers, who will be a motivator of teachers and students, a motivator of the parents in the community; a giver, an activist who is actively involved in revolutionising our approach to education and the community's responsibility to see education as being successful. That's the type of Minister of Education we need at this particular point.

If the present Minister of Education believes he is that man, and he can prove to me that he is that man, I will support him. I don't want to be Minister of Education, and I will tell you why: Because education, like the present minister has stated, is charged with an awesome task. Education is blamed for everything. I agree with him. I agree that everybody has a solution. So you have to listen to more people and you have to go through more experiments. And you have to try more things because more people are actively depending upon education to be their salvation. In other words, education is the spaceship that can get you to that economic planet.

As Ella said, in Time Longer dan Rope, "Without a good learning, Cayman won't belong to we no more." We know the importance of education, but we also understand that within our culture there are contradictions in regard to education. Although people regard education as that important vehicle, a lot of them do not understand that it means they have to invest time in education, that they have to make sacrifices to get that education. Government has not encouraged people to get PhDs, to be able to give the critique and overview that I am sometimes capable of giving because of the amount of time I have spent researching and dealing with a particular problem. Government has always regarded educated people as troublemakers. There is a certain amount of this attitude.

We understand that education is the tool that democracy depends upon to create this great egalitarian society where we are all equal. I am not sure that's a realistic expectation. We are not all going to have the same position because society does not demand that we all play the same role. So we must have a diversified, stratified society.

I think education is best when it is not comprehensive, but academic and vocational. As the minister said, he has a comprehensive system of education combining the vocational with the academic and that is a more egalitarian way of dealing with society. But at the end of the day people end up in the same slots regardless of our comprehensive system.

I think the comprehensive system of education as an ideological tool to try to prove that we are all equal was an English creation because they have this vast division of classes and they needed to bridge that ideological gap in the 1950s and 1960s by putting these institutions together. We in the Caribbean have a slightly different situation. We need people to work in our hotels. We need people to be taught that it is not bad to serve because you are serving yourself, you are working for the money to create your own independence. These are some of the things I was trying to impart to people in the prison yesterday.

The negative attitude kids have towards work is incredible. How can you have positive attitudes towards school with such negative attitudes towards work? People still believe they don't have to be productive or contribute. Something is going on in the school process and in the role the school plays as a socialising agent, preparing the child for work. Something is wrong. Something needs to be adjusted. That is exactly what the motion is calling for.

I know that everybody is wondering what is happening here, and looking at me. But I intend to continue for a bit and get some time on Prime Time tomorrow. So, if you will just bear with me . . . the minister had his time, and I am quite sure that people won't be listening to me tonight because they would fall asleep listening to the minister—I did! And so did a few other members.

It's back to what the Third Elected Member for Bodden Town stated and how he felt that the minister of education also being the minister of culture. When he said that, I felt he was making an intrusion into my territory. But then I said that's exactly the way it should be. I remember that I gave the present Minister of Education a copy of my first publication of Time Longer dan Rope in 1980 because he was the Minister of Culture. Believe it or not, the Minister of Education used to be the Minister of Culture.

What happened? Why did the present Minister of Education allow culture to slip out of his hands, and go into aviation? Why did he get involved with Cayman Airways when he should have been the culture minister as well?

The Third Elected Member for Bodden Town was making a very good case. If you are really going to deal with this system in terms of trying to create an interdisciplinary approach to problem-solving, you cannot have the Minister of Education being the Minister of Cayman Airways too. Whoever is the Minister of Education in the next government . . . if I have anything to say about it (whether inside this House or outside this House), I am going to be suggesting that the Minister of Education does not take aviation and Cayman Airways, that he take something more complementary and supportive to education, something like culture.

Culture is part of our heritage. It helps to form our character—

Mr. John D. Jefferson, Jr.: That's like "tourism" and "transportation."

Dr. Frank McField: —and it's our character that begins to shape our destiny.

When the Minister of Community Affairs brought the programme about hospitality training, we wondered again why the Minister of Community Affairs was getting mixed up in education. This has always been the problem the present Minister of Education has had with the past Minister of Community Affairs.

Mr. W. McKeeva Bush: Give it to the man, they could do the work.

Dr. Frank McField: I specifically remember on one occasion that I made an application. The question was basically, Who's responsible because this is educational. Everything in this world is educational. We can define it that widely. Everything has to do with learning or unlearning.

But if we are involved with community development, we can see that as the supportive institution. There is some connection between the ministry of education and the ministry of community affairs that would be involved in the after school programmes that would take over at a certain time because we have to involve the community as a whole in the learning experiment. In other words, learning should not be limited to the educational institution; learning should be a process that takes place on all levels.

Television is a great learning instrument. But it's not directly under the Minister of Education. How could they have a sensible approach to education in this technological world without taking into account using the media? This is where the Minister of Community Development would come in. The community development people would create educational programmes geared towards stimulating the involvement of the community in the educational process and with the educational concerns of their children.

The Minister of Community Affairs would deal with the parents to get them more involved, and the Minister of Education would support that because at the end of the day his educational polices and goals would be more successful.

We need to understand that we cannot have five different governments when you have things so closely interrelated. You can't send that down to that minister and the other to that minister, and you can't keep this because you had this before and you want to keep it now. But all the other things you have bear no relationship to what you have.

You have education, planning— what does planning have to do with education? What does aviation have to do with it? What does Cayman Airways have to do with it? How is it that we are able to concentrate?

Mr. W. McKeeva Bush: [Inaudible interjections]

Dr. Frank McField: Mr. Speaker, I was getting some good advice from the First Elected Member for West Bay. I think I will probably stop at this particular point to get that information from him so that I can start fresh with it tomorrow, if you don't mind. Thank you.

MOMENT OF INTERRUPTION—4.30 PM

The Speaker: We have reached the hour of interruption. I will entertain a motion for the adjournment. The Honourable Minister responsible for Education, Aviation, and Planning.

10.33 AM

[Prayers read by the Third Elected Member for George Town]

The Speaker: Please be seated. Proceedings are resumed. Item number 2 on today's Order Paper, Reading by the Speaker of Messages and Announcements.

READING BY THE SPEAKER OF
MESSAGES AND ANNOUNCEMENTS

APOLOGIES

The Speaker: I have apologies from the Honourable Second and Third Official Members who will be arriving later this morning. The Honourable Minister for Community Affairs, Sports, Women, Youth and Culture is off the island in Cayman Brac on official business. The Third Elected Member for Bodden Town is off the island on official business, and the Fourth Elected Member for West Bay is hospitalised in Miami.

Moving on to item number 3 on today's Order Paper, Questions to Honourable Members/Ministers. Question No. 24 is standing in the name of the First Elected Member for George Town.

QUESTIONS TO HONOURABLE
MEMBERS/MINISTERS

QUESTION 24

No. 24: Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts asked the Honourable Minister responsible for the Ministry of Tourism, Commerce, Transport and Works what is the Government's present policy regarding eligibility to acquire omnibus licences.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Tourism, Commerce, Transport and Works.

Hon. Thomas C. Jefferson: The Public Transport Board, as far as omnibuses are concerned, currently grants permits in two categories. There are permits granted to omnibus operators and to omnibus drivers.

In the case of the omnibus operator permit, this authorises the holder to license a specified number of buses and for use on specific routes.

In the case of the omnibus drivers' permit, this does not allow the holder to own their own bus. He or she is merely entitled to drive a licensed omnibus on behalf of an omnibus operator.

The present policy governing eligibility is provided in the 1995 issue of the Public Passenger Vehicles

Regulation. This Regulation requires that holders of permits must be 21 to 70 years of age and Caymanian.

SUPPLEMENTARIES

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Bearing in mind that this is under regulations and not actual legislation approved in the Legislative Assembly, can the Minister state whether the regulation governing eligibility extends both to permits to operators and to drivers, or one or the other? Regulation means, being a Caymanian.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Tourism, Commerce, Transport and Works.

Hon. Thomas C. Jefferson: Mr. Speaker, I don't have that law in front of me but I believe it relates to both parties, the driver as well as the omnibus operator permit.

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Is there any consideration given during the process of one's application to the fact that an individual requiring either an operator's licences or a driver's licences in the omnibus category is the spouse of a Caymanian?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Tourism, Commerce, Transport and Works.

Hon. Thomas C. Jefferson: Mr. Speaker, there were a number of persons who were operating in the industry before it was handed over to my ministry. Some of these persons are married to Caymanians. The ministry and the Public Transport Board took the view that the livelihood of the Caymanian is affected by how you treat the person who is driving the bus, the spouse, and we therefore decided to allow them to continue. We recently gave them an extension of six months, recently meaning December, which expires at the end of this month.

We feel that of the fourteen persons who are not Caymanians driving in this omnibus category, nine of which are married to Caymanians, it was in our best interest to try ensure that the nine did pursue the obtaining of Caymanian status in order to fall properly under the law. But it is our view to be somewhat flexible until we can actually have that achieved.

I need also to say that the reason for giving six months is really to try to nudge them into the process of making the application for status because if they are married to a Caymanian, perhaps not all of them but some of them, they will eventually qualify for status and therefore fall correctly under the law.

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for West Bay.

Mr. W. McKeeva Bush: Can the Minister say whether in fact some of these [operators] don't already have application for status?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Tourism, Commerce, Transport and Works.

Hon. Thomas C. Jefferson: I cannot say I am certain that applications have been made for status for some of these individuals. I would assume that some are applying, those would meet the criteria for granting given their period of marriage and the other requirements under the Immigration Law. But I must go on to say that it is the Ministry's view that we should extend them for another six months which allows that process for some of them to be completed.

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for West Bay.

Mr. W. McKeeva Bush: Can the Minister say what will happen to those that will not have the required time, the amount of years by marriage, if they are going to apply under that category?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Tourism, Commerce, Transport and Works.

Hon. Thomas C. Jefferson: Mr. Speaker, I will try my best to be more clear in what I am saying. What I have been saying is that we will grant an extension of six months until the process comes to completion where the person actually does obtain Caymanian status.

So, it is an incremental system that allows them to continue to drive the bus because we realise the livelihood of the Caymanian spouses as well as the individuals who are driving. Given that they were carrying out this kind of service before we brought the law and regulations into effect, we feel morally obligated to allow that process to continue until matters can be rectified within the spirit of the immigration law as well as the traffic law and regulations.

The Speaker: The Elected Member for North Side.

Mrs. Edna Moyle: Mr. Speaker, I wonder if the Honourable Minister could give the House an undertaking to look at these regulations because quite often it is very hard to find a Caymanian to drive a bus, if this could be amended to say Caymanians or spouses of Caymanians as drivers?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Tourism, Commerce, Transport and Works.

Hon. Thomas C. Jefferson: We have no difficulty with looking at the regulations. In all honesty to the Elected Member for North Side, we have been looking at the regulations, but it is one thing to do that in relation to those who are already in the service, and it is another to do the regulation and open it down the road. So, I think we are in that frame of mind that, yes, we should do something to help the persons who are already for some period of time . . . we don't know that we want to open the door because there are more Caymanians coming along wanting the same licences and wanting to operate that route. Actually, there are many Caymanians on the route at the moment that wish to have additional buses and additional routes.

The Speaker: The Elected Member for North Side.

Mrs. Edna Moyle: Is the Honourable Minister saying that there are Caymanians with routes maybe in West Bay who are now interested in moving into the eastern district where there is one particular Caymanian woman who has an operator's licence and her husband has a driver's permit but because he is Jamaican (and I don't think they have been married long enough for him to apply for status) that these persons will be put out for other Caymanians who are in the bus service in other districts to extend to that district? Is that what I am understanding?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Tourism, Commerce, Transport and Works.

Hon. Thomas C. Jefferson: I was basically clarifying the point that there are many Caymanians wishing to enter this kind of service and to have additional buses. There is no intention on the part of the Ministry or the Public Transport Board to put any operator who is presently there out of business. That is why we are using this flexibility in the system to try to assist the process until the person qualifies for Caymanian status.

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Can the Minister say what policy prevails at present with regard to entertaining and/or granting new applications?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Tourism, Commerce, Transport and Works.

Hon. Thomas C. Jefferson: Our present view is that (and I have to be a little bit careful here because my source has been put to bed by a doctor so I did not get a chance to speak to him this week on this particular item so my information may not be as fresh as it should be for members) when there is availability in that area and a Caymanian applies to be a driver then we feel that the first preference should go to the Caymanian.

I know that there is some concern in this area, but there is not going to be any movement on behalf of the Ministry or the Public Transport Board to create a situation where we saturate the routes with people on the routes, so much so that nobody on that route makes any significant amount of money. That is when the complaints will come—you approve them to be on the route and they cannot make sufficient money to satisfy their expectation because there are too many buses on the route.

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: I quite understand what the Minister has stated as a realistic position given the circumstances of these people who were operating before the regulations were made and all of that. I also quite understand that it is sensitive for the Ministry and the Board to deal with it in this fashion. But my question is, from a legal standpoint, and understanding that regulations exist, does the Board really have the right to do what it is doing?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Tourism, Commerce, Transport and Works.

Hon. Thomas C. Jefferson: Mr. Speaker, that is why I used the word “morally.” We felt it was morally right, I did not say it was legally right. And I think the member’s question is very pertinent to that legal aspect of it.

The Ministry and/or the Public Transport Board will have to take some decision, I think within the next six to nine months, about the whole process as to whether the point raised by the Elected Member for North Side, that the regulations should be amended, which will cause the persons who are now operating in the industry to fall within the spirit of the law. That is an aspect that we are looking at. But there are down sides to it so we need to be a little bit sensitive as to how we draft the amended regulations and be practical, reasonable, and moral about what we are doing.

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Just to follow-up on the point the Elected Member for North Side made, and also the response that was just given by the Minister and understanding that given all circumstances a Caymanian who marries a foreign national expects that foreign national, while quite likely not being the holder of Caymanian status, to basically have the same rights because of that marriage, I think that in reviewing the regulations and understanding the sensitivity with it, there has to be a sense of natural justice in the process. Would the Minister give an undertaking to ensure that the regulations which exist are dealt with? If you look at the list of people you have now, the length of time that six month extension is going to have to go on and on will be for years. I believe the minister will not have the comfort of adding six months indefinitely. I am asking for an undertaking that it be dealt with.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Tourism, Commerce, Transport and Works.

Hon. Thomas C. Jefferson: Mr. Speaker, I appreciate the sentiments of the First Elected Member for George Town. As I mentioned earlier, we have been examining this whole matter and trying to take a decision for the way forward. I don’t have any hesitation in telling him that the ministry and the transportation board will look at the regulations and try to address it in the best way forward.

Before we put forward the draft regulations to Executive Council, assuming we are going to amend it, we will ask for a caucus with Members of the Legislative Assembly to ensure they are in support of this particular amendment. On that basis, I give you an undertaking.

The Speaker: Are there any further supplementaries? If not, we move on to question 25, standing in the name of the Second Elected Member for Bodden Town.

QUESTION 25

No. 25: Miss Heather Bodden asked the Honourable Minister responsible for Education, Aviation, and Planning to provide an update on the classrooms now under construction at the Savannah Primary School.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for Education, Aviation, and Planning.

Hon. Truman Bodden: The new classroom block at Savannah Primary School consists of four classrooms and bathroom facilities. As of the first week of June the foundation and walls were completed with the roof and installation of plumbing and electrical work will begin on the week of 12 June.

The furniture fixtures and equipment order has been placed and the project is on schedule with completion by mid August in time for the opening of school on 4 September. The project is being completed within the prescribed budget.

SUPPLEMENTARIES

The Speaker: The Second Elected Member for Bodden Town.

Miss Heather Bodden: Can the honourable minister say, now that the four new classrooms are some distance from the canteen the assembly hall, etc., if covered walkways will now be constructed so when we have rain the students won’t get wet?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for Education, Aviation, and Planning.

Hon. Truman Bodden: Covered walkways are a part of . . . I am sorry I didn't mention that before.

The Speaker: The Second Elected Member for Bodden Town.

Miss Heather Bodden: Can the honourable minister say what the cost of these four new classrooms is?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for Education, Aviation, and Planning.

Hon. Truman Bodden: I think one was appropriated and is apparently going to come in a bit under budget. It's estimated to come in a bit under one million.

The Speaker: Are there any further supplementaries? If not, that concludes Question Time. The next item is Other Business, Private Members' Motions. Private Member's Motion No. 14/2000 Public Education System. Debate continues thereon.

The Fourth Elected Member for George Town.

OTHER BUSINESS

PRIVATE MEMBERS' MOTIONS

PRIVATE MEMBER'S MOTION NO. 14/00

PUBLIC EDUCATION SYSTEM

Dr. Frank McField: Thank you.

I was at the graduation of the George Town Primary School last night, and I was quite impressed by the standard of excellence generated in that entire atmosphere. I was moved by the dedication of the pupils and by the continuous dedication of the principal, Ms. Marie Martin, and the personal pride that she has taken and which she continues to take in accomplishing these tremendous results for the Cayman Islands.

It is quite clear to anyone who observes the educational system in this country, private and public, that there are many, many, many good pupils produced by the system. But we have tremendously dedicated teachers and administrators. Therefore, it was not the intention of the mover of this motion, nor has it been my intention to suggest that the educational system in this country has not assisted with the educational development of our people and in making them better citizens.

But the Minister of Education said himself (on 21 June 2000) that we know where the weaknesses of the education system lie, and we have put measures in place to counteract as many as these problems as we are experiencing.

The Minister of Education seems to have gotten a little bit upset with the criticism that has been levelled at the educational system. He suggested that to be critical of the system would be to be critical of the strategies, and that would be critical of the persons who formulated the strategies. Yet the mover of the motion, the First Elected Member for George Town, states clearly, and I quote, "In my view what is happening today is the system has some cracks in it and too many of our young people going through the system are falling through those cracks."

So, if the mover of the motion is saying that it has some cracks in it—we know what that means in laymen's terms. It does not necessarily mean that it has holes in it. It has cracks. It is not perfect. There is still room for improvement. So, there is an agreement between the Minister of Education and the First Elected Member for George Town (who has brought this motion) with regard to the fact that there are some perceivable weaknesses in the system.

If there are some perceivable weaknesses in the system, it does not mean that when we discuss these weaknesses that we are condemning the system, condemning the children that have been successful in the system and that we are condemning the administrators. What is being said is that in order to improve the lot of those individuals that have fallen through those cracks, we need to examine the root causes of their problems.

Now, both the Minister of Education and the Third Elected Member from Bodden Town suggested that there are certain emotional or motivational reasons why some children are not successful. I would just like to bring to this debate part of an article which I have published in The New Vision newsletter and which the public is invited to view when it is shown on Public Eye on July 13th at 7.30 p.m. This will be the first showing. It will be repeated on July 16th at 9.00 p.m. (which is a Sunday).

I just want to share with the members here what Dr. Sharlene Barnes had to say that I think supports the position that we on the Backbench have been making. Dr. Barnes said, "Now, school builds on the foundation. Research has found that when the foundation is weak the challenges are greater for teachers to develop illiterate persons. Researchers have also found that weaknesses, inability to read and write also affect learning in other subject matters such as maths, science, technology and career education, for example."

"School is the place where literacy is enhanced. It is a place where reading and writing are practised so how does the school build on home literacy? Firstly, it emphasises literacy in all subjects by teaching kids to be strategic readers and writers. Example, a science teacher who teaches aerodynamics, the kids not only create their own aeroplanes but they must write the directions on how to make them; the music teacher who reads once a week a story about a musician."

"Secondly, it has a school wide reading programme, example: DARE, Drop Everything and Read Programme, Storytelling Week."

“Thirdly, it teaches test taking study skills. Example, dealing with word problems on a maths test, answering essay and multi-choice questions.

“Fourthly, it has a business partnership. Example, a Careers Fair where employees demonstrate the kinds of literacy demands at work, a business whose employees donate reading hours.

“Fifthly, it provides staff development opportunities, example work shop on reading and writing strategies, teachers attend literacy conferences. Are these things happening in your schools?”

So, if we are going to make the argument, as was made by the First Elected Member from George Town, that the majority of the people in our society today (what we call middle-class citizens) are imported middle-class, he said, “There is nothing wrong with them. Many of them are my friends and many of them are friends of all of us in here, good people. But you see, those people find jobs in these islands because of the demands and because they have skills. I am not talking about managing directors, doctors, lawyers; I am talking about professionals who have skills or trades—the auto mechanic, the plumber, the electrician, the air conditioning technician, those kinds of people.”

So, one of the points we have been making is that the lack of literacy hinders not just the child’s motivation to learn to be an auto mechanic or an electrician, but at the end it prevents the child from wanting to learn at all because the child grows to accept himself or herself at an early stage as a failure. Therefore, he or she is not sufficiently motivated to even take advantage of the opportunities that are provided by the educational system in this country.

Now, this is why it is important for us to question the literacy rate in the country. Until the Minister of Education can provide the Legislative Assembly and this country with statistics that give us an indication of the end product of his educational system in regard to the majority of people—not with regard to the top talented 10%, but in regard to the middle and bottom 50% or 60% that come out of the school—until he is able to offer us statistics that would prove that these weaknesses that he says he is aware exist in the school system and are really being taken care of, I would be inclined to go along with what the First Elected Member for George Town has said in using the National Youth Forum and the comment which he made saying that over 150 youth service professionals attended a conference and they all agreed that students would develop in a more positive manner if they were doing something that came naturally to them, which they enjoyed, and were willing to focus on.

So, if we have people who are dealing with young people outside the school system, who do not have a particular civil servant’s loyalty to the school system, making this kind of comment, then it questions again the information and the source of the information. It is all fine and good for the Minister of Education to say we should not question. But we are saying he is dishonest. It is not that we are saying that the people who are giving the information about the perfection of the system are dishonest, but we have contradictory information. This was the reason why the motion was brought, by using this contradictory information to be able to establish the basis for a debate that might go towards getting the Government to see that there are some urgent things that need to be done in terms of improving the educational system at this particular time.

Now, if we have also mentioned the rate of juvenile delinquency, all we have to do is go out by the Town Hall tomorrow to see the number of juveniles attending court sessions. Speak with the people at the Marine Institute. Speak to some of these youngsters to see if the educational system has not failed them. Then, certainly, the Government has failed. Someone has to be responsible for these persons since not even the law accepts that these youngsters are of legal responsibility. In other words, they would not be able to enter into any kind of private contractual agreement with anyone. So, until they have reached that age, then somebody has to be responsible.

It is good to say that the parents are, but like I have said, the same parents we are talking about now are people who were educated by the same educational system that the same Minister was the Minister (or Member) of Education back then.

So, if we have a problem we want to check it out with regard to literacy. We cannot go and say that we want everybody in the comprehensive school system to be treated the same way, because that is the problem with a comprehensive plan of anything. If you have something that is comprehensive, all encompassing, it takes into account everything. Well, those of us who deal more with human beings know that it is ideal to be able to discriminate positively and say, ‘this one goes into this category and that one goes into that category’. We can categorise the persons that we are dealing with in such a way that we can specifically design programmes to deal with each individual case if possible. That would be the ideal system.

The ideal educational system would be the tutorial system, a Platonic type of teaching. All we have to do is go back to Socrates, the Greeks, the people who really started to develop and broaden the whole concept of knowledge. To know that one of the things that Plato said was “To be a teacher you must love them.” The Bible says so, I think Matthew says so, and Timothy says so as well. We have to love them to teach them. I am not saying that the teachers don’t love the kids. But, of course, it is easier to love one on one than to have 25 or 26 and love them all.

What happens in that type of environment is that one student believes that the teacher has favourites, and he is not the favourite and she does not have enough time for him, and so forth and so on. So, the ideal system would not be the comprehensive system. The ideal system would be the tutorial system where we could develop one to one.

It goes to show that the smaller we can make our classes the more productive could be our results. Even if we could not have the one-on-one tutorial system, the ideal system would be like what I benefited from when I was at university in New York, where we had seminars or small workshops. That's much better than being in a large lecture hall or something like that. It has an impact because the most important thing is for the student to understand that he wants. He wants to get into the teacher's head and extract all the knowledge. The closer he comes to the teacher, the more he begins to feel that it is desirable and it is permissible because that is basically what we are.

The most important thing is that we all have to realise that the supreme action is the attempt to be recognised. We are all seeking recognition. That is why a lot of us run for political office, because we want to be recognised as having a certain value. Well, the children in the school are seeking recognition from the teachers as well. That is the reason why I was so impressed by Miss Barton's school. That is why when I visit Miss Barton's school I am always impressed by the way in which she recognises her pupils and the way in which the pupils recognise her.

All you have to do is to watch one of these primary school graduations, or the interaction between the primary school teachers, the pupils and the principals, to understand how well that unit functions and how it breaks down later on simply because nobody takes into account the fact that we are dealing also with a specific social cultural group of people. To not recognise that is almost like doing people an injustice.

So, the literacy programmes that begin in the primary schools have to continue in the secondary schools. It has to be emphasised in the secondary schools because if they are not the children will fall behind and a lot of our young people who go to primary school are successful to a certain extent in learning to read and write and to pay attention to instructions. Then when they go to the middle school and the secondary school there is retrogression. There is a whole movement backwards because it is not that kind of primary environment—the environment then begins to lose that familiar parental type of guidance, caring, sharing, and love.

Now, does that mean that I have answers to all the problems? All I am doing, Mr. Speaker, is approaching it from a different aspect. I am giving the Minister of Education, the Chief Education Officer, and all those persons involved in education in this country, a possibility to see education from a different angle, from a different perspective. Even if it is just from an individual's perspective rather than from some formally educated perspective, it is a different perspective. And it is significant because it opens up the possibilities for us to find cracks in the system and to be able to mend those cracks so that people do not fall through them as if they were holes.

Discussions are good, but it is part of the culture of this country almost that as soon as you start to challenge the strength of somebody or something, you are the most terrible person in the world. But unless we are able to have a strong enough ego and identity to be able to look at ourselves and really thoroughly examine ourselves, we will never be able to strengthen ourselves. We will never be able to accept that the weaknesses exist in ourselves. That is part of the problem.

It is unfortunate that we have to bring foreigners into the country who have to keep our secrets for us because we tell them they have to be tight-lipped otherwise we are going to ship them out. So, when we have the civil servants that are teachers talking about the problems in education they get fired. So, how are the teachers going to come and really tell the society that there are any problems? We will never know, and this has been part of the problem.

When we import teachers, they cannot talk. And we have heard that sometimes our government—not just this one but past government—likes to import teachers because they become more controllable.

Now, who do we believe today? Do we believe the Minister of Education when he says that whatever problems there are in the system, they are being taken care of, are being solved? I still say that cannot be so because if you want to be able to find some of the problems you have to go to look for them. Give a literacy test to see how many of those children that are graduating this June can read and write to the level that somebody would employ them.

The Speaker: May I interrupt you for a moment. I have a specialist appointment at 11.30 a.m. If I am not back, the Honourable Deputy Speaker will take the Chair.

I would like to suspend proceedings at this time for fifteen minutes.

PROCEEDINGS SUSPENDED AT 11.24 AM

PROCEEDINGS RESUMED AT 11.44 AM

[Mrs. Edna M. Moyle, JP, Deputy Speaker in the Chair]

The Deputy Speaker: Proceedings are resumed. Debate continues on Private Member's Motion No. 14/2000, Public Education System. The Fourth Elected Member for George Town, continuing his debate.

Dr. Frank McField: Madam Speaker, the Minister of Education said in his debate on Monday that what a young man or young woman decides to do with his or her life is largely a matter of motivation and attitude. The Third Elected Member from Bodden Town said that if he was running the educational system he would ensure that there was a Family Start Programme, and in this programme, parents would be educated to their responsibilities.

Now, Dr. Barnes also said, "I have come to the conclusion that literacy is one of the top aspects in having a successful lifestyle in the home, school and community. I am not talking about education as education mainly pertains to school. I am talking about literacy, the ability to successfully read and write, to comprehend what is in print."

She talks about the role the parent needs to play. In other words, the family has a role to play in the education of the child. The school has a role to play in the education of the child. The community has a role to play in the education of the child. But if the role the parent is playing breaks down, the role the school is playing will break down. So, they have to work together in an interdisciplinary way to make sure that each institution supports the other—the family supports the school and the school supports the family, and the community supports the school, and the school supports the community. It has to all be reintegrated because, in our desire to give responsibilities to different people, we might have pulled it apart in the process.

Madam Speaker, I think I have made a good case to suggest that first of all, we can still question the genuine results of the public education system, not from the point of view of those persons attending colleges and universities abroad, but from the point of view of those many that are finding it difficult at 18 to 20 years old to get jobs. It would be good also if the Labour Department was not a Government institution, or did not have that civil servant responsibility. Perhaps then they would be able to print some more meaningful statistics with regard to unemployment among young people in this country.

I have had so many young persons come to me and say, "Dr. Frank, we are looking a job but we cannot find a job." There are no jobs because there is no point for them to start.

We are really saying, though, that we need to pay more attention to those that are not being successful. The reason now is that stability in the society cannot be maintained if Caymanians are going to feel that they are not getting their fair share of development. How are they going to get their fair share of development if it is not by way of participating in the work process and by having the kind of skills to be able to exchange for the types of rewards that they feel they are entitled to?

So, we see that the educational system has to be looked at beyond what the educational system does as proof of its mission—which is to give a final examination. The final examination is not the test given by the teacher. The final examination for the student is when the student walks out into the community and begins to play a meaningful role in creating productivity and in preserving stability.

So, if we are having discontent, and I think this is where the First Elected Member for George Town really plays a very important role in getting the grassroots opinions about things because they will go to him and speak very honestly—perhaps more honestly—to him about the way they feel and what they are experiencing than they would to me or any other Member of the George Town constituency. So, if he is bringing this motion, then I believe he is bringing this motion within the framework of exactly what I have been describing—he is bringing it because there appear to be too many problems which seemed to have been as a result of the educational institution not being able to impart an education to our young people and, in addition, it has not been able to make them literate.

Therefore, there is a possibility that the Minister of Education can accept this motion by saying that he will, at least, accept that he deserves to give us and the country proof that the people who they are sending out of the school system are functionally literate. We are having the feeling from some of the young people from testing them, talking to them, and from potential employers, that there is some weakness here and I would like him to give us this information.

Now, relying upon teachers—who are civil servants—to get information when we know that teachers in these islands do not have that supreme right to argue for their own benefits . . . because if they were to approach members of the Legislative Assembly to say that they felt they were being unfairly treated with regard to training and promotion. They would be called up and they could lose their jobs. So, who are we, as Members of the Legislative Assembly and the public to rely upon for information with regard to the success or failures of the educational system? It can be all hidden from us because we have no access to that information.

Now, we have heard about the school Inspectorate and that system has just started. We get an idea of basically what is going on there. But I know the way the running go in Cayman, and I am not saying that any independent body compromises itself, but there is a certain amount of reality that everybody goes by. I believe the final proof in the pudding that these kids can read, write, and comprehend, and I will believe whatever it is that the school Inspectorate is saying.

I know that there was a lady on the island very recently that did a report. And I understand that the Minister of Education will table that report. Well, if the report is not tabled before the elections I am going to make a big thing out of it!

From the rumours I heard this person was very critical of the entire programme. We see that 95% of the children at Rehoboth Centre have remedial difficulties. It all goes to show that we need to have a new direction in our educational system specifically geared toward trying to maintain literacy among our young people. When they become literate they can read plans as carpenters, masons, mechanics and plumbers. They can read and get involved with the computer; they can do all of these things if they are literate.

I would like to give you an idea of how I learned to read. I had already gotten through the high school programme, and I dragged myself through the American High School Programme because of my lack of ability to read. Even though my ability was improving it was very slow. Having to take an entire academic programme meant that I was trying to do French, biology, arithmetic, English comprehension, and so forth. It was such a big programme that with my reading skills I could not really manage it. So, I had a communication problem with the teachers. But some teachers decided that I was special because I happened to have been from the Caribbean and I was on a small island called Staten Island in New York. That was between 1964 to 1967. I graduated from Curtis High School.

The main thing was that the teachers focused on me because I was already an educational failure in the Cayman Islands. I was already out of school before I was 15 years old and was helping my father do a little bit of construction work when we could find that.

So, I had to go to the libraries in the evenings to get away from the noise in the house. Again, it goes to show how housing plays a role in making education and learning possible. If people are living in overcrowded conditions and noisy neighbourhoods, they are going to have educational difficulties because of all the distraction. In New York, I went to the library and I tried to study there. I had the possibility to think a little bit more about the development of my personality and what I wanted, and to make my personality and my goals a little different than those my family might have had. I began to have the possibility to separate that umbilical cord in trying to create a new identity—an identity based upon a new culture of learning.

I graduated from high school, but my English was still very poor. I was given the possibility to take English as a second language. They had an experiment at that time called College Discovery. I started the College Discovery here I think in 1978, which was really named after that because of the fact that I had been involved in this programme.

Now, I went to NYC Institute. This was geared towards people from Puerto Rico, Dominican Republic, basically Spanish-speaking people. But I, as an English speaker, had not really learned English to the extent where I could exercise my ambition within that language. So, they showed us how to break down sentences, how to rebuild them—I mean, it was just like how you go to learn how to take down a car and put it back together. It helped, but I had to have help even at that particular point. I had to pay attention to that particular weakness, and so I grew.

When I came back here and I started talking about Head-start programmes, talking about pre-school programmes, I was not just talking about something that I learned in books, I was talking about my own personal experiences. People probably think 'well, he is probably one of the most literate people that we know—he writes plays, letters, and he does all these things. . .' Yes, I do it. But I do it with great difficulty because I did not learn the grammar, the spelling, and all those things easily when I was young.

I had problems, but I don't know whether or not those problems were partly physiological or cultural or what, but I had a problem learning. Even when the teacher was there with the strap frightening me, it just caused me to make more mistakes and I stammered and stuttered.

I wish that when the Minister of Education listens to me, he would understand that I am one of those kids who fell through the cracks in the educational system and who had an opportunity through a Head-start, Discovery programme. The community could not afford to have any more failures—they got involved in supporting families. In going to college (I started at the Borough of Manhattan Community College) my books were paid for and I had a special counsellor that was there for all the kids who were in this programme. The first semester I did very poorly, but the counsellor kept us going because we were able to talk and walk through these programmes.

Why don't we have these types of people operating in greater numbers within our secondary school system? It doesn't have to wait until college to try to weed these particular problems out.

I am telling you this story because when I get in here and I talk, people seem to want to make fun of me, they say, 'where do you think you are from? And where do you think you are going' and so on. I was at the graduation last night when the Minister of Education said, "Mister Frank McField and Doctor Tudor." When I have a PhD—just like the Chief Education Officer—why is it that the Minister of Education still has the psychological difficulty? We call that a Freudian slip. He still has difficulty integrating into his subconscious self the fact that I am educated and that I have that title.

Now, some of us might have seen this interesting article that was written in the Caymanian Compass from a Professor Dr. Dirk Hoerder from the University of Bremen. Now, I have corresponded with the Dr. Professor at the University of Bremen because I did my PhD at the University of Bremen some twenty-something years ago. Why is it, after receiving a PhD in 1977, the Minister of Education still has a problem remembering that is exactly what my title is? It is used officially in this Legislative Assembly and it is used officially when people vote for me—it is not "Mister," it is "Doctor" Frank McField.

If we are not going to take pride in persons that have achieved higher education in this country—like me—how are we suppose to have little Negro kids in this country take pride in wanting to be educated? They are going to be called educated fools, or sissies, or something like that. If Frank McField at 52 years old cannot be called Doctor Frank McField at a graduation for those little Negro kids in George Town what are we telling them?

Now, I have two books that will be published and they will be launched on 28th July. I hope that the school system finds a way of finally using this material in the schools to help kids, because I am talking about feelings and ideas that I believe are relevant to our society. But when the Minister of Education gets up in this Legislative Assembly condemning Caymanians in a way but yet holds something up from South or North Carolina . . . Come on, where are we?

He talks about the fact that the Third Elected Member from Bodden Town—the future Minister of Education and Culture in this country—has a good education, why is it that good education has not been given the possibility to have an impact on the good people of this country? Has the Minister of Education played any role in this? Or isn't it important that Caymanians who are qualified be included in creating the educational strategies and policies—only someone from someplace else.

Why is it that at this particular point in our confusion as a country from the point of view of identity and heritage we cannot find a Caymanian to be the Chief Education Officer?

Madam Speaker, I think, there are people who believe that education could be improved in this country if the right people were in the positions. If we had an Education Minister who was able to include people like myself, and was able to say, 'okay, you are the first Caymanian writer, and literacy is important. Let us get your books and bring them into the schools and work with them.' . . . but no, there seems to be a deliberate attempt to ignore us.

I don't know how many people know about Jean-Paul Sartre, who wrote this thing with regard to recognition. You see, what he was really philosophically trying to do was talk about the relationship between the master and the slave. And, basically, all the time the slave was trying to be recognised by the master, the master was trying to pretend that the slave did not exist. So, a lot of times our relationships in this world have to do with denying other people's existence or the quality or value of their existence.

We don't think that has any impact on conditioning the attitudes and the ability to be motivated. But why should the children want to be motivated, when I had to come back and I had to be treated this way? Not just me, but more like the Third Elected Member for Bodden Town as well as others who have gained education in this country, who continue to say that they are never accepted the way other people are accepted. Their opinions are never regarded the way other persons' opinions are regarded. We are always seen as troublemakers, as wanting to say something bad about our country and ourselves.

I am as patriotic as the next man. And I understand why the Third Elected Member for Bodden Town did not become the Minister of Education in 1982. A lot of people talk about him on the streets as if he was not interested. Madam Speaker, I have been in this Legislative Assembly long enough to see how the politics go and sometimes perhaps the best thing to say is, 'go ahead and form Executive Council and leave me out of it because I am not willing to go to that particular level—

The Deputy Speaker: Honourable Member may I interrupt you for a minute, please? I have allowed you extreme latitude. I would appreciate very much if you could now bring your debate into the body of the motion, please.

Dr. Frank McField: Madam Speaker, I guess you understand that you cannot have a system without people, and therefore to talk about systems and not talk about people is almost like a waste of time. So, if we are going to talk about how to correct this system there is no reason why we should not talk about who we think could be used to correct the system.

The Deputy Speaker: Honourable Member I am not saying that you cannot talk about how to fix the system. I have no problem with that. But I have allowed you extreme latitude and it does not make any sense for us to sit here and go into the past on the Third Elected Member for Bodden Town or any other Member. I am saying, let us get back to the motion before the House.

Dr. Frank McField: Madam Speaker, that is fine and that is the reason why we can never go to the past and that we will never have a future. I think that is one of the main problems with this country.

But my discipline tells me that in order to be able to explain one has to explain it within a framework that makes it interesting and understandable. I am not going to argue that point. I am going on to talk about the fact that we need to change the way in which we do education in this country.

There is no point in us pretending, because I hear people complain all the time about the fact that there is no discipline in the schools. Who is responsible for the discipline in the school? If there is no problem, then we don't have to worry. But I am afraid I don't want to wait until something sneaks up on me. Like I said, I live in a different area than the Minister of Education. When he goes home in the evening, I can assure you that he goes someplace else. I live in the dense areas where I see the people, where I see the problems, where I experience the attitudes, where I see people coming because they cannot support themselves or because they don't know how to actually budget, how to manage their own affairs. Well, if they don't know how to manage their own affairs and they went to school, there must be something wrong with the school system.

When the English went through the Industrial Revolution and the people moved from the agricultural areas to the urban areas, the people fell apart. The public school system was created and extended in order to create social harmony and to improve productivity. It had a specific purpose. It was related to the national experience the country was going through. What kind of consideration is being made with regard to the national experience that our country is going through? How is our education system being moulded each day to deal with that? All the strategic plans in the world cannot convince me that I have not been denied the possibility to contribute to the educational system in this country. That is what I am saying.

I am saying that just like I contribute to the parliamentary system in this country I wanted to contribute to the educational system. In taking on the task of writing a play and showing my desire to be literate, pointing out the usefulness of literacy, I have probably done more for education in this country than the persons who have spent their money using a profession to make a lot of money. It is a value judgment, but it is my position. A lot of people think that's all a waste of time. But if it is a waste of time why do they teach them Shakespeare? Why, at this point in time, don't we have Caymanian history being taught in the schools? Why, at this particular time, don't we have civic education? How is it that we have kids who don't even understand the democratic process coming out of our school system? And then say at the end of the day that there are no cracks in the system.

Madam Speaker, I am going to conclude my debate because I believe that when the First Elected Member for George Town gets up, he will take my fire to even higher heights. He knows exactly where I am coming from. I know where it is that he is coming from. I see him in the neighbourhoods and I see him with the people. I know that he did not bring this motion here simply because it is a political year. He brought the motion because he knows the problem of the community. Sometimes it is hard for a bunch of us who face the problem and who cannot hide behind the offices to do any more than sometimes say, 'well, we are sorry here is a few dollars maybe that will help.'

I have come to the point now where I need to know how the Government as a whole in this country can be changed in such a way that we can have coordinated efforts to improve the productivity and the understanding and the way of life of the people in this country. I do not believe that I have any less a right to wish good to the Cayman Islands people than any other person regardless of where they stem from. I do believe, Madam Speaker, that people should not be distrustful of my desire to see their kids educated because I know the value of an education. If I had never had one I would not be here today with all of the things that I had to go through.

My mother spoke Spanish as her first language. And when she spoke English to us, perhaps we heard Spanish. Maybe she never had the little English education to give us the start that we needed. But at the end of the day, I will not let anybody convince the people of this country that Frank McField is a bad person because Frank McField comes from a different social class, from a different social cultural experience than the Minister of Education. I accept that. That is life. We are all moulded differently and we should all be allowed to play a role in improving the general good of our community. Thank you very much.

The Deputy Speaker: The First Elected Member for West Bay.

Mr. W. McKeeva Bush: Madam Speaker, I expected there would be a long debate because of the importance of the resolution. I did not expect that it would be this long, but I have heard many good points raised in this debate. If I should say so, I am glad that the Minister could illustrate many good things that have been accomplished, but I am sorry that so many things still need to be done and have not been done.

I was not fortunate enough to attend a high school, a college, or university, but I did get a good grounding, I believe, in the primary system at the time. I did not get a degree of any kind. I attended the college of hard knocks. And in this political life, one never graduates from that university. It is a continuous thing of hard knocks.

Madam Speaker, I value a good education and I have always tried to assist our young people to get a good education and a degree. I am glad that I was able to do that over these past twenty years. I am glad that I can look around and see not two or three but many—more than a dozen—young people that I have assisted. They are living a constructive life making a living, making a contribution to these islands. I am proud of our Caymanian young people that had the opportunity and are doing well.

Madam Speaker, many persons—hundreds, in fact—worked on plans and initiatives to put education on a proper footing. They put forward their ideas some years ago. Unfortunately, too many fundamental matters have not been dealt with since those recommendations were made. It is not that the system of education is so bad that it cannot produce because it shows that we can produce.

There have been many changes over past 30 years. Some people were displaced and some pointed out that children are still coming out of school and cannot properly complete an application form to get a job, while the poor child is trying hard to get a job. That is the life I see around us. Those are the complaints I get.

In cases, children have come to me and said, 'I applied for this job but I did not get it. Can you check on it for me?' Sometimes there were things left out of the application form, simple things. These matters can be rectified and should be rectified. There are cracks in the system that allows this to still happen. Unfortunately, policies to stem the tide of the problems we face are not in place and have not been in place for many, many years, during several administrations in fact.

Madam Speaker, I am glad that we have started to teach more about civics in our schools. But while this is going to help future generations (because they are starting it from the primary level), it is not helping many 24- and 30-year-old people. Sadly, a lot of people don't know much about what surrounds them. I am not criticising anybody. It is the system that we have lived in.

I cannot understand, Madam Speaker, when we find rules or regulations in high school where you cannot graduate (although you might have 4 - 6 "O" Levels), because of one fight you have had . . . this does not do anything for the child. And I have gone through this. I have heard other members talk about it and I have seen it in my constituency. After that child has attended high school, gone through primary school has done well enough to get 4 to 6 "O" Levels, I would hope that the matters of discipline, while we certainly need discipline in the schools as we have all lamented, could be looked at.

Madam Speaker, I believe that proper truancy is not taking place in the country. As you move around you see children from the primary level out on the streets and you ask them what they are doing and why they are not in school. I see it in my district, I see it in other districts, and I hear other members complaining about it. Yet, as I understand it, we only have one or two truancy officers. This cannot bode right.

Madam Speaker, in my day we only had Mrs. Hilton and that was like thirty years ago. And we still have one. I don't know whether any plans are in place to deal with truancy, but I believe it is a serious matter from what I see on the streets. There are far too many children not attending school. So, I believe that we need a proper plan to deal with it and then the school needs the officers to deal with it.

Some members mentioned after-school programmes. I am glad that while I was in Executive Council it was something that I paid much attention to. Proper after-school programmes can help this community, not just help the children with education and help them do their homework or get them a better grasp of a scripture lesson, but it keeps them out of trouble at that particular time from 3.00 p.m. to 6.00 p.m. in the afternoon when children are prone to be left alone either in the home or on the street.

I hear it lamented. Everybody is talking about these crowds that gather by the Anderson Building. Madam Speaker, why hasn't the ministry responsible pushed the issue of getting those children into some sort of after-school programmes? It is not easy to get the community—I know that because we tried and we got criticised for dealing with the Rehoboth Programme. But we went ahead and got the building. One of the Rotary Clubs made a proposal to our ministry and I jumped at the opportunity because I realised that area had many children that were not being attended to and a programme as such would have been able to help and it is helping. It is working whether some people like it or not.

I just cannot see why after I have been out of Executive Council since 1997 that there has not been one after-school programme started. Not one! And there were plans left that they could use school buildings and we do have good school plant. It is the only country in the Western Hemisphere (when I say Western Hemisphere let us talk about our territory, the Caribbean) that has such good schools and the money we have invested. They are the only ones that are not being used properly. Why not pay teachers to get involved with these after-school programmes in the schools and utilise our school buildings properly?

Madam Speaker, there is no proper hotel training school. While the Community College has some good facilities, I believe this needs to be taught at primary level. We are here pushing tourism, spending millions of dollars on it. We are talking about upgrading our tourism product. Madam Speaker, we need to get our young people understanding that it can be a good career and there is money to be made.

I believe that emphasis needs to be put at the primary level. We might be starting late, but we must start hotel training. One member spoke about that year that I as the Minister responsible had to do hotel training. Well, I was responsible for labour and I saw that as part of labour—not as part of education—but that is where you should have ministries working together. At this time I should say also that is why we only have five elected ministers so there is bound to be some crossover with subjects but why can't training be part of labour? Why not? In other countries it is. Why can't culture be part of sports? In the Commonwealth it is known to be. Tourism, also. So, I won't agree that culture has no place in any other ministry besides education.

My record stands on the performance in the cultural ministry. There we created the national hero, the national bird, upgraded the museum, put programmes in place. We have a National Children's choir. We started CAY-FEST, which I believe one of these days will be our national festival from that aspect of things. The libraries tried to put libraries in the districts. All this was accomplished while under my ministry and I don't have the time this morning to go through all the accomplishments. If you have a committed person, no matter where it is, the job can be done.

Madam Speaker, we have some very good students and we must assist those good students but we have to pay more attention to those that are falling behind.

Sometime ago we talked about the policy of requiring students to spend two years at the Community College prior to obtaining government assistance for study abroad. I would have hoped that I could have been told before I debated what, if anything, has been decided because I agree that it is necessary to set a clear cut policy on the matter. However, the system must be flexible and the Education Council must have discretion to make exceptions if they are going to continue in that vein and must exercise that discretion.

The need to support the Community College is a real one but without exceptions students could be disadvantaged and discouraged where attendance at the Community College may not be appropriate to them. This could be both detrimental to the student and to the country in general in terms of our ability to staff our workforce. The Community College two-year post high school programme could be more appropriate to students wishing to further their education, let's say, in United States. It is not always appropriate to students, from what I can gather, wishing to pursue qualifications in England, the West Indies and in many cases, Canada.

In any case, Madam Speaker, it is not realistic in relation to exceptional students who earn scholarships or places at first class institutions in various parts of the world to deny them needed government assistance simply on the basis that they would not be attending the Community College. Very importantly, where students are aiming for specialist fields of study it may well not be appropriate to expect them to do two years at the Community College.

Madam Speaker, I am saying this and I am paying particular attention to it because I have some complaints from my district. I will take time out to deal with just two, but I have had several. One wants to do a behavioural sciences degree that is in psychology and sociology. I will read the core requirements, research methods, cultural anthropology, principles of sociology, sociology of altruism and compassion, introduction to psychology, racial and ethnic relations, marriage and the family and into that you would have social change, conflict and resolution, the human side of spirituality, human behaviour and cultural adaptation. In addition to that, other modules would include contemporary social issues, sociology of relation and spirituality in Europe, theories of personal and social adjustment, psychology of adolescence, theories of personalities, marriage dynamics and growth and criminology.

Now, Madam Speaker, a child wanting to do this degree this is what they will have to study, what two years will do for them at our local community college I don't think can help.

There is another student written to, "You are invited to attend this year's graduation to receive your Honour Student Certificate. The ceremony will take place on 27th June 2000 at 7.00 p.m. at the Agape Family Worship Centre on Fairbanks Road.

"In order to assist us with seating arrangements, please contact the school to indicate whether or not you will be attending the ceremony.

"You should collect your invitations in June, one for you and your guest and one for your parents. Admission will be by the invitation card only, one person per invitation.

"Seating will be reserved for you and the ushers will direct you to the appropriate seat.

"We are requesting that for this year you wear your royal blue gown from last year as well as your cap. You should collect a 2000 parcel as well as your honour scroll from the Acting Principal prior to the ceremony.

"Honour students should wear a white blouse or white shirt and dark skirt or dark pants under the gown. No student who is improperly robed will be allowed to walk across the stage. If you do not have a gown, please contact the school. If you are unable to attend, a member of your family or someone designated by your family will collect your certificate.

"Please assist in complying with these requests. If you need assistance, please call Mrs. Kapoor. We are especially honoured to have you attend this year's ceremony. Your numbers indicate an excellent performance last year and I trust you will allow us to applaud your achievement."

Here is an acceptance letter from the University of Miami, "I am pleased to inform you that the Admission Committee has approved your application for admission to study at the University of Miami. Congratulations and welcome to our family.

"You may begin your studies in the fall semester, August 2000 in the pre-medicine programme in the College of Arts and Sciences.

"The University of Miami enjoys a significant academic reputation has one of the top research and teaching institutions in the country. You will be joining an excited academic community located in a beautiful and dynamic suburban setting. You should feel especially proud of our offer for admission.

"Competition for admission is particularly keen this year as a record number of applications have been submitted. Approximately 13,000 students have applied for the 1,800 places in our freshman class."

I should stop here and say that probably over the Western Hemisphere, the University of Miami has an excellent pre-med programme in the College of Arts and Sciences. So, our Caymanian out of 13,000 applications and 1,800 places has obtained a spot.

"We speak for the entire University of Miami community in saying that we recognise your fine academic record." I will stop there, Madam Speaker.

Now, telling a child that has gone through all this that they cannot get a scholarship and he or she must attend the Community College, while the country is importing doctors from all over the Commonwealth and all over the world will do that child no good. Right now the child is down in the dumps. I only wish that I had the capacity to say to that child, 'Go ahead my dear, here it is, I will fund it for the next five or nine years, whatever it takes for you to become a doctor.'

I don't know where the policy came from and I don't know what happened, but I wish that I had heard before I debated what changes have been made to it.

The Deputy Speaker: Honourable Member would this be a convenient time to take the luncheon break?

The proceedings will be suspended until 2.15 p.m.

PROCEEDINGS SUSPENDED AT 12.43 PM

PROCEEDINGS RESUMED AT 2.50 PM

[Hon. Mabry Kirkconnell, MBE, JP in the Chair]

The Speaker: Proceedings are resumed. Debate continues on Private Member's Motion No. 14/2000. The First Elected Member for West Bay, continuing his debate.

Mr. W. McKeeva Bush: Mr. Speaker, I believe that we have a good Community College. It is an institution that has grown by leaps and bounds. One of the problems that we are experiencing is that I don't believe it gets the support that is needed from the ministry level. Certainly, they have a good board but not enough is done to alert our people in the marketing of the Community College. Not enough is done to let our young people know what we have in that Community College. That is a big problem. It has to be, Mr. Speaker, when you are moving around this country and you hear so many people say, 'well, we don't have this opportunity and we cannot do this and that' yet we do have that institution with so much available there. I know when I get on a public platform I try to inform people as to the merits of the Community College.

I have faith in the president and the board in that they have done a good job to build that institution. I supported the former Minister of Education strongly in the building and funding of the College in 1987. I believe that it is one of the good assets that this country has. I would hope, Mr. Speaker, that one of these days that could be the University of the Cayman Islands—it has the ability to become the University of the Cayman Islands. There is no reason why we should not strive to that level. What a good thing it would be if we had our own university attached to one of the stronger universities in England, the U.S., or Canada.

Mr. Speaker, one of the things that I think is wrong in the system is that there is not enough emphasis put on information technology. I don't believe that we have sufficient ability with computers thriving from the primary level. I make reference to when the permanent secretary for education and I went to Singapore. We saw that primary school children could hook up the permanent secretary to the Cayman Islands from their primary school. I would like to see computer labs in all primary, middle and secondary schools, and computer training for all government primary and high school teachers. I believe all students should be scheduled for at least two periods per week of computer education. That is the way the world is going and we are talking about the age of information technology. We must put more emphasis on our children at that level because that is the way they are going to learn in the first instance as the years progress.

Mr. Speaker, I spoke sometime ago at length on a careers advisory service. At that point, something was said in the local press about MLAs sticking to the subjects that they know. Well, I feel it is my responsibility if I see something that is not put in place that I believe is good for this country, I should speak on it whether I have a degree or not.

Mr. Speaker, I believe the same way that we have an Education Council and we have a secretary of that Education Council, we should have a similar setup for a Careers Advisory Service or a centre. It can be to disseminate information on scholarships available, public and private. It's main objective, of course, to advise in careers, to start from middle school level with heavy emphasis in Grade 10 or thereabout before the students select subjects to be studied in grades 11 and 12. I keep saying it is so important that students be able to select subjects that are relevant to their chosen careers. But they cannot start off wanting to be a doctor and then end up midway with something else because they did not make the right choice in the first instance. The careers' service should be all about that.

I believe, Mr. Speaker, that we should give local scholarships. And I believe that some of that is being done at the Community College to all Caymanian students enrolled in fulltime studies irrespective of their level. We all talk about a learning society and lifelong learning. Perhaps, it would be a good thing to encourage a more learning society by giving one day off per year for all employees from the public and private sectors for educational purposes.

I think someone already mentioned that there should be an accreditation council. Again, similar to the Education Council, we could have this accreditation council evaluate on local tertiary educational institutions and programmes. There is no reason why we should not have it. We cannot progress, Mr. Speaker, if we don't have some of these things put in place.

Mr. Speaker, one of the things that I have recently been concerned about is the high cost of buildings. I understand that one of the new schools is slated to cost some $375 per square foot. Why in the world would a building for a school cost that amount of money? I cannot see why Government is allowing figures to go out in the papers to say that they are willing to pay $375 per square foot for buildings when it is only four walls. If they are talking about bringing it to hurricane strength then that should not be that more cost because you are only talking about some more steel and bolts for tying down the roof.

Now, I talked to a contractor about it and someone else told me that it should add ten percent more on to the building cost. Why in the world is the Government going to pay $375 per square foot? All that is doing is taking money that the country does not have and allowing for cost to be pushed up on the rest of the public in this country, and Government sits down and allow this sort of thing. I would hope to see some changes in that direction.

There have been many changes over the years. But I believe constant changes need to be made for this country to be kept in step of the changing times in which we live. I don't know how much will be or can be done between now and September when the House will be prorogued, but there are a number of things that need urgent attention that I think can be done in the meantime.

I believe that we have some good staff in the administration of education, dedicated people, that is, in the Education Department and in the schools. Mr. Speaker, for what we pay our teachers can we get better ones? Being mindful of the fact that our teachers take our children all day and some of them stay well after school to give them extra time, I would certainly hope that a new administration would set a better pay scale for teachers because I don't believe that we should be paying them the small salary they are receiving.

It is profession that is a noble one—one that the country cannot do without. I believe that more emphasis must be laid in that direction. I thank them for what they have done for this country. Many of them make sacrifices, some of them have not been given any security of tenure and I would hope that could be strengthened out.

Mr. Speaker, somewhere down the line it has been said that there is much concern for the young people because there are so many young people seeking office. I am not concerned about that. I think it is good in a country when we are so free that anybody can seek elective office. I think it is good to see so many young people interested. I certainly remember that I was very young when I got involved. The first time I ran for politics I lost. I ran because I had a zeal to do something for the people of this country. I believe that my record stands.

There will be much talk about who did or did not do what. Not everything I did was perfect, but I believe that I did leave a good foundation. I know that a lot was not done after I left, but I am proud of the things I accomplished. I have no concern about the many young people seeking office. I don't think there is any reason to be worried that the system is falling to pieces and that is why we have so many people running. I don't think that is the reason. I do not believe that is the reason. I think it is a good thing when we have a system to see so many young people wanting to be involved.

Mr. Speaker, I support the motion. I know the Minister is out of the Chamber for the time being. I would hope that he would take notice and, as I said, I don't know how much can be implemented between now and when the House is prorogued in September, but I would hope that those things that are blatant and can help move the system along will be done. I trust that a new administration will move some of these fundamental questions and matters along quickly, God willing.

Thank you.

The Speaker: The floor is open to debate, does any other Member wish to speak?

The Third Elected Member for West Bay.

Mr. John D. Jefferson, Jr.: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I rise to offer my contribution on Private Member's Motion No. 14/2000 entitled Public Education System. I think personally that it is a very good motion. It is very timely and it could not be on a more important subject, that is, the subject of education.

Listening to the Minister of Education during his contribution I almost felt like Felix when Paul was invited to appear before him and state his case. When Paul was finished, Felix said, 'Paul almost thou persuadest me to be a Christian'. Listening to the Minister of Education, if you did not know better, he would convince you that there is nothing wrong with the system.

What concerns me is that everybody including members of this House and the listening public knows that we have a problem in education. Now, I don't think there is any problem that we cannot fix, but the system needs . . . and I use the words of the Honourable Minister of Education "tweaking," it needs improving. There is always room for improvement.

Mr. Speaker, what I learned in my short lifetime is that until you can recognise that there is a problem you cannot come up with any possible solutions. The other thing I learned is that I don't know everything there is to know about any particular subject. If you keep your mouth shut and listen, it is amazing what you can learn from other people. I would have thought that would have been the approach of the Minister of Education.

It is not my intention to criticise for the sake of criticising because he has made his contribution in education. Those before him have made their contribution but there is room for improvement in our public education system.

Mr. Speaker, when you look at what we spend on public education, that is, recurrent and capital wise, we have every right as representatives to demand proper accountability in the system for what is spent. We also have a right to demand results that we can all be proud of.

Mr. Speaker, I think, on average the recurrent expenditure on education, that is, only the Minister of Education, the Education Department, the schools, staff et cetera runs us about $25 million a year. In addition to that, every year there are requests for capital projects in connection with education. That is, schools, playfields and other areas that are necessary for the educational programme to operate as a whole.

I recall probably five or six years ago (or even longer than that) we had the launching of the strategic plan for education. I was even invited to one of the receptions where we met with Dr. Cook and the other members of the team. He tried as best he could to explain to us what was involved in the plan for education. Mr. Speaker, I personally had a lot of enthusiasm that maybe we were taking a very revolutionary approach to education and that we would see some improvements that we would all welcome and be proud of.

I think there were some 353 persons from the community involved in coming up with those strategies and putting together a concerted effort to point education in the direction that we wanted it to go.

Mr. Speaker, it was not long after that, it seems, that the plan fizzled. The next emphasis was Vision 2008 and the Permanent Secretary and the Minister responsible for Education were all of a sudden in charge of Vision 2008. It appears that in the shuffle the strategic plan for education got kind of lost in the excitement because some five or six years later, the plans that were put together and proposed for an improvement in our public education system are still waiting to be implemented.

I would dare say that the implementation is probably two to three years behind schedule. I have come up with my own conclusions as to why we have experienced these delays. First of all, I believe once the policy document was put together and the ministry was aware of the direction we wanted to take with education in this country, sufficient expertise should have been employed to see to it that the plan was properly and promptly implemented. That was not the case, Mr. Speaker. I think we employed a few members of staff in that particular area and as I understand it teachers who are fulltime in the classroom were asked to donate some of their time in order to contribute to the process.

Now, it is very difficult for someone who is responsible for a classroom all day to all of sudden make himself or herself available for such a very specialist, very intensive task, maybe in the evenings or even on weekends. This is the reason why I believe that this plan is still not implemented. Like I said, it is probably running two years behind.

As I understand it, the other problem was certain members of staff were never exposed to the training that was necessary in order to equip them with the knowledge and expertise necessary to put in place what they were responsible for. I believe that a much more concerted approach should have been taken with regard to the implementation of the strategic plan for education. I am very disappointed that four or five years later, we are still running maybe two to three years behind as far as the implementation is concerned.

Mr. Speaker, I am not a specialist in the area of education. But by listening and talking with people and just through my own exposure I have come up with a few conclusions of my own. I think personally that the strategic plan tried to encompass too many particular issues or subjects. Now, we did not have to reinvent the wheel in all these different areas. Maybe in the area of Social Studies there was a need for the curriculum to have some local influence so that our young people would be exposed to some of their experiences and culture that we have enjoyed as a country. But I believe that we might have taken on too much. We are a little too ambitious in regard to what was realistic with this plan.

The other problem we are experiencing is that the curriculum or syllabuses drafted . . . there is much excitement that only 20% of the students are able to pass it. Now, I believe that any system has to take into account a realistic objective and should be an objective that can be achieved by a majority rather than by a minority of the students. What about the other 80% that have a problem grasping the contents of the particular curriculum or syllabus?

The other problem that I was not aware existed to such a large extent until recently is that some 25% to 30% of our high school graduates are only coming out with a school leaving certificate. Mr. Speaker, I was a little amazed to learn what you had to do in order to receive your school leaving certificate. I was told that as long as you have attended school for at least 90% of the sessions, that was in your favour. You were not supposed to have suspensions, that is, days that you were not allowed to attend classes - more than fourteen days. If it is 15 days then you are put on a blacklist of some sort.

The other criterion was the effort level. Apparently that ran from one to three with one being the highest. Your effort must not drop below a 3.0 in order to graduate.

The system that was in place when I was a student in the public education system was . . . and I will give you a few examples of what I am talking about. A lot of these suspensions took place because a student was disrupting a class, or a student for one reason or the other got in a little fight and he or she was suspended from school. Mr. Speaker, I don't know who came up with the thinking that said a justifiable punishment for that type of behaviour is suspending a student from school. But I can tell you from experience that if I were involved in that kind of behaviour when I was in the public education system and you suspended me from school, I would say, 'Hooray, big deal!'. I would call a couple of my cousins and for fourteen days we would go fishing—big deal! No, that was not the kind of system that existed when I was in school.

Mr. Speaker, I recall when we were at the old West Bay Town Hall as students, one day during lunchtime we decided that we were going to make a mess by picking green guineps and pelt each other and other students in the school. When the principal returned that afternoon, she asked who was responsible for the mess that she saw. Automatically, the culprits were identified and she grabbed her strap and told all the boys, including me, 'you follow me to the backroom, I will deal with you!'. Mr. Speaker, I am talking about boys who were probably six-feet. She got in that backroom and closed the door and she dealt with every one of us.

Now, you dared not lift your hand to slap her. You had to be crazy to think about something like that. Plus you had the parental support. If I went home that afternoon and told my Mom or Dad that Miss Range hit me because I messed up at school by pelting guineps, do you know what would happen? I would get another one at home. That is not the case today.

Are you going to tell me that it does not make more academic sense to have a corporal correction programme in our school that deals with a kid that has behavioural problems than suspending him from school and telling him when it is time for graduation that he cannot graduate because he had fourteen days suspension from school or he did not attend school 90% of the time? Mr. Speaker, it does not make any sense.

Mr. Speaker, a parent called me the other day, as she was concerned about a scholarship for her child who was going off for further education. She said, 'my son who is a student at George Hicks High School helps to tutor students in his class who are reading at the third grade level!'. I heard the Minister, just the other day, boasting about a literacy percentage of 98% in the Cayman Islands. Mr. Speaker, it depends on how you determine literacy. If it means reading the little book that we use to read, "Jack jumped, and Mr. Willy . . . and Mr. Dan" and all those. Mr. Speaker, we have a serious problem with the public education system in this country producing students that are competent and well-educated.

I make it a point almost annually to attend the graduating class at the John Gray High School. I am probably talking about 300 students on average that go there. You know, the concern that I share when I sit there and watch those kids cross the platform to receive their little piece of paper is how well have we prepared that young person for the real world academically. Mr. Speaker, what is sad is that a large percentage of our graduates cannot even fill out a simple application for a job because of their lack of skill in reading, writing, and comprehension.

The question I ask every year is, Where do the majority of our graduates coming out of high school go because after that night you don't see many of them coming forward for government scholarships and you don't see many of them in the workforce. What has happened to them? I would dare say that we probably have about 10% to 12% of our graduates who express a desire to go on to higher education—300 students, therefore, 10% would be 30 students. Add another 2% on to that and you will probably get 35 students. So, 35 or 40 students out of 300 students decide that they want higher education. Regardless of the system that you may have in place there are some students who do very well academically including students at the George Hicks High School and the John Gray High School.

As I said, 30% of our students are coming out with just a school leaving certificate so most of them are not allowed to take any external exams at all. Every year, there is this great boast about how well our students do on the CXC examinations. I want to encourage and congratulate those students who have done very well, but if you narrow down the number who take the exam then naturally your percentage of the class that passes improves because the pool is smaller. I believe that is one reason, percentage wise, the Cayman Islands have done very well with regard to the CXC exams.

The other area that I would like to move on to deals with the government scholarship programmes. I just mentioned that probably 10% - 12% of the graduates have the desire and ability to go to higher education. With today's cost of education . . . Mr. Speaker, I am quite sure you were in the same position. I remember when I was a student at Morgan State University in Baltimore it cost me about US$1,000 a year—that [included] books, room and board, food and the works. I remember in those days they were predicting that the cost of education would rise to a certain figure. I would say on average it probably cost in the region of $14,000 to $16,000 a year today.

Most parents in this country do not have the financial means to send their child to university or college. When I talk about university and college, most people are thinking in terms of external universities. Most parents cannot afford to send their children to college but parents have a desire for their children to get a better education than they got in this country.

Over the first eight years of this government's administration (that is, the National Team Government) the one thing I was proud of was the fact that if you had the ability and the desire to get admission into a college or university, Government made money available to you by way of a scholarship regardless your surname, your family connections or your status in society. Mr. Speaker, that is the way it should be. I don't have the statistics, but I can daresay that over the last ten to eleven years, Government has invested millions of dollars in scholarships to educate our young people abroad.

Mr. Speaker, not too long ago that was not the position. I recall when I was a student thinking about going to university. I found every excuse in the book for not wanting to go. Do you know why? First of all, I did not have a particular surname. My father was not in a financial position to do so himself. Forget about a Government scholarship—they were reserved for the very few and privileged. You know, probably the best investment in that area in 1968 (just about the time I was coming out of high school) my mother took us on vacation to Baltimore, Maryland, to visit family and friends there. While I was there my granduncle's wife said to me, 'John, you are going to college, aren't you?' I mean she planted a seed and all of sudden I really got excited. She said, 'You are not only going to college but here is where I would recommend you go. I would suggest that while you are here visit Morgan State, pick up an application and take it from there'.

She said to me, 'I work there, it is an outstanding school and it is not very expensive'. Mr. Speaker, let me tell you, I had difficulty sleeping that evening. I was so excited about the possibility of going to college.

I remember writing to my Dad who was in Vancouver at the time on training, saying to him that I wanted to go to school and hoped that he could find the money in order to send me. Mr. Speaker, in order to make that happen, my father took an early withdrawal of his pension from the US Government that he had earned in Swan Island in order to send me to school. Mr. Speaker, that was the environment that existed when I was a student in this country. That is why I feel so passionate about this issue of higher education.

Mr. Speaker, the graduating class of 2000, many of those students have applied for Government scholarships in order to further their education overseas. I have attended a few of those graduations and I know some of those graduates. Many of them have excelled academically. They have done very well on their SAT exams to the point were many of them were given credit by the university or college that they applied for admission because of their academic accomplishments.

Mr. Speaker, just recently I got permission from you to read a statement in this House about government scholarships. The reason for that was because our young people have now been told that in order to qualify for a government scholarship they have to attend the first two years at the Community College of the Cayman Islands. Mr. Speaker, right now I fully support the Community College. I also fully support the government scholarships being made available for any student who wants to attend that institution in order to further their education. But under no circumstances am I prepared to say or agree as a condition of a government scholarship that our students have to first of all attend the Community College of the Cayman Islands.

There are some majors not offered at the Community College. The other thing it reflects is that whoever came up with the policy is not fully appraised of the US university or college system. By that I mean, there are some majors where the students start in the first semester not two to three years later.

Recently, a question was asked (I think, by the First Elected Member for George Town) on Government's policy with regard to government scholarships. The Minister for Education provided a very lengthy answer with regard to the policy on government policy. I want to just read with your permission, sir, what he said in his answer on the requirements for overseas scholarships. He said, "Effective September 1990 only two-year scholarships will be offered for overseas study with the following exceptions. I want you to listen to this, Mr. Speaker:

"(1) Students with seven University of Cambridge, that is, GCSE or IGCSE passes are grade B or above;

2) Students with seven CXC passes, grade two and above at the General Technical level; 3) Students with a combined score of 1300 on the SAT exam.”

This automatically excludes any graduate from the private schools unless they have 1300 on their SAT to qualify for an overseas scholarship.

Mr. Speaker, I have a 15-year old nephew who attends Wesleyan Christian Academy—he could have graduated this year if he wanted to. By the time he graduates next year, he would have done every subject and every course offered in the AC programme. He took the exam for the first time the other day and he got 1250, and I thought he did exceptional. With an SAT score of 1300 you could get into most Ivy League schools including Duke University in North Carolina.

These guidelines are very restrictive, very discriminatory. The only two students that I recently heard had an SAT score of that level were the daughter of the president of the Community College and I understand a 13 year old student that goes to school in Cayman Brac because apparently his mom works with students in the area of SAT exams. For me as a representative to sit here and accept this as being right and acceptable in this country, Mr. Speaker, I would not under any circumstances.

Do you know what I want the Minister to do, Mr. Speaker—

The Speaker: Could I interrupt you for one moment. Is it the wish of members that we waive the afternoon break and continue straight through?

Mr. John D. Jefferson, Jr.: Yes sir.

The Speaker: We will continue right through. Please continue.

Mr. John D. Jefferson, Jr.: It says, “The Education Council adopted the following modification to the regulations for overseas scholarships.”

So, the Minister is saying that the Education Council came up with this guideline for scholarships. Now, I want the Minister to do this House and I a big favour. I would like that Minister to table in this House the minutes of that meeting in September 1999 where the Education Council adopted these guidelines for overseas scholarships.

Mr. Speaker, I am not a very suspicious person but the conclusion I have come to is that these guidelines were drafted by the President of the Community College and until there is evidence to indicate otherwise, I am going to continue to believe that. It does not matter who is involved. If it is wrong it is wrong and I am not prepared for the President of the Community College or anybody else to come in this country and build any little empire unto himself at the expense of our young people. We should be bending over backwards to accommodate our young people who have the ability and the desire to further their education.

We have probably about 16,000 or 17,000 people here on work permits and we are always talking about not being able to find qualified Caymanians. Now, for the Minister of Education to come to this House and talk this kind of nonsense with regard to Government scholarships is wrong. And I expected better from the Minister of Education. He knows better. He is there to take care of the majority of our students not a favoured few.

I made a statement in the House entitled “Government Scholarships Grants.” I gave the Minister notice that I was doing a statement and I even gave him a copy. I read it the next day, which gave him a whole day to put together some reply. But in his reply, he said, “A meeting has been set for next Tuesday, June 20th in the afternoon to have a look at these areas where there has been dissatisfaction with the local scholarships. I think in the light of the concerns that has been raised what I will do, as requested by the Honourable Member, I will take this back to the Education Council who has the power to grant scholarships by law and ask them to review this policy and hopefully there can be a common meeting of the different views on this to find a solution.” Mr. Speaker, that is exactly what I expected the Minister to do.

Now, you recall when that question came before the House on government scholarships, I asked the Minister to give us the names of the members of the Education Council. I was told: Mrs. Margie Ebanks, Mrs. Reina Jefferson, Mrs. Joy Basdeo, Mr. Sam Basdeo, the Second Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman, Dr. Cummings and a number of other names were mentioned that made up the Council. Mr. Speaker, I understand that they met on Tuesday and I thought the reason for it was that they would have—

The Speaker: I would like to caution the Member that the Honourable Minister said that he would report back on that meeting, and that report has not been made.

Mr. John D. Jefferson, Jr.: I am aware of that, Mr. Speaker, and I am not even going into that direction but I have a few comments.

Do you know what I resent? The morning that question was raised on government scholarships, I raised a question on whether or not the Minister had a problem with a potential conflict of interest seeing that the Permanent Secretary for Education and her husband were both members of the Council. He gave an answer. Mr. Speaker, like I mentioned, my wife is one of those members of the Education Council. Now, I don't even like to talk about anything related to myself but when it comes to my wife, she is a very professional woman. She has served in the capacity as Chairman of the Red Cross for many years and for the last two years is the Branch Director of the Red Cross, which is an institution that is very neutral politically and otherwise. She has always had a concern with regard to the welfare of our students as far as education is concerned.

But when she came home Tuesday night, she said, “John, I was asked by the members of the Education Council to leave that meeting because they were discussing the new guidelines asked for in your statement in the Legislative Assembly.” Like I said, she is a member of that Council—and the Council is going to exclude her but the two members that I pointed out that there might be a conflict of interest are allowed to stay in the meeting and make their contribution. Mr. Speaker, let me tell you, that does not sit too well with me. It has nothing to do with my wife. Okay? If they had excluded you, I would have felt the same way. You have the vested responsibility as a member of that Council to be in a position where you can make your contribution and you have made yours, and other members have made theirs. But for them at that stage to exclude her . . .

If the Minister of Education comes back here with any nonsense with regard to government scholarships, I hope that every parent who applied for a scholarship this year would turn out in the front of the Legislative Assembly and march against such a policy. If they do, I will be right up front leading the cause. That is how passionate I feel about this issue.

If the Education Council fails to do what is right, the first opportunity that I have in Finance Committee, I am going to move a motion that we set the conditions for government scholarships in this country. I am not prepared under any circumstance to allow anyone to come in here—be it a Caymanian or a non-Caymanian, it does not matter to me—and build an empire unto himself or herself at the expense of our young people.

If someone brings something to my attention I have the guts to address the issue regardless of how unpopular it might be. I had parents calling me and saying, “John, my daughter applied for government scholarship and to be advised so late with regard to the decision that my child has to go to the Community College for the next two years as a condition is unfair.” First of all, it is late and they have already made arrangements with regard to attending a university overseas. Mr. Speaker, the unfortunate position that some of those parents find themselves in is that they cannot afford to go out and borrow money to send that child overseas to university or college. That is sad in this country.

I think last year’s budget was over $275 million. And on an annual basis I think we set aside about $1 million for scholarships. We are talking nonsense about saving money by sending our students to the Community College and then turn around and sign an agreement with the University of Miami which is one of the most expensive universities in the United States to provide teacher training—it does not make sense. We won’t save money for Government. Let’s look at those areas that are so politically motivated. We could cut $2 million to $4 million off the capital budget and not miss it, Mr. Speaker—put it towards education. If that is the concern of the Minister, let him come back to this House and say, ‘We are concerned with regard to the rising cost of education overseas. I am going to need to request an additional $1 million to $2 million in order to ensure that my programme continues’. There is not one Member in this House that would not have supported that kind of request from the Minister. I am going to wait and see what the Minister comes back here with.

Another area that a parent brought to my attention that we should be looking at with regard to government scholarships is that of security bonds. Mr. Speaker, when you and I go to Barclays Bank or Bank of Nova Scotia or wherever else we bank to borrow money, the bank is going to hold whatever you have has an asset, which is normally jointly owned. I think personally it puts our students at a disadvantage to require that only one parent can sign as a surety. That is what I am told, Mr. Speaker, and then you have to go out and find another one. Today, people are very careful with regard to their financial commitments or obligations.

The other thing that was mooted for a long time even by the Minister is that the scholarship application should be revised.

The Speaker: It has been done.

Mr. John D. Jefferson, Jr.: I helped a student recently and it still consists of about 12 to 15 pages with a lot of irrelevant information that has to be provided. I think it is time for us to revise that document to make it practical and something useful for the purpose that it is intended. In other words, we must make it as easy as possible for our young people to get a further education in this country.

Questions have been asked in this House on an alternative education programme. That is a fancy word for a holding facility for kids with disciplinary problems. I know firsthand because I had a foster child who attended the Alternative Education Programme Facility behind the library. He said, ‘Uncle John, I go in there and I might do a little Math and English and then we play games, be it pool or whatever else for the rest of the day’. As I said before, if we had a proper corporal discipline programme in our schools we would not have any problem with alternative education. You would not! I am hoping the next Minister of Education has the guts to call for a public education programme—yes—but there are conditions. The conditions are if you want your child to attend West Bay Primary, or George Town Primary, or the High School or wherever else, you must sign a statement agreeing that if your child needs corporal correction the school has the authority to do so.

Mr. Speaker, we have become so modern in this country and that is one of the problems we have. We are so modern that that is old fashion. A young Caymanian mother said to me the other day, ‘You know, Mr. Jefferson, my child attends school and was recently suspended’. I asked why he was suspended. She said, ‘He was suspended for throwing a rock at another child’. She said this was the second or third time that he had a little incident of that nature. Her attitude was if her child had a problem in school that school should not have the authority to deal with that child, if they have a problem they should call her. Now, with schools that have 500 - 600 students can you imagine the mess the principal would be in when every time there is an incident they have to call a parent? Mr. Speaker, my policy would be that you sign it as a condition of your child attending the school. If you don't want to do that then you make alternative arrangements. That is one of the biggest problems we have in our public education system, the lack of discipline, the lack of corporal correction. That is one of the main problems that we have.

Mr. Speaker, when I rode from West Bay to George Town on Mr. Garrison's bus, I did not have any warden on that bus. Today, every one of those buses has one warden to keep order.

If we can have an alternative educational programme it must work. It must be something that is geared to ensuring that even those students that have a behavioural problem or whatever have an opportunity to get a good education in a little different setting.

Mr. Speaker, today we have problems in this country. Just the other day, the Commissioner of Police sat here answering questions on gang activity in this country. We have a problem with regard to juvenile crime in this country. We have a problem in this country with single parents, poverty, resentment, unemployment, all as a result of failures of our public education system to adequately prepare these young people for a responsible place in society.

Now, the system that we have in public education is that as long as you attend school and keep your nose clean with little effort you can slide. The Minister of Education cannot come here and say, 'well, the reason why we don't have those programmes in place is because we don't have the money voted by the Legislative Assembly or Finance Committee'. Every school starting with the primary level should have a programme in place that ensures our children can learn to read properly. I know, for example, at Wesleyan Christian Academy they have a reading centre. Once the child comes out of Kindergarten he goes into the reading centre and he spends a semester or two there and they work on a machine. It is amazing. You find very few students, if any, because the system that they have there if you cannot read you cannot master the system and if you cannot master the system then you cannot graduate. It is amazing how little things like that improve the results that you get.

A student could be 10 years old but I think it is important for that child to operate at the level that he is capable of operating at and gradually move through the system. Even if it takes that child until he is nineteen before he graduates, he masters the programme. Prior to the 1988 legislature, our students were coming out at 15 to 16 years old. I think the Third Elected Member for Bodden Town brought a motion asking for Government to add a year in order to allow the students to be in school a little longer, hopefully giving them a little more time to mature and move on.

Mr. Speaker, these are the kinds of things that we are saying are wrong with the system. That does not mean that you are going to point any figures at anybody. I would have thought that the right approach would be to acknowledge that we do have problems and hopefully we can come up with solutions to those problems.

Today, we have security guards (that did not happen when I was there) at the schools. I have a little nephew that works at the George Hicks High School and in the morning when I go by to drop him off, there is a security guard at the gate. Unless he lets you in, you cannot get into the school. I am not saying there is anything wrong with that but we must demand more from our public education system. In the schools we are told that there are gangs. We have heard of injuries to students. I think just this week I heard where one of my little cousins was hit in the eye with a rock at one of the schools. The chances are that student might be permanently injured by that incident.

I have had other parents say, 'Mr. Jefferson, my son was on his way to or from school when three or four boys ganged him and beat him'. We must demand more from our education system.

Sometime ago, I brought a motion calling for the Minister of Education to consider appointing chaplains in the schools. When I was a student at John Gray High School (back in those days it was known as Cayman Islands High School) every morning we had devotions and it was normally the principal who conducted devotions, Rev. John Gray. That is not the situation today, Mr. Speaker, because I come in contact with a lot of students from the middle school and the high school and I ask them, "Do you have devotions? How often do you have them? Who conducts them?" I am told it is normally the head of the house, whoever is in charge of that particular area would call the students together and they would discuss what is coming up by way of activities in the school for the week or the day and they may take time out to say the Lord's prayer. Mr. Speaker, that is not good enough.

A lot of our students today are not exposed to that type of religious educational training from their home. A lot of parents do not encourage them or force them to go to church. And, if they are not exposed to it in the schools, pretty soon you are going to have a society that has grown up without experiencing the things that you and I [experienced] when we were students, that is, a fear and a respect for God.

I see no reason why this is such a difficult request and I believe that it would still be a good idea to have this particular thing done whereby a chaplain is appointed for the George Hicks High School and the John Gray High School.

Mr. Speaker, I am getting ready to go on to another area, if you want to adjourn at this stage.

SUPPLEMENTARIES

The Speaker: The Fourth Elected Member for George Town.

Dr. Frank McField: Can the honourable minister say why the unaudited account for 1999 there is $792,884, and for the projected (which is the cost expenses and others) there is $775,429 for the year 2000? Why is it more for 1999 than for 2000?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Tourism, Commerce, Transport and Works.

Hon. Thomas C. Jefferson: When we compare the two amounts, the projected for 2000 ($775,429), and the unaudited comparative for 1999 ($792,884), the main difference is the amount on salaries and wages. In 1999, the salaries and wages amounted to $629,249; the projected in the year 2000 is $561,318.

The Speaker: The Fourth Elected Member for George Town.

Dr. Frank McField: If all that is included in this are projected salaries in terms of the majority, what percentage is for maintenance and upkeep?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Tourism, Commerce, Transport and Works.

Hon. Thomas C. Jefferson: My previous answer was focusing on what the difference was between the $775,429 and the $792,884. What I pointed out was that one element of that cost, the salaries and wages, was projected to be less than it was in 1999. But there are a number of additional expenses. For example, in 1999, the $629,249 for salaries and wages, there is also items for security. I will round it off in thousands. Security, $29,000; payments for utilities $33,000; telephone and fax $9,700; administration $32,000; maintenance of the grounds $4,200; and expenditures relating to the great house, $600; professional fees, $1100; general supplies $5300; motor expense and travel allowance $3100; vehicle insurance $1100; building expenditure $6800; expenditure on the theatre $3500; bank charges $475; and I think that basically covers all the items that make up the $792,000 (rounded off), which is the 1999 unaudited figures.

Looking at 2000, just to ensure I give the full details, the projected figures are for salaries and wages $561,318; expenses in relation to training and education $1600; expenditure for building equipment and maintenance $61,700; expenses on the grounds $13,300; utilities

$36,300; marketing $31,000; administration expenses $25,000; telephone and fax $8500; general supplies $1700; professional fees $2900; vehicle repair and mileage $3300; insurance $11,100; signage $1800; depreciation $3500; and another category called "other" $2400 (a number of small items that would normally be categorised as miscellaneous). All figures are rounded to nearest hundred dollars.

The Speaker: The Third Elected Member for West Bay.

Mr. John D. Jefferson, Jr.: Can the honourable minister provide details on the marketing programme for the operation?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Tourism, Commerce, Transport and Works.

Hon. Thomas C. Jefferson: Marketing functions are carried out in a variety of ways. First, if we visit the Cayman Islands Tourism Website, www.caymanislands.ky, we would find pictures of Pedro St. James and Botanic Park. You would find the write up on it. So, it's marketed through the website. It's marketed through a variety of magazines in the Cayman Islands, such as Horizon, What's Hot?, among others. It's also marketed in the hotels and condos, on the cruise ships, called Land and Sea marketing. We are also tied in with a variety of cruise ships where land tour operators, and I think Atlantis also takes tours to Pedro St. James, we have passengers from Princess Line, Royal Caribbean, Celebrity, Carnival. In addition to that, the brochures for Pedro and Botanic Park are at various promotions being done by our staff in the United States and other countries. So the marketing is done globally as we promote the Cayman Islands in general.

The Speaker: The Third Elected Member for West Bay.

Mr. John D. Jefferson, Jr.: The minister understands as well as I do that the most effective and immediate market for visitors to Pedro St. James is the cruise ships. In order to capture that business you need to make personal contact with the tour directors. I wonder if the minister can say who has been responsible for the cruise ship contacts, and if he has information available, how many cruise ship passengers have we seen at Pedro St. James this year?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Tourism, Commerce, Transport and Works.

Hon. Thomas C. Jefferson: The information we have, the statistics on visitors to Pedro St. James . . . we have seen a rather successful improvement in the number of passengers coming. In January we received roughly 2200 passengers. This is primarily cruise ship passengers. We don't have the breakdown, but we know it's primarily cruise ship passengers visiting Pedro St. James for these four months.

In January there were almost 2700 visitors, March, almost 3000, and in April 2300. But when we compare this to 1999, for the four months we are up 21%. I think we are well on our way. The numbers are not tremendous, but they are increasing. We know that April was not a good month for visitors to the Cayman Islands either to stay in hotels or on cruise ships. It has a lot to do when Easter falls. Shortly after Easter Monday, the summer rates kick in. So, sometimes when Easter falls in the third week people are holding off to travel in the following month. We found that evidence in the May figures.

The Speaker: The Third Elected Member for West Bay.

Mr. John D. Jefferson, Jr.: There were very optimistic projections with respect to Pedro St. James in regard to its profitability. Can the honourable minister say at the pace that he sees business increasing how long is he thinking it will take for Pedro St. James to be financially self-sufficient?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Tourism, Commerce, Transport and Works. I think he's asking for an opinion. If you wish to give it, you may.

Hon. Thomas C. Jefferson: I would not venture an opinion at this particular time. I will say that the ministry and the staff of Pedro St. James are making various contacts talking to vice presidents of the cruise lines, talking to directors of shore excursions for these cruise lines in order to ensure the growth that we have seen in the numbers, though small, continue. It is our objective to ensure that Pedro St. James breaks even as quickly as it is possible to achieve.

The Speaker: The Third Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. Linford A. Pierson: Looking at the statement as an accountant, I can see that there is a tremendous improvement reflected in the projected statement for 2000, as compared with the unaudited 1999 statement. For instance, on cost of goods sold, I notice that the cost for 1999 was approximately 34% of total revenue. And for the year 2000 it drops to 22%. I wonder if the minister can give an indication of the improvement of this 12%? Can he give a breakdown of that figure?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Tourism, Commerce, Transport and Works.

Hon. Thomas C. Jefferson: I think the Third Elected Member for George Town put his finger on some of the work being done by the Tourism Attraction Board and the management of that organisation in particular to Pedro St. James. There's more focus on events, which has a lower cost. That's why we see some difference in this figure. And there is better control over the expenditure making sure that we don't get into things that are not profitable. I hope I am answering the member to his satisfaction, but it's more in relation to control and taking decisions that have been properly analysed.

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Can the honourable minister state exactly what the reasoning is behind the subsidy for the year 2000 being what it is based on the projections which leaves a surplus? I don't agree with the way the statement is made (but I am not an accountant) where it says "net income." I don't consider gifts to be income. Can the honourable minister state exactly how those figures were arrived at? Was it just to leave a bit of padding for ongoing operations?

The Speaker: Before I ask the honourable minister to respond, I would appreciate a motion for the suspension of Standing Order 23(7) & (8).

SUSPENSION OF STANDING ORDER 23 (7) AND (8)

Hon. Thomas C. Jefferson: I am pleased to move the suspension of Standing Order 23(7) & (8) to allow Question Time to continue.

The Speaker: The motion has been made and seconded that we suspend Standing Order 23(7) & (8) to allow Question Time to continue beyond the hour of 11 o'clock. Those in favour please say Aye, those against No.

AYES.

The Speaker: The Ayes have it. Question Time will continue.

AGREED. STANDING ORDER 23(7) AND (8) SUSPENDED TO ALLOW QUESTION TIME TO CONTINUE BEYOND 11 AM.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Tourism, Commerce, Transport and Works.

Hon. Thomas C. Jefferson: In the budgeting for the year 2000, the actual five month figure came out better than what was budgeted (in other words, it was higher than the budgeted amount for this five month period), as well as the control over expenditure was much less than the budgeted figures. The control over expenditure, causing expenditure to be less than budgeted is the reason why we have a projection of 129. There was no padding in the budgeting. It's just turned out a lot better than we forecasted, and we are very grateful for that.

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Can there be a direct relationship with management that this is the result?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Tourism, Commerce, Transport and Works.

Hon. Thomas C. Jefferson: It is always good to agree with a statement like that, but I believe that in addition to management it's an increase in the marketing functions. So, it's marketing and management together being the reason for this, and the blessing of Almighty God has helped us as well.

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Where it says net loss before interest and government subsidy . . . and then the next line has government subsidy . . . and the very next line has the net income, is it that interest is not taken into account before arriving at the final figures, or what happens? It doesn't follow sequence to me.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Tourism, Commerce, Transport and Works.

Hon. Thomas C. Jefferson: At this time we are trying to be as transparent as we possibly can. The interest is noted here because we really haven't taken a decision about the interest portion. It may come to government, or to the Tourism Attraction Board. That decision has not been taken yet.

The Speaker: The Third Elected Member for West Bay. I will allow two additional supplementaries after this one.

Mr. John D. Jefferson, Jr.: The figures provided by the honourable minister do not take into consideration the servicing of the loan from Caribbean Development Bank. Can the honourable minister say what impact that will have on the financial position as projected if the interest portion of that loan was included in this financial statement?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Tourism, Commerce, Transport and Works.

Hon. Thomas C. Jefferson: Obviously the member asking the question has an answer, but he's asking me to answer it. If you have projected income (call it whatever you wish, it's excess money at the end of the day) of $129,000 and you take interest out of it, obviously that projection would have to be less. It may be $115,000, something in that range.

The Executive Council of this country has not taken a decision as to where that will rest.

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Can the honourable minister state if . . . and I am assuming all drawdowns have taken place with the loan. I heard what he just said, but can he state if the loan for this project is being paid back? Have payments started yet? If so, what is the monthly payment? Or how is it paid? Are these payments made from general revenue until such time as the operational profit of the castle will be able to assume those payment?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Tourism, Commerce, Transport and Works.

Hon. Thomas C. Jefferson: Repayments on the loan itself do not begin until 2002. I believe I referred to the interest in an earlier statement. But at the moment, Executive Council has not taken a decision on the loan. So I am unable to answer any further questions. Until the decision is taken it is my assumption is that the government will pay it, if it comes due before the decision is taken. Government has assisted with many if not all of the statutory authorities (Port Authority, Civil Aviation, Water Authority), where government pays and then reclaims that payment. That's the process presently in place.

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for George Town. This is the last supplementary.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: But I need to explain something. I respect what you said earlier on, but what I have to ask now is because the answer was not complete. So I would like you not to treat this as that last one. I will prove it to you sir.

The Speaker: I shall listen.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: The word "interest" came up. It is not clear, with all of the answers that have been given, whether interest is being paid now. When the minister said that the payments on the loan don't begin until 2002, I am trying to find out if the accumulating interest is being paid now, or accumulating onto the original amount for payment in 2002. That's part of what I was trying to determine. And if so, who's paying it?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Tourism, Commerce, Transport and Works.

Hon. Thomas C. Jefferson: As I understand it, the interest that has come due has been charged to the loan itself because the loan had some period of vacancy between what was drawn down and what was approved for the full loan. So, the remaining amounts, when they come due, will have to be paid by government I think. And if a decision is taken, reclaimed in the normal way from the Tourism Attraction Board.

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for George Town this is your final.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Yes sir.

The minister stated that like other statutory authorities government pays and then reclaims back from the authorities. I am certain he was making reference to the Tourism Attraction Board, which is in charge of the project. Of course, the difference in what the minister was saying there with the other projects and this one is that the government will not be in any position to reclaim payments back from this project for several years to come. It's not like they have an income to be tapped into. Presumably the right answer is that government will simply pay the tab until such time . . . whenever such time is.

Can the honourable minister say if with the commitment of the project, although we have received projections in the past regarding the project and its projected income, was any thought given and deliberations made on what actual commitment beyond the cost of the project to get it completed and started government was prepared to make? And for what length of time? Or was it considered that even if the project did not become financially viable it was still worth doing even if it had to be subsidised by government indefinitely?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Tourism, Commerce, Transport and Works.

Hon. Thomas C. Jefferson: Perhaps it is better to use another comparison. In my short term in government I have seen the establishment of the Port Authority, the Civil Aviation Authority, the Water Authority and others. Normally government takes the decision to establish these statutory authorities because it is in the best interest of the public and these islands in the long term. So, whatever the parent needs to do to assist the process of development moving these statutory authorities on to a commercial basis to allow them to be profitable as early as possible, the government has done in the past. I don't believe the government is going to treat the Tourism Attraction Board any different.

They will nudge, push, and they will get reaction from the Tourism Attraction Board and the ministry responsible to ensure we are moving along as quickly as possible, marketing it properly, and also managing the operational costs as best we can with a view that in the not too distant future we should break even.

What normally happens with these statutory authorities, and I am not going to throw arrows at anybody, first, government allows the authority to earn sufficient revenue to pay its operational costs. Second, government then looks to the statutory authority to eventually take over the full payment of the loan. Third, having accomplished those two government then says to the statutory authority, 'Remember, I am your parent. I need some dividend for all these investments.'

So the Tourism Attraction Board is abiding by those historical three objectives and moving along as quickly as we can.

The Speaker: Moving on to question 27

QUESTION 27

No. 27: Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts asked the Honourable First Official Member responsible for the Portfolio of Internal and External Affairs if the "anomalies committee" to deal with those civil servants' posts which remain "red circled" has been appointed.

The Speaker: The Honourable First Official Member responsible for Internal and External Affairs.

Hon. James M. Ryan: An anomalies committee to deal with anomalies including red circled posts was appointed by His Excellency the Governor on 20 January 2000. To date the Committee has held 12 meetings and an interim report has been submitted. The committee is currently working on the financial implications of the recommendations made in the report.

SUPPLEMENTARIES

The Speaker: The Elected Member for North Side.

Mrs. Edna M. Moyle: Can the honourable minister tell the House what are some of the other "anomalies" other than the red circled posts within the civil service?

The Speaker: The Honourable First Official Member responsible for Internal and External Affairs.

Hon. James M. Ryan: After a salary re-grading there will inevitably be some anomalies. It's a fact of life that has happened over the years despite very careful efforts. In a service the size of ours with so many differentials there will always be the occasional anomaly.

Some of the anomalies will relate to the salary scale. It can actually happen to the actual grade within the scale. Matters of conversion points, in other words, converting from an old scale to a new scale or grade; anomalies can occur in incremental awards and the particular area that the question asked about, red circled posts. So, there can be any number of anomalies, but the committee is looking at all anomalies and will be making recommendations.

The Speaker: The Elected Member for North Side.

Mrs. Edna M. Moyle: I thank the member for his reply, but I am no further ahead than before. So, I will ask a direct question: Is one of the functions of the anomalies committee to deal with the contracted officer's supplement which caused the hee-haw in the civil service some months ago?

The Speaker: The Honourable First Official Member responsible for Internal and External Affairs.

Hon. James M. Ryan: The answer is no.

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Can the honourable First Official Member state whether the financial implications referred to in the answer are limited to the red circled posts? Or are they based on all of the anomalies determined thus far.

The Speaker: The Honourable First Official Member responsible for Internal and External Affairs.

Hon. James M. Ryan: The financial implications will relate to all anomalies that I identified if they are indeed anomalies. And anomalies have been found in most of those items I mentioned earlier.

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Can the honourable First Official Member state if the recommendations call for any retroactive remuneration? And if so, to what period of time.

The Speaker: The Honourable First Official Member responsible for Internal and External Affairs.

Hon. James M. Ryan: I believe the member will appreciate the fact that because the committee has to make recommendations and the recommendations have to be accepted, it's not possible for me to publicly give that information. I trust he will appreciate that I am not trying to avoid the answer, but as quickly as the committee completes the recommendations, I am sure the matter will become public.

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: I appreciate what the honourable First Official Member is saying. Can he say if the terms of reference of this committee included any specified timeline for completion of its task?

The Speaker: The Honourable First Official Member responsible for Internal and External Affairs.

Hon. James M. Ryan: There was a timeline of an interim report within six weeks of the first meeting. The anomalies committee was pretty well on target with that. Sadly, one member of our committee has passed on, the director of Internal Audit, and I pay tribute to his work. He was a very valued member. This has slowed things a little bit, but work is moving ahead and I am most anxious to get the financial implications completed and submitted that will tied in with that report.

The Speaker: The Third Elected Member for West Bay.

Mr. John D. Jefferson, Jr.: Can the member say whether or not the anomalies included those persons who are presently in the civil service who are not Caymanian, not entitled to pension, but on local contracts which at the present time are not entitled to anything? I know that's an area that has been raised before. I wonder if this anomalies committee is also looking at this specific problem.

The Speaker: The Honourable First Official Member responsible for Internal and External Affairs.

Hon. James M. Ryan: That particular aspect just raised by the member was not part of the terms of reference for that anomalies committee because that committee is looking at anomalies that came out of the actual salary regrading. I know that the matter he has raised is being looked at in another forum.

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: I truly do appreciate the member's position in not being able to divulge because of due process. But I am wondering if he can give us some idea as to the objective within this exercise. Is it anticipated that the exercise will be completed prior to the next financial year, or might it extend itself that long?

The Speaker: The Honourable First Official Member responsible for Internal and External Affairs.

Hon. James M. Ryan: I believe I can assure the member that the work of the anomalies committee will be completed well before that. As a matter of fact, I have a second meeting for this week scheduled for 1.00 this afternoon. We are working to a very tight schedule, the summer months being a difficult time to get everyone together. We are nearing the completion of the financial implications. So, it is my hope that the financial implications that will go along with the interim report will be completed very soon.

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Can the member then give us an overview, a simple explanation, as to the process that will take place to complete the entire exercise?

The Speaker: The Honourable First Official Member responsible for Internal and External Affairs.

Hon. James M. Ryan: Normally an anomalies committee is appointed by the Governor and the report of the committee will go to the Governor. Generally an anomalies committee, from the experience I have had in the past, will offer a number of recommendations and then options. Those options would then be considered by the Governor. He would naturally consult with whomever he chooses to consult with. But then the financial implications of those recommendations, once a decision is taken, would come to Finance Committee via Executive Council.

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for George Town, two supplementaries.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: I thank the honourable member and I do understand what he is saying. That was what I was seeking.

When the committee completes its work, the Governor after consultation decides on what is the best course of action out of whatever options are available, given the climate and whatever else. Perhaps then there is really no sure way of knowing how long before that would get to Finance Committee via Executive Council. Is that the case?

The Speaker: The Honourable First Official Member responsible for Internal and External Affairs.

Hon. James M. Ryan: I do not think that matters are unduly delayed in going to Executive Council, nor are they unduly delayed after getting to Executive Council before they arrive at Finance Committee unless there is no meeting of Finance Committee scheduled shortly after Executive Council makes the decision.

I do not expect that it will be very long after a decision is made on the way forward with it before honourable members of this House will have it in Finance Committee.

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: I understand what the member said. Can he just confirm that whatever those financial implications are at the end of the day that when it comes to Finance Committee none of those amounts will have been budgeted for, and whatever those amounts are will totally be requests for supplementary expenditure under the statutory expenses for the country?

The Speaker: The Honourable First Official Member responsible for Internal and External Affairs.

Hon. James M. Ryan: In the general case, I think the member is right. But in truth and in fact, in looking at some of the anomalies, for the sake of argument, there would be the issue of increments. Departments have budgeted for a certain amount for increments so, it may or may not be the case that a small amount of the funds might already be in the various departmental budgets.

The Speaker: That concludes Question Time for this morning. Is it the wish of members to take a break, or to continue? We shall suspend for 15 minutes, and I ask members to please return after 15 minutes.

PROCEEDINGS SUSPENDED AT 11.40 AM

PROCEEDINGS RESUMED AT 12.10 PM

The Speaker: Please be seated. Item 4 on today's Order Paper, Other Business, Private Members' Motions. Continuation of debate on Private Member's Motion No. 14/2000, Public Education System. The Third Elected Member for West Bay, continuing.

OTHER BUSINESS

PRIVATE MEMBERS' MOTIONS

PRIVATE MEMBER'S MOTION NO. 14/00

PUBLIC EDUCATION SYSTEM

(Continuation of debate thereon)

Mr. John D. Jefferson, Jr.: I requested some information on expenditure in regard to education. I was not able to get that information yesterday. With your permission, let me go back and be specific in regard to expenditure on education over the past five years. I believe this does not include expenditure for the Ministry of Education, I think this is the Education Department and its associated expenses.

| Year | Recurrent Expenditure (Dept. of Education) ($ million) | Capital Expenditure ($ million) | Total Expenditure ($ million) |
|------|---------------------------------------------------------|----------------------------------|--------------------------------|
| 1995 | 17.78                                                   | 2.98                             | 20.76                          |
| 1996 | 19.86                                                   | 3.4                              | 23.26                          |
| 1997 | 21.12                                                   | 3.06                             | 24.18                          |
| 1998 | 22.82                                                   | 1.88                             | 24.7                           |
| 1999 | 23.28                                                   | 5.22                             | 28.5                           |

When you add all of that expenditure over the last five years (not including the year 2000), we spent $121.4 million on education. We see that the expenditure on education is quite significant, and it should be because we are talking about the future of this country—our young people.

To summarise what I have said so far, I have basically dealt with the cost of education, the strategic plan for education; I have dealt with the issue of graduates, government scholarship programme; I commented on the alternative education programme, the results of the failure of our education programme which has resulted in gangs, juvenile crime, and increase in single parents, poverty, resentment and unemployment.

I also dealt with the lack of discipline in the schools. Times have changed, Mr. Speaker. I believe it is important for us to change with the times. The next area I wish to look at is the area of the need to attract more Caymanians into the teaching profession. I am aware that under the government scholarship programme. . . at least the way it used to be. So much nonsense has gone on recently I am not sure what the position is at the present time. But it was the policy that full funding would be made available to any of our young people interested in pursuing a career in the area of education. I must commend the ministry for adopting that particular policy, and the education council for supporting that position. I trust that they will continue to regard teaching as a priority for government scholarships and also as a policy that full funding would be made available for our young people who choose education as a career.

There was an exercise carried on a year ago regarding the re-grading of salaries. The objective was to provide as much equity as possible in regard to entry points for young persons graduating from university or college with degrees. Prior to that, if a graduate with a degree in teaching joined the civil service he was not treated equally with graduates joining the civil service in, say, finance. Many of those young people requested transfers or have left government altogether.

I recall when I was in the banking industry a young Caymanian who had just recently graduated from university as a teacher came to me. At the time she was employed at the Savannah Primary School. What discouraged her from staying in the profession was that she worked alongside expatriate teachers and they received benefits such as mileage allowance. She was from West Bay and had to drive to Savannah each morning. But she was not considered for that benefit. She chose to go elsewhere to make a living.

I would daresay that if we roundup all qualified Caymanian teachers that are in these islands involved in other professions it would amaze us how many we have. I have said more than once that I believe education is so important, and it is so important for us to have our own qualified Caymanian teachers. I believe that what needs to be done to make the teaching profession more attractive to our young Caymanians is that the salaries have to be much more attractive than they are now, and the benefits.

A lot of times people are not just looking for money. There should be a welcoming party, an orientation for these young Caymanian returning students meet the Chief Education Officer and the officers in the Education Department they will be working along with. They should have an opportunity to meet the Minister of Education—whoever that might be at the time—and maybe the staff of the ministry.

I have a young man who is the manager of my Wendy's store, Mr. Richard Parchment. He is a qualified special education teacher. I think he was in the profession some three or four years. Because we were in a position to make him a better offer than he had at the school, he came to work with us. When he resigned and was about to leave the service, the Minister of Education was not even aware that the young man was in the system. It's the little things not always the salary that attracts and retains employees.

Teachers, like everybody else, appreciate recognition from the standpoint of their contributions. I see nothing wrong . . . and I have never seen any article in the paper about a programme that could easily be implemented in the schools where a teacher of the month is recognised. That person could be given a little recognition by way of some publicity in the media, maybe some special benefit. That's not very difficult to do. Maybe entitle him to a weekend at the Retreat in North Side, or Morrill's in East End.

Last year or the year before I was selected as a member of the panel dealing with the John Owen Awards. That objective was recognising departments within government that were doing very well, rewarding them for the excellent service they were providing. I was amazed at what is really going on in the civil service—at least in some departments. We had representatives from the different departments—Immigration, Health Services, representatives from the school in Cayman Brac. We have a very good response. They were all very enthusiastic about presenting whatever they were doing that was special to the panel. At the end of their presentations we were then responsible for grading that particular service or performance.

I think the Health Services actually won the award. They were all excited because all of a sudden someone had taken the time out to recognise what they were doing.

They got the impression that what they were doing was very, very important.

I trust that exercise will continue in the civil service because with a service that has grown quite a bit (I am not sure how big it is now), it is easy to get lost in the numbers. I believe that the Minister of Education, his administrative staff, and the staff of the Education Department, all the way down has to come up with creative ways of making a profession in education much more attractive.

I think it's important for us to have available direct lines of communication, an open-door policy. I believe that if the Minister of Education was to establish a direct line of communication between himself, the teachers, principals and staff of the schools, he would be amazed at how much input and response he would get. At present, the members of staff are scared to pass on comments, criticism, or even suggestions because of the fear it won't be recognised, or if it doesn't fit in with the thought of the day they are concerned about their continued employment.

I believe it's important for this line of communication to be established. I have had teachers come to me with suggestions. I ask why they don't call the education department or the ministry. They tell me they cannot do that. They would first of all have to go through their Head of Department, and then through the respective officer responsible for that area of education. Then they probably have to pass it through the Chief Education Officer, and on to the Permanent Secretary of Education before the Minister has access to that information.

I believe it's extremely important for our country to give education the type of emphasis it deserves, emphasising to our young people their value in regard to choosing a career in education. I believe one of the problems we have in our schools is that we have if we have any Caymanian teachers they are located at the primary level. Throughout the system we don't have enough Caymanian educators in place who will be able to set the type of positive role model our students need.

When I was in the public education system we had foreign members of staff, some very good ones I may add. But the majority of my teachers going through the system were either Caymanian or West Indian nationals. We have similar background and culture in the areas around us that we recruit teachers from.

I believe that we will also see a tremendous improvement in the discipline in our classrooms. At present the foreign teachers are scared to take the necessary action they need to in dealing with some of our students that may have behavioural problems or otherwise. They fear they will be attacked by the parents. We really can't blame them for taking that attitude. But I really believe that we need to add additional emphasis in the area of attracting our young people into the teaching profession.

I was in West Shore the other evening, and I ran into one of my old schoolmates. A Caymanian about my age. I was telling him how proud I was of him. He's close to 50, but he's had the ambition to go back to school. When he came out of school, the opportunities to further our education were very limited indeed. But he has taken interest and had the ambition to go back now and further his education.

He's just about finished. Pretty soon he'll be qualified and will come back to the island to make his contribution.

But he said, "John, we will never see an improvement in our schools until we see an increase in the number of Caymanian teachers in the classrooms." I agree.

One of the problems we have as Caymanians, and we do go through culture shock when we go elsewhere, . . . and Mr. Speaker, I am not a racist, but I think it's important for us to provide people of our own nationality in our classrooms who will encourage the pride the Caymanian student should have in the fact that they are Caymanian.

It would be interesting to see how many Caymanians we presently have in the public education of this country as a percentage of overall staff. I think we would be surprised that we haven't done very well in regard to increasing that percentage over the years.

The other area I would like to touch on before lunch is the area of early childhood education. Research has proven that the critical years for learning are between zero and three years of age. In this country we always had the impression that we could wait to send a child to school until he was six, and that at that age he was ready to learn. But research has proven that the critical years in regard to learning are between the birth of that child to age three.

The former Minister of Education removed reception classes from the primary schools, even the Lighthouse School. That was a serious disservice to our young children who wanted to get a head start in education. As far as parents are concerned, they want their children to have a pre-school experience. It's extremely important that this opportunity be made available to every Caymanian student, regardless of financial position or status in society. I have asked the present Minister of Education if the Ministry and the Department would consider lowering the age that parents can apply for a pre-school subsidy in order for their children to enjoy the experience at an earlier age.

At present, government's assistance does not start until the child is three years and nine months. It is normally only for one year. But three years nine months puts the child beyond the critical age we are talking about, zero to three years. I believe it would be a tremendous improvement if we brought that assistance down to the age of two.

The importance of the pre-school experience is not purely academic. It is also social, from the standpoint that the child is allowed to play and mingle with other children. Over the period of time they are in that surrounding they learn to adjust socially.

I have two sons. My older boy did not have that exposure. We brought somebody in to take care of that child on a daily basis. By the time the second one came along, there were some pre-schools established. Rather than having someone come in to take care of him, we put him in a pre-school. Their personalities are as different as night and day—not that they are not good boys, but that social interaction at that early age I think made a difference in the development.

As a government we have to be sensitive to these issues. We are talking about an investment in the future leaders of this country. It's amazing how quickly kids grow up and take their rightful place in society. It's important for us to ensure that every child has that opportunity.

It has also been proven that the child that has the pre-school experience does better when entering primary school. They are much better adjusted, they have a head start in regard to colours, numbers and even their reading. I remember that even my wife had a pre-school and a lot of those children were reading by the time they left that pre-school, using phonics. They were taught the sounds of the letters, so by the time they left they could sound out words using phonics.

The Speaker: Would this be a convenient time to take the luncheon break?

Mr. John D. Jefferson, Jr.: Yes sir.

The Speaker: We shall suspend proceedings until 2.15.

PROCEEDINGS SUSPENDED AT 12.42 PM

PROCEEDINGS RESUMED AT 3.20 PM

The Speaker: Please be seated.

Debate continues on Private Member's Motion No. 14/2000. The Third Elected Member for West Bay, continuing.

Mr. John D. Jefferson, Jr.: Government kept me waiting so long that I have kind of lost my fight.

The Speaker: Shall I put the question?

[Members' laughter]

Mr. John D. Jefferson, Jr.: Anyway, I will say like the King said about his seventh wife, "You shan't be long either."

Mr. John D. Jefferson, Jr.: I don't have a whole lot of time to wind up my comments. But, let me continue by addressing the next area, which is the Education Department. In the Caymanian Compass of 22 February, there was a headline reading "Education Department under Review." That article came out when I offered my contribution to the Throne Speech. I made some uncomplimentary remarks giving my opinion of the Education Department. As far as I am concerned, it was pretty factual. I was surprised that in the Caymanian Compass of 3 March 2000, "Education Chief Responds to MLA's Attack."

Let me say that I recognise certain of those officers that I have told personally are doing a good job. When I made those comments I was not even thinking of that particular officer being a part of the department because she has a very specialised function, and that is the Secretary for the Education Council, Mrs. Jennifer Smith. I personally think that she has done an outstanding job as far as taking care of her students, making sure that they got their money on time. She's very, very responsible. I am quite sure you have probably had the same experience, Mr. Speaker.

I know one of her predecessors and how frustrated a lot of our students became even after they were approved for scholarships, when trying to get their money. That is not the case. This lady is very organised. If she knows that a student is leaving the islands on 1st September, the chance is that the cheque is ready by 25th August. There are no hold-ups. I want to compliment her on her good work, and encourage her to continue doing what she is doing, that is, taking care of our young people.

The other officer I have had some feedback on is Mrs. Lillian Archer. One of her functions is finding jobs for our young people when they are home on holiday. She does a fantastic job.

I was a bit surprised . . . If I say something uncomplimentary about you, Mr. Speaker, I would expect you to respond to me. Don't go ask Georgette or somebody else to respond to me because of a compliment I made in regard to you. I was a little surprised when I saw the headline, "Education Chief Responds to MLA's Attack." With your permission, let me just read a little excerpt from that article.

The Speaker: I will give you that permission, but I beg you to not reintroduce too much of this because this was actually debated within six months at length here in this honourable Chamber. Please skirt around it.

Mr. John D. Jefferson, Jr.: I am not going to delve into it, Mr. Speaker. I just want to confirm the position I took based on evidence and experience. It says, "Dr. Tudor challenges the MLA to support his claim with concrete facts. Countering Mr. Jefferson's accusations, Dr. Tudor states that the department's predominately Caymanian staff is a dedicated group of professionals who work long hours."

I don't have a problem with him making those remarks, if they were justified. But do you know what was very reassuring to me was on 9th March, there was a headline in the Caymanian Compass that said "Education Comes in for Criticism." What made me feel pretty good was that the parents who attended the meetings held by Mrs. Millet basically confirmed what I was saying. As I said in my opening remarks, if we have a problem and we acknowledge that we have a problem, then we can work on finding a solution. But we need some improvements in the Education Department.

Each year we spend a whole lot of money on buildings, be it classrooms, assembly halls, whatever. The First Elected Member for West Bay mentioned yesterday that these facilities are not being fully utilised. For example, after 3.00 in the afternoon most of these places sit empty until the next morning. I believe that if we were a little more creative in regard to our approach to education, it would prevent our having to think about adding another classroom or another school each time we add another 40 or 50 kids.

Who made the rule that students have to leave at 3.00 in the afternoon? There's no reason for that. If we had staggered hours at the high school or middle school level, where some students start at 7.00 or 8.00 in the morning, and others come at 11.00, and they . . . I don't know how they run their classes now, but in most schools you go from one classroom to the next for each subject. If that is the case, it would be very easy for us to accommodate more students using the same facilities if we took that approach.

I think that we have to learn to be creative in regard to the proper use of public funds. It is amazing how expensive construction has become as far as government is concerned. We have been pushing for the last eight years for a new school for the Lighthouse School. I think that last year we saw figures of estimated cost. I can't recall how much it was, but it was something like $8 million or $9 million for a facility.

I wouldn't want to deprive anyone of a facility—especially our special needs children. But we must be in a position to do that type of project for much, much less. I believe government has to become competitive as far as farming out its work, and get a very good price.

There is no reason why we couldn't be offering evening classes in our district for adults, and maybe students that did not get all they wanted when they went through the system. Offer special classes in reading or English, math and that type of thing to help them improve their skills.

We have come a long way in this country as far as the facilities we have for our young people. More of our young people have an opportunity to attend high school. That was not always the situation. I recall when I was at Secondary Modern School (back in the 1960s), one year I returned from summer vacation only to be told that they had dismantled the Secondary Modern System, and only the brightest students were allowed to go on to high school. Back in those days, they had a private high school. But there were not a whole lot of families that could afford to send their children to high school. That is not the situation today. Any student that wants to go to high school has the opportunity to do so. But I believe that there is room for improvement in our system.

The other point I want to make before closing is that there should be some monitoring process in place regarding students coming out of the primary schools so that we can identify those primary schools that are not doing as good a job as they should be in equipping our students to go on to the George Hicks High School, and eventually to John Gray High School. By that I mean ensuring that they have a good foundation in reading, which is the main area of deficiency. If you can't read, the chances are you are not going to have a very easy job going through middle and high school.

If it is identified that the school is not producing the calibre of student that we are looking for, then we can be in a position to provide whatever assistance that school may need by way of equipment or staff.

I have said a lot. But I trust that what I have said is taken seriously, and in the right way because my only concern is to ensure that we have a public education system second to none in this country or anywhere else. We cannot blame our deficiencies on the fact that there are no funds available. We can't blame it on the lack of facilities.

This Legislative Assembly has always supported requests for education.

I trust that the minister will take what I had to say about government scholarships seriously. I can assure that honourable gentleman that any less than an open policy whereby students apply for a government scholarship have a choice of going wherever they feel like going, anything less will be totally unacceptable. The challenge I also want to throw out to the president of the Community College is that it is important for him to promote, market, and continue to improve the facilities and the courses made available at our community college. Hopefully more of our young people will be attracted to attend the Community College because of the high standards and availability of courses offered. Until that happens, I am not prepared to make it a condition of any government scholarship that our students have to attend the Community College for their first two years.

I trust that as I requested in my statement on government scholarships a few days ago, that the minister will meet with the education council. He's very persuasive. Believe me, he's very persuasive. I trust he will use his influence to come up with policies or guidelines acceptable to all honourable parents and students in this country. Thank you.

The Speaker: Does any other member wish to speak? (Pause) The Third Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. Linford A. Pierson: Thank you. I was hoping that my good friend the Third Elected Member for West Bay would have taken us through the afternoon.

The motion before us, Private Member's Motion No. 14/2000 on the subject of the Public Education System, is a most important motion. It is very wide in its scope. I want to say that I am happy that you have given the latitude you have to previous speakers on this very important motion because it affects the future of the people of these islands.

To refresh the minds of the listening public, I would like to quickly read the motion. It reads:

“WHEREAS in any rapidly developing country the level and diversity of education offered by the public system is of vital importance;

“AND WHEREAS it appears that the educational demands created by the rapid economic development in the Cayman Islands are not being adequately met by the present system;

“BE IT THEREFORE RESOLVED that the Minister of Education, acting under his constitutional responsibility to deliver policy in the area of education, set out a properly prioritised plan, including costs and specific timing of implementation to address the present needs in the public education system.”

It is somewhat difficult for this honourable House not to support this motion when one considers that it is premised on the basis of the Vision 2008 National Strategic Plan. And since this House unanimously accepted the Vision 2008 National Strategic Plan, I find it would be somewhat inconsistent to vote against this motion. It highlights the objectives of that plan under strategy 3, which reads,

“We will support an educational system which identifies and develops the abilities of all persons encouraging them to realise their full potential.”

I will deal in further detail with the action plans under this strategy 3. My position is based on the wishes of the people in that the Vision 2008 plan is widely regarded as the people's plan. If we are saying that we have accepted the people's plan, I can't see where we can go against a motion that pretty much highlights that particular plan.

Before moving into that, I wish to comment on certain remarks I have heard in this honourable House about qualifications and experience. I believe it is getting a bit stale when members continue to flout their qualifications trying to make others look bad in so doing. I believe that the only reason we are in here as representatives is because we have satisfied the voting public that we are qualified to represent them.

That said, let me quickly say that I feel that I am as qualified as any other member to speak on this motion and to represent my people. But if individuals are as qualified as they say they are, then it should be easily seen by their behaviour and they should not have to continually remind the public they are so highly qualified. I find that attitude to be a little boring.

I visited the House of Commons. I often listened to debates in the House of Representatives on C-Span and otherwise. I have yet to hear any of those honourable members pounding their chests, talking about their qualifications. I believe that most of the people in these islands realise that we are qualified. But some of your very best representatives in this House are not necessarily people with degrees and qualifications. But when it comes to intelligence, you cannot touch them. They are second to none.

I therefore hope that we will hear less and less of people talking about their qualifications.

I could go on because I believe that when it comes to working hard for one's qualification I am perhaps one of the few in Cayman who had to work his way through high school and I was the very first Caymanians to qualify as a professional accountant. But I don't need to get up in this House and say that. The people I represent will hopefully see my qualities, know that I am an intelligent person and I won't have to constantly remind them of that fact.

I would also like to say to those who like to shout about their degrees and qualifications, using it interchangeably, that there is a major difference between a degree and a qualification. A degree suggests your intelligence. A qualification on the other hand makes you responsible for the particular discipline in which you are qualified. A qualified lawyer has certain responsibilities. And if due diligence is not maintained with those responsibilities that person could even be disbarred. It is similar with a qualified accountant. That person is a professional. A degreed person is a different kettle of fish, even though that person is highly qualified.

So, when somebody comes into this House with a degree, a qualification or whatever, if the people have voted for that person to represent them, I don't think their position should be questioned, or made to look small. They are doing a very valuable job. And, Mr. Speaker, I hope we will hear less and less of this chest pounding in this election year.

It is interesting to note that we are looking at an education system that is divided into several segments. I feel I am able to speak on this having served in the educational administration. As most people know, from 1976 to 1979 I served as the Principal Secretary for Health, Education and Social Services. Even though the work has increased by many fold today the basic principle remains the same. I can understand where we have moved over the years.

I do not believe it would be fair to say that there have not been a lot of improvements and tremendous strides made, not only by this government, but by successive governments. It would also be unfair to say that there had not been tremendous strides made by the present government.

The segments in which the educational system is divided are as follows: the academic stream, the technical and vocational stream; then you have a subdivision into language arts, which includes reading, writing, etc.; mathematics, science, social studies which includes history, geography, etc.; then you have government studies, religious education, physical education, arts and crafts, music, etc. I am giving that information so that I can develop my further comments.

It is important to note when talking about our children falling through the cracks, that we understand precisely the system in place. Why is it that this happens? Can it be totally prevented? Within our education system we have various sets in place, starting from the middle school going into the high school, no doubt starting from the primary level. But from the middle school, or junior high level, you have at least six sets. At the John Gray High School you are looking at a further two sets, bringing it to eight sets.

The reason I am mentioning this is to explain why it is that some children are moved into an academic stream while others are taken into a technical or vocational stream, while some fall into that crack we speak about.

Within these sets, the top two usually move on to tertiary education. The third and fourth sets could be placed anywhere between tertiary and other training. But the first two sets normally move on to get their degrees in professions and so on. But they only form a small proportion of the major student population. That proportion is about 15% to 20%. In sets five and six we have our technical and vocational, or what we sometimes refer to as the lower academic performance. Students coming through these lower sets are usually placed in the vocational and technical side of education.

But there is a small percentage, say 10%, that will fall through the cracks. Is that peculiar to the Cayman Islands? The answer is no. Even in the best developed countries, including the United Kingdom, the United States of America, and other highly developed countries, there is a small percentage that fall through the cracks. This is more relevant when we consider that the Cayman Islands is a developing country, and each year we are learning new processes and putting them in place. To say we have reached the point of perfection in any area of our development, whether it be education, in tourism, or in our financial sector, would be a very naive position to take.

We must look at this realistically and understand that the Cayman Islands has made great strides. But despite those major strides, there is still a lot that can be done to further develop and improve our situation. It is my understanding that even with that small percentage that will fall through the cracks, there is special support services and special remedial services to assist these individuals. It is also my understanding that special classes are provided to assist these individuals.

This is not to say that all of these students take advantage of the opportunity, but I understand from reliable sources that this facility is available. The problem, as I understand it, is a systemic problem. It is not one that is starting only at the junior high and the high school. It starts at the basic level, the primary, and even the introductory stage.

When we look at education like any social science, we must understand that it is a multifaceted situation where assistance must come from various levels. We must have assistance coming from the home, the schools, the churches, and the wider community. In this respect, I agree with Hilary Clinton when she said that it takes a village to raise a child.

We cannot just blame the education system. While there are weaknesses in that system, we must all work together, including the parents in the homes and the teachers in the schools, the wider community, we must all work together in developing our young people.

The question might be asked, What is being done now to address the problem? I will be showing where this same problem was recognised by those individuals responsible for the preparation of the Vision 2008 plan. Those individuals were not only the individuals involved in the roundtable discussions, but also the wider community. That is why it's called the people's plan. Whatever we do here in the future, I feel it should be based on the Vision 2008 plan. I can hardly see us bringing motions to this House if we have not read the 2008 plan to ensure there is some compliance, or capability with that plan, if that plan is going to be the guide to our future development.

I understand that the national curriculum, under the auspices of Mr. Herbert Crawford, is being implemented at the primary level, and that within a very short time it will be implemented at the secondary level in full. This is being developed under the National Strategic Plan introduced in 1995. I understand that since 1995 the National Strategic Plan has been reviewed several times and rolled over in 1999. This is as it should be because if we are a developing country—which by its own meaning suggests there will be changes as we develop—we must meet those changes by revision of not only our education plan, but indeed all laws and regulations that govern this country.

I mentioned that it is estimated that between 15% to 20% of our students coming out of school will be considered academic and will move on to further education. The major concern is on that other 80% or more that will either opt to be placed into the technical and vocational area of education, or may not even complete the 12 years of public education made available.

Much of the problem being faced with the technical and vocational side of education is not emanating from within the school system. From the time I was in education administration—some 20-odd years ago—when I served as the Principal Secretary for Education, there was a problem emanating because of the cultural views of many of the parents within this country. This is not to knock the parents, but just to point the finger where some of the blame lies.

Why is it that some of our boys who are not able to meet the academic standards refuse to get fully involved in the tourism industry? Others from abroad come to these islands and make a good living from the tourism industry. What is wrong with boys waiting on tables? Is it a problem with your education system? Or is it a cultural bias coming out of the homes?

Mrs. Edna M. Moyle: The old stereotyping.

Mr. Linford A. Pierson: Let's look at the problem. It doesn't matter which government is sitting in those five chairs. If that problem is not corrected it will continue to permeate. Our problem is that most of our young men refuse to do certain jobs.

Why is it that we have so many falling within those cracks, yet we have to bring in so many mechanics, so many masons, so many painters and people in the technical trades? Yet, we say that a lot of our people are out of work. Let us not start putting blame, but let us focus on the problem and try to correct that problem. I do believe that this is the intention of the mover of the motion. I believe that the intention is to focus on this problem.

The problems are not just occurring when the child is in high school. It does not occur when the child enters junior high. It is a systemic problem; it is a cultural problem. This is where we need to focus our attention.

As I speak, there are developing trends in this country. Traditionally our economy has been divided into two major segments. We had the financial industry, and the tourism industry. But now we are considering a third segment, our E-Commerce, or E-Business. What is being done within the school system at present to focus attention in that direction? I am reliably informed that the national curriculum is presently taking that particular point into account in the process of its development. But I trust that more and more of our young people will show an interest in this new developing area. The wave of the future will be the Internet, E-Commerce, and E-Business. Our young people should be focusing a lot of attention in that area.

This motion specifically focuses on public education. But if I could extend it, I would like to say it is important that representatives of this country also focus on educating the public, not just on public education, which really encompasses the education within the school system. Educating the public encompasses education intra and extra the school system.

It amazes me how many people say that they don't understand a matter that has been passed in the House. It is our responsibility, where possible, to enlighten those individuals. That is one of the reasons we have been given this honourable position of serving and representing our people. I find it somewhat strange that people still say that they don't know what the White Paper is all about. Here is a most important document. Someone should be educating the public.

A lot of people are saying it's going to be the destruction of the Cayman Islands. I have made reference to that, and I will not dwell on this very long, just to show that it is much wider than just the curriculum within the school system.

For those still questioning what the White Paper is about (since I raised that issue), it deals with four major issues. If anyone wishes to get more information on that, I am sure that any member of the House will be happy to sit with that individual. But I believe I can say that my colleague, the First Elected Member for George Town, and I will be more than happy to sit and explain these four areas.

The four areas are: 1) the question of citizenship; 2) the environment; 3) human rights (which includes the question of homosexuality); and 4) the financial industry. They are the four major areas. I invite anyone who still has questions to phone any member of the House. I feel free to say that the four members for George Town would be happy to deal with these issues and explain them. But I am pretty sure that my colleague and I will be happy to entertain questions on this most important document.

The other reason why I brought this up is to ask the question, How many of our school children within the school system, within the social studies department, the civics area of the syllabus, have been told anything about this White Paper, or how government even works? How many of them understand the way the economy works? Perhaps that is an area that the developers of the national curriculum should focus attention on.

When I was growing up I knew more about the geography of England than I did of Grand Cayman. I knew more about the history of England than I did of Grand Cayman. It's only recently that I really knew a little bit about Grand Cayman through reading. These things are not provided as fully as they should be within our national curriculum.

A very important question is, What is required to provide an adequate public education system? That is really the crux of the whole thing. What do we require to provide an adequate public education system? Without a doubt we need resource materials, properly qualified teachers and the materials they need to teach. We also need a proper national curriculum as a part of our national education strategic plan. But we need to have the necessary physical facilities.

I remember ever since 1996 that this matter has been raised in this House, particularly by my colleague the First Elected Member for George Town. Many questions have been asked about the primary schools, the high schools and the lack of facilities. It is my understanding that consideration is currently being given to the introduction of two primary schools, one in Spotts, and another in Boatswain Bay. But when will these come on line? I am also reliably informed that this is now in the works. I hope before too very long we will find these primary schools breaking ground. And before too long after that we will have these primary schools operational.

A school I believe is equally important is the new high school. It is my understanding that this new high school will serve East End, North Side, Bodden Town and the children as far down as Red Bay. It's very important where this school is located. But I would have thought that if it's going to have the desired effect of children not having to get up at 5.00 in the morning, and returning home at 7.00 in the night, that the school would be better situated somewhere between East End, North Side and Bodden Town. Children from Red Bay could be accommodated at the present high school. But to try to stretch out that whole area—North Side to Red Bay—will leave us in the exact same situation we are presently in. It is very important that serious consideration be given to the location of this school. It should be very carefully thought out.

What role does our national strategic plan, better known as Vision 2008, play in the whole development of our public education system? Before dealing with this in the national strategic plan itself, I wish to give an indication of the importance of the national strategic plan. It has been referred to in the "Key to the Future," which is a guide to the plan, as a blueprint for the future. If our national strategic plan is a blueprint for the future, then we are bound, especially after we have unanimously passed it in this House, to follow the guidelines under this plan. I am not saying religiously, but in general terms, we should follow the guidelines under this plan.

In a way, I find it somewhat unfortunate that the implementation of this plan is not moving ahead a little faster. But I am encouraged by the recent announcement by His Excellency that an appointment has been made for someone to move this ahead on a timely basis.

It says "The culmination of the efforts of the thousands of community members who participated in Vision 2008 is a blueprint for the future of our Cayman Islands reflecting the hopes and aspirations of the people of the Cayman Islands—colour and diverse social environmental and economic issues integrated into one vision, a vision of a community which is developing in harmony and prosperity."

I submit that a most important segment of that development is our education system. It goes on to say "The strategies and inter-related action plans developed for each of the three Cayman Islands reflect this common theme [developing in harmony and prosperity]. Each island has a unique expression of this theme which reflects local circumstances, the different stages in development on each island and the particular goals of the people of each of the islands." I am speaking of our own national strategic plan, Vision 2008, which should be followed.

The reason why I gave that background of the importance of the plan was to really lead into the next point I am going to make. The education side of our development is so important that a separate strategy was dedicated to education with the following undertaking, and I quote, "We will support an educational system, which identifies and develops the abilities of all persons encouraging them to realise their full potential.”

Again I ask, How will government not accept this motion when that major strategy which was unanimously accepted in this House? Action plan 1 under that strategy states, “To identify and implement those parts of the education plan that still need to be implemented.”

The second recital of this motion reads. “AND WHEREAS it appears that the educational demands created by the rapid economic development in the Cayman Islands are not being adequately met by the present system . . .” you can see how our national plan has made provision to deal with that particular issue. This is an all-encompassing plan.

Action plan 2 states, “To identify gaps in the existing education development plan and provide programmes to fill those gaps.” In my humble opinion, this motion encapsulates the essence of Vision 2008. It is not a new concept. It is really reciting what has already been accepted in this honourable House. That is why I said in my opening remarks that government will be hard pressed not to accept the motion even if it is accepted under an amended form. If we have already accepted our national strategic plan (which we did) Vision 2008—which supports this motion—we can hardly refuse the motion and at the same time say we are accepting the recommendations made under Vision 2008. That would be a contradiction.

I have a number of other points I wish to make and I would be pleased to give way at this time if you wish to adjourn.

We have apologies from the Third Elected Member for George Town who is also attending that meeting and from the Fourth Elected Member for West Bay who is not well.

That concludes the apologies. The Honourable Minister for Agriculture, Communications, Environment and Natural Resources.

ADJOURNMENT

Hon. John. B. McLean: Mr. Speaker, I move the adjournment of this honourable House until 10.00 a.m. on 10 July, which is next Monday.

The Speaker: I shall put the question that this Honourable House do now adjourn until 10.00 a.m. Monday, July 10.

Mr. John D. Jefferson, Jr.: Mr. Speaker!

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Mr. Speaker, before you put the question, please . . .

Mr. John D. Jefferson, Jr.: As you recall I came to your office this morning to discuss whether or not there was a possibility of us logically continuing the business of the House with the understanding that any item that required a response by any of the honourable ministers who are away would be deferred.

Mr. Speaker, I think it is important for us to remember that there are eighteen members of this Legislative Assembly. In the absence of the official members, we have, like we do this morning, temporary members who take their rightful places. So, there is no logical reason why the business of this House has to be adjourned every time the five-member negotiating team finds it necessary to be off of the island.

Mr. Speaker, let me also remind you (and I don't think I have to) that this is an election year. The House is going to be dissolved early in September and we have a lot of business to attend to before that specific date. Like I said, I see no reason why we cannot logically accomplish as much business as possible other than the business that has to be addressed by the honourable Ministers of Education and Tourism.

If we adjourn until Monday, we have to be prepared to work late next week in order to ensure that this particular meeting of the House is completed before the September meeting starts. I think it is a shame that as legislators we cannot agree among ourselves to have the elected ministers who remain behind be prepared to move forward with the items they are concerned with.

Mr. Speaker, I certainly don't see any very controversial issues that are going to be discussed. We have some very important private members' motions, but I think most of them will receive the support and approval of the government. So, I really don't see any reason why we have to adjourn this honourable House every time the Leader of Government Business finds it necessary to be away on official business.

Thank you, sir.

The Speaker: The Fourth Elected Member for George Town.

Dr. Frank McField: Mr. Speaker, I would like to thank you for the opportunity to actually voice my concern with the government requesting that the House be adjourned.

We have three elected ministers present here. We have three nominated members also present—but we have the majority of the ministers present in the Legislative Assembly. They are also capable, I think, of continuing the business.

It is not just the government that has business in the House because there are many private members' motions and parliamentary questions. Is it fair for the House to be adjourned simply because certain members of the government believe that it is efficient for them to have the House adjourned?

Now, we had three members sworn in here today for the specific purpose of voting for this adjournment. I know we are all equal in the House, but we are elected members. We are going to go back to the people in November to ask for their support. We are still in the process of trying to make the case to the people that we are earning our money, and that we are capable of doing the job that we were elected to do.

Now, if we are paid members but we are not sitting when we should be sitting because other members are doing the job that they should be doing, why should we be deprived of doing the job that we should be doing because they are doing the job that they should be doing? There is a clear distinction in my mind between policy and legislation. We are the legislative part of the political process. The two ministers who are away are the policy part, the executive part. But when the executive is capable of imposing its will on the legislative part to the extent we have seen it imposed on this parliament over the last few months—because of the external issues—then what will be the ramification with regard to the democratic process and the democratic work in the country?

We have a lot of issues that we think are important—private members' issues that we need to bring to the government's attention. If we have the majority of the elective government here at the moment there is no logical reason why the process should be hindered.

Now, I hope that there is no assumption being made by anybody in this country that the three elected ministers of government are not capable of rebutting or supporting whatever motion is being made, because they are all qualified capable people who have served good time in the Executive Council. The father of the House, for instance, sits here today with us. So, we are quite capable of continuing the business of the country. I think it is effective, efficient and the democratic thing to do.

Should we find today that we are hindered from continuing this process, then I think it is only fair that we tell the people that the process is being held up—not because we believe that the business that the government is doing abroad is unimportant—but because there are certain members of government who believe that nothing should be done in this country unless they participate in that process.

The Speaker: Does any other Member wish to speak?
The First Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

Perhaps, some of what I have to say has already been said, but there are a few things that I would like to say also.

Mr. Speaker, with the greatest of respect I want to address you as the Speaker of this House on a specific issue. I believe that you as the Speaker of this House have a responsibility to this House to see that the business of this House gets done as expeditiously as possible. You have said so yourself on occasion. I recognise your attempt to maintain a certain amount of order and progression.

If the Leader of Government Business—and it is only because I have to address that position—is the chairman of the Business Committee finds himself in the untenable circumstance to function as the chairman and for the Business Committee itself to function, then I believe that the Leader of Government Business should resign from the Business Committee and somebody else be appointed as chairman of the Business Committee who can cause the Business Committee to function.

What has been pulled today—supposedly by logic and/or Standing Orders—as you have said to us that what was on the Order Paper originally was not sanctioned by the Business Committee so it should not have been put on the Order Paper. If we were to depend on the functions of the Business Committee, we would not function as a Legislative Assembly half of the time at best. There is something inherently wrong with the function of this Legislative Assembly, and I believe that you recognise that.

If the government feels its loyalty is to stick to the issue of proceedings not continuing because the Leader of Government Business does not wish for those proceedings to continue in his absence, then they are free to do so. But you also, Mr. Speaker, have a duty to the minority.

As has been mentioned to you before, this country's business today could continue. There is no disrespect to the absence of the members who are away on official business. There is no position being taken that that official business they are on is not very important and vital business. But I ask you the question, Mr. Speaker, Do their ministries shut down in their absence? Why should we shut down in their absence?

Clearly, the government right now is confident of a majority for any vote that is taken. If they were not confident we probably would not have started as yet because obviously that was the ploy from the beginning.

Mr. Speaker, I say this with total sincerity, sir: What is happening right now in this House today—not casting any aspersions or any blame on you or the Chair at this point in time—is wrong! It is wrong for this country!

Obviously, this was not planned for, and I respect that. What will happen next week when something else is not planned for and the same thing occurs? What are we going to do then? Where do we draw the line? When do we begin to function?

Sir, I am going to appeal to the government today, if there is cooperation in this House no one is going to seek an edge. We simply want the country's business to continue. It is frustrating at best to say that we come here wanting the business to go on. Clearly (because no one has said otherwise), it is only because of the absence of a few ministers that we cannot continue the business.

As was said to you by the first speaker this morning, no one wishes to try to point motions or questions or direct them to anyone absent for someone else to have to deal with. There is enough business here . . . and there are enough questions here for those who are here to deal with.

They have the numbers, Mr. Speaker, and they can shut this thing down. But I am saying loud and clear that it is wrong to do so. If they make that decision this morning they are telling this country that they are holding the country ransom to do at their will what they wish to do and democracy will not prevail.

The Speaker: Honourable Members, I crave your indulgence for permission to reply to Mr. Tibbetts. I think he has directed to the Chair and it is my responsibility.

If it is the wish of the House that I reply in writing I shall be more than happy to do so. If it is the wish that I reply orally I would be more than happy to do so. So I shall now put the question that I reply to him orally.

Could you indicate by a show of hands—I will be more than happy to reply in writing.

Hon. Julianna O'Connor-Connolly: Mr. Speaker, if I may?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Community Affairs, Sports, Women, Youth and Culture.

Hon. Julianna O'Connor-Connolly: Mr. Speaker, seeing that it was the First Elected Member for George Town who brought those specific issues to your attention, perhaps it would be in order to ask him directly what is his wish, whether he wishes it in writing or orally. I have no objection to whatever way he wishes that to go sir.

The Speaker: I cannot put a question without a motion so I would ask for a show of hands. I will be led by the House because I was placed in this Honourable Chair to carry out the will of the House—and I shall do that at all times.

Would you prefer me to reply in wiring?

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Mr. Speaker, I am at your disposal, sir, whatever is convenient for you I am happy with however you wish to do it.

The Speaker: I will reply in writing.

Does any other Member wish to speak?

The Honourable Minister for Health, Community Welfare, Drug Abuse Prevention and Rehabilitation.

Hon. Anthony S. Eden: Mr. Speaker, just to give a version of where I understand we have come from on this. While the negotiating team is still overseas I was notified by the Clerk of Executive Council that because of certain developments Executive Council would be moved up earlier to be held at 9.00 a.m. on Tuesday instead of the traditional time of 10.00 a.m.

I knew nothing about any other meeting that transpired between Friday and Tuesday. My understanding—while discussions were going on between the Leader of Government Business and the Honourable Third Official Member—was that contact would be made with members of Legislative Assembly that were available. I understand that some were reached.

It was my understanding (and I think that of other members of Executive Council) that there would be a meeting of the Legislative Assembly, but it would be merely for an adjournment since they had been off to Europe with negotiations. Because of certain developments and with the possibility of some serious actions against these islands—possibly tomorrow or by the weekend—they needed to act promptly. That is my understanding.

My feeling is that there is a traditional serious failure of communication. I think if all members knew this . . . Everyone knows I preach that we need to keep the backbenchers informed of what's going on and many of these—I am not being critical of my government, Mr. Speaker—but it has been a weakness, a failure of communication. That is my understanding of how we would come here this morning.

As a matter of fact, I am not quite familiar with the protocol whether we needed to come here since the Honourable Financial Secretary had spoken to some people and evidently it was not going the way it was. The only thing I do remember, is that one minister said that we needed to continue to work late next week and the agreement in Executive Council was that we would do that. That is my understanding of the situation.

For what it is worth, I am sorry about this failure of communication or whatever it is but these things should not be happening at this level.

Thank you.

The Speaker: The Elected Member for North Side.

Mrs. Edna Moyle: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I would like to echo the comments of the Fourth Elected Member for George Town, the First Elected Member George Town and the Third Elected Member for West Bay.

When I was elected in 1996 to represent the people of the district of North Side, I was elected to carry out the business of this country that affects them. The Standing Orders say that if there is a quorum the proceedings of the House shall continue unless there is a specific reason to call for an adjournment on urgent public matters, which would then be debated.

Mr. Speaker, I was not contacted that the team was returning to Washington until I heard it yesterday in the Public Accounts Committee meeting. There is a Clerk and there is a Deputy Clerk in this Parliament whose duties are when these things arise to notify each serving Member of the Parliament. This is not a matter to put the blame at the feet of the Third Official Member, the Financial Secretary. He has no responsibility whatsoever for this Parliament.

The Leader of Government Business who requested this adjournment should have contacted the Clerk or the Deputy Clerk and had the proper information passed to the backbench. I would assume the government would have known.

Mr. Speaker, I would like to record my concern this morning for this Parliament being held up deliberately (and I can be corrected) until one of the official members could reach this Parliament and be sworn in so that the government could have a majority to carry out the adjournment of this Parliament—and the opposition and minority on this side have no rights.

So, Mr. Speaker, I would like to say I have no intentions of supporting an adjournment. There are some 93 questions on the Order Paper, some 11 or 12 motions that are not addressed to the Minister of Tourism and not addressed to the Minister of Education. There are three responsible ministers that I voted for, except one, to go into Council to represent me as a member of this Legislative Assembly because I thought that they had the ability to carry out the duties and responsibilities as that minister being my representative in Parliament.

It speaks very unfairly for the three official members that we deliberately swore in this morning so that there could be a quorum so that we could adjourn. It says to me that those members do not have the ability to lay a report in this Parliament unless they are told by the Leader of Government Business that they can do it.

Mr. Speaker, I have the greatest of respect for those three acting official members. I would say to them that I hope they don't think that is the belief of all members sitting in this Parliament. We on this side, my colleagues that are with me, feel that you are quite capable of carrying out the laying of a report, the answering of questions and maybe even the reply to motions.

I agree with the Fourth Elected Member [of George Town] and the Third Elected Member [of West Bay]. There are eighteen members of this Parliament. The Government could have sat before they left yesterday and decided on what motions they were prepared to accept. They still have the majority in that they have six over there and they have the Second Elected Member for Bodden Town over here, which gives them the majority in Parliament so their motions would have been voted on in the way that they wanted them voted on.

I don't believe that any minister needs other ministers to tell him how to reply to questions in this Parliament.

So, Mr. Speaker, with those few words I have no intention of supporting any motion for the adjournment of this Parliament because there is a quorum in the Parliament that the business of this country can continue.

The Speaker: The Third Elected Member for Bodden Town.

Mr. Roy Bodden: As I understand the procedure for meetings, notice of meetings, notices of adjournments and any change in the schedule of the business of this Parliament, those notices emanate from the offices of the Clerk or the Deputy Clerk.

Therefore, the Honourable Third Official Member had no official responsibility to contact any member. I was one of those members contacted and the honourable member did explain why. But I gave no undertaking that I was coming here to vote on the adjournment. I merely raised with the honourable member the possibility that when they returned from their trip the Parliament would have to meet late. I was putting him on notice that their co-operation would be necessary for the Parliament to meet late to dispatch as expeditiously as possible the business of the country.

Now, if I understand the Westminster system, as I believe I do, we are operating on a convoluted version of that here. The Leader of Government Business—who is also the Chairman of the Business Committee—has the responsibility to set the business for the House. Once that business is set, it should have been his obligation to notify the Clerk and her deputy to inform the members as to any change. I would have to say that it is contempt on the part of someone.

I would rather say, Mr. Speaker, that it is contempt rather than ignorance for such an honourable minister being here for so long. He should not be ignorant of the procedure; so, it must be contempt on his part for not following the correct procedure.

Then for the government to come and expect that the backbench is going to be so timid as to accept these things forgetting that we too are representatives of the people, and that we too have our responsibilities and obligations to carry out towards the people . . . Mr. Speaker, that is saying a bit much. Somebody needs to tell me if the Cayman Islands is being run as a one party state. For only in one party states can the Leader of Government Business take off and say, 'There will be no Parliament because the Leader is out of the country'. That does not happen in any Westminster style democracy. Only African countries and some of these other countries that still practice one party politics do that kind of thing. Mr. Speaker, we need to get this understanding clear.

I listened to the Honourable Minister of Health mention poor communication. Poor communication it is! But it is poor communication every time! I have to pose the question: Is it deliberately poor communication?

Mr. Speaker, in my book this is a contempt for Parliament and contempt for members. I say again that it casts you as the Honourable Speaker in an untenable position. It should not be your responsibility—out respect and deference to you—to have to referee this kind of disagreement and dispute. You are the Honourable Speaker! This shows there is a lack of respect for the role you play as Speaker by casting you into this untenable position.

Mr. Speaker, what is clear, sir, is that we need lessons in parliamentary procedure and protocol. Perhaps, we should study the history of how Parliament emanated when Cromwell got rid of the King and then we will understand our roles as representatives of the people. And maybe we should take some time to read history.

Mr. Speaker, I cannot, sir, in my good sense vote for the adjournment. We have business to do! Elections are nigh upon us! August is the time when most family members—including the staff of this Honourable Parliament—set aside to take vacation. The House prorogues on 26 September, there is business to be done. The show should go on!

The Parliament has a quorum. The business of the country should go on. I respect the fact that the delegation is gone on important business, but that too was handled discourteously. You cannot just call someone over the telephone—I mean, who are we, lackeys?—and say, 'We will be out of the country.' That too did not even come from the elected leader.

Mr. Speaker, it is high time somebody understands. It is no wonder we don't get treated any better if the people don't understand internal protocol. Thank you, sir.

The Speaker: Does any other Member wish to speak?

The Honourable Minister for Agriculture, Communications, Environment and Natural Resources.

Hon. John. B. McLean: Mr. Speaker, I have listened to the various speakers . . . and I am not making any excuses for anyone. It is unfortunate that this has been handled the way it has been, but I know that the Leader of Government Business did speak to you, sir. I know that the other ministers and I were told that the Financial Secretary had contacted two other members.

I realise what the members are saying with regard to the Leader of Government Business. But the Leader, the Financial Secretary, and the Attorney General have been under a lot of stress and strain with regard to travelling from London, getting home over the weekend, trying to prepare themselves to get on to the United States. I believe it is all of this put together that has caused the breakdown here with the notification of members.

I apologise on behalf of government for this, because I feel like all honourable members here realise that these gentlemen are away on some very serious business, equally as serious as what we are about to do in this Chamber at any one time. If things are not going well abroad, we are all aware that there could be problems in the islands.

So, I would say again, I apologise on behalf of the government to the members for the misunderstanding. I trust we can go forward from here. It is not the first time we have had to adjourn this House because of such meetings abroad and I hope this one could be treated the same way.

Mrs. Edna Moyle: Mr. Speaker, if you would allow me, sir.

The Speaker: Briefly. The Elected Member for North Side.

Mrs. Edna Moyle: Through you to the father of the House, I wonder if he could tell the Parliament why is it necessary to close down Parliament when there is a quorum within the Chamber.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Agriculture, Communications, Environment and Natural Resources. This is not question time, if you wish to reply you may.

Does any other Member wish to speak?

The First Elected Member for West Bay.

Mr. W. McKeever Bush: I won't be long, sir, but the point that I would like to question is why we come here and we have a quorum and we have to sit until 11.00 a.m. Nobody comes and tells us anything. We just sit down not doing anything, Mr. Speaker. Just wasting time until government can get its business sorted out.

It is certainly not fair to members who have things to do. We have constituencies to run, business to attend to and I certainly take objection to that.

Now, what has happened here has been happening for several years and I have always complained, because the fact remains that . . . For instance, on this Order Paper are three motions. Motion 2 could be dealt with. The Community Development Minister is here or the Minister of Social Services.

The next item could be dealt with by the Community Development Minister. Private Member's Motion No. 10/2000, Establishment of a "Safe House" for Battered Women and Children could be dealt with.

All I am saying is that these items do not impact upon the Ministries of Tourism and Education or the Portfolio of Legal Affairs or the Finance Department. I believe it is just a waste of time for all of us to be brought back into this House to come to say prayers to adjourn. The truth is, I learned about this some time yesterday. But no one called me to explain what the situation is or was. Nobody had that courtesy—and I carry a cellular phone and the number is available to all members of this House!

Mr. Speaker, notwithstanding that some members had to leave on urgent business, the fact remains that I don't believe all members had to leave. I certainly recognise the precarious position that this country is in. All of us recognise that. The truth must be told to the country that we are in a precarious situation, and we can be damaged. But at least tell us as members that something is wrong and we need to shut down. I still say that the House does not need to shut down so that we can get business completed.

I take objection having to come here this morning to sit down and waste this amount of time just to vent our feelings. Nothing constructive has been done so far. I just hope that members and Council . . . because I really believe that they have a duty to answer the business that is on the Order Paper and they certainly have a majority by all account. I take objection to it because it is a waste of the country's time. Thank you.

The Speaker: Honourable members, I feel an obligation to reply to some of the remarks made, but first I would like to thank all Honourable members for exercising their democratic right. I have not held that democratic right from any member.

I have asked for any member wishing to speak and have given them as long as they wanted. I want to make it abundantly clear that I am here to do a job and I will do it to the best of my ability. I am not here to listen to one side or the other. I am here to do what is in the Standing Orders—which I hold in my hand—and when they are silent on an issue I refer to Erskine May, 22nd Edition, Parliamentary Practice and Procedure.

I was rather shocked to hear my Deputy Speaker say that a quorum was present this morning. I want to make it abundantly clear that the Standing Orders say "a quorum present." On numerous occasions I have had to wait in my office for hours, sometime less, standing by this door waiting for the Serjeant-at-Arms to bring me in, simply because there was not seated in this Chamber eight members.

The quorum calls that the members be present in the Chamber—not in the precincts. I would like that to be on record. Therefore, there was no deliberate delay. And I say that. She said it was either deliberate or otherwise and I am telling her what the otherwise really is.

I thank you all very much. At this time I shall now put the question that this Honourable House—

Mr. W. McKeever Bush: Mr. Speaker, I think we need to clear the air on the Deputy Speaker because the fact remains that you had four government members/ministers in your office. So, whether we had been in here or not, there would not have been a quorum.

The Speaker: I do not wish to entertain any more debate.

Mr. W. McKeever Bush: No, but you need to tell the truth on the Deputy Speaker!

The Speaker: Please sit down!

Mr. W. McKeever Bush: What I am saying about "the truth," I will withdraw, but you need to make it absolutely clear what the member was saying. That would be fair to the member.

The Speaker: Let us make it very clear this morning, you withdrew because I am telling the truth and I ask that that be withdrawn now.

Mr. W. McKeever Bush: I said I will withdraw "the truth" if you say that you had four members in your office.

The Speaker: No if's, and's, or but's! I am asking you to withdraw 'that I am not telling the truth'.

Mr. W. McKeever Bush: Well, sir, I said I withdraw the truth—

The Speaker: Stop it there please!

Mr. W. McKeever Bush: . . . if you would clear the air that their were government members sufficient for a quorum in this House.

The Speaker: I want you to state that you withdraw that I am telling an untruth and stop at that.

Mr. W. McKeever Bush: Mr. Speaker, I withdraw that you were telling an untruth. What I am saying that you need to state absolutely clearly is that you had government members in your office which would have made the quorum that the Deputy Speaker was speaking about.

The Speaker: I would also call to your attention that when the Speaker stands all should sit. I thank you for that and please continue.

The First Elected Member for West Bay.

Mr. W. McKeever Bush: Mr. Speaker, all I am saying is that you have referred to the Deputy Speaker . . . and I think what you are doing is unprecedented in any event . . . but nevertheless you have not taken that position. You need to make it absolutely clear that what the Deputy Speaker was talking about when she mentioned a quorum was the fact that members were in this Legislative Assembly and there were four government ministers, at least, in your office.

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Also to make it absolutely clear, I appreciate what you were saying, but bear in mind that at least six of us were sitting in the Common Room waiting for the Serjeant-at-Arms to come to us to tell us that you were ready.

So, the point about people being in the precincts and not in the chamber, in my view, sir, does not clarify the situation. It only reinforces what the Elected Member from North Side was saying. So, the fact that we were there ready to start and you are saying that sometimes people are in the precincts but don't come into the chamber has no bearing on what transpired this morning, in my view, sir, with the greatest of respect.

When the Serjeant-at-Arms came to us, he came to us saying that you wanted us in the committee room not in this Chamber. So we need to get that very straight.

Do you know something, Mr. Speaker? Perhaps at this point in time I think you grow tired of us because it has been going on and on and we just simply need to take the break. This is becoming very frustrating.

The Speaker: That's true words.
The Elected Member for North Side.

Mrs. Edna Moyle: Mr. Speaker, being the woman that I am I can defend what I say in this Parliament. I really appreciate the First Elected Member for West Bay and the First Elected Member for George Town standing up for me. But I would like it to be very clear that I am quite capable of defending myself in this Parliament or anywhere else.

I said there was a quorum in this House. There were three members of government in your office. In my opinion it was deliberately delayed by those in your office until Mr. Roberts could arrive within these hallowed halls to be sworn in to make a majority so that they could get an adjournment.

If I have to be named and leave this Parliament, sir, I am prepared to do that, because that is my opinion and that is my belief that this is why Parliament was delayed until 11.30 a.m. this morning.

The Speaker: I shall not further the debate. I shall write to you.

I shall now put the question that this Honourable House do adjourn until 10.00 a.m. on July 10th. Those in favour please say Aye. Those against, No.

AYES.

The Speaker: The Ayes have it.

Hon. Julianna O'Connor-Connolly: Can we have a division, Mr. Speaker?

The Speaker: Certainly, Madam Clerk, would you call a division please.

The Clerk:

READING BY THE SPEAKER OF
MESSAGES AND ANNOUNCEMENTS

APOLOGIES

The Speaker: I have apologies from the Honourable First Official Member who is presently on vacation and the Fourth Elected Member for West Bay who is sick.

Item number three on today's Order Paper, Questions to Honourable Members/Ministers. Deferred question 21 is standing in the name of the Third Elected Member for Bodden Town.

QUESTIONS TO HONOURABLE
MEMBERS/MINISTERS

QUESTION 21

No. 21: Mr. Roy Bodden asked the Honourable Minister responsible for Tourism, Commerce, Transport and Works when the road now called "Harquail Bypass" will be changed to its official name.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Tourism Commerce Transport and Works.

Hon. Thomas C. Jefferson: The renaming of the Harquail Bypass is being considered by Executive Council.

SUPPLEMENTARIES

The Speaker: Supplementaries. The Third Elected Member for Bodden Town.

Mr. Roy Bodden: Can the Honourable Minister tell the House what is the delay with it being considered by Executive Council when the Assembly has already given assent and approval?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Tourism, Commerce, Transport and Works.

Hon. Thomas C. Jefferson: Mr. Speaker, the Gazzetal of the names of all roads in the Cayman Islands is before Executive Council for consideration. That is the only answer I can give at this present time. These matters are being considered by Council and as soon as they take a decision then we will be in a position to say something differently.

The Speaker: The Fourth Elected Member for George Town.

Dr. Frank McField: Could the Minister say what name is being considered by the Executive Council at present?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Tourism, Commerce, Transport and Works.

Hon. Thomas C. Jefferson: Mr. Speaker, the list of roads begin from A to Z in essence, and what is being considered is all of the commitments that the Government has agreed to included the Esterley Tibbetts Driveway or Parkway, whatever we call it.

The Speaker: The Fourth Elected Member for George Town.

Dr. Frank McField: Would the Minister say whether or not the Government is considering renaming the Harquail Bypass the Esterley Tibbetts Highway?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Tourism, Commerce, Transport and Works.

Hon. Thomas C. Jefferson: Mr. Speaker, I thought that was what I did say. The matter is being considered by Executive Council.

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for West Bay.

Mr. W. McKeeva Bush: Can the Minister say if there is any idea at all when this should come before Council?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Tourism, Commerce, Transport and Works.

Hon. Thomas C. Jefferson: I thought I did say that the matter is before Council for consideration. So, it is presently before Executive Council.

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for West Bay.

Mr. W. McKeeva Bush: Well then, can the Minister say if he has any idea when a decision will be taken—how long from now?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Tourism, Commerce, Transport and Works.

Hon. Thomas C. Jefferson: Matters that are presented to Executive Council for consideration can take a week, two weeks, or a longer period of time. I am aware that if you say something in this House that is based on your own opinion and it turns out to be wrong that members could say that I have misled this House. I am not about to do that this morning.

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Can the Honourable Minister explain exactly the procedure takes place in this specific instance when a Private Member's Motion brought to the Legislative Assembly regarding the renaming of the Bypass was passed by the legislature unanimously? What is the procedure that supersedes passage of that motion to get the name put to the specific road that we are talking about?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Tourism, Commerce, Transport and Works.

Hon. Thomas C. Jefferson: As I recall the motion asked for Government to take the necessary action to rename this particular road and in order to accomplish that it needs to go to Executive Council. A street naming committee has been established for several months, maybe as far back as last year. They also have a number of roads that they have renamed. I know there are several in West Bay and I think there are several in George Town and many other districts. So, all these matters together are presently before the Executive Council for approval. Following that these names will be Gazetted and then the signs will be changed on the respective roads.

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: So, if I understand the Minister correctly, and if he would just follow me to make sure that I am clear in my understanding, the motion having been passed and the Government having accepted the motion, there is no question then that that is what the name of the road is going to be. The only question arises as to when it is going to happen. Is that correct?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Tourism, Commerce, Transport and Works.

Hon. Thomas C. Jefferson: The only other area in it, Mr. Speaker, is that there needs to be in this whole process a section 5 declaration. Prior to establishing Phase 1 of the Harquail Bypass there was a declaration of section 3 under the Roads Law which allowed the Government to move forward and to construct the road. A section 5 declaration basically says that it is then a public road and all the matters that need to be settled are settled and following that the process would be similar to what the First Elected Member for George Town is saying.

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for West Bay.

Mr. W. McKeever Bush: If I am following what the Minister said, the Harquail Bypass is not yet gazetted because as a rule Executive Council looks at what is gazetted. But I don't know that they were looking at names of roads as I thought that was something Lands and Surveys did.

Can the Minister say if the Harquail Bypass is gazetted and whether, in fact, it is not the duty of the Lands and Survey Department to name roads?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Tourism, Commerce, Transport and Works.

Hon. Thomas C. Jefferson: Mr. Speaker, I did make mention of the fact that there is a committee established for the naming of roads. That committee is established under the Lands and Survey Department. The Lands and Survey Department also deals with the gazetting of declaration whether it is section 3 or 5. Section 3 has already been done but section 5 is the closure of this entire matter, which makes it legal in all respects.

The Speaker: The Third Elected Member for Bodden Town.

Mr. Roy Bodden: Can the Honourable Minister tell the House in the specific case of the Harquail Bypass whether there are any other encumbrances experienced in the naming of this road as was passed by the Legislative Assembly other than the inability of the Executive Council to deal with the matter to date?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Tourism, Commerce, Transport and Works.

Hon. Thomas C. Jefferson: I don't know that I can speak to the inability of Council to deal with the matter. Council deals with many matters that are necessary in its duty under the law and under its duty of policy making. I am not aware of any other item that would be an obstacle (if that is what the Member is referring to) to this process. But Executive Council needs to take a decision on it before I can actually say it is done.

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for West Bay. Two additional supplementaries after this.

Mr. W. McKeever Bush: This will be my last one.

During the debate on that motion it was announced that Government had proposed to name that particular road after the previous Governor. Can the Minister say what has happened to that decision, whether that is also being considered along with the name proposed by the legislature?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Tourism, Commerce, Transport and Works.

Hon. Thomas C. Jefferson: As I said earlier, there isn't any obstacle in the approval that was granted by this Honourable House. I am not aware of anything that is hindering the Council from doing so and the matter referred to by the First Elected Member for West Bay, certainly that name is not interfering with the name that was approved by this Honourable House.

The Speaker: We will move on to question number 22 standing in the name of the Third Elected Member for Bodden Town.

QUESTION 22

No. 22: Mr. Roy Bodden asked the Honourable Minister responsible for Tourism, Commerce, Transport and Works to state the Department of Tourism's advertising campaign for the upcoming winter season.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Tourism, Commerce, Transport and Works.

Hon. Thomas C. Jefferson: The Department of Tourism has, over the past several years, used not simply advertising but an integrated mix of communications' services at all times and in all seasons to support business initiatives. These would include efforts made in the Spring and early Fall with a strong public relations programme via the Visiting Journalists programme, which will be further supported by the media online website now under development.

This site, now in its final stages of refinement, will allow the destination to proactively provide editorial content as well as online images in real time to journalists around the world. Journalists will be able to access it in English, Italian, Spanish, German or French. These public relations' efforts drive business in the future seasons, i.e. winter and beyond given that feature stories and articles tend to come out six to twelve months after the visit.

Additional to that are the ongoing efforts of marketing staff in all areas within which we have officers or representative agencies which are carried out with travel trade and consumer promotions.

Concurrent with that are the efforts with wholesale/tour operator partners in all markets with newspapers and other advertising which are designed to propel business.

Major strides have been made with online travel service providers. A rapidly expanding element of the integrated communications programme is the online marketing programme which has evolved significantly since the launch in October 1998 of the first web site.

The Cayman Islands Department of Tourism has two official consumer websites located at www.caymanislands.ky and www.divecayman.ky.

www.caymanislands.ky is a destination specific website which provides the consumer with a comprehensive source of tourist information. The second and newest website is www.divecayman.ky. This scuba diving specialty website provides tourists with an interest in scuba diving with comprehensive information on diving in the Cayman Islands. Both sites have experienced very strong visitor traffic. They can be found on search engines including www.yahoo.com, www.travelocity.com, www.infoseek.com, www.altavista.com, etc.

Both consumer websites feature information and website links to the accommodation sector and services in the Cayman Islands. Both consumer websites are advertised in our print advertising campaigns and in all of our collateral pieces in all markets.

Within that context numerous initiatives for the upcoming winter season are underway. Traditional advertising efforts for third and fourth quarter of this year includes print advertising such as newspapers and Travel and Lifestyle magazines in all markets globally.

During the main "active winter months" of the United States, there advertisements are scheduled for The Weather Channel as well as print advertisements in publications that support niche markets of Scuba diving/snorkelling, Weddings and Honeymoons along with Eco-travel and the incentive market.

Billboards strategically placed in high-density travel markets in the United States will support these initiatives. The Department of Tourism has also entered into a series of co-op advertising programmes with the local private sector, both dive and consumer with wholesalers and tour operators in the United States, Canada and Europe.

In the overall, a range of efforts are in place to proactively push business for the upcoming winter season and beyond.

SUPPLEMENTARIES

The Speaker: The Third Elected Member for Bodden Town.

Mr. Roy Bodden: Can the Honourable Minister tell the House which of these websites are established and managed from the Cayman Islands?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Tourism, Commerce, Transport and Works.

Hon. Thomas C. Jefferson: Mr. Speaker, both are managed from the Cayman Islands.

The Speaker: The Third Elected Member for Bodden Town.

Mr. Roy Bodden: Is the Minister in a position to tell the House whether there is any monitoring of the websites to see how many times they have been visited and can he also tell the House how often the websites are updated?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Tourism, Commerce, Transport and Works.

Hon. Thomas C. Jefferson: Mr. Speaker, the first website is presently being updated in a major way. The updating of information is done as is necessary, perhaps on a weekly basis or earlier if the need arises.

The second website is a relatively new website and there isn't any a major updating exercise necessary other than to keep the information on both sides current and accurate.

The Speaker: The Third Elected Member for Bodden Town.

Mr. Roy Bodden: I noticed there has not been much mentioned of some of what I would term traditional forms of advertisement, that is, television through the commercial stations other than what the Honourable Minister said about the Weather Channel. Also, there is only scant mention about advertising in journals.

Could the Minister enlighten the House as to whether there has been a de-emphasis on this or whether we are still continuing to utilise the traditional sources of advertisement in addition to the websites?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Tourism, Commerce, Transport and Works.

Hon. Thomas C. Jefferson: It is necessary in a general election year in the United States that we look at the most effective way of utilising the funds provided by this Legislative Assembly for the Department of Tourism. We know that in a general election year advertising on television is a very expensive way of getting your message out and we do know that the market itself is changing substantially from television advertising to more of a public relations aspect to the use of technology online, searches for information on various destinations that are seeking to attract the consumer to their island or country.

We have continued to utilise the same sources as we have done traditionally but with greater emphasis on newspaper advertising and online services. The newspaper advertising is done more in a co-op way with wholesalers, airlines and tour operators because in essence it is a call to action to the consumer. It is a package that is stated in dollars which will deal with the accommodation as well as the air travel. While we do continue to create an awareness of the Cayman Islands by television, whether it is on the Weather Channel or other channels that we advertise on, we feel that the way we are dealing with it at the present time we have to take into account the environment and the market in which we are working.

We have to take into account the prices that are being charged and how is the best way of achieving our objective with the most cost-effective way of spending our money. So, in the year 2000 that is what we are focusing on. As far as the television is concerned we feel it is not the most effective way of getting your market information across although you cannot divorce yourself from it completely.

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for West Bay.

Mr. W. McKeeva Bush: Can the Minister say whether he is spending more this year on advertising or less?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Tourism, Commerce, Transport and Works.

Hon. Thomas C. Jefferson: We are not spending more, we are spending it with a different mix between printed advertising, be it glossy magazines or newspaper, some television ads, some newspaper ads in conjunction with the local partners and in conjunction with wholesalers and travel agents among others.

So, it is not that we are spending more, meaning more than what the budget suggests, but we are sending the message in different areas or using different vehicles to get the message out which we feel is the most effective way of doing it. It is an integrated system rather than depending solely on television and the magazines. In the past we have not spent as much money advertising in the newspaper and we find that the changing market suggest that we should re-focus or re-visit that particular decision. So, in the year 2000 we have made some change in that respect.

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for West Bay.

Mr. W. McKeeva Bush: Can the Minister say what sort of rule has been applied to determine what is the best advertising, whether it is television or this new way he has outlined? I should add, sir, how effective has it been since 1998?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Tourism, Commerce, Transport and Works.

Hon. Thomas C. Jefferson: Mr. Speaker, periodically the advertising agency which is the body that does most of the research for us carries out the necessary research to determine the best way of spending the money to be more effective in attracting visitors to our shores. Through this methodology and through the cost of producing a message we took the decision to deal with the advertising and public relations programme.

The effectiveness is in terms of the contribution to the economy of this country. That effectiveness has shown well over the last seven or so years. We have periodic difficulty like everybody else. When you can jump on a plane in New York and go to Europe for $400 return trip that is the competition you have to deal with and sometimes all the advertising in the world won't change that individual's decision but we have to continue to try.

The Speaker: If there are no further supplementaries, moving on to question number 28 standing in the name of the Third Elected Member for Bodden Town.

QUESTION 28

No. 28: Mr. Roy Bodden asked the Honourable Minister responsible for Agriculture, Communications, Environment and Natural Resources what steps are being taken by the Government to prevent the infestation of the Cayman Islands of formosa termites?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Agriculture, Communications, Environment and Natural Resources.

Hon. John B. McLean: To the best of our knowledge the formosan termite (Coptotermes formosanus) has not yet been introduced into the Cayman Islands. There are, however, no specific programmes in place to prevent the introduction of Formosan termites.

The Department of Agriculture conducts inspections of plants that enter the Cayman Islands in order to detect and prevent the entry, establishment and spread of new plant pests and diseases. Termites are an occasional pest of agricultural crops, especially fruit trees and officers may be able to detect their presence by mud tunnels that are visible on plant stems, branches or trunks. However, termites tend to be transported geographically while hidden within lumber, wooden pallets and wood based packing materials. These items are not subject to inspection by the Department. If plants are infested with pests or infected with diseases, samples are taken for reference and identification. Depending upon the level of infestation or infection and the type of insect or disease problem identified, the consignment is either treated with a recommended pesticide or seized and destroyed.

SUPPLEMENTARIES

The Speaker: Supplementaries. The Third Elected Member for Bodden Town.

Mr. Roy Bodden: Seeing that these termites were primarily transported by wood, lumber and related products would the Minister undertake to inform importers that this may be a potential hazard as I have shared with the Minister the fact that these termites are serious pests particularly in the Southern United States and areas which importers and merchants in the Cayman Islands import stuff, running from Louisiana right up to Florida and Georgia.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Agriculture, Communications, Environment and Natural Resources.

Hon. John B. McLean: Mr. Speaker, I would like to acknowledge the information which was passed on by the Honourable Member and to say, yes, the Department will do all in its powers to make sure that we prevent this infestation if at all possible.

The Speaker: If there any further supplementaries we will move on to question no. 29 standing in the name of the First Elected Member for West Bay.

QUESTION 29

No. 29: Mr. W. McKeeva Bush asked the Honourable Minister responsible for Health, Social Welfare, Drug Abuse Prevention and Rehabilitation the ministry recently had an audit done on Public Financial Assistance. Can the Honourable Minister say how many people who receive assistance did not fall within the guideline at the time of the audit; how many of those persons, if any, have ceased to receive such benefits; and whether the Financial and Stores Regulations were breached.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Health, Social Welfare, Drug Abuse Prevention and Rehabilitation.

Hon. Anthony S. Eden: In order to answer part (a) of this question, it is appropriate to supply background information on the Internal Audit Department's Report on the Public Financial Assistance Programme.

The Internal Audit Department's Report on the Public Financial Assistance Programme was tabled in this Honourable House on 6th August, 1999. This Audi was requested in November 1997 when the subject of Social Welfare was given to my Ministry. I requested my Permanent Secretary to arrange the audit in order to understand the status of the programme. In addition, I felt that any recommendations coming from this Report would assist the Ministry in the future administration of the programme.

All aspects of the Public Financial Assistance Programme were covered, with particular emphasis on the systems that were in place, at that time, for the dissemination of information on the programme, the processing of applications, the financial assessment of applicants, the approval process and the payment of Public Financial Assistance (either by cheque or by deposit into a bank account).

This involved the interviewing of staff from both the previous Ministry, and my Ministry, along with the selection and examination of a random sample of 175 actual application forms. The 175 application forms represented 25% of the total number of persons receiving the assistance. In addition, letters were sent by mail to various Banks requesting them to confirm that the bank account number given on the application form was indeed the account number of the named applicant.

A definite answer could not be given to part (a) of the question which asks, and I quote "how many people who receive assistance did not fall within the guidelines at the time of the audit" since only a sample of 175 was actually examined.

With respect to them falling within the guidelines, the general finding of the Internal Audit Department's Report on Public Financial Assistance was that the basic criterion of "need" was generally overlooked in the assessment of the persons who at that time were the recipients of Public Financial Assistance. I quote from the Section of the Report which is entitled "FINDINGS" and which was tabled in this honourable House:

“Although excerpts from both Hansard and Finance Committee state that financial assistance will be given to disabled and handicapped persons who have no means of support, and to persons aged 60 and over who are in need and do not receive a pension or any income, the original application form did not ask the kind of in-depth questions that would provide the financial information necessary for a proper needs assessment of the applicants . . . In addition, the present application forms do not place sufficient emphasis on the importance of need as a critical factor in the approval of Public Assistance for an applicant. This is clearly shown by the exclusion of this important criterion (i.e. need) from the heading on the present application form which reads : “Financial Grant to the Elderly - 6- years and over, Disabled and Handicapped Persons.”

In reply to part (b) of the question which asks, and I quote “how many of those persons, if any, have ceased to receive such benefits,” no one has yet been removed from this list, as the Department of Social Services has first had to deal with a list of over 300 new applicants for Public Financial Assistance. The list of all recipients along with their records was handed over to the Department of Social Services when Public Financial Assistance was returned there in April 1999. Reassessments were started this year and the Department is reviewing those that have so far been reassessed.

In reply to part (c) whether the Financial and Stores Regulations were breached, I am pleased to report that the Internal Audit Department’s Report stated that all payments and receipts of Public Financial Assistance that were examined in the sample of 175 were done in accordance with Financial and Stores Regulations (FSRs).

SUPPLEMENTARIES

The Speaker: Supplementaries. The First Elected Member for West Bay.

Mr. W. McKeeva Bush: Can the Minister confirm that the Department of Social Services only dealt with the matter of financial assistance in April of last year?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Health, Social Welfare, Drug Abuse Prevention and Rehabilitation.

Hon. Anthony S. Eden: Yes, Mr. Speaker, that is when it came back to us.

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for West Bay.

Mr. W. McKeeva Bush: Mr. Speaker, from August or November 1997 to April 1999 what was the position? Who dealt with financial assistance?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Health, Social Welfare, Drug Abuse Prevention and Rehabilitation.

Hon. Anthony S. Eden: Mr. Speaker, it was at my ministry at that time.

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for West Bay.

Mr. W. McKeeva Bush: Can the Minister say what was the process?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Health, Social Welfare, Drug Abuse Prevention and Rehabilitation.

Hon. Anthony S. Eden: As the audit was going on at that time unless it was something very urgent we would immediately refer it to Social Services.

The Speaker: The Third Elected Member for West Bay.

Mr. John D. Jefferson, Jr.: One of the things that I am concerned about is the amount of time it takes the department to assess, process and arrive at a decision. I wonder if the Honourable Minister can say what is being done to expedite this process.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Health, Social Welfare, Drug Abuse Prevention and Rehabilitation.

Hon. Anthony S. Eden: If a situation arises that there is an urgent application we will try to expedite this. Normally some of the additional features are to check on bank accounts as well as property searches at the Lands and Survey Department.

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for West Bay.

Mr. W. McKeeva Bush: As the question said that a definite answer could not be given to part (a) of the question (which asked how many people who receive assistance did not fall within the guidelines at the time of the audit), would he say how many out of the sample did not fall within the guidelines?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Health, Social Welfare, Drug Abuse Prevention and Rehabilitation.

Hon. Anthony S. Eden: The auditor actually did not say how many people fell into that category.

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for West Bay.

Mr. W. McKeeva Bush: Would the Minister agree then that it is safe to assume that if the Audit Department had found any way out [number] then that should have been reported?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Health, Social Welfare, Drug Abuse Prevention and Rehabilitation.

Hon. Anthony S. Eden: Mr. Speaker, I tend to agree with the Member.

The Speaker: The Fourth Elected Member for George Town.

Dr. Frank McField: Mr. Speaker, with regard to questions asked by the Third Elected Member for West Bay, I would like to find out from the Minister what are the specific reasons they do the bank account search before making the decision to give the support, if that could not be done afterwards. If the person did give wrong information then they would be in breach of the law in any case.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Health, Social Welfare, Drug Abuse Prevention and Rehabilitation.

Hon. Anthony S. Eden: The understanding I have is if the people gave incorrect information, it would be a case where we would have to clear it up through the court system and we would not want to get into that. The feeling is that we would prefer to deal with it before hand.

The Speaker: The Fourth Elected Member for George Town.

Dr. Frank McField: I would like to find out from the Minister why there is the feeling that they would like to deal with in this way when there are so many cases that are brought to their attention where people really need assistance urgently and the bureaucratic delay causes unnecessary hardship for these individuals.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Health, Social Welfare, Drug Abuse Prevention and Rehabilitation.

Hon. Anthony S. Eden: Mr. Speaker, assistance would be given on a temporary basis if there is an urgent call for this until everything is established.

The Speaker: The Fourth Elected Member for George Town.

Dr. Frank McField: Could the Minister say how you determine the urgent cause when the whole idea is to do the investigation before determining whether or not the assistance would be given? How would deciding on the urgency be any different than the process of deciding on whether or not the person would actually get the permanent type of assistance?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Health, Social Welfare, Drug Abuse Prevention and Rehabilitation.

Hon. Anthony S. Eden: I am made to understand that during the preliminary assessment there can be a determination as to the urgency of the need for the assistance.

The Speaker: Two final supplementaries. The Third Elected Member for West Bay.

Mr. John D. Jefferson, Jr.: As a follow-up to my previous question, I wonder if the Honourable Minister can say how many applications are now pending? On average, how long does it take for an application to be processed?

SUSPENSION OF STANDING ORDER 23(7) AND (8)

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Health, Social Welfare, Drug Abuse Prevention and Rehabilitation.

Honourable Minister before you answer I would appreciate if you move a motion for the suspension of Standing Order 23(7) and (8) in order that we can continue beyond 11.00 a.m.

Hon. Anthony S. Eden: I so do move the suspension of the Standing Order.

The Speaker: I shall put the question that Standing Order 23(7) and (8) be suspended in order that question time may continue beyond 11.00 a.m. Those in favour please say Aye. Those against No.

AYES.

The Speaker: The Ayes have it. Question time continues.

AGREED: STANDING ORDER 23(7) AND (8) SUSPENDED.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Health, Social Welfare, Drug Abuse Prevention and Rehabilitation.

Hon. Anthony S. Eden: Mr. Speaker, the total number is 338. Eighty-three of them have been assigned for assessment.

The Speaker: The Elected Member for North Side.

Hon. Anthony S. Eden: Sorry, Mr. Speaker, that is 83 pending.

The Speaker: Do you have a follow-up? [referring to the Third Elected Member for West Bay]

Mr. John D. Jefferson, Jr.: There were two parts to that question. The second part was on average how long does an application take?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Health, Social Welfare, Drug Abuse Prevention and Rehabilitation.

Hon. Anthony S. Eden: Mr. Speaker, the assessment now takes between three or four months.

The Speaker: The Elected Member for North Side.

Mrs. Edna Moyle: Would the Honourable Minister say what factors are taken into account in determining that a person is in need as was given by the Finance Committee recorded in the Hansard and as reported in the Auditor's Report?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Health, Social Welfare, Drug Abuse Prevention and Rehabilitation.

Hon. Anthony S. Eden: Criteria for the services are that all persons seeking financial assistance from the department must be assessed to determine the level of need. It must be ascertained that the persons cannot meet their basic needs. All support from family and friends must be identified.

Adult children are responsible for maintaining their elderly or disabled parents and grandparents as such contact will be made with all adult children and adult grandchildren to ascertain what assistance they can provide to their parents or grandparents. All information that is shared must be confirmed with the relevant persons employer and agencies prior to assistance being granted.

The following information must be provided:

- ◆ Medical certificate in cases where the person is seeking help due to ill-health or disability.
- ◆ Place of employment and length of time at this job. A copy of a salary slip must be provided, if applicable.
- ◆ The name of the employer. The information provided must be checked for accuracy and confirmation of salary if applicable.
- ◆ Bank accounts and bank statements.
- ◆ Copies of utility bills must be provided.
- ◆ Other sources of income—this includes income from rental properties, family contributions, other pensions, social security, regular contribution from churches or service clubs.
- ◆ In cases where the applicant is a young person seeking help on ground of disability, the department will need to ascertain whether they are receiving support via maintenance payments for any child/children he or she may have.
- ◆ If the applicant is separated or divorce from the other parent of the child/children, land titles or certified copies.

The Speaker: The Fourth Elected Member for George Town. This will be the final supplementary.

Dr. Frank McField: I would like to ask the Minister whether or not any efforts have been made by the department over the period that they have been dealing with this type of assistance to create an abridged version of this survey that needs to be done each time a person is being considered for financial assistance.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Health, Social Welfare, Drug Abuse Prevention and Rehabilitation.

Hon. Anthony S. Eden: Mr. Speaker, at this time this is the process for permanent financial assistance. If it is short term, it is looked at in a different light.

The Speaker: No more questions please.

Item number 4 on today's Order Paper, Other Business, Private Member's Motion No. 14/2000, Public Education System.

The Third Elected Member for George Town continuing.

OTHER BUSINESS

PRIVATE MEMBERS' MOTIONS

PRIVATE MEMBER'S MOTION NO. 14/2000

PUBLIC EDUCATION SYSTEM

(Continuation of debate thereon)

Mr. Linford A. Pierson: Mr. Speaker, on the adjournment of the House on Friday, 23rd June 2000 (some two weeks ago), I was speaking on Private Member's Motion No. 14/2000 on the subject of the Public Education System. Because of the time that has elapsed it is my intention to briefly summarise the points I raised in my debate for the sake of continuity.

Before doing so, with your further permission I wish to briefly explain to the listing public and also for the Hansard of this House the reason for the two week delay.

The Speaker: Please continue.

Mr. Linford A. Pierson: Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

To start with let me positively state without fear of successful contradiction that the single most important issue facing the Cayman Islands today is the international and global initiatives of the OECD, which means the Organisation for Economic Co-operation and Development; the FATF, which means the Financial Action Task Force, and the FSF, which is the acronym for the Financial Stability Forum and, of course, any related initiatives.

Mr. Speaker, it is my submission that these international initiatives are much more important to these islands at this time than coming into this Honourable House to debate motions or to answer parliamentary questions. I say that on the basis that as a jurisdiction if we do not make a move to resolve these international issues in a mutually satisfactory manner that there will be no purpose for us to attend meetings of this Honourable House.

This said, Mr. Speaker, I find it somewhat incredulous that whilst the five-man negotiating team comprised of the Honourable Minister for Education, the Honourable Minister for Tourism, the Honourable Second Official Member, the Honourable Third Official Member, and me were off the island negotiating these very important international issues that there should have been such a furore in this Honourable House as I read in Thursday's issue of the Caymanian Compass.

Whilst I do not question the democratic rights of any Member of this Honourable House, that right must carry with it a certain level of responsibility. I repeat that it is my opinion that the Business Paper of this Honourable House is as important to these islands at this time as these initiatives I have just mentioned. I will go further to say that I support the decision to adjourn this Honourable House during that period as the five-man negotiating team should be afforded an equal opportunity to debate and otherwise participate in all issues coming before this Honourable House.

Rather than be shown in a bad light, as was done here last Wednesday and reported in Thursday's paper, I feel it would have been much more reasonable for those honourable members who took the opportunity to do that to properly advise the public of what was going on.

Mr. Speaker, it could be said that the remarks made by various members on Wednesday were levelled against the elected members of Executive Council. I don't buy that sort of reasoning because it has been understood from the initial appointment of the five-man negotiating team that each Member was regarded as an equal partner. We did not have four members of Executive Council with me as on the backbench of that team. That position was reiterated on a number of occasions. I would not have had it in any other manner, Mr. Speaker, because I do in fact accept myself as an equal Member of the team.

I find it insulting that any Member of this House would suggest that the business of this House should be carried on without allowing me the opportunity to speak on any issues coming before this Honourable House. If we had been away on a vacation I could understand the attitude but we were away carrying out very important Government business and there is no reason why any Member of the House should be deprived on his right of dealing with the issues coming before this Honourable House.

Mr. Speaker, I will not stand by and allow the wrong message to go out to the listening public in this regard. I find that the vitriolic attack on the five-man—

Dr. Frank McField: Mr. Speaker, on a point of order.

Mr. Linford A. Pierson: If this Honourable Member has a point of order I will sit down, otherwise I would ask him to just sit and speak when his opportunity arises.

The Speaker: Please state your point of order

Dr. Frank McField: Mr. Speaker, on a point of clarification is the Member speaking—

Mr. Linford A. Pierson: Mr. Speaker, that is not a point of order, with respect.

The Speaker: [addressing the Fourth Elected Member for George Town] Please sit.

Continue the Third Elected Member for George Town.

Dr. Frank McField: Mr. Speaker, you have not heard my point of order!

The Speaker: I cannot allow clarifications at this time. Let the Member speak and then I will deal with you.
The Third Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. Linford A. Pierson: Mr. Speaker, I find it completely unreasonable that there should have been such a vitriolic attack on members that were carrying out some of the most important business that's facing this country at this time. It was totally unreasonable, and that is my opinion.

On the question on a lack of communication, I can only say that there was very little time available for briefing members. Just to show you that we were not away 'cocking up' our feet as some members like to say in this House, we arrived in London on Monday morning, I think it was, and that same afternoon notwithstanding the jet-lag we were having meetings with members of the Treasury Department trying to do our best for this country. We were not having a holiday. When we left there we went to the OECD in Paris. We got back here on a Saturday afternoon on the holiday weekend, the Monday was a holiday but where did we spend it? The five members of the negotiating team spent it in the Executive Council room from around 9.00 a.m. to about 8.00 p.m. in the evening. I am speaking on this to show why it was necessary for two weeks to elapse.

That is the relevance and I have cleared this point with you, Mr. Speaker, but I will be closing on that point in a minute. I think I have made my point.

Some people can give it but they cannot take it and many of them have not heard me in recent times defending myself in this House. But I guarantee that I am capable of doing it as well as any other Member when the time comes.

A Member: Mr. Speaker, war has been declared!

Mr. Linford A. Pierson: Just to say in closing on that particular point of clarification that because of the holiday on Monday and the fact that we worked through the holiday, the only time that we had available was the Tuesday morning because we left for Washington on urgent business with the State Department, the Department of Justice, Securities and Exchange Commission and other important sections of the U.S. Government in discussions relating to this country.

On that Tuesday morning, around 7.30 a.m. in the morning, I did in fact call the First Elected Member for George Town and I advised him what was happening.

I can only hope that since so many members have expressed their desire to have the business of this House conducted as expeditiously as possible that there will be no objections to staying here until 8.00 p.m. in the evenings to have that done. I will also have my right to speak on that when it comes.

Mr. Speaker, with that said, I now wish to turn my attention to Private Member's Motion No. 14/2000, which deals with the Public Education System.

When the House adjourned on Friday, 23 June 2000, I had covered a number of issues I believe impact directly on our public education system. In my contribution I pointed out:

1. The structure of the public education system as regards the various subjects and sets into which the system is divided.
2. Placement within the various sets is based on performance.
3. Historically, on average, only some 15% to 20% of students will qualify for tertiary education whilst the other 80% to 85% will move into vocational and the technical stream.

Mr. Speaker, I am the first to admit that some of the 80% - 85% have unfortunately fallen through the cracks. I also pointed out that although every effort must be made to assist the 10% or so who may fall through the cracks, that this problem should not be viewed as being just a Caymanian problem, one that is solely peculiar to the Cayman Islands; or more so, one that is reflective of an inadequate education system.

Mr. Speaker, the problem of those falling through the cracks can be properly attributed to many factors. Those factors emanate not only within the school system, it is not just a systemic problem within the education system but carried over in many cases from the homes.

I also touched on the National Curriculum that is now being developed under the direction of Mr. Herbert Crawford, which I also understand is now being implemented at the primary school level.

I believe in my contribution on the 23rd June (which I am summarising for the sake of continuity) perhaps the most important area that I touched on was that Private Member's Motion No. 14/2000 basically reflects the intent of Vision 2008, our National Strategic Plan, or the people's plan as it is commonly called. I further pointed out that it would be difficult and even inconsistent for Government not to accept this motion since they had given their full support to the National Strategic Plan of Vision 2008. Conversely, the motion could be regarded as somewhat redundant since the education strategic plan of 1995 called for a periodic review of the education system, which it is my understanding that since its introduction in 1995 has been reviewed on a number of occasions and completely rolled over in 1999.

I referred to the fact that Government has an obligation to develop not only the public education system but indeed all aspects of these beautiful islands in accordance with the National Strategic Plan or Vision 2008 Plan.

Mr. Speaker, the recitals were "WHEREAS in any rapidly developing country the level and diversity of education offered by the public system is of vital importance;

"AND WHEREAS it appears that the educational demands created by the rapid economic development in the Cayman Islands are not being adequately met by the present system;

"BE IT THEREFORE RESOLVED that the Minister of Education, acting under his constitutional re- sponsibility to deliver policy in the area of education, set out a properly prioritised plan, including costs and specific timing of implementation to address the present needs in the public education system."

Mr. Speaker, if the National Strategic Plan is followed as it should be, and is not left to stagnate, the very resolution that is being put forward here in this motion would be satisfied under this plan. I make specific reference to Strategy 3 of the National Strategic Plan, which reads, "We will support an educational system which identifies and develops the abilities of all persons encouraging them to realise their full potential."

Within this strategy are all the necessary procedures and action plans to satisfy the requirements of the resolve section of this motion and to provide an educational system that satisfies the needs of all our people.

Action Plan 1 of this strategy reads, "To identify and implement those parts of the Education Plan that still need to be implemented." A resolution, just to show the connection of this motion as for Government to deliver a policy in the area of education to set out a properly prioritised plan including cost and specific timing of implementation, almost identical to the action plan under strategy 3.

Mr. Speaker, I am submitting that it would be a good idea for us in this Honourable House to try to comply as far as possible with the National Strategic Plan when we are considering bringing motions to this House so that the motions can indeed be consistent with this plan as we have here before us. Private Member's Motion No. 14/2000 is indeed consistent with strategy 3 of the plan.

Mr. Speaker, I would further like to review to Action Plan 5, which reads, "To provide programmes that will allow all persons, outside of the regular school system, to realise their full potential." This is basically what the motion is talking about—the 80% to 85% that are coming out of our school system, some of whom are falling through the cracks.

There are provisions within this National Strategic Plan, the people's plan, Vision 2008, to address those issues. Under this Action Plan 5 there are some very important guidelines. Action Steps 1 to 6 covers the meat of Action Plan 5. The first action step is:

- 1 "To utilise local and overseas resources to identify programmes for persons, such as the
  - a) Under fives
  - b) High school drop-outs"

And this covers many of those falling through the gaps that do not take advantage of the twelve years of public school education. It also covers: youth at-risk, special needs persons, Prison inmates and even our senior citizens.

In Action Step 2, it says, "Survey and identify, with regards to education, the needs and/or interests of persons. (Such as those listed in Step 1)" It goes on to state the procedure that should be followed to ensure that these action steps are effectively implemented. So, if this plan is not less left in file 13 to gather dust then we do, in fact, have a guide not only for the educational system in these islands but the policy has already been put in place, it is just a matter of having it implemented.

Mr. Speaker, our greatest concern seems to be on the question of those that fall through the cracks. I would also like to mention that this issue was also addressed in the National Strategic Plan. On page 19 of the Key to the Future, which is A Guide to the National Strategic Plan, the main heading of this section here is youth development strategy. The sub-heading is "Preparing our youth for the 21st Century" and it covers—with cross references to the necessary strategy and action plan in the main National Strategic Plan—the procedures that should be followed in addressing these issues. It covers such issues as providing youth with the tools to achieve a fulfilling personal life will require, for instance, an optimal education system, appropriate guidance, the right of preparation, et cetera. It also addresses preparing our youth for an active role in the work place and it tells you what that will require. It is all here, very clearly set out in this guide to the National Strategic Plan. It even touches on the issue of setting the youth on the right path for satisfying family life and community life.

Mr. Speaker, I will refer any Member of this Honourable House that may have a question on our educational system to just take the time to read these issues that have already been provided for us in our National Strategic Plan.

Mr. Speaker, during the debate on this motion thus far, I have heard members speak of the problem of illiteracy in these islands. I am not going to underplay this problem. There is a problem in this country. I am aware that the problem has existed for many, many years. As I mentioned here on the 23rd when I started speaking on this motion, I was in a very strategic position to be able to analyse this problem as the former Principal Secretary for Health, Education and Social Services. The situation has continued and perhaps due to the increase in the school population has exacerbated over that period. Unfortunately, there are a number of students that are leaving school that are illiterate. That is the sad fact of life and it is these individuals that urgent attention must be focused on. But what I am saying, Mr. Speaker, is that the National Strategic Plan, the people's plan, has identified many of those problems and it is just left for this plan to be properly implemented in order to satisfy those requirements.

Mr. Speaker, we live in a very small and sometimes insular society. Sometimes we are truly an island. Some of us do not understand that we are a part of a much bigger global world. I say that to say this that we should also attempt to understand what obtains in even some of the more industrialised and developed countries such as the United States of America and indeed our mother country, the United Kingdom.

Mr. Speaker, in researching this motion, I decided to look at those countries—countries that we many times use as paragons of virtue as examples in so many ways. Recently I read where the United States is now considering adding an additional year to the junior high school because of the very problem that we are experiencing here with our dropouts. It is going to be called a transitional year so that hopefully within that year students can be brought up to a satisfactory standard to move on to senior high school and then on to tertiary education depending on their abilities.

Mr. Speaker, like some of my colleagues here in this Honourable House, I also do a lot of reading because I find a lot of comfort and knowledge in reading. I am a subscriber to The Economist, and in the June 17 - 23, 2000 issue I saw an article in there on education. This was dealing with the educational system as it obtains in the UK. It is captioned 'The uses of literacy' and it states "Two international reports this week—on literacy and child poverty respectively—make depressing reading for Britons."

The article commences and I quote, "On June 14th the Department for Education and Employment advertised for a Director of a new 'Adult Basic Skills Strategy Unit'. The unit is expected to develop and implement a national strategy to tackle poor literacy and numeracy among adults. By coincidence on the same day the Organisation for Economic Co-operation and Development published its latest report on 'Literacy in the Information Age.'"

Mr. Speaker, by the way, it's not just financial matters that OECD is concerned with. Their tentacles spread very wide and they are dealing specifically here with education.

It goes on to say, "This demonstrates only too well just how 'poor' literacy levels are in Britain compared with 20 other countries." Now, I am not reading this to pull down the UK and I hope that anybody that hears the sound of my voice would not reach that conclusion. I am just saying that the UK has one of the highest standards of literacy in the world, yet, they are found badly wanting even when compared with some of the Scandinavian countries. And, I won't go into details but they did, in fact, give a list of the other nineteen countries that Britain was compared with. Of those twenty countries, Britain was number seven from the bottom.

Mr. Speaker, like the United States, Britain and many other countries, we have problems here in the Cayman Islands. I believe that this has been spoken of by a number of previous speakers, and we know this, we really don't need anybody to get up here in the House and say this because this is known.

Mr. Speaker, we also know that our education system has grown over the years and will continue to grow. This is why even with the educational strategic plan which came out in 1995 it was necessary to review it and to roll it over as we develop.

Rome was not built in a day. Neither will any part of our development be completed in one day. It is going to take time. As I suggested, that is precisely what Vision 2008, the National Strategic Plan, is contemplating. It is contemplating the growth rate of this country, the needs of this country, not only the educational needs but indeed the social and economic needs of this country as we continue to develop.

Mr. Speaker, in closing I wish to summarise just a few of the basic points that I have made on this motion. I reiterate that this is a worldly motion but one that Government should have no problem supporting since, in fact, and I have pointed that out many of the points raised in the motion are already contained in the National Strategic Plan, Vision 2008. The policy necessary is contained in this strategy plan and if the plan is properly implemented there should be no problem in moving our educational system forward.

I, therefore, trust that government will see it fit to support this motion as it is indeed consistent with Government's National Education Strategies and indeed with the National Education Curriculum that is now being developed.

Mr. Speaker, as mentioned, as the development of our public education system is a continuing process it is reasonable to assume that this subject must continue to be given top priority. With all of this, reality must be a part of the equation and whether government will be able to comply with the full details of the resolve section of the motion prior to the dissolution of this House in September is debatable. But that is not to say that an attempt should not be made to address this pressing and most important issue.

Finally, may I once again offer my support to this motion and in so doing commend the honourable mover and seconder for bringing it to this Honourable House. Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: Does any other Member wish to speak? The floor is open to debate.

This is the final call. Does any other Honourable Member wish to speak?

[Inaudible comment]

The Speaker: I was just going to give you an opportunity to study the amendment, that's all. The floor is open to debate does any Honourable Member wish to speak?

If no Honourable Member wish to speak would the Honourable mover wish to exercise his right of reply?

The First Elected Member for George Town.

POINT OF PROCEDURE

Mr. W. McKeever Bush: On a point of procedure here, Mr. Speaker, an amendment has just been given to us. Can you or the mover give some direction as to how we plan to proceed with this amendment?

The Speaker: I have done all the Chair is allowed to do. I have asked for honourable members wishing to speak and no Member has wished to exercise his right—

Mr. W. McKeever Bush: No, no, that's on a motion. I am talking about the amendment because precedence in the House—and I think you have sort of put this in place—is that when an amendment is moved or it is put to this House in any shape or form it is moved, and the motion is amended, it is debated in that way. That's what you have been doing for several years now, I would say since you have been in the Chair.

So, I would like some direction as to whether that is going to change this morning or what is the position because it is a fairly substantial amendment.

The Speaker: My position has not changed. The floor was open at that time for the introduction of an amendment or to speak, whatever wanted to be done.

The Honourable Minister for Education, Aviation and Planning.

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: Mr. Speaker, I would like to move the amendment to this motion which has been circulated and then I would wish to speak on it, sir.

The Speaker: I am extremely confused. I called and said it was the last call. I asked if any honourable Member wished to speak. The Honourable Minister for Education, Aviation and Planning.

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: Mr. Speaker, I did not quite appreciate that. But, however, if I may refer you to section 25(4), it says here, "An amendment to a motion may be moved and seconded at any time after the question upon the motion has been proposed by the Presiding Officer and before it has been put by him at the conclusion of the debate thereon." So, I was wondering in that case, as I had moved the amendment around, whether I could put the amendment as it seems that it was circulated just before.

The Speaker: I will have to take a short suspension because as I see it there is nothing in procedure that I can go back to it.

Mr. W. McKeever Bush: I think you are right.

The Speaker: We shall suspend for fifteen minutes.

PROCEEDINGS SUSPENDED AT 11.57 AM

PROCEEDINGS RESUMED AT 12.30 PM

The Speaker: Please be seated. Proceedings are resumed. When I suspended the House I said I would take the decision under consideration. Having the benefit of reading the Hansard, Standing Order 25(4) reads as follows, "An amendment to a motion may be moved and seconded at any time after the question upon the motion has been proposed by the Presiding Officer and before it has been put by him at the conclusion of the debate thereon. When every such amendment has been disposed of, the Presiding Officer shall either again propose the question upon the motion or shall propose the question upon the motion as amended, as the case may require, and, after any further debate which may arise thereon, shall put the question to the House or Committee for its decision.”

Having read this, to the best of my ability I conclude that I call on the mover to exercise his right of reply in which case he has an option of either replying at this time and allowing the amendment to be moved at the conclusion of his debate or vice versa. But the amendment will be allowed after you conclude your debate and the question will be put on the amendment or the amendment as amended in accordance with Standing Order 25(4).

The First Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Just to make sure I fully understand exactly what you are saying. As has been the usual practice in the past, the mover of this amendment can move the amendment now, debate the amendment, whoever else wants to speak; wind-up on his amendment and then I can wind-up the substantive motion.

The Speaker: Absolutely, that is what I am saying.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Then I will take that course, sir.

The Speaker: I thank you.

The Honourable Minister for Education, Aviation and Planning do you care to move your amendment?

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: May I just ask you, Mr. Speaker, you did mention vice versa, does that also mean that I have an option after the winding-up but before you put the question under Standing Order 25(4) to also put the amendment after the winding-up, sir?

The Speaker: That is correct. If I am understanding you correctly, the Standing Orders are very clear that before I propose the question you have the right or any Member to move an amendment at any time prior to proposal of the question. So, you would have the right to move the amendment after but it will allow all honourable members to debate the amendment.

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: Okay, sir, I will take that option.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: So, Mr. Speaker, you offered me an option and I took it and the Minister of Education took the opposite option. Where do we go from there, sir?

The Speaker: I don't understand that.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Mr. Speaker, unless I misunderstood the Minister for Education, what you and I agreed on was that the Minister of Education would bring his amendment now before I wound up the substantive motion—as has been the practice in the past since you have sat in the Chair.

What the Minister has just said is that he wants to exercise his option to make me wind-up the substantive motion and then bring his amendment. That's what I understood you to just say, which is the opposite to what you and I agreed on.

The Speaker: As I read the Standing Order it says that assuming that the amendment is done last, at the conclusion of the amendment if it fails, the question on the amendment will be put as you wound it up. If it is amended, the question will then put as amended.

[Inaudible comment]

The Speaker: Well, we will take a vote whether the amendment is carried or failed.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Yes, Mr. Speaker, so as has been the usual custom I have not commenced winding-up the motion. There is an amendment on the floor so it is quite in order for the Minister of Education then to move his amendment and debate and then I wind-up the substantive motion. Regardless of what the Minister might want to use the Standing Orders to say now that has been the custom and his amendment certainly cannot supersede the substantive motion.

The Speaker: Honourable Minister are you objecting to that procedure?

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: Mr. Speaker, as I understand it from both the Standing Orders and Erskine May, the amendment to the motion can be put at any time before you put the question on the substantive motion. At present, I need to get certain things here before I move this amendment and therefore I am opting—not opting, I am exercising my rights under the Standing Orders—that when the Honourable Member has finished his winding-up I will then be here and put the amendment on it. This is clearly borne out as well in Erskine May, where it says it can be put between the proposal and the decision on the motion.

So, it seems that notwithstanding that amendment can be put at the beginning, in the middle or it can be put at the end as I understand that, sir.

The Speaker: Yes, I fully understand that but my concern is if the First Elected Member for George Town waives his right of winding-up, he will be deprived the right to wind-up the motion if we put the amendment thereafter.

POINT OF ORDER

Mr. W. McKeever Bush: Mr. Speaker, on a point of order.

The Speaker: Let me hear your point of order.

Mr. W. McKeever Bush: I note that for some time since you have been in the Chair as Speaker we have been going the route that the First Elected Member from George Town has outlined and you agreed to do otherwise now for the Minister for Education. Is it to say that the procedures have been handled wrongly, and I don't want to get into that at this point, Mr. Speaker. I think that procedure must be done right and we must stick to what the precedent has been. To change back and forward for one Member is to say that the House does not know what it is doing according to the Standing Orders.

The Speaker: The Third Elected Member for George Town, do you wish to speak?

Mr. Linford A. Pierson: Mr. Speaker, I note the point that was raised regarding Standing Order 25(4) but notwithstanding this, I believe it has been the practice of this House that when an amendment is brought to a motion that in order for the mover of the motion to properly address that proposed change to the motion that the amendment should be dealt with prior to his winding-up. It would seem that if we are to follow the practice of the House that the amendment should be dealt with prior to the mover of the motion being called upon to wind-up so that he can take into account the details of that amendment.

The Speaker: Having reviewed previous procedures of this House I have not come across any time where an amendment has been taken after the winding-up and before the question is proposed. The Standing Order is quite vocal on that but we cannot deprive the mover his right to reply.

Honourable members time is of great importance to all of us. I do not want to delay this Honourable House. I now call upon the Honourable Minister of Education, Aviation and Planning to move his amendment which has been tabled or if he wishes to withdraw his amendment. The Honourable Minister for Education, Aviation and Planning.

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: Mr. Speaker, for the sake of peace in this House and I guess to avoid the chaos we had on Wednesday, I will just go ahead and put the motion. But I would say, sir, it seems clear from both the Standing Orders and Erskine May that I have a right to put it immediately prior to your calling on the . . . you need to quiet down.

The Speaker: Honourable Minister, could you sit just one minute, please? I fully agree with what the Minister of Education has said, but in view of the fact that this is abnormal procedure, I now ask that you move it.

AMENDMENT TO

PRIVATE MEMBER'S MOTION NO. 14/2000

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: Mr. Speaker, I so do. I would like to move an amendment to Private Member's Motion No. 14/2000.

The Speaker: The amendment has been duly moved. Please speak to it.

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: Thank you, sir.

In accordance with the provisions of Standing Order 25(1) and (2), I, the Honourable Minister for Education, Aviation and Planning, seek to move the following amendment to Private Member's Motion No. 14/2000 as follows: By the addition after paragraph 2 of the following: "WHEREAS the Legislative Assembly unanimously approved the National Education Policies in the Five-year National Education Plan 1995 – 1999 which contains nine prioritised strategies and 105 action plans on the Education policies with each action plan stating the following:

1. The date each action plan is assigned
2. The date each action plan starts, and is due for completion
3. The actual completion date
4. The person/persons accountable for implementation
5. The cost/benefit analysis of each action plan

and was revised three times in 1996, 1997 and 1999;

"AND WHEREAS the Five-year National Education Plan has been extended, updated and rolled over into the National Education Plan 2000 to 2005 and a new strategy with four action plans (which has not yet been costed or detailed) which incorporates Strategy 3 of the National Strategic Plan 1999 – 2008 (Vision 2008) which plan was approved by this Legislative Assembly."

2. By the addition of the following at the end of the last sentence of the Motion: "in accordance with the Five-year National Education Plan 2000 – 2005 and the National Strategic Plan 1999 – 2008 (Vision 2008) section."

I don't think that "section" is correct—I don't believe it should be in there, sir.

The Speaker: Do you wish to speak to it?

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: Yes, sir.

The Speaker: Please continue.

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: Mr. Speaker, the motion is now seeking to be amended by stating as follows on the resolve clause. So, the motion would now read: "BE IT THEREFORE RESOLVED that the Minister of Education, acting under his constitutional responsibility to deliver policy in the area of education, set out a properly prioritised plan, including costs and specific timing of implementation to address the present needs in the public education system in accordance with the Five-year National Education Plan 2000 -

2005 and the National Strategic Plan 1999 - 2008 (Vision 2008) section.”

If this amendment succeeds then the motion can easily and happily be supported by Government.

Mr. Speaker, the National Education Plan was approved by this Honourable House and accepted and was updated on three different occasions and that deals with the question of policy on education. So that we do have in place not only a revised plan, revised in three different years, but also a new five-year plan which is the National Education Plan 2000 - 2005.

Secondly, the motion called for a prioritised plan including cost, specific kind of implementation and that is all clearly set out in the plan which the Legislative Assembly has approved. So, there can be no doubt that the policy is not only the policy of the Government but it is the policy of this Honourable House.

I will deal in some depth on youth because the National Strategic Plan has properly set out in Strategy 3 everything that members in this house have called for or attempted to call for. If there is one thing that we have in the education system is policy—a policy that is a national one and is approved by the Legislative Assembly not just by the Government. I am doing everything within my ability to carry out and see to the implementation of that plan.

Mr. Speaker, further we have not only the policy that is set out in the National Education Plan but we have also gone further down the line and we have site based plans for each school, which sets the National Education Plan in the local context while promoting and maintaining each school's individuality. The whole purpose of everything which has been put in place in schools over the past eight years is the school improvement. This is what the motion is calling for. However, it would not be right for me to stand here and say that the education system does not need to be improved, of course it does, and I have done just that.

These plans, the action plans, the site based plans are all towards ensuring improvement. That system will never be perfect and I am committed to continuing to improve it.

Mr. Speaker, I have statements made that the failure of the education programme has resulted in gangs, crime, single parents, poverty, resentment, unemployment and it on and on, is really the height of nonsense. Anyone out there knows that the education system is good for the country and I am surprised to here such detrimental statements being made in this Honourable House.

The mention of the National Education Plan—I think that was the Third Elected Member from West Bay—had frizzed out. Mr. Speaker, speaking to any teacher or parents knowing that this has been revised and updated three times makes it very clear that is also not correct. I must say I was very surprised further to see the oral attacks levelled at the school system. I guess the most I can do is to apologise on behalf of those MLAs who have levelled this at the teachers and the education system of this country. I guess it is a particular cross to bear for those teachers and those in the process when members of this Honourable House get up and continually ignore the facts and go into the criticism that was made. I guess the extreme of that criticism shows why it should not be even thought about much less considered by members of the public.

Mr. Speaker, the National Education Plan is a phased plan. It is not expected that everything will be done at one time. What is important is that the wild allegations made by members of this House talking about bringing in experts to implement this and that. They are not really hurting or attacking the Ministry of Education or the Department of Education. The pace that was set in the National Education Plan and the plan itself was developed by teachers, parents and the public working in partnership with the community to develop what is in the best interest of the schools and the students.

The pace at which or the number of issues that are there are such that were raised by teachers, parents and the public of what they felt was a priority to improve the education system. So, this was a phased plan and it still is phased plan and some things were done first and other things that are in it will continue to be worked on year after year because it is a dynamic plan and it must take account of changes in the island and changes in the world.

We heard a lot of irresponsible allegation about 20% of the students cannot pass the curriculum or syllabuses. Mr. Speaker, no one passes either a curriculum or syllabus. This is the nonsense of what has been said. What they pass are examinations and when you see the level of debate getting to that stage it really means that we are now into the question of politics and not anything constructive. Where are the answers from all of these people who criticise? There are no answers that are coming from the critics of the education system. If they had any solution then those who have spoken would have—and here I am basically referring those such as the Third Elected Member from West Bay or the Fourth Elected Member from George Town or the Third Elected Member from Bodden Town. Where are the solutions?

Anyone can stand up and criticise, but where are the solutions? They have none! I have a plan that the people put together that they approved. Perhaps the stupidity of this whole debate is that they are standing up criticising policy that has been passed by them unanimously in this House. So, there are problems in the system but those problems have to be dealt with in accordance with a National Education Plan and with the Vision 2008, the 10 year National Strategic Plan.

The United Nations came up with a one percent illiteracy rate and I used an external evaluation rather than saying that is correct. I can confirm that is correct but if I had come here and said there was a one percent illiteracy rate then the Fourth Elected Member from George Town may have turned the criticism the other way around and say, 'well get somebody from the outside because I don't believe you'. Instead the criticism is, because it is the United Nations it should have come locally. You cannot really win in politics and that is what this motion is all about. No manner which way you go there are those little minds who are always trying to criticise but have no solutions.

Much has been said about the youth of this country and I would like to thank the Third Elected Member from George Town for his constructive views and the way in which he brought out policies that he had passed and I assumed that other members of this House realised they had passed, which deals with youth. It is very comprehensive.

I would now like to take a few minutes—

The Speaker: Honourable Member, we are at the time of lunch. Would it be convenient that we take the luncheon break and return at 2.15 pm?

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: Yes, sir.

The Speaker: I would like to ask Honourable members to meet with me informally in the committee room prior to us coming back, say, at about 2.05 pm or something like that.

Also it is proposed that we will have a briefing at 3.45 pm this afternoon so plans can be made accordingly. The House is now suspended until 2.15 pm.

Financial Statements of the Cayman Islands Stock Exchange Limited for the year ended 31 December 1998 to be laid by the Honourable Third Official Member responsible for Finance and Economic Development.

FINANCIAL STATEMENTS OF THE CAYMAN ISLANDS STOCK EXCHANGE LIMITED
FOR THE YEAR ENDED 31 DECEMBER 1998

Hon. George A. McCarthy: I beg to lay on the Table of this honourable House Financial Statements of the Cayman Islands Stock Exchange Limited for the year ended 31 December 1998.

The Speaker: So ordered. Do you wish to speak to it?

Hon. George A. McCarthy: Yes, Mr. Speaker.

Honourable members will note that the Cayman Islands Stock Exchange received an unqualified audit report from its auditors and the accompanying financial statements from the Auditor General also confirms that the audit was acceptable and that the Stock Exchange satisfied all financial reporting requirements for the year ended 31 December 1998.

The audited financial statements show that the Exchange made a net income for the year ended 31 December 1998 of $51,866 on total revenue of $770,376, and operating revenue of $369,408.

Government's grant to the Exchange for the period was $1,075,645, a decrease of 33% over 1997. The Stock Exchange rebated $200,320 to government for the 1998 financial statements in accordance with the requirements of the government budget.

I should also like to give an indication of the extent to which the Exchange has met the targets it set for 1999 as given on page 6 of the operations report. The listing target of 54% increase was exceeded by ten listings. The derivative rules were introduced in March 1999 as intended, and by year-end 13 listings were attracted. The Bloomberg Trade Reporting Facility was updated as intended.

The Exchange took on three new international financial institutions as broker members, those being Deutsche Bank, CIBC and RBC Dominion. And, finally, the Exchange was granted approved organisation status by the London Stock Exchange in June 1999.

For the further information of this honourable House, I am pleased to report that the Exchange currently has 379 listings, and a market capitalisation of $29 billion (United States Dollars). It is of particular note that the success of the Cayman Islands Stock Exchange to date has not been achieved by cutting corners, but on the strength of a high quality of service and adherence to international regulatory standards. The support of this House during its development and up to this time is very much appreciated.

The Speaker: Financial Statements of the Public Service Pension Fund for the years ended 31st December, 1996, 1997 and 1998. The Honourable Third Official Member responsible for Finance and Economic Development

FINANCIAL STATEMENTS OF THE PUBLIC SERVICE PENSION FUND FOR THE YEARS ENDED 31 DECEMBER, 1996, 1997 AND 1998

Hon. George A. McCarthy: I beg to lay on the Table of this honourable House Financial Statements of the Public Service Pension Fund for the years ended 31 December, 1996, 1997 and 1998.

The Speaker: So ordered. Do you wish to speak to it?

The Honourable Third Official Member responsible for Finance and Economic Development.

Hon. George A. McCarthy: As at 31 December 1998, the pension fund stood at $40,281,449. In 1996 through 1998, there was a total of $19,696,539 in employer/employee contributions paid over to the pension fund while the investment income amounted to $3,942,455 for the same period.

Administration expenses over the course of the years were borne by central government. There were no payments of benefits and refunds to participants as the fund has not yet been qualified by the actuaries as self-sustaining. The contingent liability for the Public Service Pension Fund of $140,380,727 as established by the actuarial valuation as at 1 January 1996 is reflected in the 1996, 1997 and 1998 accounts of the pension fund and of the government.

The fund received contributions from the Cayman Islands Government four statutory authorities, the Cayman Islands Turtle Farm and employees of those entities. The fund also received contributions with respect to elected members of the Legislative Assembly under the terms of the Parliamentary Pensions Law 1984 (1995 Revision).

In 1998 contributions and interest thereon received from judges of the Grand Court were segregated under statement of assets available for benefits and were not included in the contributions received by the Public Service Pensions Fund. The formulation of an investment policy was carried out in 1995 and 50% (subsequently increased to 80%) of the fund has been placed with Scotia Castles Investment Council Ltd. of Toronto Canada, with the remaining portion invested locally.

In order for the fund to achieve a more satisfactory rate of return, the scope of approving investments was broadened to allow for investment in equities. In 1996, the fund assets amounted to $22,515,546 as a result of employers' contribution of $2,828,120, and employees' contributions of $1,885,316, an investment income of $1,068,990. This income represented a rate of return of 5.59% for the year.

With effect from January 1996 government and statutory authorities contributions increased to 6% with employees' contributions remaining at 4%.

As at 31 December 1997 the fund assets rose to $29,489,855 on the back of employers' contributions of $3,256,384 and employees' contributions of $2,172,956. Investment income for the year amounted to $1,590,677 for a rate of return of 6.12% for the year.

As at 31 December 1998, the fund assets increased further to $40,281,449, largely from employers' contributions of $6,466,143 and employees' contributions of $3,383,074. The employers' contributions included an amount of $2,728,656 that was contributed to the fund's additional costs associated with the defined benefit plan. Investment income for 1998 amounted to $1,293,972 or a rate of return of 3.59%. The fund's performance has since improved with an unaudited rate of return of 14.38% for 1999.

On January 5 1999 the Pensions Law (1995 Revision) and subsequent amendments were compiled in the form of the Pensions Law (1999 Revision). Then on 14 April 1999 this law was repealed and replaced with the Public Service Pensions Law 1999. This served the purpose of reforming the law as it related to the Public Service Pensions to re-establish the Public Service Pensions Board as a statutory corporation to maintain existing defined benefits pensions rights for existing employees and to provide a defined contribution pension plan for future public service employees.

The Speaker: Moving on to item 4, Questions to Honourable Members/Ministers. Deferred question 23 stands in the name of the Third Elected Member for Bodden Town.

QUESTIONS TO HONOURABLE MEMBERS/MINISTERS

DEFERRED QUESTION 23

No. 23: Mr. Roy Bodden asked the Honourable Minister responsible for the Ministry of Health, Social Welfare, Drug Abuse Prevention and Rehabilitation what is the government's policy regarding the investigation into the current medical insurance companies amending their policies to include funeral costs.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Health, Social Welfare, Drug Abuse Prevention and Rehabilitation.

Hon. Anthony Eden: The Government's policy is to act in good faith on a suggestion made in this honourable House by the Third Elected Member for Bodden Town, that government consider the inclusion of funeral costs as a benefit to be provided under a health insurance contract.

The Superintendent of Health Insurance has made enquiries and he informs me that most approved providers of health insurance do offer life insurance and accidental death and disablement insurance as an additional option to their health insurance policies. At present, eight companies are able to offer these options, and I believe that they are very much to be encouraged.

I believe that the provision of the life insurance option can achieve the objective of providing for the funeral costs of the insured person. The purpose of life insurance is to pay a sum of money on a person's death and the proceeds of the life insurance contract can be used for any purpose which the beneficiary wishes, including, naturally, the payment of funeral expenses and other expenses which arise on such occasions.

The approved providers of health insurance normally offer life insurance coverage only for groups of employees. However, very recently one approved provider commenced offering $5,000 of life insurance cover, as an option together with other enhancements on its standard health insurance policy and this is being made available to individuals who join that particular scheme.

The Superintendent of Health Insurance has advised that no approved provider offers a product which can be termed funeral cost insurance as such. He informs me, in fact, that there is no class of insurance business using the terminology "funeral cost insurance" transacted in the Cayman Islands.

The honourable member will be aware that approved providers of health insurance offer contracts with substantially higher levels of coverage than the standard health insurance contract. All except one of these providers can offer life insurance or accidental death and dismemberment coverage, which will provide a significant money benefit on the death of an insured person. Benefits of up to $100,000 are certainly not unknown.

I very much welcome and encourage the marketing of these options because I feel that it is in the interest of individuals, families, and the community at large for a person to be properly protected and provided for on death. This is always a time of great grief and the provision of adequate funds through life insurance at such a time can do much to relieve the pressures that accompany the passing of the person.

Just as an addition, I think the House is aware that there is an amendment to a motion coming where consideration can be given to providing some assistance to those in need.

SUPPLEMENTARIES

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Begging the honourable minister's pardon, is he saying in his answer that while the paper work is being handled to get the benefit paid out, government is going to bridge the gap by funding the funeral in the interim?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Health, Social Welfare, Drug Abuse Prevention and Rehabilitation.

Hon. Anthony Eden: In the past, Social Services provided those services to those who needed some assistance.

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Obviously, the intent of my question did not reach the minister, but I won't pursue it.

In his answer, the honourable minister said there is no such provision in the Cayman Islands. Notwithstanding the situation at present, would there not be sense in someone pursuing the possibility of one of the approved providers, or all of them, being willing to carry such coverage?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Health, Social Welfare, Drug Abuse Prevention and Rehabilitation.

Hon. Anthony Eden: I am made to understand that in his conversations with them they offered the life package but not the specific burial insurance. But I am willing to have further discussions with these companies.

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: I want to thank the minister for saying that he's willing. I would like the honourable minister to give a commitment to seek this information and let us have a report as soon as possible as to what the possibilities are.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Health, Social Welfare, Drug Abuse Prevention and Rehabilitation.

Hon. Anthony Eden: We are willing to follow up on this, and I would give the commitment. But up until this time there is no one here offering this type of insurance.

The Speaker: Are there any further supplementaries? If not, we move on to question 30, standing in the name of the Third Elected Member for Bodden Town.

QUESTION 30

No. 30: Mr. Roy Bodden asked the Honourable Minister responsible for the Ministry of Education, Aviation and Planning to explain how Cayman Airways Ltd is utilising the third aircraft.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for Education, Aviation, and Planning.

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: Cayman Airways current schedule, which runs from 1 May to 28 October, operates 59 roundtrip flights per week. To operate this schedule, the airline utilises two aircraft on three days (Tuesdays, Wednesdays, and Fridays) and on the other four days (Mondays, Thursdays, Saturdays, and Sundays) the third aircraft is utilised between 10.00 a.m. and 5.00 p.m.

One of the three aircraft is being flown on the four days where additional frequencies have been added to routes to match the high summer demand. For ten weeks, it is also being used from 1.00 p.m. to 9.30 p.m. on Fridays. Even on the days three aircraft are being used to operate the schedule, Cayman Airways Ltd can assure the travelling public of back-up because the third aircraft is not scheduled to depart until 10.00 a.m., allowing an early morning rotation to Miami or Kingston if necessary. And, similarly, because it ends its scheduled flying by 5.00 p.m., the third aircraft can also operate additional flights in the early evening if necessary.

The schedule is designed to meet the needs of the customers and of the company. Depending upon demand, the airline may be able to meet the demand with a schedule operated with two aircraft and then the third jet provides back up of flights during the day and provides in-house sub-service for the weekly maintenance checks for the other two aircraft in the fleet.

On at least two occasions since May, the airline has had one aircraft out of service for unplanned maintenance, but there was no disruption to the schedule because of the third jet's availability. Later this summer, the third aircraft which is a passenger and freight jet will be assigned a schedule of cargo flights operating between 2.00 a.m. and 6.00 a.m. three days a week.

SUPPLEMENTARIES

The Speaker: The Third Elected Member for Bodden Town.

Mr. Roy Bodden: Prior to the acquisition of this aircraft, it was mooted by the honourable minister that this aircraft would function as a quick change aircraft, meaning it would be utilised to transport freight. Can the honourable minister tell the House whether or not this is still the objective? And, if so, why is it not being so utilised at this time?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for Education, Aviation, and Planning.

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: This is actually another question that is coming up which is asking for an update on the cargo service (by the First Elected Member for George Town). But we plan to introduce the cargo service with a start-up in October. At present the balance of the certification on the aircraft, together with training, fire training for the crew and that sort of thing, is now being carried out. So, it is a quick change aircraft and will be in October. Then it will be run between 2.00 a.m. and 6.00 a.m. and that will save us quite a bit of money.

The Speaker: The Third Elected Member for Bodden Town.

Mr. Roy Bodden: The minister mentioned certification, can the minister explain why this certificate has not been had at this time?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for Education, Aviation, and Planning.

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: This is obviously a highly technical area. But from what I understand, the aircraft will need to have from Boeing a certificate, which I understand is on its way and will deal with the weight and balance of the aircraft while in cargo. That certification, together with proper training for crew, will then be submitted along with other technical documents to the Civil Aviation Authority for it to be registered as a cargo aircraft.

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Does the honourable minister remember standing on the floor of this House answering a question about certification of that said aircraft, saying that all of the certification was in order?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for Education, Aviation, and Planning.

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: Mr. Speaker, from what I understand from our Acting Managing Director, the certification is in order. It is a timing aspect of it. In other words . . . It is a weight and balance manual and that will be used for training of the dispatchers and crew in relation to the freight service, the cargo.

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Then, after eight or ten months, is it that this manual had to be created? Exactly what is the hold up? The minister himself could have gone over and brought it back by now.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for Education, Aviation, and Planning.

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: I may have to get one of the technicians to give this in writing. What I have been told is that it is a procedure similar to the STC procedure; it's a matter of retrieving training, putting into operation and then getting the certification.

But I agree with the member. A lot of time has gone by. Believe me, if I had any way of speeding them up on this, I would. I have been told that we need to wait until October. I have been told it's a long procedure even for carrying freight.

I will ask the managing director to ask the technical people to get the thing speeded up as fast as they can.

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Can the honourable minister say if this was known when the aircraft was purchased? And, if not, why not?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for Education, Aviation, and Planning.

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: It appears that this document is a Boeing document that was designed for the former owners of the plane. I really don't have the technical ability on this. I will probably have to get this in writing. But I have been told that it's the same process as we went through to get the STC documentation relating to passengers. It's a document that was produced by Boeing.

It's to do with the full freight area, not just the cargo door.

I really don't have the expertise here to answer the technical side of this. I am not a technical person, neither is the managing director. I will have to come back to the member on this and set out exactly what it is. I really don't understand. All I can really do is give an undertaking to the member that I do press safety first. Secondly, I press them to move as fast as possible.

The Speaker: I would appreciate a motion for the suspension of Standing Order 23(7) & (8). The Honourable Minister responsible for Education, Aviation, and Planning.

SUSPENSION OF STANDING ORDER 23 (7) AND (8)

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: I so move sir.

The Speaker: I shall put the question that we suspend Standing Order 23(7) & (8) to allow Question Time to continue beyond the hour of 11 o'clock. Those in favour please say Aye, those against No.

AYES.

The Speaker: The Ayes have it. Question Time will continue.

AGREED. STANDING ORDER 23(7) AND (8) SUSPENDED TO ALLOW QUESTION TIME TO CONTINUE BEYOND 11 AM.

The Speaker: The Third Elected Member for Bodden Town.

Mr. Roy Bodden: Can the honourable minister tell the House whether this document he is speaking about, this manual, was created before for the previous owners, or is it something which has to now be made up by Boeing as a result of the change of the aircraft?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for Education, Aviation, and Planning.

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: This is a document that was created before for the previous owner of the aircraft, which was Federal Express. They sold it to Aramco who then sold it to us. So, it is a document that has been there before and quite frankly looks to me like they should have gotten this some time ago.

The Speaker: I will allow two additional supplementaries. The First Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: If the minister clearly remembers, this issue that we are discussing now was brought up during the time of the purchase. There was a long hold up, if memory serves me, in the completion of the purchase to do with documentation.

Can the honourable minister say whether the prolonged situation which prevailed with the purchase was to do with this said matter? The Civil Aviation Authority had advised Cayman Airways that this was missing and it would be needed if the aircraft was to serve this purpose and if the purchase went ahead, notwithstanding that this was not in the possession of Cayman Airways.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for Education, Aviation, and Planning.

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: What I have been told is that the original hold up was for something called a Supplemental Type Certificate (STC) and what I have also just been told is that it only came to the attention, presumably of the technical people, one month ago that this document was needed for training.

I am giving it like I have been told, okay?

It's a weight and balance manual for the cargo service. They have now located it and they will get it this week. Notwithstanding that, . . . and I guess between now and October it's the training and developing the procedures for operating in the cargo role.

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Can the honourable minister state if he remembers when the question was originally asked him on the floor of this House when the cargo service would be put into operation what his answer was? If he does remember it, would he care to repeat what time that was supposed to be?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for Education, Aviation, and Planning.

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: Mr. Speaker, I can't remember, but I am sure the honourable member does. Whatever he comes up with what I said, all I can say is that I give answers in accordance with what instructions I get. And if you really want me to be honest with you, the airline business is a very frustrating business. It is very hard to get . . . these technical sides seem to be difficult to deal with. That's all I can say sir.

[Members' laughter]

The Speaker: Moving on to question 31, standing in the name of the Third Elected Member for Bodden Town.

QUESTION 31

No. 31: Mr. Roy Bodden asked the Honourable Minister responsible for the Ministry of Education, Aviation and Planning what is the cost of outfitting the third aircraft of Cayman Airways Ltd.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for Education, Aviation, and Planning.

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: The costs incurred are mainly capital costs which increase the value of the aircraft by approximately the amount spent for the third aircraft to 31 March 2000 and are as follows (all amounts are US dollars):

|                                                                     |                |
|---------------------------------------------------------------------|----------------|
| Purchase price of aircraft                                          | $4,600,000.00 |
| Overhaul of airframe and engines(resulting in a value increase) | 3,341,298.57   |
| 2 Hush Kits for engines                                             | 1,126,099.77   |
| Other modifications and additions                                   | 721,864.33     |
| Total:                                                              | $9,789,262.67 |

The amount for other modification and additions include items such as new seats, transaction costs, and other related costs.

The aircraft entered service in early April. The final cost of the aircraft is expected to increase slightly as final modifications are made and invoices are settled.

The D check is a heavy check in which the airframe and most parts are replaced or returned to '0' hours or cycles. The D check is only done about every eight years.

The overhaul, hush kits and additions will increase the value of the aircraft by substantially the amount spent.

SUPPLEMENTARIES

The Speaker: The Elected Member for North Side.

Mrs. Edna M. Moyle: Can the honourable minister say if all the seats that were purchased for this aircraft have been used? If not, why not? And where are they now?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for Education, Aviation, and Planning.

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: I understand that the coach seats will be installed within the next month in CYB and CKX. We have two sets to go into the two new aircraft.

The Speaker: The Elected Member for North Side.

Mrs. Edna M. Moyle: Would the honourable minister then answer the balance of my question? Where are those seats that have not been used?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for Education, Aviation, and Planning.

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: They are in storage in Cayman.

The Speaker: The Elected Member for North Side.

Mrs. Edna M. Moyle: Can the honourable minister say why they had to be put in storage and not installed in the aircraft?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for Education, Aviation, and Planning.

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: I understand that the diagram of the configuration, which is called a LOPA [?] . . . there was a change from what they were originally going to do in coach. That is now being done.

Let me just say another thing: When I asked the board the question some time back, I didn't realise but changing seats in a jet, just moving them like opening up the space, we were told there have to be diagrams normally from the manufacturer on it. The plane has to be fully weighed and balanced and apparently they are doing the LOPA now, such as a LOPA is.

The Speaker: The Elected Member for North Side.

Mrs. Edna M. Moyle: Is the honourable minister saying that we ordered seats for the aircraft without taking into consideration all of these things that have to be done?

Are we sure that these seats will fit the aircraft once all this work is done?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for Education, Aviation, and Planning.

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: I have been told yes. If not, I guess we are going to have to hold somebody accountable. But I have been told that yes, they will fit.

The Speaker: Are there any further supplementaries? If not, we move on to question 32, standing in the name of the First Elected Member for George Town.

QUESTION 32

No. 32: Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts asked the Honourable Minister responsible for the Ministry of Education, Aviation and Planning to give an update on Cayman Airways Ltd. cargo service since the third aircraft came on line.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for Education, Aviation, and Planning.

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: The addition of the third aircraft has not had any direct influence on the cargo service since it was introduced to our fleet in April. However, we have ensured that we have increased our credibility on our scheduled cargo flights that are presently running Tuesdays and Thursdays. We are also in the process of introducing a new computer cargo system, which will dramatically increase customer inquiries either over the Internet or on the telephone.

When the third aircraft is certified to operate as a freighter, it will replace the existing sublease freighter contracts. We will then increase our scheduled freighter service to include Saturdays.

SUPPLEMENTARIES

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Can the honourable minister explain exactly what the freight schedule is now, so that we will understand which other days (except Saturdays) the freight service is in operation?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for Education, Aviation, and Planning.

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: Tuesday and Thursday mornings.

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Can the honourable minister state, because of having to sublease an aircraft to operate the regular freight schedule, what type of profit margin the freight service accumulates to Cayman Airways? Perhaps the easiest way would be to assume a full freighter and the cost to operate that including the sub-leasing costs.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for Education, Aviation, and Planning.

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: I have been told that it is making a very small profit, just a bit better than breaking even.

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: So it is more a service than a business.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for Education, Aviation, and Planning.

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: It could be called that at this point.

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: If the minister recalls when this Legislative Assembly in Finance Committee was asked to guarantee the loan for the purchase of the third aircraft, a large part of the sales pitch to justify this purchase was based on its potential ability to operate a regularly scheduled cargo service thus enhancing the cash flow and revenue of Cayman Airways.

At this point in time can the minister state, given the projections that may have ensued based on this potential service, how this will affect Cayman Airways year-end P&L projections?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for Education, Aviation, and Planning.

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: I would have to get that information to the member. But cargo contributes about $1 million to revenue each year. Obviously we will be worse off not having our own jet flying the cargo. I would like to see that jet operational as a freighter and I have continued to press for that. I will continue to press, and now I have been told October.

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: I quite appreciate the minister's almost untenable circumstance in answering these questions at present. Nevertheless, that's where he finds himself and I can't do anything about that.

Can the honourable minister state if Cayman Airways has a full and loaded commitment to see this thing become a reality? Are there any other potential problems that are known at present that Cayman Airways will have to encounter and overcome to get the cargo service operating using the last aircraft purchased?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for Education, Aviation, and Planning.

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: I understand from the managing director that there are no other foreseeable obstacles. But it's quite a few months over what I would have thought to be the time we could have gotten the freight operational as well. It is discouraging, not just to the honourable member, but to us.

All I can say is that I do my best and I try to push them as hard as I can to try to do these things early. But the airline business is a very hard business. There's no two ways about it sir. I am in here trying to serve my country. I wouldn't be in here out of choice if I had to choose a business to go into. So I take my hat off to the staff. They do try, but it's a tough business, no two ways about it.

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: The minister is reverting to his usual style. Let me say on behalf of the members of the backbench that we also take our hats off to the staff. So let's not get ourselves away from the topic. This has nothing to do with staff.

Can the honourable minister state if there are any specific additional costs to be incurred in order to have the cargo service on an ongoing basis as planned?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for Education, Aviation, and Planning.

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: We will have to purchase cargo containers and pallets, I understand. The training is in-house so that would be minimal.

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Can the honourable minister state if there is anything with the configuration of this third aircraft which affects its ability with the volume of fuel it uses? And does it have any negative effect on purchasing fuel that is more economical at certain locations because of certain additional weight consistent with the aircraft? And was that taken into consideration when the aircraft was purchased?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for Education, Aviation, and Planning.

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: This aircraft is approximately 6,000 pounds heavier than the passenger aircraft because of the reinforcement in the aircraft for the cargo system. It has the same size fuel tanks. It burns a slight bit more and (to use the words of the managing director) it's an insignificant amount. But it can lift the same amount of fuel as the others and it would buy the fuel where it is the least expensive.

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: The minister just explained that there is reinforcement in the aircraft making it heavier. He said that there is a little additional fuel burned per hour than if the reinforcement was not there. I thought he meant that the plane could take off with the same volume of fuel it would have been able to take off with without the reinforcement. How can that be the case when the minister was just talking about all these weights and balances? We know enough to know that if there is additional weight, to create the balance you must have less of something else to make it work. The minister just told me the opposite of that. Can he explain, please?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Education, Aviation and Planning.

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: I think what the Honourable member is getting at is whether there is a payload reduction because the plane is 6,000 pounds heavier. There is a payload reduction, but it would not affect the flights for example into Miami. But it does affect the flights into Houston because of the length of it. And if we were fully loaded and running to Cayman Brac with a full payload on short sector it could affect the amount that we carry. In other words, it does have 6,000 pounds that if the plane was fully loaded could have been used for freight, or it could have been used for cargo, whatever, because normally human beings don't . . .

[Inaudible interjection]

The Speaker: Moving to question number 33 standing in the name of the First Elected Member for George Town.

QUESTION 33

No. 33: Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts asked the Honourable Minister responsible for Education, Aviation and Planning to state the number of flight attendants presently employed by Cayman Airways Ltd, giving a breakdown of nationality.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Education, Aviation and Planning.

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: Cayman Airways Ltd currently employs 30 flight attendants, including the Manager of In-flight. Of these, 15 are Caymanian, 3 are other nationalities married to Caymanians and 12 are expatriates. The breakdown of nationalities is shown below:

|                      |    |
|----------------------|----|
| Caymanian            | 15 |
| Married to Caymanian | 3  |
| Jamaican             | 6  |
| English              | 3  |
| Canadian             | 1  |
| Nicaraguan           | 1  |
| South African        | 1  |

Cayman Airways Ltd also has 11 flight attendants in training. The training programme finished on 23 June 2000. The breakdown of nationalities for our trainees is as follows:

|                                                            |   |
|------------------------------------------------------------|---|
| Caymanian                                                  | 2 |
| Jamaican                                                   | 4 |
| American                                                   | 2 |
| (one with application for Caymanian status pending) |   |
| Canadian                                                   | 2 |
| Colombian                                                  | 1 |

SUPPLEMENTARIES

The Speaker: The Elected member for North Side.

Mrs. Edna Moyle: Would the honourable minister say why the airline is unable to get Caymanians to join as flight attendants?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Education, Aviation and Planning.

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: I can assure the Elected Member for North Side that the policy of Cayman Airways is to employ Caymanians—and they do try. But I guess one of the realities of life in Cayman is that we have a high amount of non-Caymanians employed. I think they have probably done well with 15 . . . well, it is now 14. Well, at least, at that stage it was 15 . . . really 18, I would say, because those married to Caymanians . . . but we will try to keep improving it.

The Speaker: The Elected member for North Side.

Mrs. Edna Moyle: Would the honourable minister say what the starting salary for a flight attendant's position is?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Education, Aviation and Planning.

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: Mr. Speaker, we don't have the accurate amount here because a staff increase is about to come into effect shortly. What I will have to do sir is to get it and send it to the Elected Member for North Side. I see she is smiling so she probably knows more than I do sir.

The Speaker: The Elected Member for North Side.

Mrs. Edna Moyle: I would appreciate the salary before the salary increase comes into effect.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Education, Aviation and Planning.

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: I will get that for the Elected Member for North Side.

The Speaker: The Fourth Elected Member for George Town.

Dr. Frank McField: Could the minister say if work permits are required for flight attendants?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Education, Aviation and Planning.

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: No, they are not required for flight crew nor for the crew of planes or ships.

The Speaker: The Fourth Elected Member for George Town.

Dr. Frank McField: Mr. Speaker, could the minister say then what is the normal procedure when a crew member is hurt on the job? What is the procedure, especially when you have so many different nationalities with no particular right of abode?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Education, Aviation and Planning.

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: Mr. Speaker, it would follow the normal procedure under the Labour Law or the other laws. I am not sure specifically.

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Can the minister state when applications are invited how many Caymanians apply? Is the number relative to the answer or is it that there are many more Caymanians who apply but who simply cannot fit the bill? That is what I am trying to get at. Can the minister answer that?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Education, Aviation and Planning.

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: I cannot give the answer to that. I can get it but they don't have that here with them.

The Speaker: The Fourth Elected Member for George Town.

Dr. Frank McField: Mr. Speaker, with regard to the supplementary the minister answered for me, are you saying that the Immigration Law does not apply to the crew but the Labour Law governs the employer/employee relationship with regard to the crew here? Is it the policy of the airline to deduct salaries from crew members if they are sick as a result of job conditions, or does the airline have any kind of policy to compensate employees if they are sick as a result of the performance with their duties?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Education, Aviation and Planning.

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: Mr. Speaker, I assume this is a person here because if they are in the US obviously the US Labour Law may apply. But assuming that, what I have been told is that the policy of the company is always to fully comply with the law and at times to go beyond it in favour of the employee. It is something that is handled by the Human Resources Department.

The Speaker: Are there any further supplementaries? Two additional supplementaries. The Elected Member for North Side.

Mrs. Edna Moyle: Would the honourable minister say when the last salary increase was given to CAL prior to the present one that he just mentioned?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Education, Aviation and Planning.

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: July 1999, sir.

The Speaker: The Fourth Elected Member for George Town, final supplementary.

Dr. Frank McField: Mr. Speaker, I just want to use up the last supplementary here because there is something that I really want to get at. Could the minister say if the policy of the airline is to award persons who have served with the airline for a substantial time by promotion or by being placed in a different position?

How important is the question of nationality in deciding how to deal with a staff member, for instance, who has been with the airline for a long time but is not of Caymanian nationality or status?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Education, Aviation and Planning.

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: Mr. Speaker, Caymanians are always given the preference. They would be moved up first.

The Speaker: That concludes Question Time for this morning. Moving on to item number 5 on today's Order Paper: Other Business, Private Members' Motions. Private Member's Motion No. 14/2000, Public Education System, the continuation of debate on the amendment to the motion.

The Honourable Minister for Education, Aviation and Planning.

OTHER BUSINESS

PRIVATE MEMBERS' MOTIONS

PRIVATE MEMBER'S MOTION NO. 14/00

PUBLIC EDUCATION SYSTEM

AMENDMENT THERETO

(Continuation of debate thereon)

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: Mr. Speaker, I need to make one thing clear again, and that is that I will be, God willing, running for a seat in George Town this time. I just want to make that clear. I thought I had to because I heard a bit of a rumour about that. But just to make it clear, I will be seeking re-election.

[Inaudible comment]

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: No, I am sure no politician would spread a rumour to the contrary. But I would just begin the morning that way.

Mr. Speaker, the amendment really seeks to have this motion carried out in relation to education in accordance with the policy. I was reaching the stage where I had actually read a part of the Vision 2008, Strategy 3. I don't propose to go into any further reading on that because this document, Vision 2008, has been passed by this House and this is our policy. It's the legislature's policy.

This states that we will support an educational system, which identifies and develops the abilities of all persons, encouraging them to realise their full potential. I showed that the first action plan under the strategy was to develop and implement those parts of the education plan that still needs to be implemented.

Mr. Speaker, in October 1999 we reviewed the National Education Plan so that we could identify what needed to be implemented and to rephrase these items for implementation. I did mention earlier that we added a new strategy.

Action Step 3 of the Action Plan calls for, and I quote, "Institute site-based management at the Education Department level." Mr. Speaker, I would like to talk about this for a minute or two.

A site base plan enables a school or an organisation to better implement and support the National Education Plan at the local level. The National Education Plan itself calls for review of the Education Department and we realise that while we had progressed with site base planning and with inspections of all the schools, the Education Department itself needed to be reviewed.

Mr. Speaker, we considered how best to review the department, whether to use a site base planning method that we were using in schools or whether to use some other model. We decided to have an inspection of the department because we found that the in-depth inspection of the schools which is made public has helped tremendously for the ministry, the department and the schools to have the schools inspected in-depth and to say to the public, 'look these are our strengths but these are also our weaknesses and our shortcomings, and here is how we plan to solve them'.

The Education Department now and the schools prior to that are really the only system in total that has been inspected and published. That therefore shows clearly that the ministry, the department, the schools and I, as Minister of Education, have nothing to hide. I feel it is only right that the public should have the inspection of the schools and it should be published publicly. There is total public accountability within the school system and we decided rather than just do it like a site base planning of the department, which would have been far better and simpler for me politically (let me say that), we decided to go the full way on it and do an inspection.

Consequently, we brought Miss Althea Millet, CBE, who is a highly experienced inspector whose specialisation is in local education authorities in Britain. Mr. Speaker, I don't mind telling you that some people said to me that I had to be crazy to bring in an inspection of the department just before the election. But I have nothing to hide, and I feel that what has to be done, I will do whether there is an election or not. I understand the dangers of doing an inspection for the first time on the department but it is a process that I believe in.

I also believe that the teachers and the Education Department will understand the depth of my commitment to improving education in the Cayman Islands and also the conditions under which they work.

The Millet Report is a good report. It is a very thorough report and it will be tabled in this House in due course—it will be tabled in September. I don't intend to do that until it has been thoroughly reviewed and we determine a broad plan of action for its implementation. This is the system we have followed with the inspection reports of the schools because a plan of action has to be developed and monitored on correcting the problems that exist.

Mr. Speaker, we have very substantial changes going on in education this summer. We will have a new Chief Inspector of Schools, a very capable Caymanian; and we have a new Chief Education Officer, once again a very capable Caymanian. So, we are doing our best to put qualified and professional Caymanians in these posts. I don't think it would be right to just put the Millet Report in their hands and say 'Here it is, go ahead and implement this.' That is not the way the ministry works neither our permanent secretary who is a very capable professional.

Mr. Speaker, strategic planning calls for consultation and it calls for compromise so that we can reach a consensus. I am sorry if members feel that they need the Millet Report right now. They will get it in the fullest of time when the proper consultation has been done.

I would also like to mention that Miss Millet was fully aware of the needs of Strategy 3 of Vision 2008 and therefore many of her recommendations relate to the action plans under this strategy. Under this Vision strategy is the need to collect data for research and policy development. This is an area that needs special attention, not just for education but for all the government. It is a big area in government and I don't believe we have sufficient empirical evidence to be able to support some of what we are trying to do with facts. This was a big item in Vision 2008 and one that has to be addressed in a modern country.

We are hoping that the national census that was started about nine or ten months ago will soon be out. This will give us a lot of very good information.

Action Plan 3 under Vision's Education Strategy calls for the development of academic, vocational and technical curriculum. This subject—vocational education and training—is a problem in many countries. We know, for example, that many thousands of dollars of equipment at the Community College sits idle because students do not want to register for some technical courses. I have heard over the last twenty years where some members of this honourable House called for a technical school, but we have a comprehensive system of education in which there is one system and I believe that in this country that has proven to be the best.

Every few months I read out the many courses that John Gray High School offers in technical and vocational education. The courses that the Community College offers are quite extensive. There are twenty-odd of them.

Mr. Speaker, I believe that we have to take a new approach to technical and vocational training, and I am happy to say that a committee of about ten to 13 people has been looking at this over the past five to six months. We have had people from the Chamber of Commerce, people from Education, from private and public schools, from the Parent Teachers' Associations and from business looking at how we can create a public/private partnership in education for increased educational enrichment in all our schools, public and private.

The concept of how we can do this, using available technology is now ready to be presented to our various partners. Executive Council had a presentation of this yesterday, and I hope to be able to bring it to the whole House preferably on Wednesday of next week, subject to what members feel. I think it will be well worth us taking time to have that presentation.

The P3ET is not just another plan. It is an implementation strategy which links the National Education Plan, particularly the new Strategy 10, and Vision's Education Strategy 3. It shows how these objectives can be met with technology—it is a part of my ministry's thrust in 2000 from vision to action. I will stress that. I would like to thank all that group of people on the co-ordinating committee of P3ET who have put in hundreds of volunteer hours putting this concept together and researching it to the point where we are ready to move forward.

The amendment to the motion calls specifically for the carrying out of that motion in accordance with the National Education Plan, the new plan 2000 to 2005, and specifically to incorporate as it states in Strategy 3 of the National Strategic Plan, which this honourable House approved. In accordance with that amendment, the motion will then read specifically in relation to the implementation of Vision and Strategy 3, and also the position in relation to the new education plan.

Mr. Speaker, I just mentioned the new strategy under the National Education Plan and I would like to just state again that Strategy 10 reads, and I quote, "We will create dynamic learning environments which will guarantee life long independent learners in a globally competitive society." This is today's world. The strategy must ensure that we deliver education in a whole new way by using the tools that many students want to learn and continue to learn after they have left formal school.

I believe that every student in the Cayman Islands must become a model user of technology . . . and I can assure you that if I am back here in 2001, God willing, a lot more will be heard from me about this. We have that specific strategy, the Information Technology (IT) strategy, being propelled quite effectively and rapidly by the Honourable Minister of Tourism along with the Honourable Third Elected Member for George Town and our Honourable Third Official Member, the Financial Secretary, together with a very capable and dedicated group of members of the committee.

Mr. Speaker, we are already beyond technical and vocational education as we knew it back in the 1980s. Now, the whole curriculum is available on computer and students can diagnose and fix things in cars, for example, just by understanding what it is that they are seeing on the screen. We know this and we see this every day, and I am merely trying to point out that students don't even really need old cars to work on anymore. IT has come in and replaced all that and the amendment to this motion when it calls for the implementation of this in accordance with the five-year education plan and the Vision 2008 is one that I believe is undoubtedly very important to these islands.

I understand that we have a 27% penetration of Internet use in Cayman and this is extremely high for a community like ours. But we have to make sure that every one of our students is enabled to use technology, but more than this, that every one of our teachers is comfortable and competent in utilising web technology. That is why I said a few weeks ago in answer to a question that one in every three dollars spent on technology would go into the training of teachers. Mr. Speaker, what I would like to see is that every teacher has his or her own computer. My ministry is working on how this can be accomplished.

I would just say for those who have alleged that my ministry is not working on training, that I am a very careful person. While I may take sometimes more time than some members here are happy with, I have to make sure that the foundation is put in place and that the programme is fully researched. We know as far as possible that the concept can work before I go ahead and announce something or build something that is not going to last.

Mr. Speaker, this amendment is one which allows the long term policy and planning of this country to continue on a solid basis. There are no quick fixes in the education business. It has to be done right, and there are no short cuts to that. To do it right will guarantee the country's future in the long term.

I believe that we need a career advisory centre, a job placement centre or whatever one calls it, and I too am very concerned about those students who have not managed for whatever reason to achieve very much in high school. At the present time, the Community College provides the second chance for students in terms of remedial English and Maths, and many other subject areas. Mr. Speaker, all our students have to do is to want to learn, want to take that opportunity and to take that second chance.

Much of what is required in career advice I believe can be done through a website. We will do this in the months ahead. But first of all, we have to make sure that our students know how to access such information and if they don't have a computer where to get access, such as libraries, for example.

Mr. Speaker, there are many examples like this that I could go into but I will save this for another day, only to say that the Education Ministry is ready for the challenges of implementing the revised National Education Plan and Vision 2008. The Education ministry is fully aware that web-based technology, and students and teachers who are model users of this technology, is where we have to begin. I hope that makes it clear to honourable members of this House that we in the Education Department and the ministry are doing everything we can and are moving ahead in the right direction.

But, as I said, there are no short-term solutions that provide long-term stability to education.

I was very heartened to hear the good Third Elected Member from George Town bring out clearly from The Economist the position in relation to the literacy or illiteracy (if we wish to put it that way) that exists in the world. What we see is that many countries have levels of literacy and this is graded into four different levels—

Mr. Roy Boddén: Five levels.

Hon. Truman M. Boddén: Well, four and five is actually lumped together on this and they are the best skills level.

Mr. Speaker, I would just read the order that they are in and it moves from Sweden, Denmark, Norway, the Czech Republic, Germany, Netherlands, Finland, Belgium, Canada, Australia, United States (I think they are about eleventh), New Zealand and then Great Britain (which looks like about thirteenth), Hungary, Ireland, Slovenia, Poland, Portugal and Chile. I think it is a compliment to this country that the illiteracy rate stands at 1 percent and that is supported locally. But I also read from UNESCO . . . it is not foolishness. The Fourth Elected Member for George Town may not like me saying this but the fact that honourable member may refuse to accept the United Nations statement on this is that member's problem not this country's because that reflects clearly the position here.

I guess we find why I read this is that illiteracy is a problem even in the highly industrialised countries whose education system has been in existence for 500 or 700 years. The Economist stated that Britain's performance is "pretty worrying." According to Alan Wells, head of the BSA, its literacy levels are worse than almost all of its Anglo-Saxon or European peers. I don't want to go into this, only to say as I think the Third Elected Member may have mentioned, that the OECD which is a very large organisation—some fifteen hundred staff—also has a section that relates to education.

Mr. Speaker, we are struggling to improve the education system here but so are many other countries in the world. We shape up extremely well against other countries and we should be thankful that our good education system has put the country where it is today. When we look around us we really see the problems in education that exist, especially in the Caribbean. We are miles ahead of many of those countries. I thank the good teaching staff and the good parents and the good education staff, the professionals out there who have made these opportunities reachable by all children in this country. Too often—this amendment hopefully will wipe out a bit of that—we only hear the criticism of the one or two children who are problems and nothing about the other thousand who are good children and have made the mark, who contribute in this society. I believe it is our duty to encourage them.

Mr. Speaker, this motion once amended is very acceptable to government. If my saying that the education system is good doesn't seem to be accepted by everyone I would like to read from the Business Week of Thursday, 6 July to Wednesday, 12 July 2000, page 6 which is headed "Senior Educators in Leadership Seminar." It says this, Mr. Speaker, "Cayman schools have nine-tenths of what they need to be successful—dedicated teachers,' said existing Chief Inspector of Schools, Victor Green, CBE, on Tuesday, July 4th at a two-day seminar on leadership and management being held at the Marriott Hotel this week. The seminar is being attended by 50 senior teachers from public and private schools."

The Education Department and the Schools Inspectorate are clearly examples of what is being done in training but a very clear and resounding statement by the Chief Inspector who has inspected all the schools. He went on to say, "The Chief Inspector listed the strengths of the Government school system as having 'good accommodation, generous resources and a pupil/teacher ratio which is excellent and far beyond what exists in the United Kingdom.' He said that one particular strength was the hard working and dedicated teachers who want to do a good job."

This gentleman set up our Inspectorate system but he came from the United Kingdom as a Senior Inspector. He knows both systems and he has made it abundantly clear in this.

I would like to read more because this is not Truman Bodden saying this, this is a gentleman who has led the inspection of every school in this country—not all of them are inspected but the majority on both the private and the government side. I am quoting him here in the newspaper, the Inspector said, "You have a strong policy lead—the five-year education plan. 'One could not ask for a better policy lead than you have in Cayman,' said Mr. Green, admitting that the existence of the National Strategic Plan for Education was the deciding factor in his accepting a position in Cayman in 1996."

It then goes on to say, "The recommendation for the establishment of a schools Inspectorate came from the National Plan, which was developed in consultation with teachers and parents and approved by the Legislative Assembly in 1995."

Mr. Speaker, not me, but a gentleman, the Chief Inspector, has looked at nearly every school in this country, private and public, and knows the United Kingdom's system and can make that comparison like no one in this House or in this country can do. I therefore feel that what has been said is true that this country has, as he says, a strong policy lead and there can be no doubt about that.

Mr. Speaker, I have dedicated the larger part of my life to education in this country. I hold near and dear to me the education of our youth in this country. I am satisfied that the National Education Plan will produce in the long term the returns for the youth of this country. It will guarantee the education. It will guarantee the stability of the youth of this country and it will assist those who are adults to achieve their fullest potential in this country. I would therefore ask honourable members to please support the amendment as we support the motion plus the amendment and continue the good work that has been carried on in education—not just by me but by many others before me over the years. Thank you.

The Speaker: The floor is opened to debate, does any other member wish to speak on the amendment to Private Member's Motion No. 14/2000, Public Education System?

The Fourth Elected Member for George Town.

Dr. Frank McField: Mr. Speaker, I don't intend to be long in dealing with this amendment to Private Member's Motion No. 14/2000 brought by the Minister of Education. I certainly believe that the attempt by the Minister of Education to suggest, in fact, that literacy and/or illiteracy are not aspects that we should be concerned with in a critical appraisal of the educational system is wrong. I think it is wrong for the Minister for Education to suggest that by being critical of certain aspects of the educational system that we are condemning the system and we are also ignoring the wonderful contributions which have been made over the years by educators and also some contributions that have been made by the Minister himself.

I think that I, at least, gave credit to him. I sometimes find it difficult to understand why he cannot pay back those types of compliments to others as well, including to me, but I certainly have never tried to minimise his achievements. I simply suggest that the sociological considerations are important, and for the Minister (who is a lawyer) not to understand the sociology involved in education, I believe that can create problems for us.

Just this morning, I was speaking to someone on Washington Boulevard, the area we call "the Swamp" about the number of young kids that are roaming the streets there, saying that they want to move out of the neighbourhood. They were one of the first families that moved into the neighbourhood when it was first developed and now they are talking about moving out because of the young kids and the drugs. The young kids are pedalling drugs and they walk around with machetes in their trousers and different things like this. If we go to Windsor Park there is just a situation where some persons were assaulted there.

Now, I passed the Windsor Park Community Park. There were some kids sitting in the park and they said, 'hey, we need some dominoes.' I know some of those kids are there every Friday. If I go to the Stratton area, the Myles Road area of George Town, I see kids who are emulating drug dealers in many different ways, whether it has to do with the dogs they have or the jewellery they wear or the way they walk or the way they posture themselves.

So, when a community hears the Minister of Education saying that these problems don't exist, the Minister of Education needs to be a little bit more specific in explaining to the people why he believes the educational system has not played any role in the development of the criminal characters in our community, why it should be the responsibility of other agencies. But we take an interdisciplinary approach here. So, if we are going to talk about education and educational strategies, we have to be talking about educational strategies that go so far that they begin also to involve social strategies themselves within the communities.

I find nothing wrong with the amendment. I have found nothing wrong with the strategies that the Education Minister had developed over the years but there is a difference between policies and practice. I feel that all systems can be strengthened and improved. The first step in strengthening and improving a system is to look at the system critically and objectively, and not be so sensitive that every time somebody is critically analysing us we become defensive and say that critical appraisal means that the person does not like us and we don't want him to get elected again.

I heard rumours that he (referring to the Minister of Education) is not running again. I wasn't the one who started those rumours, but I think it was just that people were concerned because he has been travelling for so long that people kind of forgot that he was still here with us. I think that is how those rumours came about.

Nevertheless, I support this amendment like others will on the Backbench. I still say that this amendment would not have been possible had the mover of the motion not brought the motion in the first place. If the amendment has credit, it would mean that the original motion must have had some credit. I believe that every time we get the possibility to debate the educational system—the benefits and what we consider to be the weaknesses and the strengths—we have done ourselves a favour because education should always be kept in the forefront of our debates and our consciousness. I think that we do have teachers in this country that are very good.

I would just like to also take this opportunity to explain that when I was talking about schools lasting longer than 3.00 p.m.—when I was making the suggestion that maybe we should consider extending the school hours and that the school should be more a part of the social strategies in the community and more a part of the socialisation of the child, I did not mean that teachers should just work extra workers, I meant that we would also be needing additional teachers. We would need to train teachers. We would need to pay them better money. We would need to pay those who wanted to work those additional hours additional money. So, I am not believing somehow that there should be any extension of the required time that teachers spend in the school without there being also an extension of the pay to those teachers.

Mr. Speaker, I am happy to accept this amendment to Private Member's Motion No. 14/2000.

The Speaker: Does any other member wish to speak?
The Third Elected Member for Bodden Town.

Mr. Roy Bodden: Mr. Speaker, I have considered that it is important to speak to the amendment, and by inference the motion as amended, being the seconder of the original motion. I have associated myself with those comments made by the Fourth Elected Member for George Town when he said that the amendments would not have been possible were the motion not brought in the first place. The fact that the amendments (which are claimed now to be so far-reaching and comprehensive) complement the motion certainly is a credit to the mover.

I also wish to categorically state that I am a critic of the education system and I have been for many years even under previous policymakers. I do not necessarily associate criticism all the time with being negative. I think that any living organism, any entity which is continuously evolving must be critical. Mr. Speaker, that is the reason why we have mirrors because when we get dressed in the morning anyone who cares about deportment and style certainly goes to the mirror and takes a look to see whether the beard is kept and cultured, the hair is as it should be, or the tie is matching the suit. That is the kind of criticism that certainly in no way can be attributed to being negative.

I am not ashamed of anyone calling me a critic. I am a critic. And I hope to God that I will remain that way until I die. But I am not a destructive critic. I offer in most instances constructive criticism.

I have noticed that the Minister of Education finds it difficult to return compliments and he has a grudging acceptance, if not a reticence, of accepting other persons as his equal, be they his educational equal or his political equal. Maybe he even has a problem accepting attorneys he deals with in his professional life as equals. But, Mr. Speaker, I have never had any kind of inferiority complex so it does not matter to me. As a matter of fact, if the Minister of Education were to pay me a compliment, I would have to be suspicious judging by the past association and relations between he and I. I would have to remind myself of the old adage which says beware of the Greeks especially when they bear gifts. So, I am not overly concerned that he does not understand what people are saying.

I was not here because I had to be away on some official business when the Fourth Elected Member for George Town made his speech, but I read it last night because I wanted to make myself aware of what other people whom I consider important, educated and informed were saying to see how closely aligned my ideas were or to understand, if there were differences, where those differences were and to understand those differences. I had to tell the honourable member this morning that I agreed with what he said because what he said in most instances made sense. And as an educator who has studied education, you cannot talk about education unless you consider the sociology of education. Indeed, in educational circles there is a whole discipline called the sociology of education because educators realise that you cannot take education as a discipline out of the sociological concept because the whole business of education has to do with changing behaviour—that's what it is about.

Now, Mr. Speaker, at the very outset I want to challenge that there is 98% literacy in the Cayman Islands. As I understand it, the Cayman Islands should have a high literacy rate. I don't know of any time that the United Nations came here and did any empirical survey, because if they did I suspect that it would have to be publicised. So, probably what happened is that the United Nations extrapolated some figures from information which can be gleaned because you can glean this kind of information about schooling and all that.

But I want to say that when you speak of literacy, because the Minister of Education I think misinformed and the ideas that he promoted were disingenuous . . . I am not saying that they were deliberately so. But literacy and literacy skills are divided into three domains and we talk about prose literacy, that is, understanding a newspaper, being able to read and understand. And, then we talk about document literacy, which means understanding documents like the maps, payroll forms, invoices and all these kinds of things.

Then we get to the third domain, which is the highest domain. That is called quantitative literacy, which is understanding more advanced information such as determining the amount of interest one would have to pay on a loan, an advertisement in the newspaper and all that kind of stuff. So, when you talk about that the Cayman Islands having a 98% literacy level, which of these three rubrics does it fall under? Does it fall under the first, the second, or does it fall under third? Usually when people talk about literacy they mean a combination of all three.

The Cayman Islands cannot have a 98% literacy rate when the prison director says that 20% of the persons in prison are functionally illiterate and enumerate. Now, when you transpose that prison population against the wider general population you don't have to be a statistician of the highest order to understand that the prison population is a sample of the general population. If 20% of the prison population is illiterate, then a significant percentage of the general population must fall into that category also.

So, the Minister of Education needs to adopt a more careful licence when he talks about a 98% literacy rate in society. I concede that the Cayman Islands has a high literacy rate, and I would hope that it could always remain that way. But I would not stick my neck out to say that it is 98%. I doubt there is any country in the world that can boast of such an achievement.

I would like to give him credit, and I am giving him credit for what he has been able to achieve in education because he has put in place some policies that have proven effective over the years. But I stop short of suggesting that there cannot be significant improvements made. He himself has wrestled with the failure of technical and vocational education. He himself has acknowledged that and he has acknowledged that there are other failures. The reason why he amended the motion is an acknowledgement in itself that the system can be improved. So, that is the point. Let us not delve, Mr. Speaker, into self-righteousness.

I don't want to take any credit away from the gentleman. By no means! I want to give him as much credit as I can. But I also want to let him understand that he does not have a monopoly when it comes to educational insight and ideas. He does not hold that monopoly. There are other persons just as eminently qualified. The only thing they are lacking is the attainment of the position to get there to put their ideas into practice.

Now, when I read his speech yesterday I was taken aback because he went on to say, “There are no answers that are coming from critics of the education system. If they had any solutions then those who have spoken would have—and here I am basically referring to those such as the Third Elected Member from West Bay or the Fourth Elected Member from George Town or the Third Elected from Bodden Town. Where are the solutions?”

“Anyone can stand up and criticise, but where are the solutions? They have none! I have a plan that the people put together that they approved. Perhaps the stupidity of this whole debate is that they are standing up criticising policy that has been passed by them unanimously in this House.” [Official Hansard Report, 10 July 2000]

Mr. Speaker, when I read that I cannot come to any definitive position. The Minister of Education needs an injection of truth serum or he needs some memory pills but he needs one of the two because he could not have listened to the three members he singled out and say that they have no plans and no alternatives. I think that the minister does not understand the role of constructive criticism, but he has put himself into the exalted position where he would like only to be surrounded by psycho-fans—people who tell him what he wants to hear. Well, Mr. Speaker, I am sorry I did not come from a family of psycho-fans and at the age that I am now, being in my fifth decade, I have no reason to become one. Indeed, my ancestors who have passed on would have reason to turn in their graves if I would turn into a psycho-fan at this stage.

Mr. Speaker, there are areas that we have not dealt with in the education system that are problem areas and I want to let honourable members understand—

The Speaker: Could I interrupt you for just a moment?

Honourable members, I have laboured here this morning under a procedural matter. We are debating the amendment to Private Member's Motion No. 14/2000. What I am hearing is a debate on the motion, anticipating that the amendment is going to pass. I would strongly suggest that we decide if any other member wishes to speak to the amendment.

I am not stopping you, honourable Third Elected Member for Bodden Town, I am just injecting this. After we take the luncheon break we should decide whether we should then take the vote on the amendment and continue on with the debate on the motion as amended. What I am hearing is apparent anticipation of the passing of the amendment, debating the motion as amended. So, I would ask you to give it some thought when we take the luncheon break and come back.

Please continue the Third Elected Member for Bodden Town.

Mr. Roy Bodden: Mr. Speaker, I would wish to say that my comments are based on the unedited Hansard of the 10th July 2000 in which the Minister made these statements, and based on some statements he has just made. I have not stated my position regarding the amendment other than to say that the amendment obviously complements the motion.

Anyway, I was making the point that I think that we need to understand that there are other areas that we have not addressed which would suggest that there are weaknesses in the system that need immediate redress. I just want to mention one of these, and it has to do with this whole business of special education, particularly as it relates to the Sunrise Centre and the Lighthouse School.

When we speak of education, particularly as it concerns this amendment, we make no mention of those categories of children. Indeed, upon listening to the minister and other members who have spoken, one would believe that the student population in the Cayman Islands is exclusively comprised of those children who would fall under the rubric of what we call 'normal,' when about 18% of the children in the high school in the student population of the Cayman Islands fall outside of that.

Before I sit down, I want to say that it does not serve any purpose for anyone to be self-righteous, smug and apathetic, trying to misconstrue the position taken by honourable members, that we were not acknowledging the efforts made by teachers and all those people who have given countless hours of their time. Far be it that from reality! I think, every one of us, and especially honourable members on this side of the floor, the Backbench, recognises the efforts and the contributions made by these people. We tip our hats to them as does the minister and those people in the government. But we are saying that for education to be effective it must have continuous assessment and continuous constructive criticism, which is what the motion was intending to do and which is what the honourable minister claims the amendments are intending to do.

I think the fact that we can get up maturely and talk about these things here is healthy for the country. It is a sign that even in this Chamber we can understand and put things in acceptable ways and forms. But this does not obscure the fact that we have problems, that there are breakdowns. The Fourth Elected Member for George Town said our approach is an integrated approach. I said it before. I laid out a whole plan because I think that education is best addressed, as this amendment shows—by an integrated approach. If you try to separate education from social services and from community affairs, you are doomed to failure. Thank you.

The Speaker: I think this would be an appropriate time for us to take the luncheon break. We shall suspend proceedings until 2.15 p.m.

PROCEEDINGS SUSPENDED AT 12.44 PM

PROCEEDINGS RESUMED AT 2.46 PM

The Speaker: Please be seated. Proceedings are resumed.

Before we took the break I asked honourable members, on the debate of the amendment . . . I am proposing that if any other member wishes to speak on the amendment they speak, and then we can take the vote on the amendment.

The First Elected Member for West Bay.

Mr. W. McKeeva Bush: Under Standing Order 12(2) I rise on a matter I think is of utmost public importance.

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for West Bay sought my permission to move a matter of urgent importance and I am to establish a time. With the leave of the House, I would recommend that we do it at this moment.

Would you request the leave of the House please?

Mr. W. McKeeva Bush: Mr. Speaker, I so move that I be able to make this urgent public statement, or request I should say.

The Speaker: The motion has been made that the leave of the House be granted . . . We need a seconder. The Elected Member for North Side.

Mrs. Edna Moyle: I second the motion.

The Speaker: The motion has been made and seconded that we yield the proceedings in order that a definite matter of urgent importance be dealt with. Those in favour please say Aye. Those against No.

AYES.

The Speaker: The Ayes have it.

AGREED: PROCEEDINGS YIELDED SO THAT A MATTER OF URGENT PUBLIC IMPORTANCE RELATING TO AN ADVISORY ISSUED BY THE UNITED STATES TREASURY MAY BE DISCUSSED.

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for West Bay, please proceed.

RAISING OF AN URGENT PUBLIC MATTER

(Standing Order 12(2))

ADVISORY ISSUED BY THE UNITED STATES TREASURY

Mr. W. McKeeva Bush: I rise, and I do so under strict caution, to say to the government that they, having gone to Washington to have discussions with the United States Treasury Department and Securities and Exchange Commission—urgent as that may have been—the United States Treasury has issued an advisory which affects these islands in a most serious manner.

Would the Honourable Financial Secretary issue a statement assuring the public that steps are being taken to comply, and, further, advise all business operations within the financial sector how to manage the situation in the interim period?

The Speaker: The Honourable Third Official Member.

Hon. George A. McCarthy: Thank you.

I made a request a few minutes ago for a statement to be prepared that would form the basis of a response.

In light of the urgency as expressed by the honourable member—and this urgency I am very much aware of—I think it would be useful at this point in time to give a response. With your permission, other members of the delegation may also want to comment as well. I will try my best to give as much information as possible without leaving much of a gap.

If we are to consider the advisory that has been issued by the Financial Action Task Force (FATF) it would be very useful for us to consider the letter of June 21st which came to us from the President of FATF. I heard the advisory being read this morning on the radio, and I should say that had I not had some background information on this I would have been very alarmed.

Rather than taking the advisory by itself and just reading from it—which when taken by itself can be regarded as somewhat unfavourable unless it is properly balanced—I think it would have been useful for some information to have been sought from the Portfolio of Finance and Economic Development, or from any member of the delegation that went to Washington. Before I go into detail I will read to you, with your permission, a letter received from the President of the FATF date 21st June 2000. It reads:

“Mr. George McCarthy, OBE, JP; Financial Secretary; Portfolio of Finance and Economic Development; The Secretariat; Elizabeth Square, Phase III; George Town; Grand Cayman, Cayman Islands.

“Dear Mr. McCarthy: Further to my previous letter dated 16th February 2000, I am writing to inform you of the developments concerning your jurisdiction in the context of the FATF initiative on non-cooperative countries or territories.

“As a result of the review and subsequent contact with your jurisdiction I must inform you that the

Cayman Islands will be included in a FATF Report to be issued on Thursday, 22nd June 2000.

“As you know, the FATF reviewed the anti-money laundering regimes of several countries and territories against 25 publicly stated criteria which were defined to determine non-cooperation. After this review, which included where requested face-to-face contact between the review group and a representative of your government, the FATF was pleased to learn of the accomplishments regarding the strengthening of your anti-money laundering system. We have taken note of:

- The Cayman Islands has been a leader in developing anti-money laundering programmes throughout the Caribbean region.
- It has served as President of the Caribbean Financial Action Task Force and provided substantial assistance to neighbouring states in the region.
- It has demonstrated cooperation in criminal law enforcement matters and uncovered several serious cases of fraud and money laundering otherwise unknown to authorities in FATF member states.
- It has also closed [this is the Cayman Islands] several financial institutions on the basis of concerns about money laundering.

“Although we are extremely pleased to learn about these accomplishments, the FATF nevertheless found significant gaps in your anti-money laundering system. The major areas of concern include: [Mr. Speaker, where the President says “significant gaps have been found” I will address the specific point later.]:

- The Cayman Islands does not have any legal requirements for customer identification and record keeping.
- Supervisory authorities cannot as a matter of law readily access information regarding the identity of customers.
- The supervisory authorities place too much reliance on home country supervisor’s assessment of management of bank branches.
- It lacks a mandatory regime for the reporting of suspicious transactions.
- A large class of management companies including those providing nominee shareholders for the purpose or formation of a company are holding the issued capital of a company is unregulated.

“The full report on your jurisdiction is attached for information. The FATF hopes that the publication of the 22nd June 2000 report together with the FATF policy dialogue will encourage all jurisdictions concerned to take appropriate steps promptly to improve their anti-money laundering regime.

“As actions are taken to remedy the deficiencies uncovered, the FATF will amend its findings accordingly. Meanwhile please be assured that the FATF is prepared to continue an active dialogue and to offer assistance to encourage jurisdictions to make fur- ther improvements in their anti-money laundering regime.

“Finally, allow me to stress that the FATF strongly believes that the elimination of the detrimental rules and practices which enable money launderers and other criminals to escape the effect of anti-money laundering measures is of the utmost importance and will benefit the entire international community in general and each jurisdiction in particular.

“We look forward to working with you and I thank you once again for participating in this effort.”

Mr. Speaker, if you will just permit my repetition of the favourable bullet points that were raised much earlier and these are to be noted because I am going to pick up some other points that connect with these.

- The Cayman Islands has been a leader in developing anti-money laundering programmes throughout the Caribbean region.
- It has served as President of the Caribbean Financial Action Task Force and provided substantial assistance to neighbouring states in the region.
- It has demonstrated cooperation in criminal law enforcement matters and uncovered several serious cases of fraud and money laundering otherwise unknown to authorities in FATF member states.
- It has also closed several financial institutions on the basis of concerns about money laundering.”

This will demonstrate to anyone listening, or reading this letter, knowing the record of the Cayman Islands, that we have been very much on top of all of these issues and we have a very robust anti-money laundering machinery in place in the Cayman Islands.

We quite recently issued a Code of Practice to address the concerns where the FATF has said that it is not mandatory to report suspicious transactions. To put everything beyond a shadow of a doubt, these will be embodied within regulations.

Mr. Speaker, this is an email that was received by the Assistant Financial Secretary from Mr. Joseph Tompkins of Sibley and Austin. This email is dated 10th July, which was Monday. It reads: “Deborah: After receiving the advisory by fax from Steve Crowl [?], the Chief Counsel of FINCEN [the is the Financial Crimes Enforcement Network in the United States] I called him to thank him. He said he was glad I called because he was going to call me if I did not call first. We had an extended conversation during which Mr. Crowl said or indicated the following:

- He was the person who drafted all the US advisories.
- All of the advisories will be available on FINCEN’s website either later today or tomorrow.
- The Cayman Islands should know that there are two groups . . .”

I will just repeat it so that it is understood clearly. “The Cayman Islands should know that there are two groups. The first group, which is the larger of the two, consists of countries for which the advisories call for enhanced scrutiny for everyone doing business in those countries.

- The second group, which includes the Cayman Islands, have advisories that are more tempered in their operative paragraph. The second group includes Russia, Israel, The Bahamas, the Philippines, the Cayman Islands and one other country that we could not remember.

“The first paragraph on page 3 of the advisory was added as a result of the meeting last week. [That is, the meeting which took place in Washington between representatives of the United States and the Cayman Islands delegations.] The only other country in group two that has similar language in its advisory is the Philippines. According to Mr. Crowl, the Philippine government made commitments six hours before the advisories were put into final form.

“He hopes that the Cayman Islands Government will appreciate that the difference in tone between their advisory and other advisories were intended to show that they do not have nearly as far to go as most of the other jurisdictions.”

And I will repeat that again, Mr. Speaker, “He hopes that the Cayman Islands Government will appreciate that the difference in tone between their advisory and other advisories were intended to show that they do not have nearly as far to go as most of the other jurisdictions.

“He said that he and others in the meeting last week believed that the Cayman Islands Government was making its proposal in good faith and his office would like to assist in any way to have the Cayman Islands accomplished what was proposed.

“He said that if the advisory creates any problems in doing so he would like to know that. But more importantly we should not hesitate to get back to the policy makers in Treasury to tell them that because he believes that the United States Treasury has an obligation to assist in getting these things done so that the Cayman Islands will be removed from the FATF list.

“He invited me to call him anytime and he also offered to meet if that would be helpful. I pass these comments on to you and to others for what they are worth. I would be glad to continue the dialogue with Mr. Crowl in any way that would be productive.”

So, Mr. Speaker, it shows that we have not been sitting by and allowing these developments to occur, recognising the significance of their impact, and not doing anything. This is why since last Saturday we have had two meeting with representatives of the private sector. We also met with members of this honourable House to brief them and we have draft legislation that will be brought in order to address the issues, the areas to be remedied.

Also, as I mentioned, the Code of Practice, the section dealing with sanctions will be embodied within regulations making it mandatory for suspicious transactions to be reported.

Mr. Speaker, if you will permit, I would like to go back to the report of the Caribbean Financial Action Task Force that was done on the Cayman Islands. Mr. Speaker, I am going to ask you to bear with me to identify that document.

The Speaker: Sure.

[Pause]

Hon. George A. McCarthy: Mr. Speaker, it is very important that I find this document, so I will just ask you to bear with me a minute or two.

[Pause]

Hon. George A. McCarthy: When we consider that the Cayman Islands has been assessed against 25 criteria developed by the FATF, what will have to be borne in mind is that there are 40 recommendations that have been established internationally by the FATF. There are an additional 19 recommendations that have been put in place by the Caribbean Financial Action Task Force.

The Cayman Islands has been a member of the CFATF from its very inception. We were part of developing those recommendations. In fact, the FATF was formed in 1989, and the CFATF started in 1991. As soon as they had their foundation, they spoke to the Caribbean region. The Cayman Islands and other countries in the region decided that it was necessary for us to observe these international standards.

When the CFATF was established, the Secretariat was put in place and was up and running. It was agreed that mutual evaluation should be conducted of countries within the region. The Cayman Islands was the first to submit itself to a mutual evaluation by the CFATF. Bearing in mind that no specific preparation was made to accommodate this arrangement, we were just going on an assessment of the existing system of laws and regulations and other facilities or practices we had in place at that time.

Taking into account the conclusion that was drawn after this evaluation . . . and this has benefited the entire CFATF membership because we were the first country to come through the gate in terms of being assessed and having the findings of our mutual evaluation being made available for the benefit of the region.

Mr. Speaker, the conclusions by the mutual evaluation examiners: "The Cayman Islands adoption of a progress attitude towards countering money laundering demonstrates that such policies are compatible with a developing offshore financial centre.

"The Cayman Islands Government took prompt action to deal with the threat posed by illicit money laundering. The territory is substantially in compliance with the FATF and CFATF recommendations. The 1988 Vienna Convention has been ratified on behalf of the Cayman Islands."

And it goes on, paragraph 95 of the conclusion. What I read earlier was paragraph 94. "As a result of the overall examination, the examiners concluded that the confidentiality laws do not inhibit the compliance with the recommendations. They also had the opportunity to examine the conclusions of an independent review of the Confidential Relationships Preservation Law, 1976, commissioned by the Executive Council which are to similar effect."

Paragraph 96, "It is expected that the definition of the predicate crimes for the money laundering offence will be widened during 1995 and this will improve the facility for investigating and prosecuting such offences." In this, they are talking about the Proceeds of Criminal Conduct Law.

Paragraph 97, "Although laws to allow the confiscation of cash linked to drug trafficking are now in place these have not been used to date. It appears that the Police and Customs require specific training in this area and in the absence of any cash declaration procedure for arriving or departing passengers, enhancement to Police and Customs information system should be introduced to ensure effective implementation."

We know we have the financial reporting unit in place and also the Financial Investigation Unit, so we have facilities in place.

Paragraph 98, "In general the procedures for customer identification throughout the financial industry are good." We heard by an extrapolation of the recommendations where the FATF said that these facilities or what existed in the Cayman Islands were inadequate. But here it said, "In general the procedures for customer identification throughout the financial industry are good."

"Whilst it was reported that record retention is in most instances within the standards required by the FATF recommendations, the requirement should be formalised and applied consistently by the financial industry."

What is being suggested here is that we should put legislation in place to stipulate the periods for which financial records should be kept. Although we were observing this requirement—and I must admit that we are just about to do this, but because of the fact that it was established that we had this arrangement in place, it is something that we could probably have addressed much earlier.

"The arrangements for reporting of suspicious transactions are effective and make efficient use of available resources. These systems should be kept under review in order to introduce enhancement derived from other jurisdictions with similar approach.

"The reporting of suspicious transactions is not fully mandatory and the government may wish to consider such requirement in the light of developments in this regard in Europe, for example."

After we put the Proceeds of Criminal Conduct Law in place, a requirement of that legislation is that Codes of Practice be developed for the various sectors of the fi-financial industry. We have developed a head code and other codes of practice have been developed for the mutual funds society . . . we have an industry code for the bank that was recently endorsed by government. So, Mr. Speaker, we have been in compliance.

Paragraph 100, “Banks and other financial institutions have good internal controls in many instances devised by parent companies in North America and Europe.”

Where the FATF mentions that reliance is placed on home countries supervisors, surely the reason why we have a successful regime in the Cayman Islands—one that is well regulated—is because all of the agencies are working in tandem.

Mr. Speaker, if we have a branch of Barclays Bank coming to the Cayman Islands, a branch of the Royal Bank of Canada, Bank of Nova Scotia and others, surely we know that these financial institutions are sending their internal auditors into the Cayman Islands to review procedures and ensure compliance with internal control procedures. So, to this extent, and based on the fact that financial statements are filed with the Cayman Islands Monetary Authority on an ongoing basis, in this regard we have taken their point. We do recognise that. And we have agreed that we are going to strengthen our manpower resources and technical skills within the Cayman Islands Monetary Authority in order to expand the breadth of onsite supervision that the Monetary Authority has now started.

Paragraph 101, “The Financial industry is clearly well regulated and supervised to a high standard. The authorities are keen to ensure that effective counter money laundering controls are in effect.”

Paragraph 102 (and this is the final paragraph): “The arrangements for consolidation between government departments and the private sector deserve commendation. There is a common interest in putting policies into practice and a timetable for introducing new laws is actively pursued.”

“The combined efforts of these key players have succeeded in making money laundering a more hazardous and expensive activity in the Cayman Islands.”

Mr. Speaker, I am going to share a thought, and I will put this down as my personal view at this time: We established a sister organisation of the FATF in the Caribbean region. We have seen where—and this has been the mandate from the time that it was established—we were made to understand that it is a parallel organisation having the same remit as the FATF.

I am very much surprised, as are many other persons in the region, that the FATF could have taken the decision to bypass the CFATF, and conduct its own independent review of systems of countries within the region. Not only that, the information that was available within the CFATF that was offered to the FATF to assist them in their review was not accessed.

This has caused many of the countries in the region to be very much upset with the arrangements. But notwithstanding that, we indicated to the FATF when they came to the Cayman Islands, . . . we provided them with a copy of our report when they wrote to us, and we agreed that we were going to engage in constructive dialogue with them.

Just to recap the developments: The FATF released a report on non-cooperative countries and territories on February 14, 2000 setting out 25 new criteria to identify detrimental rules and practices that impede international cooperation in the fight against money laundering and establishing regional review groups to review a number of jurisdictions with other FATF membership against the criteria.

What must be borne in mind is that we are talking about 25 new criteria. These criteria are in addition to the 40 and the 19 and these 25 were not available to be reviewed or to be considered where countries deemed that their systems were somewhat deficient or not meeting these enhanced standards, they would have had an opportunity to address these deficiencies. But I will continue.

By letter dated 16 February 2000, received by the Financial Secretary on 22 February 2000, the FATF President advised that the Cayman Islands was one of the jurisdictions preliminarily mentioned as possibly meeting some of the criteria and “ . . . we would like to engage in the review with your full support and cooperation.”

The Financial Secretary responded by letter dated 13 March 2000 expressing surprise and concern that the Cayman Islands was selected for review by the FATF given our history of cooperation and action in the international fight against money laundering.

The reply also attached the CFATF's Report “1995 Mutual Evaluation on the Cayman Islands” which found amongst other things that the Cayman Islands was, and I quote, “ . . . in substantial compliance with the FATF and CFATF recommendations” and offered to provide additional information and materials with the expectation that Cayman would be removed from the list of jurisdiction under review at an early date. There has been no reply between that period and 4 April.

On April 4, 2000, Mr. Joseph Myers, the Chair of the FATF Review Group for the Americas, wrote to the Financial Secretary indicating that they were preparing a draft report on the Cayman Islands and would be sending it to us for our comments.

On April 7, 2000 the Financial Secretary wrote to Mr. Myers and attached a copy of . . . and when I say the Financial Secretary, this is not to be taken in the person of George McCarthy. I have signed the letters that have gone out but these letters were developed jointly by the Task Force, by the working group comprised of Mr. Linford Pierson; the Attorney General, Mr. David Ballantyne; Mr. Thomas Jefferson, and Mr. Truman Bodden. The letters were reviewed by Executive Council and input taken from the Secretariat.

On April 7, 2000, the Financial Secretary wrote to Mr. Myers and attached a copy of the earlier letter to the FATF President. He also restated Cayman's willingness to provide information to assist in the removal of the Cayman Islands from the list of jurisdictions being reviewed.

On May 2, 2000, the Financial Secretary again wrote to Mr. Myers to the same effect with a copy sent through the British Embassy in Washington. There was no response to the letter of 7 April 2000 hence the reason for the letter of May 2, 2000.

On May 4, 2000, a reply was received from Mr. Myers that indicated that the review group would be available for a meeting in Miami on June 8 and 9 and that the draft report on the Cayman Islands would be forwarded by the end of the week.

On May 9, 2000, a draft report on the Cayman Islands was received with a request that a response be given by May 19.

The Cayman Islands Government submitted a preliminary response on May 19, 2000. On May 26, a formal invitation to a meeting in Miami on June 8 and 9 was received from the review group for the Americas, and this was sent to the Cayman Islands Government.

On June 5, a revised draft was received from the FATF by the Cayman Islands Government.

On June 9, 2000, the Cayman Islands delegation met with the review group for the Americas in Miami to discuss the draft report and the review process. Presentations were made by the Honourable Truman Bodden, the Honourable Chief Justice, the Honourable Attorney General, and comments were made by the Financial Secretary. Also, comments were offered by the Chief Inspector, Mr. Brian Gibbs, and the Managing Director of the Cayman Islands Monetary Authority, Mr. Bourbon. All of these comments and presentations were developed jointly by the working group comprised of the persons that I mentioned earlier.

The delegation addressed in detail a question related to enforceability of the Code of Practice. That was the single question that the group was asked to address. The Attorney General spent close to half an hour pointing out the effectiveness of the code, and this was backed up by information provided by Chief Inspector Brian Gibbs as to why we have an effective Code of Practice.

Mr. Speaker, we have all of the presentations here that were made by the various parties and it would be useful if members would like to probably peruse some of the comments that were shared.

On June 16, 2000, a revised report on the Cayman Islands was received from the FATF and on the same day a further response was prepared and sent out by the Financial Secretary, again coming from the working group.

On June 19, 2000, the FATF met in Paris to review the draft reports on jurisdictions and to finalise the list of non-cooperative countries and territories.

On Tuesday, June 2, 2000, a new revised report by the FATF was faxed to the Financial Secretary's office. He was advised informally by the Executive Director of the CFATF who was attending the FATF meeting in Paris that the Cayman Islands was going to be listed as a non-cooperating jurisdiction by the FATF. This was after we received, by way of correspondence from the United Kingdom, that if it could be demonstrated that a thorough review had not been carried out on the Cayman Islands anti-money laundering regime and more time was needed, that this argument would be advanced on the part of the Cayman Islands.

Shortly after these events there was a high level meeting that was hosted by the OCED in Paris. Mr. Pierson gave some details of this yesterday or Monday. On our way to Paris, we arrived in London on Monday morning and we went to Mr. Joseph Halagan's office at the Treasury Department to discuss the issues and just to get some information as to why the Cayman Islands was listed. After it was recognised that we had a Code of Practice in place and we were earlier found to be in substantial compliance with the FATF's 40 recommendations and CFATF's 19, we wanted to find out exactly what was happening.

Mr. Halagan spoke with us, and during the course of the conversation it came to light that apparently this seems to have been somewhat pre-determined that the G-7 countries or the FATF member countries were going to be issuing advisories against the 15 countries that were listed by the FATF.

There were other views that were shared, but I do not think it would be appropriate to mention these views at this time. But this shows that the Cayman Islands has been in compliance with the 40 FATF recommendations, the 19 CFATF recommendations, and the 25 criteria that have been extrapolated out of the 40 recommendations. To use the words of the Attorney General, “these were to define the FATF 40 recommendations.”

But equity would have suggested, this being done, that time should have been allowed for jurisdictions to carefully examine the 25 criteria and to examine their anti-money laundering regimes and wherever gaps were found, these gaps should be bridged. That would have been the most equitable route.

Notwithstanding this, the email I read between Joseph Tompkins and the Assistant Financial Secretary, and also the letter from the President of the FATF, the Cayman Islands' leadership role in promoting anti-money laundering systems in the region . . . not only in the Cayman Islands because we have provided technical assistance to other countries. Quite recently, we provided technical assistance in the setting up of a Financial Intelligence Unit at the request of the United Nations to one of the leading independent countries in the region—we have done all of that.

We pointed this out to the FATF Chair for the Americas at the face-to-face meeting in Miami on June 9. I want to be very accurate with the information I am giving. All of this was pointed out. We have seen where what we have done has been recognised.

At least, we can take comfort in the fact that we do not have as far to go as some of the other jurisdictions. At least this has been recognised. It shows that the government is staying on top of this issue.

The question being raised, when we look at the advisory we have been told that normal business transactions should continue as usual. The advisory has gone on to point out that more punitive sanctions could be exercised against countries failing to remedy the deficiencies that have been identified. This will not be the case with the Cayman Islands because we have always taken our international obligations quite seriously. We have been a very proactive country, putting in place or promoting anti-money laundering regimes. We have taken a public stance on this.

We have to give credit to our Chief Justice. The Cayman Islands was invited by the FATF through the Chief Justice to carry out a review of the United States of America. It shows that we have the expertise in the region. It shows that the mutual evaluation that was done on the Cayman Islands . . . I will not accept the fact that the Caribbean region will have to play second fiddle to anywhere else in the world.

We have the ability and the capacity, and we have proven ourselves throughout the world community. We have a report that has been done by experts in the region on the Cayman Islands and it concludes that we were found to be substantially in compliance. What we are now saying is that we are co-operating with the FATF. But at the end of the day when the Attorney General and I attend the ministerial meeting that will be held in October we will be asking some questions.

The question that I will be asking is: Is the CFATF to be regarded as an equal organisation by the FATF? If that answer is in the affirmative, there are going to be some other questions. It will be somewhat premature for me to voice them at this point in time, but the Cayman Islands has done a lot.

We do recognise that we have been a very successful jurisdiction. Probably we have not been blowing our trumpets as well as other jurisdictions have. What would also be very helpful is that when the media . . . we are not trying to curtail the media or suggest that they should not report the facts, but that they seek for a balance. Don't go and pick up something negative reported by some quarters and put this over for public consumption in the Cayman Islands. Get the facts. Get the positive things that are being said. We know that positive things are not regarded as what sell the newspaper or other things but at the end of the day, this is a country where our bread is being buttered, so to speak. Everyone will have to work in cooperation to achieve the good end for the Cayman Islands.

Mr. Speaker, we have done a lot. We have come through a lot of challenges. We have challenges ahead. This will not be the only one. But rather than just being seen as something to put us down I think this will help us to stand firm. We are going to have a bit of difficulties ahead because obviously the way this information is being disseminated on the Internet and elsewhere, a lot of individuals are going there and reading this. What we will have to do is put in place a public relations campaign in order to ensure that we have accurate information—not misleading but accurate information—going out to the people within the Cayman Islands community.

We can take assurance and we are going to be holding the FATF to their word and also the Review Group of the Americas. When we have put in place the corrective measures we will be inviting the FATF to do a review of the Cayman Islands anti-money laundering regime and we are also extending this same invitation to the Review Group of the Americas. We have draft legislation that has been handed out to honourable members of this House and we have had two meetings already.

I am certainly glad that the First Elected Member for West Bay raised this motion at this time allowing me to offer these few brief comments on the subject.

Thank you very much.

The Speaker: The Third Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. Linford A. Pierson: Mr. Speaker, in view of the very thorough and comprehensive account that has been given by the Honourable Third Official Member, it is certainly not my intention to repeat what he has said. I would like to take this opportunity to thank the First Elected Member for West Bay for his timely intervention in this matter. As usual, he has touched on a very important issue.

Mr. Speaker, in the call for urgent attention to this important matter, I believe he has also given the opportunity to members of the House to briefly comment on this most important issue. I would certainly like to thank you for the tolerance and attitude that you are giving for us to voice our opinions and air our views on this very important issue.

I would like to caption my few comments with the words that in my opinion the Cayman Islands was made the sacrificial lamb. I share the sentiments expressed by the Third Official Member that Cayman is a destination that is supervised on a very high standard and is second to none. Of course, even with the best regulated economies of the United States, the UK and others they find that from time to time they have matters cropping up that they are not 100 percent happy with. A point in fact is the problems that the Bank of New York had with the money laundering through Russia. Mr. Speaker, I could cite a number of other examples.

I said that we were made the sacrificial lamb based on the foundation already laid by the Honourable Third Official Member. It was not very long ago when the CFATF evaluated the Cayman Islands as being substantially in compliance of the 40 FATF recommendations.

It was not so long ago, within the past year, that the United States of America was mutually evaluated by the Cayman Islands and other FATF countries. If we were in such bad shape at that time why didn't the FATF bring it to the attention of the CFATF, which is a sister organisation of the FATF?

Mr. Speaker, I think it is clear that as the fifth largest financial centre we were made an example of. We were made the sacrificial lamb. I am not going to stand here and even begin to suggest that we do not have weaknesses in our system. Of course we do. But for you to on one hand be told that you are the exemplar within the region, all of your virtues extolled, and on the other hand, to be chopped down and told that you failed 13 out of 25 criteria would appear somewhat questionable. But that is history.

I have given that background to show that just in case you have those outside that would try to point figures at individual members of the negotiating team or members of this House or of the government, they must try to understand the details of what has occurred to date. It is a danger to jump to the wrong conclusion and to use this situation for any sort of political gain would not only be a disservice to this House but it would be a major disservice to the people of these islands.

I am very happy that the First Elected member for West Bay had the foresight to bring this matter before the House to allow the opportunity for some discourse on it. We already have in place some of the most effective legislation. We were the leaders in the money laundering legislation—The Proceeds of Criminal Conduct Law, and the list goes on and on. We have within recent months also issued the Code of Conduct under section 20 of the Proceeds of Criminal Conduct Law.

We in these islands have been trying our best to comply with international standards in finance. I would be the first to say that I personally would like to see a more proactive approach from our country, from each member of this House, from any government sitting over there. I do not like to be put in a reactive mode. The Financial Secretary, who is the Third Official Member, can attest to the fact that in my first letter to him when he requested ideas that members had as to how the OECD initiative should be handled, one of the first things I said was that we should not wait to react to a situation but that we should be proactive. When I expanded on it, I meant we should evaluate our weaknesses and try to correct them before we were put into a situation.

I am not suggesting here that we have been put into a situation. I am saying that in addition to what we are doing now to meet the 25 criteria or the 13 we have failed plus four that were partly satisfied, we should be looking ahead at other areas to see where we need to make the necessary corrections, where we need to strengthen areas and not wait until we are pushed into a corner.

Mr. Speaker, if members of the public had the opportunity to read the letter that was received from Mr. Gil Galvao, the President of the FATF, dated, I think 21st June, one would have wondered why was the Cayman Islands placed on a blacklist. There were so many praises extolling the virtues of our financial centre, the strides that we had made. This is why I say that we were made the sacrificial lamb, because the action taken by the FATF in listing us as opposed to the letter that was written by the President is most inconsistent.

There were 25 criteria against which countries were judged. There is a strange way in which they did it. Those that were met were failures. Where they said you meet such and such a criterion, it really meant that you failed on those issues. Of the 25 criteria, we met 13, with an additional four that were partly met. We didn't meet or pass eight, which makes the 25.

When we got that report mentioned by the honourable Third Official Member, we were most concerned. We felt not only was the report unfair to the Cayman Islands, but inconsistent with previous reports we had received through the Caribbean Financial Action Task Force and, more recently, from the President of the FATF.

Following our successes with OECD, being placed on their white list, we were invited through the secretariat of OECD and the French Government, the French Minister of Finance, to a high level symposium for discussion on other matters to be addressed following the listing by OECD. And, incidentally, I haven't heard much said about our successes with OECD. Something good hardly makes news; it's only when something is not quite so good. But I am not pointing any fingers, Mr. Speaker.

We took the opportunity, as the Third Official Member stated, to meet with one of the highest ranking officers in the crime division of the FATF in the Treasury of the UK to discuss the report that had been issued on the Cayman Islands, because we could not understand the basis for the listing.

What amazes me (and I am not taking tales out of school, and in the interest of transparency I think it needs to be said) . . . if it hadn't been for probing we would not have known that an advisory was being issued against us. I find that rather strange. A member of our group raised a question, and we were told that the US was doing that. I know that certain things need to be kept in confidence, but as a territory of the UK, I would have thought that we'd be told that and not have to try to squeeze it out, as it were.

We went to Paris for the symposium. We arrived back in Cayman on Saturday evening. Those people who travel across the Atlantic know what jet lag is like. We didn't have the luxury of getting over ours. Whilst certain individuals may have been enjoying the holiday, we spent ours in the Glass House from about 10.00 in the morning until 7.30 at night. That's where we were trying to address the issue so that we could avoid the advisories or, at best, have them modified.

The point is, had it not been for the intervention of the negotiating team, supported by members of the Private Sector Consultative Committee, and others such as the head of the Monetary Authority, the head of the Financial Reporting Unit, the Chief Justice and others, we would have been placed on the most restrictive list. I have no doubt about that. All that took us off that hard list was the fact that we could show that we were not making empty promises, but we were making concrete advances, taking concrete action to put the necessary amendments in place. So much so, that of those 13 criteria that we failed, an additional four that we partly failed, the amendments we have put in place will satisfy not only those 17 criteria, but added to the eight we already passed would mean we completely passed all of the 25 criteria.

There should be no reason why, when the amendments are brought to this House, we should not have the advisories lifted as quickly as possible thereafter. The next closest date for us to get off the FATF list is October. That would be an academic exercise if the US accepts that the amendments we are putting in place will satisfy the 13 plus four criteria they have failed us on.

In all of our deliberations, we consulted with the private sector. For me to stand here and say that 100 per cent of the membership of the private sector agreed fully with everything would be stating an untruth. But I can say that the vast majority of the members gave their full support to what we were doing. The view is that even though we are on what is regarded as a soft grouping (group 2 which is the soft grouping compared to group 1, which is referred to as the hard grouping) there is still potential damage that can be done to our economy as long as an advisory of that nature hangs over our heads.

It's not a question of rushing legislation. When I hear that, it suggests that people like our experienced Attorney General and other experienced lawyers in our group do not have the ability—which is totally, totally false!—did not have the maturity to make sure that things were properly scrutinised.

Many times we asked the leader of the group to speak on behalf of the five. But it would be interesting to have a tape recorder tape us when we are speaking in our sessions. Sometimes you'd really think we were quarrelling. But you don't have any "yes people" in that group. We have professionals. We have an economist, two professional lawyers, and two professional accountants with experience. Nobody is going to be a yes man. I made that quite clear when I moved from the backbench to work with them. I was not coming as one backbencher to work with four members of Executive Council. We were going to work as equals. That is precisely what we have done. We have worked very well together.

I believe that rather than being put in a bad light, as I heard on "Talk Today," that we should be congratulated for the efforts made to try to put this country on the right footing. Nobody is hiding anything. There is not one trip we have made where a full report was not made upon our return to this island.

We have told the people all along what was going on. Yesterday, someone from the private sector said to me after a meeting, "Linford, you, Tom, and Truman should try to brighten up yourselves a little when talking on television." Well, I agree with that. I know we look a bit wooden, but I don't know how to trivialise such a serious matter. I wish I could make a joke of it. People who know me, know that I can be very funny when I want to be. But as hard as I try, I find it difficult to smile when talking about OECD or FATF. I know of the potential damage that can cause to these islands.

The attitude taken by some of the independent countries two years ago is interesting. I remember at the Commonwealth Finance Ministers Conference, when I spoke. Even at that time there were independent countries that compete with the Cayman Islands telling their customers, even from Cayman, to leave the Cayman Islands and come to their country because of their independence and their sovereignty; that as independent countries they could do as they pleased. I bet they are singing a different tune now.

Every one of them—The Bahamas, Barbados, Antigua—is trying to get their act together. Again, this is just an example of the foresight of the Cayman Islands. We were able to get ourselves off of the most important list—the OECD list—with five other countries, including Bermuda. As I speak, a number of our competitors within the region and outside are trying to get off that list. The threshold is going to be that much higher for them to get off at this stage.

The only thing that helps them is that they will have a year to do so. But unless they put their house in order, it's going to be difficult. I have also heard talk about the attachments to the commitment letter making it appear as if the group tried to hide that information. Nothing could be further from the truth. I don't have a copy here now, or I would read it to put it into the Hansard. I am hoping that somebody from across the way might be able to let me have it before I take my seat.

There are also people in this country advocating independence. They say that independence is the answer to our problem. Nothing could be further from the truth. What are we going independent on? We don't even have a proper political party system. We have all the independence we need! And we need to protect that—our financial independence! That is what we are fighting for.

That is the reason we gave up our holiday and worked until late in the night at the Glass House. That is why, when we got to England on Monday morning, rather than get the luxury of taking a nap, we were in meetings that afternoon with the Treasury, the Inland Revenue and other FCO fighting for these islands. I heard mentioned on the call in show about what hotel we stayed in, how did they travel. . . how petty can anyone get? I hope that was some political has-been or wanna-be making those statements. I would hate to believe that sensible people out there would be making those sort of trite remarks.

[Inaudible comments and interjections]

Mr. Linford A. Pierson: I believe the people of the country need to know that as a major financial centre there are other areas that we will have to be looking into. If we are going to continue to be the fifth largest financial centre, fifth in line to New York, London, Tokyo, Hong Kong, then we are going to have to look at other areas of our supervisory structure.

Another area that will require urgent attention is our Monetary Authority. It has been made quite clear that the BASEL Committee on Banking Supervision and other international supervisory bodies . . . even the report that has been done by KPMG, which is a joint report between the UK and her territories, our supervision will definitely have to fall in line with international standards.

One of the things we have to look into in the very near future is the fact that the BASEL Committee on Banking Supervision will not continue to allow us to just use what is called consolidated supervision, or supervision by home supervisors. We will have to get the necessary resources here so that we will be able to satisfy the international arena that we are able to do our own supervision.

Right now, it can be said that the Monetary Authority has a lot of people in it. But it is believed that for us to be fully autonomous, where we can bring the Monetary Authority to its full independence, we are going to have to be looking at a minimum of at least 100 people. We can't have our cake and eat it too.

The first question is going to be where are the people coming from. If we are to continue to retain our position as the fifth largest financial centre, we will have to find the people. We cannot have our cake and eat it too.

Because of the interest of the Talk Today show and the prominence (it's a very popular show, and I would be the last one that would want to stop the democratic process of free expression), but I have always said that with that right must also be the necessary responsibility for what you say. In that regard, I think it would be most appropriate if those who are so vocal with their own views, and so anxious to be so, would tune in to what we are saying here today. Perhaps I could invite my good friend who organises that show, Mr. Val Litchenstein, to get a tape of what was said here today.

I know there will be other speakers. They won't all agree with what I am saying. But the beauty of this House is the professionalism we have here. We can disagree with one another, yet when we sit in that common room we can maintain that (as my friend the Third Elected Member for Bodden Town says) fraternity. That is the maturity we have in this House. We can disagree on the floor, but when we get in there, we can certainly get along with each other.

I mentioned that there were questions about the attachments to the letter being a secret. People said they couldn't find it on the Internet, they couldn't find it here, and they couldn't find it there. I think it's only appropriate that because the FATF, the FSF are all arms of OECD are driven by the G-7 countries that the country should know precisely what we entered into so that the speculation can stop.

People are putting all kinds of meaning to what was done, a lot of which I believe is political posturing because it's an election year. I submit that this issue is too important for people to kick around as a political football. Let's find something else. I know Cayman Airways is stale now, but we can find another political football. This is too important.

This is why we have the backbench and the government bench getting together, working for the national interest of this country. I have even had people say that because I am travelling with Tom, Truman, the Attorney General and Financial Secretary (and Mr. Speaker, please excuse me for calling them by name), but the Minister of Education and the Minister of Tourism, . . . that I am a part of Truman's camp. They have even said that Truman and I are running in the election—after I stood here in this House and made it quite clear that the First Elected Member for George Town and I will be running on the same ticket. It was even on television and in the papers. Yet, mischievous individuals are going around for political reasons trying to stir up mischief.

You try to do something in the interest of your country, and then you are pounded into the ground. We sent under the signature of the Governor two letters to OECD with an attachment. These are the most important documents that have gone out of this country in a long time.

The first letter was the transmittal letter. Onto that was what is called the committal letter, or a commitment. Some people are asking what kind of negotiation did the five people do because all the letters are the same. It just reflects the ignorance of those people. If they had known what they were talking about, they would know that every line of this letter was negotiated. We got certain concessions that were not even given to some of the European countries that are part of the preferential tax regime. That came through negotiation.

So, for those who say they went on the Internet and all the letters were the same, of course, the basic standard of the letters is the same. But when I read the attachment to this, it will show that even though OECD had to maintain a level playing field, they were not able to do a letter to suit every need but had to do a standard letter that each country should have used the opportunity to negotiate the very best possible arrangements they could have. And that is precisely what we did.

With your permission, Mr. Speaker, I would like to read into the Hansard the following.

The Speaker: Go ahead.

Mr. Linford A. Pierson: The transmittal letter that was written by . . . and I would like to table it afterward, but I would like to read it into the Hansard for the sake of the listening public.

The Speaker: So ordered.

Mr. Linford A. Pierson: Thank you.

The transmittal letter was sent to Mr. Jeffrey Owens, Head of Fiscal Affairs of OECD (Organisation for Economic Cooperation and Development). It was signed by His Excellency the Governor (both letters). It reads: Cayman Islands Advance Commitment to the OECD on Harmful Tax Competition. It reads:

“On behalf of the Cayman Islands Government I enclose a copy of a letter containing a draft ‘Advance Commitment’ in connection with the OECD's project on harmful tax competition, which has been officially sent to Mr. Johnston the Secretary General of the OECD.

“The Cayman Islands has been reassured that the recently published OECD Report on Access to Bank Information confirms that there is a legitimate role for bank secrecy in protecting the confidentiality of financial affairs and in maintaining the soundness of banking systems (see paragraph 1 of the Report). But we also recognise, as noted in paragraph 2 of the Report, that the effective administration and enforcement of any laws and regulations, including those on taxation, require access to an analysis of records of financial transactions and that such access is not inconsistent with maintaining the confidentiality of banking information. This is the context in which the exchange of information tax commitment of the Cayman Islands is made.

“Part I of the attachment to the letter of commitment contains a broad outline of the proposed arrangements for tax information exchange and other measures to address the transparency and no substantial activity criteria are contained in Part II of the attachment. We intend to publish the attachment together with the letter of commitment and that these will only be published or released, unless otherwise agreed by the Cayman Islands Government, when the OECD confirms that this commitment is an Advance or Level 1 commitment and that the Cayman Islands will not appear on the OECD list of tax havens when published in June 2000.

“The Cayman Islands understand that on the basis of the commitments made in the attachment letter:

- (1) the Cayman Islands would not appear on the OECD list of tax havens when published in June 2000;
- (2) the Cayman Islands will not be subject to collective sanctions by OECD countries and the OECD will encourage its members to refrain from applying new or enhanced sanctions against the Cayman Islands in its Advance Level 1 Commitment. In addition the Cayman Islands anticipate that:
- (3) OECD member countries would take into account this commitment in the context of discussions taking place in other relevant fora in which they participate and which impact on the conduct of the financial service industry in the Cayman Islands;
- (4) the timetable for implementing the commitments, and for the enforcement of defensive measures against non co-operative jurisdictions, should be applied in a fashion which is consistent with the measures to be undertaken by the Cayman Islands.

“We would also anticipate that the OECD and its member countries will assist the Cayman Islands in promoting policies designed to contribute to the sound expansion of the Cayman Islands in the process of economic development and in helping Cayman meet the commitments set out in the attached letter. Further, we intend to keep the financial services industry heavily involved in the discussions on the application of the commitments set out in the letter and attachments.”

This was copied to Mr. Peter Westmacott, the Deputy Under Secretary of State, FCO.

The commitment letter from the Governor to Mr. Donald Johnston, who is the OECD Secretary General reads as follows:

“I am writing in connection with OECD's project on harmful tax competition. I am pleased to inform you that the Cayman Islands hereby commits to the elimination of tax practices determined by the Forum to be harmful in accordance with the OECD's Report, 'Harmful Tax Competition: An Emerging Global Issue' (the OECD Report). In fulfillment of this commitment, the Cayman Islands undertakes to implement such measures (including through any legislative changes) as are necessary for the elimination of those aspects of the Cayman Islands regimes deemed to be harmful. The Government of the Cayman Islands commits in particular to a programme of effective exchange of information in tax matters, transparency, and the elimination of any aspects of the regimes for financial and other services that attract business with no substantial domestic activities. Measures designed to eliminate the tax practices deemed to be harmful are broadly outlined in the attachment hereto. Details of these measures and a specific timetable will be agreed with the Forum. We understand that the OECD is prepared to assist us in establishing, improving, or maintaining such practices and procedures as are necessary to comply with this commitment.

“The Government of the Cayman Islands farther commits to refrain from:

- (1) introducing any new regime that would constitute a harm fill tax practice under the OECD Report;
- (2) for any existing regime related to financial and other services that currently does not constitute a harmful tax practice under the OECD Report, modifying the regime in such a way that, after modifications, it would constitute a harmful tax practice under the OECD Report: and
- (3) strengthening or extending the scope of any existing measure that currently constitutes a harmful tax practice under the OECD Report

“The government of the Cayman Islands intends to release this letter of commitment to the public [and I should say that that was done. This letter has already been published, but for whatever reason there are certain individuals out there saying they did not know of the content of the letter and the attachment] and would welcome the OECD's release of this letter after the Committee of Fiscal Affairs reports to the OECD Council on the progress of its work, which we understand is expected by mid-June 2000.”

This letter, like the previous one I read, was written on 18 May 2000.

Now, this seems to be the area that is causing the most concern. Certain individuals were saying that this was not made public. I am saying that nothing could be further from the truth, whether they were able to get it on the website or not is another question. But it was made public.

The attachment to it reads: “Part I; A. Effective Exchange of Information; The Cayman Islands commits that the effective exchange of information for criminal tax matters shall become effective for the first tax year after 31 December 2003. As regards the effective exchange of information for civil and administrative matters this will become effective for the first tax year after 31 December 2005.”

And just to show the sort of negotiation entered into by the negotiating team, it was initially requested that the Cayman Islands would enter into an automatic and spontaneous method of giving the information—automatic, meaning that it would be given directly from financial institutions; and spontaneous, meaning that it would be given when considered necessary.

But, Mr. Speaker, in our negotiations we were able to bring the exchange of information on the same basis as is now being applied under the Mutual Legal Assistance Treaty, of which the Chief Justice is the central authority. Information will be given on request and only issued after it has been properly scrutinised by the Chief Justice, the Attorney General in the case where it is referred to him, but not given automatically. This is very important because this is the basis for the FATF and the Financial Stability Forum. And it is all interwoven.

As a matter of fact, between 26 May and 26 June all of these initiatives were poured down on the various countries under an orchestrated and concerted effort. We were able to ensure that we had removed any possibility of fishing expeditions.

MOMENT OF INTERRUPTION—4.30 PM

The Speaker: May I interrupt you for a moment?

Mr. Linford A. Pierson: Sure, Mr. Speaker.

SUSPENSION OF STANDING ORDER 10(2)

The Speaker: In accordance with Standing Order 86, I would ask for the suspension of Standing Order 10(2) in order for this honourable House to continue.

Mr. Linford A. Pierson: I so move.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: I beg to second that.

The Speaker: The question is the suspension of Standing Order 10(2) in order for this honourable House to continue until 7.00 p.m. Those in favour please say Aye. Those against No.

AYES.

The Speaker: The Ayes have it.

AGREED: STANDING ORDER 10(2) SUSPENDED.

The Speaker: Please continue honourable Third Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. Linford A. Pierson: Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

The point I want to make here is that this has removed the possibility . . . and I hope that depositors and investors in this country will realise that there is no reason for them to fear “fishing expeditions” or people coming in here just getting information at will. They will have to go through the proper procedure—

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Due diligence.

Mr. Linford A. Pierson: —and due diligence will have to be put in place. That’s a good word, thank you my good friend.

Just so that we understand, the first information that will be given will be in the first tax year after 31 December 2003, and that is on criminal tax matters. Civil and administrative matters will not be available until approximately six years’ time, which is the first tax year after 2005.

The attachment continues, “The implementation of this commitment shall require that information be provided only pursuant to a specific request [it’s written in here, Mr. Speaker, confirming what I just said] and if such request may be relevant to a tax examination or investigation that is conducted in accordance with the laws of the requesting state.

“Requests will be submitted to the tax authorities to a competent authority in the Cayman Islands who will act in a capacity similar to that in which the Cayman Islands Chief Justice has acted pursuant to other international information exchange agreements. [Nothing could be clearer] While recognizing the legitimacy of bank secrecy in protecting the confidentiality of financial affairs, the commitment implementation will provide an effective gateway for the disclosure of information relevant to the request which is held by financial institutions.

“The implementation of this commitment will include confidentiality provisions to ensure that information that has been exchanged is adequately protected from unauthorized disclosure.”

All the checks and balances, all the protection has been put in place. This was accomplished by the negotiating team. I want to add to that, the assistance of the Chief Justice and members of the Private Sector Consultative Committee and others.

Then, the other two areas we had to address, other than an exchange of information (there were two other major areas we were judged on by OECD), was the lack of transparency and the no substantial activities. And we had to give a commitment to that. That’s also contained here in this attachment. I would also like to put this into the Hansards and then I will be completed with that.

Part II deals with “Transparency: Bearer Shares (1) Bearer Shares will be abolished or the identity of beneficial owners of such shares will be reliably available for the exchange of information for tax purposes.

“(2) The Confidential Relationships (Preservation) Law 1976 is to be repealed and Replaced with appropriate information disclosure legislation which will protect legitimate confidential information and maintain the soundness of the financial system.

“(3) The Code of Practice under the Proceeds of Criminal Conduct Law, 1996 as approved by Executive Council in 1999, which emphasizes the Know Your Customer Principle is being implemented and will be revised from time to time. Proper and necessary records of beneficial ownership will be kept and retained in accordance with the Code.

“(4) Appropriate filing or auditing requirements (subject to de minimis rules to be worked out with the Forum) for foreign owned entities engaged in geographically mobile financial and services activities are to be put in place where they do not presently exist.”

Where it says “subject to the de minimis rules” if it’s a matter of $100 an audit is not going to be required for that level of finance. It has to be a substantial amount.

“C. No Substantial Activities (1) The existing Companies Law, Partnership Law and Trust Law and other related laws will be amended to create one Company, Partnership and Trust Structure, or such laws will be amended to apply equally to residents and non residents in relation to any aspect of ‘ring fencing’ that may exist under current laws.

“(2) A policy directive will be issued by the Cayman Islands Government to advise service providers that aggressive marketing policies based exclusively or primarily on confidentiality or secrecy are not in the national interest and should not be pursued.”

There is no hidden agenda here. We have dealt with this on the basis of transparency. We have given all the necessary information and this was already published. It will be laid on the Table of this honourable House, which really means it will be available to any Member of this House or even the press. But it’s already been made public.

All the attachment deals with are the three major criteria under the OECD Report: Effective exchange of information, which we admitted there was a lack of in our jurisdiction; it dealt with the transparency issue, and the no substantial activities. That is all the attachment dealt with. I hope there will be no more need for speculation or misleading statements, or misinformation on this matter.

The recommended amendments required to bring our house in order in regard to the 25 criteria have already been discussed in the committee room with honourable Members of this House. When each Member had the opportunity to ask certain questions, albeit the time was not as long as we would have wished, but urgent matters require urgent attention. That is why we have had to move with it as we have to expedite the whole process and avoid any unnecessary further damage if there has already been any caused to the Cayman Islands.

The necessary amendments have also been discussed with members of the private sector, the various leading service providers and institutional heads. It has been circulated to Members of this honourable House, again on short notice, but because of the urgency of the matter.

Before I take my seat, I will say that if these amendments are approved that it is the view of the negotiating team, the secretariat and all our advisors including our US advisor, that these should broadly meet the terms of the 25 criteria. If that is the case, within the not too distant future, a matter of days or a week, we would be getting a positive report that the modified advisory over the Cayman Islands now has been lifted.

I trust that when my honourable colleagues deliberate the various areas of these amendments will do so in the spirit of the national interest of the Cayman Islands and our people. This is not a time to make others look bad. Let us try to do what is in the very best interest of the people of these islands.

The Speaker: The Third Elected Member for Bodden Town.

Mr. Roy Bodden: I have listened carefully to what honourable Members have said. I have come to the conclusion that what has been said can be interpreted to mean that it will no longer be business as usual for the Cayman Islands.

The last speaker (the Third Elected Member for George Town) said that there were meetings between the negotiating team and the backbench. I want to say, to clear up any misunderstandings, that the negotiating team held three meetings with the backbench in the duration of these negotiations and their travels, most recently on Monday.

If I were to be asked what I would highlight as a weakness, I would say that the negotiating team could have been more amenable to us in terms of what they were doing, what they hoped to accomplish. But I realise that much of that had to do with leadership style. I think that after the meeting on Monday both sides (the backbench and the government, especially the negotiating team) came away with a greater appreciation and a greater respect for the positions of one another.

I want to go to some pain to express that because I am aware that there has been criticism and accusations in the public by some members saying that the backbenchers were telling them nothing and the government was telling them nothing. I also would like to say that I am aware that there are detractors outside who are because of their own interest and motives promoting misinformation, dis-information and mischievousness.

I recognise that these are sensitive negotiations, but the Cayman Islands’ position cannot be enhanced or improved by going independent. Anyone who advocates independence to avoid and evade international obligations and responsibilities is a fool who has no place in this arena at this time or at any other time.

In these cases it is best to present a united front. It is unfortunate, but I think we have gotten our point across and I expect to see a refreshing change in the style. I think that the relations between the negotiating team (and, by inference, the government, and members of the backbench) will be more cordial and more regular at this time.

Mr. Speaker, I am concerned that enough credence was not paid to the Cayman Islands past co-operation by the OECD and its affiliate organisations and associate organisations because the Cayman Islands has a history of co-operation from the Mutual Legal Assistance Treaty (MLAT) right up until the PCCL. I am reminded by my colleague, the Third Elected Member for George Town, that co-operation existed even before the MLAT. So, one can say that the Cayman Islands were rather harshly treated and roughed up. I would have expected that we would have been accorded a little more honour notwithstanding the seriousness of what is about to be achieved.

I have a great reminder of the position in which the Cayman Islands finds itself, namely, in the history of the Peloponnesian War. We are a small jurisdiction, and we can expect that we will get intimidated by the larger jurisdictions.

I think what has been achieved is commendable. I think we have to continue to present a united front. I do not believe that this is time for any reckless speculation. I believe that we have to try to understand what the obligations are and we have to try to craft a realisation of the way forward because quite clearly some things that we were doing before we will not be able to do again. At the same time, Mr. Speaker, to make up for any contraction in the economy (and I hope that it will indeed be a small contraction), we have to be looking at alternatives. I will say that for the next little while, at least, we may have to focus more on the development of tourism and the benefits that tourism can give us until we can rise to the point where the financial industry has come out of the state of flux it is in.

Mr. Speaker, I do not believe that this is the end of the Cayman Islands as a financial centre. I believe this is but a stage in our growth. And when we come out of this, as I full well expect we will, we will be more mature, more respectable, and just more experienced, and we will have parity with the major jurisdictions. That parity will not be a grudging parity as we have had in the past, but there will be a full acceptance as a colleague, experienced, able, responsible, and willing. I have no doubt in my heart that we are going to get the business back because when people see and understand that we are responsible and meticulous . . . good business, if it leaves in the first place, will return. I don't believe that we are going to have any significant drop-offs. There are going to be some changes but we won't have any significant drop-offs.

Mr. Speaker, the whole business of the transformation of the Monetary Authority is something that we realise would have had to happen some day. It is just that we would have liked to go about it in our own timely way as we have gone about many things in the Cayman Islands. Of course, it is going to impose more expenses on us because we have to hire additional staff and we have to find these and recruit them. So, it is a timely process, and this only means that we have to be a little more expeditious in carrying it out now.

I would like to commend those persons who gave countless hours plying the transatlantic route, going up to Washington and must have made tremendous family sacrifice—deprive themselves of the holidays and other times they could have spent. To say that I appreciate and I am grateful for what they have done, and while we have some differences and we will remain with differences amongst us, I find myself with no other sensible position than to give them my moral support. I would not be candid if I said that I was pleased with the way they handled the relations between us, but I have already expressed my displeasure with that.

Mr. Speaker, as a responsible representative I have to rally behind them and give them my continued prayers and my continued moral support. I have every confidence that the good ship, Cayman Islands, will do well in the interim. I hope that what has been said will promote a clear and unequivocal understanding and the public will realise that the right to know and this whole business of freedom of information does not necessarily mean freedom to know everything because, Mr. Speaker, even I, a promoter of that, realise that there are certain things that are sensitive. When you are in negotiations, as I realise and respect, and both parties are negotiating for hard positions you cannot disclose everything that has been discussed around the table. I think much of this is based on trust, and I have to say that I have come out of it with the sense that the Cayman Islands will rise and continue to do well in the international financial circles.

The Speaker: The Fourth Elected Member for George Town.

Dr. Frank McField: Mr. Speaker, I am happy that we are a stage where we can make haste to explain to the general public exactly what's been going on all these months.

I can say that I spent a substantial amount of time and resources trying to communicate to the general public what I believed was the framework within which the government was pursuing the negotiations. I tried to explain to the public what I thought would be the ultimate result of the negotiations. I tried to explain to the public what some of the consequences of the negotiations would be, the commitments, and what we should do as a country to come together to see a new future out of all of this.

But we can give credit to the government's negotiating team for going abroad and spending tireless hours pursuing negotiations. At the same time, we need to understand that it was possible for the government to have informed the people continuously about what was happening, especially since we understand that many persons do not understand the extent to which our financial institutions have been transformed to being institutions that are interested in tracking value and accounting value rather than avoiding and evading taxes.

The government has done nothing to explain the economy of these islands and how that economy is really built. So there are those persons that still believe that the economy is what it used to be back in the 80s when they saw suitcases of money coming into country, when they knew somehow that perhaps we were doing well because we were dealing with people that were not so credible. It has changed. There have been people in our society that have tried—more so than the government—to lend power to the opinion that 80% of the business in this country has to do with the whole idea of value and accounting. In other words, it would be saying that in this world what we are trying to do is to keep track of the surplus value and we what to keep track of how it is transferred, struggled over and how it is allocated.

If we had the vision to see where we are going to be today, then we would have explained to the people all along the way.

I had the vision to know that today would be exactly as today is from the point of view of the explanations. By my television programme, Public Eye, and my newsletter, The New Vision, I tried the best I could to inform the public as to what the OECD was trying to achieve and why I thought that at the end of the day the government would have to comply with those demands; and why I felt it was possible to comply with those demands and still be a successful financial centre.

Now, the mere fact that people are addressing what is going on on Talk Today is simply because there has been a lack of communication. It seems to me that the attitude is that we are not going to talk because somehow we are special and we are privileged to special information. We are doing special jobs and the minor players should not have the same information because if they did they would put the same value on themselves in the game. The whole concept of denying information or not making information available to persons in the Legislative Assembly and in the country as a whole is a very old game.

Then you have best friends who seem to share the information and it seems to work okay in that type of relationship but what about the persons who are not best friends. Thank God I do not need the specific details in order to be able to work out the framework and be able to make conclusions as to where I feel these things will end up. I think the general public will remember that I did a television show where I read out the levels of commitments. So, those that were paying attention to what I was saying already have an idea of what is happening. I think it is only right that the public be given the possibility to know these things.

Now, what is interesting is while the government negotiating team is going to Paris and London and speaking with British Treasury and the OECD in Paris, the FATF which is really from my understanding related to the struggle against money laundering, enough attention was not paid there. The government got off the OECD list. What did they have to do to get off the list? They had to study the commitments—exactly what it would entail, make a decision as to what they thought the possible impact on society would be and then decide whether or not it would be worthwhile to go along with the commitments. So, once you committed yourself to these particular levels of agreement you were not going to be placed on the list.

I could say that it is probably interesting to know what the people at the OECD headquarters in Paris are thinking, but I believe we could have done with fewer people on the team, saving the country a lot of money. We could have also done with fewer trips. The other side will say, no, that is not true. But this side will say, I believe, that we could have been a little bit more efficient in terms of the way in which we handled this case simply because it was predictable.

Most of the persons who remembered what I was saying from the very beginning with regard to the negotiations will remember me saying exactly what I am saying today, if they are honest. If we have a methodology, we don't have to run all over the place looking a piece of the solution here and there. We can use that particular type of logic to work out and predict the solution, predict the effects it will have on our environment and therefore make a decision based upon that.

If the government spent less time with the OECD using the people who were gathering information for them, processing the information here in the Cayman Islands and at the same time paid some attention to what had been going with regard to the FATF, perhaps we would not have been on their list. We could have avoided being on their list simply by bringing the legislation the government told backbenchers in a meeting yesterday that they wanted to bring in order that we be taken off that list. If it was simply that we draft legislation in our hands already—and it is now on my desk that I can look at one day after they spoke me . . . yesterday was really the first time that I as a backbencher sat down with the government and others to be informed with regard to the negotiations because I knew at that time that the negotiations had been completed and therefore I was willing to have the government brief me as I would not be in any breach of any trust if I then went out and spoke to people. Before that I refused to be briefed simply because I wanted to be able to keep the public informed as to where I thought these things were going.

So, here we have the legislation that we can now discuss. I said the government will need the people of the Cayman Islands to believe that this legislation will do the Cayman Islands more good than not having this legislation. The government of the Cayman Islands needs the backbenchers to believe that the government has achieved as much as could be achieved under the circumstances and therefore we will not argue contrary to their position, which is exactly what we are suggesting here. We will not—at least I will not—be arguing the government's legislation. I understand it is inevitable that we adopt that legislation.

If all these things were there what was the big secret? Why is it that we have to conduct business in the way in which we conducted the business? Was it because we were afraid that some people would get up and run with their money? Well, if they were going to run with their money three months ago, they are going to run with their money today or tomorrow because the same circumstances still exist. My lesson from all of this is that it is possible to seek the co-operation and understanding not just of the elite members of the financial community but also the co-operation and understanding of the average people in our Caymanian society because those people have the right to know as much as the financial bosses in this country. Those people will be impacted more so than the financial bosses in this society.

Also, I believe that those people are capable of co-operating for the general good of our society. There should have been no lapse in the information process for as long as it took place.

The Third Elected Member for George Town has been very capable in terms of giving an overview of the entire situation, of showing the specifics of the situation, of showing exactly how everything ties together, of proving the point that things are not being hidden from the public at this particular point. I think it is good that he has done that. My position is that I continue to say that this should have been an ongoing process and there is no reason why it could not have been an ongoing process.

I thank the First Elected Member for West Bay for giving the government the opportunity to get up and address this situation. Again, this was not done and this was not activated by the government or by the negotiating team members, this was activated by the First Elected Member for West Bay.

I went into Cox Lumber today. As I was coming out I was asked by a member of Radio Cayman whether or not I would give a statement regarding what took place in the briefing yesterday—since the government had not given any briefing on the result of their trip to Washington in regard to the FATF and the advisory that was put out. There was no specific press conference. I watched the television to see whether or not there would be anything. All I saw was Mr. Pierson, who said where they had been so forth and so on. But I did not see anything from the government representatives.

I said to the person that I did not want to be seen as somebody trying to always jump the gun. I would give the government the opportunity to make a press statement by tomorrow, and if they didn't do it by tomorrow, I would be willing to give him a briefing on the briefing that they gave me. But until that time, I wouldn't do it. This was the government's radio station coming to me—a backbencher at this particular stage—to get this same information that they now have as a result of what we have discussed in here today!

I mean, people can get up and say that my going to the press and saying things is wrong, and that they waiting to say things are right. But, at the end of the day, I think we are mature enough in this country to understand that with modern technology people have a desire to have access to the information that will impact their lives. You have to understand it is their lives that we are talking about.

When you are talking about the Cayman Islands, when you are talking about a country, you are talking about real people and it is the real people that have been asking the question. The question is: Where is our government? What are they doing? How can we be assured that what they are doing is in the best interest of the people? Should we believe them if they say it is? My answer is: We should believe the government. I think that the people can see that there is no difference in my position now than what my position was two months ago with regard to the question of the OECD or with regard to the question of the FATF.

All of these exercises seem to be similar exercises by the same countries with the aim of accomplishing the same situation, which is for these countries to have more control over the question of honesty because the systems are all presumed to be dishonest and we can now make a business of being honest. Just like the accountants have made a business of being honest because corporations are assumed to be dishonest and it is the auditing of the corporations that makes them honest. We see the value of complying. We see the value of being honest. We see the value of getting in on the ground floor, of providing the environment whereby accounting and auditing can be done, where good regulation is possible, where transparency is apparent. All of these things are what will be necessary in the 21st century.

There is no way to escape transparency. The world is a global village. It is too small. They can stand in space and see what we are doing down here when we spit on the ground. There is no such thing anymore as secrecy and hiding, especially if what we want to be secretive about is illegal, immoral, and incorrect.

The Cayman Islands as a Christian community has taken up trying to see the plague of money laundering, for instance, of drugs and other immoral crimes contained. We are not being led to the altar to participate—we are willfully participating. And we can identify with the ideology and the philosophy that unless the world's monetary system can be proven to be transparent and more honest there will be more crises—more wars, more plagues, and more addictions.

I am thankful, therefore, that the Financial Secretary and his task force had the approach that as long as Jesus was on their side they would be successful and I think they have been.

The Speaker: Does any other member wish to speak?
The First Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

I think those who have spoken before certainly have dealt with the majority of the issues leading up to the where we are at present. What I would like to do is spend a couple of minutes dealing with the way forward.

As has been explained, the sequence of events has led us to the point where we now have some draft legislation seeking safe passage through this Legislative Assembly. That legislation is, first of all, a revision to the Monetary Authority Law. There will also be an amendment to the Proceeds of Criminal Conduct Law (PCCL), and there will also be some regulations that will have to be put in place, which I understand is going to be called "Money Laundering Regulations."

While we all take different lines with regard to how we see our individual roles throughout the sequence of events, I want to say that where we are at present . . . and certain commitments have been given to specifically talk about the latest advisory that was issued by the Financial Crimes Enforcement Network, which is an agency of the United States Department of Treasury. As complex as it seems, this is simply an extension of the Financial Action Task Force and the policies that they are putting forward. If we can get this amending legislation and get the regulations put in place, it seems that the advisory that has been issued will be lifted and then come October (which is the next meeting of the FATF) we will be taken off the list.

Let us look at what effect that amending legislation will have upon the operation of our financial industry. Without going into a lot of detail, in the immediate term (because the regulatory regime is going to take on a new attitude) the accountability procedures are going to be more stringent. It will mean that the actual cost of doing business must go up. That seems to be a situation that cannot be avoided.

It also means that the service providers are going to have to make certain specific changes in the way they operate in order to comply with the new legislation. There seems to be the thought that this amending legislation needs to seek safe passage through due process in this Legislative Assembly as quickly as possible. While we basically know what has to be done by way of compliance on the part of this Legislative Assembly, I think we need to be more than careful about ensuring that this legislation is understood clearly by each and every one of us.

I am not in a position to dictate timelines because I have not been directly involved in the negotiations. But I do believe that we should use as much time as allowed to ensure that the people who have to operate within the new legislation have the opportunity to digest this new proposed legislation and also have the opportunity for dialogue with government on specific areas that need to be addressed. I don't want to get into specific time because I am not equipped to know how much time we really have. I have to go on a certain amount of trust at this time.

I want government to pay as much attention as possible to the fact that the people who are going to be operating within this legislation have as much opportunity as possible to go through this legislation and make their comments to the government so that government can be assured that everybody is headed in the same direction. One would almost believe that that is a foregone conclusion. But the reason I speak about it is because of discussions I have had with individuals in the financial industry. I don't believe that anyone involved doesn't understand what has to be done. I don't believe there is any question as to what the end result is going to be. I believe it is all a matter of ensuring that everybody is satisfied with how we get to that end result.

I accept that we will have variations in thought process, and I accept that. Perhaps it is going to be physically impossible to satisfy everyone. But I believe it is important to go as far as possible to satisfy that process. The people who are going to be operating within this legislation are the people who are going to make the whole system work.

I am not standing here advocating any sector. I know that as a representative of the people whatever participation there is on my part in the decision-making process must be fair to all concerned. My short message is let us make sure that we, the legislators—and I mean all of us—understand exactly what we are doing. We are way beyond the time when three or four people in this Legislative Assembly understand what it is and they tell the rest of us "Trust me, let's move on." Nothing like that should happen if for no other reason than the safety of this country. It's not that we don't believe that those people with the clear understanding are not headed in the right direction, but if it was limited to that, only those three or four people would be in here, and that's not the case.

Let us exercise our ability to ensure that it's right. If there are questions to be asked let us ask the questions and let us have the answers. In my view, that is the best way to get the results. I don't think there will be an answer forthcoming right now. It's not that kind of dialogue going on this afternoon. But I trust that as the cards unfold in this process that the members of this legislature will be satisfied that we are using a process satisfactory to all concerned, and the service providers are going to be very important in this process. They are going to be the ones who are operating with the new legislation. They are going to be the ones who are going to have to know what they have to do with the line of compliance.

I think I have made my point. Government is perhaps pondering how best to deal with this. I believe that government is well intended in this process. We have to see how best we can satisfy the minds of as many as possible in the whole process. This is a most important situation. We need to get beyond this.

Something that has bothered me with these very serious areas, the OECD, the Financial Stability Forum, the FATF, the KPMG Report . . . I don't want to say that the country is grinding to a halt. But the management of this country has suffered because so much attention has to be paid to these matters. I am not suggesting it's anyone's fault. But these prolonged discussions, deliberations, and negotiations, our domestic situation begins to suffer.

And because I sit on the backbench and see more inadequacies and I pound on the Minister of Education for what he's not doing, I know that's part of my job. And he knows I am going to do that as long as I believe I am doing it right. But when that's all over, the most important thing will be is my country better off? Let us ensure that after we are finished with all of this that together we can say the country is better off.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for Education, Aviation, and Planning.

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: I shall be brief, and just enforce what was said by the honourable Third Official Member and the Third Elected Member for George Town, as members of this very important and good negotiating team. As the First Elected Member for George Town has also said, these issues are above politics and too important for the country to involve in politics. Therefore, I think the debate on this matter has to be kept at a high and serious level.

The last six to nine months have been very difficult and gruelling for the team dealing with these negotiations. I am satisfied that we have the best team this country has every assembled. We have our Financial Secretary, who is very capable and highly professional with very good qualifications; we have our Attorney General, a very brilliant legal mind with a lot of experience in this area; our Minister of Tourism, a former Financial Secretary with masters degrees in very relevant areas of the negotiations, very professional; and the Third Elected Member for George Town, a professional accountant, very experienced, very able, very professional. Together we have put in extremely long hours, spending a lot of time on weekends and holidays sitting as a team in the Executive Council room.

I would also like to mention that our Chief Justice, as the central authority for the Mutual Legal Assistance Treaty, has accompanied us in matters abroad where the Mutual Legal Assistance Treaty was involved. I truly believe that this team is the best this country has ever produced.

The untiring work of every member here has enabled us to achieve what we have. Getting off the OECD list—the most powerful international body—where we were among another five out of 47 was quite an achievement. We were one of six countries out of 47 on that list to get off. That shows the ability of this team.

Anyone listening to the Third Elected Member for George Town could clearly understand the professionalism and his ability to analyse situations and to find solutions acceptable to the large countries. We have to remember that the G-7 countries together with the European Union basically control 80% of the world's business. Together they basically run the world. That is a fact of life. The negotiating teams they put together are of an extremely high calibre and very competent. It is not a matter of going in there unprepared. This team painstakingly prepares and looked at every word in the submission we made time and time again. It's not unusual for us to go through 14 different drafts to just get everything right.

Having said that, when we go abroad, it's not only knowing what we are doing, but also who we know in high places in the governments of the other countries. It is important that the knowledge the team has built up—one of honesty and trustworthiness—that we can relate on a one-to-one basis with ministers or top civil servants at high levels in those countries. That was so clearly brought out when we attended the ministerial conference in Paris where we really learned of this advisory.

From time to time, there's been talk about independence being the answer. That's no answer, Mr. Speaker. I support the member who stated that.

[Inaudible interjection]

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: I support fully the Third Elected Member for George Town. Don't worry. He knows that and the public does.

[Members' laughter and inaudible interjections]

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: Oh, yes, and the Third Elected Member for Bodden Town also talked about independence and that it was not the answer.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Mr. Speaker on a point of order.

The Speaker: May I hear your point of order?

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Perhaps I jumped the gun because I am not so sure I heard what the minister just said while I was getting up. And let him clear it before I raise the point of order. I am sorry.

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: Mr. Speaker, what I said was that the Third Elected Member for Bodden Town spoke of independence, that it was not the answer to the problems we have here. And that is quite correct. I support that position.

When you look at the list on the OECD countries, the most important list, you will find that it has two dependent countries—Cayman and Bermuda—whereas the balance of that list is nearly all made up of independent countries.

I am not saying that the negotiating team is perfect. But I believe that we have the best team this country can send abroad and the successes we have had, including with the FATF, having that advisory watered down to the stage it now is speaks well of the team.

The other thing I would like to point out is that as the Third Elected Member for George Town has stated, the members of the team have very strong minds and very strong views. There are times when different members will take different positions. But when we go into the negotiating talks, we go in as a united team. There is no hemming or hawing or variation from the position we hold. That's important. It's really that mix of professionalism and very strong character that has given the success we have had.

I don't want to dwell on a lot of the details. I would like to say, though, that I agree with what the First Elected Member for George Town stated, that as much time as we can give to the private sector is necessary. But I would like to point out that with the OECD what the private sector—a group of about 20 to 30 people, the Financial Secretary's Private Sector Consultative Committee—gave us a mandate to go off to the OECD and negotiate, what we came back with was so fantastically better that it is the first time I have ever seen that group, which includes the Chamber of Commerce and the real estate (it's a very wide group), as well as the financial sector, unanimously agree. So there is no doubt that we did an extremely good job with the OECD.

Today the Third Elected Member for George Town read that commitment. The protection given to business in Cayman is very clear. On the long term, the movement out there internationally is the direction we are going. The long-term future of this country can only be preserved by having the proper relationship with other large countries and international talks with them.

The private sector has been consulted on the FATF matters. I have no doubt that this Legislative Assembly will exercise the professionalism and togetherness it has been known to exercise in matters of such extremely high importance as this, despite whatever political differences we have. We will do as the Third Elected Member and the First Elected Member for George Town said is so important, and that is whatever is right for this country. What is so important is that whatever we do it secures the long-term future of this country. I believe that when the bills come before this House the legislature will do just that.

I would like to especially thank the other members of government, the ministers and the official member not directly on the team, for their advice and help. They remained active with us on this and there has been a lot of consultation with them. These are matters that go through Executive Council first. I would also like to thank other persons who went with us on the negotiations, the director and senior staff of the Monetary Authority and also Chief Superintendent Gibbs from the reporting authority, the other members of the secretariat and the advisory group within that and all of those who assisted throughout.

The way to move forward on important matters is jointly with everyone's advice. All I would say is that I hope and pray that God will continue to bless the talks we've had abroad and to bless this country and its people.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Health, Social Welfare, Drug Abuse Prevention and Rehabilitation.

Hon. Anthony Eden: I wanted to take my hat off to the negotiating team. I did not go with them on any of their trips, but I sat with them a few months back and watched them perform in a brilliant manner. There were some rough edges at first, but in the end when they came together, they were a very well oiled machine.

I don't have to tell any member here how strong-minded some of these individuals are. At times there were confrontations. But I am proud of how they came together in the end.

I must pay tribute to the leader of the team, Mr. Truman Bodden, the Honourable Minister responsible for Education, Aviation, and Planning. I went with him to the UK when he dealt with the PCCL. I can tell you that he made this country proud.

The newest member of this team, who almost seems like a Caymanian, is the honourable Attorney General. He brought a stature to this parliament that we've been waiting for for a long time. And my good friend the diplomat, the Third Elected Member for George Town, always seems to sooth the waters. We all know that the Minister of Tourism has abilities proven throughout. I think the Fourth Elected Member for George Town alluded the great faith our honourable Financial Secretary has taken into all of these meetings.

We've come a long way, and we still have a distance to go. But we are gradually closing that gap in a manner that the Caymanian public will appreciate. Our position no longer allows us to stand by the sideline and make promises. We are now in the big league. We have to play with the big boys in the manner they demand. We can no longer make promises. They want to see action. That is what this negotiating team has been able to put forward for these Cayman Islands.

I feel confident that as we go forward to address the areas required by the FATF that with God's help and the support of this Legislative Assembly we are all committed to making this thing work. And it can only work with the cohesiveness that is now being demonstrated in this legislature. I just wanted to pay tribute to the negotiating team and to say that with God's help Cayman will continue to ride the success we have had in the past.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Tourism, Commerce, Transport and Works.

Hon. Thomas C. Jefferson: It's fairly easy for me to say that I concur with the comments made by the honourable Third Official Member, the Third Elected Member for George Town, the Honourable Minister responsible for Education, Aviation, and Planning. I can even go so far as to say that I agree with the comments made by the First Elected Member for George Town.

But I think that while the details have been ably presented, it is also important to look at the strides the Cayman Islands have made over the last 16 or more years. I would consider three, or maybe four major steps in the development of the Cayman Islands. Those of us who were present in 1984 and 1986 remember how controversial those movements were as well, when we dealt with the Narcotics Agreement and the Mutual Legal Assistance Treaty. They were not easy items to sell to the financial community or the people of this country, or to legislators to a great extent.

It is heartening to see that on this occasion there is an understanding that this is our future, this is a national item. This is an item that we also want to present with great care to ensure that the financial community responsible for working the amendments to the legislation and the regulations is given sufficient time to understand them thoroughly, understanding of course that not everyone will agree and not everyone will require the same amount of time.

I believe many of the players are in agreement at the moment. Sometimes it's good to give a little more time for them to dot the "i"s and cross the "t"s to make sure they are comfortable with what is put forward.

I believe the First Elected Member for George Town said it's not an issue of what we have to do. We all understand, including the financial community, what has to be done. We just want a little time to look at the legislation and be comfortable with it. This country has moved to another level. It's almost 11 years ago, maybe more, that Euromoney magazine disclosed that the Cayman Islands was the fifth largest banking centre in the world. When we reach that level, it requires a degree of responsibility.

We are also aware that everything is changing, including the world of international finance. I think many countries are concerned about e-commerce and the speed at which goods and services are being done through that technology.

Like others, I believe that the team representing government is a very good, very able, team. I believe that most Members in this House believe that what the team has done and will do is in the best interests of this country. We have a responsibility to try to chart the course of this country through turbulence to make sure that the prosperity we currently enjoy continues to abound for our children and theirs. If we are able to accomplish that, I believe that history will record us as having made our mark in this country for the future generations to come.

We know that tourism and financial service business principally drive the economy of this country. Any change causes some anxiety. Certainly that's running today. But I believe that what is being put before the financial community and the people of this country is the answer for the survival of the Cayman Islands in the world of finance.

It's always easy to make negative remarks. It's a lot different when you are in the driver's seat and you have to make the decision. I believe the team has consulted on every occasion before leaving this country to understand the input from the financial community on various matters. It is that approach, and the one reason why the Financial Secretary created the Private Sector Consultative Committee. We should hear the views of the practitioners on any item of significance affecting that industry.

I must offer my grateful thanks for their input and for their frankness, and for their tenacity in holding on to a particular point as well, because sometimes it caused us to think a little bit more about that particular item.

It is now Cayman versus the Globe—we are competing at that level. We have to ensure that whatever is done is done in the best interest of the Cayman Islands in the long term. We have been playing in the big league. We will continue to be in that league as long as we pay attention to what is happening in the metropolitan countries, particularly the G-7.

It's very difficult to predict where we are today. Two months ago we weren't where we are now. Lots of these things came together all at once. Whether we speculate analyse or extrapolate we may arrive at the same conclusion: This is a concerted effort by G-7 to put all of us with some degree of anxiety and pressure. But I believe that what has been carefully thought out and presented for the Cayman Islands has charted a course with OECD.

The Speaker: Can I interrupt you for a moment? We have to change the master tape.

MATER TAPE CHANGED AT 6.03 PM

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Tourism, Commerce, Transport and Works, please continue.

Hon. Thomas C. Jefferson: I believe the negotiating team charted a course for this country through the turbulent waters of the OECD. The point to repeat, and repeat, and repeat, is we were given what we thought was adequate time to negotiate. When we came to FATF there is no justification for what they have done. They didn't come to the Cayman Islands. They didn't consult the government. They decided to put this report together on the Cayman Islands from information they said was available to them.

Even when you've done that, it should be the starting point. But in all equity and fairness, you should then come to the government. If you don't want to fly down here, send the document. Allow some time for the document to be properly perused. I can say with no fear of contradiction that that document was riddled with erroneous information. Even after sending information on two occasions to correct certain inaccuracies in the report, the present report still has errors in it. The items we sent were not taken into account 100 percent.

The next move was we had an invitation to respond in a few days to an invitation to come to Miami, and they were going to give us one hour and a half to make our presentation. We had to answer one question. And we spent one and one half-hours answering the question. They then extended the time closer to two hours, and without being in any way negative or belittling anyone, I observed them scratching around as to what to ask us after the presentation. I thought the presentations done by the Minister of Education, the honourable Attorney General, the honourable Chief Justice of this country, by the Head of the Financial Reporting Unit and the Head of the Monetary Authority were nothing short of excellent.

We even got a little acknowledgement from one of the members that he believed he had made an error in his assessment—which was included in the report.

Then they rushed off to Paris to their meeting. They made their decision to list the Cayman Islands. Then what do we get? We were invited to Miami to answer one question. They put us on a list when the President of that organisation, Phil Galval wrote to us to say we were on that list because there were five items we were weak in. If that was so, why did they not invite us to Miami to speak to those five items?

I agree with the Third Elected Member of George Town: We are the sacrificial lamb in all of this. Any person who examines the details of what went on here will come to the conclusion that there was no fairness, absolutely none, in the way they went about this exercise.

This exercise with FATF versus the exercise by OECD was like apples and oranges—totally different! One had some equity and the other had none, as far as Tom Jefferson is concerned. If I am going to be judged and I have some weaknesses, then do it fairly and I will accept it. And I will do my best to correct it. We didn't have that opportunity. They called us to Miami and gave us one and one half-hours (extended to two) to give a presentation. They asked one question and then told us we failed their Paris meeting because of five items we had weaknesses in.

Hon. Thomas C. Jefferson: As we progress in life we become more mature and mellow and we don't do things we did when we were younger. Sometimes we control our anger and develop more discipline. In life, diplomacy is very important. You can basically make the same point without being in any way rude or discourteous.

Those who wish to use this item as a political item should be rejected by the voting public of these islands. That is not in the best interests of this country. Just in case I wasn't heard properly, I will repeat it: Those persons—including those out there on the marl road calling into Talk Today—who wish to use this item as a political item, the voting public of the Cayman Islands should reject him or her. If we listen to that person we are endangering the younger generation and those to come after them.

When we look around the world, and even around the Caribbean, none are at the level of the Cayman Islands. The quality of life in this country is equal to any place I know. I heard Sweden has the highest standard of living . . . I wouldn't know because I have never been there. But I do know that if you look at Europe, the United States, Canada, and some countries in the South American Continent, even Australia, and even the United Kingdom—let's exclude Scotland for now [Members' laughter]—they can't beat the standard of living in this country.

As a matter of fact, just to be truthful, I believe they are all jealous. Sometimes in the background of all of this you can think about a little jealousy too! How can a little country with 100 square miles have 570 banks, and over $600 billion on its books? This is how it started back in 1982, they came at it by narcotics. And if you think it was an easy time then, we had a deputy manager of one of the major banks in this country being transferred to another job on the West Coast of Africa. When he reached Miami, they held him and put him in jail for four days. When we had lawyers going to Houston to play Cricket and a man walked on the Cricket Court and handed him a witness subpoena. We had the federal prosecutor issuing witness subpoenas to Bank of Nova Scotia in Ft.

Lauderdale to get information on The Bahamas and the Cayman Islands . . . those were difficult days.

But, guess what. We survived it! We survived it by working together. As I have said before in this House, there is no issue in this country that when we put our heads together to deal with it and make it work for our people . . . I say we have a history of doing that. There is no reason we can't do it on this occasion.

So, Mr. Speaker, I want to thank each and every one who participated directly or indirectly. Sometimes we forget how many hours those persons who draft legislation work. Let's not forget them. I am sure the Attorney General will pass the information on, but I want to make sure we all say this publicly. Even the people who work in the Glass House . . . the courtesy extended, the coffee served just to keep us moving on. All of that is an integral part of the accomplishment.

I want to continue to pray that Almighty God continues to pour down his blessings and anointing on the people of the Cayman Islands.

The Speaker: The Elected Member for North Side.

Mrs. Edna M. Moyle: I would like to thank the First Elected Member for West Bay for bringing this matter to the floor of this House. I believe when the public listens to this debate tonight they will understand more clearly what has gone on. I understand much better what took place and where we have reached after listening to the members of the negotiating team. I would like to thank them.

I would like to echo the words of the First Elected Member for George Town when he stated that we must take as much time as we have available to look at this legislation. This is very important legislation for the future of these islands. I believe that we should make sure it is correct.

I would also like to say that we must give the small service providers in this field every opportunity to look at this legislation also so that they may get their houses in order.

This is an election year. I say to those inside these walls and to those trying to get in here, let us handle this OECD and FATF situation very professionally and very carefully or there may be no need for any of us to be within these walls after the election in November 2000. When we campaign, we all say that we are putting the future of these islands first. Let us do that today until these matters are resolved.

I was happy to hear the Third Elected Member for George Town touch on the matter of independent countries. Sad to say, it was brought to my attention yesterday that at a function held in my district every other Tuesday for the elderly, my opposition decided to use the OECD as a political campaign. An elderly person called and told me he was told that if we do what is required by the OECD and FATF that banks will pull out of these islands and the money of the elderly will go with these banks. It is very frightening when we are prepared to frighten our elderly into supporting us. I will never stoop to such irresponsibility.

They were also told that it's time for us to go independent. The Third Elected Member for George Town handled that this morning, so I need not repeat what he said. But independence is not the answer. The answer to the OECD and the FATF is for every member in this Chamber to join hands to see that the proper solutions are put in place whereby this country will continue to prosper and offer our people a decent living.

If we don't handle these situations carefully at this time . . . and I happen to be a grandmother. I would like to see the future of these islands well prepared for them to reap the benefits when I am gone. If these situations are going to be used as political gain, these islands are in for a sad future.

I am sure that those people out there who are voting will realise that these people are using everything they can. They have no idea what will happen to these islands, and some of them don't care, as long as they are elected. I would say to the voters of these islands that we must be careful that we do not just support people because they have nothing else to offer other than to send us further down the ladder.

The Speaker: The Second Elected Member for Bodden Town.

Miss Heather D. Bodden: I just felt compelled to say a few words. Although much has been said here this afternoon in regard to the OECD and FATF and other matters, it all boils down to one thing—God has been good to us. We are truly blessed.

We are fully aware of the Financial Secretary's faith, which he expresses daily. I know he has spent many hours on his knees. It has certainly been a rocky road for the five-man negotiating team, but I think we have to put our faith and trust in the ability of each of these capable men. They will continue steer the good ship Cayman in the right direction.

From what I have heard here today, I am happy to say that I am proud of this negotiating team. They have certainly represented us to the highest and I am indeed comfortable that they will continue to do so. I will only ask for God's continued blessing on each one of them and on the Cayman Islands.

The Speaker: The Honourable Second Official Member.

Hon. David Ballantyne: I just want to add a few words of my own to what's already been said. I hope it will complement the general mood of the House.

I am the most recent arrival, and I appreciate the comments that have been made. The group that I formed part of is a strong-minded group—both individually and collectively. It needs to be because the international initiatives being mounted in respect of so-called tax havens are very strong initiatives indeed. The FATF has some 26 countries as members. The OCED has some 29. These are mainly the developed nations of the world.

Given the metaphors relating to the sea, I regard them as a series of waves that have come at the Cayman Islands. When I worked in the South Pacific in one of the most remote islands and smallest nations in the world, they had excellent sea-faring men there who could guide small boats through the reef. The way they did it (and I could never hope to emulate it) was to watch for the wave. And when the wave came, they would catch the wave and it would take them through the channel, through the reef, and safely to shore—along with all their passengers. In a way, you might think that is something along the lines of what we are trying to do here.

I believe that the OECD wave has already been caught and brought under management satisfactory to the OECD and, ultimately, hopefully satisfactory to the people of these islands.

We have been on the high seas with the FATF. And to some extent, we may still be. But I believe that the solutions are here and that we can achieve them if we are prepared to catch that wave at the right time. I think that time is now.

Time is of the essence. I think we all understand this. But the most important factor I see in this is not really so much the legal issue, but more the issue of maintaining confidence in the Cayman Islands and its present and future prosperity. That involves not just taking members of the Legislative Assembly along, but also those in the wider community, particularly the financial services industry. So, I support that we work together with them and Members of the House in a collaborative way so that they fully understand the implications of what's being contemplated.

Much of this is not really new. Much of it represents a mandatory code of practice, if you like. The balance represents international cooperation, which is what you are expected to do if you are part of the global community. The Cayman Islands is obviously determined to be and to remain a part of that community.

I would simply say that I think a very eminent figure had the expression that to work is to pray. If that's the case, we've been doing a lot of praying! I believe that by working through this we will come to solutions that are acceptable not just within the islands but without the islands, and to be able to hold up our heads in a credible and respectable way and be believed and respected as I believe is already the case in many quarters.

But as was said earlier, in order to play in the big league, you have to play by big league rules. The big league rules are the international standards that prevail. If there is a question mark as to whether we do or do not comply with them, in my respectful opinion (which I think is the view of the group), we have to put that issue beyond doubt. The proposals that will be discussed here over the next few days will hopefully do that.

I am glad that the opportunity has been taken to distinguish the various initiatives, the OECD from the FATF initiative, and the KPMG issue. We are trying to anticipate the KPMG issue with some of these proposals. They will not just serve the purposes of the FATF initiative they will go a long way to meeting the potential for comment in the KPMG review.

I would simply remind us that it's not just passing laws or bringing regulations into force; it's about the implementation of them. That point was well made in the United States recently. Therefore, we need to put measures in place. We need to talk about them first so that they are well understood. But commitments have been made—not just as to what, but as to when. And while I don't wish to emphasise the speed at the expense of understanding, I think we need to do both.

I can only finish my brief contribution (and I hope it will be a continuing one) to echo the motto of my old school which is "Omne Nunc Arti Magistra," which is Latin for "Now with all Masterly Skill."

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for West Bay.

Mr. W. McKeeva Bush: This has been a marathon! I would certainly like to thank you for your patience for allowing members to speak their minds and their feelings while there was no question before this honourable House.

I am glad that members have spoken. There was a real feeling that something awesome happened here! When I saw this matter of the G-7 and the various international initiatives they have put forward, when I saw them raise their heads, I felt that the old way of doing business in these islands would not be the same. An era in the world was passing. Perhaps we should accept it and do what is necessary to live and have our being.

No one knows with any certainty what is going to come next. The truth is that when this country gives one concession, the goalpost is shifted. That's what I have observed. As an international business centre, we are watched every day and every hour by the world. I don't think that this House or any other institution, or anyone, should pull the wool over the eyes of the public in any way, shape, or form.

These Islands sit in a precarious position. Tourism is having problems. And we have to be vigilant with these measures taken against the financial industry. We have to be watchful. We have to take the necessary steps to be transparent because that is what the world is demanding from us—that is, make the Monetary Authority really independent, and that is also to make members of Executive Council remove themselves from boards for which they don't own anything. Then the financial industry, with a sufficient regulatory system, will be that much better off to implement those things they have asked us to implement.

When we do that, make sure that what we are implementing is not just for one side of the fence in the financial industry. In other words, that what obtains for the big business obtains for the small man also.

Mr. Speaker, what the G-7 has said is clean up your act. It is of no use to say that we are a sacrificial lamb, as someone termed it. What else do we expect? We are but a pawn being moved here and there as we have always been—that's a fact. But we do not want to stand up and say 'leave us alone a little bit.'

Mr. Speaker, for one thing we cannot fight the G-7 and we cannot go independent. Mind you, in recent times I have heard that flung around a lot by people who have never really talked about it before. It's being freely talked about today. But I am not going to agree with any candidate using these issues for the basis of independence. Never!

I listened to what the [Third Elected] Member for George Town (who was on the team) and the Financial Secretary said. They really outlined their position. We are on two hit lists out of three. Now, I think the team failed there. And to say that the islands sent its best . . . let's just be smart and say it sent some of its best.

But for all that, we have to pull together. As I said when I resigned from Executive Council, this issue is bigger than me. It is bigger than politics. It is bigger than a role in Executive Council. These are the islands we love, live in, move, and have our being. This is our home where we want to be. So, we have to pull together on this issue—all of us.

Mr. Speaker, we are being bombarded. The ship Cayman Islands is in rough waters. Having listened to all that has been said in here and to what has been said and done on the outside, what worries me most is that there are some people—and they have more means to be heard than sometimes those of us in this House—who know it all and who have an answer for everything. They have the cure in their hands.

Seeing that we are bombarded, seeing that we are having competition from our biggest source of tourism, seeing the financial industry has its problems, what worries me is that these people are saying they have the answers. Where will the funds come from to run the country when there is this attitude that we don't need developers and investors? Where are the funds going to come from?

You see some of them are too young to remember some of the things that happened in our region. I remember a certain country saying to the investors there, 'We don't need you. Go! There are one hundred flights. Go! We don't need you.' We used that dollar. Today, where is our dollar? And where is their dollar? We welcomed it with open arms. Maybe we did not do the right things, but our people prospered.

What worries me most in what I am seeing, is that we have those people who don't want this and don't want that. Let no one say that times are not changing. I certainly believe that there will be a state of flux for some time. Yes, there is going to be some hurt. And I think we need to say that because I believe that. But if we have that state of flux and you drive out investors and you drive out development, who pays the bills to educate the children? Who pays the bills to build the highways that they want? Who pays the bills to get the schools that they want?

Mr. Speaker, I would urge our public to listen carefully to who is saying what. I would say to those on the negotiating team, in fairness to democracy, if the politicians in the team thump their chests (as some will probably have a right to do), then what do they believe the politicians on the outside of this House are going to do in this election year? I will just leave that in the air.

We are blessed. There are no two ways about that. God has had his hand on our country because we have been a God-fearing people. It took guts, understanding, and patience to get us where we are. I for one will not mislead anyone in this election year. If I have to lose my seat, let it be so. I have served for sixteen years and I accomplished a lot when there were those who felt I would not have accomplished anything.

I am going to say to the public, be careful of whom you are talking to and who you are listening to, and who you are getting information from because some of them will say and do anything in this election year.

It is bad that all of this has happened in this election year. That is the sad part of this. If these negotiations were at any other time it might not have been as hyped up as it is. When we talk about the other times, 1982 as some ministers spoke about, and 1986, I was in this House some of those times and there was no hype. But it is an election year. Obviously, people are disgruntled about many things, and that is democracy and that is the way it is. But I am going to say to the public, be careful of who you are listening to.

Mr. Speaker, I think the government has been lax in letting the public know what is fact and what is speculation. I am saying this with no indifference to other members. But the two members, the Financial Secretary, and the Third Elected Member for George Town who outlined the position, I think have made matters clearer. That is why I took the initiative to rise today on a matter of urgent public business, and I thank them for it.

Again, I think the House should say thanks to you for your indulgence and your patience for allowing us to speak our minds while there were no question before the House. Thank you.

The Speaker: I think that concludes the deliberation on this. Is it the will of the House that we adjourn at this time or do we go on with private members' motions? The Honourable Minister for Tourism, Commerce, Transport and Works?

Hon. Thomas C. Jefferson: Mr. Speaker, I think we have a willingness to go home.

The Speaker: Will you just move the motion for the adjournment then please?

ADJOURNMENT

Hon. Thomas C. Jefferson: I am happy to move the adjournment of this Honourable House until 10.00 tomorrow morning.

The Speaker: The question is that this Honourable House do now adjourn until 10.00 a.m. tomorrow. Those in favour please say Aye. Those against No.

AYES.

The Speaker: The Ayes have it. The Honourable House stands adjourned until 10.00 a.m. tomorrow.

AT 6.45 PM THE HOUSE STOOD ADJOURNED UNTIL 10.00 AM THURSDAY, 13 JULY 2000.

EDITED
THURSDAY
13 JULY 2000
10.34 AM

[Prayers read by the Fourth Elected Member for George Town]

The Speaker: Please be seated. Proceedings are resumed. Item 2 on today's Order Paper, Reading by the Speaker of Messages and Announcements.

READING BY THE SPEAKER OF
MESSAGES AND ANNOUNCEMENTS

The Speaker: I have received apologies for absence from the Honourable First Official Member who is on leave. The Honourable Second and Third Official Members will be arriving later this morning, and the Honourable Minister responsible for Agriculture, Communications, Environment and Natural Resources will be arriving later this morning. The Honourable Minister responsible for Community Affairs, Sports, Women, Youth and Culture is overseas on official business, and the Fourth Elected Member for West Bay is not well.

The Speaker: Moving on to item 3, Questions to Honourable Members/Ministers. Deferred question 24 stands in the name of the Third Elected Member for Bodden Town.

QUESTIONS TO HONOURABLE
MEMBERS/MINISTERS

QUESTION 34

No. 34: Mr. Roy Bodden asked the Honourable Minister responsible for the Ministry of Education, Aviation and Planning what requirements must be completed in order to graduate from the John Gray High School.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for Education, Aviation, and Planning.

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: The requirements to be completed in order to graduate from the John Gray High School are as follows:

1. Students must maintain a satisfactory effort performance throughout their three years of senior schooling. The performance grades for effort range from 1-5 with grade 3 being designated as satisfactory. The grade description for grade 3 is described as 'meeting minimum requirements.'

2. The second requirement is that students must maintain a satisfactory conduct grade of 3 or above.

3. Attendance must be 90 percent or above. Excused absences are not held against the student, eg, medical notes or legitimate written excuses from parents/guardians.

4. The student must not accumulate a total of more than 14 suspensions during his/her schooling at John Gray High School.

SUPPLEMENTARIES

The Speaker: The Third Elected Member for Bodden Town.

Mr. Roy Bodden: Can the honourable minister tell the House whether the performance grades have to do with any final exam in the final year of school, or does it have to do with accumulative effort of the number of years spent in the high school?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for Education, Aviation, and Planning.

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: It relates to achievement over the period. Tests are included, but the final exams many times don't come until quite late.

The Speaker: The Third Elected Member for Bodden Town.

Mr. Roy Bodden: Are we then to understand that there is no set standard exam that all school leavers sit?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for Education, Aviation, and Planning.

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: The standard exams at the end, the results usually come back in August. Those obviously can't be used for the graduation, which is in July. But there is testing and achievement assessment throughout the three years.

The Speaker: The Third Elected Member for Bodden Town.

Mr. Roy Bodden: Can the honourable minister say whether any consideration has been given to requiring all students to sit an internal exam prior to their sitting the external exams so that at least there could be a recognised exam that all of the students sit in addition to the external exams?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for Education, Aviation, and Planning.

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: We have testing and assessment, which are joint methods of doing this. If the honourable member is referring to the American SAT, for example, while that is given to students who wish to take it, it's not mandatory.

The Speaker: The Third Elected Member for West Bay.

Mr. John D. Jefferson, Jr.: Can the honourable minister say how a grade in the area of satisfactory effort performance is determined? And who is responsible for determining the criteria for graduation?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for Education, Aviation, and Planning.

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: The school's academic committee determines these grades and they are basically as follows: 1 is excellent; 2 is good; 3 is satisfactory; 4 unsatisfactory; and 5 very poor.

The Education Council set the criteria here. In other words, you are asking who determines the 90% policy. The Education Council does.

The Speaker: The Third Elected Member for West Bay.

Mr. John D. Jefferson, Jr.: Would the honourable minister agree that this effort performance grade is somewhat subjective? Can he maybe give us a little more detail on how that is arrived at?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for Education, Aviation, and Planning.

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: The teachers who deal with this grading are teachers who normally have to grade testing and grade the students anyhow. They are competent and qualified to grade. It is done over a period of three years which I believe is a fairer way and gives more consistency than a one-off test that perhaps the member and I were used to. On a day that you were ill or something, you could do very badly. This is one of the things constantly kept under review.

The other thing I must say is that we have seen that education over the years has moved more to a highbred of the English pure test and the American assessment only to where it is being bridged and there is part testing and part assessment. I think the balance is good.

The Speaker: The Third Elected Member for West Bay.

Mr. John D. Jefferson, Jr.: Can the honourable minister say whether or not this situation is communicated to the students during the year? For example, if a student gets a 4 as far as effort and his attendance is 86 rather than 90, what happens? Do they sit with the student and his parents?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for Education, Aviation, and Planning.

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: Approximately every ten weeks they are graded, and the grades are given to them, discussed with them and with their parents and guardians. So there is consistency in that and these can be followed through the child's period in school.

The Speaker: The Fourth Elected Member for George Town.

Dr. Frank McField: I noted that there are four requirements here to be completed. But we don't have any requirement that is academic. Can the honourable minister say what the academic requirements are for graduation?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for Education, Aviation, and Planning.

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: The requirements include the performance grades. These grades would range over the whole range of subjects, whether academic, vocational or otherwise. Then there are the others, satisfactory conduct, attendance, and discipline.

The Speaker: The Fourth Elected Member for George Town.

Dr. Frank McField: What I am really trying to understand is if there is any assessment at all of the academic ability of the student before he passes out of the system.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for Education, Aviation, and Planning.

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: Yes, there is. I mean, there is the Caribbean Examinations Council, there is the GCSE . . . and let me just say this. Maybe this is what the member is referring to: If there is a special needs child for example, that child's assessment would be done in relation to that child's special needs. He would not be penalised because of those special needs, but the assessment would still be done.

The Speaker: The Third Elected Member for Bodden Town.

Mr. Roy Bodden: I believe honourable members would like to find out if it is a fact that all of the students graduating from the John Gray High School take these external exams?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for Education, Aviation, and Planning.

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: All except a very small number of students take some external exam. Remember that there is a broad range of external exams. There are the two different grades within CXC. There is the Certificate of Education (COE) that some take, but by and large, with the exception of a small amount they take some type of external exam.

The Speaker: The Third Elected Member for Bodden Town.

Mr. Roy Bodden: Can the honourable minister tell the House what provision is made for that small amount? And can the minister also give the House an indication of the number in this so-called small amount? What provision is made for them to take some kind of academic assessment or exam?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for Education, Aviation, and Planning.

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: I understand it is probably ten to 12 (in number) that will not take . . . let me just say that I have tried to answer these questions to try to get . . . and these are the last of my questions. But I have one handicap with this. I don't have my principal here, I don't have my chief education officer, I don't have my deputy. But I decided that I would answer the balance of these questions today. It's ten to 12 students who don't sit it. Those who do not sit some type of external exam are then tested internally at the school.

The Speaker: The Elected Member for North Side.

Mrs. Edna M. Moyle: Would the honourable minister expand on the type of test given to these ten or 12 students? Are these students tested to ensure that when they leave high school they are qualified in the 3 R's so they can go into the workforce and land a job?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for Education, Aviation, and Planning.

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: I don't have the contents of those tests. I will have to get those and get them sent to the honourable member.

The Speaker: Are there any further supplementaries? If not, we move on to question 35, standing in the name of the Third Elected Member for Bodden Town.

QUESTION 35

No. 35: Mr. Roy Bodden asked the Honourable Minister responsible for the Ministry of Education, Aviation and Planning to state the terms of reference given for the Millet Report.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for Education, Aviation, and Planning.

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: The remit of the Education Department was to review the organisation, administration, efficiency and effectiveness of the Education Department in the light of their self-assessment report; make recommendations for improvement and prepare a report with executive summary for the Honourable Minister of Education, Aviation and Planning.

SUPPLEMENTARIES

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Can the honourable minister explain the procedure for that self-assessment report?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for Education, Aviation, and Planning.

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: The best I can do on that is what Mrs. Millet stated, the approach to the review is similar to that already used by the Cayman Islands School Inspectorate, namely, internal self-evaluation by the department followed by external review. She also stated that the working methods for the review were as wide-ranging and consultative as possible.

As I understand it, the department would look at its different functions, its purposes. It would do an evaluation, look at its strengths and its weaknesses, and they would then do . . . what it does is really force a person to look at himself and say this is the weakness in what I am doing, these are the strengths. It's part of the process of accountability, and I thank the member for helping me with that.

The Speaker: The Third Elected Member for Bodden Town.

Mr. Roy Bodden: Can the honourable minister say whether such a review had been previously undertaken during his administration?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for Education, Aviation, and Planning.

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: You know, my Permanent Secretary, Mrs. Basdeo, and I pioneered the strategic planning process many years ago. I am afraid this is probably the first time any department of government has been through this type of assessment and inspection that I know of. Indeed, it's the first time all of the schools had been subjected to an independent inspection.

So, it's a novel thing. And the answer is, no, I didn't do it before. But I don't think anyone else has done it. In fact, one good day I think it may be good for us to do it within the Legislative Assembly and get an external facility to try to look at some of our weaknesses—like spending so much time in here on questions!

The Speaker: The Third Elected Member for Bodden Town.

Mr. Roy Bodden: Mr. Speaker, does the honourable Minister of Education realise that the electorate does that every four years?

The Speaker: Do you wish to reply honourable minister?

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: Not really. That was meant to be very light. I am glad the honourable member took it in that way.

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: When we talk about this self-assessment report (and the answer stated "was to review the organisation, administration, efficiency and effectiveness of the Education Department in the light of their self-assessment report") . . . is that to say that the review by Mrs Millet was on the results of the self-assessment report? Is that the case?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for Education, Aviation, and Planning.

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: That had to be taken into account. But then Mrs. Millet did her own independent assessment, the same as the Inspectorate would do.

It looks like the department undertook self-assessment and as a result sent questionnaires to principals and teachers. Responses by staff of the department, by teachers and principals identified a series of issues for action. So that was done, and then Mrs. Millet in considerable detail went in and looked at the weaknesses.

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: What I was asking has not been answered. The substantive answer said "The remit for the review of the Education Department was to review the organisation, administration, efficiency and effectiveness of the Education Department in the light of their self-assessment report, make recommendations for improvement and prepare a report with executive summary for the Honourable Minister of Education, Aviation and Planning."

In my view, this limits the process employed by Mrs. Millet to the results of the self-assessment report. I am not suggesting that is the case, that is the way I interpret the answer as written. If that is not the case, the minister has said that Mrs. Millet dealt with the weaknesses in this self-assessment report and then went in and examined those weaknesses.

I am trying to determine if there was any other methodology employed by Mrs. Millet when it came down to actually doing the review, and it did extend beyond the answer given. If so, give us some information on that please.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for Education, Aviation, and Planning.

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: What I understand "in the light of" is the same as "having regard to." In other words, her assessment had to take into consideration the self-assessment. But it is not limited to that.

When the member sees the report he will see the detail. It went way beyond that ambit.

The Speaker: I would appreciate a motion for the suspension of Standing Order 23(7) & (8).

SUSPENSION OF STANDING ORDER 23 (7) AND (8)

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: I move the suspension of Standing Order 23(7) & (8) to allow Question Time to continue.

The Speaker: I shall put the question that we suspend Standing Order 23(7) & (8) to allow Question Time to continue beyond the hour of 11 o'clock. Those in favour please say Aye, those against No.

AYES.

The Speaker: The Ayes have it. Question Time will continue.

AGREED: STANDING ORDER 23(7) AND (8) SUSPENDED TO ALLOW QUESTION TIME TO CONTINUE BEYOND 11.00 AM.

The Speaker: Are there any further supplementaries? If not, we move on to question 36 standing in the name of the Third Elected Member for West Bay.

QUESTION 36

No. 36: Mr. John D. Jefferson, Jr. asked the Honourable Minister responsible for the Ministry of Education, Aviation and Planning if the Millet Review of the Education Department has been completed and, if so, when will the report be laid on the Table of this Honourable House.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for Education, Aviation, and Planning.

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: The Millet Review of the Education Department was completed on 20 April 2000. It is presently being reviewed at ministry level and will be laid on the Table of this Honourable House during, or before, the Third Meeting of the Legislative Assembly in September.

SUPPLEMENTARIES

The Speaker: The Third Elected Member for West Bay.

Mr. John D. Jefferson, Jr.: Can the honourable minister give us some detail on what he means by “being reviewed at the ministry level”?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for Education, Aviation, and Planning.

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: Yesterday I dealt with the details relating to this. As with the Inspectorate Reports, there is consultation on the report, a consensus is attempted to be reached in as many areas as possible. The other thing is that we have the old Chief Education Officer leaving. We have Mrs. Nyda Flatley the new Education Officer coming in. And also the Chief Inspector is going out, and we have Mrs. Rodrigues, a Caymanian, coming in. We felt that a bit of time should be given to have some settling of these two (very important and critical to the report) in place to deal with that. Then we present it. And in the September meeting I would like to present the results of those consultations.

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: If I understood what the minister just said, that has no bearing on the tabling of that report. Can the honourable minister explain how simply tabling the report will have any bearing on the functions of these new people? Can it be that the minister is buying time to try to deal with some of the issues in the report before he tables it? There can be no reason why the report can't be tabled as the minister has said to us that he was going to table the report in this sitting.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for Education, Aviation, and Planning.

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: When I table the report, along with it will go an action plan, as is done with action plans when schools are inspected. It will say what is going to be done to deal with the matters.

Looking at this politically, tabling it near the election is worse than tabling it now. So, if I was looking at this from a political point of view I would never have done this report. Remember that this is totally new. I am now inspecting and have had the bravery to not only inspect the schools of this country and make it public, but now I am inspecting the department—something that hitherto had not been done.

I have nothing in the line of politics to worry about. I will put it out and I will take my political licks as they may be. But I am going to do it right. That's what's important to the school system of this country—that it is done right. If that means political loss, so be it.

One thing that can no longer be leveled at me—and I notice it is never leveled anymore . . . they wanted transparency, it sure is as transparent as it comes these days. Every school, and now the department . . . there's nothing left to be transparent. Maybe that's the frustration.

The Speaker: The Third Elected Member for Bodden Town.

Mr. Roy Bodden: I can assure the minister that there is no frustration.

Can the honourable minister categorically say whether any attempt will be made to address the recommendations between the time the report was received and will be tabled? If the answer is in the negative, can he tell the House why he has not moved to save some critical time by dealing with some of the recommendations within that time frame?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for Education, Aviation, and Planning.

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: Action plans will be drawn up. That takes some time. That's why I explained about having a new Chief Education Officer just coming in now, and having a new Chief Inspector just coming in now. There are also budgetary aspects of this that will not be implemented until that area of the budget is passed. But I don't think it would be right to just come out with a report without doing this comprehensively and giving the department a right to look at this and the solutions to some of these problems. I am certain the member will get it in September—real close to the election,

The Speaker: The Third Elected Member for Bodden Town.

Mr. Roy Bodden: Let me ensure that the minister and the House understand: It is not true to say that nothing is being done in the interim. The minister is saying that the action plans are being put together, budgetary proposals are being arrived at and when the plan is tabled then all these will be in place, hopefully. Is that correct?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for Education, Aviation, and Planning.

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: Yes, Mr. Speaker, as much as I can get. As a teacher, the honourable member knows what happens during the summer. The teachers and the staff take vacation.

Whether or not I have that complete, I will make sure the member gets that. I will table that report in September. I give that undertaking. If I only have half the action plans, I will table it with the half.

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: I noticed in answer to the supplementary questions the minister has not mentioned any relationship with the action plans to the Strategic Education Plan. Can the honourable minister explain what kind of tying in there will be with the plan that was rolled over for 2000 - 2005? Does that rollover (which I believe was completed prior to the Millet Report) mean there will be amendments to the action plans?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for Education, Aviation, and Planning.

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: The Education Plan 2000-2005 provides a framework within which the department and schools are required to plan and deliver high quality efficient education. It is therefore central to the department's work and has been one of the cornerstones against which its work and effectiveness are assessed.

The other major cornerstones relating to that review are the functional responsibilities of the education department as set out in the Education Law, and its role in relation to the Education Council to provide policy advice to the minister on educational matters.

The review assesses the effectiveness of the department in relation to the delivery of both its functional responsibilities as set out in law and its responsibilities in policy implementation as set out in the Five-Year Development Plan.

I should just mention that the new five year plan is basically a review of the previous five year plan, together with one extra strategy and the action plans that go along with that, which to a large extent took into account strategy 3 of the Vision 2008, the Ten-year National Strategic Plan.

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: The minister again mentioned the revised national strategic education plan, which he now terms the 200-2005 plan. Is there any special reason why he has not tabled that plan to this point in time?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for Education, Aviation, and Planning.

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: The only thing I haven't tabled is the strategy, which I am having copied. But if members will recall, I mentioned that I will have to get that. But I will lay that on the Table. I don't have any problems with that. I read it out and what I have is a faxed draft of it. I am getting it copied, and I will be happy to lay it on the Table.

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: No, I haven't tabled it. I mentioned strategy 10. What I have is a copy that came about a month or so ago. The action plans had not been completed, but I am happy to table that understanding that that part has to be done. So, when you get it, the full action plans relating to the implementation aspects won't be in it. I am getting it photocopied and you can by all means have it.

You have ten strategies and 109 action plans, four of which are in strategy 10. It follows the strategy under the Vision plan.

The Speaker: Two additional supplementaries.
The First Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Maybe you won't treat this as one, because I am trying to get clarification on the previous question. The minister said that the only thing he hadn't laid was the action plan. What has the minister laid?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for Education, Aviation, and Planning.

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: The member needs to get legal advice on how to ask two questions in one!

What has been laid is the nine strategies and the 105 action plans, which is that thick document that was laid quite awhile back. I have not yet laid strategy 10. I am getting that copied. But I just need to mention that there are blanks in areas of it because they have not done those. So, that's what I was really referring to. That was really not a question, so he is entitled to another one.

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: To grasp what has been done with the rollover, it would be very kind of the minister if we could see the difference between the original plan and the result of the review.

I now understand that the minister laid the original plan, which was 1995 to 1999. We now have a 2000 to 2005 plan. I am saying that there must be a document containing that entire plan. That's what I am asking the minister . . . when will he get that plan or review to us?

The question I wanted to if this action plan is based on the Millet Report?

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: No, Mr. Speaker. Strategy 10 deals with the Vision 2008 and the strategy in there. What has happened with the reviews is that some action plans have been dropped, some have been added. But one extra strategy has come in.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: What is going to accompany the Millet Report?

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: Action plans relating to the report. But I will also give you strategy 10 and the action plans.

The Speaker: This is the final supplementary. The First Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: I am trying to determine if this action plan that has to accompany the Millet Report (in fairness to all concerned so that it can be assessed and shown what the intentions are to cure whatever the ills may be, so to speak) . . . what part of the 2000 to 2005 rollover plan . . . is that separate? Has that been incorporated? Will it be incorporated? What form will it take?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for Education, Aviation, and Planning.

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: Action plans will come forward with the Millet Report. At the next review of the five-year education plan, they will then be considered and decisions not just on those, but on the whole plan. If there are action plans that are not working, that may need to be varied or dropped, they will be dropped. But that will be a very important part of the consideration of the next review of the education plan.

The Speaker: Moving on to question 37, standing in the name of the Third Elected Member for Bodden Town.

QUESTION 37

No. 37: Mr. Roy Bodden asked the Honourable Minister responsible for the Ministry of Tourism, Commerce, Transport and Works what is the objective of the Tourism Department in hosting the country music shows as announced in the media.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Tourism, Commerce, Transport and Works.

Hon. Thomas C. Jefferson: The FinFair Country Music Project has a number of objectives:

- To create a new marketing opportunity for the Cayman Islands by way of cross marketing opportunities with country music stars.

In this instance the opportunities will emerge from working with artists who have significant established audiences/fan clubs and who can, by virtue of the experience which they had while here, provide personal testimonials of their experiences and its high value for others to come and enjoy long after they have visited. The Cayman Islands product endorsement by these personalities has a significant bearing on the desire of their fan club members to want to go where their star has been, or be there while their star is there.

- To build synergy between either high profile country music stars or up and coming new stars whose interests blend well with the product/social values and lifestyle of the Cayman Islands.

- To be able to offer the Cayman Islands' community an opportunity to enjoy these musicians for a nominal fee.
- To use all proceeds from the events to support a local charity, thereby allowing tourism activities to participate in the ongoing social development of these Islands.
- To provide concert settings which would be relatively small, thus allowing both local and overseas participants to get up close to the artist which is not possible in a large concert setting.
- To grow business from areas where artists' fan clubs are based which are not necessarily traditional Cayman Islands' markets.
- To use events tourism strategies in order to expand on the mix of visitors coming to the Cayman Islands particularly in the traditional slow months.

SUPPLEMENTARIES

The Speaker: The Third Elected Member for Bodden Town.

Mr. Roy Bodden: Can the honourable minister tell the House if there has been any assessment on the success of this? And, if so, can he provide details to the House at this time?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Tourism, Commerce, Transport and Works.

Hon. Thomas C. Jefferson: The programme began just a few months ago. It is being monitored. There are some areas that need further consideration and we will monitor it as we go forward. But it's really too early to decide whether or not it is working. I have seen these stars interviewed on various television channels and they have given personal testimonials of their time in the Cayman Islands. That has a significant influence in the marketplace, both to their fan clubs and to others. It's a new thing. It will take some time to work it properly and see the benefit of it. But certainly, I believe the country music world goes hand-in-hand with Cayman both now and in the past.

The Speaker: The Fourth Elected Member for George Town.

Dr. Frank McField: Can the honourable minister say if the DOT has any projected revenue to be derived from such activities that would go towards the ongoing social development of these islands?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Tourism, Commerce, Transport and Works.

Hon. Thomas C. Jefferson: In putting this programme together, we were not focusing on how much revenue we could earn from it. It was more exposure for the country and being used as a marketing tool. The amount charged for attendance is nominal. Whatever the proceeds amount to will be given to a charity to be established under the Miss Cayman Islands Pageant for a children's charity.

The Speaker: The Fourth Elected Member for George Town.

Dr. Frank McField: Can the honourable minister say what the budget for this particular project is?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Tourism, Commerce, Transport and Works.

Hon. Thomas C. Jefferson: I didn't bring that particular detail this morning. I can undertake to provide that to the member.

The Speaker: The Fourth Elected Member for George Town.

Dr. Frank McField: I would appreciate getting that information. Can the honourable minister give us the information as to how many such events DOT is sponsoring at the moment? I know that there is Aviation Week . . . what else is there? How many of these events is the DOT involved with?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Tourism, Commerce, Transport and Works.

Hon. Thomas C. Jefferson: Let me focus on this particular FinFair. The event is a monthly appearance by one or two country music stars. It began in May and will run through October. There is some possibility of November, and I mention that just for information.

In terms of what the DOT and the ministry are involved with in other respects, we have Pirate's Week, Aviation Week, Angling Club's Million Dollar Month, and I think those are the major ones at the moment.

The Speaker: The Fourth Elected Member for George Town.

Dr. Frank McField: Can the honourable minister say whether the hotel associations are involved in sponsorship when the singers come here? Who pays for the rooms? Who pays for the food? Who pays for the transportation?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Tourism, Commerce, Transport and Works.

Hon. Thomas C. Jefferson: Without getting into detail, there is participation and support from the local Hotel Association.

The Speaker: The Elected Member for North Side.

Mrs. Edna M. Moyle: Can the honourable minister expand on the local children's charity under the Miss Cayman Islands Committee? Is this for special needs children, or handicapped children?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Tourism, Commerce, Transport and Works.

Hon. Thomas C. Jefferson: If memory serves me correctly we are talking about a foundation called Love the Children Foundation. The funds will be used to assist children whether handicapped or otherwise—those who have perhaps special needs. It's a way of trying to raise funds in a way that will focus on the children of our country. I think it's a very useful and productive way of meeting some of the needs of the young population.

The Speaker: Are there any further supplementaries? If not, that concludes Question Time for today. Moving on to item 4, Other Business, Private Members' Motions. Private Member's Motion No. 14/2000, continuation of debate on the amendment thereto.

OTHER BUSINESS

PRIVATE MEMBERS' MOTIONS

PRIVATE MEMBER'S MOTION NO. 14/00

PUBLIC EDUCATION SYSTEM AMENDMENT THERETO

(Continuation of debate on the amendment)

The Speaker: As I said yesterday, if no further member wishes to speak to the amendment, I will put the question on the amendment and then entertain debate on the motion as amended.

The First Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: I am going to seek your guidance, sir. There is an issue I wish to draw to the attention of members, and to seek a reply from the minister. I believe it is a very important issue. I believe I can prove its relevance in the said debate on the amendment. But if you wait until I wind up, the minister would not be able to give any reply.

If I can be allowed that, then when the minister winds up on the amendment he would be able to reply. Can you just guide me as to what to do?

The Speaker: Could this be done informally outside the Chamber?

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: After much consideration, I believe that the issue needed to be aired publicly. But that is me, and I don't have any other way of explaining it to you sir.

The Speaker: I have a procedural problem with that because the minister has moved the amendment and he does not have a right to speak again to the amendment. But if it's important, I will—

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: With the greatest of respect, if the minister moves the amendment, does he not wind up the amendment after everyone else speaks?

The Speaker: He will wind up, but you are asking him to make a specific answer.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: No sir. I meant that he could use the opportunity in winding up his debate on the amendment to deal with the issue if I speak now.

The Speaker: You will have to deal with the minister, as the Chair cannot control what the minister says.

Procedurally, I cannot allow one member to speak twice on a motion or on an amendment. I now propose that if someone wants to speak specifically to the amendment, whether for or against, that they now rise.

The First Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Having explained and knowing the risk, I will just have to take the chance. I am rising to speak to the amendment. I presume the minister will find it possible to reply in his winding up on the amendment.

The minister's amendment to the substantive motion on public education refers has added another "Whereas" clause which reads: "AND WHEREAS the Five-year National Education Plan has been extended, updated and rolled over into the National Education Plan 2000 to 2005 and a new strategy with four action plans (which has not yet been costed or detailed) which incorporates Strategy 3 of the National Strategic Plan 1999 – 2008 (Vision 2008) which plan was approved by this Legislative Assembly . . ."

If I look in the Vision 2008 document under strategy 3, which is referred to in this amendment, the preamble reads: "We will support an educational system which identifies and develops the abilities of all persons encouraging them to realise their full potential."

What that says to me is that the mover of the amendment—who has stated in that amendment that strategy 3, which will be incorporated into whatever final plan is delivered—is taking on the position that this country will do everything possible to ensure that everyone will realise their full potential.

In recent months we have encountered several problems. I don't stand here professing to have all the answers, but in my view there is a huge problem with the number of students either not being allowed to graduate or in the latest instance not being allowed to complete their studies at certain institutions because they have not met certain standards set out by that institution. In my view, this seems to be counterproductive to the preamble of this strategy.

I went to school. I know what it is for a system to have to incorporate discipline. I know what it is for a system to have to set academic standards to be achieved also. We have no solutions to the problem.

For instance, in the public system there's a chain of command that involves the education department, the education council and some type of committee at the schools making certain decisions based on policy. They have to make those decisions, and when it's all over we have parents complaining that their child was not allowed to graduate. It is going to have a far-reaching negative impact on the future of their lives. But on the other side, we have a system that will have a lack of incentive to achieve if sanctions are not employed.

I know that you have to set standards in the schools. And I appreciate all the good reasons for setting these standards. I also appreciate that if you don't, there is a difficulty. But when this whole thing is over, and these students who have completed the years of secondary education (and I am limiting the argument to that right now) . . . they are not equipped to go on to any higher education. There is no specific type of vocational or technical training that will start them off from scratch. They don't have the skills to go into the job market, let alone a piece of paper stating they satisfactorily completed any type of secondary education. And that's a major problem.

I want to say this carefully because I don't want my intentions to be misunderstood. The most recent incident has developed at the Triple C School. We have some individuals who have not necessarily been told that they can't graduate, but between Years 7 and 12 because of the system they have deployed, there are seven students who have been told that they cannot return to school for the next term. Having gone through that system they have not met the standards and the sanction is that they have to go.

If my understanding is correct, they have been told they can go to another school for another term. And if they are able to bring those standards up to a satisfactory level during that term, then they can come back to Triple C afterwards and continue. There is a huge logistics problem there. By the time a student is removed from a system and a location to take one term to get back up to scratch, if that term is going to be spent getting familiar with the new surroundings and whatever the new system is . . . it's a problem.

If certain standards are not set, there's a high risk of the achievement level being below par. But in my view, it is almost going to be physically impossible for any one of those students to achieve what they say they will have to achieve to come back into the stream of things to complete their education. They have spent most of their learning lives in a certain system, and will have great difficulty continuing anywhere else on this island within that type of system. Worse is that in the vast majority of instances it had nothing to do with any behavioural problem. It was all to do with achievement.

As I said, I don't have the answers. But I believe this is not something that we can put aside. I believe it is very important and I don't raise the issue to use this forum in the Legislative Assembly to say to the board at that school that they are making the biggest mistake of their lives, and you can't do this, that this is the government of the country so you have to do different. I am not saying that. I understand the difficulties on both sides of the coin. But I know that there is a huge risk with these individuals. And no one can begin to say this is what the end result will be. These children are at risk!

My argument extends throughout the entire system. I have known where it was simply a matter of effort—nothing to do with behaviour. He took all of the external exams, but there was not enough effort and the child did not graduate.

It is not to say that whoever sets the standards and sanctions for the standard is blindly wrong. But what do we do after that? It's a major problem! We cannot leave it as it is and expect these individuals and their parents or guardians to find those answers. This whole thing has to be rethought. I am also saying that whether or not fingers can be pointed at the children personally and they be blamed for their actions, they cannot be left in the circumstances they have been left in. It cannot be right.

I am not suggesting that we don't have standards and sanctions. But we have to find some way to deal with this situation so that it is not left hanging in the air and we have no idea where these children are going to end up. Someone needs to do something. I don't expect that someone will be able to give me all the answers either. But I want a commitment that this thing will be looked at—not with a view to pointing fingers saying 'you did this wrong,' but to find an answer. We cannot leave this.

Things happen in cycles you know. I am sure it's not just now that these things have been happening. Perhaps as time goes on, certain people make more effort to make things publicly known. And we suddenly realise this is something that we cannot leave alone. Perhaps it should have happened before now. We have to find some way to deal with that.

I know it's frustrating. And I know that when you are dealing with 900 children in school, and there are 15 or 20 that you just don't seem to be able to do anything with you are naturally apt to give your attention to the ones you are going to get results from and not "waste your time" on these difficult ones. But those same ones go into society with no hope—not a snowball's chance in Hell—and five years later you find out they are in Northward and we say 'Oh my God, what a waste.'

I am saying that we cannot leave it like this. I hope that the minister will take the thought on board and give a commitment—not just to look into it. Something has to be done to try to deal with this. No one mind is going to find the answers. I know that. But we can't leave it alone.

I chose this opportunity to make the relevance known because it is part of what we are talking about. I sincerely hope there will be some solution. While it will take various methodologies to bring about long-term solutions, we also need to look in the short term to see what we can do about these children. I trust there may be some answer forthcoming.

The Speaker: Does any other member wish to speak to the amendment on Private Member's Motion No. 14/00? (Pause) If not, does the mover of the amendment wish to exercise his right of reply?

Hon. Truman M. Boddén: No sir.
Sorry, may I just reconsider?

[Inaudible comments]

The Speaker: We shall suspend proceedings for five minutes in order for this to be clear.

PROCEEDINGS SUSPENDED AT 11.59 AM

PROCEEDINGS RESUMED AT 12.25 PM

The Speaker: Please be seated. Does the mover of the amendment wish to exercise his right of reply?

The Honourable Minister responsible for Education, Aviation, and Planning.

Hon. Truman M. Boddén: Thank you.

I would like to thank all members for their debate and support in relation to the [amendment]. As I said earlier, there are things to be done in the education system. Things have to be addressed and this will be continuing. I undertake, or the ministry undertakes, that it will push forward to solve those problems to the best of its ability.

Much of this debate was very good in raising questions that perhaps the department or ministry may not regard as urgent as does the public or the legislature. So all of this will be taken into consideration and we will move forward considering what submissions have been made here.

Specifically in relation to the matter at Triple C raised by the First Elected Member for George Town, the ministry and the department regard this as serious. It is a matter that the ministry and the department are now looking into. I will discuss with the PS the best way for government to make a statement in relation to that matter. In fact, as soon as it came out on the news a couple of days ago, the ministry was concerned. It is being dealt with and we will come back on that possibly in the press.

Once again, I would like to thank all members for their debate.

The Speaker: I shall now put the question on the amendment to Private Member's Motion No. 14/2000, Public Education System. Those in favour please say Aye. Those against No.

AYES.

The Speaker: The Ayes have it.

AGREED: AMENDMENT TO PRIVATE MEMBER'S MOTION NO. 14/2000 PASSED.

The Speaker: The floor is now open for debate on Private Member's Motion No. 14/2000 as amended. Does any member wish to speak? (Pause) If not, would the mover of the motion wish to reply?

The First Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: So that we will have clear exactly what we are dealing with at this point in time, I would like to read the motion as it stands with the amendment. But I need some clarification on one section. The mover of the amendment will have to clarify it. The very last part of his amendment reads: "in accordance with the Five-year National Education Plan 2000 – 2005 and the National Strategic Plan 1999 – 2008 (Vision 2008) section." I believe that the word "section" should actually be "Strategy 3." I want to make sure I have it crystal clear.

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: Mr. Speaker, I think it may be better because part of 2 also relates to children, that we just remove the word "section." I thank the honourable member for raising that. It could also have been "Strategy 3." But that . . . and I remember speaking on that, but I don't remember . . . but that should really be removed.

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for George Town please continue.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Thank you.

So, the motion will now read:

"WHEREAS in any rapidly developing country the level and diversity of education offered by the public system is of vital importance;

"AND WHEREAS it appears that the educational demands created by the rapid economic development in the Cayman Islands are not being adequately met by the present system;

"WHEREAS the Legislative Assembly unanimously approved the National Education Policies in the Five-year national Education Plan 1995 - 1999 which contains nine prioritised strategies and 105 action plans on the education policies with each action plan stating the following:

- "1. The date each action plan is assigned
- "2. The date each action plan starts, and is due for completion
- "3. The actual completion date

"4. The person/persons accountable for implementation

"5. The cost/benefit analysis of each action plan
"And was revised three times in 1996, 1997 and 1998;

"AND WHEREAS the Five-year National Education Plan has been extended, updated and rolled over into the National Education Plan 2000 to 2005 and a new strategy with four action plans (which has not yet been costed or detailed) which incorporates Strategy 3 of the National Strategic Plan 1999 - 2008 (Vision 2008) which plan was approved by this Legislative Assembly.

"BE IT THEREFORE RESOLVED that the Minister of Education, acting under his constitutional responsibility to deliver policy in the area of education, set out a properly prioritised plan, including costs and specific timing of implementation to address the present needs in the public education system in accordance with the Five-year National Education Plan 2000 - 2005 and the National Strategic Plan 1999 - 2008 (Vision 2008)."

Let me say that I saw no reason to argue with the amendment simply because the amendment is not an attempt to change the substance or intent of the original motion, but an effort to tie in the motion with existing policy documents that are now in force and being utilised by the Ministry of Education through its various avenues in regard to improvements to the existing system.

If I wanted to be a bit devious I could also say this was a way for the minister to be able to speak again on the motion, but I won't say that. Nevertheless, in all seriousness, I don't think any of us had a problem with the tie in with the various strategies and plans. Of course, I have to spend a little time in addressing certain areas, which in my view are necessary in order to prove the validity of the motion itself.

One could say why waste the time dealing with that. But since the government has said it will accept the motion as amended (as I just read), it doesn't end there. I think it is important to point out various aspects, especially in regard to implementation, which I think has been one of the major drawbacks. I don't think there is any major question in regard to policy. But I do believe that there are some concerns that need to be aired about the overlapping strategies and the implementation of them.

When the motion originally came the resolved section simply read: "BE IT THEREFORE RESOLVED that the Minister of Education, acting under his constitutional responsibility to deliver policy in the area of education, set out a properly prioritised plan, including costs and specific timing of implementation to address the present needs in the public education system." The minister could have taken the position that the motion was irrelevant because he has this plan. But I believe that with closer scrutiny he realised that while there is a plan, there are things that have not yet been developed to call the plan a "complete" plan. I believe it is also an accepted fact that there have been some problems with implementation.

During his delivery, the minister referred on several occasions to Strategy 3 of the National Strategic Plan, that is the Vision 2008 document that was tabled, debated and unanimously accepted in this House in July of last year. When the minister told us that his Ministry accepted Strategy 3 of the Vision 2008 document as part of the 2000 to 2005 policy which has been reviewed and rolled over, that made a little bit of a difference in my thought process.

I was thinking that the Ministry of Education was the same ministry that piloted the completion of the Vision 2008 document. I would like to take us back in time to July 1999 when the document was brought and debated, and unanimously accepted. I would like to quote from this Strategy 3 to show why people like me would have a problem.

Strategy 3 says: “We will support an educational system which identifies and develops the abilities of all persons encouraging them to realise their full potential.” Then it moves on and talks about the action plans within that strategy. The specific result required from Action Plan 1 is “to identify and implement those parts of the Education Plan that still need to be implemented.” At that point in time it would have been the 1995 to 1999 Plan.

So, you see, when this was going on, and the individuals who spent a lot of time and a lot of thought in putting together this document realised then (the 18 months during 1998 and 1999) that the implementation of the 1995 to 1999 plan was a problem. I am going to say something here and now with no intention of offending anyone. But I am going to show you the difficulties people like me have when I see how systems work.

We understand that the implementation process from 1998 of the National Strategic Education Plan has found itself with some problems. Yet, during that same time it had to be known that there were some problems. And by choice—not by anyone forcing the situation—the governor of the day who had to be in consultation with the minister and whomever else, decided to take the PS of the Ministry of Education to devote just about full time 18 months to the preparation of the other document, notwithstanding the importance of the Vision 2008 document.

So, we have a ministry left, to a certain degree, incapacitated on the one hand because the PS has found herself having to spend all of her energies on the Vision 2008 exercise. That exercise is spending its time finding out what’s wrong with the Education Plan!

It should have been handled differently. I am not suggesting other people were not doing what they had to do, but a PS is most important. The ministry is top heavy as it is. The ministry is dealing with Cayman Airways and with Planning. And on many occasions the minister has found himself wishing the day had more than 24 hours. I am questioning the sense in dealing with the situation like this.

We brought a motion similar to this in 1998, trying to identify the same problems, wanting to point them out, asking what are you going to do. Education is not something you can just put aside for a little while and come back storming again. Every moment that passes affects too many lives.

This document identifies action steps: “1) Form a committee to (a) investigate reasons for the delay in the implementation of those parts of the existing Education Develop Plan which have not yet been implemented; and (b) recommend steps toward establishing the plans.”

Mr. Speaker, it is a better realisation having read this again. It’s almost a paradox. The Ministry of Education is spearheading the development of this ten-year country plan. Right in the middle of what they are doing they are trying to organise themselves to try to find out what isn’t being done right within the ministry regarding the implementation of the National Strategic Plan. It’s almost funny.

Number 2 under the action steps: “Implement those plans which need to be realised.”

Number 3, “Empower schools to exercise site-based management.”

Number 4, “Institute site-based management at the Education Department.”

Number 5, “Monitor implementation of the Education Development Plan and site-based management.”

Number 6, “Review every 12 to 18 months.” It makes all the sense in the world.

The left arm is relaxing for awhile and the right arm of the same ministry is trying to do what it has to do—plus what the left arm had to do. Having said that, we must move on.

I only said that to make the point that motions such as this and the one in 1998—which the minister would not reply to, if you recall . . . he tried to bring amendments to that one and they didn’t carry. After he read all of what he brought down here, he wouldn’t debate the motion. That’s what happened with that one. But anyway, while not suggesting that the minister or his staff are not doing their fair share of the workload, our job is to identify where the inadequacies are and they must find the ways and means to take care of those inadequacies.

It is intriguing to me. It makes all the sense in the world that this Strategy 3 of the 2008 document was incorporated into the rollover plan. It just boggles my mind trying to understand why it had to happen like that.

Action Plan 2 of this same Strategy 3 speaks to identifying gaps in the existing Education Development Plan and providing programmes to fill these gaps. It has a long list of action steps and it goes on . . . I won’t attempt to read all of the steps and plans in Strategy 3, but I just want to read a few. Then I will say what I have to say about them.

The specific result required in Action Plan 3 was “to develop and implement academic, vocational and technical curricula for secondary and tertiary students."

The action steps: "1) Identify the needs of local employers; 2) Research overseas academic, vocational and technical curricula and standards (a) form a committee of educators to review the data; (b) develop detailed curricula in the following areas: academic, vocational and technical; (c) recommend staff, equipment and materials and any other resources necessary to programme implementation; (d) develop a set of national minimum standards in numeracy, literacy, information technology, etc." This one is more than interesting.

It is shocking to know at this point in time, with all of the so-called developments in our educational system, that no standards such as these have ever been developed, set, or realised. But the good thing is that it seems like something may be done now. So, that is really a plus.

I wanted to read those few areas of Strategy 3 to come back to the point. How many times have we stood here making our points about technical and vocational education? The minister is first to get up and ask, "Why bring all of this criticism when you don't provide any solutions?" When we try to address the solutions, then they don't matter. But Strategy 3 is a wonderful section of Vision 2008 so they grabbed it up. Thank God, Strategy 3 did not come from us because it would be lost in the wilderness still.

The amendments to the motion call for the date each action plan is assigned, the date each action plan starts and is due for completion; the actual completion date, the persons accountable for the implementation, and the cost benefit analysis of each action plan.

Here is where I have the real problem. We had a 1995 to 1999 National Strategic Education Plan. And I am going on to a new topic, if you would prefer to take the luncheon break.

The Speaker: We can take the luncheon break now.

It is my understanding that after the luncheon break we will be meeting informally in the committee room to discuss matters coming before this honourable House. At this time I will accept a motion for the adjournment of the House realising that this will take a considerable length of time.

ADJOURNMENT

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: Considering that this will take the bulk of the afternoon, I would like to move the adjournment of this honourable House until 10.00 AM tomorrow.

The Speaker: The question is that this honourable House do now adjourn until 10.00 AM tomorrow, with the understanding that we meet informally after this and will go late into the evening.

Mr. W. McKeeva Bush: Mr. Speaker, are we meeting late tomorrow afternoon as well?

The Speaker: That is my understanding, yes.

Mr. W. McKeeva Bush: Thank you sir.

The Speaker: I shall now put the question is that this honourable House do now adjourn until 10.00 AM tomorrow. Those in favour, please say Aye. Those against, No.

AYES.

The Speaker: The Ayes have it.

AT 1.00 PM THE HOUSE STOOD ADJOURNED UNTIL 10.00 AM FRIDAY, 14 JULY 2000.

EDITED
FRIDAY
14 JULY 2000
10.13 AM

[Prayers read by the Honourable Acting Temporary First Official Member]

The Speaker: Please be seated. Proceedings are resumed. Item 2 on today's Order Paper, Reading by the Speaker of Messages and Announcements.

READING BY THE SPEAKER OF
MESSAGES AND ANNOUNCEMENTS

The Speaker: I have no apologies from any member this morning.

The Speaker: Item 3 on today's Order Paper, Questions to Honourable Members/Ministers. The Honourable Minister for Tourism, Commerce, Transport and Works is not in the Chamber, so we will move on to question 39 standing in the name of the Third Elected Member for Bodden Town.

QUESTIONS TO HONOURABLE
MEMBERS/MINISTERS

QUESTION 39

No. 39: Mr. Roy Bodden asked the Honourable Acting Temporary First Official Member responsible for Internal and External Affairs to provide a breakdown by nationality and rank of the staff complement of the Royal Cayman Islands Police.

The Speaker: The Honourable Acting Temporary First Official Member responsible for Internal and External Affairs.

Hon. Donovan Ebanks: Rank, establishment and nationality is as follows:

Commissioner—United Kingdom citizen; Deputy Commissioner—Caymanian; 3 Chief Superintendents—2 Caymanian, 1 UK citizen; 4 Superintendents, all Caymanian; 9 Chief Inspectors—6 Caymanian, 1 Jamaican, 2 UK citizens; 21 Inspectors—19 Caymanian, 1 Barbadian, 1 UK citizen; 49 Sergeants—31 Caymanian, 1 Barbadian, 9 Jamaican, 5 UK citizens, 2 Belizean, 1 US citizen; 179 Constables—88 Caymanian, 36 Jamaican, 23 UK citizens, 9 Barbadian, 3 Canadian, 7 Belizeans, 4 US citizens, 2 Bahamianians, 1 Nicaraguan, 1 Guyanese, 1 Nigerian; Total Complement, 267.

SUPPLEMENTARIES

The Speaker: The Third Elected Member for Bodden Town.

Mr. Roy Bodden: Can the honourable member say if this includes all the staff of the RCIP?

The Speaker: The Honourable Acting Temporary First Official Member responsible for Internal and External Affairs.

Hon. Donovan Ebanks: This is obviously the uniformed staff and does not include civilian staff.

The Speaker: The Third Elected Member for Bodden Town.

Mr. Roy Bodden: Can the honourable member give us any information on the civilian staff allied to the RCIP? I am specifically inquiring if any of those civilian staff members are in an advisory capacity to the top rank.

The Speaker: The Honourable Acting Temporary First Official Member responsible for Internal and External Affairs.

Hon. Donovan Ebanks: I don't have any information on the civilian staff. But I can certainly undertake to provide the information for the member.

The Speaker: The Third Elected Member for Bodden Town.

Mr. Roy Bodden: I have a definite interest because it has come to my attention that the former deputy commissioner's services have been retained as an advisor. I would specifically like to ascertain whether or not my information is correct, and, if so, I would like the terms, the job description, the salary, whether this former officer is now working on a contract, and what the length of that contract is.

The Speaker: The Honourable Acting Temporary First Official Member responsible for Internal and External Affairs.

Hon. Donovan Ebanks: I have noted the points the member is interested in, whether the individual is an advisor, terms of employment, job description, salary and whether on a contract or not, and I will give an undertaking to provide that information.

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Can the honourable member state whether or not there are plans to recruit more officers, and, if so, from where?

The Speaker: The Honourable Acting Temporary First Official Member responsible for Internal and External Affairs.

Hon. Donovan Ebanks: There are no plans for recruitment currently in process, of which I am aware. I expect that as serving UK officers who are on secondment complete their term there will be a need to replace some of them. A recent training initiative has just been completed with a record number of Caymanians having completed the course successfully. Hopefully they will become permanent members.

I know the class started off with 14, 12 of which were Caymanians. I think it may have ended up with nine or ten of those successfully completing it. I am not positive of the final number. Consideration will have to be given as to whether or not we continue to draw from the UK or perhaps some other Commonwealth country to supplement the need. But it's pleasing to see the number of Caymanians who have come forward and successfully completed the recent training course.

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Can the honourable member say if the full complement of the establishment obtains right now? Are there any existing vacancies that have not been filled? If so, at what level?

The Speaker: The Honourable Acting Temporary First Official Member responsible for Internal and External Affairs.

Hon. Donovan Ebanks: I don't have a breakdown on the vacancies. I understand there are probably about ten to 12 vacant posts, primarily in the lower ranks of constable. Some will be filled by the class that recently completed.

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Can the honourable member state what the policy is for the renewal of the UK officers' contracts? What length of time was their initial contract for?

The Speaker: The Honourable Acting Temporary First Official Member responsible for Internal and External Affairs.

Hon. Donovan Ebanks: The contracts, as I understand, are generally for two years. They are only extended in circumstances where the local authorities are satisfied with the officer's performance and the officer is able to secure a further period of release from his UK force from which he is seconded.

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: From what the member said, the policy of hiring police from the UK is thought of as a temporary measure. Can he say if any of these officers have received promotions within the RCIP service during their tenure? If so, can he explain the policy and why this would happen?

The Speaker: The Honourable Acting Temporary First Official Member responsible for Internal and External Affairs.

Hon. Donovan Ebanks: I do not have information of that nature on hand. I can certainly give an undertaking to provide that to the member.

The Speaker: The Third Elected Member for Bodden Town.

Mr. Roy Bodden: In conjunction with that undertaking, I would also ask the honourable member to ascertain in cases where these overseas officers are promoted, whether or not their promotion affects the upward mobility of Caymanians who may be on the quota for promotion.

The Speaker: The Honourable Acting Temporary First Official Member responsible for Internal and External Affairs.

Hon. Donovan Ebanks: Yes, I will also seek information as to whether that situation actually occurs and provide that to the member.

The Speaker: Are there any further supplementaries? If not, we move on to question 38, standing in the name of the First Elected Member for George Town.

QUESTION 38

No. 38: Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts asked the Honourable Minister responsible for Tourism, Commerce, Transport and Works to give an update on the proposed extension of the George Town Port.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Tourism, Commerce, Transport and Works.

Hon. Thomas C. Jefferson: Engineering and environmental studies have been completed. The Coastal Development permit for the project was approved in February 2000. The Development Advisory Board approved the project on 30 May 2000. The Central Planning Authority permit for the project is anticipated in the next month, which should allow the Port Authority to solicit tenders for construction of the project.

SUPPLEMENTARIES

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Can the honourable minister say if there are any objections to the planning permission being sought? If so, how is he planning to deal with them?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Tourism, Commerce, Transport and Works.

Hon. Thomas C. Jefferson: My understanding is that there have been some objections. The objectors have been heard by the Central Planning Authority (CPA). That process allows any business that feels that some negative effect may be done to their business may be heard by the CPA and hopefully resolved in a way where both parties feel satisfied. That is the process that will be used in this case. I think some of the objectors have already been heard by the CPA.

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Can the honourable minister state if it is his intention to give a presentation to MLAs regarding this port extension so that we may be brought up to speed, so to speak, with what is going on? If so, when does he plan to do so?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Tourism, Commerce, Transport and Works.

Hon. Thomas C. Jefferson: Some time ago invitations were issued to members to come and review the plans. We are all busy people, so we weren't able to host that particular function. It is our intention to do a presentation to MLAs. I am unable to say to the member the exact date. It is certainly our intention within the next 30 days to do so.

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Can the honourable minister state how financing for the project is expected to be gained, and can he state the estimated cost of the project?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Tourism, Commerce, Transport and Works.

Hon. Thomas C. Jefferson: Part of the financing for the project will be the claim that was made to the insurance company for the damage done to the Finger Pier. That amount is $1.7 million. That will be utilised to fund part of the estimated cost of CI$14.5 million. The remaining amount of $12.8 million will be secured by a loan from one of the major banks in town.

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Can the honourable minister state if this financing will be by way of the Port Authority borrowing on its own merit with a government guarantee, or in another form?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Tourism, Commerce, Transport and Works.

Hon. Thomas C. Jefferson: The borrowing will be done on the strength of the Port Authority's balance sheet. There's no guarantee involved.

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for West Bay.

Mr. W. McKeeva Bush: Can the honourable minister say what consideration has been given to the damage that may be caused to the waterfront by heavy seas when the ocean is dredged and made deeper and the reef ridge is removed? What protection will be afforded the waterfront?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Tourism, Commerce, Transport and Works.

Hon. Thomas C. Jefferson: In this entire exercise, the Port Authority (in discussing this project in conjunction with the DOE) agreed on a firm that provides environmental studies. An environmental study has been carried out. That study indicates that the Finger Pier that we propose to build will create a significant amount of protection to the area to the south known as Hog Sty Bay. It also indicates that the wave action that will ensue, assuming construction of the Finger Pier extension . . . there's no significant wave action caused by that improvement of the port facility other than where the port facility itself (the northern portion of it) meets the iron shore, in that 90% area. That's where the heft of the wave will hit. So protection to businesses in the area will be enhanced, I would say, rather than being damaged.

This environmental study was carried out by Moffit and Nickles, which is a pretty substantial firm in the US that has carried out environmental studies in many different parts of the US as well as other parts of the world. We have also had a second opinion carried out by an additional person involved in carrying out environmental studies. Their view is that the study is correct.

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for West Bay.

Mr. W. McKeeva Bush: Can the honourable minister say what intended depth will result at the end of the day?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Tourism, Commerce, Transport and Works.

Hon. Thomas C. Jefferson: The enhancement will cause the Finger Pier to be 450 feet long and 240 feet wide. The approach to it will need a certain amount of deepening because we are trying to do an improvement to the Port that would provide value for money. The most cost effective way to deal with improving the facilities of the port for the next ten, 15, or 20 years before any further improvement would need to be done to that area for this specific purpose means that ships that are 450 feet would be . . . and as we understand it, the next size of ship . . . we see on occasion the Morrant Bay which is 380-something feet.

So, as demand for cargo grows, and as the shipping companies look for efficiency in providing that service to the Cayman Islands, they will move to a bigger size ship. That size ship coming into George Town Harbour alongside this dock would cause us to make some amount of deepening.

Even now, some of the ships servicing the Cayman Islands say to us from time to time that there are some coral heads that they have concern about. But, in essence (and coming more to the member's question) in the area we are talking about, approaching from the ocean there is 22 feet leading into the shore on the north side of the Finger Pier. When you get near the shore it's about 16 feet. The area on the south of that Finger Pier there is from 26 feet down to 18 feet. That's the area currently being used to offload the majority of the cargo.

What we say should happen is that the 26 feet should go down to 27 feet, one foot of dredging taking place there. But as you get nearer to shore, the 18 feet would become 27. On the north side of the Finger Pier the 22 feet would be dredged to 27 feet and as you get closer to shore the 16 feet would become 27 feet.

What I am saying is that there will be some dredging. The intention is to have a drought that will provide ocean-going vessels 27 feet. We want to ensure that those vessels have a safe navigational path in and out of that port facility.

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for West Bay.

Mr. W. McKeeva Bush: Can the honourable minister outline the length and width of the pier now? I know he said it was going to 450 long and 250 wide with the addition. That's part (a) of the question. Part (b) is, how much did the study cost? And part (c) of the question is, why is such a tremendous expenditure expected?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Tourism, Commerce, Transport and Works.

Hon. Thomas C. Jefferson: The present length of Finger Pier is 190 feet long, by 40 feet wide. When the Morrant Bay tied up alongside of it, almost half of it extends beyond the pier indicating the need for improvement, even if we service the present ships that come to the Cayman Islands.

The proposal before the CPA is for the length of the pier to be 450 feet (because that's the next size ship that would come), and widened to 240 feet. The intention is to spend money to deal with future demands over the next 15 to 20 years. The facility will be able to take two ships 450 feet long, and utilise both cranes at the same time causing the trucking to take containers as they are offloaded. It's a way of dealing with the efficiency of the Port, which may not happen until sometime down the road.

The cost of the environmental study I don't have with me this morning. I could give a ballpark figure; it's some amount over $100,000. It could be $120,000, somewhere in that area.

Mr. W. McKeeva Bush: Mr. Speaker, there was a third part, why such a tremendous expenditure is expected.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Tourism, Commerce, Transport and Works.

Hon. Thomas C. Jefferson: I could add to that by saying that the demand for cargo and goods to the Cayman Islands is growing at a significant rate on an annual basis. The projections are that if we are going to spend some money now, it's more cost effective to the Port Authority and government to not use a Band-Aid approach, but to spend the money for the future needs of the Cayman Islands and the Port. Because of the significant annual increases over the last ten years, we can see the need for this improvement in the port facility. We might as well do it now. If we do it later it's going to cost more money.

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for West Bay.

Mr. W. McKeeva Bush: I hear the minister's rationale, but he did not say why such a tremendous expenditure was expected. I will add to that: Why is such a tremendous expenditure expected when you are adding 60 feet to the length and 200 feet to the width? The expenditure is a total of $14.5 million. That was what I was trying to ascertain from the minister.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Tourism, Commerce, Transport and Works.

Hon. Thomas C. Jefferson: Just to elaborate and correct some information, if the interpretation of the First Elected Member for West Bay is correct, then I have not said what I thought I said. I said that the pier would extend 450 feet. It is now 190 feet. So the calculation needs to be thought about.

[Inaudible interjection]

Hon. Thomas C. Jefferson: The present pier cannot be utilised at all because of the damage done back in 1998—

Mr. W. McKeeva Bush: Mr. Speaker, on a point of order.

The Speaker: May I hear your point of order?

Mr. W. McKeeva Bush: I would like to get the present length of the pier and the width, which I thought he said the present length is 190 feet long and 40 feet wide. He was adding that at the end of the day it would be 450 long and 240 feet wide. That's what I am trying to ascertain.

The Speaker: That's not a point of order. That's a question. The Honourable Minister for Tourism, Commerce, Transport and Works.

Hon. Thomas C. Jefferson: I was taking some time to answer the member's question and I was coming to the point he wanted me to answer.

I began by saying that when we think about the extension that needs to take place, there is almost nothing in the Finger Pier that can be utilised other than the supports coming up from the ocean floor. There are two columns that come up from the ocean floor that will be included in the extension I am talking about. In essence, we are not adding to the 190, we actually have to take away all of the 190 with just these two supports [remaining]. So we actually have to construct 450 feet of dock.

And the construction will be such that no amount of wave will be able to wash underneath. It will be a solid concrete dock. That is what affords the protection to Hog Sty Bay that I spoke of earlier.

I think we all realise that this type of structure 450 feet long by 240 feet wide in the area we are talking about, doing it for $14.5 million . . . and let me go on to say that the residue of those dredged areas will also form additional land for the Port in the area of 3.5 acres. It's costing $14.5 million, but we are also creating 3.5 acres of land in George Town. When you look at the price per square foot, maybe we need to reduce the $14.5 million by the value of the land we are creating. The value of the Port will be significantly enhanced.

This is Tom Jefferson economics!

The Speaker: The Fourth Elected Member for George Town.

Dr. Frank McField: Can the honourable minister say why it is logical to assume that it's a prudent decision to do this expansion, which will also mean expansion in the volume of traffic in this very small congested area of George Town? We have pedestrians from cruise ships walking around and crossing the road without looking, taxis, and tour buses. Then the commercial port is being expanded in such a way as to carry more of a load. Why is that considered a prudent decision?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Tourism, Commerce, Transport and Works.

Hon. Thomas C. Jefferson: I believe it is a prudent decision for a variety of reasons. We recently did a traffic study in George Town. We found that the traffic generated by the Port is less than 1% of the traffic.

We also have in our plans for the Port expansion, the landing of cruise ship passengers on the North Side of this Port (up near the Port building) which will allow the tour bus operations to come off the street into the Port facility. And when loaded, they will be distributed bus by bus.

I don't believe that the cruise ship passengers coming to the Cayman Islands . . . and we have a computer schedule that takes us up to 2003, we don't see any major increase in the number of cruise ship passengers, other than what we are dealing with now.

What we are doing at the Port is saying that if we are going to spend money to fix the facility, let's do it in a way that is cost effective for 2000, 2005, 2010 and 2015. That is our rationale. When we did the Master Port Development Study, we told the team carrying out the study not to just focus on George Town, look all around Grand Cayman. We found in 1993 that to put the Port in the North Sound it would cost us over $100 million. You're talking about cost. Can we afford that?

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Even if you had the money you wouldn't put it there.

Hon. Thomas C. Jefferson: Well, that's true.

If we wanted to do it somewhere else, Red Bay area, or even further east, the cost was higher in those areas than trying to deal with the traffic and the facility that we already have in place by just extending it. That's why we took the decision that we did.

The Speaker: The Fourth Elected Member for George Town.

Dr. Frank McField: Would the minister not agree that although that sounds very rational, that not only is he making an investment in regard to the Port for 20 years, there will also be growth in the congestion within that 20 year period as well? Can he give us any indication as to how he understands that development in that area to be in the next, say, ten years? Was that taken into account?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Tourism, Commerce, Transport and Works.

Hon. Thomas C. Jefferson: I think we all realise that as the population grows, so grows the traffic. Although we have tried to establish an Omnibus system to take people from the various districts into George Town . . . and I believe that will also change, perhaps some bigger buses coming from areas other than West Bay because it's a further distance . . . we know there will be an increase in traffic. But if there is a will to deal with it, we will find a way.

If we have ships of that size and they arrive early enough in the morning, the work can begin early in the morning. The Port has been looking at that. It depends on when the ship arrives. With cooperation between the shipping industry and us, I think government and the Port Authority should be able to deal with the traffic as it comes forward.

The Speaker: I would appreciate a motion for the suspension of Standing Order 23(7) & (8).

SUSPENSION OF STANDING ORDER 23 (7) AND (8)

Mr. W. McKeeva Bush: I move the suspension of Standing Order 23(7) & (8) to allow Question Time to continue.

The Speaker: The Third Elected Member for Bodden Town.

Mr. Roy Bodden: I second that motion.

The Speaker: The motion has been made and seconded that we suspend Standing Order 23(7) & (8) to allow Question Time to continue beyond the hour of 11 o'clock. Those in favour please say Aye, those against No.

AYES.

The Speaker: The Ayes have it. Question Time will continue.

AGREED: STANDING ORDER 23(7) AND (8) SUSPENDED TO ALLOW QUESTION TIME TO CONTINUE BEYOND 11.00 AM.

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for West Bay.

Mr. W. McKeeva Bush: If I understood the minister correctly, he is saying that the new pier would be 450 feet long, and solid. Can the honourable minister say whether consideration has been given to what happens to the shift of sand when you put 450 of solid wall in the ocean?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Tourism, Commerce, Transport and Works.

Hon. Thomas C. Jefferson: The environmental study I referred to earlier carried out by Moffet and Nickles, and being audited by another firm that provides a similar environmental impact service, shows that no major shift of sand will occur other than what's happening at the moment.

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for West Bay. I will have to limit it to three additional supplementaries after yours.

Mr. W. McKeeva Bush: Part (a) of my question is, Will the minister table a copy of the environmental report so that members of this House can peruse it? And part (b) is, What steps has the minister taken to ensure that this $12.8 million will not result in more cost to the public in higher port fees and trucking fees, thus supermarket fees and all the rest that goes with it?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Tourism, Commerce, Transport and Works.

Hon. Thomas C. Jefferson: We are obviously trying to relate additional cost before the project even goes out to tender. But there are no guarantees in this country about cost—whether it's a bank, financial services, doctors' fees . . . there are no guarantees. But the Port Authority has been quite responsible over the years as to its charges.

The Speaker: The Fourth Elected Member for George Town.

Dr. Frank McField: In order to avoid the possibility that there will be additional charges, has the minister given any thought to having the dock work during the night when there is no traffic, therefore minimising the need for this great expansion and this great expenditure?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Tourism, Commerce, Transport and Works.

Hon. Thomas C. Jefferson: When we try to envision what will happen in the construction of the Port, most of the activities will be in the water on the port side. I can't visualise a significant amount of traffic that is going to cause disruption to George Town by that movement. I sincerely believe that if we move to working during the night that we are going to end up with more cost than what we have estimated at the moment.

[Inaudible interjection]

Hon. Thomas C. Jefferson: Mr. Speaker, I now understand what the Fourth Elected Member for George Town is saying. But I did make reference to that before. We are going to try to work with the shipping industry. You can't work at night unless a ship is there. If the ship's arrival would allow us to, we could work out an arrangement where the work can start at 5.00 in the morning, and basically be done before the rush hour.

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for West Bay.

Mr. W. McKeeva Bush: I asked whether the minister would table a copy of that environmental study. Will he do that? He said that the study says there will be no shift of sand. I don't know if that's what was told to the Marriott too when they put down their wall. Anyway, I would like him to give an undertaking to provide members with a copy of that study.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Tourism, Commerce, Transport and Works.

Hon. Thomas C. Jefferson: I did indicate that within the next 30 days we would be doing a presentation to Members of the Legislative Assembly. At that meeting copies of the environmental study will be available. That was my intention.

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: This last supplementary goes beyond the realm of the substantive question, but I believe the minister will be amenable and answer it.

Outside of the actual Port itself, there was a private member's motion passed awhile back regarding the government's property in the SafeHaven project being vested with the Port Authority. Can the honourable minister give us a quick update as to what is happening with the vesting of that property?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Tourism, Commerce, Transport and Works.

Hon. Thomas C. Jefferson: For clarity (and I am not going to say anything that members of the House do not know but for clarity to the public), the vesting of this property is not within the ministry for which I am responsible.

The private member's motion that was unanimously accepted by this honourable House required government to take the necessary steps to consider vesting the property at SafeHaven, that public portion, into the Port Authority. That means that the work would have to be done by Lands & Survey and come back to the minister responsible for lands to the Executive Council and then back down to the Legislative Assembly.

[Inaudible interjection]

Hon. Thomas C. Jefferson: I am unable to say whether they have been given instructions, I would assume they have.

The Speaker: One final supplementary. The First Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Can the honourable minister give an undertaking to determine whether or not anything has been done since the motion was approved? We don't want to continue to believe that after seeing safe passage through this Assembly motions are just forgotten about. Can he give that undertaking?

Hon. Thomas C. Jefferson: I can undertake to do that. That's easier to do.

The Speaker: This concludes Question Time for today. Moving on to item 4, Government Business, Bills.

I would appreciate a motion to suspend Standing Orders 46 and 47.

SUSPENSION OF STANDING ORDER 46 AND 47

Hon. George A. McCarthy: I move the suspension of Standing Orders 46 and 47 to allow the Bills on the Order Paper to be taken.

The Speaker: The question is the suspension of Standing Orders 46 and 47 to allow the Bills on the Order Paper to be taken. Those in favour please say Aye. Those against No.

AYES.

The Speaker: The Ayes have it.

AGREED: STANDING ORDERS 46 AND 47 SUSPENDED TO ALLOW THE BILLS ON THE ORDER PAPER TO TAKEN.

The Speaker: The question is that a Bill entitled, The Monetary Authority (Amendment) (International Co-operation) Bill, 2000 be given a second reading. The question is open for debate. Does the mover wish to speak to it?

Hon. George A. McCarthy: As the Memorandum of Objects and Reasons states, this Bill amends the Monetary Authority Law (1998 Revision) to bring the legislation governing the Authority (that is the Monetary Authority) into line with the requirements of global standards for financial regulations. This Bill has been brought in response not only to the findings of the FATF but also seeks to address issues raised by the KPMG Review of Financial Regulations which is being conducted in connection with the White Paper issued by the UK entitled "Partnership for Progress and Prosperity."

While acknowledging the accomplishments of the Cayman Islands regarding the strengthening of its anti-money laundering system, the FATF also found gaps. In a letter dated 21 June 2000, the President of the FATF, Mr. Gil Galvao, took note that:

1. The Cayman Islands has been a leader in developing anti money laundering programmes throughout the Caribbean region.
2. It has served as President of the Caribbean Financial Action Task Force and provided substantial assistance to neighbouring states in the region.
3. It has demonstrated cooperation in criminal law enforcement matters and uncovered several serious cases of fraud and money laundering otherwise unknown to authorities in FATF member states.
4. It has also closed [this is the Cayman Islands] several financial institutions on the basis of concerns about money laundering.

Although the FATF was extremely pleased to learn about these accomplishments, the FATF nevertheless found, what it regarded, significant gaps in our anti money laundering system.

The areas of concern in relation to the Monetary Authority were as follows:

- "1. Supervisory authorities cannot as a matter of law readily access information regarding the identity of customers.
- "2. The supervisory authorities place too much reliance on home country supervisor's assessment of management of bank branches.
- "3. A large class of management companies including those providing nominee shareholders for the purpose or formation of a company are holding the issued capital of a company is unregulated."

I should emphasise that these are the main areas of concern, but there are other areas that may require addressing. This is because the FATF has evaluated the Cayman Islands (among other countries and territories) against the 25 criteria the FATF has developed from the FATF 40 recommendations in respect of which the Cayman Islands was mutually evaluated in 1996.

Although that mutual evaluation found the Cayman Islands in substantial compliance with the 40 FATF recommendations, it preceded the enactment of the Proceeds of Criminal Conduct Law, which put our legislation on "all crimes basis" and also preceded the development of the current criteria. These are the 25 recommendations. These criteria now make it clear that certain requirements are only satisfied if they are contained in the law rather than in the Code of Practice.

Members will also be aware of the publication of an advisory by the US Government following upon the FATF report of 22 June. That advisory states that the counter money-laundering regime in the Cayman Islands suffers systemic problems. Among other matters, it mentioned that the Cayman Islands law makes it impossible for the supervisory and regulatory authority to obtain information held by financial institutions regarding their clients' identity absent a court order.

Secondly, despite its significance as an international financial centre, Cayman Islands law bars its supervisory and regulatory authority from collecting for and sharing with its counterparts records of financial transactions and customer identification (to the extent that such documents are maintained by the Cayman Islands financial institutions).

It also mentioned that “other weaknesses in the counter money-laundering programmes of the Cayman Islands result from interaction of particular roles in a way that can vitiate former counter money-laundering requirements.”

The advisory continues that “these deficiencies, amongst others, have caused the Cayman Islands to be identified by the Financial Action Task Force as non-cooperative ‘in the fight against money laundering.’” It also explains that “the FATF, created by the 1989 G-7 Economic Summit is a 29 member international group that works to combat anti-money laundering activities.”

The specific deficiencies in the Monetary Authority Law are described in the advisory. First, it is seen to bar cooperation that the Monetary Authority requires (a) to obtain a court order before it can obtain details of clients or customers of financial institutions. Secondly, the disclosure of such information to an overseas regulatory authority is at present prohibited or restricted.

The proposed legislation before the House at this time seeks to address these two points. Therefore, the changes to the law are contained primarily in amendments to two sections of the Monetary Authority Law, namely section 30 and section 42. There are also several new definitions in the law in particular a description of what constitutes an overseas regulatory authority.

I will now describe the main provisions of the Bill in the sequence laid out in the Memorandum of Objects and Reasons. In clause 4, the definition of “Overseas Regulatory Authority” means primarily an authority outside the Cayman Islands which exercises functions corresponding to the functions of the Monetary Authority. In other words, a financial regulatory authority. Examples of such authorities are the Financial Services Authority in the United Kingdom, a central bank in another country or the Securities and Exchange Commission in the United States.

At this point I should mention that the government proposes to make an amendment during the Committee stage in order to provide the specification of any additional regulatory functions in relation to companies or financial services activity and will be amended such that the regulations will prescribe with which authorities the Monetary Authority may cooperate and recognise for that purpose. This is to guard against the possibility that overseas authorities may seek to utilise channels of information for inappropriate purposes.

For example, the OECD commitment on tax information exchange is not intended to utilise this law for that purpose. Therefore, cooperation for tax information exchange purposes with the IRS or other similar bodies is not envisaged under these changes to the Monetary Authority Law.

Turning to clause 5, there is to be an additional function of the Monetary Authority, namely to provide assistance to overseas regulatory authorities. At the committee stage this will be amended with the present item (e) forming item (f). There will also be a minor amendment to the present item (e) to read “functions” instead of “objects.”

Turning to section 30 of the Monetary Authority Law it should be noted that at present this section allows the Monetary Authority to make a requirement of any licensee to produce documents or other information for the purposes of the Monetary Authority functions. However this present provision denies the Authority of access to client or customer information without an order of the Grand Court, made on the grounds that there are no other reasonable means of obtaining such documents or information. This restriction is part of the reason for the listing by the FATF as non-cooperative. Therefore this Bill seeks to remove such restrictions. However in the event that a licensee or other person with relevant information fails to comply with the requirements of the Authority, it will be necessary for the Authority to obtain a court order to enforce its own requirements.

Thus there will be checks and balances on the exercise of the Authority by its powers. If a licensee or other person considers that the information should not be provided, it will have an opportunity to put its case to the court when the Authority seeks a court order. For example, if a lawyer claims that information is protected by legal professional privilege there is specific provision in the Bill to prevent such information from being disclosed.

It should also be borne in mind that the existing law provides for penalties by way of fines for non-compliance with a requirement of the Authority.

The Bill provides that not only licensees may be required to provide information, but also persons connected with such licensees. The definition of “connected persons” as contained in the law generally describes persons associated with the licensee in a business activity. In addition, any person reasonably believed to have information relevant to the enquiry being conducted by the Monetary Authority may be required to provide information. This should prevent “fishing expeditions” by the Authority as it should be required to satisfy a court if necessary that the information which sought is reasonably necessary for the purpose of its functions and relevant to the matter at hand.

The Bill also provides that where in accordance with section 42 the Authority is satisfied that assistance should be provided in response to a request by an overseas regulatory authority, it may direct certain persons to provide information to the authority in order to satisfy an overseas request. The powers of the Monetary Authority in this regard are similar to the powers it may exercise for its own purposes and are subject to the same safeguards. To enforce a requirement for information in relation to an overseas request, the Authority will require an order from the court.

There is to be a new section 30A in the Law whereby the Monetary Authority may either authorise a competent person or exercise any of its powers to seek the assistance of the police in the exercise of its powers, which is expected only to be in exceptional circumstances where there may be a risk of violence or confrontation to the officers of the Authority. There is no suggestion that the police will have any power of search or seizure, as they will only be able to exercise the powers available to the Monetary Authority itself.

Turning to section 42 of the Law, it should be remembered that this provides at present, and will continue to provide, that information coming to the attention of the Monetary Authority will be required to be kept confidential. Any breach of this provision is at present and will continue to be a serious criminal offence.

There are, however, certain circumstances in which disclosure by the Authority is presently permitted and these are to be expanded and clarified in relation to criminal proceedings and disciplinary proceedings either relating to professional persons in the financial industry or persons in public service and the Monetary Authority.

It should be said that disclosure for criminal or disciplinary proceedings may be for use within or outside of the Cayman Islands. But in relation to criminal proceedings there is no intention to provide an alternative channel to the Mutual Legal Assistance Treaty. If the Monetary Authority obtains information in response to an overseas request which suggests that the matter is a criminal matter, the Monetary Authority will hand the matter over to law enforcement authorities in the Cayman Islands and will advise that further inquiries should proceed under the MLAT.

Some flexibility will be required in order to provide effective cooperation, as many regulatory inquiries at the early stage will require investigation before sufficient information to justify an MLAT request is available. Thus it would be wrong to prevent some information being disclosed by the Monetary Authority even though it may relate to criminal matters. It is also the case that certain conduct, which could be described as criminal or prosecuted as such, is likely to be dealt with under civil and administrative proceedings by the overseas regulator.

It will be important to elaborate on these arrangements under the Memoranda of Understanding (MOU) with particular overseas regulators with whom it is expected there will be regular cooperation by the Monetary Authority. In such a MOU, the scope of the cooperation, provisions for consultation about its operation, and arrangements regarding the sharing of costs will be covered. A MOU is not a legally binding document but is a flexible tool to enable cooperation without the necessity for a treaty, which can only be negotiated with the involvement of the United Kingdom for reasons of sovereignty.

Nevertheless, the Monetary Authority Law must allow for the possibility of such cooperation before a MOU may be made effective. Therefore the present Bill expands upon the Monetary Authority's present capability of cooperation with an overseas regulator by removing the restrictions on sharing of client information. This is the main difference between the present Law and the Law as it will be if this Bill is given safe passage.

In order to prevent fishing expeditions and to safeguard the legitimate interests of the Cayman Islands, however, there are to be additional safeguards in relation to disclosure of such information to overseas regulatory authorities. For example, in deciding whether or not to assist an overseas regulator the Authority will require or take into account the following:

1. Whether corresponding assistance would be given by the overseas regulator to the Cayman Islands.
2. Whether the inquiries relate to a breach of a law which has no close parallel in the Cayman Islands.
3. The seriousness of the matter and the importance to it of the information sought.
4. Whether it is in the public interest to give the assistance, in light of advice from the Attorney General.

It should be noted that the Authority may decline to provide assistance if the overseas regulator refuses to undertake to cooperate in similar circumstances or refuses to contribute towards the costs of the exercise in the Cayman Islands.

In addition, disclosure is not to be permitted unless:

1. The Authority is satisfied that the recipient authority is subject to adequate legal restrictions on further disclosures including the provisions of an undertaking of confidentiality (this is already in the present Law).
2. The Monetary Authority is satisfied that the assistance requested is required for the purpose of the overseas regulatory authority regulatory functions.
3. That the Monetary Authority is satisfied that any information acquired by the Monetary Authority using its compulsory powers will not be used in criminal proceedings against the person providing the information.

Lastly, as a further check and balance, any request to the Monetary Authority will require to be copied to the Attorney General to afford him the opportunity of making any representation regarding the public interest and the right to intervene as friend of the court in relation to any overseas request. These arrangements are very similar to the arrangements under the Mutual Legal Assistance Treaty (MLAT) except that the decision as to whether or not a request should be granted would be taken by the Monetary Authority. This is what the international standards expect, mainly that cooperation should be between regulator to regulator, but it is also right and proper that there should be adequate control over the process.

It is submitted that involving the Judiciary in relation to enforcement of orders of the Monetary Authority and giving persons affected an opportunity of making representation to the Court together with the requirement to involve the office of the Attorney General will provide adequate safeguards.

It must be emphasised that unless overseas requests can be addressed, and, in exceptional circumstances where necessary, provide details of client information, the Cayman Islands will continue to be deemed non-cooperative in this regard. This is not unusual, and is indeed the norm between regulators in both onshore and progressive offshore jurisdictions.

To ensure that the Cayman Islands may continue to operate within international financial markets it is necessary to be able to cooperate with the regulators of such markets in other countries performing similar functions to that of the Monetary Authority in the Cayman Islands.

Mr. Speaker and Members of this House, I commend this Bill and thank you for allowing this explanation.

The Speaker: The question is that a Bill entitled, The Monetary Authority (Amendment) (International Cooperation) Bill, 2000 be given a second reading. Does any member wish to speak? (Pause)

The Third Elected Member for Bodden Town.

Mr. Roy Bodden: These are indeed sobering times for the Cayman Islands. I am sure that there will be no shortage of commentators and people purporting to have solutions and answers, but I would caution any hasty action. I will go on to show that the Cayman Islands cannot win this battle—and it is a battle rather than a war. The Cayman Islands cannot win this battle easily because this battle has historical precedence.

While we cannot win the battle, I believe it would be hasty and ill advised to conclude that this is the end of the Cayman Islands. Contrary to what many people may perceive, I believe this is but the end of a chapter, not necessarily the end of the book.

I listened intently to what the government has had to say, particularly since Monday when the backbench and the government had a rare occasion since all these events have come to a head to really sit down together embarking on a full and frank exchange. In the beginning, I was angry and confused. But now I have come away with some clarity and an appreciation of the position the Cayman Islands finds itself in.

I want to state clearly and unequivocally from the outset the position I have painstakingly arrived at. It is a position that sees no sense in pointing fingers, that sees no merit in obstinacy and objection; sees no merit in the old philosophy of divide and conquer. Indeed, I see no merit in trying to capitalise on a situation by preaching gloom, destruction, and despair that might be premature.

I don't believe this is the time to eulogise the Cayman Islands. Rather, I believe it is a time for us to seize the advantage and move on to grow in a different direction. We absolutely must come away with lessons learned from this exercise and use those lessons to move on in a positive way so that the country can continue to prosper.

Having said all that, it would be foolhardy to believe that we should not have seen some things on the horizon. It would be less than an acknowledgement of the truth to say that we should not have anticipated some of these developments. I want to go on to highlight what I believe our failures are, what I believe led us to this position now, where we have primarily to react, where we should have been able to at least dictate some of the terms as a result of trying to be proactive.

It is a position that had its genesis years ago, perhaps in many governments past. One of the reasons for this is that we came upon the scene when we were really not prepared for the kind of success we experienced. When I say we were not prepared, it's because we entered into a system where the success overwhelmed us to such a point that we did not seek to prepare ourselves and move along. We did not understand all of the obligations and responsibilities. And the greatest fallacy is that we spent a lot of time emphasising that we were so large—we were the fifth largest international financial centre in the world! We were taken up with our own importance so much so that we did not realise that with this position, this rank, came certain responsibilities and obligations.

We did not escape the intention and the envy of larger and longer established domiciles. They resented our success and the fact that within 30 years, a small dot had achieved a status comparable to their status, many of them with civilisations, history, and politics much better organised and developed than ours. We came to the attention of the world.

In a world where geopolitics has changed since the demise of communism and the Soviet Union, Western Capitalist countries focused more attention on the affairs of the East. Hence, the new term "globalisation" came about, which means a shrinking of the world, certainly a shrinking of the interests. Nations formerly taken up with ideologies now had more time to spend on economic development, and, by inference, the way that capitalism works and the control of the world's money. We have that in all its myriad facets with the development of the World Trade Organisation and the various trading blocs and with the prominence of the European Union.

But the downfall of the Cayman Islands came (like the people in the movie Business) when we began to believe and take too seriously our own PR! In the world of Hollywood, it is said that an actor is finished when he begins to believe his own PR. We spent too much time dwelling on the fact that we were number five. Not to be totally unexpected, we didn't realise that with being number five came obligations and responsibilities.

If you are a champion in any division and you don't continue to train, condition, and prepare yourself, then when you are challenged you will lose your championship. Many champions forget about the gym, they forget about the heavy bag and the medicine ball, and they forget about the rules of the game. That's what has happened to us. We can't get this right by talking nonsense and pointing fingers. We cannot get this right by blaming. We have to acknowledge our faults and, like the champion we claimed to be, we have to go back to the gym. In this case, going back to the gym means that we have to revisit our laws. We have to do what is expected.

I am going to pause here so that I can be clearly understood. We don't have too much choice. And when I say that the position we find ourselves in had historical precedence . . . Thucydides, the great historian writing in the Peloponnesian War, relates an incident very similar to what the Cayman Islands finds itself in today.

There was a war between the Spartans and the Athenians—two big city states. And the Melians found themselves caught in the middle. The Melians were a colony of Sparta, and they summoned the aid of Sparta to protect them from the Athenians. And so Sparta came.

At the end of the hostilities, there was a conference. Anyone who studies international law and politics would be familiar with The Melian Dialogue. I crave your attention to read a short excerpt from this: "The Melians, to the fairness of quietly instructing each other as you propose, there is nothing to object. But your military preparations are too far advanced to agree with what you say as we see you are come to be judges in your own cause."

The Melians now had invited the Spartans to leave since their job of defeating the Athenians was over. Now the Melians and the Spartans sat down to work out the terms under which the Spartans may, if they chose to, leave.

"As we see, you are come to be judges in your own cause and all we can reasonably expect from this negotiation is war, if we prove to have right on our side and refuse to submit, or, in the contrary case, slavery."

The Athenians replied, "If you have met to reason about presentiments of the future or for anything else than to consult for the safety of your state upon the facts that you see before you, we will cease talking. Otherwise we will go on."

The Melians said, "It is natural and excusable for men in our position to turn more ways than one both in thought and utterance. However, the question in this conference is, as you say, the safety of our country and the discussion, if you please, can proceed in the way you propose."

I won't read everything, except this reply of the Athenians when the Melians made that proposal: "Since you know as well as we do that right as the world goes is only in question between equals in power, while the strong do what they can and the weak suffer what they must."

That is the position the Cayman Islands finds itself—the strong do what they can and the weak suffer what they must. We will suffer more if we don't do what we are supposed to do. The way out of this is not by obstinacy, and not by declaring any unilateral declaration of independence or anything else. To be deemed a pariah state, to be threatened as a terrorist state would indeed be worse. We are not prepared for that.

And then, if we resist, how long are we going to resist? We couldn't last a week. We can't even feed ourselves. Where are we going to get food? Do you think that if we defy the United States they are going to fill our ships?

And, Mr. Speaker, where are we going to go when we get ill? It will come down to these kinds of things. The bottom line is simple: the rules of the game have changed. And if we want to play, we have to play by the new rules.

I am not saying that we have to give everything. But I am saying that we have to begin by showing a willingness to cooperate. Of course, there are some frightening things, and we are going to have to acknowledge that the concessions we are being called upon to make in some instances amount to a cessation of practical sovereignty. We have not been called upon before to give this kind of accountability.

It is not a one-way street. There is a mutuality of interest. We in the Cayman Islands can manoeuvre ourselves into a position where we also benefit from some of the things we have to give up. We also get concessions in return for the concessions we give.

There is another lesson to be learned. Even the metropolitan country (the Mother Country as some people choose to term it) will take a hands-off approach when it suits her. That is what I have some difficulty with. In all of this it seems that no one is willing to grant the Cayman Islands any credit for cooperating. The Cayman Islands has been a cooperative state beginning with the MLAT and before that. It seems that now, however, no one is willing to give us credit for that cooperation. I don't know whether or not it was expected that we should have seen these things and moved along. That's the difficulty with these negotiations—the strong are not ready to give any credit to the weak.

I want to say that I appreciate what is being required by the Cayman Islands at this time. I wish I were in a position to say where it will end. But I believe—being the optimist that I am—that it is not the end of the Cayman Islands. I think it is practical and sensible to expect that there is going to be some shrinking. I have said before that this is where tourism will have to take up some of the slack in the interim.

I hope that the trickle down effect is not so great and so long lasting that it causes any major economic upset. I stop short of preaching doom and gloom because where is the viable alternative? I am still waiting for a viable alternative to be put forward. I have wrestled with this from the time I was first made aware of it. I can't see any. And believe you me, I don't consider myself the least informed. I have toyed with ideas. I have been my own devil's advocate. I do not see a viable alternative to an element of cooperation that is expected and demanded of us at this time. First of all, it is not our money, so we can't hold on to it.

I have concerns about the transformation of the Monetary Authority in such a short time. I have concerns about the number of new staff members that will need to be taken on. I have concerns about the different role of the Monetary Authority. I have concerns about how this information is going to be accessed. I expect that the proper safeguards will be put in place. I heard the honourable Third Official Member mention that safeguards would be taken on board so that "fishing expeditions" can be discouraged.

I hope we can also get to the point where we can discuss some kind of understanding where certain matters have amnesty. Certainly, the principal concern seems to be money laundering. There can be no amnesty in that case. But I hope we don't reach the stage where the focus is on purely tax avoidance matters. Indeed, that will have an effect on us that we won't be able to take easily. But I can understand because there's a worldwide concern with the phenomenon of money laundering. It has mutated to the point where it is not as we knew it in the 1980s or even the 1990s. It has taken on a more sophisticated form.

For our own survival, it is necessary for us to equip ourselves, because if it gets out of hand it can ruin the Cayman Islands. We will be eaten up by the disease itself. It could bring this country down as it has other jurisdictions, such as Columbia, and cause a breakdown of civil society.

Some people believe that the move of the Cayman Islands is a stampede towards cooperation. But the weakness that we have at this time is not that there is any stampede, but that our human resources and our physical resources were stretched to the point where they had never had that kind of experience before. It is not easy for one group of people to always have to be operating at the top of their mental acumen when involved in large-scale operations.

I want to come back to what I see as a weakness. I believe that somewhere along the line someone should have seen the necessity for us to have beefed up the resources and developed our infrastructure to the point where we at least had some semblance of an idea that this day would have come.

I am reminded of a conversation the former Second Elected Member [for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman] and I had in May of 1996 with some of the personnel of the Foreign and Commonwealth Office. I am reminded of a specific conversation with Mr. Patrick Moody. He said to us at that time that the United Kingdom was concerned about the business of the Cayman Islands as far as it related to it being an international financial centre.

The United Kingdom was getting pressure from Canada and he detailed that the Canadians said that 43% of their gross domestic product was outside of Canada. He said they were getting pressure from Germany. He said that the French were as miserable as always. And they all, I gathered, were complaining about the role and position of the Cayman Islands in international financial circles.

At the end of his exposition, we asked him what he expected us (in the Cayman Islands) to do. He replied "Well, you should invest in better equipment for Cayman Airways and develop your tourism infrastructure because when we are finished with you, that is all you are going to have to lean on. You won't—I emphasise WON'T—be operating in international financial circles at the level you are operating now."

We didn't press the gentleman because it was indeed a little alarming to us. I would be very surprised, however, if the position he gave in May of 1996 was exclusive to the former Second Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman and me. That leads me to this point: At what time were we aware that we would come under this kind of pressure? Did we somehow lull ourselves into a false sense of security that we would be able to continue to operate as we had been accustomed to operating? The weakness we find ourselves with now is that we should have anticipated somewhere along the line that we would have been pressured in this way.

Being number five—and the world knew we were number five!—we could not have gone without due attention. Perhaps the most obvious warning came when it was rather late, that is, when the OECD put out its booklet on harmful tax competition. There was some activity but we should have flurried to understand what was going to happen.

I am going to suggest that the time has come, if we are going to continue in this business, that we now have to invest in a department or unit structured so that we have a financial services intelligence unit. Its primary responsibility being collating, researching and seeking out trends and developments going on in the world of international finance with a view to anticipating developments and ensuring that the Cayman Islands is eminently poised to be proactive in the event of substantial change where laws may need to be modified, where positions may be needed to be taken, and where we can develop a public relations exercise which will ensure that our objectives and our actions are not misunderstood, and where we can make our case clear and plain that we are meticulous, cooperative, and serious. A financial services intelligence unit.

I would add that perhaps we already have the beginnings in the Secretariat we have established. It makes sense to invest in this and to broaden it into a sophisticated entity where we have state of the art communications, the best financial services intelligence gathering capabilities, and where we have people who are quite capable of informing the relevant departments, government members, members of the delegation, so that they can be prepared and apprised.

To remain a contender means that we have to continue to train and condition ourselves. If we discontinue going to the gym, and discontinue the roadwork and the exercise, we will have to concede our position in the top ranks, and we will fall. We have to become proactive rather than reactive.

It is unfortunate that we now find ourselves in a position where we are fighting in the 14th round and we're behind. We have to fight with a flurry of activity. We don't want to go down because we cannot go down! Our intention should be to fight to a draw, but we can't lose. Fighting to a draw means that we have to bargain with these people. We have to discuss and cooperate. There's no other way.

We have to yield some turf because we are not in any condition to fight. And even if we were, I am not convinced, knowing the facts as I now know them, that we could win. What is the alternative? Defiance? Then we could buy a year or two, but do you know what would happen? First of all the UK wouldn't allow it to happen.

Do you think that the UK would allow us to defy the OECD of which it is a founding member? Do you think the UK would be willing for us to defy the G-7 of which it is a member? Do you think it would be willing for us to defy the FATF, the Financial Stability Forum and all these other organisations? No! One thousand times No! It would not allow us. They would come and suspend the Constitution, throw us out of office and rule from over yonder. They would rule by an Order in Council. They would send every one of us home, Mr. Speaker, including your good self.

The UK itself at this very point in time is considering issuing an advisory against us. So is Canada. There is absolutely no room for us to be obstinate. We have to show these people that we are willing to sit and discuss. We have to call on them (as the Melians called on the Spartans) to be reasonable, to be fair, to leave us with some dignity, leave us with some semblance (as the Japanese say) of saving face. But we have to be prepared to give up something.

I can be as adversarial . . . heaven knows, I have no particular love for the National Team Government. I take special pride in saying that I am a Backbencher—No, Mr. Speaker, greater than that—I am Opposition! I declared it on the day of swearing in on 27 November 1996. But today my suit is different. I have, for the survival of my country, to close ranks and stand with the government on this issue. Tomorrow I might have occasion to differ with them on a different matter, but today I would be less than responsible if I did not acknowledge that we are in trouble. And the only way to get out of it is to temporarily close ranks and see how best we can meet the demands, obligations, and requirements.

Now is not the time to play politics. The Cayman Islands as an entity that has experienced great economic success is under threat. I have examined the case. I have been in a position to see it from all of its various aspects. I see no other way out. I don't have any alternative that is more viable than trying to make these amendments. I said where I saw the weakness, and I hope we have learned from that. I have proffered a suggestion that I think we can benefit by if we develop this financial services intelligence unit. I have to support what I think is worthy of support.

I am going to take my seat, and I suppose I am going to have to take my licks. But I have taken licks before. I refuse to be dishonest. I refuse to destroy the country. I was not elected to do that. At this time I cannot encourage anyone to do other than what I think is appropriate, defensible, and true at this time, that is, to look and see how these various Laws, The Monetary Authority Law, The Companies Law and the other related laws, can be amended to meet the expectations and obligations that the international agencies and these countries have demanded of us.

It's frightening to think that the Confidential Relationships Preservation Law, as we know it, is going to be changed, dismembered . . . it might be gone. But that's not the end of the world. We can craft something else which is just as acceptable. The challenge now is for us to learn and get into a position where the next time we are faced with this we can be proactive rather than reactive.

I could speak all day, but I would have nothing more to add than that sir. I am not eulogising the Cayman Islands. We are in a challenge. God has blessed us before, and He will continue to bless us. This is the time for us to close ranks. I will have many more opportunities between now and November to highlight my differences with government and to, as we say in this hallowed hall, beat up on them. But today is not one of those days.

The Speaker: Does any other member wish to speak? The Fourth Elected Member for George Town.

Dr. Frank McField: There have been so many times when we come together during a crisis, a hurricane, during a storm, we feel somehow that the only sensible thing we can do is look out for the general good. But there's a danger there, especially when the crises are so often, and so often provoked by crisis management, that we are so righteous in all that we do that no one dare question us. It is an attitude that does not allow critical appraisal or constructive suggestions, and, as a result of not being able to critically appraise our actions, we sleep until we are awakened by the storm.

Then we run out in the wind to get the board to board up the house. But by that time, so much wind has come inside that it will take out at least one or two parts of the lumber.

I am saying all this to say that four months before an election government is using their negotiation in Washington to suggest they should be voted for again in order to continue such mismanagement. It is funny how we get up here today and somehow merge with them but when they get on TV they take all kinds of credit for their fantastic accomplishments.

I am not going to give them the benefit of my approval simply. That approval will come with additional critique and with the hope that we can get rid of the system of crisis management that is basically led by the Leader of Government Business. It is quite obvious in the short time I have been here that that minister listens better when there is a crisis. When everything is going okay he is a completely different gentleman. But today we know he will sit down and share information. He will cooperate and be willing and hopeful that we can come together as a Legislative Assembly to defend a particular policy which is the result of this.

Why are we wondering if we have a choice? I think that's an important factor, but it's not the most important question. The most important question is about the right and wrong of something. What we are talking about today is not about taxes, it's not about the OECD. We need to make that clear. This particular debate is in regard to the attempt by the FATF to create measures that would mitigate against the continual practice of criminal laundering of money in different jurisdictions including their own jurisdictions.

All we have to do is look at the state of affairs in Columbia. All we have to do is look at our own society that is being adversely affected by crack cocaine. All we have to do is see what happens in the ghettos of the US in order to take up a position that to counter money laundering is a positive thing, not something that we should be doing because someone put a gun to our heads. It is something we should have had the sense and dignity to initiate ourselves because it is good.

Of course, it happens that some of us believe we can be righteous and be against certain things because the Bible says we should be against that. But if we create a system of laws that allow us to harbour criminals who are responsible for the increased development in crime not only in societies like America, Canada and Great Britain, but in our society, if we have the sense to understand that that is exactly what our system of secrecy allows then someone should not have to lead us to a table with a gun to our heads to get us to begin to cooperate. That's what I am saying.

Why is it that with all the puritanical values we hear people spouting that it was not possible for the National Team Government—since 1992 when it came into power—to figure out that this was not just a moral direction, this was the political direction the world was going in? And that if we did not follow in a cooperating manner that we would be penalised at the finish line? Today we are going to give that government another four years, basically, by coming in here and propping them up simply because the country must stand together.

Yes, the country will stand together. I will not fail my obligation; but I will not let them off the hook so easily. I understand that the amendments the Financial Secretary is bringing here in regard to the Monetary Authority are amendments that allow the Authority to act as a regulatory body, as a supervising institution that makes it possible for it to request information, that it gives it a sovereignty. I believe each country talking about sovereignty and challenging other countries for invading that sovereignty should exercise that sovereignty by actually having laws that require, in particular circumstances, that information be exchanged or disclosed to the sovereign members of that particular state.

Therefore, the Monetary Authority Law, as we see it . . . what is sovereign there is the persons who set up these financial service institutions within the Cayman Islands—the banks, the lawyers, the trust companies. They are sovereign in that they can make the choice themselves that there is no authority, in that sense, by law which allows that disclosure of information in specific cases in regard to criminal activities and the laundering of the proceeds of those criminal activities. So who should the corresponding authorities from the US or Canada come to in the Cayman Islands that would have the sovereign authority to request this information? No authority! What we will find when we come here is 'It's him. No, you should go to him. No, it should be her. No, I thought she could solve the problem. Well, I don't have the power. Well, she has the power. No, he has the power . . .'

I know in our daily lives in trying to resolve certain types of issues we go around in circles. I don't believe that the authorities abroad want to go through that. They want someone specific, some specific institution that will be responsible.

The maturity that is being forced upon us over the past month is not just maturity in regard to the laws that govern our financial services; it's also maturity in regard to the entire governmental structure we have. I feel that if we understood that these things would be coming on us, then over these months and years we should have been trying to develop a domestic economy, an internal economy.

All that I have said in regard to the OECD or any of these demands was that the government should come and explain to the people what's happening. Explain the changes. Try to predict what effect some of these changes would have on the financial institutions because it's not the only pillar of our society. We have tourism as well as banking.

We can now put more emphasis in agriculture, for instance. There's the internal construction boom to build homes for the people. So, it's not just foreigners that should come here and buy real estate, we should be encouraged to afford to buy and build homes. We can make profit from trade among ourselves as well. We should never have waited until the last minute to make the internal preparations for the storm that was approaching.

When discussing this matter the Minister of Tourism said that nobody could have seen today, that no one had that vision. I dispute that. And now I have a chance to criticise his government for their lack of vision. He has to prove to me that I didn't have the vision! If he wants to, he can go to CITN and rent a copy of the talk I gave in regard to the White Paper and the OECD. It is documented there. The criticism I made was that government refused to truthfully share information, or fairly share information, with members of the backbench and with the general public in order to brief us as to what the ultimate outcome of all the travels and negotiations would be.

If you are on the blacklist, or if there is an advisory put out against you, how can you negotiate when they have already made their decision? You negotiate with a person before they come to a published conclusion. You cannot take up a published conclusion, go to somebody and say you have negotiated when the published conclusion is there. All you have done is gone to them and said, 'Now we will do what we should have been responsible enough to do many months ago. We will now do what the international community wants us to do. We will now do it because you have now told us that's it—finished! Finito! You're on the blacklist.'

And now we want to take ourselves off that blacklist, and you call that negotiation. Well, the negotiations really took place yesterday and the day before yesterday in the conference room here when you started as a government to discuss with us the specific legislation and ask for our cooperation. You knew that you were talking to responsible and sensible people that would agree with you at the end of the day that there was no way around complying. I agree. There is no way around complying with these demands.

What I do not agree with—and I will not agree with—is that we should have to have a gun put to our heads to decide that every possible step should have been taken, and should be taken in the future, to make sure that our laws and our financial institutions do nothing to support the plague which helps to ruin the lives of people in this country and others, that is, to support the drug trafficking situation.

If it is said that what we will lose is a very small percentage of our business because we have advanced to become a very respectable, efficient, very capable financial management jurisdiction, that means that we should have been cooperating—unlike a lot of other countries in the world that need to at least give the impression that secrecy will hide those persons who have done wrong.

How many of us have read The Firm? How many of us saw the kind of criminal activities that took place in the Cayman Islands? How many of us notice that just about all movies about criminal money laundering mention the Cayman Islands, not Barbados? Not The Bahamas. It's the Cayman Islands. The Cayman Islands is number one! What have we been doing to make sure that something is done to at least counter that impression in the minds of people in these other jurisdictions?

We know that the people in power in the UK believe that this is what is happening. Sometimes when a myth is created, it is very hard to distinguish between myth and truth. We are suffering from the fact that we allowed the myth to continue long after we needed the myth to support us. We have long become a jurisdiction that has more expertise, a good environment, low crime, friendly people still, flexible, stable, government. All of these things attract good money. Therefore, it is realistic for me to accept that there's more good money in the Cay-man Islands then in other jurisdictions where these identical conditions do not exist to the same extent.

What happens if we open our hands? Are we afraid that there will be something in our hands that should not be there? I don't think so. I think that we are the jurisdiction that could have cooperated from the very beginning. At the end of the day, when the phrase "sacrificial lamb" is used, in a sense we could have sacrificed ourselves. If somebody is going to come to sacrifice me, and I have the same principles as the person who is going to sacrifice me, I am going to volunteer. I am going to say 'Have me, because I believe in what I am doing. You don't need to lead me. I am convinced by the righteousness of my stand. I am able to lose whatever little I will lose for it and come back as a virtue.'

I think we have lost that proactive possibility and we are now set into this reactive situation. But I do compliment the honourable Third Official Member. I remember when he brought the OECD question to us some years back, and how he was afraid because of the kind of vibes he was getting from certain members of government. If had not given us the book to read, to begin to make the demands a little more public in the Cayman Islands, we might not even have gotten as far as we did.

There is something wrong when we hide from our people how other people feel about us, or what other people want from us. We need to give our people the opportunity to follow the discussions in the development we make. When we get here and say that other people are ranting and raving and going on in a particular way, they may be going on in this particular way because they do not understand the situation as well as we do because we have been able to follow the developments where they have not.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: And that brings a natural distrust!

Dr. Frank McField: And that brings a natural distrust, annoyance that the government we elected—that the people we elected to the Legislative Assembly would now come in here and hurriedly change these laws without having sufficiently explained it to us.

My job in the past has been to keep the people appraised as much as I can with the very limited information I had. But based upon the principle that if this is what the G-7 countries wanted, this is what the G-7 countries would get, I saw what they got when they went into Panama. They went into Panama and took out what might be considered a legally installed leader. They took him to the US and tried him in the US Courts—not in any international courts.

They went into Haiti and took out a Dictator. They said, 'You be out of here in a certain amount of time otherwise this happens to you.'

They've gone into Iraq, they've gone into Kuwait, they've gone into parts of the world and done these things because they say that what they are doing is for the general good of the world. Therefore, they feel empowered to do so. This is what we have to be working with and having knowledge of.

You are going over to Paris to discuss with whom? The Germans? The arrogant French? Discuss what? They don't discuss—they tell you. They demand! Once you understand that, you begin to get your house in order. I don't know how people come to the point to now assume that what is happening has to do with our constitutional link to Great Britain. It has absolutely nothing to do with our constitutional links with Great Britain because we are swimming out there and Great Britain is saying we're a dependent territory, but we better look after that because if we don't they can't help us. She has her interest on that particular level.

It has nothing to do with our constitutional link to Great Britain. It has nothing to do with our inability as a dependency to make separate sovereign treaties with other sovereign powers. It has nothing to do with that. It all has to do with economic inter-dependency.

One member mentioned that we have all the independence we need—we have economic independence. But what we have is not economic independence. We have economic inter-dependence. If we had economic independence, we could walk. But it's because we have economic inter-dependence—which is what all developed countries have—we cannot sit and make decisions for ourselves without a continuous process of memorandums of understandings with corresponding jurisdictions that we are involved with on a trade basis.

Now, when we buy cars from the US or Japan, what do we buy those cars with? What commodity is exchanged? Do we exchange breadfruit for the Toyota? Do we exchange ackee for the Gucci bags? What is the particular commodity that we produce here to exchange?

We understand that when the US is trading with Japan there seems to be some type of commodity exchanged. What are we exchanging? We are exchanging services. Our commodities are very invisible to the normal eye. They are services located in these buildings. Even when we sell our land, it's used to build buildings that will provide services. We are really in the commodity business of services. That's one reason why immigration is one very important aspect of keeping our industries efficient and effective, by having the quality of immigrant here that can be competent and productive.

The mere fact that we are exchanging services means that we take an immigrant from the UK, Canada, America, or Jamaica, and take him to create the services that we later exchange. So our commodity, our value, is not as fixed as the values that have to do with America where she might need to get steel to create cars and tractors and then we export those things.

Our service industry, which is involved with this global trade system, is a very important part of the products we are using today. We just need to bear in mind that because we need the car from Japan, because we need the clothes from China, because we need the rice from Vietnam, because we need the potatoes from Iowa, that we are a part of an inter-dependent system. They need us, and we need them. This is how the world works. This is how civilisation has grown.

There's no such thing as any one side saying 'This is my interest. My interest has nothing to do with your interest' drawing themselves apart and putting themselves in some so-called isolated anti-this and anti-that syndrome. That is basically what has happened to a lot of the African countries where their leadership did not understand fully the concept of commodity trading, where that became less important than who was driving what car and who was sitting in what office.

We have to bear in mind that we do not cause our people to believe that what we are experiencing today has anything to do with the constitutional link between us and Great Britain.

I am not going to take up all your time talking about this, but I just wanted to make clear to the government that: a) there is a certain amount of blame on their part, not for what they have to do, but for the kind of condition they are now doing it in; and b) I think the government needs to know that as long as this particular mindset continues—where nobody wants to mature to the point of accepting responsibility and accepting the fact that we are the fifth largest financial centre, meaning there must be political leadership, political accountability, and all the other things, and stop blaming things on other countries . . . stop saying 'Oh, poor me! They are forcing me to do this and that.' Be big enough to be actively involved in causing certain things to happen, since you benefit from certain things.

It's important that government realises that this agreement they will get from me today is not an endorsement for them on November 8. I am not endorsing this government by endorsing the need to protect this country at this particular point. I am not endorsing this government. I am saying to the people that if they continue to have government that lacks the ability and foresight to have a new vision, a vision that tells them where they will have to go and be able to plan where they are going, they are cheated at the end of the day because that government will always be making emergency amendments to laws that the people should have been given much more time to study. The mere fact that we must do this today . . . I am not cheating the people of their democratic right to have access to these amendments and discuss them. I am doing this simply because the urgency commands that I do this today.

The mere fact that it is urgent today, the mere fact that government allowed itself to get on this FATF blacklist, the mere fact that Canada has published an advisory about doing business with the Cayman Islands, and that business might not be good business, has to do with a lack of intelligence on the part of the government. When I say that, I don't mean that they don't have intelligence, but they were not gathering the information because that's what makes us intelligent—information at our disposal, not our brains. We all have brains! We need the information to be intelligent.

They should have been doing so since 1992 when the National Team was elected. We were out there promoting tourism, out there having this function, that function and another function. The big bully came from the US, right into our backyard. Why? Because we never really wanted to do what we are now having to do today.

We were never on the side of virtue, justice, and transparency. Now that we have a gun to our heads we must do it. But I do it because I believe it is right.

The Speaker: I think this would be an appropriate time to take the luncheon suspension. We shall suspend until 2.15.

PROCEEDINGS SUSPENDED AT 12.52 PM

PROCEEDINGS RESUMED AT 2.24 PM

The Speaker: Please be seated.

Debate continues on the Monetary Authority (Amendment) (International Co-operation) Bill, 2000. Does any other member wish to speak? The Third Elected Member for West Bay.

Mr. John D. Jefferson, Jr.: I recall the collapse of Interbank in 1975, which was shortly after I joined the civil service. It was not long after that it was determined that the Cayman Islands government needed an inspector of banks and trust companies division. I was the first Caymanian employee of that division. There were only two of us, the Inspector of Banks and me along with a couple of secretaries and support staff. Former Financial Secretary, Sir Vassel Johnson, arranged training for me in North Carolina with the banking department there, in supervision. I spent about one year around Washington DC and North Carolina working with the FDIC examiners, the Controller of Currency Office and the State of North Carolina Bank Examiners.

Upon returning to this country, I had the opportunity to serve as acting Inspector of Banks on a number of occasions. I recall the Financial Secretary asking me for my thoughts on the need of the Inspector's office in writing. As far back as 1978, in response to his request I put in writing exactly what is being asked for at the present time.

I said to the Financial Secretary that we should have the in-house ability ourselves to conduct spot examinations of banks operating in our jurisdiction. I regarded the Inspector of Banks division in those days as nothing more than a façade as a supervisory authority, but specifically geared as a revenue earning division of government.

I also recall that one of the Inspectors I worked with at the time got some information and found it necessary to have a look at one of the banks operating here, a private bank. And he didn't say anything to me—having just returned from Washington DC with a year's experience as an examiner. He went out and I wasn't even aware he was gone. But when he came back he told me that he'd had a look but couldn't make heads or tails of what had to be done, and he wanted to know if I would do a little examination for him. I said I would. I put together a little programme and went out and satisfied myself that the banks management and financial position was sound.

On another occasion, I accompanied the Inspector of Banks to one of the local banks, and before he could even open his mouth, he told the bank manager that if he objected my being there, he would have to go and get permission from the courts. Now, Mr. Speaker, my personal but informed opinion is that the amendments being brought to the Monetary Authority Law are very positive. I believe the ability of the Monetary Authority to gather information from the financial institutions doing business in this country for its own purposes is very healthy, very positive indeed.

Under the Banks and Trust Companies Law (unless it has changed tremendously recently), if the Inspector of Banks is concerned with the operations of a financial entity in this country, he goes out and engages a firm of chartered accountants to look at the financial position of that particular institution. From my experience in working with the examiners in Carolina and Washington DC, when an examiner goes in to look at the financial affairs of a bank, he does not only look at the financial affairs in dollars and cents, but he also evaluates the management of that particular institution.

He makes recommendations based on his findings of the financial position as well as management. Today you can be financially sound, but if you don't have the management in place to continue that success, you can run into problems down the line. So I believe that if the Monetary Authority is going to operate as a regulatory authority of the financial institutions in this country they should have access to that information of company accounts, client accounts, whatever. They are in a confidential position, but at the same time, they require information to arrive at informed decisions on the financial affairs of that entity.

The Cayman Islands boasts over 500 banks. I think it's close to 600 now. And the majority of them are branches of large reputable international banks. There should be a relationship between the Authority here and the Authority in the home office jurisdiction with regard to the exchange of financial information in order to get an overall picture of the financial position and the management position of the entity as a whole.

There are controls in the Law to ensure that any information exchanged between the Monetary Authority here and regulatory authorities in other jurisdictions is still subject to confidentiality. And it's a breach to disclose that information without prior permission to a third party.

The other safeguard in place is that when a request comes in from an authority overseas it first of all comes in writing. The Authority has the responsibility of advising the Attorney General's office of that request. The Attorney General has the responsibility of vetting that information. If he is not satisfied with the request then the information is not passed on to that regulatory authority. The exchange of information is also subject to a memorandum of understanding between the other jurisdiction and our regulatory authority. So it's spelled out in detail what safeguards are in regard to cooperation between the two jurisdictions.

Knowing the other jurisdictions we are going to be doing business with, it is a concern of mine that once information is received that the regulatory authority in that jurisdiction that third parties in that country might attempt to gain access to that information. But I believe once the Cayman Islands is made aware of that activity it puts the onus on them to say they are not operating in a responsible manner, and not abiding by the conditions of the memorandum of understanding. And in the future we may refuse to cooperate with them.

Under section 4 of the amendment to the Monetary Authority Law, it says, "Where a person fails to comply with a requirement under subsection (2) or a requirement under subsection (3) within three days of a date of requirement of direction or such longer period as the Authority may permit, the Authority may apply to the court for an order requiring the person to comply with the requirement or direction." So, if the financial institution from which this information is being requested is not also comfortable with the request, and they feel that the request is unjustified or unreasonable, or constitutes a "fishing expedition," they have the right to refuse to comply with that request immediately. And what the Monetary Authority then has to do is apply to the courts for directives to that financial institution to cooperate.

There's also a very tight timeframe within which this must be done. It says, "the court shall process an application under subsection (5) within seven days of its receipt and shall send the results of the examination to the Authority within fourteen days of the examination." It's a very tight timeframe within which a decision is made in regard to a request.

I believe it's a very positive move from the standpoint of putting the Monetary Authority through its banking division in a position where it is much better informed. They will be in a position to keep a closer eye on the activities of what's going on in the banking sector of this country.

The other fact is that the Inspector of Banks in the Monetary Authority in regard to the branch banks operating here, pay very little attention to them because they are just a branch of a large international institution. But, as I said before, I believe we need to have the ability ourselves to monitor whatever goes on here in the banks or financial institutions doing business in this country.

I believe that if we are going to boast of being a first class financial centre that we need to play by first class rules. We are in there with the big boys. There are certain policies and procedures practised by these other jurisdictions. I believe that we have come a long way in regard to bank inspections and bank licensing in this country. But this move to amend the Monetary Authority

Law will even improve the performance and credibility of the Monetary Authority.

I support these amendments. I want to commend the honourable Third Official Member for bringing it. I believe the Third Elected Member for Bodden Town and the First Elected Member for George Town basically advocated this same approach: I think it's time for us in this country to put ourselves in a position where we can be proactive. We can look at things before they have to be done and make the changes we feel are in the best interest of whatever aspect of the industry, rather than sitting back and waiting, hoping everything will be okay, until the Authority overseas says 'Gentlemen, you have to get your house in order. If you don't, we are going to impose sanctions against you.'

Like the Fourth Elected Member for George Town says, when that happens you are no longer in a position to negotiate anything—in the case of the US, they've already issued an advisory. We don't have a lot of options to think this over. Knowing the US, this is only the first step that they will take to make us cooperate or comply with what they feel is the necessary requirement.

My concern over this issue, this being an election year, is that we have candidates on the outside that are uninformed of the position. They haven't taken the time to even come here and sit in the gallery to listen to what's going on. They are using information in the wrong manner to stir up fear and frenzy among our citizens, misinforming them. I see no reason why we should not do what is being requested here, by way of amendments. We have cooperated all along with the United States with the Mutual Legal Assistance Treaty and the Narcotics Treaty and a number of other very important legislation. They can resort to all kinds of tactics to force us into a very unpopular position. They could easily stop our flights going into Miami and other gateways to the US. They can stop our ships from picking up food in Miami.

It is unrealistic for us to believe that we are in a position to fight the rest of the world. As far as I am concerned, we are really not in that position. I support the position we are taking, the actions being requested here. I believe it's very positive. I give these amendments my full support.

Hon. George A. McCarthy: I beg to move the second reading of a Bill entitled, The Banks and Trust Companies (Amendment) (Access to Information) Bill, 2000.

The Speaker: Will you speak to it please?

Hon. George A. McCarthy: This is one of the Bills that connects with the Monetary Authority amendment Bill we have in front of us at this time. The purpose of this amendment is to repeal the restrictions in the Banks and Trust Companies Law, which precludes the Monetary Authority having access to client information in the absence of a court order. Thank you.

It is to repeal the provision in the Companies Management Law, which precludes the Monetary Authority having access to client information absent a court order.

The Speaker: If you wish to speak to it, please continue.

Hon. David Ballantyne: Thank you Mr. Speaker and Members of the Legislative Assembly.

Today we are addressing issues concerning the scourge of money laundering—which has become a global phenomenon and represents a threat to world economies and the rule of law. It's not only in offshore jurisdictions, or tax havens, that such threats are present; it's often the case that criminals and their confederates in metropolitan countries seek to utilise the facilities of an offshore jurisdiction to disguise the proceeds of their criminal conduct. They launder their money by concealing its origin and their connection with it so that it resurfaces elsewhere in such a way that no one can connect the resulting funds with the original criminal conduct. Even if funds can be traced to criminal conduct, there will often be a problem connecting that conduct to the criminals concerned.

For these reasons, in 1996 the Cayman Islands was a leader in enacting the Proceeds of Criminal Conduct Law, which criminalised money laundering in relation to all serious crimes, rather than in relation only to drugs money laundering which had been the previous position. This was a consequence of global development, but it represented also an acknowledgement by affirmative action that the Cayman Islands recognise the part it required to play in addressing and countering money laundering.

The present Law contains several criminal offences in sections 21, 22 and 23, whereby anyone who assists another person to retain the benefits of criminal conduct when he knows or suspects that the other person has been engaged in criminal conduct, or has benefited from it, is guilty of an offence and liable to imprisonment for up to 14 years. Similarly, anyone who knowingly acquires or possesses another person's proceeds of criminal conduct is guilty of an offence.

Anyone who conceals, disguises, converts, or transfers property representing the proceeds of criminal conduct also commits an offence.

At present a defence to such a charge may be provided by a person disclosing to the reporting authority a suspicion or belief that any property is another person's proceeds of criminal conduct. To avoid being implicated when facilitating money laundering, a financial service provider would at present require to report such a suspicious transaction. It's on this basis that the laws presently stand.

Although there is a Code of Practice issued under the Proceeds of Criminal Conduct Law, by its own terms it is voluntary. It does, however, contain guidance as to the internal reporting procedures to be established within a financial institution, or service provider, as well as providing for the identification of clients for business and record keeping in relation to their identity and the financial transactions they conduct through the financial service provider concerned.

Regrettably, at this stage the FATF in its review concluded that the existing regime to counter money laundering in the Cayman Islands is insufficient to meet international standards—their standards being reflected in the 40 FATF recommendations. Recommendation 15 of those recommendations states: "If financial institutions suspect that funds stem from a criminal activity they should be required to report promptly their suspicions to the competent authority."

This has been interpreted by the FATF to mean that the absence of an efficient mandatory system for reporting suspicious or unusual transactions to the competent authority (provided that such a system means to detect and prosecute money laundering is a detrimental rule. The FATF point to the fact that the Code of Practice is not mandatory and that there is no obligation on financial service providers under the law to have a system for reporting suspicious transactions.

I should add at this point that the argument was put to the FATF that the present laws contain what might be regarded as an indirect requirement to report suspicious transactions, since that is the only certain way (if there is a certain way) of avoiding being implicated in money laundering.

However, the further point to FATF recommendations 10, 11 and 12, is that they have additional requirements identified as mandatory by the FATF. Recommendation 10 states that "financial institutions should not keep anonymous accounts or accounts in obviously fictitious names. They should be required to identify on the basis of an official or other reliable identifying document and record the identity of their clients either occasional or usual when establishing business relations or conducting transactions."

Recommendation 11 states that "financial institutions should take reasonable measures to obtain information about the true identity of the persons on whose behalf an account is opened or a transaction conducted if there are any doubts as to whether these clients or customers are acting on their own behalf."

Recommendation 12 (the third of the trilogy at this point) states that "the financial institutions should maintain for at least five years all necessary records" on transactions both domestic or international to enable them to comply swiftly with information requests from the competent authorities. Financial institutions should keep records on customer identification, account files, and business correspondence for at least five years after the account is closed. These documents should be available to domestic competent authorities in the context of relevant criminal prosecutions and investigations.”

The absence of an efficient mandatory system for reporting suspicious transactions and the lack of criminal or administrative sanctions in respect of the obligation to report suspicious transactions has caused the FATF to fail the Cayman Islands on its criteria numbers 10 and 11.

The Cayman Islands has also been failed on criteria 5 and 6 due to the lack of effective laws or regulations on identification by financial institutions of clients and the beneficial owners of accounts; and the lack of a legal obligation to record and keep documents connected with the identity of those clients and records of their financial transactions.

It is proposed to deal with these criticisms by enacting the relevant parts of the Code of Practice in a different form, namely, in regulations made under the Proceeds of Criminal Conduct Law. This cannot be done at present because there is no such power to make regulations in the law. The Bill therefore seeks, firstly, to enable the Governor in Council to make such regulations. And in order to empower the regulations to contain sanctions for non-compliance with the regulations, it is necessary that the Bill provide that the regulations may contain penalties.

These are set out in the Bill. They are criminal penalties and there should be no misunderstanding about that. Failure to comply with the regulations will constitute a criminal offence. On summary conviction for a breach of the regulations there is a fine not exceeding $6,000 which is the equivalent of the fine under the UK regulations. In serious cases that proceed on indictment, the penalty would be an unlimited fine or a period of imprisonment of up to two years.

Regulations have been drafted and circulated in draft form before the House in order that members of the House, the financial services industry and the public may know what is proposed. As the regulations may not be brought into force until the law has been passed, it has been agreed that representations concerning the regulations may be made with a view to meeting further with the private sector early next week to address concerns and consider possible amendments to those regulations.

It should be said, however, that the regulations have been modelled on the money laundering regulations of the United Kingdom which in turn reflect international standards and therefore compliance with current FATF standards in relation to procedures for client identification, record keeping and the reporting of suspicious transactions.

And if I may just say, it's important that we try to adhere to those standards—and show that we adhere to them—in order to achieve what we are seeking to do. That's not just in my opinion to satisfy the demands of the FATF, if that's how it's viewed. It is what should be done in a mainstream financial centre, which is of significance and standing.

The further main provision of the Bill is to provide for a new offence of “Failure to disclose knowledge or suspicion of money laundering.” At present, there is no direct legal obligation on financial service providers to report to the reporting authority under the Proceeds of Criminal Conduct Law a suspicious transaction. Such a requirement to report suspicious transactions is at present part of the law of the UK, but only in relation to drugs or terrorist offences. It is expected, however, that the UK and the international community will move towards the reporting of all suspicious transactions regardless of the type of crime they are thought to relate.

In this regard, in my submission the enactment of such a measure will make it clear beyond all possible doubt that the Cayman Islands adheres to the highest international standard. There are similar obligations, I understand, operating in the United States, and it is only a matter of time, in my opinion, before all countries are required to make such provision.

The advantage, in my view, of being required to report all suspicious transactions as opposed to only certain types of transactions such as drugs or other crimes, is that a financial service provider is unlikely to be able to tell without investigation, which he should not be required to do, what type of crime underlies the criminal proceeds. All he needs to know or suspect is that the money stems from criminal conduct and appears to be money laundering.

In that event, all he is asked to do is to report in confidence the suspicious transaction to the reporting authority in order to provide protection to himself or his institution against the charge of being implicated in money laundering, or to avoid being charged with the new offence of failing to disclose a suspicious transaction.

The new offence, in order to be credible, requires to carry criminal penalties, and these are set out in the Bill. On summary conviction, the person convicted would be liable to a fine not exceeding $50,000. For serious cases on indictment, an offender would be liable to imprisonment for a term not exceeding two years, or to a fine, or both.

It should also be noted that it is not an offence for a professional legal advisor not to disclose any information that has come to him in privileged circumstances. These circumstances are defined in the Bill. Furthermore, it's a defence to a charge under this new offence that the person charged had a reasonable excuse for not disclosing the information or other matter in question.

Naturally, where a person discloses to the reporting authority the suspicion or belief that another person has engaged in money laundering, a disclosure is not to be treated as a breach of any law giving rise to civil or criminal liability. And it's also to be a defence for a person in employment to show that he or she disclosed the information or other matter to the appropriate person within their organisation responsible for making disclosures to the reporting authority. It's expected that such procedures will be implemented by providing forms for the purpose so that there will be an appropriate record. There already is a form in existence for the disclosure of suspicious transactions to the reporting authority.

I should say briefly in relation to the new offence that it follows almost exactly the language taken from the Drug Trafficking Act 1994 of the United Kingdom. So it is modelled on a tried and tested piece of legislation. But I would emphasise that it applies to all serious crime. Therefore the new legal obligation will be to report suspicious transactions in relation to any serious crime—in other words, a matter that would be a crime within the Cayman Islands, or if it had occurred within the Cayman Islands would be a crime, not just conduct that takes place here. Conduct elsewhere, if had it occurred here, would also be a crime.

Reverting to the proposed regulations to be made under the amended Law, these provide essentially that financial service providers were required to have systems in place for client identification, record keeping and the reporting of suspicious transactions. The regulations detail what such procedures should contain in order to meet the requirements of the regulations.

For example, in relation to identification procedures, such procedures will be satisfactory if they require the production by the applicant for business to the financial service provider of satisfactory evidence of his identify, or the taking of such measures as will produce satisfactory evidence of his identity. The object is to enable the financial service provider not only to know who the client is, but also to verify the identity of that client by obtaining suitable evidence.

In certain cases, where business is introduced by an intermediary who is already subject to a similar requirement to know and verify the identity of the client, it will only be necessary for the financial service provider here to know the client. There is no exemption from the "know your client" rule.

The verification of identity of the intermediary in those cases may be relied upon by the financial service provider. Similarly, where the applicant for business himself is operating in a business that is regulated overseas by at least the equivalent of these regulations, it will only be necessary to know who the client is and unnecessary to further verify his identity as that will already have been done by the overseas applicant.

In relation to record keeping procedures, where evidence is required to be obtained regarding identity, it must be kept. And in any event, the identity of the client must be recorded as well as details of all financial transactions conducted on that person's behalf by the financial service provider. Such details must be kept for a period of at least five years from the date of completion of business, which date is defined in the regulations.

Turning, lastly among these procedures, to internal reporting procedures, they will require that an appropriate person is identified in the organisation to whom a report of any suspicious transaction is to be made by employees within the organisation handling relevant financial business. Such a report is then required to be considered by the appropriate person to determine whether or not the report gives rise to knowledge or suspicion of money laundering. The appropriate person may seek any other information that he or she needs to make that determination, but if the appropriate person concludes that he or she knows or suspects that another person is engaged in money laundering the procedures must secure that the information in the report is disclosed to the reporting authority under the Proceeds of Criminal Conduct Law. There are also other obligations under the regulations for those in authority, including government and the Monetary Authority, to report suspicious transactions to the reporting authority.

Lastly, in relation to the regulations, it should be noted that they are not retrospective. Although financial service providers will wish to consider what due diligence ought to be conducted in relation to continuing business in order to ensure, in particular, that they know who their clients are and have records of their identity, they will also require (if they don't already do so) to maintain records of financial transactions.

I think this raises the important point that all the procedures laid out in the regulations are contained in similar but not identical form in the Code of Practice. Therefore, these procedures should already be in operation by financial service providers, covered by the Code of Practice. To that extent, it should not be unduly onerous for those financial service providers to meet the requirements of the new regulations, albeit they will now have the force of law.

If, on the other hand, it is a significant change for anyone to require that these procedures be observed, it tends to add weight to the FATF argument that they need to have mandatory force in order to be effective. In any event, it's clear that in order to address at least four of the 13 criteria to which reference has been made, such regulations are necessary. The additional new offence will also strengthen the money laundering capability and put the Cayman Islands in a leading position in this aspect of its counter money-laundering regime.

I would like to say something before beginning to wind up about some questions that have arisen regarding which transactions require to be reported, since in addition to knowing who the client is, and having records of the transaction—both of which you need to carry out a money laundering investigation (you just need to know the information is there when you need to get to it)—but the trigger point for criminal investigations is usually based on suspicious transaction reporting.

The authorities must know what is going on before they can act. Accordingly, I would draw attention to the present wording of the Proceeds of Criminal Conduct Law in this regard. It is only conduct which constitutes, or would constitute a criminal offence if it had occurred in the islands, which represents conduct which can be described as money laundering. That is not to say, for example, that if tax is involved it is necessarily not a matter which requires to be reported. If the conduct itself—regardless whether tax is involved—would be a criminal offence within these islands had it occurred here, then the transaction should be reported if there is knowledge or suspicion of money laundering.

Often criminal conduct may be mixed up with tax matters. The one problem is to avoid using the so-called fiscal excuse for not reporting suspicious transactions if there is an element of tax involved. I mention this because people have asked the question. It is presumed, however, that this had been understood to date by the financial services industry since the law has been in force since December 1996 and reports have been made since then.

The point about the involvement of tax in a criminal offence is not to enforce other country's tax laws, but simply to avoid the fiscal excuse being put up of claiming that because tax is involved there's no need to report a suspicious transaction. The government has stated its position unequivocally to the OECD that it does not condone tax evasion, and any serious crime recognised as such within the Cayman Islands which contains an element of tax may form, in my view, a predicate offence for the purpose of money laundering.

Lastly, it should be clear . . . well, I would like to point out at this stage that a separate commitment on tax information exchange has been given to the OECD which will be dealt with by separate arrangement. So I seek to distinguish that from the reporting of suspicious transactions. I trust that will be clear.

Lastly, it should also be clear that when there is a suspicion of money laundering it does not require to be investigated by the financial service provider beyond ascertaining that the criminal conduct in question would be an offence within the Cayman Islands. In most cases, the financial service provider will neither know nor be able to establish exactly what the predicate offence is; but will know or suspect that someone's engaged in money laundering of one kind or another. If they are wrong about that, no further action will be taken and the matter will be kept confidential. If they are right, then the authorities will be able to deal with money laundering effectively.

It's recognised that the introduction of the new money laundering regulations will mean that the existing Code of Practice will require amendment to bring it in line with the new regulations. If there is any doubt in the meantime, the regulations, once they have the force of law, will prevail as they do have the force of law and the Code of Practice does not. In any event, there will be an early revision of the Code of Practice taking into account guidance notes presently used in the UK to complement their money laundering regulations upon which the new regulations have been modelled with the distinct purpose of ensuring compliance with FATF and international standards.

Mr. Speaker, I would like to thank you for the opportunity of presenting this Bill, and for the patience of members listening to the explanations involved. I commend the Bill to this honourable House. Thank you.

The Speaker: The question is that a Bill entitled, The Proceeds of Criminal Conduct (Amendment)(Money Laundering Regulations) Bill, 2000, be given a second reading. The floor is open to debate.

The First Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: When we met in the committee room to go through these bills we were able to finish up the Monetary Authority (Amendment) Bill, but we didn't get to these others. I thought we would have done that this morning. It seemed like most of the members thought it wasn't worth it. I just wish for all to know that I thought it was worth it. And I am only sorry I was not asked whether or not I wanted to do this. However, I will have to ask my questions now.

From what I understand, the honourable Second Official Member said that the principle function of this amending Bill is to allow for regulations to be made by the Governor in Council to prescribe measures to be taken to prevent money laundering and for incidental and connected purposes.

Section 3, reads "before section 20 of the principal Law and after the heading 'Money Laundering and other offences' the following section is inserted [which is 19A(1), (2), (a), (b), (i) and (ii)] 'Regulations made under this section may—make different provision for different circumstances or cases and may contain incidental supplementary and transitional provisions; and (b) provide that the contravention of any provision of these regulations constitutes an offence and my prescribe penalties for any such offence. On conviction on indictment consisting of a fine or imprisonment of a term not exceeding two years or both; or on summary conviction consisting of a fine not exceeding $6,000.'"

What I am not so sure of in that statement is whether the fine referred to on conviction is $6,000 or the fine is a figure to be determined by the Governor in Council.

After section 25 of the principal Law, the following section is inserted, that is section 4 of the amending Bill: "25A (2) subsection (i) does not make it an offence for a professional legal advisor not to disclose any information or other matter which has come to him in privileged circumstances." I think I understand privilege with lawyer/client relations. But I would like a clear explanation as to what would be the definition of privileged circumstances.

Subsection (3) of the amending section of 25A reads, "It is a defence to a charge of committing an offence under this section that the person charged had a reasonable excuse for not disclosing the information or other matter in question.” I want to know what is considered a reasonable excuse. And what rule of thumb will be used to say whether or not the excuse was reasonable or not. And who is going to make that decision.

Those are basically the questions I have in the amending Bill. But when we are looking at the entire picture, because I am looking at this as part of the entire package that calls for the amendment of the various laws and the making of regulations as an attempt to comply with FATF policy. I would like to ask the mover of this Bill . . . when we look at all of this amending legislation, understanding that it is something that has had to be moved very swiftly, the Honourable Second Official Member mentioned that the Code of Practice that existed should have called for the service providers to have already had the personnel in force. But this is different now because it's going to be under regulations, not just a code. If I understand the situation correctly, the agency testing if all of the service providers have the right personnel in place and have them identified would be the Monetary Authority.

If that is the case, then I think the questions that need to be answered are: 1) When will the Monetary Authority find itself in a position to check to see at will (obviously it is not staffed to do so now); and 2) is there any reason to believe that the service providers need a certain amount of time to fall in line with the new amendments and regulations? When is the government going to say to the private sector, 'Fellows, you have until tomorrow before you are liable to be prosecuted if you are not in line'?

I think it's only fair that we answer those questions. If the thought is that the legislation is going to be approved today, and the regulations sometime next week, and after that that's it . . . I just want somebody to say that. Some members of the financial industry are saying to the government that they would like some time to examine the proposed legislation. Is it going to be as of now? Or what is considered reasonable?

I think every member in here, including the government, would have liked to peruse this more thoroughly. Government has taken the position that it is not possible to do that because of the circumstances. I don't think any of us can argue with that.

My third question on timing is, When everything is passed in legislation and the regulations are put into effect, and if certain areas are found to be causing unnecessary problems and there need to be amendments to some areas, I wonder, having approved this legislation and having gone back to the US Treasury to FinCen, and having advised the FATF what has been done, who is going to bring any proposed amendments to this? It is not an impossible situation.

I don't think government would be prepared to say it is absolutely certain that everything in this proposed series of amending legislation is going to be perfect. I think safe comment would be is, given the circumstances and the time they have had, they have done everything physically possible to make it right. But it is not impossible that when all of this is put into practice you will find a circumstance involving something to do with the operation of our financial industry which shows a disadvantage of such a nature that you will say we need to amend the legislation.

I want to know if the government is going to guarantee us if because of fear of reprisal from these other people when they know what is right, still bring that amending legislation, or we are never going to suffer with that. I want to know. And I think it's fair to ask.

Needless to say, the questions I am asking have no bearing on what I know we have to do. I am not questioning that. I have voiced a concern over what seems to be an almost untenable situation whereby we have to be doing this at the execrated rate we find ourselves doing it. I think I have raised a valid concern—I don't know because I have not sat with these people to negotiate.

I don't know if it's a circumstance where if we approve legislation in concert with their thought process that suddenly puts our financial industry in untenable circumstances, do we have room to go back to them and say, 'Look, we passed this legislation, but we are finding it impossible to deal with, so we're going to amend it'? Are we in a position to do that? I don't know. I want an answer. Perhaps that is why there is great concern over moving ahead with this legislation.

I don't raise that to be a fly in the ointment. I don't raise that because I want to slow the process down. I don't raise that because I am looking an argument. But I am going to tell everyone here today that I am going to qualify myself. I don't take lightly what happens in this legislature. While each and every one of us here listens to those in the middle of the whole circumstance, and might well agree with all of the principles applied, when we vote on each of these bills we are voting for every exact word in that Bill—not just its intentions. That's how it's done. We are supposed to have enough between our ears to understand what we are voting for.

I am going to tell everyone here this evening that I am not so sure that everyone in this Legislative Assembly has gone through this and knows exactly what they are voting for. They know what we are trying to achieve. And I want everyone to understand why I am saying what I am saying now, because if anything happens after this, this boy will not be responsible. I have said that it is not right—regardless of anything—for us to go through legislation, see its safe passage with not everyone understanding what is being done. The question about exactly what is being done is not about the principles being sought to be achieved. There is a difference. I know that everyone listening understands me.

However, I am but one voice. I am not going to stand up and say I am not voting for it. I know what we have to do. But I am going to qualify what I am doing here this evening. I will not be held responsible for any of this that is wrong in the future—not me! The only way I would be part and parcel of that is if I too had the time to use other people's expertise and knowledge to make sure that I quite understood everything we were doing.

Mr. Speaker, I raise those questions just to make sure that people understand before we complete this exercise today what we should be doing.

This ain't no laughing matter! It's certainly nothing to joke about. The difference with this one is that we can't come back the next day and say something is wrong with it and fix it. It is obvious from day one, that passage of this amending legislation is not totally in our hands. If it were, it wouldn't have to come to this House. We are obviously doing this to please another entity. Therefore, making amendments to it won't be left in our hands either. Thank you.

The Speaker: Does any other member wish to speak? (Pause) Does any other member wish to speak? (Pause) The First Elected Member for West Bay.

Mr. W. McKeever Bush: These are surely serious times for our country. On Wednesday, I had cause to rise under one of the most important Standing Orders in the legislature—a matter of urgent public business—to elicit some information from the government. We asked that a statement assuring the public that steps were being taken to comply with the request of the US Treasury Department and the Securities Exchange Commission. I also asked that all business operations within the financial sector be advised how to handle the situation in the interim.

I state outright that I have no problem with the principles in what we are trying to do because nobody wants bad business in the country. My concern is have we advised the financial industry how to manage the situation in the interim period? Have we sat down with the people who work the industry and discussed this with them? I hope that somebody in the government will answer that question.

These are our islands we are talking about, our home where we live and want to die and be buried, where the bones of our ancestors are. I have long said that we cannot fight the G-7 countries. We depend upon the US for so much—in fact, practically everything. But that does not say that there should not be due diligence and due process. One thing the Americans understand is due process. They understand the need to operate within a democratic process for they have stepped into too many countries that operated outside our democratic process. Americans understand the need for full and frank discussions for anything that affects the way business is done. And America does not rush into anything.

If you recall Mr. Speaker, when the Mutual Legal Assistance Treaty (MLAT) was passed, it took two years (1984 to 1986) for the discussions. When it was signed in 1986, the Americans didn't ratify the MLAT until 1990. Having said all that, while they understand they have issued a warning. And this is a question to government; The Securities Exchange Commission sent a warning by requesting a Memorandum of Understanding 18 months ago. Why did government not proceed with that request? That's one question I hope somebody will answer before all these bills are passed.

The G-7 countries are trying to push a number of countries out of the competition in the international financial market. They can only succeed if these countries choose not to establish legal and regulatory framework that will prevent money laundering and so on. We must always be willing to cooperate—and we have. We must always be willing to discuss and be forthright about what we are doing. That has not taken place.

There will always be the need, when you are on top, to prove yourself. And Cayman is on top. So, that is not strange. But to prove us an international business centre that is unquestionable would be a good thing for the future. Perhaps that is where we are headed. And I have no problem with that principle. The duty of government is to be vigilant, proactive, and willing to be open to advice. But I don't want to do something today that will come back tomorrow and kick us in the fact.

As I understand it, the Bankers Association, the Law Society, the Caymanian Bar Association, the Council of Associations, accountants and others in the industry have not talked with government on this last round. They don't know exactly what these bills say or do. That is not good. Whatever happened that caused the breakdown between government and the people who normally discuss and advise them on these matters does not speak well of government.

Two further questions that I have are: Is there a guarantee that the advisory will be withdrawn once the legislation is passed? Does government have that in writing? And, when they gave the undertaking to have the legislation passed, did they request such a guarantee from the Treasury unit they dealt with?

Is there any guarantee that the FATF will take us off their list once this legislation is passed? Have they requested that?

Nobody is infallible. The only perfect person to come into this world was Jesus Christ—and they crucified him! I am not here to beat up on the government for having failed. This is a serious matter. But I say to the government that they should not be going on national television to say to the country at such a time that they should be sending this "team" . . . or re-electing this "team." At the same time they are seeking cooperation in the legislature you want unanimity, you are talking about what needs to obtain for the country, yet you go on national television and play these kinds of politics. If government thumps its chest, what do they expect from the other side? Whether that be the legislature or opposition on the outside. If this has not taught them a lesson that they are not perfect, then I don't know what will. But surely, this is no success for them to jump up and holler about.

I say that I agree with the principles. I hope that the questions I ask can be answered. I trust that once we pass this, the goalpost is not going to be shifted again by coming back in another week saying 'My friends, we missed out something and we need another paragraph added, and we have to add another section to the legislation.'

The experience so far has not been good. But I trust that will not be the case. I don't think anyone should take this matter to use as a political football on the outside. While I will have to inform my people in the best way possible, I certainly will not say the government did a good job, but I will be fair to the country because that is what the country demands. The country is bigger than any of us—bigger than any politician or any election. It is bigger than us. I have always put the country first in anything that I have had to do as a legislator.

Having said that, I hope those questions can be answered.

The Speaker: Does any other member wish to speak? (Pause) The floor is open to debate. Does any other member wish to speak? (Pause) Final call, does any other member wish to speak?

If not, does the honourable mover wish to exercise his right of reply? The Honourable Second Official Member.

Hon. David Ballantyne: I don't think I really have an option because there are some questions that in fairness ought to be answered.

I too would prefer that we did not have to move as rapidly as we do, but I believe it is necessary to do that in the interest of the Cayman Islands. I think, however, it can be done in a way that will at least communicate (or I will try) any detail that has been omitted in what I said earlier.

This is a relatively short Bill. As I said, it introduces a regulation making power which the honourable First Elected Member for George Town made reference to. What I propose to do very briefly, just so there's no doubt about this and it becomes a matter of public record, I want to just now read the first part of the new Criminal Offence so that everyone can really understand what we are talking about literally, line by line.

What it says is that a person is guilty of an offence if he knows or suspects that another person is engaged in money laundering; if the information or other matter on which that knowledge or suspicion is based came to his attention in the course of his trade, profession, business, or employment, and he does not disclose the information or other matter to the reporting authority as soon as is reasonably practicable after it comes to his attention. Now there you have it. If a person knows or suspects that another person is engaged in money laundering, the information came into his possession in the course of his business, trade or profession, and he does not disclose it as soon as is reasonably practicable to the reporting authority.

I am not suggesting that's the whole of the section, but it's the operative part. The penalties are right at the end "A person guilty of an offence under this section shall be liable on summary conviction to a fine not exceeding $50,000 or on conviction on indictment to imprisonment for a term not exceeding two years or a fine or both." I should add no prosecution shall be instituted under this section without the consent of the Attorney General. So, that's one bit of detail that may help to throw a little more light on this.

But coming back to some of the questions that were asked, it is a defence to this new offence that the person charged had a reasonable excuse for not disclosing the information or other matter in question. It's hard for me to define what is a reasonable excuse. I know that's why the question might have been asked. Put me, a poor lawyer, on the spot!

Fortunately, I don't have to decide that question because that's a matter for the court. I can answer it in general terms. It will depend entirely on the circumstances. And you cannot describe the myriad of circumstances that might apply, but some reason unconnected with the individual that prevented the disclosure. If, for instance, it was physically impossible, if a person was struck down with illness and was unable to make the disclosure . . . but then you would probably find that he would be able to say it wasn't reasonably practicable for him to have done that. So he wouldn't have committed the offence at all.

But there will be circumstances. And I can refer you to the existing law because the Proceeds of Criminal Conduct Law already has this reasonable excuse defence in it in relation to the other offences. So, what I can tell you is that it is consistent with the other offences. I am looking in particular at sections 21, 22 and 23 the Proceeds of Criminal Conduct Law. For example, in section 22 (11) "In proceedings against a person for an offence under this section, it is a defence to prove that (a) he intended to disclose to the Reporting Authority such a suspicion, belief or matter . . . (5) but (b) there is reasonable excuse for his failure . . ." So it was already in the Law. The courts here and elsewhere will have or be able to interpret that.

The question was put as to what constitutes legal professional privilege. Again, that's in the Bill in subsection 8. It says "For the purposes of this section any information or other matter comes to a professional legal advisor in privileged circumstances if it's communicated or given to him by or by a representative of a client . . ." So, it's given to him by his client or a representative of his client "in connection with the giving by the advisor of legal advice to his client."

So, if you are in the process of giving legal advice information coming to you in that context, or information given, is privileged. "By, or by a representative of a person seeking legal advice from the advisor . . ." so, again in the legal advice context, "or by any person in contemplation of or in connection with legal proceedings and for the purposes of those proceedings."

This is fairly straightforward. These same definitions are already contained in the Proceeds of Criminal Conduct Law in relation to other offences. However (and I should point this out to you at subsection (9) of this new clause), “no information or other matter shall be treated as coming to a professional legal advisor in privileged circumstances if it’s communicated or given with a view to furthering any criminal purpose.” Information communicated or coming to a legal advisor for the purpose of committing a criminal purpose is not privileged.

I should also point out that “where a person discloses [and this is subsection (4) of the new section] to the reporting authority his suspicion or belief that another person is engaged in money laundering or any information or other matter on which that suspicion or belief is based, the disclosure shall not be treated as a breach of any restriction imposed by statute or otherwise.” That simply means that it’s not a disclosure that would be a breach of the Confidential Relationships (Preservation) Law.

By my reckoning, I have covered subsections (1), (2), (3), and (4). Subsection (5) deals with the situation I described where a person who was in employment at the time in question . . . “it’s a defence to a charge of committing an offence under this section that he disclosed the information or other matter in question to the appropriate person [you may remember that I mentioned appropriate person in the context of the regulations] in accordance with the procedure established by his employer for the making of such disclosures.”

An employee who has possession of information, knowledge or suspicion can alleviate himself of his possession by passing that information to the appropriate person in his organisation. The disclosure of that kind (this is subsection (6)) shall not be treated as a breach of any restriction imposed by statute, i.e., not a breach of confidentiality.

The last subsection, with which I have not dealt, is subsection (7). It contains a definition of money laundering. That is, “‘money laundering’ means doing any act which constitutes an offence under section 21, 22 or 23 of the Proceeds of Criminal Conduct Law [existing Law], or in the case of an act done otherwise than in the islands which would constitute such an offence as is referred to in paragraph (a) [namely, sections 21, 22, or 23].”

We need to expand that at committee stage to include the Misuse of Drugs Offences because they are money laundering offences as well. So, the definition of “money laundering” will be an all-inclusive definition of drugs money laundering and other serious crime money laundering for the purposes of this legislation.

I appreciate that this is fairly tedious material. But I think it’s necessary in the circumstances to go through this in such detail since we did not have the opportunity earlier to complete the process of communicating the information. I take that opportunity now.

The regulation making power will simply be “The Governor in Council may make regulations prescribing measures to be taken to prevent the use of the financial system for the purpose of money laundering.” I think that is reasonably straightforward.

And the regulations will be available for further scrutiny before they are made by Governor in Council under the new law, and reactions will be obtained from the private sector further to the several meetings we have already had. It is appreciated that they have not had a long time to look at these, but they have had some time. They also had, as have you, the benefit of the UK Money Laundering Regulations with which to compare them. But I have said that I will sit with them, and we will talk until we all understand what we are talking about and what it means to implement this. And we will take a view—and I take this position on behalf of government—as to when it will be right and appropriate to introduce these regulations at a point where it is sufficiently clear that they are right and it’s sufficiently clear that the regulations are in the form they should be introduced.

I am going to add a qualification to that, but that should be at the earliest possible point after this law comes into effect. And I am talking about days, not weeks. But I am prepared to spend the time and I am prepared to sit down and talk it through. I have found that in talking with Members of the Legislative Assembly it’s a much more effective way of communicating the ideas of a bill rather than letting the words on the page speak for themselves.

In my own estimation, I don’t believe that the contents of the Code of Practice, which I have here, and which lays out procedures for record-keeping, for recognition and reporting of suspicious transactions, and for customer identification and verification, are really substantially different from the procedures expected to be accorded legal force in these regulations. I am not saying they are the same, but the differences are in the detail. I think the regulations are relatively self-explanatory.

But I do make the commitment, and I have already made arrangements as those who were present at yesterday’s meeting with the Private Sector Consultative Committee know, for a further meeting on Tuesday afternoon when these matters will be discussed in depth. In the interval, I trust that people will look at the regulations and work out how they think they will affect them, and that will be taken into account when we meet.

I would add on the wider picture, I haven’t answered one or two details that I think I would like to. The question of the level of fines . . . is that a matter for the regulations? Or is that a matter for the law? Well, all the law empowers is the making of regulations that carry certain maximum penalties. So, it’s up to the regulations themselves to specify what those penalties will be but they cannot exceed the amounts set out in the Bill before you. Those amounts are, in respect of contravention it says, “Provided that the regulations may provide [so there is a discretion] that the contravention of any provision of those regulations constitutes an offence and may prescribe penalties for any such offence on conviction on indictment consisting of a fine or imprisonment for a term not exceeding two years or both; or on summary conviction consisting of a fine not exceeding $6,000.”

In fact, the regulations contain criminal sanctions of exactly those proportions. That is what is proposed in the draft regulations. So, I trust that is clear, they don't have to be at that level and different offences could be provided for in different regulations at different levels.

There was a question about the Monetary Authority monitoring compliance. One of the committee stage amendments to the Monetary Authority Law will be that the Monetary Authority will be tasked with the duty of monitoring compliance with these money laundering regulations, which I think is a sensible approach. I would also think it sensible that it would be allowed time for implementation, which is another very good reason for passing legislation as soon as possible.

When we met with the US, it wasn't a case of just passing the laws they were interested in. Anyone can (if you don't mind me saying so) pass laws. But implementing them is another matter. I think we have to give thought to that and work out how that's to be done in a suitable and appropriate way so that the laws are given effect in reality and brought into force in a proper and early way.

We aim to make these laws work. It will be the law and the practice. I mentioned (or if I didn't I would like to) that there are guidance notes available to complement the UK Money Laundering Regulations. I think we may be able to draw from them very effectively to supplement or revise the existing Code of Practice.

Mr. Speaker, I don't wish to prolong this, but there were a number of questions asked. It was suggested that the private sector does not understand this legislation. That's not my impression of the conversations we've had with them. Some would prefer more time, undoubtedly. And I have indicated that in an ideal world that would be all of our preference. However, I don't think that there is a large level of misunderstanding about what this law is all about, or indeed the Monetary Authority Law for that matter.

I think we are all perfectly clear about why the FATF has made these findings and what it is we are seeking to do to put them right. It is simply the fact that there is external pressure in order to put these matters in order. But as I said earlier, I wouldn't have any difficulty—even if there were not that external pressure—in recommending these measures. It's just that we would probably take a little longer to discuss them than in the circumstance of having an advisory and being on a list.

I think from what I have understood that people well understand and perhaps have some concern about the effect of implementing some of these measures on their existing business and how that is liable to be affected. These are quite legitimate concerns. But it's my firm belief that this will all lead to an increased bill of health for the financial services industry, and for the anti-money laundering system in the Cayman Islands. Therefore, I have no difficulty in that regard in saying that these measures should be implemented.

I would hope that those in the private sector understand (and I think they do) that these are calculated not just to fend off FATF initiatives, but to meet appropriate international standards, which never remain static. I don't think it's realistic, frankly, to expect that people will never come back and say the standard has moved on. Standards do move on. I believe it's always necessary to be re-examining systems to make sure they are up to scratch.

I will give you one example. Until the middle of the 1990s only drugs money laundering required to be criminalised. We came to the middle of the 1990s and all serious crime money laundering required to be criminalised. That was a new international standard. So, this is not a static issue. In the age of Internet banking, you can be fairly sure that you are going to see some new international standards.

I will try to wind up. The question was asked if there are any problems. Well, I expect there will be wrinkles. If there are any problems, I will take my share of responsibility for having pursued the enactment of these measures and I hope that members of the House will feel in the light of the information that they have that they can support these measures. If there are problems, you have the unique advantage in this jurisdiction of having a Legislative Assembly that can meet very quickly in order to deal with matters. Other jurisdictions, where they have a legislative calendar where they have to pitch a year ahead, have much bigger problems.

I am not an advocate of enacting law in haste and repenting at leisure. I don't believe in that at all. It's only because of the extenuating circumstances here that we are having to move as quickly as we are.

I would also like to address the issue of a guarantee from the FATF. We are in no position to extract a guarantee from anyone, because they have undertaken a review which was not an inclusive process. A guarantee would not be appropriate. However, we have sought some kind of assurance, if I can put it that way, from the United Kingdom that if these steps are taken they would support our position that we do meet the relevant standards.

As I stand here, I do not know if this will be an absolute answer to all of the standards. Because on the back of this initiative comes the KPMG review, which will raise other and perhaps wider issues. There may be other questions we have to look at in due course. And I am not too concerned about that because I know that as a result of our analyses the questions raised by the KPMG review are at least half answered by some of the issues we are addressing now. So, the solution to one initiative can be the solution to some of the questions in another.

What I can say is that from the contact we have had with Treasury officials of Her Majesty's Government in the UK, they are of the view that the measures presently being adopted should substantially address the concerns of the FATF and bring us in line with the international standards in the areas we are addressing.

We know too that of the five major concerns, which were mentioned by the President of the FATF, that the measures proposed today go almost entirely to satisfy those concerns. I don't wish to do the arithmetic because I don't think it is a question of arithmetic. But the consolation for anyone concerned about anyone coming back is that we are not measuring ourselves against the desires of the United States or any other metropolitan country. We are measuring ourselves against international standards which are written down in the 40 FATF recommendations.

I have some confidence that if we can show that we meet those standards we can put the ball into the court of the FATF and say to them 'We think we meet your standards, tell us what you think.' And if there are any areas of deficiency, we will look at those further. We hope that the answer would be that there are no areas of deficiency. But if there were, we would look at that again. What we will know is that the matters we have dealt with now will not be deficient because they are calculated to address the criteria which they say we meet at the moment to be described as non-cooperative.

I think you will have the flavour by now that the bills before you are designed to tighten up the anti-money laundering system and to improve access by the Monetary Authority and its ability to cooperate internationally. This will all take time to work through. But I am quite sure that it's to the good of the Cayman Islands. I believe that with your support we can move things forward in an appropriate way, a way in which it will be recognised that the Cayman Islands achieved the requisite international standards and continues to show a lead in this field.

I am quite sure that other countries will be watching what is happening here, and will take note of what is being done. If in the area of suspicious transaction reporting we are going a little further than even some of the major metropolitan countries, I think that's a good thing. I think that sends exactly the right signal, and that's exactly the course upon which you should embark.

I say this as an advisor. I am the Second Official Member, someone who has not been here for a great deal of time, but I think long enough to understand what the Cayman Islands is about. I support it. I will work with you. I want to make sure that the financial services industry thrives in a healthy climate that we eradicate bad business where we should and that the country will prosper and move on.

This is simply my contribution. I don't know if the FATF in October will remove us from the list. It may depend on the results of a further evaluation. We will have to make sure that is undertaken at the appropriate time. I am persuaded that the measures we are taking should take us from the list, otherwise we would not be putting them forward. I am saying that I can't guarantee that. But insofar as our team has analysed the problems that have been put to us, and devise solutions designed to address them, that is our expectation. And that is our firm hope.

Mr. Speaker, I think that is all I wanted to say. I thank you for your forbearance, and that of Members of the House. With that, I thank you for the opportunity to speak on this Bill.

The Speaker: The question is that a Bill entitled, Proceeds of Criminal (Amendment) (Money Laundering Regulations) Bill, 2000, be given a second reading. Those in favour please say Aye. Those against No.

AYES.

The Speaker: The Ayes have it.

AGREED: THE PROCEEDS OF CRIMINAL CONDUCT (AMENDMENT) (MONEY LAUNDERING REGULATIONS) BILL, 2000, GIVEN A SECOND READING.

The Speaker: Honourable Members, we are a few moments away from the hour of interruption. Standing Order 10(2) reads as follows "(2) At 4.30 p.m. the proceedings on any business under consideration shall be interrupted, any motion which has been moved for the adjournment of the House shall lapse, and, if the House is in Committee, the Presiding Officer shall return to the chair of the House, save that if the Presiding Officer is of opinion that the proceedings on which the House or the Committee is engaged could be concluded by a short deferment of the moment of interruption, he may in his discretion defer interrupting the business."

I prefer under Standing Order 86 to move the suspension of Standing Order 10(2) in order to avoid the interruption when we go into committee, if an honourable member would move that motion.

SUSPENSION OF STANDING ORDER 10(2)

Hon. Thomas C. Jefferson: Mr. Speaker, I am pleased to move the relevant Standing Order to allow the business to continue.

The Speaker: The question before the House is the suspension of Standing Order 10(2) to enable the House to go into committee and complete deliberations. Those in favour please say Aye. Those against No.

AYES.

The Speaker: The Ayes have it.

AGREED: STANDING ORDER 10(2) SUSPENDED TO ALLOW THE HOUSE TO CONTINUE BEYOND 4.30 PM.

The Speaker: The House will now go into committee to consider a Bill entitled The Monetary Authority (Amendment) (International Co-operation) Bill, 2000, and three other Bills.

HOUSE IN COMMITTEE AT 4.21 PM

COMMITTEE ON BILLS

The Chairman: Please be seated.

The House is now in Committee. With the leave of the House may I assume that as usual we should authorise the Second Official Member to correct minor printing errors and such like in this Bill?

Would the Clerk state each Bill and read its clauses?

THE MONETARY AUTHORITY (AMENDMENT) (INTERNATIONAL CO-OPERATION) BILL, 2000

The Deputy Clerk: The Monetary Authority (Amendment) (International Co-operation) Bill, 2000.

Clause 1. Short title.

Clause 2. Interpretation.

Clause 3. Amendment of section 2—Definitions.

The Chairman: The question is that Clauses 1 through 3 do stand part of the Bill. If there is no debate, I shall put the question. Those in favour please say Aye. Those against No.

AYES.

The Chairman: The Ayes have it.

AGREED: CLAUSES 1 THROUGH 3 PASSED.

The Deputy Clerk: Clause 4. Amendment of section 4—Principal functions of authority.

The Chairman: There is an amendment. The Honourable Third Official Member responsible for Finance and Economic Development.

Hon. George A. McCarthy: In accordance with the provisions of Standing Order 52 (1) & (2), I would like to move the following amendment to The Monetary Authority (Amendment) (International Co-operation) Bill, 2000 that clause 4 be amended “by deleting ‘as the Authority may specify’ and substituting the phrase ‘as may be specified in regulations’; and by deleting ‘as may be specified by the Authority’ and substituting ‘as may be specified in regulations.’”

The Chairman: I grant leave, as the two-day notice was not given for this amendment. The amendment to clause 4 is open for debate.

Mrs. Moyle.

Mrs. Edna M. Moyle: Are we making two changes in this clause 4? “as may be specified in regulations’ in two places? Because I have two amendments that read the same.

Hon. George A. McCarthy: Yes, Mr. Chairman, there are two changes being made. On page 6 of the Bill, the second line of item (b) which starts off “Any additional regulatory functions in relation to companies or financial services as the Authority may specify.” That is the first of the amendments. The second one deals with the end of that paragraph, the concluding sentence, the phrase that ends, “as may be specified by the Authority.”

The Chairman: Mrs. Moyle.

Mrs. Edna M. Moyle: I am to understand that one of these changes happens to be in the definition of “overseas regulatory authority,” and one happens to be the definition of “regulatory functions”?

Hon. George A. McCarthy: Yes, Mr. Chairman.

The Chairman: Is there any further debate? If not, I shall put the question that the amendment to clause 4 do stand part of the Bill. Those in favour please say Aye. Those against No.

AYES.

The Chairman: The Ayes have it.

AGREED: AMENDMENT TO CLAUSE 4 PASSED.

The Chairman: The question is that Clause 4, as amended, do stand part of the Bill. Those in favour please say Aye. Those against No.

AYES.

The Chairman: The Ayes have it.

AGREED: CLAUSE 4, AS AMENDED, PASSED.

The Deputy Clerk: Clause 5. Amendment of section 4—Principal functions of authority.

The Chairman: There is an amendment. The Honourable Third Official Member responsible for Finance and Economic Development

Hon. George A. McCarthy: In accordance with the provisions of Standing Order 52 (1) & (2), I would like to move the following amendment to The Monetary Authority (Amendment) (International Co-operation) Bill, 2000 that Clause 5 be amended: “by deleting paragraph (b) and substituting the following paragraph, ‘(b) (i) by inserting, after paragraph (d) the following paragraph, “(da) to provide assistance to overseas regulatory authorities”; and (ii) by repealing paragraph (e) and substituting the following paragraph, ‘(e) to perform such ancillary functions as may be appro- prate in performing the functions set out in paragraphs (a),(b),(c) and (da).”

The Chairman: The question is that Clause 5 be amended. The question is open for debate.

Mr. Bush.

Mr. W. McKeeva Bush: I have a question. This section of the law gives the principal functions of the Authority . . . and perhaps this is a good place to ask the question, When does government intend to make the Monetary Authority completely independent?

The Chairman: Mr. McCarthy?

Hon. George A. McCarthy: I think I mentioned either during the discussions that took place during the committee meeting, or in the committee room, that at this point in time there is a review being carried out by Executive Council. A report has been prepared by a study group of the board of the Monetary Authority. This sets out the basis for operational independence. This is presently before Executive Council for consideration. There will be a presentation Tuesday, a week from now, by that group. Following that, Executive Council will be asked to review the recommendations as made.

It should be noted that there is a need to establish the accountability structure of the Monetary Authority in order for operational independence to be achieved.

The Chairman: Mr. Bush.

Mr. W. McKeeva Bush: I would like to further ask Mr. McCarthy, whether an amendment to the law will have to be made. What does he foresee as the process?

The Chairman: Mr. McCarthy?

Hon. George A. McCarthy: It is quite likely it will result in amendments having to be made to the law. But this will flow from the recommendations from the report itself following the review.

The Chairman: Mr. Bush.

Mr. W. McKeeva Bush: When will those recommendations come, and when do you foresee an amendment?

The Chairman: Mr. McCarthy?

Hon. George A. McCarthy: It is quite likely that those amendments will be coming, the amending Bill, during the September meeting of this House.

The Chairman: Mr. Roy Bodden.

Mr. Roy Bodden: Can the honourable member tell the committee why it took the government this length of time to set the Monetary Authority on its course as a fully autonomous body? Members on this side of the Legislative Assembly raised the question—certainly I raised it—and it was also raised by Dr. McField some time ago suggesting that the Monetary Authority should have been fully autonomous.

The Chairman: Mr. McCarthy.

Hon. George A. McCarthy: From the very inception of the Monetary Authority it was intended that it should be established as an independent agency. But Mr. Bodden will recognise that the transition period from the merging of separate departments which started in 1994, rolling those up into the Financial Services Supervision Department followed immediately by putting the Monetary Authority . . . it was necessary to ensure that the operational structure and accountability was in place when the Monetary Authority became independent. When the Monetary Authority was established in 1997 the government made a commitment—and still intends to follow through on that commitment—that the Monetary Authority should be an independent body. But it will require having in place all of the necessary checks and controls in order to achieve this.

We now have on hand a report that makes recommendations to this effect. Ideally, it would have been preferred for this to be done for some time now, but it must be appreciated that everything takes time. We are getting there, and hopefully this will be achieved in September of this year—at least the legislation will be brought. The accountability structure must be in place to ensure, given the significance of the Monetary Authority in regulating our financial industry and particularly at this time it is very crucial that that mechanism be established whereby that accountability structure is put in place to ensure there is regular dialogue between the Monetary Authority and Executive Council.

The Chairman: Is there any further debate? If not, the question is that the amendment to clause 5 stand. Those in favour please say Aye. Those against No.

AYES.

The Chairman: The Ayes have it.

AGREED: AMENDMENTS TO CLAUSE 5 PASSED.

The Chairman: The question is that Clause 5, as amended, do stand part of the Bill. Those in favour please say Aye. Those against No.

AYES.

The Chairman: The Ayes have it.

AGREED: CLAUSE 5, AS AMENDED, PASSED.

The Deputy Clerk: Clause 6. Amendment of section 30—Relations with banks and other financial institutions.

The Chairman: There is an amendment. The Honourable Third Official Member responsible for Finance and Economic Development.

Hon. George A. McCarthy: In accordance with the provisions of Standing Order 52 (1) & (2), I would like to move the following amendment to The Monetary Authority (Amendment) (International Co-operation) Bill, 2000 that Clause 6 be amended “by inserting the following paragraph before paragraph (a): ‘(aa) by inserting after subsection (1) the following subsection, (1a) The Authority shall monitor compliance with regulations made under section 19A of the Proceeds of Criminal Conduct Law (1999 Revision)’; and by inserting the following paragraph after paragraph (c): ‘(d) by inserting after subsection (7) the following subsection (8) Where a person complies with a requirement under subsection (2), a direction under subsection (3) or an order under subsection (4), or who gives evidence under subsection (5), such compliance shall not be treated as a breach of any restriction upon disclosure of information by or under any Law and shall not give rise to any civil liability.’”

The Chairman: The question is that clause 6 be amended.

Mr. Roy Bodden?

Mr. Roy Bodden: I just have a concern. It seems to me that this is changing radically the function of the Monetary Authority from how we knew it in the past. I suppose it is becoming more in line now with what it should really be. But I would like the honourable member to give the committee the assurance that the Monetary Authority will be a fully regulatory body, rather than a police investigative unit. It seems that the role is being transformed.

I would like some assurance as to the fact that the Monetary Authority will still be a regulatory body.

The Chairman: Mr. McCarthy?

Hon. George A. McCarthy: The thrust of the amendments being made is to give the Monetary Authority access to clients’ accounts. The reason is that in order to ensure compliance with the Proceeds of Criminal Conduct Law, and under the regulations and to ensure that banks are carrying out due diligence procedures it will be necessary for tests to be performed by the Monetary Authority as part of its regulatory review.

The Monetary Authority will be required to ensure that financial institutions are complying with the provisions of the Proceeds of Criminal Conduct Law and the accompanying regulations and the guidance notes that will be issued.

It is not a question that the Monetary Authority is becoming a policing agency as such, only that its regulatory activities will be heightened for it to function as an effective regulatory agency within the Cayman Islands.

The Chairman: If there is no further debate, I shall put the question that the amendment stands part of Clause 6. Those in favour please say Aye. Those against No.

AYES.

The Chairman: The Ayes have it.

AGREED: AMENDMENT TO CLAUSE 6 PASSED.

The Chairman: The question is that Clause 6, as amended, do stand part of the Bill. Those in favour please say Aye. Those against No.

AYES.

The Chairman: The Ayes have it.

AGREED: CLAUSE 6, AS AMENDED, PASSED.

The Deputy Clerk: Clause 7. Insertion of new section—Assistance in obtaining information.

The Chairman: There is an amendment to clause 7. The Honourable Third Official Member responsible for Finance and Economic Development.

Hon. George A. McCarthy: In accordance with the provisions of Standing Order 52 (1) & (2), I would like to move the following amendment to The Monetary Authority (Amendment) (International Co-operation) Bill, 2000 that Clause 7 be amended “by deleting paragraphs (a) and (b) in the proposed new section 30A(1), and substituting the following paragraphs: ‘(a) authorise a competent person to exercise any of its powers under this Law; and (b) seek the assistance of the Commissioner of Police in the exercise of those powers.’”

The Chairman: The question is that Clause 7 be amended. If there is no debate, I shall put the question. Those in favour please say Aye. Those against No.

AYES.

The Chairman: The Ayes have it.

AGREED: AMENDMENT TO CLAUSE 7 PASSED.

The Chairman: The question is that Clause 7, as amended, do stand part of the Bill. Those in favour please say Aye. Those against No.

AYES.

The Chairman: The Ayes have it.

AGREED: CLAUSE 7, AS AMENDED, PASSED.

The Deputy Clerk: Clause 8. Amendment of section 42—Confidentiality.

The Chairman: There is an amendment to clause 8. Will you point out where that appears in the Bill?

Hon. George A. McCarthy: I am going to ask the honourable Attorney General to assist me.

Hon. David Ballantyne: Mr. Chairman, the amendment occurs near the beginning of clause 8. Clause 8 reads, “Section 42 is amended (a) in subsection (2) by inserting the following paragraph after paragraph (f)—(fa)” and the amendment comes immediately after “(fa)” where the words “lawfully made” require to be inserted before the words “to a person.” So that it will read “(fa) lawfully made to a person with a view to the institution of or for the purpose of . . .” etc.

It’s simply to make sure that any disclosures made under the law and permitted are lawfully made under the law and through the proper channels.

The Chairman: The Honourable Third Official Member responsible for Finance and Economic Development, would you move the amendment please?

Hon. George A. McCarthy: In accordance with the provisions of Standing Order 52 (1) & (2), I would like to move the following amendment to The Monetary Authority (Amendment) (International Co-operation) Bill, 2000 that Clause 8 be amended “by inserting, after (fa), the words ‘lawfully made.’”

The Chairman: The question is that the amendment do stand part of clause 8. If there is no debate, I shall put the question. Those in favour please say Aye. Those against No.

AYES.

The Chairman: The Ayes have it.

AGREED: AMENDMENT TO CLAUSE 8 PASSED.

The Chairman: The question is that Clause 8, as amended, do stand part of the Bill. Those in favour please say Aye. Those against No.

AYES.

The Chairman: The Ayes have it.

AGREED: CLAUSE 8, AS AMENDED, PASSED.

The Deputy Clerk: A Bill for a Law to Amend the Monetary Authority Law (1998 Revision) to make provision for assisting financial services supervisory authorities outside the islands to obtain information from within the islands and for incidental and connected purposes.

The Chairman: The question is that the Title do stand part of the Bill. Those in favour please say Aye. Those against No.

AYES.

The Chairman: The Ayes have it.

AGREED: TITLE PASSED.

The Chairman: Will you read the next Bill please?

THE BANKS AND TRUST COMPANIES (AMENDMENT) (ACCESS TO INFORMATION) BILL, 2000

The Deputy Clerk: The Banks and Trust Companies (Amendment) (Access to Information) Bill, 2000.

Clause 1. Short title.

Clause 2. Amendment of section 12—Powers and duty of authority.

The Chairman: The question is that clauses 1 and 2 do stand part of the Bill. Those in favour please say Aye. Those against No.

The Deputy Clerk: Clause 4. Insertion of new clause—Failure to disclose knowledge of suspicion of money laundering.

The Chairman: Honourable Second Official Member.

Hon. David Ballantyne: I have to move a committee stage amendment. In accordance with the provisions of Standing Order 52 (1) & (2), I would like to move the following amendment to The Proceeds of Criminal Conduct (Amendment) (Money Laundering Regulations) Bill, 2000 that Clause 4 be amended at subsection (7) “(a) by inserting after the words ‘In this section’ the words ‘and in section 19A’; (b) and by inserting after section 21, 22 or 23 the words ‘or section 47 or 48 of the Misuse of Drugs Law (2000 Revision).’”

The Chairman: Will you supply us with copies of that amendment? Members do not have it.

Hon. David Ballantyne: Oh, that’s unfortunate, Mr. Chairman. Perhaps while that’s being done, I can explain what the necessity is unless members would prefer to wait until they have it in front of them.

The Chairman: I think you can go ahead.

Hon. David Ballantyne: Thank you very much.

[Inaudible comments]

Hon. David Ballantyne: Well, that’s why I suggested that maybe you would—

[Interjections]

Hon. David Ballantyne: Well, let me give a general description first until we get the details in front of us, and I will tell you why the amendment is necessary.

Money laundering as defined in the present Law refers to everything except drugs money laundering. The purpose of the amendment is to make the reference to money laundering cover both drugs money laundering and non-drug money laundering. It's a consequential amendment—but necessary in order to get complete coverage so that in the regulations where they talk about money laundering, it's not just money laundering under the Proceeds of Criminal Conduct Law, but also any money laundering under the Misuse of Drugs Law.

So, you as a practitioner or financial service provider won't have to worry whether or not it's drug money laundering or any other kind of money laundering. But in the Law we have to make sure it covers the offences under both Laws.

I believe the amendment is now being circulated so that you will see exactly what it is proposed to say. Sometimes the small amendments are the most awkward because they are difficult to pin down, but we will try to do that once the document has got to you.

The Chairman: I waived the two-day notice on this amendment.

Hon. David Ballantyne: I am obliged Mr. Chairman.

I think the detail of the amendment has now been received. If members will have to have the bill, and in particular Clause 4, you will see that Clause 4 deals with the new section 25A and it's section 25A, subsection (7) on page 7 of the bill. The words in question to be inserted are . . . where you see subsection (7) about halfway down the page where it says, "In this section money laundering means" the words in this section and in section 19A are to be added so that for the purposes of regulations made in respect of money laundering the same regulations will apply to drugs money laundering as they do to money laundering under the PCCL.

That's the first minor amendment.

The second is, you will see little paragraph (a) which says, "which constitutes an offence under section 21, 22 or 23." After "23" should come a comma and the words "or section 47 or 48 of the Misuse of Drugs Law (2000 Revision)."

The effect of that is to include in the definition of money laundering the existing drugs money laundering offences so that we have in the definition of money laundering complete coverage of all the money laundering offences. So any conduct which constitutes an offence under the PCCL or under those sections of the Misuse of Drugs Law will be comprehended by the expression "money laundering." And for the purposes of the regulations, that definition will apply for the purposes of section 19A.

So where in section 19A you read "The Governor in Council may make regulations prescribing measures to be taken to prevent the use of the financial system for the purposes of money laundering . . ." money laundering will mean that as defined in section 21, 22 or 23 of the PCCL, or in sections 47, or 48 of the Misuse of Drugs Law. Those are all the money laundering provisions in the laws of the Cayman Islands.

Before I close, might I just take this opportunity to publicly thank the First Legislative Counsel, Mr. Clive Grenyer, for all the work that he has done over his time here, but in particular over the last few weeks which have been extremely pressurised—acting on instructions from a point when we were overseas. I would like to commend him highly for the work that he has done and to say that I very much appreciate it. I am sure that Members of this House and the Government also share that appreciation.

The Chairman: Does any member wish to speak to the amendment? If not, the question is that the amendment do stand part of the Clause 4. Those in favour please say Aye. Those against No.

The Deputy Speaker: So ordered. Does the Honourable Minister wish to speak to the report?

Moving on to item 4, Questions to Honourable Members/Ministers. Question 40 is standing in the name of the Third Elected Member for Bodden Town.

QUESTIONS TO HONOURABLE
MEMBERS/MINISTERS

QUESTION 40

No. 40: Mr. Roy Bodden asked the Honourable Acting Temporary First Official Member responsible for Internal and External Affairs to state the policy of the police in cases where complaints of harassment, intimidation and threats are reported by family members against other members of the family.

Hon. Donovan Ebanks: Complaints involving harassment, intimidation and threats against family members are complex in nature and are often the outcome of disputes which have evolved over several years of family life. In such situations, police are expected to act as peacemakers, to uphold the law, and, in essence, settle these matters in an atmosphere of volatility where there are charges and counter-charges.

The suspect often lives in the family home and is supported by the matriarch or patriarch who has the deciding voice in how such incidents are resolved.

When such complaints are made, the police record the report and respond according to perceived threats of violence or danger to family members. If there is an immediate threat, officers respond with great urgency. Arrests may be made in circumstances where an offence has been committed, i.e., assault, damage to property, et cetera.

In the event there is no immediate danger of violence, the officer responding to the scene and any action he takes are generally guided by the circumstances found. He may take the following actions: issue a warning; remove the offending party from the premises; offer advice as to counselling.

SUPPLEMENTARIES

The Deputy Speaker: The Third Elected Member for Bodden Town.

Mr. Roy Bodden: Can the Honourable Member tell the House whether the police have at their disposal any personnel trained in conflict resolution? And at what point do these complaints become a matter to be seriously investigated as a deterrent to the provision of a possible crime?

The Deputy Speaker: The Honourable Acting First Official Member.

Hon. Donovan Ebanks: Madam Speaker, while the police do have personnel who have training in the area of conflict resolution there is no conflict resolution unit as such within our RCIP. Those skills are available at various locations but not in a predetermined format, and as such the officers attending a particular incident may or may not necessarily have had that type of training. The transition from seeking to resolve to the primary function of the police, which is to detect and deal with the commission of crimes, obviously depends on what the officers find at the scene they are attending.

The Deputy Speaker: The Third Elected Member for Bodden Town.

Mr. Roy Bodden: I wish to ascertain whether in those cases where the police offer advice as to the seeking of counselling if the police do any follow-up work and liaise with either the counselling centre or the family to encourage them to take advantage of such counselling.

The Deputy Speaker: Honourable Acting First Official Member.

Hon. Donovan Ebanks: Madam Speaker, my understanding is that generally in the current circumstances such follow-ups are not routinely made. The police recognise the value of such follow-ups and indeed their community policing initiative, which is being introduced, contains that element of that initiative to ensure that there are follow-ups when such advice is given.

The Deputy Speaker: The Third Elected Member for Bodden Town.

Mr. Roy Bodden: How commonplace is having the police intervene in family disputes of this nature?

Hon. Donovan Ebanks: Madam Speaker, such incidences are a substantial part, perhaps as much as one-third of the incidents that the police respond to.

The Deputy Speaker: If there are no further supplementaries we will move on to Question 41 standing in the name of the Third Elected Member for Bodden Town.

QUESTION 41

No. 41: Mr. Roy Bodden asked the Honourable Acting Temporary First Official Member responsible for the Portfolio of Internal and External Affairs what is the response procedure of the police upon receipt of serious threats or intimidation arising out of disputes.

The Deputy Speaker: The Honourable Acting First Official Member.

Hon. Donovan Ebanks: All reports of serious threats or intimidation arising from disputes are treated seriously by the police. The response will be dependent upon the nature of the incident and the resources available to respond adequately.

On receipt of such reports, the response procedures are as follows:

- Complaints are taken and recorded in the incident logging system (ILS);
- The shift commander or most senior officer is informed;

- The officer in charge determines the seriousness of the threat or intimidation and decides on the appropriate action.

If the threat is considered to be serious and (i) weapons are involved, i.e., guns, knives, et cetera; (ii) the safety and well-being of a member of the public is at risk, an immediate response is made with the assistance of the uniform support group or other officers as appropriate. The responding officers would make an arrest or take any other action as required.

In instances where the parties have separated, but the complainant has sustained injuries and there is no perceived immediate threat to the public or the complainant, the officer in charge may offer to take, or instruct the individual to go to the hospital for medical treatment after which he will take a written statement from the complainant. The officer would then respond to the scene as soon as is reasonably possible.

SUPPLEMENTARIES

The Deputy Speaker: The Third Elected Member for Bodden Town.

Mr. Roy Bodden: Thank you, Madam Speaker. Can the Honourable Member tell the House what the basis for determining the seriousness of a threat or intimidation is?

The Speaker: The Honourable Acting First Official Member.

Hon. Donovan Ebanks: Among the factors which would be considered would be the history of activity of the individual(s) involved whether they are known to be perhaps persons who may consume illegal drugs and certainly the details of the report itself in terms of what is alleged to have already taken place that occasion the report and what devices, weapons, et cetera, are involved would all be contributing factors to whether a threat is considered to be constituted.

The Deputy Speaker: If there are no further supplementaries that concludes Question Time. I would entertain a motion for the suspension of Standing Order 14(2) in order to take private members' motions today.

The Honourable Minister for Education, Aviation and Planning.

SUSPENSION OF STANDING ORDER 14(2)

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: I move that Standing Order 14(2) be suspended for the taking of private members' motions on today as normally they are taken on Thursday.

The Deputy Speaker: The question is that Standing Order 14(2) be suspended in order to take private members' motions on a day other than Thursday. I shall put the question. Those in favour please say Aye. Those against No.

AYES.

The Deputy Speaker: The Ayes have it.

AGREED: STANDING ORDER 14(2) SUSPENDED.

The Deputy Speaker: I will now move on to Private Member's Motion No. 14/00. The First Elected Member for George Town continuing his winding-up of the debate.

OTHER BUSINESS

PRIVATE MEMBERS' MOTIONS

PRIVATE MEMBER'S MOTION NO. 14/00

PUBLIC EDUCATION SYSTEM

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: When we broke, I was in the process of dealing with Strategy 3 of the Vision 2008 document, which, with the amended version of the motion, is being incorporated into the National Education Plan 2000 - 2005. We did not know that this strategy had been incorporated into the rollover of the plan until the minister replied.

I find it very heartening to know that this strategy has been incorporated into the plan that has been rolled over. Now I want to make discuss the second "whereas" clause. Part of the amendment says, "AND WHEREAS the Five-year National Education Plan has been extended, updated and rolled over into the National Education Plan 2000 to 2005 and a new strategy with four action plans (which has not yet been costed or detailed) which incorporates Strategy 3 of the National Strategic Plan 1999 - 2008 (Vision 2008) which plan was approved by this Legislative Assembly."

The 1995 - 1999 National Strategic Education Plan is said to contain nine prioritised strategies and 105 action plans on the education policies with each action plan stating the following:

1. The date each action plan is assigned.
2. The date each action plan starts and is due for completion.
3. The actual completion date.
4. The person or persons accountable for implementation.
5. The cost benefit analysis of each action plan.

Madam Speaker, the plan of 1995 - 1999 inclusive of the year 1998 is two years behind (meaning behind its perceived implementation date). If you have a plan from 1999 that states the date that the plan is assigned, the date each action plan starts, completion date, the actual completion date, the persons accountable and the cost benefit analysis, and in its third year (of five) it is two years behind . . . when this plan was reviewed for the year 2000 . . . I am concerned greatly about the methodology employed that allows for anything not done according to plan and implementation dates to simply be rolled over into whatever the new one is.

I am not suggesting that is the case, but what I find to be very possible is that we could have a National Strategic Education Plan from 1995 to 1999 and have set all of our dates and our timelines for implementation. We could actually rollover that plan from 2000 to 2005 and at the end of 2005 not have gone any further than what our 1995 to 1999 projections were for completion or implementation.

I have not seen the revised plan for 2000 - 2005. The minister mentioned that certain sections are missing if he were to table the document right now. I understand that, but I really wish to lodge the concern. If we have a plan of that nature that no one questions—not only the veracity of but the goodness of the policies which are outlined in that plan—and the implementation procedure has several hold-ups in it, then that can cause us a problem. Education is not one of the areas that we can sit by and relax with.

If we are going to employ strategies with implementation dates based on present knowledge, and if we continue to lag behind then we will forever be playing catch-up. We will never be able to get to the point where we say we can relax for half-a-day because we have gotten the job done. This is not pointing fingers at the people who are responsible for or involved with the implementation process. I cannot point any fingers because I don't know. We are only talking about results—that's what we need to see.

Madam Speaker, I believe that the efforts to realise the implementation of these plans are what really need to be looked at carefully. Let me draw an example. When we were going through the 2000 estimates had it not been for questions raised during Finance Committee for the years 2000 and 2001 with all the talk about site based planning, it would not have been possible for site based planning to take place in the various schools because there was no money voted in the budget for it. The only amount that was actually in the estimates when it was given to us was an amount of $24,000 for the George Hicks High School.

Now, when it was brought to light, immediately there was a move to transfer the funds from somewhere else to ensure that site based planning was going to occur this year.

Madam Speaker, I used that example to say that if we have a National Strategic Plan with timelines for implementation and a prioritised outline of the policy, and if our left hand doesn't know what our right hand is doing . . . it is no wonder that we cannot see our task completed. That is the point that I wish to make.

Now, the minister said during that time that he really was not aware that this was the situation that obtained. Taking what he said, we must have a problem. We know the process. We know that a budget is prepared from the department that is put forward through the ministry before it gets into the whole big picture and then they go through the slashing and the thrashing and whatever. Then they bring a document to us. But if we ended up by making sure that there was money at the end of the day for site based planning (which must mean that site based planning is important in the process), then how come it did not come to us like that?

How come it took us plebes to bring up the topic and ask where the money for this is? Something has to be wrong! And I am going to go to try to find out what that is. I would not wager a guess at this point in time. I just used the example to show the difficulties that we have and that we have to have better coordination than that.

Madam Speaker, I want to take a few minutes to just reflect on a little bit of the debate that the Minister of Education proffered before he brought his amendments. This was when he was debating the original motion. With your permission, I would just like to quote a few areas from his speech.

The Deputy Speaker: Honourable member I have no objections to that if I can be provided with a copy of the Hansard of the honourable minister's speech. There is none on the desk.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Madam Speaker, I have a copy, it has some markings on it, but I would gladly allow that to be photocopied and I could go on to something else until—

The Deputy Speaker: Honourable member, I would ask the Serjeant-at-Arms if he could have the Hansard Officer send a copy to the Speaker's table (unless it has been put on the Speaker's desk in his office, which is the normal procedure) before any member can have a copy of the Hansard.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Madam Speaker, since we are at it I did intend to refer just for a short duration to the minister's debate in July 1998 when there was a previous private member's motion on education when he brought some amendments and was debating his amendments. Perhaps you would want to get the same thing done.

The Deputy Speaker: Proceedings will be suspended for five minutes in order for me to obtain these copies.

PROCEEDINGS SUSPENDED AT 10.58 AM

PROCEEDINGS RESUMED AT 11.14 AM

The Deputy Speaker: Please be seated. Proceedings are resumed. The First Elected Member for George Town continuing his debate.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Thank you, Madam Speaker.

Referring to The 2000 Official Hansard Report, when the Minister of Education was replying to the motion before he brought his amendments on 21 June 2000. He stated, and I quote—

The Deputy Speaker: Could you give me the page number?

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Page 541. He said, “Mr. Speaker, we know where the weaknesses of the education system lie, and we have put measures in place to counteract as many of these problems as we are experiencing.

“Mr. Speaker, it is naïve to blame all the problems of youth on the education system. Many broad charges of a failing system have been made, but the people know the quality of education in these islands, and they know that by far the large majority of our students will be outstanding citizens of our community when they leave school.”

I would like to talk about that for a minute because I think it is important. Whenever one refers the segment of the student population that the system fails for one reason or the other, the minister always talks about the vast majority of students who will either find employment or go on to tertiary education to acquire professional skills. No one is questioning the validity of that statement, and no one is questioning the value of the system that accommodates those students.

I hold the view that it is facetious to allow one's mind to only dwell on the good of any subject matter. If we make broad statements—for instance, ‘Well, if you look into system you have good and bad; but the good outweigh the bad.’ I don't have a problem with that. But are we to say that just because the good outweigh the bad we must disregard the bad? That is what I don't believe should be the case.

So, when we talk about students falling through the cracks, we are not trying to suggest that the system is a total failure—nothing of the sort. We know the long and hard hours educators put in, attempting to make these children be the end product that we want them to be. We appreciate that. We know that there are other players in the game in the department and in the ministry with other attachments to the field of education that really go beyond the call of duty. We know of dedicated teachers.

Madam Speaker, my job is not to come into this place and praise. If I identify what I believe to be inadequate, I must point that out. If I were paid to just placate and stroke egos then I would beg the people ‘please don't put me here’. Not only can I not do that but I would feel unclean when it was all over. I am not going to dwell on that forever, but I really need the point made.

Now, the minister referred to everyone being an expert. I know he will smile at this, but here is what he said, “I guess one of the difficulties that not only I as Minister of Education but I believe other Ministers of Education have faced is that education is one of those areas where everyone is an expert.”

If, by inference, the Minister of Education is saying that I, as the mover of this motion, am pretending to be an expert on education, then not only is he misleading anyone who listens to that statement, but he is misleading himself because I said no such thing. The truth of the matter is, expertise in an area does not qualify an individual to use what is between his ears to identify a problem. It does not. I will say no more on that.

Madam Speaker, I won't read this, I will just summarise it. The minister also said in his delivery that history will prove that the 1995 - 1999 Strategic National Education Plan was the most significant step for education in the last fifty years because for the first time the Ministry, the Department of Education and the schools were all heading in the same direction.

If that is the case today, I am a happy person. But I know that deep down the minister knows that is not quite the situation that obtains. That may well be his hope or his intention. That's all we are saying. We are not saying that government's policy is rife with inadequacies and holes in it. That is not what we are saying. We are saying basically that there has been a problem with implementation.

I think I read something in the paper about the motion being almost redundant based on certain things that were happening. Now, the question of redundancy . . . I don't know about you Madam Speaker (because when you are not in the Chair you sit on the backbench), but I had no idea about this rollover from 2000 to 2005. I won't even suggest that I was supposed to know because I don't know how the minister feels about that. But I know what obtains in the circumstance, we talked and we brought a motion.

With the greatest of respect to all concerned, I hold the view that the same original plan, the rollover plan and the incorporation of Strategy 3, when it comes to implementation I know it has not been happening and there are many reasons for it. The Millet Report came as a question in the House very recently . . . and there is every good reason in the world why that should have happened. I will prod the minister and ask for the report to see what they are doing to move forward.

So, you had self-assessment of the department. You now have an outside individual, who is qualified, paying attention to that self-assessment and then doing her own assessment, extending her own ideas with regard to providing a report as to the way forward. The difference in all of that—which the minister will never admit—is that that should have happened several years ago and the minister knows that!

Of course, the minister knows that. But his answer would probably be, 'Well, you know, Kurt, I am good—but I am not perfect'. I understand that. But you see this business of education is more important than nearly everything else. Even with all of the other issues facing us, if we don't have the right system in place to let our youth realise their potential in whatever area they are gifted in . . . God made us like that and that's why not everyone is a doctor and that is why not everyone is a lawyer. Some of us are good at other things. And our system has to drive the individuals to where they realise their potential in whatever area they can perform best. It has not been doing that.

Now, there are words to that effect in the plan. As of now it has not been done. I am not saying there are not plans to make that happen but as of now it has not been done and that is of great concern to us.

Madam Speaker, I want to go back to page 615 of The 1998 Official Hansard Report, when the minister brought his amendments. I am not going to read all of it, but I just want to show you the line of argument that was brought to prove my point. In July of 1998, the Minister said, "The question of vocational/technical subjects. At John Gray High School, the vocational studies that are taught are:

- Motor Vehicle Studies
- Information Technology
- Work Skills
- Technical Drawing
- Child Development
- Food Nutrition
- Woodwork
- Electricity
- Electronics
- Typewriting
- Textiles
- Building Technology
- Commercial Studies
- Art

At the Community College, the vocational studies there are:

- Auto mechanics
- Construction
- Electricity
- Hotel Operations
- Professional Cookery
- Computing
- Accounting Secretarial

In relation to the extension services, these include:

- Computing
- Air-conditioning
- Architectural Drawing
- Telecommunications
- Wiring
- Plumbing
- Electrical Licensing
- Caribbean Cooking
- Bread and Pastry making
- Developmental classes such as numeracy and others . . ."

And he finished it off by saying, "There is a very wide range of technical/vocational subjects. Members of this House went through the college some time ago and saw the extent to which that college has been developed. We know it is now into the Associate Degree."

Madam Speaker, the way that statement was made you would believe that by now we would be well underway with a technical and vocational programme from the high school through the Community College that could be surpassed by no other. Do you know what has happened? If you check the subjects taught at the Community College now . . . they have said the students have not come forward to take up these studies so it makes no sense to have the classes. But we have been pounding and saying that you cannot expect to start them at the Community College. When a person who does not have a firm plan for his future leaves school, he wants to earn his own money. That is what he wants to do. The difference in the whole affair is that he wants to earn his own money but doesn't have any skills with which to go and earn the money. This is what we are saying we need to correct. It's a big issue! But it has not been done.

I remember not so long ago a programme being espoused in this honourable Legislative Assembly about this marriage with the employers. Anyway, this is a new programme to do with technical and vocational training utilising the private sector. I don't know what is happening with that and I am not saying there is no merit to that thought. But unless we continue to literally hound these people about these matters . . . history has proven to us that we will all get old and still not hear anything about what's being done—because nothing has been done. I know that there are distractions, but we don't have any time to waste when it comes to the education of the people of this country.

We have, in fact, wasted too much time already! I have to go back to the statement that nearly every problem we have in this country can be related to education. And the minister talks about how wild a statement that is and irresponsible and whatever else—not even taking two minutes to understand what poor big me was trying to say. It had nothing to do with trying to make the minister look bad, but that's the first thing that comes to his mind.

Now, I just want to remind him again that part of the motion we brought in 1998 . . . he tried to put forward amendments. And he debated the amendments, but the amendments failed. Then he did not even debate the motion itself after that. He made me wonder about that, but we are beyond that now. Part of the motion in 1998 (which, again, was brought by myself and the Third Elected Member from Bodden Town) . . . and the minister himself said on page 617 of The 1998 Official Hansard Report, in bold print it says: “AND BE IT FURTHER RESOLVED that these matters be treated as top priority and that whatever funds are needed be redirected, if necessary, from elsewhere in order to effect the necessary corrective measures”.

We were talking about capital projects. The minister brought his amendment: “In accordance with the capital expenditure to be laid on the Table of this Honourable House and will support approval for the 1998 expenditure and that the 1999-2000 expenditure be raised by such measures recommended by the Honourable House as priorities in the years 1999- 2000 in order to effect the necessary corrective measures.”

The history of the government is from 1992, when we asked about classroom space and the problems that are going to come about—we sat here and argued about that, we watched it happen and argued more, watched it happen again and argued more about it . . . that gets frustrating. So, by way of a motion we talked about projected capital expenditure in order of priority in the area of education. All the minister did was react, then he sent us a list—the famous $54 million list—of capital projects that he and his advisors saw as necessary in the country. That was in the sixth year of his government's regime.

But are we suddenly to believe that only if we push forward and dig and do what we can to draw the minister's attention to it that he will pay any attention? I cannot believe that is how the minister would operate. He must have a bit more foresight than that.

If we check the records from 1992 to the end of 1997, less than 4.5% of the total capital expenditure was on education! Less than 5% of capital expenditure was on education. Where is the priority? There cannot be any!

Now, they talk about the primary school that is needed. The excuse is that the landowners won't allow the place to be built up in Spots . . . I am not getting into all of that. We must wade through the process until we find the right location. Now they are going to be blamed because the landowners don't want them to build the school there. Madam Speaker, we cannot live like this. All we are doing is outing fires.

Do you notice that we still don't have the primary school or the other high school? I know that it is in train. The one in West Bay is still not done. The fact is that we should have been (without trying to get into too much detail) between two and three years further ahead in everything we are doing in education if it were done with the urgency it should have been done with.

With regard to the capital expenditure, look at how many times we have argued about a medium-term financial strategy and a public sector investment programme, all to do with the government being able to put forward a medium-term rollover plan that is prioritised for the capital expenditure needed. It has never been done! The Financial Secretary and I have wrangled time and time again about it, but I know it has nothing to do with him. It has all to do with the government and its policy—or the lack thereof. If I have to spend the next fifteen minutes—

The Deputy Speaker: Honourable member would this be a convenient time to take the morning break?

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Yes, Madam Speaker.

The Deputy Speaker: Proceedings will be suspended for fifteen minutes.

PROCEEDINGS SUSPENDED AT 11.43 AM

PROCEEDINGS RESUMED AT 12.10 PM

[Hon. Mabry Kirkconnell, MBE, JP, in the Chair]

The Speaker: Please be seated. Proceedings are resumed. Debate continues on the winding-up of Private Member's Motion No. 14/00.

The First Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. When we broke for a few minutes, I was talking about the fact that less than 5% of the total capital expenditure for the country between 1992 and 1997 had been spent on education.

I was quoting from The 1998 Official Hansard Report, page 616, where the minister was bringing amendments to the other private member's motion on education brought then. The minister said after he brought his amendments, "So, I have gone one step further. We have gone beyond saying it is a priority. It's the difference between our talking about it being a priority, I am asking for a commitment. Let us commit next year and the year after to putting the bulk of capital expenditure in this country into the future of this country, which is our education system."

Thank God, at least we agree on something.

"Mr. Speaker, the system is in place there can be no doubt. I have read extensively and I hope that members of this House and the public realise how detail and important the strategic plan on education is—it deals with every aspect of education."

I just read that little section to make the following point: The minister's commitment at that time was that for the next two years the bulk of capital expenditure was going to be on education. History will prove whether or not that has been the case. I was referring to the medium term financial strategy, which is probably now in its seventh or eighth draft, as to what capital projects the government of the day was going to involve itself in based on order of priority. The point that I wish to make is that this government has been totally lax in doing anything of that nature.

Now, when this year ends, money that was put in the budget for certain capital projects to do with education . . . they are going to say how the people would not let them start the school in Spots et cetera. If they are still around (because there is an election in November), they will be happy campers relating to the public how much surplus the country has. But it will not be surplus! It will only be 'surplus' that is displaced because the capital projects that they announced will not have been done or accomplished. In the meantime, my country suffers.

Mr. Speaker, the facts of the matter are as follows: I can only hope that the Minister of Education, in fact his entire government, accepts the need to really make the issue of education the priority that it should be. It is the only sound future for this country and I believe that we have proven that there are certain inadequacies. I believe it is safe comment to say that the majority of the inadequacies are to do with implementation (that is, of the strategic plan), that includes in the area of capital development; that includes in planning the future of the country with regard to educational facilities; that includes upgrading the existing facilities, which are vitally necessary. That includes putting together programmes which involve technical and vocational training so that more of our students can find themselves tooled to be able to get out into the workforce and earn a decent living when they have finished their secondary education. That includes using all that I have talked about to ensure that our social problems do not escalate; and that includes being able to identify the real demands of the work force in the Cayman Islands and doing everything possible to produce the bodies that will find themselves within those demands where no one, if at all possible, is displaced.

It's an uphill task to accomplish that I know. But that has to be the ultimate goal. It must be! If that is not the ultimate goal, we fail before we start.

Mr. Speaker, I don't say all these things professing expertise to the level where I can pinpoint all the solutions to the problems. In fact, no one person knows. It takes all of us working together with ideas—even when we disagree on those ideas—to be able to come up with viable solutions.

I am going to just close on the motion now. There are other things I could have said. The fact is the motion is being accepted. But I want to impress upon the minister and the government that regardless of other priorities, regardless of all of the other areas that we have to be looking at, we cannot delay with the implementation of our educational policies through Strategy 3 of the Vision 2008 document being incorporated into the 2000 - 2005 plan, and through whatever other means that we have to use.

I believe that as a country we have a future. But I also believe that whatever plan is put forward, education has to be its base. Knowledge is going to be the wealth of this country—not the money that is in the bank today. I am not saying (for those who have money) that we are going to throw that away. I am simply saying that the value attached to knowledge is going to be much higher in the future than it has ever been in the past. It is for that reason that we have to pay attention and make sure that we are on the move.

Mr. Speaker, when we look at the initiatives the country faces; when we look at all of the compliance that we have had to so far involved ourselves with—and more to come, when we think about having to shore up certain industries and all that—that has a very serious bearing on the need to have an educated population.

A lot of people might not really realise that, with the way this country has grown, we could find ourselves ten years from now (because of the skills that are demanded) with an imported work force, and 10% or 15% employment in the country. We will wonder whom to blame. What will we do then? What will we do when the people start to say, 'The foreigners need to go—I need the job!' and they are not tooled to do the job? How is that going to work? How are businesses going to say, 'We are going to employ a Caymanian, but the Caymanian doesn't know how to do the work?' That has already happened to a small degree, and it will only multiply if we don't make sure that we do the things that are necessary from now not to make that happen.

I don't make that point to talk about foreigners and Caymanians. I make the point because that is simply a fact that is real and can happen.

I hope that the government fully understands the intention of the motion. With a little bit of wrangling we have been able to agree on amendments brought by the Minister of Education. Putting all of that together, as it now stands (God sparing life) I will simply watch and do the best I can from where I sit to make sure that nothing is left undone. Regardless of how uncomfortable I might make anyone in that process, it is simply because I believe that is the best way I can contribute at this point in time to help to ensure the future of this country. Thank you.

The Speaker: I shall now put the question on Private Member's Motion No. 14/00, as amended, shortly entitled, Public Education System. Those in favour please say Aye. Those against No.

AYES.

The Speaker: The Ayes have it. The motion is passed.

AGREED: PRIVATE MEMBER'S MOTION NO. 14/00 AS AMENDED PASSED.

The Speaker: Moving on to Private Member's Motion No. 8/00, Watersports Concessions at Major Hotels.

The Third Elected Member for West Bay is not present. The Honourable Minister for Education, Aviation and Planning.

Hon. Truman M. Boddan: Mr. Speaker, the reply to this motion will be by the Minister of Tourism. He is off for this week. I mentioned to some members that we put this to the end. If we do come to the end of the agenda, I have undertaken to take the Minister of Tourism's two bills together with the motion and we would deal with it, if it reached that stage.

The Speaker: Are you putting a motion then that this be moved to the end?

Hon. Truman M. Boddan: Yes, sir.

The Speaker: I will put the question that we pass Private Member's Motion No. 8/00, Watersports Concessions at Major Hotels and leave that to the end and go on with Private Member's Motion 11/00. Those in favour please say Aye. Those against No.

AYES.

The Speaker: The Ayes have it.

AGREED: PRIVATE MEMBER'S MOTION NO. 8/00 PLACED AT THE END OF OTHER BUSINESS.

The Speaker: Moving on to Private Member's Motion No. 11/00 entitled, In-depth Discussion on Increased Interest on Electrical Rates, to be moved by the First Elected Member for West Bay.

PRIVATE MEMBER'S MOTION NO. 11/00

IN-DEPTH DISCUSSION ON INCREASED INTEREST AND ELECTRICAL RATES

Mr. W. McKeeva Bush: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Private Member's Motion No. 11/00 standing in my name reads as follows:

"WHEREAS the United States' interest rates were increased on short term funds;

"AND WHEREAS interest rates in the Cayman Islands have been increased on short term and long term funds;

"AND WHEREAS electrical rates will be increased;

"BE IT NOW THEREFORE RESOLVED THAT the Government have an in-depth discussion with relevant banking institutions and Caribbean Utilities Co Ltd with a view of reducing the impact of these recent increases on their clients."

Mrs. Edna Moyle: I beg to second the motion.

The Speaker: Private Member's Motion No. 11/00 has been duly moved and seconded. Do you wish to speak to it?

The First Elected Member for West Bay.

Mr. W. McKeeva Bush: I am concerned about the ever-increasing cost of living in these islands. There are no two ways about it, I believe that we are reaching the breaking point.

Increases in bank interest rates affect everyone, and it affects those with small incomes more than anyone else. I am not saying here that government can go and take the banking institutions and beat them over the head, but I believe that government has a duty where this is happening to sit down and have discussions.

Firstly, the increase in the United States' interest rates is on short-term borrowing not long-term. In other words, the current rate on 30-year fixed mortgages in the United States is something like 8.5% as opposed to our rates locally, which are typically Prime plus 3% or something like 12.5%. The increase by the Federal Reserve in the United States does not increase the cost of money in the Cayman Islands. Our banks here are deposit based and most would have cash above and beyond the capital adequacy ratios as outlined in the Companies Law. Therefore, local banks do not have to borrow at these higher rates to meet any such ratio or to raise funds for lending.

What I am saying is that what is happening in the current systems leads to windfall profits and the consumer is left to pay the price.

In fact, the institutions of these islands get a double bonus as they are allowed to place their excess funds on overnight deposits in the United States market at these higher short-term rates thus earning more on their short-term assets, that is, cash, and their long-term assets which are loans.

Local banks borrow locally by accepting deposits and they lend locally. The spread that they earn is quite substantial, and to increase rates simply because the Federal Reserve in the United States increases the cost of the short-term fund . . . I don't believe anyone can say they are acting with an acceptable social conscience.

Mr. Speaker, the poor man in the Cayman Islands is not going to make it with this current system. In fact, businesses have their costs increased and again this has to be passed on to the consumer who gets hurt but those smaller guys that are levelled with small salaries that cannot afford $100 or $50 added on to their mortgage. The House, the government, and the country must understand this. This is not just happening today it has been happening a long time—there are some people in this country who live from pay cheque to pay cheque and at that they can barely live.

We have single parents and single persons who have worked hard to get a house but can just barely meet their mortgage. Not everyone has gone on a splurge and bought big cars and have big mortgages because of that. Thank God there are still a lot of people who are conservatives when it comes to that sort of thing, and their first priority is to get a shelter. But when you increase (as I will attempt to show later on) $100 on someone who is already living from pay cheque to pay cheque it damages him or her and it damages the social system.

I have not been able to understand properly why within a country like ours we don't have the Monetary Authority regulate local interest rates. Maybe there is some reason that I don't know about, but I often wonder about it.

Mr. Speaker, I would like to give an example of the impact of increased interest rates on the debt service capacity of the average mortgagor. On existing borrowers, the average mortgage amount of $135,000 for an average term of 20 years and a monthly payment at 10.5% is some $1,347.81. But at a monthly payment at 11.50% is just about $100 [more].

For the potential new homeowner, an average mortgage amount required for that same $135,000 for an average term of 20 years at a monthly payment at 10% is still $1347.81. The average minimum monthly household income required to qualify is $3,750, and a monthly payment with the interest rate at 11.5% is that $100. The average minimum monthly household income required to qualify in the face of the 1% increase of the interest rate is $4,000. This is where it slams the average person in these islands. The biggest problem with the increase in interest rates is that it puts the chances of people getting a home further away. For just that 1%, the salary needed to be able to qualify for that same mortgage of $135,000 goes up to $4,000, up to some $300 that they don't have because no one is giving a big pile of raises in this country. The Legislative Assembly is the only one!

Mr. Speaker, that is the biggest problem in this country. Payment to income ratio increases also and that comes to something like $300. These are problems that I see coupled with other problems that are pressing people—pressures and stresses that we don't need.

I cannot understand if the lending rate goes up why shouldn't savings and interest rates increase. That is another thing that I don't understand.

Mr. Speaker, we all know that Caribbean Utilities gives the best service in this region. There are no two ways about it. But the consumer cannot constantly take the impact of the increases. I know they have a contract, which was given many years ago, but the fact remains that it is hurting our people. This has been under discussion for many years. It has been the subject of many motions in this House. It has been [discussed] at government level. I don't know what has been accomplished but Caribbean Utilities keeps increasing its rates and the people are pressured that much more. Some of it is not easy to deal with simply because of contracts, licences that have been granted. But I am asking government to urgently look at this situation.

I cannot do anymore than that and I trust that they will accept the resolution.

The Speaker: The floor is open for debate on Private Member's Motion No. 11/00. Does any other honourable member wish to speak?

The Honourable Third Official Member.

Hon. George A. McCarthy: Mr. Speaker, I rise on behalf of the government to comment on Private Member's Motion No. 11/00.

The Honourable First Elected Member for West Bay is very timely in bringing this motion to the Legislative Assembly. He has provided some examples of the difficulties that persons within the Cayman Islands are experiencing at this time with the increases that have occurred in interest rates especially over the past year.

Quite recently, I spoke to a representative of one of the clearing banks who had a meeting during the course of last week. I should mention that the representative indicated to me that the clearing banks themselves are concerned about what is happening because evidently it is shown where a certain level of delinquency on the payment of credit cards and also other borrowings is on the increase.

Mr. Speaker, the First Elected Member for West Bay also raised the issue as to whether it is timely at this point in time for the Monetary Authority to become involved with the clearing banks in the setting of interest rates. I would endorse the involvement of the Monetary Authority and the government should not have a difficulty with that position being taken. It is one where the policy initiative to achieve this will have to be discussed, and at this point in time I would not want to be premature in the making of any suggestions. I think it has gotten to a point where in order to protect the interest of the local community, and also to guide the development of business within the Cayman Islands, I think this would accrue advantages to both sides—to the banking community and to the Cayman Islands community—for the Monetary Authority to become involved.

At the end of the day, we know it is not only a question of the additional cost to borrowers—especially persons who have taken out mortgages at a given rate and over the past months have found their monthly repayments to have increased significantly. We know this is also having an unfavourable impact on the construction industry within the islands because evidently if homeowners are finding it difficult to borrow and meet the increase repayments that will be brought about as a result of these heightened interest rates, obviously this will be affecting the construction industry. We know the construction industry is also a significant part of our economy and this is an area that will have to be looked at.

I have been made to understand from the representative of the clearing banks that they are assisting borrowers in extending . . . just to quote “To address the recent increases in interest rates the banks have individually addressed how they can best accommodate their customers with the potential increase in loan repayments. One of the main areas of concern has been in respect of mortgages, and, where increased payments have been outside the ability of customers, banks have maintained the existing repayment arrangements and extended the term of the mortgages.”

We do recognise this as a variation of the contractual arrangement because often times when a mortgage is taken out it is for a discreet period of time. If it is taken out for a period of 10 - 15 years often times we find that families have certain activities that have been programmed over a given period of time. Quite a number of these families will have children that will be going off to universities and engaging in other commitments themselves and as a result of that the demand on their income has been programmed over a given period of time.

Where, as a result of these additional costs, mortgages have to be extended by a year or two, Mr. Speaker, this can have an adverse impact upon the family.

This is a matter that will have to be discussed in Executive Council, and I will undertake to put a paper to Executive Council on this matter to allow for an in-depth discussion on this very important subject.

On the question of electricity, again, this is a cost that has to be looked at very carefully. But I should point out that there is a factor here: it is not the straight electricity cost. The Economics and Statistics Department carried out an analysis, and evidence shows, for example in June 1999, a monthly electricity bill of 800-kilowatts rose from $131 to $146 or by $14.97—that is the increase. Of this increase the electricity tariff accounted to just $1.20 whereas the fuel adjustment factor was $13.77.

So, this is a matter that will have to be looked at very carefully because we can see the increases that have been occurring in fuel cost. This has a knock-on effect of significantly increasing the electricity bills to the consumers within our community. Again, this is a matter that needs to be looked at very carefully and again a paper will be put to Executive Council on this matter in order for the government to determine the way forward. Probably at a point in time this could involve engaging with Members of the Legislative Assembly in discussions.

Mr. Speaker, I have been concerned . . . I should say the government has been concerned, in terms of the increases that have been occurring in interest rates. On 16 May 2000, interest rates in the United States were increased by 50 basis point or .5 of 1%. The Federal discount rate increased from 6% to 6.5%. The prime rate correspondingly in the United States went up by 3% to 9.5%. We know that an additional 300 basis points, or 3%, was added in the Cayman Islands to bring the cost of borrowings to 12.5%.

Again, having heard the points that have been raised by the First Elected Member for West Bay, I will be getting a transcript of his comments and those comments should form the paper that will be put to Executive Council on this matter.

The government recognises that these matters raised this morning are very urgent. At this point I could say a lot on this but I would rather this be a guided and informed discussion because this could involve certain changes having to be made or considered especially in the area of the fixing of interest rates and again looking at what is happening in regard to the increased cost of electricity. So, it is much better to be informed by the ideas that have been shared which are very useful. It is much better that those ideas or suggestions by the honourable member form the submission that will be made to Executive Council. Thank you.

The Speaker: The floor is open for debate, does any other member wish to speak? The Third Elected Member for Bodden Town.

Mr. Roy Bodden: I listened to the mover and I listened to the government's response, and there are a few brief remarks I would like to add to what has been said.

The first point that needs to be underscored is the fact that it is high time for the banks in this country to realise that there has to be a more understandable system of operating than what has been transpiring and what has transpired in the past. All honourable members understand the business of banks and understand the business of investment and so on, but our people are screaming that they are bearing an inordinate share of the burden. One has to wonder why every time interest rates rise in the United States they also rise in the Cayman Islands even when the funds down here are not directly impacted.

Mr. Speaker, it is obvious, particularly where mortgages are concerned, that our people are labouring under a rather onerous burden because we have no institutions which specialise in the kind of loans and mortgages which in many of the jurisdictions are peculiar to homeowners. We have none of those foundations and institutions that exist in other jurisdictions that cater exclusively to home and apartment buyers.

There is a need for our people to get some long-term relief from this, those who are currently holding mortgages and also those who are anticipating taking out mortgages. Here I am particularly concerned with young persons who have in addition to the responsibilities of the mortgage, other expenses such as car loan, maybe school fees and other kinds of incidentals expenses, which will impinge on their ability to service the mortgage payments particularly at a time when interest rates are generally rising.

The criticism has also been made that even in those cases where the rates drop in other countries we do not so readily see the results and feel the effects here with the criticism being that the rates are immediately obvious when they have been raised. But when they are lowered there is a reluctance or a reticence for those beneficial results to be felt in this jurisdiction.

Ultimately, the ideal solution to this would be to develop an institution or encourage the development of an institution whose exclusive purpose is to grant long-term mortgages. Often I wonder how it is that we in the Cayman Islands—after all these years of boasting of so much affluence and so many banks—could not set up an organisation like the Fanny May Foundation in the United States whose sole purpose is to help homeowners find affordable mortgages.

I hate to say this, but in a jurisdiction like ours it seems to me that the greater part of the responsibility for accessing these funds and for ensuring that they are available has to fall on the government. So, now it may be that one way the government could address this problem is by developing the Monetary Authority into an autonomous institution which has a greater regulatory say in the raising (and by inference the lowering) of interest rates. I believe that it need not be an adversarial position. I think that some kind of understanding can be worked out between the banks and the Monetary Authority and common ground can be had so that the consumer is ultimately not put out or under pressure.

Mr. Speaker, I need not stress the point that this is of crucial importance now with the expected adjustments that we are going to have to make as a result of recent changes in the laws governing the operations of our financial centre. So that it is of paramount importance that the banks can come under some understanding and we can work out some amicable way in which interest rates can be set and established so as to not greatly inconvenience or marginalise the Cayman customers.

Mr. Speaker, my comments regarding increase in electrical rates can best be captured by the fact that I call again for the establishment of a Public Utilities Commission that would have as one of its reference points the setting or the approving of rates, or consultation in approving rates when the proposal came from the electricity company. Every modern country has such a commission. One of the things we have to deal with inside here . . . and I am going to express it very gingerly, but the problem in the past as I see it is that we are labouring under a situation where there are potential conflicts of interest. We have some people in this chamber whose affiliation and relationship with the banks (and in the past, the electrical company) was to my mind less than satisfactory where you had a mutuality of interest. And some of these people sat as directors of banks and sat as directors of the utilities company.

Mr. Speaker, that is a no-no, because when you get yourself in those kinds of positions . . . where is the loyalty? We have as much to work on extricating ourselves from those kinds of situations before we can purport to properly represent the people and to view these kinds of situations objectively. I am saying, sir, that when we have those kinds of situations our views have to be clouded and we have to decide where we are going to lean. Clearly, there is some work to be done.

I would hope, having brought private member's motions here on two occasions calling for the establishment of a public utilities commission, that one of these days in the not too distant future a majority of honourable members would see the necessity and the efficacy of establishing such a commission. Mr. Speaker, it makes for bad relations and it makes for bad feelings when the Legislative Assembly has to resort to dictating terms and patterns of behaviour to these private sector institutions.

I think in all fairness this kind of thing could best be handled by a body independent of the Legislative Assembly—a body whose function is perhaps largely consultative but not limited to consultation, that has the ability and is structured so that its recommendations can carry some weight. In modern societies, this is the ideal to which to strive. We should do that here because clearly a situation where electricity rates are raised at a time when interest rates are rising, at a time when we are facing a possible constriction in some sectors of the economy, it is going to place a tremendous burden on our people.

I understand there is a fuel factor in this, and right now fossil fuel are perhaps at the highest price they have been for some time. Clearly there is no resolve in sight because even among the organisation of petroleum exporting countries there is no unanimous position. Some countries wish to hold production at the current level; some wish to increase in an effort to reduce the cost; and others are nonchalant and disinterested capitalising on the high prices. We in the Cayman Islands are captive to this kind of international juggling.

When we have the factors that are impinging upon our economy now—high interest rates, high fuel costs, and the possibility that there is some constrictor, I can see where we can have problems among certain elements of the population. Good governments will always seek to get in a position where they can function so that the majority of their people can benefit.

I hope, Mr. Speaker, that I have been able to add something significant to the debate. I look forward to the government trying to craft some relief so that our people won't have to suffer too much longer. Thank you.

The Speaker: I think this would be a convenient time to take the luncheon break. We shall suspend proceedings until 2.15 p.m.

PROCEEDINGS SUSPENDED AT 1.03 PM

PROCEEDINGS RESUMED AT 2.30 PM

The Speaker: Proceedings are resumed. The floor is open for debate on Private Member's Motion No. 11/00. Does any other member wish to speak?

The First Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: I rise to offer a very short contribution on the matter because the issue of interest rates was discussed in this Legislative Assembly.

the motion reads: "WHEREAS the United States' interest rates were increased on short term funds;

"AND WHEREAS interest rates in the Cayman Islands have been increased on short term and long term funds;

"AND WHEREAS electrical rates will be increased;

"BE IT NOW THEREFORE RESOLVED THAT the Government have an in-depth discussion with relevant banking institutions and Caribbean Utilities Co Ltd with a view of reducing the impact of these recent increases on their clients."

Now, there are several different views to take when one is discussing this matter, and I want to separate the two issues for a minute. If we are talking about the bank interest rates and we want to take the view that the clearing banks in the Cayman Islands, the local institutions have historically followed the lead of the United States. In recent years, the great one himself, Alan Greenspan, has been the trigger for interest rates moving one way or the other in these islands because the clearing banks here seem to attach much relevance to the fact that the United States whenever they move their interest rates it has a bearing directly on us.

I have heard arguments proffered where one of the reasons for this is because the majority of deposits that these local institutions have are in US dollars not Cayman Islands dollars. As a result, when interest rates on deposits accompany interest rates on loans in the States, if they don't do the necessities here it makes no sense for the funds to remain here. It is mostly those funds that they have to convert and lend out to the consumer locally.

Mr. Speaker, while there seems to be logic in that argument what I am not 100 percent sure about at this point in time is whether the short-term lending has the direct effect that it seems to have on the long-term lending rates, or, rather, the short-term interest rates on deposits having any serious impact on the long-term lending rates. It sounds kind of funny but that is what I am referring to.

Mr. Speaker, let us look at how government operates. And that is the twist that I was talking about to the whole affair. You also speak to some of the bankers and they will say to you that it is a natural phenomenon for them because the cost of business is ever on the increase for them. In order for their balance sheet to show profit rather than loss . . . that also has a bearing on the interest rates that they have to charge for the money that they loan because a lot of the money, if not all of it, is other people's money.

They have to create the spread to incorporate all of their costs including the potential historical factor of bad loans, repossession of vehicles, goods, property, or whatever, and the litigation costs, lawyer fees and the whole works. So, they seem to be able to justify their argument whenever the question is asked.

We have never gotten to the point where we are totally satisfied to have a regulatory body which can come and say to the banks, 'listen, here is your authority to increase your interest rates,' or 'here is a directive to decrease your interest rates on loans by such and such' because of certain factors which affect them one way or the other. The reason behind this situation is, in my view, simply to ensure that the rest of the world is satisfied that what is done is done properly, and justifiably so.

When you have the consortium of banks and the clearing banks in the Cayman Islands simply reacting whether justified or not . . . and I am not questioning the justification at this point in time. But the way the system works now for the consumer and the rest of us who are not involved but who either have a little savings and a big loan in these banks . . . we see the reaction by way of an announcement in the newspaper. Whenever there is a hike in interest rates, for instance, in the United States you see parallel to that an interest rate change in the Cayman Islands—those clearing banks announce that change. What that means at present is that the clearing banks have no checks and balances involved to justify any increases.

Let me make it very clear in making the statement because words can be twisted. The statement is not made in any attempt to say that there may not be justification for the increase. The statement is simply made in the interest of transparency, that if you have a situation where an institution arbitrates and justifies this increase that the banks wish to make then there can be no questions asked and nobody can try to say that the banks are overcharging with interest rates and all that. That's the whole purpose of that exercise.

In line with the motion . . . because the motion is asking for it to be resolved, that the government have an in-depth discussion with relevant banking institutions and CUC with a view to reducing the impact of these recent increases on their client. The motion is calling for that. So, I am saying that I think that in the immediate term the motion is fine.

In the longer term, we need a regulatory body that will be able to sign off whenever these increases have to occur and simply say that these increases are justified and on the odd occasion when rates are going down because they do that sometimes too.

Now, Mr. Speaker, with regard to CUC and the electrical rates, there is a franchise agreement. I think the short and simple answer could well be that there is this franchise in place. I am not 100 percent sure, but I suspect that there may be somewhere between 10 and 12 years left on the franchise. I think the period was a 25-year period. Let us go in the middle and say about 11 years left on the franchise.

Now, my understanding about the way the franchise works is that the utility company has the right to justify a return of 15 percent on its investment. I am not sure whether that is qualified to say its capital investment or not, but I believe that is the basic principle under which the franchise operates.

The government has a duty to verify that CUC is meeting that obligation whenever they choose to do so. I remember sometime back (I think it was probably six or seven years ago after the government changed in November 1992) where the requirement was for the Financial Secretary's office (the Department of Finance) to be responsible for ensuring that proper audits were done from time to time to prove that the method by which CUC was doing its rate adjustment at any point in time was complying with the franchise. That was changed from the Financial Secretary's portfolio to the Ministry of Communications and Works, that is now supposed to be responsible for that to be done.

I remember questions being raised in this honourable Legislative Assembly about it, and I have never heard an answer back to say whether this has been done since 1993. The government has to say what has been done.

This is not accusing CUC of not fulfilling their obligation under the franchise. This is a question to the government: Has the government fulfilled its responsibility to ensure that CUC is complying with the franchise agreements?

Now, I want to say this specifically because small things can become big things. If the government does not reply to this, I am going to assume it has not been done and there are four of them over there hearing me now, so it needs to happen.

Mr. Speaker, the reason why we use occasions like this to pin the government is . . . for instance, that has been a question which has for over one year not been answered. And then we get into all kind of arguments. If instructions have been given and it has not been done, I don't really want to get into all of that. I want to know what has happened out of it.

I mean, here we have a situation where you will have CUC, they too will incur increased cost. And I am confident that they would not do anything but what is correct with regard to the franchise agreement, but your systems must call for checks and balances. If only to prove that they are within (so that no one can make accusations), then the government has that inherent responsibility. If this has not been done for seven years, then I think there is a lot left to be desired.

I believe it is safe comment to say that if that responsibility had been left in the Department of Finance and Economic Development—where it had been all the time—that would not have happened if I am correct in my assumption. Because that is what it is now until the government gets up and clears the air.

This motion is a motion simply crying for some assistance for the ordinary person on the street. That is my take of the motion. The motion does not have the specific sense of direction to tell the government 'do this' so that we can get some results. The motion recognises a certain problem that exists. It underscores the areas that one can figure to be causing the problem and it simply asks for talks to see if there is any way we can have a different look to be able to pass on savings that might be derived from whatever is looked at with regard the consumer.

The government also has to recognise that in the case of CUC, for instance, a relative huge cost involved in the rates is the duty charged on the fuel that the company uses. That, in itself (if I am not mistaken) government derives somewhere between $11 million to $13 million from duty.

With all of that in mind, Mr. Speaker, I commend the motion to at least see if we can get going to do something about it. I mentioned the regulatory authority regarding the interest rates, that is, the Monetary Authority. I will not go any further but will leave the Financial Secretary with the way he has chosen to reply. I do hope that the government is going to reply to the question that has been raised with regard to the last time the audit was done by the government as is required in order to give the green light that the utility company is doing what they should be doing under the franchise agreement. Thank you.

The Speaker: The floor is open for debate. Does any other member wish to speak?

The Honourable Minister for Agriculture, Communications, Environment and Natural Resources.

Hon. John B. McLean: Thank you. It was not my intention to speak as the motion had been accepted by the Third Official Member, but a question has been asked with regard to audits and CUC.

Government has in the past carried out audits in conjunction with what the First Elected Member [for George Town] has questioned. As a matter of fact, in recent times another audit has been asked for. So, yes, we have had the same concern. I don't have the exact date of the last audit, and the Financial Secretary has just undertaken to get it so that will be passed on as quickly [as possible].

The Speaker: The floor is open for debate. Does any other member wish to speak? If no other honourable member wishes to speak, does the mover wish to exercise his right of reply?

The First Elected Member for West Bay

Mr. W. McKeever Bush: I am very appreciative, and I think the people of this country will be also for the government agreeing to do something about the interest rates of the banks and the situation with CUC.

The Financial Secretary not only agreed but laid out the path he intends to take. I would say this is probably the first time in a long time that I have been in this House that I have had a government member rise and say what they are going to do rather than to say they will do something about it. He said what he will do. I certainly appreciate that on his part.

I am happy, sir, that the Honourable Financial Secretary agreed that the Monetary Authority can be involved. I am happy especially in the light of his announcement that the Authority is to finally become independent. I appreciate his initiatives to do something about the electrical rates and the urgency of the matter.

Mr. Speaker, in the matter of CUC and their franchise and their authority to increase rates to keep the 15 percent intact, some years ago, I was party to a motion which asked for a Public Utilities Commission. I know one was debated and passed. Government has always had members on CUC since its inception, and I would think it would be bad for government not to have representatives on that board.

The Deputy Financial Secretary and a George Town accountant served for awhile when I served. I can honestly say that I don't think any of our views were clouded in any shape or form.

The franchise given to CUC by the Executive Council of 1984 - 1988 gives CUC the authority to do what it is doing and no government representative on that board can change anything. CUC has its budget—they set it up, they have a majority of their members (not government members, not government representatives, but their members, people who own shares in that company) sit as a majority on that board and they pass their budget and government cannot do anything about it. I believe that the first time reports were ever made to government was when the Deputy Financial Secretary, the George Town accountant, and I sat together as a team. The very first time!

Since the inception of CUC they have had government's representatives, but that was the first time since 1993 that government had reported back. There is nothing that can be done and the people of these islands need to be told that. That is the way it is. The only way to do something about it is for this country to take CUC to court like other countries. That is the only way. And who has the [guts] to do that!

That is the way it is and the people need to understand that. Standing in this House or anywhere else and saying that something needs to be done . . . I am not telling them that there is a franchise and they have this clause in that franchise that gives them permission to make 15 percent. Government cannot change that unless government is willing to take them to court. I knew of one audit (I don't know how much has been done since that), but certainly it needs to be done and the country needs to be told that it is done and the country needs to be told its findings.

Now, whether the audit can do anything I don't know. Maybe that will have to go through arbitration too in court. But I have always supported the public utilities commission. I believe that there needs to be one because we are not a small country anymore. We have the Water Authority, we have Cayman Water Company, we have Cable & Wireless, and we have CUC. And there are other companies providing services to the public that probably a public utilities commission would do good to look at.

What is going to be important is whom you put on that public utilities commission. That is what is going to be important—the technical advice that government can get and that government would need.

Mr. Speaker, I don't think that I can say anymore about that because the truth is some government . . . and let no one say otherwise or believe otherwise or that we are trying to say otherwise . . . but CUC provides the best service, and this country is serviced better than any other country in our region. It is a well run public utility company that provides a good service. But it is costly, and I do believe that government can do something and they need to sit down with these people and say, 'Look, it is really getting to a point where the public cannot take any more pressure. How do you work this out?'

Is it that they buy a lot of new machinery when it could have lasted longer or could be more compatible in this hemisphere? Instead of having five or six different engines that are incompatible (and that is the reason why the cost keep going up) . . . is it that they have to buy a new fleet of vehicles every year? These are things that they may need to sit down and look at with CUC.

I am not here to say yea or nay, because I don't know. But I believe that somebody needs to sit down with them and try to get to that point, short of going to court, and if they have to, well, I would hope that the management of CUC which has good business sense would see otherwise.

Now, our people are pressured on every front. Their mortgage payments have increased. Insurance on apartments and homes has increased. School fees have increased. The lending institutions in this country give loans that cannot be paid by some time. Many young women, single people, far too many are getting into trouble with their loans and end up before the courts sometimes.

Some people are not looking at the social fallout from all that is happening, but it is a fact. For instance, gas rates have increased. I will give you an example where a Toyota that took $23 to fill up is now taking $35—a $12 increase. Insurance, which was $143 for a single person, rose to $163.

Mr. Speaker, costs have to be recuperated and being a businessman, you know that. I know that. But I believe that government has to get to the point where it looks at everything their cost impacts in this country. I would like to believe that government could sit down with people in the financial industry and business people in general—they have the support of the Chamber of Commerce. They do anything they tell them to do! They should sit down with these people and look at how government cost is affecting their cost and then work from that position to see what could be done.

Of course, to ensure that there will have to be a reduction in import duties passed on to the consumer. I believe that government has to get to that point. They need to sit down with the businesses in this country to see how cost is affecting them.

I believe that there is greediness. And I believe that has to be stopped, because if it is not stopped we will have social chaos. The stress level is so high and the pressure is so great now in these islands that when you listen to what our people are saying nearly all reason has begun to go out the door. You cannot reason with people sometimes because the stress level is so high. The people of these islands deserve some relief in the things that pressure them, and I am glad that the Financial Secretary . . . if I was ever glad about a motion being accepted it would be this one.

I believe that the Financial Secretary is not playing any politics. He is going to do what he said he will do.

I thank members for their contribution. I thank the Financial Secretary for his solid contribution and I thank the member for North Side for her interest and input in this motion.

The Speaker: I am awaiting a quorum.

I shall now put the question on Private Member's Motion No. 11/00, entitled In-depth Discussion on Increased Interest and Electrical Rates. Those in favour please say Aye. Those against No.

AYES.

The Speaker: The Ayes have it. The motion is passed.

AGREED: PRIVATE MEMBER'S MOTION NO. 11/00 PASSED.

The Speaker: Moving on to Private Member's Motion No. 7/00 entitled Exgratia Payment Beneficiaries, to be moved by the First Elected Member for West Bay.

PRIVATE MEMBER'S MOTION NO. 7/00

EXGRATIA PAYMENT BENEFICIARIES

Mr. W. McKeeva Bush: I beg to move Private Member's Motion No. 7/00 standing in my name which reads as follows:

"WHEREAS Government often grants exgratia payment to persons who have worked in the public service but who did not put in sufficient time to qualify as permanent and pensionable;

BE IT RESOLVED THAT Government consider amending its policy that the spouse of exgratia payment recipients be the beneficiary should the recipient pass away."

The Speaker: Do we have a seconder?

The Third Elected Member for Bodden Town.

Mr. Roy Bodden: I beg leave of the House to second this motion. Thank you.

The Speaker: Private Member's Motion No. 7/00 entitled Exgratia Payments Beneficiaries has been duly moved and seconded. First Elected Member for West Bay, do you wish to speak to it?

Mr. W. McKeeva Bush: I will be brief on this aspect. As you know I have circulated an amendment to the motion and I don't know whether you want me to take that—how do you want the amendment done?

The Speaker: I would prefer you move the amendment and let's debate the motion as amended if the House has no objection.

AMENDMENT (NO. 1) TO PRIVATE MEMBER'S MOTION NO. 7/00

Mr. W. McKeeva Bush: In accordance with the provision of Standing Order 25 (1) and having circulated the amendment, I beg to move that the motion be amended: (1) by amending the title to read "Exgratia payments and other benefits"; (2) by inserting the following five whereas clauses:

"AND WHEREAS Government increased the cost of burial vaults from $600 to $1,200;

"AND WHEREAS the cost of other funeral expenses are high;

"AND WHEREAS medical cost overseas runs high;

"AND WHEREAS Government grants free medical to some elderly at our local Hospital;

"AND WHEREAS medical care for our elderly who are sent overseas by Government is not free; and (3) by inserting the following three resolve clauses:

"AND BE IT NOW THEREFORE RESOLVED THAT Government consider granting $2,500 towards funeral expenses for our elderly who are not working and for veteran seamen and veterans as needed and find ways and means to offset the cost;

"AND BE IT NOW FURTHER RESOLVED THAT Government finds a way of reducing the cost for overseas medical expenses for the handicapped, elderly persons of 60 years of age and over, veteran seamen and veterans who are in need of overseas medical attention;

"AND BE IT NOW FURTHER RESOLVED THAT, because of the high cost of living brought about by increased electrical and interest rates and other costs, financial assistance be increased as needed to veteran seamen and veterans, the handicapped, sick or elderly persons 60 years of age and over or those who are otherwise medically unfit to work."

The Speaker: Do you have a seconder?

The Third Elected Member for West Bay.

Mr. John D. Jefferson, Jr.: I am pleased to second the motion.

The Speaker: The amendment to Private Member's Motion NO. 7/00 has been duly moved. Do you wish to speak to it? The First Elected Member for West Bay.

Mr. W. McKeeva Bush: Mr. Speaker, I will deal with both matters at one time.

The substantive motion simply deals with the spouses of those persons who have worked for years in the public service but were not able to qualify to get a pension. Government offers them some exgratia payment, I think it amount to $200 - $300 per month in most instances. I don't think it goes any further than that. That payment does not extend to the spouse after the person has passed away, and I am asking government to consider giving that spouse the exgratia payment. That is one.

Mr. Speaker, as I said, the cost of burying a loved one today is not cheap. I would think that by the time you pay for your vault and buy a decent casket, it probably amounts to $5,000—and that is not an expensive casket. Social Services offer assistance, but I don't think they go up to this amount.

Medical costs overseas run high. The fact is that most of our elderly and veterans who qualify can get their medical free at the George Town Hospital. The problem that is being experienced by many of our elderly people is when they have to go overseas. This amounts to $30,000 - $40,000, and the fact that they have to sign so many forms in the first instance aggravates an elderly person who is sick and sometimes dying.

I had to go and sign documents as a Justice of the Peace and that is the last time I saw that person alive because he died, and the bill ended up to be $30,000 to $40,000. I am asking government to find a way to offset that cost—reducing the cost for the overseas medical expenses.

I note that the Third Elected Member for Bodden Town and others have talked about insurance, and perhaps this is a way it can be done. I don't know if insurance for both things could be done. At the present time, there is no insurance in place and people are in need. My policy has always been that if I found someone in need I must address that problem as soon as possible. I would hope that government would take these matters into consideration.

Our people at that age level . . . and I am not asking them to stop and give it to them. They must qualify for it. I am all for giving because these people have built this country—I say that often and there is no other way to put it—they built it so that we could live in the fine houses that we have. They started from way back when down in the days of National Bulk Carriers, Swan Island, and the rest of it, the Mosquito Keys. Those people went off and sent their money home to raise their children. Everybody benefited from it. There was no other money coming into the island.

Mr. Speaker, the next resolve section asks for government to consider an increase because of the high cost and for financial assistance. Now, that is not new for me because I have worked hard on that aspect before. Again, this is not just giving anyone—they will qualify for it.

I am asking the House to take these matters into consideration. Take them as they are and don't read anything else into it. Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: The floor is open for debate on the amendment to Private Member's Motion No. 7/00. Does any Honourable member wish to speak? The Honourable Minister for Health, Social Welfare, Drug Abuse Prevention and Rehabilitation.

Hon. Anthony S. Eden: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I rise to offer government's support on this amended motion, Exgratia payments and other benefits and their beneficiaries. It's a very timely motion. We, as Parliamentarians, know that the category of people we are dealing with are people that we need to try to help as much and whenever possible we can.

In the original motion we did—

The Speaker: Honourable minister, if I could interrupt you for a moment. We are presently debating the amendment to this Private Member's Motion No. 7/00. We have to take a vote on it before it can be a part of the motion.

Does any other member wish to speak on the amendment?

I shall put the question that Private Member's Motion No. 7/00 be amended as the amendment has been circulated. Those in favour please say Aye. Those against No.

AYES.

The Speaker: The Ayes have it. The amendment is passed.

AGREED: AMENDMENT TO PRIVATE MEMBER'S MOTION NO. 7/00 PASSED.

The Speaker: Private Member's Motion No. 7/00 as amended is now opened for debate. The First Elected Member for West Bay do you want to speak to the motion as amended?

Mr. W. McKeeva Bush: No, Mr. Speaker, I am going to keep my mouth shut. I am hearing good things so I am going to hold tight.

The Speaker: I thank you.

The Honourable Minister for Health, Social Welfare, Drug Abuse Prevention and Rehabilitation.

Hon. Anthony S. Eden: I hope the third time is a charm, Mr. Speaker. [Laughter]

The Speaker: I apologise.

Hon. Anthony S. Eden: I also apologise for pre-empting before the vote was taken. I just assumed by the way everything was going that it was going to be a positive vote anyway.

As I said earlier, government supports this motion. In reference to the first section, "BE IT RESOLVED THAT Government consider amending its policy that the spouse of exgratia payment recipients be the beneficiary should the recipient pass away;" we feel that in the statement issued sometime last month by the Honourable Minister of Tourism, that this will be taken care of. He is not here, but I have tried to get the actual wording of what he said. Consideration will be given to look at that.

Mr. W. McKeeva Bush: [Inaudible comment]

Hon. Anthony S. Eden: Also, in regard to the funeral expenses, we know that the Third Elected Member for Bodden Town has spoken about this. In further discussions with the Superintendent of Health Insurance at the Monetary Authority, I asked him to go back and talk to the insurers about whether we can add a dollar or two to the monthly premium which eventually would cover these instances. I feel in the meantime, as the Honourable First Elected Member for West Bay has said, this can be looked at as needed.

For the rest of this year there may be some supplementary funding needed for this in case this vote runs out, but I feel that this House is willing to support that.

On the second resolve on the amended motion in regard to overseas medical expenses, I am pleased to say that the ministry has drafted in the last couple of weeks, a paper to go to Executive Council to see how best we can deal with these people who are at the present limited in provision of health care on the island, whether it be at the George Town Hospital or Faith Hospital in Cayman Brac. Once that is approved, I will be bringing this information back to the Legislative Assembly to share what we plan to do with that.

We are, as you know, responsible to this group of people on the island. As the member moving this motion pointed out, some of these costs can be significant. So we need to provide the protection for them and we are hoping that possibly through government's insurance provider we can work something out with them on this. But as I said earlier on, we are considering this now, and hopefully in a couple of weeks I can take this paper to Executive Council.

On the last resolve in regard to the financial assistance to the veteran seamen, veterans, the handicapped, the sick or elderly, once again this is based on need as the member said. I am not sure what provision the Financial Secretary has there. If the consideration is given, once again, we may have to ask for supplementary funds but, as the mover said, we try to help our Caymanians whenever they are in need.

I would like to commend both the mover and the seconder [of the original motion], and the seconder of the amendment for bringing this. Government will certainly be giving due consideration. Once all of these areas are ironed out, we can probably come together and see how best to serve this and to share with the public how it will be handled. Thank you.

The Speaker: The floor is open for debate. Does any other member wish to speak? The Third Elected Member for Bodden Town.

Mr. Roy Bodden: I would just like to lend my support to the motion and the amendment and to explain something which I noticed was not clearly understood sometime ago when the question was asked. It has to do with the whole business of the burial insurance, as it is called.

When I referred to burial insurance what I am referring to is a specific insurance policy that covers burial expenses. The way it works is that subscribers would pay I think in some cases it amounts to about $5 extra per month onto either the regular health insurance policy or you can get special and exclusive burial insurance. Here is what happens: Upon the passing of a person, the insurance company would take care of all the burial expenses, that is, the casket, preparation and actual expenses up to the interment. The money is forthcoming upon the issuance of a death certificate. So, when the death certificate is issued, the insurance company then cuts a cheque to cover the burial expenses.

I am saying that it would be good if the government could explore the possibilities of adding that clause on to the current health providers. Many people find it difficult, particularly in cases where the death may be something unexpected. It is also of importance to note that funerals in this country are not inexpensive, and I noticed that more and more persons in many cases have to rely upon the Social Services Department. If the government could explore this possibility, I think it would certainly put families in a position where they could retain some dignity and also ease the burden of the Social Services Department.

It is also important to remark that the state has a moral obligation to see that none of its citizens—particularly those persons who have diligently laboured at a time when salaries and wages were far less significant than they are now—pass their golden years in poverty and indignity. While it is important for us to keep track of our expenses and the commitments of the government, I don't think there is anyone so heartless to allow our elderly to suffer in poverty and indignity in their old age.

Regarding the extending of the exgratia payments to the surviving spouse, this is only natural. I am happy that the government could see fit to consider this.

So, there is no necessity to prolong this debate. The government has graciously accepted to look into the request, and I would hope that something could be done towards the provision of some form of burial expenses that would give me a great satisfaction. Thank you.

The Speaker: The floor is open for debate. Does any other member wish to speak? The Honourable Minister for Community Affairs, Sports, Women, Youth and Culture.

Hon. Julianna O'Connor-Connolly: I am happy to be able to lend my support to Private Member's Motion No. 7/00 entitled exgratia payment beneficiaries. If I may briefly deal with the first resolve, and just to add to what my colleague, the Honourable Minister of Health, said, government last month actually put this policy into being which goes hand in hand with the motion. So, this is one policy that the First Elected Member for West Bay can say that he got a quick response to. Before it actually came to a vote the government was able to go along with the policy he was desirous of seeing coming into existence.

I am happy that both sides can agree on this policy. As it relates to the elderly, we all know that the women in particular are often times the longest survivors and having become accustomed to the supplement financial income of her husband, in most cases in the form of exgratia payment, she is often faced with very dire financial circumstances with the sudden loss of this payment. So, I am happy to see that the government has put this in motion and I look forward to the immediate implementation subject, of course, to funds being allocated either by supplementary funding or by setting off in the already existing financial provisions.

With regard to the second resolve, I am also happy to accept and concur with this request.

Government found it necessary some time ago (through the Minister of Communication) to up the cost for the vaults in that we found that the original cost ($600) needed to be increased to $1,200. Based on the papers, if my memory serves me right, this would reflect the actual cost of constructing the vaults. Having had to recently pay for funeral expense myself, I know that it is a very expensive exercise having to buy a decent coffin. As Caymanians are extremely proud in that regard and when you come to a funeral it is very difficult to distinguish what level of social stratification that one may come from because sometimes it seems that the poorer person has the more elaborate funeral. I believe that is a tradition that we would not be prudent in trying to break but we would assist wherever necessary and as the need arises.

Perhaps the First Elected member for West Bay may wish to look at the resolve where it speaks about granting $2,500 and consider whether or not he wishes government to consider that being a minimum rather than a ceiling. When taken into consideration the expensive cost of the vaults which range usually from $2,000 to as much as $6,000 to $8,000, and this is just a suggestion as it is his substantive motion, but anything that we can give that will help these categories of persons as the First Elected Member for West Bay has put and the seconder in his motion, I think would be very beneficial.

These categories, of course, would be extremely grateful for anything that government—meaning all elected members—would do in this regard.

Mr. Speaker, with the other resolve section which requests government to find a way of reducing the cost for overseas medical expenses for a number of these categories namely the handicapped, the elderly, persons of 60 years of age and over, the veteran seamen and veterans who are in need of overseas medical attention is again another area delving within the social conscience of any government or elected representatives, I believe that the intention of this resolve is quite good. I am also happy to associate my support in this regard as these persons find it very difficult to pay the high and increasing cost of overseas medical. I believe that government can and will sit down once again at how we can alleviate these expenses to the best interest of the persons requesting such assistance.

Finally, the last resolve, which reads as follows: “AND BE IT NOW FURTHER RESOLVED THAT, because of the high cost of living brought about by increased electrical and interest rates and other costs, financial assistance be increased as needed . . .” These are the operative words “as needed to veteran seamen and veterans, the handicapped, sick or elderly persons 60 years of age and over or those who are otherwise medically unfit to work.”

I would agree with the First Elected Member for West Bay and the seconder that there have been increased expenses as he mentioned earlier through the increase of mortgage rates and other costs of living expenses. The persons that perhaps feel that the quickest and the hardest are the persons who are listed out in these categories.

I also agree with him when he states quite emphatically that these persons have made a substantial contribution to the building of our social, economic, and moral fabric with the Cayman Islands. Now that we are in a position to actually say thank you, albeit by a nominal financial contribution, I believe that it is our duty to do so. I would like to thank the First Elected Member for West Bay and the seconder for their vision in bringing a socially oriented motion to this honourable House.

There is an apparent loophole, if I may resort to such terminology, as it relates to seamen and veterans. Yes, they do receive free medical as I understand it at the Faith Hospital and the George Town Hospital, but not as it relates to overseas. My honourable colleague, the Minister of Health, has given us his assurances and I have actually seen the draft paper to Executive Council whereby this would be rectified, and that those persons would no longer find themselves in a position where they need overseas medical expertise but cannot afford it.

I believe that this must be remedied as quickly as possibly. As the First Elected Member for West Bay said, especially the veteran seamen and the veterans they have paid a very high price for liberty and freedom within our country. If there is a time in their lives that they would need medical assistance it would be when they are at such a serious condition that they cannot be attended to at our facility here and there is a necessity for them to go overseas. So, I believe that this is a very significant and important resolve, and I am happy to give my full agreement to this.

I would look forward to the quick and expeditious passing of this paper by my Honourable colleague in Executive Council and for the necessary and appropriate funding to be put in place post haste so that the veteran seamen, veterans and other categories, as have already been alluded to, can be assisted. I believe that in so doing we would have done a very important and reciprocal contribution to persons to whom have made our lives as affluent and as comfortable as we now enjoy it today.

With those remarks I give these resolves and indeed the entire motion my full support.

The Speaker: Does any other member wish to speak?

If not, does the mover wish to exercise his right of reply? The First Elected Member for West Bay.

Mr. W. McKeeva Bush: I am glad that government has agreed to the amended motion. I think all of us (and it would be unfair to say otherwise) in this House recognise that the old people in this country who can hardly make it have left us a good legacy. When I am saying "us" I don't mean just members of this House but the entire country. We owe them a debt of gratitude that we could never repay.

These expenses are not increasing expenses, our old people are moving on to eternity fast and these are not expenses that are increasing, they are decreasing. Just yesterday on my way from church a good friend of mine, an old seaman who has worked hard, no problem to anyone, raised his family well and did his part when this country needed funds, passed away. These are the kinds of people we are looking to help. They are moving on fast and we ask: does the country owe them anything? Of course, the country owes them. Why would anyone feel that we don't? These people are the people that we need to pay more attention to.

The Honourable Minister for Community Affairs, Sports, Women, Youth and Culture raised a good point and I would ask that on the first resolve of the amendment that would be a minimum. Also, these resolutions must include what we call seamen. They might not have gone to war and faced that kind of battle, but I say they must be in need. That is what the motion says.

I don't know how many people are going to have a problem with that, but I can only speak my mind and what I say in this House comes from my heart. People can vote the way they want.

I don't have much more to add than to say that in regard to what one minister had said on television, we put the motion first and the minister quickly came afterwards and agreed. I don't know what caused such a response so quickly—it might have been the season that we are in, who knows. However, I am glad that they have accepted the motion. That is the key—that these matters will be addressed. They are not just upping and giving anyone anything, they have to go and do it properly and these elderly will get.

I will ask the Minister responsible for Social Services to take a quick look at what is happening. I know on the question the other day he said that they had several applications that needed attendance. I hope that we can get a quicker response from the department. I know that they have their hands full, and I would ask the minister to look at how we can get a quicker response from the department.

I would like to thank government for accepting the resolves and the minister having brought to our attention the matter of the minimum or maximum . . . out of an abundance of caution I would ask the House if they would consider the words, "a minimum" in that particular section after the word "granting".

The Speaker: I think if the minister accepts it we can use it as an typographical error and just include it, if that is agreeable with the House.

Mr. W. McKeeva Bush: Mr. Speaker, she prefers to have an amendment and if you would—

The Speaker: You move the motion and we will put it to the vote.

AMENDMENT (NO. 2) TO PRIVATE MEMBER'S MOTION NO. 7/00

Mr. W. McKeeva Bush: Under the relevant Standing Order I move to amend the motion in the first resolve by adding the words "a minimum of" which would be "a minimum of $2,500" after the word "granting".

The Speaker: Do we have a seconder?

Hon. Julianna O'Connor-Connolly: I am happy to second that most important amendment to that resolve.

The Speaker: The motion has been made and seconded that the word "a minimum of" be inserted in the resolve section which reads "AND BE IT NOW THEREFORE RESOLVED THAT Government consider granting a minimum of $2,500 towards funeral expenses for our elderly who are not working and for veteran seamen and veterans as needed and find ways and means to offset the cost."

Those in favour please say Aye. Those against No.

AYES.

The Speaker: The Ayes have it. The amendment stands.

AGREED: AMENDMENT NO. 2 TO PRIVATE MEMBER'S MOTION NO. 7/00 PASSED.

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for West Bay, have you concluded your winding-up?

Mr. W. McKeeva Bush: Mr. Speaker, if you could just give me a minute—

Certainly this would take it to mean that government would deal with anyone who is in need.

The Speaker: That is the operative word, “need.”

Mr. W. McKeeva Bush: That would have to be taken.

Mr. Speaker, I think that the question that was being asked is answered and I have no more to add to it.

The Speaker: I shall now put the question on Private Member's Motion No. 7/00 as twice amended and whose amended title now reads, Exgratia Payments and Other Benefits. Those in favour please say Aye. Those against No.

AYES.

The Speaker: The Ayes have it. The motion is passed.

AGREED: PRIVATE MEMBER'S MOTION NO. 7/00 AS TWICE AMENDED PASSED.

The Speaker: Moving on to Private Member's Motion No. 9/00 entitled Retirement Pay for Senior Citizen Employees, the Third Elected Member for West Bay.

PRIVATE MEMBER'S MOTION NO. 9/00

RETIREMENT PAY FOR SENIOR CITIZEN EMPLOYEES

Mr. John D. Jefferson, Jr.: Thank you, Mr. Speaker, I am pleased to move Private Member's Motion No. 9/00 entitled Retirement Pay for Senior Citizen Employees which read as follows:

“WHEREAS many of our Caymanian people employed in the job market, especially in the hospitality industry, are over 60 years of age;

“AND WHEREAS the recently introduced Health Insurance Law, 1999, and the National Pensions Law (Law 10/96) (1998 Revision) did not positively affect these employees;

AND WHEREAS at present there are no provisions under the Labour Law for the voluntary retirement of these senior citizens with any benefits;

“BE IT NOW THEREFORE RESOLVED THAT Government consider amending Part V of the Labour Law to accommodate: (i) The voluntary retirement of employees who have worked a minimum of 5 years and reached 65 years of age with a retirement entitlement of one week's wages at the employees latest basic wage, for each twelve month period of his employment with his employer; and (ii) in case of part-time employees, their retirement entitlement shall be calculated on the basis of the ratio that their actual hours of employment bear to the standard work week.”

The Speaker: Do we have a seconder?

Dr. Frank McField: Mr. Speaker, I second that motion.

The Speaker: Private Member's Motion No. 9/00 has been duly moved and seconded. Does the mover wish to speak to it?

The Third Elected Member for West Bay.

Mr. John D. Jefferson, Jr.: Let me first of all thank the honourable ministers responsible for the moving of the two pieces of national legislation we mentioned, that is, the National Pensions Law and the Health Insurance Law. I think that both of those pieces of legislation were very important and have proved to be a decision that is in the best interest of our people in this country.

I would also add that it is unfortunate that with respect especially to the Pensions Law that piece of legislation did not come into effect prior to just a year or so ago. As a result of the delay and implementing such a very important piece of legislation, many of our people have been disenfranchised with regard to earning some type of retirement in this country.

The fact of the matter is that the National Pension Law only applies to those employees between the ages of 18 and 60 years of age. The Health Insurance Law, even though there is no age limit associated with it we are aware that senior citizens have a very difficult time getting the necessary health insurance coverage. Some have it and some don't have it because of ill health or because of their age.

The reason why I brought this private member's motion is that it has been brought to my attention that a lot of people—especially those who are employed in the hospitality industry at the hotels and condos—were not positively affected by the National Pensions Law. They are over the age of 60 and because of that, they were not obligated to contribute toward a pension.

The sad fact is that many of these employees have been at the condominiums and hotels for the past 10 - 20 years. They are now reaching their golden years of 65 and 70, and they will walk away at present with no type of benefit, no type of severance package unless they are fired or their employment or positions are made redundant by their employers.

The other sad fact is that presently the employers are not keen on terminating their employment even though many of them have reached the age where they can contribute very little to the job that they are employed to do. But in order to avoid making severance payment to these employees and saying, “thank you for your time and service, I would like to voluntarily retire you” and you pick up your twelve weeks of severance pay, the sad fact is many of these employees will work until they drop and the employer will not force them to retire to avoid making that particular payment.

Section 5 of the Labour Law deals with severance pay. I am asking that that particular portion of the Labour Law be amended so that an employee who is not affected by the National Pensions Law, once they have worked at least a minimum of five years and have reached the age of 65 years, they will be in a position where they can say, 'I have worked long enough. I want to be able to enjoy some of my golden years and I would like to exercise my option of retiring on a voluntarily basis'.

I am calling for that particular section to be amended to entitle that employee who voluntarily decides to retire to one week's wages at their latest wage rate for every year that they have spent in the employment of that particular establishment.

Now, it is important to remember that many of these persons who will be affected by this particular proposal are former seamen who have reached their retirement age of 65 or 70 years of age. It also involves a lot of our women, mothers who were responsible for staying at home and taking care of the family while their husbands, sons and brothers were at sea earning a living. I believe that this country has a moral obligation to take care of these senior citizens because of the contribution they made to the prosperity we enjoy.

I believe it is only fair for these senior citizens to be able to maintain some dignity and respect in their golden years. I believe that this is a step in the right direction. I believe it is a very positive gesture that will be welcomed by all those persons who presently are not entitled to a pension. I believe it is something that not only government but the private sector as a whole owes to our senior citizens who have given us so many of their years of hard work and honest labour.

I commend the motion and I trust that government will see fit to accept the motion in the vein in which it is given. Thank you.

The Speaker: We shall suspend proceedings for fifteen minutes.

PROCEEDINGS RESUMED AT 4.37 PM

The Speaker: Please be seated. Proceedings are resumed. We have passed the hour of 4.30 p.m. I would appreciate a motion to suspend Standing Orders or to adjourn. The Honourable Minister for Education, Aviation and Planning.

SUSPENSION OF STANDING ORDER 10(2)

Hon. Truman M. Boddén: Mr. Speaker, I move the suspension of the relevant Standing Order for the House to continue until 7.00 p.m.

The Speaker: The question is that under Standing Order 86 we suspend Standing Order 10(2) in order that we can continue until 7.00 p.m. Those in favour please say Aye. Those against No.

AYES.

The Speaker: The Ayes have it.

AGREED: STANDING ORDER 10(2) SUSPENDED TO ALLOW THE HOUSE TO CONTINUE BEYOND THE HOUR OF 4.30 P.M.

The Speaker: Continuation of debate on Private Member's Motion No. 9/00. The Third Elected Member for West Bay.

Mr. John D. Jefferson, Jr.: I have a few amendments that are being typed. It is being printed right now so probably another two or three minutes we will have it to circulate.

The Speaker: We will await the arrival of the amended amendment. The Honourable Minister for Community Affairs, Sports, Women, Youth and Culture.

Hon. Julianna O'Connor-Connolly: I was wondering whether perhaps we could do a quick adjournment so the government would have an opportunity to peruse the amendment. Perhaps, we could save some precious time of the House if that were done.

The Speaker: That is a good idea. The House will suspend for ten minutes.

PROCEEDINGS SUSPENDED AT 4.40 PM

PROCEEDINGS RESUMED AT 5.02 PM

The Speaker: Please be seated. Proceedings are resumed. Debate continuing on Private Member's Motion No. 9/00. The Third Elected Member for West Bay.

Mr. John D. Jefferson, Jr.: I consulted with some of my colleagues and some very important amendments were proposed. I would like to move them at this stage. I trust that you will waive the two days' notice.

The Speaker: I will waive the two days' notice. Please continue.

AMENDMENT TO PRIVATE MEMBER'S MOTION NO. 9/00

Mr. John D. Jefferson, Jr.: Thank you, sir.

In accordance with the provisions of Standing Order 25(1) and (2), I, the Third Elected Member for West Bay, seek to move the following amendments to Private Member's Motion No. 9/00 as follows: In paragraph (i) of the resolve section: (1) by inserting "and/or resignation" after the word retirement; (2) by deleting "of five years" and inserting "of one year and does not qualify for a pension entitlement under the Pensions Law (1999 Revision)"; and (3) by deleting "and reached 65 years of age".

The Speaker: Do you have a seconder?
The First Elected Member for West Bay.

Mr. W. McKeeva Bush: Mr. Speaker, I second the motion.

The Speaker: The amendment to Private Member's Motion No. 9/00 has been duly moved and seconded. Do you wish to speak to it?

Mr. John D. Jefferson, Jr.: Yes, just briefly, Mr. Speaker.

The amendment allows not only for voluntary retirement but also the resignation of the employee and it changes the requirement of having to work for a minimum of one year.

It deletes the words "reached 65 years of age" because with the addition of the words "of one year and does not qualify for a pension entitlement under the Pensions Law (1999 Revision)" . . . the Pensions Law covers employees up to 60 years of age so it is unnecessary to add the word "65". Basically, what will happen is that anyone who is over the age of 60 and not caught by the Pensions Law would be entitled to this particular revision under the Labour Law.

Thank you.

The Speaker: The floor is open to debate. Does any member wish to speak to it? The Honourable Minister for Community Affairs, Sports, Women, Youth and Culture.

Hon. Julianna O'Connor-Connolly: I rise on behalf of the government in full support of the amendment now before the Honourable House, ably set out by the Third Elected Member from West Bay and duly seconded by the First Elected Member from West Bay. I concur with the comments made.

The government's position is that this would be similar to the provision which is now set out in the Labour Law (1999 Revised), Part V, which deals with severance pay. Just so that the amendment can be put into proper perspective, with your kind permission, if I could briefly refer to that . . . section 41(1) of the Labour Law deals with severance pay by defining persons who are entitled to severance pay; and, secondly, by setting out the computation of the said severance pay.

If the employee is fired and/or terminated for reasons other than a dismissal (as set out in section 49 and the relevant provisions thereunder), then in such a case section 41(1) kicks in, which reads as follows: "Severance pay shall consist of one week's wages, at the employee's latest basic wage, for each completed twelve month period of his employment with his employer and any predecessor-employer, subject to a maximum of twelve weeks' pay."

I believe the intention of the amendment is to involve parity and equity for persons who are not in the category of constructive dismissal, where they have no option but to move into forced retirement, who do not have the choice of voluntarily resignation, and are not entitled to pensions benefits as set out into the Pensions Law (1999 Revision). As I understand it, this would seek to create a level playing ground so that persons in this category not entitled to pension benefits would now get these benefits subject to these amendments being approved today before this Honourable House.

With those brief remarks, I am happy to accept the amendment on behalf of government.

The Speaker: Does any other member wish to speak?

The floor is open to debate. The First Elected Member for West Bay.

Mr. W. McKeeva Bush: Mr. Speaker, I want to debate the whole motion.

The Speaker: Well, I have to put the question first.

Mr. W. McKeeva Bush: Okay, I will debate the motion as amended then.

The Speaker: Does any other member wish to speak to the amendment? The Elected Member for North Side.

Mrs. Edna Moyle: Mr. Speaker, I will be very brief but I am a little bit confused with the amendment and I am sure the mover will be able to clear this up.

If I am reading this amendment correctly with the body of the motion, it says, "The voluntary retirement and/or resignation of employees who have worked a minimum of one year and do not qualify for a pension entitlement under the Pensions Law (1999 Revision) with a retirement entitlement of one week's wages". . . Mr. Speaker, I am just a little bit confused.

Are we saying that if someone works for one year and resigns his job that the employer should pay him for each twelve-month period that he had been employed at the latest basic wage? I would just like to get a little clarification on that. I am sure that the mover of this amendment is quite capable of explaining that.

The Speaker: Does any other member wish to speak to Private Member's Motion No. 9/00? If not, does the mover wish to exercise his right of reply? The Third Elected Member for West Bay.

Mr. John D. Jefferson, Jr.: Just to thank members for their support.

The Speaker: I shall now put the question on the amendment to Private Member's Motion No. 9/00 as circulated to all members. Those in favour please say Aye. Those against No.

AYES.

The Speaker: The Ayes have it. The amendment is passed.

AGREED: AMENDMENT TO PRIVATE MEMBER'S MOTION NO. 9/00 PASSED.

The Speaker: The floor is now open to debate on Private Member's Motion No. 9/00 as amended.

The Third Elected Member for West Bay.

Mr. John D. Jefferson, Jr.: Mr. Speaker, I have already made my presentation. I have moved the amendment, so I am prepared to let other members speak before I have a chance to wind-up.

The Speaker: The floor is open to debate, does any member wish to speak to Private Member's Motion No. 9/00 as amended?

The First Elected Member for West Bay.

Mr. W. McKeever Bush: The amendment and the motion before us are not to be taken lightly. I am not against them because I support what they are attempting to do.

I know of people who worked in offices for 10 - 20 years and they had to leave their jobs—not because they did anything illegal; they just could not get along and it could not be resolved and they were entitled to nothing. This section I believe is the right way to go, asking for the law to be amended.

It brings back to mind the year 1995. I hold in my hands a set of amendments, a draft law, tabled by myself on 24 March 1995. I recall the pounding I took from the business community on this same exact amendment. That was attempting to amend section 36(1) by repealing the words “one week's wages” and substituting the words “one month's wages”.

If the House recalls, we had no pensions and no one wanted any pensions. We put that amendment in and put it deliberately high with the hope of getting, at least, two weeks. Then we repealed also the words “the law subject to a maximum of twelve weeks” as it is today, which would have given the employee two weeks severance pay for each year he worked.

I will never forget how they came down on me like a ton of bricks. They banded together and called a meeting at the Grand Pavilion. I remember going to that meeting, and I can tell you of the hostility that existed because no one, except the working person, of course, was for it. My colleagues on the National Team did not support it other than the Elected Member for North Side at the time . . . I guess because of the feedback they were getting, to be fair to them.

I will never forget that because I was told all sorts of things—personal things—letters were written to me because my mother had worked in the hotel industry and all sorts of personal things were said to me. The Chamber of Commerce had more comments and did more surveys and every day they came back to say how unpopular the Minister of Community Development was and what people were saying about me and my position in the country. I will never forget sir.

Those were hard times, but how many persons had to leave work between 1995 and now without getting any severance pay—ladies working in offices for 25 years. It did not just extend to the hotel industry.

Mr. Speaker, that is how I got the agreement on pension legislation. And if I had not attempted to do that . . . I remember saying to them down at the Grand Pavilion, “If you don't want this do you support pension legislation? You have to get one of the two.” I had to amend this but they agreed to pension legislation. I had to amend this Bill that I hold in my hand because, of course, I did not have the support to put it through because of the pressures from certain sectors of the community. I will never forget it.

There were editorials, letters, telephone calls and threats, simply because I said let's do the same thing that the House is doing today. I am glad that we can get to that point because we have people who are of age and have worked many years in institutions, various places of business, but if they leave they cannot get anything.

One of the things that was promised to me at the Grand Pavilion was that when we introduced the pension legislation they would take care of these people somehow. That was one of the things promised to me. You see, that group was too old to qualify for any pension. They would not be able to get any pension but what some employers said to me was ‘We will take care of them. We will give them substantial payment when they have to leave.’ Some of them have left and have gotten nothing and some are still working . . . dragging, you would have to say, to work.

So, Mr. Speaker, I am glad that I had the foresight to do so and I am glad today after five years that it has come back and the government . . . some of them have seen the folly of their way and have agreed to support this legislation. One of them said, “It must be election year!” [Laughter]

I am happy! I have no more to add. This is needed.

The Speaker: The floor is open to debate, does any other member wish to speak to Private Member's Motion No. 9/00 as amended? If not, would the mover wish to exercise his right of reply?

The Third Elected Member for West Bay.

Mr. John D. Jefferson, Jr.: I want to say thanks to the First Elected Member for West Bay for his comments. I might just add that I am aware of the efforts that he put in to improve the Labour Law in an effort to benefit the average working person in this country. Like me, he is a people's person.

I want to say that I am very pleased that government has chosen to accept this motion. I have every confidence in the Minister for Community Development and Labour, and I look forward to this being done. The Minister has assured me that she is going to try to get the law amended and brought back here before her team in office comes to an end. I appreciate that very much and I want to say that I appreciate the opportunity of bringing this particular piece of legislation on behalf of the people of this country. Thank you.

The Speaker: I shall now put the question on Private Member's Motion No. 9/00, as amended, entitled Retirement pay for Senior Citizen Employees. Those in favour please say Aye. Those against No.

AYES.

The Speaker: The Ayes have it. The motion is passed.

AGREED: PRIVATE MEMBER'S MOTION NO. 9/00 AS AMENDED PASSED.

The Speaker: Moving on to Private Member's Motion No. 10/00 entitled Establishment of a Safe House for Battered Women and Children, to be moved by the Second Elected Member for Bodden Town.

PRIVATE MEMBER'S MOTION NO. 10/00

ESTABLISHMENT OF A "SAFE HOUSE" FOR BATTERED WOMEN AND CHILDREN

Miss Heather D. Bodden: Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

I beg to move Private Member's Motion No. 10/00 entitled Establishment of a Safe House for Battered Women and Children and it reads:

"WHEREAS the Police and Social Services' reports clearly show the urgent need of a Safe House for battered women and children in the Cayman Islands;

"AND WHEREAS press reports confirm an increase in the numbers of crimes being committed in the community; namely murder and wounding;

"AND WHEREAS women and children are subjected to living in endangered homes;

"BE IT THEREFORE RESOLVED that the Government, in a combined effort with the community, consider as a major priority the establishment of a Safe House for battered women and children."

The Speaker: Do we have a seconder?
The Elected Member for North Side.

Mrs. Edna Moyle: I beg to second the motion.

The Speaker: Private Member's Motion No. 10/00 has been duly moved and seconded. Does the mover wish to speak to it? The Second Elected Member for Bodden Town.

Miss Heather D. Bodden: In presenting my contribution I would like the public to get an understanding of this growing problem—domestic violence.

To expand on what is involved with the domestic violence encounter, allow me to read the following, taken from a document entitled "Domestic Violence in Latin America and the Caribbean" written by Miss Bridget Candesas, a family therapist.

She writes, "Domestic violence is a rampant plague. It is also a global and trans-cultural phe- nomenon, which has been the reason for the spread in most countries of the world for centuries and which can still be observed in any country irrespective of culture or religion. Women are the victims in the large majority of cases. It puts women and children in great danger. Many are badly harmed physically and/or psychologically. Some may die or remain permanently handicapped.

"Domestic violence can happen to any women, anywhere in the world, in any kind of social or economic background. Being highly educated or having a job is not enough to prevent it, as violent men can be very charming and attractive before becoming batterers. They know very well how to increase their control and restrain the freedom or the self-esteem of their partner.

"In the United States, according to the American Medical Association, husbands and boyfriends severely assault about four million women every year. This does not take into account all the ordinary hitting, battering and humiliation never reported by women. One can find the same kind of statistics in all developed and developing countries from India to China, from Iraq to Egypt, from Canada to Australia, where violence to women is the second cause of police intervention. And, in all countries of Latin America, one can see the same problem of battered women."

Mr. Speaker, I would also like to open with a remainder to everyone here today, and to the listening public, that the issue of domestic violence is the subject of two different action plans in the Cayman Islands National Strategic Plan Vision 2008. Action 5 has its specific result: "To develop and maintain a specialised domestic violence unit with the Royal Cayman Islands Police Department to deal with domestic violence and family related matters". There are ten action steps listed to achieve that.

Members will recall that the Elected Member for North Side successfully piloted the motion through this honourable House a while back.

Action Plan 6 has its specific result, "To develop and maintain a place of safety for victims of domestic violence and their children."

Action Step 1, "Assign responsibility for this objective to the ministry responsible for the welfare of women." Action Step 2, "Recruit a project manager to establish capital and recurrent expenditure and to direct implementation of Step 5." Action Step 3, "Formulate an implementation plan in conjunction with the RCIP for the establishment of a place of safety." Action Step 4, "Identify suitable accommodation already existing or identify institutional zone land for building purposes." Action Step 5, "Develop project outline for approval by Executive Council."

Action Step 6, "Ensure funding by government, by private sector or by the combination of the two." Action Step 7, "Develop the operation proposal for a place of safety to outline day to day activities." Action Step 8, "Recruit appropriate staff to carry out the op- erations of the place of safety.” Action Step 9, “Enact an admissions procedure for the daily operations of the place of safety.” Action Step 10, “Conduct pre-audit and consist reviews of the function of the place of safety to facilitate upgrading and improvement where necessary.”

Mr. Speaker, this is taken from what is properly known as the People’s Plan. Like other motions I have introduced, this one is in keeping with what the roundtable leaders put forward to reflect the wishes of the people of the Cayman Islands.

Allow me to share a short daily reading taken from a calendar that was given to me by my mother. This was written by Matthew Henry. It reads, “Woman was taken from man—not out of his head to top him, nor out of his feet to be trampled under foot, but out of his side to be equal to him; under his arm to be protected and near his heart to be loved.”

Mr. Speaker, my heart is pained by reports and statistics I have received from the Police and Social Services and from women themselves with regard to domestic violence. Almost every day under “Police Report” one reads an article in the newspaper about a woman being brutalised or attacked by an enraged boyfriend or by her husband. Since the start of this year, the police have received hundreds of calls and reports.

In January, a Jamaican woman was stabbed by her partner and died. Police confirmed the daily incidents of domestic violence—horror stories of women being beaten to unconsciousness, kicked and punched in the face, stabbed, strangled with belts, attacked with ice-picks. One shudders to imagine what is next.

Mr. Speaker, the statistics are alarming. The RCIP provided me with figures for several categories of domestic violence in the Cayman Islands for the past three years. Let me just recap the 1999 figures:

|                                          |     |
|------------------------------------------|-----|
| Common assaults                          | 251 |
| Assault occasioning actual bodily harm   | 117 |
| Assault occasioning grievous bodily harm | 3   |
| Wounding                                 | 4   |
| Damage to property                       | 44  |
| Domestic abuse                           | 65  |
| Domestic disputes                        | 393 |

Let me remind everyone that these are only the reported incidents. I also have figures from the Women’s Resource Centre:

31 females and 1 male revealed that they wanted or needed to leave their homes because of abuse and they had nowhere to go and/or they actually left their home because of the abuse;

36 females revealed that their lives have been threatened, that they were experiencing physical abuse and/or needed a restraining order against their husband, ex-husband or a boyfriend;

22 females revealed that they were experiencing mental, emotional, financial and/or sexual abuse.

The Legal Befrienders’ Service (which is housed at the Women’s Resource Centre) is a voluntary group that provides free legal advice to victims of domestic violence. Last year, they assisted 69 anonymous persons who contacted them with queries for information, and they helped 85 women who attended the Legal Befrienders’ Clinic. These are cases of women who have had the courage to ask for help. Many others are afraid to do so because of the social stigma attached to domestic violence, or, more commonly, because they fear their abuser will find out and make their lives even more hellish.

Where can a desperate woman go to find safety? Where can she turn when chances are the abusive man will find her and lure her back to the violent situation she so urgently needs to escape?

Mr. Speaker, some of the stories are too terrible to tell, as Judge Ramsay-Hale informed the court recently, when she chose not to repeat the horrible details in a case where a man had beaten both his wife and his girlfriend. Stories told by the medical personnel at the hospital emergency room would cause you to be sickened and outraged. I have also heard many stories told firsthand by courageous women who have decided to lift the veil of silence and go public with their stories.

Mr. Speaker, these are only the reported incidents. There is more abuse going on that we never hear about, as women are afraid to report it. The police and counselling services agree that the physical attacks or assaults we read about don’t take into account the many more women who are subjected to psychological terror in their own homes. This may include abusive language, restricted freedom, personal belongings being destroyed while they watch, verbal threats and other actions that destroy self-esteem. Let’s face it, domestic violence has reached crisis proportions in our country. Everyone in the society will have to get involved in some way if we are to turn the situation around.

Mr. Speaker, education is the key. Prevention is crucial but the safety of the victims and their children must be our top priorities. This is why a safe house is so desperately needed here in Cayman. There are victims out there who urgently need a place to go today, tonight—for some it is too late.

Whether a home is created by a single person or by a husband and wife, that home should be a place where a woman and her children feel safe. No one should be made to feel that when they come home from work everyday they are returning to hell. But quite often, that is how abused women describe their lives. The home should be a comfort zone and not a war zone.

Mr. Speaker, there are many models for us to turn to in creating a safe house in our community. There is quite a bit of very interesting public information that is available. A trip to the World Wide Web reveals hundreds of websites of safe houses all over the United States and Canada. They are very well organised and do not reveal the exact location of the safe house but always provide ways to contact them.

Statistics show that many women are at their most vulnerable when they actually try to leave, so the safe house must be secure and in a confidential location.

Many of the safe houses receive funding from government sources, be it county, state, or federal funds. Concerned citizens provide additional resources as well. A good example in Canada is Provincial Association of Transition Houses Saskatchewan (PATHS). Safe houses are often called transitional houses or interval houses.

Mr. Speaker, PATHS lists 20 different safe houses, and their phone numbers and the websites also note that they provide the following services:

- Safe accommodation for the woman and her children.
- Counselling services.
- Trained staff to listen to the woman and provide her with information and options.
- Women often benefit from meeting and discussing their problems with other women staying in the shelter who have had similar experiences.
- When the woman feels ready, staff will assist her in planning for the future. She will be supported and assisted in whatever decision she makes including a decision to return home to her abuser.
- Practical assistance, referrals and advocacy.
- The woman will receive assistance in dealing with her legal, financial, housing and other needs.
- Transportation: This is provided for the woman to appointments and for her children to school.
- Outreach: All shelters attempt to provide services to women who need some help but are not staying at the shelter. The shelters will do their best to provide counselling and information to anyone who calls or drops. Also, on this web page are hyperlinks to abuse help lines.

The Arizona Coalition against Domestic Violence is a non-profit organisation comprised of representatives from domestic violence taskforces in the northern, southern and central regions of Arizona as well as representatives from domestic violence programmes and other concerned individuals and groups.

The coalition has a very large and comprehensive website that provides information about domestic violence and links to dozens of resources where women can turn for help. It also provides tips on how to eliminate evidence of the woman's visit to the website.

The website reveals that the state of Arizona has 29 safe houses, or domestic violence shelters, which in 1998 provided 107,920 nights of emergency shelter to nearly 7,000 women and children. Unfortunately, nearly 17,000 had to be turned away due to lack of space.

Mr. Speaker, the safe house in Denver, Colorado, was established in 1977 and today includes a residential as well outreach services and a comprehensive community education programme. Their mission is described as follows: "The mission of Safehouse Denver is to prevent domestic violence through education, advocacy and shelter while assisting women and children to develop options for a violence free life.

"Safehouse Denver's website makes the statement on his welcome page. Research shows a strong coalition between children and witnessing domestic violence and becoming perpetrators of domestic violence as adults. We must address the violence in our homes in order to address the violence in our streets. Domestic violence is more than a women's issue, it is a community issue."

Mr. Speaker, in 1997, I (along with the group of 13 other delegates from the Cayman Islands including all of my female colleagues as well as members of the Business and Professional Women's Club) attended a huge international gathering in Washington DC to end the silence against domestic abuse. The delegation was led by Mrs. Joy Basdeo, Permanent Secretary for Education. The programme included lectures, workshops, discussions and something called the "Silent Witness Initiative."

In the Silent Witness Initiative, men and women from all over the US and many other countries marched together in silence from the Washington monument to Capital Hill carrying 15,000 life-sized wooden figures of women who had died as a result of domestic violence.

Mr. Speaker, it was both chilling and moving to watch the families and children of these murdered women walking in total silence, carrying the figures representing the silent witnesses. That sent a message that spoke volumes of words.

As most people know by now, the problem of domestic abuse exists everywhere. A recent article in the Caymanian Compass opened with the statement "Domestic violence is a significant problem in the Cayman Islands but the culture of turning a blind eye to it is changing." For years the subject was swept under the carpet or dismissed in whispers as a cultural issue but that behaviour must change. As Hillary Clinton stated during the 1997 Silent Witness Initiative in Washington, DC "Domestic violence is not simply cultural, it is simply criminal."

Today as more and more people have been willing to face the issue with their eyes wide open they have learned about this tragic subject. And this issue crosses all barriers of race, socio-economic status, education and income, and is passed on from one generation to the next which means it is multiplying.

Mr. Speaker, tears fill my eyes when I receive telephone calls late at night and hear women describing the terror they are facing in their own homes where they should be feeling safe and able to create a healthy environment for their children. It's true that men are sometimes the targets of domestic abuse and we must not fail to recognise that fact. Nevertheless, statistics continue to show that 95% of domestic violence is against women and they are more at risk from the men they know. This means that often they are truly trapped and unable to escape repeated violence.

It is also a fact that violence in relationships tends to escalate over time. Many women unable to escape out of fear and humiliation may remain in a violent relationship because of their children or because they don't have enough financial independence to get away. Many women remain in abusive relationships for years, even decades.

The Caymanian Compass article that I referred to earlier, went on to quote a local counsellor from Caribbean Haven and Outpatient Services, “Children see their mother as representing safety. Watching her being beaten up or verbally abused can have serious knock-on effects. Children from violent homes imitate this behaviour in their own lives.”

Mr. Speaker, just to elaborate a bit further on what I have just said, I would again like to read a few paragraphs written by Miss Bridget Candesas, the family therapist, and what she had to say with regard to domestic violence learned at home. She writes, “Home is the first place where children are taught how to behave and what is good and bad, permitted and forbidden. They learn by watching and imitating their parents who serve as role models for them. Thus home is a common place to learn and later justify domestic violent behaviour. It is unfortunate, but quite often children witness their mothers being beaten and battered.”

Dawn Bradley Berry, in The Domestic Violence SourceBook, Lowell House, Los Angeles, says: “Children who aren’t physically injured still suffer severe trauma from growing up in a violent home and they learn that this is what home is like. That humiliation, disrespect, and beating are normal in a home; that violence is the appropriate way to solve problems. These children live in a constant state of uncertainty and instability. Boys learn that men have the right to abuse women and girls; it is normal for women to submit and be abused. They do not learn effective ways to resolve conflicts and may think that violence is an acceptable way to solve problems, since they have not learned otherwise.”

“Therefore, it is crucial to address this issue with children coming from violent homes as soon as possible. If not, the consequences may be very serious for dating adolescents and young couples coming from violent homes. They have a greater likelihood than others of growing up and being abusers or victims and perpetrating the cycle of violence over and over through the generations.”

Mr. Speaker, we know domestic abuse affects the emotional fabric of the family and of society, and that it causes serious psychological trauma that women and children may bear the rest of their lives. Let us consider some of the economic and social costs involved in domestic violence: these includes health care cost, the cost of absenteeism from work and reduced income of the family. These are just a small part of the even wider cost to society which include: the resources of health care systems, law enforcement and the courts and the penal system. How do researchers quantify these costs?

Again, Mr. Speaker, according to a study by the World Bank, one day in every five lost by women is a result of problems associated with domestic violence. In Canada, a study showed that domestic violence cost the country $1.6 billion a year including medical cost for victims and lost productivity. In United States, researchers estimate that losses arising from domestic violence range from $10 billion to $67 billion dollars. Similar studies for the Caribbean are only getting underway, but we can certainly expect them to be just as startling.

What about some of the indirect costs which some suggest may outweigh the direct cost mentioned above?

Mr. Speaker, domestic violence has a serious impact on the health of pregnant women and their unborn babies. Physical and psychological abuse caused higher rates of prenatal and infant mortality and leads to health problems that shorten women’s working lives.

Also, statistics show that children who grow in violent homes have a 74% higher likelihood of committing criminal assaults.

A recent study conducted in Latin America by the Inter-American Development Bank found that children from families in which women are subjected to violence are three times more likely to require medical care and are also hospitalised more frequently. Some 63% of these students repeat a grade in school and on average tend to drop out of school more frequently and at younger ages than children from non-violent homes. Is this where we want our society to go?

There is so much that needs to be done. It will take a concerted effort and actions on several different levels to compact the problem. The entire community and government must join forces. The churches have a critical role to play as well.

Mr. Speaker, women must stand up and say, ‘no more’. We must band together and send a message very loud and clear—domestic violence will no longer be acceptable. Women, I say arm yourselves and tell men this will no longer be tolerated!

Mr. Speaker, I have introduced this motion because I believe we cannot wait another day to take action. Given the increasing number of incidents of domestic abuse, and the increasing level of violence of the attacks, it is time to protect the safety of the women and children who are victims of this suffering. A safe house is needed where they can recover and regroup without fear so they can prepare to take the next step towards a healthier life where they can hold their heads up high and live in peace and dignity as God intended it.

They need a place where they can come with their children to break the tragic and repeated cycle of violence that makes their lives a daily nightmare of stress and suffering.

A safe house is needed urgently but we should not forget all the many other extraordinary efforts already going on in our community. I must commend all those who are doing their part to help alleviate the problem of domestic violence. Thanks must go to those efforts.

We now have in place a certain number of very important resources for victims of domestic abuse. And, I would like to commend the members of the Business and Professional Women’s Club for their tireless work on this issue including the annual 16 days of activities against gender violence and their many other efforts to educate the Caymanian public and to offer support to those in need. Some of these women have opened their homes to victims of domestic violence.

The Women's Resource Centre provides an enormous amount of resources as well as educational programmes and support. The Legal Befrienders' Clinic is made up of volunteer attorneys who help women in situations of domestic violence to exercise their legal rights and find a course of action and a path to independence and safety.

The NCVO has also provided a wealth of resources and support as have Cayman Counselling Services and Caribbean Haven and outpatient services. Mr. Terry Delaney's private practice at the Cayman Clinic offers a range of counselling services and programmes directly related to the issue of domestic violence including a programme called Men and Anger that is designed to change attitudes and behaviours of perpetrators of domestic violence.

There are locally produced video seminars for educators and counsellors. There is another very enlightening video that was produced right here in the Cayman Islands called Domestic Violence Exposed: The Unseen Truth. Mr. Delaney served as a consultant to the project and can tell you the impact it has had on those involved and those who watch it.

Mr. Speaker, so much has been done, but this piece of the puzzle—a safe house—is missing. I know that the groups I have just mentioned above will join me in reinforcing this point, and I am certain that the community will rally to help government with this endeavour. Over the years, the Business and Professional Women's Club have worked tirelessly and have even gone so far as to effect change in the courts by initiating stronger sentences for those found guilty of domestic violence.

In fact, just the other day my former schoolmate, Catherine Moxam-Wagner, who is also President of the Business Professional Women's Club, met with me to discuss this issue. She informed me that she had just attended a conference in the Bahamas on domestic violence. She said the workshops at the conference were strongly focused on the subject of safe houses and shared with me some insight she gained by her participation.

The experience that was shared by others in the Caribbean region indicated the success of a strategy in the place of the safe house as near as possible to or even within the confines of a hospital.

This has been found to work better than other options, and it is said to be due in part to cultural factors. For one thing, there is a stigma that continues to be attached to the issue of domestic violence. As we are all aware, many women are ashamed to seek help. In small closely-knit communities such as ours it is hard for a woman to use such facilities without being recognised or having to be seen by people she knows. A hospital setting offers a good mutual place for her to go; one where she is unlikely to arouse suspicion and as I said earlier, a woman is at her most vulnerable when she is trying to get out of an abusive situation. The proximity of medical care as well as security makes the hospital setting an ideal solution.

Catherine even suggested that perhaps part of the old hospital building could be converted into rooms for this use. These rooms are already available and there is a certain level of security in place, which would offer protection from any unwelcome visits by the abusers.

Mr. Speaker, even a few rooms to start with would allow this initiative to get going. It could even help to save a life or a family that urgently needs help. As I said, I can assure you that the community support for this idea is very strong and people are ready to get organised and help make this a reality.

What is so wonderful about women is that most of them wear their problems well—they can switch it on and off. At home, they deal with the abuse and then like clockwork they get up each morning and face the day all over again. I presume most of them know their children and their jobs are top priority so they go about their day like nothing is wrong. I suppose that's how most of them get through their day—putting their best side out.

Mr. Speaker, I have to ask how long can one human being put up with so much. Sooner or later it must wear her down. She is constantly stressed. It is not healthy.

Anyway, as I said, women are wonderful and God certainly knew what he was doing when he made us!

I would like to share with each one here a poem I found on the domesticviolence.org website. It is called Another Women. The poem reads:

Today another woman died and not on a foreign field and not with a rifle strapped to her back, and not with a large defense of tanks rumbling and rolling behind her.

She died without CNN covering her war.
She died without talk of intelligent bombs and strategic targets
The target was simply her face, her back her pregnant belly.

The target was her precious flesh that was once composed like music in her mother's body and sung in the anthem of birth.

The target was this life that had lived its own dear wildness, had been loved and not loved,
had danced and not danced.

A life like yours or mine that had stumbled up from a beginning and had learned to walk and had learned to read.
and had learned to sing.

Another woman died today.
not far from where you live;

Just there, next door where the tall light falls across the pavement.

Just there, a few steps away where you've often heard shouting,
Another woman died today.

She was the same girl
her mother used to kiss;
the same child you dreamed beside in school.

The same baby her parents walked in the night with and listened and listened and listened
For her cries even while they slept.

And someone has confused his rage with this woman's only life.

Mr. Speaker, I thank you for your indulgence and I kindly ask government and all honourable members for their support in this motion. Thank you.

The Speaker: The floor is open for debate. Does any other member wish to speak? The Honourable Minister for Community Affairs, Sports, Women, Youth and Culture.

Hon. Julianna O'Connor-Connolly: On behalf of the government I am happy to rise and extend support for Private Member's Motion No. 10/00 which deals with the establishment of a safe house for battered women and children. In particular, the resolve section which states, "BE IT THEREFORE RESOLVED that the Government, in a combined effort with the community, consider as a major priority the establishment of a Safe House for battered women and children."

Government does consider this of high priority and because of that we have no problem in accepting this motion, subject to approval in Finance Committee when the request is done at the appropriate time that plans et cetera have been completed. We look forward to the support of all honourable members in this regard as I believe after hearing the presentation from the Second Elected Member from Bodden Town that the awareness would be even more heightened.

The issue of domestic violence has long been a plague in our society here in the Cayman Islands. But I believe that the aspect of awareness is perhaps at its highest much to the credit of other persons even before ourselves here today and non-government organisations (NGOs), in particular the Business and Professional Women's club. I believe its fair to say that all of the lady members that have graced this honourable House with their presence have brought to the forefront various issues dealing with women, the girl child and, in particular, children. I believe that we are indeed indebted to them for the continuous and arduous struggle in this war against domestic violence.

Mr. Speaker, as the Second Elected Member for Bodden Town intimated in her presentation, the issue of domestic violence straddles all aspects of our society. It affects not only the high class but indeed the middle class and those of the lower class as well. What perhaps is most disheartening is that more times than not the lives of precious minors are greatly affected, if not physically, from a psychological and social standpoint as well.

Fortunately, some of these children through education or the Christian assistance that they may get from their pastors or other counsellors are able to bounce back. But a lot of times we find that children become defiant in our society because of the hostile atmosphere they have to endure during their childhood years.

These women, in particular, and to some extent their children as well, may often times feel that they are trapped in these violent and abusive relationships, a lot of times merely because of the economic or financial considerations that they have. Often times these women feel that they cannot survive without the financial contribution from the husband. This may be direct or indirect, financial contribution.

A lot of these persons will find themselves not maintaining directly the spouse and/or children but accommodation which is the basis of free rental is a major consideration for the woman in such a situation feeling trapped or being forced to stay. They often feel the stigma that is placed on domestic violence and I believe one of the biggest enemies is silence in this regard.

Because of the heightened awareness within our community, I believe that this veil of silence is now being broken in our community. We would hope that this continues so that any woman or child who is abused within our community can feel absolute confident that, first of all, whoever they report it to, it would be a matter of confidentiality. Also, they can be assured they can receive effective and efficient remedies without having any lash backs in that regard.

I am also happy that because of the heightened awareness from various members within and [outside] parliament, the police are now taking the issue of domestic violence much more seriously.

I can remember, having practised family law for several years, that one of the biggest fears the women I counselled or provided legal advice for was that they would call the police and for whatever reason it was not seen as a crime, through no fault of the police at all because they had to work within the resources in which they were given. Often times it was felt that perhaps a murder was more important than the issue of domestic violence. I am glad that ideology has gradually changed and I am grateful for that reformation on the part of the police and the structure therein.

I am also happy to hear from the Police Commissioner that they are now prepared to set up a family unit within the Police Station. I believe that this will help with the proposal in this motion which, as we will see, as I attempt to make my presentation is but one of many possible solutions to this hideous crime of domestic violence.

I believe, Mr. Speaker, that all and sundry would fully agree that domestic violence must be stopped. And it must be treated as a serious crime—one that will not be ever tolerated within our civilised community. I believe also that the remedies available must be fully pursued and financed. It has been my experience that it is politically correct to talk about various remedies dealing with domestic violence and the associated victims, but when it comes to the actual full and proper financing, this seems to be where the breakdown is.

I would encourage not only this parliament but successive parliaments to deal with these social issues and properly finance them. Unless we do it, it is going to be a cancer which continues to grow within our society. The cost at a later date because of delays will be a great cost, one with gross economic results within our country. I believe it is better to decide that, yes, it is a matter of major priority, and go that further most vital step, fully fund it and support it.

I recognise that the motion is drafted in the singular, in that it is asking for the provision of a safe house. But I believe I can take the liberty of interpreting that the intent is to provide safe houses or whatever would be most appropriate for the protection of abused women and their children.

I believe also and concur with the mover that where children and battered women are concerned the element of confidentiality is the most important and essential element. Perhaps, this is more easily achieved in the larger jurisdictions where you can go across county and the abuser will not know where you are actually located. Unfortunately, because of the small size that we have in the Cayman Islands this would not, from my experience, be easily achievable. People seem to know what you think before you actually think it here in the Cayman Islands. So, having just one house would be quite public.

It would be my personal preference to look at the concept of establishing safe houses or places of shelter within the various electoral districts or as close as possible seeing that we do have three islands. I would certainly not agree with having one in Grand Cayman where battered women from Cayman Brac and Little Cayman would have to come across and be uprooted from their familiar environments. So, I believe it would be better from a social aspect for continued orientation into an environment that they were familiar with because you also have the aspect of schooling to consider. And with the educational system here, if you live in George Town you must go to a school in George Town unless you can find a private school. Often times, these victims are not in a financial position to afford a private school. Nine times out of ten they would have to attend the public school system.

I am sure the children in particular would like to keep their same friends and be able to have access to their grandparents and other close relatives within their district but yet feel completely secure from the abuser.

It is also my respective view that the provision of a safe house (or houses) is only a temporary measure or a transitional place of shelter for abused women and children. By this I mean the place of safety or shelter is not in principle intended to be a permanent residence where a person or a victim of domestic violence can go forever and ever. To me, that would be non-humanistic and it would be seeking to institutionalise the family unit which would not in my respective view be in the best intention for the family.

So, my view would be that these safe houses once properly funded with programmes and all the ancillary assistance needed to be run effectively would serve as a temporary place of shelter and safety for the victims of domestic abuse, be it the wife or the children, or paramour and children.

I believe most safe houses around the world provide temporary accommodation for up to six months in most cases and only in exceptional circumstances such persons are housed for one year. So, with this in mind, I believe for the safe house concept to be a successful one here in the Cayman Islands we would have to put into place at the same time or before, if possible, an appropriate system of affordable housing, and in some cases subsidised housing, so that these women and children will have a hope that in a relatively short period of time they can have absolute ownership of accommodation, be it, a rental facility or outright ownership where they can still get on with their new life with their children and still have protection by a way of an injunction from our Grand Court or further if the appeal process kicks in.

When I was in the UK last week, I took the opportunity in one of my free afternoons to visit the Hackney Safe House, in one of the London Boroughs. I was fortunate enough that the supervisor was a Jamaican national who had worked there for about four years who could relate to the Caribbean experience. I was able to spend several hours asking how the centre was run, looking at their facility, looking at the job references for the twelve members of staff at the facility.
