ADMINISTRATION OF OATHS OR AFFIRMATIONS

OATH OF ALLEGIANCE

by Mr. A. Joel Walton

Mr. A. Joel Walton: I, A. Joel Walton, do swear that I will be faithful and bear true allegiance to Her Majesty Queen Elizabeth II, her heirs and successors, according to law, so help me God.

Mr. Speaker: Mr. Walton, on behalf of all Honourable Members I welcome you to the House for the time of your service here. Please take your seat as the Honourable Temporary Acting Third Official Member.

Please be seated.

Item No. 3 on today's Order Paper, Reading by the Speaker of Messages and Announcements.

READING BY THE
HONOURABLE SPEAKER OF
MESSAGES AND ANNOUNCEMENTS

APOLOGIES

The Speaker: I have apologies from the following: the Honourable First Official Member who is off the island, the Honourable Second Official Member who is on other responsibilities, the Honourable Third Official Member, the Third Elected Member for West Bay who is off the island on Government business, and the Honourable Minister responsible for Planning, Communications and Works, the Leader of Government Business who will be arriving later this morning.

Moving on to item No. 4 on today's Order Paper, Questions to Honourable Members and Ministers of Government. Question No. 53, a deferred question standing in the name of the Elected Member for East End.

QUESTIONS TO HONOURABLE
MINISTERS/MEMBERS

QUESTION NO. 53

(Deferred Wednesday, 4 April, 2001)

No. 53: Mr. V. Arden McLean asked the Acting Honourable First Official Member responsible for the Portfolio of Internal and External Affairs, to explain the protocols of General Orders, Financial and Stores Regulations (FSR), and the Public Finance and Audit Law, and Regulations that govern the responsibilities of public service employees in relation to the performance of their duties, with respect to financial accountability.

The Speaker: The Honourable Acting First Official Member.

Hon. Donovan Ebanks: Permanent Secretaries and Heads of Departments are designated Controlling Officers for the purposes of Financial and Stores Regulations 2.48. Accordingly, Controlling Officers have the overall responsibility and accountability for the collection and receipt of all revenue, and for all disbursements of expenditure in respect of their Ministries or Departments.

Controlling Officers are personally responsible for the due performance of the financial accounting duties of their Departments or offices. They are also required to ensure that staff are aware of and comply with all relevant regulations, orders, directions and instructions issued by the Financial Secretary and the Accountant-General.

Section 14 of the Public Finance and Audit Law requires that "every Controlling Officer shall obey all regulations made and directions or instructions given by the Financial Secretary under section 12 and shall, if so required, account to the Financial Secretary for the performance of his duties as Controlling Officer."

The General Orders require that Heads of Departments work within the framework of the Financial and Stores Regulations.

SUPPLEMENTARIES

The Speaker: Supplementaries?
The Elected Member for East End.

Mr. V. Arden McLean: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I wonder if the Acting First Official Member can say if it is only Permanent Secretaries and Heads of Departments who are Controlling Officers.

The Speaker: The Honourable Acting First Official Member.

Hon. Donovan Ebanks: Yes, Mr. Speaker, to the best of my knowledge. The only persons who are designated Controlling Officers are the Permanent Secretaries and Heads of Departments.

The Speaker: The Second Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. Alden M. McLaughlin, Jr.: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Can the Honourable First Official Member say whether or not Ministers of Government have the authority to authorise expenditure of government funds other than in accordance with budgeted amounts and items?

The Speaker: The Honourable Acting First Official Member.

Hon. Donovan Ebanks: If I apply the meaning of “to authorise” to be to authorise the Treasury, then Ministers have no authority to authorise payments, and controlling officers only have the authority to authorise payments in accordance with the budgeted allocations.

One clarification on the earlier supplementary would be that the Deputy Financial Secretary, while not termed a Permanent Secretary, is the controlling officer for the Portfolio of Finance and Economic Development.

The Speaker: The Elected Member for East End.

Mr. V. Arden McLean: Can the Honourable Member say in the event of misappropriation of funds what the protocol governing such misappropriation is?

The Speaker: The Honourable Acting First Official Member.

Hon. Donovan Ebanks: Again, perhaps given two possible meanings to the term “misappropriation” . . . I am not sure which direction the Member is coming from. Obviously, misappropriation can involve utilising funds for personal needs, and such circumstances would need to be reported to the police, initially with a view to ascertaining whether or not there is a basis for criminal charges. There are also other disciplinary provisions that exist under the Public Service Commission Regulations.

If the misappropriation the Member is referring to involves using monies appropriated for one purpose to achieve another purpose within the ambit of the objectives or projects that Finance Committee has endorsed . . . For example, if I (in my former capacity) used monies appropriated for roads to do buildings or vice versa, then there is a responsibility on my part to notify the Financial Secretary, explaining why I feel that has been necessary. If he supports the decision or feels the decision of the respective controlling officer is justified, he would approve it coming before Finance Committee for its endorsement.

If, on the other hand, it is not an action he can support, it would then be deemed misconduct and be subject to disciplinary proceedings. There is also a facility under the Finance and Audit Law where the Financial Secretary can surcharge an officer. That decision is usually taken in parallel with whatever disciplinary action may be taken in relation to the same offence.

I trust that touched on what the Member meant by “misappropriation.”

The Speaker: The Elected Member for East End.

Mr. V. Arden McLean: I was specifically speaking about misappropriation, not for personal gain but for other reasons where they have been instructed by politicians to do it, and it is not approved through the Financial and Stores Regulations (FSR).

Mr. Speaker, I wonder if the Member can say what the specific disciplinary actions are.

The Speaker: The Honourable Acting First Official Member.

Hon. Donovan Ebanks: As in any incident of wrongdoing, the penalty that is ultimately applied depends on the nature of the wrongdoing and the circumstances under which it was committed. Certainly, in the FSR there is a facility for the Financial Secretary to surcharge an officer and require restitution up to the extent of a loss—not in excess of, but up to.

Under the Public Service Commission Regulations, which would be more applicable, there is a range of penalties from reprimand right up to dismissal. It is difficult to give the Member an answer of one specific penalty that would apply to such an offence without qualifications as to what the offence was, and the circumstances surrounding its commission.

The Speaker: The Second Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. Alden M. McLaughlin, Jr.: Can the Honourable Member please explain what should be done if a controlling officer receives instructions from a Minister to expend funds, other than in accordance with the approved budget or the Public Finance and Audit Law or the FSR?

The Speaker: The Honourable Acting First Official Member.

Hon. Donovan Ebanks: If that controlling officer who is the head of a department, has not received that instruction through his permanent secretary, then he should certainly bring it formally to the attention of the Permanent Secretary and the Financial Secretary as to why he or she is not capable of complying with it.

In the event that such an instruction were to be received by a head of a department through a permanent secretary, who obviously should have sieved it and not prevented it to go to the head of department, then the head of department should bring it to the attention of the Chief Secretary, who is head of the service, and to the Financial Secretary.

Ultimately, if a permanent secretary should receive such request or instruction, then he should bring it likewise to the attention of the Chief Secretary and the Financial Secretary.

The Speaker: The Second Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. Alden M. McLaughlin, Jr.: Would the Member say what the consequence would be to the controlling officer who disobeyed the instructions of the Minister in the circumstances described in my last supplementary?

The Speaker: The Honourable Acting First Official Member.

Hon. Donovan Ebanks: There are many permutations to that answer as one wants to pull. Let us take the worse case scenario—which I certainly have never known of—where a Minister asks a controlling officer to do something, knowing there is no money to do so. It is reasonable to assume that if there was willingness to still make such a request, then obviously there would be one of two things: either the Minister would not be happy if his request was not followed, or he might in fact applaud the controlling officer's fortitude to stand for what was right.

In any case, I know of no reason why there should be any adverse repercussions to the controlling officer for failing to comply with a request or instruction that there is no authority to comply with.

The Speaker: Are there any further supplementaries?

If not, that concludes Question Time for this morning.

APOLOGY

The Speaker: Before moving on to item 5 on the Order Paper, on item 3, I omitted offering apologies from the Honourable Minister responsible for Education, Human Resources and Culture who is off the Island on government business.

I ask for the suspension of Standing Order 46(1) in order that we can take the Customs Tariff (Amendment) (Variation of Duties) Bill, 2001.

The Honourable Acting Third Official Member.

SUSPENSION OF STANDING ORDER 46 (1)

Hon. A. Joel Walton: Mr. Speaker, I beg to move the suspension of Standing Order 46(1) to allow the first reading of the Customs Tariff (Amendment) (Variation of Duties) Bill, 2001.

The Speaker: I shall now put the question that Standing Order 46(1) be suspended and order that the Customs Tariff (Amendment) (Variation of Duties) Bill, 2001 come forward.

Those in favour please say Aye. Those against, No.

AYES.

The Speaker: The Ayes have it.

AGREED: STANDING ORDER 46 (1) SUSPENDED.

GOVERNMENT BUSINESS

BILLS

FIRST READING

CUSTOMS TARIFF (AMENDMENT) (VARIATION OF DUTIES) Bill, 2001

The Deputy Clerk: The Customs Tariff (Amendment) (Variation of Duties) Bill, 2001.

The Speaker: The Bill is deemed to have been read a first time and is set down for Second Reading.

Second Reading of the Appropriation Bill, 2001. Continuation of Debate on the Throne Speech, delivered by His Excellency the Governor on Friday 9 March 2001, together with the Budget Address delivered by the Honourable Third Official Member on Wednesday 21 March 2001.

The Elected Member for East End continuing.

BILLS

SECOND READING

THE APPROPRIATION BILL, 2001

DEBATE ON THE THRONE SPEECH DELIVERED BY HIS EXCELLENCY THE GOVERNOR ON FRIDAY 9 MARCH 2001

TOGETHER WITH

THE BUDGET ADDRESS DELIVERED BY THE HONOURABLE THIRD OFFICIAL MEMBER ON WEDNESDAY 21 MARCH 2001

(Continuation of debate thereon)

Mr. V. Arden McLean: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. When we took the adjournment yesterday, I was about to move on to the Ministry of Health and Information Technology. Before doing that, I think it is necessary for me to make it quite clear to the public that this is not about bashing foreigners; this is about protection and preservation of Cayman and Caymanians.

I know the Minister responsible for Health has a challenging job in trying to straighten up the health services in this country. While it only speaks of health and information technology, it is one of the biggest portfolios and there is a lot to be done within that portfolio. Every family in this country has some horror story about the health services provided. In particular, it is based on personalities.

Besides that, the Minister has much work to do to collect the monies owed to government. We must be realistic about it. In my opinion, a lot of that money will never be collected, but nevertheless, we leave that on government's books as an asset—another good way of balancing the budget in previous years. I appeal to the people in this country who owe government for health services to pay those bills, especially those who can afford to pay. Government can no longer carry everyone.

Approximately $40 million are owed to government. If we had that money, we would not have to be borrowing $55 million. The more we can get out of that, the better the health services will become.

I also feel that the Minister has an uphill battle with information technology, particularly with Cable & Wireless. I notice that C&W is planning to lay off approximately 20 Caymanians and "outsourcing" a lot of their staff including their telephone operators. My information source advises me that the CEO of C&W (Caribbean) is from the Island of Jamaica, and goes on further to say that his wife is involved in politics in Jamaica.

Well, it appears they are making provisions for their people and we are not. They are taking from the mouths of the Caymanians. I trust that the Minister will not allow that to happen in this country. If the economy has slowed in Jamaica, it has slowed in this country too. We cannot afford to have anyone out of a job, not even one person.

We have an unemployment rate of 4 percent, and this is only going to add to it. But if I know the Minister, he is going to work with C&W Regional to ensure these people are not laid off.

I cannot understand how C&W is going to lay off people on the basis of preparing for competition when, thus far, I have not heard any talk from the Government about allowing competition into the Cayman Islands. I am laying that on the shoulders of the Minister responsible for Health and Information Technology, to prevent C&W from laying our people off. I know he is up to the task and he knows he has my support because whatever I can do, I am willing to do.

The E-commerce business is fast emerging as the new thing in this new millennium. If we do not keep up with it, Cayman will really be the place time forgot. I caution the Minister that it makes no sense to put technology in place and not use it in the right manner. C&W keeps complaining of the high cost of their operation. However, compared with other jurisdictions, the cost to the consumer is much higher. At one time it was said that C&W (Cayman) was subsidising everyone else. I believe that is still the position because now they are laying off Caymanians to save.

I challenge the Minister to ensure that persons who are laid off at C&W are on work permits because they have many of those. It must not be that imbalance where only Caymanians get laid off; that would affect our economy. However, those on work permits would not affect our economy very much except for the money spent on work permit fees, groceries et cetera. I trust the Minister will address this and soon.

I would now like to briefly address the Organisation for Economic Cooperation and Development (OECD), the Financial Action Task Force (FATF) and the White Paper, even though it does not reflect the importance if it is briefly addressed. England has said that this is a partnership but so far, I have not seen anything which says it is a partnership. We are told in the White Paper that if we do not comply they are going to do it through orders in council, which they have started to do already. Recently we had discussions with Members of the Foreign and Commonwealth Office (FCO) who very clearly said it is time for us to do something about the problems of immigration and long term residency in this country; otherwise, it will be done by them.

I respect that we have allowed these people to stay in this country for many years—some up to 30 years. That is a long time to stay in any country without tenure. I respect these people, but by the same token, those people from the FCO also advised us of their rollover policy in England. If England has a rollover policy, Cayman is going to get one too; that is very simple.

I believe that we need to review our immigration policies. They are inadequate for today. We need to ensure that Caymanians are protected and residents (other than Caymanians). The sooner we do that, the better.

The White Paper states that we must look at our Constitution in order for partnership of progress and prosperity. For many years, we have heard of politicians trying to frighten our people about what Constitution advancement and modernisation will do to us. Nevertheless, in the many years since the Constitution came into being, which was in 1972, we have had many amendments. I must say that all those amendments were made by the same politicians.

We had one amendment to the Constitution in 1984 and another in 1993. We all know who was in power at that time. The country was scared into believing that if we touched our Constitution, we were going to become an independent territory. Well, that is not true. The same people who are spreading rumour and fear in this country need to stop it.

I look forward to a Constitutional review. In 1992 I supported the Constitution and in 1993 it was amended with chosen pieces. We call the Members of Executive Council "Ministers" but they do not have the authority or the responsibility of Ministers.

Cayman is far behind on constitutional development than any other overseas territory. Nevertheless, we claim to be one of the five top financial centres in the world, yet we cannot bring our Constitution in line with modern times. All those old colonialists who are out of power now had better stop scaring the people of this country.

It is good to know that we have young people in here who are very progressive and want to move this country to a point where it is manageable. The Constitution will give us good standing in the world amongst our peers. I look forward to having our own Caymanians review the Constitution and make the necessary recommendations.

I oppose to anyone coming in here to do our Constitutional changes. If they come in as an advisor they will be just that—an advisor. We know what we want and we know what we need. Anyone coming from America or England to review our Constitution is going to bring with him the American or English way of life.

England pushes a constitutional review on advancement upon us, but Great Britain does not have any.

I liken the OECD and the FATF to political will and economic might. For many years we were the place in the Caribbean time forgot. Suddenly the OECD, which England is a part of, decided that Cayman was getting too big and taking too much money from them in tax avoidance. It cannot be drug money laundering because many years ago this country went along with the Mutual Legal Assistance Treaty (MLAT); that worked very well. They are still trying to find out what we are doing to control ourselves by using other excuses to get in.

England needs to give us a little more support. I give the Government my support, but I am asking them to not roll over and play dead. It appears that one of the OECD and FATF members, America's Congress, is up in arms against controlling their people with their taxes.

I know this country was somewhat sympathetic to the Democratic Party when they lost the election in America, but it appears that the Republicans have come to our aid. They are the capitalists in America, and they do not want their money to be controlled by the State. I trust that they will stall it for at least four years. If not, Cayman could lose.

In my opinion, the team we have put together to negotiate with the FATF and OECD is a fairly good team. This is the first time I have seen any country send their heads to negotiate, instead of hiring a negotiating team who could have made the decisions here with the head of Government. Nevertheless, I wish them luck and offer my support.

The OECD and FATF are operating on the basis of their political will and economic might and they are trying to turn us into their police, to police their own citizens.

If we do not stand up to these people, we will be giving them more information on their own citizens when they can get it themselves. We need to address the OECD and FATF and stand strong as we have always stood in these matters.

I would like to move on to the Budget Address. I supported the tax measures for a number of reasons when it came to this House during the Budget Address. There are many Caymanians who produce water in this country and any merchant can import it for free whereas the Caymanians are disadvantaged. Anything Caymanians bring in to produce water has a 20 percent duty; this is not a level playing field and it is one of the reasons why I supported the tax measures.

Another aspect within this area is the wave-runners and boats. Something is wrong with the way it is worded. I do not know if it is a misprint, and maybe the Acting Third Official Member can reply to this; boats above 35 feet have tariffs of only 5 percent and those from 18 feet to 35 feet have 10 percent. If you can afford to buy a boat over 35 feet, you can afford to pay 10 percent. I would like to see that figure reversed. We have hundreds of wave-runners on West Bay Beach coming in tax free and are used as rentals. They make thousands of dollars off of these wave-runners and the Cayman Islands Government gets nothing; this is not a level playing field either. I respect the fact that there are private individuals who would like to have a wave runner.

I appeal to the people of this country to assist with the economic down turn and to give this Government a chance. There are people on this Backbench who will be watchdogs and the Government is not going to run away like previous Governments. I want to make it abundantly clear that I owe no allegiance to the previous Government, none to this Government or any future Governments. If it is in the best interest of this country, I will support it and if not, I will not support it.

While I supported this one, I warned them not to bring any more taxes into this House to tax the poor man, making sure any future taxes are for those who can afford it.

I am going to offer some suggestions to Government on how to make some revenue. We talk about level playing field—well, there is one which is not too level. I am faced in East End with many people from that district who work in the quarry business, as well as other quarries in this country, because there are other quarries where Caymanians are employed. Caymanians have to pay 20 percent on everything they bring into this country, whereas, previous Governments have allowed people in this country to import aggregate and only charge them $1 per ton; this is not a level playing field for our people. It will push our people out of work. Hundreds of people are employed in this country in the quarrying business, whether it is marl or rock processing into different grades of aggregate. But nevertheless, they still have to pay 20 percent, even though, the money remains here, paying mortgages for Caymanians and dealing with other vendors within this country. Since we have aggregate being imported into this country at $1 per ton, this would be a good area to apply 20 percent and get more money out of that importation.

We must stop the personality thing. Let us look at the hundreds of Caymanians who work in this industry. Are we going to pay them? Government cannot afford to support these people. Let us make it a level-playing field so that Caymanians can support themselves by being in a job.

I understand the review of aggregate in the country. I went to a presentation of an interim report on the study of aggregate, and I understand all the projected numbers of aggregate needed over the next ten years. But it can be done in this country. We can allow these people to go deeper—not over the water lens, but over other parts of the country. They can go deeper because we allow them to go 10, 12 feet. If you go 30 feet it does not make very much of a difference; the only difference is you will not have to use up more land space. I am certainly not supporting going deeper into the water lens. That is another area where we can improve the revenue in this country.

The Third Official Member said that the economy has slowed. Well, it is Government's responsibility to boost the economy at this time. I understand the need for revenue and recurrent expenditure, et cetera. He said that employment seems to have stabilised at a rate of 4%. I trust that this figure is for the unemployable. It is impossible to believe we have Caymanians who are willing to work and cannot get any work. We have more work permit holders than Caymanians in the workforce. Something tells me that we have to review how many work permits we have in order for these 4% Caymanians to get into the workforce.

I have seen other areas in this country where we can get tax revenue. I note that one of the tax proposals included spear gun licences. I do not know how we are going to get money on spear gun licences when we cannot import them or the parts; therefore, spear guns should be on the decline in this country. You cannot tax something that is not available and get something from it!

I propose that Government charge spear gun holders $100 to import parts for their spear guns. We do it to our gun licence holders where we allow them to go overseas and import ammunition, shot guns, et cetera, charging them a fee for importation. The same fee can be applied to spear gun licence holders. We can still keep control over who has a spear gun and if that person wants to make two trips per year to pick up parts, we will keep the spear guns in circulation and tax them later on raising the licensing fee.

We cannot ban them because they are already here. But we are not going to get the taxes if they are on the decline. If they cannot repair their spear guns, it does not make sense to keep up with the licence.

I throw these things out to assist, which I believe is my responsibility as a legislator. I notice on the hotel, condo and guest house room tax we do receive a bit of funds, but let us talk about the financial service fees and professional licensing fees in this country.

It really bothers me to see listed under the Trade and Business Licensing Law, fees of only $750 for persons within the accounting field and other professional occupations. The proposal is to increase that by 100 percent. Do we think this increase will really hurt those accountants? Is this a sufficient increase? No! I do not want to take anything away from anyone, but these people have made millions of personal money in this country. I am sure they are willing to help the country which has helped them to get where they are by giving more.

Contractors and businesses employing ten or less persons are charged $1,000. Businesses employing 11 persons or more are charged $3,500. Under the Local Companies Control Law (LCCL) it is $25,000 for whoever is issued an LCCL. That is one area where we need to look into and possibly disregard. I am sure they have 300 or 400 people working at any given time and it is unfair to the little small contractor who has five or six persons because he still has to pay $1,000. One thousand for ten or less tells me that it works out to approximately $100 per person. Why not charge the big contractors who enjoy this LCCL $100 for every employee? They get the jobs.

In today's paper the Chamber of Commerce is agreeing to, and defending a motion brought to the House recently, which sets out provisions for Caymanian businesses. They are somewhat in line with my thoughts. The LCCL must be the first thing to go and the 60/40 needs to be reviewed as well.

Yes, there are special circumstances. There are very few Caymanians who can go and build a $40 million hotel on their own. By the same token—

The Speaker: Excuse me for one moment. You have five minutes to speak.

Mr. V. Arden McLean: Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

All the other works on the hotels must be preserved for Caymanians.

In closing, my one appeal is to my colleagues in this Honourable House. We are here to govern the people of this country. Let us work together in the interest of this country and help to steer the country as we go along.

I appeal to the people of this country to give this Government a chance. It is because of you why we are here; therefore, we are here at your pleasure.

I appeal to those three ex-ministers who are outside of this Honourable Chamber, to stay out of the running of this country because on elections day they were rejected by the people. Stop using scare tactics to put fear in the minds of the people and destroying potential investment in this country. The people did not listen to you during your campaign and they will not listen to you now!

I have to say to my good colleague, the First Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman, "stay away from those ex-ministers also." This Government deserves a chance and that is why the country gave it to them. I support the First Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman in her endeavours, and always will, but do not let that Trumanomics lead us the wrong way. They are out, and they are going to stay out.

The First Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman is in, and whatever I can do to keep her in here, I will do, but whatever I can do to keep them out, I will do that too! I thank you, Mr. Speaker, and I thank the people of this country.

The Speaker: We shall take the morning break. Proceedings are suspended for 15 minutes.

PROCEEDINGS SUSPENDED AT 11.26 AM

PROCEEDINGS RESUMED AT 12.04 PM

The Speaker: Please be seated. Proceedings are resumed. Debate continues on the Throne Speech and the Budget Address. Does any other Member wish to speak?

The Second Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman.

Mr. Lyndon L. Martin: Mr. Speaker, I would like to say good afternoon to all Honourable Members of the Legislative Assembly, and good evening to all of the listeners of the general public, as this will broadcast in the evening. I would like to commence my first general contribution in this Honourable Legislative Assembly by expressing my gratitude to the good people of Cayman Brac and Little Cayman who have bestowed upon me the honour and responsibility of representing them over the next four years. This is a responsibility I take extremely serious and give them my assurance that I will carry out this role to the fullest of my God given ability. I give special thanks to all those who worked diligently for my election in 2000 and also during my unsuccessful attempt in 1996.

Many in this Honourable House have said, the most recent 2000 election has transformed the face of Parliament and resulted in a change of the guard and a shift in paradigm. This is indeed very true and I am exceedingly pleased to be a part of this new guard and a new model of thinkers. The 21st Century has found the Cayman Islands faced with many challenges, both on the international and domestic front. I am confident, and provide this country with my assurance that this House is very well poised to cope with these challenges.

The Sister Islands which I have been elected to represent has a strong history as being the incubator for much of the brainpower, and the capitalist that has positively contributed to the development of the Cayman Islands as a nation. The composition of this Honourable Legislative Assembly for the 2001 – 2004 at-tests highly to this hypothesis. I commenced my political career in the 1988 General Election in Cayman Brac and Little Cayman as part of an effort to have you re-elected for our district. This makes it especially significant for me to find myself in this House with you Mr. Speaker, in the high office as Speaker of the Legislative Assembly for the Cayman Islands. This is a source of great pride, not only to me, but to the entire Cayman Brac and Little Cayman community.

In addition to you, we have the First Official Member from Cayman Brac. We also have the Leader of Government Business, the First Elected Member for George Town, from Cayman Brac. We have the Third Official Member, the Honourable George A. McCarthy with close Cayman Brac connection, and today we have his Deputy sitting in his seat who is also from Cayman Brac. We have the Second Elected Member for Bodden Town, who has a long standing relationship with the Sister Islands and who has contributed significantly to their development during his 8 year tenure as their representative. He is also married to a daughter of the soil. I also note with great pride, that one of the Civil Servant's representative from the Finance Portfolio who is here monitoring the contribution to the Budget Address and Throne Speech, and I anticipate to help in the preparation of this response, is also a Cayman Bracker and an economist, Mr. Strand Bodden whom I recognised, sitting in this Legislative Assembly today. Of course, you have the two elected representatives from the Sister Islands.

The Sister Islands have certainly contributed exponentially to the development of this great country.

I also find it relevant to mention the Honourable Minister responsible for Health and Information Technology, Mr. Linford Pierson, who, as all Cayman Brackers and Caymanians know, has always had a close relationship and has contributed significantly during his period in a previous Ministry.

With such a history of Sister Islanders representing the direction and future growth of this great country, it puts upon me an extreme burden and a strong path to walk towards, as a freshman in the Legislative Assembly.

As a prelude to my presentation on the Throne Speech and Budget Address, I would like to outline the vantage point from which I come, with regard to this contribution and all others in this Honourable Legislative Assembly.

Of recent, there has been great haggling between the current and past political directorate over the financial position of this country. I am one of less than a hand full of the 15 representatives in this Honourable House that can objectively decipher the abundance of information, some factual and some less than factual, because I was not supportive of the past political regime as public records will show, nor am I supportive of the current political directorate.

It is a matter of public record that I was, and remain of the opinion, that the current political directorate is not the optimal configuration of the 15 elected representatives best suited to guide this country into the 21st century. That is my view and I am certainly entitled to have my opinion. I welcome the current political directorate to prove me wrong, as in doing so this great country shall benefit and so shall I.

As stated in an earlier contribution in this House, as a result of me taking the position to support another configuration for the Executive Council, and voting accordingly, by default, the terminology that I borrow from my earlier contribution, I became a non-supportive Member of the current Executive Council. I became a backbencher and more importantly, I became an Opposition Member of the Backbench. Those on the Backbench who chose to support the current political directorate would be considered the supportive Backbench, the Backbench of the Government.

I give the people of Cayman Brac and Little Cayman the assurance that both the First Elected Member and I worked diligently for a seat on Executive Council for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman but, as you all are aware, the deck was certainly stacked against us. Over the past four years we recognised the importance of having a representative on Executive Council.

The position of Opposition is an important one and one that I intend to carry out constructively. Over the years, many have contributed to demeaning the role that an Opposition Member carries out in the parliamentary procedures as adopted under the Westminster style of government. The role of an Opposition Member is a very important one and one which I take extremely seriously. I say with pride, that I am a Member of Her Majesty's loyal Opposition. I intend to be the critique of the Government, and that is necessary to have a check and balance system to ensure that the monies and the resources of this country are spent in the best possible manner. We cannot intend or hope to have good governance without having an effective Opposition.

I join with the other Members of the Opposition in making a statement that we intend to constructively oppose, and not simply to oppose for the sake of opposition. We will look at each and every issue on an independent basis and make decisions accordingly. We will also ask questions and probe where necessary, but when the Government of the day or another Member of the Backbench brings something that we believe will be of benefit to this country, we will certainly be there to support it. We have demonstrated our ability to understand all sides of Government.

In our short period of this Legislative Assembly, I am proud of the position that the Opposition has taken. Erskine May, what is deemed as the guidelines of parliamentary procedures, has written extensively on the role of the Opposition and I encourage all of those who look at the role as a negative one to spend some time and review it to see the importance the Opposition plays in good government.

As all astute politicians should know, and I borrow this phrase from my good friend, the Honourable Minister for Education and a book he is reading, "All Politics Is Local." In this regard I must make a clear separation between what occurred during the past Government in Grand Cayman and that in Cayman Brac and Little Cayman. The reason that I do this is to once more outline the vantage point from which I come.

Over the past three years Cayman Brac and Little Cayman had a Minister, my colleague, Mrs. Julianna O'Connor-Connolly, as the Honourable Minister responsible for the development of the Sister Islands. In my opinion, we received more focus than the aggregate of past Governments. Consequently, although the past Government was greatly disliked by the people of Cayman Brac for what they were doing for the nation, them being the wise people they are were able to see a clear differentiation between the management of resources in Grand Cayman and those in Cayman Brac. On November 8th they elected the First Elected Member for Cayman Brac with some 76% of the votes cast—one of the highest percentages in this House. That is indicative of the acceptance by the people of Cayman Brac of what they saw quite clearly as getting what was long overdue—the fair attention to be given to the Sister Islands.

The district of West Bay was the only district in the entire Cayman Islands that a clear mandate was presented to its representatives. The four representatives campaigned together, had a common committee, presented the public with one manifesto and were all elected together. George Town, Bodden Town, and indeed the district which I represent, the sixth electoral district of Cayman Brac and Little Cayman; the job was a lot greater.

We were faced with a daunting task of reconciling the mandates that were sent to the individual representatives who campaigned on separate platforms, with separate manifestos, and separate priorities. The other two districts being East End and North Side having only one representative, was a lot easier. For the remaining three districts, we had to sit and reconcile the various commitments we made to the public and on which we were elected. This is one of the shortfalls of having an independent system.

I am pleased to report to the people of the Cayman Islands the one clear sentiment sent from the district of Cayman Brac and Little Cayman, in that they would like their representatives to work together. I am pleased to say that the First Elected Member and I have developed a very amiable and positive relationship and I undertake to continue to work with her for the benefit of the people of Cayman Brac and Little Cayman. We have been able to get together, look and determine what we, as the only two individuals with a political mandate from the people of the Sister Islands, consider priorities in the short and long term. We intend to see that the wishes of the people of Cayman Brac and Little Cayman, as expressed through their votes on 8th November, 2000 be represented in this Legislative Assembly for the future of the Cayman Islands.

As a nation, we have failed in the past to draw on the lessons of history. I would like to spend a few minutes here to discuss and highlight to this nation some of the history of the Caribbean and how we can learn from this history.

The Caribbean represents 30 million people stretching in islands from the Bahamas in the north to Curacao in the south, a region that has a common history and similar patterns of development. The island nations have an interrelated evolution of economies, political institutions and social reforms. For centuries the islands formed part of large empires ruling over several continents. The colonial culture that emanates from our history governs most of the norms of today.

History tells a story of Anglo Saxons using black slave labour on Caribbean soil to produce sugar cane, coffee and spices and to remit all of the profits to European nations that ruled over them. It should be remembered that the slave is a representative of the common man of today, for all native Indians were forced into extinction. There were relatively few Anglo Saxon slave masters compared to the abundance of slaves. They controlled the slaves through suppression of education and cultural advancement, controlling the resources available to them and through a cultural inferiority complex.

In those days, the slaves truly believed that the slave master was a superior being and they owed a degree of loyalty to him. From the early days of slavery, racial and ethical blending occurred. This resulted in a multiplicity of racially mixed groups. The racially mixed, especially the light coloured Creole, commonly called 'coloured' succeeded a lot greater in the years to come, compared to the African descent. The light skin Creole benefited under the colonial system, even to a point where they became slave owners, and consequently, the light skin Creoles who benefited under this system are less desirous of change from this system.

The Third Elected Member for George Town said in his contribution, that the time has come for us to stop denying that there is a racial separation in this country. It is deeply woven into our history and evident in our present. This difference is not only evident in the social and economic stature of the racial groups, but also in behaviour patterns.

The Honourable Third Elected Member for George Town illustrated this by contrasting South Sound to central George Town. I will also contrast the difference between the eastern districts of Cayman Brac to those of the western end. We have hid this separation in the interest of preserving the outside perception of this country of having a harmonious community, but at the expense of addressing the problem.

Mr. Speaker, at this point I would like to make an injection which I overlooked in my introduction, in giving you special thanks on behalf of the people of Cayman Brac and Little Cayman for your twenty years and continual involvement in the development of the Sister Islands, and all that you have contributed personally and as a representative to these Islands.

From the brief overview of the history of the Caribbean, one can clearly see the similarity between the history and the present. The colonial culture that has made it acceptable that we provide refuge in our country for the financially wealthy of the world to grow richer while enslaving the Caymanians, with most of the resulting profits being remitted overseas. That culture is one that emanates directly from colonialism and it is an acceptable part of the culture of this country. I make the submission here today, that we need to change this culture. It is time for the economic development of the Cayman Islands to start to benefit the indigenous Caymanians. I make the point when referring to the indigenous Caymanians, that at a later part of my presentation I will talk of long-term residents and my definition of a Caymanian.

Our financial services industry can really be classed as an offshore industry because the benefits certainly leave these shores. Similarly, our tourism industry utilises the lure of our picturesque beaches and Caymanian tax-payers money, as the sum of approximately $20 million will be used this year to promote tourism and attract tourists to these islands, to benefit who? As history would have predicted, the wealthy Anglo Saxons, and, of course, the wealth generated from the hotel industry is largely remitted overseas.

Those light skin merchant class who has not been subject to the same political, intellectual and cultural suppression, under the old colonial system has worked for decades to ensure that the Cayman Islands will remain under this system. The same techniques as the slave masters used—controlling of all resources, suppression of educational and cultural advancement of the general public of the Cayman Islands, and instilling in the public a sense of inferiority.

For years, the district of George Town has cried 'Oh we need to elect Mr. Truman because he is the brains of the Cayman Islands'—an expression of inferiority among the common people. I make the submission that, in my opinion, this is an unjustifiable escalation of superiority. I am pleased to see that the general election, in year 2000, has resulted in a positive change in this direction, replacing the past Minister of Education with a Third Elected Member for George Town and the Minister of Education, the Honourable Roy Bodden.

At the end of the 18th century, the Caribbean's buoyant sugar industry began a continual decline and by the 1940s the industry was insignificant except in Jamaica and Cuba. Since that time, the Caribbean nations that were amongst the wealthiest of nations, as a result of the sugar industry, have struggled to find an appropriate and viable alternative.

The Cayman Islands' maritime industry was the early salvation of the Cayman Islands economy. This was soon joined by tourism and then by financial services. Successive Governments have recognised that the two economic pillars we like to boast about, tourism and offshore finance are both very volatile and fragile industries. No Government has addressed the issue of diversification. They have talked about the issue but we need to diversify our economic base. Tourism and offshore financial services are industries that have great flight risk because they are both very dependent on external forces that are beyond our control. All should remember the 1990 economic slow down in the United States and the direct knock on effect to our local domestic economy. This affected not only financial services, but definitely the tourist industry.

As what occurs in the external world is so important in determining what will happen and what occurs in our domestic economy, it is important that we take a careful look at the external world. I would now like to turn to analysing some of the external occurrences.

Globalisation of goods and capital market has altered traditional economic models and has made economies interdependent. The positive outcome of globalisation is commonly accepted, however, for the first time since the globalisation revolution, the world is feeling the economic pressure of a possible global recession that is compounded by the very same globalisation. The 21st century has found the world's two largest economies, accounting for 46 percent of the world output on the brink of what is considered a global recession.

A recession is defined as two consecutive periods of negative growth. By this definition the American economy has avoided a recession for the first half of the year as it grew by 1 percent in the last quarter of 2000 and a similar percentage for the first quarter of 2001. Just this morning the figures for unemployment of the United States were released for the first quarter, and we have seen an increase in unemployment to what I remember as 4.3 percent or 4.6 percent, suggesting that it is on the threshold of a recession. In addition to America, the other giant in the economy, Japan, has been experiencing persistent deflation that has resulted in the value of the national output to decline.

It is said that America is like an 800-pound gorilla, that consumption power fuels the growth through out the world. When America enters a recession, the entire world feels it, especially after the globalisation where the entire world is dependent on this consumption power of the United States. With a slow down in the American economy, the demand for goods and services of the rest of the world will fall off and so will their economies. The American economy is driven by domestic consumer spending, representing 2/3rd of the Gross Domestic Product (GDP) the measure of their economic growth, their total output for the country.

The largest influencing feature on the propensity, the likelihood of one to consume is the confidence of the American people in their economy. If Americans are not confident in the future they will save and spend less, driving the economy further down. This lack of confidence, be it justifiable or not, will lead to a recession. I would like to read from a recent Newsweek poll. This comes from the Newsweek of the 26th March 2001. "Seventy-one percent of Americans said a recession now seems somewhat or very likely. Fifty-five percent say they have already delayed or cancelled major expenditures on items such as cars, renovations and vacations, and 69 percent plan to limit those purchases further in the months ahead."

Consumer confidence is down in America and we here in the Cayman Islands will feel the result of reduced spending which will lead to a slower United States economy. Globalisation has made the world more sensitive to changes in other countries, and countries more reliant on others. With Japan and America in economic troubles the demand for Asian information technology, a major export of the Asian region, has been negatively affected because of these world powers present economic position. These world powers, Japan and America represent the largest export market for the Asian products. Asian economists are reporting concerns over their region's economic growth.

In addition to the lack of confidence in the world's economy and especially America, it is also facing what economists call the wealth effect. Stock markets everywhere are tumbling, albeit the American stock market saw a one day improvement yesterday. Over the past year nearly US$10 trillion has been wiped off global share values. Inevitably, this will have a negative effect on consumption, for, as the wealth of an individual declines, the individual will spend less, and as I said earlier, consumption is the driving force behind the economy of the United States.

Mr. Speaker, I am moving on to another subject you may want to break for lunch.

The Speaker: If you are moving on to new subject, this is a convenient time for the luncheon break. We shall suspend proceedings until 2:15 pm.

PROCEEDINGS SUSPENDED AT 12: 44 PM

PROCEEDINGS RESUMED AT 2:26 PM

The Speaker: Please be seated. Proceedings are resumed. Debate continues on the Appropriation Bill, 2001, the Budget Address and Throne Speech, the Second Elected member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman continuing.

Mr. Lyndon L. Martin: Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

Prior to the break, I took the opportunity to express my gratitude to the people of Cayman Brac and Little Cayman and went on to outline the challenges that will face this country in the 21st Century. I was currently outlining the economic situation of the world. I spent some time looking at the United States of America and its current challenge to avoid recession and how the United States' slow down is having a negative effect on the rest of the world's economy. I termed the United States as an 800 pound gorilla when we are looking at consumption power. The rest of the world depends on the consumption of the United States.

I spent some time looking at Japan as the other world power in the economy and how its economy was also in problems, and facing negative GDP growth. I was outlining at the time of the break the reasons why the domestic consumption in the USA is faced with the possibility of driving the United States into a full recession. I identified the fact that consumption represents two thirds of the United States total output, and the first and major factor that influenced consumption, being the confidence that the United States populous has in its economy. If there is no confidence in the economy, people will save and not spend, and thus, merchants become worst off and they do not invest and the economy takes a spiral downwards.

I shared with this Honourable House a Newsweek poll which indicated quite clearly that there is a reduction in confidence in the American economy. Seventy-one percent of Americans say the recession now seems somewhat or very likely; 55 percent say that they have already delayed or cancelled major expenditures on items like cars, renovations and vacations; and 69 percent plan to limit those purchases further in the months ahead. It is clear that there is a lack of confidence in the economy and that confidence is being passed to the full economy through reduction in consumer spending.

I identified the second influencing factor on consumption as the wealth effect, and identified the fact that US$10 trillion has been wiped off the global share values over the past year. Thus, individuals are less likely to spend because they are financially worst off than they were a year ago.

The third factor influencing consumption is the fact that a decade has seen the United States' economy in positive economic growth that has been driven by consumer spending. This period has left the consumer of the United States with very high personal debt limiting their ability to help the economy. The resources are simply not there for the domestic spender to be able to consume so that the merchants can have money, make profits and invest, and thus, create economic activity. These are real hard facts we must face looking at the fact that these changes in consumption patterns and level of economic outlook for the United States, and the rest of the world would likely have a negative impact on the Cayman Islands.

In 1990, we felt the exact effect. I recall the Government identifying the slow down at that time as being a result of the slow down in America, and a lesson learnt from the past is that we should take the necessary precautions today.

The Federal Reserve Chairman has taken aggressive action to curtail the downturn in the economy through interest rate reductions. The Central Bank of Japan has taken similar action, albeit a bit delayed. The Central Bank of Japan is driving the interest rate down to zero. It is an assertive project of the Japanese Government to have a zero interest rate, hopefully achieving this through the printing of money with hopes of having the desirable and likely effect of increasing inflation.

It is important we understand, that in our domestic situation we always speak of the negative impact of inflation, but in an economy deflation, which is the reduction in price level, this also has a negative impact. If I am in a period of deflation, the consumers are expecting that in the future, prices will be lower, thus they are not spending today; they are awaiting these lower price levels. As I said earlier, consumer spending is a major part of your gross domestic product.

Many believed that the European Union was immune to world economic pressures as a result of its insular approach. However, the European Central Bank is now downgrading their growth expectation to 2% for the year 2001. It was hoped that maybe the growth in the European Union might have cushioned the world's economy and saved the world from entering into a global recession. But, the European Union is also feeling the pressure of the downturn in the United States.

The Central Bank of the European Union is expected to lower its interest rate to assist the economy in fighting off the contagious recession fever of America.

In addition to the downturn in America and Japan, the two together represent 46% of the world's output; then a downturn in the Asian market, and, as I just mentioned, a downturn in the European Union's economy. The emerging economies of Argentina and Turkey are also experiencing significant slow downs and are implementing remedial methods for recovery. We can see the environment that we face in the 21st Century and how this has gotten worse with the recent tensions between China and America, and the possible and likely resulting negative effects on trade between these two countries; this could possibly be the final straw that broke the camel's back.

The jury is still out, as to whether the second half of 2001 will respond positively to the measures taken by the Central Bank in Japan, the Central Bank in the European Union and of course the Federal Reserve's aggressive policy in the United States. However, it can be commonly agreed by all Members of this Honourable House that although we might avoid a recession we are sure to see a global slow down and, in my estimation, a slowdown of approximately 1-1/2 – 2 percent global economic growth.

Mr. Speaker, I bring to your attention that we do not have a quorum.

LACK OF A QUORUM

The Speaker: Serjeant-at-Arms, please summons the other Members to the Chamber.

[Addressing the Second Elected member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman] Please take your seat.

(Pause)

The Speaker: Before we continue, I would like to bring to the attention of all Honourable Members that it is your responsibility to make a quorum in this Chamber. Anytime it is called to my attention I must adjourn and I have to wait for five minutes. If the quorum has not been reached, I can adjourn without question and I shall not hesitate to do that if it becomes necessary. I ask for your cooperation by being in this Chamber while the debate is being carried on.

Second Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman, please continue.

Mr. Lyndon L. Martin: Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

With an expected global slowdown in the world to approximately 1-1/2 percent and as outlined earlier, our dependence on external demand for our financial services and our tourism industry, it is extremely important that we the decision makers, the policy setters of this country, are very cognisant of what is occurring in the external world. We cannot stay in this House and simply limit the scope of our consideration to what is occurring on our own shores. We must study quite carefully the world economy and its effect on us.

I have spent, what some would deem, as an excessive amount of time, but in my opinion, time worth spent on outlining the current economic situation that we find ourselves in, in the 21st Century.

These are challenging times for the Cayman Islands. As the world economy slows down, we can expect a negative effect on our local tourism industry that represents more than 50% of the total Gross Domestic Product (GDP) of the Cayman Islands. The other pillar of our economy is also facing immense challenges of its own. Financial services represents 30 percent of the total GDP of the Cayman Islands, and is being forced into a mode of transformation, as a result of international pressures from the Organisation for Economic Cooperation and Development (OECD) and its Financial Action Task Force (FATF).

The OECD is a cartel of the world's richest democracies that are taking aim at 35 jurisdictions on claims of inadequate legislation and enforcement mechanism. Through a commitment made by the past Government to correct such deficiencies, we have been able to avoid being listed on the OECD list of non-cooperating countries. However, we appear on the on the FATF's black list.

We have heard many negotiations, talks, seminars, on ways that we can come to a common agreement between the providers of offshore financial services and the OECD countries. We have heard of the possibility that we may be removed from the black list as soon as June of this year. It is important for us to understand the context we find ourselves in when negotiating and cooperating with the OECD and the FATF and for us to realise that we have taken a quantum leap when the OECD and the FATF has included, as one of its mandates, the prevention of harmful tax competition.

The Cayman Islands has always maintained a leadership role in the fight against money laundering. With the passage of the Misuse of Drugs Law, the signing of the Mutual Legal Assistance Treaty and the Proceeds of Criminal Conduct Bill, the Cayman Islands has demonstrated to the international community that we are an active partner in the global fight against illicit activity. However, it would appear that every time we meet acceptable standards of the international community, the threshold for acceptability seems to rise. We are now being asked to include cooperation on tax matters. This is certainly a new concept to the Cayman Islands and it is very unpalatable.

This jurisdiction has fought for years to create what is now the fifth largest financial centre of the world. All financial services including personal banking rely heavily on confidentiality. The Preservation of Confidentiality Law of 1976, and I stand to be corrected on the year, is a key piece of legislation that has aided us to reach the point of where we are at in financial services. We are the world's fifth largest financial centre and people have entrusted us with their wealth for years because we have respected their right of confidentiality. We have proven to the world that we are a true and active participant in hindering money laundering and other illegal activities; that is, activities that are illegal in this jurisdiction.

I am of the same view as the Second Elected Member for Bodden Town who pointed out in his contribution, that it is in vain to hope of ever reaching a point which will satisfy all the international requirements because those requirements will continually be changed.

The Second Elected Member for Bodden Town, my friend and colleague, Mr. Gilbert McLean, said it is time for us to take a hard-nose stand to these international agencies. I am also of that view.

It is estimated that US$5 trillion is located in offshore centres. Despite what is articulated and defined by the OECD and FATF, and any other initiative that may arise, as to their motive for reducing the effectiveness of the use of offshore centres, in my opinion, the truth of the matter is to have access to this US$5 trillion for the benefit of taxing for their own coffers. I agree with the Second Elected Member for Bodden Town, that we are too much of a small nation, 39,000 people with a budget of just over $300 Million, to be expected to be the tax collector for the large jurisdictions.

I have great confidence in our negotiating team who will be representing the interest of the Cayman Islands in that we can achieve some success. I urge and caution them of whom we are negotiating against; this is a group that have a separate and independent agenda from the one in which we are sitting around the table with.

I remember when the Proceeds of Criminal Conduct Bill was being proposed because it was during my employment within the Civil Service. It was stated that with the passage of this law it would put our standards of legislation up to, and sometimes above that of the large jurisdictions which now make up the OECD. It was also stated as being the piece of legislation that would get us across this hurdle. However, we cooperated, we negotiated, we surrendered and we passed and a few years later we are back here negotiating, compromising and cooperating again.

In my campaign in the year 2000, I urged that it was a great risk to be cooperating with someone whose goal is the full and complete eradication of offshore centres. It is my opinion, that this is the objective of these international agencies.

These countries earn taxes from taxing the populous, as all countries do, and when they view a loophole that has resulted as much as $5 Trillion escaping their tax network, they will not surrender. I am proud of how responsive the Cayman Islands have been in dealing with these matters. I am proud that we have been able to sustain this industry for some four decades and that our forefathers had the wisdom and foresight to institute legislation that is still in place and is still proving to be beneficial to this country.

However, as stated in my introduction, in the history of the Caribbean, the region has a history of struggling for viable and sustainable economic alternatives. The financial service industry is one which is fragile and has a limited life.

As a small nation, we cannot expect to survive and to rely 30 percent of our GDP on success based on the deprivation of taxes in the United States and European nations. That is our business plan which has been our plan for some years—that we are going to survive on offshore finances which relies on $5 trillion escaping the world's power tax regime. I propose to this House that that business plan has some immediate threats and we should seriously look at our economic base and ways of diversifying it. I am very cognisant of the difficulties in finding alternatives as the region has always found it difficult.

The recent election of a Republican President in the USA has placed economic fears in most however, for offshore financial service providers it has provided some light of hope. The Republicans seem to be much more receptive to the plight of the Caribbean nations and other financial centres such as the Cayman Islands.

In the contribution made by my good friend, the Second Elected Member for West Bay, he also touched on this issue and pointed out that the Republicans have demonstrated that they are willing to listen. They have not made any firm position on the OECD but have certainly said enough to indicate that they are not receptive to being a part of this global cartel that is aimed at eradicating small island nations like the Cayman Islands.

I read an excerpt by Republican Dick Arney "By every possible criterion, the OECD's efforts are misguided." Mr. Speaker, that is my view exactly. These efforts aim to eliminate what we have built over the many years and to place this and other small economies as being the tax collector for these large jurisdictions. My final point is, it is my view, that we should approach the Republican Government and make our position known. I strongly believe that we will have more success with a Republican Government than we would have with the Bill Clinton Government. It is time that we call upon our US attorneys and lobbyists to put pressure on the United States to aid this nation and other such jurisdictions, to ensure that this centre can see a few more years of success and buoyancy.

The OECD and FATF initiatives were first highlighted in this country, as much probity was given during the debate over what is termed "the White Paper". I am guilty, like most other politicians, who took the White Paper during the year 2000 general election and used it as a political football. However, the major points of the White Paper are important to this nation, and it is important that the general public and all Members of the Legislative Assembly, take the responsible role, in ensuring that the factual position outlined in the White Paper are not as harmful as many of us made it seem during the 2000 general election.

It was quite convenient to talk about the White Paper when it was a matter that the past Government was dealing with. But, on 8th November 2000, the good people of Cayman Brac and Little Cayman elected me to be their representative and to deal with the issues. So did the people of each and every district. We are now here in the Legislative Assembly to correct and to take the necessary action to put this country on the right track. We must look at the White Paper for an objective point of view rather than something in which the past Government committed to without proper consultation with the public, and other political rhetoric that was thrown around during the 2000 general election.

The Speaker: I will have to ask that you say that it is your opinion without proper consultation.

Mr. Lyndon L. Martin: Yes, Mr. Speaker. At this time, I think, it would be appropriate for me to say that everything I deliver in this speech, and all others, will be in my opinion, unless otherwise stated that I am quoting a source of facts.

I read a very interesting article written by Mr. W. S. Walker, published in the most recent issue of the Cayman Executive. I would like to publicly congratulate him on taking the White Paper and putting it into simple, understandable layman's terms so that everyone can have a true appreciation of what is covered in this Paper. We will see long term references to the principles represented under the position paper produced by the United Kingdom government on their relationship with offshore centres.

When we get to review the Constitution, we will draw heavily on principles represented in the White Paper. When we look at our total development in putting together a long-term plan for this country, we will all have to look on the position put forward by the Mother country. I am one that is truly appreciative of actually having the White Paper and knowing what the desires are of the United Kingdom as it relates to this jurisdiction. For too long, we have had to live on assumptions alone. We have made decisions for directions of this country, not knowing if it was in line with what the Mother Country had intended for this jurisdiction.

I would like to spend a few minutes for the benefit of the public to simply go over the major principles covered under the White Paper. I think it is exceedingly important because much of what we are going to speak about when we look at the Throne Speech, the development and Budget of this country, we will have to refer back to the White Paper.

There are basically four principles represented in the White Paper. Firstly, the United Kingdom has made it clear that the partnership must be founded on self-determination. Any overseas territory that wishes to remain British will be welcomed and helped. However, any overseas territory that wishes its independence will be allowed to opt for it.

For many years we have heard talks about reviewing the Constitution, advancing the Constitution and, most recently, modernising the Constitution. It is my proposition that when doing so, it is imperative that the Commission, who is put in place to do the review, will review it in light of principle number one. I am quite happy that the United Kingdom has provided us with such a clear position on how they feel towards the advancement, or the lack thereof, of our Constitution, and has put the will of this in the hands of the people of this country.

I will elaborate on this further, but during the constitutional review where such decisions will have to be made as to how much self-determination this country needs, desires and is most practical, it is my proposition that we have true Caymanian representation on such a commission.

The second principle represented under the White Paper is the partnership creates responsibilities on both sides. Britain undertakes to defend the Overseas Territories, encourage sustainable development and look after their interest internally. In return, Britain expects Overseas Territories to maintain the highest standards of probity, law and order, good governance and observance of Britain's international commitments. Again, this principle is welcomed. I am not saying that this principle is exactly what I would like, but it is welcoming to know exactly what the United Kingdom's position is.

Thirdly, the White Paper commits Britain to giving the Overseas Territories the greatest possible control over their own lives. So many of us have felt the pressure of being in a position where it is perceived to have the power of representing the desired direction of this country but have felt powerless because of the current constitutional structure. This third principle clearly provides us with an avenue to organise ourselves and make the necessary constitutional amendments which will provide us with greater control over our lives.

The fourth principle is that Britain is committed to provide help to overseas territories that need it. We have been fortunate over the years that we have not been a grant recipient of the United Kingdom's Government, but it is good to know that such a provision is available. I come from an electoral district that, as you know, feels strongly towards the preservation of our current connection with the United Kingdom's Government.

The district of Cayman Brac and Little Cayman, more so than most of the districts of Grand Cayman, have made it quite clear that we are very loyal and appreciative of the benefits that have been received from our current relationship with the United Kingdom. I am here as a servant of the people that I represent. I campaigned on a manifesto that had quite clearly printed on the back, that I stand strongly for the preservation of our political and constitutional connection with the United Kingdom government.

I am not saying that our Constitution does not need to be modernised; I am not saying that there is not some form of advancement necessary to provide greater control. I am simply saying that it is the desires of the people of Cayman Brac and Little Cayman, for which I am elected as their voice in this Parliament, that it is their desire for us to remain under the rule of the British government as an overseas territory.

The principles outlined in the White Paper further leads to our commitment as two small islands which represent a very small portion of land mass of the Cayman Islands. and even smaller portion of the population of the Cayman Islands. I am simply making it known in this House that the people of Cayman Brac remain of the view, that we must preserve our relationship with the United Kingdom, after reviewing the four principles set out in the White Paper as the United Kingdom's intended principles for our relationship.

The White Paper provided for a change in the name of what was "Colonies" to "Dependent Territories" and now, to "United Kingdom Overseas Territories" commonly called "Overseas Territories." That issue received very little controversy.

The second offering was that of British citizenship, extended to all citizens of Overseas Territories to adapt British citizenship, which would mean an amendment to the British Nationality Act of 1981. I understand that this particular amendment has met with some tie down or resistance and political manoeuvring in the UK Parliament. For the sake of clarity, it must be understood that the offering by the UK was not reciprocal. It was clearly stated that they were offering British citizenship to people of the Cayman Islands and other overseas territories at their desire, but were not expecting the Cayman Islands or other overseas territories to offer a similar citizenship to British nationals.

My suspicion of the genuineness of this offer and the insurance that this would remain an un-reciprocal relationship, I have voiced publicly. However, Mr. W. S. Walker pointed out in his article that there was a clear precedent for that, in that persons belonging to Crown Dependencies, Jersey, Guernsey, and Isle of Man also hold British citizenship with similar rights, but British citizens not belonging to Crown Dependencies require immigration approval to work in a Crown Dependency.

The British Government has demonstrated that they have been able to do this in the past and maintain it for some years. However, and this is a personal view, the option of being a British citizen is one that I personally would not desire. I am here in the Cayman Islands, and while I am above ground, I will fight the fight here. I do not want the option to simply pick up and leave when things become hard in this country.

Human rights were also addressed in the White Paper. First, the White Paper mandated the abolition of the judicial corporal punishment, which has not been imposed in the Cayman Islands.

Secondly, the abolition of capital punishment, which was only possible in the Cayman Islands for acts of treason and piracy has never been imposed.

Thirdly, the most controversial issue—

Mr. Speaker, I once again bring to your attention that we do not have a quorum.

LACK OF A QUORUM

The Speaker: Serjeant-at-Arms, please summons Members to the Chamber.

(Pause)

The Speaker: The Second Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman, please continue.

Mr. Lyndon L. Martin: I was mentioning the third proposal under the Human Rights caption of the White Paper, certainly the most controversial issue, and probably the issue that has made the White Paper an unacceptable proposition, to the general public. This deals with the decentralisation of homosexual acts between consenting adults in private. As we all know, that has now been imposed upon the Cayman Islands by an Order in Council. I want to clearly clarify, for the purpose of the public, that despite propaganda and scare-mongering techniques used, the decriminalisation of homosexual acts are simply limited to those among consenting adults and limited to acts in private. This by no means, allows for homosexual marriages, as has been said on the street.

Like most people, I am concerned over how the Order in Council was imposed. However, we should give the White Paper a chance and not say that everything in the White Paper is bad because this one proposition is not desirable.

Under good governance, finance, there are some areas which are of great concern to me. I believe that under the second principle of the White Paper there could be an internal conflict. The second principle states "partnership creates responsibilities on both sides and Britain undertakes to defend the Overseas Territories . . ." This particular overseas territory relies heavily on offshore finance. We should now be able to rely on the UK to defend us.

For years we have recognised and agreed to the first recommendation under good governance in this Parliament. We knew when the Monetary Authority was established it would eventually have to be independent of all government control. As I understand, it is currently putting in place a fee structure that would make it self-sufficient and necessary legislation will soon be coming to this House to fulfill this requirement under good governance.

Secondly, the White Paper requires that government practise sound financial administration with timely and adequate internal auditing. The Cayman Islands certainly fulfills that requirement.

Thirdly, the British Government requires the strengthening of guidelines to ensure proper government borrowing within established limits and the restriction of borrowing to funding of investment capital projects only after concessional funding sources are exhausted.

Mr. Rolston M. Anglin: Mr. Speaker, on a point of order. There is no quorum in the Chamber.

LACK OF A QUORUM

The Speaker: Serjeant-at-Arms, please summons the Members to the Chamber.

(Pause)

The Speaker: Second Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman, please continue your debate.

Mr. Lyndon L. Martin: Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

At the time of the point of order called by my good friend, the Second Elected Member for West Bay, for a quorum, I was outlining the third requirement under good governance as covered in the White Paper. It states that the British government requires the proper guidelines to ensure Government is borrowing within established limits, and the restriction of borrowing to funding of investment capital projects only after concessional funding sources are exhausted.

I will refer back to this guideline during my contribution on the budget. The last issue raised by the White Paper is in regard to tax, and the inclusion of cooperation and allowance of probity on tax related matters. This matter has now been raised and is being dealt with through the OECD and the FATF.

Those are the major points covered in the White Paper. I think we should welcome this White Paper because a clear understanding of what is expected of us will provide us with a document to determine how we can progress in the future.

The Speaker: If this is a convenient time, we shall take the afternoon break. We shall suspend for 15 minutes.

PROCEEDINGS SUSPENDED AT 3.26 PM

PROCEEDINGS RESUMED AT 3.50 PM

The Speaker: Proceedings are resumed.

Debate continuing on the Second Reading of the Appropriation Bill, 2001.

The Second Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman, continuing the debate.

Mr. Lyndon L. Martin: Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

I would now like to turn to the Throne Speech that was ably delivered by His Excellency the Governor, Mr. Peter Smith, CBE. I would like to thank the Governor for presenting this Honourable House and this country, with this Throne Speech which sets out the policies of the country and reviews of each and every Ministry and Departments for what the country can expect over the year 2001.

Before speaking on the details of the Throne Speech, I listened quite carefully yesterday as the Honourable First Official Member spoke on the preservation of the respect for the judicial system, and the importance that such respect has for social order. Under the current Constitution, the Governor is listed as the head of this country. I also believe that a certain respect level is due to His Excellency the Governor. I have to express some disappointment, by taking the liberty, on behalf of the House to apologise for any disrespect that this House has demonstrated to him.

In his Speech, the Governor spoke of the importance of information technology. I was pleased that he mentioned the availability of computers in our school system and how computer literate the populace of the Cayman Islands has become. I do agree, but there are a few concerns that I would like to mention.

I believe that our libraries should have internet access in this age of information technology. I was amazed when I went across the street from the Parliament to the George Town Library and found out that there was no internet service. In my district of Cayman Brac behind the administration building, I walked to the library to find that there was no internet service. We need to make internet available to the general public. It is such a valuable source of information that allows our populous to expand their attention from beyond our shores to the global arena by learning about what is occurring, doing research on projects for school, applying to universities. The use of the internet is so wide that we need to make it accessible to all.

On the same subject of information technology and the ability of the Cayman Islands, which he deemed as being extremely poised and ready to capitalise on the advancement and information technology industry, I also have to express that the Legislative Assembly of this country also needs to embrace information technology. I believe that each and every Member of this House should have access to e-mail and we should be doing most of our communication via e-mail. I know the Clerk and her staff have made advancement in this area and the service is available. However, it is not utilised to the point where the Cayman Islands should be utilising in the year 2001.

I am also somewhat disappointed, after receiving notice yesterday, about laptop computers not being allowed in Parliament. Laptop computers are a part and parcel of our information age. If laptops were allowed, I would be doing my presentation from a laptop screen rather than from paper. I think we need to embrace such advancements. We need to move with the times, be it amending of Standing Orders . . . we need to have such information available to all Members.

I intend to mention another short coming for the Cayman Islands, within the tourism arena, about the lack of use on information technology. However, I will elaborate on this more under the caption for Tourism.

In order for the Cayman Islands to retain its position as a leading offshore financial centre, a secure online communication and trading environment is essential to facilitate E-commerce. Individuals and entities in the international financial sector require what is termed as positive identification of the business counterpart. That is, we need to create an environment in which the users of our financial industry—and this is not only limited to the financial industry, although this is where the effect will be felt greatest—the users of our industry must be able to communicate via electronic medium and give instructions and directions to providers of financial services. But, to do so, it is imperative that this environment is safe, secured and that there is a provision for positive identification.

The past Parliament of the Cayman Islands passed the Cayman Islands Electronic Transaction Law, 2000, which accords the same standing in the Cayman Islands' law to an electronic signature as that of conventional ink signature. The reason this law was passed was on a recognition basis that E-commerce was the wave of the future. Members of this Honourable House and the general public, for E-commerce to occur, it is necessary for two components to be in place. We need to have a system where there is positive identification of your trading counterpart; when I am sitting at one end of a computer I must know that the person who is sending instructions to me is the person that he claims to be. I must also know that once those instructions are conveyed to me he cannot go back and say those instructions were not provided through him.

What I am referring to is whether or not the infrastructure is necessary for E-commerce to take off in the Cayman Islands. We need to use what is commonly accepted by the industry as being the proper infrastructure, that is the Public Key Infrastructure (PKI technology) and we must make sure that this environment provides for non repudiation, that is, we must know that this environment is safe to transact, that once instructions are given, we have the identification of that person, knowing that the person cannot come back and say those instructions were not given. Those are two prerequisites in the infrastructure of the information age e-commerce.

The PKI technology can come in two forms. That is, we can have something that comes in the format of a key that is injected through the UPS port of your computer, transacting a mathematical formula that turns the digital signature to a signature that is recognised by the person on the other end of the communication line, as being the digital signature that is only applicable to the individual, the counterpart.

For PKI to work, you need to have a certification agency. We need to have an established and globally recognised body in the Cayman Islands who will be issuing certificates of identification and the required UPS key or the alternative, which is the swipe card that goes into the keyboard. Once such certification is issued, we need to make sure that the electronic network is in place that will provide a safe environment that is not penetrable by any individual outside of the two transacting. This is done through a complex industrial standard encryption. We must know that once the information is transacted it is recorded in a safe environment that ten, twelve, fifteen years down the line the information or instruction is still available and can be taken to court because our new electronic law recognises the digital signature to be equal to that of a pen signature.

We passed the law but we have almost made the E-commerce age to pass us. It is time that the country embraces the technology available and recognises how this technology has changed the way the world conducts business. E-commerce is the wave of the future; we have talked about it, we have said that it is the way to go forward, that it is the third leg to the Cayman Islands' economy, and that it will provide great opportunities, but we have not done anything to embrace these opportunities, other than the passage of the law in 2000.

It is my view that the Government of the Cayman Islands needs to provide this certification authority. The Government needs to provide a mechanism in which individuals can seek for digital identification and that this identification will have global recognition to allow for e-commerce to transact. This is not an alien concept; it is the way that the industry is going.

It is not acceptable to me, and should not be for any Member in this House, that we have providers of financial services in the Cayman Islands that have to utilise certification authorities in other competing jurisdictions, in order to compete and in order to transact.

Mr. Speaker, Bermuda has a certification authority. We will soon have our providers transacting with certificates issued from Bermuda rather than from the Cayman Islands. We are missing the boat of E-commerce, and I am calling and challenging this government of today, to make corrective actions and ensure that this country benefits from E-commerce.

My colleague from Cayman Brac, and I were part of a group of individuals who brought to the government, a proposal from what is deemed as the world's largest internet security company. Their proposal suggested that we review the possibility of establishing a certification agency in the Cayman Islands. Being attached to this world recognised name in the internet business, along with their local partner, Cable and Wireless, would have given E-commerce revolution in the Cayman Islands the boost that it needs. It would have given us international recognition instantly. I am somewhat disappointed that months have passed and I have not heard anything of this proposal.

The proposers offered to the Cayman Islands, to be a part of the implementation of this exercise if the government chose to pursue this initiative. They also suggested that we utilise the same Monetary Authority as the issuing authority, which we will discuss later on in this Budget Address. This would provide international brand name recognition. It would provide the Cayman Islands with a differentiating factor that would allow the Cayman Islands to enter this E-commerce arena, although late in the game, but with a distinct advantage, and cannibalise on some of the other providers of the service, in order to get our fair share of e-commerce.

There is a local company that have chosen to enter this market, and I would like to congratulate KPMG Peat Marwick on their announcement that they will be launching what is called 'Certica' which is the Cayman Islands Certification Agency. My concern with relying on the private sector to provide this service is that we are aware that the offshore financial service providers are in a very competitive environment. I am of the view and belief that if this service is provided by KPMG that you will not see other competitors of KPMG, such as, Ernst and Young, utilising the service. What will happen is that they would utilise the service of one of their branches, located in a jurisdiction that offers certificates of identification; maybe in Bermuda, which is one of our competitors.

It is time that this Island benefits from E-commerce. It is time that we put talk into action. This is especially important to me and also the First Elected Member for Cayman Brac because the proposal involves a very great benefit to the Sister Islands. This proposal as you know, Cayman Brac and Little Cayman is in great need for economic assistance, as outlined in the Throne Speech where the Governor said there was a need to create white collar work in Cayman Brac.

Mr. Speaker, this proposal is certainly of interest to the First Elected Member and I, and I am sure to you also, because this proposal included the use of Cayman Brac as a disaster recovery centre. As I stated earlier, the success and acceptance of the E-commerce infrastructure relies on the security of the communication environment. Part of this security means that the information transacted daily would have to be backed up in an environment that is safe from natural disasters, such as hurricanes. It is one of the distinguishing features of Cayman Brac—the Bluff provides that exact need—an environment in which a bunker style facility could be built to house the computer racks necessary to back up the information and keep it in a safe environment.

It was suggested by the proposers who are in the 'know' because this is the line of their business, that this would mean employing some 15 individuals in Cayman Brac to carry out white collar work. The number may seem small to most but in our population and in our economic situation, that would be a significant achievement for this Government. I look forward to pursuing this venture in conjunction with the Government because it has made such a commitment and recognition of the importance of information technology. I am sure it will not allow such an opportunity to pass us by.

The Cayman Brac community has taken action. The Community for some time has proposed Cayman Brac as an informatic industry centre, and that it should be used as a back-up centre for most of the businesses in Grand Cayman, including government. This group of private individuals, in Cayman Brac, has come together and included, under their ambit, the proposal from the company originating in Ireland. This is very much needed in Cayman Brac. As I indicated earlier, the First Elected Member and I, and the private group in Cayman Brac have not given up on this initiative and will be pursuing it privately, and in conjunction with the Government of today. It should be noted that although this proposal and initiative originated in Cayman Brac and has extreme benefit to the Sister Islands, that this has an opportunity to enhance the Cayman Islands as a nation and as an offshore financial industry. It will ensure that our industry is keeping pace with changes in technology. I cannot understand why such a proposal has not been responded to positively by the Government and if it has been responded to, I am not aware, and I certainly tender my apologies.

When we talk of information technology and the availability of computers in all the schools in the Cayman Islands, I would be remiss in my duties as a representative for the entire Sister Islands, if I did not point out that the West End Primary School, although it has computers, it is the only school that I am aware of in the Cayman Islands without a computer room. The staff members of West End Primary School had to give up the staff room in order to accommodate the few computers that they do have. The people of Cayman Brac and Little Cayman deserve to have computer rooms in every school in Cayman Brac. I take this opportunity to mention that when touring the small school in Little Cayman, I was quite pleased to see a computer there.

All of our kids deserve the equal right to take advantage of the information age. I am currently pursuing a private initiative in conjunction with Ernst and Young to ensure that West End Primary School and all other schools in Cayman Brac have proper computers. I am relying on the Government to take the stand and make provision in the year 2001, during the summer vacation, to build the computer room. We need it, Mr. Speaker.

In the Governor's Throne Speech he spoke of the lack of parental involvement, he spoke about 12 and 14 year old children hanging around night clubs at midnight with inevitable exposure to real mischief. It is time that this country takes responsibility for the youth of this country. For too long we have looked at this generation as we class them, a generation of problems, without recognising that whatever problems this generation is faced with are problems created through our actions or lack thereof.

I am pleased to see that there is a commission of enquiry into youth violence. I am heartened by the discussions that have taken place on this commission. I am even more pleased that the original composition of this commission was amended to include a Cayman Brac representative, and a very capable representative, Miss Janice Bradshaw.

It is time for parents to take their role seriously and stop looking to the state for assistance in carrying out their parental responsibility. It is time that we address the disciplinary mechanism of our schools to provide our teachers with greater control over their students. I recall, as a student in the Creek Primary School, that the strap was my guidance for good behaviour; the fear that if I did not, I would have a red weal to carry home to show my parents. We have taken the issue of protecting our kids too far to a point where discipline is not present. When I hear of gang violence that involves 12, 13 and 14 year olds—where are their parents? It is not that their parents are not aware that this problem is occurring; the problem is that the state has involved themselves too much into parental guidance and into the rules of school governing discipline.

Discipline is a fundamental part of moral building. It is necessary for a person to feel so that they will know when something is wrong. I am encouraging the Minister for Education to review the mechanism in the schools' system which governs discipline—the hierarchy that is necessary to go through before someone can be disciplined.

I am also of the view, that when a child is disciplined the parents should be informed of the reason for the discipline and exactly what measure was taken. I have also observed, as the Governor has stated, that we have 12 to 14-year-olds hanging out at midnight around nightclubs. I listened carefully and tried to appreciate the position put forward by the Member from East End for a curfew. I do not believe in curfews, I do not believe that we as a state should have to mandate what time the parent takes his child home or the time the child goes home; I believe that is the responsibility of the parent.

I will listen carefully and review with great interest, the findings of the Youth Commission because I do think it will reveal some of the hidden causes for young people to want to expose themselves to the elements of the world, prior to being of the mature age to appreciate and handle it.

I am pleased that the Government of today chose an appointed sociologist, Dr. Frank McField, to chair this Committee of Enquiry. He has demonstrated through his past four years in government and his many plays that he has a true appreciation of Caymanians, and what is necessary to correct the family structure. I look forward to his findings and the work of the Committee as a whole. I say to the Committee of Enquiry that it is a great responsibility you have and I urge each and every member to take this responsibility seriously.

As one of the representatives for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman, I would be remiss, if I did not point out, that the problems present here in Grand Cayman are different, not greater, not minor, but different than those faced in Cayman Brac and I urge the Committee not to attempt to provide an umbrella review. Review these situations independently because at the end of this committee's review, action will be forthcoming and I want to ensure that the action is appropriate to the problem.

Mr. Speaker, as we draw to the closing hour of today, I am not prepared to commence a new subject, so if this is an appropriate time to close for the day.....

MOMENT OF INTERRUPTION—4.30 PM

The Speaker: We have reached the hour of interruption so I will entertain a motion for the adjournment of this Honourable House.

The Honourable Minister for Planning, Communications and Works.

Hon. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Thank you. Mr. Speaker, some of the Members have indicated that they would be prepared to stay a little longer this afternoon and I would be happy to move a motion if the majority of the Members wish to remain for another hour, Sir.

The Speaker: I would like to take a suspension and have a discussion with you. Proceedings are suspended for five minutes.

PROCEEDINGS SUSPENDED AT 4.26 PM

PROCEEDINGS RESUMED AT 4.30 PM

The Speaker: Proceedings are resumed.

I will entertain a motion for the adjournment of this Honourable House.

The Honourable Minister for Planning, Communications and Works.

Hon D. Kurt Tibbetts: Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

In light of the fact that some Members are travelling this afternoon, I think perhaps we will simply move the motion for the adjournment of this Honourable House until Monday morning at 10 am, Sir.

ADJOURNMENT

The Speaker: The question is that this Honourable House adjourn until 10 am on Monday. Those in favour please say Aye. Those against, No.

AYES

The Speaker: The Ayes have it. This Honourable House stands adjourned until 10.00 AM Monday, 9th April, 2001.

AT 4.31 PM THE HOUSE STOOD ADJOURNED UNTIL 10 AM MONDAY, 9 APRIL 2001.

OFFICIAL HANSARD REPORT
MONDAY
9 APRIL 2001
10.07 AM
Seventeenth Sitting

[Prayers read by Fourth Elected Member for West Bay.]

The Speaker: Proceedings are resumed. Item number 2 on today's Order Paper, Reading by the Honourable Speaker of Messages and Announcements.

READING BY THE
HONOURABLE SPEAKER OF
MESSAGES AND ANNOUNCEMENTS

APOLOGIES

The Speaker: I have apologies for late arrival from the Honourable Second Official Member and the Third Elected Member for Bodden Town.

Moving on to item number 3 on today's Order Paper, Government Business, Bills, Continuation of the Second Reading of the Appropriation Bill, 2001. Continuation of debate on the Throne Speech delivered by His Excellency the Governor on Friday, 9 March 2001, together with the Budget Address delivered by the Honourable Third Official Member on Wednesday, 21st March 2001.

The Second Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman continuing his debate.

GOVERNMENT BUSINESS

BILLS

SECOND READING

THE APPROPRIATION BILL, 2001

DEBATE ON THE THRONE SPEECH DELIVERED BY HIS EXCELLENCY THE GOVERNOR ON FRIDAY 9 MARCH 2001

TOGETHER WITH

THE BUDGET ADDRESS DELIVERED BY THE HONOURABLE THIRD OFFICIAL MEMBER ON WEDNESDAY
21 MARCH 2001

(Continuation of debate thereon)

Mr. Lyndon L. Martin: Mr. Speaker, I trust that everyone has had a relaxing and safe weekend. This morning I would like to begin by extending an invitation to everyone to consider a visit to Cayman Brac and Little Cayman during the upcoming Easter weekend. It is a great opportunity for every Member of the Legislative Assembly and the listening public to reconnect with the Cayman of yesteryear.

On Friday I detailed to this Honourable House my position of how I became a Member of Her Majesty's loyal Opposition by default. I am committed to carrying out this role constructively. I further explained the importance of a healthy opposition.

I spent some time encouraging an appreciation of Caribbean history. I then went on to global economics, concluding that the world is expected to slow down approximately to a 1.5 percent economic growth in the year 2001 compared to the 4.2 percent stated in the Honourable Third Official Member's Budget Address. This was used as the basis for his projections when compiling the Budget.

I also spent some time putting to rest some of the general public's phobias on the White Paper.

The Speaker: If I could interrupt you for a moment.

I would ask you to make your summation as brief as possible because you are actually repeating what you have said already.

Mr. Lyndon L. Martin: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker.

At the time of my introduction on Friday, I detailed the need for the Cayman Islands to put into place the communication network that allowed for positive identification of communicating counterparts, and for non-repudiation of communication.

At this time I strongly encourage the Government of the day to follow through on their proposal for the establishment of a certification authority for the issuance of certificates of identity, especially for the use of Cayman Brac as a location for a disaster recovery centre.

I was pleased that His Excellency the Governor addressed the need for economic development for Cayman Brac, especially the creation of white-collar work.

Many Members of this Honourable House and the general public have made recent statements representing a sentiment that is of great concern to me and should be to all the residents of the Sister Islands. Many have said that Cayman Brac and Little Cayman are subsidised by Grand Cayman; that the Sister Islands get more than they deserve; that the budget of the Sister Islands should be proportionate to its population.

The Cayman Islands is one country with one Constitution and one Government; however, it is comprised of three islands.

The Budget has approximately $4.9 million for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman for the year 2001 compared to anticipated collections of $3.3 million. However, in addition to this $3.3 million, there are various government fees collected by Grand Cayman because of the organisational arrangement of various departments that are directly attributable to the Sister Islands.

Secondly, the Sister Islands purchases many goods from Grand Cayman that pay duty at the time of being imported into Grand Cayman. These items would include: automobiles at 27.5 percent duty; construction materials in duty ranging from 15 to 20 percent; and many household goods at 20 percent.

I propose that the Sister Islands generate in direct and indirect revenue an amount equal or greater than the expenses of maintaining the Sister Islands. However, we should not be looking at it in this manner, for we are one country.

The success of the Cayman Islands has no jurisdictional borders. The laws of the Cayman Islands attract many banks, insurance companies, mutual funds, trust companies and exempt companies that contribute to the government coffers with relatively small infrastructural demand. This could have been done in Cayman Brac or Little Cayman, for the legislative framework is the same. However, the powers in the past chose to centre this economic development in Grand Cayman, but I will not attempt to suggest the motive for this lack of interest in the Sister Islands.

I would like to point out that it was not the lack of efforts from past representatives for the Sister Islands or private initiatives. I give special recognition to Mr. Nolan Foster, who for many years made representation to Governments on the need for Cayman Brac to benefit from the financial industry.

Year after year, decade after decade, Government after Government, efforts were focused on developing Grand Cayman. The stature and financial benefits that this industry and other developments provide should be shared and experienced by the Sister Islands.

We, the new guard, should step beyond the parochial politics and take a much broader and national approach to good governance.

A country as small as the Cayman Islands should be seeking to utilise all of its available resources in an effort to maximise the benefits for all the people of this country, in an equitable manner with special care to ensure sustainability. Mr.

Speaker, I beg your indulgence as I repeat: utilisation of all of our resources to maximise the benefits for all of the people of the country in an equitable manner with special care to ensure sustainability. This should be the mission of all legislators of this country.

The Sister Islands have much to bring to the equation of the Cayman Islands. As a tourist destination the Sister Islands provide much diversification for the tourist product. Cayman Brac and Little Cayman have been named as the top dive destinations for several years. We have also successfully entered into the Nature Tourist market that has a strong European appeal. With global volatility it is important that we attract more European tourists.

Over the past two years the Nature Tourist product has been augmented by the placement of several interpretative and descriptive signs throughout Cayman Brac including Bluff Trails, of which four received new access stairs.

There has also been the identification and signage of 16 sights of interest to tourists and residents alike. To support these nature-tourist initiatives, a school leaver has been trained as a tour guide and it was hoped a second guide could have been hired and trained this year. However, it would appear that the compilers of the Budget are less cognisant of the need to develop this segment of our tourism market.

In the last year a nature tourism brochure was developed. The Brac Heritage House was built, envisioned to act as the centre point for the nature-tourism efforts, including: the station for the guides; the arrangement of tours; the viewing of artefacts.

I have had positive conversations with the Minister responsible for Community Affairs, and I look forward to the Heritage House opening soon. The grounds of the Heritage House are an attractive sight with great historical importance, as well as ideal for community events.

Little Cayman is certainly the jewel of the Cayman Islands. The time has come for us to capitalise on all the various attributes of the three Islands. It is time for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman to have its own tourism representative and a promotional budget to ensure that much needed domestic and international exposure is given to the Sister Islands.

I thank the Honourable Minister for Tourism for allocating a significant portion of his contribution to discuss plans for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman. The Honourable Minister for Tourism, Mr. McKeeva Bush, has always been kind to the Sister Islands and no less would be expected of him during his four-year term.

The Sister Islands Tourism Association has pooled resources from all of the tourism partners—airlines, hotels, condominiums and the government—to conduct a well orchestrated marketing campaign.

Once again, I would like to thank the Minister of Tourism who attended one of the meetings of the Sister Islands Tourism Association and provided his support and assurance that he would commit some financial assistance to the promotion of the Sister Islands. He also gave an undertaking at the meeting to provide the much needed tourism representative for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman.

It is recognised that much work is needed to better position both Cayman Brac and Little Cayman in the very competitive tourism industry. Some of that work includes: the improvement of ground transport; an island wide beautification exercise; the development of a mariner; the addition of hotel accommodations, a much needed airport in Little Cayman; and other projects the Minister outlined during his contribution.

I am pleased to report that the long awaited Brac Club Project has gained wind under its sails. I have had several meetings with the developers recently, and the 41 condo project is soon to be mobilised. Fidelity Cayman Real Estate Limited has been appointed as the local representatives for the developer.

Such quality development is what Cayman Brac and Little Cayman require. I was delighted that the Minister responsible for Tourism detailed that in his upcoming attendance to a tourism investment conference he will be seeking to encourage investment in tourism products in Cayman Brac and Little Cayman.

The Sister Islands greatly benefited during the 1980s with the introduction of offshore oil transfers. Mr. Speaker, you will recall the economic vibrancy this industry brought to Cayman Brac and Little Cayman, and the revenue generated to the Government of the Cayman Islands and to Cayman Airways. The same features that attracted the industry in the 1980s and made it viable are still present.

I am happy to announce that I will be creating a committee to review the feasibility of re-establishing this industry in Cayman Brac and reporting the findings to government. This committee will be chaired by Mr. Raymond Scott and will have a wide cross-section of membership, including representatives from the National Trust.

It is my submission that a land-fixed storage facility is the most suitable method of re-establishing this industry. It would have the greatest potential for sustainable, economic contribution to the Islands.

On Friday I also mentioned the use of Cayman Brac as a disaster recovery centre and a general back-up centre for the local financial industry and other providers internationally. The topography of Cayman Brac makes it one of the highest, flat surfaces in the region. I emphasise the word 'flat' because it is certainly not the highest in the region, it is the highest, flat surface.

The Bluff is higher at its edges than in the middle which provides an ideal environment for protection from the sea and wind. I would like to see a bunker style building on the Bluff with double back-up generator capacity.

The attractiveness of Cayman Brac as a back-up location is strengthened by the availability of fibre optics telecommunication lines, with excess span capacity and regular jet service to and from the Brac.

In the event of a primary problem in Grand Cayman, or in any place in the world that utilises the Brac Disaster Recovery Centre to back-up their information, a recovery team could be on the Brac in a matter of hours and consequently reduce or eliminate any interruptions to their operation.

I am sure that the Cayman Islands' Financial Centre would benefit from the use of the Brac disaster recovery centre, for the users of the financial industry would be greatly comforted to know that their information can be backed up in a hurricane and disaster-safe location. More importantly, it would be backed-up within the same jurisdiction—these Cayman Islands—and protected by the same Confidentiality Preservation laws.

It must be remembered that in the event of a disaster the providers of financial services are not privy to pick up and carry information to the United States because they would be subject to great probity.

Many financial services providers in the Cayman Islands use other jurisdictions to back up their information, some of which are our competitors. I strongly believe that a disaster recovery centre in the Brac would augment the offering of the Cayman Islands as a financial centre and make us more competitive in this very aggressive environment.

I am also of the view that the Cayman Islands Government should review the possibility of utilising the Brac disaster recovery centre.

In His Excellency the Governor's Throne Speech under Computer Services, he highlighted, "This year a back-up main database server and back-up equipment to allow information to be saved and secured within hurricane time scales is to be implemented which would reduce the high cost and negative publicity following a loss of IT services".

I encourage the Government to look carefully at the use of Cayman Brac as that disaster recovery centre.

On Friday and the first part of this morning I have restricted my contribution to that of the Throne Speech. In concluding, I take this opportunity to emphasise the holistic approach to the Cayman Islands as one country in which all citizens deserve equal rights and privileges.

When the Members in this Honourable House rise to argue that their constituents' roads are not as good as those in George Town or other districts, I remind the Honourable House that there are Caymanians who live in Little Cayman with an incomplete main-road corridor and in Cayman Brac with a 20-year-old main road in desperate need of repaving.

While the rest of the citizens of the Cayman Islands enjoy new road surfacing, I suggest it is now time to focus on completing roads in Little Cayman. This would include straightening and widening the very popular but very dangerous cross-island road, resurfacing the main-road corridor in Cayman Brac and surfacing the Bluff roads.

Little Cayman's residents and tourists are without a doctor on the Island and its clinic is staffed by only one nurse; this is not adequate for a world-class dive jurisdiction and certainly not adequate for the Caymanians who have made Little Cayman their home. They deserve equal privileges. Every citizen of this country should benefit from the economic growth in the Cayman Islands.

The residents of Cayman Brac and Little Cayman welcome the announcement by His Excellency the Governor that a full-time dentist will be posted in Cayman Brac in the near future. I am asking the Minister responsible for Health to also consider the provision of an orthodontist for the many children in the Sister Islands with teeth irregularities. This would make it possible for them to have any necessary adjustments on the Island. Parents would not have to miss work to fly their child to Grand Cayman, rent a car and the children would not have to be absent from school for an entire day.

I ask the Minister responsible for Health to place urgency on the requirement for a full-time dentist and a once-a-month visit by an orthodontist. These are some of the shortcomings that the residents of Cayman Brac and Little Cayman have to live with daily.

I urge the Members of this Honourable House to bear in mind that there are citizens in this country who live in a much inferior infrastructure than their own.

I would like to assure the residents of Cayman Brac and Little Cayman that the Minister responsible for Health, Mr. Linford Pierson, is quite cognisant of the needs for better health services and is empathetic to them. I am certain that he will do as he always has, and pay attention to the interests of these two Islands during his four-year term.

In his Throne Speech, His Excellency the Governor detailed plans for the expansion of the water production capacity for Cayman Brac. This was well received.

From discussions with an informed individual this past weekend, it was highlighted that the plant is operating to its full capacity and may soon have difficulties meeting demand. I encourage the Minister responsible for the Water Authority, the Honourable Edna Moyle, to make certain that the plant, in which most of the components are onsite in the Brac, is ready to meet the expected demand during the summer period.

The Sister Islands need and deserve potable water piped throughout. It is believed that a source of good quality water has contributed to a healthier populace in the Cayman Islands and a longer expected life for Caymanians. Therefore, because this service is not provided to residents of Cayman Brac and Little Cayman, by inference the government is suggesting that this life enhancing measure should not be extended to them.

The Sister Islands were not given fair attention for many years therefore, it is necessary that more than our proportional share of the National Budget is allocated to allow for the infrastructure of these Islands to catch up with that enjoyed by residents of Grand Cayman.

I hope that this current political directorate will place a similar focus on Cayman Brac and Little Cayman as the past political directorate.

I now turn my attention to the budget address delivered by the Third Official Member, Mr. George A. McCarthy.

On Friday there was some brilliant political manoeuvring in a deliberate effort to prevent two Members from Cayman Brac and Little Cayman from making contributions to the 2001 Budget. However, as a result of team work and God's presence, it is possible for the general public to hear the other side of what I call the "impotent budget". The "impotent budget" is defined as a budget that renders the country powerless.

As I have no alliances with the past or current political directorate I identify myself as someone able to objectively decipher the country's current financial situation. I wish to stress to all Members of this House that too much time and too many resources have been exhausted since November 2000 in placing blame.

We, the Members of the Legislative Assembly for the 2001-2004-term, have the daunting task of meeting many international and domestic challenges including the financial position of this country. It is time we address the problems and take responsibility for placing the country back on track.

The growth of this country over the past decade and the resulting demand placed on our infrastructure was the major difficulty faced by the past directorate and will be the same for the present directorate. This demand and the cost related to it far exceeded the benefits generated by the development.

The population of the Cayman Islands is now 39,000. This means the need for more schools in Grand Cayman and more classrooms in Cayman Brac.

The jewel of the Caribbean—as we like to refer to ourselves and as is commonly known throughout the region:

- has citizens without piped water;
- the sewage system needs an overhauling and expansion;
- the Sister Islands main-road corridor needs resurfacing, and in the case of Little Cayman surfacing for the first time in many areas;
- George Town Hospital needs expanding to meet future demand;
- the Faith Hospital in Cayman Brac needs renovating and expanding;
- water and sewage systems need to be extended throughout the three Islands;
- the airport and seaport of the three islands are in immediate need for expansion and renovation;
- the government is paying some CI $5 million in rent to house government departments;

- there is an immediate need for new government buildings; and
- the country must address the need for housing in the Cayman Islands which would require a pool of funds loaned at concessionary rates.

I list these infrastructural requirements—and by no means are they collectively exhausted—simply to illustrate that the demands for infrastructure far exceed what any government can seek to fulfil within any political period of time.

With such stipulations the past government fell into the trap of attempting to fulfil these demands greater than their means allowed.

I want to elaborate on my earlier point about benefits generated by the development not meeting the costs inflicted on our infrastructure.

The kind of growth we have attracted over the past 20-30 years was orientated in labour and intellectual capital rather than traditional equipment capital, as in the case of normal economic development paths that utilise manufacturing.

If it was a manufacturing based development, certainly our tax system would have captured revenue from the importation of the original capital equipment and ongoing components for the manufacturing process. However, our development path was one that was a lot different: we imported human and intellectual capital to provide the infrastructure for our industries.

Our current tax regime is not set up to generate a significant cash flow from this sort of development. Consequently, we matured without the tax base in place to meet the infrastructural demands that this development placed on this country.

The government of the past, that is, the year 1992 – 2000, and governments prior to that found themselves in a position where the need for services was more significant than the tax base could sustain.

In 1997 I published a letter in the Caymanian Compass suggesting that the government of the day exercise financial restraint and increase their contribution to general reserves to save for less buoyant times such as those we experience today. I maintain that position and give the past government wrong for this. However, I have the greatest of respect for the democratic system that we employ, that is, our mechanism for the allocation of resources in this country.

The capital projects invested in during the past eight-year term were plans the populace mandated when they elected the National Team Government in 1992 and re-elected them in 1996. The public was well aware of the government's intended programmes and by voting for them and re-electing them, they authorised these projects. That is how democracy works.

I am not prepared to insult the democratic process or the people of this country by suggesting that any of the projects built by the past government should not have been built.

The Second Elected Member from West Bay rose in this House and declared that the past government built without any measures in place to fund the recurrent expenditures, which, in his opinion, caused the problem. I pose the question: Is he prepared to suggest that this country should not have received the renovation on the hospital? Is he or any other Member prepared to suggest we did not need any of the projects or programmes built or established by the past government? Is this Government prepared to stop?

We are the new Legislators of this country and if we recognise that there was no revenue source to pay the recurrent expenditure for the capital projects built during the past government, then why have we not addressed this issue in the 2001 Budget? The revenue enhancement measures included in this Budget are said to fund the capital programmes of this Budget. It is for reasons like these that I have named and deemed this Budget the "impotent Budget".

Although I would have liked to have seen the building up of general reserves over the past eight years, I understand the reason that it did not occur. As I am not in a position to offer any projects or programmes that I think should have been eliminated, I will make a suggestion to this current political directorate that will reflect my views on what should have taken place at a later time in this contribution.

As to the question of the inherited deficit from the past government, in my opinion, the information from both sides on this subject is inaccurate.

The former government left a deficit of $10.7 million. Much creative accounting has transpired from both past and current government which, in my opinion, is misleading.

The past government stated there was no deficit. I accept that when new Government took office in November 2000 they would have attempted to pay off the accounts payables to reduce the burden placed on their 2001 fiscal year. It is for this reason more than any other that I suggest a July to June fiscal year.

The past government argued that the positive balances remaining in the Capital Development Fund and the Environmental Protection Fund should be used to offset against the deficit, which is reasonable. This would bring the inherited deficit from the last government to this Government to $5.79 million. I do not agree, however, that the General Reserve Fund should be offset against the deficit because the past government had one in place.

I will put it in layman's terms. An individual has a chequing account and savings accounts. The chequing account at the end of the year is overdrawn by $10.7 million, but the savings accounts have $3.75 million in one and $1.26 million in the other. It is my determination that the present Government inherited $5.79 million from the deficit of the past government.

The new Government, in my opinion, has exaggerated the deficit sometimes as large as $30 million. They added the retroactive pay for 2000 and the contracted sums that were unpaid. For reasons I did not understand, they also added the reduction in the overdraft facility. These were all attributable to the past government.

These arguments have no merit, in my opinion, for the payment of the retroactive pay for 2000 is offset by the policy decision of the current Government not to pay the cost-of-living adjustment for 2001 in the fiscal year 2001. The inclusion of the accounts payables from 2000 into what they consider the inherited deficit would have to be offset by references or inclusion to the accounts receivables. Yes, government inherited accounts payables—monies owing to individuals but, of course, they inherited amounts owed to the government.

It is my opinion, that this is, once more, some fancy, single-entry accounting, convenient mixing of accrual accounting and some cash-based accounting system to deliberately try to mislead the public.

The current Government is using health insurance funds of $4.3 million as part of their revenue measures they are contributing to the coffers in the 2001. This would have to include funds collected prior to January of 2001 to be this size. Thus, they are using funds collected and accrued by the last government to apply to the 2001 fiscal year.

We must take the job we were elected to do seriously. This representative for the sixth-electoral district is not prepared to stand before this House or country and agree that this 2001 Budget is fair. It is a budget that has started off on the wrong foot and the wrong assumption of the inherited deficit position.

I will also touch on the revenue-enhancement package.

Quite clearly, the full impact of the proposed new tax package is $27.4 million the people of the Cayman Islands will have to pay for infinity. This is an accurate position advanced by the past government and refuted by the current political directorate. It is asserted that the revenue package also has a retroactive component to it. The Government of the day has contested this, but the truth is, it does.

The Financial Secretary, on page 13 of his address, outlined that the amount included in the 2001 Budget included 12 months' collection on health insurance and room tax. It would mean that 22 percent of the entire tax package would be retroactive. This position was correct, in my opinion; it was adopted by the past government and refused by the current political directorate.

In a time of economic slow down, the "impotent budget" has not attempted to curtail that delay. No creative ways of funding government projects or raising taxes has been employed.

The traditional method of backing demanded capital works by means of medium-term borrowing, and placing extreme upward pressure on the recurrent and statutory expenditures, is once again being utilised. Taxes levied on the common man and items that have inflationary effects will render the government's own spending powerless and increase the cost of living for each year. That provides the need for more taxes and the cycle continues.

The time has come that new innovative methods of managing our resources are examined and pursued.

I agree with my good friend, the Second Elected Member from Bodden Town, that we need to have an outside consultant to determine the most appropriate way for the country to meet the ever-increasing public expectations and infrastructural development with our limited resource base.

I feel that we need to determine the cost for all of our infrastructural development needs and pursue one large, capital expansion programme funded through the issuance of bonds or other equity instruments. The maturity dates of these instruments will be set at periods that are matched with the benefit stream from the project or programme.

A group of local men with this country's interest at heart solicited the insight of Merrill Lynch, one of the world's most prominent financial services providers, to review the needs of this country. I was privileged to read this report in its entirety, and I have a summary report with me here today.

This report assumes Cayman Island's capital development need of approximately C$200 million to complete our schools, roads, water, sewage, hospitals and ports. The author suggests the use of what is termed Medium Term Notes (MTN) that range in majority from 9 months to 30 years. This report is somewhat dated, but the principles are very current. If the government is interested in pursuing this further, I would be happy to co-ordinate an update to this report.

It is my position that once the infrastructural development has been completed, the government undertakes to divest itself of many of its services, such as the Water Authority, the sewage services and all other services that can be viably carried out by the private sector. This is after we have created it, made it viable and crossed the threshold normally met by investors entering into new markets. We have developed it and now we can gain from the sale of these assets.

The funds generated from the sale of government assets should be used, in my view, to retire the equity instruments of choice:

- a well capitalised Cayman Airways Limited;
- a purpose-built government building that eliminates the need to pay $5 million in rent per year;
- water to all of our citizens;
- sewage systems throughout this country;
- a first-class health service provider to all citizens;
- an airport facility that reflects the quality image that we aim to portray;
- well-paved road system designed from a master plan that will reduce traffic congestion;
- and, most importantly, a school system designed to cope with current and future demands.

These must be part of the goal for each and every one of us who have been elected to chaperone the future of this country.

It is human nature to be nervous of large undertakings such as the one proposed here today. However, this is, in my opinion, the most feasible solution. It is a programme that will require extensive research and review, but it is worth reviewing.

If a programme of this nature is not undertaken, we can expect a continual degradation of our country's infrastructure and financial position. It is time we move away from the conventional wisdom as to how this country's finances and infrastructural needs are met and use more innovative and modern financial techniques.

I suggest that we employ the services of agencies such as Merrill Lynch, or other agencies that are in the business of raising funds and funding governmental projects and programmes.

It is tempting for me to provide such a proposal without some alternatives. It is tempting for me to simply critique without giving alternatives. This is only strengthened as I read an excerpt of the Hansard from 11 October 1999, when our Leader of Government Business contributed to Private Member's Motion 24/99: "When we Members of the Back Bench bring constructive criticism, or informed criticism on the government, his most famous words are [and he is referring to the past Leader of Government Business], 'as usual the Opposition is providing no alternatives so it is fruitless for them to point out any errors in our operation.' Now, there are several ways one can look at that. But I would like to put forward the view that if the Back Bench were the provider of the solutions, we would be the government!"

The Honourable Roy Bodden echoed, "True enough!"

However, in my opening to this contribution and my role as Opposition, I undertook to be constructive. In light of that, I would like to suggest to Government, some revenue measures and some expenditure constraint methods. Those measures and methods could be employed to fund the infrastructural programme I outlined here in my contribution. These would include, but by no means limited to, the introduction of a national lottery. This is something in which the general public, for years, have cried for, but have not been willing to stand up for. It is recognised that it has the potential to contribute positively to the development of this country, given our limited revenue measures.

The Christian community, I am sure, would meet this with great resistance. However, I must remind this country that during the contribution in this Honourable House we had suggestions on broadening our tax base. Members have stood in this Honourable House to indirectly call for income tax. A particular Member called for income tax to be attached to income so that the man who is earning greater would pay greater.

With such fear upon us we must look at more creative alternatives; more innovative ways of broadening our tax base so that this country does not have to go to the undesirable alternative of indirect tax. This Member of the House will seek to exhaust all possible means of funding the country's demands before going to any form of direct income based taxes.

The second is the provision of parking meters in George Town. I borrowed this from the Second Elected Member from Bodden Town, the district where I live. A government multi-level paid parking lot is third; fourth provision is, toll fees from west and east districts. It is amazing how these usage fees, where the contribution is simply proportionate to your usage of the product—the more you use the roads from east and west to town, the more you pay. It would only be a small token at a time therefore, the public would not notice, and it would also be amazing how much revenue this would generate.

I also suggest a staggered licensing rate, that is, a fee that would penalise the owner of multiple vehicles. A license would be the same rate, as it is now, for your first vehicle, but would be a greater rate for your second vehicle, and a greater rate for your third vehicle—such taxes that aim directly at policies.

We have recognised that we have a problem in Cayman with congestion. We should utilise the only policy tool that we have, the country's national budget, to shape our policies and to shape the behaviour of the people to reflect the desires and the direction we need as a country. We realise there is a need to reduce the amount of cars so let us use our tax or revenue system to generate funds, but also to instil policies. It is lack of such policy tax methods in the current budget that I deem it the impotent budget.

The sixth suggestion is a temporary reduction on duty for building materials. We are in an economic slow-down and as the Third Official Member highlighted in his Budget Address, the most notable area of slow-down has been in the construction field where the layman, the common man, the blue-collar worker earns. The portion of his salary earned, and spent in the economy, is greater than your white-collar worker. We need to stimulate the construction industry. We need to have policy in our national budget that is aimed at stimulating the economy.

If this was a project in isolation I would also be nervous in proposing it, but it is not. We have had an opportunity to conduct a controlled experiment. We have eliminated the importation on duty in Cayman Brac for the past two years, and during that period the revenue collected from import duty increased significantly. The reason for this was because the past government saw that the economy was in a slow period of stagnation, and a policy initiative was taken to stimulate the economy, by the elimination of import duty on specific building materials.

If the economic stimulation worked in Cayman Brac, to a point that the total duty collected from import duty increased significantly, why have we not learnt from our controlled example and made similar suggestions, and positions, in this country's 2001 Budget as we go through an economic slow-down? These are the reasons why I have deemed the Budget impotent because it stimulates nothing and renders the country powerless. It does not in any way address the economic problems we are faced with in this country.

The seventh revenue enhancement measure is trade and business license fees for lawyers, doctors and financial service providers who are reflective of the income potential of these businesses. It is time that we benefit from our economic development and start earning our revenue in a method which will capitalise and benefit from our current development trend. Our development trend is intellectual capital which can only be taxed through methods such as I have proposed here in number 7.

Mr. Speaker, once more for the fourth time during my contribution, I am forced, because of the lack of Members in this Honourable House, to bring to your attention that we do not have a quorum.

The Speaker: We shall suspend proceedings for 15 minutes.

PROCEEDINGS SUSPENDED AT 11.16 AM

PROCEEDINGS RESUMED AT 11.36 AM

The Speaker: Please be seated. Proceedings are resumed. Debate continuing on the Appropriation Bill 2001.

The Second Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman, continuing.

Mr. Lyndon L. Martin: I was outlining at the time of the break, some possible revenue measures to fund the elaborate programme, I described as being a viable way of the Cayman Islands meeting its infrastructural programmes over the next medium to long-term.

I would also suggest an increase in work permit fees, for, as I said earlier, we import intellectual capital to fund our industry. Fees for permanent residency and Caymanian Status should be increased also.

The eleventh enhancement measure is an increase in medical fees to reflect the cost of health services. I would like to speak briefly on that.

Health services of the Cayman Islands represent 16 percent of the country's budget, totalling in expenditure $44.2 million. However, we only generate $8.5 million in revenue from health services and approximately 19.6 percent of the cost of administering health in the Cayman Islands is collected in fees. We immediately need to address this issue by restructuring our fees to reflect the true cost of administering the service. In addition, we need to improve on our collection system in the health service.

As the county is currently governed by mandatory health insurance, the layman does not feel this because it is borne by the insurance provider. We, as a country must increase the fees being charged by the hospital to ensure that we are collecting a greater portion, if not, the entire portion of administering health in the Cayman Islands.

The twelfth item listed is the Civil Service, which must be streamlined and the cost of it needs to be addressed. We are all aware of it but no one is addressing the issue.

We must also utilise information technology to reduce the need for U.S. Tourism offices. Tourism in the Cayman Islands generates a total of $18.25 million to the Cayman Islands' government directly in the form of tourism accommodation of $10.73 million; cruise ship departure tax of $7.4 million; hotel licences of $0.07 million; and tourist registration fee of $0.05 million; totalling $18.25 million; this is government's revenue from tourism and we are spending $19.87 million in promoting and administering the industry. We are spending $1.62 million more than we are directly earning from the tourism industry.

With the innovations that we have seen in information technology the need for overseas offices must be diminished. It is time that we utilise information technology to the fullest and seize some cost savings as a result of the IT.

I believe that greater sharing of the responsibility promoting the tourism industry with the recipients of the benefits from such promotion is needed. We cannot hope to simply sit as a government, and continually expend money promoting tourism while the benefits of the tourists, when they come here, goes into the hands of private individuals. It is time that the hoteliers, the condominiums, the service providers participate in the promotion effort. I was happy that the Minister for Tourism mentioned this during his contribution.

As an example, earlier in this sitting of the Legislative Assembly the Minister for Tourism outlined a new promotional effort for the slow period of tourism. In that campaign the government is giving reduction in fares through Cayman Airways seat sales; government is spending to promote. The hoteliers are only giving one free night if the guests stay five days or more. Of course, the hoteliers will stagger their accommodation to ensure that they are promoting 4-day visits. It is time that the whole responsibility of promoting tourism is addressed and the participants in the industry must share in promoting the industry.

One final note on the current programme, I also noted with interest that the hoteliers would be feeding the kids for free; that is to ensure that the adults who are paying do not buy their food products outside of the hotels they are staying in.

Mr. Speaker, in the earlier part of this contribution I suggested, and once more I am suggesting, the re-establishment of offshore oil transfer in Cayman Brac and Little Cayman. It is a positive way of generating revenue for this country and simultaneously meeting the goal of the government, by stimulating the economy of the sister islands, of Cayman Brac and Little Cayman. It is an initiative such as this that I would have wanted to see in the budget, and then I would have been supportive of the budget.

We also need to establish a certification authority and disaster recovery centre, which will generate positive income for the Cayman Islands and augment our total offering.

In reviewing the Budget for 2001, the most alarming fact is the revenue projection for the year 2001. The Budget estimates collection of $311.9 million. When preparing a budget the revenue forecast is the foundation everything else is built upon; it is to that limit in which you then attach your expenditure. We look at the revenue projection of $311 million, and then the government will look at its borrowing limit that will not force the debt service ratio beyond 10 percent. That borrowing limit along with your expected revenue then gives you your ceiling of which you can spend.

The revenue forecast of a budget is extremely important and if the revenue forecast is flawed then the budget itself is flawed. We must remember that in the past year 2000, revenue came short by some $28 million compared to its expectation. The government did not spend more than their budget. It is simply because the revenue forecasted was not realised by $28 million, and that is what created the deficit of the past government.

In studying the lesson of one year ago the political directorate is making the same error in 2001 Budget. The revenue forecast is flawed. I would like to read some of the assumptions used in making the revenue forecast. Mr. Speaker, I read from page 3 of the Third Official Member's [Budget Address]. “Overall, global growth for 2001 is projected at 4.2 percent. This projection assumes that a prolonged US recession or financial crisis can be avoided and hence a global recession is unlikely. Other key assumptions include continued growth in the Euro region and a gradual rise in the yen against the US dollar over the medium term.”

Mr. Speaker, inevitably the assumption of your global growth rate, and the resulting effect of your global growth rate on your domestic economic growth, forms the foundation for your revenue projections for the year at hand. I spent an extensive period of time in my contribution outlining, detailing and concluding to the fact that the growth of the global economy is not going to be 4.2 percent. It is unreasonable for us to use 4.2 percent as our foundation to project domestic growth and consequently local revenue.

I suggested a global growth rate of 1.5 percent to 2 percent and I detailed my reasons for that assumption. However, the Financial Secretary, the Third Official Member, utilised a domestic growth rate of 3 percent compared to a robust period in the year 2000 that saw 4.6 percent.

Mr. Speaker, the Financial Secretary outlined that the government utilises a method called profile forecasting. On 11 December 2000, as I read from the Hansard of Finance Committee, he suggested that in determining the rate of growth for 2001, he would utilise 1998, 1999 and the year 2000. At that time I suggested that profile budgeting was not the most appropriate way to forecast revenue. It proved wrong when it was used to forecast revenue for the year 2000.

Even if profile budgeting was employed, 1998 general recurrent revenue was $253.044 million. In 1999, the revenue was $286.18 million, which was an increase of $33.136 million, a 13.09 percent increase. However, in the year 2000 the recurrent revenue fell to $272.6 million, a decline of $13.58 million—4.7 percent decline. In profiling budgeting this would average an increase of 4.17 percent compared to revenue projection that the government has used for basis of their budget, which assumes 7.12 percent increase.

Mr. Speaker, If we minus the revenue enhancement package of $19.88 million from the 2001 recurrent revenue of $311.9, that would generate $292.08 million which the government would be expecting from their traditional revenue sources without the enhancement measures. That is $19.42 million above what they expected in the year 2000, a 7.12 percent increase. In making this projection, did the government forget that in the period of 2000 in revenue decline, the country was growing at what they deemed as 4.6 percent. In the period that they are assuming their projection is based on, a 7.12 percent increase, they have stated that the economy would be at a slower pace.

Mr. Speaker, irrespective that my projections of local domestic and global economic growth is significantly lower than that provided by the government, even if they utilised their own projections, the revenue projection for the country is flawed. Using profile budgeting revenue would be overestimated by $8.05 million. However, from December 2000, I argued that profile budgeting technique is not feasible during a period of irregular economic activity, such as we are experiencing in a slow down.

We saw that revenue declined in the year 2000. Why should we? What is premise under which the Government of the day has increased their revenue projection? Mr. Speaker, we saw a decline in 2000 of 4.75 percent. It is my position that we can expect a similar reduction in revenue, and it is a realistic assumption to expect, that revenue will decline by a similar percentage because we have not seen any real reason to believe that the economy has turned around. I am certainly convinced that the year 2001 Budget does not include any components in it that will stimulate economic growth. It includes a package that is taxing the people and will ultimately drive the economy deeper and deeper.

If we use my assumption of a 4.7 percent decline this would mean that the revenue of this country is overestimated by $33.05 million. Is this an unrealistic assumption? “No”, because in addition to assumptions we have some empirical evidence. Members who are in this House, sat and were briefed by the Government and its technician who told us that the first two months of the year which represents a significant portion of total government’s revenue collected was down compared to the year 2000. It was below the expected revenue for 2000! Did the Members of the current political directorate believe that in delaying the budget by two weeks, we would forget being told to expect lower revenue? They came with an increased revenue projection later, which was used to base their entire budget.

I always get nervous when I see a budget that is exactly balanced, to zero, where I am expecting to spend every cent that I collect. It makes me suspicious! The world is not so ideal. It does not happen that every cent I collect will equally match what I spent.

I respectfully make the submission that the Government of the day has used an unrealistic assumption of revenue; therefore, there is no real reason to expect that this will be realised. When I see technicians who could bring a revenue expectation, which could be delivered by the Third Official Member, and Members rise in this House and say it is a reasonable budget; it is a show of good faith; It is a good faith attempt to the budget.

Let us give the Government a chance—I would like to be able to do so, but the people of Cayman Brac and Little Cayman did not elect me in here to be a ‘yes’ man to the Government. They elected me to review, critique, and put my position forward. I, like all the Members in this House is quite aware that there is no reasonable reason to assume that the revenue of this country will be $311.9 million.

It is irresponsible of the Members of this House, in my opinion, to get up without revealing what they truly know and believe. We are a House characterised by professionals and in the know. We are the new guard, a group of the greater intelligence, but yet, we are sitting here saying we know, and have seen empirical evidence that the revenue this country has generated for the first two months of the year, representing the most significant revenue collection period, did not come to the level of the past year. However, we are going to project and say that it is a good attempt by the government; it is a good budget; it is realistic and achievable.

I would be happy if the country truly realises revenue of $311.9 million. I am not saying that it is not possible; I am saying that, as legislators, it is not viable for us to sit here when we do not have any premises and any reasons to expect that this will be a true collection. We must remember that this projection is used to determine the level of government expenditure. We do not want ourselves in the position of the last government, of the last fiscal year, where they spent, not their entire budget, but revenue was not realised of $28 million and the country was left with a deficit.

It is for that reason and many others as highlighted that I cannot support this Budget as it is.

I apologise for any over zeal I have had in this matter, but it is something that touches true to my heart and gives me great concern that we are in here saying ‘yes, it is a good Budget’ when we know different. I am even tempted to suggest, that some of the Members of this House who wear professional certifications behind their names, surrender their certifications in the interest of preserving their reputation of their profession.

POINT OF ORDER

Mr. Alden M. McLaughlin, Jr: Mr. Speaker, on a point of order.

The Speaker: Let me hear your point of order.

Mr. Alden M. McLaughlin, Jr: The Member is imputing a lack of professionalism on the part of Members of this House who hold professional qualifications.

The Speaker: I would ask that you withdraw that statement. I think that is rather broad.

Mr. Lyndon L. Martin: No problem, Mr. Speaker, I respectfully withdraw that statement.

I would like to turn to the public debt of the country. The new debt figure after the borrowing would be $149.5 million. This represents 59.55 percent increase in borrowing in one year compared to the annual growth rate of 20.9 percent debt that was outlined by the Third Official Member; it is a significant increase in borrowing. However, I would be the last person to suggest that the country should not borrow because the country has not found itself in a financial position to meet the needs so, we must borrow.

I would like to remind this House that in Finance Committee on 11 December 2000, this Member suggested to the Government that they do exactly what they did, borrow to fund their deficit. I suggested on page 148 of the Hansards on 11 December 2000 in Finance Committee, “ . . . retroactive pay to the civil service of $6.5 million; a reduction in the overdraft facility from $15 million to $8 million - a reduction of $7 million; and projects that are ongoing and projects that could be commencing in the first quarter, totalling $13 million.” This together totals $25.7 million.

I went on to say, “I am suggesting that we utilise the flexibility that is afforded to us in having extra room that would be acceptable as fiscal responsibility, to borrow, to fund a portion of this deficit . . .” I am not in any way saying that the Government should not have borrowed; I suggested it from 11 December 2000. I am simply disappointed that Government chose to utilise overdraft financing without advising this House and the country of the cost of such financing. Of course, the suggestion came from a Member of Cayman Brac and Little Cayman who is on the Opposition side; therefore, this was unacceptable to them. If the country had borrowed from the point I suggested, we would not have expended the excess interest charges associated with overdraft financing.

In my introduction to this contribution I stated that we had a good group of people who could meet the challenges of this country. It is imperative that we draw on all of the resources in this Honourable House, and ensure that, being an Opposition Member does not mean your verbal opinion does not have merit—you must review it and look at it! I humbly suggest if that was done this country would have saved a great amount of money.

When the country borrowed in year 2000 the debt was approximately $93 million. The debt service ratio was 7.6 percent. With no restructuring, no changing in debt composition and borrowing an extra $55 million, I am suggesting that would have put the government over its debt service ratio of 10 percent. However, the Government chose to restructure its debt but in the interest of openness and transparency, I am asking of the Government, to let me know what cost is associated with restructuring this debt. Are we stretching the loans government is committed to over a greater period of time and, what interest penalties are associated with that?

For this Budget to be completed and for this House to be able to review it objectively, such information should be presented at the time of the budget address. This is not a new request for me because in Finance Committee, December 2000, I said that we should have been presented with an expected cost of maintaining such an overdraft because overdraft facilities can be very expensive. That is a vital tool to access the feasibility of funding this gap through the overdraft facility. The same way I wanted the cost for the overdraft when they brought it, they should have expected that I would have wanted to know the cost of the restructuring and the country's new debt service ratio.

I noted with interest that the Financial Secretary in his deliberations referred to the current debt service ratio; he suggested that he would return to the subject and outline the new debt ratio but he never did in his deliberations. That is on page 8 of the Budget Address. He said, “. . . and this point I will return to later in this speech” but he never did.

Mr. Speaker, it is imperative when reviewing the country's budget and the borrowing of $55 million, driving the total debt of this country to $149.5 million, borrowing $57 million—$1,422 per citizen of this country—that we should be given the cost associated and the result to our total debt service ratio in this country. As legislators, that is reasonable for us to expect and this legislator is not prepared to accept the budget without such information.

I noticed with interest that one of the policy decisions under this Government, on page 11 of the Budget Address says, “Removing all restrictions on virements within a Recurrent Expenditure head”. A virement is defined in the Financial and Stores Regulation, 1986, Section 2.3 as discretionary powers delegated to the Financial Secretary, to exercise some degree of flexibility, by allowing the allocation of funds between subheads within the same head.

Mr. Speaker, this is putting discretionary powers into the Political Ministries. This is allowing the Ministries to be able to move their money around under their head without the Financial Secretary or the Finance Committee, or anyone else knowing; that is my understanding of removing all restrictions of virements. If this is the case I am very much concerned, and I am even more suspicious when I see that under each Ministry, most of the Ministries have increased in expenditure for 2001 significantly:

- The [Portfolio of Finance and Economic Development], an increase of 8.6 percent going from $23.7 million to $25.8 million.
- The Ministry of Community [Affairs], an increase of 28 percent, going from $6.8 million to $8.7 million.
- The Ministry of Tourism, an increase of 29 percent, going from $3.4 million to $4.85 million.
- The Ministry of Health, an increase of 19.37 percent, going from $1.19 million to $2.92 million.
- The Ministry of Planning, going from $1.37 million to $5.95 million, an increase of 332 percent.

Mr. Speaker, with these Ministries having more money available to them, can now move money under their heads without the restriction of virements. This does not go with good governance and financial prudence! With such flexibility there would be no need for contingency warrants. I certainly understand their position on that.

I have spent some time looking at this Budget and careful time reviewing my obligation as a representative of the people of this country. I have looked quite clearly at the government tax package of taxing the people of $27.4 million for infinity. I have seen that this tax has placed heavy burden on the common man because of the $19.88 million for the year 2001, only $1.8 million comes from the financial services.

In looking at all of these factors I have to make it quite clear, that for me to fulfil my responsibility, as a legislator and a representative of the people, I cannot support this country's budget.

On a point of interest I see the contribution from the Monetary Authority is stated at $4.473 million - up from $1.226 million, an increase of 254 percent. In a time in which the Monetary Authority is said to be increasing staff, the cost of administering the financial industry is increasing, but the contribution from CIMA has increased by 254 percent. I humbly hope, that the thoughts I have provided here today, in an attempt to constructively critique the Budget will end up in a budget in which the country is better off; that it would have stimulated thoughts, provoked thoughts that could result in some positive change in the way we plan and budget for this country.

I am not here to simply throw out criticism. I provided my critique by proposed alternatives. I also provided the country with, what I deem, as a realistic approach to meeting this country's infrastructural needs, with provision for creative and innovative ways of raising money.

I hope that government will take on the thoughts I have conveyed, in the mode in which I attempted to convey it. It is simply to constructively look at the country we are here to represent and not to get into the trap that is so easily attracted to. It is so easy to say "because revenue forecast is this we can spend X."

We must look at this as a group of legislators together with a responsibility and ensure that the country gets the maximum value for the money it is paying for its representatives in this House.

As I draw to the close of my contribution, I would like to make it quite clear, that the intention of this contribution was in no means to embarrass anyone or to reveal anything that was intended to be hidden. It was simply to ensure that the public had a good understanding of the budget that is expected to be approved in this country. I do hope that when this Budget goes to Finance Committee we can sit down as legislators and examine, and possibly make some changes.

Many Members have contributed prior to me, to this Budget Address and we are drawing close to the end of these contributions, going into Finance Committee. I hope Ministers of Government will choose to respond to some of the things I have said and will take on board some of the things I suggested.

Mr. Speaker, if I do not hear from the Ministers or from anyone, I will have to assume that they are in agreement with all that I have put forward. I would like to thank everyone for his or her attention.

Thank you.

The Speaker: The Floor is open to debate. Does any one Member wish to speak?

The Fourth Elected Member for West Bay.

Mr. Cline A. Glidden, Jr.: Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

I rise with gratitude and humility to the people of West Bay for entrusting me with this big responsibility and the challenges facing this country for the next four years.

There are no words to adequately describe the feeling of standing in the Chamber as a representative of the community where you have lived for many years. To say it is an honour or privilege, as others have said before, is simply an understatement.

Reflecting on the path that lead me to this place, listening to others of this 2001 class, and after reading many maiden speeches of those previously elected, I am struck by what a wonderful system of democracy we have in this country. It is something of which all Caymanians can be justifiably proud because unlike most nations around the world, wealth, class and privilege really play no part in determining an election to this place.

Congratulations are in order for His Excellency the Governor and the Honourable Financial Secretary, for the presentations they made of the Throne Speech and Budget Address to this Honourable House. I would also like to congratulate the Leader of Government Business, the Honourable Kurt D. Tibbetts; and the Deputy Leader, the Honourable W. McKeever Bush, and their other colleagues on Executive Council for the bold and far reaching steps taken by them in an effort to turn this country around financially, and to reverse the unwise and irresponsible financial trend which was established by the past Government.

My belief is, that not ever in the history of these Islands were our leaders called upon to carry out such a difficult task; the task of presenting a balanced budget and of giving some glimmer of hope to the people of this country, not even when we were trying to form the Government. In my opinion, the present time of difficulty calls for bold leadership and with the guidance of the Almighty God and the support of the people of this country in the last general election held in November 2000, I feel that this country now has the leadership it deserves and needs.

As a generation we have enjoyed a reputation of financial stability brought about by hard work, planning and sacrifice. Over the last four years hard work, planning and sacrifice had been replaced by squandering the government's resources, increased taxation and debt accumulation. The bottom had to drop out; the cup had to overflow. When we look at the Budget Address presented by the Third Official Member we see that the last government was on a wild, irresponsible vote-getting spending spree for the last four years.

When we look at the area entitled fiscal performance for 1991-2000 in the summary, I think the true story is told. We have a lot of stories and solutions being told by the government and I will refer to them as the 'government in exile', the same one who was banished by the people, from this place, on November 8, 2000.

I think the Third Official Member explained the situation quite well and we have to remember that this is the same Third Official Member who was there during the time of their governance therefore, he should know.

As we all know and we have heard quite recently, numbers can be used to play all sorts of games. I think it is very clear when he states that during the period 1996 - 2000, the recurrent revenue increased by 9.4 percent, but during the same period 1996 - 2000, recurrent expenditure increased by 13.4 percent. We heard mentioned of professional degrees and we have known of people having a lot of letters after their names, but it does not take any rocket scientist, CPA, economist, or anybody else to understand that if the country is spending 4 percent more per year than what you are receiving, then it is impossible four years later to have a surplus or built up reserves. Where is the surplus or reserve coming from, which the last Government spoke about?

The Third Official Member has said we are spending more than we are receiving. There is no way that we can have a surplus. When I hear comments being made and see those Ex-Ministers on television, smiling and telling people that they left a surplus, knowing the state which they left the country in, my opinion is, it is pure 'tom-foolery'. Thankfully the people have said that they have had enough 'tom-foolery'—

The Speaker: I must stop you a minute. I do not think that is really a parliamentary word. I would ask you to withdraw that - 'tom-foolery' or whatever you said.

Mr. Cline A. Glidden, Jr.: Okay, Mr. Speaker.

The point I am trying to make is, that it is impossible to say you have a surplus after spending more than you have received for four years. What you have is not a surplus but a real mess. I have heard comments made that there should be a statement by the Third Official Member to clarify if what the Leader of Government Business is saying is true, or if what the past government is saying is true. Rubbish! There is no time for that. The Third Official Member needs to spend his time along with the rest of us looking for solutions to our current problem. We need to do what the people did to the past government on 8th November 2000—forget about them.

When we look at the present Budget I would have preferred to see a Budget presented which had no borrowings and no new revenue measures, but because of what has gone on in the past it was not possible. The government could have done what the previous government did for the past four years, in my opinion, budget or fudget the revenue to make it equal to what they needed for expenditure. At the end of the year they could have said that they did not overspend but the revenue under-performed. No, Mr. Speaker, I am happy to see that even though the picture is not a pretty one government has presented a true picture of our financial position.

It is like everything else in life, before you can fix the problem you have to know what the problem is. If you go to the doctor and he diagnoses a problem, then, hopefully he can treat and cure you, but if you never know what the problem is it will continually get worse. The people came out and identified, and gave the country the solution for the problem on 8th November 2000. Now with the presentation of the 2001 Budget it is time for us as a country to start the long slow process of recovery.

Mr. Speaker, I want to state that even though I understand the measures taken by the new Government and the reasons for taking those measures, I agree with my colleague who said, they should be warned that we do not expect this trend to continue. Due to the timing involved we accept that some of those decisions had to be taken but we look forward to a new type of Budget in the upcoming 2002 Budget.

When we speak about new and innovative ideas we have to be careful with those because I would like to warn the Government again. A little while ago the Second Elected Member made some reference saying that if nothing was heard from the Government concerning his proposed revenue package and solutions that he would assume they agreed. I want to put them on warning, as well, that I cannot agree with the solutions and the proposals he has set forward; it is not worth me going through everyone, but one that sticks out in my mind is a proposal made regarding road tax. It really saddens me as I look around this House and see that we have some bright new young minds that can come up with some innovative and proposed solutions and we are right back down to flogging the same old dead horse that we have been doing in the past. It really disappointed me when I heard of one of those solutions being a road tax. Yet, we talk about taxing the poor man and woman; that is a very common phrase used in here and I am starting to believe that it is strictly for political purposes. There is really no genuine concern for the poor people in this country.

Mr. Speaker, when I look at something as irresponsible as a road tax I had cause to work out a little scenario. If we look at road tax, a man or woman who makes $1,000 a month will end up paying the same tax dollars as a person who makes $5,000 or $10,000 per month, and we refer by saying that we are looking out for the poor man. I really have difficulty in accepting that. Why is it that we want to tax the poor man in the same way? The man is making $1,000 and we want to tax him in the same way that we tax the person who is making $5,000 or $10,000. We all have to use the road the same amount of time to get to and from work; the poor man will probably have to use it more because he is probably working longer and harder hours. In the supermarkets we are doing the very same thing because regardless of what the salaries are, when the prices go up the poor has to pay the same prices.

Just in case the Member did not realise what he was actually referring to, I will give a little example to show why I have a problem with that proposed method of taxation as one of those innovative solutions. Let us assume that the average person pays $100 per month for road tax. We look at that as a percentage paid from a salary. Now for the person who is making $1,000 a month that $100 would equate to 10 percent of his income. But the person who is making $5,000 per month it would only equate to 2 percent and the person who is making to $10,000 per month it would only equate to 1 percent. So, like I said in the beginning we will be right back to flogging that same old dead horse—the lower income earners of this country, which causes the social problems we spoke about earlier.

Mr. Speaker, I really hope that in future contributions the Members take a bit more responsibility when they start talking about potential solutions. It is not good enough just to get up here and criticise and to say that we can do this and that. We should not be doing A and B, but we can do C and D, which would end up having a worse effect. No, our responsibility as leaders and legislators of this country goes beyond that. We have a responsibility to look for real solutions.

Now, it is my estimation that it will take ten years of stringent budgeting before this country reaches the levels of prosperity which it enjoyed five or ten years ago. There will be no quick fix or no easy solutions. We can look at those easy solutions proposed and when we look in depth at those solutions they are not really solutions, we are creating more problems.

We cannot look for any dramatic turnaround. I have the confidence that the new Government along with the Members of this Honourable Legislative Assembly and the support of the Caymanian people will get the job done. This country now has men and women in control who are prepared to take the bold and unpopular decisions. Those decisions have to be taken out of concern for the survival of this country and its people rather than continue to make decisions, which are only politically popular like some of the decisions that were taken in the past.

I am particularly proud of the fact that this Honourable Legislative Assembly, which I am a part of, is truly representative. While some Members of the last government or the 'Government in exile' like to play class warfare and perpetrate long outdated myths about some of the Members of the new Legislative Assembly, the fact is that we are proudly diverse and a large working class bunch. We are made up, not solely of doctors, or lawyers, or academics, or engineers or accountants but we are teachers, seamen, small business operators, mothers and fathers. In our great political system there is no set or predetermined path to come in here, and that is a very unique and a very Caymanian thing. It is an honest reflection of our equalitarian society.

Despite what some social commentators have said in recent times about Cayman, I believe, that we remain the most racially tolerant accepting and, thankfully, classless society in the world. We each come to this place on the trust of our constituents. I would not pass up the opportunity to thank the people of West Bay for their support and encouragement especially over the past few months. I have spent most of my life working with the younger people of West Bay through my involvement with sports and community organisations. However, during the campaign I was also fortunate to have quite a bit of dealings with some of our lovely senior citizens and that was a joy. I will not call names because I might get into trouble, but it was really a wonderful experience. Sometimes our meetings were on church nights and around 9.00 p.m. you would see the church bus stop and there they would come. Other nights they would get up on our platform and pray or sing and endorse our team. Their support, motherly and fatherly love, which has played such an important role in the success of our country, was invaluable to us during the last year.

I could spend all day talking about the people of West Bay and what a tremendous electorate it is to represent. It is simply a beautiful part of Cayman and I will work long and hard to ensure that I listen to the people of West Bay and take action to fully represent their views, making our local area an even better place to live. Of course, to do that I will continue to draw strength from the support received from local residents, committee Members and my much loved family and friends. This support network is any parliamentarian's lifeline—they keep us sane, focused and advised and they are just invaluable.

Changes do not come about easy. People always seem to resist change. It is normal for people to get familiar and comfortable with something in their lives and to continue on with it. Even if change is not always good, it is usually less trouble than changing it. This is true in a lot of every day examples, because the average person only has a few jobs and they tend to keep their cars and partners. Change does not come about easy. When I look around this Legislative Assembly and see a totally new Government and seven newly elected Members or, as one of my colleagues refer to, rookies, I have to commend and congratulate the great people of this country. I quote from Mr. Alan Cohen who said, “It takes a lot of courage to release the familiar and seemingly insecure to embrace the new. But there is no real security in what is no longer meaningful. There is more security in the adventurous and exciting, for in movement there is life, and in change there is power”.

The people of Cayman made a sweeping change on 8th November 2000. They were not happy or content with how they were being represented. We, at least, the majority of us here campaigned on the premise that if we were elected we would change the way things were done in relation to the way that the country was being run. Not change for change sake, but change because if you always do what you have always done, then you will always get what you have always gotten.

The state of the social and financial affairs of the country shows us why change is so important. “Change does not necessarily assure progress, but progress implacably requires change. Education is essential to change, for education creates both new wants and the ability to satisfy them.” That is a quote from Mr. Henry Steel Commager.

During our campaign we asked the people how they felt about the past government; if they were happy with their performance. We also asked if they were happy with the way the financial affairs of the country were being handled. The people answered, “no” then, and they answered loud and clear again on election day. We told them at that time, if the answer is “no” Executive Council must go.

Now that the previous Executive Council has gone, and the majority of them have been banished from this Legislative Assembly for poor stewardship, I cannot believe that they have the nerve to take out full page ads and go on television to try and fool the people with their supposedly expertise and experience. They had their time for the past eight years and if the people of these great islands did not believe them or want to hear from them anymore then I am pretty sure they do not want to hear from them now. It is time for them to accept defeat and to get on with their lives and stop using scare tactics; they could hurt the country. Leave the running of the country to those whom the people have entrusted it.

I would like to touch on this, my maiden Throne Speech and Budget Address’ debate on the role of this House. I would also like to say a little bit of about the state of the nation and its relationship to the low regard for the political process in 2000 and about some of the core issues we must address.

One mistake made by previous governments is, they never learn that all wisdom does not reside in Executive Council and does not reside in bureaucracy. I honestly think that we grossly under-utilised the skills of the elected Members in this place and because I am a realist, I also understand about the difficulty of achieving this. I understand a bit of the politics but, as I have said, I think, there is a real capacity in Parliament to play a greater part, particularly in the Legislative Assembly. However, there is usually a general reluctance of Government to see that happen. So, I would like to say to the Members of the Executive Council, in particular, that it is in their hands during this Parliament whether Parliament is used or abused. If the Honourable Members of the Government believe that other Members of this House have a role; if the fine things which are said about them mean anything, then they are required to ensure that they do not abuse their power in this Honourable Assembly, whether it is by the abuse of question time or the truncation of debate on important issues.

As we all know, Mr. Speaker, the previous government decided to shut down the Legislative Assembly in 2000 to achieve truncation of debate on important matters of this House. Important matters like the finances of this country. That was wrong and the people have punished them and banished them for this wrongdoing. Now, the tables have turned and those same Members to whom the injustices were done are now in a position of majority, which in this House gives the power.

There is a time of proof now for them to show that they are different and that things have changed. My short time here has shown me the new Government is committed to change. There is no limit to question time and the Ministers have gone out of their way to answer questions. Mr. Speaker, you have excused them because of the relevance of the questions asked. Very few questions were deferred, and even so, when they were, it was only for a day or so. At this very early stage I think all the Private Member's Motions and Supplementaries have been answered and I have been told that this in itself is historic.

We are off to a good start and together we can achieve our common goal and, that is, to ensure the Cayman Islands is better for present and future generations than it was when we came here.

Mr. Speaker, I would like to touch a little bit on the state of our nation.

The Speaker: Are you going on to a new subject at this particular time?

Mr. Cline A. Glidden, Jr.: Now would be a convenient time for a break, Sir.

The Speaker: We shall suspend proceedings until 2.15 p.m.

PROCEEDINGS SUSPENDED AT 12.40 PM

PROCEEDINGS RESUMED AT 2.25 PM

The Speaker: Proceedings are resumed. Debate continuing on the Throne Speech and the Budget Address.

The Fourth Elected Member for West Bay, continuing.

Mr. Cline A. Glidden, Jr.: Mr. Speaker, I will now touch on the state of our nation.

We wonder why people hold parliament in contempt. It seems to me like the reason lies not only with the truncation of the debate because they find much of our debate odious and pointless, but more in the irrelevance of our debate to their concerns. I am of the view that this country has major problems; that our debt position is not sustainable; that the declines in our living standards are inevitable and that we face a potential crisis. Everyone, both rich and poor, benefits when a government respects the rights of all and provides for the needy. Crime and drug abuse breeds in areas of poverty and unemployment where people may feel that they have nothing to lose. Likewise, apathy and violence breeds where people perceive injustice and feel excluded from the benefits of society, to the extent that every individual feels empowered as a valuable productive member of society then society becomes healthier and more secure for everyone.

I believe in a fair society and in a socially cohesive society. I believe it is the responsibility of every citizen either collectively or individually to contribute to achieving that goal. Regrettably, at present Cayman can claim to be neither, instead we have a society that is racked by insecurity, divisiveness and inequity. The challenge we face as politicians and as a community is to find solutions to these problems that are at the heart of that insecurity, divisiveness and inequity, the greatest of which is the spectre of uncertainty.

We have enormous opportunity. It is very exciting; it is very exhilarating and it is quite historic to feel that you can be part of shaping events that will take the country into this, the new millennium.

We have our problems and when we look at recent headlines we see that unemployment no longer confronts only those currently unemployed but also those who are currently employed here in Cayman. We look at what recently happened with one of our larger employers in Cayman, that being Cable and Wireless. We see that the significant shifts in employment trends globally over the last decade or so, which has seen the rise of contract, casual and part-time employment. The rising numbers of self-employed and unemployed have contributed significantly to the fear and anxiety that grips much of today's work force.

It is my opinion, that if we are to build a socially cohesive society in this country then we have to tackle head on the pre-occupation with economic indicators. We have to challenge the sanctity of the market and we have to put the interest of people ahead of theoretical economic purity. This will require us to focus on monetary and fiscal policies, achieving broader social objectives such as equal, quality employment, greater equity and disposable incomes. Comprehensive health, education services and a way for the narrow economic objectives such as zero inflation, lower interest rates and a balanced budget will also need to be focused on. Do not get me wrong, Mr. Speaker, it is not that these objectives are not important, they are, but our economic agenda should be driven by the needs of our people, not by the sectional interest of the finance market.

Our economic solutions do not depend on selecting one set of objectives over the other, but in achieving harmony with both. Regrettably, however, in its current environment when major issues of social concern arise it is the views of the leading finance market and analysts that tend to dominate the public debate. We need to harness all of the creativity and resources of our society in seeking the right political solutions to our current national crises. We need to develop a national political agenda, the central feature of which is a comprehensive social, financial, sustainable development strategy; the essential building blocks to a diversified economy capable of sustaining high levels of employment and improving living standards across all sections of the community.

It is critically important that we identify where information technology can be utilised across our economy as a major tool of economic growth. More importantly, to ensure that it is effectively exploited. We know that this will require the deployment of significant resources directed at rapidly raising the level of computer literacy across all levels of our society.

I was pleased to hear His Excellency the Governor refer to Information Technology (IT) as one of the keys of our survival and an indeed success. We know there is a lot of work to be done in this area, because as you know, even in the existing standing orders of this Honourable House it restricts us from using our lap tops in this House. Hopefully, we can deal with that during the review of our standing orders that has been agreed upon.

Mr. Speaker, when I listened to the Throne Speech and the Budget Address, I was happy to hear that we will be establishing a drugs court as another means of rehabilitation for offenders with drug problems. It is obvious that the existing system is not working.

I know that we are facing a difficult time with our judicial system but I am looking forward to the debate in Finance Committee. When I look at the proposed Budget document I see that even though the Government has attempted to keep this year's expenditure close to the 2000 actuals, there are certain areas, like the Judiciary, that its proposed expenditure has increased by some 17.5 percent over the 2000 actuals. So, I will have some questions during Finance Committee to this area as well as other areas of expenditure.

I take my hat off to the government because I was very pleased to see that when I looked at page 7 of the document, I saw that the figures are actually quite close to the 2000 actuals. I was impressed to see at a time when there has been much talk of financial prudence and responsible spending, that the government was able to keep the figures down. I looked and saw that in all the Ministries the increases were really minor. I looked at the Portfolio of Legal Affairs and I saw some 31 percent increase but the other ones, for example, Ministry for Tourism and Transport was some 8.5 percent.

Now, I know that my colleague, the Second Elected Member from Cayman Brac and Little Cayman made mention as to the increases in percentages. He made reference to some enormous expenses relating to recurrent and statutory expenditure but when I looked at the document I was pleased to see that, as far as my percentages go, the highest percentage increase is for the Portfolio of Legal Affairs and that is 31 percent. I also saw, for example, the increase for the Ministry of Tourism, Environment and Transport was only some 8.5 percent. Now with all the shifting of responsibilities, new Ministries, and the departments that were transferred back and forth,

I think it is commendable that the government of the day was able to keep expenditure as near as they did to the 2000 actuals. Like I said, I think that we are on the right way forward.

Mr. Speaker, before I go into different sections of the Throne Speech that I wanted to touch on, I would like to clarify some earlier statements I made in some of the debates and news briefings we have seen. Now, the Second Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman made reference to the decline or shortfall in expected revenue for the year 2000. I think it is very important for us to realise where that shortfall came from because like I said earlier, if we want to solve a problem we need to first diagnose what the problem is. In going through the Budget in detail I looked at the figures and saw that we were off some $33 million from what was approved and what was actually collected. Of course, that gives me grave concern because there is a lot of talk of the economic slow-down and recession, and so on. I wanted to try to figure out for myself as to what really caused that slow-down and whether we should actually be expecting that in the 2001 revenue expected incomes.

Mr. Speaker, when I saw the decline I could have made the assumption, as the other Member may have, that the last government just pulled the figure out of the air for recurrent revenue. It seems like such a significant difference - $33 million over the year on a $300 million budget, that is, some 10 per cent of the budget, so it seems to be, and it is a very significant amount.

What I have done before and what, I feel, all responsible legislators should do, is to see these potential problems that are so apparent and try to get information especially since we have been charged with representing the people. We are here debating, speaking and people are listening. Instead of trying to add to the confusion I think that it is worthy for all us to try to be as informed as possible so that the information we give will help to shed some light on the situation.

Now, Mr. Speaker, when I looked at the 2000 actuals compared to the approved and I saw the $33 million shortfall, those warning bells went off in my head so I decided to go to the source of the information, that being the Financial Secretary. Since he was also the Financial Secretary during the last government, if anyone would have those answers it would be him. I was able to find out that with the $33 million it was not that the previous government just miscalculated or overestimated the recurrent revenue. There were some significant happenings during the 2000 Budget year that caused that $33 million shortfall. One of those was right off the bat—the last government took and made a duty concession on our bakery products. Even though that duty concession took $12 million off the custom duties received, which is a major part of our revenue for the island, there was no compensation made in the recurrent revenue figures. Even though we projected that we were going to get that $305 million, right away we took actions by eliminating duty on certain products that took $12 million out of that revenue right off. So, that is $12 million out of the $33 million.

Another major contribution to the budget comes from Cable and Wireless, but because of Y2K preparedness there was a $5 million shortfall in that contribution. If we add that to the $12 million from duties that were lost, we are at $17 million.

I was also very surprised to find that when the previous government looked at the recurrent revenue for the year 2000 they included an amount for health services fees restructuring, which was going to bring the health service fees more in line with what it is costing us. Other Members have made mention to the fact, that we are only collecting some one-third and are subsidising our health services on the island by some 66 per cent. There was a provision in the 2000 Budget to increase those fees, therefore, there was a projection in that Budget of some $7 million.

Now we are at some $23 million or $24 million, and right off the bat if we add $24 million to $272 million, we have a much closer figure to the 2000 approved estimates. So, it is not really a down turn in the economy that has caused the figure to be below the 1999 actuals amount. There were actually some actions taken by the previous government and also some financial trends that occurred, like the Cable and Wireless' contribution. So, the sad story or the gloom and doom we talked about of being actually down because of the trend and about forecast budgeting, it was not just because our economy is down. We would not want to give the impression that we were $33 million short and it was just because revenue under-performed. There were legitimate reasons that can be. There is the factual evidence to bear them out as to why our figures were down.

There is also a concern that the Second Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman has, and I noticed it is very coincidental because that same concern was also expressed in a newspaper by the past government, but from speaking to the Member, he has publicly said he has no allegiance to. However, there seems to be a similar school of thought, at least, in the section of the recurrent revenue over the year 2000 actuals. Again, when I looked at that figure I asked the question trying to verify if this was a realistic amount. The last thing I want to do is to be in support of a budget, then at the end of 2001 we are in the same kind of financial position that we found coming in as the new Government.

So, I questioned as well, as to where and why we felt that it was realistic to expect to get a $39.4 million increase in revenue. Now, if I give a bit of background the actual recurrent revenue for 2000 was $272.6 million and the budgeted recurrent revenue for 2001 is $312 million. This represents an estimated increase of $39.4 million and the main reason underlying this projected increase are as follows: The $19.9 million revenue enhancement package plus four unusual items which are as follows:

- A $1.2 million Cayman Islands Stock Exchange above normal contribution, which is an excess cash pay-in.
- There is $0.5 million Community College above normal contribution.
- There is a $3.25 Cayman Islands Monetary Authority above normal contribution.
- There is also a $600,000 contribution from the Asset and Confiscation Sharing Fund.
- There is a $13.95 million General Revenue Growth projected by the government.

So, that is where we came up with the $39.4 million increase in the revenue. Now, I know that the $13.95 million is higher than the $8.18 million suggested by the Second Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman as well as the previous government, considering the 3 percent increase in growth. Like I said it was by coincidence, I guess, used in the recent press statement of the four ex-ministers.

POINT OF ORDER

Mr. Lyndon L. Martin: Point of order.

The Speaker: May I hear your point of order?

Mr. Lyndon L. Martin: Mr. Speaker, the Member is attributing me to stating the revenue growth of the country would have been to 3 percent and drew similarity of that to the press release. I in no way ever stated that the growth of revenue was at 3 percent. It is an inaccurate representation of my presentation I said a 4.75 percent growth.

The Speaker: Did you check the record because I do not have the Hansard?

You will withdraw that please.

Mr. Cline A. Glidden, Jr.: Yes, Mr. Speaker, I will withdraw.

I am happy to hear that his figure of 4.75 percent—I do not want to misquote him again—is actually higher than what the ex-ministers were. The similarities between his statements and their statements were beginning to worry me a bit. I feel a lot more comfortable that there is actually some differentiation, so I appreciate that clarification.

Now the key assumption underlying their argument, and this is the statement in the press [Cayman Net News of Tuesday 3 April - Thursday 5 April 2001], is that there is a direct and equally proportional relationship between the gross domestic product and the growth in recurrent revenue. That is, if the GDP grows by one percent then recurrent revenue should grow by one percent as well. While I accept that there is a relationship between the GDP and recurrent revenue, the suggestion that this relationship is equally proportional is truly speculative. I will show by way of a quick example why that Member's reasoning is faulty.

POINT OF ORDER

Mr. Lyndon L. Martin: Mr. Speaker, on a point of order once more.

The Speaker: Let me hear your point of order.

Mr. Lyndon L. Martin: The Member was talking about an article he read attaching the GDP growth directly to that of revenue and then he makes the allegation that the Member, and I am assuming he is referring to me, made that assumption. I was not part of the article written in the paper and that assumption is unrealistic and inaccurate.

Mr. Cline A. Glidden, Jr.: Mr. Speaker, there was a Member of the Legislative Assembly who was involved in that article.

The Speaker: Are you referring to the First Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman?

Mr. Cline Glidden, Jr.: No, Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: Please continue.

Mr. Cline A. Glidden, Jr.: As I was saying, if we take the actual case of the year 2000 and put that Member's relationship to the test, the Honourable Financial Secretary in his Budget [Address] had this to say, ". . . GDP growth in 2000 slowed to between 4.4 percent and 4.6 percent . . ." The actual recurrent revenue collected in 1999 was $279.6 million. If you apply the rationale advanced by the Members who made the statement in the press, then one would expect that the actual recurrent revenue collected during the year 2000 should have been, at least 4.4 percent above 1999 or around $291.9 million.

The truth is that actual recurrent revenue collected in 2000 was instead $272.6 million and not $291.9 million. The main point here is that there is a lot more variables trying recurrent revenue growth than simply GDP growth, the main one, of course, being a good government just like the one that we now have.

I would like to say though, that I am relieved for the sake of our country that the Second Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman is no longer a civil servant but instead he is out here with us where we can keep an eye on him and help him to understand how the Cayman economy really works.

POINT OF ORDER

(Point of clarification)

Mr. Lyndon L. Martin: Point of order, Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: Let me hear your point of order.

Mr. Lyndon L. Martin: The same point of order brought on myself earlier, that statement goes to damage the creditability of a Member in his professional career.

The Speaker: I am not following your reasoning in that particular one.

Mr. Lyndon L. Martin: Mr. Speaker, the Member referred to me by my district and title and simply stated that he is glad that I am in Parliament so that they can keep an eye on me to ensure that my economic reasoning—which is my profession—is not practised in government. That is negatively commenting to my professional qualification.

The Speaker: I take that as a point of clarification and I would ask that in your opinion that is what you are saying. It is your view.

Mr. Cline A. Glidden, Jr.: Definitely, Mr. Speaker. That is only my view. Thank you, Sir.

Mr. Speaker, moving on to Judiciary I am happy, like I said, to have seen the discussion and the plan for the new Drugs Court. I am a bit concerned about the recent press coverage we received concerning a Judge actually being called out to deal with a case on a weekend.

I know that there is discretion in that case and I look forward with appreciation when there is some sort of co-operation between the judicial arms and the general public. I can only say that I look forward to that continued co-operation with all levels of society. The precedence has been set where we have the opportunity, on occasions, to call judges out to assist with bail. I know of many instances in the past where people were detained for weekends in conditions considered as, not acceptable. Now, that we have seen judges who are willing to come out to assist with those situations, I feel that the general public would be appreciative to know that possibility exists.

I move on now to the Portfolio of Internal and External Affairs. I must say that as a new Member of this House I was quite embarrassed to look and read of the recent Prison Inspector [UK'S Chief Inspector of Prisons, Sir David Ramsbotham] comments on the West Bay lock-up. I quote from the article in the paper [Caymanian Compass, Monday 2 April 2001], he referred to the West Bay lock-up as a place where young offenders have been "dumped" there and treated like "prisoners of war". He also went on to say that the place was "frightful". I guess the most damaging part of his comment was that he thought the place was "frightful" and he commented that, "I've never seen anything quite as bad as that anywhere".

Now, when we think about the fact that this is a Prison Inspector who has probably travelled all over the world, and we talk about a lock-up for our young people; people who have not even been convicted as yet but awaiting trial, I think it is a real downright disgrace that such a situation existed and still continues to exist, especially in this day and age when we talk about the financial success of the Cayman Islands, the jewel of the Caribbean.

I am happy to know that the new Government has taken remedial actions to try to make sure that the situation is taken care of in the very short term. I look forward to providing whatever support I can provide to make sure that the situation comes to a quick end.

I also have a major concern with crime in the Cayman Islands. What really concerned me was when I had the opportunity to speak to the Police Commissioner at one of the meetings. There had just been a comment saying that crime was down across the island. I do have my concerns as to how those figures are arrived at, but even so, when the statement was made that crime was down on average across the Cayman Islands there was also a statement that it was up in West Bay.

Now, I have seen some provisions from the answers to questions asked in this Parliament. I have seen that additional police provisions have been made for the district of West Bay. It is real difficult for me to believe that crime is down across the island but it is up in West Bay. When I look at the numbers there seems to be a trend that wherever we have added more policing, crime has come down. I look forward to getting some more police in West Bay to attack the crime problem we have.

I also noticed that there seems to be an improvement when it comes to recruitment in the police force. I have not seen the figures for 2000 yet, but I think it is significant to note that in 1998 13 police were recruited and only two were Caymanians, however, 18 were recruited in 1999 and 15 of those were Caymanians. I think that is a step in the right direction and I look forward to seeing the new police report on the 2000 recruitment process, hopefully continuing on in that same trend.

I would also like to touch on the fact that not only do we have a problem with policing in West Bay with crime being on the rise. Maybe that problem can be contributed to the fact that the West Bay Police Station is in such bad need of upgrading. The Police Department is probably finding it difficult to find policemen who want to work in those conditions. So, hopefully, we will be moving within budget constraints, to possibly doing some upgrading to the West Bay Police Station when we are looking at upgrading the lock-up currently used for our young offenders.

There is an area under the Police Force which seems to have quite a lot of unknowns in it; that is the asset confiscation section. I have heard mention that we are expected to get some funds from that section to go into the general revenues but so far, it has been hard for me, as well as other Members of the House to get a clear understanding as to the inflows and outflows of this asset confiscation section.

As you know, we do spend quite a bit on assistance for both local and international drug, money laundering and other criminal activities to help with the prosecution of those activities; it does cost us quite a bit in doing. My understanding was that we would receive some of the benefits. Even though that may be occurring, we are having a difficult time so far understanding exactly how it occurs and who is responsible, so we need some clarification on that. It is the same, I guess, with the Drugs Task Force . . . I know that there is an arrangement in place as to the funds from a lot of the asset confiscation having to be used in the continued fight with drugs. Again, I notice where money is going out but I am having difficulty seeing exactly which accounts any of the assets received are going to and, how the government can actually get access to those accounts.

When we talk about the Cayman Islands Police Force, I am very concerned about co-operation with the Force. I believe that we have some very good police officers who have a genuine interest in deterring and reducing crime in our country, but it is very difficult for them to achieve this task without getting some co-operation from the general public. During my discussion with the Chief of Police, I was very disappointed to hear of one particular instance of total lack of co-operation with the Police. I just crave your indulgence to bring what was explained to me as to some of the difficulties that the Police are going through.

In the district of West Bay, there was a child on his bicycle who was riding without a light and the Police Officer who is from the district, saw the child, gave him a warning and told him that he did not want him to get injured riding on a busy road at night without a light so he should walk his bicycle home. The little boy jumped off his bicycle and started walking home. The Police Officer, knowing the district and knowing where the little boy lived, decided that he would take a shortcut to go to the road where the little boy would have to go pass to see whether the little boy was going to actually ride his bicycle or walk his bicycle as he had been instructed to do, since he did not have a light. So, upon reaching the area where the little boy would be crossing, sure enough, along came the little boy riding his bicycle in the same way he was doing before, taking the chance of getting knocked off his bicycle. So, the Police Officer, in what I feel is a responsible act and what I was very accustomed to in my younger days of riding a bicycle without a light, decided to let the air out of the tyres to force the little boy to walk the bicycle home; to make sure that he attempted to get home safely.

Now, the Chief of Police told me that he was surprised to know, that the following day when he got to his office, the parents of that little boy was waiting for him at his office demanding that he pay for the tyres of that bicycle because the little boy had still insisted on riding it home. They felt that since the Police had flattened the tyres they should be responsible for replacing them. That is the co-operation we lack and what makes it very difficult for our police to do the job assigned to them.

Mr. Speaker, with all the difficulties and the problems we are having now, I plead for the continued co-operation of those who are already doing their part. I am also pleading for a new level of co-operation between society and all law enforcement officials who are trying their hardest to do the job they have been assigned to do in these, our beloved Cayman Islands.

I now want to move on to the Prison Department. I would like to say that I really appreciate us, very early in our political life, having been given the opportunity of a tour of the Northward Prison facility. That was quite an eye opening experience to see the state of affairs of the country when we look at the number of young Caymanian lives going to waste behind the walls of Northward Prison.

I know commitments have been made and other Members have spoken on the need for rehabilitation, and other methods of alternate sentencing. I think we need to look at that as urgently as possibly.

I am also aware of other concerned areas occurring at the prison. One of those areas is that we now have a situation where it appears to have gotten to the stage where we are allowing our prisoners out to visit. When I hear of prisoners being allowed out to visit, it really reminds me of what the general populace has to say: Northward is actually a hotel. I got an explanation as to the reasoning behind some of them but when we actually allow prisoners to come out to visit friends and family for occasions like Christmas, it really makes me wonder whether we are actually making these people pay their debt to society. What compounds that even more is that I now know there is a very high percentage of inmates who are testing positive for drugs.

It stands to reason that if we put people in there who have a drug problem, we know that there are ways and means of people being able to throw illegal substances and other contraband into the Prison over the walls. It baffles me as to why we would not expect to have a lot of positive drug testing if we are allowing them out to visit and go back into the same sections of society that caused them to be there in the first place. It makes it too easy for them—people do not even have to come and throw it over the fence—they are getting out to get it themselves.

I also have been told that there are areas where dishonesty has occurred by officers of the Prison who are responsible for maintaining law and order within the walls of the Prison. I know authorities are investigating. Now, it has been said that there was an Officer who was guilty of removing items from the Prison to use on his own personal premises. As of today's date, as far as we are to understand, that officer has not been reprimanded or punished in any way except being told to replace the items he removed.

Now, again it is hard to understand that when they go along West Bay Road, take something that is not theirs and go to court, they are charged and found guilty and they have to go to prison. On the other hand, there is an officer who has been found guilty of removing stuff from the prison that he was not supposed to remove, but there is no punishment in place for them. It defeats all logic of law and order, and it makes the prisoners lose all respect for the system.

On a positive note I was happy to see that the visitors' centre being built was without government funding. It is positive to see that the prisoners as well as the prison authorities—officers who are there have been so proactive to go out and to raise funds and to also use prison labour to get the visitors' centre built.

When the new Government speaks of partnerships with the private sector it is good to also see that we have partnerships with some of the members of our society who are in prison, in attempt for them repay their debt to society.

When we look at the prison and the overcrowding situation, I think that the time has come for us to start looking at the possibility of deporting some of our prisoners who have been there for extended periods of time and have served a portion or a significant portion of their terms. We have a situation now where some prisoners are held at the leisure of the Governor with the abolition of the death penalty. My personal opinion is that if we have a prisoner who has served fifteen years in prison it could be argued that his debt has been paid to society, especially now at the rate of $20,000 or $30,000 per year for prisoners, I think, the time has come to send that prisoner back to his home. We have kept him here; he has paid his debt; it has cost the country; we have been assured that he was a prisoner. Now, it is time for us to allow him to go back.

Again, that is another one of those decisions that will have to be looked at and thought about, and the pros and cons will have to be weighed. Hopefully, when the balance is found we will be able to find ways and means of repatriating some of our prisoners because it is costing us and this country a significant amount of money to keep prisoners here.

The other point I want to touch on with the Prison is the preparation for release of our prisoners. I have seen where we have had a prisoner who has been held at the Governor's leisure, who for all intents and purposes seemed to have reformed his life. The parole area made a decision and felt under recommendation that he was ready to fit back into our society. Sadly enough that prisoner had to be recalled to continue his sentence.

We are all aware that society in the Cayman Islands changes traumatically, therefore, if we had someone who was locked away in jail for fifteen years, it is a bit too much to expect that we are just going to open the doors and allow that person back into society expecting that they will now be able to survive. The prisoner, himself, I spoke to during the time when he was out, on numerous occasions. At first, he was looking forward to getting back into society because during his period of time in prison he had actually got some certificates/degrees, he had advanced himself academically. When he did come out he was surprised to know that it was a bit more difficult than he expected it to be. Taking his word for it, he said he was searching for something that could actually make an honest living. So, as the weeks passed and he was still unable to find employment I could see deterioration.

Even though we all have a responsibility to do our part to be a benefit and a productive part of society, we have to admit that it is not easy to just get thrown back into a very developed society after fifteen years in prison and be expected to function as one and the same as all the other members. I think a bit more preparation is needed on our own local prisoners who have served time, in order to prepare them for society before releasing them. Therefore, once it is brought to the attention of the authorities that he or she is going to be released, they need to prepare them or we will end up with the same situation which occurred with the last prisoner released, who ended up back in Northward Prison.

I would like to move on to the Cayman Islands Government Office in the United Kingdom and say how proud I am that we have a Caymanian and a West Bayer to run the office. When we look at such an important time in our international economic situation—where we are having such opinions, objectives and rules set down by the OECD and the FATF, and we talk about the need for having people who we can lobby and people in high places who we can turn to—I think we can very capably use the individual, Mrs. Jennifer Dilbert, who is the representative of our office in the United Kingdom.

I do not plan to go into depth as far as the OECD and the FATF is concerned because we have had so many speakers who have gone in and expressed different opinions. I would like to go on record, as saying that, I think the time has come where we need to do some serious lobbying to get some support to our position. I also think the time is right for that lobbying because we have seen a change in the new American President. What I have also found interesting was a response from Mrs. Hillary Clinton, wife of the former President of the United States. I am reading from a document where it says, "United States Senator, Honourable Hillary Rodham Clinton has expressed concerned that the OECD Harmful Tax Initiatives may impose significant economic damage on many of our neighbours in the Caribbean."

It goes on to say, "In a letter to the newly appointed United States Treasury Secretary in the Bush administration, the Honourable Paul H. O'Neal of which copies were circulated to, St. Kitts and Nevis' Prime Minister and the Prime Minister of Jamaica, the Caricom Secretary General and several congressmen and regional financial institutions, the former First Lady said that the OECD of which the United States is a member is threatening many of these nations with financial protectionism that are attractive to foreign investors. This is a fundamental violation of sovereignty. Perhaps more importantly, however, the OECD's attack on international tax competition undermines the ability of these nations to develop or maintain financial services industries", said Mrs. Clinton.

She continued, "As you surely realise the Caribbean has been subject to grave economic pressures because it is increasingly difficult for the region to prosper while relying on basic commodities such as sugar and bananas."

Mrs. Clinton added, "That if the OECD campaigned against these nations causes substantial damage to their financial services industry this would be yet another devastating blow to the region". Adding, "This would cost significant economic hardship and cost poverty rates to climb even higher."

The United States Former First Lady is of the view that wealthy nations of the world should not be trying to penalise developing nations for enacting tax policies which are attractive to investors, pointing out that OECD countries control a vast majority of the world's capital and have benefited for centuries from exploitative relationships with the less developed world.

"For the industrialised world to suddenly threaten severe penalties on these nations because they now are becoming affective competitors is both morally objectionable and economically misguided," Mrs. Clinton told the United States Treasury Secretary, adding, "I hope you will re-examine American support for the OECD anti-tax competition campaign."

So, there is support in the international fields and it is very important for us to garner a lot of the support, as much as possible, so that we can take a stand against the practices or the initiatives that seem to be causing us and other members in the region, problems in our financial industry.

Mr. Speaker, I also found an interesting document that I got off the internet which talks about money laundering in the US Senate Report. It says that "The report released by the Senate subcommittee comes in addition to a more extensive study released at the beginning of this month. Investigations revealed that between $500 billion and $1.5 trillion are laundered each year in the US financial system."

Mr. Speaker, seeing that the US is one of those members pushing so hard concerning our financial initiatives, it would seem prudent for us to suggest to them, that they seem to have quite a bit more problems in their backyard than we do, especially from looking at the figures. They are talking about $500 billion—that is somewhere around the total amount estimated. We have some $600 billion on deposit in these islands and their report has found that they have between $500 billion and $1.5 trillion being laundered through the US alone every year.

So, even though they would like to make the rest of the world believe that Cayman is one of those places where everyone comes and launders their dirty money, the truth of the matter is, what goes on here is a very small percentage in light of some of the major players in the OECD themselves.

Mr. Speaker, I am going to move on.

The Speaker: If you are moving to a new subject maybe it is a convenient time to take the afternoon break.

We suspend for fifteen minutes.

PROCEEDINGS SUSPENDED AT 3.24 PM

PROCEEDINGS RESUMED AT 3.53 PM

The Speaker: Proceedings are resumed. Debate continuing on the Appropriation Bill 2001.

The Fourth Elected Member for West Bay, continuing.

Mr. Cline A. Glidden, Jr.: I would now like to touch on the area of Immigration. As a new Member of this House, of all the issues I have had to deal with over the past three months, I would say that Immigration is one of the greatest concerns. In fact it has taken up about 50 percent of the workload in my electoral office and it seems from talking to other Members from both sides of the House that they have similar workloads in this area.

I have been almost terrified at the passion and anger that has been demonstrated by some of the clients who have come into the office concerning immigration matters. There have been examples, almost of violence, in terms of hitting walls and kicking chairs in the confines of our office. That is the sort of anger that can be translated into the sort of crime we see through the passion and the feeling of total isolation from any sort of meaningful support from the system. That is the sort of anger building up out there that will be on our heads if we do not move quickly to modify and to reform the problems in this area. People feel the whole system is working against them.

The mistakes made by previous politicians are, putting money and budget deficits ahead of people. We know there are a number of marriage breakdowns in society and those numbers are increasingly high. So many of them involve children, and many of those children are being brought up exposed to an environment of frustration, bitterness and hatred.

I have always regarded the comment by one of my lecturers that metaphysics does not boil cabbages as a very significant statement in relation to life generally. There is talk of a much-needed reconciliation between Caymanians and expatriates, between locals and foreign investors. I have always had a concern about the notion of reconciliation. I have always questioned it because the notion implies a division. So, you start with a division between people if you manufacture a concept that we need to reconcile because there is a division. There are many Caymanians who do not think there is a division and who are offended by this concept. Personally, I have never seen more division in this country between Caymanians and expatriates, and that is a tragedy. Getting back to the point that metaphysics does not boil cabbages—we are not helping the people at the heart of the problem with these concepts, in my respectful view.

For example, I do not think anybody really considered the words 'indigenous' and 'non-indigenous'. Now we have indigenous Caymanian and non-indigenous Caymanian. We are all Caymanian, yet we have this division since the reconciliation concept. I think it is absurd, and it promotes division. I have people saying to me, 'I'm indigenous. I was born here'. If you look up the dictionary meaning of the word: it means people who are born here. It is causing friction in the community; a friction that we do not need because we should be identifying the real needs of the Caymanian people.

That is what it is all about—helping our Caymanian people in health, housing, education and employment. If we get those basic things right then we can do all the feel good things we like; but if we do the feel good things and do not solve the basic things, we are going to have problems. That is what we are seeing now, the problems that come along with not taking care of the basic needs of our Caymanian people, whether they are indigenous or non-indigenous.

There has been much talk as to the need for a policy on long-term residents and many differences of opinion as to how we should deal with the long-term residents. There are also different periods of time as to what is acceptable before giving those people some sort of security of tenure in Cayman. There is talk of 10, 15, 20 years. We have examples of other areas in the region which did a cut-off at 20 years. Well, Mr. Speaker, you know it is going to be difficult whichever term we use. Whichever decision we make, whether it is 15 or 20 years, some people are going to be upset. However, it is ridiculous to know that we have people who have been here 34 years and are still being told that they have to get a work permit for a job.

A decision has to be made, and I am aware that the Government has been very caught up in the budget and the other affairs that go along with the transition to a new Government. However, I am pleading, as I have heard many other Members of the Backbench plead, that the immigration situation is given priority and dealt with as a matter of urgency.

It is difficult, Mr. Speaker, because if we look at fifteen years it seems unfair, morally, for the person who has been here fourteen years. We also have the person who has been here twelve years who has just been granted a 3-year work permit. Does that mean that in three years they are qualified? There are many difficulties along with it but indecision does not help our problem. Everyday that we move forward we are adding to the existing situation; to that unknown aspect of people out there hearing rumours and talks as to what is going to take place, but no one has taken a policy decision.

Our Immigration Department is also having problems trying to deal with the different sections and problems that come up. I appreciate the fact that they are trying to do their best. There has been much talk as to the rollover policy. Now, it was very enlightening to see and to hear when we met with members of the FCO who came down, concerning constitutional review, that the UK actually has a 5-year rollover policy as well. It was very enlightening to know that with all the talking and debating that has gone on concerning the 5-year policy here, in the Cayman Islands, our Mother Country actually has a policy similar in place.

Now, whatever arrangements have to be made for the rollover policy we have to come together as leaders of the country, the people who have been entrusted by our constituents to make those hard decisions. We campaigned on having to make hard decisions, and the time is now. We need to make the decisions concerning our immigration policy which will allow our country to move forward in some sort of structured manner without the unknowns, without the willy-nilly, without the people having children here; children who are born to one Caymanian parent and not knowing their status. We have too many unknowns out there and I could go into a lot of the immigration problems we are having, but since we have had so much discussions as well, in an attempt not to be repetitious I will just say that we need to come together and agree on a policy. I look forward to making my contributions to the policy that will move us ahead, as far as the immigration situation is concerned.

When we speak about the rollover policy, it does not really make sense for us to look at the long-term residents' situation until we make some sort of a decision on the rollover policy. If we decide 15 years or 20 years, the persons who have been here 15 years now, in 5 years, they are going to be here for 20 years, and the persons who have been here 10 years, in 5 years, they are going to be here for 15 years. So, we have to put a policy in place to take care of the existing situation, as far as immigration is concerned, before we even address the situation as to the long-term residents, because every day we are getting more and more long-term residents. Whatever the period of time that is going to be defined as to what the definition is for a long-term resident, every day we are getting more people who fall into that category.

When we speak about the rollover policy, it may be a mistake not to realise, that not only will it help Cayman in our long-term plans in being able to plan and to manage our population, but it will also help the person who is coming here to provide the much needed service as well. Right now, how the situation usually works is this way: we get someone who comes here because he is needed; he is here for a one-year or a two-year period of time and before you know it that time has been extended because their services are still required, and they are here 3 or 4 years. And then, rightly so, they say, 'Well, I do not know how much longer I am going to be here so I should bring my family.' We all know it is difficult being away from our families'. So, they decide to move their families down or, at least, their spouse. They also decide to move their children as well, to bring them and put them into school because now it is going on to 5 to 6 years, and their future is still unknown. Either they move their children out of schools wherever they were or they have children here who got started in school. Before you know it, a 7 or 10-year period has elapsed and that person is still providing a service that he has shown justification, or the company that has hired him has shown justification as to why he is needed here. They still do not know from day to day what their status will be. It is not a healthy situation and it is time that we, as a government and a country issue a clear policy as to the plans and the way forward in terms of our immigration policy.

I am happy to say that during this sitting of the Legislative Assembly, we were able to get an agreement for a Select Committee to come together, to identify the needs of identifying certain businesses which would be reserved for one hundred percent Caymanian ownership. I am happy to say that since the unanimous agreement on that motion we have gotten indications of agreement, even from outside of this Honourable House that the time has come when there are certain areas of business that should be restricted for Caymanians. I was also happy to see that the Chamber of Commerce has even started to investigate the needs and the possibilities of that with a select committee.

Since then, representations have been made that there should be certain jobs reserved for Caymanians. One of those was the job of Concierge, and the argument was put forward to me. The feeling was, that playing such an important role in our tourism product as being a Concierge in some of the major hotels, it would stand to reason that the people should be local; that the people should have some knowledge of the islands where they are sending people out to for a visit, and making recommendations. It is hard to imagine that we would bring someone down from Japan and set them down at one of our hotels expecting them to have the knowledge and information to refer and recommend ideas and places of interest to our visitors. Now, as to how realistic that is, I am not really sure how many Caymanians we have in those positions. There is merit to the recommendation that not only are there certain businesses which Caymanians should have the ability to operate, but there are certain jobs as well, that Caymanians should be forerunners in doing.

I am very happy to see the policy in place with the business plans for the Immigration Department and the Immigration Board; I commend them on moving forward with this policy. It only stands to reason the problems we are having with the lack of succession planning; the grievances we are hearing from our trained Caymanians not being able to get jobs; the talk of the proverbial glass ceiling in Caymanians not being able to advance in their jobs after they get into them; the many stories we hear of expatriates coming here to fill a job and staying here for some 15 or 20 years on the same job with training provided by the company.

I am glad to see that the Immigration Department has moved a step forward that will allow us to now have and to be able to see, and to also police and enforce a plan in terms of immigration. From my understanding this has been accepted from the business community as well because it also allows them to be able to plan. This is not something foreign to our businesses; they all have business plans that identify the needs for their resources. So, it is not something strange; the only thing strange and new is that the Immigration Department is now requiring it.

New or successful businesses sit and look at their projected needs especially for what labour is going to be. My understanding is that they are very happy to know that they can set forward a plan and it is accepted by Immigration. Again, it takes away that area of unknown for them not knowing whether they can expand into this area of the business because they are not sure whether the permit will get approved. As long as they are sticking to the approved plan, the understanding is that the permits will be approved. So, not only does it help us by knowing our way forward but it helps the businesses do business in Cayman as well. That is the kind of situation we like when we get the win/win situation for all concerned.

I would now like to move on to the Legislative Assembly, and to say how happy I am to see the agreement amongst all Members for this Honourable House to move to electronic Hansard. In an age of technology when we hear His Excellency the Governor's Throne Speech mentioning Information Technology, I think the timing is right that we move again to the electronic Hansard and laws. It is frightening when I walk around this building and see piles and piles of paper continuously growing and the space getting smaller and smaller for all the staff. In my short time here, I am amazed to see the amount of paper generated on my behalf and other Members because the bags continue to increase. Some Members started with one and now they are at three bags, just to bring their paperwork into the Legislative Assembly.

When we talk about moving towards a paperless society it is important for us to look at being the pioneers and the leaders again. Right now, as it looks, if you go in and ask for one or two pages or a particular area, the staff here in their very efficient manner will print you, usually, the first or the preceding three or four pages and also the three or four pages at the end of the area you wanted just to make sure that there is not anything you may have missed telling them. It would be so much easier when the day arrives that we can simply log on to the Website, pull up the information, as and when we want it, and if we do decide that we need to print it, then it is printed.

I was also happy to see the Member from East End with the motion for the broadcasting of events for this Legislative Assembly. We know that there is going to be some potential problems but when we talk about transparency and openness it is imperative that we start from these same halls of power.

I guess this is just as good a time as any for me to talk about a discussion we had in here concerning the Standing Orders for two hours of debate. Now, both, the Members from the Backbench and Members from the Government side have mentioned the need for the reduction in time from four hours, which is now accepted, to two hours for efficiency. I am not sure where this four-hour time came for Members debate but it just does not seem to be reasonable any longer. In speaking, during the Parliamentary session we had, with Members from other areas of the region they found it quite amusing to know that we still had four hours available to us for debate.

I looked at the possibility of four hours and just some quick numbers: if we had 18 Members in here and we each speak for four hours on a topic; that is 72 hours for each motion. For this particular sitting of the House there were some 17 Private Member's Motions and that would equate to some 1224 hours. Now, on average we usually get about a 4-hour period of time with questions and the other areas that we go into for the day. So if we look at 4 hours per day that would work out to some 306 days and that is not even including government business.

I always remember one of the earlier debate sessions—it was on an Appropriation Bill—the Second Elected Member made a reference and that is what I will use now; that would have to be a monumental waste of time.

The Speaker: When you say Second Elected Member, please identify the district.

Mr. Cline A. Glidden, Jr.: Sorry, Mr. Speaker, the Second Elected Member for George Town.

Four hours on a motion is really too long and I am happy to say we have all agreed that four hours should be reduced to a maximum of two hours. The feeling from my understanding now, is that it is okay for all motions or debates except for the Throne Speech and Budget Debate. In the case of a combination of both it is accepted to have two hours for each, a total of four hours. So, I am still within my time but I look forward to an increase in efficiency because my feeling is that we were not elected to spend all our time in the Legislative Assembly. We also have a responsibility to be out there representing our constituents. I look forward to the reduction in time.

Another area that I have seen evidence of, so far in this House, is that in the past it was the practice for every Member to get up and debate on every motion because we agreed for it to be done that way. In many instances it was just to get up and say, 'Yes, I agree' or 'No, I disagree'. What I have seen in my short time here is that there has been an increased level of responsibility, especially responsibility for time. Members have now accepted that if they are going to agree it is not necessary for them to get up and debate the motions but to simply vote on it when the time comes. So far, we have moved along quite good and I look forward to that continued co-operation amongst all Members of this Honourable House.

Mr. Speaker, I would like to move on to the Personnel Department. When we look at the Civil Service there is much debate about the size of the Civil Service. During Question Time it came to my attention that not only is the Civil Service increasing but that the ratio of Caymanians to non-Caymanians in the Computer Services is also increasing.

What I would be happy to see the Civil Service incorporate is a sort of a business plan idea that Immigration is now using for the private sector. We should be able to identify with a structured and planned government; we should be able to identify and forecast our labour needs and we should be able to say, for example, that in 2 - 5 years time we are going to need three Caymanian accountants. So, we need to identify those Caymanian accountants, give them scholarships and send them off to school. In the meantime, we are going to get three expatriates to come in until we actually have our Caymanians who are trained to take up those positions. At the time when our Caymanians are trained and they are brought back to Cayman qualified as accountants, it should not be that we are increasing the number in the civil service by adding those three Caymanians and keeping on the expatriates as well.

I heard mention made, as to fact, that we have some 49 or 50 students coming out of university whom government gives a scholarship to every year. That was given as one of the reasons for the increase in the size of the Civil Service. What I would like to see happen is that if we have 50 Caymanians coming out, next year after those Caymanians have been given a chance to understudy they should be able to replace some of the expatriates and contracted officers we have. Therefore, when the next 50 comes out we would be replacing them with our own trained local people instead of having to increase the Civil Service.

I heard a reference being made and one suggestion was to release the Caymanians from their bond to allow them to work within the private sector. I do not think, that after we make the significant investment in Caymanians and they have agreed to come back to work with the Cayman Islands Government that they should be released to the private sectors, while we still have contracted officers in the Civil Service.

There is also the area of the contracted officers' supplement which I have been unable to get a justification of, as to why there is a need for a contracted officers' supplement in this day and age, a time when people are flocking to the Cayman Islands to look for work. I understand that twenty years ago when we wanted to encourage people to come to a mosquito-ridden, small island to work, we had to give incentives for them to come. The private sector—Cable and Wireless, CUC, those other companies used to do the same thing but now the time is here when people are coming to look for work.

I feel that regardless of whether there is that 15 percent contracted officers' supplement or not, we will still have people looking forward to coming to Cayman to work. I do not feel that we should have two separate wages. There should be a wage per position, and whether that position is filled by a Caymanian or an expatriate, there should not be a differentiation in the wage. What really enforced my feeling to that was when I looked in the budget and saw $5 million in there for contracted officers' supplement. That is one of those areas of double standards we mentioned earlier. The time has come and the political will is here now, to say that contracted officers' supplement will cease to exist and whether you are a foreigner or a Caymanian the position will have a set wage.

Now, I know that there is a provision and one of the reasons is because of the pension contribution, and my feeling is, that the officers are not paid pension. Again, like in the private sector, pensions are now a part of the law. If we are saying that we are going to have a level playing field and not going to have double standards, so if we have to pay a pension for that particular job then so be it, there will be a pension. Right now there is a feeling within the Civil Service that if you are an expatriate or a contracted officer that you are more needed or more wanted. That feeling of being an equal is bound to cause some difficulties so, when we look at the Civil Service we seriously need to look and investigate the possibility of the removal of the contracted officers' supplement.

Mr. Speaker, I am going to be moving on, is now a good time for the break?

The Speaker: If it is the wish of the House I would entertain a motion for the adjournment of this Honourable House.

The Honourable Minister for Community Development, Women Affairs, Youth & Culture.

ADJOURNMENT

Hon. Edna M. Moyle: I move the adjournment of this Honourable House until 10 am on Wednesday morning.

The Speaker: The question is that this Honourable House do now adjourn until 10 am on Wednesday. Those in favour please say Aye. Those against, No.

AYES.

The Speaker: The Ayes have it. This Honourable House stands adjourned until 10 am on Wednesday.

AT 4.26 PM THE HOUSE STOOD ADJOURNED UNTIL 10 AM WEDNESDAY, 11 APRIL 2001.

OFFICIAL HANSARD REPORT
WEDNESDAY
11 APRIL 2001
10.13 AM
Eighteenth Sitting

[Prayers read by the Honourable Second Official Member responsible for the Portfolio of Legal Administration.]

The Speaker: Please be seated. Proceedings are resumed.

Item number 2 on today's Order Paper, the Administration of Oaths or Affirmations. The Administration of the Oath of Allegiance to Mr. Donovan W. F. Ebanks, MBE.

Mr. Ebanks would you come forward to the Clerk's table, please? Would all Honourable Members please stand?

ADMINISTRATION OF OATHS OR AFFIRMATIONS

OATH OF ALLEGIANCE

(Mr. Donovan W. F. Ebanks, MBE)

Hon. Donovan Ebanks: I, Donovan Ebanks, do swear that I will be faithful and bear true allegiance to Her Majesty Queen Elizabeth II, her heirs and successors according to law, so help me God.

The Speaker: Mr. Ebanks, we welcome you to this Honourable House for the term of your service. Please take your seat as the Honourable Temporary First Official Member.

Honourable Members, please be seated.

Item number 3 on today's Order Paper, Reading by the Speaker of Messages and Announcements.

READING BY THE
HONOURABLE SPEAKER OF
MESSAGES AND ANNOUNCEMENTS

APOLOGIES

The Speaker: I have apologies for absence from the Honourable First Official Member responsible for the Portfolio of Internal and External Affairs.

Item number 4 on today's Order Paper, Questions to the Honourable Ministers/Members of Government. Question number 50, deferred from 2 April 2001, the Fourth Elected Member for West Bay.

QUESTIONS TO HONOURABLE
MEMBERS/MINISTERS

QUESTION NO. 50

No. 50: Mr. Cline A. Glidden, Jr. asked the Honourable Second Official Member responsible for the Portfolio of Legal Administration how many confiscations of illegal goods, both locally and overseas, were made during the period November 1996 to December 2000 from which the Cayman Islands' Government would have received some compensation.

The Speaker: The Honourable Second Official Member responsible for Legal Administration.

Hon. David F. Ballantyne: The Cayman Islands Mutual Legal Assistance Authority has advised that during the period February 1993 to the present time, approximately US$4,500,000 to $5,000,000 has been paid to the Government of the Cayman Islands by the Government of the United States of America, as a result of assistance provided under the Mutual Legal Assistance Treaty (MLAT). Of this amount, approximately US$3,500,000 was received by the Cayman Islands Government during the period November 1996 to December 2000.

The Chief Superintendent in charge of the Drugs Task Force has also confirmed that approximately US$30,000 has been received by the Cayman Islands Government from the Government of the United States of America as a result of co-operation provided by the Cayman Drug Task Force section of the Royal Cayman Islands Police.

SUPPLEMENTARIES

The Speaker: The Second Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. Alden M. McLaughlin, Jr.: Can the Honourable Member please say what has become of the $4.5 million to $5 million paid to the Cayman Islands Government in the manner set out in his answer?

The Speaker: The Honourable Second Official Member responsible for Legal Administration.

Hon. David F. Ballantyne: I understand from my colleague, the Third Official Member, that these funds were placed, and are still in place, on receipt into a separate fund within the Government, that is, separate from the recurrent budget.

[Inaudible comment made in background.]

Hon. David F. Ballantyne: I understand from the Third Official Member that these funds are placed in a special deposit account within the Treasury Department. What I mean by that is they are not mixed with, as I understand it, the general revenue account.

In terms of utilisation of the funds, I can only speak for matters within my own knowledge and that is that last year Executive Council authorised the use of a portion of those funds in connection with law enforcement matters, principally assisting the funding of current prosecutions. The amount approved at that point was $1.4 million, but not all of that has been drawn down as Members will see in Finance Committee. It has been reflected in the budget proposals because it is necessary to introduce these funds to the recurrent budget process, as I indicated in an answer in an earlier occasion. I do not have the precise details of the financial arrangements, however, I would be happy to give an undertaking that these be provided to the Member if that would assist in clarifying the issue.

I would also add that although I am answering this question, I am doing so on behalf of those who receive the funds—which is primarily the Judiciary in the sense that the Chief Justice is the Cayman Islands' central authority. The funds, as I understand it from the Third Official Member, are passed to finance by the Judiciary and Legal Department from time to time as these funds are received.

The only other information, I think, that I can provide that might be helpful is an arrangement for the sharing of assets with the United States. It consists of an exchange of letters relative to the Mutual Legal Assistance Treaty (MLAT). Each case is considered on a case by case basis as to the contribution made by the respective governments and law enforcement agencies in order to decide whether it is a case suitable for sharing of assets. I think that it would be appropriate to offer to provide a copy of that asset-sharing arrangement for the benefit of the House so that it can be clearly seen upon what basis these arrangements proceed. Thank you.

The Speaker: The Second Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. Alden M. McLaughlin, Jr.: Can the Honourable Second Official Member please confirm whether or not the previous Executive Council resolved to use the funds, the $4.5 million to $5 million paid to the Cayman Islands Government, as a result of assistance provided under the MLAT for the purpose of constructing a new court facility?

The Speaker: That is a bit outside the ambit of this question, but if the Honourable Second Official Member responsible for Legal Administration wishes to answer, he may.

Hon. David F. Ballantyne: I would, if I were able to; however, I will undertake the answer. It will require checking the records of Executive Council to know exactly what was, or was not, resolved. I am quite willing to do that and provide the Honourable Member with an answer.

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman.

Mrs. Julianna Y. O'Connor-Connolly: The substantive response indicates there were approximately US$4.5 million to US$5 million received by the Cayman Islands Government; I wonder if there was any particular reason for the half-million dollar difference and if so, what was it?

The Speaker: The Honourable Second Official Member responsible for Legal Administration.

Hon. David F. Ballantyne: What I sought to convey in the answer was that the figures I gave were approximate. Those are the figures I was notified. What was intended to be conveyed was that the figure was approximately between $4.5 million to $5 million.

I will endeavour to obtain a more precise answer if the Member wishes me to. However, if Members will recall, I had to ask for this answer to be deferred to allow the information to be provided. I am giving you the best information I have at the moment. There is no missing half million, I am simply saying that I have given you a range on the information provided to me by those providing the information.

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman.

Mrs. Julianna Y. O'Connor-Connolly: Are there any outstanding amounts to be collected? If so, how much and what would be the expected collection date?

The Speaker: The Honourable Second Official Member responsible for Legal Administration.

Hon. David F. Ballantyne: I am not really in a position to say. There are matters that are regularly under discussion, but these matters are usually between the Cayman Islands Mutual Legal Assistance Central Authority and the US Department of Justice. I am not necessarily privy to those. These issues arise in case after case because the assistance provided under the treaty is taken into account in terms of determining what the appropriate share, if any, of assets would be.

That is really all I can say, however, I can undertake to obtain details of any cases that are under discussion at the present time.

The Speaker: The Fourth Elected Member for West Bay.

Mr. Cline A. Glidden, Jr.: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Can the Honourable Second Official Member explain how this process actually works? Who is the controlling officer responsible for ensuring that the funds due to the Cayman Islands Government are actually collected?

I know it depends, as you said, on what level of assistance we give. I just wonder how that is calculated and ensured that we are getting what we are supposed to be getting, and whose responsibility that falls under.

The Speaker: The Honourable Second Official Member responsible for Legal Administration.

Hon. David F. Ballantyne: My understanding is that this is a matter between the two central authorities of the US and the Cayman Islands, and that it is the CI Central Authority that has the responsibility of determining with the Department of Justice what proportion in a particular case should be allocated.

On the basis of the asset sharing agreement, each case is looked at on a case by case basis, as I said. I am aware of discussions in the past and I was present on one occasion when funds were handed over at a meeting between the Department of Justice and the CI Central Authority.

The Speaker: The Fourth Elected Member for West Bay.

Mr. Cline A. Glidden, Jr.: Would the Honourable Second Official Member please clarify who comprises the Mutual Legal Assistance Authority of the Cayman Islands?

The Speaker: The Honourable Second Official Member responsible for Legal Administration.

Hon. David F. Ballantyne: Certainly. Under the Mutual Legal Assistance Treaty between the US and the UK as extended to the Cayman Islands, which is the treaty under which the asset sharing arrangement operates, and under which these funds were obtained, the central authority is the Chief Justice.

There are other central authorities in relation to other arrangements, but these funds have been derived from that source. I am not aware of any funds being derived from any other source.

The Speaker: Elected Member for East End.

Mr. V. Arden McLean: Can the Honourable Member say if the Police Department has ever received funds from confiscation of illegal drugs or goods during that period?

The Speaker: The Honourable Second Official Member responsible for Legal Administration.

Hon. David F. Ballantyne: In the written answer I endeavoured to give the information that was provided in relation to the Drugs Task Force. As I am not otherwise aware of what the RCIP may have received, I have to rely on the information I have been given. I will have to refer to the First Official Member in order to give you the assurance that was a complete position. However, those advising me have provided this information and I assume it is complete. Just to be sure, I will undertake to check the position with the First Official Member and try to answer that supplementary question. I personally am not aware of any additional receipt beyond what I have been told.

You will understand, I am not an accountant, although I appreciate the need for a position. The information that has been provided is the best information that I have been able to obtain at this juncture. I will endeavour to get a more accurate picture. I think that ought to be able to be obtained by an analysis of the account to which I have referred in the hands of the Treasury. Again I will refer to the Third Official Member to obtain that information.

The Speaker: The Elected Member for East End.

Mr. V. Arden McLean: I am not an accountant either, but I guess there are more questions than there are answers.

Can the Honourable Second Official Member also undertake to see that the $30,000 received by the Drugs Task Force was put into the central government as he spoke of?

The Speaker: The Honourable Second Official Member responsible for Legal Administration.

Hon. David F. Ballantyne: Mr. Speaker, what I said earlier was my understanding. I do not have control over these accounts; therefore, I would have to ask the person who does have the control to be able to answer that question definitively. I have no reason to believe that it was not.

The Speaker: The Second Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman.

Mr. Lyndon L. Martin: Can the Honourable Second Official Member indicate if the entire amount of $4.5-$5 million including the $30,000 was received in monetary terms or was some of it in assets and/or equipment?

The Speaker: The Honourable Second Official Member responsible for Legal Administration.

Hon. David F. Ballantyne: Mr. Speaker, it is my understanding that these were monetary payments. I emphasise, it is my understanding. I will confirm that. I am not aware of any payment in kind.

The Speaker: The Second Elected Member for West Bay.

Mr. Rolston M. Anglin: Can the Honourable Member say whether any of the monies referred to in this account were used as part of any operations by the Drugs Task Force?

The Speaker: The Honourable Second Official Member responsible for Legal Administration.

Hon. David F. Ballantyne: Mr. Speaker, I do not have any knowledge of the activities of the Drugs Task Force, so I cannot say whether or not they were used for any of their operations. I am of the general understanding that monies in the shared assets category are intended for use for law enforcement purposes, so, it is possible.

The Speaker: The Second Elected Member for West Bay.

Mr. Rolston M. Anglin: I get the feeling that we may be asking the wrong Member these questions since a lot of these questions involve the police. Be that as it may, can the Member say what internal controls are in place to ensure that the amounts collected confer with what was actually received? More importantly, who would be ultimately responsible to ensure whether or not the amounts received are what should have been received?

The Speaker: The Honourable Second Official Member responsible for Legal Administration.

Hon. David F. Ballantyne: The amounts that should have been received are the amounts agreed on a case by case basis, certainly under the MLAT. It would be a matter for the judiciary, or, to be more accurate for the Chief Justice (as the central authority under that treaty) to forward those funds as I understand happens. They would be accounted for within the treasury department of the Finance portfolio.

The Speaker: The Elected Member for East End.

Mr. V. Arden McLean: Does the Member know of any other way those monies received by the MLAT Authority have been set up in the country? Is there any other means of receiving any shared amounts from these confiscated goods?

The Speaker: The Honourable Second Official Member responsible for Legal Administration.

Hon. David F. Ballantyne: I am not aware of any other means of receiving these, although the issue is always under discussion. There is currently a proposal by another country to enter into a similar arrangement, probably in connection with mutual legal assistance arrangements. This would reflect the fact that these are usually payments made by way of contribution in recognition of assistance provided by the CI authorities.

The answer is that I am not aware of any other arrangement, Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: The Third Elected Member for Bodden Town.

Mr. Anthony S. Eden: Can the Honourable Member say if this is the same account that was at one time known as the Drug Asset Confiscation Account?

The Speaker: The Honourable Second Official Member responsible for Legal Administration.

Hon. David F. Ballantyne: I am reliably informed that it is.

The Speaker: The Fourth Elected Member for West Bay.

Mr. Cline A. Glidden, Jr.: Mr. Speaker, I know it has been said that we might be asking the wrong questions, but since we have the three Official Members in attendance it is possible that –

The Speaker: I would remind you that this question is directed to the Second Official Member.

Mr. Cline A. Glidden, Jr.: Yes, Mr. Speaker, in looking at his answer, there is one amount given to him from the Mutual Legal Assistance Authority (MLAT). There is also another amount that I find a bit worrying. It says that the Chief Superintendent in charge of the Drugs Task Force confirmed that approximately $30,000 has been received. What checks and balances go into place when monies are received? We have one figure from the Authority, and another figure from the Chief Superintendent of money supposedly owed. Another question was if there was any other way of collecting these funds. The answer was not that the Official Member was aware. It is obvious to me that we have an authority collecting funds, and the Chief Superintendent of the Drugs Task Force collecting funds as well.

I wonder if the Honourable Member can give us the information now, or an undertaking to provide the information, as to whose responsibility it actually is to collect these funds that are part of this account.

Another reason for asking this question is that as a member of the Public Accounts Committee I wonder who would be responsible as the controlling officer for audit purposes of that account.

The Speaker: The Honourable Second Official Member responsible for Legal Administration.

Hon. David F. Ballantyne: When I answered the question earlier about not being aware of any other mechanism, I meant other than the answers given here. I did not mean other than the MLAT. The answer, in relation to the Drugs Task Force, has been provided to give us as complete an answer as I can give.

To answer the question as to how funds received by the Drugs Task Force are controlled, I would need to refer that matter to one of my official colleagues. I will undertake to provide an answer to that question in order to satisfy concerns about funds received. My own knowledge is limited to the MLAT, but the other matter was included for the sake of completeness. I have no reason to believe those monies are not properly controlled, but I do not have personal knowledge of those controls because the police force does not come within my sphere of responsibility.

The Speaker: The Second Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. Alden M. McLaughlin, Jr.: The Honourable Member said that monies collected are paid into a segregated account. Can he tell us what the current balance of that account is?

The Speaker: I think that is outside the ambit of this question, but if the Honourable Second Official Member responsible for Legal Administration wishes to reply, he may.

Hon. David F. Ballantyne: It is outside the ambit of the question and also outside the ambit of my knowledge. I would have to ask that my colleague the Third Official Member assist me in providing a written answer to that, which I am quite happy to provide.

The Speaker: The Second Elected Member for West Bay.

Mr. Rolston M. Anglin: The Second Official Member stated that certain monies had been used out of this account. Can he say what the intention is in terms of these monies? Under the MLAT or any other law is there any clear definition as to exactly what these funds can be used for?

The Speaker: The Honourable Second Official Member responsible for Legal Administration.

Hon. David F. Ballantyne: So far, as I am aware there is no definition in the law, but, in the asset sharing agreement, there is an understanding that these funds will be used for law enforcement purposes.

The Speaker: The Second Elected Member for West Bay.

Mr. Rolston M. Anglin: Can the Honourable Member refer to the amount collected by the Central Authority? What type of operations or cases are we talking about? Are they drug operations? How are these funds derived?

The Speaker: The Honourable Second Official Member responsible for Legal Administration.

Hon. David F. Ballantyne: I would have to obtain that detailed information from the Central Authority, but I will endeavour to do so and provide an answer.

The Speaker: The Third Elected Member for Bodden Town.

Mr. Anthony S. Eden: Can the Honourable Member say if at one time it was considered that the drug demand reduction and rehabilitation would be one of the areas these funds would be concentrated on?

The Speaker: The Honourable Second Official Member responsible for Legal Administration.

Hon. David F. Ballantyne: I am not aware of that, but it is possible. Again, some research will be needed to know whether or not that was the case. Perhaps it predated my involvement. I am aware that under MLAT it is an understanding that funds would be used for law enforcement purposes. I do not know if there is any other interpretation that has been applied to that in the past. No doubt, some enquiry can be made because there will be evidence of any withdrawal from that fund and the use to which it was put.

Perhaps the simple way to deal with the issues is to provide details of the cases in which funds have been forfeited and any details as to the uses to which those funds have been put.

The Speaker: The Second Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. Alden M. McLaughlin, Jr.: Can the Honourable Member say who is responsible for the administration of this fund and in particular, who decides on how the money in the fund is spent and what it is spent on?

The Speaker: The Honourable Second Official Member responsible for Legal Administration.

Hon. David F. Ballantyne: As mentioned earlier, and as confirmed by the Third Official Member, the deposit account is maintained in the treasury department of the Finance portfolio, so, in that sense, it is administered by the portfolio of Finance. In the sense of who approved disbursements from the fund, in my experience, these matters are referred by means of a paper to Executive Council.

The Speaker: Two additional supplementaries.
The Second Elected Member for West Bay.

Mr. Rolston M. Anglin: It is obvious from some of the questions asked that a number of these matters relate to amounts from overseas.—

The Speaker: You will turn this into a question?

Mr. Rolston M. Anglin: Yes, Mr. Speaker.
Can the Honourable Member say, of the $30,000 reported by the chief superintendent of the drugs task force, how many drug operations this would have involved?

The Speaker: The Honourable Second Official Member responsible for Legal Administration.

Hon. David F. Ballantyne: I do not know how many operations this relates to. I am not party to the information about these amounts being paid in. It would be my understanding that it was paid in through police channels. The information was provided in order to give a complete picture. I can ask, through the First Official Member, for details if it was one operation or two. If details of cases are being provided, I will undertake to provide those details both for the MLAT cases and for any police cases so the Member can have the answer to that question.

The Speaker: Final supplementary.
The Elected Member for East End.

Mr. V. Arden McLean: It is obvious that the Second Official Member genuinely cannot answer a lot of these questions. Can he direct us to where we can get these answers? I know he has given a number of undertakings to try to get some replies in writing, but can he direct us as to how to get these questions resolved other than those he has undertaken to reply to?

The Speaker: The Honourable Second Official Member responsible for Legal Administration.

Hon. David F. Ballantyne: This is a difficulty because it covers matters that are outside my portfolio, although I am answerable in the House for matters pertaining to the judiciary, and quite happy to maintain the undertakings that I have given and supply the information.

I will say that, if any Member has outstanding questions following the supply of that information, I invite them to take it up with me, and if I do not have the answers, I will get the answers for them.

The Speaker: That concludes Question Time for this morning.

Moving on to item 5, Government Business, Bills. Continuation of Debate on the Throne Speech, delivered by His Excellency the Governor on Friday 9 March 2001, together with the Budget Address delivered by the Honourable Third Official Member on Wednesday 21 March 2001.

The Fourth Elected Member for West Bay continuing.

GOVERNMENT BUSINESS

BILLS

SECOND READING

THE APPROPRIATION BILL, 2001

DEBATE ON THE THRONE SPEECH, DELIVERED BY HIS EXCELLENCY THE GOVERNOR ON FRIDAY 9 MARCH 2001

TOGETHER WITH

THE BUDGET ADDRESS DELIVERED BY THE HONOURABLE THIRD OFFICIAL MEMBER ON WEDNESDAY 21 MARCH 2001

(Continuation of debate thereon)

Mr. Cline A. Glidden, Jr.: Thank you, Mr. Speaker
On Monday, I spoke on the state of affairs of our nation. I spoke a bit on the judiciary, the portfolio of Internal and External Affairs, the ongoing situation at the prison, problems we were having with the police and the need for more parental and community support for police officers.

I also touched on the immigration issue which presently exists, the unresolved situation as to long-term residents and the discussion on the rollover. I talked a bit about the ongoing business here at the Legislative Assembly in our move to become more in line with the electronic age.

When I was finishing up, I spoke about the Personnel Department and the need for a succession and business planning to strike a balance in the Caymanianisation of the Civil Service. I also spoke about our Budget and the fact that the Honourable Third Official Member said that we were spending some 4 percent more during 1996 to 2000 in our expenditure than we were receiving through our revenue, which put us in a position—

The Speaker: Please do not repeat too much of what you have said. Repetition is not in order.

Mr. Cline A. Glidden, Jr.: Thank you.
Moving right along, I would like to start with the Portfolio of Legal Affairs.

I was happy to have received answers to my questions to the Second Official Member concerning the asset confiscation fund and the fact that we have collected some $4 to $5 million. I look forward to further clarification of the questions he has undertaken to answer.

When we look at the Portfolio of Legal Affairs we see a significant increase in the Budget. Upon questioning I have come to find out that we are increasing the area of the financial reporting unit significantly. It has increased in size to some seventeen members and we understand that is due in part to some ongoing activities which the Department has had to get deeply involved in. We accept that in light of the present situation, on a worldwide basis when it comes to financial sectors and our position as an offshore financial destination, it is very important for us to be seen to have been proactive in the regulation of our financial affairs.

I think it is a step in the right direction to make sure we are in line, and the world can see that we are prepared to do our part to be responsible partners in the international finances of the World. My only concern, when looking at the size of the financial reporting unit, was that, with the big increase in size, there does not seem to be as many Caymanians in that department as I would like to see. We see that three of those seventeen are Caymanian, and two more have Caymanian connections. It is a bit disappointing to me that a new section of the Government that will involve quite a bit of training was not able to attract more Caymanians.

As far as the constables are concerned, my understanding is that they are at the lower end. Even the police recruiting department were not able to get Caymanians—we have five from the UK. I would really like to see an attempt made to use some of our local constables and provide them with the training to go along with the development of this new area in our financial reporting unit.

I voiced concerns with some areas of the Budget; this is one of them. There is an increase of some 31 percent in expenditure over the 2000 actual. When there is need for financial prudence and there is a 31 percent increase . . . even though I know it is the financial reporting unit increases, I look forward to getting more answers during Finance Committee.

I want to mention the Internal Audit Unit (IAU). The Public Accounts Committee (PAC) had some dealings with the members of this unit. I am happy to say that we have a very capable Internal Audit Unit and that great strides are being made in the work of that unit.

I would now like to move on to the Monetary Authority. There is major expansion going on. Again, it is good to see that we are being proactive in our steps to meet the international compliance issues. I know we have been given the undertaken by the very young capable Caymanian manager of that authority, as to the far-reaching attempts to attract as many Caymanians as possible to fill the expansion areas required in the Authority.

I have a bit of concern as to how this additional expense is going to be recouped from the financial industry. I know there is a general feeling in the populace of these islands that the financial services sector does not pay its part. Now, with increased costs due to financial obligations, there is a concern as to how the costs are going to be managed. In one of the briefings we had with the Third Official Member, we were made to understand that the banks headquartered in the Cayman Islands fall under our responsibility as a Territory. Whereas the banks that are only branches with head offices located in other jurisdictions, which are classed by the Organisation for Economic Co-operation and Development (OECD) as being compliant, are mainly responsible to their head-offices.

It indicated to us that it is more our responsibility for regulating banks headquartered here in the Cayman Islands. Thus, the regulation process will be more of a financial strain on the resources of the Authority. I assume the Authority is looking at ways and means to balance the additional costs for banks headquartered here as opposed to those with branch offices here. We look forward to the total independence of the Monetary Authority.

I know attempts are being made to get a bit more from the financial industry without making us less competitive in this highly competitive market.

Last year, a motion was passed in this House with an undertaking given by the Third Official Member to investigate the possibility of a reduction of interest rates charged by banks. When we discuss the high cost of living in Cayman, and look for the justification of these high costs, the most significant reason is the high cost of money in the Cayman Islands. The undertaking by the Third Official Member to look at the interest rates and agreements with our utility companies is very much needed at this time of economic hardship in the Cayman Islands.

There is a genuine need for clarification as to why our institutions are at 12 percent for long term 30-year mortgages when other areas of the world are charging 6.7 percent. During a time when things are obviously getting tighter it is becoming harder to balance, not only our country's budget, but our people's budgets also. It is imperative for the powers that be look to provide whatever easement they can.

There have been discussions about funds from defunct companies. I was pleased to note that there was some money available to the Cayman Islands Government, due to the fact that companies struck off the register have exceeded the period of time defined in the law and the assets can now be claimed by government. Hopefully those funds will assist us in this time of hardship.

When we talk about looking for new ways to raise revenue, we know that the most commonly used method has been to increase duties. I know the previous administration talked about the effect the increases will have on the common people in these Islands. I cannot say that I am happy with the new revenue measures. In a country where our revenue base is limited, and looking at the current situation, I think the attempts made were a genuine attempt to try to get the required revenue without causing too much pain and hardship on the small people.

We have seen the proposed increase, replacing the duty on bakery products. I noticed that bread was intentionally left out. I think the replacement of that duty was very well thought out and from the feedback I have received from the general public, it has been accepted. This is due to the fact that when the previous administration removed duty from these products the benefits derived by the consumer were almost nil. When the duties were removed, the people saw no difference in the cost of their goods when shopping at the supermarket.

Even though it was a genuine attempt by the previous administration to allay some of the hardship, if the consumer does not see any difference (but the Government saw a difference in $12 million in revenue not received) it means it went into the pockets of the suppliers. That attempt to assist the common people was not successful. It only achieved an under-performance in revenue. If that $12 million had been received, we would have been in a much better position at the end of 2000. So, when I support the increase in duty on bakery products, it is not easy to do, but in light of what has transpired I see no justification to not allow government to collect $12 million if the people are not recognising any savings.

When I first saw the duty on water, I wondered why we would want to make it dutiable. It was then brought to my attention that wholesalers bring in bottled water duty free. When the Caymanian companies try to make a living from bottling water locally, they are charged 20 percent duty for their imported bottles. Instead of encouraging the Caymanian entrepreneurs, we were encouraging the wholesalers. I see this duty not only as a revenue measure but also as an attempt at levelling the playing field. Government must encourage our local entrepreneurs and not disadvantage them by making it more difficult to be in business in Cayman.

I found it very troubling when I got a call from one of my constituents saying that I should not support the proposed duty on wave runners because he was planning to buy one. I realise that some of our people only look at their personal needs, not those of the country. With the number of wave runners and other watercraft brought here and not used by our local fishermen, but used by major businesses for rental machines, I see no reason why we should not be collecting a duty on these items.

I have some questions concerning the budget, but knowing the position the country is facing I have no option but to support the new measures put in place. Even though I would prefer to not see any new revenue measures, I also understand the reality of the situation.

I would now like to move on to the Ministry of Education, Human Resources and Culture. We all recognise the importance of having a capable and modern education system. I know the Minister has quite a challenge to turn around some of the problems. He is off to a good start. I want to commend him on his tabling of the Millett Report. Even though the report was received over one year ago by the previous government, there was some reason why it was never tabled. After seeing the report I realised why they wished it not to be made public—it is a damaging report. I fully understand why any Minister who was responsible for what was contained in that report would want to ensure that no one else saw the report. I am happy to see that the new Minister, in a very proactive way, has taken on that report as the way forward to improve the existing system.

I was happy to see that Government asked the Second Elected Member for Bodden Town to chair the Committee in the Education Ministry. The Committee was looking at reasons for the lack of Caymanian involvement in our education system. I think that is a good indication of the partnership this Government is proposing in using all resources available, regardless of what side or political differences, in an effort to obtain the best education system and, hopefully, the best the country can provide.

All the young people in this country deserve government's encouragement, and that of their parents, the schools and the local employment community, to see that they have opportunities to pursue. Parents are concerned about many issues including literacy and numeracy; government needs to respond to that. I suggest that we need testing at the various schools to allow parents to make choices about the education of their children, and to also encourage the schools to excel. Information must be publicly aired.

One cry we all made during the campaign and in this House is for vocational training. Vocational training played a very important part in my life. It is near and dear to me. When I finished school, I was fortunate enough to have been employed by the local communications company who at that time seemed to have been very keen on training the local Caymanian. Any time the name "Cable & Wireless" was mentioned, it was also said that they provide a lot of training for Caymanians. They were very much respected for that. I am happy to say that I was one who was able to benefit from the training provided.

It appears that mentality has changed, but I do stress the need for vocational training. We all agree that our present education system caters wholly and solely to academics, and that a huge percentage of our young people are left out, and fall through the cracks in the system.

Even though we have not addressed vocational education, other institutions, like the one referred to in the newspaper, International Correspondence School, offers distance learning. I know many of our Caymanians have taken up that opportunity. But I feel that we should have more emphasis placed in our high schools and our Community College for the provision of vocational training.

We have some problems with discipline in our primary schools. I know the Minister is working diligently with those schools because I visited one of the primary schools with him.

I recall getting a call from one of our primary schools. They were having a problem with kids breaking into the school. Upon investigation, we found that some 5th graders were caught breaking into the school. When asked how they gained entry, they explained that in their science department they had worked with the theory of how metal expands when heated. They used lighters and torches to heat the window frames, allowing the frame to expand so they could remove the windowpane. There is no question that our young people are capable of moving forward, but it is important that at the age when they are being moulded, that we are able to mould that energy, that level of sophistication and intelligence in a positive direction.

There is also a need for adult education. There are many instances where the bumps in the road have knocked our young adults off their desired path. For whatever reason, they have not progressed to the level they would like to. We need to make sure that we allow those people who now realise the need they were unable to address during their education years, to have a productive adult life.

Another area I think is important to address, is the labour need in Cayman. We need to do a better job of steering people in the direction to fill some of those needs. We also need to place more emphasis on Information Technology (IT) training.

We need to work on providing incentives for doing good. Much is made of the ones who have got into trouble, but the time has come for us to offer support and encouragement for the majority of our young people who are doing well.

The Second Elected Member for Bodden Town mentioned how easy it is to get a scholarship in Cayman. We have to question whether we have made it too easy, which has caused complacency. I have full confidence that the Minister of Education will utilise his resources and the critique on the Millett Report to improve our education system.

Moving on—

The Speaker: If you are moving on to another subject, I think it would be a convenient time for the morning break. We shall suspend for 15 minutes, but I ask all Honourable Members to please come back in 15 minutes.

PROCEEDINGS SUSPENDED AT 11.35 AM

PROCEEDINGS RESUMED AT 12.02 PM

The Speaker: Please be seated.

Honourable Members, I must express my disappointment. I asked that we return to this Chamber within 15 minutes. It has exceeded 30! I ask for cooperation if we are to ever get this session concluded.

Debate continues on the Throne Speech and Budget Address.

The Fourth Elected Member for West Bay continuing.

Mr. Cline A. Glidden, Jr.: Thank you.

I would like to move on to the area of human resources.

We realise that we need a very skilled labour force if we are going to be competitive. If we do not invest in the vocational skills so important to our future, particularly in the fast growing service areas, how are we going to provide jobs for the young people leaving the education system? I think it is important that we work towards building a national training system into some of our industries which will play a critical role in establishing Caymanian businesses, services and products as leaders in the worldwide market.

Quality training is about equipping people with skills and then matching that with the needs of employers. In doing some research, I read about some apprenticeship systems used in other developing countries that work as a partnership between government and employers. As in most cases, it requires government to step in and assist with the financial burden associated with training. As we know, training is a major issue in Cayman. There is much discussion about the fact that people prefer to import labour than train our own. I think government should look at incorporating an apprenticeship system even if it has to assist with some of the payments.

We would like to achieve a system where employers can place emphasis on a greater level of training involving the trainees in the earlier part of their development to enable those skills to be accumulated and thus make it possible for those qualifications and credentials to be obtained. We could ask employers to pay for the productive time of young trainees, and government will make a contribution to top up the salary to make sure it meets the required wages.

It is important for us to recognise that the concept of training is not solely about the trainee. We need providers of training, but we need employers willing to participate in that structure as well.

In the hospitality industry, as in many other service industries, there is no traditional apprenticeship. Past administrations really did nothing for apprenticeship. We need to introduce a regime where industry is encouraged to work with training providers to get accredited training programmes in place, and to provide new apprenticeships in industries where new job opportunities are available for the people of this country. Apprenticeships will help young people achieve a rewarding career.

This is all about getting young people into jobs that they find satisfying and rewarding. Employers will see their business become more productive and competitive if they take on an apprentice, especially in the new apprenticeship framework I was referring to. As part of this scheme employers would only be paying for the productive part of the time the apprentice is employed while gaining the benefits of that productive time.

It is attractive for business to pay for productive time and have government step in to support these new trainees with a top-up of income, so that the trainee can enjoy at least the required wage for survival. To achieve this, the Government must make a long-term commitment to training the young people of Cayman so that our companies and small businesses, micro-business in particular, can continue to be great contributors to our country. We must ensure that training is demand-driven as far as possible, with employers selecting the training that meets their business needs.

We have heard of plans to change the existing Labour Office. We know there are some deficiencies there. In my dealing with the Labour Office I have found that we have some very capable Caymanians, but there are some serious restrictions that they are working with. Some of them are space constraints, but there is also the obvious need to change the legislation, that being our Labour Law. I am happy to know that one of the private members' motions coming to this House is for a review of the Labour Law. I was also pleased to hear the Minister's commitment to agree to that review.

The two cases recently in court were of very significant concern. We lost them because of inadequacies and loopholes existing in our current Labour Law. At a time when there seems to be much difficulty in our labour market it is imperative that we have an up-to-date Labour Law where both employees and employers will be enabled to come to an agreement.

I now move on to the Ministry of Community Development, Women's Affairs, Youth and Sports.

Social problems increase when we raise the cost of living to provide services to our people. The social problems continue to outpace the amount of money that can be collected from our current revenue measures; this is similar to what has happened over the last four years from a financial standpoint, where expenditure has outpaced revenue. Then we reach a crisis such as we have now.

There has been a need for some time to expand the Golden Age Home in West Bay. I know it might not be achievable in this coming financial year, but I look forward to the Minister's support that all attempts will be made in the not-too-distant future to address some of the expansion needs in that centre.

I was disappointed, during question time a few days ago, to hear of the state of the Sunrise Centre in West Bay. That centre was started some fifteen years ago as a temporary facility that was to be replaced in two years. Now fifteen years later, at a time when we brag of how wealthy Cayman is going through the economic boom we went through for the past ten years, and to still have a facility that was only worthy of being classified as a temporary facility some 15 years ago, it is a downright shame and a very clear indication of where the emphasis has been placed by previous administrations. It is obvious the emphasis is not on those people who are in such need.

It is frightening to know that we have a facility housing people with special needs, many dependent on others for the very basic functions of daily life. That centre does not meet our building or safety requirements. We basically have a catastrophe waiting to happen. I know that it was not this current Government's fault; it is a situation they have inherited. I plead with them to urgently attempt to address this issue now that it has been brought to our attention. It would be a great injustice for us to wait until a tragedy occurs before something is done.

I want to talk briefly about the notion of have's and have-nots. It is something that we have to be very careful of because we are developing a society where a large number of people (a number which is growing all the time) are becoming either unemployed or very barely employed. Then, on the other side of the coin, we have people who are doing very well from the system.

I had a very interesting letter sent to me recently about this concept, and how we are promoting the situation where there are large numbers of unemployed or barely employed and very much at the margin of survival. However, on the other side people are very well off. I do not think the situation can continue without our suffering as a country, and also suffering in the eyes of the international community.

We have to ask ourselves if the underlying values in our community and the belief in ourselves are strong enough to create the ethos to fight and risk death to defend, or are we too despondent to care? What is the cause of this despair?

I suggest that we need to look back at the creation of the welfare state. In an attempt to put up a safety net, but also in an attempt to get re-elected, we have created a security blanket which many people refuse to give up. We have bred an entitlement mentality, a culture of dependency. We know this assertion of rights without cultivating responsibility is destructive of cohesion in society and ultimately destroys the individual as well. I believe in a more liberal philosophy that asserts the worth of each individual. Liberals declare a society is only just if it respects the rights of each individual and what is sometimes forgotten is that we require each individual to do the same. In doing so, we build a society built on an intricate web of rights and responsibilities.

I know it is not possible to wave a magic wand and have Social Services expenditure disappear entirely. Unless anyone thinks I am some sort of anti-assistance politician, I also believe that there are a lot of Caymanians in genuine need, and that there is an obligation on all of us to provide for those who cannot take care of themselves. However, the safety net is not intended to be a comfortable hammock swung across two palm trees swaying gently in the breeze.

It is a national disgrace that some of our people choose to not work, instead of working in what they see as menial jobs. I know of many Caymanian mothers who worked in condominiums and hotels cleaning floors and bathrooms, but that seems to be a thing of the past; that was for the older generation. The new culture states that it is better to apply to Social Services for assistance than to take some of the jobs that we see as being below us.

This culture of conceited superiority is really one of childish, selfish dependency on others. I would like to say to these and other young people of the Cayman Islands that the measure of your worth is not where you start in life, but where you end.

My concern about the ease with which people get and retain social service assistance is more about the impact it has on their self worth than the impact it has on our federal budget. It used to be that our social service system provided temporary financial support while people got back on their feet. Now, it seems to be a lifelong entitlement and once people get it they think they are entitled to it forever.

As citizens, we expect that those in receipt of social service benefits should do something to reduce or remove their reliance on government. The term "work fair" was coined in the US to refer to the concept of reciprocal obligations associated with the receipt of welfare benefits. By and large most countries have implemented schemes designed to coax people into work and away from benefits.

More has to be done to encourage the positive aspect of self-reliance and entrepreneurship.. These are not new concepts. In 1945 Robert Menzies said, "Only from genuinely free, progressive, diligent and encouraged individuals can a really powerful nation be built."

We see, in many cases, men not taking responsibility for their children. Dead-beat fathers cause a burden on Social Services. Men have to accept responsibility. The burden of raising those children falls on our society, and in many instances, society does not do a good job.

Fathers have a responsibility. We, as legislators, also have a responsibility to ensure that fathers who do not voluntarily accept their responsibility are forced to accept it. I wish to congratulate the organisers of the Thousand-Man March that we are looking forward to this evening. I hope it is well supported. I look forward to offering my support as well.

Another subject of grave concern is the area of Women's Affairs. During Question Time it was sad-dening to hear that such a high percentage of crimes committed in the Cayman Islands were committed against women. Society has forced women to work two and three jobs in many cases.

And we have heard that for every action there is an equal and opposite reaction. The reaction we see from the stresses placed on today's family is a great breakdown of the family structure that was once so strong. I think one way we can move forward in attempting to encourage family bonding is to look at what other countries are doing.

I have spoken to the Minister responsible, and there is some possibility of starting Day Care centres at places of employment. It is important that government leads from the front. I am sure that if we were to set an example and encourage our mothers I would hope that the private sector would follow suit and get involved as well. So, I encourage the Minister to investigate the possibilities of changing some of the existing policies and look at new and innovative methods.

I also know that there is a lack of equality in jobs and unfair remuneration payments. We hear of many instances where women are paid less than men for an equal day's work. We have to try to ensure that these situations are few and far between. The Scandinavian countries have realised the need for family bonding. They encourage flexible working systems that allow wives to work an additional hour or so a day allowing them to work four days rather than five so they can have an additional day to spend with their family.

[interjection]

Mr. Cline A. Glidden, Jr.: I am reminded by the Minister that she is also investigating the possibility of paternity leave.

I now turn to Youth. It is disheartening to see our present situation in terms of our youth. I have to ask whether our young people have a sense of self-worth and respect for the worth of others. Record levels of youth crime suggest that they do not. If we ask if our young people have confidence, survey after survey suggests that they do not. Do they have self-reliance? They look to others, whether it is to government, businesses or parents, to solve their problems. The country's problems or indeed the world's problems, suggests they do not.

A veil of hopelessness has descended on many of our young people as they look to drugs to create the psychedelic illusion of a better place or merely to dull the senses so the monotony is more bearable.

Mr. Speaker, I say that the most important task this country faces begins with our children, our young people—our future. Parents, the education system and community leaders must take on the responsibility of inculcating our children with a sense of self-worth and personal obligation to society. It is out of such values that optimism and commitment to self-improvement are born.

A few weeks ago, there was a group of High School students on a tour of this Legislative Assembly. I asked them what they saw as the major issues affecting Cayman. They replied: drug use, youth murder, homelessness, and poverty. My eight-year-old nephew worries about environmental degradation. My ten-year-old niece worries about escalating crime. What happened to the innocence of youth?

Our young people deserve hope. Modern Western society is regarded as the pinnacle of human development and progress. Surely, we can do better than having our children living in poverty and a lot of our people dependent on government.

As we look to the proposed Budget, we can start admitting that the time of big government with hand-outs for all is over. We need to look to ourselves first and develop again those values that our sea-faring forefathers so epitomised when they made the ultimate sacrifice—self-reliance and courage and confidence—recognising the inherent worth of each individual, and loyalty to one's nation.

There is no greater challenge facing this country than the development and encouragement of our young people, to nurture these values in their lives. I commit myself, through the course of my parliamentary career and beyond, to relentlessly pursue this end.

I am happy to see that our Government is implementing with a degree of urgency the Youth Commission. For far too long the solution has been to ignore the problem hoping that it will go away. Not so long ago, I remember hearing the former Minister of Education stating that Cayman did not have a gang problem, that we only had "groups." Now, the evidence has proven that not only do we have gang problems, but we also have serious negative gang activities.

I look forward to the Youth Commission of Enquiry using all resources available to them. The appointed chairman is a Member of the so-called Opposition, but I am glad that whether it is "Government" or "Opposition" the Government's stance is that the best person for the job should do the job. I say once again that it shows great foresight and it gives me great encouragement to see that things have changed in this Legislative Assembly. The emphasis is no longer on whom one supports, but it has moved to how we can best achieve the needs of the people of the Cayman Islands. I think that is definitely a step in the right direction and I pledge my support to the Youth Commission.

I now move on to the Ministry of Planning, Communications and Works, starting with the Department of Agriculture (DOA). Very quickly after taking office we had the international concern about the Hoof and Mouth disease. Our capable Minister and the capable staff of the DOA have taken the required measures to protect our fragile agriculture in Cayman.

There were questions of overkill when action was taken, but I am happy to see that when the hard decisions had to be taken that our Government stood up and took those decisions. They have so far proved to be the right decisions necessary to protect us from this dreadful disease plaguing the world.

I now move to the Department of Environmental Health. I look first at the solid waste management and the landfill. I would like to read an email that was sent to me in February concerning some activity at the landfill. It says: "I was made aware this afternoon of a disturbing incident that occurred today at the landfill. I think that someone in authority needs to be informed, if not involved. We were at the treatment works this afternoon examining the septic truckers' unloading station when we observed a tanker discharging waste oil into the landfill. This was at the top of the mound where material is currently being land filled.

"I phoned the acting landfill manager to report this to him, and he explained that they were aware of the situation but it was not exactly as it appeared. It seems that one of the waste management companies had a load of waste oil that was contaminated. This made it exempt from pure waste oil that the landfill collects and sends to Florida for recycling.

"The company that does the waste management stated that he had approximately five hundred gallons of the substance. The decision was made to dig a containment area which was lined with polyplastic sheeting and the waste oil would be pumped off and stored in the open area while testing was being done.

"The acting landfill manager also stated that if the substance was not contaminated with any hazardous substances they were considering mixing some of the liquid portion with shredded paper and incinerating it. This unloading is what we observed.

"The acting landfill manager went on to state that the waste management company brought in a total of three tankers and discharged an excessive (quantity unknown) amount and overfilled the lined containment area. He stated that they now have a fair amount of this waste petroleum product leaching directly into the landfill.

"He stated that because there was a weak or non-existent legislation defining what is hazardous waste, compared to what is not, the landfill often had to deal with some poorly planned events to the best of their ability. Is there some mechanism in the law whereby the person who generated this oil would be compelled to pay for proper hazardous material disposal in the event the landfill was not equipped to deal with such waste?"

I thanked the individual for sending me this, and I plan to pass it along to the Minister responsible. When we talk about leakage of oil and petroleum products into our landfill, and we have already been made aware of the proximity of the landfill in relation to our treasured North Sound, it is obviously of great concern. I have no doubt that the Minister will investigate.

I now move to the Planning Department. I see that the Department has started with a series of district meetings. Planning is critically important to our country, especially in the absence of a defined growth management plan. They are the only control we have in place to attempt to control over development of our country.

I know the Minister is actively researching new building space for government. I have heard of discussions of the possibility of increasing building heights. I say with the cost of land, the limited availability, and the pace of development, space could be better utilised if we were able to build higher. I think the time has come in our development when we need the proactive and visionary type of government that will recognise the need. Of course, there will be opposition but when government pays some $5 million per year on rental space, it is obvious that there is a need for additional space; but we know some of the restrictions will be related to the cost of land. I look to the Minister coming forward with some proposals as to how we can overcome these obstacles.

I will now move on to the Public Works Department (PWD). I know there are many challenges facing the Minister and the Department. One of those is the road section of PWD. Upon the new Minister taking over this responsibility, he entered into discussions concerning the staffing requirements and existing staff levels at PWD. If memory serves me correctly, he explained that he found a situation of gross overstaffing in the road section.

Any time we look at staffing, it is very ticklish. It is always easy to hire staff, but the laying off is a touchy situation. I cannot help but mention how irresponsible it was prior to the last elections to employ some 505 members in a section requiring 65 staff. We know how the system works during Election time—anyone who goes to his politician looking for employment is sent in many instances to PWD in an attempt to earn political favours for the upcoming election.

My understanding is that the Minister has gone about the tedious task of trying to identify where the excess employment is occurring in an attempt to streamline the Government's expense to a more satisfactory level.

I was also happy to hear from the members of the road section that the labour cost for our roads has decreased significantly. We are at a stage where the cost for roads is worked out to a ratio of 80:20 material to labour. When we talk about the need for government to operate as efficiently as possible, I think we are headed in the right direction with the road section. I know there is a lot of criticism about what happened in the last twelve months. I was not surprised to hear that the road section members were given X amount of money leading up to the November 2000 election, and told to spend and spread it around to make as many people as possible happy.

I want to remind the general public that even though it was the road section of PWD doing the work, their orders came from above.

The Speaker: I think this is a convenient time to take the lunch break. I want to remind the present speaker that he has 28 minutes remaining. When we resume at 2.15 pm I ask the next speaker to be prepared to begin. I shall re-enter this Chamber at 2.15 pm and I ask Honourable Members to provide me with a quorum.

We shall now suspend until 2.15 pm.

PROCEEDINGS SUSPENDED AT 12.48 PM

PROCEEDINGS RESUMED AT 2.15 PM

The Speaker: Please be seated.

During the break we audited the Member's time. He actually has 35 minutes left.

The Fourth Elected Member for West Bay continuing his debate on the second reading of the Appropriation Bill 2001.

Mr. Cline A. Glidden, Jr.: Mr. Speaker, thanks for the additional few minutes.

Moving on to the building section of PWD: I mentioned the need for fiscal prudence when it comes to PWD and the road section. I also have a similar concern for the building section. It is a well-known fact in Cayman that the cost of public buildings is much higher than in the private sector. There appears to be a few reasons for this.

Efficiency is a concern, but then when we look at the new school being built, the Lighthouse School a very necessary project. Outside the school I see some three or four different colour finishes. We know that adds to the cost. I was also informed that the cabinets for that school have seventeen different colours of Formica. Those kinds of extravagances are some of the reasons why we have such expensive buildings.

There are some very capable architects at PWD, but in an attempt to make their mark, there may be a lack of guidance. There seems to be quite a bit of extravagance—17 different colours of Formica! We know nothing could justify having that multicoloured.

When I heard of the classrooms at Savannah Primary costing some $1 million for four classrooms, I could not believe that was the way our Government funds were being spent. However, getting the information I did get, realising the wasteful spending, I see the need for further investigation. There should be a curtailment of the extravagant spending. I place that job into the hands of the newly appointed Minister for PWD.

That Minister has a difficulty, because he is also the Minister responsible for Cayman Airways. There has been much discussion on Cayman Airways, the potential problems and solutions. Cayman Airways is a very emotive subject and I am very loyal to the National Airline. We all have much affection for our so-called "Sir Turtle." However, it appears that the question of value for money is getting more pertinent in all of our discussions concerning Cayman Airways.

There are many solutions offered. There is much speculation as to the value and need for Cayman Airways. There are some ideas of outsourcing the maintenance department, or the reservations department. There are many pros and cons for all of those arguments. My position is that we should have reached the stage where we are getting the correct information. Upon receipt of that information, it is the duty of all elected Members to look at the facts as presented, and to make the decision we see as best suited for Cayman Airways, but more importantly for the Cayman Islands.

Even though some feel that the solution is getting a foreign carrier, thinking that the prices will automatically drop, we have a lot of indications in the region to show that when the local airline is no longer in business, it does not mean the prices will automatically drop.

We look at Turks and Caicos, which was the route that Cayman Airways flew. When the airline pulled out I think the fare doubled within one year. Take a very heavy tourism-based country like St. Lucia which had BWIA as well as American Airlines flying there. BWIA pulled out and American got the monopoly and not only did the price increase, but there was a demand made on the Government of St. Lucia because the route was not profitable and they had to subsidise the airline.

If a subsidy has to be given to an airline, I would prefer to give it to Cayman Airways. However, I also feel that the country has to get good value for money. There are so many unknowns; there is talk of a $4 million annual subsidy, sometimes it is a $6 million annual subsidy. People really do not know how much it is costing the country to have Cayman Airways.

Before we can make a decision to continue with the airline or not, we have to know the true figures. I was amazed to read a few days ago that not only does the Government give a subsidy, but every year the airline creates another debt of some $2 million divided between Civil Aviation and Customs. The trend of previous governments was to allow that debt to accumulate for a three year period and in 1999 with an accumulated debt of some $6 million, the government of the day decided to solve that situation with some creative accounting. They issued shares to the Cayman Islands Government in return for the debt. That shows that there was an additional $2 million subsidy each year.

The public does not have the true picture of what it is costing the country to support Cayman Airways. I look forward to seeing the independent report being prepared on Cayman Airways. I expect that as soon as that Report can be laid that the Members of this Honourable House will go about the task of making decisions as to what way to go with the future of Cayman Airways.

I now turn to the Ministry of Tourism, Environment & Transport. I look forward to working with the Minister. I think the time has come when we need a proactive and forward thinking Minister in the area of tourism. Evidence of that foresight is in the announcement of the commencement of one of the major tourism products in the Cayman Islands, that being the Ritz Carlton project.

I remember when the project was first talked about; Cayman was going through an economic boom. There was much criticism about the development; negativity almost stopped the project. Now, some three or four years later, when development has slowed down, we hear of construction being at an all time low. We also hear the sighs of relief when we see that the Ritz Carlton project has acquired financing from the largest bank in Europe, which has willingly made a commitment to the Cayman Islands, of some hundred and something million dollars to go forward with the project.

The timing could not have been any better. I want to remind all of the decision-makers that we not only have to look at what we have today, but to the future. Three years ago when everyone was kicking, screaming and talking about the mangroves and reasons for not having development, no one foresaw the slowdown in the economy. Now, three years later we welcome that project.

I was glad to hear that the Minister was looking at some potential of increased attractions. He spoke about expansion of the Cayman Turtle Farm, swim with the dolphins, he also spoke about the need to make Pedro Castle more self-sufficient.

There has been much talk about Pedro Castle. Not only were we misinformed about what the cost would be, but after it was built, we were also promised that it would pay for itself within some five or seven years. The reality of the situation is that it is costing us some $600,000 per year to subsidise it and keep it going. Even though we all criticised it, it is our duty to try to turn that attraction around and see that it gets to the stage where at least it is self-sufficient. I look forward to assisting the Minister to achieve that. We see some bold and innovative steps being taken by the Tourism Department in hopefully improving our summer tourism. The Minister has been very proactive in trying to improve the relationship that had deteriorated with the cruise ship industry. From all indications it appears that we are well on our way to the partnership we all look forward to with the cruise ship industry and Cayman.

We are working to get the facilities upgraded and getting more business for the local operators. The Minister has gotten the Land and Sea Co-op off the ground in an attempt to ensure that our local business people get their share of the proverbial pie.

Another issue of that Ministry is the environment. I know there is a concern about some of the marine conservation laws that are forthcoming. The general consensus is that we have to do something to protect our marine environment. Some of the measures may seem harsh, but I think through negotiation with the public we will be able to come to an acceptable agreement.

One other environmental concern I have is the situation concerning fill. For future development land that requires filling will become more of an issue. I was heartened to hear during discussions with one of the consultants that one recommendation would be to allow the quarrying to go deeper. There is a limitation presently, and we end up with very large footprints of land being quarried when we could have gone deeper and had a smaller footprint. If we go ten feet below sea level and the land has no more use at that stage, why limit it to that, and not allow it to go down 60 feet?

We know there are some areas where there is a concern for the water lens and there is a justification for the limitation on depth. I am glad to hear we are looking at alternate methods to provide fill for property.

I was made to understand that another method of getting fill is by importation. I also understand that we have decided to give a concession on the duty. When we are looking to increase our revenue base, and increasing taxes on food products, I have great difficulty with the fact that that we are removing duty on fill material.

I think we now have to look at collecting duties in areas where they can be afforded. If the logic is that, in an attempt to keep the cost of construction down, we are giving concessions on importation of fill, we have a duty to ensure that the duty is passed down to the industry. However, if we are giving a concession on the fill and the cost of that fill is the same as the fill provided here, we are achieving nothing except a shortfall in the revenues of the country.

Moving forward to the Port Authority, I am happy to hear that we are looking at the upgrade of the port facility in a way that is environmentally friendly; that will hopefully cost us less money. I am also happy to know that the Minister is looking at the possibility of using the port during off-peak hours to reduce congestion, and working with the cruise ship industry to increase our cruise ship facility.

Moving on to the Civil Aviation Authority, I am happy to see that we are in agreement on the improvement of the Little Cayman runway. I saw that the Cayman Brac runway paving is ongoing and should be completed ahead of schedule.

I heard the Minister mention a parallel taxi-way and also an extension of our existing runway and expansion of the terminal building.

I feel we have to place a priority for safety concerns on our airport expansion. Even though some people may feel that the terminal is not a priority, when we consider that it was built to accommodate some 400 passengers, and now it accommodates some 1,600 we have a safety issue as well as a quality issue. In a destination like the Cayman Islands which is so heavily dependent on tourism, it is important that we ensure both the first and the last impressions our tourists get is of quality. I support the Minister's endeavours of improving the airport.

I was happy to be involved with the new housing initiative in an attempt to assist Caymanians with the difficult task of owning their homes. I am happy to hear that there has been a new set of goals for the Agriculture Industrial Development Board (AIDB)/Housing Development Corporation. I look forward to continued information.

I am now moving on to the Ministry of Health and Information Technology. In the Throne Speech mention was made of the mental health and geriatric facility. We definitely need to be able to assist and take care of our elderly.

With what has been going on with Cable & Wireless, I know the Minister is going to have a very difficult time. However, the time has come for negotiations to take place with the telephone carrier that has a monopoly in the Cayman Islands. It is scary to see Cable & Wireless announcing lay-offs of trained technical staff, and then to know that Cable & Wireless is using a local company to hire staff from overseas, directing them in the business of hiring and firing. As such, the local company cannot even hire the trained staff Cable & Wireless laid off because, according to them, Cable & Wireless tells them who to hire and who to fire.

I am not sure how the negotiations have progressed, but I am challenging the Government of the day, and the Minister responsible for our link with Cable & Wireless to ensure that the employees who have been displaced by Cable & Wireless are hired. As the Elected Member for East End said, if there is going to be termination of employees of Cable & Wireless, it is our duty to ensure that the termination is of some of the work permit holders and, not the local trained staff.

If Cable & Wireless has 100 percent Caymanian employees and they have to lay off Caymanians, I have no choice but to accept that. But, I cannot accept laying off Caymanians and keeping the applications going and going for work permits. I put the challenge not only to the Minister, but to the Government of the day to ensure that this practice is brought to a speedy end. When we look at what is happening throughout the region the provisions are there for these negotiations to take place.

I look forward to the review of the Constitution. I found it very informative to have an audience with the Members of the Foreign and Commonwealth Office. I was disappointed that the FCO Member, Mr. John White was on these shores meeting with the private sector, but not with the Members of the Legislative Assembly. I hope that in some way this was an error and that these errors will not continue, and we will move forward with the correct protocols and respect. I look forward to working with the Constitutional Review Committee, assisting with presentations that will have to be made to the Caymanian populace before making any major changes to our Constitution.

In closing, ultimately a cohesive society is built on community interests, not single-minded selfishness. It is motivated by community spirit, not individual greed. That is the society I will strive to build as long as I am a Member of this Parliament.

I thank the people of West Bay. We are all here because of the trust and goodwill of the people. Our primary goal is to repay that trust with hard work, honesty and openness. I believe the true measure of a good Member is his or her ability and willingness to deal with people one on one, to realise that an individual's difficulties are often as significant as the community's. Our challenge is to always have one eye on the big picture while we extend our hand to assist our individual constituent's in need.

I look forward to working with my colleagues under the strong leadership of the Leader of Government Business to deliver our commitments which were supported and endorsed by the Caymanian people at the elections.

In the words of Robert F. Kennedy, "Few will have the greatness to bend history itself, but each of us can work to change a small portion of events. And the total of all of those acts will be written in the history of this generation." It is easy to look tall when you stand on the shoulders of giants.

As I end my first debate on the Throne Speech and Budget Address I am reminded of the incredible debt of gratitude I owe to many people.

I thank you, Mr. Speaker, the officers and staff of this Honourable House, and my colleagues for their gracious welcome and assistance. To my family and friends, I am conscious of the sacrifice you will make in the years ahead. I thank you all for your understanding, your love and support, which enabled me to stand in this place today.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for Education, Human Resources and Culture.

Hon. Roy Bodden: May I ask the Chair, if you would suspend proceedings for half an hour when the "1,000 Man March" passes the Legislative Assembly Building (and congregates on the lawn of the Court House) as he and others would be speaking at the occasion.

The Speaker: I have already spoken with the Leader of Government Business, and agreed that the House would adjourn at that time.

Hon. Roy Bodden: Thank you.

I rise on this historic occasion to record my thoughts, my sentiments and also the policies of the government for the Ministry for which I am constitutionally responsible.

I want to make my contribution in two parts: the first part will consist of general comments pertaining to the Throne Speech and Budget Address, and the current state of affairs in the country. The second part will be devoted solely to the policies of the Government espoused by me, as Minister, for those portfolios and departments for which I am constitutionally responsible.

Mr. Speaker, this is a historic occasion for more than one reason. One significant reason is that a little more than four years ago, I had the boldness to proclaim that at the end of the National Team's tenure, the country would find out it was not the government the country wanted, nor was it the government it deserved. The actions of the people in the November 2000 election have proved me right.

This government, which still has remnants trying to resuscitate the dead, wasted its mandate, squandered the resources of the country, and quite rightly the Caymanian populace turned them out of office. It was a government bankrupt of vision. I quoted the prophet Habakkuk when he wrote that he "awaited the vision."

The government that has taken over and the Members of this Parliament have an opportunity to make history in the Cayman Islands. I have been fortunate, indeed; I have been blessed to see the changing of the guard and to see young, dynamic Caymanians come to this House with the promise, qualities, and capabilities to take this country—as it deserves to be taken—confidently into the 21st Century. The dinosaurs, for the most part, have become extinct; however, the Ice Age is not over yet because there are still a few dinosaurs; there are still a few who need to change their mindset; there are still a few who need to understand that they need to become acquainted with the programme and relinquish the old ideologies and move forward with the new Cayman Islands and the new way of thinking.

I like to study history because it informs us as to how we can use the past as a bridge to walk us into the future. One person I like to read about is one of the most able Colonial Administrators this country ever had. If these kinds of people were my heroes, he would be my hero.

I crave the Chair's permission to recount from the Hansards of the Legislative Assembly of Justices and Vestry of the Cayman Islands, 16 March 1955, the Budget Session, His Honour, A.M. Gerrard, presiding. I want to read some of his address because it is prescient and it gives a sense of deja vu.

Mr. Gerrard had this to say on page 2, "If the dependency does not channel a realistic course of its own, then there is every likelihood that in the future it will be compelled by force of circum- stances to follow a course which may be unacceptable to it, and indeed dangerous to its own interests and its own way of life. In this connection, I am constrained to say to Members, and I would be failing in my duty if I failed to say, that it is an ill omen for the future that so little attention should be paid to these problems and that so much of the time of this Assembly should be occupied in minor matters, often strongly coloured by the personal self interest of Members. I should like to see Members have a change of heart, I should like to see them pay less attention to the trivialities of daily life which engender in this community so much heat and even hatred, and to concern themselves with the vital question: Where is the dependency going?"

Then he went on to say, "I will perhaps shock certain Members by saying that in general, our problems today are not really to get better roads, to eradicate mosquitoes and so on. Our real problems are to adjust ourselves to a difficult and changing outside world and to avoid the danger of becoming a degenerate community worshipping money. Our fundamental problem is to create a stable community which desires to better itself in real terms by bettering its own human material; by educating its children in proper human values instead of being hypnotised as too often happens today by the belief that happiness consists of the possession of a glossier motor car and a bigger more sparkling refrigerator than that possessed by one's next door neighbour."

What sage advice. How relevant. Even today, our concerns must be to build the kind of community where all of us have respect for each other and respect for ourselves. I hold out a great hope that this Parliament, this Government, can introduce what I call "the politics of inclusion."

Although I am not one to blow my own horn, I am proud that I set the example in that. When I wanted to set up a committee to investigate a problem, I chose Members of the Backbench. I want to send the message that even though we are elevated as Ministers we cannot do it all. All the Ministers are elected by the people. We are fifteen persons of the same rank; it is just that the system allowed five to be elevated. However, all fifteen have the ability, the worth, and the capability to be Ministers if the system so allowed.

I want to talk about the politics of inclusion, because this is not the time to draw out differences; this is not the time to exaggerate differences; this is the time to accentuate the positive and to come together. If we do not, the Cayman Islands will be worse off and there will be nothing worthwhile left for us to quarrel about.

His Excellency the Governor described the new political directorate as a "can-do government." I hope my colleagues understand what he meant by that. He did not say we were the "do-it government," he said we were the "can-do government." That means we are expected to do some things, but the school is still out. The onus is upon us to get the work done, to drive the country in the direction we think it should go. We have a myriad of challenges to deal with; immigration, the economy, the Organisation for Economic Cooperation and Development (OECD) and Financial Action Task Force (FATF). We also have problems of lesser significance that should concern us internally. We have to get on with it.

I am happy to witness every day that the relationship in this Parliament has changed. We are no longer adversarial in our dealings. We have a new beginning, a realisation and a new respect for one another; this is a good starting point. Let us keep it that way. There are still one or two things we need to work on, but I am confident that we can accomplish what needs to be accomplished. However, if we become smug and apathetic, if we lull ourselves into a false sense of security, the tenure will be wasted, and the country will be no better off.

I believe that we have a good Parliament and a good Government. I believe we can face up to the challenges we have, which is a good introduction to what I want to say about our economic position at this time.

Perhaps it is a mark of age, but I have never been one who was scared of facing up to the truth. While it is true that we were accustomed in years past to sound economic budgets, and a system which left us in a much better position than the one we are in now, I do not believe that this is the end of the world. Our Representatives have the ability. I believe that the quandary we find ourselves in is temporary, if we choose to make it so. If, however, we waste our time pointing fingers, exercising blame, and going on TV saying it is the new Government's fault, or this person's fault, we will have wasted our time. The ship is in bad weather; it is time for us all to pull together and do what we should do.

I believe that by the next budget there will be clear and unequivocal signs that the financial situation is improving. Certainly, Caymanians have a reputation for exercising responsibility and leadership in these times. I do not believe the present will be any different.

We must learn from mistakes made in the past. No longer can we promote a welfare state with no end to the benefits. The objective must be to help those who need help; but it must be a passing phase. We cannot encourage them to get stuck on the dole; we cannot encourage them to live to expect a handout; we must teach them to fish; we are not in a position to give them a fish every day.

The most crucial message is that we cannot, and we should not play politics just to maintain popularity. Now is the time for forthrightness, now is the time for truth, and now is the time to be practical. It makes no sense to begin finger pointing castigating and blaming. Now is the time to help and give the Government a chance.

This is a good Government; it can work. Obviously, the people who elected the Government have confidence in the Government. I believe that that confidence will be more than adequately borne out at the end of the day. I have faith and confidence in my colleagues on both sides of the House, but we must be allowed to get on with the job without any detractions or shenanigans.

The essence of democracy is the ability to take different lines, to espouse different views, and even to object and oppose. But there is such a thing as being constructive, as being true and realistic. Any kind of mischievous opposition does not hold merit, and in the end, those persons who perpetuate and promote such behaviour will be revealed to be exactly what they are. Instead of improving their situation, they will only be worsening it.

We have come to the politics of inclusion at a time when many areas of the country show signs of needing bolstering. We need to work together to build the society into a stronger society. It is to this whole matter of immigration that we have to look to do this.

I want to introduce another concept. There was a time in my life when I might have been tempted to say that what is happening in the Cayman Islands is a new form of Colonialism, that we are just being colonised. To a certain extent, there is some truth in that, however, there is another side, and this is the side I would like to focus on now.

There is a sense in what is happening in the Cayman Islands now, namely the White Paper and the Partnership for Posterity can be viewed as a new dispensation. I believe, however, that if we are smart, we can use that to bolster our position to benefit ourselves, to move the Cayman Islands forward into a cohesive society. Let us think about building a strong, cohesive, multi-ethnic, multicultural and multinational society; that is what we should be aspiring to do. However, in order to do that, we need to achieve certain fundamental objectives; we need to educate our people; we need to train our people; we need to promote this whole idea of good governance, transparency, accountability, and we need to develop some institutions that are not now present.

The move to establish the Office of Ombudsman is a move that I called for when I first came to this Parliament twelve years ago. I am happy to see it now coming to fruition. It is something a developing society, such as the Cayman Islands, can make optimum use of. I would be happy to see the Freedom of Information legislation, but I would be most happy to see a Bill of Rights; it is fundamental to the development of this country. I am proud to have stood here in the past and agitated for a Bill of Rights. Any modern constitutional instrument must be prefaced by a clear and unmistakable Bill of Rights.

It goes without saying that with rights come responsibilities. So, in the promotion of the Bill of Rights, I want to add the caveat that people cannot expect to have rights without some responsibilities.

Freedom must have certain parameters. But given the choice, I would rather know that a Bill of Rights existed even if the parameters were not so clear cut. Clearly, we still have much work to do.

Regarding the constitutional review, my position is that I have always been a party man. I have always espoused certain political responsibilities. I would love to see the Cayman Islands move to a position, where Caymanians have given an indication of their political maturity, where they could exercise that maturity to the fullest extent. If that means a ministerial system with a chief minister, I see nothing wrong with that; it is logical; it is to be expected; it is a system that should work.

I am of the firm opinion that there must be a primus inter pares; there must be a first among equals. That is the way the system was originally set up. Self-determination is a matter entirely for the Caymanian populace. I am not espousing that, but I am saying that, at the beginning of the 21st Century, it would be wise for Cayman to consider all options. It gives us a good chance in the constitutional review to discuss and discourse all options. Responsible leadership will let the people understand that without trying to influence them one way or the other.

The geopolitics of the world has changed. It is no longer a bipolar world; it is now unipolar—there is only one superpower. Attitudes must be adjusted.

We would be wise to also consider our economic position. In 1995, on a visit to the Foreign and Commonwealth Office (FCO) the present Second Elected Member for Bodden Town and I, had an audience with a rather brash arrogant young man. I could see he was being mentored by someone, placed on the fast track. His name (I shall never forget) was Patrick Moody.

In 1995, Patrick told us there had to be a change in the Cayman Islands. He said that they (UK government) were being pressured, and he mentioned the United States. He said, "These people want their money. You are going to have to get out of the business you are currently in." At one stage we asked him, "What, Sir, do you expect us to do?"

He was so adamant we told him that we did not come to discuss that, and it was a matter which we and the government shared the same position on.

He told us, "I will tell you what you should do: Invest in your tourism infrastructure and get better equipment for Cayman Airways, because when we are finished with you, you will not be in the money business." That was in 1995.

When we returned, we mentioned the meeting to some Members of the elected Government. We were laughed at, Mr. Speaker; we were derided. They said that they heard we did not see anyone, and that people slammed doors in our faces and wanted to know . . . Indeed, the Hansards bear out that one Minister—who was intoxicated with his arrogance—got up and wanted to find out where we got the money to pay our way to London, since we had gone in our private capacity.

All of this went unheeded. They poked fun at us and derided us. We had the warning from 1995 about the impending position of the Organisation for Economic Cooperation and Development (OECD) and the United Kingdom (UK)

Having said that, all is not lost; it only means that the Cayman Islands will have to depend more upon itself, in a situation where Europe has changed to the point where the European Union is taking precedence, asserting its leadership position; and where the relationship between the metropolitan country and the Overseas Territories is being redefined constantly. It will be wise for the Cayman Islands to look to itself and the Caribbean region for its economic survival and partnership in overcoming these challenges.

Here again, I wish to highlight a significant difference between this political directorate and the one immediately preceding it.

There are those of us who believe there is merit in associating with the Caribbean region to the extent we have mutually beneficial arrangements, where we have problems and challenges of a mutual interest. It is nonsensical to believe that an entity the size of the Cayman Islands can make it on its own in a world where we talk about globalisation and interdependence. There is a necessity for a change in focus. We have to look out and see where there are entities with similar challenges to ours and to try to join forces with them. The battle we are in is a battle for the long term and not for the short term.

I talk about building a society because it would be rather ambitious to talk about building a nation. I do not want to use the term "nation" because I do not want anyone to take what I say out of context, thinking I am espousing what I am not espousing. However, I say that it is high time that we approach the matter of immigration with some honesty.

We cannot continue to have persons residing in the jurisdiction for 30 years or more and not be a part of this society. It goes against the laws of natural justice; it is against the law of basic human rights and it is time for us to be honest and forthright. Indeed, it is essential that we incorporate persons who meet the criteria in this society. Our economic survival is going to be dependent upon that. We talk about culture, the economy, we even talk about politics; these are all intertwined and caught up in this web of immigration.

I know it is a sensitive area. I know that Caymanians from all walks of life bristle and get concerned when it is mentioned. I also know that their representatives have a responsibility to educate and inform them in such a way that they understand that the situation cannot exist in the state of inertia it has forever. No country can expect to be great unless it has a programme of expansion, resuscitation, and rejuvenation. What methodology is more effective and more appropriate, in addition to the natural population increase, than that of taking in those persons who meet the criteria?

The great United States still leads the world in the number of immigrants it accepts. The difference between the United States and many countries—including the Cayman Islands—is that there are clear cut prerequisites and criteria that these persons have to meet.

I speak fairly and forthrightly as one who has viewed the coin from both sides. I have been an immigrant myself. I was proud to have been one, and I have no compunction in admitting that I stayed for as long as I wanted to stay, until I achieved my objectives, and when my purposes were served I repatriated myself back to the Cayman Islands. Indeed I will say that I availed myself of the opportunities that were not available to me in the Cayman Islands, and I brought that knowledge back to Cayman with the hope and objective of improving Caymanian society. Therefore, I could not be one who rules out the possibility.

Like other established Caymanians I have my concerns. I am a realist and I realise that we cannot take in everybody. There are times when my being a Caymanian is very obvious. I am not anti anyone; I am merely pro-Caymanian. However, that does not give me a license to be prejudicial to such a point that I become exclusive in my policies.

I take note, in the Governor's Throne Speech, of the government's intention to do something about the problem of immigration in the country.

We in the Cayman Islands at this time have a glorious opportunity to build a society that is cohesive. If we take the Vision 2008 document and use it as a guide, I think we can build an exemplary society, one which continues to be vibrant and attractive not only to those in the society, but to those on the outside.

The time has come also for us to take a detailed look at our economy; what we are going to do with it; and how we are minded to go. I am going to be bold and frank; I think it would do us good to stop being so smug and so hypocritical and to face up to certain things. The greatest challenge we are faced with at this time is how we can build a sustainable economy. Given the fact that we have no raw materials, the only resources we have are our people. I cannot even say the land any more, because if you believe some people, that is largely out of our control.

It is unfortunate, and indeed regrettable, that years ago we did not consider what kind of economy we wanted to build. City-states, like Singapore, have been able through enlightened leadership to craft a society with a sound economy, a population of two million people. Yet, Singapore is a world leader, taking optimum advantage of trends in electronics, information technology, banking and finance.

I said many years ago that we in the Cayman Islands should have used that model, albeit the way of life is distinctly different. Singapore is predominately Chinese. The work ethics are significantly different from ours. However, certain basic principles still show similarity.

It is clear, with the challenge we have to our financial industry, that if we are smart we have to begin to think about diversifying. Tourism is an open and attractive avenue. But we must also realise that there are many tourist destinations. In order for us to stay competitive, we have to be creative, innovative, and also in a constant process of evaluating, improving and changing our product.

With the new Government, I believe we are on our way to doing that. I welcome the initiatives, particularly in the area of eco-tourism, which I believe holds great scope for future development in tourism but there are other areas we need to look at.

We need to train and empower our people to take greater advantage of the opportunities that exist in the country and to create new ones. To this extent, I am suggesting that the time has now come for the establishment of a development bank, particularly one that is going to have the facilities which will allow for the establishment of micro-finance initiatives, or opportunities for small business entrepreneurs.

The greatest example for this initiative is the Grameen Bank, which had its origins in Bangladesh. It is now a model for the world. It is a unique bank. There is a ceiling on the lending to which borrowers are encouraged to form a pool, support, council and bolster one another. It is the only bank in the world with a 98 percent loan repayment rate.

Our tourism efforts and initiatives in the Cayman Islands could benefit from micro-finance initiatives. There is no reason why Caymanian artisans should not be making some souvenirs. There is no reason why Caymanians should not be selling more to tourists by way of local goods; not only souvenirs, but food, cuisine.

I know my colleague, the current Minister, is interested because he and I have visited places in The Bahamas where these ventures have taken place with help from the development bank. We visited Arawak Cay, where Bahamian people cater to tourists. I know the minister is interested, indeed he has said as much publicly about setting up these kinds of ventures in the Cayman Islands. This is the kind of thing I am talking about.

Not only do we want to empower more Caymanians, but we want to let them feel they have a stake in the country's economic development, and that by so doing they can feel themselves an integral part of Caymanian society. They will therefore have a vested interest in the development of this society and will not feel marginalised.

This is particularly relevant when it comes to the Caymanian male, a figure at risk for the most part. We see it in its myriad of manifestations. If we check the court statistics and if we check the behaviour in schools we can ascertain who is most likely to be causing most of the problems. If we do not find a way to demarginalise these people, the whole society will suffer.

When we were a seafaring society, we had no such problems because there were clear rights of passage which led to manhood. We are no longer a seafaring society. There are no established rights of passage and we have what I call the marginalisation of the Caymanian male, which is a serious challenge we as a Government and as a country have to come to grips with. Everyone in the Cayman Islands, including multinational corporations, has a responsibility to bridge this gap. I will talk about corporate responsibility later on because the Cayman Islands cannot exist . . . the government cannot provide all of the resources necessary; this has to be a partnership. We believe this partnership should be developed.

Mr. Speaker, if it is the wish of the Chair, I am told that the marchers have assembled.

The Speaker: I shall entertain a motion for the adjournment.

ADJOURNMENT

Hon. Roy Bodden: Mr. Speaker, I move the adjournment of this Honourable House until 10 am tomorrow.

The Speaker: The question is that this Honourable House do now adjourn until 10 am tomorrow. Those in favour, please say Aye. Those against, No.

AYES.

The Speaker: The Ayes have it. We are adjourning early to facilitate the arrival of the 1,000 Man March.

AT 3.35 PM THE HOUSE STOOD ADJOURNED UNTIL 10 AM THURSDAY, 12 APRIL 2001.

OFFICIAL HANSARD REPORT
THURSDAY
12 APRIL 2001
10.19 AM
Nineteenth Sitting

[Prayers read by the Honourable Minister for Community Development, Women Affairs, Youth, and Sports]

The Speaker: Please be seated. Proceedings are resumed. Item number 2 on today's Order Paper, Reading by the Speaker of Messages and Announcements.

READING BY THE
HONOURABLE SPEAKER OF
MESSAGES AND ANNOUNCEMENTS

Apologies

The Speaker: I have apologies for absence from the Hon. First Official Member who is presently Acting Governor; apologies for late attendance from the Hon. Second Official Member; apologies for absence from Second Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman who is in Little Cayman on constituency business; and apologies for late attendance from Second Elected Member for West Bay.

Item number 3 on today's Order Paper, Presentation of Papers and Reports. The Water Authority of the Cayman Islands Annual Report 1998 to be laid on the Table by the Honourable Minister responsible for the Ministry of Community Development, Women Affairs, Youth and Sports.

PRESENTATION OF
PAPERS AND REPORTS

THE WATER AUTHORITY OF THE CAYMAN ISLANDS ANNUAL REPORT 1998

Hon. Edna M. Moyle: I beg to lay on the Table of this Honourable House the Water Authority of the Cayman Islands Annual Report 1998.

The Speaker: So ordered.
Do you wish to speak to it?

Hon. Edna M. Moyle: No, other than to make a commitment to this Honourable House that as long as I am the Minister holding responsibility for the Water Authority, this sort of delay in an annual report will not continue.

The Speaker: Thank you.

Moving on to item number 4 on today's Order Paper, Statements by Honourable Ministers and Members of the Government, Statement by the Hon. Minister for Tourism, Environment and Transport on visitor arrivals—A Review of the Monthly Statistics and the changes made to improve them.

STATEMENTS BY HONOURABLE
MINISTERS/MEMBERS OF GOVERNMENT

VISITOR ARRIVALS—A REVIEW OF THE MONTHLY STATISTICS AND CHANGES MADE TO IMPROVE THEM

Hon. W. McKeever Bush: Members will recall that the Government indicated in the 2001 Budget Address that there were concerns with the calculations of visitor arrivals. Members were further informed that I had instructed the Director of Tourism to have a comprehensive review carried out to ascertain the extent of the problem and to recommend a remedial plan. That has been done, and I am happy to report this to this Honourable House.

For years, I have expressed concern that there appeared to be an inconsistency between the numbers reported and the level of economic activity taking place in our islands. That led to my request that a review of this activity be done once assuming responsibility for this Ministry.

The problem is simply that there has been a serious miscalculation for quite some time now in the categories of information that have been added together and reported as visitors on a monthly basis. This problem dates back to the first quarter of 1994.

It is important that I point out that this issue predates the current Director assuming her position with the Department of Tourism. The miscalculation occurred with the recording of data for the reporting of tourism numbers, with the inclusion of the categories of Returning Residents and Persons in Transit as a component of the arrival figures. These categories are comprised of foreign nationals, not Caymanians who have residence in the Cayman Islands, that is, work permit holders or persons in transit at our ports.

To provide clarity on this matter, I will use the period of 1998 through 2000 to demonstrate the problem when the reporting was calculated incorrectly. This would apply equally to all visitor arrival numbers reported from 1994 onward. To explain this, I will share the actual numbers reported for 1998 through 2000, as well as indicate the number of persons included incorrectly.

In 1998, the actual visitor arrivals reported were 404,205, with 61,212 being incorrectly added. The visitor total for 1998 is, therefore, 342,993.

For 1999, the actual reported was 394,534. The miscalculated number was 71,839, for a corrected figure of 322,659.

In 2000 the actual number of visitors reported was 406,620. The miscalculated number was 90,591. The true visitor arrival figure for 2000 was 316,029.

I am pleased to correctly report the true tourism arrivals for the period 1998 through 2000 as a result of the review that has been carried out over the last 90 days. Additionally, I am happy to report the action plan to take this important measurement criterion forward accurately. I am happy that this measurement of our tourism activity is now corrected.

The change in the way we report our arrival figures will, from the year 2001, be calculated upon pure tourism arrivals, not including any returning resident or any in-transit data, to arrive at a figure that reflects those visiting the destination for truly tourism purposes.

I am equally pleased with the various programmes the Department of Tourism has going with the private sector. These are positioned to increase our visitor arrivals throughout 2001, and by mid-June the Department and the private sector will be back in discussions on the planning through the first quarter of 2002.

I am cognisant that there is much effort needed to bring tourism back on track. Members will recall that in my contribution to the Throne Speech I outlined the global review process to take the Department of Tourism forward and regain focus and productivity. Importantly, I assumed this responsibility with no policy document in place, and that too is critical to our future operations.

In support of all of this is the new hotel product that is moving along and the further development to our air and sea ports. To this point, the planned activities on our seaports and airports are being prioritised to reflect the country's needs and its ability to finance them on a timely basis. Members know, and I have said this time and time again, this will be done in connection with a growth-management plan. No one need insinuate or think otherwise through any medium.

I will continue to monitor all developments of all aspects of the tourism sector as this Government works together to ensure that all tourism efforts are in the best interest of its people and future generations.

I wish to also inform Members that Miss Cayman, the charming and loquacious Miss Jackie Bush, will be leaving the Island for Puerto Rico to participate in the Miss Universe Pageant. She has been, and continues to be, an excellent ambassador for tourism. We wish her success and God's speed. I encourage all Members to see her off at the airport on next Sunday morning.

The Speaker: Moving on to item 5 on today's Order Paper, Government Business. I will ask for the suspension of Standing Order 14(3).

The Honourable Minister responsible for Community Development, Women's Affairs, Youth and Sports.

SUSPENSION OF STANDING ORDER 14(3)

Hon. Edna M. Moyle: I move the suspension of Standing Order 14(3) in order to allow government business to be taken over private business.

The Speaker: I shall put the question. Those in favour please say Aye. Those against No.

AYES.

The Speaker: The Ayes have it.

AGREED: STANDING ORDER 14(3) SUSPENDED TO ALLOW GOVERNMENT BUSINESS TO BE TAKEN OVER PRIVATE BUSINESS.

GOVERNMENT BUSINESS

BILLS

SECOND READING

THE APPROPRIATION BILL, 2001

DEBATE ON THE THRONE SPEECH, DELIVERED BY HIS EXCELLENCY THE GOVERNOR ON FRIDAY 9 MARCH 2001

TOGETHER WITH

THE BUDGET ADDRESS DELIVERED BY THE HONOURABLE THIRD OFFICIAL MEMBER ON WEDNESDAY 21 MARCH 2001

(Continuation of debate thereon)

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for Education, Human Resources and Culture.

Hon. Roy Bodden: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Yesterday, I was commenting on the fact that changes in society mean the clear-cut transition from, especially, boyhood into manhood in Caymanian society. What some people call the "rights of passage" have broken down and become blurred. As a consequence of the change in the economic structure of the society, the lack of this transition impacts negatively upon the passage from boyhood to manhood. Added to that is the fact that certain other elements hitherto unknown in this society, which have made their presence, are felt in such a way as to add to the negative impact.

Having grown up before the advent of television, I never had to encounter some of the confusion, contradiction, and lack of understanding of the culture of what it means to be Caymanian that young people growing up at this time, particularly males, have to encounter. It is a documented fact that television has allowed undue influence and certain negative behaviour. We are no different, especially when you consider that we are a consumer society caught up in the web of what some call the "revolution of rising expectations".

We are now faced with new and unfamiliar phenomenon, for instance, the clothes we wear and the language and behaviour of the streets. When I was growing up, such a thing was just beginning to make a mark on society. The progress was slow because there was no television, only radio, newspapers and magazines. Now, however, there is a much more expeditious track to this phenomenon, and Caymanian society is wrangling with the challenge. Sometimes it seems we are losing.

This phenomenon, as I understand it, had its genesis in the inner cities of the United States and there are many sociologists and anthropologists who documented this. I am concerned because the phenomenon I see reproducing itself in the Cayman Islands emanates out of what I would describe as inner-city behaviour which predominately affects the black people.

In his landmark ethnographic study, Street Wise, the sociologist, Elijah Anderson, gave an intricate documentation of this kind of behaviour and the effect it has on society. It is not only a phenomenon rearing its head in the Cayman Islands, it is well documented in other societies throughout the Caribbean and, certainly, in North America as well. It seems to survive because in certain locations there is a breakdown in the family structure. There is an absence of a positive male role model or mentor.

Elijah Anderson accounts for this phenomenon by saying that no longer is the society structured in such a way that we have the support of older men and women who for generations have acted as mentors to the young. To aggravate matters, the community has lost its capacity to support churches and other institutions that once provided sources of shared purpose for the young and old alike.

Some label this as the "culture of materialism". We too are affected by this culture. Young Caymanians are like young people elsewhere who are searching for challenges. This is part of the natural drive of growing up, developing skills, testing themselves and building confidence. However, if society does not provide healthy outlets and is so consumed with other things, the search among the young is largely directionless, leaving them to fend for themselves.

One observation I have made is that the nature of our society, the very structure of Caymanian society, is so set that many young people are cheated. They are cheated by the bad economic growth; by the poor economic circumstances into which they were born; by coming from places where the playing field is not level—where they can have a chance and where they are indoctrinated with the idea that the one equalising tool is education and they must strive above all else to get that tool. The system is so skewed against them that all but a token can make it. I will talk about this later when I delve into the educational policies of the government and the Ministry.

As a result, through no fault of their own, they fail dismally which adds to the crisis, violence, crime and self-destruction, particularly among the disadvantaged. These are inter-actional phenomenon. These are things that go to accentuate the hopelessness and despair and the lack of any means of success.

One thing we have not quite learned in the Cayman Islands is that these situations cannot solely be remedied through economic solutions. The fallacy we often labour under is to throw more money at these problems. The problems beg empathy and a human understanding. This leads me to comment that the Thousand Man March, as I understand, was symbolic. The aim was to be a clarion call for men especially to stand up, or as the religious people say, "to stand in the gap".

I noted yesterday that, conspicuous by its absence was a corpus of people whom I read about so often in the papers who cry out for citizenship. They want to belong, yet their absence was noticeable. It speaks with a loud and obscene call.

I want to ask them if they think they can get Caymanian citizenship without earning it. However, it is not their problem—it is a native thing, or maybe even a "black" thing. They are not concerned because the accent is different and the people who die are not of their complexion or culture and do not come from the offices and the ivory towers in which they work.

You cannot be a Caymanian unless you know what deprivation means; unless you know what destitution means; unless you can identify with these mothers who have five children sometimes and no source of steady male support. You cannot understand what it means for a young man 13 or 14 years old to never have seen his father, except when he comes to slap him up and tell him, "Boy, you ain't no good."

Yesterday I changed my mind. I will not be so liberal in granting them citizenship.

No, Mr. Speaker! If you are just talking the talk and not walking the walk, we do not want you. If you are not part of the solution, then you must be part of the problem and we do not need anymore problems. I wonder what the excuses are going to be. I shall be reading the columns. I want them to hear, digest and understand what I have just said.

At the heart of our society is a crisis. I am not anti-anyone. I am just pro-Caymanian. We had a history of solving our problems before. If push comes to shove, we can solve them again. I still say that we can build an ideal society, but we do not want people who are only coming to milk the cow after she is tied up and who do not want to get all sweaty running her down.

Clearly, we have work to do to salvage our youth. We need to shoulder our responsibilities. There is no good romanticising or fantasising about the old times—nobody wants those times to return however glamorous we may think they were. We have to move on and that necessitates all of our efforts.

Caymanian society must be vibrant for all. We must seek to lessen the numbers of the disenfranchised and impoverished. Enough said on that point.

I believe that our future has to lie in crafting a system where we have the best available for our people.

I now turn to the situation which the Government inherited in terms of the economy. I will not go into intricate detail because that is best left to those much more knowledgeable and more capable of expressing than myself.

With the coming into power of a new political directorate there is always bantering and argument about the state of the economy and the country, and this term is no different. It was no surprise to many of us that our economic position was not good. We who were in here realised what the last government did, but what alarms me is to know that there are still elements of that government on the outside, and some on the inside, willing to further jeopardise their integrity and credibility by distorting the facts.

There is no way to express it. The financial position of this country is not good and the reason why is because there was recklessness and spending that had no sense. A case in point is the exgratia payment to seamen.

We all realise, appreciate, and acknowledge the role seamen played in the development of the Caymanian economy. Despite all those elements who claim they made Cayman, I say that Caymanian seamen played an integral part in the opening of the modern economy. It is only right that those who are in need should be helped.

To give carte blanche without setting any parameters boggles the imagination. Someone should have realised that the country could not afford that kind of bill at this time. It is my understanding that what started out as approximately $1.8 million wound up at $5.1 million and would still be growing if some efforts were not made to put a cap on it. It is this kind of senseless expenditure that has brought us to the position we are in now.

For anyone to try to lay blame on this political directorate, that cannot hold water. That logic and the reality of the situation do not bear this out. This Government, this political directorate, only took over the reigns of government on 16 November and since that time could not have embarked on any significant expenditure to lead the country to a poverty stricken state.

Some of those persons (whose names I will not call) when Members tried to show them the folly of their ways and what was happening, were quick to get up and boast of how many degrees they had in high finance, how many years' experience, and who knows what else. They took no heed. As a result, they got what they deserved.

The people, in their sound and wise judgment, gave them their just reward. So, they have their forum and are gone, as the Elizabethans say, "to study a long silence". Make them stay on the outside, study that silence, use the editorial comments and leave the running of the country to those persons who will do a much better job.

It concerns me that there is at least one out of that group whose presence in here seems to be bent on the continuous distortion of the facts and who continuously sets obstacles in the way of government. However, all those efforts are to no avail because the people know what transpired, they know what is going to happen. Democracy dictates that these people should have their voice and opinions registered. Democracy also says that the majority is in the position to call the shots. So be it!

The remnants of those persons who ruined the economy can use the medium they have, but they will not stop the progress, nor can they dampen the course the country has embarked upon by trying to create mischief, writing in the newspapers or appearing on TV. They have had their day and, clearly, new people with new attitudes are in vogue now. It is no longer business as usual.

The challenges facing us are not insurmountable. We can rise up—and we will!—to set the Good Ship Cayman on an even, economical keel.

I am happy that the prevailing attitude in the Legislative Assembly is (as remarked by others speaking before me) constructive. While there is opposition, and should be, that opposition is constructive. Being a part of the government, I would not encourage anyone to abnegate their responsibility and not put a watch on the government. Hold the government in account. That is the job of an integral part of the Parliament.

I am confident that with God's help this political directorate, with support, can set Cayman on a sound, economic path again. Those detractors, especially those of the immediate past, can reminisce of the times they had and be armchair commentators to what is happening now.

I will take some time now to talk about the Ministry for which I have constitutional responsibility for the policies and what I see as the way forward.

For the first time in history, the country has in the Ministry of Education a Minister who is an educator. I say that as much to remind myself of what is expected of me as to say to Honourable Members that I am prepared to be open, transparent and accountable in my dealings, particularly on matters concerning education and training.

Education must be for the Cayman Islands what Napoleon said the Conscript Army was going to be for France. Education must be the vitality of the nation. It must be the tool by which our young people move forward. It must not just be education emanating from the schools, the Ministry and Government would like to focus on lifelong learning.

Indeed, as I elaborate, you will find that we are going to focus on training and re-training too, ensuring that Caymanian people can take advantage of that training and acquire skills to help them fulfil their ambition, not only their personal ambitions. It will also allow them to be productive citizens, well rounded in all aspects of life and existence.

The Ministry of Education, Human Resources and Culture provides, for the very first time, an opportunity to focus on core issues of education, training, and the development of appropriate and relevant human resources. This is important because without this focus the country cannot move forward. Without this focus, we will be floundering.

I want to begin with culture. In a sense, this presents the easiest of the challenges.

Culture in Caymanian society is vibrant, expanding and growing. There is a search, a feel, almost a rebirth of what it means to be Caymanian, to develop something that is Caymanian and to pronounce Caymanian incorporating all of the other elements within society.

I recently had several opportunities to view cultural displays. The National Children's Festival of the Arts was an excellent showcase of work, beginning with paintings and drawings and sculptures done by our young people. It was an outstanding presentation with a clear and total lack of inhibition on the part of the youngsters. I was impressed by the variety, by the calibre and by the standards. I would like to commend all who were involved, particularly the children who hold so much promise for future development.

To all those teachers, tutors and parents who gave of their time, the Government appreciates the efforts.

Later on I was privileged to witness some of the poetry, music and other exhibitions at the Harquail Theatre, all done to a very high standard.

Recently, I visited a Cayfest exhibition of art and sculpture, all superbly done. I came away with the distinct impression that art, music and drama are taught wonderfully at the primary and secondary level. We have exceptional products on display year after year. However, I was surprised to find out that after high school there is no formal teaching of art, music or drama.

I told my elected colleagues on Executive Council that it would be a good thing for Government to promote and encourage the teaching of these subjects at the Community College. I am encouraged by them to press for this. So, I look forward to a further promotion and enhancement of these cultural effects by having them taught as subjects at the Community College of the Cayman Islands.

I believe that this is a logical transition that can only improve the development of Caymanian culture. Importantly too, it will allow for persons who participate in these areas to further expand their skills and professionalism so that we may truly develop and carry our culture forward.

The Minister of Culture has held some preliminary discussions with his counterpart, the Minister of Tourism, about some ventures we can jointly undertake. We have been thinking that in the near future, hopefully next year, the two Ministries can resuscitate an old Caymanian cultural phenomenon, the Junkanoo.

We are thinking of holding what we termed a "Junkanoo Festival" where we will invite a contingent from the Bahamas and Jamaica, as well as acquire our own Caymanian Junkanoo. We will begin in Bodden Town, the first Capital. I hope that we can get the plans to fruition so that by the time Cayfest rolls around next year we can have a full-fledged Junkanoo Festival in the Cayman Islands.

I know in Bodden Town we have several men who were prominent in past Bodden Town Junkanoo Festivals. Coincidentally, some, if not all, are close friends and supporters of the Second Elected Member for Bodden Town and me. Indeed, I see one such gentleman in the gallery as I speak.

Outside of that, my colleague, the Minister of Tourism, said that if we run short of bodies we can look for the four Executive Council Members who are no longer here and ask if they would like to join.

On a serious note, I received some representation from some Caymanian musicians who were complaining of the lack of airtime given to locally produced music, particularly Radio Cayman. The business of music in the cultural development of the Cayman Islands is a weak link.

Since assuming responsibility for this Ministry, my Permanent Secretary and I held one meeting. There were other meetings held where I was not present, but I have held one with representatives from the Music Association.

We had a cordial meeting and we outlined the way forward. This was accepted by the representatives for the Music Association but, unfortunately, in the whole cultural milieu we see music as frailest.

I am satisfied that we are on the way to developing a methodology whereby music can take its rightful place in Caymanian culture. Nevertheless, Government may not be able to accomplish this alone. It needs the support of other elements in society, particularly the tourist establishments, the hotels, the radio stations and television stations as well.

The local musicians complained that they heard music from other cultures and areas getting far too much airtime while their music was being neglected.

It is a concern I share with them and, as Minister, I have made representation to the relevant authorities in the hope that there will be awareness to this legitimate complaint and something will be done to reverse the current trend.

I would like to see a more concerted effort made to promote Caymanian artisans and, again, I have spoken to my colleague, the Minister for Tourism.

There are local artists whose work is comparable to the best I have seen in the Caribbean. There is a young man in East End by the name of Rudy Solomon. I do not know how many Honourable Members have been privy to see his work. It is ingenious what this young man does with that rope. He was a student of mine at one stage. He came with a small display and I was profoundly moved.

This young man is an artisan of no mean order. I have seen the best in the Caribbean and I would pit Rudy against the best of them. He would come away holding his head high. His problem is that, as an artisan, he has to make it, market it, display it, sell it and peddle it. You name it. However, he is limited in his capacity.

First of all, he has no decent place to exhibit his work. Secondly, he is hindered by a lack of accessible and affordable capital to purchase the required materials and tools.

This is why I come back to my point that we must have a micro-finance initiative in this country and this Government is committed to doing that.

There are others who are so skilled. There is no reason they should not be producing works to sell to the many tourists who visit our islands, particularly on cruise ship days. They should have somewhere convenient to visitors to view and purchase these works.

The Government has also taken the position that with the performance of any foreign bands at Pirate's Week there must be a local band at the same performance. This is good.

The Ministry of Tourism and the Ministry of Culture will coordinate these efforts as we will try to coordinate efforts to bring recognition to artists like Rudy so that they can get their work displayed.

There is a plethora of young Caymanian artists, painters and sculptors and I hope that we can promote these artists so that they can truly achieve the recognition they deserve.

On the matter of the new History of the Cayman Islands, it is my understanding that this history is now in the editing stage and should be available by the end of the year. I look forward to reading this long awaited work. For a work which had the gestation period of an elephant, I hope that when we receive it we are not disappointed.

There are other elements we are developing: the National Gallery; the National Museum; and the National Archives. I have visited all of these entities.

I would like to publicly commend the staff of the National Archives, the National Museum, and the National Gallery. I was impressed by the work and dedication to these entities. I also want to commend the people who volunteer to serve on the boards. For the first time in history, a Minister visited all of these entities and spoke with the boards. I am content we are off on the right development path.

The National Gallery is still in its embryonic stage, and I hope that one day they can find a permanent home. I am concerned, though, that the National Archives has exhausted all the purpose-built space and storage facilities.

There is a danger in storing important documents in places other than those purpose built because if it is not climate controlled, the paper deteriorates rapidly. Couple that with the fact that there are other kinds of hazards.

It is incumbent upon the Government that, as soon as it is feasible and affordable, we look to procure additional space for the storage of important documents that should be properly stored under the auspices of the National Archives.

I was at a board meeting of the National Museum and I explained to the members that it is the Government's objective, before the end of the current tenure, to identify land on which a proper museum can be sited. What is now the National Museum is, strictly speaking, not a purpose-built facility and does not have the kind of characteristics necessary for the preservation, care and safekeeping of the artefacts which we have.

It makes proper sense to take the time now to identify a spot. It would be sound, philosophical judgement to locate property where we can house the National Museum and the art gallery in close proximity to the Harquail Theatre so that one could conveniently visit all three sites simultaneously. It is something the Government is fully aware of.

We are committed, as can be seen, to the promotion of culture in all its myriad forms in this society. Events such as Art at Government House (for which the Government has to thank the Governor and Mrs. Smith for hosting) allow our youngsters and those inclined to exhibit their works, meet interested parties and explain their work, motivations and so forth.

We believe that culture is an integral part of the growth and development of the Caymanian community, and certainly this Government is willing to play its part as has been demonstrated.

I now wish to turn to the matter of human resources, labour, employment practices and so forth. Before I move onto that, if the Chair is minded I could do with a rest at this time, Sir.

The Speaker: We shall suspend proceedings for 15 minutes. I ask, Honourable Members, let us make it only 15 minutes.

PROCEEDINGS SUSPENDED AT 11.23 AM

PROCEEDINGS RESUMED AT 11.42 AM

The Speaker: Proceedings are resumed. Debate continuing on the Appropriation Bill, 2001. Second Reading, the Honourable Minister responsible for Education, Human Resources and Culture.

Hon. Roy Bodden: I wish to move on to human resources.

The Ministry places great emphasis on the development of human resources. I am pleased with the progress we have made. We have been off to a most favourable start, and I must give credit to my Permanent Secretary who has approached the matter of human resources with professionalism and understanding which are welcome and refreshing. As Minister, I give her my full confidence.

It is plain from the outset that this area, particularly labour and employment practices, was a fragile area in previous political administrations. There is much work to be done. However, I am satisfied that this political directorate and the Ministry, largely through the support of the Permanent Secretary, have crafted a sensible, pragmatic, and practical approach. Already we have made considerable progress and we stand on the threshold of making even more.

The guiding philosophy has to be arrived at from outset. This is one of the many positive things which have been accomplished. We have a sound, if not perfect, guiding philosophy. As we confront the problems, we are not able to solve every one to the satisfaction of all parties, but the success rate is striking indeed. We continue to receive positive results.

The philosophy under which we are operating is that the Ministry concentrates on employment relations and training. We want to move away from the kind of labour practices as far as dealing with complaints is concerned and establish a tripartite system of cooperation between employers, employees and the government. In doing so, I am reminded of a quotation by the famous Caribbean author, George Lamming, who penned these lines, "It is labour in all its stages of organisation which has been the most powerful democratising force in the history of the Caribbean."

When we made the announcement, some people were either confused and did not understand what we were trying to achieve, or they were ill prepared to give us an opportunity to work this out in a way we thought most practical and beneficial.

We are convinced the proof of our activity so far bears out the direction we are taking. We are confident that with the organisation of the Labour Department into three divisions—namely, the Regulatory Division, Audit and Appeal and Human Resource Development—including functions that separate the appeals function from the regulatory functions by way of a revision of the Labour Law is more effective.

When the Permanent Secretary and I visited the Labour Department, without any exaggeration, I was taken aback. I was shocked to learn that a government operation existed in physical facilities and surroundings such as they are. I tell you, for purely psychological purposes, that physical facility does not bode well for any satisfactory settlement. The ambience turns you off!

There is absolutely a repulsive atmosphere in the physical facilities. It is the most unflattering of surroundings. My heart goes out to the personnel who have to work there. It is no wonder we have so much controversy, such adversarial relationships and so many drawn-out quarrels. The physical setting does not bespeak an entity that should provide empathy, understanding and consolation, or arbitration or mediation.

It is important that we remove, restructure and re-site these functions so that we can have a better atmosphere—one which connotes cordiality. You do not have to be a student of Feng Shui to know that the environment and layout of an office has something to do with the results you get.

I see my colleague across the way nodding his head.

It is such an art that people set up their offices to reflect exactly what they desire. Some offices intimidate you immediately because they are structured that way. Some offices make you feel welcome, like you could make that your home. It is all by design.

These offices are all cramped and certainly not impressive. Someone coming from the outside cannot form a good impression. Largely, through no fault of the occupants, these facilities are the ones to which they were assigned and so they have little or no power to do anything except realign the desks or place a plant or two in a strategic corner. It is from this point that we have to excel.

We inherited a system where there is a proliferation of tribunals. These tribunals take weeks after hearing a complaint to come up with a conclusion. It is a most untenable and unsatisfactory system.

We have to continue, unfortunately until we have a review of the Labour Law, bringing in a more workable and alternative process. We have a situation where these tribunals meet to discuss similar complaints and the conclusions vary significantly. Then there is this whole process of appeal, one seemingly long, drawn-out procedure where the parties are dissatisfied. The complainant and plaintiff are both displeased and then it leads to an appeal.

I had a call at the Ministry yesterday from a lady with an outstanding matter of about six months now. She has not received a judgment and has been waiting since long before I came into office. I think this is a case where financial compensation may be involved. It is these kinds of situations that must be eliminated. It should not be allowed to be drawn out for such a long time.

Our approach is to build a system of arbitration and mediation. The advantages are: less formality; the arbitration award is final; there is no appeal unless there is a special case to be stated; the time and place of the hearing can be fixed to suit the convenience of the parties; it is quicker than the legal process; it is cheaper and it is private.

The tribunal system is fraught with problems. One is that we often have to replace tribunal members. If one member resigns, that tribunal becomes non-functional until we can replace the resigned member. The philosophy we seek to establish is one which seeks to prevent and resolve employment disputes, to conciliate in actual or potential complaints and to provide information and advice.

Lastly, but importantly, we seek to promote good practice. Government will be seeking to establish what we call a Dynamic Human Resources Centre at 309 and 310 Paddington Place.

We will be endorsing new initiatives like e-business partnership for schools, investors in people and small business development. In addition to this we will house the Careers Advisory Service; we will house the student summer employment programme, creating a one-stop shop that incorporates and includes opportunities for training and re-training at all levels, beginning from the secondary level right up to adulthood. We will also have a unit dealing with information technology and its development. We are proud of this. It already has Executive Council's approval. We have already procured the physical facilities. We have the furniture, and we expect a formal launching at the beginning of November.

We are not stopping at that. We are liaising with the Chamber of Commerce as the representative of employers, as well as with organised employee representatives, to ensure stable and progressive labour relations.

I am sorry that the Third Elected Member for George Town is not here because I wanted to tell him first-hand that we will also be prepared to liaise with his organisation as a representative of organised employees.

The Ministry is also minded to strengthen and enforce the Labour Law in respect of pension violations through the courts.

I want to pause at this point to say that it is my understanding that some employers are not complying with the legal requirements as far as pension contributions for their employees. As Minister, I have informed the Pensions Office to use the most stringent of terms to impress upon these employers the necessity and requirements of the law in making their contributions.

While I do not advocate taking these people to court in the first instance, if they fail to abide by the law then it is my instruction to the Pensions Office to take them to court. We cannot have employers withholding employees' pension contributions and getting away with impunity. I would hope that if any further admonition is needed that those who are delinquent will understand they are in an untenable and unacceptable position.

The Ministry and the Government believe that the new move toward labour legislation has to take into account certain factors that are outside the borders of the Cayman Islands, such as European Union expectations and international expectations—particularly those contained in International Human Rights Treaties and European Union agreements. The drafting of this Labour Law must be as comprehensive and modern as to be conscious of these factors which are bound to impinge on employment practices in the Cayman Islands.

It will also have to consider the modern trends in the world of work internationally—compassionate leave, maternity leave, paternity leave. We are talking about quite a sophisticated instrument. We do not want to craft legislation that we will have to immediately amend because we were not mindful of certain trends.

To this extent, we are concerned about safety in the workplace. My Permanent Secretary and I have held cursory discussions about the development of some code of responsibility for safety in the workplace in the Cayman Islands. We believe this is complementary to any modern labour legislation. With trends the way they are, it makes sense.

We have asked His Excellency the Governor to consider changing the name from Human Resources to Employment Practices so that the Ministry (if he accedes to our request) will be the Ministry of Education, Employment Practices and Culture.

Certainly, the nomenclature of Human Resources is sometimes misleading, and people from outside jurisdictions ask if I am in charge of the Civil Service because of this notion of Human Resources. While there is certain relevance, we believe that the description Employment Services is more applicable and apt, particularly in line with what we are trying to accomplish.

I am aware of the many areas of flux existing in certain labour matters, particularly as they involve certain entities in the hospitality industry. It is obvious that we need to come up with a more relevant and appropriate Labour Law, one that is devoid of the loopholes in the current law and one that is clear and unequivocal in what it advocates.

Hand in hand with that, I was pleased that the Government was minded to accept the call for a minimum wage law. I think in the modern Cayman Islands there is room and it is time for us to have a minimum wage by category, structured and in place.

Complementary to this, I think the review of the Trade Union Law is timely. It seems we have at least one organisation which is an established trade union. This is to be accepted in a democracy. I think we should have a law structured so that the role of the trade union is clearly demarcated to enable other entities to form a union, if they choose, with the guidance, relevance and appropriateness of a modern law. It can only strengthen society and enhance the position of employees while informing and instructing employers of their roles, rights and responsibilities.

The guiding philosophy behind this, as espoused by the Government through the Ministry, is that this is a partnership. All of these ventures are a partnership. That is why we are stressing the tripartite aspect of relations between employer, employee, and government. The government's role is as a neutral party: a facilitator; a mediator; an arbitrator; an educator and enlightener. We do not wish to be policemen. We do not consider it is the government's duty to go cracking heads or breaking wrists. We believe we can best provide the service of educating, informing, mediating and facilitating. That is why we are looking forward to the new facilities at 309 and 310 Paddington Place. We hope to embark on a genuine partnership with the Chamber of Commerce.

The Ministry of Education, Human Resources and Culture sees itself poised to be the Government's liaison with the Chamber of Commerce in developing the public sector/private sector partnership that will allow the country to move forward in every aspect of its growth.

This Ministry sees itself as a people-oriented Ministry and, therefore, is eminently structured to lead negotiations and the development of relations between the public sector and the private sector, particularly with regard to issues of employment, education and others similarly related. We are prepared to do that, bearing in mind that it will be our responsibility to inform and to ensure that the other Ministries and other Departments are equally minded so that we can advance in unison.

We realise that much will have to be done to educate, improve and prepare our people. We are eager to launch efforts in information technology and encourage the development of various skills among Caymanians.

I wish to emphasise that the Human Resources Centre will not only be for school-leavers, but for Caymanians alike. We will focus on training and re-training and the acquisition of skills from all levels of the spectrum. I want all Members to look forward to this and I ask for their continued support for this facility that we take pride in.

Earlier this year, the Permanent Secretary and I traveled to the UK and Jersey on a fact-finding mission. We viewed several initiatives that we hoped to see implemented and instituted in the Cayman Islands—one was the Investors in People Programme. I was particularly impressed with the way Jersey has the programme structured.

We did a presentation at the Hotel de France, which was one of the businesses operating under the backing of the Investors in People. They recently won an award and I had the privilege of handing it to Mr. Robert Parker, the Managing Director of the Hotel de France.

We believe that such a programme can work in the Cayman Islands, and the Ministry has already taken steps to have this programme developed and introduced here.

It is my understanding that certain entities here may already have staff familiar with the Investors in People programme. Coutts, Natwest, Bank of Butterfield, and I believe Deutsche Bank already have representatives familiar with this plan. We anticipate introducing this in Cayman and playing our part in promoting the training and development of employees.

We had an initiative that was called P3ET that had as one of its objectives the provision of training. To an extent, we still have that initiative going, although it was decided since I came into the Ministry that we may wish to rename it and provide a change of focus.

All the persons who served on that committee were extremely competent volunteers, and I encourage them to continue to bring forward their efforts and ideas. I anticipate a vibrant and energetic revival of the committee and I hope that after Easter we can get back to our business of moving it forward.

All efforts that the Ministry is about to expend and develop in training will have to be complemented by efforts from the private sector. That is why we emphasise the public sector/private sector partnership with the Chamber of Commerce and other entities as well.

Balancing this will be the development and teaching of these subjects in the schools. I want to stress that when we talk about training we are not just limiting this training to formal schools. We are talking about apprenticeships and programmes outside the schools, including distance learning. We envisage that this exercise will develop to such an extent that people will choose to operate on their own initiative.

One of the things the Permanent Secretary and I would like to see at this Human Resources Centre is a system where people can access a computer and, with supervision, enquire into areas of training and skill they may be interested in. We will have the relevant and requisite resource people to offer counseling, guidance and assistance. Career counseling is going to be a vital part of this resource centre.

We would like to ensure that we have available to those who use this centre all of the information they may ever wish to acquire. Indeed, we are going to encourage them to drop in because we want it to have that kind of atmosphere. We want it to be the kind of place where you do not have to have a specific reason for coming. If you want to spend just five minutes with a cup of tea or coffee, you can do so, or to read in a corner if there is a particular occupation which you may be interested in.

We hope to have the literature available. We encourage people to use it as a drop-in centre in addition to coming in for specific purposes.

We also want to move the appeals section of the labour tribunals away from where it is currently at the Labour Department, to promote some distance and authority and to remove any kind of incestuous claims.

So, we are quite enthused and anticipatory about this. We believe this kind of centre will prepare Caymanian employees like never before. It will additionally serve as a reference point and be complementary to the work of the Chamber of Commerce.

Our objective is to coordinate the training facilities currently in existence in the Cayman Islands so that our efforts are not duplicated. We will know exactly who is offering what, which will enable us to inform and route people in the right way.

This will be the first time that such an entity with this kind of dynamism, plan and objective will be operational in Caymanian society. It should provide an ideal and ample opportunity for those Caymanians who are interested in training and re-training to prepare for the future.

Mr. Speaker, it is my understanding that the House is minded to adjourn at 12.30. In view of the fact that I have a quivering voice, I ask the Chair to grant my request to take the adjournment at this time.

The Speaker: Certainly, if a Minister will move the adjournment. The Honourable Minister for Education, Human Resources and Culture.

ADJOURNMENT

Hon. Roy Boddén: Mr. Speaker, I move the adjournment of this Honourable House until 10 am, Wednesday, 18 April 2001.

The Speaker: Before putting the question, I would like to wish all Honourable Members, their families, the staff and their families, and the people of the Cayman Islands a very happy and safe Easter. The question is that this Honourable House do now adjourn until 10 am tomorrow.

Those in favour please say Aye. Those against No.

AYES.

The Speaker: The Ayes have it.

AT 12.22 PM THE HOUSE STOOD ADJOURNED UNTIL 10 AM WEDNESDAY, 18 APRIL 2001.

OFFICIAL HANSARD REPORT
WEDNESDAY
18 APRIL 2001
10.10 AM
Twentieth Sitting

[Prayers read by the Elected Member for East End]

The Speaker: Please be seated. Proceedings are resumed. Item 2 on today's Order Paper, Reading by the Speaker of Messages and Announcements.

READING BY THE
HONOURABLE SPEAKER OF
MESSAGES AND ANNOUNCEMENTS

APOLOGIES

The Speaker: I have apologies for absence from the Honourable First Official Member who is presently Acting Governor of the Cayman Islands; the Honourable Second Official Member who will be arriving later; and from the Third Elected Member for Bodden Town who is off the Island.

Moving on to item number 3 on today's Order Paper, Presentation of Papers and Reports. Report of the Cayman Islands 1999 Population and Housing Census. The Honourable Third Official Member responsible for the Portfolio of Finance and Economic Development.

PRESENTATION OF
PAPERS AND REPORTS

REPORT OF THE CAYMAN ISLANDS 1999
POPULATION AND HOUSING CENSUS

Hon. George A. McCarthy: I beg to lay on the Table of this Honourable House the Report of the Cayman Islands 1999 Population and Housing Census.

The Speaker: So ordered. Do you wish to speak to it? The Honourable Third Official Member.

Hon. George A. McCarthy: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. The Cayman Islands 1999 Population and Housing Census was conducted during October/November 1999, with 10 October 1999 being designated as Census Day. As in the previous two censuses, questionnaires were delivered to households and forms were completed by the occupants.

The 1999 Census questionnaire was more detailed than either the 1979 or 1989 forms and was designed to use Optical Mark Reading (OMR) technology for data entry. This technology, while it considerably reduces data entry errors, required field staff to be more vigilant at the time of collection. The census counted all persons present in the Cayman Islands on Census Day, that is, the de facto population, as well as residents abroad providing that they had not been overseas for a continuous period of over one year.

Residents were provided with a written guide to assist them in completing the questionnaire. The guide also provided answers to some commonly asked questions. The questionnaire also provided instructions on how to interpret the questions.

The questionnaire for the 1999 Census repeated many of the questions from 1989, but sought to collect additional information relevant to the needs of the society.

As a result, questions were asked on computer availability and Internet access in the home, hours spent on unpaid household activities, disability, remittances abroad, health insurance and pensions. The question on income was expanded to include income from sources other than employment.

The questionnaire was divided into three sections and contained 71 questions. These sections are as follows: Identification, 1 question; Housing, 24 questions; Personal, 46 questions.

The Identification section was used to list all persons who resided in the household by sex and age. A question for identifying households that engage in agricultural activity was also asked in this section. The information will be used in an agricultural census.

The Housing section consisted of nine new questions: two questions on access to technology within the home; two on the use of the home for business purposes; one each on repairs to household, energy for lighting, fuel for cooking; and two aimed at measuring the cost of shelter.

The Personal section was significantly increased and 14 new questions were asked. These included: four questions on disabilities; one each on union status, health insurance, unpaid household activities, religion, daycare supervision for children under five years of age, months worked in the Cayman Islands during 1998, remittances abroad and pensions; and two on languages spoken.

Additionally, the question on Cayman status was broadened to incorporate citizenship. The income question expanded to provide information on income other than employment income.

For the purpose of the census, "residents" were defined as persons who on Census Day had lived on the Islands for six months or more, or who would be living on the Islands for six months or more by virtue of their job or other circumstances.

Summary of the 1999 Census results: A total of 40,786 persons spent the night of 10 October 1999 on the Islands. Of this total, there were 37,651 residents in private homes, 390 in institutions, 688 visitors staying in private homes and 2,057 visitors staying in accommodation establishments. Thirteen hundred and sixty nine residents spent Census Night outside the Cayman Islands. The resident population of the Cayman Islands on Census Night stood at 39,410, of which 390 were institutionalised.

The non-institutionalised resident population numbered 39,020 and was distributed as follows: George Town, 20,626; West Bay, 8,243; Bodden Town, 5,764; North Side, 1,079; East End, 1,371; Cayman Brac and Little Cayman, 1,937.

All tables in the report have been compiled on the basis of the non-institutionalised population.

The population of the Cayman Islands grew by 55.4 percent over the 1989 Census figure of 25,355, or at an average annual rate of 4.5 percent. At this rate of growth, the population of the Cayman Islands will double by the year 2015.

On a district basis, Bodden Town registered the highest growth and North Side the lowest.

Average annual growth by district over the period is as follows: George Town, 4.8 percent; West Bay, 3.9 percent; Bodden Town, 5.4 percent; North Side, 2.3 percent; East End, 2.6 percent, Cayman Brac and Little Cayman, 2.8 percent.

The number of households in the Cayman Islands increased to 14,907 in the 1999 Census from a total of 8,115 in 1989. These figures are not strictly comparable, as the definition of "household" was modified for the 1999 Census.

Average household size in the Cayman Islands declined from 3.1 in the 1989 Census to 2.6 in the 1999 Census.

The average age of resident in the Cayman Islands' 1999 Census was 32.8 years. In 1989 the figure was 31 years. Two thousand seven hundred and forty persons (7 percent of the population) were under the age of five. Of these, 2,113 (77 percent) were Caymanian. Seven thousand five hundred and ninety eight persons (19 percent of the population) were under the age of 15. Of these, 5,988 (79 percent) were Caymanian.

Two thousand one hundred ninety five persons (6 percent of the population) were 65 years or older. Of these 1,821 (83 percent) were Caymanian. Cayman Brac registered the highest proportion of elderly persons with 15 percent of the population being 65 years and over. North Side, East End, Little Cayman and West Bay followed with 11, 10, 8 and 6 percent respectively.

The proportion of males to females has remained virtually unchanged from the 1989 Census. Fifty one percent of the population was female and 49 percent male, as was the case in 1989. In 1999 there were 19,987 females and 19,033 males.

Fifty-three percent of the population was Caymanian, either through parentage or grants of status for other reasons. This has declined by 67 percent in 1989 and 81 percent in 1970.

The number of Caymanians in the country grew at a modest rate of 1.9 percent per annum between 1989 and 1999. The Caymanian population grew from 16,868 in 1989 to 20,491 in 1999.

Over the same period, the non-Caymanian population more than doubled, growing by 8.2 percent per annum. The number of non-Caymanians living in the Cayman Islands on Census Day was 18,529, up 8,387 from 1989.

Twenty five thousand, five hundred and six persons were employed during the week of 3-9 October 1999. The proportion of employed males and females in the labour force was almost equally split. There were 12,523 females (49 percent) as compared with 12,983 males (51 percent).

Ten thousand, six hundred and twenty nine of the employed labour force (42 percent) were Caymanian. Eight hundred and fifty persons (3.2 percent) of the labour force were available for work and seeking a job during the week of 3-9 October 1999. A further 493 persons (1.8 percent) of the labour force were available for work but did not seek a job during the week of 3-9 October 1999.

Seventy-four percent of the households (11,040) in the Cayman Islands had access to telephones. Thirty-eight percent of the households (5,695) had a computer in the home, of which 4,259 (75 percent) were hooked up to the Internet.

Rental properties accounted for 49 percent (7,265) of the total number of households on the Islands. A further 6 percent were provided rent-free. Twenty two percent (3,280) were owned outright, and 23 percent (3,383) owned with a mortgage. In 1989 rental properties accounted for 41 percent (3,299) of the total. Six percent were rent free, 31 percent of the households (2,547) were owned outright and 22 percent (1,761) were owned with a mortgage.

Nine thousand nine hundred and forty six persons lived in homes that were owned outright. Of these, 7,643 (77 percent) were Caymanian. Eleven thousand six hundred and fifteen persons lived in homes that were owned with a mortgage. Of these, 8,415 (72 percent) were Caymanian. Fifteen thousand one hundred and eight persons lived in rented accommodation. Of these, 3,248 (21 percent) were Caymanian.

Residents of the Cayman Islands spent about $5.9 million monthly on rent, or about $70.6 million for the year. Residents with home mortgages spent an estimated $4.8 million monthly on mortgage payments, or about $58.2 million in 1999.

I trust that you, Mr. Speaker and Honourable Members, will find this encapsulation of the Census Report to be useful. Thank you.

The Speaker: Moving on to item 4 on today's Order Paper, Government Business-Bills. Second Reading, the Appropriation Bill, 2001. Continuation of Debate on the Throne Speech delivered by His Excellency the Governor on Friday 9 March 2001, together with the Budget Address delivered by the Honourable Third Official Member on Wednesday 21, March 2001.

The Honourable Minister responsible for Education, Human Resources and Culture, continuing his debate. For the benefit of the Honourable Member, your time remaining is 1 hour and 47 minutes.

GOVERNMENT BUSINESS

BILLS

SECOND READING

THE APPROPRIATION BILL, 2001

DEBATE ON THE THRONE SPEECH, DELIVERED BY HIS EXCELLENCY THE GOVERNOR ON FRIDAY 9 MARCH 2001

TOGETHER WITH

THE BUDGET ADDRESS DELIVERED BY THE HONOURABLE THIRD OFFICIAL MEMBER ON WEDNESDAY 21 MARCH 2001

(Continuation of debate thereon)

Hon. Roy Bodden: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. In the time I have left, I will articulate the Government's educational policies as it falls under my responsibility.

I preface my comments by saying that when the Government was sworn in on 16 November, shortly thereafter it was decided by a consensus of the Elected Ministers that they would focus these four years on education and training. It is my responsibility to move the Government's programme forward.

We decided that we would like to take a new approach and Government has supported me in developing and articulating a public sector/private sector partnership in some of these ventures with the Chamber of Commerce. I will say more about this later in my contribution.

Also, upon analysis we recognised that there are some areas of overlap between the Ministry of Education and the Ministry of Youth. The two Ministries will be doing some collaborative work, particularly in the establishment of a Cadet Corp in the schools and among the youth outside of schools, as well as in the development of a National Youth Service.

There are several things I could say about what was inherited by way of education. However, I will not spend my time on the negative other than to say that I was surprised to learn that with the furore laid down by my predecessor the Cayman Islands had no national policy statement on education.

Immediately I enquired about this and I was astonished by such a glaring absence. I have to wonder, in the absence, how we could know that we had an effective system as was so often impressed upon us by my predecessor.

In addition to that I have found out that the national curriculum is not national because it excludes many of the private schools. I have numerous concerns about the national curriculum. After detailed enquiry I learned that it was not well thought out.

I will not say more than this: as a professional educator, I have to say that the educational policies of the political directorate of the past eight years were not carefully planned and would seem to have emanated largely out of micro-management or crisis management rather than a broad and comprehensive view with practical, pragmatic and achievable objectives.

Upon taking over Office and following the conclusion of the 14th Commonwealth Education Ministers' Conference, I decided, as Minister, to put forward to Government a concentration of five areas of education in the next four years. These are: school improvement; technical and vocational education; information and communications technology; citizenship education; and teacher training. It is anticipated that these five areas will form the core of the new Government's educational policy developed through a process of consultation.

In the first instance, I recommend that we set up a task force to draft a policy paper that will be the national policy statement on education. This task force will be comprised of: the Chief Education Officer and two senior staff members to be selected by her; the Chief Inspector; the President of the Community College of the Cayman Islands; the President of the International College of the Cayman Islands; two principals, one from a primary school and one from a secondary school; two teachers from schools not represented by their principals; and a representative from the Private Schools Administration Association and a member of the Education Council.

I also recommend that the task force be chaired by the Chief Education Officer and the secretary should be a representative from the Ministry of Education. In this case, I propose that it be the Senior Assistant Secretary.

The terms of reference should include reviewing the draft Education Law, since the policy and the law must work in tandem.

It is crucial that we have a new Education Law because the current one is antiquated. One of the things the law allows, which I am most uncomfortable with, is that currently it calls for the Minister of Education to be Chairman of the Council. I am uncomfortable with that and, indeed, I have remarked about that on a number of occasions when I was on the Back Bench.

The Chairman of the Education Council should be someone other than the Minister, and the Minister should be set up in a position to review and, if necessary, overturn decisions—sort of a court of appeal rather than the final arbiter of the decisions.

Because this is the busiest time of the school year, I am suggesting a timeline for the end of September for the first draft policy document. However, we should not wait long thereafter. It is of crucial importance that we get this draft policy document within the first year of the Government's coming to power so that we will have the next triennium to concentrate on implementing these policies.

If we get this by 30 September, this would give us time to consult, particularly with the public and Members of this House, and then table the draft policy statement to the Legislative Assembly during the Budget Debate so that we can begin to make preparations for the implementation of some of the policies by the 2002 Budget.

The challenge for the period between April and September will be to continue developing the five areas of concentration with the limited budget we have.

I must express appreciation to my colleagues on Executive Council for the support they gave to the needs of education in this country during a time of financial restraint and retrenchment.

On the matter of school improvement, the Government, through the Minister, has lived up to its stated position of tabling the Millett Report in its entirety. The Government now calls for a restructuring and retooling of the Education Department to deliver maximum support to the schools in carrying out the national education plan and their site based plans.

I asked, on behalf of the Government, for the Chief Education Officer to have her proposal by 10 May for the implementation of the Millett Report in the three phases Anthea Millett called for.

The first phase which was agreed on by the Chief Education Officer and I should be a restructuring of the Department.

I wish to see the Department restructured and a revisit to the terms of reference of the Members of the Department. I am not satisfied that we cannot have improvements in the Education Department. I would like this to be an internal matter. If it has to be done through the Ministry, they may not like how it is done. Therefore, I encourage them and support their handling of the matter internally.

I look forward to sharing with my colleagues on Executive Council by 10 May their plan for this first phase. I advise that the work be done during the summer months with the help of the Personnel Department.

Also in this phase will be the transfer of the Careers and Summer Internship Programme to the Employment Services Centre. The person responsible for the summer internship will be transferred to the new Strategic Human Resources Centre. I look forward to this. It will be a remarkable improvement.

By the end of September the administration of the scholarship funds should be transferred to the AIDB. This is an improvement effected by this Government. This will take an Executive Council decision, but I do not anticipate any problems. When I present the paper I am sure it will be supported.

There will not be any physical move of the funds until after the busy summer period is over. With the proper public relations scholarship, students should not be confused and the system should be more streamlined and more applicable than it is now.

Along with this will come a restructuring of the Education Council. This will be done by the Ministry and will depend upon the new Education Law being passed. Appointments under the new Law should also be made. We hope to get this in operation by the beginning of the New Year.

Another major improvement involves the Schools Inspectorate and the implementation of action plans arising out of such inspections. School inspections are now on a four-year cycle. Approximately nine schools have been inspected to date. Post inspection visits are scheduled appropriately to keep the pressure on the schools to address any shortcomings uncovered during inspection. It is the role of the Education Department to make sure that the action plans are properly developed and implemented.

The Schools Inspectorate is an excellent organisation and has pioneered a programme of leadership development that is to be encouraged and continued. Government would like to expand the inspection to the preschools and tertiary institutions; however, this will need to be part of future development of the Inspectorate as funds and staffing levels do not follow for this financial year.

The physical improvement of schools, especially the building of new schools, is a priority for this Government. However, the start of construction on the Spotts School, the Boatswain Bay School and the new Eastern District's high school has been slid back because of budgetary constraints. I hope that next year, when the clouds are less ominous, we can move forward with the improvement of these particular schools.

We are beginning to discuss and articulate a sensible plan for the development of technical and vocational education. The George Hicks High School is revising its timetable to allow students more exposure to technical subjects from Year 7.

I would like to see an orderly transition where students are introduced to technical and vocational subjects at the high school level and move on into the Community College. In the past it was expected to be developed at the Community College level without giving students proper introduction at the high school level. The success rate was not as it should have been.

Government needs to look critically at the present structure of secondary education. We are doing this and will assess whether or not it would be advantageous to change this to an 11 to 17-year system.

It is the Government's intention to convert the George Hicks High School into a full fledged institution. We realise this matter will need to be approached with some diligence and studiousness. It cannot be implemented for the beginning of this academic year, but we hope to be in a position to convert the school by September of 2002.

The last time this intention was announced, it met with objections from persons who, for their own reasons, wanted to build cults of personality. The education of Caymanian children is bigger than any one individual or all of us collectively. Improvements in education cannot be retarded by people who have personal designs to preserve their memories. If this move to convert the George Hicks High School into a full fledged high school is given the green light, this is the ideal time to reassess the curriculum of both Government high schools.

It is likely that outside help will have to be brought in, particularly if we engage in an in-depth examination of a technical and vocational studies curriculum which dovetails with what is offered at the Community College, avoiding the duplication that exists at present. Government will also assess the current policy which sites all government sponsored post secondary education at the Community College by considering whether it is advantageous to reintroduce the advanced levels at the high school level.

It is imperative that technical and vocational education is developed in the occupational areas most crucial to the development of the national economy.

Government realises that not everyone can be an attorney or a CPA or major in Business Administration however important these are. The developing economy of the Cayman Islands needs carpenters, plumbers, electricians, masons, mechanics, agricultural technicians and people of this nature.

In terms of information and communication technology, the Government's objective is for every child leaving one of our high schools to be able to use this technology and integrate it into the workplace or further studies. We hope to see an information/communication technology profile developed with the help of the E-Business Advisory Board, which will inform the schools of the IT skills a typical 17 year old would be expected to have.

A few years ago, it could have been said that it was appropriate to have computer hardware in place in our schools. Now, however, in a field that is rapidly advancing, much of the schools' computer hardware is obsolete.

This year, computer laboratories need to be replaced at both Cayman Brac and John Gray High Schools. With the help of the P3ET Committee we hope to establish a hardware/software and training standard for each level, and carry out a survey to tell us what our information technology needs are in each school to help us bring these up to standard.

It is our objective to make each teacher literate in information technology. This must be a requirement for hiring future staff. It would also be good to institute the idea of continuing education in teaching.

I was surprised to learn that many of our teachers have been instructing for years without refresher courses—no upgrade in methodology, teaching techniques, presentation of the latest material, and no exposure to computer assisted instruction. That is not good enough! I have said, in no uncertain terms, that I expect the Education Department to ensure that our teachers regularly avail themselves of refresher courses.

I consider citizen education crucial, particularly if the Cayman Islands continue to mould themselves into a multi-racial, multi-ethnic, democratic society.

The entire community is aware of the recent problems with gang behaviour, including violence that sometimes leads to loss of life. While the joint Ministerial Committee for youth violence, set up under the chairmanship of MLA Dr. Frank McField, will address this and make recommendations, the schools must take a proactive stance.

I expect that standards of acceptable behaviour will be taught and promoted in the schools. However, the schools cannot do it alone. The home and the community at large will be expected to play a role in the development and promotion of acceptable standards of behaviour.

In terms of citizenship, the Commonwealth sets great store in citizenship education for a multi-cultural and global community. We look forward to support from the Commonwealth Secretariat and the Commonwealth Institute for the promotion of citizenship education.

The newly created position of Life Skills Coordinator will be filled in September and will put in place, for the first time, teaching staff trained to implement the new citizenship curriculum.

In terms of teacher training, the Government, through the Ministry, established a committee of eminent persons to examine the teaching service in the Cayman Islands with a view to making recommendations as to how it can be improved. The committee is under the chairmanship of Mr. Gilbert McLean, MLA, whose meticulous, bureaucratic sanity and excellent organisational sense should bode the committee well for an excellent and authoritative report. If all goes according to schedule, the committee will deliver its interim report in a few weeks' time.

The Ministry anticipates the forthcoming insights and recommendations. It is hoped that we can use these findings as a launching board for a campaign to attract more Caymanian teachers, particularly more male Caymanian teachers into the profession.

Mr. Gilbert A. McLean: Here, here!

Hon. Roy Bodden: We feel there is an absence of positive role models in our society. If we can start populating our classrooms with them, that may prove promising for the future growth of young Caymanian men along positive lines.

The Millett Report identified training of teachers as a top priority. I have been saying for years that our country cannot do well until we get more of our own people in the teaching profession. There are many programmes we could model in trying to attract Caymanian teachers.

I used to remind my predecessor about one in the United States called "Teach for America" where they not only attract new people into teacher training but they convert accountants, attorneys and all these people who want to make an impact on young people. Some of them switch streams mid-career to go into teaching. These are the kinds of changes that would positively impact Caymanian society. We have to find a way to increase the proportion of Caymanian teachers.

At this time of financial constraints, every opportunity for alternative training must be examined. I will speak to my colleagues and political directory about establishing a teacher training programme here.

I would like to see a concurrent degree programme where two degrees are offered over a four-year period: a bachelor's degree in a discipline (history, sociology, economics, literature); and a bachelor of education which is accompanied by a teaching certificate. I believe we can develop such a programme between our two community colleges with collaboration from outside experienced institutions.

I went to an institution where such a concurrent programme was implemented. Indeed, at Queen's University there was an existing contract with the Bermudan Government to train their teachers. Upon the enrollment of 12 students, Queen's University made professors available. They flew down for a period of the training during summers and other times. In the final year the students went up to the campus in Ontario.

Before my tenure concludes, I will explore this possibility. I believe that just as we have a Law School, we should have a teacher training college. Indeed, if asked, I would say that we should have had the teacher training college before we had the Law School because teachers train lawyers!

Now that the Law School is established and successful, I hope we find the political will and economic means to develop a teacher training college so that we can make progress on this road to educational self-sufficiency. Teachers must be exposed to good practice through attendance at professional conferences like the International Reading Organisation and teacher exchanges.

Since I have joined Ministry, we have been working on a teacher-exchange programme for 2002 through the auspices of the British Council where British teachers will come to Cayman on an exchange and later Caymanian teachers will go to Britain.

I spoke to my Permanent Secretary and the Chief Education Officer about establishing a system of sabbatical, especially for our principals, who labour under intense pressure and stress. I wish to see principals, as well as other staff members, allowed to go to places like Florida, the UK and Canada on three-month, six-month, a year's sabbatical.

The Cayman Islands Government would assume financial responsibility for the salary of the Caymanian staff. They would be hosted by the government of the country with which we have the exchange. While we would be responsible for the salary, all the housing arrangements would be taken care of by the host government. The obverse would be true. I believe this kind of arrangement would be an incentive for people, particularly young people, to join the teaching profession and remain in it.

There are other areas the Ministry needs to look at. One of these—which is most topical at this time—is the graduation criteria and increased emphasis on literacy and numeracy. One of the things we talk about at the Ministry level is the birth of criteria, where every student leaving high schools leaves with a recognised and acceptable matriculation certificate.

In discussions with the Chamber of Commerce, I have asked them to set up a committee that would establish the criterion for the skills and knowledge necessary for students. We want to create a matriculation certificate acceptable to all establishments in the Cayman Islands, including government. For want of a better name, we could call it the "Cayman Islands Baccalaureate".

It would allow a student graduating from our high schools to get a job as a bank teller, a clerk in a law office, or a clerical or executive officer in the government service. It would not allow the student to enter university because it would only be qualifications recognised in the Cayman Islands. It would be structured in modules so students would have at least two chances to build the necessary complement of subjects that would allow them to qualify for the diploma.

However, if a student reached the age where he had to leave high school, it would be structured so he could study externally and still take the exam. He could do it one subject or two subjects at a time in order to get the certificate. For example, if he left high school because of age, it is possible that he could still take the two lacking subjects to qualify for the certificate. It would not be limited to chances while still in high school. It could be taken through extension courses afterwards.

We are determined, through the public sector/private sector partnership with the Ministry and the Chamber, to set this in place so that we can have some recognised and acceptable graduating criteria for our students.

We want to think of learning as life-long. The policy improvements in education will work in tandem with the strategic Human Resources Centre in terms of retooling skills and exposing our people—not just the school aged—so they may benefit. Learning will not just be limited to formal schooling up to age 18, but beyond.

The bedrock of the Ministry's philosophy is to optimise our people's contribution to the national development.

I am committed to doing this in a structured manner that will include consultation with all the stakeholders in a way rooted in diagnosis, analysis and policy development leading to the maximisation of all students' and stakeholders' potential.

Education and training must be for the Cayman Islands what Napoleon thought the Citizens' Army embodied for France—it must be the vitality of the nation, the purification of its morality and the real foundation of all habits.

Government, through the Ministry of Education, recognises that there are changes in the Cayman Islands' society. If Caymanians are to benefit, education and training must be the catalysts that allow them to take optimum advantage of these changes.

This political directorate has given its commitment, and this Minister is prepared to undertake . . . I do not want to say "reform" and I certainly do not want to say "revolution" because revolutions and Roy Bodden do not go well in this society.

We have given the undertaking to move education forward in ways and areas hitherto unseen.

I am coached by my Leader to say that it can only be described as a timely evolution. Indeed, I will be comfortable with that!

It is in recognition of these facts that the Ministry and, by inference, the Government place such great importance on the progress of educational policy and an educational system designed to promote awareness, importance and appreciation in the stakeholders.

For the first time in the history of Caymanian politics, the Cayman Islands has a government with the personnel at the political level capable of doing great things in education and training.

While it is true that we are not in the best of financial positions, I know that by the next budget (God willing) things will become clearer and we will move forward with greater improvements in education and training.

I will spend my last few minutes talking about my constituency of Bodden Town.

To say that I owe a deep debt of gratitude to the people of Bodden Town is the greatest understatement I can make. I owe these people more than my future, more than my service or my intellect.

I must apologise because we are currently making some adjustments to how we can best open an office that will serve as an MLA Office that all three Members can have access to. We do not believe we should have three different office locations. In addition, there have been some requests which we have put forward for things needed.

I am confident that we can continue to build a community in Bodden Town that everyone can be proud of. We are committed to this. Although we may have had some difference in direction in the past, the current Representatives are working together to bring the best for the community and the country. I eagerly look forward to the next years.

Working together as a government, with God's help, we can do great things. This is a Parliament full of promise and history. For the first time in the history of this Parliament, we are peopled by a complement of young Caymanians qualified with vision and dynamism and ability to move this country forward.

The Backbench is loaded with capable Members. I am honoured to serve among such dedicated and distinguished people. It is a blessing to have been elected at a time when events and history in the Cayman Islands have changed for the positive. The dinosaurs are now extinct! Parliament is full of promise.

It is a blessing to have been born in interesting times. I look forward to a complete transition when persons of my age and genre will see the younger, more dynamic, more intelligent and (dare I say?) more nationalistic Caymanians on the verge of becoming the leaders this country needs.

It is my understanding that recently both talk shows have been concerned with certain educational events. I end on this because I think it is important that I promote this understanding.

It is my information that one of the topics of concern was government support for private schools. I thought about this and investigated at length into the relationship.

This Government is based on building partnerships and trust. The relationship that existed between the government schools, the private schools and government has to continue.

Education in the Cayman Islands has to be a partnership between what is offered at the private school level and what is offered at the public school level. I am content the government continue to support the private schools for obvious reasons, not the least of which is the fact that the private schools play an important role. Were they to go out of existence, it would increase the government's responsibility.

At the same time, the private schools have to recognise that because they receive public funds they have to be accountable. So, they have to make themselves open to the Schools Inspectorate.

The Government would like to know how these funds are expended because the Back Bench will demand that. We do not want to tell them how they have to run their schools on a day-to-day basis, but we expect to be apprised of major decisions and major policies.

I support the partnership. It is my desire to continue. I have had cordial relations and have visited all but two of the private schools. I would have visited them had my schedule not suddenly crowded. I intend to complete the circuit by visiting the Baptist and St. Ignatius schools as soon as time allows. I wish to assure the private schools that they will have the government's continued support as it is our desire to strengthen this partnership. We believe that Caymanian society can only benefit from a partnership between the public and private sectors.

In conclusion, as the Minister Responsible for Education, I feel confident that the challenges and problems we face can be surmounted successfully. I look forward to leading the Government's policies in the field of education and training. I look forward to delivering positive results for my country and Caymanian society. It is what the country and the society need and deserve. With God's help I can meet the future confidently and pledge to do my best to provide the greatest opportunities available through resources we have for Caymanian stakeholders in education. Thank you.

The Speaker: At this time we shall suspend proceedings for 15 minutes.

PROCEEDINGS SUSPENDED AT 11.19 AM

PROCEEDINGS RESUMED AT 11.45 AM

The Speaker: Proceedings are resumed. Debate continuing on the Appropriation Bill, 2001. Does any Member wish to speak?

The Second Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. Alden M. McLaughlin, Jr.: Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

I rise to offer my contribution to the debate on the Throne Speech delivered by His Excellency the Governor on Friday, 9 March 2001, and also on the Budget Address delivered by the Honourable Third Official Member on Wednesday, 21 March 2001.

On this, my first debate, I wish to take the opportunity to extend my heartfelt thanks to the people of George Town for their confidence in electing me to this Honourable House. I regard that trust as sacred and I shall do all I can to ensure that it is not misplaced.

Election to this Honourable House is a weighty responsibility. In the current climate, it is a particularly serious one. At no other point in this country's history has its Elected Representatives been faced with so many critical issues all at once.

This country is at a watershed, perhaps the most critical yet. The myriad of issues confronting us are grave.

We must grapple immediately with the international initiatives of the Organization for Economic Cooperation and Development (OECD) and the Financial Action Task Force (FATF); a budget crises unlike any this country has ever known; a pressing need for education reform; and equally pressing, if not more urgent, the need for immigration reform.

There is the impending Constitutional review we must all deal with, and then there are major societal problems including youth violence. Many matters have gone unattended for a long time and must be dealt with by Members of this new Parliament.

There has never been a time when this country has needed more diligent and capable representation than it does now. Notwithstanding the many differences, divisiveness and acrimony which mark the formation of the current Government, it is our collective responsibility to put those matters aside and work towards bringing this country back on track - a heavy responsibility we all shoulder. We must work to engender a spirit of cooperation and mutual respect among all Members of this Honourable House.

I am moved to record how deeply disappointed I was that, in his contribution to this debate, the Second Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman saw fit to launch an unwarranted and unprovoked attack upon the professionalism of a number of Members of this Honourable House. I consider myself included in that attack.

I view such conduct as churlish and completely unbecoming the hallowed Chambers of this Honourable House.

I was heartened, Mr. Speaker, that you caused that Honourable Member to withdraw his remarks. I hope that will not set the tone for the next four years—there is far too much for us to do to engage in petty rivalry.

I do not suggest for one moment that we should all agree. Differences of opinion bring perspective to issues and provide the checks and balances necessary to the proper running of any democracy. Constructive opposition is healthy and is to be encouraged. But let that criticism be constructive.

The months that have passed since we were elected have been busy for us all. I can safely say that all Members of this Honourable House are now engaged full-time in the representation of this country; the days of part-time representation are a thing of the past.

In the short time I have been here I am impressed by the ability of all Members of this House, particularly with their willingness to work hard at whatever task presents itself, whether in committees or in this Honourable Chamber. That is just as well because there is so very much to be done. If this country is to be restored to a stable and prosperous state, it will take the best that each of us has to offer.

Listening to the Throne Speech and Budget Address, I was struck with one enduring impression—the chickens have come home to roost with a vengeance!

I have often asked myself over these past six months or so what the former government would have done had they returned to this Honourable House and been faced with the enormous problems that currently exist. I asked myself whether or not they would have pretended that everything was fine, continuing to live the lie.

However, having seen the recent press statement issued by four members of the defeated Executive Council—Mr. Truman Bodden, Mr. Thomas Jef-erson, Mr. John McLean, and the Honourable First Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman—my question has been loudly and obscenely answered! The country now knows that had they been re-elected, indeed, the past government would have continued to live the lie and carried on business as usual.

Life teaches all of us some important lessons. I cannot help but reflect on the controversy surrounding the formation of this new Government, particularly the way in which the First Elected Member for George Town—now Minister of Planning, Communications and Works, and Leader of Government Business—and I were castigated and vilified by the Third Elected Member for George Town, the Second Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman, the First Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman, and the Second Elected Member for Bodden Town.

The First Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman was a Minister in the past government. She was, no doubt, most upset that she had not gained a seat in the new Executive Council. However, the First Elected Member for George Town, me, and indeed the Third Elected Member for George Town, campaigned vigorously against Mr. Truman Bodden and his government. The people of George Town sent a very clear message—they had had enough!

The irony is that we now know, given the continued close association by the First Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman with Mr. Truman Bodden, that had she gained a seat in the new Executive Council, Mr. Truman Bodden would continue to run this country from outside these Honourable Chambers. That would have been a betrayal of the trust the people of George Town placed in all of us who were elected from that district.

The Lord moves in mysterious ways, Mr. Speaker, His wonders to perform. So, I say, particularly to the Third Elected Member for George Town, every disappointment is not a misfortune.

The past government continued to spread misleading information about the finances of this country. Even with this spin-doctoring, the people of this country recognise we are now paying the price for the culture of denial which has underpinned virtually every aspect of this country's governance for a quarter of a century, particularly so over the course of the last eight years.

The most recent example of this is the disclosure of the tourist arrival figures being grossly overstated for the past seven years by the new Honourable Minister responsible for the Ministry of Tourism, Environment and Transport.

The new Government's approach must dismantle all trappings of this culture and replace it with one of realism and pragmatism. I believe that the current Budget Address and Throne Speech provide substantial evidence of this significant, philosophical change.

This new culture of realism and pragmatism of which I speak and the change it involves is bound to be painful. For a time there will continue to be those who complain about changing the way government conducts business. Hard decisions are necessary if Cayman is to prosper. We must be willing to make those hard decisions.

When I began I said that the chickens had come home to roost with a vengeance. The chickens to which I refer all have a common genesis, that is, the uncontrolled and haphazard way in which this country has been permitted to develop over the course of the past three decades. For years and years, Cayman's only development policy has been that more is better—so the more, the better!

We happily rode the development train for more than a quarter of a century with no regard for the cost of the ride. As we only now begin to understand, the cost of that ride has been very high. The debt collector has come calling and we are now paying dearly for what we naively thought was a free ride. We are paying that cost in a number of currencies—financial, social, infrastructural, and environmental.

When we have regard to the draft estimates of expenditure and revenue for this country for the year ending 31 December 2001, we get a real good understanding of just how high the financial costs have been. That view is reinforced when we read the words of the Honourable Third Official Member, the Financial Secretary, contained in his Budget Address.

That Budget document which was laid on the Table of this Honourable House seeks, among other things, approval for Government to borrow some $26.2 million to fund the recurrent revenue of this country for the year 2001. That means that we are in a deficit spending position. That is cause for grave concern!

That is not a situation that has developed overnight and is certainly not the result of the current Government's policy. No! The writing has been on the wall for years and years.

However, typical of the culture of denial which characterised their administration, the past government pretended that all was well and carried on like ostriches with their heads buried very deep in the sand!

The current Government's deficit spending position is a result of a fundamentally flawed philosophy of authority carried on in this country right up until the recent election.

The global economy continued in an expansion mode for the past decade and only began showing signs of slowing down towards the latter part of last year. During this period, the Cayman Islands also enjoyed and prospered from this boom. It now appears that the past government believed this boom would go on indefinitely. They certainly spent money as though that were the case.

Well, the chickens have come home to roost and now we must pay the piper!

There appears to have been no economic or fiscal plan for this country over the course of the past eight years and little or no regard paid to the long-term fiscal impact of new government projects or programmes. The inevitable result is that government's recurrent expenditure has grown from $138 million in 1994 to $283 million at the end of last year—an alarming increase of 105 percent!

Of even greater concern, government's recurrent revenue only grew by some 84 percent over the same period, from $152.1 million in 1994 to $279.3 million at the end of last year. In addition, over the course of the past eight years, the last administration drew down some $135 million in loans and central government debt increased from $27.1 million in 1992 to $93.7 million at the end of last year.

So, no matter what the former Leader of Government Business—in my view, the master of subterfuge—or his loyal members and followers may say, those are the cold, hard facts.

It should have been apparent to even the most blind and optimistic Members of the defeated Executive Council that this pattern of deficit spending was going to result in the cash crises in which the new Government found itself when attaining office in November of last year.

I wish to speak about the situation the new Government found itself in when assuming office in November of last year.

The un-audited accounts of government for the year 2000 show that at the end of last year the country had an accumulated deficit of $10.7 million after the transfer of $5 million from general reserves to general revenue, and a treasury overdraft of some $14 million. In addition, government owed civil servants some $6 million in back pay, and suppliers and others a further $5.6 million. These three items totalled $22.3 million.

When I heard the former Leader of Government Business recently say on TV—at least three times—that his government had not left a deficit, I was amazed. The only thing it brought to mind were the words of that popular song by Shaggy, "It wasn't me!"

They say I left a deficit—but it wasn't me!

They say I was responsible—but it wasn't me!

They say I was Leader of Government Business—but it wasn't me!"

That is the culture of denial which has underlined every aspect of the supremacy of this country for the past eight years to which I referred at the start of my debate.

As the new Leader of Government Business recently said, faced with the state of affairs the new Government had a major policy decision to make in order to clear off the $22.3 million in financial commitments the last administration left.

The new Government could have continued the $15 million overdraft this Honourable House approved in December, and left a number of the bills outstanding for a period of time. They could have sought to raise a further $26.5 million by tax measures, that is, in addition to the $19.9 million contained in the current budget. They could have drawn down the remainder of the general reserves of $10.1 million and cut back public services by a further $16.4 million. They could have done what they did, borrow over the medium term to pay down the overdraft and pay the outstanding commitments the past government left behind.

Borrowing money for the purposes of financing recurrent revenue is not a very happy state of affairs. Having explored the options and discussed this matter at considerable length with many people in the private sector, as well as within the civil service, I am satisfied that this time around it was the only way for government to finance the recurrent expenditure of this country.

I must also clear up one other misrepresentation that has been circulating, relating to the increase in Government's expenditure for the year 2001.

The total expenditure for the year 2000, as set out in unaudited accounts of government, was some $341.3 million. The total figure budgeted for 2001 was $360.3 million—an increase of 5.6 percent in total expenditure between the years 2000 and 2001.

In a recent press statement issued by the two Honourable Members from Cayman Brac and Little Cayman, and the Second and Third Elected Members for Bodden Town, they stated it was the new Government's intention, to spend approximately 20 percent more than the year before [being 2000]. The difference between $341.3 million and $360.3 million is 5.6 percent—not 20 percent! The arithmetic employed by those Honourable Members is plainly and obviously wrong.

Yet, the misrepresentation did not stop there. In fact, the press release went on to say that the proposed $19.9 million revenue package brought new taxes, some of which they [being the new government] state will be retroactive to January 1, 2001. This part of the statement bears no relation to the truth. There are no retroactive taxes proposed in the 2001 Budget.

The two Honourable Members for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman and the Second and Third Elected Members for Bodden Town have every right to be critical of government policy. That is their democratic right. They may even believe that is their function. However, all Honourable Members have a duty to not misrepresent the facts to the people of this country.

It is perhaps forgivable that the First Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman and the Third Elected Member for Bodden Town would issue such a statement. They both were Ministers in the former government and are either completely unaware of the financial affairs of this country or are still living in a state of denial.

The Second Elected Member for Bodden Town and the Second Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman surprised me. The Second Elected Member for Bodden Town is a trained teacher, and the Second Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman is an economist. I am certain that both of them have a sufficiently good grasp of math to understand that the difference between $341.3 million and $360.3 million is 5.6 percent and not 20 percent as they alleged.

I was also astounded at the contribution by the Second Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman and his criticisms of what he described as the "impotent budget". I do not believe that his tortured exposition on economics warrants a substantive response, but I will say this for his contribution: so loud the thunder, but so little it rains!

It is important that we carefully analyse what transpired over the course of the last four years to ensure that the same mistakes are not made again and that we understand what brought about the current budget crises. I will now turn to what I consider to be four major policy blunders committed by the last government that contributed significantly to the country's current financial state. Some were mentioned by the Fourth Elected Member for West Bay in his contribution, but I shall repeat them on the basis of the principle I have often heard enunciated by the Honourable Minister of Health: repetition bears emphasis!

The first of these is the seamen's grant. This grant implemented by the past government in August of last year- and which has been the subject of much discussion in this Honourable House and elsewhere - is estimated to cost Government between $4 million to $5 million per annum. The funds expended last year to pay this grant were not provided for in the 2000 Budget. Further, no source of revenue was identified to fund this grant by the last administration.

Government cannot simply decide, in the middle of a financial year, to spend money which is not budgeted for without knowing where that money is coming from. This country has got to escape the mindset that there is a money tree growing behind the Glass House that government can shake any time it needs funds.

The second policy blunder is what I term "Import Duty Rollback".

In last year's Throne Speech, the last government proudly announced a programme to roll back duty on a number of items. One of these was the Bakery Goods category on which the new Government has just reinstated duty. In a recent press release issued by the four Members of the defeated Executive Council, to which I referred earlier, they have cited the rollback of these duties as an example of their good and benevolent governance. What they have not told the people of this country is that that impulsive rollback of duties resulted in a $10 million to $12 million revenue loss last year.

They did not tell the people of this country—and still have not told the people of this country—that the 2000 Budget revenue estimates had not been adjusted downwards to reflect this expected loss of revenue. So, when we bear this kind of deliberately misleading accounting in mind, we get a fair idea of why there was a shortfall in revenue last year and why this country is in a position of deficit spending.

The third policy blunder is the health service fee increase promise. The past government gave a commitment to revise the health services fees in 2000. This revision was anticipated to yield some $3.5 million in additional revenue from health services. The other aspect of what I would term their "health fees package", which amounted to some $6 million, included additional collections from health insurance for civil servants and a streamlining of revenue collection and other administrative procedures.

Actual collections for the year 2000 fell short by some $5 million, the majority of which are directly attributable to the past government's failure to implement the fee increases as promised.

Perhaps the most famous of the policy blunders is the capital projects funding shift.

During the latter half of the year 2000, the past government shifted almost $10 million in appropriation and borrowing from capital projects such as the Lighthouse School to fund their election road-paving plan. This transfer of funds was done through a series of contingency warrants without the matter being referred to the Finance Committee or to this Honourable House.

The present Government still has to deal with this blunder to this very day. While we still debate the 2001 Budget, building contracts are in force, work is ongoing, but the money borrowed to complete these much needed projects has been used to build roads.

I spoke at some length about the shortcomings of the fiscal policy of the last administration and how they have resulted in the grave financial position the country is now in. I acknowledge that it is not enough to simply find fault. Fault finders must be fault menders as well. So, I will suggest some fundamental changes I believe are necessary if this country's financial position is to be retrieved.

The Honourable Third Official Member outlined 16-policy decisions in his Budget Address which underpin the 2001 Budget. By and large, these policies are aimed at restricting the growth in government services and personnel, which is key and, I believe, the correct approach in the short term. However, in the long term fundamental changes are necessary, and government's overall role and character must be radically redefined.

To put it bluntly, government is too big and too expensive! The reason why government is so big and expensive is because of the voracious appetite this country has developed for services. Government is simply expected to do too much.

We have also developed, tragically in my view, a mindset that government is responsible for everything. We have to realise that every new capital project that government builds or completes carries with it not just the capital cost of construction, but the recurrent cost of operating that particular building.

Every new civic centre that government builds requires more staff to operate it and more money to maintain it. Government must pay for its upkeep and its utility bills.

This is the case with every capital project. Every new programme that government puts in place has both a capital and recurrent cost of operating it.

Every programme needs a building, equipment and staff to run it. That is a realisation the past administration never appeared to have. It is a critical realisation that we must come to or we will have even more serious problems than those we currently face.

There is always the cry that the Civil Service is too large. That is everyone's answer to government's recurrent revenue problem. The Civil Service is large. It represents a disproportionate percentage of government's recurrent expenditure. Fifty seven percent of the current budget goes to pay the salaries of government employees. That is a lot.

During Question Time at this meeting of the Legislative Assembly, the Honourable First Official Member was asked to state the number of civil servants. He put the number at 2,715, but confirmed that the number did not include the category of government employees known as "group employees."

I was somewhat disappointed that the Honourable First Official Member was either unwilling or unable to state the number of group employees because it is important we get the true number of people to whom government writes a paycheque in order to fully understand how significant government's workforce is.

I did a bit of independent research and determined that the number of group employees is around 1,200. So, that brings the number of government's workforce to approximately 3,900. The Civil Service is not large simply because of the powers that want it to be, it is principally because of the country's continued demand for more and more services.

While I accept and believe that there is room for improved efficiency, I do not believe that we can significantly reduce the size of the Civil Service without a corresponding reduction in the number of services the country demands that government provide.

Over the long term, if this country is to prosper we are going to have to reduce our reliance on government provided services and we will have to stop expecting government to subsidise basic services such as garbage collection and health care.

In turn, government has to adopt a philosophy that involves a systematic and structured reduction in the size of the Civil Service. This cannot and should not be expected to occur over night, but it must happen.

I am not talking about a hurried and arbitrary cutting of Civil Service jobs; what I am talking about is a critical evaluation of the Civil Service, the services it provides and the adoption of a long-term programme of retrenchment. If we do not do this, and if the Civil Service continues to grow the way it has over the past six years, the cost of operating central government will strangle this country to death.

As part of becoming more efficient generally, government must improve on its ability to collect monies owed to it. I will deal with two examples where I believe there is much scope for improvement.

The first, the most obvious, is the collection of health services fees.

The situation of outstanding overseas medical advances, loans and local receivable balances is worrying. At the end of June 2000, the total amount owed to government in respect of these combined accounts was approximately $41 million. Of that, some $4 million had become owing in the first six months of the year 2000.

In my view, there has been insufficient action over many years to address this ever increasing amount of money owed to the Health Services Department.

I know that in the past there has been public resistance to paying health services fees. When one gets an invoice and must decide whether to pay that or pay Cable & Wireless or CUC, guess which one gets tossed out?

It appears that over the years government has had no credible threat of legal action to recover these sums. So, the outstanding accounts are ignored with impunity.

I understand that over the course of the last couple of years or so, a Debt Collection section has been established at the Treasury. From reports, this section has had some modest success in recovering outstanding sums due the government. In my view, this is not enough. The sums of money involved are so substantial that they warrant the assignment of personnel within government's Legal Department to pursue the recovery. These outstanding sums need to be evaluated to determine what amounts are collectable and what are not. We need to write off those that are not collectable and pursue with vigour those that have some possibility of recovery.

I come now to garbage fees—perhaps the best example of inefficiencies in government's system of collection.

It is a general, accepted fact that a significant percentage of the houses in Cayman do not pay garbage collection fees. I recognize that is principally because there has been no database from which invoices could properly be generated to those who receive this service. I understand this situation is currently being addressed, and I urge upon the Minister responsible to place an increased sense of urgency on this so that the revenue rightfully owed from this source can be collected.

That is only part of the story in relation to garbage fees. The reality is that the household garbage collection costs government (from what I gather) some $300 per household per year. However, government is charging households $100 per year. It is this kind of subsidy that this country cannot afford. It is even worse than ever.

We must turn our minds to these matters if we are going to reduce government's expenditure and increase its revenue base.

While I am on the subject, in my view this is a particular service I feel government should consider divesting. This is a service which can, and in my view should, be privatised. If we achieved this, it would have the triple virtue of reducing the number of government employees, cutting equipment cost, and removing the need for government to subsidise this essential service. We must think along the lines of privatisation if we are to contain the growth of the civil service and reduce the amount of services government is required to provide.

I am about to move on to another subject, if this would be a convenient time, Sir.

The Speaker: If it is the wish of the House, we shall suspend proceedings until 2.15 pm.

PROCEEDINGS SUSPENDED AT 12.40 PM

PROCEEDINGS RESUMED AT 2.26 PM

The Speaker: Proceedings are resumed. Debate continues on the Second Reading of the Appropriation Bill, 2001. The Second Elected Member for George Town continuing.

Mr. Alden M. McLaughlin, Jr.: Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

During the morning session I expounded at some length about the need for government to curtail its expenditures and to have a more efficient means of collecting revenue due to it. This afternoon I will talk about that most difficult and controversial of issues: taxation or revenue enhancement measures as sometimes euphemistically described.

Cayman has never had income taxes or any form of significant direct taxation. The system of indirect taxation that has matured over the past 30 years or so has served this country well. The lack of any tax on profits, income or property has largely fuelled the significant development and encouraged tremendous foreign investment this country has experienced in my short lifetime.

Until fairly recently, these forms of indirect taxation—duty on foodstuffs, vehicles, licensing fees, stamp duty on land transfers and leases—have served to raise sufficient revenue to run central government.

It has become more and more evident that these traditional sources of revenue are no longer sufficient. What is also painfully obvious to us all is that we cannot continue to increase taxes on the necessities of life. While I fully appreciate the current Government's predicament, due to the last administration's financial quagmire, I must say that I agree with the Third Elected Member for George Town and the Elected Member for East End who say it is wrong in principle to tax basic and essential foodstuffs.

I am prepared to support, as an interim measure, the revenue-enhancement package contained in the draft budget because I believe there was not much else the new Government could have done. I do so, however, with a considerable degree of reluctance. I say to the new Government that I will need a great deal of convincing to support a similar tax measure in the future.

I think it is obvious to all Members of this House, and to the wider community, that if we are going to avoid the prospect of direct taxation we have to find alternative sources of revenue. This is a challenging exercise, and I applaud the efforts of the new Government for creating a Fiscal Advisory Committee, chaired by Mr. Robert Bodden, to identify potential sources of revenue. I anticipate receiving the committee's report in due course.

I believe that Government can make better use of its assets as revenue earners. For example, the property behind the public library that has served as a public car park for at least the last 25 years has earned government not one penny over that period. That is extremely valuable property located in the heart of the commercial district of George Town. I believe Government needs to give consideration to developing that property, either as a multi-storey car park or as an office complex that could be leased out.

The Tower Building is another example of government property that I believe is not properly utilised. The Tower Building is prime commercial property with a view of the sea. Although it is in rather poor condition at the moment, I believe that it would command an attractive rent once properly refurbished as an office accommodation. What makes this proposal even more viable is that, as it currently stands, the Tower Building is inadequate to accommodate the many government departments it houses. Government needs to build another facility. If and when this is done, the opportunity should be seized to turn the Tower Building into an income-earning asset.

Government has to start thinking more like an entrepreneur if we are to avoid the prospect of direct taxation. Cayman has its share of entrepreneurs who have made substantial fortunes out of establishing and leasing office accommodation in central George Town. I believe that Government would fare equally well.

I now turn to the financial industry. Having worked in the financial community for some 17 years, I say that the financial industry in this country does not bear its fair share of the tax burden. The stakeholders in the financial industry generate significant profits. Carrying on business in Cayman provides profit opportunities that would be difficult to realise elsewhere. It is my view that this industry needs to contribute significantly more to the coffers of government to ensure that this favourable environment in which they currently operate continues.

Now there is even more justification for asking the financial industry to contribute more. The financial industry costs the government significant sums of money as government negotiates with OECD, FATF and other international agencies to set up and administer regulatory framework now necessary to comply with far-reaching international initiatives. For example, the Monetary Authority has had to increase its staff from 48 only 15 months ago to 73 as we speak. By the year 2003, the staff complement is expected to increase to 129.

The recurrent cost of operating the Monetary Authority has risen from $5.2 million last year to $8.5 million this year. By the end of next year that cost is expected to rise to $10.6 million and by the end of 2004 it is expected to be $13.5 million.

Plainly, we cannot expect to pay for these increased costs by taxing food or any of the other items that affect the ordinary man on the street. These costs need to be borne fairly and squarely by the industry on whose behalf they are being incurred.

These are some of the difficult decisions that need to be made. Government needs to sit down with the financial community just as it did when crafting the 2001 Budget. There is no point in shunning away from what many in the past have considered the "sacred cow". The surest way to destroy this country is to increase the tax burden on the little man on the street who has a very limited share in the tremendous profits generated by the financial industry and big businesses.

The Honourable Third Official Member responsible for Finance and Economic Development said that this year's budget was being presented in a medium-term context that more realistically reflects Government's current and future financial position.

This logical approach is refreshing after years of "Trumanomics" when deficits were presented as profits and no one outside of Executive Council knew what the financial position of the country truly was. It is only by accepting and confronting our problems that we will be able to resolve them.

I believe now that government, and the country as a whole, have a clearer understanding of the seriousness of our financial position. We are, at last, on the road to recovery.

I feel that with planning, fiscal restraint and the identification of innovative sources of revenue, this country's financial position can be restored. It will be up to all of us—Government, the Back Bench, Civil Service and the Private Sector—to ensure it happens.

I will now move on to deal with the Throne Speech. The Throne Speech is extensive and deals with so many issues that it would be impossible for me to debate all of them with any degree of effectiveness. So, I propose to take a number of them in some detail. The fact that I have not dealt with others does not mean that I regard them as unimportant.

I start this segment of my contribution on the same theme as the Budget Address: first, with the lack of any growth-management policy for this country over, approximately, the past three decades; then the consequent uncontrolled and haphazard development that has followed.

I feel that virtually all of Cayman's problems—and there are many of them—can be traced back to the unbridled pace of this country's development over the course of three decades. While it is our natural tendency to blame all of Cayman's social problems on immigration, the truth of the matter is that the root cause of our problems is the pace of development.

Immigration is a consequence of development, not the other way around. It is the unprecedented pace of development that has driven the population explosion from approximately 11,000 in 1970 to approximately 40,000 now—an increase of almost 400 percent.

This morning the census from last year was laid on the Table of this Honourable House by the Honourable Third Official Member. I feel it is worthwhile to refer to parts of the summary of that census.

The Census determined that the resident population of the Cayman Islands, on Census Night, stood at 39,410, and the population of the Cayman Islands grew by 55.4 percent over the 1989 Census figure of 25,355. Fifty three percent of the population were Caymanian, either through parentage or grants of status for other reasons. This number declined from 67 percent in 1989.

The number of Caymanians in the country grew at a modest rate of 1.9 percent per annum between 1989 and 1999. The Caymanian population grew from 16,868 in 1989 to 20,491 in 1999. Over the same period, the non-Caymanian population more than doubled, growing at 8.2 percent per annum. The number of non-Caymanians living in the Cayman Islands on Census Day was 18,529, up from 8,387 in 1989.

Further, there were 26,850 persons in the labour force during the week of 3-9 October 1999, and (this is significant) 42 percent of the employed labour force was Caymanian. That means that 58 percent of the labour force was non-Caymanian.

Due to the pace of development and the need for skilled labour, the long-held fear for Caymanians that the day would come when they became a minority in their own country is fast coming true.

That development brought with it more opportunities for Caymanians and a lifestyle that, in many respects, is the envy of the world. That development has come at a very high cost, and social tensions continue to grow as Caymanians become a smaller percentage of the population. Caymanians are growing increasingly anxious about this.

We see this concern becoming more evident everyday—on the talk shows, in the press and in conversation with people on the street. We see the angry and sometimes irrational reaction of Caymanians when the likes of Gordon Barlow make pejorative and demeaning remarks about Cayman and Caymanians.

We also see the frustration and disaffection of many long-term residents, and particularly their children who have grown up here and who feel, quite legitimately, that they should be granted either permanent residence or Caymanian status. These people have had their lives placed in limbo for years because of the unwillingness of successive administrations to properly and comprehensively address the immigration issue.

Tensions are approaching dangerous levels. Comprehensive immigration reform is critical and urgent if we are to have any real chance of ensuring that social harmony in this country continues. There is hardly a day that goes by where I do not have to deal with at least one immigration issue at the MLA Office. I know from talking with my colleagues both on the backbench and those in the government Back Bench that they are similarly pressed with immigration issues.

This is likely the most serious social issue we have to address, leaving aside for a moment the issue of youth violence which, in many respects, I feel is partially a consequence of the immigration issue.

The issue is urgent, complex, and multifaceted. It is tempting to try to deal with the more troublesome aspect of the problem without really addressing the need for widespread reform. Unless this country develops a comprehensive immigration philosophy that underlines the various decisions necessary, we will not resolve the problem. In the long run, quick fix, ad hoc changes to the law will create more problems than they solve. We have to be careful we do not legislate in haste and regret our leisure.

When I say this, I bear in mind the Motion brought by the Third Elected Member for George Town, and the Second Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman which seeks, among other things, to grant status to young children born in these Islands. I share both of the Members' concern about the immigration issue and the need for urgent and comprehensive reform. However, I do not believe, as I have already said, the way to deal with these issues is with ill prepared measures.

The past government sought to address the concern of Caymanians becoming a minority in this country by continuing the moratorium on Caymanian status, believing that if we limited the number of persons with status all of our immigration problems would go away. In so doing, they only compounded what was already a difficult problem. Refusing to grant Caymanian status to persons to whom it should be granted does not address the legitimate concern of Caymanians becoming a minority in their own country. It simply prevents more persons from calling themselves "Caymanian". It does nothing about the actual numbers of people, which is a major problem.

That approach also contributes to the concerns of the long-term residents, many of whom have lived here, worked here, built their homes here, raised their children here for 20, 30, and in some cases, 40 years, yet still live from one permit to another. If we are to succeed with the issue of immigration and building a cohesive society, we must develop an immigration policy and legislation that address the legitimate concerns of both Caymanians and long-term residents. Resolving the immigration issue means, as a country, coming to grips with certain, hard truths.

As Caymanians, we must accept that the pace of development and the tremendous growth of the population that has followed is something that we have permitted, and even encouraged.

We simply cannot turn back the hands of time to "the good old days" when we knew everybody and life was simpler and slower. We have to accept the reality of the new Cayman which we have created. Part of that reality is the fact that we are now a country of immigrants.

Those who have been here for long periods of time are already part of this community. By and large, they have contributed significantly to the continued growth and prosperity of this Island.

We simply cannot bundle them altogether and ship them off. In most cases, if we did that Cayman would be the poorer for it. This is even more so for the children of those immigrants who are now in their 20s, 30s and 40s, many of whom were born here, all of whom have grown up here, and many of whom do not have Caymanian status or any form of security of tenure.

These young people, the children of the new immigrants (if I may call them that) speak like you and me, have lived here all of their lives and are, in every respect, culturally Caymanian. To say it is an injustice to deny this category of people Caymanian status is an understatement.

There are plenty of examples of the injustice that this has caused, but I wish to relate two instances that I have dealt with in my short-term as a Member of this Honourable House.

I will not use real names, but "Mary Jane Brown" came to these Islands with her mother at the tender age of three months. "Mary Jane" went to primary school here and high school here. She married a Caymanian and produced a Caymanian child. She looks and sounds as Caymanian as I do. "Mary Jane" subsequently separated from her husband. Some three months ago, she came to the MLA Office distraught and explained her case to me. I was absolutely dumbfounded.

"Mary Jane" is now 22 years old and has been charged with overstaying and working without a work permit. She was prosecuted and convicted before the Summary Court for working without a work permit.

There is another case of an individual I will call "John Brown". "John Brown" came to Cayman as a very young boy 40 years ago. He grew up here, he went to school here. He married a Caymanian. He has worked here for upwards of 25 years. With the exception of time spent away from these Islands at university, "John" has lived here virtually all of his life. He has grown children. Just recently he re-married to a non-Caymanian. He now has a number of young children by this second marriage. When "John" returned to these Islands, it was discovered that he did not have Caymanian status. After 40 years, he is now on a temporary work permit.

These are the cases that must offend everyone's sense of morality. They scream out for redress.

I join with the other Members of the Backbench who have articulated this position to urge government despite all it has to do to place immigration reform at the top of its list of priorities.

The other people who require attention are those of Caymanian decent—those who have returned to the country of their forefathers and wish to become a permanent part of this community. These individuals share a sense of kinship with Caymanians. We have common history, heritage, culture and values. We need to embrace these people as well.

It is critical that any reform of our immigration policy and legislation takes into consideration these three key categories of people: long-term residents, and when I say that I mean those who have been here for more than 15 years; children of long-term residents; and persons of Caymanian decent. Unless we address these critical areas, we are not going to resolve the major social and immigration problems we have.

I will be bold enough to make certain propositions: I believe that persons who have been ordinarily resident here for 20 years or more and have made a significant and real contribution to this society ought to be granted Caymanian status. Those who have been here for 15 years or more, but less than 20, and have similarly made significant contributions to this society ought to be granted permanent residence with the right to work. Children of long-term residents who have lived here since childhood and have grown up here ought to be granted Caymanian status at the age of 16. These young people know no other place as home and are culturally Caymanian.

As a country that is so heavily reliant on the importation of foreign labour, we need to treat these young people who are a part of us as valuable, national assets. I believe that persons of Caymanian decent also need to be similarly treated. Subject to a satisfactory period of ordinary residence, say five years or so, we ought to grant them Caymanian status.

In my analysis, what Caymanians really fear is being overwhelmed culturally and socially by the sheer number of foreigners. This fear is often expressed as 'Cayman not for Caymanians no more, is more of them than it is us.'

More and more we hear this terribly divisive "them and us" feeling expressed. However, Caymanians do not have the same fears about people who speak the way we do, who think the way we do and who are culturally very similar. Granting Caymanian status to people who have grown up here or who are descendants of Caymanians will, in my view, actually increase the number of true Caymanians.

At a time when the Caymanian culture is heavily diluted by the influx of foreigners, conferring status to persons I have just identified will actually assist in promoting and preserving some of the important aspects of our culture and the Caymanian way of life. It will also have the effect of increasing the base of Caymanians, thus making the number of non-Caymanians seem less threatening.

I believe the grant of permanent residence and Caymanian status in the circumstances I have just outlined will go a long way to addressing many of the concerns and feelings of unfairness held by many long-term residents, and persons of Caymanian decent. I believe that in the long run it will also have a positive effect on Caymanians who will feel a lot less threatened as their numbers increase. That deals with the situation that currently obtains. What of the way forward? What do we do about the immigration issue in the long run? It means coming to grips with some real, hard truths.

We, as Caymanians, must come to the realisation that more development necessarily means more immigration. Once we accept that the options become much clearer. The problem has been that this country has never had a comprehensive development plan. We have lived by the principle that the more development there is, the better off we all are. So, we continue to encourage more immigration with no regard for social consequences and then complain about the number of foreigners here and how Caymanians are becoming outnumbered.

I urge upon the new Government that the first thing we must do is implement a growth-management policy for this country, as recommended by Vision 2008. Still we must do more than that. We have to decide whether we are prepared to accept the fact that Caymanians will continue to become a smaller percentage of the resident population ad infinitum, or we must provide a scheme whereby only the most contributing and deserving of newcomers are permitted to remain here for extended periods of time. We cannot have it both ways. We must make that critical decision.

We must be careful to strike the right balance by ensuring that Caymanians genuinely benefit from the growth and development of this country's industries and that we do not damage those very industries as a result of an unduly, restrictive immigration policy, particularly as this relates to work permits. It is when we try to strike this balance that we always seem to wind up in controversy.

I refer to what transpired early last year when the Select Committee on Immigration Law in their third interim report recommended the implementation of a five to seven-year rollover policy in relation to the grant of new work permits. The recommendation concurred with Strategy 16 of Vision 2008. Notwithstanding that, there was tremendous opposition from the business community when it was proposed. The opposition to the rollover policy was a result of their concern that such a policy would negatively affect Cayman's ability to continue to attract quality labour, particularly in the professional and skilled categories. As a result, the quality of Cayman's workforce would be lowered.

While there was dissatisfaction with the proposed five-year rollover policy, there was, and continues to be, general agreement that something must be done to address the growing fear of Caymanians that they are becoming a minority in their own country.

Most people I have spoken to agree that unless this situation is addressed, the serious, social tensions and divisions which are already apparent will become worse.

We are not the only country struggling with this issue. Bermuda has had a similar experience. I believe that it is edifying to look at what Bermuda has done.

In The Royal Gazette, which is a newspaper in Bermuda, dated 7 March 2001, it was stated that six-year limits on work permits will come into effect in Bermuda from April, but well-behaved companies will be able to exempt key staff from restrictions. Labour and Home Affairs Minister, Paula Cox, said the limits were needed to ensure that firms had a genuine interest in recruiting and training Bermudans, but she added that the system will be kept flexible to ensure Bermuda kept its business edge.

She said that we are competing to attract workers with skills that are in short supply, not just in Bermuda but across the world. It would be wrong if term limits led us to lose such people. Term limits will not apply to positions of persons who have proved to be the key to the success of a company, nor will they apply to those categories where there is demonstrable severe shortage, either because of the scarce resources worldwide have local impact or there are shortages locally owing to exceptionally high demand.

Companies must make a case to have a worker or boss exempted. Miss Cox said they would be listened to if those companies have been good corporate citizens. Criteria for this include a good record in training and employing locals, producing clear and correct job advertisements, and submitting properly completed work permit applications.

Miss Cox explained what had led to the six-year restriction. She said that the Government has worked hard to strike the right balance between the understandable desire of business to operate with a minimum of regulatory control and the legitimate and proper aspirations of Bermudians to participate fully in the economy of their island home. The Government recognises that international business is becoming critically important to the economic well-being of our people particularly in terms of job creation. However, the Government has an obligation to regulate business in a way that derives benefits for all of Bermuda's people. We have heard too often how Bermudians feel left out of the island's prosperity; how they feel denied opportunities to train and hone their skills; how they feel that promotion opportunities are not open to them. The new policy will address these concerns.

Miss Cox said her department would be giving firms help in advance over what categories of employees might be regarded as possible exceptions to the six-year limit.

Further on in the report, Chamber of Commerce President, [Maria] Chris Valdes-Dapena is reported to have praised the Minister for the exemplary way she consulted business on the changes. She said of Paula Cox, "The competitive interests she was required to balance were challenging—you cannot achieve perfection, but she has strived mightily. She has demonstrated openness to the business community and also an awareness of the critical nature of continuity within business. We need to see how it works in practice to get further clarification on specific points."

Employers' Council Executive Director, Malcolm Dixon, said that we will have to see if it is going to cause any hardship for business and whether companies will be able to attract people here for that length of time. Obviously the Minister is trying to control as much as she can about people staying indefinitely by putting something in place where permits only last so long, but she has made provisions for key people.

That is very much an experiment that is ongoing. Whether we adopt the Bermudian model or some other mechanism, I firmly believe we must find a way to keep the non-Caymanian percentage of Cayman's resident population from continuing to outpace the Caymanian population if we are to avoid serious social problems. If we do not find a filter to reduce the number of newcomers who are permitted to remain here indefinitely, in ten years' time we will have another major immigration problem. By that time the problem will be far more serious because the numbers will be far greater.

I now wish to deal with some of the other important aspects of our immigration legislation—

The Speaker: Would this be a convenient time to take the afternoon break?

Mr. Alden M. McLaughlin, Jr.: Yes, Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: We shall suspend proceedings for 15 minutes.

PROCEEDINGS SUSPENDED AT 3.20 PM

PROCEEDINGS RESUMED AT 3.48 PM

The Speaker: Proceedings are resumed. Debate continues on the Second Reading of the Appropriation Bill, 2001. The Second Elected Member for George Town continuing.

Mr. Alden M. McLaughlin, Jr.: Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

I now wish to deal with some of the other important aspects of our immigration legislation that, in my view, require restructuring.

We have a situation in this country whereby some persons who have Caymanian status can vote and some cannot. We also have a situation where certain persons who do not have Caymanian status are able to vote. While I fully understand the legal reason for this anomaly, it is wrong in principle and needs to be changed. If a person possesses sufficient connection to these Islands to be granted status, there is simply no rational basis for denying that individual the right to vote.

Another situation that causes me concern, and which I have dealt with on a number of occasions, is a foreign spouse of a Caymanian granted status on the basis of marriage. Under the current legislation, if a foreign spouse divorces within ten years of being granted status they lose their status.

In many cases, the foreign spouse is forced to leave these Islands. Often, if the spouse is female, she takes the children away with her and they grow up seeing very little of their Caymanian father. Often, if the spouse is male, he leaves the Island and the children with their Caymanian mother and they grow up seeing very little of him. In either case, the result is painful. It is always the children who suffer the most.

I fully understand the need to prevent marriages of convenience and understand that that was the underlying basis for the provision in the law. However, I believe that once a spouse obtains status they should not lose it merely because the marriage dissolves. I believe that we need to provide for sufficiently longer periods in the law before an individual is granted status on the basis of marriage to a Caymanian. Once status is conferred, it should not be lost merely because of divorce. This creates far too much upheaval and hardship, particularly for the children of those marriages.

I feel we need to repeal the provisions of the Immigration Law to allow Executive Council to secretly make grants of Caymanian status. Provisions like that have been too often abused in the past for political purposes. There must be one system by which Caymanian status can be conferred, and it must apply to everyone regardless of social standing, political connections or nationality. Politicians should not be able to grant Caymanian status as favours to those who have supported them. That is what the current situation invites.

Finally, I believe appeals from decisions of the Immigration Board should not be dealt with by Executive Council. We need to set up an entirely independent tribunal similar in nature to the Labour Tribunal and Planning Appeals Tribunal. The current system is far too inefficient and political to be fair.

I have gone on at some length about the immigration issue, so much so that the Third Elected Member for George Town has jokingly accused me of debating his Motion yet to come.

Nevertheless, this is an extremely important matter. I believe that if we are to preserve social harmony in this country, we need to think carefully about these matters and move quickly to remodel our immigration legislation. We need to consider the concerns which I have identified and any others. We also need to address the United Kingdom's concerns about human rights as set out in the White Paper.

I join voice with my colleagues on the Back Bench who appealed to government to give immigration reform priority. I suggest the way forward is for government to produce a discussion document on immigration for general circulation and that a time-frame for the passage of new immigration legislation be agreed upon. I recommend that it should not be later than March 2002.

I now move on to talk about the issue of youth, then the issue of education. I have already debated at length the issue of youth violence to this Honourable House. I do not intend to repeat that address. In my earlier debate, I tried to give some insight into the causes of the problem and I spoke about the failings of the education system, lack of parental guidance and what is causing the degree of disaffection and disillusion among young people in these Islands.

I am even more concerned about the problem of youth violence today than I was some three weeks ago when I debated the establishment of a National Youth Commission and Committee of Enquiry into the causes of youth violence.

Last week Members of the Back Bench received a briefing from Dr. Ivan Henry, a consultant to the Ministry of Community Affairs, Youth and Women, and involved in the creation of the National Youth Policy. Dr. Henry is now engaged in assisting the Ministry with the implementation of the National Youth Policy and the establishment of the Committee of Enquiry into the causes of youth violence.

We were disturbed to learn that the situation with youth violence is considered by him to be one of crisis.

We all know there have been three murders of young men in these Islands over the course of the past 18 months. This appears to be one revenge killing following another. What I found even more worrisome is that these stabbings and killings are not likely to be over. More will follow, as one act of vengeance is pursued by another. This terrifies me. We must move swiftly to deal with this. Again, I offer my full support and assistance to the Committee of Enquiry and its Chairman, the Third Elected Member for George Town.

This is a deeply rooted social problem and we are now in the throes of experiencing the symptoms of a much bigger problem. It will need all that each of us have to offer and a tremendous amount of prayer and inward looking.

I listened with interest this morning to the contribution made by the Honourable Minister responsible for Education, Human Resources and Culture. I was heartened by what he had to say about his education philosophy. For nearly a decade, our education system has been in desperate need of a vision and the leadership I am confident the new Minister of Education will provide. I tender my complete support.

I discussed in length the issue of youth violence to this House. I spoke about the problems in our education system, particularly as they relate to the relevancy of the education offered to our students. I spoke about how the system does more to frustrate the majority of students than to educate them, and I urged the development of full-time vocational courses as an integral part of the high school curriculum. I was encouraged to hear what the Minister had to say.

I am also pleased that the Review of the Cayman Islands Education System conducted by Mrs. Anthea Millett has finally been laid on the Table of this Honourable House—almost one year after being delivered to the former Minister of Education, Mr. Truman Bodden.

After reviewing that report, I now understand why Mr. Bodden was not anxious to make it public. That report reads like an indictment of the education policy of the former Minister and highlights the lack of vision and the leadership vacuum that has existed within the education system up until these recent elections.

The report is comprehensive, but I will briefly highlight some of the points made. They are very telling.

In the summary and principle recommendations made by Mrs. Millett (page ii), I quote: “Individuals within and outside the Department expressed the view that overall the education service had improved substantially over recent years. They also said, however, that significant weaknesses remained and that these were impairing the Department's own performance and hindering its ability to support school improvement. These weaknesses include:

- the absence of clear lines of accountability which cross the service as a whole from Ministry via the Department to schools;
- the lack of a secure tradition of planning and strategic management within the Department which leads to too much crisis management and a failure to link the work of schools to the national objectives for education set out in the EDP;
- poor professional standards, poor relationships and an absence of trust within the Department. This has created a culture in which staff fail to work co-operatively and seek to avoid acceptance of individual and collective responsibility;

- an inappropriately designed, overcrowded physical environment within which to work;
- inadequate data collection, management and interpretation services; this impairs the Department's ability to assess standards, set targets and offer soundly based advice to the Minister and Council;
- insufficient staffing to provide the financial audit support needed to assist its own staff, schools and PTAs to secure financial control and better value for money in the use of public and other funds;
- the lack of a coherent strategy for school improvement designed to support teaching and learning, especially in literacy, numeracy and information and communication technology (ICT), enhance school leadership and secure higher standards of student performance;
- poorly developed co-operation with other government departments and external agencies in the delivery of effective services to Students and their parents;
- weak consultation of and communication with schools, parents and the wider community over major plans and policies for education.”

Further, on page 5 of the section entitled “Leadership and Direction in the Education Service”: “The aims and objectives of the Department are not clearly defined. There is no clear vision of the Department's mission or shared aspirations. Opportunities need to be provided to promote consistent ownership of the Department's aims by all members of the organisation. There is a lack of forward planning. Demands placed on the Department by the Ministry, the schools and the community frequently result in ‘crisis management.’”

What a sad and terrible legacy the former Minister of Education left for this country after 16 years as Minister of Education!

There was also an insightful editorial that appeared in the Caymanian Compass, Tuesday, 3 April 2001, entitled “Education Administration”. I believe this sums up the Millett Report in a way that I could not; therefore, I will read some portions of it.

“The Millett Report, which reviews organisation, administration, efficiency and effectiveness of the Education Department, has been tabled in the House by the new Minister of Education, Roy Bodden. The report was compiled and delivered to the Ministry early last year by English Educational specialist Anthea Millett. What has emerged from the report is that the department is poorly organised and lacks direction—the combination of which has undermined its work and demoralised its staff. The lack of clear policy direction and prioritisation has led to a fragmented piecemeal approach to the department's business with poor interdepartmental communication compounding the problem. The report points out that there is very little accountability from the Department to the Ministry and likewise little accountability on the part of the schools to the department. 'This,' says Miss Millett, 'has resulted in an education system where academic standards among other things are not properly monitored, and where some schools are operating in accordance with their own priorities rather than with any national policies.'

"In response to these problems Miss Millett has suggested a new organisational structure for the department whereby its policies and priorities are set by the Ministry and Education Council in cooperation with the Chief Education Officer and Inspector of schools. The policies are then translated into an evolving action plan by a close knit team of Senior Education Officers in conjunction with the Chief Education Officer. The plan will give specific targets and dates for their achievement, the officer responsible for delivery, the overall cost and how success would be judged. Miss Millett also calls for schools to address policy directives and deliver reports on the quality of education and pupils' standards of achievement. These reports would be used by the department to monitor progress and hold principals accountable for that progress. Miss Millett's suggestions appear collectively to be a comprehensive, sensible and most workable response to serious organisational weaknesses within the education system as a whole. Now action has to be taken to put the report's multitude of recommendations into effect. We trust this will be done as a matter of top priority reflecting the verbal commitments this government has made to tackling youth and educational problems."

I have every confidence that with his background, experience, ambition and drive to improve the educational system of these Islands, the new Minister will move swiftly to implement some of those recommendations. I wish him well.

This country cannot afford to lose 80 or 90 per cent of its students who do not perform well at the academic level. We have to find a more inclusive means of education, one that reaches and touches every student who is part of the system.

The Honourable Minister knows my view about this. I anticipate the implementation of his direction on education.

I propose to deal now with the issue of Constitutional Review.

Perhaps the best place for me to start with this issue is with the White Paper. It is the White Paper that has triggered the upcoming review of our Constitution.

In the White Paper, the United Kingdom Government made the following statement, and I quote: "2.6 Consultation with the territories showed a clear expression of their wish to retain the connection with Britain. We concluded that neither integration into the UK, nor Crown Dependency status, offer more appropriate alternatives to the present arrangements. But these arrangements need to be revisited, reviewed and where necessary revised.

"2.7 The link between the UK and the Overseas Territories is enshrined in the constitution of each territory. The Overseas Territories believe that their constitutions need to be kept up to date and where necessary modernised. Each Overseas Territory is unique and needs a constitutional framework to suit its own circumstances. Suggestions from Overseas Territory governments for specific proposals for constitutional change will be considered carefully.

"2.8 The governance of the territories must have a firm base. Democracy, human rights and the rule of law are all as relevant in the Overseas Territories as elsewhere. The principles which should underlie modern constitutions are clear. There must be a balance of obligations and expectations, and both should be clearly and explicitly set out. Future action will focus on:

- measures promoting more open, transparent and accountable government;
- improvements to the composition of legislatures and their operation;
- improving the effectiveness, efficiency, accountability and impartiality of the public service;
- the role of Overseas Territory Ministers and Executive Councils and their exercise of collective responsibility for government policy and decisions;
- respect for the rule of law and the constitution;
- the promotion of representative and participative government;
- freedom of speech and information;
- the provision of high standards of justice;
- adoption of modern standards of respect for human rights."

Arising from this, the Governor stated that he will shortly appoint a constitutional commission made up of three individuals: two of whom, including the Chairman, will be Caymanian; and one of whom will be a lawyer.

While it does not seem like the United Kingdom is pushing us down the path to independence, it is plain to me that the United Kingdom is going to insist on certain, minimum changes to our Constitution. One obvious change is bound to be the inclusion of a Bill of Rights.

The United Kingdom's insistence that all of its Overseas Territories be bound by its international obligations with respect to human rights is the clearest evidence yet that our Constitution will be required to have a Bill of Rights enshrined.

A Bill of Rights for this country is long overdue. It is an integral element of any modern constitution in a democracy. I have found it difficult to understand why the past government would not agree to include a Bill of Rights in our current Constitution when the opportunity arose in 1993.

I do not believe the issue of a Bill of Rights is going to create any real controversy when the issue is discussed over the ensuing months. I believe that most people regard that as essential. However, if recent history is anything to go by, the issue of some of the other aspects of constitutional change will likely generate some concern and debate.

As a Member of the Counsel of the Bar Association back in 1991 when the last constitutional review took place, I remember the tremendous amount of debate that surrounded the question of whether or not we should move to a full Ministerial Government and whether we should have a Chief Minister. As we all know, the Constitution as amended did not include provision for a Chief Minister. The Constitutional Commissioners commented at some length about this issue in their report.

In 1991 when they wrote their report, they had this to say about the issue of Chief Minister, and I quote: "Of all the issues raised during our review, there is none more controversial than that of the proposal to create the post of Chief Minister. We ourselves have no doubt whatsoever of the benefits which would accrue from having a Chief Minister. He would be a leader. How often during our review did we hear the legitimate complaint that the Cayman Islands Government is 'leaderless?' We find it difficult to believe that the Cayman Islands would wish to settle for constitutional arrangements that are less advanced and we believe less effective than those enjoyed by other Caribbean Dependent Territories for the last 20 or 30 years. We also find it difficult to believe that Caymanians with seafaring in their blood would be prepared to be put to sea in a ship with four first mates but without a captain."

That is what the Constitutional Commissioners said in 1991. As I mentioned earlier, that recommendation was not accepted nor implemented.

It is difficult for people on the outside to understand Cayman's reluctance to accept the creation of the post of Chief Minister. I believe it can be explained in this way: Cayman has been one of the few success stories in the British Caribbean. So far, we have managed to do this without significant Constitutional advancement. Caymanians have a deeply rooted fear of concentrating too much power in the hands of one individual, and they believe that creating the position of Chief Minister is likely to have this result.

I have heard that view articulated countless times. I believe much of that fear is, to a large degree, the result of the way government has functioned in the past.

In fact, let me put it bluntly. Until the recent elections, so much of government's business and affairs was shrouded in secrecy that the people of this country were reluctant to give any representative of theirs what they considered to be even more power to keep them in the dark.

With the new openness and transparency practised by the new Government, the leadership demonstrated thus far by the new Leader of Government Business, and the prospect of a Freedom of Information Law to be brought by this Honourable House shortly, many concerns are being allayed. I believe the Members of this Back Bench will keep the Government committed to this.

With another review of the Constitution eminent, the issue of a Chief Minister is bound to be raised again, particularly given the United Kingdom's concern about good governance in all of its Overseas Territories.

The process of forming a government after the last elections left a bad taste in the mouths of everyone—those involved in the process and those watching from the sidelines. The charade which followed on the steps of the courthouse was demeaning of the process and the representatives this country had just elected.

One thing that process did highlight was the shortcomings of our present Constitutional arrangements. In a system where there are no organised political groupings and no way of knowing who the leader of the country will be, disappointment much like what occurred after the recent elections is almost inevitable.

It is my view that a Constitutional review is timely. It is timely for full and frank discussions about whether or not this country should move to a full ministerial government or not.

During my election campaign I made it plain that I would not support any fundamental changes to our constitution unless those changes were agreed to by the people of this country voting by referendum. That is still my position. I also believe that it is the duty of all Members of this House during the review process to play a major role in informing and educating the electorate about their options.

There are bound to be nay-sayers and criers of doom. I will pull no punches. I am sure the charge will be led by the former Leader of Government Business. We have a duty to this country to discuss the issue of ministerial government fully and candidly and to decide whether the current Constitutional arrangements suit this stage of Cayman's development. I, for one, will not shy away from that task.

I discussed this matter at considerable length with some Members of the Back Bench, including the Elected Member for East End and the Members for West Bay. We intend to commence a series of meetings to talk about this important matter shortly after the Commission is appointed. We are exploring the possibility of bringing a resource person, who is knowledgeable about Constitutional issues, to Cayman to attend those meetings with us to answer questions the electorate and the population in general have about this most critical matter.

When the report of the Constitutional Commissioners is delivered, the people of this country must be properly equipped and able to make an informed decision on what they want the Constitutional status of this country to be.

We shall endeavour to ensure that they are adequately informed, educated and capable of making an informed decision.

HOUR OF INTERRUPTION—4.30 PM

The Speaker: We have reached the hour of interruption. I now entertain a motion for the adjournment.

The Honourable Minister responsible for Community Development, Women Affairs, Youth and Sports.

ADJOURNMENT

Hon. Edna M. Moyle: Mr. Speaker, I move the adjournment of this Honourable House until 10 am tomorrow.

The Speaker: The question is that this Honourable House do now adjourn until 10 am tomorrow. Those in favour please say Aye. Those against No.

AYES.

The Speaker: The Ayes have it.

AT 4.30 PM THE HOUSE STOOD ADJOURNED
UNTIL 10 AM THURSDAY, 19 APRIL 2001.

OFFICIAL HANSARD REPORT
THURSDAY
19 APRIL 2001
11.05 AM
Twenty-first sitting

[Prayers read by the Honourable First Official Member]

The Speaker: Please be seated. Proceedings are resumed.

Item number 2 on today's Order Paper. Reading by the Honourable Speaker of Messages and Announcements.

READING BY THE
HONOURABLE SPEAKER OF
MESSAGES AND ANNOUNCEMENTS

APOLOGIES

The Speaker: I have received apologies for absence from the Honourable Second Official Member who will be arriving later. The Third Elected Member for Bodden Town who is off the Island.

Item 3, Government Business, Suspension of Standing Order 14(2) and (3) in order to take Government Business on Thursday.

The Honourable Minister responsible for Community Development, Women's Affairs, Youth and Sports.

SUSPENSION OF STANDING ORDER 14(2) AND (3)

Hon. Edna M. Moyle: I move the Suspension of Standing Order 14(2) and (3) in order for Government Business to take precedence over Private Members' Business.

The Speaker: Those in favour please say Aye. Those against, No.

AYES.

The Speaker: The Ayes have it.

AGREED: STANDING ORDER 14(2) & (3) SUSPENDED IN ORDER FOR GOVERNMENT BUSINESS TO TAKE PRECEDENCE OVER PRIVATE MEMBERS' BUSINESS.

The Speaker: I would now ask for the suspension of Standing Order 46. The Honourable Third Official Member responsible for Finance and Economic Development.

SUSPENSION OF STANDING ORDER 46

Hon. George A. McCarthy: I move the suspension of Standing Order 46 to allow the Bills listed in the schedule, as set out on the Order Paper to be given a first reading.

The Speaker: Those in favour please say Aye. Those against, No.

AYES.

The Speaker: The Ayes have it.

AGREED: STANDING ORDER 46 SUSPENDED TO ALLOW THE BILLS LISTED IN THE SCHEDULE, AS SET OUT ON THE ORDER PAPER TO BE GIVEN A FIRST READING.

GOVERNMENT BUSINESS

BILLS

FIRST READINGS

THE LOAN BILL, 2001

The Clerk: The Loan Bill, 2001.

The Speaker: The Bill is deemed to have been read a first time and is set down for Second Reading.

THE BANKS AND TRUST COMPANIES (AMENDMENT) (PRUDENT MANAGEMENT)
BILL, 2001

The Clerk: The Banks and Trust Companies (Amendment) (Prudent Management) Bill, 2001

The Speaker: The Bill is deemed to have been read a first time and is set down for Second Reading.

THE INSURANCE (AMENDMENT)
(PRUDENT MANAGEMENT) BILL, 2001

The Clerk: The Insurance (Amendment) (Prudent Management) Bill, 2001.

The Speaker: The Bill is deemed to have been read a first time and is set down for Second Reading.

THE MUTUAL FUNDS (AMENDMENT) (PRUDENT ADMINISTRATION) BILL, 2001

The Clerk: The Mutual Funds (Amendment) (Prudent Administration) Bill, 2001.

The Speaker: The Bill is deemed to have been read a first time and is set down for Second Reading.

THE COMPANIES (AMENDMENT) (CUSTODY OF BEARER SHARES) BILL, 2001

The Clerk: The Companies (Amendment) (Custody of Bearer Shares) Bill, 2001.

The Speaker: The Bill is deemed to have been read a first time and is set down for Second Reading.

THE COMPANIES MANAGEMENT (AMENDMENT) BILL, 2001

The Clerk: The Companies Management (Amendment) Bill, 2001.

The Speaker: The Bill is deemed to have been read a first time and is set down for Second Reading.

THE PROCEEDS OF CRIMINAL CONDUCT (AMENDMENT) (FINANCIAL INTELLIGENCE UNITS) BILL, 2001

The Clerk: The Proceeds of Criminal Conduct (Amendment) (Financial Intelligence Units) Bill, 2001.

The Speaker: The Bill is deemed to have been read a first time and is set down for Second Reading.
Bills, Second Reading.

SECOND READINGS

THE CUSTOMS TARIFF (AMENDMENT) (VARIATION OF DUTIES) BILL, 2001

The Clerk: The Customs Tariff (Amendment) (Variation of Duties) Bill, 2001.

The Speaker: The Honourable Third Official Member responsible for Finance and Economic Development.

Hon. George A. McCarthy: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I beg to move the second reading of a Bill entitled, The Customs Tariff (Amendment) (Variation of Duties) Bill, 2001.

Mr. Speaker: The Honourable Third Official Member, do you wish to speak on this?

Hon. George A. McCarthy: Yes, Mr. Speaker. As you and Honourable Members will recall, the Budget Address was delivered on 21 March, 2001. The Budget Address gave details of revenue measures that government proposed to introduce during 2001. These measures in the aggregate for the year 2001 are expected to yield $19.9 million, as set out in the Budget Address.

Changes to previously existing rates of import duty are part of those revenue measures. These changes are expected to yield $7.4 million in revenue during 2001. To give immediate effect to those changes, Government Motion No. 2/2001 was tabled in this Honourable House on 21 March, 2001, and passed by a majority of Members on the same day. This is the reason why this Bill is now being presented to Honourable Members.

The Bill seeks to amend the Customs Tariff Law (2001 Revision) for the purpose of giving effect to variations in import duties in respect of various goods including eggs, certain types of bakery products, drinking water and jet skis. It is important to point out that under this Bill bread continues to be free of import duty.

The Bill also varies the rate of package tax imposed under the principal Law in relation to goods in packages.

I believe that Members will find it useful to have a recap of the changes to import duties outlined in Government Motion No. 2/2001 and this Bill. In this regard, I asked the Clerk if the Schedule of items affected by this change could be circulated, and I note that this has been done. So, as I go through the Schedule, I will ask Members to take note since there are some, especially in the area of boats, who were not immediately clear when the motion was originally presented on 21 March 2001.

Mr. Speaker, for the benefit of yourself and Honourable Members, the code numbers stated in the details which I will present relate to the code numbers stated in the Customs Tariff Law (2001 Revision), and there are two columns, one sets out the duty that existed prior to 21 March 2001, and the other deals with the new duty applicable subsequent to that date. I will just read through the items:

| CODE # | HEADING                                                                                                                                                               | DUTY | NEW DUTY |
|--------|-----------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------|------|----------|
| 04.03  | Flavoured milk, yoghurt and ice cream                                                                                                                                 | Free | 20%      |
| 04.31  | Birds' eggs and egg yolks, fresh, dried or otherwise preserved.                                                                                                       | Free | 15%      |
| 06.01  | (This section repeals the previous description and substitutes the following) Live plants trees and plants issued for propagation or cultivation.              | Free | Free     |
| 06.02  | (New subsection) Other Live plants (including ornamental plants for landscaping or decoration whether bearing flowers or not)                                  | Free | 20%      |
| 08.01  | Fruit, fresh, chilled or frozen. but not further prepared                                                                                                             | Free | 15%      |
| 19.05  | (New Code Number) Bread loaves whole or sliced                                                                                                                 | Free | Free     |
| 19.21  | (Repealing and substituting the following) Bakery products including biscuits, rolls, buns and similar products but excluding products under Code Number 19.05 | Free | 20%      |
| 22.01  | Purified, desalinated and natural waters, other than aerated waters                                                                                                   | Free | 20%      |
| 88.01  | Aircraft parts and associated equipment                                                                                                                               | 20%  | 20%      |

|       |                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                            |      |      |
|-------|----------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------|------|------|
| 89.01 | (New Subsection) All boats for local use, whether sailing from abroad under own power or not, and whether registered or not, including parts and associated equipment, but excluding ocean-going vessels in the Islands temporarily (subject to the discretion of the Collector of Customs acting in accordance with section 19 of the Customs Law (1998 Revision)- |      |      |
| 89.01 | Boats under 18 feet, including rowboats, canoes, kayaks, but excluding other boats for pleasure or sport                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                   | Free | Free |
| 89.02 | Boats between 18 feet and 35 feet excluding boats for pleasure or sports                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                   | Free | 10%  |
| 89.03 | Boats over 35 feet                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                         | Free | 5%   |
| 89.04 | (New code) Vessels for pleasure or sports including Jet skis, wave runners, personal watercraft, but excluding rowboats, canoes and kayaks                                                                                                                                                                                                                          | 10%  | 20%  |
| 89.05 | Other floating structures, including inflatable rafts, floating docks, submersible drilling or production platforms, platform tanks, cofferdams, landing-stages, buoys and beacons                                                                                                                                                                                         |      | 20%  |

Item 2 of the third Schedule to the Customs Tariff Law (2001 Revision), Goods in packages: For each 100 pounds or part thereof, previously $.50, now $1.00.

These are the items affected in the Customs Schedule, and I commend this Bill to Honourable Members.

The Speaker: The question is that a Bill entitled, A Bill for a Law to Vary Duty Under the Customs Tariff Law (2001 Revision) be given a second reading.

The Floor is open for debate.

The Third Elected Member for George Town.

Dr. Frank S. McField: Mr. Speaker, I have a few questions regarding the methodology government uses to arrive at what should be taxed at the port of entry and what should be exempt; what should be 20%, what should be 15% and what should be 10%. I was one of those who spoke about the need to exclude foods from the taxation process. I am still a strong believer that regardless of what government says about what it earns from taxing foods, that food products should be excluded.

I know a lot of people who are consuming food in this country are not Caymanians, especially since approximately 58 percent of the workforce is now non-Caymanian. When we look at the number of tourists visiting our shores, the consumption of food is really not consumed only by Caymanians, but by others as well.

Some might ask why give up this revenue source when the number of Caymanians who are assisted by removing duty from foodstuff is few. There is a significant number of Caymanians who are concerned about duties on food items simply because it affects one of the basic needs human being have—the need for food. The need for shelter is already affected by the taxes government levied on building materials.

There are those who argue that they are able to purchase less as a result of government taxation. There are those who also argue that it helps to inflate the cost of living.

My basic concern at this moment is, when government finds itself in a situation where it needs money, how does government decide who is taxed. Is the methodology being improved by this new Government?

I would like to say that I have seen a customs invoice where an importer of aggregate was able to put the amount of freight as “nil” on the invoice. The freight cost should have been several thousands of dollars. The duty on that would have been 20 percent, therefore, the amount government received was tremendously less because in scrutinising the transaction they failed to note that there should have been a cost for transporting the aggregate from Mexico to the Cayman Islands.

I also saw where that particular invoice was amended at a later date when it was clear that an amount would have to be considered for freight. That correction was made on 6 April 2001, and the original invoice was altered to no longer read “nil” but in fact, another invoice was made and signed on 6 April 2001 where an amount was given; an amount nowhere near the cost of freight for that amount of aggregate from Mexico to the Cayman Islands, and where three transactions have been done with the Cayman Islands Government and no attempt has been made to assess the true value of the freight cost for this.

When we find that government is interested in taxing artificial flowers, or puts a 20 percent tax on water, we have to ask, if government is in such dire need of additional revenue, why is it that the importation of aggregate into this country is not being policed in order to collect what is due?

I also understand there is an ongoing situation, in this country, whereby another company is importing aggregate into the country at $1.00 per ton. Why these discrepancies? How do we objectively arrive at these decisions on tariff duties? How did we arrive at the $1.00? And why are we still at $1.00? Is the need so great in this country to have the additional supply that government must continue to charge $1.00 per ton? Government turns a blind eye when it comes to the true cost of the freight in transporting aggregate to the Cayman Islands!

This is all done knowing that we have aggregate production in the Cayman Islands, not just one, but several persons are involved in mining. I know there is an ongoing study on the pros and cons of mining in the Cayman Islands versus the importation of fill and aggregate, but it has not been concluded. Therefore, what is this policy based upon?

The last government made a decision in regards to the $1.00 per ton. I do believe that I know why that decision was made. I cannot see why that continues to be the policy when government, who is saying it needs money, turns around and reintroduces taxes on foodstuff where it had been removed. What logic is involved in this situation?

I would like to see a situation where 20 percent duty is placed on the importation of bottled water, the rationale being that it would help local production. We can justify that also because we need the money. What is the logic behind the aggregate question? Why are we not raising the duty on the importation of aggregate? We need the money! We have local production—yet we have a situation that is not fair.

I want to make government aware that if it is going to talk about transparency, then we have to also be transparent about the basic decisions made to tax or not to tax; to levy a particular percentage tax versus another.

The customs invoice I mentioned is significant because I will go so far as to say that the declaration was an illegal declaration. It was corrected, altered or post-dated at a point, but not done in such a way to make it a true representation of the cost amount which would have been incurred by the company importing this aggregate.

I need to voice this, and I want the Financial Secretary to give us an idea of what government is doing to make their taxation methodology more objective. I do not agree with the taxes on foodstuff; I will never agree to this. I think it is irrational that people must pay more and even if the supermarkets are not passing it on, government has to find a way to get the merchants in this country to pass on the benefits to the people of this country who are consuming these products. Because they do not believe the benefits are being passed on to the people does not mean they should get in there and get a piece of this particular action. If cuts have to be made and if money has to be borrowed, those are the things I would do before going back on my 1996 election promise, which was to see that taxes were removed from foodstuffs.

I did not support the motion and I find it as difficult to support it in the form of a Bill.

The Speaker: Does any other Member wish to speak?

The Third Elected Member for West Bay.

Capt. A. Eugene Ebanks: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. There is one question I have and hopefully the Third Official Member can answer it. Under the heading of “boats” it says, “All boats for local use including parts and associated equipment” and “Between 18 and 35 feet, 10 percent; over 35 feet 5 percent.” Does that include the parts and associated equipment for boats of that size?

The Speaker: The Elected Member for East End.

Mr. V. Arden McLean: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. When this tariff came to the House on 9 March 2001, I voted “Aye.” However, in my debate on the Throne

Speech and Budget Address, I outlined briefly that I had some concerns about it. Because it comes in one package it could not be voted on in a piecemeal manner. I do have some concerns with taxing our people and not taxing the financial industry as much as I would like to see it taxed.

I believe, the Second Elected Member for George Town debated yesterday, about the financial industry not contributing to the cost of providing the haven this country has provided for them and their success. I know of lawyers in this country who do not pay for a business licence. We note in overseas papers where law firms in this country advertise for lawyers who they pay up to $250,000 per year, and yet they come here and only pay work permit fees. Well, that is a small drop in the bucket!

If the law firms can afford to pay up to $250,000 for imported lawyers, they must be able to pay more than just work permit fees.

I noticed in the new measures for this year that it is doubled for accountants, but that is just from $750 to $1500.

When we tax ice cream, that touches most people, so, we have to be extremely careful. I invite the new Government to look at different ways of taxing to be able to provide the services we have enjoyed in this country for many years. Maybe we have become spoiled! We cannot, forever tax the “little man.”

I noticed a truck the other day with one of those decals across the windscreen that said, “Poor People Fed Up!” Well, I believe they are because since March 9 I have had much representation about the tariff measures. I have explained the reason for it, and they understand. I have some further concerns with the area which the Third Elected Member for West Bay discussed, and that is the issue of boats between 18’ and 35’. In most instances it is going to be the people the decal on that truck was talking about—poor people! Boats 18’ to 35’ is 10 percent import on what used to be free and boats over 35’ which used to be 10 percent is being reduced to 5 percent?

This is telling me luxury tax is being reduced. Nevertheless, on importation of vehicles we have a luxury tax—the lower the original cost of the vehicle, the lower the duty. Well, a boat over 35’ means that if you can afford to buy an expensive boat whether it is in the range of 50’, 60’, or 100’ for luxury.—Those people who buy expensive boats are not buying them to catch a few groupers before the Minister for Tourism ban the groupers, they are hoping to go to the Sandbar every Sunday for pleasure. That is luxury! It needs to be increased!

We do not cater to these types of boats, unlike other islands within the Caribbean, which has hundreds of sailing boats and others because we cannot shelter them in this country. We are not going to dig out the North Sound for them to come in here; therefore, they are not allowed to come. It cannot be that we are encouraging them to come. I have already spoken in this House about boats dumping everything they use in the North Sound. If we are not going to penalise them for that, let us start charging duties for bringing these boats in. We cannot reduce that and increase it on the little man who goes out at night to fish, trying to make a living. We cannot do that! It is not fair! This is one of the reasons why the poor people are fed up. We do not need to add to that for the people.

I believe that the government needs to seriously look at it and repeal it; it must be increased. Anyone who can spend up to $500,000 or $100,000 for a boat can pay 20 percent duty to bring it into this country. We cannot expect someone buying a little 18' or 20' boat to go fishing with, to pay 10 percent and the rich pay less; that is exactly what has happened here for many years.

I appeal to the people to assist the country because of the financial constraints the government is going through to provide the services the country needs. Next year we are certainly not bringing back any duties on the poor people. I will stand up in this Honourable House and oppose it strenuously! I invite government to look at that area again.

Because of bottled water being produced in this country, I understand the rationale for applying duty on bottled water which was free before.

I also support taxing the wave runners. The wave runner businesses are springing up all over the place and a lot of that is not to the benefit of Caymanians. They can bring in these pleasure crafts free, make bundles off of them, and government gets nothing. I also have some concerns about the area the Third Elected Member for George Town went into.

Anything produced in this country needs to be used; likewise, fresh fruits. I stand for the total ban of fresh fruits that are seasonal. Ban importation period, or increase the duty on it so much that it will not be in the best interest of any merchant to import it while seasonal. For instance, mangoes—we produce mangoes, bananas, plantains, et cetera in this country. It is my understanding that we are self-sufficient in some of those areas. I invite the Minister of Agriculture to bring a ban on the importation of the seasonal fruits that we are self-sufficient in, during that time.

The Chamber of Commerce had a slogan at one time: "Buy Cayman." I agree with that! We need to buy it before anybody else takes it. They must live by those same words also. When they have something to sell, they are very glad to say "Buy Cayman" but when they want to buy, they go overseas to buy it. Now, let us charge them taxes on bringing it in.

Anything produced in this country must have a high Custom tariff levied on it. Anything! The importation of anything produced in this country must attract high Custom tariff.

We heard the Third Elected Member for George Town elaborate on the importation of aggregate. There is nothing wrong with importing aggregate, but let government make some money on it as well. We drag it across the North Sound, charge nothing to do that and $1.00 per ton is charged.

In my debate, I called for the construction of new docking facilities for bulk cargo. The excuse we are getting is that people will bring it in on their own place. It is time for government to look at a facility where it comes across its dock.

It may sound penny wise and pound foolish to build another dock, but we can hardly walk around George Town and one of the reasons is because of the amount of cargo coming off at the dock. George Town is almost ready to be turned into a pedestrian city. We need a new dock someplace else, on the eastern end, the southern end, where we can import aggregate, cement, fuel, and no one will avoid paying the docking fees or duty.

As soon as these people come to negotiate with government for a licence for the importation of bulk cargo, that is the Ace they pull out of their sleeve, 'We cannot take it across the dock because it is going to cause more traffic congestion in George Town. We will bring it across the North Sound onto our property.' In the meantime, the North Sound—being the most sensitive area—is dug up and no penalties are applied for that. Then, it is still only $1.00! Government needs to look at that to see whether or not it is time to review those importation licenses.

I am also asking government to look at the financial industry. We are faced with increased expenditure to ensure that these same people maintain their businesses in this country. There is a fallout effect for the Cayman Islands on the whole. We are saddled with the responsibility to ensure that we monitor in accordance with the Financial Action Task Force (FATF), the Organisation for Economic Cooperation and Development (OECD) and all the requirements of the other initiatives. That is additional cost to this country and it cannot be levied to the poor people. It has to be laid squarely on the shoulders of those who are responsible.

It is time the financial industry carried its weight in this country. It is time the government of this country stop taxing the small people to support the people who are taking the cream off of the top. This has been going on all of our lives. We have catered to that environment, and rightly so because it has been to our benefit to do that. But we have taxed the man on the street in order to do that. I trust this new Government will change the way the financial industry is supported.

At least one of the Ministers has been a professional in the financial industry for a very long time. I believe there are two of the Ministers who have been in this industry. One worked for the big accounting firms and he knows exactly where I am coming from. It is time they looked at taking more from the financial industry to support the needs of this.

I look forward to the Third Official Member's reply to my comments. Thank you.

The Speaker: Does any other Member wish to speak? The floor is opened for debate.

The Second Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman.

Mr. Lyndon L. Martin: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. The Bill before us today seeks to impose duty on basic food items, flavoured milk, yogurt and ice cream from duty free to 20 percent; bird's eggs, egg yolks, dried and otherwise, from duty free to 15 percent et cetera.

My concern, represented by voting "No" on the motion bringing this Bill before us, along with the First Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman, the Third Elected Member for George Town, and the Second Elected Member for Bodden Town, as the record will show, was simply because these duties would have a greater effect on the small man.

It is my opinion, the reason these duty heads are always targeted for easy ways of raising revenue, is the same as what was pointed out in December by the Third Official Member, when he spoke of various revenue heads being in elastic and some being elastic. These basic food items would be categorised as in elastic, that is, that when duty is increased on these items the volume consumed does not dramatically decrease. It is quite easy to estimate the impact of collecting duty on these items because they are not going to change dramatically in volume once you increase the cost through the duty being applied.

Other items are categorised as elastic because when duty is applied the revenue earned would not increase significantly because the volume would be cut back. It is time that this country moved from addressing these basic ways of raising revenue. In my debate on the Throne Speech and Budget Address, I outlined some and I will not bore the House by repeating those initiatives.

According to the recently released census, my district has the second lowest per capita income in this country, being $15,780 for Cayman Brac in 1998. When I hear a Bill that increases the tax on the poor man, it is especially important that I voice my opposition to this Bill as it affects my district. The impact will be even greater because of the low level of income.

I also use this opportunity to ask the Third Official Member to assist me in understanding how, at this time, they were able to make an estimate that this Bill will generate some $12 million in revenue, when last year it was highlighted that a private member's motion sought to remove the duty and it was difficult to estimate the loss of revenue because of how the reporting was done by Customs. It was said that there were not clear categorisations and specifications to allow for the 1999 duty package to be accurately calculated as to its impact on total revenue. However, we are now able to include in our country's budget an estimate that this Bill will yield some $12 million.

If there are new mechanisms of categorisation, or a new policy which has made it easy, I would like to know so that I can place congratulations where it is due.

I thought it fit to register my opposition, as I did at the time of the motion, to bring in duties against the poor man where there are other options we could pursue. I also endorse what the Elected Member for East End said, as well as the Third Elected Member for West Bay, that the reduction in duty on the boats 35' and over seems to be inconsistent. This Bill is being brought to raise revenue; it is being brought out of the government's desperate attempt to raise funds. Why are we reducing import duty on pleasure craft of 35' and over?

It is apparent to me that this country truly needs a fiscal policy that would outline government's position on taxation and how its taxes will be levied. As we all know, tax is the only mechanism whereby government can quantify its policies. If government seeks to provide protectionism for various industries, it applies duty against competitive imports. I think it is imperative that the government of the day develops a clear policy that will govern its total tax incidence and how we will be imposing taxes upon the people of this country.

I am not in a position to support this Bill.

The Speaker: The Second Elected Member for West Bay.

Mr. Rolston M. Anglin: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. In my contribution to the Throne Speech and Budget Address I made my position on the tax measures and budget quite clear. It was one of deep concern, but also one of understanding in the short term, the difficulties faced by the new administration.

I would like to echo the sentiments of certain colleagues who spoke against certain taxes on food-stuff. As I see it, this tax measure has to be a short-term approach, that is, for five months after it is removed from being sent here. I recognise that Rome was not built in a day, and I am willing to ensure that the country and the business of running the country are continued. However, I made it quite clear, and I make it quite clear, that this is not the form of governance via taxation policy which I can support in the long term.

We heard of the medium term financial strategy and long term financial planning. Government has to find ways and means to raise revenue in this country to allow it to run itself in a way that is not disproportionate towards poor people.

I do not try to hide who I am or where I am from. I know what it is to be poor. As I said before, we cannot continue to beat the same horse over and over and over.

When I look at specific measures there are a few things that jump out. A few have already been mentioned. I cannot see the logic in taxing 18' to 35' boats at a rate of 10 percent and then taxing anything over 35' at the rate of 5 percent. It means that if a person wanted to do business in the North Sound or any other type of watersports business who bought a boat for $35,000, at 10 percent, they will pay $3,500 in tax. At the same time, we are saying that someone with a 36' boat, and let's say they got it for a good deal and got it for $70,000, at 5 percent, they will pay the same $3,500 in tax. I wish that could have been considered in another way. However, the Third Official Member might provide all Honourable Members with an enlightenment we currently do not have.

I also note there is an exclusion of ocean-going vessels in the Cayman Islands temporarily. I recognise some of the need for this with larger vessels passing through our territory on the way to another jurisdiction, it would be practically impossible to monitor this on collecting the taxes. However, how about the luxury yachts we see in the harbour for days on end? What do other countries do?

I note it says under section 19 of the Customs Law (1998 Revision) that the Collector of Customs has certain discretions. However, I would be interested to know what other territories do when luxury yachts visit for extended periods, let us say two weeks, and persons aboard come on shore, use the roads, et cetera, and are not necessarily paying any tax. A lot of times they do not even have to buy food when they are here; they could be consuming their food on board. So they derive the benefits but do not pay anything for it.

About two months ago I was in a restaurant overlooking the harbour and I saw a helicopter fly off of a luxury yacht. I wonder what other territories do in this regard, and whether or not it is feasible to have a clearer policy. Obviously this is something that cannot be done today, however, it is food for thought as we move to long term financial planning.

It is difficult to look at any such measures before us—fresh fruit, eggs, et cetera, having taxes when considering the position the country is in. It is difficult to support such measures, coming from where I come from, and believing what I believe. There are entities on this island not paying their way. The annual fee for certain professionals was already mentioned; that seems to be rather low. For example, accountants pay $1500 a month. It has also come to my attention—

The Speaker: I think you said per month.

Mr. Rolston M. Anglin: Per year. Sorry, Mr. Speaker. Thank you.

It has also come to my attention that there also seems to be a difference in the way certain professionals pay their fees. I have been told that certain firms pay their fees solely on the basis of the Partners in their firms. If they have ten Partners, then that is the fee they would pay for the year. They are all part owners of the firm. Others have said they will pay for all qualified professionals within the firm. I would hope that is the spirit of the annual fee that they have to pay for all professionals within their firm. Professional firms are like any other entity—there are less Chiefs than Indians; that is, less partners than associates. I hope this will be stringently enforced and that the view in the long term will be that entities (and I mean people, partnerships and companies) who are more able to pay, and who for a long time—up until now in my view—have not paid their fair share. They have not contributed in an equitable fashion in terms of the running of this country.

After all, if a man who makes $1,000 per month goes into the grocery store and has to feed a family of four, he is going to wind up paying almost an identical amount in tax as the person who makes $5,000 per month with a similar size household. There is no equity in that. How can a person who makes $1,000 a month, in percentage terms survive, solely looking at things like foodstuffs—necessities, items that are not elastic in demand, items needed to survive? It is not fair! The person who makes $1,000 pays five times as much tax, in percentage terms, than a person making $5,000. There is no equity in such a system!

I would like to share with the current Government a saying by Confucius, "To see what is right and not do it is want of courage." We must get out of the mindset that we are going to have purely consumption based taxes in this country that are unequally distributed and unequally burdensome and harsh on poor people in this country.

This is not an approach that I can support in the long term. However, given the constraints faced in the short term, I feel obligated to support it because the country must go on. However, I too have had representation from constituents who have told me their view is that they are willing to give government a chance to put together its medium and long term financial strategies. This approach is one that must come to an end in this country. We can no longer have the tax burden unequally distributed to those who are less able to pay.

In the words of the Elected Member for East End, "Poor people fed up!"

The Speaker: Does any other Member wish to speak? (Pause) Does any other Member wish to speak to the amendment? (Pause)

The Honourable Minister for Planning, Communications and Works.

Hon. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Perhaps on occasions like this I would like to still be on the Backbench. Nevertheless, there are responsibilities one has to live up to so sometimes when unsavoury debate has to take place about matters, you wish you could push it aside, but you still have to deal with it.

Speaking for the Government, it is certainly a time when Government would like to not have to entertain any tax measures with regards to trying to strike as close to a balanced position as it could with the 2001 estimates. Unfortunately, that is not the case, and that is why we have the Bill before us today.

Having said that, there are several points I believe, need to be addressed and clarified. Before going into some specifics, let me make a general statement to say that government takes on board the thought of not falling into the usual trap, whenever we need to find revenue, to look at consumption taxation.

There are those who said that just after taking up office in the new Government, I said there would be no new taxes. I was on the premise from the beginning that we did not wish to have to entertain any consumption taxes. What we did not know at the time was that when the duties had been taken off the food items by the previous government, even though it seemed they did not know the total amount of projected shortfall, having done so, the situation obtained at the end of the day was that there was some estimated $10 million to $12 million revenue lost for the year 2000.

The position we found ourselves in would have been compounded twice over for this year and there was no time to sit down and work out strategically new and innovative ways to raise the revenue from other sources. We were able to tap into some of those sources, but we simply could not pick numbers and throw them out and do it in a sensible fashion.

So that it will be very clear, the Second Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman spoke on this $12 million. These measures are not estimated to raise $12 million because not all of the duty taken off has been put back on. That figure is estimated to be in an excess of $7 million this year.

I want to use an example, and I will go on to show that just as Members have been saying, and quite rightly defending their positions and representing their constituents, they cannot be pleased with a tax package which affects the consumer. I want to bring to light a thought process that seemed to prevail and show that this Government is not going to be engaging in that thought process when it comes to raising revenue.

When we talk about those duties being taken off, that was done on 3 February 2000, when the Third Official Member made the announcement that these duties were going to be taken off. What actually transpired was (part of this is a view, and part is a known fact) that when the budget session started the present Third Elected Member for George Town had brought a private member's motion, which addressed taking off the duties from certain items.

The view is that the Government, in order to preempt debate on his private member's motion and to take away his thunder, introduced the reduction of these duties. That was done on the same day the estimates were delivered, if I remember correctly. I stand to be corrected, but it is not a major issue and I know it was around that same time.

When those estimates were delivered to the country, they were delivered, having calculated and projected based on historic records that all of these duties were going to remain as they were. At the very last moment before the Budget Address was delivered, they announced they were taking them off, but there was no adjustment on the revenue side for taking them off.

Having said that, and we understand very clearly that the same single-entry bookkeeping the former Leader of Government Business used to throw at people, is obviously the only kind that he knows how to do because that was exactly what he did. They deducted duty on one side to look good to the country, but they left the revenue the same as if they were going to collect the duty. That happened on 3 February.

Finally, the present Third Elected Member for George Town got to bring his motion on 11 February 2000. He spoke on his motion and then the Government replied.

I now quote Mr. Truman Bodden (at that time he was the Honourable Truman Bodden) when he made his reply to the motion.

The Speaker: Please state the date.

Hon. D. Kurt Tibbetts: It was 11 February 2000.

The then Leader of Government Business, quoting from page 1469 of The 1999 Official Hansard Report, said, "This motion says: 'AND BE IT ALSO FURTHER RESOLVED THAT the Legislative Assembly makes meaningful suggestions with regard to removing this tax which greatly burdens the people of these Islands.'

"It is a very good motion. But where are the meaningful suggestions to cover the revenue that the honourable member's motion is taking off?"

He went on further, on page 1470, to say, "I commend the Fourth Elected Member for bringing forward this motion. I believe it will take time and in-depth study to try to come up with alternative ways to be able to remove the import duty because it is not a matter of just simply taking it off now. If we take it off now, Mr. Speaker, before we have looked at the alternative ways of raising the revenue, then it obviously is going to cause the budget to be way out of whack as far as the revenue side goes."

This was on the 11 of February, and they had just done the very same thing on the 3rd! I am quoting from the Hansards, Mr. Speaker. I am not making it up.

So, the government committed the same sin on the 3rd of February 2000, and the former Leader of Government Business spoke with forked tongue (if I may call it that) by trying to cajole the then Fourth Elected Member for George Town, saying "it is a good motion," while at the same time saying, "but we cannot do it like that because we have to think about the revenue that is lost." They did not think of it when doing the other one!

Hon. Edna M. Moyle: And they did not even allow the debate to be finished on the motion.

Hon. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Let me just finish off the point by saying that the government of the day did not allow the motion to see its full passage to either be rejected or passed. In fact, I think this Honourable Legislative Assembly closed sine die before the motion had been completed.

I make that point to simply say that perhaps it is a fact that there is no one on this government bench with nine degrees. Perhaps some of us are lay people. I can assure the country, and you, Sir, that collectively and singly we all have enough sense to know better than to even think of doing this, much less say it.

With that very short exercise, let me say that the government's is totally aware of the situation that the ordinary folk in this country find themselves in. We are not removed from that. As time goes on, our actions, policies, and our involvement in taking input from the Backbench, will prove that the sole intention is within systems which prevails and with changing the best way we know how. We simply wish to reach the stage of achieving the equity the Second Elected Member for West Bay referred to.

It is unfortunate, but because our system of indirect taxation is believed at this point to be the best system, given the climate in which the country operates, it is a very difficult task to achieve equity without the ability to tax directly. I am not suggesting that is what we should be doing; I am simply stating what I believe to be a fact. It is difficult to create that equity unless we are being innovative.

What the Government has done is, it has created a fiscal advisory group, chaired by Mr. Robert Bodden. That committee has been meeting weekly and as part of its terms of reference has to do a report by 1 May. The committee is looking in depth into new and innovative ways of creating a revenue stream for central government to operate. It understands and appreciates fully that the whole intention is to be able not to have to look at any more consumption taxes.

It also has, as part of its purview to look at the global expenditure of government and try to pinpoint areas which needs to be addressed. The Ministers and Official Members are very conscious of the situation obtaining, and that is a big part of our exercise in trying to create policies whereby we need to raise revenue in the right areas, and cut expenditure as best we can without decreasing the level of services government provides. So, I believe, that we are conscious of the needs and where we should address certain areas, to try to get to this point where there is enough revenue coming in for government to operate in a prudent fashion, but with a balanced perspective and to also create a balanced budget annually.

We need to get beyond that point, because the truth of the matter is that part and parcel of our medium term financial strategy is going to be increasing the level of our general reserves to a much more comfortable situation for the country; this has to be the case. We are not a country with many natural resources that we can hold on to and tap into when we need. Our success story has great dependence on outside factors over which we have no control, therefore, it is certainly in order for us, as a matter of course, to be saving for a rainy day. So, that is part and parcel of the plan.

Not begging for time, but speaking factually, there are things which have to be done, but there has to be a certain amount of time allowed for those things to be done. I do not make that statement seeking any easing up from the Backbench because the government fully recognises that the responsibility of the Backbench is to keep government on its toes. I have no problem with that whatsoever! Been there, done that, and I love it!

The premise under which this Government operates is that the better the Backbench operates to keep us on our toes, the better Government will perform. We are not going to run. Let me get on to some of the specific issues to give some clarity.

In the actual schedule, and perhaps by the time I am through the luncheon break will allow us to deal with this so that we are very clear as to the way forward, and allow for any changes that might occur in the schedule to be done in committee stage. I noticed Members spoke about the insertion of the new code number 89.03, boats over 35'. The previous duty was 10 percent and the new duty is 5 percent. I have conferred with the Ministers and something is amiss. That certainly was not the intention.

Perhaps there is a simple answer to it. I think it will be corrected. I flagged that so that Members will understand. I am not trying to cover anything up, but I can clearly state that when we sat and discussed these issues, it was not the intention to add duty to smaller vessels and reduce this duty as it appears now. Perhaps the Third Official Member will take note of that and we can deal with that at committee stage.

I also need to mention that in regards to aluminium boats and other small crafts less than 18' which the ordinary person will use to go on a little fishing trip, it was not intended for those types of crafts to attract any duty. Not having the legal skills of others in the chamber, I cannot put words to correct the way the schedule is written to indicate that. I believe we will also look at that in committee stage.

I do not think the way it is worded now is very clear as to whether or not those types of vessels attract duty. Generally speaking, one might say that using it for your own purposes to go fishing is called "pleasure." People like me will make a distinction between that. I do not know whether the person who put it together makes that distinction or not, but we can deal with that to ensure there is no ambiguity, and as I said, we can deal with that at committee stage.

Let me, again, categorically state that this Government is going to move forward not only with the best of intentions, but with as much vigour as possible work along with the other representatives, the private sector, to come to the position where we have a revenue stream sufficient to keep government functioning the way it should to provide the services at the level it should. We are also very conscious of looking at creating efficiency within the public sector and dealing with financial reform initiatives, while working towards that level so we can get to that point.

The Speaker: If you like, we can take the luncheon suspension and you can complete after that.

Hon. D. Kurt Tibbetts: That is fine.

The Speaker: We shall suspend proceedings until 2.15 PM.

PROCEEDINGS SUSPENDED AT 12.47 PM

PROCEEDINGS RESUMED AT 2.43 PM

The Speaker: Proceedings are resumed.

Honourable Members, I must once again bring to your attention that we took 32 minutes longer than the prescribed lunch hour, and I was not notified as to the reason. I ask that we try to be prompt because there is much left on the Order Paper.

The Honourable Minister for Planning, Communications and Works continuing his debate on the second reading of The Customs Tariff (Amendment) (Variation of Duties) Bill, 2001.

Hon. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

In order for it to be understood, I apologise on behalf of the Government if indeed it was the Government who caused the delay in our resuming. There were a couple of overseas calls that we had to make and it took us longer than we assumed it would. We thought a message had been given to you. If you did not receive any message, we apologise.

Just to finish my short contribution on this Bill, I want to move on to address an area which some Members spoke on, although it is not directly related to the Bill itself. Comparisons were made to the methodology which government might use in regard to collecting revenue, and perhaps not looking at other areas in the matter in which they think we should. It is in regard to the importation of aggregate.

At present, my information is that there are three entities with permission to import aggregate into the country, the third entity being one that received permission quite recently. Perhaps they may not have been notified yet. If my understanding is correct, already two of the entities that have permission have imported aggregate into the country and it seems that the payment of duty is being handled differently. I have not been able to verify this, but it is not of major importance now whether or not this is the case based on what I am going to say.

As fate would have it, this Tuesday when Executive Council met, part of our discussions involved the creation of a policy which was sound and would create a level playing field regardless of who was involved in the importation of aggregate. This is being addressed as we speak.

So that it is clearly understood, the Ministry that holds responsibility for the importation of aggregate is the one that I take charge of. I intend to get all the facts laid out as soon as we have those facts available. Executive Council is going to closely examine the way the situation has been treated thus far, and we are going to decide on a policy and will let everyone know what that policy is. The platform from which that policy will be created will be to ensure that competition takes place in such a manner that the consumer is allowed the benefit of that competition. In order for that competition to afford itself the best end result for the consumer, means that those who are providing the material by importing it must all face the same music once it reaches our shores.

When it comes to what they buy it for, how they transport it and the cost, the Government is not concerned. That is up to their negotiating skills and contacts. In regards to what is going to be paid to government for the importation of this aggregate, let me assure one and all that everybody is going to pay the same price. There will be no difference—regardless of who it is.

It was mentioned by the Member for East End about provisions of a port facility for the importation of aggregate. That was also part of the discussions that took place. There are concerns about having several entities use the North Sound as the avenue through which the aggregate is imported. There are environmental concerns. I have heard some of the entities speak of creating some facility in some other location where this aggregate can be offloaded. I have seen some plan where it was to be done via a conveyor belt system. I do not know what will pan out with this because obviously discussions will have to take place.

Even if these importers are bitter rivals amongst themselves, they are going to work together with government in order for it to happen otherwise, it is not going to happen at all.

Once we get the facts together, we are going to get those entities together and outlay the way in which government wishes for the importation of aggregate to take place after we take input from everyone. The country will know because that is the way it is going to be. We are not going to deal with one entity in one fashion, and deal with other entities in another fashion. I am not making any comparison to what has happened in the past, I am simply saying how it is going to be.

One point was the method by which it is allowed to be imported; the way it is offloaded into the country. We are going to address that as quickly as we can because it seems there is a mind within the people engaging in that business, that importation may play an important role in the supply of aggregate in the Cayman Islands in the future.

Regarding not collecting duty on aggregate, and then deploying a consumption tax for the ordinary citizen to pay, I take that point. That is certainly not a situation government wishes to exist into perpetuity. We are going to look to see what is fair and address it. The important thing to recognise in trying to create this level playing field, is to ensure that the competition which would naturally take place between the entities wishing to import this aggregate be done where everyone has the same opportunity, and that the best price possible is given to the public.

I have tried to address some of the areas, and the Honourable Third Official Member will certainly be able to speak to whatever I have not addressed. I just wish to say that the Government intends to address the area of revenue in a manner most palatable to the entire country, and we are of the firm belief that there are certain sectors in society that need to be looking either by discussing it with us, or by having these measures passed in legislation to ensure that those sectors pay their fair share. This is not about robbing Peter to pay Paul; this is about the system under which the country operates, the benefits derived by the various sectors from the system we have, in trying to create equality to the best of our ability given the circumstances under which we have to operate.

I commend the Bill. Government wishes it could have taken another course, but for this time around, this was the best we could bring about a balance even though we were a way off. Unfortunately, any other choice would have meant more borrowing and there would have been another type of criticism. This time we were damned if we did, and damned if we did not. Next time we will work the best way around to be damned for nothing at all.

The Speaker: Does any other Member wish to speak? (Pause) Does any other Member wish to speak? (Pause) Final call, does any other Member wish to speak? (Pause) No other Member wishes to speak. Does the mover wish to exercise his right of reply?

Hon. George A. McCarthy: Mr. Speaker, thank you. I would like to start by thanking Honourable Members for their comments on this Bill. The Leader of Government Business dealt extensively on the queries raised by all Honourable Members. I do not think there is much for me to add.

The Third Elected Member for George Town asked how the government determined what items should be taxed. The Leader of Government Business responded in his winding up. I think the most poignant point was when he said, "The government will be addressing the matter of revenue in a matter most palatable to society."

The Minister also commented on the committee that has been set up under the chair of Mr. Robert (Bobby) Bodden, the Fiscal Advisory Committee. The Minister also mentioned that the committee is due to submit its first report on 1 May. In keeping with the terms of reference, the report being submitted is very much anticipated.

The Second Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman asked how it was possible to determine that reinstatement of duty on bakery products will yield $12m when it was previously stated that the duty yield from these items could not be quantified. I will admit he is correct in his statement. I can recall saying exactly that—that was the situation, it could not be quantified.

Let me first mention that $12 million would not be the yield, it would be (as the Leader of Government Business pointed out) $7.4 million. This $7.4 million takes into account the effect of the duty reinstatement on this particular category of items because it would be effective as of 21 March. In effect, there would be nine full months remaining. So, the annual effect would be $9.9 million, but taking into account the yield from 22 March onward.

Secondly, as was pointed out, the way the system is now structured and the fact that data is not captured in a per item basis, it makes it somewhat difficult to be specific in terms of how much duty has been generated on a particular item or category over a period of time. However, it is safe to say that independently the Collector of Customs has taken the view that the amount of duty stated as being recovered, as a result of the reinstatement of duty on the items mentioned under bakery products, is very much consistent with what has also been said by the revenue officer. It should be pointed out that with the reinstatement of duty on selected items that there are certain items still remaining duty free. These are bread, butter, sugar, and cereal.

The Elected Member for East End commented that each sector should be making its fair contribution. We hope that the report which is to be submitted by the fiscal advisory group, chaired by Mr. Bodden, will be making recommendations especially as such would pertain to the financial industry.

Although it has been set out in 2001 budget as $1.8 million, it is projected that the annual yield of the additional fees that will be prescribed will amount to approximately $7.4 million. As all Honourable Members can appreciate, because these fees are specified to be paid at a given date, and most of them are by 31 January, it would be somewhat difficult for the financial industry and the country as a whole to introduce fees during the course of the year making such fees retroactive. Therefore, this will take into account new activities from the date these fees are promulgated into law, and also as of the beginning of the 2002 New Year. The annualised yield for 2002 will be expected to be an additional $7.4 million.

The Second Elected Member for West Bay commented on the type of regime in place, and also commented on the inequity of the present system. The Member is quite correct, but this is a matter that will have to be looked into, and it is not one I would want to make cursory comments on at this point. First of all, it is a matter that will have to be examined very carefully because the structure we now have in place, the consumption based or indirect tax system, allows a narrow band from which to achieve the revenue yield during the course of any given year.

We have heard, on many occasions, Members of this House talking about the need to diversify or expand the tax base. We also hope the report to be presented on 1 May will give some lead in this direction.

One final thought, and this is a matter that will have to be examined very carefully, is the question of government subsidising many of the services. The Second Elected Member for George Town mentioned yesterday the example of the garbage collection fee. The $300 he mentioned was determined many, many years ago. It is likely that it is significantly higher now, and government only charges a fraction of that in terms of the garbage collection fee.

It is not that we have in place a cost recovery system. This has to be an integral part, and will be, of the financial reform initiative. To the extent government continues to provide subsidies for services it will have to be supported by all Honourable Members of this Legislative Assembly. As we continue to look at what is happening in terms of what our infrastructure base is, and the type of society we have, the Cayman Islands is not the typical third world country. We are a well developed cosmopolitan society. When we look in terms of the structure of the tax base we have for support, it needs to be revisited if government is to continue to provide the services required from time to time.

Attention has been turned once more with a certain level of commitment to the financial reform initiatives. We have the medium term financial strategy that is very much now in the making. When we look at everything happening around us, this country as a whole can be heartened that, as said by the Second Elected Member for West Bay, he is prepared to support the measures presented by way of the additional revenue yield being sought of $19 million on a short term basis. When we take everything into account along with the report submitted by the fiscal advisory group, as Members turn their attention to that report and the financial reform initiatives, look in terms of the level of subsidies and receivables outstanding at this time; these are serious causes for concern. All of these are being addressed.

I thank all Members for supporting this Bill.

The Speaker: I shall put the question that a Bill entitled the Customs Tariff (Amendment)(Variation of Duties) Bill 2001, be given a second reading. Those in favour please say Aye. Those against, No.

AYES and NOES.

The Speaker: The Ayes have it.

AGREED: THE CUSTOMS TARIFF (AMENDMENT) (VARIATION OF DUTIES) BILL 2001, BE GIVEN A SECOND READING

The Speaker: The House will now go into committee to discuss the Customs Tariff (Amendment) (Variation of Duties) Bill 2001.

HOUSE IN COMMITTEE AT 3.16 PM

COMMITTEE ON BILL

THE CUSTOMS TARIFF (AMENDMENT) (VARIATION OF DUTIES) BILL, 2001

The Chairman: Please be seated. The House is now in Committee. With the leave of the House, may I assume that, as usual, we should authorise the Second Official Member to correct minor printing errors and such like in these Bills?

Would the Clerk state each Bill and read its clauses?

Assistant Clerk:

|          |                                                                                         |
|----------|-----------------------------------------------------------------------------------------|
| Clause 1 | Short title.                                                                            |
| Clause 2 | Amendment of first schedule of Customs Tariff Law (2001) Revision.                      |
| Clause 3 | Amendment of third schedule of Customs Tariff Law (2001) Revision—Rates of package tax. |

The Chairman: The question is that clauses 1 through 3 do stand part of the Bill. Are there any amendments?

The Honourable Third Official Member.

Hon. George A. McCarthy: Yes, Mr. Chairman. There is a proposed amendment to the Bill and it is presently being worked on by the legal draftsman. It has not arrived as yet; this has to do with the area of boats.

I should mention that in the schedule handed out this morning there are certain discrepancies that have come to light.

The Chairman: Is it your wish that we suspend until that arrives?

Hon. George A. McCarthy: If you would allow a ten minute suspension we could obtain the amendment that will be given by the Legal Department, shortly.

The Chairman: We shall suspend proceedings for 15 minutes.

PROCEEDINGS SUSPENDED AT 3.17 PM

PROCEEDINGS RESUMED AT 3.31 PM

The Chairman: Proceedings in committee are resumed. I shall put the question that clause 1 do stand part of the Bill. Those in favour please say Aye. Those against, No.

AYES.

The Chairman: The Ayes have it. Clauses 1 do stand part of the Bill.

Hon. George A. McCarthy: Mr. Chairman, there is an amendment to clause 1, Sir.

The Chairman: Clause 1 is short title.

Hon. Edna M. Moyle: I think the amendment is "Short title and commencement."

The Chairman: Preamble, yes.
We will have to recommit clause 1.
The Third Official Member.

Hon. George A. McCarthy: Thank you, Mr. Chairman. In accordance with the provisions of Standing Order 52(1) and (2), I the Honourable Third Official Member, give notice to move the following amendments to the Customs Tariff (Amendment) (Variation of Duties) Bill, 2001:

That the Bill be amended as follows: (a) by deleting clause 1 and substituting the following clause—
"Short title and commencement 1. (1) This Law may be cited as the Customs Tariff (Amendment) (Variation of Duties) Law, 2001. (2) This Law is deemed to have come into force on 20 April, 2001."

The Chairman: I shall put the question on the amendment to Clause 1. Those in favour please say Aye. Those against, No.

AYES.

The Chairman: The Ayes have it.

AGREED: AMENDMENT TO CLAUSE 1 PASSED.

The Chairman: The question is that Clause 1, as amended, do stand part of the Bill. Those in favour please say Aye. Those against, No.

AYES.

The Chairman: The Ayes have it.

AGREED: CLAUSE 1, AS AMENDED, PASSED.

The Clerk:
Clause 2 Amendment of First Schedule of the Customs Tariff Law (2001 Revision).

The Chairman: The Honourable Third Official Member.

Hon. George A. McCarthy: There is an amendment to clause 2, by deleting paragraph (j) and substituting the following paragraph - "(j) by inserting, in their appropriate places, the following code numbers and items:

|       |                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                            |      |
|-------|------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------|------|
|       | All boats for local use, whether sailing from abroad under own power or not, and whether registered or not, including parts and associated equipment but excluding ocean-going vessels in the Islands temporarily (subject to the discretion of the Collector of Customs acting in accordance with section 19 of the Customs Law (1998 Revision)) - |      |
| 89.01 | up to 18 feet, (but excluding jet skis and wave runners)                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                            | Free |
| 89.02 | over 18 feet                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                        | 10%  |
| 89.03 | Jet skis, wave runners                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                              | 20%  |
| 89.04 | Other floating structures, including inflatable rafts, floating docks, submersible drilling or production platforms, tanks, cofferdams, landing-stages, buoys and beacons                                                                                                                                                                           | 20%" |

The Chairman: The question is that the amendment does stand part of Clause 2. It is open for debate.

Mrs. Julianna Y. O'Connor-Connolly: Mr. Chairman.

The Chairman: The First Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman.

Mrs. Julianna O'Connor-Connolly: Thank you, Mr. Chairman. On a point of clarification, I wonder if it is really the intention for inflatable rafts to attract 20 percent whereas boats under 18 feet, excluding jet skies and wave-runners to be imported free?

The Chairman: The Honourable Third Official Member.

Hon. George A. McCarthy: This item is presently attracting duty at the rate of 20%.

The Chairman: The First Elected Member of Cayman Brac and Little Cayman.

Mrs. Julianna Y. O'Connor-Connolly: I wonder if Section 4 of the Customs Tariff Law which gives the Governor power from time to time to waive or reduce any or all duties specified in codes . . . has a request been made for this to happen or, can there be an undertaking that where these sections will come into effect that the Governor will be approached for reduction and waiver as set out in section 4 of that Law?

Perhaps I can read section 4.

The Chairman: Please go ahead.

Mrs. Julianna Y. O'Connor-Connolly: It says, “The Governor may from time to time waive or reduce any or all of the duties specified under the following code numbers in the First Schedule in relation to any person or group of persons in Cayman Brac and Little Cayman . . ..” Has a request been made to this effect, or will one be made subsequent to these amendments we hope to put through today?

The Chairman: The Honourable Third Official Member.

Hon. George A. McCarthy: Mr. Chairman, that section is not being amended, from all indications these concessions will remain in effect.

(Long pause and discussion off microphone)

Hon. George A. McCarthy: In moving this amendment, we have come upon an anomaly. I am going to be asking Mr. Ballantyne, the Second Official Member, to assist in explaining the changes required.

The Chairman: The Honourable Second Official Member.

Hon. David F. Ballantyne: Mr. Chairman, the Bill proposes to restrict the code 88.01 to aircraft parts and associated equipment and inserts a new code 89 in place of certain matters that were previously under 88.01. In order to have the benefit of the concessions available under section 4 of the Law, it would be necessary to add into section 4 of the Law, by means of a committee stage amendment, after 88.01 and before 93.01, the following: “89.01, 89.02, 89.03, and 89.04.” That would then give the Governor the ability to reduce . . . oh, I beg your pardon. I thought 89.05 became 89.04. It does. So it is 89.01, 89.02, 89.03, and 89.04 which needs to be added in to section 4 of the Law by a committee stage amendment, if that is acceptable to the committee.

The Chairman: I have a concern. We are now amending the Schedule to the Law. The amendment is technically to Clause 4 of the principal Law, which was not included in the Bill now before the committee.

Hon. David F. Ballantyne: That appears to be the case, Mr. Chairman, but from my reading of the Bill, it says “the Customs Tariff Law in clause 2 of the Bill is amended in the First Schedule in the column headed ‘duty.’” You would have to add an amendment to the effect that the Customs Tariff Law is amended in section 4 . . . and then the details of that amendment. There would have to be a further amendment to the committee stage amendment to that effect.

Unless there is something different about amending the Schedule, the Schedule forms part of the Law. So, if it is competent to amend the Schedule we would appear to be amending the Law anyway, it is just a different part of it. That is how it looks, unless any member considers differently.

The form in which the Schedule may be amended appears to be only by a Bill, if I am reading it correctly. If we have a Bill in front of us, which is amending the Law, whether it is amending the schedule or the substantive part of the Law does not appear to preclude making an amendment by way of a Bill which is what we have in front of us. If the committee stage amendment amends the Bill, which in turn amends the Law, I think that is in order unless you still have concerns.

The Chairman: I am completely in your hands with legal terminology. However, I was saying that Clause 1 was amended, and Clause 4 should come before you get to the Schedule, if we are doing it procedurally.

Hon. David F. Ballantyne: I would agree with that. The sequence should be Clause 1 of the Bill, Clause 2 should be an amendment to section 4, and then Clause 3 should be an amendment to the Schedule. So, I agree with that.

Perhaps it would assist the functioning of the committee if I, with the leave of the Third Official Member, seek to move that the committee stage amendment be itself amended by inserting paragraph (aa) into the committee stage amendment to the effect “that section 4 of the principal Law be amended by adding the following codes: ‘89.01, 89.02, 89.03, and 89.04.’” and the remainder of the committee stage amendment would be as it is. That would put it then in the right sequence.

Perhaps I should add that that amendment should be by adding a new Clause 2 to that effect and renumbering the existing clause to Clause 3.

The Chairman: While we are at it, the final clause should read 4, because that says 2.

Hon. David F. Ballantyne: That is correct.

So, the committee stage amendment would be deleting Clause 1 and substituting the following clause (which The Third Official Member read out).

The second would be by inserting a new Clause 2 which would be to the effect “that section 4 of the principal Law be amended by adding the following codes” (and that would be under paragraph (aa)); then (b) would be a renumbered Clause 3 “that Clause 2 be renumbered Clause 3” and the remainder of the committee stage amendment.

And then the final amendment would be that Clause 2 be renumbered Clause 4.

The Chairman: Maybe you will have to say the second Clause 2 because there are two clause 2’s in the Bill. I thought that was consequential so you have the authority to amend it.

Hon. David F. Ballantyne: If I can recall the detail, which I hope I will, I will undertake to do that.

The Chairman: Would Members of the committee prefer to have this circulated prior to being . . . or are you willing to go ahead with it?

The Honourable Second Official Member, what is your final verdict on what we should do?

Hon. David F. Ballantyne: I think the Clerk should read back the amended committee stage amendment so the committee can be clear about what it is we are doing.

The Clerk: Mr. Ballantyne, are you asking me to read back the amendment proposed?

Hon. David F. Ballantyne: I think, just to read back the amendment proposed to the committee stage amendment.

The Clerk: There was one suggestion that we should put (a) and put an (aa) that section 4 of the principal Law be amended by adding the following codes—

Hon. David F. Ballantyne: May I just interject at that point and say “(aa) by inserting a new Clause 2 as follows:” and the new Clause 2 would be “that section 4 of the principal Law be amended by adding the following codes: 89.01, 89.02, 89.03, 89.04.”

The next part of the committee stage amendment (which is (b)) would be by renumbering Clause 2 to be Clause 3 of the Bill (having inserted a new Clause 2); Clause 2 to be renumbered Clause 3 (and the rest is the same by deleting (j) and substituting the following paragraph.)

Finally, in item (c) of the committee stage amendment, by renumbering the second Clause 2 of the Bill to be Clause 4.

That is my understanding of what we are proposing to do.

The Chairman: Madam Clerk, will you read the amendment as dictated by the Honourable Second Official Member?

The Clerk: After (a) we are going to be adding (2) by inserting a new Clause 2 as follows “that section 4 of the principal Law be amended by adding the following codes: 89.01, 89.02, 89.03, 89.04” and (3), by renumbering Clause 2 to 3, and (c) by renumbering the second Clause 2 of the Bill to Clause 4.

The Chairman: Are Members satisfied with that not being circulated?

I shall put the question that the amendment do stand part of the new Clause 2. Those in favour please say Aye. Those against, No.

AYES.

The Chairman: The Ayes have it.

AGREED: NEW CLAUSE 2 AMENDED.

The Chairman: The question is that Clause 2 as amended do stand part of the Bill.

Those in favour please say Aye. Those against, No.

AYES.

The Chairman: The Ayes have it.

AGREED: NEW CLAUSE 2, AS AMENDED, PASSED.

The Clerk:

New Clause 3                      Amendment to the First Schedule of the Customs Tariff Law (2001 Revision).

The Chairman: The question is that new Clause 3 do stand part of the Bill. Those in favour please say Aye. Those against No.

AYES.

The Chairman: The Ayes have it.

AGREED: NEW CLAUSE 3 PASSED.

The Clerk:

Clause 4                      Amendment to the Third Schedule of the Customs Tariff Law (2001 Revision) Rates of package tax.

The Chairman: The question is that new Clause 4 do stand part of the Bill. (It is simply renumbering) Those in favour please say Aye. Those against, No.

AYES.

The Chairman: The Ayes have it.

AGREED: NEW CLAUSE 4 PASSED.

The Clerk: A Bill for a Law to Vary Duties Under the Customs Tariff Law (2001 Revision).

The Chairman: The question is that the Title do stand part of the Bill. Those in favour please say Aye. Those against, No.

AYES.

The Chairman: The Ayes have it.

AGREED: TITLE PASSED.

The Chairman: That concludes proceedings in committee on a Bill entitled the Custom Tariff (Amendment) (Variation of Duties) Bill, 2001. The question is that the committee do report to the House. Those in favour please say Aye. Those against, No.

that the committee do report to the House. Those in favour please say Aye. Those against, No.

AYES.

The Chairman: The Ayes have it.

AGREED: COMMITTEE TO REPORT TO THE HOUSE.

HOUSE RESUMED AT 4.30 PM

The Speaker: Please be seated. Proceedings of the House are resumed. Bills Reports.

The Honourable Third Official Member.

REPORT

THE CUSTOM TARIFF (AMENDMENT) (VARIATION OF DUTIES) BILL, 2001

Hon. George A. McCarthy: I am to report that a Bill entitled, The Custom Tariff (Amendment) (Variation of Duties) Bill, 2001, was considered by a committee of the Whole House and passed with amendments.

The Speaker: The Bill is accordingly set down for Third Reading.

Third Readings.

THIRD READING

THE CUSTOM TARIFF (AMENDMENT) (VARIATION OF DUTIES) BILL, 2001

The Clerk: The Custom Tariff (Amendment) (Variation of Duties) Bill, 2001.

The Speaker: The Honourable Third Official Member

Hon. George A. McCarthy: I beg to move that a Bill entitled The Custom Tariff (Amendment) (Variation of Duties) Bill, 2001 be given a third reading and passed.

The Speaker: The question is that The Custom Tariff (Amendment) (Variation of Duties) Bill, 2001 be given a third reading and passed. Those in favour please say Aye. Those against, No.

AYES.

The Speaker: The Ayes have it.

AGREED: THE CUSTOM TARIFF (AMENDMENT)
(VARIATION OF DUTIES) BILL, 2001 GIVEN A THIRD READING AND PASSED.

The Speaker: I will now entertain a motion for the adjournment of this House.

The Honourable Minister for Community Development, Women Affairs, Youth and Sports.

ADJOURNMENT

Hon. Edna M. Moyle: I move the adjournment of this Honourable House until 10 am tomorrow.

The Speaker: The question is that this Honourable House adjourn until 10 am tomorrow. Those in favour please say Aye. Those against, No.

AYES.

The Speaker: The Ayes have it.

AT 4.32 PM THE HOUSE STOOD ADJOURNED
UNTIL 10 AM FRIDAY, 20 APRIL 2001.

OFFICIAL HANSARD REPORT
FRIDAY
20 APRIL 2001
10.25 AM

Twenty-Second Sitting

[Prayers read by the Second Elected Member for West Bay.]

The Speaker: Proceedings are resumed.
Government Business. Bills, Second Readings.

GOVERNMENT BUSINESS

BILLS

SECOND READINGS

THE BANKS AND TRUST COMPANIES (AMENDMENT) (PRUDENT MANAGEMENT) BILL, 2001

The Clerk: The Banks and Trust Companies (Amendment) (Prudent Management) Bill, 2001.

The Speaker: The Honourable Third Official Member responsible for the Portfolio of Finance and Economic Development.

Hon. George A. McCarthy: I crave the indulgence of the House to debate this and the following four Bills, as listed on the Order Paper, together as they were all connected.

Close examination of these Bills demonstrates that the Banks and Trust Companies (Amendment) (Prudent Management) Bill, 2001, the Insurance (Amendment) (Prudent Management) Bill, 2001; the Mutual Funds (Amendment) (Prudent Administration) Bill, 2001, are very much interconnected.

Also, somewhat related to these are the two other Bills. But the Companies Management (Amendment) Bill, 2001, contains features in it that relate to Bills numbers 1, 2, and 3; and the Companies (Amendment) (Custody of Bearer Shares) Bill, 2001, will be dealing specifically with the immobilisation of bearer shares.

For the benefit of Members, I crave your indulgence to debate these Bills as a single unit, thus avoiding having to speak to the Bills individually. This will also allow for Honourable Members to respond by a single debate on all five Bills.

The Speaker: The question is that we debate the following Bills in a single debate: The Banks and Trust Companies (Amendment) (Prudent Management) Bill, 2001; The Insurance (Amendment) (Prudent Management) Bill, 2001; The Mutual Funds (Amendment) (Prudent Administration) Bill, 2001; The Companies (Amendment) (Custody of Bearer Shares)

Bill, 2001; and The Companies Management (Amendment) Bill, 2001 be debated together.

Those in favour please say Aye. Those against, No.

AYES.

The Speaker: The Ayes have it.

AGREED: THAT THE BANKS AND TRUST COMPANIES (AMENDMENT) (PRUDENT MANAGEMENT) BILL, 2001; THE INSURANCE (AMENDMENT) (PRUDENT MANAGEMENT) BILL, 2001; THE MUTUAL FUNDS (AMENDMENT) (PRUDENT ADMINISTRATION) BILL, 2001; THE COMPANIES (AMENDMENT) (CUSTODY OF BEARER SHARES) BILL, 2001; AND THE COMPANIES MANAGEMENT (AMENDMENT) BILL, 2001, BE DEBATED TOGETHER.

The Speaker: We shall now move the Second Readings of the other four Bills.

THE INSURANCE (AMENDMENT) (PRUDENT MANAGEMENT) BILL, 2001

THE MUTUAL FUNDS (AMENDMENT) (PRUDENT ADMINISTRATION) BILL, 2001

THE COMPANIES (AMENDMENT) (CUSTODY OF BEARER SHARES) BILL, 2001

THE COMPANIES MANAGEMENT (AMENDMENT) BILL, 2001

The Clerk: The Insurance (Amendment) (Prudent Management) Bill, 2001; The Mutual Funds (Amendment) (Prudent Administration) Bill, 2001; The Companies (Amendment) (Custody of Bearer Shares) Bill, 2001; and The Companies Management (Amendment) Bill, 2001.

The Speaker: The Honourable Third Official Member.

Hon. George A. McCarthy: Starting with the first three, The Banks and Trust Companies (Amendment) (Prudent Management) Bill, 2001, The Insurance (Amendment) (Prudent Management) Bill, 2001; The Mutual Funds (Amendment) (Prudent Administration) Bill, 2001, these Bills address issues raised by the FATF in relation to criteria 1, 2, 3, of the FATF. I will read those criteria.

“1) Are there effective regulations and supervision, if any, for all financial institutions in a given country or territory onshore/offshore on an equivalent basis with respect to international standards applicable to money laundering?”

“2) Is it possible for individuals or legal entities to operate a financial institution without authorisation or registration, or with very rudimentary requirements for authorisation or registration?”

“3) Are there measures designed to guard against holding of management functions and control or acquisition of a significant investment in financial institutions by criminals or their confederates?”

This series of Bills is designed to make explicit certain regulatory practices regarding screening of the operators and controllers of both applicants for licences and licensees. These are: a Bill for a Law to Amend the Banks and Trust Companies Law, 2001; a Bill for a Law to Amend the Mutual Fund Law 2001; and the Mutual Funds (Amendment) (Prudent Administration) Bill, 2001.

These regulatory practices are, in fact, the international standard and their purpose is to prevent financial services providers from being operated and controlled by inappropriate persons. Therefore, Clause 2 of each Bill expressly provides for a fit and proper test for applicants and licensees in a formula common to many regulatory systems. This test is founded on: 1) honesty, integrity and reputation; 2) competence and capability; and 3) financial soundness.

In the case of The Banks and Trust Companies Bill this fit and proper test is extended to applicants via clause 3, which allows the Governor in Council to refuse a banking or trust company's licence where the business would not be conducted by fit and proper persons.

Clause 5 allows the Monetary Authority to refuse to approve a director or officer who is not fit and proper in exercising its power to approve a director or a senior officer or licensee banks or trust companies.

Clause 6 allows the existing enforcement powers of the Governor in Council to be brought to bear if the management of the licensees' businesses has not been conducted in a fit and proper manner, or if a director, manager, officer of the licensee, or a significant shareholder, is not a fit and proper person.

In respect of the Mutual Funds Bill, the fit and proper test is extended to applicants via clause 3, which allows the Monetary Authority to refuse a mutual fund licence if the Authority is not satisfied that the mutual fund will be operated by directors, managers or senior officers who are fit and proper.

Clause 4 allows the Governor in Council to refuse a mutual fund administrator's licence if it is not satisfied that the mutual fund will be operated by directors or managers or senior officers who are fit and proper.

The corresponding fit and proper test for licensees under the Mutual Funds Law is found in Clause 6, which allows the Monetary Authority to invoke existing enforcement powers in the event that a regulated mutual fund no longer meets the fit and proper criteria.

Clause 7 allows the Governor in Council to invoke enforcement powers in the same circumstances in respect of a mutual fund administrator and also adds to the existing enforcement powers the power to revoke a licence.

The comparison provision in the Insurance Bill is in Clause 2 which enables the Governor in Council to refuse to grant a licence to an applicant that does not satisfy the fit and proper criteria and may revoke a licence where an insurance licensee ceases to comply with this criteria.

Clause 3 enables the Governor in Council to invoke its other enforcement powers short of revocation as contained in section 11 of the principal Law where an insurance licensee has contravened the fit and proper criteria.

Clause 4 in The Banks and Trust Companies Bill, and Clause 5 in the Mutual Funds Bill, make explicit the longstanding practice that where a licensed bank or trust company, or mutual fund administrator applies for a waiver of the existing requirements to obtain approval for any issue or transfer of his shares, this is only given if the shares of the licensee are publicly traded on a recognised stock exchange.

Any waiver is subject to a notification requirement regarding any changes in control of a bank or trust company or a mutual fund administrator, as the case may be in substantial shareholdings. The notification requirement enables the provisions in Clauses 5, 6, and 7 as mentioned previously to be operated if necessary. It applies also to exemptions previously granted by virtue of Clause 7 of the Banks and Trust Companies Bill and Clause 8 of the Mutual Funds Bill.

I should note for clarity that there are no provisions in the Insurance Law equivalent to the waiver of approval for issue and transfer of shares in the Banks and Trust Companies Law, and the Mutual Funds Law: consequently, the absence of amendment in this aspect.

The remaining element of Clause 3 of The Banks and Trust Companies Bill provides the statutory underpinning for the recent policy initiative of the Government regarding category B banks. It requires that all category B banks that are not branches or subsidiaries of banks licensed in other jurisdictions establish a physical presence in the Cayman Islands where books and records and facilities appropriate to their operations will be maintained. This must be achieved within nine months of the passage of this amending Bill.

There are a number of points that I think would be helpful to explain. Firstly, the Cayman Islands has not licensed any private banks since 1992. This is because it is considered not in our interest to accept banks where there is no consolidated supervision exercised in cooperation with another regulatory authority as there is with branches and subsidiaries.

Secondly, the new policy affects 46 of the pre-1992 private banks when account is taken of the 16 that already have a physical presence. Their local agents have all been notified of the new policy and those that wish to remain will have ample time to re-organise their affairs in an orderly manner.

Thirdly, the policy will better enable the Monetary Authority to exercise appropriate oversight of this residual set of banks a sole supervisor.

The Cayman Islands is the first jurisdiction to address the whole private bank issue in a coherent and sensible way in tune with international standards of the Basle Committee on Banking Supervision. To our credit this has been recognised by our foreign regulatory colleagues. These Bills make current policy and practice plain to anyone seeking to understand our regulatory framework. Their embodiment in legislative form accords with certain recommendations offered in the KPMG review in which context they were discussed with and accepted by our financial services industry.

The Bills also respond to queries raised in the course of discussions with the FATF representatives, including the terms of the titles of the Bills themselves, prudent management to put our policies and practices beyond doubt. Their embodiment in legislative form will ensure that there are no further queries or misunderstandings on this matter that obstruct our discussions with the FATF review group during their onsite visit at the end of this month.

Turning now to the remaining two Bills, The Companies Management (Amendment) (Custody of Bearer Shares) Bill, 2001 and The Companies Management (Amendment) Bill, 2001.

As mentioned earlier, the primary function of The Companies (Amendment)(Custody of Bearer Shares) Bill, 2001, deals specifically with the immobilisation of bearer shares. The Companies Management (Amendment) Bill, 2001, deals with essentially three points:

- The Bill includes the fit and proper requirements for applicants and licensees, and waiver conditions where the licence is listed on a recognised stock exchange;
- The Bill repeals approximately 47 old exemptions subsisting in the Companies Management (Exemption) Regulations (1998 Revision);
- The Bill reinstates exemptions from the Local Companies (Control) Law (1999 Revision) removed in 1999.

Turning now specifically to The Companies (Amendment) (Custody of Bearer Shares) Bill, 2001. The Companies Law allows exempted companies to issue bearer shares, if they wish, which are shares that are not registered in the name of any shareholder and which may be transferred by delivery of the share certificate. Therefore, whoever is in possession of the share certificate at any given time owns a share.

While the bearer shares are not widely used for private purposes in our industry, they are widely accepted as a feature of important and legitimate institutional capital market transactions in both Europe and North America. In basic terms, this Bill provides a system for ensuring that where bearer shares are issued by a Cayman Islands company, they are at all times in the custody and control of an immobilised custodian as defined in the Bill.

The Bill allows for authorised custodians which would be local firms, licensed by the Monetary Authority in that capacity under the Companies Management Law; recognised custodians would be foreign firms gazetted by the Monetary Authority and operating securities clearance or settlement systems in a country specified in schedule 3 of the Money Laundering Regulations, 2000.

A custodian is responsible for maintaining beneficial ownership details on any bearer shares it holds including performing any "know your customer" due diligence; the "register of members" filed with the Companies Registry is required to include against any bearer shares issued, the name of the custodian who is holding them.

There are a number of associated provisions around this core concept designed to answer practical matters: to be followed where a custodian no longer wishes to act, and circumstances under which a company or the beneficial owner can deal in bearer shares without recourse to a custodian, for example, where the beneficial owner wishes to convert his shares to registered shares, or where a company wishes to redeem its bearer shares.

The transitional provisions require a Cayman Islands company that has bearer shares outstanding to ensure that those shares are deposited with a custodian within 12 months of the commencement date of this amendment. The Registrar may, on application, extend this time by up to 12 months for good cause shown. At the end of 12 months, in addition to any extension period granted, any bearer shares that remain unaccounted for become ineffective.

This is subject to a facility for the holder of any bearer shares deemed ineffective to apply to the courts and its discretion for the shares to be restored to him at any time within three years of the deeming date provided. And that the rights under the shares only become restored when deposited with an approved custodian.

The Bill provides for fines ranging from $1,000 to $50,000 on summary conviction for shareholders, or directors and officers responsible, or custodians that deal with bearer shares otherwise than in compliance with the law. This immobilisation of bearer shares was part of our publicised commitment to the OECD, as well as it responds to issues raised in the KPMG report and our FATF review.

In collaboration with the industry, we chose immobilisation rather than abolition because, as I said earlier, bearer shares are common capital market instruments in Europe and North America including a number of FATF countries. The system proposed in this Bill therefore balances legitimate commercial use with the regulatory and law enforcement needs to be able to locate beneficial ownership information via the proper channels and procedures to insist on ensuring that Cayman Islands entities cannot be used as a shield for illicit operations.

Turning now to The Companies Management (Amendment) Bill, 2001.

As recognised and commended in the KPMG report, the Cayman Islands is one of only a few jurisdictions that regulates the business of company management. We have done so since 1984.

The main purpose of this Bill is threefold. Firstly, to include company formation registered office services and bearer share custodianship under the licensing system. Secondly, to introduce explicit fit and proper criteria for applicants and licensees to mirror those introduced in the Mutual Funds Law, the Insurance Law and the Banks and Trust Companies Law. Thirdly, to define the conditions under which waivers of prior approval of share transfers of licensees may be granted, again to mirror the provisions introduced in the laws aforementioned.

I will deal briefly with Item 1, as it is specific to this Bill where other provisions have been explained in my presentation of the Banks and Trust Companies, the Mutual Funds, and the Insurance Laws.

I would like to note that the expansion of the licensing scope introduced by this Bill is already present in the Channel Islands, The Bahamas, and the British Virgin Islands.

Clause 3 is the expanded version of the business of companies management to be covered by the law. Items (a), (b) and (j) of Clause 3 are primary additions. Clause 5 provides for two types of licences to be issued under the law: a corporate service licence which would cover activity relating to bare company formation and registered offices services; and a company management licence which would entitle the holder to provide any service covered by a corporate services licence in addition to—

- (1) provision of company directors' offices, secretaries and shareholders;
- (2) management of company assets; and
- (3) bearer shares custodianship services.

Having the two types of licences allows the Monetary Authority to set regulatory requirements by reference to the nature of the activity being conducted.

Clause 12 of the Bill allows three months for anyone coming within the incremental scope to apply to the Monetary Authority for the necessary licence and may lawfully continue its business for that period or until the Authority decides the application.

This Bill is necessary to 'round-out' our regulatory regime in respect of the business of companies management and it also addresses recommendations in the KPMG Report and issues arising in the course of discussions with the FATF.

I, therefore, commend the Bills that I have commented on: The Banks and Trust Companies (Amendment) (Prudent Management) Bill, 2001; The Insurance (Amendment) (Prudent Management) Bill, 2001; The Mutual Funds (Amendment) (Prudent Administration) Bill, 2001; The Companies (Amendment) (Custody of Bearer Shares) Bill, 2001; and The Companies Management (Amendment) Bill, 2001. Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: The question is that Bills entitled: The Banks and Trust Companies (Amendment) (Prudent Management) Bill, 2001; The Insurance (Amendment) (Prudent Management) Bill, 2001; The Mutual Funds (Amendment) (Prudent Administration) Bill, 2001; The Companies (Amendment) (Custody of Bearer Shares) Bill, 2001; and The Companies Management (Amendment) Bill, 2001, be given a Second Reading.

A note on the procedure I shall follow, on the conclusion of the debate and the Mover exercising his right of reply, the question will be taken separately on each individual Bill. The floor is open to debate.

The Second Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman.

Mr. Lyndon L. Martin: Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

I only have a few points to raise in the hope they can be addressed during the Third Official Member's closing remarks on these Bills.

The first criterion of the FATF read by the Honourable Third Official Member was basically that the jurisdiction should have adequate regulation in place to protect against money laundering, and referred to it as being comparable to other jurisdictions.

I was hoping that the Honourable Third Official Member would highlight to what degree some comparison has been undertaken with the Cayman Islands and these Bills to other jurisdictions, especially with the Companies (Amendment)(Custody of Bearer Shares) Bill, 2001, if this amendment and the resulting regulations would be in place in other jurisdictions including members of the G-7 nations.

We are all very cognisant of the need to make these amendments to our legislation in order to bring us in line with the various initiatives put forward by the FATF in our hope that we will soon be removed from their blacklist. We must also be cognisant that we are in a very competitive environment. And, while we like to pride ourselves in making innovative amendments to our legislation—and this will be recognised very shortly in being removed from the blacklist—we must also ensure that in doing so we do not hamper our competitive edge.

I was hoping that the Honourable Third Official Member would also provide us with the views of the private sector on these various Bills to ensure that those utilising the centre and the resulting legislation are also comfortable with the regulations.

I have no problem supporting these Bills. I only urge that the Honourable Third Official Member and other members of the negotiating team ensure that once these initiatives are in place. And, that the necessary public relation initiatives and communication to the authorities is provided so that we are recognised for our ongoing efforts to adhere to the requirements put in place by the FATF.

We must not lose sight that these are all initiatives put in place with the ultimate goal of being removed from the FATF blacklist. With that said, and those questions posed, I give my undertaking to support these Bills.

The Speaker: The Third Elected Member for George Town.

Dr. Frank S. McField: Mr. Speaker, I notice these Bills before the House are part of that continuing process which we started in earnest last year to ensure that legislation was enacted to make the Cayman Islands compliant with the request of the FATF.

The framework in which we continue to operate, that is, being part of an international community but not players in the sense that we determine the politics of that community—that is a very dangerous road to walk when you are influenced by factors you cannot determine or influence. We are passive, I believe. I have no other alternative to this but to be passive in terms of the way we go forward in revising our laws and creating a structure that will be recognised by the international community as one that will preserve economic stability internationally, law and order, and morality of nations.

I think it is about time that the Government began to look at the need to develop alternatives to our dependence on the financial institutions of this country or on the international markets. It would appear that we are moving in such a way as to say that once we have made our structure, once our financial community has the same type of regulations and bureaucratic nuances as they have in New York, London or Tokyo, that perhaps we will not be as favoured.

In supporting these Bills, we need to encourage the Government to look at diversification of our economy, which we have been speaking about for the last 30 years or so; but it seems to be an appropriate time to say that time is running out. It is about time Government developed some kind of domestic economic strategy for the country.

Our total reliance on international trade places us in a position where we are not necessarily as strong as we could be if we started using our relationship with international businesses to develop local productivity in areas such as manufacturing, et cetera.

The Honourable Minister of Education has always talked about the cottage industry. We see how not everybody fits into the mould of banking and tourism. Therefore, I will close by saying that I support the continuation of this process to bring us in line with the international requirements, but I caution that we might also be digging our grave. This is a good time to bear that in mind and create alternatives for this dependence.

The Speaker: Does any other Member wish to speak?

The Second Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. Alden M. McLaughlin, Jr.: Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

I intend to speak at some considerable length in my continuing debate on the Throne Speech and Budget Address about these super-national initiatives which include those of the FATF and the Organization for Economic Co-operation and Development (OECD). So, I do not propose to say a great deal at this stage about the underlying reasons for the Bills currently before the House.

Most Members will recall that in June of last year the FATF issued its report setting out 25 criteria in support of the original 40 recommendations which were means of ensuring international cooperation in the fight against money laundering. They concluded that Cayman had met 13 of those criteria. To meet the criteria means that you fail to satisfy the standards that have been developed by the FATF. We had partially met four of those criteria.

Since that report, extensive efforts have been made by the Cayman Islands Government to deal with the criticisms of the FATF. The Bills that are currently being considered by this House are part of that ongoing exercise.

I noted the concern of the Second Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman about whether or not there had been consultation with the private sector. I can assure this Honourable House that there has been extensive consultation with the private sector in relation to the drafting of all of the legislation we are considering today. The Bills before the House have come with the blessing of the private sector, they knowing full well that the passage of this legislation is essential to meeting the criticism of the FATF and ultimately to being removed from the FATF's blacklist.

If I have the opportunity today I will speak about the overall plan of action of the Cayman Islands Government in relation to having the Cayman Islands removed from the blacklist so I will not go into any detail about that at this point.

I believe the technical aspects of the various Bills have been explained adequately by the Honourable Third Official Member, and they have the support of the industry. I commend them to this Honourable House.

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman.

Mrs. Julianna Y. O'Connor-Connolly: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I rise to support the amending Bills before Members of this Honourable Parliament. They are but another step in the continuing exercise of the Government of the Cayman Islands in its genuine and strenuous effort to have the Cayman Islands removed from the blacklist.

The past negotiating team (as well as the present) deserves the applause and appreciation of all residents of the Cayman Islands. The negotiations are often complex and being a small jurisdiction we rarely get what we want. I believe that for the team to have been successful in getting us removed from the OECD list (and hopefully in short order from the FATF list) is a step that should indeed be applauded and commended.

It is easy to criticise and make suggestions until you are in the frontline. I know that not only from my legal background, but also from the short three years I had in Executive Council observing the Honourable Second and Third Official Members and the former negotiating team. There were many long hours, and often they did not have the luxury of time to make decisions. I truly and sincerely congratulate them for their efforts and wish the very best for the new negotiating team. If there is one area where we should not stoop to the temptation of political penetration it is in the international negotiations.

Mr. Speaker, these amendments before us seek to impose the fit and proper test. I fully endorse this but I do it against the background that it will affect, particularly under the Banks and Trust Companies Law, the B licences. I would appreciate if the Honourable Third Official Member would indicate in his summary how many institutions we would have in this jurisdiction (Cayman) so that we could have a better handle on the potential economic effect within the nine-month period.

I am not in a position to say if the nine-month statutory requirement is a mandatory one by the international bodies. If not, is there still room to look at that period? It may be a very stiff timetable for these B licensed banks to have a physical presence within the Cayman Islands. If the Honourable Third Official Member says it is a mandatory requirement where we have no discretionary powers or ambit to make a request for a further extension, then so be it. But it is one of my concerns that there would be potential loss of B class banks from our jurisdiction. There are always other jurisdictions willing to take them from Cayman—the envy of many countries now waving the big economic banner over our heads.

I also note that the power of the Governor in Council will be somewhat limited, in that, there are specific provisions under Clause 4. Again, I see that as taking away from our domestic jurisdiction in dealing with our affairs. But knowing the background against which the negotiations were made, the team did the best they could in this regard.

I look forward to when this international tangling will be behind us and the Cayman Islands continues to be a viable competitor in the international market. I wish God's richest blessings on the negotiating team and ask the entire Cayman Islands to also support them. This is the way forward if we are to survive, and independence is not the answer despite what the proponents might put forward. I thank you, Sir.

The Speaker: Does any other Member wish to speak? Does any other member wish to speak? (Pause)

If not, does the Mover wish to exercise his right of reply? The Honourable Third Official Member.

Hon. George A. McCarthy: Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

I would like to thank Honourable Members for their favourable comments in support of these Bills.

The Second Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman raised a question in regard to support of these Bills by the private sector. I would like to assure him that consultations have taken place within our financial industry on a very wide basis in order to obtain the necessary support and to ensure that there is clarity in understanding as to what these amendments are about. Therefore, wide consultation has taken place.

Secondly, between the First Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman and the Third Elected Member for George Town, questions were implied as to our competitiveness. These Members pointed out a situation that we have to be concerned about. This is not one where it is to Cayman's advantage to be putting itself on the front line saying that we are pursuing innovative practices. Obviously, we are being guided by objective standards.

In terms of the objective test that we are dealing with, and the background against which these Bills have been developed (the 25 criteria developed by the FATF during the course of last year, against which many countries have been assessed) it is in this regard that these Bills are being brought.

One of the things I should point out in terms of the fit and proper person's test for licensees and practitioners within our financial industry is that this will not pose an onerous burden on our financial community. These are practices that have been observed for a considerable period of time; it is just a matter of qualifying these practices into legislation and making the requirements mandatory. It is not a question of introducing new concepts as such because as everyone in the Cayman Islands and the international community knows that for the Cayman Islands to have risen to rank as one of the leading financial centres is not one that would have been supported by bad practice. It is very much supported on a firm and solid foundation.

These are areas of tidying up. We are taking no chance in terms of leaving any stone unturned so that any excuse can be proffered that would delay the Cayman Islands being removed from the FATF black-list.

The First Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman raised a question in terms of where we now stand in regard to the B banks affected. I should mention to the Member that consultation has been made with our financial community. In regard to the nine-month period, we do recognise that it could be somewhat onerous, but the category of B banks affected amounts to about 62. Of these, 16 are substantial financial institutions with physical presence within the Cayman Islands and mind and management residing here. Therefore, we do not have to be concerned about those institutions. We know they are well managed and well regulated.

It is not that a situation to the contrary exists in regard to the other 46 financial institutions, but these are institutions that have no physical presence within the Cayman Islands and for which the Cayman Islands is the primary regulator. Given the situation occurring quite recently in regard to one of the banks in particular, that was looked at by a Senate review committee in New York. Also, looking in terms of the implication of that for the Cayman Islands, consultation has been carried out very widely throughout the Cayman Islands community. It is in this regard that a decision has been taken that it would be useful for these 46 financial institutions (with no physical presence in the Cayman Islands and for which we are the primary regulator) to establish a physical presence.

When we look at the financial implications of this, there will be a sacrifice in terms of revenue. But given the way in which the regulatory requirements of the world are moving in terms of fit and proper persons' tests, establishing a need to have knowledge of financial activities, or licensed financial institutions within our borders. It is felt that this is a prudent approach to take in addressing the situation with these 46 B banks that are so affected. I thank Honourable Members for their support.

THE BANKS AND TRUST COMPANIES (AMENDMENT) BILL, 2001

The Speaker: I shall now put the question that The Banks and Trust Companies (Amendment) Bill, 2001 be given a Second Reading. Those in favour please say Aye. Those against, No.

AYES.

The Speaker: The Ayes have it.

AGREED: THE BANKS AND TRUST COMPANIES (AMENDMENT) (PRUDENT MANAGEMENT) BILL, 2001 GIVEN A SECOND READING.

THE INSURANCE (AMENDMENT) (PRUDENT MANAGEMENT) BILL, 2001

The Speaker: I shall now put the question that the Insurance (Amendment) (Prudent Management) Bill, 2001 be given a Second Reading. Those in favour please say Aye. Those against, No.

AYES.

The Speaker: The Ayes have it.

AGREED: THE INSURANCE (AMENDMENT) (PRUDENT MANAGEMENT BILL), 2001 GIVEN A SECOND READING.

THE MUTUAL FUNDS (AMENDMENT) (PRUDENT ADMINISTRATION) BILL, 2001

The Speaker: I shall now put the question that The Mutual Funds (Amendment) (Prudent Administration) Bill, 2001 be given a Second Reading. Those in favour please say Aye. Those against, No.

AYES.

The Speaker: The Ayes have it.

AGREED: THE MUTUAL FUNDS (AMENDMENT) (PRUDENT ADMINISTRATION) BILL, 2001 GIVEN A SECOND READING.

THE COMPANIES (AMENDMENT) (CUSTODY OF BEARER SHARES) BILL, 2001

The Speaker: I shall now put the question that The Companies (Amendment) (Custody of Bearer Shares) Bill, 2001 be given a Second Reading. Those in favour please say Aye. Those against, No.

AYES.

The Speaker: The Ayes have it.

AGREED: THE COMPANIES (AMENDMENT) (CUSTODY OF BEARER SHARES) BILL, 2001 GIVEN A SECOND READING.

COMPANIES MANAGEMENT (AMENDMENT) BILL, 2001

The Speaker: I shall now put the question that the Companies Management (Amendment) Bill, 2001 be given a Second Reading. Those in favour please say Aye. Those against, No.

AYES.

The Speaker: The Ayes have it.

AGREED: THE COMPANIES MANAGEMENT (AMENDMENT) BILL, 2001

The Speaker: Our next move is to go into committee. Is it the wish of the House that we take our morning break prior to going into committee?

We shall suspend proceedings for 15 minutes.

PROCEEDINGS SUSPENDED AT 11:25 AM

PROCEEDINGS RESUMED AT 11:50 AM

The Speaker: Proceedings are resumed.
Bills, Second Reading.

THE PROCEEDS OF CRIMINAL CONDUCT (AMENDMENT) (FINANCIAL INTELLIGENCE UNITS) BILL, 2001

The Clerk: The Proceeds of Criminal Conduct (Amendment) (Financial Intelligence Units) Bill, 2001.

The Speaker: The Honourable Second Official Member.

Hon. David F. Ballantyne: Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

As the Member responsible, I wish to move that a Bill entitled, The Proceeds of Criminal Conduct (Amendment) (Financial Intelligence Units) Bill, 2001, be read a second time.

The Speaker: Do you wish to speak to it? Please continue.

Hon. David F. Ballantyne: Thank you. Reference has already been made in the House to the implementation plan submitted to the FATF by the Cayman Islands Government. In that plan there are a number of measures concerning the Financial Reporting Unit under the Proceeds of Criminal Conduct Law (PCCL). In particular, there is a commitment that membership of the Egmont Group by the Cayman Islands Financial Reporting Unit (FRU) would be pursued as a priority and if possible accomplished by 30 June 2001.

Additionally, a commitment has been given to extend the ability of the FRU to share information with overseas financial investigation units, commonly known as FIUs. At present, under the PCCL, the FRU may only share information with overseas law enforcement agencies.

The Egmont Group definition of a financial intelligence unit includes FIUs, which are administrative agencies as well as law enforcement agencies. A good example was France, where their FIU is an administrative FIU and is part of their Ministry of Finance. So, there is a mixture of law enforcement agencies and administrative financial intelligence units.

Let me briefly quote from the background of the Egmont Group to give Members a better flavour of what this means. The following are extracts from an information paper on financial intelligence units prepared by the Egmont Group—

“Anti-money laundering investigations conceivably touch a number of law enforcement agencies within a particular jurisdiction. This, along with the fact of ever-present resource limitations, means that a completely effective multi-discipline approach for combating money laundering is often beyond the reach of any single law enforcement or prosecutorial authority. In many cases, there is also a reluctance on the part of financial institutions to provide to government authorities information that might be related to but is not obviously indicative of a crime. One may add to these restrictions on information exchange in certain instances the unwillingness or inability to share such information among relative government agencies and the seemingly insurmountable obstacles to rapid exchanges of information with foreign counterparts.”

Regarding the concept of a financial intelligence unit, the Egmont Group have this to say, “Over the past years, a number of specialised governmental agencies have been created as countries develop systems to deal with the problem of money laundering. These entities are commonly referred to as financial intelligence units, or FIUs. These units have attracted increasing attention with their ever more important role in anti-money laundering programmes, that is, they seem to provide the possibility of rapidly exchanging information between financial institutions and law enforcement/prosecutorial authorities as well as between jurisdictions while protecting the interests of the innocent individuals contained in their data.”

And the beginning of the Egmont Group is this: despite the fact that financial intelligence units were created in several jurisdictions throughout the world during the first years of the 1990s, their creation was still at first seen as isolated phenomena related to the specific needs of those jurisdictions establishing them.

Since 1995, however, a number of FIUs began working together in an informal organisation known as the Egmont Group, named after the location of the first meeting at the Egmont-Arenberg Palace in Brussels. The goal of the group is to provide a forum for FIUs to improve support to their respective national anti-money laundering programmes. This support includes:

- expanding and systematising the exchange of financial intelligence information,
- improving expertise and capabilities of personnel of such organisations, and
- fostering better communication among FIUs through application of technology.

So, it came to the definition of an FIU. That occurred at the fourth meeting of the Egmont Group which took place on 21-22 November 1996 in Rome, when over 30 countries were in attendance along with international organisations. The Egmont Group then moved one step closer to becoming the primary framework for cooperation among FIUs.

The Egmont Group examined the functions of the various FIUs and like agencies so as to determine those missions and functions that are carried out in common. The conference came to an agreement on the definition of an FIU, a definition that will likely facilitate the establishment of new units by setting a minimum standard for such a unit.

According to this definition, a financial intelligence unit is “A central national agency responsible for receiving (and, as permitted, requesting), analysing, and disseminating to competent authorities, disclosures of financial information:

- (i) concerning suspected proceeds of crime, or
- (ii) required by national legislation or regulation, in order to counter money laundering.”

One of the purposes for defining the FIU was to distinguish it from the other components of an anti-money laundering programme. The definition also helped create a specific identity for the Egmont Group as distinct from the FATF or other international bodies concerned with money laundering. The definition was meant to be specific enough to distinguish these agencies from other types of government authorities, yet it had to be generic enough to include the many variations of these units.

In creating the definition, the Egmont Group attempted to avoid emphasising any particular type of structure—police, judicial, administrative, or regulatory. Since the Egmont Group adopted this definition, it has increasingly become the standard against which newly forming units are measured.

Therefore, to enable the FRU to share information with administrative FIUs overseas, for example, France, an amendment to the PCCL is required to introduce a definition of a Financial Intelligence Unit. That is what the Bill before the House seeks to do.

The proposed definition incorporates the Egmont Group definition as the basic description of a FIU, but makes it clear that a FIU also continues to include a law enforcement agency. The effect of the passage of this Bill would be to enable the FRU to share information not only with a law enforcement agency, but with a FIU as defined by the Egmont Group.

It is considered important to make this amendment simply because a commitment has been given to do it, but secondly, it is understood that the French membership on the FATF—if this amendment is passed—would be satisfied with the ability of the Cayman Islands to cooperate. While it is not specifically designed for France, France is an important member of the FATF. It would however, enable the FRU to cooperate with any existing FIU. I have details of all such units in existence in the world. At the present time, according to the information provided by the Egmont Group, they extend to some 48 countries, including all the metropolitan countries, but including many so-called offshore centres such as the BVI, the Isle of Man, Jersey, Guernsey, Hong Kong, Luxembourg, Switzerland, and various others. So, the Cayman Islands would be in good company in joining the Egmont Group. The Government has committed to pursue application of the Egmont Group, which the change to this law would facilitate. Mr. Speaker, with these words, I commend this Bill to the House for consideration. Thank you.

The Speaker: The question is that a Bill entitled, The Proceeds of Criminal Conduct (Amendment) (Financial Intelligence Unit) Bill, 2001, be given a Second Reading.

The First Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman.

Mrs. Julianna Y. O’Connor-Connolly: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I seek clarification and apologise for not clearly following, but could the Second Official Member inform if this is merely a change of name from what was known as the Financial Reporting Unit, and if he could say, in his winding up, how this function increases the existing functions of reporting? And does the Government have any idea what is being reported to other overseas financial intelligence units?

We do not want to be seen as endorsing an internal information providing unit that the persons on Executive Council, the House or the chief justice would not have any idea as to what is being reported. That would not be a position I would support. Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: The Elected Member for East End.

Mr. V. Arden McLean: I have some concerns about the FIU as well. Some time ago there was a question on the floor of this Honourable House and I have yet to understand the total function of this unit and who heads it. I am concerned also as to who is responsible for the unit and who is going to be informed of the information that is shared.

In the absence of any clear indication as to who is in charge, my concern is also that this unit may not be going on witch-hunts. I heard the Second Official Member speak about the need to have the FIU share the information on suspicious transactions. But it appears that the unit is going to be sharing that on its own. I wonder if he could explain to this Honourable House if there are clear lines as to who the unit will be disclosing this information to. I know he spoke about other units, and regulatory bodies and other enforcement bodies in other countries. But, particularly in this country . . . it is my opinion that the unit has no direction as to who is in charge, who they report to and what they report; and who is to know what is being reported and how they conduct their research.

Mr. Speaker, I support the creation of the unit, but there has to be some direction and order in it. I look forward to the Honourable Second Official Member touching briefly on that to inform this Honourable House.

The Speaker: Does any other Member wish to speak? The Second Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman.

Mr. Lyndon L. Martin: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I want to thank the Honourable Second Official Member for providing his briefing on this Bill.

I am minded that the Preservation of Confidentiality Law (1976) was deemed to be an important law, and remains an important piece of legislation in the operation of offshore financial centres. The preservation of one's confidentiality is part and parcel in doing financial business, even on a private individual basis. It is an inherent right that one operating an offshore account or company must be provided in order for a centre such as the Cayman Islands to remain competitive.

Over the years we have made this preservation of confidentiality subject to certain conditions namely, the legitimate claim of criminal activity. We have broadened the scope of what is determined to be criminal activity over the years. However, I am concerned that this Bill before us today goes further to remove the layer of protection provided by this jurisdiction for the users of the centre.

The mechanisms put in place for the Mutual Legal Assistance Treaty, The Misuse of Drugs Law, and The original Proceeds of Criminal Conduct Law, ensured that there was a check system—an authority locally that first vetted the claim for information to ensure that there was a legitimate claim—that this information being sought was a true violation under our laws as to what is determined criminal activity.

From my understanding, this Bill will allow the financial reporting unit to communicate directly to overseas financial intelligence units as recognised under the law following this amendment. I hope the Honourable Second Official Member will be able to rest my concerns by assuring me that there will remain an authority in place that will vet every request for information prior to our financial reporting unit providing this information to overseas FIUs.

I am very much aware of the changing trends in offshore finance moving away from the haven to the offshore financial centres to now international financial centres, and the need to ensure that not only the mechanism and regime is in place to prevent the use of our centre for illicit activities, but also that the international image of the centre is preserved as pristine: one with strong convictions to the prevention of the use of this centre for illicit activity.

I am quite aware of the importance that this plays in our survival in the industry. However, this must be carefully balanced against what is necessary to compete in the industry, that is, the preservation of confidentiality. I cannot support any measure that seeks to eliminate what I deem as a very fundamental part of an offshore financial centre, that is, the preservation of confidentiality.

I humbly ask the Honourable Second Official Member to assist me by elaborating on the mechanism that would be in place if this Bill is accepted to ensure that fishing expeditions cannot be undertaken by international financial intelligence units in conjunction with our own international reporting unit. Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: Does any Member wish to speak? The Second Elected Member for Wet Bay.

Mr. Rolston M. Anglin: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I also wish to voice some concern and need for clarification in regard to deliberating over whether or not I can support the matter before us.

I would like to thank the Honourable Second Official Member for informing us as to some of the genesis of establishing such a unit. However, when it comes to client confidentiality and the underpinning confidence the international community will have in the financial system that we create and seek to alter and amend, that it would be favourable and held with a high degree of confidence.

While I understand that the fundamentals of our financial centre here in Cayman would go along way increasing confidence, an international recognised unit such as the Egmont Group that was talked about today, is seen as the umbrella organisation to which all other units will belong.

I would respectfully ask the Honourable Second Official Member if he could clearly show Honourable Members of this House and members of the community how this unit will work in relation to the Cayman Islands Monetary Authority. We have heard a lot about the expansion of the Monetary Authority, the human capital that will be involved and the financial resources that will have to be used to expand the Monetary Authority so that it will become an internationally acceptable regulatory body. Further, to serve as the catalyst to our regulatory machinery regarding this financial centre that we seek to hone and have accepted internationally. We seek to have placed on it a high level of confidence by international investors, supranational nations and indeed by those nations' regulatory regimes.

I would certainly think that if the Cayman Islands is going to build up the necessary skill-base in terms of human capital within the Monetary Authority to become truly independent, when it comes to the matter of reporting suspicious transactions and suspicious clients, that this machinery that we seek to increase in size and make independent, will serve locally as our umbrella organisation that ensures the highest level of confidentiality to our international investors. And, at the same time withstands the scrutiny of other international organisations and nations.

I certainly would think that our regulatory body, the Cayman Islands Monetary Authority, would be always in a position of knowledge. After all, how can we expect anyone to have confidence in the Monetary Authority if we ourselves are in a knowledgeable position? If they do not know what is going on in the financial services arena in terms of who the players are, seeing their financial statements and doing inspections, but actually knowing what is going on in terms of the reporting of suspicious transactions. As far as I am concerned, that is where the 'rubber meets the road'.

From what I can see, there has been an air of mystery surrounding the creation of the FIU. From the very outset, not having that link (whether it is formal or informal to the point that there would only be interrelation when a suspicious transaction or a suspicious person is reported) I would think would be the minimum amount of interplay between these two bodies.

In this world who can do what? I have always found people's opinions of that to be intriguing. To put it bluntly, for a long time in this country, even up until this day, Caymanians are told what they can and cannot do. The people of these Islands have proven beyond the shadow of a doubt that when given the opportunity they can compete in this global arena. We have a lot of competent Caymanian professionals in the financial services arena.

We have had a high level of success in terms of our lawyers passing the Bar exam on their first attempt; we have had numerous people pass the Certified Public Accountant (CPA) exam in the United States on their first attempt; we have had numerous people pass the Chartered Accountancy exam on their first attempt; the Association of Chartered Accountants exam on their first attempt.

When you see these organisations being formed and who makes up the personnel (and look at where they are from) it really shows you quickly how people think of you in terms of your capabilities and what they are willing to say confidently, "I know a Caymanian [cannot] do."

We know of the international initiatives and we have heard about the Egmont Group and this is a drive to ensure that our FIU can receive membership into this Egmont Group. We are also hearing that the Egmont Group itself is in its infancy stages. But, I certainly would hope that as we go down the road to making the Cayman Islands Monetary Authority independent (as we pay the financial consequence), that that Authority will be the ultimate regulatory Authority in this country. Its role will not simply be reduced to handing out licences to doing onsite inspections, but it will be in the know when suspected persons and suspicious transactions are reported in this country.

Maybe it is just me, but I could not dream of sitting in the chair being a leader in another country's regulatory machinery. For example, the United States or France looking at our Islands as they do, critiquing our regulatory machinery and not being able to see clearly that it is not always in the know regarding the financial services industry that they are going to be purported to be the regulators of. I would like to know whose ultimate discretion it is to release information to other regulators in other countries.

I believe that if we are going to make the Cayman Islands Monetary Authority independent and go through the pains of telling the world and ourselves that it is indeed our regulator here in Cayman . . . they have to have a say in it. I could just be missing the boat, but I cannot see it being any other way. But again, some of these things go back to what Caymanians are truly capable of. Can we keep matters confidential? Are we that professional? The days of jumping through the loops have to end. We train ourselves, but seemingly that does not cut it.

Mr. Speaker, the mechanics of the FIU as we understand it has to be allowed to have policing powers. I am no lawyer, but it seems to me that achieving that end is not necessarily insurmountable because we have a lot of capable people in this Honourable House. We pass laws; we repeal laws; we amend laws. So it can be done!

And so, I do not think it will be acceptable for the country to simply hear that it has to be the way it is because the Monetary Authority does not have policing powers and capabilities. When you look at other countries and their regulatory machinery, you see how they cater their laws to ensure that the players in their regulatory machinery have policing powers.

I would like to commend the Honourable Second Official Member for bringing this Bill here today. We must continue to move forward in terms of our ability to prove to the international arena that we are committed to the highest level of regulation, scrutiny, and an internationally acceptable level of cooperation—real cooperation.

Confidentiality is key in any relationship, especially when talking about people's finances. There is no one in this world that likes any and every regulator to be able to 'dig around in every corner' of his financial affairs. We understand that, but when we seek to create this new way forward, in my view it has to make good sense.

I have been told that the Cayman Islands Monetary Authority will be the ultimate regulator in this country. If you are going to be the ultimate regulator, you should constantly be in the know, especially when it comes to the reporting of suspicious transactions and suspicious persons. Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: The Second Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. Alden M. McLaughlin, Jr.: Thank you. Mr. Speaker, I do not propose to address all the concerns raised by previous speakers, particularly the questions of whether or not the FRU is properly staffed by sufficient Caymanians or not. I do not believe that is within the ambit of the Bill we are debating.

It seems that some Honourable Members are labouring under some misconceptions in relation to the objective and scope of the proposed amendment. The Bill currently before the House seeks principally to extend the ability of our financial reporting unit to exchange information to certain enforcement agencies and units elsewhere. As the PCCL currently stands, that ability is limited to the exchange of information to other law enforcement agencies.

Having travelled with the other members of the negotiating team to Miami in December to the meeting of the FATF Review Group of the Americas, I was able to learn that one of the continued concerns of particular countries within the group (specifically France) that this issue of the limitation currently in place in relation to the agencies with which our FRU can exchange information is regarded as significant. It is one that creates a major hurdle to our being delisted by the FATF.

The amendment before us for consideration will allow an extension of the entities to whom information can be given by Cayman's FRU. It extends the definition of the FIU to mean a central public body responsible for receiving, and as permitted, requesting, analysing, and disseminating to competent authorities disclosures of financial information: (a) concerning suspected proceeds of crime; or (b) required by national legislation or regulation in order to counter money laundering. The definition also includes law enforcement agency.

Some of the legitimate concerns expressed by other Members relate to the issue of confidentiality. The Second Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman referred to the Confidential Relationships Preservation Law. Once this particular piece of legislation is passed (this amendment) the relevance of that law to the exchange of information to these agencies which are set out in the definition of FIU will no longer be critical. This law will operate outside the ambit of the Confidential Relationships Preservation Law.

There was careful consideration given to extending this definition allowing other partially administrative FIUs to have access to this information. There were considerable discussions with the private sector about it. Indeed, Cayman's FATF implementation plan which was referred to earlier by the Honourable Second Official Member and the Honourable Third Official Member has been circulated to members of the private sector. There is contained in that document, which includes the plan, quite extensive discussion of the fact that this particular amendment would be made to the PCCL. The FATF plan and attached documentation has been forwarded to the Review Group of the Americas. It has been circulated widely within the private sector after careful discussion, debate, and indeed approval of the private sector.

While the concerns of Members are legitimate, I wish to assure them that this has been given careful consideration by all concerned, those on the negotiating team, Executive Council, and the private sector. In those circumstances, I commend this amending Bill to all Members.

The Speaker: I think this will be a convenient time for the luncheon break. Proceedings are suspended until 2.15 pm.

PROCEEDINGS SUSPENDED AT 12.43 PM

PROCEEDINGS RESUMED AT 2.45 PM

The Speaker: Proceedings are resumed. Debate continues on the Second Reading of a Bill entitled, The Proceeds of Criminal Conduct (Amendment)(Financial Intelligence Unit) Bill, 2001.

Does any other Member wish to speak? If no other Member wishes to speak, would the Mover like to exercise his right of reply?

The Honourable Second Official Member.

Hon. David F. Ballantyne: I think, Mr. Speaker, that I am duty bound to exercise that right in order to try to address some of the concerns that have been mentioned by Honourable Members.

The first thing I wish to do is to thank Honourable Members for their contribution to this discussion. Although it seems to be pretty wide-ranging sometimes, I do not think there is any harm in that. The points that were made have to be listened to and either addressed or explained or somehow dealt with to Members' satisfaction.

I would like to make a couple of clarifications right at the outset. The amending Bill does not change any of the functions of the FRU here; what it does (as the Second Elected Member for George Town pointed out) is simply extend the range of the FIU with whom our FRU can exchange information to include non-law enforcement financial intelligence units. So, it is not altering the position of the FRU here.

I listened carefully to the comments about confidentiality and would like to share a few thoughts on that issue. Under the existing PCCL the FRU is able to share information both locally and overseas. In relation to local sharing of information, information may be disclosed to any institution or person in the Islands (and I am referring to section 21(7) of the PCCL). It is my view that under that provision information can be, and is disclosed to the Monetary Authority, but not in every case.

One has to recall (if I may put it this way) that the Monetary Authority is a regulatory institution. It is not a law enforcement agency. The FRU is more akin to law enforcement than it is to regulation. The reason I say that is that it has certain law enforcement functions. And without going over the details again, which might only serve to prolong the debate and perhaps confuse, the main activity the FRU engages in in relation to the matter under consideration is the receipt, analysis and dissemination—those three things—of suspicious activity reports coming to it from financial service providers in the financial services industry. So, it is the reception point for that information.

Now, I was not here in 1996 when this law was passed. But I understand that it was deliberate that a FRU or Authority was established to be the reception point, rather than these matters being reported directly to the police as is the case in the UK. The requirement in the UK is to report suspicious activities to a constable. The reason for that is that it established a filter and it allowed (if I understand the history of it correctly) the financial services industry to have confidence in the confidentiality that was attached to the information—not suggesting that the police would have been less than confidential, but what is referred for law enforcement is not every suspicious activity report. What is referred for regulatory purpose is not every suspicious activity report. It is required to be examined and analysed.

What I am suggesting is that you have something quite valuable in the form of a buffer, if you like, between the financial services industry and law enforcement and regulatory action. The test of all of this is whether it works. It may be interesting to this Honourable House to know that following upon recent amendments to the Law, the rate of reporting of suspicious activity reports has doubled. There has been 100 per cent increase in the reporting of suspicious activity. That does not necessarily mean there is more bad business out there; it simply means the system is working. And on some other appropriate occasion I can provide more information about that.

What I am here to say today is that there is control over the disclosure of the information under the existing Law. There is no change to that. I would refer you to section 21(6) of the Law. This is the Law as it is; it has nothing to do with this Bill. I will read it: “6) Where information is disclosed to the Reporting Authority under subsection (3) the Reporting Authority shall not further disclose the information without the consent of the Attorney-General who, when considering whether to give his consent, shall take into account- (a) the purpose for which the further disclosure is to be made; and (b) the interests of third parties; and the Attorney-General may impose such conditions on the further disclosure as he may think fit.”

What I am saying is that there is a control over the disclosure of this information to overseas law enforcement at the moment, and by virtue of this amendment to any administrative financial intelligence unit.

As a matter of fact I can tell the House that when I am required to decide whether to disclose information I have regard to these provisions and I do attach conditions. The kinds of conditions I attach are as follows:

- that the information should only be used for the purpose for which it is required: if it is for a criminal investigation it is for that purpose;
- the second standard condition is that it be kept confidential;
- the third condition is that any further use of that information should require an application for consent to come back to the Cayman Islands for any further use of that information.

Today I was made aware of a case which happened exactly like that in relation to assistance provided to Canada in a given case where information was provided for investigation purposes initially, they required to use it subsequently for criminal proceedings and permission was given for that. The net result was that certain parties were convicted and certain property was forfeited in Canada. So, the Cayman Islands played its part by providing relevant information.

I hope that you will understand from what I am saying that the general nature of the work of the FRU is not targeting local criminal activity. It is my view that most of the criminal activity that occurs is from the outside using vehicles within the Islands. I have said this before, and I am of that view from my experiences. The cases that are presently out there tend to be of that type.

This is in the nature of the business of the Islands; it is in the nature of the financial services industry. Metropolitan countries, institutions, and individuals in these countries use the Islands mostly for legitimate purposes, mostly for good business reasons. Some people use institutions in the Islands for reasons that are not good business reasons—and they are not helping you or the Islands. It is incumbent upon us to try to minimise the potential of that happening. Membership by the FRU of the Egmont Group will facilitate that.

I would like to share with you in relation to the Egmont Group a few comments. I would like to say to you that the Egmont Group itself in its statement of purpose which was issued in Madrid on 24 June 1997:

“Recognising the international nature of money laundering; Realising that in order to counter money laundering an increasing number of governments around the world have both imposed disclosure obligations on financial institutions and designated financial intelligence units, or “FIUs” to receive, analyse and disseminate to competent authorities such disclosures of financial information; Mindful of both the sensitive nature of disclosures of financial information and the value of the FIUs established to protect their confidentiality, analyse them, and refer them, as appropriate, to the competent authorities for investigation, prosecution, or trial; Convinced that co-operation between and among FIUs across national borders both increases the effectiveness of individual FIUs and contributes to the success of the global fight against money laundering; Understanding that effective international co-operation between and among FIUs must be based on a foundation of mutual trust . . .”

I would like to suggest to you that it is the trust that the financial services industry reposes in the FRU that allows it to operate in the way that it does. I think that the unit can, and will improve. I am not here to say that it should remain as it is, and I have heard the comments about the composition of it. What I will say, however, is that this Bill will not affect its operation as a matter of law; it will not remove any of the controls that exist to protect the confidentiality of information and protect the ability of the financial service providers to provide information in confidence without fear of it rebounding on them either from their clients or elsewhere.

I would invite Members to consider that this is a progressive amendment to the Law, designed to facilitate the reception point for information coming from here. It will not alter the controls on the information being provided.

I think that is all that I can say usefully at this time, except that the Bill itself represents one of the last steps on the commitment to fulfilling the objectives of the FATF exercise. You will recall last year that two much more significant amendments were made to this Law by first of all empowering the making of regulations which brought about the money laundering regulations which put the code of practice onto a mandatory footing, which was a major step; and, secondly, a new offence was created, a substantive offence in the PCCL. This, with the exception of a relatively minor committee stage amendment to increase the period of time for the purposes of obtaining restraint orders based on the difficulty encountered in a case entitled McCorkle, this is the objective to provide the FATF with no good reason to continue to label this jurisdiction as non-cooperative.

This is only part of it. The Third Official Member has outlined the other measures that are all part and parcel of the FATF implementation plan. I have tried to be as broad as I can in my coverage and I appreciate that I may not have dealt with all of the points. I am quite happy to separately address those in any way the House considers appropriate.

My main concern in moving this Bill and in winding up this debate is to explain to you as best I can what the effect of the change in the Law will be and to assure you that it does not alter things at this end. It really alters them at the other end and the ability of the country to cooperate through established and tested mechanisms.

Mr. Speaker, I think that is all that I may usefully add at this point and thank you and the House for your attention.

The Speaker: I shall now put the question that a Bill entitled, the Proceeds of Criminal Conduct (Amendment) (Financial Intelligence Unit) Bill, 2001, be given a Second Reading. Those in favour please say Aye. Those against, No.

AYES.

The Speaker: The Ayes have it.

Mrs. Julianna Y. O'Connor-Connolly: Can we have a division please?

The Speaker: Certainly. Madam Clerk, please call a division.

The Clerk:

Division No. 5/01

AYES: 12

Hon. James M. Ryan
Hon. David F. Ballantyne
Hon. George A. McCarthy
Hon. D. Kurt Tibbetts
Hon. Linford A. Pierson
Hon. Roy Bodden
Hon. Edna M. Moyle
Mr. Rolston M. Anglin
Capt. A. Eugene Ebanks
Mr. Alden M. McLaughlin, Jr.
Mr. Anthony S. Eden
Mr. V. Arden McLean

NOES: 2

Mrs. J. Y. O'Connor-Connolly
Mr. Lyndon L. Martin

ABSENT: 4

Hon. W. McKeever Bush
Mr. Cline A. Glidden, Jr.
Dr. Frank S. McField
Mr. Gilbert A. McLean

The Speaker: The result of the division is 12 Ayes and 2 Noes. The Bill has accordingly been given a second reading.

AGREED BY MAJORITY: THE PROCEEDS OF CRIMINAL CONDUCT (AMENDMENT) (FINANCIAL INTELLIGENCE UNITS) BILL, 2001 GIVEN A SECOND READING.

The Speaker: The House will now go into Committee to discuss a Bill entitled, The Banks and Trust Companies (Amendment) (Prudent Management) Bill, 2001 and five other Bills.

HOUSE IN COMMITTEE AT 3:01 PM

COMMITTEE ON BILLS

The Chairman: The House is now in Committee. With the leave of the House, may I assume that as usual we should authorise the Second Official Member to correct minor printing errors and such like in these Bills?

Would the Clerk state each Bill and read its clauses?

THE BANKS AND TRUST COMPANIES (AMENDMENT) (PRUDENT MANAGEMENT) BILL, 2001

CLAUSES 1 – 3

The Clerk: The Banks and Trust Companies (Amendment) (Prudent Management) Bill, 2001.

Clause 1 Short title.

Clause 2 Insertion of section 2A in the Banks and Trust Companies Law 2000 (Second Revision) Determination of fitness and propriety.

Clause 3 Amendment of section 5—Application to be made to Governor.

The Chairman: The question is that Clauses 1 through 3 do stand part of the Bill. Those in favour please say Aye. Those against, No.

AYES.

The Chairman: The Ayes have it.

AGREED: CLAUSES 1 – 3 PASSED.

CLAUSE 4

The Clerk:

Clause 4. Amendment of section 6—Shares not to be issued or transferred without approval of Governor.

The Chairman: Honourable Third Official Member do you have an amendment?

Hon. George A. McCarthy: Thank you, Mr. Chairman. In accordance with the provision of Standing Order 52(1) & (2), I give notice to move the following amendment to The Banks and Trust Companies (Amendment) (Prudent Management) Bill, 2001: That Clause 4(b) of the Bill be amended by deleting the new subsection (1a) proposed for insertion in section 6 of the principal Law and substituting the following—

“(1) (a) The Governor may exempt from the provisions of subsection (1) a licensee whose shares are publicly traded on a stock exchange recognised by the Authority, and any such exemption—

“(a) shall be subject to a condition that the licensee shall, as soon as reasonably practicable, notify the Authority of -

“(i) any change in control of the licensee;
“(ii) the acquisition by any person or group of persons of shares representing more than ten percent of the licensee’s issued share capital or total voting rights; or
“(iii) the acquisition by any person or group of persons of shares representing more than ten percent of the licensee’s issued share capital or total voting rights of the licensee’s parent company;

“(b) shall be subject to a condition that the licensee shall, as soon as reasonably practicable, provide such information to the Authority, and within such period of time, as the Authority may require for the purpose of enabling an assessment as to whether persons acquiring control or ownership of the licensee in the circumstances set out in paragraph (a) are fit and proper persons to have such control or ownership; and

“(c) shall be subject to such terms and other conditions as the Governor may deem necessary.”

I should mention that the reason for this amendment is that the way the existing wording is now set out in section 4(b) and also 5(b) of the Mutual Funds Law, if examined carefully it places an onerous burden on financial institutions. A report would be made on a daily basis to the Monetary Authority if their shares which are traded in the aggregate exceed 10 percent. For multinational institutions this would not be an unusual occurrence. This is not what this amendment is seeking to achieve. The way the present Bill is worded is not consistent with the objective of the amendment which is to ensure that anyone acquiring a substantial interest in any financial institution which would be considered to be probably 10 percent or more, thus having the ability to influence the affairs of such financial institutions as fit and proper persons.

So, it is not in the aggregate; it is where you have an individual acquiring a significant shareholding or a group of people of common interests coming together to attempt to achieve the same.

The Chairman: The amendment has been moved. The question is that Clause 4 be amended. Does anyone wish to speak to it? If not, does the Mover wish to exercise his right of reply?

Hon. George A. McCarthy: Just to thank Members for their support, Mr. Chairman.

The Chairman: I shall now put the question that the amendment to Clause 4 do stand part of the Bill. Those in favour please say Aye. Those against, No.

AYES.

The Chairman: The Ayes have it.

AMENDMENT PASSED.

The Chairman: The question is that Clause 4 as amended do stand part of the Bill. Those in favour please say Aye. Those against, No.

AYES.

The Chairman: The Ayes have it.

AGREED: CLAUSE 4 AS AMENDED PASSED.

CLAUSES 5 – 7

The Clerk:

Clause 5 Amendment of section 11—Number and approval of directors.

Clause 6 Amendment of section 13—Powers of Governor.

Clause 7 Transitional provisions.

The Chairman: The question is that Clauses 5 through 7 do stand part of the Bill. Those in favour please say Aye. Those against, No.

AYES.

The Chairman: The Ayes have it.

AGREED: CLAUSES 5 – 7 PASSED.

The Clerk: A Bill for a Law to Amend the Banks and Trust Companies Law 2000 (Second Revision) to Provide for the Prudent Management of Banks and Trust Businesses and for Incidental and Connected Purposes.

The Chairman: The question is that the Title do stand part of the Bill. Those in favour please say Aye. Those against, No.

AYES.

The Chairman: The Ayes have it.

AGREED: TITLE PASSED.

THE INSURANCE (AMENDMENT) (PRUDENT MANAGEMENT BILL, 2001

CLAUSE 1

The Clerk: The Insurance (Amendment) (Prudent Management Bill, 2001.

Clause 1 Short title.

The Chairman: The question is that Clause 1 do stand part of the Bill. Those in favour please say Aye. Those against, No.

AYES.

The Chairman: The Ayes have it.

AGREED: CLAUSE 1 PASSED.

CLAUSE 2

The Clerk:

Clause 2 Amendment of section 4—Applications for licences.

The Chairman: There is an amendment to Clause 2, the Honourable Third Official Member.

Hon. George A. McCarthy: In accordance with the provision of Standing Order 52(1) & (2), I give notice to move the following amendment to The Insurance (Amendment) (Prudent Management) Bill, 2001: That Clause 2(a) of the Bill be amended, by deleting the new subsection (7a) proposed for insertion in the principal Law and substituting the following—

“(7) (a) The Governor shall refuse to grant a licence if the Governor is of the opinion that the business to which the application relates would be carried on by persons who are not fit and proper to be directors or, as the case may be, managers or officers in their respective positions.”

I should mention that it is quite evident that the reason why this amendment is being made is to improve on the wording as set out in the present Bill.

The Chairman: The question is that the amendment to Clause 2 do stand part of the Bill. Does anyone wish to speak to it? If not, those in favour please say Aye. Those against, No.

AYES.

The Chairman: The Ayes have it.

AGREED: AMENDMENT TO CLAUSE 2 PASSED.

The Chairman: I now put the question that Clause 2 as amended do stand part of the Bill. Those in favour please say Aye. Those against, No.

AYES.

The Chairman: The Ayes have it.

AGREED: CLAUSE 2 AS AMENDED PASSED.

CLAUSE 3

The Clerk:

Clause 3 Amendment of section 11—Powers of the Governor in case of suspected insolvency, etc., of licensees.

The Chairman: The question is that Clause 3 do stand part of the Bill. No Debate? Those in favour please say Aye. Those against, No.

AYES.

The Chairman: The Ayes have it.

AGREED: CLAUSE 3 PASSED.

The Clerk: A Bill for a Law to Amend the Insurance Law (1999 Revision) to Provide for the Prudent Management of Insurance Companies and for Incidental and Connected Purposes.

The Chairman: The question is that the Title do stand part of the Bill. Those in favour please say Aye. Those against, No.

AYES.

The Chairman: The Ayes have it.

AGREED: TITLE PASSED.

THE MUTUAL FUNDS (AMENDMENT) (PRUDENT ADMINISTRATION) BILL, 2001

CLAUSES 1 – 4

The Clerk: The Mutual Funds (Amendment) (Prudent Administration) Bill, 2001

Clause 1 Short title.

Clause 2 Insertion of section 2A in the Mutual Funds Law (1999 Revision)—Determination of fitness and propriety.

Clause 3 Amendment of section 4—Mutual fund licenses.

Clause 4 Amendment of section 11—Mutual fund administrators' licences.

The Chairman: The question is that Clauses 1 through 4 do stand part of the Bill. Those in favour please say Aye. Those against, No.

AYES.

The Chairman: The Ayes have it.

AGREED: CLAUSES 1 – 4 PASSED.

CLAUSE 5

The Clerk:

Clause 5 Repeal and substitution of section 12—Restriction on issue etc., or transfer of shares in licensed mutual fund administrator.

The Chairman: There is an amendment to Clause 5.

Hon. George A. McCarthy: Yes.

In accordance with the provision of Standing Order 52(1) & (2), I give notice to move the following amendment to The Mutual Funds (Amendment) (Prudent Management) Bill, 2001: That Clause 5 of the Bill be amended by deleting the new subsection (2) of section 12 proposed for insertion in the principal Law and substituting the following—

“(2) The Governor may, in respect of a licensed mutual fund administrator whose shares are publicly traded on a stock exchange recognised by the Authority, waive the obligation to obtain approval under subsection (1), and any such waiver—

“(a) shall be subject to a condition that the licensed mutual fund administrator shall, as soon as reasonably practicable, notify the Authority of—

“(i) any change in control of the licensed mutual fund administrator;

“(ii) the acquisition by any person or group of persons of shares representing more than ten percent of the issued share capital or total voting rights of the licensed mutual fund administrator; or

“(iii) the acquisition by any person or group of persons of shares representing more than ten percent of the issued share capital or total voting rights of the parent company of the licensed mutual fund administrator;

“(b) shall be subject to a condition that the licensed mutual fund administrator shall, as soon as reasonably practicable, provide such information to the Authority, and within such period of time, as the Authority may require for the purpose of enabling an assessment as to whether persons acquiring control or ownership of the licensed mutual fund administrator in the circumstances set out in paragraph (a) are fit and proper persons to have such control or ownership; and

“(c) shall be subject to such terms and other conditions as the Governor may deem necessary.”

As I explained, Mr. Chairman, in the amendment to the Banks and Trust Companies Bill, the reason this amendment is being proposed is to avoid the onerous task that would occur if trading were to take place where shares are acquired in the aggregate by various persons in excess of 10 percent. This is to ensure that reporting occurs where a single person or a group of persons acting with a common interest acquire more than 10 percent or a greater shareholding in a mutual fund entity, thus putting them in a position to exercise significant control over the activity of that fund. This is why the wording is now being proposed, Mr. Chairman.

The Chairman: The question is that the amendment to Clause 5 do stand part of the Bill. Does anyone wish to speak to it? If not, I shall put the question. Those in favour please say Aye. Those against, No.

AYES.

The Chairman: The Ayes have it.

AGREED: AMENDMENT TO CLAUSE 5 PASSED.

The Chairman: I now put the question that Clause 5 as amended do stand part of the Bill. Those in favour please say Aye. Those against, No.

AYES.

The Chairman: The Ayes have it.

AGREED: CLAUSE 5 AS AMENDED PASSED.

CLAUSES 6–8

The Clerk:

Clause 6 Amendment of section 29—Powers of authority in respect of regulated mutual funds.

Clause 7 Amendment of section 30—Powers of Governor in respect of licensed mutual funds administrators.

Clause 8 Transitional provisions.

The Chairman: The question is that Clauses 6 through 8 do stand part of the Bill. No debate? I shall put the question. Those in favour please say Aye. Those against, No.

AYES.

The Chairman: The Ayes have it.

AGREED: CLAUSES 6 – 8 PASSED.

The Clerk: A Bill for a Law to Amend the Mutual Funds Law (1999 Revision) to Provide for the Prudent Administration of Mutual Funds and for Incidental and Connected Purposes.

The Chairman: The question is that the Title do stand part of the Bill. Those in favour please say Aye. Those against, No.

AYES.

The Chairman: The Ayes have it.

AGREED: TITLE PASSED.

THE COMPANIES (AMENDMENT) (CUSTODY OF BEARER SHARES) BILL, 2001

CLAUSES 1 – 7

The Clerk: The Companies (Amendment) (Custody of Bearer Shares) Bill, 2001.

Clause 1 Short title.

Clause 2 Amendment of section 2 of the Companies Law (2000 Revision)—Definitions and Interpretation.

Clause 3 Amendment of section 40—Register of members.

Clause 4 Amendment of section 184—Declaration by proposed company.

Clause 5 Amendment of section 187—Annual return.

Clause 6 Amendment of section 194—Board to hold meeting.

Clause 7 Insertion of new part 15—Custody, etc., of bearer shares.

The Chairman: The question is that Clauses 1 through 7 do stand part of the Bill. No debate? I shall put the question. Those in favour please say Aye. Those against, No.

AYES.

The Chairman: The Ayes have it.

AGREED: CLAUSES 1 – 7 PASSED.

The Clerk: A Bill for a Law to Amend the Companies Law (2000 Revision) to Provide that Bearer Shares shall be held by a Custodian and for Incidental and Connected Purposes.

The Chairman: The question is that the Title do stand part of the Bill. Those in favour please say Aye. Those against, No.

AYES.

The Chairman: The Ayes have it.

AGREED: TITLE PASSED.

THE COMPANIES MANAGEMENT (AMENDMENT) BILL, 2001

CLAUSES 1-12

The Clerk: The Companies Management (Amendment) Bill, 2001.

Clause 1 Short title.

Clause 2 Amendment of section 2 of the Companies Management Law (2000 Revision)—Definition.

Clause 3 Amendment of section 3—Definition of company management.

Clause 4 Amendment of section 4—Definition of group companies.

- Clause 5 Amendment of section 5—Application to be made to Governor.
 Clause 6 Insertion of new sections—Display of Licence, etc.
 Clause 7 Amendment of section 7—Shares not to be transferred without approval of the Authority.
 Clause 8 Repeal of section 8 and substitution—Net worth requirements.
 Clause 9 Amendment of section 11—Accounts and audit.
 Clause 10 Amendment of section 13—Number and approval of directors.
 Clause 11 Amendment of section 21—Regulations.
 Clause 12 Repeal and transitional provisions.

The Chairman: The question is that Clauses 1 through 12 do stand part of the Bill. No debate? I shall put the question. Those in favour please say Aye. Those against, No.

AYES.

The Chairman: The Ayes have it.

CLAUSES 1 – 12 PASSED.

The Clerk: A Bill for a Law to Amend the Companies Management Law (2000 Revision) to Provide for the Licensing and Registration of all Persons Involved in the Business of Company Management in the Islands, and for Incidental and Connected Purposes.

The Chairman: The question is that the Title do stand part of the Bill. Those in favour please say Aye. Those against No.

AYES.

The Chairman: The Ayes have it.

AGREED: TITLE PASSED.

THE PROCEEDS OF CRIMINAL CONDUCT (AMENDMENT) (FINANCIAL INTELLIGENCE UNITS) BILL, 2001

CLAUSES 1 AND 2

The Clerk: The Proceeds of Criminal Conduct (Amendment) (Financial Intelligence Units) Bill, 2001.

- Clause 1 Short title.
 Clause 2 Amendment of section 2 of the Proceeds of Criminal Conduct Law (2000 Revision)—Definitions and interpretation.

The Chairman: The question is that Clauses 1 and 2 do stand part of the Bill. Those in favour please say Aye. Those against, No.

AYES.

The Chairman: The Ayes have it.

AGREED CLAUSES 1 AND 2 PASSED.

CLAUSE 3

The Clerk:

- Clause 3 Amendment of section 22—Assisting another to retain the benefit of criminal conduct.

Hon. David F. Ballantyne: Mr. Chairman, I wonder if I may intervene.

The Chairman: The Honourable Second Official Member.

Hon. David F. Ballantyne: Thank you. There is a committee stage amendment circulated which is designed to replace the earlier committee stage amendment circulated, for which I tender apologies. The earlier amendment sought to substitute a phrase, within a reasonable time of the filing of the application, for an expression within certain days. And on a truer reflection, it was decided that would not be workable. Therefore, the suggestion now is that it be replaced with a more definite period of time or such longer period as the court may permit.

The necessity for this committee stage amendment is that for some time there has been a difficulty with the PCCL in practice where a restraint order is sought, either locally or in response to an overseas request. Under section 9 of the Law, any such restraint order is exercisable where the Court is satisfied that proceedings will be instituted against the person within seven days of the application for an order for restraint.

In the case to which I referred in my earlier submission, the case of McCorkle, the seven days proved to be too short a period of time for United States' authorities to institute proceedings. As a consequence, a restraint order had to fall away. Because of this, it has been in the minds of those in Government with these responsibilities at a suitable point to bring forward an amendment to this period of time. The proposed amendment would be to increase that period of seven days to 21 days, or such longer period as the Court may grant, in order to allow a more viable period for the bringing or institution of proceedings.

I regret bringing it at this stage, but the timing of this legislation has been such that we have had difficulty in hitting very tight targets. And the measures thought to be sufficiently important to justify bringing it now are that if we are offering increased cooperation to FATF countries, we want to make sure we can actually work and not hit the problem we hit in the case of McCorkle.

I am quite prepared to take Members through this if they wish, but it basically is a change of the time limit in section 9 and also in the schedule of the Law as can be seen by the parts (b) and (c) of the committee stage amendment.

Part (a) of the committee stage amendment is a re-numbering of Clauses 3 and 4 of the Bill to Clauses 4 and 5 respectively.

I am happy to go into any detail necessary beyond the explanation I have given. If I may just add, I believe that I made a reference to section 21(6) of the PCCL. That reference should have been to section 22(6). I take this opportunity to correct that for the record. Thank you.

The Chairman: My interpretation of this committee stage amendment, although the previous amendment was circulated, the first time the amendment is being moved is now in Committee. So, you may proceed with this amendment. I have waived the 2 days' notice of the amendment.

AMENDMENT TO CLAUSE 3
RENUMBERING OF CLAUSES 3 AND 4,
AS 4 AND 5

Hon. David F. Ballantyne: I am grateful for that.

I think the present wording makes much more sense and I can commend it to the House in the knowledge that it will work and give the Court the power to extend the period when appropriate. Accordingly, I move the committee stage amendment as indicated, that the Bill be amended as follows:

- (a) by re-numbering Clauses 3 and 4 as Clauses 4 and 5, respectively.

The Chairman: The question is that Clauses 3 and 4 be renumbered as Clauses 4 and 5. Those in favour, please say Aye. Those against, No.

AGREED: CLAUSES 3 AND 4 RENUMBERED
CLAUSES 4 AND 5.

NEW CLAUSE 3

Hon. David F. Ballantyne: (b) by inserting, after clause 2, the following:

“Amendment of section 9 - cases in which restraint orders and charging orders may be made”

3. Section 9 of the principal Law is amended—

(a) in subsection (2)(a), by repealing the words “within seven days of the application for an order under section 10(1) or 11(1)” and substituting the words “within twenty-one days of the granting of an order under section 10(1) or 11(1) or such longer period as the court may grant (in this section referred to as ‘the permitted period’)”;

(b) In subsection (4)(a), by repealing the words “within seven days of the application for an order under section 10(1) or 11(1)” and substituting the words “within the permitted period”; and

(c) In subsection (4)(b), by repealing the words “within seven days of the application for an order under section 10(1) or 11(1)” and substituting the words “within the permitted period.”

The Chairman: New Clause 3 has been duly moved. Any debate? If not, I shall put the question that Clause 3 do stand part of the Bill. Those in favour please say Aye. Those against, No.

AYES.

The Chairman: The Ayes have it.

AGREED: NEW CLAUSE 3 PASSED.

NEWLY RENUMBERED CLAUSES 4 AND 5

The Clerk:

Clause 4 Amendment to section 22—Assisting another to retain the benefit of criminal conduct.

Clause 5 Amendment of section 23—Acquisition, possession or use of property representing proceeds of criminal conduct.

The Chairman: The question is that the renumbered Clauses 4 and 5 do stand part of the Bill. Those in favour please say Aye. Those against, No.

AYES.

The Chairman: The Ayes have it.

AGREED: NEW CLAUSES 4 AND 5 PASSED.

Hon. David F. Ballantyne: Mr. Chairman, it may be my oversight, but I did not give mention of the New Clause 6.

NEW CLAUSE 6

The Clerk:

New Clause 6 Amendment of Schedule—Modification to the Law when applied to external confiscation orders and related proceedings.

Hon. David F. Ballantyne: The Bill is amended by inserting, after Clause 5, the following clause—

“Amendment of Schedule - modifications to the Law when applied to external confiscation orders and related proceed-

6. The Schedule of the principal Law is amended—

(a) in paragraph 5 as follows:

(i) in subparagraph (2), by repealing the words “within ings

seven days of the application for an order under paragraph 6(1) or 7(1)" and substituting the words "within twenty-one days of the granting of an order under paragraph 6(1) or 7(1) or such longer period as the court may grant (in this Schedule referred to as "the permitted period")";

(ii) in subparagraph (3)(a), by repealing the words "within seven days of the application for the order" and substituting the words "within the permitted period"; and

(iii) in subparagraph (3)(b), by repealing the words "within seven days of the application for the order" and substituting the words "within the permitted period"; and

(b) in paragraph 8 as follows:

(i) in subparagraph (b), by repealing the words "within seven days of the application" and substituting the words "within the permitted period"; and

(ii) in subparagraph (d)(iv), by repealing the words "within seven days of the application" and substituting the words "within the permitted period".

The Chairman: The question is that New Clause 6 do stand part of the Bill. Those in favour please say Aye. Those against, No.

AYES.

The Chairman: The Ayes have it.

AGREED: NEW CLAUSE 6 PASSED.

The Clerk: A Bill for a Law to Amend the Proceeds of Criminal Conduct Law (2000 Revision) to Enable the Sharing of Information with Financial Intelligence Units.

The Chairman: The question is that the Title do stand part of the Bill. Those in favour please say Aye. Those against, No.

AYES.

The Chairman: The Ayes have it.

AGREED: TITLE PASSED.

The Chairman: This concludes proceedings in Committee. The question is that the Bills be reported to the House. Those in favour please say Aye. Those against, No.

AYES.

The Chairman: The Ayes have it.

AGREED: THAT THE BILLS BE REPORTED TO THE HOUSE.

HOUSE RESUMED AT 3.42 PM

The Speaker: Please be seated. Reports.

REPORTS ON BILLS

THE BANKS AND TRUST COMPANIES (AMENDMENT) (PRUDENT MANAGEMENT) BILL, 2001

Hon. George A. McCarthy: I am to report that a Bill entitled, The Banks and Trust Companies (Amendment) (Prudent Management) Bill, 2001 was considered by a committee of the whole House and passed with amendment.

The Speaker: The Bill is accordingly set down for Third Reading.
Reports.

THE INSURANCE (AMENDMENT) (PRUDENT MANAGEMENT) BILL, 2001

Hon. George A. McCarthy: I am to report that a Bill entitled, The Insurance (Amendment) (Prudent Management) Bill, 2001 was considered by a committee of the whole House and passed with amendment.

The Speaker: The Bill is accordingly set down for Third Reading.
Reports.

THE MUTUAL FUNDS (AMENDMENT) (PRUDENT ADMINISTRATION) BILL, 2001

Hon. George A. McCarthy: I am to report that a Bill entitled, The Mutual Funds (Amendment) (Prudent Administration) Bill, 2001 was considered by a committee of the whole House and passed with amendment.

The Speaker: The Bill is accordingly set down for Third Reading.
Reports.

THE COMPANIES (AMENDMENT) (CUSTODY OF BEARER SHARES) BILL, 2001

Hon. George A. McCarthy: I am to report that a Bill entitled, The Companies (Amendment) (Custody of Bearer Shares) Bill, 2001 was considered by a committee of the whole House and passed.

The Speaker: The Bill is accordingly set down for Third Reading.
Reports.

THE COMPANIES MANAGEMENT (AMENDMENT) BILL, 2001

Hon. George A. McCarthy: I am to report that a Bill entitled, The Companies Management (Amendment) Bill, 2001 was considered by a committee of the whole House and passed.

The Speaker: The Bill is accordingly set down for Third Reading.
Reports.

THE PROCEEDS OF CRIMINAL CONDUCT (AMENDMENT) (FINANCIAL INTELLIGENCE UNITS) BILL, 2001

The Speaker: The Honourable Second Official Member.

Hon. David F. Ballantyne: I beg to report that a Bill entitled, The Proceeds of Criminal Conduct (Amendment) (Financial Intelligence Units) Bill, 2001 was considered by a committee of the whole House and passed with amendments.

The Speaker: The Bill is accordingly set down for Third Reading.
Third Readings.

THIRD READINGS

THE BANKS AND TRUST COMPANIES (AMENDMENT) (PRUDENT MANAGEMENT) BILL, 2001

The Clerk: The Banks and Trust Companies (Amendment) (Prudent Management) Bill, 2001.

Hon. George A. McCarthy: I beg to move that a Bill entitled, The Banks and Trust Companies (Amendment) (Prudent Management) Bill, 2001 be given a Third Reading and passed.

The Speaker: The question is that a Bill entitled, The Banks and Trust Companies (Amendment) (Prudent Management) Bill, 2001 be given a Third Reading and passed. Those in favour please say Aye. Those against, No.

AYES.

The Speaker: The Ayes have it.

AGREED: THE BANKS AND TRUST COMPANIES (AMENDMENT) (PRUDENT MANAGEMENT) BILL GIVEN A THIRD READING AND PASSED.

THE INSURANCE (AMENDMENT) (PRUDENT MANAGEMENT) BILL, 2001

The Clerk: The Insurance (Amendment) (Prudent Management) Bill, 2001.

Hon. George A. McCarthy: I beg to move that a Bill entitled, The Insurance (Amendment) (Prudent Management Bill), 2001 be given a Third Reading and passed.

The Speaker: The question is that a Bill entitled, The Insurance (Amendment) (Prudent Management) Bill, 2001 be given a Third Reading and passed. Those in favour please say Aye. Those against, No.

AYES.

The Speaker: The Ayes have it.

AGREED: THE INSURANCE (AMENDMENT) (PRUDENT MANAGEMENT) BILL, 2001 GIVEN A THIRD READING AND PASSED.

THE MUTUAL FUNDS (AMENDMENT) (PRUDENT ADMINISTRATION) BILL, 2001

The Clerk: The Mutual Funds (Amendment) (Prudent Administration) Bill, 2001.

Hon. George A. McCarthy: I beg to move that a Bill entitled, The Mutual Funds (Amendment) (Prudent Administration) Bill, 2001 be given a Third Reading and passed.

The Speaker: The question is that a Bill entitled, The Mutual Funds (Amendment) (Prudent Administration) Bill, 2001 be given a Third Reading and passed. Those in favour please say Aye. Those against, No.

AYES.

The Speaker: The Ayes have it.

AGREED: THE MUTUAL FUNDS (AMENDMENT) (PRUDENT ADMINISTRATION) BILL, 2001 GIVEN A THIRD READING AND PASSED.

THE COMPANIES (AMENDMENT) (CUSTODY OF BEARER SHARES) BILL, 2001

The Clerk: The Companies (Amendment) (Custody of Bearer Shares) Bill, 2001.

Hon. George A. McCarthy: I beg to move that a Bill entitled, The Companies (Amendment) (Custody of Bearer Shares) Bill, 2001 be given a Third Reading and passed.

The Speaker: The question is that a Bill entitled, The Companies (Amendment) (Custody of Bearer Shares) Bill, 2001 be given a Third Reading and passed. Those in favour please say Aye. Those against, No.

AYES.

The Speaker: The Ayes have it.

AGREED: THE COMPANIES (AMENDMENT) (CUSTODY OF BEARER SHARES) BILL, 2001 GIVEN A THIRD READING AND PASSED.

THE COMPANIES MANAGEMENT
(AMENDMENT) BILL, 2001

The Clerk: The Companies Management (Amendment) Bill, 2001.

Hon. George A. McCarthy: I beg to move that a Bill entitled, The Companies Management (Amendment) Bill, 2001 be given a Third Reading and passed.

The Speaker: The question is that a Bill entitled, The Companies Management (Amendment) Bill, 2001 be given a Third Reading and passed. Those in favour please say Aye. Those against, No.

AYES.

The Speaker: The Ayes have it.

AGREED: THE COMPANIES MANAGEMENT (AMENDMENT) BILL, 2001 GIVEN A THIRD READING AND PASSED.

THE PROCEEDS OF CRIMINAL CONDUCT (AMENDMENT) (FINANCIAL INTELLIGENCE UNITS) BILL, 2001

The Clerk: The Proceeds of Criminal Conduct (Amendment) (Financial Intelligence Units) Bill, 2001.

Hon. David F. Ballantyne: I beg to move that a Bill entitled, The Proceeds of Criminal Conduct (Amendment) (Financial Intelligence Units) Bill, 2001 be given a Third Reading and passed.

The Speaker: The question is that a Bill entitled, The Proceeds of Criminal Conduct (Amendment) (Financial Intelligence Units) Bill, 2001 be given a Third Reading and passed. Those in favour please say Aye. Those against, No.

AYES.

The Speaker: The Ayes have it.

AGREED: THE PROCEEDS OF CRIMINAL CONDUCT (AMENDMENT) (FINANCIAL INTELLIGENCE UNITS) BILL, 2001 GIVEN A THIRD READING AND PASSED.

The Speaker: I am in the hands of Honourable Members. We are expected to adjourn at 4 pm. Is this a convenient time? If so, I would accept a motion for the adjournment. The Honourable Minister for Health and Information Technology.

ADJOURNMENT

Hon. Linford A. Pierson: Mr. Speaker, I move the adjournment of this Honourable House until 10 am Wednesday, 25 April 2001. As communicated to you and other Members of this House, the purpose for this adjournment until Wednesday is so that Honourable Members of Executive Council can meet with the Chief Minister of BVI and other visiting dignitaries on very important matters.

The Speaker: The question is that this Honourable House do now adjourn until 10 am Wednesday, 25 April 2001. Those in favour, please say Aye. Those against, No.

AYES.

The Speaker: The Ayes have it.

AT 3.44 PM THE HOUSE STOOD ADJOURNED UNTIL 10 AM WEDNESDAY, 25 APRIL 2001.

OFFICIAL HANSARD REPORT
WEDNESDAY
25 APRIL 2001
10.14 AM
Twenty-third sitting

[Prayers read by the Honourable Minister for Planning, Communications and Works]

The Speaker: Proceedings are resumed. Item 2 on today's Order Paper. Reading by the Speaker of Messages and Announcements.

READING BY THE
HONOURABLE SPEAKER OF
MESSAGES AND ANNOUNCEMENTS

APOLOGIES

The Speaker: I have received apologies for absence from the Honourable Minister for Education, Human Resources and Culture who is off the Island on Government business, and from the Elected Member for East End who is off the Island tending to a family member who is sick in Miami.

Item 3, Government Business, Bills, Second Reading. Continuation of Debate on the Throne Speech, delivered by His Excellency the Governor on Friday 9 March 2001, together with the Budget Address delivered by the Honourable Third Official Member on Wednesday 21 March 2001.

The Second Elected Member for George Town continuing.

GOVERNMENT BUSINESS

BILLS

SECOND READING

THE APPROPRIATION BILL, 2001

DEBATE ON THE THRONE SPEECH, DELIVERED BY HIS EXCELLENCY THE GOVERNOR
ON FRIDAY 9 MARCH 2001

TOGETHER WITH

THE BUDGET ADDRESS DELIVERED BY
THE HONOURABLE THIRD OFFICIAL MEMBER
ON WEDNESDAY, 21 MARCH 2001

(Continuation of debate thereon)

Mr. Alden M. McLaughlin, Jr.: Thank you, Mr Speaker.

When we adjourned a week ago, I had just concluded that section of my contribution to this debate dealing with the upcoming constitutional review. I had completed my contribution to the debate on the Budget Address and had dealt extensively with the issue of immigration. I also dealt with youth and education.

Before I move on to continue my contribution on the Throne Speech, as a result of yet another press release last week by some members of the defeated Executive Council, I feel compelled to make some comment on that.

In what can only be described as an unprecedented assault on the new Government and its policies, we have been subjected to a series of press releases by some members of the former government. As distasteful and distracting as that might be, that is without a doubt part of the exercise of those former members' democratic right. While I might forcefully disagree with what they say, they are entitled to say it. However, what I found very, very disturbing recently was what appeared to me to be a deliberate attempt. In their effort to diminish the suitability and abilities of the current Leader of Government Business, to use his first name in what was a public statement that serves to demean the office which he holds.

While I can understand the envy that the former Leader of Government Business, Mr. Truman Boden, may have, I am surprised that in his efforts to lessen the credibility of the current Leader of Government Business he took steps that resulted in trivialising and debasing the office which he only recently relinquished. That is most unfortunate.

In a democracy, we must all accept when the people speak, even if the way they speak means that we are no longer a Member of this Honourable House. But to strike at the very institution he held for 16 years, demonstrates to me a lack of regard for the process of democracy and an absolute lack of regard for the office he once held. That, I totally deprecate.

I believe that everyone in this country has heard enough now of the past government's explanation of the state of the country's finances. However, there are some important questions that remain unanswered, and I would strongly suggest and invite those members of the former Executive Council who are so fond of making press statements, to answer some of these questions which this country wishes to hear answers to. Particularly, I believe, that the people of this country would like an explanation of the circumstances surrounding the write-off by the defeated Executive Council of the $5 million owed by Cayman

Airways to the Civil Aviation Authority and Customs. I hope that answer is forthcoming from the former Leader of Government Business.

While he is answering that, I believe the country is owed an explanation as to the neglect of the education system for the past eight years which resulted in what I can only describe as the condemnations contained in the Millett Report.

And further, I believe that the country is entitled to an explanation as to the reasons for the misleading and grossly understated tourism figures for the years 1994 to 2000, which have recently been disclosed by the new Minister of Tourism.

So, while I appreciate that former ministers may need something to occupy their time, and while writing press releases seems to be the thing that makes them most happy, I believe that their time can be best spent answering these kinds of questions than seeking to demean the office of the Leader of Government Business. With those few remarks, I will return to my debate on the Throne Speech.

This morning I wish to deal at some length with what is termed the supranational initiatives with which the Cayman Islands and most, if not all, other offshore financial centres have been grappling for the past year or so. Members will recall that between June and September of last year, the past government railroaded through this Honourable House some major amendments to legislation which has had the effect of radically altering the way business is conducted in this country.

Additionally, the past government made commitments to the Organization for Economic Cooperation and Development (OECD) to exchange tax information in relation to criminal tax matters by the end of 2003, and to exchange information relating to civil and administrative tax matters by the end of 2005.

I have always taken the position that this exercise was conducted with indecent haste and without due consultation with the industry. Those actions of Government last year seriously rocked the financial industry which had to go flat out to bring itself up to speed with the new amendments.

The way this was handled cost the financial industry dearly. Indeed, it seriously shook the financial industry's confidence in government. All in all, the handling of the matter last year was a most regrettable and unfortunate affair.

I have never suggested, and I am not now suggesting that Cayman did not have to make certain commitments, or indeed that the handling of these supranational initiatives is not a complex matter. I have always said that the crisis situation in which government found itself last year could have and should have been avoided. But the treatment of those initiatives last year was similar to the way the past government treated everything, including the many domestic issues with which we are now wrestling.

They treated them by denying their existence and deferring the handling of them. The result was their trademark crisis management.

We are past all of that now. What is done is done. But the issue of these supranational initiatives is going to be with us for some time. They are a complex and constantly evolving landscape and Cayman has a number of significant hurdles in relation to them yet to overcome. I believe that the financial industry is going to have to face major challenges for the foreseeable future.

The initiatives and the international pressure will not go away once we get off the Financial Action Task Force (FATF) blacklist. We shall continue to be under pressure, I believe, from one or another of the consortium of international agencies for a long time yet. The key for us is to strike the right balance by conforming to global standards of regulation and scrutiny; but at the same time striving not to lose our competitive edge by becoming too expensive or over regulated. I accept that this is a major challenge. But it is one that we must try to meet.

One of the major criticisms of the past government's handling of this area was the lack of any real dialogue with the private sector. I wish to assure all Members of this Honourable House and the wider community that as long as I remain a Member of the negotiating team, I shall strive to encourage the new government to involve the private sector as fully and as meaningfully as possible in this whole process. In this vein, I am happy to report that since the new Government took office, dialogue with the private sector has improved and is now bearing fruit. Much of the damage that was done to that relationship, the Government/private sector relationship, as a result of the past government's actions last June has been repaired.

As an example of this, I believe very shortly, either during the course of this week or very early next week, the Cayman Islands Monetary Authority (CIMA) in conjunction with various private sector professional associations, will issue guidance notes for the financial industry. These notes will complement the new money laundering regulations as well as offer guidance on what constitutes best practice in this jurisdiction.

The development and authorship of these guidance notes is a truly collaborative effort and is the best evidence yet of the renewed government/private sector relationship. The issuance of these guidance notes is another significant step to be taken by Cayman in our efforts to deal with the criticisms of our financial regulatory regime by the FATF. Members will recall that in February of last year, the FATF published a list of some 25 criteria which have been established as the benchmark to assess whether or not jurisdictions have satisfactory anti money laundering regimes.

The FATF then went on to conduct a review and as a result of the review of Cayman, they determined that our anti money-laundering regime did not satisfy all of the required standards and consequently Cayman was placed on the FATF's blacklist.

Since then, Cayman has worked diligently to address these concerns of the FATF. Shortly after our listing a delegation left Cayman for Washington to meet with representatives of the US Government. A plan of action was outlined at that meeting to address the deficiencies perceived by the FATF amendments have been made to the Monetary Authority Law, the Proceeds of Criminal Conduct Law (PCCL), to address the FATF concerns relating to customer identification and further the Monetary Authority was given the legal authority to obtain access to information relating to customer identification as well as the ability to disclose this information to overseas regulators. Other amendments to the PCCL also placed a legal obligation on financial service providers to provide suspicious activity reports to the financial reporting unit.

Members of this House and of the wider community will also be aware of the KPMG audit of the financial regulatory regime of Cayman, conducted last year and jointly commissioned by the Cayman Islands Government and the United Kingdom Government. In the process of that report, KPMG considered the significant changes Cayman had made to its anti money-laundering regime since the FATF review. In their report, published late last year, they noted that "they found positive evidence of the Cayman Islands' commitment to prevent money laundering."

Mr. Speaker, the elections followed swiftly after the publication of the KPMG Report and in December of last year, shortly after the elections, the new negotiating team, made up of the Leader of Government Business, the Honourable Kurt Tibbetts; the Minister of Tourism, the Honourable McKeeva Bush; the Minister of Health, the Honourable Linford Pierson and the Honourable Attorney General, Mr. David Ballantyne and I travelled to Miami for a face to face meeting with the FATF's Review Group of the Americas. We were accompanied by the managing director of the Monetary Authority and the head of the Financial Reporting Unit (FRU).

The purpose of that meeting was to report what steps Cayman had taken since it was blacklisted by the FATF in July 2000. Following that meeting, Cayman's position was considered by the FATF at its plenary in January 2001. Regrettably, they concluded that, although Cayman had made significant strides, it had not at that point done enough to be removed from the blacklist.

Since then, Cayman has been making an extra effort to address these outstanding concerns of the FATF. Indeed, in March 2001 in response to a request by the chairman of the FATF Review Group of the Americas, Cayman submitted an implementation plan setting out what steps it proposed to take and over what period it proposed to take them to deal with the outstanding criticism of the FATF.

Some of the actions which appear in this implementation plan and the timetable contained in it included the amendments to the various pieces of legislation which came before this Honourable House on Friday of last week, amendments to the Companies Law, the Banks and Trust Companies Law, the PCCL, the Mutual Funds Law, the Companies (Management) Law, and those amendments were passed by this House on Friday.

The effect of the various amendments that this House passed was to give the Monetary Authority greater regulatory oversight of the financial industry and to improve our ability to cooperate internationally as well as to reduce the scope for abuse of this jurisdiction for the purposes of money laundering.

Another important step which will be taken shortly (hopefully in the June meeting of this House) will be the further amendment of the Monetary Authority Law to give operational independence to the Monetary Authority. This lack of operational independence has been one of the criticisms of the FATF for some time. Giving the Monetary Authority full operational independence will have the result of placing full responsibility for operational decisions within the remit of the board of directors of the authority and remove the need for certain decisions, such as the approval of licenses, to be dealt with by Executive Council.

The other bit of information I wish to convey was alluded to by the Honourable Third Official Member during his contribution last Friday in relation to the raft of financial legislation being amended. The Cayman Islands will be visited by members of the FATF Review Group of the Americas next week to carry out an on site inspection of our regulatory regime and indeed of the financial industry in order to see first-hand how these various legislative changes that have been made are actually working in practice. The inspection is expected to be conducted on Monday and Tuesday of next week.

I have sought in this part of my contribution to give Honourable Members and the wider community an overview of the actions that have been taken by government, particularly over the course of this year (since the elections in November) to deal with the criticisms of the FATF and to give them some perspective on where we are in the whole process.

There are some issues remaining to be completely addressed, such as the operational independence of the Monetary Authority. I believe that with the efforts which have been made, and with the development of a firm implementation plan setting out when the outstanding issues are addressed, Cayman should pass muster and be delisted by the FATF at its plenary in June of this year. However, having said that, I should also say that in all of the efforts being made, and with all of our hopes, we must not lose sight of the fact that Cayman has a very bad image internationally. From John Grisham's novels, to television shows and to the recent performance by Mr.

John Mathewson in the US Senate Committee, for years and years Cayman has been portrayed as a haven for dirty money. As undeserved as this image may be, I am afraid it is one of the sad ironies of being considered the fifth largest financial centre in the world, a fact that I believe we have boasted far too much about.

We must not lose sight of the politics involved in the name and shame game played by the big industrial nations that spearhead these various initiatives. It is not enough for us to rail about what the big nations are doing to poor little us; we have to play the game the way it is played on the global stage. In the past, Cayman has simply not done enough, in my view, to get the very positive message we have to send into the international press.

The strides we have made, over the last nine months in particular, to enhance our anti money laundering regime are worthy of international commendation. In fact—and this is another irony—in a number of instances our anti money-laundering regime is substantially better than the regimes of some of the countries driving these international initiatives. Notable among these is the mother country herself!

I am reminded that I should not say the “mother country” I should say the United Kingdom! However, as I said, it is not enough to say how inequitable the whole process is, we have to take action to ensure that Cayman receives the positive PR it deserves as a result of the many efforts we have made to comply with global standards and to address the criticisms of the FATF.

Again, Mr. Speaker, on a positive note, I can report that in the very near future with the renewed government/private sector partnership I spoke about earlier, Cayman should be in a position to commence a cooperative and effective public relations campaign.

I will conclude this discussion of the FATF with what I regard as another critical point: Cayman has made, and continues to make, tremendous steps to be considered a good global citizen and to address these many criticisms of the FATF in particular, indeed in an effort to be delisted. However, in all of this we must continue to be cognizant that the ultimate objective of this exercise is really not getting off the list, although that is very important. The ultimate objective must be to preserve the continued viability and attractiveness of Cayman as a financial centre.

In all of these efforts to come off the list, we must be careful not to make it so difficult and expensive for business to be conducted in Cayman that the financial industry loses its attractiveness and competitiveness in the financial world. That would be even more disastrous than any blacklist could possibly be.

I will now move on to the OECD initiatives and the advanced commitment Cayman has given to the OECD in June of last year, to exchange information with the OECD in relation to criminal tax matters by the end of 2003 and to exchange information in regard to civil and administrative tax matters by the end of 2005. What has been left to be determined is the nature and scope of the information to be exchanged. Since this commitment has been given, there have been a number of important developments relating to the OECD Harmful Tax Competition Initiative.

I would like to apprise Members of this House and the wider community of the most significant of these developments—the process started at the Commonwealth Finance Ministers’ Meeting in September 2000. This led to a further very important meeting of the OECD and non-OECD jurisdictions in Barbados in January 2001. The meeting in Barbados involved representatives from more than 40 jurisdictions and multilateral organisations including many OECD states and many non-OECD states, and also including a number of jurisdictions that are not on the OECD tax haven list.

The meeting provided a framework for many of the jurisdictions threatened by the OECD in regard to their tax regimes or otherwise to meet and present their positions to OECD representatives and also to non-OECD jurisdictions. The participation of the Commonwealth, which is made up of OECD and non-OECD jurisdictions, which represents a much larger group of jurisdictions than does the OECD, was critical at this meeting. As a result of coordinated pressure from the Commonwealth and the targeted jurisdictions, at this meeting for the first time, the OECD opened the door to changing the process to the point of allowing non-OECD jurisdictions to have a role in establishing the principles for setting rules for international cooperation in regard to tax matters.

That meeting ended with the creation of what has come to be called “the Barbados Remit” which defines a new process that would allow for broad participation in setting standards among states who are willing to engage in the process.

It was also agreed in Barbados that a joint working group would be established comprised of representatives from six of the OECD states—France, Ireland, Japan, Australia, the UK, and Netherlands—and representatives of several non-OECD multilateral organisations including two representatives from the Commonwealth (Malta and Malaysia); two from Caricom (Barbados and Antigua); two from the South Pacific Forum (Vanuatu, and the Cook Islands); and one of the UK Overseas Territories. The UK Overseas Territories delegation chosen was that of the British Virgin Islands.

The Cayman Islands has agreed to assist the BVI delegation with its functions in the working group, and Cayman has been active in that regard since January.

The Barbados meeting also established that the non OECD section of the joint working group would be chaired by Prime Minister Owen Arthur of Barbados and that the OECD section would be chaired by Australian Ambassador, Anthony Hinton.

The most significant outcome in my view was the opening of the door to cooperation among the jurisdictions targeted by the OECD in its harmful tax competition initiative, together with the other small and developing jurisdictions which are threatened by the OECD in other regards.

Over the course of the last three months, there has been a series of meetings involving the entire joint working group and also the non-OECD section of the working group. These meetings among the representatives of the non-OECD groups, states and territories have provided opportunities to begin working together to develop common positions on technical matters leading to the possibility of shared strategies for dealing effectively in the international arena of taxation policy. This process is ongoing.

The most significant development was that non-OECD jurisdictions developed a common proposal which is consistent with the Barbados Remit, and then put to the OECD members of the joint working group. This proposal supported the creation of an inclusive global forum for the setting of international standards in regard to cross-boarder tax matters rather than the currently existing process of the OECD unilaterally developing standards that it then seeks to impose globally. I can report that the Cayman Islands has also been active in meetings involving the OECD and the jurisdictions that have committed themselves to participating in the process of shaping the technical aspects of cross-boarder cooperation in regard to tax matters in the OECD's global forum process.

Mr. Speaker, the principal task of the global forum at the present time is establishing norms for the sharing of information in regard to criminal tax matters by the end of 2003, and civil tax matters by the end of 2005 consistent with the advance commitment given to the OECD. In the global forum process, the non-OECD jurisdictions have been able to work together to present joint positions that are more persuasive than the position of any single jurisdiction could possibly be. Again, the Cayman Islands have been an active participant in this process.

One of the important points that has risen in discussions with the OECD in this context is whether or not any of the jurisdictions such as Cayman that made early commitments would be disadvantaged for having done so. The Cayman Islands have been very active in seeking to ensure that it maintains the advantages it gained by making a commitment in May of last year, and in ensuring that jurisdictions which have waited until this year to make the commitment would not gain any competitive advantage over the Cayman Islands as a result of their delay.

In response to these various concerns put forward by the Cayman Islands and others, the OECD has provided verbal assurance that there will be a level playing field in terms of the content and timing of these advanced commitments. It seems that the OECD has recognised that it is in their interest to ensure that cooperation is rewarded. Therefore, they have agreed verbally that any deal which the OECD accepts from any one jurisdiction making a commitment after June of last year will be available to jurisdictions which made earlier commitments, including Cayman. This applies to general terms such as the scope of what the OECD is seeking, as well as in the context of information exchange, as well as to the timetables for implementation.

Another important point worth mentioning is that the OECD has also indicated that the non-OECD states will not be expected to implement changes to their regimes until corresponding changes have been made by the OECD member states.

The next stage of this process will be the defining of the international standards that will be expected of all nations in respect of tax information exchange. That, in summary form, is the state of play at present.

I know I have gone on at considerable length, Mr. Speaker, but I have done so to give all Honourable Members of this House and the wider community a sense of what has been happening in relation to the OECD initiatives, and how the new Government and the negotiating team have been dealing with this issue.

As I said, this is an evolving process, and one that is going to continue for some time yet. Acknowledging the long term nature and impact of these supranational initiatives, a policy decision has been taken by the new government to enhance the function and resources of the finance and development secretariat. This secretariat is headed by Dr. Christopher Rose, and performs an information gathering and consultancy role to government, to Executive Council, and to the negotiating team. It has proven to be an invaluable asset to government in dealing with these supranational initiatives. So, the decision has been taken to extend and enhance its role and resources.

Mr. Speaker, Cayman must face the reality that we are going to have to deal with these supranational initiatives in one form or another for the foreseeable future. Indeed, as I speak, we await the report of the financial stability forum—another of the international agencies with which we have to deal.

Indications are that there are more initiatives to come, but I am optimistic. The way business is conducted in these islands has changed forever. We have to accept that and commit ourselves to changing with the times and global norms. Indeed, if I may wax a little philosophical, all of life is defined by change: The cardinal rule of nature has always been evolution or extinction. I believe that the continued existence and prosperity of our financial industry is dependent upon our ability to evolve.

I conclude my contribution to this, my first debate on the Budget Address and Throne Speech, in the same way I commenced it, by saying again that this country is at a watershed—without a doubt, the most important watershed in its existence. I have sought to deal at some length with some of the more important matters with which we must wrestle over the course of the next three and a half years.

Dealing with these matters calls for hard work, wisdom, unity of purpose, courage and political will. As I survey this chamber, with all our various differences, I firmly believe that all Members of this Honourable House possess these characteristics, and just as importantly, the will to make the hard decisions that are necessary.

I ask for God's guidance as we strive to move this country forward. I thank you and all Honourable Members of this House, Mr. Speaker, for your indulgence.

The Speaker: We shall suspend for 15 minutes.

PROCEEDINGS SUSPENDED AT 11.08 AM

(The morning break was extended as members attended a private meeting in the Committee Room)

PROCEEDINGS RESUMED AT 12.16 PM

The Speaker: Please be seated. Proceedings are resumed. If it is the agreement of the House, I think this would be an appropriate time for us to suspend proceedings for lunch until 2.30 PM.

PROCEEDINGS SUSPENDED AT 12.19 PM

PROCEEDINGS RESUMED AT 2.39 PM

The Speaker: Please be seated. Proceedings are resumed.

Debate continues on the Second Reading of the Appropriation Bill, 2001. The Floor is open to debate. Does any other Member wish to speak? (Pause) The Floor is open to debate. Does any other Member wish to speak? Last call, the Floor is open to debate. Does any other Member wish to speak? If no other Member wishes to speak does the Honourable Mover wish to exercise his right of reply?

The Honourable Third Official Member responsible for Finance and Economic Development.

Hon. George A. McCarthy: Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

Let me begin by thanking all Members who contributed to the 2001 Budget Address debate. I will also say thanks to those who have not spoken for their support of the views as outlined in the Budget Address and the concepts outlined in the Throne Speech delivered by His Excellency the Governor.

The views expressed by Members covered a wide range, all of which have been very interesting. It is not possible for me to respond to each issue, but I will comment on a few key ones, starting with the slowing of the economy.

The Budget Address pointed out that economic growth slowed to approximately 4.5 percent in 2000 and this trend is expected to continue into 2001. As we are all aware, the Cayman Islands economy is an open one and events in the external economy affect us greatly. Our two main industries, tourism and finance, are highly connected with growth in the United States. Indeed, events in the US over the past months have had a great impact on domestic economic growth. We can think of events that occurred quite recently in the stock market, but over the past week, we have seen that area begin to rebound.

However, developments in the US do not affect the Cayman Islands only; they affect the entire world. Many of the Asian countries are just as concerned about the potential impact of a slowing US economy on their countries. The question is what does slower growth on the outside world mean for us here in the Cayman Islands? Also, what steps are we taking to cushion ourselves from developments that are outside of our control?

The slowdown in the US economy means that domestic revenue will not be increasing as fast as in the past. The double digit figures experienced during the recent boom years will now shift to single digit ones. Giving the changing situation, monitoring will be come very important in the future. No one can predict with certainty the pace of the US slowdown. But we can monitor changes very closely and assess the implications for our domestic economy. If we know what is on the horizon, we can adjust quickly to any change. Monitoring will take place at many levels—the international economy, the overall macro-economy, and government finances.

A number of speakers have drawn attention to the measures contained in the 2001 budget. Of prime concern was the revenue enhancement package brought forward. At present, the government is examining all revenue related issues within the context of an appropriate revenue policy for the medium term. It is quite encouraging to note that many of the fundamental issues now being studied have been raised in this debate. This suggests that there is some synergy in thought and we are all focused on attaining the same given objectives.

For example, reference was made to two key issues: first, the call for a higher degree of equity in revenue structure; and secondly, the need to broaden the tax base. The government is cognizant of the need to protect persons at lower income levels as well as vulnerable groups in the society. Any attempt to broaden the tax base in the future will take into account the specific points raised in this debate. These include a shift away from a consumption base tax system and an incorporation of ability to pay criterion. This is an area that is under review and no final position has been taken. But when we are thinking in terms of broadening the revenue base, all aspects will have to be examined very carefully.

It was also mentioned during the Budget Address and in the debate and in other forum, there is a group of persons under the chair of Mr. Robert (Bobby) Bodden, to look at the new revenue measures with a view (and this was emphasised by the Leader of Government Business) not to continue to tax existing measures where they are creating strains, especially in those areas where persons are most vulnerable within our society, but to see how the existing base can be broadened to achieve greater equity based on ability to pay.

Regarding expenditure, Mr. Speaker, Honourable Members will have observed the tremendous efforts made by the Government in the 2001 budget to contain expenditure growth. Making the cuts required to balance the budget was not an easy task, but was necessary given the present economic situation. I would like to emphasise that this trend towards ensuring aggregate fiscal discipline will continue into the future. The public sector intends to make every effort to produce services for the community at the lowest possible cost. This will flow as a result of the financial reform initiatives currently underway.

Mr. Speaker, as you and Honourable Members of this House would have heard, the objective is to shift away from the present cash base budgeting to an accrual base budgeting that will allow costs to be reflected in a more accurate manner. Also, revenue flows as well. In addition, it will allow for fine tuning in regard to what it is costing government to provide given services that are now being provided. All of these should enhance the efficiency by which government will be doing business. This is an area that is currently under review and will involve the participation of all controlling officers in the government and the commitment of all Honourable Members of the Legislative Assembly. This will be a time when every effort will have to be made to get it right, as quickly as possible.

Up until yesterday, consideration was given as to when it is likely to see accrual accounting in place within the Cayman Islands Government. The year 2003 was looked at. Each year we hope to be making significant progress in this direction. We hope that the new Finance and Audit Bill will be brought to the House during this year. We also hope that instead of just bringing the budget and presenting it, that the fiscal policy of government can be articulated beforehand so that Honourable Members of this Legislative Assembly will have a very good understanding of the context in which a budget will be developed.

The issue of debt is as great a concern to government, as much as it is to everyone. Debt restructuring and debt management issues will be given special attention in the medium term. Every effort will be made to explore concessionary financing and to keep the debt servicing ratio within the stipulated 10 percent ceiling.

What I omitted to provide in the Budget Address was the likely impact upon the revenue that the new borrowings plus the existing public debt would have on revenues going into future years. I am not in a position to provide those details today, but by the time the Loans Bill is brought to this House that information should be refined sufficiently in order to give Honourable Members an indication of how much general revenue is likely to be used up, taking into account the new borrowings for 2001 added on to existing borrowings and taking that into the future.

Of course, that will also be impacted by the medium term financial strategy and the public sector investment programme which will be developed and we trust will be tabled in this House during this meeting—at least the medium term financial strategy.

It was mentioned that as of 31 December 2000, the public debt (Central Government debt) excluding self-financing (monies raised by Government on behalf of the statutory authorities, Government recoups the payments from the statutory authorities), the un-audited balance as at 31 December 2000 was $92.4 million. If, for example, approximately $56 million was drawn down during the course of the year, this would bring this balance; the impact this would have on the public debt position at the end of the year could be in the region of $133 million.

As Honourable Members can appreciate, this is not straight addition. This takes into account the repayments that would be made on existing debt during the course of the year. When that is taken into account, it is expected that the public debt position as at 31 December 2001 could be in the region of $132 million. This figure has to be regarded with a certain degree of reservation because when the loan is raised during the course of the year, the question as to whether there will be a moratorium on the loan, or interest and principal repayment will commence during the course of the year, these are factors that will have to be taken into account.

Why it is not possible at this point in time to be specific in terms of (and it is not a question of withholding or hiding information) is because we need to look very carefully at the projected revenue going into the future for at least the next three to four years. That will be impacted upon by revenue measures that will be introduced during the course of 2001. Also, there is a committee chaired by Mr. Robert Bodden and it is quite likely that the recommendations the committee will make will translate into decisions being taken.

If such becomes the case, it will have a favourable impact on the Government's revenue position. When the revenue for the years 2001 to 2005 and into the future is taken into account it needs to be lined up against the debt repayment. Once we know that the revenue in the future will be increasing by, say, 3, 4, or 5 percent, this will have an impact on what percentage of that revenue will be used up for debt servicing. That will be taken as a percentage of general revenue.

So, it is difficult at this time to say that for the year 2001 it will be 10 percent or 9.5 percent. However, as we continue to explore and look closely at the best terms loans can be secured, and what the repayment period will be, then we will have a better sense of whether or not we will remain within that 10 percent ceiling. All indications are that we are going to be doing so.

If we are given a moratorium on the loan and planned repayments through the course of the year, it is expected that that loan balance of $92.4 million as at 31 December 2000 will be reduced to $79.8 million as at 31 December 2001. If we continue to exclude the new borrowings proposed for 2001, what would have been the $92.4 million balance as at 31 December 2000, reduced to $79.8 million as at 31 December 2001 will be further reduced, given existing repayment schedules to $66.8 million as at 31 December, 2002.

This would suggest that we need to look very carefully at the new borrowings. The decision will have to be made based on whether part of the principal borrowed during 2001 will be repaid during the course of this year or whether there will be a moratorium on this. However, given the position in terms of $132.5 million as at 31 December 2001 and, taking into account existing borrowings, if there were no further borrowings during 2002, this would be reduced to $113.9 million. So, we can see a decline taking place.

Previously, profiles were provided. One was provided as recently as the year 2000, taking into account borrowings for that year, showing what the public debt position would be as at the year 2010. This will be useful for Honourable Members to have to see what changes will be taking place within the public debt position and self-financing position going into future years. Ideally, it would be good if the capital development programmes could be funded from general revenue in addition to having to meet recurrent and statutory expenditure costs. This is a position in terms of having a revenue base in place that any government should be striving for. This would be this Government's commitment.

The Government continues to look into the future implementing the various fiscal and corrective measures that are deemed necessary. In order to achieve efficient public management of government finances, not only will attempts be made to curtail recurrent expenditure, looking especially at the amount of money being used up for personal emoluments, but also provisions will have to be made for a given percentage to be put into general reserves. It has been the country's desire for some time for general reserves to equal at least 25 percent of recurrent and statutory expenditure.

The fiscal policy of the Government will be articulated fully in the medium term financial strategy that will be brought to this House. It will be specific in terms of how much money will be used for the funding of recurrent and statutory expenditure, what percentage will be used for the funding of capital development, and what percentage will be used to achieve transfers into general reserves. This will have to be broken down so it goes beyond mere discretion and it becomes a part of the government's fiscal management tools that will be employed.

Mr. Speaker, one Honourable Member raised the point about alleged collusion by retail banks in the Cayman Islands in the matter of interest rate setting. Let me state that the Government is always willing and ready to respond to matters of concern to the general public. It is recognised that the exchange rate regime and the international nature of banking, influences interest rates in the Cayman Islands. At the same time, it is true that where a few firms dominate the market, the potential exists for collusion in price setting.

Overall, the Government has a duty to the people of the Cayman Islands to ensure that all its concerns are thoroughly investigated. It is very much aware of the hardship that many families face as a result of high interest rates. As a result, it has been suggested that the Monetary Authority will be meeting with clearing banks on a regular basis to discuss the issues relating to interest rate setting.

We are mindful that the banks themselves will have to take into account how well they are able to compete with other offshore centres for the placement of funds, while also taking into account what occurs within the United States. The Federal Fund rate in the United States now stands at 4.5 percent. We have seen a reduction of 50 bases points, or 0.5 percent point as recently as the 25th of this month. This has put the prime rate within the Cayman Islands and the US in the region of 7.5 percent. This, we trust, will bring some relief to persons presently having to make mortgage payments. This is an area that has not yet been refined in terms of the methodology that will be used by the Government in its discussions with the Monetary Authority for that body to hold regular meetings with our Clearing banks, which is necessary.

Government gives a commitment to carefully consider this matter because where there is an increase of 1 percent in interest rates, this can translate into significant sums in terms of mortgage repayments. As a result, the level of hardship increases.

Several comments have been made on the forecasts in the Budget Address, both in regard to the world economy and in terms of domestic revenue. I would like to spend some time on this issue, as it will emerge continuously over the next few years.

First of all, we must understand the very nature of forecasting. The future as we know it is always uncertain, and it is dependent upon scores of variables. When forecasts are made, they are based on specific assumptions about the likely course of those variables. If the variables are volatile, such as the stock market, then it becomes extremely difficult to tell the future with any degree of certainty. We must always keep this in mind when considering forecasts. As all economists know, assumption is what it is all about.

Secondly, it is necessary to bear in mind that the forecasts made today at noon, can change drastically by 4 pm, depending upon events that occur during that four- hour period. Having made these preliminary remarks, I now will address the specific issue of the world economic forecast.

It has been suggested that the world economic forecast for 2001 mentioned in the Budget Address is unreasonable. Let me just clarify that the figure of 4.2 percent was taken from the International Monetary Fund's (IMF) World Economic Outlook, the latest edition available at the time of the budget. This IMF publication is the premier source of predictions for global growth. The figure can be easily verified by reference to this source.

In addition, the Government was careful to point out the assumptions on which this forecast was made. This was done particularly to highlight the risk involved in using such a forecast. As a general point, I should mention that whenever we look at forecasts it is always important to consider the underlying assumptions; otherwise, we risk arriving at the wrong conclusion.

The IMF is due to release an updated set of world forecasts. I am sure that the forecast for global growth will be much lower than the 4.2 percent mentioned earlier. This is because conditions, particularly in the US, have changed quite a lot in recent months. In fact, Consensus Forecasts, a publication which reflects the forecasts of various agencies such as The Economist, Merrill Lynch, and other large private sector firms, now indicate a global growth of 2.5 percent.

Moving on to the issue of the domestic forecast, I should hasten to add that this was not based on the world economic forecast of 4.2 percent as suggested by one Honourable Member. The Cayman economy is directly influenced by the economy of the United States, hence the relevant forecast here is the US one.

I would like to clarify that our domestic forecast was made using more up-to-date information on the US economy. Individual country forecasts are usually done on a more frequent basis than world forecasts. Consensus forecasts for the US economic growth in 2001 as at mid-February was 2 percent.

Since the beginning of this year, the Chairman of the Federal Reserve, Mr. Allan Greenspan, has been at pains to point out the uncertainties connected with forecasting US economic growth. More recently, he spoke on the challenge of measuring and modelling a dynamic economy at the Washington Economic Policy Conference of the National Association for Business Economics.

In summarising this discussion on forecasting, I would simply like to make two general points: 1) The revenue forecasts will be influenced by the economic forecasts. Given the set of information available at this time, government is comfortable with both the economic and revenue forecasts presented in the budget. 2) Over the year the focus of the Government will be on monitoring the changing external and domestic environments and will act as changes take place in the best interests of the people of the Cayman Islands.

The points regarding the need for proper development planning is a crucial one. Government is not daunted by the enormity of this very significant task. Rather, it has accepted the challenge fully and intends to pursue a structured approach in this area using Vision 2008 document as a guide to the future. Since last November, the public service has been engaged in planning activities geared toward the development of medium term planning and budgeting. The 2001 budget benefited from these early efforts.

The Government intends to consolidate work in this area over the next year. All areas of fiscal policy will be investigated including those mentioned in this debate.

Planning for the proper management of government finances is very important. However, it is recognised that a wider planning effort needs to be undertaken. Mention was made of the need for growth management and for a comprehensive economic plan. I am pleased to say that efforts are currently being made in this direction.

Vision 2008 highlighted the need for a growth management plan. This is a high priority area for the government and preliminary work has already started. However, physical and economic planning go hand in hand, particularly in a country such as the Cayman Islands. Accordingly, the intention is to move towards a more general development planning exercise. This will blend efforts to manage both economic and physical growth thereby ensuring the long-term sustainability of the Cayman Islands.

The Honourable Second Elected Member for George Town spoke with regard to the international initiatives. I should mention, Mr. Speaker, and this will be going over a point which he has covered, that there is a team coming in from the FATF to conduct an on site inspection within the Cayman Islands at the end of this month. Honourable Members of this House will have seen the various pieces of legislation put through last week. They would have seen what was also put through during the course of last year. They would have been told of the Government's commitment to strengthen the Monetary Authority in that it is intended that the staffing level will be taken up to 129 persons in posts by the end of December 2003. They would have been apprised of the corresponding increase within the budget of the Monetary Authority and these culminate in the price we are paying for our success.

Every effort will be made by the government and the country to ensure that the FATF on site inspection team is properly apprised as to our regulatory infrastructure, what we have in place, and going through point by point on the 25 criteria against which the Cayman Islands were assessed.

The Honourable Second Elected Member for George Town also mentioned that where we now stand in terms of regulatory strength is beyond quite a number of FATF jurisdictions themselves. He mentioned one country, but I know we are beyond quite a number of the FATF countries.

It is not a question of sacrificing our financial industry. This is definitely not the case. As the Honourable Member pointed out, the primary objective is to get off the FATF blacklist but it is more important for Cayman to remain an attractive and viable jurisdiction where international commerce and business can take place. This is the Government's commitment and that of the Country as a whole.

I have to applaud the negotiating team for its commitment in terms of addressing all these initiatives. I will also have to commend the Government for its support of the negotiating team and have to thank the past negotiating team because all the initiatives are connected.

It is not a question that these will all be addressed overnight. However, there is always a price to pay for success. We have a well-developed financial industry within the Cayman Islands. It is not what quite a lot of people would like to make it out, in terms of those perpetuating deliberate prejudice. Within the international community it is well known that we are a well-developed and well-managed financial centre, but it serves the purpose of many, although they know that, to say otherwise.

What the outcome of these initiatives will do has been demonstrated with the OECD. Coming off the FATF list and having in place all of the features to satisfy the 25 criteria, will ensure no country or organisation can ever again point fingers at the Cayman Islands to say we are less than they are. All anyone needs to do is drive from one end of Little Cayman to the other; one end of Cayman Brac to the other; one end of Grand Cayman to the other and it will be seen that we are a well-developed country. Everything fits together to create the synergy.

We know that these international initiatives are not going to stop but we have a voice within the international community. By joining forces with the other Caribbean Overseas Territories and also the non-member group of OECD countries, this should put us in a position to have a stronger voice. Our leadership capacity has already been demonstrated. We will continue to build on this trend and the strengths that have been a part of our heritage going into the future. Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: The House, having recorded its grateful thanks to His Excellency the Governor for delivery of the Throne Speech on Friday 9 March 2001, the question is that the Appropriation Bill, 2001, be given a second reading. Those in favour please say Aye. Those against, No.

AYES.

The Speaker: The Ayes have it. The Bill has accordingly been given a Second Reading.

AGREED: THE APPROPRIATION BILL 2001 GIVEN A SECOND READING.

The Speaker: In accordance with the provisions of Standing Order 63(3), the Bill, together with the Draft Estimates, stand referred to the Standing Finance Committee.

There is no further business on the Order Paper for today. I would entertain a motion for the adjournment of this Honourable House.

ADJOURNMENT

The Speaker: Hon. Linford A. Pierson, Minister responsible for Health and Information Technology.

Hon. Linford A. Pierson: Mr. Speaker, I move the adjournment of the House until the conclusion of the deliberations of the Standing Finance Committee and that the Committee commence its deliberations on Wednesday 2 May 2001 at 9.00 AM to enable technical officers to prepare for Finance Committee, in addition to allowing time for Ministers to attend a meeting of the Group of Americas on the FATF matters and also for a meeting in Miami with representatives of Her Majesty's Government.

The Speaker: The question is that this Honourable House does now adjourn until deliberations are completed and the Standing Finance Committee is ready to report to the House. Those in favour, please say Aye. Those against, No.

AYE.

The Speaker: The Ayes have it.

AT 3.22 PM THE HOUSE STOOD ADJOURNED UNTIL THE CONCLUSION OF THE DELIBERATIONS OF THE STANDING FINANCE COMMITTEE.

OFFICIAL HANSARD REPORT
WEDNESDAY
23 MAY 2001
11.01 AM
Twenty-fourth Sitting

[Prayers read by the Second Elected Member for West Bay]

The Speaker: Please be seated. Administration of Oaths, or Affirmations. The Oath of Allegiance to be taken by Mr. A Joel Walton, JP, to be the Temporary Acting Third Official Member responsible for the Portfolio of Finance and Economic Development.

ADMINISTRATION OF OATHS OR AFFIRMATIONS

OATH OF ALLEGIANCE
Mr. A. Joel Walton

Mr. Joel Walton: I, Joel Walton, do swear that I will be faithful and bear true allegiance to Her Majesty Queen Elizabeth II, her heirs and successors, according to law, so help me God.

The Speaker: On behalf of the House, I welcome you for the time of your service. Please take your seat as the Acting Temporary Third Official Member.

Oath of Allegiance by Mr Samuel Bulgin, to be the Temporary Second Official Member responsible for the Portfolio of Legal Administration.

OATH OF ALLEGIANCE
Mr. Samuel Bulgin

Mr. Samuel Bulgin: I, Samuel Bulgin, do swear that I will be faithful and bear true allegiance to Her Majesty Queen Elizabeth II, her heirs and successors, according to law, so help me God.

The Speaker: On behalf of the House, I welcome you for the time of your service. Please take your seat as the Acting Temporary Second Official Member.

Item No. 3 on today's Order Paper. Reading by the Speaker of Messages and Announcements.

READING BY THE
HONOURABLE SPEAKER OF
MESSAGES AND ANNOUNCEMENTS

Obituary: Edward Jerome S. Myrie

The Speaker: On behalf of all Members and Officers of this House, I would ask the House to stand in a minute of silence for the repose of the soul of Jerome Myrie who died under tragic circumstances in Tampa, Florida on Wednesday 16 May.

We pray for the mother of Jerome, Mrs. Georgette Myrie, the Clerk of the Legislative Assembly, for his father Mr. Edward Myrie and for all family members. May God fill their hearts with grace and comfort at this sad time.

[The House stood for one minute of silence in memory of Mr. Edward Jerome S. Myrie]

APOLOGIES

The Speaker: I have received apologies for absence from the Honourable Second Official Member, the Honourable Third Official Member and from the Honourable Minister for Tourism, Environment and Transport (TE&T) who are off the Island on official business.

Presentation of Papers and Reports. Report of the Standing Finance Committee (Meetings held 6, 7, 8 and 11 December 2000), to be laid on the Table by the Acting Chairman, the Honourable Third Official Member responsible for the Portfolio of Finance and Economic Development.

PRESENTATION OF PAPERS AND REPORTS

REPORT OF THE STANDING FINANCE COMMITTEE
(MEETINGS HELD 6, 7, 8
AND 11 DECEMBER 2000)

Hon. A. Joel Walton: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. In accordance with the relevant Standing Order, I beg to lay on the Table of this House the Report of the Standing Finance Committee Supplementary Appropriation paper for meetings held 6, 7, 8 and 11 December 2000.

The Speaker: So ordered.
Do you wish to speak to it?

Hon. A. Joel Walton: Yes, Mr. Speaker. Thank you. There were two amendments to the agenda as initially presented to the committee and I will mention those two items: Item 6, Police - the sum requested was reduced by $138,000; therefore, the approved sum for that head (Police) was $268,380.

Item 2 relates to Head 1010, Personnel. There were a few reductions. First, from $150,000 reduced to $89,541 for freight personal; the second was for other passages, reduced from $150,000 to $85,054; the third, recruitment reduced from $200,000 to $137,638. The approved sum for Personnel was therefore, $331,003.

The total appropriation approved at that meeting was $11,561,628.

The other items were considered under "other matters" section and related to virement of funds/creation and re-grading of posts. These both received ratification.

There were a total of four motions also considered and approved by the committee.

Mr. Speaker, the committee agrees that the proceedings of the Standing Finance Committee of meetings held 6, 7, 8 and 11 December 2000 be reported to this House, and this Report do lie on the Table.

Thank you.

The Speaker: Report of the Standing Finance Committee (Meeting held 18 May 2001). The Honourable Temporary Third Official Member.

REPORT OF THE STANDING FINANCE COMMITTEE (MEETING HELD 18 MAY 2001)

Hon. A. Joel Walton: I beg to lay on the Table the Report of the Standing Finance Committee (Meeting held 18 May 2001).

The Speaker: So ordered.

Hon. A. Joel Walton: The Standing Finance Committee met on 18 May 2001 to consider one resolution and that was in reference to the overdraft limit on the Government's current account, which was resolved to be put back to $15 million until 30 September 2001.

I beg that this Report be accepted by this House.

The Speaker: So ordered.

Government Business, Bills, Report on Bills.

The Appropriation Bill, 2001. The Honourable Temporary Third Official Member.

GOVERNMENT BUSINESS

BILLS

REPORT ON BILL

THE APPROPRIATION BILL 2001

Hon. A. Joel Walton: I beg to lay on the Table the Report of the Standing Finance Committee on the Appropriation Bill 2001, together with the Draft Estimates of Revenue and Expenditure of the Government of the Cayman Islands for the year 2001, in accordance with the relevant Standing Order.

The Speaker: So ordered. Do you wish to speak to it?

Hon. A. Joel Walton: There are just two or three separate items I would like to mention. The first set has to do with the changes to the Bill as laid initially by the Honourable Financial Secretary.

There was a change to the Ministry of Tourism, Environment and Transport, item 22-4505. The amount for that head was increased by $50,000, taking it from $4,855,591 to $4,905,591 and that was compensated for by a reduction under item 24, Tourism, 4700, where the sum for that head was reduced by $50,000, taking it from the presented sum of $19,810,795 to $19,760,795.

The total appropriation that was approved by the Committee amounted to $310,249,886.

In addition, five motions were put and agreed by the Committee and they are recorded in the report which I now beg be accepted by this House.

The Speaker: Would you please state that "I have to report that a Bill entitled The Appropriation Bill 2001 has been considered by a committee of the whole House and passed with amendments"?

Hon. A. Joel Walton: Sorry, Mr. Speaker.

I beg to report that a Bill entitled, The Appropriation Bill 2001 has been considered by a committee of the whole House and passed with amendments.

The Speaker: The Bill has accordingly been set down for a Third Reading.

Bills, Third Reading.

THIRD READING

THE APPROPRIATION BILL 2001

The Deputy Clerk: The Appropriation Bill 2001.

The Speaker: The Honourable Temporary Third Official Member.

Hon. A. Joel Walton: I beg to move that the Appropriation Bill 2001 be given a Third Reading and passed.

The Speaker: The question is that the Appropriation Bill 2001 be given a Third Reading and passed. Those in favour please say Aye. Those against, No.

AYES and one audible NO.

The Speaker: The Ayes have it.

AGREED: THE APPROPRIATION BILL 2001 GIVEN A THIRD READING AND PASSED.

The Speaker: Bills, Second Reading.

SECOND READING

THE LOAN BILL 2001

The Deputy Clerk: The Loan Bill 2001.

The Speaker: The Honourable Temporary Third Official Member.

Hon. A. Joel Walton: I beg to move the Second Reading of The Loan Bill 2001.

The Speaker: Do you wish to speak to it?

Hon. A. Joel Walton: Yes, I have a couple of brief comments on the Bill.

The Bill sets out a request to borrow a sum not exceeding $55,473,110 during 2001. This borrowing is required for three broad categories of expenditure. These categories include:

|                                 |                     |
|---------------------------------|---------------------|
| Capital development expenditure | $24,555,862        |
| Capital acquisition expenditure | 4,700,000           |
| Recurrent expenditure           | 26,217,248          |
| TOTAL                    | $55,473,110 |

The Speaker: The question is that a Bill entitled, A Bill for a Law to authorise the borrowing of up to $55,473,110 for the financing of specified capital projects, capital acquisition and general revenue fund expenditure, be given a Second Reading. The Bill is open for debate.

The Second Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman.

Mr. Lyndon L. Martin: Mr. Speaker, my views and contribution on the substantial borrowing has already been articulated in this House, and I will not bore Members or the public by going over that again. However, there are a few issues I want to mention with the hopes that the [Temporary] Third Official Member will respond at the close of the debate.

It is imperative when a Bill of this nature is brought to this Honourable House for Members to vote on, that all information is provided. I have to say that I was stunned earlier this month when I learned that the negotiation for the loan to cover the $55 million had not yet commenced. I hope by this time those negotiations are well underway. I am also hoping that the [Temporary] Third Official Member will be able to provide this House with some insight on the progress of the negotiations and the expected cost resulting to the country, not only to this generation, but to future generations, of the repaying of such a substantial amount of money.

I would also like to point out that when future borrowing comes before this House, that it be presented with the total picture including interest rates and the result it will have on the total government debt and debt service ratio, which this country will be faced with.

All Members appreciate and respect the need for financial prudence and the circumstances the country is in. We respect and appreciate the need to continue development and the level of expenditure, but we have different views as to how that should be funded. I spent a substantial portion of my debate on the budget outlining measures that I felt would have been better alternatives than to borrow approximately $24 million to fund recurrent expenditure and the capital. It is important for the general public and all Members to appreciate that borrowing is only prudent when the return is not only a financial return but a social and economic return exceeding the net cost of borrowing.

I think a medium term financial strategy and public sector investment plan will be coming shortly. I look forward to contributing to such a document. The public sector investment programme and committee would evaluate the capital projects to ensure the return exceeds the cost of borrowing. I am interested in such findings for this existing borrowing package that we are asked to vote for today.

To simply vote on the passage of this Bill would allow the country to borrow $56 million and place a burden on future generations. We need to know that this borrowing will be negotiated in fair terms and it will be applied to works that will yield the type of return justifying this investment. We need to know that future generations paying this bill will also be benefiting from the resulting expenditure.

Borrowing is all about distributing the cost of an investment over a period of time to match it with the benefits. A school which will benefit future generations—if we show the return being distributed over future generations, it is o.k. to borrow and distribute the matching cost with the benefits. We can sell that to our kids, but to simply sit here and ask this House to vote on $56 million, a portion of which is on recurrent, we have not solved any problems. We are distributing the paying of today's bills over future generations without doing anything to close the very gap that created the situation.

We must accept that the $19.88 million revenue enhancement measure does not address the total gap between our recurrent revenue and expenditure. It is simply put there to curtail one particular reduction. We must take long-term measures rather than Band-Aid approaches.

I am not in a position to support this Loans Bill and would like to summarise my reasons: First, I am presented with inadequate information to appropriately evaluate the Loan Bill; Secondly, I am of the view that the portion of the Bill covering recurrent expenditure is simply a Band-Aid approach and does not cure our longer term problems; therefore, I cannot support such measures. I have personally spoken out against past governments for such an approach. Thirdly, I believe that the portion of the Loan Bill covering long-term capital projects may be viable, but I do not find the information before me to make that assessment. Thus, in carrying out my responsibilities to the people of this country, I cannot vote in ignorance without the information before me.

I have no doubt the Bill will pass, and that the borrowing being sought by this Bill will be achieved. However, to sit here on 23 May—almost halfway through the year—and borrow $56 million to fund a year's worth of capital and recurrent expenditure, I have to express my concern over the total system we have in place. I appreciate that we are in an unusual time because it follows an election year where the budget is presented in February rather than in November of the previous year, but we must address that problem and not only look at it as a problem.

We need to address a change in the fiscal year of the Cayman Islands Government and I have suggested a June to June fiscal year. That would remove a situation of this nature where an election creates this abnormality.

This House demonstrated in the last Finance Committee meeting a willingness to make changes to problems which many governments in the past only spoke about. I think we must look at the whole picture and continue this trend making some positive changes, reviewing the viability of changing the fiscal year to a June to July fiscal year . . . .

[Inaudible interjections]

Mr. Lyndon L. Martin: . . . July 1 to June 30. I will not get into the game of semantics. I have said my piece on the Loans Bill and I solicit other Members of this House to support my stance and not allow a lowering of the standards. We expect comprehensive information. We are Members of this Honourable Legislative Assembly, with the cognitive ability to analyse and appraise on our own what is financial prudence. I think that this Honourable House should be presented with all the necessary information to assess the requested borrowing of some $56 million. Thank you.

The Speaker: The Floor is opened for debate. Does any other Member wish to speak?

The Second Elected Member for Bodden Town.

Mr. Gilbert A. McLean: Mr. Speaker, I rise to offer my contribution on a Bill for a Law to authorise the borrowing of up to $55,473,110 for the financing of specified capital projects, capital acquisition and general revenue fund expenditure.

For it to say that there are specified capital projects and capital acquisitions, and where the money will be spent in general revenue, I believe would not be correct. While some information has been given in regard to how this money will be spent, many details could be added to be clear and unequivocal to the way the money is spent. When I look at the schedule, I see capital development to receive, $24,555,862; general revenue fund to receive, $26,217,248; and capital acquisition expenditure, $4,700,000.

I would be remiss not to note that this amount is the single largest amount ever proposed to be borrowed by the Government of the Cayman Islands for anything. What makes this very peculiar is that a large part of this is to go to recurrent revenue, meaning that the estimated revenue of the country fell short of what was forecasted and the country has not taken in the revenue to meet its recurrent expenditure. This is a very grave situation and something that all legislators should have a great deal of concern about.

When one views the situation, hand-in-hand with it should be an exercise to determine ways to enhance government's revenue without the usual taxing of the average citizen, without having to raise the cost of post office boxes from $100 to $250, and from $75 to $100 and so forth; and, certainly, to find ways and means where we do not tax consumer items that the average person and the poor person needs such as milk and eggs.

The business of the country needs to be addressed in a way to find areas of revenue quickly. One of those I believe needs to be finding more revenue from the financial sector, including the banks in this country through the levying of some fee, just like the bank levies a fee on the services it provides the average person doing business with it. We have to find a way to raise revenue from all areas that benefit from the Cayman Islands, being the stable environment that it is, which allows them to do the business they do. We have to stop taxing the poor people of this country while those entities that earn large profits virtually pay nothing compared to the profits they make.

We have almost reached the halfway point in this year. There have been various instances where money has been voted in advance so as to keep the country moving, both for recurrent revenue and capital works or to meet contractual agreements. We understand this can happen, coming out of an election year. Perhaps we have seen the longest delay in arriving at finality with the country's finances in this particular instance. I know there have been various occurrences that have interrupted the normal process of legislative business with the OECD and the FATF and all of those external forces which are attempting to take over our internal operations. So, I understand that there have been certain delays. However, it is clear that even if monies are forthcoming now for doing capital works, these works cannot be completed within this year as the year is almost spent. So, it would seem that some of these works would have to be set back into next year.

I too have certain concerns that there seems to not be any agreement in place, or that there is not a partially negotiated situation for where these funds will come from. The Bill itself sheds some light on this where in section 2 it says, "The Governor in Council may borrow an amount not exceeding $55,473,110 in the currency of the Islands." And subsection (2) says, "The amount referred to in subsection (1) may be borrowed- (a) by instalments; and (b) from any institution, and on such terms and conditions, as the Governor in Council may approve."

I think Members of this House should have some say on this particular aspect. "From any institution". . . which institution will this be? Will the Government negotiate a $50 million loan with one single bank in the Cayman Islands? If so, which one?

Is it good for the Government to negotiate a $56 million loan with one single bank or is it better to have a consortium of banks? These are points of interest, not least of which is the interest that will be paid, particularly when interest rates are down worldwide. Certainly, we hear of interest rates going down half a percentage point in the US every few months. In Cayman, we know that means nothing unless they are on the rise—then they raise the prices higher. When they are lowered, the banks here do not necessarily lower them in turn. These are certain concerns that I think, we as legislators, should have in regard to this particular exercise.

The Governor in Council may enter into a loan, but of course, it is the people of the Cayman Islands, in the next generation who will have to find the money to pay for these loans we propose to take.

I know that any government, including this one, has to have ways and means of finding money and justifying whatever means or methodology they use, as did previous governments; it is the way of government. I think we have reached a point where we ought to be seriously concerned. Fifty-six million dollars in a loan with 39,000 people in the country does not really create such a very reassuring position. It matters not to me which Government, past, present or future—my concern is that there should be good fiscal management in the Cayman Islands. It affects us all; it is not just the business of the government executive. We have to find ways and means of improving the situation that exists.

From the last review of the finances of government done by the accounting firm of Deloitte and Touche, we know the total debt of the country is close to $400 million. That is not a good situation to be in. My message to the Government and to us, is that we have to become seriously concerned, particularly at the extent of our expenditure versus what our country is now able to generate as revenue.

There are certain particulars of this $56 million loan that are not clear to me. It is one thing for the Bill to say that the Governor may borrow from "any bank," but what kind of a situation will that be for the country? I will not lend my support to this Bill before the House. Hopefully, it will be negotiated. If is not negotiated before the end of the year or in due time, this $56 million needed for this year's budget will mean certain things will not be done and certain monies needed to carry on the recurrent affairs will suffer.

This Bill is not a simple Bill before the House, it represents the largest ever borrowing in the history of the Cayman Islands. As such, it concerns me for the reasons which I have stated.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for Education, Human Resources and Culture.

Hon. Roy Bodden: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. The position in which the Government finds itself having to borrow $55,473,110 is not a flattering position, nor is it the end of the world. It is not uncommon for governments when faced with situations such as we are faced with to have to resort to borrowing. While it is true that this is of historical significance, in that, it has not happened to such an extent before, this country knows that the finances for the last few years were not managed as they were supposed to be, and worldwide there has been retrenchment, recession and cutbacks.

What is important for Members and the Government to learn from this exercise is that we can no longer afford to conduct business as usual. We have to learn from this experience and craft a different system, not the least of which has to do with changing our system of accounting, so that we can be in a better position to forecast and be more accurate in terms of our accounting instead of relying on the antiquated cash system where we even had to resort to some dead reckoning at times.

The position we find ourselves in speaks volumes to a change into a modern accrual system, which is what some Members, including me, had proposed several years ago; indeed, as long ago as 1995. If we do not learn anything else from this exercise, it must be that we hasten to adopt this system and get some adequate medium term and long-term budgetary planning and prioritisation.

The fact that we have now come to a spot where we have to take a quantum leap in this borrowing is predicated by our failure in the past to do proper financial planning beginning with the absence of a medium term financial strategy, and the absence of any long-term planning. While it is not my intention to point fingers, and I will not resort to that because pointing fingers does no good—the fact is that it is incumbent upon us, who have inherited this situation, to make sure that when we get out of this predicament, we have the proper infrastructure in place to conduct a medium term financial strategy and adequate long-term planning.

This Government, of which I am one Minister, is capable of borrowing these funds, using them for the purported reasons and projects to set this country on a path to full financial recovery. There is no element of doubt in my mind. We expect that when these borrowings have been formalised that Government can get on with the business of running the country as it was elected to do.

What is good about this is that we were not taken by surprise. We knew when we inherited the mantles of power that we were going to have to resort to such an exercise; therefore, we are not at a complete disadvantage. We realised that the coffers we were going to inherit were not what they were touted to be.

Soon after being sworn into office, when we made the initial investments we calculated we were going to have to embark upon this precedent-setting borrowing.

We are prepared mentally and infrastructurally for that. We have set about establishing a committee to investigate into means of how we can raise money and diversify in the future. We have not gone into this without pondering and deep thought. We are the first persons to admit that we can no longer afford to conduct business as usual.

Let us face facts! We are sitting on a fragile-based economy. While it is true to say we should hit up the banks and the financial institutions, we have to be careful that we are not milking the same old cow year after year. We find it abhorrent to have to tax the people, but in the absence of any clearly thought out strategies to this point, we have to resort to that to tide us over the immediate future.

It is not our only plan and objective to continue to raise revenue by these traditional means. While I agree that banks, financial institutions, and other such organisations have to be prepared to bear their share of the responsibility, we cannot lull ourselves into thinking we are the only jurisdiction of choice. There is a limit to what we can extrapolate and in extrapolating this we have to go about it in a fair, reasonable and acceptable manner to all concerned. That takes some negotiation and diplomacy, and it may take some barking at times.

The predicament we find ourselves in is not unlike the great United States in the era of the depression, when Franklyn D. Roosevelt (FDR) introduced the "New Deal" of infusing into the government projects that set the country on a sound economic footing. The USA was suffering an economic morass depression. Roosevelt, through an infusion of projects stimulated by money collected from taxes, set out on a development programme that propelled the USA to the position where it is now.

If we handle these funds as wisely as we anticipate and plan to, the country can rebound well within the tenure of this Government. What we need to realise (and I say this as much as a reminder as well as for information for future aspirants) is that we have to take stock of the free lunches offered to the Cayman Islands, figuratively speaking. We cannot give away money to veterans who are foreign to the Cayman Islands like it was going out of style. This was the practice that brought us to this point.

For informational purposes, we have calculated that we have given away $43 million, and that is inclusive of scholarships. We are going to give the scholarships, but a lot of the things which are given we have to cut back on. It would surprise many people to know who and the economic background of some of the people to whom we give financial assistance and veterans' assistance, who are not even Caymanian!

Lest anyone believes that the predicament we find ourselves in is one offered by the incumbent Government, I want to set the records straight and emphasise that we in the Cayman Islands need to be careful how we issue instructions to people who come to partake of "free lunches" because the bill is being borne by the Caymanian taxpayers.

It is a challenge which the government is eminently equipped to rise to. We shall, with the help of the good Lord, rise to this challenge and we shall surmount it comfortably. I hope that when this Government's tenure of office is up we can leave this country on the sound financial footing it deserves.

This is a time for understanding and conscientiousness. I am satisfied that Honourable Members in here have a grasp and an appreciation of the problem that will allow them to understand, identify and help the Government that has embarked on a direction of fiscal responsibility, constraint, reorganisation and of setting the country on the economic path it should be built upon. To this extent there is a need to examine how we can diversify because we can no longer count on those areas that were almost exclusively tapped into, and we cannot continue to tax the people where an inordinate amount of the burden is borne by the proverbial "little man."

If I may say so myself; this Government reversed some moves that we said at the time were imprudent. We need to learn some lessons so that when we go to appease elements by removing duties and taxes, we need to weigh and carefully study to ensure there is a counter balance or else the equation will break down.

We cannot expect to remove volumes of duty off certain items without calculating the loss, first of all, and without offsetting such a loss by finding other areas where we can make up. This kind of practice is best described by the present Minister of Health when he called that "single entry bookkeeping."

I am in total support of this Bill to raise this money. The country needs it at this time. I am confident that it will be put to good use. I commend the Bill and ask all Members of this House to join persons who are prudent and sensible and give the Government a chance to get on with the business of running the country and managing the economy and setting the country on a renewed path to financial prudence.

The Speaker: Do Members wish to take a break, or continue for the next 45 minutes?

We shall continue.

The Third Elected Member for George Town.

Dr. Frank S. McField: Mr. Speaker, in regard to this Loan Bill for approximately $56 million, I would like to go back to address what the last speaker said in regard to removing duties.

I seem to always hear people talking about removing duties as if that were the greatest crime committed by the last government. I do not like that because I know that I came in here in 1996 promising the people that I would fight to remove duties from imported foodstuff into this country. I am still very passionate about it and very insulted when I hear Members of the Government continue to ridicule that policy or idea.

When we look at the number of Customs concessions that presently exist, it is a shame that someone would get up and mention it without first of all reciting the concessions that now exist. So please, Government, do not come back and mention taking duties off of foodstuff again!

It is very important for me to vote against putting back duties on foodstuff in order for Government to make up what it needs to run the country. I could not in any good conscience support something as vile, as perverted, as taxes on food to the extent of what we now have it in this country. Of course, we are talking about the Loan Bill.

I am quite willing to go along with the Government regarding borrowing money in order to make up their shortfall. However, to talk about the fact that you cannot remove duties from foodstuff . . . it is so silly. Why not? The poor must also eat.

We are always talking about how we will get the investors upset, but we never talk about how we might upset the poor. I do not suppose anyone believes that the poor have any kind of organised power.

I went through the estimates in Finance Committee, and spent a lot of time here going through the tedious process of questioning items. Not that I was involved in all the detailed questioning. I felt that some of it was a little redundant, especially when persons knew they would come here and vote against what was necessary to make these estimates a reality. If there is not going to be any money voted for these estimates, what is the point of examining them? It seems like a real waste of time.

I know that there are people in here who look out for their districts, and after they have looked out for their districts, then they are going to vote against the means to fund these things. It seems like a giant contradiction. It is this system of convenience that I am a little upset about.

There are some people in here who really believe that the people out there are saying the Government is a failure because it needs to borrow. That is not true! The people out there who understand the situation better than a lot of us understand the situation. The people out there would like for the Government to get things under control so that the country can move forward away from a recession, and that full prosperity can be returned to their country.

People out there are also experienced borrowers. Perhaps some of us borrow too much. However, we also realise that society has developed to a point where all the things we can see to do we cannot necessarily pay today to do. So, we need to borrow and then we can have things paid for today.

The whole system of borrowing is not necessarily the most negative way of financing the needs of a country, in particular when you look at the kinds of investments the Cayman Islands has been able to make as a result of borrowing. We are not a third world country that borrows to buy a limousine for politicians and pay bribes to relatives. Government has borrowed traditionally and spent that money very meaningfully. So, the investment is here and future generations will benefit from that investment as well; that needs to be taken into account.

Regarding the whole idea of borrowing to pay recurrent expenditure is an argument I heard 20 years ago. As soon as Government has to borrow to pay recurrent expenditure, somehow that would mean that there is a failure; that it is okay to borrow to fund capital, but you should not borrow to pay for recurrent expenditure. I do not know why not, if you find yourself in a crisis.

You would prefer to not borrow to pay recurrent expenditure, but because of a crisis you need to borrow, and not borrowing could create a greater crisis for yourself. So, if I believe that we will have a greater crisis if we did not borrow, how can I come here and say 'do not borrow'?

I could come here and say do not borrow because I have a principle about that and maybe the principle goes beyond what is rational. If I am going to say 'do not borrow' then I have to give the government an alternative to borrowing. I have to come with a suggestion.

I am saying, 'do not put duties back on foodstuff instead borrow the money.' I just cannot come and say 'do not put the duties back on the foodstuff and also do not borrow.' I am giving an alternative because if I do not, I am helping to create a crisis for the country, and that is not what I am here for.

I understand that I am a Member of the Backbench, which means I am responsible for the deliberations of financial issues in Finance Committee, and I have the possibility to discuss financial issues by discussing the Appropriation Bill and the Loan Bill. The Government itself is responsible for policy. They brought their Budget here.

Each one of us had weeks and weeks to go through that Budget and say 'that goes, that is too expensive, let us get rid of that' and cut it by thousands of dollars, or millions of dollars. That exercise did not take place here. If that exercise did not take place here, then what is the exercise now to come at this particular point and say 'we're not going to finance you' All we are doing is dividing ourselves, saying 'you're the Government, and we are something else.'

We are all equally responsible to see that the country's Appropriation Bill passes so that there are funds to continue the business of the country. We can disagree with the business of the country, but it seems logical that we should also decide that there should be some way of paying and we should make that contribution to the Legislative Assembly regarding the Loan Bill.

I happen to believe what the Minister of Education says, that it is a time for reasonableness; that is one reason why I was a little upset after he did not go back to the duties on the food, but there is a time for reasonableness, Mr. Speaker. I find that in the country as a whole there is a lot of hope, especially when one would not feel that is the case with the economics being the way it is. People are very hopeful and I do not want to spoil that for them.

I have also been able to experience in Finance Committee that there is a willingness for people to work together to get motions passed in Finance Committee that would not normally have made it through previously. Forgive me, therefore, if I happen to be a little bit too enthusiastic with regards to what we might be able to produce from this Assembly.

I am of the opinion that if we concentrate on solving problems we will be better off. The reasonableness exists at this time. I am not saying how long it will continue, but as long as it does I am quite willing to work with it to accomplish what can be accomplished by working along with the Members of Government.

I would say that I did not hear too many people vote against the Appropriation Bill when it was read. I think it is important for me to state that I did not stand up to vote against it. I would therefore take this opportunity to vote for the Loan Bill as a way of seeing that those requests examined over the weeks in Finance Committee can be brought to reality. I lend my support to this Bill and trust that the Government will see as much as possible that we do not find ourselves in this situation next year.

I believe we will be able to partially avoid this position next year if we were to review the amount of Custom concessions now being given to companies that could afford to pay their way in the Cayman Islands. I think we must stop giving favours to persons who can afford to pay their way. I think that members of our business community must accept that corporate responsibility means paying taxes and not just joining clubs to show that you want to help improve society.

I feel that if these Customs concessions were reviewed again, at the end of the day, it might still be possible to consider the removal of duties from foodstuff. I think that should be the ultimate objective of a country completely reliant on the importation of food—the main human necessity. There should be no obstacle put in the way of access to food.

Of course, a woman raising three or four kids, having to pay those duties would be looked at by some Members who think it is not really that much. Sometimes I see people asking for 5 cents, or 10 cents to get something. Just a few weeks ago, I was at Hurley's Supermarket and a lady asked me if I had 10 cents and I said to her "why?" She said she was short 10 cents so, I gave it to her and she went into the store to pay her bill.

So, if I sound moved by that whole point about duties on foodstuff, it is simply because I believe we create greater equality when taxes are placed where taxes should be, and not on what people consume, but what people acquire or have access to that other people will never have access to. We should pay for the privilege of having control over certain things.

The Speaker: The Elected Member for East End.

Mr. V. Arden McLean: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. As I rise to debate the Loan Bill currently before us, I would like to reflect back to the past month during which Finance Committee was in session and then come back to this morning when the Appropriation Bill got its third reading and was passed. Like the Third Elected Member for George Town, I did not hear too many "noes."

During Finance Committee we scrutinised almost every line item in the budget, so much so, that some Members said we were being parochial, and wanting things for our districts. My discipline was not accounting, it was engineering. Nevertheless, for the majority of my adult life I have dealt with budgets, not $300 million budgets, but the concept applies whether it is $10 or $300.

I do not believe that anyone, under normal circumstances, should borrow to fund their recurrent expenditure. I believe that should be left to capital and long-term where generations to come will see it was prudent management. Certainly, in times like these we may have no alternative but to borrow for recurrent expenditure.

I just cannot understand how we can scrutinise the budget and ask for monies to be spent and then not support the funding of that expenditure. That escapes me! If someone can explain that to me in accounting terms, I will gladly accept that explanation because I know I would learn something from that.

I stood here during my debate on the Throne Speech and the Budget Address, and asked the people of this country for patience while giving the Government a chance to bring it back to sound footing. I also said to put Government on notice not to bring back anything that would further pressure the little man. I also made a statement that poor people were fed up. While we applied taxes on the poorer man, I also asked the financial industry to step forward and take their rightful role and assist the government and the country that made them what they are during these times.

In reply, the financial industry started writing letters in the paper about how expensive it is to do business in this country already. Well, what they did not mention was that even though it is more expensive than some jurisdictions around us, they make more money here. That is why the professionals in the financial industry can build these $5 million to $25 million homes!

I still say, regardless of how many letters they write to the papers, they must now step forward and help the country that made them. This is a time of need. When it was a time of need for them, they came to this country and fulfilled those needs. Now this country needs them . . . step forward and pick up the bat and deliver a homerun for us!

When it was time for personal greed, they came to us and we welcomed them! Now we need—this country needs. Step up to the plate and assist the country they live in and call home. We call it home and we have to pay our dues. So, they can write as many letters as they like.

Having said that, I also agree Government must be prudent in its spending. In the Budget Address one of the policy decisions outlined was to curtail all new services except for the Bodden Town, Savannah, George Town, John A. Cumber, Red Bay Primary, Lighthouse School and staff for the protection unit and the Financial Reporting Unit. There are some rumours around that it is not being done. Whoever is responsible for that policy decision not being put in place had better start stepping up to the plate also.

The more new services, hiring or creating of new departments we do is more expenditure. So, Government, be that the political side or the public service side, must step up to the plate with some constraints. We have to ensure that we suppress expenditure.

The Third Elected Member for George Town spoke about duty concessions. That is another area Government needs to look into. A lot of these people who were squealing about a few taxes are the same millionaires that get duty concessions in this country. Government needs to take it back from them. They have been getting it for as long as they have been in business—10, 15, 20, 30 years! They must keep quiet.

When we have to borrow money for recurrent expenditure, and then give duty concessions to everyone . . . I do not have a problem with it being given to Cayman Brac, let us leave that in place because it helps the economy. However, everyone has gotten rich off the Cayman Islands and no one comes to step forward. It is time to stop that.

I trust that the medium term financial plan, which Government is planning for this country, includes removing some of these duty concessions so that this country can get more money instead of having to borrow for recurrent expenditure.

I find it difficult to comprehend how we are going to fund this over $300 million if we need $55 million in loan and we refuse that here today. I really find it difficult to understand how all the things government needs to do are going to be done, on the basis of what we approved this morning. I believe I heard one "No." Unfortunately there was no division and I think that was the biggest mistake we ever made. We should have had a division to find out exactly who voted for and who voted against.

It is every individual's responsibility in here, to vote his conscience. I will not try to take that away from anyone. No one is going to take it from me!

I understand the need, but I have some concern over the lack of sufficient information thus far on where this money is going to be borrowed from, the terms and conditions. There comes a point when we have to trust that the Financial Secretary of this country, the Government, and in particular the Leader of Government Business are acting in the best interest of this country. I trust that we will all respect that. It does not make sense for the Leader of Government Business to take up that position and then try to destroy his own country. So I trust that everyone in this Honourable House will respect that we have to trust someone. Yes, I would have liked to have seen it earlier and I trust it will be forthcoming.

I understand the need for us to borrow. And I look forward to next year—if there is a need to borrow—that it will be for capital only. I hope the Government is prudent in expending this year's borrowing which I am going to support. I trust they will be very prudent in using this money for the interest of this country. I was entrusted with the responsibility to keep this country running and will do that to the best of my ability. I leave other Members of this House to do what they see as their responsibility.

I support the Loan Bill before us. Thank you.

The Speaker: I think this will be an appropriate time for the luncheon break. We will suspend until 2.15 PM.

PROCEEDINGS SUSPENDED AT 12.39 PM

PROCEEDINGS RESUMED AT 2.35 PM

The Speaker: Please be seated.

Debate continues on the Loan Bill 2001. Does any Member wish to speak?

The Honourable Minister for Planning, Communications and Works.

Hon. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

We have listened to various contributions from Members with regards to this Loan Bill. While the Third Official Member will be addressing some of the issues raised, I think there are a few that the Government needs to address. Questions have been asked and comments have been made on various areas.

I want to set the stage with a clear understanding as to how Government arrived at this point with a Loan Bill constituted the way it is. The total amount being sought is just in excess of $55 million, just over $26 million of which is to fund recurrent expenditure, and just over $28 million to fund capital works.

When the Government took office, as my colleague, the Minister of Education already said, it did not take us very long to understand that the financial position of the country was not as healthy as we would have liked to see. He also said it did not come as a great surprise to us. We just had to try to get the whole picture to see how we could best address it in the short, medium, and long-term.

The government did not have an opportunity before preparing the budget to effectively deal with the many issues we know face us, some of which were alluded to today in the various debates. That is no signal that we do not intend to deal with these matters. Some Members who have spoken seem to take the position that the Government was elected with a mandate and has had as much time as it needed to make certain things happen. The Second Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman spoke about not supporting the borrowing because the Government needs to be looking to the longer term in finding solutions, and he went in several directions. I do not want to take him on to disagree with some of the principles he spoke to. What he has not addressed is the fact that while we fully intend to bring about the changes in the way the country does business, he and everyone else simply have to give us the time in which to do it.

Government's machinery—the system that is complained about continuously, the same system I complained about when I was on the Backbench—is not one where you click your fingers and make changes in one day. That is not to say that the job of the Back Bench does not cause the Government to try to act in a manner considered expedient, but in so doing, I think everyone respects the fact that we have to be very careful to ensure that whatever moves are made bring about the right results.

I noticed the Member also spoke—and I firmly believe that he speaks out of both sides of his mouth—about this great borrowing the country is engaging in and how it is going to be saddling future generations. Mr. Speaker, the facts are that the borrowing we are talking about is not intended to be long-term borrowing at this point in time, especially the portion to fund recurrent expenditure, because that has to be looked at as short-term. In all of our plans, the Government certainly intends for that portion of borrowing engaged in this year to be separated and amortised over a short period of time.

Recurrent expenditure is not an expenditure that you want to fund over an extremely long period of time, ending up paying huge amounts of interest. Because you spend it as you get it, literally, it would be gone within a year. It is simply to enable Government to continue to provide the services. In effect, the Government readily understands and accepts that the portion needed to fund recurrent expenditure is not something the country benefits from down the line. We understand that! We simply cannot do any better at this point in time.

If this were even a year from now, I could quite understand the Member taking us on with the position he has taken. It is not that I do not understand that because I know how it is, I have been there. I want the Member and the public to clearly understand that while he takes that position, feeling it is how he best serves as a representative, it must still be clearly understood by the country that the position he takes is not exactly the position that obtains.

Some Members spoke to the negotiations that are presently ongoing. I think a Member also spoke to what he thought to be the fact that when the Loan Bill should come to this Honourable House it should come with a complete package already negotiated and agreed upon that exacts amount of interest could be made known to Members before they vote on the Bill.

Well, let me inform the Member that the procedure accepted by the local institutions is one whereby they do not wish to conclude any negotiations until the vote is taken in this Legislative Assembly, agreeing, by majority at least, if not by unanimity, to borrow whatever the funds are. So, if I have to apologise on behalf of the Government to that Member, then I sincerely apologise, but we have no other way of doing it. That is the procedure.

To clear the matter up, we are not waiting until the Loan Bill seeks and gets safe passage through this legislature to begin negotiations with the institutions. They have already begun and are ongoing as we speak. The fact of the matter is that when we spoke to the lending institutions about the borrowing, we did not speak to any one single institution at any time. We asked for all of the class A lending institutions—seven at present—to meet with us, and so they did.

The position we have taken, which is prudent . . . and I agree with the Second Elected Member for Bodden Town, but I wanted him to know that his thoughts about the way forward are exactly what we have put into practice already. We have spoken to the institutions as a group; we outlined our position and showed them our plans as to the way forward; and we have a meeting with them on Tuesday to hopefully be able to conclude the arrangements for the borrowing.

Mr. Speaker, I want the world to believe that this Government has nothing to hide. Perhaps that causes some grief sometimes, but better grief that is known than more grief to come that you have not planned for.

When we meet with them again, it is expected of them to come with a consortium position. Regarding interest rates, I do not want to pre-empt any negotiations but I like to take advantage of positions such as this in the event they are listening to us tonight. While I cannot speak for them I am very confident that they will continue the practice that has been in recent years and hope to be able to negotiate such loans at 1 percent above London InterBank Offered Rate (LIBOR)—not prime, but LIBOR which is almost always below what we know as prime. I have every confidence they will do the best they can to do the necessary on-lending for us so that we can get on with it.

Let me speak to some general situations that need to be clearly understood. The first one is, it is a fact—not a myth, not a belief, not one's conviction, but a simple fact—that the country and its Governments have not, to this point, paid anywhere near enough attention to the ever growing imbalance between recurrent expenditure and recurrent revenue.

For quite some time we have found ourselves in what we considered to be boom years. Somewhere along the line we figured this would go on, and on, and on, and on and never stop. We find the political arms of Government continually wanting to satisfy the desires of the constituents by providing capital works programmes that I do not contest the need for, but in doing so no one stopped and thought of the need to have a very clear picture of what the recurrent expenditure would be.

We built a hospital; that was needed, and the country and the citizens deserved it. We now need to man that hospital and provide the services. In just about three or four years, the recurrent expenditure of that institution has risen (and I am not giving exact figures, but close without being facetious) more than $20 million additional expenditure on the recurrent side to operate it.

We can speak out of one side of our mouths to say that it is a sin to speak about how high the fees should be, and how the good people of this country deserve the service. Of course, I agree, but where is the money going to come from? If you do not have that question and answer in your equation, you are not doing it right.

I firmly hold the position by experience today, that that is where we have failed miserably when it comes to good governance and prudent fiscal policy. That is what our problem is today. That is why we face the position we have to live with exactly right now.

It is not something where you can go to the country and say 'Listen, we have a position where our expenditure is more than our income. We need to correct that, so we are going to add fees all over the place and strike a balance.' The moment you do that, it is another sin because now you are taxing the people more than they can afford.

The Government is as conscious—more conscious at times—of that as are others who argue the case. We understand that. We do not want that to happen, but, Mr. Speaker, there is no overnight cure. We all know the principles we have to apply, but we have to get those set in place and we have to practice them to see the results. So let us not hear about the long wish list from everyone and when it comes to paying for it that is not my problem, it is yours. That will not work. One has to go hand-in-hand with the other.

In fact, one of the recent 16 policies we have adopted is that if there is any specific increase in expenditure over a certain amount of money, attached to that has to be the increase in revenue to serve that on an ongoing basis. This is what should have been done from day one, but was not.

During those boom years the position was almost always where the recurrent revenue almost always surpassed the projected amount. So, the position applied was 'Oh, do not worry about it. If we have a little bit of additional expenditure this year, the surplus will take care of it and we will be fine. No problem!'

And there were those of us who preached for six to eight years, 'Listen, we hear what you are saying, but there are telltale signs that let us know it is not going to happen indefinitely. We should not wait until we find ourselves in that position before we begin to do something about it.' However, no one listened at the time and that is how we find ourselves in this position.

I do not think I will keep chiming about certain things because I want to get on with it as much as anyone else. In fact, contrary to what some people think, I like what I do. I love the challenge! I want to be part of building the team by consensus to represent this country the way it should be represented to bring about the right results too. There are certain facts we must understand. I would be the last one to walk with bold chest and feel very happy about having to bring a Loan Bill of this nature to this legislature for the country to hear the position we are in. I am not going to lie about it! I am not going to pretend that it does not exist! It is as simple as that.

Others mentioned our plans to move forward with a total shift from the cash accounting system that currently exists to an accrual accounting system that gives the true picture, at any given time, regarding the finances of the country.

We have departments that millions of dollars are allocated to annually in order for them to function and provide the needed services. Yet, we do not have the ability to truly identify exactly what it costs to run those departments. That is the position we are in and that is not to say people did not know what we had to do. I daresay this will be the first opportunity we have where all of the ingredients are there and all of the bodies are there to allow us to get to that position.

I would have loved to bring a balanced budget and be able to say we projected a surplus. The truth is, that was not the case and we were not going to fix the books to make it look that way.

When we talk about borrowing $26 million for recurrent expenditure because there is a shortfall between the projected revenue and expenditure of that amount, people have to get a clear prospective of what we walked into so that we will understand clearly why this is the position. In January 2001 with a deficit of nearly $11 million, if we had not taken $5.8 million out of the general reserves to put into the current account to help bring the deficit down we would have started with a deficit of almost $17 million.

For those who have been listening to Finance Committee, you should be aware that we found a myriad of instances where portions of monies in the 2001 Budget under certain line items is to pay for bills of the last two months of the year 2000 which were not paid. There was no money to pay them.

While it would not be truthful to say that the 2001 Budget is for 14 months instead of 12 months on the recurrent side, the fact of the matter is, in several instances we will actually be taking care of debt for 14 months, not just 12 months. That is the picture we have to appreciate on the recurrent side.

I think we should view this as the “wake-up call” for us to get it right. There is no sense in crying over what has happened. We need to learn from those experiences so we can ensure that it does not happen again. That is the job at hand now.

When we look at the capital side, there are not that many new capital projects being engaged in. There are some classrooms that have to be built, because come September we do not want to find ourselves with no space for the children. There is also the geriatric and mental health ward at the hospital, which is long overdue. We also need to ensure that is done as quickly as possible because as it stands now nearly all of the hospital beds are taken up all the time, many being used by patients that would utilise the geriatric and mental health ward once completed.

In Cayman Brac we have the renovation of the Aston Ruddy Civic Centre to ensure that is at the level of a hurricane shelter. That is important! And there is also the West End Post Office that will soon be started.

By and large, out of the $28 million being borrowed for capital, the larger portion is being borrowed for ongoing capital projects that were started and have to be completed. So, we did not have a lot of choices.

There are other needs, but when we looked at what we projected for revenue, we figured that was the most we could go for, and be able to organise ourselves with debt repayment, which did not cause us to be nervous about the country’s ability to service the debt.

The Government is confident that the people of this country will co-operate at all levels, and that is certainly an important factor in the equation, for us to get it right. I also believe, while it is fair to expect most people to be anxious for things to get better, people understand clearly that these are matters that one has to continually work at.

Mention was made by the Third Elected Member for George Town . . . and I think, it is fair comment and say that there was a slight misunderstanding when he thought the Minister of Education was referring to the reduction of duties when he spoke about “free lunches” having to stop. What he really was speaking about was the long list of duty concessions Members recently got a copy of.

Hon. Roy Boddén: True!

Hon. D. Kurt Tibbetts: The Minister of Education was not speaking about the reduction of duties on certain items.

I truly wish for everyone to understand that my game is not to make someone look bad. I do not have any time for that, Mr. Speaker. When I need to take someone on, or they need to take me on, the world knows about it. I do not hide it and I do not want anyone else to hide it. I do not have a problem with that!

I have spoken about these duty items and duty being taken off of these items a couple of times here before. I also spoke about making sure that when we look at the expenditure side we have the accompanying revenue to ensure that we can accommodate our expenditure. People have been saying that this Government has caused all the prices to go up, and I know the actions Government has taken—some were painful, but we did not have a choice.

How could we come to this legislature asking to borrow some $40 million for recurrent expenditure? We could not do that. That was the kind of decision we were faced with in trying to strike the balance. We did not know until we were beginning to try to start the budget process exactly what had happened last year. It does not matter whose fault it was because I am not addressing that.

Last year, when duties were taken off on the eve of the Budget Address, the projected revenue that included the duty, which was taken off those items, was not adjusted. In the immediate term, it painted a false picture when comparing what we almost certainly knew the expenditure and revenue to be. From the beginning, by that single action, without addressing it on both sides of the coin, we started off with a $10 million to $12 million deficit.

What that meant for us, was that if we did not put some of the duties back on, we were going to be faced with a double whammy this year. We would have had two years in the same trap with a near $17 million deficit, before the $5.8 million came out of general reserves to bring it down to just under $11 million. The country could not stand that deficit; that was my position, and I take full responsibility for it. We can all complain, but if we listen to reason we will understand that the country could not take that.

Other Members have said that we cannot look to beat dead horses. I have said that too, agreeing with it. I also agree that there are certain sectors in this society that need to wake up and understand that they have to bear their share of the burden. I expect that!

Because I am not one to go behind anyone’s back, let me say that the Government has been in ongoing talks with the same financial sector spoken about, and the financial sector understand that there has to be a better balance than what obtains at present. The difference with Government is that we are not going to arbitrarily impose certain fees because we are going to be up front with what the needs of the country are in the medium to long-term, and they are going to understand that this is how we plan over an ongoing period for them to contribute to the revenue. I think that is a fair way to do it. I am not afraid to speak to that publicly, but if it had been dealt with years ago we would not be in the mess we are in now. I mean, let us face it, if you have money in your pocket and no one comes to you for it, you are not going to throw it up in the air and say ‘see here, take this!’ It does not work like that, does it? That is what we are faced with now, and that is the way we are dealing with it. We could not have simply brought a revenue package if we did not have to borrow for recurrent revenue. The revenue package we were going to have to bring would have been in excess of $45 million; that would have been another hullabaloo. Unprecedented! That is what we were faced with, and we need to understand that very clearly.

We can disjoint ourselves and speak to any piece of the pie as we wish, and perhaps sound good doing so, but let us make sure we look at the whole picture and have a clear understanding.

This is the plan: We are going to engage in a medium-term financial strategy and public sector investment programme. By way of policy and in concert with all representatives the Government is going to develop what we believe in the medium-term to be the list of priority capital projects. We are going to make sure that we work in tandem with that by ensuring that the revenue streams in the years to come satisfy the need to be able to fund capital projects. In so doing that, we will always have the ability based on the resources at the time to prioritise what we are doing, and not just get up one morning and say we are going to do this, or that, not knowing how we are going to pay for it or sustain it. That is what we have been doing.

The Government's ultimate responsibility is to ensure that expenditure does not surpass revenue. That has to be one of the fundamental principles under which we operate.

Other Members spoke to the fact that the Government needs to ensure it has a more diverse revenue base; I totally agree with that. The Minister of Education who spoke to a fiscal advisory group and for everyone's information that group meets once per week and has a deadline of 1 September to present its recommendations to Government, with a view to enhancing the revenue streams and diversifying the revenue base. The group meets every week, so, we are not twiddling our thumbs. It is important at this point in time to take note of the fact that there is a lot of talent and willing commitment on the part of the private sector of this country because they want the country to work right too. I have to commend the private sector because it has certainly stepped up to the plate and is quite willing to participate in the process and offer what it has to offer—by and large, free of charge. They accept that they too have a responsibility; that is good to know. While not the cure-all, it makes life a lot easier.

While we have to engage in a loan of this nature, and that this is not what is desirable for us, I believe the position is fairly clear that it is something we have to do. I have every confidence that come November, while we may not have all the cures in place, there certainly should be a marked difference in the way we operate. It will not have been much time but it should be enough time to see a difference. This is not going to be cured overnight, but we are certainly going to get ourselves on track and employ the disciplines we have to employ, both with government policy and in the public sector with the way we do business.

I think it is also fair to say that our Civil Service fully understands the Government's position and is also stepping up to the plate. We have to employ certain efficiencies to ensure that we get value for money spent straight across the board, top to bottom and from bottom to top. I think once we stick to our guns it will happen.

I am not going to be insulted by Members of the Back Bench keeping the Government on its toes. I practised that long enough to fully accept that this is how it should be. So, I am not offended. I only ask that in deliberations when points are made, let the points be balanced. Let me send a warning—from here on in, if they are not balanced, they will be answered. Thank you.

The Speaker: The Second Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. Alden M. McLaughlin, Jr.: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I rise to support the Loan Bill. Having heard the contributions made by Members of the Back Bench, and that of the Minister of Education and the Leader of Government Business, there is really not a great deal left for me to say.

I am happy to be able to endorse almost all, which has been said in relation to this matter, with the notable exception of the startling contribution made by the Second Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman.

We sat here in Finance Committee for eight days and went through the budget document and accompanying departmental plans in excruciating detail. I recall, in particular, one afternoon when the Third Elected Member for George Town and I felt compelled to beg all other Members of Finance Committee to put aside parochialism, to concentrate on what was in the national interest. That step taken by the Third Elected Member for George Town and I, was prompted largely by the debate which had ensued over what monies should be appropriated to the road programme in Cayman Brac.

We all know that all politics is parochial and that it is almost inevitable that Members will seek to fight for as much as they can possible achieve for their respective constituencies. Perhaps George Town is the one exception to that. It is a longstanding tradition. Nevertheless, one cannot stand on the Floor of this House during their contribution to the Budget address and Throne Speech, and denounce the Budget as impotent in one breath and then in Finance Committee try to ensure that one's constituency gets as much as it possibly can, fighting tooth and nail when there is the slightest perception that that amount might possibly be reduced.

Also one should not declare that the Budget is impotent because it does nothing to stimulate the economy, and then turn around and say on the Floor of this House that one is not going to support the loan package that would give effect and fund the very projects for which one fought so hard.

There is nothing in my view that is more insidious and downright dangerous than hypocrisy. That is what I and other Members of this Honourable House have listened to this morning in the contribution of the Second Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman.

Mr. Lyndon L. Martin: Mr. Speaker, on a point of order.

POINT OF ORDER

The Speaker: May I hear your point of order?

Mr. Lyndon L. Martin: The reference and the naming of my action as “hypocritical” is not becoming and unparliamentary by nature.

The Speaker: I understood the Member to say that you said one thing and meant another.

Mr. Lyndon L. Martin: The reference of my action being “insidious.”

The Speaker: Are you talking about “insidious” or “hypocritical”?

Mr. Lyndon L. Martin: Both.

The Speaker: [Addressing the Second Elected Member for George Town]. We could take a break to study this more carefully, but I think the simplest thing would be to ask you to withdraw those two words.

Mr. Alden M. McLaughlin, Jr.: I do not wish to delay the proceedings, so I am willing to withdraw having termed the actions of the Second Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman as “insidious” and “hypocritical.”

The Speaker: Please continue.

Mr. Alden M. McLaughlin, Jr.: I was heartened by the approach of all Members of the Back Bench in Finance Committee in their efforts to work together to implement what I believe, we all regard as essential policy decisions necessary to get this country back on the path to fiscal strength. Therefore, the aberration this morning took me by surprise.

I too would much rather we did not have before us a Bill requiring money to be borrowed for the purpose of funding recurrent expenditure but that is one of the harsh realities we must face. During my contribution to the debate on the Budget Address and Throne Speech, I spoke at considerable length about the need to restrain the continued growth of the civil service, and the need to curtail the services government provides to the country.

The 16 policies that underlie the Budget will, if implemented, go a long way to reducing the continued growth in expenditure associated with the civil service. However, these 16 policies must be implemented.

I also agree with that part of the contribution by the Third Elected Member for George Town when he expressed his concern about taxes on food. I believe that we have all expressed our concern about that, indicating our unwillingness to go along with such measures in the future.

I was heartened again, to hear the Leader of Government Business advising us of the efforts being made to involve the private sector in the process, and to identify additional sources of revenue. I do not believe that it will be possible for us to simply tweak the current sources of revenue and come up over the long-term with the kind of revenue necessary to run this country. We must identify significant other sources if we are to succeed in the long-term.

With those few remarks, I give my support to the Loan Bill currently before this House and commend it to all Members. Thank you.

The Speaker: Do Members wish to continue, or take the afternoon break?

We shall continue. Does any other Member wish to speak? (Pause) If not, does the mover wish to exercise his right of reply?

The Honourable Temporary Third Official Member responsible for Finance and Economic Development

Hon. A. Joel Walton: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I wish to thank all Members who participated in the debate, and for those who did not participate, I certainly appreciate their tacit support.

For me personally, while I have served as Deputy Financial Secretary now for probably eight years, this is my first opportunity to speak to a Bill of this nature. While it has certainly been made a lot easier by those who have come before me, I think I would just like to spend a couple of minutes talking a bit about some items (some you have heard already, some a bit new) so as not to make it completely a maiden voyage.

I would like to say that the contribution by the Second and Third Elected Members for George Town and the Honourable Minister of Planning, in particular, certainly helped to put the situation in vivid context. Therefore, my job is a lot easier in trying to wind up.

Perhaps we can look at the gap. There has been a lot of discussion over the last several months about the gap the country faces. After we examined the Budget and all the various options available to us, in bringing a budget to this House we were left with a situation of some $51 million left to cover. So, after accepting the position of the capital side of the Budget, loan financing in that area is more easily understood than in the case of the recurrent side. Therefore, my contribution really focuses on the recurrent side.

We had some $51 million to close in order to bring a budget to this House. The first step we took was to remove $5.8 million from the general reserve fund and transfer that sum into the general revenue fund. That then left us with $46 million left to close.

The way we presented the Budget (that is, the Government) was to seek approximately $20 million in new taxes, in taxes generally, and to borrow $26 million in order to balance the recurrent side of the budget.

If we did not take that step, that is the dual step of $20 million in taxes and $26 million in recurrent expenditure, we would have to then look again at the recurrent expenditure. Perhaps it would be useful to look at the Budget to understand how recurrent expenditure is made up.

On table 2 of the Draft Budget 2001, as laid on the Table, we see that the recurrent expenditure for 2001 is projected at $277 million. If you look further into the document, on page 14, entitled "Table 10", we see of the sum of $277 million, $152 million relates to personal emoluments.

Taking $152 million from $277 million leaves us with $125 million in all other recurrent expenditure of Government, which ranges from subsidies to agencies to electricity and utility bills, scholarships et cetera. That is what makes up that additional $125 million.

If we were to attempt to remove $46 million from that $277 million, I think we need to appreciate that it would be hard not to look at personal emoluments which comprise more than half of the total recurrent expenditure. However, to look at personal emoluments at this point in time would not be an option considering the state of the economy as it is now, and that all islands within the Cayman Islands rely heavily on government jobs to make a living.

There are a couple other points I would like to speak on, one being the customs concessions a couple of Members have referred to. The Government has undertaken to review these concessions as we did back in 1997. We will do that again this year with a view to making recommendations (as the Portfolio of Finance) to Government as to how to deal with some of those concessions. Some of those do go back to the 1950s and 1960s. So it is not something that just occurred last year, they have a long historical context.

In a lot of instances, when the concessions were put in place, they were put in place for a very good reason. However, situations change and it is important that we keep these concessions under review at least once every four or five years.

We heard a lot of discussion about the approach to the problem. I have tried to put all the various strategies within the context of economics, that is, short-term, medium-term and long-term. It helps to give structure to the various approaches the Government has taken to address this gap which has taken some time to develop.

In the short-term, the first thing Government did was to seek the support of the public service during the last six weeks of 2000 in restraining recurrent expenditure. That programme worked extremely well. It does not end there, and for the benefit of the Members and the Public Service I would like to say that this situation is not going to be corrected within the next year or so. It is taking some time to develop, but the key is that we do have a plan to address the situation.

The next thing Government did, being faced a $17 million deficit was to withdraw $5.8 million from the general reserve fund to help bring the deficit down to a much more manageable level, that is around $11 million, at the end of 2000.

In addition, the 16 strategies were developed and promulgated and I would suggest that the three main ones relate to the offsetting policy, which I think is an excellent idea, in that, whenever we seek to add expenditure to the budget we simultaneously seek to add the financing for the expenditure. The way the finances of Cayman are organised, in good times we can wait. When there is a fall off in economic growth it becomes very difficult to sustain the expenditure level.

The second broadest area of restraint relates to staffing. From the figures I provided earlier, more than half of $152 million out of $277 million relates directly to staffing. Therefore, we are seeking to, as a Government and as a public service, to do our best to keep the growth and the levels down—basically hold the line. Rather than adding new people we are doing our best to do more with less people where we can.

When vacancies arise, we are seeking to not fill those vacancies where we can unless it is a serious detriment to public services.

In the second broadest area, mention was made over the last several months of how we need to be as a country, thinking of 2002-2003 expenditure levels on recurrent expenditure as very much the same as we expect to spend in 2001. Even with a major upsurge in economic growth, I would submit that is the way to go. Otherwise, I submit, we will repeat history.

Other short-term measures taken by government related to revenue measures. I explained earlier why government had to introduce revenue measures. Also, it is not a one-off situation, some of the revenue measures presented earlier this year also relate to next year, specifically those relating to financial services, which I think, in the meantime, those fees do not kick in until January 2002, so as not to make those fees retrospective. That is why they do not come in until January 2002. Some $6 million or $7 million relate to that year.

In addition, mention was made of the fiscal advisory group, another joint public/private sector effort to look at the revenue side, not just today but in the future. Part of the terms of reference of that group is to look at the expenditure side as well. There are areas which government provides services for now that in partnership we could provide the same services, I suggest, at either the same cost or lower cost, in order to ease the burdens of the current revenue of the country.

The other area government looked at in the short-term was to focus on ongoing capital projects. The capital development budget for 2001 relates to completing ongoing capital projects. The Minister of Planning alluded to that earlier. In addition, there are some absolutely essential projects, mainly schools and healthcare, which government felt was absolutely needed and could not be put off a further nine months.

There has been a lot of discussion about the medium-term financial strategy and public sector investment programme. The council has been around since the early 1990s. Unfortunately, we have yet to put it in place. However, that is another strong medium term tool we can use to plan the finances over more than one year, that is, over a three year period, and at the same time look at areas where we can stimulate economic growth, be it new or existing. That process is very much ongoing. We expect that at the very next meeting of the Legislative Assembly the Government will be able to present to this House a draft document which will allow Members of this House to have direct input into the process.

The other broad medium term strategy the Government is actively pursuing is the implementation of the financial management initiative (FMI), which has been around for several years. The two main thrusts will be implementation of accrual accounting and our output budgeting. The whole idea here is to increase transparency of what we do, while at the same time increasing levels of accountability to pave the way for further development of civil service management.

In addition, the Government has had, and continues to have discussions with several private sector entities about trying to do things jointly. This is in areas of education, environmental health, and other areas including the Portfolio of Finance and our promotion efforts, seeking to do more, but do it together to ease the pressure on the recurrent revenue of the Island. At the same time stimulate further economic development in new as well as existing areas.

More on the long-term side, Members will note that throughout the D-Plans presented with this Budget, a lot of reference has been made to the Vision 2008 Document. This, I would suggest, is the way the whole budget process needs to go, that we just do not budget or build in a vacuum, but in the context of a broader term strategy which has the support of the people of these Islands.

As for a medium-term strategy, if the money continues into the future, it is hopeful that, by putting in place financial accounting information systems, the public service will be able to do things in a much more efficient and effective way. A lot of the problems are solved when you have the right information at the right time. Unfortunately, the system we have now, which has been around for decades, no longer cuts it. We need to change that system.

The other broad area of a long-term nature is that government is actively pursuing the development of a growth management plan, seeking to set the stage for further economic growth. It is true that these long term approaches, in addition to the medium and short-term correct the imbalances we now face. Finance and development is never easy, no matter what country you live in. In Cayman it is particularly more difficult because our revenue base is limited. For that very reason we need to be thinking of innovative ways of maintaining revenue, providing services, and keeping government small. Thank you.

The Speaker: The question is that a Bill entitled A Bill for a Law to authorise the borrowing of up to $55,473,110 for the Financing of Specified Capital Projects, Capital Acquisition and General Revenue Fund Expenditure be given a second reading. Those in favour please say Aye. Those against, No.

AYES and NOES.

The Speaker: The Ayes have it.

Mr. Lyndon L. Martin: May we have a division please?

The Speaker: Madam Clerk, please call a division.

The Clerk Assistant:

DIVISION NO. 6/01

Ayes: 10

Hon. James M. Ryan
Hon. Samuel Bulgin
Hon. A. Joel Walton
Hon. D. Kurt Tibbetts
Hon. Roy Bodden
Hon. Edna M. Moyle
Capt. A. Eugene Ebanks
Mr. Cline A. Glidden, Jr.:
Mr. Alden M. McLaughlin, Jr.:
Mr. V. Arden McLean

Noes: 4

Mr. Gilbert A. McLean
Mr. Anthony S. Eden
Mrs. J. Y. O'Connor-Connolly
Mr. Lyndon L. Martin

Absentees: 4

Hon. W. McKeever Bush
Hon. Linford A. Pierson
Mr. Rolston M. Anglin
Dr. Frank S. McField

The Speaker: The result of the division is 10 Ayes, 4 Noes, 4 absents.

AGREED BY MAJORITY: THE LOAN BILL 2001 GIVEN A SECOND READING.

The Speaker: The House will now go into Committee to consider a Bill entitled, A Bill For A Law To Authorise The Borrowing of up to $55,473,110 for The Financing of Specified Capital Projects, Capital Acquisition And General Revenue Fund.

HOUSE IN COMMITTEE
COMMITTEE ON BILL

The Chairman: Please be seated. The House is now in Committee. With the leave of the House, may I assume that as usual we should authorise the Second Official Member to correct minor printing errors and such in these Bills?

Would the Clerk state each Bill and read its clauses?

THE LOAN BILL 2001

The Clerk Assistant: The Loan Bill, 2001.

- Clause 1. Short title.
- Clause 2. Power to borrow.
- Clause 3. Appropriation of loan to specified purposes.
- Clause 4. Principal and interest of loan.

The Chairman: The question is that clauses 1 through 4 do stand part of the Bill. Those in favour please say Aye. Those against, No.

AYES.

The Chairman: The Ayes have it.

CLAUSES 1, 2, 3, AND 4 PASSED.

The Clerk Assistant: The Schedule.

The Chairman: The question is that the Schedule do stand part of the Bill. Those in favour please say Aye. Those against, No.

AYES.

The Chairman: The Ayes have it.

SCHEDULE PASSED.

The Clerk Assistant: A Bill For A Law To Authorise The Borrowing of up to $55,473,110 for the financing of specified capital projects, capital acquisition and general revenue fund.

The Chairman: The question is that the Title do stand part of the Bill. Those in favour please say Aye. Those against, No.

AYES.

The Chairman: The Ayes have it.

TITLE PASSED.

The Chairman: That concludes proceedings in committee on a Bill entitled A Bill for a Law to authorise the Borrowing of up to $55,473,110 for the financing of specific capital projects, capital acquisition and general revenue fund. The question is that the Bill be reported to the House. Those in favour please say Aye. Those against, No.

AYES.

The Chairman: The Ayes have it.

AGREED: THE BILL TO BE REPORTED TO THE HOUSE.

HOUSE RESUMED

REPORT ON BILL

The Speaker: Please be seated.

Bills, Reports. The Honourable Temporary Third Official Member responsible for Finance and Economic Development.

THE LOAN BILL 2001

Hon. A. Joel Walton: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I am pleased to report that a Bill entitled, The Loan Bill, 2001 was considered by a committee of the whole House and passed without amendment.

The Speaker: The Bill is accordingly set down for Third Reading.
Bills, Third Reading.

THIRD READING

THE LOAN BILL 2001

The Clerk Assistant: The Loan Bill, 2001.

The Speaker: The Honourable Temporary Third Official Member responsible for Finance and Economic Development.

Hon. A. Joel Walton: I beg to move that a Bill entitled, The Loan Bill 2001, be given a Third Reading and passed.

The Speaker: The question is that a Bill entitled A Bill for a Law to authorise the borrowing of up to $55,473,110 for the financing of specified capital projects, capital acquisition and general revenue fund be given a Third Reading and passed. Those in favour please say Aye. Those against, No.

AYES and one audible No.

The Speaker: The Ayes have it.

Hon. Edna M. Moyle: Can we have a division please?

The Speaker: Madam Clerk, please call a Division.

The Clerk Assistant:

DIVISION NO. 7/01

Ayes: 10

Hon. Samuel Bulgin
Hon. A. Joel Walton
Hon. D. Kurt Tibbetts
Hon. Roy Bodden
Hon. Edna M. Moyle
Mr. Rolston M. Anglin
Capt. A. Eugene Ebanks
Mr. Cline A. Glidden Jr.
Mr. Alden M. McLaughlin, Jr.
Mr. V. Arden McLean

Noes: 2

Mrs. J. Y. O'Connor-Connolly
Mr. Lyndon L. Martin

Absentees: 6

Hon. James M. Ryan
Hon. W. McKeever Bush
Hon. Linford A. Pierson
Dr. Frank S. McField
Mr. Gilbert A. McLean
Mr. Anthony S. Eden

The Speaker: The result of the division is 10 Ayes, 2 Noes, 6 absent. The Bill has accordingly been given a Third Reading and passed.

AGREED BY MAJORITY: THE LOAN BILL 2001
GIVEN A THIRD READING AND PASSED.

The Speaker: I shall entertain a Motion for the adjournment of this House.

ADJOURNMENT

Hon. Edna M. Moyle: Mr. Speaker, I move the adjournment of this Honourable House until tomorrow at 10 am.

The Speaker: The question is that this Honourable House do now adjourn until tomorrow at 10 am. Those in favour, please say Aye. Those against, No.

AYES.

The Speaker: The Ayes have it.

AT 4.05 PM THE HOUSE STOOD ADJOURNED
UNTIL 10 AM THURSDAY, 24 MAY 2001.

OFFICIAL HANSARD REPORT
THURSDAY
24 MAY 2001
10.43 AM
Twenty-fifth Sitting

[Prayers read by the Honourable Temporary Third Official Member responsible for Finance and Economic Development.]

The Speaker: Please be seated.

Proceedings are resumed. Item number 2 on today's Order Paper. Reading by the Speaker of Messages and Announcements.

READING BY THE HONOURABLE
SPEAKER OF MESSAGES
AND ANNOUNCEMENTS

APOLOGIES

The Speaker: I have apologies from the Honourable Second and Third Official Members, and also from the Honourable Minister responsible for the Ministry of Tourism, Environment and Transport. They are all off the Island on business. Also, the Third Elected Member for George Town is off the Island.

Moving on to item number 3 on today's Order Paper- Presentation of Papers and Reports. Before calling upon the Honourable Minister of Planning, I would like to read briefly section 10(1) of the Governor (Vesting of Lands) Law (1998 Revision):

SECTION 10(1) GOVERNOR (VESTING OF LANDS)
LAW (1998 REVISION)

"10. (1) A disposition by the Governor under section 6, or by the Governor in Council under section 9 shall be void unless, prior to the completion of such disposition-

"(a) full details of the land of which it is proposed to dispose, and of the terms of the proposed disposition, have been advertised in a newspaper circulating in the Islands and in the Gazette;

"(b) a report, accompanied by the documents specified in subsection (2), and recommending the proposed disposition has been laid on the Table of the Legislative Assembly for 21 days by the Minister for the time being responsible for Lands; and

"(c) a motion to reject the report has not been made within the period that the report is on the Table of the Legislative Assembly; or

"(d) if a motion as is mentioned in paragraph (c) has been validly made, it has been voted on and negated by the Legislative Assembly."

I would further like to read section 28 (3) (of the Interpretation Law (1995 Revision).

SECTION 28 (3) (OF THE INTERPRETATION
LAW (1995 REVISION)

"The expression "subject to negative resolution" when used in relation to any regulations shall mean that those regulations, as soon as may be after they are made, are to be laid before the Legislative Assembly, and if the Legislative Assembly, within the statutory period [which, I may add, is 21 days] next after any such regulations have been so laid resolves that the regulations be annulled, the regulations shall be void as from the date of the resolution, but without prejudice to the validity of anything done thereafter or to the making of new regulations."

The Honourable Minister for Planning, Communications and Works.

PRESENTATION OF
PAPERS AND REPORTS

GOVERNOR (VESTING OF LANDS) LAW
(1998 REVISION)

REPORT AND RECOMMENDATION ON THE
REQUEST FOR A CROWN GRANT (UNCLAIMED)
OF BLOCK 48E, PARCEL 26, TO MARY FRANCES WILLIAMSON;

GOVERNOR (VESTING OF LANDS) LAW
(1998 REVISION)

REPORT AND RECOMMENDATION ON REQUEST FOR A CROWN GRANT (UNCLAIMED)
OF BLOCK 14D, PARCEL 58, TO CEPHAS S. ROBINSON;

and

GOVERNOR (VESTING OF LANDS) LAW
(1998 REVISION)

REPORT AND RECOMMENDATION ON THE TRANSFER OF BLOCK 4D, PARCEL 463, TO THE CAYMAN ISLANDS MISSION OF SEVENTH DAY ADVENTISTS

Hon. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

I crave your indulgence to lay on the Table three reports that have been prepared in accordance with the requirements of the Governor (Vesting of Lands) Law (1998 Revision).

These reports detail three matters which have been in the works for some time, in fact, the former Minister of Agriculture, Communications, Environment and Natural Resources, had begun preparations to Table these reports during the September 2000 meeting of Parliament, but was ultimately not able to do so.

As required by law, the details of the transfers have been published in the Cayman Islands Gazette and the Caymanian Compass on 28 August, 2000, and 5 September 2000.

Also as required by law, three valuations were carried out on each property. Each valuation report forms part of the overall report and provide an indication of the value of land which the Government now proposes to transfer. One report deals with the transfer of a portion of Crown land in West Bay adjacent to the Cayman Islands Mission of Seventh Day Adventist Church on Batabano Road.

The site to be transferred is block 4D parcel 463, and is the result of a subdivision of Crown property, block 4D parcel 55. The Seventh Day Adventist Church had applied to the previous Government for permission to lease the site for youth activities, namely, to construct a youth hall and a basketball and volleyball court. After considering their request, Executive Council decided to grant the site to the church rather than lease it as requested.

This Government has honoured that prior commitment and therefore the report proposes to transfer block 4D parcel 463 to the Cayman Islands Mission of Seventh Day Adventists.

The valuations on this block and parcel estimate its open market value to be in the region of $16,000 to $18,000 (Cayman Islands Dollars).

In the other two reports, the Government proposes to transfer the title of land as a result of requests for Crown grants on claim. Such requests are for land which was unclaimed at the time of Cadastral and later registered in the name of the Crown as prescribed in the law. In accordance with the legal procedure for claiming such property, the requests were investigated by the Director of Lands and Survey and his report on the results of the investigation, along with evidence supplied by the claimants was then reviewed by the Legal Department and found to be in good order in each case. The requests were then submitted to Executive Council for consideration and were ultimately approved.

One request for Crown grant unclaimed is to Mary Frances Williamson for block 48E parcel 26. The valuation on this property estimate its value to range from $14,000 to $20,000 (Cayman Islands Dollars).

The other request for Crown grant unclaimed is to Cephias S. Robinson for block 14D parcel 58. The valuation on this property estimate its open market value to be in the region of somewhere between $150,000 and $200,000 (Cayman Islands Dollars).

Thank you.

The Speaker: So ordered.

Moving on to report number 4, Cayman Islands Government, 2000 Annual Report of the Central Planning Authority and Development Control Board by the Honourable Minister responsible for the Ministry of Planning, Communications and Works.

CAYMAN ISLANDS GOVERNMENT
2000 ANNUAL REPORT OF THE CENTRAL PLANNING AUTHORITY (CPA)
AND DEVELOPMENT CONTROL BOARD (DCB)

Hon. D. Kurt Tibbetts: I beg to lay on the Table of this Honourable House the Cayman Islands Government—2000 Annual Report of the Central Planning Authority and Development Control Board.

The Speaker: So ordered.

Hon. D. Kurt Tibbetts: I really do not have too much to say on the tabling of this report. The year 2000 was very productive for the Central Planning Authority and approximately 1173 applications were approved by the CPA and DCB in Cayman Brac and Little Cayman combined. This year the Authority addressed many important issues that have tremendous implications for the future wellbeing of these Islands—issues such as beachside setbacks and aesthetics were of considerable concern.

The CPA executive secretary and the department saw several changes in the year 2000. In December, the Director of Planning (of four years) left the Island and Mr. Kenneth Ebanks, formally the Assistant Director of long range planning was appointed as Acting Director of Planning.

Important initiatives were undertaken to review the Islands wetlands, conduct a study of the Islands fill and aggregate supply and to begin implementation of growth management strategies, all of which are ongoing as we speak.

The Department initiated several efforts to improve customer service including the following: hiring additional staff (an Enforcement Officer and Plans Examiner), drafting a land development guide, a new computer tracking system, and production of a web page.

Several positive results of these improvements were seen throughout the year and I think I can confidently say that many others are sure to follow. Applications continue to be processed efficiently throughout the year and additional efforts were made to provide additional staff training and knowledge through educational courses, conferences, and seminars.

The Speaker: Department of Environmental Health (DOE) Alternative Systems Analysis Solid Waste Feasibility Study for Grand Cayman – 31 March 2001, to be laid on the Table by the Honourable Minister responsible for Planning, Communications and Works.

DEPARTMENT OF ENVIRONMENTAL HEALTH ALTERNATIVE SYSTEMS ANALYSIS SOLID WASTE FEASIBILITY STUDY FOR GRAND CAYMAN 31 MARCH 2001

Hon. D. Kurt Tibbetts: I beg to lay on the Table of this Honourable House the report of the Department of Environmental Health Alternative Systems Analysis Solid Waste Feasibility Study for Grand Cayman – 31 March 2001.

The Speaker: So ordered.

Hon. D. Kurt Tibbetts: For over 20 years the George Town landfill has served as the repository for the waste of Grand Cayman. With growth and prosperity in Grand Cayman, the amount of waste generated by residents, business and institutions has grown tremendously—far beyond the expectations of those who placed the first load of garbage in what was then fondly referred to as “the dump.”

Gradually, the landfill has reached the point where full capacity is a looming prospect. Assuming the disposal activity remains within the current active landfill area, and is filled to a maximum height of 50 feet, an estimated two years’ capacity remains.

In preparation for this eventuality, the DOE has prepared an alternative systems analysis for Grand Cayman, which I am tabling at this point in time. This 190-page study is a comprehensive report on the current solid waste situation today, and it speaks to reasonable alternatives for tomorrow.

In the spirit of transparency, I am tabling this report for the benefit of Members of the Legislative Assembly and the country at large in order to promote meaningful dialogue about the future of solid waste management in Grand Cayman.

Many factors must be taken into account in selecting a replacement system. What is the cost of our current waste management system? What will it cost to move towards more environmentally sound disposal methods? Who will provide these services? What level of processing do we advocate prior to disposal? Does a particular technology make more sense for our country? These are but some of the questions we have to ask ourselves and to find solutions for.

This alternative systems analysis presents four systems for our consideration:

- Land filling alone,
- Land filling with windrow composting of yard waste;
- Land filling with in-vessel composting of yard waste and organic waste; and
- Land filling with waste to energy.

You may have noticed along the four systems a common element, that is, the need for a landfill. Regardless of the type or design of any processing technology that we prefer, we are left with a basic fact that there are always going to be materials that cannot be processed or recycled.

Residual waste will always remain at the end of the processing line. Facility downtime due to scheduled maintenance and unscheduled repairs will require also the use of a landfill. The question is not whether a new landfill is required, but how long the new landfill will last.

To site a landfill will not be an easy task. But certainly, it is critical. George Town has hosted the landfill for decades. It is time, I believe, for another district to take its turn. Unlike George Town, however, the new host community will benefit from advances in landfill technology and operation designed to minimise environmental and aesthetic impact. Traffic will be minimised by the transfer of waste from a transfer station, which obviously would remain in George Town, to be constructed at the site of the existing landfill.

The alternative systems analysis is a comprehensive summary of solid waste management systems for present and future. It does not select the system, but gives us the information we need in order to make that decision. It does not include draft legislation, but it identifies the important elements to be included in future solid waste laws and regulations.

New legislation will no doubt have to be adopted in order to promote the selected system and protect any private investment in the provision of solid waste services if private sector providers are utilised.

Time is short. In order to meet the deadline imposed upon us by necessity we must move away from disparaging the current system as a means to justify the need for a better one. That activity, in my opinion, is simply a waste of precious time. We must take the information contained in this study and meet the challenge of deciding how we are going to address this need for future disposal capacity in Grand Cayman.

I am confident that together we can develop a new system—one that takes us to the next level of environmental protection and one that is uniquely suitable to the needs of the Cayman Islands. Thank you.

The Speaker: Traffic (Radar Speedometer) Regulations 2001, to be laid on the Table by the Honourable First Official Member responsible for Internal and External Affairs.

TRAFFIC (RADAR SPEEDOMETER)
REGULATIONS 2001

Hon. James M. Ryan: I beg to lay on the Table of this Honourable House the Traffic (Radar Speedometer) Regulations 2001.

The Speaker: So ordered.

Hon. James M. Ryan: The Traffic Law (Law 24 1991), (1999 Revision) empowers the use of radar devices for checking speed on vehicles. The Traffic (Radar Equipment) Regulations (1999 Revision) names two speed-measuring devices for determining the speed of vehicles.

From time to time equipment becomes obsolete. These devices are no exception. The Traffic (Radar Speedometer) Regulations 2001 will simply allow for the purposes of section 92 of the Traffic Law (1999 Revision) a device designed or adapted for recording the speed of a motor vehicle activated by means of a microwave beam(s) and approved from time to time by the Commissioner for detecting speed of vehicles.

All this small amending regulation will do is allow the Commissioner to change or use a particular type of radar when one becomes obsolete and a new one comes on the market so that each time this happens we do not have to change the regulations. Thank you.

The Speaker: First Report of the Standing House Committee to be laid on the Table by the Chairman the Second Elected Member for Bodden Town.

FIRST REPORT OF THE STANDING HOUSE COMMITTEE

Mr. Gilbert A. McLean: I beg to lay on the Table of this Honourable House the First Report of the Standing House Committee.

The Speaker: So ordered. The Second Elected Member for Bodden Town.

Mr. Gilbert A. McLean: As the matters in the Report affect various activities relating to the House and Members of the House, I think it might be best if I read the Report as it has been laid.

[Reading]

1. INTRODUCTION

The Legislative Assembly appointed the Standing House Committee with the passing on 15 November 2000 of Government Motion No. 2 and resolved that—

“in accordance with provisions of Standing Order 79, this House appoints a Standing House Committee charged with the duty to make recommendations to the House in respect of —

- a) matters affecting the working conditions comfort and facilities for Members during Meetings of the House;
- b) matters affecting the working conditions, comfort and facilities for the staff of the House;

c) The operation and maintenance of the library of the House and the provision of research facilities;

d) The maintenance, upkeep, furnishing and equipment of the Legislative Assembly building;

AND BE IT FURTHER RESOLVED THAT the Standing House Committee shall comprise five Elected Members, one of whom will be elected by the Members of the Committee as Chairman, one as Deputy Chairman;

AND BE IT FURTHER RESOLVED THAT the quorum of the Committee shall be three Members of the Committee including the Chairman and Deputy Chairman.”

The Motion was moved by the Honourable First Official Member responsible for the Portfolio of Internal and External Affairs.

2. MEMBERSHIP OF COMMITTEE

In accordance with the provision of the Motion, the following Members were nominated and appointed by the Legislative Assembly to be the Members of the Committee—

Mr. Gilbert A. McLean
Captain A. Eugene Ebanks
Mr. Lyndon L. Martin
Dr. Frank S. McField
Mrs. Julianna Y. O'Connor Connolly J.P.

At the Committee's first meeting, Mr. Gilbert McLean was elected Chairman and Captain Eugene Ebanks, Deputy Chairman of the Committee.

3. MEETINGS

The Committee has thus far held four meetings, viz —

- (i) 24 January 2001
- (ii) 26 January 2001
- (iii) 6 March 2001; and
- (iv) 10 April 2001, when the Committee considered this Report.

4. RECOMMENDATIONS

The Committee wishes to note and recommend the following —

(a) Chamber microphones.

The Committee notes that various microphones in the Chamber are malfunctioning and recommends that they be repaired as expeditiously as possible.

The Committee further recommends:

- (i) that quotations be sought for the installation of a wireless microphone system for use on special occasions, such as presentations;
  - (ii) that a second microphone be installed on the Clerk's dais to improve efficiency during Committee Stage proceedings.
- (b) Speakers
The Committee recommends that speakers with volume control adjustments be replaced in all rooms and that the quality output of the speakers in the Chamber be examined.
- (c) Smoking
The Committee notes that it has been a long-standing policy that all Government buildings, including the Legislative Assembly, are non-smoking environments. The Committee therefore recommends that smoking in the Legislative Assembly Building be prohibited.
- (d) Building structure
The Committee notes that the outside footing of the Legislative Assembly Building is in a state of dilapidation and strongly recommends that the Public Works Department be requested to submit a report to this Committee on the structural condition of the footing and undertake repair work as soon as possible.
- (e) Use of Committee and Common Rooms
For security purposes, the Committee recommends that the doors of both the Committee and Common Rooms remain closed at all times and that the lights in these rooms remain off when not in use.
- (f) Bathroom fixtures.
The Committee recommends that the Public Works Department be requested to examine and repair fixtures in all bathroom facilities.
- (g) Members' Lockers.
The Committee recommends that the locks on Members' lockers be changed to enable Members to utilize them.
- (h) Telephone lines
The Committee recommends that an installation technician repair all telephone lines in the building that are in need of attention.
- (i) District Offices for Members of the Legislative Assembly
The Committee recommends that all matters affecting District Offices for Members of the Legislative Assembly be included under the Terms of Reference of the House Committee.
- (j) Housekeeping
The Committee is aware of noxious odours permeating the building when cooking takes place and recommends that the Clerk of the House requests an examination of the exhaust system in the kitchen.
- (k) New Recording Equipment for the Legislative Department
After comprehensive consultation with the Director and Deputy Director of Computer Services, the Director of Broadcasting, Radio Cayman, and the Legislative Assembly's audio technician the Committee recommends that the recording and audio equipment, be replaced and that the Clerk of the Legislative Assembly seek technical advice from the above named persons in determining the most suitable equipment.
- (l) Parking of Strangers' vehicles
The Committee is aware of the lack of security around the precincts of the building as well as the lack of parking accommodation for the Legislative Assembly and recommends that vehicles, other than those of Members of the Legislative Assembly and prescribed Officers of the Department, should park outside of the precincts of the Legislative Assembly building. As parking space is also limited in town, the Committee recommends that vehicles used by the media be allowed to park in designated places along the sidewalk which passes in front of the Legislative Assembly building during House meetings. Each authorised vehicle should be required to display on the windshield a Pass prescribed by the Department for this purpose.
- (m) Security Unit
The Committee recommends that a proper security section, under the Office of the Serjeant-at-Arm, be established for the purpose of:
- monitoring security cameras;
  - monitoring the precincts, both inside and outside the Building at all times – and, more specifically when Parliament and Committees sit; and
  - inspection of cameras, telephones and other technology being brought into the Building; and that security cameras be placed strategically to cover the building and precincts.
- (n) Security Cameras
In regard to security cameras for the building and its precincts, the Committee recommends that quotations be sought and submitted for the Committee's consideration in regard to cameras being installed –

- in the Chamber above the entrance door
- to monitor the stairwell
- in the parking lot; and
- other strategic places as deemed necessary.

This should be done in conjunction with recommendation (r) below.

(o) Development of a Web Site

The Committee held consultations with the Director and Deputy Director of Computer Services concerning the possibility of developing a website for the Legislative Assembly. Consequently, the Committee recommends that Computer Services be requested to develop the first stage of a website for the Legislative Assembly and recommends that the Clerk of the House report on the development of same to the Committee. The Committee notes that this is a no-cost item that Computer Services will provide.

(p) Use of electronic notepads in the Press boxes

Further to the Director of Computer Services providing the Committee with information on electronic notepads the Committee considered the possibility of the Department procuring three portable computers for rent to the Press, the benefit being that the laptops would contain only Government approved software and hardware options to ensure that the privacy and security concerns of the Legislature are addressed. The Director indicated that a 'break even' may not be possible and, further, that Press personnel may be more familiar with their own equipment.

The Committee expressed the view that laptops are being continually updated and that, if Government could place laptops in the Press boxes, keeping them current with new technology could be an ongoing expense.

The Committee agreed that it would meet at a convenient date and time in the future with representatives of the Press to take input from them on this matter.

In the meantime, the Committee recommends the use of electronic notepads by media representatives in the Press Boxes but that the notepads be restricted to

- no capability of recording voice or video
- no connection to the Internet
- no capability of wireless transmission, and subject to the Honourable Speaker in the House putting in place appropriate guidelines for any infringement of the above restrictions.

(q) Purchase of computer monitor and Printer for use by Members of the Legislative Assembly.

The Committee has been made to understand the computer provided in the Common room for use by Members is on loan from the Computer Services Department and one of its purposes is to allow Members access to the Internet. The Committee recommends that a quotation for a monitor, computer and printer be obtained from Computer Services and purchased this year. The Committee also notes that it will be necessary for Computer Services to create user names for Members to allow them access to the system and Internet.

(r) Installation of permanent wiring and robotic television cameras for the Chamber

Further to an inquiry from Cayman 27 (CITN) about the possibility of installing permanent camera connections for live coverage of the Legislative proceedings, the Committee met Messrs Alpert and Whitley of CITN together with other interested technical parties, that is, Mr. Loxley Banks, Director of Broadcasting, Mr. Loxley Gould, recording technician for the Department, Mr Gilbert McLaughlin, Director of Computer Services and Wesley Howell, Deputy Director of Computer Services. Further to in-depth discussion with all parties the Committee recommends:

- That three modern remote TV cameras be installed in the Chamber. One on the East and West walls and one above the entrance to the Chamber.
- That permanent wiring and outlets on the outside of the building be installed to provide TV connection hook-ups for any TV providers as approved and recommended to this Honourable House by the House Committee.

The Committee has been provided with a costing for equipment and labour from CITN for the project and recommends that the Government, in consultation with the House Committee and with the advice of computer Services and Government's other relevant technical advisors seek other costings for this project as soon as possible. Ultimately, the Legislative Department will need the services of a part-time technician to control the cameras and lines in the building during meetings of the Legislative Assembly.

(s) Medium term financial strategy 2001-2003

The Committee considered the needs of the LA over the ensuing years 2001-2003. (I may add here, Mr Speaker that this was a request which came from Government that information should be provided for the plan which was being looked at by Government over a three year period.)

The Committee first considered-

The Major issues currently facing the sector, that is-

- lack of a modern library/ research facility
- lack of security
- lack of civic knowledge concerning the Legislative Assembly, its functions and its Members
- lack of communications to local and international communities
- lack of space in the Legislative Assembly building

The Committee recommends the following Goals for the sector for the next 3 years -

- Implementation of a Library/Research unit within the Department and electronic storage of all records to be centralised under this Unit.
- Implementation of a comprehensive internal security unit for the Legislative Assembly.
- Implementation of an educational programme in the schools' system and a public relations programme catered to educating the general public.
- Creation of a web-site for the Legislative Assembly.
- Computerisation of District Offices for Members of the Legislative Assembly.

The Committee recommends the following Medium Term objectives, strategies and plans for the period 2001- 2003.

Year 2001:

- (i) Determine cost/, manpower /, space for new Library/ Research unit.
- (ii) Determine design and cost of website (the Committee has been advised that this project can be undertaken at no cost).
- (iii) Determine cost for computerising District Offices for Members of the Legislative Assembly and implement.
- (iv) Review computerised technology for recording and transcribing proceedings of Parliament and determine costs.
- (v) Prepare needs' assessment for space for the Legislative Assembly Building and its precincts.

Year 2002:

- Subject to findings in (i) above, advertise post of Chief Librarian / Hansard Editor.
- Commence scanning/ storage/ cataloguing for old Hansard electronically.
- Commence re-conditioning and cataloguing of audiotapes.
- Commence cataloguing of vellum and repeal legislation and secure safe storage.

- Subject to e-commerce being instituted formally by the Government, implement sale of laws online.
- Prepare the necessary input for establishment of a web site.
- Implement item (iv) above.

Year 2003

Achieve and review objectives

Possible impacts on other sectors

The Committee is of the view that the purchase of Parliamentary documents –laws on-line will create a positive impact for both the public and private sectors. The sale of laws to overseas clients will have a direct, positive impact on the economy of the Cayman Islands by enhancing our services on-line as an international financial centre.

The constraints/risks in realizing the medium term plan are -

- ❖ Office space

The Committee is greatly concerned in with regard to the inadequate office space for the current operations of Parliament. The work of Parliament has increased significantly since 1972. The Department is clearly in need of space to facilitate the increased demand for its services. Some areas in need of space are -

- A modern, high-tech library / research Hansard unit.
- Space to service the procedural operations of Parliament
- Facilities for a proper security unit.
- Parking space
- Facilities for the working operations of Members.

It is the view of the Committee that the design of the existing building is severely limited for any significant extension. The Committee recommends that the Government seriously considers the acquisition of additional land upon which to extend the facilities of Parliament. The Committee also recommends that, in addition to the acquisition of land for the Legislature, and, as a possible alternative, it is time to consider the pros and cons of a new multi-storey building being constructed over the existing one – designed, ultimately, to encompass the present.

Other areas of constraint risks are –

- ❖ Manpower
- ❖ Time-table for the implementation of E-commerce
- ❖ Costs

(t) Seating Arrangement in the Chamber

At the recent Local Commonwealth Parliamentary Association Seminar on Parliamentary Procedure and Practice held 19 through 21 February 2001, resource speaker Mr. George Brancker CBE, LL.B. and others spoke of many practices and procedures of the British Parliament and of Parliaments and Legislatures throughout the Commonwealth in respect of seating arrangements for Members in Parliament.

There is, it was explained, a seating convention observed in parliaments throughout the Commonwealth for the Government, the Back Bench, and the Opposition Members, as well as the significance of the placement of the Mace in the Chamber in relation to seating. The Committee recommends that the Legislative Assembly should move to conform to the historical and long-standing Parliamentary convention in this regard. The basic change would be to a seating arrangement by Legislative function rather than by district seating arrangement. The Committee recommends that discussion on this arrangement be held with Honourable the Ministers and Elected Members at the earliest possible date.

5. REPORT TO THE HOUSE

The Committee agrees that the Report be the Report of the Standing House Committee to this Honourable House and, in accordance with the provisions of Standing Order 74(5), I, the Chairman, do move that this the Honourable House adopt the recommendations of the Committee contained in this Report.

[End of reading of Report]

Mr. Gilbert A. McLean: It is signed by all five members of the Committee.

The Speaker: Is it your intention to move a motion for the acceptance of this report?

MOTION TO ADOPT RECOMMENDATIONS

Mr. Gilbert A. McLean: Yes, Mr Speaker.

In accordance with the provisions of Standing Order 74(5), I move that the recommendations contained in the Report be adopted by this Honourable House.

The Speaker: I shall now put the question that the recommendations contained in the Report be adopted by this Honourable House.

The Second Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. Alden M. McLaughlin, Jr.: Mr. Speaker, may I ask for a short suspension to consult the Chairman of the Committee on an item in the Report?

The Speaker: We shall suspend proceedings for five minutes, but I ask members to please remain in their seats in order to not lose too much time.

[At the wish of the House, the Honourable Speaker suspended proceedings until 1.45 pm].

PROCEEDINGS SUSPENDED AT 11.32 AM

PROCEEDINGS RESUMED AT 2.13 PM

The Speaker: Please be seated.

Continuation of the Report of the Standing House Committee.

The Second Elected Member for Bodden Town.

Mr. Gilbert A. McLean: Thank you.

As Members are aware, you allowed a suspension for certain consultation on this report. I am to report to you that, further to consultation with Honourable Members it has been agreed that paragraph 4(i) of the First Report of the Standing House Committee be deleted.

I, therefore, wish to lay on the Table of this Honourable House the Report with exclusion of Paragraph 4(i) and now move in accordance with Standing Order 74(5) that the recommendations contained in the Report be adopted.

The Speaker: Do you have a seconder?

The Third Elected Member for West Bay.

Capt. A. Eugene Ebanks: I beg to second that motion.

The Speaker: The Report of the Standing House Committee has been duly moved and seconded. I shall now put the question. Those in favour please say Aye. Those against, No.

AYES.

The Speaker: The Ayes have it.

AGREED: RECOMMENDATIONS CONTAINED IN THE FIRST REPORT OF THE STANDING HOUSE COMMITTEE ADOPTED.

The Speaker: Moving on to Government Business, Motions. Government Motion No. 1/01, Establishment of National Youth Commission and Committee of Inquiry into the Causes of Social Breakdown and Violence among Youth in the Cayman Islands.

The Second Elected Member for West Bay.

GOVERNMENT BUSINESS

MOTIONS

GOVERNMENT MOTION NO. 1

ESTABLISHMENT OF NATIONAL YOUTH COMMISSION AND COMMITTEE OF INQUIRY INTO THE CAUSES OF SOCIAL BREAKDOWN AND VIOLENCE AMONG YOUTH IN THE CAYMAN ISLANDS

(Continuation of debate thereon)

Mr. Rolston M. Anglin: Thank you.

The debate on this Motion started some two months ago, so we have had a considerable break since that time. However, there were a couple of pressing points that I wanted to share.

As the Team of Better Balance campaigned, we did so on the basis that we would be efficient in the use of our time here in this Legislative Assembly.

The Speaker: I thank you!

Mr. Rolston M. Anglin: The Deputy Clerk informed me that I had gone for one hour so far. So, I will be brief in my comments as I traditionally am—

[Members' interjections]

Mr. Rolston M. Anglin: And "brief", of course, is relatively speaking!

[Members' interjections]

Mr. Rolston M. Anglin: We believe in efficiency on the Back Bench, and a number of members have passed on to me a couple of points they wished to raise, however, they did not feel it was necessary to actually get up and contribute because they supported the substantive motion, including Members of the Opposition.

I want to bring a couple of matters to the attention of Honourable Members and the wider community simply because I think they are of grave importance when looking at the matter of youth violence in our community.

One only needs to go to recent editions of the Caymanian Compass, namely, Friday, 18 May and Wednesday, 23 May, to see that this issue is on everyone's mind.

There is an article on page 6 of the 18 May Caymanian Compass entitled, "Call for National Response to Youth Crisis." The article outlines an address by the Hon. Chief Justice, Mr. Anthony Smellie, to members and guests of the Justices of the Peace Association's Annual General Meeting ( AGM ). If you will indulge me, I would like to read one short area of his address, under the section of parental control. I quote:

"Certainly, a primary influence must be the changes in family structures and family life and their most direct result—the breakdown in parental control. This cause itself has many causes: the increasing number of broken marriages, the lack of parental skills and insufficient attention to the care, control and discipline of children, the change in domestic priorities from the focus on the family to the focus on material wellbeing and occupational advancement, the increasing distance and indifference of our neighbors who were once encouraged to, and did assume a much more caring and supportive avuncular role and perhaps most lamentable of all, the increasing pressures upon single parents, especially single mothers which keep them away from their children simply in order to earn a living."

I am of the firm view that as a community we must address this issue at the root cause so that we can try to apply preventative measures. Of course, our approach will have to be holistic. There will inevitably be young persons who fall through the proverbial cracks. As we look around today we have many young people in dire need of assistance. So, I am not saying that we do not need to approach things from that level, that is, in terms of having a youth remand centre and other things outlined over the last few weeks in the Throne Speech and Budget Address.

However, I have long felt that in our Island as outlined by the Hon. Chief Justice, there have been certain matters that we have known about but, for whatever reason, people do not address them in their own lives. To complicate the matter, I go back to the comments made by the Hon. Chief Justice where he spoke about the "increasing distance and indifference of our neighbours . . ." That can be taken to not just mean physical neighbours. This indifference has caused us to not hold each other in our community accountable. We almost seem content to talk about someone else's child without being man or woman enough to talk to the adult themselves. I would submit that this not only happens among neighbours but among families.

I find it rather ironic that we just had an election where accountability was such an important matter- it was high on everyone's agenda. But accountability has to be the order of the day within all sectors of this community. We are a small community, yet, socially we have fallen so far so fast. We are now scrambling to try to come up with solutions, social policies and ideals as to how we will interact with each other in an acceptable fashion.

As I look at the comments of the Honourable Chief Justice, I also see a matter that I firmly believe is at the very core of this issue and, that is, the control and discipline of our children. Let me state categorically for the record that when I speak of discipline I am not necessarily advocating physical punishment. I am not saying there is anything wrong with physical punishment. I certainly was physically punished when I was growing up, and it helped to mould and shape me. However, as soon as the word "discipline" is mentioned in today's world, all of a sudden you are in trouble because the next claim is "physical abuse", "child abuse" and all that sort of nonsense.

If we are going to continue as an undisciplined, anything-goes-society, then we must accept that the current social state will inevitably be a byproduct. If we do not have parental control and discipline within our homes, I respectfully submit that we will forever be throwing millions and millions of dollars on youth programmes and youth remand centres simply because the children coming out of those homes will be undisciplined and will cause a lot of trouble within our community.

Just to update everyone, I came into possession of the rough estimates of juvenile crime – not broken down, just raw juvenile crime figures. Between 1999 and 2000, there was a 29% increase in male juvenile crime, and a 54% increase in female juvenile crime. These are offences for which juveniles have been arrested and charged.

I then looked at the Caymanian Compass, dated 23 May 2001, on a continuation of the coverage of the AGM of the Justices of the Peace. I looked at some of the comments made by the outgoing president of the Association, and I quote: "Cayman is in a state of crisis because the future men and women of our country are in crisis."

From discussions I have had with the Backbench and the Government Bench we all accept and recognise that we are indeed in the midst of the crisis. No one is under any false illusions that the crisis is "coming"—the crisis is here and we must act now!

We have bragged over the years of being a God-fearing people here in Cayman. I would just like to remind us that when the Chief Justice said that control and discipline of children was a contributory factor to the breakdown in parental control, I draw reference to the Bible, for this is where our source of belief as a Christian community comes from. There are numerous places throughout that great Book that tell us that discipline must be a part of our lives.

In Proverbs 19:18 "Discipline your children while there is hope; do not set your heart or their heart on destruction."

Hebrews 12:5-7 says, ". . . My child, do not regard lightly the discipline of the Lord or lose your heart when you are punished by Him, for the Lord disciplines those he loves, and chastises every child whom he accepts. Endure trials for the sake of discipline. God is treating you as children. For what child is there whom a parent does not discipline?"

So, when I advocate discipline, I do not merely advocate it because someone told me so; I advocate it because it is a principle enshrined within the Holy Bible. If there is any message on this issue that I wish to send out to my colleagues in this House and my fellow citizens in this community, it is to live a disciplined life. We cannot expect to live an 'undisciplined, anything-goes', life and expect to have positive results. That is not feasible. There is no one easier to fool than one's self.

A lot of times parents find it hard to identify with their children. However, it is every parent's duty to keep up with and monitor the activities of their children, including what they watch on television, and listen to on radio. I am certain that a lot of parents in this country would be shocked if they took the time to see what their children were watching and heard what they were listening to. If you were to listen to some of the lyrics of the rap songs that are part of pop culture and which are readily available . . . in fact it came to my attention that an establishment holding itself out as a teen disco, plays such music.

Of course, I am treading on dangerous ground because those who promote an "anything-goes" society quickly castigate people like me by saying, "it is the child's right to listen to what he wants to". Well, I respectfully submit that we need to do some serious soul-searching in this community; we need to be willing to admit to ourselves that sometimes what is not popular is the right thing to do. The Bible tells us to discipline our children. We as adults must hold each other accountable; we must go down the road of living a disciplined life.

In the Friday Caymanian Compass, page A16, you will see a group of teenagers performing at a local beauty pageant. You will see a group called "Ghettofabulous." I wonder if people realise what the word "ghetto" means. I wonder if people really think about what their children are glorifying.

We want everything in Cayman. We want to live life as we see fit; but then have perfect children too. That is craziness! Unless the adults in this community are willing to say enough is enough, then God be with us.

Issues have been bandied around for many years, such as curfews and censorship. But that is all that happens—they get bandied around. It is time for this community to do some soul-searching and decide what it is we want out of life. What do we collectively want at the end of the day?

We can look back over the last 10 to 15 years and see the results—juvenile crime on the rise; single parenthood on the rise; domestic abuse on the rise. If that is what we want, then we do not need to change a thing. We can take this motion, reject it and just live on as we have been living but if it is something more wholesome that we want out of life, then we must change our ways; we must change the way we all live and I include myself in that. There was only one perfect one to grace the face of this earth, so we are all included.

Do we want censorship in teen nightclubs? Do we want censorship in record shops? Are we willing to accept foul, degrading music played on the radio, in teen discos, and sold in the record shops? Do we want curfews? What do we want?

As a people, our attention span seems to be so short. An issue will arise; a teen will kill another teen and everybody is all impassioned about it for about six to seven days. Memories fade and everybody goes back to business as usual and nothing is heard again until it happens again.

I am very disappointed when I hear people so quickly stop talking about the crisis we have with our young people. What are we going to do about it? People should be phoning their legislators and representatives. The people should be calling neighbourhood meetings and coming up with common ground positions and submitting them in writing but we do not want to work. We want everything to be spoon-fed to us. We also want all these problems to quickly disappear. They are not going to disappear. They are only going to get worse unless adults in this community take stock of their own lives. We also like to blame our little community, so it is much easier to say it is all Government's fault and not anyone else's.

We must look at ourselves in the mirror and be truthful and honest. We must acknowledge that unless you are being a part of the solution, unless you are being in some way active, then you must be a part of the problem.

I call on the church community in this Island . . . you know, going to church on prayer meeting night, and going to church on Sunday morning, getting up, reading a scripture and feeling good, listening to an impassioned sermon . . . that is not the role of the church according to the Bible. I am no biblical scholar. but one just needs to read the book of Acts and read about the life that Paul lived, and see what God has ordained for anyone who dares to call himself a Christian.

I think, per capita, we have more churches in this Island than probably anywhere else in the world. Yet, look at the moral state. Look at the moral fabric of this Island. We must be willing to put some effort and not simply throw our hands in the air and say 'Well, you're the MLAs we sent you there to fix all of our problems.' My God, if it were only that easy, what a beautiful Island we would have!

My colleague, the Elected Member for East End, also shared some very insightful information with me. It was taken from the website of the American Psychological Association (APA). I myself have often been a critic of psychologists simply because they seem to not want to talk about discipline. Since discipline is such a heavy part of the Bible, I find it difficult to support a lot of their positions. However, there is some insightful and critical information to be gleaned from this Association.

They start off by asking the question "Are some children prone to violence?"

And they answer it by saying, "There is no gene for violence. Violence is a learned behaviour and is often learned in the home or the community from parents, family members or friends."

Let us start looking at ourselves in the mirror. Let us stop blaming others and Government for all life's problems.

They then go on to talk about gang violence in the American setting. They say that "only a small percentage of youth join delinquent gangs and relatively few gang members engage in violence." That is in the American setting. "Nonetheless, in three out of four cases of murder and assault committed by youth, the perpetrators are likely to be gang members."

They then go on to talk about TV. "Does TV really intensify violent behaviour?"

"After review of hundreds of research findings, three major national studies have concluded that heavy exposure to televised violence is one of the significant causes of violence in society."

I think it is fair to say that we receive the same TV that the Americans receive. So this is very relevant to the Cayman context. And the three reports were the Surgeon General's Commissioned Report 1972, the National Institute of Mental Health (Ten year follow-up 1982), and the Report of the American Psychological Association's Task Force on Television in Society in 1992. So this gleans some 20 years of research for them to come to this position.

They then go on to say that "viewing violence on the screen has the following negative effects: it increases the viewer's fear of becoming a victim of violence with the resulted increase in self-protective behaviours and increased mistrust of others." What a way to live your life.

"It desensitises the view to violence resulting in a callous attitude toward violence directed at others and a decreased likelihood of taking action to help a victim of violence."

Point 3, "It increases the viewer's appetite for becoming involved with violence. It often demonstrates how desirable commodities can be obtained through the act of aggression and violence."

And finally, they say, "Sexual violence in X and R rated video tapes widely available to teenagers have also been shown to cause an increase in male aggression against females."

And it is fair to say that domestic violence is one of the biggest problems in our society. And, since violence is a learned behaviour, if a child sees his mother or father, more predominately his father hitting on his mother, what else are we to expect but to produce violent children. It is a vicious cycle.

They then go on to ask, "Where do we go from here?"

"The process by which violence is taught is circular: it begins in the family, expanding through culture of the larger society in which a child grows and matures; and then again is reinforced or discouraged in the family."

“When parents demean and strike each other, or their children, then children are encouraged to be bullies or fight back on the playground. And when they have easy access to real or toy guns and other weapons, violence is being taught.

“When violence and sexual aggression is combined in the media in song lyrics, in multimedia video computer games, and in vernacular, the message of violence, including sexual assault, is reinforced.”

They then have a quote from their organisation, “Rather than waiting until violence has been learned and practised, and then devoting increased resources to hiring policemen, building more prisons and sentencing three time offenders to life imprisonment, it would be more effective to redirect the resources to early violence prevention programmes, particularly for young children and adolescents.”

That has to be part and parcel of our approach.

They say that the following matters need to be taught to children, “problem-solving, stress management, assertiveness, anger control and impulse control.”

“Parent training and support through school based programmes parent mentoring and support programmes, individual and family counselling and therapy and community based programmes appear to work best.”

This reinforces my call to the people of this community to get involved in the lives of young people. We cannot sit idly by and say ‘Oh, look at this one child, he bad, eh?’ Are we going to wait until one night he climbs through our bedroom window and does something bad to us or a family member? Or are we going to stand up and be a part of the solution? We must be involved in the lives of our young people if we expect to reverse and stop this trend and start producing wholesome, well-adjusted young people.

I end by quoting from the APA, “Youth violence prevention and intervention programmes must: 1) start as early as possible; 2) educate parents and other caregivers in prevention strategies, teaching parents effective non-violent coping skills is critical to any intervention programme.” And I stress non-violent coping skills because the discipline that the Bible speaks of and demands of us is non-violent.

For parents to have a disciplined environment in their household there must be no violence. However, that does not mean that parents should not chastise their child for behaviour they wish to correct. I certainly had it in my time, and it taught me valuable lessons in life that I hold fast to this very day.

It is encouraging that every Member of this Honourable House is in full support of this Motion and in full support of Government looking for ways and means. However, I call on all members of this community, particularly of the church community, to recognise that being truly involved in the lives of young people within our families, and our communities is critical—critical!—if we are going to get ourselves out of this crisis and reverse the trend.

I am frightened of what these Islands are rapidly becoming. I would like to respectfully submit to this Honourable House and the entire Caymanian community that if we do not stand up now; if we do not decide to have a zero tolerance approach to crime and violence; if we are not going to embrace our young people, trust them, incorporate them in the decision-making process within the family and teach them to be responsible adults, then we might as well not sit here and talk about this issue. It takes every single person in this community to work hand-in-hand with this problem.

No Government can legislate morality or go into the homes where children are reared and raise the child for the parent. I encourage every citizen to go to child-raising classes, parenting classes, buy parenting video and audio tapes. There are numerous Christian psychologists who make a living out of this and teach valuable lessons. I can think of Dr. James Dobbson and his focus on the family ministry. I commend it to every parent-to-be, to listen and watch these videos. He has videos on the strong-willed child, child discipline.

My wife and I started watching these some three years ago because we wanted to prepare ourselves as much as humanly possible for the lifetime that awaited us, if God so permitted us, of parenthood. We cannot simply say we will be able to adequately raise our children. We all need help. If it were so simple, we would not be having the problems we have today.

Might I also add that these problems are not limited to any socio-economic group, race or religion; it is widespread. It is endemic. It all comes from the fact that we as a community have become an undisciplined, anything-goes society. Unless we are willing to change it within ourselves, we cannot expect it to change within the children we produce.

Discipline needs to pervade all areas of this society. It was very disheartening during an official visit to Northward by the entire House, the place that is supposed to be rehabilitating those who have committed some anti-social behaviour and locked away by the powers vested in the court by the community, and yet it is so undisciplined there! In fact, some prisoners have their pants cut off. Some have hair so high they cannot put a cap on. Some have earrings. It is a loose, undisciplined environment—the very mirror of the society that locked them away. It is no wonder we have such a high rate of recidivism. We must have discipline throughout our society. We must have it in our schools, our homes, our prisons, and any youth remand centre we build. Building a centre will not solve any problem. People seem to think that.

I hear so many people say that we need a remand centre. The centre is but a building. We need more discipline within all of our lives, within our society, and we need to get away from this loose, anything-goes approach if we are to effect positive change.

I would like to thank all Honourable Members who voiced their support, because I am going to be a member of this committee. It is going to be formed legally once we have taken the vote, and I might also add that the Committee did not just sit idly by since March until now. We met informally doing some research and groundwork, and a lot of work has been put in. We have met biweekly for the last four weeks.

I thank you, Mr. Speaker and all Honourable Members and I reiterate that if you are not being a part of the solution, I respectfully submit you are part of the problem.

The Speaker: Does any other Member wish to speak? (Pause) Last call. If no other Member wishes to speak, does the Mover wish to exercise her right of reply?

The Honourable Minister responsible for Community Development, Women's Affairs, Youth and Sports.

Hon. Edna M. Moyle: Thank you.

I will be very brief. I just want to thank all Honourable Members of this Legislative Assembly for giving support to this most important Motion.

I am extremely pleased that all Members of the Legislative Assembly are committed to us finding reasons and solutions to youth violence in these Islands. I have every confidence that the members appointed to this Commission of Inquiry committee will achieve what they are being charged to do, that is,

1. to investigate the incidents of youth violence and the social breakdown among Caymanian youth;
2. to inquire into the causes of youth violence in the Cayman Islands;
3. to identify those issues and concerns which affect what appears to be disenchantment and alienation among some young persons; and
4. to make recommendations as to ways and means of combating or countering youth violence in the Cayman Islands.

I look forward to the report of this committee with recommendations for us to deal with the problem and for Government and Members of this Legislative Assembly to put into action so that we as responsible people can change the future for the youth of the Cayman Islands.

I join hands with the Second Elected Member for West Bay when he appeals to all members of the community to come on board and be counted so that we can deal with this issue of youth violence. As he said, youth violence affects no particular race, group, religion, or social standing; it affects us all. Maybe we have children and were able to raise them without incident. But it is our responsibility to do for every youth in these Islands whatever Government can do.

With those few words, I thank all Honourable Members, even though this Motion came here on 20 March and is only coming to completion today, for their support. I look forward to the committee's report.

The Speaker: I shall now put the question on Government Motion No. 1/01, Establishment of National Youth Commission and Committee of Inquiry into the Causes of Social Breakdown and Violence among Youth in the Cayman Islands. Those in favour please say Aye. Those against, No.

AYES.

The Speaker: The Ayes have it.

AGREED: GOVERNMENT MOTION NO. 1 PASSED.

The Speaker: Is it the wish of Honourable Members that we move on?

Hon. D. Kurt Tibbetts: I think that all Honourable Members have agreed to withdraw the Private Members' Motions so they can be put on the Order Paper for the June meeting. But I think that procedurally they each have to be withdrawn.

The Speaker: That is correct.

Hon. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Perhaps if that could be done now, then we could take the adjournment and resume tomorrow. If that is okay with you, Sir.

The Speaker: That is fine with me.

Moving on to item 5, Other Business, Private Members' Motions. Private Member's Motion No. 3/01 Review of the Labour Law.

The Second Elected Member for West Bay.

OTHER BUSINESS

PRIVATE MEMBERS' MOTIONS

PRIVATE MEMBER'S MOTION NO. 3/01

REVIEW OF THE LABOUR LAW

Withdrawn

Mr. Rolston M. Anglin: In accordance with the provisions of Standing Order 24(14) I wish to withdraw the Private Member's Motion standing in my name to be set down in the June meeting of this Legislative Assembly.

Mr. Cline A. Glidden, Jr.: I second the motion.

The Speaker: I shall put the question that Private Member's Motion No. 3/01 be withdrawn to be placed on the Order Paper of the next meeting in June, 2001. Those in favour please say Aye. Those against, No.

AYES.

The Speaker: The Ayes have it.

AGREED: PRIVATE MEMBER'S MOTION NO. 3/01 WITHDRAWN TO BE PLACED ON THE ORDER PAPER OF THE NEXT MEETING IN JUNE 2001.

The Speaker: Moving on to Private Member's Motion No. 5/01. The Fourth Elected Member for West Bay.

PRIVATE MEMBER'S MOTION NO. 5/01

REVIEW OF GOVERNMENT GUARANTEED HOME MORTGAGE SCHEME

Withdrawn

Mr. Cline A. Glidden, Jr.: In accordance with the provisions of Standing Order 24(14) I wish to withdraw the Private Member's Motion standing in my name to be set down in the June meeting of this Legislative Assembly.

Mr. Lyndon L. Martin: I second the motion.

The Speaker: I shall put the question that Private Member's Motion No. 5/01 be withdrawn and placed on the Order Paper of the next meeting in June, 2001. Those in favour please say Aye. Those against, No.

AYES.

The Speaker: The Ayes have it.

AGREED: PRIVATE MEMBER'S MOTION NO. 5/01 WITHDRAWN TO BE PLACED ON THE ORDER PAPER OF THE NEXT MEETING IN JUNE 2001.

The Speaker: Moving on to Private Member's Motion No. 9/01.

PRIVATE MEMBER'S MOTION NO. 9/01

SELECT COMMITTEE TO REVIEW THE HEALTH INSURANCE LAW

Withdrawn

Mr. Gilbert A. McLean: In accordance with the provisions of Standing Order 24(14) I wish to withdraw the Private Member's Motion standing in my name to be set down in the June meeting of this Legislative Assembly.

Mr. Lyndon L. Martin: I second the motion.

The Speaker: I shall put the question that Private Member's Motion No. 9/01 be withdrawn and placed on the Order Paper of the next meeting in June, 2001. Those in favour please say Aye. Those against, No.

AYES.

The Speaker: The Ayes have it.

AGREED: PRIVATE MEMBER'S MOTION NO. 9/01 WITHDRAWN TO BE PLACED ON THE ORDER PAPER OF THE NEXT MEETING IN JUNE 2001.

The Speaker: Private Member's Motion No. 12/01.

PRIVATE MEMBER'S MOTION NO. 12/01

PUBLIC DECENCY LEGISLATION

Withdrawn

Mr. Alden M. McLaughlin, Jr.: In accordance with the provisions of Standing Order 24(14) I wish to withdraw the Private Member's Motion standing in my name to be set down in the June meeting of this Legislative Assembly.

Mr. V. Arden McLean: I second the motion.

The Speaker: I shall put the question that Private Member's Motion No. 12/01 be withdrawn and placed on the Order Paper of the next meeting in June, 2001. Those in favour please say Aye. Those against, No.

AYES.

The Speaker: The Ayes have it.

AGREED: PRIVATE MEMBER'S MOTION NO. 12/01 WITHDRAWN TO BE PLACED ON THE ORDER PAPER OF THE NEXT MEETING IN JUNE 2001.

PRIVATE MEMBER'S MOTION NO. 15/01

PROTECTION OF CONSUMERS

Withdrawn

[Written notice received: In accordance with the provisions of Standing Order 24(14) Private Member's Motion No. 15/01 was withdrawn to be placed on the Order Paper of the next meeting in June 2001.]

The Speaker: Private Member's Motion No. 16/01.

PRIVATE MEMBER'S MOTION NO. 16/01

AMENDMENTS TO THE PENAL CODE
(1995 REVISION)
*Withdrawn

Capt. A. Eugene Ebanks: In accordance with the provisions of Standing Order 24(14) I move that the Motion be withdrawn and put on the June meeting.

Mr. Cline A. Glidden, Jr.: I beg to second that.

The Speaker: I shall put the question. Those in favour please say Aye. Those against, No.

AYES.

The Speaker: The Ayes have it.

AGREED: PRIVATE MEMBER'S MOTION NO. 16/01 WITHDRAWN TO BE PLACED ON THE ORDER PAPER OF THE NEXT MEETING IN JUNE 2001.

PRIVATE MEMBER'S MOTION NO. 17/01

PENSION DEDUCTIONS
*Withdrawn

Mr. V. Arden McLean: In accordance with the provisions of Standing Order 24(14) I move that the Motion be withdrawn and set down for the June meeting.

Mr. Lyndon L. Martin: I beg to second that.

The Speaker: I shall put the question. Those in favour please say Aye. Those against, No.

AYES.

The Speaker: The Ayes have it.

AGREED: PRIVATE MEMBER'S MOTION NO. 17/01 WITHDRAWN TO BE PLACED ON THE ORDER PAPER OF THE NEXT MEETING IN JUNE 2001.

PRIVATE MEMBER'S MOTION NO. 4/01

SPECIAL RELATIONSHIP PRIVILEGE
*Withdrawn

Mrs. Julianna O'Connor-Connolly: In accordance with the provisions of Standing Order 24(14) I wish to withdraw the Private Member's Motion standing in my name to be set down for the June meeting of this Legislative Assembly.

Mr. Gilbert A. McLean: I second the motion.

The Speaker: I shall put the question that Private Member's Motion No. 3/01 be withdrawn and placed on the Order Paper of the next meeting in June, 2001. Those in favour please say Aye. Those against, No.

AYES.

The Speaker: The Ayes have it.

AGREED: PRIVATE MEMBER'S MOTION NO. 4/01 WITHDRAWN TO BE PLACED ON THE ORDER PAPER OF THE NEXT MEETING IN JUNE 2001.

The Speaker: We had a Motion moved by the Third Elected Member for George Town, but he is not present for the Sitting, therefore it falls away. Unless provisions are specifically made it will not return again.
The Fourth Elected Member for West Bay.

Mr. Cline A. Glidden, Jr.: I just want to draw your attention . . . I think we may have skipped over Private Member's Motion No. 14/01.

The Speaker: I think you are correct.
The Third Elected Member for West Bay.

PRIVATE MEMBER'S MOTION NO. 14/01

FAIR COMPETITION ACT
*Withdrawn

Capt. A. Eugene Ebanks: In accordance with the provisions of Standing Order 24(14) I move that the Motion be withdrawn and set down for the June Meeting.

Mr. V. Arden McLean: I beg to second the motion.

The Speaker: Those in favour please say Aye. Those against, No.

AYES.

The Speaker: The Ayes have it.

AGREED: PRIVATE MEMBER'S MOTION NO. 14/01 WITHDRAWN TO BE PLACED ON THE ORDER PAPER OF THE NEXT MEETING IN JUNE 2001.

The Speaker: Returning to the Motion moved by the Third Elected Member for George Town, the Honourable Minister for Planning, Communications and Works.

Hon. D. Kurt Tibbetts: I do not think the idea would be to deprive the Third Elected Member for George Town of the opportunity to bring the Motion in the June meeting.

The Speaker: That is exactly why I called it to the attention of the House.

Hon. D. Kurt Tibbetts: However, understanding that unavoidably he is off the Island, the fact that we are going to be resuming in the morning to try to finish up all that we have to deal with, if you would, Sir, leave it as it is and let it come on the Order Paper tomorrow. If we are able to contact him, perhaps we can have some communication that will be acceptable allowing it to be withdrawn and brought back in June.

The Speaker: It is perfectly in order for you to move that it be brought back in June if you so wish.

PRIVATE MEMBER'S MOTION NO. 13/01

AMENDMENTS TO THE IMMIGRATION LAW

Withdrawn

Hon. D. Kurt Tibbetts: If that is acceptable to you, then I ask that it be withdrawn in accordance with Standing Order 24(14) with the understanding that the said Motion be put on the Order Paper for the June meeting.

The Speaker: The motion is that Private Member's Motion No. 13/01 be withdrawn.

AGREED: PRIVATE MEMBER'S MOTION NO. 13/01 WITHDRAWN TO BE PLACED ON THE ORDER PAPER OF THE NEXT MEETING IN JUNE 2001.

ADJOURNMENT

Hon. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Mr. Speaker, I move the adjournment of this Honourable House until tomorrow at 10 am.

The Speaker: The question is that this Honourable House do now adjourn until tomorrow, 25 May at 10 am. Those in favour please say Aye. Those against, No.

AYES.

The Speaker: The Ayes have it.

AT 3.17 PM THE HOUSE STOOD ADJOURNED UNTIL 10 AM FRIDAY, 25 MAY 2001.

OFFICIAL HANSARD REPORT
FRIDAY
25 MAY 2001
10.43 AM

Twenty-sixth sitting

[Prayers read by the Third Elected Member for Bodden Town.]

The Speaker: Please be seated. Proceedings are resumed.

Item number 2 on today's Order Paper, Reading by the Speaker of Messages and Announcements.

READING BY THE HONOURABLE
SPEAKER OF MESSAGES
AND ANNOUNCEMENTS

APOLOGIES

The Speaker: I have received apologies for absence from the Honourable Second and Third Official Members, the Second Elected Member for George Town and from the Third Elected Member for George Town.

Item number 3, Presentation of Papers and Reports.

Report 1: The Traffic (Amendment) (Variation of Fees) Regulations, 2001.

The Honourable Acting Third Official Member responsible for Finance and Economic Development.

PRESENTATION OF
PAPERS AND REPORTS

THE TRAFFIC (AMENDMENT) (VARIATION OF FEES) REGULATIONS, 2001

Hon. A. Joel Walton: I beg to lay on the Table of this Honourable House The Traffic (Amendment) (Variation of Fees) Regulations, 2001.

The Speaker: So ordered.

Hon. A. Joel Walton: When the Honourable Third Official Member delivered the Budget Address on 21 March 2001 he outlined a number of proposed revenue measures. Permit me to mention a couple of points the Honourable Third Official Member said in his address to put into context what we are trying to do this morning.

There were approximately 16 revenue measures proposed, and this change now being laid this morning was part of that list of 16. In terms of the proposed changes, I will just read where the changes are expected to occur.

We currently charge $20 for vehicle inspection; cars, trucks under 1 ton, vans under 10 seats, and trailers. The proposed regulation being raised is that it be moved to $25. In the case of trucks 1 to 5 tons, vans 10 to 40 seats, public transport vehicles and buses 10 to 40 seats, rental vehicles, taxis, limousines, and special vehicles under 5 tons, the proposal is to move the inspection fee from $20 to $30.

The third category is public transport vehicles and buses over 40 seats, trucks over 5 tons and special vehicles 5 tons or over. The current fee is $20, the proposal is to move it to $40.

The other change is a new item. The category is transferred from overseas driving licences to driving licences of the Islands. Currently there is no fee for this particular transfer. The proposal is to charge $25 to cover the administrative cost of doing that.

Provisional licences now cost $25 for six months. The proposal is to simply issue a one-year permit and charge $50. In the case of trailers, a roll-on trailer is currently no charge for that item. The proposal is to charge $15. In the case of trailers other than roll-on trailers, there is no change other than to separate it into three categories, under 1 ton, 1-2 tons, and over 2 tons. That is the substance of this regulation.

The Speaker: This is a regulation under the Traffic Law 2001, and in accordance with section 119 of the Traffic Law it must lay on the Table of the Legislative Assembly.

Moving on to Report 2, The Insurance (Variation of Fees) Regulations 2001, the Honourable Acting Third Official Member responsible for Finance and Economic Development.

THE INSURANCE
(VARIATION OF FEES) REGULATIONS 2001

Hon. A. Joel Walton: I beg to lay on the Table of this Honourable House, The Insurance (Variation of Fees) Regulations 2001.

The Speaker: So ordered.

Hon. A. Joel Walton: As there is a required Motion that comes later on in the morning, I could wait until that time to speak to the Motion and the regulations at the same time, if that is approved by you.

The Speaker: Moving on to Government Business, Bills. Before moving on to the Bills, I would ask for the suspension of Standing Orders 45(1), and 46(1), (2) and (4).

SUSPENSION OF STANDING ORDERS 45(1)
AND 46(1), (2) AND (4)

Hon. A Joel Walton: In accordance with Standing Order 86, I rise to move the suspension of Standing Orders 45(1), and 46(1), (2) and (4) to allow the Bill to be read a first time.

The Speaker: The question is the suspension of Standing Orders 45(1), and 46(1), (2) and (4) to allow the Bill to be read a first time. Those in favour please say Aye. Those against, No.

AYES.

The Speaker: The Ayes have it.

AGREED: STANDING ORDERS 45(1) AND 46(1), (2) AND (4) SUSPENDED.

GOVERNMENT BUSINESS

BILLS

FIRST READINGS

THE COMPANIES
(AMENDMENT) (FEES) BILL, 2001

The Deputy Clerk: The Companies (Amendment) (Fees) Bill 2001.

The Speaker: The Bill is deemed to have been read a first time and set down for Second Reading.

THE DEVELOPMENT AND PLANNING (AMEND-MENT) (INFRASTRUCTURE FUND) BILL, 2001

The Deputy Clerk: The Development and Planning (Amendment) (Infrastructure Fund) Bill 2001.

The Speaker: The Bill is deemed to have been read a first time and set down for Second Reading.

THE GOVERNMENT FEES
(AMENDMENT) (INCREASED FEES) BILL, 2001

The Deputy Clerk: The Government Fees (Amendment) (Increased Fees) Bill, 2001.

The Speaker: The Bill is deemed to have been read a first time and set down for Second Reading.

THE STAMP DUTY (AMENDMENT) BILL, 2001

The Deputy Clerk: The Stamp Duty (Amendment) Bill, 2001.

The Speaker: The Bill is deemed to have been read a first time and set down for a second reading.

THE TRAVEL (DEPARTURE TAX AND ENVIRONMENTAL PROTECTION FEE)
(AMENDMENT) (VARIATION OF FEES) BILL, 2001

The Deputy Clerk: The Travel (Departure Tax and Environmental Protection Fee) (Amendment) (Variation of Fees) Bill, 2001.

The Speaker: The Bill is deemed to have been read a first time and set down for Second Reading.

THE LAND HOLDING COMPANIES SHARE
TRANSFER TAX (AMENDMENT)
(VARIATION OF TAX) BILL, 2001

The Deputy Clerk: The Land Holding Companies Share Transfer Tax (Amendment) (Variation of Tax) Bill 2001.

The Speaker: The Bill is deemed to have been read a first time and set down for Second Reading.

A suggestion has been made that we take all the Bills and debate them as one. Would Members prefer to take them individually?

The Second Elected Member for Bodden Town.

Mr. Gilbert A. McLean: I think the suggestion which has been made is a wise one because there are a number of pieces of legislation being amended and they all relate to taxes.

I am aware that there is such a thing as an Omnibus Bill which includes where Government may bring a various number of amendments to legislation dealing with taxes or changes of fees. I think this is one such case. Each amendment could be referred to individually in one's debate, but it could be taken that all of these are before the House and thus open for debate.

The Speaker: The question would be posed separately on each Bill?

Mr. Gilbert A. McLean: Yes. I think that would offer Members the opportunity to vote in the way in which they wish.

The Speaker: Would the Government wish to consider that?

Hon. A. Joel Walton: Yes, we would be happy to.

The Speaker: I would like a motion moved for that please.

The Second Elected Member for Bodden Town, would you move the motion please?

Mr. Gilbert A McLean: Perhaps it would be best if it came from the Government Bench, in that, they would not need a seconder.

The Speaker: I thank you for that.

The Honourable Minister for Health and Information Technology.

MOTION THAT ALL SIX BILLS BE DEBATED AS ONE
AND THAT THE QUESTION BE PUT ON EACH BILL SEPARATELY

Hon. Linford A. Pierson: I move that the Second Reading on the six Bills before us be taken as one in the Debate, and that the question be put on each one separately.

The Speaker: I shall put the question. Those in favour please say Aye. Those against, No.

AYES.

The Speaker: The Ayes have it.

AGREED: THAT ALL SIX BILLS BE DEBATED AS ONE AND THAT THE QUESTION ON EACH BILL BE PUT SEPARATELY.

The Speaker: I will now ask the Clerk to give the Second Reading of all six Bills.

SECOND READINGS

THE COMPANIES
(AMENDMENT)(FEES) BILL, 2001

THE DEVELOPMENT AND PLANNING (AMENDMENT) (INFRASTRUCTURE FUND)
BILL, 2001

THE GOVERNMENT FEES
(AMENDMENT) (INCREASED FEES) BILL, 2001

THE STAMP DUTY
(AMENDMENT) BILL, 2001

THE TRAVEL (DEPARTURE TAX AND ENVIRONMENTAL PROTECTION FEE)
(AMENDMENT) (VARIATION OF FEES) BILL, 2001

THE LAND HOLDING COMPANIES SHARE
TRANSFER TAX (AMENDMENT)
(VARIATION OF TAX) BILL, 2001

The Speaker: The Honourable Acting Third Official Member.

The Hon. A. Joel Walton: Mr. Speaker, I beg to move the Second Reading of the following Bills:

- The Companies (Amendment) (Fees) Bill 2001;
- The Development and Planning (Amendment) (Infrastructure Fund) Bill 2001;
- The Government Fees (Amendment) (Increased Fees) Bill 2001;
- The Stamp Duty (Amendment) Bill 2001;
- The Travel (Departure Tax and Environmental Protection Fee) (Amendment) (Variation of Fees) Bill 2001; and
- The Land Holding Companies Share Transfer Tax (Amendment) (Variation of Tax) Bill 2001.

The Speaker: Do you wish to speak to it?
The Honourable Acting Third Official Member.

Hon. A. Joel Walton: Yes, Mr. Speaker.

There has been much discussion and debate on the revenue measures presented by the Government on 21 March 2001. It was explained that over the last decade in particular there has been a noticeable divergence in what the Government collects; that is the growth in what the Government collects as compared to the growth in what the Government spends.

There are various reasons for this divergence, with much debate. What we are seeking to do is simply correct that divergence. This requires several different approaches. The Government, in presenting the Budget Address and Budget document in March, laid out 16 strategies that focused heavily on the expenditure side of government. Medium term initiatives like the Medium Term Financial Strategy and the Financial Management Initiative were discussed and those are the reforms under way. There are other areas Government intends to engage in. It will make the effort to control expenditure, creating new opportunities for economic development.

The second broad area we are discussing this morning is the 'revenue' side. These measures presented in March were the first attempt to correct the shortfalls in growth on the revenue side. This morning I am only seeking to move six Bills and two Regulations through the House. If Members will recall, earlier when I spoke I made reference to some 16 broad areas which were outlined in the Budget Address. Permit me, Sir, to go through those broad items and provide information as to why I am only seeking to move six Bills and two Regulations.

The first item presented by the Honourable Third Official Member was the Customs duty, Warehouse fees and Package tax. You will recall that the larger portion of this item related to customs duty and that Bill was passed some time back; I think in late April.

The second area, Postal fees, unfortunately, does not synchronise with what was presented in the Budget Address. The postal fees required Postal Regulations to be changed and approved via Executive Council. That particular regulation has been considered and approved already. Unlike the two that I am seeking to deal with this morning, the Traffic and Insurance Fee, the postal business did not require a Government Motion or to be laid on the Table to allow it to go ahead.

The third broad category related to financial services fees. All of those requiring the approval of the House to be effected are presented this morning. Members will recall that the bulk of the fees in this area would not take effect until the date they are passed and gazetted. There are no retrospective fees in this area.

Again, when the Honourable Third Official Member laid the budget document on 21 March, he provided details of the various fees we were looking at in all of these areas, particularly the financial services area, to make it absolutely clear from then what Government intended to do, and what we are trying to do today. Having explained it back in March, we are now seeking to formalise those items by bringing in the necessary legislation this morning.

The fourth body deals with professional licensing. These areas both in the legal practitioners and the Trade and Business licence area are not here because they were prior regulations and will be dealt with via Executive Council.

The Vehicle Licensing Unit Fees is area 5. They are here via the Traffic Regulations.

The Environmental Health Fees is area 6. This will be brought in at the June meeting of this Legislative Assembly.

Items 7 - 9, Spear Gun Licenses, Law School fees and MRCU fees can all be dealt with via regulations via Executive Council.

Area 10 is Time Share Fees. This will be brought at the June meeting.

Area 11 is Infrastructure Fees. There is a Bill to deal with that item. It is not a change in the fee; it is a change in the methodology which the fee is calculated on. As opposed to construction cost, the proposal is to calculate the fee based on gross floor area.

Area 12, the Health Insurance Fund, this regulation requires a government motion and will be dealt with in June. As a precursor to that, there is no change in the rate at which contribution to the fund is made. What the regulations will seek to do is amend the way in which the funds from this fund are paid to the hospital, the Health Services Department, for services provided to indigents and the like.

Area 13—Hotel, condominium and guestroom tax is a small item ($79,000 to $80,000) and will be dealt with via regulations.

Various administrative fees collected by the Chief Secretary's Office, there is a Bill here entitled The Government Fees (Amendment) (Increased Fees), Bill 2001, which is now set down for second reading.

The Stamp Duty on Debit Transactions is also here in the form of a Bill, item 4, The Stamp Duty (Amendment) Bill 2001.

The last broad area (area 16) is the Land Holding Companies Share Stamp Duty, which is dealt with via item 6, the Land Holding Companies Share Transfer Tax (Amendment) (Variation of Tax) Bill 2001.

In addition to these 16 areas, I did my best to explain why there are no Bills in some situations, and why some regulations come here and some do not. There is a new area that the Honourable Third Official Member did not mention in the Budget Address and that has to do with the travel tax.

Funds collected from this item do not enter the government's revenue side. The funds go directly to the Civil Aviation Authority. I can just go through the six Bills quickly and read into the record the Memorandum of Objects and Reasons.

THE COMPANIES (AMENDMENT) (FEES) BILL, 2001

Hon. A. Joel Walton: Mr. Speaker, this Bill would amend the Companies Law (2000 Revision) to increase the fees charged under section 218. Section 218 specifies the fees which are payable for the filing of any document, notice or return with the Registrar, the issue of any certificate or the provision by the Registrar of a copy of any document in respect of which no fee is elsewhere specifically provided.

As mentioned, in the Objects and Reasons, it is a mixture of change in existing fee and addition of some new ones.

THE DEVELOPMENT AND PLANNING (AMENDMENT) (INFRASTRUCTURE FUND) BILL, 2001

Hon. A. Joel Walton: This Bill would amend the Development and Planning Law (1999 Revision) in order to change the method of calculating the contribution which should be made to the infrastructure fund. The Planning Department had indicated that it was difficult to assess the amount a person is required to contribute because of the difficulty in assessing construction costs. Section 41(4) of the Law is amended by deleting the reference to such costs and the new subsection (4) provides that the costs will be calculated according to the gross floor area of the development to which a building permit relates. This new method of calculation will take effect on 15th June, 2001, the same one that receives safe passage this morning or sometime today.

The Bill also repeals the definition of "construction costs" in section 41(5) and inserts a new subsection (6) in section 41. This new subsection provides that interest earned on the moneys of the fund will be retained for the purposes of the fund.

Moving on to the Development and Planning (Amendment) (Infrastructure Fund) Bill, 2001.

THE GOVERNMENT FEES (AMENDMENT) (INCREASED FEES) BILL, 2001

Hon. A. Joel Walton: This Bill would amend the Government Fees Law (1995 Revision) in order to increase fees for, among other things, naturalisation under the British Nationality Act 1981 and tax undertakings to exempted companies, exempted trusts and exempted limited partnerships.

I would like to mention that some of these fees have not been changed for quite some time. In the case of exempt companies, it had not been changed since 1979; exempted limited partnerships, 1991; and exempted trusts, 1979.

THE STAMP DUTY (AMENDMENT) BILL, 2001

Hon. A. Joel Walton: This Bill would amend the Stamp Duty Law (2001 Revision) in order to provide for the imposition of stamp duty on bank receipts for withdrawal from funds on deposit and on documents dealing with time shares.

The Bill amends the Stamp Duty Law providing a new head of duty called "Receipts" and under that head it is provided that a bank receipt for withdrawal from funds on deposit will attract a duty of 10 cents.

Time shares are defined in this Bill as any living accommodation in the Cayman Islands, used or intended to be used, wholly or partly, for leisure purposes by a class of persons. All of whom have rights to use, or participate in arrangements under which they may use, that accommodation, or accommodation within a pool of accommodation to which that accommodation belongs, for intermittent periods of short duration.

The Bill provides that the charge to duty on a grant, assignment or transfer of a timeshare or an interest in timeshare—if the timeshare is in an area specified in paragraph (1) of the head "CONVEYANCE OR TRANSFER of any immovable property" – 9 percent of the value of the consideration or the market value of the time share whichever is the greater;

Members will recall that we do currently have two levels of stamp duty levied, that is 9 percent in specified areas and 7.5 percent for the rest of the Island.

- (a) if the property is in an area not specified in paragraph (1) of the head "CONVEYANCE OR TRANSFER of any immovable property" – 7.5 percent of the value of the consideration or the market value of the time share whichever is the greater.

This is a new item. Members will recall that we discussed this over the last several years and this finally brings it into force if the Bill receives safe passage.

THE TRAVEL (DEPARTURE TAX AND ENVIRONMENTAL PROTECTION FEE) (AMENDMENT) (VARIATION OF FEES) BILL, 2001

Hon. A. Joel Walton: On this particular Bill, I wish to give notice of a committee stage amendment.

The Speaker: You may or you may wait and raise it in Committee.

Hon. A. Joel Walton: As I mentioned earlier when I spoke about the 16 broad areas, plus one, this is a new one that had not been presented at the time of the budget and it does not enter into Government's coffers directly, but instead will be paid into the Civil Aviation Authority.

The Bill seeks to amend the Travel and Departure Tax (Environmental Protection Fee) Law (2001 R) for the purpose of varying existing fees prescribed in the principal Law.

In a nutshell, the proposal is to increase the travel tax from CI$8.00 ($6.00 for travel tax, and $2.00 for the EPF), to CI$16.00, increasing the contribution to the EPF (which enters the government's coffers) to $4.00 and the balance of $12.00 goes to the Civil Aviation Authority.

Members will be aware that while this is a new item, the travel tax we pay in the Cayman Islands, in relation to other similar tourist jurisdictions in the region, is still, even with this change, within the norm. Most other Islands have about $20 to $25 (US).

THE LAND HOLDING COMPANIES SHARE TRANSFER TAX (AMENDMENT) (VARIATION OF TAX) BILL, 2001

Hon. A. Joel Walton: This Bill would amend the Land Holding Companies Share Transfer Tax Law (1995 Revision) in order to change the tax payable on the transfer of any equity capital of a land holding corporation.

Members will recall that some time back there was a change to separate properties in the following areas:

West Bay 5C water frontage only, but including any parcels subsequently divided from another parcel with water frontage existing at 9 June 1997, parcels 5D 10A, 10E, 11B, 11C, 11D, 12C, 12D, 12 E and 17A..

In the George Town registration section, 13B, 13C, 13E, 13EH, and parcels of road frontage on West Bay Road, Eastern Avenue and North Church Street, 13D, parcels with road frontage on Eastern Avenue, 14BG, 14BH, 14BJ, 14CJ OPY, and 18A.

When we amended the Stamp Duty Law some time back to distinguish these parcels from all other parcels in the Islands, and implement a 9 percent stamp duty for these parcels as opposed to 7.5 percent for all other parcels, we did not change the Land Holding Law to give the Government power to also implement that change for land holding companies. This was a tidying up exercise.

Thank you.

The Speaker: The question is that Bills entitled, The Companies (Amendment) (Fees) Bill 2001; The Development and Planning (Amendment) (Infrastructure Fund) Bill 2001; The Government Fees (Amendment) (Increased Fees) Bill 2001; The Stamp Duty (Amendment) Bill 2001; The Travel (Departure Tax and Environmental Protection Fee) (Amendment) (Variation of Fees) Bill 2001; and The Land Holding Companies Share Transfer Tax (Amendment) (Variation of Tax) Bill 2001 be given a second reading. I may add that the question will be taken on each Bill separately. The Floor is open for debate.

The Second Elected Member for Bodden Town.

Mr. Gilbert A. McLean: Mr. Speaker, this is a time when everyone sits and rolls their eyes, waiting to see who might speak—as I believe it is a general belief that no one should on this matter of taxes. Well, I cannot fall within that lot. Although these have fallen upon us suddenly, in that, they have not been circulated in time, thus the reason why Standing Orders had to be suspended.

I have been trying to sort through and follow as the Honourable Acting Third Official Member was reading. I seem to have some, while I do not have others.

The Speaker: Would you wish copies to be provided to you?

Mr. Gilbert A. McLean: Mr. Speaker, I think my remarks will be general, so I am not going to belabour details in any particular one.

When this session started almost three months ago, I said it was not good for the country to be saddled with $19 million in taxes, and on top of that have to revert to borrowing $56 million. I have not changed my position. As I take fleeting note of some of the changes, where the fees are changed, for example for British Dependent Territories Citizenship, already some people have argued that when a person is found to be fit to receive Caymanian status or BDT citizenship, it should not be something they pay for. A filing fee, I can see. There is an increase in that area too.

I have also heard the point that when you buy your citizenship you have the right to do what you wish to do. I know that is farfetched, but it has given me cause to observe how people think about these particular fees.

The travel tax is an increase of 100 percent. It seems like that almost missed the boat getting here to the floor of this House. Whether or not the money goes to the Civil Aviation Authority, we know that the funds from the CAA come into central government every time a budget is presented, and will also happen at the time of the next budget. I think everyone will understand that instead of paying $8 travel tax, we will be required to pay $16. I think that is a drastic leap.

The other part that I find disagreeable is the fact that for the traffic inspection, the fee is going up again. Prior to this I said that we have to stop picking at—the little man, the average citizen—the poor citizen at things like motorcar taxes. This country has to reach the point of charging substantial fees for creating the environment in which the wealthy come to make large profits and pay minimal fees compared to the profits they earn. So, I disagree with the increases in this area as well.

Another item within this particular area that I think will have a direct effect on tourists is the little piece of paper that we issue here, calling it a license, whereas some of these people drive in New York City, along the superhighways of the world, like we have to re-license them to drive in Cayman. That is going to move from $25 to $50. I am sure that will draw a response from the tourists who go to buy that. I think it would be remiss of me not to notice that or speak about it.

I really cannot offer any in depth contribution on these various pieces of amending legislation, not having had the time to get the Law and really look at it. However, I do have the recourse to not vote for it, and that is the position I will be taking when you put the question.

The Speaker: The Second Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman.

Mr. Lyndon L. Martin: I want to join with the Second Elected Member for Bodden Town in expressing disappointment that these very important pieces of legislation were only provided with a day's notice for Members to review, consider and evaluate to formulate arguments for either side.

I know from the history of this Parliament that many of the Members comprising this legislative body share the view that there must be proper notice so Members can prepare themselves. However, the people of Cayman Brac and Little Cayman elected me to represent this nation and in so doing when anything comes before this House that, in my view, is not in the best interest of the country my position must be to vote against it. It is the only way I can show my disapproval. To simply talk about the Motion and support it would not in any way show disagreement with the position.

I truly appreciate the need to put all of these Bills under one debate, but I truly appreciate that we will have the ability to vote on each particular amendment individually.

Another disappointment I would like to express is that, in this Honourable House we have 15 elected individuals with individual capabilities, positions, and philosophies. Inevitably, these will differ. However, the position so far has been that when an individual stands up to take a different position, he is subjected to what can only be termed as “political terrorism.”

[Members' laughter and interjections]

Mr. Lyndon L. Martin: Mr. Speaker, I would first like to address the Travel (Departure Tax and Environmental Protection Fee) (Amendment) (Variation of Fees) Bill, 2001.

[Members' laughter and interjections]

Mr. Lyndon L. Martin: Mr. Speaker, I have to say that this particular amendment gives me great concern.

In March when the Budget was presented, we were given a revenue package stated at $19.882 million. I would like to take the position that in reality this is $27.4 million, when you apply it over a full calendar year. So, next year, every citizen of this country will be paying $27.4 million more than they paid last year. So, the true revenue package is $27 million.

The Speaker: If I may interject. . . I think you said that “each citizen” would be paying that amount. Do you mean it will be part of their expenses?

Mr. Lyndon L. Martin: Mr. Speaker, I take your point. The nation as a whole will have an excess tax burden of $27.4 million.

I also would like to amend that figure, because we just learned that there is another tax being placed on the people of the Cayman Islands, including tourists, by a new travel tax increased by 100 percent. Unfortunately, we were not in a position to quantify that number today, but in a rough estimate I came up with another $3 million. I say that is my personal rough estimate, and I stand to be corrected.

We must put this in context. Not only have we seen the approval of the single largest Loan Bill in the history of this country, we are also about to witness and vote on the highest tax package to be placed on this country.

I am cognisant of the Government's financial position. I am reminded that it is the Government's body, the Executive Council's responsibility, to come up with appropriate solutions. Those solutions will have to be vetted by the full Legislative Assembly. The responsibility lies on Executive Council to propose appropriate solutions to the economic and financial problems of the country. I deliberately broadened the scope from financial problems to include the economic problems of the country. When Executive Council put forward the tax package, the loan requirement, and the Appropriation Bill, it must be remembered that in this great country there is no central bank facility offering some form of monetary mechanism of controlling the economy. The single tool the Government has at its disposal to effect the economy is through the budget document and the tax regime.

It is imperative that when we tax we do it with a philosophy, a plan, a policy. This document that we call the Budget is the quantification of government's policies. It is the tool we have to shape and mould behaviour in the economy to bring about desired results. I am not prepared today or any other day in this House to support taxes that have no direction, no policy behind them, the only goal being to raise money and the victims being the same poor Caymanian citizens.

I would like to see aggressive and deliberate policies and tax packages that shape the “green tax package”; an environmental tax package. Let us tax problems that we have trouble disposing of. Let us give favourable consideration to those products that are recyclable. Let us have a policy, let's have a philosophy behind our tax package rather than simply haphazardly putting together taxes because they are easy to quantify and determine that if you tax eggs you are certain to collect because people always buy eggs. That is not an acceptable position for the 21st century.

We are in the 21st century. We are in a competitive environment in both of our major industries—tourism and financial services. We are not in a position to simply add fees without having appropriate intelligence, without researching and seeing what other jurisdictions are doing. When we apply a departure tax, we must look at the fact that we are in a period of slowdown in our tourism. We are in a period of time where other jurisdictions are becoming more competitive. We must look at what effect this departure tax will have on the total picture. I do not believe we can simply add $8 on to the departure tax and assume that the volume—because revenue is the result of the tax rate times the volume—will continue. I am not saying it will not but I am not saying that we can assume it. We need to research it. We need to have the studies to show that effect.

My position from day one when dealing with this Budget was that it was time that we not only examined budgets based on expenditure items, but we must also examine the soundness of the Budget based on its revenue and its financing package. I take this opportunity to clarify my position as outlined during my debate on the Loan Bill.

We fund the Government's Budget through recurrent revenue, borrowing or tax enhancement measures. The three items are interrelated—if you change one, you have to change the others to balance out.

My position stated that when we look at borrowing, the cost associated to it must be reflected. I stated in my contribution that I was concerned that the Government body—the entire legislative body—that advocates openness and transparency would come to this House and state that there is a change in the debt service ratio, the ceiling under which repayments of loans is governed; to state that 10 percent of recurrent revenue will be changed, but for the new figure not to be given to this House. We cannot simply vote for things because they sound good, we must examine to see if the country can truly afford it.

Can the Government tell me if the new debt service ratio is within the ceiling determined as affordable? If not, we need to re-examine it. At that time I was not in a position to vote for it because that information was not available.

I would like to go over the review measures because the listening public needs to understand that we have just embarked on a new set of revenue measures that we are not going to see reduced.

This new tax system includes taxes on household items that each citizen uses. The Government placed high weight on these in the consumer price index basket, which represents the typical goods purchased by a household. It is those items that this tax package has increased duty on.

Also, the residents of this country must understand that as a result of today's vote, when they go to the bank to withdraw money from their own accounts, they will have to pay government ten cents per withdrawal. The public must know that when they travel they will be paying an extra 100 percent on departure tax. There are numerous increases outlined in this package. I would like to restate the total, $27.4 million.

I would like to take this opportunity to recognise the fact that my good friend, the Honourable Minister for Health and Information Technology, was off the Island for health reasons during the preparation of these taxes.

I could stand here all day expressing how concerned I am over the level of these taxes and the lack of direction and policy behind them; and the total effect this could have on the same economy that we recognise is not in a healthy state at the moment. However, I have spoken on this several times and my position is quite clear.

I want to make a clear challenge to all Members of this Honourable House. Many Members criticised the taxes and the borrowing, but felt compelled to vote for it because of the great need of the country; a great need that overcame common sense and what they know is best for the country. Today we provide an opportunity to demonstrate that one particular item that was not listed in March, the travel tax, is not part of the revenue we need to continue to fund this budget. It is not part of the $19.88m given on our revenue measures sheet.

For Members who state that they strongly agree that we need to come up with new ways of taxing to stop taxing the same individuals, this is a good opportunity to demonstrate that commitment and join with me in voting against this particular head. I agree you might not be able to vote against the others, because you voted for them before, but this particular one has not been voted on yet. This is the first opportunity.

I conclude with that challenge.

The Speaker: Would Members prefer to take the morning break or continue?

We shall suspend for 15 minutes, and I beg you for 15 minutes!

PROCEEDINGS SUSPENDED AT 11.53 PM

PROCEEDINGS RESUMED AT 12.11 PM

The Speaker: Please be seated.

Debate continues on the Second Reading of The Companies (Amendment) (Fees) Bill 2001; The Development and Planning (Amendment) (Infrastructure Fund) Bill 2001; The Government Fees (Amendment) (Increased Fees) Bill 2001; The Stamp Duty (Amendment) Bill 2001; The Travel (Departure Tax and Environmental Protection Fee) (Amendment) (Variation of Fees) Bill 2001; and The Land Holding Companies Share Transfer Tax (Amendment) (Variation of Tax) Bill 2001. Does any other Member wish to speak? The Floor is opened to debate.

The Honourable Minister for Health and Information Technology.

Hon. Linford A. Pierson: I rise to make my contribution on the Second Reading debate of the six Bills you just mentioned: The Companies (Amendment) (Fees) Bill 2001; The Development and Planning (Amendment) (Infrastructure Fund) Bill 2001; The Government Fees (Amendment) (Increased Fees) Bill 2001; The Stamp Duty (Amendment) Bill 2001; The Travel (Departure Tax and Environmental Protection Fee) (Amendment) (Variation of Fees) Bill 2001; and The Land Holding Companies Share Transfer Tax (Amendment) (Variation of Tax) Bill 2001.

It is not my intention to go into details on what previous Members have said, but to give a general overview of the position as I see it and to basically state why it was important that Government take the position it took with this Budget. I think it was the right position to take, and I am still to hear any constructive suggestion from the Opposition as to how this could have been better dealt with. I have heard a lot of political rhetoric, but I am yet to hear any constructive suggestions as to how they could have bettered the situation that the Government found when it took over power.

I want to thank the Second Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman for his kindness in trying to exempt me from the budgetary process, due to my illness at the time. I wish to remind my Honourable friend that I have always been a team player and will continue to be. I am very much a part of this Government with their successes, as well as with any problems we may encounter. Through thick and thin, I am here. I will continue to be a team player. When a matter affects the Government it affects me equally. I believe in collective responsibility and will stand here and defend any matters to do with my Government whether I am present or away from the Islands.

I believe what caused my ears to prick was when I heard the term "political terrorism" or something to that effect. I think in my number of years here since 1984, I have not heard that term before. I am sure the Member did not use it in a derogatory manner, because I know the gentleman. However, just to say to him and other Members who may share his view, he could not have possibly been referring to any of the Honourable Members on this side of the House. If he was referring to his own colleagues, then I excuse him.

Regarding the suggestion that we should tax with a philosophy, that we should have policies in place, I wonder if when Members get up to debate they realise the very short period this Government had to plan this Budget. I would point out the situation as we found it so that the listening public can understand that we did precisely what we had to do, otherwise the country would not have been able to run as smoothly as we felt it should. We would not have been able to provide good governance to this country.

Until such time as I can hear from the Opposition—the self-proclaimed Opposition, that is—more constructive views of how they could have done it better, then I am very happy to say this is perhaps the best position that could have been taken under the circumstances. I am not going to point fingers at former members, because I respect them all. Facts are facts! When we got in we found a serious situation. Government had to take action. We had no choice.

What I find strange is that some Members will get up and support the Appropriation Bill, which is really the way that funds are allocated under expenditure heads. That is what it really is. The question, if we are not going to fall into the trap of single-entry bookkeeping, there has to be another side. There are two sides to it. Where is the money coming from for the appropriation of those funds?

With a broke Treasury, as it was at the time, we had no choice but to decide where this money was coming from. I find it difficult to rationalise how any member of this House could support the Appropriation Bill, or even have the temerity to come to Government and say 'I want to have this road fixed; I want to have that building done' yet get up in this House and say he is not going to support the revenue measures to make this possible.

Where is the money coming from? Unless he has some money tree that I do not know about. We have to be realistic. The country has to continue to move along with the development growth we have planned for the country. That money had to come from somewhere.

I want to make reference to certain information I have available to me. With your permission, I would like to read from a script that will give the full facts of the case.

Criticism has been made of the $55 million that Government had to borrow. We have criticism of the revenue package government had to enter into: Yet, those economic wizards have not come up with one single suggestion as to where these funds should come from. No one on the Opposition has come up with any constructive suggestions. I want to make that abundantly clear! Talk is cheap! You get a lot of political rhetoric and I am used to it so it does not frighten me. I have been in these Halls since 1984, so nothing the Opposition says will frighten me. I am asking them to be rational. Talk sense. Be constructive.

How can they expect to get bread out of stone? They want the Appropriation Bill. The country has to continue running. They cannot shut the country down. But they get up and make the public believe that the Government is doing something that is so bad because we are trying to put together the necessary revenue. I hope that when they go outside that their own supporters will ask why they didn't make some constructive suggestions.

I hear things about taxing the little man. I am not a party to taxing the little man; but why did those Members not say exactly where the revenue could come from rather than making the public believe that we are squeezing the little man? Come on gentlemen, let us try to be more constructive. If we are going to be representatives, let us represent the true position we are faced with.

We took over the government in November 2000, but we did not get started until the 1st of this year. Then we had a budget to look after. No time to really articulate or formulate the position ahead. Yet, you will note as I move on, we did in that short time come up with 16 policies, three of which were applied. Yet, the Opposition would say that Government did not look into matters as thoroughly as it should have. Again, I say talk is cheap!

At the end of 2000 financing arrangements had to be considered for three main items. When the last government left the accumulated deficit of this country was $10.7 million—after $5.8 million was taken out of general reserves. Its associated overdraft was $14 million. That is the situation we inherited.

In addition, there was some $5.6 million in outstanding payments to suppliers that had to be paid. They were knocking on the doors. Some of them are now in the Budget. The $5.6 million outstanding bills at the end of 2000 could not be paid because the Treasury was near its authorised overdraft limit of $15 million. It could not be paid. That is the position we inherited.

It was considered by this Government to be improper and unethical to attempt to breach its overdraft limit. We decided not to go above that. In addition to that, the third area had to do with the payment of $6 million in respect of the remaining ten months of cost of living adjustment, which had to be made in 2001.

When we look at these three items, we are looking right away at $22.3 million without taking into account an additional $3 million that was found at the end of 2000 to be paid to suppliers, with a total amount of some $25.3 million. It was these items that formed the basis for Government's very difficult decision—the proposed borrowing of $26.2 million to finance recurrent expenditure. That is why we had to finance recurrent expenditure. Of course, that is unusual, but we found a very unusual position when we got into government. That is why these unusual measures had to be applied.

The general revenue fund unaudited deficit on the year 2000 was equal to $19.1 million. Just to show you how we arrive at the $10.7 million, with an accumulated surplus coming forward from 1999 of $8.4 million, thus leaving a net deficit position on 31 December 2000 of $10.7 million. This was after we transferred $5.8 million from general reserves. That is the situation we found.

When Members over there criticise Government for revenue measures and for borrowing, they are only giving one side of the story. What they should have told the country is why this was necessary and imperative. Government had no choice but to clear up the mess it inherited.

Why did we find such a bad position? What caused it? Bad policy decisions prior to our taking over in November! There were four main areas that caused this problem. It needs to be said again since there is so much rhetoric and so much playing of politics on this issue.

The four issues were: The impact of the rollback of import duties during 2000. The revenue loss is estimated to be from $10 million to $12 million. If duty was going to be taken off, why was not something done to adjust the accounts accordingly? It was just left. Is that good management?

There was also a failure to revise the health services fees during 2000 and the estimated revenue lost on that was between $3.5 million to $5 million. No proper increase was made to adjust these figures. But they had increased the projected revenue.

A third item was the impact of the seamen's gratia payment in 2000, an additional expenditure of some $1.2 million.

The fourth major issue was the impact of payment of two months of the 1999 cost of living allowance to civil servants in 2000, which was $1.3 million. We do not have a problem with that because civil servants earned that. It should have been properly allocated.

What were our options inheriting such a situation? We had four options. We decided to take the option that we felt was the wisest most balanced option for the country.

The four options open to government were as follows:-

- o We could have drawn down on the remainder of the general reserves, which was only $10.1 million then, leaving no general reserves;
- o We could have cut back on the services we are providing the "little man" so often mentioned in this House, by a further $16.1 million. That would have given us $26.2 million. Would either one of those be the proper way to go? Should we have taken out all the reserves and left a nil balance? Should we have cut back services by another $16.1 million? No! That was not the way to go.

There would have been a second option, continuing to use overdraft financing of up to $15 million, but leave the bills unpaid. Is that good governance? I think not.

A third option was to raise an additional $26.2 million in taxes. Now, that would have been something for everybody to talk about! Instead we decided to seek to borrow over the medium term to pay down the overdraft of approximately $14 million at the end of 2000; outstanding bills of $5.6 million to suppliers, and another $3 million not entered into the Treasury accounts until the end of the year 2000, making it $8.6 million; and other commitments that existed at year end 2000 of $6 million that had to be paid to civil servants.

This was the option Government selected. It was decided to borrow the $26.2 million over the medium term, in the tax package. We can tie this back into the tax package of the $19 million that I referred to earlier.

It is important to note that while intended to use in 2001, the proposed $26.2 million of borrowing to pay for recurrent expenditure items and let me repeat, those items arose from the 2000 year end position and nothing to do with the 2001 budget. They were debts and positions this Government inherited.

In the short time we have been here, we have put in place what we feel are remedial measures to minimise the need for future recurrent expenditure borrowing in future years. We were caught unaware in 2001. We have put in place policies that should avoid that situation happening again.

The proposed revenue measures are expected to yield $19.9 million in 2001. As the Second Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman rightly stated, this will be $27.4 million when we spread it over a full year, so I give him credit for that. For the short time available to us . . . and I want to pay homage and congratulation to the Financial Secretary, Deputy Financial Secretary and their staff for their assistance to the Leader of Government Business and Members of Executive Council in attempting to put together a budget under such difficult circumstances.

Within the short period available to us, we were able to put into effect 16 expenditure control policies. These were outlined in the Honourable Financial Secretary's Budget Address. Of the 16 policies, we decided to settle for three major policies at this stage. To refresh Members' minds those three are:

1. An offsetting policy. This meant the implementation of an offsetting policy that requires an attachment of a specific revenue measure to any new proposed revenue expenditure item that exceeds $1 million in a year. I think that is good governance. If that was done a long time ago, we would not have a deficit. Yet, they criticise us for not being able to do in three months what the previous Government had the opportunity to do in eight years. That is irrational!

We are also aiming to have the 2001, 2002, and 2003 recurrent expenditure and capital acquisition equals the 2000 actual levels. That is good government and good policies. Yet, we hear that no policies were put in place. Perhaps the Members who said that did not understand the Budget Address.

2. The second policy was generally holding the 2001 recurrent and capital acquisition expenditures to their global 2000 actual levels, and whenever possible holding the 2002 and 2003 recurrent expenditure and capital acquisition expenditure at or near their 2000 actual levels.

3. The third policy position is under-staffing restrictions: Restrictions on staffing levels that entail implementing a moratorium on recruitment for the remainder of 2001, except for absolutely essential services. That is, the recruitment for non-essential services should proceed only when direct revenue measures are introduced to match or exceed cost or expenditure blocking offsets are found. Staffing for new capital projects that come on stream in 2001 and when the creation of the post is supported by direct revenue measures or expenditure offsets, and removing the dollar amounts from vacant posts in the 2001 draft budget except where recruitment is actively underway.

I believe that people will agree that these are sound policies that have been laid down by the present Government. We heard a lot about the impact of the $55.4 million that had to be borrowed. I hear terms like "it is unprecedented." Of course! We found an unprecedented situation. That is why the equal measure had to be taken.

I would like to make it abundantly clear that Government's ability to service its debt is what is important about borrowing and is more important than the absolute or total value of the debt. We have remained within the ceiling of 10 percent placed on our borrowings; that is the servicing as a percentage of your total revenue.

An indication of this ability is provided by the debt service ratio, which expressed debt servicing costs as a percentage of revenue income or recurrent revenue. Government's debt servicing cost calculations includes repayment of both principal and interest relating to Central Government debt and self-financing loans.

At the end of 2000, the following position existed: The debt service ratio was 7.6 percent; the unaudited public debt figure was $92.5 million; the unaudited self-financing loans were $15.3 million. The effect of borrowing the $55.47 million is therefore not expected to breach the Islands' conventional threshold of 10 percent for 2001 and 2002 and thereafter.

People have asked why Government has not already sealed up a deal with the private banks. The Government envisages repaying the recurrent and capital acquisition expenditure portion of the $55.47 million over a period of five years. It could not be done better than that. Most governments have their borrowings over 25 to 30 years. I am not advocating that that is the best system because I would personally like to see all of our public debts reassessed and amortised over a much longer period.

I would like to see perhaps 25 to 30 years given to government. Then you would see that the servicing of the debts would be much less than what it is now. The five years that I refer to and the capital development portion of the loan would therefore be over 10 to 12 years. Just so that Members can understand my point, Government envisages repaying the recurrent and capital acquisition expenditure portion of the loan over five years, and the capital development portion over 10 to 12 years.

Just for information, a preliminary meeting with local clearing banks was held on 16 May to gauge their interest. The follow-up meeting is Tuesday coming. I would have thought that Members would be out there encouraging the banks to assist in the circumstances and not say anything in this House that could give the impression that Members are not supportive of what we are trying to do at this time. I think it is irresponsible to say the least.

I think it is true to say that the interest shown by the bank was very encouraging. They indicated that they are very pleased with the policies this Government has instituted. They have indicated that there was no sign of these policies in the past. So, there is no question that we have a good, solid Government. All we need is the opportunity to prove ourselves. We have been here just a matter of months, yet we have come up with 16 solid policies, three of which have already been put into effect.

The Speaker: Lunch has arrived. Would it be convenient to take the break now?

Hon. Linford A. Pierson: I am winding up right now.

The Speaker: Please continue.

Hon. Linford A. Pierson: Just to say that our deficit position that we found in 2000, if the accounts of the Government had been properly prepared and done as indicated in the Auditor General's Report, the position would have been much worse. That is, the amount of overseas expenses for medical still on an advance account should have been properly put through the surplus and deficit account of this country, and the deficit position would have been much worse.

Members will remember that I stood on that side of the House and debated the Auditor General's Report each year saying that this adjustment should be done. I just want to let the House know that I am now, as the Minister of Health, in the process of having all of these debts properly analysed to determine what are bad debts, what is uncollectable, what are doubtful, and undergo full blast at those receivables we have a good chance at collecting.

I give my full support to these amending Bills and say that I believe we have a very solid Government. I want the country to know that we will do our best to represent this country and continue to provide the best government possible under the circumstances.

The Speaker: We shall suspend until 2.15 pm.

PROCEEDINGS SUSPENDED AT 12.48 PM

PROCEEDINGS RESUMED AT 2.35 PM

The Speaker: Please be seated.

Debate continues on the Second Reading of The Companies (Amendment) (Fees) Bill, 2001; The Development and Planning (Amendment) (Infrastructure Fund) Bill, 2001; The Government Fees (Amendment) (Increased Fees) Bill, 2001; The Stamp Duty (Amendment) Bill, 2001; The Travel (Departure Tax and Environmental Protection Fee) (Amendment) (Variation of Fees) Bill, 2001; and The Land Holding Companies Share Transfer Tax (Amendment) (Variation of Tax) Bill, 2001.

The Second Elected Member for West Bay.

Mr. Rolston M. Anglin: Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

As you and all Members of this Honourable House know, and as all within the precincts of this Assembly know, and indeed our constituents who are hearing this on the radio, or who will come to read the Hansard will know, this Honourable House can most often accurately be described as a House of politics. There is usually an expectation gap, that is, the general public sends us here to do a job and often say "keep the politics out of it," however, that is a road that is very often not taken.

As I listened to the contributions, I had to refer back to the Order Paper to see exactly what we were discussing here, and supposed to be debating. I would like to start by reminding Members and the public that we have something called Standing Orders. Under Standing Order 35, we have guidance on the content of our speeches. However, very often when Members get up, I think it is safe to say that the moment gets the better of them. If we look at Standing Order 35 (3) and (4), we will see that it is out of order to use offensive or insulting language about other Members and we will also see that no Member shall impute improper motives to another Member.

I will certainly do my best during my term here to ensure that I abide by the rules under which I am supposed to act. Until these Standing Orders are amended, that is what all Members are supposed to comply with.

I would like to remind all of us, including the general public, but especially the general public, because when the public hears us talk about the Budget they listen and are not necessarily looking at the document and getting the entire picture. Now, I could easily get up and make insinuations and unsupportable recommendations that sound good to those listening on the radio but not necessarily following along in detail to see the entire picture and indeed exactly how we do finance services within the Cayman Islands.

I would like to draw Members' attention—particularly the Second Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman—to pages 3 and 4 of the Budget document; then tie those in to page 105, 117, and 143.

If we look at line item 40602, School Fees; we see an estimate for some $300,000. Yet, if we look at the Education Department itself, we see recurrent expenditure of some $31,032,005. If we go to line item 40605, Garbage Fees; we see estimated receipts of $3,205,689. However, if we go down to page 117 and look at just the recurrent expenditure for Environmental Health, we see $6,260,958. The last example I will use is Health Service Fees, an estimate of $8.5 million. Go to page 104, recurrent expenditure is estimated at $42,630,547. In other words, as in most places, as in most budgets whether private or public sector, we do not see any form of direct linkage between what government collects and what government pays out on a line-by-line basis.

Mr. Lyndon L. Martin: On a point of order, Mr. Speaker.

POINT OF ORDER

The Speaker: May I hear your point of order?

Mr. Lyndon L. Martin: Under Standing Order 34 (b), I would like if the Second Elected Member for West Bay would tell this House if what he is suggesting is that Government needs to increase its taxes in order to cover these services at below cost?

The Speaker: That is not a point of order, but elucidation.

[Addressing the Second Elected Member for West Bay] Do you wish to give way?

Mr. Rolston M. Anglin: Mr. Speaker, you know, I pointed this item directly to that particular Member. Hopefully the listening public will have heard that Member's contribution or lack thereof! He rises on another impotent point of order, just as his contribution was! I am not surprised.

I will continue, Mr. Speaker. One can then look at Companies Registry and look at the fees collected and the cost to the department. One can look at Customs, the fees collected and the cost of running the department. The way in which we derive a budget within the Cayman context, certain areas and departments of government subsidise other areas. Whenever a government—and particularly the last government—chooses to amend the revenue stream and there is no easy way to look at a corollary expenditure to see how expenditure is going to be cut back. One can often say that that is a game that can be potentially dangerous. All of a sudden, you see that areas of the budget subsidise other areas.

As a society, we have accepted that we are going to try to provide education free of charge. Anyone who is truthful with his constituents will tell them that is impossible. There is no way that Government can provide anything truly free of charge. The money has to come from somewhere. Even when we look at what Government collects in areas like Education or the Health Services and the cost of providing those services, you will see a significant shortfall. Other areas like Customs, where we actually collect a significant portion of our duties and the Company Registry where we collect a significant portion of our fees, those particular departments obviously do not come near incurring that kind of cost simply because we need the monies to provide education, garbage collecting, environmental health services and the hospital, health services.

It is safe to say that within the Budget that has been approved and within the pieces of legislation before us, we as an Honourable House must recognise that one seemingly, but crucial fact.

The record will show my position on this Budget. The record will show that I certainly told the Government of the day in no uncertain terms that I have the utmost confidence in their ability to rise to the challenge I issued—this was that by the time we come to the next budget session in November that the budget would have to look considerably different than it does today to get my support. Those were my words in my contribution to the Throne Speech and Budget Address recorded in the Hansard—forever etched in the history of this Honourable House.

I find it laughable that I would hear on 25 May 2001 the notion of no clear tax policies. Of course, the Honourable Minister of Health outlined that there are certain strategies and policies spelled out in the Throne Speech and budget document. Be that as it may, I think that it is expecting blood out of stone to think that we could go through the election we all did (and maybe some of us slept through portions of it) . . . we had no group emerge with a tax policy or an economic position. We did not have a group of eight or more who could conceivably form a government to come to the public of this country with a tax policy and an economic policy.

In fact, certainly in the Island of Grand Cayman, I do not even know of any candidate or politician who ventured into any other district to campaign along with anyone else. So, we had six distinct districts being individually fought for and 15 people won. Then we had the infamous week and at the end of that week on 15 November, we formed a government.

The individuals of that Government were themselves disjointed. We had a group of four from West Bay of which I am a part, we had two from George Town, one from Bodden Town, one from North Side and then an independent from George Town.

So now, the Second Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman had the audacity to stand here and tell the public that we do not have a tax policy. What world is that Member living in? Of course we do not have a tax policy! We do not have an organised political system, so how are we going to have a tax policy founded on fact and information that once the Government takes power they can implement?

We sent the group that formed the Government into that Glass House—three of whom had never been Ministers before—and told them to form a budget. Then we came here in March and said that we were surprised that we did not have an economic policy; we were surprised we did not have a medium term financial strategy in place; we were surprised that we did not have an economic policy.

Mr. Speaker, really, the politics that pervade this place is quite saddening. However, to further demonstrate how absurd it is to say that we would have a clear-cut economic policy, taxation philosophy, when we are bringing together groups to form a government; West Bay could have had the West Bay Four, and MLAs could have had one taxation ideology; the two Members for George Town could have had another taxation ideology; the Member for North Side could have had another; the Members for Bodden Town could have had another and then the independent Member for George Town could have had another. So to say we are surprised and to cast blame, knowing the system we have in the country—or lack thereof—in my opinion I do not find that to be responsible.

Further to that, the Minister from Bodden Town, the First Elected Member, ran with the Second Elected Member for Bodden Town as a team. One winds up on the Government bench and the other winds up as the Opposition—supposedly Leader of the Opposition!

I mean, come on . . . let us present the facts to our constituents. Let us stop insulting the people of the Cayman Islands. I said in my debate on the Throne Speech and Budget Address that—

Mr. Gilbert A. McLean: Mr. Speaker, on a point of order.

POINT OF ORDER

The Speaker: May I hear your point of order?

Mr. Gilbert A. McLean: The question of relevance to the six Bills before the House.

The Speaker: I have been listening very carefully and I have given everyone a wide scope of debate during this entire meeting. Therefore, I would ask the Second Elected Member for West Bay to stick as near to the Bills as possible. That is a valid point of order.

The Second Elected Member for West Bay.

Mr. Rolston M. Anglin: I guess there is political terrorism in this House after all!

[Members' laughter]

The Speaker: Would you please repeat that?

Mr. Rolston M. Anglin: I said I guess there is political terrorism in this House after all, because I hear point of order after point of order, trying to shut me up!

The Speaker: I do not particularly like that word and ask that you not use it again. I cannot say it is unparliamentary, but it is unbecoming to us as Members of this Honourable House.

Mr. Rolston M. Anglin: Mr. Speaker, I agree entirely. I was simply referring to a comment made by the Second Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman who brought that expression to this House. I agree! In fact, we should have a list of unparliamentary words, and that would be on the top of the list!

Let us get straight to the point.

The Speaker: Thank you!

Mr. Rolston M. Anglin: Let us get straight to the point. Bill number 5: The Travel (Departure Tax and Environmental Protection Fee) (Amendment) (Variation of Fees) Bill, 2001.

We heard The Honourable Acting Third Official Member tell this House that that fee was being increased from $8 to $16, the ratio of sharing between the Civil Aviation and the green fund was going to remain static 3:1, $12 for CAA and $4 for the green fund.

This item is a new item. I certainly can agree with the Second Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman on that point. However, just to refresh our memories I would refer to page 6 of the Draft Report of the Standing Finance Committee, in relation to the meeting we had here on 6, 7, 8 and 11 December 2000, item 10.2.

We here authorised a government guarantee on behalf of the Civil Aviation Authority, and I quote, "In accordance with the provisions of section 29(1) of the Public Finance and Audit Law (Law 23 1985)(1997R), the committee [that is all of us] authorised the issuing of a government guarantee in the amount of $4,550,749 to a bank or financial institution on behalf of the Civil Aviation to rehabilitate the Cayman Brac runway."

I await the Honourable Acting Third Official Member's winding up on this debate. I certainly see this as a measure coming forward to aid and defray these costs that have been incurred by the Civil Aviation Authority to rehabilitate the runway in Cayman Brac. So, the Second Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman issued a challenge. He challenged all Members to not support this item because it was not part of the original budget. Again, I agree; it was not there.

However, as I try to keep up with everything that is going on with this whole budgetary process and recognise that it is never going to be encapsulated into a finite document. The Government grows, ideas come up at different times and ideas will be brought to this House at varying times. If he wants to flog the Government for not bringing it earlier, that is up to him. I can tell that Member that I certainly see some correlation within the document that I have been provided and in the debate that has gone on over the last two months, so I will support this item.

It would be quite funny if after the runway project has been completed that the Member would not support this as well. I guess that is parochial politics, Mr. Speaker, and 'once my district gets' we do not care about anyone else. I am here to represent every citizen in these Islands, whether from West Bay, George Town, Bodden Town, North Side, East End, Cayman Brac and Little Cayman. Yes, we are sent here as district representatives and indeed every one of us wants to make sure that our district keeps up with the rest of the Island. However, over the last few weeks some of it is has been blatantly obvious.

Item 5 on this Order Paper is the item that caught my eye because I had not seen it before. I listened intently. I have looked back and seen where there is potential for monies to be made. In fact, I also understand that there are comparable countries, territories, to the Cayman Islands that do charge amounts significantly higher than our fees. My information is that those fees need to be adjusted. I know that The Honourable Acting Third Official Member also stated that fact as he was going through his presentation.

I certainly do not appreciate nonsensical behaviour and unwarranted attacks on behaviour. I have no problems with anyone calling themselves "Opposition." I have no problems with healthy opposition. However, I do have problems with phrases like "political terrorism" and all this sort of nonsense.

I support the Motion before us, and I thank you for your indulgence as I take my seat.

The Speaker: Does any other Member wish to speak? The Floor is open for debate; does any other Member wish to speak?

The Fourth Elected Member for West Bay.

Mr. Cline A. Glidden, Jr.: I was hesitating there for a while since we had gone through this Budget process in such detailed critique. Only a few days ago today's process would have been a pretty straightforward process. It seems hypocritical to me to have sat here and agreed on a budget document and then come back and vote against the means and ways required to fund that Budget.

Seeing that we are all purporting to be reasonable and understanding Members and representatives of the people, I did not expect to have that sort of unreasonable situation.

There has been a sad trend from the very beginning of this Budget process, of voting expenditure then—it appears for the sake of opposing—not supporting the required legislation to accomplish the required expenditure that we all agreed upon. As a new Member of this Parliament, I find it very hard to consider that as responsible leadership. First to get up here and agree on expenditure that is required for the country and then not only was there criticism concerning revenue measures, the increased taxes, but there was also criticism regarding the required borrowing of funds to fund the Budget. If we are living in a realistic world—which I sometimes wonder if we all are—it is unbelievable that we can have a budget with a shortfall between revenue and expenditure and agree for that budget and then not agree on ways of finding the funding to make up that shortfall.

Again, that leads me to believe that we have some Members here who are strictly opposing for the sake of opposition, bogging down the entire operation of the country instead of making a genuine contribution as they were elected to do.

I can remember some discussion about a utopia being built a few miles away. If we lived in that utopia, we could spend as much money as we wanted and not have to worry about where it came from. Since we are not in a utopia, but in the real Cayman Islands, I am happy to see that we have a government willing to come forward and on short notice and through difficult times, come up with a sustainable plan that will allow the country to continue on the path of success that it has been on without any major hiccups along the way.

The Government was able to accomplish a budget required, and then an attempt to make up the shortfall with a “better balance” (a term very near and dear to my heart!) of new revenue measures as well as some required borrowing. There were no unbearable tax burdens and there was no unbearable amount of money necessary to be borrowed. I commend the Government on the balance they achieved which required funding to carry the country forward for another year.

When the revenue packages were introduced, other Members of this House and I made it very clear that we were not elated with the existing situation. We also made it very clear to the Government that we would support this current Budget, but that we would not support any future budgets with the same makeup. The reason is that we consider it unreasonable to expect a new government to come into power, finding the country in the situation it was in—some $25 million shortfall—and expect them to turn that around without any borrowing or new tax package. That would be expecting far too much!

So, we were supportive and explained that we would support and assist the Government in trying to find new revenue measures after getting over this hurdle with which we were all faced. The increases we referred to, when they were voted on them had very little debate because the Government of the day searched hard and long and found some areas they felt would have the least impact on the beloved people of the Cayman Islands.

We can hear that the general public has not been up in arms, as they have in previous times with public meetings and everything else. They have accepted that this is the way that is necessary as a temporary fix, even though painful to all involved. Reasonable people who elected us to be their leaders have accepted this as being necessary. Yet, we have responsible individuals who were elected by the people to represent them who come in here playing party politics, parochial or whatever other type of politics, opposing strictly for the sake of opposition, holding up the running of the country. That has to be seen as nothing less than irresponsible.

There have been many discussions and talk about the injustice of the current increased revenue measures. There has been much discussion about the borrowing. Today we now have Bills before us required to implement the funding of the Budget. Even though we are close to the stage where our Government can get started with the business of running the country with a budget to operate with, we still seem to have one stumbling block here.

When I looked at the Bills this morning I was sure we would have a straightforward operation. There was only one Bill, the Travel (Departure Tax and Environmental Protection Fee) (Amendment) (Variation of Fees) Bill, 2001, that I had any question on. As a responsible Member of the Legislative Assembly, I decided to ask the powers that be, namely, the Acting Third Official Member, what was the purpose behind that Bill and why that was necessary to come before us. I could have gotten up opposing, screaming and shouting and making all sorts of remarks which I will not bother to make, as some other Members did instead of trying to get the facts before speaking.

There is an increase in the $8 fee currently charged to $16. Right now, $6 goes to the Civil Aviation Authority (CAA), and $2 goes to the Environmental Protection Fund (EPF). We propose to increase that to $16. I heard the Second Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman criticising this increase. In his promise to vote against this increase, he said we should encourage an environmental tax policy. Now, I find it utterly ridiculous that on one hand he is criticising a tax and on the other hand suggesting that we should have such a tax for the same purpose!

It is really beyond me that a responsible Member would spend his time in debate to hold up the operation of the country on an issue that is doing exactly what he is suggesting the Government should be doing. The Government has placed an importance on the environment and feels that we should be collecting more. One method of doing that is through the departure tax. That money can now be used to help save our environment. Yet, the Second Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman is criticising that fee. Opposition for the sake of opposition—a huge waste of our time!

Currently, there is a $6 tax going to CAA. The proposal is to double that to $12. As my learned friend, the Second Elected Member for West Bay, mentioned, we sat here in December and gave a guarantee for the CAA to borrow money for the repaving of the runway in Cayman Brac. It could have been thought that since there was a change in government and since there was much discussion—

The Speaker: If I could just interrupt you for one moment, we are having quite a bit of repetition. The previous speaker spoke on this in detail. Let us move on and try to complete this.

Mr. Cline A. Glidden, Jr.: Okay, Mr. Speaker.

Not only did the CAA need additional funding for the runway in Cayman Brac, there is also a proposal to improve for safety reasons and build a new airport on Little Cayman with a new runway.

Even if the Member was to forget the fact that Cayman Brac has a new runway, at least as responsible representatives they should be supporting and encouraging a new runway for the other district he represents, Little Cayman. Again, should we believe that a responsible Member would expect his district of Cayman Brac to get a new runway, and then Little Cayman get a new airport without his support of a Bill that will give the CAA money to achieve those goals? That is evidence of how unreasonable that Member really is.

Not that I would expect him to understand, but it is also interesting that the CAA has upgrades to the airport in Grand Cayman as well. The Owen Roberts Airport is in need of expansion for safety reasons. It is hard for him to understand that since he might not see that as relating directly to his district.

There was a challenge issued earlier, that certain Members of the Legislative Assembly would vote against this new Bill. I myself am issuing a challenge as well: Any Member of this Legislative Assembly who is here to represent his or her people, elected by the people, knowing that this fee will give an increase to the EPF and that this fee will give the CAA the money required to continue the ongoing works in all three of our beloved Cayman Islands, I issue a challenge for any of those Members to vote against this Bill.

Besides that justification as to why it is necessary, again, in trying to be a responsible representative, I did some research as to what the departure taxes are around the Region and compared that to the Cayman Islands to see if what was being presented was unreasonable. I do not believe in just opposing for the sake of opposition. I believe in opposing when there is reason to oppose, but my reasons have to be based on fact, not folly.

The Bill proposes that the tax will become $20. We are known as the Gem of the Caribbean. I have spoken to cruise ship operators who say that Cayman is their premier port of call. I have noted that the cruise ships have pulled out of some locations preferring to come to the Cayman Islands.

When I look at the proposed $20 tax, in Trinidad there is a US$50 departure tax. In Jamaica, there is a US$27 departure tax. Cuba also has a $20 departure tax. Aruba and Antigua ... one is $20 and the other is $25. In the UK, it is actually $30.

My research shows me—and any other Member who would research before getting up and making statements based on folly instead of fact—that this is not an unreasonable Bill. There is no reason why we should not be able to request a $20 departure tax if that will help us keep our environment in the shape we would like it to be in with all the additional stresses and strains that are there. We should be encouraging more if we are expected to do more to save our environment.

As we all know, there are no free lunches. That mentality has to stop. Someone has to pay the piper. I am happy to see that Government has decided to make some difficult decisions. The support shown proves that when those decisions are deemed reasonable the general populace will accept them as necessary decisions to be made. The Government has taken the position that when it is necessary to make hard decisions they will make those hard decisions and not back away or look for an easy way out, or look for what is politically correct or popular. That is the attitude that got us in the position we are now.

We all campaigned about how bad things were and how things needed to change. Now, we are here and we realise how badly things need to change. I am happy to be a part of that change process I campaigned on. I say again, when these Bills are for the betterment of the country, I will support them as long as I can justify that they are necessary and in the best interest of the country. My only hope is that we will get beyond the pettiness that has been shown during this first sitting. Yesterday was a good example of the cooperation, when all Members agreed to allow the Private Members' Motions to come at the next meeting so we could finish up. Here we are on one small issue . . . we might as well have been debating the Private Members' Motions. Hopefully this was a learning experience for us all and we will do better in the future.

The Speaker: Does any other Member wish to speak? Does any other Member wish to speak?

The Elected Member for East End.

Mr. V. Arden McLean: Thank you.

I was a little reluctant to get up because it appears that whatever had to be said has been said. However, let me take it to a different level and make some suggestions and comments on some of these Bills.

First of all, during the campaign that was hotly contested for six months out of last year, one thing that every candidate campaigned on was that it was time to take tough decisions in order to get this country back on track. Well, 15 of those 57 got elected. Now it is time to make those tough decisions.

When the Travel (Departure Tax and Environmental Protection Fee) (Amendment) (Variation of Fees) Bill, 2001 was presented this morning, my first reaction was to say that I would also vote against it because it was not part of the original tax package. Having consulted with the Acting Third Official Member just before lunch, I was assured that the monies coming from the increase would be used to fund the improvements of airports and build a new one.

While I understand that, I still have some concern with this commonly termed "green fund" because this has been in place for quite some time. As of today, we still do not know what it is going to be earmarked for. No one knows where this money is going to be spent, whether it is to protect the North Sound, or to protect mosquitoes, the birds, or the bees. Then we transfer some here and we transfer some there to be used otherwise.

The Minister of Health and Information Technology spoke about good policy decisions. I support his position on that. There is much policy decisions to be completed. One happens to be deciding what is going to be done with the green fund. That needs to be addressed and soon if we are expected to vote to increase taxes that will go towards that fund. The Government now has the challenge to tell the country what that green fund is going to be used for.

The Honourable Acting Third Official Member mentioned that some of these increases had not been increased since 1979, particularly government fees. That is another challenge the Government has because expenditure does not decrease. The time has come and is long overdue, to have a review of all fees and extrapolate how much you will need over the next 10, 15, 20 years and put that out for the world to see. I understand the Leader of Government Business is going to make some contribution here this evening and I trust he will address that.

It has been some 22 years since 1979. That is not what prudent management and planning is all about. The Portfolio of Finance and Development has a big job in front of it because we as new Members will be demanding that. I trust that will come in the medium term and long term strategic planning presented to this honourable House. The people of the country need to know with some degree of projection, what they are going to be charged in years to come. You cannot just leave it for 22 years and then increase it 200 percent. That is unfair.

It would be digested much easier if we applied three dollars each year, or one year five and the next two and such like. They are the accountants and economists who talk about one thing and then the other, who can figure these things out and give the country a clear indication as to what to expect in future fees. They have to increase, they never decrease. We cannot wait 22 years and then double it.

In the Stamp Duty (Amendment) Bill, 2001, the new area called receipts with the ten cents and then on the conveyance of property with the 9 percent and the 7.5 percent, we know over the years this country may have been taken advantage of when it comes to these fees. There are many examples where the onus is left upon the business to report these things to government in an honest manner. There are many instances where they do not.

We talked about instances such as hotel room tax. We see where government has to write that off many times. This is what I am talking about. It is time that government put provisions in place to ensure that it receives every nickel, every dime owed and if not, that someone faces the judicial system. The time has come for the office of the Attorney General to collect government's money through the courts.

Businesses are mandated to provide proper accounting of fees that they have to pay government. I would venture to say there are many who submit false information to government. Or, they become bankrupt and say that they now owe and send Government IOUs, while at the same time they have already collected these fees. These people need to serve some time. I do not mean outside, I mean punishable time.

Too much of this has gone on and as a result we have a shortfall. Due to someone's crookedness we have to tax the little man to make up. So, I look forward to the reply of the Honourable Acting Third Official Member and his addressing that issue.

During Finance Committee I questioned the Leader of Government Business, the Minister for Planning, about what was being done concerning the development impact fee. His reply was that there would soon be a Bill to address that. Instead of charging by the expected cost it will be based on the square footage. I support that and I support the change being brought here today with the exception that I do not know how realistic these fees are.

We are talking about $2.50 in area A, $1.50 in area B and $.50 in area C. That sounds good for homes and apartments, but when a hotel and a commercial building and an industrial building, places a bigger impact on the infrastructure than a 4,000 square foot house. So, while these fees may seem reasonable per square foot, I think there needs to be another schedule of fees for the commercial and industrial buildings. I am sure the Leader of Government Business will address that. With his experience in planning he understands the impact that it has on the environment, on the infrastructure and roads, schools, et cetera. We just saw the amount of money being spent on roads and we have to tax someone to pay for those roads and for our schools. Therefore, when developers put more stress on the infrastructure, they must pay accordingly.

I understand the importance of applying taxes. On at least two occasions during my short tenure I called for the assistance of the people of this country straight across the board.

We heard how one of our schools may have been damaged by a little fire. The financial industry has a perfect opportunity to step up to the plate. If all those computers were damaged, they could replace those by Monday morning because our kids are right in the middle of exams and doing their IT exams within the week. They need those for the practical exams. Now, if they cannot step up to the plate with an increase in taxes, they can do a one-off cost and assist us in replacing any damaged computers. I send out that challenge to every corporate entity in this country to do that. That will then be assisting the country, if they cannot do it on a long-term basis with an increase in taxes.

I would like to press that that is properly noted so the corporate community can get the message. If the press wants to, I would like to see them contribute a few computers to our schools as well.

I am not crying to the community, I am merely appealing to the community. We recognise that if those computers are damaged that becomes another stress on the Government.

I do not want to get into this thing about "political terrorism." I think enough has been said. I would ask the Honourable Acting Third Official Member to let us know what impact the travel tax increase is going to have on the bottom line of the total tax package. I know part goes to the CAA and part goes to the EPF. It would be interesting to hear what is projected to be placed in the EPF at the end of the day as a result of the 100 percent increase.

I ask Members to think about the tough decisions that we must make and like I said, my first reaction was to maintain consistency and to vote for the package with the exception of the departure tax. Having understood the reasoning, it is a different matter. I respectfully ask Members of this House to think of the reason for taxes. We just approved the Appropriation Bill and now it is time to fund the Budget.

The Speaker: Before calling on another speaker, we have approximately 33 minutes before the hour of interruption. If it is our intention to complete the business this afternoon, I would like an indication in order for the department to be prepared.

The Honourable Minister for Planning, Communications and Works.

Hon. D. Kurt Tibbetts: I do believe it was our intention to do everything possible to complete the business of the House today. I think that we should continue that attempt, unless there is very serious objection. It seems that the majority wish to continue on. If it is possible and the staff can accommodate, perhaps we can see how long we can go on to finish.

[The Speaker suspended proceedings for a few minutes while determining if the staff would be able to accommodate the request to continue]

The Speaker: The department is prepared to go on until 6 pm. Let us hope that it will not require that much time. We shall continue and we shall certainly waive the afternoon break.

Does any other Member wish to speak? Does any other Member wish to speak? If not, does the Mover wish to exercise his right of reply?

Hon. A. Joel Walton: Thank you.

This first meeting of the 2001 Session has been quite a long one; therefore I will do my best to keep my comments to a minimum.

The Speaker: Thank you.

Hon. A. Joel Walton: A couple of points were raised, and I hope that Members will forgive me if I am not able to respond to all in an attempt to try to keep it brief.

Before getting into my reply, I wish to thank all members who participated in the debate. It certainly has been an opportunity to hear, again in some cases, the views of Members on the various measures and some new ideas. On that note, I wish to pick up on a couple of points that the Elected Member for East End raised.

The Member asked what the approximate increase in contribution to the EPF (the green fund) would be. The expected additional contribution will be somewhere in the region of $.8 million in this year alone. Therefore, next year it will be in the region of $1.6 million

To further comment on this particular fund, the Government has had an opportunity to look it and understand the need to develop a policy to deal with how it is to be used in the future, which was decided in this 2001 Budget not to seek to remove any money from that fund to be used for any purpose. That would give the Government an opportunity to really look at this fund, its origins and to develop a policy which the Government intends to present in the next Finance Committee meeting in June that will set out the various parameters of the fund and the method by which monies would be removed from the fund and set aside for specific projects.

A second point was to do with the need to have a systematic review of government fees. That particular recommendation is well received. It makes a lot of sense. I know that over the years the Honourable Financial Secretary has spoken about the need to do this. I would suggest that this particular tax package, which I agree is far-reaching because it attempts to not only introduce new ideas at this point, but to bring some fees that have not been changed since 1979 up to date.

We should see this first package as an attempt to go down that road of systematically looking at these fees. We will notice that some of the things we brought today, for example, the infrastructure development fund fee was not to increase the fee, but to simply change the way by which it is calculated to make it an easier fee to administer for the Government and for persons paying this fee. It makes the whole planning process much more certain.

The second set along this review of fees would be the fiscal advisory group, which you have heard a lot about in this meeting. It is looking beyond this particular package to see what other new areas we can seek to introduce here, in an attempt to address the long term need to reverse the trend of the greater gulf in the recurrent expenditure as opposed to growth in revenue. It is not a one-way street. The policies are a mixture.

Throughout the meeting we heard a lot about the 16 expenditure control policies. I take your advice and will not debate those again this afternoon, except to say that in presenting this Budget the Government did a lot of different things. It looked at the expenditure side and it looked at the revenue side in order to do something about closing the gap. Recognising that the gap of $46 million could not be closed at one time, even after cutting the Civil Service as far back as we could without severely hampering the delivery of those much-needed services, we were still left with a $46 million gap on the recurrent side.

With that to deal with, we had already exhausted our options of cutting expenditure; we were then left with how much should we tax as a Government. To bring a tax package of $46 million would not have been the thing to do at this point in time with the way things are now with the economy. So, Government had to look at splitting it between borrowing some $26 million and taxing some $20 million, recognising the Government's contribution. I mean, the Government does not tax the people and simply hold the money, it passes that back out in the form of salaries, purchases from the domestic economy that contributes to growth and pay for services to the public. We also buy locally. Therefore, the Government does not tax just for the sake of taxation and people recognise that. It also contributes to economic activity by using those monies to generate economic activity and further employment.

The other area also raised by the Elected Member for East End had to do with abuse. This is an area we have heard a lot about, certainly in the area of health. I know that the Honourable Minister of Health has been looking very closely at a number of outstanding advances, or loans in that area. We also have a very active debt collection operation, well managed and supported by the Legal Department.

That does not mean that we cannot continue to increase that activity and that we intend to do.

As the Member for East End highlighted, in today's package of six Bills and two Regulations, we looked at two loopholes in one particular Bill. One was the time-share and currently, there is no fee in that area. This Bill seeks to put a fee in because it captures that activity that was not so dominant ten years ago.

The second broad area was the whole debit transaction side. We had the 10 cents stamp duty on cheques. There are other forms of debit transactions, withdrawals, standing orders, money transfers, simple cash removals that were not being captured, only cheques were being captured.

We are seeking to capture the broader remit of debit transactions and require banks to submit on a monthly basis a statement with a cheque attached to it. It is not simply a fee Bill: it is an enforcement attempt to try to close that loophole.

The Member for East End also made an excellent recommendation: When it comes to looking at ways to get additional funds I am always happy to consider and that is in the area of the infrastructure fee. The fee seemed somewhat on the low side at this point. The Government undertakes to look at that. All the Government was seeking to do at this point in time is change the method of levying that fee. However, it does not mean the Government cannot, again via the fiscal advisory group, have that group look at that fee and see if there is a need to adjust the rates for various categories as well.

I think I will pick up on a comment I made earlier about the gap. If the Government and I (acting on behalf of the Third Official Member), did not introduce this combination package of borrowing $26 million and taxing $20 million as we had a $46 million gap. That means that at the end of the year another deficit, but instead of it being $10.7 million plus $5.8 million, or $16.5 million, which is what we effectively started the year with on the books, not taking into consideration other outstanding matters that we had to deal with in the first quarter, we end up with a $46 million deficit.

Clearly, we all recognise right off the bat that that is just not on. It is not sustainable; it is not sensible financial management and certainly not the road we want to see this country go down. This was a difficult year for the Government. I know that I have alluded to the fact that this difficulty will continue. However, I would like to impress that the Government feels strongly that it has made the first correct step toward addressing this difficulty.

Now, things can be difficult and get worse without the proper action. However, what the Government has put forward is an attempt to correct this difficult situation through sensible and sound action which range from expenditure controls through taxation to borrowing.

Having a $46 million gap that needed to be filled, if Government could not get through the Loan

Bill and the tax package we would end the year with a $46 million deficit. That situation is just not on.

In closing, I would like to thank all Members who contributed to the debate and gave recommendations and ideas. I have been making note of those ideas throughout the day and Government is committed to, wherever possible, taking those ideas on board. Thank you.

The Speaker: The question is that a Bill entitled, The Companies (Amendment) (Fees) Bill, 2001 given a Second Reading. Those in favour please say Aye. Those against, No.

AYES, one audible NO.

The Speaker: The Ayes have it.

AGREED BY MAJORITY: THE COMPANIES (AMENDMENT) (FEES) BILL, 2001 GIVEN A SECOND READING.

The Speaker: The question is that a Bill entitled, The Development and Planning (Amendment) (Infrastructure Fund) Bill, 2001 be given a second reading. Those in favour please say Aye. Those against, No.

AYES and NOES.

The Speaker: The Ayes have it.

AGREED BY MAJORITY: THE DEVELOPMENT AND PLANNING (AMENDMENT) (INFRASTRUCTURE FUND) BILL, 2001 GIVEN A SECOND READING.

The Speaker: The question is that a Bill entitled, The Government Fees (Amendment) (Increased Fees) Bill, 2001 given a second reading. Those in favour please say Aye. Those against, No.

AYES and NOES.

The Speaker: The Ayes have it.

AGREED BY MAJORITY: THE GOVERNMENT FEES (AMENDMENT) (INCREASED FEES) BILL, 2001 GIVEN A SECOND READING.

The Speaker: The question is that a Bill entitled, The Stamp Duty (Amendment) Bill, 2001 given a Second Reading. Those in favour please say Aye. Those against, No.

AYES and NOES.

The Speaker: The Ayes have it.

AGREED BY MAJORITY: THE STAMP DUTY (AMENDMENT) BILL, 2001 GIVEN A SECOND READING.

The Speaker: The question is that a Bill entitled, The Travel (Departure Tax and Environmental Protection Fee) (Amendment) (Variation of Fees) Bill, 2001 be given a second reading. Those in favour please say Aye. Those against, No.

Mr. Gilbert A. McLean: Mr. Speaker, can we have a division?

The Speaker: Certainly.
Madam Clerk, please call a division.

The Clerk:

Division No. 8/01

Ayes: 8

Hon. James M. Ryan
Hon. A. Joel Walton
Hon. D. Kurt Tibbetts
Hon. Linford A. Pierson
Hon. Edna M. Moyle
Capt. A. Eugene Ebanks
Mr. Cline A. Glidden, Jr.
Mr. V. Arden McLean

Noes: 4

Mr. Gilbert A. McLean
Mr. Anthony S. Eden
Mrs. J. O'Connor-Connolly
Mr. Lyndon L. Martin

Absent: 6

Hon. Samuel Bulgin
Hon. W. McKeeva Bush
Hon. Roy Bodden
Mr. Rolston M. Anglin
Mr. Alden M. McLaughlin, Jr.
Dr. Frank S. McField

The Speaker: The result of the Division is 8 Ayes, 4 Noes, 6 Absent.

AYES.

The Speaker: The Ayes have it.

AYES and NOES

AGREED BY MAJORITY: THE TRAVEL (DEPARTURE TAX AND ENVIRONMENTAL PROTECTION FEE) (AMENDMENT) (VARIATION OF FEES) BILL, 2001 GIVEN A SECOND READING.

The Speaker: The question is that the Land Holding Companies Share Transfer Tax (Amendment) (Variation of Tax) Bill, 2001 given a second reading. Those in favour please say Aye. Those against, No.

AYES and NOES.

The Speaker: The Ayes have it.

AGREED BY MAJORITY: THE LAND HOLDING COMPANIES SHARE TRANSFER TAX (AMEND- MENT) (VARIATION OF TAX) BILL, 2001 GIVEN A SECOND READING.

The Speaker: The House will now go into committee to consider a Bill entitled, the Companies (Amendment) (Fees) Bill, 2001 and five other Bills.

HOUSE IN COMMITTEE AT 4.22 PM*COMMITTEE ON BILLS

The Chairman: The House is now in Committee. With the leave of the House, may I assume that as usual we should authorise the Second Official Member to correct minor printing errors and such like in these Bills?

Would the Clerk state each Bill and read its clauses?

THE COMPANIES (AMENDMENT)(FEES) BILL, 2001

The Clerk: The Companies (Amendment) (Fees) Bill, 2001.

- |           |                                                                                              |
|-----------|----------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------|
| Clause 1. | Short title.                                                                                 |
| Clause 2. | Amendment of section 218 (1) of the Companies Law (2000R)— Fees in lieu of other provisions. |

The Chairman: The question is that Clauses 1 and 2 do stand part of the Bill. Those in favour please say Aye. Those against, No.

AYES.

The Chairman: The Ayes have it.

CLAUSES 1 AND 2 PASSED.

The Clerk: A Bill for a Law to amend the Companies Law (2000R) to increase fees under section 218, and for incidental and connected purposes.

The Chairman: The question is that the Title do stand part of the Bill. Those in favour please say Aye. Those against, No.

AYES.

The Chairman: The Ayes have it.

TITLE PASSED.*THE DEVELOPMENT AND PLANNING (AMENDMENT) (INFRASTRUCTURE FUND) BILL, 2001

The Clerk: The Development and Planning (Amendment) (Infrastructure Fund) Bill, 2001.

- |           |              |
|-----------|--------------|
| Clause 1. | Short title. |
|-----------|--------------|

- |           |                                                                                          |
|-----------|------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------|
| Clause 2. | Amendment of section 41 of the Development and Planning Law (1999R)—Infrastructure Fund. |
|-----------|------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------|

The Chairman: The question is that Clauses 1 and 2 do stand part of the Bill. Those in favour please say Aye. Those against, No.

AYES.

The Chairman: The Ayes have it.

CLAUSES 1 AND 2 PASSED.

The Clerk: A Bill for a Law to amend the Development and Planning Law (1999R) to change the method of calculating the amount of the contribution to the Infrastructure Fund, and for incidental and connected purposes.

The Chairman: The question is that the Title do stand part of the Bill. Those in favour please say Aye. Those against, No.

AYES.

The Chairman: The Ayes have it.
TITLE PASSED.

THE GOVERNMENT FEES (AMENDMENT) (INCREASED FEES) BILL, 2001

The Clerk: The Government Fees (Amendment) (Increased Fees) Bill, 2001.

- |           |                                                               |
|-----------|---------------------------------------------------------------|
| Clause 1. | Short title.                                                  |
| Clause 2. | Amendment of the Schedule to the Government Fees Law (1995R). |

The Chairman: It is open to debate, if there is no debate, the question is that Clauses 1 and 2 do stand part of the Bill. Those in favour please say Aye. Those against, No.

AYES.

The Chairman: The Ayes have it.

CLAUSES 1 AND 2 PASSED.

The Clerk: A Bill for a Law to amend the Government Fees Law to increase certain fees and for incidental and connected purposes.

The Chairman: The question is that the Title do stand part of the Bill. Those in favour please say Aye. Those against, No.

AYES.

The Chairman: The Ayes have it.

TITLE PASSED.

THE STAMP DUTY
(AMENDMENT) BILL, 2001

The Clerk: The Stamp Duty (Amendment) Bill, 2001.
 Clause 1. Short title.
 Clause 2. Amendment of the Schedule to the Stamp Duty Law (2001R)—Time Shares.

The Chairman: The question is that clauses 1 and 2 do stand part of the Bill. Those in favour please say Aye. Those against, No.

AYES.

The Chairman: The Ayes have it.

CLAUSES 1 AND 2 PASSED.

The Clerk: A Bill for a Law to amend the Stamp Duty Law (2001R) to provide for stamp duty on bank withdrawal receipts and on documents relating to the grant, assignment, or transfer of timeshares, and for incidental and connected purposes.

The Chairman: The question is that the Title do stand part of the Bill. If no debate I will put the question. Those in favour please say Aye. Those against, No.

AYES.

The Chairman: The Ayes have it.

TITLE PASSED.

THE TRAVEL (DEPARTURE TAX AND ENVIRONMENTAL PROTECTION FEE)
(AMENDMENT) (VARIATION OF FEES) BILL, 2001

The Clerk: The Travel (Departure Tax and Environmental Protection Fee) (Amendment) (Variation of Fees) Bill, 2001.
 Clause 1. Short title.
 Clause 2. Amendment of section 4 of the Travel (Departure Tax and Environmental Protection Fee) Law (2000R)—Duty of Agents.

The Chairman: The question is that Clauses 1 and 2 do stand part of the Bill. Those in favour please say Aye. Those against, No.

AYES.

The Chairman: The Ayes have it.

CLAUSES 1 AND 2 PASSED.

The Clerk: Clause 3. Amendment of section 6 of the Travel (Departure Tax and Environmental Protection Fee) Law (2000R)—Environmental protection fees.

The Chairman: There is an amendment to Clause 3. I have waived the required two day notice.
 The Honourable Acting Third Official Member.

Hon. A. Joel Walton: In accordance with the provision of Standing Order 52(1) and (2) I wish to move the following amendment to the Travel (Departure Tax and Environmental Protection Fee) (Amendment) (Variation of Fees) Bill, 2001.

Can I speak briefly to the reasons for this amendment?

The Chairman: Please go ahead.

Hon. A. Joel Walton: Clause 3 as it now stands, will have the effect of not only increasing the existing contribution from the airport travel tax to the EPF from $2 to $4 but will also have the effect of doing the same thing for ships. That was not the intention of the Bill initially. Therefore, what this amendment seeks to do is remove that clause completely and substitute a new Clause 3(1)(a) and (b). It makes it clear that the current contribution to the Environmental Protection Fee for persons on sea borne vessels remains at $2; but in the case of persons for leaving on aircraft that fee goes from $2 to $4 in line with the increase in contribution to the CAA from $6 to $12. So, this clause makes it absolutely clear that the change only applies to passengers leaving on aircraft and not to passengers leaving on cruise ships.

Thank you.

The Chairman: The amendment to the Travel (Departure Tax and Environmental Protection Fee) (Amendment) (Variation of Fees) Bill, 2001 has been duly moved. The Floor is open for debate.

The First Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman.

Mrs. Julianna Y. O'Connor-Connolly: Thank you.

By virtue of section 6(2) the proviso contained there says: "provided that the Governor-in-Council may from time to time waive or reduce any or all fees and duties prescribed in subsection (1) and (2) in relation to any person or group of persons in Cayman Brac and Little Cayman." I wonder if Mr. Walton is in a position to say whether or not Council has considered it and more particularly how these new proposals now affect this proviso "existing waivers."

The Chairman: Does the Honourable Acting Third Official Member wish to reply?

Hon. A. Joel Walton: I did not get the full content of her question, I will just paraphrase it and you can tell me if I am right. I think she asked whether or not in this particular case the increase in travel tax from $8 to $16 would also apply in the Brac and if the Government would seek not to apply that same rate in Cayman Brac and Little Cayman. Is that the question?

The Chairman: The First Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman.

Mrs. Julianna Y. O'Connor-Connolly: I was merely bringing the proviso to his attention asking if this would extend completely or if there would be a move to extend this provision.

The Chairman: The Honourable Acting Third Official Member.

Hon. A. Joel Walton: Would the Member point out the section she is referring to?

Mrs. Julianna Y. O'Connor-Connolly: Section 6(2), the proviso, last paragraph, which actually relates to section 6(1), hence the relevance.

Hon. A. Joel Walton: Thank you.

This is a matter that Government will look into. If I understand it clearly, the Member wishes to know whether or not the Government would make some exception to this increase for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman. Is that what the Member is asking?

The Chairman: The First Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman?

Mrs. Julianna Y. O'Connor-Connolly: What I was trying to ascertain was whether or not the Government, in deciding this new fee, had taken this section into consideration. If so, can I correctly assume that the decision was made that this section would not be invoked?

The Chairman: The Honourable Acting Third Official Member.

Hon. A. Joel Walton: The Government undertakes to look into that request.

The Chairman: Any further debate? If not, I shall put the question on the amendment to clause 3 [by deleting clause 3 and substituting the following: "Amendment of section 6 of the Travel (Departure Tax and "Environmental Protection Fee) Law (2000 Revision) – Environmental protection fees 3. The Travel (Departure Tax and Environmental Protection Fee) Law (2000 Revision) is amended in section 6 by repealing subsection (1) and substituting the following subsection –

"(1) Every agent shall collect –
'(a) from every passenger in every outward bound vessel, an environmental fee of two dollars; and
'(b) from every passenger in every outward bound aircraft, an environmental protection fee of four dollars, or such sum as may be prescribed by the Governor-in-Council in regulations made under subsection (4)."]

Those in favour please say Aye. Those against, No.

AYES.

The Chairman: The Ayes have it.

AMENDMENT TO CLAUSE 3 PASSED.

The Chairman: The question is that clause 3, as amended, do stand part of the Bill. Those in favour please say Aye. Those against, No.

AYES.

The Chairman: The Ayes have it.

CLAUSE 3, AS AMENDED, PASSED.

The Clerk: A Bill for a Law to vary fees under The Travel (Departure Tax and Environmental Protection Fee) Law (2000R).

The Chairman: The question is that the Title do stand part of the Bill. Those in favour please say Aye. Those against, No.

AYES.

The Chairman: The Ayes have it.

TITLE PASSED.

THE LAND HOLDING COMPANIES SHARE
TRANSFER TAX (AMENDMENT)
(VARIATION OF TAX) BILL, 2001

The Clerk: The Land Holding Companies Share Transfer Tax (Amendment) (Variation of Tax) Bill, 2001.

- |           |                                                                                                                                                          |
|-----------|----------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------|
| Clause 1. | Short title.                                                                                                                                             |
| Clause 2. | Amendment of section 2 of The Land Holding Companies Share Transfer Tax Law (1995R)—Definitions.                                                     |
| Clause 3. | Amendment of section 3 of The Land Holding Companies Share Transfer Tax Law (1995R)—Returns, et cetera of transfers to be delivered and tax payable. |

The Chairman: The question is that Clauses 1 through 3 do stand part of the Bill. It is open to debate. If there is no debate I will put the question. Those in favour please say Aye. Those against, No.

AYES.

The Chairman: The Ayes have it.

CLAUSES 1 THROUGH 3 PASSED.

The Clerk: A Bill for a Law to amend The Land Holding Companies Share Transfer Tax Law (1995R) to vary the tax payable under section 3 of the Law and for incidental and connected purposes.

The Chairman: The question is that the Title do stand part of the Bill. Those in favour please say Aye. Those against, No.

AYES.

The Chairman: The Ayes have it.

TITLE PASSED.

The Chairman: That concludes proceedings in committee on these six Bills. The question is that the Committee report to the House. Those in favour please say Aye. Those against, No.

AYES.

The Chairman: The Ayes have it.

AGREED THAT THE BILLS BE REPORTED TO THE HOUSE.

HOUSE RESUMED AT 4.26 PM

The Speaker: Please be seated.

Reports.

The Honourable Acting Third Official Member responsible for Finance and Economic Development.

REPORTS ON BILLS

THE COMPANIES (AMENDMENT) (FEES) BILL, 2001

Hon. A. Joel Walton: In accordance with Standing Order section 86, I rise to move the suspension of the Standing Order 47 to allow the Bills to be given a third reading.

I have to report that a Bill entitled, the Companies (Amendment) (Fees) Bill 2001 was considered by a committee of the whole House and passed without amendment.

The Speaker: The Bill is set down for a third reading.
Bills, Reports.

The Acting Third Official Member.

THE DEVELOPMENT AND PLANNING (AMENDMENT) (INFRASTRUCTURE FUND) BILL, 2001

Hon. A. Joel Walton: I have to report that a Bill entitled, The Development and Planning (Amendment) (Infrastructure Fund) Bill, 2001 was considered by a committee of the whole House and passed without amendment.

The Speaker: The Bill is set down for Third Reading.
Bills, Reports.
The Acting Third Official Member.

THE GOVERNMENT FEES (AMENDMENT) (INCREASED FEES) BILL, 2001

Hon. A. Joel Walton: I beg to report that a Bill entitled, The Government Fees (Amendment) (Increased Fees) Bill, 2001 was considered by a committee of the whole House and passed without amendment.

The Speaker: The Bill is set down for Third Reading.
Bills, Reports.
The Acting Third Official Member.

THE STAMP DUTY (AMENDMENT) BILL, 2001

Hon. A. Joel Walton: I am to report that a Bill entitled, The Stamp Duty (Amendment) Bill, 2001 was considered by a committee of the whole House and passed without amendment.

The Speaker: The Bill is set down for Third Reading.
Bills, Reports.
The Acting Third Official Member.

THE TRAVEL (DEPARTURE TAX AND ENVIRONMENTAL PROTECTION FEE) (AMENDMENT) VARIATION OF FEES) BILL, 2001

Hon. A. Joel Walton: I am to report that a Bill entitled, The Travel (Departure Tax and Environmental Protection Fee) (Amendment) (Variation of Fees) Bill, 2001 was considered by a committee of the whole House and passed with one amendment.

The Speaker: The Bill is set down for Third Reading.
Bills, Reports.
The Acting Third Official Member.

THE LAND HOLDING COMPANIES SHARE TRANSFER TAX (AMENDMENT) (VARIATION OF TAX) BILL 2001

Hon. A. Joel Walton: I am to report that a Bill entitled, The Land Holding Companies Share Transfer Tax (Amendment) (Variation of Tax) Bill, 2001 was Bills, Third Reading. I have to ask for the suspension of Standing Order 47 in order to take the Third Readings on the same day.

SUSPENSION OF STANDING ORDER 47

Hon. A. Joel Walton: Mr. Speaker, in accordance with Standing Order 86, I rise to move the suspension of Standing Order 47 to allow the Bills to be given a third reading.

The Speaker: Those in favour please say Aye. Those against, No.

AYES.

The Speaker: The Ayes have it.

AGREED. STANDING ORDER 47 SUSPENDED.

THIRD READINGS

THE COMPANIES (AMENDMENT) (FEES) BILL, 2001

The Clerk: The Companies (Amendment) (Fees) Bill, 2001.

The Speaker: The Honourable Acting Third Official Member responsible for Finance and Economic Development.

Hon. A. Joel Walton: I beg to move that a Bill entitled, The Companies (Amendment) (Fees) Bill, 2001 be given a third reading and passed.

The Speaker: The question is that The Companies (Amendment) (Fees) Bill, 2001 be given a third reading and passed. Those in favour please say Aye. Those against, No.

AYES.

The Speaker: The Ayes have it.

AGREED: THE COMPANIES (AMENDMENT) (FEES) BILL, 2001 GIVEN A THIRD READING AND PASSED.

THE DEVELOPMENT AND PLANNING (AMENDMENT) (INFRASTRUCTURE FUND) BILL, 2001

The Clerk: The Development and Planning (Amendment) (Infrastructure Fund) Bill 2001.

The Speaker: The Honourable Acting Third Official Member responsible for Finance and Economic Development.

Hon. A. Joel Walton: I beg to move that a Bill entitled, The Development and Planning (Amendment) (Infrastructure Fund) Bill 2001 be given a third reading and passed.

The Speaker: The question is that The Development and Planning (Amendment) (Infrastructure Fund) Bill 2001 be given a third reading and passed. Those in favour please say Aye. Those against, No.

AYES and NOES.

The Speaker: The Ayes have it.

AGREED: THE DEVELOPMENT AND PLANNING (AMENDMENT) (INFRASTRUCTURE FUND) BILL, 2001 GIVEN A THIRD READING AND PASSED.

THE GOVERNMENT FEES (AMENDMENT) (INCREASED FEES) BILL, 2001

The Clerk: The Government Fees (Amendment) (Increased Fees) Bill, 2001.

The Speaker: The Honourable Acting Third Official Member responsible for Finance and Economic Development.

Hon. A. Joel Walton: I beg to move that a Bill entitled The Government Fees (Amendment) (Increased Fees) Bill, 2001 be given a third reading and passed.

The Speaker: The question is that The Government Fees (Amendment) (Increased Fees) Bill 2001 be given a third reading and passed. Those in favour please say Aye. Those against, No.

AYES and NOES.

The Speaker: The Ayes have it.

AGREED BY MAJORITY: THE GOVERNMENT FEES (AMENDMENT) (INCREASED FEES) BILL 2001 GIVEN A THIRD READING AND PASSED.

THE STAMP DUTY (AMENDMENT) BILL, 2001

The Clerk: The Stamp Duty (Amendment) Bill, 2001.

The Speaker: The Honourable Acting Third Official Member responsible for Finance and Economic Development.

Hon. A. Joel Walton: I beg to move that a Bill entitled, The Stamp Duty (Amendment) Bill, 2001 be given a third reading and passed.

The Speaker: The question is that that a Bill entitled, The Stamp Duty (Amendment) Bill, 2001 be given a third reading and passed. Those in favour please say Aye. Those against, No.

AYES and NOES.

The Speaker: The Ayes have it.

AGREED BY MAJORITY. THE STAMP DUTY (AMENDMENT) BILL 2001 GIVEN A THIRD READING AND PASSED.

THE TRAVEL (DEPARTURE TAX AND ENVIRONMENTAL PROTECTION FEE) (AMENDMENT) (VARIATION OF FEES) BILL, 2001

The Clerk: The Travel (Departure Tax and Environmental Protection Fee) (Amendment) (Variation of Fees) Bill 2001.

The Speaker: The Honourable Acting Third Official Member responsible for Finance and Economic Development.

Hon. A. Joel Walton: I beg to move that a Bill entitled, The Travel (Departure Tax and Environmental Protection Fee) (Amendment) (Variation of Fees) Bill 2001 be given a third reading and passed.

The Speaker: The question is that a Bill entitled, The Travel (Departure Tax and Environmental Protection Fee) (Amendment) (Variation of Fees) Bill 2001 be given a third reading and passed. Those in favour please say Aye. Those against, No.

AYES and one audible NO.

The Speaker: The Ayes have it.

AGREED BY MAJORITY: THE TRAVEL (DEPARTURE TAX AND ENVIRONMENTAL PROTECTION FEE) (AMENDMENT) (VARIATION OF FEES) BILL 2001 GIVEN A THIRD READING AND PASSED.

THE LAND HOLDING COMPANIES SHARE TRANSFER TAX (AMENDMENT) (VARIATION OF TAX) BILL 2001

The Clerk: The Land Holding Companies Share Transfer Tax (Amendment) (Variation of Tax) Bill 2001

The Speaker: The Honourable Acting Third Official Member responsible for Finance and Economic Development.

Hon. A. Joel Walton: I beg to move that a Bill entitled, The Land Holding Companies Share Transfer Tax (Amendment) (Variation of Tax) Bill, 2001 be given a third reading and passed.

The Speaker: The question is that that a Bill entitled, The Land Holding Companies Share Transfer Tax (Amendment) (Variation of Tax) Bill, 2001 be given a third reading and passed. Those in favour please say Aye. Those against, No.

AYES.

The Speaker: The Ayes have it.

AGREED: THE LAND HOLDING COMPANIES SHARE TRANSFER TAX (AMENDMENT) (VARIATION OF TAX) BILL 2001 GIVEN A THIRD READING AND PASSED.

The Speaker: Moving on to Government Motions. Government Motion No. 5/01, The Insurance Law (1999 Revision), The Insurance (Variation of Fees) Regulations, 2001.

The Honourable Acting Third Official Member responsible for Finance and Economic Development.

GOVERNMENT MOTIONS*GOVERNMENT MOTION NO. 5/01

THE INSURANCE LAW (1999 REVISION)
THE INSURANCE (VARIATION OF FEES)
REGULATIONS, 2001

Hon. A. Joel Walton: I beg to move Government Motion No. 5/01, which reads:

“WHEREAS section 15(f) of the Insurance Law (1999 Revision) provides that the Governor-in-Council may make regulations amending the Schedule of the principal Law save that any amendment increasing the scale of fees prescribed in the Schedule shall require the confirmation of the Legislative Assembly;

“AND WHEREAS the attached Insurance (Variation of Fees) Regulations 2001 were laid on the Table during the sitting of the Legislative Assembly held on the 25th day of May 2001:

“BE IT NOW THEREFORE RESOLVED THAT the Insurance (Variation of Fees) Regulations 2001 be confirmed by the Legislative Assembly pursuant to the provisions of section 15(f) of the Insurance Law (1999 Revision).”

The Speaker: Government Motion No. 5/01 has been duly moved. Do you wish to speak to it?

Hon. A. Joel Walton: I can just briefly highlight some of the changes to the schedule.

Class A insurers currently pay $7,500. This regulation moves it to $20,000 per year. Class B unrestricted currently pays $5,000; this moves it to $5,500. Class B restricted, pays $5,000, this moves it to $5,500. Insurance agents currently pay $225; this moves it to $250. Insurance broker currently pays

$1,800, this moves it to $2,400. In the case of insurance subagent there is no change. Also, in the case of insurance manager, acting for not more than 10 licensed insurance, has no change. In the case of those acting for 11 to 50 licensed insurers, this regulation moves the fee from $10,000 per year to $12,000.

For those acting for 51 to 100 licensed insurers, this regulation moves it from $10,000 to $16,000. In the case of those acting for more than 100 licensed insurers, this moves it from $10,000 to $20,000.

Those are the substantive changes to the schedule.

The Speaker: Does any other Member wish to speak? Does any other Member wish to speak?

The First Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman.

Mrs. Julianna Y. O'Connor-Connolly: Since it is late in the day I will confine my contribution to a matter of clarification. Have any soundings been done as to the possible range of effects this would have on the local market?

The Speaker: Does any other Member wish to speak? Does any other Member wish to speak? If not, would the Member exercise his right of reply?

The Honourable Acting Third Official Member responsible for Finance and Economic Development.

Hon. A. Joel Walton: I thank all Members for their tacit support and I wish to reply to the question from the First Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman.

Throughout the entire budget process, when considering revenue measures, extensive discussions were had with the financial services industry and other persons in the local private sector. As with any fee, it is difficult to get complete support. Generally the response we got back, and certainly in this case, was that the fee was manageable.

I just want to say on behalf of this particular sector, that it is well understood about Government's position. All of the sectors that we dealt with, ranging from banking to real estate, quite understood the needs to do something with these fees. Just to coin the phrase of a colleague of mine on this side, there was good positive dialogue, not only on this particular proposal, but of the fact that these proposals and examinations would be continuing into the future starting with the fiscal advisory group continuing right on with the other medium term financial strategy.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: I shall now put the question on Government Motion No. 5/01. Those in favour please say Aye. Those against, No.

AYES.

The Speaker: The Ayes have it.

AGREED: GOVERNMENT MOTION NO. 5/01 PASSED.

The Speaker: That concludes the business on the Order Paper today. I now ask for the adjournment of this Honourable House.

ADJOURNMENT

Hon. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Mr. Speaker, I move the adjournment of this Honourable House until Wednesday, 20 June 2001 at 10 am.

The Speaker: Before putting the question, Standing Order 11(6) reads, "On a motion moved under paragraph (5), a Member who is not a Member of the Government and who has obtained the right to do so, may raise any public matter for which the Government has responsibility, in order to elicit a reply from a Member of the Government responsible for the matter. After not more than twenty minutes, the Member of the Government shall be called on to reply".

I have given permission to the Second Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman to make such a statement.

The Second Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman.

RAISING OF PUBLIC MATTER FOR WHICH GOVERNMENT HAS RESPONSIBILITY

Standing Order 11(6)

ALLEGATIONS BY FORMER BANKER MR. JOHN MATHEWSON

Mr. Lyndon L. Martin: I rise to discuss an issue that I consider is of great national concern. The past few years have been characterised by numerous external pressures being placed on our financial industry, among which have been the demands of the OECD (Organisation for Economic Co-operation and Development), and the FATF (Financial Action task Force).

More recently the integrity of the Cayman Islands has been besmirched by an allegation made by a former banker in the Cayman Islands, Mr. John Mathewson, who has been convicted in the US. These statements made before the US Senate has received wide local and international coverage.

On 1 March 2001, Mathewson alleged that "a political figure" solicited a bribe of $250,000 and a percentage of the Guardian Bank shares. He also stated, "That individual is still a Member of the Legislative Assembly of the Cayman Islands."

Mr. Speaker, I think it is necessary for the Cayman Islands Government to initiate a full investigation into this allegation of political bribes to determine the validity of the allegation made and to demonstrate that no one or no institution is immune from probity.

The Speaker: Does a Member of the Government wish to reply?

The Honourable Minister for Planning, Communications and Works.

Hon. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Thank you.

In replying on behalf of the Government, I think perhaps all of us need to have a very clear understanding of exactly what the situation is with this matter at present. Perhaps it might be in good stead to briefly paint the picture that has set the stage for this matter to come to this point.

The Second Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman referred to a Mr. John Mathewson, who was convicted in the US. The statement was made before a US Banking Subcommittee of the Senate and in the statement just read he referred to the statement made on 1 March 2001 where Mr. Mathewson said that "a political figure" solicited a bribe of $250,000 and a percentage of the Guardian Bank shares. He also stated, "That individual is still a Member of the Legislative Assembly of the Cayman Islands." So I think that is the focal point why this is considered of national importance. Those statements by Mr. Mathewson alleged that someone among us is a person who solicited this bribe.

This issue with Guardian Bank goes back to the early 1990s when several complaints were made about its operations over a period of years. On the 5 August 1993, an audit team from the accounting firm of Peat Marwick Mitchell (I do not think it had yet changed its name to KPMG) supposedly prepared a report on behalf of the Inspector of Banks for the Cayman Islands.

Subsequent to that report a number of other complaints about alleged money laundering and fraud were received from some of the banks overseas clients. Resulting from that, during the years 1994 and 1995 there was joint cooperation between the US and the Cayman Islands law enforcement authorities. Eventually, charges were filed in the US and Mr. Mathewson was indicted.

On our side of the coin, when the report was received from the Inspector of Banks, controllers were put into the bank and Executive Council revoked the bank's license and eventually liquidators were appointed. The rest is history.

There is obviously bad blood between Mr. Mathewson and the Cayman Islands on a whole. It is my understanding that he has made comments to the effect that he is going to put this little 'Banana Republic' out of business. It is indeed a pity that the indictment was not done in the Cayman Islands, but it is my understanding that when the authorities were at that stage of the game he had already done what the East Enders call "took foot" for it. So, he was no longer on the Island.

So that we can understand clearly where the whole thing is coming from, regarding the statement just made by the Second Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman, especially speaking to the last paragraph of the statement, which I would like to repeat, "Mr. Speaker, I think it is necessary for the Cayman Islands Government to initiate a full investigation into this allegation of political bribes to determine the validity of the allegation made and to demonstrate that no one or no institution is immune from probity."

The Government has no problem with that. The only difficulty that may be seen is the matter of procedure. As I understand it, the Chairman of the US Senate Banking Subcommittee made some comment that the information should be passed on to the relevant authorities to see if any further action should be taken. In checking with our authorities here, namely, our Financial Reporting Unit and the Commissioner of Police, there have been no complaints made. I think since this matter has come to light in this manner, it is important for us to recognise that since this allegation has been made, the onus is on Mr. Mathewson to provide evidence to support the allegation.

I say this very loud and clear: If there is any evidence supporting such an allegation then the world must know that this Government is not going to make any attempt to hide anything. What I think will need to happen is; we certainly can go through the proper channels and ask our authorities to contact the relevant authorities in the US to seek any proof of his allegations and this can be done as publicly as necessary. There is no problem with that.

If there is no evidence forthcoming, as I suspect will be the case, then Mr. Mathewson will once again be found out to be what we know he is right now. One might think that the Government should have done something about it before. Since we are speaking in this forum about it, the fact of the matter is that legal advice was if there is any merit to the allegations it would be forthcoming to our authorities who in turn would certainly investigate whatever comes to them. Thus far there has been nothing passed on.

The difficulty is that there is nothing here to deal with, but rather some wild accusation made in some forum that ... by the way, please allow me, Sir, to take this opportunity, because I read the text of that Senate Subcommittee Report and it was totally obvious to me and whoever wants to do what they want to do can go ahead, but I am going to say this right now. It was totally obvious to me that the whole thing was orchestrated, that Mr. Mathewson was coached and trained as to what his answers should be to the questions he was asked and the whole purpose of the exercise was to put the Cayman Islands on the defensive based on the initiatives that were at hand.

I understand a little bit about it and I do not think this is the correct forum to engage any further into that. I understand there may be concerns, not only from within the Legislature, but I certainly have my own concerns as part of the legislature. At the earliest possible convenience, we would like the matter to be cleared up. This statement is asking for Government to initiate a full investigation.

I want to make it very clear that the Government has to have something to investigate. Hence, I say we will ask our authorities to contact the relevant other authorities and if there is any evidence forthcoming, certainly it will be investigated and the public and the Members will know exactly what has happened.

I am going a little bit beyond my purview here because those matters will have to be passed on to the relevant authorities over which the elected side of Government has no authority, but I do not think I have gone too far in what I am saying. That is the case. I see nodding of heads which says to me that the relevant authorities will try to find out if there is any evidence about the allegation. Certainly, once we know, it will be made public.

Unfortunately, there is nothing more I can say about it, except to reiterate that speaking on behalf of the Government (I think I can say the entire government), that there is no wish to hide anything. It is just unfortunate that this scoundrel was put in the position he was put in so that he could—what our old people call—“blackgyaad” the Cayman Islands and put us in a position where they thought for a moment we would be on the defensive, while the truth of the matter is (and their authorities know) that it was the Government of the Cayman Islands and our regulatory regime that acted on its own volition to close the bank down because of the suspicious activities.

The US authorities simply took advantage of the situation because that is where he sought refuge. In their anti-money laundering efforts, some smart person has sought to use this situation to his own advantage. Let me also take the opportunity to say very loud and clear that the Government of the Cayman Islands is very much on board with the international anti-money laundering efforts and our passage of various pieces of legislation and the practice we have in place through our regulatory regime proves that beyond a shadow of a doubt.

I would hope that if Mr. Mathewson cannot provide any evidence of his allegations, that there is some recourse for the Government and people of the Cayman Islands. That remains to be seen. Thank you.

The Speaker: On this, the last sitting of the first meeting of the 2001 Session, I would like to thank Members for their courtesies and tolerance to the Chair, the Clerk, Deputy Clerk, Hansard Officers, other office staff and the Serjeant-at-Arms for their efficient service. Also, to Anita for her service to all Members.

I cannot close and not once again offer my condolence to our Clerk, Mrs. Myrie and her husband Edward, on the tragic loss of their son. I ask that God will be very close to both of them and wish for them God's speed in helping them to bear this tragic loss.

I would also like to thank Honourable Members for the opportunity of being your presiding officer. May God bless each and every one of you, and may God bless the Cayman Islands.

The question is that this Honourable House do now adjourn until Wednesday, 20 June 2001 at 10 am. All those in favour please say Aye. Those against, No.

AYES.

The Speaker: The Ayes have it.

AT 5.12 PM THE HOUSE STOOD ADJOURNED UNTIL 10 AM WEDNESDAY, 20 JUNE 2001.

OFFICIAL HANSARD REPORT
WEDNESDAY
20 JUNE 2001
10.16 AM
First Sitting

[Prayers read by the Hon Minister for Community Development, Women's Affairs, Youth and Sports]

The Speaker: Please be seated.

The Legislative Assembly is in session. Item 2 on today's Order Paper, Reading by the Honourable Speaker of Messages and Announcements.

READING BY
THE HONOURABLE SPEAKER OF
MESSAGES AND ANNOUNCEMENTS

APOLOGIES

The Speaker: I have apologies for late attendance from the Honourable Second Official Member.

Moving on to Questions to Honourable Ministers and Members. Question 54 is standing in the name of the Third Elected Member for West Bay.

QUESTIONS TO HONOURABLE
MEMBERS/MINISTERS

QUESTION NO. 54

Deferred

No. 54: Capt. A. Eugene Ebanks asked the Honourable Minister responsible for the Ministry of Tourism, Environment and Transport to give an update on the multidisciplinary study which is now being conducted by CH2M Hill.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for the Ministry of Tourism, Environment and Transport.

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: With leave of the Honourable House, I seek that Question No. 54 be deferred until 21 or 22 June. The department is not ready with it.

MOTION TO DEFER QUESTION NO.54
Standing Order 23 (5)

The Speaker: The Motion is Question No. 54 be deferred until 21 or 22 June. Those in favour please say Aye. Those against, No.

AYES.

The Speaker: The Ayes have it.

AGREED: QUESTION NO. 54 DEFERRED UNTIL 21 OR 22 JUNE 2001

The Speaker: Moving on to Question 55, standing in the name of the Fourth Elected Member for West Bay.

QUESTION NO. 55

No. 55: Mr. Cline A. Glidden Jr. asked the Honourable Minister responsible for the Ministry of Planning, Communications and Works to give the total number of licences granted for the importation of aggregate through the North Sound.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Planning, Communications and Works.

Hon. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Currently three operators have been granted permission from Government to import aggregate into Grand Cayman. These companies are Caribbean Stone, Caribbean Aggregate and Quarry Products.

While the question referred to the importation of aggregate through the North Sound, the answer does not address the point because permission is not granted with the importation through the North Sound as part of the condition. The ability to offload is not limited to the North Sound.

SUPPLEMENTARIES

The Speaker: The Fourth Elected Member for West Bay.

Mr. Cline A. Glidden Jr.: I thank the Minister for his clarification.

Can the Honourable Minister say what other limitations are included as part of the licence? Since we have such an environmental concern with the North Sound, I wonder if consideration has been given to offloading in other areas, namely, our main port.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Planning, Communications and Works.

Hon. D. Kurt Tibbetts: The Government is aware that is not the most acceptable situation. The Port, as it is now, is not ready for the offloading of aggregate in the way it is imported. The ongoing operations through the North Sound are makeshift because necessity is the mother of invention.

We had a meeting with these three importers very recently and concerns were aired about coming through the North Sound. We plan to meet with them again shortly. The view was they were going to talk some things through to look at alternate sites to off-load the imported aggregate.

The Speaker: The Fourth Elected Member for West Bay.

Mr. Cline A. Glidden Jr.: Can the Honourable Minister say if there are any limitations to the number of trips through the North Sound, as well as the capacity of the loads for each trip? I have had reports about barges waiting outside the reef until the tide gets higher. I noticed in the answer that one of the major suppliers of aggregate, Quarry Products, has also been given a licence. Is the plan to supplement the mining operations at East End with the importation of aggregate? I would expect to see an increased amount of traffic through the North Sound. Because of possible damage to the North Sound area are restrictions being considered to prevent this?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Planning, Communications and Works.

Hon. D. Kurt Tibbetts: It is not going to be easy to give the Member the answer he is seeking because we are working through a lot of issues as we speak between the Government, the Ministry and the three importers.

The conditions Government has given to the importers involve regulating the situation especially since we have to mitigate any further damage to the North Sound. Everyone is looking at the present situation as one that is temporary.

The answer to the situation is now being worked out. There has to be a level playing field. We have to be cognisant of the industry's needs while depending to a certain extent on The CH2M Hill report which will indicate what direction we take in respect of the types of aggregate we are allowed to import. Of course, we are bearing in mind what is produced locally. We have to work through all of the various situations to make sure no specific importer has any advantage over another. Costs by Government to these importers must be equal all around.

Admittedly, because of the way the situation is at present, it is not ideal. Unfortunately, it is something that has been ongoing. Government, however, is not going to leave it alone. The first step was to get the three importers together to find a situation that can work for them all. I am fairly confident that, as we work through this, we will get to where we need to be.

The important thing is to make a decision about an alternate offloading site; that is the key factor. Once we get beyond that point then the other machinations will fall into line.

While the Member may not have received a direct answer on limitations, all of that will be borne in mind and dealt with as soon as we are able to regulate the level playing field I spoke of.

The Speaker: The Second Elected Member for West Bay.

Mr. Rolston M. Anglin: Can the Honourable Minister say what other sites for offloading are available?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Planning, Communications and Works.

Hon. D. Kurt Tibbetts: The Ministry, through Executive Council, was not a proponent of granting permission for transit of fill solely through the North Sound. That is why we are looking for another site. There is no site at present identified and agreed upon.

I was not suggesting that there was another site available. There is the port, but that is not a conducive situation. I did not want to answer the question in a way that spoke to the belief that the North Sound was where we wanted it to happen, because that is not the case.

The Speaker: The Second Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman.

Mr. Lyndon L. Martin: Can the Honourable Minister indicate if Government is in possession of any proposal, or considering any option, of importing aggregate from Cayman Brac?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Planning, Communications and Works.

Hon. D. Kurt Tibbetts: If that proposal exists, it has not come through the Ministry or me. I am sorry, but I have to answer like that because I do not know of anything else.

The Speaker: The Elected Member for East End.

Mr. V. Arden McLean: Can the Honourable Minister say under what conditions is a shipper allowed to bring aggregate in through the North Sound? Is any consideration being given to assessing the damage being caused by the barges in the North Sound, and will it be applied to an importer that drags the barge across the North Sound and destroys it? The question is: what is the assessment of the cost of damage?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Planning, Communications and Works.

Hon. D. Kurt Tibbetts: At present there has been no policy decision regarding any assessment of cost simply because we are trying to work this situation as positively as we can. The importers are conscious of making every attempt to not have this happen. However, there is always the risk.

We have marked channels so they know where the deepest water is. They go with the highest tide possible, doing the best they can. We appreciate the risk, and that is why we are moving forward with the very serious process of getting an alternate site.

The difficulty is that it is impossible to say we are going to prevent any importation of this aggregate until we have that alternate site. That would create other problems within the industry which needs a supply of this aggregate. Thus we have to weigh all the factors together to make the situation as liveable as possible until we have the right answers.

If one took a hard line talking about any cost assessment, perhaps advice could be taken and that could be spoken about. Given the circumstances, everyone is trying to work in the best way possible. Therefore, that is not an appropriate line at the moment. I think if everyone can cooperate together and try to get to the point where we identify and do what we have to do to provide this alternate site, we will all be better off. That is the way I am trying to deal with it.

At the last meeting we spoke about the difficulty with the North Sound and the fact that there were a lot of concerns. The three importers who were all present understood and accepted. While I did not seek any commitment, we all spoke to the fact that they are conscious of the problem and are doing everything they can to cause the least damage while it has to be like this.

The Speaker: The Elected Member for East End.

Mr. V. Arden McLean: I do not see why any damage should be done to the North Sound. As you and I know it is a simple calculation. You know the depth of the water and you get a vessel capable of not dragging on the bottom based on the load.

The other part of my question, Mr Speaker, is how does one get permission to come through the North Sound when an import licence has been issued?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Planning, Communications and Works.

Hon. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Thus far the situation is that the port director approves any offloading site separate and apart from the existing facilities at the port. That situation has been in the port director's hands up until now.

When I speak to regulating this industry, all of those matters are being considered and will be dealt with once we are able to put the whole picture together. At present, that is the situation.

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman.

Mrs. Julianna Y. O'Connor-Connolly: Can the Honourable Minister say whether or not all three of these companies are currently bringing in aggregate (within the last six months) and if so, to what location?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Planning, Communications and Works.

Hon. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Two of the three have imported aggregate thus far. One of the three licensees has not started importation. Of the two that have imported, Caribbean Stone offloads on its own site which is where we refer to as Mr. J's Marl Pit. Caribbean Aggregate is offloading on the site adjoining what we know as the North Sound Barcadere, on the reclaimed land east of that site.

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman.

Mrs. Julianna Y. O'Connor-Connolly: Can the Honourable Minister say whether, within the past year, there have been any incidents or accidents in the North Sound or the other site with these two businesses?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Planning, Communications and Works.

Hon. D. Kurt Tibbetts: I want to be very clear as to what the Member is seeking. Is the Member speaking about boating accidents or environmental incidents?

All I know is that a couple of the channel markers' lights were damaged and repaired. It would be guesswork to speak about any other incidents, because I truly do not know anything else. I am advised that nothing has been reported to the Ministry.

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman.

Mrs. Julianna Y. O'Connor-Connolly: Just to thank the Minister for that. I was trying to ascertain if the operators were conducting business in a mode of safety.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Planning, Communications and Works.

Hon. D. Kurt Tibbetts: I think the fact that we have even gotten to the point where everybody is meeting is a real plus for this situation. The operators are very much aware and I think they will do everything they can to ensure that transhipments take place, as cleanly as possible while they have to come through the North Sound.

The Speaker: The Third Elected Member for West Bay.

Capt. A. Eugene Ebanks: With all the environmental concerns, I wonder if any consideration has been given to the possibility of upgrading our current docking facility in order to offload aggregate as an interim measure until a suitable site is found. It could possibly be done at night. I am sure it would be utilising the docking facility to a much better percentage than right now.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Planning, Communications and Works.

Hon. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Much thought has been given to the current situation. There are some difficulties with the use of the port as it is. The port itself is going to be expanded soon. There are two main factors with that expansion, one is to enhance the port facilities to be able to offload cargo, and, secondly, the offloading facilities for tourists from the cruise ships will be improved. It is not easy to marry that with what the Member is referring to. That is why we are moving as fast as we can to put the circumstances right for importing aggregate.

I am not 100 percent sure. I will speak to the Minister and the technocrats involved with the port expansion to see what is practical at this point in time. If I had to make a judgment call at present, I think I would be able to say that identifying an alternate site will happen just as quickly as the suggestion the Member is making at present.

The Speaker: The Second Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman.

Mr. Lyndon L. Martin: Can the Honourable Minister indicate if the justification for the importation of aggregate is a cost issue or a supply issue?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Planning, Communications and Works.

Hon. D. Kurt Tibbetts: I wish this question had come six months later. I would be much more prepared.

At present the need to import aggregate applies itself to demand and supply. I do not think what is being supplied locally at present can meet the entire local market.

As to the cost, one would hope the material can be imported, despite fluent competition, at a price which is very reasonable and if possible lower than it costs locally.

The Speaker: The Second Elected Member for West Bay

Mr. Rolston M. Anglin: Can the Honourable Minister say how one goes about applying for an import licence? And is there any view that there is going to be a moratorium on such licences?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Planning, Communications and Works.

Hon. D. Kurt Tibbetts: I will answer the last part first. That was part of the discussions I had with the importers. We are gathering facts that will give us the necessary information about the supply and demand. We also have to take into consideration what is being produced locally, so as to not have a situation where we allow whoever has a licence to do certain things to be able to compete. It is not a question of total protectionism, but to make it as level as possible.

To go about applying for a licence, an application is made to the Ministry responsible and the Department of Agriculture. At present, because there is no fixed policy, there is not a moratorium. However, we do not want to have to be dealing with a glut of applications because, somewhere down the line, it is going to become counterproductive and we wish to deal with it by regulating the industry as quickly as we can. Thus, we need the facts to make rational judgments.

Approval is given through Executive Council, conditional to the importer's licence through the Agriculture Department. This means the Department will go and visit the site from where the material is being imported and do the checklist with all the concerns that arise out of importing such material. Once everything is cleared with them, the import licence is issued.

The cost of getting all of this information and visiting the site is also levied to the importer.

The Speaker: The Second Elected Member for West Bay.

Mr. Rolston M. Anglin: It is my understanding that we have had incidences of barges running aground. They have not just damaged the channel markers. I have also seen pictures of the barges coming through the North Sound and I see a trail of sediment being lifted up. So, it is obvious there are serious concerns.

Since we all appreciate the North Sound is a critical part of our ecosystem and a critical part of our tourism product, I find it difficult to believe that the importers truly appreciate the risk. I understand you can do misplacement calculations based on the depth of water you are going to flow through, the vessel being utilised, and the load.

Can the Honourable Minister say if this issue was brought up in the meeting, and whether or not these importers are going to do proper displacement calculations in the future to stop this damage?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Planning, Communications and Works.

Hon. D. Kurt Tibbetts: I can assure the Member his concerns are not new. I share the same concerns he has with the same level of intensity. The matter was brought up at the meeting and when I said the importers are cognisant of these concerns and are doing everything they can to mitigate the circumstances, I say that with conviction. I am not here to say what happened previous to that meeting. I am not doubting what the Member is saying either. I can only speak about where we are at this point in time.

The channel markers have been erected to make sure that where the vessels come through the North Sound is the most suitable by way of depth. The Member for East End mentioned calculating loads and displacement and depth, and I believe the operators have conscientiously made an effort to do the job in the best manner they possibly can.

The Speaker: The Third Elected Member for George Town.

Dr. Frank S. McField: Can the Honourable Minister say why permission to import aggregate is being given without considering the way in which it will be transported into the Cayman Islands?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Planning, Communications and Works.

Hon. D. Kurt Tibbetts: I do not think I said that, and for purposes of clarity . . . I said that permission is granted through Executive Council. As to approval of an offloading site, that is done by the port director. Thus, there is consideration, but it is the port director who gives that permission.

Unless the Member is hinting that he thinks these decisions should be under one umbrella.

The Speaker: The Third Elected Member for George Town.

Dr. Frank S. McField: I guess what I am saying, to make it a little bit clearer, is that, since importation of aggregate involves the transportation of the aggregate to the Cayman Islands by sea, it would mean that when Executive Council is making a decision it has to be concerned about the possible effects the operation will have on the marine environment. My question is, when permission is granted, is Executive Council aware of what port facilities are to be used to dock or offload the aggregate?

Do they have to say they are going to offload in the North Sound, or on private property?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Planning, Communications and Works.

Hon. D. Kurt Tibbetts: The situation at present is that, before permission is granted, the operators have to indicate where they are going to be offloading the aggregate.

Permission has to be granted by the port director before the licence is issued.

The Speaker: The Second Elected Member for West Bay.

Mr. Rolston M. Anglin: Previously the Minister said the port director approves the offloading site. I appreciate he would have particular expertise. Given the impact this seems to have on the environment, I wonder if the Minister can say if the Department of the Environment (DOE) is involved. If not, will they be in the future?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Planning, Communications and Works.

Hon. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Neither the port director, the Ministry, the DOE, nor the heads of the departments involved are happy with this situation as it is. No one is wishing this was the case, they would rather see it differently. It is a situation that has sort of crept up and I find myself in the middle of it having to back track to try to get it right.

It is not something that can happen in one day because we have to make sure we plan and engage in the correct way forward. We are going through that process as fast as we can.

The impression I do not want the Member or anyone else to get is, because we cannot do anything about the situation now, we therefore leave it alone. That is not the case. The alternatives are simply to stop the importation until we put the situation right, or understand the circumstances that prevail and do the best to mitigate with those circumstances. At the same time to try to go forward and provide the alternate site and regulate the industry.

The Speaker: I appreciate the fact that this is a very sensitive question, but I have exercised a lot of tolerance. I am going to limit it to three additional supplementaries.

The Second Elected Member for West Bay.

Mr. Rolston M. Anglin: Can the Honourable Minister say on what dates the licences were granted?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Planning, Communications and Works.

Hon. D. Kurt Tibbetts: I think the first licence was issued in 1998 sometime.

[interjections]

Hon. D. Kurt Tibbetts: July, 1998 I am told.

The second licence was issued in October, 2000. The most recent one was issued about two months ago, on behalf of the company which has not yet started to import.

The Speaker: The Elected Member for East End.

Mr. V. Arden McLean: While understanding the sensitivity of the North Sound and this subject, can the Honourable Minister give this House the undertaking he will ensure the North Sound is not dragged upon by the barges that come over it? Can he also ensure importers calculate displacement so that this does not happen in the future until they get an alternate site?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Planning, Communications and Works.

Hon. D. Kurt Tibbetts: My name should be "Mr. Ensure!"

I appreciate the Member's deep concern, and I share it because concern for using the North Sound as the avenue through which the aggregate is off-loaded was one of the first things I addressed

To show good faith, and being on all fours with the Member, what I will do is write to the present three importers, although we have had this meeting. I will write explaining the conditions under which the Ministry expects them to operate and at the same time indicate Members' concerns.

The difficulty is there is no law or regulation I know of that one can point to specifically which refers to any sanctions. That is why I am taking the line of seeking cooperation which I am absolutely confident I am getting. I will flag it again to ensure the people concerned are aware. I will outline a blueprint as to how we are instructing them to operate, and that any waiver from that procedure could mean possible sanctions. I will do that, if it satisfies the Member.

I understand the Member wants to ensure other people feel the same way, and that they are going to do the best they can not to do any damage. We will do whatever we have to do, and put that in writing to them.

The Speaker: The Second Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman.

Mr. Lyndon L. Martin: Can the Honourable Minister indicate in what form this aggregate is brought here? Is it in its finished processed form or is it processed after arriving on the island and value added?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Planning, Communications and Works.

Hon. D. Kurt Tibbetts: The Department of Agriculture stipulates the condition this aggregate can be imported and that is why they do on-site visits.

I think at present there are two or three grades allowed, but they are the finished product. I do not know if this obtains in all situations, but I know in some situations it is washed prior to being allowed to be imported.

Whatever the stringent conditions are, they are set by the Department of Agriculture, and they have to be met to minimise, if not nullify, the risk of importing any foreign . . . let me leave it at that. That is why they set out their conditions and do on-site inspections.

I cannot say if anybody brings in aggregate at a certain grade and then takes it and makes it into another grade. I think if the aggregate is allowed to be imported, then these people would have the ability to do that if they wished. I am not so sure that is cost effective.

Suffice it to say, whatever condition the aggregate is allowed to be imported in, is bearing in mind all of those factors to make sure the safety concerns are met.

The Speaker: That concludes Question Time for this morning.

Moving on to item 4 Statements by Ministers and Members of the Government. A statement by The Honourable Minister responsible for the Ministry of Tourism, Environment and Transport.

STATEMENTS BY MINISTERS/MEMBERS OF THE GOVERNMENT

MERGING OF CAYMAN ISLANDS HOTEL & CONDOMINIUM ASSOCIATION (CIHCA) AND CAYMAN ISLANDS TOURISM ASSOCIATION (CITA)

Hon. W. McKeever Bush: As a result of recent developments within the Ministry and Department of Tourism as well as the tourism industry, I believe it is incumbent upon me to make the following statement.

Mr. Speaker, the merger of the two organisations representing the widest cross-section of the Cayman Islands' tourism private sector took place recently. From the time I took office I made it clear this Government would only be working with one nation-wide private organisation. The road to integration over the last six months has been fraught with challenges and frustrations. However, the amount of compromise and commitment by the members and leadership of both CIHCA and CITA is commendable and a true indication of working together for the good of the country.

Having one organisation that represents the majority of the tourism industry and, more importantly, business in all sectors and business of all sizes, will be a tremendous help in the management of and communication within the tourism industry of the Cayman Islands.

We should never find ourselves at cross-purposes doing each other's jobs. The role of the on-island operators and service providers is to ensure the tourism product is the best it can be for our guests. We have to be honest in our self-assessment of what we are providing to the marketplace for travellers to buy in light of all the competition we face. That means everything—from hotel rooms, airline seats, snorkel or dive trips, attractions, restaurants, transport—I mean everything! The quality and efficiency of services must be the best we can make it. That is the most important role of the private sector—the tourism product.

In this model of partnership the role of the public sector is different. The role of the Department of Tourism (DOT) is: firstly, it should lead the development, planning and execution of the marketing and promotions' activities of the destination in order to maximise the benefits for all stakeholders.

Secondly, it is also the role of the Department to coordinate all regulatory activities as they relate to standards and development of all parts of the product. Last, but not least, a very important role of the DOT is to research, analyse and provide input to ministerial and national policy development in sustaining tourism for these islands.

Last week His Excellency announced some important changes in the Ministry and Department of Tourism. Effective Thursday 14 June, Mr. Charles Clifford assumed the position of Acting Permanent Secretary for the Ministry replacing Mr. Harding Watler who has retired.

Mrs. Angela Martins, will shortly leave the post of Director of Tourism to head up the planning process for our landmark 500th Anniversary.

We are finalising a restructuring plan to increase the effectiveness of the organisation. The search has begun for a new director. We are in the process of identifying an interim director; this appointment will also be announced shortly.

Some people have asked the question, "What is the role of the Director of Tourism?" I believe the role is similar to that of a senior business executive. As one member of the department staff keeps saying, it is like the Chief Executive Officer of a large diverse company. The person in that job must be well-rounded in business, with a solid understanding of the unique aspects of tourism and ensuring sustainable tourism for a small island country.

As we go forward we will complete the review of the job description and make sure it captures clearly the expectations this country will have of the Director of Tourism. The Director must first and foremost be a sharp manager who is able to manage the diverse aspects of the business. These range from financial management to product development; from marketing to client relationships; and, at all times, to remain aware of important trends, challenges and opportunities.

This is a time for all of us to stay focused on the business at hand, and not get caught up in time-wasting speculation, or with marl road gossip which helps no one. The last six months have been a very important period of assessment, planning, and decision-making.

Here are some of the problems I found, which I can only say boil down to negligence and mismanagement:

1. No guiding policy document to lead the Government or the industry at a national or departmental level. The last such policy expired in 1999.

2. There was no clear marketing strategy or even marketing plan, most notably in the largest market of the United States.

The DOT was very busy and doing a lot of work, but there was a marked absence in terms of marketing planning to provide focus and accountability for the dozens of initiatives undertaken. This was documented in an audit of the DOT's marketing conducted in 1998 by Dr. Schultz, an integrated marketing specialist from the US.

Yet, despite having the problems and a rectification plan outlined for them, no one took steps to correct the problem.

3. Even within the public sector, that is, the Government, between the Ministry and Department of Tourism, there was constant bickering, in-fighting, and passing the buck.

4. Some important relationships between local public and private sector were not developed, and those that did exist were strained or counterproductive.

5. We found that $50,000 per year was being paid out to Columbia Sussex (that is Mr. Joe Young's company) without a contract or terms of reference. We received a bill from this company after the election, which we would not pay. Funds were paid out in the past to this company purportedly to bring business to Cayman but no evidence was provided to show how much business was given to other on-island properties.

6. The need for a comprehensive review of all systems and procedures within the US operation.

7. Very poor management of contracts, which did not allow value for money to be clearly demonstrated. This included the honeymoon and romance brochures' contracts which were awarded for approximately US$200,000 to a company whose principal and owner is the spouse of the former Director of US Sales and Marketing.

This contract was not awarded in accordance with Government's Financial and Stores Regulations as it did not go out to tender and only one company was invited to submit a proposal.

8. To add insult to injury, for years the Ministry and Department of Tourism systematically reported incorrect visitor arrivals to the country.

My role is to lead the way forward that will rebuild the DOT and ensure it is capable of helping the industry reverse this negative situation. My commitment to the people of the Cayman Islands, on behalf of the Government, is to do whatever is necessary to create an environment to improve tourism for all. Although we have a tremendous amount of work yet to do, I am pleased to report we have made progress in a number of areas already.

In terms of rebuilding the Department and its capabilities I have arranged to have Dr. Schultz come back for an update assessment on the marketing capability of the DOT and to help us improve on the restructuring plans we have underway.

This summer, we will begin developing the new medium term tourism policy document, which will include the private sector and hopefully Members of this House.

I am about to receive the preliminary assessment of the US operation in terms of its marketing, financial management and organisational restructuring.

We have given the advertising agency notice of our intention to put the contract out to tender with a view to ensuring that any creative agency of the Cayman Islands helps us to develop a brand image that is distinctive and effective in the market place.

During this process, I will be providing new resources to bring the necessary attention to the areas of training and tourism development services. Plus, for the first time, we intend to have a facility exclusively for a Tourism Services Training Institute, which is a joint initiative between the Ministry of Education and the Ministry of Tourism.

In the meantime, I have created a Tourism Action Committee made up of business partners from local industry and DOT representatives. The Committee is chaired by Mr. Ron Kipp. The members are Mrs. Suzie Soto, Miss Pilar Bush, Messrs Rod McDowell, Dan Tibbetts, Martin Van-der Laan, Derrington Miller, Ronnie Anglin, Lee Foster, and Mark Bastis.

The Committee has, as its mandate, to work with the DOT during this transition period to ensure local industry provides the necessary tactical programmes and products so that the DOT can refine, market and promote overseas. Since its first meeting on May 18, the committee has met four times and is providing an infusion of business focus to the industry's activities.

Turning now to the matter of the visitor arrival numbers and the announcement I made a couple of months ago in the Legislative Assembly.

I regret that I had to break this news to the public, but I felt it was something that had to be brought out in the open and corrected. The problems which led to the incorrect classification of some of the data and the consequent incorrect reporting of the numbers is now behind us, thank God. The Departments of Tourism, Immigration and Computer Services, under the guidance of the Caribbean Tourism Organisation, worked diligently over the last weeks to address the system's issues and retroactively 'clean up' the database using the new systems of classification.

Officials from the Tourism, Immigration and Computer Services Departments will now calculate these figures using revised data categories that reflect the World Tourism Organisation (WTO) definition of "tourist." This definition is based on a traveller's country of residence, purpose and length of stay as declared to immigration officials when a visitor enters another country. We have put right the data collection process that had to do with how one categorizes a tourist. I am pleased to say that, using the re-structured categories of immigration data, we are able to provide today visitor numbers for January through May 2001 that, hopefully, are absolutely, if I may say that, accurate.

For the year 2000, the numbers have been revised and all conform to WTO standards. Previously released numbers for 2000 according to the last system were 406,620. The correct figures to WTO standard are 306,143 visitors to the Cayman Islands in 2000. This is 100,487 less visitors than reported under the previous system and as forecast by the previous administration!

Since they were aware of the problems, this is equivalent to a false and misleading forecast!

Mr. Speaker, I still cannot get over the fact that leaders of this country could know of this problem for years—and you might hear them on television saying they did not know, but they did, according to the Director of Tourism. According to her, she told the Minister and the Minister told her not to do anything about it. That is her report.

I still cannot get over the fact that leaders of this country could know of this problem for years and not only do nothing about it, but continue to make false reports to the people who plan their businesses around such numbers.

This is a breakdown of the numbers. Looking at a quick snapshot of the year to date, the figure for overall air arrivals through the end of May 2001 stands at 147,680. This number is slightly higher than the same period last year, which was 142,955. For the same period, the largest market—the United States—produced 125,065 air arrivals, which was 6,768 more than through the end of May 2000.

Cruise visitors through the end of May 2001 stood at 541,723, which was 25,738 more than the same period last year.

On this slightly positive trend the DOT and the Ministry are working together as an industry to ensure the numbers increase. We are entering the slow season, and we have to prepare ourselves for it and at the same time be planning for next winter.

I plan to make a formal statement on the visitor arrivals' issue and a complete re-publishing on the monthly numbers for 2000 and 2001 year to date, by region. I want to assure the Honourable Members of this House that, from now on, the calculation of visitor arrivals will conform to the new rigorous processing standards for accuracy and will be released on a monthly basis from the DOT, by the third week of the subsequent month. There will be a more formal and detailed discussion on the numbers over the next two weeks.

We are actively working to increase the value of cruise tourism to the Cayman Islands. To that end, we were pleased to announce earlier this month that Disney will commence ports of call to the Cayman Islands in May 2002. We are equally pleased with Air Canada's announcement of non-stop scheduled service once a week from Toronto effective October 31, 2001 increasing to twice weekly on December 1. The additional airlift will help make us more competitive in the Canadian market.

Finally, I am very happy with the way the plans are shaping up for the year long celebration of the country's 500 year anniversary, to be celebrated in 2003. The Ministry of Tourism and the Office of His Excellency the Governor, with His Excellency as Chairman of the Committee, are spearheading the event. This landmark occasion can provide a major boost to tourism next year and in 2003.

We have developed a short-term US marketing plan for the balance of 2001 and we are developing the one for 2002. The other regions have always had a plan and Departments of Tourism in those countries are at work implementing their respective plans. The United Kingdom and Canada are notable examples.

You have heard me speak often these last six months about the need for partnership between private and public sector in tourism management and development. The area that gets the most attention is marketing and promotions. In these challenging economic times, it is natural to focus our energies there. I am comfortable, however, that soon DOT marketing will be re-tooled with a new business focus and new systems. This should not only prepare the marketing and promotions' plans but, more importantly, ensure they produce the publicity and awareness which brings visitors to our islands on behalf of the stakeholders.

Then, without delay, we must move on to the other areas of tourism that need national focused attention. This is, keeping the product new, fresh and competitive; addressing the attractions and entertainment challenges and creating new opportunities by seeking out new markets, for example, in sports' tourism and events' tourism.

In conclusion, Mr. Speaker, the goal of this Government is to develop an integrated strategy for sustainable tourism balancing the urgent need for short-term results with long-term viability. We are striving to do our best for our country and look forward to updating you again soon.

Before closing, I must thank my other colleagues in Executive Council and the Legislative Assembly for their cooperation and understanding as we work to address the issues facing tourism. I wish also to extend my sincerest appreciation to His Excellency the Governor, Mr. Peter Smith, for his executive support, care, and attentiveness to the full range of important matters facing tourism. His determination to rectify the issues, coupled with his business insight, has made for an effective working relationship which benefits all stakeholders of the Cayman Islands.

The Speaker: Standing Order 30(2) says, "No debate may arise on such a statement but the Presiding Officer may, in his discretion, allow questions to be put to the Member making the statement for the purpose of clarification."

I think the statement was so in-depth it would not be proper for me to allow questions at this time.

Dr. Frank S. McField: What?

[Laughter]

Mrs. Julianna Y. O'Connor-Connolly: Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman.

Mrs. Julianna Y. O'Connor-Connolly: Not challenging the Chair, but just on a minor matter of clarification: The substantive statement refers to "island" rather than "islands" and I would, subject to your ruling, ensure that the Minister intends to include the other two Cayman Islands.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for the Ministry of Tourism, Environment and Transport.

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: Mr. Speaker, I believe, notwithstanding your concern, that if they have a question I can answer, I certainly will. As far as the other two Cayman Islands are concerned, when we say "the Cayman Islands" we are certainly speaking of Cayman Brac and Little Cayman. I do not think even the Second Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman—who just came here—would think otherwise.

Dr. Frank S. McField: Mr. Speaker, it would be interesting to know why we had to read about this in the paper this morning, and now have to come and listen to it as a statement when it was already given as a statement elsewhere.

The Speaker: I have made my ruling on this particular issue and do not wish to discuss it further. I suggest that if necessary we can hold a private meeting where it can be discussed at length.

The decision has been made, and I am moving on to item 5—

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: Mr. Speaker, are you sure you do not want to reconsider since it seems there are some on the other side who want to raise questions? Let them ask any question and I will be willing to answer if I can.

I understand your concern, but for the sake of open and good government, let them ask.

The Speaker: My concern, as your presiding officer, is that I have no control over questions being asked. I have discretion to vet questions during Question Time. I will allow questions, but would, where appropriate, rule any out of order.

The Third Elected Member for George Town, if you wish to ask a question, go ahead.

[inaudible interjection]

The Speaker: Apparently there are no questions.

Going on to the next Order of Business, Other Business, Private Members' Motions. Private Member's Motion No. 5/01, Review of Government Guaranteed Home Mortgage Scheme.

Before debate starts, is it the wish of the House to take the morning break? We shall suspend for 15 minutes.

PROCEEDINGS SUSPENDED AT 11.33 PM

PROCEEDINGS RESUMED AT 11.53 PM

The Speaker: Please be seated.

Private Member's Motion No. 5/01, Review of Government Guaranteed Home Mortgage Scheme. The Fourth Elected Member for West Bay.

OTHER BUSINESS

PRIVATE MEMBERS' MOTIONS

PRIVATE MEMBER'S MOTION NO. 5/01

REVIEW OF GOVERNMENT GUARANTEED HOME MORTGAGE SCHEME

Mr. Cline A. Glidden Jr.: I beg to move Private Member's Motion No. 5/01, which reads:

"BE IT RESOLVED THAT the Government undertakes to review the present Government Guaranteed Home Mortgage Scheme to ensure that it meets the needs of Caymanian society."

The Speaker: Do you have a seconder?

Mr. Rolston M. Anglin: I beg to second the Motion.

The Speaker: Do you wish to speak to it?

Mr. Cline A. Glidden Jr.: Yes. I hope that in the essence of efficiency, I will not have to speak too much on this Motion, as, during the election, just about all Members of this House recognised and accepted the need for a revision of the existing Government Guaranteed Home Mortgage Scheme.

Over the last few years, we have recognised the need to assist members of our Caymanian society to obtain decent accommodations. In West Bay we campaigned on the fact that we realised it was now more difficult for the average person to acquire adequate housing in this country, and that this was not acceptable. We also realised that people who owned their homes were generally more content, and are better citizens because they have a stake in our country. If we are to maximise our potential as a country, housing is one of the starting points. Therefore, we feel that housing is the foundation of strong families.

Knowing that there is a scheme in place and that the new Minister of Tourism, Environment and Transport announced this in the last sitting of the House, I see the need has been recognised and we are moving forward with a new plan. So, I will briefly illustrate some of the concerns brought to my attention from many constituents over the past few months.

There are a few reasons why the existing scheme is deficient. First, the scheme was originally started to benefit low-income persons. However, many applicants are finding it increasingly difficult to qualify. For instance, in order to qualify for a mortgage of $125,000, they have to earn a monthly income of roughly $4,000. For a mortgage of $150,000, the maximum under the system, an income of approximately $4,800 is required, and this was at the existing 11.25 percent per annum rate of interest.

We all know that $4,800 is not what we consider addressing the area of low income. We have an ever-growing high percentage of our people not able to qualify for the current system.

There have been applications from not only married couples, but also from parent/child relationships, common-law partners, and siblings. Past experience has shown that many of these applicants become delinquent. For example, the child moves on, the couple separates or divorces, and the parent/spouse/sibling partner is unable to maintain the mortgage on his own. Thus the list of delinquent mortgages has increased, especially last year when interest rates were on the rise.

Another area of concern is the shortage of properties applicants qualify for.

Another area of complaint is that applications are not accepted from persons having equity that would allow them to qualify for a regular bank mortgage. Even when an individual owns property outright, he may not have the required down payment for a regular mortgage. Therefore, they feel they are being penalised while trying to help themselves by owning their own property.

And we have all heard of situations where applicants want to use their own contractor because, according to them, they can get a better price. However, under the existing scheme, an approved contractor has to be used.

These are some of the concerns that have been expressed to me. These are real difficulties our Caymanians are having. Even though there was a genuine attempt made by the Government to address this problem, it seems there have not been the dynamic changes necessary to keep up with the changes in our society.

The initial scheme was targeted at the individuals they felt were most needy at that time. Since then, economic conditions have changed and I think the plan needs to be reviewed to accommodate a wider cross-section of our needy population. I humbly suggest that what is needed is not one single plan, but a multifaceted plan that would look at the various existing situations, and try to give assistance in those areas. I think it is time we moved on to a more advanced stage of the housing scheme to ensure that all are given an equal opportunity to obtain housing.

One way to do that is to encourage the availability of fair interest rates offered by lending institutions. We should also try to ensure that lending practices are not prejudicial against any particular group of individuals. We have to try to work something out with the stamp duty waiver. We also need to ensure that adequate housing regulations are in place.

The cost of land has become prohibitive in the Cayman Islands. We could reduce the lot size requirement so as to reduce the cost of housing.

We need to put aside sufficient funds annually to provide some soft loans. We must enter into negotiations with commercial banks so Government can pre-pay some of the interest portion of the guaranteed loans at a discount.

We also need to explore the possibility of providing Government guaranteed loans through one of the other lending institutions, for example, the Caribbean Development Bank (CDB).

What we hope to achieve through our guaranteed home assistance plan is to allow all Caymanians to have the privilege of having an official address. When our people become property owners they can provide an inheritance for their children. Cars can come to their front doors, and they are no longer treated as people without a "real" home, or as second-class citizens.

It is great to be able to invite guests home without shame, to be able to bathe properly and to allow husbands and wives to enjoy privacy together. This is one of the keys to having a successful and hopefully crime free and educated society.

While doing some research, I came across some programmes that have been used elsewhere where they are tying technology together with some of these home incentive programmes which include a great deal of home tutoring.

I know that we are all aware of the need to review the present housing scheme. I conclude my short address knowing the needs and concerns about housing are shared among nearly all Members of this House. I stand aside to allow other Members to make their contributions.

The Speaker: The floor is open for debate. Does any other Member wish to speak? (Pause) Does any other Member wish to speak? (Pause) Last call, does any other Member wish to speak? . . .

The Honourable Minister responsible for the Ministry of Tourism, Environment and Transport.

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: As the Minister responsible for Housing, I am pleased to advise that the Government fully supports Private Member's Motion No. 5/01, calling for the Government to undertake a review of the Government Guaranteed Home Mortgage Scheme to ensure it meets the needs of Caymanian society.

The Housing Development Corporation (HDC), which is expected to assume full responsibility for the administration of the Government Guaranteed Home Mortgage Scheme later this year, has identified the review of the scheme as the key objective for 2001. The main purpose of the scheme which was established in late 1995, actually starting in 1996, as a joint initiative between Government and several of the participating banks, to make mortgage financing available to qualified low-to-middle income borrowers on the strength of a Government guarantee amounting to 35% of the amount being loaned. To date, 289 families have benefited under the scheme.

While the scheme has been successful in addressing some of the demands of Caymanian society, the Government still recognises that the need at the lower end of the target group has not been adequately satisfied and we are certainly seeking to address this issue.

The HDC has therefore been commissioned to undertake a comprehensive review of the scheme and to make recommendations for its re-design and its restructuring. It is expected that such a review will be completed with an additional scheme in place and a report submitted to Government before year-end.

The Board, chaired by Mr. Daniel Scott, is very active in pursuing this additional scheme. I cannot now go into the aspects of that scheme, but will certainly make an announcement either to the House or in the wider news media, when that takes place.

Members should also note that the redesign and restructuring of the Government Guaranteed Home Mortgage Scheme is just one of the many initiatives being undertaken by the Government to make mortgage financing more accessible to low income Caymanians.

The Government's overall objective is to develop a more comprehensive approach to the low income housing problem, mainly by ensuring that additional funding becomes available both for policy development as well as for on-lending. It is clear that the answer to the provision of housing for low income Caymanians will not be found in only one solution but through a variety of initiatives.

The Home Ownership Made Equitable Programme that was announced at the last sitting of the Legislative Assembly is expected to come on stream later this year. The Government has begun the process of obtaining funding for this programme and further details will be provided to Members, as soon as they are available.

A group of us, that is, the Honourable Third Official Member (presently the Governor of the Bank); and the manager, Mrs. Miller; Dr. Parson, the economist; and I, went to Caribbean Development Bank (CDB) for their last meeting in St. Lucia. While there, we stated our case and put in a request for a sum of $5 million. I can say that they responded quickly. An officer of the CDB is now on the island doing an appraisal of our request. Hopefully, we will get some response soon.

I can also say that, under the plans for the new scheme, we realised that we would have to be purchasing some property. We are well underway on that, having identified some land in East End and some in West Bay. Also the Minister of Planning and the Planning Department are looking at what Crown land might be available. The lands we identify will be sold to people and those funds will be rolled back into the scheme to purchase more property. If someone has a piece of land we will certainly work with him towards getting a home.

This is important to Government. It is part of the Government's platform. I dare say that everyone campaigned on the basis of trying to put a housing programme in place throughout the country. We have always said that would decrease, hopefully, some of the social problems in our community. This Government is committed to doing that. We are all out trying to come to grips with the problem.

I am going to say that I hope people will seek to build a home within their means, and not hang their hats any higher than they can reach. That is a problem that we have seen. There is no use in anyone getting up and saying that I am putting down the people's hopes. I am speaking from experience. We want people to be realistic.

We are looking at several schemes. It might not be the traditional block. It might be for those who can reach that. We are looking at several models and types of buildings from the US. I can say that one of the stipulations from the CDB was that any programme we go into would have to be done with a country which contributes to the CDB in order to receive funding from them.

We are looking at a system in Belize and one in Jamaica, and a Canadian one. I hope that those different schemes will meet the needs of housing for the people in this country who cannot now get a home. I say again that Government is committed to having something in place by year end.

I thank the Mover and the Seconder for bringing this Motion and I assure them of Executive Council's commitment to this programme. I also thank the other Members who have shown a particular interest in housing. I especially single out the Elected Member for East End who has been looking at various schemes himself. He recognises the needs in his constituency, and I thank him for his support.

I thank all Members for their keen interest.

The Speaker: Does any other Member wish to speak? (Pause) Does any other Member wish to speak? (Pause).

The Second Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman.

Mr. Lyndon L. Martin: I just want to thank the Mover and Seconder of this Motion for bringing a very timely motion to this House. I also thank the Minister responsible for housing in accepting it on behalf of Government.

I would like to point out that the issue of housing is prevalent in all the districts of the Cayman Islands. I agree that it is a crucial issue and I am pleased that this House is resolved to address this issue with a degree of urgency.

I see the solution for low income housing as being in three stages: First we must first address the equity issue, which the current mortgage scheme addresses and assist those who cannot come up with the necessary contribution. Second, we have to find a source of low cost funds. The Minister indicated that CDB has been approached, and there is another option, which will be discussed later on in this House, that utilises pension funds. The third is construction techniques and cost of construction. In addition to the models, we must also ensure that our licensed contractors are utilising modern and current techniques in an effort to maintain cost of the construction.

In developing a proper low income housing scheme, the zeal of providing housing must be balanced with the caution that we should not debt burden our populous. We should not over leverage an individual as that can lead to other social problems. So, we must balance those two carefully and ensure that we do not violate normal lending practices of exceeding the debt service ratio of the individual. We do not want to force individuals into aspects of our current community we have deemed causes social problems, such as working two jobs, both members of the family having to work, and children having to work part-time to help pay the mortgage. I just sound that warning.

My second concern is about when we talk of Government purchasing property and making developments for low income individuals in one hub area. I have also observed some social problems as a result of low income hubs where individuals of similar income are grouped into one neighbourhood so that children growing up in that neighbourhood grow up to accept that that is their mode and they cannot achieve anything beyond that. It is always nice to aspire to become better than your neighbour, or better than your own family. I would encourage Government to try to keep these hubs as small as possible, and rather than purchasing large landmasses, making a low income subdivision all in one, spread them out as much as possible. I appreciate the cost savings when purchasing large land parcels, but that must also be balanced with the social issues.

With those few words I give my commitment to support this Motion.

The Speaker: Does any other Member wish to speak? (Pause) Does any other Member wish to speak? (Pause)

The Third Elected Member for George Town.

Dr. Frank S. McField: Regardless of what we want to call it, we know that we have a need for housing in this country, and that need is a result of the fact that many persons are not able to secure mortgages, and when they do, find them too expensive.

I assume that with this Government Guaranteed Mortgage Scheme that many persons that have qualified, have qualified basically because they were able to aggressively lobby and be eventually seen as somebody who could maintain the heavy monthly repayments. In some cases people may not have been completely honest about their ability to finance their mortgages. People were anxious. They saw this as an opportunity to get a home. They are still locked into the belief that to own is superior to renting. Of course, we know that renting sometimes means you are not mandated to come up with those monthly mortgage payments and you do not lose something by going a grade down. In other words, you have some flexibility when you rent. When you own, there is no flexibility, necessitating a more disciplined life style.

As I recall, the Scheme, as put forward by the Minister who brought this to us, was something that would deal with a particular segment of society, but was not envisaged to be something to deal with the entire problem. I think it would be a good idea to review the Scheme because there have been many people unable to pay their mortgages and who have become delinquent. In knowing the sociology, psychology and economics of persons involved we would be better able to determine the best way in order to deal with the problem of housing.

Certainly, there have been cases where persons have not regarded the ability to secure a mortgage as demanding any more commitment and discipline in the way they live their lives and manage their finances. Perhaps counselling should have been established for persons involved in the Scheme. In other words, it should never have been assumed that it was enough just to get a mortgage and let the person go back on their own and be independent without considering the need for some type of advice as to how to budget and thus meet the priorities of the borrower's commitment.

There are persons who are still of the psychology that a debt is not an important commitment—that it is like a relationship, something that you have but you can still move on. There are persons who borrow money from one person to pay another. People need to learn money management. Until they learn that, they are going to have problems with whatever system we come up with.

I recognise the need for us to institute some kind of money management seminar or counselling. By saying that, I am not saying that we will necessarily solve our problem. We still need to find ways of getting the capital necessary to give lower interest mortgages and to cut down on the amount of money persons have to pay in order to get a house or an apartment.

There are those who talk about affordable versus low income. People know what they live in. It is hard for society to be wealthy and not have poverty. We look at all the societies that have developed in the world where people have wealth and fancy homes, and we find the same societies having accommodation that is not so fancy. America is a typical example. It is the wealthiest country in the world and the disparity between the poor and the rich is the norm. However, there is the reality that you can progress. There is mobility in that society, there is social economic mobility.

You can start off with a small house and be able to move up because there are other opportunities available to you. Because a person stays in a low income housing area, or an affordable housing area, or a government project, whatever, does not mean that providing this type of accommodation creates the problem of poverty. The problem of poverty is created by the way resources are allocated in the first place; the way monetary rewards are distributed. In looking for solutions to the housing problem, Government does not create the poverty. The poverty is already in place; otherwise Government would not be contemplating this move.

All the countries that have government subsidised housing have witnessed the fact that in bringing poor people together, or people from the lower educational, lower income group, it intensifies the development of certain asocial types of behaviour. Therefore, we associate crime with those types of housing developments. What would be the alternative to that?

Maybe the solution needs to take into account the fact that we will have social problems more intensified, or more consolidated, and therefore we need to have social management involved in the plans from the very beginning. Thus we do not want to just build physical buildings and not put social workers in there, and not put counsellors in there, and not put on the beat policemen in there.

We have already seen with the development of our community police officers, that there is some kind of structure there.

I am supporting this Motion and saying, at the same time, that, if Government finds in reviewing this, it needs to try to provide persons who cannot fit into the present mortgage schemes by developing Government housing, I find this might have to be an acceptable evil.

The Speaker: Does any other Member wish to speak? (Pause) Does any other Member wish to speak? (Pause) If not, does the mover wish to exercise his right of reply?

The Fourth Elected Member for West Bay.

Mr. Cline A. Glidden Jr.: Thank you.

In replying I would like to thank the Members who responded so positively in support of the Motion, and also those who offered silent support. I thank the Minister responsible for his response in accepting this Motion on behalf of the Government.

I would like to say that both the Second Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman, and the Third Elected Member for George Town mentioned the need for funds at a reduced rate. One of the existing problems is the cost of money. I am happy to see that the Ministry and the Department have worked to address this issue as well as the issue of affordable but acceptable construction methods.

I went back to get some information that was given when the Minister announced the Home Ownership Made Equitable Programme. It said that the lending range under the new programme was sufficiently low to enable Caymanians earning between $1,500 and $2,900 to qualify for a home between $60,000 and $95,000, or a home improvement loan between $1,000 and $25,000.

If we can use acceptable methods that will allow us to get homes built between $60,000 and $95,000, that in itself is a major accomplishment. Then, if we go further, get money that can be lent at reduced interest rates, then using the multifaceted approach both Members spoke about, we should be on the way to finding an equitable solution.

I also noted that a key component of the home programme is the financial counselling which will be offered to ensure borrowers are put on the right road of financial management for the future. I think the general consensus is that if we attack this dire need for housing and associated problems- the social ills that go along with the lack of housing and the need for adequate housing, I think that, as a country, we are moving along the right track.

I am happy to see that the new Government has placed an emphasis on this need in that they have already done quite a bit of investigation into developing a programme that will accommodate and address the needs that are so evident.

I thank the Members and look forward to their support.

The Speaker: I shall now put the question on Private Member's Motion No. 5/01-The Review of Government Guaranteed Home Mortgage Scheme. Those in favour please say Aye. Those against, No.

AYES.

The Speaker: The Ayes have it.

AGREED: PRIVATE MEMBER'S MOTION NO. 5/01 PASSED.

The Speaker: Proceedings are suspended until 2.15 PM.

PROCEEDINGS SUSPENDED AT 12.39 PM

PROCEEDINGS RESUMED AT 2.19 PM

The Speaker: Please be seated.

Moving on to Private Member's Motion No. 9/01 Select Committee to Review the Health Insurance Law, to be moved by the Second Elected Member for Bodden Town.

PRIVATE MEMBER'S MOTION NO. 9/01

SELECT COMMITTEE TO REVIEW THE HEALTH INSURANCE LAW

Mr. Gilbert A. McLean: I beg to move Private Member's Motion No. 9/01, entitled, Select Committee to Review the Health Insurance Law:

"BE IT RESOLVED THAT this Honourable Legislative Assembly appoints a Select Committee of all Elected Members to review the Health Insurance Law and matters pertinent to its operation in the Cayman Islands;

"AND BE IT FURTHER RESOLVED that the Committee take input from the public, health care and insurance providers and medical practitioners and report to this Honourable House no later than the last Meeting of the 2001 Session."

The Speaker: The Second Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman.

Mr. Lyndon L. Martin: I beg to second this Motion.

The Speaker: Private Member's Motion No. 9/01 has been duly moved and seconded. Does the Mover wish to speak to it?

The Second Elected Member for Bodden Town.

Mr. Gilbert A. McLean: This Motion is two-fold; first, the fact that the question of national health insurance in the Cayman Islands was a matter on which I campaigned in the last election with the promise I would do whatever I could to have this matter brought to the fore with the idea to review and improve; and secondly, the matter of health insurance is something that impacts on the lives of every single individual in these islands.

Leading up to 1998 the people of the Cayman Islands generally did not have health insurance. There were some who did and who realised the value of health insurance and could afford it. For the majority, people paid the medical practitioner or hospital whenever costs were incurred for health care services. For many years, the question of health insurance was mooted. There were various reports on it. It was introduced and brought into effect on 1 January 1998.

I am not here to say that health insurance is not a good means to provide for payment of health services. However, since the time health insurance has become compulsory in the Cayman Islands many people and businesses have felt the harsh impact of providing for health insurance. Many companies, particularly small businesses, complain about the cost of health insurance. I have heard many instances where individuals complain about it. In several instances, people do not understand the full value of what it is and what it should do.

I would posture that health insurance is perhaps the best known means of paying for health care worldwide. Good insurance coverage is where an individual, or individuals in a group, pay a certain amount of money each week or each month to an insurance company, and when getting medical services the person can produce the insurance information to the health care provider and the charges for that service is taken care of by the insurance company.

That is where a real problem occurs in the Cayman Islands. I believe it is true to say that from the inception of health insurance in the Cayman Islands, costs increased. This was not only the cost of the actual premium, but the fees charged by the health care providers. The general belief was, now we had insurance, the providers could be paid as they would wish to be paid.

I have heard various stories from persons who went to see medical practitioners and were quoted a certain price for the needed service. When the practitioners learned the person was insured, the price suddenly doubled or tripled. I am aware of one such instance from a personal perspective. When I inquired, I was told by the practitioner that it was not strange to charge that amount. In fact the insurance companies expected that charge, rather than what was originally quoted.

Throughout the Islands I think people find it difficult to pay the premiums especially considering the way that many of the insurance companies are responding when called upon to pay for the services rendered.

I think there is a major flaw in the way the insurance is offered in Cayman. First of all, it seems that most insurance companies get permission to offer health insurance. If one measured the result of some of these companies' records of payment, then there is a real problem indeed. There are companies here that charge relatively low premiums for coverage, but are rejected by the provider. The individual is told to pay, and then collect payment from the insurance company. That was never the intention when devising national health insurance.

The whole principle of having insurance is defeated when that occurs. It occurs daily, I would say. Even in some instances where the insurance company is well known by name, and people believe that it has assets above average, you will find providers of health care refusing to accept the cards. One main difficulty that seems to prompt this action is that the insurance companies in the Cayman Islands, and I speak generally here, take such a long time to pay the provider. That is what I have been told, by pharmacies and by doctors, for instance.

It is necessary for Government to put in place much more stringent requirements for an insurance company to offer healthcare coverage. They should be required to show that they can pay and will pay within a reasonable time.

I have noticed that the local companies, and, to the best of my knowledge this applies to all of them here, do not even appear to be branches. If anything they are agents of some overseas company. It is most frustrating and disappointing when a person in the Cayman Islands pays company X a large premium each month, and which, of course, is received most happily by the company collecting it here. The individual goes to a doctor and tenders his card as payment and it goes through the regular process . . . only to find, if he gets a reply to that particular transaction, the response is likely to come from somewhere in the United States. Something is very wrong with that practice.

We have a major example of failure where health insurance is concerned in the case of Government having taken out a major group insurance with Caribbean Home Insurance. That would have to be the biggest single group insurance that was taken out in the Cayman Islands because Government is the largest employer. It is my understanding that seamen and veterans were included and all the other people Government undertakes to provide health insurance for.

Most unceremoniously, on 15 March, this company gave notice that it was no longer offering coverage for civil servants. My understanding is that over the period of time Government had paid millions of dollars into that company and this abruptly came to an end. I also understand Government is pursuing legal action. I have not heard too much about it recently, and I think that is unfortunate. If insurance companies believe that the Government is hesitant about dealing harshly with any of them, then we will find the general attitude that they really do not have to pay.

I think for national health insurance in the Cayman Islands to work, it has to become much more clearly defined. All insurance companies must be held to the strictest line in delivering their side of the contract. A person in the Monetary Authority has been given oversight of insurance in the Cayman Islands. I personally think that should change. I think of the Monetary Authority as the authority dealing with money, but not necessarily the money which comes under the specialised area of health insurance. I think there should be a commission set up to separately deal with the matter of national health care. Also, something should be done quickly to reduce the number of persons offering health insurance in the Cayman Islands and not delivering when the time comes to pay.

I think that Government should seriously look at a nation-wide scheme either in a captive insurance form or as in the United Kingdom and Canada where everyone is covered from "the womb to the tomb"!

When a person reaches the age of 60 and is sick or not, it seems to be the point where insurance companies cut off coverage, unless you pay extra. If there is a time a person needs health insurance it is when they become older. I do not think it is sufficient for insurance companies, to deny insurance when a person reaches a certain age even though they all have their own rules. In our area as well, the opportunities for insurance companies to refuse coverage are numerous. High blood pressure is an ailment that afflicts three-quarters of the world's population and in the Cayman setting that could very well be a reason not to cover a person, or offer partial cover only.

If this matter is put into a select committee all of us legislators can examine and make recommendations while standing together in coming to an agreement as to what health insurance should be in the Cayman Islands. The one major difference in Cayman is that we have compulsory national health insurance. The US does not have that, and that is where most of the big health insurance companies exist. There is no such thing as compulsory national health insurance there. There are few countries of the world that have that.

If we choose to have it, and I believe it can work, we need to be explicitly clear as to how we will allow it to continue in this mode in this country. Also, we have to reach a decision about which companies will be given the honour to provide this service in the Cayman Islands?

The provision of health insurance in the Cayman Islands is a matter of major importance to everyone because having health insurance is compulsory.

I read where the Minister of Health has taken certain steps in regard to civil servants offering coverage for them. I was glad to hear that. Perhaps he will speak to this when he replies to this Motion. The task in this area is mammoth. I think that just about every Member of this House can speak about it from the complaints we have all received about health insurance not working as it should in these Islands.

The opportunity is here. Government has the opportunity to respond to it in a positive manner and a clear motivation would be what has occurred with insurance coverage for civil servants. Having outlined some of the reasons why I think it is good to recommend that the matter of health insurance in the Cayman Islands be referred to a select committee of this Honourable House, I would leave the subject in order to hear other Members' opinions.

The Speaker: Does any other Member wish to speak? (Pause) Does any other Member wish to speak? (Pause)

The Second Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman.

Mr. Lyndon L. Martin: Thank you.

I rise to endorse what has been put forward by the mover of this Motion, and to express my pleasure in being part of bringing this Motion to this House for consideration and hopeful passage.

Just to add to what was said by the Mover of this Motion, I have two areas of concern with the current legislation governing the provision of health insurance in the Cayman Islands. It appears that the current legislation is very much in favour of the provider of health services. I think we must be careful when drafting any amendment to this legislation that the consultation process includes providers but is not governed by providers of health services.

For example, the current legislation requires for only what I would consider low risk individuals to be insured by the health insurance providers, where high risk or uninsurable are then assumed to be provided for by the Cayman Islands Health Services. I am aware that there is a fixed dollar contribution made per policy sold by the providers that is accumulated into a fund from which the Cayman Islands Health Services can draw. I am also aware of the difficulties in drawing money out of the fund and converting that into general revenue. When we are in select committee, looking at this legislation, we must address this issue if we are going to remain in the current mode where health service providers are not governed to provide health coverage for the high risks. We must have friendlier criteria for drawing out of the fund.

However, I am more in favour of the insurance companies doing what they were designed to do—take risks. Insurance is a risk management business in which the high risk individuals are balanced with the low risk, and the premium set accordingly.

We just completed discussion and debate on the country's Budget. We note that the health services represented some $43 million in cost, and only generated some $8.5 million in revenue. I would advocate that a significant portion of this disparity can be contributed to the fact that the health services have to take on the responsibility of providing health care for persons who insurance companies deem as uninsurable.

In the select committee to review health insurance legislation, I would submit that it is time to consider the possibility of health insurance companies being mandated to insure even the uninsurable and assume the risk rather than the Cayman Islands Government.

I join with the mover of the Motion in expressing concern over what appears to be a very unjustifiable increase in the cost the health service providers charged once the national health insurance legislation was put in place. I think we need to come up with some method of controlling these costs and I appeal to the providers, through the health insurance legislation, to charge what they deem as appropriate fees for various services and that they be fixed in legislation and guided by some international standard of fees and charges. There is a Florida Board of Practitioners' Fees and Charges for various services provided in the health industry. We could adopt some benchmark to guide our services and the cost so the insurance companies could have a fixed price that they pay for these services. That would control the issue of cost.

These are ideas that I am throwing out to be considered once in select committee.

The issue of health insurance is extremely important, and we all adhere to it. At the same time, we must make sure that the costs to the individuals or businesses are also controlled. In addition to an increase in the cost of providers once the health insurance was mandated, there was also an increase in usage by individuals in visits to the providers as a result of having national insurance legislation. I advocate that there should be some form of deductible. There should be some benchmark below which amount is paid by the individual.

We should have an education programme to make the populous understand, if that is the case, when working out the required premium there is an insurance provider who has fixed rates they have to pay to the health service providers and also a deductible that would be paid by the individual to reduce the number of visits made in addition to what would be considered normal for healthy living. This would reduce the amount needed to be charged in premiums. Thus, small businesses and individuals could pay less and achieve national health insurance.

With that, I give my undertaking to support this Motion.

The Speaker: The Third Elected Member for George Town.

Dr. Frank S. McField: I would like to remind this Honourable House that in September 1997 I brought a private Member's motion that attempted, and was successful in asking Government to hire persons to look into the feasibility of an insurance company established by Government to insure members of the civil service, their families, and indigents. This was a watering down of what I had originally intended, which was to suggest that the Government establish a health insurance company that would insure persons within the Cayman Islands.

The reason for this was that I have long believed we tend to borrow systems trying to create social benefits without having first created the resources in order to distribute them as social benefits.

If we see health insurance as a social benefit, rather than a profitable business, then we have to ask ourselves whether or not we have the resources to distribute health insurance as a social benefit. If we have the resources, then in what form do those resources exist?

I think that health is important enough. However, from the very beginning, we realised that it is difficult to talk about each citizen being important, having a right to an education but not believing that each citizen should have the right to lead a healthy life and not have a right to the human compassion and knowledge we find embodied in the health services.

Those of us who understand the birth of health insurance in Germany and other countries understand that those nations got involved because disease among the working poor would have affected the health of their entire countries.

At one point we had to agree on health standards as social standards. Of course, that became a part of the social philosophy.

We have heard about the national health services in England. Regardless of how critical people may be, it helped to provide medical treatment to many of the working people who would have been denied medical treatment and would have been exploited by insurance companies that were simply interested in profit.

As with everything, we need to come to a point of moral philosophical agreement as to what it is we feel our population has the right to expect from us, and what we are able to distribute with available resources. The building of the hospital cost over $30 million, I believe. This gave concern in that if we were going to have a hospital where people were used to going for treatment, basically for free because we did have a national health system here in the Cayman Islands . . . it was not written in law, but it was understood in the culture that people could get medical attention regardless of class or whatever.

Even when people needed to be air ambulated to the United States of America to get medical treatment, they could go. People came to expect it. There are persons who went to the US and had kidney transplants that cost hundreds of thousands of dollars and they come from some of the poorest areas in our community. So, we saw in the Cayman Islands, equality in sickness. People could expect to go to the hospital and get treatment.

All of a sudden this caring and sharing philosophy as exhibited in the medical practice in the Cayman Islands underwent a drastic change without any consideration for our cultural relationship to sickness and death.

What I tried to express in that motion, and what I am trying to express in speaking to this Motion, is that the question of health insurance is not simply a question of money; it is also a question of expectations. People go to the doctor and expect, whether or not they are insured, to be treated equal to anyone else. We know that people have the habit where they want to go to the doctor for every little thing. That is not new.

Actually, Franz Fanon wrote in The Wretched of the Earth a very interesting description of why this is the case. Those who are not familiar with his analysis of colonial neurosis, and how it contributes to health problems need to familiarise themselves with his interpretation.

When people say they do not like certain doctors for whatever reason, we are basically dealing with dynamics. If some of these doctors have time clocks like our good friends the lawyers do and are watching their time . . . it becomes very expensive for insurance companies to maintain a system that is not just a health system but a social system.

Some of my doctors are very happy to see me when my blood pressure is up and has to be tested, and it is another $60 and it goes on, and on, and on, because the neurosis is there.

Some of us have not been taught to manage some of the symptoms we have and we have come to rely upon our doctor to agree with us at the end of the day. . . 'yes, Frank, you have a cold. That is why you were sneezing and that is why you were blowing your nose. I am sorry, but you will probably have that for another week or two. I can give you antibiotics, but they would probably not be very helpful.' The system desperately needs to be sorted out.

I am saying that once you tell people they cannot have access to the doctor, even when we could say 'you don't need to see a doctor, you can see the nurse' . . . we get into problems where people start to scream about discrimination. How do we get it to the point where it all seems equal?

I believe that, although we should be allowed to compete, and own things separately, medicine should be socialised. We should always maintain health because once we have lost that we cannot regain it. The Maker gives it to us, and it is not something that we should be able to trade and bargain on the open market based upon profit. That was my position from the very beginning. That is what caused me to say that Government should look at a national health insurance that would cover the people it protected. Part of the security of the state would be embodied in the ability of the state to provide good health insurance facilities.

When you take the people's taxes and build a good hospital, and when you take people's taxes and guarantee the running of the hospital, then why is it that you need to send the person out to be insured by somebody else to come to bring the insurance card to your hospital so that your hospital can then build this foreign entity? What I really believe is that in asking the question whether we have the resources to be socially responsible medically for our people, we do have the resources—the hospitals and doctors are there.

Of course, we have to pay the doctors, but we find that Government, even in the numbers it employs, covers such a large number of people employed in the Cayman Islands, in any case. Therefore, the question was why was Government going to be paying money for all of the people it employed, all of the families of these people, all the indigents in the country . . . how many thousands? 7,000? 8,000? We are going to be paying money to a company from overseas, which then pays Government back for services received!

The mere fact that Government owned the hospital meant that Government had the service it could provide. We know taxes are levied in this country for education and other things. Why not use some of these to pay for the medical facilities as well, rather than relying upon private health insurance companies to compensate you?

I am a firm believer in nationalised health services. There are those who argue about the quality. If they do not think the quality is good enough, they can go to the private sector. That is their choice. Why should we deprive certain people of services because other people want choices?

Some of us really do not choose. It is just that the Government accepted an actuarial study should be done and the result would be laid on the Table of the last Parliament. The Government made the decision, at the end, not to cover its workers, but have Caribbean Home involved and we now see what has happened. No insurance company is going to continue to be involved in an environment where it cannot manipulate the conditions.

If you are going to try to tell somebody how to run his business, then you should do your own business. It is easier to master your own business than to tell somebody else how to run theirs. These are multinational companies! They are used to having their way and their say. They are in whatever country they are in to make profits. It is profit above people.

If we are going to put people above profit in regard to health care, then Government has to become actively involved in providing the financial resources to make that possible. There are all kinds of contradictions which the mover already introduced into the debate which can be further looked at in committee. A lot of us suffer from high blood pressure, diabetes, ageing, and health insurance coverage only seems to be guaranteed for people with perfect health, perhaps the males rather than females because the ladies might get pregnant! At the end of the day coverage is so small and insignificant that we might as well not have it.

That is what people are saying. They want to be insured at the time of greatest risk, not when there is less risk. If insurance companies are only going to be interested in providing insurance when there is no risk, then we do not need them.

I am also interested in the fact that we have the possibility to make a lot of money because we can bring people in from South America and different places to be treated there. We can open our hospital up to help subsidise the cost of the hospital.

I would like to get back to the days when medical treatment made us feel equal in the Cayman Islands. We were a community where there existed so few differences among the people. Now, as a result of rapid development, we have so many. However, we can use our minds to adjust social conditions in such a way as to preserve equality on certain levels. I believe there should be a real attempt by Government to review its Health Insurance Law. The review should go to a select committee and that people should begin to think about the benefits of controlling their destiny rather than giving that destiny to more multinationals.

We are already indebted enough to multinationals from the point of view of the way in which we earn our living. Let our health not also be a question that the multinationals must decide.

The Speaker: We shall suspend for 15 minutes.

PROCEEDINGS SUSPENDED AT 3.15 PM

PROCEEDINGS RESUMED AT 4.20 PM

The Speaker: Please be seated. Debate continues on Private Member's Motion No. 9/01, Select Committee to Review the Health Insurance Law.

The Second Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. Alden M. McLaughlin, Jr.: Thank you.

I rise to indicate my support for this Motion. I believe that the Motion is warranted and timely, because there is general disenchantment with the operation of the current health insurance scheme. I believe that all Members on this side of the House have had concerns related to them by constituents who complain about a considerable number of deficiencies in the current legislation and its operation.

I can offer general endorsement for most of what has been said by other Members, but I thought that I should perhaps offer some historical perspective on the current Health Insurance Law and what, in my view, it sought to achieve when it was passed in September 1997.

Prior to the passing of this legislation, as indicated by the Third Elected Member for George Town, Government was perceived by the populace to be the insurer of health risks in these islands. Many individuals who were covered simply turned up at the hospital, got treatment and went away. School children were covered for years and years. There was, in fact, a semi-socialised health scheme in these islands for many, many years.

With the huge increase in population and the concurrent cost in the provision of health services this system could no longer be allowed to prevail. That is why the Legislature of these islands passed the Health Insurance Law.

The Law established a system of compulsory health insurance and mandated that, subject to certain carve outs, every person resident in these islands had to be covered by a contract of health insurance effected either by their employer or by themselves. Indeed, every individual who had attained the age of majority and was employed was also required to ensure that their spouse and children were also covered. The scheme was, as I see it, to defer the cost of health coverage from Government to insurance companies who for a premium would assume this risk.

The legislation provided for two significant carve outs, indigents, and the category of individual described as uninsurable. In my view, these carve outs made the objective of the health insurance scheme incapable of being achieved.

As I understand it, there are currently some 10,500 individuals who fall either into the category of indigent or uninsurable.

[inaudible interjection]

Mr. Alden McLaughlin, Jr.: Mr. Speaker, I should correct that last statement. There are some 10,500 individuals, or thereabout, for whom Government has ultimate responsibility for coverage of their health care, including indigents and the uninsurable. Included in that number are civil servants, pensioners, seamen and veterans.

As I understand the objective of the Health Insurance Law, it was to relieve Government of the tremendous amount of fiscal responsibility it had in relation to health coverage in these Islands. When the number of those whom Government is still required to pay for in relation to health coverage is that high, in my view that objective is not achievable.

So, we must find a way, some scheme by which every person resident in these Islands is able to obtain proper health care, but which does not continue to cost Government sums of money that it can ill afford.

One of the sad ironies of this legislation is that high-risk insurance persons are more likely to be declined coverage by insurance providers. It is these high-risk individuals who, by their very nature, are most likely to require health care on a very regular basis and at considerable cost, since many have chronic and serious debilitating illnesses. We have to arrive at a result that does not cause Government to dig into its almost empty coffers to continue to pay for the health care of these individuals.

We have heard about the tremendous amount of outstanding sums due Government in relation to overseas medical advances and loans. We are, as the Third Elected Member for George Town is fond of saying, still very much a caring community. Any individual who cannot afford medical care, or who is declined health insurance coverage, and requires overseas medical attention is covered by Government. The reality is that most of these sums are not recoverable. The sums involved in treating serious illness, especially in the United States, are so significant that the average individual, particularly if he is quite sick now, will not live long enough to repay Government. That is the reality of the situation.

We must, in my view, give careful thought and careful consideration to the Health Insurance Law and the appropriate medium for this to be addressed is, as the mover has suggested, a select committee of this Honourable House.

Before I sit down, I should just note some of the concerns related to me in relation to the way the current—

MOMENT OF INTERRUPTION—4.30 PM

The Speaker: If I may interrupt you for just a moment. We have reached the hour of interruption. If you will finish in a short period of time, it may be the wish of the House to allow you to continue.

Mr. Alden M. McLaughlin, Jr.: I will not be more than five minutes.

The Speaker: Please continue.

Mr. Alden M. McLaughlin, Jr.: Some of the problems related to me in relation to the current scheme are that there is abuse of the system by certain medical practitioners who claim sums which they would otherwise not claim if these amounts were being paid by the patient as opposed to the insurance company. Facts are facts.

There is also abuse by certain of the insurance companies who create reasons why coverage should be denied or declined or deferred, and often delay the payment of claims because the longer the money remains in their account the better off they are.

Then there is also the issue of the over-utilisation of the coverage, with people believing because they have health insurance they can go to the doctor far more often. These matters also need to be addressed by the select committee and we have to seek to develop a scheme that limits this abuse. The result of this abuse is to drive the premium up and make coverage more difficult to obtain and more expensive to have.

This is perhaps a bit off the topic, but these need to be considered in the general scheme of health care in these Islands and we need to give thought to the re-establishment of the Health Services Authority which will have oversight of all of these matters.

I close by indicating my support for this Motion.

The Speaker: I will entertain a motion for the adjournment of this House.

ADJOURNMENT

Hon. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Mr. Speaker, there is a meeting scheduled for tomorrow morning. I am sorry I did not know before now, but it is scheduled at 10 am tomorrow involving members of Executive Council. May I crave your indulgence to move the adjournment of this Honourable House until 11 am tomorrow.

The Speaker: The question is that this Honourable House do now adjourn until 11 am tomorrow. Those in favour, please say Aye. Those against, No.

AYES.

The Speaker: The Ayes have it.

AT 4.37 PM THE HOUSE STOOD ADJOURNED UNTIL 11 AM THURSDAY, 21 JUNE 2001.

OFFICIAL HANSARD REPORT
THURSDAY
21 JUNE 2001
11.50 AM
Second Sitting

[Prayers read by the First Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman]

Dr C - June 1983

Dr G - December 1997

Dr D - December 1984

Dr H - October 1997

The Speaker: Please be seated.

The Legislative Assembly is in session. Item 2 on today's Order Paper, Reading by the Speaker of Messages and Announcements.

READING BY THE HONOURABLE SPEAKER OF MESSAGES AND ANNOUNCEMENTS

ST. IGNATIUS PREPARATORY SCHOOL YEAR 6 STUDENTS AND TEACHERS

The Speaker: I would like to welcome the students of Year 6 of St Ignatius Preparatory School and their teachers Ms. George and Ms. Campbell. We are very happy to have you here, and hope you will benefit from your time spent here.

I would also like to apologise for the late start this morning, but I feel it was a meeting most important to the Government and the Cayman Islands.

Moving on to Questions to Honourable Ministers and Members. Question 56 is standing in the name of the Second Elected Member for George Town.

QUESTIONS TO HONOURABLE
MINISTERS AND MEMBERS

QUESTION NO. 56

No. 56: Mr. Alden M. McLaughlin, Jr. asked the Honourable Minister responsible for the Ministry of Health and Information Technology to state when "the eight doctors who presently do not meet the criteria for registration" and to whom the Honourable Minister referred in his address to health care professionals on 10 May 2001, were first registered under the Health Practitioners' Law.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Health and Information Technology.

Hon. Linford A. Pierson: In order to preserve the anonymity of the doctors concerned, I shall refer to them in my answer by using letters of the alphabet. The eight doctors were registered on the following dates:

Dr A - May 1981

Dr B - July 1982

Dr E - July 1990

Dr F - December 1995

SUPPLEMENTARIES

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman.

Mrs. Julianna Y. O'Connor-Connolly: Can the Honourable Minister say what the criteria were at the time of registration for doctors A through H?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Health and Information Technology.

Hon. Linford A. Pierson: The eight doctors were first registered under section 7(7) of the Health Practitioners' Law (Law 19 of 1974) (1995 Revision). The criteria under section 7(7) states as follows, "Government health practitioners shall be entered in the registry for the period of their service contract with Government in accordance with the capacity in which they are employed."

Only one doctor is still registered under that section. I may say, just for information, the effect of this section is that government doctors' applications for employment were not scrutinised by the Health Practitioners' Board (HPB). By virtue of working for government, such doctors' names were automatically entered on the register.

This deficiency in the system no longer exists. All applications from doctors wishing to work in the Government or private sector are now evaluated by the Health Practitioners' Board.

The Speaker: The Third Elected Member for George Town.

Dr. Frank S. McField: Is the Minister saying that the registration was the result of inefficiency in the administration, or in the law?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Health and Information Technology.

Hon. Linford A. Pierson: That is a very good question. I do not want to place any blame. I can just say exactly what the law states and under what section of the law these individuals were registered. That is section 7(7) of the of the Health Practitioners' Law (Law 19 of 1974) (1995 Revision). I will just read that over again, "Government health practitioners shall be entered in the registry for the period of their ser- vice contract with government in accordance with the capacity in which they are employed.”

This, in my opinion, was a weakness in the Law because it directed that those health practitioners working in government were automatically registered under this section of the Law without any specific scrutiny by the Health Practitioners' Board.

The Speaker: The Third Elected Member for George Town.

Dr. Frank S. McField: Would the Minister say whether there would be any identifiable inefficiency in the administration that exercised its own criteria to hire these doctors? In other words, the criteria did not exist in abstraction, it exists in reality, and the reality would have to be the law or the administration.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Health and Information Technology.

Hon. Linford A. Pierson: There is no doubt that there was and is a weakness in that section of the law. This has now been strengthened.

I would mention though that the one doctor, Dr. C. in the list, is now registered under section 7(2) of the Health Practitioners' Law, and it is this section that contains the criteria the eight doctors do not meet. Section 7(2) states, “Any person, being the holder of a degree or diploma in a health profession issued by a university, medical school or other institution approved by the Board, who desires to be registered as a health practitioner may make application to the C.M.O. in the form prescribed in Part 1 of the Schedule and shall tender with such application the prescribed fee.”

In connection with this section, the minutes of the Health Practitioners' Board meeting as far back as 19 June 1979 state the following policy decision taken by the Board, and that is, “as for qualifications and conduct a decision was made to accept only recognised diplomas from universities, medical schools or other institutions in North America [meaning the US and Canada], Great Britain and the University of the West Indies.”

The doctors' health qualifications were from universities and other institutions which do not meet the requirement of this policy decision. Furthermore, they were not registered or eligible for registration in any of the four countries, namely Canada, the UK, the US or Jamaica.

Let me just make it clear that section 7(7) of the law applied to employees at the government hospital. These employees were automatically registered by virtue of their employment with government. Section 7(2) applied to all others in the private sector, and of the 143 doctors that were subjected to the scrutiny at the time this problem arose, only eight of those did not meet the criteria.

The Speaker: I would appreciate a motion for the suspension of Standing Order 23(7) & (8).

SUSPENSION OF STANDING ORDER 23 (7) AND (8)

Hon. Linford A. Pierson: I move the suspension of Standing Order 23(7) & (8) to allow Question Time to continue.

The Speaker: The question is that we suspend Standing Order 23(7) & (8) to allow Question Time to continue beyond the hour of 11 o'clock. Those in favour please say Aye, those against No.

AYES.

The Speaker: The Ayes have it. Question Time will continue.

AGREED: STANDING ORDER 23(7) AND (8) SUSPENDED TO ALLOW QUESTION TIME TO CONTINUE BEYOND 11.00 AM.

The Speaker: The Second Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. Alden M. McLaughlin, Jr.: Can the Honourable Minister say how many of the eight doctors he has described, not presently meeting the criteria for registration are still employed by the Cayman Islands Health Services Department?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Health and Information Technology.

Hon. Linford A. Pierson: Of the eight doctors, seven are currently employed by the Health Services Department. I hasten to add, however, that from the initial stages of this problem it was made quite clear that despite any weaknesses in the registration of these doctors, it was not the intention of the Ministry to disenfranchise any of these doctors, but to try to work with them to work this problem out.

That, I can say, has been done. I have met with the doctors and they have also met with the HPB in working out a system that will be satisfactory to the HPB.

The Speaker: The Second Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. Alden M. McLaughlin, Jr.: Would the Honourable Minister agree with my interpretation of section 7(7) as being stated in the imperative. “Government health practitioners shall be entered in the registry for the period of their service contract . . . .” It seems to me and perhaps the Minister can clarify this, that neither he nor the Health Services Department or HPB have any authority or jurisdiction to interfere with the registration of government health practitioners, subject to section 7(7).

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Health and Information Technology.

Hon. Linford A. Pierson: If that were indeed the case, there would be no need for an HPB. Regardless of whether or not doctors are employed by government, it is the duty under the same law for the HPB to scrutinise every application and every doctor that works within the Cayman Islands. It is quite clear in this section and I do not want to argue points of law with the Honourable Member, especially in view of his profession. However, it is quite clear here that in any situation where it was automatic for somebody to be registered; is the same as someone being automatically registered as a lawyer or an accountant without being properly scrutinised. There has to be a weakness in that system. The same thing occurs here. If just because one is working with government one does not have to be scrutinised, then something has to be wrong with that law. That is precisely what has happened here.

The Speaker: The Second Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. Alden M. McLaughlin, Jr.: I have no doubt that the Honourable Minister's intention is laudable. However, can the Honourable Minister say whether or not he believes the views of the HPB or of the Ministry can override the law?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Health and Information Technology.

Hon. Linford A. Pierson: Mr. Speaker, I do not think that is what I am saying. I believe if that Honourable Member will read this subsection quite clearly he would also agree that this automatic provision is a weakness in the Law. It avoids the proper process of doctors being scrutinised by the HPB. Obviously this weakness has to be corrected, notwithstanding the fact that it has lasted for some 20 years. If there is a weakness in the Law, it should be corrected. That is what is being proposed.

I will go on to say that this matter really came to light after a situation back in 1998 when a doctor seeking registration was refused registration. She then said publicly that she knew of other doctors with the same weaknesses in their accreditation criteria. It was at that point the Governor directed the Chief Medical Officer to investigate the case.

Of the 145 doctors checked, there were only eight who showed this weakness. I am also happy to say that as I speak, two of those eight have now met the criteria and there are only six doctors who have been given certain criteria to fulfil.

There is no question about the HPB or the Ministry overriding the Law. The HPB has a specific duty under the Law. The Board must ensure that every doctor employed in these Islands meets the criteria. If that is not the case, regardless of whether or not it is a weakness in the Law, it has to be corrected. That is what is being done.

By extension, it could be said that because there is a weakness in the Law it should be allowed to continue without being corrected and that would be a gross injustice to the people of these Islands.

The Speaker: The Second Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. Alden M. McLaughlin, Jr.: The Honourable Minister has referred extensively to the HPB being the authority which scrutinises the qualifications of health practitioners. Can the Honourable Minister point me to the relevant section in the law that vests the HPB with such authority?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Health and Information Technology.

Hon. Linford A. Pierson: I will be very happy to do that. I will refer the Honourable Member to the Health Practitioners' Law (1995 Revision) section 5 which deals with the Board's procedures. If he would also read section 6, it gives detail of the register and section 7 continues to deal with registration. I would be happy to read it, if the Member so requires.

The Speaker: The Second Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. Alden M. McLaughlin, Jr.: I am most grateful for the Minister pointing that out to me. Section 7(2), which is one of the sections to which the Honourable Minister referred reads as follows: "Any person, being the holder of a degree or diploma in a health profession issued by a university, medical school or other institution approved by the Board, who desires to be registered as a health practitioner may make application to the C.M.O. in the form prescribed . . . ." Can the Honourable Minister say whether the Chief Medical Officer referred to in that section is the same Chief Medical Officer with responsibility for government health services?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Health and Information Technology.

Hon. Linford A. Pierson: The Chief Medical Officer is responsible for the clinical side of the hospital, the Director of Health Services for the administrative side.

I would just like to comment on the point raised in reading through section 7(2). I think it is quite clear in section 7(2) that this is the section that provides the criteria for registration and it says "Any person being the holder of a degree or diploma in a health pro- profession issued by a university, medical school or other institution approved by the Board, . . .” and this is the point that is not covered in section 7(7). It states in section 7(7) “Government health practitioners [meaning doctors at the Hospital] shall be entered . . .” whether or not they have been approved by the HPB, and that is where the weakness lies.

The Speaker: I do not think we can settle a legal question here today. If there are other aspects that need to be questioned, I think we need to move on. I will give you one further follow-up.

The Second Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. Alden M. McLaughlin, Jr.: I just wanted to ask the Honourable Minister if in his view the proper course is not to amend the Law.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Health and Information Technology.

Hon. Linford A. Pierson: That is a very good point. As I speak, we are in the process of revising the whole Health Practitioners’ Law. As a matter of fact, the draft 2001 Health Practitioners’ Law is now before the HPB for their review. As soon as that has been reviewed it will be taken to Executive Council and then made available to the public for input prior to being brought to the Legislative Assembly for passage.

The Speaker: The Second Elected Member for Bodden Town.

Mr. Gilbert A. McLean: In an earlier reply, the Minister said it was the policy of the HPB as far back as 1979 when it was decided that they would accept qualifications from the United States, Canada, Jamaica and England. Since it is a question of policy and choice, does the Minister think or agree that it should be expanded to other countries. We know that in Japan, Germany, France, Russia and Cuba and India there are some of the highest levels of training in the world. Should the criteria not be that a judgment is passed on the subjects studied by the doctor, the level to which they study and the subsequent exams? This gets away from what is obviously a very limited and subjective situation?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Health and Information Technology.

Hon. Linford A. Pierson: That is a very good point especially now since we are in the global age. Just to use an example. In the US today if a doctor out of any of the industrialised countries, be it the UK, Canada, Germany, France, wanted to work in the US, they would have to go through a specific course of training and pass the US bar in order to work there.

The point is that under the new legislation we will be looking at this whole question of broadening the scope. There will be four distinct councils under the new legislation that will deal with the doctors on the dental side, then there will be the nursing, the mid-wifery, the pharmaceutical side and others allied to medicine. It will be a much broader spectrum and will no doubt extend to other countries. As it is now, it is the policy that any doctors wanting to practice in the Cayman Islands should fall within the criteria of one of these four countries (the US, Canada, the UK and Jamaica).

The question could be asked, why not Australia? Why not India or other countries? We do know that these four countries have some of the highest standards in the world. We want to peg our standards to the very best available because our people deserve nothing less.

The Speaker: The Elected Member for East End.

Mr. V. Arden McLean: The Minister talked about the best available for our people, and I support that. He also said that, as of 1979, the policy of the HPB was that they would not register any doctor that was not registered or qualified within those four areas.

Can the Honourable Minister say, since we are looking for the best for our people, why is it that all but one of these doctors has been registered in the Cayman Islands since 1979?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Health and Information Technology.

Hon. Linford A. Pierson: That is a valid point. I think I explained that quite clearly, but I will go over it again.

Those eight doctors were registered under section 7(7) of the Health Practitioners’ Law which deals specifically with government doctors. All other doctors in the private sector had to go through the HPB and meet the criteria, and they did. It was just these eight doctors that did not.

As I said, two of those doctors have now met the criteria and we have worked out a programme for the other six. Hopefully they will take this up and get the matter behind us. It is in the interests of this country that this matter does not be continuously be dredged up in the Legislative Assembly under the motivation of maybe a minority of those doctors who do not wish to comply with these procedures.

The Speaker: The Elected Member for East End.

Mr. V. Arden McLean: Can the Honourable Minister say if we were accepting lower standards for the Government hospital than we were for the private sector?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Health and Information Technology.

Hon. Linford A. Pierson: To deal with that question as delicately as possible, I think it is true to say that there was a difference in the criteria applied to the Government health practitioners, which is quite clear under section 7(7) of the Law as applied under section 7(2). To give the impression that the doctors at the hospital may not have the same standards as the private sector would be to give a false impression.

We are looking at a situation where eight doctors—out of some 200—have to upgrade their standards through continued medical education. I would hate for the impression to be given that these doctors are inferior to the other doctors.

The Speaker: The Elected Member for East End.

Mr. V. Arden McLean: It still bothers me that there appears to be a double standard.

The Speaker: Please turn this into a question.

Mr. V. Arden McLean: I will, Mr. Speaker.

The person responsible for hiring doctors in government is the Chief Medical Officer (CMO). Is he not also the chairman of the HPB which also scrutinises the criteria for doctors in the private sector?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Health and Information Technology.

Hon. Linford A. Pierson: I think it is important for us to look at the history of these appointments. We go back as far as May 1981 up to 1997 with these eight doctors. It is true that the CMO is chairman of the HPB. I think to blame the CMO in any way for this problem would also be wrong because the Law . . . there is an obvious weakness. You referred to it as double standard. Perhaps there was a double standard because section 7(7) states specifically that “Government health practitioners shall be entered in the registry . . . .” It states that specifically.

However, under section 7(2) they had to go through the proper procedure of the HPB. This was a weakness, and this is what I referred to earlier as a loophole. This, I am happy to say has been corrected and there is no longer this problem.

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman.

Mrs. Julianna Y. O’Connor-Connolly: I believe the Minister was correct in saying that the criteria now being adhered to is in section 7(2) of the Health Practitioners’ Law. Can the Honourable Minister say if, upon his interpretation, it refers to present or future practitioners? Given the fact that it specifically refers to “who desires to be registered” as opposed to the proviso in subsection (7), which is a separate and specific category for government health practitioners.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Health and Information Technology.

Hon. Linford A. Pierson: This is not a future situation. It deals with any doctor requiring or desiring to be registered in the Cayman Islands. It is more specifically laid out in Part I of the Schedule as to requirements. This is for any doctor and would also have applied from as far back when this Law came into effect initially.

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman.

Mrs. Julianna Y. O’Connor-Connolly: Can the Honourable Minister say whether section 7(2) was in existence at the same time as section 7(7)?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Health and Information Technology.

Hon. Linford A. Pierson: I am not the legal draftsman here, but I can say that I am now looking at the Health Practitioners’ Law (1995 Revision). The original law was as far back as 1974. So, I would presume that this applied from that stage in 1974.

The Speaker: I am going to have to limit this to three more supplementary questions. We have been a long time on this.

The First Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman.

Mrs. Julianna Y. O’Connor-Connolly: Thank you for your indulgence.

Can the Honourable Minister say, by virtue of section 7(2), which now seems to be the applicable criteria, what fee is paid under the Schedule as set out by this criteria and in keeping with the letter of the Law?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Health and Information Technology.

Hon. Linford A. Pierson: I am reliably informed that government doctors do not pay a fee. Those in the private sector pay a fee of $800 per annum.

The Speaker: The Third Elected Member for George Town.

Dr. Frank S. McField: Can the Honourable Minister say, and I am not attributing this problem to him—how is it decided to rate the medical qualifications of individual doctors according to countries, rather than accredited institutions? How was that decided?

We might have different quality schools in the US and England, and we know that is a fact not just in terms of medical schools, but other schools. That is what I am trying to ascertain.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Health and Information Technology.

Hon. Linford A. Pierson: The applicants coming before the HPB are scrutinised on the basis of their qualifications, as in section 7(2) and also within the four country criteria. Those qualifications have to have been obtained within that four country criteria, the US, Canada, the UK and Jamaica.

The Speaker: The Third Elected Member for George Town, final supplementary.

Dr. Frank S. McField: The Minister refers to the four country criteria, in other words, they have to come from within those four countries. When deciding on these four countries or when continuing to employ the four country requirements rather than extending it or making it three countries or one country, what criteria is used? What is the medical criteria being used here, or is this purely subjective?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Health and Information Technology.

Hon. Linford A. Pierson: As I said earlier, this has been in effect since 1979. It was mainly because of the standards of these four countries well known to the Cayman Islands. I do not think there were really any other major reasons, but mainly that we held in high regard the standards in the US, the UK, Canada and Jamaica. It was for that specific reason that the policy—and I must state it was a policy—was reached by the HPB to use the criteria applying to those four countries.

The Speaker: Moving on to question 57, standing in the name of the Second Elected Member for George Town.

QUESTION NO. 57
(withdrawn)

No. 57: Mr. Alden M. McLaughlin, Jr. to ask the Honourable Minister responsible for the Ministry of Health and Information Technology Under what section of the Health Practitioners' Law were the eight doctors first registered and under what section are they currently registered.

Mr. Alden M. McLaughlin, Jr.: Mr. Speaker, we have traversed much of the territory covered by questions 57 and 58. There are some questions Members do wish to ask. If you think the proper procedure is for me to proceed nevertheless, to ask 57 and 58 I will do so. Otherwise, I submit that we could proceed with the additional supplementaries on the basis that those areas have already been opened for discussion as a result of the previous supplementaries.

The Speaker: I would suggest whichever of 57 and 58 is in the need of the most supplementaries, withdraw the other question and just go with one. The Second Elected Member for George Town?

Mr. Alden M. McLaughlin, Jr.: I believe the Minister has directly answered question 57, so I will ask 58.

The Speaker: Do you have a Seconder to withdraw question 57?

Dr. Frank S. McField: I second that.

The Speaker: The question is that question 57 be withdrawn. Those in favour, please say Aye. Those against, No.

AYES.

The Speaker: The Ayes have it.

AGREED: QUESTION NO. 57 WITHDRAWN.

The Speaker: The Second Elected Member for George Town.

QUESTION NO. 58

No. 58: Mr. Alden M. McLaughlin, Jr. asked the Honourable Minister responsible for the Ministry of Health and Information Technology what section of the Health Practitioners' Law or the Regulations contains the criteria which it is now alleged that the eight doctors do not meet.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Health and Information Technology.

Hon. Linford A. Pierson: I would like to thank the Member for withdrawing question 57. This question has also been dealt with in some depth, and the answer is similar to what has already been provided.

The eight doctors were first registered under section 7(7) of the Health Practitioners' Law (1995 R). Only one is still registered under that section. The one in question is now registered under section 7(2) of the Health Practitioners' Law.

Section 7(2) of the law contains the criteria which the eight doctors do not meet. I will read it again for the record: "Any person, being the holder of a degree or diploma in a health profession issued by a university, medical school or other institution approved by the Board, who desires to be registered as a health practitioner may make application to the C.M.O. in the form prescribed in Part 1 of the Schedule and shall tender with such application the prescribed fee."

SUPPLEMENTARIES

The Speaker: The Second Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. Alden M. McLaughlin, Jr.: It seems plain to me that the criteria set out in section 7(2) cannot be imported to section 7(7). I would be grateful, in light of his answer, if the Minister could confirm that the HPB or the Ministry has no authority in law to de-register doctors who have been registered as government health practitioners under section 7(7) as long as their contracts with government are in full force and effect.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Health and Information Technology.

Hon. Linford A. Pierson: I agree that section 7(2) and section 7(7) of the Health Practitioners' Law are totally different. Section 7(7) is streamlined for government doctors, and they are registered automatically under that section without having to be scrutinised by the HPB.

Section 7(2) provides the criteria for registering of doctors.

The question of reviewing that registration arises on the re-registration of the doctors. The HPB may scrutinise the registration of any doctor at any point in time. When the renewal period comes, they may take whatever action deemed appropriate.

The Speaker: Before calling on another supplementary, this question says, Health Practitioners' Law (1995 Revision), which should be deleted, as it actually refers back to 1981. If we are referring to it, we should refer to it as Health Practitioners' Law—not the 1995 Revision.

The Second Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. Alden M. McLaughlin, Jr.: Maybe I did not fully understand the Minister's response. I am still not sure if he is acknowledging that government health practitioners registered under section 7(7) cannot be de-registered as long as they remain employed by the Cayman Islands' Government. I would be grateful if he would indicate whether or not that is his position. Can they or can they not be de-registered during the course of their current contract?

The Speaker: Are you asking for a personal opinion or a policy decision?

Mr. Alden M. McLaughlin, Jr.: At the end of the day this boils down to one's interpretation of section 7(7). So, I am asking the Minister to indicate whether or not it is government's position that the HPB have the ability to de-register government health practitioners during the course of their contract with government, under section 7(7) of Health Practitioners' Law.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Health and Information Technology.

Hon. Linford A. Pierson: Mr. Speaker, you were quite correct in saying that the Health Practitioners'

Law should not be referred to as the 1995 Revision. It should be referred to as the Health Practitioners' Law (Law 19 of 1974) (1995 Revision), which is correct.

To answer the Member, there is no intention to de-register any doctor. That was not the intention. In looking at the re-registration or renewal of a doctor's contract, we looked carefully to ensure that we did not make the same mistake, by saying "we" I mean the HPB that was made previously. To have continued that mistake would have been most unfortunate. I have to congratulate the Board for spotting this weakness and in trying to correct it at this time.

The Speaker: The Elected Member for East End.

Mr. V. Arden McLean: Can the Honourable Minister say if it is not in the best interest of the general public of this country to allow this subject to play out in the press because of the sensitivity involved, the clientele these doctors have gathered since being here and if it would not be easier to grandfather these doctors into the Law?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Health and Information Technology.

Hon. Linford A. Pierson: That is a very good comment, and precisely why I decided to preserve the anonymity of the doctors. It is my understanding that much of this undercurrent is being caused by a few of the doctors. So, if this is brought to light, they have themselves to blame. It has not come from my Ministry; we have been very careful. Even when mention was made on the Cayman Islands Television Network (CITN), I took grave exception to that because I do not want the position of these doctors to be belittled in any way. That is why I have tried to keep it as confidential as possible.

I also feel that it is unfortunate that we have to go through so much of this in the public press, and otherwise, when the matter has been properly dealt with by the HPB.

The Speaker: The Third Elected Member for George Town.

Dr. Frank S. McField: Can the Honourable Minister say if there are any observable reasons why this mistake would have been allowed to continue for 20 years? If not, what are the calculated effects this situation will have regarding doctors who have given evidence in criminal cases in the Cayman Islands?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Health and Information Technology.

Hon. Linford A. Pierson: This is precisely the reason why it was felt by the HPB and endorsed by the Ministry, that it would not be fair to those doctors to merely grandfather them into the process. It was felt that by doing so would suggest that those doctors did not meet certain criteria. That is why we preferred to work with these doctors internally rather than making this a public issue.

On the question of any observable reasons why the mistake was allowed to continue for 20 years, I can only speculate on that. I would not want to point fingers at anyone. I can only say that I took up office in November 2000, and the matter was before me when I went into the Ministry. It had been pending for two years. I made it quite clear that I would not have the matter continue pending for another two years. I decided to take action to get the matter corrected as early as possible in the most reasonable and fair manner possible. I am happy to advise the House that this has been done.

The Speaker: Two final supplementaries.

The Third Elected Member for George Town.

Dr. Frank S. McField: Since section 7(2) of the Health Practitioners' Law (1974) (1995 Revision) states that "Any person, being the holder of a degree or diploma in a health profession issued by a university, medical school or other institution approved by the Board . . ." The Minister has referred not to institutions but countries, would it not have also been possible to resolve this situation by extending the categories of countries that would be permitted to be entered in as countries qualifying persons to be registered? Rather than asking them to fit into narrowly defined and subjective criteria, would it not have been possible to extend it to cover the country that these individuals came from?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Health and Information Technology.

Hon. Linford A. Pierson: I understand exactly what the Member is driving at, but this could also have an adverse side. We know there are doctors qualifying all over the place. We have an institution even in some of the Caribbean islands, in Grenada. We have doctors coming out of Mexico; we have doctors from all over the place. To make this situation carte blanche without really scrutinising and ensuring that we have doctors of the very highest calibre and qualification would be an injustice to our people.

As I mentioned, a new piece of legislation will be brought to this House and I hope that Members will take the opportunity to make input into that piece of legislation as they deem appropriate.

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman, final supplementary.

Mrs. Julianna Y. O'Connor-Connolly: Seeing that we are due to get new legislation shortly, that will hopefully rectify this situation, I wonder if the Minister would give an undertaking to consider medically approved institutions as opposed to countries as part of the criteria.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Health and Information Technology.

Hon. Linford A. Pierson: I believe it would be a bit pre-emptive of me to give such an undertaking when the new legislation will be coming before the House and up to the Members to decide what is placed in that legislation before it is approved. I would ask all Members to then make their recommendations as to what they deem appropriate to be placed under that legislation.

The Speaker: Question 59 is standing in the name of the Second Elected Member for Bodden Town.

Mr. Gilbert A. McLean: I was getting an indication from the Government Bench, if you would take a suspension, the lunch break in fact—

The Speaker: I was hoping we could continue until Question Time was over.

No. 59: Mr. Gilbert A. McLean asked the Honourable Minister responsible for the Ministry of Health and Information Technology what has government decided to do to ensure that the doctors at the Government hospital, who it is claimed do not meet new requirements for registration, reach such standards.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Health and Information Technology.

Hon. Linford A. Pierson: Mr. Speaker, we were just trying to see if we could get a break before we go into this question because two of us have a one o' clock appointment. That was the reason for asking. Like the other questions, this is probably going to take quite a while to complete.

Would the House be kindly disposed to taking this question after lunch?

The Speaker: Can we get an assurance that we can reconvene at 2.15?

Hon. Linford A. Pierson: Yes.

The Speaker: We have a lot on our agenda and I am concerned that we started late; but if that is the wish of the House, we shall suspend proceedings until 2.15 pm.

PROCEEDINGS SUSPENDED AT 12.56 PM

PROCEEDINGS RESUMED AT 2.39 PM

The Speaker: Please be seated. Question Time continues, the Second Elected Member for Bodden Town.

QUESTION NO. 59

No. 59: Mr. Gilbert A. McLean asked the Honourable Minister responsible for the Ministry of Health and Information Technology what has government decided to do to ensure that the doctors at the Government hospital, who it is claimed do not meet new requirements for registration, reach such standards.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Health and Information Technology.

Hon. Linford A. Pierson: In my response to the question, I must first clarify that there are no new requirements, at this time, for the registration of doctors.

A review of the records of the Health Practitioners' Board by the former Chief Medical Officer, and subsequently the Health Practitioners' Board, confirmed that some eight doctors, most of whom are employed at the Government hospital, did not meet the requirements for registration that had been in place since 1979.

The Health Practitioners' Board made certain recommendations which have been accepted by the Governor-in-Council and these have been passed on to the Director of Health Services with instructions that they are implemented.

The recommendations of the Health Practitioners' Board are as follows:

1. It is recommended by the Health Practitioners' Board that the doctors should be allowed to maintain registration by undertaking specified additional medical education, specifically stating (and I quote) "Providing that the eight named doctors meet the requirements set out in this recommendation, they would be considered to have met the current criteria for registration."

2. The Health Practitioners' Board would also identify specific requirements to be achieved within two years and the specification set by the Health Practitioners' Board would take into account the needs of the individual doctor in order to meet those requirements.

3. The first requirement would be to make up the difference between the average continuing medical education since 1994 as it relates to the individual doctor and the present requirement (of the Health Practitioners' Board) of 20 hours over two years. Of this, at least half should be "hands on" experience in an appropriate facility off Island.

In addition, each doctor will be required to update their clinical skills in an area agreed by the Board. This amount would not exceed three months in two years and it would also meet the continuing medical education requirements.

4. In addition, the Health Practitioners' Board recommends that the Government, through the Health Services Department, should provide assistance to each physician to a maximum as follows –

- (a) the equivalent of a return economy airfare for one to the United Kingdom
- (b) an allocation of up to $2,500 per month as a contribution to all costs (this would be prorated according to time away)
- (c) paid leave

5. In the case of a doctor in the private sector:

- (a) the equivalent of a return economy airfare for one to the United Kingdom
- (b) salary paid at government scale—Point E1 or locum coverage
- (c) an allocation of up to $2,500 per month as a contribution to all costs (this would be prorated according to time away).

6. In the case of a locum general practitioner, if that doctor applies and is considered for an established post, that doctor will be required to meet the full requirements of the Health Practitioners' Board to be eligible for registration. If that doctor is to continue in a locum post for a further two years that doctor will need to meet the requirements set for the other doctors as specified by the Health Practitioners' Board.

SUPPLEMENTARIES

The Speaker: The Second Elected Member for Bodden Town.

Mr. Gilbert A. McLean: The question referred to required continued medical education. Have the eight doctors referred to been told that they are required to take further medical education?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Health and Information Technology.

Hon. Linford A. Pierson: The doctors concerned have been advised that they are required to take additional continued medical education.

The Speaker: The Second Elected Member for Bodden Town.

Mr. Gilbert A. McLean: Can the Honourable Minister say what the response of the doctors has been?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Health and Information Technology.

Hon. Linford A. Pierson: I personally met with the doctors and I was of the view after leaving that meeting, that they were all pretty much on board. Since then I understand that two doctors in particular have been agitated somewhat about the continued medical education. I would also say that two of the eight have already met the requirement of the continued medical education. It is now for the others to comply.

The maximum period for any doctor is four weeks spread over two years. That is two weeks per year. It is not unusual that doctors, in particular, have to comply with continued medical education to keep up their practice.

The Speaker: The Second Elected Member for Bodden Town.

Mr. Gilbert A. McLean: The answer also refers to hands-on experience for these doctors. Is it that they have not had sufficient hands-on experience while practising in the Cayman Islands, some of them almost 20 years? Or is this some particular hands-on experience for them? Are we talking of something of a specialised nature or general practice?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Health and Information Technology.

Hon. Linford A. Pierson: Mr Speaker, the doctors in question, Dr. A will require a four week course in mammography; Dr. B, orthopaedic trauma course submitted and approved; Dr. C, a course at John Hopkins University Hospital; Dr. D, four week attachment in anaesthesia to an approved hospital in the UK, the US, Canada or Jamaica; Dr. E, his continued medical education (CME) has been satisfied; Dr. F, his CME has been satisfied; and Dr. G, a four week attachment in general surgery to an approved hospital in the UK, US, Canada or Jamaica.

These are in various areas of speciality and not just a general course as such.

The Speaker: The Second Elected Member for Bodden Town.

Mr. Gilbert A. McLean: Can the Honourable Minister tell us why it is chosen for the person to go to the UK rather than Jamaica, which is closer and less costly, and which is certainly known to give some of the highest training in medical services in the world?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Health and Information Technology.

Hon. Linford A. Pierson: The answer stated the equivalent of a return economy fare for one to the UK. This would cover the cost of anyone wishing to go to Jamaica, Canada or the US. That is the furthest and most expensive.

The Speaker: The Third Elected Member for Bodden Town.

Mr. Anthony S. Eden: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I beg your indulgence to make a brief statement before I ask my question. All this controversy began when I was the Minister of Health.

I know it was alluded to earlier on. This controversy began when a doctor at Faith Hospital wanted to be put in a specialist position and when the Health Services Department requested evidence of credentials in the specialist area and a diploma in the area that could not be provided to the Health Services Department or the Ministry or the HPB.

I have no apologies to anyone for taking the stand at that time and I still have that feeling. If a person wants to practise in a specialist area I think it is incumbent upon the Health Services Department and this Legislative Assembly to make sure that he has the proper training for that. That goes across the board, not only in medicine.

My question is, in the future, will the HPB register persons who do not have evidence of specified training in specialist areas?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Health and Information Technology.

Hon. Linford A. Pierson: Just to say that that Honourable Member, the Third Elected Member for Bodden Town, being perhaps the tallest Member in this House has even gone to greater heights in my estimation. It is really good that he, as the former Minister of Health, would get up and make a statement explaining the situation that occurred during the period he was there.

To answer his question: No, no doctor will be employed in the future unless he goes through the proper procedures before the HPB.

The Speaker: The Third Elected Member for George Town.

Dr. Frank S. McField: Maybe you would allow me to make a short statement.

The Speaker: I beg you, Dr. Frank, be short!

[Members' laughter]

The Speaker: And please excuse me for using your name.

Dr. Frank S. McField: Mr. Speaker, just to say that the resolution here appears to be one that is workable and certainly acceptable. We did not have any access to this when the questioning started. I would like to congratulate the Minister for working this out.

Could the Minister say whether it is possible to resolve this situation with the two persons he mentioned that might not be so much in agreement with the continuing education studies?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Health and Information Technology.

Hon. Linford A. Pierson: May I say that as the second tallest Member in the House, that Honourable Member has also reached higher heights in my estimation and I thank him for those kind remarks.

[Members' laughter]

Hon. Linford A. Pierson: The two doctors, maybe more, maybe three, that are not too happy with this and are still trying to work against it ... I am hoping that they will come on board and let us get this matter behind us as soon as possible.

As I said, we are looking at four weeks at the most to be done over two years. It is basically asking them to complete their continuing medical education at two weeks per year over the next two years. I believe that is very reasonable indeed.

The Speaker: The Elected Member for East End.

Mr. V. Arden McLean: Can the Honourable Minister say if other doctors on the Island are required to do continuing education on a regular basis? Also, who ensures that this is carried out?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Health and Information Technology.

Hon. Linford A. Pierson: Yes. All doctors registered are expected to continue their medical education and it is monitored by the HPB.

The Speaker: The Elected Member for East End.

Mr. V. Arden McLean: Can the Honourable Minister say how long the Chief Medical Officer (CMO) had been in place when that review, mentioned in the substantive answer, had been done, and how long was the membership of the HPB in place when the review was done?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Health and Information Technology.

Hon. Linford A. Pierson: It is my information that the CMO had recently taken up his position, and also in his position as HPB and that the HPB had been a relatively newly appointed board.

The Speaker: The Second Elected Member for Bodden Town.

Mr. Gilbert A. McLean: Just to make it absolutely clear for this House and those who are listening to the reply, the question is: a) are we talking specifically of doctors qualifying to practise in a specialist area; and b) in paragraph 5, in the case of "a doctor" in the private sector, does that refer to one of the eight doctors?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Health and Information Technology.

Hon. Linford A. Pierson: The examination of the doctors was done mainly on their basic qualifications.

They were not necessarily on a specialist register—even though I should say that some of these doctors have engaged in certain specialist practices.

The second part of the question: Yes, this is one of the eight. That doctor, now in the private sector, was a former doctor at the George Town Hospital.

The Speaker: The Second Elected Member for Bodden Town.

Mr. Gilbert A. McLean: If the doctor referred to in paragraph 5 is now in private practice where he is no longer employed by government, why would the Government undertake to pay additional monies for his training?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Health and Information Technology.

Hon. Linford A. Pierson: That is a very good question. This doctor is really not now in the Government service. However, this was felt to be a humane and proper way to deal with this, so as to assist the doctor to go away and get the additional experience and training required. It was felt by government that financial assistance would be offered to help him reach the standard.

The Speaker: The Second Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. Alden M. McLaughlin, Jr.: I guess it is just as well that I am comfortable with my height, because I do not think I shall grow in the Minister's estimation, given my line of questioning.

[Members' laughter]

Mr. Alden M. McLaughlin, Jr.: I would be grateful if the Honourable Minister would say whether this continuing medical education is going to result in a situation whereby the affected doctors are going to be registered, or eligible for registration, either in the UK, Canada or Jamaica?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Health and Information Technology.

Hon. Linford A. Pierson: It had been pointed out in a previous answer that once this continued medical education is complete, those individuals would be regarded as being fully registered.

The Speaker: The Second Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. Alden M. McLaughlin, Jr.: I do not believe the Honourable Minister responded to my question.

My question was whether the result of this continuing medical education as set out in the Minister's answer, would be that the affected doctors become registered or eligible for registration either in the UK, Canada or Jamaica?

In order that he understands the basis for my question, I am looking at the HPB General Guidelines and Information for Registration, which sets out in paragraph 5 the requirement for registration in the Cayman Islands as being doctors who are registered or eligible for registration either in the UK, USA, Canada or Jamaica.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Health and Information Technology.

Hon. Linford A. Pierson: I believe the Honourable Member has already answered his question in that the guidelines refer to the Cayman Islands. We are not in a position to regulate medical situations in any of these other four countries. We use the 'four country criteria' as our guide mainly because we are such a very small area and do not have a medical council as such. So we use the guidelines of these advanced countries.

Meeting the criteria here would not in my opinion necessarily qualify a doctor to practise in any of these four countries. They would have to go there and seek permission and be allowed to practise in those countries through a different process.

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman.

Mrs. Julianna Y. O'Connor-Connolly: If the Honourable Minister would turn his attention quickly to paragraph 3 of his substantive answer . . . since he is embarking on a cleaning up exercise, I wonder if he would undertake to close the loophole that says "of this, at least half should be 'hands-on' experience in an appropriate facility off island" to say "off the Cayman Islands" so he would not be put in a position to say that Faith Hospital is not an appropriate facility.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Health and Information Technology.

Hon. Linford A. Pierson: My good friend knows better than that. She knows that I would never exclude Cayman Brac and Little Cayman. No, we mean the Cayman Islands, Mr. Speaker, not just Grand Cayman.

The Speaker: The Second Elected Member for Bodden Town.

Mr. Gilbert A. McLean: In paragraph 6, where it speaks of "In the case of a locum general practitioner" and so on. Is this speaking of the same person in paragraph 5 practising at the Government hospital in a particular post?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Health and Information Technology.

Hon. Linford A. Pierson: The reference in paragraph 5 is to a doctor in the private sector which is different from the reference in paragraph 6. This locum general practitioner is just filling in part time and is not on the established post at the Hospital. They are two different positions.

The Speaker: The Second Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman.

Mr. Lyndon L. Martin: Would the Minister indicate if there is an estimated total cost to the CI Government to bring these doctors into compliance with the new set of criteria?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Health and Information Technology.

Hon. Linford A. Pierson: We have about $20,000 estimated for the support cost, but then we would have to look at the salary part of it for the eight doctors concerned, where we have agreed to assist those doctors. I do not have that exact figure.

The Speaker: Are there any further supplementaries? If not, that concludes Question Time for today.

Moving on to item 4: Other Business, Private Members' Motions. Continuation of debate on Private Member's Motion No. 9/01: Select Committee to Review the Health Insurance Law.

The Elected Member for East End.

OTHER BUSINESS

PRIVATE MEMBERS' MOTIONS

PRIVATE MEMBER'S MOTION NO. 9/01

SELECT COMMITTEE TO REVIEW THE HEALTH INSURANCE LAW

(Continuation of debate thereon)

Mr. V. Arden McLean: I rise to support the Motion before this House, brought by The Second Elected Member for Bodden Town.

There is no doubt in anyone's mind that the time has come to review the Insurance Law of this country. I know much has been said about the many representations we have had from the people concerning insurance. I know that much has been said about the campaign in which many candidates discussed health insurance.

One of the biggest problems this country has with insurance is the lack of an enforceable insurance Law. We hear a number of horror stories about the way it is abused by the insurer, the insured, and by the health practitioners. Everybody loses if we do not have an enforceable Law.

Then there comes another entity into that equation that loses even more—the Government of this country. We currently have a budget for the health services to the tune of some $40 million with projected revenue of $8 million

I believe that the lower projection is a direct result of not being able to collect the monies from the insurance companies, whether it is a lack of manpower to process these claims or because the insurance companies will not honour their coverage.

When we look deeper, we see that in a number of instances the insurance provider does not honour the coverage because they believe they are unfairly charged higher rates by the health service practitioners. That may be true.

My mother was recently hospitalised in Miami and upon going there I was told the bill for two nights was $10,669. After much discussion and once they heard that I was prepared to pay cash, it was reduced to $2,200, which I was quite happy to pay. I certainly was not prepared to allow the country I love so much to pay $10,669! If government was to pay it—and they were required to because my mother is a retired civil servant—it would have been $10,669! I did not have the heart to put this country through such abuse.

While I cannot speak of any specific instances in this country, like the one I just mentioned, I am sure if it is being done overseas it is being done here too. I point no fingers, because I do not know. Since there are so many rumours of that being the case, it may very well be.

I also wonder what is being done to ensure that the Government and the insurance providers are getting value for money from overseas as well. Is there anyone available to scrutinise these things? Does the insurance company have someone to oversee it? Is that the reason why the insurance companies in this country refuse to live up to their obligations in most instances? This is what any review of the Law or regulations to the law need to address.

Then we hear how the insured abuse the system for every ache. If that is true, then the practitioners abuse it welcoming the insured abuser, because that is more money for them.

There has to be some schedule put in place where the practitioners know exactly what the insurance is prepared to pay for a particular treatment. Certainly, we will always find exceptions to the rule. An operation on one person may not go as smoothly on another. Therefore, it may be necessary for all concerned to come up with some understanding as to what healthcare in this country is going to cost. Get an average and develop some kind of relationship between the insurer, the insured, the practitioners and government.

One of the things that happened to this country many years ago was the implementation of the Health Services Authority to streamline government's side of providing health service. Of course, that was shot down shortly after a change of government.

The Speaker: If I may interrupt you for a minute. I call your attention to relevance. We are really discussing an insurance Law.

Mr. V. Arden McLean: Mr. Speaker, I appreciate your ruling, but I was trying to show that the Health Services Authority could also play a role in regulating government getting money through the health insurance where government has employees and others insured. However, I take your point, Mr. Speaker.

I believe that the health insurance needs to be looked at very critically, particularly when we hear of insurance issuing identification cards that are not accepted by practitioners. This is one area which needs to be addressed in the Law.

We cannot expect providers to wait six months for their money either. Certainly we must legislate and mandate that we require practitioners to accept these insurance cards and insurance companies must pay within a prescribed time. Anywhere else in the world and in this country too, you have to pay your debt within a prescribed time. There is no reason why the insurance should not pay within a prescribed time.

We hear continuous rumours from insurance providers and health practitioners, that this is the reason why cards are not accepted. We cannot expect the populous to pay insurance and then have to go to the practitioners and pay them also, and then claim it back from insurance. That is totally unfair. In essence, you are paying twice and hoping to get reimbursed.

Then we hear of the situation where the deductible is a certain amount for the year. Thus, the first time you go to the doctor for the first procedure, they take the full deductible out. Something is wrong with that. The review of the Law needs to address that. There has to be a schedule stating what is 80 percent and what is 20 percent and it should be done in accordance with that.

If medication is 80 percent and you pay $10 for medication, then you should only really be paying $2. The healthcare provider should be paying the $8. Of course, if the total bill were $100 and the deductible $250, that is the first $100 out of that $250. I do not believe that should be the spirit of any policy or Law or regulation in this country.

We hear of the reverse situation where the insured, the employee, believes insurance is being deducted but when he goes to the practitioner he finds he has to pay everything because his employers did not pay their share of the insurance premium. The others I outlined are bad enough because they are recoverable somewhere down the line. However, when your employer does not pay the insurance premium, nothing is recoverable in that one. There is no enforcement of the Law. I can name at least ten people who have made complaints to their employer, and nothing has been done. It appears that nothing can be done with an employer who decides not to pay any more insurance but keeps you in his employ.

I recognise the difficulty in monitoring this particular situation, but we heard this morning about getting the best for our people so we need to ensure that they enjoy the best.

I have every confidence that the Government is going to accept this Motion. I have every confidence in the Minister of Health working very hard to ensure that Caymanians get a proper and enforceable insurance Law in place in the not too distant future. The second resolve of the Motion calls for a report to this House no later than the last meeting of the 2001 Session, which is not very far away.

The Caymanian population is an ageing population, in particular the baby boomers. The insurance issue is going to be coming down on this country in the not too distant future. We must prepare for it now. We also hear of situations where people have been insured their whole lives with a particular insurance company and, bam!—all of a sudden this particular company decides you are uninsurable because you made a claim. It falls straight back into the laps of the people of this country because government must then take care of those individuals. The insurance company must not be allowed to drop any of their insured like a hot potato; they must hold that hot potato in their hands and take some of the burning too.

Because you have a heart condition and you are in your late fifties the insurers immediately drop you and they give you a letter saying you are uninsurable. Another insurance company also gives you another letter saying you are uninsurable, which you take to government and you become an indigent and government puts you on free medical. Now, something is wrong with that.

Those who are not holding their hands out to government are pulling government's hands out and placing these letters in them.

I trust the Government will respond to that because it is out there. The same way we can debate or ridicule the health care practitioners and the insured, the insurance companies are abusing the system also. Caymanians are crying out. We have aged Caymanians who are suffering as a result of being unable to be covered, or considered uninsurable.

You probably paid in more than that one claim you made in your fifties, nevertheless the insurance cuts you off and then that chronic situation falls squarely in the laps of the people of this country and it drops on the base cost of living in this country.

I am only relating to what I have heard. People are crying out to the Government of this country to do something about it. If we do not do anything about the insurance companies now, the biggest part of this population is the baby boomers. In the next ten to fifteen years someone is going to have to address it. It is an ageing population. If we do not address it now, it is going to reach crisis proportions. It is almost crisis management now.

I am not blaming anyone. The time has come to address the situation. Let us put a stop to everybody; the employer, the insured, the insurer, the healthcare provider. These are the four in the equation driving up the cost of insurance.

Soon, the cost of insurance will be out of the reach of the average Caymanian and if we do not stop it, it is going to fall right back into the laps of everyone. I believe it is easier to address the issue and pay $100 a month for insurance. That is easier than paying for healthcare to the tune of $300 to $400 per month to subsidise the health services government provides. It may well require stepping on a few toes. There are times when toes may need to be stepped on.

It is time to make those tough decisions we all campaigned on. This country is going to go on and the people are going to continue living after these four years. It will turn into a vicious circle. If we have any foresight we can see that in the next few years every one of us is going to pay for healthcare in this country with our lives.

One of the things that should be addressed is how insurance companies determine that one is uninsurable. There has to be a clear definition as to when one is uninsurable. It is not at the whim and fancy of one insurance company and then their buddy down the road will give a customer a second letter saying they are uninsurable and send them running over to the Ministry of Health so they can get free medical.

The people who come to this country must also be insured. In a lot of instances people who retire in this country have overseas insurance. They come here and go to the health services and it is not paid. That is how a Health Services Authority will assist. We look at the other Authorities, the Water Authority, Civil Aviation Authority, the Port Authority, all hold their own. We need to turn our health services into an Authority as well so that they can regulate the monies they are supposed to get from insurance companies.

It is killing this country. We have millions and millions in overseas and local medical charges now considered unrecoverable. We have people in this country with the means to pay it, and they have not paid it. The insurance must pay government when government renders the services. It does not happen. Then we sit back. Is it any wonder that we are constantly looking for money to supplement our budget? We are not collecting what we should and a lot of it comes from the lack of collecting from insurance companies.

The health services in this country are losing because of insurance. I am not saying it is entirely the fault of the insurance companies, but they surely contribute significantly to the loss this country experiences in health services in delays. It is the responsibility of this Parliament to put provisions in place, that is, Laws to ensure that insurance is regulated in this country.

We hear of so many older people in this country government is taking care of. Government does not even have health insurance! Nevertheless, we still have to take care of them; that is government's responsibility. As legislators, we must also ensure that we regulate the system whereby government can get affordable insurance.

It goes without saying that the older you get the poorer your health becomes. That is how it works. The Second Elected Member for West Bay keeps jumping up about his little 29 years, but eventually he is going to get there too!

I am ahead of him, and I am going to get there. As long as you live, you are going to get old. We must make provisions for it because the cost continues to increase. While technology continues to improve, the price continues to go up and insurance and re-insurance must be the place to pay it off.

I support this Motion. I think it is timely. I think it would be in the country's best interest if government accepted it. I am told that I can be confident that they will by the Leader of Government Business. I have a little problem with it, but the Leader of Government Business does not have to respond, so I trust they have coordinated their thoughts on that side.

The Speaker: May I interrupt you for just one minute? Will you be finishing in a short period? It is my understanding we want to adjourn a bit early.

Mr. V. Arden McLean: I will be finished in two minutes.

The Speaker: Thank you.

Mr. V. Arden McLean: I have a little problem with all these private Member's Motions going to select committees with all Members. I think that maybe you need to do that a little different because other Members have a lot of work to do and Executive Council has a lot of work to do as well. Mr. Speaker, all 18 of us should be working together for the betterment of this country. If we cannot trust a few to become a committee to look at these situations, then it was not worth the country electing us. Why is it that everybody has to spend time in a select committee? This must be the second proposal asking for a select committee of the whole House. That is my concern and that is my contribution. I ask that other Members consider breaking down these committees to a selected number. Thank you.

The Speaker: If it is the wish of the Government, I will entertain a motion for the adjournment.

ADJOURNMENT

Hon. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Mr. Speaker, while the business of Parliament is of utmost importance, there are some other matters that need attention. A press conference is scheduled for tomorrow morning at 10 o'clock at which all Members of Executive Council need to be present. So, if you would allow, Sir, I beg to move the adjournment of this Honourable House until 11 am tomorrow.

The Speaker: The question is that this Honourable House do now adjourn until 11 am tomorrow. Those in favour, please say Aye. Those against, No.

AYES.

The Speaker: The Ayes have it.

AT 3.48 PM THE HOUSE STOOD ADJOURNED UNTIL 11 AM FRIDAY, 22 JUNE 2001.

OFFICIAL HANSARD REPORT
THURSDAY
22 JUNE 2001
11.39 AM
Third Sitting

[Prayers read by the Honourable First Official Member responsible for the Portfolio of Internal and External Affairs.]

The Speaker: Please be seated.

Proceedings are resumed. Item 2 on today's Order Paper, Reading by the Honourable Speaker of Messages and Announcements.

READING BY THE HONOURABLE
SPEAKER OF MESSAGES
AND ANNOUNCEMENTS

APOLOGIES

The Speaker: I have received apologies for absence from the Honourable Minister responsible for Education, Human Resources and Culture and the First and Second Elected Members for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman. I also extend apologies from the Honourable Second Official Member for late attendance.

Moving on to item 3, Presentation of Papers and Reports: The Report of the Standing Business Committee for the State Opening and Budget (First) Meeting of the 2001 Session, to be laid on the Table by the Honourable Minister responsible for Planning, Communications and Works, Leader of Government Business, Chairman of the Committee.

PRESENTATION OF
PAPERS AND REPORTS

REPORT OF THE STANDING BUSINESS COMMITTEE FOR THE STATE OPENING AND BUDGET (FIRST) MEETING OF THE 2001 SESSION

Hon. D. Kurt Tibbetts: I beg to lay on the Table of this Honourable House the Report of the Standing Business Committee for the State Opening and Budget (First) Meeting of the 2001 Session.

The Speaker: So ordered. Do you wish to speak to it?
Moving on to Questions to Honourable Ministers and Members. Before so doing, I will appreciate a motion for the suspension of Standing Order 23(7) and (8).

The Honourable Minister for Planning, Communications and Works.

SUSPENSION OF STANDING ORDER 23(7) AND (8)

Hon. D. Kurt Tibbetts: I beg to move the suspension of Standing Order 23(7) & (8) to allow Question Time to continue.

The Speaker: The question is that we suspend Standing Order 23(7) and (8) to allow Question Time to continue beyond the hour of 11 am. Those in favour please say Aye, those against, No.

AYES.

The Speaker: The Ayes have it. Question Time will continue.

AGREED. STANDING ORDER 23(7) AND (8) SUSPENDED TO ALLOW QUESTION TIME TO CONTINUE BEYOND 11 AM.

The Speaker: Moving on to Questions to Honourable Ministers and Members. Question 54 is standing in the name of the Third Elected Member for West Bay.

QUESTIONS TO HONOURABLE
MINISTERS AND MEMBERS

QUESTION NO. 54

(Deferred Wednesday 20 June)

No. 54: Capt. A. Eugene Ebanks asked the Honourable Minister responsible for the Ministry of Tourism, Environment and Transport to give an update on the multi-disciplinary study which is now being conducted by CH2M Hill.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for the Ministry of Tourism, Environment and Transport.

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: The study for the Provision of Construction Aggregate and Fill Material is currently in the final stages of work with 24 of the 26 tasks completed. The final two tasks are the submission of the draft and revised final reports. The draft report will be delivered in the last week of June.

As with earlier phases of the study, the reports will be available to the public for review and comment. A project briefing covering the recommendations of the study will be conducted for Government and private stakeholders. In addition, all documents will be available in their entirety on the study's web site. The address is: projects.ch2m.com/Cayman.

The Speaker: Are there any supplementaries?

If not, we will move on to question 60, standing in the name of the Elected Member for East End.

QUESTION NO. 60

No. 60: Mr. V. Arden McLean asked the Honourable Minister responsible for the Ministry of Tourism, Environment and Transport what regulation and/or system of inspection is in place to ensure that all high-pressure storage vessels in the Cayman Islands are safely maintained and operated.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for the Ministry of Tourism, Environment and Transport.

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: In 1997, a Fire Prevention Code was enacted as law.

Chapter 15 of the Cayman Islands Fire Prevention Code applies to bulk oxygen systems and to the storage, handling and use of compressed gases as defined in section 202 of the Code.

Section 1503 states, “Each cylinder or pressure vessel shall be designed, constructed, tested, maintained and marked with the name of the gas contained so as to be reasonably safe to persons and property. Evidence that each cylinder or pressure vessel has been designed, constructed, tested, maintained and marked with the name of the gas contained in accordance with national standards shall be evidence that such cylinder or pressure vessel is reasonably safe to persons and property.”

The national standards that are accepted are those used by United States’ agencies such as-

- The Department of Transportation (DOT)
- American Society of Mechanical Engineers (ASME)
- Compressed Gas Association (CGA).

The diving facilities on the Island are almost self-regulated as most, if not all, premises using pressure vessels have consistently adopted the DoT standards, which require these pressure vessels to be re-tested and re-certified at five-year intervals. This is normally accomplished by the process of hydrostatic testing combined with a visual inspection.

The Fire Department does carry out random checks of premises to ensure that pressure vessels which are currently in use comply with all requirements.

SUPPLEMENTARIES

The Speaker: The Elected Member for East End.

Mr. V. Arden McLean: Can the Honourable Minister say, in the interest of safety, if there are any intentions to establish an inspection process on a regular basis for pressure vessels in the country?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for the Ministry of Tourism, Environment and Transport.

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: In the substantive answer we mentioned regular intervals, and what is accepted in the industry, not just locally but internationally, is a five-year period. However, I will speak to the Fire Department and put forward that suggestion.

The Speaker: The Second Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. Alden M. McLaughlin, Jr.: As I believe the Minister and Members are aware, some years ago there was a tragic explosion of a large pressure vessel which wreaked tremendous damage and involved loss of life and injury. During the course of events, including a prosecution, it was determined that there was no process or equipment available in these islands which would permit the hydrostatic testing of vessels of that size. It was also determined that most of the diving operations in Cayman had ceased to use these large pressure vessels and had gone to DOT stand up bottles.

Can the Honourable Minister confirm that there are no longer any of these large pressure vessels, for which there are no facilities available to be properly tested, in these islands?

The Speaker: I think that is outside the ambit of this question, but if the Minister wishes to answer, he may.

The Honourable Minister responsible for the Ministry of Tourism, Environment and Transport.

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: I can say that there are three companies that are still using the large containers. One of them is moving to the smaller bottles and the other two, the Fire Department is working with them in a process that will lead to using the smaller ones.

The Speaker: The Elected Member for East End.

Mr. V. Arden McLean: Can the Minister say when this process will be completed and can we be assured that the larger vessels are no longer in use in the country?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for the Ministry of Tourism, Environment and Transport.

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: The one that is presently to the point where they can use the smaller bottles will be accomplishing that in the next couple of weeks. The other two are more problematic. It seems that will not happen until the end of the year.

The Speaker: The Elected Member for East End.

Mr. V. Arden McLean: Can the Honourable Minister say if one of those companies that has the larger vessels can be seen using the road with the big vessels on a makeshift trailer and if it is operated in a safe manner?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for the Ministry of Tourism, Environment and Transport.

Hon. W. McKeever Bush: The Member is correct. One of those companies is one that we are dealing with right now. I can see where the Member is leading, and I think he is quite right. We will look further into that matter and not wait . . . let us put it this way, we will try to get it done more quickly.

The Speaker: The Elected Member for East End.

Mr. V. Arden McLean: Can the Honourable Minister give this House an undertaking that that operation will be looked into with immediate effect to have these cylinders removed away from the general public of the Cayman Islands?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for the Ministry of Tourism, Environment and Transport.

Hon. W. McKeever Bush: What I will do is give the House an undertaking that we will deal with the matter with an urgent response.

The Speaker: The Second Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. Alden M. McLaughlin, Jr.: Can the Honourable Minister say if he is giving consideration to enacting suitable regulations or legislation to govern the safety of pressure vessels and to determine national standards for their testing and use?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for the Ministry of Tourism, Environment and Transport.

Hon. W. McKeever Bush: The procedures are already in place with the Fire Prevention Code which was enacted as law in 1997. We are following that code. The testing is all done locally according to the code on the smaller ones. The problem is those two particular companies with the larger ones. As I said, there is some problem in dealing with it, but as was already mentioned, I intend to, as urgently as possible, deal with that particular issue of transporting them through the public domain.

Hopefully, while I was told by year's end, we can deal with it in less time.

The Speaker: The Second Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. Alden M. McLaughlin, Jr.: I have read the excerpt from chapter 15 of the Fire Prevention Code, and section 1503, which is in his substantive answer. Can the Honourable Minister acknowledge that section 1503 does not address the kind of pressure vessel that can or cannot be used in these islands; and that notwithstanding this section, the concern remains? We are still in a situation with pressure vessels so large that they cannot be hydrostatically tested, and are being used in these islands. Can the Honourable Minister say if it is his intention to address that concern either through regulation or legislation?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for the Ministry of Tourism, Environment and Transport.

Hon. W. McKeever Bush: There have been some recommendations put to the Ministry that we will review. Certainly, where the law needs to be tightened up, I will have that done. It is very important. I recognise it as being important. We will have the law on that section reviewed with a view to tightening it.

The Speaker: Are there any further supplementaries? If not, we move on to question 61, standing in the name of the Elected Member for East End.

QUESTION NO. 61

No. 61: Mr. V. Arden McLean asked the Honourable Minister responsible for the Ministry of Tourism, Environment and Transport under what agreement, are dive operations being conducted on the West Bay Public Beach.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for the Ministry of Tourism, Environment and Transport.

Hon. W. McKeever Bush: There is no formal agreement between the Government and any dive operator that would permit commercial dive operations from the West Bay Public Beach.

SUPPLEMENTARIES

The Speaker: The Elected Member for East End.

Mr. V. Arden McLean: That answer was short and sweet. Now, my question is going to be short and sweet also: When will it be stopped?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for the Ministry of Tourism, Environment and Transport.

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: Mr. Speaker, this particular matter has been one that has caused many questions in the House, in fact at several points while on the backbench I raised the issue myself. It is only at this point in time that I know today that they have no permission. The licence for the operation of the public beach gives no permission to anyone. Permission would have to be given by the permanent secretary. This has never been done.

I do believe we need to do something about it because at points in time there are tanks there. We just finished talking about pressurised tanks. Many times I have seen them there. It is not something that started today.

I certainly intend to look at the situation to see how we can remedy it, without hurting anyone. There seems to be business operations and I do not want to stop anybody from making an honest living. However, they will have to operate properly. I do not think that is a proper operation. I do not think it is the place for it.

I give the House an undertaking to try to get to the owners to start a discussion on the situation.

The Speaker: The Second Elected Member for West Bay.

Mr. Rolston M. Anglin: Would the Honourable Minister also give an undertaking to investigate a similar matter on the West Bay public pier next to the new launching ramp on the corner of Northwest Point?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for the Ministry of Tourism, Environment and Transport.

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: Why not, Mr. Speaker? Who am I to deny a request from my esteemed colleague?

The Speaker: The Elected Member for East End.

Mr. V. Arden McLean: I wonder if I am considered an esteemed colleague.

I do not wish to destroy any business, especially if it is a small Caymanian business. However, by the same token no one must operate a business in this country at the expense of the general public.

There is a sign at the boundary of the public beach put in place by the Port Authority many years ago with an arrow pointing towards West Bay saying "Dive operation in this area stay clear" or something to that effect. Can the Honourable Minister say if that sign is enforceable at this time?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for the Ministry of Tourism, Environment and Transport.

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: I understand that the area was designated some time ago. I will have to investigate it because I really do not know any more than that. I will sit down with the business operators to see how we can remedy the situation in a way that will be favourable to the public yet not hurt the business operators.

At that particular public beach and, in fact, at most public beaches, we have had all kinds of complaints and problems including loud music. No one seems to understand we do not want that on the public beach disrupting everyone else.

There are several concerns with the use of the public beach and I intend to enforce whatever regulations we can to keep peace, order, civility and security on the public beach.

The Speaker: The Elected Member for East End.

Mr. V. Arden McLean: In a previous question we discussed high pressure vessels. He quite readily gave us an undertaking to address it within the general public. Now, it may not be easy to do it on the road right now, but on the West Bay Beach, that is public property. I have witnessed half-inch hoses being pulled across the beach to the boats which kids are stepping over. That is extremely dangerous and my discipline tells me that that is beyond control.

I would like the Minister to give this country and this Honourable House an undertaking today that that will cease and desist immediately effective today.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for the Ministry of Tourism, Environment and Transport.

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: I heard the Member's complaint and I believe it warrants urgent attention. I will accordingly ask that it be investigated with a view to a remedy of the situation with some security.

The Member is insisting that I give an undertaking. I have just received word from the Port Authority that there is some sort of regulation in place allowing them to use it.

My information is that under the licence they have no permission. If there is a regulation in place which has the safety or protection of law, then I cannot give the House an undertaking to do something immediately.

I will try to get to the bottom of the situation to see exactly what obtains. As soon as I can find out whether or not there is a law or regulation, I believe it should be changed. If there is no regulation then under the licence there is no protection and they will have to put the situation where the public is not at risk. I give that undertaking.

The Speaker: The Fourth Elected Member for West Bay.

Mr. Cline A. Glidden, Jr.: In an earlier answer he mentioned that there was no agreement in place.

Now, since these are commercial businesses, they would require a Trade and Business Licence. Can the Honourable Minister say if on that Trade and Business Licence it would be acceptable to list as their place of business a public beach, without having an agreement in place? If that is the case, I am sure there are many other businesses in this great Cayman Islands that would like to operate on a public piece of property.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for the Ministry of Tourism, Environment and Transport.

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: The Member has raised a very pertinent point. It is something that I raised some years ago. However, I do not know. I was not able to find out then, and I am presented with the situation today. I will investigate the matter to see what obtains. I do not know what their Trade and Business Licence says, I do not know if they have any permission. Under the licence the public beach operates there is no permission given.

I can only say that I will investigate the matter and try to put it right.

The Speaker: The Third Elected Member for West Bay.

Capt. A. Eugene Ebanks: This question does not have to do with the storage vessels for high pressured air. However, it has to do with the usage of the waters around us, public beaches and all.

Can the Honourable Minister say whether or not there was permission granted for placing the moorings in the water as far out as they have in front of Cobalt Coast? I was told that one of the local fishermen went inside the moorings the day before yesterday and was confronted by some members of that dive operation and reprimanded. The gentleman did it because he was experiencing some difficulties with his boat. I am wondering if it is necessary to have the moorings out to the edge of the ocean or could they be brought closer to shore?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for the Ministry of Tourism, Environment and Transport. This is outside the substantive question, but you may answer if you wish.

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: We will take it on board to try to find out what the situation is. I have just asked the officers here from the Port Authority and the acting permanent secretary to urgently look into the matter to try to ascertain the situation.

The Speaker: The Elected Member for East End.

Mr. V. Arden McLean: Can the Honourable Minister say if government receives any money from the commercial ventures going on at the beach?

Secondly, can he give us an undertaking to check on other commercial activities on other beaches within the Cayman Islands that may be unsafe?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for the Ministry of Tourism, Environment and Transport.

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: I have no such knowledge of any fee, since there was no permission given. I will certainly say that we have intentions to look at all the existing public beaches, what is happening around them and their present state of affairs and upkeep and so on.

The Speaker: The Second Elected Member for West Bay, two additional supplementaries.

Mr. Rolston M. Anglin: Can the Honourable Minister say if in his undertaking to review the situation on the public beach he will also review the situation just north of the public beach? There seems to be a small piece of private property also being used. We would not want the answer to be no, they will not use the public beach but will use a piece of property adjacent to the public beach, which is a high traffic area, namely the location of the beach bar of the Holiday Inn. This is an extremely urgent matter and there is a dire need for attention to this. The public's safety is of the utmost importance to us and I am sure to the Minister.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for the Ministry of Tourism, Environment and Transport.

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: I can say from memory that the persons operating on the small beach, the last speaker is referring to, were given permission by the owners, because I questioned that years ago. As to its location near the public beach and the new property of the Holiday Inn, I agree, that causes concern. I will have to defer to the Fire Department inspection and the ongoing discussion with the company to try to do something about it. I cannot say anymore than that. I hear the concerns, I have the same concerns and we are going to move on it as fast as possible.

The Speaker: Are there any further supplementaries? If not, we move on to question 62, standing in the name of the Elected Member for East End.

QUESTION NO. 62

No. 62: Mr. V. Arden McLean asked the Honourable Minister responsible for the Ministry of Tourism, Environment and Transport what is the current status of the expansion and upgrading of the Port Authority.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for the Ministry of Tourism, Environment and Transport.

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: The Port Authority, after seeking advice from the public and private sectors' interest groups, has decreased the size and environmental impact of the project without compromising the need for additional cargo and cruise passenger landing area.

Currently the design drawings and tender documents for the project are being finalised to reflect those changes. Upon their completion, the Environmental Impact Report will be revised. The new design calls for the cargo area to be established to the north of the existing dock. The existing cargo operations area and the present finger pier will be converted to a cruise passenger landing area. In the very near future, coastal and development planning permit applications will be submitted to the relevant authorities for approval with the anticipation that the project will be fully permitted by year end and the commencement of construction scheduled for the first quarter of 2002.

SUPPLEMENTARIES

The Speaker: The Elected Member for East End.

Mr. V. Arden McLean: Can the Honourable Minister say what percentage of usage measured in periods of time the dock currently enjoys, when weather permits?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for the Ministry of Tourism, Environment and Transport.

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: Maybe the Member could amplify on his question.

The Speaker: The Elected Member for East End.

Mr. V. Arden McLean: There are 365 days in a year. Considering we have ten days of bad weather; of the amount left, what percentage of that time is the dock utilised?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for the Ministry of Tourism, Environment and Transport.

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: I do not have that information readily available here. We will have to try to find out what percentage of the time it is being used. We know the dock does not operate at night in most instances. We know that.

The Speaker: The Fourth Elected Member for West Bay.

Mr. Cline A. Glidden, Jr.: Can the Honourable Minister say whether there are any plans to either change or regulate the usage of the Port Authority property in SafeHaven? We have been getting some complaints that that area has been monopolised by certain operators instead of being available for use by the general public.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for the Ministry of Tourism, Environment and Transport.

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: According to a motion that was passed some time ago on a request that was made, that property has been vested in the Port Authority. As of now, we do not have control of it. It is not vested in the Port Authority as yet.

The Speaker: The Elected Member for East End.

Mr. V. Arden McLean: The Minister stated that obviously the dock is not used at night. That is precisely the answer I was trying to get.

Can the Honourable Minister say why we do not use the dock at night, particularly with bulk cargo in that its cost per ton would certainly bring revenue to the Cayman Islands Government?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for the Ministry of Tourism, Environment and Transport.

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: I have asked the director to investigate how we could utilise the port at night, what the cost would be and all of the ramifications, because I also have the same question. That matter is with the director presently.

The Speaker: The Elected Member for East End.

Mr. V. Arden McLean: In light of environmental concerns surrounding the North Sound and the unloading of cargo in that area and the destruction of the bottom, I wonder if the Minister can give us an undertaking to consider in this review that aggregate being imported into the country be brought across our docks even if the facility has to be utilised at night.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for the Ministry of Tourism, Environment and Transport.

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: Just a few days ago, the Honourable Minister for Planning, Communications and Works gave some undertakings and answers to a similar question. Regarding the dock, I have no problem in allowing the dock to be used for the importation of aggregate when we have to do that. All the parameters and impacts would have to be investigated in order to see that it is done properly. As Minister responsible, and as chairman of the Port Authority, I certainly have no problem, once that is put to us in a formal request by those involved.

Bearing in mind that there would be added cost to all of this, shippers could not just bring the material across to the port for nothing.

The Speaker: The Fourth Elected Member for West Bay.

Mr. Cline A. Glidden Jr.: From the Honourable Minister's answers, my question is: are we then saying that the reason we are allowing the destruction of the environment through the North Sound instead of using our existing dock facility at night is an economic one? When I say economic, that it is not to the Government's advantage?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for the Ministry of Tourism, Environment and Transport.

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: I understand the Member's drift. I can only say that this Government never gave permission to anybody. It was the previous Government that allowed that. As the Minister of Communication and Works said, it is being reviewed. We would have no problem in looking at a request that is proper to bring any cargo across the port that is legal. Certainly, it would mean more income for the port and I will certainly look into it.

At present, I do not have a request.

The Speaker: The Second Elected Member for West Bay.

Mr. Rolston M. Anglin: On a previous occasion the Honourable Minister for Planning, Communications and Works informed this House that when permission is given for the importation of aggregate, it would not necessarily specify where it is discharged. However, once that is provided by the importer, the port has to approve where the aggregate is unloaded.

We know this is causing detrimental damage to the North Sound, the jewel of our tourism product - we have had barges run aground, destroying channel markers and tearing up the bottom as shown in aerial photographs. Can the Honourable Minister give an undertaking that he, along with the Minister of Works, will sit down as soon as possible with the importers with the view to utilising the George Town Dock for the unloading of this cargo? We cannot sit around and allow anyone to gain economically while, at the same time watch the North Sound being destroyed. I think I speak on behalf of every Member of the Backbench because we have had numerous complaints from our constituents about this matter.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for the Ministry of Tourism, Environment and Transport.

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: Permission to come through the North Sound was given before I got the Ministry. As I said, this question was traversed very much the other day. I understand from the Honourable Minister of Planning, Communications and Works that a letter has already been sent to the persons concerned.

As far as I am concerned, as chairman of the Port Authority and as Minister, I will certainly work with my colleague together on the matter from my point of view for a speedy resolution of the situation. I do not think I can say any more than that.

The Speaker: Are there any further supplementaries? If not, that concludes Question Time for this morning. Would this be a convenient time for the morning break?

[inaudible interjections]

The Speaker: We shall suspend for lunch and come back at two o'clock. Please remember two o'clock.

PROCEEDINGS SUSPENDED AT 12.32 PM

PROCEEDINGS RESUMED AT 2.15 PM

The Speaker: Please be seated.

Proceedings are resumed. Suspension of Standing Order 14(2) to enable Other Business to take precedence over Government Business.

The Honourable Minister for Planning, Communications and Works.

SUSPENSION OF STANDING ORDER 14(2)

Hon. D. Kurt Tibbetts: I move the Suspension of Standing Order 14(2) to enable Other Business to take precedence over Government Business.

The Speaker: The question is the suspension of Standing Order 14(2) to enable Other Business to take precedence over Government Business. Those in favour please say Aye. Those against, No.

AYES.

The Speaker: The Ayes have it.

AGREED: STANDING ORDER 14(2) SUSPENDED.

The Speaker: Other Business, Private Members' Motions. Continuation of debate on Private Member's Motion No. 9/01, Select Committee to review the Health Insurance Law. The Floor is open to debate. Does any other Member wish to speak? Does any other Member wish to speak?

The Honourable Minister for Health and Information Technology.

OTHER BUSINESS

PRIVATE MEMBERS' MOTIONS

PRIVATE MEMBER'S MOTION NO. 9/01

SELECT COMMITTEE TO REVIEW THE HEALTH INSURANCE LAW

(Continuation of debate thereon)

Hon. Linford A. Pierson: Thank you.

I am pleased to respond on behalf of the Government to Private Member's Motion No. 9/01. It is only fair to acknowledge that since the Health Insurance Law of 1997 and regulations came into effect in 1998 certain concerns have arisen that deserve our attention.

Concerns seem to be spread across the board and involve insured persons, health insurance providers and health care providers, giving rise to the situation where none of these groups is satisfied with the workings of the Health Insurance Law 1997 and accompanying regulations. Therefore, this Motion is timely and I thank the Mover and the Seconder for bringing it to this Honourable House.

I have taken note that the motion first resolves that "this Honourable Legislative Assembly appoints a Select Committee of all Elected Members to review the Health Insurance Law and matters pertinent to its operation in the Cayman Islands;" and also resolves "that the Committee take input from the public, health care and insurance providers and medical practitioners and report to this Honourable House no later than the last Meeting of the 2001 Session."

It may be good to mention that I take the suggestion made by the Elected Member for East End that perhaps it is not necessary to have all Members of the House to form a committee to deal with a particular issue. It might be just as efficient and effective if certain specified individuals were asked to conduct such a select committee.

The Government supports a comprehensive review of the Health Insurance Law 1997 and the regulations. Nevertheless, we would hope that the Select Committee would see fit to meet with or receive a report from the Health Insurance and Health Fees Advisory Committee. This Committee was appointed by the Governor in Council on 20 February 2001, and is chaired by the Permanent Secretary (PS) for Health and Information Technology. It has been meeting regularly and has already done relevant and useful work with respect to the subject of the Motion. It would also be helpful to receive input from this Health Insurance and Health Fees Advisory Committee.

The terms of reference of the Health Insurance and Health Fees Advisory Committee are as follows:

- To examine the pros and cons of a self-funded scheme for government

- To consult the Honourable Attorney General regarding a suspension of the Government health insurance contract with Caribbean Home (and this matter is now being looked into);
- To make recommendations on improving collections at the Cayman Islands Health Services Department (this is also being attended to presently);
- To examine problems associated with the working of the Health Insurance Law 1997, and the regulations and to make recommendations; and
- To examine and make recommendations on a fee structure for the health services to be phased in over three years, starting in 2001.

We have heard suggestions that we need to standardise the fees charged, not only by the hospital but by the private sector health care providers. We are looking into this matter at present. The fees at the hospital are somewhat low and a subcommittee of this Health Insurance and Fees Advisory Committee is now looking into the matter of revising the fee structure at the hospital.

The members of the committee are as follows: Permanent Secretary for Health and Information Technology, Miss Andrea Bryan. These positions will remain, even though the individuals now filling them may be transferred from time to time. Superintendent of Health Insurance, Mr. Christopher Collins; PS, Personnel, Mrs. Jenny Manderson; Deputy Director Health Services, Mrs. Eloise Reid; Government Risk Manager, Mrs. Betty Jefferson; Director of Budget and Management Unit, Mr. Peter Gough; Attorney General Designate, Mrs. Sheena Frederick-Westerbourg; President of the Cayman Islands Civil Service Association (CICSA), Mrs. Gloria McField; Senior Assistant Secretary of Health and Information Technology, Mr. Colin Ross:- a very strong committee indeed.

The Health Insurance and Fees Advisory Committee is also able to co-opt other members as the need arises. The Committee has set up four subcommittees that have been working very hard at looking into the various issues raised by the terms of reference. These subcommittees are due to submit reports to the main Committee by the end of this month (June). The main Committee will then consolidate those reports into one report which will be presented to me, as Minister of Health and Information Technology.

I also wish to make certain comments on some of the points raised yesterday. I think the Members made some very useful comments and I hope these will be taken into account when the select committee becomes operational.

The Mover spoke about the abuses in the health insurance within the islands. I will not say a lot about this because the matter with regard to Caribbean Home Insurance could be sub judice, except to say that we have been told of abuses of the whole insurance scheme system.

The Mover also said that insurance companies take a very long time to pay up and this is indeed a problem. Provision will be made to ensure that payments of claims are made within a specified period.

Another point raised by the mover was that the insurance companies tend to exclude older folks from the scheme and individuals whom they consider to be high health risks. There is something wrong with this system, and this is an area I will ask the select committee to pay very close attention to so that provisions can be made in the law to guard against this abuse.

I think the point was rightly made that it seems the health insurance companies only cover those individuals who are young and healthy, but have no regard for older individuals or those with illnesses. This cannot be right.

The point was also made that at present the Government health services department covers a number of individuals by providing free medical services. In regards to the uninsured and/or partially insured they are covered by the contribution other individuals make. The system in place was $5 and $10 and these monies were put into a segregated fund. There are funds in there now and hopefully this money will be available to assist in setting up this self-funded scheme.

The Second Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman also made some very important points. He also suggested that attention should be given to a wider scope for the insurance coverage and not just covering the healthy individuals. I support that 100 percent.

I would not want to miss making reference to a comment made by the Third Elected Member for George Town when he suggested that the question of health insurance is not simply a question of money; it is also a question of expectations. When we are looking at this law I think this is an important social aspect that must be taken very much into account.

The Elected Member for East End told of his experience in Miami where he witnessed attempted abuse of the health insurance system. Obviously, there is abuse and we will have to tighten up the law and guard against such abuse.

In closing, the Government supports Private Member's Motion No. 9/01. I offer again the input of the Health Insurance and Fees Advisory Committee, appointed by the Governor in Council to advise on this subject as well as related matters.

The Speaker: Does any other Member wish to speak?

The Second Elected Member for West Bay.

Mr. Rolston M. Anglin: This Motion certainly touches the lives of everyone in our community, whether insured or, as we have heard, indigent or uninsurable. Once we have gone down the road of mandatory health insurance everyone is affected. In fact, before this Motion was brought, the Mover and I had an opportunity to speak of our grave concerns of the state of health insurance in this country.

I fully support this Motion. The one thing that we are going to have to do after the Motion is passed is have a thorough and meaningful debate in the Select Committee. This will serve to thrash out this issue. We will report back to this Honourable House on something we all feel serves everyone in this community and the people we represent. This issue touches on every single adult and child on the islands.

I note from the contributions so far, that not only the Health Insurance Law was touched on, but also mention has been made about the philosophy of health insurance and what it means to the people and the Government. That is good because we must think in the broadest sense when we seek to represent the people's needs health wise.

Once we go to a committee all members must be minded that we are looking at the law. We have to come back and report to this House in a matter that is comprehensive. The report must give the Minister the opportunity to effect a change that will be fully endorsed on both sides of this Honourable House. I feel that that is what is going to happen. I have confidence in everyone here in terms of making a valid contribution.

What has brought us to this point? Obviously, the health insurance is disarray at this stage. In fact, I have heard some go on to say the health insurance situation is an absolute mess and that it is just not serving the needs of those persons who are insured.

A constituent came to me two months ago. She had herself and her young daughter insured. She made some $1700 per month. Her health insurance coverage was over $400. That is a serious amount of your income taken up by health insurance. Pension contributions also have to come out of her income.

It is obvious when we look at any society, that there are those considered ordinary citizens, you have the Government and then business. It is my humble opinion that in mandatory health insurance big business and health practitioners are the winners. The consumer, all of our constituents, our families, friends and neighbours have lost miserably.

We have heard talk of models of health insurance set up in Canada and the UK. Although we have to consider those systems in committee, we must appreciate that what we do in Cayman must fit the people of these islands and our expectations and the way we live. When you take a foreign model, very often the effects are adverse.

While we are on the topic of health, it is very much like medicine. When it goes into the body it is foreign and its effect can be either positive or negative. We must come from this select committee with a positive set of recommendations to give to the Minister in terms of the way forward.

Speaking of Canada, I had the opportunity to speak with a former colleague of mine who hails from that country. It was very interesting to hear him articulate how the system works there. Without going into too much detail, the one thing he was very clear about was their health insurance system when compared to other countries like the US. There are advantages and disadvantages and a few significant disadvantages.

For example, within their system, everyone contributes through their federal taxation policy and in some provinces through Provincial tax. That is, in British Columbia the residents pay a separate tax (I think CAD$750.00 per annum) specifically earmarked for insurance. One thing encountered is long lines, even for operations. Obviously life-threatening matters are fast-tracked. He reckoned that in terms of equipment used it was not quite as modern as in the US, where free enterprise is what drives and funds the industry. Therefore, it is always on the cutting edge versus something which is government run which can sometimes make the system lag behind. If we are thinking of going in this direction, these are things we need to know. At the end of the day, we have to ensure that whatever we put in place is well thought out this time. It has to serve our people.

Hamilton said that education is the bedrock of any society. I live and stand by that comment. However, I will be the first to admit that nothing is achievable in life without good health. Thus, when talking about health and health insurance coverage and the way we administer health care to our citizens, this has to take priority above everything else.

One thing we need to seriously address, whether or not we have mandatory insurance or if we go with another model, we have to look at abuses of the system. If everyone is going to drive to the hospital and clutter the emergency room simply because they poked their finger with a needle while sewing, we will have problems. No country can afford to build the infrastructure so large that it will accommodate every little ache and pain.

As responsible leaders, we have to say what is truthful to all our citizens. If we are going to get the positive outcome we want, we cannot just talk about the glitz; we must talk through these matters thoroughly. We must be open and frank.

I have heard mention of establishing a certain minimum below which service will not be provided free. Take for example, $50. If you go to the hospital and it is $50 or less, you will pay for that. Anything above that, if you went to the model of governmental type blanket coverage . . . Of course, the one thing I would add to that is that, I would not support any minimum when it comes to infants.

Whereas adults can make judgment calls, using a dramatic example of pricking your finger while sewing. However, I will not ask any citizen to make a judgment call when it comes to their infants who cannot communicate. Every time they cry, we have no idea what it is that is going on in their bodies.

I certainly want to make it clear that if we if we do go to a model similar to that of Canada, the people of this country will have to realise that, all of a sudden, they are not going to stop paying insurance premiums, and government be able to afford to provide that service to everyone, there will probably be an incremental tax that will have to be added on.

Of course, the attractiveness of this thought process is that we feel like we could tax the people at rates that are significantly less than what the health insurance providers charge by way of premiums. Once you do that and have the extra money injected we should be able to modernise our equipment and should be able to invest in terms of getting, in a more realistic fashion, Caymanian doctors and nurses. This is a sore topic for me because we have to make a conscious effort to ensure that we have Caymanian doctors in this country.

I hope that a part of our report would be the establishment of a timeline and certain minimum numbers of Caymanians that we want in this profession at least studying on their way to becoming doctors.

If we think of going to this model, we also have to ensure that our people do not have unreasonable expectations. Often people say that we need a hospital in Cayman that will prevent us from having to fly our citizens off. While there is a lot of good in that thought, we have to be realistic. I, for one, have often seen while living abroad, people having to be flown from one hospital to another in a nearby city because the city they were in, perhaps because of its size, simply did not have the funds available to invest in all the necessary equipment.

For example, I remember seeing on the news people being flown out of Tampa General Hospital to nearby hospitals in Orlando and Jacksonville. They are in the same country, so it does not become as big an issue as it does with us. We fly overseas. To think that we will have neurosurgeons here with all the equipment, in my humble view, is unreasonable. We must ensure, however, that we have a good base level of service that can prevent us from sending patients overseas for certain procedures that we currently send people over for.

I would have to also add that my contribution to this Motion will be shorter than my usual contribution, because we are going into a select committee. I think we all recognise that when we are taking something to select committee that is where we will thrash out the details and that is where the work will be done. I listened carefully and heard a few interesting items come up that need to be followed up within the select committee. I thought I needed to share some ideas simply because between now and the report of the select committee, I do not want reports in the press where we might start to get unreasonable expectations.

I would like to add one last point. I was quite angered last night when a gentleman I have known all my life shared with me a horror story. It truly exemplifies why this Motion is so timely and why we need to press on with a comprehensive plan.

The gentleman's wife was authorised by his insurance company (and I might add a local insurance company) to receive treatment. She went off to Miami to Cedars Hospital. She was referred by the Health Services here because the procedure could not be performed here. She fulfilled all the criteria and the insurance company stated they would pay.

She went to Cedars as opposed to Baptist because the particular surgeon performing the procedure satisfied the insurance company that Cedars was the only institution that could handle that particular case. The lady has many serious ailments. She had her blood work done and was called at the 11th hour and advised that the surgery would have to be postponed without being given any reason.

A day later they were told that the hospital had had problems collecting from that insurance company in the past and were not going to accept the letter of guarantee from the insurance company. They would also require a $16,000 (US) deposit. Now, most people cannot simply come up with $16,000.

The insurance company proceeded on a line of principle. They said they would not pay until the services were rendered. While the logic in all of us can appreciate that sentiment, I still was disgusted that for $16,000 and after providing a letter from the insurance company stating they would provide coverage, they could not simply provide a draft for $16,000. If they cared enough they could have forward-dated it to the date of the surgery to ensure the services were provided.

This is how they proceed. It is a business. They do not care (seemingly) about the people. The lady had to come back home. She needed critical surgery. They spent $1100 in airfare and hotel. Would anyone be kind enough to say to them for the measly $1100, 'Look, I am sorry for what happened, I will give you this?' Of course not!

What is so disheartening is that the gentleman has been covered for over 25 years by that insurance company along with his wife. This is what is so disgusting and despicable about this situation. I call on the powers that be because I am going to provide them with the names of this family, to see what they can do to help this woman get off this island to receive the surgery.

I do not need to go on any further because with cases like that, whether $16,000 was being paid up front or not, common decency would have told me it should be done. Indeed, the insurance company in question provided a letter stating they were going to cover the surgery. All the hospital was asking for was 50 percent up front.

Of course, we hear of people submitting claims. In fact, my father submitted a claim. It took him 24 months to get the funds back. If we are to continue down the road of mandatory health insurance we must have minimum repayment periods stipulated by law, we must have fines and penalties for going beyond that date and applied vigorously to this industry.

I realise that they are in the business for a profit. However, all businesses must recognise what business they are in. If you make computer chips, that is one thing, but if you are providing health insurance, providing premiums and taking people's money away, when they need to have reimbursement it must be efficient and prompt.

I will stop here. I could go on and on all day on this topic. I will leave that for the select committee. I congratulate the Mover and I look forward to the deliberations.

The Speaker: Does any other Member wish to speak? Does any other Member wish to speak?

If not, does the Mover wish to exercise his right of reply?

The Second Elected Member for Bodden Town.

Mr. Gilbert A. McLean: Thank you.

I must say that I am very pleased to know that the Government has accepted the Motion that has been brought to this House dealing with national health insurance and that it will now go to a select committee to be examined by all Members.

I think it is a general feeling among Members of this House that health insurance is a major concern, both to have it and the present way in which it seems to be functioning or, should I say, dysfunctioning.

Insurance in the Cayman Islands is compulsory. That in itself changes the condition immensely, and different from that in most countries of the world. We have chosen to go that route and I think it is good to have health insurance. Whether we have chosen the right way to go by allowing so many companies to offer health insurance when it appears, at least in several instances, they are not meeting their obligations is a different matter. Perhaps it is time there were fewer insurance companies, those who can prove beyond a shadow of a doubt that they are in a position to offer health insurance as required by law.

Out of this debate so far, more than one Member has mentioned that perhaps we need to look at a self-funding system of health insurance which could be provided. I thought it was quite ably put by the Third Elected Member for George Town. The indigents and persons who are uninsurable or partially insurable, government has to find money to pay insurance companies to pay back the hospital or doctors, or offer the service free. One way or another it is costing government, and it is costing millions of dollars.

I believe that we have a great opportunity to examine all of the various aspects that have been raised by the Members who spoke. The Third Elected Member for George Town pointed out that this is a social consideration. The people of the Cayman Islands have always expected that health care would be there for them and even from the earliest of times this was possible. There was a Government Hospital, a government doctor and health care was provided.

So, when we look at providing health insurance, we have to look beyond the companies wishing to offer health insurance to make a certain margin of profits. We have to see this as part of our social obligation and if necessary be innovative and go the extra mile to ensure that all the people of the Cayman Islands have health insurance coverage. I mean indigenous and well as non-indigenous.

At least two persons spoke of the need for health insurance managed properly and reintroduction of a Health Care Authority. I also support that view. I think it will give the Minister of Health a break from the regular and constant demand from members of the public who see him as their only point of appeal when they are up against a hard situation in getting health services.

I am not saying that that is not something that should be available to a member of the public, but the Minister of Health should be the person who provides the policies under which health insurance services are provided and not necessarily the person who has to take a dozen calls in any given day to call a doctor or his PS to deal with certain specific matters.

A Health Care Authority would work under certain prescribed management requirements and systems, which would encompass the workings of a health insurance. I certainly believe that the greatest efficiency can be found through allowing an autonomous body or statutory board empowered to deliver or manage the delivery of health care services. I think that is something we need to look at seriously.

If we look at a few of the instances where the greatest complaints come from, and look at the way the Law and regulations are written, it amply provides for the health insurance company. However, as for the insured, one could raise a lot of questions.

For example, the prescribed health care benefits in the minimum package guarantee for ten in-patient benefits. If we look in Part III of the Regulations at the many benefits that can be excluded from a standard health care contract, we find 22. Some that are excluded are things such as the supply or fitting of eye-glasses, contact lenses, or hearing aids. It could hardly be more basic than that because most people as they progress in age need these things. Why would these be excluded?

Also excluded is dental treatment, x-rays and extractions.

I think we have to look at all of these areas and I must say, at this point, that I totally support the suggestion made by the Second Elected Member for West Bay that we should work together to come up with a comprehensive plan that we can give the Minister to move forward with. I want to pledge my full support to working towards such an aim. We will address some of the obvious problems which have arisen since the Law came into force.

The Minister of Health mentioned the fact that a Member suggested that the committee could be a select committee of a smaller number of persons. I really do not see a difficulty with that. I know that when it comes to something as touchy as this, everyone wants to offer his contribution. However, if the Minister (whom I would imagine would chair this committee) and all of the backbench Members, perhaps that might be representative enough, I do not know. It offers an opportunity for everyone to be in on it.

I hope a meeting of the Select Committee will be set as soon as possible and regular meetings held. I encourage, nay implore, Members to attend because this is such an important matter. If it is set for 9 or 10 o'clock I encourage Members to be there, and let us get down to business and deal with this instead of having to wait—as I have often seen over the years—to find sufficient Members to make a quorum. It does not make sense for us to go through this exercise if that is what will prevail.

Another point that was made by the Second Elected Member for West Bay was the fact that we could look at different models. Whatever we choose must fit Cayman's needs.

I was happy to hear the details as given by the Minister regarding the health care advisory committee that has been set up. I think that they have been working already and would be in an ideal position to advise the select committee. There are stalwarts on that committee, so I believe we can look forward to detailed information.

I thank the Government for accepting this Motion, and look forward to offering my contribution in select committee. This matter is of such major social and financial importance to us all. I thank the Members who did not necessarily wish to debate the Motion for their support.

The Speaker: Before putting the question, I would like to call to the attention of Members that under Standing Order 70(1)-Select Committees, "The House may appoint any of its Members to be Members of a select committee to consider and report on a Bill or otherwise to assist it in exercising its function under Part IV of the Constitution."

The House clearly has the authority to appoint any number, but this Motion specifically states "all Elected Members." Therefore, I shall appoint the Honourable Minister for Health and Information Technology to be chairman of this select committee.

Will you accept?

Hon. Linford A. Pierson: Yes, Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: I shall now put the question on Private Member's Motion No. 9/01, entitled Select Committee to Review the Health Insurance Law. Those in favour please say Aye. Those against, No.

AYES.

The Speaker: The Ayes have it.

AGREED: PRIVATE MEMBER'S MOTION NO. 9/01 PASSED.

The Speaker: Moving on to Private Member's Motion No. 16/01, Amendment to the Penal Code (1995 Revision) to be moved by the Third Elected Member for West Bay.

PRIVATE MEMBER'S MOTION NO. 16/01

AMENDMENTS TO THE PENAL CODE (1995 REVISION)

Capt. A. Eugene Ebanks: Thank you. I beg to move Private Member's Motion No. 16/01, Amendment to the Penal Code (1995 Revision), which reads as follows:

"WHEREAS section 132 (3) of the Penal Code (1995 Revision) states "Whoever unlawfully and carnally knows any girl under the age of sixteen years is guilty of an offence and liable to imprisonment for seven years:

"Provided that it shall be a sufficient defense to any charge under subsection (3) if it shall be made to appear to the court or jury before whom the charge shall be brought that the person so charged had reasonable cause to believe and did in fact believe that the girl was of or above the age of sixteen years";

"AND WHEREAS section 144 (1) of the Penal Code (1995 Revision) states 'Any male person who has carnal knowledge of a female person who is, to his knowledge, his grand-daughter, daughter, sister or mother is guilty of an offence and liable to imprisonment for five years";

"BE IT RESOLVED THAT Government consider increasing the available term of imprisonment in the Penal Code (1995 Revision) section 132 (3) to twelve years for victims between the ages of 12 and 16, and 20 years for victims under the age of 12;

"BE IT FURTHER RESOLVED THAT Government consider increasing the available term of imprisonment in the Penal Code (1995 Revision) section 144 (1) to life for victims under the age of thirteen; and twenty years over the age of thirteen.

"BE IT FURTHER RESOLVED THAT section 133 of the Penal Code be amended by increasing the maximum penalty from two years to twelve years."

The Speaker: Do we have a seconder?
The Second Elected Member for West Bay.

Mr. Rolston M. Anglin: I beg to second the Motion.

The Speaker: Private Member's Motion No. 16/01 has been duly moved and seconded. Does the Mover wish to speak to it?

Capt. A. Eugene Ebanks: Thank you.

The Penal Code was introduced back in June 1975 and is currently consolidated with 12 other laws which, in my opinion, that makes it a very complex piece of legislation. Over the years since 1975, there have been amendments to the Penal Code for various reasons.

However, as far back as 26 August 1981, the Honourable Member for North Side (at the time Mr. Craddock Ebanks), said, and I quote from the 26 August 1981 Hansard, "I feel, sir that the time is right, that the time has come when we must do something for people who can continue to enjoy their privileges or what used to be."

Then, on 9 October 1998, the Honourable Richard Coles commented on the amendments so urgently required to the Penal Code.

Mr. Speaker, I feel that this Motion is timely in view of the fact that for many years now members of the public and the judicial system have been crying shame on the leniency in sentences for some sexual offenders.

In doing my research on this Motion, I gathered some statistics from within the Cayman Islands and Canada, Australia, the Caribbean and the United States. With your indulgence, I would like to share some of these statistics which I think will strengthen my argument.

The Speaker: Go ahead.

Capt. A. Eugene Ebanks: I read from the Royal Cayman Islands Police (RCIP), Annual Report 1998 and 1999 that in 1997 there were 71 reported cases of rape, attempted rape, indecent assault, indecent assault on a female, insulting the modesty of a woman, indecent assault on a boy, defilement of a child, defilement of a girl under the age of 12 years, defilement of a girl under the age of 16 years and indecent exposure.

In 1998, there were 64 reported cases of such offences, and in 1999, there was one reported case of incest. If it were just one case, it would still be too many.

I would like to share some statistics from the local and regional newspapers under Rape, Abuse & Incest, National Network. In the Trinidadian Newspaper Saturday Express, 16 September 2000, there is an article entitled "Girl 12 Gives Birth." A girl of 12 gave birth to a baby now ten days old at the Mt. Hope Women's Hospital, triggering alarms of social workers, police and health officials.

It goes on to say that it is a criminal offence, statutory rape, for anyone to have sexual intercourse with a girl under the age of 16 even if she consents. The issue of consent does not even arise if the girl is under 14. The maximum penalty for that offence is life imprisonment.

Then in the World News section of the Caymanian Compass, 8 March 2001 it says that the United Nations Children's Fund (UNICEF) is calling for an end to child marriages which are common in Africa and Asia. Young girls can suffer disproportionately from the physical and emotional toll of early marriage and early motherhood. Young brides tend to be pulled from school prematurely, depriving them of one of their most basic rights—education.

UNICEF also released a report on the eve of National Women's Day stating that pregnancy-related deaths are the leading cause of mortality for girls ages 15 to 19 worldwide. While much of the high toll is due to poor health care, physical immaturity is the key risk for girls under age 15. The report said that forcing children, especially girls, into early marriages can be physically and emotionally harmful. UNICEF director, Carol Denny, says that it violates their rights to personal freedom and growth.

In the local news Caymanian Compass, 12 March 2001, there was a case (and I will refrain from calling names) of a young man, 16 years old, who got involved with a 13-year old girl. She had a child when she was 14. Even though the sentence for that offence locally is seven years, the young man spent approximately one month in prison and was placed on probation for 18 months on the condition he helped support the child. With sentences like that for such offences, there is no wonder that we have a rise in crime amongst young people.

Manuel Banales, a Texas judge, ruled recently that sex offenders in the community of Corpus Christi, Texas, must place signs in their front yards and on their cars warning the community that sex offenders reside in the community.

The same judge ruled that pictures and the names of the sex offender be placed on the Internet. Judge Banales feels his ruling is designed to protect the lives of children. He has received much criticism in his ruling, particularly from the families of the sex offenders, as they feel it will ruin the lives of their young children.

Here in Cayman, unless we take some very swift and stiff measures to deter some of this crime, we will be in the same position as some of these other countries.

In an article from the Rape, Abuse & Incest National Network, it states that in 1995 and 1996 only 31 percent of the rapes and sexual assaults were reported to law officials. That's less than one in three. One of the startling aspects of sex crimes is how many go unreported. The most common reason given by women for not reporting these crimes is the belief that it is a private and personal matter and they fear reprisal from the assailant.

If we are going to use the international yardstick of 31 percent of reported offences, that would put the Cayman Islands in 1997 to approximately 230 actual offences and in 1998 to 2000. In such a small community with such a small population, those numbers are staggering. It is appalling to think that there are that many offences actually happening without being reported.

According to the US Department of Justice, in 47 percent of rapes the victim sustained injuries other than rape injuries. Seventy-five percent of the female rape victims required medical care after the attack. On rape offences, 29 percent used weapons during the assault.

Family violence and abuse is not a family matter. Family violence and abuse are among the most prevalent forms of personal violence against women and young children, both boys and girls. The sexual abuse of a child should never be just a family matter, but many children are afraid to report an incident to the police because the abuser is often a family friend or relative. Approximately one-third of all juvenile victims of sexual abuse cases are children under the age of six. That is a frightening thought.

An article from "Survivors of Incest Anonymous" website states that sexual contact between a child and a trusted individual damages a child, covert or overt, whether flirtation or sexual intercourse, needs to be dealt with assertively. It scars virtually all facets of the victim's life since she or he is left with little or no self-esteem. The child's emotional growth will be stifled at the age of the first attack and the victim will probably never begin to recover until adulthood if ever.

The article goes on to point out some of the social maladjustments arising from incest such as alcoholism, drug addiction, prostitution, promiscuity, eating or sleeping disorders, migraines, back or stomach pains – just a few of the physical consequences that a victim suffers.

Food, sex, alcohol, and/or drugs, deaden painful memories of the abuse and expel reality temporarily. If a victim perceives obesity to be unattractive and if she believes she was abused because she was pretty, a victim may overeat in a guarded attempt to defend herself from further sexual assault. Anorexia is another form of self punishment eventually leading to self victimisation and suicide.

There are many emotional problems emerging from the abuse including inability to trust, perfectionism, avoidance of both intimacy and emotional bonding, denial system that ensured her survival as a child now prevents the survivor from enjoying an unencumbered adulthood. She does not trust her own perceptions. She was first to become an expert in disbelieving her own senses, she tries to convince herself that she overreacted, that nothing really terrible happened. When reality is too painful for a child's mind, she learns to fictionalise. It is extremely painful to give up the fantasy family since children see themselves either in reflected glory or in disgraced shadows.

The victim makes excuses for the abuser saying he was drunk at the time, he had a rough childhood, and she takes responsibility for the assault saying 'I am too pretty' or 'I am too sexy.'

The victim may have parenting problems always second guessing her decisions which is another result of distrusting her own perceptions. A victim may avoid parenting altogether repeating the abuse. The worse possible consequence is when a victim perpetuates the abuse onto the next generation.

Another repercussion of incest stated is that victims often regard authority figures with anxiety, passivity. It is comfortable because it is familiar and she may accept familiar misery rather than risk unfamiliar change.

Another result of conflicting messages of incest is that many victims confuse sex with affection and love. Sexual offences such as rape, incest, and defilement of minors are hideous crimes. They leave their victims scarred for life and with horrifying lifelong memories, and take away self-esteem. In many cases, it brings unwanted children into a family which is not prepared to care for the child emotionally, physically or financially.

I feel if we were to increase the sentences as put forward in this Motion, it would help to act as a deterrent to potential offenders. In my opinion, saving our people from such traumatic experiences would be a major contribution to the people of these Islands. I feel it is our duty as legislators to do whatever we can to make these islands as safe as possible.

Due to some major changes in some laws throughout the region and more victims speaking out, there has been some progress made in the way of deterring some of the hideous crimes. The incidence of rape, attempted rape and sexual assault declined by 17 percent in 1997 because of judges like the judge in Texas making rulings, and more victims getting the courage to speak out. These are possible deterrents to these crimes.

I think it is high time that we took the bull by the horns and put some laws in place that will help to protect our young and old people alike. We need to remember that the pain from these crimes is temporary, but denial and its consequences are forever.

I trust that the Government and all Honourable Members of this Legislative Assembly will support this Motion. Thank you.

The Speaker: Does any other Member wish to speak? (Pause)

The Honourable Second Official Member.

Hon. David F. Ballantyne: Thank you.

May I take the opportunity to thank the Mover of the Motion for bringing this to the Floor of this House, and to say at the outset that the Government accepts the gist of the Motion with one relatively minor alteration in relation to the penalties for incest.

The House will be aware that not too long ago there was a serious case of incest dealt with by the Grand Court involving a father convicted for the crime of incest on his young daughter.

The sentence imposed was considered quite widely to be lenient for what was rightly considered an horrendous crime that offends everyone's sensitivities and sense of what is right and proper. Not surprisingly, some members of the public were considerably vexed by this, and in fairness to the Court I think it should be said that the ability of the Court to deal with the circumstances was fettered by virtue of the length of sentence available to the Court in that the maximum sentence was, and is, a mere five years. Accordingly, the Court had no option but to remain within that tariff.

However, following the imposition of that sentence and the surrounding circumstances some members of the community drew up a petition which was received in my office seeking an amendment to the law to increase the penalties for incest. As a result a Bill was drafted and is presently before this sitting of the House, and was intended for earlier enactment, but a number of issues prevented that, including the Election.

The Government has considered this Bill along with a number of other Bills which are due to be debated in the early part of next week and the Government has approved the amendment of the law to increase the penalties for incest in a way in which I will describe and is already laid out in the Bill which is in the public domain.

Upon consideration of this Motion, certain discussions took place at an earlier stage and also more recently with the movers of the Motion. While other changes to the Penal Code have been contemplated for some time and ought still to be brought forward at the appropriate point and are in the pipeline, there are provisions relating to morality which should receive priority. As a consequence of the view that both incest and defilement are serious issues meriting serious measures, the Bill designed to increase the penalties for incest is intended to be amended, with the approval of this House, at the committee stage to incorporate certain increases in the penalties for defilement also so as to meet the terms of the Motion.

In short, the Government accepts the Motion with the amendment I will describe in a moment, which is in relation to incest that I believe the Motion talks about amending section 144 so that the sentence available for victims under the age of 16 would be life. The Government's preference would be to say victims under the age of 13, since 13 is nearer the notional age of puberty and laws that we have examined both here and elsewhere would indicate that the age of 13 is a more appropriate breakpoint.

However, that does not mean that the penalty for incest in relation to a female over the age of 13 would be insignificant. The proposal in the Bill is, in fact, to have the maximum penalty for incest by a male against a female under the age of 13 to be life, and otherwise to be a maximum of 20 years. I understood from our discussions with the Mover of the Motion that that would meet the purpose of the Motion. I am taking that indication as correct, although it is a matter for this House to decide what the Law should contain when we get to that point.

I should also say that this would replace the present five years which is available in any circumstance with a sentence of up to life if the female was under 13 and up to 20 years otherwise. These are very substantial increases.

Indeed, one might say that if you had a young person who was somehow (unlikely as it may seem) guilty of incest with a young female less than 13, the possibility of a life sentence may seem rather drastic. On the other hand, I stress that these sentences are maximum sentences.

The purpose of life in relation to a young woman under the age of 13 is to give the court the ability to impose the length of sentence that would be appropriate in the circumstances of a particular case. And the differentiation between a female victim below the age of 13 and over is thought to be appropriate given the particular harrowing nature of incest with a female under the age of 13. Without going into details, there are aggravating factors about that kind of behaviour, which would appear to merit the distinction being made.

Similarly, in relation to attempts, section 143(3) simply provides that “a male person who attempts to commit the offence [of incest] is guilty of an offence” that does not have a tariff attached to it at the moment under the law and therefore would attract a maximum of two years being the general provision that applies where no specific sentence is mentioned in the statutory provision. Accordingly, as you will see from the Bill, all of the incest provisions are in the existing Bill. The proposal would be for a female victim under 13, an attempt would attract a maximum of ten years (that is an increase of eight years on the two I mentioned), otherwise a victim 13 or more, seven years. So, there would still be a threefold and more increase, a fivefold increase in relation to a female victim under 13.

In relation to section 145, is the section that deals with incest by females. The proposal in the Bill as amended by the committee stage amendment would be that the two years that apply there would be increased to ten years. The two years is the same type of provision as contained in section 144(3) which does not specify a time period.

I trust the House will see that these proposed amendments to the Penal Code in the Bill, together with the committee stage amendments, would bring about the result sought with the one exception of the breakpoint age.

I said earlier that discussion had taken place on consideration of the Motion. In the committee stage amendments that have been circulated relating to defilement would have the following effect: defilement of girls under 16 is dealt with in section 132 of the Law.

The present Law states in 132(1) that “whoever unlawfully and carnally knows any girl under the age of twelve years is guilty of an offence and liable to imprisonment for fourteen years.”

It is proposed that the maximum penalty in that provision would increase from 14 to 20 under the amendment, which accords with the Motion. In relation to section 132(3) presently, “Whoever unlawfully and carnally knows any girl under the age of sixteen years is guilty of an offence and liable to imprisonment for seven years.” That would increase to 12 years under the amendment.

The net effect would be that the penalty for defilement in relation to a victim under 12 would be increased to 20 years and for a victim between 12 and 16, would increase to 12, which accords exactly with the terms the Motion seeks. It is not proposed, unless the House is so minded, to increase the penalty for attempted defilement, which at present is ten years in section 132(2).

It may be noted in passing that there is a defence to a charge of defilement under the existing law in relation to a person who was under the age of 16, that it is a sufficient defence if it shall be made to appear to the court or jury before whom the charge shall be brought that the person so charged had reasonable cause to believe that and did in fact believe that the girl was or above the age of 16 years. This is to avoid the danger of convicting persons where the young woman has made herself appear overage deliberately.

However, it is no defence to a charge under this section to prove the girl consented to the act of unlawful and carnal knowledge. These safeguards would remain under the proposed amendment. Essentially, what is being changed is the tariffs for the commission of these offences.

In accordance with that, section 133, which deals with defilement of idiots or imbeciles, which says, “Whoever knowing a woman or girl to be an idiot or imbecile, has or attempts to have carnal knowledge of her under circumstances not amounting to rape, but which prove that the offender knew at the time of the commission of the offence that the woman or girl was in idiot or imbecile is guilty of an offence and liable to imprisonment for two years.” It is proposed that the two years, in accordance with the Motion, would be increased to 12.

There is one last committee stage amendment which is considered appropriate at this time, although I am aware there is a further motion before the House in relation to related matters which may result in future changes to the law. However, it does seem such a glaring inconsistency that section 143 of the Law which states, “Whoever unlawfully and indecently assaults a boy under the age of fourteen years is guilty of an offence and liable to imprisonment for five years.”

When you compare that with the tariffs we have been discussing, that would appear to be somewhat light and the proposal is in the committee stage amendment, that that should be increased from five years to ten years as a maximum. You will appreciate the relevance of what I said earlier about this touching on other matters. However, for the moment, these seem to be the most obvious and sensible changes in order to make the tariffs sufficiently serious to act as a deterrent to certain types of behaviour.

These offences are all categorised as offences against morality under the law. While I appreciate that other changes could and perhaps should be contemplated in due course, these matters have come to the forefront of the Government's attention and the private Member's concern and appear to be sufficiently pressing to require attention now. I would have been outlining the proposals regarding incest and will do so again in presenting the Bills when we get to them, but this seems to be as good an opportunity to ventilate the issues as we are likely to get. Perhaps in the rather freer flow of debate upon a motion I emphasise that the Law is never still in this regard; the Law needs to remain vigilant insofar as it can to ensure that penalties are appropriate.

It will not always be the case that the Law is current and as up to date as we might want, but we ought to try as a House to ensure that when we have the opportunity we take it and move the penalties in accordance with the perceived gravity of the offences. You will hear about other measures designed to improve the working of the criminal justice system and will see them in the Bills that have been circulated. However, I would like to suggest that the public needs to have confidence in the ability of that system to be able to deal effectively with wrongdoers at the end of the day. So the deterrent aspect can work and the courts can be given adequate powers to deal with cases coming before them. We must support the works of the court and we must support the criminal justice system. By endorsing the Motion and bringing forward the amendments that have been contemplated, it is hoped that we are moving in that direction.

I think these are all the remarks I wish to make at this point in time. If other issues arise, perhaps another opportunity will be found when we debate the Bill itself. All I will say is that the proposed amendments to the Penal Code will also be reflected in proposed amendments to the Criminal Procedure Code which sets out the maximum sentences for various offences.

May I thank the Movers of the Motion for their cooperation in the discussions we have had and for the ability to reach a common approach to this matter. The Government regards it as extremely important, very serious and would wish to pursue these amendments to the Law as a priority, as I indicated.

The Speaker: The Third Elected Member for George Town.

Dr. Frank S. McField: In attempting to speak to this private Member's Motion which the Government has already accepted and which the Members seem to have had the opportunity to have discussed with the Government. I would like to ask the Government (since it is now partly their Motion), if good people are made good by the enactment of laws, or by the existence of a collective morality.

It seems that the original attempt here was to deal with the question of incest and how those persons who commit this heinous crime should be dealt with. This appears to have succeeded in going to the point where the Motion is also calling for increasing the penalty for those who unlawfully have carnal knowledge of girls between certain ages.

This is an important twist in what might have been the original intention of the persons petitioning the Government last year to get the penalties increased for incest because of the public outrage over the case which the Honourable Second Official Member described. I believe that if we did not have our criminal justice system that it would be possible that the mob mentality would have prevailed and that person would have been dealt with in a manner which many people would have felt was appropriate at the time.

Thank God, we live in a reasoning society where it is hoped that our Government does not react like a mob. That it changes laws in order to improve what laws can improve and it uses other means to improve those things that laws might not be able to improve.

There is still the question whether or not the morality of a people is improved by passing to the State the obligation to correct the lack of morality which causes persons to commit incest and persons to have sex at an age that we believe might not be the appropriate age. Can laws prevent teenagers who are 14 or 15 years old from having carnal knowledge of each other? Or can this best be prevented by parents and schools educating their children to say no when it comes to sexual intercourse at that age?

We have been witnessing, in industrialised developed societies that have become giant legal bureaucracies. The criminal justice systems have taken us beyond reason, penal systems find it ever more difficult to keep up with the demands to incarcerate and rehabilitate persons. The criminal justice system is one result of the politicisation of the people's moral consciousness that has led to an act of taking away responsibility for morality from the people and institutionalising it inside the criminal justice system and the State.

This is the reason you find good politicised attorney generals in America. When it comes to a particular crime coming forward, use the crime as a way of getting people motivated to increase penalties and to see the increase of penalties as a way of solving the problem. The problem has resulted because of the lack of solidarity between the people, which creates the type of collective morality we need to have as the real roots of social control and order in our society.

We are all cognisant of the terrible trauma that the victims of sexual crimes suffer. The question, however, is will their protector be the State, or the people who are to become the perpetrators of these events? In other words, if we can spot our problems early enough, we might be able to make sure that our citizens do not become victims of this or that crime. If we believe that we can wait to create laws in order to use them as a deterrent, then the question to still be answered is whether or not the increase in sentences truly acts as a deterrent for these wicked acts.

Then, there are those who say, 'Well, if the people who commit these acts are so wicked then the best place for them is in prison.' This is easy to say, but the people who say that then have to pay the taxes to maintain these people in the prison. Thus, we have a vicious cycle where we create the need to tax people in order to get rid of their victimisers and the people become the real victims because they have to bear the burden of the taxation system which supports a criminal justice system, a penal system that has absolutely no answers for us. This has been proven in every country in the world.

I am not one who welcomes the lack of order; but I believe that to give the State the role of preserving social order by inculcating in the people the type of morality we need in order to get them not to offend the rights of others is a terrible mistake that has been made in the world all over.

I believe that we should punish persons who commit incest, especially when we look at our history. Although we saw this act last year as something that offended our morality and was shocking, historically, we will see where incest occurred on a very regular basis. We have a cultural experience with incest.

Incest is treated as something that offends our sensibilities to the extent that we now want to manage the problem by creating life imprisonment in certain cases for those who do it. There are those of us who understand that maybe the person who chooses to do something like that might not have been socialised in the appropriate manner; that the values in regard to sexuality and the respect of other persons' bodies might have been transmitted to that person in a very confusing manner within their own domestic environment, peer groups and community. Simply put, there are some people who, when they speak of it they do not talk about incest, they talk about sex.

When we are socialised in such a way that we are incapable of distinguishing exactly where it is and how it is that we enter into those types of relationships, we are creating problems for those individuals. Of course, we can say that it is not important what happens to them because if there is a cancer, cut it out. If there is a rotten apple, throw it away. However, at the end of the day, we are forced by certain types of humanistic obligations to maintain these people in prisons.

That, to me, creates a problem. If we could just eradicate them, if there was a final solution, maybe it would not be too terrible. We have no final solution and we have to pay for people. In developing our Laws we must make sure that our Laws are not completely removed from the reality of the situation. That is, we will have offenders and the fact that the penalties are stiffer will not always deter the offender from offending. This has been proven.

We need to not feel that the solution is in stiffer penalties. The solution is partly an understanding at this particular time that there have been incestuous relationships in our community and that some people felt that if the public knew it would be bad, but they still felt that if they could get away with it that it would be okay. What made the act bad was simply being caught, not doing it, not in thinking about it. That is where the danger is—when we do things and separate ourselves from the reality that we are seriously a part of.

I know I might be a little older than some people. Looking at the reality of the country I grew up in back in the 1950s, with the many little houses we lived in and the very close relationships we had and the very ways in which people regarded things. As a result of those beginnings I might seem to be someone who is trying to excuse a particular kind of behaviour. I am not trying to excuse the behaviour. I am really trying to expound upon the dangers of believing that the possibility for that type of behaviour will somehow be dealt with by creating stiffer penalties and not accepting the fact that the basis for it is already in the sexual attitude of, in particular, our male members of society. Something has to be done to counsel people and work with people in order to make sure that people understand and redefine the purpose of sexuality as they understand it personally. That is the kind of development that a lot of people would be best going through.

I am saying this not so much on the issue of incest which I tend to agree is serious, it offends our consciousness in such a way that we want to do certain things to those people. I am saying that we have to think about that but we also have to bear in mind that in the same amendment to the Penal Code that it is increasing the sentence.

It says "BE IT RESOLVED THAT Government consider increasing the available term of imprisonment in the Penal Code (1995 Revision) section 132 (3) to twelve years for victims between the ages of 12 and 16, and 20 years for victims under the age of 12." I might not have so much concern about under the age of 12. When we get to 12, 13, 14, 15, where we are aware in a Caribbean country, in a hot country where people dress certain ways, we are beginning to skate on thin ice. Let us be honest about feelings and how people are aroused.

I do not know the last time anybody was at the Batabano - so, what I am saying is, will the discipline come from the Law or from what is instilled in us in regard to how we should conduct ourselves on a sexual or personal level.

I am worried, for instance that if two young people, one 14 and one 15, have knowledge of one another that the consent will, as the Attorney General said, not be a factor here. It is only when the 15-year old boy can prove that he thought the girl was not 14 but 17. That creates a problem for me, simply because if there is such a thing as teenagers having sexual relationships in our community . . . if there is such a thing because it might not be, because you know it might not exist here.

Interjection by a Member: Just like gangs!

Dr. Frank S. McField: Just like gangs, right!

However, suppose they do. What does the law mean when it says that this will happen to whomever? Does it mean that in the case where two teenagers happen to be doing this that we turn a blind eye and say 'Well, they're teenagers so we can't do anything'? Then, what is the significance of the law? The law is making itself impotent. It is showing people that it is not serious, that it has double standards—the same reason why people have very little trust in the criminal justice system! People understand the dualities in the system and how there is one judgment for this one and one interpretation for the other.

I have some real problems trying to understand why the penalties were not sufficient before. I have some real problems understanding how many times persons were actually brought there and where we can say it was the Law that decided the sentence. Instead of the judge saying, 'Well, in this particular case I might be convinced to believe that the defilement of the 15 year old girl by the older person was the result of such and such, therefore, I am not going to apply the maximum sentence of seven years.' How many times did we see 15, 16, 17 and 18-year old boys going into court? All those teen pregnancies that we had attending the young parents' programme – were the boys who got these girls pregnant 16? Were they 15? Were they 13? Did anyone do any investigation, according to the Law, to make sure that the State's interest in that relationship was investigated?

The State makes a declaration, by making a law, that it now has an interest in the very personal sexual relationship. If it makes a declaration, it must be a useful one, otherwise it proves again that people cannot rely on the Law because in many cases the law is only a manifestation of a political ritual and has nothing to do with reality. It is simply a manifestation of political ritual.

If possible, I would like to have the Mover of the Motion, or someone else, show the real reason for asking the Government – in the case of the defilement, not the incest – to consider increasing the term of imprisonment to 12 years for cases involving victims between the ages of 12 and 16. Are they willing to see the possibility that that might create a particular danger for young people? Although we can agree that the young people would be better off not having these relationships, that that type of morality would be best achieved by more effective parenting, more concerned members of the community and a school system that teaches kids how to value their bodies?

It has to be remembered that that part of us is a very important part and when we devalue that, we are devaluing our humanity. When people learn how to value their humanity they learn how to value their sexuality. You cannot separate the two. Maybe in this Caribbean territory we need to start to respect people's humanity and then we will understand that sexuality is part of that humanity and we will respect that as well.

I do not want to create more victims by making our criminal justice system insensitive to the very culture it is to govern. Although laws have come from the collective consciousness of our people, sometimes we allow how we feel at the moment to dictate and legislate and judge how we might be able to react tomorrow.

We also know that we have a lot of people in this country who, as soon as somebody related to them gets in trouble, they run to talk about how terrible the Law is and how terrible the Judge is because the shoe is on the other foot. When we make laws, we have to understand that we are making laws for everybody.

If something should happen that I cannot tolerate other people suffering under, or being punished by, I cannot create a greater punishment than I would be willing to suffer myself, or see members of my family suffer.

Then, when we have jurors and people coming in, another aspect again is that they also have to have input. We will find that our laws are not static, that they are dynamic and always interacting with the on-going process of concluding a judgment.

I know it has been mentioned that the judges will have some discretion. However, there is a danger here too for those of us who have come to understand that our judges are not our own people. To give the judges the discretion when at this moment we in fact have the say— Since I have to look at the fact that other persons will use the Laws that I make to judge my people, I have to ensure the Laws I make for my people are the result of my understanding of my people. Sometimes, I know that my people will get angry and bitter at what others do. We cannot afford to develop the mob mentality in this House nor outside of this House.

We need to understand that if there is no need to try to gain any political mileage by going that way, and I am saying that because one of my good friends came in to try to cheer me on, or cheer me down from saying this—

The Speaker: May I interrupt you for a moment?

MOMENT OF INTERRUPTION—4.30 PM

The Speaker: We have reached the hour of interruption. Do you intend to finish in a short period of time, or —

Dr. Frank S. McField: I would like to come back on the next day and do some more preaching. Thank you.

The Speaker: I will entertain a motion for the adjournment of this Honourable House.

ADJOURNMENT

Hon. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Mr. Speaker, I move the adjournment of this Honourable House until 10 am Monday.

The Speaker: The question is that this Honourable House do now adjourn until 10 am Monday. Those in favour, please say Aye. Those against, No.

AYES.

The Speaker: The Ayes have it.

AT 4.30 PM THE HOUSE STOOD ADJOURNED
UNTIL 10 AM MONDAY, 25 JUNE 2001.

OFFICIAL HANSARD REPORT
MONDAY
25 JUNE 2001
10.24 AM
Fourth Sitting

[Prayers read by the Elected Member for East End]

The Speaker: Please be seated.

Proceedings are resumed. Item 2 on today's Order Paper, Reading by the Speaker of Messages and Announcements.

READING BY THE HONOURABLE
SPEAKER OF MESSAGES
AND ANNOUNCEMENTS

APOLOGIES

The Speaker: I have received apologies for absence from the Honourable First Official Member and the Honourable Minister for Health and Information Technology.

Moving on to Questions to Honourable Ministers and Members. Question 63 is standing in the name of the Second Elected Member for West Bay.

QUESTIONS TO HONOURABLE
MINISTERS AND MEMBERS

QUESTION NO. 63

No. 63: Mr. Rolston M. Anglin asked the Honourable Minister responsible for the Ministry of Planning, Communications and Works how the buddy pass system on Cayman Airways Limited works and how is it monitored by management.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Planning, Communications and Works.

Hon. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Currently there is no buddy pass system on Cayman Airways. A buddy pass system refers to a reduced-fare ticket which can be purchased by the employee for a person who would not be eligible for passes through the employee (e.g., a friend of that employee). This particular programme is of interest to unmarried employees who have no spouse or children receiving travel benefits. This was in existence from 1991 to 1993 and was discontinued due to various concerns that arose at that time pertaining to abuses within the system.

SUPPLEMENTARIES

The Speaker: The Second Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman.

Mr. Lyndon L. Martin: Can the Honourable Minister outline all current systems in place that allow for employees and their families to travel free of charge on Cayman Airways?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Planning, Communications and Works.

Hon. D. Kurt Tibbetts: The pass system currently in place has been in existence for some time and is under review to see how this compares with industry norms. The current pass entitlements are active employees and dependants; free tickets, taxes only payable at US $26.50; one to four years of employment six free tickets per calendar year. Five to nine years of employment, 12 free tickets per calendar year; ten plus years, unlimited free tickets. I must say that this was changed to ten plus years in 2000, which was not consistent with retiree benefits. Service charge tickets, US$15.00 and US$25.00 for dependants, plus taxes payable. Cayman Airways employees are not limited to the number of service charge passes used each year.

Retirees and dependants: Employees who worked for Cayman Airways for ten years or more and then left, unlimited free tickets, required to pay taxes. This benefit was amended in 1999 and as of June 1, 1999, to qualify for retiree benefits employees had to have 20 plus years of service.

Active board members and dependants: Unlimited free tickets, required to pay taxes. Retired board members and dependants, unlimited free tickets, required to pay taxes.

Other airline employees: This varies depending on the interline agreement with Cayman Airways.

The Speaker: The Second Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman.

Mr. Lyndon L. Martin: Can the Honourable Minister provide this House with an indication of what percentage of the travelling public on Cayman Airways travel free under this system he just outlined?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Planning, Communications and Works.

Hon. D. Kurt Tibbetts: I am not in a position to give that answer, but I can say that when I found out exactly what was obtained with this system, I asked the same question. I certainly expect an answer very shortly, and once I get that, I will undertake to provide information to the Member in writing.

The Speaker: The Second Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman.

Mr. Lyndon L. Martin: Thank you. Just for clarity, when the Minister spoke of retired employee receiving unlimited tickets, was that the retired employee and his dependants?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Planning, Communications and Works.

Hon. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Yes, Sir, that is correct.

The Speaker: The Elected Member for East End.

Mr. V. Arden McLean: Can the Honourable Minister say if retired board members are those appointed many years ago and then removed from the board?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Planning, Communications and Works.

Hon. D. Kurt Tibbetts: I would suspect that is the case, however I cannot verify that. I will seek to get that answer for the Member and provide that in writing as soon as I have it.

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman.

Mrs. Julianna Y. O'Connor-Connolly: Can the Honourable Minister undertake to also look to see the passenger capacity of the aircraft, considering these passes are on a "standby" basis, to get a complete picture of the whole scenario?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Planning, Communications and Works.

Hon. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Yes. That has already been borne in mind. For the benefit of all Members, let me clarify some questions that may be in their minds. The way the passes are monitored is as follows: The employee, retiree, or board member submits a request in writing to the pass bureau office. The pass bureau administrator tracks all employees' requests and is able to verify the type of ticket to be issued.

Currently there is one full time pass bureau administrator in Grand Cayman and a part time one in Miami. Note that for all passes I spoke of in the prior answers, these are issued on a space available basis. Employees in all categories are issued one positive space vacation pass per year. Positive space passes may also be issued for business travel for CAL active employees, board members and other airline executives. It is only with these passes where a revenue paying passenger might be displaced.

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman.

Mrs. Julianna Y. O'Connor-Connolly: Would I then be correct in assuming that because the majority of the buddy passes are done on a standby basis, they would only be given a seat on the aircraft if there were availability? Hence, if this system were not in place this would be revenue that could not be collected.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Planning, Communications and Works.

Hon. D. Kurt Tibbetts: If I understand what the Member is asking, in a nutshell the question is that since these passes (not buddy passes) are issued "space available" it means that if the airline was filled with passengers and the person wanted a pass, the person would not be able to travel. In other words, paying passengers have first option and these passes are only used when the seat is empty, thus it has no reflection on revenue.

The Speaker: The Fourth Elected Member for West Bay.

Mr. Cline A. Glidden Jr.: The Minister's last answer gave the impression that it would not affect revenue. I have difficulty understanding that. If someone wants to travel between here and the United States and knows he would not have to buy a ticket, I have difficulty in seeing how that does not affect the revenue of the airline.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Planning, Communications and Works.

Hon. D. Kurt Tibbetts: The Member must understand clearly that I am not defending the policy. It is a policy that I found. What I meant was that if these people who have "space available" free passes on the airline did not have this option, Cayman Airways could not guarantee they would be flying Cayman Airways if they wanted to travel. I meant that there was no guarantee it would add to revenue, therefore revenue was unaffected.

The Speaker: The Second Elected Member for West Bay.

Mr. Rolston M. Anglin: Can the Honourable Minister say how far down the family tree this free or reduced travel runs?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Planning, Communications and Works.

Hon. D. Kurt Tibbetts: "Dependants" is one of the words that I asked to have defined. I think that is where the Member is going. I assume it would be what we normally understand to be dependants (direct family members, husband, wife and kids), but I do not have a written reply. I will give an undertaking to provide information to the Member.

The Speaker: The Second Elected Member for West Bay.

Mr. Rolston M. Anglin: Can the Honourable Minister clarify if passes for current employees and board of directors that do not have to be on standby is for official business only?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Planning, Communications and Works.

Hon. D. Kurt Tibbetts: That is not for official business only. My information is that employees in all categories are issued one positive space vacation pass per year. I think that would be part of the terms of employment. We are investigating and drawing parallels to see what the industry norm is, and Members can rest assured that new policy will be in line with industry norms.

The Speaker: The Elected Member for East End.

Mr. V. Arden McLean: Can the Honourable Minister say if any study has been done to see how many people are getting passes from Cayman Airways, that is, directors past and current, employees, and the like? What amount in cash would that equate to if these were paying customers?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Planning, Communications and Works.

Hon. D. Kurt Tibbetts: If the Member will reflect on a previous answer that is part of information that I am seeking. It is not difficult to obtain. We are going to go back over a two-year period qualifying where the free passes were issued. Until we have those facts, I can not go any further with the question.

The Speaker: The Second Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman.

Mr. Lyndon L. Martin: Can the Honourable Minister say if there is any other group of individuals receiving discounted or free air service, such as Civil Aviation employees?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Planning, Communications and Works.

Hon. D. Kurt Tibbetts: I am not presently able to answer that question, but that forms part and parcel of the enquiry. Perhaps it is best for me to give an undertaking to provide information in writing to all Members.

The Speaker: The Elected Member for East End.

Mr. V. Arden McLean: I welcome the Minister's undertaking. Can the Honourable Minister provide that in the form of a government statement, rather than in writing, so that it can be entered into the record?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Planning, Communications and Works.

Hon. D. Kurt Tibbetts: I think that supplementaries answered in writing are put into the Hansards. I will take it a step further than what the Member is asking and perhaps do a statement when I have formulated the new policy to show what was and is the case.

The Speaker: Are there any further supplementaries? If not, we move on to question 64, standing in the name of the Fourth Elected Member for West Bay.

QUESTION NO. 64

No. 64: Mr. Cline A. Glidden Jr. asked the Honourable Minister responsible for the Ministry of Community Development, Women Affairs, Youth and Sports what educational programmes are currently in place for young offenders, giving the number of youth offenders broken down into male and female.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for Community Development, Women's Affairs, Youth and Sports.

Hon. Edna M. Moyle: The educational programmes that are currently in place for young offenders are those offered by the Cayman Islands Marine Institute and the Education Department's Alternative Education Programme.

The Cayman Islands Marine Institute's (CIMI) programme has both academic and vocational components. The academic component of CIMI is primarily self-paced. Each student has his own individualised plan which includes the following areas of study: English (spelling, reading, writing and comprehension) and Mathematics in preparation for the American College Test (ACT). CIMI also teaches Mathematics, History and English to ICGSE level. The vocational component includes: Culinary arts; Auto mechanics; Scuba diving; Seamanship; Information technology and computer repairs.

The total number of young offenders currently enrolled in the CIMI programme is 14. There are ten males and four females.

The Alternative Education Programme (AEP): The programmes currently in place for young offenders at AEP are the same as those offered at George Hicks High School and the John Gray High School in the following areas: Mathematics, English, Information Technology, Social Studies, Careers and Life Skills. If the student is in the last year of high school and is taking external examinations, assistance is also provided to the student for those subjects. Presently there are three male young offenders in the AEP.

In total, there are 17 young offenders in the two educational programmes.

SUPPLEMENTARIES

The Speaker: The Fourth Elected Member for West Bay.

Mr. Cline A. Glidden, Jr.: I thank the Minister for that detailed answer.

Can the Honourable Minister say although these troubled young offenders are removed from the existing system, into CIMI and the AEP, what disciplinary actions are used at that stage?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for Community Development, Women's Affairs, Youth and Sports.

Hon. Edna M. Moyle: There is counselling offered at CIMI and a reward system when they do what they are supposed to do. There are serious consequences if they do not do what they are supposed to do.

I cannot answer for AEP. That would have to come from the Minister of Education.

The Speaker: The Elected Member for East End.

Mr. V. Arden McLean: Can the Honourable Minister expand on the rewards given for good behaviour, good attendance et cetera at CIMI?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for Community Development, Women's Affairs, Youth and Sports.

Hon. Edna M. Moyle: The rewards are in the form of special privileges where they are allowed to do special activities such as using a wave runner, horseback riding, they are given music CDs, T-shirts, and such things.

The Speaker: The Elected Member for East End.

Mr. V. Arden McLean: Can the Honourable Minister say if one of those "such things" includes going out to nightclubs at night?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for Community Development, Women's Affairs, Youth and Sports.

Hon. Edna M. Moyle: I am told definitely not.

The Speaker: The Elected Member for East End.

Mr. V. Arden McLean: I am glad to hear that, because I was informed by one of the people in there that one of the rewards they got was for being good for two or three weeks.

Anyway, at the CIMI, the vocational components include seamanship. How is seamanship taught without a boat?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for Community Development, Women's Affairs, Youth and Sports.

Hon. Edna M. Moyle: I am told that CIMI has four boats, including a 39' sailboat. The captain teaches maintenance and operation.

The Speaker: The Second Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman.

Mr. Lyndon L. Martin: Can the Honourable Minister say if there are any plans to place the CIMI under the Ministry of Education?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for Community Development, Women's Affairs, Youth and Sports.

Hon. Edna M. Moyle: That is outside the question I have been asked to reply to, but I think CIMI was under [inaudible interjections] ... it has always been under Social Services? There are no plans at this time to put CIMI under the Ministry of Education.

The Speaker: The Third Elected Member for George Town.

Dr. Frank S. McField: Can the Honourable Minister say whether or not she intends to invite the Elected Member for East End to view this project so he can have his fears eliminated?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for Community Development, Women's Affairs, Youth and Sports.

Hon. Edna M. Moyle: I really do not know why I am being called upon to reply to that question because I am sure the staff at CIMI would welcome any Member of this Legislative Assembly to visit them.

The Speaker: The Fourth Elected Member for West Bay.

Mr. Cline A. Glidden, Jr.: Since the Minister had such a defined answer for the rewards, can we also get an answer as to what some of those serious consequences would be?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for Community Development, Women's Affairs, Youth and Sports.

Hon. Edna M. Moyle: Some of the serious consequences would be: removal of privileges, cleanup around the facility, as well as community service in assisting with cleanup of public beaches, or public parks.

The Speaker: The Second Elected Member for West Bay.

Mr. Rolston M. Anglin: Did I hear correctly? Did the Minister just say that cleaning up around the facility and community service was punishment?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for Community Development, Women's Affairs, Youth and Sports.

Hon. Edna M. Moyle: I am told it is more detailed cleanup around the facility, or they may be assigned that job for a week and do community cleanup service of public parks and beaches.

The Speaker: The Second Elected Member for West Bay.

Mr. Rolston M. Anglin: I am certainly no expert in this area; however, from my limited understanding of human beings I would think that any facility in this country should seek to mirror appropriate normal behaviour at their facility. I would think that community service should be an ordinary part of the daily lives of youngsters at those facilities. It is certainly a part of the ordinary activity of social clubs and within the school system.

Can the Honourable Minister say if, when a child runs away from the facility, he is tested for drugs upon return to CIMI?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for Community Development, Women's Affairs, Youth and Sports.

Hon. Edna M. Moyle: I am told that they are. I think we are getting off the particular question I have been asked. However, I understand they are tested.

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman.

Mrs. Julianna Y. O'Connor-Connolly: Can the Honourable Minister say at what stage, or who actually determines these are young offenders?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for Community Development, Women's Affairs, Youth and Sports.

Hon. Edna M. Moyle: It is my understanding that the juvenile court makes the order that these kids attend CIMI, but not AEP. AEP would be done through the schools where they are having the problem.

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman.

Mrs. Julianna Y. O'Connor-Connolly: Can the Honourable Minister say what the position is with any young offenders from the Brac? I am not aware of any, and if there are, what is the procedure? Would it also be to CIMI?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for Community Development, Women's Affairs, Youth and Sports.

Hon. Edna M. Moyle: The answer to that question is 'yes' if that is the type of treatment they need and are referred.

The Speaker: I would appreciate a motion for the suspension of Standing Order 23(7) & (8).

SUSPENSION OF STANDING ORDER 23 (7) AND (8)

Hon. Edna M. Moyle: I move the suspension of Standing Order 23(7) & (8) to allow Question Time to continue.

The Speaker: The question is that we suspend Standing Order 23(7) & (8) to allow Question Time to continue beyond the hour of 11 o'clock. Those in favour please say Aye. Those against, No.

AYES.

The Speaker: The Ayes have it. Question Time will continue.

AGREED: STANDING ORDER 23(7) AND (8) SUSPENDED TO ALLOW QUESTION TIME TO CONTINUE BEYOND 11 AM.

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman.

Mrs. Julianna Y. O'Connor-Connolly: Can the Honourable Minister say if there is open dialogue between her Ministry and the Ministry of education and their respective departments as to the placement of these young offenders?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for Community Development, Women's Affairs, Youth and Sports.

Hon. Edna M. Moyle: I am told that the Children and Adolescent Services Team review these offenders' cases and place them at these facilities. There are representatives from social services, legal and education and CIMI on that team. I have had no discussions with the Minister of Education, but we can look into that.

The Speaker: The Elected Member for East End.

Mr. V. Arden McLean: Can the Honourable Minister say what the procedure is if the kid is going to be moved from the CIMI prior to the end of that period for which he or she was submitted?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for Community Development, Women's Affairs, Youth and Sports.

Hon. Edna M. Moyle: I will undertake to provide that answer in writing. I do not have all the facts at hand.

The Speaker: Fourth Elected Member for West Bay.

Mr. Cline A. Glidden, Jr.: Can the Honourable Minister say whether solitary confinement is also used as a punishment?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for Community Development, Women's Affairs, Youth and Sports.

Hon. Edna M. Moyle: It is my understanding that if any of these children are giving problems, there is always a staff member present.

The Speaker: The Second Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman.

Mr. Lyndon L. Martin: Can the Honourable Minister indicate if there are similar educational programmes in place at Northward Prison for the young offenders sent there?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for Community Development, Women's Affairs, Youth and Sports.

Hon. Edna M. Moyle: The answer to that is that such young persons would fall under the programmes available at Northward Prison.

The Speaker: The Fourth Elected Member for West Bay.

Mr. Cline A. Glidden Jr.: Can the Honourable Minister say what facilities are available at CIMI to allow for the extreme solitary confinement? Is it a room or a holding cell? What is there?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for Community Development, Women's Affairs, Youth and Sports.

Hon. Edna M. Moyle: That is not an educational programme, but I will answer it for the Member; it is a classroom where they are held in the presence of a member of staff.

The Speaker: Two additional supplementaries.
The Second Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman.

Mr. Lyndon L. Martin: Can the Honourable Minister indicate if her Ministry or anyone from the youth department has any form of coordinating role with the young offenders, be that through the social services or department of youth to ensure they are being rehabilitated and possibly transferred to CIMI after a period of time?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for Community Development, Women's Affairs, Youth and Sports.

Hon. Edna M. Moyle: I think we need to understand that CIMI is for juveniles up to the age of 17. Young offenders at Northward Prison are beyond that age, so they could not be taken into the CIMI programme. It is my understanding that probation officers visit Northward Prison and work with young offenders there.

The Speaker: Are there any further supplementaries? If not, that concludes Question Time for today.
Suspension of Standing Order 14(2). The Honourable Minister for Planning, Communications and Works.

SUSPENSION OF STANDING ORDER 14(2)

Hon. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Yes, Mr. Speaker, I would move the suspension of the relevant Standing Order to allow Private Members' Motions to continue on a day other than Thursday—but simply to allow Private Member's Motion No. 16/2001 to be completed, at which point in time we revert to Government Business, Sir.

The Speaker: I will put the question that we suspend Standing Order 14(2). Those in favour please say Aye. Those against, No.

AYES.

The Speaker: The Ayes have it. Standing Order 14(2) has been suspended.

AGREED. STANDING ORDER 14(2) SUSPENDED TO ENABLE THE HOUSE TO CONCLUDE PRIVATE MEMBER'S MOTION NO. 16/01 BEFORE REVERTING TO GOVERNMENT BUSINESS.

The Speaker: Third Elected Member for George Town, continuing.

OTHER BUSINESS

PRIVATE MEMBERS' MOTIONS

PRIVATE MEMBER'S MOTION NO. 16/01

AMENDMENTS TO THE PENAL CODE (1995 REVISION)

(Continuation of debate thereon)

Dr. Frank S. McField: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. In order that we can have a clear perspective on what it is that I am attempting to debate here, I will say that I am debating Private Member's Motion No. 16/2001. This Motion deals with amendments to the Penal Code (1995 Revision).

Mr. Speaker, this Motion is calling for several things here and I would like to just briefly read the Motion. It says:

"WHEREAS section 132 (3) of the Penal Code (1995 Revision) states "Whoever unlawfully and carnally knows any girl under the age of sixteen years is guilty of an offence and liable to imprisonment for seven years: Provided that it shall be a sufficient defence to any charge under subsection (3) if it shall be made to appear to the court or jury before whom the charge shall be brought that the person so charged had reasonable cause to believe and did in fact believe that the girl was of or above the age of sixteen years;

"AND WHEREAS section 144 (1) of the Penal Code (1995 Revision) states "Any male person who has carnal knowledge of a female person who is, to his knowledge, his grand-daughter, daughter, sister or mother is guilty of an offence and liable to imprisonment for five years;

"BE IT RESOLVED THAT Government consider increasing the available term of imprisonment in the Penal Code (1995 Revision) section 132 (3) to twelve years for victims between the ages of 12 and 16, and 20 years for victims under the age of 12;

"BE IT FURTHER RESOLVED THAT Government consider increasing the available term of imprisonment in the Penal Code (1995 Revision)

section 144 (1) to life for victims under the age of sixteen and twenty years over the age of sixteen.

"BE IT FURTHER RESOLVED THAT section 133 of the Penal Code be amended by increasing the maximum penalty from two years to twelve years."

Mr. Speaker, the incest taboo is something that we will find in most societies. The part of the Motion which deals with section 144 which says that any male person who has carnal knowledge of the female person who is, to his knowledge, his granddaughter/daughter is dealing with incest taboo which is seen here as a crime with a prescribed punishment.

That seems to be an area where I have very little problem with in terms of increasing the punishment for this particular crime. I did argue and I would like to summarise briefly that my only fear is that we are creating stiffer punishments by way of incarceration rather than giving the victim certain types of restitution.

We see certain crimes as basically crimes in which the state has interest. The victim relies upon the state to get redress in the form of the prescribed punishment, which could mean incarceration. In a lot of cases when it is lengthy incarceration it means that the citizens must bear the burden of the taxation which goes to provide for the institutionalisation of offenders.

It is also noted that the longer persons are institutionalised or incarcerated in the mental or penal institutions, the more difficult it will be to return those persons to normal existence in society. Therefore, when we make up our minds to incarcerate persons for lengthy periods of time we should be doing so with good knowledge that, first of all, it will be costly. Second, it will most likely deprive those persons from being capable of being integrated back into society and having useful lives.

These are considerations that persons who are calling for stiffer penalties with regards to certain criminal offences need to bear in mind. When we create these stiffer as deterrents, do they sufficiently warn us the economic burden imposed upon the society and, the social and psychological consciences upon the perpetrator of the offence?

The other point is: what does it really do to assist the victim in being able to retrieve his or her dignity? That is why in certain societies, people are understanding that the sharp separation between restorative justice or restorative punishment—punishments that have to do basically with the state intervening in order to restore to an individual that which he or she has lost—has been separated for too long from what we could consider to be areas dealing with civil matters.

It is a civil matter. So, as a citizen you go through the process and the State will not be involved. However, the State is involved when it believes that what you have done will impact upon the general good and the interest of the Crown or the State. If that only results in the punishment of the perpetrator, and the State does not attempt to restore any benefits to the victims (maybe not a financial loss, but a loss)... We are dealing with sexual offences.

The question is: Does the Government only have an interest in what happens to the victim of a sexual offence? Or should the victim of a sexual offence also have the possibility to have restored to him certain types of benefits as a result of being a victim of that offence?

I know it is considered that the psychological damage that might be done to a woman in the case of rape might cause her to seek treatment by a psychiatrist for a period of time. That might be a medical expense, which she might have to bear herself.

In another circumstance, we could see where there would be a role for this restorative justice concept—where the perpetrator would also be responsible for paying for those expenses. Those expenses would not become a cost to the victim. The state is not really interested in the victim. The state is only interested in the perpetrator—in making sure that the perpetrator is punished. That is a very limited and primitive interest.

If we go back and see the way in which the justice system came into civilised societies, we will see that there is a certain assumption about the usefulness of punishment necessary in order for crimes to be defined. As a matter of fact, a crime is defined by the prescribed punishment or those acts would not necessarily be considered as crime. So, our healthy consciousness is, of course, disturbed by the occurrence by certain types of unsanctioned sexual activities and one is that of incest.

Action needs to be taken by the society to minimise the occurrence of incest, but the question remains: Will we minimise incest in the Cayman Islands by offering stiffer penalties? Or will we minimise incest by understanding a bit more about the dynamics of this particular anti-social criminal behaviour?

What is it about incest that we understand? What do we understand about those persons who commit such crimes? I have heard people say that someone who might commit incest might be an older person, and the victim would most likely be a younger person. Although the law does not really deal with the ages it deals with sexual relationships between certain blood relatives.

Obviously, the entire dynamics might be the result of certain types of power relationships in the first place. In other words, someone might be in a position of trust and a position of authority over a human being who is much younger and weaker and that person is, therefore, taking advantage of a very scared trust. We have to also understand that there could be cases where we are dealing with women and not just with men in terms of the perpetrators of this act. The assumption, of course, is that it is going to be a man. I do not think that we have had any cases coming before the courts where women have been involved.

Mr. Speaker, this is exactly why I say there is a need for us to understand more about incest and its occurrence in our society—the patterns and the ability of those persons to hide these particular acts simply because of the kinds of dynamics that are at play here. The typical situation is between a man and his daughter—who is dependent on him for survival and sees him as totally and utterly in control of her environment and her life. That person is almost omnipotent in the eyes of that young child.

What causes a society to allow relationships to manifest to the point where that child begins to feel that person is so omnipotent? How have the other persons that should have been involved abdicated their responsibilities? The State should have taken a greater interest earlier by having the social mechanisms in place to detect the possibility of such occurrences and not at the stage after the act has been committed. This is a very important point when we are considering amending the Penal Code and it might mean that when we amend it we would have finished our work. What I am saying Mr. Speaker, is that we begin our work at the beginning and not at the end. The end is when the act has been committed and judges will use our laws to make conclusions about the lives of other persons.

Mr. Speaker, perhaps there are many cases of incest occurring and statistics could be startling. If it is, then that is even more reason why we need to have an understanding of why it happens and why people are able to hide it from the authorities. If this is so, why has the government of these Islands done nothing to put in place laws that would compel persons who had knowledge or suspicion to come forward and report to the appropriate authority so that the investigation could take place? The first question must be with the reporting of these incidents. So that we can get the statistics and have some kind of case in point that we can study and understand the dynamics, and not turn everything into a crime—meaning that once it is a crime we punish it and finish with it. That is the worse thing to do.

This whole idea of coming here and saying 'let's put them in jail for life' and we still have not done anything to make sure that those persons who are victims are assisted. The victims are assisted by us preventing it from happening not by the punishment. I hope this at least makes us realise our responsibilities. In a society like ours, with an obvious history of incest, once defined in the seventies as the Caymanian disease by a doctor of genetics, Dr. Bloom, means we have a greater job. Clearly if this was so at a particular time in our history, we should have created the mechanisms to be able to detect and report these incidences long ago.

Most Honourable Members here want, I hope, to see this particular Motion voted on according to the different resolutions simply because we have gone from incest which we know is something that disturbs our healthy consciousness to dealing with defilement. They are both in the same Motion. I think that we could take the emotional world wind that comes from the incest debate and go right into the defilement debate. Perhaps we lose a particular awareness. We did not bring a particular awareness of our society to the debate.

I think it is important that when we are put here to make laws that are going to deal with punitive justice, we try to be as honest as possible about the human constitution. The ability of the human being to succeed in abiding by the norms of society, without hypocrisy or double standards, means we must put the norms beyond what might be achievable by the great majority of us. We do not want to always move the goal post and therefore criminalise more of our people. We know the great number of our people who are sitting at Northward and those who are waiting to go there today. We find the courts crying out for assistance to find alternative means of decriminalising persons. All over the world people are moving away from incarceration, while our penalties are being increased. We deal with defilement of girls, which section 32(3) is now trying to move to 12 years for victims between the ages—

The Speaker: I think it is section 132.

Dr. Frank S. McField: Section 132(1), “Whoever unlawfully and carnally knows any girl under the age of twelve years is guilty of an offence and liable to imprisonment for fourteen years” is proposed to change from fourteen years to twenty years.

Mr. Speaker, under the age of 12 years imprisonment from fourteen years to twenty years? Twenty years in prison is a long time and all I am saying is that if you are going to send someone to prison for twenty years you might as well just write that person off. That is what you are doing—writing that person off and you are making sure that you need another cell because that cell will be occupied for life. So start building another cell.

The question is, under the age of 12 years, imprisonment up to fourteen years, is already a very stiff deterrent if sentencing is to act as a deterrent. I cannot reasonably see the difference between fourteen and twenty years, if it is a deterrent. If imprisonment is a deterrent then fourteen years in prison should be as much a deterrent as twenty years. I hope that the sentence is not to just make our conscience feel good by saying, ‘we punished that bad person’ but to also preserve society and the general good. So, somehow the sentencing would have to be there.

Now, the one that I really have the problem with even more is section 132(3), “Whoever unlawfully and carnally knows any girl under the age of sixteen years is guilty of an offence and liable to im- prisonment for seven years.” That is being changed from seven years to twelve years.

The problem here, again, is that a young boy, who is sixteen years old and has a sexual relationship with his girlfriend, who is fifteen years old, would be classed as someone who unlawfully and carnally knows a girl under the age of sixteen, and would be guilty of an offence and liable to imprisonment for twelve years.

I am not sure how often these sentences have been used as they are. It would be good to look at the statistics to see exactly what is being anticipated by the government to make these amendments. Have they done their research or have they just been moved by conviction to believe that by increasing the sentence they are doing the community a favour? I would like to see some statistics. I mean private Members are not necessarily going to have access to all this and do not have the manpower to do so. Certainly the Government, if it is agreeing to something, should at least, show us that agreement is based upon empirical reasoning rather than on some type of ill-conceived idea about how people feel about some of these issues.

I think that we live in a society where sexuality is real. We are dealing with sexual offences here and I am only saying that we can achieve what we want to achieve. This is not dealing with rape. It is not dealing with someone who unlawfully and wilfully has sexual contact with someone against his will. There is in this the notion that there is an agreement. So, if the 16 year old boy has sexual contact—or attempts to even have sexual contact—with the fifteen year old girl, her parents will have to deal with that situation if they do not like this boy. If he comes from the wrong side of the track, what happens? Are we going to wait for her to go before the judge? Are we now going to put our responsibilities to the judges and say, ‘judges decide’?

Well, there are a lot of people who have serious apprehensions about the decisions that are made in the courts. They question them all the time. There are people who believe that there is justice for one group but not for another group. I cannot be a judge but I am a legislator. I want to make sure that in legislating I do as much as I can to make sure that by the time the laws impact the people whom I represent it will do as little damage and as much good as possible.

Mr. Speaker, crime and punishment are two important concepts that help to keep the community together. Those who are not victims of these types of crimes want to know that if they were, the perpetrators would be punished. We would experience a certain amount of satisfaction with the knowledge that the person was punished.

Mr. Speaker, in biblical times, people would pick up rocks and they would all be involved in the criminal justice system. They would be the judge, the jury, and the executioner. They would all cast stones and they would feel better that the community would be safer.

Today, we need to be thinking more about the victims. We do not think about the victims and we do not necessarily help them by casting the stone against the perpetrator to the point where the perpetrator becomes incapable of assisting us in restoring some type of justice or benefit to the victim. I say we should think about that. Maybe that could be possible because if someone did something to me and you are the State putting that person in Northward, I would not hear from that person again and that person would not be able to harm anyone else. You are really locking that person up. The assumption is that if that person is incarcerated, he would be unable to harm anyone else.

What I am saying is that the State is still partly charged with rehabilitation. The State is going to have to incarcerate and pay for those people, which means as the victim, I have to pay to incarcerate the person who victimised me. I do not get anything from it but higher taxes. The perpetrator pays his fine to the State, but the victim does not get any of the money. If that person was charged $2,000, the victim does not receive any material benefit.

Therefore, it is time that we begin to understand that incarceration is not always good for the State; the victim or the society as a whole. We need to somehow move away from this. I will be calling for us to vote on each of these resolutions separately since I believe that from a point of reason they should stand alone and should pass or fail alone.

Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: Would this be a convenient time to take the break, or would you prefer to continue until lunch? I am in your hands.

Hon. W. McKeever Bush: I am ready to speak for a few minutes, Sir.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for the Ministry of Tourism, Environment and Transport.

Hon. W. McKeever Bush: I do not intend to be long because I believe the Mover, my colleague the Third Elected Member for West Bay, did a fair job in explaining the position.

I guess all kinds of arguments could be made regarding the terms people spend for various crimes. I guess legal people could make all kinds of cases. I am sure that sociologists are just as keen to make their case. As elected representatives, I pay attention to what the law states and I look at how the country is presently made up. I believe it is time that we put stiffer penalties on the atrocious crimes committed against children and incest.

There is no reason anyone should be sexually abusing a person, be it female or male. The Third Elected Member for George Town gave various reasons we should not increase the penalties on these sexual abuses. First, he said it did not help the victim by casting a stone on the perpetrator, and then he said that the state still has to pay because the person is incarcerated for such a long time. What do you do? In a country that is supposed to be educated and enlightened, do you just leave them alone? Can they rape a two-year-old, or a ten-year-old child and we just give them seven years? During that time, the child's life has been destroyed.

No, we cannot undo what has been done, but I believe that a person must pay and the punishment should fit the crime. Some of the atrocities that have come to public knowledge—and there are many that have not—and many cases the police did not have knowledge of because they went to social services but we cannot leave these deviants, mad people, anything bad we can use to describe them, because they should know better. I am not going to have it said that I condone it, and could pacify the situation by making excuses about casting stones or the state paying. This is one time I believe that what we are asking for in a motion fits the crime. Far too many small children have been molested, lives ruined and we have just slapped them on the wrists. Do not talk about 12, 13, or 14 years imprisonment as good enough for a man who knowingly sexually abuses another one or his own child.

Are we saying that we live in an enlightened world, and an educated Cayman Islands which would allow it? What kind of education would that be? What kind of enlightenment would that be?

I held the responsibility for many years for Social Services. I have been elected to this House now to serve my fifth term and you, Sir, have served 20 years. I know you have seen as much as I have, probably more. I said a long time ago that they should institute the cat-o'-nine-tails. That will be the first lesson. Flog them and flog them well. If that is living in the dark ages, let it be the dark ages. I know one thing: after you put a good thrashing on him he will remember it while he is serving his sentence. It will serve notice in this country that while we have to abide by laws pushed on us by the UK, and that we are so liberal that they can get away with these things it will serve notice that the government means business. The only thing I see wrong with this, is that we are not instituting the cat-o'-nine-tails. I dare say that if you go throughout the length and breadth of this country you would find several Caymanians to do the job!

I have no problem in supporting this Motion as is, except for the change the Honourable Attorney General suggested in the second resolve, where we change the age of 16 to 13. I feel it is my duty as a responsible legislator to institute methods in this country that should be a deterrent. If it works out not to be a deterrent, then at least we tried to do our part.

I am confident that what we are asking for here can and will work as a deterrent. Yes, there is much more work to be done when it comes to social development. Our laws must have teeth. A mere slap on the wrist of seven years is not good enough, especially when we consider that persons incarcerated do not serve full time any more.

It cannot be that any legislator, no matter what his beliefs and philosophies are, would say we are on the wrong track, outside of trying to be on both sides. In my 20 years in this House, my fifth term now, that is the hardest thing in the world to do, straddle the fence. That is why I have never attempted to do it—I am too big a man, both physically and otherwise! I stand by what I say and by what I mean to say. There is no hemming and hawing about where I stand.

The only thing I see wrong with this is that we should amend it to say we institute the cat-of-nine-tails.

The Speaker: Shall we continue until lunch?

We shall suspend proceedings for 15 minutes.

PROCEEDINGS SUSPENDED AT 11.59 PM

PROCEEDINGS RESUMED AT 12.22 PM

The Speaker: Please be seated.

Private Member's Motion No. 16/2001, Amendment to the Penal Code (1995 Revision), Continuation of debate thereon.

The Second Elected Member for West Bay.

Mr. Rolston M. Anglin: I rise to give my support to this Motion. This Motion deals with a very relevant and important aspect of life not only in these Islands, but indeed the world. If we are afraid to talk about sex, then we are afraid to talk about life.

I listened carefully to the contribution thus far, and would like to commend the Third Elected Member for West Bay for bringing this Motion to this Honourable House. As with anything, once you have a good spin-doctor you can make an argument against it. I am not here to do that, I am here to represent my constituents and the reality of life. The problem with intellectual arguing is that very often nothing gets done, no formidable solutions come forward and life remains just as it was.

I would first like to clarify that the Third Elected Member for George Town said that as far as he knew, the Private Member's Motion was an incest motion and suddenly he saw things creeping in to deal with defilement in the committee stage amendment to the government bill, and somehow implied that these amendments were the workings of the government. Well, for his knowledge, and indeed everyone's knowledge, the committee stage amendments before us were made only because the Honourable Second Official Member saw our motion and decided to incorporate them at this stage to avoid duplicating the debate.

What is in the committee stage amendments to the Government Bill is a mere reflection of what we had in our Private Member's Motion, the one I seconded. So, if you want to cast stones, it came from the Private Members who moved (the Third Elected Member for West Bay) and seconded (that is, me, the Second Elected Member for West Bay.) it.

I would also like to clearly state for the record that there are maximum sentences now available to the courts. I kept hearing talk of the maximums that can lead the public astray if they are not thinking about this carefully. These are new limits available to the judiciary, and does not mean, as was implied, that a 14 or 16-year-old boy would necessarily be sentenced to the maximum.

The Third Elected Member for George Town also brought up another point regarding double standards in our laws, implying that although the Motion sought to increase the sentence from seven to 12 years for defilement of a girl between the ages of 12 and 16, an adult he would be treated one way, and a teenager another way. Well, the last time I checked, that is exactly how our justice system works; minors are treated very differently from adults in a lot of instances. If that is what he seeks to change, then let him bring a motion. I apologise to no one for the double standards in our judicial system. I think you will find these double standards in many judicial systems because there is logic behind adults being treated differently from minors, or those mentally incompetent.

We debate motions, so when we do not speak directly to the issue and just say what we have to say the air gets a tad cloudy. All I can say is that as is, I support this Motion.

I also know that there could be potential problems down the road in terms of the sentencing options contained in this Motion. There is an ongoing debate in the community as to what life imprisonment means in the Cayman Islands. Once that debate gets resolved, some of the sentencing in this Motion may then be inappropriate. The way I see life, is that when those changes are made we then make the appropriate changes elsewhere in the legislation. I am simply dealing with the current situation this Motion deals with—the reality. Let us, as legislators, stick with the reality of the situation.

Mention was also made of the fact that longer sentences do not necessarily prevent crime. I think that is common sense. Certainly, the Members moving this Motion did not see this as a form of penicillin. However, when we reviewed sections of the Penal Code and had discussions with our constituents we were of the view that the sentences were inappropriate, hence the Motion.

I may be new here, but I am here to do a job. I might be a Backbench Member, but I am not here to simply critique. I am here to try to get results as well. All this Motion seeks to do is give more latitude to the judicial system.

I would like to publicly congratulate Mrs. Tania Nelson for her thesis on Restorative Justice. I think contained therein are many good ideas that have been incorporated in other jurisdictions that could help us in terms of crafting what our criminal justice system will look like.

The first resolve of the Motion before us to do with section 132(3) of the Penal Code, and that currently states: 'Whoever unlawfully and carnally knows any girl under the age of sixteen years is guilty of an offence and liable to imprisonment for seven years.' Section 132 (1) of the Penal Code, where it states if a girl under the age of 12 was defiled, the maximum available term is 14 years. Other sections of the Penal Code, section 125 dealing with rape, have some relation. Defilement or statutory rape is having unlawful sexual relations with an individual who does not have consenting capacity. I make no apologies for calling for stiffer penalties for paedophiles, people who seek out females in our community who are young, easily influenced, or led astray or easy prey.

We have had this in our community for many years. We will always have criminal activity present on earth. It is a part of humanity and our society that will always be there. We recognise that there also needs to be greater emphasis on proper rehabilitation to be part and parcel and the Third Elected Member for West Bay and I are not absconding on that level of responsibility. We do not believe in giving up on lives, however, we also have had concerns expressed to us making us ponder and contemplate.

When I go to Northward Prison and see the state of the facilities and lack of order, a system that looks nothing like what we expect as our norm, then we have a real issue on our hands. If we are going to ask people after they have been incarcerated to readjust into "normal" society, then the facility we imprison them in should mirror normal society. They should have to get up, go to work, and come home, all within the confines of the prison. We also accept that lesser risk prisoners could be allowed outside prison.

When we look at the destruction that mainly preying male adults have on the lives of young girls in this country, and yes the young girls are very mature, but let us face it, we have had incest and sexual predators here for many years. There are individuals ever present, and continually preying on the young girls in this community. Yes, I am calling on the rest of my colleagues in this Legislative Assembly to vote along with us in terms of stiffer penalties. When the time comes, we must look at the entire criminal justice system and find ways in which to become more successful in rehabilitating those who offend the laws set by society.

However, when we see inappropriate sentencing options given the nature of the crime and let us face it, this is a sick crime when a male adult takes advantage of a young girl and removes all sensibility of what is right and wrong in terms of her sexuality. We cannot sit idly by.

When people are imprisoned, and I think my constituents understand that with everything there is a price. So, yes, we have a Penal Code and various laws that call for various forms of punishment. One punishment we have accepted as a community is imprisoning people. When we do that, we have to pay for their upkeep. Until I am convinced by having it put before me in a better way of how to deal with the situation, then that will continue to hold true.

We can have lower sentencing or say forget about prisons because they cost too much. That is a real option. After all, we live in a democracy. That would be the choice we could make. I am of the opinion that that would be inappropriate. I think I can safely say the citizens of the Cayman Islands would not find that to be a palatable solution at this point in time.

Mr. Speaker, a few colleagues have motioned me—

The Speaker: If this is a convenient time for you we shall take the luncheon break. We shall return at 2.15.

PROCEEDINGS SUSPENDED AT 12.45 PM

PROCEEDINGS RESUMED AT 2.48 PM

The Speaker: Please be seated.

Continuation of debate on Private Member's Motion No. 16/2001, Amendment to the Penal Code (1995 Revision).

The Second Elected Member for West Bay continuing.

Mr. Rolston M. Anglin: Thank you.

I would like to continue my debate on Private Member's Motion No. 16/2001, where certain changes to the Penal Code are being sought, namely, a restructuring and increase in the sentencing available to the judiciary in regard to statutory rape or defilement, an increase in regard to incest, and an increase in the sentencing available to persons having sexual relations with what are known as imbeciles or idiots as defined in the Penal Code (1995 Revision).

I would like to turn to an editorial in the Caymanian Compass of 27 March 2001. I crave your indulgence to read a portion of that editorial.

The Speaker: Sure.

Mr. Rolston M. Anglin: I quote: "Cayman's laws should be revised to make sure that children, both boys and girls, are adequately protected from pedophiles of either gender which would protect anyone against sexual predators, especially in situations where the predator is in a position of power or influence, such as in family situations, employer/employee, teacher/student, and similar relationships. There are such predators in any population group, and Cayman would be deluded to assume that such things do not happen in these islands. They always have, and it is the duty of the community and the law to provide as much protection as possible to potential victims."

As I eluded earlier, this is an important issue from the petition carried out against incest in particular, from the editorials in the Caymanian Compass, speaking to constituents, and having constituents come up to me after this Motion was made public in our previous sitting (because this Motion is being brought back along with some ten motions agreed by Government at the previous meeting) to laud our effort. However, a lot of other pertinent points need to be borne in mind as laid out by previous speakers.

The increase in the available sentence to a judge is not penicillin. Indeed, when we speak of these crimes, we have to be truthful with ourselves first and foremost. We must recognize that when it comes to such an offence being brought to the courts, at that point in time there is a lot of damage done to a particular young person's life. Therefore, there are a lot of repairs and amends that need to be made. I am advocating not only counseling for the victim but also for the perpetrators of such act. We know, once we are being truthful with ourselves, these crimes have always gone on within our society. We must be sure to try to help every citizen lead more productive lives. That is the duty of all of us when we seek to make Cayman a better place to live.

I would also like to add that there are those in our community who liken incest to murder. They feel as though the act of incest is so heinous that you take the child and rob her of something so precious, a sacred trust is broken. Some say it is analogous to killing the child.

We also know that in our community incest is not the only issue. There are also significantly older males who seek out young girls below the age of 16 simply to have sex with them, simply for their own pleasure. That is a fact of life in these islands. None of us would argue otherwise, I would dare say.

We have young women being robbed of something that they will never get back. Their lives are changed and altered in ways that as they mature they recognize the seriousness of the act. Most persons under the age of 16 do not truly appreciate the seriousness.

When debating the defilement and incest sections of this Motion in a small community, a person's self esteem, name in the community, decision to marry and start a family, the future lives of the young victims we are talking about can have a tremendous negative impact.

Section 133, deals with an act with imbeciles or idiots, this act is so sick in my view. I think the collective consciousness of our community is shocked when we hear of persons who take advantage sexually of such persons.

I will be glad when I see solid proposals coming forward for alternative sentencing, comprehensive proposals in regard to a restorative justice system so that we can address a lot of these matters on different levels, levels that the community can look at and say 'this is more meaningful, more wholesome, more holistic, this is where we are trying to get to.'

However, I will not apologise for this Motion to anyone. This Motion contains what I think is the consciousness of many citizens in this community. In ending, I urge all Honourable Members to stand united; let us stand against pedophiles, sexual exploitation of young persons in our community, in particular young girls and let us look within ourselves to support Private Member's Motion No. 16/01. Thank you.

The Speaker: The Second Elected Member for Bodden Town.

Mr. Gilbert A. McLean: I rise to offer my views on Private Member's Motion No. 16/01, Amendments to the Penal Code.

Various views have been put forward on this matter by Members speaking before me and I think the one point that needs to be focused on is the fact, as pointed out by the Honourable Second Official Member, that we are talking about offences against morality in the Penal Code.

Morality is characterised by conventional virtues, decency, that which is trustworthy and so on. We also need to take into account that in every society in the world this type of action occurs. In more primitive societies we might say, these are not necessarily looked on as offences and in fact are accepted as the norms of society.

As noted by the Second Elected Member for West Bay, this Motion deals with the matter of sex. If we can not talk about that, then we will have a problem talking about this Motion. I wish to define it further by saying sex in circumstances looked upon in our society and in the Penal Code as offences. The sections dealt with in this Motion relate to sex with a girl less than 16 years, blood family members, or with someone who is an imbecile or an idiot. For those two words, I would just like to say that I do not claim to be a lawyer, but perhaps there could be kinder words or phrases found to describe persons in our society who have limited intelligence. I know in day-to-day living we will refer to someone not having much sense as 'fool-fool' or any of those good colloquial terms, but we do not necessarily say 'Hey, you idiot.'

No matter how hard we try, I do not believe that these occurrences will come to an end in this society because these are human tendencies motivated by feeling of sexuality placed by nature in the male and female. They also occur when persons do not adhere to what is considered good conduct. Some people do not have the control to not commit these offences, and some just do not care and think they have the right to do it whether there is a law against it or not.

Under one section in this Motion, that speaking to defilement under girls 16 years of age, I have a concern in that the way it is sated in section 132(1) it says, "Whoever unlawfully and carnally knows any girl under the age of twelve years is guilty of an offence and liable to imprisonment for fourteen years ...."

Section 132 (3) says, "Whoever unlawfully and carnally knows any girl under the age of sixteen years is guilty of an offence and liable to imprisonment for seven years."

It hardly needs saying that a girl, a child of twelve years or under, is just that—a child. While bodily functions may have developed to a point where the girl may be growing into all of the areas of womanhood, she is definitely of an age where her mind has not reached the level of her biological growth. There are numerous cases in the world where young girls subjected to sex offences at that age are scarred for life, damaged in every sense of the word and I believe all of us in this House understand this and stand diametrically opposed to it.

How much the increase of penalties will hinder a person who is prone to do such a thing, I cannot simply offer an opinion. Where there might be an intention, I think the fear of penalties certainly keeps people in line. Generally speaking, I do not know how much it will mean to somebody who might do such an act if the term is 14 years or 20 years. If the longer term would have some effect of a deterrent, then by all means, we should increase it. I have no problem supporting the recommendation of an increase. The point I am making is that I do not know if a longer penalty will stop it. I think that the only way to stop it would be to bring people of that mentality to a stage where they recognise the repugnance of it.

One thing this does open up is that we can have a situation of a 15 year old boy and girl committing a sexual act and it appears to me that the 15 year old boy would be open to the liability of this higher penalty. At that age the biological functions of young people are at their zenith. The pursuit of love and happiness of 15 year olds and the sexual scenes constantly shown on television, make it more difficult for younger people to resist these physical temptations.

The recommendation is to change the seven years to 12 years in the instance of defilement. Again, I think that we ought to take into consideration that this law says "whoever", it does not say "an old man" doing this, or a 25 year old or a 30 year old, it says "whoever." That is something that one might wish to look at in this particular law.

The other section of the law that is mentioned in this motion is section 144(1), which reads, "Any male person who has carnal knowledge of a female person who is, to his knowledge, his granddaughter, daughter, sister or mother is guilty of an offence and liable to imprisonment for five years."

If ever I heard a unanimous outcry in Cayman in recent years, it was about one year ago when there was a case of a young girl, I think eight years old, who had an act of incest committed on her by her father. At that time I think that if the public were to have had access to the offender, (who was ultimately convicted and sentenced), they would have taken justice into their own hands. It was particularly offensive because the child was so very young. However, beyond that, the offence of sex between blood relatives, as cited in this section, is an offence that is frowned upon by society.

We now have greater knowledge and understanding of genetics, and if we were to only take that side of things, sexual intercourse between blood relatives can have serious effects on children from those acts. Incest is a heinous but not a new crime that occurs for different reasons. I understand some departments of government have knowledge of this happening, and that it does not necessarily reach the police; it is dealt with via Social Services. I do not know whether or not Social Services have to report it. I am not trying to state specifically what occurs, but I have heard and I understand there are instances not prosecuted by the police because they are not brought to their attention.

The likelihood of that situation is greater all the time because of drugs in our society. Families (not necessarily wife and husband, it could be a man and woman living together with their children) with minds made foggy from the use of drugs go into living quarters that are cramped and so on, where children are exposed to situations between adults that they should not be exposed to; those are realities of our society here. We can pretend that they are not, but they are.

Some people for various reasons believe they are so liberated that they do not take such exception to incest. My first knowledge of things that would amount to incest was when I heard my grandmother talk about it, and what was said in the Bible. For example, if we look in Leviticus 18:6-18, it is recommended therein that the person should surely be put to death. The penalty brought out in Leviticus 20:11-21 is death. We are speaking of making the penalty life, which is the present equivalent of death, removed from our laws. Perhaps it is right that where this occurs with the very young, that should be.

I would like to refer again to the Bible. In Genesis 19 when Lot left the land of Sodom and Gomorrah and went up to Zoar where he and his two daughters dwelt in the mountain, Verse 31 says, "And the firstborn said to the younger 'our father is old, and there is not a man on the earth to come in unto us after the manner of all the earth. Come, let us make our father drink wine and we will lie with him that we may preserve seed of our father.' And they made their father drink wine that night, and the firstborn went in and lay with her father and he perceived not when she lay down or when she arose."

It goes on to verse 37, where in each instance the daughters deliberately and knowingly had a sexual act with their father because they believed it was the way of preserving the family. That was the first case I ever heard about, and it is recorded in the Bible. We know from Bible times this happened, and the reason they gave was to ensure continuation of the family. They went to the point, which is no different now in cases where persons get young persons in a state of inebriation and they do these things.

Normally the law does not prescribe that one should go see a psychiatrist. To the best of my knowledge, that is done by a judge depending on the case and whether or not the law permits. The law provides for penalties and among the modern concepts in law is the idea that rather than incarcerate, persons can be ordered to make restitution by other means, commit themselves to an institution as the case may be. Generally, it is through incarceration. Currently, there is no other punishment available except incarceration or imprisonment. Does it change the person who committed the act? It certainly leaves a victim, and where this occurs, the best we can do is hope that the person can live through it and out of it. There is really no way of knowing. I am sure that those of us who know of instances where incest has occurred, the people have not developed stable adult lives.

I think that alongside penalties it is necessary for us to create awareness through education, through talking about these things, through civic groups and associations, PTAs, et cetera, these aspects of the law and why people should refrain from them. There are many reasons nowadays. I think there needs to be some degree of protection, particularly for the young in our society. Within the family there is a duty of mother, father and siblings to understand that they must hold themselves in a responsible manner.

There is a need for a development of what we have lost a lot of—respect for persons. There needs to be a considerable amount of vigilance by teachers, the public at large, the churches, neighbours, social services, all areas that might identify persons who appear to be having difficulties probably due to something damaging in their lives which, of course, if it is incest, is also against the law.

The last point in this Motion is in regard to sex with an imbecile. Again, I think it is a very sick person, a very lame person, a person who does not have much respect themselves or society. However, it does happen, and there are instances in our society as well.

I can support the increased penalties in this law that the Motion is asking for, but do not think we can believe that we have solved the problems of these occurrences simply by adding ten more years or 20 more years, or even life. When someone is spending a lifetime sentence, someone else is waiting out there to do these things. It comes to instilling of values, of respect in individuals towards other individuals in every way we possibly can. Having given my views, I support the Motion.

The Speaker: The Second Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. Alden M. McLaughlin, Jr.: I rise to offer a few words in relation to this Motion. A number of perspectives have been put forward by Members on this side of the House. We have heard the sociologist, fundamentalist, religious and perhaps some other categories of perspective offered. I felt I should say a few words in general, which relates to the purpose of sentencing; the situation in relation to sex offenders, and the matter mentioned by the Second Elected Member for Bodden Town, in relation to how the section of the Penal Code that deals with defilement can, I believe, in its current form adversely impact the lives of young people in situations where the boy and girl are of similar age and maturity. However, the section makes criminal the conduct of the male when these two young people who are perhaps boyfriend and girlfriend are discovered to have had sexual relations.

First, to deal with that last point, I should say that I am not for one moment seeking to advocate premarital sexual relations, or sexual relations between very young boys and girls. However, there are certain realities that have been around since time began. The Second Elected Member for Bodden Town referred to these physical drives. We must accept that these things have happened, and are going to happen. We must ask ourselves whether it is morally right, whether it is fair to criminalise the conduct of a young boy, making him guilty of a criminal offence, have it on his record through the early years of his adult life when in fact the young girl with whom he had the relations, with whom he carried on the conduct which is criminal, agreed with him to carry on this conduct. She is free from any culpability, and that cannot be right.

While the Motion and the Government Bill do not seek to address this aspect of section 132, I bring it to the attention of the Second Official Member and to all Members of this House that we give consideration to this when coming to amend this provision.

I will deal briefly with the issue of sentencing and sentencing policy. Sentencing should have a number of effects. It should reflect the gravity of the offence which has been committed; it should serve as a deterrent to others who may be tempted to commit the offence; and whether we wish to accept this or not, it is meant to reflect the outrage of the community and to affect some form of retribution. Whatever we may think we are, this evolved species called humanity, there is something deep within the breast of most, if not all of us, that requires that when something bad is done to one of us, whoever perpetrated that evil deed must be made to pay; that is the way we feel. There are few, if any among us, who at some point have not felt this kind of distasteful passion, this almost blood lust. That is the way the human creature is made.

The Second Elected Member for Bodden Town referred to the terrible case of incest between a father and a very young daughter. As he quite rightly pointed out, I do not believe I have ever felt such a degree of moral outrage in this community. It is that kind of a situation where we hear all members of this community crying out that ten years spent in jail is not enough. We feel that we must do something to this individual who has preyed upon his own flesh.

So, while I share the views of the Third Elected Member for George Town and the Second Elected Member for Bodden Town, about whether or not increasing the sentence is going to have any deterrent effect at all, I believe that sentencing must reflect those views of this society that feels that outrageous conduct, such as the case I just referred to, must be subject to harsh punishment. Since the only means we have of punishing these individuals is incarceration, that that incarceration needs to be of substantial length.

Other jurisdictions have registers of sex offenders so that when a sex offender has been convicted before the courts, his name is published and everyone knows the gravity of the offence of which he is being convicted, the object being they can then guard themselves and their young children from this sort of predator.

In this jurisdiction that is difficult to operate. Almost inevitably, to disclose the name of the sex offender in this small community would mean also disclosing the name and identity of the victim. In the most serious of these cases, word tends to spread like wildfire, to create this sort of system. I believe that while it might prevent these predators from preying on other young people, we have to balance that against the deleterious effect that disclosure of their identity will have on young people whose lives have already been tragically impacted by what has happened to them. I believe we should give thought to this system to see if there is some way we can resolve that dilemma and at the same time prevent predators from repeating their awful acts within this community.

I can close by saying that in general terms I support the objective of the Motion. I hope we can arrive at a situation that addresses the concerns that I and other Honourable Members of the Backbench have outlined about these provisions and that the Second Official Member will respond to our concerns when he speaks. Thank you.

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman.

Mrs. Julianna Y. O'Connor-Connolly: I rise to give my brief contribution to the Motion before us dealing with amendments to the Penal Code (1995 Revision).

I would first like to put into perspective the various proposed amendments and the significance thereof.

I would characterise the proposed amendments into three main categories: first, section 132 (3) dealing with the defilement of girls. That then goes into two subcategories being under age 16 and over age 16. Secondly, section 144(1), which deals with incest by males. My good friend took the point of females being left out, that too goes into categories of under and over 16 (taken against the background of the committee stage of the bill). Third, section 133(3) dealing with the defilement of idiots and imbeciles. This does not go into a division of categories but deals with all ages in that particular category.

If we look at the current law dealing with 132(2) & (3) we will see that it states, "Whoever unlawfully and carnally [those being the operative words] knows any girl under the age of sixteen years is guilty of an offence and liable to imprisonment for seven years." If my understanding is correct, these amendments propose to raise it for age 12 to 16 to 12 years, an increase of five years.

In section 132(1), as the law currently exists it reads, "Whoever unlawfully and carnally knows any girl under the age of twelve years is guilty of an offence and liable to imprisonment for fourteen years." The proposal is to take that to 20 years, an increase of some six years.

If we turn our attention to the section dealing with incest by males, section 144(1), it states, "Any male person who has carnal knowledge of a female person who is, to his knowledge, his granddaughter, daughter, sister or mother is guilty of an offence and liable to imprisonment for five years." The proposed amendment seeks to take this to life for those under 16, and for those over 16 to 20 years, both significant increases.

We are all cognisant of the fact that carnal knowledge is that knowledge which includes sexual intercourse, and incest is sexual intercourse between persons who are closely related in accordance with the law.

The last resolve of motion 16/01 dealing with defilement of idiots or imbeciles, section 133 says, "Whoever knowing a woman or girl to be an idiot or imbecile (and I would hope this would go for boys as well), has or attempts to have carnal knowledge of her under circumstances not amounting to rape (which we see a definition set out in section 125 of the Penal Code and the penalty in section 126), "but which prove that the offender knew at the time of the commission of the offence that the woman or girl was in idiot or imbecile is guilty of an offence and liable to imprisonment for two years." I am happy to see that the proposal will now increase that by some eight years to an aggregate term of maximum imprisonment of ten years.

If we briefly look at sections 125 and 126 to get a perspective of the terms "carnal knowledge" and look at the root sexual offence, being rape, we would see that the definition of rape in our Penal Code says, “Whoever has unlawful carnal knowledge of a woman or girl without her consent or with her acquiescence if such acquiescence is obtained by threat or force or use of force by means of threats or intimidation of any kind; or by fear of bodily harm, or by means of false representation as to the nature of the act, or in the case of a married woman, by impersonating her husband, is guilty of an offence of rape.” And in section 126 it carries the punishment of life imprisonment.

We see these three categories are but deviations of what I term the mother of the sexual offences. Therefore, it is no simple matter that the sentences are much less. However, I would say that I appreciate and to a large extent agree with the sociological and perhaps psychological input that was offered by the Third Elected Member for George Town. As I will attempt to show, although I am of the view that sentences should be a deterrent, we must not forget the important fabric of the social process if at all we hope to achieve what we set out to do in these sentences.

It is my view that the proposed amendments to the Penal Code will provide a substantial improvement by way of increasing the term of imprisonment if by increasing these sentences as proposed if that in itself would act as a deterrent and if the end result would be that the prospective offenders would stop it and also the end result would be that we would irradiate this awful category of offences from our society. However, we all know that would be looking for a utopia.

With these amendments one would hope that in the future the likelihood of these offences would be decreased. We live in the real world and to take such a simplistic view would not be in the best interests of what we are trying to achieve here today. I believe the traditional attitude is that crime is essentially a moral wrong. From the evidence given from the Bible by my good friend the Second Elected Member for Bodden Town, he integrated this into his submission.

Although we have moved into an era where it seems not GQ (if I can use such terminology to refer to morality) and being in the House at the same time I respectfully submit that if we go back to that same good Book we will see that not only were these set out as offences, but indeed appropriate and oft time reasonable sentences and punishment was so associated. I can say that the amendments coming here today do not come near to what was set out in the Old Testament and parts of the New Testament.

Suffice to say, these proposed amendments, when approved, will set the maximum penalty. Therefore, there is built in an inherent discretion for the judges to base on the various circumstances (except for the category of under 16 which will give life as in the case of rape) to look at the circumstantial and direct evidence to ensure that justice is carried out and that it appears to the public at large to be carried out in particular to these sexual offences.

We are not here today proposing minimum offences, but we are allowing judges who are appointed through His Excellency the Governor to use their experience and knowledge and collate from around the Commonwealth and elsewhere ensuring that our community here in the Cayman Islands is protected. We also allow them to integrate such intelligence that perhaps may not be privy to us at the time of making legislation, hence the reason I can support that discretion as being put in, as is traditionally the case to do.

Where there is a statutory maximum it is normally reserved for the worse case scenario. Therefore, the judge has a range of options within that maximum sentence. Most feel that the punishment must be equal to the sentence. Others are often content to rely on the concept that the suffering should follow a wrongdoing. In other words, they must serve time for the crime. I am of the view that the ultimate justification of any punishment is not a deterrent, but indeed the emphatic denunciation of the community for the crime.

Many feel that severe sentences are used to mark public revolutions. That is, for the law to be effective, the citizens must feel that the law is protecting them from criminals in our society. I feel these proposed amendments are attempting to satisfy by a sufficient punishment and to reflect the public's desire for vengeance against the wrongdoer. There has been reference to recent offences in this category and the large public outcry. Rightly so, I believe that victims of these heinous sexual offences should feel justified and that the perpetrator does not go free and there is some restriction on his or her liberty. We must look at the whole picture ensuring that while they are incarcerated there are appropriate reform courses or programmes in place at Northward, or elsewhere, so that when they come out they will not face a vicious cycle and be back through the revolving door at Her Majesty's prison.

We cannot therefore then deny that the social process is an important element in criminal law which reinforces and upholds the moral sentiments of the community that favours the promotion of virtue here in the Cayman Islands and discourages the pursuit of evil-doing.

I believe that not only should sentences be a deterrent but the question could also be posed as to how any such sentence could have the effect of reforming the sexual offender. It is my view that although reform is very essential, very significant, and important, I however believe that if there is a conflict between reform and punishment, that punishment must prevail and at the same time be reasonable and fit the crime. It cannot be done as a matter of ad hoc and just for any type of political reasons at all.

I believe that when we look at the offence of incest, it does not in any way depend upon the deficiency—and I so term it because when you need to depend on the consent of a woman for such a heinous crime, that, in my view, is a deficiency in the law. With incest, consent is not required. The offence of incest is sexual intercourse between persons within a specified degree of sanguinity.

Not only does incest present a dilemma of being morally wrong, there is also a practical reason why incest should not be tolerated in any form or fashion. Just taking a quick look back in our own Caymanian history, we can see that when there is sexual intercourse between relatives too close, as set out in 144(1), there is an inherent genetic risk and if there is an offspring, traditionally referred to as retarded or deformed persons, they suffer for their entire lives because of this incestuous relationship.

It has been proved in most of our six districts that such sexual intercourse between close family members causes social problems. Although incarceration is not the total answer, I believe the proviso must be put in place, as the Third Elected Member for George Town said, that we must come to grips with these crimes to see how else we can augment what we want to achieve by programmes within the prison.

I would also like to go on record as thanking the Cayman Islands Ministers Association and the many other members of the various churches who take their time day after day, year after year, going into the prison with the hopes of getting to the root of the problem, which I submit is a heart problem. No matter how much money government spends, whether this one or one in the future, unless there is a fundamental change of the perpetrator's heart we will be spinning our wheels. Nonetheless, we can not just throw our hands up and take a passive approach and do nothing. We can support this process by lending our support to the support groups in our community and also do as governments have in the past by giving these organisations sufficient financing so this can be achieved. It is much better to get them at the time they are incarcerated when there is optimism for remorse. Perhaps we can better sit with them as a captive audience and listen to them, talk to them on a one-to-one basis and hope to point them in the right direction.

Although there is great outcry from a personal perspective as well as a community perspective, the perpetrator is also some mother's child. I do not believe we should write off any individual, but must constantly assess the situation and see what can be done to prevent a reoccurrence in the future. If the powers to be feel that increasing it to much longer sentencing is the only way to do it, I could not in good conscience support these amendments. However, I believe I am safe in saying (from what I have heard so far) that this is an attempt to move a mode of deterrent, to send a signal to the community that we will not tolerate this. However, they are prepared to look at the social process to create a better community within the Cayman Islands.

I believe that although the sentences do not necessarily prevent nor decrease the occurrence of these sexual offences, at least we know for X amount of years the offender will be at Northward Prison and from a very technical standpoint will not be a risk to the victim and/or family. Hopefully he will also have time for reflection with a view of changing his behaviour with the aid of others within the prison as well as the community as a whole.

The increase of the penalty is but one piece of the very necessary puzzle. Nonetheless, I am of the view that it is a very important part of the puzzle. No, it is not an absolute solution because the moral element must be married to the social element if we are going to find a solution to this problem.

I also believe that regardless of what the community might now be saying, the only real solution is absolutely true repentance and godly sorrow. Although society seems to be running from that aspect, it has been proven by many secular organisations that when this is applied, we can truly see a transformation not only of sexual offenders, but of other offenders within our community. We can not only punish them, but reform them to be good law abiding citizens within society.

I do not believe that they should attach themselves to religion merely for sympathy, but it must be a genuine and fundamental transformation within the individual if we are to see change.

With those words, I thank the Movers for being so bold so as to deal with this, and ask them to keep an open mind in solving the dilemma of these hideous crimes. I also appreciate that there would be other social and moral ramifications to help complete the whole picture.

The Speaker: Does any other Member wish to speak? Does any other Member wish to speak? Last call.

If not, does the Mover wish to exercise his right of reply? The Third Elected Member for West Bay.

Capt. A. Eugene Ebanks: Thank you.

Before I get too far into my winding up, I made a few notes of what the Third Elected Member for George Town said as far as imprisonment of these offenders, and what it would cost government to keep them there. While that is a consideration, I do not feel it is something we can put a price on when it comes to the misery and shame that the victims suffer.

What about the self-esteem of the victims, their physical and mental well being? These are values that we cannot put a price on. Also, we have to remember that these adverse effects are a result of the current perceived inadequacy of the Penal Code, not of the changes proposed by this Motion.

At this time I would like to thank my colleague, the Second Elected Member for West Bay, for seconding the Motion. I would also like to thank all Members who support it. I would hope that these amendments would help to make our Islands a safer place in which to live. I thank you, Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: Before putting the question on Private Member's Motion No. 16/01, that in allowing wide parameter on the debate on the Motion I am quite cognizant of Standing Order 37(1) which says, "It is out of order to anticipate a Bill standing on the Order Paper by debate upon a motion dealing with the subject matter thereof." I felt that the two were so important that they be referred to. I felt it my duty to allow it.

I would also like to say it was the request of the Third Elected Member for George Town, in accordance with Standing Order 24(13) "If a motion embodies two or more separate propositions, the propositions may be proposed by the Presiding Officer as separate questions." I will agree that this be posed as three separate questions.

So, the question before the House is that Private Member's Motion No. 16/01 be passed. I shall now take the first resolve section: "Be it resolved that Government consider increasing the available term of imprisonment in the Penal Code (1995 Revision) section 132 (3) to twelve years for victims between the ages of 12 and 16, and 20 years for victims under the age of 12."

Those in favour please say Aye. Those against, No.

AYES and NOES.

The Speaker: The Ayes have it.

Mr. Cline A. Glidden Jr.: Mr. Speaker, may we have a division please?

The Speaker: Certainly.

The Clerk:

Division No. 9/01

AYES: 13

Hon. David F. Ballantyne
Hon. George A. McCarthy
Hon. D. Kurt Tibbetts
Hon. W. McKeever Bush
Hon. Edna M. Moyle
Mr. Rolston M. Anglin
Capt. A. Eugene Ebanks
Mr. Cline A. Glidden Jr.
Mr. Alden M. McLaughlin, Jr.
Mr. Gilbert A. McLean
Mr. Anthony S. Eden
Mrs. Julianna Y. O'Connor-Connolly
Mr. V. Arden McLean

NOES: 1

Dr. Frank S. McField

ABSENT: 4

Hon. James M. Ryan
Hon. Linford A. Pierson
Hon. Roy Bodden
Mr. Lyndon L. Martin

The Speaker: The result of the division 13 Ayes, 1 No. The first resolve of the Motion has passed.

AGREED BY MAJORITY: BE IT RESOLVED THAT GOVERNMENT CONSIDER INCREASING THE AVAILABLE TERM OF IMPRISONMENT IN THE PENAL CODE (1995 REVISION) SECTION 132 (3) TO TWELVE YEARS FOR VICTIMS BETWEEN THE AGES OF 12 AND 16, AND 20 YEARS FOR VICTIMS UNDER THE AGE OF 12.

The Speaker: Second Resolve: "Be it further resolved that Government consider increasing the available term of imprisonment in the Penal Code (1995 Revision) section 144 (1) to life for victims under the age of sixteen [and it is my understanding that that has been changed to thirteen, that is agreed] and twenty years over the age of sixteen."

Those in favour please say Aye. Those against, No.

AYES.

The Speaker: The Ayes have it.

Dr. Frank S. McField: Can we have a division Mr. Speaker?

The Speaker: Certainly.

The Clerk:

Division No. 10/01

AYES: 13

*Hon. David F. Ballantyne
Hon. George A. McCarthy
Hon. D. Kurt Tibbetts
Hon. W. McKeever Bush
Hon. Edna M. Moyle
Mr. Rolston M. Anglin
Capt. A. Eugene Ebanks
Mr. Cline A. Glidden Jr.
**Mr. Alden M. McLaughlin, Jr.
Dr. Frank S. McField
Mr. Gilbert A. McLean
Mr. Anthony S. Eden
Mr. V. Arden McLean

NOES: 0

ABSTENTION: 1

***Mrs. Julianna Y. O'Connor-Connolly

ABSENT: 4

Hon. James M. Ryan
Hon. Linford A. Pierson
Hon. Roy Bodden
Mr. Lyndon L. Martin

*Hon. David F. Ballantyne: Mr Speaker, on the basis that the resolve refers to life under the age of thirteen, and twenty years over the age of thirteen—Aye.

**Mr. Alden M. McLaughlin, Jr.: Mr Speaker, I wonder if the resolve section could be made clear that it is victims under the age of thirteen, and twenty years over the age of thirteen, as the Hon Second Official Member has indicated. I believe that when the question was put, it was "victims under the age of thirteen and twenty years over the age of sixteen."

The Speaker: I will correct that. If that is the wish of the House, the figures "sixteen" in both places have been changed to "thirteen."

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: Right.

**Mr. Alden M. McLaughlin, Jr.: Mr Speaker, on that basis—Aye, Sir.

***Mrs. Julianna Y. O'Connor-Connolly: Mr Speaker, because I was on official business on Friday, for clarification was there a motion made to amend this resolve?

The Speaker: That was the discussion, yes.

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: Yes.

***Mrs. Julianna Y. O'Connor-Connolly: And a vote taken on the motion?

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: Yes, we are taking it now.

(pause)

***Mrs. Julianna Y. O'Connor-Connolly: Mr. Speaker, my vote is for "sixteen," as written: it is Aye. If that is not the position, then I would vote separately. That is the only reason I am seeking clarification.

The Speaker: In the moving of the Motion and the reply by the Honourable Second Official Member, that amendment was accepted by the House.

(pause)

The Speaker: If the House wishes we can certainly put another vote on it.

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: No, I do not think so, you had already done it.

The Speaker: The result of the division is 13 Ayes, one abstention, four absent. The second resolve passes.

AGREED BY MAJORITY: BE IT RESOLVED THAT GOVERNMENT CONSIDER INCREASING THE AVAILABLE TERM OF IMPRISONMENT IN THE PENAL CODE (1995 REVISION) SECTION 144 (1) TO LIFE FOR VICTIMS UNDER THE AGE OF THIR-

TEEN AND TWENTY YEARS OVER THE AGE OF THIRTEEN.

The Speaker: Moving on the third resolve, "BE IT FURTHER RESOLVED THAT section 133 of the Penal Code be amended by increasing the maximum penalty from two years to twelve years."

Those in favour please say Aye. Those against, No.

AYES.

The Speaker: The Ayes have it.

AGREED: THIRD RESOLVE SECTION PASSED.

The Speaker: I declare that Private Member's Motion No. 16/01 Amendments to the Penal Code (1995 Revision) all three resolve sections passed. The Motion has passed.

AGREED: PRIVATE MEMBER'S MOTION NO. 16/01 AGREED BY MAJORITY.

The Speaker: Is it the wish of the House that we continue with Government Business at this time?

[interjections]

The Speaker: I will entertain a motion for the adjournment if that is the wish of the House. The Honourable Minister responsible for Community Development, Women's Affairs, Youth and Sports.

ADJOURNMENT

Hon. Edna M. Moyle: Mr. Speaker, I move the adjournment of this Honourable House until 11 am Wednesday, due to the presentation that the Minister of Education—

The Speaker: If I may, the Minister of Education asked for 11.30 am. That is what he wrote me concerning this, but whatever motion ...

The Honourable Minister responsible for Community Development, Women's Affairs, Youth and Sports?

Hon. Edna M. Moyle: Mr. Speaker, now that we have our act together, I move the adjournment of this Honourable House until 11.30 am Wednesday.

The Speaker: The question is that this Honourable House do now adjourn until 11.30 am Wednesday. Those in favour, please say Aye. Those against, No.

AYES.

The Speaker: The Ayes have it.

AT 4.30 PM THE HOUSE STOOD ADJOURNED UNTIL 11.30 AM WEDNESDAY, 27 JUNE 2001.

OFFICIAL HANSARD REPORT
WEDNESDAY
27 JUNE 2001
2.03 PM
Fifth Sitting

[Prayers read by the Honourable Minister responsible for Education, Human Resources and Culture.]

The Speaker: Please be seated.

The Honourable Minister responsible for Education, Human Resources and Culture.

Hon. Roy Boddén: I beg leave of the Chair to express and voice apologies to you and Honourable Members and the press for the late start of the Sitting. You know, Sir, I received your permission to delay proceedings until 11.30 am as a result of a youth presentation held earlier in the morning. I did not anticipate proceedings being delayed for a longer period.

The Speaker: Government Business, Bills. In accordance with Standing Order 58, I call upon the Honourable Second Official Member to move the withdrawal of the Criminal Procedure Code (Amendment) (Sentencing, Indictment and Incest, Etc.) Bill, 2001.

GOVERNMENT BUSINESS

BILLS

FIRST READINGS

THE CRIMINAL PROCEDURE CODE (AMENDMENT) (SENTENCING, INDICTMENT AND INCEST, ET CETERA.) BILL, 2001

Withdrawn

Hon. David F. Ballantyne: Thank you.

In accordance with Standing Order 58, I hereby move that The Criminal Procedure Code (Amendment) (Sentencing, Indictment and Incest, Etc.) Bill, 2001, be withdrawn as it has been replaced by an amended Bill which appears as item 2 on the second part of the Order Paper.

The Speaker: Thank you.

The question is that in accordance with Standing Order 58, The Criminal Procedure Code (Amendment) (Sentencing, Indictment and Incest, et cetera.) Bill, 2001, be withdrawn. Those in favour, please say Aye. Those against, No.

AYES.

The Speaker: The Ayes have it.

AGREED: THE CRIMINAL PROCEDURE CODE (AMENDMENT) (SENTENCING, INDICTMENT AND INCEST, ET CETERA) BILL, 2001 WITHDRAWN.

SUSPENSION OF STANDING ORDER 46(1), (2) AND (4)

The Speaker: Bills, First Reading.

I would ask for the Suspension of Standing Order 46(1), (2) and (4) to allow these Bills to be taken.

The Honourable Second Official Member.

Hon. David F. Ballantyne: I move the Suspension of Standing Order 46(1), (2) and (4) to allow procedure on these Bills, the reason being a delay in the gazettal of the Bills, as I understand it, which is being addressed. This Motion is necessary to comply with Standing Orders.

The Speaker: The question is the Suspension of Standing Order 46(1), (2) and (4) to allow procedure on these Bills. Those in favour, please say Aye. Those against, No.

AYES.

The Speaker: The Ayes have it.

AGREED: STANDING ORDER 46 (1) (2) AND (4) SUSPENDED.

The Speaker: Bills. First Readings.

THE PENAL CODE (AMENDMENT)(INCEST) BILL, 2001

The Clerk: The Penal Code (Amendment) (Incest) Bill, 2001.

The Speaker: The Bill is deemed to have been read a first time and set down for Second Reading.

THE CRIMINAL PROCEDURE CODE (AMENDMENT) BILL, 2001

The Clerk: The Criminal Procedure Code (Amendment) Bill, 2001.

The Speaker: The Bill is deemed to have been read a first time and set down for Second Reading.

THE POLICE (AMENDMENT) (INTIMATE SAMPLES) BILL, 2001

The Clerk: The Police (Amendment) (Intimate Samples) Bill, 2001.

The Speaker: The Bill is deemed to have been read a first time and set down for Second Reading.

THE COURT OF APPEAL (AMENDMENT) (PROSECUTION APPEALS) BILL, 2001
(Deferred)

The Clerk: The Court of Appeal (Amendment) (Prosecution Appeals) Bill, 2001.

The Speaker: The Honourable Second Official Member.

Hon. David F. Ballantyne: I rise to intimate and move that the Court of Appeal (Amendment) (Prosecution Appeals) Bill, 2001 not be proceeded with at this juncture. The Bill has received further consideration and is intended that provisions the Bill was designed to deal with should be modified, which may well result in a fresh Bill coming to the House. On mature reflection, it is considered inappropriate to move ahead with this Bill for that reason, and a Bill making alternative provision, probably by way of the Attorney General's reference for an opinion on a point of Law, will be brought to the House in due course.

The Speaker: Well, then, are you proposing a withdrawal or a delay to a later sitting?

Hon. David F. Ballantyne: At this juncture I would prefer to simply delay the matter with a view to withdrawing it and replacing it at a later date. It may be that it is capable of amendment. It may be that it would be better to withdraw it in its entirety; but it will not be proceeded with in its current form.

The Speaker: I shall put the question that the Court of Appeal (Amendment) (Prosecution Appeals) Bill, 2001 be deferred. Those in favour please say Aye. Those against, No.

AYES.

The Speaker: The Ayes have it.

AGREED: BILL DEFERRED TO A LATER SITTING.

THE EVIDENCE (AMENDMENT) (SPOUSES, EXPERTS, FOREIGN CONVICTIONS, ALIBIS, RIGHT TO SILENCE, ET CETERA.) BILL, 2001

The Clerk: The Evidence (Amendment) (Spouses, Experts, Foreign Convictions, Alibis, Right to Silence, et cetera.) Bill, 2001.

The Speaker: The Bill is deemed to have been read a first time and set down for Second Reading.

THE JUDICATURE (AMENDMENT) BILL, 2001

The Clerk: The Judicature (Amendment) Bill, 2001

The Speaker: The Bill is deemed to have been read a first time and set down for a second reading.

THE JUDICATURE (AMENDMENT)(COSTS) BILL, 2001

The Clerk: The Judicature (Amendment) (Costs) Bill 2001.

The Speaker: The Bill is deemed to have been read a first time and set down for Second Reading.

SECOND READINGS

THE PENAL CODE (AMENDMENT) (INCEST) BILL, 2001

The Clerk: The Penal Code (Amendment) (Incest) Bill, 2001.

The Speaker: The Honourable Second Official Member.

Hon. David F. Ballantyne: I wish to move the Second Reading of a Bill entitled The Penal Code (Amendment) (Incest) Bill, 2001.

The Speaker: Do you wish to speak to it?

Hon. David F. Ballantyne: Thank you.

The Penal Code (Amendment) (Incest) Bill, 2001, as the memorandum of objects and reasons states, has as its purpose an increase in the maximum penalties for the crime of incest.

Accordingly, the Bill proposes that section 144 of the Penal Code be amended by repealing the present five year maximum sentence. Instead, where the victim is below 13 years of age, the maximum penalty will be life imprisonment. For victims 13 years or over, the new maximum penalty will be twenty years, not the period of ten years in the proposed Bill, by virtue of a proposed committee stage amendment.

Attempted incest will increase from the present two year maximum to ten years in respect of a victim under 13, and for attempts on persons 13 and over to seven years. Thus, the maximum penalty for incest in relation to a victim under 13 will be life, which corresponds with the position obtaining in the UK. It should also be said that the penalty available as a maximum where a woman commits incest would increase from two years to ten years.

As the House is well aware, by virtue of the private Member's Motion to which the Government has acceded, the opportunity has also been taken in accordance with that Motion to seek to increase the penalties for defilement and similar crimes. These take the form of committee stage amendments which have been circulated and which I will attempt to summarise.

The main provision is in section 132 which will be repealed and the amendment shown on the committee stage amendment substituted. In effect, the only real substantive change is that the penalty for defilement of a girl under 12 will increase from a maximum presently of 14 years to a maximum of 20 years. An attempted defilement of a girl under 12 remains unaltered and will continue to carry a maximum of ten years.

Anyone defiling a girl between the ages of 12 and below 16 years will be liable to an increased penalty from the present seven years to a new 12 year maximum.

Section 133 of the Law, which deals with defilement of a female who is not of full mental capacity, will be liable to a penalty increased from the present two years to a maximum of 12 years.

Lastly, it is proposed that the penalty available for indecent assault on a boy under the age of 14 years would increase from the present five years to ten years as a maximum.

I listened with interest to the debate on the Motion and realised the limitations of the Law as well as any other mortal, in the sense that the Law itself cannot necessarily modify behaviour. These penalties are intended to provide adequate sentencing powers to the courts. It is not an answer to the problems and it is not intended to do any more than equip those dealing with such matters when they arise with the ability to impose the appropriate length of sentence.

Other reforms, I have no doubt, are necessary. Hopefully, they may follow on mature consideration. There will always be cases, unfortunately, where there is no alternative other than a lengthy custodial sentence. The important point I think is that the court has discretion. While I certainly am in support of alternative sentencing, the court needs to have substantial sanctions available.

Given the debate on the Private Member's Motion, I trust the House will consider that the issues have been fully ventilated. The limitations of amendments to the Law are accepted, but insofar as we are able to increase penalties which appear to be somewhat out of date, or out of line, it is, in my submission, appropriate that this occur. I would, however, emphasise the willingness of my portfolio to look at the wider issues represented by the Penal Code and the criminal justice system, taking advice from all concerned, including the judiciary, and say that we should be open to the possibility of change which I have no doubt will be further advocated in matters before this House.

This is no attempt to represent a complacent position. Far from it! These matters are severely troubling and I understand from the debate the sincerity with which the views put forward are held. However, in my respectful submission, we should do what we can when we have the opportunity. These are initial measures that will, at least, provide the opportunity for the judiciary to have at hand the option of suitable sentences for suitable cases.

Thank you.

The Speaker: The question is that a Bill shortly entitled, The Penal Code (Amendment) (Incest) Bill, 2001, be given a second reading. The Motion is open to debate.

The Third Elected Member for George Town.

Dr. Frank S. McField: Mr. Speaker, the notice by the Attorney General states that certain committee stage amendments will be made to this proposed Bill increasing sentences for crimes committed. Somehow, the way in which the Law regards punishment must be in sync with what we consider to be our collective understanding of the problems that create antisocial and criminal behaviour. This should embody some type of position or philosophy as to how we intend to remedy these malfunctions in our social system.

For too long, different government agencies, (not just in the Cayman Islands, but elsewhere), have not been aware, and when they were aware they did not make this obvious as they went about creating policies and enacting Laws.

After the riot at Northward Prison, we, as a country, might have concluded that warehousing our young Caymanian people in this penal institution was not only costly but deadly dangerous—not just to the inmates, but to prison and police officers and the wider society. It is interesting that we had learned something from the riots at Northward Prison, yet, at the same time, we went back to trying to solve the problems of criminal behaviour in the same old fashioned way. This was using restraint, power and submission, in order to achieve compliance. In other words, once we find that an individual has offended the norms of society by committing a criminal act, the philosophy has been that the problem should be corrected by seriously penalising the individual who committed the act. This has normally been done by incarceration. So, we imprison the individual and during the period of imprisonment try to make that individual unhappy by withdrawing rights and privileges so that he or she will not want to go back to prison again.

We have only to look at the records which are available to us to see that the cycle is not that way. Those who end up in prison, continue to go to prison. Even if we gave them a four-year sentence, by the time they have finished their "career" as convicts they have done 35 years. There are people in the prison now who are 35 years old. They have been in Northward perhaps 13 times already. The length of the time spent there does not seem to be meaningful in terms of readjusting their character, their understanding of themselves, and their understanding of the wider society with all its responsibilities. As a matter of fact, it can be proven that the longer a person spends incarcerated in a prison, the more the person retrogresses. Therefore, at the end of the day, he is even more incapable of abiding by the norms and Laws of a given society.

Are we, as responsible legislators, to feel good about ourselves because we have this ultimate power to make legislation to command judges to be able to, in their discretion, give sentences to the maximums that we are here contemplating? Are we as legislators so sure that we can make the Laws and then use discretions within the judicial powers?

In cases where the judiciary exercises its liberal, perhaps English, consciousness regarding sentencing, we turn around and criticise them because we say they are not using the maximum sentence; they are talking more like Frank McField and not believing that to put people in jail longer will be a solution to the problems. The politician feels okay because he has provided his constituents with his part of the solution, which is putting those convicted in jail for longer periods.

We are speaking about a specific type of criminal offence. Many of us are perhaps more emotive when it comes to sexual offences. That probably has a lot to do with our hypocrisy, the way we have dual standards in regard to sexuality and morality. We can very conveniently establish the so-called rigid societal standards and then, as individuals, apply and tolerate other standards.

For instance, in talking about sexual offences, all we have to do is visit the many bars in our country to see the behaviour exhibited, the types of persons employed there to sell alcohol and perhaps other types of commercial products. There are persons who question my being here, my sincerity. There are some younger persons who, when I speak, would prefer to somehow degrade the level of my conversation. However, I stood up in this country in 1977 and 1978 and 1979 and said that we needed to begin at the beginning. The beginning was in the family if we were not to have social breakdown and criminal crisis. Many people, at that time, thought I had found fault with rapid development and I did not want to agree with it.

Today, I am again saying that we do not want to build an army of alienated, criminalised, incarcerated Caymanians because the majority of criminals in this country are Caymanian. Who else is going to commit the offences you are talking about, if not our Caymanians? How do you really feel about them? Do you truly show your love and concern by punishing or by going back and trying to find exactly where the mistake might have occurred in trying to find some collective solution to these problems?

I predict that crime will not decrease but that it will increase. My prediction is that we will have to build more prison cells without increased sentencing. If we are increasing the sentences while the crimes are increasing, we know what that means—we have to be prepared to vote money to build more prison cells.

I hope when the time comes to build more cells at Northward Prison that the Members who vote for this Bill will be prepared to vote another $6 million to $8 million. Of course, the more prisoners there are, the more of a security problem you have within the prison. There will be the need to segregate the categories of prisoners because of the risk factors that will be triggered because of overcrowding.

There are people who talk about liberalisation and people who are soft on crime. There are some people who really do not understand violence. I know violence, Mr. Speaker. I have had violence visited upon me. I know how it hurts. I know what it is to dish it out too. I am telling you though, that I have a heart. I know that nothing can be accomplished by that type of attitude. Violence cannot provoke a desirable reaction in a human being.

In Europe today there are calls for a much more humane approach to sentencing and rehabilitation. In America there is a more frontier approach, 'let's execute them, and keep them like slaves.' America, of course, has a history that can sustain that type of attitude towards punishment because the majority of the people they are punishing are Black Americans. These people are ethnic minorities, not part of the ruling group unlike when we are talking about our own Caymanians. What you do to yourself is completely different from what you would do to other people. That is the truth.

In England, Germany, France and other countries the realisation is that, in the case of violence against an individual, you have to have the ultimate solution. That is the eradication of the individual. If you do not eradicate that individual or group they will come back and eradicate you. If we are going to use the violent inhumane system of incarcerating our people, we are only going to make them harder and more capable of winning a violent battle against us should they declare war against our society. All we have to do is take a look at Jamaica and see how crime is looked into and dealt with in that country. We see that once you go down that road of thinking you are going to get maximum results for maximum penalties—then you are lost.

There are those who will say we are only stressing the maximum now because we intend to be looking at alternatives and the other types of solutions. Philosophically and practically it shows that we are still anchored to that old ideology whereby we can produce changes in people by chaining people. That is not true because the longer the chains stay on the animal, the more aggressive the animal becomes. The more unwilling the animal is to cooperate and the more willing the animal is to fight and ultimately die if that be necessary. I know the feeling!

There are those who need to know that when they are judging people, incarcerating people, or stealing people's lives from them, those same people are listening to them. They are looking at them and taking note of all these things that are going on. This is a very small society. We need to exhibit that Caymanian caring and sharing and responsibility.

It is hard when we have people doing the things they are doing in our society today. It is hard to believe that our own people could do certain things that are done. A lot of us were in denial for many years thinking it could not be Caymanians because Caymanians could never do things like that. After all, Caymanians are not a violent people, they are peaceful.

I was at Northward yesterday seeing a lot of peaceful people playing football. It was sad to think that some of these kids will be in jail for the rest of their lives. They will know no other experience. I told one prisoner that Northward is so small in the Cayman Islands and the Cayman Islands is so small in the world, why should he confine himself to this very limited experience? I have always said that prison needs to be more like a school because the people who end up in prison are not ending up there by choice. People do not choose to go to prison, even though they may choose to do the crime.

I believe that we have to concentrate on working with the judiciary and other agencies to find constructive solutions to the breaches in social order and morality in the Cayman Islands. I believe we sent the signal from this Legislative Assembly that we wanted the judiciary to actively contemplate ways and means to create possibilities for alternative sentences. We wanted them to also look at some of the lengths of these sentences. We thought that if you sentenced a person to prison for a particular time it means that person's particular cell is for life. In other words, you might as well cross that cell off because you will not be able to use it.

When you get to sentences like 14 years that is for life! That is one generation for that cell, so you need to build another one. You cannot wait, because then you will be overcrowded. Go out and build a cell, do not let it back up on you! Make sure your pocket-books are heavy and make sure that you are willing to spend some money to build some other blocks.

I believe part of the problem in the country is not with the amount of time we allot for a particular crime, but the fact that we are not able and capable of bringing people to the justice system where they can be tried. What are we doing about that? Where is our responsibility there? I guess we will do that at a later stage. First we create the sentencing and then we will try to deal with some of these problems. Well, I am not so sure that is the way government should work. I think you are putting the cart before the mule. We have in our vernacular a better way to say it, but that would not be parliamentary!

If we are dealing with sexual crimes, we have to understand that there is a particular philosophy when we are dealing with sexuality. Why is it that when we are dealing with the question of sexuality that we see the woman as being the embodiment of purity and the male as being something completely different? We have purity and we have animal. Animal goes after purity, gets purity, offends morality and gets in trouble.

We know that the world has developed differently and we are not as carried away by that kind of dogma any more because women out there talk about gender equality and so on. An equal degree of responsibility is somehow contemplated by gender equity. There has to be an equal amount of responsibility for whatever happens.

If there is supposed to be an equal amount of responsibility, what happens then? Are you telling me it is assumed that if a 15 year old girl has sexual knowledge of a 15 year old boy, it is the 15 year old boy's knowledge and not the 15 year old girl's? How do we come to that point? How do we come to maintain this type of discrimination and prejudice and false assumption in our legislation?

Law is about more than drafting. Law is about more than dotting the i's and crossing the t's. Law is about being consistent, understandable and acceptable. The world is changing. Cayman is rapidly changing. We have already cases of 15 year old girls, and 13- and 14-year-old girls being consciously—consciously—involved in the act of prostitution. We have role models for them walking the streets that we imported here. Are we going to find another male victim to incarcerate? This does not show equal responsibility.

There is also a degree of responsibility that lies with the parents of these girls which this Law seems to be so bent on protecting. We have to make sure that girls understand their sexuality because we are not talking about rape in the sense that any force is being used to cause any female girl child to comply with any boy child or adult male. We are not talking about force.

We are talking about emotions and reasons and morality determining the acts. Then, when there is a lack of morality, you jump in, take the male and punish him by incarcerating him in prison. He then becomes an additional problem to you, if not by committing sex crimes, but by committing other crimes.

I could go on about this, but I will not. I am just making the point that there are lots of things to think about besides immediate gratification. I might be gratified somehow by agreeing to harsher punishment. However, I might be more useful to society if I speak about the breakdown in morality rather than the results of the breakdown.

I know that the Government has listened to me. I can tell in the debates by certain Members who began to incorporate the challenge to look further than at the sentence. I think we are a responsible group of Parliamentarians. I am not crying down the Parliamentarian for trying to think a problem out. All I am saying is that history has already proven that you cannot succeed by using violence against people. People will become accustomed to the use of violence and the only thing you will gain is stubbornness, resentment, hatred and retaliation.

In speaking to some of the inmates at Northward Prison yesterday, I can give you this message. They said that there is no point in Members of the Legislative Assembly not seeing what I am trying to say because the prisoners understand what I am saying. They can articulate much better what I am saying because they know it from experience. They can testify exactly how much punishment has caused them to change their bad habits. They can also testify how much counselling and coming to grips with the problems that caused them to offend, has helped them to be better people.

If a person goes to Northward for two years and is able to rehabilitate himself in two years, I do not see the point in keeping him there for four, seven or ten years simply because we think that is what the penalty should be. The length of the penalty should depend upon the results the community wants.

The community wants its sons back. Mothers want their sons to be at home. Even mothers who are offended by not taking good care of their children in the early stages when they were susceptible to a lot of these bad practices. They want their children back. We want a whole community, a healthy community with a healthy moral consciousness. We are not going to get that with violence and alienation against those very large numbers of our own people.

People complain that when ex-prisoners come out of prison nobody wants to give them a job. You hear Members of the Legislative Assembly up in arms about employers that do not want to give them a job. This is because, in a lot of cases, they might not necessarily be good workers. Maybe there is not enough work for them to do while in Northward. If you are going to put them in jail for a longer time, and then when they come out they are useless, you are talking nonsense again. It is going to be at your expense again to make sure they have some kind of livelihood because you have caused people who had no life skills in the first place to lose what little life skills they had by being incarcerated for a long time.

We know that, although these penalties are maximum penalties, when you move the maximum you are moving the way the judge is going to sentence - upwards. If you put the maximum at 13 or 20 the judge is going to move the sentence upwards. He is not going to stay at the beginning of the sentence. He is going to go more towards the middle of the sentence. The sentencing will be increased as a result of increasing the maximum. Obviously, that is the desire, otherwise we would not be going through this exercise in the first place. Let us not say we do not want to increase and that it is at the discretion of the judge. We are the ones making the legislation to increase the length of sentences.

It is not that I am less for good than other members or less for protecting the modesty of a woman or young girl. The modesty of a young girl will most likely be maintained in circumstances, of statutory rape or defilement. If the young girl does not consent, even though she is not the legal age, it would depend very much on how she is brought up. The kinds of values and ideas she is taught. The way she feels about her sexuality as a part of herself and not something that you can do and then clean yourself up and say you are okay. It is part of your conscience, your soul, your spirit, your total being. We need to communicate that to our adult society.

The way in which adults regard sex as being nothing more than a physical act, will be seen the same way by children. If we regard it as something that is important, wholesome and sacred, then they will not play around to the extent where they allow somebody older than them to have this type of relationship with them.

I can conclude because I think I have said much on the Private Member's Motion. I believe I have tried to make sure that people understand I am willing to vote by myself in this House. I will do that at any time it is necessary to give the general public an indication that I am firm about reason. I cannot see how this is bringing an improvement. It is confusing the philosophy we were trying to achieve by putting stress on rehabilitation, minimum sentences and alternative sentences. This was in order to give the penal institution the possibility to carry out reforms without being adversely affected by large numbers. I am saying that we need to work on other alternative methods of dealing with crime before we begin to start increasing penalties.

Thank you for allowing me to debate something that has already been debated.

The Speaker: Does any other Member wish to speak?

The Second Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. Alden M. McLaughlin, Jr.: Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

I have listened with great interest to the very able debate of the Second Elected Member for George Town—

The Speaker: The Third Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. Alden M. McLaughlin, Jr.: The Third Elected Member for George Town. I keep offering him my seat!

[Members' laughter]

Mr. Alden M. McLaughlin, Jr.: Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

We are again debating this age old dilemma of balancing the almost primitive need for society to extract its pound of flesh and its punishment. This is in circumstances where grave crimes which society abhors and finds particularly repugnant and immoral have to be dealt with. We always struggle in these circumstances in deciding quite how to deal with offenders.

The Third Elected Member for George Town put forward the view that incarcerating people for long periods of time rarely serves any rehabilitative purpose. I could not agree more with that proposition. Indeed, the latter spoke about the need to look deeper for the reasons why people perpetrate these crimes. He also spoke about the attendant need, when long periods of incarceration are imposed, to build more prisons.

I was reminded of the African fable in which the chief who often went down to the river in the morning to bathe. He was a good chief and well regarded. He went down as usual to the river to bathe and found a baby floating in the river. He retrieved the baby from the river and took it back to the village. It did not belong to anyone in the village. The villagers looked after it and cared for it. The next morning the chief went down to the river to bathe again and found two babies floating in the river. He retrieved them, and took them back to the village. They did not belong to the village but the people looked after them.

The next morning the chief went to the river to bathe and he found four babies floating in the river. He took them back to the village. They did not belong to the village but the villagers looked after them and cared for them. This went on for some time until soon every house in the village had babies which did not belong to the village but were looked after.

The resources of the village became increasingly strained. The chief, who was a wise chief, called his council, which was a wise council, to discuss this matter of grave importance. The suggestion came that they should build a big house in which to place all the babies not belonging to the village. Their plan was to put some of the women of the village in the house to look after the babies.

Someone said it would have to be a very big house and they did not know how long the babies would keep coming. Finally, one of the elders asked where the babies were coming from. They said they were coming from up the river. So, he said 'why not send a party up the river to see where these babies are coming from and why they are coming?'

The other members of the council said they did not have the time, it would take too long to go up the river, it would be too difficult and they did not know what they would find when they got up there and that it would be much easier to build the big house.

In many ways that is what we have done in the Cayman Islands for perhaps the last 30 years. We never seem to have the time or the resources to go up the river to find out where the babies are coming from and why they are coming down river and we keep building a bigger and bigger house.

I am hopeful. I have always been an advocate of alternative sentencing and getting to the root of the problem which is buried deep in the social turmoil of this community. This is the result of rapid development, immigration and a host of other complex problems that I will not attempt to articulate this afternoon.

I wish to make it plain that I do not believe for one moment that sentencing people to longer periods for any crime serves much of a rehabilitative process. On the other side of that coin, particularly in instances where we are talking about sexual relations with young and innocent victims, we are dealing with the containment of predators. This Bill, as I understand it, is not seeking to increase sentences of imprisonment for victimless crimes. We are talking about circumstances in which victims are preyed upon in many instances by older males.

As I indicated before, sending that type of individual to prison for long periods of time is going to do nothing in my view to rehabilitate that individual. It will, however keep him and his predatory ways off the streets for the length of that incarceration.

These kinds of sentences and instances are there and need to be there to register the community's reproof, abhorrence, and repugnance of this kind of behaviour as well as to protect society from predatory individuals. Increasing the maximum will give the judge dealing with the matter the discretion to give longer sentences for those cases that cry out for long and difficult punishment.

I am not sure what can be done in terms of counselling or alternative sentencing other than incarceration when you are dealing with the type of predatory behaviour to which I am referring. I am no expert in that field, but I have been around the system for nigh on 20 years now, both at the courts and in private practice. I have heard many, many discussions about sentencing, its purpose and what it really achieves. I have yet to hear any convincing means of rehabilitating sex offenders.

I do not have the magic solution. I believe there is merit in giving to the judicial system and judges who will hear these matters and who have the circumstances of the individual case before them, the ability to impose longer sentences where they believe the circumstances warrant it. I do believe that sentencing is important to society as well and society needs to feel that there has been some redress for the terrible wrong that has happened. Society needs to know that its disapproval of that type of conduct has been registered and noted. That may be primitive, but it is an inherent part of human nature and of society's consciousness. It is a factor that we cannot ignore when dealing with this Bill.

Society believes it must extract its pound of flesh. This is especially so where the offence is one of a sexual nature, one which is exploitative, one which victimises the young and steals from the very young girls in the community their innocence and their wholesomeness. While I understand the limitation of any legislation passed by this House, I recognise how very limited the effect it will have on the psyche of those prone to commit these offences. I believe that, on balance, we should give to the court the discretion for longer sentences. This Bill seeks to do just that.

On that basis, I give it my support. Thank you.

The Speaker: Does any other Member wish to speak?

The Second Elected Member for West Bay

Mr. Rolston M. Anglin: Thank you.

We have now heard debate on the exact same Bill. While final analysis of each in my view is as different as night and day, we can agree with a lot of what both Members from George Town stated.

I would also like to agree with The Third Elected Member for George Town. He has touched upon a fundamental weakness in the way society looks at boys and girls, males and females. The way we tend to use tradition in convincing ourselves as to which sex is more wholesome.

I think we can all agree that, in bringing the Motion which preceded this Bill, we are now able to look at language within our Penal Code. Indeed, as we read the Laws on our books we see they were written mirroring the times in which they had their genesis. That is logical.

When we look at our Penal Code, we see under section 132- defilement, acts committed against girls; the Law being written on the basis that it had to be the male that caused the offence.

Other Members spoke of the fact that, when looking at section 132 and thinking of sexual predators, we can all agree on stiffer penalties. When we change the scenario and start talking about two consenting teenagers, we then begin talking about something that is very different; not from a sin point of view, but from a real life-changing point of view.

This Law is basically saying that once there are sexual relations between consenting teenagers under the age of 16—and I stress ‘teenagers’—that it is automatically assumed that the boy is the one who has committed a crime. We would be fooling ourselves if we sat here and did not say that, in a lot of these instances the girl has as much, if not more, to do with instigating the relationship. We cannot sit back and look at lofty ideals and values which are not obtained by the great majority of the people and expect to use that as the measuring stick for everyone.

I say that because, as was the case on the Private Member’s Motion, I too would like to call on the Honourable Second Official Member in any further reviews to look at these matters. This would ensure that, when we pass legislation, we do not have blatant inadequacies in it. That, in itself, would be an inadequacy.

However, I would like to re-emphasise that this inadequacy has been sitting on the books for many years. It was not this Bill or the Motion preceding it that brought this inadequacy about. The word we heard so often is “whosoever” unlawfully and carnally knows any girl. It has always been there. Having said that, let me now say that I am proud to be associated with the Motion preceding this Bill. At least, it has also allowed us the real and distinct possibility of removing or correcting a deficiency which has been noted.

When speaking on this particular Bill, I, too, would like to say that I feel crime will increase in these Islands. However, the crimes we are looking at here are very different from what the majority of the prison population in Northward Prison is there for. We have always had knowledge that the majority of prisoners are there on drug related offences, either possession with intent to supply, simply possession or some related crime, usually stealing, theft, burglary, to support their drug habits.

I join with the two Members from George Town in saying that we need alternative sentencing. We have seen a great increase in the sentences handed down for drug supply, possession with intent to supply and importation of drugs. We have not seen a decrease in drug importation and selling in this country, but that has nothing to do with the Bill before us.

If we can start talking about alternative sentencing for drugs and drug related offences. If we can start to have meaningful rehabilitation of drug offenders, (some 80 percent of the prison population my information tells me) then the profile at Northward Prison would change dramatically.

I find it difficult to accept that any of us who have visited Northward Prison can have a realistic expectation that Northward Prison is able to rehabilitate anyone. My idea of rehabilitation is predicated on one basis. That is, the prison in which we incarcerate people must come close to mirroring the outside world, but more importantly, the lifestyle accepted as society’s norm. If we lock up young men and women and all they do is get up and eat, talk to each other, hang about, and do nothing constructive, how can you go into that setting for six months, one year, ten years, and be expected to come out and go to work and come home and spend time with your family? It just does not make sense.

It is no surprise that we have such a high rate of re-offending. This Bill is talking about predatory sexual crime, stealing people’s futures, robbing people of their humanity. I believe in caring and sharing as well, but I am sorry and I make no apology for it. Caring and sharing stops when a man rapes his daughter and his granddaughter.

When you look at the 1991 Police Report and see that a 16-month-old baby was sexually assaulted—I make no apologies! I do not share and care then.

Now the Christian in me tells me that we cannot give up on any life. I agree with that. I will say that the caring and sharing within the community stops right there. I can sympathise over the drug user. I can have sympathy in wanting to try to help rehabilitate their lives. I can have sympathy for the young offender who makes a mistake because of peer pressure. I can have a high level of remorse towards that individual and can see a great need for rehabilitation. However, when it comes to sexual predators, I do not think there is a country on the face of this earth that has found any real solution. Many people are castrating them. Maybe that is what our Motion should have been talking about. Then we would not have been talking about putting them in jail and building more cells and incurring more money and taxes.

I believe from the feedback I have received on this Bill that the general public of these Islands want their children safe and away from sexual predators. I agree with the Third Elected Member for George Town, that crime will increase. Fortunately, that has nothing to do with this Bill and the types of crime we are talking about. Drugs and drug related offences are what are going to cause a future riot in Northward Prison.

One other matter I want to touch on is the business of parole. I do not think that prisoners should just be paroled on good behaviour. What is good behaviour? How does that correlate with being fit and ready to come back into the society you have offended? I could do anything at Northward, keep cool, stay out of trouble and get a third knocked off my sentence. Does that have any relation to my ability to come back into society and make a meaningful contribution?

Northward has to be a disciplined facility. If it is not how can we expect inmates to come back out and cope and survive? In terms of maximum sentences available here, I would hope that the judiciary would continue to sentence people based on the crime committed and not simply arbitrarily move the bar up and sentence people longer. I think it calls into question the integrity of the justice system. For vicious crimes, especially incest, increasing the length of sentences allows judges more flexibility when deliberating over each case. It is my view that the judiciary will look at each case individually and utilise the new options to pass sentences the way society feels fit and proper.

I am sure that when we go through the Penal Code of that old belief where men are dogs and women are guiltless will have to be rectified. We know the world we live in. We must accept that the truth is otherwise.

There is such a cancer out there which has been with us for years. We do not sit down, get serious and talk about the real issues and about how we are going to move forward as a community. There is one thing I will try to do in my time here, if God spares my life, I will bring and second these kinds of motions to stir up uncomfortable debate. Therefore, we can move forward and progress as a people. We must talk about the uncomfortable issues.

I give my support because we are talking about sexual predators. These people are going out of their way after young girls. I mention, especially incest which in my view is the most despicable act, which is having sex with boys and girls, with granddaughters.

We must be tough in those instances. We are not talking about a victimless crime.

I support the Bill and I thank you.

The Speaker: Before calling another speaker, is it the wish of Members that we take the afternoon break? We shall suspend for 15 minutes.

PROCEEDINGS SUSPENDED AT 3.34 PM

PROCEEDINGS RESUMED AT 3.59 PM

The Speaker: Please be seated.

Debate continues on the Second Reading of The Penal Code (Amendment) (Incest) Bill, 2001.

The Elected Member for East End.

Mr. V. Arden McLean: Thank you.

So much debate has gone on that I will make my contribution nice and short for fear of repeating most of what has already been said. Suffice it to say that I support the Bill and the Motion. I did not speak because I saw no need to speak twice.

Much has been said about increasing sentences and the effect it will or will not have on crime. It is unfortunate that the sentences in these instances do not fit the crime and this is an opportunity to correct that. I guess one may very well overlook the fact that there is such a thing as presumption of innocence. One is not sentenced to life until found guilty.

There was also talk about women being predators and no provisions being made for those. That is true. In today's life there are many young teenagers who can be mistaken for being much older. Of course, if that can be proved in a court of Law I would assume that the person would be innocent. The Penal Code makes provision for that.

The Third Elected Member for George Town talked about 15 year olds having sexual relations with each other. There are some concerns about that. Are we going to send one teenager away forever? The definition of "life" means life—when you die. That is a serious concern that needs to be addressed. Those children are probably most likely keeping company with each other more than with adults.

The Second Elected Member for George Town said that this is about adults knowing the age of their victim and going ahead and doing it. More importantly, it is about knowing that it is your child too, or your sister. We know of many cases of incest where the hands of the court were tied and what was considered reasonable sentencing was not available. I support separating predators from victims, particularly when it comes to a daughter, especially a young daughter.

We heard of cases involving victims as young as 18 months. We heard of an incident maybe a year ago with an eleven-year-old and her father. There was outcry from the whole country. Some cried "Hang him!" "Lynch him!" "Shoot him!" I agreed. I shared those same thoughts with the rest of the country.

Unfortunately, we understand what happened with capital punishment. This was not to the liking of a lot of people in this country, but such is the case. Therefore, we cannot hang anyone anymore, except in the case of treason.

I believe from a moral standpoint that, wherever you are from, if you had a choice between murder and incest, particularly with young children, I am sure you would choose to let the murderer go and kill the predator of a young victim. I am sure there would be no question in anyone's mind concerning that.

I appreciate that this is a small community. I also recognise that the people convicted of such acts also recognise they were doing wrong. They must pay the price. Sometimes the price is extremely weighty. That is the price we pay and that is the price anyone proved to have committed such acts must pay.

I think it is disgusting, particularly when parents molest their own daughters. When I was a child I heard of it, so it did not start today. I do not believe it is as prevalent as it was in years gone by. Nevertheless, that is no excuse.

There is another reason why I support an increase in sentence for this type of crime. This is because, if the victim's family does not feel that justice has been served, then they will go and extract their little bit of justice too. More than likely, it will result in a family feud when one kills another. I believe that, as responsible legislators, if we put in place stiff enough penalties, it will serve as a deterrent and the victims' families will feel justified in knowing that the predator will not see the light of day until their children are over that embarrassment.

Anyone who takes away the innocence of a child should be hung. The Second Elected Member for West Bay spoke about castration. Well, I am going to add a twist to that—we need to do it publicly.

I strongly believe in 'an eye for an eye and a tooth for a tooth'. This is not about someone that does not know the difference between right and wrong. It is all about sexual urges. Why can't they go to the single bars and get consent? Certainly, prostitution is against the Law in this country, but they can buy plane tickets and go to some other country. There is no excuse. These may be tough things to say, but I am sure the country understands by now that I say tough things. I make no excuses! The people of the country must understand that if they call for something the legislators respond and they must accept it. There was quite a hullabaloo about this case. There were petitions, press conferences and today the Law has come into being and it would be foolhardy of us not to support it when the country has asked for it.

I support it. I trust that the next one we find who unlawfully and carnally knows any girl under the age of 13, will not be seen in society—not during my lifetime anyway, nor the victims! It is bad enough taking away the innocence of a child, but it is even worse to make that child live with the person who took that innocence away, particularly when they come out of prison and go back to the same house. That is very probable in this society. These people must be separated. They must also understand that there is a presumption of innocence. This is not about someone being charged, this is about someone being found guilty. Who is going to oppose the State disposing of an individual found guilty beyond a shadow of a doubt? We must understand the presumption of innocence. No one is guilty until proved guilty.

Many times women are not considered predators. In a lot of instances that is the case. Therefore, I challenge the Second Official Member and his team to also amend that section of the Law. I support the Bill before the House.

The Speaker: The Third Elected Member for Bodden Town.

Mr. Anthony S. Eden: After hearing the last two speakers, I do not think I need to say much more. I am a hard-liner when it comes to crime. I feel that the Bill we are now debating was not put in place with the intention of affecting 15 year olds having sex, but it was driven by the community's grave concern of brutal sex acts such as incest and rape.

People who commit these acts have a choice. They make a decision to commit these acts. I have no sympathy for whatever happens to them when they are sentenced by Law. If you break the Law, you must suffer the penalty. My job here is to protect law abiding citizens, not a handful of hardened criminals. My job is to legislate for 39,750 people and to see that they are protected within the framework of the Law, not a handful of people at Northward Prison. The tragedy is that there is not a lot of deterrent at Northward.

This morning a number of us attended a symposium. What came through loud and clear is the lack of discipline in our society. This indiscipline is now being manifested in a handful of our youth. We must stop sending confusing signals to our youth. It is high time we stopped being soft on crime. Until we stop pussy-footing with hardened criminals, crime will continue to explode in these Islands. I have no problem with putting people causing the abuse that took place in recent times away for a long time. If the sentences could be harder, I would support that.

I have no problem with rehabilitation. However, some of these people are not easily rehabilitated. I am sorry that I cannot support rehabilitating someone who has ruined the life of a child. Those young people are scarred for life. How inhumane!

I will draw my discussion to a close by drawing the attention of the House to when the death penalty was abolished. If you check prior to when the death penalty was done away with, how many murders and other serious crimes were committed in these Islands and compare that explosion—especially in murder—since that time. There is no deterrent!

It is our job to be hard on crime. In the area of drugs, when it comes to pushers and importers, I have no sympathy with them either. They should be put up there for a long period of their lives. They are killing our children and I have no sympathy for them. I support the Bill before the House.

The Speaker: It is now 4.25 pm. I do not know if any Member would want to begin his debate. If not, I would entertain a motion for the adjournment of this House.

The Honourable Minister of Communication and Works.

ADJOURNMENT

Hon. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Mr. Speaker, I move the adjournment of this Honourable House until 10 am Monday.

The Speaker: The question is that this Honourable House do now adjourn until 10 am Monday. Those in favour, please say Aye. Those against, No.

AYES.

The Speaker: The Ayes have it.

AT 4.27 PM THE HOUSE STOOD ADJOURNED
UNTIL 10 AM THURSDAY, 28 JUNE 2001.

OFFICIAL HANSARD REPORT
THURSDAY
28 JUNE 2001
10.26 AM
Sixth Sitting

[Prayers read by the Third Elected Member for George Town]

The Speaker: Please be seated.

Proceedings are resumed. Item 2 on today's Order Paper, Reading by the Speaker of Messages and Announcements.

READING BY THE HONOURABLE
SPEAKER OF MESSAGES
AND ANNOUNCEMENTS

APOLOGIES

The Speaker: I have received apologies for the late arrival of the Honourable Third Official Member, the Honourable Minister responsible for Education, Human Resources and Culture and from the First Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman

I recognise the Third Elected Member for George Town.

Dr. Frank S. McField: Thank you for giving me the opportunity to publicly invite Members of the Legislative Assembly to the Cayman Islands National Cultural Foundation production of my play, Playground, at the Harquail Theatre this weekend, the last weekend of the play.

Members are probably familiar with the need we have to promote things Caymanian. We also, would like to receive some value for the money that the Legislative Assembly annually votes to the Cultural Foundation, in the region of $350,000 per year. I think all Members would enjoy the play and I understand that it will also be performed on Cayman Brac. I also hope I can be there to see some of your nice people at that time.

Thank you.

The Speaker: Moving on to Questions by Honourable Ministers and Members. Question 65 is standing in the name of the Second Elected Member for West Bay.

QUESTIONS TO HONOURABLE
MINISTERS AND MEMBERS

QUESTION NO. 65

No. 65: Mr. Rolston M. Anglin asked the Honourable Minister responsible for the Ministry of Health and Information Technology who is financially responsible for an adult who has been sent off the Island for drug abuse treatment, but who has also been deemed by the Mental Health Officer to have a chemical imbalance.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Health and Information Technology.

Hon. Linford A. Pierson: Whether the condition is a psychiatric problem or a substance abuse problem or a combination of both, the adult or family is expected to pay for treatment unless a financial assessment has determined that the individual is "indigent" in which case the Cayman Islands Government will cover the expenses. Often the Government will advance payment to the treatment provider and a repayment plan is arranged for the individual or his or her family.

SUPPLEMENTARIES

The Speaker: The Second Elected Member for West Bay.

Mr. Rolston M. Anglin: Can the Honourable Minister say if the family is not able and the individual is not deemed indigent, who then stands financially liable?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Health and Information Technology.

Hon. Linford A. Pierson: The answer states that the adult or family is expected to pay for treatment unless a financial assessment has determined that the individual is "indigent." In the case where the adult or family is responsible or prepared to pay and the individual is not indigent, the family would have to bear the burden of the liability.

The Speaker: The Second Elected Member for West Bay.

Mr. Rolston M. Anglin: I thank the Minister for that answer, but I was really seeking to find out if the person is not deemed to be indigent and the family is not financially capable, what would happen in that case? The person would then be an adult. What happens if the family just cannot pay?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Health and Information Technology.

Hon. Linford A. Pierson: By its very definition, "indigent" suggests that the person is unable to pay. So, if the person is not indigent, by that same definition it would follow that he would be in a position to make some kind of financial arrangement, either through himself or his family.

The Speaker: The Third Elected Member for George Town.

Dr. Frank S. McField: The question is also talking about the person being mentally incapable of making a decision but is not indigent. I would like to know what would happen in the case where the family is not willing or able to pay, the individual is not indigent, but at the same time not in a position to be making the decision?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Health and Information Technology.

Hon. Linford A. Pierson: I think I know what the Member is driving at. If the patient is unable to make a decision and the family is not prepared to pay, even though the patient may not be indigent... who pays? Well, it has been the Government's policy that our patients would not suffer. Some arrangement would have to be made if, for instance, it is well known that the patient has funds available, but because of his condition is unable to make a decision. It would be expected that a member of the family would have to reach some decision or make some arrangement.

Our position is, since some $46 million is owing to government, to continue adding to that would be a major mistake. We have to be very firm with family members of any patient referred to ensure that if they can pay they will pay.

The Speaker: The Second Elected Member for West Bay.

Mr. Rolston M. Anglin: Can the Honourable Minister say whether or not, before the person is sent off the island for treatment, they or their families actually sign an agreement to repay the Cayman Islands Government?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Health and Information Technology.

Hon. Linford A. Pierson: Yes, that is the procedure required.

The Speaker: The Fourth Elected Member for West Bay.

Mr. Cline A. Glidden Jr.: Can the Honourable Minister say where we send patients for psychiatric help? Do we have any indication as to how many people are actually off island receiving psychiatric treatment at this stage?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Health and Information Technology.

Hon. Linford A. Pierson: I am informed that the acute patients are referred to facilities mainly in the United States. The chronic medium- to long-term patients are placed in a residency in Jamaica.

The Speaker: The Fourth Elected Member for West Bay.

Mr. Cline A. Glidden Jr.: Can the Honourable Minister say how those facilities are decided upon and what monitoring is done from our standpoint to see if they are still acceptable for us to be sending our patients to? How often is that monitoring conducted?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Health and Information Technology.

Hon. Linford A. Pierson: Prior to a patient being sent to a facility, it would be visited and also monitored on a periodic basis by the psychiatrist.

The Speaker: The Second Elected Member for West Bay.

Mr. Rolston M. Anglin: Getting back to the issue of persons being sent off with a substance abuse problem, can the Minister say what success rate they have had in regard to recidivism?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Health and Information Technology.

Hon. Linford A. Pierson: I am informed that the rate of success is not really remarkable, but that patients referred to facilities in the Bahamas have done very well indeed, approximately six of them. There is, however, a degree of recidivism.

The Speaker: The Elected Member for East End.

Mr. V. Arden McLean: I wonder if the Honourable Minister can tell us now that Caribbean Haven is operational, do we have seen any reduction in sending drug abuse patients overseas? Is it hoped that the Caribbean Haven will reduce that in the future?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Health and Information Technology.

Hon. Linford A. Pierson: The Caribbean Haven is mainly concerned with substance abuse problems. No referrals have been made overseas for treatment in regard to those patients involved. They are not involved with the psychiatric side of the patients.

The Speaker: The Fourth Elected Member for West Bay.

Mr. Cline A. Glidden Jr.: I asked earlier for an indication of the number overseas now both for psychiatric and drug problems. I am not sure the Minister has that information, or if it is something he will have to get for us.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Health and Information Technology.

Hon. Linford A. Pierson: I think they number something like eight overseas now for the dual diagnosis of psychiatric ... the mental problem, substance abuse, both being linked together with those patients.

The Speaker: Are there any further supplementaries? If not, we move on to question 66, standing in the name of the Second Elected Member for West Bay.

QUESTION NO. 66

No. 66: Mr. Rolston M. Anglin asked the Honourable Minister responsible for the Ministry of Health and Information Technology what is the purpose of the Information Technology Strategy Unit (ITSU) (i.e., what is its mandate).

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Health and Information Technology.

Hon. Linford A. Pierson: The Mission and Objectives of the Information Technology Strategy Unit are as follows: Mission Statement—To develop and implement an e-business and information technology strategy that optimises the economic and social development of the Cayman Islands.

Key Objectives for 2001:

1. To provide policy advice to the Minister on the development and implementation of a National Information Technology Strategy based on the recommendations of Vision 2008 Strategy XII and a national strategy for e-business as a means of achieving economic diversification.
2. To develop information technology and e-business related policy, technical standards, regulations and draft legislation, including the new Telecommunications Bill, a data protection bill, regulations under the Electronic Transactions Law 2000 and information technology aspects of freedom of information legislation.
3. To develop and implement a marketing strategy for the international promotion of the Cayman Islands as the offshore e-business jurisdiction of choice.
4. To promote e-business and information technology awareness in the public and private sectors.

5. To assist with negotiations that will result in the provision of state-of-the-art telecommunications at competitive prices.
6. To establish and operate an appropriate regime for the regulation of e-business in accordance with the Electronic Transactions Law 2000 and other relevant legislation.
7. To provide specialist consultancy to Ministries, Portfolios and Departments.
8. To maintain a National Hurricane Preparedness Plan in print and on line on behalf of the National Hurricane Committee.
9. To negotiate the transfer to Government of the responsibility for the Cayman (KY) Internet Domain and the subsequent management of the domain.

SUPPLEMENTARIES

The Speaker: The Second Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman.

Mr. Lyndon L. Martin: Can the Honourable Minister indicate the date of the formation of the Information Technology Strategy Unit?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Health and Information Technology.

Hon. Linford A. Pierson: The Unit first came into being in 1997. I would just provide some additional information. The International Telecommunications Strategy Unit (ITSU) was made responsible for the terms of reference I just read, with effect from January of this year. Prior to that, its responsibility was the development of national and public sector information technology strategies.

The Speaker: The Second Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman.

Mr. Lyndon L. Martin: Can the Honourable Minister outline any achievements reached so far by the unit?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Health and Information Technology.

Hon. Linford A. Pierson: I think it would be helpful if I provided some further background information which would also cover the question being asked.

The director of the Information Technology Strategy Unit was the leader of the Vision 2008 round table that developed Strategy XII, which dealt with information technology of the national strategic plan. The plan still forms the basis of the National Information Technology Strategy (NITS). Significant progress has been made on the implementation of that plan and I will just read those:

1. It was recommended (and has now been implemented) that the Minister of Information Technology be appointed (which is me).
2. All government departments involved in computing, telecommunications and e-business, have been placed in the Ministry responsible for information technology and is ably assisted by the ITSU.
3. The basic legal framework for the development of e-business has been established with the passing of the Electronics Transaction Law 2000, and the Computer Misuse Law 2000.
I will go on to say that the director of the ITSU was really the main driving force behind preparing these pieces of legislation.
4. The director of ITSU is chairman of the joint public/private sector e-business advisory board. The board has established four subcommittees to address particular areas of e-business development: legislation, marketing, infrastructure and human resource development.
5. The legislation subcommittee is currently drafting a new Bill to replace the existing Telephone/Radio/and Broadcasting Laws.
6. They will move on to consider the regulations under the Electronic Transactions Law, the need for stand alone data protection legislation to augment the existing provisions in the Electronic Transactions Law and revise existing legislation on intellectual property rights, copyrights and trademarks.
7. The infrastructure subcommittee has submitted its first report, the implications of which are currently being considered by government.
8. The marketing subcommittee is about to submit its local and international marketing plan to government. (This is being supervised by the director of ITSU). Requests for proposals for design and hosting of an e-business web site and for professional marketing services to assist government and the board with its marketing efforts will be issued within days.
9. The human resource subcommittee has been working with the Ministry of Education on IT training issues and my Ministry and the immigration board are examining the implication for immigration policy. (Again, the director of the ITSU has been the driving force and my advisor in these areas.)
10. There have been ongoing discussions with Cable & Wireless about their costs and range of services and I am shortly to announce details of the appointment of a telecommunication advisory committee to examine the company's most recent proposal and to recommend the way ahead. I have also been able assisted by the director of ITSU in formulating these policies.
11. Serious negotiations have been taking place between government and the present administrative and technical contacts for the Cayman Internet domain. I am optimistic that these will be successfully concluded in the near future with the mutually agreed transfer of control of the domain to government.

I would have gotten very little done if it had not been for the untiring efforts of the director of the ITSU in all these areas.

The Speaker: The Second Elected Member for West Bay.

Mr. Rolston M. Anglin: Can the Honourable Minister say whether there is a telecoms expert in the ITSU?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Health and Information Technology.

Hon. Linford A. Pierson: Government is now in the process of obtaining the services of a telecom expert. The expert in the ITSU is in the area of information technology generally, and particularly e-business and computers in other areas of information technology. We are specifically recruiting a telecommunications consultant to assist government in making a decision in this very important area.

I have just appointed a telecommunication advisory committee comprised of individuals with vast amounts of experience in telecommunications work. They will also be advising me in this matter.

The Speaker: The Fourth Elected Member for West Bay.

Mr. Cline A. Glidden Jr.: Can the Honourable Minister say whether the former communications officer involved in negotiations prior to the ITSU director has been replaced or is he working with the director of ITSU as part of this group? What is his role now?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Health and Information Technology.

Hon. Linford A. Pierson: The telecommunications officer is a member of the e-business advisory board. He is available to me when and if I require his advice in these matters. I have consulted him on a number of occasions.

The Speaker: The Second Elected Member for West Bay.

Mr. Rolston M. Anglin: The Minister mentioned that the director was the roundtable leader for strategy 12 in Vision 2008. In looking at the 2008 document, I noted he was also the advisor to the Vision 2008 roundtable. The Minister also mentioned that he is also the chairman of the main board in regard to information technology and e-business. What is the logic of having one person, one bureaucrat, guide so heavily? Why do we not have a private sector person as the chairman just so government gets another point of view? That is no disrespect to the director; it is just the way I like to see things work.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Health and Information Technology.

Hon. Linford A. Pierson: I appreciate the Member's honesty, but things do not always work the way we like to see them work. We have to be practical. There are really not a lot of people with the knowledge and experience of the director of telecommunications. That is why he was selected not only by me, but by the Minister in charge when the committee was first formed to be the main advisor. The Minister himself chaired the first committee, but I did not feel I was knowledgeable enough in the subject of e-business to chair the committee. I did not feel it was the right policy for me to do it. Therefore, I got somebody with the knowledge and experience to do it. There are not a lot of people readily available either in government or the private sector with the sort of background of the director of telecommunications.

I would say that I would be happy to advise the Member, give him a list of the people on this committee, because they are all individuals with varying degrees of experience in e-business and telecommunications.

The Speaker: The Elected Member for East End.

Mr. V. Arden McLean: In the key objectives of TSU, number 2 states, "To develop information technology and e-business related policy, technical standards, regulations and draft legislation, including the new Telecommunications Bill, a data protection bill, regulations under the Electronic Transactions Law 2000 and information technology aspects of freedom of information legislation."

When can we expect that legislation to be brought to this House?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Health and Information Technology.

Hon. Linford A. Pierson: The Telecommunications Bill is now in the process of being formulated. The legislative subcommittee of the e-business advisory board is dealing with this as we speak. I hope to be able to get the first draft of that as soon as possible. I am not sure of the exact date. I have just been told that it should be ready within the next few weeks.

The Speaker: The Second Elected Member for West Bay.

Mr. Rolston M. Anglin: Getting back to information technology. Can the Honourable Minister say when government and its departments are going to be on board with e-business themselves? That is, allowing the citizens of this country who so desire to transact business with the Government via the internet, considering that Cable & Wireless has some 8,000 internet customers on the islands. That is a significant customer base.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Health and Information Technology.

Hon. Linford A. Pierson: I think it is true to say that the Government has been paying very serious attention to the Government side of information technology. We are now looking into the possibility of setting up a system whereby, in the not too distant future, we can have much of our information on line. Also, we are considering a Cayman Inc. web site that will be a central point for information where the Chamber of Commerce will also use that and their own. This will also be complementary to the web site that will be set up by the tourism department.

SUSPENSION OF STANDING ORDER 23(7) AND (8)

[Moved by the Honourable Minister for Health and Information Technology]

QUESTION PUT: AGREED. STANDING ORDER 23 (7) AND (8) SUSPENDED TO ALLOW QUESTION TIME TO CONTINUE BEYOND 11 AM.

The Speaker: The Second Elected Member for West Bay. I am going to have to limit this to three additional supplementaries.

Mr. Rolston M. Anglin: The Minister stated that this unit has been in existence since 1997. I would have thought that by now that things like companies being able to pay the company register electronically would have been in place considering the amount of business government does through that and how you could then re-deploy civil servants into other areas. I wonder too in regard to the Motion I brought calling for Government to look at the possibility of having things like the Laws available for sale online, having things like the Hansard available for sale on line... can the Minister update us as to what progress has been made?

The Speaker: I think this question is somewhat outside of the substantive answer, but if you wish to answer it you may, Honourable Minister for Health and Information Technology.

Hon. Linford A. Pierson: It is a very good question, even though I agree it is outside, but I will try my best to give the Member a reply.

To suggest that because the ITSU came into being in 1997 and the fact that certain matters are not in place and hinting that perhaps it has not functioned as effectively as it should, is not the case. I have read the key objectives of the ITSU and what they have done. I think it would have been humanly impossible to have accomplished more within that time.

Just to further inform the Honourable Member, government has a web site established. It is not yet ready for use by the public, but it is available to the Ministries on a test basis. It is the intention that in time companies and other information required by the public will be available through the web site and government's e-business.

The Speaker: The Elected Member for East End.

Mr. V. Arden McLean: Can the Honourable Minister say why a web site had priority over objective number 5, "To assist with negotiations that will result in the provision of state-of-the-art telecommunications at competitive prices?" What is the status of the negotiations with Cable & Wireless or bringing in someone else to get those competitive prices?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Health and Information Technology.

Hon. Linford A. Pierson: It is not correct that the e-business has taken priority of the web site over the telecommunications subject. I think it is more correct to say they have been working in tandem. They are working side by side.

In regard to the progress of the telecommunications discussions, we are in discussions with Cable & Wireless. We are looking at the best way forward in regard to competitive prices mainly for the sake of e-business. We realise that, in the absence of competitive prices, e-business will not have a chance against its major competitors. We are looking into this.

I am in discussion now with Cable & Wireless. We have just established a telecommunications advisory committee that will also be advising me in matters to do with our discussions with Cable & Wireless. We are very much involved in this process., Very soon we should be able to create a report and make a public statement on our position.

I would also add that I have agreed to speak at the Chamber of Commerce meeting on 11 July, at the Wharf when I will be giving my vision for e-business in the Cayman Islands. At that time I will also be making comments on the Ministry's position in regard to the telecommunications subject.

The Speaker: Final supplementary, The Fourth Elected Member for West Bay.

Mr. Cline A. Glidden Jr.: Would one of the mandates of the Information Technology Strategy Unit to try to move the Government and the Legislative Assembly into a more paperless world? Many Members spoke about the possibility of connecting up to a domain or web site to get access to Hansards and documents on line to try to eliminate some of the stress caused to staff Members here in providing information. I am not sure that would be a function of the ITSU or the computer services department since they both fall under the Minister.

Can the Honourable Minister say if any research or progress has been made on moving us into that paperless age? If so, what progress has been made?

The Speaker: Again, this is outside of the substantive question, but if the Minister wishes to answer, he may.

The Honourable Minister for Health and Information Technology.

Hon. Linford A. Pierson: The Government web site is not really the responsibility of the ITSU. That is the responsibility of the computer services department. The e-government is being directed by computer services. I think in 1998 or 1999 ITSU and the computer services department were also responsible for the Y2K preparation which also took up a lot of the time of the director of ITSU as it did with computer services.

On the point raised regarding the objectives to move forward to a paperless world, I think that is the main objective of the e-government being directed through computer services with assistance from ITSU. I think it is true to say that the conventional way of doing business not only in government but in the private sector is fast being replaced by technology and that much of the paper transactions will be done electronically. That is in the pipeline.

The Speaker: In the absence of the Honourable Minister responsible for Education, Human Resources and Culture I shall place Questions Nos. 67 and 68 at the end of Question Time, according to Standing Order 23(3). Hopefully he will arrive by that time.

Question 69, standing in the name of the Elected Member for East End.

QUESTION NO. 69

No. 69: Mr. V. Arden McLean asked the Honourable First Official Member responsible for the Portfolio of Internal and External Affairs what is the current status of the Government Information Services' (GIS) Journal.

The Speaker: The Honourable First Official Member responsible for Internal and External Affairs.

Hon. James M. Ryan: The programme has been off-air since the beginning of the year. Government Information Services (GIS) is in the process of filling this post which became vacant since 31 January. The job was immediately advertised. Applicants were interviewed in March. Three Caymanians applied for the post, one of whom was selected. Following several months of negotiations, we were advised during the week of 11 June that the candidate has declined. GIS is now reviewing the situation for further action to have this post filled.

SUPPLEMENTARIES

The Speaker: The Elected Member for East End.

Mr. V. Arden McLean: Can the Honourable Member say if the other two Caymanians were also suitable and if so, the process cannot be sped up to see if one of these other two would take the job?

The Speaker: The Honourable First Official Member responsible for Internal and External Affairs.

Hon. James M. Ryan: I said that GIS is now reviewing the situation. Yes, the unit is looking at the possibility of filling the post with one of the other two candidates. Obviously, the candidate selected was the best candidate. GIS is reassessing the situation.

The Speaker: The Elected Member for East End.

Mr. V. Arden McLean: In view of the importance of this journal, can the Honourable Member give us an undertaking that this will be started back before the end of this year? Will the equipment they currently use also be used in the broadcasting of the Legislative Assembly?

The Speaker: The Honourable First Official Member responsible for Internal and External Affairs.

Hon. James M. Ryan: As soon as we can recruit another person, we hope to have the GIS Journal back on the air. I would just like to say for the benefit of Members and the public that while the GIS Journal is not in operation, we have had some electronic media projects done utilising other staff. I might just mention that there have been videos and radio spots done for the sports department, the Cayman Carifta Athletic Team Awareness and Support; recording of various government department events, for example the Youth Parliament and others; involvement in training workshops for civil servants; new packages in support of human rights symposium for local and Caribbean dissemination; and something on hurricane awareness.

While the journal is off, we are trying as best we can to substitute something. I take the point the Member has made and I give an undertaking that we will... I do not want to say the end of the year. I would like to think we could get it back on line before that and we are working very hard to get the journal back. I know it is very popular and agree that it is very educational. People have learned to look forward to it and it should be back.

The issue of the use of the equipment for broadcasting the Legislative Assembly, I would like to look at that before I give an undertaking. I take note of what the Member has said.

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman.

Mrs. Julianna Y. O'Connor-Connolly: When was GIS informed that the candidate had declined the offer? Can the Member say whether or not GIS would look at any salary package to see if it is in standing with the industry level?

The Speaker: The Honourable First Official Member responsible for Internal and External Affairs.

Hon. James M. Ryan: It was during the week of 11 June that GIS was advised of the fact that the candidate had declined. I am not sure if the person advised personnel and then GIS.

Could the Member please repeat the second part of the question?

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman.

Mrs. Julianna Y. O'Connor-Connolly: I was making an enquiry as to the use of the word "declined" and making the observation that perhaps it implied that there was an offer, hence a decline. If so, was GIS looking at the situation to see if the salary package was in keeping with the industry standards.

The Speaker: The Honourable First Official Member responsible for Internal and External Affairs.

Hon. James M. Ryan: I am not aware of the reason the candidate declined the offer. Whether it was the salary package or for other reasons, I am not at all sure there was comparison with industry standards in terms of the remuneration. The former employee was well trained; very experienced; and the salary package was attractive. Any offer made to a candidate would be based on the person's experience and training.

The Speaker: The Third Elected Member for George Town.

Dr. Frank S. McField: It appears that the First Official Member is saying that perhaps the reason for this Caymanian declining the job was that the pay package or benefits were changed. If that is the case, would the Member say?

The Speaker: The Honourable First Official Member responsible for Internal and External Affairs.

Hon. James M. Ryan: I do not think that was what I was saying at all. I said that I thought the package was attractive. I do not know the reason why the candidate declined to accept the appointment.

The Speaker: The Third Elected Member for George Town.

Dr. Frank S. McField: Can the Member state that the package has not been changed? Was the same offer made to the previous employee of the GIS Journal also made to the Caymanian who applied for the job?

The Speaker: The Honourable First Official Member responsible for Internal and External Affairs.

Hon. James M. Ryan: I am not able to say whether the package was changed. What I can say is that any offer will be based on a candidate's training and experience.

The Speaker: The Third Elected Member for George Town.

Dr. Frank S. McField: Can the Member say then in making an offer, what is the amount of training that is expected for someone in this particular position? Is it the training that is important or the person's ability to do the job? If it is the person's ability to do the job, then what does the pay have to do with the person's training? You are actually paying someone to do a job.

The Speaker: I think we are getting somewhat outside of the ambit of this question. However, if the Member wishes to answer he may. The Honourable First Official Member responsible for Internal and External Affairs.

Hon. James M. Ryan: All posts in the public service have a job description that sets out the training and experience required for the holder of the post. When a post is advertised it will reflect what the job description carries. Obviously, there will be people who apply from time to time who may not have the requisite qualifications or experience, but may in some other way feel they are able to do the job. Then an interviewing panel of the Public Service Commission (PSC) is set up and candidates are interviewed and the best candidate is selected. I do not know what more I can add to it than that.

The Speaker: The Third Elected Member for George Town.

Dr. Frank McField: Could the Member say whether or not the department of his portfolio is committed to seeing a Caymanian fill this post? Would the department hire a foreigner to fill this position if that person was considered to have better qualifications than the Caymanian who applied for the job, was offered the job, but obviously refused to take it for the amount of money offered, or the two Caymanians who applied but were not short listed? Are they looking for someone outside these qualifications? Would they be willing to hire someone from someplace else to find the qualifications?

The Speaker: The Honourable First Official Member responsible for Internal and External Affairs.

Hon. James M. Ryan: It is my belief that as long as we can find a suitably qualified Caymanian then that person should be employed. If we are unable to find a suitably qualified Caymanian and we have to hire a non-Caymanian, then I think it has to be done.

There were some non-Caymanians who applied for the post, but they were not considered. The fact is a Caymanian was selected as the first choice, even though that person has now declined.

The Speaker: The Elected Member for East End.

Mr. V. Arden McLean: Can the Member tell us what kind of commitment government has to training any of the staff in the GIS in relation to this same discipline by sending them overseas to some school?

The Speaker: The Honourable First Official Member responsible for Internal and External Affairs.

Hon. James M. Ryan: A member of the GIS staff is currently overseas in training. That individual will not complete training until December 2002. Once that person has completed training and returns I think we will have a person in house who can carry out the duties ably.

The Speaker: The Elected Member for East End.

Mr. V. Arden McLean: Can the Honourable Member say whether or not we have Caymanian cameramen within GIS? If not, what is being done to train and recruit those?

The Speaker: The Honourable First Official Member responsible for Internal and External Affairs.

Hon. James M. Ryan: I believe that the current camera operator is Caymanian. I stand to be corrected, but I believe I am correct.

The Speaker: Are there any further supplementaries? If not, I would ask that a motion be made to postpone questions 67 and 68 standing in the name of the Fourth Elected Member for West Bay, due to the absence of the Honourable Minister responsible for Education, Human Resources and Culture.

The Honourable Minister for Planning, Communication and Works.

Hon. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Unfortunately the Minister is still in conference and has been delayed. He just sent a message down. Given the circumstances I ask that these two questions be put forward to the order paper for tomorrow.

The Speaker: In accordance with Standing Order 23(3) we will defer questions 67 and 68. Those in favour please say Aye. Those against, No.

AYES.

The Speaker: The Ayes have it.

AGREED: QUESTIONS 67 AND 68 POSTPONED UNTIL FRIDAY 29 JUNE 2001.

The Speaker: That concludes Question Time. Maybe this would be a good time to take the morning break. We shall suspend for 15 minutes.

PROCEEDINGS SUSPENDED AT 11.32 AM

PROCEEDINGS RESUMED AT 11.59 AM

The Speaker: Please be seated.

Item 4 on today's Order Paper, Other Business Private Members' Motions. Private Member's Motion No. 12/01, Public Decency Legislation. To be moved by the Second Elected Member for George Town.

Dr. Frank S. McField: Mr. Speaker I think that it is the intention of the Leader of Government Business to move that Private Members' Motions be suspended to continue the Second Reading of the Penal Code (Amendment) (Incest) Bill, 2001.

Can I have a minute to call him please?

The Speaker: Yes, but this is what the Order Paper says. (Pause)

The Honourable Minister for Planning, Communications and Works.

Hon. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Thank you.

By consensus the Members are content to continue with Government Business today to put it all behind us before we go back to the Private Member's Motion. I would ask to suspend the relevant Standing Orders. I apologise for not having the opportunity to speak with you prior to this, sir.

MOTION TO SUSPEND STANDING ORDER 14(3)

The Speaker: The Motion is that we proceed with Government Business, although today is Thursday. Those in favour please say Aye. Those against, No.

AYES.

The Speaker: The Ayes have it.

AGREED: STANDING ORDER 14(3) SUSPENDED TO ALLOW GOVERNMENT BUSINESS TO TAKE PRECEDENCE OVER OTHER BUSINESS.

The Speaker: Moving on to Government Business, Bills, Second Reading. Continuation of debate on the second reading of The Penal Code (Amendment) (Incest) Bill, 2001.

Does any other Member wish to speak? Final call, does any other Member wish to speak? If not, would the Mover care to exercise his right of reply?

The Honourable Second Official Member.

GOVERNMENT BUSINESS

BILLS

SECOND READINGS

THE PENAL CODE (AMENDMENT) (INCEST) BILL 2001

(Continuation of debate thereon)

Hon. David F. Ballantyne: Thank you.

Let me say at the outset that this Bill does not purport to do any more than it sets out to do, namely, increase the maximum penalties available in relation to certain types of criminal behaviour. I listened, as we all did, to the contributions to the debate on the Bill, for which I am grateful because I think it helps to see the whole issue in context. I am also conscious of the debate that took place on the Motion which preceded the Bill which also canvassed a number of issues.

I am aware too that there is a further Motion dealing with public decency legislation which may involve looking at some kinds of sexual offences. Depending on the outcome of that Motion, it may be that there will be an opportunity to assess the fairness with which the system operates. Presently in relation to young persons, (which was mentioned both in the debate on the Motion and the Bill), the liability of young males compared with young females the system was said to be deficient.

I would be willing to support a discussion of those issues in whatever forum is considered appropriate, to look at the possibility of alternative disposals or treatment for sexual offenders. It will be based more on an attempt to understand the reasons for the behaviour with a view to it being challenged where possible. I say all of this without wavering from the thrust of this Bill, but trying to take proper account of what has been said in the debate on these issues.

No one can be complacent, no one can be content. Sentencing comes at the end of the day in relation to matters that have caused concern to the system and which have been prosecuted. I noted it was submitted that the Laws must be in sync with our understanding of social problems. That is not always the case, as we well know and some Laws are well out of date and would merit reform. I believe that we should not just be revising but also reforming Laws.

However, in relation to the Bill, it was partly in response to wide public reaction by petition and in my opinion the incest amendment was brought, not to clamp down, but to reflect the attitude of society generally.

There is little doubt in my submission that a five year maximum for incest is inadequate as a maximum. For example, when some allowance is made for a guilty plea, possible parole at one-third of sentence served, and remission of one-third for good behaviour, it tends to dilute the effect of a sentence of that margin.

I would also say without seeking to be provocative, that we all have choice. Those who elect to engage in this type of behaviour need to understand what will be the possible consequences. They need to know that they are exposed to the available penalties. I also say that those who cannot help themselves need help and they should get it. However, the Law still holds them accountable unless they are not legally responsible for their actions.

It is not in my view a reason to fail to have in the Law adequate provision for sanctioning unacceptable social behaviour for circumstances where there is no viable alternative but to impose a custodial sentence. That is not to exclude humanitarian considerations because in my view there is nothing inconsistent with supporting the kind of reforms that were discussed. Reforms which are healthy and undoubtedly are worth promoting for the treatment of offenders, while at the same time providing serious sentences for serious crimes.

Therefore, I agree that rehabilitation is a proper objective, but so is punishment and protection of the public. There needs to be an alternative to the possibility of retribution by person taking matters into their own hands and some of these issues do give rise to a great deal of feeling, understandably.

To be effective, therefore, penalties are required to be credible. Some measures are, of necessity, but so is the effect on innocent victims. To get the balance right, we need to be able to ensure that the human rights of victims are respected and the courts who are entrusted with dealing with these matters are enabled to judge that balance in a particular case.

In my view, it is not possible to generalise. Each case must be looked at on its merits and according to the circumstances, the gravity of the offence-the mitigating circumstances. There needs to be discretion. There needs to be a range of sentences available which is adequate to cater for the range of circumstances.

In a way, society speaks through the sentence and we have to allow that to happen.

I am grateful for all the contributions, all of them valuable and all of them having a place. I trust that the Motion itself having been carried that the Bill enjoys the support, as I believe it does, of the House. Other measures which can and should be taken in due course will follow and will also have the support of the Second Official Member.

Thank you.

The Speaker: The question is that a Bill entitled, The Penal Code (Amendment) (Incest) Bill 2001, be given a Second Reading. Those in favour please say Aye. Those against, No.

AYES.

The Speaker: The Ayes have it.

AGREED: THE PENAL CODE (AMENDMENT) (INCEST) BILL, 2001 GIVEN A SECOND READING.

The Speaker: Second Readings.

THE CRIMINAL PROCEDURE CODE (AMENDMENT) BILL, 2001

The Clerk: The Criminal Procedure Code (Amendment) Bill, 2001.

The Speaker: The Honourable Second Official Member.

Hon. David Ballantyne: I beg to move the Second Reading of a Bill entitled, The Criminal Procedure Code (Amendment) Bill, 2001.

The Speaker: Do you wish to speak to it?

Hon. David F. Ballantyne: Thank you.

This Bill seeks to amend the principal Law, which is the Criminal Procedure Code (1995R). It contains four main provisions to which I will attempt to speak in order.

Clause 2 seeks to amend section 6 of the principal Law to empower a Summary Court in certain circumstances to commit an accused person to the Grand Court for sentencing where the Summary Court is of the opinion that greater punishment or a longer sentence should be imposed to protect the public from serious harm by the accused person than the court has power to impose.

I need to amplify on this in order to explain the purpose of that provision and put it in context.

The way in which a case is tried depends on the kind of case it is. There are three categories of case under the Criminal Procedure Code, category A, B and C. Category A cases can be tried on indictment only and therefore for the Grand Court. Category B cases are what are colloquially known as "either way offences" which can be tried either on indictment or in the Summary Court. Category C offences are those which can only be tried in the Summary Court.

This provision is mainly intended to address either way offences, although it is not presently so worded. There are certain committee stage amendments that will clarify this. An "either way offence," or a category B offence, can only be tried in the Summary Court if both the Crown and the accused agree. In other words, if the accused elects to go to the Summary Court on an either way offence the Crown must also agree to that happening. That does happen from time to time.

This provision, which exists in the United Kingdom in a way I will endeavour to outline, is intended to empower the magistrate to remit a case where the magistrate, not the Crown or anyone else, considers that the powers available to the magistrate are insufficient to deal with the circumstances before the magistrate. You will recall that the magistrate has a maximum sentencing power of four years.

The circumstances in which this may happen are that there should not be an unfettered discretion on the magistrate to simply remit any case to the Grand Court for sentence. To try an either way offence summarily needs the consent of the prosecution and the person charged. If the Crown takes the view that a matter is serious it should not consent to the summary trial of an either way offence, it should insist that the matter go on indictment.

It seems wrong to me, in principle, that summary matters should be referred to the Grand Court for sentence. If a person is charged with a category C offence, they have a reasonable expectation that they will be dealt with in Summary Court. I stand by that position. I think that is right. I think if this House decides that an offence should not be a category C offence but an either way offence, it can decide that by law in which case the matter can either go to the Summary Court or the Grand Court, depending on the election made and whether the Crown agrees.

That leads me to say that generally where it is considered a crime merits greater punishment than the magistrate considers, she has power to impose. In my opinion that should apply to an either way offence only with one exception (which I will mention a little further on) will be proposing a committee stage amendment to the effect that this power is only available where the offence in Summary Court is an either way offence and also where the accused is not under 18. Both of these safeguards are contained in the United Kingdom's legislation, and I have had a good look at it. For reference, the UK legislation is The Magistrate's Court Act (1980), § 38.

I would ask you to note also that there are two possibilities contained in the proposed amendment. One is that an offence or a combination of that offence and other offences associated with it is so serious that greater punishment should be imposed. That is one set of circumstances contemplated. The second set of circumstances that a longer sentence is considered necessary by the magistrate to protect the public.

Now, I am proposing that we qualify that by saying that this should only apply in relation to violent or sexual offences. Those are the cases where the protection of the public would primarily arise. That reflects the terms of § 38 of the UK legislation. So, these words are proposed to be added.

I would also inform the House that, according to Blackstone's, these measures are normally invoked in the following types of circumstance. When an offence, or a combination of offences, is considered serious for example the instances I am able to point to are, when the magistrate becomes aware, at the end of the proceedings, of serious previous convictions; and secondly, where the accused himself asks that further offences be taken into account. Those are the two instances where the power to commit would appear to be most usually exercised.

In relation to the protection of the public, the UK provision confines the power of committal to violent offences and sexual offences. I think that makes sense, particularly in the light of the conversations we have had in debate on these types of issues.

It should also be noted that the court, which has the power to commit for sentence, reserves that right for itself. It is not for the Crown to say. It is not for the prosecution—it is the magistrate and the court itself. It should also be understood that the Grand Court by means of this power to commit, is not to be obliged to impose a larger sentence. I will also reflect that in the context of a proposed committee stage amendment.

The Grand Court, in my opinion, has to have the power to consider whether the magistrate was right to make the committal to the Grand Court, and have the freedom to decide the appropriate sentence. For this type of situation, the procedure in the Grand Court would be similar to that following a guilty plea on indictment. As you will remember, this will be confined to either way offences.

That makes the case, in fact, for confining this part of it to either way offences. There is one exception. That is the real circumstance which the Solicitor General has referred us to whereby a conviction for a summary offence, a category C offence in the Summary Court, by itself occasions a breach of a Grand Court order. Let us say a community service order or a probation order. In these circumstances, if the Summary Court deals with the individual, the individual is still liable to be dealt with by the grand court for the breach of the grand court order. It appears to those of us who have the responsibility for advising on this, and I think certain others with whom we have consulted, that it makes sense and the judiciary are in support of the magistrate having the ability to commit the individual to the Grand Court so that all matters pertaining to that individual can be dealt with at one and the same time and that would be a third possibility. That would be the only instance where a summary offence could result in the individual being committed to the grand court. It would not be because of the summary offence, it would be because of the conviction for the summary offence in the opinion of the magistrate causing the individual to be in breach of a grand court order for which they would be required to be dealt with in any event by the Grand Court.

All that would happen is that the whole package would move to the grand court and it would deal with the individual based on the breach of the order and for the matter which occasioned the breach.

An amendment is also proposed to the effect that nothing in this section would require the Grand Court to impose a greater sentence than the magistrate could have imposed. The Grand Court, therefore, can look at this afresh. There is no obligation to grant a longer sentence. In addition, the Chief Justice may issue practice directions regarding the exercise by the Summary Court of the power to commit for sentence.

I have had the opportunity of discussing these amendments with the Chief Justice. He is of the view that they appear to him to be sensible and appropriate, but, of course, subject to the views of this House.

These are my comments on the power to commit. This is not a power that is expected to be used regularly, but it is a power that has been found necessary where circumstances require it. In relation to powers of sentence and combination of offences and in relation to the sexual and violent offences, it would only apply to either way offences. The only summary matter to which it would apply would be where that summary matter had occasioned a breach of a Grand Court order and therefore it would make sense to deal with all such matters together. That is the first part of this Bill.

The second part seeks to amend the principal Law by providing an accelerated procedure known as a Voluntary Bill of Indictment. This is to be achieved by inserting a new section, 106A to the principal Law to provide that a person may be tried before the Grand Court by the direction of or with the consent of the Grand Court. An indictment under this new section would be preferred in accordance with the rules set out in the fourth schedule.

The current position regarding preferring an indictment, (that is a bill setting out charges to be dealt with by the Grand Court) is that where the person is charged for a serious offence, he has to first go to the Summary Court before the magistrate where a preliminary inquiry is conducted. That can either be in short form, in which case the statements are taken as read, but are available in long form where the evidence is given viva voce and the opportunity for cross examination is available. Or, indeed, there can be a combination where the defence wished to test a particular issue.

Thereafter, if a prima facie case is made out, i.e., a case to answer, the accused has to be committed to the Grand Court to await trial. The way the Law presently is, the committal is to the next sitting of the Grand Court. So, if the Grand Court happens to be sitting at the present moment, it is not possible to commit that individual to that sitting of the Grand Court. That is my understanding of it. Therefore, there is a delay occasioned.

Members will appreciate, because of the visiting population here, from time to time it arises that an occasional visitor will be accused of a serious offence and may wish to dispose of the matter based on the strength of the case by pleading guilty rather than going through a lengthy trial. As matters stand, that person would have to go through the preliminary inquiry procedure and return in due course to be dealt with in the Grand Court. There is no means of accommodating that person to have the matter dealt with expeditiously. Instead, there has to be a preliminary inquiry and the person has to await the next sitting of the Grand Court.

Therefore, the proposal to allow a voluntary bill of indictment would allow that individual to accelerate the process and would also allow the Attorney General to do so provided that a court agrees. This is not a power conferred upon the Attorney General. It is a power of the court to direct.

The witness statements, along with a written application, would be submitted directly to a judge of the Grand Court who could authorise the preferring of such an indictment and thereafter the accused would be dealt with directly by the grand court as soon as is convenient. Thus the indictment would be preferred with the consent of a judge of the Grand Court.

This procedure would also be available where the magistrate refuses to commit an accused to the Grand Court. It would be possible to allow an application to be made to a judge in effect to review that decision.

These amendments would bring our practice in line with the UK and I am told most other Commonwealth jurisdictions (and I can refer you to the UK Indictment Procedure Rules (1971)).

That is the second element of the Bill.

The third element of the Bill is to increase the schedule containing the penalties. These are consequential amendments necessitated by the amendments to the Penal Code and you should find when we get to the committee stage that the amendments to the Criminal Procedure Code will correspond to the amendments we have discussed to the Penal Code.

The final amendment is to change the offence of false accounting from a category C offence to a category B offence and therefore able to be tried either way.

These are the contents of the Bill together with the proposed committee stage amendments. I understand that there may be some apprehension about the nature of the power to commit for sentence by the magistrate. I would, however, point to the fact that this has been in operation in the UK for some 20 years and not caused any undue difficulty that I am aware of. I would also advert to the fact that if we incorporate the provision for practice directions to be given by the chief justice, the whole matter will be under judicial control.

There are some circumstances where the gravity of a matter only emerges at the end of the day. In these circumstances, it may be right to have the ability to refer such a case to the Grand Court. In addition, it may also be that the accused himself wants matters to be taken into account and there is the final position of the summary offence occasioning a breach of a Grand Court order which would make sense in terms of disposal of all matters in relation to the individual at the same time by the grand court.

The other measures I think are self-explanatory. If Members have any questions or issues, I will try to deal with those in the course of the summing up.

Thank you.

The Speaker: The question is that a Bill entitled, The Criminal Procedure Code (Amendment) Bill, 2001 be given a second reading. The Motion is open to debate.

For Members' information, the green paper circulated to me is the paper that was withdrawn. That is not the one we are debating. I would ask that Members refer to the white paper, which says, "A Law may be cited as the Criminal Procedure (Amendment) Law, 2001."

The Floor is open to debate. The Second Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. Alden M. McLaughlin, Jr.: Thank you.

Before commencing my debate on this important Bill, I would like to express my gratitude to the Honourable Second Official Member for giving Members the opportunity to consult with him and express our concerns about clause 2 of the Bill.

I gather from his remarks in moving the Bill that he has taken on board all of my concerns. I should also point out at the beginning, for the benefit of the draftsmen, in the Memorandum of Objects and Reasons, the paragraph that refers to the objects of clause 2. It indicates that this amendment is to empower the Summary Court to commit an accused person to the Grand Court for sentencing, which I think is a bit misleading. Clause 2, in fact, proceeds on the premise that there has been a plea of guilty, or a finding of guilt, so at that point, when the Summary Court would commit to the Grand Court for sentencing you would be dealing with a convicted individual and not an accused person.

My concern in relation to this proposed amendment arose mainly because in the beginning I was unable to perceive the rationale for the proposed amendment. As the Honourable Second Official Member outlined, in these islands there are three categories of offence: Category A cases which can be tried only on indictment and relate to very serious matters such as murder, rape and the like. Secondly, Category B cases which can be tried either in the Summary Court or the Grand Court on the election of either by the accused or the Crown. Thirdly, Category C offences, which can only be tried summarily in the Magistrate's Court.

I had some difficulty initially in understanding why, if the accused and the Crown chose to have a matter disposed of in Summary Court, and having pleaded guilty there (where there is a sentencing limit, except in relation to drug offences, of four years), why at the end of the process should the accused be subjected to the possibility of having this matter elevated to the Grand Court where a greater sentence could be imposed? It really was that principal concern that motivated my consultation with the Honourable Second Official Member.

As he indicated, he has seen the force of that concern, which was also expressed by the Elected Member for East End. As a result, we have a notice of the committee stage amendments circulated. This limits the circumstances in which this provision can be applied to situations that are triable in either the Summary Court or the Grand Court, that is B offences. This is further limited to cases involving violent or sexual conduct, save where there is a breach of an order of the Grand Court. In those circumstances the Summary Court would have the jurisdiction to commit that matter, notwithstanding the offences of a summary nature, to the Grand Court for disposal.

With those concerns having been addressed and those limitations having been placed on the provision, I am able to support that aspect of the Bill. Indeed, having spoken also with the Solicitor General, I can see circumstances in which both the Crown and the accused person, or the counsel for the accused, could proceed to elect trial in Summary Court on the basis that this was not an overly serious matter. During the course of the trial and evidence adduced, it becomes apparent that there are very aggravating features to the particular offence. For instance, in the case of assault occasioning actual bodily harm. During the course of the trial it becomes apparent that the injury to the virtual complainant is significantly more serious than initially perceived by the Crown. One could see why in those circumstances the magistrate might feel their ability to only sentence to a maximum of four years would be inadequate to deal with the gravity of the offence.

All in all, I am now satisfied, given the proposed amendments to this Bill which will occur in committee stage, that the amendment is warranted, that it is not oppressive as I had earlier perceived, and that it should command the support of Members of this Honourable House.

I can indicate without going into the details (as the Honourable Second Official Member has adequately addressed these) of the other proposed amendments to the Law contained in this Bill. I give those proposed amendments my support as well.

Thank you.

The Speaker: The Third Elected Member for George Town.

Dr. Frank S. McField: I suppose if laws were to be made by lawyers and judges alone, there would be no need for people like me, who obviously have no legal background. The reason why we have decided to submit ourselves to a social contract is because as human beings we feel that even the technicians who deal with the legalistic issues will remember that in the development and advance of these issues, we have to take into consideration what people will allow themselves to be subjected to, or what people will submit themselves to.

I see the changing of laws as an evolution of the social contract. Therefore, it is always important to pause and reflect on what the changes might be able to achieve, whether or not they will make that relationship healthy or whether it will retrogress the inherent trust which people must have in those who make the laws and in those who administer justice through these laws. There is no justice without law! God forbid, we should have to rely on the conscience of persons in those professions.

Courts are very expensive institutions. When we go there we have advocates to speak to the judges on our behalf and we have to have the money to be able to pay. If we do not have that, we are in lots of trouble. The advocates will not go in to address the honourable privileged judges unless they can get their piece of the action as well. Those of us who have studied history know how this system has evolved. Though we have great trust in it, we need to trust it like Americans trust the Constitution of the United States of America—as long as it does not suppress their inalienable rights.

My experience in seeing magistrates operate in England is that usually in a lot of cases they are not trained persons, they are not trained in Law. They have clerks that sit next to them and give them the kind of legal advice they need in order to make correct legal rulings. Magistrates are conceived as having an additional function because of the common-law concept existing within British jurisprudence.

Here in the Cayman Islands we do not sit magistrates on our Benches without experience in most cases. The question could therefore be, why is it that we cannot change the sentence the magistrates can make and move that up to be more than four years, rather than continuing to have that kind of class division saying the magistrates can go this far and the Grand Court judges are able to take it from there?

There is a certain amount of trust that we give a magistrate in order that the magistrate can no longer impose sentences greater than four years. Also, there is a certain amount that we entrust in the Grand Court system where the judges are supposed so be more learned. We in Cayman have employed magistrates, and we see that we have many here... Judge Ramsay-Hale would be a good example of a magistrate who, when you listen to her rulings and her deliberations, you know you could trust her to be able to sentence persons for longer periods than four years if necessary.

Although the UK might have given us the experience in terms of the change whereby when we come to the end of a case and guilt has been proven and the magistrate feels society would be best protected by a stiffer sentence. The fact that they are limited to the four years would mean that they would be allowed to send it to the Grand Court and the Grand Court would therefore . . . I think I am understanding the Honourable. Second Official Member correctly when he says the Grand Court would then have the option to consider whether or not it took the case and if there was an occasion for a stiffer sentence. That would mean that the Grand Court should actually try the case again. I am thinking, if that is the case, that we are spending more money to achieve a result we might achieve simply by moving the sentence maximum up in Summary Court.

If the Grand Court judges are not going to try the case again and are just going to take the recommendations from the magistrate in Summary Court and make the additional sentence based on those recommendations, is that fair?

If when the Second Official Member replies he would say if it calls for the case to be passed on and be tried again, or if it would be that the Grand Court judge would look at the recommendations and notes of the trial and make a decision based on that.

I still think that there needs to be more attention paid to the part talking about longer sentences so that we are not only talking about longer sentences regarding certain sexual offences. That is, we are also talking about restructuring the judiciary in such a way as to allow for longer sentences to be possible in cases where the magistrate feels he or she cannot impose more than the maximum four years, and where the Honourable Second Official Member would be saying that experience has proved that society could be best protected with longer sentences. The philosophy of longer sentences seems to be running through the threads of these amendments.

I am saying there could be cases, I am agreeing there might be cases where these considerations are to be made and could be made and if made could benefit society. However, there should be so few cases that the increase in the maximum sentences used by the magistrate would be one way of rectifying this.

The other way would mean that the prosecution in certain cases should be able to bring its case with full knowledge and that the knowledge of the case or the offender and the danger of the offender to society should not be something that is explored in the prosecution but in the investigation stage.

If we are talking about using the courts to substitute for policing and the role in which policing plays in safeguarding and protecting the public; and I believe we need to concentrate a bit more on improving training and the efficiency of that institution. If the case is brought to the judge and it takes the judge to decide whether or not this individual is a serious threat to society, something is wrong. That should be detected at the policing stage, not at the trial stage.

Again, if we find that the category of the crime means that it must be tried in Summary Court but it would not receive the type of penalty that we want it to but will in Grand Court, then we should change the category of the crimes.

I am not really sort of in favour of just going through the reforms because they exist in other jurisdictions. I am not interested in prolonging the length of time a person must spend in the courts being tried, because it costs them. We must be considerate of what poor people can pay to defend themselves in court, because they, unfortunately, are the persons who end up in the courts in most of these instances.

I feel that when the Honourable Second Official Member gets up to reply, he might very well be in the position to clarify these questions. However, I take offence to the fact that somehow the changes in our systems are not being justified by consensus, not just in this Parliament but more so outside this Parliament.

As a result of the reflection of what is being done in other jurisdictions like the UK; where I suspect the reason this particular problem is handled in this way in terms of making the changes is simply because of the way magistrates and Magistrate Courts, Summary Courts, have been conceived within their legal system. Since they work differently here, I believe it would be appropriate to find some amendment to this criminal Penal Code procedure. Those would reflect the actual structure we have and the fact that we do have competent magistrates on the bench here in the Cayman Islands. That will probably remain the case for many years to come.

We could definitely take advantage of their knowledge, save ourselves some money because the courts cost the people a lot of money and we have to pay taxes for the court. Although we want justice and efficiency in terms of getting offenders into trial, into prison and out again, we want to make sure that the courts do not become oppressive to the people simply because they cost so much to maintain. That is about all that I will say at this point regarding this because I believe there are a couple of other matters I would want to talk to, but I do not want to 'steal the thunder' from the First Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman. If it is okay, we could go to lunch now to give her a little more time to contemplate.

The Speaker: We shall suspend proceedings until 2.30.

PROCEEDINGS SUSPENDED AT 12.58 PM

PROCEEDINGS RESUMED AT 2.35 PM

The Speaker: Please be seated.

Debate continues on the Second Reading of The Criminal Procedure Code (Amendment) Bill, 2001 be given a second reading. The Floor is open to debate.

The Elected Member for East End.

Mr. V. Arden McLean: Having listened to the Second Elected Member for George Town articulate his position, I also had some concerns and discussions with the Honourable Second Official Member. Besides those, I still do not feel overly comfortable with this Bill, even though he has given us the assurance that it will be somewhat restricted to particular areas and offences. Particularly in the case of sexual and violent offences and in the case of the breach of a Grand Court order and then an offence committed thereafter which would constitute a 'C class' offence.

My initial concerns were that the judicial system would be getting a double whammy out of the individual. That I found quite unfair because if we have given jurisdiction over a particular offence to a magistrate, then we must trust the magistrate's judgment. That was my initial position and my initial thoughts on it.

Having heard the Second Official Member, and the Solicitor General whom I also consulted with, it appears that there are other issues they have been running into problems with, particularly if the magistrate had no idea of previous offences. Once the accused is found guilty that is when the magistrate has access to previous offences that the individual was found guilty for and served sentence. It may very well be that there is a need to apply a much larger sentence in the interest of the safety of the general public which is the reason for the laws.

However, as the Second Official Member said, it is for 'B class' offences anyway. My deep concern is that because the prosecutor and the defendant have the right to elect to go to Summary Court or Grand Court, I think that is a position where the prosecutor has the onus placed upon him to oppose the defendant electing to go to Summary Court.

I would like to think that the prosecutor would have more relevant information to decide whether or not this individual is dangerous to society, or the chances of his recommitting such acts. Then the prosecutor should be very diligent in those areas and ensure that he applies for the grand court trial. We cannot in all fairness allow the prosecutor to have that choice and then give the choice to the magistrate again in all cases to send that convicted person up for a higher sentence by the grand court.

My big concern is: What kind of commitment can we get that this provision will be exercised judiciously? There is no forthcoming commitment. We cannot decide here for a magistrate whether the magistrate is going to exercise it judiciously or a prosecutor.

I hear the Second Official Member when he says it will be for violent and sexual offences. Well, even that is a comfort. However by the same token, who is to say that this is going to be the end of this process? I have heard from the Solicitor General. He drew an illustration for us of an individual causing grievous bodily harm with a baseball bat by hitting someone in the head. It is not of a serious nature while the case is going on and then the judge postpones sentencing to get information relating to the victim and finds out it is of a much more serious nature. That is, in cases where an individual may have elected to go to Summary Court and pleaded guilty.

I can appreciate that after the individual has pleaded guilty there is reason to believe that the case is more serious than originally thought. To some extent, I agree with the Third Elected Member for George Town when he spoke about increasing the jurisdiction of the magistrate in sentencing. The problem with that is that we would not have the situation where the Magistrate would do one class of sentencing and the Grand Court the other because they would all have the same sentencing ability.

I believe there has to be some separation, particularly when the cases in the majority are for poor people who cannot afford to elect to go up to the Grand Court where they may get an opportunity to be heard by their peers. Therefore, they have to rely heavily on the Magistrate's Court. In a lot of instances it may be that the accused decides to go because he knows there is a lesser sentence. However, there is also the probability that he or she would have elected to go to Grand Court because of the chance to be heard by his peers and might get off much easier. There has to be a line drawn where the magistrate can rule over a domain that it should not be questioned.

I do not know how it is going to go across with the magistrate in regard to their abilities. They have all these abilities unlike the magistrates in the English courts. These are all qualified experienced lawyers who have elected to sit on the Bench. What will it say of their abilities? What will it say to the general public? That we do not trust the magistrates to enforce the Laws legislated? I have some concerns about it, even though it is going to be restricted to certain areas and certain offences.

I would like to publicly say that I trust the Solicitor General, that he will use this in a most judicious manner. However, he is not the only one involved. There are other people who may very well misuse it for their own benefit, their own whim and fancy because they overlook having the case carried to the Grand Court.

I have some concerns, and I trust the Honourable Second Official Member will address those when he replies. On section 106A concerning an indictment in the Grand Court, where instead of a preliminary inquiry we can make application to go straight to the grand court, the Second Official Member spoke of instances where visitors come to the country and commit an offence, and then want to leave and get it over with in a hurry. Unfortunately, I did not get the opportunity to discuss this with the solicitor general or with the Second Official Member, but I have some concerns about that too.

We heard of a recent case, and I know the Second Official Member made a statement in this House in the last meeting concerning erosion of the trust the public must have in the judicial system. This one I fear may very well add to the erosion because in the previous one where court was convened on a Sunday... I understand the visitor coming to this country and wanting to have a speedy trial. Morally I believe that is wrong. Residents who live here year round, Caymanian or otherwise, have to wait for due process. I dare say if this is an attempt to correct one individual, or a few individuals, this is not the way to do it. The way to do it is to inform those individuals of their error as opposed to legislating laws to assist them. We cannot afford for a few individuals to contribute to the erosion of what the general public sees as justice, and then come to legislate laws to assist those few individuals and justify their actions. I have some concerns with that and I trust that the Second Official Member will discuss it in his reply.

I think we all subscribe to maintaining the confidence in the system. If we do not have that then the system is useless. We must all have sufficient confidence in the system, which we have had, that justice will be served. It may not be necessarily swift, but it will be served. This is ensuring that it is swift, but in my opinion giving the opportunity to correct previous mistakes. I do not know if that is in keeping with confidence in the system. We all heard the uproar in this country concerning that particular case and I trust this will not add to that.

I would like to hear the Second Official Member address some of the issues that came by way of this Bill. I am sure that the Solicitor General will undertake to ensure that this will be carried out in a most judicious manner. We cannot swear for the judges or anyone else, but if there is an open door, one has an invitation. We have to ensure that that door is never open too wide to give the prosecutor an unfair advantage, leaving the defendant grasping for straws. Even after he has been accused he should be presumed innocent.

I look forward to the Second Official Member addressing those concerns I have.

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman.

Mrs. Julianna O'Connor-Connolly: Thank you.

I rise to make my short contribution to the Bill presently before this House. Much of what needed to be said has already been said. Nevertheless, I wish to speak to a few points.

In looking at the Memorandum of Objects and Reasons, particularly clause 2, although I note that an attempt has been made with notice of committee stage amendments, I still wish to speak briefly on this aspect.

It says that "Clause 2 seeks to amend section 6 of the principal Law to empower a Summary

Court [or what we more commonly know as the Magistrate's Court] to commit an accused person to the Grand Court for sentencing where the Summary Court is of the opinion that greater punishment or a longer sentence should be imposed to protect the public from serious harm by the accused person than the court has power to impose."

I note there is an attempt for a proviso under the committee stage amendment that would limit it to offences triable either way and by also saying the person should be 18 years or older. That takes care of the normal exception of the children not being caught up in this provision by a further attempt to restrict it by having it applicable to the case of violent or sexual offences.

Although those attempts are commendable, I am still of the view and subject to being further pursued by my learned friend, the Second Official Member. However, this can be in some way interpreted as either limiting or to an extent ousting the jurisdiction of the Magistrate's Court.

I would tend to take the point of the Third Elected Member for George Town in that it is my understanding that in the majority of the cases the magistrates in the UK are slightly different. Presently, the three magistrates that we have are all very capable persons, all trained attorneys. I believe I am correct in so saying.

If there is a situation where it is felt there are circumstances that the penalty might not reflect the public outcry and in this case the violent or sexual offences, then perhaps one may wonder why we were not attempting to increase those powers if at all possible.

I would not want to acquiesce to any position or concept where it would be seen that the magistrates are not capable of dealing with it, or that we would not wish to give them extended powers. Perhaps the Honourable Second Official Member would say whether or not the judicial system, be it the Grand Court or the magistrates were briefed or asked for opinions by the way or have they consented to this. Perhaps I would be even more persuaded of that when the actual vote comes. As we all know this is a very small community and the courts have always been held in an extremely high regard. Anything dealing with liberty and natural justice, I am always willing to err on the side of caution, rather than proceed with haste. I would be grateful for that information.

I note also that the Memorandum of Objects and Reasons goes on to deal with the offence of incest and says, "An attempt by a man to attempt incest will now carry a penalty of seven and five years of imprisonment, depending on the age of the girl." It further goes on to say, "the penalty for incest by a woman has been increased from two to ten years." The five and seven years is dealing with the offence of attempt and the main offence will carry twenty years. However, I just wondered, whether it is equitable now that we have entered into the realm of gender sensitivity in all areas of government and the private sector, to have a woman who would be deemed to have committed incest under section 145 to attract a maximum of ten years, while according to my understanding the male would attract a maximum of twenty years. Perhaps it is softening after many long years for a bit of sympathy on the side of the woman.

Be that as it may, I also have some difficulty and this does not necessarily arise from the pending amendments, but from the actual section as written under the existing Penal Code which dealt with incest by a woman, namely section 145. If I may be permitted to read that, I will so do.

It says, "Any female person of or above the age of 16 years, who permits [and I take this in the literal meaning to be "consents"] her grandfather, father, brother or son to have carnal knowledge of her, knowing him to be her grandfather, father, brother or son as the case may be is guilty of an offence." I wondered if the time had come for an amendment to the word "permits" as that can easily connote consent. As we know, with incest, the element of consent bears no relevance in the majority if not all of the cases. It would make the dilemma even more obvious if it were to be interpreted that the female were the passive person in this type of relationship with her grandfather, father, brother or son, yet by being so affiliated would attract ten years. Perhaps some cleaning up can be done with that in due course.

The other concern I had related to the first schedule; which is now also being sought to be amended by changing the offence of false accounting from a category 'C' to a category 'B' offence. Having taken a few minutes to look into the matter, I spoke to my friend, the Honourable Second Official Member, who expressed his concern that there was an amendment back in 1998 which changed it. I have been unable to find the actual Green Paper that would have set out the memorandum, but I did have a look at the Hansard which did not take it any further, but mainly mentioned the sections in Committee stage.

I also had an opportunity to look at what the Leader of Government Business said when that amendment was coming nearly two years ago. Again, there was nothing forthcoming.

In his summing up, I would be particularly interested to find out why just a short two years ago we sought to change the mode of trial from one category to another and now we are reverting back to the previous position. I would be comforted if I am told it has nothing to do with the abolishment of the common law offences and the Dual Criminality Act and all those other things we have been bombarded with in the past few years. It would certainly make me sleep a bit better tonight if I am told it is just an innocent transfer back to the original mode and nothing less.

Again, I have a concern with the omission, whether by intent or otherwise, in the schedule to the Criminal Procedure Code where we were doing quite nicely making various amendments with increasing the terms of maximum imprisonment. However, when we came to indecency between males, it remained at two years. Perhaps this can be explained away by the fact that there is a pending Motion by the Backbenchers dealing with public indecency. Perhaps it would be more time for consideration, public consultation, so that with this very controversial and perhaps sensitive area in light of the White Paper and Order in Council back in December, that it can be dealt with more expeditiously. If that is the reason, then I have no problem dealing with it in that way.

Having had all those concerns, I also wish to thank the office of the Honourable Second Official Member who obviously had to work some long hours to put these amendments together so soon after the Motion brought by the Backbench. I commend them because, as I said in my contribution to the Penal Code amendments, while it is not a 100 per cent solution to the problems of sexual offences we are faced with in our jurisdiction, but it is another piece of the puzzle in coming to an equitable solution to these matters.

I still believe that now that we have increased the sentences to be more in line with what the public's legitimate expectations are, that we should now look at the existing programmes within the various institutions to ensure that they have been moulded or motivating the inmates once duly incarcerated. When they return (if not there for life) they do so as wholesome individuals who have through the imprisonment and have been somehow reformed. So that they will return devout to our community and not get into the dilemma of the revolving door at Her Majesty's Prison Northward.

Like the Third Elected Member for George Town quite clearly stipulated, it has a cost element that trickles down to the proverbial man on the street. We should take due care to ensure we are getting our money's worth once such persons are incarcerated and that when they come back we will have done all within our power to ensure that these persons would have had a good chance at reformation.

In conclusion, I would say that that does not change my position. If there is at any time a conflict between the punitive element and that of reformation, when it comes to matters that are violent and sexual offences, the reform element must give way to the punitive element so that our community can continue to have ample confidence in our justice system. We are already known worldwide for the integrity it maintains, the job that is carried out in an admirable way by the legal department and the Honourable Second Official Member. It is often not an easy job to not only be able to make the legislation but to also have to see that it is administered. On behalf of my constituents, I wish to thank them for carrying out their duties in a most judicious manner and for effecting safety within our community.

I thank you.

The Speaker: Does any other Member wish to speak? Does any other Member wish to speak? If not, does the Mover wish to exercise his right of reply?

The Honourable Second Official Member.

Hon. David F. Ballantyne: I think I am obliged to reply, Mr. Speaker, and I am quite happy to do so. I am also obliged for the helpful comments that have arisen in response in debate.

It is important to get these matters right, as far as we are able to do so. It will never be perfect, but it will be as good as we can get it. The contributions made in debate and the informal discussions and consultations all helped to serve toward that end.

In particular, I would like to commend the committee stage amendments to the House that have now been circulated and which evidence the absorption by me, the Solicitor General and others of the points made by Members. Including the area of concern of committing persons from the Summary Court to now be limited to only either way offences and only to persons who were not under 18 other than the single instance of a Summary Court conviction for a category C offence which caused a breach of a grand court order where it makes common sense. I submit, to have the Grand Court deal with all those matters rather than the magistrate.

I want to deal with the issue of the competence of the magistrate. This is nothing to do, in my opinion, with the ability of the magistrates, for whom I have the highest regard. They are able judicial officers and they carry out very wide ranging functions. They have sentencing powers which in certain instances can go up to 30 years, if my memory is right, for a second or subsequent drugs offence of a certain kind.

These sentencing powers are very substantial and out of the ordinary. The ordinary and general sentencing power of magistrates at present, are four years. It was increased from two to four not too long ago, within the last few years.

The difficulty arises when the magistrate and I emphasise the magistrate—nothing to do with the Crown. I am representing the Crown as is the Solicitor General and all the law officers who appear in prosecutions. Yes, they have a say as to which court the matter would go into. They can insist that it not go to the Summary Court, that it go to the Grand Court in the sense that it needs the consent of the Crown, it was an either way offence, as well as the accused to go to the Summary Court.

However, no system is perfect. So, no system will necessarily assess in advance the true seriousness of a matter. That may only emerge in the course of proceedings and it may only emerge at the end of the proceedings if, as the Member indicated, the concern arises because of previous convictions, for example. Those are not known to the court until the end of the case because of the presumption of innocence.

Equally, an accused person may ask the court to take other matters that are pending into account. The court may think, 'Well, if I do that, and these other matters in themselves are quite serious and might merit the kind of maximum sentence that I have, my powers are not adequate.' I want to emphasise that the assessment is not by the Crown, not by the Attorney General or the Solicitor General or by Crown counsel. The assessment of whether the powers of the court are adequate is made by the court itself—not on any application by any person. It is not a question of the Crown behaving judiciously in raising this issue, the Crown would not raise it; it would only be if the court itself felt that its powers were inadequate. This is where I come to the point.

I believe and I agree with you that the competence of the magistrates here is every bit as good and probably better than the general level of competence in the UK where lay magistrates are possible. I am not decrying the magistracy in the UK, but I accept that magistrates here are competent. For that reason, they are better qualified to make this assessment than their counterparts would be in the UK. It would be exercised in a discretionary way consistent with their competence.

In addition to that, provision has been made for practice directions to be issued by the Chief Justice to give guidance to magistrates as to the way in which these powers are to be exercised.

Let us assume that the magistrate gets it right, and it is right that a longer sentence should be imposed. The Grand Court may agree or disagree would impose a sentence. If that sentence is in anyway unfair, there would be a right of appeal against sentence to the court of appeal. So, it does not just end there. We are talking about a system not individual parts. Therefore, I feel reasonably confident that with these amendments and I accept that they are appropriate. I would not have put them forward if I did not think that and in response to concerns that have been mentioned I think we have a reasonably safe basis upon which to proceed. It relies, as you do, on the competence of the magistrates.

This is a matter for them, not for anyone else. If a magistrate does not think that their powers are insufficient (if you do not mind the double negative), the magistrate will simply deal with the matter, only if the magistrate is of the opinion that the powers are insufficient. I should say that it is not just—I want to make it clear—for violent or sexual offences, that is one limb of it; it is also the offence, or the combination of offences, is such that the magistrate feels the powers are inadequate. I hope I made that clear. I just want to make sure I do make that clear in case there is any misunderstanding.

In the UK, and I am not going to hold that up as necessarily the rule, where this usually happens is where the accused asks for other matters to be taken into account or previous convictions make it necessary, or the nature of the crime, the violent or serious nature of the crime as illustrated in the examples to which reference has been made. Yes, you could increase the powers of the magistrate, the general sentencing powers. However, that is already been done and I think, as the Member from East End indicated, it is necessary to maintain a distinction between the Magistrate Court sentencing powers and the powers of the Grand Court. However, this is not and I want to emphasise this, an issue of lacking any confidence in the competence of magistrates. It is precisely because we have confidence in their competence that the issue may be safely left to them. This is not a case of ousting jurisdiction.

The Magistrate will continue to make findings of guilt or innocence in the particular matter. The factual issues of the case will continue to be decided by the magistrate. The only issue the Magistrate may refer to is the issue of what is an appropriate sentence and even then only when the magistrate considers that the magistrate's powers are not adequate.

No, in response to what was said earlier, the Grand Court will not try the matter again. The person has already been tried. That would be double jeopardy. However, the judge will decide on the sentence.

As I have said, the safeguards in the system are such that there is always a right of appeal. That is what we fall back on when things do not go the way they should go. The way the system is structured is that the right of appeal favours the accused. We have marked time on another measure for that very reason.

There may be merit in considering a general further increase in the powers of the magistrate; it is a matter that we should not lose sight of and consider another day, given the competence of the magistrate. As it happens, I understand that at least 80 per cent of the business is handled by magistrates. They have the heavy end of it as it is. Increasing their powers would also, possibly at least increase that proportion.

It is always the right of the accused in an either way matter to go to the Grand Court. It should not be a matter of money that they are not entitled to go there. Legally it is available and as I understand it would be available subject to verification in all indictable matters. So, it ought not to be the case and if it is, it would merit investigation that a person could not afford to elect to go to the Grand Court on a given issue. The right to jury trial is a right that the Law protects as well and it is for that reason that the accused has the right to elect.

The election for the Summary Court is a right that the accused has, but in conjunction with the Crown. I understand the desire to have a line drawn between the magistrate and a rule that it cannot be questioned, but what I would say to that is that the findings of the magistrate are not going to be questioned. A finding of innocence would not be questioned; a finding of guilt would not be questioned. It would only be the level of the sentence if the magistrate herself felt that her powers were insufficient for one of the stated reasons to deal with it.

So, I am glad to hear that confidence exists in the law officers of the Crown. It is extremely important for the public confidence that that should be the case. We attempt to uphold the offices which we fill during the tenure of those offices in a way which befits the system and to act in support of the judicial system because to that extent we are part of it. However, the power to commit has nothing to do with any law officer as I have said.

The law officers have their part in helping to decide which court a case should be heard. However they are not omniscient, they do not know all the answers and at the end of the day we submit to the judiciary, all of us. That is why we have a judiciary and they are in the position to decide.

Although the Magistrate's Court has certain exceptions, the general rule is a four-year sentencing power. It is not for the Crown to apply to have that power declared insufficient. It is for the court. It is not the competence of the magistrates; in fact we are relying on their competence to make the appropriate assessment. In my submission, they are less likely to use that power because they are competent unless it is necessary. That would be my position.

If they are as qualified as they are, which I agree they are, then they are better equipped to make that assessment in the first place. It is only if we consider their powers inadequate. The magistrate still decides on guilt or innocence.

I want to touch briefly on the voluntary bill of indictment. There may be some understandable confusion about this issue that I would like to clarify. This has nothing to do with when courts sit, or when matters are heard except in the sense that it has to do with avoiding a preliminary enquiry where a preliminary enquiry is either unnecessary or is not desired by the accused.

A preliminary enquiry is designed to assess whether in fact there is a case to answer. If the accused accepts that there is a case to answer and wants the case brought before the Grand Court earlier than would otherwise happen, that cannot be done at the present time. This would allow that to happen.

The reason it cannot be done is that the commitment by the Magistrate is to the first sitting of the next sitting of the Grand Court—that might be weeks away, but it might be months away. The individual might want to have his matter dealt with. This is a procedure that would allow that to happen, but under judicial control. A judge would have to be satisfied that on the statements there was a case to answer and this matter should proceed in that fashion.

I do not believe it is for the Crown to make a submission that a matter should be submitted. That is not what the Law provides for. I believe if the court itself wished to have some guidance; it could seek that kind of guidance and in doing so would have to seek it even-handedly from both Crown and defence. I think if that was the case, the Crown and the defence would have an obligation to give a view. However, there is no application procedure here and there is no means of making such a submission. That is why it is left to the court and to the court alone.

I believe that in the UK system the magistrate may call out for some assistance and guidance and the court is always entitled to do that. Everyone appearing in a court, and I do not mean to be using the opportunity to do anything other than clarify what happens; everyone appearing in a court in a legal capacity is an officer of the court. Their primary obligation is to assist that court even though they may be representing the Crown or the defence. Their first duty is to the court and if the court needs assistance in carrying out its function then the court is entitled to have it. However, I think that in matters of this kind we can reasonably rely on the competence of the magistrate and the exercise of the magistrate's discretion.

As I was indicating, the voluntary bill of indictment has nothing to do with whether a court sits at the usual time which in fact in the instance referred to was a bail application. This is about a preliminary enquiry, which is the normal process in which a case on indictment will go to assess whether there is a case to answer. It can take a considerable length of time in front of the magistrate. Some recent matters in January of this year took six weeks in front of one magistrate. I am not suggesting that is necessarily a case of this kind, but I am just indicating that it takes time to go through this process and also there is a cost attached to it.

If an accused person wishes to avoid either the time or cost and accepts that there is a case against him, he would have a means of having his case expedited and heard. It does not mean he is giving up. He can still go to trial. It does not mean it is just a guilty plea in the Grand Court, but it could mean that. It allows for that possibility and introduces flexibility which exists elsewhere and has proved to operate to the benefit of the system and not to anyone's disadvantage.

I hope I have been able to cover the points that were raised. I think I may have omitted to say something about the false accounting issue. I do not wish to go into the history of this, but in 1998 it was rendered a category C offence, which made it triable only in Summary Court. It is usually tried along with charges for theft. Charges for theft are either way and because false accounting is now a summary offence, it cannot be tried along with a charge of theft in the Grand Court. To make it either way would allow it to be charged and dealt with in the Grand Court.

On the issue of indecency between males, I do not plan to add to the considerable debate that has and no doubt will continue to run on such matters. However, I did take account of the fact that there is a motion concerning public decency to be debated on the Floor of this House. I realise that recent legislative impositions have perhaps caused the question to be asked if there is another or better way of doing this, and I am quite willing to add my voice to that discussion.

I think that rather than seeking to increase penalties in this area without looking at the substantive issues would be only to deal with part of the question and the First Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman is quite correct in saying this is not unintentional, it is expected that arising out of the Motion there may be a necessity to examine the provisions in the Law and to produce constructive and positive measures that will not offend human rights, but will more importantly, or as importantly, uphold the public decency legislation and standards of the Cayman Islands. The opportunity was taken to increase the penalty in relation to indecent assault on a boy under 14, but that is because there was such a glaring omission to leave that at five years, almost in the same category as incest.

The last topic that I want to say something about is ousting jurisdiction of the Magistrate's Court. I think I would look upon this measure coming back to the subject that has occasioned most discussions, as investing jurisdiction in the Magistrate. It is giving confidence to the magistrate to be able to decide whether or not in the particular circumstances the powers are adequate. I have every confidence that the magistrates will use these powers in their appropriate way and will be guided by the practised directions the court. The Chief Justice will no doubt issue in due course.

I am grateful to you for allowing me the opportunity to wind up this Bill. I am grateful to Members for their intelligent and constructive expressions of concern and suggestions. I trust we have a basis on which Members feel we can proceed.

Thank you.

The Speaker: The question is that a Bill entitled, The Criminal Procedure Code (Amendment) Bill 2001, be given a Second Reading. Those in favour please say Aye. Those against, No.

AYES.

The Speaker: The Ayes have it.

AGREED: THE CRIMINAL PROCEDURE CODE (AMENDMENT) BILL 2001 GIVEN A SECOND READING.

The Speaker: Would this be a convenient time to take the afternoon break? We shall suspend for 15 minutes.

PROCEEDINGS SUSPENDED AT 3.35 PM

PROCEEDINGS RESUMED AT 4.03 PM

The Speaker: Please be seated. Bills, Second Readings.

THE POLICE (AMENDMENT) (INTIMATE SAMPLES) BILL, 2001

The Deputy Clerk: The Police (Amendment) (Intimate Samples) Bill, 2001.

The Speaker: The Honourable Second Official Member.

Hon. David Ballantyne: I rise to move that a Bill entitled The Police (Amendment) (Intimate Samples) Bill, 2001, be given a second reading.

The Speaker: Do you wish to speak to it?

Hon. David F. Ballantyne: Thank you.

On the face of it, this is a relatively straightforward Bill which, as the Memorandum of Objects and Reasons states, seeks to amend the Police Law (1995 Revision) to clarify the Law relating to the taking of blood, saliva, et cetera from a suspect. Section 25 of the Law is to be amended to provide for the taking of both intimate and non-intimate samples.

If we have regard to the Law, there are two definitions that are to be added to section 2 of the Law. The first definition is the definition of "intimate sample" which means a dental impression, or a sample of blood, seamen or other tissue fluid, urine or pubic hair, or a swab taken from a person's body orifice other than the mouth.

"Non-intimate sample" meaning a sample of hair other than pubic hair, which includes hair plucked from the root, a swab taken from a nail, or under a nail, saliva, or a footprint or similar impression of any part of a person's body other than a part of his hand.

The net effect will be to make it clear that any police officer may cause to be taken for use in the investigation of a crime and recorded in the registry of the force photographs, descriptions, measurements, intimate samples, non-intimate samples, fingerprints, palm prints, or other physical specimens of any person in lawful custody for any offence punishable by imprisonment whether such person has been convicted or not. On the acquittal of any person from whom samples have been taken, such samples are to be destroyed or handed over to the person concerned.

There is a further consequential amendment that except for samples of urine, intimate samples or dental impressions may be taken only by a registered medical or dental practitioner as appropriate. I think the Bill is self explanatory. The purpose of it is to ensure that the police have the full array of forensic testing available to them, including identification by DNA testing and there is no question in my submission that any of these powers are excessive as intimate samples require to be taken by only persons qualified so to do by the medical profession.

Accordingly, I submit the Bill for consideration by the House.

The Speaker: The question is that a Bill entitled The Police (Amendment) (Intimate Samples) Bill, 2001, be given a second reading. The Motion is open to debate. Does any Member wish to speak? Does any Member wish to speak?

The First Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman.

Mrs. Julianna Y. O'Connor-Connolly: Mr. Speaker, looking at the time of the day and taking into consideration that two or three Members of the Backbench wish to speak to this Motion, I wonder if more time could be given to go through it and discuss it with the Honourable Second Official Member. Subject to the Leader of Government, would it be in order to adjourn or move to some other business at this stage seeing that this is a very significant piece of amendment?

The Speaker: I am in the hands of the House.

The Honourable Minister for Planning, Communications and Works.

Hon. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Thank you, Mr Speaker. The Government has heard what the First Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman has said and certainly there would be no desire on our part not to allow Members to express via the debate their opinions on the Bill. So, with your permission, Sir, I would move the adjournment of this Honourable House until 10 o'clock tomorrow morning.

ADJOURNMENT

The Speaker: The question is that this Honourable House do now adjourn until 10 o'clock am tomorrow. Those in favour, please say Aye. Those against, No.

AYES.

The Speaker: The Ayes have it.

AT 4.05 PM THE HOUSE STOOD ADJOURNED
UNTIL 10 AM FRIDAY, 29 JUNE 2001.

OFFICIAL HANSARD REPORT
FRIDAY
29 JUNE 2001
10.25 AM
Seventh Sitting

[Prayers read by the Honourable Third Official Member Responsible for the Portfolio of Finance and Economic Development]

The Speaker: Proceedings are resumed.
Item 2 on today's Order Paper: Reading by the Speaker of Messages and Announcements.

READING BY THE HONOURABLE
SPEAKER OF MESSAGES
AND ANNOUNCEMENTS

APOLOGIES

The Speaker: I have received apologies for late arrival from the Honourable Minister responsible for the Ministry of Tourism, Environment and Transport.

I have agreed to recognise the Second Elected Member for George Town.

STATEMENT BY MEMBER

RE: YOUNG PEOPLE

Mr. Alden M. McLaughlin, Jr.: Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

I thought that I should say a few words this morning in relation to our young people. As we all know, over the course of recent months, there has been much concern within the community about what is happening with our young people, the breakdown in discipline and demonstration of grossly antisocial behaviour. Most of us in the community have been left worried, frightened and almost helpless.

On Wednesday of this week, Members of this Honourable House and others witnessed a presentation hosted by the Honourable Minister responsible for Education, Human Resources and Culture and other members of the Education Department and Ministry. Collectively, we all left that event very, very depressed. There were a lot of ugly, harsh truths articulated, which needed to be articulated. However, that is not really the purpose of these words.

Last night a number of us, including the Leader of Government Business; the Honourable Chief Secretary; Dr. Frank S. McField, the Third Elected Member for George Town; the Permanent Secretary for Education and I, had the privilege of attending the graduation ceremony of the Red Bay Primary School. In the midst of all of these discouraging events that have transpired and the helplessness we have all felt, I thought that where there is a ray of hope, we need to acknowledge that. I must say that I do not believe I have ever been so impressed with such a group of 70 young children (11 years old or thereabouts) who were so accomplished, so enthusiastic, full of promise and, very importantly, so very well behaved.

It left me and the others who witnessed that very delightful occasion with renewed hope. Certainly, in my case, it has reinforced my commitment that we must do whatever we can to root out the problems and antisocial behaviour demonstrated by a very small percentage of the student and young people population in this country. Therefore, the tremendous promise these young people and others like them have demonstrated can come to fruition.

I thought that where there is good, where we see demonstrated evidence that the young people in this country are still by and large a good, decent, hard-working group, we need to acknowledge that as well.

I thank you for this occasion to do so, Sir.

The Speaker: Moving on to Questions to Honourable Ministers and Members. Question 67 is standing in the name of the Fourth Elected Member for West Bay.

QUESTIONS TO HONOURABLE
MINISTERS AND MEMBERS

QUESTION NO. 67

(Postponed Thursday 28 June 2001)

No. 67: Mr. Cline A. Glidden Jr. asked the Honourable Minister responsible for the Ministry of Education, Human Resources and Culture what is the projected enrolment at the Government Primary Schools for the upcoming school year.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for Education, Human Resources and Culture.

Hon. Roy Bodden: The projected September 2001 enrolment at Government Primary Schools, as of 13 June 2001 is as follows:

| Primary School     | Present Enrolment | School Leavers | Projection | Projected Enrolment |
|--------------------|-------------------|----------------|------------|---------------------|
| John A Cumber      | 456               | 75             | 80         | 461                 |
| George Town        | 448               | 68             | 100        | 480                 |
| Savannah           | 307               | 54             | 57         | 310                 |
| Red Bay            | 447               | 71             | 124        | 500                 |
| Bodden Town        | 138               | 23             | 25         | 140                 |
| East End           | 129               | 22             | 10         | 117                 |
| North Side         | 75                | 9              | 15         | 81                  |
| West End           | 53                | 7              | 14         | 60                  |
| Creek              | 77                | 5              | 8          | 80                  |
| Spot Bay           | 48                | 9              | 8          | 47                  |
| Little Cayman      |                   |                |            |                     |
| Education Services | 2                 | -              | 4          | 6                   |
| Total:      | 2,180      | 343     | 445 | 2,282        |

SUPPLEMENTARIES

The Speaker: The Fourth Elected Member for West Bay.

Mr. Cline A. Glidden Jr.: I would like to thank the Minister for his very comprehensive answer. We see some of those primary schools creeping up to the 500 mark. Can the Honourable Minister say if we have a maximum operational level for the primary schools? If so, how close are these numbers to those maximums?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for Education, Human Resources and Culture.

Hon. Roy Bodden: I thank the Member for bringing that to the awareness of the House. He is correct in raising alarm bells about these statistics. It gives me the opportunity to say that time is running out if it has not already expired for persons interested in having their children registered to attend Red Bay School for this upcoming school year. We want to cut off the ceiling at 500. At this particular time, we have three schools, Red Bay, George Town Primary and John A. Cumber, hovering at or around the 500 mark, which is the cut-off point for us in the education establishment.

We are aware of this and we are monitoring it as we do not wish for enrolment to rise above 500.

The Speaker: The Fourth Elected Member for West Bay.

Mr. Cline A. Glidden Jr.: Seeing that is the case and one of those schools has already reached its ideal maximum, what alternate measures are available for students that might not be enrolled as yet?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for Education, Human Resources and Culture.

Hon. Roy Bodden: We have a number of alternatives. In the immediate, what the education authorities will be forced to encourage parents to do is register them in another district. The second more ideal but longer-term objective is being addressed in the medium-term financial strategy where we are making provisions for additional schools on a priority basis.

Members will no doubt realise that there are plans for the building and establishment of another primary school to be sited somewhere in the Spotts area. The Ministry is currently working on that. The original site has not got planning approval but we are investigating an alternate site where government owns land adjacent to Patrick's Island with a view to siting the school on what we consider the best site, bearing in mind demographics, accessibility, et cetera.

On the more immediate basis, we have added classrooms to Red Bay, Savannah and Bodden Town to accommodate the complement beginning in September of this year.

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman.

Mrs. Julianna Y. O'Connor-Connolly: Can the Honourable Minister say how the projections are carried out? Is it based on the actual enrolment to date, taken together with the average over the past number of years? Can he also give a breakdown of what number of this represents the Caymanian student population?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for Education, Human Resources and Culture.

Hon. Roy Bodden: These statistics are based on actual registrations plus a combination of our knowledge of the demographics based on past experience.

We have no statistical data available at this time as to what percentage is Caymanian. I would only say to Members that my information is that the vast majority of the students enrolled in the public school system in the Cayman Islands are Caymanians. I examined the statistics for enrolment in the private schools and was surprised to find the same thing obtained there also with perhaps the exception of one case.

The Speaker: The Elected Member for East End.

Mr. V. Arden McLean: I noted that the Minister did not read into the record the East End projected enrolment.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for Education, Human Resources and Culture.

Hon. Roy Bodden: I accept responsibility for that. It was purely my omission.

East End enrolment is 129; school leavers 22; projected intake 10; for a projected enrolment of 117.

I can assure the Member that all these schools named all hold equal significance in my estimation but East End is more equal by virtue of the fact that I spent five of the best years of my life there as principal. So, it is no slight on East End.

The Speaker: The Elected Member for East End.

Mr. V. Arden McLean: I am glad to hear that. I know he spent some very good years up there in the beginning of his teaching career.

The Minister said he did not have the breakdown of Caymanian versus non-Caymanian in the schools. Can the Honourable Minister explain how it is possible that we do not have a handle on what is going on in the schools with regard to that data?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for Education, Human Resources and Culture.

Hon. Roy Bodden: We have that information available. It is just that it is not here with me at this time. However, I can get it and bring it to Members on Wednesday. In the meantime, of the total government and private school population of 6,234, Caymanian students accounted for 84 percent. This statistic ranges from about 92 percent Caymanian population in government schools to 74 percent Caymanian in the private schools.

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman.

Mrs. Julianna Y. O'Connor-Connolly: Can the Honourable Minister say, using the methodology for the projection, what would be the projected estimate for enrolment when school commences? Given that information, would most, if not all schools be up to par with their classrooms?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for Education, Human Resources and Culture.

Hon. Roy Bodden: Registration closed on 15 June. I would expect that the figures contained in the projected enrolments are acceptably accurate to this point. Do we have the facilities? Yes, we certainly have the facilities with the additions to Bodden Town, Savannah and Red Bay which were the crucial and possible crisis areas.

I would like to say that this Government put those as a first priority. We would expect that we have facilities to accommodate these enrolments.

The Speaker: The Third Elected Member for George Town.

Dr. Frank S. McField: When we look at the numbers and see that the schools in the outer districts and Cayman Brac and Little Cayman have so few pupils, and then we see the numbers in the schools in Red Bay, Savannah, George Town and West Bay, what is the Minister doing to identify resources for the construction of additional schools in the largely growing district of George Town?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for Education, Human Resources and Culture.

Hon. Roy Bodden: We have the land, the plans and we are ready to start the Boatswain Bay Primary School. We are just waiting on the finances. We have plans and two possible sites for the Spotts Primary School. We just have to decide on which site to choose and await financing. However, to this point, we are ready with our contingencies.

I just want to bring something to Honourable Members' attention. Construction costs of government schools are significantly increased by the policy that government has to construct these schools to hurricane shelter level. We believe, and I have been consulting with my Permanent Secretary, that the time may now be to examine the financial viability of this, particularly, as some of these schools are sited in communities where the standard of housing is really excellent. We calculate there already would be sufficient hurricane shelter space there without these schools. We are in the process of giving real detailed examination.

If we err, we prefer to err on the side of caution and build the expensive schools. However, I can tell you, if we did not have to do this, our money would be able to go further and we could get away with building schools just up to hurricane standard. There is a significant difference between hurricane standard and hurricane shelter type building.

The Speaker: The Third Elected Member for George Town.

Dr. Frank S. McField: Can the Honourable Minister say if we will see in the next budget the identification of funds for the building of these additional schools?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for Education, Human Resources and Culture.

Hon. Roy Bodden: We have three projected schools to come on line now: a third high school in Frank Sound and two primary schools mentioned before. Honourable Members will realise and appreciate that the priorities will be dictated and decided in the medium-term financial strategy. I leave the House with the assurance that we are doing everything to ensure that we are not caught behind the eighth ball. We are going through a system of prioritisation. As far as possible, the Ministry is going to ensure that we suffer no significant inconvenience.

The Speaker: The Third Elected Member for Bodden Town.

Mr. Anthony S. Eden: The Minister mentioned a site being considered in Patrick's Island. Can the Honourable Minister say if he has considered that this could be an area prone to flooding in hurricanes?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for Education, Human Resources and Culture.

Hon. Roy Bodden: I thank the Honourable Member for that question and would like to assure him that a survey of the land has informed us that we can get a school sited on land which is above the flood plane. So, we would have to do a minimum of fill, if we decide on that site.

What is attractive about this site is that this is Crown land. If we can build on this land, the millions of dollars necessary to purchase lands could be put toward the construction of the building and equipping of classrooms.

The Speaker: The Elected Member for East End.

Mr. V. Arden McLean: Can the Honourable Minister say if the East End school will be upgraded to hurricane shelter requirements with funding for repairs and improvements reflected in the November budget?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for Education, Human Resources and Culture.

Hon. Roy Boddan: I would like to remind that Honourable Member that East End currently has two hurricane shelters. However, we have plans in the works to provide a hall for the East End Primary School. That Member brought to my attention recently the need to improve the canteen facilities and I gave him my undertaking that we were going to look at this. I cannot, however, promise that we are going to build up the existing East End school structure to hurricane shelter standard. I think that would be a bit far-fetched at this time. If I made such a promise, it would be an empty promise and it is not my nature to make empty promises.

The Speaker: The Third Elected Member for George Town.

Dr. Frank S. McField: Just to clarify, I am supporting the Minister in building schools that are not up to hurricane shelter standards. I believe that there are quite a few buildings that can serve that purpose. We need to ensure that we keep the numbers down. I am just saying that so the Member for East End understands that I am not going that way.

The Speaker: The Second Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman.

Mr. Lyndon L. Martin: Can the Honourable Minister say if the projected enrolment for the Little Cayman education service of an additional four students is at entry grade? Or are they more mature students?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for Education, Human Resources and Culture.

Hon. Roy Boddan: We are anticipating that only one will be at the entry level.

I want to take this opportunity to say that both the Ministry and the Department are monitoring this. Most recently, I went to Cayman Brac with the Permanent Secretary and the Chief Education Officer. We had a breakfast conference where we discussed the future of this budding institution. We are very concerned to contain it before it expands beyond what we think it should be. I would just like the Honourable House to know, particularly the Honourable Members from Cay-man Brac and Little Cayman, it has the potential to become a white elephant. Although the services being offered are now essential and we are prepared to offer them, we do not wish it to grow beyond a certain point where it is not economically viable.

The Speaker: Moving on to Question 68, standing in the name of the Fourth Elected Member for West Bay.

QUESTION NO. 68

(Postponed Thursday 28 June 2001)

No. 68: Mr. Cline A. Glidden Jr. asked the Honourable Minister responsible for the Ministry of Education, Human Resources and Culture what is the procedure by which a student moves from the Alternative Education Programme back into high school classes.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for Education, Human Resources and Culture.

Hon. Roy Boddan: When a student is first admitted to the Alternative Education Centre, that student would have been referred by the school and tested by the Educational Psychologist. A complete report on the student and the problem he/she has been experiencing is therefore available to staff at the Centre.

After a brief period of observation, programmes are designed to implement strategies and behavioural management techniques to remediate and modify the student's problem behaviours such that he/she will be able to fit back into the high school from which he or she came.

Baseline Data is compiled from observations made and the frequency and duration of appropriate and inappropriate behaviours are noted and graphed. After the intervention strategies have been implemented, this process is repeated and any changes either in terms of improvement or deterioration are noted.

At the end of each term, the student is the subject of a multidisciplinary case conference where all concerned professionals meet to develop future treatment and educational programmes. If, as a result of this meeting, where teachers' reports and recorded data of observed behaviour are considered, it is deemed that the student is ready to begin the reintegration programme, then a provisional timetable is implemented whereby the student will return to his or her respective high school for one series of lessons per week, for example: five lessons of English language or mathematics per week, et cetera.

The student's progress at the high school is continuously monitored by both the high school staff and the teachers at the Centre. Any decision to increase or decrease the level of reintegration is then jointly discussed and implemented.

When a student who is attending the Alternative Education Programme is settled and shows calm behaviour, the staff of Alternative Education Programme will negotiate with staff at George Hicks High School to admit the student to some classes. This may extend to several classes per week. It may or may not include break or lunchtime. The student is transported between Alternative Education Programme and the school by the Alternative Education Programme driver.

If the reinstatement proceeds well, the student will be admitted to more classes until full readmission is accomplished. If there is significant poor behaviour by the student, he or she will be withdrawn from school for a time until it is decided that integration can take place again.

To date, this academic year, of the 17 students referred to the tutorial unit, 16 students have been successfully integrated either part or full time. Of the 12 students on roll at present, 10 students are undergoing reintegration. One student is in lock up facing serious charges and one student has been refused permission to continue reintegration by the Junior High School Principal (for serious aggressive behaviour). The level of mainstreaming varies from four lessons per week to 22 lessons per week out of a possible 30 lessons.

SUPPLEMENTARIES

The Speaker: The Third Elected Member for Bodden Town.

Mr. Anthony S. Eden: Can the Honourable Minister say how parents or caretakers of these children are brought into the way it is handled?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for Education, Human Resources and Culture.

Hon. Roy Bodden: It is my information that the parents attend the multidisciplinary meeting. In addition, they are invited and encouraged to come into the school to discuss their child's problem.

The Speaker: I would appreciate a motion for the suspension of Standing Orders 23 (7) and (8) in order that Question Time can continue beyond 11 am.

SUSPENSION OF STANDING ORDERS 23(7), (8)

[Moved by the Honourable Minister of Health and Information Technology]

QUESTION PUT: AGREED: STANDING ORDER 23(7) AND (8) SUSPENDED TO ALLOW QUESTION TIME TO CONTINUE BEYOND 11 AM.

The Speaker: The Fourth Elected Member for West Bay.

Mr. Cline A. Glidden Jr.: I assume that most of the supplementary questions that would have come from the answer provided by the Minister were answered by the very detailed and shocking seminar held for Members on Wednesday. Can the Honourable Minister say what process is used for students who cannot be integrated back into the normal school system mainly because they walk out of the programme?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for Education, Human Resources and Culture.

Hon. Roy Bodden: Where there is a serious or significant case, we go to a case conference with the Cayman Islands Marine Institute (CIMI). I am glad the Member asked this question because there is need for a more secure environment than we currently operate out of. For the effective administration and implementation of this programme, I hope we can come up in the very near future with these kinds of premises. Otherwise, we get some extreme cases that we are unable to tackle as diligently and successfully as we would wish to.

The Speaker: The Elected Member for East End.

Mr. V. Arden McLean: Can the Honourable Minister say how many children walk out of this programme and never return?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for Education, Human Resources and Culture.

Hon. Roy Bodden: I do not have the detailed figures but I can assure the Honourable Member that it would not be a large number at all.

The Speaker: The Elected Member for East End.

Mr. V. Arden McLean: Can the Honourable Minister say how many children having been sent to the AEP have then had to be sent on to CIMI?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for Education, Human Resources and Culture.

Hon. Roy Bodden: I would have to ask the Member for time to provide those statistics because it is kind of out of the ambit of the range of supplementaries for which we planned. I give an undertaking to get that information and circulate it to Honourable Members.

The Speaker: Are there any further supplementaries?

If not, we move on to Question 70 standing in the name of the Second Elected Member for Bodden Town who is not in the Chamber. Is he in the precinct?

The Third Elected Member for George Town.

Dr. Frank S. McField: I do not believe the Member is here and I do not believe he knew that his question would come up. May I ask that it be set down for a later time?

The Speaker: Certainly.

STANDING ORDER 23(3)
MOTION TO POSTPONE QUESTION NO. 70

[Motion moved by the Third Elected Member for George Town and seconded by the Fourth Elected Member for West Bay.]

QUESTION PUT: AGREED. QUESTION 70 POSTPONED TO A LATER SITTING.

The Speaker: That concludes Question Time.

Moving on to item 4 on today's Order Paper: Statements by Honourable Ministers/Members of the Government.

Statement by the Honourable Minister responsible for the Ministry of Tourism, Environment and Transport.

STATEMENTS BY HONOURABLE
MINISTERS/MEMBERS OF GOVERNMENT

CHANGES TO TOURISM ARRIVAL STATISTICS

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: Thank you.

Mr. Speaker, as promised, I wish to apprise Members of this Honourable House of the current situation with respect to the changes made to the way the tourism arrival statistics are collected and analysed.

Over the past several weeks, the Departments of Immigration, Tourism and Computer Services have sought to upgrade the processes for determining visitor arrival statistics. This process first looked at the way data is currently collected and categorised by Immigration Department. That resulted in changes to codes being used. Now, there are only two codes that will contain tourism data, both of which correspond to the World Tourism Organisation (WTO) standards.

All data now being collected from Immigration conforms to the WTO definition for a visitor. This definition is based on travellers' countries of residence, purpose and length of stay, as declared to immigration officials when they enter the country. Our only modification to that definition has been to shorten the maximum stay from a year to six months.

Mr. Speaker, I wish to reiterate what I said in a previous statement and that is that I am pleased to report that, using the restructured categories of immigration data, we are now able to provide visitor numbers for January through May 2001 that are accurate. For the year 2000, the numbers have been cleaned and also conform to WTO standards.

Previously released numbers for 2000 were 406,620. The cleaned figure is 306,143. 2001 arrivals now completed through May 2001 show an increase of 4.2 percent over 2000 in arrivals from the markets within which the DOT (Department of Tourism) has marketing representation.

Mr. Speaker, this effort has taken time. The time taken has allowed the Departments that have worked together to not patch the system but rather identify the issues and then develop long-term solutions that will allow future decisions to be made against accurate data that conforms to international standards.

Beyond this review of the system, Mr. Speaker we invited representatives from the Caribbean Tourism Organisation (CTO) to come and demonstrate for us a tourism performance reporting software system that they have designed and which is in use in some 12 Caribbean countries.

This software is called the Caribbean Tourism Organisation Management of Information System and has been designed to do the following three things which will greatly assist the Cayman Islands in managing its tourism industry:

- 1) Improve the ability of our destination to manage and develop a sustainable tourism industry;
- 2) Enhance our ability to respond to the changing market environment in which we now operate; and finally
- 3) Strengthen our information infrastructure and enhance the management of our tourism statistical data.

We have focused on the performance module at this time which will be the vehicle used to produce our future tourism arrival statistics.

I was able to see a demonstration of the system along with the Acting Permanent Secretary. We were very impressed with what we will be able to get from this system. Obviously, the system will only be as good as the data which is run through it and hence our concern to get the interface with the Immigration Department's processes right from the onset. Mr. Speaker, I am appending to this statement a colour copy of the front page of the performance module of the system to show Members what are some of the possible reports which the new system will provide.

The system can provide some 400 different reports. These reports provide a wide range of information on tourism matters. One particular area of interest within the performance module is the reports which will display numbers of persons who listed themselves as staying at particular properties for a specific period which we may want to review information on with respect to the collection of the Tourism Accommodation Tax.

This will be a very useful Report in the management of the Tourism Accommodation Tax which is once again being assigned to the Department of Tourism. Beyond the existing Report, which can currently be generated, is the ability to customise other reports as necessary.

The system has two other modules, that is the inventory module and the market intelligence module. The former allows for an electronic database of all accommodations, attractions and other elements of the tourism sector. Here again, various reports can be produced on this data. The latter module is the market intelligence module which will allow a wide range of marketing analysis to be carried, further allowing the department to demonstrate value for money within the various projects which are undertaken.

Immediately, our attention is focused on the performance module which will manage the processing of our arrivals statistics but once that is fully operational, we will initiate work with the other two modules.

Simultaneous with these efforts on the tourism side, Mr. Speaker, I am also pleased to advise that the Immigration Department is working with the Department of Tourism to redesign the E/D card as well as to move towards installation of new technology at the Owen Roberts International Airport, as further ways to modernise the data collection process by that Department. I further understand that the Immigration Department's staff is already being trained in the new procedures.

Mr. Speaker, these Islands are still developing and so are its record-keeping practices. These changes which have been made to the Immigration Department's categories of codes will allow us to obtain tourism statistics which are based on internationally recognised criteria for the tourism sector and hence become a credible planning tool for both private and public sector to utilise in the tourism planning process.

Thank you.

The Speaker: Do Members wish to ask questions?
The Third Elected Member for George Town.

SHORT QUESTIONS

Standing Order 30(2)

Dr. Frank S. McField: It appears that we have a very interesting point made by the Minister of Tourism in the last part of his statement when he says, "These changes which have been made to the Immigration Department categories of codes will allow us to obtain tourism statistics which are based on internationally recognised criteria for the tourism sector and hence become a credible planning tool for both private and public sector to utilise in the tourism planning process." In other words, there seems to have been something wrong with the system of data collection. I think that is a very important revelation for us here in this House.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for the Ministry of Tourism, Environment and Transport.

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: I do not know to what direction the Member is leading his remarks because he did not put forward a question.

The Speaker: The Third Elected Member for George Town, would you phrase that as a question?

Dr. Frank S. McField: Is the Minister now saying what had caused the inaccurate tourism arrival figures was the data collection process rather than any human error?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for the Ministry of Tourism, Environment and Transport.

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: I am glad that he asked that because that is where I thought he was leading.

The category of codes and collection of data were not the only problems. Yes, there were errors or something worse! For years, management knew of it because they were informed, but did nothing about it. So, I do not know whether that Member wants to say it is an error or whether it was deliberate misleading but you can believe this: the Cayman Islands got a royal so-and-so for not having the right information and the wrong information having been given to the tourism industry.

The Speaker: The Third Elected Member for Bodden Town.

Mr. Anthony S. Eden: In the clean figures, there is approximately a difference of some 100,000. Can the Honourable Minister say what category the majority of these entrants would have fallen into if it were not into tourism?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for the Ministry of Tourism, Environment and Transport.

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: What was happening is that they were recording residents and work permit holders in the tourism figures. That is what boosted the tourism figures so high.

The Speaker: The Third Elected Member for George Town.

Dr. Frank S. McField: Mr. Speaker, who were recording these figures? Was it Immigration or Tourism?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for the Ministry of Tourism, Environment and Transport.

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: Tourism, because they were the ones releasing the numbers. You know that when people come here, let us hope they come through an immigration system at the airport. We all know that but the person who had the figures and released them was the previous Tourism Minister.

The Speaker: The Third Elected Member for George Town. I can only allow a few questions. This cannot continue as a debate.

Dr. Frank S. McField: It is not a debate; it is trying to get clarification.

I want to find out basically whether the categories of codes kept by Immigration is what we are talking about or the Tourism Department also keeps categories of codes. So, if someone is coming into the country and they make a declaration to Immigration Department, from my understanding, saying they are a visitor or a permanent resident, and then Immigration collects these papers. Who does the calculations? Who separates these papers into different categories, Is it Immigration or Tourism?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for the Ministry of Tourism, Environment and Transport.

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: Let me see if I can make this Member understand that the last administration knew the figures involved were residents and work permit holders and they chose to send them out as tourism figures. Now, if that is not wrong, and if that is not clear, then I do not know what else I can say, Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: The Elected Member for East End.

Mr. V. Arden McLean: The Minister is saying that the DOT and Immigration Department are working together to redesign the Embarkation and Disembarkation cards, as well as moving towards installation of new technology at Owen Roberts International Airport. I have also had had trouble filling out these cards. So, can the Honourable Minister say that because of the problems experienced with these cards in the past, due to insufficient information available on these cards, if that is the reason why all these mistakes were made at the time of calculating the visitors?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for the Ministry of Tourism, Environment and Transport.

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: I am not going to get into any debate as to how wrong the embarkation and disembarkation cards are. What we are trying to do now is make it more user-friendly. However, we can say that the information on that card is sufficient to say whether you are a tourist or not and whether you are going to be staying at a hotel, guest house or with family for the address part. So, I do not know where the mistakes came in.

Members of this Honourable House please understand this: The fact is that the previous administration knew that included in these tourist figures from New York, London and from all over the world were figures of residents and work permit holders. They allowed those figures to be produced on a quarterly basis. In fact, the Minister used to send them out, or the Department sent them up to the Ministry and the Ministry sent them out, or okayed them as if they were all tourist arrivals.

The Speaker: The Fourth Elected Member for West Bay.

Mr. Cline A. Glidden Jr.: Tourism has been a very major part of the Budget and we all place Tourism as being one of the two pillars of the economy. Seeing the Minister has now said that the methods used for data collection conforms to the World Tourism Organisation standards (WTO), which I would assume we would aspire to meet seeing we are so dependent on tourism, what standards were used in the past to ensure the data was accurate? I would assume they would have employed some standard, and if not the WTO standard, can he say what if any they were complying with?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for the Ministry of Tourism, Environment and Transport.

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: I do not know what system they were using, but it certainly was not WTO standards. They just seem to have recorded people coming in and that is where the problem is. Again, I reiterate, the problem lay in people knowing that persons who should not have been marked as tourists were included into the tourism figures. They did that to make themselves look good!

The Speaker: The Elected Member for East End. I can only allow two more questions.

Mr. V. Arden McLean: When the Minister says that residents and work permit holders were included as tourists, can he say that every arriving passenger in this country was considered a tourist?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for the Ministry of Tourism, Environment and Transport.

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: No, Mr. Speaker, I cannot say that. I was not there and I do not know. Certainly I can say what was I was told by the Department and that was, that permit holders and people who I guess have permanent residence were included in these figures. So, that is what shot up the figures.

The Speaker: The Elected Member for East End, a follow up?

Mr. V. Arden McLean: Yes, Mr. Speaker.

I am glad to hear that I was not considered a tourist in the Cayman Islands but it is unfortunate that we got to this point where people with permanent residency were considered tourists.

The Speaker: Please turn this into a question.

Mr. V. Arden McLean: Thank you.

I note that the Minister said there is a 4 percent increase up until May. Can the Honourable Minister say if that involves just arrivals by air? What is the increase or decrease in sea passengers?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for the Ministry of Tourism, Environment and Transport.

Hon. W. McKeever Bush: Yes. The new figures, the clean figures, are pure air arrivals.

The Speaker: Final question.

The Third Elected Member for George Town.

Dr. Frank S. McField: Just to try to clear up the codes and categories of passengers: do we have on the immigration form the term "tourist" or are we using the term "visitor"? Do we have such a term as "work permit holder"? I know we have the term "resident" but would the Minister say whether or not in his estimate it is possible that the work permit holder does not see himself as a "resident" and therefore might have listed himself as "visitor"? Might this not suggest that the confusion had to do with the design of the disembarkation card?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for the Ministry of Tourism, Environment and Transport.

Hon. W. McKeever Bush: I have listened to the Member twist his question round and round trying to get to the position he wants. That Member is quite capable of doing that on practically any issue. I cannot tell him any more than I have already said and he is not going to get me to say that yes, whoever he is trying to protect or trying to say did not do something, the evidence is there. The verdict has gone out. What else does he want? Mr. Speaker, I cannot give any more information on this, and I am certainly not going to agree with him.

The Speaker: At this time, we will take the morning break. We shall suspend for 15 minutes.

PROCEEDINGS SUSPENDED AT 11.30 AM

PROCEEDINGS RESUMED AT 12.30 PM

The Speaker: Proceedings are resumed.

GOVERNMENT BUSINESS

BILLS

SECOND READINGS

THE POLICE (AMENDMENT) (INTIMATE SAMPLES) BILL, 2001

THE EVIDENCE (AMENDMENT) (SPOUSES, EXPERTS, FOREIGN CONVICTIONS, ALIBIS, RIGHT TO SILENCE, ETC.) BILL, 2001

The Speaker: I recognise the Honourable Second Official Member.

Hon. David F. Ballantyne: Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

I believe we had reached the stage where I just introduced the Police (Amendment) (Intimate Samples) Bill, 2001 and debate thereon would have been due to proceed. In the interval, however, it appears to make sense, if the House is agreeable, that both the contents of that Bill and the contents of the following Bill, the Evidence Bill, might be the subject of informal discussion and consultation with Members so that they are as fully informed as they may wish to be about the background and reasons for these Bills addressing any concerns they may have in relation to them.

I think this would be a useful way of addressing these issues and, if the House is agreeable, I would therefore move that further debate on the Police (Amendment) (Intimate Samples) Bill, 2001 be adjourned and similarly that the second reading of the Evidence (Amendment) (Spouses, Experts, Foreign Convictions, Alibis, Right to Silence, Etc.) Bill, 2001 also be adjourned until the opportunity has been taken to have this discussion.

MOTION TO POSTPONE PROCEEDINGS ON BILLS

Hon. David F. Ballantyne: Accordingly, if the House is so minded, I would propose that we could move on to address the two Judicature (Amendment) Bills which appear to be relatively straightforward. Thank you.

The Speaker: It is my understanding that the question before the House is that we defer the Second Reading debate on The Police (Amendment) (Intimate Samples) Bill, 2001, and the Second Reading of The Evidence (Amendment) (Spouses, Experts, Foreign Convictions, Alibis, Right to Silence, Etc.) Bill, 2001 for a later sitting to be further discussed by Members.

[Addressing the Third Elected Member for George Town] You had a question?

Dr. Frank S. McField: Mr. Speaker, I want to say that I am happy with the approach of the Government. It seems to give greater consideration to these types of Bills and I am very happy that this is now being considered on a different level.

The Speaker: I shall put the question. Those in favour please say Aye. Those against, No.

AYES.

The Speaker: The Ayes have it.

AGREED. FURTHER PROCEEDINGS ON THE POLICE (AMENDMENT) (INTIMATE SAMPLES) BILL, 2001 AND THE EVIDENCE (AMENDMENT) (SPOUSES, EXPERTS, FOREIGN CONVICTIONS, ALIBIS, RIGHT TO SILENCE, ETC.) BILL, 2001 POSTPONED IN ORDER FOR INFORMAL DISCUSSION AND CONSULTATION WITH MEMBERS TO ENSUE.

The Speaker: Bills, Second Reading.

THE JUDICATURE (AMENDMENT) BILL, 2001

The Clerk: The Judicature (Amendment) Bill, 2001.

The Speaker: The Honourable Second Official Member.

Hon. David F. Ballantyne: Thank you.

I rise to move the Second Reading of a Bill entitled The Judicature (Amendment) Bill, 2001.

The Speaker: Do you wish to speak to it? Please continue.

Hon. David F. Ballantyne: Thank you.

The Judicature (Amendment) Bill, 2001 is one of two Bills seeking to amend The Judicature Law (1995 Revision). The amendments in this Bill consist of a proposed increase in the maximum fine payable by a juror who fails to answer a jury summons. The proposal is that section 11 be amended to increase the maximum fine from $100 to $500 to make it somewhat more meaningful.

The Bill also seeks to amend section 16 to provide that in a trial, on indictment obviously, for a money laundering offence, that the number of jurors, instead of the conventional seven, would in fact be 12. The reason is not to equate money laundering with murder, which might appear to be the inference. That is not the point; the point is that money laundering matters are very complicated and as a result of that liable to be very lengthy. Given the length of the trial, it is thought that there could be a difficulty with jurors having to be on a jury panel for a lengthy period of time, perhaps as long as three months.

In that event, it is possible that for one reason or another—illness or other such reason—that jurors may fall away. If that happens midway through a complex and difficult trial, and the number falls below the minimum required, the only alternative would be to order a retrial, which would be an extremely expensive, time consuming and wasteful exercise.

The proposal, which has the support of the judiciary, is that the number of jurors at the outset be set at 12 but unlike any other trial, the number of jurors who could be foregone would be five. In other words, the jury panel could reduce by five. As long as seven remained, it would be sufficient to have a properly constituted jury. It simply allows for the possibility, as they have in the US, except by a different means, for alternate jurors. These are not alternate jurors, these would be real jurors. However, it would allow for the possibility of a number of them, for perfectly valid reasons, to fall away without the trial itself having to be reconvened. This is thought to be the simplest way of dealing with the matter and is entirely due to the length of trial contemplated.

As I mentioned earlier in one of our discussions, the Preliminary Inquiry in one of these money-laundering matters lasted six weeks. It was not a full Preliminary Inquiry either. It was in long form in the sense that all evidence was given but I do not believe it was the entirety of the evidence. If the Preliminary Inquiry took six weeks, it is not unreasonable to consider that the trial, which, of course, would be defended, might last for a considerable period of time.

There is a concern also for the welfare of jurors. They should not be put in a position where they sit on a jury and then require to be discharged and fresh jurors empanelled because the numbers fall below a certain minimum. There may be other possible solutions to this. Alternate jurors in the US are part of their regime, but this jurisdiction has never recognised alternate jurors. This relatively simple way of dealing with the matter may be a practical and sensible solution.

The final part of this is that if the number of the jury is reduced by more than five, then the court may discharge the jury before it reaches a verdict.

That is the simple explanation. There is absolutely no attempt to equate money laundering with murder or treason. In fact, to address that possible concern, it is proposed that we separate out these issues. Instead of amending, as the Bill purports to do, the clause dealing with the array for murder, would have a separate subsection dealing with the array for money laundering so there would be no confusion in anyone's mind that this had anything to do with those crimes. The proposal would therefore be that it would read: 'on trials for money laundering offences, which are defined under the Proceeds of Criminal Conduct Law in section 27(7), 12 jurors shall form the array.'

That is the proposal. It does not increase the odds against anything other than there being sufficient jurors at the end of the day still available to try the matter. I believe that is the simple and straightforward purpose of this Bill. However, I think it might be right to try to anticipate some questions in Members' minds, if I may presume to do that.

We call upon jurors to perform a public service. There may be an issue as to how easy it is for them to do that. If we look behind the issue of just increasing penalties for failing to appear for a jury, it may be that the issue of addressing an obligation on employers to facilitate the release of employees to engage in jury service should be contemplated so as to ensure that jurors are readily available. I am not suggesting that employers are inhibiting that but it may be one aspect.

Another aspect may be that some thought be given and I do not have a concluded view about it, but would be interested to learn the views of others, as to whether there should be an obligation to pay jurors during their service as jurors. When I say that, it may be that society should ask the employer to shoulder some of that burden to ensure that jurors do not lose out by virtue of engaging in jury service. This would need to be thought through and discussed. I only mention it because I think it is appropriate to look at this in the round. Jury service is a public duty performed as a public duty by persons in the community. Those persons, in my opinion, should not be disadvantaged by it. They are performing a difficult task. They are the peers before whom a person is tried, and it is appropriate that they not be financially disadvantaged.

Everyone has to give up something at some point in time for public service. I do not know as I stand here the best way of achieving this so I do not pretend to have instant solutions. I would not offer them to you in that fashion. However, others will have thoughts about this and, perhaps, we can give appropriate consideration as to how this can be addressed.

If there are any other issues arising from this, I will be happy to address them. We are trying to anticipate possible practical difficulties that could arise in the course of what would be rather lengthy trials.

It may also be that in due course consideration be given to an enlarged jury pool for other kinds of serious fraud cases. Those with which we are primarily concerned at the moment are complicated money laundering cases where it is necessary to prove the predicate offence as well as the offence which occurs within the jurisdiction here. There are aspects of this related to the Evidence Bill which I will be happy to explain when we have those discussions.

However, the proof of the predicate offence which occurs overseas has then got to follow by proof of money laundering which is in effect facilitating or concealing or otherwise being concerned in arrangements concerning the proceeds of crime. To show that the proceeds are proceeds of crime, you have to show that there was an original crime and you have to be able to demonstrate that a money laundering offence was committed.

So, these are large-scale expensive undertakings which are not undertaken lightly. We would like to ensure that the system is capable of dealing with them. Thank you.

The Speaker: I think this would be a convenient time to take the luncheon break. We shall suspend until 2.15 pm.

PROCEEDINGS SUSPENDED AT 12.45 PM

PROCEEDINGS RESUMED AT 2.40 PM

The Speaker: Please be seated.

The question is that a Bill entitled The Judicature (Amendment) Bill, 2001 be given a second reading. The Floor is open to debate.

The Third Elected Member for George Town.

Dr. Frank S. McField: I am concerned about this Bill which increases the maximum fine payable by a juror who fails to answer a jury summons. The proposed amendment to section 11 increases the maximum penalty from $100 to $500. I feel that we are having amendments being made when what we need to proceed with is an overall understanding of the system of justice and the types of reforms in effect to make it updated and appropriate for modern times.

The whole idea of a trial by jury is a fundamental right which citizens should be entitled to, when charged by the State. It is being tested all over the world. It has been recognised that the expertise of jurors in many cases does not enable them to be useful to the persons relying upon them for an impartial view. Trial by our peers is rooted in the system of justice as well as the feeling that to somehow forego that would mean less justice, or a perception of less justice. I do not believe that would be so in all cases, especially when we are talking about money laundering crimes.

In a community like this one, I wonder whether trial by jury would not be best reserved for trials of members of the community who are involved in the types of offences the Second Elected Member for George Town has said demand "a pound of flesh" or where society is asking for punishment as a kind of indication that the collective consciousness has been offended. The community in traditional times had been involved in the judgment and, in a lot of cases, the punishment of offenders. The evolution of the jury system can be seen as being consistent with that development of society. In one sense, the jury system aids in maintaining the solidarity among members of a given society.

However, I do not suppose it would have the same effect when talking about commercial crimes on the level of money laundering. I believe jurors are a relevant part of the system of justice in commercial crime cases on the level of people working in banks and being tempted to commit certain crimes. However, in cases of money laundering that go on for six months or for years, we are talking about a new problem the justice system has inherited as a result of the commercialisation of relationships. These problems are not going to be solved so easily by trying to stretch the usefulness of the jury system to the point where an individual can feel that justice exists in the system because he can choose to be tried by his peers.

The money laundering crimes are the result of other criminal acts committed in most cases by other persons. A person is charged with money laundering for having knowledge of these crimes committed by persons who had then given funds to him. The purpose, therefore, is to disguise and hide the funds in clean money so as not to reveal these funds were proceeds of criminal activities.

The commercial issues involved where one has to prove there were criminal activities committed to get funds which were then given to someone or some bank to launder, might very well go beyond what the average person could or should be expected to understand.

When dealing with sexual offences, murder, capital or punitive crimes, a lot has to do with how we perceive it. What makes a normal citizen able to participate in the trial has to do not just with his ability to weigh evidence but also to assist with sentencing.

The judge is relying upon the community, not for its ability to maintain a whole series of facts and figures. I believe it was originally intended that jurors would serve a completely different function than the lawyers and judges within the system.

What happens in a lot of the criminal cases I have seen is that defence and prosecution lawyers in the presentation of their case are competing for the emotional understanding and attention of the jurors. The judge is there to keep some balance, act as a referee and instruct the jurors as to the points of law.

I believe with money laundering we have gone into an age where we need to decide whether the jury system should be available in money laundering cases or whether it should be dealt with by just a judge who would have all the time in the world to make sure he understands the evidence presented. I believe rationally the fairest trial would be the result of the judge and advocates for the defence and the Crown being involved in this debate.

I think it is unreasonable to subject citizens who are obviously having difficulties in accepting the social responsibilities of being jurors in the first place to this additional burden. The need to increase the penalty from $100 to $500 means there is some flaw in the system. It means persons are not attending court according to their summons or presumed responsibility.

I repeat we also need to educate jurors as to the significance of the jury system. Sometimes, people get the right to vote then and end up on the jury list but do not know what they are being called for. There is no attempt to explain to them. All of a sudden, they get the summons. However, nobody supports the system by educating people or explaining to them their social responsibilities. It is fine and good to increase penalties but why is it not explained to people about the usefulness of what they do?

The other thing is that it is hard for a lot of people to understand when they sit in court that everybody but them is paid. The lawyers, the judges, the newspaper people and the stenographers are getting their chunk of money but the poor juror is there doing a social good and getting absolutely nothing! Well, that is not easy for everybody to understand. That system will not continue to work unless we have the early education and the kind of education that shows persons the usefulness of performing such tasks.

Jurors in the Cayman Islands have always been criticised by people who come in and have not always got the results they wanted. It has always been said that if you choose Caymanians, which you normally do because they are the people on the election list, they do what they want and acquit people who should be found guilty. It is not heard as much today as it was back in the 1980s. It was also said that they came under a significant amount of social pressure.

We are experiencing a lack of interest in people serving as jurors. The increase in fines is just another way the State has to show that anytime it wants to accomplish something, it thinks in terms of punishment rather than education. I have a problem with that basic philosophical premise. We never hear the State coming to talk about educating people to make them more cooperative with a particular malfunction.

Malfunions in society are caused just like malfunctions in the body—the symptoms tell us that something is not right in the whole. When we see the need for an increase from $100 to $500 and people are not performing that particular function in the jury system, then people are not performing their social function in regard to the PTAs and other organisations as well. It indicates that there is a particular malfunction and a particular social breakdown. We should not try to fix part of it; we should try to fix the whole.

I believe that sitting in a courtroom for hours and hours each day, day after day, week after week and sometimes for months is very tiring. I have to give it to the people who become jurors. That is an amazing sacrifice. I congratulate all who have done it and have done it well. Sometimes, even to listen to the pace at which these lawyers speak is enough to put anybody to sleep! It is not necessarily because of the good lawyers; it is because the judges insist upon writing every single thing they say!

Even when they bring people in who can write for them, the judges still continue to write everything and therefore slow down the pace. I bet if we would be able to raise that tempo a little bit to the Perry Mason type of pace, perhaps a few people would be more interested to be jurors. It is not just the fault of the poor citizens; it is partly the fault of the State which fails to believe it can be responsible for the lack of performance of the social contract.

I do not overly oppose what the good Honourable Second Official Member has brought. I am only trying to explore the problem we are being presented with in such a way that the different sides of the story do not get stifled by the need for us to agree. I know that I am not the technician in this case; this is not my forte.

However, I do believe that we need to not hurry legislation at this particular time especially when we know that the country will be going through very traumatic changes with regard to the way in which we position our thinking. It will be the result of the human rights legislation and it will be the result of our having to follow very civilised and democratic standards which would be imposed if they are not already in existence.

I believe that we need to not put more stress on the public than what already exists in that we are compelling them to be a part of a judicial system that might be at the end of its usefulness. I think that this Bill, like some of the others intended to be brought by Government, needs to be pulled back and given some additional consideration and time. The citizen should not always have to pay the price for the weakness in the entire system; the citizen is only part of the system. Thank you.

The Speaker: The Elected Member for East End.

Mr. V. Arden McLean: Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

I too have some of the same concerns the Third Elected Member for George Town has as to why jurors are not responding to their summons and then we have to increase the fines. I understand that $100 may be a bit small and $500 may very well be the case. However, I would like to look at it from a different perspective.

I believe that it should be considered an honour for any citizen of any country, including Cayman, to be a part of the justice process. However, it is going to be difficult for us to tell a citizen of this country that he must uphold that view when he is disenfranchised by coming to the courts to serve as a juror. It is my understanding that certain employers in this country will not pay their employees who are called for jury duty.

There must be some provision someplace that allows for that employer to be in contempt of court. I am challenging the Second Official Member to look into that and if necessary bring it to this Honourable House for adjustment.

No one should be disenfranchised. There are stories of citizens of this country being called to be jurors, who buy a ticket to indicate they are going away to try and get out of it. That is a serious matter. However, when you really look at this and think of one of the things said by the Honourable Second Official Member and the Third Elected Member for George Town about cases going on for three months and imagine a citizen making $2,000 per month with an employer who questions whether or not he should be paid, of course, it is easier to go and buy a $300 ticket and try to get out of it! Or it is easier to pay the $100 fine!. We have to examine what is causing this problem. I firmly believe it is rooted in the fear that our people go through concerning not being paid.

We go a little further and look under section 12 of the Judicature Law and it says, "Each juror shall be entitled to an allowance of ten dollars per day for his attendance at court together with a travelling allowance not exceeding twenty cents for each mile travelled in order to attend . . ." That must have been put in there quite a while ago when 20 cents really meant something in this country. I know today it does not, and neither does $10. That is a stipend to assist perhaps with lunch and for fuel. I figure the furthest distance one would have to travel to reach the courts in this country would be from East End. So, if we figure 20 miles or thereabouts, then maximum we are looking at is $15 per day. That can just about get us lunch and pay for some of the gas used. That has to be revised.

I believe the people of this country would love to participate in the justice system; however, they are not going to. Yes, I support the Third Elected Member for George Town when he says we should try to educate our people as to the value of being a juror and the need to have the citizens be jurors. By the same token that is not all there is.

We cannot allow our citizens to take the choice to pay the fines instead of going to court. It is a serious state of affairs in any country when the citizen can afford to pay the fine as opposed to being a juror. However, to the citizen it is worth it as he is being disenfranchised when he comes to support the justice system. I understand the $500 but it is being used now to force jurors to come. That is what it would seem to the person who is being disenfranchised for being a juror, travelling all the way into George Town, wasting or spending long hours, many days, many weeks, and in a lot of instances, months, and then having nothing to take home to feed his family.

Employers in this country must learn that they too have a civic duty. Yes, we all do. However, it is time that we started looking at whether or not we can do anything to ensure that any employer, regardless of who he is, if he is taking away his employees' wages for the time they are doing their civic duty, should be brought up on charges of contempt of court, the same way the Third Elected Member for George Town spoke of lawyers who lengthen it out.

I also wonder why in this jurisdiction we do not have alternate jurors. I wonder if it is because it is too expensive but only paying $10 per day is not very expensive. There would be no need to have the 12 jurors he is proposing for money laundering cases. I understand the need to have more than seven and in the interest of the country, I believe it is necessary to have 12 so that in cases of attrition when we have too many getting sick or whatever the case may be, we do not fall below seven. Therefore, I understand the need for that in cases where we could be three months into a case and we fall below the required five and the case has to be aborted after much expense.

I have a little concern about the Memorandum of Objects and Reasons where it reads the number of jurors would be the same as murder and treason that is 12. That sends a message that should not be sent because the only thing left in the country to be hung for is treason.

In the case of the increase in fines from $100 to $500, I would like to ask the Second Official Member to consider possibilities of holding employers in contempt. I believe that looks at the root of the problem in the whole situation.

Perhaps at committee stage, the Second Official Member would like to move an amendment to section 12 of the Law to possibly increase the allowance for jurors from $10 a day and 20 cents per mile of travel to a realistic amount. I trust that he will take that into consideration when replying. Thank you.

The Speaker: The Motion is open to debate. Does any other Member wish to speak?

The Second Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. Alden M. McLaughlin, Jr.: Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

Before I commence debate on the Bill before the House, I would just like to express my gratitude to the Second Official Member for indicating he would discuss with Members before proceeding with debate on the Police (Amendment) (Intimate Samples) Bill, 2001 and the Evidence (Amendment) (Spouses, Experts, Foreign Convictions, Alibis, Right to Silence, Etc.) Bill 2001.

These two Bills effect some fairly fundamental changes to the law of evidence and indicate a substantial policy shift in relation to these matters. I believe it is important that before debate ensues that all Members of the backbench are clear as to the Government's objective. Again, I express my thanks for affording us that opportunity.

Moving on to the Bill to amend the Judicature Law to increase the maximum fine payable by a juror who fails to answer jury summons, and to change the array of the jury in the trial of money laundering offences. It is remarkable sometimes how a seemingly minor amendment to a law provokes such deep and far reaching questions about the underlying basis for the law in the first place.

The system which gives to an accused person the right to a trial by a jury of his peers in the case of serious offences is an ancient one and one that came down to us by virtue of our British heritage. It is a cherished right and it can only work effectively if those who are summoned to be chosen as jurors do obey the summons and appear on the date fixed.

The Third Elected Member for George Town spoke about the proposed amendment which would increase the number of the jury in trials of money laundering offences. He wondered whether or not money laundering offences should be tried by juries because of the highly technical nature of these offences and because of the length of time often necessary to have these trials proceed and be concluded. That is a legitimate observation and one that has been made in relation to other offences such as fraud.

There are critics of the use of jury trials in these particular circumstances. However, to not permit trials of these types of offences to be dealt with by way of jury would require a fundamental policy change again. All indictable offences currently afford the accused that, shall I say, sacred right to have his fate determined by a jury of his peers. It may well be, as it has been made in other jurisdictions, that a policy decision should be taken that certain serious offences are triable only by a judge alone. However, I believe that is a debate for another day.

The point I believe has legitimacy, is the issue about remuneration of jurors, which was made by the Third Elected Member for George Town and by the Elected Member for East End.

When the Law was initially devised, it did not contemplate cases that carried on for months on end taking jurors away from the business of their ordinary lives for extended periods. I believe the Judicature Law dates back to 1975, and the Schedule to the Law that prescribes the honorarium paid also dates back to that time. Even then, I believe it was a nominal figure.

The reality is that many trials before the Grand Court now carry on for a substantial period of time. It is my understanding that the money laundering trial set to begin sometime early next year is expected to last for some months. In the case of jurors who have the misfortune to be empanelled for that trial, one can readily see that they will experience considerable difficulties if they are not paid by someone for the duration of the trial.

Indeed, I do believe this particular case is the principal motivation for the Bill before the House, certainly in relation to increasing the array of the jury in money laundering cases. The concern is because of the likely length of the trial there might be significant attrition. In those circumstances, I believe that Government should give careful consideration to finding a means to ensure that jurors involved in this trial, and others who follow, are reasonably remunerated for their period of jury duty.

I believe that to increase the amount payable under the Schedule to the Judicature Law in the long run will put a considerable strain on the public purse at a time when all and sundry know it is something the country can ill afford.

So, we come back to the social obligation. Jury duty is a service, an obligation that all in the community bears and that includes employers. I appreciate that it is not a simple exercise of simply saying employers should pay the employee for the duration of his or her jury duty because we have the case of the self-employed. A means will have to be devised for remunerating them. Quite a number in the community are self-employed. I can think of a number of painters, gardeners and others.

I accept and appreciate that there is not a simple solution to this, but I share the concerns of the two Members who have spoken about what we are seeking to do here, ensuring that people turn up for jury duty by increasing the maximum fine. I accept that unless people show up for jury duty, the jury system cannot work. The jury system is fundamental to the administration of justice in this country and so it must work.

However, before offering my support to this particular Bill, I would seek to extract from the Government an undertaking that the issue of the remuneration of jurors will be resolved prior to the commencement of the particular money laundering case, the Eurobank Case. I can perceive considerable financial difficulty and burden placed on those who have the misfortune to be empanelled in that case. They will be taken away from their daily jobs for a period of months. It is imperative that they are not disadvantaged as a result.

I hope the Second Official Member by the time he exercises his right of reply will have had an opportunity to canvass his colleagues on the Government bench and indicate whether or not the Government is sympathetic to that proposition. I believe that that proposition has the support of a number of the Members on this side of this Honourable House.

With those few remarks, I close my contribution to the debate on this Bill. Thank you.

The Speaker: I think this may be a convenient time to take the afternoon break. We shall suspend for 15 minutes.

PROCEEDINGS SUSPENDED AT 3.31 PM

PROCEEDINGS RESUMED AT 3.59 PM

The Speaker: Please be seated.

Debate continues on the Second Reading of The Judicature (Amendment) Bill, 2001.

Does any other Member wish to speak? Does any other Member wish to speak? The Floor is open to debate. Does any other Member wish to speak? Last call; does any other Member wish to speak? If not, does the Mover wish to exercise his right of reply?

The Honourable Second Official Member.

Hon. David F. Ballantyne: Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

In view of some of the consequential issues which have arisen I think I should say a few words.

On the issue of education or training for jurors, I have in front of me the leaflet provided to jurors who are summoned entitled Explanatory Note to Prospective Jurors.

It states: “You have been summoned to serve as a juror by the Grand Court of the Cayman Islands. This leaflet gives further information and answers some of the questions you may have.”

It details issues such as: “Do I have to attend? You are exempt from jury service if you are in certain professions.”

You are disqualified if certain things have happened like conviction “for a serious offence and not received a free pardon” and you “should not be required to serve on a jury if you are over 60 years of age.”

“What if I am ill or have a holiday booked?”

“If you have reasons for not attending, you must write to the clerk of the court explaining why you are asking to be excused. You must attend unless the Clerk excuses you in writing.”

“What happens if I fail to attend?”

“You will be liable to a fine of CI$100 each time you fail to attend.”

Of course, this is part of the problem. The fine of $100 has proved to be insufficient in terms of a deterrent to prevent people from failing to attend. In fact, anecdotally, it appears it is possible to encourage people to make arrangements to not be around and those arrangements to be cancelled and it be more economic to do that than pay a $100 fine.

[Inaudible interjection]

Hon. David F. Ballantyne: I am being advised that I should be more specific. Of course, typically cautious, I did not want to spell it out but I will!

I am told, and it is anecdotal, that some people buy an airline ticket to go somewhere else, then make their excuses and thereafter cash it in and they only lose 10 percent on the ticket and do not leave the Island, of course, and do not get fined the $100 either.

This is not satisfactory, if that is the state of affairs, but I suppose neither is the provision regarding payment for jury service.

“Will I get paid for jury service?”

“You will get paid for each attendance at court, the amounts payable are CI$11.50 a day if you live in George Town and CI$12.50 if you live elsewhere on the Island.”

“When will I get paid?”

“You will be given a form to fill in at the end of your jury service. A cheque will be sent to you by the Treasury.”

Well, I am sure everyone will be awaiting that cheque with eagerness. I do not mean to be flippant about it but in fact that is all the remuneration that is paid to a juror, it is clearly insufficient.

There are several other helpful tips about who is selected and what you should bring to court, and in general this is a very helpful leaflet including “Can I ask questions when I am on the jury? Can I talk to anyone about my jury service? What should I do if I know someone in the case?"

I am told as well that there is a video that is shown to perspective jurors and I will table the explanatory note and if I can obtain the video I will also table that. However, the serious underlying issue here is whether the right to jury trial is going to continue to be supported by persons who turn up for jury service.

I note what has been said about the burden that jurors are expected to bear, and, in particular, lengthy trials. I am told it is the expectation that the employer would continue to pay the employee while on jury service and it appears that on some part that happens. However, there is no legal obligation in this jurisdiction, I understand, on the employer to do so.

I must say this is the first time in my experience of over 10 years as an attorney general in various places that I have been asked as a condition precedent of support for a measure to give an undertaking regarding the financial aspects of the implications of the Bill. I am not saying that there is anything improper about that. In fact, I have spoken with Government colleagues, in particular the Leader of Government Business and the Financial Secretary. The Government is prepared to give an undertaking that it will look into the question of remuneration of jurors with a view to try to ensuring – as I said in my opening remarks – that jurors are not financially disadvantaged by serving on juries.

It is important that we all do what we can to maintain the public confidence in the jury system. It is an ancient right, the right to jury trial for serious offences. When a Bill of Rights comes along, it will be even more important that that right is available and preserved.

There are instances now of very lengthy sentences which may be difficult to maintain in the face of a Bill of Rights as case law from the Bahamas and Jamaica has indicated.

Mention was made that payment for jury service should be made and failure to pay should be made a possible contempt of court. Alternatively, it may be possible to consider amending the Labour Law to impose some kind of obligation on employers. However, I think this is a burden which, in the opinion of the Leader of Government Business, ought to be shared and that employers and government both play their parts. I am inclined to agree with him. So, one possibility would be to look into some kind of equitable arrangement whereby government paid a part and employers paid a part. I think allowance would have to be made too for lengthy trials in all of this.

Regarding any analogy of money laundering with murder, I would only point out that money laundering carries a maximum penalty on indictment of 14 years. It is unfortunate that the Memorandum of Objects and Reasons appear to relate the two issues. However, the only relationship between them is the starting number of figures on the jury. For murder, I understand the law will permit only the loss of one juror whereas with money laundering, because of the length of these matters, a potential attrition of up to five jurors would be available.

I think we all have an interest in ensuring that jurors who are the arbiters of fact in criminal trials appear and are positively not discouraged from appearing. Therefore, the surrounding circumstances are relevant and Government has, through me, given the undertaking regarding looking into the question of remuneration.

That having been said, the object of all of this is not just to secure adequate process in money laundering cases but to help to secure and support and improve the system of jury trial. I think that this is all that I wish to say at this juncture. If Members have any particular suggestions regarding the increase in the fee payable to jurors or the travelling allowance which we could incorporate at committee stage, then I believe, the Government would be right to consider uplifting the fees, in order to try to defray some of the expense involved.

I should point out to the House that practice in relation to payment of expenses or fees to jurors, varies. In the UK, the government there reimburses jurors for loss of income, but not entirely, only up to certain amounts depending on the profession of the juror. Nothing in the Cayman Islands compels employers to pay wages or salaries during jury service.

The Government sets a good example in regard that Civil Servants continue to receive their full remuneration when they serve as jurors. They do not suffer a loss of income. However, they do not also get the stipend mentioned under the law. So they do not benefit to that extent.

I think the principles have been elaborated in debate. I do not wish to prolong the matter. If there are any other issues arising which Members wish to raise with me in connection with the Bill, I will be happy to try and address them. In the meantime, I simply will conclude the debate on the Second Reading of the Bill. Thank you.

The Speaker: The question is that a Bill entitled The Judicature (Amendment) Bill, 2001 be given a second reading.

Those in favour please say Aye. Those against, No.

AYES and NOES.

The Speaker: The Ayes have it.

Mr. Alden M. McLaughlin, Jr.: May we have a division, please?

The Speaker: Certainly. Madam Clerk, please call the division.

The Deputy Clerk:

DIVISION NO. 11/01*AYES: 8

Hon. James M. Ryan
 Hon. David F. Ballantyne
 Hon. George A. McCarthy
 Hon. D. Kurt Tibbetts
 Hon. Linford A. Pierson
 Hon. Edna M. Moyle
 Capt. A. Eugene Ebanks
 Mr. Alden M. McLaughlin, Jr.

NOES: 2

Dr. Frank S. McField
 Mr. Lyndon L. Martin

ABSENT: 8

Hon. W. McKeever Bush
 Hon. Roy Bodden
 Mr. Rolston M. Anglin
 Mr. Cline A. Glidden Jr.
 Mr. Gilbert A. McLean
 Mr. Anthony S. Eden
 Mrs. Julianna Y. O'Connor-Connolly
 Mr. V. Arden McLean

The Speaker: The result of the division, eight Ayes, two Noes, eight Absentees. The Bill has accordingly been given a second reading.

AGREED BY MAJORITY: THE JUDICATURE (AMENDMENT) BILL 2001 GIVEN A SECOND READING.

The Speaker: Bills, Second Reading.

THE JUDICATURE (AMENDMENT) (COSTS) BILL, 2001

The Deputy Clerk: The Judicature (Amendment) (Costs) Bill 2001.

The Speaker: The Honourable Second Official Member.

Hon. David F. Ballantyne: I beg to move that a Bill entitled The Judicature (Amendment) (Costs) Bill 2001 be given a second reading.

The Speaker: Do you wish to speak to it? Please continue.

Hon. David F. Ballantyne: I hesitate to suggest that this is a relatively conservative and modest measure. However, I believe it is in the sense that it proposes to amend section 24 of the Judicature Law to the effect that the calculation and taxation of costs in litigation should be matters entirely in the discretion of the court, in relation to civil proceedings in the Court of Appeal and the Grand Court.

It also provides that without prejudice to the general power to make rules of court, such rules may provide for regulating matters relating to costs of proceedings including the entitlement to cost, the taxation of costs, the powers of taxing officers and the powers of judges to review the decisions of taxing officers.

The courts under this Bill would have full power to determine by whom and to what extent costs are to be paid.

In any criminal or civil proceedings the court may disallow any wasted costs. Wasted costs are defined in the Bill as costs incurred by a party as a result of any improper, unreasonable or negligent act or omission on the part of any attorney or foreign lawyer or any employee of such person, or which, in the light of such act or omission, the court considers it unreasonable that that party pay.

In short, this Bill would allow courts to make rules and bring into line, as the Memorandum of Objects and Reasons states, with internationally accepted standards appropriate to a jurisdiction which engages in civil and commercial matters of an international financial nature.

This has been the subject of discussion by the Rules Committee and I therefore commend this Bill to the consideration of the House.

The Speaker: The question is that a Bill entitled The Judicature (Amendment) (Costs) Bill 2001 be given a second reading.

The Floor is open to debate. Does any Member wish to speak? The Motion is open to debate. Does any Member wish to speak? The Floor is open to debate. Does any Member wish to speak?

The Second Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. Alden M. McLaughlin, Jr.: Thank you.

This Bill is part of the result of work of the Rules Committee which has taken more than a decade. The Rules Committee is now at a point where it is ready to issue new costs rules which will bring some commercial reality to the award of costs in the court when there has been a hearing and costs are awarded usually to the party which has succeeded in the application.

The current rules regarding the payment of party-to-party costs in the courts goes back to 1975. It is very basic and as it currently stands provides only nominal sums to be paid by the losing party in relation to these matters.

The new costs order, which is proposed, will give commercial reality to the award of costs and we will get to a point where costs actually mean something. Currently how things stand costs are not a factor in litigation, either in taking the decision to prosecute an action or to defend an action. It is generally considered that the costs which can possibly be awarded on the current scale amount to something between 20 to 25 percent of the actual costs incurred in the conduct of the litigation.

The purpose of the Bill before the House is to give to the Court of Appeal and the Grand Court the ability to make awards of costs entirely within the discretion of the court and further gives the court the ability to make rules relating to costs. The costs order to which I referred earlier will be one of these rules.

The matter has been the subject of more than a decade of debate and fundamentally it will affect the way litigation is conducted in this country. Parties now know that if they pursue some frivolous action and lose, the costs which will be awarded against them will be real costs. Matters as well as steps in litigation will be far more carefully considered before they are taken.

This Bill will give the basis for the making of the costs order proposed. It has been the subject of much debate within the legal profession and having been a part of that process and a member of the Rules Committee for some years, I am very happy that we have now arrived at the stage where we have a Bill before the court and hopefully if the ....

The Speaker: You said "court". I think you mean "House."

Mr. Alden M. McLaughlin, Jr.: Sorry, Mr. Speaker. I am reverting to my earlier life!

We now have a Bill before the House and if it sees safe passage, we will shortly be in a position where there will be a comprehensive costs order as part of the grand court rules which will bring commercial reality to litigation in this country. It will do much to enhance this jurisdiction's status, particularly in relation to the complex international financial litigation that is almost always before the courts these days.

With those few words I join with the Honourable Second Official Member in commending this Bill to this Honourable House.

The Speaker: Does any other Member wish to speak? The Motion is open to debate. Does any other Member wish to speak?

The Third Elected Member for George Town

We have almost reached the hour of interruption and I was hoping we were going to wind up. Do you wish to start? Or does the Honourable Leader of Government Business wish to move the adjournment of this Honourable House?

The Honourable Minister for Planning, Communications and Works.

ADJOURNMENT

Hon. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Mr. Speaker, I move the adjournment of this Honourable House until 10 am Wednesday.

The Speaker: The question is that this Honourable House do now adjourn until 10 am Wednesday 4 July.

Those in favour, please say Aye. Those against, No.

AYES.

The Speaker: The Ayes have it.

AT 4.22 PM THE HOUSE STOOD ADJOURNED
UNTIL 10 AM WEDNESDAY, 4 JULY 2001.

OFFICIAL HANSARD REPORT
WEDNESDAY
4 JULY 2001
10.32 AM
Eighth Sitting

[Prayers read by the Fourth Elected Member for West Bay]

The Speaker: Please be seated.

Item 2 on today's Order Paper, Questions to Honourable Ministers and Members. Question 70 is standing in the name of the Second Elected Member for Bodden Town.

QUESTIONS TO HONOURABLE
MINISTERS AND MEMBERS

QUESTION NO. 70

(postponed Friday 29 June 2001)

No. 70: Mr. Gilbert A. McLean asked the Honourable Minister responsible for the Ministry of Health and Information Technology if Government is considering allowing another telephone company to operate in the Cayman Islands to create healthy competition in telephone services.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Health and Information Technology.

Hon. Linford A. Pierson: As the Member is aware, Cable & Wireless Ltd, currently holds an exclusive license for the provision of telecommunication services to the Cayman Islands. It would be inappropriate for Government to consider allowing another telephone company to operate in the Cayman Islands until that situation changes.

SUPPLEMENTARIES

The Speaker: The Second Elected Member for Bodden Town.

Mr. Gilbert A. McLean: Can the Honourable Minister say if Government is looking to change this contractual situation in any way to allow for competition in telecommunications?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Health and Information Technology.

Hon. Linford A. Pierson: Government from time to time has been approached by numerous companies that have expressed an interest in providing telecommunication services to the Cayman Islands in the event of liberalisation of that sector. Also, a Bill to replace the existing Telephone Radio and Broadcasting Law is currently being drafted. The proposed Bill will provide, not mandate, the introduction of competition in telecommunication.

The Speaker: The Second Elected Member for Bodden Town.

Mr. Gilbert A. McLean: In the event the Bill becomes Law and does allow for alternative providers, would the Government be in a position to consider these without making changes to the present license held by Cable & Wireless?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Health and Information Technology.

Hon. Linford A. Pierson: The present license held by Cable & Wireless is a valid license which runs for a period of I think twenty years from 1991. Until there is a law in place and an authority to control the licensing of an alternate authority to provide these services, then the Cable & Wireless license will remain valid.

The Speaker: The Second Elected Member for Bodden Town.

Mr. Gilbert A. McLean: Can the Honourable Minister say what would be the requirement on Government if they initiated a change to the present situation? What sort of financial or legal requirements would there be?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Health and Information Technology.

Hon. Linford A. Pierson: We have not looked at detailed costing, however I can say that Cable & Wireless has indicated more than once to the Ministry that they would be prepared to look at the question of liberalisation, provided it is done in a proper manner. Thus, the reason I mentioned earlier, in order to do this in properly, we will need to have the requisite Law in place and the authority to monitor such a situation.

The Speaker: The Second Elected Member for Bodden Town.

Mr. Gilbert A. McLean: Can the Honourable Minister say if, in light of his last reply regarding Cable & Wireless, have they been amenable to discussions on liberalisation? Has anything been done in this regard, or would he undertake to explore this situation further to bring some relief to the present situation of the high cost of telephone service, by having another provider, or a second provider I should say?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Health and Information Technology.

Hon. Linford A. Pierson: I think it is correct to say that the Ministry is most interested in looking into the question of liberalisation for various reasons. One being that the competitive atmosphere may open the way for lower prices, this is not always the case, however we believe it would be in the Cayman Islands. In order for the e-commerce to develop properly in the Cayman Islands, it is of firm belief that we will need to have lower prices. These lower prices we believe will be possible through liberalisation in the sector.

The Speaker: The Elected Member for East End.

Mr. V. Arden McLean: Can the Honourable Minister comment on whether or not the conduct of Cable & Wireless over the last few years was in keeping with the contract, regarding prices and removing of Caymanians from their jobs? Would that not have given ample opportunity to renegotiate that contract?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Health and Information Technology.

Hon. Linford A. Pierson: I too was and still am concerned, about the position that Cable & Wireless took with outsourcing work from the Cayman Islands that could have been performed here. However, I would say that they did not in any way act ultra vires under the present agreement. They made a business decision that was in their better interest to outsource some of this work. I do not buy all of the reasons they gave for that, however I cannot say it was in opposition or in any way ultra vires under the agreement. They did not in any way infringe that agreement.

The Speaker: The Elected Member for East End.

Mr. V. Arden McLean: Can the Honourable Minister say whether or not Cable & Wireless's licence is to wholly and solely operate in the Cayman Islands? That is, must the operations be carried out in the Cayman Islands?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Health and Information Technology.

Hon. Linford A. Pierson: Cable & Wireless is a local company registered here as Cable & Wireless (Cayman) Ltd, with an agreement to operate locally. They also, as a worldwide organisation, globally connected have offices in various countries, thus the reason I think they took the decision to outsource some of their work to one of those offices.

For instance, if there was an accounting or law firm in the Cayman Islands that felt one of its overseas firms could do a particular piece of work, they would no doubt send it to that firm. I do not think this was a major infringement. However, the Ministry and I are totally concerned about the outsourcing of work that could have been performed by local people.

The Speaker: The Elected Member for East End.

Mr. V. Arden McLean: I too have been involved with deregulation of utility companies for quite some time. However, in instances where there is a local company, while I understand the Minister using the reference to law firms and the like, can the Minister tell us if a local company has operations here, and a license to operate in this country, a local law firm does not have such a license. Cable & Wireless is bonded to this country by a license in this country.

I wonder if that does not constitute a breach of the license. I am talking about their monopoly license not their business license.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Health and Information Technology.

Hon. Linford A. Pierson: The analogy to me seems to be pretty much the same, although there may be a major difference in this that immediately escapes me. The principle is pretty much the same. I am not sure that Cable & Wireless has gone against the agreement by getting work done overseas. I know that the example given about the accounting and law firms might not be exactly the same, however, there are many companies registered here on the Cayman registration that are governed by Cayman Islands laws that have work done overseas by consultants and otherwise. So, this is not an isolated case, even though I would not want to give the impression that I condone in any way what was done by Cable & Wireless.

I do not want to go into depth in the legal position because I believe this is the purview of the Attorney General. As far as reading the agreement is concerned, I would not say there was anything untoward done about the outsourcing, except that individuals in Cayman were made redundant for work that could have been performed in Cayman. I am most concerned about those people who are without jobs.

The Speaker: The Third Elected Member for George Town.

Dr. Frank S. McField: Certainly the concerns should be about the carrying out of the obligations which are specified in the contract. Can the Honourable Minister say if it is his understanding that the contract is that Cable & Wireless will have the exclusive right to provide persons in the Cayman Islands with telecommunications services and the work in providing these services would be provided locally and not overseas; as the operator services to which Members are referring?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Health and Information Technology.

Hon. Linford A. Pierson: I do not have the agreement readily available. However as I said, Cable & Wireless is now under an exclusive agreement with Government to provide certain telecommunications services. I do not believe the question of outsourcing some of that work was an infringement of that agreement.

The Speaker: The Third Elected Member for George Town.

Dr. Frank S. McField: Can the Honourable Minister say if it is his understanding that other types of work can also be outsourced? Is it his understanding that there would be no breach of contract if Cable & Wireless continued in its rationalisation process to use outsourcing as a way of achieving efficiency and cost savings?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Health and Information Technology.

Hon. Linford A. Pierson: That is a very good question. I am glad the Member raised it. Just this morning I was informed (however, not officially) that the 411 service was being considered for outsourcing. That caused me a lot of concern. If I call up for a number for somebody I cannot see how somebody in Jamaica can say that person is located opposite HO Merren Building or any particular place—they would not have that knowledge. That is something that is known to a local individual.

Therefore, I am most concerned about this trend with Cable & Wireless developing and this is one of the reasons I feel that Government might have to take a position of looking into the question of liberalisation. Under the exclusive agreement, it seems they are doing pretty much what they please under that, provided they are pretty much covered legally.

It is not just the legal aspect we are looking at, it is also the moral aspect of affecting the livelihood of individuals who were made redundant and whose jobs were outsourced to Jamaica. There is more to it than just the legal ramifications; there is also the moral side of it.

The Speaker: The Second Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. Alden M. McLaughlin, Jr.: It is my understanding that the services which were outsourced were outsourced to Cable & Wireless's sister company in Jamaica and that these include operators and operator assisted services.

Can the Honourable Minister say whether he has given consideration to the consequences that would flow from industrial action in Jamaica, for instance? That is not something that is entirely unheard of in Jamaica. In the event that these particular services are affected by such industrial action, what would be the consequence to the provision of services by Cable & Wireless Cayman if those particular services are affected by such action?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Health and Information Technology.

Hon. Linford A. Pierson: It is possible for me to stand here and speculate all morning about what is possible, what could happen, what would happen, what may happen. I really do not have a crystal ball, so I do not know. I can only say that if such a situation occurred in any part of the world—be it Jamaica, England, or anywhere Cable & Wireless has a license—that the Laws of that country would have to deal with the situation. If Cable & Wireless Cayman has made a bad decision by outsourcing to Jamaica, and industrial action caused them to suffer losses there, then they would have to suffer those losses. My concern is what effect it would have on the economy of the Cayman Islands.

However, this is not peculiar only to Cable & Wireless. Any company doing business here that outsourced any of its work overseas may have branches in any other country. The main issue here is that jobs are being taken out—and I repeat this—out of the hands of local Caymanians who are able and ready to perform those jobs.

The Speaker: The Second Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. Alden M. McLaughlin, Jr.: The Minister has identified the point I was driving at. I was not driving at Cable & Wireless's bottom line, but to the effect on the provision of services to this country that Cable & Wireless is bound to provide by the terms of their license. My enquiry was directed to whether or not, in the event these services are disrupted—those services being outsourced—that would constitute a breach of the current license.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Health and Information Technology.

Hon. Linford A. Pierson: I think the provisions of attaching to the agreement between Government and Cable & Wireless are fairly well known to many of the Members here. It is quite clear in that agreement that if Cable & Wireless in any way breaches any part of that agreement, that contract would become null and void. So, there are protections under the agreement where Cable & Wireless will provide the level of services contained in the agreement.

The Speaker: The Fourth Elected Member for West Bay.

Mr. Cline A. Glidden Jr.: The point the Minister raised gives great concern to the area of telecommunications, and security services provided. I know of one such company that provides 24 hour monitoring from overseas in Bermuda. We have people here who feel they are protected (depending on what the situation is politically) while in Bermuda they might not be protected.

When we look at the legislation and talk about outsourcing it brings many questions. My particular question is on outsourcing, which may or may not be where we are sending business overseas.

We all know Cable & Wireless had quite a track record for training Caymanians in the technical fields. We have noted that not only have they sent business, like the 411 operator service, to companies in Jamaica or elsewhere, we noticed that a lot of the technical work done locally has also been outsourced. That is, to outside companies, or to a Caymanian company that is now employing mainly expatriate personnel. We have had a redundancy placed on quite a few of our trained local technicians.

Has there been, or can there be any discussion to try to get Cable & Wireless to account for previous staff members trained for some 15 or 20 years, if it is not a breach of the legal aspect of the contract, maybe from a moral standpoint? Every day we drive on the road and we see Canadians, or whatever nationality, performing the job that those Caymanians used to provide at Cable & Wireless.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Health and Information Technology.

Hon. Linford A. Pierson: I am pleased that the Member has given the example of another business that is outsourced. It is pretty much the same situation, even though I cannot condone that situation. I truly feel that if a business is operating here, they should try to get the business done in the Cayman Islands. That is my personal moral feeling.

The legal side is a totally different issue. This is the matter I would want us to look at very carefully when the new legislation I alluded to comes to this House. This new legislation will be a very comprehensive piece of legislation that deal with telecommunications and with radio and radio communications. It is intended to call the legislation "Information and Communication Technology."

As I speak, we are in the process of correcting a lot of weaknesses in the law; however Rome was not built in a day. Very soon we hope to bring that legislation to the House. Before bringing it to the House to correct some of its weaknesses, I intend to make it a public document so that the public can give their input as well as Honourable Members of this House.

I hope each Member will take the opportunity to correct any weakness they see in the system. I am not able to answer questions this morning. However, I will say that I have the machinery in place to correct these weaknesses. Hopefully, we will be able to do that very soon.

SUSPENSION OF STANDING ORDER 23(7) AND (8)

[Moved by the Honourable Minister for Health and Information Technology]

QUESTION PUT. AGREED: STANDING ORDER 23 (7) AND (8) SUSPENDED TO ALLOW QUESTION TIME TO CONTINUE BEYOND 11.00 AM.

The Speaker: The Fourth Elected Member for West Bay.

Mr. Cline A. Glidden Jr.: I appreciate the Minister going through my example; however, my actual question was concerning the local outsourcing of work. I wonder if there have been any discussions or negotiations with Cable & Wireless in an attempt to try to rectify that situation.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Health and Information Technology.

Hon. Linford A. Pierson: This is one area that has been discussed with Cable & Wireless (I will not mention the names of the individuals involved in that discussion). They have been told in no uncertain terms that Government and my Ministry are really not pleased with the current situation. It is my understanding that locally there are certain individuals who are qualified to fulfill some of the jobs that are presently being outsourced to Jamaica. We feel that those individuals should be given the opportunity to fill those positions. Those matters are being looked into and Cable & Wireless understands that we will not sit back and allow this to continue indefinitely.

The Speaker: The Second Elected Member for West Bay.

Mr. Rolston M. Anglin: It is good to hear that the Minister takes this subject seriously. We all know that Cable & Wireless is a key component in our economy. I thank you, Mr. Speaker, for allowing us to carry on this questioning at length.

Can the Honourable Minister say whether he would give an undertaking to have the Honourable Second Official Member review the contract to do two things: 1) ensure that the outsourcing is within the legal confines of the contract, and more importantly, is it within the spirit of the contract? When we give Cable & Wireless and exclusive right to do business in Cayman, I think it would be expected that it would be reciprocal. We would not be satisfied, after giving them that exclusive right, if they outsourced their entire operation, reaped the profits and not hire local Caymanians.

My question is, would the Minister give an undertaking to have the Honourable Second Official Member review the contract to do two things: 1) ensure that the outsourcing to Jamaica and locally, the technicians made redundant are all within the legal confines of their contract; and 2) whether or not that is within the spirit of the contract?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Health and Information Technology.

Hon. Linford A. Pierson: The Member asking the supplementary is aware that the machinery has recently been set up that will give him and other Members the opportunity to look into the legal aspects of the outsourcing. I believe it would be inappropriate at this time to pre-empt the working of that committee by making any specific recommendations or requests from the Hon. Second Official Member.

However, I will say that within the terms of reference of that committee—of which he is a member—there is ample opportunity there to look into this specific issue. For the information of the House, so everyone knows what committee I am talking about, I would mention what this committee is all about.

I have, through Executive Council, appointed a committee which is called the Telecommunications Advisory Committee. This committee will prepare a report to me, as Minister that will provide the following four major issues:

(a) An assessment of the current and anticipated future requirements for local and international telecommunication services in the Cayman Islands;

(b) An assessment of how well, in terms of range, quality and cost of services the offerings of the present service provider meet these current and future requirements;

(c) Provide a comparison between the range, quality and cost of communication services currently available in the Cayman Islands and those available in comparable jurisdictions such as The Bahamas, Bermuda, Channel Islands, Hong Kong, Isle of Man, and Luxembourg; and

(d) Provide an assessment of the telecommunications price reform proposal submitted by Cable & Wireless (Cayman Islands) Ltd. on 9 May 2001 and currently being revised by them. Particular regard should be paid to the likely implications for:

- 1) Customers in the Sister Islands;
- 2) Domestic customers with small usage rates;
- 3) Small and medium size business customers; and
- 4) Development of e-business.

We have specifically provided an all-encompassing section which states: "To carry out such other tasks as may be from time to time referred to the committee by the Minister and to make recommendations to him on future telecommunications strategy."

I have given these terms of reference to show that the Telecommunications Advisory Committee that has been established will have the authority to look into matters of outsourcing, whether or not it is legal. These matters can be raised with the legal department. They will also look into the question of whether or not it is within the spirit of the contract. They will be able under the terms of reference to deal with those issues.

Just to say, finally, that members of the committee are: Mr. Cline Glidden Jr. MLA, Chairman; Mr. Rolston Anglin, MLA, Chairman; Mr. David Archbold, Information Technology Strategy Unit; Mr. Bryan Ashenheim, attorney; Capt. Eugene Ebanks, MLA; Mr. Charles Farrington; Mr. Everett Leacock; Mr. Alden McLaughlin, Jr, MLA, Mr. V. Arden McLean, MLA; Dr. Christopher Rose, Director of Finance and Economic Development Secretariat; Mr. Eleo Solomon; Mr. Lyndhurst Bodden, former Cable & Wireless employee; and Mrs. Ramona Ritch, Secretary to the committee. Most of these have a tremendous amount of experience in telecommunications.

The Speaker: I have to limit this to three more supplementaries.

The Third Elected Member for West Bay.

Capt. A. Eugene Ebanks: Notwithstanding how I feel about Cable & Wireless outsourcing their longstanding capable employees, I would expect that in issuing a license to Cable & Wireless such as they have, Government would have some stipulation to say whether or not they would be providing employment to Caymanians or for jobs they could capably do and bring in technical expertise Caymanians could not fill. Can the Honourable Minister say whether or not that is part of the agreement with Cable & Wireless?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Health and Information Technology.

Hon. Linford A. Pierson: I clearly understand the Member's point. I would be the first to say that hindsight is 20/20. A number of things could have been included in the 1991 agreement, had we foreseen at the time what would have occurred in the year 2001.

Thus the reason for the setting up of the committee and the new telecommunications Law is to correct those issues. Many of these weaknesses will be corrected.

I am not suggesting that Cable & Wireless is not providing a very good service. I think to say that would be understating the service they provide to the Cayman Islands. I would also say that under the current agreement, Government has obtained for the first time in the history of this country since 1991, on the average of some $8 million to $10 million per year in royalty fees. This was the first.

Even though certain things may be required to be placed in the agreement, there were issues that were dealt with in the agreement that have proven of major benefit to the people of the Cayman Islands.

The Speaker: The Second Elected Member for Bodden Town.

Mr. Gilbert A. McLean: Can the Honourable Minister say whether the Government at this time has made any effort in regard to the pricing mechanism that Cable & Wireless is allowed to use? Based on the idea of reducing it if the Government is not minded to allow, in the immediate future competition from other sources that could provide telecommunication services?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Health and Information Technology.

Hon. Linford A. Pierson: Just let me deal with the last part of the Member's question first and hopefully lay this issue to rest. I hope the impression was not given in any of the answers this morning that Government is not seriously and actively looking into the possibility of reducing prices, be that by liberalisation or by the unilateral action of Cable & Wireless to cut their prices. That is the reason their proposal submitted to Government on 9 May 2001, I think, was not accepted by Government. It was referred to a committee.

This was also the reason we decided to appoint the Telecommunication Advisory Committee with individuals with telecommunication experience and knowledge that could advise the portfolio on the issue of pricing. We are not happy with the pricing scales of Cable & Wireless at present. Let me not understate that—we are not happy with it!

We also believe that the present situation will not allow for enhancement and development of e-business in the Cayman Islands. We are very much dedicated to this issue. I intend to speak at more length on this in my speech to the Chamber of Commerce next Wednesday, 11 July.

The Speaker: Final supplementary.
The Elected Member for East End.

Mr. V. Arden McLean: I do not know who else feels cheated in this country, by the telecommunications company, but I do. Their service is not good, contrary to what was said by the Minister. My position is that the service is not good.

It appears that Cable & Wireless is preparing for deregulation by reducing the rates, or trying to fool this country that they are reducing the rates, and then putting it back on as soon as the outsourcing has been completed. That is fooling the people of this country and we must stop pussyfooting with Cable & Wireless!

We are talking about outsourcing Cable & Wireless and other things within the community, however we also have on the other side of that coin the FATF (Financial Action Task Force) and the OECD (Organization for Economic Co-operation and Development). They want to control our operations in this country. I wonder if the minister can say what effect outsourcing e-business in this country is going to have on our position with the FATF and OECD? They are asking us to ensure that we control here, however we can not control outsourcing sent to Bermuda. Secondly, what provisions in the review of the Telecommunications Law will cover that?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Health and Information Technology.

Hon. Linford A. Pierson: I will try to answer that fairly long question by first stating that the Member has a totally wrong impression if he feels that Government is "pussyfooting" with Cable & Wireless. Nothing could be further from the truth. We are seriously committed to our position with Cable & Wireless. What must be understood is that we will not rashly rush into discontinuing an agreement with Cable & Wireless. They have a valid agreement with the Cayman Islands, and it is true that the Ministry will seek to have that situation liberalised, however, we will not break an agreement that has been validly entered into until the necessary issues have been dealt with, at which time we will be able to allow competition or liberalisation.

Regarding the services that Cable & Wireless provides to the Cayman Islands, I think each individual can express his own opinion. This is all relative—bad compared to what? Or, good compared to what? I know that I am not satisfied that it is as cost effective as it should be, and that is my major concern.

In regard to what effect outsourcing will have on OECD and FATF, which is a matter we will have to look into. Right now, the question before us and the major question facing e-business worldwide is the whole question of taxation of e-business. There are a lot of issues upon which the Cayman Islands as a developing e-business centre will have to focus. Perhaps outsourcing is one of those issues as it relates to OECD or FATF. The reason we have appointed a committee of what we feel are able, upstanding individuals, such as the Member from East End, who will be able to assist the Government with his invaluable knowledge on this issue—since he seems so knowledgeable.

[Laughter and interjections]

Hon. Linford A. Pierson: I am hoping that as soon as the committee starts its deliberation that my office will be flooded with very useful information so that we can deal effectively with Cable & Wireless.

The Speaker: Moving on to question 71, standing in the name of the Second Elected Member for West Bay

QUESTION NO. 71

No. 71: Mr. Rolston M. Anglin asked the Honourable First Official Member responsible for the Portfolio of Internal and External Affairs what is the Cayman Islands Government's policy in regard to political asylum seekers.

The Speaker: The Honourable First Official Member responsible for Internal and External Affairs.

Hon. James M. Ryan: The United Kingdom's obligations under the 1951 Convention and the 1967 protocol relating to the status of refugees has not been extended to the majority of the overseas territories. We are, however, expected to honour the principles of the Convention and its protocol. We are accordingly guided in our policy by the intent of the Convention.

SUPPLEMENTARIES

The Speaker: The Second Elected Member for West Bay.

Mr. Rolston M. Anglin: The answer ended off by stating, "We are accordingly guided in our policy by the intent of the Convention" and I would also assume the 1967 protocol.

Can the Honourable Member say what he means by "our policy"?

The Speaker: The Honourable First Official Member responsible for Internal and External Affairs.

Hon. James M. Ryan: The 1951 Convention is a document about 3/4 of an inch thick. I would not try to circulate that to all Honourable Members, nor would I expect anyone to sit down and read it.

Perhaps I can summarise very briefly, the Convention will call on the country receiving the refugees to carry out a screening exercise providing the persons ask for political asylum. There is an organisation of the United Nations called the UN High Commission on Refugees based in Geneva. They have representatives in various parts of the world.

A representative will visit the jurisdiction receiving refugees and those refugees will be screened to determine whether in fact they are political refugees or economic migrants. If they are deemed to be political refugees then the host country is expected to receive them and be responsible for their well being until they are either able to find another country to go to, or to be integrated into the host country.

The Speaker: The Second Elected Member for West Bay.

Mr. Rolston M. Anglin: I appreciate the Member's answer. However, I think we may not have had a meeting of the minds. I was not in any way asking him to distribute the 1951 Convention or the 1967 protocol. I was only asking, since he stated in his answer that "we are only guided in our policy by the intent of the Convention" which seems to imply that the Cayman Islands Government has a policy guided by the intent of the Convention.

I wondered if the member would share with us what the policy is.

The Speaker: The Honourable First Official Member responsible for Internal and External Affairs.

Hon. James M. Ryan: I believe a part of my last answer gave an explanation of that, however, let me reiterate for clarity. I suppose the case that is perhaps best known is the case of the approximately 1200 Cuban migrants that arrived here in the Cayman Islands in the mid 1990s. Many of them asked for political asylum. A representative of the UN High Commission on Refugees came to the Cayman Islands. A screening exercise was carried out and so our policy is that we would screen persons requesting political asylum.

If they are deemed to be political refugees, then the country will as it were, take them in, assist them until they are able to care for themselves.

The Speaker: The Second Elected Member for West Bay.

Mr. Rolston M. Anglin: Is the Honourable First Official Member saying that the Cayman Islands Government does not have a specific policy on political asylum seekers and that we simply revert to the UK's obligations and we then take the situation from there?

The Cayman Islands Government knowing, as he alluded to, have had influxes of political asylum seekers from our Communist neighbour that have caused us tremendous amounts of money. Therefore, can the Cayman Islands Government say if we have a distinct policy as he said, that is guided by the intent of the conventions laid down by the UK?

The Speaker: The Honourable First Official Member responsible for Internal and External Affairs.

Hon. James M. Ryan: There is no local legislation to govern this. As mentioned earlier, we are guided by the 1951 Convention and its protocol.

The Speaker: The Fourth Elected Member for West Bay.

Mr. Cline A. Glidden Jr.: The First Official Member made reference to the Cuban situation. In the past when we thought of political asylum seekers we usually referred to the neighbours he mentioned. However, Cayman has quite a few longstanding ties to those people. I assume the decisions made took all of that into account.

More recently, we have had cases of asylum seekers from much, much further away—in particular, referring to the asylum seekers from Afghanistan. When he mentioned screening of those individuals, what is the status of that case? What stops us from getting more asylum seekers from those areas coming here? From our understanding, it is virtually impossible to screen those individuals because it is very difficult to get information from those countries. What is our policy in regard to that?

The Speaker: The Honourable First Official Member responsible for Internal and External Affairs.

Hon. James M. Ryan: The case the Member referred to of the three Afghans is a most unusual case. He is aware that the matter was dealt with through the courts. The current position is that while immigration authorities in Cayman have interviewed them, we have requested and await the arrival of a representative from the (United Nations High Commission for Refugees) UNHCR familiar with the jurisdiction from which they came to interview them

The Speaker: The Second Elected Member for West Bay.

Mr. Rolston M. Anglin: Can the Honourable First Official Member say who bears the cost of these representatives coming to Cayman?

The Speaker: The Honourable First Official Member responsible for Internal and External Affairs.

Hon. James M. Ryan: The cost is borne by the UNHCR.

The Speaker: The Second Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman.

Mr. Lyndon L. Martin: Earlier, the First Official Member referred to the fact that the Cayman Islands Government would assist those granted political asylum until they could care for themselves. Would he outline the format, and how far reaching is this assistance?

The Speaker: The Honourable First Official Member responsible for Internal and External Affairs.

Hon. James M. Ryan: I suppose I can refer to the instance of the Cubans that came to Cayman again. For the benefit of legislators and the listening public, of the approximately 1200 (1184, I believe) migrants that came, 42 were deemed to be political refugees. Government assisted those 42 with housing, food, medical care, et cetera, until they were able to either move on to another jurisdiction—and most of them have—or else to get employment in the Cayman Islands.

I think there is a handful left and it is my understanding that they are no longer a financial burden, for want of a better word, on the Cayman Islands Government.

The Speaker: Three additional supplementaries.
The Fourth Elected Member for West Bay.

Mr. Cline A. Glidden Jr.: I know the Member referred to the fact that the last case was decided through the court. It seems that over a period of time we have come to some sort of an agreement with our Cuban neighbours. I daresay that a precedent may have been set with the case that took place through the court.

Are there any plans for a change in policy or legislation to stop what could possibly be a stream of asylum seekers coming to the Cayman Islands from distant other jurisdictions, where it is very difficult for us to assess them?

In this last case we bore the cost of maintaining them and the cost of a hearing through the court. Even if we could repatriate them, it would be very expensive and very difficult as well. Is there any policy or legislation to prevent such reoccurrence?

The Speaker: The Honourable First Official Member responsible for Internal and External Affairs.

Hon. James M. Ryan: In the case of the three Afghans, the court aspect was really dealing with their detention and, as the member would know, they were detained at Northward Prison. The matter of their future will have to be dealt with first of all when the representative from UNHCR arrives, and a determination is made if they are indeed political asylum seekers. Then, the question is of repatriation. The Member made reference to the very difficult task.

In regard to the question of a change in policy, the fact is that requests by asylum seekers (and we get these requests from time to time) are turned down and simply not entertained. These three, as the Member will know, came in under very unusual circumstances. In fact, we are still trying to determine the situation of their arrival. However, I do not believe that the country needs to be unduly alarmed about us getting an influx of asylum seekers.

In the case of the Cuban situation, I led a delegation to Cuba and negotiated a memorandum of understanding with the Cuban Government. Any Cubans that arrive here are repatriated. I will say that the Memorandum of Understanding works; it has been put into effect and used three or four times.

It is true that it seems we are stuck at the moment with these three Afghans, however, I do not believe the country has to worry about an influx of people coming in requesting political asylum. We simply will not entertain the requests.

The Speaker: The Second Elected Member for West Bay.

Mr. Rolston M. Anglin: Is it my understanding, although nothing was mentioned in the substantive answer, that there is a policy in regard to political asylum seekers from Cuba?

When persons with a different language and culture come here and do need assistance, how long do we give assistance? Even if they met the criteria and were able to stay here, this could be an extremely burdensome situation in regard to the person fending for himself and becoming a productive part of the Caymanian society.

The Speaker: The Honourable First Official Member responsible for Internal and External Affairs.

Hon. James M. Ryan: I will be pleased to circulate the memorandum of understanding which has been signed with the Cuban Government to members.

In respect of the language barrier, I alluded in the beginning to the size of the document (the 1951 Convention), I did that purposely to say it is a very lengthy document that I would not try to paraphrase. There is a section in it that refers to persons that come here who speak a different language. While the UNHCR does not readily use this section, what it says is that persons may be moved to a jurisdiction where their language is spoken. So, for the sake of argument, a person coming here that speaks Spanish, that is not the national language here, the person may be moved to a jurisdiction that does speak Spanish.

There are a number of things in the Convention that can be applied in those situations.

The Speaker: Are there any further supplementaries?

If not, we move on to question 72, standing in the name of the Fourth Elected Member for West Bay.

QUESTION NO. 72

No. 72: Mr. Cline A. Glidden Jr. asked the Honourable First Official Member responsible for the Portfolio of Internal and External Affairs what is the total number of work permits currently issued by government in (a) Grand Cayman; (b) Cayman Brac; and (c) Little Cayman.

The Speaker: The Honourable First Official Member responsible for Internal and External Affairs.

Hon. James M. Ryan: The total number of work permits currently issued by the Government in Grand Cayman is 14,539. In Cayman Brac and Little Cayman the total number is 580. The department does not keep separate work permit records for Little Cayman. These figures include annual work permits, six-month work permits, and temporary work permits.

SUPPLEMENTARIES

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman.

Mrs. Julianna Y. O'Connor-Connolly: Would the Honourable First Official Member say what categories those work permits actually fall into, those relating to Cayman Brac and Little Cayman?

The Speaker: The Honourable First Official Member responsible for Internal and External Affairs.

Hon. James M. Ryan: For the Cayman Brac and Little Cayman there are 58 temporary work permits; 34 six-month work permits; 157 grants of annual permits; and 331 annual permits that were renewed.

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman.

Mrs. Julianna Y. O'Connor-Connolly: Can the Member say what industry category these fall into? Is it domestic, construction, professional, et cetera?

The Speaker: The Honourable First Official Member responsible for Internal and External Affairs.

Hon. James M. Ryan: These permits are right across the board—professional, managerial, domestic, gardeners, construction workers, et cetera.

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman.

Mrs. Julianna Y. O'Connor-Connolly: If the Member does not have this information readily available, I would be more than happy if he would give an undertaking to provide it. It is of much interest to the Second Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman and me. These statistics would show whether or not these are jobs that local Cayman Brackers either do not want or are not qualified to take.

The Speaker: The Honourable First Official Member responsible for Internal and External Affairs.

Hon. James M. Ryan: I will be happy to undertake to provide those statistics.

The Speaker: The Fourth Elected Member for West Bay.

Mr. Cline A. Glidden Jr.: My question is very similar. Since a few weeks ago we discussed budgetary requirements for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman and the fact that there was not a lot of work going on there, and the need for some additional funding for PWD to provide work. I wondered whether the requirements for issuance of work permits in Cayman Brac and Little Cayman was as it is here and ensured that there are no local people who could perform those jobs before the permits are issued.

Without knowledge of the exact population, given the fact that 580 work permits were issued, it does not appear to be necessary for additional funding to provide work. There seems to be quite a bit of work going on there. I would be interested in seeing where those work permits are as well.

The Speaker: What is your question?

Mr. Cline A. Glidden Jr.: Is the criteria used in Cayman Brac and Little Cayman the same as that used in Grand Cayman for the issuance of work permits?

The Speaker: The Honourable First Official Member responsible for Internal and External Affairs.

Hon. James M. Ryan: Yes, the criteria are the same in Cayman Brac and Little Cayman as in Grand Cayman. I should point out for the benefit of the public and I think the Member knows, there is an immigration board for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman, where the criteria would be the same. I will be pleased to make those statistics available to everyone.

I would hasten to add that these statistics included work permits that were issued for employees of the company that did the work on the resurfacing of the Gerrard Smith International Airport, and those employees have now left. The figures as shown here are a bit higher than they would be if we took the figures today. Those persons were brought in for a specific period of time and have now left the jurisdiction.

The Speaker: The Second Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman.

Mr. Lyndon L. Martin: I would just like to point out to this House that when you compare the permits issued in Grand Cayman (14,539) to a population of 37,473 (which is 38.8 percent) the 580 permits in Cayman Brac and Little Cayman in relation to the population of 1937, which is only 29.9 percent is not that the permits in Cayman Brac and Little Cayman are extremely high compared to Grand Cayman.

Is the Honourable First Official Member in a position to indicate how many permits were in that temporary situation he related?

The Speaker: The Honourable First Official Member responsible for Internal and External Affairs.

Hon. James M. Ryan: I have to say that I do not have the details of the actual number of permits issued specifically for the job at the airport. However, I know the number was not insignificant. It was a sizeable number of persons who came in specifically for the job and left at its conclusion.

The Speaker: The Fourth Elected Member for West Bay.

Mr. Cline A. Glidden Jr.: The statement made a while ago in reference to the 14,000 permits, was exactly my point. Five hundred and eighty permits in a smaller industry, done in comparison to what we have in Grand Cayman ... for the amount of activity in Cayman Brac and Little Cayman. It appears to be a substantial amount, yet the percentage is a little less than what it is in Grand Cayman.

When we look at the 58 temporary and 34 six month permits, I assume then that those would have been included in the airport permits?

The Speaker: The Honourable First Official Member responsible for Internal and External Affairs.

Hon. James M. Ryan: Yes, that is correct.

The Speaker: The Second Elected Member for West Bay.

Mr. Rolston M. Anglin: That accounts for 92 of the 580.

In regard to work permits in Cayman Brac and Little Cayman, can the Member tell us the rationale behind having a separate immigration board to deal with those matters?

The Speaker: The Honourable First Official Member responsible for Internal and External Affairs.

Hon. James M. Ryan: For a long time it was felt that if Cayman Brac and Little Cayman had its own board. Members of the public on those Islands would have a more intimate knowledge of the situation in regard to labour, or the lack thereof. They would be in a better position to make decisions in regard to the granting or refusing, as the case may be, of applications for work permits.

I believe that it has proven to be correct that persons serving on the immigration board for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman will be able to give firsthand information on the employment situation. It is a bit unfair to expect members in Grand Cayman to have full knowledge of the situation. So, I think it was the correct decision to amend the law to allow an immigration board for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman.

The Speaker: Moving on to question 73, standing in the name of the Third Elected Member for George Town.

QUESTION NO. 73

No. 73: Dr. Frank S. McField asked the Honourable First Official Member responsible for the Portfolio of Internal and External Affairs (a) when the matter of parole for inmates at Northward Prison was being reviewed in 2000, was the parole of lifers also reviewed; and (b) what was the outcome of the decision in regard to the lifers.

The Speaker: The Honourable First Official Member responsible for Internal and External Affairs.

Hon. James M. Ryan: (a) Parole for lifers was considered when parole for other inmates was reviewed; and (b) it was, however, decided to defer the introduction of the guidelines for parole of lifers at that time.

SUPPLEMENTARIES

The Speaker: The Second Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. Alden M. McLaughlin, Jr.: Would the Honourable First Official Member say if a decision has now been taken to deal with the introduction of guidelines for parole for lifers bearing in mind, in particular, the human rights implications wrapped up in a situation where people are detained indefinitely with no indication as to whether their detention is for the remainder of their natural life, or if there is some hope for release?

The Speaker: The Honourable First Official Member responsible for Internal and External Affairs.

Hon. James M. Ryan: First of all, to put the matter into perspective, the decision on parole for lifers is a decision for His Excellency the Governor acting in his sole discretion.

His Excellency is of the view that he wishes to consult with the Members of the Legislative Assembly, both elected and official, before taking this decision. He has already discussed the matter briefly in Executive Council, but proposes to shortly meet with all Members of the Legislative Assembly and listen to views before making his decision.

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman.

Mrs. Julianna Y. O'Connor-Connolly: I am indeed happy to hear of this new policy approach by His Excellency the Governor involving us in participation. I would ask the First Official Member if he can say if this would be applicable only to his sole decision or to other decisions as well.

[Members' laughter]

The Speaker: The Honourable First Official Member responsible for Internal and External Affairs.

Hon. James M. Ryan: I will not attempt to speak for His Excellency. He is quite capable of speaking for himself. Perhaps when he comes down to meet with Members of the Legislative Assembly the First Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman might want to direct that question to him. However I believe that much can be gleaned from the advice and counsel of the representatives of the people of this country and His Excellency is very aware of this and will want to hear from each and every Member before making his decision.

The Speaker: The Elected Member for East End.

Mr. V. Arden McLean: I am also just as happy as the First Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman.

Would the First Official Member tell us about the other review of the prison that was done earlier this year? Is that forthcoming? Was parole also a part of that review?

The Speaker: I think that is somewhat outside the ambit of the substantive question, however, if the First Official Member wishes to answer, he may.

The Honourable First Official Member responsible for Internal and External Affairs.

Hon. James M. Ryan: Just by way of information that report, and it is a fairly extensive report, is now in hand. It will shortly be going to Executive Council after which it will be tabled in the House. I would prefer not to comment on the details of the report, but the Member can be assured that it will be tabled here in the Legislative Assembly shortly.

The Speaker: The Third Elected Member for George Town.

Dr. Frank S. McField: I guess you know I am not happy about this.

What I would like to ask the Honourable First Official Member is why have steps not been taken to get the input from the parole board in regard to this very important issue? Why is it being considered that the views of Members of the Legislative Assembly are more paramount than those of the parole board?

The Speaker: The Honourable First Official Member responsible for Internal and External Affairs.

Hon. James M. Ryan: The fact that I did not refer to the Parole Commissioner's Board does not mean that His Excellency is not going to consult, or has not consulted with them. They are his advisory commissioners on matters of parole and I am sure he will have input; if he has not already done so, from that group.

The Speaker: The Third Elected Member for George Town.

Dr. Frank S. McField: The First Official Member said that it is His Excellency's sole right, under the Constitution I think it is implied, to make decisions regarding lifers. Can he say whether his involving the Members of the Legislative Assembly is consistent with his having this sole responsibility? Or is it that he can exercise sole responsibility in whatever manner he chooses to?

The Speaker: The Honourable First Official Member responsible for Internal and External Affairs.

Hon. James M. Ryan: I believe that the Member may be asking for my opinion here. I am not legal advisor to His Excellency. However I believe that (and this is my opinion) His Excellency can seek advice from persons he feels are in a position to give him advice and counsel. I am pleased that he is going to seek the advice of legislators, because I think legislators will have the pulse of the people. Elected Members of the Legislative Assembly are put here by the people and are in a position to express views and I believe will express sound views to his Excellency.

The Speaker: Two additional supplementaries.
The Third Elected Member for George Town.

Dr. Frank S. McField: Can the Honourable First Official Member say that he has not just demonstrated the need for Constitutional change in this country?

[Laughter and interjections]

The Speaker: I think that is asking for an opinion.
The Elected Member for East End.

Mr. V. Arden McLean: Here is mine—yes!
Mr. Speaker, when I said that I was happy, that came from the fact that the First Official Member said that the Governor was going to seek opinions from the legislators. I just wanted to clear the air on that one.

He said that soon the Governor would be seeking advice. Can he put a timeframe on that?

The Speaker: The Honourable First Official Member responsible for Internal and External Affairs.

Hon. James M. Ryan: I believe it is very possible, although I do not think the Governor has actually requested yet, that this could happen as soon as late next week, or certainly the week after. It is very soon.

The Speaker: That concludes Question Time for today. Proceedings are suspended for 15 minutes.

PROCEEDINGS SUSPENDED AT 12.10 PM

PROCEEDINGS RESUMED AT 12.35 PM

The Speaker: Please be seated.

The next item on the Order Paper is Government Business, Bills, Second readings. Continuation of debate on The Judicature (Amendment) (Costs) Bill 2001.

The Third Elected Member for George Town.

GOVERNMENT BUSINESS

BILLS

SECOND READINGS

THE JUDICATURE (AMENDMENT) (COSTS) BILL 2001

(Continuation of debate thereon)

Dr. Frank S. McField: I rise to give this Bill support and also to mention the fact that it appears that the courts might be able to exercise some type of authority regarding granting the Crown costs. I think that is welcomed, especially when we are looking at things like money laundering cases that will last three months and be expensive. We see that in a lot of these cases, companies are being liquidated. Liquidators are making millions and millions of dollars and our judicial system has to go into gear to adjudicate and at the end of the day the expenses are on the Crown, which means on the people.

I would be happy to see that this is done. I think it is timely that this Bill be brought and given approval by this House.

The Speaker: Does any other Member wish to speak? (Pause) Does any other Member wish to speak? (Pause)

If not, would the Mover like to exercise his right of reply?

The Honourable Second Official Member.

Hon. David F. Ballantyne: Thank you and I thank the contributors to the debate for what they have said in support of this long awaited amendment which will facilitate the making of modern and appropriate rules regarding costs which are efficient in operation.

It also clarifies that, subject to this Law and those Rules of Court, costs in relation to civil proceedings in the Court of Appeal and the Grand Court are to be in the discretion of the court.

Provision is also made, as I mentioned, for the court in criminal or civil proceedings to disallow certain costs if they are regarded as wasted costs or to require wasted costs to be met by an attorney or foreign lawyer. Wasted costs are defined as costs incurred by a party as a result of any improper, unreasonable, or negligent act or omission on the part of an attorney or foreign lawyer; or which the court considers it unreasonable to expect that party to pay in the light of any act or omission after the costs have been incurred. Therefore, in an indirect way, the ability of the court to sanction the conduct or misconduct perhaps of litigation is a very useful attribute.

As these Rules of Court are published and set out the cost of litigation in civil proceedings, this will lead to greater understanding of the implications of undertaking civil proceedings. As has been said, costs will be set at a level that is current and therefore this appears to be a needed reform and conducive to the operation of civil procedure in the Cayman Islands.

Accordingly, I commend the Bill for further consideration by the House.

The Speaker: The question is that a Bill entitled The Judicature (Amendment) (Costs) Bill, 2001 be given a second reading. Those in favour please say Aye. Those against, No.

AYES.

The Speaker: The Ayes have it.

AGREED: THE JUDICATURE (AMENDMENT) (COSTS) BILL, 2001 GIVEN A SECOND READING.

The Speaker: At this time we have completed the second reading of Bills. Is it the wish of the House to go into Committee or take the luncheon break?

We shall suspend until 2.15 pm.

PROCEEDINGS SUSPENDED AT 12.42 PM

PROCEEDINGS RESUMED AT 2.36 PM

The Speaker: Please be seated.

We shall now go into committee to consider The Penal Code (Amendment) (Incest) Bill, 2001, and three other Bills.

HOUSE IN COMMITTEE AT 2.37 PM

COMMITTEE ON BILLS

The Chairman: The House is now in Committee. With the leave of the House, may I assume that as usual we should authorise the Second Official Member to correct minor printing errors and such like in these Bills?

Would the Clerk state each Bill and read its clauses?

THE PENAL CODE (AMENDMENT)
(INCEST) BILL, 2001

The Clerk: The Penal Code (Amendment) (Incest) Bill, 2001.

Clause 1. Short title.

The Chairman: There is an amendment to Clause 1.

Hon. David F. Ballantyne: I move that Clause 1 be amended by deleting the word "(Incest)" where it appears in the Bill so the Bill would have a short title "Penal Code (Amendment) Law, 2001."

The Chairman: The question is that Clause 1 be amended by deleting the word "(Incest)". If there is no debate, I shall put the question. Those in favour please say Aye. Those against, No.

AYES.

The Chairman: The Ayes have it.

AMENDMENT TO CLAUSE 1 PASSED.

The Chairman: The question is that Clause 1, as amended do stand part of the Bill. Those in favour please say Aye. Those against, No.

AYES.

The Chairman: The Ayes have it.

CLAUSE 1 AS AMENDED PASSED.

The Clerk: Clause 2. Amendment of section 144 of the Penal Code (1995 Revision)—Incest by males.

The Chairman: There is an amendment to Clause 2.

Hon. David F. Ballantyne: I move that clause 2 of the Bill (to be renumbered as clause 5) be amended. In subsection (1) the expression 'five years' has been repealed and the following substituted "if the offence is with a girl under 13, for life, otherwise for twenty years."

In subsection (3), by inserting after the word "offence" the words "and liable to imprisonment if the offence is with a girl under 13 for ten years, otherwise for seven years."

The Chairman: In accordance with Standing Order 52(7), "The Chairman may refuse to put an amendment which appears to him to be intended to vary the basic substance if in his opinion the proper course is to negate the clause and propose a new one.”

Standing Order 52(8) goes on to read, “New clauses shall be considered after the clauses in the Bill as printed have been disposed of and before consideration of the schedules. The Chairman shall call on the Member in whose name the new clause stands; and when that Member has moved the clause, the Clerk shall read the marginal note of the clause and the clause shall then be taken to have been read a first time. The question shall then be put ‘That this clause be read a second time.’ If this question is agreed upon amendments may be moved, and after these have been disposed of the question shall be ‘That this clause (or this clause as amended) be added to the Bill as clause No. ___ and that the subsequent clauses be renumbered accordingly.’”

In accordance with this Standing Order, I ask that we negate Clause 2 in the Bill and proceed to take the others printed in this Bill and go back to the amendment.

Hon. David F. Ballantyne: Mr. Chairman, I may have inadvertently put this incorrectly. I think the amendments to clause 2 are in fact amendments; they are not altering the substance. The amendments in fact are relatively minor—Clause 2 of the Bill is to be renumbered as Clause 5; Clause 3 of the Bill is to be renumbered clause 6.

The amendment to Clause 2 of the Bill (the renumbered Clause 5) is to delete the words “The Penal Code (1995 Revision)” and substituting the words “The principal Law”; and in what was Clause 2(a), now Clause 5(a), delete the word “ten” and substitute the word “twenty.”

There are in fact only two changes, two amendments to what was Clause 2, and will now be Clause 5.

I take the Chairman’s point in relation to the new clauses, that is, the new Clauses 2, 3, and 4. They would require to be dealt with as the Chairman has correctly pointed out, after the Clauses in the Bill have been dealt with as new clauses under Standing Order 52(8).

I think the procedure being followed is correct in that we are dealing with amendments to existing clauses first and then new clauses after that. Thank you.

The Chairman: The question is that Clause 2 be amended. Those in favour please say Aye. Those against, No.

AYES.

The Chairman: The Ayes have it.

AMENDMENT TO CLAUSE 2 PASSED.

The Chairman: The question is that Clause 2, as amended, do stand part of the Bill. Those in favour please say Aye. Those against, No.

AYES.

The Chairman: The Ayes have it.

CLAUSE 2 AS AMENDED PASSED.

The Clerk: Clause 3. Amendment of section 145—Incest by females.

The Chairman: There is an amendment to Clause 3.

Hon. David F. Ballantyne: I move that clause 3 of the Bill (to be renumbered as clause 6) be amended by deleting the words “The Penal Code (1995 Revision)” and substituting the words “The principal Law”; and at the end of that clause by deleting the word “life” and substituting the word “ten years.”

The Chairman: The question is that Clause 3 be amended. Those in favour please say Aye. Those against, No.

AYES.

The Chairman: The Ayes have it.

AMENDMENT TO CLAUSE 3 PASSED.

The Chairman: The question is that Clause 3, as amended, do stand part of the Bill. Those in favour please say Aye. Those against, No.

AYES.

The Chairman: The Ayes have it.

CLAUSE 3 AS AMENDED PASSED.

The Chairman: We shall now go to the committee stage amendment with new clauses.

Hon. David F. Ballantyne: Thank you.

In accordance with the provisions of the Standing Orders, I move that the following committee stage amendments be made to the Penal Code (Amendment) Bill, that clauses 2 and 3 be renumbered as clauses 5 and 6 respectively and that the following be inserted as clauses 2, 3 and 4, as laid out in the notice.

There is a typographical error in the marginal note. It should read “amendment of section 132 of the Penal Code”, not 133. Otherwise the amendments are as stated on the notice.

Therefore, I move the insertion of these new Clauses—2, 3, and 4. If you wish, I will read them.

The Chairman: Please do.

Hon. David F. Ballantyne: Amendment of section 132 of the Penal Code (1995 Revision) 2. The Penal Code (1995 Revision), in this Law referred to as “the principal Law”, is amended in section 132: (A) by repealing subsection (1) and by substituting the following- “(1) Whoever unlawfully and carnally- (a) knows any girl under the age of twelve years is guilty of an offence and liable to imprisonment for twenty years; (b) knows any girl between the ages of twelve and sixteen years is guilty of an offence and liable to imprisonment for twelve years;” and

(B) by repealing subsection (3) and substituting the following-“(3) It shall be a sufficient defence to a charge under subsection (1) relating to a girl between the ages of twelve and sixteen years if it shall be made to appear to the court or jury before whom the charge shall be brought that the person so charged had reasonable cause to believe and did in fact believe that the girl was of or above the age of sixteen years.”

New Clause 3: Amendment of section 133- defilement of idiots or imbeciles “3. The principal Law is amended in section 133 by repealing the word ‘two’ and substituting the word ‘twelve.’”

New Clause 4: Amendment of section 143 - Indecent assault on boys, et cetera “4. The principal Law is amended in section 143(1) by repealing the word ‘five’ and substituting the word ‘ten.’”

The balance of the committee stage amendments have already been covered in the discussion under the new clauses 5 and 6 (that were clauses 2 and 3). As far as I can assess these amendments bring the Bill into line with the substance of the Private Member’s Motion on the issues of defilement.

The Chairman: The Clerk will read the new Clauses.

The Clerk: New Clause 2. Amendment of section 132 of the Penal Code (1995 Revision).

The Chairman: The question is that new Clause 2 do stand part of the Bill. Those in favour please say Aye. Those against, No.

AYES.

The Chairman: The Ayes have it.

NEW CLAUSE 2 PASSED.

The Clerk: New Clause 3. Amendment of section 133—Defilement of idiots or imbeciles.

The Chairman: The question is that new Clause 3 do stand part of the Bill. Those in favour please say Aye. Those against, No.

AYES.

The Chairman: The Ayes have it.

NEW CLAUSE 3 PASSED.

The Clerk: New Clause 4. Amendment of section 143—Indecent assault on boys, et cetera.

The Chairman: The question is that new Clause 4 do stand part of the Bill. Those in favour please say Aye. Those against, No.

AYES.

The Chairman: The Ayes have it.

NEW CLAUSE 4 PASSED.

The Clerk: A Bill for a Law to amend the Penal Code (1995 Revision) to increase the penalties for incest and for incidental and connected purposes.

The Chairman: The question is that the Title do stand part of the Bill. Those in favour please say Aye. Those against, No.

AYES.

The Chairman: The Ayes have it.

TITLE PASSED.

THE CRIMINAL PROCEDURE CODE (AMENDMENT) BILL, 2001

The Clerk: The Criminal Procedure Code (Amendment) Bill, 2001.

Clause 1. Short title.

The Chairman: The question is that Clause 1 do stand part of the Bill. Those in favour please say Aye. Those against, No.

AYES.

The Chairman: The Ayes have it.

CLAUSE 1 PASSED.

The Clerk: Clause 2. Amendment of section 6—Sentences which courts may impose.

The Chairman: There is an amendment to Clause 2.

Hon. David Ballantyne: Yes, Mr. Chairman. The effect would be that existing clause 2 of the Bill be deleted and a new clause substituted. Therefore, that part of the committee stage amendment, according to Standing Orders should be taken after the rest of the Bill has been dealt with, if I am—

The Chairman: I think this one is clear enough, we can go ahead.

Hon. David F. Ballantyne: Very good. Thank you.

Insertion of new section—Committal for sentence on summary trial of offence triable either way. The Criminal Procedure Code (1995 Revision), in this Law referred to as “the principal Law,” is amended by inserting after section 6 the following section—“Committal for sentence on summary trial of offence triable either way.”

“6A.(1) This section applies where on the summary trial of an offence triable either way a person who is not less than eighteen years old is convicted of an offence.

“(2) If a Summary Court is of opinion –

(a) that the offence or the combination of the offence and one or more offences associated with it was so serious that greater punishment should be inflicted for the offence than the court has power to impose; or

(b) in the case of a violent or sexual offence, that a custodial sentence for a term longer than the court has power to impose is necessary to protect the public from serious harm from him, the Summary Court may, in accordance with Practice Directions issued under this section, commit the offender in custody or on bail to the Grand Court for sentence.

“(3) The preceding provisions of this section shall apply in relation to a corporation as if –

(a) the corporation was an individual who is not less than eighteen years old; and

(b) in subsection (2), paragraph (b), and words “in custody or on Bail” were omitted.

“(4) Where an accused is committed by a Summary Court under this section the Grand Court shall inquire into the circumstances of the case and shall have power to deal with the offender in any manner in which it could deal with him if he had been convicted by the Grand Court.

“(5) Nothing in this section compels the Grand Court to impose a greater sentence than that which could have been imposed by the Summary Court.

“(6) The Chief Justice may, from time to time, issue Practice Directions relating to the power of a Summary Court to commit under this section and the procedure to be followed in such commitments.”

The Chairman: The question is that Clause 2 be amended. Those in favour please say Aye. Those against, No.

AYES.

The Chairman: The Ayes have it.

AMENDMENT TO CLAUSE 2 PASSED.

The Chairman: The question is that Clause 2 as amended do stand part of the Bill. Those in favour please say Aye. Those against, No.

AYES.

The Chairman: The Ayes have it.

CLAUSE 2, AS AMENDED, PASSED.

Hon. David F. Ballantyne: Sorry, Mr. Chairman. I should have pointed out that the amended Clause 2 should in fact insert a new section 6A, rather than section 6 as printed. So this would need to be 6A and I will treat it as a typographical error.

The Clerk: Clause 3. Amendment of section 106A—Voluntary indictment.

Hon. David F. Ballantyne: Mr. Chairman, Clause 3, in fact, amends the principal Law by adding a new section 106A.

The Chairman: The question is that Clause 3 do stand part of the Bill. There is no amendment, only a new clause to it, a new part to it. Those in favour please say Aye. Those against, No.

AYES.

The Chairman: The Ayes have it.

CLAUSE 3 PASSED.

The Clerk: Clause 4. Amendment of the first schedule—Mode of trial and arrestable offences, treason, death penalty.

The Chairman: There is an amendment.

Hon. David F. Ballantyne: There is a committee stage amendment as detailed, except that in the very last paragraph of the committee stage amendment, paragraph (f) where it reads “in paragraph (c) (now renumbered as paragraph (e))” that in fact should be paragraph (f). It’s just a typographical error in the committee stage amendment. Paragraph (c) has been renumbered as paragraph (f). I am just pointing that out. It’s of no great consequence because it’s paragraph (c) that’s being amended.

Clause 4 amended: (a) by renumbering paragraphs (a), (b), (c) and (d) as (d), (e), (f) and (g) respectively.

(b) by inserting the following as paragraph (a) “(a) in that part of column 5 relating to section 132(1) by deleting the word ‘Fourteen’ and substituting the word ‘Twenty’; and

(i) by inserting after the words “Defilement of girl under twelve” in column 4 relating to that section the words “Defilement of girl between the age of twelve and sixteen”; and

(ii) by inserting after the words “Fourteen years” in column 5 relating to that section the words “Twelve years”;

(c) by inserting the following as paragraph (b) – “(b) in that part of column 5 relating to section 133 by deleting the word “Two” and substituting the word “Twelve”;

(d) by inserting the following as paragraph (c) – “(c) in that part of column 5 relating to section 143(1) by deleting the word “Five” and substituting the word “Ten”;

(e) in paragraph (a) (now renumbered paragraph (d)), by deleting the word “Ten” and substituting the word “twenty”;

(f) in paragraph (c) (now renumbered as paragraph (e) [typographical error, should be (f)]), by deleting the word “Life” and substituting the words “Ten years.”

The Chairman: The question is that Clause 4 be amended. Those in favour please say Aye. Those against, No.

AYES.

The Chairman: The Ayes have it.

AMENDMENT TO CLAUSE 4 PASSED.

The Chairman: The question is that Clause 4 as amended. Those in favour please say Aye. Those against, No.

AYES.

The Chairman: The Ayes have it.

CLAUSE 4 AS AMENDED PASSED.

The Clerk: Clause 5. Insertion of new schedule.

The Chairman: The question is that Clause 5 do stand part of the Bill. Those in favour please say Aye. Those against, No.

AYES.

The Chairman: The Ayes have it.

CLAUSE 5 PASSED.

The Clerk: A Bill for a Law to amend the Criminal Procedure Code (1995 Revision) to change the procedure respecting the indictment of offenders, to increase the power of sentencing by the Grand Court to reflect the increased penalties for incest and for incidental and connected purposes.

The Chairman: The question is that the Title do stand part of the Bill. Those in favour please say Aye. Those against, No.

AYES.

The Chairman: The Ayes have it.

TITLE PASSED.

THE JUDICATURE (AMENDMENT) BILL, 2001

The Clerk: The Judicature (Amendment) Bill, 2001. Clause 1. Short Title.

The Chairman: The question is that Clause 1 do stand part of the Bill. Those in favour please say Aye. Those against, No.

AYES.

The Chairman: The Ayes have it.

CLAUSE 1 PASSED.

The Clerk: Clause 2. Amendment of the Judicature Law (1995 Revision)—Summons to jurors for court sessions.

The Chairman: There is an amendment to Clause 2.

Hon. David F. Ballantyne: Yes, Clauses 2, 3 and 4, by committee stage amendment are to be renumbered as 3, 4, and 5. And a new Clause 2 is to be inserted. The new Clause 2 is basically inserting a definition of money laundering offence.

The Chairman: Would you read the Clause please?

Hon. David Ballantyne: Indeed.

New Clause 2—Amendment of the Judicature Law (1995 Revision) - Definitions. The Judicature Law (1995 Revision) (in this Law referred to as the “principal Law”) is amended in section 2 by inserting the following new definition in its appropriate alphabetical order: “Money laundering offence” has the means ascribed to it in section 27(7) of the Proceeds of Criminal Conduct Law (2001 Revision).

That is a shorthand definition. Section 27(7) of the Proceeds of Criminal Conduct Law spells out the individual sections of the Proceeds of Criminal Conduct Law and of the Misuse of Drugs Law, thereby giving an overall definition of money laundering offence.

The Chairman: The question is that Clause 2 be amended. Those in favour please say Aye. Those against, No.

AYES.

The Chairman: The Ayes have it.

AMENDMENT TO CLAUSE 2 PASSED.

The Chairman: The question is that Clause 2 as amended do stand part of the Bill. Those in favour please say Aye. Those against, No.

AYES.

The Chairman: The Ayes have it.

CLAUSE 2, AS AMENDED, PASSED.

The Clerk: Clause 3. Amendment to section 16—Number of jurors in criminal cases.

The Chairman: There is an amendment to Clause 3.

Hon. David F. Ballantyne: There is an amendment whereby Clause 3 of the Bill is deleted and a new Clause substituted so as to separate out money laundering offences from any other type of offence. The Bill as originally drafted proposed to amend that part of the Law dealing also with murder and treason. This is to make it clear that it has nothing to do with these matters and is entirely separate.

The new clause will read: The principal Law is amended in section 16 by inserting after subsection (1) the following new subsection (1) (a) “On trials for money laundering offences twelve jurors shall form the array.”(b) in subsection (3), by inserting after the word “one” the words “or in the case of money laundering offences, five.” The five here refers to the number of jurors that could be lost from an array of twelve and still allow a jury to be properly constituted.

The Chairman: The question is that Clause 3 be amended. Those in favour please say Aye. Those against, No.

AYES.

The Chairman: The Ayes have it.

AMENDMENT TO CLAUSE 3 PASSED.

The Chairman: The question is that Clause 3 as amended do stand part of the Bill. Those in favour please say Aye. Those against, No.

AYES.

The Chairman: The Ayes have it.

CLAUSE 3, AS AMENDED, PASSED.

The Clerk: Clause 4. Amendment of section 20—Discharge of duty before verdict.

The Chairman: Clause 4 has an amendment?

Hon. David F. Ballantyne: Thank you.

Clause 4 is to be renumbered as Clause 5 to allow for the new Clause 2, and the reference to the words “or in the case of any offence under section 22 to 25 of the Proceeds of Criminal Conduct Law (2000 Revision)” are deleted; and the following words substituted “a money laundering offence, as defined.”

The Chairman: The question is that Clause 4 be amended. Those in favour please say Aye. Those against, No.

AYES.

The Chairman: The Ayes have it.

AMENDMENT TO CLAUSE 4 PASSED.

The Chairman: The question is that Clause 4 as amended do stand part of the Bill. Those in favour please say Aye. Those against, No.

AYES.

The Chairman: The Ayes have it.

CLAUSE 4, AS AMENDED, PASSED.

The Clerk: A Bill for a Law to amend the Judicature Law (1995 Revision) to increase the maximum fine payable by a juror who fails to answer a jury summons, to change the array of the jury in the trial of money laundering offence, and for incidental and connected purposes.

The Chairman: The question is that the Title do stand part of the Bill. Those in favour please say Aye. Those against, No.

AYES.

The Chairman: The Ayes have it.

TITLE PASSED.

THE JUDICATURE (AMENDMENT)
(COSTS) BILL, 2001

The Clerk: The Judicature (Amendment) (Costs) Bill 2001.

Clause 1. Short title.

Clause 2. Repeal and substitution of section 24 of the Judicature Law (1995 Revision)—Costs.

The Chairman: The question is that Clauses 1 and 2 do stand part of the Bill. Those in favour please say Aye. Those against, No.

AYES.

The Chairman: The Ayes have it.

CLAUSES 1 AND 2 PASSED.

The Clerk: A Bill for a Law to amend the Judicature Law (1995 Revision) to clarify and extend the jurisdiction of the Court of Appeal and the Grand Court to make orders for costs.

The Chairman: The question is that the Title do stand part of the Bill. Those in favour please say Aye. Those against, No.

AYES.

The Chairman: The Ayes have it.

TITLE PASSED.

The Chairman: The question is that the Bills be reported to the House. Those in favour please say Aye. Those against, No.

AYES.

The Chairman: The Ayes have it.

AGREED THAT THE BILLS BE REPORTED TO THE HOUSE.*HOUSE RESUMED AT 3.08 PM

The Speaker: Please be seated.
Reports.

REPORTS ON BILLS*THE PENAL CODE (AMENDMENT) BILL, 2001

Hon. David F. Ballantyne: I am to report that a Bill entitled, The Penal Code (Amendment) Bill, 2001, was considered by a committee of the whole House and passed with amendments.

The Speaker: The Bill is accordingly set down for Third Reading.

THE CRIMINAL PROCEDURE CODE
(AMENDMENT) BILL, 2001

Hon. David F. Ballantyne: I am to report that a Bill entitled, The Criminal Procedure Code (Amendment) Bill, 2001, was considered by a committee of the whole House and passed with amendments.

The Speaker: The Bill is accordingly set down for Third Reading.

THE JUDICATURE (AMENDMENT) BILL, 2001

Hon. David F. Ballantyne: I am to report that a Bill entitled, The Judicature (Amendment) Bill, 2001, was considered by a committee of the whole House and passed with amendments.

The Speaker: The Bill is accordingly set down for Third Reading.

THE JUDICATURE (AMENDMENT)
(COSTS) BILL 2001

Hon. David F. Ballantyne: I am to report that a Bill entitled, The Judicature (Amendment) (Costs) Bill, 2001, was considered by a committee of the whole House and passed without amendment.

The Speaker: The Bill is accordingly set down for Third Reading.
Bills, Third Readings.

THIRD READINGS*THE PENAL CODE (AMENDMENT) BILL, 2001

The Clerk: The Penal Code (Amendment) Bill, 2001.

The Speaker: The Honourable Second Official Member.

Hon. David F. Ballantyne: I beg to move that a Bill entitled The Penal Code (Amendment) Bill, 2001, be given a third reading and passed.

The Speaker: The question is that a Bill entitled The Penal Code (Amendment) Bill, 2001, be given a third reading and passed. Those in favour please say Aye. Those against, No.

AYES.

The Speaker: The Ayes have it.

AGREED: THE PENAL CODE (AMENDMENT) BILL
2001 GIVEN A THIRD READING AND PASSED.

THE CRIMINAL PROCEDURE CODE
(AMENDMENT) BILL, 2001

The Clerk: The Criminal Procedure Code (Amendment) Bill, 2001.

The Speaker: The Honourable Second Official Member.

Hon. David F. Ballantyne: I beg to move that a Bill entitled The Criminal Procedure Code (Amendment) Bill, 2001, be given a third reading and passed.

The Speaker: The question is that a Bill entitled The Criminal Procedure Code (Amendment) Bill, 2001, be given a third reading and passed. Those in favour please say Aye. Those against, No.

AYES.

The Speaker: The Ayes have it.

AGREED: THE CRIMINAL PROCEDURE CODE
(AMENDMENT) BILL, 2001 GIVEN A THIRD READING AND PASSED.

THE JUDICATURE (AMENDMENT) BILL, 2001

The Clerk: The Judicature (Amendment) Bill, 2001.

The Speaker: The Honourable Second Official Member.

Hon. David F. Ballantyne: I beg to move that a Bill entitled The Judicature (Amendment) Bill, 2001, be given a third reading and passed.

The Speaker: The question is that a Bill entitled The Judicature (Amendment) Bill, 2001, be given a third reading and passed. Those in favour please say Aye. Those against, No.

AYES.

The Speaker: The Ayes have it.

AGREED: THE JUDICATURE (AMENDMENT) BILL,
2001 GIVEN A THIRD READING AND PASSED.

THE JUDICATURE (AMENDMENT)
(COSTS) BILL, 2001

The Clerk: The Judicature (Amendment) (Costs) Bill, 2001.

The Speaker: The Honourable Second Official Member.

Hon. David F. Ballantyne: I beg to move that a Bill entitled The Judicature (Amendment) (Costs) Bill 2001, be given a third reading and passed.

The Speaker: The question is that a Bill entitled The Judicature (Amendment) (Costs) Bill, 2001, be given a third reading and passed. Those in favour please say Aye. Those against, No.

AYES.

The Speaker: The Ayes have it.

AGREED: THE JUDICATURE (AMENDMENT)
(COSTS) BILL, 2001 GIVEN A THIRD READING
AND PASSED.

The Speaker: Moving on to item 5, Other Business, Private Members' Motions. Private Member's Motion No. 12/01, Public Decency Legislation, to be moved by the Third Second Member for George Town.

OTHER BUSINESS

PRIVATE MEMBERS' MOTIONS

PRIVATE MEMBER'S MOTION
NO. 12/01

PUBLIC DECENCY LEGISLATION

Mr. Alden M. McLaughlin, Jr.: Thank you. I beg to move Private Member's Motion No. 12/01, Public Decency Legislation, standing in my name, which reads:

"WHEREAS Her Majesty, by Order in Council made on 13th December 2000, ordered, inter alia, that:

"Notwithstanding any statutory or common law provision in the Territory to the contrary, a homosexual act in private shall not be an offence provided that the parties consent thereto and have attained the age of eighteen years.';

"AND WHEREAS the said Order has been extended to the Cayman Islands;

"AND WHEREAS, although the legal effect of the Order is to decriminalise only consensual homosexual acts carried on in private, there is general concern that the said Order may have an adverse effect on traditional standards of public behaviour and public decency;

"AND WHEREAS the people of the Cayman Islands remain committed to high standards of public behaviour and public decency;

"BE IT THEREFORE RESOLVED THAT Government undertakes a review of the Penal Code (Law 12 of 1975 (1995 Revision)) and any other relevant legislation to ensure that adequate provision is made therein for the maintenance of ap- appropriate standards of public behaviour and public decency in the Cayman Islands.”

The Speaker: Do we have a seconder?

Mr. V. Arden McLean: I beg to second the Motion.

The Speaker: Private Member's Motion No. 12/01 has been duly moved and seconded. Does the Mover wish to speak to the Motion?

Mr. Alden M. McLaughlin, Jr.: Thank you.

The text of the Motion indicates that this Motion has come about because of general concern in the community that the Order in Council made on 13 December 2000, which had the effect of legalising consensual homosexual acts in this country, might also have the unintended effect of encouraging behaviour which would be considered an affront to the traditional standards of public decency which have hitherto been observed in these Islands.

At the start of my debate on this Motion, I should make it plain that I do not believe that it is either the duty or the place of the state to seek to legislate morality or sexual orientation. That, I believe, is between the consenting adults who practise it and their God. I do believe that it is the place and duty of this Legislature to legislate the parameters of public decency and prescribe what activity can properly take place within the public precinct. That is the objective of this Motion.

There has been considerable public debate on Talk Today and in the various newspapers about the imposition of this order by Her Majesty in Council on this country. I do not give my approbation to homosexual behaviour or conduct, but it is a reality. It has existed as long as human beings have been on this planet. There are always the inevitable debates about whether one's sexual orientation is something that one can control or determine or decide upon. I do not propose to enter into that debate in the context of this Motion.

I am concerned that we ensure the standards of public decency and public behaviour which have traditionally characterised this community continue to be observed by all. The concern is not limited to acts between homosexuals; it is a general concern in relation to public decency. The Motion seeks to have the Government review the Penal Code with a view to passing legislation that outlaws acts which are perverse, lewd, obscene, or disgusting when those acts are carried on in public.

In many instances, it is very difficult to define with any precision what sorts of acts will outrage public decency. However, I believe that as a community we have a general understanding of what is permissible, what is proper in public and we know what acts outrage public decency when we see them.

To a large extent, what constitutes a community's view of public decency and what acts are considered appropriate in public will vary from community to community. While one has to bear very much in mind human rights and the reality that we will have a Bill of Rights as part of our legislation—probably as part of our Constitution in the very near future—it becomes even more imperative that we have legislation that will ensure that public decency as we understand it is upheld in this community.

As an example of the different standards of decency and proper behaviour in public, fairly recently in neighbouring Jamaica there was much hue and cry over the widely publicised nude weddings which were taking place in one particular part of that country. It was a group of individuals who came from elsewhere (principally from the United States I understand), who insisted on being married as they were born—naked!

This event caused great consternation and outrage among the churches in Jamaica and a significant portion of the population. However, what I found particularly telling about this event was that the persons who got married were not from Jamaica. They were visitors staying at a particular resort. Even the pastor was flown in for the occasion.

This is particularly significant for us because we have many, many people who visit these shores from time to time. Indeed, we know from past experience there are those among them who may wish to engage in certain conduct which to them seems quite acceptable and appropriate. However, in this relatively conservative society, such conduct is regarded as very offensive.

There is the infamous case of two cruise ships that called on these shores with a number of homosexual couples vacationing. Most of us can remember the general outrage as they paraded through the streets of George Town engaged in conduct that we regarded as less than appropriate. So, it is these sorts of events, actualities and possibilities at which the Motion is aimed.

Indeed, it goes somewhat further because in matters such as these, perception is perhaps as important as the reality. I believe it is necessary that the message be sent loud and clear, particularly in the environment where human rights, (and in this case the right to freedom of expression) is so often touted, that these rights to freedom of expression are subject to limitations. The conduct that can be carried on in executing and demonstrating this right is clearly prescribed and limited by this society's view of what is decent, proper and appropriate conduct within the public domain.

So, Mr. Speaker, with those few words, I would urge this Motion on Government, commend it to all Members and ask for their support. Thank you.

The Speaker: The Motion is open to debate. Does any other Member wish to speak?

The Elected Member for East End.

Mr. V. Arden McLean: Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

I was hoping that some other Member would rise and speak first because the Second Elected Member for George Town and I have gone over this.; I would venture to say, a million times since being elected. If not a million, close to that!

Mr. Speaker, I guess Miss Annie Huldah Bodden, who was a Member of this Legislature for many years, bless her soul, is today smiling in her grave and saying it is about time. I recall, when I was a very young man, Miss Annie discussed public decency laws in this country. If I search long and far enough I am sure I will find the debate by Miss Annie Huldah Bodden.

I have some serious concerns with public decency in the country and particularly where Her Majesty Government has decriminalised homosexuality in private. As stated by the Second Elected Member from George Town, this is not only about homosexuality but certainly that is the basis for this Motion.

Mr. Speaker, I do not believe that anyone in this country will be affected by the decriminalisation of homosexuality in private except those who are homosexuals. It is to their benefit that they will not be prosecuted if they are consenting adults. Certainly we have to ensure that we do not have or encourage such conduct in the public. I believe that every human being has a right to be what they want to be. However, I do not believe that every human being has a right to impose his will on others. In so saying that is why I support this Motion.

Mr. Speaker, some years ago, we heard of the Cayman Islands Government refusing entry to a passenger liner that was carrying gays. There was a lot of hemming and hawing about that. I believe we backed off somewhat when we started making excuses about not being able to accommodate them. We must be up-front and decide what we want for this country. There should have been no excuses. We should have just said, 'We don't want it' and that would have been the end of the argument.

Too often we try to hide behind excuses in this country to satisfy a few. It was reported that same passenger made an application to the Jamaican Government to use Jamaica as a port of call. They were told that the Government had no problem with them stopping and would accommodate them but could not guarantee their safety. That was quite bluntly telling them that they were not going to be welcomed.

Mr. Speaker, I believe that and I hope that this country respects the views of individuals who want to practise such acts in private. I do. I certainly respect that if two individuals want to carry on with such behaviour they should have the right to do it in private. However, I certainly will not support that kind of behaviour being carried on in front of my eight year old out on the streets.

I believe that the behaviour of one human being can be influenced by another, thus, I refuse to support such behaviour being carried on in public. Then we talk about coming of age and why it is that we cannot allow such behaviour in public. Well, I am sure we have all seen the marches and protests, whatever we wish to call them, all over the world particularly in the 'great' America and the Mother Country. I have no problem with them (America and the Mother Country) accepting that kind of behaviour in public but we certainly will not allow them to come here and do it. They can do as they wish in England or America but I will not support it here.

Mr. Speaker, sometime earlier this year we saw in the Miami Herald, a report captioned, "Creating a festive and welcoming environment for gays and lesbian tourists is paying off handsomely for South Florida". Now, if it is going to pay them, then they can take the money that is derived from that. We do not want any money in this country that is dirty. We talk about the drug money; well, I think this is dirty money too.

If we allow the country to go on as is, we will then have protestors in the middle of our streets wanting rights and the use of the public beach on West Bay to have these parties as well. In that same Miami Herald there were two male Caymanians pictured putting suntan oil all over each other, evidently, at the same party. I am sure if we do not legislate decent laws in this country then one of these days the West Bay beach or elsewhere is going to become the site for one of these parties. It is my hope and dream that we will never see such a party in the Cayman Islands.

Mr. Speaker, we talk about gays and the rights that they should have. While I support certain rights they must have, I also recognise that I have rights that should not be encroached upon.

I also agree that heterosexuals should not carry themselves in such a manner that is unbecoming of any degree of public decency. This does not just bring the gays into focus, it also ensures that all who are residents or visitors to our shores conduct themselves in public with some degree of decency that this country has enjoyed over its many years of existence.

When I mentioned Miss Annie Huldah Bodden earlier, one of the things that Miss Annie was totally against was the wearing of swimsuits through the middle of George Town. I can hear Miss Annie, right now, saying that they barely had on anything. Well, I tell you what, I am glad she is not around today because if she thought there was not much then there is nothing now.

Mr. Speaker, I am not going so far as to call for dress codes like Miss Annie did, however I believe it certainly serves as a distraction to many people. I think people should be responsible enough to wear clothes that are decent instead of having the possibility of some of our people getting into accidents. This goes for females as well as males.

I know the Third Elected Member from George Town is going to come behind me and it is going to be interesting to hear his debate because he has the authority on the social aspect. I look forward to hearing his position on these issues. I certainly will not prolong my debate so that maybe we can get a different perspective in understanding how this all came into being—the social aspect of decency—from the Third Elected Member from George Town, who is also a doctor in that discipline. Mr. Speaker, the Third Elected Member from George Town is a gentleman whom I respect. I have a lot of respect for his ability to articulate and I look forward to that.

I think it is understandable that people want to dress the way they want or cry out for their rights to do what they want. However, I believe it is also fair for the majority to have their rights left in tact as well. I do not believe it is fair for the majority to try to destroy or encroach on minority rights by virtue of being more powerful because of the numbers.

I know there was a previous Minister in this Honourable House who talked about cults and the reason the Bill of Rights was not put in because we would have the stuff that happened in Waco, Texas and the likes. To some extent, he was correct. In the same token you cannot be in the minority and expect respect and not also afford the majority their respect.

Mr. Speaker, in contemplating this Motion with the Second Elected Member from George Town, we talked to many people in the community and one set of people whom we spoke to was the Ministers' Association. We understand the moral aspect, in particular, the opposition they put up against the decriminalisation of homosexuality. It should not have been a surprise to anyone because we have heard of opposition from that sector of society for a very long time. They too recognise that this behaviour has been around from creation and as long as man has recorded history. That is why Sodom and Gomorrah were destroyed.

Again, I must respect the Christian values and the religious leaders in this country. I ask them to also respect the minority rights to do certain things because we would not want ours encroached.

Mr. Speaker, I support the Motion and look forward to other Members' debates. I am sure, they will be interesting, because there are a few of us, if any, who are not taught the Christian way. I might venture to say that the whole membership of this Honourable House came from the old Caymanian school, where that kind of behaviour, which promoted the lack of public decency, was taboo. We were told at a very young age what we could do and what was acceptable in society and you could not get away from these values. Many in this country may say that we are holding on to the old and will not let it go. That is not true. I am as modern as anyone else, but I am also as patriotic as anyone else. I believe that the values that were instilled in this country carried us well. It carried us to the point where we are today and I do not believe that we should sit idly by and allow others to come to this country and destroy some of those values. Those values have been instilled in us, and I guess, that is why we will be considered old people for a very long time.

Well, Mr. Speaker, I am satisfied with being labelled the 'old guard' as long as it entails maintaining the values that were taught to me and the people of this country many years ago. We can be modern. We can modernise ourselves however we should not forget where we came from because that is one way of knowing where we are and where we would like to go.

Each day, someone else comes to this country and tells us, how we should do it and how it is done over there. They never want to hear how it was done here. Well, how it was done here, I believe has carried this country and its people well. One of the things we were taught was decency and if it was not practised then the community dealt with the culprit. Unfortunately, we cannot do that today because we have too much of a diverse community. We can legislate laws and they must live by these laws when they come here. The laws of this country must be adhered to or the system will punish those people and that will be either through incarceration or expulsion.

Mr. Speaker, I urge all Members of this Honourable House to support this and let us tighten up some of the areas that may very well be slipping away from the people of this country. These are modern times, however, we still have some of the older folks who live by these principles. To throw this country headlong into the modern times and forget about the morals that were taught to us by those older folks—some are still here amongst us—is losing respect. That was one of the values instilled in people of this country: respect for others.

Mr. Speaker, I urge the Members of this Honourable House not to allow other people to come to this country and lose respect for this country. They must learn when they come here that they have an obligation and a responsibility if they so choose to co-exist with the people of this country. It may seem harsh to legislate such laws but we do not tell other countries what laws to legislate.

Mr. Speaker, I support and I commend this Motion to other Members of this Honourable House. Thank you.

The Speaker: Honourable Members before I call another Member, we have only thirty minutes remaining until the hour of interruption. Is it the wish of the House that we continue straight through without a break? I would recommend it.

The Floor is open to debate. Does any other Member wish to speak?

The Second Elected Member for Bodden Town.

Mr. Gilbert A. McLean: Mr. Speaker, I rise to speak on Private Member's Motion No. 12/2001, Public Decency Legislation. I would like to say up-front that I fully support the Motion and the intention of it, as I understand it to be.

Also, it is well to say that I am from an older generation, of an age that I am extremely proud. There is a popular country and western song about, "I'm proud to be an Okie from Muskogee—the place where even squares can have a ball.” I believe that if Caymanian society (speaking specifically of Caymanian society) practised some of the fun ways now — and believe me I have had a lot of it in my time but much less these days because of economic circumstances and otherwise—they would not miss out on very much.

Mr. Speaker, this Motion asks us to review the Penal Code with regards to public decency. Decency, as I understand it, deals with propriety, courtesy, proper and respectable behaviour. To behave in a manner that is consistent with the majority of the morals of the Cayman society, as most of us are aware. The question that has come quite regularly is the question of homosexuality no longer being an offence in the Cayman Islands because of an Order in Council which imposes a change of our Law on this particular issue.

Mr. Speaker, I think if that can be imposed upon the Cayman Islands we need to be very careful. It is really immaterial to me if the United Kingdom and Europe wish to behave in a certain fashion, which we find objectionable and unseemly.

I think that the Cayman Islands have always had its morals intact and they have been based largely on Christianity. We have not had much of the other religions; it has been western Christianity and people have pretty much stuck to that and it has done well for us over the years.

Mr. Speaker, the fact that other countries, may consider the biggest right that they can bestow on their society is that of allowing persons of the same gender to behave towards one another in an unnatural way, is something which I believe, we should not adopt or take lightly.

When we talk about public behaviour and public decency I take it much further than that. I take it to include what I see each day in the Cayman Islands—the way people behave and dress, which would be offensive to some. I even look at the way in which most school children dress these days, and I wonder if there is a dress code. I gather there is none in any of the schools, particularly, in the government schools.

Mr. Speaker, I have seen boys going to school in the early mornings supposedly dressed, wearing pants three times the size needed to properly fit their body. It is down below their buttocks, which exposes the underwear they are wearing. It would seem to me, Mr. Speaker, that if that is the case then the outer part, the baggy part, they are wearing to expose the underwear seems pretty useless—it should be one or the other.

I think that we have to reach a point when we are talking about decency where we apply it practically. Indeed, the school environment used to be a place that had a leaning towards discipline and inculcating certain things into young people. Now it seems to me that there has been a complete reversal in this particular area. So, when I think of decency and so on, I wonder because, to me, a school child, who is neatly dressed, clean, looking fresh and alert, as youth causes one to be, is something to be desired rather than the ragged bum-like looking appearance which goes on now. I would hope, at least, somewhere along the line the education authorities would prescribe some kind of dress code that would help that kind of situation.

Mr. Speaker, other things, which come to mind in terms of what might be acceptable behaviour, is the question of kissing. We all do that at some time, some place and somewhere. Are we going to extend that type of act to same sex individuals in the public which could confuse our young, who cannot understand why Mummy and Daddy does it and those two boys or two girls are also kissing. They do not really understand all there is to understand about these things. Are we going to allow those types of things here for us to become ‘civilised’ like the rest of the world? I am sure Europe recommends that for us here too because it is their right.

I could also think about fondling of the anatomy. Is that an acceptable display? I have not even looked in the Penal Code to try to find this and I do not know if it is really contained. I am sure the Government and the legal people will look at this. Should there be anything in our law prescribing what is acceptable from what is not in that regard even when it comes to a male and a female? To what extent is that particular thing acceptable or agreeable? These days it is highly recommended, it seems, at least, emanating out of Europe that this type of thing is quite acceptable to them. If those persons are overcome by a surge of love and affection, it is their right, you know, they can do that. Being civilised you are supposed to just walk on by as if it is not happening. If you are walking by with a child I wonder if they see that and what do they think? If they begin to work that show one another, is that acceptable?

The Seconder of the Motion spoke about the late Miss Annie Huldah Bodden, MLA, and her efforts with regards to her perception of decency. I did not agree with some of the ideas she had. I thought they were a bit extreme and I certainly agreed with some. Including the wearing of bikinis through George Town, as it was one time and to some degree now, although not as much as it was, as I can recall, in times past. Mr. Speaker, I would not tell you that I object to the sights that I see in this regard. Whether or not that is good for the downtown area and our business ... as one speaker before me said, it could create accidents as women do have a way of having that effect particularly on men. Is it possible and really suitable for a downtown business centre or is it suitable for the beach or the poolside where it was intended?

I try not to limit the scope of my understanding of public decency to just homosexuality and that type of thing. I think we have to take a bigger look at it and if we take a wider look at it, I think, there is a lot of sense to prescribe what is acceptable to us as public decency, the behaviour in public.

I get the strange feeling that the United Kingdom is going to recommend to us the European Bill of Rights and Freedom (I think it is called). I guess the only thing that is not included in that as a right, is that which is right! So, again, I figure it is possible for me to go across to the other shore, whenever that is, and even if it is a long time without seeing some of those things in my lifetime, among them are same sex marriages. There is not the slightest doubt in my mind that is going to be recommended to Cayman or imposed upon us at sometime particularly where it might be the case where we have a whole lot of sappy legislators who will not stand up against that type of thing.

Hon. Roy Bodden: Preach brother!

Mr. Gilbert A. McLean: We also have the situation of where it could be imposed by an Order in Council. Mr. Speaker that is one of the reasons I personally believe we need to grow towards having more control and an ultimate say over managing our own affairs. The ultimate control, where no one can pass a law in some other part of the world, which is offensive to me in my society and says, 'look, you take this whether you like it or not'.

We also have the adoption of children. How soon are we going to hear that two men living together as a 'man and woman' are going to be able to adopt a child who could be a male child. I think the child would be confused trying to figure out what is happening in his life. It is happening in other parts of the world. Why is it that the judges who approve these types of things cannot see a difference? I do not know, unless they themselves have a problem with discerning their own gender. These are the things which concern me because they are here and upon us.

About two or three days ago, I think, the headlines in the local papers quoted the Governor as saying, "There has to be a Bill of Rights in the Constitution."

The Speaker: May I interrupt you for a moment?

It is my understanding that a majority would like to adjourn at this time. Would this be a convenient time for you?

Mr. Gilbert A. McLean: Yes, Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: I would entertain a Motion for the adjournment of this Honourable House.

The Honourable Minister for Planning, Communication and Works.

ADJOURNMENT

Hon. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Mr. Speaker, I beg to move the adjournment of this Honourable House until 10 am tomorrow morning, Sir.

The Speaker: I shall now put the question that this honourable House do now adjourn until 10 am tomorrow, 5 July.

Those in favour please say Aye. Those against, No.

AYES.

The Speaker: The Ayes have it. This Honourable House stands adjourn until 10 am tomorrow.

AT 4.22 PM THE HOUSE STOOD ADJOURNED UNTIL 10 AM THURSDAY, 5 JULY 2001.

OFFICIAL HANSARD REPORT
THURSDAY
5 JULY 2001
10.20 AM
Ninth Sitting

[Prayers read by the Honourable Minister responsible for the Ministry of Health and Information Technology.]

The Speaker: Please be seated.

Item 2 on today's Order Paper, Questions to Honourable Ministers and Members. Question 74 is standing in the name of the Second Elected Member for Bodden Town.

QUESTIONS TO HONOURABLE
MINISTERS AND MEMBERS

QUESTION NO. 74

No. 74: Mr. Gilbert A. McLean asked the Honourable Third Official Member responsible for the Portfolio of Finance and Economic Development what is the most immediate requirement of the (Organisation for Economic Cooperation and Development) OECD, (Financial Action Task Force) FATF, or other such body, for the Cayman Islands' financial industry to meet between now and year's end.

The Speaker: The Honourable Third Official Member responsible for Finance and Economic Development

Hon. George A. McCarthy: I am very pleased to confirm to this Honourable House that the FATF has now taken the Cayman Islands off its non-cooperative countries and territories list issued in June of last year. There are therefore, no outstanding requirements with regard to Cayman's compliance with the FATF 25 criteria issued in February 2000. It only remains for us to fulfil our ongoing obligations, particularly with reference to the completion by the industry of any outstanding client verification in accordance with the statutory 'know your customer' rules by 31 December 2002 or such extension up to six months as the government may allow.

The Government acknowledges with much appreciation that this achievement was made possible by the combined efforts of the private sector and the Government.

With regard to the OECD, there was an immediate requirement to undertake a 'concrete and significant action' by May 2001, which, this Honourable House will recall, was fulfilled by introducing immobilisation provisions for bearer shares. The introduction of these provisions also corresponded with a recommendation in the KPMG report of October 2000. In terms of further actions that may be required in the OECD context between now and year's end, our original commitment provided for the establishment of a specified, Mutual Legal Assistance Treaty (MLAT) style exchange of information mechanism on criminal tax evasion by 31 December 2003. This will require a lot of careful, detailed policy and legal analysis and planning, which has already begun. We will also be seeking to ensure that implementation, when it occurs, takes into account the best economic interests of the Cayman Islands and follows international standards which are still under development and discussion by OECD member states and other interested countries.

There are two key matters raised in the KPMG report that the government wants to address between now and the end of the year and they are the independence of the Monetary Authority and the introduction of regulatory coverage for securities brokers and investment advisors. A legislative proposal on the latter has already been put out to the industry for comment and it is intended to bring the necessary Bills to the House for both matters at the first available opportunity during the current session.

SUPPLEMENTARIES

The Speaker: The Second Elected Member for Bodden Town.

Mr. Gilbert A. McLean: Can the Honourable Member elaborate on what is meant by outstanding client verification in accordance with the statutory 'know your customer' rules?

The Speaker: The Honourable Third Official Member responsible for Finance and Economic Development

Hon. George A. McCarthy: This relates to retrospective review of existing business. As the Member will recall, there is a requirement for this activity to be undertaken by our financial industry whereby the existing book of business that we have in place at the time of the introduction of the code of practice which brings into effect the requirement to verify existing clients' business; that a time period be allowed to review existing business that the financial institutions have on their books.

The Speaker: The Second Elected Member for Bodden Town.

Mr. Gilbert A. McLean: In light of what the Member has said, would he say if this verification is for the purpose of the Cayman Monetary Authority or the banks or financial institutions or is it to report through somebody to the OECD or FATF information on such accounts?

The Speaker: The Honourable Third Official Member responsible for Finance and Economic Development

Hon. George A. McCarthy: It is definitely for the former, not the latter—not to make this information available to overseas parties, rather to be satisfied that the necessary due diligence procedures have been carried out on the existing client base we have in the Cayman Islands. It is to satisfy that requirement.

The Speaker: The Second Elected Member for Bodden Town.

Mr. Gilbert A. McLean: Can the Honourable Member tell the House exactly the implication of the MLAT-style exchange of information mechanism?

The Speaker: The Honourable Third Official Member responsible for Finance and Economic Development

Hon. George A. McCarthy: This envisaged that there will be an instrument or arrangements in place that will allow for the exchange of information to be provided. However, this will be upon request and not automatic and spontaneous. It also envisages a review process in place to preclude fishing expeditions.

The Speaker: The Second Elected Member for Bodden Town.

Mr. Gilbert A. McLean: Would the Member say if part of the advance commitment made by the Cayman Islands includes giving information on all accounts held in the Cayman Islands by persons or nationals of OECD countries?

The Speaker: The Honourable Third Official Member responsible for Finance and Economic Development

Hon. George A. McCarthy: No, that is not the case. I will make reference to the advance commitment given to the OECD, I think it makes it quite clear. I will share what the requirement of the advanced commitment is on this aspect.

This deals with attachment part 1 “Effective exchange of information”. The Cayman Islands commits that the effective exchange of information for criminal tax matters shall become effective for the first tax year after 31 December 2003. As regards the effective exchange of information for civil and administrative matters, this will become effective for the first tax year after 31 December 2005.”

First of all, the process allowing for the exchange of information on criminal tax matters and whatever instrument or process will be put in place to allow for this will have to be agreed upon. First, as has been quite clear to the OECD, under the MLAT we are aware that requests for cooperation with the Cayman Islands is normally channelled through the competent authority under that instrument or legislation. In this instance, it is the Chief Justice of the Grand Court.

All requests for information are being screened very thoroughly to ensure that it meets the specifics for cooperation to take place. This is what is envisaged in the case of the OECD, not automatic and spontaneous. All applications for cooperation must demonstrate whatever requirements are to be laid down to facilitate the cooperation that will be provided.

The Speaker: The Second Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman.

Mr. Lyndon L. Martin: As a condition of cooperation the Member put criminal tax matters. Can he indicate if that is defined as what is illegal by the Cayman Islands legislation or that of the jurisdictions of the OECD countries?

The Speaker: The Honourable Third Official Member responsible for Finance and Economic Development

Hon. George A. McCarthy: That is still being worked on.

The Honourable Second Official Member, the Chief Justice and a team of persons from the United States held a meeting here in the Cayman Islands about two months ago. This is a matter that is under review in terms of looking at that definition very carefully to ensure that at the end of the day it satisfies the definition that is developed and agreed by the Cayman Islands authorities.

The Speaker: The Second Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman.

Mr. Lyndon L. Martin: In cooperation, other than under MLAT, who is the competent authority?

The Speaker: The Honourable Third Official Member responsible for Finance and Economic Development

Hon. George A. McCarthy: We only have the MLAT in place. That is the only instrument at this point in time that I am aware of that specifies I could be wrong, this is in the legal area. What we are focusing on is the instrument that is to be developed and the process will have to be very clear in terms of the basis of cooperation. The process of screening is very important and is a matter that is yet to be finalised. That will be a condition of any exchange or agreement entered into in order to facilitate cooperation with other territories by way of sharing information.

The Speaker: The Second Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman.

Mr. Lyndon L. Martin: The MLAT is the only treaty in place; however we are aware that under the PCCL various legislations allow for cooperation of what was just amended to be the Financial Reporting Unit, a multidisciplinary unit, rather than the previously stated policing bodies. Under that amendment, who is the competent authority who vets to ensure that there is no fishing expedition?

The Speaker: The Honourable Third Official Member responsible for Finance and Economic Development.

Hon. George A. McCarthy: In response to this specific question, I would appreciate it if he would allow for assistance to be provided (under the Standing Orders) by the Second Official Member.

The Speaker: Sure.

The Honourable Second Official Member.

Hon. David F. Ballantyne: There are at least half a dozen Laws under which assistance can presently be provided other than under the MLAT. In these cases, the Law itself specifies the relevant authority and as a general proposition, in order to obtain documents or testimony, regardless of the authority. In one or two instances it is the Attorney General, reference has to be made to the court by the Attorney General to obtain the court's approval for the provision of the information. There is a combined function between the courts and the Attorney General.

In relation to the PCCL in particular, onward disclosure by the FRU requires the consent of the Attorney General under the law as it stands. Under the Misuse of Drugs (International Cooperation) Law, which is designed to facilitate international cooperation in relation to drug trafficking offences, the Attorney General is the authority. However, as I indicated, the machinery in that law requires application to be made to the court by the Attorney General in order to obtain any documents or to provide information. Therefore, there are checks and balances in the existing system.

It is fair to say there is a variety of means of cooperation at present. It would make sense at some point and that may be sooner rather than later to try to rationalise some of these means of assistance.

For example, one of the means of assistance under the existing law is entitled "The Evidence Proceedings in Other Jurisdictions (Cayman Islands) Order, 1978" and that is a means of assistance which is available to offer help by means of letters rogatory which come through diplomatic channels, through the Governor's office from the other country. That means of assistance is limited to a request from a court, and where criminal proceedings have been instituted. Many requests will not come into that category.

If we have a request from the United States we can meet any request because of the MLAT which allows assistance at the investigation stage, as opposed to when proceedings have been brought. In relation to countries where we have no MLAT, we do not have quite the same capability and it is spread over a number of other laws to the point that on occasions the Confidential Relationships (Preservation) Law (CRPL) has been utilised by means of an application to Executive Council to disclose information.

You can see from the gist of my reply that there is a variety of laws from which you can ascertain the relevant authority. Most of the information from this jurisdiction is dealt with under the MLAT, as you would expect.

The Speaker: The Elected Member for East End.

Mr. V. Arden McLean: I note there was nothing in the substantive answer confirming "any other such body." Can the Honourable Member tell us if the relationship between the Egmont Group and the Financial Reporting Unit (FRU) has been concreted? Are we satisfied at this time that the FRU in this country is operating the way it should be? Have we also satisfied the local authorities that there can be trust placed in that relationship?

The Speaker: The Honourable Third Official Member responsible for Finance and Economic Development

Hon. George A. McCarthy: I am going to ask if you would allow the Honourable Second Official Member to respond.

In terms of the question of trust and let me thank the Honourable Second Official Member for responding on the question posed earlier by the Second Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman. It has been established, we only have the MLAT in place; although the Honourable Second Official Member pointed out that there are other means under other legislation by which cooperation can be provided. At the end of the day what we are striving for with the OECD and any other body that will be dealt with is to have something specific in place to make known the basis by which information will be provided.

There are two aspects to the OECD, criminal tax evasion after 31 December 2003, the instrument for the providing of that information will have to be agreed upon. The definition of criminal tax evasion will also have to be agreed.

In terms of criminal and administrative after 31 December 2005, again, the instrument will have to be agreed, and also the definition of civil and administrative.

I should just mention that the Attorney General and I will be attending a meeting of the Global Forum. This is a group of countries that advance jurisdiction to the Cayman Islands and those other that have given an advanced commitment to the OECD. This meeting will take place in Malta next week. The Attorney General attended the last meeting in France. There is a question of what instrument should be put in place to facilitate exchange of information. This is a very slow process. It is being looked at very carefully.

Cognisance is also being taken of the recent position of the OECD in terms of what is happening. The OECD was expecting quite a number of countries to sign up by either 30 June or 31 of this month. It was stipulated that those countries that did not sign up, sanctions would be employed against them. We know that position has since changed, and that member states have gone back to their member states for consultation. We are watching that process very carefully.

Integral to this process in terms of the review is a level playing field. Notwithstanding the fact that the Cayman Islands have given an advance commitment it is not a question of backing away from this because it would not be in our interest to do so. It would not be advantageous to rush ahead and enter into an agreement before it becomes known exactly what will be expected of the international community at large, to allow us to move in tandem. This is a lockstep movement.

Members can be sure that the Cayman Islands will not be disadvantaged by entering into any form of premature arrangement. Our financial industry is one of the twin pillars of our economy and every effort is being made by the government to protect that. This means that in terms of whatever basis will be agreed upon for the exchange of information, it is one that will be examined very thoroughly and exhaustively by the government to make sure all advantages accrue to the Cayman Islands.

The Speaker: The Elected Member for East End.

Mr. V. Arden McLean: Both official Members stated that the only means of information sharing currently in place is the MLAT and some half dozen Laws under which assistance is given upon request through the attorney general's office. Would the Member clarify that? Does that mean that no information is currently being shared through the FRU?

The Speaker: The Third Official Member.

Hon. George A. McCarthy: Since the Honourable Second Official Member is the Attorney General and he deals with these matters, rather than giving any inaccurate information, I am going to ask if you would allow the Member to respond to the question.

The Speaker: Certainly.

The Honourable Second Official Member.

Hon. David F. Ballantyne: Let me just make it plain and clear that the MLAT is not the only means by which information can be provided to overseas law enforcement or regulators. There are a variety of Laws. It's the only treaty that is in existence, bilateral arrangement. The other Laws to which I referred allow the sharing of information.

Without broadening the subject too much, for example, the Monetary Authority Law allows the Monetary Authority to cooperate with overseas regulators in their field of business. The Proceeds of Criminal Conduct Law (PCCL) allows the FRU to cooperate with overseas FRUs, subject to certain conditions and with the consent of the person holding the position of attorney general.

I would just like to say a word about that if I may. All of these arrangements are subject to safeguards contained in the Laws themselves. For example, if cooperation would not be in the public interest, the Attorney General has the right to intervene. That means that these arrangements need to be scrutinised by lawyers to see whether the information being passed is appropriate information to deal with fishing expeditions. The Monetary Authority has its own legal advisor who performs that function. However, at the same time, requests made of the Monetary Authority are copied to my office with a view to them being looked at on the part of the public interest. We have a standing arrangement that if we do not take any objection within a certain period of time it can be assumed that we have no objection to let the thing work smoothly. However, we do have the right to intervene.

Similarly under the PCCL, information just can not be disclosed willy-nilly. I say that because the FRU is designated as the reporting authority under the PCCL and as such is the recipient point for suspicious activity reports under that Law. So it has a statutory function.

However, the onward disclosure of that information is subject to the consent of the Attorney General as are any actions under that Law, including prosecution, restraint, charging orders, deduction orders. They all require legal input. You can begin to see why it is important that there be a strong connection between the legal side of things and those in that unit.

However, regarding the disclosure of information, information is disclosed by the FRU on a confidential basis, first of all. I wanted to simply say that information can be disclosed subject to conditions. One of the conditions that is regularly imposed in a standard way is that the information should only be used for the purpose for which it is sought. If it is required to be used for any other purpose, then further consent to its use needs to be obtained. So, it is not a backdoor for tax information or any other kind of information. If information is needed, for example, to be used in evidence, and let us say the disclosure was made to FinCen, which is the FRU of the US. We would expect the US to come back under the MLAT route to request the information in the form available for use in evidence.

So, we have adequate procedures under the Laws and they are enforced to ensure that the information operates as it should.

As far as the Egmont Group is concerned, in the week before the de-listing, the FRU succeeded in having its membership application to the Egmont Group accepted. You may recall that the Egmont group is an informal group of financial intelligence units operating on an international basis. The Egmont Group itself has a standard form of MOU (Memorandum of Understanding), which it expects its members to enter into. One of the most important provisions in that MOU is the respect that the MOU and the Egmont Group accord to the rules regarding confidentiality of the information held within a jurisdiction and provided to Egmont Group members.

One must bear in mind that we are dealing with here, not tax information exchange, but measures designed to deal with the global problem of anti money laundering. Because money laundering tends to involve a number of places, it is important to have this kind of international cooperation. It came about for that very reason. A Cayman Islands entity may be used by someone in the US to launder money into the UK. So, these are the reasons for having an MOU between Egmont Group members.

Reference was made to the local issue. An MOU has been drafted also proposed to be entered into between the Commissioner of Police and the Attorney General in order to have a proper written understanding of how the FRU will operate to their mutual satisfaction and the satisfaction of those in authority here. It has not been finalised yet, but it is being worked on. We think we have a basis upon which we can ensure that local interests are adequately satisfied. I know there will be some interest in that MOU and in due course, once it has been finalised, I see no reason why the operation of those arrangements should not be made known to this House. Anyone with a specific interest in it may address me or the commissioner on that matter. However, I am aware that on the basis of the draft as it presently is—and it is a draft I would emphasise—the commissioner finds it a satisfactory basis upon which to cooperate which is the word I would emphasise, both locally and internationally. I hope some of that information may be of assistance.

The Speaker: The Second Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman.

Mr. Lyndon L. Martin: Would the Third Official Member indicate if any commitment has been made to introduce legislation for the international cooperation on all criminal matters and for the repeal of the Confidential Relationships (Preservation) Law?

The Speaker: The Honourable Third Official Member responsible for Finance and Economic Development

Hon. George A. McCarthy: In terms of the international cooperation aspect of the question raised, I am going to ask if you would allow the Second Official Member to respond. However, on the question of the repeal of the Confidential Relationships (Preservation) Law, yes it was set out, and as the Member will recall, in the commitment letter to the OECD tabled in this House, under the subject of transparency item 2 it was said that “the Confidential Relationships (Preservation) Law (CRPL) (1976) is to be repealed and replaced with appropriate information disclosure legislation which will protect legitimate confidential information and maintain the soundness of the financial system.”

Emphasis must be on “and replace with appropriate information disclosure legislation.” It is not a question of setting aside the CRPL and making any suggestion that the Cayman Islands will be an open book. Until a decision is taken, and the instrument is developed that will constitute appropriate information disclosure legislation, which will protect legitimate confidential information, I do not think anything will happen with the CRPL.

The Speaker: The Honourable Second Official Member, do you wish to elaborate on the question?

Hon. David F. Ballantyne: As I mentioned in an earlier reply, under the Evidence Proceedings in Other Jurisdictions (Cayman Islands) Order, assistance can be given by the Cayman Islands in relation to criminal matters, but only where the request comes from a court. Secondly, where the request relates to proceedings that have already commenced.

Other than under the CRPL and going through Executive Council, there is no other means presently of cooperating at the investigation stage in a criminal matter with any country unless it is a drugs matter which occurs under the Misuse of Drugs (International Cooperation) Law.

It is not a problem with the United States because we have a treaty with that country. We only have one treaty with one country and that is with the United States because the MLAT allows cooperation at the investigation stage in a criminal matter, provided the other requirements of the MLAT law are met. It is important to appreciate that at the moment, although most of our business tends to be with the US or North America, Canada, most requests tend to come from there, we do get requests from other countries all around the world from time to time on a lesser scale.

Unless that request comes from a court, and unless the request is in relation to matters where criminal proceedings have already been instituted (in other words, someone has been charged and is in front of a court), our hands are somewhat tied in relation to providing assistance at the investigation stage.

It is for that reason that attention was focused on this issue in the FATF report. We were not failed on international cooperation. I want to make that clear. However, the Government thought it right to give a commitment that cooperation in criminal matters at the investigation stage would be extended not just limited to drugs, but all serious crime. That would evidence our willingness to cooperate internationally against criminal activities.

How this would be done is yet to be resolved. One way would be to extend the ambit of the Misuse of Drugs (International Cooperation) Law from merely drug trafficking offences to all serious crimes. The advantage that might have would be a relatively straightforward amendment and it would be using a known procedure. That Law operates in my opinion satisfactorily in that it has an established regime for dealing with requests. It details what requests must contain, just as the MLAT Law does, it details reasons for declining requests and it requires the authority of the court before assistance can be given. However, it would facilitate the giving of cooperation at the investigation stage.

It has occasionally embarrassed the Cayman Islands not to be able to do that readily and there have been instances where we have had to resort to common law powers in order to provide the assistance. I can give a relatively recent example. Members of the House will be aware of the Montesinos Commission which is currently sitting in Peru looking into the affairs of Mr. Montesinos and others who has just been apprehended and returned to Peru as you may know from the news.

Requests for assistance in that matter were made to us. Due to the limitations I mentioned earlier, namely, that the request did not come from a court and no criminal proceedings had been instituted at that point in time, we were unable to use conventional means. We had to resort to relying on the common law which relies on a British decision in a case called Blake which concerned a British spy and we managed to take the necessary action to freeze the relevant funds in this jurisdiction in order to demonstrate our willingness to cooperate in the fight against money laundering.

It is not desirable to continue to proceed in such way, resting on the common law because there are limitations to the common law route. The House of Lords recently curtailed the Blake decision, as I understand it. So, without getting too much into the technicalities, there is a need, and a commitment has been given to enhance the ability to cooperate at the investigation stage in criminal matters. Of course, that will in due course require coming here if it does by means of an amendment to the existing legislation.

This is a relatively straightforward matter, but it arises because we do not have MLATs with everybody. It would not be necessary nor wise to have them with everybody. However, all we would be doing is putting countries with whom we did not have an MLAT and who had the need for occasional requests in a similar, but not better, position than the US under the MLAT and with similar statutory safeguards. I do not think it is anything to be apprehensive about, but it certainly needs to be explained. I hope I have given a brief outline now, but I will be happy to amplify on it at any time. This is not an issue that need be anything other than transparent. In fact it is in the interest of transparency that we would be seeking to move ahead in this direction.

These are the only comments that come to mind at this stage. If I can assist further, I will endeavour to do so.

SUSPENSION OF STANDING ORDER 23 (7) AND (8)

[Moved by the Honourable Minister responsible for Community Development, Women's Affairs, Youth and Sports]

QUESTION PUT: AGREED: STANDING ORDER 23(7) AND (8) SUSPENDED TO ALLOW QUES- TION TIME TO CONTINUE BEYOND 11.00 AM.

The Speaker: The Fourth Elected Member for West Bay.

Mr. Cline A. Glidden Jr.: A few months ago one of the larger clearing banks on the Island sent out a disturbing notice to its customers concerning the sharing of information. It caused quite a bit of concern in the community and there were indications that this same action would be followed by other banks. Was this action taken because of requirements to meet commitments made to the OECD or FATF? If not, what was the justification and will this be something other banks will be perusing as well?

The Speaker: The Honourable Third Official Member.

Hon. George A. McCarthy: That very disturbing letter was one that caused some concern to me and Members of the government. I brought this to the attention of the Monetary Authority who could not establish the immediate basis on which that letter was issued. The Managing Director undertook to conduct a review. He is presently off the island and I was not able to consult him to establish how that interview had gone and what the outcome was.

I have also been made to understand that that letter has been of concern to the Bankers Association and it has not been confirmed to me that similar letters by other financial institutions will be issued.

In terms of the due diligence procedures that have to be carried out on accounts of existing customers, this is something that financial institutions will have to agree upon in terms of the process by which that will be done. However, that will not be any more onerous than the requirements for the establishment of existing accounts. What must be borne in mind in terms of the accounts on records on which that review is to be carried out is that quite a lot of the relevant information that those financial institutions should have in place is in place. It is just a question where corroborative evidence or information is required, such as documentary evidence, copies of passports, and other measures in order to establish identity of clients. These will have to be determined and agreed upon in terms of what documentary evidence will be required. I am not in a position now to confirm that similar letters will be forwarded by other financial institutions on the Island. From what I can gather, that letter may be peculiar to that specific institution.

The Speaker: Two additional supplementaries.
The Second Elected Member for West Bay.

Mr. Rolston M. Anglin: Would the Honourable Third Official Member say whether or not our commitment is in line with what is happening within the European Union (EU), in particular Switzerland? Just yesterday the head of the Swiss Financial Authority resigned (I think that is the third one in recent times) over disputes within the EU in regard to Switzerland's confidentiality Laws and their resistance to making any substantive changes to those.

The Speaker: The Honourable Third Official Member.

Hon. George A. McCarthy: I cannot say our commitment to review and replace our Confidential Relationship Preservation Law (CRPL) is in line with the commitment of other EU countries. We have to look at the prevailing circumstances at that time. First, I think it is worth re-emphasising in terms of the commitment to review the CRPL. It says, "the CRPL is to be repealed and replaced with appropriate information disclosure legislation which will protect the legitimate confidential information and maintain the soundness of the financial system."

If you will permit me to digress to make a point, I would just like to say that the primary purpose of our CRPL is to facilitate guided disclosure. The Law states to whom information should be made available, such as a police officer of the rank of an inspector. The Law was never intended to shield criminality. However, the title of that legislation and how it has been advertised in some instances, this has allowed for a misinterpretation and a wrong conclusion to be drawn as to what that piece of legislation is about.

If we look at legislation in the UK and elsewhere, the provisions in the CRPL can be found. The provisions contained in the CRPL to allow for guided disclosure and when we talk about the MLAT, that is, to provide guided disclosure. When we talk in terms of the instrument to be put in place to allow for the sharing of information after 31 December 2003 in criminal tax matters, it is to allow for guided disclosure.

We recognise that confidentiality in terms of legitimate business is a natural requirement. In fact it is a common law. I am not a lawyer, however, I have been made to understand it is a normal common law privilege that I cannot walk into a financial institution and ask for the details of the financial information pertaining to another person. This matter is being looked at very closely.

In terms of where we stand, the emphasis will be on a level playing field. We know the OECD commitment, or the booklet "Harmful Tax Practices", we have seen where two of the OECD countries have not endorsed the expectations as set out in that booklet. I know that negotiations are still taking place. What is being said here in terms of the review of the CRPL is that this Law is still in place. Until it is agreed upon in terms of what will be an appropriate piece of legislation that would serve as an alternative to give the necessary protection that should be in place and is expected to be in place in terms of international standards this law will not be touched.

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman.

Mrs. Julianna Y. O'Connor-Connolly: In light of the international pressures for exchange of information, would it be correct to say that with the passing of the financial transaction tax or revenue, we are in fact creating a master database for fertile ground for injunctions or requests for persons' financial transactions within this jurisdiction?

The Speaker: The Honourable Third Official Member.

Hon. George A. McCarthy: If you would allow for the Second Official Member to respond to that question.

The Speaker: Certainly.

Hon. David F. Ballantyne: I think it is important to try to differentiate between the purposes for which information is provided, taking the OECD for example. The gist of their proposal is that they would like to submit requests for specific information in relation to specific individuals in criminal tax matters and in civil tax matters.

We have had discussions with our major and indeed only treaty partner regarding possible extension of the MLAT to cover certain criminal tax matters. Although it has yet to get formal blessing of government, and therefore I cannot commit government, the general understanding is by those who participated in those discussions that a satisfactory definition of criminal tax matters, or to be specific, criminal tax evasion has been reached.

I do not wish to suggest that that is a panacea. However in a country that does not have direct taxation, it is very important in my submission to be able to know the boundaries of cooperation. Therefore, it is extremely important to specify in which matters you are prepared to offer cooperation.

If we were to simply accede to the OECDs requests for cooperation on criminal tax matters, the first question I would ask is 'what criminal tax matters? The matters that your law says are criminal tax matters? All of them?' We would end up enforcing the criminal tax laws of every country in the world. I do not believe that is what we should do, or should be required to do. Therefore, we have taken great care to try to define the extent and type of behaviour which would be appropriate to give cooperation in relation to.

Generally speaking, that behaviour consists of fraudulent, dishonest evasion of income tax. I am not going to attempt to give you that definition that would be wrong of me. However, there would have to be a criminal element by virtue of the fraudulent part and the dishonest part. There would have to be an evasion as opposed to avoidance.

We, in the English-speaking world, attach considerable significance to the difference between "evasion" and "avoidance" for very good reason. Avoidance is generally considered to be both legally possible and not necessarily legally reprehensible, whereas evasion is considered a criminal act.

Therefore, it appears to those of us who have been involved that it is in the interest of the Cayman Islands to seek to define the areas in which cooperation will be provided. We have sought to try also in the discussions to stay within the parameters laid down by local legislation. For example, where we have safeguards in that local legislation, we would want similar safeguards to apply in relation to any information sharing arrangement. So, in regard to tax matters we would not permit fishing expeditions. We would not permit a general request that was simply casting around to see what it could net. We would require there to be reasonable grounds demonstrated to suspect that a tax offence within the definition had occurred before assistance would be provided.

I am only giving you an outline of what might be the future arrangements. These discussions are ongoing with the OECD and it has been made very clear to them that although they may desire a multilateral instrument, our preference here would be for a bilateral set of arrangements, as we have with the United States. The commitment we have given is to a MLAT style approach, so that perhaps you can now see the relevance of the discussions on possible extension of the MLAT and in these areas because it would mean that we were developing from an existing base of cooperation in a defined way. In due course it would be necessary to seek to define also, as the Third Official Member has said, exactly in which civil areas cooperation would be given in order to fulfill that commitment.

I am going to come back to the Member's question, which was really directed as to whether this was a "Big Brother" scenario where the authorities were endeavouring to accumulate a large mound or database of information which was going to be available like a pot of honey for others to come and taste from time to time.

I am not aware of any such intention. Indeed, I think the laws that exist militate against that. The information that the Monetary Authority requires is for its purposes and for the purposes of corresponding overseas regulators. Only if that information disclosed criminal activity would it be really necessary for that information to be shared, and quite properly, with law enforcement authorities. Similarly, if the Law enforcement authorities have concerns about an institution, those concerns would have to be grounded and would have to give rise to regulatory concerns before that information would be shared with the regulator. Of course, there should be cooperation domestically, that is very important. I recently did publicly mention that protocols need to be developed for this kind of cooperation. However, the information base that each authority maintains is its own information base. There is no common information base of which I am aware, nor is there any intention to have such a common database.

In conclusion, I think the financial services industry has confidence in both the Monetary Authority and the Financial Reporting Unit, and it is important to preserve that confidence. The Egmont Group recognises the importance of preserving the confidence of the industry and therefore it would be unwise, in my opinion, to do anything that would undermine that confidence because that would undermine and impact the successful operation of these respective systems. They are not the same and do not exist for the same purposes. The information is shared only when it is appropriate and necessary to do so.

The Speaker: Moving on to question 75, standing in the name of the Second Elected Member for Bodden Town.

QUESTION NO. 75

No. 75: Mr. Gilbert A. McLean asked the Honourable Minister responsible for the Ministry of Health and Information Technology has Government approved the various changes in telephone rates made by Cable & Wireless over the past months announced in the local media.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Health and Information Technology.

Hon. Linford A. Pierson: The answer is no. Under the terms of Government's licence agreement with Cable & Wireless, the company does not require Government approval for decreases in their rates, only for increases. Cable & Wireless merely informed Government of the changes—it did not seek Government's approval.

SUPPLEMENTARIES

The Speaker: The Second Elected Member for Bodden Town.

Mr. Gilbert A. McLean: I would like to ask the Minister more specifically if C&W sought Government's approval for the increases to calls from fixed lines under the pretext of giving a break to persons using cellular phones by decreasing the cost to the cellular phone, and instead adding a huge increase to fixed lines.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Health and Information Technology.

Hon. Linford A. Pierson: This is a very good question that has a lot of merit. Though it is true that the overall bottom line of C&W may not have increased as a result of this change, I believe that technically the Member is on to something. Transferring the cost from the recipient to the calling party is technically an increase even though it may not have increased the revenue of C&W.

To further answer the question, no, C&W did not seek permission to do that.

The Speaker: The Second Elected Member for Bodden Town.

Mr. Gilbert A. McLean: We understand that the C&W has been given a "sweetheart" license, giving it a monopoly. However, considering the Committee has been appointed by the Minister is the Ministry looking into this increase of rates under any or all appropriate legislation or clauses? Particularly at a point when the company is virtually getting rid of all staff, and when the cost should be reduced they continue to increase their rates?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Health and Information Technology.

Hon. Linford A. Pierson: I have already spoken to the newly appointed Telecommunications Advisory Committee, in particular the Chairman, and said that I would like for this matter to be given very urgent attention. I do not believe that C&W as a company has profited from this transaction. I believe it is a technical issue.

As a matter of fact, it is my understanding that overall they may have lost on this arrangement. However, it does seem that transferring the call from the recipient to the calling party is an increase in rates to the calling party. I will definitely be looking into this matter and asking the newly appointed committee to also investigate this issue.

The Speaker: The Elected Member for East End.

Mr. V. Arden McLean: Can the Honourable Minister say whether or not Government has received from C&W a rate comparison evaluation to see if it is revenue neutral, reduced or increased?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Health and Information Technology.

Hon. Linford A. Pierson: I am not sure I fully understood the question. Would the Member repeat that?

The Speaker: Would you please repeat your question?

Mr. V. Arden McLean: Maybe I should elaborate a bit on it. When rates are reviewed, you do a comparison of what exists, where you want to go and you conclude with two different rate schedules. You see if it is revenue neutral, that is a reduction or an increase. These rate reviews are completed by very competent people and they present the company with the different scenarios of how they can achieve whatever goal they intend to pursue. Has Government received those rate sheets?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Health and Information Technology.

Hon. Linford A. Pierson: The only adjustments that have been made thus far were to the mobile phones (fixed to mobile; and mobile to fixed). There was a proposal made by C&W on 9 May which we have not approved. We have referred that to the committee to evaluate and perform the comparative exercise the member referred to.

We performed the comparison on the mobile situation, (fixed to mobile; mobile to mobile, and mobile to fixed) comparing the old rates with the new situation. Basically C&W removed the charges from the recipient party to the calling party so we have a situation similar to what exists with fixed line calls.

I can go through the details of the new position compared with the old position if Members require that, however that was made fairly clear in the news media.

The Speaker: Two additional supplementaries.
The Elected Member for East End.

Mr. V. Arden McLean: Is there a schedule of rates agreed to initially in the license agreement between Government and C&W?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Health and Information Technology.

Hon. Linford A. Pierson: There is not a schedule of rates in the new agreement. This is one of the areas we will be looking at and comparing with various countries to see what obtains. The terms of reference referred to this exercise being carried out by the Telecommunications Advisory Committee.

The Speaker: Are there any further supplementaries? If not, that concludes Question Time for this morning.

Would Members wish to forego the morning break and continue on adjourning for lunch at 12.20?

Moving on to item 4, Other Business, Private Members' Motions. Private Member's Motion No.

12/01, Public Decency Legislation, continuation of debate thereon.

The Second Elected Member for Bodden Town, continuing his debate.

OTHER BUSINESS

PRIVATE MEMBERS MOTIONS

PRIVATE MEMBER'S MOTION NO. 12/01

PUBLIC DECENCY LEGISLATION

(Continuation of debate thereon)

Mr. Gilbert A. McLean: When the House adjourned yesterday, I was speaking on Private Members' Motions Private Member's Motion No. 12/01, Public Decency Legislation. The resolve in the motion is that "Government undertakes a review of the Penal Code (Law 12 of 1975 (1995 Revision)) and any other relevant legislation to ensure that adequate provision is made therein for the maintenance of appropriate standards of public behaviour and public decency in the Cayman Islands."

At the point where I stopped yesterday, I was speaking about the impact on the Cayman Islands of the European Bill of Rights and Freedoms if instituted, which I suggested would be done at some date not far hence. The fact that when that happens it will seriously affect life, our social conditions as far as Cayman goes, in regard to public decency and behaviour that we presently consider acceptable.

I totally support the intent of the resolve section of this Motion because I think it is extremely necessary. We know what the British Parliament has done with regard to removing the offence in our Penal Code regarding homosexual acts. It has the same power and authority to impose any other matters that relate to what is commonly termed human rights or personal rights. This is so far reaching that as far back as May of last year the British Law Society wrote a letter to its members from which I would like to quote a few parts.

The caption of the letter is "Human Rights Act." It says, "In less than six months from now the Human Rights Act will come into force. It will radically change UK law and practice. This is because the Act will give effect in UK law to European Convention for the protection of human rights and fundamental freedoms."

It also states, "All legislation will have to be interpreted to comply with those rights, and common law principles will have to be re-assessed in light of them. Breach of a Convention right will give rise to a right of action and will become a defence in criminal and civil proceedings."

All of the Commonwealth of Nations subscribe to British type law and legislation. There is no difference in any of the countries and the Cayman Islands have to do what it is told to do, unfortunately, criticise how gleefully we do it,

To quote another part of the letter, the president, Mr. Roy Robert Sayer goes on to say, "Let there be no mistake about it, this raft of European defined rights will impinge not only upon the behaviour of public authorities, the courts and tribunals, but also upon disputes upon all areas including contract, commercial and insurance matters, personal injury, family welfare, education, disability, mental health, immigration, property, employment, defamation, privacy, tax, housing, planning and the environment, and criminal law. It will affect every area of public and private rights."

I suggest that that is very profound. If it is profound for the British, who have unlimited ability and access to lawyers and so forth, who are in effect part of the European turf making them stand up and take notice to that extent. The point I am making about what this impending legislation means to us and why we as legislators should become aware of it. It will influence the very thing we are debating today in regard to public decency.

Just to quote one other part. He also said, "We will need to appreciate the complexities of convention law, some of which are at present alien to most of us." Now, if the British are saying that, imagine what we should be saying when talking about decency laws and so on.

Further quoting, "These concepts are novel, even to those of us who are experienced UK litigators and underlines the importance of getting up to speed before the Act comes into force." Mr. Speaker, I understand the Act is in force. With your permission, I would like to table this document.

The Speaker: So ordered.

Mr. Gilbert A. McLean: Mr. Speaker, I have lived in the Cayman Islands all of my life, except for some occasions when I lived overseas in two different countries. I saw customs practised and the behaviour of the people. I made it a point to abide by the Laws and customs of those countries. I had my views about their behaviour, however I was only on a journey and those people had the right to do what they wanted to do in their society.

I believe we have that same right in the Cayman Islands, and I do not believe it should be threatened by Europe or any country in Europe, including the UK, to impose upon the Cayman Islands something that is offensive to our morals and to our society.

Yesterday I pointed out a few things that I thought needed to be considered by the legal authorities in the Cayman Islands. I suppose it would first be referred to the Attorney General who would order however many of his staff to deal with this matter. I hope that it will be dealt with speedily.

Let us give the British their due. From 1998, they told us these things were coming. In the usual fashion of governments of the past, and I hope it will not be the fashion of the present Government, they denied its existence and thought it would not really come. They thought if they did nothing that nothing would happen. Life is not that way.

The British government is positioning itself in its own interest in keeping with its European partners. We are but a small backyard that they also have to look about here down in the Caribbean.

I do not accept that some of the defiance of nature that is acceptable in other countries is acceptable in the Cayman Islands. We know that in Europe same sex marriages are allowed. We know that adoption of children is allowed by same sex couples. No one can tell me that at some point in time that cannot be instituted here in the Cayman Islands by edict unless we should become a sovereign nation (which we are not). Regrettably, something as simple as changing the title of Leader of Government Business and Deputy Leader of Government Business to a Chief Minister and Deputy Chief Minister, seems to be choking us and creating a major problem in the minds of some.

I would like to refer to something a young man well versed in the business of Information Technology was able to get me off the Internet in regard to Holland, the Netherlands. This was a release on 19 December 2000, by David Organ Coolidge. It related to a statement by the Marriage Law Project. It says, “Today the Netherlands has legalised marriage for same sex couples. It’s the first country to do so.”

It goes on to say, “The government of the Netherlands has decided that it has the authority to redefine marriage. It has decided that ‘care’ is what makes a marriage, not the union of a man and a woman. This is a sad day.”

It goes on, “The sadness comes not from the fact that same sex couples will receive various government benefits; the Netherlands already made that decision by legalising registered partnerships in 1998. By creating same sex marriage Holland goes much further. It sends a message not only to the citizens, but to the world. The message is simple and direct: When it comes to marriage or children, sexual difference does not matter. In the name of equality the truth about sexual differences must be suppressed and distorted. In the name of ‘equal treatment’ the private sector will now be forced to endorse this legislation.”

Another quote from it is, “But now, in the name of tolerance, the government has ordered endorsement. Recognition of sexual difference is out. Family Law will become Relationship Law. Citizens must be taught they are the same and any recognition even of their sexual differences seems to be a threat.” And we are talking about decency laws in the Cayman Islands.

I hope that most of us chosen by the people of the Cayman Islands will stand totally and utterly against such defiance and mockery of one of the longest standing social institutions in the world. To be able to perceive, if nothing else, a physical and biological difference between the two human species that Nature, God, or whomever we choose to call it, has produced. Therefore we do not inflict on ourselves such things that are accepted in the European nations and England’s commitment to this which extends it to us.

I should never want to imagine that something like that could take place in the Cayman Islands. However, I have seen a number of things that I would have sworn could not happen, do happen. In most instances it occurred and there was not a single bleat.

I subscribe to rights for all. If persons in this or any society chose to live in an unnatural relationship, I largely treat that as their business—if it is private. When it moves into the public arena where a majority subscribe to, prefer and live by the natural, then I think it is unacceptable. I do not see any logical reasons why a minority who chose the unnatural should be given special privilege by having their behaviour highlighted, or the majority acknowledge them by statements and all such other means, as a special breed of persons who are due respect or concessions over and beyond what the majority are given.

It is a question that is going to involve all of us in this legislature getting together really soon, (particularly the new Members who form part of the Government Backbench, whom I hope will urge their Government forward) to come up with some legislation through the legal channels. I hear some countries have some very strong legislation that deals with enforcing the natural and normal western Christian way within their borders. I heard that in one such country, Scotland, and our Attorney General is from there and could find such relevant legislation if he so chooses, that legislation does indeed exist. Due to how everything is progressing, I think we need to move on this one very quickly because; in my opinion there is not a whole lot of time for us to act.

I think, too, that before this country accepts certain sociological impositions from other countries that take away from us the things that we believe in, have instituted and stand for, we should look to move far from the political and legal connections from such countries.

In reply to a question this morning, I picked up a phrase from the Honourable Second Official Member when he spoke about the “extent and type of behaviour.” I think we need to clearly define the extent and type of behaviour that we will find acceptable in the Cayman Islands. We need to do it quickly. We need to say to everyone that this is how it is going to be in the Cayman Islands.

We have had one situation where a Law was removed by Order in Council and the whole issue of privacy will highlight this whole behaviour. Beyond that, we are going to prescribe our public domain and what happens to the people who live in this country, both Caymanian and non-Caymanian regarding what is decent and acceptable.

This is a very interesting topic. So much can be said about it. However, I think I have stated what I perceive it could include and certainly offered some of my personal opinions about the things that we are up against and have to deal with. Having done so, I would wish to state once again that I support this Motion. I think we ought to get moving on it quickly and I will give my support to any effort being made in this direction and I hope it will not take the position on the backburner if it is accepted by the Government, and we have not heard from them yet.

The Speaker: The Third Elected Member for George Town.

Dr. Frank S. McField: Private Member's Motion No. 12/01, Public Decency Legislation is asking the Government to look into establishing public decency legislation. It reads, "AND WHEREAS the people of the Cayman Islands remain committed to high standards of public behaviour and public decency ..." and somehow it is being assumed that those high standards of public behaviour and decency would be eroded by the Order in Council made on 13 December 2000 which states. "Notwithstanding any statutory or common law provisions in the Territory to the contrary, a homosexual act in private shall not be an offence provided that the parties consent thereto and have attained the age of 18 years."

The problem is that the Motion is asking our government to try to maintain standards that would be eroded by this Order in Council. My guess is that the government will probably find it very difficult to create public standards that would be able to achieve what most Members and persons in the Cayman Islands would like to see in the first place, that is, the maintenance of their particular ethical and fundamental moral values which in fact disagrees with the Order in Council. This fundamental disagreement is problematic to all of us. You cannot expect to get a child to do a man's job, nor can you expect to bring in minor legislation to solve the conflict that has been created by major legislation, the more dominant legislation, being in this case the enactment by the UK government.

Perhaps the exercise we are going through here will allow us to air how we feel again, and how this has hurt our sense of decency and ethical values we are able to get up and say what we do not like about the reality which is being created for us. At the end of the day, we have to honestly assess the situation and let our people know whether what we are trying to do here today will assist what it is that they would like to achieve.

Let me make what I consider to be my personal situation quite clear on this question of homosexuality. I have not developed any kind of rigid ideological position. Many people in many parts of the world seem to have developed a position, whether for or against. I tend in my own way, if I like a person, and they are of that sexual orientation, I do not use that against them. However if I do not like the person anyway, and they have that sexual orientation, I will use that against them. So, it appears to me, how the person really is depends on my own personal relationship with that person. I am quite sure that a lot of us are of that same persuasion because it would be a lie if we said that many of us have not had dealings with people whom we knew had those particular sexual leanings. We were able during our relationship or dealings with those people to avoid any kind of reference to the sexuality, simply because that was not significant in terms of the relationship we might have had with them.

The problem of homosexuality is not a problem that is introduced to our society by virtue of British legislation. The problem is here as a result of the sexual orientation of many of our people and many of the people who work in our country. It is not legislation, instead, the lack of legislation that seems to have given us the current predicament.

What seems to have come to bear as a result of the legislation that has been enacted in Britain is our lack of ability to use the more abstract laws to identify, apprehend, and convict persons that have offended sections 142 and 143 of the Penal Code dealing with unnatural acts. The argument being made is that since the society has not relied upon legal sanctions, but more on social sanctions to deal with this problem. In fact, to remove the legal sanctions would in no way jeopardise or affect the moral orientation or the religious beliefs of this society. That is the type of justification one could see being made in this particular instance.

Although there seems to be a moral panic going on as a result of the Order in Council, that the Order in Council is virtually doing nothing more than has been done by the persons charged to use the law to protect the Order by identifying, apprehending and convicting persons that have offended the law.

It seems important in this day and age when we are being critical of the UK and of this situation, to note that there was no motion in this Parliament brought to say that the Government should become more active, more vigilant in identifying, apprehending and convicting people that were in contradiction to this particular part of the Penal Code. Never have I heard that advocated. Given this reason, the debate seems to be more a consideration of the possible consequences of this Order in Council, rather than having to deal with the issue of homosexuality. Therefore, we need to make a difference.

The premise is that if you remove the Law which represses these unnatural acts, as defined in the Law, it will cause persons to exhibit behaviour in public that will be offensive. However if society accepts that sexual acts between persons of the same sex can take place in private, then it is my submission that we will see those persons acting towards each other in public in a way that will indicate that they are having a sexual relationship in private.

Heterosexuals do not have sex in public. Some people do not even hold hands in public. They do not display affection publicly. We can surmise that they are connected to one another and we can imagine that they must be having some kind of sexual relationship in private. It is not the display of the affection so much in public which offends people; it is the thought of persons of the same sex having sexual relationships in private. As soon as we are going to allow people to have sexual relationships in private, the public decency outcry becomes relevant. As far as I can see, this Motion cannot fix that problem.

There are persons with religious convictions that say if we watch the developments in Europe we will see that once we legalise homosexual acts between consenting adults in private that it will lead to the development of behaviour in public that will then begin to threaten those persons who might not have that particular type of sexual orientation. It will then help erode the family institution and the morals of society and will soon create a homosexual culture that will seek to gain political rights and equality in this society so that publicly there will be a manifestation of the behaviour, culture, and demand for rights and equality. That is where I can not differ with the persons that have been arguing this position because we have seen this to be the case in the cities in America where persons of that orientation have been able to gain legal recognition and legal acceptance for their behaviour. They have been able to move it away from being considered a part of deviancy and to become a part of normality.

The concept that we will have to deal with as a result of this legislation that has been enacted in the UK is very much what everybody will agree on. I just do not think that we need to think that by creating this moral panic that we are going to solve the situation. We have to decide if we are going to cut it off at the root where it will really matter. We know that if we introduce this legislation it will cause a series of events that will eventually lead within the next 15 years to the establishment of a culture in opposition to the moral and religious principles we were founded upon.

I believe that we should not allow this Motion to deflect the fact that if that happens, we have lost the cause, we have lost the fight and we will not be able to go back to it. I feel that we have been able to have coexistence in this society because no one has been identified, apprehended and convicted as homosexuals for a very long time. Therefore, it shows there was no aggressive action by the state or by individuals in our society to deal with this problem. It is unfortunate that persons must now feel that they are being criticised and victimised as a result of this particular debate.

I have tried to put this into perspective to show that the Motion calling for government to establish decency Laws might bring us into a kind of repression against the part of society that does not need to be controlled morally at the moment, at least not by more repressive legislation.

The Second Elected Member for Bodden Town mentioned kids going to school with their pants hanging down. These have to do with school codes, with parents being more concerned about how kids choose their clothes. We want to ensure that we do not become more oppressive, especially in this day and age, trying to solve a problem that is not a decency problem. I believe that to deal with this problem we need to decide whether or not we are going to decide the UK ruling on it. I stand with the country in whatever is decided upon to do. If they decide they want this imposition, then I go with the country. If they feel that other things are more important than this in order to preserve the relationship, I go with the country. However, I cannot see at this particular point why we are talking about giving the Government the authority and the task of trying to create decency legislation because decency legislation, unless it is extremely oppressive is not going to deal with the problem we really need to deal with.

Therefore, I do not think this Private Member's Motion will serve any purpose. I will not be supporting it.

The Speaker: I shall now suspend proceedings until 2.00 for lunch.

PROCEEDINGS SUSPENDED AT 12.21 PM

PROCEEDINGS RESUMED AT 2.10 PM

The Speaker: Please be seated.

Debate continues on Private Members' Motions. Private Member's Motion No. 12/01, Public Decency Legislation, does any Member wish to speak?

Mr. Gilbert A. McLean: Just on a matter of procedure, I observe that the Mover has not yet returned from lunch. The Second Official Member who would be replying for government is not present. I am not quite sure how the Chair would wish to proceed, or if we should take a break, although we have just called the House to order.

The Speaker: I will pause for a minute, and if any Member wishes to speak in the meantime, he or she may. (Pause)

Does any other Member wish to speak? (Pause)
Does any other Member wish to speak? (Pause)

The First Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman.

Mrs. Julianna Y. O'Connor-Connolly: I rise to make my brief contribution on Private Members' Motions. Private Member's Motion No. 12/01, Public Decency Legislation.

This Motion speaks to the Order made in Council on 13 December 2000, which reads as follows: "Not- withstanding any statutory or common law provisions in the Territory to the contrary, a homosexual act in private shall not be an offence provided that the parties consent thereto and have attained the age of eighteen years.” We all know that this has been extended to the Cayman Islands as well.

It is my view that this legalises homosexual acts in private if two things are in existence, first that the parties are consenting and secondly, have achieved the age of 18. I am also aware that there were legislative moves afoot in the UK to decrease this age from 18 to 16. I trust that although the Labour Government seems to have the majority of support, when it reaches the House of Lords they will do away with that as they did with the move regarding section 28 when the Labour Government endeavoured to have public funds used for the promotion of homosexual education, and that it will stop there.

The Motion before us also states as a matter of fact that the Cayman Islands are committed to high standards of public behaviour and public decency. I would dare to take that one step further to say that most of the people of the Cayman Islands, if not all, are committed to high standards of behaviour and decency. I am of the view that to split the act into two categories as has been done, that is, public and private, is a major step in desensitising the public's view towards the act that I have quoted from Leviticus and Romans which is an act of abomination.

The resolve of the Motion asks for a review of the Penal Code and any other relevant legislation to ensure that adequate provision is made for the maintenance of appropriate standards of public behaviour and decency in the Cayman Islands. I must say from the very outset that I am in agreement with the basic intent of the Motion. I believe it is good. If I perceive it correctly, it seeks to put in place the necessary legislation to prevent the further erosion of these moral, cultural and traditional issues that are near and dear to our hearts.

However, I believe that one must also take a much closer look at this. For example, I am sure that as an Overseas Territory, any of the indecency laws we would seek to put in place in our respective jurisdiction would undoubtedly fall under the international human rights microscope. Based on previous experience, if any of our indecency laws do not come up to par with international expectations, perhaps we will see other Orders in Council. While on the Order in Council, I hoped I would be able to speak after the Honourable Second Official Member, so that I would be in a more informed position as to the accuracy of the actual statutory instrument passed down from the UK as far as procedural aspects were concerned. Perhaps I will listen with interest if he does that at a later time be it in this forum or otherwise.

I think that the very first step was of significant erosion here of our local, cultural and religious expectations. Although we appreciate our relationship with the UK, once we take that against the background of a partnership, as mentioned in the White Paper, it is difficult to digest when it comes to decency Laws. The statutory instrument regarding homosexual acts in private when consensual and over the age of 18, more credence was not given to our domestic and local culture and beliefs.

Mr. Speaker, with your permission I would like to refer briefly to an article that I was able to come across when surfing the Internet this morning that dealt with the whole aspect of the influence of the European Court as it relates to the UK and, by extension, to us here in Cayman. It appeared in an article on 31 July 2000. It said, “A London gay was in fact convicted of gross indecency in taking part in sexual play with multiple consenting adults in his home and that he was awarded nearly $31,500 from the European Court of Human Rights, the BBC reports.” It went on to say that the European Court ruled that the British Law that banned gay sex in the presence of one or more others was a violation to the man's right to privacy and further, that the European Court claimed that Britain's gross indecency law was discriminatory. That is, it applied only to gay men and that sex between the same sex is legal in Britain as it is now in Cayman, if it is in private between two consenting partners who are over 18 and if more people are involved, or if the sex is in public, that it is illegal.

One of the gay actors there by the name of Thatchel said that this ruling by the European Court was a historic victory on the road to gay equality. He went on to say, “It makes the remaining areas of discrimination in sexual offences law unsustainable.”

A lady by the name of Angela Mason from a group called Stonewall said that the ruling from the European Court drives a coach and horse through Britain's gross indecency laws. It vindicates the view of sexual offences review that this legislation highlights the right to privacy as set out by the European Court.

Finally, I came across someone who seemed to be thinking like us here in Cayman, a chap by the name of Adrian Rogers, of the anti-gay group, Family focus, who said, “Britain needs to distance itself from Europe which is bringing down the social fabric of our society. They are giving a status to a form of activity which is less than desirable, medically hazardous and which really stands in opposition to the alternative, which is heterosexual family life.”

The very last comment made by the editor of the article said, “One wonders whether anything is going to remain illegal in Europe.” I can easily concur with that opinion seeing all the liberalisation of concepts that seems to be coming out of the European corner whether dealing with morale or financial matters.

When we also take a look at what the Labour Government has been doing in the UK, starting from their campaign promises onward, we can see that there has been a great move in effect. That is why I started off my introductory remarks talking about the desensitisation of this offence. I am quite confident that this is but a first step.

I believe, however, that I am right in saying there is still a common law offence in existence, thank God, of gross indecency, which is extremely wide. As a priority, I believe we must look at all of the areas.

One thing I learned in doing research is that apparently in the UK, for whatever reason, it was deemed under section 25 that lesbian sexual activity does not constitute an offence unless it involves a child or in the absence of consent. This article went on to say, it will "amount to a breach of peace if offensive." We see in their own way of thinking there is still inequality in that the gross indecency Laws seem to only apply to the gay male sector of the community, and the female lesbian sector seems to not be caught by this section." I hope when and if we get around to looking at our own indecency Laws that we will not leave such a loophole. Of course, there are also areas where children are involved with indecent publications and otherwise. Those are areas that I hope the drafters will pay some attention to as well.

I referred briefly to section 28 of the UK indecency Law and that deems the promotion of homosexuality which in the UK I am told gutted scores of local programmes when it was made Law. The Law also expressly forbids the acceptable presentation of homosexuality in government funded schools as a pretended family relationship. I am happy to report that because of the Conservative Opposition their efforts were thwarted to repeal section 28. However, I do not think the battle is over yet. In my research, it seemed that these groups were hoping for a victory for the Labour Party and were going to come forward with their efforts again.

I was also able to find a group of gay activists that seemed to be putting emphasis on the year 2001 in what they call "coming out of the closet." They were encouraging through forums and educational processes and otherwise that not only should this act be confined to private situations but they should now launch out to the next progressive step. That is why I feel that we have to be ever so vigilant to move on to get these Laws in place as a matter of priority.

I do not believe that will be an end-all because of our constitutional relationship with the UK and that we are merely a dependent territory. I feel that if very careful drafting is done that we can cover it locally or domestically. However, we need to come to that point where we are going to say to the UK directly or to the European Community that this is enough and no more. We need to come together as a nation, create a vision as to what we want as far as progress—or regress in this regard. I do not think it is in the interest of our people to sit by passively and just accept it without letting them know categorically that we are not appreciative of these things being shoved down our throats.

Like many of the conservatives in the UK we should demonstrate our outrage at these human rights campaigns. On the surface it sounds all well and good, but when we see some of the things being pushed our way so far by mandatory legislation, one wonders if the most appropriate terminology would not be human wrongs! I tend to concur with the latter.

I am cognisant of the fact that in the British Government (and basically whatever happens there happens here, it's just a matter of time) there was a move afoot in January 2001 entitled "British Government proposes gay victim compensation." We have seen on the news that not only have they asked for the legalisation of consensual acts done in private, but have gone on to ask for marital rights, for educational rights, instructional books with pictures depicting same sex. We do not have to go any further than the White Paper, they were so "feisty" that there are two uniformed persons of the same sex on that page. God help us when we move to the stage in our beloved Cayman Islands that our children have to be exposed to this type of education presented as an alternative lifestyle.

I believe that they are human beings. We are ordered to love them the same way, but love does not equate to endorsing the behaviour. I make no bones about it. I do not support such behaviour. We are proud to be Caymanians and proud of what has brought us thus far. I think we are going to be put to the test. One could play the devil's advocate and say there is now provision in our Penal Code for some of the indecency behaviour to be taken up by way of offence or under the common area of disturbance of the peace rather than categorising it and identifying the areas that we would like to protect. I am sure that as soon as we do that, we are almost going to be setting ourselves up for either the international forum or the Mother Country to come and say it is not in keeping with the human rights provisions they wish to put into our constitution, or the worldwide conventions.

Perhaps the more prudent approach would have been is to allow the existing Laws and marry that with the common law provision which is fairly adequate to protect against these further erosions. Then, if the Mother Country wants to do it, let her do it the way she did it the last time because maybe it will take such action again to let some of our people become more aware of this unilateral "partnership" that the UK seems to have lulled us into believing is the best thing since sliced bread.

I am confident that the majority of the Law enforcement agencies feel the way we do. It just goes to show that the problem is much bigger. We need to become more alert and aware of who we are hiring as teachers or nurses or nannies or policemen because if they are all coming with this European view, then although we put indecency Laws in place, while we are busy out at work the more fertile young minds could easily be cultivated and we will end up with a generation that has no culture as we would like them to have.

If we are into this new transparency mode, I think the Minister of Education would get full support from this Honourable House in moving towards the introduction of civic education in our schools and for ensuring that the books and information that our children in both private and public schools are given so that even if certain parents wished to have them exposed that it is given in the right perspective.

I went into that area because, having been a teacher myself, I vividly remember when religious education was just that. Due to the process of desensitisation, we are now being taught world religion with Christianity being but one option. Observing my own children's homework, it is not even being taught as Caymanian Christianity. I can go on to give a personal example, of when my son was awarded a certain grade because when he was asked how the world was created and he went on to write about the creation that we adhere to but was told it was evolution. So, it is quite easy to see how these concepts find their way in, and before long, they are the rule and Law of the day.

We must take the blinders off our eyes and do everything within our will as we are the trustees of the public, not only as that relates to the finances of the country, but as it relates to the protection of our culture, education, and the wellbeing of all of our citizens.

It was with a degree of regret that I noted how active the gay activists are. They not only have web sites, but so much information out there being lobbied on their behalf. I urge people who feel strongly about this to take an active role in educating their children as to right and wrong and that they too lobby to ensure that we are no further eroded in this respect. Quite frankly, what I would like to see happen is the Government (all Honourable Members) get together as a think tank and see what can be done, if anything, to make further representation to Her Majesty's Government to put forward the people's views. If anyone is still not fully persuaded that the majority of Caymanian people are not in agreement, I challenge the powers that be to do a referendum based on that specific question and get the statistical data necessary to substantiate the argument.

I believe that if they are really serious about this partnership, that now is the time to make the representation to them and challenge the actual procedure. If my understanding is correct I believe we should be in a position to pass appropriate legislation, if we really mean what we say as it relates to these human rights. Then the UK would be put in a position to either publicly or internationally say that the correct procedure was not done when the statutory instrument was passed and take international embarrassment, or maybe they would do the right thing and come and talk to us "natives" and see that we have been able to survive and prosper based on our Christian heritage. I have always asked why change the old for the new if the old is actually working.

We can see what is happening with the financial aspects. We have to go and bat for ourselves. I am not saying that we should be disrespectful in any way, but when it comes to survival, sometimes we have to apply the rule of survival of the fittest. I believe that if we are going to continue to survive as a little country, the beloved Cayman Islands as we know it, must eradicate the politics out of issues like this and come together as one unit and stand against these forces that would seek to negatively influence our culture and our traditions. I get so agitated when I hear people say we have so many provisions to deal with, if we have to trade maybe we can trade off some of these moral and social issues. I still believe the Good Book when it says that "he has not seen the righteous forsaken or his seed beg bread."

I believe that the same God that has taken us thus far will help to see us through, not only financially, but socially and morally as well. If we feel that because of professionalism, education, or status that we can no longer stand up in a public forum and attest to our clean God Almighty, then I think we have already lost the battle. I know that I have been criticised both by personal friends and political opponents for referring to God in such forums, but as Paul said, "I am not ashamed of the Gospel of God, for indeed it is the power unto salvation." Regardless of whether or not it offends anybody, perhaps I will apologise on that level. However, I will stand on what the Word of God says—it is an abomination. If this is but a first step in creating the indecency Laws I will support it with the condition that we must be prepared to stand by that and not passively sit by and say we cannot do anything because it is the Mother Country. We must make very significant decisions that will be in our best interest at the end of the day.

We as a people must unite on these issues or else it will be tantamount to the Jews and the Germans—if no one stands up, perhaps there will be no one to stand on other issues as well. Thank you.

The Speaker: Does any other Member wish to speak? (Pause) Does any other Member wish to speak? (Pause)

The Third Elected Member for Bodden Town.

Mr. Anthony S. Eden: I rise to make my brief comments on this Motion. Knowing the emotions of Caymanians, I think it is a timely motion. The third Whereas says, "... there is general concern that the said Order may have an adverse effect on traditional standards of public behaviour and public decency." I think the Mover hit it on the head when he said we are concerned.

The next, "WHEREAS the people of the Cayman Islands remain committed to high standards of public behaviour and public decency." I think it is high time that we took this stand in the Cayman Islands.

I will not comment too much on the necessary Laws that will emanate and that will need to be put in place. I will go back to a similar approach taken by the previous speaker and some of my other colleagues and quote from the Bible.

My whole premise is whether or not we as Legislators and the majority of Caymanians believe in the Bible principles, whether we believe in God and in the Bible. If we do not believe in that, my remarks will make no difference on the outcome of this discussion.

It appears that everyone believes that Mother knows best. However, I think that Mom has burnt us again. Are we not yet trusted in our knowledge how best to run these Islands?

I am very concerned about what is happening not only in these Islands, but in the news just yesterday on CNN, they indicated that the powers that be are considering adding this type of lifestyle to the curriculum in the schools. I, for one, will never support that. As I said earlier, my argument on this Motion is in regard to the Biblical approach.

When we look in Genesis 1: 27, 28, it says “God created man in his own image. In the image of God he created him, male and female.” He created Adam and Eve. He did not create Jimmy and Johnny!

[Members’ Laughter]

It goes on in Genesis to state the reason for creating male and female—procreation. “Be fruitful and multiply.”

People will criticise and say that is in the Old Testament. I will now refer to portions of the New Testament where this is addressed. I know my colleague, the First Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman, spoke on this section of the Bible.

Quoting Romans 1: 24-28, “Wherefore, God also gave them up to uncleanness through the lusts of their own hearts to dishonour their own bodies between themselves, who changed the truth of God into a lie, and worshipped and served the creature more than the Creator who is blessed forever.” We either believe in the Lord or we throw out everything we are doing and the Christian heritage where most of us Caymanians came from.

“For this cause God gave them up onto vile affections, for even their women did change the natural use into that which is against nature. And likewise also the men, leaving the natural use of the woman, burned in their own lusts one toward another; men towards men, working that which is unseemly and receiving in themselves that recompense of their error which was met. And even as they did not like to retain God in their knowledge” and this is happening around us on a humongous scale, Mr. Speaker! Going away from that which has brought us our success.

“God gave them over to a reprobate mind for those things which are not convenient.” Does that sound familiar, Mr. Speaker? Does it sound like what is happening in this world today? I may have special feelings towards some of these people, but when you read Romans 2:32 the Lord is not as kind as I would like to be. He says, “Who knowing the judgment of God that they which commit such things are worthy of death.”

Yes, there are those out there who will call me a right winger or whatever, but as long as I breathe the breath of life I will uphold the teachings that my ancestors taught me, and this was not a part of it. Homosexuality was not a part of my upbringing.

Just a few years ago, the former Minister of Tourism stopped a cruise ship with several hundred of them on board from coming here. There was a huge outcry from some of these people. However I took faith when some of the officials from the US communicated to us saying they were glad that we took that stand because we were standing up to a vocal minority. They said they wished that some of the leaders in the US would do the same thing.

I am made to understand that immediately after that the trend was noted that you could see many more family members with children coming here visiting the island. I am proud we took that stand and I hope with the help of God we never go back and try to encourage that type of tourism. Money is not everything. When we lose our souls and our young children and when you look at the lifestyle that goes along with this I will say no more.

You talk about loving the people? Yes, Mr. Speaker, we can love the sinner, but as upright people we must not love the sin! We cannot tolerate it.

I am glad that the Second Elected Member for Bodden Town brought this Motion. It is time we did something. If we listen to our dear “Mother”, we needed her, Mr. Speaker, when we were invaded by over 1200 Cubans! What did Mother give us? One hundred and twenty five thousand dollars worth of tents!

We need strong support to keep our society from collapsing from within. I will take you back to what happened in Sodom and Gomorrah, and the main sin that took place there.

In closing I will say that halfway to heaven is the whole way to hell. Homosexuality is wrong by Bible standards. No matter how much reasoning we may use to justify this lifestyle—whether in private or not—God said it is wrong. I maintain His rulings. As for me and my family, we shall obey the Lord. Thank you.

The Speaker: Does any other Member wish to speak? (Pause) Does any other Member wish to speak? (Pause)

The Fourth Elected Member for West Bay.

Mr. Cline A. Glidden Jr.: With all that has been said concerning this Motion and all the references from the Good Book, it is hard to add anything to that. However I wanted to rise and offer my support to this very timely Motion.

We have heard many varied opinions as to what we can and cannot do when it comes to morality and public decency legislation. I would like to clearly state that I do not think that we should be attempting to legislate morality. I feel that when it gets to the stage that we have to legislate morality that we as a nation will have lost the fight. However, I do feel that when attempts are made to erode the moral teachings that have been taught in the Cayman Islands and that have allowed us to be successful we as Legislators have a responsibility to try to create legislation that will appease the majority of the population. As the Second Elected Member for George Town said, the Mother Country obviously does not know what is best all the time.

I note that the Mover of the Motion said it was not about homosexuality. I share with the Third Elected Member for George Town in saying that I have quite a few friends who I feel may be so inclined. I do my best not to judge or discriminate because when we refer to the Bible we note that judging is also a sin. There are many other sins referred to in the Bible that society tends to accept as okay. I do not think that is the track we should be following.

When it comes to the legislation imposed by the Order in Council for decriminalising consenting adults of the same sex in private that was one of the most hotly debated topics. These are great Islands and while most people were not supportive of the Order in Council, I feel that Caymanians have accepted that it would not be worth letting our relationship with the Mother Country deteriorate. One option the people who elected us here would expect us to take would be the enactment of local legislation that would protect them from some of the ills associated with this Order in Council.

I think that is what the Mover and Seconder of this Motion had in mind. My reason for supporting this Motion is strictly with that feeling. Whatever we can do to hopefully restrict the negative effects of the Order in Council and the affect it will have on the general public by allowing what would be seen as indecent activities in public, I think if that is achieved by this Motion then one of our goals would have been achieved.

We know that we could go back and forth over what is and what is not decent. We could even tie this into decent and indecent dress codes. That would entail a lot of personal opinion. I know this legislation will not be easily accepted, and I fully expect that it will not cover all areas that it could possibly be expected to cover. However it will at least be a start in the right direction. As with all other Laws, it will require amendments as times change.

When we talk about the homosexuality issue and the ships coming here, I think some of the other speakers mentioned that even though we may be able to prevent people coming here as visitors or tourists, our indications from the press are that we have people with those sexual preferences who have been born and bred here in Cayman. I think it is high time for us to realise that while hard to accept, as it was with gangs and crime, that we can no longer blame outsiders and tourists, saying it is a problem in those other countries. We have to accept that it is a part of Cayman society. Regardless of their sexual preference, they are still Caymanian.

Therefore, in supporting this Motion, I want to make it clear that I realise that those individuals do exist and reside here in Cayman, they mix and mingle with us on a daily basis. I feel that they have their rights to their sexual preference, however I also feel that those preferences should not have a negative impact on other Members of society that do not endorse that type of behaviour.

When the Penal Code is reviewed, I feel we will be on the right path if we can do whatever we can to ensure that the majority of our society is comfortable. With those short comments, I end my contribution to this debate. I look forward to hearing the Honourable Second Official Member's contribution and supporting this Motion.

The Speaker: Does any other Member wish to speak? (Pause)

The Honourable Second Official Member.

Hon. David F. Ballantyne: Thank you.

This has been quite a wide-ranging debate, and it is obviously a very broad topic. That is one of the difficulties presented by the Motion as framed. I am not going to suggest it be amended, but just to draw attention to the fact that the resolve section of the Motion asks that the Government "undertakes a review of the Penal Code (Law 12 of 1975 (1995 Revision)) and any other relevant legislation to ensure that adequate provision is made therein for the maintenance of appropriate standards of public behaviour and public decency in the Cayman Islands."

At the risk of adopting the position sometimes adopted by the Third Elected Member for George Town, I would venture to suggest that it is unreasonable to look to the Law alone to do what the Motion itself seeks to do, which is the maintenance of appropriate public behaviour and public decency in the Cayman Islands. In fact, I would suggest that the Law should reflect those standards of public behaviour and public decency, which implies (if I am at all right in this) that those standards need first to be identified and articulated before they can be reflected in a Law.

I do not think it is the expectation of this House that the legislative draftsman would go away and think about this question and come back with provisions designed to reflect the consensus of this society.

That leads me to say that it will be necessary to undertake some work in this regard if this Motion is accepted, which it is the Government's intention to do. That work will take some time. The best estimate I can give is that in my opinion, it would take about six months to bring forward proposals for legislation. The reason for that is in my submission an attempt will have to be made to define what those standards are and what and how that translates, or should translate into Law insofar as it is not already in the Law.

In that regard, reference has been made to the Penal Code. If one has regard to section 142 of the Penal Code, for example, you will find there and in associated sections (and we have been looking at some of them when increasing penalties for sexual offences), but section 142 (1) in particular, deals with unnatural offences. It talks about this, “Whoever has carnal knowledge of any person against the order of nature, or has carnal knowledge of any animal or who permits a male person so to have carnal knowledge of him or her is guilty of an offence and liable to imprisonment for three years. (2) Whoever attempts to commit an offence under subsection (1) is guilty of an offence.”

Section 143(1) “Whoever unlawfully and indecently assaults a boy under the age of fourteen years is guilty of an offence and liable to imprisonment for ten (previously five but amended) years.”

I am only citing these as examples of offences against morality as contained in the 1995 Penal Code. However, it is not just offences against morality and it is not just physical offences with which this Motion is concerned. For example, under the Cinematograph Law there is a provision in section 5 to the effect, “Whoever exhibits by mutoscope, cinematograph or similar apparatus any exhibitions of pictures or sound effects of a blasphemous, seditious or obscene nature is guilty of an offence and liable on summary conviction before the magistrate to a fine of one hundred dollars and to imprisonment for six months.”

Similarly, under the Broadcasting Law, section 12, “It’s the duty of a licensee to ensure that the programmes broadcast by him include nothing which offends against good taste or decency, is likely to encourage or incite to crime or lead to disorder, or to be offensive to public feelings, or which contain any offensive representation of or reference to a living person.”

I draw attention to these provisions to indicate that it is not just offences involving physical contact that are required to be taken into account. These other measures are as I understand it expressions of what are considered to be appropriate standards of public behaviour. Even with the exception of the physical offences, they do not actually define what obscenity is; they do not define what would be offensive to public feelings. It may be that in the broadcasting area, for example, there may be a need for something like a complaints commission to whom reference might be made and who might adjudicate and be the arbiters of these things.

However, I have to say that the Motion as framed does focus on the Order in Council made by the UK. I feel compelled to address that aspect of the background to the Motion because it does say, “WHEREAS Her Majesty, by Order in Council made on 13th December 2000, ordered, inter alia, that:

‘Notwithstanding any statutory or common law provision in the Territory to the contrary, a homosexual act in private shall not be an offence provided that the parties consent thereto and have attained the age of eighteen years.’”

The Motion is obviously concerned that while the legal effect of that is only as it emphasises to decriminalise consensual homosexual acts carried on in private, it articulates what is said to be a general concern, that that Order may have an adverse effect on public behaviour and public decency. So I will confine my remarks to public behaviour and public decency.

In order to give you some coherent (hopefully) description of where we are, it may be necessary to look at this Order in Council in a little more detail. On a previous occasion I have done that. This Order in Council was made by the Privy Council and extends to Anguilla, Cayman Islands, Montserrat, Turks and Caicos Islands, British Virgin Islands. Apart from the provision I read out it also says (and I am going to give the detail of this) that “an act which would otherwise be treated for the purposes of this Order as being done in private shall not be so treated if done when more than two persons take part or are present; or in a lavatory to which the public have or are permitted to have access whether on payment or otherwise.”

Thirdly, “A man who is suffering from severe mental handicap cannot in law give any consent which by virtue of paragraph 1 of this article would prevent a homosexual act from being an offence; but a person shall not be convicted on account of the incapacity of such a man of an offence consisting of such an act if he proves that he did not know and had no reason to suspect that man to be suffering from severe mental handicap.”

Severe mental handicap means a state of arrested or incomplete development of mind which includes severe impairment of intelligence and social functioning. Then there is a paragraph that deals with homosexual acts by a man on the staff of a hospital or otherwise having responsibility for mental patients of a homosexual act with a male patient for the time being receiving treatment for mental disorder in that hospital. I do not need to dwell on that.

It also provides that “where in any proceedings it is charged that a homosexual act is an offence, the prosecutor shall have the burden of proving that the act was done otherwise than in private or otherwise than with the consent of the parties; or that any of the parties had not attained the age of eighteen years; and for the purposes of this article a man shall be treated as doing a homosexual act if, and only if, he commits buggery with another man or commits an act of gross indecency with another man or is a party to the commission by a man of such an act.” That is the detail of the Order.

The effect of the Order as it states, is to neutralise any Law on the books of the Cayman Islands to contrary effect and by virtue of that to decriminalise homosexual acts, as defined between consenting adults in private.

That Order in Council was made, as I understand it—and this has been confirmed by a Foreign Office legal advisor—by virtue of the prerogative powers of Her Majesty in Council. There are two ways of making an Order in Council: One is to make it under the West Indies Act, and the Constitution of the Cayman Islands as such an Order in Council.

My purpose in orating this is to illustrate a point which is that an Order in Council made under the West Indies Act has the same force as the Constitution. The Constitution has no superior force provision in it, not at the moment anyway. So, an Order in Council that is not made under the West Indies Act, (which is made as a prerogative order) does not have the same force as an Order in Council made under the West Indies Act, 1962.

The reason for that stems from the provisions of the Colonial Laws Validity Act. The Colonial Laws Validity Act of 1865 still regulates the legislative framework of most overseas territories. What it says is, among other things, that “any Colonial law [that is a law made here] which is or shall be in any respect repugnant to the provisions of an Act of Parliament extending to the Colony which such law may regulate, or repugnant to any Order or Regulation made under authority of such Act of Parliament, or having in the Colony the force and effect of such Act shall be read subject to such Act, Order, or Regulation, and shall to the extent of such repugnancy, but not otherwise, be and remain absolutely void and inoperative.”

In non-legal language what that means is that if a Law made here is repugnant to a UK Law or an Order made under a UK Law, then the Law made here is inoperative to that extent, to the extent of any repugnancy. However, and I come to the point, a Law made by an Order in Council by virtue of the Royal Prerogative has exactly the same force as a Law made here. A Law made here could therefore negative a Law made under the Royal Prerogative.

You may think we are just going to get into an endless round of lawmaking here with Laws possibly being made here and then being remade by the UK and then unmade here and so it goes on. However, the learned author, Roberts-Wray, who is very informative on all of this and has a reasonable sense of humour as well, said that “the practical objection to that is that a determined legislature and an insistent Privy Council might become involved in an endless process [as he put it] of destroying each other’s work has no validity as long as the power of disallowance or control of discretion to withhold the Royal assent remains.” So that has to be borne in mind.

It is my view that the effect of this Order in Council is to neutralise the Cayman Islands Law to the extent that existing Cayman Islands Law criminalised homosexual behaviour between consenting adults in private. That is the only or the main effect of the Order in Council. The way this has occurred may give rise to a perception that homosexual behaviour is being condoned because it is effectively balancing one UK Law against a CI Law and neutralising it in a way which positively states that homosexual behaviour between consenting adults in private is not criminal.

This matter has been discussed both in private and public I imagine and between lawyers as well. It was the subject of some discussion at the AG’s conference held here earlier in the year. At least one of my colleagues considered that it would be preferable for the Overseas Territories to legislate on this issue rather than the UK and perhaps in the following way: It was the fact that no territory had thought fit to do so, that the UK apparently decided it was necessary to legislate by Order in Council. All that the Order in Council sought to do in my opinion was to remove as a criminal offence such conduct between adult consenting males in private. However, as the Motion indicates, the spin is perhaps slightly more than that by way of perception.

Another way of dealing with this, and I do not pretend to have any magic answer to the question, but another way to deal with this would be to set out in Criminal Law what remains criminal behaviour, namely, indecent behaviour, or homosexual behaviour, or any other kind of socially unacceptable behaviour in public or between males, one of whom does not consent; or involving a person of less than adult age, or less than adult capacity. In other words, this can be looked at and legislated another way.

If such amendments were made to the Penal Code, for example, that code could also be modernised to reflect other aspects of public decency and standards relating to that. That could also broaden the exercise. It is difficult for me on this occasion, given where I come from and the fact that I have not been here for that long, but if the Movers of the Motion and other Members of the House are willing to participate in a small working group, it would expedite this process.

I would also add that the process, (although I have no prescriptive mechanism in mind and the Government has an open mind about this), in my opinion should also seek to invite submission from the public. This would not be by way of a slight committee because that tends to take too long, with all due respect to the slight committee process; although those submissions would be important. We could agree on setting out a timetable over the six month period. There is logic to the six months which I will come back to in a moment.

The effect of amendments of the kind I have mentioned would be to make criminal, for example, homosexual behaviour other than between consenting adults in private. What needs to be of concern to us is that we do not wish to get into this endless round of lawmaking and un-making, or indeed invite the UK to exercise the power of disallowance. However, if the object is to guarantee respect for the private life of adult consenting homosexual males then there is no reason why the Law should do any more than remain silent on that issue, while criminalising the kinds of behaviour that are not acceptable and do not involve any intrusion on that right.

The other effect would be to regain control of the lawmaking in this area, since enacting local legislation along those lines would effectively appear to render the Order in Council redundant. It would be spent. Its purpose would have been served because by absence from the Law here, the provisions it was designed to neutralise would no longer be there.

I say that I have no magic answer for this, but it is one thing to expressly state that certain matters are not criminal. It is another matter to state which matters are criminal and leaving other matters silent. I do not know if that is too subtle a distinction or whether I am deluding myself in saying it. However I think there is a difference in expressing the Law in that way. However, this is something for you to judge, not me. I am only offering a view.

I do not think doing this would be objectionable, either as a matter of Law or as a matter of policy since the UK says it would have preferred the Overseas Territories to legislate for themselves. It is also notable that the Order in Council was made in a way that does not give it superior force to a locally made Law. So, a locally made Law can in fact deal with the same subject matter in a different way.

In short, this legislature has the legal capacity to enact a Law which would render nugatory the Order in Council, provided it did not seek to criminalise homosexual behaviour between consenting adults in private. That, of course, is the proviso.

The outcome would be that rather than stating expressly what was not criminal, the criminal law would be silent on that issue with no inference that it was condoned. It is not necessary to appear to not condone something to make it criminal. Not every social attitude here is expressed by way of a criminal penalty, nor would it be appropriate for that to happen. That is merely an observation on my part. I hope it will be taken in the spirit in which it has been tendered.

As I said, most of the offences of physical indecency are in the Penal Code. I have mentioned the other Laws that are liable to have to be taken into account. I would now like to make some reference to the time period, as I said earlier.

The problem the UK had with all of this, as far as I can tell, was that if it did not do something, it was liable to be held in breach of its international obligations, because its overseas territories had legislation on the books. It did not matter that it was not enforced. The mere fact that it was on the books was sufficient because it failed to guarantee respect for the private life of certain individuals. The problem arises because the UK is responsible for the international relations of overseas territories and therefore appears to have had an obligation to do something or be held in breach of its obligations.

The right to petition the European Court of Human Rights was suspended here some time ago. Possibly not unrelated to this issue, I do not know. However as I understand it, the European Convention has applied to overseas territories since about 1976. That is something that is not all that well known, but I believe that is the case. The difference is that it has not been given effect locally. It has not been enacted into the laws of the Cayman Islands.

I do not wish to be controversial in saying this, however I feel I have an obligation to point it out that with a Bill of Rights it will receive local effect.

I am not advocating that we do not have a Bill of Rights in Cayman, but careful consideration needs to be given to those rights. The reason for the coincidence in timing suggested in considering the public decency and public behaviour issues, is that it roughly coincides with some of the other issues we are going to be examining in terms of Constitutional change. You may think that a balance needs to be struck between public standards and the rights of private individuals, which a Bill of Rights would seek to guarantee. I will offer just a few more remarks on the subject of a Bill of Rights.

The issue of human rights has been the subject of substantial review by the UK. A report was issued towards the end of last year to which I have made reference on previous occasions without particularly identifying it. There are some general obligations and I do not want to detain the House in this regard, but I think these are quite important to ventilate for you information.

This report was undertaken by a senior and expert Foreign Office lawyer who reviewed the Constitutions of the overseas territories, those that had a Bill of Rights and those that did not. He thought it might be helpful to offer a few general observations on certain assumptions that are sometimes made in connection with this topic but which seemed to him to be mistaken and capable of distorting the argument about the proper scope and content of the fundamental rights provisions to be included in an overseas territory's constitution.

He said that "these assumptions are to some extent linked, but can be identified as follows:" I hope this will be of interest and relevant to the debate.

The assumptions are that "the Fundamental Rights Chapter in the Constitution is defective if it does not reflect all the applicable treaty provisions." He goes on to say "that's never been the UK's provision. We are under no requirement to provide a constitutional guarantee of all or indeed or any of our treaty obligations and except where a particular treaty specifically so provides, no re- quirement even to have legislative provision for them at all.”

His conclusion on that matter is that, “what rights are to be entrenched in the constitution of any particular overseas territory is therefore entirely a matter of policy.” Not a matter of Law, a matter of policy.

He questioned the second assumption and he was not failing to advocate that there should be a Bill of Rights, I should add. He has since published a model chapter. The second assumption is that there is a single uniform, generally recognised list of the rights that would qualify for protection, and that this list is a reflection of the whole corpus of the applicable human rights treaties. This too, he says, is a misconception. In practise the standard overseas territories fundamental rights chapter largely and deliberately reflects the European Convention on Human Rights, but not all of the European Convention itself and not all of its protocols. However, the European Convention together with its protocols (let alone the European Convention together, only with the two protocols the UK has ratified, which are protocols 1 and 6, not 4 and 7 for example) does not cover the whole human rights field.

Most overseas territories chapters range more widely than the European Convention and protocols 1 and 6, though they do so in different ways and to different extents. “And none of them,” he says, “seeks to reflect the whole range of the applicable treaty obligations many of which are left to be covered either by ordinary legislation or simply by administrative policy and practice.”

The third assumption he challenged, was that the UK has identical Human Rights Treaty obligations in respect of all of its overseas territories. He says that the position is as follows: “that the European Convention including protocols 1 and 6, but not 4 or 7, applies to all overseas territories; both the covenants [that is the civil and political covenant and the economic and social covenant, the UN covenants] apply to all overseas territories with one exception [which was an accident apparently], and a third convention applies to all overseas territories [that is racial discrimination], convention against torture applies to all overseas territories, convention on the rights of the child applies to all overseas territories except Gibraltar, and the convention on the elimination of discrimination against women at present applies only to the BVI, the Falklands and the TCI.”

I mention this not to side-track the debate, but to indicate the correlation between the Bill of Rights issue and some of the issues that have been canvassed in this debate. It will be important to try to see this in its totality and to understand what the effect will be (is all I am saying) of enacting rights provisions which may import certain consequences which may or may not be in accordance with cultural traditions of the Cayman Islands.

I do not say that a Bill of Rights should not be enacted in fundamental rights. I believe that they should be protected. However, I believe that when they are incorporated into the Constitution they will have stronger force than any other Law. So, to the extent that any other Law makes different provision, the Constitution will prevail and the individuals' rights will be capable of being vindicated as against any other Laws. This goes a bit wider than the immediate subject debate; however it is an opportunity to give this indication.

Coming back to the topic of the debate, I think it can be said that the Government is willing to take this issue up and to work with it and try to identify a satisfactory way forward that does not infringe the human rights of individuals. A way that evidences respect for the rights of the public to appropriate standards of behaviour in public whether of a physical kind or being exposed to unacceptable material by way of broadcasting, by way of public exhibition or otherwise.

It is difficult and impossible to turn the clock back or to look to the Law to do that. I do not think the Motion seeks to do that. I think the Motion seeks to find expression in the Law for certain standards that are considered to be under attack within the Cayman Islands. The Law should be modern and reflect modern standards. I have listened carefully and I wish to avoid associating myself with any political position on the matter. That is a matter for others. I am here primarily as a facilitator and government's principal legal advisor. However, I also have a responsibility in terms of prosecution of crime and the need to advise on the definition of what is and should be criminal behaviour.

I would only conclude on this note: In my view, young people in particular need the protection of the Law. They need to grow up in an environment where they understand that the Law will seek to look after their interests and protect them from behaviour which is not just unacceptable to adults, but is unacceptable and not justifiable in a democratic society. Therefore, I believe we could find ways of expressing some of these safeguards in the Law by criminalising what should be criminalised and leaving silent what can be left silent.

I have taken a rather long time to say a few things. I hope it is of assistance. The Government is willing and hopefully able to accept the Motion and looks forward to working with those interested and who wish to make contributions over a timely period.

The Speaker: If no other Member wishes to speak, would the Mover like to exercise his right of reply?

The Second Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. Alden M. McLaughlin, Jr.: This Motion has been the subject of very wide-ranging debate. Indeed, debate, some of which, I certainly anticipate. I know this is an emotive issue. The whole issue of homosexuality always evokes much discussion, debate, and often expressions of disapproval by many in this community, Members of this House not excluded.

It certainly is not my intention, as Mover of this Motion, nor of the Seconder, to engage in any gay-bashing exercise. As I indicated when I moved the Motion yesterday, as far as I am concerned, what two individuals wish to do to each other or with each other in the privacy of their bedrooms is a matter entirely between them and whichever god they serve.

This Motion is aimed at ensuring the preservation of public decency and conduct within the public precinct. The objective of the legislation that acceptance of this Motion will hopefully cause to be brought to this House is to target all open lewdness, grossly scandalous behaviour and things that outrage decency or are offensive and disgusting, injurious to public morals because they tend to corrupt the mind and destroy the love of decency, morality and good order.

One of the larger concerns resulting from the imposition of this particular Order in Council, and to which the Honourable Second Official Member referred in extensor, is the impact on this community of what many of us view as Eurocentric views on mores which to many in this community threaten the moral fabric of what this society has traditionally held sacred.

The objective of this Motion is to mitigate both the perception that has resulted from the imposition of this Order and the reality that we face of this society and our views, our mores being affected. They will continue to be affected by the Eurocentric view imposed by a mother country 10,000 miles away. In my estimation the Mother Country has little idea about what is held sacred, what is valued, what is accepted and acceptable in our West Indian society.

The objective of this Motion is certainly not to seek to reverse the Order in Council, or to seek to criminalise conduct which was previously criminal in nature, that is homosexual acts conducted by males in private. The objective was what I previously described.

The Second Official Member referred to two pieces of legislation which do deal with the question of public decency in the broad sense. He referred to the Cinematographic Law and the Broadcasting Law. Absent these two pieces of legislation, I have not been able to find any provision in the Penal Code or any other statute which deals with the issue of public decency.

The common law offence that has been around for a long time of outraging public decency is available. However as I understand it, this is very imprecisely defined, if defined at all, prosecutions in relation to it have generally been confined to circumstances involving the keeping of a disorderly house, and mounting of indecent exhibitions or indecent exposure. As I understand, it has not been given a broader and more general application.

The Honourable Second Official Member made considerable reference to the European Convention on Human Rights. I do not believe he went quite so far, but the reality is that in the very near future we will have as part of the Constitution of this country a Bill of Rights even if we have no further changes I believe it has been made plain to us by His Excellency the Governor, who speaks on behalf of the UK Government that in that respect our Constitution will be modernised.

As modern and progressive and as Human Rights partisan as the UK seems to be, it is perhaps somehow remarkable that the European Convention on Human Rights was only adopted by the UK as part of its domestic legislation in December last year. It only took them half a century after the European Convention on Human Rights came into existence to adopt it as part of their legislation. So, though we lag behind, we are not that far behind our dear Mother!

I am fully cognisant that the adoption of a Bill of Rights which will necessarily include a freedom of expression provision is bound to impact legislation such as I propose. There will be the inevitable clash between the rights of the individual to freedom of expression and the rights of society as a whole to expect that such expression does not offend the sensibilities of right thinking members of this community.

I am quite cognisant that for some time to come there will be the inevitable battle in the public forum and in the courts while we struggle to reconcile these two competing interests. While there will be some discontent and discord in relation to this, it is not a sufficient basis for saying that we should not attempt to draft the kind of legislation that the Motion invites Government to do. I do not believe that we should shrink from the task simply because it is difficult, once we are convinced that it is necessary and in the public interest, as I believe it is.

On that note, I must say that I was surprised and indeed disappointed that the Third Elected Member for George Town felt that he could not support this Motion. As I understood the thrust of his debate, that was because of two things: one, because of the difficulty as he saw it in determining what public decency should include and what outraging public decency would actually mean; as well as his concern about impinging on the rights and freedoms of the individual. Nevertheless, while I did not find his logic compelling, it did provide the other perspective. To that extent, it added some value to this debate.

Finally, the Honourable Second Official Member referred us to a very interesting excerpt from a learned author, whose name I now forget. He dealt with the question of what matters we would be compelled to have entrenched in the Constitution of an overseas territory. He indicated that by and large, these decisions are not matters of Law, but matters of policy.

Well, I heard what he said, and heard what he read from the pages of the work of that learned author, however I did not derive much comfort from the assurance that what goes into the Constitution is not a matter of Law but a matter of policy in relation to a Bill of Rights. That policy, Mr. Speaker, is the policy of the UK and it seems plain that the policy of the UK must accord with what the European Union has determined should be the case in relation to human rights.

I suspect that as the UK gets sucked further and further into the vortex of Europe that more and more we are going to see that UK policy, UK Law, and UK principles mirror those of continental Europe. I believe that we would perhaps delude ourselves if we believed that there would be a great deal of room for manoeuvre in relation to some of the more fundamental and commonly expressed provisions in a Bill of Rights for overseas territories and that freedom of expression is bound to be one of those provisions that will have to be expressed and contained in any Bill of Rights that forms part of our modernised constitution to come.

I do not argue or quarrel with the provision of a freedom of expression provision in a Bill of Rights for this country. Where I will have some room to quarrel is if we wind up, as a result of either an edict of the UK or a decision of our local courts which elevates the rights of the individual to freedom of expression, and places them above the collective rights of the society in which that individual lives and operates.

The right to expression in my view must be limited to rights which do not offend against the collective consciousness of the community and what it regards as acceptable standards of public behaviour and acceptable standards of public decency.

In his contribution, the Honourable Second Official Member extended the scope of the debate to include even more fundamental elements related to amending the Penal Code, to set out clearly what conduct in relation to homosexual acts amounts to criminal conduct and what conduct does not. He put that on the premise to do so and to legislate for ourselves might allay some of the concerns that have arisen as a result of the making of the Order in Council and indeed properly done that Order would in effect no longer have any practical purpose. I endorse that.

He also invited me and other Members of this House to participate in a working group to deal with both of these matters and to work towards creating a comprehensive set of provisions that addressed both concerns. That is, the issue of what homosexual conduct would continue to be criminal and the issue this Motion sought to address which is the question of public decency. I accept that invitation as well. It will no doubt be a difficult but interesting exercise, given the constitutional issues, the human rights issues that do need to be considered in drafting of any legislation. Again, I am grateful to him for extending that invitation.

I believe that this debate has served to inform all Members of this Honourable House and perhaps (I hope) the wider community about this issue and that I am hopeful that the Motion sees safe passage. Indications are that it will. I believe only the Third Elected Member for George Town indicated that he would not support the Motion.

I commend it to all Honourable Members and thank them for their interest, their careful research, and their well articulated concerns. Thank you.

The Speaker: I shall now put the question on Private Member's Motion No. 12/01, Public Decency Legislation Those in favour please say Aye. Those against, No.

AYES.

The Speaker: The Ayes have it.

AGREED: PRIVATE MEMBER'S MOTION NO. 12/01 PASSED.

The Speaker: Is it the wish of Members that we adjourn?

The Honourable Minister for Planning, Communications and Works.

ADJOURNMENT

Hon. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Yes, Mr. Speaker, unfortunately a couple of us have had to be in a little meeting and I think a few other Members have meetings that should have started a few minutes ago. So, I think by consensus everyone is in agreement that we adjourn. Therefore, I move the adjournment of this Honourable House until 10 am tomorrow.

The Speaker: The question is that this Honourable House do now adjourn until 10 am tomorrow. Those in favour, please say Aye. Those against, No.

AYES.

The Speaker: The Ayes have it.

AT 4.07 PM THE HOUSE STOOD ADJOURNED UNTIL 10 AM FRIDAY, 6 JULY 2001.

OFFICIAL HANSARD REPORT
FRIDAY
6 JULY 2001
10.26 AM
Tenth Sitting

[Prayers read by the Third Elected Member for Bodden Town.]

The Speaker: Please be seated. The Legislative Assembly is in session. Item number 2 on today's Order Paper, Administration of Oath, Oath of Allegiance to Mr. Samuel Bulgin, Solicitor General, to be the Acting Honourable Second Official Member.

Mr. Bulgin, would you come forward to the Clerk's table. Would all Honourable Members please stand.

ADMINISTRATION OF OATHS
OR AFFIRMATIONS

OATH OF ALLEGIANCE
(Mr. Samuel Bulgin)

Mr. Samuel Bulgin: I, Samuel Bulgin, do swear that I will be faithful and bear true allegiance to Her Majesty Queen Elizabeth II, her heirs and successors according to Law, so help me God.

The Speaker: Mr. Bulgin on behalf of all Honourable Members we welcome you to this House for the time of your service. Please take your seat as the Honourable Acting Second Official Member.

Please be seated.

Item number 3 on today's Order Paper, Reading by the Honourable Speaker of Messages and Announcements.

READING BY THE HONOURABLE
SPEAKER OF MESSAGES
AND ANNOUNCEMENTS

APOLOGIES

The Speaker: I have apologies from the Honourable Second Official Member, the Third Elected Member for West Bay and the First Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman.

The next item is the Presentation of Papers and Reports. Report of recommendations for upgrading Sunrise Training Centre and other matters relating to persons with disabilities, to be laid on the Table by the Honourable Minister responsible for the Ministry of Community Development, Women Affairs, Youth and Sports.

PRESENTATION OF
PAPERS AND REPORTS

REPORT AND RECOMMENDATIONS FOR UPGRADING SUNRISE TRAINING CENTRE AND OTHER MATTERS RELATING TO PERSONS WITH DISABILITIES

Hon. Edna M. Moyle: I beg to lay on the Table of this Honourable House the Beckles Report of recommendations for upgrading Sunrise Training Centre and other matters relating to persons with disabilities.

The Speaker: So ordered. Do you wish to speak to it?

Hon. Edna M. Moyle: Thank you.

It gives me great pleasure to lay on the Table of this Honourable House the Beckles Report of recommendations for upgrading Sunrise Training Centre and other matters relating to persons with disabilities.

Members are well aware that every country has a percentage of its population that has some form of disability. These individuals with the proper assistance and support of their communities can live very productive lives. Here in our Islands we have two institutions that provide educational and other services to persons with disabilities. These are: the Lighthouse School, which caters to children, and the Sunrise Training Centre, which caters to adults.

The Sunrise Training Centre has been in operation over the past 15 years. When they moved into the present building, I think it was expected they would remain there for two years. Fifteen years later, they are in the same building!

During this period consultants and working parties have reviewed the problems and limitations of the Sunrise Centre. Members of the House were made aware of these Reports in an answer I gave to a parliamentary question recently. The most recent of these Reports is the one being tabled today. This has been referred to as the Beckles Report, after the consultant Beverly Beckles, of Trinidad and Tobago. I would like to give the background of the Report.

In 1999, the Government of the Cayman Islands, through the Ministry of Education, which was at that time responsible for the Sunrise Centre, sought advice from the International Labour Organisation's (ILO) Caribbean Office on introducing changes in the area of vocational training for persons with disabilities.

The ILO recommended Mrs. Beverly Beckles, Chief Executive Officer of the National Centre for Persons with Disabilities (NCPD) of Trinidad and Tobago based upon its expertise in this area. Mrs. Beckles accepted the assignment and met with the officials from the Ministry of Education. Terms of reference were subsequently drawn up and these terms of reference are as follows:

1. Examination of the Montebello Report (1986), Marshall Report (1996) and the Sunrise Working Party Report (1998) and to advise on matters regarding:

- (a) Planning for a purpose-built facility to accommodate the training, social and educational needs of Developmentally and Physically Challenged (DPC) adults and to examine the feasibility of residential care.
- (b) Make recommendations on professional qualifications needed to work with Developmentally and Physically Challenged adults.
- (c) Make recommendations on data needed for a national register of DPC persons.
- (d) Provide copies of legislation in another territory on the following areas, DPC legislation, advocacy, placement services and employment as legislated rights provided specially for DPC persons.

2. Examination of the training programmes including social and life skills and to provide a copy of curricula for adults in DPC programmes in other territories.

3. Provide assistance in developing a public awareness programme to make the general public more sensitive to DPC persons as well as making employers and prospective employers aware of the capabilities of DPC persons recommended for employment by the Sunrise Adult Training Centre.

4. Provide assistance on developing an employment tracking programme in collaboration with appropriate departments and Ministries.

5. Examine the development of a board of governors or trustees for the Sunrise Adult Training Centre in a role of authority similar to the Community College under the umbrella of a Ministry.

6. Provide the Ministry with copies of policies or policy statements of Ministries in other territories toward developmentally and physically challenged adults.

Mrs. Beckles' recommendations can be found on pages 14–16 of her report. She also suggested on page 2 of her letter to the Permanent Secretary in the Ministry of Education, that the Cayman Islands Government approach this in two phases:

Phase 1: Immediate relocation of the Sunrise Centre into rental facilities that are adequate to accommodate the current population (trainees and staff) and in so doing, safeguard the health and safety of all. This phase is a short term/interim measure and is developed further under recommendations (pages 15 and 16).

Phase 2: This is comprised of a comprehensive review of existing policies and programmes for persons with disabilities. This exercise should be reviewed in the context of the National Strategic Plan, Vision 2008 and current practices for the improvement of persons with disabilities within the guidelines established by international conventions. Recommendations and associated references have been included in this report.

These two phases ought not to be construed as following one after the other, but should be looked at simultaneously.

The Ministry responsible for the Sunrise Training Centre recognizes the important role that it plays for adults with disabilities in the Cayman Islands. In 2001 and 2002, the Ministry will look into the immediate need of finding or providing a more appropriate facility for the Sunrise Centre. This, of course, is dependent on the availability of funds and Members of the Legislative Assembly voting for funds. The Ministry is also aware that there is a need to encourage more Caymanians to pursue higher education in this field. We will, in conjunction with the Ministry of Education, also formulate a plan to address this need.

As the Ministry responsible for Sunrise Training Centre, it gives me great pleasure to table this Report in this Honourable House. I would also like to publicly thank the Ministry of Education, the staff of my Ministry and the Sunrise Centre and any other individuals who have worked with the Sunrise Centre over the years. I would urge you to continue to support the Centre as we look at the problems of space, equipment, furniture and other areas that need to be addressed over the next few years.

I will be touring the facility soon and extend an invitation to all my colleagues of this Legislative Assembly, so that the issues outlined in this Report can be seen firsthand.

The Speaker: Moving on to Questions to Honourable Ministers and Members. Question 76 is standing in the name of the Third Elected Member for West Bay, who is not here.

The Fourth Elected Member for West Bay

QUESTIONS TO HONOURABLE MINISTERS AND MEMBERS

POSTPONEMENT OF QUESTION NO. 76

Standing Order 23(8)

Mr. Cline A. Glidden Jr.: Since the Member had to be away on government business, I wonder if I could move, under the relevant Standing Orders, that the question be deferred until sometime after Monday when he would have returned.

The Speaker: Certainly.

The Elected Member for East End.

Mr. V. Arden McLean: I beg to second that Motion.

QUESTION PUT: AGREED: QUESTION 76 POSTPONED TO A LATER SITTING.

The Speaker: Question 77 standing in the name of the Fourth Elected Member for West Bay.

QUESTION NO. 77

No. 77: Mr. Cline A. Glidden Jr. asked the Honourable First Official Member responsible for the Portfolio of Internal and External Affairs, what provisions exist for the control and regulation of private security companies.

The Speaker: The Honourable First Official Member responsible for Internal and External Affairs.

Hon. James M. Ryan: There are no provisions for the control and regulation of private security companies.

SUPPLEMENTARIES

The Speaker: The Fourth Elected Member for West Bay.

Mr. Cline A. Glidden Jr.: I wonder if the Government is in the process of legislating regulations, since there are none, or if they do not deem that as important.

The Speaker: The Honourable First Official Member responsible for Internal and External Affairs.

Hon. James M. Ryan: I will try to answer the question this way. A couple of years ago, this very same question was asked of me in this Legislative Assembly. I discussed the matter with the Commissioner of Police, who went away and drafted a sort of position paper in which he recommended to the private security companies that they form a security company organisation. In fact, he helped draft a constitution.

Despite his efforts however, the companies have not got their act together with that. Apart from the security companies that require police assistance, which the Commissioner has some control over and does a certain amount of regulation, there is no legislation or regulation in place for the companies.

I have more recently had discussions with the Commissioner of Police on it. If indeed the security companies cannot form an organisation or an association which would effectively regulate them, then we will have to look at introducing legislation for the control of these organisations.

The Speaker: The Second Elected Member for West Bay.

Mr. Rolston M. Anglin: I am glad to hear the Member's stance on this. However, I think that legislation is long overdue.

Would the Member state if he is aware of certain security companies in these Islands who purport to provide 24 hour support for their clients actually having that monitoring performed outside of the Cayman Islands?

The Speaker: The Honourable First Official Member responsible for Internal and External Affairs.

Hon. James M. Ryan: I am not aware of that. Perhaps the Commissioner of Police may be, but I am not aware of that.

I have just confirmed this with the Commissioner of Police and he is also not aware of that.

The Speaker: The Second Elected Member for West Bay.

Mr. Rolston M. Anglin: This is obviously the reason for the great need for such legislation, because I am aware of that situation. In fact, the territory in which this service is provided could very well have industrial action which would compromise a person's security. Also, there could be telephone lines down between Cayman and that territory. This is an area in great need of urgent attention. We have persons in this Island feeling secure, whereas in fact they are not.

Could the First Official Member state whether or not he has had any complaints about the aggressive nature of certain security guards in the Cayman Islands?

The Speaker: The Honourable First Official Member responsible for Internal and External Affairs.

Hon. James M. Ryan: I have not had any complaints, and I have just confirmed with the Commissioner that he has not had any complaints about the aggressive nature of certain security guards.

The Speaker: The Elected Member for East End.

Mr. V. Arden McLean: Can the Honourable First Official Member say, in the absence of the security companies coming together and following the guidelines and recommendations of the Commissioner of Police, if it is within the responsibility or authority of the Commissioner to issue guidelines as to how they must operate?

The Speaker: The Honourable First Official Member responsible for Internal and External Affairs.

Hon. James M. Ryan: The Commissioner does have the authority and indeed does issue instructions in respect of security companies offering 24-hour monitoring. Of course, there is also the matter of the licensing of mobile radios. In respect of companies simply offering security guards, the Commissioner does not have any specific control over those.

The Speaker: The Second Elected Member for Bodden Town.

Mr. Gilbert A. McLean: It seems clear that the proper legislation or regulation is not in place. It seems that the Honourable First Official Member has some concern at least about the situation. Would he give an undertaking to look at the possibility of actually bringing a law to cover this operation which is ongoing in the Cayman Islands and seems to be ever-increasing in keeping with the demand for protection from crime?

The Speaker: The Honourable First Official Member responsible for Internal and External Affairs.

Hon. James M. Ryan: I have ongoing discussions with the Commissioner of Police on this and looking at the ramifications, while I do not want to over-regulate, I think the Member is correct. I do have concerns about the staff in some of the security companies. As soon as we have the facts together, a decision will be made on whether to move forward with the necessary legislation.

The Speaker: The Second Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. Alden M. McLaughlin, Jr.: Earlier, the First Official Member said that the Commissioner of Police has the authority to issue guidelines and directives to these security companies. Would he kindly direct us to the legislation which gives the Commissioner of Police the authority to administer, in the broad sense, security companies?

The Speaker: The Honourable First Official Member responsible for Internal and External Affairs.

Hon. James M. Ryan: Maybe I did not make myself completely clear. I said that the Commissioner does have the authority to regulate the companies which offer 24-hour monitoring because this is the police component; the requirement for police officers to answer the calls.

What I do not have at hand (and neither does the Commissioner) is the relevant section. I have asked him to make that available to the Member.

The Speaker: The Fourth Elected Member for West Bay.

Mr. Cline A. Glidden Jr.: I would just like to suggest that maybe the breakdown with not knowing could be because the reports from the security companies go through 911. I assume 911 is a separate section, but they do the dispatching. It could be a grey area and the reason why the Commissioner does not know exactly where these companies are reporting to.

My question was more on the line of security guards. Whose authority are security guards operating under? We know they are put there to do a very similar job to the police in some cases, to provide law and order at functions with masses of people. Are they licensed to protect themselves, or to do crowd control? Who licences them? Who regulates them? We even have security guards by our front door. What are they allowed to do? What are they not allowed to do?

The Speaker: The Honourable First Official Member responsible for Internal and External Affairs.

Hon. James M. Ryan: In the case of non-Caymanian security guards, there is the requirement for a work permit. Apart from that, those guards or any other civilian would only have civilian rights to defend themselves. They would not be allowed to carry truncheons or any weapon of any sort.

The Speaker: The Fourth Elected Member for West Bay.

Mr. Cline A. Glidden Jr.: I guess that does answer the question. However, I just want to make it clear. You are saying that we are paying security guards for security here. The reality is that it is no different, except for the price we are paying them, than having a regular civilian standing by the door? Is that what we are saying?

The Speaker: The Honourable First Official Member responsible for Internal and External Affairs.

Hon. James M. Ryan: As the situation pertains today, I think the answer is yes, the security guard is not by law allowed to exert any more force than any Member sitting inside this Chamber.

The Speaker: The Third Elected Member for George Town.

Dr. Frank S. McField: Would the Honourable First Official Member be able to give an undertaking to see if it is possible to develop legislation that would enable security guards to exert reasonable force in situations since we are using them in situations now where alcohol is being distributed? By the time the police attend to the matter the situation might be definitely out of control.

The Speaker: The Honourable First Official Member responsible for Internal and External Affairs.

Hon. James M. Ryan: I believe I gave a provisional undertaking to the Second Elected Member for Bodden Town. I am in discussions with the Commissioner on this matter and pending the outcome of those discussions we will look at the matter of legislation.

The Speaker: Two additional supplementaries after your question.

The Elected Member for East End.

Mr. V. Arden McLean: For many years I have wondered why we cannot extend to off-duty policemen the opportunity to go out and earn extra money by being security officers in their uniforms. I understand that in other countries that is possible. Would the First Official Member comment on whether or not that is a possibility?

The Speaker: The Honourable First Official Member responsible for Internal and External Affairs.

Hon. James M. Ryan: The Police Law does empower the Commissioner to do just that. It is called "special duty." He can give special permission to off-duty police officers to carry out this function.

The Speaker: The Second Elected Member for West Bay.

Mr. Rolston M. Anglin: Now that certain undertakings have been made, could the Honourable First Official Member also undertake to ensure that adequate training is provided in any form of legislation for these officers? After all, police officers are, in my view, well trained to handle these situations. From the complaints I have received, these security officers are not. A lot of them are ex-army officers from other cultures. They are extremely aggressive, they do not know how to culturally handle themselves in Cayman, and it is presenting a real problem. I think this is a serious situation that needs urgent attention.

Also, since the Commissioner does have special powers, it would be interesting to note if any budget could be put together to see if we could have additional police officers provided to the Government with the view that we could secure certain contracts for security.

The Speaker: The Honourable First Official Member responsible for Internal and External Affairs.

Hon. James M. Ryan: The point the Member raises about training was one of the aspects I was referring to when I said discussions were taking place to look at these ramifications. Naturally, any legislation would have to ensure the training component. We have to look at whether training would be carried out by The Royal Cayman Islands Police (RCIP), and the funding for that, or how it will be done. Yes, I can assure the Member that this is one of the aspects that is under consideration in determining just what is done about the legislation if we move down that route.

The Speaker: Final supplementary.

The Second Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman.

Mr. Lyndon L. Martin: The First Official Member was correct in stating that his undertaking was a provisional one based on the failure of the security companies forming their association as suggested by the position paper prepared by the Commissioner of Police. Can the First Official Member indicate why it would be desirable to have an association rather than legislation to govern the security companies? Would the association effectively meet the concerns expressed by the Parliament here today?

The Speaker: The Honourable First Official Member responsible for Internal and External Affairs.

Hon. James M. Ryan: I am informed that actually the association has been formed. It is just that it has not moved ahead as it should. Perhaps it is a little slow. I do not want to use the word "dormant" but it is somewhat slow.

On the question of the desirability of a self-governing body as opposed to legislation, if the association can govern itself and meet the concerns of Parliamentarians, then I think that would take care of the problem. Most, if not all, of the concerns raised today have been put forward by the Commissioner of Police. I suppose the good thing about having an association is that basically there is one body negotiating with government as opposed to having several companies; however, we are looking at the matter. It is very probable that the outcome will be legislation, although I think, that if the organisation as a whole could govern itself by means of training and all the other concerns here, then the same aims could be accomplished.

The outcome of the discussions will determine this, but it is very likely if the organisation is not able to meet all those concerns that we will have to go the route of legislation.

SUSPENSION OF STANDING ORDER 23(7) AND (8)

[Moved by the Honourable Minister for Health and Information Technology]

QUESTION PUT: AGREED: STANDING ORDER 23(7) AND (8) SUSPENDED TO ALLOW QUESTION TIME TO CONTINUE BEYOND 11.00 AM.

The Speaker: The Second Elected Member for West Bay.

Mr. Rolston M. Anglin: Can the First Official Member say if charges have been brought against any security officer?

The Speaker: The Honourable First Official Member responsible for Internal and External Affairs.

Hon. James M. Ryan: My understanding is that cautions have been issued to some security companies, but we are not aware that any prosecutions have been made against any company.

The Speaker: Moving on to question 78, standing in the name of the Third Elected Member for George Town.

QUESTION NO. 78

No. 78: Dr. Frank S. McField asked the Honourable First Official Member responsible for the Portfolio of Internal and External Affairs what has been done, since the death penalty was replaced with life imprisonment in May 1991, to define the wording of life imprisonment.

The Speaker: The Honourable First Official Member responsible for Internal and External Affairs.

Hon. James M. Ryan: No action has been taken to define the wording of life imprisonment. Life means imprisonment for life.

SUPPLEMENTARIES

The Speaker: The Third Elected Member for George Town.

Dr. Frank S. McField: I was inclined to let it go, you know.

The Speaker: Well, thank you!

[Laughter and interjections]

Dr. Frank S. McField: When we use the word "life" we could be referring to the natural life of a person, or we could be referring to a specific chronological time. In considering a sentence such as life, is it the position of the First Official Member that life is defined as the natural life of the person rather than any chronological time?

The Speaker: The Honourable First Official Member responsible for Internal and External Affairs.

Hon. James M. Ryan: It is given in its literal meaning, the natural life of a person. However, let me add that it is within the Governor's sole discretion to set conditions for parole. While life means the natural life of a person, there is the opportunity or the avenue for setting down guidelines for parole for persons serving life imprisonment.

The Speaker: The Third Elected Member for George Town.

Dr. Frank S. McField: Can the Member say if he or the Governor has taken any action so far to make sure that the definition being used for life imprisonment is consistent with the human rights obligations the UK has at the moment?

The Speaker: The Honourable First Official Member responsible for Internal and External Affairs.

Hon. James M. Ryan: I am unable to say if the Governor has considered the matter in relation to the International Human Rights Commission.

The Speaker: The Third Elected Member for George Town.

Dr. Frank S. McField: If the Governor has sole responsibility for this particular area, can the First Official Member say why Parliament is being given an answer to this question without consultation with the Governor.

The Speaker: The Honourable First Official Member responsible for Internal and External Affairs.

Hon. James M. Ryan: The question the Member asked was not a substantive question, but a supplementary question. Naturally, I do not have the Governor present to consult with him. I gave an answer on the substantive question that was discussed with His Excellency before.

The Speaker: The Second Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. Alden M. McLaughlin, Jr.: As the First Official Member and all Members of this House, will know, the United Kingdom has made it plain that it expects the Cayman Islands to comply with its (the UK's) responsibilities and obligations in relation to human rights as defined in the European Convention on Human Rights. The obvious example is the decriminalisation of homosexual acts by consenting adults in private.

In light of that clear indication, would the First Official Member say what view the UK Government has taken in relation to the question of life imprisonment, or the imprisonment of individuals for periods that mean the balance of their natural lives?

The Speaker: The Honourable First Official Member responsible for Internal and External Affairs.

Hon. James M. Ryan: It is my understanding that the only concern expressed and eventually brought into effect was that of capital punishment and its abolition. At that time there was no concern expressed in regard to the matter of life imprisonment. I am not aware of any concern being expressed since that time.

The Speaker: Two additional supplementaries.
The Elected Member for East End.

Mr. V. Arden McLean: Can the Member say what the practice is in releasing lifers in the UK? Seeing that the Cayman Islands follow most of the UK practices, is that a consideration within this jurisdiction? There has to be some degree of hope. We cannot let these people out when they are 70 years old and then let them become a burden on society.

The Speaker: The Honourable First Official Member responsible for Internal and External Affairs.

Hon. James M. Ryan: Some research is currently being done looking at the UK procedure as well as the procedure followed by some other jurisdictions. All of this will help form part of the decision-making on it. I do take the Member's point about keeping a person locked up until he is no good to himself or society.

The Speaker: The Third Elected Member for George Town.

Dr. Frank S. McField: I think the First Official Member now realises that there are ongoing situations in the UK, not only regarding human rights issues but also regarding practices they have been following in dealing with the whole concept of life imprisonment.

Does the First Official Member recall, in terms of chronological time, the term used in the UK for life imprisonment? Have there been any reports on the prison system here that would be referring to that particular time suggesting that we take that into account?

The Speaker: The Honourable First Official Member responsible for Internal and External Affairs.

Hon. James M. Ryan: It is my understanding that a sentencing judge in the UK when sentencing a person to life imprisonment will either make a recommendation for a minimum period of time, or else simply leave it open as life imprisonment. In those cases, parole may be considered. Let me put it another way; after 14 years, the person will be considered for release.

I want to say one other thing. I noticed the Third Elected Member for George Town is a little frustrated by the fact that you have limited Members in regard to questions. However, I would encourage him by the fact that there is still another parliamentary question coming up on this matter. He will have yet another opportunity to ask some questions, even if you are not allowing too many supplementaries today.

The Speaker: The next question is 79, standing in the name of the Second Elected Member for George Town.

QUESTION NO. 79

No. 79: Mr. Alden M. McLaughlin, Jr. asked the Honourable Minister responsible for the Ministry of Health and Information Technology what is the current amount owing to the Cayman Islands Government in respect of overseas medical loans, overseas medical advances and local receivable balances; and a) what steps have been taken to determine what portion of that sum is collectible; b) what steps have been taken to collect the outstanding sum; c) what steps have been taken to improve Government's ability to collect accounts as they fall due.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Health and Information Technology.

Hon. Linford A. Pierson: The total amount owing to the Cayman Islands Government in respect of overseas medical loans, overseas medical advances and local receivables is $46,828,520.14. This is broken down as follows:

|                            |                  |
|----------------------------|------------------|
| Overseas Medical Loans:    | $ 9,689,308.53  |
| Overseas Medical Advances: | 16,329,677.39    |
| Local Receivables:         | 20,809,534.22    |
| Total:                     | $ 46,828,520.14 |

In regard to the steps being taken to determine what portion of the sum is collectable, Health Services Department (HSD) presently has nine finance officers reviewing outstanding accounts and establishing those accounts which can be pursued.

The Health Service Collection Officers then make every effort to make contact with the patient and/or relative, to ensure that regular payments are being made on the account. If they are unable to establish contact with either the patient or the relative, the accounts are referred to the Treasury Debt Collection Unit for further action.

It is to be noted that this process will take a considerable amount of time due to the sheer volume of accounts that have to be reviewed and the limited number of staff available for the project. This exercise will eventually ensure that only collectable accounts are pursued in the future.

Health Services Department has submitted a list of overseas accounts for write-off. This list totals $4,103,040.04 and consists of accounts which meet some or all of the following criteria:

- > 1. Collateral was not secured and registered with the Lands and Survey Department.
- > 2. Debts were referred to the Debt Collection Unit and efforts to collect from patients and signatories, deceased patients' estates, and life insurance policies were unsuccessful.
- > 3. Patients are not civil servants, dependants of civil servants, Members of the Legislative Assembly or Executive Council.

- 4. Payments have not been made on the accounts within the last year.
- 5. Based on age, assessed monthly repayment amounts and the value of the debts, patients and signatories could never repay within their lifetimes.

Using the same criteria, a list of local receivable accounts totalling $1,148,482.19 is also being prepared for write-off. I intend to take a much closer look at these amounts with a view to recovering them through the courts before taking them to Executive Council and then Finance Committee. I know that a lot of attention has been given to this in trying to recover some of these through the courts without a considerable amount of success. Some success has been obtained.

To date approximately 25 per cent of overseas accounts and 5 per cent of local accounts have been reviewed.

Part (b) of the question asks, "What steps have been taken to collect the outstanding sum?" Health Services has employed nine debt collection officers who have been pursuing persons with outstanding debt by telephone, letters and personal visits. In addition, a collections module is being added to the Department's information system which will better record all payment activities and also alert the Chief Financial Officer to non-payments on agreed payment plans and missed deadlines for payment.

The Health Services Department is presently negotiating with a company which provides debt collection and customer service training to provide in house training for the accounts receivable staff. This training will enhance the capability of staff in the area of revenue collection. The Department is also in the process of acquiring the services of an accounts receivable consultant to review the Health Services Department receivables system and to design and implement changes that will increase revenue collections.

Part (c) of the question asks, "What steps have been taken to improve Government's ability to collect accounts as they fall due?" The Department has taken the following steps to improve its ability to collect accounts as they fall due:

- Two officers have been assigned to review all outgoing invoices to insurance companies to ensure that claims are accurately processed and sent to companies within seven working days of the date of service.
- Invoices for self-paying and agency accounts are printed and mailed within ten working days of the date of services. It is anticipated that by mid-August of this year an officer will be assigned to review these invoices for errors prior to mailing, thus removing a possible reason for delay in payment.
- Monthly statements are printed and sent to all patients within ten working days of each month's end.

The Department is also in the process of implementing a system notifying the insured patient when their bill is sent to their insurers. This letter will state that if within 60-90 days the insurance company has not made payment to the Health Services Department for the services provided, the patient will be held responsible for the full amount of the Bill.

It has been proposed that the Health Services Department upgrades its current information system to a Hospital-Based Information Network System. The Department is currently awaiting a response from several overseas companies that provide such systems. This system will allow it to improve its revenue capture and billing and its collection officers will be better able to monitor outstanding accounts and address non-payment before accounts are delinquent.

Finally, a sub-committee has been set up by the Health Insurance and Health Fees Advisory Committee to review the collections of the Health Services Department. The sub-committee has met on several occasions and is presently compiling a report of its findings and recommendations for submission to the full committee and onward through me to Executive Council. The Health Services Department stands ready to implement any changes identified as necessary to improve collections.

SUPPLEMENTARIES

The Speaker: The Second Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. Alden M. McLaughlin, Jr.: I would like to thank the Minister for such a carefully thought out and comprehensive response.

He alluded to giving consideration as to whether or not legal action should be taken in relation to some of the accounts which it is proposed to write off prior to that actually happening. Can the Honourable Minister say what policy has been adopted, if any, in relation to the other outstanding accounts if all the other efforts such as phone calls, letters and personal visits failed? Assuming the amounts are determined to be collectable, will legal action be taken to recover these outstanding sums or not?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Health and Information Technology.

Hon. Linford A. Pierson: The collection unit at the hospital will make every attempt, even if it means personal visits to try to collect the outstanding amounts. Failing that, the accounts are then referred to the Treasury Debt Collection Unit for further action. It is my information that several hundred accounts have been taken to the courts and a number of these accounts are being successfully serviced. Patients have ordered for deductions to be taken out of their salaries and paid into government. However, as you can see from the outstanding balance, much more needs to be done.

The Speaker: The Elected Member for East End.

Mr. V. Arden McLean: In the substantive answer, the Honourable Minister listed two amounts that are considered not collectable, amounting to a little over $5 million. Can the Honourable Minister say what is the success rate of the nine finance officers hired to work on the remaining amount, which I suspect is around $40 million? What percentage has been collected thus far?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Health and Information Technology.

Hon. Linford A. Pierson: It might be helpful if I provided all Honourable Members with an overall summary of the debt and the percentages involved.

Mr. Speaker, 4.2 per cent, represents something like 699 accounts valued at $1.9 million of the debt that is being adequately serviced. The definition of adequately serviced is those accounts that have reduced their account balance by at least $50 per month and will repay the debt within five years. The 18.5 per cent which represents 1,301 accounts valued at $8.4 million of the debt has been poorly serviced; and 73.3 per cent which represents 22,868 accounts valued at $35 million have not been serviced in quite a long time.

I would also like to provide the aged summary of the debt for Members: 55 per cent of the debt which represents $26.2 million is less than three years old; 27 per cent, representing $12.9 million is three to six years old (these amounts are collectable and would not be subject to the statute of limitations); 18 per cent representing $8.5 million of the debt between seven and ten years old is highly unlikely to be collectable regardless of what legal position we take.

Also, on the resident summary of the debt, this type of information has only recently been recorded so these figures are indications only. However, I am reliably informed that some 53.2 per cent, representing $24.6 million is owed by Caymanians or status holders, while 15 per cent, representing $7 million is owed by non-Caymanian residents; and 2 per cent, representing $1 million is owed by visitors. This leaves a factor of 29.4 per cent representing $13.6 million for which the residential status is not known.

Summary of account type: Some 72.6 per cent, representing $13.6 million of the debt is owed by self-paying patients; while 16.4 per cent, representing $7.6 million is owed by insurance companies (this has been verified by audit); 11 per cent, representing $5.1 million is owed by agency (that is, Cayman Airways).

The debt consists of, from local receivables, some 23,076; and overseas receivable approximately 1,020. That information should be of use.

The Speaker: The Second Elected Member for West Bay.

Mr. Rolston M. Anglin: According to the Minister's most recent answer as I understood it, almost $22 million (approximately 47 per cent) is owed by persons who do not necessarily have any ties to the Cayman Islands. Can the Honourable Minister say what the policy is when a person goes to get medical care in regard to ascertaining this information; and secondly, of the $7 million, the $1 million and the $13.6 million where status is not known, how much of that relates to local receivable and overseas medical?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Health and Information Technology.

Hon. Linford A. Pierson: The procedure followed is common to all patients going to the hospital. They have to provide an indication of their ability to pay whether it is through an insurance company or self-payment. The procedure is fairly standard.

Regarding the 29.4 per cent that equates to $13.6 million where resident status is not known, efforts are being made to get these figures put in place as soon as possible.

The Speaker: The Elected Member for East End.

Mr. V. Arden McLean: I see why the insurance companies in this country are so profitable—they are not paying their bills!

Can the Honourable Minister say what prevents us from collecting this money from the insurance companies at least?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Health and Information Technology.

Hon. Linford A. Pierson: Before answering that, I would like to just pass on some information I just received. Of the non-Caymanian resident, most of that is in respect of emergency services where they just go in and a follow up has to be done for payment and so on. They do not pay when the service is rendered. However, this matter is being looked into.

In regard to the insurance companies, we have been having quite a bit of problems with that. As a result, I have set up a Health Insurance and Health Fees Advisory Committee. They are now in the process of preparing a final report and as soon as that is ready, I will be tabling it in this House.

As Members will recall, we recently had a motion passed to take the whole question of the Health Insurance Law into a select committee for revision. There is much tightening up that needs to be done. One area we plan to tighten up on is the insurance industry.

The Speaker: The Second Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman.

Mr. Lyndon L. Martin: Can the Honourable Minister indicate why we are not writing off the entire $8 million if it is not collectable?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Health and Information Technology.

Hon. Linford A. Pierson: Of the $4 million plus that I suggested be written off, and the $1.1 million for local costs, even though we have the revenue section of the hospital, it is pretty well felt that these are uncollectible bad debts. We will still make a last ditch attempt to try to collect whatever we can even if it means taking the people to court. The one downturn on this is that these patients when taken to court will approach Members of the House in this respect. I expect that if Members will explain to them that the service rendered to them must be paid if at all possible because government is paying a considerable amount in respect of indigents in this country. Individuals who can make payments must make those payments. Members must bear in mind that when patients come to them complaining about being taken to court, they must explain to them that their obligations must be met.

Regarding the $8.5 million, 18 per cent of the debt between seven and ten years old, is highly unlikely to be collected. While this is true, we will continue to make every effort to try to collect those amounts.

The Speaker: Two additional supplementaries.
The Second Elected Member for West Bay.

Mr. Rolston M. Anglin: We knew that this whole area was a financial disaster, but it is quite grim.

Can the Honourable Minister say why, at this point in time, we can dream of implementing such an atrocious policy as outlined in point 4 of his substantive answer, “The Department is also in the process of implementing a system notifying the insured patient when their bill is sent to their insurers. This letter will state that if within 60-90 days the insurance company has not made payment to the Health Services Department for the services provided, the patient will be held responsible for the full amount of the Bill”?

This takes the insurance companies off the hook and places the onus on the citizens of this country who are paying the premiums. Furthermore, it has been brought to my attention that there are numerous instances where through negligence—and that is all I can call it—staff in the Health Services Department spend their time generating volumes and volumes of statements for $35 and $40 bills when they fail to make claims for items that cost as much as $28,000, causing the 90 days to lapse. Are we then saying that the Health Services Department does not have the computer systems and, or the necessary personnel to file claims on time? Are we now telling the people of this country, who have been mandated to have health insurance, that they are going to be held responsible?

For the record, I cannot support any such policy. If any of my constituents come to me with that—

The Speaker: Please turn this into a question.

Mr. Rolston M. Anglin: The question is, will the Minister give an undertaking that . . . Enough of this consultant's crap! We will get a proper system of qualified accounts, an accounts receivable manager and we must pay them. I am glad that the new Permanent Secretary (PS) for personnel is here. We must pay them adequately. Forty-six million dollars means they should be paid adequately to manage this process. This is an atrocity. We cannot put the onus back on the insured.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Health and Information Technology.

Hon. Linford A. Pierson: I am not quite sure what I am supposed to answer after that dissertation. The Member asked a question and answered it himself. However, I know what he is driving at.

Just to explain: It is not expected that the patients will have to pay the amount without pressuring the insurance companies. What is meant here is that if the revenue division of the hospital finds it difficult to collect from the insurance companies they will expect the patients who are paying the insurance policy to put pressure on the insurance companies to make payment to the hospital. However, we would like to make them know that they are ultimately responsible for the payment of the debt. This is not only done in Cayman. This is a policy that is worldwide.

We can only do so much at the hospital. However, if somebody is insured and the company refuses to pay, we are asking that patient to also put pressure on that company and ask why the bill has not been covered by insurance. I think that is reasonable.

I do not share the Member's enthusiasm that this is crap. This is standard procedure throughout the world.

The Speaker: The Second Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. Alden M. McLaughlin, Jr.: In the last paragraph of the response the Minister indicated the creation of a Health Insurance and Health Fees Advisory Committee to review the collection of the Health Services Department. It becomes apparent that while there is a policy in place which is intended to ensure those who attend the hospital for treatment are able to demonstrate their ability to pay either by virtue of appropriate insurance or Independent means, it is plainly obvious that system of determining the ability of patients to pay is not working. If it were an effective means of ensuring the patient had the ability to pay, we would not be where we are now.

Can the Honourable Minister say whether or not part of the remit of this subcommittee is to look at that particular policy or rules governing the ability of patients to pay with a view to tightening up, making it more stringent so that the number of non-paying patients who seem to fall through the cracks continue to drive up the amount of money owed to government can be reduced?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Health and Information Technology.

Hon. Linford A. Pierson: I need to clarify at the outset that the amounts I read out here this morning are not really in respect of individuals who are unable to pay. We have a process of determining through financial analysis those individuals who are unable to pay. We put them in the category of indigent. They are looked after. There is no problem there, but they are not included in this. What I read out this morning are individuals who should be able to pay, but who refuse to pay. We feel these individuals have the ability to pay, but many feel that if the service is provided through government, they have no obligation to make payments; this has to be corrected.

The Speaker: That concludes Question Time for this morning.

Item 6, Statement by the Honourable Minister responsible for the Ministry of Planning, Communications and Works, Leader of Government Business.

STATEMENTS BY MINISTERS/MEMBERS OF THE GOVERNMENT

REMOVAL OF CAYMAN ISLANDS FROM FATF LIST ON 22 JUNE 2001

Hon. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Mr. Speaker, although by now it should be known by most people, I am pleased to announce formally to this Honourable Legislative Assembly that as of 22 June 2001, the Cayman Islands have been removed from the Financial Action Task Force (FATF) list of non co-operative countries and territories, one year after inclusion on the list. We were de-listed because FATF member countries have accepted that we have addressed issues the FATF identified, through the enactment of legislative adjustments, and that we have taken concrete steps to implement these changes.

I should be very clear about this: These legislative adjustments and their implementation represent the extent of our necessary commitment to the FATF. They are the result of extensive consultation and dialogue with relevant industry representatives, and of course presentation and explanation in this Honourable House.

In concert with the de-listing, FATF has also withdrawn recommendation 21, under which member countries were able to issue business advisories to their financial institutions. These advisories have proven to negatively impact the ability of our financial service providers to be very competitive in the global marketplace. This means we can expect in due course that those FATF member countries who have issued business advisories in the past will revisit them. Indeed, as of 2 July, the United States, in a continuing vote of confidence for the Cayman Islands, lifted its advisory. This was done through Financial Crimes Enforcement Network (FINCEN) set up by the US Treasury Department, and that is equivalent to our FRU. We very much appreciate this action on their part.

Honourable Members will recognise that these are significant accomplishments, ones which were top priority for this Government to secure. I wish to sincerely thank all of my colleagues in the Legislative Assembly for the foresight and insight shown by the safe passage of the vital legislation required to support the de-listing of the Cayman Islands.

The Government wishes to thank the Private Sector Consultative Committee for the long hours spent in consultations that helped to guide the process. This committee, which still has a vital role to play, comprises representatives from the various associations attached to our financial industry and has very broad representation.

We must also say thanks to the Financial Reporting Unit (FRU) and the Cayman Islands Monetary Authority whose management teams and staff members rose to the challenge and worked tirelessly to fulfil their role in the process.

On a personal note, I would like to thank the members of the negotiating team, Honourable Financial Secretary, the Honourable Attorney General, the Minister of Health and the Second Elected Member for George Town. Certainly on many occasions times were tight, but we managed.

Special thanks must also be given to Mr. Fred Fielding of the law firm Wiley, Rein & Fielding, in Washington; also, Mr. Joe Tomkins, of the law firm Sidley & Austin, in Washington, who act as our legal advisors on that front. We also have to say a special thank you to Miss Maria Sheehan, from our public relations firm in Washington, Hill & Knoulton, who tirelessly worked in opening doors for us and helping us with the presentations that had to be made.

On the home front, we cannot forget the Assistant Financial Secretary, Deborah Drummond, who has in my words "lived" this process perhaps more than anyone else, although on most occasions being in the background. I think also worthy of mention is Dr. Chris Rose, of the Secretariat, a very good resource person.

As a major international financial centre, the Cayman Islands simply must be on the right side of international anti-money laundering standards. These are set by the FATF. Therefore, regardless of questions one might have on the FATF process, the focus, I must suggest, must be on the fundamental principles and objectives.

I am particularly gratified by the support of the financial services industry throughout this de-listing campaign. It was important to the Government that full and frank discussion of the issues be encouraged so that real solutions and responses could be put forward. We wish to continue in this mode, to ensure that our industry continues to develop on all fronts now that our regulatory credentials have been fully recognised.

I need not say that it should be our firm promise to ourselves, not to be found ever again in the position we found ourselves last June. One of the ways to do this is by establishing a multidisciplinary oversight group on anti-money laundering matters. We need also to keep in mind our ongoing implementation obligations, based on the legislative changes made. We have said to the FATF that we would have no difficulty with their maintaining contact with us as one of the de-listed jurisdictions on ongoing implementation, via the Americas Review Group in consultation with the Caribbean Financial Action Task Force (CFATF).

The Government also wishes to take this opportunity to congratulate the three other countries that were also de-listed on 22 June. The Cayman Islands looks forward to renewing work within the CFATF in the leadership role to which we are accustomed.

Mr. Speaker, we need to put the identical effort and energy we used to address the FATF matters into charting the way forward. The Government is aware that there may not be complete understanding in the wider local community of what has transpired to date, which may lead to a degree of uncertainty about the future. Let us be certain of one thing—the Cayman Islands mean business. We have already gotten some valuable insight from the Private Sector Consultative Committee as to the way forward in a meeting held on Wednesday afternoon. We will be continuing the process by developing a business plan with the financial industry, but we also understand that there is an immediate need for more clarity as to government policy in some key areas of particular relevance to the financial services sector, and by association to the wider business community. This then is “job one.” We will be developing such a policy statement with all possible dispatch, and we expect to articulate this publicly within a few weeks.

Mr. Speaker, in the short interim I would say that it is fundamental to our overall position that the Cayman Islands observe international standards—not speculative pseudo-standards, or the disadvantaged end of double standards, but actual international standards. In this regard, we stand ready, willing and able to participate on a meaningful basis in any process seeking to set such actual international standards for all players, whether they happen to be members of the relevant club or not. We remain astute to the best interests of the Cayman Islands; we remain committed to playing our rightful role internationally as a major financial centre; and we remain confident that together we can build a strong, prosperous future.

The Government recognises that this is but one of the many pressing issues which is of immediate concern to all of us here in the Cayman Islands. The general slow down in the economy, immigration matters, financial reform and the need to create cohesive national fiscal policies by the Government are but a few.

Unfortunately, there is no magic formula to cure all of these ills overnight. While we understand the frustrations some of our people are experiencing as I speak, it must be understood that the solutions are not easy when we have to take into consideration the diverse needs and desires of the people.

We are forging forward and will be addressing all of these issues as quickly as we possibly can. However, our approach to the decisions made must be from the best-informed position possible. With this in mind and recognising that government has a responsibility to keep the people informed, we will be embarking on a series of statements to update the public on all matters concerning the wellbeing of the country and these statements will commence this month.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: Moving on to item 7 on today's Order Paper, Other Business, Private Members' Motions, Private Member's Motion No. 17/01, Pension Deductions to be moved by the Second Elected Member for Bodden Town.

OTHER BUSINESS

PRIVATE MEMBERS' MOTIONS

PRIVATE MEMBER'S MOTION NO. 17/01

PENSION DEDUCTIONS

Mr. Gilbert A. McLean: I beg to move Private Members' Motions, Private Member's Motion No. 17/01, Pension Deductions, which reads as follows:

“BE IT RESOLVED THAT fifty per cent of the funds collected from deductions from employees' wages and employers' contribution under the National Pension Law be invested in the Cayman Islands.”

The Speaker: Do you have a seconder?

Mr. Lyndon L. Martin: I beg to second the Motion.

The Speaker: Private Members' Motions, Private Member's Motion No. 17/01, has been duly moved and seconded. Does the Mover wish to speak to it?

Mr. Gilbert A. McLean: Thank you.

The Speaker: On a point of procedure, I have received notice of an amendment. Do you wish to read that, and re-read the amended Motion?

AMENDMENT TO MOTION

Mr. Gilbert A. McLean: Yes, Mr. Speaker.

The amendment reads: "BE IT RESOLVED THAT at least fifty per cent of the funds collected from deductions from employees' wages and employers' contribution under the National Pension Law be invested in the Cayman Islands within a period of ten years commencing in 2002."

The Speaker: Would you read the amendment? Then we will vote on that.

Mr. Gilbert A. McLean: The amendment is, "In accordance with the provisions of Standing Order 25(1), (2) and (3), I, the Second Elected Member for Bodden Town, give notice of amendment to Private Member's Motion No. 17/01 by – 1) adding the words 'at least' between the word 'that' and 'fifty' in the first line; and 2) by adding the words 'within a period of 10 years commencing in 2002' at the end thereof."

The Speaker: The Second Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman.

Mr. Lyndon L. Martin: I beg to second the amendment to this Motion.

The Speaker: The amendment to Private Member's Motion No. 17/01 has been duly moved and seconded and is open for debate.

If there is no debate, I shall put the question. Those in favour please say Aye. Those against, No.

AYES.

The Speaker: The Ayes have it.

AGREED: AMENDMENT TO PRIVATE MEMBER'S MOTION NO. 17/01 PASSED.

The Speaker: I have waived the two day notice on the amendment. Please continue.

PRIVATE MEMBER'S MOTION NO. 17/01 As Amended

Mr. Gilbert McLean: Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

This Motion has been brought as a means of directing public attention and the attention of Legislators to the fact that each year the Cayman Islands is collecting from its people millions of dollars that is being sent out of the country with no capital advantage to the country whatsoever.

Also, this is a Motion which I promised the people of Bodden Town that if elected I would bring to the Legislative Assembly for the reasons that we should have first call on making use of the money which we take from ourselves and vest for considerable numbers of years which is what other countries of the world are doing with it. The benefits to be derived if we were to accept this Motion would be mammoth.

Every economy has been able to achieve substantial development over the course of history by principally garnering the savings of its citizens. It subsequently invests those savings into locally generating resources, where an attempt is made to optimise the competitive advantages within a given economy. In an open economy such as the Cayman Islands, the rapid pace of development over the past twenty years has been funded primarily by inflow of foreign capital, largely in the form of foreign direct investment. The role of local savings has been very much marginalised to the extent that it is not seen as of much relevance to the sustained growth of entrepreneurial activity in our economy.

