This is a major misfortune and has put us behind other islands that are less well off than us. For in many other islands we find that the persons there, indigenous people who have capital, come together and pool those funds to make major investments in the various countries. By so doing, they spread the risk among themselves and should losses occur, then it does not hit anyone heavily.

It also adds the advantage of the pooling of minds in making these things work. We do not have that in Cayman. We find more non-cooperation among business persons than we find cooperation. The competition is extremely high and fierce whereas we have neighbours who are smart enough to pool resources to improve the local economy, which improves business for themselves and opportunities of employment, therefore creating money and commerce.

A critical implication of our pattern of development has been the marginalisation of locally owned enterprises. Almost any enterprise in the Cayman Islands of any consequence is foreign owned, except the supermarkets and such. All the other businesses almost in totality are foreign owned. One of the things that caused it is the lack of available capital and the lack of our local people with capital combining their capital to go into joint ventures with one another—a major point that has been missed by our collective failure to do what we could do. This places us in a position that those who own the capital, investing it, controls and shape the growth of our economy.

Few people would attempt to argue that that is not what is and has been happening in Cayman. We hear everyone saying that we need something to stimulate the economy. People are losing jobs and all the rest of it. Yet there still is not enough motivation for cooperation among our own people with capital in pooling it to make success. Therefore, I suggest that it also means the Government in effect is required to shape its policies to cater to the foreign capital and the foreign entrepreneur when it comes up with more acceptable policies that would be true blue for our own.

When national pensions were introduced in the Cayman Islands by coming into effect of the National Pensions Law, it meant that a significant proportion of money paid in wages and due to wages being paid began to take place. In about another year all persons will be paying 5 per cent deducted from salaries and employers will also pay 5 per cent. That is 10 per cent of all the money in the Cayman Islands that is paid in wages. We are talking about millions of dollars.

I certainly know the intent of the law. I have heard it stated that it is "forced savings." Many people do not save and it is one way of government helping itself to not turn into a welfare state where everybody passed working age turns to government to carry them through the years after they cease working. I understand the principle of it quite clearly. I generally agree with this concept.

We are not talking about taking out of a person's salary this month and paying it out next month or next year. We are talking about the long haul. We are talking about 30 years—a whole generation! Funds collected and sent out of the Cayman Islands, legally and supposedly belonging to the persons from whom it is taken to be collected decades afterwards in monthly remittances from these pension providers. In truth and in fact, if you do not live long enough, you are not likely to collect anything of what has been taken from you. It is a major source of money.

I am told by members of the Chamber of Commerce administration that the Chamber plan alone collects $1 million a month. I make that to be $12 million in one year. I understand there are at least two other companies or plans that are large ones. So, for the purpose of my argument, let us say that each of those collected $1 million a month. That would be $36 million. Let us toss in all of the others providing pensions. We could come up with a reasonable working amount of $40 million per year leaving the Cayman Islands. Can we afford $40 million to be taken out of the Cayman Islands every month?

The Speaker: Every year.

Mr. Gilbert A. McLean: Sorry. Every year! Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

Can we afford $40 million to be taken out of the Cayman Islands every year? We are not talking about CI dollars either. We are talking about hard currency, which means US dollars (accepted internationally as the trading currency). The population is 40,000. Can we continue to milk CI $40 million out of this economy, change into US dollars and send out of here? We have no chance of receiving that again for the next 30 or 40 years, and then only in little dribs and drabs.

We also need to take into account that as the pressure grows on the Cayman Islands from external forces such as the Organisation for Economic Co-operation and Development (OECD) countries, the United States and all the industrialised countries, that although we have arrived at a supposedly accepted position now (being taken off the blacklist as stated by the Leader of Government Business) when will they create new requirements for us that we will have to meet?

I suggest that one of the things that resulted from the whole exercise with OECD is that we have lost certain capital that used to be here. I do not mean the capital that came from wheelers and dealers, or tax evaders, I am talking about good and lawful money that was here purely for investment purposes. So, we are less well off because of that. The question is: Can we afford to allow that to happen to us?

We are not talking about money from Argentina, The Bahamas, England, St. Vincent, Jamaica, whatever! We are talking about money being taken out of the Cayman economy deliberately, legally, and it is a must! There is no such thing as it is not going. It has to be taken and sent out.

When there is less hard currency coming into the Cayman Islands, there is certainly less to be sent out without affecting the availability of such funds. I do not have to be an economist to understand that very basic fact. Every country in the Caribbean has tried to get monies and they normally have to go to the US with that in hand for hard currency. Is it in any way logical for us to set up a system in the Cayman Islands whereby we take from ourselves $40 million a year and send it out of the country with the hope of receiving it in 40 years?

As I said earlier, there is no doubt that foreign investment has far outstripped any kind of serious capital pooling locally that could help our economy and keep monies within this economy. Because of this, we have fallen behind with businesses of any type that one would look to invest long term funds in, even though there are a few. There is the Caribbean Utilities Company, and a few others. However, its ownership is another question and because of this, we have not helped ourselves to have investment vehicles as we should, in which we can invest.

While we admit that, is it sound for us to continue in this particular mode? Or should we not now at this stage get smart and say we are going to change it? We have been through the OECD problem, now we are going to get smart and proactive instead of reactive and stop whining, saying we are good boys and get real understanding that nothing is for free in this world. You pay for it one way or the other. I recall the late Haig Bodden once talking about his career at a reception held at Lantana Restaurant for him, as the most successful insurance agent in the Cayman Islands. He said he realised that there was no Santa Claus. Have we reached that point yet?

I trust that we the newly elected representatives of the people will begin to get smart. I suggest that there needs to be a move where we can connect our domestic business with the offshore sector in this economy; where we can utilise our own capital; where we can plan an active role and benefit from it instead of being facilitators as we are now. We can become captains of our own fate. If we do not, I suggest that we are going to pay a very bitter price. We have a reduction in foreign currency. If we keep, by our own action against ourselves, reducing that, and we come to the point where we have to borrow it back, as has been the case with many of our neighbouring countries in the region, we will have to pay a serious price. It is then, as the saying goes, that the man extracts his pound of flesh from us.

I suppose we have all heard of World Bank, International Monetary Fund (IMF) and some of the things that have happened when one reaches a situation where one has to turn to those to fix one's economy. One of the first "fixes" they put in place is to tell you 'Listen, make your currency worthless so that the dollars that I am giving you will be supreme.' For anyone who has any doubts about that, Politics 101 in most universities will teach him about the politics of money.

Situations such as this has caused me bring this Motion to the House, asking us to look at opportunities that may be possible within this economy. In fact this Motion was set for the first meeting, but did not reach the Floor and it was postponed to this meeting. I had at least one person dancing up and down in my face several weeks ago telling me how it would be a terrible thing to invest this money in Cayman—asking what do we have to invest it into in Cayman and how it would be nothing but a loss. Well, I want to know who sits on his fanny in Cayman and sends it over to New York or London and guarantees whether or not it will be a loss. If it is a loss, what do we do? We tell the persons whose money we took, 'Well, we are sorry, that particular company went bankrupt and all your money that was invested is lost.' Is it a nicer way to lose it in a company in the US or England, or losing it here where we can at least look at the building or whatever and see that?

So, when I hear all of this highfalutin argument about 'risk' – "it is too risky" – that is what it is all about. That is what the high yield instruments are all about—taking risks, buying Bill Gates' stock and so on because you believe they will not break up the company, while it is ahead and monopolising the software world and making lots of money. If the judge breaks it up there goes the earnings. Do the people who offer to take our money cry, lament, or offer to make up any losses for us? Of course not! That is ridiculous to even think.

Whether or not the Chamber of Commerce thinks that it is a good thing is immaterial to me. I know it is not the Chamber of Commerce paying these funds on behalf of the people of this country. The people are paying those funds by having those funds deducted from their salaries on their behalf.

It speaks of an investment of at least 50 per cent of the funds taken in. I realise that we could not do that tomorrow because to meet the present criteria as set down in the regulations, we would not have that type of thing locally available. I amended this Motion after listening to colleagues and different persons to say over a ten-year period. Now, the geniuses here who are supposedly investing our funds in the best possible fashion in New York, London, Germany and all of these places, they do not know who the people are over there. It is all being done electronically or through one bank or the other. They can sit here and assure us of how well our monies are going to do. Do you mean to tell me that those geniuses cannot find any ways or means in ten years to invest some of that money here? We should fire every one of them.

I got quite a letter from the Chamber of Commerce and the man associated with Butterfield who invests the money they send through their scheme saying it is illegal and they should not think of doing it. I say we can do that. The people who said we would never go to the moon would never be there now. However, there were those who said, "No, we can go to the moon", and we went! Now, they frolic all the time in outer space, talking about going to live there, growing crops there and I guess they will soon have a night-club there and all the rest of that and we will all want to have a night out in outer space. However, it is because people said we can do it.

If we have so much money and if the world is asked to have such confidence in us as a financial centre, then please tell me I am wrong. Should we not have enough confidence in ourselves to find investment vehicles within this country? I suggest that in the minds of many people there are things they would wish to do, but cannot because of capital. Foreign capital is not going to come here to assist local entrepreneurs. Foreign capital will come here to assist itself and its owners with regard to profits, ways and means of avoiding taxes in the country from which it came. We need to find something for ourselves and our own.

We have to start by seeding the process. Up until now, this is about the third year these funds have been collected, no seeds have dropped yet. Now, there may be those who are better informed than I, and I have heard of one bank that supposedly invests 10 per cent of what it gets here, but I hear it is no more than the section of that bank investing it somewhere overseas. Anyway, I will listen attentively to the arguments that may be made after I stop speaking.

I believe that 50 per cent of the funds being extracted from the Cayman economy each year can be invested in the Cayman Islands. If you take a ten-year period, I would say in the first year make an attempt to invest 10 per cent. I understand 10 per cent is easy to calculate. Have you heard that money makes money? If we start the process, I believe money can be made. In the next ten years, invest such amounts of money as possible to invest. Suppose in ten years it is not a full 50 per cent, but 48 per cent invested? Would anyone want to shoot someone for only getting 48 per cent invested? I would be more than happy to know that 48 per cent of the funds were invested in Cayman. At least my children will have something to look forward to and we would be generating some capital for ourselves.

Available data on the Cayman Islands suggests that a conservative estimate of medium to long-term credit currently outstanding in the domestic market, that is the portion of loans and advances the Cayman Islands residents with maturity in excess of five years, is in the region of $250 million. Now, if foreigners with foreign money can have that kind of confidence to invest those funds in Cayman to its residents and Caymanians alike, should we not have enough courage to invest a little $10 million or $25 million, or $50 million in our own country? It is ridiculous to think that we do not.

I wish to bring to the attention of the House that the asset allocations are set out in regulations. That means that the Governor, or his Executive Council or the Governor in Executive Council passed these things here. Just as they were put here in 1998, they can be changed in 2001. There is no compelling reason why that must be the reason why the order remains. Have any of these pension providers undertaken an investment that they have taken up for ten years without any review? No! That would be ridiculous. At this very minute they are trading on the stock market in New York and so on. That is no excuse.

The same way it is said here, "An administrator shall not invest the assets of a pension fund in derivative securities, venture capital, limited partnerships and real estate." it can be changed to allow certain investments if it is found to be acceptable.

In the same way it says (and I just love this) in section 4(a) of the Regulations, "At least 70 per cent of the market value of the assets of a pension fund shall be denominated in the currency of the United States and no more than 25 per cent of the market value of the assets to be in the currency of the Cayman Islands." You would have thought it would have been otherwise.

So, the same way the Chamber of Commerce got the Government to write this, because they knew this was best for us and all of those people who are benefiting right now from dealing with these pensions on behalf of the people of the Cayman Islands, it can be changed to where it can be of use to the Cayman Islands.

I believe in the resolve of this Motion. I believe we need the capital that can be generated from utilising these funds within the Cayman Islands. I know the economy of the Cayman Islands will be helped, and the people from whom the funds are taken. I hardly need to look for a better reason than that to find good reason to bring this Motion.

I trust that the Government will take this on board to deal with it and if not, that is fine too, for I have done what I promised I would do. Certainly it does not change my belief that it is the right thing to do. However, having outlined what I have here, I will leave the Motion and recommend it to Honourable Members. Thank you.

The Speaker: At this time we shall suspend proceedings until 2.15 pm, but I ask all Honourable Members to meet informally with me in the Committee Room at 2.10 pm.

PROCEEDINGS SUSPENDED AT 12.49 PM

PROCEEDINGS RESUMED AT 2.35 PM

The Speaker: Please be seated.

Debate continues on Private Member's Motion No. 17/01, Pension Deductions. The Motion is open for debate. Does any other Member wish to speak?

The Honourable Minister responsible for Education, Human Resources and Culture.

Hon. Roy Bodden: Thank you, Mr. Speaker,

As the Minister who holds responsibility for this area, I am duty bound to speak to the Motion on behalf of the Government. I would like to begin by saying that I stated in my campaign my intention to explore the area called for in this Motion. Indeed, I shared the same manifesto with the Mover.

I explored the possibility and would like to offer to this Honourable House what I found out in the course of that exploration. I wish to say at the beginning that this whole business of pensions as a protection for workers emerged as a concept because it was realised that it is impossible for even the most frugal of persons to save by conventional means enough money to offer them a comfortable existence in retirement. This is especially important given the fact that in most societies people live longer, enjoy greater health up to a considerable old age, thus necessitating on their part the provision of some special dispensation of money so that they can have not the luxuries in the Golden Age, but the necessities. So that rules out saving as we know it by conventional means for more reasons than one.

However, the obvious reason that many of us have to use our savings is for vehicles that are necessary to get us out of daily inconveniences. It is recognised that just having a savings account and placing money in a conventional savings account would not do for somebody planning a retirement because of the fluctuating balances that savings' accounts are prone to have.

It is true, as the Mover said, these monies that are collected in the Cayman Islands belong to the subscribers. It is also true that we should have first call on these monies. However, there are certain parameters within which these monies operate. Right now these parameters are set out by legislation. In the Regulations we have a clear indication of how the monies must be invested.

I want to refer to the Regulations, section 3, where the administrator is charged with how he or she should invest these monies. Section 3(1)(a), (b), and (c), sets it out clearly. No total amount is invested in one instrument. That is designed to "spread the risk" as the expression goes. It is also true that the younger the age of the contributor, the better their position is for entertaining greater risks. A person who is coming into the fund at an older age would be cautioned by the administrator to take a more conservative line. It is recognised that the way in which these funds are invested in instruments, bonds, including US Treasury Bonds, grade bonds, corporate bonds, Euro bonds, treasury bills, company shareholdings, there is fluctuation according to the stock market. We had a recent experience of that in that many short-term funds took dives because of the fluctuating stock market.

The fundamental underlying principle in the investment of any pension fund is the security of the fund in the long term. That is why many countries prefer the funds to be invested by entities other than the government, preferably entities that are experienced and prepared for the liabilities and responsibility that they have to face in managing the funds in such a way that returns yield the expected results. That rules out even CDs with fixed rates which do not usually yield attractive returns.

One thing we have to be conscious of in this case is that the funds have to be invested in such a way as to spread the risk to prevent any one instrument failing and wiping out the whole portfolio of investment. That means that the funds are invested to spread the risk among any number of instruments.

I want to focus a little on the Cayman Islands as a jurisdiction in which the funds could or should be invested. It is true that some of the funds should be invested in the Cayman Islands. It is my understanding that some are, but we have to realise that the Cayman Islands is growing in significance as far as certain investment instruments and entities are concerned. One of the things one would not wish to do is over subscribe because when you sell shares and they are over subscribed, the value of the shares has a tendency to dip or stay at a certain level which might not yield the best returns.

While there is merit to the argument that it is Caymanian money, and that some of the money should be invested in Cayman, we have to balance that against the market forces and the availability of market entities in the Cayman Islands in which to invest these funds. The Cayman Islands is not unique in investing these kinds of monies in US Treasury Bonds and Euro Bonds. These are age-old proven instruments. While they may not be gilt-edged all the time, many people know them as instruments that even if they take a fall in the short term are bound to reach stability and yield attractive returns in the long term.

It is tempting to say that much of this money could be invested in the Cayman Islands in mortgage loans. While that is true, one also has to look at the volatility of such investments. One thing that I understand we have to guard against is persons not living up to the terms of the loans when borrowing from pension funds, because in a sense they are borrowing their own money. While it is true that the funds we invest is our own money, it is of critical importance that this money is kept so secure that there is an absolute guarantee that it yields the returns it is supposed to. So, any layoff into home mortgages has to be achieved against the backdrop that it is going to yield unflinching returns.

I am not saying this is going to happen in the Cayman jurisdiction, but the business of managing pensions is such a delicate business. It calls for such meticulousness, that the textbooks are rife with cases of pension funds being mismanaged and gone awry. The most classic case is that of Robert Maxwell. He was allowed to operate the pension fund of his employees. Everyone knows what happened to that pension fund.

Another classic textbook case is that of the Teamsters Union in the United States. The Teamsters manage their own pension funds. They use it for a slush fund and it is a truism to say that every president of the Teamsters has been under investigation if not indicted for mismanagement of pension funds. There is merit in hiring outside administrators, people and entities that have to stake their reputation, and convince the pensioners that they are the best ones to administer the pension funds because (a) they have experience in so doing, (b) they have credibility; and (c) they are prepared to accept responsibility and eventual liability, not only from mismanagement and misappropriation, but for loss due to carelessness and bad investments.

So, I want to underscore that there is a certain sense of security in having the pension funds administered the way they are in the Cayman Islands. Having said that, there is nothing wrong encouraging those administrators to look at instruments available in the Cayman Islands and lay off some of this money. However, to do that now, even to have them lay off 50 per cent over the next ten years would mean that we would have to amend this legislation in a significantly different way from what it is now. I am not convinced that that would be in the best interest of the pensioners at this time, even if we break it down on a yearly basis, as suggested by the Mover.

One reason for that is that our stock market and the other instruments and entities we have in the Cayman Islands to which significant portions of these funds could be invested is not at the stage where they could bear that amount of money. I argue, and my research bears me out, that although this money is overseas, although this money is invested in entities over which we have no control, it is invested in traditional instruments and entities. Given the long-term nature of the investments, the money is as safe as it can be. We also have to remember that the Caymanian business culture is a relatively new and growing business culture. We are not yet as sophisticated and aware of all the intricacies and nuances of these kinds of instruments and entities.

It is good to be able to consider this and debate the merits and demerits of such a venture. However, we must remember that no government, no matter how economically well off, could afford to take responsibility in this day and age for repaying pensions to those persons who lose it through the government making a bad move. From time to time, we hear about the United States Social Security system being bankrupt. Whether or not that is so, we hear it. It is a fundamental fact that these monies have to be kept almost sacred where they are kept away from the hands of politicians. I am a believer in that. I believe that the hard-earned funds of the people must be secure. If I can recall the debate in the early stages, that was a universally accepted concern. They wanted to find out if these monies were going to be secure.

There is risk involved in any kind of investment. However, I do not believe that the risks involved in these investments are undue or should be more frightening than anything else. It is also true that the monies invested are significant sums. While it is true that this money, for the most part, leaves the Cayman Islands, let us not forget that the balance to the equation is that there are significant amounts of monies lodged and invested in the Cayman Islands by outside entities so there is a balance. It is not accurate to portray it as a void, to show that the flow is unidirectional. Monies go out, but monies also come in. While it is true that we have to watch the outflow, we have to also ensure that we take care and make the best advantage of the inflow.

Therefore, it is important that the investors of these funds have the option. Let us not forget, every pensioner, every contributor gets to see on a regular basis the performance of the monies they have invested because it is a stipulation that subscribers get periodic reports of how their funds are doing. They have the option, bearing in mind the administrator's advice, to change or alter the percentage of their investments within certain discretionary areas. Indeed, it is recommended that the younger the contributor, the more aggressive they can be in terms of risk because it is a long-term investment. At no time will all of the subscribers be taking their pensions at the same time which allows the fund to take certain ebbs and flows. Significant too is that none of the pension schemes are defined benefits. They are defined contributions. That in itself offers a certain basic protection to the subscribers.

Whether or not we have the best system in the world is a moot point, and not relevant to this debate. What is relevant is that all of the plans are safe, offer reasonable rates of return, and offer a fair amount of security in terms of long-term investment and guarantee that the subscribers are going to be able to earn significant and encouraging returns on their money. The point also needs to be made that wise people will not only depend on their pension investments for a secure future. So, having monies in a pension fund is not an excuse for not having other investments or other arrangements for one's retirement years. That is just the basics.

The strength of pensions as they are in the Cayman Islands is twofold: First, it allows the subscriber certain independence and releases him from dependency upon the state. Secondly, it frees the state from the obligation of providing for the citizen. The responsibility of the state in this instance is to see that the funds and the administrators of the funds abide by the law and regulations as set out by the state so that the state becomes the guarantor. The state becomes the entity which oversees the management and ensures that it is proper, but the state itself does not have any direct role in managing or investing the funds. That is good and reassuring to all parties involved.

I think this Motion allows us to take a healthy look and helps us articulate some ideas as to the way forward. The Motion has merit in this sense. This whole business of pensions in the Cayman Islands is not ten years old yet, so we do not have a whole corpus of experiences to build upon. We are not yet in a position to say, 'based on our experience, this is what we think could be done.' This Motion allows us to take a first look at what we are trying to do and achieve. It gives us the perspective and encourages us to take our relatively new experience and juxtapose that against countries which have a far longer experience than we do. It also gives us some idea of what we might like to do in terms of a way forward. However, I believe that we should let our laws and regulations play out some more before we attempt to come up with any significant changes that may alter the long-term course we plan to take.

When the funds have reached a certain age and we derive the spin-off we expect and gain the experience, we will be in a better position to say we believe it is time to take an introspective look. However, we are just starting. No significant amount of returns has yet been gained on our investment. So, I would have to caution against any suggestion that we hold back some of this in the Cayman Islands.

Let us not forget that the Cayman Islands are an interdependent element. We are part of the wider world economy. Events in the Cayman Islands are as much influenced by what happens in the United States and Europe and the Far East as by what happens in downtown George Town. Indeed, it would be foolhardy to say that we could create our own economic empire here just by such a move. We have to play and understand the market forces and gain from that understanding before we can successfully venture out into crafting our own instruments.

While I would not discourage a conservative investment, I would guard against a significant amount. Even over a decade, 50 per cent is a significant investment. We have a stock exchange here which is growing. We have some other companies which are certainly attractive to investors, but we do not have them in the numbers which are of such a magnitude to attract significant investments over the long term. That is why we have to look overseas.

Let us not forget, this whole business is conditioned by one word—"risk"—managing risk, spreading risk, and eliminating certain risks.

I like to be informed about how empires are built, both political empires, but more importantly economic empires. Often economic empires influence political empires. I especially like to read about Jewish entrepreneurs. It seems that these people were and still are to a certain extent, the world leaders in money management.

The house of Rothschild, was started by the patriarch Amshel Rothschild who sent his four sons out into the world. This is interesting. He did not send them all to one jurisdiction because he wanted to spread the risk. He wanted to guard against a total wipe-out and failure. He sent one to Italy, one to London, one to France, and one to Germany. At the beginning he did not send any to the United States. After the market forces played out in such a way, the one in Germany left and emigrated to the United States Amshel Rothschild called his sons in before he sent them into the world and told them the reason why he wanted them to go in four different directions. They took the money he gave them and invested it. He did not want them all to go to the same place. The wisdom of spreading the risk is spread out in the house of Rothschild and all of the things they control and stand for.

That was not the only one. His rivals did the same thing. The Brontmans, the Reichmans, every one of them. The Jews got into whisky, banking and manufacturing. They manufactured whisky and did not drink it themselves. The name of the game was to make the most money at the least risk. The Rothschilds had so much money that for years they controlled the whole of Europe. Kings, princes, prime ministers borrowed money from the house of Rothschild. They virtually ran Germany before the First World War. One has to be mindful of this whole business of risk in investment.

It is interesting to note that Robert Maxwell was a Jew, but he did not understand the business of managing risk. He took the pension money, and his principle was flawless. The problem was, in practice it did not work. His philosophy was that if he managed the money for the house of Maxwell, it would mean he could make more money because he would have to pay the house of Maxwell management fees, but he did not realise that he did not spread the risk. All the risk was borne by the house of Maxwell. So, when the empire began to fall, when the world took an economical downturn, Maxwell had to lay out more and more money to manage the pension fund until he was so short of cash he began to borrow money from the pension fund he was managing. He got into a quandary he never got out of. Many people say it was that which eventually cost him his life because he was found mysteriously washed up along the shores of some Mediterranean island, his yacht abandoned.

We have to bear in mind that it is crucial to have the ability to understand how to manage these funds so that the risk is spread. That is why the law and the regulations stipulate these instruments and the minimal rate of returns. I found out that it is an awesome responsibility. The managers and administrators of these funds have certain legal responsibilities. They can be held liable, as happens many times in other jurisdictions. I believe that our pensions' law might not be the best law in the world, but I believe it serves the purpose.

The National Pension Law requires that the pension plan administrator invests the contribution from employees and employers in accordance with the criteria set out in the laws and as prescribed by the legislation. I want to read what that means: "The administrator must exercise the care, diligence and skill in the management and investment of the pension fund that a person of ordinary prudence would exercise in dealing with the property of another." I want to pause here to interject that these managers and administrators are trustees. If they make a mess as trustees, they can be held personally liable. It is not a free ride. That is why it is not an involvement to which all and sundry run. He must also use all relevant knowledge and skill, which because of his profession or calling he ought to possess or appoint an agent who can. He also has to comply with the regulations. They require the administrator to comply with asset allocation requirements which in brief stipulate placing between 40 per cent and 70 per cent of the market value of the assets in equities between 20 per cent and 40 per cent in investment grade bonds, or preference shares; and up to 25 per cent in fixed term deposits or the equivalent.

If we were to invest this money in the Cayman Islands we would have to change the law because we do not have some of these instruments here at this time. The reason why these instruments are recommended and the percentage of investment stipulated is because it is calculated that these are the kinds of returns necessary to make the pension fund viable accompanied by the least risk possible.

It would be simple if the Government had stipulated that each worker needed to set aside so many dollars per month in a CD. At the end of your working life, however, would you have enough to tie you over to meet your bills and allow you to live comfortably? No! Or, would what you have by then be much less than what you need? The reason it is done this way is for the Government, without directly involving itself, to guarantee that every person who works and for whom they work make a contribution to free the Government of any direct responsibility, and also to guarantee to the worker that his investment will be such that he can depend upon it.

It is not all that is needed; it is but the basics. It is expected that over the long term the investors' money will be safe. In the short term there are peaks and valleys. However, the short-term losses will be more than compensated by the long-term yield of the investments. Equities must remain as the major part of long-term investment and retirement planning. You do not get equities from mortgage loans, or CDs. These are special instruments. If one followed the history of the stock market, one would realise that for all the dips and falls, the rises more than compensate.

I read where during the Great Depression, many people lost their fortunes. Believe it or not, many people became millionaires also. These monies have to be managed by knowledgeable persons because even out of the 1920s stock market crash, many people jumped from multi-storey buildings, just as many or more people became millionaires by watching the market trends and buying and selling according to the market movement.

I believe that while there is merit for us to examine these funds, at this time, there is no convincing reason why the Government should alter the law and regulations from the way they are. Government believes that investors must be assured that their investments are safe, and that they will yield returns which will allow investors to realise their ambitions. It is therefore accurate to say that, at this time, such a situation does not exist in the Cayman Islands to warrant this kind of investment.

That does not rule out the fact that we should not be observant and monitor the management and investment of the funds. Government believes that, given the relevant new beginning, the fact that we need to accumulate some returns on the investments, they are best left as they are currently stipulated to be managed in the law and regulations.

We are just now reaching the stipulated contribution level of all the entities. It is therefore wise to stay at this level and let the investments yield returns before we make any move to change the investment pattern, particularly as we cannot be sure of all the risks involved if we change to the pattern which has been suggested.

The Cayman Islands offers good scope for certain types of investments. I believe it would be unwise to change the law and regulations from what is stipulated at this stage to anything which carries an element of uncertainty. Therefore, I cannot encourage Government to accept the Motion. What I will encourage the Government to do is continue to keep the matter of pensions and pension contributions under review and encourage it. As the opportunity avails, and entities emerge in the Cayman Islands that are secure and attractive, it will encourage investment in those entities in sufficient portions as to benefit Caymanians. However, what must always be borne in mind is that the risk on these investments must be spread to its maximum.

I hope that my argument has been convincing. Certainly, Members are entitled to their opinions. The experts bear me out. I have consulted far and wide and while it is attractive and might be idealistic, we have to be practical. The bottom line is that these are investors' monies and they must be kept safe. Above all, Government should be cognisant of the Robert Maxwells, the Teamsters, and all these other people, Bebbe Roboso, and all these others who went off and invested pension money in hare-brained schemes and at the end of the day saw the money evaporate. Pensioners did not have anything and hundreds if not thousands were left in a quandary. There is an old saying in Latin, coined by Augustus Caesar: "festina lente"—hasten slowly. Thank you.

The Speaker: The Motion is open for debate. Does any other Member wish to speak? Does any other Member wish to speak?

The Third Elected Member for George Town.

Dr. Frank McField: Mr. Speaker, I am going to see if I can make heads or tails of this debate. I must say that I was an advocate of using pension funds and insurance monies to try to create local investment possibilities in my earlier days. I have a few concerns at this particular juncture, but I like to note that the debate by the Minister of Education was a little not like my economics, somehow. So I would like to just see if there is any way that I can somehow expound on some points there.

My understanding of spreading the whole risk is that there are choices. People can exercise choices and they are because their feeling is that they will benefit by exercising those choices. If the individual had to exercise choices at this time, they would choose not to be involved in pension schemes. I think that I have been able to gain as much from many persons who are forced by law to contribute to pension schemes.

I am saying that what the Government considers to be beneficial is not always what the private individual or the private company will consider to be beneficial because they are looking at benefits from different perspectives. It is good to talk about the very capitalistic Rothschilds and their adventures in capitalism and international capitalism. It is a good story, and a very Jewish story at that, and probably that tradition has been going on for many thousands of years in terms of spreading the risk. What we in the Cayman Islands have to pay attention to is that we are starting out as persons who are making it mandatory for citizens to save for old age. In so doing, we are taking a certain amount of money out of the pockets of these people. Also we are taking a certain amount of money out of companies operating in the country. In other words, national pension legislation automatically denies or limits the cash flow which would normally exist in our society.

The Government believes this is a prudent way of managing society, although businesses and individuals might see this as not being prudent. There are a lot of small businesses complaining about the fact they must pay pension and health insurance. They believe they would best be able to function if they did not have these types of economic burdens.

If it is the intention of the Government to look at the overall good, saying that people should save for their old age, and that Government should take the added step to disassociate itself with the actual administration of the pension funds, then all the administration should really do is make the regulations to cause the investments to be invested prudently. The monies being invested prudently always seem to end up with giving other jurisdictions more funds, more credibility, more security. In other words, America and American instruments and entities seem to be getting larger and larger as a result of the poor world always saying that, if it is going to benefit in the long run economically, they have to invest in the American economic instruments and entities.

That in itself economically under-develops those countries that are pursuing such policies in that the money they are collecting by virtue of government legislation is assisting with the further development of the US economy and instruments. It is further assisting with the devaluation of the instruments within our territories. It is a predicament we find ourselves in.

Some of us would hasten to believe that that is not a serious predicament requiring serious consideration. If the persons who are working in our society are paying into a pension fund year after year, after year, waiting until they get to be 65 years old to retire, to benefit from those funds that they are compelled by legislation to pay into each week or month, that is a far-fetched carrot that the Government holds in front of them. Whereas, if people could have some access to the benefits of their collective investments, then they would probably feel more that it was a useful condition and not an unnecessary servitude the Government had compelled them to endure.

I am saying that if people are able to become small business persons as a result of the existence of small business loans; if people are able to get mortgages and get homes they can live in; if they are able to rear their children in a way that will give them some kind of self-esteem, then would not a certain degree of risk be worthwhile?

When we are considering risk from the point of view of an underdeveloped native, we must not consider it in the same way as that of a developed metropolitan person who sees risk differently. He has already gone beyond those particular types of needs we believe these investments would be useful in assisting to correct. In Paris or London where housing might not necessarily be an issue; where people have different possibilities to have access to mortgage money or scholarship money, or money for training or home improvement, it is a completely different kind of predicament.

When all these countries started to develop, when people did not know where capitalist development was leading them, everybody was acting with a certain lack of knowledge and there were certain risks that they were all taking. Mistakes were made in terms of investment, and in the way in which economic strategies were developed and the way government saw its role in the economy. It can be said a lot of the pension plans which existed were abused by the administrators and we can say that those mistakes do not need to be repeated. We can now term that particular type of administration as involving risk—but only risk in retrospect.

The countries which have gone through those stages of development do not place them in the same position of need as we in the Cayman Islands are placed. We have a lot of banks operating in the Cayman Islands. They charge very high interest rates. It is apparent to all of us that they consider us a high-risk jurisdiction. For this reason they charge us an additional 3 per cent or 4 per cent over par in order to be able to make sure the risk is somehow rewarded. This goes to show it is not always the degree of risk we look at, but the profits that result from those risks.

If part of the problem in regard to our indigenous local development is the lack of capital and the lack of cheap capital, it means that we would like to pay the principal and the interest so the interest did not cause us to default because it is so high, and the business could not generate sufficient cash to maintain the payment of the principal and the high interest. If local economic development is being stagnated by these oppressive conditions, then it is understandable why we are thinking about ways to try to alleviate the situation.

One of the ways seems to be that if our people are generating a certain amount of capital as a result of their participation in the economic system, somehow, some of that money should be used locally to give them the kind of social benefits which should run parallel to the kind of economic progress our country is making.

That is a real predicament government is faced with at this particular time. This Government, in particular, needs to be able to find ways to solve these types of problems. Nobody is saying that the Government would be creating conditions to make it possible for pension funds to be plundered. I think what the Mover of the Motion was saying, not just in his debate today but through part of his political career and in his campaign, is that, if we take the money we accumulate and put it in an area where we are getting less for it, then the money being brought and invested here does not seem to be totally logical.

It would appear that the sole reason for taking our money elsewhere to get less money for it than that which is being brought here to be loaned to us is that we are minimising or spreading the risk by moving our money outside and waiting for foreign money to come inside to be loaned to us. In that sense, it is an amazing predicament we find ourselves in. It is a parody of Colonialism that people devalue themselves and their environment to the point where they are willing to pay more for what is brought in, than what they are willing to pay for what remains here.

The interesting point, if the foreign monies brought to the Cayman Islands can generate so much interest and such secure interest for foreign investors, why would it not generate a good investment result for the people of the Cayman Islands?

I feel that we are running all over the world to see if we can get from the Caribbean Development Bank, or other banks, some money for low-income mortgage. The fact that we are talking about low-income mortgage does not necessarily mean because the persons borrowing the money are low wage earners—they are not working and will not pay. I think we sometimes confuse the issue of low income with the lack of income; it is totally different. If somebody is not making an income, obviously they can not afford to borrow and pay back. However, there are people who remain as low income earners and remain in their job for ten years, twenty years. They are some of the most stable producers in our society, and some of the most dependable creditors.

I remember my mother and father were what I would consider to be low-income wage earners. They worried more about what they owed people than a lot of rich people who knew that if the bank lent them a few thousand dollars and they could not pay it back, the bank would have an interest in lending them a bit more to take a bit more risk with them hoping they would be able to pay it back.

I am not saying that the quality of the borrower today is the same as it was yesterday. Obviously, society has come to a point where debt is a very important part of the entire flow of our economy. If we cannot give people today what it will take them twenty years to pay for, we would not be living in the kind of consumer society that we are living in.

The Caymanian does not want to wait twenty years to get the house, no more than the American wants to work twenty years to get the house. A person wants to be able to borrow in order to afford it, and pay for it over a period of time. That is the nature of the society we are living in. I believe that there is a possibility for society to do that.

Where I might find a little problem with the Motion in the sense that the Movers are saying is the part where at least 50 per cent should be invested within the period of ten years commencing in 2002. I believe what is used out of this fund could be less. It does not have to be that sudden. We could take our time in terms of trying it. There are reasons to believe that this Motion is not totally out of sync with what many of us believe is a necessity, that is to find monies to invest in local projects for economic development and to promote harmony in society.

If banks and trust companies that operate here are to redefine investment in the Cayman Islands as being more secure and less risk-oriented, then I believe it is time that government plays a role in assisting with the change of that particular status. That could be done by showing that government is interested in having a say in what geographical areas our money is invested. If we say it should be invested in first mortgages; if we can make good definitions, then we need to get the persons who put these regulations together; who knew what the perfect safe investments would be to examine our local domestic environment again and see whether or not they can find some investment in our jurisdiction that might be able to qualify as safe. That attempt by government should at least result from this Motion.

I hope that the next Member who speaks on this Motion will help to give me an indication of the position that I will take. I have briefly tried to talk out loud in terms of finding my position on this. I hope when the Mover makes his submission he will take into account some of the points I have made in terms of trying to rebut some of the comments made by the Minister of Education.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Planning, Communications and Works.

Hon. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Mr. Speaker, I think by consensus, because there are a few meetings that have to go on this afternoon, and since the Third Elected Member for George Town has just completed, looking at the time of the afternoon it is, I think Members would be content if we were to adjourn at this time.

With your permission, I would move the adjournment motion.

The Speaker: I will entertain a motion for the adjournment.

ADJOURNMENT

Hon. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Mr. Speaker, I move the adjournment of this Honourable House until 10 am, Monday.

The Speaker: The question is that this Honourable House do now adjourn until 10 am Monday. Those in favour, please say Aye. Those against, No.

AYES.

The Speaker: The Ayes have it.

AT 3.53 PM THE HOUSE STOOD ADJOURNED UNTIL 10 AM MONDAY, 9 JULY 2001.

OFFICIAL HANSARD REPORT
MONDAY
9 JULY 2001
10.41 AM
Eleventh Sitting

[Prayers read by the Honourable Minister responsible for the Ministry of Tourism, Environment and Transport.]

The Speaker: Please be seated. The Legislative Assembly is in session.

Item number 2 on today's Order Paper, Administration of Oath, Oath of Allegiance to Mr. A. Joel Walton, Deputy Financial Secretary, to be the Honourable Acting Temporary Third Official Member.

Mr. Walton, would you come forward to the Clerk's table? Would all Honourable Members please stand.

ADMINISTRATION OF OATHS OR AFFIRMATIONS

OATH OF ALLEGIANCE
(Mr. A. Joel Walton)

Mr. A. Joel Walton: I, Joel Walton, do swear that I will be faithful and bear true allegiance to Her Majesty Queen Elizabeth II, her heirs and successors according to Law, so help me God.

The Speaker: Mr. Walton, on behalf of all Honourable Members I welcome you to this House for the time of your service. Please take your seat as the Honourable Acting Temporary Third Official Member.

Please be seated.

Item number 3 on today's Order Paper, Reading by the Honourable Speaker of Messages and Announcements.

READING BY THE HONOURABLE
SPEAKER OF MESSAGES
AND ANNOUNCEMENTS

APOLOGIES

The Speaker: I have apologies from the Honourable Second and Third Official Members, and the First Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman.

Continuing with Questions to Honourable Ministers and Members. Postponed Question 76, standing in the name of the Third Elected Member for West Bay.

QUESTIONS TO HONOURABLE
MINISTERS AND MEMBERS

POSTPONED QUESTION NO. 76
(Postponed Friday 6 July)

No. 76: Capt. A. Eugene Ebanks asked the Honourable First Official Member responsible for the Portfolio of Internal and External Affairs what is the current criteria for having past criminal offences removed from one's record.

The Speaker: The Honourable First Official Member responsible for the Portfolio of Internal and External Affairs.

Hon. James M. Ryan: The Royal Cayman Islands Police (RCIP) maintains a database of convictions recorded by the Courts and sentences imposed. From this data, the RCIP is able to issue a record of convictions and corresponding sentences deemed a 'Police Certificate', but commonly referred to as a 'Police Record'.

The Rehabilitation of Offenders Law (1998 Revision) provides for some convictions to become 'spent' after prescribed periods of time referred to as 'rehabilitation periods' ranging from three to ten years. There are also provisions that set out the possible impact of subsequent convictions on the determination of the 'rehabilitation period' of both the original and subsequent conviction.

There are, in turn, other convictions that the Law excludes from ever being considered as spent. 'Police Certificates' issued by the RCIP are prepared in accordance with the Rehabilitation of Offenders Law (1998 Revision). The provisions, or criteria, of this Law are applied to exclude 'spent convictions'. 'Police Certificates' issued by the RCIP do not show 'spent convictions'.

SUPPLEMENTARIES

The Speaker: The Second Elected Member for West Bay.

Mr. Rolston M. Anglin: Would the Honourable Member clarify if the spent convictions are currently falling off police records for the purposes of people obtaining police certificates from RCIP?

The Speaker: The Honourable First Official Member responsible for Internal and External Affairs.

Hon. James M. Ryan: It is my understanding that this is being practised, subject to human error. Spent convictions are removed, or do not appear, on police records.

The Speaker: The Second Elected Member for West Bay.

Mr. Rolston M. Anglin: Would the Member then say if this removal is automatic, or does the offender have to specifically request that those items be removed from the record?

The Speaker: The Honourable First Official Member responsible for Internal and External Affairs.

Hon. James M. Ryan: The removal of spent convictions would be automatic and does not have to be requested by the individual, or ex-offender.

What I would like to point out, though, and this may be something which is causing confusion regarding what The Rehabilitation of Offenders Law states. Suppose a person commits an offence and the conviction falls in the category of three years before it is spent, and, at year two, the person commits another offence, not necessarily the same offence, but an offence of which they are convicted, then that first offence does not automatically fall away at year three. The offence will not be removed until after the new offence has been spent.

I have had one or two cases referred to my office where a person said he had committed an offence in the mid-1980s that should have fallen away, but it was still on his record. When I asked if he had a subsequent offence before the period of time for it to be spent had lapsed, he said he had. That then requires the earlier conviction to remain on the record until that later subsequent conviction has been spent.

The Speaker: The Third Elected Member for West Bay.

Capt. A. Eugene Ebanks: Would the Honourable Member say if there is one schedule for offences involving drugs, and possibly another for causing grievous bodily harm? What is the time frame for having those things fall away? Are they different categories?

The Speaker: The Honourable First Official Member responsible for Internal and External Affairs.

Hon. James M. Ryan: I attached the schedule to assist Members. I will take a minute to read this and to say that the rehabilitation period is tied to the sentence, not to the crime committed. It says:

“A sentence of imprisonment for a term exceeding six months, but not exceeding thirty months [the] rehabilitation [period is] ten years.

“A sentence of imprisonment for a term not exceeding six months [is] seven years. A fine or any other sentence, subject to rehabilitation under this Law not being a sentence to which any of the subsections (3) to (8) of section 5 apply, five years.”

“An order sending the offender to a rehabilitation school under paragraph (b) of section 20(1) as read with paragraph (a) of section 20(3) of the Youth Justice Law, (1995) three years.”

It is tied to the sentence, rather than the crime.

The Speaker: The Second Elected Member for West Bay.

Mr. Rolston M. Anglin: Would the Member say if the database kept by RCIP is a computerised database, and if so, do they still keep a person's entire record in a separate database? In other words, do they have one that shows the entire profile, and then one that shows everything without the spent convictions?

The Speaker: The Honourable First Official Member responsible for Internal and External Affairs.

Hon. James M. Ryan: The RCIP are in the process of computerising this information. It is currently done manually and the record shows all convictions. The spent convictions will be edited out of the database and it will only record those that are not spent, if any.

The Speaker: The Second Elected Member for West Bay.

Mr. Rolston M. Anglin: I was not sure if the Member meant that as the person makes a request the item gets edited out. Since he has indicated that is the case, who is responsible for making sure that when a request is made for a police record nothing that should be edited out is reported in error? Who is ultimately responsible for checking those before they are distributed to the public?

The Speaker: The Honourable First Official Member responsible for Internal and External Affairs.

Hon. James M. Ryan: The head of the Criminal Investigation Department (CID) is responsible. In fact, it is my understanding that his deputy will check these to see that spent convictions do not appear on a police record when being prepared.

The Speaker: The Elected Member for East End.

Mr. V. Arden McLean: In view of the fact that there are so many cases heard in the courts on a yearly basis, my understanding is that there are some 3,000 to 4,000 cases heard there . . . granted, they do not all carry imprisonment sentences. Can the Member tell us how many people it takes to keep these records up to date, bearing in mind there are that many cases going through the court each year?

The Speaker: The Honourable First Official Member responsible for Internal and External Affairs.

Hon. James M. Ryan: I am told it takes three people to do it, but we currently only have one. If it takes a bit longer we might have to get a police record; that is the reason.

The Speaker: The Second Elected Member for West Bay.

Mr. Rolston Anglin: In looking through these rehabilitation periods, and having had certain representation made by my constituents and seeing their police records, I wonder if the Member would say if these periods are in line with United Kingdom (U.K.) standards.

The reason I ask, and I beg your indulgence. . . If it is “a fine or any other sentence subject to rehabilitation under this Law not being a sentence to which any of the subsections (3) to (8) of section 5 apply” it remains for “five years”.

I had a constituent whose dog bit someone. He was fined and he had difficulties obtaining a U.S. visa because that conviction was showing up on his police record. That is the reason I asked if these periods are in line with U.K. standards.

The Speaker: The Honourable First Official Member responsible for Internal and External Affairs.

Hon. James M. Ryan: I understand that broadly they are in line. I am not able to say that specifically each one is in line with the U.K. I would say that the piece of legislation I referred to earlier, The Rehabilitation of Offenders Law, is not a very clearly written piece of legislation. There are plans to try to have it updated and hopefully presented in a little more readable form than it stands. We can certainly look at it, get information from various jurisdictions and no doubt when this happens and it comes here to the Legislative Assembly, Legislators will have an opportunity to give input into the rehabilitation periods.

The Speaker: Before calling on another supplementary I would appreciate a Motion for the suspension of Standing Order 23(7) and (8).

The Honourable First Official Member.

SUSPENSION OF STANDING ORDER 23(7) and (8).

Hon. James M. Ryan: Mr Speaker, I move the suspension of Standing Order 23(7) and (8) to allow Question Time to continue after the hour of 11 am.

The Speaker: I shall put the question, that Standing Order 23(7) and (8) be suspended. Those in favour say Aye. Those against, No.

AYES.

The Speaker: The Ayes have it. Question time is continuing.

AGREED: STANDING ORDER 23(7) & (8) SUSPENDED TO ALLOW QUESTION TIME TO CONTINUE BEYOND 11.00 AM.

SUPPLEMENTARIES

The Speaker: Any supplementaries?
The Elected Member for East End.

Mr. V. Arden McLean: I wonder if the Member would tell us what time frame we are looking at, and, more importantly, he told us that the police force is currently trying to computerise their conviction records. When is it anticipated to be completed since it is now in process?

The Speaker: The Honourable First Official Member responsible for Internal and External Affairs.

Hon. James M. Ryan: I am told that there is an enormous amount of back records that need to be transferred to the computer system. The computer system, the OTRIS system, is being installed and the hardware for it is scheduled to be in place in September. So, I would think that we should have it up and running by the end of the year, if not before.

On the matter of a timetable for the review of The Rehabilitation of Offenders Law, I will direct that the matter be reviewed. I do not want to nail down a time, and I know there is a lot of legislation to be done, and I am not saying that it is not important. I am certainly going to try to get it done this year if at all possible, but I think probably toward the end of the year. We will work on it as expeditiously as the legal drafting department can. As soon as instructions are given I will move ahead on it.

The Speaker: Are there any further supplementaries? If not, that concludes Question Time for today.

Out of an abundance of caution, although there is no Government business on today's Order Paper, I would ask for a motion for the suspension of Standing Order 14(2).

SUSPENSION OF STANDING ORDER 14(2)

The Speaker: This reads, “On all other days than Thursdays, Government Business shall have precedence over private Members' business.”

The Honourable Minister for Planning, Communication and Works.

Hon. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

I move the suspension of Standing Order 14 (2) to allow Private Members' Motions to continue on a day beyond Thursday.

The Speaker: I shall now put the question we suspend Standing Order 14(2). Those in favour please say Aye. Those against, No.

AYES.

The Speaker: The Ayes have it. Standing Order 14(2) has been suspended.

AGREED: STANDING ORDER 14(2) SUSPENDED TO ALLOW OTHER BUSINESS TO TAKE PRECEDENCE OVER GOVERNMENT BUSINESS.

The Speaker: Moving on to Other Business. Private Members' Motions. Private Member's Motion No. 17/01 entitled Pension Deductions. The Motion is open for debate.

Does any Member wish to speak? Does any Member wish to speak? Final call, does any other Member wish to speak?

The Second Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman.

OTHER BUSINESS

PRIVATE MEMBERS' MOTIONS

PRIVATE MEMBER'S MOTION NO. 17/01

PENSION DEDUCTIONS

Mr. Lyndon L. Martin: Mr Speaker, as the Seconder of this Motion I endorse what has been contributed so far by the Second Elected Member for Bodden Town. I also thank the Third Elected Member for George Town for his very positive and insightful contribution.

The issue covered in this Motion goes a lot farther than just pensions. The impact of pensions and the accumulation of forced savings have a larger economic impact and we must look carefully at our current situation in this country to truly appreciate the merit of this Motion.

Mr. Speaker, we commonly refer to the Cayman Islands' economy as standing on two pillars, the twin pillars of financial services and tourism. As we can all appreciate, any house built on two pillars alone is not a stable foundation. However, years of advocating and purporting diversification of our economic base has not been met with any real results. It is commonly accepted that one of the reasons for the failure of any plans aimed at diversifying our economic base is lack of capitalisation.

The twin pillars which we rely on so heavily are pillars that generate substantial economic wealth. However, the ownership of that wealth is in the hands of predominantly foreign investors. So, over the years, we have developed two industries that resulted, by their very nature, in significant amounts of the wealth being remitted overseas.

For the past five decades we have experienced economic prosperity that has made us the envy, certainly, of the Caribbean. In the early days of the economic boom through the eighties, we were experiencing growth rates that would put us at the envy of the world. However, that prosperity was not accompanied with an effective, progressive immigration policy that would have resulted in the accumulated economic wealth during that period of prosperity, where indigenous Caymanians would have benefited. This prosperity can be characterised as periods of economic balloons—periods that did not have true sustainability behind them. Consequently, our population is one that finds itself challenged to provide necessary economic diversification, and a larger and more diverse economic base because it lacks the capitalisation necessary to do the investment.

As a country, at this stage of our development, what we should be seeing are private individuals monitoring trends in our country and coming out with business initiatives—indigenous Caymanians stepping up to the plate to provide the services and products that are being demanded. There is one simple example I am quite familiar with, so I will refer to it. It is amazing if you review the tariffs of this country and the figures for the importation of a product that is so easily produced, like eggs, which have such a fixed demand, an inelastic demand. We should have individuals who look at the immense amount of eggs imported in this country and see how easy it is to set up a facility.

We should have had an indigenous Caymanian, who found himself in a position where he or she could go and make the necessary investment, produce and substitute the importation of a product with a local product, providing a wider domestic commerce base that will ultimately help in the sustainability of our economic prosperity.

However, Mr. Speaker, it is not the lack of ideas, ambition or know-how that prevents our people from getting into such initiatives that this economy needs so greatly; it is the lack of capitalisation. The Chamber of Commerce can bear it out that most businesses in this country, including our national airline, suffer as a result of lack of capitalisation.

Government, itself, suffers as a result of lack of capitalisation—soft money that it could invest into projects and generate cash flows. That will not only sustain the repayments on the bonds that are necessary to raise this money in the instance of government, but will also make positive cash contributions to the coffers of the Cayman Islands' Government. We find ourselves in a position where due to our periods of economic prosperity and boasting, thereof, we are no longer eligible for soft loans from the Caribbean Development Bank (CDB). We are finding where we are trying to fund our projects at commercial interest rates.

The Speaker: If I could interrupt you for just a moment. You will tie this to pension deductions?

Mr. Lyndon L. Martin: Mr. Speaker, I am making an argument of the need for capital investment in the Cayman Islands and I will tie the Pension Fund investment locally directly into capitalisation.

The Speaker: Please continue.

Mr. Lyndon L. Martin: Thank you, Mr. Speaker and I appreciate your point.

The economy we have built finds itself in the year 2001 with a conservative estimate from the RIA Express, Quik Cash and MoneyGram—three institutions that make money by sending money earned in this country overseas. That is the nature of their business. Those three institutions cater predominantly to your working man—your low-income individual, because those who work in corporate Cayman are going to wire their money to their accounts overseas.

Over the years through our prosperity we did not have an immigration policy that gave those, whom we have made a part of our country and economy, stability in this economy. They continue to send their money overseas because they are not sure of their tenure here. Immigration has contributed to the Caymanians not truly benefiting as much as they should have but it has also contributed to the fact that those foreign nationals, who have been working here for prolonged periods of time, have no stability so they send their money overseas. A conservative estimate is CI$2 million per month, CI$24 million per year, through those three institutions.

Mr. Speaker, when we add it to those who are using the other mediums of transferring money overseas, such as wire transfers, Western Union and the other institutions that cater to that direct investment, the portion of the Gross Domestic Product (GDP) of the Cayman Islands is estimated at $686 million (as adjusted for inflation, the real GDP), a significant portion of that leaves this country.

The argument I have put forward would come to some $70 million from personal emoluments which leaves this country. We have also developed an economy in which the ownership of the wealth is by predominantly foreign nationals. So, not only do personal emoluments leave but corporate profits also leave the country.

Mr. Speaker, I do not advocate to having accurate figures but I have fairly good estimates on this because there is a lack of such information. However, from my preliminary review, it would appear that some 40 to 45 percent of the GDP that is produced in this country is remitted overseas. This is compounded by the pension deductions.

At this point I would make a point of clarity. The Motion reads to the National Pension Law, but as we know they are two pieces of legislation that govern pensions in this country, the National Pension Law and the Public Service Pension Law. It is my intention to incorporate the two and not limit it to just the National Pension. So, I am including the Public Service Pension Fund into my contribution so my figures of annual deductions will be greater than that detailed by the Second Elected Member from Bodden Town because it includes the Public Service Pension Fund.

Mr. Speaker, 10 percent of all salaries and wages in this country accumulate into a massive fund which currently is predominately invested overseas, in the United States of America. This compounded on the other economic leakages, previously detailed, and we must take into account that when money leaves this country there is an opportunity lost. If that money stayed here it would not only yield the exact amount but it would have had a multiplier effect because that money would have stayed here and would have been invested here. It has a multiple effect.

Mr. Speaker, with the multiplier effect on the leakages we are remitting and losing more economic wealth in this country than we can afford. I urge those with the responsibility and the resources in the Government to survey and report upon the effects of economic leakages. When we report figures such as the GDP and our per capita income, it is not reflecting truly the state of Cayman's economy because a lot of that leaves the country.

I have made a point so far that a significant amount of money leaves our country and a great portion of that is the 7 percent of our GDP which is directly related to pension deductions. It leaves this country and goes to another country to be invested—hard-earned money by Caymanians—in things such as low-income mortgage schemes and capitalisation programmes.

We need to fully understand that pension in this country is a much broader concept than simple benefits at the time of retirement. Pension must be looked at from its social and economic role. Pension must be looked at as a means that an economy uses to assist the populace with sustained orderly social economic growth and development. We must ensure that when our populace reaches that age of retirement they do not suddenly stop their contribution to the social and economic development of the country. They must still have a means to contribute into the economy and participate in the community.

The Government recently elected some seven or eight months ago, provided this country with a hope of a government that would be fresh, proactive, contemporary, and progressive—a new style of governance. I am suggesting and submitting to this Honourable House that we accept this goal for our pension scheme. This is one that will provide our populace with a method that they can still contribute to society and to the economy once they reach their golden years. In a small country of some 39,000 people it is imperative that when our populace, (which is fairly aged looking at the demographics), reach that age of retirement they do not suddenly drop out of the economic picture. We must make sure they maintain their dignity and integrity because they can support themselves. If we do not, the opposite effect occurs. They do not become positive contributors to the economy. They become a drain on the economy if there is no effective pension law in place. They become a drain on social services and they take out and do not contribute. So, the pension is needed.

However, in Cayman's context, it goes even further. In addition to having an economy which was built on burst periods with no sustainability and without having a proper immigration policy in place and the resulting accumulation to the indigenous populace, we also have an inbred cultural problem in this country. Caymanians, by their nature, think individualistically rather than collectively. We do not bond together as groups of individuals who pool our funds and invest together. We want to look at what we can do for ourselves. We are building small individual empires rather than a large collective empire.

Mr. Speaker, I give special note to certain exceptions to this, such as, respected families like your own, who bonded together because of blood relationships and have made good and positive contributions to this economy. While on that subject I think it is important because it helps us build a foundation for why we need to assess and force collective investments through a pension scheme requiring 50 percent to be invested locally.

Mr. Speaker, our history was one in which a merchant class was developed. As a result, normally your merchants were also your ship owners or closely connected. Our men went to sea on these boats and the wives stayed home and ran credit with the merchants. When our seamen returned home, the wages owed to the seamen would be applied against the credit accrued and in normal circumstances the credit far exceeded the wages owed. So, the merchants always had the ability to control, direct and manipulate life in this country.

That merchant class still continues because when our seamen returned home, rather than pooling their funds and providing this country with some of the services they needed, they took an individualistic approach. They built their own house, bought their own cars and looked at themselves only. As an individual, he or she did not have the funds or the resources to venture into some of the opportunities now prevalent. However, the merchants succeeded and it still remains that those very same merchants who developed from this period are still the same merchants who are operating. That is the only ownership we have in this country of its economic resources, those that developed over a long history.

The rest of our development and the rest of our needs have been met by foreign nationals. I must make it clear that I commend the merchants because it is the only part that has allowed us to gain a certain portion of the economic prosperity. We failed as a nation, as individuals and as a culture to bond our resources together. We are an individualistic country. We think individualistically rather than collectively.

Pensions were introduced in this country some three years ago. This forced individuals to save and created a collective fund—a fund where everyone was contributing and which is now in excess of $200 million. It is the first time we have had a vehicle that has forced savings and collective savings together.

Mr. Speaker, in broadening the scope of pension, it is my goal as a Legislator not only to have safe pensions and to ensure that when an individual comes to the point of his or her retirement that he or she has some fixed source of income, it is my goal to ensure that the fixed source of income is not being used to rent an apartment. It is also my goal to use some of the collective savings to better that individual, during his productive time, to own a home, a business, and be part of the economic wealth of this country. So, when he comes to his retirement age, he has paid off his mortgage, that he got through a low-income housing scheme funded by the issuance of bonds from the Housing Development Corporation, for example, to raise a source of low-interest money. He is now sitting in his home that he owns and generates a cheque each month because of his pension.

So, pension plays the two roles of ensuring a steady, fixed source of income and also to ensure that, when the individual reaches those golden years, he has an infrastructure, personally and island-wide, that he can appreciate. He also has good medical services to help him in his golden years when he needs it because the Government has accepted a Motion that requires 50 percent of the $200 plus million to be invested locally. That then allows the Cayman Islands Government to issue bonds to fund its much needed capital projects, including better schools, hospitals and general infrastructure. Therefore when that individual reaches his golden years, he has the funds to support his life and he has the infrastructure so that his golden years are really 'golden'.

Mr. Speaker, in this country we have 15,108 residents, according to the census in 1998, who were renting their accommodation rather than mortgage-owned or personally owned. That is telling me that we have an issue. This is because there are far too many people renting, considering the total population is only 39,000. We must broaden the goal of our economic role to include housing. We must seek to provide home ownership to our people. In a Motion that was unanimously accepted by this House recently, it was accepted that we need to address the issue of low-income mortgages. It was stated that one of the great challenges was that we needed a source of good low-income money.

It is my position that through the Motion such as the one before this House right now, we can ensure that our citizens are getting the type of representation they deserve. When previous parliamentarians stood in here and passed a pension law, they were not thinking of whether the public would be accepting something popular or not. They were thinking of what is best for the public in their future. We must do something of equal significance by widening the impact of the pension not only to generate a steady stream of income but to ensure that the individual can truly enjoy and benefit from that income when it is realised, when they reach a certain age of retirement.

The decision to support or not to support this Motion has two parts. Simple question in a nutshell. First, should we as legislators and as a country, want some or all of the money that is generated in this country to remain and to be invested in this country? On that question I have spoken and in my position it is a definitive, "Yes". We should want the money to remain here and to be invested here.

The second part of the question is: can we have this sort of money invested in this country and have the appropriate financial instrument and vehicles without subjecting the pensioners to adverse risk? I also submit to that portion of the question, my answer is a definitive "Yes" and I will address that. Prior to addressing it I want to talk a little bit about a country that is nationalistic rather than individualistic.

For all of us who know a Bahamian and nationals from so many other Caribbean islands, we know that one of the things which differentiates them from us is that they are nationalistic. I want to talk a little bit about the Bahamas.

The Bahamas governs its pension under the National Insurance Act. The National Insurance Act provides for the National Insurance Board (NIB). I will read a little bit of the Mission of the NIB in enacting the National Insurance Act and Regulations: "To provide social security coverage in the form of benefit payments to insured persons and their dependants against the following contingencies; sickness, funeral, invalidity, maternity, retirement, drawing it to the pension, and on the death of the family's bread-winner survivorship, industrial injury including disablement, death and medical care."

"Secondly, to provide minimum level of social security coverage for persons who do not qualify for such benefits as of right. And thirdly, to effectively and efficiently administer and manage the national programme and fund in accordance with the fiduciary principle laid out in the National Insurance Act and Regulations and thereby assist with the sustained orderly social economic growth and development of the country."

I simply read the Mission to illustrate where in the Bahamas it is covered under insurance law. It is covering pension; it is covering the use of a fund similar to the fund we are addressing, although it is wider and larger. The National Insurance Act Schedule 3 with the 1998 amendments, the section captioned 'Powers of Board to invest: Part 2: Investment'. "The Board may invest any monies forming part of the National Insurance Fund whether in a state of investment or not, either temporarily or permanently in accordance with the provisions of this schedule". This is the important section. It says, "...provided that the Board shall not invest in property or securities outside of the Bahamas without general or special directions of the Minister after he has obtained the concurrence of the Minister of Finance".

The Bahamas ensures that its funds generated in its country are invested locally. It has the provisions in it which allows them to invest overseas but they have to get permission. However, I do not advocate that we should draft our legislation in the same way that requires the permission of a Minister because that has other problems.

This Motion does not seek to address it. It simply seeks to legislate that 50 percent is invested locally. The other 50 percent can be invested overseas as long as it complies with all of the safeguards provided in the National Pension Law. A country that is truly progressive, a country that is truly nationalistic, ensures that that money is invested locally, ensures that the economic impact is felt by the same people who are generating it.

Our National Insurance Bill is quite comprehensive. It provides the dos and don'ts of pension in the country. It was introduced as a Law not as a scheme. It should have been introduced as a scheme where people could have appreciated that it did not simply legislate how you do and do not do it and regulate the use of the fund. However, it did help but as a scheme it would have introduced areas to ensure that a benefit was coming back to the people. Our Law outlines the instruments that can be used. The Law was written after wide consultation to ensure that the Law required the professional pension providers to have a balance between risk and safety, high returns to fixed income. It ensured that that diversification was there; it ensured that the pensioners were not going to be subject to adverse risks beyond the level of acceptability to the individual.

Our Law also went on ... and I am reading from the National Pension Funds Regulations (1998 Revision) which covers in Section 4 the don'ts, things that we cannot do with pension money. This Motion does not seek to violate any of the don'ts. This Motion is not advocating that we invest into real estate which is a speculative investment at best. Our Laws clearly state that we cannot invest in real estate. It does not suggest venture capital, it simply says, invested locally. Our Law provides where 45 percent of the money can be invested locally now. The current Law has three sections that allow up to 45 percent to be invested. Although it was suggested that to accommodate this Motion there would be major amendments needed to our legislation, is not the case.

It is my suggestion that there is only one amendment needed in the instruments that we can invest in, to allow for up to 50 percent and that is quite clear. Where it says, "bonds issued by United States Treasury". Mr. Speaker, I am an advocate of being able to invest in the bonds issued by the Cayman Islands' Government. This year, we are looking for almost $56 million which I am not sure has been secured as yet and I will not comment on that. It would be nice and that itself would absorb a year's worth of pension contributions. I do not see anything that would suggest that next year and the year after that we are not going to need a large sum of money. There is a massive amount of infrastructural work that is needed in this country.

This is the only amendment that I see is needed and it is an amendment that I think is a safe amendment, because I have the confidence in the Cayman Islands' Government. For those who would suggest that it is not safe to invest in the Cayman Islands' Government through the professional pension providers and I, for one, am not suggesting that in any way, the Minister responsible for pensions alluded to the fact that the state gets involved in pension. No, Mr. Speaker, the professional pension providers will still be there but now they are required to invest 50 percent locally so they can invest in government bonds, bonds issued by the Cayman Islands' Government to raise funds to support our capital projects.

Mr. Speaker, for anyone to suggest, especially anyone in this Legislative Assembly, who has the responsibility right here and now, to control, influence the future and stability of this country and this Government and to suggest that we do not have the confidence for our pension providers to invest into government is stating that we do not have confidence in our own ability to shape the future of this country. I strongly suggest and submit that this is a simple situation of the chicken and egg. They say we do not have the instruments in which to invest this money but if the money is there the instruments will be created and the Motion gives ten years, a decade, for the instruments to be created. It provides the Cayman Islands up to ten years to be able to come up with the infrastructure necessary to issue bonds so that the private pension providers, those professionals that have a responsibility to their clients, can purchase bonds from government.

We have things such as water in this country which we know that the public will buy, if it is provided to them but we do not have water throughout this country. Why? The only answer is that we do not have proper capitalisation to fund these projects and once they are funded they will generate positive cash frames because people will always need water. That is one example.

On the argument of lack of instruments, this country has a public utility company, Caribbean Utilities Company (CUC), which is guaranteed 15 percent profitability. They have to go to Canada to raise their money. We have our own local Stock Exchange. Why can they not be traded on the Stock Exchange and their shares listed? This being in accordance with the Law because the Law says small to medium capitalisation equities which are traded publicly. Up to 10 percent of the total value of the pension fund can be invested. Why should they have to go to Canada where Canadians can buy and benefit from one of the only securities that you are going to be guaranteed a 15 percent return?

Mr. Speaker, with such investments, why should the Canadians be benefiting where the Caymanians are the ones who are generating and paying it to CUC, and creating the demand to ensure that they are getting that 15 percent? Why should they not be benefiting from it? Why should their pension scheme not be growing as a result of such a beautiful and attractive investment? I challenge anyone who can discredit the attractiveness of such an investment.

Why should a Caymanian not be able to come up with a business idea, prepare a prospectus, go to the Cayman Islands Stock Exchange, negotiate with them, go through the auditing regime, go through the necessary procedures to ensure that there is feasibility, list his ventures and raise his funds through Cayman's Stock Exchange, and develop a secondary market? Mr. Speaker, the instruments are not the problem, maybe the problem is the will.

There is one thing that can always be counted on when you talk on pensions in a country. It will always be adversarial and confrontational because you are talking about something extremely important. The Mover, or the Seconder, or anyone else of this Motion is not in anyway suggesting that we do anything to reduce the effectiveness of the pension scheme of its mandate of providing a secured fixed income for the retirees. It is simply adding to it. It is allowing it to accomplish that goal as well as the funds to be invested to accomplish some other very attractive and meaningful goals that a government should have which advocates good governance.

The Law creates a fiduciary relationship between the providers of pension and the pensioners. It creates a relationship in which the pension provider has an obligation to seek maximum return for that individual within an acceptable level of risk and within the Law that governs it. This Motion in no way threatens that fiduciary responsibility. It does not suggest that it will bring the level of return down on a pension. That is my position when I say it will not. The professional pension provider is simply now carrying out his fiduciary responsibility with one additional parameter in place and that is, that 50 percent should be invested locally.

Mr. Speaker, in my mind and in my way of thinking, the "should we?" question is quite straightforward.

ward. Should we expect that the people of the Cayman Islands who work hard for their money, which accumulates into a national pension fund, would agree to the fact that some of that money ought to be invested locally? That is a simple question and the answer is even simpler, "Yes". To suggest that there is an inadequate amount of instruments or vehicles in a country that is so starved for investments is ludicrous. We must find the vehicles. We are the legislators of this country. If we have ten years we must find the instruments to ensure that this can be done. That is the "can we?" question.

Mr. Speaker, we should and we can. This Motion is the do and it is the will. I make my position quite clear when it comes to the vote, I will be doing for the people of the Cayman Islands and be voting and supporting this Motion. I ask for each member in this Legislative Assembly to give this Motion their support when it comes to the vote.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

PROCEEDINGS RESUMED AT 12.22 PM

The Speaker: Please be seated.

Debate continuing on Private Member's Motion No. 17/01.

The Second Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. Alden M. McLaughlin, Jr.: I rise to offer my short contribution to the debate on this Motion that seeks to have the National Pensions' Law and, by inference, the regulations thereto amended to require that at least 50 percent of the premiums paid in relation to pension plans in this country be invested locally and that such an event does happen within ten years of the passage of the Motion.

I acknowledge that the intention of the Motion and of the Mover and Seconder thereof are laudable, but, I believe, misconceived. Both the Mover and the Seconder developed very attractive arguments based on the need for more capital investment in the local economy. That is entirely true. Lack of capitalisation does and has inhibited the development of a number of local industries. I do believe that every effort should be made to develop and encourage access to capital by local entrepreneurs. I do not believe that the way to do that is by having the Law mandate that 50 percent of the pension fund be invested in the local economy and thereby create that needed capital.

I believe in the debate which has ensued by the Second Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman, and the Second Elected Member for Bodden Town, who moved the Motion, that both Honourable Members have ignored the fundamental objective of a pensions' scheme, and the National Pensions' Law.

The fundamental objectives of the Law and of any pensions' scheme, is not to create a source of local capital available and required for investment in the local economy. When the National Pensions' Law was passed in 1996, it established a mandatory pension scheme aimed at ensuring that, at the culmination of employees' working lives in these Islands, there would be sufficient means available to those employees for them to live out the balance of their natural lives. There would be a degree of decency and dignity and no need for other gainful employment or the country and government to provide them with handouts to ensure they could live. That is the objective of any pensions' scheme.

The fact that the money paid into those pension funds is invested in the local economy or elsewhere is a valuable spin-off. I do not for a moment seek to belittle that. However, we should never lose sight of the fundamental objective of the Law and the philosophy which underlies it.

The legislation contains various safeguards throughout to ensure that the hard-earned money of those employed in these Islands is safely invested in vehicles, which in the long run will yield positive growth and consequentially sufficient returns. Therefore, those who have invested in the fund will have available to them reasonable sums to ensure that they can continue to live decently at the end of their working lives.

The Law also provides in some length for the qualifications and requirements of those who are required to administer a pension fund. Section 8(3) of the Law provides that "an administrator shall ensure that the administration, custodianship, and investment of the pension plan and fund are undertaken by qualified and experienced persons or bodies."

In Section 17 of the Law it provides for the degree of diligence, care and skill which are required of an administrator.

Section 17(1) provides that an "administrator shall (a) exercise the care, diligence and skill in the administration of a pension plan and in the management and investment of the pension fund that a person of ordinary prudence would exercise in dealing with the property of another; and (b) use in the administration of a pension plan and in the management and investment of a pension fund all relevant knowledge, and skill that, by reason of the administrator's profession, business or calling, he ought to possess."

Section 17(2) provides that "An administrator or, where the administrator is a pension committee or a board of trustees, a member of the committee or board, shall not knowingly permit the administrator's private interests to conflict with his duties and powers in respect of the pension fund."

The whole objective of the legislation and the two sections to which I referred, is to ensure that qualified individuals are charged with the administration of a pension fund and with the investment of that fund. There are serious consequences for mismanagement by an administrator of a pension fund.

The National Pension Fund Investment Regulations deals with the issue of asset allocation. Set out in extenso are the areas in which an administrator can invest the fund and it breaks it down the various percentages that are permissible in various categories of investment vehicles. Under regulation 3, which deals with asset allocation, it is possible for the administrator to invest 10 percent of the market value of the assets of the pension fund in small to medium capitalisation equities which are traded publicly. It is also possible for an administrator to invest a further 10 percent of the market value of the assets of the pension fund in fully secured first mortgages in these Islands and a further 25 percent of the market value of the assets of the pension fund can be invested in fixed term deposits or cash held with a bank rated as investment grade or a clearing bank in these islands.

So, it is possible for an administrator to invest a maximum of 45 percent of the pension fund in assets or vehicles within these Islands. What the Motion seeks to do is to mandate that an administrator must invest at least 50 percent of the pension fund in these Islands—a very different thing.

I was at pains at the start of my debate to demonstrate the responsibilities, requirements and expectations of an administrator of a pension fund. These are qualified individuals who have the ability, the know-how and the experience to understand the market and the impact of changes within the global economy on investments.

As the Law and regulations currently stand, within the parameters prescribed in regulation 3 which deals with asset allocation, these qualified administrators have the ability to examine the market and determine where, within the parameters of that regulation, the best investments are from whence the best returns can be obtained with the least possible risk.

What the Motion seeks to do is tie the hands of the qualified administrators and mandate, regardless of the state of the local economy, the risk involved in investing 50 percent of the pension fund of these Islands, no matter how dire the consequences may be.

Mr. Gilbert A. McLean: On a point of order, Mr. Speaker.

POINT OF ORDER

The Speaker: May I hear your point of order?

Mr. Gilbert A. McLean: There is nothing in the Motion before the House which states that administrators of pension funds must invest in instruments in the Cayman Islands no matter how dire the economy of the country, or how much risk is involved. In fact, it provides that it must be done over a ten-year period and expresses no amount to be invested over that period of time. Therefore, the Member is misleading the House.

The Speaker: I hear your point of order. My concern is that the amendment to the Motion said, "...at least 50 percent." I will call that a point of order.

Mr. Alden M. McLaughlin, Jr.: If the Member is now proposing to amend his Motion again, I am prepared to give way and allow him to carry out that exercise. Unless that is the case, I stand by what I say that the consequence of the proposed amendment which the Motion proposes is to mandate that at least 50 percent of the pension fund in these Islands must be invested in the local economy regardless of the consequences.

The Speaker: The only thing that you did not say ... you put a timeframe on that within a period of ten years.

Mr. Alden M. McLaughlin, Jr.: Yes, Mr. Speaker, and I said that at the start. It is within a ten-year period commencing in 2002.

The Speaker: Please continue.

Mr. Alden M. McLaughlin, Jr.: There seems to be some discontent with what I have said, but there are logical consequences that flow from actions.

The Cayman economy, as much as we all hold it dear, and although it has been tremendously successful over the course of the last three decades or so, it is by world standards a very small one. Consequently, the various investment opportunities available are small. While I am as nationalistic as anyone else and I indicated at the start of my debate that I too would like to see available more capital for entrepreneurs to have access to and while I understand that it is necessary to do various things to stimulate the economy, I do not believe that we can subject the hard-earned money of contributors to a national pension plan to the type of risk that investing 50 percent of it in the Cayman Islands involves.

The percentage which should be invested in these Islands is a matter that should remain to the extent permitted by the regulations within the remit of those who are most qualified to make those decisions about investments; those who are paid to do so.

Looking at it from yet another perspective: if this Motion were accepted and it did require the Law and regulations to be amended so that at least 50 percent of the pension fund had to be invested locally, and the local economy did not perform the way we all hoped it would, and, as a result, the pension fund suffered major losses, who is going to be responsible for that? The blame would be placed fairly and squarely on the Cayman Islands' Government. That is who will be held responsible.

Further, to compound that, in the event the pension fund does not perform and does not provide adequate returns to enable the contributors to the fund to receive sufficient money to live a decent and dignified lifestyle, whose door are they going to come knocking on for assistance for their housing, living expenses and health care? Government!

Mr. Speaker, as I said, when I commenced my debate, I entirely understand the objective of the Motion, and while it is well intentioned, I believe that it would be wrong thing for us to interfere with the National Pensions' Law and Regulations. This would create uncertainty, anxiety, risk and develop a feeling within employees of this country that, notwithstanding the assurances they previously received and which they believed, now government is going to interfere with that and make provisions which tie the hands of their expert administrators in such a way that it could negatively impact their pension schemes and the returns they hoped to derive therefrom during their twilight years.

For all of those reasons, I cannot give this Motion my support.

The Speaker: Would Members prefer to take the luncheon break before the Mover....,

If no other Member wishes to speak, would the Mover care to—

The Elected Member for East End.

Mr. V. Arden McLean: Mr. Speaker, I rise to make a very short contribution to the Motion before us. Let me begin by saying that I understand where this Motion is coming from. I see the merit of it. I understand the need to have capital investments particularly in today's age when the economy seems down, not only in the Cayman Islands but elsewhere. However, there are a few points that I would like to bring to the fore.

One of the biggest concerns I have had over many years is the problem of any government getting involved in the private sector and borrowing or spending private citizens' money. In particular, we look at the social security system in America. Over many years the government of the United States has played with social security which in essence was created for the same purpose of a pension. Today, the U.S. government is scrambling to try to put the monies back into social security which were wasted without consideration for the recipients.

While I know this Motion is not calling for government to spend this or give government the right to invest the national pension money, nevertheless, I have heard other speakers talk about the building of the hospital and the like and government borrowing. Certainly when borrowing, government looks for an extremely low interest rate. I believe the purpose of any investment is to try to get as much return on that investment as possible. Because of the limited amount of investment possibilities here in the country with great returns, I believe it would be foolhardy to ask anyone to invest that amount of money in these low-interest loans.

I believe the architects of the regulations to the Pensions Law had similar thoughts in mind when they made provisions under the asset allocation section of the regulation, that certain amounts could be invested in the Cayman Islands. For instance, the small to medium capitalisation equities would be ideal in this country to invest the 10 percent provided for. Then another 10 percent could be invested in fully secured first mortgages.

There is a 20 percent possibility in fixed term deposits or cash at a bank in the Cayman Islands. Like previous Members have said, that equates to 45 percent that could possibly be invested in the Cayman Islands. I have not heard anybody say how much of that possibility has been invested in the Cayman Islands. Maybe it would be interesting to hear how much that is. I will not speculate.

I would like to see money invested in this country as well. I do not want to see the administrators of these funds handicapped by saying there is a specific amount that must be invested in the Cayman Islands. If we look at the schedule in the regulations, it names the Cayman Islands. It says, "Stock Exchanges on which securities must be traded in order to be traded publicly for the purpose of these regulations." There are very few companies in this country traded overseas or registered on overseas stock exchanges. I can think of one, CUC. It is registered with the Toronto Stock Exchange, and I believe the Cayman Water Company is with the National Association of Securities' Dealers (NASDAQ). I think those are the only two. I think the others, like Cayman National Bank (CNB), are traded locally.

The provisions in the regulations make it possible for the administrators to do this. There are a number of stock exchanges listed in the schedule for that and I believe the reason so many were given, is to enable the risk to be spread out much better in the investment of these funds. I also believe that the asset allocation was specifically done to prevent a total loss of those funds when that possibility arises where we have a fall in the stock and investments.

In any investment, we expect good returns. This is the reason why we invest and spread the risk out over many different areas. Certainly, the stock markets are down now, and I am sure the returns are much lower than they were two years ago. That does not mean that we have to use that money to try and revive an economy by lending it out in low interest loans. Yes, it takes some time for these returns to get back to the level that we all expect them to be on. When we extrapolate, we cannot live 20 years from now on mere basic investment of these funds. There has to be some risk taken to try to make the returns bigger.

Because of the local market, I do not believe that by investing 50 percent in that market we will get as good a return as we would by spreading that risk over other markets such as the large capitalisation markets.

A previous speaker mentioned that there may be up to $200 million available in that pension fund, collectively. Half of that is $100 million to be invested locally over the next ten years. If this Motion gets passage, in the regulations there is provision for 45 percent, which is $90 million.

Perhaps it would be easier for us to add another five percent, and maybe on the secured first mortgages, government might be receptive to changing the 10 to 15. Then we will get some 15 percent. Right now, if it were 10 percent, that would be $20 million that could be invested in the secured first mortgages which could also be used for affordable housing in the Cayman Islands.

I believe that if we put forward the proper plan and proper repayment, that those administrators would jump at the opportunity to invest $20 million within the Cayman Islands, particularly if the Government was securing it. While the returns may not be as large as investments in a high risk area, I am sure that $20 million would do well in the investment in the Cayman Islands.

I mentioned earlier that I have no knowledge of how much is invested here. It is my understanding that the administrators of these funds do invest locally whenever the opportunity arises. It is also my understanding that it is not a requirement for the administrators to inform the superintendent of pensions, but it is understood that, whenever the opportunities avail themselves, they take advantage of those opportunities locally.

I prefer that way of giving the administrators flexibility. In case we were to say 50 percent and that equates to $100 million, and for some reason or another investment opportunities were not available on the Island. The administrators would then have an abundance of cash probably deposited on fixed term deposits or held in a cash account in this country under subsection 3(c)(6) of the Pension Regulations.

If that were the case, then we would have them investing in all opportunities and there could be the possibility that they could have $50 million on their hands which would be gaining three or four percent, which really does not pay. If they were unrestricted to invest it they could be putting that in large capital markets where more returns would accrue, thus giving the pensioner that much more opportunity at retirement time.

I understand that the Bahamas mandates it must be invested locally. Well, I support them investing locally. Certainly, in the Bahamas, there are many more investment opportunities when it comes to capitalisation equity, than what is available in the Cayman Islands.

We have our Stock Exchange but a lot of those companies do not have ... well, the large capitalisation equity means equity of a company that has equity capitalisation equal to, or more than that of the company ranked 470th in the equity market capitalisation in the Standard and Poor's 500 Index from time to time. We know we do not have any of those. We may have the medium term ones which are those other than what I previously described as per the regulation.

I agree that if there was some way to get the 45 percent that is currently possible to be invested in this country now. I would certainly support that 45 percent being put back into this community, particularly if the returns on the long term basis were good. I cannot, in all fairness, tie the hands of any administrator by Law in this country. There has to be some flexibility. Time is moving on and they have to invest this money.

Not all administrators are as prudent as we would like them to be. By the same token, they have certain responsibilities under which they have to operate and when they do not, there are certain consequences. Those consequences are laid out within the Law. When we tie their hands and they say, 'You did it therefore the national pension 30 years from now cannot fund the amount of pensioners,' then the egg is on our face as Legislators.

I, too, have a responsibility as a legislator to ensure that the people's rights are protected, in particular, their monies and their hard-earned cash which they contributed to the pension. One of the things we need to ensure is that every working person in this country has a pension. I believe enforcement of that aspect is much more important than where that money is invested. I believe that there are employers in this country who have yet to provide a pension plan under the Law. That is more important than us talking about where the money is going to be invested.

We have to look at getting our people on a plan. Under the regulation in the Law, I believe if the money is there, they are well protected. There are employers in this country who collect the monies from the employees and have no plan. That is what the Superintendent of Pensions needs to be looking at. We need to police that. If they do not have it we need not talk about where we are going to invest it. That is where we need to start. If they are not doing it with the insurance, I am sure they are not doing it with the pensions.

There are many stories about deductions being taken, but no contributions being made with insurance and pension. You may find out about the insurance as soon as you get ill but the pension is the one that can be abused. That is long term. In a lot of instances those who are just going into the workforce when they are ready to retire may find out that their employers were not contributing to any plan and then the country has to take care of them. We need to look at that.

I understand where this Motion is coming from and I support the concept. However, it is going to be difficult for me if I do not know how much is currently being invested in the Cayman Islands. There has to be some figure placed on that. I am sure the administrators of these pensions are qualified people. I am sure they would make sound judgements, or I would like to think they would. If they do not then I am sure it will be pulled from them.

The mere fact is that they are living in this country and understand the economic downturn. It would be in their interest to invest in this country as well. Without the country, they have no job! I would like to hear from the Mover of the Motion as to what information he has on how much is currently invested in the Cayman Islands under the National Pensions' Law in accordance with the regulations.

I have some concerns. I cannot tie the hands of any administrator. I will not support government meddling in anybody's private money. We know what history has shown us. That is, every time government gets its hands on a big sum of money they play politics with it. If they know it is available they are going into the piggy bank. They are going into the candy jar. Then they feel no obligation to refill it! That is worldwide. Much closer to home we have had instances where the environmental protection fund was abused. The reason it was put there was not defined. They called it the "green fund." Maybe that is because it is supposed to be for the birds and the bees and the trees. No one defined it, and then the financial portfolio was instructed to transfer it to build roads.

I cannot support anything that is going to erode the trust people must have in their hard-earned money. I will not support anything which indicates that government is going to meddle in people's hard-earned cash. That must be removed from government because, while I recognise the Motion does not call for that, my fear is that that will be next. Then Government will be bringing in a Motion—and everybody has to understand that we are only here for four years—

The Speaker: Let us not anticipate legislation.

Mr. V. Arden McLean: Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

Nevertheless, we are here for four years and the country is not going to stop. The same legislators will not be here forever. Therefore, others can abuse whatever is put in place now.

I cannot support .... Provisions need to be made for the future too. Let someone else do it. I will not be a party to government getting mixed up in meddling with the people's money, and 20 years from now they sing their Shaggy song, "It wasn't me." I can say today that it was not me.

Thank you.

The Speaker: Does any other Member wish to speak? Does any other Member wish to speak?

The Honourable Acting Temporary Third Official Member responsible for Finance and Economic Development.

Hon. A. Joel Walton: Mr. Speaker, I have listened to the speakers so far this morning. From my reading of the Mover's comments and that of the Minister of Education, I fully sympathise with this issue. It is a difficult one to grapple with.

I sit here myself as a member of the Board of Trustees of the Public Service Pension Fund. I am now its deputy chairman on the one hand and also a participant in that very same fund. I sit here as a Deputy Member with responsibility for economic development. A lot of the issues which were raised throughout the day and previously alluded to, mentioned the whole need for development, the need for financing and things of that nature. So it is a real difficult issue to get a handle on. It is a real paradox in that you are at all times trying to balance the rights of the private individual with the needs and priorities of the State.

The Minister of Education in his contribution explained the Government's position in that the Government was not able to accept the Motion but did undertake to keep the matter under review. The Minister went on to make the point that this whole area of pensions is a relatively new one for us. It is very much in its infancy and that, in light of that particular situation, it is probably best to give it some time to develop until a later date. There is possibility for any government to look at an option to assist locally and it could be made mandatory at that time. I think that makes good sense in light of the situation.

I just want to say a bit about my own experiences as a member of the Public Service Pensions Board of Trustees. Although the Mover did not mention the Public Service Pension Fund in the Motion itself there has been some subsequent debate about that. Therefore, I will spend my time on that more than on the broader issue.

From my experience on the Board of Trustees, we at all times are on the lookout for investment opportunities locally that fall within the criteria of the schedule to the Public Service Pensions Law (2001R) which basically outlines approved investments as follows: 1) Cash, including certificate of deposits; 2) Treasury bills; 3) Foreign government issued bonds; 4) Investment grade corporate bonds; 5) Equities and debt securities of companies that are traded publicly; 6) Collective investment schemes registered on internationally recognised stock exchanges including open-ended and closed-ended mutual or pooled funds which invest in investment grade bonds, mortgages or equities.

Number 3 was quite interesting to note. There has also been some discussion about investing some of the pension fund monies into local government bonds. Certainly we will have to amend the Law to facilitate that. It is an area that I think we need to look into. Just to say that, if a government bond is attractive, we will invest in it once it is possible to do so by Law.

What is a pension? It is a personal savings' account, or investment for retirement. As a trustee, the responsibility of any trustee should at all times be maximising the wealth of an individual beneficiary, pensioner or pensioner to be. A tall order! It forces you into a position of fiduciary responsibility of the highest level. It says to you at all times-search out, with the advice of your investment managers, the best possible investment returns at the least possible risk. Of course, they go hand in hand, possible at all times.

Therefore, if there is an investment opportunity in Cayman, Cayman Brac and Little Cayman, wherever, that fits within the schedule of improved investments that is attractive to the Board of Trustees, they and the professional investment manager will invest in it. I think to go beyond that, i.e. to mandate a certain percentage, will create some limitations to the Board of Trustees and the investment manager. In this particular situation where a pension is a person's private and personal retirement income, governments, no matter which one, need to bear that in mind.

On my other side, where we have the responsibility in the portfolio of finance to promote economic development, certainly the Public Service Pension Fund alone is expected to be around $80 million by the end of this year. This is a very attractive opportunity for us. We think of things like low income housing, a very real need, and other social programmes, very real needs. I submit that there are other ways of dealing with that problem.

For example, in the case of low income housing, the Minister for Housing has made . . . in fact, just this week I was able to talk with the Caribbean Development Bank (CDB) about a proposal made by Government here to get some assistance for low income housing finance. The bank has put together a very attractive package to help the Government and the people of these islands in that area.

I am saying I think we need to bear in mind the need to exhaust all other possible opportunities, as the government has done, by securing help through the CDB for low income housing. This is before we consider fettering the hands of persons who have one primary objective, that is, to make sure that, when persons retire, they retire with an income that can sustain them through retirement and, hopefully, also help them invest on their own steam in the domestic economy. That is the point. People do not just invest in whole retirement incomes because they want to hold them. This is the point I would like to make.

It does seem attractive to try to bring it in now, and I sympathise and understand that. We need to bear in mind at all times that we are talking about individuals and their investment income for retirement.

I would like to mention a couple of other points. The ability of the Caymanian market to produce investment opportunities for these pension funds. One speaker alluded to the fact that there are possibly only two publicly listed companies operating locally. One is CUC and the other is Cayman Water Company. I think the Cayman National Corporation is traded locally but not listed internationally. A lot of the funds we now have in place obviously require that equities be listed and approved in stock exchanges.

One of the things we have been looking at in the portfolio ever since the establishment of the Cayman Stock Exchange (CSX), is the need for us to introduce a domestic trading capability. Currently we do not have that. Again, it goes back to what the Minister of Education mentioned, the need for us to try to develop vehicles locally first. At that time we could then consider other measures, possibly like those mentioned by the Mover and Seconder, as a way of encouraging domestic investment and domestic entities. Until that time comes, it is going to be difficult, even over a 10 year period, or even a 20 year period, to really develop that amount of local domestic capital formation where you can find opportunities to put that money into. It is just severely limited at this point in time.

There was a lot of discussion about money. Just remember at all times that the basic reason money comes to Cayman so freely is because it can leave so freely. When it is here, there are viable and attractive investment opportunities for that money. We do not as a Government and as successive governments have done, restrict the movements of that money. I think the Organization for Economic Co-operation and Development (OECD) in its attempt last year had the same principle in mind that somehow money went into a country and stayed there. It does not work that way.

While I accept the argument that, perhaps from Cayman's development, the domestic population and domestic businesses have not been able to get as much as they might have been able to get under different circumstances from the development, I think we need to bear in mind that there is another side of the coin as well. While we can seek to capture some of that money and keep it here, it certainly is not the way that economies work. Certainly, the Cayman Islands does not depend heavily on foreign investment.

The last point I would like to make is that there are other ways for us as a country to secure money to finance development and address some of the social problems we have, like housing. One such way was that proposed by the Minister for Housing. I would really recommend to this House that we focus on trying to identify and pursue those areas, as opposed to seeking to mandate ways in which private individuals invest their money. Thank you

The Speaker: Would it be convenient to take the afternoon break? We shall suspend for 15 minutes.

PROCEEDING SUSPENDED AT 3.34PM

PROCEEDINGS RESUMED AT 4.01 PM

The Speaker: Please be seated. Proceedings are resumed. Debate continues on Private Member's Motion No. 17/01 as amended. Does any other Member wish to speak?

The Honourable Minister for Planning, Communications and Works.

Hon. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Mr. Speaker, I think we have listened to various arguments on this Motion. Perhaps the one common thread from all sides of the argument is one in which administrators of local pension funds would carefully look for prudent local investments of any portion of these funds to be done through any local instruments. Certainly, the desire is for that to become the reality.

The only position, which causes varying degrees of difference, is, in my view, because of the way the Motion is worded. As is the proposed amended version, and, if I understand it correctly, it reads as follows:

“BE IT RESOLVED THAT, at least, fifty percent of the funds collected from deductions from employees' wages and employers' contribution under the National Pension Law be invested in the Cayman Islands within a period of 10 years commencing in 2002.”

The way the Motion is worded, means it is seeking legislative amendments, as would have to be the case, for it to be accepted. It calls for, at least 50 percent of the funds collected to be invested in the Cayman Islands in some form by whatever instrument, or other types of investments, within a 10 year period beginning next year.

To clarify the Government's position, as stated by the Minister, the Government would very much encourage these fund administrators to be looking from now at whatever possible means conducive to them to invest some of these funds into the local economy. The Government certainly encourages that.

The principles that have been laid down which oppose the Motion simply state, in summary, the difficulty in legislating this matter. If the Law states that this given percentage has to be invested locally and fund administrators find where they have other options, which would allow for greater returns on these investments for example, if the funds were invested elsewhere, then there is a specific infringement on the rights and the responsibilities of these fund administrators to ensure that, with proper risk assessment, the best returns are had for the people who subscribe to the pensions. Again, the difficulty with it is that the first and foremost responsibility is to the people who are paying the money. In that responsibility one has to make the best judgement calls to realise the best return on that investment.

You see, Mr. Speaker, while arguments are being put forward, there is one important factor that has to be considered. If I am subscribing to a pension fund today at age 30, when 30 years have passed and you reach the age of 60 the normal cost for a person to live in this world based on economic history is going to be many times what it costs today. Simple fact! Returns from this investment must surpass normal inflation rates enough so by the time you get to that age of retirement what you have vested will allow you a yield that can be collected on a monthly basis, which should be able to cover your needs at that time. That is the basic principle of a pension fund.

The reason why it is not recommended to do the average investments is because the returns would not allow for that to happen. This is similar to everyone having the self-discipline to put money into a regular savings account and getting the little interest that is paid to that account. That is where the whole problem lies, in the formula.

Again, Mr. Speaker, to make it absolutely clear, the Government's position is, we would encourage the fund administrators strongly to look at investments locally where reasonable returns can be had from the whole spectrum. So, if it warrants it to be done locally then certainly we wish for them to do so. In our opinion it is not the right thing to mandate by Law because we are also saying to them, “We are not sure that we want to leave it to you to get the best return for the person who is subscribing to the pension”.

Arguments have been put forward in other areas to show that not only should we be looking for the best return but we should be looking from a nationalistic point of view whereby investing this money, locally, will allow for certain infrastructural developments to take place. This will cause individuals, as they grow older, to be able to reap those benefits, which may be determined as indirect benefits compared to the actual money the pensioner will receive on a monthly basis. I believe in summary that is the argument that has been put forward.

Now, there are a couple of things I believe need to be addressed and let me go through them to try and clear the points the best way that I can. I am going to refer to the difficulties that will ensue with some of the arguments that are put forward. Mr. Speaker, I crave your indulgence here because I noticed that you did ask the Second Elected Member from Cayman Brac, when he was speaking to certain issues, how he was going to tie this in with his argument. I simply wish to use one of the examples used to show the difficulty and it will relate at the end of the day.

The Speaker: Please continue.

Hon. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Thank you.

Earlier on in his delivery, the Second Elected Member for Cayman Brac, referred to what he called a "simple example." With your permission, I will quote because it explains it better.

He said: "One simple example that I am quite familiar with, so I will refer to it. It is amazing if you review the tariffs of this country and the figures for the importation of a product that is so easily produced like eggs which has such a fixed demand and an inelastic demand. We should have individuals who look at the immense amount of eggs imported in this country and see how easy it is to set up a facility. We should have had an indigenous Caymanian, who found himself in a position where he or she could go and make the necessary investment, produce and substitute the importation of a product with a local product, providing a wider domestic commerce base that will ultimately help in the necessity for sustainability of our economic prosperity."

What I understand from the Second Elected Member for Cayman Brac's argument is that capitalisation of that investment is perhaps one of the areas where such funds could be allowed to be invested. If he was not saying that it is fine because that is not my real point. When he spoke of a tariff . . . you see when you use these examples you need to ensure that perspective is taken from the point which you raised. We stand in here and we argue about the price the consumer pays and the increase in taxes on food items but we speak to tariffs. So, if we are looking at a tariff which is going to increase the cost of the item to the consumer, I am not so sure what the point is.

That is not the main point but notwithstanding that I thought I would pick that up to say I know how it is over there. Any day of the week when you are debating your topic you hold your line of argument and try to get your points to make sure that you score your points. At the same time perspective must be gained with that point. If we are going to talk about allowing someone to start egg production locally and to ensure the sustainability of that industry, we introduce tariffs so that the imported cost of eggs—

POINT OF ELUCIDATION

Mr. Lyndon L. Martin: Excuse me, Mr. Speaker, a point of elucidation.

The Speaker: Will you give way?

The Second Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman.

Mr. Lyndon L. Martin: Just for the point of clarity, the example I drew was at the time in my presentation where I was showing the inadequacies of capital formation through co-operative efforts of individuals working together. The reference to tariff was to quantify the volumes coming into the country now of a particular product, not in anyway indicating that there should be any extra amount paid for importation. Local production would be sustainable simply because of the volume that is currently demanded by the populace now.

Also to clarify: in a later part in my presentation I made it clear that we were not advocating for the pension funds to be used for venture capital. So that states we were not suggesting the pension money be invested into a venture of this nature because the Law clearly prohibits investment into venture capitals.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Planning, Communication and Works, please continue.

Hon. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

I see the Second Elected Member from Cayman Brac was quick enough to pick up that second point too, and since he clarified that I will not refer to it.

I will move on but I was just going through his delivery and was picking out what I thought needed mention.

Mr. Speaker, in the Member's contribution he referred to the Bahamas. I think perhaps this is the most important point I wish to make in my contribution to show that while we all should . . . I am certain the Government will support and recommend that these administrators look to invest locally it is going to be very difficult to have it as part of the legislation.

The Member mentioned the Bahamas. He said, "The Bahamas govern their pension under the National Insurance Act." He also quoted from the National Insurance Act where the Mission of the National Insurance Board is, "To provide social security coverage in the form of benefit payments to insured persons and their dependants against the following contingencies; sickness, funeral, invalidity, maternity, retirement, drawing it to the pension, and on the death of the family's bread-winner survivorship, industrial injury including disablement, death and medical care."

"Secondly, to provide minimum level of social security coverage for persons who do not qualify for such benefits as of right. Thirdly, to effectively and efficiently administer and manage the national programme and fund in accordance with the fiduciary principle laid out in the National Insurance Act and Regulations and thereby assist with the sustained orderly social economic growth and development of the country."

He then spoke of, and I quote: "I simply read the Mission to illustrate that where in the Bahamas it is covered under an insurance law, it is covering pension. It is covering the use of a fund similar to the fund that we are addressing although it is wider and larger."

He goes on to read under the "Powers of Board to invest" . . . where it says, "provided that the Board shall not invest in property or securities outside of the Bahamas without general or special direction of the Minister after he has obtained the concurrence of the Minister of Finance."

He goes on to say, "The Bahamas ensures that its funds generated in its country are invested locally. It has the provisions in it that allows them to invest overseas but has to get permission."

Mr. Chairman, in speaking to the Director of the National Insurance Board, who is in charge of the fund, a Mr. Lenox McCartney, this is how the Bahamas do what they do. They have this fund which is tied in both with some types of insurance, as I have read from the Member's contributions before, but it also deals with pensions. You have a Public Service Pension Fund, which is contributed to, like we do, by the Government and members of the public service. Payments from that are made directly out of the Treasury.

Then there is the National Insurance Fund, which is contributed to, again, by government and private sector, which allows for some type of social security or pension benefits. However, Mr. Speaker, he was quick to say to me that at present none of the funds are being invested outside the country. So, the Member is quite correct in this statement. At present, none of the funds are being invested outside of the country. In fact, the past two actuarial reviews they have had put them into a position where they now accept that they are spending out of the fund to pay out for generations to come. Basically, the fund is living on borrowed time.

What is going to have to happen, and we have gone through the same thing here, we have had debates time and time again here. We speak to our own fund and we speak to the past service liability. When I say our own fund, I mean the Public Service Pension Fund and the Past Service Liability, and why government has had to be funding pension payments out of general revenue because the fund is not self-sustaining. We are now putting what is needed in the fund for it to become self-sustaining, hopefully, within a few short years rather than many years.

It is obvious what was explained to me—and this is not to put the methodology down with what obtains in the Bahamas—was that they now have to restructure and three things have to happen. In order to get the fund right, the gentleman compared the fund they have now to several other jurisdictions which have run into trouble. Like in years gone by when the Social Security Fund in the United States was under funded and in trouble.

There are three things they have to do now. First, the Government is going to have to increase its contribution. Second, the private sector employees and employers are going to have to increase their contribution. Lastly, they are going to have to seek investments outside of the country, which brings better returns than what they have at present. The situation that obtains, at present, as nationalistic as it may be—I have his name and his phone number—is not bringing the returns that are needed for the fund to be anywhere near self-sustaining based on the actuarial review.

So, Mr. Speaker, the point is simply that while you may wish to see certain things happen, you have to ensure that you have the best position possible to bring about the results that are desired. You cannot say . . . I should not say you cannot but I would think that logic would allow, as difficult as it may seem and as desirous a position as that may be, you simply cannot just think that this is the case. If this money is invested locally, while it may do things for the economy, it may not bring about the best results for the people who subscribe to the pension fund. I think that is the problem. It is unfortunate that is the case. Again the Government takes the position that because the primary beneficiary is the person who subscribes to that pension fund, you cannot legislate in a manner that might restrict the returns which may be had from the subscriptions that are put into the pension fund. That is where the philosophical difference is with the position being taken and what the Motion hopes to accomplish.

There is no difference in our minds with regards to what we would like to see. All we are saying is, we have all these fund administrators with their own abilities and expertise to decide what is the best case scenario with regard to these investments. Hopefully, they will include local investments. I really do not know at present how much is being invested locally.

Also, there was mention made about a bond issue being done by the Government. There was a fair amount of talk but I will not go into a lot of detail with that. The gist of what I understood is, because government does not have a bond issue, at present, if we put into Law that this percentage of the pension funds would have to be invested locally that would help to make these bond issues happen and people would invest. That again is a problem. A problem two-fold, because first of all (and I categorically state this) if the Government has a desire to create a bond issue there is no need to look towards any of those pension funds to fulfil its subscription to that bond issue.

No disrespect, but Jamaica, three months ago, had a bond issue of U.S. $275 million and in five weeks it was over-subscribed. There are tons and tons of funds, which are seeking investments, which are fairly safe with reasonable returns. A bond issue will not be a problem for the Cayman Islands once that is the leaning.

The second issue is, and this is the important one, when you look at the Government. If we were to have a bond issue then we are going to barter and come to the point where, again, you strike a balance where you are sure you will get full subscription for the bond issue but at the lowest rate that you have to pay out because that is the name of the game. It is the Government who will have to pay it out, meaning the money that is contributed from the citizens of the country which will be paying the interest on that bond issue.

The fund administrators wish to get the best returns that are possible on the pension funds that are available. So again, if they can get better returns from the Government on the bond issue then you do not want to force their hands. If the Government does have a bond issue with an agreed rate of interest paid by the Government, an acceptable level for the fund administrators with their risk management procedures and the returns that they are expecting from the pension fund, then that is fine. You do not want to legislate this for instance and the Government is then in a position where, on one hand, it has to protect its own citizens by seeking the lowest rate of payment as a return on the bond issue. At the same time, the citizens should get the benefit of the best return on their pension fund. So, there are some conflicting interests there.

Mr. Speaker, I just brought a few of these points out. There are a couple more that I noticed. The Second Elected Member also mentioned that the way the Law reads now—

MOMENT OF INTERRUPTION—4.30 PM

The Speaker: If I may interrupt you for just a moment?

We have reached the hour of interruption but if you will be finishing within a reasonable time, ten or fifteen minutes, is it the will of the House that we continue?

Hon. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Mr. Speaker, I will be finished in a couple of minutes.

The Speaker: Please continue.

Hon. D. Kurt Tibbetts: I was just saying that the Second Elected Member for Cayman Brac also mentioned in his debate that the Law now allows for 45 percent of the funds to be invested locally given the description of the instruments that he referred to. I think that when the Law was being drafted and crafted this was borne in mind. It reflects the position that you would like to take—to encourage these people, if they find the right investments, to make up to 45 percent investment locally. The Member then said that it would call for just a minor amendment.

The difference in what is being proposed and what obtains is that the 45 percent which is allowed now is not mandatory. There is an option.

Mr. Lyndon L. Martin: Mr. Speaker, a point of elucidation, again, please.

The Speaker: Will you give way?

Hon. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Mr. Speaker, I think I am speaking it clearly because I read what he said.

The Speaker: If you will not give way, please continue.

Hon. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Mr. Speaker, let me quote him. He spoke to this venture capital and I have no problem with that because I am not dealing with it. He said: “It does not suggest venture capital, it simply says, invested locally. Our Law provides where 45 percent of the money can be invested locally now. The current Law has three sections that allow up to 45 percent to be invested. So where it was suggested that there would be major amendments needed to our legislation to accommodate this Motion that is not the case.

“It is my suggestion that there is only one amendment needed into the instruments that we can invest in to allow for up to 50 percent and that is quite clear.”

I am simply saying that where the Law allows for it now, what is being sought is for it to say that it has to be. That is my point. It is not a question of not allowing the Member to clear the issue, but I understand what he was saying quite clearly.

This is not the most important point. I think regardless of the amendments that would have to be made to the Law if the Motion was going to bring about, (without a shadow of a doubt), better results then if it meant for the whole Law to be redrafted, so be it. It is not major in the issue.

Mr. Speaker, I believe that if nothing more—although I believe that there is more than that—the purpose of the Motion is to bring to the forefront the fact that these funds being vested and invested should be looked at with a view to investing in local instruments and other means, if at all possible. I believe that there will be more thought put into that because there has been widespread debate on the Floor of the House about it. I have to say that given all the arguments, for and against, the Government cannot at this point in time accept the Motion as it is worded. Had the Motion asked for the Government to consider, we would certainly have accepted the Motion, and reviewed the facts from that perspective.

The way the Motion is crafted simply calls for the Government to accept the Motion. It means that the Government needs to make the legislative changes that are necessary. I do not think the Government is in a position at this point in time to be able to prove that it is in the best interest of all concerned to do so. As a result of that, although the Minister has already given the Government's position, it is impossible for the Government to accept the Motion.

ADJOURNMENT

The Speaker: I shall now entertain a motion for the adjournment of this Honourable House.

The Honourable Minister for Community Development, Women's Affairs, Sports and Youth.

Hon. Edna M. Moyle: I move the adjournment of this Honourable House until 10 am on Wednesday morning.

The Speaker: The question is that this Honourable House does now adjourn until 10 am Wednesday, 11 July 2001. Those in favour please say Aye. Those against, No.

AYES.

The Speaker: The Ayes have it.

AT 4.38 PM THE HOUSE STOOD ADJOURNED
UNTIL 10 AM WEDNESDAY, 11 JULY 2001.

OFFICIAL HANSARD REPORT
WEDNESDAY
11 JULY 2001
10.35 AM
Twelfth Sitting

[Prayers read by the Third Elected Member for West Bay]

The Speaker: Please be seated. The Legislative Assembly is in session. Item number 2 on today's Order Paper, reading by the Speaker of Messages and Announcements.

READING BY THE HONOURABLE
SPEAKER OF MESSAGES
AND ANNOUNCEMENTS

APOLOGIES

The Speaker: I have apologies from the Honourable Minister responsible for the Ministry of Tourism, Environment and Transport, the First Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman and the Fourth Elected Member for West Bay.

Questions to Honourable Ministers and Members— Question 80 is standing in the name of the Second Elected Member for Bodden Town

Mr. Gilbert A. McLean: Question number 80 is directed to the Honourable Third Official Member responsible for Finance and Economic Development, who I see is not here. I do not know why it is directed to him.

The Speaker: If I could interrupt you for one moment. The Honourable Member is not in the Chamber. With the permission of the House, shall we move on to question 81?

Hon. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Mr. Speaker, if the Member would give way please. About question 80—although on the Order Paper directed to the Third Official Member, the truth is that I have the answer, and I should be answering it. If the Member would ask it again and direct it to me I could answer it.

The Speaker: Returning to question 80, the Second Elected Member for Bodden Town.

QUESTIONS TO HONOURABLE
MINISTERS AND MEMBERS

QUESTION NO. 80

No. 80: Mr. Gilbert A. McLean asked the Honourable Minister responsible for the Ministry of Planning, Communications and Works are any steps being taken to reduce the cost of electricity utilities and to cease the guaranteeing of a 15 percent profit to Caribbean Utilities Company Limited

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Planning, Communications and Works.

Hon. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Caribbean Utilities Company Limited (CUC) currently operates in Grand Cayman under an exclusive franchise granted on 7 January 1986 for 25 years. This agreement provides for an allowable 15 percent rate of return.

Since November of last year, my Ministry has met with the principals of CUC, on several occasions, to discuss a variety of matters relating to their operations and licence. On 28 May 2001, CUC had a meeting with the Government to present its interim rate of return and advised of their intention to raise rates by 2 percent effective 1 August 2001 to provide for the company to realise their allowable 15 percent return. At that meeting, the Government made it abundantly clear that it did not support the rate increase and CUC agreed to defer the effective date until 31 October 2001 and to conduct a review of their rate structure.

CUC has also indicated to the Government that it is amenable to enter into discussions towards a new licence agreement and Government has recently agreed to enter into negotiations with CUC on certain conditions.

Government has taken the basic position that there should be no further rate increases while discussions are ongoing, and that any new licence must clearly demonstrate the benefits to the public and justify any government action in that regard.

Government is cognisant of the need to control inflation and the general cost of living. At the same time, the country's continued development hinges on the provision of reliable services including key ones such as electricity. The level of service, however, comes at a cost—

Mr. Gilbert A. McLean: On a point of order, or procedure, Mr. Speaker.

POINT OF ORDER

The Speaker: May I hear your point of order?

Mr. Gilbert A. McLean: The statement as it continues to be given by the Minister is not in the written question as circulated. Perhaps he has more than what has been circulated.

The Speaker: That is correct. I think he is speaking extemporaneously though.

The Honourable Minister for Planning, Communications and Works.

Hon. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Perhaps inadvertently I have been pre-empting supplementary questions. I do apologise. The actual answer ends on the first page, where it says, “and justify any government action in that regard.”

SUPPLEMENTARIES

The Speaker: The Second Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman.

Mr. Lyndon L. Martin: Can the Honourable Minister indicate if there is a government audit to ensure compliance with the 15 percent allowable profit?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Planning, Communications and Works.

Hon. D. Kurt Tibbetts: I am assuming that the supplementary question is asking if there is an audit now being done, or intended to be done, or how it is being done. I think the Member is asking if it is done on a regular basis.

Executive Council earlier on this year authorised the technical audit to be carried out because the franchise calls for it at certain intervals. The terms of reference are being developed for tenders to be put to relevant auditing firms. This type of audit is not a regular audit, but requires certain qualifications for such an audit to be conducted thoroughly. As soon as the tendering process is complete, the audit will be done.

The Speaker: The Second Elected Member for Bodden Town.

Mr. Gilbert A. McLean: Can the Honourable Minister say how soon the agreed negotiations with CUC, towards making changes to the present licence, might be taking place?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Planning, Communications and Works.

Hon. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Following the last meeting with the principals at CUC and Executive Council's approval, a letter was sent outlining what was in the substantive answer. That letter will be dealt with at their next board meeting on 13 July at which time I expect a response. Once I get that response, I will certainly advise Members. We await the result of their board meeting.

The Speaker: The Second Elected Member for Bodden Town.

Mr. Gilbert A. McLean: In the interim, has the Ministry or the Government thought about getting advice from a power utility expert which may help in knowing the why's and wherefore's of the whole process of power utilities, which might be of use in negotiating a new contract?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Planning, Communications and Works.

Hon. D. Kurt Tibbetts: We are awaiting the reply from CUC to find out what line will be taken and if the terms we have requested are accepted—namely, no rate increases to be effected during the proposed negotiations. Once we have a reply from them, then we will be seeking the relevant expertise required. At present, we have not gone that far because we are awaiting their reply to see what form the negotiations, if any, will take.

The Speaker: The Second Elected Member for Bodden Town.

Mr. Gilbert A. McLean: Can the Honourable Minister say if, in the licence with CUC, there is any clause which requires CUC to get Government's approval for an increase and if it does not have Government's approval, then it cannot proceed?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Planning, Communications and Works.

Hon. D. Kurt Tibbetts: I do not have the franchise in front of me, but I am fairly confident that the answer I will give is correct.

Generally speaking, CUC is allowed a 15 percent rate of return on their capital investment. Within their annual audit or financials, if what that produces shows a rate of return that is less than 15 percent, under the franchise agreement CUC has the authority to make whatever adjustments in their rates they require to achieve that 15 percent rate of return. Basically, they only have to advise the Government. As a matter of course, even if Government objects, it does not mean that CUC cannot go ahead and affect that rate increase.

I have to say that that franchise was in place from 1986. When this Government encountered that same situation with CUC, we were able to negotiate, rather than just locking horns and they deferred their increase. Further, we are hoping they will take the present opportunity to come back to us and agree to no further rate increase until we can see exactly what we can re-negotiate, as a franchise, with them.

I can also inform the Member that, at present, if nothing happens, CUC has until 2011 with the current franchise under those existing terms and agreements.

The Speaker: The Second Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman.

Mr. Lyndon L. Martin: Can the Honourable Minister indicate at what intervals the “regular audits” are specified in the franchise?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Planning, Communications and Works.

Hon. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Unfortunately, I do not have that specific answer with me and I do not have a copy of the franchise. I will certainly get the answer and let the Member have it.

The Speaker: The Second Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman.

Mr. Lyndon L. Martin: I appreciate the Minister's commitment. Can the Honourable Minister indicate if it is his portfolio or the Portfolio of Finance and Economic Development which is now responsible for reviewing any request for rate increases and ensuring what I think is an agreed upon formula for CUC is adhered to?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Planning, Communications and Works.

Hon. D. Kurt Tibbetts: When the Government took office in November and I became the Minister responsible for the Ministry of Planning, Communication and Works, the responsibility for what the Member just asked about rested with the Ministry. Apparently there was some change some years ago, so it is an inherited situation.

If there are any questions – and I am not suggesting there are in the Member's mind – the fact is that as in the past when dealing with matters such as this, the Ministry and the Portfolio of Finance work quite well together.

The Speaker: The Elected Member for East End.

Mr. V. Arden McLean: Can the Honourable Minister tell us if the Government has taken a position on how much, in today's age, that rate of return should be?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Planning, Communications and Works - I think he is asking for an opinion, but if you wish to answer it you may.

Hon. D. Kurt Tibbetts: The fact is that the Government has not taken any fixed position. What I can say to the Member is that rate of return could be as little as possible. This is the position the Government would want to take. Of course, I am certain the Member will appreciate that, in matters like this, there has to be room for negotiation. Going back to a previous supplementary, it is along those lines that we will be seeking opinions from people with relevant expertise to give us some sort of platform from which we can continue any ongoing negotiations regarding that rate of return.

The Speaker: The Elected Member for East End.

Mr. V. Arden McLean: We hear about deregulation with the communication companies. Can the Minister say if any thought has been given to deregulation in regard to new negotiations with CUC?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Planning, Communications and Works.

Hon. D. Kurt Tibbetts: In this day and age, given the climate when it comes to competition, that thought certainly has to be borne in mind. What I think is fair comment to the Member, in answering his question, is that while that thought is not discarded, the fact is that they have an existing franchise that allows them to continue until 2011. I think it would be only fair to allow the company to come forward with some type of proposal for a new franchise agreement. The situation would have to be looked at in the light of what exists and what they propose, with the baseline criterion being the benefit passed on to the consumer.

The Speaker: Are there any further supplementaries? If not, we move on to question 81 standing in the name of the Second Elected Member for Bodden Town.

QUESTION NO. 81

No. 81: Mr. Gilbert A. McLean asked the Honourable Minister responsible for Tourism, Environment and Transport what is the present status of the proposed permanent moorings in George Town Harbour.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for the Ministry of Tourism, Environment and Transport.

Hon. W. McKeever Bush: The proposed permanent moorings' project was stopped by the previous Government due to financial constraints and technical difficulties.

The installation of permanent moorings proved to be a very costly project and one that the Port Authority concluded would strain their financial position to the point where it would be untenable.

Technical problems also arose when the plans were presented to representatives of the cruise lines. These problems involved safety during the securing of vessels.

SUPPLEMENTARIES

The Speaker: The Second Elected Member for Bodden Town.

Mr. Gilbert A. McLean: Can the Honourable Minister say if this proposed project was to be funded by central Government, or was it to have been done through the Port Authority?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for Tourism, Environment and Transport.

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: If they had gone ahead it would have been financed by the Port Authority through a loan arrangement.

The Speaker: The Second Elected Member for Bodden Town.

Mr. Gilbert A. McLean: Can the Honourable Minister say what the estimated cost of installing the moorings was, and give some idea as to how this would have been done?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for the Ministry of Tourism, Environment and Transport.

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: The port director informs me that the lowest bid for four moorings was $5.8 million. Cruise lines, however, required two moorings per ship, similar to the deployment of two anchors to limit the amount of swing. The cost of two such moorings was approximately 50 percent of the cost of the lowest bid. The cruise lines wanted to have two moorings installed for a trial period of one year. The cost of two moorings per ship would have increased the cost of the project to above $11 million.

The Speaker: The Second Elected Member for Bodden Town.

Mr. Gilbert McLean: Do cruise ships now in anchoring, use two such moorings to stop the swing?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for the Ministry of Tourism, Environment and Transport.

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: Yes, I understand that they do.

The Speaker: The Elected Member for East End.

Mr. V. Arden McLean: My understanding is that these were moorings other than the anchors that are currently stored on the dock. Is that correct?

The Speaker: Before asking for an answer to the question, I would appreciate a suspension of Standing Order 23(7) and (8).

SUSPENSION OF STANDING ORDER 23(7) AND (8)

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: Mr Speaker I move that the relevant Standing Order be suspended in order to take questions past 11 o'clock.

The Speaker: I put the question. Those in favour please say Aye. Those against, No.

AYES.

AGREED: STANDING ORDER 23(7) AND (8) SUSPENDED TO ALLOW QUESTION TIME TO CONTINUE BEYOND 11.00 AM.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for the Ministry of Tourism, Environment and Transport.

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: The moorings that have been on the dock since the late 1980s were not part of the plan, as I outlined in the answer. Those anchors proved to be useless as far as the cruise ships were concerned. What was discussed and looked at by technical people, including a study done by the Port Authority. It was found they could not be used and the ships would not use them.

The Speaker: The Elected Member for East End.

Mr. V. Arden McLean: Can the Honourable Minister say why the ships would not use them? Is it because of insurance risk?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for the Ministry of Tourism, Environment and Transport.

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: As I understand, a study that was done by the technical people in the Port Authority found that they could not be used but the ships found that they could not use them as such.

The Speaker: The Elected Member for East End.

Mr. V. Arden McLean: Mr. Speaker, I would still like an answer to that. If I may, currently the ships anchor with the same anchors in our harbour. I know that the anchors on the dock can be restored by sandblasting and the like. I wonder, are the cruise liners dictating to us? Or is it because of the insurance liabilities that they cannot use the anchor other than the one on the ship?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for the Ministry of Tourism, Environment and Transport.

Hon. W. McKeever Bush: Mr. Speaker, I doubt that anybody could say, at least with this Government, that the cruise ships are telling us what to do. I think we have worked in partnership to resolve any problems. However, as I understand it, the problem with the anchors is that the ships now anchor with their own anchors, which would be a different situation than if you permanently placed them. As I understand it, the ship could not make a complete swing in case they had to do so.

Now, I am not a seaman, this is what the technical people say.

The Speaker: Two additional supplementaries.
The Elected Member for East End.

Mr. V. Arden McLean: Mr. Speaker, I am a seaman, but I sailed in the engine room. You, Mr. Speaker, sailed on the deck. We both know that there are thrusters which the passenger liners currently use to prevent them from swinging. You put two anchors down and use your thrusters on the rear of the boat to keep her from swinging onto the shallows. I am therefore asking if the cruise liners can use two of their anchors and each time when anchoring drop them in a different spot in the harbour instead of destroying the spot when pulling up, because they have to put out at least 50 shackles. Why is it that we cannot put down the same anchors and they moor on them? I do not understand the safety—

The Speaker: Will you please turn this into a question?

Mr. V. Arden McLean: Can the Honourable Minister say what problems would be involved in safety during the securing of the vessels on the permanent mooring?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for the Ministry of Tourism, Environment and Transport.

Hon. W. McKeever Bush: I am being told that if cruise ships are on their moorings when in harbour they can move quickly if they have to. If we put them on the permanent mooring then it would not have the desired swing and they would have to leave on the basis of somebody doing it for them. I do understand also that there was a liability factor for our side of the issue.

The Speaker: The Second Elected Member for Bodden Town.

Mr. Gilbert A. McLean: I would like to ask the Minister if he would be prepared to give the House an undertaking to revisit this whole matter because there are hundreds of thousands of dollars worth of equipment now on the dock, which has not been used. The whole situation seems to be rather uncertain. Would he revisit it and inform this House in due course on the matter?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for the Ministry of Tourism, Environment and Transport.

Hon. W. McKeever Bush: What I will do is ask the Port Authority Board to look at the situation again and to consider all the technical matters in regard to the anchors purchased back in the 1980s and also to look at the costing matter. I will certainly give a report to the House at the appropriate time.

Since 1982 or 1983, when the anchors were purchased, I believe that successive governments have done that sort of review. If that is what Members desire, that is what I should attempt to do and Government will do that.

The Speaker: Moving on to question 82 standing in the name of the Second Elected Member for Bodden Town.

QUESTION NO. 82

No. 82: Mr. Gilbert A. McLean asked the Honourable Minister responsible for the Ministry of Tourism, Environment and Transport is there an official policy of Government for the Department of Vehicle Licensing to refuse persons wishing to register new vehicles where it is claimed by the department that such a person owes duty/fees on a previous vehicle, even where that vehicle has not been used for years.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for the Ministry of Tourism, Environment and Transport

Hon. W. McKeever Bush: There is no policy in place that would require the department to take such action. However, Section 15 of the Traffic Law 1973 (2001 Revision) provides that there is "continuous liability" for vehicle licence fees until the vehicle is suspended. The Law provides that the director of licensing, upon application by the owner of a vehicle, may suspend that vehicle's licence. It follows that unless and until a vehicle owner takes such action, the licence fees associated with that vehicle continue to accrue.

As part of the licensing department's strategy on reducing the number of unlicensed vehicles on its register, as well as to recover outstanding debts owned to the Government, the department has been questioning all expired vehicle licences on the department's register. A person questioned about an expired licence has the option to pay the outstanding fees, provide evidence of prior suspension of the vehicle from the register, or seek to have the outstanding fees waived by the Honourable Financial Secretary.

SUPPLEMENTARIES

The Speaker: The Second Elected Member for Bodden Town.

Mr. Gilbert A. McLean: The question directly asks if there is a policy to refuse and the answer says there is not. If it is not in the Law to refuse to register a new vehicle when all the requirements are met, how is it that it is being done in numerous cases? In situations about which I have had complaints, so under what section of the Law is refusal being done, when someone is said to have owed money on a previous vehicle?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for the Ministry of Tourism, Environment and Transport.

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: I have the Director of Licensing here with me. It seems the Department has been attempting to collect the continuous liability that the Law speaks about. In doing that, if a person buys a new vehicle and they have not complied with the Law in discarding the old vehicle and come to license that new vehicle, the Department was taking the view that, if they have the funds to license the new vehicle, then they should clear up, or make provision to clear up, the outstanding matter on the old vehicle.

The Speaker: The Second Elected Member for Bodden Town.

Mr. Gilbert A. McLean: What the Minister just said is exactly the case as has been represented to me in at least a dozen instances, by people who have been refused the licensing of their new vehicle because there is a request to pay the old. Some of these instances are persons who just have enough to register the new car. If I am understanding the reply correctly, the Minister is recognising that what is happening in the Department is illegal and also unwise in that it is hindering itself from collecting money that is readily available which can be collected on the new vehicle.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for the Ministry of Tourism, Environment and Transport.

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: What the Director tells me is that, once they raise a question with a member of the public who comes in to get a new vehicle licence, once that is raised and pointed out to them, they come back and pay.

Now, I see what the Member raising the question is saying. I will certainly look at how we can deal with it differently. What the public has open to them is to clear the matter up on the outstanding old one, either by telling the Department what the situation is, or having it waived by the Financial Secretary. I know that many, many times, constituents and others have come to me in the past, not since I have been a Member and have pointed out the situation. I told them to get the Financial Secretary to assist them since the vehicle was not in use and they failed to alert the Department and to get the outstanding fees waived. That has always been done, it has never been rejected.

I understand on the fine point of what the Law says and what is happening. I will look at it with the Department.

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman.

Mrs. Julianna Y. O'Connor-Connolly: Would the Minister be prepared to give an undertaking. Since it has come to light, that if the Department is carrying on an illegal act to issue a policy statement that that should cease and the proper procedure, (which would be the legal department) for contractual claim would ensue in due course?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for the Ministry of Tourism, Environment and Transport.

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: I must say that I would have to take other advice than that Member's as to whether or not this is illegal. In the interests of good public relations I certainly will attempt—as I said already to the Second Elected Member for Bodden Town—to look at it. I see the fine point in the Law, but I cannot accept that it is illegal and I certainly cannot accept her position that it is.

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman.

Mrs. Julianna Y. O'Connor-Connolly: Is the Honourable Minister admitting that he has read the Law and knows whether or not it is illegal?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for the Ministry of Tourism, Environment and Transport.

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: Mr. Speaker, that Member was right there when I read the answer out. The answer pointed out what Section 15 said. Obviously, I read it, or someone whom I trust, read it, and the Director of Licensing also has a Law degree.

In the mess that I found, I certainly cannot accept her ruling.

The Speaker: The Elected Member for East End.

Mr. V. Arden McLean: I know ignorance of the Law is no excuse, but I wonder if the Minister can give this House an undertaking that he will start some education programme for the general public from the licensing department letting them know that, once their vehicle is deemed not roadworthy, they should turn in their licence plates?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for the Ministry of Tourism, Environment and Transport.

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: Mr. Speaker, the truth is that is already being done and has been done for many years. This Law has existed since 1973. I entered this House in 1984 and that situation obtained. As I pointed out, as people approach me from all over, I say let us do what the Law says and go to the Financial Secretary and have it waived, since the vehicle was off the road.

As I have given the undertaking to the Second Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman, I will look at the situation to look at how we can best serve the public.

The Speaker: The Second Elected Member for Bodden Town.

Mr. Gilbert A. McLean: Following on the Minister's undertaking, would he also include in the consideration the idea that amending the Law might be a better course? There are vehicles that have rusted to pieces or been in the dump for ten years and there are no plates available. The process of going to the Financial Secretary, while it is there and works, is something much longer and much more drawn out, than a person going straight to the Vehicle Licensing Department where they go to register their vehicle. An amendment to the Law might be in order.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for the Ministry of Tourism, Environment and Transport.

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: As I already indicated, I understand where the Member is coming from. That will be part and parcel of the review I intend to have.

The Speaker: The Elected Member for East End.

Mr. V. Arden McLean: I was specifically talking about the general public in my last question. The Department could be a little more aggressive in its campaign in letting the general public know that they have to suspend a licence whenever they deem a vehicle not roadworthy.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for the Ministry of Tourism, Environment and Transport.

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: As I said, the Director is here. We will continue that campaign and widen the campaign to look at other areas. Perhaps, if this House wants, we could look at amnesty. We have to sit down and look at it. There will be a review to see if legislation is needed and what we can do best in the shorter term to best serve the public.

The Speaker: Are there any further supplementaries? If not, that concludes Question Time for this morning.

Moving on to Statements by Honourable Ministers and Members of the Government.

Statement by the Honourable Minister responsible for the Ministry of Planning, Communications and Works, Leader of Government Business.

STATEMENTS BY HONOURABLE MINISTERS AND MEMBERS OF GOVERNMENT

CAYMAN AIRWAYS LIMITED

Hon. D. Kurt Tibbetts: I would like to take this opportunity to provide Members with a brief update on matters relating to Cayman Airways, our national airline.

Yesterday the executive management team and the board of directors of Cayman Airways unanimously resolved to temporarily suspend flight operations of its existing fleet of aircraft. Members of the Legislative Assembly will be aware that there have been a number of incidents recently and, out of abundance of caution and since the safety of our passengers and our flight crews is of first priority, this proactive measure has been taken at this time.

The suspension was introduced from midnight Tuesday, 10 July and will remain in effect until each of the aircraft can be independently surveyed and an investigation into the airline's operations and support facilities can be completed. I will just interject here to say that an "audit" is going to be done.

The Civil Aviation Authority (CAA) and Cayman Airways have already begun these investigations and independent assistance will also be used from the United Kingdom CAA. It is expected that this review can be completed within one week.

Cayman Airways management and staff have been working diligently to source alternate aircraft to service the schedules during this time and will also be doing their very best to protect the reservations of passengers, should the need arise for them to fly on other carriers.

A joint press conference between Cayman Airways and the CAA was held this morning at 10 am, and a press release has been issued to advise the public of these important developments.

In closing, and on behalf of Cayman Airways, I would like to take this opportunity to sincerely apologise in advance to the travelling public for any inconvenience this situation might cause.

As soon as we have an update from the audit being conducted, Cayman Airways and the Ministry will be keeping the public informed on a daily basis as to what the situation is. Just to let the public know, Cayman Airways is confident that it will be able to get its operations back to normal circumstances within a short period of time and everyone involved is working very diligently to ensure this happens as quickly as possible.

Thank you.

The Speaker: Statement by the Honourable Minister responsible for the Ministry of Tourism, Environment and Transport.

CONTRACT FOR THE REHABILITATION OF THE RUNWAY AT THE GERRARD SMITH INTERNATIONAL AIRPORT IN CAYMAN BRAC

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: I wish to make a statement concerning the contract award for the rehabilitation of the runway at the Gerrard Smith International Airport in Cayman Brac.

Members will be aware that this project was completed this year and a ceremony marking the occasion was held in Cayman Brac last month. I have to report that the project cost $305,094.38 more than it should have. Tenders for this project were received and submitted to the Central Tenders Committee on 31 May 2000. This was in keeping with the original schedule that included an award of contract on 1 June 2000 with a completion date by 15 October 2000.

Upon review of the tenders, the Central Tenders Committee directed that the CAA must have financing arrangements in place before they could award the contract to the successful companies, Island Paving and Lagon JVA. Government guarantee was required by the CAA in order to secure financing for the project, but the previous Government would not approve this guarantee despite the fact that they agreed for the project to go ahead.

Subsequent to the general elections in November 2000, the new Government instituted the required government guarantee and the CAA was able to secure the loan and award the contract to the successful company. Due to the delay in securing the government guarantee, the agreed acceptance period of the tenders expired and had to be extended on two occasions. This caused the project to be deferred and resulted in financial penalties to the CAA.

Works finally began on the project on 25 January 2001 and were completed on 29 April 2001—two days ahead of schedule. The project was also completed within the original contract sum, but eventually ended in a cost overrun due to the penalties associated with the delay in awarding the contract because of not having the guarantee. The contract with Island Paving and Lagon JV was for $4,550,752.61 and the penalties for the deferral were $305,094.38. The total contract cost was $4,885,846.99. In other words, because of the past Government's refusal to approve the required guarantee, we had to pay the contractor an additional $305,094.38.

PRIVATE MEMBERS' MOTIONS

PRIVATE MEMBER'S MOTION

NO. 17/01

AS AMENDED

PENSION DEDUCTIONS

(Continuation of debate thereon)

Mr. Gilbert A. McLean: I am happy to rise and reply on Private Member's Motion No. 17/01, Pension Deductions, relating to the investing of at least 50 percent of the funds collected from deductions from employees' wages and employers' contributions under the National Pension Plan within a period of ten years commencing in 2002.

There is no doubt in my mind that we can ill afford to continuously send out of the Cayman Islands the millions of dollars being collected here annually, to be invested in other countries with no benefit of investment in Cayman.

Let me thank the Second Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman for seconding this Motion and for his contribution which not only showed that he is a person convinced of what the Motion asked for, but that he researched the matter thoroughly and presented himself most lucidly.

None of the arguments I heard put forth by those opposing this Motion are logically convincing. It is not convincing that the only interest the Government should have is to see that money is taken from peoples' salaries each month, collected and sent overseas and that the first and foremost call on that money supposedly is to keep the people protected.

This Motion does not ask to change any administrators. It does not ask to change any managers. It does not ask to change any of the personnel involved presently with the investment of money from pension deductions. It has nothing whatsoever to do or say about that. What the Motion asks for is that the same people, the managers and administrators, invest some of that money here.

The Motion asks that this amount be at least 50 percent over a period of one decade. I suppose some of us in here will be dead in the next ten years. It is possible. Things that will change in this world will change dramatically in the next ten years and the argument that all we need to do is continue to collect these monies and send them out of the country does not accord with sound thinking or good government.

Beyond all of the argument about having the peoples' money safe, also has to come the thought that it is an outflow of money—out of the Cayman Islands. Since it is coming from the Cayman Islands it has to have some present day effect on the economy here just like it is helping to bolster the economy of the other countries to which it is being sent. It is rather inconceivable that any government would attempt to overlook so mammoth and significant a fact.

The Cayman Islands is not benefiting to the extent it should now and over the proceeding years, for offering the opportunities for financial and commercial dealings in this country. The Cayman Islands got blacklisted and gets called every name in the world mostly by those countries which see us as competing with them in a way that is derogatory to our wellbeing. We have chosen to offer ourselves, our society, to do the business of financial services. Have we in turn gotten back from that what we should for taking the blows and criticism we have taken over the years? I say, no.

The most recent document I have seen, which I think bears out the point, would be a pamphlet I think all Members of the Legislative Assembly received, called The Schooner. It is Volume 4 of March 2001, the quarterly newsletter of the Cayman Islands Monetary Authority. On reading this, I see on the back page, "Statistical Update." Under the caption "Locational Banking Statistics" it reads, "The first quarterly Locational Banking Statistics Survey that replaced the Annual Banking Survey for the reporting period 31 December 2000 was sent out to licensees for submission to the Monetary Authority by the 28 January 2001. US$805 billion were reported in assets for that period. The next survey for 2001 will be for the reporting date 31 March 2001 and must be submitted to the Authority by 30 April 2001."

Are any of us in here brave enough to think of that kind of situation of US$805 billion in assets that have been handled or finagled, or whatever, here in this society? Have we gotten fair recompense by the little $18,000 or so that we charge the banks and people who do business here? I will not answer that. I will just leave that for everyone to think about.

We have come to a point where we have to look at the reality of our situation. We have to look at the reality of a Government which comforts itself that it has made a Law making it compulsory to have 10 percent of earnings in the country collected and sent out of the country. How long will that go on? It seems it will be indefinitely if we listen to the replies and arguments of the people who argued against it. If this fund grows and let us say it gets to $100 million per annum, I wonder if the Government, (if still around at that time), would be satisfied to know that that amount of money is leaving the Islands and all we have to do is leave it alone and make sure that none is invested in the Cayman Islands.

Who does the money belong to? Should not the people, whose money it is, have some immediate call through proper investment in their own country? A lot of those persons opposing this Motion spoke very smartly about the facts. As the Law stands it allows up to 45 percent to be invested here. The question is, how much of it is? Did anyone raising this particular point say how much it was? Or did Government in any way try to say we have $50 million already invested in Cayman? No.

Neither did the Government suggest that we put something there mandating that the people who handle pension funds report to an authority where we can at least have the statistical data of what each one is doing and know the true figure of the management of these funds in the country.

I still say that I believe zero is being invested here. I would have to see living proof to believe otherwise. What I would suggest to Government, rather than being comfortable with what the Law now provides, is that they should see to it that money is invested in the Cayman Islands instead of speaking about what is possible. All things are possible, Mr. Speaker. It is whether people make them possible or not.

We have a good comparison with the Bahamas. There they have a situation more comprehensive than ours, as mentioned by the Second Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman and confirmed by the Minister of Communications. They, however, do invest their money in the Bahamas. The Minister confirmed, by speaking to someone in authority in the Bahamas, these facts, as we were told in his debate. He also pointed out that the monies being collected now had to be increased both by the persons who contribute and the Government or private sector who contributes to the fund. The point I wish to make is that the Bahamas is smart enough to use Bahamians' money to invest in their own country.

They can now, because of their actuarial reports, always look a field to invest that money. First, they did what was right. I did not hear anyone say that the Bahamas was lauding the fact that they will have to seek markets overseas. They were very proud to say they invested their money in their own country.

Again, we have heard arguments about these administrators and how they must not be touched or dictated to and all the rest of it. Government must stay away from any such thought. Why is it that it took the Government to create a Law that made this lilli-pop for these people and the Government cannot be in a position to say it will invest some of that money here?

I am told that the money which goes into these funds is handled by the various administrators and managers who simply take their piece off the top and send the rest of it on. Are we going to sit here and believe that those people are on the computer watching the way the markets are moving in New York, London, and Tokyo making sure we get the best deals? It would be ludicrous to believe that. They invested there, they have fulfilled the requirements of the Law where they have invested in the best stock of this or that, for the best period of time for the best price. Now, if it does not turn out that way, what do they say? 'Oops. Well, we were in compliance with the Law and we did what we should do.'

I ask again, is it better to lose one's pension savings in New York or London rather than losing it here in your own country? At least someone locally would stand to benefit one way or the other if there should be a loss, which we hope does not occur with any of the funds.

Another thing I heard repeated at least twice was that we have to keep these politicians away from the funds because if they get a hold of it ... this, that and the other. I have often wondered if the politicians in here who make those statements understand that they are making those statements about themselves. That is why I prefer to be a "representative" instead of a "politician."

The Third Official Member gave his views on the matter of the investment of these funds and he spoke about the money held for civil servants. This Motion did not really speak to those funds, but I think it is a wonderful thing if the Government would lead the way and find ways of investing some of that money here in the Cayman Islands; in fact, most of it, if at all possible.

One thing that struck me in the arguments against the Bahamas, in showing that the worst thing that could happen is for the Bahamas to invest their money in their own country, no one tried to inquire where the Bahamas invested their money within their country. To take up a similar example would be a good start for us. I would assume that they are investing wisely and having all the necessary auditing and accounting and so on in place. On the face of it, I believe that the Bahamas must be a sound centre for business and financial matters. I say that based on the fact that just about every bank in Grand Cayman is but a little branch of the banks in the Bahamas and have to take instructions from them to loans as little, relatively speaking, as $100,000. Maybe we ought to get smart and try to catch up a little with their forward and progressive thinking.

If the opportunity in this Law now is to invest up to 45 percent, I say to the Government that one of their most immediate actions should be to see that investments start. If we are deathly afraid of investing in our own country, start with one-quarter-of 1 percent and let it grow like the little seed into the big oak tree.

No one spoke about handicapping any administrators, but if we want to use what has now become the buzzword, we are talking about "empowering" them to be able to invest with the diversity of investments that everyone likes to talk about. My duty here must be to the people who elected me to look after their best interests as best I can, and as best as I understand it. I know it has to be in our best interests to get some utilisation under the very means set down in this Law of the money that is simply being sent out of the Cayman Islands.

No one's hands are tied by so doing. In fact, hands are unshackled and let loose to do what is hopefully right and what should be done. One gets the impression that the administrator is some special person from somewhere in outer space. According to the Law, section 8 says: "For the purposes of this Law, only the following persons may administer a pension plan: an employer; a pension committee; an approved provider; a board of trustees..." and so on.

Unlike the persons who know that this Motion is asking for something the country needs, yet are able to deny it . . . what can one say? The Third Elected Member for George Town spoke about under-developing ourselves, or developed countries helping to under-develop other countries. When I use this term, I do not mean something physical, like the Ritz Carlton or whatever project, I am talking about developing ourselves in terms of money, investing and handling of money. I think he is right in that regard.

It follows that if we collect, on a monthly basis, money from our society which is bought in hard currency, sent out of the country and if continued we are making less money available to ourselves here and enriching those to where it is going. In the same way, we are turning around and going to those countries for loans from which they gain again because of the interest paid. Someone should try to show those of us in this society who can think how that makes sense. There is no logic to that.

Assets totalling $805 billion handled in one quarter in the Cayman Islands; what do we have to show for it? Do we have a percentage fee? No. Let us say $40 million a year goes out of the Cayman Islands, supposedly to be invested. Are we benefiting any from it? No. When? In another 40 years? Well, what happens in those 40 years? Do others benefit from it? Yes! Why not we ourselves? Because we need people who will see, think, know and have the will to do something about it, rather than putting forward arguments based on pleasing people who are benefiting every week and every month from this whole process.

As I said when moving this Motion, it was something I committed to do on behalf of the people who elected me, so that in some way the people of this country could benefit from the use of pension funds within this country. I did not specify any particular way because I was relying on the genius of the administrators and the managers. Are we saying they are incapable of finding ways of doing this, no matter how small? Are we satisfied in saying they can invest up to 45 percent of it now? Are they doing so?

I think we are missing one great opportunity at this point in time. As we hear of matters such as the Constitution, we have to go “slowly”, we cannot be hasty. This thing has to be done a certain way.

Mr. Speaker, in 1991 I was in this House and I heard the same thing—one decade ago! I placed in this Motion that the Government take one decade to find a way to invest up to 50 percent of the pension funds in this country—one decade!

There is movement and velocity and so on, but I am a Caymanian born and bred, as far back as I can trace my ancestry. I have never been able to conceive of what is “slow” in Cayman. I think “slow” in Cayman means almost stop!

It does not help when we have the newspaper—which in effect has a monopoly in the country—the Caymanian Compass, and I see we do have a representative of that paper here, bless the action of the Government in their Editorial of Monday, 9 July 2001. I am sure the Chamber of Commerce is exceedingly happy because they wrote me about a five page letter telling me all the reasons why it would be bad for the country and everyone else to have any of our money invested here.

This starts off real good, Mr. Speaker, where it says: “The Government was right in rejecting a motion calling for half of the locally collected pension funds to be invested locally.” That is a classic, Mr. Speaker. The local investment of collected funds should be rejected. It seems a shame that I should say anything more on this Motion having read those few lines.

I have done what I promised to do on behalf of the people of this country and now I will leave it for Members of this House to express their belief in their country or express it in countries overseas over which they have no control of the investment of this country’s pension funds.

Thank you.

The Speaker: I shall now put the question on Private Member’s Motion No. 17/01, Pension Deductions. Those in favour please say Aye. Those against, No.

AYES and (one audible) NO.

The Speaker: The Noes have it.

Mr. Gilbert A. McLean: May we have a division?

The Speaker: Certainly.
Clerk, please call a division.

The Clerk:

PRIVATE MEMBER’S MOTION NO. 17/01 NEGATIVED BY MAJORITY.

The Speaker: Moving on to Private Member’s Motion No. 3/01, Review of the Labour Law, to be moved by the Second Elected Member for West Bay

PRIVATE MEMBER’S MOTION NO. 3/01

REVIEW OF THE LABOUR LAW

Mr. Rolston M. Anglin: I beg to move Private Member’s Motion No. 3/01, Review of the Labour Law, standing in my name, which reads:

“BE IT RESOLVED THAT the Government undertakes a review of the Labour Law in order to address the existing shortcomings and to bring it in line with current developments in Caymanian society.”

The Speaker: Do you have a seconder?

Mr. Cline A. Glidden Jr.: I beg to second the Motion.

The Speaker: Private Member’s Motion No. 3/01 has been duly moved and seconded. Does the Mover wish to speak to it?

Mr. Rolston M. Anglin: Thank you.

This Motion, seeking to have a review carried out of the Labour Law of the Cayman Islands, is one that intrigued me from the time I was elected. When I look at the word “labour” and images are conjured up in my mind as to what labour is, I think back to my childhood. That is exactly where I came from—the labour class, the working class—as have many Members in this Honourable House.

In my years growing up, my mother worked as a maid in the condos on Seven Mile Beach, like a lot of women in this country still do. When my father returned from sea, he took up painting homes and buildings. The impact that has on one's life is obviously different for all of us, but from my perspective, it certainly taught me a lot about life. It had a great bearing on my value system, on the way in which I became orientated as an individual, on my personal world view and the way I saw myself fitting in. This is a heritage that most of us in Cayman have, that is, coming from the labour or working class. I daresay that is a heritage of which most of us are extremely proud.

During the campaign leading up to the 2000 election, many people showed me areas where they felt the Labour Law, as it stands, was deficient and did not serve to meet the needs of the vast majority of people who work in these Islands. After reviewing the Labour Law, I could come to no other conclusion but to agree with the assessment they had made.

Regarding my contribution to this Motion, I am going to look at particular deficiencies as I see them and also look at items that I feel should be spelled out in our Labour Law, matters that I feel important, but for some reason were omitted.

In no way do I intend to be excessively long in my contribution, because I feel that what we have before us is a piece of legislation which needs modernisation and amending. I will be straight and to the point.

Over the last few months, we have heard the Minister responsible for labour, expound on what would be the new regime in regard to employee/employer relations in the Island in regard to human resources, in particular the area of training and job search capabilities. He has spoken quite effectively to numerous new initiatives. I will not repeat those areas.

When one looks at the Law itself, one of the subtle things that I personally noted was that it speaks of "labour." When we think of labour, we can all agree that there is a certain stigma attached to the word; a certain image conjured up in our minds. I personally prefer to speak about "employment" and an "Employment Law" or an "Employment Act."

The first person who spoke to me about deficiencies, as she saw them, in the Labour Law was a female. She shared with me her view as to how antiquated and inadequate the maternity leave and maternity benefits within the Labour Law were. I thought it only fitting, once I reviewed that area and wholeheartedly agreed with her, that that should be the very first area which I address in my contribution to this Motion.

Section 19 of the Labour Law, dealing with maternity leave, currently provides that women—and I emphasise "women"—are allowed 12 weeks off. The first four are on full pay, the second four at half pay and the last four unpaid. Also, in Section 19(1), I see a very critical phrase in the last paragraph. It says you must have completed 12 months of continuous employment otherwise your leave benefit will be prorated. You do not have to be a rocket scientist to know that probably the majority of families in these Islands could not financially survive, in this day and age; if the woman, who has become a major contributor to the workforce and home finances in this country, had to go for 12 weeks and receive the equivalent of six weeks' pay.

There is already a distinct possibility that many women in our country will be forced to return to work early, that is before the allowed 12 weeks have expired, merely because of financial constraints within their families. When we think about the physical consequence that is the lack of bonding with one's child when women are potentially forced to go back to work at an early stage, I think even the coldest of hearts would recognise that this is not a desirable situation. Especially when we all agree that the family unit is the bedrock of our society and our youth is our future, when every one of us, including our youth, all starts at the same place, we were all once a babe.

In those early months, where there should be that intimate bonding between mother and child, and indeed between father and child, we see the distinct potential for negative impact on that most crucial developmental stage by the way in which our Labour Law is written.

One could argue, just on this section alone, that our babies are seen as somewhat of a burden and that pregnancy is seen as undesirable. We cannot get the labour out of the female worker that we normally would because she will be home with her new infant child.

I did some research, and looked at how a few other countries approach maternity leave. The two I will briefly mention are Bermuda and the United Kingdom.

Under the Employment Act 2000, of Bermuda, we see that they allow 12 weeks off too—eight weeks at full pay, four weeks unpaid. They too, speak of having worked 12 months. However, they speak about 12 months at the expected date of delivery.

In the United Kingdom, their statutory provisions call for what is termed the "mandatory maternity leave" of some 18 weeks, six of which are at 90 per cent pay, 12 of which have attached a set statutory rate set out in the Social Securities Contributions and Benefits Act, 1992. I think it is Section 166. In regard to the employment duration, the requirement is having worked 26 weeks by week 15 before the expected date of birth.

When we compare what our Labour Law says, we see some similarities when compared to Bermuda, but we also see some very different legislation when compared to the United Kingdom.

I am of the view that all Laws reflect some form of collective consciousness. After all, the Laws apply to everyone. The Labour Law is no exception. When it comes to maternity leave; I do not have any warm fuzzy feelings when I look at the way in which our Law is structured as to how long you have to work before you can even get all your maternity benefits. Indeed, the financial strain it will cause to the individual families.

In this era of social consciousness and awareness, when this Law is reviewed—and I am not being presumptuous, because the Minister of Labour has already said that the Law would be reviewed—I would like to see something more on the order of giving women at least four months off work with their new child and at least three months at full pay, with the last month at half pay. I do not think that is asking too much. At the end of the day, if we do not continue to produce good families, strong families, tighter knit families, environments where self-esteem is the order of the day and maximising one's potential (the national ideal we all strive towards), we will continue to go down that slippery slope of having an erosion of the social fabric of our Islands.

When one looks at maternity benefits and job security, and the Labour Law of the Cayman Islands, one sees there is no guarantee of position once the mother returns to the workforce. I think it is only fair that if we are going to be an Island that says family is important, continually building our population is important. We have to give, by way of legislation, some form of guarantee that when a mother returns that she will not have a loss of wages, no loss of seniority and will be put back into a comparable position within her firm.

Let us look at unfair dismissal as it relates to maternity. In the Labour Law, as it stands, it merely states "unfair dismissal," period. We see that a person is entitled to one week's wage for each year's service completed, up to a maximum of 12, and we also see that the labour tribunals can award another 12 weeks for a total of 24 weeks. However, where an employee starts a job and obviously is put on some form of probationary period the following situation obtains. For instance, when it comes to whether or not a female employee will be kept on if she either became pregnant during the probationary period, or was pregnant and not aware of it when she first got the job, we quickly see where an employer could find it much cheaper to dismiss her. In that situation the employer might rather do that than go through the process of giving her any form of maternity leave.

As our Law currently stands, assuming that the employer kept the employee on, let us say the employee got pregnant in the first week upon commencing employment. She would then have an entitlement of a prorated maternity leave benefit, which would come out to some six weeks. That is totally illogical. How can we say that it is fair for a woman who has to go through the same process, the prenatal stage right through to delivery and aftercare? Can she reasonably be expected to survive under such conditions? In this example, she would have come to this job three months pregnant, work six months and only qualify for the six weeks maternity leave. That is illogical.

What would she do afterwards? There are numerous instances where mothers go back to work early, even though they qualify for the 12 weeks. Be that as it may, how is it logical to expect that in these situations, where a person gets pregnant within the probationary period of employment, that we would expect that they can reasonably care for their infant and be able to go through that bonding stage in such a short time? The alternative would be to take unpaid leave. How many families can realistically afford that? Persons in this situation are caught in a catch-22.

I am a new father of only six weeks. I have witnessed the miracle of birth. I have also witnessed all the complications that can come about after the baby has arrived. Over the last six weeks I have seen where my wife could not have physically returned to work.

For a long time, even today I still hear it, people saying it is a man's world. When one looks at the Laws of most countries, one sees that that is precisely the case. No one gender, sexually speaking, is worth any more than the other in my view. We are all created the way we are for specific purposes.

I would like to believe that if an employer dismissed a woman simply because she got pregnant and they found it to be an inconvenience that she would have to take leave. Where that occurs, it would be much fairer to say that that woman would be entitled to two weeks basic wage compensation for each year of service, putting in some form of maximum. I think most would agree that we normally cap somewhere in the order of 24 to 30 weeks. I would like to believe that when we review this Labour Law that it would state categorically that dismissal due to pregnancy is unfair. I would also like to believe that we have matured enough from a basic moral and human rights standpoint. We would no longer say that a woman should be working continuously for 12 months to accrue the standard maternity benefits. We would say something in the order of working 24 weeks before the due date of the baby, to qualify for full maternity benefits.

When we look at this situation and see that by Law, the minimum standard does not offer more to mothers, I would think that most of us wholeheartedly agree that this area needs serious modernisation. I would like to believe that most of us would agree that the mothers and future mothers in this country deserve the very best. Of course, the Law states that an employer can provide more favourable benefits. At the end of the day, it is the Law by which the great majority of employers will abide. Since this is going to be the minimum requirement, the minimum standard by which we will treat each other in the employer/employee relationship, I would think that this is an area that will be addressed.

It is my understanding that many say that the concept of paternity leave should not even be discussed in Cayman because culturally that is not the way we are. Well, I am going to talk about it. If the men of the Cayman Islands do not see the need to take it, if available, then that is their business. They are not the ones having the baby and no one is telling them that they have to take paternity leave.

However, for too long we have operated on the notion that nurturing, sharing and caring is a woman's job. Men usually leave the nurturing and disciplining to the mother because the father works a really hard job and has to concentrate on working at his hard job. Well, first of all, most of our women work at hard jobs. They too have to not only work but have the baby, do a great majority of the caring and nurturing of the baby and do most of the disciplining of the child.

I think that once a child is born, the men in this country should have the opportunity to stay at home and assist in those early nurturing days of their child's life. Not only is it physically exhausting for the woman, but it is a matter of attachment. It might just be me, but in my view, whizzing off to work early in the morning, coming home tired, smiling and tickling the baby a little bit, watching some TV and going to sleep, does not qualify as bonding with one's child. I think that it is high time that men in our society were afforded the opportunity via statutory provision to take a portion of paid paternity leave.

Of course, when it comes to men, the issue of the child can become a very controversial one. It is my humble submission that it is the assumption of most societies which live the way we do in Cayman, that, if a man is married, it naturally follows that his wife's child is his. There is no issue there. However, we know the world we live in and there is a great increase in children being born out of wedlock. That raises a very interesting matter. Whereas the woman's body needs time to recuperate and heal, and the woman normally carries the child for a period of time in which she cannot become impregnated again, that is not so with the man.

I have heard it argued that when it comes to paternity leave we have quite a few men in our community who are rather unreasonable and irresponsible in my view, who could practically qualify for a whole year off if allowed paternity leave for every child they fathered. Well, I think it is fair to say that no one would be disadvantaged or feel jilted in any way if we were to say that within a certain period, let us say 12 or 15 months that a male can only qualify for paternity leave once. That argument would then die.

There is also the issue of what period we would allow. That would obviously be a contentious one. I would say that, on average, given the nature of the post-partum experience of most women, that somewhere in the three to six week period would not be unreasonable and it should be fully paid. We should not say to the fathers in this community that they can take paternity leave, but they will not get paid for it, because we are then saying that paternity leave is not important. We know it is tough to make ends meet and in my view, it has to be paid paternity leave.

There are those who say we know who the mother is for children born outside wedlock. She is the one who goes to the labour room and has the baby. There is no doubt there. We could have a requirement that the father would potentially have to provide proof that the child is his. That would be after the fact, but I have heard some incredible arguments against paternity leave over the last several weeks. If need be, we have to satisfy those who would not want this.

Staying on the pregnancy topic, taking a step back, what about antenatal care? Our Labour Law says nothing about that. Just about every other country that I covered in my research provided for antenatal care. Most bear an onus on the woman. After all, if she goes to the doctor and finds out she is pregnant, it will not show for a while and no employer can guess she is pregnant and needs time off to go to her antenatal appointment. The request would have to be made.

Also, it would only be fair if the employee provided the employer with a certificate from her doctor stating she is pregnant. An appointment attendance card from her doctor would show when her appointment is, and would be signed off by her doctor showing she kept her appointment.

I also believe that, in regard to continuous employment, the same should hold here as it does in the area of unfair dismissal in regard to maternity. That is the requirement of having to work some 24 weeks as at the date of expected delivery. This would be provided to the employer by the doctor so as to qualify for these benefits.

I have also had much representation in regard to severance pay. Currently, our Law provides for one week's pay for each year of service to a maximum of 12. I find it difficult to rationalise this area of the Law. In fact, it is section 41 that provides for the computation of severance pay. Are we saying that it is expected that the maximum amount of time that any employee will stay with one particular employer will be 12 years? That is certainly the way I read it.

We see here in Cayman that there are many people who become very loyal and dedicated employees. They work at one place for many years. Just last weekend, on speaking with a former member of my graduating class of 1988 from the Cayman Islands High School, I was told that she has only had one job since leaving high school. I know that many people change jobs, but significant numbers stay with one job for long periods of time. She is entering her 13th year on that job. As far as the Labour Law is concerned, in regard to severance pay from this period on is of no relevance.

It would seem to me that we would be encouraging her to leave that particular employer and start over. I think a much fairer system would be one where we staggered the reward based on longevity.

For instance, if an employee stayed with an employer eight years, for those first eight they would be given a week's severance pay; for the next four two weeks and from then on, three weeks. That encourages longevity. That can only serve to help the labour market remain stable. I say that because in doing social research, one of the top five most traumatic experiences for a human being is changing a job; this is tied to the fact that we want stable families.

When people have to continuously change jobs and go through that anxiety, it is felt throughout the entire family. I think that when we make Laws, we must always remember there is going to be some social impact. Therefore, we must ensure that the desired outcome can be achieved by the way in which the Law is written. In fact, we only have to look at the larger industrialised countries, like the United States. They use their tax law to dictate social policy.

For example, they give a benefit to married couples filing jointly on their tax returns. Why? They want to encourage marriage. They will give certain benefits to home ownership and tax deductions in regard to interest accruing on mortgages. Why? They want to encourage home ownership.

When we seek to pass Laws, most of our Laws relating to individuals will have some impact on day-to-day life and we must think through and know our ultimate objective before we seek to make changes. That is one of the things which the Fourth Elected Member for West Bay and I looked at when we thought about changes to the Labour Law.

On the matter of compassionate leave, if memory serves me correctly, it took quite some time before we even had such a section in our Labour Law. Thank God that we do because there is nothing more traumatic than losing a loved one. However, I find that the scope of the current Law is a tad too restrictive. It does not cover close family like aunts, uncles and grandparents. I think it is very important that we ensure, when close family members die, that persons are able to obtain paid leave and not have to put the family unit under more financial strain, especially during such traumatic periods. There are many people in our community who help financially in burying their grandparents, their aunts and uncles. I think those relatives are close enough family who should be named in the Law. In fact, brothers and sisters should also be provided for. The Law speaks to "spouse, parents, and children" of the employee. It is my view that the Labour Law needs to broaden its coverage and protection of our citizens.

On the matter of paid leave for vacation, this is an area, too, under which I have made numerous representations regarding just how long you have to work before you can get enough time for a decent vacation. Vacation is very important. The body naturally gets tired and obviously needs a break. We all need time to catch up on things around the house, travel, spending more quality time with our spouses and family members. As the Law currently stands, an employee accrues two weeks for the first four weeks of work, for the next four to ten, three weeks; and after ten plus years one gets four weeks. It is my humble view that when an employee has given ten years and when we think of the average life span of a human being, more importantly the average working life of a human being, ten years is a significant portion of time for an employee to devote to an employer. In fact, the average person only works some 40 to 45 years. If we talk about ten, we are talking about 25 percent, a quarter of one's work life.

I believe that to only accrue four short weeks vacation after ten years is inadequate. I believe we should have a further categorisation in this area. I believe that for your first four years, as it currently stands, you would accrue two weeks vacation; for the next four years, you accrue three weeks; for the next four years you would accrue four weeks; for the next four, five weeks, which brings you up to 16 years working with one employer. I believe there has to obviously be a plateau and I think 16 years certainly shows commitment and dedication to one's employer. I would think after that, employees should have the right to have some six weeks of annual leave. That is not a lot of time as you are still giving 46 weeks.

In fact, I believe that employers in Cayman need to become more creative in regard to fostering loyalty and harmony between themselves and their workers. I know there are some who say we also have to give some statutory leave time in regard to sickness. That is true. Cayman is a relatively healthy society. We have a lot to be thankful for and our health is one of those things. It is my humble view that even though some ten days are provided for sick leave, the average Caymanian is not sick for two weeks out of one year.

Getting back to the point of creativity, one thing employers could do is provide incentives for persons who have significantly few sick days. I am not saying we should encourage people to go to work sick, but I am a realist. When people have to work ten years and still only have three weeks off; we all know that a person may not feel too sick, but they may feel sick enough to stay home one day or two. I think this matter is going to pose a problem for employers; they could give awards, monetary awards to employees who only miss two or three or four days of sick leave time. After all, I think a lot of us would feel sick too if we had to work with an employer ten years before we could even get up to four weeks of vacation time.

Another matter on this same topic, which is of concern to me, is that the Labour Law encourages employers to pay vacation time in advance. I have had personal representation of a particularly large employer in the hospitality industry, the Westin Hotel, which practices paying for vacation after the fact. Well, that is not in breach of the Labour Law. The Law only encourages employers to pay in advance, the logic being that if the employee were working he would have to wait to get paid.

The reality is that most of our hardworking people usually will be trying to take a break to get off the Island. How difficult it is to get away, period, let alone waiting until your vacation is up before you can collect your money. I believe that in this day and age, as a gesture of good will, employers should have no problem in paying for vacation in advance. It is my understanding that is the practice of most employers. This is an area that may need to be mandated rather than recommended.

The Law clearly states that these are minimum standards. However, standards that would be more advantageous to the employee can be offered. I think experience tells us that in most instances in life, when talking about true labour (non-supervisory employees) we find that most employers seem to stick to the letter of the Labour Law.

Mr. Speaker, some of my colleagues on the backbench are requesting that we take the afternoon break.

The Speaker: I would suggest that we not take the afternoon break. We only have about thirty-four minutes, unless you need a break.

Mr. Rolston M. Anglin: Mr. Speaker, I have no problem continuing.

The Speaker: What is the wish of the House? That we continue until 4.30?

Please continue.

Mr. Rolston M. Anglin: Thank you.

When a person goes into a new job there is often a fair amount of anxiety. Truth be told, most of us would not come by the Legislative Assembly and grab a copy of the Labour Law and read it. Most of us would not look at the Labour Law until we run into some problem and there would be a need.

I believe that, when speaking of working conditions, employers should clearly define these conditions when delivering them to the employee. I have had numerous constituents in the construction, hospitality, and ancillary services such as maintenance and gardening; tell me that they got hired for a job and were not told exactly what their duties were. They were not presented with a clear-cut statement as to what their working conditions would be. There was then, a misunderstanding and their view of what was fair and right was very different from their employer's. I think within one week of starting a new job an employee should receive his statement of working conditions.

A lady who worked in the hospitality industry told me she wanted to discuss the matter of her rest periods during her workday. She showed me her employment documentation. She showed me her job description and statement of working conditions. She then told me that she was only entitled to a half-hour paid lunch. She worked about five-minute's drive from the place where her two young children were being cared for. She expressed her desire to go and get a quick bite to eat and check on her children, but that that desire was thwarted because she was told that if she wanted to take an hour she would have to take one half hour unpaid.

She also was entitled to two 15-minute breaks, one in the morning and one in the afternoon. Be that as it may, working in an industry where she cleans room after room, working at a property where the room ladies also do the laundry, I believe it is fair to say that most of us would not see any issue with a proposal to have employers provide an hour paid lunch to all employees.

Regarding the health, safety and welfare of employees, is another area where I have received representation about conditions which are surprising to say the least; for example cashiers and sales clerks. First of all, if one is healthy and working in a smaller boutique or grocery store, I think it is only fair that one be given some tools, such as a stool to sit on, in carrying out one's duties.

Where this situation often gets aggravated is when the employee is female and pregnant. I think it is gross that in the year 2001 we hear of a person six months pregnant who has to stand on her feet for the duration of her workday instead of sitting on a stool until a customer requires her, or until she is needed to check out a customer. This is, I think, an extremely reasonable proposition. These small things happen, which most of us in our day-to-day lives would not necessarily think about twice. When seeking to legislate, we often have to be extremely careful about the goodness of persons and corporate persons too. When it comes to money, people will often have fallings out and significant misunderstandings.

I think it is fair to say that in our hotels, when persons work in the laundry (and they can be hot rooms), simple things can be done by employers to build up good will such as providing basic comforts for employees. That is not done.

The longer I live the more I realise that inherent goodness goes by the wayside when it comes up against dollars and cents. I have heard of ladies working in laundry rooms where managers have point blank refused to give them stools to sit on. What do they expect of a lady or a man who works in a laundry room? We know how laundry works. You do not have to be on your feet all the time. You put a load in the washer and to get off your feet would be extremely comfortable.

I have also had numerous complaints on the condition of laundry rooms in regard to ventilation and heat. Dryers are extremely hot devices that give off dust. Chemicals used for washing are ever present in the laundry room, so ventilation is important to the safety of workers in the hospitality industry.

Every employee should be provided with a detailed breakdown of their week, their hours worked, with their pay. There are many people who work part time in our community. They too would require certain benefits. In this area, the first thing that catches my eye is the definition of part time—“Part time employee is an employee whose contract of employment requires him to work less than the standard work week.” What is the standard workweek? It is 45 hours.

We are saying that a person could work 8 hours per day or 40 hours per week and if I interpret this correctly, he would then be considered a part time employee. I think most of us are reasonable enough to see the great deficiency here. How can a person work 40 hours per week and be considered part time and have certain benefits accrued to them on a part time basis? Maybe our standard workweek is too long.

I dare say that, before reading the Labour Law, I was under the impression that a standard workweek was 40 hours. I think even if we changed the standard workweek to a lower amount, we need to specify an amount of time that is considered as part time, for instance, 20 hours per week. To simply say that anything less constitutes part time, I think could be seen as unfair and be easily manipulated.

I also ran into another problem in regard to definitions. That is employers who seek to define their employees as “casual employees.” I beg your indulgence as I read the definition—“A casual employee means a person who is employed upon an irregular or intermittent basis.” That implies to me that there could be easy manipulation because “intermittent” could go on for 20 years; “irregular” could go on for the same period of time. Is that the spirit of the Law?

I have had constituents who are tour bus operators inform me that they were told they were casual employees and, therefore, had no vacation benefits. There is no guarantee that they would be able to get work because (a) tourists may not come to Cayman; and (b) even if they come there is no guarantee that the particular tour operator will book tours. I can see how the owner of such a business could get away with such an argument. I am not implying that they all do it, but I know of the one represented to me. I understand this also happens in the construction industry.

When we speak of common decency and goodness, and look at money being in the equation, that is, money which is paid to people, then common decency takes on a very different definition from what it should be.

I have had constituents who have worked 20 plus years with an employer tell me they got injured and got nothing. They were told they would not get anything other than their ordinary severance, and that is only 12 weeks maximum. What happened to the notion of workmen’s compensation? This seems to have conveniently skirted the borders of the Cayman Islands.

I understand that certain employers have told their employees they cannot afford workmen’s compensation insurance and therefore, cannot provide it. When a person is permanently disabled and has given a significant portion of their productive years to an employer, I think it is only fair that the employer provide some financial assistance—particularly in the case where the worker is injured on the job. The employer should provide some long-term assistance. When we think of common goodness and when it comes to the crossroads with money, we quickly find it is a one-way street because money talks—and talks loudly, screams loudly to most people.

There is a particular area of the Labour Law where when a company is sold or protection, it is provided to workers who were employees of the previous company so that the same benefits can accrue with the successor company. It is important that we continue to ensure that things like accumulated vacation benefits, severance pay and seniority to a lesser degree, are maintained and strengthened by the Labour Law. I have had representation made by three gentlemen in the construction field where the business they worked for seemed to have been sold every eight or nine years. People were expected to start over in regard to accrual of vacation and long term severance benefits.

Before going on, the one thing I will call on the Legal Department to do, not only with the Labour Law, is that our Laws need to be more reader-friendly. When you pick up some of the more recent Laws in other territories, you can understand them. Laws as drafted in Cayman, in that old style, it is an art to even be able to read them, much less understand all the implications. As a colleague just reminded me, it seems the Laws are written just for lawyers!

Those of us who have seen the push for plain English legislation in places like the US, have seen from what I understand no reduction in lawyer’s fees or lawyer’s income, because people still need lawyers to interpret Laws and represent them. All I am calling for is plain English legislation so that people can actually make head or tail of a sentence.

MOMENT OF INTERRUPTION—4.30 PM

The Speaker: We have reached the hour of interruption, will you be finishing shortly?

I will entertain a Motion for the adjournment.

ADJOURNMENT

Hon. Edna M. Moyle: Mr. Speaker, I move the adjournment of this Honourable House until 10 am tomorrow.

The Speaker: Before putting the question, I have given permission to the Third Elected Member for West Bay under Standing Order 11(6) and under Standing Order, Sub Order 7 I have waived the two days' Notice to a matter of urgent importance to the country.

RAISING OF PUBLIC MATTER FOR WHICH GOVERNMENT HAS RESPONSIBILITY

Standing Order 11(6)

DISAPPEARANCE OF ILLICIT DRUGS FROM THE POLICE VAULT

Capt. A Eugene Ebanks: Thank you.

I wish to raise the following matter regarding the recent disappearance of illicit drugs from police safe-keeping. It is my belief that the public should be informed as to the circumstances surrounding the recent disappearance of drugs. It is also distressing that this has occurred on more than one occasion.

The public also needs to be informed as to what, if any, investigations are ongoing and if any persons have been charged with the disappearance of such illicit drugs on any prior occasion; and also to know the amount of illicit drugs that have disappeared in all cases.

The public also needs to know when was the last time drugs, being held by the police as evidence, have been disposed of publicly?

The Speaker: The Honourable First Official Member responsible for Internal and External Affairs.

Hon. James M. Ryan: Thank you.

Sometime during the night of 9 July, a storeroom adjacent to Central Police Station was broken into and approximately 42 kg of cocaine was taken. The Commissioner of Police did a press release initially on that and has today followed up with a further press release.

Chief Superintendent, David Gooding, is head of the uniformed branch, but with extensive investigative experience has been appointed to lead an investigation into the matter. His terms of reference include the internal police process which led up to decisions taken and events surrounding the breach of security and to make recommendations for security enhancements. He is also tasked with investigating the crime and the current whereabouts of the cocaine.

This is the first occasion that security of this particular storeroom has been breached, or drugs lost therefrom. The exhibits' store (another building) was the subject of a burglary on 1 June, 1999. On that occasion, packaged exhibits in the case of Gary William Hurlstone were stolen. Drug exhibits amounted to 4.1 kg of cocaine, and 1.6 grams of ganja. The drugs were not recovered.

Gary William Hurlstone, against whom the drugs were to be exhibited, appeared before the court and was convicted of the burglary of the exhibits' store. He was sentenced to serve five years' imprisonment.

Drug exhibits are able to be destroyed either ahead of the case where samples are retained or following the timeframe for appeal. They are destroyed in the presence of a justice of the peace at the government's landfill site. Drugs are stored until there is a viable amount to burn. The incinerator requires approximately 5,000 pounds of items to work efficiently. Past practice shows that this amount is collected annually, or when greater amounts are stored. Dates of past drugs destruction are: 15 July 1994; 30 June 1995; 10 January 1997; 23 June 1998; 7 August 1998; 17 June 1999; and 6 March 2000. The last destruction was on 6 March 2000. This practice will be reviewed.

The missing 42 kg of cocaine was not an exhibit in a case and came into police custody as found property on 24 and 25 June 2001. The destruction was planned and the presence of the particular store it was in was the initial step to destruction. Unfortunately, we did not make it to destruction.

Thank you.

The Speaker: The question is that this Honourable House do now adjourn until 10 am tomorrow. Those in favour, please say Aye. Those against, No.

AYES.

The Speaker: The Ayes have it.

AT 4.30 PM THE HOUSE STOOD ADJOURNED UNTIL 10 AM THURSDAY, 12 JULY 2001.

OFFICIAL HANSARD REPORT
THURSDAY
12 JULY 2001
10.27 AM
Thirteenth Sitting

[Prayers read by the Second Elected Member for George Town].

The Speaker: Please be seated. Proceedings are resumed. Item number 2 on today's Order Paper, Reading by the Speaker of Messages and Announcements.

READING BY THE HONOURABLE
SPEAKER OF MESSAGES
AND ANNOUNCEMENTS

APOLOGIES

The Speaker: I have apologies from the Honourable Third Official Member who will be absent.

Moving on to Item Number 3 on today's Order Paper—Questions to Honourable Ministers and Members. Question 83 is standing in the name of the Elected Member for East End.

QUESTIONS TO HONOURABLE
MINISTERS AND MEMBERS

QUESTION NO. 83

No. 83: Mr. V. Arden McLean asked the Honourable Minister responsible for the Ministry of Planning, Communications and Works to explain why some Public Works Department's employees' wages have been reduced, in some instances by up to $200 per pay period.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Planning, Communications and Works.

Hon. D. Kurt Tibbetts: The Public Works Department is currently undertaking an exercise to correct an anomaly that exists whereby group employees within the Department have been working 44 hours per week, in contravention of General Orders which states "The normal working week shall be one of forty hours".

In carrying out the exercise, the management of the Department recognised that the shift from 44 hours to 40 hours per week may cause hardship to the employees and, after consideration of several options, two were presented to the group employees as follows:

1. Work the forty-hour week (Monday to Friday) and half day every other Saturday at overtime rate (1.5 times the normal rate). If this option was chosen there would be no reduction in the weekly wages of the employee.

2. With the 44-42-40 option, the workweek will be gradually reduced during 2001. From 1 January 2001 to 30 June, the workweek would have remained at 44 hours. Effective from 1 July 2001 group employees received a special increment and working hours were reduced to 42 hours per week. Effective 1 January 2002, working hours will be reduced to 40 hours per week.

Discussions were held in May between the Chief Secretary, the Deputy Chief Secretary, the Permanent Secretary for the Ministry of Planning, Communications and Works and the Chief Engineer and this option was revised to include a further special increment that will be awarded on 1 January 2002. His Excellency the Governor has subsequently approved, on 5 July, the 44-42-40 option with the two special increments. The special increments will partially offset the reduction in take-home pay that will result from the reduced working hours.

Public Works Department (PWD) employees were given a choice between the two options before the 44-42-40 option had been revised to include the additional special increment. The deadline to select an option was 31 March 2001. For those employees who did not select an option by that date, on 1 April the workweek was reduced to 40 hours per week and employees subsequently saw a reduction in their wages. The maximum reduction in wages experienced by PWD employees as a result of the reduction in working hours per week is for those on the highest hourly rate and amounts to approximately $120 per pay period.

Following revision of the 44-42-40 option and approval by His Excellency the Governor, on 5 July, of the extra increment, approximately 50 PWD group employees who previously did not select any option will now be offered the opportunity to select the revised 44-42-40 option with the additional special increment.

SUPPLEMENTARIES

The Speaker: The Elected Member for East End.

Mr. V. Arden McLean: The substantive answer stated that for the employees who did not select the options on 1 April, their workweek was reduced to 40 hours per employee. Can the Honourable Minister say whether or not there was a petition sent to the Government from those employees asking for a review of the two options prior to their deciding one of those two options?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Planning, Communications and Works.

Hon. D. Kurt Tibbetts: So, that it is clear before I answer the Member's supplementary, where it says in the substantive answer that on 1 April the workweek was reduced to 40 hours per week and employees subsequently saw reduction in their wages, it is those employees who did not choose either of the options given at that time.

Those employees still had the option to work the half day every other Saturday at time-and-a-half to make up for the wages. I think there was a difficulty with some of them about working on a Saturday. That is where the problem was. It was not that they were limited to the 40-hour week total; it was just that Monday to Friday was 40 hours. I just want to make that clear. It was not that they did not have the option to make up the time to be able to get the same salary they were receiving before.

There was a petition. I personally have not seen it. I think it went to the Governor. It was when other people began to speak to me about it that I began to speak to the head of the department and others when they started to look into the matter again. I am not so sure whether that petition asked for a revision of it before this was done or not. If the Member saw it, and that was the case, I would not try to say that it was not the case. What the substantive answer gives is the sequence of events that actually happened.

The Speaker: The Elected Member for East End.

Mr. V. Arden McLean: Can the Honourable Minister say if that petition has been replied to?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Planning, Communications and Works.

Hon. D. Kurt Tibbetts: I do not know that. As I said, that was addressed to His Excellency the Governor. I have not seen it. I do not know the manner in which he has dealt with the petition itself. His other involvement is explained in the answer.

The Speaker: The Elected Member for East End.

Mr. V. Arden McLean: Can the Honourable Minister say, on that half day he alluded to, if the first option was not for the employees to come in and work 2.6 hours as opposed to a half day on Saturday?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Planning, Communications and Works.

Hon. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Just so that part of it can be very clear, where the Member refers to 2.6, I think it is something like 2.67, that would be every Saturday, or twice that amount, which is 5.5 approximately and one third every other Saturday, which equates to the same thing for every two-week pay period. It would equal the same number of hours and the same pay whether they worked half the number of hours every Saturday or twice that number every other Saturday so they would have two Saturdays off and two on.

The Speaker: The Third Elected Member for George Town.

Dr. Frank S. McField: Can the Honourable Minister say if the employees at PWD have been informed that, under sections 3 and 4 of the Labour Law, it is possible that the Government would be subject to the Labour Law? It is in changing the conditions of the employees in such a way that it is no longer consistent with what would be considered the standards accepted by the law. This means that, since there is a change in the provisions of working conditions, the employees have a right to agree or not to agree to the change in those conditions.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Planning, Communications and Works.

Hon. D. Kurt Tibbetts: I hope I got it clear as to what the Member is seeking. If I understand what he is saying correctly and if you look at the options afforded the employees, then the conditions he refers to is that the only change would be is how the number of hours is achieved. There were no other conditions that would change.

Prior to the proposed change, the 44-hour working week was achieved between Monday and Friday. The options gave employees an opportunity to still work those 44 hours, but not the same number of hours per day. It was fewer hours per day between Monday and Friday so it meant they would have to make up for it either every Saturday or every other Saturday and it afforded them an overtime rate on a Saturday which would allow them to achieve the same salary.

Now, the important issue is, that besides going back to wrangle with the original situation that obtained, I think, we need to concentrate on what obtains now, which is the latest agreement. Regardless of what arguments we speak to as to what was done prior to this, after the various talks between the Chief Secretary and His Excellency and others, this is the situation which obtains now. Perhaps we need to look at what the situation is now, because anything we spoke to before, was before. That is not the case now.

The Speaker: The Second Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman.

Mr. Lyndon L. Martin: It appears that the hours for the workweek have not changed. It is just how these hours are achieved. Considering the words "normal working week," referred to in General Orders, that limits it to 40 hours. Can the Minister provide the House with the reason why efforts were not made to amend the General Orders rather than amending how these 44 hours were achieved by the workers?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Planning, Communications and Works.

Hon. D. Kurt Tibbetts: First of all let me make it very clear that this domain is not something over which I have authority. Nevertheless, being the Minister responsible for public Works, naturally there will be some involvement at some point in time.

In answer to the Member's question, he will need to appreciate that there are other departments in Government. For instance, there is the Department of Environmental Health, DVES (The Department of Vehicle and Equipment Services), and perhaps a few others that have group employees that faced the same situation and which, prior to this had already normalised their group employees to a 40-hour week. This left only Public Works (PWD) with the 44-hour week.

To change General Orders to satisfy the situation which obtained at PWD would mean having to go back and change all of those to a 44-hour workweek again.

There is a question about the contracts, Mr. Speaker. It is not something which obtains across the board because the contracts over the last few years that have been issued and renewed are 40-hour week contracts. Most of the people this would normally have affected are the longer serving employees. This is the reason to go the extra mile to try to work the situation out so there is no change in their take home pay. I think this will have basically been achieved by the latest move.

The Speaker: The Second Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman.

Mr. Lyndon L. Martin: The Minister explained in his original answer that there were two options for all employees in how they could obtain the 44 hours. Can the Honourable Minister provide the House with the following information? Once the 44-42-40 option was amended to include two special increments, were the employees who previously selected one of the other two options given an opportunity to revisit the situation with the new amended option?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Planning, Communications and Works.

Hon. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Yes, that is certainly the case. Every employee had the opportunity to move into the situation as per the very latest development. Nobody is disenfranchised.

The Speaker: The Second Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman.

Mr. Lyndon L. Martin: Thanks for that assurance.

In mentioning the figure of $120 per pay period, the maximum that any employee would have experienced in reduction, can the Honourable Minister say what that pay period is?

The Speaker: Please repeat that question.

Mr. Lyndon L. Martin: For the pay period that was represented by the maximum reduction of $120 per employee, what is that pay period? Is it one week or two weeks?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Planning, Communications and Works.

Hon. D. Kurt Tibbetts: That is a two week pay period, the standard pay period for PWD. I need to clarify something so that it is crystal clear. I said that every employee had the option. Those employees who were hired on a 40-hour week contract, and subsequently had that contract renewed are already on the 40-hour per week contract. There is no need to revisit their contracts to be going from 44-42-40 because they are already at 40. The other option, 44-42-40 and the very last paragraph in the substantive answer, speaks to the 50-odd PWD employees; those are the employees who were originally under the 44 hour week contract.

And let it be clearly understood also that when there was this original 44 hour per week contract, the General Orders have been revised since then to comply with the developments in the Labour Law. This is what caused the 44-hour week obtaining prior to that to be ultra vires the General Orders. There was a time when the 44-hour workweek was the standard procedure, but General Orders were revised since then to comply with the Labour Law.

The Speaker: The Elected Member for East End.

Mr. V. Arden McLean: Can the Honourable Minister say if it was agreed between employer and employees that they would breach that contract already in place, or was there an addendum saying that the employee and employer agreed to reduce the work week from 44 to 40, which was part of the contract in place at that time?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Planning, Communications and Works.

Hon. D. Kurt Tibbetts: My understanding from the Department is that it was done in the form of a memo. I do not have the memo here, but the gist of it, from my understanding, is that when the employee who did not choose a specific option, the normal working week was reduced to 40 hours for the employee, although the penultimate paragraph in the answer does not state it. Every one of them was given the option of making up the other four hours by the two methods on the weekend. In other words, employees still had the option to work 44 hours to receive the same pay. The only basic difference was that between Monday and Friday, because of the change in the working hours, they could not capture 44 hours. So, they would have received a memorandum stating that if they did not choose an option, their normal working week would be reduced to 40 hours. However, they could make up the other 40 hours in the way explained.

As I understand it, the difficulty arose as a matter of principle to the PWD employees who still wanted to work their 44-hour week, but not work on Saturday. They wanted their 44-hour week between Monday and Friday. I think that is basically where the whole difference came in. That is my understanding of what transpired.

The Speaker: The Elected Member for East End.

Mr. V. Arden McLean: Did that contract speak of 44 hours being the normal workweek? If that is the case, then we are in breach of contract. We cannot change that by virtue of a memo because the Cayman Islands Government did that with Caribbean Home Insurance. They were trying to change it by memo and now they are in breach of their contract.

I would like to ask the Minister if this has now been resolved and if the employees have been informed of the current situation? When was that done?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Planning, Communications and Works.

Hon. D. Kurt Tibbetts: I do not have a contract, and do not believe I have ever seen one to be honest. However, it is my understanding where the Member refers to breach of contract, I believe, is a contract which was done in compliance with General Orders when General Orders stated that the normal working week was 44 hours. The contract would have remained in force and no one addressed it. General Orders changed to 40 hours and nobody said anything about it.

I accept what the Member is saying about the employee's situation. The original contract would have stated 44 hours. I am not arguing that point. I have never seen it, and have never been directly involved with the whole affair. There would probably have been in that contract reference to the 44 hours as per clause so and so in the General Orders, which, from a legal standpoint, would stand to reason that if that section of the General Orders is revised to say 40 hours, it would have to reflect on the contract also. It may have been a situation that no one addressed.

Meetings are being scheduled now, rather than doing it in a dry fashion, because I think it is important that all employees understand the possible way forward, from next week onwards.

I will say one last thing which may fix the situation; I did not plan to address it, but I think this will fix the situation. The new option depends on exactly what the hourly rate of the individual is. The new option almost, if not exactly, puts the situation back to level. Once they get to that point the difficulty that has arisen between March and the present day, regarding the salary, once there is agreement and the workers take on the new contract, they will be reimbursed for what they lost.

The Speaker: The Third Elected Member for George Town.

Dr. Frank S. McField: I am happy to hear that this labour dispute has been resolved in this manner, which I believe is beneficial to both parties involved. To say that the normal working hours of General Orders is 40 hours per week, meaning anything beyond 40 hours is overtime, which is how you were doing it. People who were working 44 hours per week before were being paid straight time; they were not being paid for the four hours overtime. It was recognised that they could have claimed overtime. I am asking whether or not, Government did not have the option to pay those persons for those four hours overtime rather than saying to them that General Orders specify they could only work 40 hours. If these persons were already working 44 hours, what should have been fair at that time is that they would have been paid for overtime for the extra four hours.

The Speaker: You will bring this to a question please?

Dr. Frank McField: Yes, Mr. Speaker. Is what I just said truthful?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Planning, Communications and Works.

Hon. D. Kurt Tibbetts: I do not even want to proffer an opinion about the veracity of the statement the Member just made. I am not suggesting that what he said is not the truth, but I would have to look very carefully at how the statement was made as to whether or not its application to the truth would obtain in the manner in which he was trying to express it.

I think the real situation is such that the 44 hours that PWD employees worked over an extended period of time was considered the normal working week. When the General Orders changed to 40 hours being the normal working week the fact that the PWD employees were working 44 hours did not necessarily, by way of compliance with the Labour Law, demand overtime for the extra four hours. That was not what the employees were seeking either. What everybody wished to achieve, which was satisfaction on both sides, was that work could go on. I think we have arrived at that point. It is a matter of implementation now.

From next week on, there will be meetings set up with the various sections of those employees to walk them through to make sure they understand there is no more confusion again. I believe the situation will be resolved.

I will seek a legal opinion and promise the Third Elected Member for George Town an answer, whether or not it was truth or an opinion, based on his interpretation. I am truthfully not in a position to do that at this time.

The Speaker: Two additional supplementaries.
The Elected Member for East End.

Mr. V. Arden McLean: I believe we are getting someplace with PWD employees to get this resolved to the satisfaction of both employee and employer. I believe that if it had not been carried out in such a dogmatic manner it would have been resolved a long time—

[inaudible interjection]

Mr. V. Arden McLean: However that goes, it matters not to me. I would like to ask when the General Orders were changed. Is it not so that it is Government that wants to change it to 40 hours and not the employees? In so doing should there not be an agreement between both? When was it changed to say 40 hours per week normal workweek?

SUSPENSION OF STANDING ORDER 23(7) AND (8)

[Moved by the Honourable Minister for Planning, Communications and Works]

QUESTION PUT. AGREED: STANDING ORDER 23(7) AND (8) SUSPENDED TO ALLOW QUESTION TIME TO CONTINUE BEYOND 11.00 AM.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Planning, Communications and Works.

Hon. D. Kurt Tibbetts: I truly believe that what the Member for East End is asking goes way before my time. I am not quite sure of the year. As I mentioned, other departments have gone through the same process. I think it is a simple matter that PWD was left for last because people might have seen some problems and everybody tried to avoid dealing with the problems. I am not 100 percent sure because I really do not know.

The decision was not of Government to say get it done, it has been an ongoing process throughout the departments to have the 40 hour workweek complied to. It is not an isolated situation, it just so happens that this is when it was done.

As the Member will appreciate, I found myself in a position not knowing much more than he did because it was done internally. Perhaps what he refers to will have to be labelled an internal situation. That is not to exonerate myself, but it is simply a fact. It was done internally and only after some dissatisfaction was aired, was when everybody else started to get into the process.

Suffice it to say that while all the questions asked may not have been answered in the manner that the Members may have wished, it is to be appreciated that at least we have gotten to the point where the situation will be resolved. We can put it to bed, people can get back to work without having to speak about this thing half the day, and we can get on with our lives.

I thank you, Mr. Speaker, knowing they will not ask any more supplementary questions.

The Speaker: The Elected Member for East End.

Mr. V. Arden McLean: It looks like the Minister is trying to get out of something here.

Hon. D. Kurt Tibbetts: No I am not!

Mr. V. Arden McLean: I know he is not, believe me.

It is my understanding that the loss to the employees was somewhere around 10 percent on the regular workweek. Now, if 15 can get people going on the TV, I do not know why 10 cannot.

[Interjection]

Mr. V. Arden McLean: That is COS (Contracted Officers' Supplement). The whole airwaves were plugged up, but for the little Caymanian men it was not thought of.

Anyway, after the end of the 44-42-40 option, which I understand the employees are prepared to take, what will be the net loss after the special increments and regular increments, which I suspect would be three?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Planning, Communications and Works.

Hon. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Unfortunately, in the Member's attempt to make sure his points are well made, inadvertently some of his points may come as if I had something to do with the dissatisfaction. I wish to make it very clear to him that I am not even the messenger in this situation. I am absolutely totally not responsible, neither do I have anything to do with the decisions we have just spoken about. In any case, the fact of the matter is that when we look at the three increments that will occur between the 44 hour week and its final reduction to a 40 hour week, what that would then relate to is 7.5 percent increase on what the base wage would have been. If we look at the 44 going to 40 there would have been a loss of 10 per cent. So, I think the maximum net loss will be 2.5 per cent at the end of the day.

The Speaker: That concludes Question Time for this morning. Item number 4 on today's Order Paper.

Moving on to other business—Private Member's Motion No. 3/01, Review of the Labour Law.

[Addressing the Second Elected Member for George Town]—have you completed?

I would like to say to Honourable Members that the deliberation by the Second Elected Member for West Bay was in extreme detail. We are attempting to review the Labour Law. I appreciate that it is very important legislation, but I do not believe that this is a fitting place to air all of our suggestions. I would ask Members to try to make your debate as relevant to the review of the Labour Law as possible.

The Second Elected Member for West Bay.

OTHER BUSINESS

PRIVATE MEMBERS' MOTIONS

PRIVATE MEMBER'S MOTION NO. 3/01

REVIEW OF THE LABOUR LAW

Mr. Rolston M. Anglin: Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

I accept and acknowledge your position on this matter. Of course, we have to be as efficient as we can in our contribution, but, as you acknowledged, this is an extremely important piece of legislation.

In regard to the Labour Law and the way in which we would seek to have the Rehabilitation of Offenders Law work in tandem to make sure that persons who have served sentences at Northward Prison, or who have other convictions, not have this unfairly prejudice against their ability to earn a decent living. It was encouraging to hear the Honourable First Official Member give an undertaking some days ago to review the Rehabilitation of Offenders Law to ensure that it adequately addresses the spirit of the law.

This Motion has historically conjured up a lot of controversy in this community. Merchant associations have come down on Government with sledgehammers over this issue because everybody wants to run a profitable business. There is often a lack of commitment to ensure that labour conditions and relations are kept at a fair level.

In regard to the matter of gratuities in the hospitality industry, motions have been brought to this House, and this has always been deemed a real bone of contention, resentment and discontent among the employees in this profession. I am pleased to stand here today, some eight months since being elected, to tell the public that we have not only embarked upon reviewing important legislation like the Labour Law, but we have also embarked on matters such as instituting a minimum wage. This is seeking to address a lot of the inadequacies in the hospitality industry, in particular, in compensation, with a base pay and gratuities being something more discretionary, that is, from the guests.

It is with that area in mind that I have called for everyone in the labour market to be given a detailed breakdown of their week's work, their hourly wage and earnings. Currently, numerous hotel and condominium properties provide the statement of gratuities as called for in the regulations. However, I still hear some complaints in regard to the ease in which employees can understand what they are presented with. This is a matter that is extremely important because a lot of our people work in that industry. It would be incumbent to seek some form of standardisation in that regard. I know the labour department has tried this as well.

In regard to the matter of deductions from one's pay, I think it is fair to say that it is incumbent on employers to ensure that from the outset of employment that people clearly understand what is being taken out of their salary. This has caused discontent. In most instances, it was simply a misunderstanding, mainly of pension deductions.

I think that I have presented the areas which I would like to see tightened up in the Labour Law. The Minister responsible has spoken at length on his vision for labour, human resources, and relations. I do not feel that I need to go back over that territory. I now look forward to hearing my colleagues' contributions. I thank you, Mr. Speaker, for bearing with my sometimes detailed contribution.

The Speaker: The Third Elected Member for George Town.

Dr. Frank S. McField: Mr. Speaker, I shall count my words as I proceed.

The Speaker: I thank you too!

[Laughter]

Dr. Frank S. McField: Mr. Speaker, I think the Motion brought by the Second Elected Member for West Bay is a timely motion. Although I am not to speak for the Government, I am quite sure that the Minister responsible for labour will agree that this review is timely.

I have to begin my contribution by referring back to the case of the Hyatt vs. Labour Department where it was decided in the case that a large amount of gratuities were paid to managers in contravention of the Labour Law. Although the Hyatt had been notifying the Labour Department of the gratuity scheme they had been using, nothing was done to bring them to court to make sure that the workers got the benefits required by statutory instruments.

Section 70 of the Labour Law says: "Whether or not a complaint has been filed, the Director shall be charged with securing the proper observance of this Law." This is a very powerful section of the law. It gives the Director the power to make sure that the law is observed.

In this particular case, and in looking at the 14 February 2000 ruling made by the Court with regard to the Hyatt Britannia Corporation, Ltd., and the dispute over the gratuities, we see that although there is a statutory instrument to guarantee certain conditions for workers, at the end of the day those conditions may not exist. We cannot just depend upon statutory instruments, but we must also depend upon vigilance. That vigilance to see that certain of the statutory instruments are enforced cannot just be the domain of the Government by virtue of its labour Ministry or Department of labour. In this case, workers were deprived of millions of dollars as a result of the fact that Government was not vigilant enough, not interested enough, or not sufficiently qualified to act on behalf of the workers.

Why is it that the Labour Law, created around 1988, did not take into account its companion legislation, the Trade Union Law? The mere fact that the Labour Law does not say anything about its companion legislation, legislation made before the Labour Law, is one of the main problems I have with the present Labour Law.

Apparently, what was happening from the very beginning was that Government was of the opinion that you could have statutory instruments that defined minimum conditions for workers, but you could ignore the whole concept of collective bargaining.

That is a great lack in the Labour Law. There is no mention of the recognition of this very important right. Collective bargaining is the collective right by which workers, through their trade unions, try to reach an agreement with their employers on wages payable and other benefits they will enjoy in exchange for their labour. In this sense it is Government recognising that the labour of employees is as much a commodity as the products or services they produce.

The Hyatt, for instance, will sell the services of its employees to whoever is in the market for buying these services, and they will decide what to sell that at. Workers also have the right to sell their labour or skills according to what they consider to be reasonable and beneficial to them.

Although the Labour Law will set minimum standards, it by no means should be there to address the situation to the point where there is no flexibility in the labour market, where negotiation cannot be carried on as it does with any other commodity.

I understand that when the Second Elected Member for West Bay is talking about maternity leave, and I do not necessarily want to get into the details, my concept of what a labour law should be is a law that sets minimum standards that does not try to achieve maximum benefits for any of the parties involved, be they employer or employee.

[Interjection]: Hear, hear!

Dr. Frank S. McField: Mr. Speaker, it might appear to a lot of people that when we say trade union legislation is the companion legislation of a labour law or employment act, we see this because we realise that the Government cannot and should not set legislation that will not provide for flexibility and negotiation in the workplace. Because flexibility and negotiation in the workplace is recognised by the Government as natural and beneficial to the general good of society, it is also recognised that in many instances negotiation will be best done collectively when employees present themselves as a united front to their employers. They will be able to achieve in negotiation, with their employers, things they could not achieve as individuals.

Although we might have maternity leave in our Labour Law that is not regarded by everyone as sufficient for the general good of society, we also have to look at the general good and the cost to the individual employer. This is in order to establish or maintain the general good by pursuing a policy for pre- and post-natal situations

Not every employer might be able to afford more than the 12 weeks of vacation for maternity leave. Some jobs might definitely require that people are not that long away from their jobs especially when they have to be replaced by someone. You might have a situation where you have a deficit in labour and may have to bring in somebody on a work permit to cover for that time.

This is not to say that I would not recognise the importance of mothers having time off, but the kind of financial burden that would be placed on employers should be negotiated between the employer and employee rather than mandated by Government as part of its protective legislation.

There is one detail I think that is worth mentioning, because we might not get a chance to deal with the details as there is no recommendation for this to be put into select committee, so, Parliament may only see a review of the Labour Law as a result.

The right of workers to employment is a very important concept. A lot of times, because of dispute, an employee may be summarily dismissed. The dispute could be the employee talking back to the employer who is acting almost like he or she is the master. As a result, the person loses his job and has to go to the Labour Department to make a complaint. The Labour Department has a system embodied in the Labour Law to go before a tribunal who would make a finding as to whether or not the dismissal was fair or unfair.

If it were an unfair dismissal, the employee would have been compensated. That person would have to be satisfied with that because the employer runs what he considers to be an open door policy—if you do not like it, you go; and if he does not like you, you go.

Employees should have the right to be placed back in the position by a tribunal making a finding that the dismissal was unfair if that is what the employee wants. If the worker does not want that, then they should be awarded compensation by the tribunal according to their findings.

That is a very important point that I thought would be interesting to bring up. I understand that part of the reason for going through a review of the Labour Law is because it has not necessarily been able to accomplish what workers, who depend upon the Labour Department as being their advocate, believe it should. Workers should never believe that Government should take their side only. Government should be the arbitrator and create the framework for the dialogue between the partners, the workers and employers. Government cannot take sides.

There have been many cases where the Chamber of Commerce and members (employers) have seen the Labour Department as being pro-labour to the point where they did not believe the department was being fair to employers. A lot of them are advocating dismantling the department because they see the department as having a kind of trade union function. So, workers would have less of a possibility to have any kind of reasonable way of settling disputes, and not becoming victims of the dictatorial policies sometimes employed by managers and owners.

I believe that the Government has to continue to pursue the reforms in industrial relations so that the Labour Law is reviewed, as the Trade Union Law is being reviewed to encompass concepts such as collective bargaining, the strikes, and terminology involved in dialogue. The recognition and certification of unions and how the process should work must all be part and parcel of an industrial relationship act which will embody these two pieces of legislation. Government must review these two laws together. I believe that was the intention of the Minister for labour.

There are some important points I need to make in regard to my position. I believe in fair play. I believe that the people who labour are entitled to a share of the national wealth by virtue of the fact that they are participants and they labour, and profits are partly the result of their investment.

How does that come about, where we find in society the distribution of economic benefits? Do we always have to get Government involved in the distribution of economic benefits? Will it just happen without any kind of involvement by any institution of any magnitude or power? No! Should government be that institution with that power? No!

Should the people who have an interest in selling their labour and reaping the maximum benefits for that be involved? Yes! How can they be involved? By organising them and allowing them to be organised in free trade unions.

This whole concept in regard to the International Labour Organisation (ILO), the fact that the Cayman Islands is a party to the International Labour Organisation ILO convention, especially those conventions governing freedom of association and collective bargaining, means that the Government of the Cayman Islands must actively pursue the concept of collective bargaining—not sit there and say 'Boy, we do not really matter one way or the other.' According to those conventions they have to actively pursue and encourage the concept of collective bargaining in this country. That is part of the ILO regulations. That is also why when the Minister responsible for public Works was answering those questions this morning it was surprising to me that we can have a labour legislation in this country which is considered to be serious without the Government itself, as one of the major employers in this country, not being subjected to the same laws that every other private citizen is subjected to.

That is the kind of arrangement that the ILO conventions are against at this particular time. Therefore, the whole attempt to review the Labour Law must take into account those international obligations at this point because they have become much more relevant to us today than they were to us yesterday.

There were a lot of people who would criticise us in the past for being philosophical. As I said to that previous government, philosophy is important. Knowing that you are is important—I think I am. It is important to recognise who we are, what we are, and what obligations we have, as a result of what and who we are.

We are human beings living in a human society that is a good society which we want to preserve. We have come to find that we can only preserve the goodness of society by preserving the fairness of society. We cannot just preserve the fairness of society by making laws that are oppressive; we must also make laws that create the framework and structure for people to bargain together as equal entities and not one side being intimidated simply because that person seems to be dependant upon the other one.

The idea that those persons who own capital, who are interested in profit relationships, rather than social relationships, see it as more important to be interested in the profits rather than the social outcomes. We find that labour legislation, and the whole concept of industrial relationships and how it is conducted worldwide, is important. This is in terms of emphasising, in all democratic and humanistic countries, the value of human relationships to the point where we do not eliminate profits that actually create the material condition for the improvement of those social relationships. At least the creation of profit is not pursued to the extent where we forget about the importance of maintaining productive social relationships.

If the State is to totally legislate that today, it lacks the possibility in the future for people to be flexible and to participate in defining what is important to them socially with regard to benefits in the workplace. There is a reason why workers become involved in the Hyatt, the Radisson, the Westin, at Barclays, at Royal Bank, at the Glass House and other areas. People will learn what participatory democracy really means because people start at the basic level of feeding, clothing and housing themselves—the basics—and then they go on to the more political level.

We are expecting people to be involved in politics in this country by first being involved in politics rather than being involved in the economics and then becoming involved in politics. This is what we can help people understand by having the types of conventions that are being advocated by the ILO, which, at this particular point, is playing a more important role by the fact that we have more of a need to review this legislation than some would think. I know for certain that this is very much the case.

Now, there are things going on in the Civil Service that we are not supposed to be as Members of the Legislative Assembly concerned about, like the contracted officers' supplement which—

The Speaker: I would ask you to please stick to the review of the Labour Law. That is outside of the Labour Law. Please continue.

Dr. Frank S. McField: Mr. Speaker, I would say that it is a question of labour and the Labour Law is supposed to regulate labour. If we are going to have a new Labour Law that is not going to take all labour into account; all employers, then it will not be worthwhile reviewing. I am saying the reason why we need to review the law is because the law is ineffective in providing that maximum blanket protection for all persons in our society. One of the things that Labour Laws must do is mandate equal pay for equal work.

The interesting point is that there is not going to be any way the Minister can come back to this Legislative Assembly with a Labour Law that does not support the principle of collective bargaining and equal pay for equal work for all persons, regardless of where they come from or how long they have been here, as long as they are legally within our jurisdiction and working.

I am not going to bother you much more, Mr. Speaker, since I understand you are trying to assist us in getting through in a democratic manner, the work we have proposed to do. I think I can finish up by saying that the employee and management relations which now should develop in this country must develop along the spirit of cooperation and fairness. Workers and employers must be given an institutional framework that will allow them to engage in a dialogue and arrive at new kinds of alliances.

I believe that we should have open minds in reviewing this Law. I believe we should try not to limit the rights of any of the social partners covered by this legislation. I think, rather than the legislation speaking specifically to what this one should have or that one should have, that the legislation should provide the framework for humanistic and beneficial dialogue between those persons involved in labour relationships.

The Speaker: We shall suspend proceedings for 15 minutes.

PROCEEDINGS SUSPENDED AT 11.47 AM

PROCEEDINGS RESUMED AT 12.06 PM

The Speaker: Please be seated. Debate continues on Private Member's Motion No. 3/01, Review of the Labour Law. Does any other Member wish to speak? Does any other Member wish to speak?

Does any other Member wish to speak? We can only pause for five minutes. Does any other Member wish to speak?

The Fourth Elected Member for West Bay.

Mr. Cline A. Glidden Jr.: Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

I take great honour in seconding this very important Motion requesting a review of the Labour Law. As the Third Elected Member for George Town said about the Hyatt case, that incident alone would be sufficient reason to review the law.

The Mover of the Motion went into quite a bit of detail, so I will do my best not to go into that detail as well. I hope that during the review Members of the House will have a chance to make a contribution to that as well. I will make a few suggestions to those who will be involved in the review.

An issue that has come to our attention often concerns the cutting down of the hours for people working in the hospitality industry. The slowdown has caused the local labour force to be penalised by a restriction on hours. I assume these representations have been made to the Minister of Labour as well. I am sure he will address those in his upcoming review.

The issue clearly defines that wages has been an issue for quite a while, and there have been calls for a minimum wage law. There is a provision in our existing law for a minimum wage review committee to be appointed by the Governor-in-Council.

My first motion to this House concerned the establishment of a minimum wage advisory committee, or a select committee to establish minimum wage. That motion was passed and I would hope that in this review of the Labour Law the minimum wage motion would also be introduced. With all the motions that have been approved and passed, we have not been able to get along with any of that work. Since we have identified the need for these various committees, I am a bit anxious to get going with the work of those select committees so the motions can be brought for those bills. We can then incorporate the motions we agreed were so important.

The Second Elected Member for West Bay mentioned the vacation pay and the need to support longevity in the workplace. The issue of only being entitled to four weeks vacation after having worked ten years seems to indicate a lack of incentive for people to stay employed for long periods of time. I happen to know that some of the bigger private employers have made their own arrangements. I guess that gives credit to the suggestion made by the Third Elected Member for George Town concerning the requirements of this law being the minimum requirements.

With companies that have established agreements with their employees, evidence shows that they have a higher rate of long-term employees. I would suggest that some consideration be given to, if not mandating, perhaps advising, that after certain periods of employment, vacation and severance pay would be changed.

One other issue that comes to mind is the standard workday being defined at nine hours. I am aware that in other parts of the world, in light of all the concerns for family and family management, that parents are encouraged to extend work hours in a particular day to accommodate the required hours for the week. Instead of working five, eight-hour days, individuals may choose to work four ten-hour days and get an additional day to spend with their families. Our current law discourages that.

I think we have many indications as to where the deficiencies are in the law, that being a decent relationship between employer and employee. We do have issues of compassionate leave qualifications; we have issues on workmen's compensation. Since this law is under review, and it seems that the general agreement is that it will be reviewed, I will close by saying that I look forward to this review and being able to provide whatever assistance I may be asked to.

The Speaker: Does any other Member wish to speak?

The Second Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. Alden M. McLaughlin, Jr.: Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

I rise to offer my brief contribution to this Motion seeking a review of the current Labour Law.

The current Labour Law came into effect in 1987—some 14 years ago. It has been amended a number of times since then. In my experience, the Law still needs some work.

I come to this debate with experience as an employee and employer; as one who has been an advocate for the employee, and an advocate for the employer before labour tribunals; and as one who has sat as chairman of a labour tribunal. Those experiences have given me insight into this legislation and what parts of it work well, and what parts do not.

I am going to limit my contribution by not venturing into too much detail, but will seek to highlight a number of areas where the Law can be improved. I preface what I say in that regard by saying that, while I support the idea of a review, I believe we must be careful that we do not seek to craft labour legislation which gives to employees all of the benefits that we believe would be desirable as employees ourselves. The labour legislation ought to have, as its objective, the creation of the legislative framework to establish minimum standards of employment, minimum conditions of employment under which those who work in Cayman can expect to be employed.

Those conditions can be improved upon by negotiation, by the demand within the workplace for the quality of employees, and those matters should be left to that kind of bargaining. It is well and good to ask that the legislation provide for 24 weeks of maternity leave, and to ask for paternity leave, and if one can negotiate those arrangements within the context of one's employment contract, that is well and good. As responsible legislators, we must be concerned not with ideal conditions, but with minimum standards and conditions which govern the employment situation in these Islands.

When discussing the Labour Law we must bear in mind that there is both an employer and an employee in this relationship. We must also bear in mind that this is one of the most expensive jurisdictions in the world in which to conduct business, and that labour costs in this jurisdiction are significantly higher than in most other places.

There have been a number of additional expenses that employers in this jurisdiction have had to bear over the course of the last decade or so. Those in most respects I believe, were very necessary additions—the creation of a National Pensions Law, which requires an employer to pay a contribution to his employees' pension, and the Health Insurance Law, which does likewise. All very necessary parts of employers' social contracts. These have increased the cost of doing business in this jurisdiction. Whenever we come to pass or amend legislation which imposes additional burdens and expenses on the employer, we need to bear that in mind.

When we increase from 12 weeks to 24, for example, maternity leave, we must understand that that is increasing the potential cost of running an employer's business. Time spent away from work by employees, whether it is sick leave, annual vacation leave, or maternity leave, is unproductive time from an employer's standpoint. That is time and opportunity when that employee is not producing for his or her employer.

I am not suggesting that there should not be adequate maternity leave, or that the 12 weeks as it currently stands where only 20 days of it is on full pay should not be looked at. I am simply saying that we should not attempt in our role as legislators to go about this exercise as though we were driving a hard bargain to achieve for ourselves as employees the best possible arrangement with an employer. What we should be trying to do is establish the basic standards for employment within this jurisdiction, not some ideal employment contract arrangement.

Much has been said about gratuities and the inadequacies of the law to deal with situations that have arisen and will continue to arise. That is an area of the Law in which, I believe, we need to review again. I endorse what has been said in that regard by those who have spoken before me.

The other area that needs some review is the issue dealing with the resolution of complaints. As the Law is currently structured, there is provision for labour tribunals to determine complaints for unfair dismissal. That really is the extent to which the labour tribunal's function can be exercised under the Law. A labour tribunal is limited to making orders for compensation for unfair dismissal and for severance pay. In my experience, most complaints tend to involve other matters which are outside the labour tribunal's remit, including failure by the employer to pay wages during the period leading up to the employee's termination, failure to pay overtime, and failure to pay vacation leave. I recall that during my time as chairman of a labour tribunal, it was expected both by the employer and the employee that the labour tribunal was capable of resolving and ruling on all of these issues. The practice developed over time that the labour tribunals would make findings about whether or not wages were due, or if overtime had been paid, and whether there was entitlement to vacation leave that had not been honoured, therefore we would record our findings in the written rulings. They had no real effect other than sort of a declaration which the department would take into consideration when it came to dealing with these issues because these other issues fell to them to be determined.

When we are looking at this whole question of resolution of complaints, we need to decide if a tribunal is going to be vested with the authority to hear complaints and that the authority needs to be in broad enough terms to enable them to deal completely with the complaint of the employee before them, rather than leaving off certain issues which have to be resolved by the department.

Those are some of the examples of areas of the law which I think needs to be reviewed. I think consideration also needs to be given to the provision in the Law which deals with employees working overtime at standard rates. As the Law currently stands, an employee, other than one at managerial level, cannot work hours in addition to those prescribed as the standard workweek, i.e., 45 hours, even if he wished to do so, unless a labour tribunal has determined that they are entering into those arrangements of their own free will and not as a result of any pressure from the employer.

In my experience, there are a large number of employees in the various industries in Cayman who do work significantly more than 45 hours per week, and who do those extra hours at standard rate. While I understand the intent of the Law, and that the labour tribunal must consider each and every one of these requests and determine whether or not the employee working those additional hours is doing so of his own free will, in my experience it simply does not work, the way the Law is currently structured.

It is nigh on impossible for the labour tribunals to be able to review each of these arrangements, speak to each employee, and determine whether he or she is doing this because they want to or because they are required to do so by the employer who will say 'if you do not want to work the extra hours at standard work rates, I will find somebody else who will.'

Further, we would require significantly more labour inspectors than we currently have if this section were to have any chance of being enforced. That is but another example of an area of the Law which warrants review.

So, I offer my support to the Motion seeking a review of this Law. I urge my cautions and reservations about what the review should entail and what we should seek to have the Law do. With those few words, I thank you.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for Education, Human Resources and Culture.

Hon. Roy Boddén: Thank you.

Mr. Speaker, the private Member's Motion asking for a review of the Labour Law is indeed a timely one. I recognise and respect the rights of the Mover and Seconder to bring this Motion even though it was publicly stated many times that it is the commitment of the Government to review the Labour Law. Indeed, as the Minister who holds constitutional responsibility for labour matters, I have been proactive and am already on the way to having the current Labour Law re-examined and making some proposals—not exactly proposals at this time because they have reached the stage of drafting instructions for a new law.

I am happy that the Motion is not asking for a select committee because that is not the way I would propose to go. I will elaborate on the reasons why later. I want to say that, in fairness, the current Labour Law which we have begun to realise as inadequate, in many respects, is a good beginning. However, I think we all realise that we need a broader, more accurately defined instrument because as the sophistication of the market grows, so do the problems and challenges we encounter. So, while the current Labour Law was a good first step, we realise now that it has been overtaken by events.

It is of critical importance that we establish from the beginning the tripartite nature of the law, the regulations, and any surrounding occurrences. It has to be a tripartite system of employer and employee and government. If we take the current criticism of what exists now, some people believe (depending on whom you speak with) that the law is skewed in favour of the employee or the employer. Well, with all due respect, we may never be able to craft a law which is accepted by all parties. It is the nature of the beast.

However, it is true to say that we can craft a law which is more acceptable and more accurate in some of the definitions and positions outlined than the current one. There are some major problematic areas in the current law that need to be ironed out. These problems do not so much as to emanate from the law in the way it was drafted as from the attitudes of persons affected by them. Often, it is a matter of conscience.

As someone who has studied history and sociology, and who understands a little about human behaviour, first we have to tell ourselves that we are coming to the table with a fairly open mind. It is a matter of conscience, and I do not know for the life of me how some people expect to get away with this. You cannot have people working beyond the normal workweek at straight wages. It goes against the grain of human expectation and understanding.

The first thing you hear is that it is going to be bad for business. What about bad for the social conscience? These are the challenges I would hope to have dealt with by the new Law that this Government and this Minister is proposing.

This leads me conveniently to say how I expect to deal with the instrument. I am aiming for major public consultation. We are getting the drafting instructions together and I prefer that we put together a new law from scratch. I do not like to revamp the old; I do not want to build a quilt; I want to start with a new spread. When that is done we have to take into consideration several things that no Member speaking has mentioned. I listened to the debate from the Mover right through, and I have to commend the Honourable Members who spoke because they all covered important areas that need to be covered.

No Honourable Member mentioned that the very face of work is changing because of a knowledge-based economy, because of e-business, because of information and communication technology (ICT). One of the things the new Law has to bear in mind and that is: we are entering into a situation where it will not be uncommon to have persons working from home. That is what ICT allows people to do. The tools and skills of the workplace are also going to change. So people are going to do a lot of work, contracted or otherwise, from home.

The new Law has to take these kinds of situations into consideration. What would be their privileges? What would be their entitlement? What would be their rights? We cannot get away from the fact that we are going to have to tailor into our law consideration of obligations and commitments emanating out of the European Union. These are freedom of movement, freedom of association principles—equal entitlement, equal privileges, maternity leave, paternity leave. It is not just going to be an exercise where we can just scrap one instrument and write another one. However, I am confident that we are on the right track.

Members will recall the announcement we made some time ago that we had a consultant down, Mr. Peter Syson whom the Ministry contracted to do some research in the Cayman Islands on directions we might take in making this whole move to an employment services centre, and a comprehensive look at human resources. I am happy to report that Peter Syson has finished his work, compiled his report, and it is at the London Office just waiting to be sent to the Ministry for consideration.

Importantly too, any new law we craft has to be tied in to the aspirations and findings of Vision 2008. We have undertaken to do a modern and comprehensive instrument which we hope that, after the public consultation period and it is passed in this Honourable House, it can serve us well without any major restructuring at least for the next decade. It will not be so perfect that it will not need amendments from time to time.

In this consideration, we recognise that there also has to be companion legislation. The Labour Law, in and of itself, will not cover everything in terms of labour and employment relations; employer and employee. It is at this point that I find it important to say that as Minister I have spoken to my Permanent Secretary and we have agreed that legislation, as it exists now, is lacking because I am of the opinion that we need to craft (and Government has undertaken to do that) a modern Trade Union Law. However, more importantly, we also need to address workmen's compensation and safety in the workplace.

I see these three areas as important corollaries to any modern legislation. We must have them if, for no other reason than the workplace is changing and people are more knowledgeable of their rights and privileges and will challenge. So we have to have these instruments in place as a guide. Not only that, when it comes to things like safety in the workplace, it is only commonsensical. As I move around on construction sites, I am alarmed to see people on high buildings, walking under scaffoldings, under buildings being erected with no protective head gear and walking about on compounds with no steel-soled and steel-tipped shoes, and around steel benders with no protective eye gear or gloves. Only in the Cayman Islands!

More alarming than that, I have had people come to me who were injured on the job. What happens to them? In many cases, the employers grudgingly agree to pay the medical expenses. In some cases, they do not and the people are laid off, fired. I see it every day and I am alarmed at how employers can get away. It is only through God's mercy that we do not have more people injured.

The whole area of small businesses and self-employed people, are some of the areas which have to be addressed to ensure they are adequately protected and taken care of. This also includes the small construction firms.

Discrimination is top of the list in the workplace, in all its myriad of forms. Work permit holder, versus Caymanian; discrimination on the basis of gender, physical ability, age or religious belief. This all has to be covered in the Law. Perhaps at the heart of this Law is the change of a system for dealing with complaints. It is here that I would like to spend some time and place the greatest emphasis. This may be the single-most problematic issue with the Labour Law now.

First of all, I want to say that it is crucial we eliminate, as far as possible, the adversarial relationship between employer and employee—therein the challenge of the Ministry lies. We want, with the new Employment Services Centre, to create the reputation that the Labour Board as it will exist is a neutral, non-partisan board.

Right now many employers think the Labour Board is in favour of the employees. We wish to get the reputation carefully cultivated that we are neutral. We also wish to have, as an ideal, that the differences and problems are settled in the workplace; that there are attempts to settle them on the shop floor, in the office as a first resort. To that extent, it is proposed to do away with the tribunal system. It may have been a good intention, but it really has not served us as well as it could. I do not wish to cultivate the number of adversarial complaints and attitudes that I have witnessed, even in my brief time in office, as a result of the kind of system we have.

Let me say this clearly: I have the greatest appreciation for those persons who volunteered to serve on tribunals. It is a difficult, if not impossible task. It may have been well meaning to the people who proposed it in the first place, but in hindsight, it really is not working. We must craft a better system. So, we want to set up a system where we emphasise arbitration, mediation, and conciliation. We want dialogue. The best system is one where the parties get together themselves and make the agreement. In those cases where an agreement needs to be ratified or formalised, then we can make arrangements to do that, but the Government, in the tripartite system, sees itself as a facilitator, mediator, conciliator, arbitrator and an educator. That is why we want to have the kind of centre where all and sundry can feel free to just drop in and make use of the facilities.

We will have a boardroom; we will have arbitration facilities and we will have people who can mediate if called upon, even on short notice. However, the Government must build and maintain the reputation of a neutral party and not only a neutral party, but a respected neutral party in a tripartite system.

Mr. Speaker, it is a good time to take the luncheon suspension.

The Speaker: We shall suspend until 2.15 pm.

PROCEEDINGS SUSPENDED AT 12.55 PM

PROCEEDINGS RESUMED AT 2.49 PM

The Speaker: Please be seated. Debate continues on Private Member's Motion No. 3/01, Review of the Labour Law.

The Honourable Minister responsible for Education, Human Resources and Culture, continuing.

Hon. Roy Boddan: Mr. Speaker, when we broke for lunch I was articulating some of the items which I think we need to include in a new and comprehensive Labour Law. I was going down a list of subjects which fell under the rubric of what I term discrimination.

Third on the list is this whole business of moving away from tribunals in settling disputes to arbitration, mediation and conciliation of disputes, similar to the Advisory, Conciliation and Arbitration Service (ACAS) system practised in the UK.

Fourth is the whole business of human rights and issues surrounding human rights, beginning with the most fundamental concerning freedom of association, which means that workers must be guaranteed freedom of association if they want to form themselves into a union or whatever kind of collective bargaining entity. The Labour Law must be crafted in such a way so as to give them this ability.

Then, under that rubric also, comes the whole business of equal pay, minimum wage, which we are going to be addressing in a new minimum wage law. We have talked about the necessity for flexible working hours which has been brought about by the changes from the traditional based economy to a knowledge based economy where people may want to work from their homes. In particular homemakers and housewives may want to take on contracts doing information based work for firms and companies.

Maternity and paternity leave, health and safety in the workplace—this whole business of redundancy would have to be addressed without any form of discrimination.

One important thing we have to bear in mind in crafting this Law is that we can no longer craft laws peculiar to Caymanian society and circumstances. I have a copy of pending European Union legislation. All of the legislation in this compendium makes reference to the European Union relations with what it calls O C Ts, overseas countries and territories. Every bit of legislation in that compendium makes reference to that. It is under various subjects from the environment right down to trade labour. We in the Cayman Islands, when drafting our labour law have to take into consideration the rights of these people, freedom of movement, freedom of association, because we are going to have people coming from those jurisdictions to work in Cayman and they are going to want to have the same or similar rights and privileges. We have to be sure that our laws are drafted in such a way that we can accommodate these people without encountering any legal challenge from them because if the laws are inflexible and rigid as to exclude them, we are going to have legal challenges.

We had better remind ourselves when drafting this Law that we can no longer use the old parameters. We have to take into consideration all of these kinds of occurrences.

The new Law will introduce the requirement for minimum standard contracts and complete pay statements showing appropriate deductions. It is going to contain a significant requirement for the maintenance of accurate and up-to-date records. It is proposed to extend the statute of limitations for prosecution of violations of the Labour Law. Of course, we are going to address this whole business of opting out of overtime pay, unless it is at the employee's discretion.

Health insurance, disability insurance options and this whole business of pensions is going to dovetail with the Pensions Law. We believe there is going to be a greater move towards small businesses where the Law will make provision for their peculiar problems.

We are going to attempt to address the issue of whether the civil service should be included under the Labour Law, since the civil service is the largest employer. I must admit that we have some difficulties now, because right now, civil servants are not affected by the Labour Law, yet we get complaints from civil servants of the same challenges people in the private sector experience. I believe, as the Minister, it is time for us to consider the one country, two systems. People are saying we have an anomaly because we have a law that does not apply to one sector of the population.

Of course, we are going to place greater emphasis on safety in the workplace and on workmen's compensation. That is what we plan to include.

Now, in speaking a little about the methodology, I believe, that it makes for good practice and, in the interest of time, I am happy that the Motion did not call for any select committee. The Government has stated that it was minded to review the Labour Law anyway. The drafting instructions are already well advanced. I would like to circulate a draft Labour Law between now and the end of the year with a period of six months for consultation with the public.

When we get the feedback, we will then review it. It could be brought with the amendments as a bill to the Legislative Assembly. We will debate that, and the Honourable Members will decide what they want incorporated. At that time we would be ready for a final drafting of the Law. I think that would be the most appropriate and perhaps the most comprehensive way of dealing with the matter. There is no necessity for us to reinvent the wheel. We already know from what has been said here and what the feedback is from the public about the areas we need to work on. It is of paramount importance—and expediency is of the essence—that we get this Law in place, which will be acceptable and understood by all. We will also have to spend time on the accompanying legislation; the Trade Union Law, Workmen's Compensation Law, and the Safety in the Workplace Law. All of these form a compendium. I think that is the best route to take.

I am going to end with this kind of codicil. It is my ambition when we get this Labour Law and its accompanying legislation accepted, I want to work on a Construction Lien Law. As I move around more and more, I get bombarded by small and medium sized entities where they have done the work, committed their time and funds, many times on the basis of informal contracts, but many times on formal contracts. Work was completed, there were no objections, but they cannot get their money and in a civilised society, that is a no-no. We do not have any legal mechanism for placing liens in those instances. Many Caymanians, small Caymanians, are being hard-pressed and off-put by people whose motives are less than honest. There is need for a legal foothold for these people to stand on. When I finish this spate of legislation, I am going to be working on a Construction Lien Law that will eliminate the kinds of odious practices where people are taken advantage of by people whose motives are less than honest.

I have left, for the last, the most sensitive matter. This is sensitive in the sense that it is politically sensitive, but also socially sensitive. I am aware that with the changing economic circumstances in our society there is great pressure and Caymanians in many instances are being dealt short-shrift. We have aggressive persons coming in taking advantage and Caymanians in many instances are being put off, put out and put under.

I frequently hear of instances of whole firms being taken over and Caymanians are shoved out the door. It happens in construction and in the professional and white-collar fields. I have not spoken publicly about it because it is a delicate matter and I do not want to sound the wrong signals. I am saying that even from personal experience I am aware of this, and I am going to relate an incident. I have had over the last several months many complaints of Caymanians being displaced. I have a theory about the disposition and the psyche of Caymanians from the days of slavery right on down why we are so docile and trusting.

The best cargoes came to this side. However, I will tell you this; we can no longer afford in a world of tight competition to allow this to happen to us. I am not a great believer in legislating protection. I believe in educating, training, and informing. That is why when people ask me if I support a union I have to give them what I consider an intelligent answer. What is wrong with that? A union is an entity which protects the rights of workers. I am not supporting any union, but I am supporting the workers' right of protecting themselves, ensuring that they have fair, amicable and reasonable working conditions. That means that they should be free from aggressive persons displacing them.

I want to send a message—I know it goes on; I know some of the characters who practise it. I am going to deal with it through the crafting of a Labour Law that will take care of those kinds of practices. In the interim, I have other means at my disposal to deal with that. It will not be tolerated. I have lived in another jurisdiction where some of those people come from and I know they could not carry on that kind of nasty behaviour where they came from, therefore they should not be allowed to carry it on here either.

These people hold us with such low regard that even when I, as Minister, try to speak with them, they treat me with contempt. It is like what Rodney Dangerfield says, "I get no respect!" They speak to me as if I was a lapdog. I can imagine how they speak to the people who work with them. Often they make decisions based on their prejudice. They have to understand it is a two-way street—respect begets respect. I hope that this message reaches them. While I am dealing now with a velvet glove, I have the mail fist in reserve. I believe that this society is a society where we can all coexist. I hope that no one takes the politeness, docility, and civility of the Caymanian employee for granted. Thank you.

The Speaker: The Motion is open for debate, does any Member wish to speak? The Motion is open for debate, does any Member wish to speak? The Motion is open for debate, does any other Member wish to speak?

The Honourable Minister for Tourism, Environment and Transport.

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: Mr. Speaker, I have been here a long time and never failed to express myself on any discussion relating to the working person in this country. I have listened with keenness to this debate calling for a review of the Labour Law.

Perhaps it is good, after all that has been said and insinuated over the years that a review should take place about the present law. We can then see whether we will have killed the devil and born his papa. I do not think there has been anyone in this House who has worked harder in these Islands and taken the brunt of criticism and accusation to get benefits and set standards for employee and employer than this Member.

When I entered this Assembly in November 1984 the only thing guiding employment practices and remuneration at that time was the 1842 Master's and Servant's Law. That Law contained provisions where penalties for illegal dismissal of servants or workers were set at a sum not exceeding £5. Penalty on the master for ill-treatment of the servant was a sum not exceeding £20 and on it went.

One of my first motions in March 1985 asked that these inequities be addressed. A committee was formed and it took some two years under the guidance of Mr. Norman Bodden, then Minister of Tourism responsible for labour matters. In this House at the time we had Mr. Benson Ebanks, Capt. Charles Kirkconnell, Sir Vassel Johnson, as members of Executive Council. You yourself, Mr. Speaker, sat on the bench for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman. We have come a long way since then and provided many benefits. I did not make that Law. I asked for a law when I sat on the committee and when I had an opportunity in 1993 to 1997, I tried my best to make changes that would be for the betterment of both the employer and the employee.

There has been talk as to the good of the Law, and whether or not it is respectable. This Law bridged a great divide and had it not been as encompassing as it is, we would have been in greater trouble today because back then in those days employees barely had rights. In those days, up until 1984, one of the laws that were repealed on the introduction of this Labour Code was a law entitled the Truck Law. This Truck Law was passed to prevent employers, especially merchants in those days, from paying workmen a weekly salary or a day's pay with goods from their business or forcing the workman to purchase goods from their business. However, it existed as it was made in 1944. This Law in existence today strengthened and wiped out completely those inequities. It strengthened the working man in this country. We have come a long way.

I represented the Cayman Islands at CARICOM, (Caribbean Community and Common Market), in Nassau last week, where the Cayman Islands have applied for an associate membership. At that heads of government meeting, some prime ministers were bemoaning how labour unions arbitrate on industrial disputes. Those prime ministers are in parties made from the labour union movement. They admitted it!

Mr. Speaker, one of the greatest needs today in the workplace, especially the casual labour marketplace, is to educate employers and employees on relationships. I set out when I had responsibility to do something about it. I am hoping that the review to take place now will address that because this would address much of the problems we face today. It is true that our people are given, in far too many instances, the dirty end of the stick which has caused far too many problems. This must be dealt with.

All industrial disputes need arbitration. How we go about that arbitration will decide whether the working man will be better or worse off than he is today, and whether the working marketplace will also be better or worse. History will teach us. Time, as the old people say, will tell.

I believe that all persons who held responsibility for labour in these Islands since 1984 have done well to get benefits. They have changed the way gratuities have been collected, from the type of vacation and how vacation is given. When I took office, the pregnant woman did not know what would happen to her. Today, in her confinement she is much better off. The sooner this House and this Government recognises the benefits that exist and say so meaningfully, the better off we are.

Anybody can talk about how bad something is but when it has done some good, we must also say how good it is. The truth is that many of the social inequities that existed when I came into this House as a young person, do not now exist because I could stand up and say that it needed to be done and I when I had the opportunity I took the chance to do something and others that came behind me did the same thing.

I am not going to be party to anything that is going to create more trouble than we have. I am not going to be beset with machinery that will come and beat each Member over the head, including the Government that attempts to bring it in. I am not going to create machinery for people who have nothing better to do than want political power when they believe they can manipulate workers in the country and get on television and beat McKeeva over the head.

I have fought for workers' rights in this country. I am big and ugly as the next man in this House and will stand by the worker. I am not going to be pushed into anything that will be worse for the working man in this country.

You know, nice sounding phrases, big beautiful boxes of words can help. When we set up machinery where the masters in that machinery drive the Mercedes Benz and the worker stands on a picket line and damages the tourism industry and the business that has to carry on the economy. I will not be party to that! Thank you.

I support a review and will do my part, giving advice where I can. The Minister brought someone down here recently and I spoke with that man. I think he has good ideas and is getting the feel of the relationships that exist between employer and employee, especially the Caymanian outside worker, which is where a lot of the problems exist. I think the Minister himself aired some of it a while ago.

I am not going to be pushed, cajoled, threatened or otherwise into dismantling the Labour Code that we have to say that I can bring better industrial relations by a union. I am not convinced this road is the one which this country should take. I will stand by the working man, as I have always done, or fall—and I have fallen many times, hard too. Thank you.

The Speaker: The Motion is open to debate, does any other Member wish to speak? The Motion is open to debate, does any Member wish to speak? The Motion is open to debate, does any other Member wish to speak?

Final call, does any other Member wish to speak? If not, does the Mover wish to exercise his right of reply?

The Second Elected Member for West Bay.

Mr. Rolston M. Anglin: Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

I have not heard anyone say they are not going to support the Motion, and I take the silence of Members to mean they will support the Motion. I thank everyone who has spoken, and those who have not.

There have been a few points raised which I think need some addressing. First, I would like to say that when I made a proposal for extending maternity leave, I did not say up to six months. I said we could consider 16 weeks. Be that as it may, I want to remind us all, especially employers in this country, that when we talk about minimum standards in this Labour Law we better make sure that those minimum standards are adequate. If they are not adequate, you had better accept what the alternative will be and we have seen what the alternative is. The Honourable Minister responsible for the Ministry of Tourism, Environment and Transport spoke directly to what the alternative is.

So, those of us who want to talk about the cost of doing business in Cayman, if we see inadequacies that we can redress by way of the Labour Law, at the end of the day, it is my view that is the preferred route than to have—the proliferation of labour unions in this country. Sometimes, when you do not want to give an inch, you wind up losing a mile.

I am an employee and I have only been an employee in my life. The Seconder of this Motion has been an employee and an employer. I was not an ordinary employee. I have been privy to more financial information than most Members of this House will ever see in their lives. I audited CIBC, Butterfield Bank, the Turtle Farm. I have done mutual funds auditing. I have audited Bank of America. I have audited Cayman Airways. I have audited non-profit organisations. Let us stick to business. I have audited a lot of businesses therefore, I have seen expenses.

I know that human resources issues are a key component of labour expenses in this country. I also know that the return on capital is second to none. These companies can claim what they want to claim, but you make a lot of money in these Islands. I do not think you would not be making a lot of money without seeing some of the multimillion-dollar homes. I do not think business people are that dumb to foolishly spend their money. I have seen the returns in black and white.

When we talk about laws, let us always remember what it is that we want to achieve socially. We can talk about all this stuff, but as long as we have the moral and social decay, with crime increasing and young people continuing to kill young people, we better recognise that everything has the potential to contribute to it.

I stand firm with my view, and that is, in the early days of life those are the years where it is crucial for both parents to bond with their child. It is necessary to know why there are so many deadbeat dads in Cayman. The woman goes through all the trials for the nine months; all the pain in the delivery and she winds up staying home with it. You get up, go to work in the day and at night, go to sleep on the sofa because you do not want the baby to wake you up since you have to get up early.

We, in this country, need to continuously assess our social consciousness. If drugs and crime continue to increase the way they are, this is going to negatively impact the productivity. In that case it would mean more work permits; more jails built and more tax money thrown at it, which can negatively impact tourism to the point where we have a contraction in that sector and that would be bad news for all of us.

I would like to acknowledge the tremendous amount of work done over the years in regard to getting the Labour Law to where it is. After all, this Motion calls for a review. I think we have a good Labour Law, but with everything, as time changes, it has to be modernised and it is continued to be reassessed to ensure that it still meets the needs of the people as we progress. After all, as people change, so do their needs.

Gone are the days when grandmothers went from children to children helping to care for babies. In are the days when we bring strangers into our homes to rear our children, and yet, we are surprised when we have social breakdown.

I consider myself a responsible legislator. I feel that I have seen enough in this life so far that I can get up and talk about labour. No, I may not be an employer,, however, I feel that I have seen enough and have enough common sense to recognise certain things in this Labour Law that can be improved without necessarily harming businesses to the point where they have to close down.

We have to recognise that businesses create jobs. It is demand for goods and services that make people take capital and risk it on a business venture. However, I am not going to stand here and pretend that more cannot be done in certain areas. If I did not feel that way, I would not have brought this Motion in the first place.

In the United Kingdom, a person can actually take up to 28 weeks off for maternity leave. Of course, there is a decline in the amount of money they get. I bring that up to make a point.

Mr. Rolston Anglin: Mr. Speaker, I made the point to show that there is a big gap between what we currently have in this country and what is available elsewhere.

I agree that we should have a labour law that sets out what we expect as a base level in regard to relationships between employee and employer. We must bear in mind two facts: 1) uneducated or low educated persons who carry out rather mundane junior level tasks within businesses in this country are significantly less able to negotiate more favourable conditions than a person who is educated and a professional. We better make sure that the minimum standards are adequate. If they are not, we are going to continue to see persons utilise the union movement to ensure that the persons who feel they do not have any power as individuals get the benefits they feel they deserve. It is one or the other.

At the end of the day every employer has to make a profit, otherwise why would they stay in business? At the same time, my personal conviction is that we should seek to have the Labour Law crafted in such a way that people can have a reasonable level of minimum standard, and that we do not have a continued proliferation in the union movement in this country. That is my personal view.

Let us say this Motion never came before this House. Let us say that the motions creating this Labour Law in 1987 never happened. Where do we think we would be today? People would not have idly sat by. Yes, Caymanians are docile, but they would not have idly sat by and worked under the conditions that prevailed. Something would have happened.

The Minister responsible said that he is going to have wide consultation in his review. I take that to mean that at the end of the day what is going to come back to this House will be something that employers also endorse. The Minister also said that when you speak with employers they say the Labour Law favours employees too much. Employees say the law favours employers too much. I think we all have enough common sense to know that the truth lies somewhere in between.

I caution all Members that if we do not ensure that the minimum standards are reasonable, the alternative will not be what we want for our economy and for our labour market.

Let us say that areas of this law which need amending are not addressed; then, we can be rest assured that more and more people will be attracted to the labour union movement and at the end of the day they are going to beat the employers over the head anyway. They will wind up getting the benefits they wanted to begin with, so employers will still incur those costs. The only difference I see is that the workers will be paying labour dues and attending labour meetings. In other words, they will be spending money that they could be spending on their families and attending meetings when they could be home with their children spending meaningful time with them. I want the parents of this country to be able to spend as much quality time with their children as possible and not be caught up in industrial action.

If we are responsible legislators, it naturally follows that the tool we provide in our tripartite system must have reasonably minimum standards. I would also like to add that we should seek in all of this to ensure that the public service is not significantly different in regard to the General Orders governing it. At the end of the day I do not feel we should have double standards.

I thank Honourable Members who spoke and said they support the Motion. I wish the Minister responsible the best of luck in his review process. One truthful thing he said was, that whatever we come back with we will get complaints. I have confidence that he is a strong leader and will do what is right.

I also thank my colleague from West Bay, the Honourable Minister responsible for the Ministry of Tourism, Environment and Transport, for his contribution. He has taken many a political beating, having to bulldoze the labour law and matters pertaining to workers, such as pensions, and a lot of times he is left on an Island. So, we are where we are, and I look forward to this matter coming back when the draft bill has been adequately circulated and the Minister feels it is time for us to review it. Thank you.

The Speaker: I shall now put the question on Private Member's Motion No. 3/01, Review of the Labour Law. Those in favour please say Aye. Those against, No.

AYES.

The Speaker: The Ayes have it.

AGREED: PRIVATE MEMBER'S MOTION NO. 3/01 PASSED.

The Speaker: Is it the wish of the House to take the break or continue on to 4.30? We shall suspend for 15 minutes.

PROCEEDINGS SUSPENDED AT 3.46 PM

PROCEEDINGS RESUMED AT 4.05 PM

The Speaker: Please be seated.

Private Member's Motion No. 14/ 01, Fair Competition Act, to be moved by the Third Elected Member for West Bay.

PRIVATE MEMBER'S MOTION NO. 14/01

FAIR COMPETITION ACT

Capt. A. Eugene Ebanks: Thank you. I beg to move Private Member's Motion No. 14/ 01, standing in my name and entitled Fair Competition Act, which reads as follows:

"WHEREAS small business persons are experiencing many hardships because of major companies monopolising certain industries;

"BE IT RESOLVED THAT Government consider legislation to create a fair competition act.

"AND BE IT FURTHER RESOLVED that the matter be referred to the select committee to review Private Member's Motion No. 2/01, entitled, Establishment of a Select Committee to Review Caymanian Owned Businesses, for joint consideration."

The Speaker: Do you have a seconder?

The Fourth Elected Member for West Bay.

Mr. Cline A. Glidden Jr.: I beg to second the Motion.

The Speaker: Private Member's Motion No. 14/01 has been duly moved and seconded. Does the Mover wish to speak to it?

Capt. A. Eugene Ebanks: Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

I feel that this Motion is timely in view of the fact that many of our small business people have been asking the Government for legislation, more so in recent months.

It is a recognised fact in most developed countries, and certainly in developing countries that instruments such as a fair competition act serve to not only regulate fair and ethical practices but to also encourage, and protect persons on both sides of the fence—that is the provider and receiver of goods. Here in Cayman, we have been brought face to face with the reality of the need to have such legislation in order to deal more sensibly and be more organised in providing goods and services, especially in the hospitality industry.

In doing my research, according to the Free Trade Area of the Americas (FTAA), a working group on competition policy, there are 12 countries in the hemisphere that have had legislation on free competition. With your indulgence, I would like to read this.

The Speaker: Go ahead.

Capt. A. Eugene Ebanks: Mr. Speaker, the following is a list of countries that have put legislation in place to protect all business, big and small: Argentina has had laws since 1919; Brazil, since 1962; Canada, since 1889.

Mr. Speaker, 112 years ago Canada recognised the need for such legislation. Colombia, since 1959; Costa Rica, since 1994; Chile, since 1959; Jamaica since 1993; Mexico, since 1934; Panama, since 1996; Peru, since 1991; Venezuela, since 1991; United States, since 1890—111 years.

While some of these instruments may be more elaborate than we in Cayman need at this time, we still need some kind of legislation in place. I feel that these laws would certainly be a good source of guidance in Cayman if we are serious about developing such an act.

The objective of the law is the promotion and defence of competition; the promotion of economic efficiency and consumer welfare; freedom of initiative and opening up of markets, fair and equal; participation for small and medium enterprise; de-concentration of economic power and prevention of monopolies and abuse of a dominant position.

The laws of the hemisphere, in general, prohibit all commercial conduct that limits, restricts, or distorts competition. These laws prohibit conduct which includes: price fixing, collusive tenders, concerted refusal to provide services or admit new participants to the market, discriminatory and predatory agreements, exclusive agreements and abuse of dominant position, monopolising or boycotting.

Without a fair competition act we will have abuse of dominant position and monopolising. These are the two biggest problems in the Caymanian society today. These are the problems that the small Caymanian enterprising businessman faces.

Even though I did not find fair competition laws for The Bahamas, its government recognised the need to protect the small Bahamian businessman from outside investors with unlimited resources. In order to do that, the government reserved certain sectors, such as public transportation, beauty salons, watersports, construction companies, scale fishing, auto and appliance services, and other sectors where native Bahamians could make a decent living without being pushed out of business by outside investors.

I believe Honourable Members of this House will realise that the 12 countries I referred to earlier, put legislation in place because they realised the need for it. I hope that Members will agree that the Cayman Islands, as a developing country is in desperate need of such legislation. I hope Honourable Members will support this Motion. Thank you.

The Speaker: The Motion is open for debate, does any Member wish to speak? The Motion is open for debate, does any Member wish to speak? The Floor is open for debate does any Member wish to speak? The Floor is open for debate, does any Member wish to speak? The Honourable Minister responsible for Tourism, Environment and Transport.

Hon. W. McKeever Bush: Mr. Speaker, I want to congratulate the Mover on his presentation and for the thought processes of both he and the Second Elected Member for West Bay, the Seconder.

Having been appraised of their intention, on behalf of the Government, and, as the person in charge of commerce, I accept the Motion and will have it referred to a select committee of this Honourable House. This will be about the fourth time that this matter has gone to a select committee. I can give this House the undertaking that we will complete its business.

The Speaker: The Motion is open for debate, does any other Member wish to speak? The Motion is open for debate, does any other Member wish to speak? The Motion is open for debate, does any other Member wish to speak? The Floor is open for debate, does any other Member wish to speak? This is my final call. Does any other Member wish to speak? If not, would the Mover care to exercise his right of reply?

Capt. A. Eugene Ebanks: Thank you. I wish all the motions were as short as this one!

I cannot over-emphasise the importance of enacting this legislation in these Islands. Right now, more than ever before, small Caymanian businesses are being trampled on, pushed out, and being dealt with unfairly because of monopolies and dominant positions. Right now it is a matter of survival for the little Caymanian businessman.

I am asking Honourable Members of this House to support this Motion and give the little man a chance to survive. I thank you.

The Speaker: I shall now put the question on Private Member's Motion 14/01. Those in favour please say Aye. Those against, No.

AYES.

The Speaker: The Ayes have it.

AGREED: PRIVATE MEMBER'S MOTION NO. 14/01 PASSED.

The Speaker: This Motion has been referred to a select committee. I will not appoint a chairman, but allow the committee to choose their own chairman unless there is a recommendation from the Floor.

The Fourth Elected Member for West Bay.

Mr. Cline A. Glidden Jr.: Mr. Speaker, being the Secunder of that Motion, I feel it is my responsibility to bring to your attention that one of the resolutions for that Motion was that it be referred to the select committee to review PMM 2/01, entitled Establishment of a Select Committee to Review Caymanian-owned Businesses, for joint consideration.

A committee has already been established. This Motion was resolved to be considered by that same select committee.

The Speaker: That is the reason why I left the chairmanship to the committee. You may deliberate on that how you like.

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: Yes.

The Speaker: As we have about nine minutes to the hour of interruption, we can adjourn at this time, rather than trying to start another private member's motion.

The Honourable Minister responsible for Community Development, Women's Affairs, Youth and Sports.

ADJOURNMENT

Hon. Edna M. Moyle: Mr. Speaker, I move the adjournment of this Honourable House until 10 am tomorrow. Friday, 13 July.

The Speaker: The question is that this Honourable House do now adjourn until Friday 13 July at 10 am. Those in favour, please say Aye. Those against, No.

AYES.

The Speaker: The Ayes have it.

AT 4.22 PM THE HOUSE STOOD ADJOURNED UNTIL 10 AM FRIDAY, 13 JULY 2001.

OFFICIAL HANSARD REPORT
FRIDAY
13 JULY 2001
10.25 AM
Fourteenth Sitting

[Prayers read by the Second Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman]

The Speaker: Please be seated. The Legislative Assembly is in session. Item number 2 on today's Order Paper, Reading by the Honourable Speaker of messages and announcements. I have received no apologies.

Moving on to Item number 3 on today's Order Paper—Questions to Honourable Ministers and Members. Question 84 is standing in the name of the Third Elected Member for West Bay.

QUESTIONS TO HONOURABLE
MINISTERS AND MEMBERS

QUESTION NO. 84

Deferred

Capt. A. Eugene Ebanks: I request to withdraw question 84 and bring it back at a later sitting.

No. 84: What is the total number of the private sector work force in Grand Cayman, broken down by category and nationality?

The Speaker: I shall put the question that question 84 be deferred and returned at a later date. Those in favour please say Aye. Those against, No.

AYES.

The Speaker: The Ayes have it. Question 84 has been deferred to a later sitting.

AGREED: QUESTION NO. 84 DEFERRED.

The Speaker: Question 85, standing in the name of the Second Elected Member for West Bay.

[Hon. First Official Member rose]

Mr. Rolston M. Anglin: Mr. Speaker, I will give way to the Honourable First Official Member.

The Speaker: The Honourable First Official Member responsible for Internal and External Affairs.

Hon. James M. Ryan: Thank you.

If I recall correctly, the Third Elected Member for West Bay asked that question number 84 be "withdrawn," not "deferred." I believe the House voted on a deferral, but he asked that it be withdrawn. Perhaps, you could deal with that accordingly.

The Speaker: The Third Elected Member for West Bay, would you please clarify which you prefer?

Capt. A. Eugene Ebanks: Thank you. I would like to defer it until another sitting.

The Speaker: The Second Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. Rolston M. Anglin: I believe that Motion needs a seconder because it was moved by a Member of the Backbench.

The Speaker: Absolutely.

Dr. Frank S. McField: Mr. Speaker, I second that Motion.

The Speaker: I shall put the question again, that question 84 be deferred.

[Hon. First Official Member rose]

The Speaker: The Honourable First Official Member responsible for Internal and External Affairs.

Hon. James M. Ryan: Mr. Speaker, the question was discussed with the Third Elected Member for West Bay, and he had indicated to me that he wished to have it withdrawn. I have brought the answer, and if he is only deferring it, I am prepared to move ahead with it this morning. Regarding the question, as asked, there is some information that is not available, and not a part of my responsibility. If he is only deferring the question, then I am prepared to move ahead with a partial answer this morning.

The Speaker: I am in the hands of the House.

Third Elected Member for West Bay, do you wish to proceed or do you wish to withdraw?

Capt. A. Eugene Ebanks: Mr. Speaker, I would like to withdraw it in view of the fact that I need to re-word it. That is what I want to do.

The Speaker: Okay. We shall go back again. Do I have a seconder?

Dr. Frank S. McField: Mr. Speaker, I second that.

The Speaker: The Third Elected Member for George Town has seconded the Motion.

The Motion has been made and seconded that question 84 be withdrawn. Those in favour please say Aye. Those against, No.

AYES.

The Speaker: The Ayes have it. Question 84 has been withdrawn.

AGREED: QUESTION NO. 84 WITHDRAWN.

The Speaker: Moving on to Question 85 standing in the name of The Second Elected Member for West Bay.

QUESTION NO. 85

No. 85: Mr. Rolston M. Anglin asked the Honourable First Official Member responsible for the Portfolio of Internal and External Affairs What is the complement of foreign nationals currently employed at the Public Works Department giving details of position held, qualifications, tenure, Caymanian connection, if any; and whether a Caymanian is understudying them and, if so, the projected time line when the Caymanian will be ready to assume the post.

The Speaker: The Honourable First Official Member responsible for Internal and External Affairs.

Hon. James M. Ryan: The complement of foreign nationals employed in the Public Works Department (PWD) is 10 persons. Two persons have close Caymanian connections.

Positions held include Deputy Chief Engineer, Senior Superintendent, Engineer, Assistant Field Supervisor, two Executive Officers, Senior Project Manager, Senior Draftsman, for the Education Building Programme, Project Manager and Architect. Those persons with overseas contracts have professional qualifications from internationally recognised institutions within the construction industry. Tenure within PWD ranges from 23 years down to 2 years.

PWD is proud of its achievements with its human resource development programme. Although no Caymanians are understudying the foreign nationals, Caymanian staff members are promoted to replace expatriate staff as soon as they have gained the requisite qualifications and experience.

Six Caymanians are currently pursuing studies in architecture, quantity surveying, or engineering. Later this year, one will fill the post of Executive Architect, recently vacated by a foreign national. In 2002, a graduate engineer is expected to commence on-the-job training to fill the post of Engineer. Likewise, in 2003, one is expected to commence job-based training to occupy his designated post of Quantity Surveyor and eventually fill the post of Executive Quantity Surveyor. Another Officer is expected to fill the post of Senior Superintendent. Job-based training takes three to five years depending upon prior post-qualification office experience.

SUPPLEMENTARIES

The Speaker: The Second Elected Member for West Bay.

Mr. Rolston M. Anglin: Can the Honourable Member say what position the staff member who currently has 23 years of service holds?

The Speaker: The Honourable First Official Member responsible for Internal and External Affairs.

Hon. James M. Ryan: The post that the individual had held for 23 years is Executive Quantity Surveyor.

The Speaker: The Elected Member for East End.

Mr. V. Arden McLean: Can the Honourable Member say when was the last time a Caymanian replaced a foreigner using that criteria?

The Speaker: The Honourable First Official Member responsible for Internal and External Affairs.

Hon. James M. Ryan: I am afraid that I do not have that answer. I requested that a representative from the department be here who would have those details, but I will undertake to get that in writing if that is of assistance to the Member.

The Speaker: The Second Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman.

Mr. Lyndon L. Martin: Can the Honourable Member indicate if the figures provided cover all categories of employees at PWD?

The Speaker: The Honourable First Official Member responsible for Internal and External Affairs.

Hon. James M. Ryan: I wonder if the Member would elaborate on just what details he would like.

The Speaker: The Second Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman.

Mr. Lyndon L. Martin: The question asked for the complement of foreign nationals currently employed at PWD. I was just pleasantly surprised by the low number provided and wanted to ensure that this was covering not only the professional staff, but the entire department, including group employees.

The Speaker: The Honourable First Official Member responsible for Internal and External Affairs.

Hon. James M. Ryan: The word “complement” speaks to established posts and would only be referring to the established . . . well, putting it another way, it would not cover group employees. The group employee figures would be answered by the Minister responsible for the department because I have no access, unless I get that information from the Minister. Non-established posts’ records are not kept in Personnel.

The Speaker: The Second Elected Member for Bodden Town.

Mr. Gilbert A. McLean: Would the First Official Member give an undertaking to get the information related to group employees, or temporary employees, since PWD is a huge employer, and supply that in writing to Members at a later date?

The Speaker: I think he stated that he did not have responsibility for the non-established posts.

Hon. James M. Ryan: I only have the total number with no details on it, but I am prepared to give what I have. There are currently 36 foreign nationals employed in the group employee category. They come from seven countries in the Caribbean region. This number has been reduced from 51 at the end of 2000. The current ratio for foreign nationals employed is in the words of the Head of Department “a low 19 percent” but that is the only detail I have on it.

The Speaker: The Elected Member for East End.

Mr. V. Arden McLean: I like that phrase “a low 19 percent” when Caymanians are looking jobs. That does not sound too good, regardless of how low it is.

Can the Honourable Member tell us the total complement of the PPE (permanent and pensionable employees) in PWD?

The Speaker: The Honourable First Official Member responsible for Internal and External Affairs.

Hon. James M. Ryan: I think the question asked for the total number of staff complement at PWD. That total number is 58. Of course, that includes the ten foreign nationals.

The Speaker: The Third Elected Member for West Bay.

Capt. A. Eugene Ebanks: Can the Honourable Member say why there are no Caymanians understudying the foreign nationals?

The Speaker: The Honourable First Official Member responsible for Internal and External Affairs.

Hon. James M. Ryan: I believe I explained in the substantive answer the system used at PWD and it just happens that there are no Caymanians at the moment understudying. I mentioned those who would be returning soon. They are given, as it were, on-the-job training for a period of time and then they take over. So, I guess you could consider that understudying, but right at the moment, there are none in the understudy programme. This will change as soon as we have graduates returning who are now overseas.

The Speaker: The Fourth Elected Member for West Bay.

Mr. Cline A. Glidden Jr.: Can the Honourable Member say, in light of the new business plans being introduced by the Immigration Department for the private sector, whether there are any plans to introduce throughout government, but specifically in the area we are discussing, something along those guidelines where a business plan with succession planning is submitted for the replacement of the expatriate workforce, including training for that replacement?

The Speaker: The Honourable First Official Member responsible for Internal and External Affairs.

Hon. James M. Ryan: There are currently no plans to introduce business plans for departments in the public service, but there is a succession plan in place. It works better in some departments than others, but I think the succession plan in the public service, if operated properly, is the counterpart of the business plan in the private sector. There is no reason why a succession plan should not work in the public service.

The Speaker: The Second Elected Member for West Bay.

Mr. Rolston M. Anglin: I cannot judge the accuracy of the opinion just given by the Honourable First Official Member. However, in light of that opinion, can he say why it is we have an executive quantity surveyor at PWD for 23 years?

The Speaker: The Honourable First Official Member responsible for Internal and External Affairs.

Hon. James M. Ryan: Yes, simply because he has Caymanian status.

The Speaker: The Elected Member for East End.

Mr. V. Arden McLean: In the substantive answer the Member said that PWD was proud of its achievements in its human resource development programme. I suspect that would be the Caymanians who have been promoted. Can he elaborate a bit, since one quantity surveyor has been there for 23 years, and give us a breakdown on how many Cay-manians have been promoted for PWD to be able to say they are proud of their achievements in their human resource development programme?

The Speaker: The Honourable First Official Member responsible for Internal and External Affairs.

Hon. James M. Ryan: Notable persons who participated in this exceptional programme are the current Deputy Chief Secretary who became Chief Engineer and was then promoted to Deputy Chief Secretary. Other persons included are, the present Chief Engineer; the present Deputy Chief Engineer for roads; the present Works Manager, PWD. Also included are the present chief building control officer; the present chief electrical inspector; a current building inspector (these are in the Planning Department). Others who went through this programme who are now in the private sector and those include Mr. Danny Owens, Architect; Mr. Omar McLean, Architect; Mr. Michael Meghoo, Architect; Mr. George Manderson, Jr, Contractor; Mr. Darryl Ebanks, Student Architect; Mr. Gerald Smith, Student Architect; Mr. Lloyd Campbell, Draftsman.

The architectural section alone has in recent years been responsible for providing work experience programmes and career identification and personal development programmes for at least 20 persons, seven of whom are mentioned above, and are successful persons in the business community.

The Speaker: The Elected Member for East End.

Mr. V. Arden McLean: Thank you.

With all due respect to the First Official Member, my question was not directed to those people who got experience in PWD and then went on. My question was geared more towards those who held executive positions in PWD through that programme. I appreciate the Deputy Chief Secretary and current Chief Engineer, and the current Assistant Chief Engineer. Were those persons who got the experience positioned in executive positions in PWD, before they left?

The Speaker: The Honourable First Official Member responsible for Internal and External Affairs.

Hon. James M. Ryan: I think there are three persons on that list at the top who reached executive positions. The point I wish to make is: below that level there were a number of people at the same level and there are a limited number of executive positions. Some chose to leave government and go into the private sector, others stayed on. I think the point is that the programme PWD is using, and I believe it may be unique to that department, is a programme a little different from most other departments. It is working. The only thing we need to see is other young persons getting qualified and moving into the posts now held by foreign nationals. We are working toward that goal.

As soon as we can get Caymanians trained and with the requisite experience, I will certainly be happy to see them into those posts. I know the Chief Engineer will as well.

The Speaker: The Second Elected Member for West Bay.

Mr. Rolston M. Anglin: Can the Honourable Member say how long the position of Deputy Chief Engineer has been held by the current individual?

The Speaker: The Honourable First Official Member responsible for Internal and External Affairs.

Hon. James M. Ryan: The Deputy Chief Engineer has been in that position . . . well, has been employed by PWD for the last 19 years.

The Speaker: The Second Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman.

Mr. Lyndon L. Martin: Can the Honourable Member provide this House with information of foreign nationals filling established positions at PWD in Cayman Brac?

The Speaker: I think that is a bit outside, but . . .

The Honourable First Official Member responsible for Internal and External Affairs.

Hon. James M. Ryan: I do not have that information.

The Speaker: Are there any further supplementaries? If not, that concludes Question Time for this morning.

Moving on to Item 4 on today's Order Paper, Other Business. Before so doing, according to Standing Order 86, I will ask for a motion to suspend Standing Order 14(2) in order for Private Members' Business to be taken on a day other than Thursday.

The Honourable Minister for Planning, Communications and Works.

SUSPENSION OF STANDING ORDER 14(2)

[Moved by the Honourable Minister for Planning, Communications and Works]

QUESTION PUT. AGREED: STANDING ORDER 14 (2) SUSPENDED TO ENABLE OTHER BUSINESS TO TAKE PRECEDENCE OVER GOVERNMENT BUSINESS ON A DAY OTHER THAN A THURSDAY.

OTHER BUSINESS

PRIVATE MEMBERS' MOTIONS

PRIVATE MEMBER'S MOTION NO. 4/01

SPECIAL RELATIONSHIP PRIVILEGE

The Speaker: I note that the Mover of Private Member's Motion 4/01 is not in the Chamber. Does the House wish to move on to the next motion?

The Second Elected Member for Bodden Town.

Mr. Gilbert A. McLean: I am the Secunder of the Motion. I would beg that this Motion be deferred until later on in the meeting. I am prepared to move on to the Motion standing in my name.

I understand the First Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman is back in Grand Cayman. After the break she may be here to do the Motion, otherwise, I would suggest it be deferred, and we move on to Motion 19.

The Speaker: I am in the hands of the House. I am perfectly prepared to move on, or take a brief suspension, if that is the wish of the House.

The Third Elected Member for George Town.

Dr. Frank S. McField: In all fairness, I think we should move on to the next motion. I do not believe it would be too much of an inconvenience to the Member to pick it up after this debate.

The Speaker: I shall put the question—

Mr. Lyndon L. Martin: I would like to second the Motion, Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: Thank you.

I shall put the Motion, as moved and seconded, that Private Member's Motion No. 4/01 be deferred until later in this sitting or another sitting, and move on to Private Member's Motion No. 19/01 to be moved by the Second Elected Member for Bodden Town.

PRIVATE MEMBER'S MOTION NO. 19/01

PUBLIC ACCESS TO THE DELIBERATIONS OF STATUTORY BOARDS

Mr. Gilbert A. McLean: I beg to move Private Member's Motion No. 19/01, standing in my name, entitled Public Access to the Deliberations of Statutory Boards, which reads:

"BE IT RESOLVED, in the interest of openness and transparency, that this Honourable

House approves that the deliberations of all Statutory Boards, with the exception of the Adoption Board, be open to the public, excluding instances where matters affect national security or matters of similar importance to good governance.

"AND BE IT FURTHER RESOLVED THAT such laws as relevant be amended to facilitate the above provision."

The Speaker: Do you have a seconder?

Mr. Lyndon L. Martin: Mr. Speaker, just on a point of procedure, on the request for the deferral of the previous Motion, it was not put to the vote.

The Speaker: I would have to read the Hansard. I felt confident that I said—

Mr. Lyndon L. Martin: The Motion was moved and seconded, but the question was not put.

The Speaker: Out of an abundance of caution then, we will go back.

In view of the fact that the Mover of Private Member's Motion No. 4/01 is not present in the Chamber, we are deferring that Motion and moving on with Private Member's Motion No. 19/01. Those in favour please say Aye. Those against, No.

AYES.

The Speaker: The Ayes have it.

AGREED: PRIVATE MEMBER'S MOTION NO. 4/01 DEFERRED.

The Speaker: moving on to Private Member's Motion No. 19/01, and I apologise to you, Second Elected Member for Bodden Town.

Mr. Gilbert A. McLean: I have moved the Motion, Mr. Speaker. I would ask that it be seconded.

The Speaker: Do we have a seconder?

Mr. Lyndon L. Martin: I beg to second the Motion.

The Speaker: Private Member's Motion No. 19/01 has been duly moved and seconded. Does the Mover wish to speak to it?

Mr. Gilbert A. McLean: I believe that the Motion before the House accords in all ways with the stated position of the Government of the day in regard to openness and transparency in government. Past governments spoke of transparency and openness when, in my opinion, it has not happened as has been stated by the governments. The Government of the day, in particular, has made it a major part of its ongoing position.

When we talk about openness and transparency, it is something the whole world is talking about, and something I totally subscribe to because I believe it is better for the social character of the country and also out of it comes more truth, and better decision making. Based on the two factors that the Government of the day has stated time and again that it stands for this, and the fact that I do subscribe to it, is why I have moved this Motion.

We can think of transparency and openness on the part of Executive Council and on the part of anyone in the executive branch of Government. We can think of openness and transparency with the Members of this Legislative Assembly being open to our constituents and keeping them up to date on things happening in this House by way of debate; and also by way of informal discussion on matters we have to deal with.

The place where I believe there is immense need for transparency is in the dealings of the various Statutory Boards. Statutory Boards are, in effect, an extension of the Government and these Boards, in any given administration, will normally be comprised of persons who subscribe to and are supportive of the Government's policies. That, in my opinion, makes absolute common sense. A government would not want to appoint boards that acted contrary to the national policies of the day. I simply make that clear. If I were a part of a government executive, I would want to know that the people who are carrying on operations as an extension of the central Government were keeping with government policies. I have no problem with that.

One thing I am sure we have all heard, whether it is real or imagined, is that there is unfairness in decisions by Statutory Boards in regard to some persons. We hear statements about the Board sending back applications; not dealing with applications; that it has dealt with others giving favourable consideration, but the next person gets an unfavourable one. There is always the chance of such opinions or feelings existing where boards meet in private. It is one of the things that can be levelled at the Government Executive. For example, I have heard a particular statement scores of times throughout my political career: 'Well, Executive Council meets behind closed doors, and no one knows what they are doing there but when it is time for the people who are on it to be elected, they are out in the public asking for our vote!' Technically, it is a fact!

I would not subscribe to the executive of a government meeting in public. Perhaps I am a bit ancient in that view, but I will stay that way until I can see the logic of such a thing happening. Because of the sensitivity of all matters it deals with, generally, I believe it is right in being a closed meeting.

The Boards have a different character. If I were to take an example, which I think we all know about because it brought about a major national reaction at the time it occurred. It is that of the Finance Committee, and the infamous government Motion 3/90 which changed the composition of the Finance Committee to include Official Members of the House with the Governor presiding.

Using that example, if there was one good thing that came out of that change, it was the fact that the Finance Committee of the Cayman Islands changed from something which was extremely closed and guarded, to an entity where it was open to the public. There is not the slightest shadow of doubt in my mind that the Cayman Islands and its people, its residents, are better informed by the Finance Committee becoming open as it is now. The public now has the opportunity of hearing each item for which government money is being used, debated, deliberated and voted upon. Information that the Finance Committee gets informs us, the Members, and the public at large, much better than it was before.

This Motion requests that the deliberations of all Statutory Boards be made accessible to members of the public who would wish to hear the deliberations of the Board. I excluded the Adoption Board because that Board deals with the adoption of children, matters that are so very sensitive. My opinion is that it is the business of the person proposed to be adopted, the parents, and the ones adopting the child. To the best of my knowledge it is done under the sharp eyes of the judges of the Grand Court. It was at one time the Chief Justice. I understand the judges are very careful about each and every requirement before they give approval for adoption in this country. I am pleased to know that exists in this country. So, the Motion excludes the Adoption Board.

However, there is no good reason why Boards such as the Water Authority Board, the Port Authority, the Immigration Board, the Civil Aviation Board and any other board could not be open to the public. We should take the example of what happens in Florida, USA where they have something called the Sunshine Laws.

I remember back in 1981 never being more shocked in my life when I went with the late Garth Davis to a place where, as we passed a room, we paused briefly. I realised it was a government board from the issues being discussed. It was a large board, three times the number of people obviously listening. They were discussing certain things, and being a civil servant at that time, I was amazed to hear these issues being discussed while the door was opened.

We stood there a few minutes and then walked away. I said: "This is incredible. How can this be?" I recall him saying: "Lad, I suppose you have never heard of the Sunshine Laws." Well, I had not heard of these Laws before; this was my first time hearing of such Laws. I think that is an example for many States in the United States and more and more countries of the world are looking in that direction. It is not that they are without precedence. In our Parliament, there is no good reason, except it is not the will of the Government, to allow this to happen.

The Motion also states that there should be exclusions when the Boards would not be open to the public. I can think of two instances. Perhaps they are not the very best, but they are not inconceivable. I would like to tag them to the Immigration Board, our most talked about Board.

For example, suppose there was an application from someone who the Board had received information via the police Interpol or whatever, that this individual may have criminal or terrorist connections. When deliberating that particular application you would not necessarily want members of the public there, in that the information needed to remain confidential so that the police could assist other jurisdictions or to check for connections within our own country. That would be an instance of national security.

We could also take the instance on a more personal basis. Suppose someone applied and it was discovered, and I understand this has been the case, where persons had a clean bill of health, but when they had tests done here, were found to have diseases which exclude people from being allowed to be here in the Cayman Islands. I understand there was such a case, therefore, in such a case it would not be right for good governance to allow the person to be subjected to public consumption of their personal records. It would be a matter that needs to be kept confidential in a closed session. I offer those two examples, but I am sure there are scores of others.

If this Motion is accepted, it would be necessary to amend the various laws affected so that such could be done. I suspect this Motion is not going to be accepted by the Government, but I will wait to see the reasons they give. I will look with interest to see the editorial in the newspaper on this one.

I hope that space and so on is not used because I would not be conceiving the building of a special town hall for these Boards to meet in. Simply, a chair or two could be provided, where at least the press would be allowed some presence. However, the Motion before the House is one which I suppose all Members of this House should rush to accept. I will await the results. Thank you.

The Speaker: At this time we shall suspend for 15 minutes.

PROCEEDINGS RESUMED AT 12.03 PM

The Speaker: Please be seated.

Private Member's Motion 19/01 is open for debate. Does any other Member wish to speak?

The Third Elected Member for George Town.

Dr. Frank S. McField: Mr. Speaker, I am not really going to give a speech, I mean the Government does not seem to be here, there seems to be a total eclipse where the moon of transparency should have been . . . oh, okay.

The Speaker: The Floor is open for Debate. Does the Third Elected Member for George Town wish to speak? The Motion is open for debate. Does any Member wish to speak?

The Elected Member for East End.

Mr. V. Arden McLean: I rise to speak to Private Member's Motion No. 19/01, Public Access to the Deliberations of Statutory Boards.

I subscribe to transparency. I believe that it is needed and in the interest of the general public it is a must. Many years ago when I sat on the Planning Authority, I considered then that it would be in the best interest of the public to be able to have access to Statutory Boards such as the Planning Authority. I do not subscribe to all Statutory Boards being open to the public. There are issues, internal securities that would prevent that.

One of the problems I have with this Motion is that it says: "excluding instances where matters affect national security or matters of similar importance to good governance." I would like to think, while I do not fully understand what that means, that it refers to areas such as Executive Council and other sensitive Statutory Boards.

There are Statutory Boards in this country that require some degree of autonomy and secrecy in the interest of the public. There are certain things, certain deliberations that should not be made public. However, certainly, there are a number of those that do need to be made public. While I cannot give support for all Statutory Boards, I agree that there are some that can be made public. For instance, I think it would be in the best interest of the general public to hear the deliberations on the infamous development of Ritz Carlton. I think that should have been held in public.

The public interest must be respected in the same way that it is respected in this Honourable House when the deliberations are made public. While I respect that the Public Accounts Committee is not a Statutory Board, it is given the responsibility to report on the accounts of the Government which involves the people of this country and their business. Therefore, they must be given the opportunity to hear about their business, and how their business is conducted.

We all watch other countries make much of the business public. I think the Mover alluded to America, where much of the public business is conducted in public. Provisions must always be left in place that meetings can be held in camera. When there are issues that do not erode the internal security of this country, I see no reason why the public cannot be a part of that and hear it first hand. It will ensure that members of those Boards are kept to account, and would certainly bring more efficiency to any Statutory Board open to the public. I am not saying they are not efficient. I am saying it would bring more efficiency and effectiveness to those Boards.

If we have nothing to be afraid of, we should have nothing to hide. We all came here with one mandate—to do the business of the people. Certainly, the people do not expect, or I do not believe, the people expect us to deliberate on sensitive matters concerning their safety and let the public know about it. I do not support that either. I do not want to see Executive Council deliberate in the Town Hall, or on the streets. I trust, hope and believe that successive governments have kept those deliberations extremely close to their chests. They are under obligation to maintain that as long as they live. Sometimes we wonder whether or not that is good. I believe it is.

For instance, areas like the Water Authority and the Education Council. These are areas where I see no reason to not make the deliberations public. As the Mover said, there will be instances where the information being deliberated on is so sensitive that it needs to be held in camera. Such is the case here in this House; when information is of such sensitive nature it is held in camera.

Nevertheless, 99.9 percent of the deliberations of this Honourable House are held in public. The provision is available to have it in camera. I do not believe any member of the public would disagree with leaving provisions in place to have any deliberation in camera when it is so required. I think that should be the case with many Statutory Boards also. As you well know, we have many of those.

In the interest of transparency and educating the general public, I think it is a very honourable thing to do. We continue to complain about the lack of participation by the general public. A lot of that comes from the lack of knowledge of what is going on in this country. I think it is incumbent on legislators to educate the country on its workings. The workings of this country were not put in place just for a select few, such as the 15 elected Members of this Honourable House. It is there to protect, certainly, but also to assist this country. I do not support the general public participating in the deliberations, certainly not. Their only participation would be with their ears and eyes.

We appoint Statutory Boards and the only time the country knows the persons who are on those Boards is when they read it in the papers. The majority of Caymanians know each other, but there are many instances where they do not. When we appoint the Statutory Boards, those members are residents in this country. We can no longer say they are born Caymanians in the sense of that phrase, but they are residents, considered upstanding citizens in this community. Therefore, I see no reason why some of those Boards, if we consider those members so upstanding, cannot deliberate in public.

We trust them to make the right decisions. That is why we appointed them to these Boards. In so doing, there is no reason why we cannot see and hear those Boards deliberate. If we trust them in private behind closed doors to do what is right for the future development of this country and carry out those responsibilities in the best interests of the majority of people in this country, then why is it that we cannot sit down and listen to them talk about how they reach their decisions? I see no reason why not. There is no reason I can think of, but other speakers may have reasons why this should not be done. The same way I expect Honourable Members to respect my position, I will respect that position also.

I have to be responsible to the general public. I guess this is the only office in the land that is totally exposed to the general public. This is rightly so. This office certainly is more sensitive than many, many Statutory Boards in this country. In these hallowed Chambers this is where the rubber meets the road, and Statutory Boards operate based on the laws that are legislated here in Parliament and the directives sent from Executive Council.

If we legislate laws to control this country and control the Statutory Boards appointed by this body, whether it is all inclusive decisions or only Executive Council, it all falls into place. The Legislative Assembly does legislate the laws, and sundry know the laws. In the execution of those laws and directives there should be some provision for the public to see how the legal process is arrived at and how it is executed. That is my argument and it sounds logical to me.

Every law in this country is available to the general public. They need only come right here and purchase them. No statutory body in this country is without supporting legislation and, or policies, that the people have entrusted the Members to legislate in this Honourable House. Once our job is completed and the people approve of it subjecting themselves to be governed, I see no reason why the execution of those laws cannot be heard by the people who just approved them.

Woe betide the State that will legislate to the detriment of its people. By that, I mean it is a foregone conclusion that legislators are going to legislate what is in the best interest of the majority of the people of that State.

The Speaker: If I may interrupt you for a moment. We are discussing public access to the deliberation of Statutory Boards, not the Legislative Assembly. Let us please address the issue.

Mr. V. Arden McLean: Thank you.

What I was trying to illustrate is, for instance, the Development Plan in this country that was legislated here, under which the Statutory Board of the Central Planning Authority operates. The people of this country accepted it, and I was trying to show that it was not legislated to the detriment of the people of this country. They should, therefore, have access to the deliberations on how it is executed. Nevertheless, I shall bow to your ruling.

I do not support any Statutory Board of a sensitive nature being made public. I know the Motion speaks to one exception, such as the Adoption Board. I understand the sensitivities in that. That is exactly what I am talking about. I believe there are other Statutory Boards that need not be made public, but certainly, there are many.

We, as a people, must not be afraid if that is the way it has been done, of change. Change is the only thing that is constant. If we are not willing to change, we have lost a central piece of the jigsaw puzzle. We are certainly going to be left behind.

I believe there are Statutory Boards that can be made public and I would like to see them made public. Maybe it is necessary to re-word the Motion, and bring an amendment listing the Statutory Boards that can be made public. That may be a solution the Mover would consider. In so saying, I support the Motion before us. While I do not support it in its entirety, at least it will start something. The spirit of the Motion is fine whereby Statutory Boards should be made public.

I cannot support all of them being made public. In so saying, I trust that an amendment will be forthcoming.

The Speaker: I think this would be a convenient time to take the luncheon break. We shall suspend until 2 pm.

PROCEEDINGS RESUMED AT 2.40 PM

The Speaker: Please be seated. Proceedings are resumed. Debate continuing on Private Member's Motion No. 19/01. The Motion is open for debate. Does any Member wish to speak?

The Honourable Acting Second Official Member, do you wish to speak?

AMENDMENT TO PRIVATE MEMBER'S MOTION NO. 19/01

Hon. Samuel Bulgin: Mr. Speaker, on behalf of the Government I rise to propose an amendment to Private Member's Motion No. 19/01 moved by the Second Elected Member for Bodden Town.

The proposal is in accordance with provisions of Standing Order 24(10).

The Speaker: You may read the amendment, please.

Hon. Samuel Bulgin: Mr. Speaker, I am grateful, Sir.

Mr. Speaker, in accordance with the provisions of Standing Order 25(1) and (2), I, the Honourable Temporary Second Official Member seek to move the following amendment to Private Member's Motion No. 19/01 as follows:

(1) By deleting the word "approves" as it appears in the second line of the first resolve.

(2) By inserting the words "give consideration to allowing" after the word "House" as it appears in the second line of the first resolve.

(3) By deleting the words "with the exception of the Adoption Board" as they appear in the third line of the first resolve.

(4) By inserting after the word "governance" at the end of the first resolve, the words "and that Government having given consideration to the implications of doing so, report back to this Honourable House within six months of the acceptance of this Motion."

(5) By deleting the second resolve in its entirety and substituting therefore the following resolve: "AND BE IT FURTHER RESOLVED THAT during this period, the Portfolio of Legal Affairs be tasked with undertaking a review of the relevant legislation with a view to determining what amendments would be required to give effect to the above provisions."

The Speaker: The Motion has been duly moved. The question is that Private Member's Motion No. 19/01 be amended as in the notice provided to Members.

The Honourable Second Official Member do you wish to speak to the amendment?

Hon. Samuel Bulgin: Just briefly, Mr. Speaker.

The position of the Government is that it is fully committed to the principles of transparency and openness. However, the Motion in its present form needs to be approached very responsibly. Let me be quite clear, I am not in anyway suggesting that, as currently framed, it is not responsible, or that the Mover and the Seconder are in anyway irresponsible. I am just saying that caution has to be exercised in the way the intention of the Motion is dealt with and how it resonates generally, impacting on the way business is presently conducted and effected if the Motion is approved and eventually acted upon.

The Speaker: If I may suggest, maybe it would be helpful to Honourable Members if you would read in its entirety how the Motion as amended would read, so we will know exactly what you are talking about.

Hon. Samuel Bulgin: Mr. Speaker, I would be grateful to do that, Sir. Thank you.

Mr. Speaker, the Motion, as amended, would read as follows:

"BE IT RESOLVED, in the interest of openness and transparency, that this Honourable House give consideration to allowing that the deliberations of all Statutory Boards be open to the public, excluding instances where matters affect national security or matters of similar importance to good governance and that Government having given consideration to the implications of doing so, report back to this Honourable House within six months of the acceptance of this Motion;

“AND BE IT FURTHER RESOLVED THAT during this period, the Portfolio of Legal Affairs be tasked with undertaking a review of the relevant legislation with a view to determining what amendments would be required to give effect to the above provision.”

The Speaker: Thank you.

Hon. Samuel Bulgin: Mr. Speaker, the objective of the Motion is quite understood. The problem is how do we get there. In striving to give effect to what the Motion is asking certain considerations have to be borne in mind. Not least of which, is the fact that we are now in the era of human rights. We are just about on the threshold of having certain obligations and the conventions, and probably legislation. . . I am not certain; I will not go that far. However, there are certainly obligations that might be imposed upon the State if the provisions to the Human Rights Conventions are in fact given effect to in this jurisdiction.

What that means, Mr. Speaker, is that, in considering how to give effect to the freedom of information, for example, there is a balancing exercise that will have to be carried out. Any such freedom of information and, by extension, expression, will have to be balanced against, for example, the right to privacy. There are a number of persons and agencies that transact business before these Boards and Authorities. It is no secret that a lot of persons would prefer for their businesses to be conducted with a certain degree of confidentiality and secrecy. So, any attempt to open up these Boards and Committees to public scrutiny; to the public's eye, will have to be balanced against any such considerations for the right to privacy.

Mr. Speaker, there is also in the pipeline a Freedom of Information Act, as I understand it. The intent of this Motion will have to be also set against what it is intended to achieve by the spirit of that piece of legislation.

The point I am making is that there are a number of considerations that will have to be taken on board in determining how best to give effect to Government's unconditional commitment to transparency and openness. It is for those reasons, among others, why we suggest that these amendments be put forward so that we can have an informed process in order to give effect to the proposals in this Motion, should the Motion be accepted.

The Speaker: The amendment to Private Member's Motion No. 19/01 is open to debate. Does any Member wish to speak?

The Second Elected Member for Bodden Town.

MATTER OF PROCEDURE

Mr. Gilbert A. McLean: Mr. Speaker, on a matter of procedure, I suggest that this Motion is effective and what is being asked for cannot be done. I would like to direct your attention and that of the House to the Motion as it would stand, according to what I have here.

It says, “BE IT RESOLVED, in the interest of openness and transparency, that this Honourable House gives consideration to allowing that the deliberations of all Statutory Boards be open to the public, excluding instances where matters affect national security or matters of similar importance to good governance and that Government having given consideration to the implications of doing so, report back to this Honourable House within six months of the acceptance of this Motion.”

Mr. Speaker, I suggest that the House would have to give its approval to the Motion to allow this to happen or not. It cannot give a consideration where the Government goes and considers, and then reports back to the House within six months.

The Speaker: It is my understanding that all motions technically ask that the executive branch of Government consider. That is the purpose of a Private Member's Motion, the acceptance. In so doing, they would have to consider all the legal ramifications and all that so concerns it. So, I do not agree that the—

Dr. Frank S. McField: Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: The Third Elected Member for George Town.

Dr. Frank McField: Mr. Speaker, just to assist.

The wording is that in the interest of openness and transparency that this Honourable House gives consideration.

Mr. Gilbert A. McLean: Mr. Speaker, I think we asked the House to give consideration. It would have to be the Government to give this consideration. If the House considered, the House would have to say Aye or Nay.

The Speaker: I think it is six of one or half a dozen of the other because in the final part of the first paragraph, it says, “. . . that Government having given consideration to the implications of doing so, report back to this Honourable House within six months of the acceptance of this Motion.”

The Third Elected Member for George Town.

Dr. Frank S. McField: Mr. Speaker, if I considered, does it mean that I have to vote on this Motion? What do I do if I consider? What is the end result of my consideration?

I know what the end result of the Government's consideration would be. They would then decide to bring back a report and lay it on the Table. What would the end result of my consideration be?

The Speaker: The consideration is what you are giving here today in approving this amendment or not approving.

The Honourable Second Official Member, please continue.

Hon. Samuel Bulgin: Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

The original motion, Private Member's Motion No. 19/01 reads, "BE IT RESOLVED, in the interest of openness and transparency, that this Honourable House approves that the deliberations of all Statutory Boards . . ."

What we sought to do is not to do any violence to what the Mover had intended in the first place, but, if it is the Mover's intention that the word "House" be changed to "Government," then I would be happy to move the amendment, if the Speaker would so allow.

I just think that, as was rightly pointed out, the result is most likely to be the same at the end of the day..

The Speaker: I have no problem with understanding the intent, but if it is the desire of Honourable Members that "House" be replaced by the "Executive Branch of Government" or "the Government," I have no objection.

The Honourable Minister for Health and Information Technology.

Hon. Linford A. Pierson: Just a brief comment on this. I think, as Speaker of the House, if you are quite clear as to the meaning and intent of this Motion, then the Honourable House has to abide by your ruling.

The Speaker: The Third Elected Member for George Town.

Dr. Frank S. McField: Mr. Speaker, I am quite clear as to your position. All we are trying to do is to assist at this point in saying that although you might be quite clear and we might be quite clear, there may be other people who will have to interpret this written information and that is where the problem could start. Therefore, there is no reason why we could not make it as specific as the English Language will allow us to make it.

The Speaker: I fully understand what you are saying and, like I said before, I have no objection. The procedure is that this is an amendment to Private Member's Motion No. 19/01. This is not the substantive Motion. If it is the wish of the House, let us amend to say "Government." As the Speaker, I am quite satisfied that this is clear enough.

Honourable Second Official Member, give us a legal opinion.

[Laughter]

Hon. Samuel Bulgin: Mr. Speaker, in my opinion it is really not necessary to amend the Motion again. If the House looks at the fourth line of the Motion, it clearly conveys exactly what is intended. It says: ". . . and that Government having given consideration to the implications of doing so, report back to this Honourable House . . ." It is clear exactly where the obligation lies, and I think that the word "Government" in that line qualifies the entire Motion.

The Speaker: I accept that that is my ruling. Have you completed your debate?

Hon. Samuel Bulgin: I have, Sir. Thank you.

The Speaker: The amendment to Private Member's Motion No. 19/01 is open to debate. Does any Member wish to speak?

The Second Elected Member for Bodden Town.

Mr. Gilbert A. McLean: Mr. Speaker, I could not miss this opportunity.

First of all, I was right when I said that I felt sure the Government would not do what it has been preaching in accepting the Motion brought before this Honourable House. I think one might say it is truth time Cayman. I remember hearing that somewhere not too long ago.

Mr. Speaker, the situation is that on the news up until yesterday there were reports that in the interest of openness and transparency, the Government would hold monthly meetings and so on to keep the people of this country informed. Now, there is a Motion where there is an opportunity to put into action what is being said. However, it finds itself being done violence and being changed from the way it was originally, where, it was simply asking the House to approve it.

I am not surprised that it has come to this. In fact, I was sure it was going to come to this. If the Government has intentions towards openness and transparency when the opportunity comes for it to be open and transparent, then the least one would expect is for it to be done. Mr. Speaker, for the Government to go away and take six months to decide whether it wants to be transparent and open, I just cannot figure that out.

This Motion came and it was given thought by me, as the Mover, and by the Seconder, that there would be certain instances where it would not be right or necessary to have a meeting of the Statutory Boards open to the public. I drew a reference to the situation of our Finance Committee, which in Standing Order 75(3) says: "Subject to Standing Orders 84 and 85, the deliberations of the Finance Commit- tee shall be public.” If we look at Standing Order 85(2), it states: “If, at any sitting of the House, any Member moves that strangers withdraw, the Presiding officer shall forthwith put the question ‘That strangers do withdraw’ without permitting any debate or amendment.”

So, if it were the case that a Member should give a reason as to why there should be a closed meeting, the House has in its authority to remove persons from the House other than the Legislative Assembly Members. In the same way, the Statutory Authorities, I think, would have their authority to remove anyone or to conclude that a particular meeting or part thereof should be closed to the public.

Mr. Speaker, I sighted the situation of the Adoption Board, but may I also say that there are other Boards listed. If we excluded about 4 or 5 of them there are still about 70 Boards listed in the assignment to Members and Ministers of Executive Council that would be able to have members of the public attend. It would never be conceived logically that the House would want to allow members of the public to go and sit on the Board of Cayman Airways because it is a Board which deals with matters sensitive to the airline, and there are about six other airlines operating out of here. That would open things in that regard.

There is also the Monetary Authority. When they make decisions and deliberate on matters which are pertinent to finances in the country, again, we did not think that would be the case, to allow the general public to attend its deliberations. Now, if we were to look at those and exclude 3 or 4, as the case may be, there are still several other boards, which would be accessible to the public.

Mr. Speaker, largely my thoughts and what I have heard people say so many times centred around the Immigration Board, the Planning Board and the Business Licences' Board—that would be pretty much where the public would have some major interest. There may be others but these are the ones that impact daily on the lives of the people in this country and I have heard numerous times that people would like to be there to hear their fate being decided. No one, of course, would have the right to say a word, or to add or subtract anything from the deliberations of that Board but they would have the right to attend. That is what this Motion is all about—no more and no less.

If the Government has to take six months to find out whether it wants to be open and transparent I can say right now, that since it is recommended the Motion be so altered, it certainly does not have my support and I leave it then to the Government to prove what its intention is.

The Speaker: The amendment to Private Member's Motion No. 19/01 is open to debate. Does any other Member wish to speak? Does any other Member wish to speak to the amendment to the Motion?

The Second Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman.

Mr. Lyndon L. Martin: Mr. Speaker, as the Secunder of the original Motion I feel compelled to address the amendment to what I thought to be a very simple and straightforward Motion. In fact, I termed it this morning as probably the only Motion that will come from the Second Elected Member from Bodden Town and the Second Elected Member from Cayman Brac that would meet unanimous approval in this House because I thought it was simple and straightforward.

I was elected to this House to be a part of the decision process, not as a suggestion box for what I think the Government should do. The Motion in its original form calls for a decision to be made. A decision, which has a clear political mandate as the majority of the Members of this House were elected, on a mandate of transparency and openness. We have provided an opportunity here today to show that politics is not all about just talking of what is good but putting some of the good in place. The Motion in its original form called for an approval to be given to the House, where the amended form asked for consideration to be reported back to this House in six months.

Mr. Speaker, in instances such as this, the Motion brings a concept to the House but the necessary legislation is framed by the debate that is inspired and put forward by individuals such as the Mover and the Secunder of the Motion, and other contributors. As the Mover of this Motion stated and I can confirm, it was never an intention to incorporate statutory corporations into this Motion. For those who would be here representing the legal part of Government, who would be responsible for drafting any necessary legislation, should understand that the corporations of Government were not included. It was simply central Government and the list of the bodies that are stated in here which the Second Elected Member from Bodden Town totalled to be some 71 Boards other than those considered as Boards relating to the Statutory Corporations such as the Board of Cayman Airways Board and the Turtle Farm Board.

The list we are reading from was published in the Gazette, Public Notice, “Assignments to Members and Ministers of Executive Council of the Responsibilities for Certain Business and Certain Departments of Government” broken down into the Ministries they fall under.

I make that point in relation to the argument ably put forward by The Elected Member for East End who provided commitment to support this Motion once we could list the various Boards being affected. I provide him with the assurance that the intention of this Motion is to capture all Statutory Boards with the exception of those considered Statutory Corporations and the one specified in the Motion, the Adoption Board.

I support the original Motion. I cannot find myself diluting that Motion to go to what I consider a tactic of delaying the implementation of what is a simple straightforward Motion, by delaying it six months where we are eight months into our period of being the legislators of this country elected on a clear mandate. I think it is time we put transparency and openness into effect. I want to be a part of that process, not just here to suggest to the Government that they consider it.

I want to be part of the decision and I will be supporting the original Motion and cannot support the amendment. Thank you.

The Speaker: Does any other Member wish to speak?

The Second Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. Alden M. McLaughlin, Jr.: Mr. Speaker, I rise to indicate my support for the amendment moved by the Honourable Second Official Member to this very valuable Motion which seeks public access to the deliberations of Statutory Boards. Like other Members of this House, I have championed the cause of openness and transparency. I embrace what I believe to be the spirit of the Motion brought by the Second Elected Member for Bodden Town and his Seconder, the Second Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman.

The difficulty I had with that Motion was the imprecision of the language with which it was drafted and the possible ramifications to the operations of government, its Statutory Boards and the privacy of individuals if that Motion was accepted in the form drafted. In its original form, that Motion would require that the business of all Statutory Boards in this country, with the exception of the Adoption Board, be open to the public, excluding instances where matters affect national security or matters of similar importance to good governance.

I am not sure what the matters of similar importance are to good governance. The language is vague, imprecise and open to subjective judgment. I am not sure who would make the determination as to whether or not a matter was of similar importance to good governance. Would it be those who sought access to the Boards' deliberations, the Board itself, or Government?

To submit a few examples of how impossible it would be for Government to operate within the parameters set out in the Motion in its original form, I only need draw the attention of the House to a matter such as the Parole Board, a Board established under legislation. Would we really, however strongly we feel about the public's right to access information, believe that the deliberations of a parole board determining whether or not a prisoner should be granted parole should be open to public access?

Let us look at those Boards established under other legislation; Cayman Airways for instance. Even the Mover of the Motion had to admit that it would be unviable for the deliberations of the Board of Directors of Cayman Airways to be open to the public. Every other airline flying in here would know in advance what business decision Cayman Airways was going to make about any particular matter.

Drafting is an art. You need to say what you mean. Unless sensible amendments are made to the Motion in its current form, it would create a situation where no business decisions could be made by operations such as Cayman Airways, established under legislation, the Turtle Farm, the Water Authority. These are all Statutory Boards. One needs to think through clearly the implications of a Motion before one brings such a Motion to this Honourable House and expects Government to accept it.

However strongly we feel about certain matters, Government has a responsibility to think through the implications, to take time to consider matters carefully before it accepts motions and gives effect to them by amending legislation. I know the motives of the Second Elected Member for Bodden Town and the Second Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman are honourable. I believe we all embrace the concept of freedom of information and public access to public information. I believe that the Motion in its amended form achieves that result. It will just take a little longer.

We have a responsibility to make sure that we get it right before we make amendments, and accept motions which can have far-reaching ramifications to the way Government and its Statutory Boards and Authorities conduct business within this jurisdiction. For all those reasons, I commend the amendment to this House and give it my wholehearted support.

The Speaker: The Third Elected Member for George Town.

Dr. Frank S. McField: Perhaps I should start by saying that there appears to be an eclipse where the moon of openness and transparency should have been. On June 26, 1998, Private Member's Motion 12/98 was amended by inserting the words: 'and such matters relating to Statutory Boards' after the word 'legislation' as it appears in the last line of the last resolve.

That Motion was brought by the present Minister of Education, who was then the Third Elected Member for Bodden Town, and by the then First Elected Member for George Town who is now the Leader of Government Business. It is interesting to note that the Motion read, when amended: "BE IT RESOLVED that the Cayman Islands' Legislative Assembly enact a Freedom of Information Law similar to that proposed in the United Kingdom's Freedom of Information White Paper.

"AND BE IT FURTHER RESOLVED that a Select Committee of the whole House be convened to determine the parameters of such legislation and such matters relating to Statutory Boards, after public input." That was in regard to the whole concept we had been debating in regard to freedom of information.

In the debate at that time, the Mover of the Motion, the present Minister of Education, stated that the Motion would have been moved earlier, had it not been for the fact that the Seconder of the Motion (now the Leader of Government Business) was away in New Zealand, and it was so important for him to wait until he came back to participate in moving that Motion.

We also know that the present Leader of Government Business and the Second Elected Member for George Town ran as a team in the last election. They talked about the openness and transparency concept and have on all occasions indicated that they have an interest in allowing people to have access to information.

If the Second Elected Member for George Town will talk about the Motion, he needs to remember that the Second Elected Member for Bodden Town and the present Minister of Education will be celebrating tonight in Bodden Town in regard to their victory at the polls. They did share the common campaign objectives. The Second Elected Member for Bodden Town could be misled as he might have been suffering from some form of amnesia when putting this Motion together. Perhaps that indicates why the Motion did not accomplish what the Second Elected Member for George Town thought it should, which was to explain specifically what statutory organisations should be excluded and what should be included in regard to this.

I am not going to say that this is an easy decision for me to make. I will say that it is not the first time I have considered the whole concept of people's access to information, and people's rights to have access to the decision-making process as the decisions are being made. We see that happening in Finance Committee, when people are allowed to listen on the radio to our debates. We also see that happening when you and I have to list all of our interests on a Register of Interests. We have to reveal to the public aspects of our finances and our relationships with business people, friends and other things in order for the public to have the opportunity to see that we are being impartial when making decisions.

The concept of allowing the public access to information in order that the public can be guaranteed the decision-making process is unbiased and democratic; is a principle I believe we all believe in. So, when it is stated that transparency and accountability are the best defences against abuses, (which is one of the quotes made by the current Minister of Education during the debate in 1998) one of the reasons we want people to have access is because people have an interest. The Boards are the result of the Government and the Government is the people. The people vote for a government and the Government creates Statutory Boards; the Government then appoints people to the Boards.

We have the feeling that the process of appointing members to the Statutory Boards is not a totally objective one. We believe that a lot of the appointments are political appointments. We can go back and see the number of persons on some Statutory Boards, and say, he or she was related to this one political campaign, and go on, and on, and on.

So, if there is apprehension in the minds of the public in regard to the objectivity of Statutory Boards when making decisions, we can see that. We can therefore work with the assumption that we are furthering democracy and people's trust of the decision-making process by allowing them to have greater access, not just to information after the decisions have been made, but to have access to the way in which the decisions are being made, or the halls where the decisions are being made.

Specifically in regard to the amendment, it seems as though we are already arguing on the Government side that somehow there is a failure on the part of the Mover in the wording and presentation of the Motion. A case could be made by the Second Elected Member for George Town for that to be the case. Nevertheless, there was a sufficient body of information in the Motion for the Government to take it and devise something out of it that would still make sense. There could not have been much confusion in the drafting of the original Motion, although I must admit that the person who drafted the motion is not a legal draftsman. We are not accepted in the Legislative Assembly as legal draftsmen. We are accepted as people who know the interest of the people and want to create institutions that can preserve and further the interests of the people.

The way in which the Motion is now being reworded by the Government in order to give them the amount of time, the six months, to consider this matter raises the question: Are we not considering it in this process of deliberation already? What would be the advantage of having it deliberated or considered outside these Chambers for a further six months? When returning with the Motion, what would the Government be returning to say? Would it be returning to say 'yes or no'? I believe it is possible to already decide that and if they are not going to say 'no', they are going to say that it is a very complicated issue.

The Acting Second Official Member stands up and says that with the introduction of Human Rights, it becomes a juggling act to balance the need for privacy and right for privacy with openness and transparency. The fact that there are always dual principles in whatever we do is no surprise to those who know Ying and Yang. Humanity is a balancing act regardless of what level we meet it on. That is the reason why it would be interesting to find out how it was envisioned in Private Member's Motion 12/98 to incorporate Statutory Boards in this particular Freedom of Information Act. Were they talking about persons also having access to deliberations?

As it was mentioned by the Second Elected Member for Bodden Town, the particular principles that apply to this House in Finance Committee gives the Chairman the possibility to exclude persons when they are deliberating important issues.

The Second Elected Member for George Town gave the example of the Parole Board. This is where I believe he is correct in saying that what we exclude and what we include would be a subjective exercise. I believe the deliberations should take place here rather than at the Glass House, because I would like to participate to a certain extent in the decision as to what Statutory Board to include or exclude in regard to the peoples' right to access.

I see the point made by the Second Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman when he said he is not a suggestion box. In fact, he is part of the decision-making process. That is exactly what we would be if we allow the Government to take this back and make the decisions for us. They need to be more specific in terms of making the decision with regards to the original Motion. This is where the real weakness is in terms of their amendment. Their amendment is taking the process out and extracting the decision-making possibilities we should have, taking them away from us and carrying them someplace else until a later date.

A concrete example in regard to the Parole Board is, if we are talking about the whole concept of restorative justice we would no longer want to treat judicial and penal issues, and the issues of restoration as basic private matters, but more as community affairs. The United Nations has already introduced this concept and a lot of us are also beginning to think the same in this country. Of course, the individual would have a choice in deciding how some of these matters are handled. There should not be a situation where people are going to say that you have no right to make decisions about how your private business should be conducted in these institutions.

What we are moving away from is this whole idea that society benefits from being secretive about making decisions which affect all members of society. We are moving more to accept that whatever decision is made which will affect the Acting Second Official Member, it will somehow impact me as a member of this society. The collective concept of society is becoming more and more apparent to us.

The point that was also made in this particular Motion brought in 1998, was that the Caymanian Compass had been quoted as saying, "When Opposition MLAs will bring a motion for the introduction of a Freedom of Information Law in the next Legislative Assembly meeting, the Government Members of the House should resist the temptation to automatically reject it just because it comes from the Opposition." It went on to say that the Editorial had made reference to the British White Paper.

I think we have on our hands an issue that might be considered a technical issue. The Government has already decided, from its previous stand as opposition, that it supports the concept of openness and transparency, and that the public should have a right to have access to information regarding these Statutory Boards. We know there will be some requirements as to how people achieve that access, but the fact is, in principle, they have previously agreed to this.

I do not think it is asking too much at this time to have them see the Motion, and to have made amendments in the original Motion which were different from this amendment. Changes which would have been more specific in terms of what their possible reaction or actions would be in answering this Motion.

I find this amendment too vague to give us an indication as to exactly what the Government's decision is on this debate. This being a very specific debate because it calls to allow people to have access to public bodies, or authorities that are supposed to be representing the public interest, not private interest. These are Boards which the public own as stakeholders. The question is, will their access to these Boards during the process of decision-making help improve democracy? Or will it help to erode the concept of confidentiality and privacy as a right that we also need to protect.

My point is that it does not have to take Government six months to bring a conclusion to this particular argument. Excluding people from having access to the decision-making process might end up in the long run being even more harmful than taking the risk of having information which might be very private revealed. The Chairman, President or Controllers of those Statutory Boards will always have the possibility of making decisions that would prevent any harm coming to the public.

If there is an interest of the Government in this Motion as it was originally brought to this House, I think they would withdraw this amendment. If they have an additional amendment to make, I would welcome it at this time. This particular amendment is too vague. It does not give any kind of commitment from the Government, which I think the Mover of the Motion and Members of the Legislative Assembly have a right to expect especially from a Government that campaigned on the principle of openness and transparency.

The Speaker: The amendment is open to debate.

The Elected Member for East End.

Mr. V. Arden McLean: I must report to you that my political status in this country remains that of a rookie. I hasten to add the words of Benjamin Franklin, when he said "I am hard to learn, but long to forget that which I have learned." I will add another saying by one of the people who the Minister of Education so often talks about and that is the Sicilians, who said: "Many men have lived a lifetime of being honourable, just to commit one dishonourable act." I say no more on that.

I see the amendment that the Government has brought, and I, first of all, called for some type of amendment to this Motion so that we could list, if possible, the Boards that we considered not suitable, or those that were suitable to be made public. I think we all agree that all Statutory Boards should not be made public. When I heard the Second Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman debating this amendment, saying that the intent was not that of all Statutory Boards, I wondered. As I said, I understand the principle of this original Motion, which I support.

Like the Third Elected Member for George Town, I wondered why six months. I am sure the Second Official Member would say "within" could mean within one month, or by the next meeting of this House. There is always some catch in the draftsman's and the lawyer's interpretations, as we well know.

I believe that the Government bringing this amendment may have good intentions. I also believe that six months is a little long. I understand the need to consult with the Statutory Bodies in the country to determine the sensitivities of their deliberations before they can make a decision on which ones should be and should not be.

If I may, like the Mover of the substantive Motion, draw the attention of this House to the assignment of responsibility of Ministers and Members of Executive Council to certain business and departments of the Government. For instance, under the Third Official Member of Executive Council, we have listed under Statutory Boards, Authorities and Committees, Cayman Islands Monetary Authority, Stock Exchange Authority, which I believe even the Second Elected Member for Bodden Town recognises are authorities. It would erode the confidence of those two authorities to make them public. It would seriously erode the confidence the investor has in placing his business on the Stock Exchange. This is something we are trying to develop in our country.

So, when we say we want these things to go public, I support that, but I support it with a degree of responsibility, and I am not saying the Mover of the Motion was not responsible, nor am I saying the Government is not responsible. Serious consideration must be given about which of these Boards can go public.

If Government is mindful they will come back to this House giving specific boards that can go public. I am sure the Government understands transparency. They were the same ones who went out during the campaign as individuals and preached transparency. They cannot say no in its entirety; they cannot! On this side of the House we are not saying 'no'. I am not saying 'no' to transparency. God forbid! I am saying that there must be a degree of responsibility attached to it.

So many times we hear people say one thing, then turn around and say another. I believe those who are making such remarks better examine how they run their lives. When they start talking about integrity and man's word, they better seriously consider what the phrase "a man's word is his bond" means. The biggest problem in this Honourable House is that once the microphone is on, people change. When the microphone is not on, it is a different story. People have to stand up for what they believe in. They must have some convictions. It is time somebody told those who have none that they need some.

I want to hear the Government say that they will be back within six months, meaning by November 2001, with a proposed list of the types of Statutory Boards that will be allowed to hold deliberations in public. I also thought the amendment should have read: "BE IT RESOLVED that in the interest of openness and transparency the Government gives consideration to allowing the deliberation of all Statutory Boards to be open to the public . . . et cetera."

While the amendment is not what I asked for, which was to list those Statutory Boards, I understand it takes a little time to decide on that. I hasten to remind the Government again that if no one else remembers, my memory is like an elephant's. If the Government has been given due consideration and it has not been brought back after six months, I will remind them that the six months has expired. Thank you.

The Speaker: Do you wish to take a break, or continue?

We shall suspend for 15 minutes.

PROCEEDINGS SUSPENDED AT 3.54 PM

PROCEEDINGS RESUMED AT 4.19 PM

The Speaker: Please be seated.

Debate continues on the amendment to Private Member's Motion 19/01. The Motion is open to debate, does any Member wish to speak? The Motion is open to debate, does any Member wish to speak?

The Second Elected Member for West Bay.

Mr. Rolston M. Anglin: Thank you.

The amended Motion. . .

The Speaker: We are still speaking to the amendment.

Mr. Rolston M. Anglin: The amendment to the Motion, Mr. Speaker, calls for what I can see is to get some clarity to the original Motion. When I read the original Motion (19/01) the fourth line, where it speaks of excluding instances where matters affect national security or matters of similar importance to good governance, I think it is fair to say that even accepting this Motion in its original form the Government would, by default, have to have spent a reasonable amount of time and care to ensure that any openness they sought to achieve would meet the spirit of the Motion. After all, if we are talking about matters of similar importance to good governance, and it is similar to national security, then I would humbly submit that the Government would naturally have to go through every Statutory Board and make a decision as to whether or not it would be open, and then try to formulate in what context the Board should be open.

An example is the Central Planning Authority. Certainly, if I am going to make a significant investment, and I had to submit my plans, there would be some expectation to ensure what it is we were seeking to do, which at that time is analogous to intellectual property, an idea for economic gain. To say it could be open to the public would have to be thought about by Government. In what instances could they do meetings in camera so as not to have us come back here in September after having rushed this process, and then get complaints that even though we promised transparency and accepted the original motion we would then be arguing that the matter may not have been of similar importance to that of national security.

I would certainly say that the Motion was not clear. In fact, I would humbly submit the view that the amendment is now a ray of light in many ways to openness and transparency because the amendment seeks to give Government the opportunity to ensure that they think this thing through properly. Therefore, at the end of the day all of us as legislators can feel that we have achieved something of substance and quality for the community without harming all of us if it is thought through properly by the Government.

In the fourth part of the amendment, I read "and that Government, having given consideration to the implications of doing so, that is, opening up Statutory Boards to the public, report back to the House within six months of acceptance of this Motion." Today is 13 July and we are going to be back here not too long from now, in September, and very shortly after that we will be back here for the budget session. The country's business has to go on. The Ministries are large and involve a lot of work. I think it is only fair that we give the Government the opportunity to ensure that they do this exercise properly. Even after that, we are going to find need for change as time goes on. It is almost impossible to get something like this right the first time and please everybody.

These Boards have been closed up until now. I think it is fair to say that, if at all possible, we can achieve the spirit of this Motion within six months, which will be 14 months into our term. I would think we would have achieved something significant in a reasonable amount of time. Prior to this, these deliberations, for the most part, were not open.

I concur with the Second Elected Member for George Town when he made the point that there was a need for clarity in the original Motion. I see this as nothing more than clarifying the original.

I would have to say that this Motion is a very delicate, important and complex one. When we are talking about opening up much more than the dealings of Government, we are opening up the dealings of private citizens, potentially every one of us. We cannot say that is not an extremely sensitive Motion. That balancing act coming between right of access to information and the right of privacy is one that cannot be carried out willy-nilly. We must ensure that the first attempt at this is complete and the Government has gone through the thought processes. It has had the legal department do all the necessary homework. Speak to individuals, if necessary, because we cannot just expect that the Government is going to make these decisions in a vacuum.

After all, what good is it if the Government were to look at any particular Board and say that one is right for opening, and then the persons whose business is being conducted within that Board feel that their right to privacy is being impinged upon? I see this process having to naturally take a reasonable amount of time so that the Government can make sure what it comes back with is something that all of us can feel as if something positive has happened.

MOMENT OF INTERRUPTION—4.30 PM

The Speaker: We have reached the hour of interruption. Will you be finished within a short period of time? Or shall we adjourn?

Mr. Rolston M Anglin: Mr. Speaker, Continuing on with the trend I have set for myself, I will be finished in a short period of time.

The Speaker: Would you define "short" for me?

[laughter]

Mr. Rolston M. Anglin: Mr. Speaker, today is Friday.

The Speaker: I get the message. I will entertain a Motion for the adjournment of this Honourable House.

The Honourable Minister responsible for Community Development, Women's Affairs, Youth and Sports.

ADJOURNMENT

Hon. Edna M. Moyle: Mr. Speaker, I move the adjournment of this Honourable House until 10 am Monday.

The Speaker: The question is that this Honourable House does now adjourn until 10 am Monday. Those in favour, please say Aye. Those against, No.

AYES.

The Speaker: The Ayes have it.

AT 4.30 PM THE HOUSE STOOD ADJOURNED
UNTIL 10 AM MONDAY, 16 JULY 2001.

OFFICIAL HANSARD REPORT
MONDAY
16 JULY 2001
10.32 AM
Fifteenth Sitting

[Prayers read by the Elected Member for East End in the absence of the Second Elected Member for West Bay.]

The Speaker: Please be seated. The Legislative Assembly is in session. Item number 2 on today's Order Paper, Reading by the Speaker of Messages and Announcements.

READING BY THE HONOURABLE
SPEAKER OF MESSAGES
AND ANNOUNCEMENTS

APOLOGIES

The Speaker: I have apologies for late attendance from the Honourable Minister for Health and Information Technology, and apologies for absence from the Fourth Elected Member for West Bay.

Item 3 on today's Order Paper, Questions to Honourable Ministers and Members. Question 86 is standing in the name of the Third Elected Member for George Town.

QUESTIONS TO HONOURABLE
MINISTERS AND MEMBERS

QUESTION NO. 86

No. 86: Dr. Frank S. McField asked the Honourable First Official Member responsible for the Portfolio of Internal and External Affairs, a) Has any inmate serving life at Her Majesty's Northward Prison been evaluated to see if their being let loose would jeopardise public safety; b) If so, what are the findings; and c) Has any inmate been allowed to work in society and what are some of the ways in which they have done so.

The Speaker: The Honourable First Official Member responsible for Internal and External Affairs.

Hon. James M. Ryan: The answer to part a) of the question is, 'no'.

Part c): Lifers formerly assisted with work at the Agricultural Show and have also worked at the Governor's residence. They have not worked on projects in the community for the last two years.

The Speaker: The Third Elected Member for George Town.

SUPPLEMENTARIES

Dr. Frank S. McField: Can the Honourable Member say if their not working in the community for the last two years is as a result of a change in policy in regard to allocating lifers' tasks to be performed in the community?

The Speaker: The Honourable First Official Member responsible for Internal and External Affairs.

Hon. James M. Ryan: I did have comments made by certain Elected Representatives approximately two years ago, particularly about lifers working on the day of the Agricultural Show. The practice, therefore, of allowing them to work in the community, including that particular function, was discontinued.

The Speaker: The Third Elected Member for George Town.

Dr. Frank S. McField: I would like to know if the First Official Member feels that the policy in regard to the allocation of work to inmates inside and outside Northward Prison should be subject to the feelings of Elected Members.

The Speaker: The Honourable First Official Member responsible for Internal and External Affairs.

Hon. James M. Ryan: Mr. Speaker, I believe the Standing Orders of the House make specific reference to answers that require an opinion, but despite that I will certainly try to answer.

If Elected Representatives make representation to me on a matter that I feel they have had representation themselves from their electorate, and if those representations are felt to be genuine, then I certainly will try to take into consideration the views of those Elected Representatives and ultimately the views of the community at large.

I personally did not have a problem with lifers working at the Agricultural Show. However, I was prepared, and still am prepared, whenever there are genuine representations made, to try to ensure that the wishes of the community at large are taken into consideration. So, that practice was stopped.

This does not mean that lifers are not allowed to work outside of the prison; it is just that they do not work in the community. There are duties. There is work on the outside of the prison compound that lifers are still able to do. They are able to carry out those duties on the outside of the fence, but not working in the community.

The Speaker: Are there any further supplementaries? The Elected Member for East End.

Mr. V. Arden McLean: Can the Honourable Member say why no lifers have been evaluated to see if their being let loose would jeopardise public safety?

The Speaker: The Honourable First Official Member responsible for Internal and External Affairs.

Hon. James M. Ryan: The reason why this evaluation has not been done is because the evaluation will heighten expectations of those individuals, the lifers, if it is carried out. Until a decision is actually taken by His Excellency the Governor in regard to parole for lifers, it was felt that it was better not to carry out this type of evaluation.

I should say that we are prepared and ready to have this done and there are normal evaluations, but an evaluation of this nature is not being done for the reasons stated.

The Speaker: The Third Elected Member for George Town.

Dr. Frank S. McField: I understand more and more how this issue is a public policy issue. I would just like to make it clear to the First Official Member that I by no means believe he should be held responsible for the developments made in this area.

I will just conclude by asking if the work at the Governor's residence has been discontinued, which was being done by the lifers.

The Speaker: The Honourable First Official Member responsible for Internal and External Affairs.

Hon. James M. Ryan: Yes, that was done. It was simply a matter of objections, and indeed there were objections and comments coming from elected representatives in regard to lifers working in the community. We simply have not allowed them to work there since the decision was taken not to allow them to work in the community.

The Speaker: Are there any further supplementaries? The Second Elected Member for Bodden Town.

Mr. Gilbert A. McLean: Would the Honourable Member tell the House if there are any restrictions at all on lifers working outside the prison or, is there any requirement that they do their work within the prison while other prisoners may work elsewhere?

The Speaker: The Honourable First Official Member responsible for Internal and External Affairs.

Hon. James M. Ryan: Those lifers that have been what the director calls "risk assessed," which is a question as to whether they can be allowed on the outside of the prison or not, as distinct from the question asked initially. Those persons are in what is called "category D;" I think there are four of those. They are allowed to work on the outside of the prison and they are accompanied by a prison officer. I hope that answers the question.

The Speaker: The Second Elected Member for Bodden Town.

Mr. Gilbert A. McLean: Is there anything in the Prison Law which prescribes the way lifers should be treated? Or is it something that is done by administrative decision in the prison?

The Speaker: The Honourable First Official Member responsible for Internal and External Affairs.

Hon. James M. Ryan: It is done by administrative decision.

The Speaker: The Third Elected Member for George Town.

Dr. Frank S. McField: Referring to my question, a) Has any inmate serving life at Her Majesty's Northward Prison been evaluated to see if their being let loose would jeopardise public safety? The answer was "no." Is the Member saying that prisoners are assessed to determine the degree of risk they would pose to the community they are working in?

The Speaker: The Honourable First Official Member responsible for Internal and External Affairs.

Hon. James M. Ryan: I am not sure I understand the question. Would the Member repeat that please?

The Speaker: The Third Elected Member for George Town.

Dr. Frank S. McField: For example, we had lifers working at the Governor's residence. Were these persons assessed to see what type of risk they would pose to the Governor's security, or the security of persons working at the Governor's residence?

The Speaker: The Honourable First Official Member responsible for Internal and External Affairs.

Hon. James M. Ryan: Those working in the community were assessed to determine whether they would try to escape, for instance. It was not an assessment as to whether they would be a risk to members of the community. In all instances when work was done at the Governor's residence, it was work done on the grounds outside, supervised by at least a prison officer. As the Member knows, there are security officers there, as well.

Generally, the work was done was on occasions when the Governor was on either annual leave or in between Governors; or on occasions when he was not at Government House. An actual assessment as to whether they are a risk to the community has not been done.

The Speaker: The Third Elected Member for George Town.

Dr. Frank S. McField: The Member may realise by now the case I am attempting to make is, if lifers can be trusted to work around or in the vicinity of the Governor, it means there is an amount of trust the prison authorities would have placed in the lifers.

Would the First Official Member say if working at the Governor's residence would indicate the degree of trust which the prison authorities had or would have had in the inmates allowed such a privilege?

The Speaker: The Honourable First Official Member responsible for Internal and External Affairs.

Hon. James M. Ryan: I think the answer to the Member's question is, 'yes'. The prison authorities had a degree of trust in those lifers who were given the privilege of working outside, in particular, at the Governor's residence. What I want to point out is that there is a definite difference between having trust in those inmates while escorted by a prison officer, as opposed to their being released back into the community without that escort. I think that is what the root question speaks to. The ultimate release of those people and whether there is inherent risk to the community at large has to be assessed when the time is right.

The Speaker: The Third Elected Member for George Town.

Dr. Frank S. McField: On a point of clarification, I think the First Official Member may have misunderstood. What I am asking, in fact, what I am implying is, that the whole process of risk assessment is being carried on and extended by virtue of the fact that the prisoners were allowed to work in these situations. This gives an indication of the degree of risk they would be posing to the general public if, at any time, they were released.

The Speaker: The Honourable First Official Member responsible for Internal and External Affairs.

Hon. James M. Ryan: I totally agree with the Member. I agree that is a start of a risk assessment. The point is that, if and when the time comes, they are released into the community without having prison officers escorting them, there has to be a much more detailed assessment done to determine that the community at large will be safe when the lifers are not supervised.

The Speaker: The Second Elected Member for Bodden Town.

Mr. Gilbert A. McLean: We are talking about persons serving life sentences. If I am not mistaken a fairly recent report on the prison made certain recommendations in regard to life sentences where I think it was recommended that it be brought in line with the practice in the UK, which works out to be approximately 12 years.

Has there been any move by Government to bring this to the forefront for public consideration, reaction or to Legislators, regarding this particular recommendation?

The Speaker: The Honourable First Official Member responsible for Internal and External Affairs.

Hon. James M. Ryan: I believe that Member may have been out of the Chamber the day I answered an earlier question. The recommendation made by Sir Stephen Tumin was given consideration, and guidelines were drafted also for consideration by His Excellency the Governor. It is his responsibility to make a decision on the introduction of those guidelines. After he considered the matter and he took advice on it, he decided the time was not right at that point in time to introduce it.

Since that time, in fact just recently, the matter came up. It is likely that Legislators will be given an opportunity in the very near future to give their views. Hopefully, those views will represent the views of the electorate of the country as a whole, or a majority of people, on parole for lifers.

I would say the matter is very active at the moment and I hope that Legislators will be hearing something about the matter in the very near future.

The Speaker: The Third Elected Member for West Bay.

Capt. A. Eugene Ebanks: I remember in a previous question time in this Honourable House where the First Official Member said that the prisoners would be allowed on special occasions to go home and spend the weekend or the day with their families. I wonder, without an evaluation, how that decision was taken?

The Speaker: The Honourable First Official Member responsible for Internal and External Affairs.

Hon. James M. Ryan: That answer I gave referred to other inmates at Northward. It did not refer to lifers. If a lifer is allowed out on what would have to be extraordinary circumstances, escorted by a prison officer, the whole security aspect has to be put into effect. That answer referred to other inmates and we do have a programme where, in special circumstances, they are allowed a short home visit.

The Speaker: The Second Elected Member for West Bay.

Mr. Rolston M. Anglin: Could the Honourable First Official Member say whether or not a lifer did have a Christmas visit in the district of West Bay?

The Speaker: The Honourable First Official Member responsible for Internal and External Affairs.

Hon. James M. Ryan: It is my understanding that no lifer was allowed out in West Bay or any other district on Christmas day.

The Speaker: The Second Elected Member for West Bay.

Mr. Rolston M. Anglin: Let us, then, stop splitting hairs. Has any lifer been allowed visits in the district of West Bay?

The Speaker: The Honourable First Official Member responsible for Internal and External Affairs.

Hon. James M. Ryan: If there is a category D lifer from the West Bay district, it is likely that he would have had a visit escorted by a prison officer.

The Speaker: The Second Elected Member for West Bay.

Mr. Rolston M. Anglin: Earlier the Member said that visits by lifers into the community would incur extraordinary security. Can he describe what security is provided to regular prisoners when they have visits in the community, and what would happen when a lifer has a visit into the community?

The Speaker: The Honourable First Official Member responsible for Internal and External Affairs.

Hon. James M. Ryan: For a non-lifer, if the person is category D; is on the enhanced Wing; is drug free, et cetera, he may be allowed a visit out and this will be without a prison officer. His family will normally take responsibility for him.

Mr. Rolston M. Anglin: If any category D lifer can ever have a visit would that include a night? In other words he would be gone from one day to the other.

The Speaker: The Honourable First Official Member responsible for Internal and External Affairs.

Hon. James M. Ryan: It is my understanding, from the Director, that no inmate has been allowed out of the prison on an overnight visit since he has taken over.

The Speaker: The Second Elected Member for West Bay.

Mr. Rolston M. Anglin: Would the Honourable First Official Member say whether or not these family visits have to involve some form of blood relative and, or spouse? In other words, can a category D lifer visit someone who is purported to be a girlfriend? In particular, can the Member say if, over the previous Christmas holiday, Owen Barrington Bruce spent time in the district of West Bay?

SUSPENSION OF STANDING ORDER 23(7) AND (8)

[Moved by the Hon. First Official Member]

QUESTION PUT. AGREED: STANDING ORDER 23(7) AND (8) SUSPENDED TO ALLOW QUESTION TIME TO CONTINUE BEYOND 11 AM.

The Speaker: The Honourable First Official Member responsible for Internal and External Affairs.

Hon. James M. Ryan: The Director of the Prison will have to check the documentation on that, and I can provide that in writing. The Director does not have those details with him.

The Speaker: Are there any further supplementaries?
The Third Elected Member for West Bay.

Capt. A. Eugene Ebanks: The Honourable First Official Member said that there were no evaluations done on lifers before releasing them into the community. That only happens if the Governor pardons them. Can he say if there is an evaluation after they are pardoned by the Governor, or are they released because the Governor has pardoned them?

The Speaker: The Honourable First Official Member responsible for Internal and External Affairs.

Hon. James M. Ryan: I would just like to clarify one little point. The issue would be parole and not pardon. They are two different things entirely. If a person gets a pardon they are freed straight thereafter.

What is proposed, if indeed parole for lifers is introduced, is a pre-parole programme; the details of which would all have to be worked out. Until a policy decision or a decision by His Excellency has been taken on it, the details would not be worked out. What I visualise happening is, there will be a period, probably 12 to 18 months, maybe longer, at which there will be a pre-release programme to ensure gradually that a lifer can be re-introduced into the community. At first it would start off with a short visit with an escort, and as time goes on, the details would be worked out where the lifer would be allowed to be re-integrated into the community.

As the Member asking will appreciate, someone who has been incarcerated for a very long time is almost like a stranger to the country and would have to be reintegrated slowly into the community. Those details would be worked out, once a decision is taken on it.

The Speaker: The Elected Member for East End.

Mr. V. Arden McLean: Mr. Speaker, in a previous supplementary answer, the Member said that the Director did not have the information available as to whether or not a lifer spent time in West Bay, and that he would provide it in writing. My understanding was that this was sometime in December, some seven months ago. I wonder if the First Official Member got that same understanding.

When he provides that answer, would he provide the second part of that, whether or not it has to be a blood relative that takes responsibility for the prisoner?

The Speaker: The Honourable First Official Member responsible for Internal and External Affairs.

Hon. James M. Ryan: In the case of a lifer who is allowed out, the person who takes responsibility for them is the prison officer who is with them. In the case of a person who is not a lifer, the family or family member will take responsibility. I hope that clarified that part of the question. The Director simply does not have the details of the visits. That will be supplied in writing to Honourable Members.

The Speaker: Are there any further supplementaries?
The Elected Member for East End.

Mr. V. Arden McLean: This is just to clarify my understanding that it is the guard who takes care of the lifer, if he gets out on visit. Would the First Official Member provide the information to this Honourable House that the lifer has to also, while in the care of the prison guard, go to a blood relative? Is that a policy or can they visit anyone in the presence of the guard?

The Speaker: The Honourable First Official Member responsible for Internal and External Affairs.

Hon. James M. Ryan: That will be provided in writing, as I said earlier.

The Speaker: Are there any further supplementaries? If not, that concludes Question Time for this morning. Moving on to item 4—Statements by Honourable Ministers and Members of the Government.

The Honourable Minister responsible for the Ministry of Tourism, Environment and Transport.

STATEMENTS BY MINISTERS/MEMBERS OF THE GOVERNMENT

CRUISE TOURISM IN THE CAYMAN ISLANDS AND PORT AUTHORITY

Hon. W. McKeever Bush: Mr. Speaker, I wish to make a statement today that speaks to the specific issue of cruise tourism in the Cayman Islands, and to also say something on the Port development.

As the entire Caribbean suffers dramatic decreases in the number of stay-over visitor arrivals, and we in the Cayman Islands witness the significant downturn in our visitor arrivals, the economic impact and value of cruise tourism becomes even more important to sustaining the local economy.

Cruise ships and their visitors provide the volume of tourists necessary in the short term and on a day to day basis to keep many categories of businesses operating. Without the cruise passengers, we may have to shut down between the traditional high season of the North American winter months.

As the United States economy continues to slow down and vacationers become more cautious with their discretionary spending, cruising is one segment of tourism that continues to grow steadily. For local economies such as ours, the cruise tourist helps provide daily volume business for the retail shops, duty free stores, watersports operators, and transportation companies.

Since taking over responsibility for tourism, I met with various representatives of the cruise industry including local merchants and the Florida Caribbean Cruise Association (FCCA) personnel, which is the umbrella organisation for the majority of cruise lines serving the Caribbean. From the very first meeting in December 2000, we identified problem areas and began working on mutually agreeable solutions. There were several main areas which were problematic, unresolved, or needing significant review.

Over the past eight months, we have had regular meetings over which I have shared with our partners some of our plans for the future, and our ideas for further exploration. The most recent meeting was held just last week, Monday 9 July, when the president of FCCA and managers of each of the major cruise lines, including Disney Cruise Lines, who will have their first call in May 2002, were on the Island to meet with a member from the Department of Tourism, the Acting Permanent Secretary, private sector concerns, and myself.

I wish to bring to the attention of this Honourable House a matter which could have negatively affected the cruise ship industry. In early 2001, my Ministry took the decision to transfer responsibility for the scheduling of cruise ships from the Department of Tourism to the Port Authority because there were continuous complaints from the cruise lines with respect to the lack of attention from the Department. The decision taken was also because the Port Authority, being the agency responsible for the Port, would be in a better position to determine what they could and could not handle on any given day.

Mr. Speaker, shortly after taking over this responsibility, the Port Authority created a database of approved cruise ship requests as well as requested dates which were not yet decided on, but which the cruise lines had started to sell. It was immediately evident to the Port Authority that there were a number of dates this year, as well as in the years 2002, 2003, and 2004, where the daily number of passengers significantly exceeded the agreed maximum of 8,500. On some dates, Mr. Speaker, the total amount of passengers would have exceeded 15,000.

We obviously had concerns about the congestion this large number of cruise passengers would cause in George Town and the negative experience that these visitors would leave with. The Department of Tourism was questioned on this issue and advised that the previous Minister of Tourism had personally given a number of approvals to cruise lines without consulting the department.

This is yet another example of poor management of responsibilities. The role of the Ministry and any of its departments must obviously be clear and functioning. Obviously, this was not the case in the previous tourism administration.

The Port was unaware of these additional approvals and our harbour clearly does not have the anchorage to handle seven ships. In an effort to resolve this matter the Ministry and the Port Director held a number of meetings and these were followed by meetings in Miami with the Florida Caribbean Cruise Association (FCCA). At the Miami meeting the FCCA was presented with the problem and was requested, in the spirit of partnership, to expeditiously assist with finding a solution to it so that the Port Authority would not have to unilaterally decide which ships could come and which ships could not.

Subsequent to our Miami meeting the FCCA held a number of meetings and presented us with their proposed solution at a meeting in Grand Cayman on Monday, 9 July. The FCCA suggested the following policies, which if agreed, would resolve the problem on the majority of dates:

- The Port Authority should give the historical users the "right of first refusal" on the days of the week historically held by them. The intent of this policy is to ensure that the schedules submitted accurately reflect the actual vessel deployment plans of the cruise operator. This helps Government to more accurately plan its cruise tourism growth and it provides cruise operators with the reliability required to plan their vessel deployments. The application of this policy would require notification to the historical operator if another operator who has not yet submitted its ongoing request for that day of the week. The historical operator then has the right to confirm a vessel on that day or release the day.

- The Port Authority is using the Lloyds' List to project the number of passengers, and this differs significantly from the Master Cruise Ship File, which is based on the vessels' passenger safety certificates. The vessel's passenger safety certificate sets forth the absolute maximum number of passengers that a vessel is licensed to carry. This number has no bearing on the actual cruising capacity of a vessel which is determined by market forces and desired level of passenger services offered on board. The FCCA advised that they have surveyed their member lines and have ascertained that the average percentage of passengers going ashore in Grand Cayman is 90 percent. This number is lower in Grand Cayman than other ports because of the resistance of some passengers to tendering ashore. Therefore, the maximum number of passengers for each ship calling on Grand Cayman should be reduced by 10 percent to give a reasonably accurate number of onshore passengers.

- As discussed at the Miami meeting on 8 June, we should formally agree to a maximum of five ships; 10,000 passengers per day while maintaining the priority of protecting the regular historical calls as outlined above.

Mr. Speaker, after extensive discussions with the FCCA, we have decided to accept the foregoing proposed policies as this would resolve the problem on all except for a couple of days. Also, we will continue working with the FCCA to resolve those remaining less significant issues.

Turning to other issues, several months ago local merchants approached me about considering an extension of the ships' hours in port. While the FCCA was in Cayman last week this was one of the subjects discussed. The local merchants argue that extending the hours in port so that ships leave later in the evening would have several significant benefits because it would give the cruise passengers more time to experience a greater diversity of things to do on the Island. In discussing this with the cruise line managers, they were receptive to this proposal and open to reviewing their vessels' scheduling.

However, the cruise lines receptiveness was contingent upon the Cayman Islands agreeing to some limited concessions on the opening hours for onboard services while ships are in port. My Ministry is reviewing both sides of this proposal, but it is clear that the local economy needs all the help it can get. Having the ships in port longer would not only benefit local merchants, but also stands to benefit watersports, transportation, and local attractions because now cruise visitors do not have to choose just one activity; they will have time to take in watersports and shopping or shopping and sightseeing.

This brings me to the bigger issue of port facilities and the need for Government to finalise its port development plan. Since taking over responsibility for ports, my Ministry had to scale down the unrealistic proposals for the George Town Port development. We are still reviewing various options, but what is clear is that a large percentage of the George Town business community would want the cruise tendering facilities to be relocated to the north side of the port where the Watler Building now stands. I have some schematic drawings that I will table at the end of this statement. This means the Watler Building will have to be demolished to facilitate the expansion. The seamen's monument and the Fort George Historic Site would be protected and incorporated into the new plans.

The capital funding requirement for this project has been discussed with FCCA, and they understand that as private sector partners they will have to share this burden with the Cayman Islands. I gave them two options. The first was for the FCCA to completely finance the tendering facilities' projects; or, the second was that the Port Authority would obtain financing but for the duration of the project loans the crews would have to agree to an increase in per passenger fees to help offset the capital costs. Once the financing has been repaid, a portion of this increase would be eliminated. The FCCA will get back to the Ministry with their preferred option in the very near future. I believe this goes to their Board on the 19th.

The plans also include a proposed tendering facility in the district of West Bay. The proposed West Bay facility would require ships to remain with their engines running and not anchor. Naturally, the public will have opportunity to review these plans. As soon as the final plans are available, these will be made available for public discussion.

Further development of the tendering facility at Spotts is also on the table as an inclement weather alternative to George Town. The discussion on developing facilities for expansion of cruise tourism to the Brac is ongoing. Last, but not least, we are also examining sites on the north coast of the Island for future development. I should add that the north coast is a popular diving area, but ships today can keep their engines running and not wreak any havoc on the marine environment by anchoring. That is what I prefer in West Bay, and have asked for.

As I have said, cruise travel is the fastest growing sector in an otherwise flat tourism market, with bigger ships and more affluent travellers entering this segment all the time. With our proposed port facilities in George Town, which have capacity for 8,000 to 10,000 passengers on a given day, the proposed West Bay facility allows for the destination to benefit from a large size share of the cruise market without the negative impacts of congestion and infrastructural strain if all forced into George Town.

The potential benefits for the district are obvious, but these will be discussed in more detail at a later stage. One of my stated objectives is to increase the business opportunities for the small and/or independent watersports and transport operators. To that end, the Cayman Land and Sea Co-op was developed and the FCCA has agreed to give them fair and equal consideration for the shore excursion options. This required that the Co-op operators obtained the necessary liability insurance and, subsequently, the FCCA Tour Operators have inspected the Co-op members' facilities and found that all but a few met their standards.

Also, the FCCA Tour Operators are advancing discussions on tour rates with Co-op members. I expect that, by October, all matters pertaining to the Co-op will be finalised and ready for the upcoming busy winter season.

Another discussion held with FCCA is on the long term commercial agreements between the country and cruise lines dealing with the number of cruise lines in port per day and transparent fee escalation structure that allows them to plan without tying the Government's hands.

Other areas on the cruise agenda being discussed include, continuation of the Co-op training programmes between FCCA and the Chamber of Commerce, sponsored by the Department of Tourism (DOT), as well as exploring the potential for local agricultural products to supply some of the ships' needs such as fruits (mangoes, bananas), and vegetables (lettuce, tomatoes, cabbage).

I repeat that the cruise industry has much to contribute to the local economy. We must bear in mind the traditional isolationist stance of the Cayman Islands will not serve us as well for the future.

Mr. Speaker, in concluding I wish to thank the FCCA, the Port Authority, the West Bay MLAs and certain private sector representatives who have given a lot of their time to participate in the various discussions both here and in Florida. I especially want to acknowledge the cooperation of the FCCA to date and to thank them for making themselves available for the several meetings which I have had with them since taking office as the Minister of Tourism.

I have also indicated to the FCCA our desire to host their annual conference here in the Cayman Islands in 2003. I look forward to a long and productive partnership with the Florida Caribbean Cruise Association.

Mr. Speaker, in regard to the development of our cargo facilities there have been several discussions at the Board and Executive Council level. Also, there have been discussions with the private sector, but no decision as yet on the proposed development. At the present time, the port is taking core samples in the harbour as the options for the cargo section of the development will entail some dredging.

The cost, as presented to me by the port, would be $10.5 million for the development of the cargo facility to the south as it stands today. The port has also said that if we shifted development for the cargo section to the north, the estimated cost by the port would be $8.5 million and this would entail more dredging than on the south end.

I intend to get an independent review cost of the construction of the proposed cargo facility before a final decision is made by Executive Council and the Board of the Port Authority. I can tell the country that there is a proposal by a private sector concern for the development of a bulk cargo facility; bulk cargo meaning such as cement, asphalt, and fuel. This could mean moving the Texaco and Esso facilities from their present neighbourhood facilities to a site more conducive to such industrial activity. No decision has been made by Government on this proposal.

Regarding development of the port facilities, there are concerns by the private sector business people on the south side in central George Town, and those business establishments to the north end of the port as to where the port facilities should be positioned. All of them will have to bear in mind that the port will have to do what is most beneficial and cost effective for present and future citizens of these Islands. I would hope to get an understanding and true partnership with the private sector on whatever proposal is decided upon.

Thank you.

The Speaker: I think this would be a convenient time to take the morning break. We shall suspend for 15 minutes.

PROCEEDINGS SUSPENDED AT 11.35 AM

The Speaker: Please be seated.

Other Business, Private Members' Motions. Private Member's Motion No. 19/01, Public Access to the deliberations of Statutory Boards. Continuation of debate on the amendment to the substantive Motion.

The Second Elected Member for West Bay.

OTHER BUSINESS

PRIVATE MEMBERS' MOTIONS

PRIVATE MEMBER'S MOTION NO. 19/01

PUBLIC ACCESS TO THE DELIBERATIONS OF STATUTORY BOARDS

(Continuation of debate on amendment)

Mr. Rolston M Anglin: Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

When we adjourned on Friday, I was speaking to the proposed amendment to Private Member's Motion 19/01. I will quickly reiterate what this amendment seeks to do: ". . . that this Honourable House approves that the deliberations of all Statutory Boards, with the exception of the Adoption Board, be open to the public, excluding instances where matters affect national security or matters of similar importance to good governance, and that Government, having given consideration to the implications of doing so, report back to this Honourable House within six months of the acceptance of this Motion.

"AND BE IT FURTHER RESOLVED THAT during this period, the Portfolio of Legal Affairs be tasked with undertaking a review of the relevant legislation with a view to determining what amendments would be required to give effect to the above provision."

I think the spirit of this Motion is in line with what the public expects now in terms of openness and transparency. This would then give rise to greater levels of accountability and what I believe most persons, who were elected after November, certainly would have spoken about in their campaigns. That is greater transparency, greater openness, which are all matters that allow for a much more informed issue-educated populace. That will naturally allow citizens of these Islands to be better able to feel as one with the process, as it were.

I support the amendment because I think it sets out more clearly what it is that Government has to do, and by what time they have to do it. Obviously, there is still an area of the Motion that is subject to interpretation, and that is where it speaks to matters of similar importance to good governance. That is in relation to the matters which would affect national security.

I certainly feel when looking at the original Motion and this amendment that the latter still allows us to do what the original Motion sought. This is to vote on whether or not we want to go down this road of openness and transparency in regard to these Statutory Boards in the first instance. After that, it sets the stage where Government would be charged with the nuts and bolts. That, to me, seems the way that all Private Member's Motions would naturally progress. Firstly, there is a concept; there is some consideration that private Members want to be considered by all their colleagues. There would then be some follow-up action Government would have to undertake to see that consideration is brought to fruition.

When looking at openness and transparency, we must ensure that we adequately balance the level between the right to access and the rights of individuals in regard to their perceived level of privacy as part of society. We can think of a lot of these Boards and naturally see the concerns in regard to privacy.

For example, we can look at the Immigration Board and the business they are charged with doing, and how the matters they discuss are often extremely sensitive and personal. That is the balance that has to be struck. We could go on and on. Each Board will have this sort of consideration.

I look forward to being in a position, if the amendments are accepted, in six month's time to have Government report to this House. More importantly, that Government report to the citizens of this country because after all, we have gone this long and had deliberations of these Boards, for the most part, held in private. So, I think that if we can say 14 months into our term, in some meaningful ways we have increased openness and transparency, and by natural extension the accountability of these various Boards, we will have achieved something worth talking about.

I support the amendment to Private Member's Motion 19/01.

The Speaker: The amendment to Private Member's Motion No 19/01 is open for debate. Does any other Member wish to speak? Does any other Member wish to speak?

The Honourable Minister for Planning, Communications and Works.

Hon. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

In speaking to the amendment, let me try to set the stage by referring to the original Motion, making it absolutely clear that the Government is in agreement with what we see as the intention of the Motion and what it wishes to achieve. The Government has no desire to be confrontational, or engage in a debate on a matter such as this that would be counterproductive, especially when I believe we all have the same intention.

I believe that the nature of the beast causes certain types of debate. It is the way life is when you have Government, Backbench, and some Members who on occasions need to be seen or want to be seen as opposing the Government. I just wanted to make it very clear before going into the substance of the debate that the Government simply did not bring an amended version of the same Motion just for the sake of doing so. The problem we had was with a simple part of the wording.

The Government was very amenable to the Member moving the Motion, making an amendment that was acceptable. That was not able to be worked out, hence the reason for the amended version.

The proposed amendment reads: "BE IT RESOLVED, in the interest of openness and transparency, that this Honourable House gives consideration to allowing that the deliberations of all Statutory Boards be open to the public, excluding instances where matters affect national security or matters of similar importance to good governance and that Government having given consideration to the implications of doing so, report back to this Honourable House within six months of the acceptance of this Motion.

"AND BE IT FURTHER RESOLVED THAT during this period, the Portfolio of Legal Affairs be tasked with undertaking a review of the relevant legislation with a view to determining what amendments would be required to give effect to the above provision."

There is an important aspect not included directly in either the Motion or the amendment having to do with Freedom of Information legislation. Mention was made by the Third Elected Member for George Town about a Private Member's Motion in 1998, which was moved by the present Minister of Education and seconded by myself. Perhaps, in some of the deliberations that have gone on, attempts have been made to query if there has been a change of heart on the part of the Minister of Education, or myself, regarding the purpose of that Motion and following through with the Motion that was accepted in 1998.

Let me refer to some of the debate which took place, if you will allow, Sir. I will read a few quotations so that it can be absolutely clear what the position was then, and perhaps what the position is now.

Subsequent to the moving of that Motion, the Mover, who is now the Minister of Education, sought an amendment to that original Motion. When he brought that amendment . . . and I quote. He said: "Mr. Speaker, before I speak to the Motion, I crave the indulgence of the Chair and the House to move the following amendment: "In accordance with the provisions of Standing Order 25(2) I, the Third Elected Member for Bodden Town, seek to move that Private Member's Motion No. 12/98 be amended as follows: by inserting the words 'and such matters relating to Statutory Boards' after the word 'legislation' as it appears in the last line of the last resolve." [1998 Official Hansard Report, Vol. 1, page 520]

This means that the Motion, as amended would then read: "BE IT RESOLVED that the Cayman Islands Legislative Assembly enact a Freedom of Information Law similar to that proposed in the United Kingdom's Freedom of Information White Paper;

"AND BE IT FURTHER RESOLVED that a select committee of the whole House be convened to determine the parameters of such legislation, and such matters relating to Statutory Boards after public input."

During the debate, I spoke to the amended version of the Motion. Again, I just wish to quote a paragraph of my contribution to the Motion. This was 1 July 1998. I said: "When it comes to matters relating to Statutory Boards, some people with a certain amount of reasoning will take the view that we have to be careful about how widely we expect the information to flow from such Statutory Boards. As is pretty obvious, on certain occasions, there are times when in the best interest—not only for good governance, but also to protect individual rights—it really would not be fair to have certain information disclosed publicly.

"So as the Mover has already said, we are not disputing that there are occasions when information should not be divulged readily, but we believe, and are convinced, that much more often than not the information should be able to be made available. So rather than—because there are times it should not be—simply saying let us not have any of it disclosed publicly, let us create the avenues through which what should be disclosed publicly is disclosed quite readily, and what should not be can be protected. There are ways and means of doing it.” [1998 Official Hansard Report, Vol. 2, page 541] There were other areas in the debate that could be deemed to be relevant, but I will just refer to that small paragraph.

The Government has no change of heart about that position which was taken by some of us in 1998. Unfortunately, the bringing about of Freedom of Information legislation has not moved as fast as we would have liked. I think perhaps, if my example might be appreciated, it is like having a stove with only four burners. You can only cook four different pots at any one time. That is all that has happened. For us to say any different would be to either fancy it up, or not be candid. That is the simple explanation.

In speaking to the Deputy Chief Secretary on Friday, his schedule for moving forward in bringing about that legislation is for us to be in full stride by the third quarter of this year. Let me pause, because the Third Elected Member for George Town also raised some queries, to assure everyone that all will have ample opportunity for input into the whole affair. I speak to the Freedom of Information legislation because it will have an integral role to play with Statutory Boards being accessible to the public.

When we speak to the amended version of the Motion, we speak to two things from the Motion but there is a third leg. We speak to the Government reporting back to the Legislative Assembly within six months of acceptance of the Motion and, during that time period, for the Portfolio of Legal Affairs to be tasked with undertaking a review of the relevant legislation with a view to determining what amendments would be required to give effect to the above provision.

While both of those activities are to take place within that timeframe, we also have to be dealing with the Freedom of Information legislation because it is not a totally separate issue. I just want to explain that the Government is cognizant of what has to happen for the situation to be real.

When the Private Member's Motion was approved in 1998, it was to a select committee. Unfortunately, during that period of time the select committee and its activities did not progress as we would have liked. The Government is moving forward without going to select committee, but rather to simply set the platform to have dialogue with all Members of the Legislative Assembly with whatever public input is needed, and move forward with that legislation.

That legislation is going to need the supporting administrative systems and practices to be able to function properly. The other thing it is going to need is a referee. Some people refer to that as an “ombudsman,” some refer to it as “complaints’ commissioner.”

It is all one and the same. While I am not suggesting the affair is not a complex or complicated one, I am trying to paint the picture with all the different segments that will have to be looked at and dealt with in order for such a situation to be able to function properly without continual disruption and questions being asked as to its function.

The Mover of the original Motion mentioned the fact that he is not a lawyer. Neither am I! So, there is much common ground in that area. The point is that we need not get caught up any more in exactly how it should be worded, but simply to agree that we all want to see the same thing happen. It could be argued that if we do, then why cannot we accept the Motion as it was worded? The difficulty is that as the Motion was worded, there was a part that was a bit generic and the legal position from our side referred to certain areas of it which we had difficulty accepting. I do not think there is any difference in what is being sought to be achieved and, I believe, the various other areas I spoke to should be borne in mind when putting this into practice.

The legislation for the various Boards which would have to be amended is for some 70 or 80 Boards. I think if we look at the word “statutory” from a legal standpoint, our advice is that there are some 57. The number and all of the various activities which involve companies, individuals, other types of entities, as a general outlook indicate immediately that one has to be very careful in how one looks at the position of having information available to the public.

The question is not about freedom of information; the question is simply about it happening in a responsible fashion that takes into consideration both sides of the coin. One has to factor in the corresponding rights of individuals to a certain level of privacy, among other things, and I am certain that there is no one in here who has any intention for that not to happen.

Basically, what the Government is saying is: ‘let us get all the ducks lined up, let us all sit down together and agree on the way forward to encompass all of the various parts which will complete the picture and we can let it happen, but let it happen in a manner where we will not have to be back and forth.’

Whatever is dealt with, regarding Statutory Boards being open, or the public having access to the meetings, whenever these Boards meet, has to tie in all the other areas if you are not looking for trouble. I believe that it is logical to say that the Freedom of Information legislation should almost be a precursor to opening up public records to public scrutiny. I can safely say that, when we get all of these lined up and put in place, all Statutory Boards will have to ensure that their practices and procedures meet and hopefully exceed the requirements the legislation imposes with regard to the public's right to information. I think that is basically the genesis of the exercise and perhaps the objective sought.

If it is possible at this point in time to believe that we all wish to achieve the same thing, while there may be some differences in regard to how it is worded. Perhaps we can get on with it as quickly as we can while ensuring it is done in a manner that does not expose the Government to, not just questions, but perhaps litigation, in regard to an individual's right to privacy. I am sure with everyone's input we will achieve that.

I wish to assure Members that Government has no intention of either slowing the process or standing it down so it cannot be done in a timely manner. It has just been many, many irons in the fire to deal with a lot of issues that we simply had to prioritise depending on how quickly the pot was going to burn—and we did not want to burn any pots!

I support the amendment and I hope that we can find a spirit of cooperation that will allow us to achieve what I believe we all wish to. Thank you.

The Speaker: The amendment to the Motion is open for debate. Does any other Member wish to speak? Does any other Member wish to speak? Final call, the amendment to the Motion 19/01 is open for debate. Does any other Member wish to speak? If not, does the Mover of the amendment care to exercise his right of reply?

The Honourable Second Official Member.

Hon. David F. Ballantyne: Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

I rise to exercise a right of reply in relation to the proposed amendment. I have the benefit of the comments of the Solicitor General who appeared as Temporary Acting Second Official Member on the occasion of moving this amendment.

In the time available to me I have gleaned the background to the debate on the amendment. It certainly seems to be sensible, in my opinion, that the amendments which have been proposed be adopted in that, although the Motion itself is quite self-evident and clear in its purpose, how to give effect to it in relation to the various Statutory Boards and committees may not be quite as straightforward and will therefore require appropriate consideration.

It will not take six months for the Government to decide whether or not transparency or openness is a virtue. That can be decided in approximately six seconds. By the Government proposing this amendment I think it is evidencing that it does not reject the Motion, in fact, it accepts the Motion. However, it requires an opportunity to ascertain how best to give it effect.

I heard reference to Freedom of Information legislation. It may be, once that legislation comes forward, and I concur it would be good timing that it should do during this process, that that legislation will hopefully set out certain principles which ought to operate in regard to the giving of access by the public to information which is provided by statutory or other government bodies. These parties or these bodies are there in order to execute public business. What I mean by that is business on behalf of the public.

As the Leader of Government Business has said, according to my estimation, at a quick glance through the papers, there are at least 57 different Statutory Authorities or Committees. Therefore, this is quite a range of activity. They vary from the area of transport licensing authority, to liquor licensing boards, to labour appeals tribunals, to boards of companies operated by the Government, and to such bodies as the Immigration Board, Trade and Business Licensing Board and others.

Yes, as my colleague the Solicitor General said, there are the rights of individuals to be taken into account since individuals make applications to certain Boards and have decisions made in respect of those applications by those Boards.

If one starts at the individual level, those individuals would, it seems to me, have legitimate expectation that they would receive a decision within a reasonable time. They would have reasons given for the decision where that is appropriate, and that will almost always be the case, in my opinion, if not invariably. In addition to the individuals affected, the wider public will have an interest in how these Boards operate in the sense that there will be policies adopted or given to these Boards either by the Government or adopted according to the framework of legislation. The public has an interest in knowing what policies are being applied; in what way, and whether these Boards are operating in an efficient and accountable fashion.

It is right to bear in mind the interest of the individual in terms of a right to privacy. One question which has occurred to me is who will, in fact, determine what information should and should not be made public in a particular case. Sometimes the law can help to decide this kind of question. It just so happens that I have been looking at some other cases in connection with another matter, and it is somewhat possible that we could adopt the approach that was adopted in the Contempt of Court Act, 1981, in the United Kingdom. Not that this has anything to do with contempt of court, but my point is, that Act contains a provision which prohibits disclosure of information unless it is established that disclosure is necessary in the interest of justice or national security, or for the prevention of disorder or crime.

It is equally possible to think about legislation that has the opposite presumption. In other words, that information should be disclosed unless certain conditions are found to exist. Unless, for example, as the Motion indicated, the interest of national security would require that the information not be made available.

So, all I am indicating is that the law, as a tool, to give expression to these matters might weigh or tilt the scales in favour of disclosure with the proviso that where disclosure of information was not necessary or appropriate, or not thought advisable in particular circumstances, it could be withheld.

Again, the important part of this is that the operations of these Boards and Authorities be transparent. I noted what I heard about transparency leading to accountability and I quite agree with that. It seems to me that the balance which will require to be struck in particular cases, where individual rights are concerned, is the balance of interest between the public having the information and the right of individuals to privacy. That, I think, is reasonably self-evident.

I think too, however, that consideration will have to be given to whether the deliberations of these Boards will be open to the public in the sense of the public being admitted, and the press, as and when these matters are being discussed. Secondly, or in the alternative, whether or not their deliberations should be recorded and in what form, and that record being made available to the public, it may be that both of those things should happen in particular cases.

We tend to focus on decisions of boards, but sometimes their deliberations on matters of policy are also important. In relation to decisions, I have already indicated the desirability of imparting the reasons for those decisions in order to demonstrate the basis upon which they came to these conclusions and, in appropriate cases, quite frankly, permitting the challenge of those decisions. That is what transparency means. Accountability means accountability in every sense.

In winding up the debate on the amendment, I hope in a small way I contributed to the discussion on the general merits of the Motion. If further matters arise and the opportunity also arises, I can say more. I see nothing in the amendment that will frustrate the objectives of the Motion. It will require a little time, but if in fact, Freedom of Information legislation is in the pipeline and coming along. I think it would be wise to see what that looks like at the same time as looking at these issues. I am not saying that to suggest we need to wait. If we are going to look at 57 different pieces of legislation, we will have to do that promptly.

If the Government is going to report back to the House, as the Motion indicates, it should do so in a comprehensive way, and try to illustrate how the rules, if rules are established on Freedom of Information, are to apply to particular boards and committees because it will no doubt be a significant shift in approach. It is important that this House, which, if it involves legislation will have to approve and pass that legislation should be involved in the structuring of it and in deriving the basis for it.

I think there are some terms, which on the face of it might require some elaboration. The expression "good governance" can be very widely interpreted. On the other hand, I think the Government well understands the intention of the Motion and its purpose. In any event, the results of this effort will return in due course to the House.

I think that if there are to be meaningful changes to the legislation, the policy approach would be better outlined first of all in a report by the Government to this House for approval by the House and the changes can then be more swiftly and more effectively implemented.

I think there is little I can add beyond what I have said. These changes will need to be thought through very carefully. If they are, it is possible we may even have model legislation to bring along with the Government's report. I say that, suggesting the time should not be wasted, but used wisely. It should be used to the advantage of the House. It is always frustrating that these matters cannot progress as quickly as all of us would like. On the other hand, if we are going to do a thorough job we had better look at all the legislation and at the principles of Freedom of Information.

I know this topic has exercised the House in the past, and I will not detain you further on these issues. I trust this contribution may assist. I invite the House to support the amendment as proposed. Thank you.

The Speaker: I shall now put the question on the amendment to Private Member's Motion 19/01. Those in favour please say Aye. Those against, No.

AYES, and one audible NO.

The Speaker: The Ayes have it. The amendment is carried. The Motion is amended accordingly.

AGREED: AMENDMENT TO PRIVATE MEMBER'S MOTION 19/01 PASSED.

The Speaker: I think this would this be a convenient time to take the luncheon suspension before debating the substantive Motion.

We shall suspend until 2.15 pm.

PROCEEDINGS SUSPENDED AT 12.52 PM

PROCEEDINGS RESUMED AT 2.44 PM

The Speaker: Please be seated.

Debate continues on Private Member's Motion 19/01, as amended. Does any Member wish to speak? Does any Member wish to speak? Debate continuing on Private Member's Motion 19/01 as amended. Does any Member wish to speak? Does any Member wish to speak? Last call, does any other Member wish to speak?

The Honourable Second Official Member.

Hon. David F. Ballantyne: Mr. Speaker, I think it is incumbent on government, albeit briefly, but importantly, to accept the Motion as amended. I also think that should be on the record, notwithstanding that the amendment came from the Government side. While I have little of substance to add to what I said at an earlier stage, the Government does accept this Motion as amended. It accepts the original intention of the Motion and it occurred to me, since I last spoke, that the one benefit, although not immediately seen by all in that light, is that we have some kind of timetable now, at least, to make progress in relation to the matter. There is an expectation and a commitment that, within six months, matters will be reported back to the House with an agenda for consideration, hopefully for legislation. In the meantime the Freedom of Information legislation will at least be outlined so that its relevance to this Motion can be ascertained, and a much talked about subject might be acted on in the interest of progressive administration in government.

I have no doubt in my mind that the greater accountability of Statutory Boards will lead among other things to the greater demand on the part of such Boards for relevant advice, including legal advice at the time they deliberate. I think that can only be, if I may say, to the good. It may be that such Statutory Boards will consider the necessity to have rather than one of their numbers being qualified in a particular discipline, such as the law, perhaps having access to a clerk with legal qualifications in order to try to ensure that the decisions they reach are as reasonable, are as able to be justified and as judicial review proof as they can be. I do not see any inconsistency between any of these. It will be another step in the direction of trying to ensure that such bodies only consider the matters they should consider and reach decisions that are capable of being tested by the wider public.

In saying all of this, I view the Motion as a positive Motion, one that is timely, bearing in mind all of the other developments including a Bill of Rights, Freedom of Information and the general climate. Therefore, in short, I think it is right to rise in support of the Motion as amended. I commend the Mover of the Motion and others who are responsible for bringing it, albeit that we do not have an entire consensus as to the wording. I think the intent will be honoured and it will serve not just a useful purpose but, ultimately, an essential purpose towards good government, democracy and accountability. Thank you.

The Speaker: The Floor is open to debate. Does any other Member wish to speak? Does any other Member wish to speak?

If not, does the Mover wish to exercise his right of reply?

The Second Elected Member for Bodden Town.

Mr. Gilbert A. McLean: Thank you.

I have but a few words on the amended Motion, 19/01. I have listened to the debate and observations by the Second Official Member. It seems to me that he definitely has given some thought to the ramifications of the Motion and things Government may be called upon to do, even though he was not here in the initial debate in the first instance.

The whole intention of this Motion was to offer to the Government and its Boards the opportunity of conducting its business in an open and transparent manner. I drew the example of how the changes came about in Finance Committee when Finance Committee went from being closed to that of being open. Indeed, I know within myself that should the Statutory Boards of Government, those which could appropriately be opened to the public, if opened, there would be a difference in the way business is conducted. I think there will be better decisions forthcoming from the Boards. It would offer the public the opportunity of being able to hear the matters that affect the public deliberated. In the instance where someone might have an application before that Board, he could actually hear how his application was dealt with—if approved or not approved, the reasons why.

A Member said, similar to the courts. That is right! It is similar to a court setting. You have the prosecution and the defence. All the facts are laid out and a decision is arrived at by the judge. It is similar, I think. In particular, what it would do for society is to remove some of the suspicion. I am not saying that is the case, but it is often stated that there are beliefs where certain persons are singled out to receive approvals, and others are given the long way where decisions in some matters has to go before some boards. I think that perhaps more than anything else it accords with the whole idea of openness and transparency. That would be for the better good of Caymanian society.

I think it would also give an opportunity to create greater public confidence in the Government, or its functioning, as they appoint the Boards, in carrying out those policies. Those policies should always be in the best interest of not just some people, but all of the people, all the time.

Mention was made by three Members. I think it was introduced by the Third Elected Member for George Town, the question of the Freedom of Information Act. It was brought and accepted—but that was two years ago. If I have a grievance with the process of Government, not necessarily the legislative process, it is that we arrive at decisions here calling upon Government to take a certain action, and the slowness to act on matters passed by the Legislative Assembly. I would most wholeheartedly support an act brought forward, which allows public information to be available, albeit after the fact. If persons could access information in Government, it makes for greater accountability. Government is aware that it would be held open for what transpires, therefore, it has to look to greater accountability and be more conscious in arriving at decisions. I support that wholeheartedly.

Seeing that it has taken two years and it has not happened yet, I hope that this Motion will not get tagged to that and fall into that same process. I hope this Motion will get a response in six months.

Another matter raised by the Second Official Member was in regard to privacy. I am a great believer in that. In fact, I remember in 1993 the records will show that I brought a motion here asking for the Government to look about bringing a law that guaranteed privacy. In fact, the Minister who answered on behalf of government at that time had an incident where his telephone conversation was apparently listened to which brought him certain personal problems, and he most wholeheartedly accepted it, saying if I had not brought it he intended to bring certain legislation or a motion to that effect. That was 1993—eight years ago! Until now, it has not arrived. In that period of time, we have shot down a Bill of Rights and everything else.

I daresay I have a right to be a bit doubtful or suspicious about the alacrity of Government in arriving or doing things set for it to do in the Legislative Assembly. When I first presented the Motion, I spoke of the occasion when, by accident, I heard one of the Statutory Boards in the State of Florida conducting its business, and was never more surprised in my life hearing public business being discussed openly before an audience. I have seen articles from time to time from jurisdictions other than the US where reference is made to the Sunshine Laws of Florida, where they openly discuss matters. It seems that that particular State is all the better for it.

To take this thought a little further than it has so far, in regard to statutory authorities being accessible to the public or their deliberations, it is easy to conceive that preparation would have to improve. If persons went into meetings unprepared, it would show before those looking on. There would have to be greater efficiencies within a given secretariat, and it is very likely I would suggest that things would move faster from the point of view that asides or, any petty statements that might creep in otherwise, would not look very good on the board sitting to do serious public business. Any way I look at this, I believe that this particular exercise could prove better for Government.

The question of what is good governance was raised by the Second Official Member and the Second Elected Member for George Town. I make no attempt to try to define good governance. However, from the public administration I have done, I would term it good public management, where an issue was not raised on a certain matter about a citizen because the person raising it knew that it would create an embarrassment for that particular citizen. That, in my opinion, would be good governance. Another example of good governance is doing something which would not necessarily be illegal but could raise a whole lot of public speculation, rumour and all the rest of it, and was avoided. There are many other things that could be cited, which, I believe, fall within the ambit of good governance. Good governance, I would suggest, is making available to the public the opportunity of hearing the deliberation of the Statutory Boards.

Lastly, I trust in six months' time, this House will have the opportunity to hear the Government's Report in regard to this particular Motion, and we will hear which Boards the Government believes is right and proper to make accessible to the public. I can certainly say there are three I have heard over and over again said by the public that should be open. Those Boards are: the Planning Board; the Immigration Board; and the Trade and Business Licensing Board. Whether they will end up accessible or not, I do not know. We shall wait and see.

In the spirit of this Motion, I will give it my support, even though I would have preferred seeing it accepted and Government taking such time as necessary to do the business it is asking for. I will support it in its present form.

The Speaker: I shall put the question on Private Member's Motion No. 19/01 as amended. Those in favour please say Aye. Those against, No.

AYES.

The Speaker: The Ayes have it.

AGREED: PRIVATE MEMBER'S MOTION 19/01 AS AMENDED PASSED.

The Speaker: Moving on to Private Member's Motion No. 4/01, to be moved by The First Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman.

PRIVATE MEMBER'S MOTION NO. 4/01

SPECIAL RELATIONSHIP PRIVILEGE

Mrs. Julianna Y. O'Connor-Connolly: I rise to move Private Member's Motion No. 4/01.

The Speaker: Do you have a seconder?

Mr. Gilbert A. McLean: I beg to second the Motion.

The Speaker: Private Member's Motion No. 4/01 has been duly moved and seconded. Does the Mover wish to speak to it?

Mrs. Julianna Y. O'Connor-Connolly: Certainly! Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

As Members would have now fully perused the said Motion, I will for the benefit of a reminder and for the enhancement of the knowledge of the public, take a few brief seconds to go through the ambit of this Motion. It reads:

"WHEREAS there are many important relationships which depend upon the assumption that confidence will be respected;

"AND WHEREAS presently, such said special relationships' confidentiality is not often viewed as a sufficient ground of immunity;

“AND WHEREAS the Courts have an inherent wish to respect special relationships’ confidence, in the absence of proper legislation there is the element of uncertainty based on the exercise of one’s discretion;

“AND WHEREAS it is in the public interest for appropriate legislation being passed to enhance, augment and/or preserve special relationships’ confidence which has been a part of our Caymanian culture for decades;

“BE IT RESOLVED THAT this Honourable Legislative Assembly appoints a Select Committee of all Elected Members to consider appropriate legislation to preserve and/or create special relationships’ privilege, including, but not limited to, priest and penitent, pastor and penitent and counsellor and client.”

It is my humble view that the issue of special relationships as it relates to privilege is one of national concern. The issue was perhaps brought to the forefront recently with the matter of Reverend Dee Dee Haines, the circumstances of which I am sure all Members are more than familiar with.

As stated in the resolve, it seeks to set up a select committee of Elected Members which would give us an opportunity to carefully consider this national issue. I am fully cognizant, as in most national issues, it will not be without its controversy. I also think it is a fair approach to put it to a select committee, in that, as far as I am aware, no Honourable Member in this Parliament has a mandate to make a decision on an issue of this respect.

I thought the more appropriate procedure would be to go to a select committee. In doing this, we would not only allow ourselves to be in a more informed position whereby we could solicit further research on this matter. More importantly, the public has become increasingly involved in government and the way things are done in the carrying out of good governance. Therefore, this should either be done by written representation or, by presenting themselves before the Select Committee to make them aware of their concerns, whether for or against.

I believe it is not an unreasonable request to ask all Members to allow the Motion to be passed to give, not only ourselves, but the wider public a full and fair opportunity to come before the Select Committee and discuss the pros and cons of this very sensitive yet important issue.

I respectfully submit, if that is not the case, it would be an unusual position for Honourable Members to take in that if the final result was a negative vote we would perhaps, in my opinion, be saying to the public that we are already informed enough on this particular issue and do not need to take more input; be it from counsellors, pastors or priests, or just the man on the street as to where the country would like us to go.

Unlike the United States, we do not have the referendum machinery in place where things like this could have easily gone to a referendum. I humbly implore that each Member exercises his good conscience and deviate from the usual temptation of business, and oppose for lesser reasons of politics and not support a Motion of this magnitude.

I would say that I am also fully cognizant of and concur with the basic principle that no party, and I say again, no party, should be entitled to frustrate or hinder the doing of justice in any proceedings, or withholding from his opponent, or from the court, evidence which is first of all relevant and secondly admissible for that purpose. I would go one step further and submit that this principle cannot be taken in isolation but is, in fact, not an absolute rule and, therefore, I wish to say what I feel is the correct exemption or proviso thereto, just for the record.

I believe that this absolute principle of not frustrating or withholding evidence is that it should be overridden by some important public interest. First of all, certain evidence should not perhaps be disclosed to a party because of the likelihood of danger to the national interest, and secondly, if there would be impairment to the working of some aspect of the public service, then I believe that this absolute rule should not go into effect.

There are certain rules that may also prevent evidence from being given. For example, I believe that, as the law bears out, no persons should be compelled to divulge what has been passed between them and their legal advisors in the course of seeking and giving legal advice. It should also be noted that where a privilege is claimed, and indeed upheld, that no adverse inference may be drawn based on that party’s exercise of their fundamental discretion of refusal to disclose the privileged evidence.

I am also cognizant of the fact that, generally speaking, English Law and persons within our own Caymanian context will take an illiberal attitude to confidential communications. I can say without fear of contradiction that the mother country, that is the UK Parliament, has created for the very first time a limited privilege for journalists in that they cannot be forced to reveal their sources of information. This can be borne out by the Contempt of Court Act, section 10, 1981.

Thus far our law here in Cayman has, in my view, failed to recognise the other privileges. For example, American common law has generally upheld which is the disclosure of confidential communications between a doctor, a psychotherapist and a patient, priest and penitent. Although we would be seeking to put some legislation in place, that is, if the public is fully behind the select committee and we reach that stage. We would not be creating a precedent because our American sisters and brothers have already gone down that line.

Without taking the time in my introductory remarks to go into the actual merits and demerits of this application whereby wasting the time of all Honourable Members and the public, I will leave that to the wider cross-section of the public. I accept, against the background that I do not in any way have a monopoly on intelligence and will seek to use this merely as a vehicle to include the members of the public, those with a vested interest and those with a general interest to come before all Honorable Members of this House to make their presentation. This is to put us in a better informed position that we can make a report and then the Government would have the advantage of this additional information and additional time to either put the legislation in place or come back and report that the majority of the public did not wish for it to proceed.

That is a very simplistic and brief overview of the request this Motion seeks and I ask Honourable Members to give full support.

The Speaker: The Motion is open to debate. Does any other Member wish to speak?

The Second Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. Alden M. McLaughlin, Jr: Mr. Speaker, may I start by saying that I am somewhat surprised that the First Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman, in moving the Motion, has not sought to explain the basis on which the Motion is brought and, indeed, has only alluded to the background of the Motion in the scantiest of detail.

I believe it is imperative that this Honourable House understand the context in which the Motion is brought and the possible ramifications of a finding by a select committee of this House, that such legislation, as is sought in the Motion, becomes part of our legislative rubric.

I believe I should start by examining the Motion. It reads, “WHEREAS there are many important relationships which depend upon the assumption that confidence will be respected.” That is a fair enough statement.

“AND WHEREAS presently, such said special relationships’ confidentiality is not often viewed as a sufficient ground of immunity.” Mr. Speaker, this is where I start to have some difficulty, because I am not certain what “immunity” is being referred to. I suppose if one looks at the context of the Motion, what it seeks to communicate is immunity from giving evidence, or information given and received in the context of these special relationships. I believe that is what it seeks to convey.

It goes on, “AND WHEREAS the Courts have an inherent wish to respect special relationships’ confidence, in the absence of proper legislation there is the element of uncertainty based on the exercise of one’s discretion.” Now, that is an assumption, which I do not believe has any real basis. I am not sure how both the Mover and the Seconder can arrive at the view that the courts have an inherent wish to respect special relationships’ confidence. Further, in the absence of proper legislation the courts believe that there is an element of uncertainty based on the exercise of the discretion.

Having looked at the cases to which I will refer in some detail in a short while, I do not believe that is the view of our courts or indeed the English courts. So, because of that and for other reasons in the public interest, the Motion seeks the resolution of this Legislative Assembly that a select committee be appointed to consider appropriate legislation to preserve and, or create special relationships’ privilege, including, but not limited to, priest and penitent, pastor and penitent, and counsellor and client.

I do believe that the inclusion of the verb, “to create” is an acknowledgement that such relationships or privilege in relation to such special relationships, as outlined, are currently not part of our legislation. That is a correct acknowledgement, and neither are such relationships subject to privilege in the United Kingdom legislation.

Having said that, I understand and empathise with those who are concerned that the value and indeed the sacredness of the office of ministers of religion, priests—however we term them; those who are ordained by God, have within the remit of that office the responsibility to hear confessions of those who have sinned and who somehow seek absolution. I accept all of that and I understand that concern. To seek to elevate confessions or statements made to a priest or minister of religion to the level of giving them privilege which would prevent the court insisting in appropriate circumstances that incriminating evidence, which is necessary for the course of justice to be properly run, should not be given in evidence before the court is quite another matter. I will give two examples in due course of what the consequence of conferring upon these relationships that kind of privilege could have.

Before doing that, as the First Elected Member for Cayman Brac did not outline the context in which this Motion is brought, I thought perhaps I should. This whole issue has arisen because during a trial before the Grand Court earlier this year, in which one Kurt Ebanks was charged with a planned and deliberate murder (R v. (1) Brian R. Powell, (2) Kurt F. Ebanks, 2000). The Crown had reason to believe that he had confessed his role in the killing to the Reverend Dee Dee Haines. The Crown, therefore, served a witness summons upon her. She applied to have it set aside, arguing that any relevant evidence which Kurt Ebanks had given her was protected by priest and penitent privilege.

Now, Mr. Speaker, the Reverend Dee Dee Haines was ordained as the Minister in the United Church of Christ on May 31, 1998 in the United States. When she took her ordination vows she was asked: “Will you keep silent all confidences shared with you?” To which she replied, “I will, relying on God’s grace.” Further, this obligation of confidentiality is also contained in the Code of Ethics of the United Church of these Islands, of which the Reverend Dee Dee Haines was I believe, until quite recently, a minister.

Now, as things proceeded, the Crown believed that Mr. Ebanks had confessed his role in the killing to the Reverend Dee Dee Haines. Counsel for Reverend Haines, although at the time revealing nothing of the content of the conversation which Kurt Ebanks had with the Reverend Dee Dee Haines, asked the Court to assume that the Crown's thesis was correct. He submitted that the court should set aside the witness summons because any such admission or confession would be protected by priest and penitent or religious communications' privilege.

So, Mr. Speaker, for the purposes of determining this particular issue, the court proceeded on the basis that, in fact, Mr. Ebanks had made self-incriminating important admissions to the Reverend Haines about his role in the killing. The Court also assumed for the purposes of this issue that the confession he had given was done in the course of his seeking spiritual guidance and counselling.

The attorney-at-law, on Reverend Haines,' behalf, submitted to the court that it should recognise and give effect to a general or class privilege protecting all priest and penitent or religious communications without regard to case by case consideration. So, on that basis, there would be no need for the court to know anything of the content of the communication before determining that it was inadmissible. On the other hand, the Crown argued that, in law, there existed no general or class privilege, and further, there was no case authority in the Cayman Islands for or against this proposition. The Crown did concede, however, that the court had a discretion which needed to be exercised in accordance with the particulars of an individual case to refuse, in appropriate circumstances, to compel a priest or minister to answer questions even where those answers might be relevant.

So, against this set of facts the Crown asked that what is termed as voire dire, or a trial within the trial, be held to determine whether or not on the facts of this particular case the Court should exercise its discretion to have the Reverend Dee Dee Haines give the evidence or not. The court went on to review the case law, which is all non-Cayman Islands' case law,—the English, Australian, New Zealand, Quebec, and some US cases. They concluded that no such general class privilege existed in English case law, and as indicated earlier, there was none in Cayman. So we get to the point of saying whether or not the law, as it currently stands, is adequate.

Mr. Speaker, one of the cases which the court was referred to and which is set out in the court's ruling in relation to this matter is a case called the Attorney General v. Mulholland and Foster [1963] 2 Q.B. 477 (C.A.). This dealt with the situation in relation to journalists. The English courts held that journalists do not enjoy a privilege protecting the identity of their sources. In the course of examining this question, the late Lord Denning, who was then Master of the Rolls, said, in an obiter dicta, that a member of the clergy enjoys no privilege which would permit him or her to refuse to answer relevant questions. The court noted that a member of the clergy, like an attorney, journalist, banker or doctor will not be directed to answer a question unless it is relevant, proper and necessary to the course of justice.

This judgment was also considered and applied by the House of Lords in another case involving a journalist, British Steel Corporation v. Granada Television Ltd. [1981] A.C. 1096, at pages 1168-69. There Lord Wilberforce said, "Thirdly, as to information obtained in confidence, and the legal duty, which may arise to disclose it to a court of justice, the position is clear. Courts have an inherent wish to respect this confidence, whether it arises between doctor and patient, priest and penitent, banker and customer, between persons giving testimonials to employees or in other relationships. A relationship of confidence between a journalist and his source is in no different category: nothing in this case involves or will involve any principle that such confidence is not something to be respected. But in all these cases the Court may have to decide, in particular circumstances, that the interest in preserving this confidence is outweighed by other interests to which the law attaches importance." That, Mr. Speaker, is the key.

In this particular ruling involving the Reverend Dee Dee Haines and Kurt Ebanks, our court had this to say: "The legislature of the Cayman Islands has, in the Evidence Law (1995 Revision), codified a number of the rules of evidence. That law makes no mention of the priest and penitent relationship.

"Counsel to the Reverend Haines has advanced a number of arguments in the realm of social policy in the course of inviting this court to create a privilege in the Cayman Islands for priest and penitent communications. As arguments in favour of a general or class privilege, I do not find them persuasive. The modern trend in the law of evidence is to prefer a principled approach to individual evidentiary objections over rules of automatic exclusion.

"The issue is best approached on a case by case basis. An answer will not be compelled unless, as the Court of Appeal said in A.G v. Mulholland, supra, the answer is relevant, proper and necessary to the course of justice.

"The court retains an overriding discretion to refuse to compel a witness to answer where to do so would be to violate a confidence: Hunter v. Mann [1974] 1 Q.B. 767 (C.A.); R v. Payne [1963] 1 W.L.R. 637 (C.A.). The Evidence Law (1995 Revision) s. 28 permits a court to exclude evidence in criminal proceedings where its admission would operate unfairly against the defendant. Such unfairness may arise where admission of the evidence would violate a confidence. Whether the court's discretion would be exercised in favour of exclusion will depend upon a consideration of all the circumstances, including the nature of the confidential relationship and the probative value of the evidence."

Mr. Speaker, that is the state of the Cayman Islands Law in this regard. The court reserves its discretion to view the evidence which would be given by a priest, a minister of religion, or a journalist, or a banker, or anyone who is in a relationship to which confidentiality is important. To weigh that evidence and decide whether in the context of the particular case to which it applies, the public's interest is best served by admitting or not admitting that evidence is a balancing exercise and, one, which the court is uniquely qualified to carry out.

I do not believe that we need to pass further legislation to create these privileged relationships. I believe that to do so would create serious moral burdens particularly on priests and ministers of religion, who perhaps have not fully grasped what this obligation would mean. I hear some snickering behind me but for those who believe otherwise let me draw two examples.

Suppose that Defendant A commits murder. Having done so, driven from some inner force over which he has no control he becomes contrite. He goes to his Minister and confesses, 'I am terribly sorry, minister, but I killed Bob Jones last night. I was driven by some inexplicable force and I just could not help myself and I killed him. I came to you for counselling seeking absolution.' Confession is given.

A week later, he kills someone else and he again goes to the minister, confesses and seeks absolution and counselling. He then kills someone else. Now, if there is legislation in place which creates this sort of special privilege that someone who has committed a criminal act confesses to a minister of religion becomes privileged and, therefore, the minister of religion is enjoined from breaking that confidence and reporting that to anyone. What is the minister of religion to do in that situation—sit back, listen night after night to the confessions of a serial killer with his hands tied by the law, prevented by legislation from doing what every principle within him tells him he should do? Not only should these particular crimes that have been committed be reported to the relevant authorities, but also this man should have been locked up so that he could be prevented from committing more of these crimes.

Mr. Alden M. McLaughlin, Jr.: Mr. Speaker, I have heard that what I am saying is an exaggeration. Let me use a less more extreme—even though that is not far-fetched at all, serial killers abound; let me use another example, Mr. Speaker. An individual comes to a minister of religion and says, 'I am really so upset with what is being carried on at this school that do you know what I have done? I have set a bomb there and it is going to go off in an hour.' Now, the minister of religion is bound by the legislation which prevents him from reporting confidences given to him. What is he to do in that situation? Sit back while the school explodes with much loss of life because the criminal has this privilege?

You see, Mr. Speaker, what has been, I believe, not fully understood in the context of this whole situation is this: the privilege in a situation with an attorney and a client is a privilege which attaches to the client. It is not for the attorney-at-law to say whether or not he will disclose information given to him relevant to a case in which he has been instructed. That is a privilege that accords to his client and it is a privilege which attaches only when the information, which is given, is given in contemplation of the proceedings which are afoot or are about to be afoot. It is not any disclosure given to him.

So, Mr. Speaker, we have to be very careful when we seek to create this sort of special relationships. In achieving the legitimate objective—which recognises the importance of sacredness of this moral and Christian duty where priests have to hear confessions from their congregation or charges—we do not want to make matters worse. This is not only for society in general, or for the pursuit of justice but also for those priests and ministers of religion, themselves. We will run the real risk if we impose upon them moral obligations and contradictions, which they will be unable to resolve.

So, Mr. Speaker, I conclude by saying that I believe the state of the law, as it currently stands, adequately addresses the concerns of priests and ministers of religion that confidences shared with them by those who have committed a crime will be respected. What we are speaking about, as the law understands, is not a privilege accorded to a criminal nor is it an absolute bar to evidence of crime being given by ministers of religion in appropriate cases to a court of law to ensure that the ends of justice are achieved. The proper arbiter of deciding whether or not certain evidence should be given is the court of law. That is the state of our Law. That has been the state of the English Law since time immemorial. It has worked adequately.

Until this situation arose no matter had arisen before these courts because I believe in the past ministers of religion understood. They were able to make the distinction between confidences shared with them, which while important, did not really affect the disposal of a case and the attainment of justice in the context of the particular case. I believe that we should be slow to seek to interfere with a legal premise—which has stood for hundreds of years; which has served well; which reposes in the judiciary the discretion and the trust necessary for them to make the decision as to whether or not the ends of justice will be best served by the disclosure of the confidence or by its retention.

Therefore, Mr. Speaker, I cannot support the appointment of a select committee of elected Members to consider appropriate legislation in this case. I have given this matter the most careful thought and analysis and the views which I have expressed are considered views. I thank you, Sir.

The Speaker: The Third Elected Member for George Town.

Dr. Frank S. McField: Mr. Speaker, I cannot resist the temptation to enter this debate before the Attorney General, the Second Official Member gets up to answer on behalf of the Government. The reason is, I believe that I have heard the Government's position, and if I have not, then it would be hard for me to imagine what the Government's position would sound like.

The Second Elected Member for George Town gave a brief legality which was totally accurate in its legal qualities. There are other qualities to government beside the legal qualities and there are other qualities to society beside the legal qualities.

Should we forget that the Church and the State have been partners in this human exercise for as long as we can remember? Even when man was dancing his primitive dance and worshipping his many gods, the State and what would be considered religion at that time were involved in an enterprise, which was to create human order and to maintain that order.

I am quite sure that the question we are dealing with is not just a question of how the English legal tradition would best be continued. The issue here is within the confines of our jurisdiction whether or not we have stumbled upon a predicament which demands we not only think legally in terms of jurisprudence, but that we also think in terms of theology.

When we consider the fact that the Church has always regarded its responsibility as a responsibility it could carry out as a result of its commandments from God, and as a result of the mission and commission which Jesus Christ left it, we have to understand the Church is not a group of preachers, but is in fact the wider community. When talking about issues of Church, we are also talking about issues of State.

One high-ranking law enforcement officer answered a question for me that helped me to be able to decide where I stand in regard to this Motion. He said that you can live without the policemen, but you cannot live without the priest. So, if as a State we had to make a decision, as to which we would first of all support in terms of giving a class of privilege, it would have to be after researching the situation; not because we are any holier-than-thou person—like a lot of those who profess in this place—but simply because we understood the logic of the development of society over a period of time. We would have to say that the role of the priest is a very important role.

Now, some of us say priest; some of us say pastor; some of us say minister. Some of us are not even sure we are talking about some State-sanctioned church, or religion, or just any person out there who decides to call himself a member of the clergy and establishes a church. One reason why a Motion like this is going to be better off in a committee that would allow input from the religious community is that these details which they are also concerned about would be aired to Members of this Legislative Assembly. So, whatever results from this situation could be the result of consultation with members of the religious community as to how they see this particular request being able to assist them in terms of performing their sacred duties in our community.

Now, we are talking about how to assist and how to preserve the possibility of the police and the rights and jurisdiction of the judges and the law courts. We are not talking about how to preserve or assist the religious leaders of our community in preserving that kind of relationship that exists between the priest and the penitent, which is a very important relationship of trust.

There was a time when a person went into a Roman Catholic Church and they were almost un-touchable. They enjoyed, just by being on those premises, the same kind of privileges we enjoy here in this Parliament. We enjoy certain kinds of privileges ourselves because the Second Elected Member for George Town referred to different classes of privileges that exist in English law and society, which reflect more the type of evolution of their society rather than any kind of absolute correctness in regard to how these types of situations should be, or could be handled. What English law does is reflect English society, and English society values and priorities. It does not reflect absolute right or wrong. I cannot believe the evolution of British law to this point can always help me in terms of knowing what is right and wrong.

If we look at the Catholic Church the fact is that when the Catholic Church was first formed it was the original church; the church with the authority from the Emperor who was the State. So, the Church and the State did marry at the point in which it began to civilise and Christianise creating the whole empirical framework that Britain itself would later inherit as a result of Roman conquest. Much of Europe would have inherited it. There was little ability to actually separate Church and State.

Later there was the move to separate Church and State. There is still argument today over what is meant by Church and State and if the separation of Church and State is the separation of different functions rather than the literal separation. There is no literal separation between the values of Church and State. If there were, our community would have civil war. There could be no real separation in that sense.

We say that the judges have one function in order to command witnesses to attend. If we were dealing with the Roman Catholic Church, even in the heyday of their power, to demand that a priest attend court would probably have to go through the Pope or someone in a high position of authority able to suggest that the Pope and King were equal. In the eyes of the society and in the eyes of the law and order, they were complementary parts of the same Crown.

As we evolve and separate more, what appears to be happening especially in the English society is that there is not as much reliance upon the power of the church because it is questioned in the first place. We know why, because of Henry VIII and the change from the Catholic Church under the direct authority of the Pope to a church that was more localised with more local authority. There was no need to invest in that local clergy the same power clergy had when they were a part of the Roman Catholic Church.

If, in English Law, there seems to be a lack of a clear-cut written position in regard to the Church having the unchangeable privilege, I can understand that when looking at the history. What is important when judges are making decisions, according to the Second Elected Member for George Town, is that they do look at every individual case to see if there is sufficient merit to grant special privilege to the—

The Speaker: May I interrupt you for just a minute? Is it the wish of the House that we continue without interruption until 4.30?

Dr. Frank S. McField: Mr. Speaker, I feel that I can continue.

The Speaker: We shall continue without interruption until 4.30. Please continue.

Dr. Frank S. McField: Mr. Speaker, I hope that the ends of justice are really the preservation of social order. That is what I am saying, that the justice system is integrated into the whole societal system, and that the end of justice is the preservation of social order. So, justice is served most clearly when the social order is preserved.

Therefore, when individual judges have been using their individual power to call clergy members and say they do not have to testify, they are exercising a power to show us that within the legal system, within British law, judges really do have more power than the priest. They exercise that power in such a way as to not upset the social balance. The social balance depends upon the respect of the priest; his role in society and the role in which confidentiality plays in terms of their protecting and preserving the relationship they have with the penitent.

When the question came concerning the Reverend Dee Dee Haines, I remember being in court listening to the case because I was interested in it. I must admit that I have gone through a few different versions of what I think as well. The particular position I am advocating today is not necessarily the position I started with because it is indeed a very complicated issue and should not necessarily be concluded with debate in this House. It should go on to a select committee where this issue can be considered even further with the assistance of those persons who found themselves as a fraternity, at one time, in conflict with the dominant view or the view of the judges as representatives of the State.

I did an interview with the Reverend Colin Powell—

The Speaker: Cowan.

Dr. Frank S. McField: Colin Cowan. Yeah, Colin Cowan. It was a fine point he made which convinced me that maybe I had to give a little bit more attention to the religious position, the position of the church, simply because I was not as versed in that particular consideration as I was in considering the other end, that of the judiciary and the police.

What was being said in terms of his understanding of why Reverend Dee Dee Haines found herself in the position she did was because . . . There are different opinions on this. She was asked a question as to the information that she was told. I heard the presentation of that question was so general that it did not bring up the question of the serious crime. It was not asked whether or not someone had told her in confession that he had murdered someone.

Part of what the defence was arguing was that the Crown was taking a fishing expedition to find out as much as possible about the case without, at some point, committing itself by more or less saying that she was compelled by law to give evidence as any other person summoned by the court. They played and played with that situation and used different tricks until they basically imprisoned that woman. They intimidated that woman. The person she had confessed to said: "tell them" because it was the only way out for her as she had refused to say what it was or tell anything about that confession made to her.

As the Second Elected Member for George Town has already said, the confidentiality had nothing to do with our laws; it had to do with her commitment to her church and to her God. All that is being asked in terms of the Motion is what importance do we place in a judicial setting on that commitment that persons living according to those religious codes and principles have made? What importance do we put on that commitment?

If those of us who use the Bible in the courtroom to solicit truth were to turn around and say that that is not important, then we are defeating the very foundations of our justice system. The justice system, believe it or not, is not just based on the ability to know how to weigh evidence, but also the truth of that evidence. The truth of that evidence is partly established by the oath persons take in giving evidence.

If we are going to say, on one hand, that our judicial system depends upon the oath people take based upon the Bible; because on the other hand if they tell a lie we say they will be punished for it.

Therefore, we believe, until it can be proven otherwise, that because they are taking this oath they are telling the truth. So, we must believe, have trust and confidence in those who have taken this oath to make a particular mission their way of life, which is to preach the gospel and live according to those principles that have been established by their leader, their King, and their follower, Jesus Christ.

The position we found ourselves in may not necessarily be something we will experience tomorrow. I do not think we will get into this problem again in a hurry; at least I pray not. It does not necessarily mean that we cannot believe in the whole concept of written law. The English are strong believers in the unwritten law, and we know that people who established the American Republic believed in the written law. We had the argument about whether or not the human rights convention in Britain was there as an unwritten law. Britain now has a written convention going to show that there is some logic in actually having the rights and privileges of persons and classes of persons defined in law.

We are not necessarily saying that we are going to run into the problem tomorrow, but I believe we should get to the point where we seriously discuss these problems and their possible ramifications in committee with persons who feel they have an interest at stake.

In speaking to some of the members of the Ministers' Association, I believe there is a need in any case for us as a Government and Legislative Assembly to insist that there is more structure, definition and clarity in regard to the religious roles in our society. I am not saying the Government should favour one denomination over another. However, there comes a point when we have to understand the importance of religion in preserving values and in transmitting positive values. We need to also understand where it is important that we make sure, as a government, that the wrong people do not get their hands on innocent, believing people who are there to become victims of some people who are preaching the gospel. I think this could possibly begin to happen as a result of the consideration of this particular privilege because the existence of a privilege will also mean the existence of a responsibility.

If there are persons who are going to be asking that they benefit from certain privileges, they are going to have to be established in a very responsible way. I am not saying that the Government should get directly involved in the structuring of these responsibilities, and the maintenance of this type of code, but certainly the Ministers' Association and persons involved there might be the types we need to take on board in terms of looking into it.

The Second Elected Member for George Town has really made a case to say that the public interest would be better served by leaving things the way they are; leaving it to the judges to use their discretion to decide whether or not some should be considered to have privilege and whether or not the evidence that has been given to them is privileged. They can only decide whether or not the evidence, which has been given to the priest or the pastor, is considered privileged once that evidence has been disclosed to the enquiring person or body.

In doing that, they are saying that the judge is more dependable and trustworthy than the priest. I do not think that is necessarily true. The judge might be able to talk about principles of justice as those principles have evolved in common law but the priest is still able to talk about a greater kind of justice, and that is divine justice. Therefore, the basis of that justice is that everyone should be treated equal. Everyone should be given a fair chance to repent and seek redemption.

So, when a person goes to a priest and says, 'I have sinned', it is not necessarily up to him to say, 'Oh, you have sinned, let me judge you'. He is not a judge so he cannot judge that person. God is going to judge him or her. That is not the function of the priest. If the police or a judge finds that they need that evidence in order to judge the person, then in a lot of cases he or she might be willing to disclose that evidence. However, in a lot of cases he or she might not want to disclose that evidence simply because an agreement was made with the person it would be held confidential.

I am not a priest but we are doing a survey now and we are telling people it is going to be held confidential. I do not know how far that might work out. There are times when you must establish a certain amount of confidentiality and trust in order to achieve what is necessary.

So, if someone went to the pastor and said, 'I am going out tomorrow night to kill', there is no reason why he should not tell the police. They all say they would tell the police. If the Second Elected Member is saying, in fact, the law would prevent them from doing that then I guess we would have another problem again. Most people, I believe, are so righteous that they would inform the police if they knew they could save another person's life. When a murder has already been committed and someone tells a priest then the priest is not necessarily helping the person who has been a victim of it by disclosing that information, if he is under the obligation to hear the confession and keep it confidential.

Mr. Speaker, I would just like to end this by saying that we need to just give other persons who have an interest in this Law a chance to voice their opinions. They are not Members of the Legislative Assembly but they do trust us sufficiently to realise that we would, at least, create an opportunity for dialogue. Sending this Motion, as it reads, to a select committee would create the possibility for dialogue, not close it. If we vote against this Motion now, it closes the possibility for dialogue and there is no reason why that should be done at this particular point. We gain nothing at this point by closing this dialogue and not allowing those who also have an interest in it to have a say.

The First Elected Member for Cayman Brac brought this Motion because she is one of the persons who have that type of relationship and orientation. So, we might say she is acting on behalf of a community that wants to discuss this more, and does not want just the Legislative Assembly to discuss it here and make a decision.

So, Mr. Speaker, I hope when the Government gets up to reply, they can find it in their hearts, minds and soul to understand and accept the benefit of dialogue rather than the benefits of sending this to a position of silence.

The Speaker: We have about thirteen minutes to the hour of interruption. Does any other Member wish to speak? The Motion is open for debate.

The Second Elected Member for West Bay.

Mr. Rolston M. Anglin: Mr. Speaker, thank you.

I noted that you pointed out that there were thirteen minutes left and then asked if whether there was any Member who wished to speak. Are you implying that if a Member wishes to speak for more than thirteen minutes you would be minded to adjourn at this point? I am willing to speak but I will speak for more than thirteen minutes.

The Speaker: Well, you will finish up on Wednesday. Please continue.

Mr. Rolston M. Anglin: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. That is all I was trying to ascertain.

Mr. Speaker, Private Member's Motion 4/01 is one that so far I have heard two advocates speak for. One, looking at the legal perspective and, the other, looking from the point of view of whether or not taking this matter to a select committee is a bad thing. In so doing, saying that, at least, creates a possibility for dialogue, which is true.

I certainly, as a Member here, wished that the Mover of the Motion had spoken to whether or not we should indeed go that far. I say that because I do not believe that I, or any other Member in this House, need necessarily vote in a particular manner just to take something to a select committee for the sake of it.

I certainly hope in the First Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman's winding up that a much clearer position is outlined bringing to bear just what it is that certain denominations in this Island seek to achieve and what denominations they are.

Mr. Speaker, when we speak about priest and penitent, pastor and penitent; priest and pastor means a lot of different things in these Islands and this world. These days I hear persons speak of different religions and not different denominations. That is how far we are removed from the ideal world of having one universal church, which in itself is the desire of the acknowledged leader of the Christian church, that is, Jesus Christ.

When we look at the Cayman Islands we see an Island that potentially could have the highest per capita rate of churches in the world. It is astounding the amount of churches we have for such a small population. It is also known that many of our churches are family based. In fact, the church I grew up in had a lot to do with my grandfather. The church I currently attend has a lot to do with some of his distant relatives. What I am saying, when one looks at the Book of Church Order for numerous denominations in this country, one will quickly see that a lot of the churches in Cayman do not necessarily follow the letter of the law in regards to the Book of Church Order for the home church.

Now, when we are going to talk about creating legislation that in effect protects relationships and, by extension, conversations, we have to be absolutely clear as to what it is that we are seeking to protect. What is a priest? What is a pastor? Who defines it? Who is it that looks after the fact that the rules laid down are necessarily biblically based?

Mr. Speaker, three and a half short years ago, on a personal level, I decided that I was going to change my personal way of living. When a person seeks to ensure the way he lives is by a standard that is laid down in the Bible, we will quickly see that it is really depending on one's persuasion whether or not the person made the choice; whether or not the person, depending on your denomination, was predestined and therefore did not naturally make the choice but, in fact, has come under grace because of the predestination spoken of by St. Paul.

I have searched long and hard in the Bible. In fact, I have searched long and hard in three different versions of the Bible, namely, the New International Version, the King James Version and the Oxford International Version trying to seek out where such thought processes come from. One would think that if any church seeks to have such protection, Mr. Speaker, I would hope that the protection is biblically grounded and does not just come out of a thought process that says, 'This would be good'. What is good and what is biblically grounded can often be something that is very different.

Mr. Speaker, this matter is covered and not covered by numerous Books of Church Order. For example, the Lutheran faith looks at this issue and they speak to different scenarios. One of them is whether or not the penitent, that is, the person who has this remorse and is coming and seeking counsel and guidance, is getting something off their chest.

The Speaker: When you have reached a convenient time we will take the adjournment.

Mr. Rolston M. Anglin: Mr. Speaker, I think we had better break now because I was just about to get into one particular denomination and that would take us quite a few minutes to get in-depth.

The Speaker: I will entertain a motion of the adjournment of this Honourable House.

The Honourable Minister for Planning, Communication and Works.

ADJOURNMENT

Hon. D. Kurt Tibbetts: I beg to move the adjournment of this Honourable House until Wednesday morning at 10 am, Sir.

The Speaker: The question is that this Honourable House do now adjourn until 10 am on Wednesday, 18 July 2001. Those in favour please say Aye. Those against, No.

AYES.

The Speaker: The Ayes have it.

AT 4.30 PM THE HOUSE STOOD ADJOURNED
UNTIL 10 AM WEDNESDAY, 18 JULY 2001.

OFFICIAL HANSARD REPORT
WEDNESDAY
18 JULY 2001
2. 25 PM
Sixteenth Sitting

[Prayers read by the Second Elected Member for West Bay]

The Speaker: Please be seated. The Legislative Assembly is in session. Item number 2 on today's Order Paper, Reading by the Speaker of Messages and Announcements.

READING BY THE HONOURABLE
SPEAKER OF MESSAGES
AND ANNOUNCEMENTS

APOLOGIES

The Speaker: I have apologies for absence from the Honourable First Official Member, who is on his quarterly official visit to Cayman Brac, and from the Second Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman who is on Cayman Brac for official business.

Item 3 on today's Order Paper, Questions to Honourable Ministers and Members, but before doing so, I would appreciate a motion to suspend Standing Order 23(7) and (8).

SUSPENSION OF STANDING ORDER 23(7) AND (8)

[Moved by the Second Elected Member for Bodden Town and seconded by the Third Elected Member for George Town.]

QUESTION PUT. AGREED: STANDING ORDER 23(7) AND (8) SUSPENDED TO ALLOW QUESTION TIME TO CONTINUE BEYOND 11.00 AM.

The Speaker: Question 87 is standing in the name of The Second Elected Member for Bodden Town.

QUESTIONS TO HONOURABLE
MINISTERS AND MEMBERS

QUESTION NO. 87

No. 87: Mr. Gilbert A. McLean asked the Honourable Third Official Member responsible for the Portfolio of Finance and Economic Development what is the monthly payroll of government as of May 2001, including employees on pensionable and permanent employment and group employees.

The Speaker: The Honourable Third Official Member responsible for Finance and Economic Development.

Hon. George A. McCarthy: The monthly payroll of government, as of May 2001 for permanent, pensionable employment and group employees are as follows (for the period January through May 2001):

|                             |                  |
|-----------------------------|------------------|
| Monthly                     | $ 56.84 million |
| Bi-Weekly (group employees) | 9.21 million     |
| Veterans and Seamen         | 2.20 million     |
| Financial Assistance        | 1.55 million     |
| Total:                      | $ 69.80 million |

SUPPLEMENTARIES

The Speaker: The Second Elected Member for Bodden Town.

Mr. Gilbert A. McLean: Can the Honourable Member say what percentage of the National Annual Budget the total represents?

The Speaker: The Honourable Third Official Member responsible for Finance and Economic Development.

Hon. George A. McCarthy: In responding to the Member's question, the Annual Budget for the year 2001 amounts to $360.3 million including capital development, but specifically, recurrent expenditure by itself, which amounts to $276.5 or $275.7 million as shown on page 13 of the annual estimates. It can be seen that the amount allocated for personal emoluments amounts to $151.7 million.

The amount allocated to personal emoluments as a percentage of recurrent expenditure through the end of the year approximates to 55 per cent.

The Speaker: On a point of clarity; the question asks for the monthly payroll of government as at May 2001, including employees on pensionable and permanent employment and group employees. Is it my understanding that the figures you have given are for the months of January through May, four months?

The Second Elected Member for Bodden Town.

Mr. Gilbert A. McLean: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. You raised the point I was going to ask. I would like to further clarify. We are talking about $69.80 million in a five month period. So, we would divide that by five to see what the monthly payment is, which, according to what I get is $13.96 million per month. Is that correct?

The Speaker: The Honourable Third Official Member responsible for Finance and Economic Development.

Hon. George A. McCarthy: I have the details for the Honourable Member.

For the month of January, the amount paid out was $12.87 million broken down to:

|                             |                 |
|-----------------------------|-----------------|
| Monthly                     | $10.52 million |
| Bi-Weekly (group employees) | $1.6 million   |
| Veterans and Seamen         | $440,000.00    |
| Financial Assistance        | $310,000.00    |
| Total (Month of January)    | $12.87 million |

For the month of February, the amount paid out was $15.6 million broken down to:

|                             |                |
|-----------------------------|----------------|
| Monthly                     | $12.8 million |
| Bi-Weekly (group employees) | $2.04 million |
| Veterans and Seamen         | $440,000.00   |
| Financial Assistance        | $310,000.00   |

For the month of March, I can give the total. The amount paid out was $15.59 million. For April, $12.85 million; for May $12.89 million. So, it is averaging approximately $13 million per month when taking it to the nearest million dollars.

We know that the months of February and March had the question of the back pay and that was 6 per cent carried over from the year 2000.

The Speaker: The Elected Member for East End.

Mr. V. Arden McLean: Can the Member tell us if veteran and seamen's grants and financial assistance are considered personal emoluments in Government?

The Speaker: The Honourable Third Official Member responsible for Finance and Economic Development.

Hon. George A. McCarthy: No, Mr. Speaker, they are considered grants made to persons. The reason they are included with those persons is that they receive their salaries at the end of the month. As can be seen, this can be separated out quite easily with the amount deducted to show specifically the amount paid to those persons receiving monthly salaries and those in the group employee category.

The Speaker: The Elected Member for East End.

Mr. V. Arden McLean: That is exactly what I was trying to arrive at. He has clearly explained that. Thank you.

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman.

Mrs. Julianna Y. O'Connor-Connolly: Would the Member say if the monthly figure includes civil servants who receive pension?

The Speaker: The Honourable Third Official Member responsible for Finance and Economic Development.

Hon. George A. McCarthy: Would the Member be talking about persons receiving pensions on a monthly basis? If that is the case, the payments are made by the Pensions Board out of the pension fund.

The Speaker: The Elected Member for East End.

Mr. V. Arden McLean: Can the Member say if COS (Contracted Officers' Supplement) is included in these figures for the monthly payments here given?

The Speaker: The Honourable Third Official Member responsible for Finance and Economic Development.

Hon. George A. McCarthy: Yes, these figures would include the cost of living supplement.

The Speaker: The Second Elected Member for Bodden Town.

Mr. Gilbert A. McLean: In a previous reply the Third Official Member said that pensions are paid out of the pension fund; could he elaborate? It was my impression that the fund was something being held in a large amount over a period of time. Is money actually now being taken from the fund to pay the present pensioners?

The Speaker: The Honourable Third Official Member responsible for Finance and Economic Development.

Hon. George A. McCarthy: If the Member will recall, the amounts to be paid out to those persons who would normally be receiving pensions on a monthly basis is paid over to the Pensions Board and becomes a part of the funds available in the pension fund balance. We have that unit making direct payments to pensioners.

The Speaker: Are there any further supplementaries? If not, that concludes Question Time for today.

Item 4—Other Business. Before moving on, I ask for the Suspension of Standing Order 14(2) in order for Private Members' Business to be taken on a day other than Thursday.

SUSPENSION OF STANDING ORDER 14(2)

[Moved by the Honourable Minister for Health and Information Technology.]

QUESTION PUT. AGREED: STANDING ORDER 14 (2) SUSPENDED TO ALLOW OTHER BUSINESS TO TAKE PRECEDENCE OVER GOVERNMENT BUSINESS.

The Speaker: Private Member's Motion No. 4/01 Special Relationship Privilege. Continuation of Debate thereon. The Second Elected Member for West Bay.

OTHER BUSINESS

PRIVATE MEMBERS' MOTIONS

PRIVATE MEMBER'S MOTION NO. 4/01

SPECIAL RELATIONSHIP PRIVILEGE

Mr. Rolston M. Anglin: When we adjourned on Monday, I had started to outline some of my concerns in regard to the Motion before us. To back up slightly, I would like to say that when the Mover of the Motion has the opportunity for her right of reply I would like a clear understanding of exactly where it is this Motion is seeking to go.

I think this is the third or fourth such Motion calling for this House . . . the sixth Motion, I understand from a well-informed colleague that is going to a select committee. The business of the House is the business of the country, and this could be due to my inexperience, but we on the Backbench have a lot of work to do in our constituencies. We all have offices, and keep office hours. I am greatly concerned about the amount of time we will again have to tell our constituents that we will not be in our offices. After sitting we will then be tied up in numerous committees.

I personally would like to understand exactly why this Motion needs to go to select committee and why we cannot have the arguments outlined here and now, and move ahead. I know this is something new to the Island. However, I think we could competently grapple with the situation here in the Legislative Assembly once we were to hear a strong argument for or against the proposals this Motion speaks to.

Obviously, we were put here to do the job, and part of the job is to be in select committees, but a big part of the job is to be in our offices. I know that my constituents have had some frustration due to the fact that we have sat for two rather extensive periods so far.

When we look at the fact that certain matters being called for in this Motion, from my research at least, do not seem to meet with any clear-cut agreement across denominations or any clear-cut agreement across countries and jurisdictions, gives us one potential answer as to why the Mover would seek to have this go to a committee. Be that as it may, from the arguments both for and against that I have seen, I think that once the House can get a clearer understanding of exactly where this legislation seeks to take the relationships considered to be confidential, and therefore a call for a special relationships privilege, then we should be able to adequately deal with the information.

It is worthy of note what some denominations say about this topic. I will begin by looking very briefly at the Wesleyan denomination. I have searched and was not able to find anywhere in the rules of the Wesleyan Church in America, which most, if not all the Wesleyan Churches in Cayman are members of. However, they do cover an area that is at least peripherally associated with this topic.

They speak of "Christian citizenship" and go on to give rules that members of the Wesleyan denomination are asked to follow in regard to government duties. I quote, with your permission, Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: Please do.

Mr. Rolston M. Anglin: From the contemporary issues faced by persons in the Wesleyan faith, and what the church official says on it.

"In regard to earthly citizenship the Christian should support the government with prayers, taxes and respect.

On its part, human government should promote justice, preserve the peace, and respect the separation of church and state. Justice should be expressed in the restraint of social evil and the protection of individual rights. International peace should be promoted consistent with adequate national defence against external forces. Separation of church and state is necessary if the church is to serve as a moral force and a conscience in society. When there is conflict between heavenly and earthly citizenships as to specific claims upon the Christian, the individual has a right to seek a change in the law and to act so as to maintain a clear conscience before God." That is as close as I could find from the official information provided by the Church as to dealing specifically with—and it certainly does not—the matter before us.

The Speaker: At the conclusion of your debate, will you make that paper available to the Clerk to be passed on to the Hansard Officers for recording?

Mr. Rolston M. Anglin: Certainly.

It was brought to my attention as I arrived here today, that on CNN there was a rather interesting case being reported this morning. It had to do with two young men who have been jailed for a murder. A particular pastor has now come forward to say that he has information that would exonerate those two individuals. The information he had was an admission from a third individual who has subsequently died.

It is my information that in this case the district attorney has refused the evidence being provided by the pastor, on the grounds that in that particular state there is specific legislation covering the confidentiality of pastor and penitent relationships. To allow the pastor to come forward with this information would be in contravention of that particular statute. That seems to most of us who are ordinary citizens, seeking justice in cases, to be a rather harsh and unconscionable way to act. The point being that it certainly highlights some of the potential pitfalls when we seek legislation on such matters.

I would certainly think that if a person gives permission for a pastor to testify, even if there is legislation, my understanding would be that that pastor or priest would be able to testify. However, in this case that was frustrated because the particular individual was deceased and could not give such permission.

This certainly would serve all of us well in terms of getting a much fuller understanding of the details of that case, so that we can all be informed to the point where we do not make those sorts of errors if we were to ever have such legislation in these Islands.

I move on to Presbyterianism. I am a member of the Boatswain Bay Presbyterian Church, a member church of the Presbyterian Church in America (PCA). In our book of Church Orders, which governs the church, this matter is not spoken to at all. The reason behind this is, as far as that denomination is concerned, if an individual is truly repentant, it is incumbent upon the pastor to try to make sure he guides that individual spiritually to a point where he would be repentant and not commit whatever illegal, immoral or sinful act he has committed any longer. However, the church also believes that to not have the ability to report and testify about illegal activities to the Government is not in standing with biblical doctrine; we see it as incumbent that we support the Government of whatever country a PCA church is in, in all ways possible.

We also see it as a moral obligation to society, that if the code society has laid down as the way in which persons are supposed to behave and interact within that society, and if the church is not part and parcel of ensuring that code is upheld, the church would be going against the Government which is an integral part of society in which the church is located.

The Presbyterian Book of Church Discipline actually does speak to this issue. The Book of Church Discipline is what is taught at the Westminster Theological Seminary. If I may quote from page 30, under "Confidentiality" it says: "Several matters must concern us in a preliminary way. To begin with, take the ever-larger number of persons involved in the ongoing process of church discipline. First one, then two, then three or four, then the entire church, then the World. The implication of this biblical requirement to seek additional help to reclaim an offender is that Christians must never promise absolute confidentiality to any person. Frequently it is the practice of Bible-believing Christians to give assurances of absolute confidentiality, never realising that they are following a policy that originated in the Middle Ages and is unbiblical and contrary to scripture. There is not a scrap of evidence in the Bible for this practice."

That is the view of the Presbyterian Church, namely, Dr. J. E. Adams. In fact, the church actually holds certain views in regard to persons who sin against each other, and persons who then go on to sue each other. That view is taken from the Bible, Matthew 18:15-17.

Mr. Gilbert A. McLean: Mr. Speaker, on a point of order.

POINT OF ORDER

The Speaker: May I hear your point of order?

Mr. Gilbert A. McLean: The Motion before the House is asking that a select committee be appointed of all elected Members to consider appropriate legislation to preserve and/or create special relationship privilege, included but not limited to priest and penitent; pastor and penitent; counsellor and client.

I fail to see the relevance of a Member debating what is said to be the order book or directives of some particular church. I call the Chair's attention to the matter of relevance.

The Speaker: I carefully note your point of order and it is a point of order.

I noticed that in the preamble, the Second Elected Member for West Bay did not support the Motion going to a select committee. This would be relevant to his idea. The Motion does call for it to be a select committee and really that is what we are debating.

You do have a point of order.

[Addressing the Second Elected Member for West Bay] Please refrain from going into extreme detail in your debate.

Mr. Rolston M. Anglin: I note that the resolve of this Motion is asking for me as an Elected Representative to vote whether or not we go to select committee "to consider appropriate legislation to preserve and/or create special relationships' privilege, including, but not limited to, priest and penitent, pastor and penitent and counsellor and client."

If the way in which pastors view the notion of a special relationship privilege is not relevant to my decision as to whether or not we go to a select committee, then I am not sure what would be.

The Speaker: As a point of clarification, the simple thing is that you would vote against the Motion, or you would support the Motion as written.

Mr. Rolston M. Anglin: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I agree and I take your point.

When we seek to take an important matter such as called for to a select committee, I feel it incumbent upon myself to ensure that when I vote I do so with a clear conscience while conveying to the people of these Islands the reason why I voted in such a way. I believe I should have some logic to what I do.

I have carefully noted the legal argument put forward by the Second Elected Member for George Town. I feel as though those arguments were clear and highlighted enough evidence from the legal basis that at this point in time I cannot be convinced that such legislation is appropriate for these Islands. I cannot, therefore, support going to select committee. At that stage, I would be wasting my time in looking at something that I do not feel appropriate.

I also looked at the other side of the coin. I spoke to a number of pastors and looked at a number of denominations to get guidance as to where this matter actually stands. While I acknowledge that there are certain States in the United States which uphold such relationships, just about every denomination I saw that supported this always had one word of caution. This was that such relationships should not be used by persons who simply want to get something off their chests. In other words, one commits an act that causes one to feel guilty and one needs to tell someone, and who better to tell than your pastor or priest?

I also noted the reservations of certain pastors locally in regard to the fact they do not feel that such protection is necessary because they operate on a code of high moral and ethical conduct. Whatever comes to them is information they feel is very important to the person giving it. However, they also recognise they have a biblical duty to the State when crimes are committed and confessed to them. They expressed they did not see any need to seek any legal protection because they felt duty bound to the community they live in to testify if called upon by the courts.

I would like to wind-up by actually saying that the argument as outlined by the Second Elected Member for George Town I thought was good, clear and succinct. Given the nature of the specific case that has brought about a lot of the reaction in this area, the case involving the pastor from the John Gray Memorial United Church, I would hope that the judiciary has taken the opportunity to ensure that the Cayman Ministers' Association, indeed all pastors and priests in this Island, clearly understand the way in which common law operates in this specific area so that they have a clear understanding of the legal ramifications of their pastoral duties.

I would also like to add, that when it comes to making a judgment call in regard to whether or not a person who is repenting of some simple act, is either truly repentant and want to change his ways, or just get something off his chest, is a matter of great subjectivity.

I would like to end by saying that as a Member of the Legislative Assembly, I would like to hear exactly what it is that we are seeking to do. I look at the Motion and see that it says in the second, and third, "Whereas": "AND WHEREAS presently, such said special relationships' confidentiality is not often viewed as a sufficient ground of immunity;

"AND WHEREAS the Courts have an inherent wish to respect special relationships' confidence, in the absence of proper legislation there is the element of uncertainty based on the exercise of one's discretion . . ." I think that speaks to the concern I just raised in terms of the actual subjectivity of some of this matter we are seeking to debate.

My final point is, that when we seek to protect pastor and penitent relationships, I think we have to bear in mind the backdrop to which all of this is taking place. It has been made clear that the expectation is we will have a Bill of Rights in this country in the near future. Freedom of religion is something a lot of people in this country take to mean you are free to choose what denomination within Christianity you want to go to. However, we have an ever-increasing global village in which we live. We should not think that everyone in this community is going to practice Christianity. Indeed, one of the denominations I researched in this matter spoke of spiritual advisors. As I said on Monday, 'What is a priest? What is a pastor? What is spiritual guidance?'

I was at the Constitutional Commissioners' meeting in West Bay last night. A Caymanian lady rose to speak on this very issue and tell everyone that she practices a different faith and welcomes a Bill of Rights so that her right to practise her religion will be a fundamental freedom. This legislation obviously, at least in my view, seems to be geared a lot more toward Christianity. The First Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman can clarify that in her winding up. However, that is probably not going to be the only religion practised in these Islands. My question is: what about the other religions? What is their belief? How is this Motion going to seek to provide assurance that they too, as a matter of right, are covered?

This is an extremely controversial topic. There certainly seems to be a myriad of views across Christianity and I am sure once we see how other religions look at this we will see a lot of other views. At this point, I feel convinced that the arguments put forward by the Second Elected Member for George Town were sound and adequately dealt with this area. However, I look forward to hearing the Seconder and the Mover debate on this matter. Thank you.

The Speaker: Would it be the desire to take the afternoon break at this time? We shall suspend for 15 minutes.

PROCEEDINGS SUSPENDED AT 3.25PM

PROCEEDINGS RESUMED AT 4.34PM

The Speaker: Please be seated.

We have reached the hour of interruption. I would entertain a motion for the adjournment.

The Honourable Minister for Health and Information Technology.

ADJOURNMENT

Hon. Linford A. Pierson: Mr. Speaker, I move the adjournment of this Honourable House until 10 am tomorrow.

The Speaker: The question is that this Honourable House do now adjourn until 10 am tomorrow. Those in favour, please say Aye. Those against, No.

AYES.

The Speaker: The Ayes have it.

The Speaker: Please be seated. The Legislative Assembly is in session. Item number 2 on today's Order Paper, Reading by the Speaker of Messages and Announcements

READING BY THE HONOURABLE
SPEAKER OF MESSAGES
AND ANNOUNCEMENTS

APOLOGIES

The Speaker: I have apologies for the unavoidable late start and apologies for absence from the Honourable First Official Member who is in Cayman Brac and Little Cayman on his quarterly visit. I also have apologies for late attendance from the Honourable Minister for Health and Information Technology.

Item 3 on today's Order Paper, Statement by Honourable Ministers/Members of Government. A Statement by The Honourable Minister responsible for the Ministry of Tourism, Environment and Transport.

STATEMENTS BY MINISTERS/MEMBERS OF THE GOVERNMENT

PROGRAMME DIRECTOR QUINCENTENNIAL OFFICE AND NEW DIRECTOR OF TOURISM

Hon. W. McKeever Bush: Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

I wish to advise this Honourable House that His Excellency the Governor has offered the current director of tourism, Mrs. Angela Martins, the post of Programme Director in the Quincentennial Office effective 1 August, 2001. A decision by Mrs. Martins is expected shortly and the appointment of the Quincentennial Celebrations Committee will be done by Executive Council on Tuesday of next week.

I can also advise this Honourable House that the administrative process has commenced to identify a new director of tourism. This process will involve advertising the post locally, as well as employing an executive search firm which will identify potential applicants. The applications emanating from this process will then be forwarded to the Public Service Commission (PSC) for consideration, along with the local applications.

A short list of the most qualified applicants will then be prepared and the PSC will interview those applicants and subsequently make a recommendation to His Excellency the Governor.

Although the post has not yet been advertised, we have already received a number of applications from both local and overseas applicants in anticipation of the advertisement. In the interim period, between 1 August 2001, the selection period and placement of the new Director, the department will need leadership. Accordingly, the Acting Permanent Secretary, (PS), in my Ministry, is considering all available options for an acting director and will make a recommendation to the PSC shortly. An acting director of tourism will be in post by 1 August 2001 and the appointment will continue until the new director is in post. This appointment will ensure continuity in the directorship of the department.

The Speaker: In accordance with Standing Order 30(2) I will allow short questions.

The Third Elected Member for George Town.

SHORT QUESTIONS—STANDING ORDER 30(2)

Dr. Frank S. McField: Would there be a possibility for us to have a copy of the statement read by the Minister?

The Speaker: It will be circulated, yes.

Dr. Frank S. McField: I noticed that the Minister said Mrs. Angela Martins had not given her consent to this post as of yet. I wondered whether or not it was normal to comment on the offer at this time without first of all giving her the opportunity to make a decision.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for the Ministry of Tourism, Environment and Transport, do you wish to comment on that?

Hon. W. McKeever Bush: That is a civil service staffing matter which is between His Excellency the Governor and the Director, Mrs. Angela Martins.

The Speaker: The Second Elected Member for Bodden Town.

Mr. Gilbert A. McLean: Did I hear correctly that the Minister said the Permanent Secretary in his Ministry will fill the post of Director of Tourism temporarily? Will he make an appointment to that?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for the Ministry of Tourism, Environment and Transport.

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: What I said was that the acting PS will propose a recommendation to the PSC shortly, and is considering all available options.

The Speaker: The Second Elected Member for Bodden Town.

Mr. Gilbert A. McLean: Is it the case then that such will accord or get approval of the Governor as well, via the PSC, as is the normal process?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for the Ministry of Tourism, Environment and Transport.

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: I imagine that the PSC advises His Excellency the Governor on any recommendation. As such, I suspect that is the route.

The Speaker: The Third Elected Member for George Town.

Dr. Frank S. McField: I was wondering if the matter regarding the previous Director of Tourism is a civil service matter which involved the Governor. Why is it that this Honourable House has not been informed of the matter by way of the Chief Secretary? Why is the Honourable Minister informing us at this time?

My concern is that it puts the previous Director of Tourism on the spot in that people already know she has been offered a position, when, in fact, she has not had an opportunity to make her decision before this was announced.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for the Ministry of Tourism, Environment and Transport.

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: The Governor is responsible for appointments and that is what the statement says. I am responsible for the good governance, orderly conduct and progress of my Ministry. To save speculation, Mr. Speaker, I thought it best to make this statement. Perhaps if I had not, the same people questioning would be asking why I did not.

The Speaker: Item 4, Other Business. Private Members' Motions. Private Member's Motion No. 4/01, Special Relationship Privilege. Continuation of Debate thereon.

The Honourable Minister responsible for the Ministry of Tourism, Environment and Transport.

OTHER BUSINESS

PRIVATE MEMBERS' MOTIONS

PRIVATE MEMBER'S MOTION NO. 4/01

SPECIAL RELATIONSHIP PRIVILEGE

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: Mr. Speaker, The House is being asked to consider a very delicate and important matter. I have listened to what some Members have said.

In looking at the Motion, I believe it is flawed to an extent in that it presupposes somehow, that legislation already exists to do what it asks. Rather, if the House was so minded and a committee was set up, it would be looking at what could be put in a law, or what kind of law, if one were to get some kind of privilege.

I have my personal feelings about a pastor and parishioner relationship. As far as I am concerned, it strikes at the very centre of our being. However, I do not think the Holy Bible, which I often look to for some guidance, is saying that any relationship is so privileged to allow injustice to prevail. What I most consider also is that the Church is one of our greatest vehicles for social partnership and I have always recognised it as such.

If this is so and if it is not this committee—that seems to be the way the House is moving—then perhaps more dialogue in these times, when every institution is called upon more and more to face delicate issues, needs to take place between Judiciary, Elected Representatives and the Church on this issue. What I would suggest to the House on this matter is that we give an undertaking to the Church to have discussions on it; that is the Church and Judiciary, so as to come to an understanding we can all live with.

It is a very delicate matter and I do not believe that anybody in this House wants to do the wrong thing. When my previous Pastor got caught up in the issue I readily told her that I did not think anyone should withhold information that could bring justice to the table. On the other side, there is great importance to be paid on the relationship between a pastor and parishioner, or someone who goes to him for guidance or counselling.

I would make the suggestion that the House, in not passing the Motion, would give an undertaking we would call together the Judiciary, the Church, and Elected Representatives to discuss what could be an arrangement we all are satisfied with. Thank you.

The Speaker: Does any other Member wish to speak?

The Honourable Second Official Member.

Hon. David F. Ballantyne: Thank you Mr. Speaker.

I too, rise to respond on the part of Government to the Motion. This is a significant issue. In the Motion as proposed, there are four propositions which lead to a resolution. I intend to look at each of those.

Firstly, it said: “There are many important relationships which depend upon the assumption that confidence will be respected.” I have no doubt that that is the case. The question might be what are they? The Motion does not limit them, but it cites several including priest and penitent, pastor and penitent, and also counsellor and client. It could have gone on to include journalist and source; doctor and patient; and others that some legal systems recognise as being entitled to some kind of privilege.

The second proposition states: “Presently, such said special relationships’ confidentiality is not often viewed as a sufficient ground of immunity.” I am only aware of one not unimportant, but one recent case here where that view was taken. However, as a general proposition, I am in some little doubt that this may be the case because it does not appear to be supported by case law in relation to the matter to which I will advert at a later stage. An examination of the attitude of the courts may assist in establishing whether or not this proposition is as stated.

The third proposition is an acknowledgement also, which states: “The Courts have an inherent wish to respect special relationships’ confidence, in the absence of proper legislation there is the element of uncertainty based on the exercise of one’s discretion.”

I have to say that the first part is undoubtedly accurate. The courts do have an inherent wish to respect these confidences and endeavour to do so. The courts generally support preserving certain confidences. The second part is true, in the sense, that in any exercise of a discretion there will be some uncertainty, as to the outcome, otherwise there would be no discretion. The issue underlying the Motion, however, is whether that discretion should be removed by granting immunity from disclosure as a rule of law.

In the final proposition it is assertively stated: “It is in the public interest for appropriate legislation being passed to enhance, augment and/or preserve special relationships’ confidence which has been a part of our Caymanian culture for decades.” This seems to be the core issue, namely, whether it is in the public interest to create or enhance such privileges by means of a general rule in the law. It appears from the Motion that the remit of any select committee would be predicated on this position.

Accordingly, the resolve section of the Motion seeks to have a Select Committee of all Elected Members (I note) to consider appropriate legislation to preserve and/or create special relationships’ privilege, but not limited to the categories mentioned earlier.

[interjections]

Hon. David Ballantyne: I am only referring to the Motion as tabled. I am not taking any issue with any aspect of it, other than those to which I specifically refer.

I simply say, let us look at where we are and where we are likely to go in order to put this matter in context.

It is undeniable that much of the heritage of the law here has stemmed from England and English common law to which the Cayman Islands law and legal system often looks for guidance, as was, in the recent case. In that case, the judge carefully reviewed the position on the authorities and brought out the contrast between the United Kingdom and Cayman position, with that which obtains in the United States, Australia, New Zealand, and to Canadian Provinces.

The English authorities in support of the priest and penitent privilege, and some were cited in that case, are from around 1830 to 1850. The case of B-road v. Pitt was cited by both sides to the argument. The reason for that is not too surprising in that that case evidenced an attitude of the courts against compelling the disclosure of information which had been imparted in confidence. It also is authority for the proposition that no such privilege exists at law.

Subsequent cases tend to support the absence of privilege, but support putting limits on the circumstances in which disclosure would be compelled. The conclusion of the judge in the recent matter was that no general or class privilege existed for priest and penitent communications, and he mentioned that the Evidence Law makes no such provision.

The judge rejected argument in favour of the court creating such a general rule, and as we heard, he mentioned that the modern trend in the law of evidence is to prefer, what he called, a principled approach to individual evidentiary objections. He preferred that approach as against automatic exclusion, which is what would occur if a general privilege were established.

There is a fair amount of case law on this issue, and I only intend to refer to such of it as may be helpful. Some of it was already touched upon in earlier contribution.

I would point out, as a matter of statute, the Evidence Law of the Cayman Islands in section 28, enables a court to exclude evidence in a criminal trial where to admit it in evidence would operate unfairly against a defendant. That was acknowledged by the judge in the recent case. In fact, he said that such unfairness may arise where admission of the evidence would violate a confidence.

Just so that the House and the listening public are clear about the provision, it says: “Nothing in this Law derogates from the power of a court in any criminal proceeding to disallow evidence otherwise admissible which, in the opinion of such court, would, if allowed, operate unfairly against an accused person.” So, there is already a statutory safeguard in the Evidence Law, under the label of “Discretion of Court to disallow evidence in criminal proceedings.”

Whether the discretion to exclude evidence would be exercised will, as matters stand, depend on consideration of all the circumstances including the nature of the confidential relationship and the probative value of the evidence. When I say “probative value” I mean the importance of that evidence towards establishing the guilt or innocence of the accused.

In the recent case, the judge found that in view of the gravity of the charge, which was a charge of murder, and the high probative value that evidence of a confession might have, he needed to be able to assess the nature of that evidence. So, the judge decided to hold what is known as a voire dire, which sometimes is described as a trial within a trial; that essentially in a jury trial involves the jury being taken out and the issues being canvassed in front of the judge alone. The judge can then take a view as to the admissibility of the evidence or the other issue he is asked to deal with. In this case, the judge cleared the court so that it was an entirely closed court; therefore the confidentiality of the information given would be respected at that stage. He had not yet formed a view.

He found that there was no other way than obliging the Minister to testify in a closed court for him to ascertain the probative value of anything said to her because that was an important element in the balancing of interests which he said must take place. I would just like us to focus on this balance of interests because I think it is at the heart of the matter.

What interests are there in such a situation? The first and most obvious, which the Motion seeks to have acknowledged through a select committee, but ultimately in the form of legislation, is the interest in preserving certain confidences. There are other interests, of course. Another is the interest in ensuring a fair trial for the accused primarily. A third interest is the public interest in the proper administration of justice. The cases which have guided the courts in the past do touch upon some of these questions. I do not propose to refer to them in detail, but I do intend to refer to them, Mr. Speaker, which will take a moment or two.

There is a case called Crompton v. Customs and Excise Commissioners, which is a House of Lords case from 1973. I only refer to that because it refers to a principle from a book called Bray on Discovery, which reads as follows: “The mere fact that the giving of the discovery will involve a breach of confidence as against some third person or in any way affect or prejudice his interest does not constitute of itself an independent objection to giving the discovery; a disclosure under the compulsion of the court being distinguished from a voluntary disclosure out of court.” I am saying, by referring to that case, merely because information is given in confidence does not by itself mean that it should not be disclosed. There has to be more.

The other case is that of Attorney General v. Mulholland, which includes this statement by Lord Denning: “The only profession that I know which is given a privilege from disclosing information to a court of law is the legal profession. And then it is not the privilege of the lawyer, but of his client. Take the clergyman, the banker or the medical man, none of these is entitled to refuse to answer when directed to by a judge. Let me not be mistaken, the judge will respect the confidences which each member of these honourable professions receives in the course of it and will not direct him to answer unless not only is it relevant, but it is also a proper and indeed necessary question in the course of justice to be put and answered [my emphasis] in the course of justice.” So, it has to be relevant, proper and necessary in the course of justice.

On this particular topic regarding respecting confidence, it is appropriate to refer to what Lord Wilberforce said in British Steel Corporation v. Granada Television Ltd. (1981). It was referred to, but I am going to repeat this because it is important. He said and I quote: “Thirdly, as to information obtained in confidence, and the legal duty, which may arise to disclose it to a court of justice, the position is clear. Courts have an inherent wish to respect this confidence, whether it arises between doctor and patient, priest and penitent, banker and customer, between persons giving testimonials to employees or in other relationships. A relationship of confidence between a journalist and his source is in no different category: nothing in this case involves or will involve any principle that such confidence is not something to be respected. But in all these cases the Court may have to decide, in particular circumstances, that the interest in preserving this confidence is outweighed by other interests to which the law attaches importance.” It is on the theme of resolving the conflict of competing interests that I wish to focus.

Let us look at what we might all consider a fair trial. If any of us has a day in court, we want to be able to come away from it, regardless of which side we are on, with the impression that whatever the outcome the procedure was fair. Whether we are plaintiff or defendant, prosecutor or accused; whether we are a member of the public who happens to take an interest in the proceedings, it is important that the proceedings are seen to be fair and are indeed fair. Thus, if the prejudice to an accused outweighs the probative value of evidence, it will be excluded. Fairness does not just operate to the benefit of the accused. Is it fair that a guilty party might avoid conviction because he chose to speak to a priest or counsellor?

Look at what happened in this case! Was any unfairness worked against the accused? Perhaps it could have been handled differently. In the end it appears to have transpired and I wish to try to get this right that, in fact, no relevant evidence that would have pointed in any particular direction was available. In these circumstances, my recollection is that the judge suggested this could have been accomplished with an affidavit to that effect which would have preserved the confidence in the particular matter.

As it is, I am not aware that, ultimately, the matter proved to be significant other than in the sense of the compulsion of the witness. In that regard, I am reasonably confident that, had the Crown engaged in any form of dirty tricks or undue intimidation, the judge would not have been slow to deal with that. To the best of my knowledge the Crown advanced the position which you would expect it to in an appropriate way. Are we then to review the law of evidence on this relatively rare occurrence? Is the public interest in preserving an undefined range of confidences to be preferred always to the public interest in securing justice? Penitents have rights, but so do victims.

Mention was made of society and how justice should serve the social order, if I am getting that right. There is another way of putting that: the social order should also be directed to serving the ends of justice. Society, in my submission, is entitled to question which interest should prevail. If a privilege were to be recognised, would it be that the priest would have the say and, according to oath, would not say? The question then, in my submission, would be permanently decided one way and perhaps unsafely. Not that I question the integrity of any Member of the Ministry. Simply unsafely, in the sense that the competing interest of securing the ends of justice may be adversely affected.

May I ask that we look at this issue of competing interests? There are no recent cases, of which I am aware, directly regarding priest and penitent privilege, but there are quite a few regarding journalistic privilege and protection of sources. Secretary of State for Defence against Guardian Newspapers [1984] (House of Lords case) illustrates this. It explains that the rationale of the existence of the discretion was that, unless informants could be confident that their identity would not be disclosed there was a serious risk that sources of information would dry up.

So, the exercise of the discretion involved weighing the public interest in eliminating this risk against the conflicting public interest, that information which might assist a judicial tribunal to ascertain facts relevant to an issue on which it is required to adjudicate, should not be withheld from that tribunal. In the course of a criminal trial evidence of a confession would clearly be relevant if it was not improperly obtained. Unless the balance of competing public interest tilted against disclosure the right to disclosure of sources of information in cases where this was relevant prevailed. I merely illustrate the point that there are two interests to be served here, Mr. Speaker.

Also on the question as to what justice consists of, I quote from a case called X Limited v. Morgan Grampian, House of Lords case 1990. It refers to the Guardian case, which said: "The exceptions include no reference to the public interest generally, and I would add that in my view the expression 'justice' the interests of which are entitled to protection is not used in a general sense as the antonym of injustice; but in the technical sense of the administration of justice in the court of legal proceedings in a court of law, or by reason of the extended definition of 'court' in section 19 of the 1981 Act before a tribunal or body exercising the judicial power of the state."

My point in making reference to this is, that it is possible to put in statute some form of protection against disclosure. The United Kingdom Contempt of Court Act, 1981, section 10, which was the subject matter of the two last cases I mentioned, is indeed a case in point. The provision in question reads as follows: "No court may require a person to disclose, nor is any person guilty of contempt of court for refusing to disclose the source of information contained in a publication for which he is responsible unless it be established to the satisfaction of the court that disclosure is necessary in the interest of justice or national security or for the prevention of disorder or crime."

So, even where journalistic privilege is acknowledged, it is not protected where it is established to the satisfaction of the court that disclosure is necessary in the interests of justice. The interests of justice mean the interests of the particular matter before the court. That, indeed, is the position which has obtained here.

Let us look and be sufficiently open-minded about this looking at what happens elsewhere. Start off, however, with legal professional privilege. This is not as some might think, by the title, a privilege attaching to the legal profession. It is a privilege which belongs to the client; it does not belong to the lawyer. By analogy, a priest and penitent privilege would not be the privilege of the pastor, but would be the privilege of the penitent.

You may want to ask what the position is in the United States. I cannot give you an overview of the entirety, but I can give you some information from Black's Law Dictionary which describes "privileged communications" as statements made by certain persons within a protected relationship, such as husband and wife; attorney and client; priest and penitent; which the law protects from forced disclosure on the witness stand at the option of the witness, client, penitent and spouse. It makes it clear that privilege attaches to the individual who made the communication, not to the person to whom it was made.

In the particular references to privileges, priest and penitent privilege in the United States, as I indicated earlier, is recognised in some 50 States and consists, according to Black's Law Dictionary which states: “[I]n evidence the recognition of the seal of confession which bars testimony as to the contents of a communication from one to his confessor. Nearly all States provide for this privilege by statute.”

In relation to doctor and patient privilege in the Law of Evidence, the right of the patient to exclude from evidence communications made by him to his physician recognised in most jurisdictions, but sometimes limited, for example, communications to psychotherapists. Lastly, attorney and client privilege in the Law of Evidence, clients' privilege to refuse to disclose and prevent any other person from disclosing confidential communications between himself and his attorney. Such privilege protects communication between attorney and client made for the purpose of furnishing or obtaining professional legal advice or assistance.

The UK position, as I indicated, is different. Archbold—Archbold: Criminal Pleading, Evidence and Practice—the leading criminal law textbook, advises that no legal privilege arises out of the relationship between a patient and doctor, nor does it arise between journalist and informant. The position of priest and penitent has not been authoritatively decided, but the tendency of judicial dicta is that while in strict law the privilege does not exist, a minister of religion should not be required to give evidence as to a confession made to him.

However, the authorities cited are in the last century, 1853 and 1896. It does, however, mention a more recent authority, to the effect that the court has discretion to excuse a witness from answering a question when to do so would involve a breach of confidence. The example given is from a case called Hunter v. Mann, which was referred to in the Grand Court case, where Lord Widgery said: “If a doctor giving evidence is asked a question which he finds embarrassing because it involves him talking about things which he would normally regard confidential, he can seek the protection of the judge and ask the judge if it's necessary for him to answer. The judge, by virtue of the overriding discretion to control his court, which all English judges have, can tell the doctor that he need not answer the question if he thinks fit. Whether or not the judge would take that line, of course, depends largely on the importance of the potential answer to the issues being tried.”

Archbold then goes on in a passage, that you might think revealing, or insightful which states: “Before compelling disclosure, a court should be satisfied that the potential answer is relevant and will serve a useful purpose in relation to the proceedings and then weigh the conflicting interests to determine whether confidentiality be overridden or respected.” There are references to Mulholland, British Steel Corporation and the inherent wish to respect confidences mentioned in British Steel Corporation.

Having looked at these differences in legal systems we come back to the central question: should a penitent criminal should be enabled to enjoy blanket immunity by relieving his conscience while protecting his liberty, or is it better left to the judgment of a court, which is experienced in balancing competing interests and in ruling on such issues?

There was a hint in the debate of a possibility of power struggle between judiciary and the church. With the church, on which I am only qualified as a practising member of a church, accountability is of a higher order. In my submission, no one is entitled to contract out of obligations to society whatever their calling. This is about reflecting the interests of the public in the law and applying the law in a particular case.

At this point, I would like to refer to issues raised in the debate so that I can attempt to answer them in, hopefully, a helpful way. Those issues will come down to who is to decide whether a privilege obtains. Should it be the penitent or the pastor? Should the court have the task of balancing the competing interests, if it is accepted that there are indeed competing interests?

I agree that it is not just a question of whether the English legal tradition should be continued, but instead the tradition should not be lightly discarded. It is not the relationship that is privileged; it is the communications between the parties to that relationship. I would like to say something about the notion of what happens in a trial. A trial is an adversarial process. The Crown prosecutes on behalf of the public, for society in general. The Crown must prove its case. The defence need only give rise to a reasonable doubt to have the benefit of that doubt. In other words, the burden of proof remains on the Crown throughout.

In serious crimes there is an obvious public interest in convicting guilty parties. No one would seriously dispute that. In the social order, there is a public interest in maintaining the confidential nature of certain communications and relationships. The law as it stands respects both, but does not generalise a rule favouring one or the other.

The benefit of the doubt is an aspect of fairness, which is also reflected in section 28 of the Evidence Law. In my submission, the Motion would resolve the conflict between these competing interests permanently and automatically in the favour of the exclusion of confession evidence. Although I accept that the mechanism offered in the Motion would be a select committee, it is predicated on incorporating the privilege into legislation. In that sense, it would serve one public purpose, namely, preserving confidences, but it risks failing another—the due administration of justice, if it were to invariably protect a person who confesses to persons with whom they would be deemed to have had a relationship assuring confidence.

In my view, as a professional lawyer, and as the Government's legal spokesman, which interest should prevail is not best answered by a rule, which is unable to distinguish between cases.

It was said in debate that there is no difference in values between church and state, only functions. Unless the competing interests of administration of justice takes its place within religious values, there may be potential for a difference. As I indicated earlier, justice may well be served when the social order is preserved, but in my view, it can equally be put the other way that social order is preserved when justice is served. I do not see this as a conflict or power struggle between judges and the ministry. I think that would be an unhelpful way in which to perceive the issue. It is not the judges, but the law; therefore, this is not a political struggle.

In my view, the existence of a privilege would also mean that there should be responsibilities. Will this mean that a priest or minister or counsellor, however described, will never be under an obligation to disclose evidence of serious crime? I do not think that leaving it to the judge means that it is more justifiable or that he is more trustworthy. He is simply more used to trying issues where there are competing submissions and interests and it is a matter of law. I daresay we will all ultimately face the ultimate judgment in whatever form that means for each of us, but in relation to the civil power, I believe it is also biblically correct to render unto Caesar what is Caesar's.

It was suggested that voting against the Motion would go against any dialogue. I am not in favour of a position which would defeat dialogue. I think it is possible to have that dialogue in a different way. The way in which that dialogue might occur is in the context of human rights to which reference was made in the debate. If regard is to be had to principles, we do not need to look further than the United Kingdom to see the European Convention on Human Rights having been enacted by legislation in the Human Rights Act there.

One of the provisions in the Human Rights Act and the European Convention is Article 10 on Freedom of Expression. It may not seem obvious at the outset, but if you bear with me a moment, I will hope to explain what I mean. Article 10 provides that everyone has the right to freedom of expression and states: "This right shall include freedom to hold opinions and to receive and impart information and ideas without interference by public authority and regardless of frontiers. This article shall not prevent states from requiring the licensing of broadcasting, television or cinema enterprises."

The second paragraph says: "The exercise of these freedoms, since it carries with it duties and responsibilities, may be subject to such formalities, conditions, restrictions or penalties as are prescribed by law and are necessary in a democratic society in the interest of national security, territorial integrity or public safety, for the preven- tion of disorder or crime, for the protection of health or morals, for the protection of the reputation or rights of others, [and the point I wanted to underline] for preventing the disclosure of information received in confidence, or for maintaining the authority and impartiality of the judiciary."

I am not suggesting that is a solution to this problem, but my suggestion is that it may point the way. That kind of language is repeated in the draft model Chapter of Human Rights which has been suggested for possible incorporation in the Overseas Territories which do not have a Bill of Rights. It is repeated in substantially the same way under the heading of "Freedom of Expression" and contains substantially the same provisions as I read out, in particular the ability to prevent the disclosure of information received in confidence.

In referring to this, I want to refer to the other interest. Although we have a Bill of Rights contemplated, it is not just limited to containing provisions regarding confidence. I have already referred to the United Kingdom's Contempt of Court Act as statutory restriction on disclosure of confidential information. I also want to talk about protection of the law to which everyone is entitled.

Under the proposed Bill of Rights for the Overseas' Territories, which would be a matter for adoption in the particular territory, persons will be entitled to the due protection of law, due process if you like. Even if the creation or enhancement of special relationships' privilege were created or extended, even if that was considered to be desirable, it would appear at this point to entail giving to possibly, guilty parties, added protection, in respect of their own admissions beyond what the law provides at present.

If evidence is wrongly admitted, there is a right of appeal. If, however, evidence is automatically excluded there is no right of appeal by the victim, or the surviving relatives. My submission on which I would wish to repose the argument is that justice as between the parties should remain the prime consideration in criminal trials and the fairness of the procedure should operate both in the direction of the accused, and in respect of the interests of society and the community at large.

This is a difficult issue to address comprehensively. I have tried to give an indication of where the law presently stands. I would also suggest that the issues canvassed here, could, and should in my view, be contemplated as part of a Bill of Rights, and should occur within the dialogue on the content of a Bill of Rights.

So, in not supporting the Motion by means of having a select committee, I hope it is clearly understood that I am not in favour of curtailing debate on the issue. I do say that perhaps the better method would be in the context of a formulation of a Bill of Rights because a simple proposition, that Bill of Rights ought as its objective to seek to balance the rights of the individual with the rights of society at large. If there is a method of reconciling the competing interests which are presently entrusted to the judiciary, and rightly so, in my opinion, then it may be found in the context of the development of a Bill of Rights.

The individual has rights, society has rights, and there will always be the potential for tension between them. Therefore, I think it preferable to allow for this tension to be resolved if it can within a Bill of Rights. I suspect that, at the end of the day, it will continue to be necessary to have matters adjudicated by the judiciary who are both competent and capable to adjudicate between the need to respect confidences and the need to ensure the fair and proper administration of justice in particular cases.

For these reasons, and others which you have heard, Mr. Speaker, the Government is not in a position to support the Motion, but would support the continuation of dialogue with a view to attempting to address, in an appropriate way, the issues raised. Thank you.

The Speaker: We shall suspend proceedings for 15 minutes.

PROCEEDINGS SUSPENDED AT 11.51 AM

PROCEEDINGS RESUMED AT 12.20 PM

The Speaker: Please be seated.

Debate continues on Private Member's Motion No. 4/01. Does any other Member wish to speak?

The Second Elected Member for Bodden Town.

Mr. Gilbert A. McLean: Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

As the Seconder of this Motion, I rise to offer my views on the subject.

I am aware that laws are made in some instances as a result of things which happen in a society. Laws come from the mindset of legislators as well. I know that amendments to laws, and laws, come as a reaction or response to certain conditions. It has been said by the Mover, and I think, noted by other speakers, that this Motion was largely due to the situation in fairly recent months regarding a reverend of a local church and a case involving murder.

I also believe that negative conditions are not helped by not facing those conditions, or examining those conditions with a view of making changes. Therefore, since there was an occurrence in the Caymanian society involving the law, with a religious leader involved, and which brought about a query in the minds of the public about the privilege between a religious leader and someone who makes a confession or statement to them, it is a good time to examine the whole matter.

I would like to add, at this point, that I do not think any decision taken today would mean that this matter will be put to rest forever. This is a dynamic matter and every time similar conditions arise, it will be the debate and the question all over again. There is no such thing as putting it to rest.

I am happy to offer my views, which are not legal, nor necessarily sociological or theological, just commonsensical as best I understand it, and certainly my own. One thing I would like to note—and I think we get lost sometimes, but I can remember bitter times in this Legislative Assembly where in motions a “whereas” said “on” instead of “no” and that became a major part of the debate. Therefore, I am not one who believes in “whereas” clauses or in recitals to motions. Any that I bring have a straightforward resolve which is all the House can deal with and vote on. A motion is really a resolve and a resolve the motion for all practical purposes. In this case, this Motion has “whereas” clauses and I note that there are those who have pounced upon this because of what was said to take it apart, or to imply that the Mover or me, the Seconder, never really had a thought about.

My thought was singularly and largely what the resolve asks for. It asks that this Honourable Legislative Assembly appoint a Select Committee of all Elected Members to consider appropriate legislation to preserve and, or create special relationships' privilege, including, but not limited to, priest and penitent, pastor and penitent, counsellor and client. Of course, the list could go on. So, Mr. Speaker, that is all I am speaking to, and I will give my reasons for so doing.

I was informed very much by what the Second Official Member said, particularly where he compared British law to American law in regards to privilege. Again, the fact is that American law tends towards the written word and, as I understand, British law tends more towards rulings by the judges. It is caught up in something called common law. Common law, I understand, is based on custom, usage and judicial decisions.

It strikes me that common law could be the judgment of one particular judge on some issue which could change if it went to a higher court and another judge judged it to be something else. I see certain dynamics for possible change in the particular usage or customs or judicial decision, whereas, my understanding is, Americans want to write it down in law. Therefore, it gives the persons at the grassroots the opportunity of knowing what the law prescribes or dictates rather than having to wait to get to court where the judge tells them, which costs money. The ongoing process could even cost more.

There is one thing which seems to be the same in both jurisdictions, and that is attorney and client privilege. The latter being that I can tell my attorney something and my attorney is required to keep it confidential, and does not have to tell it to the judge which is quite unique. Obviously, this is a special group of professionals that can keep that information confidential without giving it to the judge. Now, I am sure the lawyers in here could give me 1,000 arguments as to why that is necessary, just the same way I could have 1,000 different reasons to ask why they should get that privilege and others not get it. There seems to be agreement in both jurisdictions in that regard. I am not saying that that should not exist, for as best as I understand, it is necessary for the judicial process.

So that we do not make a privileged class of professionals, I think we should take a broader view as to where consideration of privilege might exist. One area where it was suggested it might exist was between priest or pastor and penitent. We are talking about people who are ordained. They more or less devote their lives to certain religious principles, behaviour, and all the rest of it.

Persons go to their pastor when they have personal problems; they may even have information that relates to a crime. It could be capital crime, and they are deathly afraid to go to the police. They may have a religious belief that they are not supposed to go to the police, but they will tell it to their pastor. It then becomes a question of whether or not the pastor passes that information on to the police.

As far as the practice of the law goes, and the belief of a majority of Caymanians, would be 'yes, you are supposed to pass that information on to the police because it is a crime and because the person who committed the crime should be punished.' However, the vow that the preacher has to take virtually commits him to keep the information, given to him in confidence, confidential. Now, that creates a problem between the church and the law. Who is wrong? Which is the greater right? Does the pastor practise the vow he has taken, or does he give in and acknowledge the greater power of the judge? That is a question that we in Cayman and in this Legislative Assembly are faced with right now.

Is it satisfactory to meet, as the Second Official Member says, in the Dee Dee Haines case, like a trial within a trial? I gathered that was in camera, where the preacher was questioned on certain matters and expected to give an answer to the questions put to her. The other question is: do we want to legislate at what point a pastor, reverend or whoever, who would be expected to give information, be given in confidence, or whether it should be given at all?

Do we simply want to leave it solely to the discretion of the judge to determine? Do we want to set something down in writing which says it can or cannot be given, or that it can be given in whatever circumstances? It is within that controversial, unanswerable condition that I view this Motion.

I think the Third Elected Member for George Town spoke more to the role from a sociological point of view that the Church and religion plays. When we think of times past, like when the Rotary Club is working with the government towards encouraging people to turn in firearms, one of the persons they say you can turn the firearms in to is a pastor. It is assumed that the state is saying, 'If you will turn in the illegal arms you have, then go to your pastor and give him that bazooka.' I am saying they have the privilege to tell the police who turned in that bazooka. Is that not similar to the situation, which is in question with this Motion? I suggest that it is.

The religious leaders do play a very strong and significant role in any kind of law-abiding society. Countries like Iran are largely guided by what their religious belief is. I do not think there is any clean-cut argument that can be made here to show what is the more correct position, or best, or the greater good. It is a matter of argument, Mr. Speaker, and of the views held on either side of the debate.

I believe it would help if it were set down in our laws. In the United States there are protections given to the priest and penitent; lawyer and client; and I think doctors and patients, if I recall correctly. That is not the case in all of those areas in British law. At least it is written in the U S law and they know what obtains. It seems to me that in the British setting it is more dictated by the court. I am not saying there is anything wrong with that, but is there anything wrong with making a law that sets down to what extent privilege obtains in the British setting?

I would prefer a piece of legislation that I could go and pick up which says my doctor cannot tell anyone that I was treated for such and such, or that I am somewhat of a goofball and under heavy sedation. This is the consideration that comes into play. Again, I believe, a person would feel safer knowing that if a psychiatrist or a counsellor with the ability to open their mind can release things which are locked inside of them, could do so without disclosing such information for public consumption whether in a court setting or otherwise. At least if it had to be so, you would know at what point it would happen from the beginning, therefore you would not have to go to court to find out that it would be done.

We need to seriously bear in mind that if, in the Caymanian society, we create an atmosphere that the religious leaders who normally hear much more from their flocks, devotees or whatever, believe that they cannot do without those religious leaders being required to give information about what is happening in this society rather than the information which comes from the police, we could find that we are working against the best interests of law and law-abiding in society.

It is all a human condition. From the time I learned that a "court" is a human being who chose at one point to become a lawyer, winning cases, losing cases, and went on to still be a lawyer but adopt another name, "court" and have a final say at any given level on what one may do or not do, or what is right and what is wrong, I became much more focused on understanding how human this whole world is in all its areas and skills.

I am intrigued by the process of law and particularly when I read some of the wisdom and logic of people like Lord Denning; his mind is incredible and I acknowledge all of that. I think that the practice of law, the judiciary and all that goes with it, the lawyers, the judges, the whole process falls within the wider court of public opinion, the society. Within that society are different levels of justice or fairness, or persons involved in the process, such as the reverends, the priests, pastors and brothers.

There was one thing said by the Minister of Tourism, which seems contradictory to me. He spoke against the Motion, yet suggested that the same thing the Motion would have allowed be done; that is, that Members of the Legislative Assembly, officers from the judiciary and religious leaders get together to discuss this matter. I think we all know that the select committee is the only means open to the Legislative Assembly to involve anyone in the legislative process within the whole process of legislation. We cannot bring persons into the Chamber to have any say in any debate before the House. The only way we can do that is through a select committee.

In effect, he said he does not agree with the Motion going before a select committee, but he said that we should do the very same thing a select committee would have adopted; that is contradictory. Once this Motion is voted down that whole process ends. There is no longer any use us sitting down and talking about it with such persons because we cannot make any report back to the House and what a select committee does is allow the House to hear from it. So, when the Motion is voted down, that will come to an end.

With all respect and due regard for everything that has been said, I am better informed having listened to two practitioners of the law. I do not see how it could hurt the legislative process if this Motion was accepted to go to a select committee where we could discuss it and have the religious leaders along with persons involved in the judiciary process come in and discuss it also.

My position is that I would not have seconded the Motion if I did not believe it had merit. I support the Motion and think it is rather unfortunate that it could not go to a select committee to be discussed, and a report made for the House. Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: I think this will be a convenient time to take the lunch break. We shall suspend until 2.15 PM.

PROCEEDINGS SUSPENDED AT 12.47 PM

PROCEEDINGS RESUMED AT 2.45 PM

The Speaker: Proceedings are resumed. Debate continues. Does any other Member wish to speak?
The Elected Member for East End.

Mr. V. Arden McLean: (Part of tape inaudible at the beginning of Mr. V. Arden McLean's debate) . . . thus the lawyer is under obligation not to disclose it because his client could then sue him; that is my layman's understanding.

If we really look at lawyers, and as much as we may not like them, if that were not the case, then every time—

Mrs. Julianna Y. O'Connor-Connolly: Mr. Speaker, on a point of order.

POINT OF ORDER

The Speaker: May I hear your point of order?

Mrs. Julianna Y. O'Connor-Connolly: Standing Order 35 (3): it is out of order to use insulting or offensive language about another Member. As an attorney I take it to be just that.

The Speaker: That is a point of order. Please do not single out any one profession.

The Elected Member for East End, you can continue.

Mr. V. Arden McLean: Thank you. I will bow to your ruling. It was not intended to be offensive or otherwise, Mr. Speaker.

As I was saying, if that were not so, then the same lawyers would have to be summoned every time they had a client. Thus, there would be no need for lawyers.

The criminal would go to court and we would then have a lot of lawyers out of jobs. Maybe that would be a good thing, not to have it there also; that way we would all defend ourselves. Contrary to the First Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman, and other lawyers in this Honourable Chamber who I respect, I believe there is a fundamental difference between the lawyer and client privilege and that of pastor and penitent privilege.

Someone can come to me and confess that they have committed a crime too. The only reason the authorities would know that would be if I went and told them, or the other person did, or if I told someone else. Why would the pastor have privileges over me not to disclose it? I understand that is the entity, the individual who people will confess to, the one who is trusted. It is understood that people feel like once they have confessed to a minister, then they have paid their dues. I do not find that good enough. It is also my understanding that the communication between lawyer and client is merely for the giving or obtaining of legal advice. If it is with the intent to further a criminal act, then the lawyer is obligated to disclose that. I stand to be corrected, but that is my understanding. It is not right to say that the lawyers enjoy such exclusive privilege. They too have to be responsible for what is said to them.

I wonder if the onus would be on the clergyman to decide whether or not that information lies within the exception, because it cannot be exclusive or absolute privilege. Therefore, I would venture to say that the pastoral care would be useless.

I believe there is a distinction between confidentiality and legal privilege. There has to be a distinction somewhere in there. We cannot have perpetrators of crime walking the streets with clergymen who knew. For instance, paedophiles who molest young children and confesses that to a clergyman; I do not believe any clergyman in this country would support that because the clergyman would have to live with that for the rest of his life, knowing there is a high probability, not possibility, but probability, that the crime will be committed again. I may be wrong, but if the clergymen in this country with the moral standings I respect them for have those moral standings, then I do not believe that one of them would be comfortable knowing that within two weeks there would be another report of another such confessed crime. That is a heavy burden to place on any individual, much less a clergyman who can go into the church and ask forgiveness.

I see no reason why the clergy cannot say to anyone or any penitent, that if their confession is of criminal content, they would have to report it; I think that is fair. At the same time they could inform the individual, that anything other than a criminal act, their confession would be held in the highest of confidence.

We talk about human rights. I think the Second Official Member spoke on that. While I respect the rights of the perpetrator of a crime, I am sure that his rights are no more than those of the victim's and, or his family. To think that the preacher who teaches society about its rights; and its morality; and its conduct; and to think that legislators would give that clergyman the right to decide the better good of society, those legislators would not be good legislators; that would be a mistake in any country.

We cannot allow any preacher, pastor or minister to decide who goes to trial. Yes, some may say that is the job of the police. The police need help too; and the prosecutors need help too. Nobody is going to confess to them that they did it, unless they are going to plead guilty. To put that responsibility in the hands of a pastor far exceeds my comprehension. In fairness to society; in fairness to this country; and in fairness to the children of this country, who in a lot of instances are the biggest portion of society preyed upon; I cannot put that responsibility on a clergyman.

The real question in this whole thing is: should a perpetrator, a criminal, enjoy immunity just because he is a penitent? We cannot—I will not allow him to go free because he confesses to a minister. That is what we are saying, in my opinion, and that is the main question in this whole thing. I challenge any of the Honourable Members of this House . . . and I will give way. Would they allow one of their siblings, their offspring to be hurt and allow a preacher to hold that and prevent the perpetrator from coming to justice?

Mr. Speaker, I am prepared to give way.

The Speaker: Please continue with your debate.

Mr. V. Arden McLean: Thank you.

That is what it all boils down to. We are not concerned about it until it drops on our own doorstep. We will then want . . . at least I know I would want the preacher to report this individual so we could put it to rest and the authorities could deal with it by removing the perpetrator from society, at least for a time in accordance with the law.

It is a simple situation where the preacher can say that if it is a confession concerning criminal activity he has to report it. Each and every one of us, whether we are lawyers, doctors, or legislators, have that same responsibility to ensure justice is served. Which of us who saw a crime committed, or knew that a crime had been committed, would not report it? We have a responsibility, a moral responsibility, to do that; and we are telling the preacher he does not or he should not?

Well, I have heard of a case built on the basis of an individual being imprisoned for a different case and confessing to an inmate and the case was built on the testimony of that inmate. Even in jail, confessions are disclosed to solve crimes. We would like to tell the preachers that they are immune from that.

Which good is the clergyman serving? Is it the general good of society or the penitent's good? Which is more important? That is another question that needs to be answered. We have to decide whether the greater good is to remove that perpetrator from society, or allow him to remain without justice being served, and live with the high probability that it will happen again. The worst thing that could happen is that it would be against the same victim.

It is wrong, and the perpetrator should have been behind bars. If we decide as a country that the perpetrator can decide whether he discloses it or not we would not have any crimes solved.

I have a lot of respect for the clergy, and I trust that the clergy have a lot of respect for this country. I cannot support in any way, with as much respect as I have for this profession, allowing the clergy to decide whether the perpetrator of a crime be brought to justice.

This is not a situation that happens every day. It is like what other Members who spoke, said that it came about because of one case. I can only recall that one case, but there may be more. Yes, I understand this is what creates laws, and amendments to laws. This is a rare case, obviously. I do not believe that we need to rush to judgment on it. I cannot see one time justifying changing the situation as it stands where the clergy is required to disclose information, especially in the case we talk about of more recent times, the one case.

This was a deliberate murder. While at the end of the day there was nothing to disclose, I support we cannot take the chance and leave any stone unturned before getting into a court of law where the evidence must be presented. If that means the preacher, pastor or minister has some information which will further the case, then that information must be forthcoming.

It is my understanding that in most Commonwealth countries the case is as we have it in this country. Now, why should we change it? Yes, we love to be unique. That has its merits, but sometimes it has its pitfalls too. I think we have seen enough pitfalls from being unique.

Before I sit down, I would like to say to the Mover and the Secunder that while I do not support their Motion, I respect their right to bring it. To the First Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman, the Second Elected Member for George Town and the Second Official Member who are all lawyers in this Chamber; without any malice I merely made a point that a lot of people do not particularly care for lawyers. One of my best friends is a lawyer . . . well, two. That is the problem, I have too many! It was without malice.

If I have offended anyone, I will publicly apologise. I hold no malice against any profession. I cannot afford not to use the lawyers. Therefore, I will not be bringing a motion to take the privilege away from them! I believe it was said that every man deserves to have defence. The only defence we have in this world are the lawyers or the unions at times!

Mr. V. Arden McLean: As I said, I respect the rights of the First Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman and the Second Elected Member for Bodden Town for bringing this Motion. I am glad it was brought so Members could make their views known.

We can walk out of here and still respect the clergy. I cannot give the clergy any right or any burden not to disclose any confession that would aid in bringing justice and having justice done. Thank you.

The Speaker: The Motion is open for debate. Does any other Member wish to speak?

The Fourth Elected Member for West Bay.

Mr. Cline A. Glidden Jr.: Mr. Speaker, as I listened to the debate on this Motion, I contemplated hard and long whether it was necessary for me to add to those very detailed contributions. I see the relevance of trying to finish the business of the House as quickly as possible so we can get to our constituents and other duties. I therefore, make this contribution after much consideration.

Knowing that the purpose of the Mover and Secunder, in bringing this Motion, was to bring to light the need for some privilege relationship between pastor and penitent, I realised the merit in what they were trying to achieve. I have heard good arguments both for and against, and I have done a bit of research on my own.

There is a case in the press at this time that is very similar. I would like to quote some articles I found on the Internet regarding a similar case this morning.

The Speaker: Just state your source.

Mr. Cline A. Glidden Jr.: Mr. Speaker, it comes from the CNN (Cable News Network).com web site. It shows a real life example of what these relationships can do. I will not try to read it all, but briefly, there is a priest from New York City, by the name of Rev. Joseph Towle, a Catholic Priest. He is in a case right now where he is attempting to come forward and give evidence in relationship to a crime that occurred in 1987. It says: "In a setting Towle described as less formal than a sacred confession, Fornes told Towle in 1989 that he and two friends—not the ones in custody—were responsible for the beating and stabbing of a man killed in a South Bronx park in September 1987.

The priest said: "So I advised him then that if he had the courage and the heart to do it that he should go to the court and should reveal in detail, just as he had done to me. His purpose in having this conversation with me was to decide what he could do publicly to exonerate these two boys who were accused in his place."

The priest had met all the boys involved in the case after becoming the parish priest in 1984. The boys were 17 or 18 years old at the time of the crime. Neither the individual who committed the crime, nor the priest came forward to give evidence in the case. So, a State jury in December 1988 found the two individuals, who were innocent, guilty of the murder. Now, just before the sentencing of those two innocent individuals, the criminal went to the priest (that is the conversation I referred to). The priest said: "Fornes called me. I was very close to him. We had a trusting relationship," They spoke at Fornes' home, not at the church. That is significant because the Catholic priest maintained that neither his actions in 1989 nor his subsequent court testimony have violated any Catholic doctrine. Towle said: "There is nothing, first of all, nothing more sacred than the seal of confession," He went on to say: "I did not consider this to fall under that precise seal of confession because he had not come to me explicitly seeking absolution, but to find a solution on how he could help his friends."

If he had come seeking absolution, he would have felt that his Catholic doctrine stopped him from making known the confession. So now, some 13 or 14 years later, we have two individuals who have been tried and convicted for a crime they did not commit. It is an example of a priest having had the information not coming forward. It so happens, in an ironic twist of events, that, in 1997, the individual who committed the crime was shot and killed.

Now, the Federal Court has allowed the appeals by the two individuals whose appeals were denied by the State court. The priest is now willing to come forward and testify on their behalf at the appeal. There is a question as to whether or not the priest would have come forward if the individual who had committed the crime was still living. Having said that, and not having an answer to that question, the district attorney has argued that the priest cannot come forward now and give evidence in the case. The district attorney feels that his confession was secret and privileged and could never be revealed by his priest.

So, here we have the priest arguing that he wants to give evidence and that it is the intent of the individual to let the public know. We have a very real life situation; two innocent individuals in court found guilty, serving some 13 years of their lives when there was a priest who could have changed the whole outcome of that event; not only because of law, but, in his particular case, he thought it was his obligation as a Catholic priest. He refused to come forward.

If we are looking at now implementing legislation that would give all priests the feeling or obligation of this privileged situation, I see, as I am sure other Members of this House will see, a real area of concern.

I was upset when a well-respected pastor was involved in a case a few months back. The decision was basically left in the judge's hands as to what he felt was the right course of action. I feel that having seen what possibilities exist, by removing that authority which the judiciary now has, I cannot support the idea of going into a select committee. Members of that committee have already made their contribution publicly.

I simply wanted to make the point that if Members would like to go onto the CNN web site, they could get a lot more information on this case that is very relevant to what we are discussing now. Because of the information and looking at the possibilities that exist, I would not be able to support this Motion. Thank you.

The Speaker: Would you make that available to the Clerk for the Hansard Officers?

The Motion is open for debate. Does any other Member wish to speak? The Motion is open for debate. Does any other Member wish to speak?

The Second Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman.

Mr. Lyndon L. Martin: Mr. Speaker, I do not normally rise to speak on motions I intend to support, unless I can add some substance to the debate that has not been contributed before.

However, I feel compelled to rise to offer the Mover and Seconder of this Motion my public support for the Motion they have brought to this House. I think it is a Motion well put together because it did not pre-determine the exact piece of legislation needed, it simply asked for this House to go into select committee to review and, at that time, contribute and craft what we deemed to be the relevant governing legislation to accomplish the resolve of this Motion.

I see the substance of the question at hand as being the role of the Church and the others covered under the special relationships stated in the Motion, and the role of the State. The State has a responsibility, but so does the Church. If we attempt to intertwine those responsibilities, the effectiveness of each of those entities is reduced. It is imperative that we understand the Church is the pulse of the morals of the community. It is an outlet where individuals go to get advice, to relieve themselves of certain burdens, and the individuals receiving these confessions are held in high moral esteem.

I see this Motion as being one that simply protects the clergy, priest, pastor. It does not add responsibility, it protects. It does not remove them from their responsibility to community. It does not remove them from their obligation to ensuring that we have a safe community. These are individuals who we have all stated in our contributions so far are persons we hold in great respect. These individuals would still be what the lawyers and judiciary would term "competent witnesses." They can still provide evidence, but they cannot be compelled to provide evidence.

Using the oft repeated case of Rev. Dee Dee Haines, we can examine that same case to see the merits of this Motion. Dee Dee Haines, in adherence to her religious conviction, respected the right that her role as pastor of the church provided to her, to maintain a confession in a confidential manner. As a result of that, she was questioned and sometimes harshly questioned, retained at the police station. This Motion simply seeks to protect these individuals we all hold in high esteem from such exposure to potential abuse.

We have all stated that this community is based on strong Christian values and part of that is respect for the clergy. In respect for the clergy, we must provide them with a certain degree of protection about information they receive in carrying out their duties; their role in society building, one of moral building, one of instilling in a community a basis of sensitivity that can only be derived from an appreciation of biblical concepts. We must protect them to ensure that the citizens of this community feel comfortable to use this outlet. It is a necessary part of the community; a necessary part of the country.

We must keep that separation and allow the State to carry out its function of criminal investigation, gleaning of information, prosecution, conviction, and incarceration.

If we attempt to remove that separation, we will make the church less effective and make the judicial system of the country less effective. It is for this reason only that I fully support putting this question into select committee so that all Elected Members and individuals from society can be represented. None of us have canvassed or questioned the general public because none of us have put this as an issue of the campaign process—the only process we have to ensure there is true political mandate.

For that reason, we have the option of putting these things into select committee to allow for wide public consultation. It is a simple Motion which calls for no decision here today, but a Motion that recognises there is an issue faced by our community; an issue that has sparked and we must deal with it. Putting it into a select committee would allow us to consult with the general public; therefore I see no reason why this Motion should be rejected. I will be voting for this Motion. Thank you.

The Speaker: The Motion is open to debate. Does any other Member wish to speak? The Motion is open to debate. Does any other Member wish to speak? Last call, does any other Member wish to speak?

If not, does the Mover wish to exercise her right of reply?

The First Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman.

Mrs. Julianna Y. O'Connor-Connolly: Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

I will begin by extending my thanks and appreciation to those Honourable Members who saw fit to offer publicly their support for the said Motion. I had hoped that with national issues such as this, that there would have been some hope that much could have been accomplished.

Certainly, in the mode of politics in which we operate in here, I did not expect complete and unadulterated support. From all indications the Government and its supporters intend not to approach this Motion with the desired openness of mind, allowing the Motion to go to a select committee where I respectfully submit the public could have an opportunity to come before the said select committee and make representation.

I should also wish to record that this methodology of going before a select committee in my view provides the most appropriate forum for open dialogue with the people who elected us, and to whom we are still the trustees for.

We campaigned, on both sides of this Honourable Parliament, quite strongly on the concept of transparency and openness. I truly believe that by using the select committee as the means or mode for an appropriate forum whereby we can actually meet, as an Elected Legislative body with members of the public, those with direct vested interest or otherwise, that we could perhaps continue, if not begin, to put these concepts into an implementation mode.

I first wish to take issue with the Second Elected Member for West Bay who questioned whether or not this was the best way to deal with this Motion, by taking it to select committee. I take issue to a specific extent in that our own standing orders, Standing Order 70, allows for the creation of a select committee. It then goes on to give the power as we all are fully cognizant of whereby we can call for representation by way of an express mode or for oral presentations before the select committee. Indeed witnesses can be summoned.

If memory serves me right, since the commencement of this Honourable Parliament back in November, there have been six select committees which, I hasten to add, none brought by me were duly passed. I remind Members it is the minimum wage committee, passed on 15 March 2001; the review of the Standing Orders Committee, passed 16 March 2001; the establishment of a select committee to review the Caymanian owned businesses, passed 27 March 2001; the review of the Trade Union Law, passed 22 March 2001; the select committee to review health insurance; and a select committee for a Fair Competition Act.

Before anyone yields to the temptation to call a point of order as to relevance, let me hasten to say that I am using that to simply illustrate that the methodology of using a select committee is by no means a novel one, but one that has been proven by a test of time. I believe that if Members wish to adhere to the concepts we hold so high that we would allow this Motion to go to the implementation stage of select committee giving our people whom we represent an opportunity to speak on this national issue.

I also wish to refer to the biblical principles. In St. John 20: 22, 23, which says: “And when he had said this he breathed on them, and saith unto them ‘Receive ye the Holy Ghost: Whosoever sins ye remit, they are remitted unto them; and whosoever sins ye retain, they are retained.’” I would like to refer as this relates to the Catholic Church in particular, where I was able to find on the Encarta Encyclopedia dealing with the aspects of confessions and theology, I quote: “The seal of confession refers to the obligation binding the confessor (priest), interpreter, or bystander who overhears the confession not to divulge the secrets of the confessional. This custom of secrecy is traceable to the 4th and 5th centuries, but was only made canonically binding by the Fourth Lateran Council in 1215.” Perhaps this is a concept that I can refer, as my learned friend did, as one being put in place from time immemorial.

I also note that the deputy Leader of Government Business, who I may say is known for his shrewdness as a politician, has acknowledged here today in this very forum that the Motion, although he was not going to vote for it, if he was indeed present (and he is not right now), that we should call the judiciary, the other persons with vested interest, the clergy, and perhaps Members of Parliament to commence an open dialogue. That is precisely what this Motion is calling for in select committee. Perhaps the only missing ingredient is in the form of the Mover and Seconder because for the life of me I cannot see the distinction.

The select committee would bring pre-eminence to this national issue. It would allow for order and would crystallise the formality that I believe such a national, sensitive and perhaps controversial issue deserves. As I said, our own standing orders give us the power to collate and elicit this information as we have done so far this year for six other important issues and worthy issues brought by private members' motions.

If the position of elected government, and with the very specific intent I drafted it to say "elected government" giving the Government of the day, taking politics for what it is, the opportunity to amend it if so desired, putting the ball in its court to include Official Members. That was the only reason for the omission thereof and no other, but they sought not to do that.

As I said, the Deputy Leader of Government Business acknowledged that there was scope for discussion and acknowledged publicly his respect for the clergy, but chose not to use this Motion. The only means of us having legislative discussion with the public is by means of a select committee.

I should also wish to thank my learned friend, the Honourable Second Official Member, for sharing the English and to some extent the Cayman and perhaps his personal legal take on the issue. Most, if not all of the issues shared with us are precisely the reason giving rise in my mind and members of the public for the uncertainty in the exercise of discretion that we should, on a national front, discuss these issues. We would find out, once and for all, what the majority of our constituents, voters or not, and residents within the Cayman Islands, wish to see as the way forward rather than taking an ostrich approach whereby we say, 'No, we are not going to discuss it here'.

There was some mention that it be incorporated with the Human Rights legislation. I would submit that, based on past experience, by the time that becomes invoked in Cayman perhaps we will all be out collecting our pensions and there will be three or four pastors incarcerated across the street. I should not wish to partake of that.

There was also mention of the scanty presentation I gave. I wish to categorically state that it was not done by any defect on my part, but having had the opportunity to study the art of negotiation in more than one forum, seeing that I do not have to rely on my legal profession which seems to come under much fire in this House, I also have my teaching profession to rely on.

Hon. David F. Ballantyne: Mr. Speaker, I apologise for interrupting—

The Speaker: Is this a point or order?

Hon. David F. Ballantyne: Point of clarification.

The Speaker: [addressing the First Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman] Will you give way?

Mrs. Julianna Y. O'Connor-Connolly: I most certainly will, Mr. Speaker.

Hon. David F. Ballantyne: Thank you.

I believe I heard reference to the possibility of several ministers or pastors being incarcerated. I am not clear that actually occurred in the recent case, although I appreciate that there was the possibility of a finding of contempt. Perhaps that was the allusion being made. I do not understand that the Pastor concerned was in fact ever detained or incarcerated. I just wanted to seek clarification of the position.

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman.

Mrs. Julianna Y. O'Connor-Connolly: Mr. Speaker, By way of clarification, I was speaking to the future. I should also wish to state that having had first-hand evidence and sitting through the majority of that particular hearing, the Rev. Dee Dee Haines was in fact held in lock-up in the Court House for a number of hours.

Be that as it may, I will continue.

The Speaker: Please continue.

Mrs. Julianna Y. O'Connor-Connolly: Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

I feel that this is the most appropriate mode for us to deal with an issue as sensitive as this. One almost enters into a realm of frustration when one knows the Christian heritage from whence the majority if not all of us come from, and hear the comments being made by persons in such high offices. I really wonder where the history of this country is going to end up in years to come. I know that God is still in control, for what that is worth, Mr. Speaker.

Irrespective of what has been said, I trust that upon reflection Members would exercise discretion, put politics aside, which seems to become more and more the order of the day, and appreciate this Motion for what it was intended to be—simply asking all Members to allow their constituents an opportunity to hear from the pastors, the judiciary, and from other vested interests the way forward. I can assure all Members if it is not in the affirmative today, this Motion will be resurfacing again in one form or another. It is better now to remove ourselves from the ostrich syndrome that has been the downfall of many others in power before, and vote our conscience with this Motion.

I thank you very much for your indulgence Sir.

The Speaker: I shall now put the question on Private Member's Motion 4/01. Those in favour please say Aye. Those against, No.

AYES and NOES.

The Speaker: The Noes have it. The Motion has failed.

Mrs. Julianna Y. O'Connor-Connolly: May we have a division please?

The Speaker: Madam Clerk, please call the division.

The Deputy Clerk:

DIVISION NO. 13/01

NOES: 10

Hon. David F. Ballantyne
Hon. George A. McCarthy
Hon. Linford A. Pierson
Hon. D. Kurt Tibbetts
Hon. Edna M. Moyle
Hon. Roy Bodden
Capt. A. Eugene Ebanks
Mr. Cline A. Glidden Jr.
Mr. V. Arden McLean
Mr. Alden M. McLaughlin, Jr.

AYES: 4

Mr. Gilbert A. Mclean
Mr. Anthony S. Eden
Mrs. O'Connor-Connolly
Mr. Lyndon L. Martin

ABSENT: 4

Hon. James M. Ryan
Hon. W. McKeever Bush
Mr. Rolston M. Anglin
Dr. Frank S. McField

The Speaker: The results of the division, 10 Noes and 4 Ayes. The Motion fails.

PRIVATE MEMBER'S MOTION NO. 4/01 NEGATIVELY BY MAJORITY.

The Speaker: Moving on to Private Member's Motion No. 18/01, Prevailing Economic Conditions of the Cayman Islands. To be moved by the Second Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman.

PRIVATE MEMBER'S MOTION
NO. 18/01

PREVAILING ECONOMIC CONDITIONS OF THE CAYMAN ISLANDS

Mr. Lyndon L. Martin: Mr. Speaker, I rise to move Private Member's Motion No. 18/01, Prevailing Economic Conditions of the Cayman Islands.

The Speaker: Do we have a seconder?
The Third Elected Member for Bodden Town.

Mr. Gilbert A. McLean: Mr. Speaker, I beg to second the Motion.

The Speaker: Private Member's Motion No. 18/01 has been duly moved and seconded. Does the Mover wish to speak to it?

The Second Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman.

Mr. Lyndon L. Martin: Mr. Speaker, I would first like to take the opportunity to break down the Motion that has been brought to this Honourable House and to read its full resolve. It is captioned: Prevailing Economic Conditions of the Cayman Islands:

"BE IT RESOLVED THAT this Honourable House debates and takes note of the present state of the Cayman Islands' economy, taking into account the effect of Government's recent tax measures and the OECD (Organization for Economic Co-operation and Development) initiatives, and consider possible stimulus measures that may be undertaken to revive the economy."

This resolve can be broken down into three subsections. First, it is asking for us to debate the present state of the Cayman Islands' economy. Secondly, to consider recent tax measures impact and the OECD initiatives. Thirdly, to consider possible stimulus measures to revive the economy.

On the part of debating the current state of the economy and taking note I would first like to recognise the presence of the Director of the Economics Unit, Dr. Parsons, and her staff. I give thanks to the Third Official Member, the Honourable Financial Secretary for ensuring that his economic advisors are present here today to take note of the contributions made by the Honourable Members of the Legislative Assembly.

This Motion does not call for a decision, it simply asks for a debate. Take note, I consider it an ideal opportunity to brainstorm, provide ideas, recognise areas of concern and for the Parliament of the Cayman Islands to provide the Economic Unit with our views of what we consider areas we can use to revive the economy.

A country like the Cayman Islands has no central bank. The role of monetary and fiscal policies and all other tools to control, shape, guide, monitor, stimulate and revive the economy is one that is carried out by the Legislative body. Many of our actions taken in this Honourable House will have direct effects on the economy. In every citizen's mind there is no subject more pertinent, today, than that of the state of the Cayman Islands' economy.

As legislators, I am sure all of us have come across constituents who have complained of the slowdown in the construction industry and the hardship they are facing. In earlier debates in this Honourable House when I mentioned the need for Government to take affirmative action to provide a positive direction for the economy and some policy guidelines, the common response I received was, 'Be patient, give us time'.

We have been at the reins of this economy for some 240 days—eight months. Most governments are gauged and determined in their first hundred days. They normally have 100 days to formulate their policies, objectives and direction for their government. We have had more than adequate time for this legislative body to come up with firm methods of stimulating the Cayman Islands economy, and simply to provide strong motivation for all Members of the Honourable Legislative Assembly to pursue this initiative with zeal and vigour.

I would like to remind each and every Elected Representative here that most governments in the Cayman Islands which have fallen have done so as a result of poor economic conditions and, or constitutional review. I would like to remind this Honourable House that this year we have the two things simultaneously.

We must take action to ensure that this economy is put on a firm footing. We must also realise that citizens do not have the privilege of being patient like the Elected Members of the Legislative Assembly. They, the citizens, are the ones waiting and watching, and experiencing the hardships. We must take action immediately but it cannot be hastily. We must ensure that we understand the slowdown we are experiencing in the Cayman Islands is one that has some fundamental backing.

I would like to point out the periods in this country that have been characterised as healthy economic prosperity are the periods that were governed and guided by a macro economic plan—a plan that ensured orderly, stable and sustainable economic growth.

The format of my contribution will be to examine the variables that indicate this economy is truly in a slowdown period and the fundamentals which have brought us to this position. I will examine the linkage between our economy and the world economy, especially of the United States of America, and what I consider seven essential ingredients necessary to ensure stable economic growth of the Cayman Islands, analysing how we as a country are pursuing each and every one of these ingredients.

I will then examine the interaction and the influence of Government's revenue measures and further look at the entire Government financial position that requires revenue and its effect on the national economy. I will then look at the two major sectors of the Cayman Islands' economy, tourism and financial services, and the future prospects of those two industries. I will make suggestions as I have made in previous contributions of methods and means of reviving the economy, and reviving in line with the seven ingredients provided earlier which are necessary for sustainable economic growth. I will conclude by encapsulating all that was contributed by previous

Members in this Honourable House as to methods of stimulating the economy.

Mr. Speaker, the Cayman Islands has a very unique, extremely open economy; one which the history of the country will show is extremely vulnerable to external forces. Also one which we need to understand is nine months lagged to the United States economy.

I was privileged to read a report prepared by Sir Vassel Johnson in 1982 entitled Economic and Financial Review. I will take this opportunity to recognise Sir Vassel Johnson and his contribution to the economic development of this country and in providing a framework to ensure sustainable economic development. I would like to recommend to all Honourable Members of this Legislative Assembly and to the listening public that Sir Vassel Johnson's book, "As I see it", is a book worth reading. A book that provides great insight to what we now have as an economy.

The second point in his report on the economy and the finances of government was a very important one. I read directly from the report which states: "The progress and economic stability of the Cayman Islands was indeed created by design and it did not all happen by sheer coincident." That is so true because in our early days of our economic development we were carefully guided by well put together economic development plans.

While these plans yielded prosperity, we continued to adhere to the philosophies outlined in these plans. Once we came to periods of slower economic growth, the country deviated and refused to accept the discipline that such planning requires. So, for the past decade and a half—in fact, the last economic development plan expired in 1990—we have been without a macro economic plan. This country recognises the need for macro planning.

Before I continue I just want to simply make a point to ensure that the Honourable House appreciates the relevance. The Motion calls for the state of economy. My argument will be that the state of the economy is one that has simply fluctuated over the years because there has been a lack of certain foundation principles in place, and I am building to that point.

The Vision 2008 [The Cayman Islands National Strategic Plan 1999 - 2008], Strategy 13, articulates that the populace requirement of this country is guided by a comprehensive development plan. Strategy 13 states: "We will ensure that Government, in partnership with the Tourism and Finance industries, strengthens plans for the continuing success of these two critical sectors, and we will identify opportunities for diversification."

[Strategy 13, Action Plan 1], Action Step 2 says: "Develop a long term economic management strategy for the Cayman Islands, which will be comprised of specific plans addressing various aspects of the economy."

I encourage each Member of the Honourable House to familiarise himself with this section of Vision 2008. It is quite extensive and makes some very positive suggestions. I also encourage each Member of the House to read what is referred to in the Vision 2008 as the 1986 Hunte Report on Economic Diversification, and the Economic and Financial Review prepared by Sir Vassel Johnson—I will elaborate on this later in my contribution. This will also familiarise ourselves with the 1986 to 1990 Economic Development Plan and the 1998 to 2002 update of that very plan.

In my preparation for this contribution I was exceedingly impressed by the economic foresight and appreciation our forefathers, those who sat in this Parliament before us, had in dealing with planning for the economy. I must also give special recognition to the now Minister of Tourism, the Honourable W. McKeever Bush, and a past member of the Legislative Assembly, Mr. Ezzard Miller, for bringing a motion to this Honourable House in 1985, calling for more comprehensive and longer term economic development planning. This Motion resulted in the 1986 Economic Development Plan and subsequent plans.

I am gravely concerned that we have not taken it upon ourselves as a new Government to make, as a priority, the formation of an economic development plan for this country. I compliment the Leader of Government Business for his insistence over the years for a medium-term financial strategy but that is just that. It is a medium-term plan and simply deals with the financial strategy of the country. It is different, and in my opinion, should be a follow on to the larger economic development plan.

The Leader of Government Business has also indicated that it is his intention to formulate what he calls a growth plan, which is a physical plan. In my opinion, I submit, that again this should be a follow on to a larger economic development plan. This umbrella is necessary to ensure that we are developing in an orderly manner.

I would like to read briefly from a section of the Economic and Financial Review by Sir Vassel Johnson, Section I - 3 entitled, "Economic Development". In an earlier section of this Report it captioned some of the early developments and in this particular section it shows 1956 and 1957, as being two years that witnessed extreme development (page 7):

1. "The opening of two of its first hotels, the Galleon Beach Hotel on Grand Cayman and the Buccaneers' Inn on Cayman Brac.
2. "Cayman Public Service Limited provided George Town with a reasonable 24 hour power supply for the first time. Previously electricity was supplied for a few hours nightly by the Hislop Brothers.
3. "The institution of an air service between Grand Cayman and Cayman Brac by Cayman Brac Airways Limited." I stress once more—Cayman Brac Airways Limited.

In these early days, such monumental development was occurring but this was carefully planned and managed. The finances of government were called upon greatly, as expenditure had to increase by 40 percent in a year to accommodate the need that resulted from such economic growth. However, those who sat in here before us were wise, insightful and ensured that this increase in expenditure was carefully monitored and revenue was brought in line. We did not see a period of deficit during these years.

In fact, in the economic review, Sir Vassel Johnson listed the revenues and expenditure from 1904 to 1982 and closely analysed how government's finances were affected in a deficit position only during the periods of time that there were external recessions or hard times. That is an important fact when understanding today's economy in Cayman. It is for that reason I make a point that we have almost a hundred years worth of information and if we correlate that information with the economy of United States we will truly see how vulnerable we are to changes in the United States' economy, knowing that there are special provisions put into the policy by government.

It is important when I read this section that we understand this Government was operating under some macro economic policy guidelines, something that is not currently present in the Cayman Islands—such macro guidelines that every economy should operate under. The United States' economy operates under four macro guidelines: high employment; price stability; economic growth; and sometimes included, home ownership.

In 1982, [Economic and Financial Review, page 7] Sir Vassel Johnson wrote: "In response to the Islands' development needs the Government has promoted a strategy for the greatest good for the greatest number of people in accordance with a programme of moderate growth. More specifically the aim has been directed toward

- i The broadening of the structure of the economy to reduce the dependence on few sectors;
- ii Encouraging foreign investment to enable the diversification by providing some basic infrastructure for the establishment of industries;
- iii Providing adequate social services for all members of the community to enable the most effective utilization of talents and abilities and optimise the welfare of residents; and
- iv Maintaining an acceptable balance between Caymanians and other residents of overseas origins."

Mr. Speaker, by no means am I suggesting that we adopt these. I am simply saying that I am extremely impressed that the Government in this period—the period of time that we experienced greatest prosperity—were operating under some large macro-economic policy guidelines.

Sir Vassel Johnson, also, spoke of an economic theory that he proved to be very true for Cayman. I will simply read this theory at this time because it will be relevant to a later part of my contribution. He says: “There is an economic theory which states that if one wants more of something, such as work, savings or output, one should tax it less and if one wants less of something for example, unemployment, or no work, one should then subsidise it less. The Cayman Islands have in fact effectively demonstrated the correctness of the former part of the theory.” This theory is known as the supply side of economics.

MOMENT OF INTERRUPTION—4.30 PM

The Speaker: As soon as you have reached a convenient point, we have reached the hour of interruption.

Mr. Lyndon L. Martin: Mr. Speaker, this is a convenient point.

ADJOURNMENT

The Speaker: I would now entertain a motion for the adjournment of this Honourable House.

The Honourable Minister for Community Development, Women Affairs, Youth and Sports.

Hon. Edna M. Moyle: I beg to move the adjournment of this Honourable House until 10 a.m. tomorrow, Friday, 20 July 2001.

The Speaker: At 1 pm because there is an informal meeting at 10 o'clock tomorrow morning.

Hon. Edna M. Moyle: I am glad to learn that, Sir, but I did not know. Until 1 pm, 20 July 2001.

The Speaker: The question is that this Honourable House do now adjourn until 1 pm, 20 July 2001. Those in favour please say Aye. Those against, No.

AYES.

The Speaker: The Ayes have it. This Honourable House stands adjourned. I would like to remind all members that there is an informal meeting with His Excellency the Governor scheduled for the Committee Room at 10 a.m. for Backbenchers.

AT 4.30 PM THE HOUSE STOOD ADJOURNED UNTIL 1 PM FRIDAY, 20 JULY 2001.

OFFICIAL HANSARD REPORT
FRIDAY
20 JULY 2001
2.13 PM
Eighteenth Sitting

[Prayers read by the Honourable Second Official Member.]

The Speaker: Please be seated. Proceedings are resumed.

Reading by the Honourable Speaker of Messages and Announcements. There are no apologies handed to me today.

Moving on to item number 3, Other Business. I would ask for a Motion for the suspension of Standing Order 14(2) in order that Private Members' Business may be taken on a day other than Thursday.

The Honourable Minister for Planning, Communications and Works.

SUSPENSION OF STANDING ORDER 14(2)

Hon. D. Kurt Tibbetts: I move that Standing Order 14(2) be suspended to allow for Private Members' Motions to be dealt with on a day other than Thursday, namely, today.

The Speaker: I shall put the question. Those in favour please say Aye. Those against, No.

AYES.

The Speaker: The Ayes have it. Standing Order 14(2) has been suspended.

AGREED: STANDING ORDER 14(2) SUSPENDED TO ALLOW PRIVATE MEMBERS' MOTIONS TO BE DEALT WITH ON A DAY OTHER THAN THURSDAY.

The Speaker: Moving on to Private Members' Motions.

Private Member's Motion No. 18/01 entitled Prevaling Economic Conditions of the Cayman Islands. Continuation of Debate thereon.

The Second Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman.

OTHER BUSINESS

PRIVATE MEMBERS' MOTIONS

PRIVATE MEMBER'S MOTION
NO. 18/01

PREVAILING ECONOMIC CONDITIONS
OF THE CAYMAN ISLANDS

Mr. Lyndon L. Martin: Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

I commenced my contribution late yesterday evening on Private Member's Motion No. 18/01, Prevaling Economic Conditions of the Cayman Islands, brought to this Honourable House by myself and seconded by my learned friend from Bodden Town, The Second Elected Member.

The resolve of the Motion reads, "BE IT RESOLVED THAT this Honourable House debates and takes note of the present state of the Cayman Islands' economy, taking into account the effect of Government's recent tax measures and the OECD (Organization for Economic Co-operation and Development) initiatives, and consider possible stimulus measures that may be undertaken to revive the economy."

I was quite pleased to see in today's Caymanian Compass, a significant amount of attention given by the local press on this very issue. Today is also significant for this issue, as the G-8 nations meet to determine ways that the great eight nations of this world can co-operate and co-ordinate to bring the global economy out of its trough.

Mr. Speaker, what we are experiencing in the Cayman Islands today is a cyclical slow down. We have seen this throughout the history of the Cayman Islands; a slow-down that every economy experiences. We can never hope to achieve macro-management of the economy that will prevent such periods of lower than average economic growth. It is simply part of the economic cycle. What we must try to do is to reduce the depth of these economic troughs and give a more stable path. By a stable economic path, this sometimes means we will have to suffer from not experiencing some of the peaks that we are accustomed to. The economic peaks—those boom periods of economic growth above and beyond that would be considered the capacity growth of the economy contributing significantly to the depth of the troughs.

When we grow at rates of 6, 8, 10 and 12 percent there are certain inflationary impacts that this growth has. Some may ask, 'How is it during the early stage of our development we were able to sustain double digit growth rate rates without excessive inflation?' The economic model today is a lot different from what it was in the 70s and early 80s.

The Cayman Islands is a lot different in the year 2001 than it was during those periods of time. We had excess capacity in our economy. We had unemployment that could be observed from this growth without having strong inflationary impacts. However, today we see ourselves stabilising at a natural unemployment rate of approximately 4 percent.

I do make a remark of caution at this point. We must all recognise that one of the limitations we have in the Cayman Islands with macro economic planning and prediction is the lack of accurate and timely information on the economy. It is something that we must address. We must look at some way of improving upon the availability of indicators and of statistical monitors of economic activity. However, one such statistic available is our unemployment rate. We also have accurate, regularly collected information on economic and consumer price index, the measure of inflation.

For the benefit of the listening public, I urge this country to truly appreciate the value of having such information and show eagerness in participating in the provision of information. Without such information, the policymakers are throwing the darts in the air. Even in the Vision 2008 exercise it was recognised that there was a great need for statistical information. As a business owner, I have been subject to the receipt of a macro-economic survey in the past as most business owners have. I urge everyone to take time, fill out this information and provide accurate information to allow for timely statistics.

Returning to my point about the natural rate of inflation, it is seen from historical data that the Cayman Islands' natural rate of unemployment is somewhere in the region of 4 percent. That is a rate of unemployment which is acceptable and we should never hope to achieve unemployment below this rate. There are individuals who certainly do not care to work. Once we start to pursue policies in an effort to go below the natural rate of unemployment we are starting to contribute to inflation. I will spend a significant part of my contribution talking about inflation and the cause, tying it to the recent revenue measures of $27.4 million and the effect that it has on the local inflation, and how inflation has historically led to slower economic growth.

I want to convince anyone, at this point, who is in doubt that this economy is in a slow period. I want to point out some indicators, which show a slow down in the Cayman Islands' economy. In the year 1999, value of development approved in the Cayman Islands was $393.4 million. In the year 2000, those approvals fell to $310.2 million. The development approvals in the year 2000 reflect the construction activity for the year 2001, as there is a lag period between the approval of plans and the implementation of that construction work. So, we can see that the period from 1999 to 2000 saw significant slow down for Grand Cayman. This is made up of residential which fell from $72.6 million to $63.3 million; apartments and condos fell from $204.5 million to $90.6 million; hotels (including expansions) had an increase from $16.6 to $75 million; commercial work fell from $52.3 to $21.2 million; industrial development saw an increase from $1.5 million to $14.4 million; government saw an increase from $15.9 million to $21 million. In the category of others, there was a fall from $30 million to $24.7 million.

It is obvious that the greatest areas of shortfall were in residential, apartments and commercial activities. Consequently, we are experiencing that construction slow down in the year 2000 and that which is borne out by all indicators including my recent informal survey of block manufacturing. There was extensive coverage by the Caymanian Compass earlier on this year showing the slow down in the construction industry as they surveyed many of the contractors.

That one sector of our economy, construction, carries such an important role. It has such a spill-over effect on various other sectors and it is certainly down. I would like to now include the Sister Islands, which saw a reduction from $14.3 million to $12.4 million, bringing the grand total for 1999 to $407.7 million and reducing in the year 2000 to $322.6 million.

This is one particular sector and indicator that we are in a slower period of economic growth. It is important at this time I point out that when we talk of slower economic growth, we are not referring to recession. A recession is negative economic growth for two consecutive periods. The Cayman Islands is in no way in a recessionary period; we are simply in a slower economic growth period.

Mr. Speaker, it is estimated that the year 2000 saw an increase in the Gross Domestic Product (GDP), the measure of aggregate economic activity of 3.2 percent. So it did grow. However, that is significantly below the average over the past five years. In 1995 we saw a growth of 4.98 percent; in 1996 an estimated growth of 5 percent; in 1997 an estimated growth of 5.5 percent; in 1998 an estimated growth of 5.8 percent; in 1999 an estimated growth of 5.4 percent and in 2000 a growth of 3.2 percent.

When looking at a slow down in the economy, we must look at it in relation to the population because for this same period that the economy grew by 3.2 percent, the population grew by 4.3 percent. The fear of slower economic periods, or periods of stagnant growth, is that the population will grow at a rate greater than the growth of the economy thus reducing the per capita income in an economy.

Other indicators that there is a slow down in the economy are provided and covered in the Caymanian Compass today. I take this opportunity to read from the front page of today's (20 July 2001) Caymanian Compass, with your permission.

The Speaker: Go ahead.

Mr. Lyndon L. Martin: "The tourism sector appears to be in a major trough, real estate sales are well down on last year and the construction sector is slow, but the financial industry appears to be ticking along reasonably satisfactorily."

It goes on to say, “Tourism, one of the mainstays of the economy, is definitely in a ‘deeper-than-seasonal trough’, commented Rod McDowell of Cayman Tourism Alliance.” It is important that we understand that this is not a seasonal slow down in tourism. He has indicated, as well as the other informal surveys, to the hoteliers on occupancy that there is a slow down in stay-over tourists.

I would like to interject at this time that I have been attempting to get the statistics on tourist arrivals in the Cayman Islands from the Department of Tourism and the Ministry of Tourism. I would like to commend the Minister and his department as I was told that the figures were available but they were being vetted to ensure accuracy in compliance with the policy stated in the Legislative Assembly by the Minister. I compliment him because I certainly would not want to be making judgments on inaccurate information.

Mr. Speaker, I return to the article in the Caymanian Compass. “There has been a ‘significant drop’ in occupancy rates for May, June and July this year compared to those months in 2000—which was not a good year. Hotel bookings were also well down for this August compared with last year.”

“Mr. McDowell added that he sees ‘no relief in sight’ He pointed out that the spill-over of a slow down in tourism has gone over to the restaurant industry which has even resulted in two restaurants on West Bay Road closing this year.”

Not only do we see a slow down in tourism. I have just spoken on construction and the volumes are down 35 percent for real estate, according to one prominent realtor, as stated in the Caymanian Compass. He used the Cayman Islands Real Estate Brokers’ Association (CIREBA) figures.

The article highlighted that financial services seemed to be ticking along at a satisfactory rate. I am quite pleased to say that there are certain sectors in our financial industry which are doing just that. However, there is a significant decrease in company formulation and registrations, as reported in the Caymanian Compass. I was provided with figures that showed company registration is down, as of the end of June, by 33 percent.

I can recall an article published recently in the Cayman Net News in which the Honourable Third Official Member commented that, although company registration was down, banking was certainly up. I note with interest that it is common when reporting figures on the health of the banking industry that we use the assets on deposits—the dollar value of assets on deposits—which is a good indicator of the health of the banking industry. However, it is not a good indicator of the effect the growth of that industry will have on government’s revenue, as this is collected on the number of bank licences and not on the dollar value that transacts through these banks.

Mr. Speaker, it is quite obvious, and I do not think we will get any disagreement that the economy is in a slower period than normal. In fact, I was also quite pleased with some comments by the Leader of Government Business, and I am in agreement with a lot of what he said, about the fundamentals still being strong behind the Cayman economy. I am not reading from his article, I am simply surmising from what I read. It is true and I would not in anyway contribute to talking down the economy of the Cayman Islands because I am still very confident that our economy is a strong one.

As the Leader of Government Business pointed out, we are very sensitive and volatile to changes in economic cycles of the external world especially the United States of America. It is in this respect that, I think, the Government can do something. He alluded that he would be looking at ways in which the Government could take local action to ensure we were not so heavily impacted by changes in the external world.

It is imperative we understand that some 70 percent of our Gross Domestic Product (GDP) comes from two industries, which is a high concentration. This makes us very vulnerable especially since these two industries are subject to changes in economic activities especially in the United States. Eighty percent of our tourists come from the U.S. and a significant amount of our offshore financial services’ business originates from the U.S. or via the U.S.

We need to truly look at methods of diversifying our economic base. We need to continue to support the Ministry responsible for information technology in its efforts in E-commerce. We need to support the Ministry responsible for agriculture to seek ways of improving our agriculture output. We need to, once more, introduce an agricultural development plan. I urge the Minister responsible for agriculture to talk to his colleague, the Minister for Health, who was responsible for the introduction of a former influential agricultural development plan.

It is imperative that we, as a government, understand the impact of our activities and our legislation on the local economy. I would like to speak briefly of some of the activities we have embarked upon recently, since being elected, that have had direct or potential impact on contributing to the slow down in economy activity.

We passed a Motion to form a Select Committee to prescribe a minimum wage; we passed a Private Member’s Motion for a Select Committee for fair competition; we passed a Government Bill in this House to borrow $56 million; we approved a Budget with revenue measures of some $19.88 million for nine months in the year 2001 and $27.4 million every year thereafter and we passed a motion for the Government to review the Labour Law. I heard in the various contributions, remarks such as increasing maternity leave and the introduction of paternity leave, which I am not commenting on. However, I am just mentioning that they have an impact on the economy—an inflationary impact.

We are the body in this country that determines the legislation, the expenditure and the policies which thus create the economic environment in which this country operates.

In my introduction yesterday, I outlined briefly that one of the things I would do in my contribution is to highlight seven ingredients which are necessary for long-term economy performance. We must understand and accept that the world has changed. The traditional economic models no longer work. The normative economic principles that were studied and learned by most no longer apply. Free trade and globalisation has changed the traditional economic model and the tradition of flow of economic activity.

The new growth model in the new world, the new concept has been facilitated through trade and various trade theories. As I mentioned earlier today, (20th July 2001), the powers of the world will be meeting to determine the future of trade. The new economy, which is a very open economy, interacting with the global world responding to global changes, has brought about many challenges. Some are even questioning the new benefits of this new economy.

The central hypothesis behind trade and growth is that incomes across countries tend to converge at a common level. In other words, facilitated by trade, lower income countries will tend to grow more rapidly than countries at a higher level of income. That is something we can attest to right here in Cayman. During the period of time where we were at a lower level in our economic development chain, when we invested into certain infrastructural work, we saw rapid immediate response. We saw immediate growth in the economy. We saw immediate and tangible growth in government revenue. That sort of growth is attracted and only possible during lower periods of economic development.

I would like to read from the "Economic Development Section" in Sir Vassel Johnson's Report on Economic and Financial Review, page 7, in which he quoted His Honour the Commissioner, Mr. A.M. Gerard on the 7th March, 1956 in his one but last Budget address. It says: "The key to every development we have seen in the Cayman Islands without exception has been communications. When we built the Grand Cayman airfield few people outside the dependency had any confidence, either that it was a practicable proposition or that we would be able to pay for it. What has happened? It has opened new worlds to our seaman, it has increased the tourist industry ten-fold and it has generated such prosperity that in the two years since the airfield was opened the public revenue has increased by one-third. We cast our bread upon the waters and behold it has come back to us in the shape of buttered scones." On this point I want to illustrate through that very example that primary infrastructural development is what brings about greatest economic gain to a country.

Mr. Speaker, the enhanced free trade we have seen over the past two decades is now under threat because during the period of globalisation that was pursued the catalyst. The movement for globalisation would bring about this convergence of income between lower-income and higher income countries, and the world would be better off. However, empirical evidence has shown that there has been a greater divergence of incomes during this period of globalisation. Now, that the world is seeing an economic slow down there is a tendency for the world powers to preach protectionism and isolation—to keep our resources within our boundaries during hard times.

This is certainly a threat to the world's economy because this slow down is simply a temporary one and we do hope that after the meeting of the G-8 nations we will see an endorsement for future talks on trade and globalisation.

Mr. Speaker, researchers, econometricians and economists have determined that long term economic sustainability requires:

1. Investment in private and public capital;
2. Education and training;
3. Financial intermediation;
4. Macro-economic stability;
5. Openness with respect to trade and investment;
6. Equality of income distribution;
7. Stability of political and social conditions.

As I illustrated earlier, Infrastructural Investment, under the caption of Investment in Private and Public Capital, is the single item that yields greatest returns to a country. The prioritisation of infrastructural investment has to be determined by the stage of your economic development. In the early days, it was considered a fundamental achievement for the economy when we created the port, the airport and when we built the bridge to the rest of the world. However, in the year 2001, such prerequisites for development are in place. We must look at other areas that are still in their primary stage of development and ensure investment is made in these because they will bring the greatest economic results.

We boast of our level of development, yet, we have not truly addressed national provision of sewage service and water. Such infrastructural development is what should be top priority. Every citizen of this country at this stage in our economic development should be connected to city water and public sewage. Every citizen of this country including the sixth electoral district of Cayman Brac and Little Cayman should be driving on good paved roads with good port facilities, good airstrips and airport. I compliment the provision recently made for the paving of the Gerrard Smith International Airport and the commitment made for the construction of a landing strip in Little Cayman. These are the sort of investments that will yield the greatest return to this country.

Mr. Speaker, it is imperative that we prioritise the investment in this country to ensure we are putting money into the areas that will yield greatest economic impact. It is important that we understand that infrastructure investment is the preparation for the country to produce positive economic growth in future generations.

In our early stage of development when we invested in education, we needed to stress primary education because it was what this country needed. We needed to provide a basic minimum level of literacy and comprehension. As the country progressed up the development chain so did the demand for education and thus the incentives and returns coming from investing into higher levels of education.

I submit that at this stage in our economic development this country should have a fully-fledged university present in the Cayman Islands. To keep pace with our economic development we need to invest to ensure that we have an institution present here that will allow mothers, including single mothers, politicians such as ourselves, and other workers to pursue tertiary education—to gain a degree, such as a master's degree or doctoral degree.

When our country needed the ability of readers and writers, our forefathers saw fit to invest into primary education. When our economy and our development grew that we needed secondary education, our forefathers stood to the plate and ensured it was provided. Now, our economy and our economic development are at a stage that we need fully-fledged tertiary education present in the Cayman Islands. I make the challenge. It is our responsibility to fulfil the legacy that has been passed to us and provide such tertiary education.

Mr. Speaker, investment in education, training, and human capital is essential during economic development. We must view this in tandem with immigration reform because the need for immigration reform has a strong impact on the current state of our economy. We have developed at a pace that has far exceeded the ability of indigenous Caymanians to keep up with the development. We need to invest in human capital to ensure that we are coming into a replacement stage. We had to rely on foreign labour, which was predominantly here without security of tenure. Consequently, foreign workers' money did not remain. The economic activity generated here did not stay here because, as a country we did not provide foreigners with any certainty of their future in this country so the money left. These are leakages in our economy. At the same time, we were not producing sufficient numbers of qualified Caymanians, in a mode and in a practice, under a scheme that ensured these Caymanians would one day replace those transient workers.

We must view development from the holistic point of view. We must ensure we are not simply talking economic growth but about sustainable economic growth that can only be achieved if the indigenous, or those whom we have made Caymanians—those who have a stake in this community, those that have rights in this community—benefit, and thus the benefits stay within our shores.

I was recently part of Private Member's Motion No. 17/01, a Motion which was modified and defeated and called for the investment of pensions' funds locally. In my argument on that particular Motion I illustrated the negative economic impact of leakages that result from money leaving this country; economic activity produced by these shores but leaving these shores.

The only solution to immigration and to the reduction in economic leakages is effective education investment to ensure that we are producing Caymanians to fill the jobs our economy is creating. It is the pre-requisite for our next stage of economic development.

I now turn to financial intermediaries and the financial structure. Financial institutions mediate the transformation of savings into physical capital. The presence or absence of a stable and well-developed financial system can profoundly influence a country's long-term growth. We have an issue to deal with in the Cayman Islands. We have a coalition between the banks in this country that establish interest rates. We have a Cayman Stock Exchange that does not have a secondary market and does not allow for local entrepreneurs to develop a business strategy or concept, and a business that capitalises itself.

We must look carefully at the financial intermediaries in Cayman and what we can do to ensure their competitiveness; to ensure that they are effectively transforming the savings into capital. That can only be achieved if transformation is occurring at the most competitive interest rates.

We must also carefully look at the confidence in our banking industry. In my case I have read about, but in some other Members' cases they have experienced the days when monies were held under the mattress, under the stairways or buried in the yard rather than banked because there was a lack of confidence in the banking system.

I am very concerned over recent developments such as the closure of two banks over the last couple of years. We can all remember what was termed as the 'bank run' that affected the British American Bank. I compliment the management of British American Bank for producing and demonstrating strong management techniques to ensure they met the challenges of the two-day bank run. However, as the depositors fight to settle with the two closed banks we must ensure, as regulators, that we are providing a strong regulatory framework to ensure such closures are not necessary in the future. They can jeopardise the confidence the consumer has in the banking sector and if the money is not going into the banks to allow for loans or for it to be invested into capital there is a reduction in the multiplier effect of money and the velocity of money.

We must ensure that we look at areas such as the depository insurance. We must see that our regulatory regimes are ensuring that banks are operating at appropriate reserve requirements and we must make sure that our banks and insurance companies are not jointly and co-operatively setting interest rates. The impact of proper investment on the economy is phenomenal. There are novels of information, empirical evidence, that show the direct correlation between those countries that have well-developed financial intermediaries and stable economic activities.

A recent study, deemed as the King and Levin Study of 1993, demonstrates a correlation between various measures of financial development and the rate of GDP growth, capital accumulation and multi-factor productivity growth in a large cross-section of countries. This should be noted because in several of my arguments I will speak of the correlation between various variables.

I urge the Economic Unit that when looking at and studying the correlation between macro economic models, with the information available in the Cayman Islands that it is by no means statistically clean information. There are some problems with the level of samples in that the statistical accuracy of these correlations might not be as great as we would like in order to make economic predictions and measurements. However, it is important, and the method I use is that if correlating variables, over various periods of time the same direction is produced, then we can attest they are correlated. We cannot attest to how correlated but we can attest that they are moving in a particular direction be it directly or inverse.

I want to also speak about macro-economic stability as a determinant for stable economic growth. The major factor under macro-economic stability that affects economic growth is inflation. A study by Barrow in 1995, and Fisker in 1993, quantified and demonstrated empirical evidence that linked inflation and economic growth as being inversely related. These two studies determined that for every point of increase in inflation, there was a 0.05 percent decrease in economic activity. That was the Barrow. The Fisker study indicated that there was 0.25 percent reduction in growth as a result of inflation. The relevance of this particular section applies to this Motion that talks of the impact of the recent Government measures on economic activity.

The major determinants to the Cayman Islands' inflation are Government revenue measures and, secondly, U.S. inflation. During the period of 1995 through 1999, the country experienced healthy, above normal, economic growth, 5.0 percent, 5.5 percent, and rising to 5.8 percent. Throughout that period, inflation remained very stable. Inflation was 2.6 percent, 2.8 percent, 2.9 percent and 6.25 percent in 1999. So, it remained stable at 2.6 percent, 2.8 percent, and 2.9 percent during the period of 1995 to 1998, respectively, during the period that we experienced stable economic growth. In 1999, the inflation peaked to 6.2 percent and immediately following the peak of inflation the economic growth dropped to 3.2 percent from 5.4 percent.

Inflation by its very nature and design, by the early neo-classical economists, was determined as the economy checkpoint, something that always brought economies back in line. Periods of economic growth resulted in inflation and inflation brought the economy back down. We must look at what happened in 1999 and learn lessons from 1999 inflation. Economic growth brings about demand for infrastructure. The Government was faced with tremendous demand on infrastructural development. This infrastructural development was pursued. Significant accumulation of infrastructure and capital can be accounted for during this period. In 1999, the price was paid when inflation took over and the economy slowed.

In November 2000, when the new Government took over it fell into the same trap of looking at a slower economy which resulted in slower periods of government revenue. Rather than trying to stimulate the economy, which in turn would bring in greater revenue, the Government sought to pursue an inflationary policy of raising revenue. When I stated earlier that there were certain local initiatives which have contributed to the slow down in our economy, this is what I was referring to. The Government revenue package put forth in this Honourable House, the largest revenue package in the history of this country, resulted in a further economic slow down.

I will remind Honourable Members of an economic principle by Sir Vassel Johnson that I read yesterday: "There is an economic theory which states that if one wants more of something, such as work, savings or output, one should tax it less and if one wants less of something, for example, unemployment or no work, one should then subsidise it less." It is an economic theory that I encourage the Government to adopt. If we want more output we have tremendous empirical evidence, showing that economic output positively impacts government. We so often talk of economic slow down causing a slow down in government's revenue. The opposite is also true: an economic recovery will generate greater revenue for the Government.

At the time of making my contribution to the Budget, I said that I did not think it was an appropriate time for such a revenue package. I thought it more prudent for the Government to invest into areas and pursue policies that would stimulate the economy, and bring us back to our desired level of revenue. I want it to be known and understood that in 1999 and 2000, in particular, where we hear so much about the deficit, this occurred because of a reduction in revenue as a result of a slower economic period. If we want to get over that period we need to stimulate the Cayman Islands' economy.

I want to briefly share with this House some words on price stability from the New Zealand Reserve Bank Governor, Don Brash who said, "The purpose of price stability has always been to allow maximum sustainable economic growth. Price sta- bility has never been an end in itself rather it has always been the best contribution which monetary policy can make allowing the economy to grow at its maximum sustainable pace.” The issue of price stability is essential to understand when we seek to control and influence the level of economic activity in the Cayman Islands. The Central Bank of the European Union’s major economic macro policy is not aimed at economic growth, but price stability.

Many powerful individuals, including the President of the United States of America have tried to challenge the Central Bank of the European Union to break away from their policy of price stability. They would like the European Union to cut interest rates to try to stimulate their economy because the world is an economy. If the European Union is stimulated then their demand for American products would increase and that would aid in the recovery of the United States’ economy and the rest of the world. The Central Bank has stood fast to their economic policy of price stability because they fear that the reduction of interest rates will lead to other variables which would affect the level of inflation in their country.

The adherence to grand policy guidelines such as price stability is important when making economic decisions and, as a country, we operate in the absence of such commonly agreed macro-economic policy guidelines. I must emphasise that it is my submission that inflation in itself, or the control of it, cannot be the method used for economic stimulation. However, my submission is that high inflation is incompatible with economic growth so it is fundamental that we keep inflation under control and we understand that our actions in this Legislative Assembly affect the level of inflation in the country.

Openness of trade and investment was another determinant of stable economic growth. This ingredient is one we must pursue carefully. We must ensure that, as the world grows into groups of trading blocks, the Cayman Islands will not be left in an isolated sense. I understand and truly appreciate the efforts made for an associate membership of the Caribbean Community and Common Market (CARICOM). We must pursue trade, and trade does not have to be only physical products, things you can see, but also services. We must look at certain activities, certain clean industries that can be located in these Islands which will contribute to providing some form of export.

Recently, as a result of a parliamentary question about the level of duty concessions, various Members of this Legislative Assembly commented that we needed guidelines and the issuance of concessions. Concessions should be granted to institutions that are establishing industries which have export potential employing a certain amount of Caymanian labour and making a minimum amount of capital investment. It is quite common in developing nations that we use a theory called ‘infant industry concessions’. We allow industries to benefit from certain relief during the period of start up. However, the evidence of the world and certainly of Cayman is that these infant industries never become mature.

We must ensure that the technology infrastructure, including telecommunications, is at the cutting-edge and at a competitive cost to attract such industry. We must pursue initiatives that would fall under the school of thought of import substituting industries—industries which are established locally to replace the reliance on various imports. We must look at some way of increasing the products and services that can be produced in Cayman and exported to the rest of the world.

Income distribution is also a very important factor in developing the country in ensuring long-term sustainable economic growth. It is virtually all cross-country growth that is measuring variables of economic growth of numerous countries. If we regress that against income inequality we will see it is negatively correlated with future economic growth. I will not attempt it because there are better individuals in this House to deal with the socialistic perspective of income distribution and redistribution.

I am not in a position to attest whether the quality of education at the public schools is greater or worse than that of the private schools, but it is imperative that opportunities are provided to all individuals to pursue education. This is their means of improving their income levels and their own directive at redistributing income that is accessible to all, including private schools. So, if there is a financial restriction that prohibits lower income individuals from gaining advancement from what some perceive, whether it is real or not, as being greater educational opportunities in private schools, Government must then utilise its social services’ network in a method to subsidise these individuals to ensure that each individual is given proper opportunities for educational advancement.

By no means would I want to talk outside the school as I am a member of the Education Council. However, I am a great advocate of scholarships being awarded on a need base rather than offered to every student who applies. There are individuals in this country who certainly can afford to educate their own children and they should be encouraged to do so. We should reserve the funds that are available in this country—those funds that are becoming so limited—to be spent on education. Opportunities should be offered for the less fortunate to gain access to educational opportunities to further advance themselves so they can greater participate in the economic wealth of the Cayman Islands.

I cannot over emphasise the importance of ensuring that when economic growth is occurring and economic income is growing, we ensure that all sectors of our economy are benefiting and that we do not contribute to the growing gap between the wealthy and the poor. On that subject I want to emphasise that I adhere and buy into the global commitment of poverty reduction through investment in education. It is the goal to reduce by 50 percent the portion of the people of the world living in extreme poverty by the year 2015. As a country we must make our small contribution to ensuring that the wealth of this country is distributed evenly.

Political and social conditions are listed as my final determinant for economic sustainable growth. It is imperative that the country's political system, this democratic system that we have in this country, truly reflects the wishes of the people. It must be understood that for the democratic system to work the elected representatives are spending the money and legislating the policies in this country in the direction of the populace. For that system to work we need to ensure the representatives are cognizant of the needs of the community. We must also ensure that the populace is educated about the cost associated with the provisions of their needs. We must make sure the country understands that there are no free meals. We must ensure there is no suspicion of any form of political corruption.

So far in our history, we have been able to run a government without any serious charges against our country for any form of political corruption. Our people must remain confident in the elected representatives. I have every reason to feel confident that this country can express surety that the elected representatives who formed the Legislative Assembly in 2001 have great adherence to this concept.

We should try to pursue our development in an orderly manner and ensure that our very limited resources, human capital, monetary and physical capital, are all utilised for the greatest good and for the greatest amount of people, as Sir Vassel Johnson put it.

We must ensure we look at all elements that threaten our resources. We must carefully look at our capacity for economic growth. We must look at how many tourists we can sustain before they negatively impact the very product that attracts them here. We must look at how many office complexes in George Town we can sustain without the populace being negatively impacted. We must look at traffic congestion because to simply grow is not enough. We must grow in a manner in which the country is benefiting. So, if we are growing and creating results from that growth, such as congestion in George Town, which is not the desire of the people, who are we growing for?

The Speaker: If I may interrupt you for a moment, we have reached the time we would normally take our afternoon break. There appears to me there has been free mobility of Members in and out of the Chamber. Could we forego the break and continue until 4.30 pm?

Mr. Lyndon L. Martin: Mr. Speaker, my voice would greatly appreciate if we could exercise the break.

The Speaker: Could I ask Honourable Members, let us try to be back in fifteen minutes?

We shall suspend proceedings for fifteen minutes.

PROCEEDINGS SUSPENDED AT 3.35 PM

PROCEEDINGS RESUMED AT 3.58 PM

The Speaker: Proceedings are resumed. Debate continuing on Private Member's Motion No. 18/01.

The Second Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman.

Mr. Lyndon L. Martin: Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

I spoke earlier of the direct impact of the United States' economy and the economy of the rest of the world on the Cayman Islands. Yesterday evening I suggested our economy operated on a nine-month lag period. That is proved by a long history of empirical evidence which shows movements in the United States' economy are followed in the Cayman Islands after nine months.

Mr. Speaker, that movement does not only occur in the negative at the point of a downturn but also there is a lag in the period of recovery, not necessarily the same nine-month period. It is important as the body of individuals in this country who are responsible for providing macro-economic policy that we carefully monitor the currency in the United States. In the Caymanian Compass of yesterday (19 July 2001) and also in the Wall Street Journal (19 July 2001) was coverage of the Federal Reserve Chairman, Alan Greenspan, in a speech on Wednesday of this week. He cautioned that the year-long economic slow down has not ended and may require another interest rate reduction to revive sluggish growth.

It is predicted that the United States growth in real GDP for the year 2001 on a low would be 1 percent and on a high 2.2 percent which is The Economist economic forecast.

Mr. Speaker, the Euro area is expected to grow by 1.6 to 2.2 percent; Australia, 1.4 to 2.3 percent; Britain, 1.9 to 2.5; percent; France, 2.1 to 2.5; percent; Germany, 0.8 to 1.5; percent; Italy, 1.6 percent—

POINT OF ORDER

Hon. W. McKeever Bush: Mr. Speaker, on a point of order.

The Speaker: Let me hear your point of order.

Hon. W. McKeever Bush: Mr. Speaker, as to the introduction of this Motion, I am wondering how much longer the Member will be, and whether he has actually overstated the case relevant to the Motion. I would like to have some indication as to when he will finish his introduction.

The Speaker: I do not call that a point of order but if you could give us an indication, I think, it would be appreciated.

Mr. Lyndon L. Martin: Mr. Speaker, would the Clerk be able to indicate how much time of my four hours remains?

The Speaker: The Second Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman, these are not accurate figures, but you have spoken for approximately 2½ hours, yesterday and today. Let us say you have two hours left.

Hon. Roy Bodden: Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Education.

Hon. Roy Bodden: Under Standing Order 38, I move that the question be now put.

The Speaker: Unfortunately, this Motion does not have a question.

The Second Elected Member for West Bay.

Mr. Rolston M. Anglin: Mr. Speaker, I have listened carefully to the debate even though I was not in the Chamber. I have been in the Common Room. The Motion actually calls for us to take into account the effect of Government's recent tax measures and the OECD initiatives, and consider possible stimulus measures.

Now, the Second Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman was just starting to get into Alan Greenspan's view of the United States' economy. We need to bear in mind relevance because I want to hear about the tax measures—the OECD initiatives, and the possible stimulus measures. I do not want to hear about Greenspan making another interest rate cut.

The Speaker: I listened very carefully to what you are saying and I would like to advise all Members I am cognizant of the fact that a lot of irrelevance goes on in this House, and I shall not allow it in the future. So, be prepared.

Would the Second Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman, please continue?

Mr. Alden M. McLaughlin, Jr: Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: I do not intend having a debate this afternoon. That is not the purpose.

[Addressing the Second Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman] Would you give way?

Mr. Lyndon L. Martin: Yes, Mr. Speaker, I will give way.

The Speaker: The Second Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. Alden M. McLaughlin, Jr: Mr. Speaker, I would like you to clarify something for me, Sir. You said that the question could not be put because there was no question. When debate concludes and the Second Elected Member for Cayman Brac sums up, what then are we to do, Sir?

The Speaker: I have been wondering that from the very beginning, to be honest with you, but we will find a way.

Hon. Edna M. Moyle: Mr. Speaker, if I may, Sir, and maybe I am out of turn . . . If a motion does not have a question to be proposed to the House it should not therefore be debated by Parliament.

The Speaker: If you could tell me exactly where that is in our Standing Orders I would be very grateful to you because I do not see it. Let us not take any more time.

Please continue Second Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman.

Mr. Lyndon L. Martin: Mr. Speaker, Erskine May [Parliamentary Practice, 22nd Edition] covers Motions, and I think it is page 441 for those who are interested in reading.

I have to say that I am stunned that the Second Elected Member from West Bay does not see the relevance of the United States' economy when debating a Motion that takes note of the state of the Cayman Islands' economy.

The Speaker: I will not entertain any further debate.

The Second Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Cayman Brac, please continue.

Mr. Lyndon L. Martin: Mr. Speaker, I was just speaking about the United States' economy and broadened it to include various other countries that are seeing a period of slow economic growth. Consequently, we can continue to expect a slow down in our economy.

I simply read an abstract from the speech of Mr. Greenspan to show that the individual who is deemed to be most intimately knowledgeable about the United States' economy. . .

Hon. W. McKeever Bush: Mr. Speaker, on a point of order.

The Speaker: I have made a ruling and I am not going to allow any further debate. So, let us go along—

Hon. W. McKeever Bush: Mr. Speaker, it is not a debate I am asking for! I am asking for a point of order.

The Speaker: Well, let me hear your point of order.

POINT OF ORDERProcedure*

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: I am rising on a matter of procedure.

The Speaker: Let me hear your point of order.

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: I am asking the Chair on what basis are we debating this matter? What conclusion are we coming to? Which Standing Order provides for this Motion to be debated? I think the House should be told this, Sir, with all due respect.

The Speaker: Have you read the Motion?

It says, "BE IT RESOLVED THAT this Honourable House debates and takes note of the present state of the Cayman Islands' economy, taking into account the effect of Government's recent tax measures and the OECD initiatives, and consider possible stimulus measures that may be undertaken to revive the economy."

The Second Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman, please continue.

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: All right, Mr. Speaker, I can sit here as long as you can.

Mr. Lyndon L. Martin: I am amazed that a Government preaching human rights wants to even take away my parliamentary rights to speak on a motion—the only motion I brought to this House.

POINT OF ORDER

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: Mr. Speaker, on a point of order, I think the Member is insulting in saying that the Government is trying to take away a right from him. No such thing, Sir! We would rather have procedure followed correctly.

The Speaker: I would ask that you not make statements that could be termed derogatory. Let us continue with the debate, and that is a point of order.

Mr. Lyndon L. Martin: No problem. Mr. Speaker, I would just let the Minister responsible for Tourism know that I was referring to the Motion for the closure of the House cutting off my debate before completing as being—

The Speaker: Let me make it very clear: if we cannot have a Parliament, I shall adjourn this House without question so let us have order at this time.

The Second Elected Member for Cayman Brac, please continue your debate until the hour of interruption.

Mr. Lyndon L. Martin: Thank you, Mr. Speaker, for that ruling.

The point that I have been trying to make is that the Cayman Islands' economy is largely influenced by the United States and the rest of the world economy, and I am debating the Motion which seeks to discuss the state of the economy. I am illustrating that part of the problem we are now experiencing, part of this economic slow down, is a result of our dependency and vulnerability to the United States. That point has been made and established. However, it is necessary for me to illustrate what is happening to those economies to then make the linkage of what is happening in Cayman, and what is predicted to happen in those economies.

Mr. Speaker, your ruling is welcomed and I hope strongly enforced so that I am allowed to complete my debate.

The first economic development plan for the Cayman Islands from 1969 called for diversification of the economic base and the reduction in the vulnerability of the Cayman Islands to the global economy. That was in 1969; again in 1972, 1975, 1982, 1988 and the 1990 revision. We have always stated it. The document Vision 2008 has stated it. In 1986, the Hunte Report on Economic Diversification has claimed it as being an essential. However, no real achievements have been accomplished in broadening our economic base. Until we can achieve the broadening of the economic base, the vulnerability that we are experiencing now will continue.

A part of my debate will be dealing with recommendations. The first recommendation for ways of reviving the economy is directed at diversification. In Vision 2008, it was called a Business Development Council. In my contribution to the Budget Address and my campaign manifesto, I called it an Economic Campaign Council. It is imperative that we have a body of individuals who represent individuals from the Economics Unit, Finance and Administration Department, representatives from the Chamber of Commerce, representatives from the Agricultural Industrial Development Board, and all other relevant business associations.

This development council would be your core individuals who would spearhead activities aimed at broadening the economic base of the Cayman Islands. It is a body of individuals which would actively pursue economic initiatives. At the next session of the Legislative Assembly I intend to make this part of a motion. I read with interest several motions brought to this House which approved the formation of an Economic Advisory Board, sometimes called Economic Development Council, and to a point of even listing members. This body of individuals would travel to conferences such as offered in corporate relocation, and investment incentive conferences. They would be the body of individuals meeting with potential investors to ensure that the bureaucracy is as minimal as possible and who could answer all questions on immigration, planning and all the laws of the Cayman Islands, and including direct contact with government.

Mr. Speaker, this body has been experimented with, especially in the district which I represent through the Cayman Brac and Little Cayman Development Council, and has proven to be very worthwhile. This body of individuals would then take on responsibilities of assisting potential investors in seeing their venture come to reality. So often I hear and meet with business investors who claim they have problems getting adequate information and have difficulty understanding our regulations to see their project through to full completion.

In addition to the development of a Business Development Council, it is necessary for this country to further develop the Agricultural Industrial Development Board (AIDB), which participates in providing financial resources (venture capitals) to small businesses. To broaden our income base we need to have a resource where individuals can go with a prospectus, a business concept, projected finances, and a feasibility study and secure some finances. The AIDB offers such a programme. However, it needs to be expanded and a public relations' exercise is necessary to bring this about—to bring it to the light of individuals. This jointly between the Business Development Council and the AIDB would provide the entrepreneur with business advice from their experience.

I also encourage the Government to examine the Cayman Islands' Stock Exchange legislation to carry it to its full intention by including local trading. I recommend the Government to take progressive action to confirm that the regulatory body, whether it is the Monetary Authority or others, ensure that interest rates in this economy are determined on a competitive basis so that finances of capital projects, business ventures, residential constructions and apartments are done at the most competitive interest rate. I encourage the Government to guarantee that the regulatory regime is in place to secure the money held at the banks to aid confidence in the banking system.

Mr. Speaker, as stated earlier, and in my Throne Speech, I recommended that the country and the Government seek to reduce to 10 percent the import duty on building material as a stimulus measure for the construction industry in Grand Cayman. In Cayman Brac, we have proven this to be a measure that is effective at stimulating economic activity and has resulted in increased duty to Government. With a controlled example, I think, the Government can now move boldly and carry out a similar exercise in Grand Cayman. It will have to be for a defined period of time to get us through this trough of slow economic period where our Caymanians are hurting.

I have looked quite extensively at this proposal. I have consulted with various individuals in the construction industry—individuals pursuing development initiatives and contemplating investing in Cayman. I am convinced that such a measure would take the construction industry out of the trough. As stated earlier, the construction industry is a major player in our domestic economy. I am certain that if the construction industry recovers we will see domestic commerce booming and we will see a lesser impact on the global slow down in the Cayman Islands.

The question posed as to what can be done locally to prevent the slow period is answered in this contribution. We must also look at methods of stopping the leakages in our economy through effective, progressive immigration reform so that individuals who are participating in our economic growth have some degree of stability and security of tenure. They will then feel comfortable that every cent they earn they do not have to send overseas. They can invest and build their home locally; they can buy an apartment; they can invest into a small business venture. Without effective immigration reform this will not be achieved.

I also recommend that the Government revisit the issue of pension contribution accumulations and look at some acceptable level to require the pension contributions to be invested locally. There has to be some level that is acceptable. The Members of this Honourable House rejected the 50 percent but they chose not to amend it to 20 percent or 10 percent. They chose to reject the Motion. I urge the Government to revisit the pension fund requirement to be invested locally.

Our tax system is a very unique one and I have some recommendations on revising the methodology used to raise funds for the heavy demand of capital projects. I must first examine the shortfalls of our current tax system.

First, we must understand the difference between taxes and fees. Certain government revenues are simply to offset the provision of services. They are not taxes. They are fees, flat rate. Other taxes that are used or amounts of fees that are greater than that to provide services are considered taxes to fund public goods such as roads.

Mr. Speaker, our system of taxing is a consumption based tax. It is not an income tax. It is not a wealth tax. Consumption tax is one that does not fluctuate directly with income so, although economic activity will generate greater revenue, it is not necessarily directly proportional. There is a difference between the products demanded during economic development, and the level of revenue that is generated from increased economic activity as a result of those products. So, there will be a continual need on our current tax system to always impose new taxes during our economic growth. As we reach to direct stages there will be new taxes rather than the existing tax rate observing the growth through growth in economic activity.

It is for that reason our history is characterised by the introduction of several tax measures. Every time we move to a new stage on economic development we see new tax measures which, as I illustrated earlier, though necessary, calls for a slow down because they cause an inflationary effect. So, we must look for new creative ways of funding capital projects and I make it quite clear that I am not advocating changing from consumption based tax. I am simply saying that we must look at, as I proposed in the Budget Address, a national lottery. I once more call for a national lottery in the Cayman Islands.

We must also look at funding our capital projects through the issuance of government bonds rather than borrowing and taxing. Government bonds are a lower source of funds.

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: Mr. Speaker.

POINT OF ORDER

The Speaker: Are you rising on a point of order?

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: Yes.

The Speaker: Let me hear your point of order.

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: Mr. Speaker, the Member has traversed this ground over and over since yesterday and I feel it is repetitious—tedious at that.

The Speaker: I have been listening very carefully. There is a question on this point of order but I will have a statement to make before we adjourn this afternoon, and at 4.30 pm I shall do so at the interruption.

Please continue.

Mr. Lyndon L. Martin: Mr. Speaker, I was speaking about the issuance of government bonds the first time since I started my contribution to this Motion. I spoke about it during my budget address some months ago.

We must look at new ways of funding capital projects. The issuance of government bonds has been my recommendation from the time I came to this House and remains my recommendation. The issuance of government bonds offers several economic revitalisation characteristics.

It provides Government with a lower cost source of funds which then allows Government to operate more efficiently; thus the need for other taxes is reduced.

It provides local individuals the ability to purchase government bonds and increase their yield from their savings, which then increases their personal wealth and their ability to invest into the economy.

I hope that the Government considers and puts into place the mechanism necessary to facilitate the issuance, management and recording of government bonds in the Cayman Islands in the very near future.

Mr. Speaker, the running of a country like a business is so often remarked upon. When you have a section of that business which has additional capacity to reduce and is currently not producing at its maximum output, you then invest in that department. Bringing that analogy to the country, we have 100 square miles of land. There is some 14 square miles represented by Cayman Brac that is not properly and fully utilised. A country which manages its macro-economics is managing its resources wisely.

As part of my recommendations of methods of reviving the Cayman Islands' economy I suggest that the Government revisit the report by Mr. Aftab Noorani on the economic revitalisation of Cayman Brac. Look at what has been proposed by him. Consult with the Economic Development Council of Cayman Brac and look at methods of ensuring that we are fully utilising all of the resources available to the fullest capacity.

Mr. Speaker, I note that I am at the hour of adjournment, I am not sure—

MOMENT OF INTERRUPTION—4.30 PM

The Speaker: I shall entertain a Motion for the adjournment of this Honourable House.

The Honourable Minister for Tourism, Environment and Transport.

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

I move that we complete debate on this Motion this afternoon.

The Speaker: We have reached the hour of adjournment. I have asked for a Motion for the adjournment of this Honourable House.

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: Mr. Speaker, I said we are not adjourning, Sir, we are going to continue business this afternoon.

The House will have to decide that.

The Speaker: Our Standing Orders clearly state that you have the right to speak for four hours. Although I do not agree with it, that is what our Standing Order says, so you cannot force a person to finish prior to that time.

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: Mr. Speaker, we will just continue until we finish debate on it [Private Member's Motion No. 18/01] this afternoon.

The Speaker: I shall put a question that the House do now adjourn. If that is not satisfactory then we will continue.

Those in favour of the House adjourning, please say, 'Aye'. Those wanting it to continue, say 'No'.

AYES AND NOES.

Mr. Lyndon L. Martin: Could we have a division, Mr. Speaker?

The Speaker: Certainly.

Madam Clerk, would you call a division?

The Deputy Clerk:

ABSENT: 2

Hon. Roy Bodden
Dr. Frank S. McField

The Speaker: The Noes have it. The House will continue.

ADJOURNMENT NEGATIVED BY MAJORITY.

The Speaker: I shall use the moment of interruption to make a statement.

Honourable Members, I rise this afternoon as your duly Elected Presiding Officer or Speaker of this Legislative Assembly. Actions that have been taken here this afternoon are not in accordance with what I am charged with responsibility to do. I am extremely disappointed with the cross arguments and I want to make it abundantly clear that as long as I am an Elected Speaker of this House, I shall do everything in my power to preserve, defend and protect the rules of procedure.

I am now asking all Honourable Members to meet with me in the Committee Room at 10.00 am on Monday, at which time I shall lay out in detail questions that have been posed from the Floor this afternoon, and my ruling on them.

I feel, and I must say, that it is an injustice to go against Standing Orders. I can stay here as late as anyone else, but the gentleman is entitled to four hours.

I ask you all to attend the informal meeting in the Legislative Assembly at 10 am on Monday, 23 July 2001.

Debate continuing.

The Second Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman.

Mr. Lyndon L. Martin: Mr. Speaker, I want to thank you for rising and addressing this issue. We are here not only to fulfil our own political agendas but we have to preserve the dignity of this Legislative Assembly. I agree that the behaviour here today has been exceedingly in poor taste.

Mr. Speaker, I am quite happy to continue with my contribution to this Motion which the people of the Cayman Islands, whom I represent because I was duly elected, have asked me to bring. It appeared that this country's Government was not taking note of the state of the economy and for that reason the Motion has been brought by the Second Elected Member for Bodden Town. Apparently, the country has great reason to be concerned because of the behaviour demonstrated here tonight. There seems to be flagrant disregard for a Motion of such importance.

Mr. Speaker, I have to admit that it has been difficult for me to keep the trend of my thoughts with the numerous interruptions. I do believe when I was speaking last, I was talking of my various recommendations and speaking on the greater investment into Cayman Brac. I also mentioned the consultation with the body of individuals in Cayman Brac who have collocated into a council to provide advice to the Government on ways of improving the economy.

Every motion brought to this House has been as a result of Elected Representatives feeling that they must do something to better their constituents, and should be respected in that accord.

I want to turn briefly to the Financial Services Industry (FSI). I want to compliment the negotiating team of the Cayman Islands' Government for successfully negotiating the removal of the Cayman Islands from the Financial Action Task Force's (FATF) blacklist—present and past negotiating teams, and especially the Honourable Minister of Health, who is a common denominator in both teams.

Mr. Speaker, I was extremely pleased when I heard in this House that the objective of the negotiating team was not simply to be removed from the blacklist. In fact, I think it was first articulated by the Second Elected Member from George Town who broadened the objective to being and remaining competitive in the Financial Services Industry. I think that is very important because to be removed from the blacklist without consideration of what you might have to give up to be removed was not in the health of this country. If being removed from the blacklist was essential for us to remain competitive in the Financial Services Industry then all efforts would be made. So, I think that change of approach was welcome.

I am not 100 percent convinced and I am quite eager to see the true economic benefit derived from being de-listed. I have to admit that seeing company registrations down 33 percent in the second half of this year concerns me. It also concerns me when I hear remarks saying we should be focusing primarily on the institutional investor and not the private millionaires around the world.

The private banking industry is estimated to represent some $27,000 billion. One of the attracting features of the Cayman Islands as an international financial industry has been the full array of business opportunities offered in the Cayman Islands. The full ambit of financial services is provided in this jurisdiction. It is what differentiates us from the other jurisdictions and has contributed to our world-class standard. I think there is no aspect of that industry we should give up. We must seek to adjust to the new environment in which we operate. We have made the changes. We have had differences in views as to what was necessary to bring about those changes.

Now that we have adapted and have been recognised by the de-listing exercise as being a legitimate first-class jurisdiction, it is now up to us to re-establish our position in the very competitive offshore Financial Services Industry. We must change the methodologies that we use to promote our industry to more real world, real time, methods. I am stunned when I surf the internet and look at the international media that I have seen so little publicity given to the fact that the Cayman Islands has been de-listed. There has been so little publicity given to the fact that we are still an alive and kicking financial jurisdiction. We still have a lot to offer albeit less than we had before but we are still a very competitive provider of international financial services.

Mr. Speaker, on this subject I want to state my opinion publicly and also to express it to the Honourable Third Official Member that the FATF issue was serious. It was an issue which threatened the industry that provides 30 percent of our gross domestic product. In no sense whatsoever should we be belittling the FATF as I have seen recently on an invitation to a party that uses the FATF logo. I personally believe that is wrong. I personally believe we should resist such temptations.

The FATF is an international body—

POINT OF ORDER

Hon. George A. McCarthy: Mr. Speaker, on a point of order.

The Speaker: Let me hear your point of order.

Hon. George A. McCarthy: While I respect the fact that individuals can hold different views on various matters, to suggest the appreciation party that has been planned for this afternoon, even with reference to the FATF logo is somehow not right. I would suggest that this Member does not attempt to misread the invitation that has been sent out to mean that the persons who have decided to host this party do not recognise the seriousness of the FATF issue.

Mr. Speaker, I have been a part of the negotiating team. The Honourable Minister for Health is a part of the negotiating team. We have Mr. Alden McLaughlin, who is the Second Elected Member for George Town, as a part of the negotiating team. We have persons assisting such as the Assistant Financial Secretary, Miss Drummond, who has worked very closely with the negotiating team.

To suggest this afternoon that—

Mr. Lyndon L. Martin: Mr. Speaker, is this a point of order, Sir?

Hon. George A. McCarthy: Yes, it is a point of order. Mr. Speaker, if the Member would allow me to—

The Speaker: Please continue.

Hon. George A. McCarthy: For the Second Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman to suggest that the magnitude of what the FATF represents is not appreciated or understood is incorrect. I would suggest if that is currently the Member's view, as to how the FATF issue is seen, then he should revise his opinion of the persons and also the seriousness with which that matter is being treated by the negotiating team and the Cayman Islands' Government.

The Speaker: I have listened very carefully to all that has gone on here this afternoon. I would say to the Second Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman, it is good to express your opinion but when it is on an international issue of this nature I would ask that you refrain from coming direct. That is a point of order.

The Second Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman, please continue.

Mr. Lyndon L. Martin: Mr. Speaker, I will respect your ruling and adhere to your recommendation and respect the international sensitivity of the issue. As I said, I was stating my issue and I will refrain from addressing that issue any further.

I stated earlier and want to reiterate that I have the greatest respect for the entire negotiating team, the present and the past, and their achievement. I respect the team as a whole. I made special recognition of the Minister of Health, the Second Elected Member for George Town and the Honourable Financial Secretary, who was a common denominator on the two negotiating teams.

Mr. Speaker, I was in the process of illustrating the change that has occurred in our financial industry. That change can even be demonstrated through the various names we have used to refer to ourselves over the years. As the industry evolved we changed from a tax haven to offshore financial centre and then to international financial centre. It is a continually changing process and I am proud that our country has been able to attempt those changes throughout the years.

The new Financial Services Industry for the 21st century is one in which we will have to capitalise as one major differentiating characteristic over the other jurisdictions, the quality of the professionals that we have in the Cayman Islands. We have a pool of professionals, both in the private and public sector that puts us in a position whereby we can compete with any financial service provider jurisdiction. We can provide a level of professional services that is competitive with world standards. That must be the factor on which we promote the industry but the key is effective promotion of this industry.

During this period of recovery there is reluctance now in business coming here. It is being felt by the providers so we need to go out and actively promote this industry once more. Promote it based on the quality of our regulatory regime and the quality of the professionals that make up the financial industry here in the Cayman Islands.

Mr. Speaker, I do believe it was timely when the Government took an initiative, in which I was involved, to carry its professionals around the world and showcase them to the global community, New York, London and Hong Kong, where conferences were held. Not only did we carry individuals to speak at such meetings but other private providers of service accompanied the Government to showcase the quality of the professionals we have in our industry. I do note it was not a very expensive undertaking because the participants generated revenue.

I believe it is time for the Cayman Islands, the fifth largest financial centre, to ensure that when we ask the banks, trust companies and company formation providers to pay extra fees they directly see the benefits of their fees.

The fifth largest financial centre of the world should have an international standard convention hall. We should have a facility in which these individuals, who have invested time, energy and money into building this financial industry, can host seminars and conferences of an international level. We should not be renting hotel conference halls as we should have our own centre. I know such an initiative is an expensive one but I also know that the financial service providers would eagerly participate in such a venture.

In looking at ways of reviving the economy I have always advocated the need for government to operate more efficiently. There is a direct relationship between government's efficiency and economic activity. I would like to make that relationship clear. Government extracts money from the economy through taxes and fees. It then utilises that money internally to fund the central government and the remaining sum is invested into capital projects, services and providers. If we are not operating government efficiently, it then means a large portion of the taxes removed from circulation is not directly re-invested into capital or infrastructural projects but used to simply fund an inefficient base. It is imperative that we minimise the cost operating government. So, when looking at methods of stimulating the economy and of ensuring sustainability in the economy, we must also look at the efficiency of government itself.

Mr. Speaker, I am cognizant of the fact that I also have the privilege of winding up this Motion. I would now offer the opportunity to any other Member of this Honourable House, who wishes to contribute to this Motion. In my wind-up I can encapsulate any suggestions or criticisms they may have had into one final statement to ensure the country has been recognised. It will enable the Government to see the state of the economy and methods of reviving the Cayman Islands' economy.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: The Honourable Third Official Member.

Hon. George A. McCarthy: Mr. Speaker, I rise to offer comments on Private Member's Motion No. 18/01 entitled 'Prevailing Economic Conditions of the Cayman Islands'. The Motion reads, "BE IT RESOLVED THAT this Honourable House debates and takes note of the present state of the Cayman Islands' economy, taking into account the effect of Government's recent tax measures and the OECD initiatives, and consider possible stimulus measures that may be undertaken to revive the economy."

When the Second Elected Member from Cayman Brac introduced the Motion he made reference to the point that this Motion is to be regarded as having three subsections. Firstly, that this Honourable House debates and takes note of the present state of the Cayman Islands' economy. Secondly, that account is taken of the effect of the Government's recent tax measures and OECD initiatives. Thirdly, consider possible stimulus measures that may be undertaken to revive the economy.

Mr. Speaker, the Member has raised a lot of points and he has expounded quite a lot on various economic principles. Given the way the Motion has been worded, the best way to respond to the Motion is to hear what has been said and then formulate a response.

Members would have taken note that since the Second Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman commenced his debate on the Motion yesterday we have had senior officers from the Economic Research and Development Unit present in the Legislative Assembly. The reason for their presence is to allow for the points of substance to be noted—for the transcript of views offered by the Honourable Mover to be looked at very carefully and to take into account the comments offered by other Members of this House to formulate a response, which will be provided by the Government by way of a statement. This is a Motion the Government takes very seriously and regards it as very timely and will be looking at the issues raised very carefully. It is not one that the Government intends to just set aside because given the state of affairs at this time, in terms of what is happening in the economy, it is very important that as much information be provided to the community to help Members form careful judgments in terms of current developments.

Mr. Speaker, if you will permit me to refer to the editorial of the Caymanian Compass (20th July 2001) entitled "Cayman's Economy". A part of the editorial reads: "Some sectors of Cayman's economy may be feeling a pinch at the moment but this does not mean that Cayman's economy is imploding into a black hole."

It goes on further, "Commentators on Cayman's economy should be careful in their use of words. An element of economic forecasting is psychology, rather than heavy number crunching. Surveys on 'consumer confidence' and on 'manufacturers' confidence' play a part in these forecasts. If manufacturers are going to invest and if consumers are going to buy, then the economy can look forward to growth. If, instead, money is going into the bank against expected hardships and downturns, then expressed expectations become self-fulfilling."

It is the last point I have quoted which I would like to focus on for a moment. "If, instead, money is going into the bank against expected hardships and downturns, then expressed expectations become self-fulfilling." We know that the economy of the Cayman Islands is closely allied to that of the United States. Honourable Members of this House would recall in the campaign of the present government of the U.S., one of the factors very much in the forefront was the tax relief package by the President of the U.S. In his various proposals, the view was taken, in summary, that the Government of the U.S. would provide tax relief to the value of about $1.8 trillion over the next ten years. In order to justify the actions necessitating the tax reduction culminated into talking the U.S. economy into a recession. That is the psychological aspect of it.

If we examine very carefully the manufacturers who are producing computers, and we have seen layoffs by Compaq and some of the other manufacturers, there is apprehension on the part of the public as to given uncertainties. If they are made to feel that their breadbasket for tomorrow will be threatened, the natural thing to do is to preserve what exists today, and that means what exists within their bank accounts.

Quite recently it was said in the United States that while sales were sluggish, let us say, in the housing markets and with some of the high-priced items, note was made that in K-Mart and some of the other supermarkets, items such as household products and others were moving at a very rapid pace. These are items which consumers decided were necessary to hoard and to accumulate in abundance. The reason for this is that firstly the acquisition of such items does not really threaten their accumulated wealth base. This is a point we have to bear in mind.

I have made note that the Honourable Member has pointed out, and I will agree with him on this point, that, in order to carefully monitor what is taking place in the Cayman Islands, there is a need for us to have access to useful and accurate information. I will endorse the position he has taken in appealing to the community, as a whole, to provide such information to assist the Government.

Let me also mention, when we look back to the recent debate of the Budget Address it will confirm that the Government took the present state of the economy very seriously. For example, when we look at the tax package and what has been projected to yield $19.7 million through the end of the year (I do not have a copy of the schedule in front of me) you can see that it was set out to minimise the impact upon the local economy. We have seen where the cost of regulating our financial industry will increase over the next three years and the Government has met with the financial industry and worked out very carefully a plan whereby that cost will be absorbed by the industry itself.

Secondly, the effects of the recent tax measures and the OECD initiatives have been taken quite seriously, not only by this Government, but by the previous government. When the now Minister for Education was a Member of the Backbench, I think, he took the view, when it comes to matters such as these international initiatives which could have an unfavourable impact upon the economy of the Cayman Islands if not handled properly, all Members of the Legislative Assembly should band together. The government at that time (in 1998) together with the other Members of the Legislative Assembly was committed to that approach. So much so that the view was taken that the Cayman Islands—having given an advanced commitment to the OECD—would not be one of those countries that were subsequently put on a list by the OECD. At that time it was regarded as the right decision to have been taken.

Hindsight is always 20:20 but I was a part of that negotiating team and when I mentioned the names of persons earlier it was by oversight that I omitted to mention the Honourable Second Official Member. He could not be left out of the picture because when it comes to legal issues he has done a sterling job. He and I were in Malta last week, and I had to call him 'Battleship Ballantyne'. He led the debate on the legal issues in the information exchange agreement and he did this country proud. I was quite happy to be associated with him, so much so that when the Honourable Member was in Malta his health was somewhat at risk. He had to be running between the conference and the doctor's office getting a prescription.

So, when the view is taken that persons may not be taking these initiatives seriously and alluding to the fact that these are put up as symbolic gestures for a party, Mr. Speaker that is not the interpretation to be given to this.

Before the de-listing took place here, the Honourable Leader for Government Business and I (as members of the negotiating team) were in Washington DC. We visited the U.S. Treasury Department, Canadian Embassy, the Australian Embassy, the Japanese Embassy and the U.K. Embassy in Washington D.C. We also met with representatives of the French Government at the International Monetary Fund to make sure that everyone got the message very carefully as to what the Cayman Islands had done and what actions had been taken in order to address the issues raised by the international community and, in particular, the Financial Action Task Force. So much so, that when we look back at the FATF before the twenty-five criteria were developed, we were regarded to have been in compliance with the forty recommendations of the FATF and the nineteen recommendations of the Caribbean Financial Action Task Force (CFATF). It was not that a whole barrage of legislative action was taken to achieve that, but because of the fact that the Cayman Islands has always taken its international obligations quite seriously.

When we look at the impact that all these initiatives are having on our economy, it is not totally reasonable to make a comparison with just the year 2000. When we look at the year 1998, up to the end of June the amount of companies formed in the Cayman Islands was 4,462. For the year 1999 up through the end of June - 4,382 were formed; to the end of June 2000 - 7,073 formed; for the year 2001 up through the end of June, 4,743. Let us isolate the year 2000. In 1998 again, 4,462 were formed; in 1999, 4,382; and in 2001, 4,143.

We were made to understand that the reason why we have had such a high registration in the year 2000 was because, for the first time, Hong Kong decided to recognise Caymanian and Bermudan companies for a secondary listing. However, I do not have the specifics of that. As a result of that there was a rush by company service providers to register quite a number of companies in the Cayman Islands. What we have in front of us is not a decline. Yes, we are less than where we were by comparison in June 2000, but when we have a total of 4,743 companies registered up through the end of June 2001 this underscores the confidence that the international community has in the Cayman Islands' economy.

There is no point in playing ostrich and burying our heads in the sands. We know that the construction industry is down. We know that improvement needs to be effected and expectations are less than what one would anticipate in the tourism sector. The ups and downs that take place within economic cycles are cyclical and, ideally, we would like to be on a path of continuous growth. Events do occur within the international markets that oftentimes will culminate in a reduction of the normal growth-rate. We are a resilient people and we will come through this. We will continue to grow from strength to strength.

The Member spoke about marketing the Cayman Islands and I am in total agreement with him on this. We cannot talk about using past concepts such as focusing solely on confidentiality. Yes, privacy of transactions that take place in the Cayman Islands must be maintained. This is not something we are going to give up or put at risk but we are talking about privacy in regards to legitimate business. When it comes to zero tax, yes, that is important—we will have to market that. We will have to look at what really underpins our economy as a whole including the financial industry.

I will submit to you that there are very few places a person can go in this world today, where he or she can walk from East End to West Bay without having to fear being attacked along the highway. We have our elements of crime. We know of things taking place but, as a Caymanian, I can get up tonight and walk from my house to East End or West Bay. I can go to Cayman Brac and Little Cayman and do the same. I would be very foolhardy if I were to go to some other countries in the region and do the same.

At the end of the day we are dealing with human beings. This safety factor is what is important and this is why we have million dollar homes here in the Cayman Islands. This is why people feel the level of confidence that has been built up over the years. This is one place where white, black, Chinese and Indians can get along. We know that there are elements of prejudice but at the end of the day no one's life is threatened as a result of this.

I walk as a descendant of the Ashanti Tribe and I feel good. This is the country in which we live and we have to put our minds together. When we put our minds together and we attempt to derive solutions then we will be able to address the problems in front of us.

Mr. Speaker, I will use an analogy. Once a back there was an enterprising set of people who found themselves in Egypt. I want for Egypt to be regarded as a state of mind. The Pharaohs of the day felt threatened. A number of circumstances developed and these people found themselves on the other side of the Red Sea. Miriam took the symbol and decided to have a celebration. This is what we will be having tonight.

Mr. Speaker, we have just come through the Red Sea and we are now in the wilderness. We should not stop in the wilderness. The wilderness is intended to strengthen us and cause us to grow. In the wilderness there are snakes, vipers and scorpions such as Senators Levin and Morgenthal who will always be there wanting to bite. The most dangerous part, or the greatest threat in the wilderness, were the cynics—those who wanted to go back to Egypt knowing it was not the ideal place, and they had a fear of going into the Promised Land. At the end of the day, the people prevailed and entered the Promised Land. We will go through the wilderness and we will have our wilderness experiences. These are good for us but we will always enter the Promised Land if we have faith.

We know, and I know, things can be better. I know life operates on a cyclical basis. The wilderness experiences are good for us. It allows for us to pull our resources, sit, work through solutions and take a determined position as to the best way forward looking always to our God, the Sustainer and Provider of all things. He will take us into the Promised Land. God is not raising any brats. When the children got into the Promised Land, he said to them that he would only give to them wherever their feet went. So, whatever stage we have reached, we have to continue to be enterprising.

Mr. Speaker, we are going to take the message, as to what we are about, into the international community. We are not going to allow our critics to do that for us because we have knowledge of what the Cayman Islands is about. We have to say thanks to those who have gone before us and we have to pave the way for those who are yet to come.

So, I am going to suggest that we pool our resources together—we are talking about our monetary and mental resources. Let us try and work at solutions. When we look at the economy as a whole there are some areas lagging behind, but let us see exactly what can be done. For example, the Honourable Leader of Government Business has spoken about a building programme in terms of office complexes for the Government that will create a stimulus for the construction industry. Now, that is a constructive suggestion.

I would not want to say that the Second Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman has only been critical because that would not be fair. He has put forward a range of useful ideas but when we are looking at matters such as our financial industry and the international initiative, let us be very careful in terms of the information we share. For example, we know the same things that some of the offshore countries were saying to places like the Cayman Islands and others should be done.

When we were in Malta last week we were told that because we had given a commitment we should hold to that commitment and put ourselves in a position to share information after 31 December 2003 on criminal tax matters. We have no difficulties with that. We found out, while we were there, that some of the other advanced commitment jurisdictions have collapsed their criminal, civil and administrative tax matters into one. For Cayman, civil and administrative, in the letter of commitment we said we would be co-operating after 31 December 2005. For some of them, who have combined criminal, civil and administrative tax matters they, presumably, will be co-operating after 31 December 2005.

The Honourable Attorney General, the Executive Director of the Secretariat and the Assistant Financial Secretary and I pointed out to them at the conference that we were moving in a lock-step position. Cayman will not be the sacrificial lamp for the OECD or the international community. We are moving in line with everyone else. We are not going to pat ourselves on the back by running out there to be pioneers. We were made to understand when the commitment was given that this would be the same commitment right across the board, and that is the position we will be maintaining.

Again, I want to express gratitude to the Attorney General. He argued the point well and a single statement was put on the table, 'Yes', we will continue to look at the information exchange agreement. Not only that, all the advanced commitment countries came together as one, but Cayman is not going to be moving until those member countries within the OECD arena decide they are going to step out—those that we regard as our competitors. We will all move together as one. This is the seriousness with which these international commitments are being looked at and are being taken.

At the end of the day I walked away from that meeting and when I looked at the agreement which we were asked to go there and talk about it, to see the lines that were running through, it is not going to be the end of it because we are still in the wilderness. If we sit down and do a bit of spying, and all the things that are necessary for our survival, with the help of God, we are going to come through strong, and this can only be achieved if we work together as one.

The Speaker: I do not know how long we are going but does any other Member wish to speak?

The Second Elected Member for Bodden Town.

Mr. Gilbert A. McLean: I do wish, this being Friday evening, that I had the opportunity to go home as that is the normal thing one does at the end of a workday, but that is obviously not to be in this instance.

Mr. Speaker, I do not have any notes to read but I have a few things to say. This evening brings me full force back to times of living Hades in this Honourable Chamber, for me personally, being the only Member under attack by seventeen others. So much so (and perhaps it is because the Member now occupies that chair) . . . maybe that is the point of target or something. I used to sit there. With my throat bleeding I begged for the adjournment, as you did this evening, Mr. Speaker. I was told that the business of the House had to continue. At which point, Dr. Stephen A. Tomlinson (a Member for George Town) rose and in a most outraged and impassioned way demanded that the debate should cease because of plain humanity. However, I see faces change but some things do not change.

Mr. Speaker, I am certain you are right in your ruling of the Motion that it is proper to be before the House. The Motion asks that the House debate and take note of three things: the present state of Cayman's economy; the effect of Government's recent tax measures and the OECD initiatives. It also asks to consider possible stimulus measures, which to me means, if we have any ideas about what could stimulate the economy we should offer them to the House.

I note one thing the Honourable Third Official Member said, and that was, that the Government will be responding in writing to make a statement with regards to this Motion. Now, I would just bring to the attention of the House that this Motion says 'debated'. So, if a statement comes—I do not know how long that will be—this calls for a debate now.

I have been preaching the gospel for many years—over a decade—that we ought to stop patting ourselves on the back as we have for decades about how great we are and all the things that we have. We are ahead of all our brothers and sisters of the Caribbean. We have all the money in the world. We even gave away $1 million with no strings attached in a situation where, approximately nine months later, the British government spent £400 million to build an airport in the Falklands. I advocate that we ought to have gotten real a long time ago. I think boasting and talking about ourselves landed us in a fix with the FATF and the OECD and the rest.

Rather than talk about the banks and the trust companies that we have, which, according to the OECD, are just shelves and files in offices, we should be talking about a place where someone can invest his money and be sure that it is being handled by professionals, legal, financial and otherwise, and feel safe when the investor is doing that. We should talk about how stringent our rules are for making sure that bad money does not come here and if it comes we find it and get it out of here. I have a suggestion, straight away, for the Government of the day and those in the past as well, and that is: we should promote ourselves as the entity we should be which fosters our continuance in this business, rather than bring us to a point where we could lose that opportunity.

Mr. Speaker, I have quite a regard for the Honourable Third Official Member, and I liked what he said about us taking a changed position. We need to take that as seriously as we need to breathe. We need to, not just once or twice, but continually reply to our detractors and those who accuse us of wrongdoing constantly, rather than count the number of banks. This includes two, which I understand will be caught up in a merger or a buy-out everyone is denying or does not wish to talk about; that is, Barclays and CIBC.

I have always believed that it is not quantity that makes something good but the quality. I can go as far back as, I do not remember the year, but it was an occasion where various people from the private sector and government went on a swing around three or four countries. We reduced the cost of registering companies, which put us in line with some others who are competing with us. My argument then was that we were the better quality and persons wishing to be registered here should pay more. Well, I was proven right years later when the fees had to be adjusted again.

Mr. Speaker, I also agree with the Honourable Third Official Member when he quoted something from the newspaper which spoke about making statements, whereby, in effect, these things might come true. We have to be very careful with that and indeed that is why, I think, in February this year, in this same Legislative Assembly I said that the government of the day should stop talking about the past government. Stop saying that the country was broke, this and that, and get on with promoting it positively. So, the moment in time here has not caught me flatfooted.

The Cayman Islands' economy is in a serious slow down. If one wants to call it a recession or a drought it is up to him, but I do know that things have slowed down dramatically in the Cayman Islands. They have slowed down in the construction industry, tourism and the financial services, and there are various factors that have affected this. One thing I would like to note right at this point, which was made by the Honourable Third Official Member—the U.S. President said he was going to rebate and reduce taxes on the American people to start the economy. What did we do? We taxed the people to start the economy.

Mr. Speaker, we sure did not start it but I think we gave it a serious blow that stunned it considerably. There is data that proves the economy has slowed, and by taking $27 million out of it means that money is not there to be spent by the people who are paying that amount over a period of time.

Various things affect the Cayman Islands' economy. The first one I see is greed from the top to the bottom in all sectors of this economy. Rather than sell a can of condensed milk for 35 cents, sell it for 90 cents. That is the general mentality.

Costs are affecting the economy of Cayman. I had an occasion on Tuesday to speak to a manager of one of the condominiums on Seven-Mile Beach. This person was telling me that the owners decided they were going to increase the charges on their accommodation for no other reason than because other owners were doing so and they were getting business, thus they were going to increase theirs too. The manager said that he told them, 'Let's leave ours, we are normally full. We are attracting people.' The geniuses to whom the condominiums belonged to said: 'We are going to increase ours because we can have less people and still make the same amount of money or make more.' That kind of mentality is what is driving the Cayman Islands, my country, into the ground.

Neither the present government, nor past ones, are saying to those people, 'Listen, this is the Cayman Islands, you can make money here but, by God, we are not going to allow you to be driven by greed to the point that you are going to affect the economy of the country and make it too expensive a place where people are going to stop coming to it.'

Mr. Speaker, everything in Cayman is too expensive including the taxes that people pay. We have to look at the overall spectrum in this country if we are to ever make a difference now or in the future. It is not sufficient to wait until there is a crisis and everyone gets real excited and says, 'Let's do what we have always been doing—tax the people.' The amazing thing is that taxes always seem to hit the little man on his eggs and milk rather than hitting some of the people who are milking the economy and paying little or nothing for the wonderful environment the Cayman Islands offers them to do their business.

The economy of the Cayman Islands is attached very closely to that of the United States. We know there are certain things which can be done and should be done. We need to get about doing them. Taxing the people is not the way out. We have to devise means of sharing a small percentage out of the millions, and tens of millions of dollars, that are made by financial institutions in the Cayman Islands which can simply become but an additional fee of what they would normally pay. Now, everyone can sing a song but until a government, including this one, gets brave enough to deal with that instead of talking about it, it is not going to be any different and we are going to continue to tax the people who can ill afford to be taxed.

The recent tax measures have indeed affected the economy. It is bringing greater stress throughout the Islands, financially. Tourism is shrinking so there are fewer people coming and less money in circulation. I wonder if anyone noticed the number of homes being repossessed by the banks, or is it just me who sees just a couple of them, including land and cars. The other day, it would have done one's heart good to see the number of cars lined up along West Bay road, I think near Royal Palms. There must have been sixty of them with For Sale signs on them. That is one way perhaps the Government could go about getting some money too, although it is illegal to do that, I understand. If they charge $10 a day for that it would be a good source of income.

Mr. Speaker, the OECD and the FATF are real. They are for real. They do not care whether we are a Christian society, as we claim to be. They do not care whether it is 39,000 of us and half are foreign. They do not care! They care about the fuel that runs the world economy—money. They have us not in friendly regard but I would say in hostile disregard because they say we are attracting away their money via their citizens who invest in the Cayman Islands. They call us all sorts of dirty names: 'Money laundering islands of the Caribbean'. They have imposed more cost on us via the requirements in law to pay dozens of people within our shores to safeguard and supposedly monitor their money. To report to them what colour underwear a person is wearing when they come to make a deposit or start an account! That is not parliamentary.

There is nothing else left that these laws and regulations now do not demand. It is no longer just a case of the people from these territories and countries who have to give all this information. Dare a Caymanian, who has Caymanian connection of 200 years, to go to buy a draft, or to transfer some money, or open an account to see all the recommendations and references that he will have to get to be able to do it. It would seem that persons who are just beginning to work for the first time would not be able to open accounts.

Mr. Speaker, we laugh about a lot of stuff when we should be serious and contemplative. We hear about this Financial Reporting Unit (FRU) and all of that stuff affecting this economy. We come in here and ask questions about it, and we hear that it really has no structure; it is here, there, or everywhere as the case may be. We ask, 'Tell us exactly, what is the situation?' We get letters from the Governor, and the Commissioner of Police who tells us one thing. We hear all sorts of stories. What that is doing, I suggest, to the people who would invest money in this country is making them nervous. If all that the Cayman Islands can now offer us is an assurance that we are going to get reported on, why do not we just stay here, suffer and bleed in the U.S., or Canada, or France, or Germany or wherever.

I believe that it gives reassurance to any would-be investor if they know there is an animal called FRU, that is precisely what it is, which law it is in, its practice and procedure, how it is structured and accountable to someone, somewhere, sometime. That makes for good business. These are things we need to start dealing with. The fact that we still have other slews of legislation to pass, we had better start looking at that and figure out how it is affecting us.

Now, we can say that we are not doing this and that for OECD but up until now all I see is that we have done everything the OECD wants us to do and we are on the verge of doing the rest that we have not done. Have we done an audit to see what we have lost or will lose by complying, like Price Waterhouse did, to see how we were not complying? I do not know. I know there are persons bobbing around here every now and then, who pretend to be geniuses and they have all of that figured out. People, like me who ask questions like this are the most awful people in the world for they occupy high places in the structure of government. I am not speaking of the Honourable Financial Secretary or the Honourable Attorney General or the Honourable First Official Member, I wish to make that quite clear.

Mr. Speaker, we have real things to work out. It is like the meeting with the Governor this afternoon. He saw, like we saw, and it was put to him straightforwardly that when we look at one thing we need to check others because one thing in itself is not the be-all and the end-all; it is a chain reaction. It is the way life is. We try to fix this one and something else happens. So, you had better look at the whole scope and then come to a realistic conclusion.

If we sit around and believe that the United Kingdom will not assist the efforts of the OECD we are lost before we begin because the United Kingdom is one of those countries. That country has to sit straddled between taking care of Cayman, Montserrat, Turks and Caicos and others, and also take care of itself. Who is she going to take care of the most? Who elected Mr. Tony Blair? It was not I. I did not cast any votes for him. He has to answer to the British people just like we need to answer to the Caymanian people. So, who are they going to take care of first? Who does one believe she must look after first? We have to be fitted into her sphere of things, her agenda, and her obligations. We hear all the good stuff about the Bill of Rights, which keeps getting shot down in this place. We need to have that too. Not because we have so many in here hollering that we have it, but she says we need it so we must have it.

Mr. Speaker, we need to look at the whole business of government and the business of our responsibility to ourselves very seriously. This Motion gives everyone the opportunity of airing their opinions on this particular matter. It is very clear irrespective of what others say. I say it is very clear.

The FATF to the best of my understanding is the child of the OECD and they do not joke. You are told that you will be put on a blacklist and that is exactly what happens. I guess we realised that we could not convince them, they are so good. We are so well-behaved and Christian-like, and so forth, and so on. Well, they showed us by indirectly saying: 'Listen, you are a bunch of clowns. I said that I want such and such done and if you do not do that I am going to put you where I can nail you internationally and cause you to lose business.' Anyway, apparently we have gotten that part fixed but there are other things to be done. Let me say that I appreciate all, present and past, who have worked to bring us to a position where we, apparently, are now. So, my observations and statements are directed at no one personally because I do my best to keep myself focused on the bigger picture. I would go crazy if I got into all the pettiness that I see so often surrounding me.

Mr. Speaker, it is my distinct impression that the Second Elected Member for Cayman Brac did an exceptionally wide research on this Motion. I do not think there was any other area that he could possibly have spoken on. He covered all areas. When he winds up, I guess, he could say that I have said what I have said.

This is a grand opportunity and I am adding my thoughts to the matter. The fact that the Government of the day wishes to go on this Friday night to be finished, I wonder if there will be other speakers. If it goes further into the night, whether anyone will be prepared to stop or whether it will be like the UK Parliament where they are still debating at 3.00 in the mornings, I will say what I understood one former Director of Civil Aviation to say: 'The only thing that keeps me hanging on is to see what will happen next.'

Mr. Speaker, as to stimulus measures I have a few ideas. If we can possibly accept that the way to stimulate an economy is not to tax it then we would talk about tax reduction. I say again, like I said at the time of the Budget, we need to reach the point of getting a flat tax on customs' duties. If it is 25 percent on this, or 20 percent on that, or 15 percent on that, or 10 percent, take the average and see if it gives you the same amount of revenue over a three-year period and come in with a flat tax. It makes life easy for everyone. Of course, we might want to keep a higher tax on the luxuries such as diamonds, et cetera, that no one really needs in order to live. So, I recommend a flat tax and I believe that will automatically reduce the cost on certain items particularly the consumables which we all need. For one thing, it gives a better opportunity for survival.

I think the country needs to move to a point where it works out a means of charging a percentage fee on the business that is done in the Cayman Islands. For example, I read the other day where one-quarter's assets, of monies here, was $815 billion. That was the report of the Cayman Islands Monetary Authority. I think that, without any fuss to anyone, a quarter of 1 percent or a tenth of 1 percent, whatever, we need to get to a point where we put in place some kind of structure where we are benefiting just like all the other people who are making their millions here because of providing the vehicle for them to make their business.

Mr. Speaker, we have to get over the greed factor. We have to reduce the cost for services and goods. The supermarkets, the shops and everything needed to get to the point where they are prepared to take a margin of profit so that they can have a profit and they can replace their goods but it is not that extravagant. Certainly, the people who offer services, technical and the rest of it need to be realistic in their charges too.

As I have said we need to reduce taxes and not increase them. I do not know if anything can be done in this country we love so much unless Government is going to cut its expenditure. There is more serious wastage in this country than there has ever been and it needs to stop or it needs to be drastically reduced through whatever legal means necessary. We have to get away from the position where Government pays $10 million to build a building and people in the private sector can build the same building for 50 percent less.

Mr. Speaker, we need to look at subsidies, which to my mind is public money that is given or paid into certain agencies of Government. Government subsidises a lot of things. Government subsidises people who need and those who do not need socially. We need to get to the point on things like that where government money pays out on the basis of need and not to satisfy greed.

We need, and it is very much in the news right now, our airline, Cayman Airways. Let me state up front that no one has convinced me, as yet, that that should become something we hear about of the past. We have to be very careful. We need to carefully examine its operations because of the amount of money we have put into it over the years. Is it justified? We have to determine that. Someone has to have the will to make a decision once and for all. Perhaps, this is the best time ever in our history to do so.

If there are things outstanding, like requirements of the Civil Aviation Authority, or of our maintenance, or anything, it ought to be fixed now once and for all. After that everyone moves on with a clean sheet. So, we need to look seriously at subsidies, which is all part of reducing the cost to Government. We have to reduce expenditure.

On the question of Cayman Airways we have to look at airfares when we talk about tourists coming to our destination. We have to reach a position where the ridiculous situation of sometimes up to $400, in what we call high season . . . It is a pity we cannot just have one season and charge per seat on the airline and let that be an attraction in itself for people to fly Cayman Airways. I understand we have a lot of accountants associated with it. What a pity we cannot do that? We need to reduce the costs of people coming here, reaching our Island. For sure, once they get here we need to stop killing them by the charges for accommodation. The prices of some of these accommodations would put them into something that I do not even know exists, 'ten-star category' elsewhere. People are not dumb. In travelling; people, in particular, are not dumb. They travel and they can compare Puerto Rico with Jamaica, Barbados and the Bahamas. They are not dumb. We might prove ourselves dumb by trying to break off into them with high prices but there is also something called the Internet. In other places, they can buy hotel rooms sitting in their room at home. We better get real smart, real soon.

Turning to food and beverages, we have ridiculous prices here and, for the religious among us, I am not advocating any drinking of beer, but I am using that as an illustration. Imagine an American buying a Budweiser beer which is their beer; they visit the supermarket and pay $3.00 or $3.84 for a six-pack while here we have the gall to look in their face and charge them $5 for one can or bottle. We had better get real. Yes, CI$5 which pushes it up to US$6!

We better get over this business about 'You must tax this. It is sin tax. We do not want anyone to drink that awful brew.' You know what? More people drink than those who do not. So, we had better look at some adjustments in that area too. Now, if someone wants to tax cigarettes I would say go ahead and do that, because I have lived that route, having been one who smoked four packs a day. Thank God I got over that. I quit cigars too. As much as I like the taste it makes my throat hurt. So, we need to make some adjustments in beverages and what we charge.

Some of the prices that we charge here on food are ridiculous. Take, for example, a hamburger. Of course, the first thing you hear is, 'The duties on them are so high' and they are. In the amounts being bought relatively cheap in the United States, and brought here in volume, we do not have to charge so much for it.

Mr. Speaker, when it comes to the investment of foreign nationals, I do not buy the story that every person who comes here with $100,000 we have to give them Caymanian status or permanent residence. I do not buy that story. The people who elected me and those I talk to in this country do not want that to happen. What I understand from them is, they believe the Cayman Islands are a good environment for them to come in. We welcome them to come to invest. We welcome them to make a profit. To take the money out of here as it is done every day of the week. No one is stopping them but we really do not want to give away what we call our nationality in that process. So, I do not believe that immigration as I hear 'dinged and dinged' all the time is stopping investors. Which investors is it stopping? Who owns every condominium in Cayman? Who owns every hotel? Who owns everything? I do not buy that story. It does not make any sense.

Mr. Speaker, I know what can be frustrating to an investor. If they need some people on a work permit—and I emphasise the word 'need'—that should be done quickly where proven necessary. They should be able to get a reply. An application, for example, to the Planning Board should not take too long because maybe those persons, although they have money, have gone to borrow money and they have deadlines to meet and so on. It is all well and fine for people to sit on these boards and take all the time in the world they want. They do not have any money hanging on it to lose. I think some difference can be made there.

I want to go back to the point made by the Financial Secretary that one of our biggest problems is our international image. Not that we have, in truth, given it to ourselves, it has been given to us. We have to get the truth out there through all of us. If we do not do that we are going to continue to have a growing problem.

Mr. Speaker, at this time I have said all I wish to say on this. Other than to say I think it does not speak highly of us when we consider all that has gone on here prior this afternoon. I think what we are saying now could have been said on Monday.

I regret, Mr. Speaker, if you or any other Members were going over to the Brac tonight. I think it has pretty much been nailed for you.

Thank you very much.

The Speaker: The Motion is open for debate. Does any other Member wish to speak?

The Honourable Minister for Tourism, Environment and Transport.

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: Mr. Speaker, not for one minute would I want any Member to lose their opportunity to speak their mind. I have served a long time and I know my Standing Orders.

My objections this afternoon were on the basis of Erskine May, which I contend says that the Motion is not proper before the House. The decision to carry on this evening—

The Speaker: I would like to remind you, that responsibility is mine. I approved the Motion, therefore, the Motion is being debated. Regardless of what your opinion is, I approved the Motion.

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: Mr. Speaker, it is a fact that you are the Speaker, but I have my opinion.

The Speaker: To set the matter straight maybe I should call your attention to Erskine May, 22nd Edition, page 441, which reads as follows: "Debate may also take place on the motion 'To take note'. This formula enables the House to debate a matter without coming to any positive decision. The formula is regularly used on select committee reports. It is also appropriate for use by a Minister when he wishes to put down a neutral motion; a motion for papers would be inappropriate in this case . . . The 'take note' formula makes withdrawal of the motion unnecessary. The rules about motions for papers being short, unprovocative and untendentious . . ."

So, Erskine May, 22nd Edition, page 441 is why I approved the Motion.

Please continue with your debate Honourable Minister for Tourism, Environment and Transport.

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: The whole of Erskine May is there which talks about tendentious matters as well. This is not a place for me (unless I have a point of order) to have any disagreement with you or try to explain because this is not a motion for that.

The Motion talks about the House resolving and this is not what this section in Erskine May says. Anyway, the decision to carry on this evening was based on the fact that the Mover of the Motion told Members he would be away on Monday. So, certainly, this move could not be said to be taking away his right to speak. This was giving him an opportunity to speak.

Furthermore, I would not have it said that we were trying to stop you or any Member from going to Cayman Brac.

The Speaker: I would like to speak on that point too.

I am paid by the month and I can stay here until midnight or tomorrow at 2.00 pm, if necessary.

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: Mr. Speaker, I wrote you a note saying that I realised that you might have wanted to go back to Cayman Brac but we have a Deputy Speaker, and that is what the Deputy Speaker is for—to take the Chair in the absence of the Speaker. I thought I would make those comments after the last speaker spoke.

There are no two ways about it, at present, there are various areas in our economy that gives me concern and, I should say, gives the Government concern. The downturn in activity is affecting far too many people adversely. I heard it said that we should not talk about what the last government did. I am sure that if those Members, who said that, were in this position they would be saying the same thing. The cold bare fact is the situation that the country finds itself in was not created in six to eight months.

I take this Motion, when I look at it to be like this: It is a direct Motion to lick this Government as hard as they could lick while trying to be friends with the Government saying: 'Well, we are not really hitting you; we are not asking for anything to be resolved; we just want you to take note.' Then lick us as hard as they could lick and blame us for everything that has happened. In truth, that is what has happened by both Members who spoke. Who else are they blaming but the present administration?

Mr. Speaker, I will not stop talking about the mess I found that the country is in. I certainly will not stop now. Maybe when we have turned around things we will have to stop saying, 'It was the previous government' but, as of now, the conditions in effect are wholly and solely the responsibility of the last government. My job and that of the new administration is to turn around some of these problems and I dare tell this country that we cannot do it in six months. There are hard decisions that need to be taken and we must have the political will to do it. I would daresay that both Members raised some of them. Some good things have been said concerning the causes of the effects of the downturn in the economy. Cost! Cost cannot be blamed on this Government except for the few dollars that were raised on certain items.

Mr. Speaker, let us really examine that. When the fees were put up by the last administration . . . and the truth about it is that I listened to both of them in the past on other speeches and they both said the same thing. We believe that while the Cayman Islands lost $10 million to $15 million in revenue, the people were not getting it correspondingly in the cost of living. I heard those Members say that before. I have said so and there is nothing to tell me otherwise.

The Government has a hard job and we have to do it. I believe that we have an administration capable of doing it. We are not going to get it done in six months. Does anyone believe that this administration can turn around the malaise with Cayman Airways in six months, as deep-rooted as some of the problems are? Now, we have a golden opportunity to make some changes and I believe that everyone wants those changes. As far as I am concerned, they will be made.

Mr. Speaker, the Cayman Islands have to change to be competitive and to be better prepared. It takes a change in attitude, in our whole environmental culture, the way that people were used to doing things. It is just not so anymore and we are going to have to be prepared to change or we will be left behind. We can blame it on OECD, or FATF, or Immigration. It is time for us to take note and for all of us in this House, who are well paid to stand up and say, 'Put politics aside, ladies and gentlemen of the Cayman Islands, citizens, dear friends, this is partly your problem as well as mine.' It is all ours. Attitudes need to be changed. That is not easy to turn around. Let us not point fingers at any individual, but it is our job to try to turn it around.

The cost in this country is high for those who live here on a daily basis much less for visitors. When it costs a family of four to come from Houston just about $3,000, people will stand up and take note, when perhaps they can go to the Bahamas for $1,600. The things that cost are the things that someone holds dear, and say: 'You cannot do away with it.' Airfare is one of the biggest cost factors in this country and we have to realise it. Mr. Speaker, you are not going to find the same quality hotel cheaper in the Bahamas than here. You will go there and spend $300 or $400 for a night and you can also do that here. You can go spend $5,000 in occupancy per night there. You can practically do the same in some sections here.

Mr. Speaker, I am for change. I hope I can be an agent for positive change. In the tourism sector there is a vast amount to be done and I have been trying to keep Members and the public up-to-date with what I found. That is what I am trying to do and what I think I can get accomplished in a few months' time. No marketing was done—I have said that. We came in and we tried to put a marketing plan in place for summer. The truth is, it will be of some help but it really will not be as effective because time has long past. There was none put in place! There was no marketing strategy and management policy.

I have to be away from next week Thursday to a middle-of-the-year annual meeting which is usually held by the Ministry. As I understand it, I have to go to Missouri. Why in the world did anyone book from last year, sign a contract which I cannot get out of, to carry me to Missouri . . . carry the whole management team from around the world to Missouri at 150 rooms? Now, I would rather it had been Little Cayman, where I could throw out my line on the dock at night after working in the day . . . and I would catch some fish too!

Mr. Speaker, these are the kinds of decisions that were made and are affecting us. That is just mildly. I have been bringing Members up-to-date by statements and it is not finished as yet. They know me to be a better politician than that. There is going to be more.

Tourism will turn around. It takes hard work. It is going to take the changes I spoke about in the Budget debate and the plans. To get it all done we have to re-examine the strategies of the department.

They paid for a man to come from Michigan to tell them what was wrong. He told them what was wrong and he put it to them in writing. They did not do anything! If I had that document from November I would not have said that it would take a year for me to start the strategy that I wanted. I got the document afterwards and I am going to bring back this man to update it. He is coming on the 14th or 16th of August 2001.

The management policy for tourism will begin before the year end. I expect to table it in February 2002. This is a five-year management and development policy. It takes time, and I can tell the Opposition, if that is what I have to call them. I do not think that I should because they are too friendly.

Mr. Speaker, when I get cursed and blamed, and the Government gets blamed for making changes we can see why changes have to be made, whether it be in strategy, personnel, or in spending.

One of the Members talked about public relations. We have been working. We have put in place a Secretariat, which is under the Honourable Financial Secretary and his department, to examine and give interpretation to international initiatives so we would be in a position of knowing what is happening rather than always reacting after the fact. This will also give accurate account of the measures we are taking in the international arena, and the results of those measures. You cannot say that something positive is not being done. As much as people may think it is their own home and can change it, it just happens. Yes, sometimes in your home you can change things and it will happen quickly but sometimes it does not. Not in government; it takes time, and that is going to cost the Government in the region of $1 million.

I believe the right thing was done and I support it; it will be effective. In fact, I think I can say, although it is not my responsibility but from what I see and hear, it is doing the job it was created to do. We can thank the Honourable Financial Secretary and we can tap ourselves on the shoulders a little bit too.

We are looking at various ways of effectively dealing with the matters affecting us but we cannot do it in a hodgepodge manner. We have set up the Fiscal Advisory Committee (FAC) and its Chairman is, Mr. Robert Bodden, or Mr. Bobby Bodden, as he is known. That is to realign our revenue base, to create the necessary stimulus for growth in our industries. It is not just looking at one area; it is looking at the whole matter. A wide cross-section of the business community sits as members.

Some of the things being suggested to help create revenue are, for example: looking at changing planning to allow for taller buildings on Seven Mile Beach; trying to get speedier approval; changing planning and building heights. We believe this will set off a real development of that area. One of the problems we have is, we do not have much beach, and I believe we are going to see a serious redevelopment of the older buildings and properties as people take advantage of what will give them more revenue for what they own.

There is the medium-term financial strategy, which prioritises Government expenditure and programmes, and keeps them in line with available resources. This is very closely linked with the recurrent expenditure.

Members talk about the Loan Bill and revenue that we have to raise from taxes while all of them still hold out their hands with a long list wanting this and the next thing. One of the biggest expenditures is emoluments, which works out to be some 55 percent of recurrent expenditure. To bring it in line would mean restructuring and I wonder whether the 'kind' Opposition is going to be prepared to support any such policy of bringing our recurrent expenditure in line with what is sustainable. When we all campaigned, every one of us meant well. We all talked about taking the hard decisions that we knew would come. This, is one of those hard decisions and I hope, when the time is right fit and proper, that they are all going to stand up and say, 'We have to do this'. We are going to put politics aside and say we have to cut our cloth to suit our little pants.

Everyone has been talking about financial reform. We are busy creating the policy which would achieve good management and transparency we all talk about. People will be able to see and have information about what Government is getting for money spent. I think one of the last items the Member from Bodden Town spoke about was contracts. It takes reform and this is not something that happens easily.

The Minister for Education is busy working on his plans, which will enhance and educate our youth for years to come—changes that should have been made years ago. It will take guts and political will, and the support of this House to do it. Are they willing to do so?

The Minister of Community Development is moving forward all her areas, trying to restructure and make ends meet with what we have in planning the way forward.

When we all wanted a new hospital we knew it would cost. I said that from the day I set out, and I held that portfolio for one year. It is not new information that this cost is so high. From the previous administrations of 1984 to 1992, there were documents which said the expenditure was going to be high regardless, so it is not new. Mr. Speaker, he is busy. How can anyone say we are sitting back on our laurels and not making anyone know anything, when we are speaking and making statements to the House, to the Chamber of Commerce, to the Rotary Club, and to the media—the newspaper, radio and on television? No one can say that we are not addressing the problem. The truth is there are such deep-seated and hardcore problems which are not easy to deal with in a matter of a couple of months.

We said that the drive to spend $20 million or $25 million in a few weeks on road works with asphalt, as deep as I am tall, was too much and would affect us this year. That is not new. I said that in West Bay. Every night I said so and it is affecting us. It is not that we did not need new paved roads but it should have been more timely planned and implemented. They paid for road works and, although they are denying it, it is a fact. They paid for it and if they had not paid for it at that time they would have gotten them cheaper later on.

The paved road in West Bay, I told them not to do it because the Water Company had to go through and cut it up. 'Ah, ah, this is election time, baby, we have never had so much fun. Let us spend it. Let us tell them what a bad guy McKeever is at the same time and we will get back in.' Oh, what tangled webs they weave when they first practised to deceive.

Mr. Speaker, the amount of time and energy that went into getting the port plans which I found and which they said were only going to cost like $11 million. I know from just a review, not yet completed, that it would cost over $20 million.

One little instance, Cayman Brac now has a good runway and deserves it too. We had to pay approximately $300,000 because they were not able to get a guarantee. 'Go get it but we are not going to help.' They then had the temerity and the audacity to tell me I must not blame the last government. Well, who should I blame? I cannot blame those Elected Members now.

Mr. Speaker, do not say that. You can say that this Government must address these problems. By all that I have said, if I have not convinced Members that we are busy doing what we were elected to do then I am sorry I cannot make them understand that. The truth is that Members of this House, including the Backbench, are busy at work addressing community needs and attending to the functions of the community that need to be addressed daily. It takes time. People on the outside will criticise us. They have a job to do on the Backbench and I believe that we have a group on the Backbench that is capable, not to say that we do not disagree. I disagree with some of the things that have just been said by the Movers of this Motion but I believe we all want to get the same thing. I believe that we mean to get to the same thing but, as I said, the Opposition is a kind Opposition—beat you up a little bit and then hug you a little bit.

Well, if that is the way the House must operate to get things done, perhaps that is the best way to do it but I cannot allow them to say that this Government is not moving on all fronts, full speed ahead. The actions taken with Cayman Airways had to be done for safety factors alone. The truth is some of those things should have been addressed a long time ago and no one who really knows should say that is not so because the facts are there. If you do not address the problems when you see them, they can only get worse.

You know, when you get hit by a prickly pear, if you do not take it out right away it will fester and suck you. We had to take those decisions. I believe the Minister and I know and I can say this: he has had some sleepless nights in recent times since these matters arose, and you say he is not working? Mr. Speaker, you can talk about honeymoon periods, I do not think I had any—not in this Government. From day one we were taking licks right, left and centre.

So, Mr. Speaker, the Motion does not ask us to do anything but take note and the truth is we have been hard at work addressing these issues. The Financial Secretary, the Attorney General, the Chief Secretary and the Members in their departments have been at work some nights until 11.00 pm. I leave there probably, the latest, besides the Minister for Communication and Works, and the Financial Secretary. There is only so much we can do as humans with the mess that we have, all of us. Let me just say to you, we cannot move ahead any quicker.

You might disagree that we have put back the duty. I have always believed when we have funds and we get a restructuring that we should remove the items but at the same time put machinery in place to ensure that it is passed on to the people who it is meant for. I have never believed in taking off without that kind of mechanism.

Mr. Speaker, as far as my Ministry is concerned, I have many, many miles to go before I sleep.

The Speaker: The Motion is open for debate. Does any other Member wish to speak?

The Second Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. Alden M. McLaughlin, Jr.: Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

I wish to start by commenting on the situation which has arisen this evening and which has led to the House sitting late.

Mr. Speaker, I should say first that, like the Honourable Minister for Tourism, I, too, understood that the Second Elected Member for Cayman Brac would not be here on Monday hence my support of the Motion for the House to continue late. If that were not the case either, as I understand it, his Motion would have fallen away or the business of the House would have been deferred and delayed in his absence.

I am sorry, Sir, what transpired has caused you some distress and concern about the conduct of Honourable Members of this House.

The Speaker: If I could interrupt you for a moment.

I think that the Presiding Officer deserves to be appraised of what is going on in the House and I have never been appraised by most Members when they are going to be absent. Please continue.

Mr. Alden M. McLaughlin, Jr.: I agree, Sir.

Mr. Speaker, when I had sight of this Private Member's Motion No. 18/01, notwithstanding my rookie status in this Honourable Chamber, I wondered what that Motion proposed. It seeks a resolution of the House and, at the same time, proposes that the House debates and takes note of the present state of the Cayman Islands' economy.

My review, Sir, of the relevant section of Erskine May seems to indicate that the Motion, as framed, is a contradiction in terms because it seeks both a resolution and that the House do take note. Further, my reading of Erskine May seems to indicate that the process or a vehicle of a 'take note motion' is to be utilised only for unprovocative, uncontentious matters which, more importantly, will result in short debate. Added to that, when one considers the text of the Motion, it certainly appears to me that the effect of the Motion is to begin, again, a debate on the Budget and Throne Speech. Judging by the tenor, the content and the length of the debate of the Mover of the Motion, when he spoke, if I closed my eyes for a moment I thought I had been taken back to March of this year, indeed, when this Honourable House debated the Throne Speech and the Budget.

I, like other Honourable Members, am painfully aware that certain sectors of the economy are under stress. I live it. I am one of four representatives in the most populous district of these Islands. Like other Honourable Members from the district of George Town, many of that populous regularly beat their way to the doors of either my house, or my MLA office, or indeed, this Honourable House to tell me, and other Members, their problems resulting from the slow down in the economy. So, the discussion of possible ways to stimulate the economy is not something that I would seek to discourage.

Nearly every Member of this Honourable House utilises almost lengthy exercises, the delivery of lengthy treatises on this economy and on the issues which this Motion now invites debate on: the recent tax matters, the OECD initiatives and possible stimulus measures to revive the economy. There was wide ranging extensive lengthy, and some may even say onerous debate, on these issues a mere few months ago.

Mr. Speaker, we all have a duty to act responsibly. If we insist that the Government of this country has to spend 90 percent of its time sitting in this Chamber talking about what needs to be done or listening to it, when do we expect them to get on with addressing those very issues? We were here from March until May, and we have been here since sometime in June. We have been here about a month. We will be back here again in September and again in November. At each meeting of this House so far we have debated the Budget or Throne Speech, and now, something which equates to it. We will have one again in November. We would have had three sets of debates on the Budget and Throne Speech in the course of this year.

Now, with the best will in the world, being as charitable as I possibly can, that is not the best use of parliamentary time. Members, I believe, can be forgiven if they become impatient with hearing the same rhetoric over and over again.

I have listened to what the Mover of the Motion had to say and to his able Seconder. I also listened to the words of the Honourable Minister for Tourism and I must confess, Mr. Speaker, that I did not hear one novel idea, one area which had not been traversed either by those Members or other Members of this House during the course of debates on either the Budget, Throne Speech, pension, statements or on questions given by the Honourable Ministers. It is the same thing over and over again. We are talking just to hear ourselves talk or perhaps we believe that somehow saying it over and over again we will impress those whom we represent.

The people of this country are sick and tired of hearing the talk. They want the Government to get on and do something. I believe the Government is doing their very best and that they are doing things. If we prevent them from doing those things because we insist that we have to sit here and be beaten up over and over again by the same tired rhetoric, we are doing this country a terrible disservice.

Mr. Speaker, I was—

The Speaker: We have to stop now to change the tape. I have to interrupt you for a few moments. You may be seated while there is a change of tape.

[Pause]

The Speaker: The Second Elected Member for George Town, please continue.

Mr. Alden M. McLaughlin, Jr.: Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

I was disappointed and quite frankly, appalled at a statement which the Second Elected Member for Cayman Brac made in his reference to the FATF delisting. I know because I looked across the Floor of this House and I understood because of my involvement in that process, how very stung the Honourable Second and Third Official Members must have been by the suggestion, implication or inference that somehow they and the Government or the negotiating team did not take this process seriously.

Sometimes I wonder if, in fact, there should not be some legislation which requires that when one has the right to free speech there are certain conditions attached to it which require responsibility, especially when we do so in the context of this Parliament over these microphones to the country.

I take this responsibility; it is a tremendous responsibility. There are fifteen of us elected to represent these Islands and I sometimes wonder if all Honourable Members fully appreciate what that means. There are times when all of us wish to make a point and become very, perhaps over enthusiastic in the attempt to make it. We need to learn to exercise restraint and judgment when we stand on the Floor of this House to exercise that very, very important right. I am not going to say any more about that Mr. Speaker.

I played a limited role in that exercise in the period I was there and from the side lines before I was there. I have some appreciation of the time and effort put in to get the Cayman Islands where it is by a large number of people but, in particular, by those two Honourable Official Members who were there from start to where we are now, with one Government and with another. I wish to record what I believe is the country's appreciation for their sterling efforts over that period and continuing.

Mr. Speaker, these are the times that try men's souls. There are onslaughts from almost every quarter and when people are in a situation or situations where they struggle to pay their bills it is inevitable that they are going to blame the Government, whoever that government is. No matter how much effort the Government is making; no matter how short a time the Government has had to address these things, Government must be responsible. We have to live with that. That is just the way it is. I believe that the country has got to come to understand that with the new Government, when they were elected, they were not handed a magic wand which they could point at every problem and immediately, because the last Government had been banished, everything would now be made right.

I encourage the Government to be as communicative as possible and to articulate what they are doing and why they are doing it, as often as possible. However, I do not believe that it is productive for us to insist that every meeting of this Honourable House will debate the Budget and Throne Speech all over again. That, Mr. Speaker, is a monumental waste of ours and the country's time. There is far too much to be done for us to be repeating ourselves, revisiting the same issues over and over and over again until other Members become tired, annoyed, disgruntled and have a situation such as has just transpired this afternoon. I do not believe that I can add more to this point and I shall sit down and pray that all other Members who speak will be as brief as I have been. Thank you, Sir.

The Speaker: The Motion is open for debate, does any other Member wish to speak?

The Third Elected Member for George Town.

Dr. Frank S. McField: Mr. Speaker, I will not be here on Monday. I should hope that Members will, at some particular point, adjourn this Honourable House and continue this debate on Monday seeing that perhaps there are others who might want to make their position known and, of course, the Mover of the Motion will be given the opportunity to reply.

I do not think that what happened in this House today was all that severe and I must compliment you for being able to maintain a sturdy position in the Chair over all the debate. I feel a little tired too and I would prefer to be at home. So, the mere fact you do have the strength and the constitution to bear with us, speaks a lot about your mental and physical health. Sometimes just being tired can make us feel good.

Mr. Speaker, I believe that politics is an outdated ritual that if I could abolish it I certainly would. Although we can say that we should have patience with regards to the governments once they are elected, the government that is elected always leaves the silver bullet for its own undoing. That silver bullet is always developed on this side, in the Opposition, because government oppositions in criticising sitting governments are usually too casual about solutions. They make everything seem so simplistic and, at the end of the day, when they get the support of the people they receive it on this same simplistic level. It is hard after you have acquired that type of simplistic support to then try the process of educating people to let them understand that government and society is a much more complicated process.

We have heard Members here today, like we have heard them on many occasions, talking about government as if it is some kind of omnipotent institution. People who vote for government does not nection to all the issues that exist in society. So, why is it that we are going out there bringing all the issues and trying somehow to resolve them in here, as if we are the best qualified to not only collate those issues but to debate and resolve those issues?

Government has to get to the point and the quicker we, in the Cayman Islands get there the better off we will be. To the point where we begin to give back to the people the responsibility for what goes on in their community. The whole idea that politicians have the solutions is a false start to begin with. Therefore, to even attempt to suggest where we need to start, in regards to the present economic crisis, it might be a false assumption to believe somehow that Government could redress the situation.

We know that the Cayman Islands' is a very costly environment. We know that the cost in the Cayman Islands is partly the result of products not being produced in the Cayman Islands. They are produced elsewhere and the prices are determined elsewhere. They are imported to the Cayman Islands and then the Government puts a tax on these products at the port, and the merchants mark these products up in order that they might reach a profit.

In order to get the products here in the first place the same merchants have to go to the banks to borrow money. The capital they are borrowing in order to import these products is not Caymanian money. Therefore, the Caymanian economy does not dictate the terms of interest that is placed upon the money that we use to do business. It is very important for us to break it down for people so they can understand how business begins to move forward. 'I want to go into business but I do not have the capital because I have not had three or four generations of merchants in my family who have accumulated over a long period of time sufficient capital for me to go into business without borrowing. Therefore, I have to go to a bank, which is an institution that deals with surplus profits which have accumulated in other countries or jurisdictions over a long period'.

So, Mr. Speaker, the way in which wealth is first of all introduced to the Cayman Islands, is not necessarily something that we control to begin with. When the wealth is invested in our economy in the sense that goods are purchased abroad, brought to the Cayman Islands and then distributed for sale in the Cayman Islands, we as a people do not have much control. When growth occurs we have to bring in services in the form of skills and labour, and again, that is important. So, we are living in a society that would be more expensive than other jurisdictions.

Let us take the example of Mexico where you have an abundance of labour and attempts to accumulate capital, and to generate a national economy in terms of the manufacturing sector; the agricultural sector; the industrial sector; and the financial sector—all those sectors of the economy have been built up over a long period of time in order that they develop a national economy.

Calling for plans which will resemble plans in existence in countries that have national economies or striving to continue to develop national economies means developing countries. The Cayman Islands is not a developing country simply because we are not developing a national economy or a national economic strategy. If it were to focus on a national economic strategy it would become a developing country automatically. It is not into that particular phase of understanding of production, distribution and consumption. It allows international capital to come into the Cayman Islands and operate, in such a way, that at the end of the day we feel we have benefited along with the persons who have invested. That happens because there exists in the Cayman Islands a kind of laissez faire type of capitalism.

Now, if we are talking about plans which are structured in such a way that it would support those persons who are still in the age of nationalistic development of economies then we are talking about regulations. At the end of the day we are talking about a kind of economy that would not necessarily be compatible with an island this size, the population, the soil, the resources and all the other things we have.

Let us continue to move and stay away from that concept of a national economic strategy which is nationalistic in that particular sense and strives to somehow be motivated and dictated by economic factors within its geographical boundaries. A country which tries to manage, maintain and control the way in which the resources are distributed; doing only what its population can do

The way in which we have developed at the time when we entered the capitalistic reign of development, and the point of how we are dealing with financial capitalism is a result of the way we are. Mr. Speaker, we are at a different point. In fact, the resources brought to us are human resources. We are not necessarily the owners of those human resources but the latter operate within our jurisdictions to provide services to people outside our jurisdiction in the case of financial services. In the tourist industry the foreign labour operates within our jurisdiction to provide services to people who live outside our jurisdiction.

We have a kind of economy that does not necessarily lend itself to the same kind of analysis we would find in other jurisdictions. We cannot take an analysis that has been developed in another jurisdiction and transplant it to the Cayman Islands and expect that at the end of the day we will produce a very clear understanding of our particular problems. We need to be careful there.

There are areas I believe we can work towards in order to prevent ourselves as a Government assisting the private sector from going into the black hole. Obviously, if the private sector is having a difficult time in terms of reaping the types of profit they desire from investment, for Government to create burdens by way of taxation, this will create more difficult conditions there.

So, how can Government resist and avoid the pitfalls of having to develop more reliance upon taxes? Government can do that in a society like this by remaining small and impotent to a certain extent when it comes to the whole concept of state where the thoughts are: 'We are the government; we are the big guys. Big is better and the bigger government gets, the better it gets'. If we can somehow stay away from that thought and make decisions when it comes to our government leaning enough so that it does not become oppressive to the people, this will prevent government always having to go back to the people to get fuel in order to give back, entice and coerce them somehow to vote it (government) back in.

This particular trend of trying to distribute resources to the population at a very rapid stage over, say, the last ten years, has been responsible for some of the pitfalls we find ourselves in today. What we did was to create an expectation that government could be responsible and provide people with things they could not extract from the economy themselves by virtue of being in the private sector. So, the subsidy had to come by government seeking to collect revenue in order to redistribute that revenue to people. Therefore, people would arrive at the standard of living within a very short period of time. In fact, this has caused part of the issues we are now dealing with. The hospital is one good example.

Mr. Speaker, where we are now is because there is a slow down. We see that the slow down means if government attempts to take any more resources from the private sector in order to channel it off in what would be non-productive social control type of activities it will stifle the productive part of the society. Government at the end of the day is a non-productive part of the society. It is a social control institution that is perhaps necessary for the good order of the society.

When government needs to pull more and more financial resources from the productive institutions in the society in order to feed its non-productive social control, what can happen at the end of the day is that those institutions can be smothered. Government, being benevolent, believes it is always justifying those particular activities, saying it is doing them in order to help because we know what the solution to all these problems should be but, of course, we do not know.

I think at the moment we need to continue to have the private sector, the Government with partnerships and the dialogues that we do have. I think it is probably more important for government to have dialogue with the private sector than for them to continuously be having dialogue with the Members of the Legislative Assembly with regards to these particular economic issues. I guess when the time comes for people in the opposition to form their government and their economic policies they will have their opportunity to implement these things. In the meantime, I believe, what needs to be done is to give this particular Government the possibility to get out of the type of hole they found themselves in when they took over. I am not just talking about the financial hole. I am talking about the spending hole—that entire reliance upon spending money in order to get approval from people.

We need to get a little bit more involved in educating our people to go along with the type of changes which have to happen, not just in the institution of government but in terms of the expectations which the society has on government itself.

We have to get away from this idea that everything has to happen today and if it does not, then there is something wrong with the persons who are charged with allowing it to happen. I have said from the very beginning that I would become critical of this Government, when the time comes that I feel I have given them sufficient time to put their policies in place and to reap some of the possible benefits of their policies. My main challenge had been, at least, until I was elected, my criticism of the way in which the past government had operated the financial and social policies of the country.

We need to understand, as was said by the Second Elected Member from George Town that, we cannot dance around these issues over and over again without making any headway simply because it is our right to come into the Legislative Assembly to debate and to bring motions. I feel these debates will come back in November and I do not think it is too late a time to really rise to the occasion and provide the Government and the society with some type of critique for what has happened in that physical year, which was between March and November.

With regards to the additional taxes in terms of the import duties, everyone knows what my position is on that—it should never have happened. We cannot say that government taxation is responsible for what has occurred in the economy, as the Republicans are arguing, in America. The idea being to have less taxes or give people tax rebates, at this particular time, would help the American economy to move forward. That is not necessarily an argument that has yet proven to be correct.

My point with regards to taxation is simply this: we do not want to always be looking for new taxes as the solution to our problem. We should be looking for newer, better and cheaper ways of running our government. We should, if possible, be talking about the fact that if government has to spend $10 million to build a building the private sector could build for $5 million then we know it is not just a problem with one government but a problem with any government. So, the same problem the last government has, the present Government will have and the other government will have when it is made up of the opposition, again, because all governments seem to run into the same thing. They always need to spend more to achieve the same things that people could have achieved in the private sector for much less.

Experience should lead us to the point of trying to say that this Government should begin to say it is going to get rid of more of its economic roles, then allow those roles that can be fulfilled in the market place to be performed by the private sector.

That brings us, of course, to the very big and controversial question of Cayman Airways that no one is going to speak against. Do you know why? Because it is all a part of maintaining what people consider are their expectations. If we believe that government does not have the capacity to build a building for $5 million and the private sector can build it for $10 million, tells us that Government needs more money to run an airline than the private sector would need. The same logic must apply unless it is only different in the airline business. Is it only different in the airline business?

What I see with regards to management is that when it is made up of persons who somehow feel they are not just answerable to their customers but to a nation and to politicians, then management has to achieve much more than what they are there to achieve.

I believe the Government has come looking for money with regards to taxes because the airline is costing money. Other things are taking money but the airline is certainly costing money, lots of money. This Government is going to come back to ask us about saving the airline. People want to save their national pride and, obviously, people have been told that their pride is in seeing and having a national airline rather than a Government. The airline does not have to come and force more and more taxes upon them. Which is going to give me greater freedom? Flying Cayman Airways or not paying taxes on my property? People will have to ask themselves these types of questions.

Let us not beat about the bush over petty economics. Let us get to the heart of the matter. If we believe that the private sector can build buildings cheaper than Government, why is it that the private sector would not be able to manage an airline better than Government? Let us think, in debating this Motion, if anything can be of benefit to us about what we are going to do with regards to Cayman Airways.

I believe from the time the airline was started I wrote an article for The Voice with Mary Lawrence and James Lawrence, entitled "The Pitfalls of Petty Nationalism." When Mr. Jim Bodden changed from the national airline of Costa Rica (LACSA) to create Cayman Airways we understood, from the entire debate around it, that national pride was one of the things that caused people to want to go into this experiment.

We have derived great benefits over the years from Cayman Airways. However, is it possible to think that perhaps we have come to the point where we will be better off without Cayman Airways being in the hands of the Cayman Islands' Government? Maybe I seem too radical to say that we do not need an airline. We do not need an airline to be managed by an institution that has proven all over the world that they cannot manage commercial enterprises. Whether or not it is in the Cayman Islands, Great Britain, or Germany, wherever it is, nationalisation of industry has always proven to work counterproductively. So, if we do not want the Government to come in November to ask for more taxes then we know where we might have to make the decision. I have the feeling that it is going to come and what I am going to be asked is to say whether or not you, Mr. Speaker, and others should have the luxury of a jet to take off from Grand Cayman to Cayman Brac. Whether or not you will have to fly in a prop plane is one of the considerations.

This is not an economic consideration. This is a consideration that has to do with how benefits are distributed to citizens by government. In order for benefits to be distributed to citizens by government, revenue must be collected by government from some place in order to distribute those benefits. I am saying that if I have to decide whether or not to pay additional taxes in this country, I prefer to ask, first of all, if I were to privatise that airline—and not having to look for $5 million to $15 million per year for subsidy, not having to bail the airline out when in crisis—I would swallow my pride a little and say, 'Give the airline to the private persons to manage.'

The people who have mortgages and can ill-afford to pay the high interest on their mortgages will then have to turn around at some particular point and pay government every year additional fees on their property. You see what happens there, in order to maintain a benefit we have to collect resources and we end up collecting those resources from the people we say we are trying to distribute those benefits to at the end of the day.

So, government has to become a little bit more dynamic. Government has to shed some of its pride, arrogance and desire to focus attention on itself or on members of Government by having these elaborate portfolios. Cayman Airways will be the discussion because people are going to say, 'Hey, we want to shoot the airline down.' I have heard some Members in this Parliament who seem to have positions. My position is I am an independent Member of this Parliament because I know I do not share opinions and philosophies with a lot of people. It is about time that I get it through my head that we are not thinking the same way about so many things. I am going to be by myself and I am willing to be by myself with regards to this issue because I am not going to come in here and vote for any taxes to support any airlines to give anyone any special benefits.

I already said the time has come for government to show private sector investors that they should not fear taxes. If private sector investors know we are not going to be developing a government that is going to be depending more on some kind of taxation, people will be willing to invest. Of course, the immigration issue is important when we are talking about economics. There are some persons who want to treat it as if it is an ideological issue that can be treated differently from all these issues. The immigration issue is a very important part of the investment strategy in this country.

If we are going to have a government that is not flexible with regards to the rights which people accumulate as a result of producing and investing then people will hold their money when times are difficult. Right now, certain people would feel secure in this country knowing they are not going to be pushed out of the job market tomorrow and they will have the same equal chance that I have, simply because they are foreigners. Maybe they would decide to take the $50,000 they have saved over the last fifteen years and have packed off to their individual countries, bring it back here and invest in a house that would give our plumbers, electricians and small carpenters a job.

Of course, the question of immigration is an economic question in this country. If you are talking about how to revive your country and stimulate the economy of this country you cannot treat immigration as if it is something you can scorn.

Some people probably do not want to look at how I have outlined the economic development of this country. We are dealing with a geographical area and the importation of capital and the importation of human capital as well as physical capital that work together. Somehow we have come to a point where we resolve the exploitation or the use of human capital. It is just like a snake eating something and it has to wait until it digests before it can take on something else. We have come to a point with regards to the question of humans in our society.

Mr. Speaker, we do not want the Kirkconnell Supermarket to get any smaller. We do not want the volumes of people who are buying from the Kirkconnell's, Hurley Merren's and the Foster's to get any smaller, but just to maintain that. For them not to enter into economic crises as a result of not having enough people to buy from them means that we have to sustain a certain amount of immigration. We have to sustain a certain amount of population.

Mr. Speaker, there are a lot of us who do not understand that capitalism and its growth has to do with the growth of population. No society has succeeded in moving forward to an industrial type of capitalism without them having an increase in the population to increase volume. Whether or not that means going outside their own borders to seek their customers or improve their numbers in their country by immigration.

We need to understand that immigration will also result in certain types of social and cultural changes, and also in certain political relationships or linkages in our society. We have to evaluate some of the consequences of change but we know once we get involved with this type of economy there will be changes. There will be changes dictated by the need for profit relationships. We have to also take into account, social or profit relationships.

The way in which businesses manage profit relationships will bring other considerations into the policy besides the considerations brought by my naïve ethnic orientations or the ethnic orientations of another Caymanian. What is brought into the debate has to do with more than whether or not we can merely adjust; what is brought into the debate is a profit relationship. How is it possible to continue the profit relationship where people are encouraged to invest because they are making the kind of profits that make it desirable for them to invest?

There is no shortage of money in this country because we say that we have over $600 billion on fixed deposits. The banks here have tons of access to money but do the opportunities exist to make the kind of profits people need to make for the investment to be desirable? One of the reasons why these opportunities do not exist is because of the size of the population. Can you really take another supermarket? Can you really take another office building? Can you really take another set of hotels? So, at the end of the day, you come to a point in your society, too, where you have to juggle a few things. Whereas in America they might try to juggle taxes, we in the Cayman Islands might need to juggle other factors.

I believe, and I hope, that the Government will come with this, that there are people who would invest. We have always looked to the big investors—they come to build hotels, condominiums and all those things. There are small investors, small people as well. Someone might decide tomorrow to build a house for $250,000 or we have a hundred people who decide they are going to build homes in the Cayman Islands because this is where they are going to live. They are not going to rent apartments anymore; they are going to build homes. You will have a switch from the building of apartments to homes. Now, you would give some kind of security to these people—something that would allow them to believe that their jobs would be secure in the country. As long as they have some skills to sell they should be able to sell them and then start to invest if there were jobs.

The Speaker: May I interrupt you for just a moment?

Honourable Members, there comes a time when human conscience has to play a part. We have been here for a long time, and, as I can see it, we could be here longer than we have already been if Members speak the way they have been speaking.

I would like to know at this time because we have mothers who have children; we have civil servants who need to get along with their responsibilities. I need to know the Honourable Members who want to speak. Let us add up and see exactly how much longer we are talking about being here.

The Third Elected Member for George Town, how much longer do you anticipate speaking?

Dr. Frank S. McField: Mr. Speaker, like I said, I will not be here on Monday. At one particular point I did not want to speak but I think I will be finished in the next fifteen minutes. I will now round off a few points.

I, however, am of the opinion that there is no reason why there cannot be an adjournment. It might have been said but I do not believe it is the feeling of the House, if other Members are going to speak, that we stay here all night for this debate. I mean, we are not into that kind of sadism as yet. I hope not. So, we have no problem. Even I would stop right now.

The Speaker: I want to make it abundantly clear. I have no problem. I can stay here tonight and tomorrow too—continuously. I am canvassing Honourable Members to give me a conscious decision of how much time they will speak.

The Elected Member for East End.

Mr. V. Arden McLean: Mr. Speaker, I too would like to make some contribution to this Motion because I believe it is a worthy Motion.

Personally I voted to continue so that the Mover could complete tonight. He was supposed to be leaving the Island on Monday and the Motion would have fallen away. Mr. Speaker, I believe he has indicated at this time that he will be here on Monday. I believe it is time that we adjourn this Honourable House as soon as the Third Elected Member for George Town has completed his contribution.

The Speaker: Unless I misunderstood the Motion I thought it said “until the Motion is completed.”

Honourable Minister for Community Development.

Hon. Edna M. Moyle: The Government has no problem in adjourning the House as soon as the Third Elected Member for George Town has completed his debate.

The reason for continuation is because the Mover of the Motion indicated he was leaving the Island and would not be back on Monday. Therefore, if he is not going to be here on Monday then the Motion would fall away.

So, if you are prepared to allow the Third Elected Member for George Town to complete then the Government would move the adjournment.

The Speaker: If it is the will of the House I am prepared to stay here all night.

The Second Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman.

Mr. Lyndon L. Martin: Mr. Speaker, a motion was moved and approved by this House to take this Motion through to its completion. The motive stated for that, which I have to say I do distrust, was that it was in my interest.

I confirm to this House that I certainly will be here on Monday, but I would prefer that we complete this Motion here tonight in compliance with the Motion brought and approved by this Honourable House.

Dr. Frank S. McField: Mr. Speaker, we will move another Motion.

The Speaker: If I may say, I think, the suggestion made by the Honourable Minister for Community Development is a good one.

Let us move on. The Third Elected Member for George Town, complete your debate and then we will take a vote.

Dr. Frank S. McField: Mr. Speaker, thank you because I do not want to get involved in this kind of politics. I do not have any bone for it. Like I always tell everybody, I got here by myself, not just once but twice, and I do not have to deal with anything I do not want to deal with.

I am saying that the Government can do certain things to make sure they do not get any worse into this whole situation of expectations from the general public, and have to fill these expectations by taxing the general public. We need to avoid that particular syndrome in order that we do not find ourselves in a position we cannot get out of.

The other point, Mr. Speaker, is that I think the question of immigration is one the Government needs to pay some good attention to and come back to talk to us as soon as possible with regards to these issues. You know, I had a Private Member's Motion that I was bringing but I will be withdrawing it. I will be relying upon Government to talk to us about what can be done. I believe that it will help to improve the economy.

I believe that small people make money. All we have to do is to look at the amount of money transferred by the different wire transfer companies each month to see, in fact, that a lot of money being made in the country is being sent out of the country. The funny thing about it is that there are persons who believe: ‘Oh yes, they are taking the money out of the country.’ Whose money is it? The money is brought into the country as a way of giving people a reward for activities. So, the money is here to reward people for activities. If we find that people are sending money outside the country it is simply because people still have commitments outside the country. Whereas, if people had commitments inside this country the money would, of course, remain in this country.

One definite way of causing money that is circulated in the Cayman Islands to circulate beyond a particular point, would be where a foreign employee provides a service and is paid for the service. The money would actually mean that the foreign employer would then need a service and he would be able to pay for his service. So, continuing the circulation would be a much longer or wider type of circulation than where 60 percent of your workforce just gets the money and sends it out rather than needing a service within your particular country.

Now, many of the services that people need within our particular country are for those persons who buy food and pay rent. In a lot of cases we would say that as long as people are saving, the total amount of money that they would have normally circulated, if they were people who were permanent residents of our society, would be more, rather than people who are on work permits. This is simply because those on work permits do not know whether they will have a job tomorrow or the next day.

So, what we need to do is to treat this immigration issue a little bit more seriously. If some of us have taken a hard line position on immigration then I believe that is what we need to have. They also need to know that if they are going to have this hard line position on immigration then they are not going to be able to be as dynamic as they should be with regards to finding some solutions to the Cayman economic ills.

Definitely, our people need to understand a little bit more about the economy and the exchange of goods and services. There can be no economy if there is no desire to exchange. The desire to exchange has to do with need. If you do not need anything from people and they do not need anything from you then there can be no trade, so it is based upon need. The mere fact that someone might not have something and you have something, or they have one thing and you have another thing, does not necessarily mean at the end of the day that you should stay apart. As a matter of fact, opposites attract in trade.

The fact that some persons are looking to sell their labour and we might be looking in certain cases to employ labour, does not necessarily mean that the people who are selling their labour should find themselves at more of a disadvantage. The fact that some people are looking for a place to invest some money and we might be looking for investors because we do not have the money to invest does not necessarily mean that the investor should be treated as someone who is a burden. We have to understand that in a capitalistic society there are a lot of things that need to work together in order to produce a vibrant economy.

Mr. Speaker, I thank you very much and I will let this particular point end my contribution to this debate.

The Speaker: I shall now entertain a Motion for the adjournment of this Honourable House. However, I would ask the Honourable Member moving the Motion to move the adjournment until the completion of the deliberations on the informal meeting which I have called for all Honourable Members at 10 am on Monday.

The First Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman.

Mrs. Julianna Y. O'Connor-Connolly: On a point of clarification; if we have dealt with a substantive Motion moving the adjournment where the question was put and passed in the affirmative can we merely now proceed in moving an adjournment or should there be a motion of precision so we would not have two motions?

The Speaker: I am really not following you but the Elected Member for East End indicated that he wanted to speak. So, the Motion will continue debate on Monday.

ADJOURNMENT

Dr. Frank S. McField: Mr. Speaker, I move a motion to adjourn this House at this particular time, if I am allowed to do so, with a seconder.

Mr. Alden M. McLaughlin, Jr: I second that, Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: I would like it to be understood that the House is adjourning until the completion of the informal meeting called by the Presiding Officer for all Honourable Members, which will commence at 10 am on Monday.

Those in favour please say Aye. Those against, No.

AYES.

The Speaker: The Ayes have it. The House stands adjourned until the completion of the informal meeting on Monday on Monday, 23 July 2001, which will commence at 10 am.

AT 8.07 PM THE HOUSE STOOD ADJOURNED UNTIL THE COMPLETION OF THE INFORMAL MEETING ON MONDAY, 23 JULY 2001.

OFFICIAL HANSARD REPORT
MONDAY
23 JULY 2001
2.30 PM
Nineteenth Sitting

[Prayers read by the Honourable Minister responsible for Community Development, Women's Affairs, Youth and Sports.]

The Speaker: Please be seated. Proceedings are resumed.

Item number 2 on today's Order Paper, Reading by the Speaker of Messages and Announcements.

READING BY THE HONOURABLE
SPEAKER OF MESSAGES
AND ANNOUNCEMENTS

APOLOGIES

The Speaker: I have apologies from the Third Elected Member for George Town, the Honourable First Official Member responsible for Internal and External Affairs, who will be arriving later, and from the First Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman.

I would also like to tender my apologies for the late start, but it was absolutely necessary to have an informal meeting on procedure.

I would ask for the suspension of Standing Order 14(2) in order for Private Members' Motions to be taken on a day other than Thursday.

SUSPENSION OF STANDING ORDER 14(2)

[Moved by the Honourable Minister for Health and Information Technology]

QUESTION PUT. AGREED: STANDING ORDER 14(2) SUSPENDED TO ALLOW OTHER BUSINESS TO TAKE PRECEDENCE OVER GOVERNMENT BUSINESS.

Hon. Edna M. Moyle: Mr. Speaker, I think you have somehow missed item 3, Statement by Honourable Ministers. I do not mean to interrupt you.

The Speaker: I beg your pardon. We will revert to item 3, Statement by Honourable Ministers/Members of Government.

Statement by the Honourable Minister responsible for the Ministry of Planning, Communications and Works

STATEMENTS BY MINISTERS/MEMBERS OF
THE GOVERNMENT

CAYMAN AIRWAYS LIMITED

Hon. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Thank you.

Cayman Airways resumed operation of its Boeing 737-200 fleet as of midnight on Friday 20 July 2001 following just over a week of extensive reviews on all three aircraft as well as the airline's support operations. The independent investigation was carried out under the auspices of the Civil Aviation Authority (CAA), the regulatory body for all locally registered aircraft including the national flag carrier.

As Honourable Members of the Legislative Assembly will be aware, the Board of Directors of Cayman Airways temporarily suspended flight operations of the three 737-200s on 18 July, out of an abundance of caution to allow this thorough investigation to be conducted. On Friday evening last, the Director of Civil Aviation, Mr. Richard Smith, gave the all-clear that the CAA was totally satisfied the fleet could return to service with immediate effect.

The audit into the three Boeing 737-200s and supporting operations included all aircraft and engines, maintenance and engineering procedures and staffing, flight operations, company operation manuals, executive management, and the organisational structure of the airline. The aircraft engine manufacturer (Pratt & Whitney) were also brought in to carry out complete checks on each engine including a boroscoping procedure, which is technology used to test the internal workings of the engines and systems. The engines were further boroscoped again by another independent firm.

The head of the United Kingdom Civil Aviation Authority's Safety Division was also brought in to assist the local CAA with the investigation. The last few weeks have been a tremendous eye-opener for many of us involved with the national airline. I would like to publicly thank the Director of Civil Aviation and everyone involved in the review for their considerable efforts, co-operation, and to say that I believe, Cayman Airways is better off and will continue to be.

At this time I would like to announce that Mr. Michael Adam has agreed to assume the position of President and Chief Executive Officer (CEO) of Cayman Airways for an interim period and as such has full control of the day-to-day operations of the company. His responsibilities have been streamlined to allow him to concentrate solely on the duties of CEO.

The Board of Directors are now actively pursuing the recruitment of a permanent Chief Executive Officer. Other experienced individuals are also in control of key management positions such as Captain Kennedy Panton, Vice President of Flight Operations, and Captain Churchill Bodden, Director of Safety and Security. The maintenance and engineering department has also been restructured and has a new head veteran aircraft engineer, Mr. Fabian Whorms. An experienced Vice-President (VP) of marketing is also expected in post shortly.

This does not mean that the airline's troubles are over, Mr. Speaker, as the operating losses for Cayman Airways Limited (CAL) in the financial year 2000 are expected to be significant. While 2001 was actually performing better than forecasted, the recent necessity to sub-lease an aircraft and the repair and acquisition of new engines, will all have a negative effect on the year's financial position.

Honourable Members will be aware that one of the first actions taken by the new Government was the undertaking of a financial and business audit of Cayman Airways. This review was clearly needed and is being carried out by NCB Consulting Ltd., which is headed up by prominent certified public accountant and successful businessman, Mr. Naul Bodden.

This Interim Report from NCB has indicated that CAL could be restructured into a viable airline requiring little or no subsidy. The detailed development of the new business plan is now well underway and Executive Council will be provided with an update tomorrow on progress being made in that regard.

While there has always been both support and opposition for having our national airline, and this no doubt will always be the case, I believe that Cayman Airways should be given another chance, perhaps even if it is looked upon as a final chance to succeed. However, if the airline is to have a future, the organisational, operational and financial restructuring must now begin in earnest albeit in a very deliberate, sensible and cost-effective fashion. I believe Cayman Airways can be viable if it is allowed to be run as business. I also think that the employees must have a stake in its ownership structure. I also believe, personally, that privatisation should be looked at in the medium term.

In closing these brief remarks I would like to sincerely apologise to the travelling public for the inconvenience recent events have caused, and also to publicly thank the Board of Directors, Management, Flight Crew and the entire Staff of Cayman Airways for their dedication and effort during these last few very difficult weeks.

I would also like to take the opportunity to remind them all also of the tremendous work that lies ahead and to provide encouragement for us all to work together in harmony and as a team, to prove why everyone should be flying Cayman Airways. Thank you.

The Speaker: Other Business—Private Members'

Motions. Private Member's Motion No. 18/01 Prevailing Economic Conditions of the Cayman Islands, continuation of debate thereon. The Motion is open for debate. Does any other Member wish to speak? The Motion is open for debate. Does any other Member wish to speak? Last call, the Motion is open for debate. Does any other Member wish to speak?

The Honourable Second Official Member.

OTHER BUSINESS

PRIVATE MEMBERS' MOTIONS

PRIVATE MEMBER'S MOTION NO. 18/01

PREVAILING ECONOMIC CONDITIONS OF THE CAYMAN ISLANDS

(Continuation of debate thereon)

Hon. David F. Ballantyne: Thank you.

I was to make just a few brief remarks in relation to the Organisation for Economic Co-operation and Development (OECD) initiative since I think it may be germane to the issue. That initiative was the subject in the case of the Cayman Islands of an advance commitment which resulted not only in the Cayman Islands not being listed, but in gaining a negotiating position on what information exchange standards should be. This, in my view, has enabled the interests of the Cayman Islands to be best represented in that forum. I would simply say that this represents two years' work in progress and is ongoing.

Associated with the OECD has been the Financial Action Task Force (FATF) issue on money laundering. Mention was made in the debate about aspects of the Cayman Islands anti money laundering regime, including the Financial Reporting Unit (FRU). I have come to the view that it is time to shed some light on the operation of the FRU. With the agreement of the officer in charge of the unit, I have asked and am putting forward an open day for Members of the Legislative Assembly (MLAs) within the FRU so that they may have the opportunity of seeing what happens within the unit, ask questions they may have and be allowed to ventilate any concerns they may have within an informal but informative context.

I cannot think why this should not be offered to Members of the Legislative Assembly, since the FATF Review Group of the Americas had the opportunity of reviewing the operations of the Financial Reporting Unit, and I believe, were better informed as a consequence. I think that where there is ignorance. . . and I use that not in a pejorative sense of what is going on, sometimes it is easy to assume that nothing is going on; certainly, there is an air of mystery which would be better dispelled, if possible. So, at a time mutually convenient to Members I would propose for this to be organised.

On the FATF front, I do not need to emphasise that the recent de-listing was the result of about fifteen months' collective effort on the part of everyone, including Members of this House in which significant legislation was passed which had a direct bearing on the outcome since one of the main criticisms of the regime was that it was not mandatory.

I would say, too, that membership of the Egmont Group which is now in active operation, came just at the right time to combine with the laws that we passed, their implementation and visit by the review group. I believe, all these efforts persuaded the Financial Action Task Force that sufficient concrete steps had been taken and that the culture was maturing here. If there is a need for formalising arrangements further, let that be done, in my opinion, if the House is so satisfied and the Government puts it forward.

What I am saying is not in a sense of complacency, but rather relief that we are in this position. I suggest in relation to the Honourable Member's Motion that the Cayman Islands have achieved a platform which is on a level footing with international standards. I would suggest that on this platform the continued prosperity of the Cayman Islands is capable of being further built.

I accept that the United States position tends to influence the Cayman Islands. Within the OECD we are in quite good company. Among those represented there, the advanced commitment countries are Bermuda, the Isle of Man, Seychelles, Mauritius, San Marino, Malta, Cyprus, Netherlands Antilles, as well as the Cayman Islands.

In the OECD process, which is yet to come to any kind of conclusion requiring extensive consultation locally with the industry and within this House, the Cayman Islands are, I believe, well regarded. Not only are we involved in ensuring that legitimate banking privacy is respected, we are also involved in seeking to enable effective exchange of information, but in line with a defined commitment which has been made public. That commitment, in my view, is consistent with the position outlined by the U.S. Treasury Secretary in his recent release to the Senate Committee on anti money laundering. It is my view that we are acting in a way which is consistent with that position. Provided it is not more onerous than the commitment that has been given, it should in my view enable business to prosper.

Most importantly, on the OECD issue, the advanced commitment countries have set out their stall collectively which resulted at the last meeting the Financial Secretary and I, among others, attended in Malta. The collective position is that they will live up to their commitments and agree on how to exchange information on request, but on the basis that all OECD members do likewise to the same standard and on the same timetable. In the words that are much used, we can all operate on a level playing field.

In my submission, in closing, there has not been nor will there be, a surrender of the essential interests of the Cayman Islands. No one, and Treasury Secretary O'Neill acknowledged this, may impugn the right of a country to operate a low direct tax regime. That, at the bottom line, although I am no tax or financial expert, seems to me to be at least part of the key to the success of the Cayman Islands. I suggest that there is now an opportunity to move forward when we are in control, and to move forward in a proactive and productive manner. Thank you.

The Speaker: The Elected Member for East End.

Mr. V. Arden McLean: Thank you.

There is not a lot left to debate because of the amount that has been said on this Motion without repeating oneself. There are a few points I would like to bring to the attention of the Government.

We all recognise the economy is not what we would like it to be. Someone said we are not in a recession and I tend to agree with that. There is a slow-down but there is no so-called recession. Maybe it depends on who we talk to but, overall, I do not think there is a recession in the Cayman Islands.

Information tells me, because of having followed the country that this is one of the cycles we go through. In the early 1990s we went through the same situation here in the Cayman Islands. It appears that this is a little eight-year cycle we are hitting. I know the country is crying for something to stimulate the economy. I would like to point out that I, too, have tied the high cost of living in this country directly with the efficiency of the Government.

This Motion speaks to the recent tax measures. I believe the increase in tax is a direct result of new services of government and existing services needing to be serviced. I am not prepared to say we are totally inefficient, but I think it is time that the Government started looking at how efficiently the services are being run, thus reducing expenditure and the need for increased tax. I think that is rather simple, one follows the other. It does not always work out that way, and we have politicians building castles in the air. We also have to control that.

I will touch on another area. We talked about stimulating the economy in the context of construction. I believe we have used the construction industry as our measuring stick in this country for a very long time. The construction industry reflects the hotels and big office buildings in town. The question is who are the owners of these buildings? They are primarily owned by foreign investors. The crux of the matter is that we depend on construction to stimulate the economy, but on the other hand, we will not ease the restrictions on development. If we ease that, then the country cries that we are developing too fast. If there was ever a 'catch-22' situation, that is one.

I am no economist, but I am a realist. I look at life in a very logical manner. To get the construction industry up and going again, something the majority of our people depend upon, we have to ease some of the restrictions. We need to try to stop some of the special interest groups saying we cannot do this and should not do that.

I have always contended that since we are depending upon the foreign investment to build the infrastructure, and it appears that it will be a long time before we come to the point where Caymanians will pool their resources and start doing some of this infrastructural development, we are going to have to decide how much and how far, and how fast we allow the people to develop.

The other position which I took a very long time ago, is that while foreign investment is required to do the development, the maintenance of that development must remain in the hands of the Caymanian people. The day has come where we are feeling the crunch in the economy. The people who are out of jobs are the technical people, the vocational people. Why are they out of jobs? It is my submission that a lot of jobs are out there but they are being held by non-Caymanians because we continually allow these companies to be formed and do the maintenance on these buildings and Caymanians fall by the wayside. There has to be some control on it. We have to start controlling that.

If there is a large investment, other countries in the world attach certain conditions to it. For instance, in the construction of buildings I note that when an investment is proposed and approved other places in the Caribbean attach conditions to it stating certain numbers of the natives, citizens of that country, must be a part of that workforce. That is done to protect and assist the citizens of the country.

If we relieve some of those restrictions or define positions that special interest groups may have on these things to try and stimulate the economy, then, naturally, we must put in conditions whereby Caymanians have to be employed. They must be employed! We see the companies which are formed to do the maintenance. Caymanians can do the maintenance. This is all about diversifying our economy.

Why do Caymanians find jobs when construction is going on but they cannot after the infrastructure is in place? That is where the economy will stay on a level playing field. It will remain there to a greater extent than it is today. We are dependent upon construction.

It is my position that the Government or the country needs to start thinking about putting conditions of employment on any development in this country. It is not to run people away; we are just saying there must be a certain amount of people. Think about the service area of industry, such as work permits coming in for waiters and bartenders and others; we need to try to get our people into that field. What about painting, maintenance, changing of the faucets, gardening and other related issues in this area? This is part of keeping our people in jobs and maintaining a lifestyle we would all love to enjoy. There is nothing demeaning in being a maintenance man.

How many buildings in this country have a full maintenance staff of Caymanians? This is where we have to correct to some extent to keep our people in jobs. It is not only about seeing a four or five storey building going up, it goes much further than that. This is the same mentality we have taken from a political perspective; we want the buildings but we never think about the recurrent expenditure. We want the development, but we do not think about how we should ensure that those buildings contribute to the economy in our country. We need to look much closer at that.

Some Members spoke on the immigration dilemma this country is faced with right now. I want to endorse some of that. Recently, we met with representatives from the Foreign and Commonwealth Office (FCO). It was made abundantly clear to me, and other Members of this Honourable House, that if Cayman does not do something about it, they will. They were very adamant that you cannot allow someone to live in your country for twenty or thirty years without some security of tenure.

Her Majesty's Government has already dictated to us on certain issues this country tried to rescind or wanted to refuse. As you well know it does not work that way. Whatever Her Majesty's Government says, we have to do. Well, my position with immigration is: let us pre-empt them and do something about it. I believe that is one way to stimulate the economy.

I know when I took my time away from this country, some ten years, every cent I made came to Cayman. I do not expect any different from any foreigner in this country. If we have kept them here for thirty years, they must have contributed something to this country and some must have some savings to build a little house to stimulate the economy. I hasten to add that I will not support anything that is going to disenfranchise one Caymanian. I want to make that abundantly clear.

Certainly, before Her Majesty's Government passes a resolution in Council that will require us to do things that the majority of Caymanians may not necessarily want done, it is time that the fifteen duly Elected Members of this House started moving. Let us not sit on our laurels as was done before on other issues allowing it to come down on the people of this country like a ton of bricks.

There should be no surprises. We were all in the same meeting. Some people say that there is nothing wrong in being the minority, as long as we are in charge. Sometimes that works, but not always. I believe that there can be some dialogue and some decision. This has been floating around for too long. For too long the Immigration Law has been amended in a piecemeal fashion and no one—not even me who can trace my family back four or five or six generations in this country—knows what he is, except to get up and pound his chest and say, 'I am Caymanian'.'

We need to define what Caymanians are. The time has come for us to address it. For years we have been afraid to address it for fear we will upset the apple cart. The intent is not to upset the apple cart, it is to treat people with some equality and allow the Caymanians to pick from that apple cart also and not have to wait for the bottom where the apples are all crushed.

The other issue I would like to touch on is interest rates. I am encouraged to see that interest rates have come down. Of course, they say if America sneezes we catch a cold. Well, every time Greenspan goes to Capitol Hill and lowers the rate, we get a lower rate. Now that is unfortunate. No one, as of yet, can tell me why we have so many points above the prime lending rate. Many have tried to explain it, and I may not understand very well. I want to know what prime lending rate is. What is included in prime lending rate? Why is it that we have to add so many points to the prime rate? Why is that the benchmark, and what does it include? Does it include a profit margin? Everybody shies away from this.

Why is it that the people of this country can see the rest of the world get low interest rates? Is it because the cost of doing business in this country is so high we have to increase by so many points above the interest rate? I agree the cost to do business in this country is high, but we make plenty money too. There is much to be made out of the same money the people deposit because the interest rates on the deposits are extremely low. You might as well keep it where the old people keep it, under your bed! At least you will have it handy and you will not have to worry about anyone going bankrupt.

If we can get the answer to what prime lending rate really is we will understand why the interest rate is so much higher. We will also understand why the economy is partially down also.

I just want to touch on the OECD and FATF issues. I understand these two organisations are a threat to our economy; in general, to the world economy. Anyone outside those member states is a threat to that. It is about economic power and political will to impose upon everybody what they want. It is not what others want it is how they would like it to be, or how it must be. I know that the Government has negotiated well with these people, but I hasten to warn that they do not come to that negotiating table like Caymanians do. Caymanians go in good faith and with good intentions; these people do not do that. They go straight for the throat and we are very dependent upon the financial sector in this country to keep our economy buoyant.

I heard the Members speak about Malta where they tried to hold us to the advanced commitment; I encourage them. The Second and Third Official Members said they stood up and said, 'No!' I encourage them to continue to say 'no'. These people are out to destroy anyone who is small.

Mr. Speaker, do you really think that the OECD which makes up probably half of the world's population is going to make 40,000 people control their money? No! They are coming at us, and coming strong. The fact that we got off their blacklist makes me elated. I believe it is the beginning and much work is to be done. The time has come for us not to roll over because we cannot afford to roll over to the OECD and the FATF; they are all one and the same. The time has come for us to stand up and preserve Cayman's financial industry. I urge the negotiating team to stick by its guns. Right now, the economy will revive itself, hopefully. If we do not continue to have our financial industry as a result of OECD and FATF, we have lost the central piece of the jigsaw puzzle. I do believe that any Member would stand behind the negotiating team to preserve our financial industry. We may go down, but let us go down kicking.

I would like to congratulate the Mover and Secunder. I believe it is necessary these initiatives and motions like this, particularly when the economy is down, be brought to the forefront so that the public can understand what and how legislators see this economy and how it is hoped it will be revived.

I would also like to say that anything done in this Honourable House is directed to the Government. It is time we did our work here in an efficient manner so that we can get Government out of here and into their offices then we can really blame them if anything happens. Let them get back behind their desks and we get out into the community and deal with the constituency. When they come back, the more time they spend behind their desks the more blame can be laid squarely on their shoulders.

One Member touched on a lottery. If it is going to stimulate the economy and revenue for the country, why not, as long as it is earmarked for a specific thing. I will not support any lottery that goes into the general revenue. It must be earmarked for education or health or something where the people will benefit.

I hope and pray that my comments will be of some help to the Government and this country. My appeal to the country is to not just rely on government. We all play a role in whatever happens to this country, not just the fifteen legislators. We all have a responsibility as citizens of this country to stimulate our own lives which in turn will stimulate the country. I believe Caymanians are still resilient enough to come out and do what has to be done.

I look forward to the statement the Third Official Member said he would be making to this Honourable House.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for Education, Human Resources and Culture.

Hon. Roy Bodden: Mr. Speaker, I listened to contributions of Honourable Members. My mind took me back to some time ago when a very good friend of mine, whose political acumen I respect and rely upon, said it was a bad time to be going into government because the country was on the verge of going into economic doldrums. I had no doubt that his vision was accurate because everything he had told me before, politically, economically and socially to do with the Cayman Islands, was accurate and appropriate. So, I was one person who expected that we would have this kind of experience.

The Cayman Islands are what I call a frontier society. Just like the Klondike, the Yukon, California and the Gold Rush. The frontier draws a lot of people, some transient, some more permanent. They all come for a stake. To a certain extent, in a loosely regulated society, you are going to have certain strains.

The Cayman Islands have turned full face from where we were several years ago when our seamen went to sea on ships flying flags of convenience and repatriated their incomes here, to the point nowadays where many thousands come here seeking work and repatriate their incomes elsewhere. They buy drafts, put them in envelopes, and send them away. Should some consideration not be given to them leaving some of it here? Should we not tax that? It happens in other countries. I have lived in another jurisdiction; therefore, I am aware of what goes on. I know all about the non-resident tax, and when you are not a citizen all the things you have to pay and contribute to. Do you think you can just take your money and send it off just like that? These are some of the things we need to think about because the Cayman Islands cannot be a free-for-all. There is no such thing as a free lunch, and the advantages have to be first to the citizens of the country. The citizens of the country should be the last people to feel the pinch.

One of the things I realise about very successful countries—and for a long time the countries of the Orient benefited from this—they benefit from developing a national consciousness with regards to savings and there must be some way we can do the same. Caymanians, me included, are not very good savers. We have to understand that we will not be able to have financial and economic clout until we can get to the position where we can speak of income and savings in blocks. My advisor gave me some statistics that are frightening. The level of debt per person in this country is something that would make you cringe. Juxtaposed against the level of savings per capita, savings appear to be negligible.

What we are living in from the very beginning is a deficit kind of economy where the level of borrowings and loans triple or quadruple the amount of savings. So we have these strikes against us. When you consider that this is compounded by the fact we have people who are immigrants working here, and I do not have anything against them—they work, save their money and repatriate it. It makes the position even more sobering.

I have believed for many years we are paying for the mistake we made in our economic development. I said from the time I came in here we were measuring our progress on a faulty report card. At that time, income and wealth were measured in land. We sold and dispossessed ourselves of that to the point where I am frightened for the future if something is not done to address the lack of housing for certain elements of our society.

Now that the world has changed and we are moving to a knowledge-based economy, we are not getting ready for that either. We still operate in the traditional boundaries, so we have to move out of that. While speaking about the economy, it is not limited to the economy. We have to change our whole outlook; our whole philosophy; our whole education system; and our whole training system. We cannot cry over spilled milk. The land is gone. We have to retool, educate, and train our people to take advantage of the new methods of acquiring and retaining wealth. We have to prepare them for a knowledge-based economy. We have to get them into information technology and computerisation. We are not doing a tremendously wonderful job at that either. We are still hitched to the old stagecoach.

We have to face the facts about certain things. I contend that we need to take a serious look at this whole business of immigration and all these people who have been here for a long time contributing because they have money. Maybe we have to give them security of tenure, then they will feel better and let off some of the money they have, and the economy will be able to resuscitate itself.

I do not necessarily believe the Government should embark on deficit spending and budgeting. I believe we are not in a panic situation yet, and there are things we can do. We are a developing country and we have come so far by being conservative. Maybe we can liberalise a little. There are things we need to take in increments, and that is the way I say we should go. Rather than open up wholesale and get into a million things, we should take the incremental approach.

That is what the Government is minded to do; that is what the Government is aware of, and that is what the Government must do. I think in fairness, this particular political directorate realises that we came at a time when there were certain disadvantages. What should we have done? Should we have been cowards and say, 'We do not want the Government? We do not know what to do?' No, we have to rise to the challenge.

Just as the position we find ourselves in did not appear suddenly but was the result of crumbling over a number of years. So, too, the solution will not come automatically. In all of the propositions, we have to bear in mind the delicacy of the society and the impact of anything we may propose.

I heard Members mention a national lottery. For years I said we should consider a national lottery. I know the elements of opposition and I know what people would say, but it comes down to this: we cannot continue to tax the people in the traditional areas. One of these days it is all going to dry up.

Several years ago I gave an anecdote about my grandfather, his friend and an old cow who the man insisted should have a calf each year. One year the cow had a calf, and there was a drought and no grass. The calf died, the cow died and that was the end of that. We have to look at creating new ways—like a national lottery. For all the challenges we talk about, we have to talk about things like bonds as well.

I know the challenges involved because when the government floats a bond, the government must know that when those bonds are cashed in, it has the money plus the interest. These are things we have to think out. They are not beyond the scope of this Government, but it is that we have to take our time. One year has not passed yet. We have to read the compass. We have and we are ready to step off, but people should not be so naïve to expect that when we hit the ground we would immediately start running because the economy of the Cayman Islands is intricately intertwined with the world economy. Right now, President Bush in the U.S. is in a quandary because he is not doing well. There are layoffs; the stock market is more down than it is up. All of these things impact on our society, therefore, if society is not industrialised, we will never be able to solve the problems because it is an interdependent world, on our own.

It cannot be said that the Government has not been moving on all the areas in which we have been experiencing problems. We have been doing that, and doing it well. There are no overnight results to be had, there is no quick fix. The Government, and, by inference, the Legislative Assembly, will not be able to do it by themselves either. There must be a partnership between the public and private sectors. It is all right for the private sector to bawl but are they forthcoming in times of crisis and times of economic stringency? Do they understand? I do not see any delegations streaming in here with any ideas. I do not see them coming in here wanting to speak with legislators, bringing suggestions, volunteering to help. Where are they?

Arm chair generals! They sit on the sidelines in their living rooms and offices, complaining and bickering. Rome was not built in a day, nor was it built by Caesar alone. This is the time for them to come forward. We need help. I suppose, true to many people who inhabited the frontier society, when the economy does not suit them they pack their suitcase and take the next stagecoach out of town.

It is a two-way street. While it is true that many people need citizenship, we do not need fair weather citizens. If you are not going to work to build the country; if you are not going to put your shoulders to the wheel now, when we get it going again we will tell you 'ta-ta, we do not really need you'. It is easy to stand on the sidelines and find fault and grumble when the economy is down. How many people say: 'we have some money; we have an idea and we'd like to invest in a project.' People talk about easing restrictions. Of course, Government can ease restrictions. However, always the advantage must be to them.

I do not see anyone coming up with any training programmes and schemes that would involve twenty or thirty people for employment. So, I have to stand in defence of the Government and say that things are being worked on, but it cannot be done overnight. It would be much better if the partnership was more than tokenism. I hope, at the end of the day, we can find means other than the traditional ones to raise revenue, to change the scope of what we have been treading upon, whether it is a lottery or a bond issue, something to ease the burden and the pain on the small man; on the taxpayer who is hit every year in the same areas.

I am brave and bold enough to take the Opposition. I say it is high time we begin to look seriously at areas like a national lottery to fund education; to fund scholarships; to defray some of the medical expenses we have; and to take care of some of the welfare issues we have. It is time we looked at that and at floating a bond issue, which we are looking at.

These are challenging times, but I feel good about the future. I know that we will turn this ship around. A young Government just needs a little opportunity. We will make everyone proud, including the nay sayers.

The Speaker: The Second Elected Member for West Bay.

Mr. Rolston M. Anglin: Thank you.

It is good to see the Government's economists here taking notes, after all, this is a take note motion. One thing that seems to be lost in all of this is exactly what it is we talk about when we refer to the economy here in Cayman. I think sometimes it is easy to criticise and talk about stimulating as if it is as easy as taking an electric wire and just walking up to that magical economy, just sticking it on there and giving it some juice. A man has to know his limitations.

Our economy is built primarily on tourism and the financial industry. Tourists do not have to come to the Cayman Islands and neither does investors have to put money on deposit. They do not have to invest in mutual funds and have them registered here. We do not have to register their captive insurance companies here. We have to recognise our economy is one which is built upon a lot of variables well outside our control. When we compare ourselves to larger industrialised countries, we recognise that because they have the gambit, and a lot of local wealth behind their dollar. They can make certain changes and provide the stimulus their respective economies need.

What also complicates the matter even more in Cayman is the fact that we have built an economy so reliant on imported human capital as well. Not only have we had to have the foreign capital come here, and it does not have to come here, but the human capital has to come here as well. I hear some Caymanians talk as if the Government Members are the biggest group of idiots just because we have one foreigner working here.

We have grown up to be a people who want it, but we do not want it. We want the high flying life. We want to be able to go to the U.S. and buy new cars, fly them in and go up there on our shopping sprees. At the same time we do not want to realise that if we import capital to the level where our local labour market cannot sufficiently service the jobs created, we will also have to import the labour.

What is of interest is certain people's notion by saying: 'oh, if foreigners here would spend all their money here.' How could anyone who knows his history even insinuate such a thing? My father went to sea. He sent his money home. That is the same thing we are now experiencing.

In a short period of time we went from the ones who had to emigrate out of Cayman to being the ones watching people immigrate into Cayman. How can we then sit back and ask why all the expatriates who live here send their money overseas? They send it overseas because they come here for economic gain. They are going to send the money home to help pay the way for their families, just as our men did when they went to sea.

Another thing we have to acknowledge in our frail existence is the fact that our own dollar is tied to the U.S. dollar. We have to also recognise that it is backed by U.S. Treasury Bills. Sometimes when I hear people talk, and this comes from all spectrums of life, I would swear that Cayman is Brazil—the richest country by way of natural commodities in the world. We are not! A man has to know his limitations. If he does not, peril will become him.

We have heard much talk about the U.S. economy. Because of the nature of our economy in Cayman, as I outlined earlier, naturally whatever happens in major markets where we do a lot of business will have a spill-over effect into Cayman. I have a few articles that will help shed some light on exactly what is going on. I will then tie it in, with your indulgence, with the points I want to make.

The Speaker: Please go ahead.

Mr. Rolston M. Anglin: In the July 6 edition of The New York Times, reporters and economists discussed this famous tax cut that President George W. Bush has given. I quote: "Whoops, no sooner had Mr. Bush signed that tax cut into law then those same officials began admitting the budget outlook wasn't that rosy after all. In fact, revenue is dropping like a stone. A suspicious man may wonder about the timing. Isn't it strange that the bad news on revenue came to light only after the tax cut had passed?"

The article goes on to clearly demonstrate that even though the U.S. Government has gone about its tax cut, and while that will normally have benefits for places like Cayman, because they will naturally then embark upon tax planning that often involves setting up offshore trusts; investing in offshore mutual funds; investing in areas where they can shelter some of their wealth from their own government's tax regime, which is very much like the Republicans who are known as the rich man's government.. We also have to recognise the fact that all is not well in the United States. Even though they have had this tax cut, the perceived impact may be months from being recognised.

On 7 July, there was a discussion on jobs. I quote: "The nation's employers cut 114,000 jobs in June, mostly in the manufacturing, but in other sectors as well, the Labor Department said yesterday, throwing cold water on recent reports suggesting the economy was beginning to recover. 'You cannot spin this report to make it sound positive. There is nothing positive about it,' said William Dudley, Director of Domestic Economic Research at Goldman Sachs & Company. 'You have to look at other information to be optimistic. This Report is very weak.'"

We then see a report, "Like many American consumers, Stephen St. George has suddenly gone from being a source of the economy's strength to a reason to fret about its future. After having bought his first home, purchased a new Sports' Utility Vehicle (SUV) and taking four weekend trips to California in the last year, Mr. St. George was laid off two weeks ago from his $75,000 a year job on an online real estate company. Now he and his wife are considering selling their new truck, delaying some landscaping work on their home and trying to pay off credit card debt. 'We haven't made changes yet, but we will,' said St. George, who is 35 and lives in the mountains of north Phoenix. 'The idea is to spend a little more wisely and to be a little more frugal.'"

This shows just how grave it is in the United States right now. Naturally, that could have been a potential tourist to the Cayman Islands. In those conditions, do we think he is going to come here? I think not.

We also see that even with the interest rates' cuts that have come about, that sought to lower the value of the U.S. dollar so that U.S. goods and services would be relatively cheap compared to their trading partners, therefore providing stimulus for their exports and be able to revive the economy and keep jobs going on that front, we also have bad news on that front. I quote: "More than six months after the Federal Reserve (Fed) began battling the reverse of economic slowdown in the United States, economists and business executives say an unexpected rise in the value of the dollar is complicating the prospects of full rebound. Despite six interest rate cuts by the Fed this year, an effort that would typically be expected to weaken the dollar, the American currency has strengthened against the world's two other major currency, the Euro and the Japanese Yen. As a result, American products have become more expensive when sold abroad. At the same time economic growth appears to be decelerating in Europe and Japan is again flirting with recession. That weakness is dampening demand from abroad for American goods and services making it even harder for the domestic economy to emerge from the doldrums. 'The global slowdown that is becoming more visible in the economies of our trading partners and surprisingly strong dollar are going to drag on the recover,' said James Glassman, an economist at JP Morgan Chase New York."

One might then be wondering what is happening in regard to consumer spending. This is bad news again. I quote: "Consumers worried about their jobs in the face of layoffs were a bit tight-fisted in May, borrowing money at the slowest pace in the last 19 months. Consumer credit rose a seasonally adjusted $6.5 billion in May, a 4.9 percent annual rate, the Federal Reserve reported today. That was a much smaller increase than the 9.5 billion rise in credit that many analysts had expected. The 4.9 percent growth rate was the slowest since the 4.7 percent growth rate of increase was registered in October 1999."

Tied to that would be retail sales. Just to give a flavour of what is happening in the U.S. economy on that front . . . "New evidence of a weak economy appeared yesterday in the latest reports on retail sales, inflation and consumer confidence, suggesting that a much anticipated upturn will not materialize until the fall, if then. Consumer spending, in particular, gave ground with retail sales growing more slowly in June than most forecasters had expected, the Commerce Department reported. Consumer confidence, on the other hand, rose slightly [which is good news] in the first two weeks of July. But among low-income households who told pollsters that they expected inflation to lose strength in the coming months giving their incomes more purchasing power. [Note the sector it came from, not the sector that is going to help the Cayman economy. That optimism comes from low-income households.] 'One crucial measure of inflation fell in June for the first time in over two years. These numbers suggest that we won't get a noticeable economic growth until the 4th quarter,' said Richard Burner, Chief Domestic Economist at Morgan Stanley Dean Witter. In his view a rebound after nearly a year of sluggish economic growth is put off until the 4th quarter and the economy will contract in the current quarter."

The final bit I need to tie in is wholesale inventories. I quote from 11 July 2001 edition of The New York Times: "Sales at retailers fell in May and inventories rose more than at any time in the last six months, a sign that businesses may be reluctant to order more goods until the economy picks up. Wholesale inventories rose 0.2 percent, led by an increase in the stockpiles of drugs, food, and clothing, an increase of 0.1 percent in April, the Commerce Department reported today. Sales fell 0.1 percent, the third drop in the last four months. They pushed inventory to sales ratio a measure of the time goods remain unsold up to 1.32 months in May, the highest level since April 1999. As a result, wholesalers are struggling to keep stockpiles in line with sluggish demand. 'The report isn't good news for the economy because it suggests continued weak production as companies work off the inventory glut,' said Tom Rogers, Chief Economist at briefing.com in Boston. The May increase in inventory was the largest since the 0.4 percent increase in November."

We have upon our hands a world economic slowdown that is obviously being felt in the U.S. To think that the Cayman Islands will not go through economic slowdowns is that pie-in-the-sky attitude that says we have to grow—we will grow. After all, the tourists and investors have to come to Cayman to invest, irrespective of how difficult we can make it at times.

Let us look briefly at the Cayman economy. I have a few questions for those nay-sayers on the outside. Is the growth rate in work permits slowing? Are Caymanians being trained? Are Caymanians not being marginalised in the workforce?

I can remember a few years ago when there was a big push by Cayman to buy goods and services in Cayman. I have heard people so cynical it is amazing. The attitude in our community is cancerous. We have people who categorically ask the question of why they should buy in Cayman when they are being gouged. Why should I buy in Cayman when I can go to Miami, have a vacation, buy the same goods and services and still save money?

I also hear people ask why they should buy from some merchants in Cayman when all they want to do is pay low wages to expatriate workers; they do not want to train or hire Caymanians. They say they will not support them because all they want to do is hire expats and do nothing substantive for this community. They ask why, to make them rich? I have heard that question. Anyone in here who has not heard it has not been talking to enough people. At the end of the day, the last thing I am going to say on the 'Buy Cayman' initiative is that I wonder how many people in here and out there can honestly say that when they built their homes, if they built, that they bought everything here. I want them to answer the question: why? I want the retailers and wholesales in this country to take note; that is who needs to take note.

We can stand in here all we want and talk about government spurring the economy on but we have in our midst, greed! I think it was the Second Elected Member for Bodden Town who spoke about this greed. You have to make $1 million from each soda you sell. You have to make all the profit this year on the cars we sell. I recognise that Cayman is a high cost jurisdiction. No one is going to convince me we do not have greed in proportions that are unconscionable and that we do not have gouging in this country.

The people are not going to take it. There is a cheap alternative. I know for a fact that many people have arrangements with export and freight foreigners in Miami. All they have to do is pick up the phone, or go on the Internet, and they can get goods and services overseas. They feel cynicism against their own economy and their own environment, because they feel that the pricing is excessive. It is a reality because most of them do not make the type of money they would need to make to be able to buy all their goods and services in Cayman. This is just a fact of life.

What about our tourism product? What are our private sector partners really doing about this? I shop at Foster's Food Fair in the Strand. Many tourists come there because it is close to many condominiums. On two occasions I noted with my own two eyes Spanish-speaking cashiers bellowing to each other across cashier lines with the tourists standing there. I asked myself: 'what sort of impression could that possibly give any tourist?'

I think back to when I was working in New York about how certain of my colleagues at PriceWaterhouseCoopers, who have relatively high levels of disposable income, tell me that they would not come back to Cayman for a vacation because they see it as not being a true Caribbean country; they see it as being a little America. If they wanted to visit a little American country, they would go to the Florida Keys. They say they do not experience anything Caymanian. How can you experience anything Caymanian when you go into the grocery stores and you do not get served by Caymanians; you go into the restaurants and do not get served by Caymanians?

I can name many other places. I can name places in government where the frontline staff are not Caymanian. I submit that when it comes to our tourism product, we can talk about all the broad-base plans we want to, which are critical, of course, but if the nuts and bolts do not make that visitor feel something positive that he can take with him from these Islands, why should they come?

I think it is incumbent upon the private sector to stop whining and complaining and talking about Caymanians will not do this, and Caymanians will not do that. Well, people will not do things when you marginalise them and say to them: 'Come and work hard for me. I am making a healthy profit, but I am not going to pay you anything' I am going to wave a magic wand over the expatriate's work permit because I know I can control him.'

Mr. Speaker, this is why I could come to this House and support the minimum wage motion. It is high time we stopped the privateers out there; the profiteers in the private sector who will come in these doors and cry me down saying, 'Oh, Rolston M. Anglin don't know what he is talking about', and then cry poverty saying, 'Oh, we can't afford that; we can't absorb that.' Well, Mr. Speaker, if they cannot afford to pay a person a decent wage for a hard day's work, it calls into question the existence of this Island. After all, if you cannot do that then your very existence should not be. If it takes us to bring in cheap labour to do our work in order to make the economy work, then we have fundamental problems that are beyond belief!

What to do? I contemplated some of this at length. I want to first talk about what already exists in Cayman that we can do differently which would have a dramatic effect, in my view, on the cost of government concerning taxation levels and the cost of living. Remember, cost of living is a delicate matter. Is it that the goods are expensive or that the wages are cheap, relatively speaking? Obviously, the two are intertwined. Obviously, cost of living is a relative thing. I submit that Cayman has an extremely high cost of living for the average citizen.

The size of the Civil Service is an issue which takes political will. After all, the Civil Service, as we know, joins ranks when it is threatened. They have a turf they feel they need to protect. I have yet to hear one civil servant say to me 'Here is an area that has glut that we can cut out.' I have only heard about areas needing more people. It seems as if we are in a reality that is surreal; that we are not in the real world.

I agree with my colleagues, we need to cut the Civil Service; this is what most of us feel. The Civil Service says no, they need more workers. Either we have it right, or they have it right. I submit that we have it right! I am not afraid to talk about what we need to do for the benefit of the citizens. It is time those Civil Servants remembered they are civil servants. It is a privilege to be working for the people. It is a pity they do not have to run every four years to keep their jobs. I bet you would see a different mentality approach with more efficiency and productivity.

I will give an example of an interesting point which was brought up by the Honourable Minister responsible for Education, Human Resources and Culture. We are in the digital age, yet, when I just went and ordered a police record it is going to take a day to get back to me. The Honourable First Official Member responsible for Internal and External Affairs told us a couple of days ago that the system is not computerised; it is all manual!

If we are going to talk about the digital millennium and utilising it, why in the world cannot I log onto a web site, use my credit card, pay for my police record and have it e-mailed to me and I can then print it out? That does not take any magical technology. As a person who has grown up in the digital millennium, and is part of it, I know this does not take rocket science. These are simple things. Not only must we cut the size of the Civil Service, but we must have true re-invention of government services.

I am not talking about putting Caymanians out of jobs. The private sector has a lot of work permits. I know there are those who will ask if I am going to take a person's work permit away. No! I am not saying that. These things have to be planned. We are the Government who control the Civil Service, under the direction of the Governor, of course, and we also control the Immigration Board. Why are we so backward to think that we cannot plan these things? Any civil servant who is displaced should be a planned and orderly decision. They should be transitioned into the private sector because the jobs are there. Work permits are coming up every day, every week. It is time we stopped pussyfooting around saying we do not need those foreigners. We need expatriate workers in this Island. However, it cannot be at the expense of any able-bodied Caymanian who wants to work.

Is it not timely to be standing here talking about these matters when Cayman Airways is going through the difficulties it currently is? It is known, and this is not unique to Cayman, that governments are the most inefficient bodies there are. They are not for profit and they do not have shareholders to answer to about the bottom line.

I have heard mention that Cayman Airways can be profitable. I will say it now, and I will say it again when the opportunity comes, that if this is the feeling; if this is what the research bears out, well then, we need to find a consortium of private sector individuals who are willing to put their money where their mouths are and are willing to take on the challenge of running the airline, making it profitable. I am confident that with the current political directorate we have, we could run Cayman Airways as close as possible to being a business airline, in regard to government owning it still. I believe that! I am confident of that! What about four years from now? What about eight years from now? What about twelve years from now? I do not care what system we set up. As long as Cayman Airways is tied to the Cayman Islands Government, there is going to be a government which is going to exercise the type of mismanagement that has plagued that airline all these years in the future. That is not the legacy Rolston M. Anglin is willing to leave behind.

If the airline can truly be profitable, then let the private sector run it. What about the losses we have accumulated over the years? They are there. If we as a government could get a private sector individual to take over that airline, and from now to eternity; from now until the Lord returns, if we get one dollar back we would have done something that would qualify each and every one of us to be a national hero, in my estimate. The private sector must be the body charged with Cayman Airways.

If we construct buildings and do things in the public sector in government that are two and three times as costly or inefficient than the private sector, well, airline management, the fiercest industry there is out there would be the other costly and inefficient one. We cannot sit here and say government is traditionally inefficient, but with the airline business industry we will be the pros, the best airline managers there are. That just does not add up.

Northward Prison is a strain on the Government, but all so necessary. Why do we only utilise the prisoners for community based projects? Why do we say that the lower risk prisoners are so low a risk that they can come into the community, build homes for poor people, but cannot do anything else? It is a worthy thing that they do, and I think it should be encouraged and increased. It certainly tells me by reasonable deduction that, if the prisoners can be trusted to build a home for a poor individual, they can certainly be put to work to rake our public beaches as I see the Department of Environmental Health doing. I also see non-Caymanians too because I cross them when I am walking in the morning. I see 200 to 300 feet of beach with eighteen men. This is ridiculous!

Why is it that they cannot help to build the schools? Why do we have to have a Public Works' Department that is so large? This brings me to rehabilitation. Why do we expect to have prisoners sit in Northward Prison? A lot of them do not take any classes, or do not have any work to do. They eat, sleep, listen to music, talk on the phone—phone cards are the biggest money making and the most important thing up there—you can buy anything at Northward Prison with a phone card, I am told.

Why do we expect prisoners to live that lifestyle and all of a sudden they are going to come out and adjust? If Northward Prison does not reflect the common norms of society, the rate of recidivism will never go down in this country. Every prisoner should have to get up, just like I do, eat breakfast, take a shower, go to work, go home in the evening; that should be their routine. They should be practising in Northward Prison what they are going to be expected to do when coming back into society. Also they must be building a skill.

Why is it that we cannot have a prison based projects industry? Mind you, the prison was burned down, so this is going to take some time. The thought has to be to have prison based industry. Why can we not train our Caymanians up there to be auto repairmen and body men? Just about every garage I go to is filled with non-Caymanians, mainly Jamaicans. I have nothing against that. However, I have something against it when I know we have young men sitting at Northward Prison doing nothing. They should be trained and have the opportunity to have the public take their cars there to be repaired.

These things will only be done with the lowest risk level of prisoner. The prisoners who are evaluated and can do this the following things would happen. Firstly, they would be able to charge a reasonable price for the work; and being paid they can do a couple of things with that money. The first thing is that the money should be paid to Government for their upkeep while at Northward. Secondly, with what is left over, they should be made to pay to help support their families. If anything is left, it is put into a bank account for them when they come out.

At the end of the day, we have just gotten here. I recognise that. Having great ideas and getting them implemented are two different things. We have to look at core areas in this economy and within the cost structure of Government and see where we can save money.

Society's expectation is for government to give away so much, it is unreal. It is unreal! Let me just say for all those people out there who think the money Government gives away is free, let me tell you it is not, you are paying for it with taxes! Obviously, there will always be a need in every society for government to give a certain amount of money away. That has to be for the exceptional cases such as indigents and people who cannot support themselves and for those who have fallen sick. We have not got the infrastructure in place as far as workman's compensation to allow the workers who are permanently impaired to survive.

We cannot simply keep going down the same beaten path and expect to tell the people we can turn the country around if we practise the same things that governments in the past—particularly the last government which we deposed—practised.

I agree completely with my colleague, the Elected Member for East End, when he talks about the fact that construction is an area that needs to be stimulated. I say that very guardedly and with great caution. It has come to my attention that even though we have had a downturn, there has not been a significant reduction in the work permits of foreigners in the construction industry in Cayman. Now that is a funny state of affairs.

We have a downturn, yet the foreign workers who are here are not diminishing in number. These are the same profiteers who want to sit back and criticise the Government and get innocent people on their side. I tell all Caymanians, anybody you hear criticising the Government and talking about the economy not turning around, look at their motives searching carefully. Stop being led astray! We are being led astray by our own people!

I am sick and tired of hearing everything in Cayman being blamed on the Government and foreigners. I tell you, if we did not have a government, and if we did not have foreigners, everybody in Cayman would be happy! What a world we would have!

I have been told that the number of construction companies is on the rise. Since this is a take note motion, I want the Government to take note that my information, which I hope they know, is that one of the biggest businesses in the construction industry is the selling of work permits. When someone is brought in under the guise of a work permit, they go to work and give you the money to pay for their permit and pay for the trade and business licence for the company you opened with them!

It is time for the low life corruption by our own Caymanian people to stop. It is also time to stop blaming the Government and expatriates for everything. Step up and be responsible! I am sick and tired of it, Mr. Speaker. I am 28 years old and I hear people talking to me about the problems they created. It is time Caymanians took responsibility. We want everything in the world, but we do not want to do anything. We do not want to be any part of it.

The 15 of us Members are supposed to turn the economy around. Any one who is out there waiting for us to turn the economy around, do not hold your breath! It takes the private sector as well as government incentives. Yes, the Government can do certain things, I agree. Government is not the be-all and end-all. We need a moratorium on construction licences and since it is so slow, we need it today.

From what I understand, it is the same issue with watersport operators. As my colleague, Captain Eugene Ebanks said, 'Once you bring a foreigner in here, put swimming trunks on him . . . all of a sudden he is a master of the North Sound!'

[Laughter]

Mr. Rolston M. Anglin: He probably has not tippy-toed in salt water in his life!

As for the cost of capital, it is time that the banks in this country stopped the chicanery they have played year after year. I will answer the question which the Member for East End asked: 'What does the U.S. prime lending rate have to do with mortgage rates in Cayman?' Absolutely nothing!

A Member: True!

Mr. Rolston M. Anglin: I am going to bring to this House information showing that in the United States itself the thirty-year fixed mortgage rate is lower than the prime rate that we use as our base. You do not have to be a rocket scientist and you do not have to have a PhD in economics to know that what is happening in Cayman does not make sense. How is it that the prime lending rate can be above the thirty-year fixed mortgage rate in the U.S.?

MOMENT OF INTERRUPTION—4.30 PM

The Speaker: If I may interrupt you. We have reached the hour of interruption. Will you be finished within the next five or ten minutes? Perhaps the Government will wish to let you continue.

Mr. Rolston M. Anglin: I will be finished in five to ten minutes sir.

The Speaker: Is it the wish that we continue?
Please continue.

Mr. Rolston M. Anglin: It is high time the mortgage rate in this country be pegged to a more appropriate base. In other words, mortgages should be tied to the thirty-year fixed mortgage rate and let us just say you inflate it 20 percent, after all, that is the difference between the C.I. and U.S. dollar. You could take personal and business loans and tie them to the averages there. These things are not difficult to come by for anyone who wants to find out what they are because you can go to 'interestrate.com'. They are all there.

I know that the cost of money for banks in this country is not the U.S. prime lending rate. That is not what they pay for the funds they hold. They do not need to try to come and fool this Legislative Assembly or the public to believe that. The ride has gone on too long. How does that tie into the cost of living? When Foster's, Kirk's or Hurley's have to go and utilise those same banks for their lines of credit and business loans, they are naturally going to pass on those same costs to us.

We all need a car; we have to borrow money and naturally, we get it at these exorbitant rates. If it is necessary to build a house we are charged these same exorbitant rates. Cost of money, interest rates, is one of the most expensive components in this island. It must stopped!

I do not think I have left much off of my laundry list! The Honourable Ministers responsible for Cable and Wireless (C&W) and Caribbean Utilities Company (CUC), I must add, are doing a lot more than has ever been done in regard to making sure the people in these Islands receive fair pricing. I am not one who believes in jumping up with a wish list and not giving credit where credit is due. The Government is doing a good job in that area. Again, I ask the public to have patience. Rome was not built in one day.

As a member of the Telecommunications' Advisory Committee, if C&W does not come up with a good proposal, I am going to recommend to the Government to open the telecommunications' industry to competition. It is high time taking advantage of Cayman ended. I am not saying that people should not make a profit. The risk of going into business must be rewarded, otherwise people will not do it. It is high time for the gouging to end.

I would like to end by quickly addressing a matter that has been raised by numerous speakers. No one seemed to mention the dynamics of the environment we are in; that is regarding a national lottery.

There are many churches that do not believe in gambling. We know that. It is high time for double standards in this Island to end. Either we are not going to have any of these raffles which I see going on, giving away cars and money; either we are going to stop this illegal gambling network that is creating incredible wealth for a small number of individuals, or we are going to stop being hypocrites and allow the Government to have raffles for a cause—for education! If we can have a raffle for the Little League, why is it we cannot have a raffle for education or for a cause that is greatly needed in this society?

That was the basis on which Florida started its lottery. Florida refused to have out and out gambling in the state when this issue first came up. The only reason they instituted it is was because half the proceeds go to education. The only part of the lottery, the commonly accepted term; I am sure the legislators would have loved to have called it something else, was used to utilise the system which existed. People wanted to be involved in such an activity and they said: 'Okay, if you want that, then the money raised has to go to a worthy cause.'

I can honestly say that if we can have raffles in this Island, we should be able to have a raffle for education or some other cause as the Government may see fit. Call it what you want. If you want to call it a lottery, call it a lottery. It is one or the other. Enough of these double standards. I am sick and tired of the hypocrisy that germinates within this society. We all want to skin up and talk like that is the type of people we are.

I would just like to say I decided to take this particular Motion and show, without even talking about any new tax that government, along with the private sector might bring in, that could make significant inroads in bringing down the cost of living and in making Cayman a place where you can do business and live in.

I thank you, Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: I will entertain a motion for the adjournment.

ADJOURNMENT

Hon. Linford A. Pierson: Mr. Speaker, I move the adjournment of this Honourable House until 10 am Wednesday, 25 July 2001.

The Speaker: The question is that this Honourable House do now adjourn until 10 am Wednesday, 25 July 2001. Those in favour, please say Aye. Those against, No.

AYES.

The Speaker: The Ayes have it.

AT 4.39 PM THE HOUSE STOOD ADJOURNED UNTIL 10 AM WEDNESDAY, 25 JULY 2001.

OFFICIAL HANSARD REPORT
WEDNESDAY
25 JULY 2001
11.01 AM
Twentieth Sitting

[Prayers read by The First Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman]

The Speaker: Please be seated. Proceedings are resumed.

Item number 2 on today's Order Paper, Administration of Oaths or Affirmations. Oath of Allegiance to be administered to Mr. A. Joel Walton, JP to be the Honourable Temporary Acting Third Official Member.

Mr. Walton, would you come forward to the Clerk's table?

Would all Members please stand?

ADMINISTRATION OF OATHS OR AFFIRMATIONS

OATH OF ALLEGIANCE
by Mr. A. Joel Walton

Mr. A. Joel Walton: I, A. Joel Walton, do swear that I will be faithful and bear true allegiance to Her Majesty Queen Elizabeth II, her heirs and successors, according to law, so help me God.

Mr. Speaker: Mr. Walton, on behalf of all Honourable Members I welcome you to the House for the time of your service here. Please take your seat as the Honourable Temporary Acting Third Official Member.

Please be seated.

Item 3 on today's Order Paper, Reading by the Speaker of Messages and Announcements.

READING BY THE HONOURABLE
SPEAKER OF MESSAGES
AND ANNOUNCEMENTS

APOLOGIES

The Speaker: I have received apologies from the Honourable Third Official Member, the Honourable Minister for Health and Information Technology who is off the island, and from the Second Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman who is off the island.

Item 4 on the Order Paper is Questions to Honourable Ministers/Members. Question 88 is standing in the name of the Second Elected Member for West Bay.

QUESTIONS TO HONOURABLE
MINISTERS AND MEMBERS

QUESTION NO. 88
(Withdrawn)

No. 88: Mr. Rolston M. Anglin asked the Honourable Second Official Member responsible for the Portfolio of Legal Administration what is the legal procedure for a parent wishing to evict adult children (i.e., non-dependent) from their homes.

Mr. Rolston M. Anglin: Mr. Speaker, I beg to withdraw question 88 standing in my name.

The Speaker: Do you have a seconder?
The Fourth Elected Member for West Bay.

Mr. Cline A. Glidden Jr.: I second that.

The Speaker: The question is that question 88 be withdrawn. Those in favour please say Aye. Those against No.

AYES.

The Speaker: The Ayes have it.

AGREED: QUESTION NO. 88 WITHDRAWN.

The Speaker: Question 89, standing in the name of the Elected Member for East End.

QUESTION NO. 89
(Withdrawn)

No. 89: Mr. V. Arden McLean asked the Honourable First Official Member responsible for the Portfolio of Internal and External Affairs whether contracts attracting Contracted Officers Supplement have been renewed in the last two months and, if so, how many and the dates the renewals were effected.

Mr. V. Arden McLean: I beg to withdraw question 89 standing in my name.

The Speaker: Do you have a seconder?
The Second Elected Member for West Bay.

Mr. Rolston M. Anglin: I second that, Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: The question is that question 89 be withdrawn. Those in favour please say Aye. Those against No.

AYES.

The Speaker: The Ayes have it.

AGREED: QUESTION NO. 89 WITHDRAWN.

The Speaker: Question 90 standing in the name of the Second Elected Member for George Town.

QUESTION 90
(Withdrawn)

No. 90: Mr. Alden M. McLaughlin, Jr. asked the Honourable Second Official Member responsible for the Portfolio of Internal and External Affairs does Government intend to give effect to the resolutions made by Standing Finance Committee at its last meeting which recommended the discontinuance of the payment of Contracted Officers Supplement and Inducement Allowances with respect to new or renewed contracts of employment with the Cayman Islands' Government.

Mr. Alden M. McLaughlin, Jr.: I beg to withdraw question 90 standing in my name.

The Speaker: Do you have a seconder?
The Third Elected Member for George Town.

Dr. Frank S. McField: I second that.

The Speaker: The question is that question 90 be withdrawn. Those in favour please say Aye. Those against No.

AYES.

The Speaker: The Ayes have it.

AGREED: QUESTION NO. 90 WITHDRAWN.

The Speaker: Moving on to Question number 91 standing in the name of the Second Elected Member for Bodden Town.

QUESTION NO. 91

No. 91: Mr. Gilbert A. McLean asked the Honourable Minister responsible for the Ministry of Planning, Communications and Works why is there a continuing review of the central wetlands in light of the decision of this Honourable House concerning this matter as a result of Private Member's Motion No. 15/00.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for the Ministry of Planning, Communications and Works.

Hon. D. Kurt Tibbetts: It would appear that the question raised by the Honourable Member deals with the second part of the Motion only, namely: "... that those parcels of land within the Central Wetlands, not for sale, remain as zoned under the Development Plan 1997."

The zoning of the parcels in the Central Wetlands has not been changed as the Development Plan 1997 is still in force. The zoning will not change and, in fact, cannot change until such time as a proposal to do so is considered and approved by the Legislative Assembly.

Part of the work being done by the Wetlands Committee reviewing the proposed Environmental Overlay Zones, has included contacting affected landowners to determine whether their parcels are "for sale". The Committee is still in the process of gathering this information and other information in its review of the proposed Environmental Overlay Zones.

The proposed Environmental Overlay Zones would affect areas island-wide although the concentration is in the Central Mangrove Wetlands. The committee has been investigating how to balance landowners' rights with the need for environmental protection. They are expected to complete this review and make their recommendations to the Central Planning Authority by the end of July 2001.

The proposed Environmental Overlay Zones, their public review and the subsequent formation of the Wetlands Committee are all part of the work carried out under the Executive Council directive that was issued when the Development Plan 1997 was passed, namely: "Three new zones (Environmentally Sensitive, Environmentally Protected and Neighbourhood Tourism) recommended by one of the Development Plan Tribunals and the road reserves were not published in the 1994 Draft Plan and the public had no opportunity to make objections and representations on the said three zones in accordance with Section 8 of the Development and Planning Law (1995 Revision). The Executive Council intends, under the provision of the Law, to require the Authority to carry out a fresh survey of the said three zones and the road reserves." [The Development Plan 1997, Section 1.1, paragraph 2]

The 1999 proposed amendments to the Development Plan 1997 which included the proposed Environmental Overlay Zones were part of this survey that is being carried out under this Executive Council directive. The review of the proposed Environmental Overlay Zones by the Wetlands Committee is a continuation of this survey as are the pending Appeals Tribunal (Development Plan) reports on the proposed road corridors and the Neighbourhood Tourism zone.

SUPPLEMENTARIES

The Speaker: Supplementaries. The Second Elected Member for Bodden Town may I interrupt you for just one moment? Would you move a motion for the suspension of Standing Order 23(7) and (8) in order that Question Time can continue.

SUSPENSION OF STANDING ORDER 23(7) & (8)

[Moved by the Second Elected Member for Bodden Town and seconded by the Fourth Elected Member for West Bay]

QUESTION PUT. AGREED: STANDING ORDER 23(7) & (8) SUSPENDED TO ALLOW QUESTION TIME TO CONTINUE BEYOND 11.00 AM.

The Speaker: The Second Elected Member for Bodden Town, I apologise for the interruption.

Mr. Gilbert A. McLean: Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

Could the Minister say why persons who have stated they do not wish to sell their land or see any changes in their ownership—they simply want it to remain as it is, unaffected—have also been requested to state whether or not they wish to sell their land in this process of review?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Planning, Communications and Works.

Hon. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Mr. Speaker, if I understand the Member correctly he is referring to a questionnaire that may have been sent out to the various landowners.

The exercise was not an effort to duplicate but simply one that because it extended beyond the central wetlands, the whole thing was done to gather all the information into one central pool to have the statistics of what each individual landowner had as a decision. That was the whole exercise.

The Speaker: The Third Elected Member for Bodden Town.

Mr. Anthony S. Eden: Would the Minister say what the terms of reference were for this committee? If he does not have it with him, could he provide it at some stage?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Planning, Communications and Works.

Hon. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Mr. Speaker, I do not have the specific terms of reference at this point in time but in the substantive answer I referred to Executive Council who issued a directive after the Development Plan 1997 was passed, where it speaks to the three new zones and the fact that in 1994 they were not published in the draft. The Wetlands Committee which is now operating is simply carrying out this exercise that the directive called for in 1997.

So, while I might not have the terms of reference stated, they would simply be encompassed in the 1997 directive and I am certain it does not extend beyond that.

The Speaker: The Second Elected Member for Bodden Town.

Mr. Gilbert A. McLean: In the substantive answer the Minister stated that the three zones, Environmentally Sensitive, Environmentally Protected and Neighbourhood Tourism were recommended by one of the Development Plan Tribunals but it was not published in the 1994 draft. Could the Minister say why this was not done and why do they exist as such?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Planning, Communications and Works.

Hon. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Mr. Speaker, I have to extend my deepest apology to the Member but I have no idea. I am absolutely certain there would be no documentation to discover why it was done. All I can say is that when the plan was passed in 1997, Executive Council issued this directive based on the fact that was not done. My reading tells me that the exercise was to allow people to raise objections or observations as they did not have the opportunity to do so in 1994.

The Speaker: The Second Elected Member for Bodden Town.

Mr. Gilbert A. McLean: I take the point made by the Minister.

I would like to enquire if, once this process is completed, will it take note and be cognisant of the findings? Also, are these findings such that will make it clear which zones the public is interested in seeing done? If, out of those findings, the public says no, will that then be allowed?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Planning, Communications and Works.

Hon. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Mr. Speaker, let me try to explain.

It must be clearly understood that the Wetlands Committee that exists now is not the same Central Wetlands Committee which existed prior to this. Just so that Members will have it clear. It is not the same thing. The job is different. The scope has widened and what was concentrated on in the Central Wetlands area of that original committee is just a part of the exercise of the committee that exists at present.

What is going to happen is that, based on all the findings of the information gathering exercise to be completed in July, recommendations will be made to the Central Planning Authority. The Central Planning Authority will look at the information which is gathered and that will then form part and parcel of the ongoing review that is taking place now of the 1997 Development Plan.

The Speaker: The Elected Member for East End.

Mr. V. Arden McLean: Mr. Speaker, in the substantive answer, there is mention of land for sale and not for sale. I wonder if the Minister could explain to this Honourable House how does land for sale or not for sale factor into rezoning a particular area, and how would that work?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Planning, Communications and Works.

Hon. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Perhaps I am taking a small risk here. When the question was asked in that questionnaire, about land for sale or not for sale, I am not sure that related directly to any rezoning.

I think that question relates to the same Private Member's Motion which was mentioned. That is where the Environmental Protection Fund is supposed to be set up with a view to purchasing those lands that are for sale. So, the exercise of identifying what properties are for sale is simply to have funds available to see whether Government can purchase those parcels. They will not be part and parcel of any other considerations. I think that is the best understanding I have at present.

The Speaker: The Elected Member for East End.

Mr. V. Arden McLean: Is the Minister telling us that if all the wetlands are for sale the Government is going to buy them?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Planning, Communications and Works.

Hon. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Mr. Speaker, certainly not.

In fact, I am absolutely certain that the Member would realise that would never happen. We all know there are many individuals who own such parcels of land and have no intention or desire to sell. Many of them wish to just retain it as part of family estate for it to continue on. Some of them wish to have the ability to develop like other people have developed.

Therefore, there are various reasons for either wanting to dispose of or hold on to these parcels. What I think has been the exercise is to identify those who may be. I do have some information from the actual survey, which tells the numbers of people who wish to dispose and those who do not. So when those are identified, once funds are available and the Motion that was passed is acted upon, Government may, through the proper channels, enter into negotiations to purchase those parcels of land. This is certainly not with a view for Government to purchase all of the wetlands, as I am absolutely certain that not everyone who owns would want to handle it in that manner.

The Speaker: The Elected Member for East End.

Mr. V. Arden McLean: I thought the opposition to environmentally sensitive and protective zones was because the landowners were objecting to re-zoning as they could not proceed with development.

Now, Mr. Speaker, if there are certain people inside there how would they get access to that? How would we get inside the zoning if someone wants to develop their property? The 'for sale' and 'not for sale' situation confuses me.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Planning, Communications and Works.

Hon. D. Kurt Tibbetts: I think I understand the objections the Member is speaking to but what I do not think should be pre-empted is that certain decisions have been made. No decisions have been made. This committee is only an information-gathering committee.

I appreciate the mere fact that questions are being asked and these proposals were made, quite a while back, I may add, it has cost much consternation among the landowners. There is no intention not to respect the rights of these landowners. As I mentioned before, the exercise is to try to balance the environmental issues along with those rights. This committee is simply on an information-gathering exercise and it will report back to the Central Planning Authority by the end of this month is my understanding. After that the Central Planning Authority will then consider the recommendations that are made by this committee based on its findings via the information that it gathers.

The process is one which simply puts all that information, via the recommendation from the Central Planning Authority, into the big pool of the ongoing review of the 1999 Development Plan.

The Speaker: The Second Elected Member for Bodden Town.

Mr. Gilbert A. McLean: Does the Member perceive any conflict where someone might say that they wish to sell and another might not and the parcels might be adjoining each other? One zone says, 'Sensitive' and the next one says, 'I want to develop'. Does the Member perceive any conflicts that might come as a result of this? Has any thought been given to just leaving the land in the state it is in now without these particular zonings and if each person wishes to develop have the Planning Board look at it on its own merits and its own rights?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Planning, Communications and Works.

Hon. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Mr. Speaker, I cannot say whether any thought has been given to simply leaving the land and the zoning as it is and allowing individuals at whatever opportune time to make an application for any development.

At present, we are waiting until all the information is gathered. I hear what the Member is saying and if it is simply to air it, I have no problem in passing it on as a thought. Where the exercise is now, is an ongoing process called for by Law and everyone has the right to participate in airing his or her views. It is not a decision-making process—I want to make it absolutely clear—which does not allow for everyone to be able to participate in that at some point in the game.

Also, to make it very clear, no decision will be made unless the final decision with regards to any and all of the effort that is going on with the review is made in this Parliament. It is not something that the Ministry, or the Planning Department, or the Central Planning Authority, or Executive Council will decide. It is going to be a situation where the recommendations are going to flow through the channels and the final decision will be made here.

The first question the Member asked is if I perceive any conflict. I want to say to the Member that I believe there will be many. In fact I am pretty certain there will be conflicts. There are always conflicts when it is a question of the environment and individual landowners' rights. I want to say very clearly that there is no intention from the Ministry's part or from Government's part, for that matter, not to allow the rights of individuals to be respected. That is certainly not the intention.

I do not know what has gone on in the past. In the few months that I have been there I have seen enough conflicts about Government with land to write forty books! I suspect it is not all over yet but I believe the best way to deal with it is to sit down and go through all the pros and cons and try to come to a balance so that everyone can live with the decision. That is the whole intention. Just to make it absolutely clear.

The Speaker: The Elected Member for East End.

Mr. V. Arden McLean: I wonder if the Minister can tell us—after the Committee's recommendations have been made to the Central Planning Authority—when does he expect the recommendations will be brought to this Honourable House?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Planning, Communications and Works.

Hon. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Mr. Speaker, as I said, the area we are speaking about is only part and parcel of the whole process. The Wetlands' Committee exercise is anticipated to be completed by the end of July, which gives a reasonable time for deliberations by the Central Planning Authority to make the recommendations based on their findings. As everyone knows the Director of Planning and his staff are going out into the districts holding meetings. I think the whole exercise of conducting the review is anticipated to be completed sometime in the latter part of 2002.

The Speaker: The Third Elected Member for West Bay.

Capt. A. Eugene Ebanks: Mr. Speaker, I wonder if the Minister could say if an owner wanted to develop a piece of property located within an environmentally sensitive zone but could not develop it because of the zoning, would there be any compensation?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Planning, Communications and Works.

Hon. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Mr. Speaker, I want to make sure that I understand what the Member is asking.

I think the Member is asking a question that might occur in the future. If a decision is made, whereby a parcel of land owned by an individual is given a different zoning, which prevents him from developing that property, as he would have been able to prior to that decision, would there be any compensation?

Mr. Speaker, I would have to stick my neck out to say, certainly, that has to be the case if that were to occur. Now, this brings back the point as to people willing to dispose of their properties and those who do not. It is going to be a real difficult call. I can see that happening in instances like what the Member has questioned. I think all of that will have to be borne in mind very seriously before any decisions are made.

So the balance has to be one that is clearly defined and everyone has to participate in the decision. Notwithstanding the national desire to protect the environment, one must bear in mind the rights of individuals—they simply cannot be thrown aside.

If what the Member is referring to were to happen, then certainly that would have to be borne in mind prior to any decision being made. The whole process would allow for this entire Legislative Assembly to realise that if a decision like that is made all of those things will have to be borne in mind. You cannot just move blindly and decide that you are going to satisfy the situation one way and end up with another war in another manner.

I know in this business, so to speak, of government it is almost impossible for any decision to be made without having someone displeased. It is just the nature of the beast. What has to happen in the process is that all the factors have to be weighed and the decision that is made has to be of benefit to more. In the process whenever there is any fallout, one has to bear that in mind to see how best you can mitigate those circumstances to get the most satisfactory situation. I think that is the best formula we can apply.

The Speaker: The Second Elected Member for Bodden Town.

Mr. Gilbert A. McLean: Could the Minister say how many persons at this stage have indicated they wish to sell their land? Also, are there any funds and how much?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Planning, Communications and Works.

Hon. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Mr. Speaker, I do not have the benefit of the completed report. If the Member would be satisfied I could simply take a sampling to show him the kind of response that we are getting thus far.

PRELIMINARY REPORT. Over 150 surveys mailed out and 34 responses received.

First question. Respondents were asked to indicate their concerns with the proposed Environmental Overlay Zones and to indicate how strongly they felt about each concerned by using multi-check marks on the questionnaire.

Twenty three people indicated they were concerned that the value of their land would decrease if environmental limitations were placed on its use. Twenty four people indicated that they wanted the right to develop their land as they see fit. Six indicated they wish to preserve their property in its natural state so that they could pass it on to their descendants. Seven indicated they would like to see the existing mangrove buffer zoning on their property reduced to 300 feet. Two indicated they were satisfied with the proposed Overlay Zones and would be willing to abide by them.

Second question: Landowners were then asked if after careful study it was determined that the preservation of their particular parcel was crucial to the future of Cayman's environment, which of the following alternatives might be acceptable. Four indicated that it might be acceptable to keep their land but have the development restricted by new zoning requirements. Thirteen people indicated that keeping their land and having more density allowed on the less sensitive areas, in return for not developing the sensitive areas might be acceptable. Five indicated that selling the development rights for their land to another person or transferring them to another parcel then keeping their land in its natural state but not being able to develop it might be acceptable. 13 people indicated that selling their land at fair market value to Government or the National Trust might be acceptable.

Zero indicated they would be willing to donate their land to the Government or the National Trust.

That is just a sampling of some of the results that have come about from the questionnaire. So while one may think, at a glance, there is some pressure being put by the questionnaire that is not the intention. I have just indicated from some of the sampling responses it gives us a better idea of what we can separate, what is easy to deal with and what is more difficult to deal with so that we can get a better picture of the whole thing. That is really the whole exercise that is being conducted at this time.

The Speaker: The Second Elected Member for Bodden Town.

Mr. Gilbert A. McLean: I had asked if there were any funds and how much?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Planning, Communications and Works.

Hon. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Mr. Speaker, I am not 100 percent sure but let me explain as clearly as I can. The Motion that was accepted, Private Member's Motion 15/00 called for the Environmental Protection Fund.

If you give me a minute, I will quote it directly. The first resolve section reads: "BE IT NOW THEREFORE RESOLVED THAT the Government immediately bring legislation to set up the Environmental Protection Fund as an interest bearing fund under the authority of the Financial Secretary and that monies from this Fund be used to purchase properties that are for sale within the proposed Environmentally Protected and Environmentally Sensitive areas (now known as the Central Wetlands) and any other area agreed by Finance Committee and for protecting and preserving the environment of the Islands."

That is, the auspices under which the fund should be set up. The fact is what the Motion called for has not been done. The question that was asked prodded everyone along who had forgotten about it and it is now being dealt with. I think, in excess of $5 million is in that fund.

I would expect what has to be done via legislation will be done with as much speed as can be expected. The Financial Secretary is now quite aware of it and certainly has that as part and parcel of the things that he has to take care of. Once that is done then, as the Motion called for (although governments have changed, so to speak), there is no intention to change from that position.

I personally believe that is a sensible position and at least, we will know that the fund created is being put to some use that will serve us well for generations to come.

The Speaker: The Third Elected Member for Bodden Town.

Mr. Anthony S. Eden: Just to say, the main concern of landowners in that area is that they may be given the same opportunity as that which occurred on the western peninsular of the island where they have the democratic right to develop their land as they see fit. With the knowledge the present Minister has and who inherited this situation, I wonder if the Minister would comment.

I recall the phrase New York Mets Coach, Yogi Berra used, 'It seems like déjà vu all over again.' I remember over thirty years ago, when the cadastral system was going on, after they crossed the Spotts/Newlands area. The Government decided they would claim half of the swampland after crossing Spotts/Newlands area. This did not happen on the western part of the island. The Minister does not have to comment because it would be his opinion. I am just wondering if this is another way of going around this again.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Planning, Communications and Works.

Hon. D. Kurt Tibbetts: I really want to make sure I understand.

Is the Member asking whether or not there may be any intentions of the Government to go through this exercise with a view to making any consequent claims to any parcels that are not registered as Crown land?

The Speaker: The Third Elected Member for Bodden Town.

Mr. Anthony S. Eden: Yes, Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Planning, Communications and Works.

Hon. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Mr. Speaker, I do not know how long I will be here but I am going to answer on behalf of every agency of Government today and categorically deny any thought of that nature.

I can assure anyone that, with knowledge, I would never participate in such an exercise. I am absolutely certain that if by some small chance there may be anyone else who may have that in their mind, which I doubt very much, I do not believe it will be long before that will go away too.

The Speaker: Are there any further supplementaries?
The Elected Member for East End.

Mr. V. Arden McLean: Following on that supplementary question I wonder if the Minister could say if these Environmentally Sensitive and Environmentally Protected areas will also apply to the western peninsular?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Planning, Communications and Works.

Hon. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Mr. Speaker, I do not have the maps with me but the exercise is island-wide. It is not limited to what is termed as the Central Wetlands. If one took the time to peruse the maps, one would see that the areas are not identified via district or location but simply by the natural state of the land.

The Speaker: Are there any further supplementaries?

There appear to be no further supplementaries. That concludes Question Time for this sitting.

Moving on to item number 5 on today's Order Paper, Statements by Honourable Ministers/Members of Government. A statement by the Honourable Minister responsible for the Ministry of Tourism, Environment and Transport.

STATEMENTS BY MINISTERS/MEMBERS OF THE GOVERNMENT

IMPORTATION OF AGGREGATE INTO THE CAYMAN ISLANDS

Hon. W. McKeever Bush: I wish to make a statement this morning concerning the importation of aggregate into the Cayman Islands.

Mr. Speaker, Members of this Honourable House have expressed concern with respect to the importation of aggregate through the North Sound due to the potential risk this presents to the North Sound's fragile marine environment.

I am pleased to report that, in response to these concerns, the Port Authority at its meeting on 11th July 2001 approved the importation of aggregate over the George Town Port at a cost of $2.00 per ton. The implementation of this decision and the associated fee will require an amendment to the Port Regulations (1999 Revision).

As a result of this decision by the Port Authority, the Senior Legislative Counsel was asked to draft amending legislation which she has done. The amendment regulations were considered at yesterday's Executive Council meeting and approved. The Port (Amendment) Regulations 2001 will be published in the Gazette in the very near future.

Mr. Speaker, in addition to the implementation of the $2.00 per ton fee for aggregate, the amendment regulations require the importers of aggregate to unload their cargo between the hours of 7 pm and 7 am at the George Town dock unless the Port Director has given authorisation to unload at another location. It follows that in the very near future, all aggregate imported into the Cayman Islands will be brought over to the George Town dock unless there are exceptional circumstances which would justify it being unloaded at a different location. Thank you.

Mr. V. Arden McLean: Mr. Speaker, I wonder if it is possible to ask the Minister of Tourism one specific question on this statement.

The Speaker: Yes, I will recognise you. The Elected Member for East End, a short question.

SHORT QUESTIONS

Standing Order 30(2)

Mr. V. Arden McLean: Thank you.

In his statement, I did not hear the Minister say anything about duties on the aggregate. That was also a concern of this Honourable House. I wonder if the Minister can say if duties have been reviewed on the imported aggregate also.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for the Ministry of Tourism, Environment and Transport.

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: The aspect of duty comes under the Financial Secretary. All duty is Cost, Insurance and Freight (CIF), so I believe that this would come in the very near future. I feel that the duty on aggregate should be the 20 percent CIF and I believe that the Government intends to have that done soon.

The Speaker: No further questions?

Is it the wish of the House to take the morning break before going on to other business?

We shall suspend for 15 minutes.

PROCEEDINGS SUSPENDED AT 11.48 AM

PROCEEDINGS RESUMED AT 12.12 PM

The Speaker: Please be seated.

I would ask for the suspension of Standing Order 14(2) in order for Private Members' Motions to be taken on a day other than Thursday.

SUSPENSION OF STANDING ORDER 14(2)

[Moved by the Elected Member for East End and seconded by the Second Elected Member for George Town]

QUESTION PUT. AGREED: STANDING ORDER 14(2) SUSPENDED TO ALLOW OTHER BUSINESS TO TAKE PRECEDENCE OVER GOVERNMENT BUSINESS.

"BE IT RESOLVED THAT this Honourable House debates and takes note of the present state of the Cayman Islands' economy, taking into account the effect of Government's recent tax measures and the OECD initiatives, and consider possible stimulus measures that may be undertaken to revive the economy."

The House has debated at length and taken note of the Motion. Accordingly, there is no motion to be moved.

Item 7, Government Business, Bills. First Readings.

GOVERNMENT BUSINESS

BILLS

FIRST READINGS

THE MONETARY AUTHORITY (AMENDMENT) (FEES) BILL, 2001

The Clerk: The Monetary Authority (Amendment) (Fees) Bill, 2001.

The Speaker: The Bill has been read a first time and is set down for Second Reading.

THE PUBLIC HEALTH (AMENDMENT) BILL, 2001

The Clerk: The Public Health (Amendment) Bill, 2001.

The Speaker: The Bill has been read a first time and is set down for a second reading.

THE COURT OF APPEAL (AMENDMENT) (PROSECUTION APPEALS) BILL, 2001

Withdrawn

The Clerk: The Court of Appeal (Amendment) (Prosecution Appeals) Bill, 2001.

The Speaker: The Honourable Second Official Member.

Hon. David F. Ballantyne: If this is the appropriate point, I beg to move that The Court of Appeal (Amendment) (Prosecution Appeals) Bill, 2001 be withdrawn. This is with a view to presenting a Bill at a later meeting containing an alternative provision, which is likely to be consisting of an Attorney General's reference rather than the Bill as presently framed.

The Speaker: So you have moved a motion that it be withdrawn?

Hon. David F. Ballantyne: I have, Mr. Speaker, if that is competent at this juncture. Thank you.

The Speaker: The Motion has been moved that The Court of Appeal (Amendment) (Prosecution Appeals) Bill 2001 be withdrawn. Those in favour please say Aye. Those against No.

AYES.

The Speaker: The Ayes have it.

AGREED: THE COURT OF APPEAL (AMENDMENT) (PROSECUTION APPEALS) BILL, 2001 WITHDRAWN.

The Speaker: Second Readings.

SECOND READINGS

THE MONETARY AUTHORITY (AMENDMENT) (FEES) BILL, 2001

The Clerk: The Monetary Authority (Amendment) (Fees) Bill, 2001.

The Speaker: The Honourable Temporary Third Official Member.

Hon. A. Joel Walton: I rise to move the Second Reading of a Bill entitled The Monetary Authority (Amendment) (Fees) Bill, 2001.

The Speaker: Do you wish to speak to it?

Hon. A. Joel Walton: Just a couple of brief comments on the Bill.

The Bill amends the Monetary Authority Law (2001R) to empower the Monetary Authority to charge fees for certain services provided by the Authority.

Clause 2 amends section 40 of the Law to provide that the Governor may make regulations providing for such matters as may be contemplated by or necessary for giving full effect to the Law and for its administration, including the charging of fees for any administrative service provided by the Authority to a licensee or to members of the public upon request.

Clause 3 of the Bill provides a new Schedule 2 which sets out the fees for a letter confirming registration or licensed status of company, et cetera and status of regulatory filings. The fee being proposed is $200 for that service.

The second fee: a fee for the approval by the Authority of the appointment of a new director of a licensee, also $200. The fee for voluntary surrender of a licence or registration certificate to the Authority, a fee of $200. That, Sir, is the substance of this Bill.

The Speaker: A Bill entitled The Monetary Authority (Amendment) (Fees) Bill, 2001 has been duly moved. The Bill is open for debate. Does any Member wish to speak? (Pause)

If not, does the Mover wish to exercise his right of reply?

Hon. A. Joel Walton: Just to say thanks to the Members for their support.

The Speaker: The question is that a Bill entitled The Monetary Authority (Amendment) (Fees) Bill, 2001 be given a second reading. Those in favour please say Aye. Those against No.

AYES.

The Speaker: The Ayes have it.

AGREED: THE MONETARY AUTHORITY (AMENDMENT) (FEES) BILL, 2001 GIVEN A SECOND READING.

The Speaker: Bills, Second Reading.

THE PUBLIC HEALTH (AMENDMENT) BILL, 2001

The Clerk: The Public Health (Amendment) Bill, 2001.

The Speaker: The Honourable Temporary Third Official Member.

Hon. A. Joel Walton: I beg to move the Second Reading of a Bill entitled The Public Health (Amendment) Bill, 2001.

The Speaker: Do you wish to speak to it Honourable Temporary Third Official Member?

Hon. A. Joel Walton: I will just read a couple of explanations from the Memorandum of Objects and Reasons.

"This Bill amends the Public Health Law (1996R) to make further provision in respect of the charging of fees under the principal Law."

“Clauses 2, 3, and 5, enable the Governor in Council to prescribe fees for miscellaneous services provided under the principal Law, including services relating to rodent control and cemeteries.”

“Clause 4 enables the charging and collection of a special waste handling fee in respect of the importation of motor vehicles, lead-acid batteries and motor vehicle tyres.”

Members will recall the discussion we had over several months about the need to make some special provision for disposal of those special wastes. The fee being proposed for handling special waste is actually under four categories. I will just run through them quickly.

Under “Part 4 (a): A special waste handling fee of two hundred and fifty dollars in respect of any motor vehicle (other than a motor cycle) imported into the Islands.” In effect, we would pay that fee for disposal of the vehicle when it comes time to do that.

“(b) A special waste handling fee of seventy five dollars in respect of any motor cycle imported into the island; a special waste handling fee of five dollars in respect of any lead-acid battery imported into the Islands;

“(d) A special waste handling fee of two dollars in respect of any motor vehicle tyre imported into the Islands.”

The attempt is to try to create a much more equitable way of dealing with these special wastes since they do take special handling because of the impact on the environment brought about by their breakdown.

Clause 5 is like a validation clause. It relates to a number of various fees incurred but not specifically defined in the existing Public Health Law. This clause seeks to validate those fees.

Thank you.

The Speaker: The Floor is open for debate. Does any Member wish to speak?

The Second Elected Member for West Bay.

Mr. Rolston M. Anglin: Thank you.

In reviewing the outlined fee structure, I have just two brief comments. First, I wondered why some of these fees appeared to be so low. For example, the handling of a battery is $5.00. Hopefully the Member can clarify these fees. I wondered if that is reflective of the cost that Government will incur. Let us just go through all of them.

Part A, $200 for the handling of a motor vehicle seems exceptionally low; handling fee of $75 for a motorcycle seems low; $5 for a battery; $2 for a tyre. We have all talked about Government charging appropriate fees for the services it provides to the public of this country because when we do not do that we then have to tax people in other areas to make up for the shortfall.

It is my humble submission that whenever we seek to charge any fees, we should seek to charge the consumer, the public, what it costs the Government so that people will not have to incur taxes in other areas and wonder why.

In regard to these structured fees, I wonder if they are for vehicles that are delivered to particular sites, or will Government also be responsible for having to go around picking up these vehicles? I wondered what the logic was for the fees in regard to the cost incurred by Government. I feel that these fees—any fee Government charges—should be the cost so that the public does not have an unrealistic expectation that this is the fee for the service and that is it. This is what we have done over the years.

We subsidise certain areas and people do not realise why they are being taxed in other areas. At the end of the day, Government cannot provide services for free. Government has to tax the public in order to raise the funds to provide the service. Those are my few comments.

The Speaker: The Third Elected Member for George Town.

Dr. Frank S. McField: This is a way of Government trying to raise revenue or cause persons to pay for services that Government provides. Whether or not Government has been scientific in arriving at the fees quoted in this Bill is a question they need to answer.

If Government is saying it will cost $250 to remove a vehicle once it has served its time on the road, it would be interesting to note if Government has taken into consideration what particular procedures will go into effect in terms of collecting that abandoned vehicle.

I am sure that a lot of people do not just leave their cars to be on the road where they have to be picked up by the Department of Environmental Health. If we are going to dispose of our old vehicles, whether or not this fee will cover the cost has been a question raised by my colleague, the Second Elected Member for West Bay. He is arguing that Government needs to become more aware of the cost that it will incur to deliver a specific service and it needs to charge the consumer accordingly.

I guess that at some particular time we will want to restructure our entire system in such a way as to allow that to make sense, not just to Government, but to the consumer as well. My colleague, the Second Elected Member for West Bay, is looking at it from the perspective of Government. It should make sense from the perspective of Government, but I look at it from the perspective of the consumer and say that it must also make sense to the consumer. There must be logic to it.

If as a consumer, I will be required to pay fees according to the value of the services that I receive from the Government, then Government should be like any other corporation in that it should not be able to tax me—because I am paying for my services from Government. Therefore, what gives them any right to tax me if I am paying Government for whatever services I receive?

If I pay Caribbean Utilities (CUC) for the services I receive, according to the value of those services, then CUC does not turn around and tax me. So, if we are going to talk about Government being more scientific and arriving at the exact cost of services and charging the consumer the fees for those services, then Government cannot turn around and have an additional tax structure.

Whether or not we want to call it “consumption tax” or “fees for services received” the consumer at this point will regard this Bill as creating additional penalties for the consumption or the use of automobiles and parts that go along with those vehicles. It will cause prices to increase in these areas.

I am quite sure the Second Elected Member for West Bay is very aware that to add to these fees, whether or not a true representation of the value of service Government will be offering, to add at this time $250 in respect of any motor vehicle imported into these Islands and to have a special waste handling fee of $2 in respect of any motor vehicle tyre imported into these Islands will also raise the cost of tyres. It will raise the price of batteries as well because the persons who import the vehicles, tyres and batteries will not sell them for less as a result of Government increasing its fees.

Government is making a very important consideration at this point, but Government has not come to tell us how it is going to work out a fair relationship between consumer and supplier and itself. This is in order that the consumer is not the one that feels disadvantaged simply because the consumer is least able to react against these impositions when they come. There is very little consultation with the consumer as to what he can afford at a particular time.

Those of us who are cognizant of the economic climate in this country should be very aware, especially when dealing with the importation of vehicles, tyres and batteries that are going to be used by repair companies. They are going to work this additional cost into the price of the service they are now going to deliver. We have seen it with little things like the increase of gasoline and how that trickled down to the consumer and Government is not willing to do anything to manage the increase in prices in our community.

I heard some of the comments made by the Second Elected Member for West Bay on the economic condition of the country. He was making the case that more taxes caused the prices to go up, but taxes are what people call all the things that Government does. It is hard for the normal citizen to separate this as being a charge for a service, a fee and not a tax. The general population is going to see this as a tax, not a fee. So there is an educational process that Government could get involved with in trying to explain better to our population what is meant by “tax” and what is meant by “fee.”

I do not believe this is a good Bill at this time. This is a time that Government has it hard, but Government also has to realise that the general population has it hard too and will most likely be having it a little rougher before the year is completed. We are at the mid-part of our year. That means a lot of people are getting ready for the festive season. A few dollars mean a lot to people who are indebted in a lot of instances.

This fee is only a disguise tax. I do believe that the Second Elected Member for West Bay is very aware of the fact that his constituents will see this as a tax. I hope the day will come when Government will be able to distinguish much better between a fee and a tax and that this will be understood by the wider population.

At this moment, I feel obligated to treat this as a tax because of the time at which it comes. I believe Government has done its homework to look more scientifically at the cost of getting rid of the waste created by imported vehicles and parts and Government knows it costs more. There are certain people who allow their vehicles on the road and Government has to send out the Environmental Health people to put stickers on them, claim them and take them to the dump. There are also persons who are a little bit more careful of how they dispose of their used vehicles. These people are going to also have to bear the extra cost in this situation because the tax is not discriminating between those persons that have proven responsible and those who have not.

The Government is getting its 20 percent or whatever, because some cars attract a higher import duty. If Government is dissatisfied with the amount of money it is getting, then the Government needs to say so. Government then needs to revise its import duty structure to cover these additional costs. Government will then get rid of these things and not come up with a separate Bill that seems to have nothing to do with taxation, but is all about an additional tax. It is a penalty or cost to the consumer which goes directly to the Government. It is, therefore, at this time, because of the way in which our Government is structured, and the way in which we understand the fees, versus taxes, or duties, or revenue, or enhancement measures, or whatever we want to call it. The money raised goes to offset the cost of services being provided to the community.

I believe this is a tax. As a result, I have said I would not support any taxes. I want Government to become disciplined in terms of learning how to live within its means and in terms of learning how we cannot please everybody by distributing benefits to everybody while, at the same time, putting the taxes basically on the consumer and on the persons who can least afford it. This is but another attempt by Government to raise money—or to raise taxes.

The Speaker: The Second Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. Alden M. McLaughlin, Jr.: Thank you.

I had not intended to speak to this Bill. I thought the provisions of it were innocuous and not lending themselves to controversy. After having heard the contribution by the Third Elected Member for George Town, I think I should say something.

From the time I was elected to this Honourable House, and indeed long before, I have been an advocate of small government. I have said on a number of occasions I believe the size of the Civil Service and of Government generally is much too large for the country to be able to handle. Now that we are at a time when there is not a surplus of funds in Government's treasury, we feel the crunch.

I have said that you cannot expect to reduce the size of the Civil Service unless we are prepared to reduce the services that Government offers to this country. We cannot have one without the other. A corollary to that is the fact that has been alluded to by the Second Elected Member for West Bay.

If Government is going to provide services to the community, the latter has got to be prepared for those services. It is far more equitable for those using the services, or who have the benefit of those services to pay for them, than for a flat general tax to be placed upon all members of this community. The funds derived thereby can be utilised for the provision of these specific services.

We have a situation in this country in which I believe there are some 25,000 vehicles for a population of approximately 40,000. Recently, there was a report that some 2,000 additional vehicles were imported into this Island over the course of last year. There has been much debate within this Chamber and outside about the extensive and hurried re-paving of some of our roads last year at the cost of millions of dollars.

Government has been working over the last year and a half or so, to provide a Crewe Road bypass. Previously, there was the construction of the Harquail Bypass and there are plans to extend that. I hear often about the need for a Bodden Town bypass. As recently as yesterday I heard about the need for a bypass that would commence in North Side.

The more vehicles we have imported to this Island, the more roads we have to build, the more Government's resources are stretched to do these various things. I believe that if we are to avoid things like income tax and property tax, that scare the pants off most people in this community, this country has to get to a point where the community pays for the services it receives from Government, or Government divests itself of the responsibility for the provision of those services and someone else assumes that responsibility.

I believe that to require importers of new vehicles to pay a waste handling fee and a waste handling fee for tyres and batteries, is justifiable. It is not, as the Third Elected Member for George Town has described it, a tax. It is specifically described as a fee within the amending Bill and it is a fee for the provision of a service.

So, while I appreciate the fact that it is likely to increase the cost of a tyre or a battery, I do not believe it is going to increase the cost of the vehicle significantly and it will give the Government additional resources to dispose of the many derelict vehicles left here, there and everywhere for which all within the community have to pay at present.

Before I sit down, I should say that I believe the time has come for Government to look carefully at the whole issue of the importation of vehicles to this country and whether or not we can reasonably continue the unrestricted importation of vehicles in the long run. I know that is a somewhat sensitive issue, but this is a very, very small country, with limited roads. Unless Government is able to find the resources to build a huge amount of new roads which are needed, given the congestion we all experience on a daily basis, I believe we need to give real consideration to the implementation and provision of efficient public transport and restricting the number of vehicles which any one individual or family is permitted to own at one time.

With those few words, I wish to indicate my support of the Bill. Thank you.

GOVERNMENT BUSINESS

BILLS

SECOND READINGS

THE PUBLIC HEALTH
(AMENDMENT) BILL, 2001

Mr. Gilbert A. McLean: Thank you.

This Bill before the House seeks to place a charge on motor vehicles, motor cycles, lead-acid batteries and motor vehicle tyres for special waste handling. I think one could justifiably place a charge on such items which are brought into the Cayman Islands. It seems clear we are talking about items in the future, once the Bill is passed. The Government will collect a fee for handling these particular items which are difficult to dispose of both in finding space and in the management of their disposal.

These items have a way of providing litter and poisoning the ground especially in the case of batteries. Certainly, if we think of the thousands of cars in the Cayman Islands, it might be good for us to reflect on how tyres are being disposed of. I can see this as an item that would take up a considerable amount of space in the landfill.

I share the view of the Second Elected Member for West Bay when he said that the amount seemed rather small—$2.00 on a tyre, $5.00 on a battery and $75.00 on the disposal of a motorcycle, and $250.00 for a motor car. In speaking to this Bill, I think the time has come for the Government to find means, or look about buying equipment to dispose of motor vehicles. In just about all States of the United States, they have the means to crush them. I understand the equipment is quite expensive, but I really believe that we need to look seriously at this matter.

There is also the question of oil disposal, which can contaminate the environment. There is the gas-line. Should any of us like to see a horror scene, we should drive in the area of the landfill in George Town. If that does not create a sense of horror, I do not know what will. I have done that and it is really unbelievable what one can see there.

To my mind, finding a means of disposing of the waste in this country should be a major priority. I know it is expensive, but I also know it will be something that will forever have to be addressed and the sooner we come to a decision to dispose of this waste, the better it will be. I know there has been a recent study done and there are many attendant costs. This is one I think we need to address quickly.

Batteries are sold in Cayman by the thousands! I do not know how well the disposal of those batteries is managed. As for tyres, I understand there is a place in Florida where the metal is taken from them; they are shredded and the fine chips are used as a mix in hotmix asphalt. I understand they have found it to be some of the most durable hotmixed asphalt made. It gives it a certain elasticity which seems to serve well during road use.

I believe the money collected from these items should not go into general revenue, but into a special fund to handle the disposal of these items. Yesterday I think there was a question that there is such a fund. I believe this money should go into a special fund to be used for these purposes. Perhaps this could be the fund that goes towards finding modern means of disposing of solid waste in the Cayman Islands.

I think it is an excellent occasion for the Customs' Department and the Statistics' Department to cooperate on developing statistics on these particular items. I do not know if any true figure exists as to how many motor cars there are in Cayman. It would be good to find out both the sizes and types of motor vehicles that are here, particularly when people with heavy equipment want special considerations given that no more should be brought in. Government should have its own figures in order to respond and to know if it is a realistic request or not. We have to be in a position where we know how many gas guzzling motor cars are in the country and how many smaller ones. This is all valuable information for good public management.

One Member suggested that the time has come to look at restrictions. Someday, I dare say it will come to that. I am not prepared to say when, in that I would only offer an opinion, if I knew what was here now, how many public transport or mass transit vehicles are in the country. I can certainly see where it could serve more than one particular good.

I wish it were possible in all instances when the Government would bring about an increase of taxes that it could be broken down into items such as this where one could look at each one individually and debate it and vote for or against, rather than as the recent tax package where they were all together from eggs right down to these particular items. However, I believe this is sensible management. These are items that require the special consideration of Government. Ultimately, when these items die it definitely becomes the problem of the Government to bury them.

Mr. Speaker, I give my support to this Bill.

The Speaker: Does any other Member wish to speak? (Pause) Does any other Member wish to speak?

The Honourable Minister responsible for Education, Human Resources and Culture.

Hon. Roy Borden: Thank you.

I rise to offer brief comments on a Bill for a Law to make further provision in respect of the charging of fees under the Public Health Law (1996 Revision). The first comment I wish to make is obvious. The Cayman Islands forms a consumer society. The problem is compounded because all we consume is imported into these islands. Many things we import carry with them certain risks and hazards in their use and particularly in their disposal.

Many people do not realise the waste issues surrounding automobiles. While it is true to say that automobiles are indispensable in our lives, it is also true to say that, by their very nature, automobiles pose challenges that we very often do not think about. Coming from the industry I have said for a long time that the Government needed to pay closer attention because it seemed as if the responsibility was largely upon the Government for the disposing of vehicles which were unused, abandoned, scrapped. We are not only talking about the metal, but other things more hazardous.

I recently heard on the news that there are 25,000 vehicles on the roads of the Cayman Islands. That came from the Department of Vehicles and the Statistics' Department. When you seriously ponder the number of old tyres which are abandoned and unused every month, and realise that the very material they are made from is not easily broken down, or not biodegradable, it is mind-boggling. In the past, I think we just buried these things at the dump.

It is also mind-boggling to think of the amount of space it takes to bury each tyre. When you multiply that by the number of tyres per month, it is no wonder we are running out of landfill space. Burying these is not a very efficient way of disposing of them. The time has come for the Government to think of more efficient means, but also to think of passing on the cost in disposing of these to the right entities—that is the users, the owners of these vehicles and to be fair, the people who sell them in the first place.

I think this Bill is timely and I am happy to see that it has widespread support by the Members on the Backbench. It seems reasonable that anyone who owns these kinds of vehicles and sell them should be prepared to pay for this. I think the Government already provides a great service by virtue of the fact that it is responsible for providing all the roads and highways. I would also support the call echoed by my colleague, the Second Elected Member for Bodden Town, for the Government to look seriously at its own instrument for disposing of these vehicles.

Whether we flatten them or not, by now, there are affordable contraptions, bearing in mind that we will not have 1,000 vehicles every week to destroy. We should begin to look at this. There is a market for recycling the metal, the iron and the steel from these vehicles. Given enough, if it is even once or twice a year, we could ship this off our Islands and realise some return rather than just burying them or storing them in the dump taking up precious landfill space.

This whole business of waste oil has never been handled satisfactorily in the country. The entities responsible for selling the oil in the first place should bear more of the responsibility. There is no greater contaminant than oil and gasoline. If you bury it, it pollutes the water table. If it gets into surface water, it ruins it. In many jurisdictions arrangements are made for recycling this.

I am especially fearful of the lead content in the batteries. It has been historically proven that one of the contributing factors to the demise of the great Roman Empire was the fact that the people drank their wine from lead goblets. Even the Caesars were not immune to the cases of insanity. Scientists have found that one of the contributing factors to insanity was the lead content in the body. Children are particularly vulnerable. If this gets into our water system, this will be a long-term cause of a health breakdown, not to mention the fumes we inhale.

I see people jogging along corridors that are heavily travelled by automobiles. I contend that is counterproductive. While getting the muscles fit, you are ruining the brain and the lungs by inhaling all those lead fumes. It just so happens that the fuel we use in our vehicles here is not the most scientifically refined. Even unleaded gasoline has a high lead content.

It is timely, reasonable and right that the Government looks at measures like this. It is what I consider a fair tax because it should not be left to the Government to bear all the responsibility and financial burden of disposing of these things.

I am happy to be a part of a Government that promotes this type of responsibility and consciousness. It is hoped that this fee will not be viewed as punitive but educational; promoting awareness that certain hazards come with the use of these things. The payment of the fee should serve to inform people that owning an automobile is more than turning the key in the ignition and driving it away. We have other responsibilities as well—the disposal of the lead batteries, the disposal of the waste oil and the disposal of the metal shell.

If Government could embark on more of these ventures, perhaps there would be greater understanding when we levy fees. I am especially pleased to say that the rationale behind the levying of these particular fees is flawless. I give it my full support.

The Speaker: The Elected Member for East End.

Mr. V. Arden McLean: I rise to make a very short contribution on the Bill before us to bring fees under the Public Health Law.

I too would like to echo some of the remarks made by other Members who have spoken. I have some concerns about the amounts being levied, and also where they are being levied. It reads that it shall be charged, collected and paid through Customs. I suspect that is for the future when cars, batteries, and tyres come in. If you look at the number of vehicles and it is 25,000, as the Minister of Education said, we can calculate that: four tyres per vehicle will total 100,000 tyres. It is really more than that because we have big 18 wheel vehicles. We can figure that those 100,000 tyres will wear out within the next two years. That is 100,000 tyres the Government has to handle and nothing is being levied on these as a disposal fee.

There are also the 25,000 vehicles. Yes, they will be replaced. We still have to dispose of those that are currently on the island. It is the Government's responsibility. I support levying a fee on these imported commodities. As soon as the merchant sells that commodity, he bears no more responsibility in protecting the environment and Government then has to do it. I understand the private sector may not necessarily see the viability of recycling at this time because of it being much less in numbers than other places in the world where consumption is much greater. Therefore, if it is placed upon the Government, someone has to assist Government with the cost. While I do not know how much it costs to process a car at our landfill, I certainly doubt that $250 is going to deal with it.

I was at the landfill recently and saw that they had a stack of cars to send to Cuba. There is a handling charge to get them out of the country as well. We cannot procrastinate on situations such as the disposal of cars, tyres and batteries. If there is no action on our part, the relatively clean environment we enjoy today will be destroyed for future generations.

It is time for Government to start looking at machinery to do recycling and disposal. We heard recently that the current landfill is almost up to its maximum capacity. The Government is actively looking for alternate sites. The vehicles, tyres and batteries significantly contribute to the reason why the landfill has reached its capacity. Government has to find some way to dispose of these bulky and dangerous items like lead batteries and oil. I am surprised we do not see a fee for the disposal of oil, also. I believe that the oil companies some years ago took up an initiative to dispose of oils at the gas stations. I do not know to what extent that is still in place. Government also collects a lot of oil up at the Department of Vehicle and Equipment Services (DVES). Government has many more vehicles here than any other entity.

We should not just stop at levying a few dollars at the time of importation just to raise some funds to offset the cost. We also have to think of other dangerous commodities that arrive in this island and how they are going to be disposed of. I know that in Caribbean Utilities Company, my former employer, they recycled their oil by sending it back overseas in big containers. I do not know if the oil companies do the same thing, but if Government has to handle anyone's oil, users should have to pay for the disposal. I do not see anything of that nature. Maybe the Acting Temporary Third Official Member will tell us what is currently being done with oils that come into the country.

I have no problem or any hesitation in supporting the levying of tariffs on these commodities. Thank you.

The Speaker: The Floor is open for debate. Does any other Member wish to speak? (Pause) The Floor is open for debate. Does any other Member wish to speak? (Pause) Last call, does any other Member wish to speak? If not, does the Mover wish to exercise his right of reply?

The Honourable Temporary Third Official Member.

Hon A. Joel Walton: I rise to reply to the Public Health (Amendment) Bill, 2001. I have a couple of general comments that are more of an informational nature.

In my introduction of the Bill, I omitted to say that this Bill seeks to bring into effect one of the 17 revenue measures the Honourable Financial Secretary on delivering the Budget Address highlighted. I will just refer back to that document. There were environmental health fees for $215,886. This Bill therefore seeks to put in place the legal requirement to allow us to collect that money. It is not a new fee, in that it was discussed previously. It forms a part of the revenue side of the Budget which was approved a couple of months back.

The second general point is that this fee is not retrospective in that it applies at the point of importation. There was a question as to how we would handle a car upon importation: would we separate the car, the batteries and the tyres and charge separately? How the fee works, Sir, is that you pay $250 for the car. There is no separate charge at that point for the battery and tyres.

The reason there are separate charges for those items is that they are durables. As and when you wear them out, you buy them. So, when you import tyres as a bulk item, you pay the fee at that time. The same would apply to batteries. The same principle would be applied to motorcycles as to cars—you pay for the motorcycle as a complete part as opposed to separated out at the point of importation.

All cars currently on the Island do not pay this fee. All batteries, all motorcycles, all tyres that are already here, there is no fee. This fee will kick in once it is gazetted and assented to later on in the month and will apply to all incoming, all new items being imported into the islands at the point of importation. You do not pay beyond that point except when you replace your battery or your tyres.

Listening to the discussion yesterday, about the concept of trying to move to the user paying fees as opposed to general taxes, I was reminded about the comic, "Is it a bird? Is it a plane? No, it's Superman!" It was quite interesting to listen to a doctor in sociology and a lawyer debate the differences between fees and taxes. It certainly makes my life a lot easier this morning to say that it probably is a fee in that it is related specifically (and I see Dr. McField smiling) to a particular service which you get at the point of disposal. It goes back to that particular service.

Just allow me to talk a bit about that because I think the Second Elected Member for Bodden Town spoke about the special fund. I know the House is probably sick of hearing about the Financial Management Initiative and financial reform. One of the underpinning principles which guide that reform is identifying which service a department is providing and seeking to charge the economic rate for that service. That being, whatever it costs the department to provide such a service, for example, disposal of batteries or tyres. You then charge the user of the service a fee to at least cover the cost of that service.

This is what we are seeking to do here. Again, as the old saying goes, a rose is a rose no matter what you call it, so I do understand the Third Elected Member for George Town in his presentation as well. I would submit that it is a fee because it relates to a specific service the department provides for us as residents of the country.

Under the Financial Market Initiative, the guiding principle is that all departments, wherever possible, charge fees to cover their services. Appropriations for that department then become net appropriations in that if the Department of Environmental Health is able to charge the economic rates for all of its services, it will not need an appropriation. This comes back to what the Second Elected Member for Bodden Town spoke to, a special fund, in that all the revenue related to that department for the services provided goes back to funding the services of that department.

So, rather than having these global funds, like the Environmental Protection and so on, we have funds that are specific to departments' services. Of course, there will be departments, for example Prison, Police, Health, and Education, for which Government will have to continue to use taxes; that is, types of levies which do not relate specifically to your service. For example, take import duty. The bulk of import duty collected goes to other areas of Government. The Customs Department probably uses less than 5 percent of what it collects to provide the service. That is a tax. It is an item we use to coerce the consumer to contribute to general public goods.

That is why we use import duty, to provide prison services for which we really could not charge, police services and to a lesser extent social services, particularly national assistance, welfare and the like. That is my quick attempt to distinguish between what is and what is not. I have been able to get some general agreement from both Members.

There were also some comments yesterday about the actual size of the fee. Being partially responsible, as Deputy, for financing public services, we are always happy to hear when persons realise that we are not seeking to overcharge the public for services by the Government. The approach we took was to try to start with a fair and reasonable fee. It might not pay for all of the services but we try to start small because it is a new fee. We can look at what it costs to provide the service and then adjust it up or down at a later date. That was the approach.

The idea has been around for many years. This time we have been able to get it through with the support of Members of this House.

Thank you.

The Honourable Second Official Member.

THE POLICE (AMENDMENT) (INTIMATE SAMPLES) BILL, 2001
Postponed

Hon. David F. Ballantyne: Thank you.

I introduced this matter on the last occasion but then sought to have it postponed. Today, if the House is agreeable, I would move that further debate on the Second Reading be postponed until the next meeting. This is with a view to using the time in the interval to address issues of possible concern. It is expected when these issues are further addressed that additional provision may be thought appropriate to make sure that the appropriate balance is maintained between the need to obtain evidence and the rights of the accused.

The Government would welcome the opportunity to look at this and if so advised to bring forward certain additions to the Bill.

In short, the Bill as drafted is bolted on to the existing Law. Looking into it, and having heard informal comments, I am of the view that we could improve on the existing Law with a view to having an effective Law providing a clear method of obtaining this, but which depended on either the consent of the individual or the need to obtain a court order in the absence of consent.

Accordingly, I wish the opportunity to revisit this and would be obliged if I might move postponing further debate for that purpose.

The Speaker: You wish to postpone, not withdraw?

Hon. David F. Ballantyne: No, Mr. Speaker, I do not wish to withdraw it. If it is acceptable . . . I realise we prefer not to carry business forward, but, by the same token, the Bill as it stands will probably be in that form but will undoubtedly be likely to have additional provision in it to address the matters that I mentioned.

The Speaker: I shall put the question that The Police (Amendment) (Intimate Samples) Bill, 2001 be postponed until the next meeting. Those in favour please say Aye. Those against No.

AYES.

The Speaker: The Ayes have it.

THE EVIDENCE (AMENDMENT) (SPOUSES, EXPERTS, FOREIGN CONVICTIONS, ALIBIS, RIGHT TO SILENCE ETC.) BILL, 2001

Hon. David F. Ballantyne: I rise to move the Second Reading of a Bill entitled, The Evidence (Amendment) (Spouses, Experts, Foreign Convictions, Alibis, Right to Silence, Etc.) Bill, 2001.

The Speaker: Do you wish to speak to it?

Hon. David F. Ballantyne: Thank you.

Again, certain aspects of this Bill have proved to occasion some concern on the part of Members. The concerns mainly relate to the parts of the Bill seeking to enable a court or jury to draw inferences from the silence of the accused in a particular set of circumstances, either a failure to say something in response to questioning or a failure to advance any defence at an earlier stage. Undeniably, when these provisions were introduced in the United Kingdom they occasioned some debate there also.

As I mentioned on an earlier occasion, we have taken on board the nature of the concerns and have obtained from the United Kingdom the Law Commission Report which led to these changes there. It is a document of some 260 pages in length. There is also a Home Office Report on how in fact the inferences have operated since the introduction of the legislation. The plan is that, with the assistance of my colleagues, we would arrange an informal presentation for Members on these issues. That will take a little time and it is best that it does in order that these matters are properly understood, and, if agree, can be proceeded upon.

In the meantime, however, it is thought that the remainder of the Bill is relatively uncontroversial and therefore the proposal would be that we would sever those parts of the Bill relating to the inferences to be drawn from the silence of the accused and simply proceed with the balance. What I will talk to today would be the other parts of the Bill in relation to which I have not heard any concerns expressed.

The committee stage would see a severing of these other parts relating to the inferences from silence. So, the Bill will then consist of what I am about to talk to now. It is a bit of a mouthful, this Bill, in the sense that it covers a number of topics. However, these are thought to be improvements in relation to the law of evidence.

The first issue is relating to the compellability of a spouse in this jurisdiction. The current position here is that the spouse of an accused person is competent, but not compellable, to give evidence—the spouse may give evidence, but cannot be compelled. In this instance, it is seen that the inability to compel a spouse to give evidence may not assist in dealing with cases, for example, involving domestic abuse in particular harm to young persons.

The new provision in this Bill would allow for a spouse not only to be competent, but also compellable, but only where the offence charged involves assault, injury, or threat of injury to a wife or husband, or where the victim is under the age of 16, or where the matter relates to a sexual offence in relation to a person under 16. So the motivation is designed to be for the protection of persons from, effectively, if I may describe it, domestic abuse.

A spouse would also be compellable where the offence consisted of conspiring to commit or assist in, abetting, or counselling, or procuring any of the offences that I mentioned.

The final part to which I should refer is that where parties are no longer married to each other, the Bill would make provision for the former spouse to give evidence as if they had never been married.

These are relatively modest improvements, but important in relation to dealing with the difficult social issue of domestic assault and injury.

The next topic in the Bill is an amendment to the Law to provide for advance notice of expert evidence. I am informed that it can happen that a surprise expert witness may be presented in a criminal matter without any prior notification. This measure seeks to avoid the unfairness that would cause by requiring all parties to provide advanced notice of any expert evidence intended to be produced. At the present time, the Crown, the prosecution, is required to make advance disclosure to the defence, but the defence has no similar obligation. This provision would allow both sides an opportunity to look into what the expert witness will say and also the credentials of the expert which is another important aspect.

In the same vein, clause 4 of the Bill proposes to provide that an alibi defence, in other words the accused person was someplace else at the time the offence was committed, would require particulars to be given. These are detailed in the Bill. This is intended to remove any element of surprise and would allow the defence of an alibi to be examined and investigated.

This was first introduced in the United Kingdom under section 11 of the 1967 Criminal Justice Act, and more recently confirmed under the Criminal Procedure Investigation Act, 1996, in the U.K., which latter Act provides for a more general disclosure by both defence and prosecution.

I may say in my own jurisdiction, Scotland, alibi has always been, for as long as can be remembered, a special defence of which requires notice to be given so that the prosecution can take account of it. I think the gist of this Bill is that if notice is not given, then evidence relating to either expert evidence or an alibi defence would be at the discretion of the court. It would not say it could not be given, but the leave of the court would be required.

The next provision is a very important one to bring the Law of evidence in criminal matters in line with international standards in other parts of the world. Under Cayman Islands law, as it stands, there is a principle which emanated from the U.K. case called Hollington & Hawthorne in 1943. This provided that, in a criminal case, the conviction of a principal, the thief, is inadmissible as evidence of the commission of theft at the trial of a secondary party, for example, a person charged with handling stolen goods.

This rule has been abolished in the U.K. since 1968 in civil matters and in criminal matters since 1984, but it still obtains in the Cayman Islands in respect of criminal matters. This puts the Crown at a disadvantage in seeking to prosecute certain offences, for example, money laundering, where the predicate offence requires to be established in order to establish the money laundering offence. This is particularly where the predicate offence is committed abroad but the proceeds are laundered in the Cayman Islands.

In order to prosecute such offences, we would be required to prove the predicate offence, the underlying offence, which occurred overseas from which the proceeds of crime then flowed to constitute the money laundering charges. The latter facilitating the concealment of the proceeds of crime. You have to show that those proceeds were the proceeds of a crime in the first place. That crime would have to be proved all over again in the Cayman Islands.

The amendment to the Law would allow for evidence to be given in our courts that the predicate offence had been committed in the foreign jurisdiction by allowing the conviction of that court to be admitted in evidence. It would not be conclusive. It could be rebutted if the contrary were proved that the person did not in fact commit the offence. It would create a presumption of fact, in my view, and it would alleviate the difficulty of having to prove all over again the foreign conviction.

It also applies in other cases as well if it is necessary to establish that a person committed a criminal offence somewhere else on a previous occasion. I should add that section 39 of the existing Evidence of Law allows proof of conviction as evidence in civil proceedings so this would bring criminal proceedings in line with that.

As I mentioned, the provisions of the Bill relating to inferences are to be severed at the Committee stage. That would leave the following further provisions by way of amendment to the Evidence Law, two provisions that are related: 1) we allow evidence to be given by live television link where a witness is outwith the islands, which would considerably reduce the cost of prosecuting cases. It is not only convenient and expeditious but quite cost effective. Not all witnesses would be required to travel to the Cayman Islands to give evidence, sometimes at considerable expense. Given the increasingly global nature of criminal matters, and the extra territorial nature of some, this is thought to be a useful addition to having witnesses give such evidence. They would be available for the purposes of cross-examination just as a live witness would be.

If, in a particular matter, the witness was vital either to Crown or defence, I think the Crown would not be unreasonable in seeking to accord with requests for witnesses to be brought. The advantage would be that perhaps for matters that are not crucial, but important, that evidence could be given in this way.

Associated with this is the final provision which seeks to make provision for video recording of testimony from a child witness. This, involving young people, is always difficult and requires courts to act in a sensitive way. Members of the House will be familiar with the ability of a court to screen young persons from other parties, particularly the accused in sensitive cases. The provision is relatively self-explanatory.

One of the main policy reasons is to protect or minimise the incidence where the child is likely to suffer further trauma within a court environment, particularly having to be confronted by a party who had caused damage to that child.

In some jurisdictions this is done by screening. In this instance the provisions regarding video recording would essentially be used to deal with evidence-in-chief. Provision would also be made, possibly by television link from another location, for cross-examination of the young person so as to provide a safe environment. I trust these measures are reasonably self-explanatory, but in the event there are any questions I would endeavour to deal with those in the summing up.

These are important advances and will assist the jurisdiction in the administration of justice. I understand these measures have the support of the judiciary and I would commend the Bill to the House.

Mr. Aiden M. McLaughlin, Jr.: Thank you.

I rise to offer a few observations on the Bill before the House. The Honourable Second Official Member, in introducing the Bill, referred to discussions with Members of this House in relation to concerns raised in regard to some parts of that Bill. He has indicated that the sections relating to our concerns will be deleted during the committee stage of this Bill.

Those sections relate to what is generally termed the accused's right to silence. The sections concerned would impact or impinge upon that right to the extent that it would create a situation whereby adverse inferences could be drawn by the court or a jury as a result of the accused's silence at various stages leading up to the commencement of proceedings and indeed during the course of those proceedings.

My concerns in relation to those sections are quite fundamental and the Honourable Second Official Member has indicated that a presentation would be made to Members of this Honourable House dealing with the basis for these provisions which are provisions that now form part of English legislation. In particular, they form part of the Criminal Justice and Public Order Act of 1994, which was a U.K. statute.

As they are being withdrawn, I do not intend to engage in a long debate about them, but I thought I should say that while my mind is certainly not closed to the presentation the Honourable Second Official Member will make, I will take considerable persuading that something as fundamental as an accused's right to silence should be the subject of legislation that in any way erodes that right.

An accused's right to silence is part and parcel of what a judge (I believe it was Lord Sankey) described as the 'golden thread': "Throughout the web of the English Criminal Law one golden thread is always to be seen, that it is the duty of the prosecution to prove the prisoner's guilt. The right to silence is an important aspect of that golden thread."

Blackstone has the following to say about that right to silence: "An accused person in a criminal trial has traditionally been accorded a right to silence, sometimes termed a privilege against self-incrimination. The right embraces the idea that the accused is under no legal obligation to assist the police with their enquiries and is not a compellable witness at trial. At Common Law it is supplemented by a further right. The failure to assist the police or to give evidence at trial is not evidence against the accused with the result that it is wrong to invite a jury to draw adverse inferences from silence."

The effect of the provisions in the Bill that relate to the drawing of adverse inferences is this: the accused will still remain at liberty to maintain his silence on interrogation at a trial. The supplementary right to be free from adverse inference is removed and replaced by these provisions which specify the circumstances in which proper inferences may be drawn against him.

These provisions were the subject of some controversy in the U.K. when they were being discussed and debated there prior to becoming Law. The concerns that I have seen articulated in the text are the concerns I had (instinctively as a defence lawyer), when I considered those provisions.

Phipson on Evidence had the following to say about the changes effected by the Criminal Justice and Public Order Act 1994, the relevant provisions which are in pari materia to those that are contained in this Bill. It says: "The Criminal Justice and Public Order Act 1994 has brought about significant changes in the law." It refers to the right to silence and what, traditionally, that has encompassed. It quotes Lord Mustill in a case entitled, The Crown v. the Director of the Serious Fraud Office, ex parte Smith. This is a 1993 decision of the House of Lords. In it Lord Mustill sets out what are described as a disparate group of immunities which differ in nature, origin and incidence but which relate to the protection of citizens against the abuse of powers by those investigating crimes.

I will not go into the details of those immunities, but these are generally concerned with compulsion to answer questions. Phipson observes that "The compulsion which induces the individual to speak could be the prospect of punishment whether by way of a separate criminal offence or contempt of court. But [and this is important] there are other incentives to break one's silence such as the prospect of adverse inferences otherwise being drawn at trial, or the silence being the subject of adverse judicial comment" which I recognised in the categories of immunities.

"The drawing of adverse inferences from the accused's failure to testify or answer particular questions also puts pressure on him to break his silence or else make the prosecution's case stronger. The common law has recognised that no individual, let alone a suspect, could be compelled on pain of sanction to answer police questions."

Then it goes on to say, "This position has, however, been eroded by statutes such as the Criminal Justice Act of 1987" and the Criminal Justice and Public Order Act of 1994.

Against those concerns, I am indeed grateful to the Honourable Second Official Member for having taken my concerns and those of other Honourable Members of this House on board and I look forward to his presentation in relation to this aspect of the Bill. As I said, I shall keep an open mind in this regard and we shall see if the persuasiveness of the Honourable Second Official Member is sufficient to convince us, notwithstanding those concerns, that these sections are important and necessary to the administration of justice.

I will move on to touch on just one other aspect of the Bill that I think is worthy of comment, which I support. That is the question of the competence and compellability of an accused's spouse to give evidence.

In common Law, a spouse of a party to either civil or criminal proceedings was incompetent to testify for or against him. That situation has been adjusted in the U.K. and in the Cayman Islands by the passing of legislation. Up until this point the Evidence Law of the Cayman Islands falls short of the English position. The purpose of this aspect of the Bill is to deal with this perceived shortcoming.

The situation at common Law became somewhat confused in the U.K. just prior to the passage of the Police and Criminal Evidence Act, 1984. Prior to the decision of the House of Lords in a case called Hoskin v. M. P. C., it was generally believed that at common Law the spouse of an accused was indeed compellable in cases of offences involving personal violence by the accused against his or her spouse. In that case, the majority of the Law Lords concluded that "where an accused is charged with an offence of violence against his or her spouse the spouse is competent but not compellable for the prosecu- tion." The basis for that decision appeared to have been that their Lordships were reluctant to compel a wife to testify against her husband on a charge of violence however trivial, and regardless of the consequences to herself, her family and her marriage.

This concern has always been to ensure that in compelling spouses to give evidence against each other it might disturb marital harmony and create a harshness that was not in the best interests of the union. For a long time that provision prevented the prosecution from insisting that a spouse should have to give evidence against his or her spouse.

With the confusion created by Hoskin v. M. P. C., as to what the common Law was in relation to these sorts of situations, whether or not even in cases where violence was involved against the accused spouse, the U.K. Parliament deemed it fit to pass legislation to clarify the position and make it abundantly clear the circumstances in which the wife or husband of the accused would become compellable. The circumstances set out in section 18(a) of the Bill before the House are essentially those contained in the Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984.

This is particularly important in the social context where domestic abuse has become more prevalent. I do not know whether that is a fact, but, certainly, knowledge of domestic abuse has become more prevalent and is indeed the focus of a number of initiatives in this community. From experience as a lawyer, I know well what often happens in these sorts of situations is when an abused spouse makes a complaint which results in a charge being brought against the assailant, by the time the matter comes up for trial all sorts of things may have transpired. Reconciliation may have been effected. Intimidation may have been effected. All sorts of matters may have been brought to bear on the mind of the accused spouse which may operate to dampen the enthusiasm to give evidence against their spouse. So much time and effort on the part of the police is lost. Even more importantly, the cycle of abuse is not broken because there is, in the end, no sanction against the accused.

It is important, not so much that the wife be compelled in the sense of forcing her to do something she would otherwise not wish to do, which some may object to, but for the preservation of her life and safety and the discouragement of this type of behaviour which severely affects the community. This is not just the actual victim of the assault but also the children and other family members who are affected by observing this sort of behaviour.

Indeed, it could make it impossible or less likely at the least, for the accused to blame the wife for giving the evidence because she is compelled as a matter of Law to give it and would be able to rely on the law in that regard.

With those few words I indicate my support to the Evidence (Amendment) Bill on the basis that the sections which I had some concern over, in particular the right to silence will be deleted from the Bill during committee stage. Thank you.

The Honourable Second Official Member.

Hon. David F. Ballantyne: Thank you.

I think that it is encouraging when we are able to absorb points in the House from each other. It is important that the law is the product of the collective wisdom of the House at the end of the day. I see no harm in deferring consideration of matters which have caused some concern and I am pleased that it has been acknowledged that the Second Elected Member for George Town will keep an open mind on the matter, although he has made it clear that as a Member and, as he candidly conceded, as a defence lawyer, he has concerns. I would expect, frankly, there to be concerns about these provisions, as indeed there were and perhaps may still be in the U.K. For these reasons it was thought right to try to obtain a review of the reasons leading up to the introduction of these matters which will be referred to in the Law Commission Report and also a review as to how they have operated in the U.K.

What obtains in the U.K. is not necessarily the last word and is not necessarily appropriate for export without contemplation. What I would say, however, is that, to my knowledge, there is a considerable body of case Law which has developed as it were on the back of the U.K. legislation. Without going into these cases, because this is not the occasion, those cases have laid down rules to be followed governing the operation of the legislation. It occurs to me that if we are to take these issues further upon due reflection, some of those rules might merit incorporation in legislation, rather than being simply case law and precedent. I will give one example.

The example is that one of the rules to which I have seen reference in one of the decided cases, is that the inference to be drawn from silence should only be drawn where the circumstances call for an answer to have been given and where there is a clear expectation that an answer could and should have been given. I only cite this as an example. It is not definitive and I think it will be a matter for discussion in an appropriate forum and for analysis and for conclusions as to how or if these aspects should proceed.

I do not know and it is for the House to take a view, as to whether the Law is somewhat tilted in favour of the accused, or tilted against the accused if these inferences were to be present in the Law. That is a judgment I will leave for us all to make at the appropriate time. In the meantime, however, I am glad that the Bill has the active support, with the deletions mentioned, of the Second Elected Member for George Town, my professional colleague, albeit we may be coming from different sides of the matter professionally, I mean in terms of prosecution as opposed to defence. The proper purpose of these laws should be to strike a fair balance between the interests of the Crown in prosecuting matters and the interests of the defence in preserving the rights of the accused.

I would take the opportunity to share with the House the view that it is not for the Crown to win cases, it is simply for the Crown to present evidence that pertains. It is for the defence to seek to win in the sense of vindicating the rights of the accused. There is a basic difference in approach, in my opinion.

I am glad that reference has been made to the compellability of a spouse in the circumstances. I think that the sanctity of marriage should be preserved. You will note that in the Bill where both spouses are jointly charged neither may give evidence against the other. That is a safeguard in the Bill. The Bill also provides that a spouse may be compelled. Sometimes the element of compulsion may be necessary in order to say to a witness, 'You are required to give evidence' in circumstances where that person would prefer not to do so. It would be for the greater good, and I emphasise for the safety and welfare and well-being of young persons in particular who not only have the potential for being physically damaged, but emotionally damaged within a domestic situation.

The other provisions of the Bill to some extent tie in with that and will allow the courts to have the facility to protect young persons from unnecessary further trauma in giving evidence.

I particularly welcome the provision that allows the admission of foreign convictions since this will save a great deal of time and trouble and will allow evidence to be led of such convictions without the necessity of having to prove them unless it is challenged and the contrary is proved. So there is nothing absolute about this. These measures have been thought through and represent a set of improvements to the Law of Evidence.

I would only add in conclusion that the reference to 'right to silence' should be removed at the committee stage from the title of the Bill, so that we do not leave the wrong impression in the title of the Bill if the House is so minded.

With these remarks, I wish to thank the House for their active and passive cooperation. I therefore invite the House to consider this Bill for the committee stage, and move that it be committed to a committee of the whole House.

The Speaker: I shall now put the question that the Evidence (Amendment) (Spouses, Experts, Foreign Convictions, Alibis, Right to Silence, Etc.) Bill, 2001 be given a second reading. Those in favour please say Aye. Those against No.

AYES.

The Speaker: The Ayes have it.

AGREED: THE EVIDENCE (AMENDMENT) (SPOUSES, EXPERTS, FOREIGN CONVICTIONS, ALIBIS, RIGHT TO SILENCE, ETC.) BILL, 2001 GIVEN A SECOND READING.

CLAUSE 2 PASSED.

The Deputy Clerk: Clause 3. Insertion of new section—Competence and compellability of spouses.

The Chairman: There is an amendment to Clause 3?

Hon. David Ballantyne: Yes, the proposed amendment is the deleting of the word "and" as it appears in the new section 18A (3)(b) and substituting the word "or". The reason being that the three sets of circumstances set out in subsection (3), that is, (a), (b), and (c) are meant to be in the alternative not in conjunction with each other.

The Chairman: The question is that Clause 3 be amended as circulated. Those in favour please say Aye. Those against No.

CLAUSE 4 PASSED.

The Deputy Clerk: Clause 5. Amendment of the principal Law—Insertions of new sections.

The Chairman: There is an amendment.

Hon. David F. Ballantyne: The committee stage amendment to Clause 5 is by deleting the proposed new sections 27C, 27D, 27E, 27F and 27G and by re-numbering the proposed new sections 27H and 27I as sections 27C and 27D respectively.

The Chairman: The question is that Clause 5 be amended. Those in favour please say Aye. Those against No.

AYES.

The Chairman: The Ayes have it.

AMENDMENT TO CLAUSE 5 PASSED.

The Chairman: The question is that Clause 5 as amended do stand part of the Bill. Those in favour please say Aye. Those against No.

AYES.

The Chairman: The Ayes have it.

CLAUSE 5, AS AMENDED, PASSED.

The Deputy Clerk: A Bill for a Law to amend the Evidence Law (1995 Revision) to provide for advanced notice of expert evidence; to amend the Law relating to the competence and compellability of spouses; to provide for conviction as evidence of commission of an offence; to provide for video recordings of testimony from child witnesses, for the giving of evidence through television links; and for incidental and connected purposes.

Hon. David F. Ballantyne: Mr. Speaker, I apologise for interrupting, but may I backtrack for a moment?

Part of the 25 June committee stage amendment is outstanding in relation to what would become the new section 27H which is now the new 27C. It consists of deleting subsection (1) of 27H and substituting the wording shown on the committee stage amendment. I can explain further.

The deletion is of the existing provision, but the only change is the addition of a provision in this part which deals with a person other than the accused giving evidence to a live television link. What was omitted from the Bill and what needs to be included is a provision tying in this section with the section which permits a child to give evidence by video link so that the new wording that would be added by committee stage amendment is as follows. It is in little (b) of the committee stage amendment, "if the witness is a child, or is to be cross examined following the admission under section 27I of a video recording of testimony from him and the offence is one to which subsection (2) applies."

In effect, what this allows to happen is, as I said in my remarks, that where a child gives evidence in chief by means of a video recording, cross examination can thereafter occur by means of a live television link to avoid the child being physically in the same room as the accused person. That would be the effect of incorporating this amendment.

The Chairman: I shall have to recommit Clause 5.

Hon. David F. Ballantyne: If I may, for the sake of completeness, in Clause 27I (10) (b), there is a typographical error. The word "the" where it appears, should be deleted. I think I could have deleted that under the provisions you mentioned, but I just want to mention it for the sake of completeness.

The word “the” appears in that Clause, in a provision that deals with what is relevant evidence. As the Clause stands, it says “it relates to the matter which in the opinion of the court is dealt with in the recording.” In fact it should read, and I compared it with the source legislation in the U.K., “it relates to matter which in the opinion of the court is dealt with in the recording.” Not “the matter...” It is 271 (10) (b) and it is a deletion of the word “the” where it appears on the first line of paragraph (b). If you follow me, it is right at the end of the Bill. The paragraph says, “it relates to the matter” the word “the” should be deleted. Since it is part of Clause 5, I thought I had better mention it now. Thank you.

[Discussion off microphone]

Hon. David F. Ballantyne: No, just “to matter”.

The Deputy Clerk: Clause 5. Amendment of the principal Law—Insertions of new sections.

The Chairman: Clause 5 has been amended with new sections. Does any Member wish to speak to it? If not I shall put the question that the amendment to Clause stand part of the Bill. Those in favour please say Aye. Those against No.

AYES.

The Speaker: The Ayes have it.

AMENDMENT TO CLAUSE 5 PASSED.

The Chairman: The question is that Clause 5 as amended do stand part of the Bill. Those in favour please say Aye. Those against No.

AYES.

The Chairman: The Ayes have it.

CLAUSE 5, AS AMENDED, PASSED.

The Deputy Clerk: A Bill for a Law to amend the Evidence Law (1995 Revision) to provide for advanced notice of expert evidence; to amend the Law relating to the competence and compellability of spouses; to provide for conviction as evidence of commission of an offence; to provide for video recordings of testimony from child witnesses and for the giving of evidence through television links; and for incidental and connected purposes.

OFFICIAL HANSARD REPORT
WEDNESDAY
5 SEPTEMBER 2001
10.10 AM
First Sitting

The Speaker: Good morning. I will invite the Honourable Minister responsible for the Ministry of Community Development, Women Affairs, Youth and Sports to say prayers.

PRAYERS

Hon. Edna M. Moyle: Let us pray:

Almighty God, from whom all wisdom and power are derived: We beseech Thee so to direct and prosper the deliberations of the Legislative Assembly now assembled, that all things may be ordered upon the best and surest foundations for the glory of Thy Name and for the safety, honour and welfare of the people of these Islands.

Bless our Sovereign Lady, Queen Elizabeth II; the Queen Mother; Philip, Duke of Edinburgh; Charles, Prince of Wales; and all the Royal family. Give grace to all who exercise authority in our Commonwealth, that peace and happiness, truth and justice, religion and piety may be established among us. Especially we pray for the Governor of our Islands, the Speaker of the Legislative Assembly, Official Members and Ministers of Executive Council and Members of the Legislative Assembly, that we may be enabled faithfully to perform the responsible duties of our high office.

All this we ask for Thy great Name's sake.

Let us say the Lord's Prayer together:

Our Father, who art in Heaven, Hallowed be Thy Name. Thy Kingdom come, Thy will be done on earth as it is in Heaven. Give us this day our daily bread, and forgive us our trespasses, as we forgive those who trespass against us. Lead us not into temptation, but deliver us from evil. For Thine is the Kingdom, the power and the glory, forever and ever. Amen.

The Lord bless us and keep us. The Lord make His face shine upon us and be gracious unto us. The Lord lift up the light of His countenance upon us and give us peace, now and always. Amen.

Proceedings resumed at 10.10 am

The Speaker: Please be seated. The Legislative Assembly is in session.

Administration of Oaths or Affirmations. Oath of Allegiance to Mr. Donovan W.F. Ebanks, MBE, to be the Acting Temporary Honourable First Official Member.

Mr. Ebanks would you come forward to the Clerk's table, please?

Would all Members please stand?

OATH OF ALLEGIANCE

Mr. Donovan W. F. Ebanks, MBE

Hon. Donovan W. F. Ebanks: I, Donovan Ebanks, do swear that I will be faithful and bear true allegiance to Her Majesty Queen Elizabeth II, her heirs and successors according to law, so help me God.

The Speaker: Mr. Ebanks, on behalf of all Members we welcome you to this Honourable House for the term of your service. Please take your seat as the Honourable Acting First Official Member.

Please be seated.

Item No. 3 on today's Order Paper—Reading by the Speaker of Messages and Announcements.

READING BY THE HONOURABLE
SPEAKER OF MESSAGES
AND ANNOUNCEMENTS

APOLOGIES

The Speaker: I have received apologies for absence from the Honourable First Official Member who is presently Acting Governor; from the Third Elected Member for George Town and Fourth Elected Member for West Bay who are overseas attending a Commonwealth Parliamentary Conference in Australia. I have also received apologies for late attendance from the Honourable Third Official Member who will be arriving later today.

Item No. 4 on today's Order Paper—Questions to the Honourable Ministers/Members of Government. Question No. 92, standing in the name of the First Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman.

QUESTIONS TO HONOURABLE
MEMBERS/MINISTERS

QUESTION NO. 92

No. 92: Mrs. Julianna Y. O'Connor-Connolly asked the Honourable Minister responsible for the Ministry of Planning, Communications and Works to state the anticipated commencement date for the construction of the West End Post Office.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Planning, Communications and Works.

Hon. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. It is anticipated that construction of the West End Post Office will commence later this month (September). I do not have an exact date, but that is the closest I could get with regards to time.

SUPPLEMENTARIES

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman.

Mrs. Julianna Y. O'Connor-Connolly: Is the Minister in a position to say exactly what has caused the delay in construction?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Planning, Communications and Works.

Hon. D. Kurt Tibbetts: It was intended that the project would start in the second half of the year because the funds approved in the 2001 Budget were not the total cost of the project, only the larger portion. So, it was scheduled to start sometime in July.

The Cayman Brac Development Control Board, after the original plan was approved, requested changes to the site layout to modify the site access. The revised drawings then had to be done and the client, that is, the Postal Department and Public Works Department (PWD) are now in discussion with the Development Control Board of Cayman Brac because they hold the view that the original layout is better than what is being proposed subsequently. It is expected that these discussions will be finalised within the next two weeks in order to be able to get the project started.

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman.

Mrs. Julianna Y. O'Connor-Connolly: Can the Honourable Minister say if there were any other reasons besides the non-approval by the Development Control Board for the project not starting to date?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Planning, Communications and Works.

Hon. D. Kurt Tibbetts: If there are other reasons I do not know of them. Unfortunately, the PWD Staff said they were going to be a little bit late; they knew the question was on. I cannot venture any other answer because I simply do not know. I can give the Member an undertaking that I will find out from PWD Staff and let her know, as they will arrive shortly.

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman.

Mrs. Julianna Y. O'Connor-Connolly: Is the Minister in a position to give a timeline, subject to obtaining planning approval for the project going out to bid, or has it already gone through the Central Tenders Committee and the bidding process completed?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Planning, Communications and Works.

Hon. D. Kurt Tibbetts: My information is that the Central Tenders Committee meets this Friday, 7 September, to review the report on tenders and recommendation on contract award.

I believe once that process is completed, which is expected shortly, that the project time is 26 weeks. I would anticipate that once we get the project started it should be able to be continued straight through to completion without any delays after that.

The Speaker: Are there any further supplementaries? If not, we will move on to Question 93 standing in the name of the First Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman.

QUESTION NO. 93

No. 93: Mrs. Julianna Y. O'Connor-Connolly asked the Honourable Minister responsible for the Ministry of Planning, Communications and Works to provide a current progress report on the Ann Tatum Road and Polack Drive on Cayman Brac.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Planning, Communications and Works.

Hon. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Work on Ann Tatum Road commenced at the southern end at the intersection with Major Donald Drive. Of a total length of 2,600 feet from Major Donald Drive to the northern edge of the bluff, approximately 2,200 feet by 20 feet wide has been cleared and 16 feet wide has been filled to date. Cost to date is approximately $31,000.

Polack Drive is 1,500 feet long and, of this, approximately 900 feet has been cleared and filled at a cost of $17,000. Works are currently on hold pending the return of the excavator from Little Cayman on 7 September.

SUPPLEMENTARIES

The Speaker: First Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman.

Mrs. Julianna Y. O'Connor-Connolly: Can the Honourable Minister confirm that the reason why there is no work going on, is, as rumour has it, because the money has been depleted from that vote?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Planning, Communications and Works.

Hon. D. Kurt Tibbetts: I have had no communication about any monies being depleted. Just to jog the Member's memory, when we met just before budget time we went through the various projects with PWD staff and the District Commissioner and it was my understanding, at that time, that what was agreed on would take us through to the end of the year. I have no knowledge of anyone communicating that to the Ministry or the Honourable Chief Secretary.

If the Member wishes for me to determine that, I can do so as quickly as possible. However, no one has communicated that to me.

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman.

Mrs. Julianna Y. O'Connor-Connolly: I should be most grateful for the Honourable Minister's undertaking to that effect, in that, prior to hearing his answer this morning on the Floor of this Honourable House, the word is that the money is finished. It would be comforting to have a clarification of that.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Planning, Communications and Works.

Hon. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Certainly. As I said, my information is that they are waiting on the excavator to be returned from Little Cayman. Maybe that is the explanation as to why the work has stopped. I will find out and let the Member know.

The Speaker: The Elected Member for East End.

Mr. V. Arden McLean: Could the Honourable Minister say what they are using to build these roads with at $14 and $17 per foot?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Planning, Communications and Works.

Hon. D. Kurt Tibbetts: My understanding is that it is the same material used in Grand Cayman, except that in Cayman Brac the material originates from Cayman Brac, not Grand Cayman. I do not think any other method is used. I believe it is rock crushed to a certain level of aggregate and if we speak to the terrain, I do not know how familiar Members are with the Bluff, but the terrain varies. I am not a hundred percent sure what type of terrain this is, but so that Members will have a clear understanding, the methodology employed in the Brac may be different from what we are used to over here in Grand Cayman. For instance, the clearing of the area to be made into the road is done by hand and the area found is filled to the proper level. I do not think there is usually a problem in having to raise the level so much as simply getting a level on most of the area we are talking about.

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman.

Mrs. Julianna Y. O'Connor-Connolly: Could the Honourable Minister confirm that waiting on the excavator would imply that the terrain is not one of plateau but perhaps an undulating terrain?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Planning, Communications and Works.

Hon. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Mr. Speaker, if I may use my own language—hopefully this will clear the question before and also this one. As the Member said, some of the terrain may be undulating and the hammer on the excavator is used to break down some of the existing rock which helps to fill and create a level. Perhaps quite the opposite of what we may be used to in some areas, instead of having to fill and bring the level up, some of the terrain is broken down to strike a level. The same rock on the location is actually used to strike the level, which makes a difference in not having to purchase any of the rock.

The gentleman from PWD is now present. Just so the Member will know, I have been told that there is no situation where there are no funds. It is simply waiting for the excavator to come back.

The Speaker: Are there any further supplementaries? If not, we will move on to question 94, standing in the name of the Elected Member for East End.

QUESTION NO. 94

No. 94: Mr. V. Arden McLean asked the Honourable Minister responsible for the Ministry of Planning, Communications and Works if the Public Works Department's employees have been compensated for the loss of income due to the reduction in working hours as was recently promised by the Honourable Minister.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Planning, Communications and Works.

Hon. D. Kurt Tibbetts: The retroactive wages for those group employees of the Public Works Department that were reduced from 44 hours to 40 hours per week from 1 April to 30 June will be included in their salary on 7 September, that is, this Friday.

The Speaker: The Elected Member for East End.

SUPPLEMENTARIES

Mr. V. Arden McLean: Could the Honourable Minister say why it has taken so long?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Planning, Communications and Works.

Hon. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Perhaps when one is seeking an end result it creates a bit of difficulty in being able to objectively make assessments as to reasoning and causes. This is not speaking to the Member personally, but general situations.

In order to determine the retroactive wages due to each affected employee, it was necessary to go back through each daily activity record for the period 1 April to 30 June to determine the exact number of hours worked by each employee. This is easily understood to be a time consuming exercise. My understanding is that this has been the reason why it has taken a bit of time. However, the Department has arrived with the calculations and is able to make the adjustments in the salary of 7 September to clear the matter up.

The Speaker: Are there any other supplementaries? The First Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman.

Mrs. Julianna Y. O'Connor-Connolly: Could the Honourable Minister say whether or not this same methodology was considered and, or implemented for the PWD group employees in Cayman Brac as opposed to the proposed laying off method?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Planning, Communications and Works.

Hon. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Mr. Speaker, I would ask the Member to clarify her question. I am not sure I understand where she is coming from.

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman, would you clarify your question please?

Mrs. Julianna Y. O'Connor-Connolly: Certainly, Mr. Speaker. I wondered whether consideration was given— based on this expressed methodology of reducing the number of hours worked by PWD group employees on Cayman Brac, as is obviously the case here in Grand Cayman; as opposed to laying off personnel in order to cut some $300,000 from salaries in District Administration as the men were informed on Thursday and Friday of last week on Cayman Brac.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Planning, Communications and Works.

Hon. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Mr. Speaker, I am having a bit of difficulty here because some of the things that I am hearing I do not know anything about, but let me try to 'trek' through it.

The situation with PWD in Grand Cayman with the 44 hours reverting to 40 hours was a situation simply to be compliant with General Orders; that was the situation. For a while it was a bit messy, but I believe that finally the matter is sorted out because people had different ideas as to how to solve certain problems.

With regards to the Brac, if I am hearing the Member correctly, she is saying that last week there was some cut taking place in what was originally agreed on via budget and people have been told they will be laid off. Is that correct?

Mr. Speaker, I do not know of the situation. If the Member would allow me time to find out exactly what it is all about, I will certainly try to get a clear understanding and speak with both Members. I honestly do not know anything about it.

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman.

Mrs. Julianna Y. O'Connor-Connolly: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I appreciate the Minister's undertaking as a matter of urgency to look into this most important matter, as the men have been informed formally last week by PWD. I am reliably informed from the head of District Administration that orders came from Grand Cayman. So, perhaps as a part of the research, the Minister could check to see who issued the orders for almost $300,000 to be cut from the emoluments of the District Administration. They have commenced that process with the Public Works Department.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Planning, Communications and Works do you wish to reply?

Hon. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Yes, Mr. Speaker. As I said before, I certainly will try to find out; I will do better than that! I will find out and I will communicate with both Members.

The Speaker: Are there any further supplementaries? If not, that concludes Question Time for this morning.

Moving on to Government Business, Bills. First Readings. I would appreciate a motion for the suspension of Standing Order 46(1) in order for a Bill entitled, The Legal Practitioners (Amendment) Bill, 2001 to be given a first reading. The Honourable Second Official Member.

OTHER BUSINESS

PRIVATE MEMBERS' MOTIONS

PRIVATE MEMBER'S MOTION NO. 23/01

REGULATION OF DANGEROUS AND FEROCIOUS DOGS IN THE ISLANDS

Mr. Rolston M. Anglin: I beg to move Private Member's Motion No. 23/01, which reads:

"WHEREAS there has been a ban on the importation of certain dangerous and ferocious dogs into the Cayman Islands;

"BE IT RESOLVED THAT Government—

- i. consider modernising this list;
- ii. consider instituting regulations governing the manner in which such dogs can be taken outside of the owner's property; and
- iii. consider instituting regulations governing the breeding of any such dogs."

The Speaker: Do you have a Seconder?

Mr. V. Arden McLean: I beg to second the Motion.

The Speaker: Private Member's Motion No. 23/01 has been duly moved and seconded. Do you wish to speak to it?

The Second Elected Member for West Bay.

Mr. Rolston M. Anglin: Thank you Mr. Speaker.

Certainly, there would be a lot of us who are owners of dogs ourselves and consider the dog to be a pet and an integral part of the family setting. I am of the view that a dog is one of the most beautiful pets one could own.

The Agriculture Department certainly has in place what I think is an adequate policy for importation of dogs. When you look at the list of those prohibited into these Islands it includes Mallanois, Rottweiler, Japanese Tosa, Dogo Argentino, Pila Brasileiro, Chinese Shar-pei, Pit Bull Terrier, Japanese Akita, Staffordshire, and Mastiff of all types.

In the Cayman context there are a number of these dogs that were here before the prohibition. In my research I was informed by the Agriculture Department that this matter came to the fore back in November 1989 when there were reports coming from the United Kingdom that Rottweiler in particular posed significant threat to human lives and limbs. They have adjusted their policy based on information received from reliable jurisdictions from time to time.

Many people own mild-mannered dogs so, a lot of us are not certain why these dogs that are considered dangerous and ferocious would be kept in the first place and what would bring about the desire. It is my view that in Cayman today there are a number of reasons. Firstly, some people just like these types of dogs, whereas, some find it trendy. There would be those who keep these dogs for protection of either their personal or business premises.

I have also been reliably informed that there are certain persons who keep them as some form of sign, that is, people who belong to certain gangs find it necessary to have a specific type of dog.

Certainly all of us can appreciate the fact that people's personal reasons for owning a dog can be wide. The last reason I have observed and have been reliably informed about is one of the most disturbing reasons and that is, that certain persons who are purportedly involved with selling drugs find it expedient to keep dogs in their yards also. I can certainly think of a few such yards in my district. In fact, one particular yard has a relatively high fence with "Beware Bad Dog" signs all over it, with a picture of the dog on it. I have been told by Police officers that this makes their lives difficult considering they have good cause to believe that the illegal selling of drugs is being carried out.

There have always been dog-bites from the time man domesticated dogs. In the Cayman context, it is reasonable to say that these bites were usually suffered by people walking or riding by a yard where a dog was not restricted in any way. Most recently, I became aware of an instance where a senior citizen was viciously attacked by her nephew's dog and suffered significant injury. I am not sure: it was either a Pit Bull Terrier or Rottweiler. Upon learning of this I did a bit of research to see what we had in place in regard to dogs that are generally considered dangerous or ferocious.

This issue has been debated over the years by many persons in larger countries, like the United States. There certainly never seemed to be any gathering of consensus as to whether or not certain types of dogs, by nature, posed a more significant threat, or were more prone to bite and attack than other dogs. We have gone beyond that here in Cayman because we have decided there are significant threats and that certain of these dogs can no longer be imported into these Islands.

However, because there was already a base population of some of these dogs that continued breeding, we could very well end up with more of those specific breeds in the Islands than when the bans were instituted. In fact, this has come to be a rather lucrative business. To purchase a Rottweiler puppy or a Pit Bull Terrier is quite costly.

Many municipalities in the United States have sought to address this matter on many different fronts—outright bans on specific types of dogs. This action has met great resistance from persons who actually own and breed these dogs. One argument that always comes up is that there was a lack of empirical evidence or study to actually support some of the views being put forward by members of the society.

About three years ago the Centre for Disease Control and Prevention (CDCP) in the US actually carried out a study. They found that approximately 20 people are killed in that country every year by dog attacks, and another 4.5 million are bitten, with 1 million being seriously wounded.

When any of us go to a funeral, or when we talk about death, this is something significant. Seeing on the news recently where a three year old child in Chicago was mauled and killed by the landlord's Pit Bull Terrier forced me to think about this issue again, and seriously consider if there was anything we needed to do here in Cayman to tighten up the situation.

Anytime a human life is at risk, we as responsible persons in this society who are put into positions of leadership are duty bound to ensure that we try to do the best we can to avert such situations. I say "try" because in my research I found that there are many types of dogs that have actually killed people.

In fact, in the study conducted by the CDCP, which covered some two decades, they found 25 types of dogs that were responsible for all those deaths. However, what is very significant, in my humble opinion, was the fact that 50 percent of the deaths were as a result of Pit Bull Terrier pure breed, Pit Bull Terrier mixed, Rottweiler pure bred or Rottweiler mixed dogs. Half caused by two breeds and derivatives of those breeds. Of course, when we talk about cross-breeds, I found that there is significant difficulty in identifying exactly what specific breed a dog is once they are cross bred.

When I looked at the fact where research and study shows that between 1991 and 1998 Rottweiler dogs caused 33 deaths in the US versus 21 by Pit Bull Terriers, I found what seems to be a cause for concern when it comes to these two types of dogs. However, further in my research, I noted that certain experts were of the view that even with these two breeds of dogs there seems to be a consistency in terms of the rearing of the dogs which causes this penchant for agitation and vicious attacks. They sum it up to people who hit the dogs; yell at the dogs; tease them; play roughly and wrestle with them; play tug-of-war with them. In other words, owners seem to be bent on ensuring that the dogs become as vicious as their reputation.

What was also interesting was that most of the fatal attacks were children. It is thought that the main reason for that is because children do not appreciate the risk that a particular dog in their family may pose. So, just by playing, they would go to the dog and hit it or pull its tail, sit on it by accident thus precipitating a fatal attack.

Recently in the US people have gone to court facing charges as serious as manslaughter when it comes to this issue. I will not stand here and say that any government, in any country, would be able—short of saying dogs cannot be pets—to say that we will not have the unfortunate and tragic situation where a dog takes a human life. I certainly believe that because there continues to be lives lost due to these attacks that we must ensure to do a number of things. I think what this specific Motion speaks to is ensuring that we have a modern list of dogs that seem to pose a threat.

I continually use that type of language because unfortunately research, in my view, will never definitively be able to prove that any specific breed of dog poses a more significant threat than others. When we look at the cases I have outlined, I think it is clear to see that there seems to be a direct correlation and higher rate of tragic consequences when certain breeds of dogs attack people.

I believe that when it comes to certain types of these that are termed dangerous and ferocious dogs, we are duty bound in some regard. Some of the more simple things that I think can be done revolve around three main areas:

1. what standards should exist in terms of any type of dog, but especially those defined as dangerous and ferocious being outside the owner's property;
2. what sort of criteria should exist in terms of people being able to breed or rear these dangerous or ferocious dogs with a particular view to resale; and
3. for a list of dogs in the Agricultural Department Policy, what form of standards of ownership should actually take place. In other words, should it be that certain young persons would be able to take Pit Bull Terriers and Rottweiler, (extremely strong dogs) into public places on their own?

A friend of mine related a story to me recently of being on the beach during the public holiday in May, where his four-year-old son was playing on a crowded beach and there was a young teenage boy with a Pit Bull Terrier. That dog approached the child, snarled and showed its teeth, barked and lunged toward the child. Fortunately, the owner was able to get to the situation quickly and there was no attack. Mr. Speaker, I think this speaks volumes to the need for some form of regulations in terms of any dog being allowed to go out into the public domain.

I think we should certainly look at the possibility of ensuring that all dogs must be on a leash or a muzzle when in a public place. I believe that there certainly is merit to the thought of ensuring that anyone who seeks to breed what the Agriculture Department deems a dangerous or ferocious dog should have to meet certain minimum criteria.

For example, should persons be allowed to breed such dogs in residential areas? Should they be required to have some form of minimal kennel size to show they actually have an adequate facility to breed such dogs?

I will touch last on standards of ownership. Certainly, there seems to be some merit to the thought of towns and municipalities in the US whereby, persons of certain ages are not permitted to take these dangerous and ferocious dogs outside their property because it is seen as a younger person having the ability to take what is potentially a threat to human life into the public domain. One can akin that to the ability to take any form of offensive weapon.

When we speak about Rottweiller and Pit Bull Terrier and many of these other dogs already listed in the Agriculture Department's importation ban (the Japanese Akita) most of these dogs are extremely strong animals. For us to reasonably believe that someone other than an adult would be able to control that dog may be asking a bit too much. However, if we were to institute any form of regulations in terms of how the dogs can be taken into public, this would allay that particular fear.

Obviously, there are legitimate business needs for having such dogs because a lot of people utilise these dogs to guard their business property. I think that is a very separate and distinct area.

I would like to finally touch on my last point. Certain countries have instituted the requirement for public liability for persons owning and utilising dogs as guard dogs. In other words, there is always the risk that even when used to guard a business, some innocent person may be attacked. Heaven forbid if the attack winds up taking the person's life. What is the true legal liability? In the civil sense, what is the public liability of the person owning that dog?

I believe that the Minister, under whom this falls, already has a qualified staff to address this issue. I have found the staff of the Agriculture Department very helpful and knowledgeable in this area. I also believe that any time there is an issue or a matter that poses a potential threat to public life in this country, that it would, by default, constitute it an important issue that must be addressed the best way we possibly can as legislators.

I personally take offence to anyone who believes that because this country has many major issues that they may consider more important than this one, to say that this is a waste of Parliament's time. I wonder what they would say if their child was viciously attacked by a Rottweiler and died. They would be the same persons to curse every Member of this Parliament saying that we were good for nothing because we did not do anything and we should have seen this coming.

At the end of the day, all of us know what goes along with this job. Certainly, everyone is entitled to his or her own opinion. However, I think that this is an important issue and one that we need to have as tight as we humanly can, simply because of what I have said before; it has been proven in other countries that there is a potential risk to human life.

With that, I end my contribution to this Motion.

The Speaker: Does any other Member wish to speak?

The Elected Member for East End.

Mr. V. Arden McLean: Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

While I quite understand that there are other things equally important to be done in the country, I believe that this Motion brought by the Second Elected Member for West Bay is timely because of the abuse of man's best friend in this country. Thus, the reason I rise in support of this was because when I was asked to second the Motion, I readily agreed.

We constantly hear of residents of the Cayman Islands using certain breeds of dogs for their own advantage and not responsibly. As the Mover mentioned, the list of prohibited dogs is quite lengthy. Here in Cayman, there are but a few being used for reasons that could be considered illegal and those are the Pit Bull and Rottweiler, in particular.

I believe that anyone is entitled to have a pet. However, when we hear rumours of these dogs being bred and raised for reasons of fighting or preventing the police and other individuals from entering a yard where illegal activities are being carried on, then that has to stop. That cannot be tolerated.

These dogs in question can be considered pets in most instances. However, we hear of many incidents where these "pets" maul and sometimes kill human beings. Of course, then would we hear the excuse that the dog doing such a thing was always a gentle dog.

It is my understanding that dogs like Pit Bulls were originally bred to fight. You cannot expect to put a dog that was originally bred to fight in your household and expect something other than what they were bred for.

On doing research for this Motion, looking on the Internet, there are numerous sites for and against these ferocious dogs. At all times we see where the dogs are unpredictable and there is no question about that; these dogs are unpredictable. It is said that the jaws of these dogs exert some 90 pounds per square inch. That is a lot of force applied, particularly on a little child. In most instances, it is children who are attacked by these dogs.

There are many who advocate these dogs. Let me make it abundantly clear that I am not against these dogs, at least not to the point where I would say we should not have these dogs, but there must be responsible ownership. When one has any of these dogs as a pet, that person must show some responsibility in controlling that dog.

In the Cayman Islands, particularly Grand Cayman, I have witnessed many of these dogs out in the general public without so much as a leash. The Animal Law is very specific: When a dog is out in public it must be under the control of the owner.

The law does not make a lot of provisions for the dog other than in some instances where under section 37(1) it says, “Any court of summary jurisdiction may order that a dog which appears to be dangerous and not kept under proper control—(a) be kept under proper control by its owner; (b) or be handed over to the Department of Agriculture to be destroyed.”

I do not know how often this happens because it appears that the irresponsible owners of these dogs go without being brought before summary court for judgment to be handed down if found guilty.

Then the law goes on further under section 37(2) and says, “Whoever obstructs any officer of the court so that such officer is prevented from carrying out an order of the court made under subparagraph (b) of subsection (1) shall pay a fine of four dollars in respect of each day the carrying out of the order remains in abeyance through his default.” Now, $4 is a farce. People can afford to have these dogs and be irresponsible. There is no provision in the Law to be charged. They keep these dogs and I am sure they are aware of the penalties.

And then, section 38 of the Law says, “Whoever suffers any ferocious dog to be at large, or who sets on or urges any dog to attack, worry or put in fear any person or domestic or protected animal is guilty of an offence and liable on summary conviction to a fine of five hundred dollars and to imprisonment for six months.”

Now, Mr. Speaker, I have seen individuals in this country setting on and urging dogs to fight. I have seen these ferocious dogs at large. The police are as afraid of these dogs as any ordinary resident in this country. The Law has to be tightened. We have to put teeth (pardon the pun!) into the Law to allow the police to take these dogs off the street. In cases where dogs attack human beings in this country, those dogs must be put down.

I believe if the dogs were kept in proper control we would not be at this stage, bringing motions to ask for better control.

Some years ago we heard of a young child being attacked by a ferocious dog at Smith's Cove in South Sound. Practically nothing was done about it. The time has come for us to try to prevent this kind of accident and prevent our fellow citizens from being mauled.

We would not be responsible legislators if we did not protect our citizens at large. The law makes provision also for licensing of these animals. Section 28 says, “Whoever keeps a dog over the age of six months without taking out a license in respect to the same, and every person permitting such a dog to be in a highway or place of public resort without a collar as prescribed is guilty of an offence and liable on summary conviction to a fine of twenty dollars.” The last time I heard of $20 it did not really mean much in the scheme of things in this country. So, it certainly does not provide a deterrent in this case. It does not frighten anyone.

There are public venues in this country, particularly outdoor ones, where people just show up with a Rottweiler or Pit Bull walking next to them.

I experienced an incident in East End sometime in April of this year, where many young children were at a function on the beach and a young man walked up right amongst the general public with a Rottweiler. This dog was bordering on 60 to 80 pounds; it was a beautiful animal. He proceeded to demonstrate to the public how this dog could husk a dry coconut with his teeth. I called the police but, of course, when the police came the gentleman was gone. However, he came right back as soon as the police left the premises. There is no control. Can we imagine a child walking by that dog during the demonstration and that dog turning on the child? Do you think there were sufficient people in that neighbourhood to stop that dog from mauling that child? They must be controlled. There has to be some degree of control over one's pet.

We hear of people breeding these dogs and their own families are mauled and bitten but nothing is done about it. The children are taken to the hospital, nothing is done, and the dog remains on the premises.

We have to provide the police with the necessary tools to remove these dogs from society. There should be no reason why the dog has to demonstrate more than once that it is a ferocious dog. At the first sign of it these dogs should be put down. There is no need to say it was only the first time and you do not think it will happen again, and then within six months to a year the dog goes and mauls someone again. We have heard of these incidents.

I know of areas where these dogs are kept in pens and while I do not know anything about how you prepare a dog to be ferocious and fight, it is my understanding that they feed them pepper. Evidently it causes them to be a little more aggressive, although I do not know if that has been scientifically proved. I have heard of it—maybe folklore—here in the Cay-man Islands. These young boys who are alleged drug dealers breed these dogs, feed them pepper so they can become more aggressive.

I submit that every dog in this country should be licensed. If that dog is going to be taken out into the public it should be licensed and it should be on a leash; that is responsible ownership. If the dog is found outside the premises of the owner, the police should then have the right to detain the owner and impound that dog until the owner can prove that he has total control over that dog.

When we hear of such incidents, we sympathise with the families and the victim, but sympathy is not good enough. One individual mauled by one of these ferocious dogs is too much.

The Motion calls for government to consider modernising the list of importation of certain dangerous and ferocious dogs. I support that and it needs to be looked at because it has been in existence for some time. I do not think we can point our fingers at any particular breed of dogs. I believe any dog, if provoked, would respond with his defence mechanism, which is to snap out. However, when we get certain dogs that we know are very dangerous, very ferocious and do not necessarily have to be provoked, and will attack, then those dogs need to be removed from society.

I understand that the second part of the resolve asks Government to "consider instituting regulations governing the manner in which such dogs can be taken outside of the owner's property." To some extent that is in place now in the law. It has to be strengthened so that the police can ensure that the public is safe.

The third part calls for Government to "consider instituting regulations governing the breeding of any such dogs." While I understand these dogs are not allowed—they are prohibited and cannot be imported through the normal circumstances where you go and get permission from the Agriculture Department. However, these dogs are being brought in on boats illegally, crossbred and then sold at astronomical prices. Everybody who has something illegal to hide has one, and other people have them also. They are traditionally used to protect one's home.

Recently in Trinidad there was a case where a 73 year old woman was killed by a number of Pit Bulls. They are considering legislation on banning Pit Bulls. I do not want the people of this country to get the impression that they cannot have any dog they want. These animals are prohibited and brought in illegally, bred and are still owned by some people in Trinidad who have them to protect their homes because of the increasing crime; I understand that, but it must stay within the boundaries of their homes. You cannot have a fence that is superficial which serves no purpose to keep your dog within your premises. Eventually it will get out, go next door to the neighbour's house and probably maul a kid and then you will say 'you are sorry'. If you want to keep a pet, you have to be responsible.

This Motion is not to prevent people from owning a pet. I am not saying that other dogs will not have the tendency to do the same thing. Mongrels will do the same thing but they must fall under responsible ownership too. If you own it, you must be responsible for its actions, and you must pay the consequences if you are not responsible. Unfortunately the damage has already been done. You can pay the hospital expenses; you can pay the recovery expenses, but the damage has already been done. Once you have paid those expenses then you must pay the price of not having a pet.

I support this Motion; I think it is timely. I think it is time we put some teeth into the law to prevent the residents of this country from being exposed to a few individual whims and fancies and their irresponsible ownership of dogs. It is only a select few; it is not the country at large. Some persons who own Pit Bulls and Rottweillers are very responsible with them. They have them in their yards and they are very responsible when someone visits. Those people should not be victimised because of a select few. However, the select few must be stopped. If they are not stopped we are going to have more people mauled and possibly killed in this country by these ferocious dogs.

I support the Motion, and I thank you.

The Speaker: We shall suspend proceedings for 15 minutes.

PROCEEDINGS SUSPENDED AT 11.41 AM

PROCEEDINGS RESUMED AT 12.06 PM

The Speaker: Please be seated.

Debate continues on Private Member's Motion No. 23/01. The Floor is open for debate. Does any other Member wish to speak?

The Second Elected Member for Bodden Town.

Mr. Gilbert A. McLean: Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

I will be brief in what I have to say in regards to this Motion. I think it is a Motion that has merit and certainly, unlike what others may think, even though it relates to dogs, it is the Legislative Assembly that deals with laws relating to dogs, cats, pigs, people, motor cars, everything. So, it is in the right place.

The Motion refers to the ban on the importation of certain dangerous and ferocious dogs into the Islands. It is my understanding that a list has been done by the Chief Agriculture and Veterinarian Officer regarding the importation of some dogs into the Cayman Islands, which are considered to be ferocious or aggressive dogs by nature. Because of certain incidents that have occurred here in the Islands it was felt that a ban should be placed on the importation of such dogs.

The resolve of the Motion asks that the Government consider modernising the list so that any species considered dangerous that was left off be added to this list.

The second resolve is, "consider instituting regulations governing the manner in which such dogs can be taken outside of the owner's property." I think that is sound logic. There should be some prescribed manner in which those dogs can be outside their owners' property; any dog, whether or not it is considered an aggressive and dangerous breed of dog. Indeed, the dog is the property of a particular owner and we cannot conceive that an owner would get a dog that would be allowed to go any and everywhere except within the boundaries of the yard of its owner.

This has practical significance. For example, I can think of a road near where I live, Beach Bay Road, where people from all over the Island come and regularly walk that road. There are persons who own dogs in that area and they rush out of their yards and attempt to get close enough to bite. That is a nuisance to the public. Even in that type of instance, when that animal becomes a nuisance to the public on a public road there should be some regulation or law in place where a member of the public could refer to have this situation corrected. Or, if bitten by a dog they would know the procedure to follow.

I noticed in the Animals Law (1999 Revision), it says that all dogs must be licensed. If we could think of that as really being done, Government would receive a significant amount of money depending on the amount which is attached to the licensing of the animal. It also speaks of dogs wearing a collar; that is string, leather, Velcro or whatever is worn around the neck of the dog. Having looked at the Law, I do not see anything in the Law prescribing a leash. We know that in other parts of the world that is very strict. There are leash laws in other jurisdictions. People in other countries, including the big cities, walk dogs on the sidewalks, but they must have them on a leash, not have them out there to be a nuisance to persons. That is something that should be considered and put into the Law here in the Cayman Islands.

There are provisions if a dog is found to be a stray. The police can seize the dog and it can be destroyed. However, this matter of dogs in general is something that should be addressed, whether or not it is a vicious attacking dog. Whatever limitations may be placed after Government has considered the matter, if indeed they accept the Motion, I think they should take advice from scientific resource persons concerning the number of dogs in the Cayman Islands and how best to control them.

Every so often we see pictures or hear of dozens of dogs held at the Humane Society compound. They are always appealing to members of the public to give these dogs a home. The truth is, in this country on a whole, dogs are owned by just anyone; they are not treated with the significance that they are treated with in other societies; they breed and create more puppies which grow into dogs and these dogs become strays. There have been problems with stray dogs killing cattle in the past. I do not know how frequent that is now, but certainly it did occur in the past. So, I think it is well for government to take a comprehensive look at the situation regarding dogs on a whole, certainly those considered dangerous and ferocious and which in the wisdom of those who have more knowledge of them, than myself, or perhaps many of us in here believe should not be kept to be bred and produce more than what are here now.

I note from the Miscellaneous (Fees and Duties) (Temporary) Law 1997, that the license fee for dogs is abolished. A Member of the Government passed this to me, and just for the record, it is section 21 which says, "The license fee for dogs is abolished." Maybe that would be a good way to enhance revenue if people had to pay to have a dog. It does speak of dogs being licensed in the Animal Law so it has to be an expense to government for paper work, man labour and everything else; that is perhaps something which the Government could take a serious look at. If it is required to be licensed, it should be licensed, and it is a way of tracing persons who has which dogs and how well they are handled.

My view in looking at the situation is that we should remember the age-old saying that dog is man's best friend. I think this is true to a very large extent. Dogs have some of the greatest uses of any animals in the world, such as hunting. In fact, the police have Canine Units; they are used in the armed forces, and the average household likes a dog for a watchdog, not necessarily an attack dog, but it warns by barking when there may be a stranger approaching.

I honestly think that in Cayman, the way things are going, we will have more and more need for watchdogs in our homes or on our property. However, the proper care is of great importance. I have heard of instances here from persons whose opinions I respect, that we have some types of dogs, the Pit Bulls, the Rottweiller and so on, that are trained to attack. Normally it is always in connection with known location where there is drug dealing, or with persons who are considered drug dealers. So, one can easily see why they would choose to have the more dangerous and aggressive dogs, obviously to repel law enforcement when they may chose to investigate or perform an arrest.

Not many weeks ago I was told of an instance of the police going to a particular place where they were pretty certain drugs were being distributed. The owners of this place simply let the Pit Bulls loose. The police had to run for fear of being attacked. This is not good for a neighbourhood, a community/district or in fact, this country. I believe these factors should be taken into account when looking at what this Motion is calling for.

Alongside the more aggressive and dangerous type of dog, we need to think of the type of dogs found with aged persons in rest homes. These dogs provide therapeutic good and a companionship for these persons. I think we need to keep a balanced view, but certainly there are those dogs that are aggressive and deliberately trained to be aggressive for unlawful purposes.

I looked at a news release from CNN.com on health, an article of 15 September 2000. It is captioned "Rottweiler/Pit Bulls Account for Most Fatal Attacks on Humans". So, there are those types of dogs that cause such harm to people. There have been instances on Walkers Road. Some months ago a dog was let loose on someone who had to flee for fear of his life. The dog chased the man and bit him; the kids were apparently having a joy ride over that. We heard of a child who was attacked and severely bitten on a beach. Rather than just hearing of these things I believe it is right that we do something to put an end to it, by putting the responsibility on the persons who own them with penalties, if these dogs cause damage.

If there is a breed of dog already on the Island and they multiply, the population of that type of dog increases. The Motion is asking in the third part to "consider instituting regulations governing the breeding of any such dogs." One thing we know that is creating such a problem with dogs, on a whole, is that dogs are breeding too much with no one to care for them. It would seem logical to look into the deliberate breeding of aggressive animals in the same way we look at the rate an average dog or mutt breeds.

Having made those observations, I think this Motion has merit. It is something that could readily be dealt with by amendments to the Law. We can make a difference in this particular regard. I do believe if there is going to be a license that there should be a fee. I think the Government should reintroduce that. The question of breeding dogs is one that needs to be looked at. Without question, there needs to be some amendment to bring into effect a leash law, or at least dogs must be on a leash when they are on the public road. It cannot be the way I have seen it on the Beach Bay Road where the dog comes full speed towards you and you brace yourself feeling a certain fear hearing the owners telling you 'do not worry about it, he is not going to bite.' Well, no one knows that! If a strange dog is rushing towards you it is no use of the owner who is 25-30 feet away telling you that he is not going to bite—you believe he is going to bite—you feel a fear that he will bite. Dogs should be controlled. So, there is a very strong case to be made for the whole issue.

In closing, I would like to pay due regards to the efforts of the Humane Society that seems to be the only entity that is really trying to do anything about the numerous stray dogs on the Islands. I do not have a solution for it and I guess most of them will have to be put down, but certainly I think their efforts should be commended. I give this Motion my support.

The Speaker: Does any other Member wish to speak? The Honourable Minister for Planning, Communications and Works.

Hon. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

In replying to Motion 23/01 the Government supports the intent of the Motion and if we look at the way the Motion is worded, and I quote:

"WHEREAS there has been a ban on the importation of certain dangerous and ferocious dogs into the Islands;

"BE IT RESOLVED THAT Government –

- i. consider modernising this list;
- ii. consider instituting regulations governing the manner in which such dogs can be taken outside of the owner's property; and
- iii. consider instituting regulations governing the breeding of any such dogs."

First of all, in speaking to the way in which the Motion is worded, I just wanted to clear the matter up from the onset. We need to accept that in dealing with some of these matters spoken of in the Motion, they need not necessarily be dealt with via regulations. I think the important consideration in the Motion is that the matters be dealt with. I am simply making a clarification because some of the areas would be via a law. I do not think the mover was trying to limit any actions simply to be done via regulations and not a law. So, in the spirit of that understanding, I want to clear that up so that in the future we are not tied in any dealings that may occur which are thought to be limited via regulations.

Under the Animals Law (1999 Revision), Part 2, section 11, "The Governor may make regulations prohibiting, restricting and generally regulating the import or export of animals, carcasses and biological products generally and of specific animals, prescribing forms of licenses and fees payable on the issue of such licenses."

As we speak to that we will see very clearly that there is scope for a law and also regulations to be made. Not wanting to beat it to death, I just want us to understand clearly that we are going to be dealing with both law and regulations. Once we get past that point we can move into the substance.

A license to import dogs into the Cayman Islands, under section 10, is subject to such conditions as the Chief Agricultural and Veterinary Officer may consider desirable. Since 1989, the Department of Agriculture has published conditions prohibiting the importation of certain breeds or mixtures of breeds of dogs deemed dangerous; that is both to the public and to other animals. These breeds include, but are not limited to: Staffordshire Terrier, Staffordshire Bull Terrier, Pit Bull Terrier, American Bulldog, Rottweiler, Chinese Shar-pei, Japanese Tosa, Bull Mastiff, Mallanois, Dogo Argentino; Neopolitan Mastiff; Japanese Akita; Phila Braseleiro; and Dogue de Bardo.

Those names quoted are at present on this list, but bearing in mind these breeds include but are not limited to these. The list is by no means exhaustive. From time to time the Chief Agricultural Officer has refused to allow entry of other lesser known dangerous breeds when applications for importation have been received.

While the existing conditions adequately address the importation of dogs, in my view, the Animal Law, as it is now, does not allow for proper control of animals resident and breeding in the Islands.

It is the Government's view that legislation is needed. First: a proper and workable licensing system for dogs to allow identification of owners for delinquent and/or abused animals, and of course, along with that must be accompanying fees. Other Members have mentioned this.

Second: there needs to be a control of all dogs, in particular dangerous dogs, while in a public place, and I think we might refer to that as a leash law.

Third: licenses for the breeding of dogs and, in some cases the prohibition of the breeding of certain breeds of dogs.

Fourth: the sale, exchange and abandonment of dangerous breeds of dogs.

Fifth: the mandatory sterilisation of dogs considered dangerous by the Chief Agricultural and Veterinary Officer. I think there are many who hold this view, but in the interest of the nation it is a view that has to be taken.

Sixth: the eventual outlawing of special breeds of dogs considered dangerous by the Chief Agricultural and Veterinary Officer, for example, Pit Bull and Rottweiler.

Seventh: stiffer penalties for owners of dangerous dogs who place the public at risk by not taking adequate precautions to protect the public from their animals. I think others who spoke before me mentioned this.

These deficiencies in the existing law have been recognised by the Department of Agriculture. To this end a draft Bill has been prepared to amend the Animals Law accordingly. That Bill Is A Bill for a Law To Amend The Animals Law (1999R) to Provide for The Licensing of Dogs, The Regulation of Dangerous Dogs, The Establishment of an Animal Welfare Advisory Committee, The Appointment of Animal Welfare Officers and for Incidental and Connected Purposes. This Bill is expected to be tabled soon and addresses all of the above concerns. It also attempts to tackle the serious problem of animal abuse and animal neglect by redefining the boundaries of what is considered cruelty and for providing stiffer penalties for those who abuse animals.

I refer to the draft Bill and just taking a quick look at the Memorandum of Objects and Reasons, and if you do not mind I wish to quote from the draft, so Members will have a clear indication of the direction in which we wish to go with this Bill.

The Speaker: Certainly.

Hon. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Thank you, Sir.

Under the Memorandum of Objects and Reasons in the marginal notes of 'Proper Licensing' it states, that Clause 3 repeals and replaces part 5 of the principal Law and deals with the licensing of dogs. Only persons over 16 years of age may keep a dog and all dogs over the age of four months must be licensed.

In the marginal note referring to a Leash Law, it states that the owner of a dog or a person who has custody of the dog must ensure that while that dog is on a highway or other public place, it is on a lead and wearing a collar with an identification tag bearing the license number.

These may appear to be stringent measures to some persons, but because of the history we have encountered with certain types of these animals, we believe it is necessary. Once everybody falls in line, I do not believe it will be a problem. There will be some persons who will be averse to any change, but I think once the system is in place and running smoothly, it will just become part of everyday life like everything else. I believe it is necessary.

Under the marginal note referring to breeding premises to be licensed, the Memorandum of Objects and Reasons says, "Clause 4 inserts a new Part, Part VA, which provides for the licensing of premises of a business where animals are bred, trained or kept for guard duties at other premises. A person who wishes to carry on such a business must be licensed by the C.A.V.O.". Again, lining up all the ducks so that the information stream is regularised and the accountability for all actions of these animals is able to be traced.

"The C.A.V.O. shall not issue such a license" [that is an operating license] "unless he is satisfied that (a) that the applicant is a suitable person to hold such a license; and (b) that the premises where the activity will be carried on are suitable. The license will be annual and subject to the payment of a prescribed fee."

Under the marginal note of dangerous dogs, "Clause 5 repeals and replaces section 37 of the principal Law. It deals with the keeping of dangerous dogs which are those dogs of a breed specified from time to time for the purposes of section 37 by order of the C.A.V.O.". And this new section 37 will provide that "no person shall,

- (a) breed or breed from a dog to which this section applies;
- (b) sell or exchange such a dog or offer, advertise or expose such a dog for sale or exchange;
- (c) make or offer to make a gift of such a dog or advertise or expose such a dog as a gift; and
- (d) allow such a dog of which he is the owner or which he is for the time being in charge in a public place without being muzzled and kept on a lead; or
- (e) abandon such a dog of which he is the owner or being the owner of for the time being or in charge of such a dog allow it to stray.”

It goes on to say that, “the C.A.V.O. may by order also appoint a day after which no person shall have a dangerous dog. A scheme of payment may be implemented to compensate those persons who arranged for a dangerous dog owned by them to be destroyed before that appointed day.”

There is one other area I wish to quote within the draft Bill, section 5(3), which reads, “After such day as the C.A.V.O. may by order appoint for purposes of this section, no person shall have any dog to which this section applies in his possession or custody except (a) in pursuance of the power of seizure conferred by the subsequent provisions of this Law or (b) in accordance with an order for its destruction made under those provisions. But the C.A.V.O. shall by order make a scheme for the payment to the owners of such dogs who arrange for the dogs to be destroyed before that day for a sum specified in or determined under the scheme in respect of those dogs and the cost of their destruction.”

On many occasions what is heard by the public is not what was said. I want to make it very clear that this section refers to a portion in the Draft Bill, which says that the C.A.V.O. “may”. There is a difference between “may” and “shall”.

I believe that the intention of that section is to allow the C.A.V.O. to have some line of authority within his judgment, to be able to deal with these matters if it is deemed that that is for the good of all concerned.

There are many dog lovers in this country. As was said before, I believe that a dog can be termed man’s best friend. However, like everything else, there are certain areas that need to be looked at in regard to keeping dogs as pets whereby the big picture has to be taken into consideration along with the safety of the citizens. I believe that the vast majority of Members, if not all Members, would be in concert with the thought that there are some basic factors that need to be addressed, that is the safety factor and the area of abuse or neglect to these animals. From time to time we see or hear of horror stories. Not so long ago we heard on the news about a dog being put in a sack and found dead in the water. It was seen from the state of the sack that the dog was alive when it was thrown into the water and was frantically trying to get loose before drowning. Regardless of what a human may think of an animal, there are other ways and means to deal with getting rid of it. That is not neglect, but abuse. In fact, I would term that downright wicked!

So, there are areas of concern. Government is going to put forward the Bill in consultation with Members of this Honourable House. We will move further on with whatever regulations and prescribed fees have to be put into those regulations. I think the Government can support the spirit of the Motion. I just wish for it to be clear that in accomplishing what I believe we all wish to accomplish, that it will be done both by law and by regulations.

The Speaker: We shall suspend proceedings until 2.15 PM.

PROCEEDINGS SUSPENDED AT 12.49 PM

PROCEEDINGS RESUMED AT 2.37 PM

The Speaker: Please be seated.

Debate continues on Private Member’s Motion No. 23/01. Does any other Member wish to speak? (Pause) If not, does the Mover wish to exercise his right of reply?

The Second Elected Member for West Bay.

Mr. Rolston M. Anglin: Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

From what I have heard in regards to those who spoke, I think we have had some meaningful debate on what I consider a very serious matter. We were not about to make such a good Motion go to the dogs because some people did not like it!

I thank the Seconder of this Motion for providing his contribution touching on the laws that currently exist. I thank all those who spoke, the Second Elected Member for Bodden Town, and the Government. It is heartening to note that the Government has already drafted legislation. It certainly sounds comprehensive.

I would, however, like to quickly add two things to the thought process of the way forward by the Government: Yes, I agree that a leash law would be advantageous, however I also believe consideration needs to be given to a muzzle law in regard to what are considered dangerous and ferocious dogs. An owner of such a dog may have it held on a leash, but two things could potentially happen: the leash could break, or it could get out of the owner’s hands. I think a muzzle in this regard is also advantageous. Many other places have done this as well.

It is also heartening to note that the Agricultural Department has also not allowed certain lesser-known breeds that may not be on the list to enter into the country. That means they have the data to address the first part of the resolve of this Motion, which is to modernise the list.

I would like to reiterate that because some of these dogs are so strong and so aggressive, just having a fence around one’s yard may not be sufficient. They can dig under the fence, or make their way over it. There may be need to consider stating that they have to be in a kennel on the property.

All too often on American TV we see children mauled to death by these breeds of dogs. I was not about to sit back and have that happen here in Cayman and then bring a motion to this House. This is an attempt to ensure that public safety is a top priority. This in no way is a failsafe approach; none of this will ever be failsafe. From now until eternity people will always be bitten by dogs, but certainly this is a step forward in the right direction.

I thank the Government for accepting the Motion. I am extremely pleased that they already have draft legislation in place. Thank you.

The Speaker: The question is that Private Member's Motion No. 23/01 be passed, Those in favour please say Aye. Those against, No.

AYES.

The Speaker: The Ayes have it.

AGREED: PRIVATE MEMBER'S MOTION NO. 23/01 PASSED.

The Speaker: Moving on to Private Member's Motion No. 22/01, Prescribed Decibel Level for Automobile Sound Systems, to be moved by the Third Elected Member for West Bay.

PRIVATE MEMBER'S MOTION NO. 22/01

PRESCRIBED DECIBEL LEVEL FOR AUTOMOBILE SOUND SYSTEMS

Capt. A. Eugene Ebanks: Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

I beg to move Private Member's Motion No. 22/01, Prescribed Decibel Level for Automobile Sound Systems, which reads:

"WHEREAS there has been an excessive increase in the sound level of audio systems in automobiles;

"BE IT RESOLVED that Government considers setting a maximum decibel level for stereo systems in automobiles in the Cayman Islands and provide for a penalty for exceeding such level."

The Speaker: The Second Elected Member for West Bay.

Mr. Rolston M. Anglin: I beg to second the Motion.

The Speaker: Private Member's Motion No. 22/01 has been duly moved and seconded. Do you wish to speak to it?

Capt. A. Eugene Ebanks: Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

For many years the public has been complaining about what are called "boom boxes on wheels" on the Cayman roads. Yet, during my research I could not find where one of the individuals had been brought up on charges before the courts for disturbing the peace and being a public nuisance.

It is a fact that as soon as some of these individuals buy a car or are given a vehicle, they take out the backseat and replace it with the most powerful and biggest speakers they can fit into that space and then run around town. The police will stop them and ask them to turn it down; they turn it down, run another 200 feet and turn it all the way back up again.

This is a major problem for other motorists on the road for more than one reason. It is annoying because they cannot hear what they are listening to on their radio or sound system in their car, and it also endangers other motorists because they cannot hear emergency vehicles. They cannot even think straight; their whole vehicle vibrates when they are sitting on the road. Yet, these individuals get away with murder, as they say.

I also know of cases where people are asleep in their homes, hundreds of feet away from the public road, are awakened at all hours by these boom boxes.

Maybe we should consider a legislation law similar to the one in Central City, Colorado where, when an individual violates the noise ordinance he is charged a small fine, but he also has to spend three days incarcerated listening to such tunes as Jingle Bells and Christmas Carols and the same volume they played their music.

Up until now there has not been one repeat offender! If such action can get those results, I think we should look seriously at considering it.

The Motion calls for setting a maximum decibel on these sound systems and my recommendation is that the Government pass legislation where no more than 75 decibels can be set as a maximum. In my research I came up with this chart: On a scale of zero to 140, very quiet is from zero to 30; quiet is 30 to 50; moderately loud is 50 to 75; and very loud is 75 to 100; uncomfortably loud is 100 to 125; and painfully loud is 125 to 140. Yet, some of these sound systems have been recorded by some of the traffic officers here in Cayman at 150 decibels. That is painfully loud, it is damaging to the eardrums. I think we need to set a maximum limit on the decibel these sound systems can be played.

The unfortunate thing is that even though our Towns and Communities Law [section 12 (1)] states, "Any person who makes any noise in any town or district which is likely to cause annoyance or discomfort to any individual inhabitant of that town or district, after having been required by a constable to desist from making such noise, is guilty of an offence and liable on summary conviction to a fine of five hundred dollars for a first conviction, a fine of one thousand dollars for a second conviction and a fine of five thousand dollars and imprisonment for six months for a third or subsequent conviction."

The problem is that when the officers approach individuals about this noise, they turn the volume down. Once they turn the volume down, it is not an offence. If they do not turn it down then the officer can arrest them. However, once the officer is out of sight they turn the volume back up. If there was a set decibel limit, the officer could measure it, just like a speedometer, and bring them in on charges. Until now, they are not able to do that. It really ties the hands of the officers.

The other guidelines I found on the effect of sound are, normal speech is 35 decibels, loud speech is 55, sleep disturbance is 30 to 45, thresholds of reported annoyance is 50, serious annoyance is 55 decibels; noise induced hearing loss—negligible risk 75, increasing risk 100 to 150 decibels.

Most of the law is already in place, we just need to put some teeth in it. So, I am asking in this Motion that we set a maximum decibel for the volume of these sound systems. Thank you.

The Speaker: The Second Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman.

Mr. Lyndon L. Martin: Mr. Speaker, I only have a short contribution to this very noble Motion. I congratulate the Mover and the Seconder who are the Third and Second Elected Members from West Bay, for bringing it to this House.

In Cayman Brac we suffer from similar situations. I share similar concerns as the Mover of the Motion has articulated.

The Towns and Communities Law that covers this issue at the moment is discretionary. It is up to the discretion of the officer as to what is considered a level of disturbance. We certainly need a decibel level prescribed. I would like to make a submission for consideration by this Honourable House, especially the Mover and the Seconder, that not only automobile audio sound system levels be considered, but also the exhaust.

In many instances cars and motorbikes are suppressed; beefed up to have fancy exhaust systems that make noise of equal or greater disturbance to that of the audio system. I think it is imperative that this Motion and any action in the form of legislation encompass the exhaust systems.

Some of these exhaust systems sound like they are malfunctioning, but that is by design. A Daihatsu can be made to sound like a Mustang. The motorcycles can be made to whistle. I think it is imperative, and I ask for the consideration of the Mover and the Seconder and all Members of this House, to broaden the scope of this Motion to include exhaust noise. I hope the Mover will address that in his winding up.

I have nothing other than my support to add to the Motion and my congratulations to the Mover and Seconder. I seek Members' support in passing this Motion here today. Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: Does any other Member wish to speak? The Honourable Acting First Official Member responsible for Internal and External Affairs.

Hon. Donovan W. F. Ebanks: Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

I thank the Mover and Seconder for having brought this matter to this forum.

The Government is very mindful of the issues that have been raised. Representation from the public in relation to disturbances caused both by vehicles and by occasional and sometimes, unauthorised functions also reach Members of Government. It is a fact that the only legislation currently existing that addresses the issue of excessive noise is the Town and Communities Law (1995 Revision). The Mover earlier referred to section 12 of that law and the fact it mandates that someone who may be perceived by a law enforcement officer as creating excessive noise must first be warned and given the opportunity to desist.

The Mover quite adequately highlighted the difficulties that causes for law enforcement officers in relation to moving vehicles in that drivers will turn it down, move on and turn it up, knowing that their chances of encountering the same officer immediately following is negligible.

In the case of noise from functions at fixed sites, the practice is to approach the site and speak to someone responsible for the music, issuing a warning that will probably not be complied with. Generally when approaching a second time that first person is nowhere to be found and someone else has taken the responsibility, who in turn is then entitled to the same warning. That process can go on and on for a couple of hours while the function progresses and comes to a close, without the same persons ever being faced by a law enforcement officer for a second time and liable for any action.

It is also true that there is currently no description of a maximum decibel limit under that law. There is provision in section 13(2) for the Governor in Council to prescribe decibel limits by regulations. That is actually moving to fruition, in that, the Commissioner of Police has recently acquired equipment for measuring decibel levels. I expect that very shortly, certainly within the next 30 days, the Council will be asked to prescribe limits that will be decided on with the benefit of some practical demonstration of what noise these modified vehicles are able to generate.

While that prescription under the Town and Communities Law will obviously clearly enhance the ability to deal with noise and make it a bit easier for law enforcement to deal with noise raised by vehicles, it will be necessary to look at different geographical dimensions to the decibel levels we set as maximum limits. Sound obviously diminishes as we go away from the source. I expect that decibel levels on a fixed site would be set relative to the property boundaries, whereas in a vehicle the level may be set at some distance from the vehicle which would be relatively close and an offending vehicle can come within five or six feet, or less, of another vehicle that does not want to be necessarily listening to the same noise.

The Second Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman raised the issue of other sources of noise that can emanate from a vehicle. I do not see any reason why that would not be covered by the same prescription of maximum decibels we set. If we simply set the levels for sound, regardless of how it is generated, it should cover all. I am glad he raised it because that is a type of noise that we would want to cover. I thank him for raising that.

While Council will be able to set these limits, consideration will have to be given as to whether this provision that entitles offenders to a warning should remain in the legislation. Subject to the Government's decision as to whether it should remain or be purged, a noise offence would be similar to any other offence—if you offend, you are liable to prosecution. It would be a decision that the Government would have to take and if that requirement for a warning is removed, then it will require a small amendment to that Law.

However, Government is pleased to accept the Motion. It is an issue that we are working on, and one that we would hope, in the very near future, will be adequately addressed by the actions in train. I thank Members for their support and comments on this issue.

The Speaker: Does any other Member wish to speak?

The Third Elected Member for Bodden Town.

Mr. Anthony S. Eden: Thank you Mr. Speaker.

I rise to support Private Member's Motion 22/01. It is a very worthwhile Motion that has been brought by the self-termed "freshmen" and I give this my full support.

I remember in the number of years I spent at the Glass House on the third floor, sometimes I could literally feel the building shake from cars crossing in front of the Immigration [building], ultimately passing the police station, and I often wondered why this was not picked up.

Some of our young legislators have been questioned as to why some of these Motions are being brought. I think we need to take our hats off to these young legislators. It is incumbent on us, as residents of this country, that when we see something beginning to get out of hand, not to wait until it is done before we take action. This is what I am seeing from the two Members of West Bay and the Member from East End doing in Motions they have brought and seconded to this House.

I support what the Second Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman said about noise pollution; it is very timely. I am glad government has accepted it and is taking the necessary action.

Sometimes when passing some of these vehicles on the road I have to wonder whether or not I am downtown during Pirates' Week on the final Saturday night. I have no problem with music but there must be limitations because of road safety. It can impede the traffic safety on our roads. I support this Motion.

The Speaker: Does any other Member wish to speak? If not, does the Mover wish to exercise his right of reply?

Capt. A. Eugene Ebanks: Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

I would like to thank the Government for accepting this Motion and I thank Members for their support. I would like to say that we are asking to have decibel levels set for automobiles. We should also set them for parties at people's homes where they may disturb their neighbours.

I think this Motion is timely because of the many complaints we have had over the years. If it is approved and Government institutes this level, I suggest, recommend and encourage Government to get the type of decibel meter that can be downloaded into a computer where the date, time and the decibel level is recorded so there can be no question in court.

In closing, I would like to ask all Members to give their support to this important Motion.

The Speaker: I shall now put the question on Private Member's Motion No. 22/01. Those in favour please say Aye. Those against, No.

AYES.

The Speaker: The Ayes have it.

AGREED: PRIVATE MEMBER'S MOTION NO. 22/01 PASSED.

The Speaker: Moving on to Private Member's Motion No. 21/01, Airing of Mature Audience Television Programmes By Licensed Television Cable Operators In the Cayman Islands.

The Second Elected Member for West Bay.

PRIVATE MEMBER'S MOTION NO. 21/01

AIRING OF MATURE AUDIENCE TELEVISION PROGRAMMES BY LICENSED TELEVISION CABLE OPERATORS IN THE CAYMAN ISLANDS Withdrawn

Mr. Rolston M. Anglin: Mr. Speaker, I beg to withdraw Private Member's Motion No. 21/01, but with the Chair's indulgence, I would like to read the Motion and provide a few brief remarks.

The Speaker: Please continue.

Mr. Rolston M. Anglin: The Motion is entitled, Airing of Mature Audience Television Programmes by Licensed Television Cable Operators in the Cayman Islands.

"WHEREAS certain inappropriate viewing material (for example Sex in the City, Queer as Folk, G-String Divas and Music Videos) is aired on Music Television (MTV), VH-1, Black Entertainment

Network (BET), Home Box Office (HBO) and Showtime at hours before 11 pm on the CITN Cable Television package;

“BE IT RESOLVED THAT, in regard to licensed television cable operators in the Cayman Islands, Government considers instituting a review and amending or introducing the necessary legislation to ensure that all such mature audience material is aired after the hour of 11 pm.”

I would like to add that the specific types of programmes I mentioned in this Motion were those that I received complaints about over a period of time from persons in our community who feel that some of these are inappropriate to be aired at such early hours.

I certainly realise that with music videos, in terms of showing them at a particular time, there would be inherent difficulties. One out of every ten may be offensive and there is no readily available method for cable operators to know this here in Cayman. That is because they do not operate as a cable operator would in countries like the US where they are the operator and everything is derived from your particular station and company, which you then feed on to your subscribers. We actually receive a feed from another country into Cayman. These were put into the Resolve. It had to be highlighted because I have had so many complaints. Upon receiving them, every once in a while I took the opportunity to view some of these myself.

One has to wonder why we are so surprised at where the country is headed morally. I am not saying this is the sole reason, but possibly a major contributing factor.

I was shocked to see things on at early hours, predominately around 3 to 4 pm when certain Rap videos show people in long strange looking limousines 30 to 40 feet long, with swimming pools, and persons scantily (to say the least) dressed.

This Motion was not seeking to be an alternative to parenting. It takes parents to monitor what happens in their own homes. This Motion seeks to ensure that shows in Cayman of a particular nature were shown after a specific hour.

We only need to look. . .

Mr. Alden M. McLaughlin, Jr.: On a point of order.

POINT OF ORDER

The Speaker: May I hear your point of order?

Mr. Alden M. McLaughlin, Jr.: Is the Member withdrawing the Motion or speaking to it? If he is speaking to the Motion, I and other Members would like an opportunity to debate it.

The Speaker: It was my understanding that he was making a brief explanation prior to moving a motion for the withdrawal.

The Second Elected Member for West Bay, please continue and make it brief.

Mr. Rolston M. Anglin: Thank you Mr. Speaker.

I am a reasonable person, like all my Honourable colleagues in this Chamber.

Two points and it will only take approximately two minutes. Firstly, the United States only allows these materials to be shown at specific hours, that is, after 10 pm. However, in Cayman we have a quandary in that when they go on daylight savings time they are shown here one hour earlier. So, after having received specific knowledge of the great difficulties that may be encountered technically in terms of what the Motion seeks to do, I am ready to withdraw the Motion. I am encouraged because there are some Members of this House who are open to the notion of reviewing whether or not we should go on daylight savings time here in Cayman not only for this issue, but others, and those are issues for separate debate should they come to this Chamber.

Secondly, it is my understanding from the Ministry that the cable station has agreed to do certain public service work to educate their subscribers on how to utilise the parental locking capabilities to help to address this issue.

I thank you, Mr. Speaker, and my colleagues for their indulgence.

The Speaker: Would you move a motion under Standing Order 24(14) that this Motion be withdrawn?

Mr. Rolston M. Anglin: I move that Private Member's Motion No. 21/01 be withdrawn.

The Speaker: In accordance with Standing Order 24(14) the Motion has been moved that Private Member's Motion No. 21/01 be withdrawn. Those in favour please say Aye. Those against, No.

AYES.

The Speaker: The Ayes have it.

AGREED: PRIVATE MEMBER'S MOTION NO. 21/01 WITHDRAWN.

The Speaker: Moving on to Private Member's Motion No. 20/01, Prime Lending Rate, to be moved by the Second Elected Member for West Bay.

PRIVATE MEMBER'S MOTION NO. 20/01

PRIME LENDING RATE

Mr. Rolston M. Anglin: Private Member's Motion No. 20/01, Prime Lending Rate, standing in my name reads:

“WHEREAS the New York Prime Lending Rate is by definition and practice in the United States of America a base used for short term business loans;

“AND WHEREAS the New York Prime Lending Rate is used as a base for lending institutions in the Cayman Islands;

“AND WHEREAS the New York Prime Lending Rate as at August 28, 2001 is 6.50 percent and the 30 Year Fixed Mortgage rate is 6.51 percent;

“BE IT RESOLVED THAT Government considers mandating that lending institutions in the Cayman Islands use the same base rate for their loan products as is used in the United States;

“AND BE IT FURTHER RESOLVED THAT Government consider instituting Usury legislation to provide for maximum spreads on loan products in the Cayman Islands;

“AND BE IT FURTHER RESOLVED THAT Government investigate the feasibility of making the Monetary Authority responsible for setting interest rates in the Cayman Islands.”

The Speaker: Do you have a Seconder?
The Elected Member for East End.

Mr. V. Arden McLean: Thank you, Mr. Speaker.
I beg to second the Motion currently on the floor.

The Speaker: Private Member's Motion No. 20/01 has been duly moved and seconded. Does the Mover wish to speak to it?

The Second Elected Member for West Bay.

Mr. Rolston M. Anglin: Thank you.

Mr. Speaker, for some time now, and when I say “some time” I mean many years, people in this country have complained vigorously about the cost of living. When one speaks about the cost of living in these Islands there are a few things that quickly come to mind. Firstly, the cost of housing and financing your housing, the cost of electricity, the cost at the super-market and the cost of telecommunications in these Islands. Certainly, most business entities in this Island would be involved in some form of financing from a banking or lending institution. So, there would be certain costs that each of these companies must bear that inevitably have to be passed on to the consumer in this country. Certainly, the matter of financing is no exception.

Let me make two points very clear: Where the Motion speaks to the New York Prime Lending Rate being used in the Cayman Islands, for clarity, what happens is that the lending institutions here simply receive knowledge of change in that rate and they utilise that same rate and call it, from my understanding, the Cayman Islands Prime Lending Rate.

The last resolve speaks to the Monetary Authority being responsible in setting lending interest rates. Certainly, this matter is speaking specifically to them simply being the body that disseminates the interest rates based on what the practice of the country is. For example, if we were to continue in the current practice whereby the New York Prime Rate is utilised as a base for all lending, it would be a matter of the Monetary Authority officially receiving notice of the change and disseminating that notice to lending institutions in the Cayman Islands. Currently, the banks act in concert on this matter and whenever there is a change, they simply make an announcement and it is usually accompanied by a press release in the Caymanian Compass with all of their names attached to it stating what the new Cayman Prime Interest Rate is.

I am not advocating that the Monetary Authority at this stage of our country's history and development be charged with formulating the interest rate structure in these Islands. After all, I think we would all agree there are certain fundamental criteria in these Islands that may be lacking in terms of being able to make that bold leap forward. Certainly, the rudimentary nature of the economy of the Cayman Islands would be the first thing that we would point to in that regard.

We are not an economy that has the hallmark of wealth, manufacturing capabilities or defined taxation policies whereby we can say we have a body that would be charged with fiscal policy—as is the Federal Reserve in the United States—utilising interest rates to ensure that the economic policy of the political directorate would somehow transcend into economic reality, as prevails in that country and many other more developed countries, with mature financial markets and economic bases.

When we look back at this country's rapid development over the last 40 years or so, and look at the first banks coming to Cayman, it is my information that certain generous concessions were given. Things like Government not being involved with interest rate setting; that there would never be a central bank in this country; things that seemed to have stacked the deck in favour of the banks and lending institutions here in Cayman.

A similar motion trying to get to where this Motion is trying to get was brought to this House one year ago, in this same September sitting by the Honourable McKeever Bush. That Motion sought to have negotiations between Government and certain lending institutions with the view to ensuring there are equitable interest rates being passed on to the consumers of this country.

When we look at the policy the lending institutions have instituted in Cayman, there are a number of matters that come to mind. First, we recognise that the Cayman Islands dollar is certainly pegged to the US dollar and is backed by certain US Government securities. That would then explain why the lending institutions in these Islands would utilise a base rate that comes from the USA. The prime lending rate is a rate that would be used to gauge things like lines of credit, and certain other short term lending products.

Certainly, a 15, 20, 25, or 30 year mortgage, or a ten year property loan, any such loan that most of us would consider long term (something over 12 months) would not use the same rate as the US for pricing that particular product. The banking institution in the US has certain advantages over a place like Cayman. When we speak about mortgages in particular, we see there is an established secondary market for these products; that is, a customer will come into a bank, receive financing for a house and that loan product itself can then be sold on to other institutions. Certainly, that feature in itself being present in the US market will lend itself to having interest rates, mortgages, being at a certain range of levels.

When we consider the way in which Cayman has grown over the past years, and the amount of wealth, relatively speaking, that has come into the hands of a much broader base of persons within the community we quickly see that the market itself, for mortgages has grown tremendously.

I think even the banks would admit with their risk management policies and practices that on their normal portfolios they would have had some favourable experience in their lending practices and loan books over the years. I say their normal portfolio because it has come to my attention, not only from my former profession but more recently again from persons involved in this business of lending on money, that there is one specific segment of their loan book that has experienced much higher than usual loss rates, and that is the Government guaranteed scheme. It is my understanding that the loss rate on that particular product is some 30 to 50 times higher than the loss rate on the ordinary loan book of certain lending institutions in these Islands.

Getting back to the growth in terms of the market of those persons who seek financing, I think we can all acknowledge that it has grown tremendously over the last 30 years in these Islands from being virtually non-existent to now being booming. In fact, there are many of us who might feel like Cayman probably has one of the highest debt servicing ratios of many countries in this entire world.

I recognise that when it comes to pricing loans and setting interest rates, the banks must do their background checks and risk profiling on their applicants. They should also be able to set the loan rates at the level they feel is fair for a particular loan and will naturally look at the perceived risk that they see attached to a specific individual. What is ironic is that persons who are less stable economically usually have to pay the higher rates of interest than persons with means. Of course, this is a phenomenon that is not just restricted to Cayman. However, what it simply means is that those who are more able to pay get more favourable terms and those who are less able to pay, typically cannot negotiate those favourable terms. There are a lot of reasons behind that and this Motion is certainly not the place to speak to those particular reasons.

We then have to go on to what exists in detail in the market in Cayman today. We have had a great increase in this loan market, the demand for loans.

We have also had significant numbers of people who have moved to this country who themselves demand loan products. A good number of them are more able to secure housing and loans at more favourable terms.

Now, we then have to move on and look at what has happened regionally in terms of banks and bank development in the Caribbean. I have been told on more than one occasion over the last seven years—ever since my first audit of a major banking facility in Cayman which was involved in mortgages to the general public—that the Caribbean is looked at as a region by head offices of certain banks. In other words, they attach a certain risk ratio globally and then break that down by region; saying 'North America here is your general risk profile, the Caribbean here is your general risk profile, Central and South America here is your general risk profile'. I was told that the Caribbean attaches a perceived higher level of risk and there were many reasons given for that.

I would like to say that in this sophisticated world we live in, certainly when an audit firm takes on a client they do not simply look at the client's region and attach a specific risk profile. Yes, the country has something to do with it, but you look at the individual company, the management, and then you develop your risk management systems and base your audit fee on that. Something very similar happens in a bank: a person walks in the door, the bank does a background check and they attach a certain risk profile to that person.

I have been told the Caribbean is also being looked after but this has a number of drawbacks to that approach. The Caribbean has some separate and very distinct islands in terms of economic development and relative economic wealth. Certainly, giving a mortgage in Haiti will attach significantly more risk than giving a mortgage in Cayman, irrespective of the economics of the person. You have to look at the political uncertainty alone in that country.

Caymanians; persons who come here from abroad; the various legal and accounting firms; banks; trust companies; the government; everyone working in tandem have worked long and hard to develop this country to where it is. The relative political tranquillity in this country has a lot to do with our economic success. Certainly, when we speak to loans and lending, I find it a bit strange that people would be talking about the Caribbean and the risk associated with the Caribbean and not talking about Cayman. It is not like they are coming into Cayman tomorrow and they do not have any empirical evidence or any detailed and concrete working knowledge of the persons here.

Certain financial institutions have been lending money here for many years and have been able to develop their risk management systems to a level where they should be able to look at Cayman as an Island, as a group of people, and be able to lend their monies appropriately.

There are those who would say that sounds like a smokescreen. . .

The Speaker: May I interrupt you?

I do not presume that you will be finishing very soon. Is it the wish that we take the afternoon break, or should we waive the break and continue? I am in the hands of the House.

Proceedings are suspended for 15 minutes.

PROCEEDINGS SUSPENDED AT 3.52 PM

PROCEEDINGS RESUMED AT 4.32 PM

The Speaker: Please be seated.

Debate continues on Private Member's Motion No. 20/01. The Second Elected Member for West Bay, continuing.

Mr. Rolston M. Anglin: Thank you.

This Motion certainly is one which has stirred up some debate in the community. It is my understanding that it has stirred up significant debate in the banking community. One thing that has to be borne in mind and made abundantly clear in this debate is the whole notion of risk analysis, and for banks to be able to have their personnel sit with every potential lending customer and come up with what is the appropriate interest rate, as far as they are concerned, for taking the risk in lending out their money.

The second resolve speaks to Usury legislation to provide for maximum spreads on loan products. As someone recently said, it really does not matter too much to them what base the banks use. What they were really concerned about was what spread they tack on to their loans.

While that comment has a lot of merit, one of the things I would like to add is the fact that I believe as the first resolve calls for, if we are going to use the US for the model Cayman is going to be based on, in terms of foreign exchange rate and interest rate policy, that we should use the appropriate rate.

We should look to the US and utilise the rate they use and are allowed to use for particular types of loans. The banks must be able to do risk profiles on their customer and charge an appropriate interest rate. It is my firm view that we cannot sit here and say 'Well, you can only use the 15 or 30 year Treasury Bond Rate for example, for a mortgage as the base, and on top of that all you can have is 2 percent spread'. Banks must have the latitude to charge the appropriate interest rates for each individual customer. That goes in tandem with the fact that each customer has to do his best to build up credit worthiness so that they can negotiate the appropriate spread for their particular loan.

You might find a first time land or homeowner going to the bank to borrow who does not make the most money in the world but meets the debt-servicing ratio of the bank, and the bank gives him a particular spread. That spread must allow the bank to get the reward that is fair for the risk taken. Naturally, there will be inherent problems, but that is where the specific individual has to check around.

Once that person gets a rate, and it may not be the most favourable rate, after they have paid their loan, let us say in three to five years, it is then their duty to go back to the bank and renegotiate saying that they have proved to be less risky than initially thought. It is their duty to shop around.

Any bank that is truly committed to giving any form of long term loan would recognise that there is nothing better than having a customer who will make their monthly payments on time all the time. There are certain concessions that any bank would give in that regard.

Usury legislation, in my view, is the key to this entire move. Whereas there can be inherent problems in terms of the spread being what some persons consider excessive. What the Motion seeks is, as in countries such as the US, for there to be a reasonable cap above which spreads cannot go, but giving the banking institution the latitude required to be able to properly price its loan product.

I certainly will not claim to have the answer of what that amount should be. Certainly, the banks sitting down with government at the same table . . . they are the lenders. They have a good idea based on all the evidence they have accumulated over the years as to what the rate should be.

When the Motion speaks to the lending rate used as a base in Cayman, the New York Prime Rate is simply called here the Cayman Islands Prime Rate. That is a very important point for Members and the listening public to consider. The New York Prime Lending Rate, and the Federal Reserve Prime Lending Rate are synonymous. Once that rate is announced by the Federal Reserve Chairman it automatically becomes the Cayman Islands Prime Rate. There is no local economic basis for the Cayman Islands Prime Rate. If there were, then under the third resolve we could speak to the Monetary Authority formulating that prime rate. However, as I outlined earlier, there is not the economic system here, the maturity of the economy and the financial market in this country locally, to do that. That is my humble view.

If we are going to simply look at the US and pick a specific rate to be utilised as our prime rate and our base for lending, upon which spreads are added, all this Motion is seeking to do is to have the banks utilise the same base utilised in the USA. For example, if banks were to get into 30-year mortgages, which is the standard in the US, the 30 year Treasury Bond Rate is what would be utilised as the general guide for your rate. After all, if we look at the third whereas of this Motion, the prime rate as at August 28 was 6.50 percent. The 30 year fixed mortgage rate was 6.51 percent. If that prime rate had anything to do with the cost of funds of banks why would they only have .01 percent of a spread? The 30-year Treasury Bond Rate is used as a base.

This is still out of Economics 101, but also for any of us who watch programmes such as MSNBC and CNBC, whenever interest rate debate comes up, we often hear them talk about what the appropriate bases are, and what bases are utilised in the USA. As at August 28, the 30-year Treasury Bond Market Rate was 5.38 percent. Now, the 30-year rate I have quoted here makes some semblance of sense. If our general base utilised was 5.38 percent and the 30-year rate at that date was 6.51 percent we see where there is on average some spread of 1.13 percent. Naturally, within that you would have people with larger spreads, much larger than 1.13 percent—typically up to 3.5 percent.

There is also a big block of good performing loans in that country which allow those particular borrowers to get more favourable terms; the same negotiation I spoke to earlier. They have proven track records so they can go out and get rates that are much lower. Obviously, with any average, if you have a much larger number of small numbers in an average, and a few large numbers, obviously the average will be much closer tied to the smaller numbers. It is simple math; one plus one is two, plus 10 is 12 divided by 3 is 4. The average is 4 but one of the integers in that equation is 10. So, the average is significantly below 10; it is much closer than the two ones because there are more of them—that is the point I am trying to make.

Even though we see the spread, on average, is just over one that in my humble submission is not to be taken for what is the reality of certain economic factors that may prevail in this Island; things like the fact that a lot of our lending is based predominately on the equity in the real estate itself. In other words, persons are not necessarily going to the bank with a $100,000 for a fixed deposit at that institution, and then get a loan for a mortgage. They are saying to the bank, 'I want to build a house. The valuator has said at the end of the project it will be worth $250,000. Can I have $200,000 to complete the construction?' All the bank has is the valuation of the real estate. Of course we recognise that the real estate market in this country, or any country, is one that can change very quickly. Other things being equal, what is the value of a square foot of land that you are standing on? It is worth what someone is willing to pay you for it. So, all things being equal, $100,000 in the bank is $100,000.

I believe that when we speak to the second resolve of this Motion that the banks would have to be consulted, they have empirical evidence that would suggest what the reasonable usury rates are that should be allowed. At the end of the day, there are two very important parties having to be represented in this debate: the borrowers and the banks that have a business to run and to make a reasonable profit on the risk they are taking.

When we speak of loan products, we are not talking about walking into the grocery store and picking up a gallon of milk. We are talking about walking into the bank and asking them from their collective savings, less the general reserve criteria stipulated by the Cayman Islands government, to take a portion of that and lend it to you for a specific period. You must remember you are asking the bank to lend money to be able to do a specific task. In a lot of instances, the task is not necessarily an economic one; it is to build a house, to buy a car, to buy a boat.

So, they are not buying into a supermarket. They are not lending the money on to a supermarket running a business in the greatest of numbers. The numbers are predominately on the personal lending side. They are lending you money for a specific product you are going to build or buy and you then are going to work to repay that money over a specific period of time. The banks must be allowed to run a business in this country.

This Motion has no intention of taking that ability away from the lending institutions. It is asking the lending institutions to utilise the appropriate base rate used in the US, and then on top of that not to charge excessive spreads protecting the consumer from excessive spreads based on their economic situation. In other words, if a person goes into a bank and is not of the highest standards of means, he basically has to take it or leave it. That person is saying 'Prime plus six, prime plus three, prime plus four; that is what I have to take because I have to get a house for my family and I need to get into my house'.

I do not believe this Motion in any way is seeking to make paupers out of banks, to ask banks to lend their money for little to nothing and not be able to make a profit. Who would operate a bank if that was the case? There would be no economic incentive to operate a bank.

In all phases and stages of life there are crossroads. The crossroads come between the human side, the consumer side of things, and the motivation of persons engaged in economic activities. That motivation is usually to make a profit.

The third resolve speaks to the Monetary Authority setting interest rates. If the Government accepts this Motion that would be based on whatever they would seek to have happen in the first resolve. They would simply get the base from the US and that would be the base they would publish as the base rate in the Cayman Islands. I think it is a more palatable way to have interest rates announced to the public in this country, not to just see the names of six banks, all on the same press release saying 'this is the interest rate and the base rate that will be utilised in the Cayman Islands'.

The Speaker: We have reached the hour of interruption. Would you be finished in a few minutes?

Mr. Rolston M. Anglin: I have a few more points to make. I cannot say that I will finish in the next few minutes.

The Speaker: I will entertain a motion for the adjournment of this House.

ADJOURNMENT

Hon. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Mr. Speaker, I move the adjournment of this Honourable House until 10 am tomorrow.

The Speaker: Before putting the question, I want to correct a procedural matter. On the moving of the Motion to withdraw Private Member's Motion No. 21/01, I did not get a Seconder. I would like to move that Motion again and have it done properly.

The Second Elected Member for West Bay, would you move the Motion?

Mr. Rolston M. Anglin: I move the Motion to withdraw, Private Member's Motion No. 21/01.

The Speaker: Do we have a Seconder?
The Third Elected Member for West Bay.

Capt. A. Eugene Ebanks: Mr. Speaker, I beg to second the Motion.

The Speaker: The question is that Private Member's Motion No. 21/01 be withdrawn. Those in favour please say Aye. Those against, No.

AYES.

The Speaker: The Ayes have it.

AGREED: PRIVATE MEMBER'S MOTION NO. 21/01 WITHDRAWN.

The Speaker: The question is that this Honourable House do now adjourn until 10 am tomorrow. Those in favour, please say Aye. Those against, No.

AYES.

The Speaker: The Ayes have it.

AT 4.34 PM THE HOUSE STOOD ADJOURNED UNTIL 10 AM FRIDAY, 6 SEPTEMBER 2001.

OFFICIAL HANSARD REPORT
THURSDAY
6 SEPTEMBER 2001
10.31 AM
Second Sitting

The Speaker: Good morning. I will invite the First Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman to say prayers.

PRAYERS

Mrs. Julianna Y. O'Connor-Connolly: Let us pray:

Almighty God, from whom all wisdom and power are derived: We beseech Thee so to direct and prosper the deliberations of the Legislative Assembly now assembled, that all things may be ordered upon the best and surest foundations for the glory of Thy Name and for the safety, honour and welfare of the people of these Islands.

Bless our Sovereign Lady, Queen Elizabeth II; the Queen Mother; Philip, Duke of Edinburgh; Charles Prince of Wales; and all the Royal family. Give grace to all who exercise authority in our Commonwealth, that peace and happiness, truth and justice, religion and piety may be established among us. Especially we pray for the Governor of our Islands, the Speaker of the Legislative Assembly, Official Members and Ministers of Executive Council and Members of the Legislative Assembly, that we may be enabled faithfully to perform the responsible duties of our high office.

All this we ask for Thy great Name's sake.

Let us say the Lord's Prayer together:

Our Father, who art in Heaven, Hallowed be Thy Name. Thy Kingdom come, Thy will be done on earth as it is in Heaven. Give us this day our daily bread, and forgive us our trespasses, as we forgive those who trespass against us. Lead us not into temptation, but deliver us from evil. For Thine is the Kingdom, the power and the glory, forever and ever. Amen.

Proceedings resumed at 10.31 am

The Speaker: Please be seated. The Legislative Assembly is in session.

READING BY THE HONOURABLE
SPEAKER OF MESSAGES
AND ANNOUNCEMENTS

APOLOGIES

The Speaker: I have received apologies for absence from the Honourable First Official Member who is presently Acting Governor, the Third Elected Member for George Town and Fourth Elected Member for West Bay who are currently overseas on a CPA conference in Australia.

The next item is Other Business—

Mr. Gilbert A. McLean: Mr. Speaker—

Hon. D. Kurt Tibbetts: With leave of the Chair, I would like to apologise to the House because there are no questions on the Order Paper.

The Business Committee has met and tried to have questions lined up on the Order Paper so that we could get them answered as quickly as possible. Unfortunately, the system has dragged a little bit and Ministers and Official Members have not been able to put forward questions. However, I can assure this Honourable House that we will do our best to have enough for tomorrow to make up for today, and more, and try to keep it in line as best as we can thereafter, Sir.

The Speaker: The Second Elected Member for Bodden Town.

Mr. Gilbert A. McLean: Mr. Speaker, regarding questions, I have a concern about the lack of answers to questions being brought to the Honourable House on time. In the two previous Meetings this has been the case and I am led to wonder what is happening. Is it the case that the departments or the persons having to produce the information are so uninformed that they do not have the information readily available, or is it the case that for some unknown reason it is being delayed?

I would like to bring to the attention of the Chair that one of the most important times in the process of the Legislative Assembly is Question Time. Certainly in the past, Civil Servants knew immediately that when a question was received they should prepare the answers for their Ministers. I would like to protest the lack of readiness and presentation of information that is asked for in questions. We do have to submit questions ten days ahead of the opening of the House and, at least, there should be some that are readily available. I believe that some did not require that much research.

I would ask that the Chair take note of it as well as the Government.

The Speaker: Moving on to Other Business, Private Member's Motion 20/01, Prime Lending Rate, continuation of debate thereon.

The Second Elected Member for West Bay continuing.

OTHER BUSINESS

PRIVATE MEMBERS' MOTIONS

PRIVATE MEMBER'S MOTION NO. 20/01

PRIME LENDING RATE

(Continuation of debate thereon)

Mr. Rolston M. Anglin: Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

In continuing my contribution to this Motion, we need to bear in mind a couple of things regarding what I think is a very important matter as it relates to Cayman. We all recognise that our financial markets are not as mature as the more developed countries in the world. So, when we look at capital and the availability of capital in regard to personal and business loans, we do not have the sophistication that exists in places such as the United States.

For example, on the business loan front and capital availability to businesses, we do not have the type of markets with great access to public funds by way of public offerings, initial public offerings, so when it comes to the availability for businesses to raise funds, there are usually two fronts: people either get together in a joint venture, one person comes up with an idea or has an existing business he wants others to invest in, so he does his own lobbying and comes up with a group that will put monies up. The other main alternative is to go to the banking institutions and get the banks to buy into your plan and provide you with a business loan.

On the personal front, as a government we certainly do not have the available capital to easily put together certain types of state-funded lending organisations such as those that exist in the US, for example, the General National Mortgage Association, known as Genny Mae. In that country there is access to funding by persons who own houses and there is also the creation of secondary markets in the mortgage and loan arenas.

I come from the financial arena and have had considerable experience there. I recognise that in the running of any country, government must always be cognisant of ensuring, as best it can, that market forces operate and determine things like prices of products. In this case, the interest rate is the price of money.

However, given the size of Cayman and the size of our banking community, when compared to countries like the US, we see that even in much larger markets where there is a lot more competition between the banks by sheer numbers, and by the size of the market available to them, even their governments over many years has grappled with this issue of what level of intervention they should have within this sector.

There was a time when through the Glass-Steagall Act banks were not allowed to carry out certain other businesses. That Act stood for many decades.

In regard to the second resolve of this Motion, speaking to usury and usury limits, almost every state in the US has certain prescribed usury limits. By definition, the usury limit sets out some statutory maximum that the government of that particular State feels lending on a whole cannot go above.

Over the last decade, the federal government of the US passed federal legislation that has allowed the banks in all States to not have to conform to certain State usury laws. The usury laws in existence at present are for all other forms of lending. For example, if I were your neighbour and you asked me to lend you $100, there is a prescribed maximum interest rate in most States that I cannot charge above maximum interest rate.

The premise was that the major banks, banks that usually have "NA" at the end of their name, which implies a national association, were allowed to lend at certain prescribed rates above the federal discount rate. What happened then was a sequence of events which I am sure the federal legislators themselves did not foresee when crafting the legislation.

What has come about is an intense battle over predatory lending. Once the federal government gave the major lending institutions the ability to go into the market, lend and structure loan products uninhibited, they have certainly found that the result on the consumer of the US (and usually we are speaking of the "small man") has been negative to say the least. In fact, since this has happened, in 1999 North Carolina became the first US State to start to take corrective action. They recognised what was happening to the consumers within the country. Many other States have followed suit and are currently in the process of following suit.

There are a number of things that happened and some of those same practices are being carried out here in Cayman. I had a constituent who came to me with a loan agreement that was entered into with one of the major banks on this island, one of the six clearing banks. The person's loan calls for interest to be paid over a three-year period. At the end of three years they were to repay the bank a lump sum of some $48,000. These are called "balloon-payment loans." This person and his family certainly are not well to-do individuals.

As most States including the State of North Carolina and most federal legislators would admit, balloon-payment loans are reserved for individuals with some form of means. How can the average person be expected to pay interest and loan payment over a prescribed period and live, yet also be able to come up with such a large payment at the end?

Another practice carried on in this country, which became a major problem in the US over the last decade especially, is a prepayment penalty. In other words, let us say something positive on the economic front happened in a person's life, and they could start prepaying some of their mortgages. A lot of these mortgage agreements are such that they have excessive penalties for prepayment.

Let us say a person of modest means makes his payment on time year after year. When a bank takes that risk, we all acknowledge that the interest rate for that person versus a person of means would be higher. However, what happens when that person has paid for five years consistently, not missing one payment, never late with a payment? Should he not be rewarded? He has now established a track record. Once that is established, that person can go back to that bank, or another bank, show his track record and say, 'My interest rate was X, I have now proved that I can pay and that my level of risk has been reduced, I would like you to take over my loan.' However, prepayment penalties punishes the person for being a good paymaster and proving to the lender that he is not as high a risk as initially perceived!

There is also a practice called "flipping." Persons of lesser means, who have certain loans, in particular balloon-payment loans, once reaching the set period where they must come up with the lump sum (which is usually large), the bank eagerly refinances that original balloon payment, which by the way is usually within a couple of thousand dollars, at most, of the original principal.

In other words, if you took out a loan for $150,000 and agreed that after five years you would pay $145,000 back to the bank. However, for those five years all you are paying is interest. Come the five years, how are you going to come up with the $145,000? You cannot, unless you are a person of means. What does the bank gladly do? You have paid them for five years without missing a payment, so, they gladly finance the $145,000! These practices have been banned in North Carolina. There can be no prepayment penalties for loans under $150,000. After all, those are the people we would consider in Cayman the "small man."

When we look at this issue and compare where Cayman is, which is absent of any such legislation, and we look at other countries, it is only wise to learn from the mistakes of others. Certainly, this is an area just like a lot of other areas where we will not get perfect legislation or negotiation and a perfect end result, but at least persons are made to understand you are serious about doing things in a fair manner, not unconscionable. As I said yesterday time and time again, banks in this country serve the most useful of purposes. They provide us a safe place to put our money; they provide us with the capital we often cannot come up with for things that are important to human existence, such as mortgages. For taking the risk, for managing our money they must be rewarded in a way that allows them to make a decent profit. No one is arguing that fact. I certainly am not!

However, from the complaints I have gotten, and from my personal experiences, and in looking at what prevails in these islands, I believe it is time for the Government to have meaningful discussions with the banking industry to come up with an ideology that all can feel is fair and equitable.

Another of my constituents paid on a mortgage for 15 years. That particular individual's mortgage was for 15 years. However, some six months before the mortgage was supposed to be fully paid, he got a letter from the bank advising him that on an original loan of $55,000 they were willing to finance the amount he would have outstanding six months later, which was the end of the loan term over the years through negative amortisation on his loan. He then still owed $27,000. That is unconscionable in my view.

Let me make this clear: From my research that sort of practice is not prevalent in every bank here on this Island. I have gotten complaints about two particular banking institutions. I have had persons bring me their amortisation schedules, once they requested them from the banks. Negative amortisation is yet another problem that the federal authorities in the US found to be prevalent. Again, North Carolina, and other States following suit, has put in their regulation that negative amortisation is illegal.

This whole issue, in my view, is centered around interest rates, but there are much wider questions that government must be able to ask of the banks and negotiate with the banks to cease. It is my belief that there are many practices in the banking industry that our government is probably not aware of. That speaks to the fact that we have taken a hands-off approach, going on a laissez faire theory of economics. That is a good theory, the very cornerstone of free market economies. Certainly, I am a person who believes in as little government intervention as possible. As far as I am concerned markets are the markets and government is government. However, you cannot find one country on the face of the earth where governments have not had to institute regulations in some form or another. You probably cannot find any country in the world with a government that has not instituted market-distorting practices such as subsidies to certain sectors.

Yes, laissez faire is a theory—the cornerstone of the free market system. However, at the end of the day no government can ever dream, in my humble view, that it will be able to sit back and the market is going to operate perfectly and certain situations, such as national security, will not come where they themselves have to do certain things in the best interest of all concerned—they and their citizens.

When I speak to usury legislation, and I use the term "lending institutions," that includes everything and everyone who lends money in this country—not just banks; not just the credit union, but also persons who lend money. We have to ensure that persons who borrow money in this country are not raped.

On the matter of spreads above which banks lend on money, I think there are few in the banking community that would accept, if given a reasonable spread; they would have no problem operating. In most

US States that I have studied, banks are given adequate reign to make a healthy profit. The maximum spread stipulated is one that allows them negotiation so they can lend on money. The view taken and still held by those State governments for instituting and maintaining such legislation is that given the spread and given maximum rates, anyone who is going to lend above that amount would be taking on a significant risk anyway. If a bank does a risk analysis and finds it has to charge a person 20 percent on a mortgage; that is more than likely a person who should not get a mortgage in the first place.

That is the third problem that has been prevalent in the US since the federal government relaxed its policies. Inappropriate people have been given loans. In a lot of instances they were given refinancing whereby they already had a portion of equity in their home built up, or persons may have owned undeveloped property, so they had equity in land. Once you lend on to that person, and they have to be charged an exorbitant rate they are so risky, there are those who view that as unethical lending because they are lending to a person that will more than likely fail and not be able to maintain the payments. Who benefits in the long term? Who loses? Certainly, the consumer is the loser in this instance.

Regarding the base rate, there are many that will argue back and forth as to what is a more appropriate base rate. In fact, there are those in the international financial community who have held the view that LIBOR (London Interbank Offering Rate) is probably one of the more sound rates there is internationally. It is one of the only ways in which the financial community has developed the mechanism to come up with the true cost of money in an international setting, not on a local setting in any given country. However, I do not know of any widespread support internationally for banks to move towards using that as their base. This, unfortunately, does not necessarily account for some of the very unique situations that exist in individual countries and in their particular markets.

Moving on to the US, specifically; that particular country has long held the notion that long-term lending and long-term loan products should be based on the US Treasury Bond Market. Mr. Speaker, if you would permit me, I would like to read the definition that the Federal Reserve Bank gives to "prime interest rate."
"The prime rate is a rate posted by a majority of the top 25 by assets in domestic offices insured US Chartered commercial banks. Prime is one of several base rates used by banks to price short term business loans."

By definition, the prime US rate is used by banks to price short-term business loans. My reason for bringing this Motion is the fact that the banks in Cayman receive that rate and simply call it and set it as the Cayman prime rate. By definition then, that Cayman prime should be utilised for short-term business loans, and they should then use other formulas to come up with long-term personal loans—auto loans, mortgages, and home refurbishing. All those other longer-term personal loans should utilise, in my humble view, a more appropriate base rate because the prime rate is certainly not utilised for those particular markets in the country of origin.

There is another part of this argument. When we look at Cayman, and at our exchange rate, we have currency that is some 18 to 19 percent stronger than the US. So, by simply taking the US prime rate, calling it the Cayman prime rate, and leaving at exactly the same amount, there are those who feel that is completely fair because the Cayman dollar is 20 percent higher anyway. I certainly cannot argue against that point. My simple point is that it is not the same base rate utilised in the US for long term lending.

This Motion is asking for government to consider doing certain things the US market already has in existence, which is, that the more appropriate base rates be utilised.

As I said yesterday, on the second resolve in terms of usury and spreads, no government, in my humble view, can be restrictive in this area. We cannot go out and say that a bank can only lend at base plus 2 percent or plus 3 percent. Even though certain people may feel that is excessively high, that is the initial risk that will be attached to certain persons in our society and in any society. That is just a part of the economic reality of life in most countries. Not everyone will be "well to-do" persons.

I believe that on both of these fronts there needs to be serious dialogue between the banks and the Government of the Cayman Islands ensuring that what exists in the long term in this country is something that holds what I call economic merit. For example, when we look at what it is the banks are doing, that it is something which can actually be supported by and in the country they have chosen, like the US to base their pricing on.

Cost of money, cost of funds, naturally is closely interrelated to interest rates. Whatever the banks have to pay for the money they have is going to determine what they can lend at. It is my humble submission that in Cayman the banks do make healthy profits. We have one bank that publishes (there are a few that do, but one in particular) its reports on a very timely basis. In fact, they recently published their results and speaking about their results they spoke to the fact that times were a bit difficult. However, even though times were difficult, they still made 15 plus percent recurrent capital.

If Wall Street in the US can have the companies that make up the Dow Jones Industrial Average boast 15 percent return on capital, we certainly would not see their market going through the turbulent times they are now. By any stretch of the imagination, that is a decent return. Certainly, if that is what persists in times that are described as somewhat tough, then that certainly speaks well of what would happen in good times.

As I indicated yesterday, on the third resolve of this Motion that speaks to the Monetary Authority—let me make this abundantly clear: Cayman does not have a sophisticated capital market; it does not have the hallmarks of a traditional large country economy. Things like manufacturing, agriculture, a true technology and production centre, initial public offerings, a government treasury market, are all lacking. The Motion was not saying that the Monetary Authority would be expected to be able to formulate interest rates. The Federal Reserve has all those things in the US—all the different sectors. They have a very mature economy. That is why they can utilise their interest rate policy; that is why they can utilise their money supply policy to achieve certain economic goals that have been mandated by the political directorate, but also certain economic goals that citizens of that country have come to expect.

Whatever it is the banks and government were to decide would be appropriate interest rates. When those are received and when those are changed, I believe it should be the Monetary Authority, or some independent body, that issues those. Certainly, there are many in this community who do not have a good feeling in the pit of their stomachs when they see all the clearing banks utilise one press release to advertise their interest rates and prime rates. There are many in this country that feel they are operating as a cartel.

I believe that certainly when it comes to what is termed “predatory lending practices”—some of which I outlined earlier, such as balloon payments, prepayment penalties, negative amortisation—that government should be minded to have dialogue with the clearing banks to try to come up with a policy in which they can regulate themselves. I certainly do not believe in big government or in government creating bureaucracy after bureaucracy to try to solve certain problems that might exist in society. If it can be established in the private sector with certain machinery, they usually do it more efficiently, and a lot of times they will embrace it because they are doing it.

There is scope for them to put together a committee to come up with a code of ethics saying they will not practice certain standards, that they will practice a minimum standard of banking here in Cayman. I think it is greatly needed. I would think, at the inception stage that someone from the Portfolio of Finance, probably from the Monetary Authority’s banking division should be a part of that process. I think it is proven beyond a shadow of a doubt in countries like the US who has legislated time after time addressing problems in the banking industry that there needs to be a watchful eye by government. However, that should be at the initial stages and they should be able to regulate themselves. If that does not work, they would certainly know what the alternative would be—have the Government do it. I certainly would not advocate that. I believe that is the method and the way forward in this country.

I believe this Motion is one that certainly could go a long way to ensure banking practices in this country are up to a standard that the Government and citizens feel is a bit more on the fair side, and in some instances a bit more ethical. Certainly it would give the type of climate I believe needs to exist in this country in the long term. We can no longer simply have markets operate, persons being totally distrustful, persons put into certain mortgage products that they should not be put into.

With that, I eagerly await Members’ contributions.

The Speaker: The Floor is open for debate. Does any other Member wish to speak?

The Honourable Third Official Member responsible for Finance and Economic Development.

Hon. George A. McCarthy: Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

I rise to offer some comments on Private Member’s Motion 20/01. I have taken note that the operative word in the first and second resolve is “consider.” The operative word in the third resolve is the word “investigate.”

The resolve section of the Motion invites Government to consider mandating that lending institutions in the Cayman Islands use the same base rate for their loan products as is used in the United States; the second resolve,

“AND BE IT FURTHER RESOLVED THAT Government consider instituting Usury legislation to provide for maximum spreads on loan products in the Cayman Islands.”

“AND BE IT FURTHER RESOLVED THAT Government investigate the feasibility of making the Monetary Authority responsible for setting interest rates in the Cayman Islands.”

The basis on which the Government will be accepting this Motion is that what is being sought for in the resolves of this Motion, will require research and analysis of the variables impacting on the lending rate structure as adopted within our local financial institutions. Following this review and analysis, a recommendation will be made to Executive Council as to what would be the most appropriate action to address the issues raised, or what is being sought for in the resolve sections.

One of the indicators of the efficiency of a banking system is the size of the spread, or the interest rate spread. The spread is the difference between the average interest rate a bank pays to its customers, and the average interest rate it charges on its loans. A number of other jurisdictions have in place mechanisms for monitoring various aspects of the domestic financial system including the size of the spread. Such mechanisms typically derive from a comprehensive analysis of a wider number of factors including the domestic economic conditions, the level of risk a bank faces in terms of loan defaults, the operational cost of banks, and the general availability of credit within the domestic economy, amongst others.

It is important to note that these are some of the many other factors that effect the determination of interest rates in addition to the prime rate in the United States therefore, a comprehensive assessment is needed. To date, we have not had such formal mechanisms in place in the Cayman Islands because it has generally been felt that the market was working sufficiently in this regard. However, the level of concern now seems to warrant further investigation into this matter, and it is now government's intention to establish a formal forum with the retail banks on the Island to address such issues.

If it is felt that the current manner in which rates are set is having an adverse effect on the domestic economy, it would seem prudent to first establish a fuller understanding of the factors involved in the decision making of the retail banks in the determination of interest rates, as well as fully understanding the extent of any deficiencies of the current system, in order to arrive at any proposed solution.

In order to determine a policy on the application of interest rates, it will be necessary to obtain a macroeconomic view of the domestic financial system, which would also involve regular meetings with the retail banks. I will on behalf of the Government proceed to organise this formal forum to address these issues and will report to this Honourable House accordingly.

The forum will be headed by Mr. Paul Byles, head of the Policy and Research section of the Monetary Authority. Once the exercise has been carried out, we will return to the question of what appropriate interest rate controls could be pursued. On the question of whether the Monetary Authority should be responsible for setting interest rates, I think it would be more appropriate to return to that question after we have determined what the necessary control should be. The Honourable Mover of the Motion alluded to that point.

The proposed actions I just outlined should not cause any undue alarm within the financial community. The review that will be carried out by Mr. Byles and his team will primarily be with the banking community, so nothing at all will be done in the dark, so to speak.

Every financial institution operating in the Cayman Islands should have somewhere in its Charter or Mission Statement the need to subscribe to the concept of good corporate citizenship. The fact that the Government will be accepting this Motion should not be taken as a fait accompli; that the results of the Motion will be implemented without due consultation or that the actions being sought through the resolve will be the only mechanisms which will be the basis through which the concerns as raised will be addressed.

The Government has worked very closely over the years with our financial industry. There is the principle of partnership that is always alluded to, and the appropriate consultation in addressing all of the resolve sections of this Motion will be carried out in this manner through the consultative process.

The Government also recognises that other Members may have other views as to the way in which to deal with interest rates, the base rate and level of spread. In accepting this Motion, Government will certainly take these views into consideration also. On the basis of the views that have been shared and the principles underlying the presentation of the Motion, the Government is willing to support the Motion.

The Speaker: We shall suspend proceedings for 15 minutes.

PROCEEDINGS SUSPENDED AT 11.32 PM

PROCEEDINGS RESUMED AT 12.05 PM

The Speaker: Please be seated.

Debate continues on Private Member's Motion 20/01. Does any other Member wish to speak? (Pause)

The Second Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman.

Mr. Lyndon L. Martin: Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

I have read Private Member's Motion 20/01 and have listened to the Mover's contribution (The Second Elected Member for West Bay) with great care. We all agree that the interest rates in the Cayman Islands are a matter of national concern and a matter affecting the standard of living in this country. There is no objective broader for a government than improving and enhancing the standard of living for its people. There is a need for government to take the necessary action to ensure that interest rates are established in a competitive manner and that the public is receiving funding for their personal projects, business projects, or even government for its capital projects, at a cost that is not prohibitive.

However, the Motion as presented, and how it has been accepted where there is simply a commitment to consider and investigate, provides great concern. Government establishes the environment in which businesses operates. For the banking industry and lending institutions of this country to be lingering for what could be months or even years considering the trend of government and the notion that government may be legislating and mandating as the resolutions read, "to mandate that lending institutions in the Cayman Islands use the same base rates for their loan products as in the United States." The second resolution states "that government consider instituting usury legislation to provide maximum spreads on loan products in the Cayman Islands;" and "that government investigate the feasibility of making the Monetary Authority responsible for setting interest rates in the Cayman Islands."

The last resolve that speaks of government setting interest rates, I have been made to understand through listening to the contributions and in private discussions with the Mover, that what is being sought is not the setting of interest rates which an individual would be charged, but more so the Monetary Authority being responsible for disseminating and publicising what is the base rate to be charged. Even so, I still have concerns.

Interest rate is the price banks charge for their funds. If we view banking institutions as retail operations, where money is the inventory and interest rates the price, any effort by government to control or legislate how these rates are to be charged is a method of price control. I am concerned that the precedent and trend this establishes could lead to other areas where government will attempt to control the price charged for variables within this economy.

We must understand that we are in a global market. Those who deposit funds in the Cayman Islands also have the option of depositing those funds elsewhere. It is imperative that the rate in which we charge for our deposit funds, which is the cost of the funds that becomes a component in determining the interest rate to be charged on loaned funds. The interest rates we pay on our deposits must be at a competitive rate globally otherwise those funds will be deposited elsewhere. Interest rate parity accounts that the interest rate in a country relative to the exchange rate, and as we know, our exchange rate (because our dollar is pegged to the US dollar) will fluctuate along with the US dollar against the world currency. So, the relative interest rate accounting for the differences in exchange rates globally must be on parity, otherwise you will have a fleet of funds from one country to another until those relative interest rates are adjusted in parity.

We are no exception to that rule, especially in the day of digital technology and information availability at the touch of a button—everyone knows what is available in alternative jurisdictions. We as a country must allow the interest rates on our deposits to be determined by market forces.

As banks in the Cayman Islands sometimes have to go on the open market for funds, where the deposits in the Cayman Islands are not sufficient to meet the demand for loans, they have to go on the open market to gain funds. When they are on the open market they are subject to the New York Prime Lending Rate, normally. Consequently, in determining the cost of the funds they are going to loan, which becomes the basis of determining prime rate, we as a government cannot affect that particular rate. There are market forces that have to determine that particular rate.

Because of our dollar situation with the US and moving directly along with the US dollar in the same direction and the same proportion, we have adopted a policy over the years of using the New York Prime Lending Rate. Banks undertake locally, that within five working days of a change in the New York Prime Lending Rate the banks will adjust the rates here to be equivalent to that rate—a system that has been in place and that has worked.

What gives me concern is that when the clearing banks publish together what is the new Cayman Prime Rate, they do not determine that prime rate; they simply follow the New York Prime Rate. Where this Motion comes into play is once the prime rate is determined, and we have gone through the reasons why the Government cannot affect the prime rate, then the points above prime that the banks charge should be allowed to be determined by competitive forces. I am aware that in Cayman we would like to say that our banking industry is not competitive, however it is.

I recently negotiated with my own mortgage from one bank to another and saved one point. That is a significant savings and it is possible to do. We need to ensure that the public is aware and educated on the process of negotiating for their best offer. They do not have to accept the banks first offer. Compare banking institutions to ensure the competitive forces come into play.

The Motion uses an example of 8 August 2001, that the 30-year fixed mortgage rate was at 6.51 percent and on that date the New York Prime Lending Rate was at 6.5 percent. This illustrated that in the US they use an alternative base rate for long term instruments. The one major distinguishing factor between what we have in operation here in Cayman and that in the US cannot be ignored or downplayed. That is the secondary market for mortgages.

Once an institution in the Cayman Islands commits to a 20-year loan, they are committed to that loan for the duration of 20 years. They have to account for fluctuation in interest and price levels to inflation. That has to be a local issue. That cannot be determined by what is available in New York, it is local inflation. They must ensure that the dollar they receive 20 years from now has an interest rate that will compensate for the real inflation, a real interest rate. They must account for it on a local basis based on their best estimate of what the inflation will be in this local economy. That issue has to be determined on a local basis not using any international basis. That is to determine the points they will charge.

In the US, they can go a little bit more aggressive and even have longer period mortgages because those mortgages can be sold on to another institution. The money can then be turned over at a greater rate within each banking institution so that they can have a lower interest rate on their long term loans. However, in the Cayman Islands, we do not have such a secondary market.

I want to establish my position quite clearly because it is an extremely sensitive issue. We want to find a method to bring down the cost of borrowing funds in this country. We all want that but, it is imperative that we do it in the most appropriate and effective manner. It is my position that the manner this Motion seeks for the Government to consider and investigate is not the most appropriate method.

When we speak of regulating the spread the banks can charge, as the Mover admitted, that will cause us to eliminate certain individuals from getting funds. We must accept the fact that because of our unique history and our rapid development, we now have a marketplace, a community that is heavily laid in debt. We have a significant amount of consumer loans defaulted upon. We have a lot of cars funded through short-term loans that are defaulted on, especially in the economic climate we have today. So, the banks must be able to consider the local situation to determine their perceived risk in loaning to the general public of the Cayman Islands.

To simply state that these issues will be based solely on factors outside of this country, without banks having the flexibility to adjust their rates to suit their situation, is not a complete answer to this question. Once we agree on the premise I have put forward, that the prime rate has to be determined by the New York Prime Rate, then, the points above the prime rate have to be determined by the banks' perception of risk and inflation in this local economy. The only thing we must ensure to secure the best rate for the people is that these rates, the points above prime, are determined in a competitive manner. Each bank is competing for its share of the business. On that note, there is another special consideration government must make.

Government must ensure that its policies take into consideration the inflationary impact of each action. That very inflation we have just seen, a 1.4 percent increase, will have to be accounted for when the banks are determining the points above their prime rate. In a time of economic slowdown, we would have expected a reduction in the price level of the country, but we have seen an increase which is a local issue and must be determined locally by the banking institutions participating in this marketplace, not by an outside source.

The Government must also realise that each bank has a quota that they must loan in order to sustain their viability. That is their main source of profitability. When the Government has to go out into the same local market and secure large sums of money which allows these banks to secure their quotas, they are less driven to be competitive in the marketplace. Also, we must understand that government loans are at some of the best rates; therefore, the banks have to seek to fill the remainder of their quota at the higher cohorts of interest. So, Government can assist in bringing the cost of funds down through its own policies.

I am advocate that the Cayman Islands, given the state of the oligopolies we have, need to have some form of antitrust; some form of legislation that prevents cartels from forming; some form of legislation that will ensure that these rates are determined competitively.

The process we are currently going through where an intelligent motion is brought to the House, presented to 18 Members of the Legislative Assembly for consideration, and all Members agree on the intent of the Motion, but having healthy disagreement as to the methodology to get to that objective is a healthy process. In the end the country will benefit because we will all grow in our thought process and in our positions on various issues. So, I thank the Mover and Seconder for bringing this Motion.

I would like to reiterate my position: The Motion "Prime Lending Rate" calls for the Cayman Islands to use the New York Prime Lending Rate as the base rate in the Cayman Islands; that is currently the case. It then suggests that for long term instruments, by using an example to illustrate that, should use other basis, such as in the US they use Treasury Bonds, a 15 year Treasury Bond rate for a 15 year mortgage. However, we must understand that we are located in the Cayman Islands and we are lending money that is deposited here in the Cayman Islands at the rate that we are paying, and in the case that our banks have to go on the open market they are subject to the New York Prime Lending Rate. It is my position that the New York Prime Lending Rate must be the basis on which all loans are determined.

It is my position that there is scope to have fewer points above the prime through enhanced competition—enhanced competition through legislation that prevents banks and lending institutions from collectively setting their points. It is my concern that such legislation should not only cover lending institutions, but companies such as insurance companies that jointly establish rates, it would appear.

I have presented my views and my position and the reason why I cannot support this Motion, even though it is only being put in for consideration. However, the principles under which it is being considered I cannot support. Consequently, I will not be voting for this Motion.

If I have said too much or too little, Mr. Speaker, may it please you.

The Speaker: Does any other Member wish to speak?
The Second Elected Member for Bodden Town.

Mr. Gilbert A. McLean: I rise to offer my contribution to Private Member's Motion 20/01, Prime Lending Rate.

Much has been said by the Mover in regard to his reasons for bringing this Motion, which is covered in the 'whereas sections'. Without attempting to debate banking, I am not a banker, but I can zero in on the fact that something needs to be done in regard to controlling the runaway interest rates in the Cayman Islands.

Over the decades I have always marvelled at how insurance companies and banks in this country seem to have persons who advocate their position much more strongly than they do the position of the citizens that the representatives are supposed to represent.

[laughter]

Mr. Gilbert A. McLean: I sometimes wonder who is serving who, or what. It is all right for us to speak of market forces and allowing market forces to adjust the economy, our lives and so on. These are terms that fit best into the sphere of the international world and industrialised countries. There is something I think we need to always bear in mind: We neither control the market, nor the forces; we are little players playing along in a big world and we have to keep this situation focused on our local situation, as the last speaker said.

In keeping this matter of banking focused on our local situation, we have to be aware that we are paying some of the highest interest rates in the world, even when the world out there is charging some of the lowest interest rates since banking came into being.

We keep boasting—and there is so much idle boasting over the decades—about us being the fourth, sometimes I hear the fifth largest banking centre in the world. What has it brought us to date except some jobs in the banking industry, which is a natural spin off. However, the majority of people in this country cannot qualify to borrow one penny from these banks we boast so much about!

There is a charge on everything the bank does—service charge, five cents for this; five dollars for transferring $100 from one account to another; the banks collect all of that. We brave hearts in the Cayman Islands have not been able, over the decades, to say to these banks that we boast so much about, that we will put on a ten cent or fifty cent fee on those transactions, nor have we been smart enough to set up a system where the government insists that funds collected by banks are paid into the government. I hear there are some deficits in that as well.

It is only the government of any country that can be the controlling force of banks or any other institution. The Cayman Islands is at least 100 years behind in being the controlling force it could be and should be, in my opinion. It is as if we are always on our knees, hands up in prayerful atonement to the banks to do something nice for us. It is about time we stood on our two feet and looked the banks squarely in the eyes and say to them, 'You operate in this environment'—an environment we have slaved (and I emphasise the word 'slaved') to create for them—'we have to get some benefit from the game.' Until a government—this one or any to come—takes that attitude and understands that that is the way it is, it will not be any different.

I have heard of Switzerland—bankers to the world. They were smart enough to tell the OECD to go and take their policies to places where the fires always burn (so we are told) and that they would not accept them. However, they have very serious control in place, including their Central Bank and some of the strictest rules on earth for banking. I am even told they pay taxes.

If this Motion before the House asks for this Government to consider making a few changes that should have been done 25 years ago, I can find nothing wrong with it. The only control that can be exercised legitimately in any country on the earth, is that exercised through the government and we hope through duly elected representatives.

Unless Cayman gets to that stage, we keep losing as we do right now. In the past few months, the Government was supposed to have negotiated a loan of over $50 million. I heard it was not the easiest thing in the world. From my layman's position, if we were the right banking centre we claim we are, and if government were exercising its rightful control, it would have been one of the easiest things in the world to do. For starters, in the same way the banks collect exorbitant rates from everyone who ventures into the field of borrowing from them, then government would in turn have collected a small fee as part of all of those transactions and ways and means the banks are earning profits here.

I cannot subscribe to the foolishness I have heard for so many years, 'Oh, if you do this, the banks will go somewhere else. They will leave and take their money elsewhere.' Where are they going to take it? I have not been able to find that out. Are they going to take it to Switzerland? They know what the rules are there. Are they going to take it to France? They want them to do that. Are they going to take it to Germany? They are waiting. Are they going to take it to Canada? They are waiting too.

One does not have to be a financial genius to know that the reason why the banks from America, Canada, Germany, or Switzerland, have banks outside their shores is because of the potential to make money in a different jurisdiction. If they have the right, as everyone seems delighted to believe they do, to come to this jurisdiction to make all the money they can, why do we not have the right, as the people of this country, to say there has to be a spin off benefit and we will devise a system and means for them to assist us a little, while we assist them immensely. I have not been able to figure that out. I know there is no way to logically figure it out because it is a foolish attitude that has prevailed in this country for a very long time.

What other country in the world do we see where every one of the major banks is in one big full page ad with the smiling faces of their managers saying, 'We shall set the interest rate at this price,'—which is 4 percent or 3 percent rise over what it was before—and everyone says 'Amen. Thank you, Mr. Bank?' It is unheard of; it is ridiculous; it is collusion!

I would like to refer to the US and point to various things they do, that we should do. Some of them I think we should adopt, such as the Securities and Exchange Commission that says if I am found trying to do something to create a monopoly situation in one area, I can really go to jail for that. There has to be competition! Competition in Cayman—it is zero! We delight in creating monopolies because apparently we believe that is something good for us. The rest of the world says 'oh no! we know better than that'. As long as there is competition, people have a chance to get a better deal. In Cayman, we allow that to happen.

Now, if the banks that are charging these excessive rates can get together in collusion to do that, what is wrong with the Government of the country taking a position to develop a system of ways and means to regulate interest rates so that they earn profits, and the people who need to get a loan can get a loan at interest rates they can afford? I cannot see anything wrong with that. Certainly, I can stand on this side of the House and raise the point. If I were on the other side of the House, I could promise the banks that they would have to answer that question. Of course, the banks have the money and by my very statement they would feel compelled, I daresay, to assist anyone who disagreed with my view. This is the way it plays.

I think this Motion is raising a subject that I certainly campaigned on in the recent election. I would try to play my part in seeing what could be done, or in assisting in any effort to lower the interest rates in the Cayman Islands because everyone is paying top dollar for everything that could be cents. The supermarkets must get loans from the banks in the Cayman Islands, and they must pay top dollar. They pass that on to everybody else when they sell their goods.

When someone buys a motorcar, they pay top dollar. Do not ever think about getting a house mortgage, or even attempting to get a loan to buy a piece of land, which many years ago when I did a little bit of economics one of the principles of economics was that land is the source of all wealth. I do not know if it has changed since, but there seems to be a great disdain by the banks against anyone purchasing a piece of land in the Cayman Islands, at least to get a loan to buy it.

As for home mortgages, it is shameful what people have to pay on interest rates here. The fact that it may be US money, or depositors' money and so on, people move their money and put it where it can earn greater interest, but we know, and the OECD does, I suppose, have a plus side . . . if you dance around the world too much with money and it is coming out of those industrialised countries, they are out to take a major piece out of it. That is what one of the games is all about that we have been fighting now, for a few years with them—it is about money!

Is it not crucial and fascinating that one of the things we are accused of not doing is taxing these entities? We are suffering from a lack of taxation. Is it not incredible? They say that because we do not tax we should be punished. Well, then let us not call it "tax" let us call it "fee"—and "fee" them! It is time we got a little smart, if not totally.

The Member bringing this Motion is an accountant by profession. While he has certain views with which I do not agree, and I have views which he does not agree with, I think this Motion is indeed very timely. If ever there was a time it is right now when the economy here is in deep slow down (we would not call it "recession"). There is difficulty with people meeting their mortgages. We look, we see cars being taken from people because they cannot pay; houses are falling the same way. Why? High interest rates! They cannot afford to pay it.

With loss of jobs, or cutbacks with one spouse or whoever out of a job, they cannot afford to pay it. What would good bankers do? I believe they would call each of those persons in, go over the loan with them and ask how much they can pay and try to reschedule it—but 'no!' Look at the situation occurring here. The other day I saw someone who is having his house taken. They did not owe a whole lot of money, I think it was around about $200,000 and it had been a much larger sum borrowed originally. While they had that capital amount owed, below that was another line of interest rates, must have been almost $40,000 they had supposedly reached in that period of time. Now, if somebody is having a problem meeting their monthly payment, which includes interest, how are you going to continue to compound that interest and expect them to meet that?

I have heard of persons who are involved with banks having a company set up on the side so that when the house gets taken, their company buys it and they come into possession of a cheap house. There are real problems in this country of ours and they need real solutions. I support the Government looking into this matter, investigating it, and doing something about it.

The last speaker mentioned something about government having some of the more favourable rates on the recent borrowing. I think it is about time the Government got as good a rate as can possibly be found in this country. It will be no use to us as a people if we become an impoverished pitiful lot and sit starving to death or being unable to do anything constructive for ourselves, while we look with adoration at the banks and say what a wonderful job they are doing.

We need to reach a position where they will continue to do a wonderful job making profits, but we the people of the Cayman Islands, have to benefit from creating the environment including taking the bloodied noses we get maintaining that for them to do. It is about time we benefit from this.

To me, this Motion is one to consider and investigate. Hopefully the Government will take this on board, as has been said by the Third Official Member, to consider it, investigate it and do something about correcting the situation here in the Cayman Islands. I can assure one and all that if they come back to this House with something to fix the situation, be it through the Monetary Authority, or even one little 20 x 20 room where they say this is our central bank to do the things central banks should do, they will have my support, as does this Motion at this time.

The Speaker: We shall suspend for lunch. At the conclusion of lunch, which I suggest, should be 2.15 pm, the Acting Chief Secretary would like to meet with all Members in the Common Room. The House will resume at the conclusion of that meeting.

PROCEEDINGS SUSPENDED AT 12.48 PM

PROCEEDINGS RESUMED AT 3.22 PM

The Speaker: Please be seated. Debate continues on Private Member's Motion 20/01. Does any other Member wish to speak? (Pause) Does any other Member wish to speak? (Pause) Does any other Member wish to speak? (Pause) If not, does the Mover care to exercise his right of reply?

The Second Elected Member for West Bay.

Mr. Rolston M. Anglin: Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

I would like to thank the Honourable Third Official Member for his acceptance of the Motion. I feel confident in terms of his acceptance that it is what I consider a very appropriate response.

Much has been said in regards to this Motion. We certainly have heard different perspectives put forward on this issue. However, before I respond to some of those remarks, I would like to thank the Elected Member for East End, because even though he did not contribute by debating, he certainly agrees with this Motion and the spirit of the Motion. He sees the importance of ensuring that his constituents get the best possible representation in this Honourable Chamber.

I would like to say in regards to the contributions made, that I was a bit surprised at the comments of the Second Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman. He said that while he agreed with the spirit of the Motion (I think that is what he meant), that he would not have gone about it in this way; and he does not think that government should be involved in this area at all and that it should be free market forces and competition. He then turned around and said (and I quote, because I wrote it down), "there needs to be legislation to ensure that interest rates are derived competitively" and made reference to antitrust legislation. In the same breath I heard the word "oligopoly" come out, which obviously poses the greatest threat to any such regulation.

For the benefits of Members and the listening public, I would like to utilise the definition from a well respected guide called the Barron's Guide, using the Dictionary of Business Terms: "Antitrust Laws are statutes that promote free competition by outlawing such things as monopoly price discrimination and collaboration for the purpose of restraint of trade between two or more business enterprises in the same market."

Cayman is a relatively small environment in terms of the numbers involved. When looking at this issue, as a person who went to university in the United States of America, this sort of thought process also came to mind. However, I am here to get to the point; and I am here to represent the people of the Cayman Islands. That includes business and the banks.

It is my humble submission that we can get in here and talk about antitrust legislation all we want. The truth of what normally prevails in Cayman is oligopolies, where there are few entrants in the market. Those few entrants have prices that are very close. There are those who suggest that there is formal collusion in certain sectors. We are so small that I am not even sure we need formal collusion, when all one person has to do is send another person over to the supermarket to see what they are selling a five pound bag of rice for. All the banks know what they are charging and what their spreads are. They do not need to formally get together.

I considered that route but I thought we had to drive straight at the matter. I think the Third Official Member has set the stage that needs to be set where there will be dialogue with upper management in the Monetary Authority and the banks in Cayman. I think that is the key.

I am not quite certain how the ability of the Second Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman negotiates within banks relates to the small man in this country. If the small man in this country made what MLAs make, I probably would not have brought this Motion. In fact, if the small man in this country could negotiate with banks the way an MLA can, I do not think we would be talking about this issue at all.

Mr. Speaker, when we get in here we better remember who it is we are representing. We had better remember the types of people and the levels of education—and I do not say that in a derogatory manner—we must stay real! I submit that the average person in Cayman does not necessarily have the wherewithal to be able to properly negotiate. They are all too glad to get the first mortgage and get into their house. They are too happy to get it, Mr. Speaker.

The average person in Cayman does not have a university education. The average person is not an MLA. I do not know about the Second Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman, but I certainly know that people in this community treat you a lot different when you are an MLA, even if they really do not want to; that is true!

I heard a remark that causes me great concern. I have discussed this privately with the Third Official Member. The Second Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman told this Honourable House that he is aware of commercial banks (I can only assume one of the six commercial banks) that has to go into the secondary market to get funding. I am not aware of any such problem existing in this country. In fact, in my former profession, one of the recommendations we made time and time again to bank clients was to lend more of their money because their reserves far exceed the statutory requirements laid down by the Monetary Authority. I will not stand here and allow the public to be told that the banks in this country have to go out and borrow at the prime rate to lend to them. Wherever he got that information, I advise him to check it again. I am of the view that is not the case.

As for default rates, the banks in this country have an impeccable record of risk management. There is only one sector that I am aware that has been problematic, and that is the government guaranteed scheme. I have not seen any of the six major banks in this country which lends to the public that has had exorbitant default rates. They are impeccable, extremely conservative. They do a good job; they have extremely well run and healthy portfolios.

Just today a former client of mine and I happened to go to lunch. I did not think this Motion would come so quickly and I wanted to refresh myself on a few things to make sure that the information I had from my last audit (June - August 1999) of Butterfield Bank had not changed dramatically in the industry. He told me that he was not aware of any bank having to go into the open market to borrow funds. Quite the opposite happens—the banks sweep their excess funds in the overnight market in the United States an actually gain income at the prime rate, that is, the short-term rate. They can go and sweep it. A lot of times they have to accept a point or two below, but they still sweep that excess funding and make money off it.

This is a business that you have to understand all elements of if we are going to debate it meaningfully and if we are going to really be able to say whether or not we support a motion or not.

I trust, as the Second Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman said, that certainly we all in here are going to grow in our thought process and our knowledge base in listening to other Members' debates, and grow in our position and accept other positions that might shed light on some of the positions we have.

I have been reliably informed that there is one particular bank in this country right now that has at least one member of its senior management staff (and I do not just mean a loans officer), senior management credit staff, who is actively trying to get that bank to go into medium term cap fixed rate mortgages. That is, fixing a mortgage for ten years.

Now, the reason this person is anxious to do this is because interest rates are low. This would be the time that is attractive to do that. It does not sound like the banks are going to be shutting up shop tomorrow and we would not have the benefit of them if this Motion is accepted and government seeks to engage in dialogue.

I have had an experience that certainly tells me that the average person cannot negotiate on his own. My mother paid 15 years consistently. She never missed a payment on her mortgage. She was a housekeeper for a wealthy Canadian who asked her one day to see her loan agreement.

I would like to thank Mr. Gordon Harrison publicly, Gordon and Shan Harrison. He was shocked when he saw it.

The very next day he went into the bank with my mother and sat down with the loans officer and said "This lady has paid for 15 years and never missed a payment and never been late. Is that correct?" "Yes" was the answer. "Can you give her a better mortgage rate? She has now proven . . . she has a track record." "No, we really cannot do that," was the answer. He said, "Fine. We are going somewhere else." As soon as he said that, one percentage point was taken off. At that point he was so agitated he still went. She got two percent off her spread.

Two years later he went back to the new bank and said, "Okay, it's been two years." My mother was at prime plus 4 percent, despite having paid 15 years without missing one payment. I use that as an example to illustrate to all Members, especially the Second Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman, that not everybody makes an MLA's salary; not everybody in this country has the time, the knowledge and the patience to be able to shop around.

Now, I will add one thing to that train of thought: Credit counselling is something that the banks should encourage, that we as a government should encourage in this country. We should encourage people to be more knowledgeable about what they need to try to do when going for a mortgage. However, we are way behind the times. This has been happening in other countries for years. I cannot look at theory and at what happens in the US and say that is okay to apply in Cayman. We are years behind and we have to catch up.

I just want to reiterate the fact that I firmly believe the Third Official Member's response was spot on. This Motion speaks to three things and these are the operative words: consider mandating. From the response I have gotten I think the attention of the banking community has been gotten by this Motion, and I believe they will come to the table and have meaningful discussion with the Government at this stage. I believe that we have the stage set for meaningful dialogue that can only be healthy.

I come from the financial sector by way of background. However I was sent here by the people to represent everyone, to represent them in particular. I must represent the people of this country! I have said it time and time again, and will say it again in case some people did not hear me. I already know that jobs are created by business, so I realise that we cannot have a hard-line approach that we are going to try to do things to harm businesses. Businesses create jobs.

Mr. Speaker, I thank you and all Members who indicated support of this Motion.

The Speaker: I shall now put the question on Private Member's Motion 20/01. Those in favour please say Aye. Those against, No.

AYES.

The Speaker: The Ayes have it.

Hon. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Mr. Speaker, I heard a "No" Sir.

I think we need a division.

Third Sitting

The Speaker: Good morning. I will invite the Honourable Temporary First Official Member responsible for Internal and External Affairs to say prayers.

PRAYERS

Hon. Donovan W. F. Ebanks: Let us pray:

Almighty God, from whom all wisdom and power are derived: We beseech Thee so to direct and prosper the deliberations of the Legislative Assembly now assembled, that all things may be ordered upon the best and surest foundations for the glory of Thy Name and for the safety, honour and welfare of the people of these Islands.

Bless our Sovereign Lady, Queen Elizabeth II; the Queen Mother; Philip, Duke of Edinburgh; Charles, Prince of Wales; and all the Royal family. Give grace to all who exercise authority in our Commonwealth, that peace and happiness, truth and justice, religion and piety may be established among us. Especially we pray for the Governor of our Islands, the Speaker of the Legislative Assembly, Official Members and Ministers of Executive Council and Members of the Legislative Assembly, that we may be enabled faithfully to perform the responsible duties of our high office.

All this we ask for Thy great Name's sake.

Let us say the Lord's Prayer together:

Our Father, who art in Heaven, Hallowed be Thy Name. Thy Kingdom come, Thy will be done on earth as it is in Heaven. Give us this day our daily bread, and forgive us our trespasses, as we forgive those who trespass against us. Lead us not into temptation, but deliver us from evil. For Thine is the Kingdom, the power and the glory, forever and ever. Amen.

Proceedings resumed at 10.32 am

The Speaker: Please be seated.

READING BY THE HONOURABLE
SPEAKER OF MESSAGES
AND ANNOUNCEMENTS

APOLOGIES

The Speaker: I have apologies for absence from the Honourable First Official Member who is presently Acting Governor; from the Third Elected Member for George Town and Fourth Elected Member for West Bay who are overseas attending a CPA conference in Australia. I also have apologies for late attendance from the Honourable Second Official Member and the Second Elected Member for West Bay.

Moving on to Item No. 3 on today's Order Paper: Presentation of Papers and Reports. Report of the Committee to Examine the Conditions Relating to the Recruitment of Caymanians into the Teaching Profession, to be laid on the Table by the Honourable Minister responsible for Education, Human Resources and Culture.

PRESENTATION OF PAPERS AND REPORTS

REPORT OF THE COMMITTEE TO EXAMINE THE CONDITIONS RELATING TO THE RECRUITMENT OF CAYMANIANS INTO THE TEACHING PROFESSION

Hon. Roy Bodden: Mr. Speaker, I beg to lay on the Table of this Honourable House the Report of the Committee to Examine the Conditions Relating to the Recruitment of Caymanians into the Teaching Profession.

The Speaker: So ordered. Do you wish to speak to it?

Hon. Roy Bodden: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Only to say there is a Motion that calls for the House to speak to the report at a subsequent stage. I ask Members to take note. Thank you.

The Speaker: Item 4, Questions to Honourable Ministers and Members. Question 95 stands in the name of the Second Elected Member for Bodden Town.

QUESTIONS TO HONOURABLE
MEMBERS/MINISTERS

QUESTION NO. 95

No. 95: Mr. Gilbert A. McLean asked the Honourable Minister responsible for the Ministry of Planning, Communications and Works: What has been achieved through Government's effort to deter the recently announced electricity increase by Caribbean Utilities Company Limited (CUC).

Hon. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Mr. Speaker, the answer: As Members of this Honourable House will be aware, CUC operates under an exclusive franchise granted in 1986 for a period of 25 years to generate, distribute and supply electricity on Grand Cayman.

On 28 May 2001, CUC met with Government to present their Interim Rate of Return and advised of their intention to raise rates by 2 per cent effective 1 August 2001 to allow the Company a 15 percent return, as provided for in their licence. Government did not support the proposed increase and CUC subsequently agreed to defer the rate increase, and to conduct an electricity rate review with the contemplation that agreement would be reached with Government on a new rate structure by 31 October 2001.

CUC has now submitted to Government their Audited Final Return which confirms that the Company is entitled to a 2 per cent rate increase effective 1 August 2001, as well as an Interim Electric Rate Review as agreed.

The rate review was completed by R W Beck of Florida and recommends that CUC make moderate adjustments to the rate structure until a full and proper allocated cost of service study can be completed, including a demand rate for large consumers. These studies are traditionally used in North America and form the basis of ensuring fair, cost-based pricing of electricity.

According to CUC the proposed interim measures include the flattening of the residential rate schedule and the protection of customers consuming less than 2000 kilowatt hours (kWh) per month, which, I am told, is over 90 per cent of their residential class. It is also proposed that small and large commercial customers be protected, as it is apparent that the thrust of growth has occurred in the medium commercial customer segment.

CUC has advised that should Government be prepared to move forward with the interim recommendations, including support for the commissioning of an allocated cost of service study, then they are prepared to suspend all rate increases to which they may become entitled to until the study is tabled and reviewed, which would be no later than 1 August 2003.

CUC also indicated to Government that considering the interests of all their stakeholders their Board has decided not to accelerate the timetable for renegotiation of their licence, which is currently provided for at least 5 years prior to expiry of the existing licence.

This matter now has to be considered by Government and no decision has been taken at this time.

SUPPLEMENTARIES

The Speaker: The Second Elected Member for Bodden Town.

Mr. Gilbert A. McLean: Can the Honourable Minister say if it is required in the license, which CUC holds, that they consult Government on increases, and whether it is necessary to have Government's permission before they can increase the rates?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Planning Communications and Works.

Hon. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Mr. Speaker, their franchise agreement does not mandate that they have to consult. I think fair comment would be that as a matter of courtesy they go through the procedures as outlined in the substantive answer whenever such an increase is pending. My information is that prior to this they simply used to send it in, end of story. At this point in time, it is anticipated that what they have sent to the Government, once it goes through Executive Council, we will be talking to them about it again. Unfortunately I cannot pre-empt such talks to say what the end results will be. The fact of the matter is, the franchise allows them that 15 per cent return and, there is no obligation within that franchise to get any written agreement by the Government once they are able to prove (that is usually done by audited statements) that they need to make an increase to allow them up to that 15 per cent.

One other thing, if I may say—that franchise does not say to them that they must get 15 per cent return on their investment, but it does say “up to” so, that has latitude within that range up to the 15 per cent.

The Speaker: The Second Elected Member for Bodden Town.

Mr. Gilbert A. McLean: Does Government have the right through the contract or licence to have an audit done of CUC's accounts rather than relying on what they present to Government as their case for having an increase?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Planning, Communications and Works.

Hon. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Thank you. Yes, the Government does have that right, and at present is negotiating a tender for an audit to be done.

The Speaker: The Third Elected Member for Bodden Town.

Mr. Anthony S. Eden: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Paragraph six indicates that they are prepared to suspend all rate increases until a study is done up until the period of 1 August 2003. Depending on the results of that study, would the rate increases that they would have been entitled to, be retroactive if it is found in the study that it was okay for them to do it?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Planning, Communications and Works.

Hon. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Mr. Speaker, I would have to say off-the-cuff that the answer to that question would be yes. My only caution with it would be that any rate increase which has occurred prior to that would have occurred because the company has proven from audited financial statements the increase was warranted. They would not have done so without going through the motion of proving they had the right to do so. I would suspect that what they are speaking to in regard to an allocated cost of service study, probably will not reflect on what the Member is asking about, but rather a new structure and methodology employed with rates from there on in. That is my interpretation of it.

The Speaker: The Second Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman.

Mr. Lyndon L. Martin: Can the Honourable Minister indicate if Cayman Brac Power & Light Company is subject to scrutiny and audits by his Ministry as well?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Planning, Communications and Works.

Hon. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Mr. Speaker, since late last year we have been in contact with Cayman Brac Power & Light in regards to renegotiating their agreement. What both parties, namely the Government and the Directors of the Cayman Brac Power & Light Company, had agreed to was, to await the outcome of our dealings with CUC so that there would be par for the course discussions. However, since very recently, the Board of Directors of CUC has indicated to Government that they are not prepared, at this point in time, to accelerate the timetable for renegotiations. We now have to revert to Cayman Brac Power & Light and look at the franchise which existed up until October last year, I think, so that we can renegotiate that franchise. We do have the right to audit their accounts as the Member asked. I just wanted to fill him in with the picture.

The Speaker: The Second Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman.

Mr. Lyndon L. Martin: Can the Minister indicate if the franchise agreement for CBP&LC has a prescribed maximum return such as the one for CUC?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Planning, Communications and Works.

Hon. D. Kurt Tibbetts: There is no agreement at this point in time. That will be part and parcel of the negotiations for a new agreement. As I indicated, the previous agreement expired in October last year and they are simply following that agreement.

Now, that agreement was not with as intricate a detail as the one for CUC. Basically, if memory serves me right, one of the common threads in the agreements was what they pay into Government's coffers, which is 5/8 of 1 per cent of gross revenue. However, in regards to what the Member is asking, the reason we were holding off was to see what might have occurred with negotiations with CUC so that we could have something as a base to go from.

What will now have to happen is that we will have to look at what existed with CBP&L and re-establish a base to work from. I anticipate we will be doing that in short order so we can have them back on track with a franchise agreement. As of now, there is no fixed rate or return on the investment for the company in Cayman Brac.

The Speaker: The Elected Member for East End.

Mr. V. Arden McLean: The Minister said that the proposed interim measures include the flattening of the residential rate schedule. Can the Minister tell us if "flattening" means it is going to be flat, or is it going to come from the five band that currently exists, down to two or three, or is it going to be just one flat rate for electricity on residential?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Planning, Communications and Works.

Hon. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Mr. Speaker, A paragraph in the letter from CUC relating to this issue reads: ". . . the proposed interim measures include the flattening of the residential rate schedule and the protection of customers consuming less than 2000 kWh per month, which is over 90 per cent of their residential class". Such a flattening would be consistent with the energy conservation message CUC is currently attempting to deliver to the community. My understanding of that paragraph is that unlike the rate which may presently exist, and which the Member refers to, speaking to the fact that the more electricity is consumed, after a certain number of kWh is consumed, then if you consume more the rate per kWh decreases. My understanding from this is also that once you do not consume over 2000 kWh, the rate per kWh is consistent throughout.

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman.

Mrs. Julianna Y. O'Connor-Connolly: Can the Honourable Minister say if it is Government's intention to ask for the utility company in the Sister Islands to tender an audit by or before the end of this year?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Planning, Communications and Works.

Hon. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Mr. Speaker, I am at a disadvantage here. I know my Permanent Secretary and Senior Assistant Secretary have been in dialogue with principals of the Company. I do not know thus far, what talks have actually taken place. I cannot say at this point in time if it is the intention or not. The truth of the matter is that I am not exactly sure of the last time one was asked for. What I can say to the Member is that I will determine the situation and depending on when that was, make a judgment call as to whether we need one now, especially during this negotiation stage.

The Speaker: The Second Elected Member for Bodden Town.

Mr. Gilbert A. McLean: Can the Honourable Minister say if there is anyone in his Ministry or departments under his Ministry who is versed in the business of utilities and has knowledge sufficient to monitor on behalf of the Ministry just what is happening in CUC?

I note that in the answer it speaks of a proper allocated cost of service study. Do we have anyone capable of examining that and who can supervise this whole situation?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Planning, Communications and Works.

Hon. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Mr. Speaker, I think the correct way to answer this is that in-house there is really no one with any specific qualifications, regardless of tenure or experience in dealing with some surface matters and being familiar. However, regarding this specific issue the Member is asking about, I certainly believe the course of action, once completed and we want to satisfy ourselves; that is Government would simply use a consultant to get the results we wish to get. The reason being is because that level of in-depth qualification is not required on a day-to-day basis, so it is more cost effective and prudent to utilise that level of experience if and when necessary. This will be one of those occasions once the study is completed.

The Speaker: The Second Elected Member for Bodden Town. I will allow two additional supplementaries.

Mr. Gilbert A. McLean: In the answer it says that CUC has indicated to Government that considering the interests of all their stakeholders it has decided not to accelerate the timetable for re-negotiation of their licence, which is currently provided for at 5 years prior to expiry of the existing licence. Is it the case that the licence expires in 2007 and is Government taking steps now to see that there will be changes made, or at least preparing itself for the new licence which might be granted to the company?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Planning, Communications and Works.

Hon. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Mr. Speaker, I will just quickly refer the Member to the first paragraph of the answer that speaks to a franchise granted in 1986 for 25 years. That would put the agreement valid until 2011, I think. It seems from the indication we received recently that CUC is not prepared to start those negotiations until 2006, as of now. I had hoped that they would have been prepared but it seems like when consideration was given to the shareholders and their responsibility, that is the Board of Directors' responsibility to the Shareholders, they decided not to accelerate the process.

CUC legally has this franchise until 2011. Discussions will perhaps continue over the next few months. If Government is not satisfied with the arrangements, it is going to have a very long think in regards to whether or not we should leave it alone as it is, or whether we have recourse. That is not said in a threatening manner, but that is said paying credence to the simple fact that Government has a responsibility to the citizens of this country.

The Speaker: The Third Elected Member for Bodden Town.

Mr. Anthony S. Eden: In regards to a prior question asked by the Second Elected Member for Bodden Town about the monitoring of returns at CUC, as I can recall, last year sometime a Motion was passed to establish a Utilities Commission. Can the Minister comment on that at this time?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Planning, Communications and Works.

Hon. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Mr. Speaker, right now the Permanent Secretary, in the Ministry, has created a little subcommittee that is now looking into the pros and cons of methodologies to be employed, as to whether we would be speaking to a single-serving Public Utilities Commission or if we need separate entities. Terms of reference are being drawn up at this time. As soon as we have some indication as to the way forward Members will be advised. It is not something that has just been left alone.

The Speaker: The Elected Member for East End, final supplementary.

Mr. V. Arden McLean: In the substantive answer the Minister said that R W Beck of Florida recommends that CUC make moderate adjustments to the rate structure until a further full and proper allocated cost of service study can be completed, including a demand rate for large consumers. Is the Minister in a position to give us the comparison of the old rates to the new ones they are recommending by kWh—the “moderate” changes they are talking about? Also, can he tell us if the demand rate for large consumers includes large consumers in the residential as well as commercial?

The Speaker: I think this is a bit outside the ambit of the substantive answer, but if you wish to answer it you may.

The Honourable Minister for Planning, Communications and Works.

Hon. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Bearing in mind the fact that the Member referred to a part of the substantive answer, with your permission I will bear it relevant to the question.

The Speaker: Certainly, if you are prepared, go ahead.

Hon. D. Kurt Tibbetts: First of all there is a bit of difficulty in answering what the Member is asking in regards to comparisons of the demand rate for large customers. What that paragraph speaks to is "until a full and proper allocated cost of service study can be completed"—which has not been completed yet. So, I would not have the figures for that to give the comparisons, unless I am misunderstanding the Member.

If the comparisons being asked for by the Member are the comparisons to date Mr. Speaker, I am asking permission for the Member to clarify it so that I may answer it properly. I am not so sure that I understand if he is speaking about something that is not completed yet, or something that obtains at present.

The Speaker: The Elected Member for East End can you clarify your question, please?

Mr. V. Arden McLean: The substantive answer said that R.W. Beck of Florida recommends that CUC make moderate adjustments to the rate structure until a full and proper allocated cost of service study can be completed. This is what I was wondering about. Can the Minister explain to us if he has the information to show what that moderate adjustment would be?

Secondly, including a demand rate for large consumers, that would be under the study that is to come, I suspect. On that issue, will the demand be charged if it is anticipated that it will be charged on large residential and large commercial?

The Speaker: Before answering that question, I would appreciate a suspension of Standing Order 23(7) & (8) in order that Question Time can continue beyond eleven.

SUSPENSION OF STANDING ORDER 23(7) AND (8)

[Moved by the Honourable Minister for Planning, Communications and Works.]

QUESTION PUT. AGREED: STANDING ORDER 23 (7) AND (8) SUSPENDED TO ALLOW QUESTION TIME TO CONTINUE BEYOND 11 AM.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Planning, Communications and Works.

Hon. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Mr. Speaker, perhaps the safest way forward here is to go directly to the correspondence which is not confidential . . . well, let us put it this way: It certainly will not be when I am through here!

I will read directly so that the Member will understand. The paragraph which refers, I believe, to what the Member is speaking about is as follows: "The interim review also recommends that small and large commercial customers be protected as it is apparent from the data available that the thrust of CUC's growth has occurred in the medium commercial customer segment, or those who consume between 2000 kWh and 30000 kWh per month. This segment would experience up to an 8.8 per cent increase in rates, representing 30 per cent of the commercial sales. The adjustments to the rate structure also include a recovery of approximately $1.2 million which is the amount CUC would have been entitled to recover beginning 1 August."

Is that relevant to what the Member is asking? If that is not relevant, the paragraph above reads: "The interim measures include a proposal to flatten CUC's residential rate . . ." which we have already gone over, and I believe is clear.

The paragraph below reads, "On the basis of findings of the Beck report, we recommend that Government accept the interim adjustments of CUC electric's rate structure as it will begin to align electric rates in accordance with the cost of the service and bring relief to a significant percentage of our customers. Furthermore, we also recommend that a proper allocated cost of service study be completed no later than May 2003 as economic efficiency can be substantially improved through closer attention to rate classes and rate structure."

The Speaker: Moving on to question 96, standing in the name of the Second Elected Member for Bodden Town.

QUESTION NO. 96

No. 96: Mr. Gilbert A. McLean asked the Honourable Minister responsible for the Ministry of Health and Information Technology if there are any persons, past or present, who are members of the Veterans Association receiving free medical services who are not connected with the Cayman Islands.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Health and Information Technology.

Hon. Linford A. Pierson: Members of the Veterans Association of the Cayman Islands are covered by the Health Services (Fees) Law (2001 Revision), section 9(1), paragraph (b) which states: "Subject to subsection (2) and section 10, fees are not payable by a patient at a health care facility if the patient presents a card issued or recognised by the Director of Health Services identifying the patient to be -

“(b) a member of the Cayman Islands Veterans Association or the spouse of such a member.”

Section 10 states, “The exemptions from fees and waiver of fees provided for by sections 5, 6, 7 and 8 and by paragraphs (a) to (e) of section 9(1) do not apply in respect of a person who is covered by health care insurance which would otherwise cover those fees, to the extent that such insurance cover is in force.”

Currently there are 106 members of the Veterans Association. Of this number, 62 are Caymanians by birth, 24 are Caymanian status holders, 19 have permanent residence and one is a work permit holder.

SUPPLEMENTARIES

The Speaker: The Second Elected Member for Bodden Town.

Mr. Gilbert A. McLean: Sometimes I think I understand things clearly but there are times when I have to seek clarification. Is the Member saying in his answer that there are approximately 20 people—non-Caymanian—who by joining this Veterans’ Association receive free medical aid, even though these 20 may be millionaires?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Health and Information Technology.

Hon. Linford A. Pierson: Mr. Speaker, I would like to clarify that the Health Services Fees Law (1993) that I referred to have really been revised. It is now the Health Services Fees Law (2001 Revision).

While I was trying to get this information for the Member, I did not exactly hear his supplementary, would he repeat it please?

The Speaker: The Second Elected Member for Bodden Town, would you repeat your question, please?

Mr. Gilbert A. McLean: I was asking the Minister if he could clarify whether his answer was saying there were 20 people who are not Caymanians and are receiving free medical simply by joining the Veterans’ Association of the Cayman Islands, even though they may be millionaires.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Health and Information Technology.

Hon. Linford A. Pierson: Mr. Speaker, I am afraid this is one of the areas that Government is most concerned about and it has been under very serious discussion as of late.

In our opinion there are members of the Veterans’ Association and the Seamen’s Association who are fairly wealthy people. We believe the intention was to provide medical services to those people most in need and that they should really be satisfied through a means test. This is an area we are looking into at present.

The Speaker: The Second Elected Member for Bodden Town.

Mr. Gilbert A. McLean: Can the Honourable Minister tell the House the approximate annual cost for these 106 persons?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Health and Information Technology.

Hon. Linford A. Pierson: Mr. Speaker, the information I will provide on health care will include the veterans and seamen. I do not have a breakdown so it will be a combination.

The position over the last four years (showing the annual increase in these fees) is: 1996, we had a total of $826,107 exempt in respect of veterans and seamen medical; in 1997 it increased to $983,383; in 1998 $1,060,442; in 1999 $1,443,538; and in 2000 $1,553,445. These are exempt amounts for the veterans and seamen.

The Speaker: The Second Elected Member for Bodden Town.

Mr. Gilbert A. McLean: The Minister said he is looking into this particular condition. Will he in any immediate timeframe be bringing amendments to the law to correct this situation?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Health and Information Technology.

Hon. Linford A. Pierson: The question of seamen, veterans and even the Ex gratia payment being made is a matter that spans perhaps two or three ministries, definitely two ministries, and those are my Ministry and the Ministry of the Honourable Minister for Community Development. We are looking very seriously into this matter. We have been discussing it and I will be taking a paper to Executive Council on this and following that then to the Legislative Assembly.

The Speaker: The Second Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman.

Mr. Lyndon L. Martin: Can the Minister indicate if he is aware of a portion of the membership fee for the Veterans’ Association designated for medical? If so, has any portion of that collected by the association been passed on to Government?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Health and Information Technology.

Hon. Linford A. Pierson: This is an area that we are investigating. We have received information from the Association that certain fees are available and will be sent into Government. Exactly how much this is, I am not sure at present. However, I am looking into this whole matter.

The Speaker: Third Elected Member for Bodden Town.

Mr. Anthony S. Eden: Can the Honourable Minister say if the 20 other people who have no Caymanian connection per say were entitled to free medical in their country of origin?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Health and Information Technology.

Hon. Linford A. Pierson: Mr. Speaker that is a very good question.

I would just like to say for clarity, that the members of the Veterans' Association born outside of the Cayman Islands represent approximately six nationalities. Twenty are originally from the US, 15 from the UK, six from Canada, one from Denmark, one from Poland, and one member is originally from Trinidad and Tobago. All of these individuals, except one, have Caymanian status or permanent residency.

I would not wish to call the names of the gentlemen, but I would be prepared to lay on the Table a copy of the list that I have available if this was something you so ruled on.

The Speaker: Does it have a confidentiality clause? Were you given it under confidential cover?

Hon. Linford A. Pierson: I was not given this under confidential cover. I brought it along because I felt it was only right that Members of the House be given this information in the interest of transparency.

The Speaker: I would rather. . .

Mr. Gilbert A. McLean: Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: The Second Elected Member for Bodden Town.

Mr. Gilbert A. McLean: Mr. Speaker, the fact that the Minister has determined that this is something that can be laid on the Table . . . I would ask that the Chair consider allowing such to be done for the information of Members.

The Speaker: I have no problem with allowing it to be tabled, but if it is for information of Honourable Members, I would suggest it be circulated. If it is for general distribution and dissemination of information, then we should lay it on the Table, whichever you prefer.

Hon. Linford A. Pierson: Mr. Speaker, on second thought, if it is laid on the Table of the House it then becomes a public document and I would not wish for the names of these individuals to be published in the papers. Perhaps a better way of dealing with this is to circulate it to Honourable Members for their information. I would be happy if this could be done by the Clerk.

The Speaker: You will give the House the undertaking that it will be done?

Does that meet with Members' satisfaction?
The Elected Member for East End.

Mr. V. Arden McLean: It certainly does not meet my satisfaction. It is public funds these people are receiving. Therefore, the public should know who is receiving the monies they pay into taxes in this country, the same way they know the amount that Arden McLean from East End makes as a Member of the Legislative Assembly.

The Speaker: My ruling is that it shall be circulated to Members.

Are there any further supplementaries?
If not, we move on to question 97, standing in the name of the Elected Member for East End.

QUESTION NO. 97

No. 97: Mr. V. Arden McLean: asked the Honourable Third Official Member responsible for the Portfolio of Finance and Economic Development If any monies have been realised from the recent sale advertisements of confiscated assets by the Drugs Task Force and, if so, how much has been collected.

Mr. Speaker: The Honourable Member responsible for Finance and Economic Development, the Third Official Member.

Hon. George A. McCarthy: Mr. Speaker the answer: On 22 June 2001, an advertisement was placed in the Caymanian Compass that gave details of items that were to be sold by the Drugs Task Force. A total of four canoes and one fibreglass dingy were advertised for sale at prices ranging from $900 to $5,750. Many boat engines were also advertised for sale at prices ranging from $1,600 to $3,400. Of the items advertised, one 28 feet canoe was sold for $1,500 and one 16 feet dingy was sold for $500. The total proceeds from the sale was, therefore $2,000.

The Speaker: Supplementaries?

The First Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman.

SUPPLEMENTARIES

Mrs. Julianna Y. O'Connor-Connolly: In reference to the last sentence, can the Honourable Member confirm that this means receipt of funds?

The Speaker: The Honourable Third Official Member.

Hon. George A. McCarthy: Yes. This is the amount that was received from the sale of these items. These are monies received by the Drugs Task Force.

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman.

Mrs. Julianna Y. O'Connor-Connolly: Can the Honourable Member say who received the funds and if it was in fact general treasury?

The Speaker: The Honourable Third Official Member.

Hon. George A. McCarthy: The funds were not paid into general treasury, but were paid directly to the Drugs Task Force. However, it may be useful in providing this information for me to mention the authorisation that was put in place in 1990. In fact, this is a memorandum that was issued by the Financial Secretary in 1990 to the Commissioner of Police authorising the setting up of a special account that would receive funds such as the sale of confiscated assets. Although the funds did not go into this account, I think it would be useful for me to read that memorandum and a copy can be made available to Honourable Members.

The Speaker: Please continue.

Hon. George A. McCarthy: This memorandum is marked "Confidential" at the top. It makes reference to police commissioner's account. (pause)

Mr. Speaker, noting that this memorandum is confidential I have noted that this special commissioner's account is part of general accounts of the Government. It would form a part of the schedule that would set out the various accounts flagged by various departments of Government. However, looking at the content of it, although it was confidential at that time, in my judgment, I do not think it would create a problem if this information were to be given to Honourable Members.

It reads, under Financial and Stores Regulations section 6(1), "the Financial Secretary hereby sanctions the appointment of Barclays Bank PLC as bankers to the government. The account shall be entitled 'The Cayman Islands Government Police Commissioner's Account [and it gives the number] "The purpose of the account is:

"1) to receive monies seized from convicted drug dealers which are forfeited to the Commissioner by the Court;

"2) to receive interest on balances; and

"3) expenditure from the account is at the discretion of the Commissioner but must be related to beneficial use in support of the police efforts in combating drug abuse and the detection of drug related crimes.

"Accountability of the Commissioner:

"1) The Commissioner shall maintain a simple and confidential record of receipts and payments related to the account with appropriate supporting records and documentation sufficient to allow verification and regular reconciliation of the transactions bearing in mind the need for secrecy in some instances;

"2) as soon as possible each year, the Commissioner shall furnish the Accountant General with a copy of the bank statements showing the balance on the account at the preceding 31 December;

"3) the Accountant General will, on receipt of this statement include this balance under treasury bank balances in the accounts of the government;

"4) the Accountant General will also include an equivalent amount under 'miscellaneous deposits' in the accounts of government.

"Audit of the Account:

"1) the Accountant General will examine the account record at least once each year and provide a certificate to the Commissioner together with a report on the account;

"2) the account will be subject to normal external audit procedures by the Auditor General as prescribed by the Public Finance and Audit Law.

"Limitations on the account: The maximum balance to be held on the account shall be determined by the Financial Secretary and is now set at $20,000. The Commissioner shall notify the Financial Secretary in writing of any amount held in excess of the prescribed limit and shall pay this amount to the Accountant General as miscellaneous revenue of government as soon as possible thereafter."

I have read this memorandum for the benefit of Members to point out that the authorisation for monies to be deposited into a special account maintained by the Commissioner of Police is in place. There is a variance in terms of the practice in that the funds realised by the drugs task force have not been paid into this account. I will be writing to the Commissioner of Police requesting that all monies received by the Drugs Task Force from this date forward (I will be asking the Assistant Financial Secretary, Mr. Ken Jefferson, to do so immediately) should be paid into this account and no separate account should be maintained other than this single account.

The Speaker: The Second Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. Alden M. McLaughlin, Jr: Can the Honourable Third Official Member say where the funds described in the substantive answer have been paid?

The Speaker: The Honourable Third Official Member.

Hon. George A. McCarthy: The funds realised from the sale of these items are retained by the drugs task force and are used for the funding of undercover operations.

The Speaker: The Second Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. Alden M. McLaughlin, Jr: Can the Honourable Member say where the Drugs Task Force retains these funds? Who has control of them and who decides what the funds are to be used for and when they are to be used?

The Speaker: The Honourable Third Official Member.

Hon. George A. McCarthy: The funds are under the control of the Chief Superintendent of the Drugs Task Force, Mr. Haines. The disbursement and management of the funds fall under the supervision of the office manager. Superintendent Haines has just assured me that detailed records are kept of disbursement and receipts and these records are made available to the Auditor General on an annual basis.

The Speaker: The Second Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. Alden M. McLaughlin, Jr: Can the Honourable Member say how long has this practice been in operation, that is, not using the established account that was set up pursuant to the memorandum from which he read earlier? How long has the Drugs Task Force been effectively operating in relation to confiscated funds out of the back pocket of the superintendent or other members of the Drugs Task Force?

The Speaker: I do not know if that phraseology is appropriate. Would you please rephrase that?

Mr. Alden M. McLaughlin, Jr: I tried to establish my two questions where these monies are held. The Member has been unable to answer. So, I had no choice but to describe it in the manner I did.

If the Honourable Member is able to say where these funds are held, then he can substitute an appropriate terminology to that which I was unfortunately forced to use.

The Speaker: The Honourable Third Official Member.

Hon. George A. McCarthy: I have been made to understand from Superintendent Haines that the funds are normally kept in a secure safe within the offices of the Drugs Task Force.

He further points out that the practice to which the Second Elected Member for George Town has made reference to started about six and one half years ago by Superintendent Haines. He mentioned that if a large amount of funds are received, such funds would be paid into the Commissioner's account. Also, I am further advised that all funds received from overseas US Treasury Department, have been paid into the Commissioner's Account.

So, from the information given I have deduced that only small amounts are retained and used directly by the Drugs Task Force. (Inaudible interjection) According to Superintendent Haines, the movement of funds in and out of the account has averaged about $23,000 annually over the past three years.

The Speaker: The Second Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. Alden M. McLaughlin, Jr: Can the Honourable Member confirm that this unauthorised practice is going to cease and that these funds are going to be dealt with according to the memorandum from which he earlier read?

The Speaker: The Honourable Third Official Member.

Hon. George A. McCarthy: As I mentioned earlier, I will be asking the Assistant Financial Secretary, Mr. Ken Jefferson, to write to the Commissioner of Police today, advising that all funds received from this date forward should be paid into this special account. Therefore, rather than having a separate account maintained by the Drugs Task Force, that all funds be managed through this special account that has been authorised under the memorandum issued by the Financial Secretary in 1990.

The Speaker: The Second Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman.

Mr. Lyndon L. Martin: Can the Honourable Member provide the House with the justification for moving away from the authorised procedure six years ago, to this new method of keeping it in a safe?

The Speaker: The Honourable Third Official Member.

Hon. George A. McCarthy: Superintendent Haines has asked me to submit his apology for this procedure. He said he was not aware of the special account that had been put in place under the direction of the Commissioner of Police. He was only made aware of this about three years ago. The practice that was started six and a half years ago has continued up until now. As of today it will cease.

The Speaker: The Second Elected Member for Bodden Town.

Mr. Gilbert A. McLean: I am sure that every Member in this House is as outraged as I am over what has been revealed here this morning.

In the Member's reply, I think he said the office manager and the superintendent are responsible for the disbursement of these funds. My question is who is responsible for them? We have a situation where we hear of the CIA that has to be scrutinised. Why do we have a situation where cash is in and out and unaccounted for in this fashion? Who really is responsible for it? Particularly, in light of the fact that we hear even now of someone who is supposed to be a fall guy in connection with similar stuff that has occurred with monies and funds being handled in this fashion.

The Speaker: The Honourable Third Official Member.

Hon. George A. McCarthy: Superintendent Haines has assured me that he is responsible for the accounting of the funds that come into the possession of the Drugs Task Force. He said it is not unaccountable from the aspect that a full accounting is provided to the Auditor General and to the Commissioner of Police of all funds received and disbursed.

The Speaker: The Elected Member for East End.

Mr. V. Arden McLean: Earlier in an answer to a supplementary question, the Third Official Member said that proper accounting is kept of these funds and is reported to the Auditor General on a yearly basis. Can the Honourable Member say as the Financial Secretary—

The Speaker: The Third Official Member.

Mr. V. Arden McLean: Mr. Speaker, I am asking the Third Official Member if he knows if the Financial Secretary can say with any degree of certainty that all monies are accounted for, and if the Auditor General has audited all monies going into this supposed account. If he cannot, will he give a commitment to this House and this country that it will be investigated immediately and dealt with in accordance with the Finance and Stores Regulations?

The Speaker: The Honourable Third Official Member.

Hon. George A. McCarthy: I have been assured by Superintendent Haines that all funds received by his department have been receipted. Receipts would have been issued to persons purchasing vessels and boat engines. These receipts are made available to the Auditor General and the Commissioner of Police to support funds received by the department.

In addition, in regard to disbursements, records are kept of amounts disbursed and to the officers receiving the sums of monies disbursed and they are accountable for the funds received by them.

The anomaly in this situation is that first of all, the funds upon receipt, all funds, should be paid into this special account that falls under the control of the Commissioner of Police. Disbursements should be made from this account to the drugs task force or any other agency of the police department.

What is going to happen as of today is that instead of funds being maintained by the drugs task force or any other agency of the police department, that the Commissioner of Police will be advised to issue instructions to all agencies that all funds received should be paid into funds received . . . and let me qualify that . . . from convicted drug dealers and also the sale of assets relating thereto to be paid into this account. Where it is said there is a $20,000 limit against this account, this limit should be observed, which would mean that any amount in excess of $20,000 must be paid into the Treasury Department immediately.

The Speaker: The Second Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman.

Mr. Lyndon L. Martin: Can the Honourable Member provide this House with the information as to what happens now with the unsold items from such advertised sales?

The Speaker: The Honourable Third Official Member.

Hon. George A. McCarthy: The unsold items are being re-advertised. Upon the sale of those items, the funds will be paid into the Commissioner's Account. If the monies received take the account over the $20,000 limit, the surplus will have to be paid into general revenue.

The Speaker: The Elected Member for East End.

Mr. V. Arden McLean: Can the Honourable Member say when was the last time the office of finance did an audit on that account with a limit of $20,000?

The Speaker: The Honourable Third Official Member.

Hon. George A. McCarthy: I cannot give an immediate answer to that. I will have to speak with the Accountant General at the Treasury Department.

I have been advised by the Assistant Financial Secretary that a review of this account will be carried out by the Auditor General quite likely during the course of the Audit of the annual accounts of government.

The Speaker: The Elected Member for East End.

Mr. V. Arden McLean: Can the Honourable Member say if the Financial Secretary has ever received any funds coming from that account because it was over the $20,000?

The Speaker: The Honourable Third Official Member.

Hon. George A. McCarthy: I would have to get verification of that from the Treasury Department. As you would appreciate, remittance of these funds would not necessarily be to the Financial Secretary's office, but would go directly to the Treasury Department. I cannot give an immediate answer to say whether amounts in excess of $20,000 have been paid, or when. I will have to check with the Accountant General and get verification of that.

The Speaker: The Second Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. Alden M. McLaughlin, Jr: Can the Honourable Member confirm that he is satisfied that the safe in which these confiscated funds are held is safer than the safe in which confiscated drugs are held at Central Police Station?

[applause]

The Speaker: The Honourable Third Official Member.

Hon. George A. McCarthy: Mr. Speaker, as the Member can appreciate, I am not in a position to provide an answer for that. I have not seen either the safe where the funds are held, or the safe where confiscated drugs are kept.

The Speaker: Two additional supplementaries.

The Second Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman.

Mr. Lyndon L. Martin: Can the Honourable Member be willing to solicit a report by the Auditor General on this account for the past six years, and provide this House showing the receipts and expenditure on any transfers to Treasury?

The Speaker: The Honourable Third Official Member.

Hon. George A. McCarthy: The extent of the commitment I can give is that I can check with the Auditor General and see what verification procedures have been carried out on this account. Hopefully, to the extent that he has records of the accounts and movement of funds into and out of the account, to ask for a copy of that to be provided; that will then be given to Members of the Legislative Assembly.

The Speaker: Any further final supplementaries? If not, we move on to question 98. The Elected Member for East End.

QUESTION NO. 98

No. 98: Mr. V. Arden McLean asked the Minister responsible for Community Development, Women's Affairs, Youth and Sports, if there are any plans to employ a coach/sports coordinator for the eastern districts.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for Community Development, Women's Affairs, Youth and Sports.

Hon. Edna M. Moyle: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Provision will be made in the 2002 Budget for the provision of coach/sport coordinator for the eastern districts.

SUPPLEMENTARIES

The Speaker: The Elected Member for East End.

Mr. V. Arden McLean: Mr. Speaker, I wonder if the Minister can say if there are any reasons why this was not done previously.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for Community Development, Women's Affairs, Youth and Sports.

Hon. Edna M. Moyle: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. As the Honourable Member is aware, I only became the Minister of Sports in November and with the Budget constraints I was unable to put this position in the Budget for 2001.

The Speaker: The Elected Member for East End.

Mr. V. Arden McLean: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I hear the Minister, but I was specifically talking about prior to her beginning her tenure when George Town and West Bay have always had people from the Sports office. So, I am just wondering why this has never been done before, where the eastern districts would have a sports coordinator.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Community Development, Women's Affairs, Youth and Sports.

Hon. Edna M. Moyle: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I will undertake to look into the reason why the eastern districts were not given a coach/sports coordinator previously and get back to the Honourable Member in writing.

The Speaker: Are there any further supplementaries?

If not, we move on to question 99, standing in the name of the First Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman.

QUESTION NO. 99

No. 99: Mrs. Julianna Y. O'Connor-Connolly asked the Honourable Minister responsible for the Ministry of Education, Human Resources and Culture if he could say when a school security guard would be employed for the Cayman Brac High School.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for Education, Human Resources and Culture.

Hon. Roy Bodden: The post for Security Officer at Cayman Brac High School was advertised in the Caymanian Compass with the deadline for submission being 31 July 2001. There were two applicants from Cayman Brac which were submitted to the school. These two applicants will be interviewed as soon as possible.

SUPPLEMENTARIES

The Speaker: The Second Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman.

Mr. Lyndon L. Martin: I appreciate the answer provided. I was hoping he would be able to provide a timeline when he says 'as soon as possible' so that we could better advise our constituents as to when they will be expecting a security officer.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for Education, Human Resources and Culture.

Hon. Roy Bodden: As I understand it, interviews for the applicants for the security posts at the schools on Grand Cayman are now in process. As soon as they have been dealt with, the staff members will then deal with the two applicants for the Cayman Brac High School position.

The Speaker: The Second Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman.

Mr. Lyndon L. Martin: Can the Honourable Minister indicate what hours of the day a security officer will be positioned at the school?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for Education, Human Resources and Culture.

Hon. Roy Bodden: I regret that I am unable to provide that information. However, I will say that it will be one of the points up for discussion in the interview.

The Speaker: The Second Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman.

Mr. Lyndon L. Martin: Can the Honourable Minister say how the supervision of this officer and the reporting structure will be? Will he be reporting to the Education Department or the Education Centre in Cayman Brac, or some other form of supervisory control?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for Education, Human Resources and Culture.

Hon. Roy Bodden: It would seem logical that this person would first be responsible to report to the Principal and thereafter to the person who occupies the Education Centre on Cayman Brac.

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman.

Mrs. Julianna Y. O'Connor-Connolly: Can the Honourable Minister say whether or not it is envisaged for the security coverage to be provided during school hours or during the night time hours?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for Education, Human Resources and Culture.

Hon. Roy Bodden: I would hope it can be arranged for the presence of a security officer certainly during school time. It remains to be seen if it will be necessary to go beyond this time. However, I think the concern of the authorities is that coverage is done while school is in session.

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman.

Mrs. Julianna Y. O'Connor-Connolly: I would ask that if it is deemed necessary in the initial phases to only cover the day hours, if there could be some close scrutiny and analysis for after school. It has been our understanding that this is when most of the problems arise, not necessarily with the students, but after hours with vandalism on the property.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for Education, Human Resources and Culture.

Hon. Roy Bodden: I am sure that if it is necessary to have it exclusively at that time arrangements will be made for that to be done.

The Speaker: The Second Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman.

Mr. Lyndon L. Martin: Can the Minister indicate if there is only one position available and if so, what happens when that officer is off on vacation?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for Education, Human Resources and Culture.

Hon. Roy Bodden: Unfortunately there is only one position available. I might also say that we are operating under budgetary constraints. It remains to be worked out what will happen on that person's day off. I do not know if some kind of satisfactory alternative arrangement can be made. These are things I hope will be discussed during the interviewing process.

The Speaker: Are there any further supplementaries?

If not, we move on to question 100, standing in the name of the First Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman.

QUESTION NO. 100

No. 100: Mrs. Julianna Y. O'Connor-Connolly asked the Honourable Minister responsible for the Ministry of Education, Human Resources and Culture, what is the Education Department's policy in respect of qualified teachers having access to and/or being awarded scholarships from the Education Council in order to pursue a Master's Degree.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for Education, Human Resources and Culture.

Hon. Roy Boddén: I can say it is the department's policy to encourage and entertain the aspirations of qualified teachers wishing to pursue a master's degree. In such cases where such aspirations dovetail with educational policies, the objectives of the department and where they meet other requirements, the Education Council made the following recommendations for the granting of such scholarships. These state that the candidate should:

- Be Caymanian or possess Caymanian Status.
- Have an undergraduate cumulative grade point average of at least 3.0 or an Honours Degree.
- Have at least one year's post – graduate work experience or at the Council's discretion.
- Be accepted into an institution which is rated at least "Highly Competitive" according to the Barron's or some other reputable guide or any institution deemed acceptable by the Education Council.
- Complete the programme in the normally prescribed time for full-time studies.
- Sign a bond for the amount of the scholarship to return to work on the Island for at least three years.
- All applicants must be interviewed.

SUPPLEMENTARIES

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman.

Mrs. Julianna Y. O'Connor-Connolly: Can the Honourable Minister say how long the policy, as it relates to teachers being awarded (if so qualified and desirous for a scholarship) to pursue their masters [has been in place]?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for Education, Human Resources and Culture.

Hon. Roy Boddén: The guidelines I read were only drawn up last year. As the Member will appreciate, I was entrusted with this constitutional responsibility only last November. I cannot speak for what transpired before that time.

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman.

Mrs. Julianna Y. O'Connor-Connolly: Can the Honourable Minister say if a teacher has a master's degree will his salary reflect that?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for Education, Human Resources and Culture.

Hon. Roy Boddén: I am informed that the present structure allows for a promotion in post, but does not allow for an increase in salary that could accurately be described as resulting from the acquisition of the master's degree.

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman.

Mrs. Julianna Y. O'Connor-Connolly: Can the Honourable Minister give an undertaking to look into this area because several complaints have been made by various teachers who either wish to pursue a master's degree and were unable to do so, or those who have it but were in no way compensated.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for Education, Human Resources and Culture.

Hon. Roy Boddén: I am most sympathetic. I give the undertaking that indeed, we have begun. I hope when we craft the new Education Law we can make these provisions for persons who acquire postgraduate degrees, that they are compensated accordingly.

The Speaker: The Elected Member for East End.

Mr. V. Arden McLean: Can the Honourable Minister tell us from where postgraduate studies for teachers are funded through? Is it Personnel or Education Council?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for Education, Human Resources and Culture.

Hon. Roy Boddén: It is my understanding that postgraduate studies are funded through both the Education Council and Personnel.

The Speaker: The Third Elected Member for Bodden Town.

Mr. Anthony S. Eden: In point 4 it indicates that according to Barron's or some other reputable guide . . . I wondered if Peterson's was accepted by Education Council as one of these reputable guides.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for Education, Human Resources and Culture.

Hon. Roy Bodden: Peterson's serves as a source of reference, but the council members prefer Barron's, is my understanding. That preference is also borne out by the fact that members wish to avoid any confusion by having to refer to a multiplicity of sources.

The Speaker: Are there any further supplementaries?

If not, we move on to question 101, standing in the name of the First Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman.

QUESTION NO. 101

No. 101: Mrs. Y. Julianna Y. O'Connor-Connolly to ask the Honourable Minister responsible for the Ministry of Education, Human Resources and Culture to give (a) the number of scholarships granted this year by the Education Council stating the areas of study; and (b) the number of applications for scholarships refused during the current year stating the areas of study and reasons for refusal.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for Education, Human Resources and Culture.

Hon. Roy Bodden: To date, the total number of scholarships granted through the Education Council to students going overseas to study for the undergraduate and postgraduate degrees, as of the Fall 2001 semester is 56.

Total number of the applications for the Fall 2001 is 79. Of these, 56 were granted scholarships. Therefore, those who were not successful numbered 23.

Reasons for refusal were because applicants did not meet the criteria for the granting of the scholarships. For example: some were not Caymanian status holders; some had incomplete applications; some were advised to work for at least one year before undertaking postgraduate studies; some did not have acceptance to institutions accepted by the Council as being competitive; some accepted scholarships from the private sector and some were advised to gain credits from a local tertiary institution before transferring abroad and, once they met the criteria, were granted, or would be granted, scholarships to do so.

Areas of study for scholarships granted and not granted were in business, law, education, accounting, medicine, nursing, videography, graphic design, fine arts, veterinary science, insurance studies, sociology, physiotherapy, medical genetics, computers, et cetera.

SUPPLEMENTARIES

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman.

Mrs. Julianna Y. O'Connor-Connolly: Can the Honourable Minister confirm whether or not any scholarships were refused based on the reason it was felt that the parents were of financial status to accommodate such requests?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for Education, Human Resources and Culture.

Hon. Roy Bodden: I am happy to give the Member a definitive position that no scholarships were refused on those grounds.

The Speaker: Are there any further supplementaries?
The Second Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman.

Mr. Lyndon L. Martin: The answer provided specified overseas study. Can the Honourable Minister provide information as to the number of local scholarships granted?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for Education, Human Resources and Culture.

Hon. Roy Bodden: Local scholarships are still in the process of being awarded. I cannot at this time offer any definitive numbers in that regard.

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman.

Mrs. Julianna Y. O'Connor-Connolly: Seeing there were a number of scholarships awarded this year for students going overseas, I wonder if the Minister can say whether the budgeted amounts for 2001 will be sufficient to accommodate the requests for local scholarships as well.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for Education, Human Resources and Culture.

Hon. Roy Bodden: Local scholarships and overseas scholarships are two different votes. However, I can tell the Members that the generosity of the council far exceeded the funds that we had voted. I hope your generosity continues when the Minister comes to Members for additional support.

The Speaker: The Elected Member for East End.

Mr. V. Arden McLean: One reason for refusal was that applications were not completed. Is that the only reason why an applicant would be turned down, because the application was not completed?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for Education, Human Resources and Culture.

Hon. Roy Boddén: One must appreciate that there are deadlines. If incomplete applications are received on the last day of the deadline, it is well nigh impossible for it to be completed on time.

I think that students sometimes are fully appreciative of the problems and in most cases they comply, but it is a competitive process. It is my information that applicants are given all the assistance that can be afforded. However, sometimes that is not enough and they do not make the deadlines.

Reverting to an earlier question, I am happy to say that up to this point 82 local scholarships have been awarded. We are not finished yet!

The Speaker: Are there any further supplementaries? If not, that concludes Question Time for this morning.

The next item is Statements by Honourable Ministers/Members of the Government. Statement on Immigration Issues by the Honourable Minister responsible for Planning, Communications and Works

STATEMENTS BY MINISTERS/MEMBERS OF THE GOVERNMENT

STATEMENT ON IMMIGRATION ISSUES

Hon. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Mr. Speaker, I do not believe that a day passes any more without each Honourable Member of this House being reminded in some way, of at least one of the issues related to immigration that face these Islands.

The inaction of the past several years has resulted in these issues forming something of a cloud looming over us. I believe that each of us who sought office has no doubt given his or her constituents some commitment to try to move this cloud.

Most certainly, the Government is fully aware of the need to develop and implement immigration policies that will address the many issues existing. More importantly, the Government fully appreciates that whatever policies it ultimately proposes will not meet with the approval of every Member of this House, and that whatever this House gives its approval to will not necessarily satisfy every member of the community. However, Mr. Speaker, the Government cannot and will not be deterred by these inescapable facts.

I am happy to inform this Honourable House and the listening public this morning, of the current state-of-play and the game plan to reach our goal.

Late last year, and obviously very soon after taking up office, the Government took the decision that it wished for Executive Council to be relieved of the role of serving as the appellate body in respect of decisions of the Immigration Board and the Trade & Business Licensing Board. The Government considered serving in this capacity to be fundamentally inconsistent with good judicial practice and good governance.

I am pleased to advise that the necessary legislative amendments are now being finalised and a Bill to give effect to them will be brought to the next meeting of this House. Subject to legislative support for this change, it is intended that Executive Council will hand over its appellate role to a statutory appellate body very early in 2002. This action will not only address the fundamental inconsistencies mentioned earlier, but it will also allow Executive Council to utilise the time spent on such matters on the many other issues that fall to it for consideration and decision.

More recently, as Honourable Members and the public will know, the Government took the decision to issue a quota for 2001 for the grant of Caymanian status under various sections of the Immigration Law that are subject to such a quota. This is not an annual quota, Mr. Speaker; it is intended to merely address the result of the inaction in this area over the past 10 or 11 years.

Let me turn now to the Government's game plan to achieve the development and implementation of appropriate policies to address the broad range of immigration issues that these Islands face.

Firstly, the Government is cognisant of the substantial public input that went into the development of the Vision 2008 National Strategic Plan, and the strategies and actions proposed in that document in respect of immigration. We are also naturally aware of the even more substantial public input taken by the Select Committee of this Honourable House, on immigration, during its tenure from 1997 to 2000.

That Committee not only received written submissions, but also afforded audiences to individuals and representatives of interested bodies who presented themselves. The Government firmly believes that the public has said all that it needs to say for policy considerations to be made. The Government also appreciates that to give effect to any changes in current policies will require the support of this Honourable House in agreeing to corresponding legislative changes.

Mr. Speaker, while such legislative changes are clearly and unequivocally the ambit of this Honourable House, the Government is of the view that it can most expeditiously arrive at a position where it is able to propose new policies and legislative changes to this House, if it utilises a small group of carefully selected individuals to provide advice on appropriate policy.

I am pleased to announce that the Government has decided to appoint an Immigration Review Team that will be charged with making recommendations to the Government as to appropriate immigration policies to address the current issues.

That Team will be comprised of: Mrs. Sherrie Boddén-Cowan, Mr. Patrick Schmid, Mr. Rolston Anglin, MLA Member Mr. Orrett Connor, Chief Immigration Officer; Mrs. Sheena Frederick-Westerborg, Crown Counsel, Legal Dept.; Mr. Alden McLaughlin, MLA; and Mr. Gilbert McLean, MLA.

The Government is extremely grateful to each of these individuals for having agreed to be a member of this team and to give the time that this initiative calls for.

The Terms of Reference of this Team will be to review the public input of the two major initiatives that I referred to earlier—The Cayman Islands National Strategic Plan 1999-2008 (Vision 2008), and the records of the Select Committee of this House, and produce recommendations as to appropriate immigration policies by early November (2001).

In working towards this, the Team will be required to provide two interim reports to the Government and these will be shared in confidence with all Honourable Members of this House who, in turn, will be afforded the opportunity to give their feedback to the Team.

I wish to acknowledge that obviously the availability of the records of the Select Committee will be dependent on the approval of this Honourable House. To this end, the Government will be bringing a motion today to seek the approval of the House to lay those records on the Table.

Without wishing in any way to appear to be preempting the decision of any Honourable Member, I would simply wish to take the opportunity to express my appreciation for the support that I believe the Motion will receive.

The Team will also be required to produce a document for public distribution explaining in clear terms its policy recommendations. This document is to be distributed to the public before the end of November. This will enable the public to have a full and clear understanding of the direction that the Government will consider taking on immigration.

By mid-December, the Government will take the decision as to the recommendations it wishes to accept, and will initiate the process of developing the necessary legislative changes to give effect to its desired policies. The Government will present these proposed policies to this Honourable House during the first meeting of 2002, and seek the approval of the House of any legislative amendments necessary to give effect to these new policies.

The Government is committed to clearing this cloud I mentioned at the beginning. It must be done, Sir, and God willing, it will be done.

In closing, Mr. Speaker, I wish to first express the Governments appreciation to the public for the patience that has been shown so far in understanding that everything cannot happen at the same time. To all of my colleagues in this House, I would urge each one to avail themselves of the opportunities for input that will be afforded, keeping in mind at all times that the paramount importance of bringing this matter of immigration is for a timely conclusion. I thank you, Sir.

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman.

Mrs. Julianna Y. O'Connor-Connolly: I crave the indulgence of the Chair to ask a short question.

The Speaker: Certainly.

SHORT QUESTIONS

Standing Order 30(2)

Mrs. Julianna Y. O'Connor-Connolly: Would the Honourable Minister be so minded as to consider, by way of Government, the inclusion of a chairperson from the Cayman Brac and Little Cayman Immigration Board seeing that there are two from the Board here for the very necessary and relevant reasons?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Planning, Communications and Works.

Hon. D. Kurt Tibbetts: I appreciate where the Member is coming from and can assure her that there was no attempt to be exclusive. The Government will bear in mind the request in conference with the necessary parties and do whatever we can to round the situation off.

The Speaker: Moving on to item 6, Government Business, Motions. Government Motion No. 8/01: Laying of Records of the Select Committee to review The Immigration Law, 1992 (1997 Revision), The Local Companies (Control) Law (1995 Revision) and The Trade and Business Licensing Law (1996 Revision).

The Honourable Acting First Official Member responsible for Internal and External Affairs.

Hon. Donovan W. F. Ebanks: First, I move the suspension of Standing Order 24(5) to allow this Motion to be dealt with since it has not had the required five-day circulation.

The Speaker: I think it has been circulated, not in sufficient time, but it has been circulated. Do you all have it? I waived the five-day approval, but out of an abundance of caution, we can suspend Standing Orders.

Hon. Donovan W. F. Ebanks: My apology, Sir. I was not aware you had waived the five-day requirement.

The Speaker: Please continue.

GOVERNMENT BUSINESS

MOTIONS

GOVERNMENT MOTION NO. 8/01

LAYING OF RECORDS OF THE SELECT COMMITTEE TO REVIEW THE IMMIGRATION LAW, 1992 (1997 REVISION), THE LOCAL COMPANIES (CONTROL)

LAW (1995 REVISION) AND THE TRADE AND BUSINESS LICENSING LAW (1996 REVISION)

Hon. Donovan W. F. Ebanks: I beg to move Government Motion No. 8/01, which reads:

“BE IT RESOLVED THAT this Honourable Legislative Assembly lays upon the Table of the House the records of the Select Committee, established with the passing of Government Motion No. 1/97 on the 21st day of April 1997, to review The Immigration Law, 1992 (1997 Revision), The Local Companies (Control) Law (1995 Revision) and The Trade and Business Licensing Law (1996 Revision), with exception of the confidential proceedings of oral hearings, and made available subject to completion of printing.”

The Speaker: Government Motion No. 8/01 has been duly moved. Do you wish to speak to it?

The Honourable Acting First Official Member responsible for Internal and External Affairs.

Hon. Donovan W. F. Ebanks: This Motion recognises the valuable work done by this 1997-2000 Select Committee, in particular the contributions the public made to that committee. It merely seeks to make this information available in the formulation of policies in respect of immigration and in particular to assist the Government in developing and being in a position to present to this Honourable House—in accordance with the statement made just a few minutes ago by the Honourable Minister for Planning, Communications and Works—the policies the Government wishes to implement in respect of immigration. It would be an unfortunate waste of excellent and well-intended information provided, and it is hoped it will be utilised if this information could now be put to this appropriate use.

I would simply urge all Members to support this Motion.

The Speaker: Before opening the Motion for debate, out of an abundance of caution, I would like a motion to suspend Standing Order 24(5).

SUSPENSION OF STANDING ORDER 24(5)

Hon. Donovan W. F. Ebanks: In accordance with Standing Order 86, we move the suspension of Standing Order 24 (5) in order that this Motion can be taken with less than five days prior to the commencement of this meeting.

The Speaker: The question is that in accordance with Standing Order 86, Standing Order 24 (5) be suspended in order that this Motion can be taken with less than five days prior to the commencement of this meeting.

Those in favour please say Aye. Those against, No.

AYES.

AGREED: STANDING ORDER 24(5) SUSPENDED.

The Speaker: Government Motion No. 8/01 is open for debate.

Does any Member wish to speak?

If not, does the Mover wish to reply?

Hon. Donovan W. F. Ebanks: Only to thank Members for the understanding of the intent of the Motion and for their support.

The Speaker: I shall now put the question on Government Motion No. 8/01. Those in favour please say Aye. Those against, No.

AYES.

The Speaker: The Ayes have it.

Hon. Roy Bodden: Can we have a division?

The Speaker: Certainly.

The Clerk:

DIVISION NO. 16/01

AYES: 8

NOES: 0

Hon. Donovan Ebanks
Hon. David Ballantyne
Hon. D. Kurt Tibbetts
Hon. Linford A. Pierson
Hon. Roy Bodden
Hon. Edna M. Moyle
Mr. Alden M. McLaughlin, Jr.
Mr. V. Arden McLean

ABSENT: 10

Hon. George A. McCarthy
Hon. W. McKeever Bush
Mr. Rolston M. Anglin
Capt. A. Eugene Ebanks
Mr. Cline A. Glidden Jr.
Dr. Frank S. McField
Mrs. Julianna Y. O'Connor-Connolly
Mr. Lyndon L. Martin
Mr. Gilbert A. McLean
Mr. Anthony S. Eden

The Speaker: The result of the division is 8 Ayes, 0 Noes, and 10 Absent. The Motion is passed.

AGREED: GOVERNMENT MOTION NO. 8/01 PASSED.

The Speaker: This concludes the business on today's Order Paper.

I will now entertain a motion for the adjournment of this Honourable House.

ADJOURNMENT

Hon. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Mr. Speaker, because we would like to have a presentation to Members of the upcoming Public Finance Bill by the team that put the Bill together, I move the adjournment of this Honourable House until 10 am Monday.

The Speaker: The question is that this Honourable House adjourns until 10 am Monday.

Mr. V. Arden McLean: Mr. Speaker, just for clarity, are we coming back here on 10 September? I thought it was to be adjourned until the end of the Human Rights Symposium.

The Speaker: No. All day Monday, but the symposium commences on Tuesday, September 11.

The Speaker: The question is that this Honourable House do now adjourn until 10 am Monday, 10 September 2001. Those in favour, please say Aye. Those against, No.

AYES.

The Speaker: The Ayes have it.

AT 12.32 PM THE HOUSE STOOD ADJOURNED
UNTIL 10 AM MONDAY, 10 SEPTEMBER 2001.

OFFICIAL HANSARD REPORT
MONDAY
10 SEPTEMBER 2001
10.31 AM
Fourth Sitting

The Speaker: Good morning. I will invite the Elected Member for East End to say prayers.

PRAYERS

Mr. V. Arden McLean: Let us pray:

Almighty God, from whom all wisdom and power are derived: We beseech Thee so to direct and prosper the deliberations of the Legislative Assembly now assembled, that all things may be ordered upon the best and surest foundations for the glory of Thy Name and for the safety, honour and welfare of the people of these Islands.

Bless our Sovereign Lady, Queen Elizabeth II; the Queen Mother; Philip, Duke of Edinburgh; Charles, Prince of Wales; and all the Royal family. Give grace to all who exercise authority in our Commonwealth, that peace and happiness, truth and justice, religion and piety may be established among us. Especially we pray for the Governor of our Islands, the Speaker of the Legislative Assembly, Official Members and Ministers of Executive Council and Members of the Legislative Assembly, that we may be enabled faithfully to perform the responsible duties of our high office.

All this we ask for Thy great Name's sake.

Let us say the Lord's Prayer together:

Our Father, who art in Heaven, Hallowed be Thy Name. Thy Kingdom come, Thy will be done on earth as it is in Heaven. Give us this day our daily bread, and forgive us our trespasses, as we forgive those who trespass against us. Lead us not into temptation, but deliver us from evil. For Thine is the Kingdom, the power and the glory, forever and ever. Amen.

Proceedings resumed at 10.33 am

The Speaker: Please be seated. Proceedings are resumed.

READING BY THE HONOURABLE SPEAKER OF MESSAGES AND ANNOUNCEMENTS

APOLOGIES

The Speaker: I have received apologies for absence from the Honourable Second Official Member, the Third Elected Member for George Town and the Fourth Elected Member for West Bay who are presently attending a Commonwealth Parliamentary Association Conference in Australia, Apologies for late attendance from the Second Elected Member for West Bay who will be arriving later this morning.

Questions to Honourable Ministers/Members. Question No. 102 standing in the name of the First Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman.

QUESTIONS TO HONOURABLE
MEMBERS/MINISTERS

QUESTION NO. 102

No. 102: Mrs. Julianna Y. O'Connor-Connolly asked the Honourable Minister responsible for the Ministry of Community Development, Women Affairs, Youth and Sports whether or not plans have been prepared and costed for the proposed Women's Shelter.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for Community Development, Women's Affairs, Youth and Sports.

Hon. Edna M. Moyle: As the Member is aware, there were funds approved in the 2000 Budget for a Project Development Document (PDD) for the Crisis Centre Facility (Women's Shelter). The draft PDD was completed in 2000 for a central facility and the total cost of this project was $2,178,825. The Ministry has reviewed this document and intends for changes to be made, as it is the intention of the Ministry to get value for monies spent on any project for which we hold responsibility.

SUPPLEMENTARIES

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman.

Mrs. Julianna Y. O'Connor-Connolly: Is the Minister in a position to say what the outcome was as a result of this review?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for Community Development, Women's Affairs, Youth and Sports.

Hon. Edna M. Moyle: I am not in a position to say what the outcome of that review is because it has not been finalised. However, I will say that the Minister has taken a decision to discontinue a section of the facility, which is the proposed swimming pool.

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman.

Mrs. Julianna Y. O'Connor-Connolly: Can the Minister say who was actually responsible for making recommendations for the project document?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for Community Development, Women's Affairs, Youth and Sports.

Hon. Edna M. Moyle: Mr. Speaker, is the Member speaking about the proposed development document that is in the Ministry at this time?

I cannot say the company that proposed the project with the swimming pool, but the Member may be in a position to as she was the Minister responsible at that time who requested the PDD for the project.

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman.

Mrs. Julianna Y. O'Connor-Connolly: Can the Honourable Minister give an undertaking to ascertain who was responsible, when in fact I never ever did have an opportunity to see the project done. I will, however, still give the project my full support when she brings it to this House, whether or not it is revised.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for Community Development, Women's Affairs, Youth and Sports.

Hon. Edna M. Moyle: Definitely. I will do that.

The Speaker: Are there any further supplementaries? If not, we move on to question 103, standing in the name of the First Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman.

QUESTION NO. 103

No. 103: Mrs. Julianna Y. O'Connor-Connolly asked the Honourable Minister responsible for the Ministry of Community Development, Women Affairs, Youth and Sports what progress has been made in acquiring additional working space for the Ministry of Community Development, Women Affairs, Youth and Sports.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for Community Development, Women's Affairs, Youth and Sports.

Hon. Edna M. Moyle: There has been no progress regarding acquiring additional working space for the Ministry.

SUPPLEMENTARIES

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman.

Mrs. Julianna Y. O'Connor-Connolly: Can the Honourable Minister say whether it is still an issue her Ministry still intends to pursue?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for Community Development, Women's Affairs, Youth and Sports.

Hon. Edna M. Moyle: The answer to that question is 'no'.

The Speaker: The Second Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman.

Mr. Lyndon L. Martin: Can the Honourable Minister indicate if the answer to the last question suggests that there is adequate space in the Ministry?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for Community Development, Women's Affairs, Youth and Sports.

Hon. Edna M. Moyle: The answer to that question is 'yes'. The reason additional office accommodation was being sought for the Ministry was due to the seamen's exgratia payment. The majority of those have now been put into a database and the pressure of work is no longer there regarding the seamen's exgratia payments.

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman.

Mrs. Julianna Y. O'Connor-Connolly: Can the Honourable Minister say whether she is fully satisfied that each individual staff member, including the Minister, has sufficient working space taking into account the background of the public reception and filing areas within the said Ministry?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for Community Development, Women's Affairs, Youth and Sports.

Hon. Edna M. Moyle: The entire Glass House could say 'no' to that question. However there is an office accommodation committee which falls under the Minister responsible for Lands and Survey. In September 2000 the former Minister of Community Affairs took a request to Executive Council to request office accommodation for the Ministry. At that time a decision was taken that the Ministry should look elsewhere than the West Conference Room and on the same date the Minister then responsible sent back and instructed the Ministry to use a part of the West Conference Room.

The Minister in charge of planning is in the process of preparing plans for a government administration building. However, if it is dependent upon the filing cabinets and the entire staff at the Glass House the entire building is without space, Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: The Second Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman.

Mr. Lyndon L. Martin: In an earlier response the Minister suggested that the reason extra space was being sought was the processing of the seamen's exgratia payment which has now been put on a database. As the Minister is aware, there are still certain batches of these applications to be processed and approved. Can the Honourable Minister suggest from her answer stated that there is no more need for the space, the processing of these applications are now completed?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for Community Development, Women's Affairs, Youth and Sports.

Hon. Edna M. Moyle: I cannot say the processing of all applications have been completed because they come in on a daily basis. I am saying that the officer who is handling the seamen's exgratia payment has sufficient working space and I will not be seeking further office accommodation for that particular officer.

The Speaker: Are there any further supplementaries? If not, we move on to question 104 standing in the name of the Second Elected Member for Bodden Town.

QUESTION NO. 104

No. 104: Mr. Gilbert A. McLean asked the Honourable First Official Member responsible for the Portfolio of Internal and External Affairs if there is a policy in place that all retiring permanent secretaries will receive one year's pre-retirement salary.

The Speaker: The Honourable First Official Member responsible for Internal and External Affairs.

Hon. James M. Ryan: In 1970 a written policy was put in place that senior civil servants, upon retiring, would be granted one year's pre-retirement leave to compensate for lost leave during their years of service.

Over the past ten years or so, in particular, within the last four years, senior civil servants have been called on to work on week-ends, holidays and often at nights to complete work on schedule; this has been done without compensation.

Frequently, they have been asked to go overseas without compensation. It was accordingly decided to put more specific conditions in the policy as follows: Officers qualifying for pre-retirement leave would be in Grade C or above (Permanent Secretary or its equivalent). The Officer must have in at least thirty years of pensionable service with at least ten years as Permanent Secretary or above that level. The pre-retirement leave would be inclusive of all accumulated annual leave.

SUPPLEMENTARIES

The Speaker: The Second Elected Member for Bodden Town.

Mr. Gilbert A. McLean: Was it the case that the 1970 policy was specific to officers then, namely such persons as Mr. Harry McCoy, Mr. Desmond Watler, Mr. Wentworth Bodden, Sr. Vassel Johnson, and so on, or was this policy to be carried on until now, 30 years later?

The Speaker: The Honourable First Official Member responsible for Internal and External Affairs.

Hon. James M. Ryan: I think the answer to that question is both. In 1970 it named the senior civil servants by name and as years have gone by, senior civil servants who fell into that category were added to that list. The only difference at this time is that instead of naming civil servants by name, they are putting them in a category, accomplishing the same thing without pointing them out by individual name.

The Speaker: Second Elected Member for Bodden Town.

Mr. Gilbert A. McLean: Would the Member agree that the reason pre-retirement was given in 1970 (indeed I think it was two years for some of the senior civil servants who virtually had no leave and it was because these were unable to take their leave unlike more modern times) was done specifically to allow them to get the benefit of the leave they had?

The Speaker: The Honourable First Official Member responsible for Internal and External Affairs.

Hon. James M. Ryan: The Member may be correct. As a former civil servant he would probably know that what the records in the files show is 12 months' pre-retirement leave which was approved for those individuals. It was approved to compensate for lost leave.

In today's civil service it is worse in many instances than it was then, despite the fact that the service has expanded considerably. There are many civil servants that have a very large number of days from annual leave and they have not been compensated in any other way for additional time over and above the normal civil service hours they work.

The Speaker: The Second Elected Member for Bodden Town.

Mr. Gilbert A. McLean: Is it the case now that the Personnel Regulations require civil servants to take whatever leave they earn according to their particular category within the calendar year and only in exceptional cases it should be carried over?

The Speaker: The Honourable First Official Member responsible for Internal and External Affairs.

Hon. James M. Ryan: In theory, civil servants are supposed to take their leave earned in a calendar year. Unfortunately, because of the pressure of work this has not been possible and there are many, many senior civil servants that have not been able to take their allotted annual leave in the calendar year earned.

The Speaker: The Elected Member for East End.

Mr. V. Arden McLean: Can the Member tell us what was considered the lowest level of senior civil servant in 1970?

The Speaker: The Honourable First Official Member responsible for Internal and External Affairs.

Hon. James M. Ryan: As the Member will know, we re-designated posts. In those days titles used did not always equate to today's titles. However, by and large, from the names in the file it equated to that of permanent secretary. I do not have the actual list here, but that was what it would equate to by and large in today's service.

The Speaker: The Elected Member for East End.

Mr. V. Arden McLean: Would the Member say that all civil servants in that category, as he just explained, since 1970, upon retiring have received the pre-retirement pay?

The Speaker: The Honourable First Official Member responsible for Internal and External Affairs.

Hon. James M. Ryan: As I mentioned, what the file shows is that persons who retired later on sometime after 1970, but before . . . sort of between 1970 and, say, 1998, a few names were added to that original list as people came to retirement age and it was felt they qualified or were eligible.

The Speaker: The Elected Member for East End.

Mr. V. Arden McLean: Can the Member tell us if civil servants who were expatriates in those positions also received this payment upon retirement?

The Speaker: The Honourable First Official Member responsible for Internal and External Affairs.

Hon. James M. Ryan: To my knowledge they did not because they would have to be on the permanent pensionable establishment to have qualified.

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman.

Mrs. Julianna Y. O'Connor-Connolly: Can the Member say if the Government intends to continue extending this policy to senior assistant secretaries and/or heads of departments?

The Speaker: The Honourable First Official Member responsible for Internal and External Affairs.

Hon. James M. Ryan: In addition to what has been set down here, heads of departments who worked for 30 years or more on the permanent and pensionable establishment will be considered on a case by case basis for pre-retirement leave up to a maximum of six months. However, each will be dealt with on its own merits.

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman.

Mrs. Julianna Y. O'Connor-Connolly: Based on the justification set forth in the policy, would it not be deemed prudent to move the discretion or mandate for consideration of senior assistant secretaries and permanent secretaries to that of an entrenched policy?

The Speaker: The Honourable First Official Member responsible for Internal and External Affairs.

Hon. James M. Ryan: The matter can be revisited even though senior assistant secretaries generally succeed to the post of permanent secretary and would then likely qualify, in any event. The matter is not cast in stone; it can be reviewed.

The Speaker: The Second Elected Member for Bodden Town.

Mr. Gilbert A. McLean: Can the Member say if it is not the case that as a permanent secretary one is expected to work on weekends and often holidays without compensation, as that is part of what is expected of higher management in the civil service? Can the Member also say if being able to access value for leave not taken is based as pre-retirement leave?

The Speaker: The Honourable First Official Member responsible for Internal and External Affairs.

Hon. James M. Ryan: The policy is based both on leave not taken and also on the fact that senior civil servants at the level of permanent secretary and above are often called to work over and above their normal hours, weekends, nights, holidays, and are frequently called upon to go overseas on official business with no compensation. The Member is quite right that senior civil servants are not compensated for that as more junior civil servants would more likely be. The pre-retirement leave is based on all those things.

The Speaker: The Second Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. Alden M. McLaughlin, Jr.: In the substantive answer the Member said that it was "accordingly decided to put more specific conditions in the policy" and he refers to these specific conditions as "Officers who qualify for pre-retirement leave would be in Grade C or above (Permanent Secretary or its equivalent). The Officer must have in at least thirty years of pensionable service with at least ten years at Permanent Secretary level or above."

Since this written policy the Member referred to appears to have begun in 1970, I wonder if the Member could say when these specific conditions were promulgated and came into effect.

The Speaker: The Honourable First Official Member responsible for Internal and External Affairs.

Hon. James M. Ryan: The specific conditions set down were brought into effect in March of this year.

The Speaker: The Second Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. Alden M. McLaughlin, Jr.: Can the Member explain to this House how this policy was developed and upon whose authority it was implemented?

The Speaker: The Honourable First Official Member responsible for Internal and External Affairs.

Hon. James M. Ryan: I had the original policy researched. I consulted with senior civil servants and then put the proposal to His Excellency the Governor. He consulted with the other Caribbean Overseas Territories and subsequently made a decision to bring the policy into effect.

The Speaker: The Second Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. Alden M. McLaughlin, Jr.: As this policy clearly has significant financial ramifications, can the First Official Member can say how it was determined that the country would pay for this significant expense, and, specifically, were funds identified by His Excellency the Governor to ensure that this financial commitment, particularly in these times, could be carried out without extra additional unbearable strain on the country's purse?

The Speaker: The Honourable First Official Member responsible for Internal and External Affairs.

Hon. James M. Ryan: I do not believe the matter was raised, for the sake of argument, with Members of the Legislative Assembly, but the policy could simply have continued by adding individual names to the list, as had been done over the years, instead of dealing with it by post. The country has funded this cost in past years, perhaps in times when the country was not even as well off as it is today. The decision was taken and I cannot say if there was any consultation in regard to identifying funds for it.

The Speaker: I would ask for a motion to suspend Standing Order 23(7) &(8).

SUSPENSION OF STANDING ORDER 23(7) AND (8)

[Moved by the Honourable First Official Member]

QUESTION PUT. AGREED: STANDING ORDER 23 (7) AND (8) SUSPENDED TO ALLOW QUESTION TIME TO CONTINUE BEYOND 11 AM.

The Speaker: The Second Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. Alden M. McLaughlin, Jr.: Can the Honourable First Official Member say whether or not His Excellency the Governor bears in mind when determining policies such as this, that ultimately the decision as to whether or not that policy will be funded is a matter entirely within the remit of the Finance Committee of this Honourable House?

The Speaker: The Honourable First Official Member responsible for Internal and External Affairs.

Hon. James M. Ryan: I am sure this is very well known. In fact, that goes for any line item in any area of the Budget.

The Speaker: The Second Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. Alden M. McLaughlin, Jr.: In answer to an earlier supplementary, the Honourable First Official Member indicated that the reason for the continuation of this policy since 1970 was because permanent secretaries and persons above them often had to work excess hours. Can the Member outline to this House what the command structure is within a ministry so that we are better able to determine whether or not these ministries are sufficiently staffed, therefore, this sort of extra burdens are not placed on permanent secretaries?

The Speaker: The Honourable First Official Member responsible for Internal and External Affairs.

Hon. James M. Ryan: The permanent secretary in the ministry is the head civil servant and the person who works very closely with the Minister on the formulating of policy and the implementation of policy. There is in each ministry a senior assistant secretary and depending on the size of the ministry there may be an administrative officer as well as a senior assistant secretary.

The makeup is not consistent across the board because it depends on the size of the ministry. However, the permanent secretary is generally the civil servant called upon to go overseas with his or her minister and often they give up weekends and holidays if there is one falling during that time overseas. There will also be times when it is necessary for the permanent secretary to be there and personally responsible for dealing with matters at the high level for his or her minister.

The Speaker: The Second Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. Alden M. McLaughlin, Jr.: Can the Member say whether or not the senior assistant secretary stands in for the permanent secretary whenever he or she is absent?

The Speaker: The Honourable First Official Member responsible for Internal and External Affairs.

Hon. James M. Ryan: Yes, that is the case.

The Speaker: The Second Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. Alden M. McLaughlin, Jr.: I wonder then if the Member can explain why permanent secretaries regularly and consistently seem unable to take their annual leave.

The Speaker: The Honourable First Official Member responsible for Internal and External Affairs.

Hon. James M. Ryan: Despite having other staff there because of the work pressure in ministries, it is sometimes impossible to take their annual leave.

The Speaker: The Second Elected Member for Bodden Town.

Mr. Alden M. McLaughlin, Jr.: Is the Member perhaps saying that we need two or more permanent secretaries per ministry?

The Speaker: The Honourable First Official Member responsible for Internal and External Affairs.

Hon. James M. Ryan: I believe my colleagues on Executive Council could easily use more persons. There is a tremendous amount of work. I think, with all respect, the questioner would actually have to be in the ministry to appreciate how much work has to be done and how much the Ministers are called upon to do and how much permanent secretaries are called upon to do.

The Speaker: The Second Elected Member for Bodden Town.

Mr. Gilbert A. McLean: Can the Member confirm that pre-retirement leave means that a civil servant, particularly a permanent secretary would be paid for one year's salary after he or she has left the job, no longer working for government?

Is it not the case that if there is accumulated leave when a permanent secretary or any other person retires they are paid that in a lump sum payment?

Would he agree that it is outstandingly unfair to pay a permanent secretary in such an instance, except for leave not taken, to the exclusion of all other civil servants who could rightly look to similar treatment?

The Speaker: The Honourable First Official Member responsible for Internal and External Affairs.

Hon. James M. Ryan: That was really a triple question. I will try to answer as much of it as I can.

I do not think it is unfair to the rest of the service that permanent secretaries and above are paid for, or given 12 months pre-retirement leave for the reasons I have already stated.

Permanent Secretaries and other senior civil servants above Permanent Secretary's level are not paid for outstanding annual leave on retirement and the outstanding annual leave is inclusive in the 12 months pre-retirement leave.

Can the Member refresh my memory on the third part of that question?

Mr. Gilbert A. McLean: I asked why other civil servants should not expect to be treated similarly in that regard.

The Speaker: The Honourable First Official Member responsible for Internal and External Affairs.

Hon. James M. Ryan: Thank you.

Admittedly, the Civil Service is a fairly large organisation, in fact a very large organisation by Caymanian standards of the 1950s, 1960s and 1970s. However, it is likely that most career civil servants will advance to at least head of department if they spend their entire career in the service. If it is felt that the policy is unfair to other civil servants, the matter can be revisited as necessary. However, by the time an individual has put in 30-plus years in the service, it is likely that he or she will have reached head of department. If not, the matter can be revisited.

The Speaker: The Second Elected Member for Bodden Town.

Mr. Gilbert McLean: Would the Member give an undertaking that this policy which has just been instituted apparently be reviewed with the view of discontinuing this proposed practice or ceasing it, and in place of that making arrangements for permanent secretaries to take their leave when required so that this additional year's pay is not required, which places a new strain on the budget of the country when persons are not in place working on the job?

The Speaker: The Honourable First Official Member responsible for Internal and External Affairs.

Hon. James M. Ryan: Mr. Speaker, I am not prepared to give such an undertaking. What I am prepared to do is discuss the matter with the Governor.

The Speaker: The Elected Member for East End.

Mr. V. Arden McLean: The First Official Member said in a previous answer concerning other civil servants, that when a civil servant stays in the job for 30 years he should at least reach head of department. I do not know if that is necessarily so because I can think of two individuals from Public Works Department (PWD) who are very hard workers, John Edward and Legan Dixon and the possibility of them reaching director of PWD would be slim; no disrespect to them. If those individuals were working in the private sector under the law, they would have to be given one week for every year they have worked, up to three months. Can the Member comment on the comparison between the public and private sector and whether any consideration would be given to looking at what the public sector people get?

The Speaker: The Honourable First Official Member responsible for Internal and External Affairs.

Hon. James M. Ryan: For group employees there is a procedure in place whereby a group employee leaving the service can be given severance pay. It is a week for each year up to ten years.

In the specific case the Member cited, I think he is right. There will be some people, particularly group employees, who will not reach the level of HOD and there are only so many HODs. However, I think, the policy can be reviewed and those situations looked into.

The Speaker: The Elected Member for East End.

Mr. V. Arden McLean: Can the Member say why government has up to ten weeks and the private sector has to provide up to 12 weeks?

The Speaker: The Honourable First Official Member responsible for Internal and External Affairs.

Hon. James M. Ryan: I am going from memory from my days as HOD when persons in that category would have. . . Well, what simply happens is that where the Labour Law differs from General Orders, the Labour Law succeeds. It is likely, while I do not want to stand here publicly and say that is the case, that normally the public service would be guided by the Labour Law.

The Speaker: Are there any further supplementaries? If not, we move on to question 105, standing in the name of the First Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman.

QUESTION NO. 105

No. 105: Mrs. Julianna Y. O'Connor-Connolly asked the Honourable First Official Member responsible for the Portfolio of Internal and External Affairs to give (a) the number of drains that have been put in place since January of this year on Cayman Brac; and (b) to say whether or not there are any plans to put in place proper drainage for the Watering Place/Bight areas.

The Speaker: The Honourable First Official Member responsible for Internal and External Affairs.

Hon. James M. Ryan: To date, nine drains have been installed in some of the flood-prone areas on Cayman Brac, and three drains are to be added in the Watering Place area. It is hoped that these will be completed by the end of September.

SUPPLEMENTARIES

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman.

Mrs. Julianna Y. O'Connor-Connolly: Am I correct to presume that to date no drains have been put in place in the Watering Place/Bite areas?

The Speaker: The Honourable First Official Member responsible for Internal and External Affairs.

Hon. James M. Ryan: I am speaking based on information supplied to me and I assume that at the time this information was given no drains were put in in that area during 2001. The Member may be more up to date in her information but from the information given to me, three drains are proposed to be put in that area later this month.

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman.

Mrs. Julianna Y. O'Connor-Connolly: I wonder if the Member would give an undertaking to have a meeting with the parties concerned. We are of the view that one drain would be sufficient if it is done where it is actually piped to the sea as opposed to the types of drains already put in place throughout the island.

The Speaker: The Honourable First Official Member responsible for Internal and External Affairs.

Hon. James M. Ryan: That was initially the plan, as the Member probably knows. However, the machine that would have carried out this work was moved to Little Cayman for a project there. Knowing that October is the rainy season the District Commissioner was of the view that instead of waiting until the equipment was available to cut a trench to the sea he would put in three drains. Certainly, if the matter has not yet been dealt with and if one drain can suffice by cutting a trench to the sea, then obviously that is the way to go.

I was also told there was some problem with the drilling rig, which is privately owned, and that has held the matter up. I will be happy to discuss it with the Members for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman and the District Commissioner to have the matter dealt with to the satisfaction of all concerned.

The Speaker: The Second Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman.

Mr. Lyndon L. Martin: Can the Honourable Member indicate if there are any plans to put a drain in the Bight area?

The Speaker: The Honourable First Official Member responsible for Internal and External Affairs.

Hon. James M. Ryan: The answer did not mention the Bight area, only the Watering Place area. I do not have an answer for that. Again, that is something we can discuss, particularly if we go the route of putting a single drain.

The Speaker: The Second Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman.

Mr. Lyndon L. Martin: I note that nine drains have been installed so far this year and the plan is to install three and possibly a fourth. Can the Member indicate what is used in determining the priority as to where these drains are located? It would appear from observation that the Watering Place area is the heaviest area subject to flooding.

The Speaker: The Honourable First Official Member responsible for Internal and External Affairs.

Hon. James M. Ryan: I have to say that I was not involved in the discussions on where the priorities were given for the drains, but I suspect that why the Watering Place area did not get the top priority may have been because of not having the piece of equipment. I believe that particular area was delayed with the expectation of trying to get the piece of equipment back to the island to cut the drain to the sea.

Knowing that October is the rainy season and knowing that that area is prone to flooding at that time, I believe the decision to move ahead with drains, putting in three drains, was taken because the equipment to do the necessary trench to the sea might not be available in time for that. Beyond that, I am really not able to comment on the priority.

The Speaker: Are there any further supplementaries? If not, we move on to question 106, standing in the name of the Second Elected Member for Bodden Town.

QUESTION NO. 106

No. 106: Mr. Gilbert A. McLean asked the Honourable Minister responsible for the Ministry of Tourism, Environment and Transport if the recently announced George Town Port development will require a government guarantee and, if so, will a presentation on the project be made to Members of the Legislative Assembly prior to such guarantee being issued.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for the Ministry of Tourism, Environment and Transport.

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: The first phase of this project is expected to involve the enhancement and beautification of the existing north and south cruise ship terminals, the repair and strengthening of the existing cargo finger pier and the construction of an additional cruise ship terminal and public transport area to the north of the existing cargo area in the vicinity of the old Watler Building.

Phase II, a long-term project, would be the construction of a new cargo dock between the new cruise ship terminal and the existing north and south cruise ship terminals.

Phase III would involve the conversion of the existing cargo finger pier to a cruise ship tendering facility and the extension of this pier into the George Town Harbour to create berthing for at least two cruise ships.

I am currently in discussions with the Florida Caribbean Cruise Association (FCCA) concerning their funding of this first phase of the project. As I have said before in this Honourable House, I gave the FCCA two options: they could either fund this phase of the project or we would increase the fees in order to finance it.

In the event that the FCCA decides not to fund the first phase of the project, the Port Authority, with the Executive Council's approval, will have to finance it through borrowing. In this event, it is likely that a government guarantee will be required by the lending institution and, if this is the case, a presentation will be made to the Finance Committee of the Legislative Assembly prior to the guarantee being issued.

In any event, I intend to make a presentation to Members of this Honourable House once the detailed drawings have been completed and the project costed.

SUPPLEMENTARIES

The Speaker: The Second Elected Member for Bodden Town.

Mr. Gilbert A. McLean: Can the Honourable Minister say if any consideration has been given to the enhanced use of the dock at Spotts or the much advertised area in the eastern district for a possible cargo dock?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for the Ministry of Tourism, Environment and Transport.

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: I should say also that Spotts is intended to be enhanced in the first phase of development. I do not know how much can be done up there because of the size and type of the area, but it can be enhanced and we certainly intend to do that.

As far as the East End project is concerned, I have seen some first impressions of the project, but I have not been handed any letter to consider it. If the private sector is going to do a project, there would be no need for government to do so.

The Speaker: The Second Elected Member for Bodden Town.

Mr. Gilbert A. McLean: In the present planning of phase I, has any drawings, serious study or examination been done on improving the Spotts dock where it could possibly be used in parallel to what is happening in George Town? In other words, if there are four ships, maybe one could come to Spotts and the other three to George Town. Would the Minister give some serious consideration to finding out if something could be done in relation to the Spotts dock, and discover what might be possible in the East End area. If such should occur in those eastern districts, it would give some much needed commerce and opportunity for trade, as is occurring in George Town.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for the Ministry of Tourism, Environment and Transport.

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: As I said, the Spotts jetty will be upgraded and we intend to do as much enhancement as we can. I was told that we have had opposition in the past to the Spotts area for cruise ships from the environmental section of government. I understand they do not particularly like anchoring at Spotts. It is one out of two safe harbours in the country when the weather is rough on this side; therefore, Spotts is utilised. The other area being the North Sound and of course, no one wants to do anything as far as development is concerned in the North Sound. So, Spotts will have to be enhanced and we intend to do that.

I have seen first impressions of the project in East End and I certainly support the idea. If I can help, or my Ministry, I will certainly do so. As of yet, I have not been asked anything as the Minister of transport. However, I think it is a good idea. If the private sector is putting in facilities, there is no need for government to do one. All government has to do is monitor the situation to ensure it is a proper project.

The Speaker: The Second Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. Alden M. McLaughlin, Jr.: At a recent public meeting, which the Minister of Tourism held at the George Town town hall, it was reported that two alternative development schemes were being considered in relation to the George Town port and, in particular, the cruise ship landings. Can the Minister say if the Port Authority and/or the Cayman Islands Government have now determined which of these schemes it proposes to proceed with?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for the Ministry of Tourism, Environment and Transport.

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: Executive Council has been appraised of each step that I have taken in regard to the port development. I have showed them the different phases, the various sketches that have been shown to me, the proposals each step of the way. When I get the projects costed, what I think are realistic costings, Executive Council will have to give the first go ahead; that is where I would begin. So, as soon as I have proper costings and proper drawings then I will appraise Executive Council to get direction.

The Speaker: The Second Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. Alden M. McLaughlin, Jr.: I take that answer to mean a decision has not yet been taken as to which of the options to proceed with.

At that public meeting it was also reported that the Minister had indicated the cost of either of these options being in the range of CI$12 million. Am I now to understand the Minister to be saying that costings have not yet been carried out?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for the Ministry of Tourism, Environment and Transport.

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: As far as the Member's first remarks about Executive Council's approval, as I said, Executive Council has been appraised of each step I have taken. I did not hear any dissent or else I could not go out publicly to say what has been said.

As far as the costing is concerned, there have been all kinds of figures thrown around, and some that I am not satisfied with. In fact, there was no firm costing. Port engineer at the time said $12 million, $10 million, but a lot of things were not considered. Where they said ten acres to be dredged, there are 12 acres. I suspect it would cost more to dredge 12 acres than to dredge ten.

So, all the figures that have been given to me thus far have been just preliminary figures, which is the best word I can use for it. I am trying to get a costing that is firm and decisive.

The Speaker: The Second Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. Alden M. McLaughlin, Jr.: Can the Honourable Minister say whether or not these proposals generally, or one proposal in particular, has the general support of the waterfront merchants?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for the Ministry of Tourism, Environment and Transport.

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: Mr. Speaker that is a good question.

Trying to please all the people is a hard thing to do. The Almighty God could not please everybody and they crucified him! I suspect that I will not fare any better. However, there are two factions in George Town talking about the port facilities. There is the present facility, what we term the north and south terminals. Both of them cannot handle the capacity we have, and that we have committed to; therefore, there needs to be facilities to the north. That is my opinion!

The north people say that if we put the terminal at the Watler building, it might give them more opportunity for business. I can understand the people at the present site saying that if we take all the ships away from them they have something to quarrel about. However, no such thing is happening.

The present facilities are going to be enhanced to better cope with what we have and the added capacity or new capacity for additions will expect to go to the north. There are no firm decisions on this yet. This is just looking at the whole thing and trying to please the two sides while at the same time trying not to over-commit the country or the Port Authority with money we do not have.

Yes, there are some factions with the much talked about sea option that included a new cargo facility. Why should we commit to a new cargo facility at a time when the country is down and the income of the Port Authority is down, in fact, not in a good position at all, and the country itself cannot find money to pay its bills?

Why should I commit this country to such expenditure? If any Member of this House from George Town or elsewhere wants this done, then they can make the commitment, but this Minister of tourism will not be making that recommendation. Long term development—yes—a new cargo facility can be looked at. However, I do not see the need for it. In fact, the port is under-utilised. I have asked from January, in fact from December for a plan so we could look at operating the port at night. I have not received that plan as yet.

It is hard to try to please everybody, but that is what I am ending up having to do, and at that, I doubt when the port facility is done everybody is going to be pleased. However, I can assure Members of the House of one thing: present business operators, where they are at the south and central terminal (actually south and north) will not lose any business. In fact, more capacity is being added to that area.

The Speaker: The Elected Member for East End.

Mr. V. Arden McLean: In a previous reply the Minister touched on a port in the East End district, or that is what I believe he meant. I wonder if he can give us an undertaking that before any decision is made that the people will be consulted and their input sought on the placing of a dock in that area if that is within the electoral district of East End.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for the Ministry of Tourism, Environment and Transport.

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: It is proposed as a private sector project. As far as the Port Authority or my responsibility as Minister of transport, environment and responsibility for commerce in general is concerned, certainly from our responsibilities the Member, people from East End, and the public at large . . . we would talk to them. I should say that all the planning requirements would have to be adhered to as well. Certainly that would include consultation with members of planning, the Minister with responsibility for planning and the public.

The Speaker: The Second Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. Alden M. McLaughlin, Jr.: Referring back to the Minister's response to my last supplementary question, I sense that the Minister gets a bit incensed about some of these issues between the various factions in George Town, and I really do not want to provoke him and cause an emotional reaction.

I wonder if the Minister would be so kind as to assure us humble Members on this side of the Floor, that he will consult with us in relation to which decision is taken. The matter is a matter of grave concern within the district of George Town and wider because the merchants come from all over the Island. I would certainly appreciate having assurance that the Minister will consult with Members on this side of the Floor prior to the port authority or government making this critical decision.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for the Ministry of Tourism, Environment and Transport.

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: I thank the Member for his consideration in not provoking or causing any provocation this morning. As far as being incensed, I am only incensed when I see responsible people making greed take away rationality.

I would say to the Member to read the answer again because in the very final sentence I said "I intend to make a presentation to Members of this House once the detailed drawings have been completed and the project costed."

The Speaker: The Second Elected Member for Bodden Town.

Mr. Gilbert A. McLean: In the substantive answer, the Minister spoke about the funding for the proposed project. He has stated that the FCCA has been invited to fund the first phase, and, if not, the alternative would be to increase fees.

Can the Honourable Minister give us an indication of how he would expect the situation to work if the cruise ships funded it and, in the alternative, if government did, what fee structure does he refer to as having to be increased?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for the Ministry of Tourism, Environment and Transport.

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: In discussion with FCCA we discussed it generally because as of yet there are no detailed drawings or final costing. What I put to them was that they build and pay for the building. Of course, Cayman Islands Government through the Port Authority, Environment Department and the various departments connected would monitor. The other option is that we increase the fees.

When the loan is completed, short-term or long-term loan, then if we increase the fee by $4 we keep a portion of the fees. If the fee was increased to $2.50 or $4.50, we would keep $2.00 or $2.50 and retire the balance.

The Speaker: The Second Elected Member for Bodden Town.

Mr. Gilbert A. McLean: Are the fees the Minister is referring to what we commonly refer to as the travel tax, or is he speaking of other fees? The other point I am asking for clarification on is that if the cruise ship companies built the dock, would they be charged a reduced fee, or simply be allowed to use it free of cost with a costing attached each time they came until the money they paid had been covered or utilised?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for the Ministry of Tourism, Environment and Transport.

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: There would be no reduction in fees. The alternative is in the place of an increase, but there would be no reduction. They would pay the same way.

The Speaker: The Second Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman.

Mr. Lyndon L. Martin: Can the Honourable Minister indicate if there is a parallel Cayman Brac port development programme?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for the Ministry of Tourism, Environment and Transport.

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: On my first visit to Cayman Brac it was obvious that some work needed to be done to the dock. I asked for some preliminary costing on what it would take to do that needed repair work.

As far as getting cruise visitors to Cayman Brac, I am in discussion with FCCA to see how we can utilise and improve the cruise ship scheduling for Cayman Brac.

The Speaker: The Elected Member for East End.

Mr. V. Arden McLean: The Minister spoke about the two options for FCCA. I understand that if they take the option of financing the dock, the CI Government would increase the rental rates to use the dock, and then we would pay them back the financing through that manner. I also understood from what he said that if the Government financed it, then we would have to increase the cost to the cruise liners. Now, if they finance it, how much would be coming back to the Cayman Islands? Would we increase the cost for using the dock? If not, would the Minister say that if we are not increasing it based on FCCA financing it and we have to pay them back, would there be a reduction in fees from a total at the end of the day from the cruise liners?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for the Ministry of Tourism, Environment and Transport.

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: Let me repeat what I said earlier as to the way forward. We are in discussions with FCCA. The discussions, so far, have focused on FCCA building facilities. If they build, all the relevant departments would do the monitoring here. If they do not want to build, then we increase the fees. If we increase the fees by let us say $4 and we borrow the funds (we would have to borrow funds) part of the $4 would be reduced at the end of the loan period; let us say $2.50, $2.00 would be retired. The Cayman Islands Port Authority would keep $2. If we borrow the money, after the loan is paid, then the Cayman Islands Government would keep a portion of the increased fee.

The Speaker: The Elected Member for East End.

Mr. V. Arden McLean: Can the Honourable Minister explain if FCCA finances the dock, and rightfully we would have to pay them back, how would we pay them back for that financing of the dock?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for the Ministry of Tourism, Environment and Transport.

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: Can the Member repeat that question?

The Speaker: The Elected Member for East End, please repeat your question.

Mr. V. Arden McLean: If FCCA finances the dock, and rightfully we would have to pay them back, how would we pay them back for that financing of the dock?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for the Ministry of Tourism, Environment and Transport.

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: There is no intention of repaying them if they build.

The Speaker: The Elected Member for East End.

Mr. V. Arden McLean: I wonder if the Minister can tell us how that would work because the last figure I heard was $12 million and there is a possibility we are speaking about $12 to $20 million, I am not sure but somewhere in that range. If FCCA puts that kind of money into this country to build us a dock that will hopefully last another 50 or 60 years, how are they going to recoup that kind of money, or are they that generous to just throw that kind of money in because of the amount of profit they are going to get off the passengers coming to our country?

Pardon me, Mr. Speaker, but I think I am a little bit confused here.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for the Ministry of Tourism, Environment and Transport.

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: Yes, Mr. Speaker, I agree that the Member is very much confused.

I am trying to explain to the Member that if we borrowed funds, I would increase the fee to FCCA. If FCCA builds, we are not paying them. I think the Member got the wrong impression that the facilities were going to cost $12 million. The $12 million figure thrown around was not just for the cruise facilities; it included the cargo facility also.

We are talking to FCCA in regard to cruise facilities only. That would not cost $12 million. Okay?

The Speaker: The Elected Member for East End.

Mr. V. Arden McLean: I am glad the Minister is now getting to the point where I am no longer confused because he will recognise that it was his answers that confused me.

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: Yeah?

Mr. V. Arden McLean: Regardless of how much the passenger liner docking facility is going to cost, if FCCA finances that, is he saying that the Cayman Islands will not have to pay them back?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for the Ministry of Tourism, Environment and Transport.

[long pause while the Hon. Minister had discussion off microphone]

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: All I can say to the Member in addition to what I have said is that if FCCA builds there will be no increase to them. That is the partnership between the public and private sector we have been talking about. If we have to build, we will increase fees to them. That is the investment in the whole thing.

I would say to Members that we are fresh in negotiations. We do not have final costing, drawings or any final agreement. We are still in negotiation. I do not think it will do us any good to continue in this line. I have said everything in every way, shape or form that I could say.

The Speaker: That concludes Question Time for this morning.

Item 4, Government Business, Bills. Before calling for First Reading I would appreciate in accordance with Standing Order 86 the suspension of Standing Order 46(1) and (2) to proceed with these Bills as the gazetting process has not been completed.

The Honourable Minister for Planning, Communications and Works.

Hon. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. This is to facilitate First Readings, and I will move the suspension in a second, but if you will permit me . . . recognising that Members may not have had sufficient time to debate the Bills is why we are only asking for First Readings today. So, Members will have time between now and when we resume to be able to debate or discuss issues surrounding these Bills if necessary.

As per your instructions, Sir, I move the suspension of Standing Order 46(1) and (2).

SUSPENSION OF STANDING ORDER 46(1) AND (2)

[Moved by Hon Minister for Planning, Communications and Works]

QUESTION PUT. AGREED: STANDING ORDER 46 (1) AND (2) SUSPENDED.

The Speaker: Bills, First Reading.

GOVERNMENT BUSINESS

ADJOURNMENT

Hon. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Mr. Speaker, in order to be able to attend the various topics to be discussed and the discussions that will ensue during the course of the rest of the week at the Human Rights Symposium, I think it is by consensus the wish of all Members that the adjournment take place until Monday morning. I therefore, move the adjournment of this Honourable House until Monday 17 September at 10 am.

The Speaker: The question is that this Honourable House do now adjourn until 17 September at 10 am. Those in favour, please say Aye. Those against, No.

AYES.

The Speaker: The Ayes have it.

AT 12.07 PM THE HOUSE STOOD ADJOURNED
UNTIL 10 AM MONDAY, 17 SEPTEMBER 2001.

OFFICIAL HANSARD REPORT
MONDAY
17 SEPTEMBER 2001
11.04
Fifth Sitting

The Speaker: Good morning. I will invite the Honourable Minister responsible for the Ministry of Education, Human Resources and Culture to say prayers.

PRAYERS

Hon. Roy Bodden: Let us pray:

Almighty God, from whom all wisdom and power are derived: We beseech Thee so to direct and prosper the deliberations of the Legislative Assembly now assembled, that all things may be ordered upon the best and surest foundations for the glory of Thy Name and for the safety, honour and welfare of the people of these Islands.

Bless our Sovereign Lady, Queen Elizabeth II; the Queen Mother; Philip, Duke of Edinburgh; Charles, Prince of Wales; and all the Royal family. Give grace to all who exercise authority in our Commonwealth, that peace and happiness, truth and justice, religion and piety may be established among us. Especially we pray for the Governor of our Islands, the Speaker of the Legislative Assembly, Official Members and Ministers of Executive Council and Members of the Legislative Assembly, that we may be enabled faithfully to perform the responsible duties of our high office.

All this we ask for Thy great Name's sake. Let us say the Lord's Prayer together: Our Father, who art in Heaven, Hallowed be Thy Name. Thy Kingdom come, Thy will be done on earth as it is in Heaven. Give us this day our daily bread, and forgive us our trespasses, as we forgive those who trespass against us. Lead us not into temptation, but deliver us from evil. For Thine is the Kingdom, the power and the glory, forever and ever. Amen.

The Lord bless us and keep us. The Lord make His face shine upon us and be gracious unto us. The Lord lift up the light of His countenance upon us and give us peace, now and always. Amen.

Proceedings resumed at 11.07 am

The Speaker: Proceedings are resumed.

Item number 2 on today's Order Paper, the Administration of Oaths or Affirmations. Oath of Allegiance to Mr. Donovan W. Ebanks, MBE, to be the Acting Temporary Honourable First Official Member responsible for the Portfolio of Internal and External Affairs.

Mr. Ebanks, would you come forward to the Clerk's table, please? Would all Members please stand?

ADMINISTRATION OF OATHS OR AFFIRMATIONS

OATH OF ALLEGIANCE

(Mr. Donovan W. F. Ebanks, MBE)

Mr. Donovan W. F. Ebanks: I, Donovan Ebanks, do swear that I will be faithful and bear true allegiance to Her Majesty Queen Elizabeth II, her heirs and successors according to law, so help me God.

The Speaker: Mr. Ebanks, on behalf of all Honourable Members I welcome you to this Honourable House for the term of your service. Please take your seat as the Honourable Acting First Official Member.

Administration of Oath, Oath of Allegiance to Mr. Samuel Bulgin, Solicitor General, to be the Acting Honourable Second Official Member responsible for the Portfolio of Legal Administration.

Mr. Bulgin, would you come forward to the Clerk's table? Would all Honourable Members please stand?

OATH OF ALLEGIANCE

(Mr. Samuel Bulgin)

Mr. Samuel Bulgin: I, Samuel Bulgin, do swear that I will be faithful and bear true allegiance to Her Majesty Queen Elizabeth II, her heirs and successors according to law, so help me God.

The Speaker: Mr. Bulgin on behalf of all Honourable Members I welcome you to this House for the time of your service. Please take your seat as the Honourable Acting Second Official Member.

Please be seated.

Item number 3 on today's Order Paper, Reading by the Speaker of Messages and Announcements.

READING BY THE HONOURABLE
SPEAKER OF MESSAGES
AND ANNOUNCEMENTS

COMMERCIAL AIRLINE ATTACKS IN THE UNITED STATES OF AMERICA ON TUESDAY
11 SEPTEMBER 2001

The Speaker: On behalf of all Honourable Members of the Legislative Assembly of the Cayman Islands, we join Nations of the world to express our shock and deep sorrow at the most tragic loss of lives and suffering of the people during the terror attacks of New York, Washington DC and Philadelphia, in the United States of America on the morning of Tuesday, 11 September 2001. The loss and suffering of all innocent lives is an intolerable act of human kind. The terror lingers on for loved ones who have lost family members, friends and those who live with the hope that some may still be found.

Would all Members please stand? As we stand in a moment of silence, let us pray for the repose of the lost souls, for those still unfound and for the family members of all. Through the grace of God may the living overcome this enormous tragedy and bring peace to the hearts of all mankind. We shall observe one minute of silence.

THE HOUSE STOOD FOR A MINUTE OF SILENCE

The Speaker: Please be seated.

Item 4—Statements by Honourable Ministers and Official Members of the Government. Statement in regard to the four Commercial Airline Attacks in the United States of America on Tuesday 11 September 2001 by the Honourable Minister responsible for Planning, Communications and Works.

STATEMENTS BY MINISTERS/MEMBERS OF THE GOVERNMENT

STATEMENT IN REGARD TO THE FOUR COMMERCIAL AIRLINE ATTACKS IN THE UNITED STATES OF AMERICA ON TUESDAY 11 SEPTEMBER 2001

Hon. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Six days later, the entire world is still reeling from the shock of the wicked and dreadful act of mindless hostility inflicted on the people of the United States of America and, indeed the world.

I know, Sir, my colleagues in this Honourable House would like to join the Government in publicly expressing the profound horror experienced by the people of the Cayman Islands since learning of these terrorist attacks. Our thoughts and prayers are with the people of the United States of America at this time, and indeed the many families who have lost loved ones and friends. It appears, Mr. Speaker, that there may well be some six thousand lives lost between the passengers in the four aircrafts which were hijacked and used in the attacks along with occupants in the buildings and the brave souls who rushed to their aid.

It is interesting to note that of the souls lost are individuals from some forty countries, and this is clear indication of the far reaching effects of this terrible chapter in World History. We know that President Bush and his chain of command will have the judgment, the strength and the resolve to do what is necessary to correct this heinous wrong to civilization.

The Government and people of these Islands stand ready to assist in righting this grievous wrong in any way we can, and we fully associate ourselves with the larger goal of eliminating terrorism.

I know that the Caymanian People have already taken the initiative to set up tangible means by which financial contributions to the valiant firefighters and police of the State of New York can be made. There have been many church services and other signals of support shown here on our Islands over the past few days.

I would like to express my gratitude to the Cayman Ministers Association for organizing the prayer service to be held on the lawns of the Courts Building at 12.30 today. This will be a real opportunity for our office workers and people from all walks of life in the Cayman Islands to come together and show our true support for our neighbours, an opportunity to grieve with them.

Mr. Speaker, just as we find imperfection in ourselves and our fellow man, we may also find imperfection in the United States, but the truth is she is a beacon of idealism, democracy, and prosperity to a world that still has many dark places. We trust her to lead the way relentlessly, but not recklessly, because adherence to her founding principles is what will seal her greatness.

We must all stand with her and say to the dark forces of terror, injustice and inhumanity: "You cannot and will not prevail; we will not yield or surrender, and we shall overcome."

So from these "Dear verdant Islands set in blue Caribbean Sea," this short but fervent prayer: "God keep us safe here in the Cayman Islands, God save the Queen, and God bless the United States of America".

The Speaker: A statement in regard to three Afghanistan nationals living on Grand Cayman since 22 August 2000, by the Honourable Temporary First Official Member.

STATEMENT IN REGARD TO THREE AFGHANISTAN NATIONALS LIVING ON GRAND CAYMAN SINCE 22 AUGUST 2000

Hon. Donovan W. F. Ebanks: Mr. Speaker, I certainly endorse the remarks that you and the Leader of Government Business have just made. I would like to expand slightly on the Government's commitment to assisting in any way possible the investigative efforts of the US authorities as they seek to determine all those who may have played a part in these tragic events.

Mr. Speaker, the Government issued a statement on Thursday last in relation to the three alleged Afghans who remain in the Cayman Islands, and specifically in light of an unsigned letter that had been passed to me as Acting Chief Secretary on 6 September.

Over the weekend, some US media picked up on the issues of these three individuals and that letter. A more detailed statement was released yesterday morning. This statement was released both locally and overseas. At our request, a copy was also forwarded yesterday by the UK Embassy in Washington to the US State Department.

Turning more specifically now to the matter of the investigations of the US authorities who were on Island, and as communicated in our statement of yesterday morning, I can reiterate that those US individuals left the Cayman Islands on Saturday afternoon.

While here, they received complete cooperation and were provided with all documents and relevant information regarding the three men. It is expected that this information will be conveyed to the relevant US authorities investigating Tuesday's tragic terrorist attack on the US.

The Government remains committed to assisting, in any way possible, in the establishment of whether there was any connection between those events and the three alleged Afghans currently being held here.

It is hoped that, at the very least, these investigations will result in a definitive identification of the three individuals, thereby aiding local efforts to make a determination on their status in these Islands. It should be pointed out however, that it is not known how quickly the US investigating authorities will give the Government a determination on the information that has been gathered, nor is it reasonable to expect an immediate indication, given the thousands of leads which have been reported to US investigators. The Government stands ready to provide any further assistance in this matter.

Finally, Mr. Speaker, on a personal note, let me say to Honourable Members and to the public that I acknowledge the undesired publicity my decision has generated. I do not consider the fact that the writer of the letter has been adamant that its suggestions were mere speculation on his part as vindication of my decision.

Having said that, Mr. Speaker, I would obviously be the first to acknowledge that had I had the benefit of the 20/20 vision that only hindsight brings, I certainly would have made a different decision. However, life cannot be lived in hindsight.

I am grateful for those who appreciate and respect the decision I took, and I also respect the views of those who differ. Life, and in particular the roles that I have been afforded the opportunity to fill in service to the people of these Islands, consistently requires the making of judgements and decisions. I have always made those, and will continue to do so, to the best of my ability. Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

Dr. Frank S. McField: Mr. Speaker, may I ask a brief question on the statement made by the Honourable Acting First Official Member?

The Speaker: A very short question please, Third Elected Member for George Town.

SHORT QUESTIONS

Standing Order 30(2)

Dr. Frank S. McField: Mr. Speaker, I guess we must be in a hurry to get someplace.

I would like to ask the Member if the British Government is, at this time, playing any role in trying to ascertain if the position the Afghans have been presenting to the Cayman Government about themselves is correct.

The Speaker: The Honourable Temporary First Official Member.

Hon. Donovan W. F. Ebanks: Mr. Speaker, the British Government has been aware of the presence of the three individuals since their arrival. They have consistently been involved in our effort to arrive at an identification of who these individuals are.

The Speaker: I do not wish to prolong this.

The Third Elected Member for George Town.

Dr. Frank S. McField: Mr. Speaker, I appreciate that we are dealing with situations which are important to our people. Since the Member has been so kind to give us an opportunity to ask a question, I would like to know if the British Government is approaching this issue with the same amount of seriousness the US Government has approached it, by actively sending persons from the Embassy in Kingston to interview the three Afghans here. Are any follow up visits from Interpol or the relevant services in Britain expected that would do this sort of investigation?

The Speaker: The Honourable Temporary First Official Member.

Hon. Donovan W. F. Ebanks: Mr. Speaker, I am not currently aware of any intention on the part of the British Government to do anything that parallels the recent visit of the individuals from the US Embassy in Kingston. That does not mean that something may not develop during the course of this week. However, as I speak, I am not aware of any intention on their part to do a similar visit.

The Speaker: The Second Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. Alden M. McLaughlin, Jr: Mr. Speaker, these three individuals have been on our shores for over one year now. The efforts to ascertain their identity has not met with much success. As this is a matter that affects foreign affairs and international security, can the Acting Honourable First Official Member say why the UK has not assumed responsibility for these individuals?

The Speaker: The Honourable Temporary First Official Member.

Hon. Donovan W. F. Ebanks: Mr. Speaker, while there has been involvement and support from the UK, there has been no offer and I would not anticipate one, by the UK to take responsibility for the three individuals, as the Member referred to. We are hopeful that the current circumstances will expedite the identification of the three persons and in turn our ability to take a decision in respect of their continued presence here.

The Speaker: The Second Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. Alden M. McLaughlin, Jr: Mr. Speaker, Can the Honourable Member say whether or not this is a matter for which the UK has responsibility; a matter within the reserve powers of the UK kept by the UK when they granted us our current Constitution?

The Speaker: The Honourable Temporary First Official Member.

Hon. Donovan W. F. Ebanks: Mr. Speaker, the matter of the three individuals is certainly a matter that falls under the Governor's responsibility.

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman.

Mrs. Julianna Y. O'Connor-Connolly: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. In a response to one of the questions, I think I am correct in saying that he said the UK has not offered to take responsibility for these three Afghans. My question is has the Government of the Cayman Islands initiated a request to the UK Government through His Excellency the Governor, and if so, at what time.

The Speaker: The Honourable Temporary First Official Member.

Hon. Donovan W. F. Ebanks: Mr. Speaker, I know of no request to the British Government to take responsibility for these three individuals. I think that most of us are aware of the arrangements which have applied in the past in respect of other persons who have arrived here through inappropriate or not proper means. In the past they have been solely to our account to deal with. The British Government has afforded assistance in making arrangement in providing information, but certainly to my knowledge, has not offered to go beyond that. I know of no request that has been made that would seek to take the arrangement or responsibility any further.

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman.

Mrs. Julianna Y. O'Connor-Connolly: Mr. Speaker, since it can be implied by his response that the Cayman Islands Government has to date taken and had financial responsibility for these three Afghans, I wonder if he is in a position or would care to say if the aggregate cost to the government of the Cayman Islands and whether or not such expenditure was budgeted for.

The Speaker: The Honourable Temporary Acting First Official Member.

Hon. Donovan W. F. Ebanks: Mr. Speaker, I am in no position to say what the aggregate cost is. I am relatively confident in saying that no budgetary provision was sought in relation to these three individuals in particular, having arrived here last August. Certainly the expectation that we have been living with is that we would be able to move them along.

We would not have been planning for their long term presence including making budgetary provisions to facilitate a long term presence.

The Speaker: No further questions?

Moving on to statements by the Honourable Minister responsible for Tourism, Environment and Transport.

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: Taking cognisance of the overwhelming uncertainty existing in the tourism environment since Tuesday 11 September, we are moving forward taking short and longer term plans to deal with the possible economic fallout and have agreed to set up a committee of which the terms of reference are as follows:

- 1) To assess the current local and international socioeconomic environment impacting our tourism industry and the broader economy;
- 2) To identify expected implications for the Cayman Islands; and
- 3) To recommend initial response action plans as appropriate within seven days of the first meeting derived from the outcome of 1) and 2) above and on a regular basis until such time as the economic conditions have stabilised.

The appointed membership would be as follows: the Commissioner of Police, all utility companies Caribbean Utilities Company (CUC), the Water Company, Cable and Wireless (C&W) and the Water Authority, the Contractors' Association, media, airlines, banking, Mr. Tim Ridley, a lawyer; Government's Finance and Development Department; the Chamber of Commerce, Mr. Burns Connolly; Insurance, Mr. Donnie Scott; and from the Tourism Industry, Martin Van Der Laan from the Marriott; Randy Pringle, from the Treasure Island Resorts; Mark Bastiste, of the Hyatt; Derrigton Miller, who would chair the committee; Miss Pilar Bush, from the Department of Tourism; Rod McDowell, from the Cayman Tourism Association; Ron Kipp who chairs the Government's Tourism Action Committee; Mr. Ronnie Anglin, Mr. Donnie Smith, Mr. Richard Smith, Civil Aviation Authority; Mr. Paul Hurlstone of the Port. Thank you.

The Speaker: The Second Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman.

Mr. Lyndon L. Martin: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Would the Minister of Tourism be willing to accept a member from the Sister Islands?

The Speaker: Honourable Minister?

Hon. W. McKeever Bush: Mr. Speaker, we omitted to say Cayman Brac, although we have it through the chairman of Cayman Islands Tourism Association (CITA).

The Speaker: No other questions?

A statement by the Honourable Minister responsible for the Ministry of Tourism, Environment and Transport. Amendment to the Marine Conservation Regulation.

Hon. W. McKeever Bush: Mr. Speaker, do you wish for me to do that now? I think I am down for later, on the Presentation of Papers and Reports.

The Speaker: I have it here as a statement and as tabling of the Report laying on the Table. Whichever you prefer, we can also defer it until later.

Hon. W. McKeever Bush: Mr. Speaker, I prefer to do it as a Presentation of Papers because it is not a Report and I will make my statement at that time. Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Is that all right?

The Speaker: Fine.

READING BY THE HONOURABLE SPEAKER OF MESSAGES AND ANNOUNCEMENTS

APOLOGIES

The Speaker: I would like to tender apologies for absence from the Honourable First Official Member responsible for Internal and External Affairs and from the Honourable Second Official Member responsible for Legal Administration who are off the Island.

Presentation of Papers and Reports. The Health Insurance (Amendment) Regulations 2001 by the Honourable Minister responsible for the Ministry of Health and Information Technology.

PRESENTATION OF PAPERS AND REPORTS

THE HEALTH INSURANCE (AMENDMENT) REGULATIONS 2001

Hon. Linford A. Pierson: I beg to lay on the Table of this Honourable House the Health Insurance (Amendment) Regulations 2001.

The Speaker: So ordered. Do you wish to speak to it?

Hon. Linford A. Pierson: Mr. Speaker, there is a Government Motion 9/01 that deals with the Health Insurance Law 1997 and the Health Insurance (Amendment) Regulation 2001. I will reserve my comments until we get to that Motion. Thank you.

The Speaker: Item No. 2 - White Paper - The Health Practitioners Bill 2001 to be laid on the Table by the Honourable Minister responsible for the Ministry of Health and Information Technology.

THE HEALTH PRACTITIONERS BILL 2001

Hon. Linford A. Pierson: I beg to lay on the Table of this Honourable House a Bill for a Law to provide for the establishment of a Health Practice Board and Councils for doctors and dentists, nurses and midwives, pharmacists and professions allied with medicine to provide for the registration of members of those professions and for regulating their professional education and conduct to appeal the Health Practitioner's Law (1995R) and for incidental and connected purposes.

The Speaker: So ordered. Do you wish to speak to it?

Hon. Linford A. Pierson: Mr. Speaker, today I wish to present to Members of this Honourable House the Draft Health Practitioners' Bill, 2001. It is intended to be for wide and open discussion by Members of the Legislative Assembly, health professionals and members of the public.

Mr. Speaker, a Draft Health Practitioners' Bill was first tabled in the Legislative Assembly in 1998 for discussion and feedback. That draft bill was significantly revised due to the feedback received and has resulted in the current Draft Health Practitioners' Bill, 2001.

It is just about ready to be passed into law due to the wide consultation and revision that has taken place in the intervening years. However, I am taking one further opportunity to invite input for final revisions to be made before I present a Bill to the Legislative Assembly in November 2001 to be passed into law.

At this time the Draft Health Practitioners' Bill, 2001 is being reviewed by the following groups:

- ◆ The Health Practitioners' Board;
- ◆ The Cayman Islands Medical and Dental Society;
- ◆ The Cayman Islands Nurses Association;

- ◆ Senior Managers of the Government's Health Services; and
- ◆ Other professionals who have asked to see the Draft Bill.

The Ministry will consider the feedback received and make necessary revisions to the Draft Health Practitioners' Bill, 2001 before presenting it to the Legislative Assembly to be passed into law.

It is intended that the new Law will replace the Health Practitioners' Law (1995 Revision) which was passed in 1974 and is no longer effective to regulate the provision of health care services in these Islands.

The new Law will ensure that the health of the public is protected and promoted through more detailed and sophisticated regulation of health professionals and institutions in which health services are provided.

Under the new Law there will be a Health Practice Board, which shall be responsible for, among other things, advising the Minister on policy relating to health practice in the Islands; the supervision of four new Councils; the licensing and supervision of health care facilities; the periodic inspection of hospitals and clinics and the hearing of appeals from the Councils. The Government's health care facilities will also be subject to inspection.

There will be four Councils who shall be mainly responsible for regulating the professions. Doctors and dentists will be registered by the Medical and Dental Council; nurses and midwives by the Nursing and Midwifery Council; pharmacists by the Pharmacists Council and all other health professionals, such as physiotherapists and osteopaths, will be registered by the Council for Professions Allied with Medicine.

Each of the four Councils will be responsible for ensuring that only properly qualified and experienced health professionals are permitted to provide health care services in the Islands.

As well as regulating who can provide health care services the Councils will be responsible for promoting professional education and ensuring that good professional conduct is maintained. Professional misconduct could result in suspension or removal from registration. Rights of appeal will exist in respect of decisions taken by the Councils.

After this Bill is passed and the new Councils are established there will be a period of time, of approximately 6 months in which the Councils will formulate and set criteria for recognition of qualifications acceptable for practice in the Cayman Islands.

In this regard Mr. Speaker, I am fully expecting that a wider and more relevant set of criteria than those presently applied will come into effect, as it is essential that we in the Cayman Islands keep up-to-date with modern trends in the provision of healthcare. Thereafter all applicants for registration will be expected to comply with the criteria set by the relevant Councils. Practitioners who are currently fully registered for practice under the present Law and who meet, in full, the requirements for registration in force immediately prior to the enactment of this Law will be eligible for registration. Each Council will keep one register for each of the different health care professions for which the Council is responsible, and every register will contain four lists.

For example, the principal list of the Medical and Dental Council's register will contain the names of the doctors and dentists who are judged by the Council to be properly qualified, and who are Caymanian or otherwise able lawfully to work as doctors in the Islands. The visiting practitioners list of each register will contain the names of the health care professionals who visit the Islands for short periods to supplement the normally available range of health care services.

The two other lists in each register will be the overseas list and the provisional list. The overseas list will contain the names of the expatriate doctors, nurses and so on who are judged as being properly qualified and experienced to work in their profession and who want to do so but cannot work in the Islands as they have not obtained a work permit. The provisional list will contain the names of all persons who are registered to complete internships in the Islands and this list will allow the Councils to identify future Caymanian doctors, nurses and so on.

The Bill also provides for the certification and regulation of private health care facilities by the Health Practice Board. Clause 42 of the Bill contains provisions to protect the public from people falsely or fraudulently claiming to be registered health practitioners. It will be an offence to practise as a health practitioner unless properly registered by the appropriate Council. It will also be an offence to obstruct a Council by refusing to give documents or other information required by the Council to carry out its registration functions under the Law.

The details of the Constitution of the Councils, the manner in which they will operate and the rules governing their supervisory and disciplinary functions over practitioners will be set out in regulations made pursuant to the Law.

Mr. Speaker, I would once again remind Members of this Honourable House that this Draft Bill has been the subject of wide professional and public consultation in the Islands, including with members of the current Health Practitioners Board and representatives of the health professions. It is part of the framework for the better provision of health care in the Islands and necessary in order to keep abreast of modern times.

I am therefore inviting Honourable Members, health professionals and the general public to give the proposed Bill close scrutiny, and to let the Ministry of Health have your concerns and suggestions as soon as possible. All feedback received will be considered by the Ministry, with the able assistance of medico-legal consultant Dr. Roy Palmer. Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: The Report of the Agricultural and Industrial Development Board for the year ending 31 December 1998, 31 December 1999 and 31 December 2000.

The Honourable Minister of Tourism, Environment and Transport.

THE REPORT OF THE AGRICULTURAL AND INDUSTRIAL DEVELOPMENT BOARD FOR THE YEAR ENDING 31 DECEMBER 1998

THE REPORT OF THE AGRICULTURAL AND INDUSTRIAL DEVELOPMENT BOARD FOR THE YEAR ENDING 31 DECEMBER 1999

THE REPORT OF THE AGRICULTURAL AND INDUSTRIAL DEVELOPMENT BOARD FOR THE YEAR ENDING 31 DECEMBER 2000

THE AUDITED FINANCIAL STATEMENTS OF THE HOUSING DEVELOPMENT CORPORATION FOR THE YEAR ENDED 31 DECEMBER 2000

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: I beg to lay on the Table of this Honourable House the following documents: The Report of the Agricultural and Industrial Development Board for the year ending 31 December 1998; The Report of the Agricultural and Industrial Development Board for the year ending 31 December 1999; The Report of the Agricultural and Industrial Development Board for the year ending 31 December 2000; and The Audited Financial Statements of the Housing Development Corporation for the year ended 31 December 2000.

The Speaker: So ordered.

Do you wish to speak to them?

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: No, Mr. Speaker, but I would like to say for the years 1998, 1999 and 2000 the Government at the time forgot that they had to table these Reports.

The Speaker: Do you wish to speak to the Housing Development Corporation?

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: No, Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: White Paper – The Information and Communications Technology Authority Bill 2001 to be laid on the Table by the Honourable Minister responsible for the Ministry of Health and Information Technology.

THE INFORMATION AND COMMUNICATIONS TECHNOLOGY AUTHORITY BILL 2001

Hon. Linford A. Pierson: I beg to lay on the Table of this Honourable House a Bill for a Law to establish the information and Communication's Technology Authority, to divest properly in the Authority and for incidental and connected purposes.

The Speaker: So ordered.

Do you wish to speak to it?

Hon. Linford A. Pierson: Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

The way we do business as a government and as a country, has forever been changed. We now live in a digital age. Hence there is the need to review and amend or produce legislation to keep pace with the changing technology. Take for example the Telephone, Broadcasting and Radio Laws. After reviewing these Laws I am now recommending that they be subsumed under a new Law to be called the Information Communications Technology Law.

In anticipation of this, a draft Information Communications Technology Bill, 2001 has been prepared. This Bill would replace the laws previously mentioned, which have proven ineffective in regulating the provision of modern information and communications technology (ICT) services and networks for the Cayman Islands.

The draft Bill establishes a single, independent regulatory body, which would be called the Information Communications Technology Authority. This Authority would be responsible for the licensing and regulation of all Information Communication Technology services defined in this draft Bill or in the Electronic Transactions Law 2000. This would include all telecommunications, radio and broadcasting matters, together with E-business related matters such as information security service providers, data protection, codes of conduct for E-business service providers, and the administration of the Cayman Internet domain 'ky'. The draft Bill would amend the Electronic Transactions Law accordingly.

There is such an overlap between the various technologies involved that a single authority, staffed by specialists from each area, would provide more coordinated and consistent regulation. In addition, a single authority would operate more efficiently and cost-effectively than a number of separate regulatory bodies. This approach is fully consistent with that currently in the process of being adopted in the United Kingdom and other jurisdictions. It was recommended in the National Strategic Plan (Vision 2008), and has been strongly endorsed by the e-Business Advisory Board, which was appointed under the Electronic Transactions Law, 2000.

The responsibilities of the Authority as detailed in Section 9(3) of the draft Bill would be:

- (a) to advise the Minister on ICT matters;
- (b) to investigate and resolve complaints from consumers and service providers concerning the provision of ICT services and ICT networks;
- (c) to determine the categories of licence to be issued;
- (d) to license, manage, and regulate ICT services and ICT networks;

(e) to collect all fees, including licence fees, and any other charges levied under this Law or the Electronic Transactions Law 2000 or Regulations;

(f) to resolve disputes concerning the interconnection or sharing of infrastructure between or among ICT service providers or ICT network providers;

(g) to promote and maintain an efficient, economic and harmonised ICT infrastructure;

(h) to act on any matter referred to it by the Minister or the Managing Director; and

(i) to carry out such other functions as are conferred on the Authority by or under this Law or any other Law.

The Authority would comprise a Board and a full-time managing director appointed by the Governor in Council, together with such staff, as the Board considers necessary.

The Bill provides for, but does not mandate, the introduction of competition throughout the Information Communication Technology sector. Individual licences would be required for the operation of each type of information communication technology service or information communication technology network rather than the present requirement for a single licence for each operator. The emphasis would be on delivery method rather than content. This would result in a simplified and unambiguous licensing regime as the various technologies continue to converge.

The interests of consumers will be protected by specifying standards for the delivery of ICT services and ICT networks, providing a complaints procedure, and introducing measures to ensure their privacy when using ICT services and ICT networks.

The Legislation Subcommittee of the E-Business Advisory Board has drafted the Bill. The Subcommittee consists of representatives of the public and private sectors, and includes representatives of ICT service and network providers.

This draft Bill is therefore being presented to the Members of the Legislative Assembly as a White Paper for the purpose of getting comments from the general public. All responses will be taken into account when finalising the Bill.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: The Marine Conservation (Amendment) Bill 2001 to be laid on the Table by the Honourable Minister responsible for the Ministry of Tourism, Environment and Transport.

AMENDMENTS TO THE MARINE CONSERVATION LAW, REGULATIONS AND DIRECTIVES

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: I beg to lay on the Table of this Honourable House The Marine Conservation (Amendment) Bill 2001.

The Speaker: So ordered.

Do you wish to speak to it?

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: Mr. Speaker, the proposed amending legislation, which I am laying on the Table of this Honourable House today, was the subject of a press conference which I held earlier this year, when I announced Government's intention to bring amendments to the Marine Conservation Law to provide further protection for our fragile marine life and environment.

Mr. Speaker, there are four separate pieces of proposed amending Legislation and these are:

- ◆ A Bill to Amend the Marine Conservation Law (1995 Revision);
- ◆ The Marine Conservation (Marine Parks) (Amendment) Regulations 2001;
- ◆ The Marine Conservation (Amendment) (Fish Pot Licence) Regulations 2001; and
- ◆ The Marine Conservation (Amendment) (Fish Pots) Directives, 2001.

Mr. Speaker, the amending legislation will, among other things limit the taking of conch to five per person or per boat; fish pots will be traditional Caymanian, limited to two per person. The legislation sets a ban on the taking of lobster until the end of 2003 and sets a timeframe on the taking of the Nassau Grouper. A closed season is also set.

There has been some consultation with the people of these Islands on these amendments, and we have concluded it is imperative that we enhance the provisions of our current Marine Laws which have served us well over the years. With the increased number of people in our country comes the increased use or demands on our Marine resources. Mr. Speaker, I am sure that I do not have to remind Honourable Members of this House, how important a healthy marine environment is to the success of our tourism industry and the welfare of our people.

Mr. Speaker, I intend to formally present this amending legislation to this Honourable House during the November Meeting, and the Government would welcome additional comments from the Public on these proposals in the meantime.

I should also advise Honourable Members that I have met with the Cayman National Water-sport Operators and have additional representation from the North Sound operators with respect to specific issues relating to the North Sound. I intend to discuss these matters with the wider public, Government Executive Council and Members of this Honourable House before the committee stage of this Bill to determine the best way forward with respect to addressing concerns of the North Sound operators.

Mr. Speaker, their specific concerns are as follows:

- ◆ Snorkel boats should be required to maintain a certain distance from the reefs and there should be no fishing on specific reefs which are used for snorkeling;
- ◆ The activities on our reefs should be regulated;

- ◆ There should be a maximum speed limit of 7 knots for boats operating in the vicinity of Fisher-man's Rock and the Sandbar;
  - ◆ The operation of boats over shallow reefs such as Coral Gardens, the Barrier Reef, the Aquarium, and the reefs to the east of Coral Gardens and the Aquarium should be prohibited;
  - ◆ The need to establish carrying capacities for the Sandbar and Stingray City;
  - ◆ Close the Sandbar to commercial operations;
  - ◆ Prohibit the feeding of stingrays on the Sandbar and open up another area which is known as "Horseshoe Bar" for this activity;
  - ◆ Consider a ban on the use of spearguns;
  - ◆ Institute a ban on shark feeding; and
  - ◆ Institute a system of licensing of boats operating in the North Sound.
- Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: Do you wish to table the White Paper? (Inaudible response). So ordered.

Do you wish to speak to it further?

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: No, Mr. Speaker. I only ask Members to read the amending legislation and make representation to me. I will hold a meeting with them on the matter before presenting the Bill. I am asking the public to also make representation on these matters, particularly the North Sound concerns.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: Moving on to Item No. 6 on today's Order Paper. Questions to Honourable Ministers and Official Members, but before doing so, according to Standing Order 86 I would ask for the suspension of Standing Order 23 (7) & (8) in order to take question time after 11 am.

The Elected Member for East End.

Mr. V. Arden McLean: I just wondered if I could ask a short question based on that statement he read, which was not a part of the presentation of the Marine Conservation (Amendment) Bill, 2001.

The Speaker: Yes, you may.

SHORT QUESTIONS

Standing Order 30

Mr. V. Arden McLean: The Minister said he has representation from the operators within the North Sound. He discussed the banning of shark feeding. Does that also apply to the East End area as well?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Tourism.

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: We have had much representation and this issue has been raised in the media locally and internationally. The policy would not be just for the North Sound, but for the entire country. As soon as we can discuss it, we will include Members in the matter and all Members will have the opportunity to give their input.

The Speaker: I would appreciate a motion for the suspension of Standing Order 23 (7) and (8) or is it the wish that we go on for 10 minutes and then adjourn, or suspend proceedings for lunch? Could I have a motion?

Hon. Linford A. Pierson: Mr. Speaker, I so move that the relevant Standing Order be suspended so that question time can continue.

The Speaker: In accordance with Standing Order 86 we ask to suspend Standing Order 23 (7) and (8) in order that Question Time will continue after 11 am. Those in favour, please say Aye. Those against, No.

AYES

The Speaker: The Ayes have it.

SUSPENSION OF STANDING ORDER 23(7) AND (8)

[Moved by the Hon Minister for Health and Information Technology]

QUESTION PUT. AGREED: STANDING ORDER 23(7) AND (8) SUSPENDED TO ALLOW QUESTION TIME TO CONTINUE BEYOND 11 AM.

The Speaker: Question 107 standing in the name of the Second Elected Member for Bodden Town.

QUESTIONS TO HONOURABLE MEMBERS/MINISTERS

QUESTION NO. 107

No. 107: Mr. Gilbert A. McLean asked the Honourable Minister responsible for the Ministry of Health and Information Technology what has been done in regard to enacting legislation to prevent invasion of privacy over telecommunication equipment, as per Private Member's Motion No. 2/93 passed by the Legislative Assembly on the 25th day of March 1993.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for the Ministry of Health and Information Technology.

Hon. Linford A. Pierson: Mr. Speaker, first I would like to say that a motion this important was not dealt with before. However, as the responsibility for telecommunications did not fall under my Ministry until last year, I cannot comment on what took place in this connection between March 1993 and August 2000.

As Honourable Members are aware, computer and telecommunications technology has converged to the extent that we must address both when seeking to prevent invasion of privacy by electronic means. The Computer Misuse Law 2000, passed by this Honourable House in August 2000, created a range of offences covering the unauthorised access to, or modification of, information held on a computer system. It also makes the unauthorised use or interception of any function or output of a computer a criminal offence.

The Information and Communications Technology (ICT) Bill 2001, which was just laid on the Table of this Honourable House, will address the questions of invasion of privacy over ICT services, including telecommunications equipment.

Section 44 of this proposed ICT Bill provides that with certain exceptions, a person who intentionally intercepts, alters, replicates, monitors or interrupts any message during its transmission over an ICT network, or by means of an ICT service, is guilty of an offence and is liable on summary conviction to a fine of $10,000 or an indictment to a fine not exceeding $20,000, or to imprisonment for up to two years, or both, for each such message.

The exceptions referred to are contained in section 44(2). The actions have been taken in the following list:-

- ◆ In obedience to a warrant issued by a Judge;
- ◆ Pursuant to a Court order;
- ◆ With the express consent of the originator or recipient of the message;
- ◆ By the ICT Authority for purposes connected with the execution of its functions under the ICT Law (e.g. confirming that a radio station is using only its allocated frequency);
- ◆ For the sole purpose of preserving the technical integrity of an ICT service or ICT network.

SUPPLEMENTARIES

The Speaker: The Second Elected Member for Bodden Town.

Mr. Gilbert A. McLean: It is most encouraging that after eight years the Minister who now has the subject of information technology is acting on doing something about maintaining the privacy of telecommunications.

Presuming that the Bill he presented to the House today will be passed in the next one or two weeks, does the Minister envisage that its implementation of these good legislated sections of that Law will take effect shortly thereafter?

The Speaker: Honourable Minister responsible for the Ministry of Health and Information Technology.

Hon. Linford A. Pierson: I am hopeful that as soon as this Bill is passed into law that the sections the Member referred to will come into effect also.

The Speaker: The Elected Member for East End.

Mr. V. Arden McLean: Can the Honourable Minister say if he is also looking at criminalising the taping of private conversations without consent?

The Speaker: Honourable Minister responsible for the Ministry of Health and Information Technology.

Hon. Linford A. Pierson: The taping without consent or any such interference will be criminalised. As said earlier, and I quote "Section 44 of this proposed ICT Bill provides that with certain exceptions, a person who intentionally intercepts, alters, replicates, monitors or interrupts any message during its transmission over an ICT network, or by means of an ICT service, is guilty of offence and is liable on summary conviction to a fine of $10,000 and on indictment to a fine not exceeding $20,000 or to imprisonment for up to two years, or both, for each such message."

The Speaker: The Elected Member for East End.

Mr. V. Arden McLean: I understand and thank the Minister for that answer, however, that is in regard to ICT networks and ICT service. I was specifically addressing private conversations between two individuals, not necessarily on the telephone or computer, but recording personal conversations between two individuals when permission has not been given.

The Speaker: Honourable Minister responsible for the Ministry of Health and Information Technology.

Hon. Linford A. Pierson: I see what the Member is driving at. This Bill specifically speaks to the question of the information and communication technology, computers, telecommunications and so on. However, I know the Member is looking further a-field—if you are having a private conversation that should not be taped without permission; this is what the Member is looking into.

We will be looking further into that question. If it is not a matter that can be properly brought under this Bill, I would ask the Second Official Member to take note of this query and perhaps look into this matter.

The Speaker: At this time we shall suspended proceeding to enable all Members to attend the Prayer Service organised by the Cayman Ministers' Association at 12.30 pm on the lawns of the Courts Building.

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: If I may, I would like all Members and the Speaker, as is usual, to have their photograph taken with the lovely Miss Cayman who is here for that purpose, on the steps of the Legislative Assembly.

PROCEEDINGS SUSPENDED AT 12.21 PM

PROCEEDINGS RESUMED AT 2.40 PM

The Speaker: Proceedings are resumed. Please be seated.

Continuation of supplementaries on question No. 107. Are there any further supplementaries on question 107 standing in the name of the Second Elected Member for Bodden Town?

If not, we move on to question number 108, also standing in the name of the Second Elected Member for Bodden Town.

QUESTION NO. 108

No. 108: Mr. Gilbert A. McLean asked the Honourable Acting First Official Member responsible for the Portfolio of Internal and External Affairs what progress has been made by the Police in acquiring equipment to measure the decibels of noise, referred to in the Towns and Communities Law (1995 Revision).

The Speaker: The Honourable Acting First Official Member responsible for Internal and External Affairs.

Hon. Donovan W. F. Ebanks: The Royal Cayman Islands Police (RCIP) has acquired the following equipment to measure the decibels of noise referred to in the Town and Communities Law (1995 Revision), section 13(2).

(1) EMCO make analogue decibel meter. This machine relies on human sight recording the peak movement of a finger across a dial. There is no permanent record of the maximum or minimum noise level achieved. Cost is about CI $200 including shipping and duty.

(2) Chauvin Arnous Sonometre, DC830, is a more scientific and professional meter. It has the advantage of time, date and reading over any period of time to be recorded and then evidenced by computer printout; very influential as evidence before a court. Cost of such a unit is approximately CI $1,100 including shipping and duty.

The Royal Cayman Islands Police has recommended that the Chauvin equipment be prescribed for use in the Cayman Islands.

SUPPLEMENTARIES

The Speaker: The Third Elected Member for George Town.

Dr. Frank S. McField: How long ago did the RCIP recommend that this instrument be used in the Cayman Islands?

The Speaker: The Honourable Acting First Official Member responsible for Internal and External Affairs.

Hon. Donovan W. F. Ebanks: That recommendation was made to the Portfolio of Internal and External Affairs approximately two to three weeks ago, certainly less than one month ago.

The Speaker: The Second Elected Member for Bodden Town.

Mr. Gilbert A. McLean: It seems clear that the second option is the better type of equipment to use seeing that it can give the date, time reading and a print-out. Now that a recommendation has been made to the Portfolio, will it be bringing to this House, any time soon, legislation to make it possible to put this equipment into use?

The Speaker: The Honourable Acting First Official Member responsible for Internal and External Affairs.

Hon. Donovan W. F. Ebanks: As I recall, a week and one half ago while responding to a Private Member's Motion on the matter of noise levels, it is intended that Executive Council will very shortly be asked to prescribe the level of noise, method of measurement and the machines for measuring this as the Law currently allows Council to prescribe.

I also indicated then, and will reiterate now, that Council will be asked to consider the unique requirement of the Towns and Communities Law that someone offending is required to be warned initially and an offence is only committed if the person persists. Council will be asked to consider whether that provision of mandatory warning should remain. If the view is that it should not, then as a requirement of the Law a Bill will have to be brought here to seek the approval of the House to amend the Law in that regard.

The Speaker: The Second Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman.

Mr. Lyndon L. Martin: Given the obvious inadequacies of the first analogue meter to comply with the legislation, can the Acting First Official Member indicate why it was acquired?

The Speaker: The Honourable Acting First Official Member responsible for Internal and External Affairs.

Hon. Donovan W. F. Ebanks: The Member refers to it as the obvious inadequacy. I think it is fair to say the other unit is superior, and certainly the unit the RCIP would prefer, but I would not accept that it is inadequate. I think it is possible for us to use it and seek to rely on the evidence as provided by a police officer. To the extent we can provide the court with more substantial evidence we would prefer to go that route.

The Speaker: The Second Elected Member for Bodden Town.

Mr. Gilbert A. McLean: Can the Honourable Member say how many of the second type of units the police have and if money is now provided for the purchase of these units? If not, would the Member consider making a request for such money so that the matter could be addressed as quickly as possible?

The Speaker: The Honourable Acting First Official Member responsible for Internal and External Affairs.

Hon. Donovan W. F. Ebanks: At the moment the police have acquired one of each. They recommended the second machine (Chauvin Arnous Sonometre), and subject to Council's decision when the recommendation is put to it as to whether that is the machine which should be used. The view of the police is that they should obtain at least four of those units.

There is still a role for the first machine, the EMCO. Certainly at the cost of it we could be more widely issued and provide some backup. However, the view of the police is that as a base they should at least have four of the other units for distribution at various police stations in the Islands.

The Speaker: Are there any further supplementaries? If not, we move on to question 109, standing in the name of the First Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman

QUESTION NO. 109

No. 109: Mrs. Julianna Y. O'Connor-Connolly asked the Honourable Acting First Official Member responsible for the Portfolio of Internal and External Affairs to say what progress has been made by the Government in regard to the establishment of "back office" work on Cayman Brac.

The Speaker: The Honourable Acting First Official Member responsible for Internal and External Affairs.

Hon. Donovan W. F. Ebanks: A Report was prepared last year for advancing the "back office" work initiative in Cayman Brac. However, it was predicated by two conditions: (1) the creation of posts for additional staff; (2) the availability of additional office space.

In light of Government's decision to curtail the creation of additional posts in the service and because there was no space available in the District Administration Building, the initiative remains on hold. Whenever the two above-mentioned conditions can be met the initiative can move forward.

SUPPLEMENTARIES

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman.

Mrs. Julianna Y. O'Connor-Connolly: Is the Member in a position to say if there was private sector commercial space available whether or not government would entertain the utilisation of such space?

The Speaker: The Honourable Acting First Official Member responsible for Internal and External Affairs.

Hon. Donovan W. F. Ebanks: It is my understanding that consideration had been given to the securing of such space, but fiscal considerations prevented that option from being taken up. Certainly, that is another means by which the space aspect could be met.

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman.

Mrs. Julianna Y. O'Connor-Connolly: Can the Honourable Member give us some idea as to when this project would be re-initiated?

The Speaker: The Honourable Acting First Official Member responsible for Internal and External Affairs.

Hon. Donovan Ebanks: I cannot give a definitive timeline. It is obvious that both conditions which need to be met revolve around fiscal or financial considerations. I expect that the matter will be revisited perhaps during the upcoming budget process. If there are prospects for those conditions to be met then the project will commence. However, I am unable to give anything more definitive than that.

The Speaker: The Second Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman.

Mr. Lyndon L. Martin: Can the Member indicate if the Report covered only government back office work, or the potential of government encouraging and providing incentives for the private sector to utilise Cayman Brac for back office work?

The Speaker: The Honourable Acting First Official Member responsible for Internal and External Affairs.

Hon. Donovan W. F. Ebanks: I have not seen the Report myself. I have been able to ascertain who did the Report and I will undertake to find out that information and provide it to the Member.

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman.

Mrs. Julianna Y. O'Connor-Connolly: I wonder if the Member is in a position to say who prepared the Report and to whom it should have been directed to.

The Speaker: The Honourable Acting First Official Member responsible for Internal and External Affairs.

Hon. Donovan W. F. Ebanks: My understanding is that it was prepared by the Deputy Financial Secretary. I am not certain who it was circulated or directed to, but I will determine that when speaking to the Deputy Financial Secretary to get the information I have undertaken to provide. I will provide that information to the Lady Member asking the question, if she so wishes.

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman.

Mrs. Julianna Y. O'Connor-Connolly: I would appreciate that undertaking. I also wish to ask if he is in a position to say, since the Deputy Financial Secretary was responsible for preparing the Report, whether or not it was copied to the Chief Secretary's office since the responsibility lies therein, and if not, would he undertake to find out why?

The Speaker: The Honourable Acting First Official Member responsible for Internal and External Affairs.

Hon. Donovan W. F. Ebanks: In determining who the Report was circulated to, I will be cognisant of that and if it is a case that it was not sent to the Chief Secretary I will enquire. I would expect that it was, but I will enquire if that was not the case.

The Speaker: Are there any further supplementaries? If not, we move on to question 110, standing in the name of the Second Elected Member for Bodden Town.

QUESTION NO. 110

No. 110: Mr. Gilbert A. McLean asked the Honourable Minister responsible for the Ministry of Planning, Communications and Works if any major capital works have been initiated this year and, if so, which are they and which are presently outstanding.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Planning, Communications and Works.

Hon. D. Kurt Tibbetts: There are 87 line items in the Capital Budget 2001 which are funded and have Grand Cayman Public Works Department involvement. Twenty-nine of these are financial commitments from projects that were physically completed prior to 2001. This leaves 58 projects and of the remaining 58, ten have been completed in 2001, 28 have construction underway, 14 have work proceeding at a pre-construction stage, that is project definition, design, costing, tender invitation, ordering etc. Six projects have not started.

The list and their categories are attached to the answer and I will take advice as to whether I need to read them.

The Speaker: I would consider that the list is sufficient. Are there any supplementaries? The Second Elected Member for Bodden Town.

SUPPLEMENTARIES

Mr. Gilbert A. McLean: Would it be correct to say that these are relatively small projects that have yet to be, or are currently underway, and were such things as extensions and alterations to buildings, but there is no real large capital projects as such?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Planning, Communications and Works.

Hon. D. Kurt Tibbetts: I want to take the Member's supplementary without reading anything into it except what it says exactly. If I may try to answer: of the 29 projects actually completed prior to 2001 there were some outstanding funds to clear the projects up and get them all sorted which had to be included in the 2001 Budget, I do not have that information about all 20 projects in front of me, but I think some of this might be like retention fees, and monies of that nature.

We have some other projects which were started prior to 2001, but actually were major projects and completed in 2001. For instance, when we look at the ten projects completed in 2001 we see the Lighthouse School, the Red Bay Primary multipurpose Hall. Those were started prior but not all the funding was in the 2000 Budget and a fair portion of the funding was into the 2001 Budget. So, it is a bit difficult to simply categorically say they are all small projects, simply because several projects can be ongoing and there is the odd occasion for funding over a three-year period for the entire project. Therefore, it is a bit difficult to categorise generally, as we say.

If the Member wants to speak to brand new projects, one might want to simply say that the majority of those were smaller projects, for instance the four new classrooms in Bodden Town and the two in Red Bay; those were smaller projects. It is difficult for me to categorise and I hope the Member will understand. If you look at the list, you will probably have a better feel for the magnitude of the projects we are speaking about.

The Speaker: The Second Elected Member for Bodden Town.

Mr. Gilbert A. McLean: The year is almost ended and quite a number of the projects are not completed. Can the Honourable Minister say if there is a problem with financing? It is my recollection that some of these were to be covered from some of the money from a loan the Government was supposed to have taken. Has it been secured and is there money for these?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Planning, Communications and Works.

Hon. D. Kurt Tibbetts: With the capital works programme there is absolutely no problem with funding. The Member will appreciate that the Budget this year did not come until the first quarter was up. We did not have a full year of work to complete some of the projects. However, it was not and is not a situation going through year end where there is not adequate funding. In fact, if there are funds unspent, certainly they will go forward into next year's Capital Works Budget to see the completion of it.

The Speaker: The Elected Member for East End.

Mr. V. Arden McLean: Under the 28 line items currently under construction, budget line item 124, development roads programme Crewe Road Bypass, can the Minister tell us why that construction seems to have been halted or suspended on that project?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Planning, Communications and Works.

The Elected Member for East End do you wish to clarify your question?

Mr. V. Arden McLean: Yes, Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: Please do.

Mr. V. Arden McLean: Mr. Speaker, I was asking the Minister if he could explain the reason why work seems to have been suspended on the Crewe Road Bypass, since he said that there are funds available for the project. Why has construction been suspended or ceased?

Hon. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Perhaps there seems to have been some inactivity for a while at the Crewe Road Bypass. There were some difficulties with settlements of claims. During that time the workforces were diverted rather than to waste time and effort. In fact, many of the PWD crew, the vast majority, if not all of them, were placed on various district projects. That has been ongoing during the interim.

We are at one impasse now and if the matter is not settled this week we will have to deal with it in the manner in which I do not especially like, but will have no choice with regards to moving on with the Crewe Road Bypass. As soon as the district programmes are complete, which are nearly done now, the rest of the year will be spent on the Crewe Road Bypass.

There is plan A and plan B. Plan A is definitely to have it to the intersection of Lyndhurst Drive. Hopefully we will be able to get it to Bobby Thompson Way. However it is between Lyndhurst Drive intersection and Bobby Thompson Way where the problems are with the settlements. I am hopeful that we will get something sorted before this week is out, but if not, I will have no choice but to activate the assessment committee and then whatever the result of that is we will continue.

I am trying to see if settlement can be reached without having to become distasteful in the process. We have the assessment committee ready to be activated, if necessary.

The Speaker: The Third Elected Member for Bodden Town.

Mr. Anthony S. Eden: Continuing on item 124, I would encourage him to have this expedited because it is an absolute nightmare coming from the eastern districts in the morning.

It was mentioned in the paper also in regard to a roundabout in the area of Hurley's. Is there any way that can be expedited? I know they are talking about doing it this year, but I know this is one main cause of backup in that area.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Planning, Communications and Works.

Hon. D. Kurt Tibbetts: I appreciate what the Member has said. I travel that road every day myself. The question is not whether we would like to expedite the situation because we have had many, many meetings trying to resolve the matter. Perhaps I may be seen as one who has too much patience but I do the best given the circumstances to try to bring about amicable settlement. However, we are at the end of the road where it is either going to go one way or the other now.

Just to say, it is not that the crews were not working, the energy was channeled elsewhere. What has to be done to bring it down to Lyndhurst will not be a very difficult task, and it will definitely be done. If this other matter is sorted out this week, it is very possible to get it down to Bobby Thompson Way before the year is out. If we do not get the second stage sorted immediately, it means we have to go through the assessment process, but we will do that as quickly as we can. Hopefully we will not have to go there; we will just have to see what happens.

Regarding the intersection at Hurley's I cannot answer truthfully because I have never been able to find out why it was not a roundabout from the very beginning. I have absolutely no idea why that was not the case because I have seen two or three sets of drawings which all illustrated some type of roundabout. Why it was not done, I have no idea. That was before my time.

I met with the developer of Heron Harbour. We have come to agreement in regard to the usage of the little triangle portion of land left hanging there. He has agreed to make the land available. We have also negotiated payment and sharing the cost and he has met with PWD to discuss the final drawings that have been done. We expect to be able to deal with that fairly shortly.

Depending on how far we get with one is what happens one before the other. The truth is that if we go to Hurley's first, without other relief, I am not sure it is going to make that much of a difference. So, here we are trying to sort the matter out, but there is no intention to not do that. It is just a matter of seeing how far we get. However, within that whole area, those are immediate with regards to the projects. As fast as we can get the web cleared we will proceed, because it is not a question of funding up to that area.

The Speaker: The Fourth Elected Member for West Bay, do you have a question?

Mr. Cline A. Glidden, Jr.: Mr. Speaker, I will give way.

The Speaker: The Third Elected Member for George Town.

Dr. Frank McField: Will the roundabouts be as big as the one by North Sound Road? We have had the experience to see that roundabouts in very large countries are less than half the size of our roundabouts.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Planning, Communications and Works.

Hon. D. Kurt Tibbetts: I do not believe we have that much land mass to deal with in that specific location. The diameter and circumference of the roundabouts are basically decided on by the technicians involved.

Certainly with the experience of other countries, if any advice needs to be heeded, those technicians would be willing to take that on board to make any reassessments. I do not think that will be a problem with this specific situation.

The Speaker: The Elected Member for East End.

Mr. V. Arden McLean: I note there has been some activity on the eastern end of the Crewe Road Bypass by the Lions' Centre. Has there been a design change? If there is a change to a roundabout, what additional cost will be incurred?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Planning, Communications and Works.

Hon. D. Kurt Tibbetts: The area I think the Member is speaking to is by Silver Oaks on Old Crewe Road. Depending on what timeframe the Member is referring to, there has been a slight design change which when all worked out and traffic flows calculated, especially with the change to occur up a Hurley's, there is a slight design change. The paving has not been completed in that area yet. The only cost that might reflect is a little bit of time shifting material; it is not a major cost. It is not tens of thousands of dollars or anything of that nature, but geared towards an improved traffic flow.

As soon as they start working they will complete that and move down, at least to the intersection of Lyndhurst Drive.

The Speaker: The Fourth Elected Member for West Bay.

Mr. Cline A. Glidden Jr.: My question is on the six projects that have not started in 2001. I noted with interest line item 103, Sunrise Centre renovation programme, for some reason there is no clarification for not starting that one. All the others were given a reason for not being started except for that particular project. Can the Minister clarify that?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Planning, Communications and Works.

Hon. D. Kurt Tibbetts: My understanding is that this is one of those subjects that switched ministries this year. It was under the Education Ministry and has now switched to the Ministry of Community Development. There may be a new thinking as to what was being done. My understanding is that the Minister may have to resort temporarily to finding space to rent until the new facility is created. I am not 100 per cent sure if the intention was to spend major money on renovations of the old facility if that was not going to be the permanent location in the medium to long term.

Needless to say any further information which may be required, I am certain the Honourable Minister would enlighten the Member further, if he so desires.

The Speaker: Second Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. Alden M. McLaughlin, Jr.: Reverting to the question of the Crewe Road Bypass; can the Minister say when will the work be completed and when is it expected to be opened?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Planning, Communications and Works.

Hon. D. Kurt Tibbetts: In earlier supplementaries I put forward two scenarios. One will be by year end, possibly the second depending on how quickly we get the matter regarding compensation claims and settlements done.

From Old Crewe Road to Lyndhurst Drive will definitely be completed by year-end. If the other matter is settled we will get as far as Bobby Thompson Way by year-end.

If I am not mistaken, they are gearing up to begin work on the Bypass while we are trying to settle the other matter. They were diverted to district programmes and those works will be completed.

The Speaker: Second Elected Member for Bodden Town.

Mr. Gilbert A. McLean: Under the heading of the 28 projects currently under construction, item 91 and 115, could the Minister say if small contractors in the district of Bodden Town are given the opportunity to bid on the smaller projects like classrooms? If not, why are they excluded? There are at least two in Bodden Town. For item 115, which roads are being fixed? Where do they exist?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Planning, Communications and Works.

Hon. D. Kurt Tibbetts: My understanding is that the Bodden Town classroom project was advertised. There was only one entity that showed an interest in the bidding process that was not pre-qualified to bid. Everyone else was allowed to bid on the project. One of the very important factors was that there was a very strict timeline because of the budget approval and the opening of school for the completion of the September term. My understanding is that that had to be borne in mind in the tendering process. I believe it is safe to say there was no prejudice in allowing people to bid on the projects.

I cannot remember the roads right off hand, but if the Member will remember when we discussed it with the three Bodden Town representatives and we agreed on the three specific projects, those were the projects. One has been completed and two are being completed now. I think one was in Newlands, down in North Sound Estates, and there were a couple more. I do not have that information available, but it was the same agreed projects between the Bodden Town Members and PWD.

The Speaker: The Second Elected Member for Bodden Town.

Mr. Gilbert A. McLean: The particular occasion the Minister refers to when the Bodden Town Members viewed the roads, I was absent on that occasion due to another commitment which I could not change, so I am not familiar with the projects he is referring to.

However, not to belabour that point, I would like to ask since the building of the Bodden Town school is still in progress. Are the people who received the contract for this particular building now in default?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Planning, Communications and Works.

Hon. D. Kurt Tibbetts: My understanding is that in the very early stages of subcontracting there were some hiccoughs in regard to certain aspects of the pre-construction work which delayed the project a bit. The project will apparently be finished before this week is out. Although they were not able to use the classrooms up to now they will be able to either later this week or the beginning of next week. That is my understanding.

The Speaker: The Elected Member for East End.

Mr. V. Arden McLean: I noticed that there are at least nine schools listed under renovation programmes. Can the Minister tell us if these programmes are to be completed prior to school restarting on 3 September, and in particular is the East End school completed? If not, why not?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Planning, Communications and Works.

Hon. D. Kurt Tibbetts: The PWD and various schools through the Education Department established dialogue where whatever the major and important projects are creating disturbance during school time are slotted in during holiday time to make sure, to the best of their ability, that it is done in that manner. It is physically impossible to have all of the ongoing works and renovations done simply during holidays. There are spaced out time-wise so that the ones ongoing at present are agreed on by the school, the department and PWD. Those projects are deemed to be the ones which will not create any adverse effects during school hours and can be ongoing. That is why you see on the list a certain number going on now. For instance, every effort was made to construct the classrooms prior to school starting back so there would be no . . . and Red Bay and Savannah were completed, Bodden Town was a week or so out of it. However, those ongoing projects are small renovations to buildings and whatever else.

Regarding the East End situation, those new walkways and the site drainage are ongoing as we speak, and will be completed by early November.

The Speaker: The Elected Member for East End.

Mr. V. Arden McLean: Can the Honourable Minister explain how it works when PWD, and for that matter, the whole country knows the dates that school is out for the summer? When does renovation work start on the schools? Does it not start the following day the schools close as opposed to one month later in order to have all renovations completed before time?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Planning, Communications and Works.

Hon. D. Kurt Tibbetts: I hear what the Member is saying, but he needs to understand it is not just one school in the Islands. PWD does not have the staff complement to complete every list of projects for each school, even if they started at each school from the day after school closes.

The fact is that the work has to be scheduled given the manpower available. I will not stand here and say that this may not be able to be coordinated a little bit better, simply because I have not had the opportunity to physically walk through the process myself to say Aye or Nay. What I do know is that in meetings with PWD I have had discussions of this nature. The Department is quite aware of the necessity to deal with the process in the manner the Member is trying to put forward, and the principle of which I agree with. Obviously, not every one of the projects can be started immediately after school. That would mean deploying staff, perhaps to all of the schools and they just do not have the staff complement simply because they are needed all year round for other reasons. It makes no sense having a certain amount of people for peak period on a temporary basis.

The Speaker: The Elected Member for East End.

Mr. V. Arden McLean: I am quite aware that East End is not the only school on the Island. Having said that, can the Minister say if it is PWD employees who do all the work, or are small contractors contracted to go in and do the majority? When I say the majority, 90 per cent of the work is done by small contractors. So, why is it small contractors cannot be mobilised earlier during the summer holidays to effectively do all of this work and complete it before the schools are open?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Planning, Communications and Works.

Hon. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Mr. Speaker, I am assuming the Member speaks to this year and I come back to my original point. I hear what the Member is saying and I would like for that to happen. However, when you have a late budget and those works are done by subcontractors where you have to go through a tendering process, you have to go through the design process before going through that tendering process. I believe it is safe to say that a year like 2001 would be an extraordinary year because of the time when the Budget was approved and the projects specifically approved, and also because of having to go through design and tendering. Perhaps by 1 July when school was out all of this was not completed on each project. They simply tried to farm everything out as quickly as they could.

Under normal circumstances you would find that coordination is done as best as possible to allow what the Member seeks to have happen, happen. However, for this specific year, I believe, it is fair not to suggest a great level of inefficiency on the part of the Department. That is not to say that everything is as perfect as I would like, but I believe it is safe to create a defence.

The Speaker: The Elected Member for East End.

Mr. V. Arden McLean: Just to say that this year, since the Budget was late, which I do not totally accept from the Minister's reply, but we shall give him the benefit of the doubt, and his departments, this year. Next year please put the Minister on notice that we will be watching the efficiency.

Can the Honourable Minister say if the completion of the Bypass to Lyndhurst Drive also includes the road from the eastern end that is now under construction by Silver Oaks over to Hurley's supermarket?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Planning, Communications and Works.

Hon. D. Kurt Tibbetts: First of all, let me assure the Member that it is physically impossible for him to spend any more waking moments trying to get the best value for money for the country than I. I do not doubt he could come close, but I am sure he has other diversions that would not allow that to happen! I said that partly in jest, but not totally, because I know the Member is, regardless of how we banter, has a real point and he knows how strongly I feel about it. So, we do not have any problems in that area. He is saying that we will, meaning if he does not see the results. At that point and time he will have to beat me and I will know who I have to beat. So, it will be the way life is supposed to be.

Regarding the Crewe Road Bypass, let me make sure we are not mistaken. The road does not go straight up to Hurley's. There is an entrance below the Lion's Centre that goes into the roundabout into Silver Oaks. If that is what the Member is speaking to, that will have to be completed otherwise everything becomes dysfunctional.

I am not 100 per cent sure what remedial road-work has to be done in the area of the Lion's Centre, but I believe those works are minor because it is just creating another lane which is already there, just not raised and paved. I would think that would be included, but I will ensure that is the case because as soon as the district works are completed, unless traffic flows are negatively affected, it may as well get started from the furthest eastern point going all the way down to Lyndhurst Drive. However, I take the Member's point and will follow it up to make sure it is done.

The Speaker: Honourable Members, are we in agreement to waive the afternoon break and continue until approximately 4.15? Thank you.

Moving on to Question 111 standing in the name of the First Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman

QUESTION NO. 111

No. 111: Mrs. Julianna Y. O'Connor-Connolly asked the Honourable Minister responsible for the Ministry of Tourism, Environment and Transport to provide a progress report on the Little Cayman airport.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for the Ministry of Tourism, Environment and Transport.

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: Clearing of the site began on 17 April 2001 by the Cayman Brac Public Works crew and equipment. To date, 1,400 feet of the proposed runway site has been cleared as well as the area that has been identified for airport terminal and ancillary facilities construction. The site clearing will continue until the entire site has been cleared to facilitate the appropriate engineering studies for the construction of the runway, taxiway, apron and passenger terminal facilities. The project has cost $257,000 to date and it is expected that the engineers will determine the total project cost during this phase.

Work has been suspended over the past few weeks as machinery being used had to be relocated to Cayman Brac to complete scheduled capital roads' projects. While clearing works is suspended, required survey works are being undertaken to identify areas to be blasted and also to determine the probable amount of fill that will be generated on site.

The Speaker: Are there any supplementaries? If not, we move on to question 112, standing in the name of the First Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman.

QUESTION NO. 112
Deferred

No. 112: Mrs. Julianna Y. O'Connor-Connolly asked the Honourable Minister responsible for the Ministry of Community Development, Women Affairs, Youth and Sports Whether or not the Convention of Elimination of Discrimination Against Women has been extended to the Cayman Islands.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for Community Development, Women's Affairs, Youth and Sports.

Hon. Edna M. Moyle: Under Standing Order 23(5) I seek leave of this Honourable House to defer the answering of this question until Wednesday, due to the fact that the Ministry called parliament but was told there were no questions for me to answer this morning. I would like to have it deferred until Wednesday.

QUESTION PUT. AGREED: QUESTION NO. 112 DEFERRED UNTIL WEDNESDAY 19 SEPTEMBER 2001.

The Speaker: Item 7, Government Business, Bills, Second Reading.

BILLS

SECOND READINGS

THE LEGAL PRACTITIONERS (AMENDMENT) BILL, 2001

The Clerk: The Legal Practitioners (Amendment) Bill, 2001.

The Speaker: The Honourable Temporary Second Official Member.

Hon. Samuel Bulgin: I beg to move the Second Reading of a Bill entitled The Legal Practitioners (Amendment) Bill, 2001.

The Speaker: Do you wish to speak to it?

Hon. Samuel Bulgin: Briefly, Mr. Speaker.

What has happened up until now is that the current state of the Law creates an anomaly in respect of persons who are a graduate from the Cayman Islands Law School. The persons who pursue the LLB course and graduate after three years, if one of those persons decides to proceed to the UK to do the UK Bar, such person would be required to do one year in the UK and having completed that one year can return to the Cayman Islands and be admitted to practice immediately. He would in effect end up doing a period of four years before he could be eligible to practice in the Cayman Islands.

If another person who also graduated from the Cayman Islands Law School decided to stay in the Cayman Islands to undergo further training, that person is required to undergo a period of 12 months of what is called a "Professional Practice Course" and thereafter a period of 18 months of Articles. So, that person would end up doing a total period of five years and six months straight training. That creates an anomaly of approximately 18 months between the two persons graduating from the Law School.

The amendment to the Legal Practitioners Law is seeking to address that mischief and to bring about some uniformity in the period, after graduating from the LLB course leading up to being able to practise in the Cayman Islands.

The other thing I should point out is that the person who returns from the UK after completing the one year Bar is not required to do any other training in the Cayman Islands; he can move straight into private practice. However, if that person, even though he has been called to the UK Bar, decided to return to the UK to practise, he would still have to undergo a period of pupillage of 12 months so that he would have completed five years to be eligible to practise in the United Kingdom; whereas, all he would be required to do is four years if he were to practise in the Cayman Islands. So, that is also another anomaly and mischief at which the amendment is aimed.

The Speaker: The question is that a Bill entitled The Legal Practitioners (Amendment) Bill, 2001 be given a second reading. Does any Member wish to speak?

The Second Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. Alden McLaughlin, Jr.: Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

I am pleased to be able to support the proposed amendment to the Legal Practitioners Law. The anomaly to which the Honourable Temporary Second Official Member referred to in moving this Bill is one that has existed since the passage of the original legislation, and a situation that has created some concern within the legal fraternity for quite some time.

Since the advent of the law degree being conferred by the Cayman Islands Law School a situation has arisen whereby graduates of the Law School often do not pursue the local practitioners professional practice course, which is administered by Queens Belfast University in Ireland, but instead use their degree to seek admission to Bar School in the UK.

While that is good, and while that underlines the credibility of the University of Liverpool Law Degree conferred by the University through the Cayman Islands Law School, it has resulted in a growing number of graduates returning to these Islands and being admitted to the Cayman Islands Bar without having attained the benefit of the practical course in the law.

The objective, more than any concern about the unfairness of a system that permits one set of graduates to commence practice six months or one year earlier than others who have gone through the system locally, is the very real and important matter of ensuring that those who do practise law in this jurisdiction have had the proper grounding in professional practice. No matter how good the system was which you qualified through, there is simply no substitute for practical training and experience. So, in that regard I am pleased to see that the considerable lobbying done by members of the legal profession, myself included, over the course of many years is now being resolved by dealing with this anomaly placing all who seek to be admitted to the Cayman Islands Bar on essentially the same footing in terms of practical education.

However, having said that, I do not believe that the proposed amendment in its current form actually goes as far as I would like to see it go. While it certainly resolves the situation in relation to those who are called to the Bar of the UK, it does not seek to address a similar situation that arises in relation to those who are called to the Jamaican Bar.

I appreciate that the system of practical education in the Jamaican scheme is somewhat different and perhaps somewhat better than what obtains in the UK, in that the professional practice course run by the Norman Manley Law School, as I understand, provides two years rather than one, which obtains in the UK. There is still in my view a considerable difference between a professional practice course and a period of articles of clerkship or pupillage. As I understand the situation at the Norman Manley Law School, that is a practical course in every sense of the word in that it teaches the elements of advocacy and legal drafting and opinions and even a certain amount of legal aid work. However, in my experience and in my view that is still not the same as the type of experience in the real world that one gets when one has the benefit of articles of clerkship and pupillage.

The system has developed significantly since my time. When I was in the system I did five years of articles of clerkship. I am not suggesting that modern day students of the law should be subjected to five years of article clerkship. I do believe that you need to seek to ensure that all those who do come to practice before the Cayman Bar have obtained the reasonable level of experience having completed courses of articles of clerkship or of pupillage, periods of at least one year to 18 months.

I submit that the proposed amendment to the Legal Practitioners Law should be extended in its application to cover the situation in respect to those who qualify in Jamaica and in any other system who, as a result of their qualification in that system, become eligible for admission to the Cayman Islands Bar.

There is another issue that I would like to comment on in relation to the Legal Practitioners Law and to submit to the Honourable Second Official Member that this is also a matter ripe for attention and amendment.

One of the proposed amendments in the Bill under consideration deals with the Legal Advisory Council and proposes to redefine the membership of that body to include the Chief Justice of these Islands, the Attorney General and the Presidents of the Caymanian Bar Association and the Cayman Islands Law Society respectively.

The Legal Advisory Council was established under section 18 of the Legal Practitioners Law (1999R), and has within its remit the ability to make arrangements for the provision of a system of legal education and practical training leading to local qualification for enrollment as an attorney at law and a system of law reporting.

Indeed, the duties of the Legal Advisory Council involve oversight of the Cayman Islands Law School and dealings with the questions of exams and exam results among other things, the setting of a syllabus and arrangements for holding examinations and minimum qualifications for admission to service and articles and those sorts of matters.

As Members will know, this whole question of who should be entitled to practice law in this jurisdiction and what minimum experience individuals should have prior to being admitted to the Cayman Bar has been a thorny issue within the profession and more generally for quite some time. There has been a considered view held by Caymanian Bar Association and we believe, a practice or policy of the Attorney General for many years, that foreign lawyers who are admitted to practice generally in these islands should have a minimum of three years post qualification experience.

The basis for this is twofold: One is that entry level positions should be reserved for those Caymanian lawyers who have been newly qualified and given the number who graduate from the Cayman Islands Law School every year, there should be no real question of there being sufficient entry level applicants to the Cayman Islands Bar every year; and two, those who come to these Islands to be admitted to practice should have a sufficient level of experience that they are able to work largely unassisted and are able themselves to provide training instruction and direction to the young Caymanian lawyers who are in the respective firms.

It seems to me that matters with governing issues such as the one to which I have just referred, are matters that should properly be within the remit of a body such as the Legal Advisory Council who can decide what minimum standards in terms of experience are required, prior to the admission of a foreign lawyer to the Cayman Islands Bar. As things currently stand, although I have been unable to find any basis in the law or regulations for it, a practice has developed whereby the Honourable Attorney General seems to be the one individual who has the ability to determine whether an individual has the requisite experience and qualifications to be admitted to the Cayman Islands Bar. He so advises the Immigration Board, as I understand it to be.

As I have said, Mr. Speaker, I believe this is a matter that should properly be within the remit of the Legal Advisory Council and I am urging the Honourable Second Official Member to consider an appropriate amendment at committee stage to the Bill currently before the House to give effect to the concern I have just articulated.

Thank you, I believe I have said all I wish to say on this important amendment.

The Speaker: Does any other Member wish to speak? Does any other Member wish to speak? If not, does the Mover wish to exercise his right of reply?

The Honourable Temporary Second Official Member.

Hon. Samuel Bulgjin: Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

I would like to thank the Second Elected Member for George Town for his very useful contribution. He raised a number of issues, some of which require policy consideration. As for the issue of students from the Norman Manley Law School, he is correct in observing that the training is a bit more intense than students who have done the Bar course in the UK and the period of Articles in the Cayman Islands. Indeed, the course itself requires intense training in matters such as trial advocacy, legal aid work, drafting, among other things. However, the point he made is that even with that training it would still create a difficulty, or at least an anomaly, with people coming back from the UK being required to do a period of Articles and those remaining required to do a period of Articles as well.

It is something that will have to be examined very carefully. I am not sure whether it is something that can be addressed at committee stage. I will give an example why: If a simple amendment was to be made to state that students qualifying from the Norman Manley Law School and returning to the Cayman Islands to practise would be required to do a period of Articles of 18 months, it would create a further anomaly in that those students would be required to undergo a period of six and one half years training before they would be eligible to practise in the Cayman Islands, whereas those returning from the UK remaining in Cayman would be required to do five years.

So, it is going to create a further anomaly and is something that needs to be carefully looked at, to ensure that whatever amendment is made is in line with the proposed amendment whereby students returning from the UK are going to be required to do a period of 18 months articles as well. I intend to have some discussions about it in the next couple of days to see if a consensus can be arrived at.

In respect of the other amendment proposed by the Member, that the Legal Advisory Council be given the remit to make decisions as to who should be permitted to practise in the Cayman Islands, the law as it currently stands, as I understand it, and the practice is that where a person is going to apply for a work permit to practise in the Cayman Islands, the Immigration directions requires consultation with the Attorney General. I think it is a similar requirement for doctors who wish to practise in the Cayman Islands under the Health Practitioner's Law. The Health Practitioner's Board is required to be consulted before the work permit can be issued.

The practice has evolved over the years between the Attorney General's Chambers and the Immigration Board whereby a minimum standard of post qualification period is set. I think in the last two years it was crystallized and it is three years, I think.

The issue as to whether it should be the Legal Advisory Council or not, is not a matter I can unilaterally decide on. I would have to consult with other interested parties. However, I do take the Member's observation that given the general legislative framework it might be more appropriate for such a decision to be made by a body as opposed to an individual. I will also have that looked into and report back as to whether or not it is something that can be dealt with at committee stage. I have my doubt about that, given the far-reaching effect of such an amendment. In any case I undertake to look at it and discuss it further with Honourable Members, hopefully before the Bill comes on for Third Reading.

Thank you.

The Speaker: Before you take your seat, would you prefer that we adjourn in order to further deliberate on this on Wednesday, or whatever sitting it comes back to?

Hon. Samuel Bulgin: Mr. Speaker, I would be grateful for an adjournment at this stage to allow me some time to have consultations. Thank you.

The Speaker: I will now entertain a motion for the adjournment of this Honourable House.

ADJOURNMENT

Hon. Edna M. Moyle: Mr. Speaker, I move the adjournment of this Honourable House until 10 am Wednesday morning.

The Speaker: The question is that this Honourable House do now adjourn until 10 am Wednesday. Those in favour, please say Aye. Those against, No.

AYES.

The Speaker: The Ayes have it.

AT 4.17 PM THE HOUSE STOOD ADJOURNED
UNTIL 10 AM WEDNESDAY, 19 SEPTEMBER 2001.

OFFICIAL HANSARD REPORT
WEDNESDAY
19 SEPTEMBER 2001
10.25 AM
Sixth Sitting

The Speaker: Good morning. I will invite the Third Elected Member for West Bay in the absence of the Second Elected Member for George Town to say prayers.

PRAYERS

Capt. A. Eugene Ebanks: Let us pray:

Almighty God, from whom all wisdom and power are derived: We beseech Thee so to direct and prosper the deliberations of the Legislative Assembly now assembled, that all things may be ordered upon the best and surest foundations for the glory of Thy Name and for the safety, honour and welfare of the people of these Islands.

Bless our Sovereign Lady, Queen Elizabeth II; the Queen Mother; Philip, Duke of Edinburgh; Charles, Prince of Wales; and all the Royal family. Give grace to all who exercise authority in our Commonwealth, that peace and happiness, truth and justice, religion and piety may be established among us. Especially we pray for the Governor of our Islands, the Speaker of the Legislative Assembly, Official Members and Ministers of Executive Council and Members of the Legislative Assembly, that we may be enabled faithfully to perform the responsible duties of our high office. All this we ask for Thy great Name's sake.

Let us say the Lord's Prayer together: Our Father, who art in Heaven, Hallowed be Thy Name. Thy Kingdom come, Thy will be done on earth as it is in Heaven. Give us this day our daily bread, and forgive us our trespasses, as we forgive those who trespass against us. Lead us not into temptation, but deliver us from evil. For Thine is the Kingdom, the power and the glory, forever and ever. Amen.

The Lord bless us and keep us. The Lord make His face shine upon us and be gracious unto us. The Lord lift up the light of His countenance upon us and give us peace, now and always. Amen.

Proceedings resumed 10.28 am

The Speaker: Please be seated.

Proceedings are resumed. Item No. 2 on Today's Order Paper, reading by the Honourable Speaker of messages and announcements.

READING BY THE HONOURABLE
SPEAKER OF MESSAGES
AND ANNOUNCEMENTS

APOLOGIES

The Speaker: I have received apologies for absence from the Honourable First Official Member responsible for the Portfolio of Internal and External Affairs and from the Honourable Second Official Member responsible for the Portfolio of Legal Administration, both who are off the Island.

Moving on to Item No. 3 on Today's Order Paper, Questions to Honourable Ministers and Official Members. Deferred question number 112 is standing in the name of the First Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman.

QUESTIONS TO HONOURABLE
MEMBERS/MINISTERS

QUESTION NO. 112

Deferred Monday 17 September 2001

No. 112: Mrs. Julianna Y. O'Connor-Connolly to ask the Honourable Minister responsible for the Ministry of Community Development, Women Affairs, Youth and Sports whether or not the Convention of Elimination of Discrimination Against Women has been extended to the Cayman Islands.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for Community Development, Women's Affairs, Youth and Sports.

Hon. Edna M. Moyle: The convention has not been extended to the Cayman Islands. The Honourable Minister and Ministry Personnel have been in contact with the Foreign and Commonwealth Office, in reference to having the convention extended. When this is achieved, there will be a public launching.

SUPPLEMENTARIES

The Speaker: First Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman.

Mrs. Julianna Y. O'Connor-Connolly: Can the Honourable Minister say when the contact was made?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for Community Development, Women's Affairs, Youth and Sports.

Hon. Edna M. Moyle: I made the contact on a visit to the Foreign and Commonwealth Office (FCO) back in January or February. I do not remember the exact date.

The Speaker: First Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman.

Mrs. Julianna Y. O'Connor-Connolly: Can the Honourable Minister say if any timeline has been indicated and, or agreed between her Ministry and the FCO?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for Community Development, Women's Affairs, Youth and Sports.

Hon. Edna M. Moyle: The answer to that is 'no'. We have to research our laws to see those that have to be changed and will become compatible to the convention. I have put in place a review of those laws.

The Speaker: First Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman.

Mrs. Julianna Y. O'Connor-Connolly: Can the Honourable Minister say whether the FCO is awaiting for further construction or briefing on completion of the review of those laws from the Cayman Islands jurisdiction?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for Community Development, Women's Affairs, Youth and Sports.

Hon. Edna M. Moyle: If this is a requirement by the FCO, one would assume they would await the decision of the Cayman Islands Government as to legislation that has to be amended.

The Speaker: First Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman.

Mrs. Julianna Y. O'Connor-Connolly: Perhaps in an effort to get clarification, am I to understand that the Minister is saying it is a requirement for the FCO to first review the laws just for the sake of clarity?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for Community Development, Women's Affairs, Youth and Sports.

Hon. Edna M. Moyle: Yes, Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: Are there any further supplementaries? If not, we move on to question 113, standing in the name of the Second Elected Member for Bodden Town.

QUESTION NO. 113

No. 113: Mr. Gilbert A. McLean asked the Honourable Third Official Member responsible for the Portfolio of Finance and Economic Development if any progress is being made in drafting a law to replace the Confidential Relationships (Preservation) Law (1995 Revision).

The Speaker: The Honourable Third Official Member responsible for Finance and Economic Development.

Hon. George A. McCarthy: The Confidential Relationships (Preservation) Law (1995 Revision) (CRPL) has served the Cayman Islands very well and a valuable body of jurisprudence has developed around it. Therefore, care has to be taken in modernising it. However, it is considered that there is merit in moving to modern privacy legislation which would retain and incorporate the key features of the CRPL, while also complementing the Electronic Transaction Law by addressing the privacy issues relating to electronic transactions and data protection. It will take detailed research to develop such legislation. We would also need to ensure that such privacy legislation would be compatible with the freedom of information law that has also been mooted. Therefore, progress in developing drafting instructions with a view of replacing the CRPL has been necessarily slow and considered. It is anticipated that it will be several more months before draft legislation is available for public consultation.

SUPPLEMENTARIES

The Speaker: The Second Elected Member for Bodden Town.

Mr. Gilbert A. McLean: Can the Honourable Member say if removing our CRPL or repealing it is one of the things we have been ordered to do by the Organization for Economic Co-operation and Development (OECD), and if so, have they given any timeline?

The Speaker: The Honourable Third Official Member responsible for Finance and Economic Development.

Hon. George A. McCarthy: The Honourable Member is aware of the commitment letter given to the OECD. The Member is also very much aware that quite a number of developments have since occurred. We have to look very carefully in terms of the matters outlined in that letter of commitment. More importantly, while we made reference to the CRPL, the OECD itself has recognised that certain privacy legislation is very much in order. If we are going to be replacing the CRPL notwithstanding the commitment to the OECD, we have to ensure that we have able and appropriate legislation in place which will give the necessary protection that the CRPL presently gives.

I will expand a bit further for the benefit of the Honourable Member. The Member is very much aware, as well as other Members, that there are several initiatives riding side by side. We have the OECD; the Financial Action Task Force (FATF); and KPMG;

We know that the European Union has been in dialogue with its members on exchange of information; and at one time we had the Financial Stability Forum, which I do not think that has died a complete death as yet, because this may be integrated into the other initiatives.

What is very important for protecting Cayman's economic interest is, rather than dealing with these initiatives individually, we will have to put them together in order to look at the impact in terms of our economic infrastructure. Whatever legislation is developed to address the concerns or issues raised by one agency will have to be relevant to the overall picture that is emerging in terms of what needs to be done; in terms of complying with international standards while at the same time safeguarding Cayman's financial industry.

The Speaker: Second Elected Member for Bodden Town.

Mr. Gilbert A. McLean: I am aware of what the Member has said and wish to assure him that I am not one who thinks we should dismantle our Confidentiality Law at all simply to please the various entities he named. However, in light of that, is any effort being made by the Government to appoint anyone to work or develop, an outline that will suffice our needs and fall within the ambit of what we could be reasonably be called upon to do from an international perspective on banking confidentiality?

The Speaker: The Honourable Third Official Member responsible for Finance and Economic Development.

Hon. George A. McCarthy: I will say this in regard to the Member's question: I know he is a patriotic Caymanian and he would not do anything by his actions to put our financial industry at risk. I did not construe from his question that he was suggesting anything should be done in order to put our financial industry at risk.

However, he (along with other Members of this House) is very much aware that we have in place the Secretariat. This Secretariat is headed by an executive director. This is an area the executive director has now turned his attention to in terms of consultation with the financial industry. This is amongst the other international initiatives being looked at. Consultation will be taking place as to what would be an alternative to the CRPL, but whatever emerges as an alternative will have to embody the relevant features from the CRPL and also give the necessary protection as required under common law. The other developments occurring, such as the electronic transaction requirements or the others mentioned in my substantive answer given earlier will also be taken into account.

The Speaker: First Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman.

Mrs. Julianna Y. O'Connor-Connolly: Can the Member say if this proposed modernisation of the CRPL will allow for the automatic exchange of information?

The Speaker: The Honourable Third Official Member responsible for Finance and Economic Development.

Hon. George A. McCarthy: The way forward on this is in the initial stages at this time. Whatever is done, there has to be a linkage, or compatibility with whatever other pieces of legislation or other arrangements in place. At this time I cannot say what the specifics of the CRPL will be. Before we get to the stage of drafting instructions thought will have to be given in terms of what exactly the alternative legislation should be like.

So, at this point in time I cannot say what the specifics are, but I can assure the Honourable Member that wide consultation will take place within government with Members of the Legislative Assembly and our financial community, in looking at this in tandem with the other international initiatives. The reason for this is to make sure that what we are doing does not remove the protection provided at this time in terms of the privacy protection by the CRPL.

When we look at the CRPL, I think if we maintain the focus that the purpose of the CRPL is to facilitate guided disclosure, and not to shield criminality, this will have to be the approach taken in terms of looking at any alternative piece of legislation to replace that. Whatever is put in place will have to facilitate guided disclosure and protect legitimate interest and should not shield deviant activities.

The Speaker: First Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman.

Mrs. Julianna Y. O'Connor-Connolly: Could the Honourable Member say if the United Kingdom Government and Cayman Islands Government are singing from the same hymn sheet as to the merits of keeping as much as possible of the CRPL?

The Speaker: The Honourable Third Official Member responsible for Finance and Economic Development.

Hon. George A. McCarthy: I am not in a position to respond to that question at this time with a definite answer. At the end of the day we will have to determine what is best in terms of protecting the interests of the Cayman Islands and will also have to convey that by way of understanding to the UK and the wider international community.

The Speaker: Are there any further supplementaries? If not, that concludes Question Time for today.

Moving on to item 4, Government Business, Bills. Second Reading. Continuation of the reply to the Legal Practitioners (Amendment) Bill, 2001.

The Honourable Temporary Second Official Member.

GOVERNMENT BUSINESS

BILLS

SECOND READINGS

THE LEGAL PRACTITIONERS (AMENDMENT) BILL, 2001

Hon. Samuel Bulgin: Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

When we took the adjournment which you so kindly agreed to on Monday afternoon, I was in the process of responding to the observations of the Second Elected Member for George Town. You will recall that he had raised two specific issues in his valuable and insightful contribution to the passage of this Bill. I have used the opportunity in the intervening period to take further advice on the matter and to also have consultations. I have also discussed the matter with the Leader of Government Business.

As I said on Monday, the issues raised by the Honourable Member are of the utmost importance. Given this premise, it is the considered view that it may not be the best thing to seek to encompass his proposed amendments by way of committee stage amendments. This is regrettable, but I will seek to explain why. I hope Honourable Members will appreciate the explanations.

First, on the issue about graduates returning from the Norman Manley Law School to the Cayman Islands to practise, it is a requirement that they undertake a further period of articles. The current position on that is: students who attend the Norman Manley Law School would have completed, upon graduation, a period of five years legal training. If they are to return to the Cayman Islands and are required to undertake a further 18 months of articles, it means that the students will be required to do a total period of six-and-one-half years training.

This would create a further anomaly for students graduating from the Cayman Islands Law School who pursue further studies to be called to the Bar in the UK. On returning to the Cayman Islands, the new amendment would require students to do an additional 18 months of articles. That would add up to a total period of five and one half years training.

The students who choose to remain in the Cayman Islands after graduation from the Law School and pursue the professional practice course and the period of articles would also end up doing a total of five and one half years training. Right away we realise that it would create a further anomaly where the Norman Manley Law School student would be required to do six and one half years.

I take on board the Member's view that it does not matter where the person is trained; there should be some period of practical exposure. What I am proposing to do is to seek the indulgence of the House to proceed with the Bill in its current form. I also give an undertaking to the Member that as soon as we are out of here we will take this matter up, giving immediate attention and necessary discussions to arrive at a formula ensuring some sort of uniformity for graduates from whatever institution. So, I am hoping that the House will agree to this proposed course.

The second point raised by the Member has to do with who should be consulted when a work permit application for an attorney at law is made to the Immigration Board. The current position is governed by the Immigration Direction 13, which provides that when an application for an attorney at law is made for a work permit, the Board shall consult with the Attorney General and also notify the Attorney General of any work permit applied for or granted.

I just pause here to make the observation that there is a similar provision in the Immigration Directions for health practitioners. It is worded slightly different and although the Immigration Board is required to consult with the Chairman of the Health Practitioners' Board, the reading of the section in the Directions seems to imply that any response therefrom should be on behalf of the Health Practitioners' Board rather than from the Chairman per se. So, it is really a body as opposed to an individual who makes that decision. What the Honourable Member, the Second Elected Member from George Town, is asking, would also bring about a broad consensus rather than an individual view.

To get back to the lawyer's position, Mr. Speaker, the problem there is that for this to be effected, ideally what is required is really an amendment to the Immigration Direction 13. However, the Member's position is that he is aware of the provision in the directions, but would like to see that policy have the force of law. So, he would prefer it to be in the legislation itself, the enabling law, which is the Legal Practitioners Law. The appropriate way may be to amend section 19 of the Legal Practitioners Law which deals with the establishment, among other things, of the Legal Advisory Council.

Given the scope of what is contemplated by this amendment, given the policy implications as well, it was felt that it is an issue which requires more discussions. It requires consultation with interested parties. Regrettably the period of adjournment between Monday and today did not allow for that breadth of discussion.

The position this morning is: it is the hope that the House will agree for this issue to not be dealt with merely by a committee stage amendment. It is too significant an amendment to the law. So, a further period of consultation would be appropriate and it is also the wish that this House agree for the Bill to proceed as is, in its current form, and that this issue also be dealt with immediately thereafter by way of a substantive amendment to the Immigration Law after the necessary consultation has taken place.

Thank you, Sir.

The Speaker: The question is that the Legal Practitioners (Amendment) Bill 2001 be given a second reading. Those in favour please say Aye. Those against, No.

AYES.

The Speaker: The Ayes have it.

AGREED: THE LEGAL PRACTITIONERS (AMENDMENT) BILL 2001 GIVEN A SECOND READING.

The Speaker: Bills, second readings.

THE STAMP DUTY (AMENDMENT) (NO.2) BILL 2001

The Clerk: The Stamp Duty (Amendment) (No.2) Bill 2001

The Speaker: The Honourable Third Official Member.

Hon. George A. McCarthy: Mr. Speaker, I beg to move the Second Reading of a Bill entitled The Stamp Duty (Amendment) (No.2) Bill 2001.

The main aim of this Bill is to correct an error in the Schedule in the Stamp Duty Law under the duty head of "Mortgage." A previous amendment deleted the word "moveable" from section A of the mortgage head to avoid conflict with section B which also deals with moveable property. However, the proviso dealing with moveable property was left in error under section A to which it no longer relates. This renders the stamp duty provisions in respect of mortgages legally uncertain which is a significant deterrent to business. Therefore, clause 2(b) of this Bill seeks to restore certainty and coherence by moving the proviso to its correct position.

As noted in paragraph 2 of the Memorandum of Objects and Reasons, in addition to the repositioning there are two other improvements made to the proviso. First, legal or equitable mortgages, or charges granted by an exempt trust have been added as a logical extension; and secondly, it is made clear that legal or equitable mortgages; or charges over shares in exempted companies; or ordinary non-resident companies are covered by the proviso.

Aside from the changes to sections A and B, no more is required. Therefore, the rest of the original duty head "Mortgage" is simply repeated in the Bill.

The opportunity is also being taken to correct a minor sequencing error in the Schedule to the Law under the duty head "Agreement", or "Memorandum of Agreement," which is the object of clause 2(a) of the Bill. Also to repeal the provisions on timeshares in clause 3 in preparing for a different treatment of this head of duty to be dealt with, quite likely in the November meeting of this House.

On 1 June 2001, the Stamp Duty (Amendment) Law 2001 was gazetted. Part 2 of the law allowed for the stamp duty on the sale of timeshare contracts to be levied at a rate of 7.5 percent or 9 percent depending on the physical location of the timeshare accommodation.

Extensive feedback was received from all timeshare industry operators to the effect that such a duty would cause future sales on timeshares in the Islands to come to a standstill. The Government is responsive to such comments because the industry is an important and growing one with occupancy rates normally in the region of 80 percent throughout the year.

Government therefore intends to repeal that part of the Stamp Duty (Amendment) Law 2001 which relates to the timeshare industry. Discussions with the industry operators revealed that a much more palatable method of imposing a levy on the industry is to introduce a fixed nightly charge equivalent to US$10.00 per night. Legislation, as I mentioned, is currently being drafted in order to address this alternative arrangement. As soon as it is approved by Executive Council it will be sent down to the Legislative Assembly for circulation.

With that explanation as to why the initial provision dealing with timeshare is being repealed, I commend this Bill to this Honourable House.

The Speaker: The question is that a Bill entitled the Stamp Duty (Amendment) (No.2) Bill 2001 be given a second reading.

The Motion is opened for debate. Does any other Member wish to speak? Does any Member wish to speak?

The Third Elected Member for George Town.

Dr. Frank S. McField: Mr. Speaker, I know that this attempt to defer any kind of stamp duty payments on timeshares has been ongoing for some time and it looks like the lobbyists out of the real estate industry, in particular, those persons connected to timeshares seem to have succeeded with this Government in being able to get this postponed.

I understand that the Third Official Member is proposing to deal with this question of stamp duty in some different form by causing it to be on the rooms instead. Basically the Island is still being, I feel, deprived of money it needs because we should not only be getting money from the transfer of property, we should also be getting money from the occupancy of the properties after they are sold.

It is of interest to see how quick the Government was to put duty back on foodstuff, and now again we find that the Government seems to be able to deal with the timeshare industry in this particular manner.

I know there are certain persons involved in the timeshare industry that would be thinking 'Yeah, there goes that troublemaker again.'

Mr. Speaker, we would be pleased if we could take the morning break so I may have the opportunity to consult with the Honourable Third Official Member.

The Speaker: It is a bit early, but if it is the wish of the House we shall take a 15-minute suspension.

We shall suspend proceedings for 15 minutes.

PROCEEDINGS SUSPENDED AT 11.01 AM

PROCEEDINGS RESUMED AT 11.26 AM

The Speaker: Please be seated.

Debate continues on the Second Reading of the Stamp Duty (Amendment) (No.2) Bill 2001.

The Third Elected Member for George Town continuing.

Dr. Frank S. McField: Mr. Speaker, I would like to thank you for allowing us to pause to consult with the Third Official Member in regard to this Amendment, particularly the part where it says: “the Bill also repeals the stamp duty on documents relating to the grant, assignment or transfer of timeshares as the Government proposes to deal with timeshares in a different manner.”

At this particular point, I feel that the Government brought, and correctly so, the stamp duty as a part of their revenue enhancement measures in March. This also had entailed replacing duties on a number of food items and for them to now come and attempt, so early thereafter, to repeal the stamp duties on documents relating to the grant, assignment or transfer of timeshares is a little hasty and needs to be better explained what the motives behind this change would entail.

I believe that the Third Official Member attempted to give us an idea during the pause in proceedings as to why he felt it would be better to repeal this stamp duty which is in the vicinity of 10 percent and 7.5 percent, depending upon the area where the timeshare properties are found.

I remain dissatisfied with this particular change in government policy and hope not to sound too political. I think, this again, is where we need to become a little bit clearer in drawing the divisions between parliament, as elected members, and government, as an extension where it goes into the many government advisory groups. These advisory groups are sometimes not necessarily, in my opinion, representing the general good, but in fact representing specific interest groups in this country. I think this might be a clear case where the information that has been submitted needs to be examined thoroughly, making sure there is no bias and selfishness involved in making these strong recommendations to the Government which has caused them to bring this Bill to repeal this duty on the transfer of property.

I know the Government also realises that at this particular time it is not easy to make money for the purposes which government needs to spend. There are those who can justify the theory or the assumption that the less tax which is put in place on real estate properties, at the end of the day you will sell more and therefore be better off. However, running society is a balancing act. There are many costs the Government in this country, as in others, will incur. We have to find the resources to pay for the services we need to provide to the community, which helps in the long run to maintain the value of property.

The value of property is not just something concluded as a result of an investor putting money in to building or someone who wants to buy will buy. The value of property is ultimately determined by the value of the society. So, a society which is properly and fairly maintained will cause property to be more valuable than in a society that is allowed to deteriorate simply because sufficient funds are not there to do the servicing needed to keep the society in a particular state. This is also true when society shows that its government is much more interested in taking away the tax concessions from normal people and removing it from the foodstuff, and at the same time the Government is anxious to satisfy certain interest groups or investors by removing it from property transfers.

I think it is not just a right for persons to own, but also a privilege and that privilege should be paid for.

I am sure the case I have made is understood by the Government and that they will want to postpone this decision to a later date. I thank those Members who have assisted in bringing this deficiency in the Bill, to the attention of the House.

I will now sit down.

The Speaker: The Second Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. Alden M. McLaughlin, Jr.: Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

I join voice with the Third Elected Member for George Town in his expression of concern about the repeal of this particular head of duty entitled “Timeshares” without having had the benefit of seeing what the replacement provision is going to entail. The Memorandum of Objects and Reasons of this particular Bill does indicate that government intends to repeal the stamp duty on documents relating to the grant, assignment or transfer of timeshares as it proposes to deal with timeshares in a different manner.

In these times of austerity I believe that a very good and careful explanation is necessary before we seek to repeal the provision which will have the result of increasing the monies paid to government.

In the Budget this House passed in April of this year, the timeshare fee estimate was placed at some $700,000. Prior to that time, as I understand, no fee whatsoever was paid to government in respect of timeshares. Neither was a fee paid for accommodation tax, stamp duty on the transfer grant, or an assignment which differed significantly from the situation in relation to other guest houses and hotels which pay an accommodation tax on each room.

During the break, Members did have an opportunity to speak with the Third Official Member to obtain some explanation. It appears that, certainly as far as the Third Official Member is concerned, what is being proposed as a replacement to this particular fee will have the result of a net increase in monies paid to government under this head. I believe it is proper and necessary for the Honourable Third Official Member to explain that in his reply to the debate on this Bill. Perhaps in the process of so doing, he could advise this House what has been the result in financial terms of the imposition of the timeshare fee as set out in the Budget and how the receipts compare with the projected amount.

Again, from discussions with the Honourable Third Official Member, it appears that government is minded now, having heard Members' concerns, to defer the repeal of this provision until they are in a position to bring the replacement legislation proposal to this Honourable House. That is, I believe, the way this matter can best be dealt with. So, I look forward to hearing what the Third Official Member will say in reply and will reserve my position in relation to the Bill until I understand what government's position is in relation to the repeal of the head of duty entitled Timeshares.

Thank you.

The Speaker: Does any other Member wish to speak?

The Elected Member for East End.

Mr. V. Arden McLean: I rise to make a short contribution to the current Stamp Duty (Amendment) Bill 2001. My concern is the same as that of the Second and Third Elected Members for George Town.

Like other Members, I sat here in March when this Bill was brought to include taxes on timeshares. I agreed with it then, and today it is no different after having heard the Third Official Member explain. The country may very well be better off by possibly applying $10 per person per night, as opposed to asking for 7.5 percent to 10 percent; this depends on where the condominium is located on the Island. Not having the benefit of the average per occupancy or the average family that stays in these condominiums, it is difficult to look at this and support it.

My biggest concern is the administration of applying $10 per head. We know that we currently have an accommodation tax in this country. Without pointing fingers at any establishment, it is my humble submission that a lot of accommodation taxes are not collected in this country. I recently visited St. Kitts with the Commonwealth Parliamentary Association (CPA). I can assure you that while St. Kitts has gambling, et cetera, there was always a government official or representative nearby to ensure that government taxes were properly collected and accounted for—from the gambling too!

To my knowledge this country has never had proper accounting of accommodation tax. I would like to know how we are going to do proper accounting of $10 per head in the timeshare. Besides that, there are a number of these timeshares in this country that may very well collect gratuities, but I know, they do not share gratuities how they should. If they cannot do that amongst the lower wretchulances in the workplace, then I would like to know how the Government could trust them to pay $10 per head for every person who sleeps under their roof.

The Third Official Member is the person responsible for monies in this country and the collection of revenue. I would challenge him to show this House what mechanism is going to be put in place. It is all well and good for us to stand here and pass laws and amendments which, when enforced, will give this country more revenue and ensure that the proprietors should be conducting themselves in such manner. If we do not have the mechanism in place it is useless to pass these amendments and laws.

I have no reason to point my finger at anyone. However, we know that the country is ripe with rumour that these people are not paying government its rightful accommodation tax. Government would have to allay some of my concerns by proving, beyond a shadow of a doubt, that the Government is collecting accommodation tax from every visitor in hotels and condominiums in this country. I think that is a daunting task for the Government. I do not think they will ever be able to do that because there is no mechanism in place. Now, here we are, wanting to put $10 on every head. I trust that it will bring more money than applying the transfer tax on timeshare. I challenge the Government to also account for any timeshare and the protection of Caymanians who work there; the people who work there, whether or not they are Caymanians.

I challenge the Government to look into the accusations and rumours that these timeshares are also collecting gratuities and not distributing them accordingly, particularly now when we are going through this economic downturn and worse, since the recent incident in America. We all know that if America sneezes, we catch a cold. Government must pay attention to these areas—even more so now. It does not make sense to be receiving visitors and have these properties collecting these fees that are supposed to be paid to government, and, in the case of gratuities, to be distributed amongst staff; it is not being done. It does not make sense for government to spend millions of dollars on tourism to attract tourists and then there is no return, or the return is not what it should be, or it is spent by others too.

I just want to reiterate that I am not pointing my finger, but we know the old adage, whenever you throw a stone in a pigpen, the one who squeals the loudest got hit. It is like what the Third Elected Member for George Town said: 'I guess they will say the troublemaker is up again! Well, that means there are two troublemakers then.

I would like to hear what the plans are to administer the new proposal, what I trust is forthcoming from the Third Official Member. I suspect he will also let us know what kind of mechanism is in place to ensure that the new accommodation taxes are also collected by government and that the Government is assured of every cent that is supposed to come into government is currently being collected.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: The Motion is opened for debate. Does any other Member wish to speak?

The Honourable Minister for Planning, Communications and Works.

Hon. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

Sometimes when attention is drawn to a particular topic in this Honourable House, we find ourselves wondering why we had not concentrated efforts in certain areas prior to the point being brought up. I am certain that that is not uncommon. Perhaps that is part of the business of the House so that exactly what I just described will happen.

This Legislature is the place where legislation is passed or denied. This morning is very typical of the way the exercise should be completed. I believe with this particular issue of timeshares, after hearing debate from Members I for one take the point whereby we perhaps need to look at this situation very carefully.

The Bill was brought as explained by the Honourable Third Official Member who moved the Bill with the idea to deal with the issue of timeshares in the November meeting. Some Members are not fully convinced that the situation is very clear and I think Members have the right to have a clear understanding. So, with the committee stage amendment the Third Official Member has proposed and circulated, I believe withdrawing that section of the Bill will allow for safe passage of the rest of the Bill. However, I think it is pertinent to give some background information on the timeshare issue at this time and I propose to do that as quickly as I can.

When we were looking at this issue, there were different thoughts of how best to deal with it. Those of us who were here prior to 2000 will remember that on at least one occasion there was a proposal via a Bill to deal with the issue of timeshares and as the Third Elected Member for George Town pointed out, there was some pressure put and the Bill was withdrawn.

When the Third Elected Member for George Town said that whoever put that pressure on before seemed to have succeeded in doing so again; he may not believe me, but I can assure him, that is not the case. It is simply a matter of looking at it with a view of how to deal with it in a different manner. That is what I wanted to explain.

Originally, when the thought was simply to look at a one time fee that would align timeshare purchases with regular purchases of property, which would attract either 7.5 percent or 9 percent transfer tax (depending on where the property was located), there was a proposal put. Let us take one timeshare property and assume that each owner owned one week out of every year. For the entire property there would be 52 owners. The proposal was that each owner pay $50 per year which would mean that the gross annual income would be 52 x $50, which is $2,600. The thought was that while they were not paying actual stamp duty, the annual fee of $50 (which was not considered onerous) would bring more revenue for government, but be more palatable for the industry when looking at the bigger picture.

Since then, other thoughts have been extended and there has been a proposal, assuming the 80 percent occupancy which the Third Official Member spoke to. If we again take one unit and look at 365 days per year at $10 per night, and calculate 80 percent of 365 x $10 each night, the gross annual income brings $2,920, a little more than the $50 per year for each week. So, there have been different ways of looking at it and try to determine exactly what way to go forward.

I think where the problem has arisen is the collection of this $10 per day. There have been questions raised about the government's ability to ensure that this money is collected. Mention was made of condominiums and the room tax. Many people are of the view that government is not getting the full benefit of this revenue.

I propose that we agree to the committee stage amendment. I also agree with those Members who aired concerns that the Third Official Member utilising whatever section of his portfolio, and whoever else he needs to help champion the cause, give a commitment to have a full look at this situation and do everything physically possible to ensure that after consulting with Members who will have to approve the legislation, make sure that we have it in a satisfactory way. I am certain that Members will be prepared to give their opinions so that we can come to consensus as to the way forward.

It is certainly in the interest of the Government, in my view, and I think everyone will agree, if it means a dedicated person specifically, to ensure that a proper system is set up within the industry, with the ability to do spot checks to ensure government collects what it should, then I believe that situation warrants it.

While I am satisfied that the Bill brought is simply asking for the situation to be corrected with a view to bringing legislation in November, I believe we should have a closer look at the entire situation and sit down with Members, take input and agree on a way forward. Get it all path out the right way and simply get it to where there are no questions marks on a daily basis as there are now with regards to the way we are able to collect these funds.

Mr. Speaker, for example, I have heard on many occasions where we have owners of condominiums who do not have their units in the rental pool, which if it was in the rental pool you are supposed to be able to see everything by way of books kept, but those owners privately rent their units. People come in and stay and the income is not recorded; there is no 10 percent accommodation tax attracted. The truth is that while those owners may be smiling and it may be common practice, it is evading paying government its just due. I cannot call any names as to who the owners may be, but the truth is the way this world is today, I do not believe that we can simply put legislation in place and trust all parties for it to happen right because it does not just happen like that nowadays.

Without trying to pre-empt the Third Official Member, I just wanted to make it clear that the Government takes on board the position that has been brought forward. I believe safe comment is that we all agree we should have a thorough look at it. I am certain the Honourable Third Official Member would be twice as happy if there was more revenue coming in through it, like all of us would be at this point in time, given the circumstances. If we can agree for that committee stage amendment, look at it very carefully and do the best we can to make sure we employ a system that is as foolproof as possible, which in this day and age should not take a rocket scientist to put together, and once we can get it on track we can move on.

Thank you, Sir.

The Speaker: The Floor is opened for debate. Does any other Member wish to speak?

The Second Elected Member for Bodden Town.

Mr. Gilbert A. McLean: Thank you, Mr. Speaker

What I have to say will be brief and it falls in line with what other colleagues on the Backbench have said about this particular Bill. I think that rather than government bringing piecemeal amendments to the situation with stamp duty tax or any kind of tax or fee to derive some money from the business of timeshare and condominiums, it ought to be a comprehensive review and a proper and complete Bill.

There are few businesses in the world that by their share nature generates as much money as a hotel. There is accommodation, food and beverage, and if it is done 365 days a year they generate immense amounts of money. The timeshare business has become international. People use it because they can actually purchase a timeshare, which is in most instances purchasing a week of vacation in a building in some part of the world. They have further developed that in doing that you can exchange a week in the Caribbean, let us say, to spend a week in Colorado.

I have cause to believe, especially now, since I have come into possession of certain documentation from a condominium, that clearly shows government's revenue being robbed. I have been reluctant to bring it forward for the simple reason that I do not know if an investigation will be carried out as should be. I am not sure the persons who are doing so may not be alerted through inept efforts. So, I am just keeping what I have at this stage and thinking about it.

The people in the travel and accommodation world have certain expertise and ability in wheeling and dealing and adjusting prices, which is necessary for them to do business. However, what I personally object to, and it has been this way from the time I can remember Cayman as a society and government as a necessary entity, is that if there is a product being sold in Cayman for $500 to the private sector, and if government wants to buy it, immediately that price becomes $1,000. I cannot understand that mentality. To me it is a wicked, evil, ignorant mentality. If the Government can save money, it means the person being taxed also saves money. Unfortunately that is the way it is and there are numerous instances where this can be proven to have taken place.

If government wants to build a road or a bypass that would make life easier for everybody, and an individual has two orange trees on the piece of land, they want government to pay them $1 million. This is the kind of ridiculous situations we find. We also find that the business of government, in the building of the road, is slowed. The ability of PWD to build; the public at large to use the road; and traffic to flow easier is hampered while the Government plays around with these types of ridiculous situations. It seems that government is ever reluctant to use the authority and the power given it by law to subscribe to that type of situation, not to say that government should be devoid of negotiation.

Mr. Speaker, people in the tourist accommodation industry who would be led to not pay government its taxes, fees or its duties, as the case may be, only do so because they know it is an inbred quality of character of government not to sue them or take legal action against them. Now, reverse the coin and no one hesitates to sue government. I really do not understand that but this is how it is here in Cayman.

I have heard of instances where Mr. Jones comes down and occupies room 4B in condominium X. He is a "guest" of the owner. He is no guest of the owner, but then again may be he is, because he has paid in the US or elsewhere. They collect and government gets nothing out of the whole deal. Instead of trying to piecemeal little fees, we ought to recognise that condominium and timeshare units are spread across the Cayman Islands right now and are there because people are making money on them. They come to the Cayman Islands, a safe environment, a place where people can relax. It is only fair that the government try to collect a fee for and on behalf of the people. I do not see why that is so hard to accept.

There is always this fear and trembling in the Cayman Islands, that if we charge them $5 they will take their business elsewhere. Why can we not just get real? Is there a place in the US where there is no property tax assessed, be it $50 or $200 on every house in every state? What is the great mystery?

We have reached the point where we have sung the song so often to ourselves that we are a jurisdiction with no taxes, which is causing us to miss the boat and the OECD is trying to tell us that we are abnormal because we do not have any taxes and that we should. I do not agree with what the majority of what they are saying, but perhaps we could learn a little by understanding that taxes and the state are real things around the world.

I think it is good that the Member is deciding to withdraw or repeal the paragraph in this Bill. While there is nothing wrong with doing that now in order to appease this situation in the House, I suggest to the Member and Minister responsible for this business of accommodation and tourism, that the Government should appoint persons who can look at the situation and come up with hard facts and figures. These hard facts and figures should include the number of rooms and tourists here to determine a realistic assessment and how best to guarantee we will collect the money if a fee is put in place. That is another serious problem—government is not collecting all the fees it should be collecting from these entities.

I understand the requirement of attaching the actual paperwork to the money sent in monthly for accommodation tax is no longer required. If that is the case, I would tell this House that we are certainly being damned because of that. How do we know what is the case if there is no supporting documentation? I heard that it was too much paperwork and they were told they did not need to do that. If that is the case, we had better start worrying because that is one means by which we are being robbed!

I do not have any problem in assessing a fee in this area of commerce. However, taking off taxes at this time in this field, while we have applied it to milk and eggs in November, I cannot support. With the amendment, I am inclined to support the Bill in its present state.

Thank you.

The Speaker: Does any other Member wish to speak? (Does any other member wish to speak?)

If not, does the Mover wish to exercise his right of reply?

The Honourable Third Official Member.

Hon. George A. McCarthy: Thank you.

Taking into account the concerns raised by Members, the Government has taken a decision to defer the repeal of the section dealing with stamp duty on timeshare until the amendment to the Tourism Accommodation Tax Law can be simultaneously considered. This will be dealt with by way of an amendment during the committee stage.

As Members are aware, the current provision in the Bill being repealed is that stamp duty should be payable at 7.5 percent and 9 percent on timeshares, depending on the location of the property. If we take a property with a value of $14,000 for the timeshare, at 7.5 percent, this would yield stamp duty of $1,050. At 9 percent it would be $1,260.

The data we have gathered indicates so far that the timeshares are normally occupied at a rate of approximately 80 percent. If we take this on an annual basis and let us say for example, 52 owners at 100 percent occupancy would be 3,640, at 80 percent that works out to $2,912. If we assume that the average family is comprised of two persons, at $10 per night, then that works out to approximately $5,824. It can be seen that this alternative arrangement, based on $10 per person, will yield a higher level of revenue. However, the specifics of that will be provided to Members when the amendment is brought to the Tourism Accommodation Tax, together with the repeal of the stamp duty component now being sought to be addressed.

Honourable Members raised some very good questions, and I take on board the challenge that has been given by the Elected Member for East End. I will say that I know for a fact that the Government is not collecting 100 percent of the tourism accommodation tax. That is known to me, and throughout the entire country. This is not in the area of the hotels, as such, this has to particularly do with the area of timeshares.

We have information that there are quite a number of owners of condominiums units. A person who buys a condominium unit are not required to pay any tourism accommodation tax because this attaches to the ownership in that the stamp duty element would have been paid already. However, where this condominium is put into a rental pool, the occupants are required to pay the 10 percent accommodation tax.

There is an arrangement whereby owners are allowed to have their friends use the condominiums, and normally wherever a payment is not made, obviously the tax is not payable. We have information (not from any specific source) that amounts are often paid by persons purporting to be friends of the owners outside of the Cayman Islands and there is no evidence or record of any amount paid. In that case, the Government is not in a position to make a demand for the tourism accommodation tax element that would otherwise be payable on the accommodation rental sum payable to the owner, for that amount to be paid.

The Tourism Accommodation Tax Law is quite clear. In section 3 it says: "The proprietor of any accommodation shall pay to the Government a tax equal to 10 per cent of the amount of the charges made by him in respect of each tourist accommodated therein."

In section 7 it states: "Every proprietor of accommodation shall, no later than twenty eight days after the end of the month in which the proprietor has provided accommodation and service for tourists, submit, under section 4, to the Collector of Taxes a copy of each statement delivered by him to tourists during the month.” Failure to comply with this will result in a surcharge. I know that the surcharge is levied by the Treasury on a regular basis. The only time that is not levied is when it can be demonstrated that every attempt was made to have the tax paid within the 28-day period, but for circumstances such as delays at the post office and other justifiable reasons when it can be one or two days late, there is often a request for the waiver of that penalty. If the circumstances are viewed as justifiable, the waiver may be allowed, not that it is guaranteed to be allowed.

The Law also provides for unrestricted access to the premises providing tourism accommodation and to inspect records. If there are no records or evidence of payment for accommodation rental, there is no basis on which a demand for payment of tourist accommodation tax can be made.

The Government has been looking into this matter for quite some time. Research has revealed that in one country in the Atlantic, they have decided to address this. It is not a decision that was taken a long time ago but it sets a very useful precedent. With the exception of the owner who should be the owners of record, any other person or persons occupying the condominium unit will be assessed at what is determined as the market rate for the property. This is payable to the government irrespective whether or not this person is a friend of the owner or the unit has been put into the rental pool.

This is the direction the Government is going, and this matter will be brought to this House in the not-too-distant future. I think it will serve as a very useful remedy and as a deterrent for those condominium owners who enter into this arrangement knowing that their properties are not subject to any form of property tax other than the stamp duty component paid. Recognising that both the Government and the country must operate requires a certain level of revenue.

For persons tempted to evade payment of tourism accommodation tax by this process, I would want to believe that this would not be in the majority of instance, but even for those few who may be doing so, Mr. Speaker this will serve as a useful deterrent.

Looking at the situation with timeshares it will provide an opportunity to look at the existing penalties under the current Tourism Accommodation Tax Law. At the end of the day we need our laws to have teeth. The Leader of Government Business alluded to this as did the Elected Member for East End and the Second Elected Member for Bodden Town. There is a benevolent approach taken when it comes to the attitude toward persons who are liable to pay fees and amounts due to government. We have to get to a point (and I am not suggesting that the Government become overly intrusive) because we know there is no system designed that is 100 percent foolproof. We do not have an onerous system in the Cayman Islands that consumes a lot of a person's income through taxes and other fees payable to government. At the end of the day no one can say that any one government has been unreasonable up to this point in time.

The amount of monies due and payable to government must be paid. We have gotten to a stage where certain demands have to be satisfied. The only way to do this is for government to have funds within its coffers.

It takes time to address changes in any society. Some of the approaches introduced so far have in place a debt collector within the Treasury Department, and Members would have been informed as to the success that this unit is having. Several million dollars have been collected by that unit that would otherwise have been either delayed or avoided over the past recent years. We have to continue to scale up these procedures and arrangements so that monies due to government are paid at the end of the day.

We know that the tourism area has to be looked at. One Member mentioned the amount of money being spent in terms of advertising and promoting the Cayman Islands on an annual basis. What comes back to government in the way of tourism accommodation tax, I think, reflects just a fragment or small portion in terms of what has been spent. This situation has to be remedied.

I will not regard the challenge given to the Government and me to address this area as unreasonable because I know it is reasonable. This is an area that has to be looked at. However, I should mention that Members are going to be receiving complaints from owners of hotel establishments and especially condominium operators when the new procedures and arrangements are put in place. This is an arrangement where everyone will have to be prepared to recognise that the strict requirements of whatever body of legislation is put in place will have to be fully complied with. It is only reasonable that what is due to government should be paid.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: The question is that a Bill entitled, The Stamp Duty (Amendment) (No. 2) Bill 2001 be given a second reading. Those in favour please say Aye. Those against, No.

AYES.

The Speaker: The Ayes have it.

AGREED: THE STAMP DUTY (AMENDMENT) (NO. 2) BILL 2001 GIVEN A SECOND READING.

The Speaker: We shall suspend proceedings until 2 pm.

PROCEEDINGS RESUMED AT 3.25 PM

The Speaker: Please be seated. Proceedings are resumed.

Bills, second readings. The Public Management and Finance Bill 2001 to be moved by the Honourable Third Official Member.

THE PUBLIC MANAGEMENT AND FINANCE BILL, 2001

Hon. George A. McCarthy: I beg to move the Second Reading of a Bill entitled The Public Management and Finance Bill 2001.

The Speaker: Do you wish to speak to it?

Hon. George A. McCarthy: I am sure that Honourable Members recognise that the system used by government in accounting for its finances needs to see significant improvement. The existing system is based on a style of government management that we and most of the Commonwealth inherited from the United Kingdom and which was developed over one century ago.

It is a management system focused on controlling behaviour, not on encouraging the best performance. It is a management system focused on keeping track of what is in the government's bank account, not what the government's real revenue expenditures, assets, and liabilities are. It is a management system that assumes the Government will do the same thing year after year, not a management system which enables the Government to plan and act strategically in response to changes in local and international circumstances.

In short, our current system of managing the Government and finances is no longer suitable for a government that must operate in a dynamic global economy. These shortcomings have become increasingly clear to all of us and for some time we have been working on developing a new result-based management system appropriate to the Cayman Islands.

In the 2001 Budget Address it was indicated to this House that the Government would be introducing legislation to further this reform and replace the existing Public and Finance and Audit Law. The Government is pleased to bring The Public Management and Finance Bill 2001 to this Honourable House today.

The objective of the Public Management and Finance Bill provides the legislative mandate for the Financial Management Initiative (FMI). FMI has been carefully designed to address our own unique problems in our own unique way. It has involved extensive collaboration and dialogue between Members of the Legislative Assembly, Ministers and Members of government and the civil service over a three-year period. The result reflected in this Bill is a Cayman model of management; I will underscore that. It has not been simply copied from another jurisdiction. Rather, we have learned from the strengths and weaknesses of other countries and developed our own Cayman model.

FMI will fundamentally change the way in which the government manages itself. This will happen in five very important ways: First, it will require government to plan and manage strategically and to debate and agree to strategy with the Legislative Assembly on an annual basis. Amongst other things, this will provide a further way to bring Vision 2008 into the mainstream of governmental activity.

Second, it will require government's strategy to be linked to specific actions. This will be achieved through the introduction of output budgeting. Outputs are goods and services that the government and its agencies provide to the public in order to achieve the government's strategic objectives.

Third, the Bill will require government to budget and account for its finances on a much more complete and accurate basis. This will be achieved through the introduction of accrual accounting. Accrual accounting is a system of accounting used in the private sector and it involves recording all revenues, expenses, assets and liabilities, not just those that go through a bank account. Accrual accounting is steadily being adopted by governments around the world and its use is encouraged by all the international agencies such as World Bank, International Monetary Fund, and the United Nations, just to name a few. Cayman will lead the Caribbean in this change.

Fourth, the Bill mandates a new regime of open disclosure for budgeting and reporting. Honourable Members and the public will have access to detailed performance oriented budget documents, not just for government as a whole, but also for each ministry, portfolio, statutory authority and government companies. Members will also receive quarterly reports on the performance of each of these agencies and on the government as a whole. The reports will include non-financial, as well as financial information and will be publicly available as soon as they are tabled.

Fifth, the Bill allows for the delegation of financial input controls to ministries and portfolios. This is necessary as we move from a centralised input controlled environment to a decentralised output and performance focused management system. It will also create new opportunities to improve the efficiency of government agencies.

Overall, the Bill is designed to modernise the Government's financial management system and to establish an environment for improved strategic and operational performance. This in turn will make government more efficient and effective.

The Bill is comprised of eight Parts and a number of Schedules. Part 1 contains the commencement section as well as defining the terms used in the Bill. Parts 11 to VII are focused on the roles and responsibilities of each of the key parties in the financial management system which are: the legislature; the Executive Council; ministries and portfolios; statutory authorities and government companies; the Portfolio of Finance and Economic Development; and the Audit Office. Part VIII provides a number of general provisions. For Members' benefit, I would like to provide a brief overview of the key clauses of the Bill.

Part 1—Clause 2 is the commencement provisions clause. This has the legislation coming into force on 1 January 2002. However, it allows for the majority of the Bill to come into force with the effect of the 2004 Budget. This means that the Budget process commencing in 2003 will be run on the new strategic output accrual basis required by the Bill.

The existing Public Finance and Audit Law and regulations will continue in force until the new law comes into effect. This means that during 2003 and 2004 both the old law and the new law will be in force, but in relation to different financial years.

The Bill contains a number of provisions delegating decisions over inputs and banking matters to Chief Officers (that is Permanent Secretaries and equivalents). These provisions will come into force on 1 January 2005. It might appear to some Members that this implementation timeframe is somewhat drawn out. However, I can assure you that this is not the case.

The new skills needed by managers in the civil service are extensive. The timing has been carefully programmed to allow time for Ministries and Portfolios to develop the management systems and skills necessary to operate effectively in the delegated input environment.

Clause 3 contains definitions. These include a number of important distinctions. The first relates to the two different dimensions of performance that will be required of government agencies. These are "purchase performance" and "ownership performance." "Purchase performance" is a performance that a purchaser or customer would expect of an organisation and primarily relates to the delivery of outputs which are goods and services. "Ownership performance" is the performance that an owner would expect of an organisation which would primarily relate to the nature and scope of the organisation's activities, financial performance, maintaining capability, and the management of risk.

The second distinction relates to the different types of government resources and who will manage them. I will start with Executive Resources: Executive Resources are those revenues, expenditures, assets and liabilities that will be controlled by Executive Council. They relate to the government as a whole and include revenue such as customs import duty, payment to ministries and portfolios for the delivery of outputs and assets, over which Executive Council or the Legislative Assembly retain direct control, such as Crown land and roads.

Entity resources will be controlled by ministries, portfolios, statutory authorities, and government companies. These include the revenue earned from delivering outputs, input costs, which are mainly personnel costs and other operating costs, and assets used in producing outputs such as computers, furniture, plant and equipment.

The distinction between executive and entity resource is important because the Bill provides chief officers with extensive delegated authority to hold manage and control entity resources. In addition, only executive expenses require appropriation. This approach is designed to clarify roles and accountability, and to give effect to the delegated input environment that is an integral part of the new output management system.

Part II outlines the financial management functions that will reside with the Legislative Assembly. These reflect the constitutional role of the legislature to authorise revenues and expenditures of the Government and to hold the Government accountable, accordingly.

Clause 7 requires Legislative Assembly approval by way of a law or resolution for the collection, or change in rates of coercive revenue. Coercive revenue is revenue using government's coercive powers that are not directly related to the provision of services. Customs duties are the most obvious example.

Clauses 8 and 10—to establish a new appropriation system that requires all appropriations be made to the Executive Council rather than to ministries or departments as currently done. In addition, all appropriations must be on an accrual basis. These clauses also require that appropriations be for eight specified categories rather than the current heads. The eight categories are defined in clause 10 of the Bill.

Clause 9 requires the Legislative Assembly to authorise by way of resolution guarantees given on behalf of the government, before they are given. This reflects current practice.

Clause 11 establishes some permanent appropriations that never lapse. These relate to the salary of the Auditor General, public service pension contributions and borrowing expenses. These were previously referred to as statutory expenditure.

Part III outlines the role and responsibilities of the Executive Council. The Executive Council's role includes responsibility for setting the outcome priorities of the Government; ensuring that the actions of the Government are consistent with those outcomes; and managing the financial performance of the entire public sector. The term "entire public sector" means the Legislative Assembly, the Executive Council and all the entities that make up the Government, including statutory authorities and government companies.

Clause 14 requires the Executive Council to make financial decisions in a manner consistent with a set of "principles of responsible financial management." This is a new concept designed to encourage good fiscal management and there is no equivalent in the existing Public Finance and Audit Law.

The five financial principles are:

- 1) running operating surpluses rather than deficits;

- 2) ensuring that the entire public sector assets are greater than its liabilities;
- 3) ensuring borrowing is within defined limits;
- 4) maintaining cash reserves at a minimum defined amount;
- 5) prudently managing financial risk, including contingent liabilities.

Clause 14 allows the Executive Council to temporarily depart from these principles under certain circumstances. This is to ensure that government has adequate policy flexibility in abnormal circumstances such as a large influx of refugees or a significant economic downturn. The Bill allows for a transition from the current financial position to that required by the principles.

Clause 79, in Part VIII of the Bill, specifies a timetable for this transition. The exact transition varies for each principle but the maximum period is eight years.

Clauses 17 through 22 define how the annual budget process is to operate. As part of this new process, two key documents are required. The first is a strategic policy statement. This is to be presented to the Legislative Assembly approximately six months before the Budget each year. It is to outline the government's outcome goals and financial targets for the forthcoming year together with comprehensive economic forecasts. The strategic policy statement will provide an explicit opportunity for the Legislative Assembly to debate the Government's strategic objectives before the detailed budget is developed.

The second document is an Annual Plan and Estimates which will replace the current Budget Book. The Bill requires that this be presented no later than two months before the new financial year begins. The Annual Plan and Estimates will among other things specify the output groups, transfer payment categories, and other policy actions the Government intends to use in the forthcoming year to achieve the agreed strategy. It will also provide multi accrual-based forecast financial statement for the entire public sector.

Clauses 28 and 29 require the Executive Council to table quarterly reports and an annual report on the performance of the entire public sector. These will compare performance against that outlined in the Annual Plan and Estimates. The Annual Report is to be audited by the audit office.

Clauses 30 and 31 require the Executive Council to annually agree with the agency concerning the performance it expects from that agency. In the case of ministries and portfolios this is to take the form of a performance agreement documenting both the output to be delivered and the ownership performance to be achieved. Performance agreements will be tabled with the Annual Plan and Estimates each year and will provide the basis for both Executive Council and Legislative Assembly to monitor that the performance expected is being delivered.

Clause 26 requires the Financial Secretary to gather before each general election a pre-election economic and financial update. This is to obtain an updated economic forecast financial statement for the government. The contents of the update are defined in the section, as is the period within which it must be gazetted. This clause also has no equivalent in the existing Public Finance and Audit Law. Its objective is to ensure that the voters of this country have access to reliable up-to-date information about the government's finances in the lead up to a general election. It reflects the government's commitment to the principle of transparency.

Clauses 32 to 36 outline the duties and powers of the Financial Secretary. These include the authority to issue financial regulations and a new set of regulations will be issued to replace the existing Public Finance and Store Regulations. The new regulations will, among other things, establish the internal controls that must operate in each ministry and portfolio, and authorise the internal audit group to verify that those controls are in fact operating. This is to ensure that the move to a delegated input authority does not result in a lapse in the financial control or reduction in probity.

As a further protection, Clause 80 in Part VIII of the Bill specifies an interim internal control system that is to apply during the transition from input controls to output controls. This will ensure that input controls are maintained until ministries and portfolios have demonstrated their ability to manage under the new system.

Part IV outlines the role and responsibilities of Ministries and Portfolios. The Bill defines a ministry or portfolio so that it includes the departments, sections and units within it. It also defines a "chief officer" as a permanent secretary or, in the case of a portfolio, an equivalent position.

Clauses 39 to 41 provide the chief officer of a ministry or portfolio with the powers necessary to manage his or her ministry or portfolio in an output base management system. This includes the power to earn revenue by selling outputs; incur entity expenses relating to inputs; buy and sell entity assets; determine the management and production systems of the ministry or portfolio; to operate a bank account provided that it is within the centralised banking system which is to be established by the Treasury Department. As I mentioned earlier, these powers do not come into force until the year 2005.

Clause 41 also requires each ministry or portfolio to pay a capital charge each year. The capital charge reflects the cost of capital invested in the ministry or portfolio. The cost of capital is an input cost of a ministry just as wages are the input cost that reflects the cost of labour. However, because ministries do not pay interest or dividends which are how the cost of capital is recognised in the private sector, it can easily be forgotten. The capital charge ensures it is reflected in the operating cost of a ministry or portfolio.

Clauses 42 through 44 require a ministry or portfolio to prepare a performance agreement, and a quarterly and annual report each year.

Part V outlines the role and responsibilities of statutory authorities and government companies. This includes the requirement to prepare an annual ownership agreement, an annual purchase agreement, a half-yearly report and an audited annual report. All of these are to be tabled in the Legislative Assembly. Any information a Financial Secretary determines is commercially sensitive need not be included in any of these documents.

Part VI contains a number of provisions relating to the Portfolio of Finance and Economic Development. Many of these reflect its current responsibilities including preparing economic forecasts, coordinating the budget process and preparing the entire public sector quarterly and annual financial statements.

Clause 53 also includes some new duties. These reflect the new management system and include:

- 1) establishing the accounting policies to be used by the entire public sector;
- 2) operating the new centralised banking system;
- 3) monitoring the output delivered and ownership performance of the government agencies.

Part VII outlines the role and responsibilities of the Auditor-General and the Audit Office. The provisions of this Part (VII) are primarily a modernisation of the equivalent provisions of the existing Public Finance and Audit Law (1997 Revision). However, an important change relates to the accountability arrangements for the Audit Office. The Bill recognises that consistent with its constitutional role the Audit Office should be accountable to the Legislative Assembly rather than the Executive Council. Consequently, Clause 66 requires that decisions about the budget for the Audit Office be made by a committee of the Legislative Assembly rather than Executive Council. The Audit Office is to be made accountable to the Committee which, in relation to the Audit Office is to undertake the functions that the Executive Council takes in relation to ministries and portfolios.

Clause 68 also requires the Audit Office to be audited by an independent auditor. These provisions relating to the accountability of the Audit Office reflect modern practice in the UK and leading Commonwealth countries.

Part VIII contains a number of miscellaneous provisions. These relate to the management of trust assets, offences under the Bill, and transitional arrangements between the old law and the new financial management system.

Members are aware that there will be some amendments during the Committee stage of the Bill. Dealing with these amendments, the Government proposes to make a small number of amendments to the Bill currently before Members. These will be introduced during the committee stage and are designed to further improve the way in which the government's financial management system operates.

The amendments fall into four categories: The first are a series of amendments to change the Government's balance date from 31 December to 30 June. This will occur from 1 July 2003, with a transitional six-month financial year for the period 1 January 2003 to 30 June 2003. As a result of this change, the implementation of accrual budgeting and reporting, will now take place in the 2003-2004 financial year which is six months later than the timeline in the gazetted Bill.

The second set of changes relating to the ministry or portfolio performance agreements are amendments to the clauses. These changes define who exactly is to sign the agreements.

The third group of amendments are to the clauses relating to the accountability of the Audit Office. These will make the audit office directly accountable to the Legislative Assembly rather than the Speaker, as currently drafted. This will also have the Budget for the Audit Office set by the Public Accounts Committee rather than a special three-person committee, as currently drafted.

The fourth group of amendments is to the commencement clauses. This will bring into force immediately some of the investigatory powers of the Auditor General.

As I mentioned in the introduction, this Bill will fundamentally change the way in which government manages its finances. It will help focus our attention on results, not just on how money is spent. It will help focus more of our attention on strategic matters not just the small details. It will help us achieve a government that is more efficient and one which delivers better value for money services to the people of the Cayman Islands. It will also help us achieve the vision this country has collectively set for itself.

Thank you for allowing me to explain the provisions of the Bill. I commend it to Honourable Members.

The Speaker: The question is that a Bill entitled the Public Finance and Management Bill be given a second reading. The Motion is open for debate.

Does any Member wish to speak? Does any other Member wish to speak? Last call. The Floor is opened for debate. Does any Member wish to speak?

The First Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman.

Mrs. Julianna Y. O'Connor-Connolly: Mr. Speaker, I beg your indulgence. Two or three of us would like to speak on this but because of the complexity of the Bill, in addition to the new amendments and vast ramifications on the finances and governing of this country, we would seek, through you, to see whether or not the Government would be prepared for us to adjourn at this time and come back tomorrow to debate.

The Speaker: What is the wish of the House? Shall we put it to a vote?

The Third Elected Member for George Town.

Dr. Frank S. McField: Mr. Speaker, I do not understand why people are going to try to waste this beautiful day by trying to get more time to consider something that seems to be very long as a Bill. We understand why it has to be long because it obviously takes in so many aspects of financial management into account. However, thank God that we are able to have an overview of the issue we are dealing with. We know the motives behind the Government bringing this Bill and we have a pretty good idea of what the Bill is attempting to achieve for us here in the Cayman Islands.

It is basically a question of whether or not we can agree with the motives and the intention of this legislation, rather than being able to sit here or go home when we should be spending our time doing useful things trying to find ways to come up with technicalities that perhaps will cast doubt on the usefulness of this legislation.

I believe there are certain things that have to be done in this country and there are certain things that should have been done in this country sometime back. The modernisation of the way in which we deal with financial issues is something that was advocated by the Backbench in 1996 to 2000 before this Government that is now in charge of bringing this Bill, came to power.

The previous government always gave me the impression that they doubted the feasibility of this legislation and therefore I am happy that the legislation has had an opportunity to come this far as a result of them no longer being in place.

We all know that I have my reservations about some of the activities of this present Government. However, it will remain that I will always be a little bit more inclined to be critical of their predecessors than I am of those who are trying their best somehow, to give the country the possibility to modernise itself, as a result of the fact that we are all bragging about how global our village has become.

If our village is so global, I cannot see how at this particular point, after having spent so much money in bringing people all the way from New Zealand to work, over a long period of time to perfect this legislation in such a way as to localise it; to allow it to be fit and almost tailor made for our cultural specifics, the way in which decision making takes place in our jurisdiction, and to take into account our unique constitutional position.

I can say at this point, perhaps more so than Members who did not understand the body language and some of the conceit which existed in this Legislative Assembly in regard to this particular legislation, that on one hand the previous government, although funding the development for this legislation, had no intention of ever seeing it survive.

I feel it is important to understand that some of us believe the reason why we need to oppose this particular Finance and Management Bill is because that Bill itself is empowering people within our civil service to be able to achieve dynamic results, rather than tying them down in the old colonial way, and making them instruments of one or two persons who might have the power. So, rather than trying to control our society, we are trying to motivate and create the legislation for the flexibility and motivation that will result in dynamic outcomes.

If empowering the persons who work within our bureaucracy causes a need for constitutional amendment, the loosening up of the centralisation of power in the hands of one person will spread and become more of a collective power. Therefore, based on our finances in the answerability of Executive Council to the legislative branch, then I believe this is a good development, whether or not it could even be more perfected by certain types of constitutional amendments.

At this moment, the point the Bill is at, is an improvement on the old money management law which reminds me of a kind of medieval way of trading in things that are no longer relevant. If I take my mind back to the period when Jesus was around and recall the way merchants counted things and put heavy things on their shoulders trying to carry those places, exchange might be better done if we did not have to have all the so-called valid variables in place at the time we are doing the transaction.

So, there is a certain amount of trust that has to exist if we are going to implement such a money management system. There is a change in the way in which we make decisions and become accountable for the decisions we make. I believe that this is good for our country. Anyone who comes and tries to talk it down without giving it a possibility to be instituted, and tried, really cannot be fair because we have experience in coming here when Members of Parliament have had to look at a budget.

At the end of the day, I think, what this legislation will also require is for Parliament or the Legislative Assembly to play a more active role in scrutinising the Executive Account for what it spends, and hold them accountable for the result of the monies we allocate to them annually. It will change the period that the executive will report back to the Legislative Assembly in regard to the spending of money. It will also change the fiscal year period for the executive so that rather than reporting at the end of the year, they will report more conveniently in the middle of the year. I think that is a practical management tool that will help improve things.

One issue I seriously like is the fact that the Government will have to account in time before a general election to let the public know what their management qualities have been. The system, at the end of the day, therefore gives us the possibility to talk about prudent fiscal responsibility, which is what the past conservative governments always liked to talk about. However, the prudent economics they talked about could be hidden from the people and by the time you

When we get up to debate this particular Bill, let us remember that this Bill allows openness and transparency to become a real part of the governmental machinery of this country. I believe that is an honourable attempt to put in place legislation which will make it easier for the people to be able to evaluate the performance of their government.

A government is a very important societal institution. Many people do not realise exactly how important a government is to a society. It is like a heart is to a human being—it is the thing that allows us to function, without which we would fall apart and society would collapse. We saw that as we watched the tragedy in the US. We understand the important role government plays and how chaotic and lost Americans would be without a federal government that had the ability to motivate and mobilise the people to preserve their civilisation.

Let us, therefore, not work towards discrediting government, but work towards giving government more credibility by making it more open and accountable to the people. It is only through government becoming more open and accountable to the people that the people will believe government is there to serve them and not itself.

This legislation is welcomed by me because I understood from the very beginning the enthusiasm of a lot of the persons who were the Movers, in bringing this concept to our jurisdiction played, in us being here today. I would like to thank the gentleman from New Zealand. I recognise him as part of the ongoing team that has helped to bring this legislation to a point where, I believe, it fits in, not just with our bureaucracy but it also serves to enhance our psyche.

I think that this is a good time for me to sit down, but before doing so I will again say thanks to Mr. Tony Dale who has helped to bring this particular Bill to the point it is at, and also to Mr. Peter Gough, and all the others. It should not take much time to consider what is to be said about what is right when it is right!

Thank you.

The Speaker: Does any other Member wish to speak? The Honourable Minister for Health and Information Technology.

Hon. Linford A. Pierson: Mr. Speaker, it has been mentioned that a number of Members would like to speak and given the complexity of the Bill and in light of Members preparing speeches for debate, I would seek to move the adjournment of the House.

The Speaker: I am in the hands of Members. If you wish to move the motion for the adjournment, we will see the result.

The Honourable Minister for Health and Information Technology.

ADJOURNMENT

Hon. Linford A. Pierson: Mr. Speaker, I move the adjournment of this Honourable House until 10 am tomorrow.

The Speaker: The question is that this Honourable House do now adjourn until 10 am tomorrow. Those in favour, please say Aye. Those against, No.

AYES.

The Speaker: The Ayes have it.

AT 4.11 PM THE HOUSE STOOD ADJOURNED UNTIL 10 AM THURSDAY, 20 SEPTEMBER 2001.

OFFICIAL HANSARD REPORT
THURSDAY
20 SEPTEMBER 2001
11.10 AM
Seventh Sitting

The Speaker: Good morning. I will ask the Second Elected Member for George Town to say prayers.

PRAYERS

Mr. Alden M. McLaughlin, Jr.: Let us pray:

Dear Heavenly Father, the world is still aghast and disbelieving the horror and savagery that has characterised the terrorist assault on the United States of America, that international beacon of democracy and modern civilisation.

And dear Father, as we stand here today, the drums of war are beating with an ever-urgent cadence. The world totters on the brink of recession and we worry and we worry.

Dear Father, war is mankind's oldest weakness. No civilisation has ever been able to abolish it. War creates more problems than it cures. But still, war against evil cannot always be avoided.

Those who beget violence, can only respect and understand superior violence. Dear Father as we come now to understand that operation Infinite Justice has been started by the US, we ask for your guidance, your instruction upon those who make these far-reaching and irreversible decisions.

Dear Father, we ask at this time of conflict and travail that you will attend us all with your mercy and your wisdom.

Let us say the Lord's Prayer together:

Our Father, who art in Heaven, Hallowed be Thy Name, Thy Kingdom come, Thy will be done, in earth as it is in Heaven. Give us this day our daily bread, and forgive us our trespasses, as we forgive them that trespass against us, and lead us not into temptation, but deliver us from evil. For Thine is the Kingdom, the power and the glory, forever and ever. Amen.

The Lord bless us and keep us. The Lord make His face shine upon us and be gracious unto us. The Lord lift up the light of His countenance upon us and give us peace now and always. Amen.

Proceedings resumed at 11.09 am

The Speaker: Please be seated. Proceedings are resumed.

READING BY THE HONOURABLE SPEAKER OF MESSAGES AND ANNOUNCEMENTS

APOLOGIES

The Speaker: I have apologies for absence from the Honourable First and Second Official Members who are off the Island and from the Third Elected Member for West Bay.

Statements by Honourable Ministers and Members of the Government. The Honourable Minister responsible for Planning, Communications and Works.

STATEMENTS BY HONOURABLE
MINISTERS/MEMBERS OF GOVERNMENT

APOLOGY FOR LATE START OF SITTING

Hon. D. Kurt Tibbetts: I apologise to the Honourable Speaker, Members and the press for the late start of the Sitting. There were several important unplanned meetings, which unfortunately could not be avoided.

SUSPENSION OF STANDING ORDER 23(7) AND (8)

[Moved by the Honourable Minister for Planning, Communications and Works]

QUESTION PUT. AGREED: STANDING ORDER 23 (7) AND (8) SUSPENDED TO ALLOW QUESTION TIME TO CONTINUE BEYOND 11 AM.

The Speaker: Questions to Honourable Members. Question 114 is standing in the name of the Elected Member for East End.

QUESTIONS TO HONOURABLE
MINISTERS AND MEMBERS

QUESTION NO. 114

No. 114: Mr. V. Arden McLean asked the Honourable Acting First Official Member responsible for the Portfolio of Internal and External Affairs how many contracts, attracting Contracted Officers Supplement (COS), have been renewed since the passage of the Motion in the Standing Finance Committee of the Legislative Assembly approving the cessation of this allowance; and to provide a breakdown by post, date of renewal and date of expiry of contract.

The Speaker: The Honourable Acting First Official Member responsible for Internal and External Affairs.

Hon. Donovan W. F. Ebanks: The Motion in the Standing Finance Committee approving the cessation of the Contracted Officers' Supplement (COS) was passed on 14 May 2001. Subsequent to that date, a total of 40 contracts attracting Contracted Officers' Supplement or Allowance, have been renewed as of August 2001. A breakdown of these is attached. I would ask that the 'date of renewal' in the second column be labelled "date of commencement" of the contract. Contracts are shown in the respective months of their renewal.

Obviously, the decision to renew is taken prior to the date of the new contract. Under the General Orders, persons are required to indicate six months prior to the expiry of the current contract whether they wish to renew. The decision is taken sometime in that six-month period and three or four months before the actual expiry of the current contract as to whether to renew. So, the schedule shows all those contracts taken in August, July, June, and May to renew. The date that is shown as "date of renewal" is actually the date the contract will commence.

If you look at the schedule, the first post of "Senior Internal Auditor" the decision to renew was taken in August. What is shown as "date of renewal" is actually the date the new contract will commence, which is 2 November 2001. I apologise for the way this is presented. I hope that explanation clarifies it.

SUPPLEMENTARIES

The Speaker: The Second Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. Alden M. McLaughlin, Jr.: Can the Member advise this House who took the decision to renew these contracts attracting COS subsequent to the Motion of Standing Finance Committee of 11 May 2001?

The Speaker: The Honourable Acting First Official Member responsible for Internal and External Affairs.

Hon. Donovan W. F. Ebanks: All decisions on the continuation of persons in the employment of the public service against established posts are taken by His Excellency the Governor on the advice of the Public Service Commission and effected by the Personnel Department through the Permanent Secretary of Personnel.

The Speaker: The Second Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. Alden M. McLaughlin, Jr.: Can the Member apprise this House as to where funding has been identified to make provision for the cost associated with the contracted officers' supplement?

The Speaker: The Honourable Acting First Official Member responsible for Internal and External Affairs.

Hon. Donovan W. F. Ebanks: I cannot say on a case by case basis where funding has been identified as the subject of this question were posts where persons were serving on contracts that provided for the payment of contracted officers' supplement and they have subsequently been renewed.

I presume that controlling officers in putting forward recommendations for renewals would have been satisfied that they had funds available and would no doubt have sought their budget appropriation for 2001 on the basis of having to pay this allowance.

The Speaker: The Second Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. Alden M. McLaughlin, Jr.: Can the Member advise this House whether His Excellency the Governor is aware that the approval of appropriations and the spending of this country's money is a matter entirely within the remit of the Standing Finance Committee of this House? And further, is His Excellency aware that Standing Finance Committee has resolved that it will not approve funding for contracted officers' supplements in relation to contracts renewed or approved subsequent to its Motion passed on 11 May 2001?

The Speaker: The Honourable Acting First Official Member responsible for Internal and External Affairs.

Hon. Donovan W. F. Ebanks: I believe that His Excellency the Governor is fully aware of both of the points the Member has asked. I am informed by His Excellency that he has met with some Members of this House in relation to this particular subject. He has been away from the Island for a considerable period on leave, but is now back in office. It is his intention to follow through on what the understanding was at the end of that meeting that he would meet with those Members again. He intends to do so as soon as is convenient with a view to concluding those discussions and coming to an arrangement that is acceptable to Members and himself on this matter.

The Speaker: The Third Elected Member for Bodden Town.

Mr. Anthony S. Eden: I thank the Member for his answer, however to the best of my knowledge from that meeting there was no final resolution to this problem. I wonder if the Member would comment on the feeling that these actions are contempt of Parliament.

The Speaker: Honourable Acting First Official Member responsible for Internal and External Affairs, I think that is asking for an opinion, however if you wish to answer it you may.

Hon. Donovan W. F. Ebanks: I will certainly avoid the last part of the Member's question. I thought I had said in response to the previous supplementary that the initial meeting had not reached any conclusion. His Excellency is aware of that and it is against that background that he intends to meet with Members again as soon as is practical.

The Speaker: The Elected Member for East End.

Mr. V. Arden McLean: Would the Member tell us if there is a clause in the contract stating that it will be re-negotiated six months prior to the expiry date?

The Speaker: The Honourable Acting First Official Member responsible for Internal and External Affairs.

Hon. Donovan W. F. Ebanks: The contract with overseas and local includes a provision that not less than six months prior to the expiry, the officer is to indicate to the Government, to the Permanent Secretary of Personnel, through their (Head of Department) HOD, whether he or she wishes to be re-engaged for a subsequent contract or tour.

The decision is then taken, following the officer's indication and initially through the HOD as to whether the HOD would wish to re-engage. That is communicated to the PSC who advises the Governor on whether that recommendation by the HOD should or should not be accepted. The Governor's decision is advised to the Permanent Secretary of Personnel who is the executing officer as government's employer.

The Speaker: The Elected Member for East End.

Mr. V. Arden McLean: Can the Member say why some of these contracts, such as the orthopaedic surgeon, the surveying technician have almost one year left on their contracts? In the case of the orthopaedic surgeon the renewal is dated July 1, 2002, and for the surveying technician March 2002. Is that a deliberate attempt to circumvent Parliament?

The Speaker: The Honourable Acting First Official Member responsible for Internal and External Affairs.

Hon. Donovan W. F. Ebanks: I appreciate the Member's concern. However, the format in which those dates are written is clearly on the day/month/year format. So the respective dates of the two posts he referred to is 7 January and 3 January. These are posts where the officers would have been required prior to the corresponding days in June of this year to give that indication.

I accept that the resolution was passed in May. There are probably positions here where officers had given their indication post May. It is simply that as far as the Personnel Department is concerned, no decision has been taken by His Excellency in relation to General Orders, which they are required to comply with.

The Speaker: The Elected Member for East End.

Mr. V. Arden McLean: I recognise that is my mistake.

Can the Member tell us the usual number of contract renewals on a monthly basis? We are talking about between three and four months where we have had 40 officers with contracts attracting COS being renewed. Can the Member tell us if this is the usual manner in which we get applications for renewal of contracts?

The Speaker: The Honourable Acting First Official Member responsible for Internal and External Affairs.

Hon. Donovan W. F. Ebanks: I have no statistical basis as to what number of contracts is normally renewed per month. However if you take these 40 as being reflective of a three month period and prorate them to 160 per year, in an organisation of 2,700 people, to the best of my recollection 40 percent or 1,000 of those are non-Caymanian, it would seem to me that a rate of renewal of 160 per year where the contracts are typically for two years perhaps seems low rather than high, to me.

In other words, if we have 1,000 people on two year contracts, one would almost assume that on the average you could be renewing a couple of hundred more per year. However as I have no indication of the average, I am just trying to relate these numbers to the size of the organisation the number who are non-Caymanian and on contract.

The Speaker: The Elected Member for East End.

Mr. V. Arden McLean: I thank the Member for that. Can he then verify that since May, six months after May, there will no more based on the Motion that was approved by Parliament. After May there will be no room for renewal, six months after May of 2001.

The Speaker: The Honourable Acting First Official Member responsible for Internal and External Affairs.

Hon. Donovan W F Ebanks: Six months after May is November. My understanding of the situation is that whenever His Excellency takes the decision to discontinue the payment of COS and it is communicated to Personnel . . . if that decision is taken tomorrow or a month from now then at that point, subject to whatever the parameters of that decision are, is when the discontinuation will commence. I see no relation between May and six months thereafter, unless the Member is seeing something that I am not seeing.

The Speaker: The Fourth Elected Member for West Bay.

Mr. Cline A. Glidden, Jr.: I hope I misunderstood what I just heard.

I need a clarification as to what the Member is trying to clarify. What we were made to understand is that after the Motion that was passed by Finance Committee in May there was an explanation given that there was a six month period that negotiations would have had to take place prior to the renewal date of a contract. We were looking at all negotiations prior to ... for example, if we look at the Registered Nurse, which is 15 November 2001, we would have assumed that to have been negotiated 15 May 2001, which would have been six months prior and one day after the resolution was passed by Finance Committee. Any renewals after that date would have meant that no regard was given to the Motion passed by Finance Committee.

I understood the Temporary First Official Member to say that until the Governor decides what the policy is actually going to be, we are going to continue negotiating contracts including COS. Did I understand that correctly?

The Speaker: The Honourable Acting First Official Member responsible for Internal and External Affairs.

Hon. Donovan W. F. Ebanks: The substantive answer basically gives contracts that have been renewed since that Motion was passed where COS has been maintained as a provision of that contract. Obviously, I was not at the meeting and I cannot comment on that meeting, however I would not want to believe that Members were not at the time aware that the payment of COS was still continuing.

The Speaker: The Fourth Elected Member for West Bay.

Mr. Cline A. Glidden, Jr.: I just want to say that discussions were ongoing, but what we are seeing here is a blatant disregard for a motion that was passed by Finance Committee. Even though we were in the process of having meetings or negotiations, a motion was passed by Finance Committee. Now we are saying that we are going to continue with no regard for that Motion and trying to find funding for this.

We are expected to vote a budget in the next few months. I just want to ask whether the Temporary First Official Member knows of any further proposed meetings to try to regularise this, or are we going to continue going ahead with these contracts as such?

The Speaker: I think the Member referred to that in a previous answer. However, if you care to repeat you may Honourable Acting First Official Member responsible for Internal and External Affairs.

Hon. Donovan W. F. Ebanks: I think I did state earlier that His Excellency had advised me now that he is back on Island he intends to meet with Members as soon as practical to continue those discussions and hopefully arrive at an amicable conclusion.

The Speaker: The Second Elected Member for Bodden Town.

Mr. Gilbert A. McLean: Perhaps to remind the House of the 11 May Motion, it said, “BE IT RESOLVED that that the monthly payment made to some Civil Servants, called Contracted Officers Supplement, be discontinued as each current contract expires and, except for those instances where a contract has been negotiated and a commitment given to pay Contracted Officers Supplement, no further such contracts be entered into and that this payment will totally cease on the expiry of the last such contract.”

The Motion was passed in Finance Committee which is comprised of all Elected Members of this House. It did make a provision that contracts after 14 May 2001 could be issued, however those had to fall within a timeline of six months prior to that and any contracts after that would be contracts ignoring the Motion which was approved by the Legislative Assembly.

Where such a thing happens by the executive or administrative arm of government it then becomes contempt of Parliament. We know there are those among us who realise this and must of necessity object to it, including the lawyers among us who understand this.

Is His Excellency the Governor and all persons concerned with this matter aware of the situation as it exists? If so, in the face of His Excellency's orders does the administrative arm ignore that fact? If so, is he then invoking section 38 of the Constitution to override the decision of Parliament?

The Speaker: I think you are asking for an opinion. Honourable Acting First Official Member, you may answer it if you care to.

Mr. V. Arden McLean: Mr. Speaker, someone has to answer it. There may be differences between Members of the Backbench, however this is one time where there is no difference between us—

The Speaker: I did not recognise you, please sit down.

What I said was that you are asking for an opinion. You cannot ask a Minister or an Official Member for their personal opinion.

The Second Elected Member for Bodden Town.

Mr. Gilbert A. McLean: Having regard for what you just said, I am attempting to discover is the Acting First Official Member knows if His Excellency the Governor has taken the decision that the Motion passed by Parliament is to be ignored and that these contracts should continue.

The Speaker: That is an acceptable supplementary.

The Honourable Acting First Official Member responsible for Internal and External Affairs.

Hon. Donovan W. F. Ebanks: The only answer I can give to that is obviously His Excellency is aware of the Motion that was passed by the Standing Finance Committee and subsequently accepted by the House. It is my understanding that it was because of that Motion why the initial meeting was held.

The information I have shared with Members in relation to his desire and intention to continue those discussions does not suggest to me that he is ignoring the matter. I would respectfully suggest that that is a question that you can only address to him when he meets with you and other Members in the near future.

The Speaker: The Second Elected Member for Bodden Town.

Mr. Gilbert A. McLean: Is the Acting First Official Member in a position to say if it was conveyed to him or to the administration by His Excellency the Governor that in the meeting we had with him where this was mentioned and was not dealt with in any great detail that Members were specific for two reasons: 1) that it was discriminatory and unfair to Caymanian civil servants, and 2) that the Members had an interest in saving the country 3 percent of revenue paid in this regard why we took the position we did and that there was no conclusion in that discussion?

The Speaker: The Honourable Acting First Official Member responsible for Internal and External Affairs.

Hon. Donovan W. F. Ebanks: I got most of the last part of his question, but not what he was asking at the beginning. Could he repeat?

The Speaker: The Second Elected Member for Bodden Town would you repeat that please?

Mr. Gilbert A. McLean: Yes. My inquiry was if that had been indicated to the administration, he or the First Official Member, that in that discussion held with the Governor, which was not in any great detail on this subject, that Members were concerned over two things: 1) that it was discriminatory and unfair to Caymanian civil servants, and 2) that it was a means of saving 3 percent in this regard and that also it is not a question of wanting to deny what would be pension to expatriate civil servants but that it had to be in similar form in the way it is paid to Caymanian civil servants.

The Speaker: The Honourable Acting First Official Member responsible for Internal and External Affairs.

Hon. Donovan W. F. Ebanks: I thank the Member for that. I know nothing. His Excellency shared nothing with me as to the nature of the discussions and what had been advanced. I have not seen anything within official communications on the subject whatsoever.

The Speaker: We have gone into this at great length. I would like to give Members an opportunity to ask questions, I do not want to deny anyone his democratic right, however time is being consumed.

I now recognise the First Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman.

Mrs. Julianna Y. O'Connor-Connolly: I would like to thank the Member for the manner in which he has answered the questions so far. I wish to put to him that taking the question I am about to ask against the background that we are now faced with a circular that civil servants will not be paid until the 31 of October, is it your opinion that the Governor would perhaps now take this as sufficient catalyst to call an urgent meeting of Members of parliament to discuss COS?

The Speaker: The Honourable Acting First Official Member responsible for Internal and External Affairs, again, I think that is an opinion. If you care to answer you may.

The First Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman.

Mrs. Julianna Y. O'Connor-Connolly: Can the Member then say how much it is costing this country per month for COS? If not, can he give an undertaking to provide parliament with this information as soon as he is able?

The Speaker: The Honourable Acting First Official Member responsible for Internal and External Affairs.

Hon. Donovan W. F. Ebanks: I would be happy to give that undertaking. I do not have that information available.

The Speaker: The Second Elected Member for West Bay.

Mr. Rolston M. Anglin: I would like to ask the Member if he could say why this Motion passed in the middle of May 2001, yet we did not have any meeting on this until sometime well after the middle of June? It must be known that we are united on this and we are resolved to stand our ground. I am not sure there was a delay for any reason because this is an urgent matter that needs urgent attention.

The Speaker: The Honourable Acting First Official Member responsible for Internal and External Affairs.

Hon. Donovan W. F. Ebanks: I had no role in organising that meeting, and I have no knowledge as to the circumstances that led to it being held on the date that it was.

The Speaker: The Elected Member for East End.

Mr. V. Arden McLean: Can the Honourable Member say, since the passage of this Motion in Finance Committee and then in the House, if there has been any communication from the Governor or the Chief Secretary to the rest of the civil service informing them of actions taken by Parliament and requesting that they give cognisance to what was passed in Parliament?

The Speaker: The Honourable Acting First Official Member responsible for Internal and External Affairs.

Hon. Donovan W. F. Ebanks: There has been no communication that I am aware of. The issue is one that revolves around a provision which currently exists in General Orders, which is a document issued by His Excellency. Until such time as a decision is taken by him to change that provision, obviously, it remains and public servants are expected to comply with the provisions of General Orders.

The Speaker: The Second Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman.

Mr. Lyndon L. Martin: A lot of reference has been made to General Orders and the payment of COS. I think it is fair to say that where the General Orders conflict with the Appropriation Bill passed in this House, the Appropriation Bill would take precedence. The Appropriation Bill vetted by Finance Committee and at the same sitting Motion No. 2 which ceased the payment of COS, thus making the Appropriation Bill not including COS for future officers, would this not override the General Orders?

The Speaker: The Honourable Acting First Official Member responsible for Internal and External Affairs, again, in my estimation that is asking for an opinion.

Hon. Donovan W. F. Ebanks: It is certainly a matter that I would take advice on. Having obtained that advice, if Members wish I can share it.

The Speaker: The Second Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman.

Mr. Lyndon L. Martin: I seek your indulgence, Mr. Speaker, to ask the Acting First Official Member if he could defer this question to the Second Official Member the Attorney General to provide legal advice on this matter.

The Speaker: The Honourable Acting First Official Member responsible for Internal and External Affairs.

Hon. Donovan W. F. Ebanks: Mr. Speaker, obviously he would be the source that I would turn to for the advice, however, I would not expect it to be fair and reasonable to ask him to get up and attempt to provide that advice in this forum without having some time to consider it.

The Speaker: The Second Elected Member for George Town. I am going to have to stop after there more supplementaries, so spread them out.

Mr. Alden M. McLaughlin, Jr.: Thirty-nine of the contracts renewed are indicated in the response from the Member that they will be renewed with effect during this calendar year. Can the Member confirm that provision for the payment of COS in relation to those 39 contracts was not provided for in the budget for 2001 and in the accompanying Appropriation Law, and in that event how is it intended to provide funding for this year for these 39 contracts?

The Speaker: The Honourable Acting First Official Member responsible for Internal and External Affairs.

Hon. Donovan W. F. Ebanks: I cannot confirm whether the 2001 Budget contained the appropriation to allow COS in respect to each of these. I said earlier that because at the time budgets were prepared and submitted the payment of COS was a provision and it remains a provision. However, it would have been the basis on which budgetary submissions would have been made that I felt it would be reasonable that those submissions would have included allocations to meet that cost. Unless there was some exercise whereby following the Motion in Finance Committee amounts were deleted from the budget it would seem reasonable to assume money is provided in the 2001 Budget. However, I cannot confirm it or deny it.

The Speaker: Are there any further supplementaries? If not, we move on to question 115, standing in the name of the Elected Member for East End.

QUESTION NO. 115

No. 115: Mr. V. Arden McLean asked the Honourable First Official Member responsible for the Portfolio of Internal and External Affairs if any new employees have been employed for the year 2001, attracting contracted officers' supplement (COS).

The Speaker: The Honourable Acting First Official Member responsible for Internal and External Affairs.

Hon. Donovan W. F. Ebanks: Between 1 January 2001 and 31 August 2001, 48 persons have been employed following recruitment on terms that include the payment of contracted officers' supplement.

SUPPLEMENTARIES

The Speaker: The Second Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. Alden M. McLaughlin, Jr.: Can the Member confirm that the Governor has ignored with impunity Motion No. 2 of the Standing Finance Committee which was adopted by this House?

The Speaker: The Honourable Acting First Official Member responsible for Internal and External Affairs.

Hon. Donovan W. F. Ebanks: I cannot give the Member an answer to the question the way he has worded it. What I can say is that there has been no change in the provisions in respect to COS that has been communicated to the service.

The Speaker: The Fourth Elected Member for West Bay.

Mr. Cline A. Glidden, Jr.: Does the Member have any further breakdown as to the 48 persons who have been employed from 1 January to 31 August? How many of them were employed after 14 May?

The Speaker: The Honourable Acting First Official Member responsible for Internal and External Affairs.

Hon. Donovan W. F. Ebanks: Having looked at the supplementary information, I realise that that was not included. I thought it had been included because I was anticipating that supplementary. I will give it to Members. I apologise.

The Speaker: The Elected Member for East End.

Mr. V. Arden McLean: I guess by now the people of this country realise that it does not make sense to put us in here. We are no longer the supreme in the country.

The Speaker: I would ask that you state that that is your opinion.

Mr. V. Arden McLean: That is my opinion, Mr. Speaker. However, obviously, from what is going on it is a very good opinion!

The answer stated that 48 new employees were hired during 2001. I now draw the Acting First Official Member's attention to the 2001 Budget under "New Services" where there are 31 new posts. Only 12 of the 31 have COS. Can the Member tell us why 48, as opposed to 12, have been hired?

The Speaker: The Honourable Acting First Official Member responsible for Internal and External Affairs.

Hon. Donovan W. F. Ebanks: I understood the Member to say that there was provision in new services for 31 posts, and that of those 31 in respect of 12 there was provision for COS. Is that correct? I do not have the budget document before me as he does.

The Speaker: The Elected Member for East End, please clarify.

Mr. V. Arden McLean: Yes, Mr. Speaker, in the 2001 draft budget, under Education, 12 teachers would attract COS, the others are in the Family Support Unit and Financial Reporting Unit which do not attract COS.

The Speaker: The Honourable Acting First Official Member responsible for Internal and External Affairs.

Hon. Donovan W. F. Ebanks: The substantive question was if any new employees had been employed. The answer I gave indicated that 48 persons had been employed. Now, obviously, those 48 persons were not all employed against new posts. In the same way that we have contracts being renewed, we have contracts which are not renewed. In other words, we have posts on the establishment, 2,786 (or whatever the number is) that this 31 new posts would increase. However we have serving officers who at the end of their contract opt not to renew, and we would employ a new person. So, the 48 that I am giving you are simply new employees, but it does not reflect how many new posts we had this year.

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman.

Mrs. Julianna Y. O'Connor-Connolly: Are any of these 48, Caymanians or were they all expatriates?

The Speaker: The Honourable Acting First Official Member responsible for Internal and External Affairs.

Hon. Donovan W. F. Ebanks: They were all persons engaged on overseas contracts and thus non-Caymanian.

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman.

Mrs. Julianna Y. O'Connor-Connolly: Are any Caymanians presently receiving COS in the service?

The Speaker: The Honourable Acting First Official Member responsible for Internal and External Affairs.

Hon. Donovan W. F. Ebanks: Yes, Mr. Speaker, there are Caymanians who are engaged on local contracts that attract COS.

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman.

Mrs. Julianna Y. O'Connor-Connolly: Is he in a position to say if those persons are receiving pension as well, and how many?

The Speaker: The Honourable Acting First Official Member responsible for Internal and External Affairs.

Hon. Donovan W. F. Ebanks: In answer to why, the provision in General Orders is that if a Caymanian is initially engaged who is at an age of 45 or older, they are engaged on local contract terms and paid COS. The provision of the Pensions Law is that if you are receiving the COS you do not participate in the Public Service Pension Plan. I cannot say off hand how many Caymanians are currently receiving the COS.

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman.

Mrs. Julianna Y. O'Connor-Connolly: So that we can be fair in this whole exercise, I wonder if the Member would give an undertaking to supply the House with a list of all those Caymanians receiving COS and pension allotment at this time, and also all those Caymanians who are just receiving COS.

The Speaker: The Honourable Acting First Official Member responsible for Internal and External Affairs.

Hon. Donovan W. F. Ebanks: I understood the Member to ask for a list of all those Caymanians who are receiving COS and pension, and those who are simply getting COS.

I think the question, and I will obviously provide the information, as I understand it, no one who is serving and receiving COS is participating in the pension plan. I suspect the Member is enquiring if anyone who is serving, receiving COS who had previously retired and is also a pensioner. I will enquire and provide the information for the Member.

The Speaker: The Fourth Elected Member for West Bay.

Mr. Cline A. Glidden, Jr.: Mr. Speaker, if you will allow me to read from the Budget Address "The main 2001 policy decisions." The first paragraph says, "These policies include: Curtailing all new services except for new staff at the Bodden Town, Savannah, George Town, John A. Cumber and Red Bay primary and Lighthouse schools and staff for the Family Protection Unit and the Financial Reporting Unit."

Out of these 48 posts how many of those are for the duties or services that were detailed in the main 2001 budget policy decision approved by the House and read by the Third Official Member? I want to know if those posts were for the new services approved, or for services outside of that.

Before I get that response, I would also like to highlight to the Member that another part also made reference to "Removing the amounts for vacant posts from the 2001 Budget except where recruitment is already actively underway."

"Implementing a moratorium on the creation of new posts for the remainder of 2001 except for absolutely 'essential services' staff for new capital projects and new leased sites which come on stream in 2001 and where there are direct revenue or expenditure blocking offsets.

"Implementing a moratorium on recruitment for the remainder of 2001 except for absolutely 'essential services' or where there are direct revenue or expenditure blocking offsets."

Can the Member say if those 48 posts fall within these criteria?

The Speaker: The Honourable Acting First Official Member responsible for Internal and External Affairs.

Hon. Donovan W. F. Ebanks: I do not have with me a list of those posts, and I cannot give him that assessment. I can certainly provide a breakdown of the posts and give an indication to what extent they are consistent with the section of the Budget Address he referred to.

The Speaker: Three additional supplementaries.
The Fourth Elected Member for West Bay.

Mr. Cline A. Glidden, Jr.: I thank the Member for that commitment.

May I ask him— since the answer we are referring to is for persons that have been employed following recruitment on terms that include the payment of contracted officers' supplement—based on the information just read from the 2001 Budget, how many new persons (even those who might not be attracting COS) were employed since there was a moratorium?

The Speaker: I think that is somewhat outside the ambit of the substantive question, but if you care to undertake that, you may.

The Honourable Acting First Official Member responsible for Internal and External Affairs.

Hon. Donovan W. F. Ebanks: I do not have a problem getting the information, I just want to get some clarity. The Member is asking for the total number of posts since the passing of the Appropriation Bill I can look to provide that information.

The Speaker: The Elected Member for East End.

Mr. V. Arden McLean: The Member said in a previous answer that out of the 48 new posts attracting COS some could have been replacement. Since that is the case, why is it that Caymanians could not be placed in those positions through succession planning? Why do we constantly have to hire contracted officers to replace contracted officers? Where is the resolve to Caymanianise the public service?

The Speaker: Are you asking for an opinion or do you want statistics? If you are asking for an opinion, I cannot allow that. However if you want to skirt around that—

Mr. V. Arden McLean: Mr. Speaker, I think I was asking for statistics, so to speak, wondering why when a contracted . . . I suspect that a contracted officer is on contract for a specified time and you would have someone understudying that individual so that when the contract expired that individual (whom I hope would be a Caymanian), since the Immigration Board requires the private sector do that . . . what happened to succession planning in government?

The Speaker: The Honourable Acting First Official Member responsible for Internal and External Affairs.

Hon. Donovan W. F. Ebanks: Mr. Speaker, I was hoping you would ask that to be filed as a substantive question, Sir, there are obviously provisions and efforts ongoing to find Caymanians. I think in recent times we have even seen those efforts coming from new quarters. I have seen the Minister of Education addressing the issue of Caymanians in the teaching profession, which is obviously an area where we employ a lot of non-Caymanians, and clearly do not have understudies where each of those could be replaced by a Caymanian.

It is an area I expect we can always be called to task for not doing more, however it is certainly an area that receives attention. Unfortunately it remains a feature of the demographics of the national labour force and our own needs that there are substantially more needs for employees than there are Caymanian employees.

The Speaker: Final supplementary.
The Second Elected Member for West Bay.

Mr. Rolston M. Anglin: There has been a lot said about new employees, which I am not really interested in because this is simply people replacing other people. Can the Member say of the 48 mentioned here, how many of these are new posts, and since May 14 how many new posts have attracted the COS? That is, all new established posts after 14 May.

In the follow up to what the Member from East End said about Caymanianisation of the civil service, one only needs to ask the Caymanians who have left the force because there are many talented Caymanians, CPAs and the like, who continuously leave the civil service who could be taking up these senior positions, albeit not in the line of accounting.

The Speaker: The Honourable Acting First Official Member responsible for Internal and External Affairs.

Hon. Donovan W. F. Ebanks: The insight the Member is seeking as to how many of these 48 actually represent employment against new posts is information that I simply do not have, but I will provide it.

I take his observation in terms of Caymanians leaving the organisation. I think I said in a previous answer that there is certainly no basis for us to claim that we are all that we aspire to be in terms of attracting and advancing Caymanians. It is an area we must continue to work on.

The Speaker: Moving on to question 116, standing in the name of the Elected Member for East End.

QUESTION NO. 116

No. 116: Mr. V. Arden McLean asked the Honourable First Official Member responsible for the Portfolio of Internal and External Affairs which posts in government presently receive an inducement allowance.

The Speaker: The Honourable Acting First Official Member responsible for Internal and External Affairs.

Hon. Donovan W. F. Ebanks: The provision for the award of an inducement allowance is contained in General Order 2.13. This section concerns overseas' contracts and General Orders 2.13 (6)(a) states, "An Inducement allowance will be awarded to such officers as the Governor may, in his discretion consider it necessary from time to time to attract officers of the required level of experience, competence and qualifications"; the calibre to fill vacancies.

It follows, therefore, that an inducement allowance is not attached to a specific post, but is paid to a person in a post. At present, three officers receive an inducement allowance, namely the officers holding the posts of Attorney General, Commissioner of Police, and Medical Officer of Health. In addition, the Director of Shipping is eligible for and receives a performance bond.

The inducement allowances and the performance bond are of equivalent value, namely 10 percent of the basic salary.

SUPPLEMENTARIES

The Speaker: The Elected Member for East End.

Mr. V. Arden McLean: Can the Member tell us how this inducement allowance is paid? Is it monthly, or at the end of the contract?

The Speaker: The Honourable Acting First Official Member responsible for Internal and External Affairs.

Hon. Donovan W. F. Ebanks: The allowance to the Commissioner of Police is paid upon completion of contract at the discretion of the Governor. The allowance to the Medical Officer of Health is paid upon completion of contract. The allowance to the Attorney General is paid monthly and the performance bond or award is paid annually in arrears to the Director of Shipping at the discretion of the Deputy Financial Secretary who determines the actual amount. The 10 per cent is a limit; however the actual amount can be less than 10 per cent.

The Speaker: The Elected Member for East End.

Mr. V. Arden McLean: Can the Member tell this House if these four posts also attract contracted officers' supplement?

The Speaker: The Honourable Acting First Official Member responsible for Internal and External Affairs.

Hon. Donovan W. F. Ebanks: The four recipients also receive COS.

The Speaker: The Second Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. Alden M. McLaughlin, Jr.: Can the Member also confirm that none of these four posts are or ever have been held by Caymanian officers?

The Speaker: The Honourable Acting First Official Member responsible for Internal and External Affairs.

Hon. Donovan W. F. Ebanks: Not to my knowledge.

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman.

Mrs. Julianna Y. O'Connor-Connolly: Can the Member say if these officers receive increments as well as the COS and inducement payment?

The Speaker: The Honourable Acting First Official Member responsible for Internal and External Affairs.

Hon. Donovan W. F. Ebanks: I can only assume that they would. I know of no provision that would prevent them, so my assumption would be that they do. I can verify that, and if it is wrong, communicate that to members.

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman.

Mrs. Julianna Y. O'Connor-Connolly: Would the Member also give some sense of clarification where it says "from time to time to attract officers of the required calibre", exactly what is the connotation of this termination based on his years of experience in government?

The Speaker: I do not think I can allow that.

Do you wish to answer, Honourable Acting First Official Member responsible for Internal and External Affairs?

Hon. Donovan W. F. Ebanks: The decision to pay this allowance rests solely with the Governor and there is no way for me to say what may in the minds of respective governors constitute this required calibre. I think it is a judgment that governors have exercised in their own discretion.

It is worth noting that all four of these arrangements were affected by the former governor and there is no basis for me inquiring of the current governor as to what the considerations were.

The Speaker: Two additional supplementaries.

The First Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman.

Mrs. Julianna Y. O'Connor-Connolly: In the interest of transparency and upward mobility, and the hope for Caymanians to one day fill these positions, would he give the undertaking to ask His Excellency the Governor to relay by whatever means he deems most prudent what exactly he understands by "required calibre" so that Caymanians can have a chance one of these days?

The Speaker: The Honourable Acting First Official Member responsible for Internal and External Affairs.

Hon. Donovan W. F. Ebanks: I will certainly convey those sentiments of the Member to His Excellency.

The Speaker: Final supplementary.
The Elected Member for East End.

Mr. V. Arden McLean: I also had a similar question and with a second part. Can the Member confirm that the Medical Officer of Health has permanent residency or status in this country right now; therefore there is the possibility that Caymanians will hold Attorney General, Commissioner of Police and Director of Shipping positions?

The Speaker: The Honourable Acting First Official Member responsible for Internal and External Affairs.

Hon. Donovan W. F. Ebanks: I cannot confirm, however I will seek to ascertain what the immigration status is of the holder of the post to whom the Member referred. I will share with him the expectation that all of these posts will one day be filled by Caymanians.

The Speaker: Moving on to question 117, standing in the name of the First Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman.

QUESTION NO. 117

No. 117: Mrs. Julianna Y. O'Connor-Connolly asked the Honourable First Official Member responsible for the Portfolio of Internal and External Affairs when will the renovations at the Aston Ruddy Civic Centre expected to be completed and what is the total projected cost of the renovations.

The Speaker: The Honourable Acting First Official Member responsible for Internal and External Affairs.

Hon. Donovan W. F. Ebanks: The expected completion date for renovations on the Aston Ruddy Civic Centre is the first week in October. The project manager for the job estimates a final cost of approximately CI $570,000.

SUPPLEMENTARIES

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman.

Mrs. Julianna Y. O'Connor-Connolly: Can the Member say what has caused the delay seeing that it was indicated to have been completed by mid August?

The Speaker: The Honourable Acting First Official Member responsible for Internal and External Affairs.

Hon. Donovan W. F. Ebanks: The projected completion date was 20 August. In fact the building has been suitable for use as a shelter since 18 August because a substantial push was made on site at the time when Tropical Storm Chantelle was approaching to get it into a condition to be used as a shelter. While work continues, it remains available for use as a shelter. It is currently a construction site that can be tidied up, and people can be allowed in in the event of an approaching storm.

To get on to the question of what caused the delay; the delay has been caused for a number of reasons. The existing masonry or concrete was found to be blow acceptable strength in some areas, as low as 1,000 psi. This has been removed and replaced and additional columns and beams have been constructed to help correct this. Additional work was done to the roof of the annex which also contributed to the delay, as the roof was found to have some rotten timber. Those were the primary areas and obviously only exposed once the work actually commenced.

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman.

Mrs. Julianna Y. O'Connor-Connolly: Will these additional works attract additional costs or was that included in the $570,000? If so, why was there so much elasticity in the original budget?

The Speaker: The Honourable Acting First Official Member responsible for Internal and External Affairs.

Hon. Donovan W. F. Ebanks: Those items are included in the projected completion cost of $570,000. I think the level of the estimates versus what the eventual accepted tender came in at perhaps reflects the nature of the construction industry and the level of pricing that we were able to attract at this time.

The Speaker: The Second Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman.

Mr. Lyndon L. Martin: In the Member's answer he referred to completion date of first week of October. Is that completion of construction work, or will it be back to its original form and useable by that date?

The Speaker: The Honourable Acting First Official Member responsible for Internal and External Affairs.

Hon. Donovan W. F. Ebanks: That is the date that all construction works should be complete and the contractors should be out and the building back to its normal use. The point I tried to get across earlier is that while there is still construction going on, and while it is not available for the vast range of activities that the building is used for, it is useable for the most grave of purposes, which is a hurricane shelter.

The Speaker: The Second Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman.

Mr. Lyndon L. Martin: Can the Member indicate if the air conditioning units will be changed?

The Speaker: The Honourable Acting First Official Member responsible for Internal and External Affairs.

Hon. Donovan W. F. Ebanks: I have no information on any work to the air conditioning system. This work emanated from an assessment of the building relative to its compliance with hurricane standards adopted by the National Hurricane Committee. I know nothing of the air conditioning however I can enquire. If there is an acute problem with it we will have to see how we can best address it. I will look into it.

The Speaker: The Second Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman.

Mr. Lyndon L. Martin: The project undertook to share employees with Public Works Department (PWD), given the state of the economy in Cayman Brac to provide work for PWD as well as subcontracting with local contractors. Can the Member indicate if this working arrangement was carried out satisfactorily?

The Speaker: The Honourable Acting First Official Member responsible for Internal and External Affairs.

Hon. Donovan W. F. Ebanks: I was not aware of those details regarding how the contractor was expected to perform his work. I can enquire to see if there was compliance with whatever arrangements may have existed. This is the first I am hearing of that.

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman.

Mrs. Julianna Y. O'Connor-Connolly: Can the Member say what steps have been taken to address the flooding at the Aston Ruddy Centre?

The Speaker: The Honourable Acting First Official Member responsible for Internal and External Affairs.

Hon. Donovan W. F. Ebanks: I was not aware that there were items ... I accept that if there is a problem with flooding that is relevant to its use as a hurricane shelter. My understanding was that the contractor had to deal with the structural integrity of the building. I can enquire if there are flooding problems that need to be addressed that have not and can be addressed.

The Speaker: Are there any further supplementaries? If not, we shall suspend until 2.15 for lunch.

PROCEEDINGS SUSPENDED AT 12.50 PM

PROCEEDINGS RESUMED AT 2.24 PM

The Speaker: Please be seated.

Question Time continues. Moving on to question 118, standing in the name of the First Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman.

QUESTION NO. 118

No. 118: Mrs. Julianna Y. O'Connor-Connolly asked the Honourable Minister responsible for the Ministry of Planning, Communications and Works to say what plans there are, if any, for the provision of a Plumbing Inspector for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Planning, Communications and Works.

Hon. D. Kurt Tibbetts: The number of plumbing applications approved for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman averages approximately 40 per year. This in effect means that a Cayman Brac and Little Cayman plumbing inspector would be expected to conduct 120 to 160 inspections per year. This is based upon the estimated three to four inspections per project.

The bottom line is that after subtracting weekends, holidays and the officer's vacation days, based upon the number of applications approved inspections would happen once every two working days. At best, inspections may average one per day. This is not cost effective. There would be insufficient work.

A plumbing inspector is expected to conduct a minimum of 360 inspections per year for the post to be cost effective. This number is more than twice the amount of inspections expected on Cayman Brac and Little Cayman.

A Planning Officer (up to about a year ago) previously carried out plumbing inspections. That Planning Officer's position was cost effective because the post holder was required to be a Planner, Building Plans Examiner, Building Inspector and a Plumbing Inspector.

As such, that post involved the provision of services beyond plumbing inspections, namely; supervising the Cayman Brac and Little Cayman Planning Office, review of technical building plans otherwise known as construction details, the review of plumbing plans and conducting building inspections.

Additionally, plumbing installation is a minor component of buildings relative to their structural integrity. Since the planning officer was recalled from the Brac there was no one to conduct inspections or review the plans referenced above.

The situation reverted to the previous system of occasional inspections by a senior building officer from the building control unit and the review of technical plans on Grand Cayman. It would therefore seem more prudent to have a building inspector-cum-plans examiner for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman. On the other hand, the Development Control Board (DCB) is somewhat reluctant to incorporate an important regulation currently enforced in Grand Cayman. This related to the Certificate of Occupancy (COs).

The Cayman Islands Building Code is applicable to all Islands, however, COs are not required in Cayman Brac and Little Cayman and in the absence of that, inspectors would have a difficult task ensuring that buildings meet minimum standards. COs should be applicable to all relevant structures as per the Cayman Islands Building Code (CIBC) for these certificates are meant to ensure that minimum safety measures are incorporated in new buildings prior to them being occupied. This is especially critical for buildings frequented by the public and/or tourism properties.

Therefore, if we are to have a plumbing inspector we should also have a building inspector-cum-plans inspector in the interest of public safety and efficiency. The best option in light of the level of development activity would be to have a person capable of performing most of the duties performed by the last planning officer. The post was looked at during this year. However for the reasons outlined above and the budgetary constraints, the director decided not to pursue trying to fill the post.

The director has advised that he is prepared to revisit the issue when there is a more favourable budgetary environment to create a multidisciplinary post for the planning office of Cayman Brac and Little Cayman.

SUPPLEMENTARIES

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman.

Mrs. Julianna Y. O'Connor-Connolly: I would like to thank the Minister and his relevant department for such a detailed answer. Since the position of the Ministry and department has been stated in full, would someone from Personnel undertake to indicate to Mr. Davilee Tibbetts who has been interviewed for part-time plumbing inspector job that this is no longer the intention of the department?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Planning, Communications and Works.

Hon. D. Kurt Tibbetts: What the Member just mentioned and the name she called, I think she referred to it as a part-time job. The answer I just read, which was prepared by the department, does not refer to a part-time job. If the Member so desires, I can speak to the director because if it is a part-time job it would have a different meaning to the whole affair than the answer I just gave. I can check with the department to see if, based on the required needs, an arrangement can be made somewhat aligned with the number of inspections done. If that is the desire, I can do so. However, what the Member has just asked me to do, given my answer and what she said, I cannot do it in the way she has suggested.

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman.

Mrs. Julianna Y. O'Connor-Connolly: I would be most grateful if the Minister would undertake to do that since the same matter arose when we were in the last Finance Committee and the same undertaking was given. I would be grateful if he would once again touch base with the director of planning to ensure something is done in this matter.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Planning, Communications and Works.

Hon. D. Kurt Tibbetts: I have no problem with that, and to make it very clear that my position was that when the application was made someone from the department should have contacted me, and no one had, so I did not know any different.

The Speaker: The Second Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman.

Mr. Lyndon L. Martin: In the answer provided the Minister referred to the absence of COs on Cayman Brac and Little Cayman. He went on to say that COs should be applicable to all relevant structures per the CIBC, for COs are meant to ensure the minimum safety measures. Is the Minister advocating the Development Board of Cayman Brac and Little Cayman to implement and accept regulation 33?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Planning, Communications and Works.

Hon. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Since the answer was prepared, I have been in contact with the Chairman of the Development Control Board. Unfortunately the director was on vacation and only returned last week. I have asked the Chairman to liaise with the director in Grand Cayman to see if there is a methodology that can be employed to satisfy the situation as the chairman of the DCB had given me some ideas the board had put forward which might cause a solution without causing problems that arise at present. I have not heard the results of that yet. In fact, I plan to meet with the director sometime tomorrow and if time allows discuss matters including that one.

I think that while my answer does not speak directly to the question that has been asked, the answer basically is that we need to find the most workable solution to the problem. I believe there is dialogue going on (as we speak) to arrive at that solution which does not necessarily come to the point of invoking regulation 33, to which the Member referred and I assume it is regarding COs; if there is another method that can satisfy the situation.

Needless to say, I think that it is not an unfair position. In fact, it is the best position to take. There should be some method employed that guarantees that certain inspections have been carried out and certain integrity prevails before certain structures are allowed to be occupied.

The Speaker: The Second Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman.

Mr. Lyndon L. Martin: Can the Minister provide an update with the matter that results from the absence of COs as it relates to the registering of stratas? I am made to understand that the registration of stratas requires the issuance of COs and the current director is not prepared to register stratas until COs are issued.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Planning, Communications and Works.

Hon. D. Kurt Tibbetts: What the Member just described is exactly what the problem is in most instances that have occurred in the Brac. It does not have a huge effect on single family homes. It is mostly the types of accommodation that are tourist related, and/or apartments, which in most instances are also tourist related.

The position the director has taken is one of not compromising his position in that his signature should be on a document that says that all of the necessary requirements have been fulfilled that call for a Certificate of Occupancy to be issued and that is not the case. When the Member asks specifically about that, I have to answer the same way that I did before because it all relates to the same thing and it is about providing a solution to that same problem.

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman.

Mrs. Julianna Y. O'Connor-Connolly: As I am sure the Minister is aware, regulation 33 actually mandates the necessity for a CO and regulation 34(3) to provide a possible solution in respect to strata and/or commercial things. I wonder if he would give an undertaking to look at the provisions in section 34(3) which in part says that "the board may by notice publish in a gazette declare that any of all of regulations 1 through 33, which includes the CO, shall apply to the land in Cayman Brac and Little Cayman as there is a technical problem and inordinate delay as it relates to the strata since the coming in of the new director.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Planning, Communications and Works.

Hon. D. Kurt Tibbetts: The exact outline of those two sections is a huge part and parcel of the discussions that are ongoing. They are looking at it to find the best way to arrive at the solution without creating an inordinate amount of time, before block and parcel numbers can be issued which are directly impacted by stratas being registered.

While she refers to those two sections, when I spoke to the chairman, he referred to those two sections also. That is what they are talking about.

There are a few other possible solutions that have been proffered. The difficulty that I had with them is from a legal standpoint; I was not sure whether it really solved the problem. That is where the dialogue is taking place and they are using the Legal Department to find out what can and cannot work.

Suffice it to say that I recognise the problem. One way or the other a solution must be forthcoming. I was simply giving the Chairman of the DCB and the Director a chance to have dialogue to see if they can bring forth a solution. If not, then we will have to provide it by legal means. However, it will be done.

The Speaker: Are there any further supplementaries? If not, we move on to question 119, standing in the name of the First Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman.

QUESTION NO. 119

No. 119: Mrs. Julianna Y. O'Connor-Connolly asked the Honourable Minister responsible for the Ministry of Education, Human Resources and Culture to provide a current status report in regard to the establishment of the Cadet Corp for Grand Cayman and Cayman Brac.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for Education, Human Resources and Culture.

Hon. Roy Bodden: The Cayman Islands Cadet Corps which will be operated through the Ministry of Education, Human Resources and Culture, in conjunction with the Royal Cayman Islands Police has all requisite Government approvals and is currently finalising its preliminary organisational structure.

The Corps will be administered by a Provisional Advisory Committee comprised of the following persons:

- > Mr A Steve McField, Attorney at Law – Chairman
- > Mr Kirkland Nixon, MBE – Deputy Chairman
- > Inspector Burmon Scott, Corps Commandant
- > Mr Walsham Connolly, JP
- > Miss Lucille Seymour, BEM
- > Chief Inspector Denzie Carter
- > Mrs Kathy Jackson, Cert. Hon
- > Mr John Hurlstone
- > Mr Matthew Grant
- > Dr Sydney Ebanks
- > Permanent Secretary, EHR&C
- > Minister, EHR&C.

The Corps will have its headquarters in premises previously occupied by the Alternative Education Centre.

Since the programme is a four-year programme, it is anticipated that active recruitment of cadets will commence on 1 October 2001 at the George Hicks High School.

The period between the start-up on 1 October 2001 will be used to train volunteer staff members and organise a proper Corps headquarters.

SUPPLEMENTARIES

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman.

Mrs. Julianna Y. O'Connor-Connolly: I thank the Minister for the update, and ask if it is still the intention of his Ministry to have the Cayman Brac High School join in with this good idea. If he cannot say when, perhaps he can give an undertaking to bring us in on it when a decision is taken.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for Education, Human Resources and Culture.

Hon. Roy Bodden: The Advisory Committee met yesterday for two hours. It has been decided that the Corps will be open for membership to all high school students from age 11. There is, however, an organisational problem because currently the commandant and his deputy have to, with the aid of the Advisory Committee, screen, and interview volunteer adult candidates for officers so that we can embrace a large number of volunteers.

When I went to Cayman Brac earlier in the year, I was approached by the principal of the high school with a request from some of her students that we start simultaneously in the Brac. We are looking into that; however logistics being what they are, it seems at this point well neigh impossible. However, I give the undertaking that we will do so as early as possible.

It seems from discussions that we have had, because the Corps is going to be co-educational, for the first year we have to concentrate on male recruits because we have to put the mechanisms in place. When it goes co-educational we have to ensure absolute separation and no fraternisation as these cadets will be on the field together. We have to lay a careful foundation.

It is unlikely that we will be able to do this within the first year. I also anticipate that it is probably within this year that we will be able to start up on the Brac since we have to recruit persons who will be in charge of developing the Corps on the Brac.

The Speaker: The Third Elected Member for George Town.

Dr. Frank S. McField: Can the Honourable Minister say what the cost of this Cadet Corps will be in the first year of operation?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for Education, Human Resources and Culture.

Hon. Roy Bodden: We are finalising the cost. At present, the way the Corps is being constructed, no provisions were made in the education budget. The commandant and his deputy are police officers on secondment from the police force. Their salaries are paid by the police force. All other officers will be volunteers.

We are preparing a budget for the commandant and his deputy for material we will be using. The uniforms will be supplied through the Ministry of Education, Human Resources and Culture. As we go along we will add material and be able to budget that.

The Speaker: The Third Elected Member for George Town.

Dr. Frank S. McField: I am very sorry the Minister could not say what the setting up cost would be because there will be a cost. You are still using facilities and there will be costs as we go along.

I would like to ask how much time would a cadet spend with the Corps during a normal day or week?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for Education, Human Resources and Culture.

Hon. Roy Bodden: It is a four-year programme. The cadets will start at age 11 and we will follow them to the high school. Ideally cadets will pass out at 15-plus, unless we can make an arrangement with the Ministry of Youth to continue the Corps past the age of 16.

The initial training period is mooted to be approximately four to six weeks. At the end of this time there will be a passing out parade when the successful candidates will get their uniforms and a kit which will be the property of the Corps rather than the person. There is a code of conduct being prepared to which all cadets have to abide.

We reckon, since it is an extracurricular activity, that most of the activities will be conducted after regular school hours and on weekends. Discussions are being held for camps to be held on weekends beginning Friday afternoon, Saturday and Sunday. The training periods will normally begin after 3 pm when school is out in the normal course of the day.

The Speaker: The Third Elected Member for George Town.

Dr. Frank S. McField: I would like to know if the Corps is going to be a part of extracurricular activities at the schools in the Cayman Islands, and if it is voluntary, what is the difference between the Corps and the established Boy Scouts, or any other group of organised youngsters wearing uniforms and observing a particular code of ethics with the specific mission being that of developing character?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Education, Human Resources and Culture.

Hon. Roy Bodden: The difference is, the Boy Scouts organisation is a civilian organisation and the Corps will be run on military lines.

These youngsters will participate in exercises structured differently from the Boy Scouts. The training regiment and programme will be significantly different from that of the Boy Scouts, although there are some similarities.

Let me state that the principal aim of the Cadet Corps is the use of military discipline to mould character, self-respect, alertness, punctuality, a sense of duty and leadership, national pride, civics, knowledge, responsibility and citizenship, mental and physical endurance, and camaraderie are some of the values that those who will administer the corps will seek to instil in the youth.

The Speaker: The Third Elected Member for George Town.

Dr. Frank S. McField: The Minister gave an answer regarding his concept of military discipline which I recognise as discipline that can be found in other organisations that are not of a military nature. I would like to ask what particular military or other programmes will exist to distinguish the regimentation within this particular Cadet Corps that would be different from what one may find in a less regimented institution?

Will there be use of military weapons? Will there be indoctrination to the use of and purpose for the use of weapons and defence? Will there be any training as concerns the understanding of the role of the military and the use of military force?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Education, Human Resources and Culture.

Hon. Roy Boddén: A part of the training programme involves training in self-defence, martial arts, the youth will be taught to conduct themselves in the field, and it is anticipated that when a cadet reaches senior ranks, he will be exposed to limited firearms training. I say limited, because I understand from the commandant that they will be first introduced to air rifles and BB guns and later, if the candidates are deemed sufficiently responsible then consideration will be given to other forms of weapon training.

The Speaker: The Third Elected Member for George Town.

Dr. Frank S. McField: The Minister seems to have said in fact that there will be a concentration on the culture of violence. Can the Honourable Member say—

Hon. Roy Boddén: Mr. Speaker, on a point of order sir.

The Speaker: Let me hear your point of order please.

POINT OF ORDER

Hon. Roy Boddén: Mr. Speaker, I said no such thing.

The Speaker: [addressing the Third Elected Member for George Town] I agree. I think that is your opinion, and that is a point of order.

Dr. Frank S. McField: Mr. Speaker, what are you going to tell me now? I cannot use the word “violence” or “culture of violence”?

Hon. Roy Boddén: Mr. Speaker, I beg your pardon sir. Where, in what I said, can a reasonable, sensible and responsible person interpret any culture of violence? Tell me where in the answer, sir.

The Speaker: I did not detect it myself.

[addressing the Third Elected Member for George Town] Basically, your opinion is your opinion. However this is an educational programme geared towards the military, is my understanding.

Dr. Frank S. McField: Mr. Speaker, if you would please allow me to ask the Minister the question, and please allow the Minister to answer the question. I think that although I used the words “culture of violence” it is known in fact that the military is an instrument of State violence. Okay?

The Speaker: I fail to agree with you on that. I mean, military is for protection of the human rights of people.

Dr. Frank S. McField: Mr. Speaker, what I am saying is . . . I am asking . . . he is saying that there will be a limited concentration on the use of firearms. If we are saying that firearms are not tools of violence, then that is a completely different point.

The Speaker: I am not permitted to get into an argument. So I cannot say anything further.

Dr. Frank S. McField: Okay.

The Speaker: Basically, the Honourable Minister made the intention of the Cadet Corps abundantly clear.

Dr. Frank S. McField: From his perspective, Mr. Speaker.

I was trying to find out exactly what would be the programme for military indoctrination for a period of 4 years, which is a very long period of time. What will be the programme of training?

How long will they spend training, during the summer, during school and after school? That is, the longer they train, the more there is a necessity to develop a programme which somehow coincides with military indoctrination.

The Speaker: Just turn it into a question, and I am sure the Minister will answer.

Dr. Frank S. McField: Mr. Speaker, the point is that I think the Minister has shown his unwillingness to be tolerant. Therefore, I shall allow for my questioning to conclude.

The Speaker: Any further supplementaries? If not, that concludes Question Time for today.

The next item is Government Business, Bills, First Readings. Before we move on to that I would ask for the suspension of Standing Orders 45 and 46(1) & (2) as the gazetting process has not been completed.

SUSPENSION OF STANDING ORDERS 45 AND 46(1) AND (2)

[Moved by the Honourable Minister for Planning, Communications and Works]

QUESTION PUT. AGREED: STANDING ORDERS 45 AND 46(1) & (2) SUSPENDED.

The Speaker: Bills, First Reading.

GOVERNMENT BUSINESS

BILLS

FIRST READING

THE COMPANIES (AMENDMENT) BILL 2001

The Clerk: The Companies (Amendment) Bill 2001.

The Speaker: The Bill is deemed to have been read a first time and set down for a second reading.

Second Readings. Continuation of debate on a Bill entitled The Public Management and Finance Bill 2001. The Bill is open to debate. Does any Member wish to speak? The Motion is open for debate, does any Member wish to speak. A final call, the Motion is open for debate, does any Member wish to speak?

The Second Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman.

SECOND READING

THE PUBLIC MANAGEMENT AND FINANCE BILL 2001

(Continuation of debate thereon)

Mr. Lyndon L. Martin: Thank you.

I find myself in a very novel position today with the Government bringing forward a Bill that I am able to support.

The Public Management and Finance Bill 2001 have some significant merit that I would like to address. There are certain areas of concern that I will also point out. However, I am pleased to be part of a legislative body that will be introducing a Bill to modernise the operation of the Cayman Islands Civil Service and will have an affect on the country as a whole.

I use this opportunity to stress to the Legislative Assembly and the Nation that the process of constructive opposition is when we find Bills such as this one, to support. I will support it. I stress the fact that when I stand and oppose various measures brought forward by the Government, I am opposing them based on the fact that it is my view that they are not suited for this country. I use this opportunity to give credibility to the times that I criticise the Government by stressing that when they do bring something forward that I can support, I will support it.

[Inaudible cross talk]

Mr. Lyndon L. Martin: Mr. Speaker, related standing orders that protect speakers from disturbance I could quote, but I hope Members will adhere to them without me taking any further action.

The most significant part of the Bill at hand is to review it in line with the fact that we are currently in the midst of constitutional review. The two issues go nicely together. It is imperative that when you are supporting this Bill, you are also supporting constitutional modernisation necessary to adhere to the components of this Bill.

The most significant component of this Bill is that it requires the Government to design a policy for the five independent governments to come together to form one unified statement of what that government is about, what that political directorate hopes to achieve for this country. The Executive Council will then present that to the Legislative Assembly for its approval.

It has been a long criticism of mine that the Government has no philosophy, no common direction, no common goal. I am happy to see that we are legislating a Bill—

The Speaker: You are stating that as your opinion?

Mr. Lyndon L. Martin: Yes, Mr. Speaker, certainly.

I stated that it has been my long-standing argument that this is the position. I hope that the Government will take this legislation for the benefit intended and put a policy together that they can all buy into, as well as the country. We must not forget the underlying democracy. We are at jeopardy in this country, in that the general public is losing confidence in the democratic process.

It is my view that we need in the form of constitutional modernisation, in line with what this Bill is calling for; a clear separation between the Executive Council and the Legislative Body that would simply authorise money to the Executive Council and make Laws. Then the Legislative Assembly would be a watchdog on the Executive Council to ensure they are adhering to the plan they put forward. That is a fundamental part of preserving the integrity of democracy and enshrined in this piece of legislation put before this Legislative Assembly.

Once the money has been voted to Executive Council they will then embark upon what is sure to be a daunting exercise of coming up with agreements between the Ministers and their respective Ministries through the conduit of the Chief Secretary, who has administrative responsibility. I want to comment briefly on that and relate my views on the Constitution as I have previously articulated.

I feel it is imperative that there be a buffer between the Executive Branch and the Administrative Branch. We must remember that democracy is the best system, although not perfect, does not always produce the best qualified representatives, and so we rely heavily on the technocrats in the civil service. I believe the civil servants who are the technocrats feel comfortable in providing what recommendations their background and expertise would suggest to be the best alternative or state of action for the country.

It is for that reason I support the current amendment of the Bill where Executive Council would make agreements with the Administrative Branch, the Chief Officers, (as amended to be the Permanent Secretaries in the ministries), the Deputy Financial Secretary for the Portfolio of Finance and Development, the Solicitor General for the Attorney General's office, and the Deputy Chief Secretary for the Portfolio of Internal and External Affairs.

I also advocated that the original definition that simply stated "Chief Officers" was a better option. The reason I support that is because in my recommendation to the Constitutional Commissioners and the Constitution review, I advocated that the Official Members should not be a part of the Legislative Body. They should be running the civil service. In that case, the Chief Officer would not be the Deputy Financial Secretary it would be the Financial Secretary, the Solicitor General, would be the Attorney General, and the Deputy Chief Secretary would be the Chief Secretary. I thought it prudent to mention at this time because the definition of Chief Officer has been amended to specify the various officers under the official portfolios of government.

The Public Management and Finance Bill 2001 calls for the introduction of accrual accounting. As a businessman I could never conceive that in the year 2001 we still have entities operating on a cash based system, viewing their state of financial stability as simply what is in their bank account, not what they are committed to or what they have accrued.

I am pleased to see that the Government has proposed a Bill that requires a timely, carefully monitored transition from the traditional cash based accounting system to an accrual based accounting system.

We should be aware that once we make this transition it is not all rosy. It is the most prudent way of recording government's business, however there is a price to pay. We have extensive staff training, we have staff who have been accustomed throughout their civil service career of operating on a cash based system that will not only have to learn the technical differences of the two systems but culturally adjust to operating in a different modus operandi.

There is also the fact that Government will no longer be able to hide certain transactions they were able to hide under the cash based system. We have to make sure we understand. All departments will now be forced to comply with accrual accounting systems and will be their own cost centres; that have traditionally been camouflaged by being amalgamated and attached to other departments.

One example is the Registrar of Companies, a very positive contributor to the coffers of the Government, tied with the Shipping Registry, which in my opinion would probably not be as healthy a contributor. These entities will have to demonstrate on their own merit, revenue stream income versus expenditure and their validity; we have to be conscious of this change. I think it is the way to go in the 21st Century.

I keep referring to this Bill as assisting in modernising. This Bill provides only the structure for Government to modernise its way of operation. It provides the backdrop necessary for Government to take other actions to modernise.

The Bill requires a separation between resources of the Executive versus the entity. I think this is very important. Where departments that would be the entities, according to the Bill, would be subject to fees, the fees they collect related to the output they are producing would come in under that particular entity and be governed by that entity. We must accept that a lot of the actions called for in this Bill will not assist in reducing bureaucracy but in many cases will add layers. My position has always been that bureaucracy is just a fundamental essential part of governance.

There is too much of a tendency to ask government to be run more like a business. It is not possible. No business has shareholders who are also their clients. That is the civil service. The Government's shareholders are the same clients. Where a business motive is to increase profit to shareholders, our goal is greater. Our goal is quality of life.

The impetus for this legislation stems from the New Zealand model. However, I note, in the introduction given by the Third Official Member he stressed that it has been adapted to Cayman. It is a Cayman model. I only drew attention to New Zealand because there was one unforeseen outcome from the change to accrual system in that the social programmes suffered. They generated expenditure for entities but there was no revenue stream to support them.

Therefore, where entities had to justify their existence and pay their own way, the first thing to be cut was the social programme, the transfer payments. Government's main motivation is not that of a business—purely financial—but that of quality of life where transfer payments form a part of ensuring that quality of life.

I am pleased that alterations to the Bill to make it more unique to Cayman include transfer payments have been moved from entity expenditure to that of executive expenditure where the departments responsible for disbursing this money to the various social programmes do not have to justify and look for revenue sources, it is done at a higher level of executive expense. The transfer payments are paid from executive expense where your coercive revenue is also collected. That will give some assurance that we will not fall into the same trap of the New Zealand model where these social programmes were cut.

It should be noted that in bringing this Bill into existence, the entities and various departments, will now have the power to change the fee they are collecting without their elected representatives having input regarding the fees. For instance, a garbage fee could be changed by the collecting department. That is extremely different and will require great adjustment.

These are some of my concerns with supporting a Bill that requires accrual accounting and output budgeting, and I am accepting it on that premise. I hope the Third Official Member will take on board these areas and respond to this during his closing.

I am also concerned about the year 2003 in the timeline provided for the implementation of this Bill. This transition has to be very careful. I understand the challenges the Portfolio of Finance and Development will face during the next four to ten years of having this Bill and the resulting change in operation enacted.

The year 2003 will require the two pieces of legislation to run simultaneously, the current Public Finance and Audit Law of 1985 (and I stand to be corrected) and the new Public Management and Finance Bill 2001. The old Law would govern the year 2003, where the new Law would govern appropriation for the year 2004.

That in itself will be a confusing year. The year 2003 will operate under the current Law that allows for me to commit expenditure without recording it. I will be committing expenditure that will have to be borne in the year 2004 that will be governed by a piece of legislation that did not allow me to make such commitments. I am not sure of the solution, I am only pointing out my concern in the implementation process.

The legislation mandates transparency. The legislation requires that on a quarterly basis the executive will provide a report on the country's finances to the Legislative Body. I like that provision.

The legislation provides the Legislative Assembly with a heightened tool to watch and monitor the executive. The Auditor General's loyalty and reporting structure will be to the Legislative Assembly not to the Executive Council or the Administrative Branch. Theoretically, I like the concept of having the Auditor General reporting and being monitored and governed through the Public Accounts Committee. However, this draws back to what we would seek to be as a result of the current Constitutional review.

Currently, the Government of the day has a Public Accounts Committee chaired by one of their supporting Backbench Members, and comprised predominately by their supporting Backbench Members for the concept to work. Where the Auditor General would not be reporting to the Executive Branch for that to be perceived (for perception is as much a reality) as a watchdog, it has to be an independent body from the Executive. As stated in Erskine May, it should be headed by the Leader of the Opposition.

I accept that under our current political structure it might not be so obvious who is the Leader of Opposition and who is the Leader of Government. However, I am sure we can determine from this Parliament that there are at least three, four, maybe six Opposition Members and one of those should have been selected. I make it quite clear this means no disrespect to the current Chairman of the Public Accounts Committee. Based on the professional background of that individual, he is certainly the most suited of the Members, with the exception of one of the Ministers.

The Bill before us also changes the fiscal year of government which I wholeheartedly support. I would also suggest that since the fiscal year will be changed to a July/June year that section 12 of the Bill providing for authorisation in advance of appropriation, is no longer needed. That particular section was there for a January to December year and a year to allow for an election year when you needed to provide advance appropriation before the Bill. Based on a July/June year that need should not arise. I believe that that section could be eliminated.

I would also like to mention that the Public Finance and Audit Law that gave particular powers to the Financial Secretary on his own to waive certain fees, which I know placed a lot of pressure on the Third Official Member and allowed him to be in a very precarious position. This current Bill has not provided for such a provision. I think that is a merit of the Bill and one of the reasons I am able to support the proposed Bill before us.

Turning briefly to the principles of responsible financial management, as outlined in Section 14 of the Bill. This is a new section, one that I welcome. There have never been legislative management principles. There have been some generally accepted principles that we tried to comply with, but this Bill legislates.

I would like to read into the record from the Bill itself, “(3) The principles of responsible financial management referred to in subsection (2) are (a) total entire public sector revenue less total entire public sector expenses (measured using generally accepted accounting practice) should be positive.” That is, Government will run a surplus and not a deficit and so separating. Since the legislation separates capital out of operational, government would be guided by this legislation to always make a positive contribution from its operating expenses and revenue towards capital.

“(b) Total entire public sector assets less total entire public sector liabilities (measured using generally accepted accounting practice) should be positive.” Such principles are needed, but I caution Government that it will not be a simple exercise to bring us into compliance. I appreciate the need for what is enshrined in the legislation as a period up to eight years to have compliance with all of these principles.

“(c) Entire public sector borrowing should not exceed an amount for which the sum of interest, other debt servicing expenses, and principal repayments for a financial year are more than ten per cent of entire public sector revenue (calculated using generally accepted accounting practice) for that financial year.” It should be noted that in this principle the reference to revenue is that defined under this Bill, which would not include loan income. It would be operational income equivalent to what we now refer to as recurrent revenue.

“(d) Cash reserves should be maintained at a level no less than the estimated executive expenses (measured using generally accepted accounting practice) for the following ninety days.” Three months should be kept in reserve.

“(e) The financial risks, including contingent liabilities, facing the entire public sector should be managed prudently so as to minimise the likelihood of any such risk resulting in an expense or liability.” This Bill calls for the Government to look at all of its entities holistically, one big picture including its contingent liabilities. I can only support such an effort.

The principles I just outlined are welcomed and have been needed for a long time in the financial management of this country.

I want to caution Government in adopting this legislation. The commitment to make a plan for this country will require careful prioritisation which sounds a lot easier than it is to implement—especially under our current political structure. I want to emphasise the connection between the political structure and the Constitution to what we are proposing here today.

What we have are five independent governments who try to join together to form one Executive Council with no common agenda, platform, or manifesto. These individuals will have to prioritise, to come together in one unit and list the priorities within the restraints provided under these new principles of financial management.

The current (and I say with some caution) Leader of Government Business has advocated prioritisation for some time. Now that he is in the position he will accept how difficult it is to prioritise because he even committed to bring a MTFs during the September sitting of this House and has not yet done it.

The issue I am stressing is that given our current political structure, prioritising is difficult. We have five individuals with five different agendas, different mandates from the people, different philosophies.

I have commented on the reporting structure of the Auditor General to the Public Accounts Committee and the need for the Public Accounts Committee to be more objective or at least perceived to be more objective.

The final comment I wish to make is that this Bill is timely. It is time for this country to accept that it must move forward in management. I have sat on this Backbench and criticised the Government, the past Government, and the Government before that of various actions. Now a Bill is brought forward that will force the Government to comply with some of these recommendations. I can only support it, outlining my cautions and concerns. Thank you.

The Speaker: We shall suspend for 15 minutes.

PROCEEDINGS SUSPENDED AT 3.40 PM

PROCEEDINGS RESUMED AT 4.07 PM

The Speaker: Please be seated.

Debate continues on the Second Reading of a Bill entitled The Public Management and Finance Bill, 2001. Does any Member wish to speak?

The Honourable Minister responsible for Education, Human Resources and Culture.

Hon. Roy Bodden: I rise to make a brief contribution to this Bill. I am reminded of that famous advisor to princes, Niccolò Machiavelli, who said there is nothing more difficult to carry out, nor more doubtful of success, nor more dangerous to handle, than to initiate a new order of things.

This Bill which is before us now really had its genesis, if we were to speak frankly, in 1995 when the former Second Elected Member for Cayman Brac (now Second Elected Member for Bodden Town) and I brought a Private Member's Motion to this House asking government to set up a fiscal responsibility law similar to that of New Zealand. At that time we were accused of all kinds of things; called all kinds of names, which, I might hasten to add, were not flattering; and finally, we were told that we were proposing independence.

One learned Member said that it was the act of an independent country and associated it with constitutional change, which brings me to the coincidence that it is coming back at a time when we are discussing constitutional change. I hope that coincidence bears positive fruit for where we wish to go.

It is high time we came to this point. I am not equipped to debate the merits of a Bill as an accountant would. I want to stick more or less to the common sense issues. We said in 1995, as we are saying now, that government needed to go on an accrual system because an accrual system is the modern system of accounting.

I came from the private sector. That is the system that I was exposed to and practised there. The impediments I believe are elements within the civil service, not necessarily at middle management level, and not necessarily at the level of some of the enlightened higher elements. However there is a block of dinosaurs who do not wish to apply this system. I am hoping this Bill can be a kind of Ice Age and bury those dinosaurs so they will either be forced to adapt or will become extinct. They cannot stand in the way of progress.

I heard the Member make reference to five different governments. That is true! Sometimes when we speak disparagingly that is what we liken this current system to. I see this Bill introducing a sensible system of accounting which will make it easier to manage, understand and more efficient.

As usual, there will be persons who feel uncomfortable in the beginning. However I do not have any particular expertise in accounting and I understand the rudiments of the system. I am sure those persons who are practising for years will grasp it easily. What is more difficult to acknowledge is that a certain discipline comes with it, and a certain accountability which people may not be so willing to subscribe to. Therein is the crux of the matter. It is better scientific management because we are talking about outputs and inputs. We are talking about performance.

We have come up in a culture where some persons do not wish to be accountable. The greatest impediment to this as with other reforms is changing the culture. From experience and discussions we have had, listening particularly to civil servants, I understand that is the reservation. People are reluctant to give up a certain way of life. I caution those persons responsible, particular the Financial Secretary who will have the overall responsibility to oversee the introduction of this system. We have to bear in mind that the success of this move is predicated on a culture change. It is necessary to be as genteel as possible.

I listened to people who are going to have to work in this system. They have many unfounded fears that are going to have to be allayed. We have to take time. I believe the timeline is reasonable. When we get this coupled with the anticipated change in the Constitution, I can say bravo! The Cayman Islands will then be in the realms of modernity and 21st Century scientific public service management and administration. I contend that if we had the discipline of this system even now, we would be in a much clearer position in terms of our finances.

The last point I wish to make is that there are those politicians, not a large number in here at the moment, who are reluctant to take this system on board because it handcuffed them. They cannot pave any $8 million roads on the eve of election! They cannot do the expenditure that would endear them to the electorate. This system is predicated on a financial discipline and accountability that is necessary. I am happy to associate myself with this Bill and I give my full support.

The Speaker: Does any other Member wish to speak? (Pause) Does any other Member wish to speak? (Pause)

If it is the wish to adjourn, I will entertain a motion for the adjournment.

The Honourable Minister for Health and Information Technology.

ADJOURNMENT

Hon. Linford A. Pierson: Mr. Speaker, I move the Adjournment of this Honourable House until 10 am tomorrow.

The Speaker: The question is that this Honourable House do now adjourn until 10 am tomorrow. Those in favour, please say Aye. Those against, No.

AYES.

The Speaker: The Ayes have it.

AT 4.15 PM THE HOUSE STOOD ADJOURNED UNTIL 10 AM FRIDAY, 21 SEPTEMBER 2001.

OFFICIAL HANSARD REPORT
FRIDAY
21 SEPTEMBER 2001
10.36 AM
Eighth Sitting

The Speaker: Good morning. I will invite the Second Elected Member for West Bay to say prayers.

PRAYERS

Mr. Rolston M. Anglin: Let us pray:

Almighty God, from whom all wisdom and power are derived: We beseech Thee so to direct and prosper the deliberations of the Legislative Assembly now assembled, that all things may be ordered upon the best and surest foundations for the glory of Thy Name and for the safety, honour and welfare of the people of these Islands.

Bless our Sovereign Lady Queen Elizabeth II, the Queen Mother, Philip Duke of Edinburgh, Charles Prince of Wales, and all the Royal family. Give grace to all who exercise authority in our Commonwealth, that peace and happiness, truth and justice, religion and piety may be established among us. Especially we pray for the Governor of our Islands, the Speaker of the Legislative Assembly, Official Members and Ministers of Executive Council and Members of the Legislative Assembly, that we may be enabled faithfully to perform the responsible duties of our high office.

All this we ask for Thy great Name's sake.

Let us say the Lord's Prayer together:

Our Father, who art in Heaven, Hallowed be Thy Name. Thy Kingdom come, Thy will be done on earth as it is in Heaven. Give us this day our daily bread, and forgive us our trespasses, as we forgive those who trespass against us. Lead us not into temptation, but deliver us from evil. For Thine is the Kingdom, the power and the glory, forever and ever. Amen.

Proceedings resumed at 11.20 am

The Speaker: Please be seated.
Proceedings are resumed.

READING BY THE HONOURABLE
SPEAKER OF MESSAGES
AND ANNOUNCEMENTS

APOLOGIES

The Speaker: I have received apologies for absence from the Honourable First and Second Official Members and the Honourable Minister responsible for Community Development, Women's Affairs, Youth and Sports who are off the Island and from the Third Elected Member for West Bay.

I recognise the Second Elected Member for West Bay.

STATEMENT RE: SEARCH AND RESCUE OF MR. RONNIE MARTIN EBANKS

Mr. Rolston M. Anglin: I would just like to announce to all Members of this House and to the community of West Bay in particular, and all citizens of these Islands, that the West Bay fisherman who was lost at sea, that is, Mr Ronald Martin Ebanks has now been found.

I would like to give thanks to Almighty God for safely delivering him, and all those who prayed for his safe return. Many prayers were said across the Island and in West Bay on Wednesday night, for his safe return. I would like to share with the community that the display of faith shown by his family and his children was quite impressive. I visited his daughter and two of his sons on Wednesday and they had faith that God would safely return their father. I am going to thank a number of parties involved in the search and safe return of Mr. Ebanks. In so doing I know I run the risk of leaving someone out. If I do I apologise in advance.

I would like to thank the Drug Task Force and the West Bay Police Station, for coordinating the search effort. I would like to thank in particular Mr. Derrington Burlington and Bruce Smith for their tireless efforts. I would like to thank those who initially searched by air, the MRCU and Island Air, the Marine search parties, such as the Department of Environment, the Drugs Task Force, and the US Coast Guard for developing the drift charts that helped locate Mr. Ebanks.

In times like this the community rallies. There were numerous private individuals who carried on the search when all hope seemed to be lost. I would like to thank Mr. Wally Whittaker and the Flying Club. I thank the three private pilots searching yesterday, in particular Mr. Roy McTaggart, Mr. Oscar Rivers, Mr. J.C. Calhoun, Mr. and Mrs. Olson, Mr. Kevin Parsons, Mr. Hank Powell, Mr. Michael Anderson, and last but not least, the actual plane that spotted Mr. Ebanks at 5.25 yesterday, Mr. Peter Webster accompanied by Mr. Luc DeCarufel, Miss Maggy Maldino. I would like to thank all those who searched tirelessly last night in the dark eventually locating him at 3.30 this morning. These include the DoE, Mr. Adrian Briggs and his son-in-law Mr. Bob Watler. I thank the Royal Caribbean Cruise line ship Voyager of the Seas, who kept him company after he was found for a period of time.

It is only right that I add that we all implore everyone in this country who enjoys going to sea to please follow the marine regulations of the Cayman Islands Government. It is only for your own safety.

Mr. Speaker, I thank you for acknowledging me and I thank all Members for indulging me. I thank Almighty God for the safe return of Mr. Ebanks.

The Speaker: Presentation of Papers and Reports. The Annual Report of The National Drug Council for the period ending 30 June 2000 to be laid on the Table by the Honourable Minister responsible for the Ministry of Health and Information Technology.

PRESENTATION OF PAPERS AND REPORTS

ANNUAL REPORT AND AUDITED FINANCIAL STATEMENTS OF THE NATIONAL DRUG COUNCIL FOR THE PERIOD ENDING 30 JUNE 2000

Hon. Linford A. Pierson: I beg to lay on the Table of this Honourable House the Annual Report of The National Drug Council and Audited Financial Statements for the period ending 30 June 2000.

The Speaker: So ordered.
Do you wish to speak to it?

Hon. Linford A. Pierson: Under the National Drug Council Law (1997) (2001 Revision), section 24(1), "The Council shall within six months after the end of each financial year in June, forward to the Minister responsible for Health,

(a) a report on the operations of the Council during that financial year and on the Council's policy and programme for future years; along with

(b) a copy of the audited financial statements as at the close of the previous financial year."

The Minister is also required under Section 24(3) to ". . . cause copies of the annual report, the financial statements and the report of the Auditor General . . . to be laid on the Table of the Legislative Assembly not later than 30th June following the end of the financial year to which they relate, and to be gazetted."

Unfortunately, the National Drug Council (NDC) experienced difficulties in having its financial reports prepared and this resulted in a delay in the audit by the Auditor General. As a result, the audit was not completed until after the due date.

I have been assured by the National Drug Council that they have now resolved the difficulties and there should not be a delay at the end of the current financial year. I am satisfied that the annual report and financial statements which have been audited by the Auditor General are in compliance with the National Drug Council Law (1997) (2001R).

With your permission, I would like to mention a few highlights from the National Drug Council Annual Report for the year ended 30 June 2000.

The National Drug Council was formed in 1997 out of the previous Advisory Council on the Misuse of Drugs with the intent of creating an authoritative body to coordinate the anti-drug efforts in our country. Though the effects of the misuse and abuse of both legal and illegal substances are generally known, we must never relent in our resolve to deal with the effects that the use of these substances have on our society.

There is virtually no area in our society that substance abuse does not affect. Our schools, hospitals, social services, police and customs departments, not to mention our courts and prison, feel the burden each and every day.

Our response to this problem must be two-fold - combining an aggressive supply reduction programme, with a comprehensive demand reduction programme. Historically, we have been most keenly aware of the supply reduction efforts as spearheaded by the Drugs Task Force, Customs, and the Royal Cayman Islands Police (RCIP). Their diligence in reducing the influx of illegal substances is a critical part of our anti-drug efforts.

On the demand reduction side, the requirements are no less critical, though perhaps less visible. Demand reduction at the first level is prevention and education, putting in place a system to educate not just our students, but our society as a whole as to the dangers of substance use, abuse and misuse. Demand reduction also involves the courts and police providing a deterrent factor through enforcement and application of our Laws.

Finally, treatment and rehabilitation forms an integral part and the last step in the demand chain dealing, as it does, with people who need help in addressing their chemical dependency. The National Drug Council is informed and guided by the twin pillars of the National Drug Council Law (2001R) and the National Strategic Plan for Drug Abuse Prevention and Rehabilitation. The Council comprises the senior civil servants from all agencies affected by this problem and a number of representatives from the private sector as well as (non-Governmental Organisations) NGOs.

The National Drug Council has developed a world class research capability in the area of substance abuse. Building on the experience of the Cayman Islands students drug use survey conducted in 1999, during the year covered by its annual report, the National Drug Council developed and conducted the first ever Cayman Islands drug and alcohol survey. The Economics and Statistics Office assisted with the selection of just under 1,000 households to represent all residents of the Cayman Islands. The community showed its support for the survey with a 94 per cent participation rate.

The results were published in October 2000. Research of this nature is of critical importance as it informs public policy and allocation of resources in this area.

As a by-product, the NDC has developed an in-house capacity to produce accurate, pertinent, statistical information in this area which is accepted by the major world governing bodies, including the United Nations International Control Programme (UNDCP).

As I mentioned previously, education and prevention form the first bulkhead in building a drug resistant society. To this end, the NDC expanded its awareness programme from one week to one month this year. The month's activities brought the message to each student in the Cayman Islands through special anti-drug assemblies. These assemblies featured the renowned motivational speaker, Jevon Thompson from the US as well as local sports celebrities and participation by the RCIP community relations group also Cayman Against Substance Abuse through their Youth to Youth programme.

The NDC also distributes teaching materials and curriculum support throughout the school system in matters pertaining to drug education; including video materials for classroom use and activity books for every primary school student in the Cayman Islands.

The highly respected Drug Abuse Resistance Education (DARE) programme was initiated as a trial in four primary schools by the RCIP. They are extending DARE to all primary schools this year. This programme joins the QUEST Life Skills Programme in the secondary schools sponsored by the Lions Club of Grand Cayman as just two parts of the anti-drug education programme.

The NDC organised the conversion of an unused facility located at the former Racquet Club on Shedden Road. This site is being used for community intervention programmes with seed money and project supervision provided by the NDC. The site was renovated using a combination of public and private funds.

Currently, there is an after-school programme in place as well as a number of other programmes designed to provide alternate activities to the youth, especially in the Scranton area. After this pilot programme is evaluated it is planned that similar programmes will be developed in each of the districts of Grand Cayman and Cayman Brac.

On the operations level, the NDC initiated the succession plan for personnel with the objective of increasing the complement of Caymanian staff while improving capabilities and efficiency at the same time. Two recent Caymanian graduates have been brought on board.

While the investment in professional development training is extensive and expensive, it has already shown dividends in increased capability and energy within the NDC. The NDC is fully committed to this programme and is maximising the Caymanian content in not just the staff complement and in their programmes and materials as well.

In closing, I would like to congratulate the NDC for their efforts, and all those who work on a daily basis to reduce the serious harm that substance abuse is doing to our society. Thank you.

The Speaker: Questions to Honourable Members and Ministers. Question 120 is standing in the name of The Elected Member for East End.

QUESTIONS TO HONOURABLE MINISTERS AND MEMBERS

QUESTION 120

No. 120: Mr. V. Arden McLean asked the Honourable First Official Member responsible for the Portfolio of Internal and External Affairs what is the status of the Cayman Protector since the Standing Finance Committee of the Legislative Assembly voted funds for new engines in December 2000.

The Speaker: The Honourable Acting First Official Member responsible for Internal and External Affairs.

Hon. Donovan W. F. Ebanks: The Cayman Protector remains in dry dock. It is envisaged that the vessel will be launched in late September or early October 2001.

SUPPLEMENTARIES

The Speaker: The Elected Member for East End.

Mr. V. Arden McLean: Can the Member explain the reason why it has taken so long to install two engines?

The Speaker: The Honourable Acting First Official Member responsible for Internal and External Affairs.

Hon. Donovan W. F. Ebanks: The actual authorisation to the Commissioner to commit funds did not come until February 2001. The engines were ordered and arrived in March. In preparing the hull for the engines, it was revealed that erosion not visible in previous inspections, was due to electrolysis between similar metals and the pump was not adequately draining the bilge. There has been work occasioned by having to attend to that corrosion.

During the installation of the propeller shafts there was misalignment discovered which also had to be attended to. In dealing with these items while the boat is in dry dock, the opportunity has been taken to renovate the fuel system, the fire extinguishing system, to refurbish and paint the boat's bottom.

The primary factors that contributed to the delay have been the lag between when Finance Committee gave the go ahead and funds were available and when the work commenced; the subsequent discovery of corrosion and the misalignment of the propeller shaft.

The Speaker: Before going on, I would appreciate a motion for the suspension of Standing Order 23(7) and (8).

SUSPENSION OF STANDING ORDER 23(7) AND (8)

[Moved by the Honourable Minister for Health and Information Technology]

QUESTION PUT. AGREED: STANDING ORDER 23(7) AND (8) SUSPENDED TO ALLOW QUESTION TIME TO CONTINUE BEYOND 11.00 AM.

The Speaker: Supplementaries continuing, the Elected Member for East End.

Mr. V. Arden McLean: If the Cayman Protector was in dry dock prior to December and March, why was it in dry dock then?

The Speaker: The Honourable Acting First Official Member responsible for Internal and External Affairs.

Hon. Donovan W. F. Ebanks: My understanding is that the boat has been in dry dock since September last year. It was placed in dry dock at that time because the engines had finally failed. The engines had been partly paid for in 1999. However, it was not until 2000 that this additional money was authorised and not until February of this year that it was actually made available.

It was put in dry dock in September 2000 as a result of the engines failing completely. At that time there was this procurement of new engines in process, and it kept hanging because of lack of money.

The Speaker: The Elected Member for East End.

Mr. V. Arden McLean: For a little over one year the Cayman Protector will be laid up. In view of the recent incident where we had a Caymanian missing at sea and I would presume the Protector would be used in these instances. What urgency is there in getting the Protector off dry dock and in the water? Is there any urgency? Six months ago the engines arrived and that seems kind of long.

The Speaker: The Honourable Acting First Official Member responsible for Internal and External Affairs.

Hon. Donovan W. F. Ebanks: There is certainly an urgency to get the vessel back into service. While the events of the past week have been a reminder of one of the purposes the vessel can serve, it has not been what sparked the urgency. Locating that individual yesterday evening indicates he could have been reached far more quickly with that vessel. However, it does not follow that he would have been located any more promptly.

In any case, I think it is essential to understand that there have been fundamental funding issues involved in this whole dilemma. Every effort is being made to expedite the physical work as quickly as possible. That is about all I can give the Member in relation to the urgency and the action we have taken.

The Speaker: The Elected Member for East End.

Mr. V. Arden McLean: Can the Member tell this House, if in light of cost have you considered it cost effective to be throwing this kind of money into the Protector, or has any thought been given to procuring a different boat?

The Speaker: The Honourable Acting First Official Member responsible for Internal and External Affairs.

Hon. Donovan W. F. Ebanks: The cost incurred in getting this vessel refurbished and fitted with these new engines will hopefully give it another ten years. They are in the ballpark of $.25 million. Certainly, it would not be expected that we could replace the vessel at that price. We would probably be looking at twice that price. Certainly, in today's fiscal environment, while it would be good to look at that alternative we feel it prudent to go the route we have gone.

The Speaker: The Fourth Elected Member for West Bay.

Mr. Cline A. Glidden Jr.: Can the Member explain this issue of funding? I can remember when the funds were requested in December there was full support. I can even remember being asked if we were sure the amount requested was sufficient. I think this House recognises the need the Protector fills. I wonder if he can clarify the question on funding.

The Speaker: The Honourable Acting First Official Member responsible for Internal and External Affairs.

Hon. Donovan W. F. Ebanks: When I say funding, I did not mean to imply that Finance Committee was not supportive. I think Members will also be aware that December 2000 was a time when for sheer cash-flow purposes expenditure commitments made that should have been met in December were not met because the cash was not there. Those carried over to the New Year.

As I understand the authorisation to incur this expenditure was not forthcoming until February. I am not suggesting that anyone is at fault, I am saying that I realise there were real issues surrounding money.

The Speaker: The Fourth Elected Member for West Bay.

Mr. Cline A. Glidden Jr.: In light of the other important role the Protector plays, for instance, the interdiction tion of drugs, can the Member say what provisions have been made in the interim while we have not had the services of the Protector?

The Speaker: The Honourable Acting First Official Member responsible for Internal and External Affairs.

Hon. Donovan W. F. Ebanks: The Drugs Task Force have been negatively impacted by the absence of the vessel; however they have had the use of a rigid inflatable boat with very powerful engines. It was a unit provided by the United Kingdom.

In addition the Task Force has been using its resources or personnel and making use of some of what has been seized, in particular one Colombian canoe-like vessel that has been fitted out and used. Obviously, none of those are the equivalent of the Protector. I assure Members that it is not that we are not keen to get it back into use and at the same time it is not that we cannot do anything because we do not have it. We have made efforts to improvise and do the best that we possibly can, using what is available.

The Speaker: Three additional supplementaries.
The Elected Member for East End.

Mr. V. Arden McLean: The Member talked about electrolyses, which gets worse in salt water. It appears that was caused by a lack of maintenance. Is the Member satisfied that the maintenance of the Protector is well carried out? The boat is relatively new and should not have been eaten up by electrolyses at this stage.

The Speaker: The Honourable Acting First Official Member responsible for Internal and External Affairs.

Hon. Donovan W. F. Ebanks: I would not want to describe a vessel of ten years of age as "relatively new", but that is the Member's opinion.

The RCIP does not have any marine engineering personnel to provide maintenance of the vessel. For major maintenance it relies on resources available in the private sector. Part of the problem with the issue of corrosion which I mentioned earlier, may have been avoidable. It was certainly in an area that was not visible until preparing the hull to fit the engines when the work started. However, in terms of the original fitting of the equipment on the vessel, some things probably could have been done differently to avoid the fundamental components that make electrolyses possible.

The Speaker: The Fourth Elected Member for West Bay.

Mr. Cline A. Glidden Jr.: Can the Member say, in light of everything that is going on in the world, whether the Protector would be considered an integral part of our national security? If so, and we have been without it for a period of almost one year, has any consideration been given to requesting help from our Mother country for our national security issue?

The Speaker: The Honourable Acting First Official Member responsible for Internal and External Affairs.

Hon. Donovan W. F. Ebanks: Yes, I think it is certainly true that the Protector was a component of the security of these Islands. The British Government was made aware of the situation and was asked to lend any assistance it could. I think, I mentioned that they provided us with this rigid inflatable boat with the high powered engines, which is useful for rapid pursuit near shore, but it is not an alternative to the Protector.

The Speaker: The Elected Member for East End.

Mr. V. Arden McLean: The Member said that the maintenance is done by the private sector, not through the police department. How often during the life of this boat, which is about ten years, has it been inspected? That is dry dock, inspected for structural integrity, the integrity of the bottom and grounding. How often has that been done since the Cayman Islands has had ownership of this boat?

The Speaker: The Honourable Acting First Official Member responsible for Internal and External Affairs.

Hon. Donovan W. F. Ebanks: Mr. Speaker, I am unable to say how many times it has been lifted out and surveyed as referred to by the Member. A comprehensive survey was done soon after it was lifted out last September prior to the commencement to fit these engines. That survey, unfortunately, did not detect this corrosion that only became obvious because it is on the inside of the hull. It only became obvious once other cuts were done internally to fit brackets and other protrusions to fit in the engines that exposed the inside of the hull. I can try to get the information for the Member, as to any previous occasions it may have been surveyed.

The Speaker: Moving on to question 121, standing in the name of the Second Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman.

QUESTION 121

No. 121: Mr. Lyndon L. Martin asked the Honourable Acting First Official Member responsible for the Portfolio of Internal and External Affairs what is the normal retirement age of a member of the Royal Cayman Islands Police Force and under what authority and or law is this stated.

Hon. Donovan W. F. Ebanks: The Public Service Pensions Law (2001 R) makes provision for the normal retirement age from the Public Service Pension Plan of all participants in that Plan to be 60 years.

However, the Police Law makes specific provisions in relation to retirement from the Police Service, which overrides the Public Service Pensions Law, which applies to all Officers, including those on contracted terms.

Non-gazetted Officers (from Constable to Inspector, inclusive) can retire after 21 years of police service; must retire at 55 years of age, but may be re-employed on contract. His Excellency the Governor may require retirement over age 50.

Gazetted Officers (from Chief Inspector up to Commissioner) hold office at the pleasure of His Excellency the Governor; it is not determined by age nor length of service. His Excellency may require retirement over age 50, or an officer may not elect to retire before age 55 (Pensions Law).

SUPPLEMENTARIES

The Speaker: The Second Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman.

Mr. Lyndon L. Martin: Can the Member indicate how long this provision has been in place under the Police Law for earlier than normal retirement age?

The Speaker: The Honourable Acting First Official Member responsible for Internal and External Affairs.

Hon. Donovan W. F. Ebanks: The Police Law was originally enacted in 1976 and last revised in 1999. I am unable to say whether this provision was in the original Law or inserted as a result of an amendment since 1976. However, I think it is fair to say it has been there for quite some time.

The Speaker: The Second Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman.

Mr. Lyndon L. Martin: Can the Member indicate the justification in the difference in retirement age for the RCIP compared to a regular civil servant?

The Speaker: The Honourable Temporary First Official Member responsible for Internal and External Affairs.

Hon. Donovan W. F. Ebanks: I cannot say categorically why there is a difference. I certainly know of no comparison in recent times, none that I have been party to or heard of, that provided justification for the difference. I think it perhaps reflects the recognition that the work of a policeman is obviously unique and a certain level of physical fitness and ability is inherently essential.

There is obviously provision for the re-engagement of officers on contract or fixed terms following the prescribed retirement criteria.

The Speaker: The Second Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman.

Mr. Lyndon L. Martin: Can the Member indicate if there is any special increased pension contribution by the RCIP to ensure the pension fund is adequately funded to cover this earlier than normal retirement and thus longer payment period, giving the normal expected life span of an individual?

The Speaker: The Honourable Acting First Official Member responsible for Internal and External Affairs.

Hon. Donovan W. F. Ebanks: I am aware of some consideration being given to the issue the Member has raised, namely, that of the substantially longer post retirement life period of a person retiring from the police service. I am not aware of any difference in the requirement in terms of contribution.

I think my recollection is that that situation and the respective numbers have been incorporated into the actuarial assessment done on the Public Service Pension Fund. As such, we are able to assess the overall level of contribution that is needed to make the fund capable of servicing its obligations. There has been no decision that I know of to try to segregate the police service, in terms of its level of contribution versus the contribution from other public servants.

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman.

Mrs. Julianna Y. O'Connor-Connolly: Is the Member saying that the actuarial assessment incorporated a spread distribution, whereas the general public service would be carrying the financial responsibility of the police, taking into regard the type of risk in their occupation?

The Speaker: The Honourable Temporary First Official Member responsible for Internal and External Affairs.

Hon. Donovan W. F. Ebanks: What I think I said was that it is my recollection that the issue of the fact that there was an element covered under the Pensions Law in terms of the police force who had certain numbers of people, —we are obviously talking about the Caymanian element of the police force eligible for pension versus in terms of past service the Caymanian element. That while there were some numbers in the police service who would be eligible to retire earlier than the traditional public servant, there was an overall assessment done of the fund.

I do not know of any subsequent requirement of the police to make any different level of contribution, or whether that is still under consideration. If there is no different level of contribution required now, then if the Member wants to term it as the other arms subsi-dising the police, I guess that is one way of looking at it.

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman.

Mrs. Julianna Y. O'Connor-Connolly: Can the Member say if Government is prepared to look at the other uniformed branches within the service, calculate their risk and see if there is time for another actuarial report to be reported to this House? In order to see if it is deemed necessary for such other persons who are involved in high risk activities to be given the same consideration?

The Speaker: The Honourable Acting First Official Member responsible for Internal and External Affairs.

Hon. Donovan W. F. Ebanks: Can she expand on what she means by "calculate the risk"? I do not follow what she is saying.

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman.

Mrs. Julianna Y. O'Connor-Connolly: A specific example is the fire service, a similar type of high risk occupation to that of the police service. Would consideration be given for early retirement for persons in that particular category of government?

The Speaker: The Honourable Acting First Official Member responsible for Internal and External Affairs.

Hon. Donovan W. F. Ebanks: I do not think there is any reason why the terms of employment of firemen could not be looked at. I would expect that if the relevant authorities in charge of the fire service feel that is an area that should be addressed would make representation. I see no reason an assessment of the current provisions could not be done. I cannot give an undertaking as to what would happen as a result of such an assessment.

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman.

Mrs. Julianna Y. O'Connor-Connolly: In view of the sterling job our firemen do and what firemen are faced with as borne in New York recently, and with the view that we are in a global village.

I wonder, rather than waiting for the Chief Fire Officer to make a request, it would be a better approach if those responsible for the fire service would by way of showing gratitude on behalf of the public of the Cayman Islands, make the first approach and set up a committee, if the Government seeing it prudent and necessary to look into this as a matter of priority.

The Speaker: The Honourable Acting First Official Member responsible for Internal and External Affairs.

Hon. Donovan W. F. Ebanks: I will note the Member's suggestion and idea she has put forward.

The Speaker: The Second Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman.

Mr. Lyndon L. Martin: Can the Member indicate if the age of 50 as stated in the Police Law is an age eligible for retirement, or is it the age at which commencement of pension benefits are engaged?

The Speaker: The Honourable Acting First Official Member responsible for Internal and External Affairs.

Hon. Donovan W. F. Ebanks: In the case of non-gazetted officers, they can retire after 21 years, whether they have reached 55 or not. They must retire at 55 however; they are eligible for re-employment thereafter on contracted terms. Such a person would obviously retain their pensionable status and be employed on contracted terms.

The Speaker: The Second Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman.

Mr. Lyndon L. Martin: Therefore, if an officer retires after 21 years of service, does he receive pension benefits at that time, even if he is under the age of 50?

The Speaker: The Honourable Acting First Official Member responsible for Internal and External Affairs.

Hon. Donovan W. F. Ebanks: The answer is yes.

The Speaker: The Second Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman.

Mr. Lyndon L. Martin: If the individual is re-employed under contract, does he still receive the pension benefits and emoluments as related to his contract?

The Speaker: The Honourable Acting First Official Member responsible for Internal and External Affairs.

Hon. Donovan W. F. Ebanks: Yes, because the Government is under no obligation to employ that individual. If he takes up employment with some other employer, he is clearly entitled to his pension. If the Government chooses to employ someone else, there are terms that apply. So if Government chooses to employ the individual who has fulfilled his eligibility for retirement, he does not sacrifice his pensionable status. He retains that and is employed on whatever terms anyone else could have been employed on.

The Speaker: The Elected Member for East End.

Mr. V. Arden McLean: It is my understanding that both gazetted and non-gazetted officers can be re-employed after the usual retirement age. In some cases, he may be under 55, but in some cases over 55. Can the Member tell us if that re-employment, particularly over age 55, is predicated on those individuals being physically fit?

The Speaker: The Honourable Acting First Official Member responsible for Internal and External Affairs.

Hon. Donovan W. F. Ebanks: Anyone re-engaged on contract terms, regardless of age, has to be medically examined and certified fit for employment.

The Speaker: The Elected Member for East End.

Mr. V. Arden McLean: Can the Member say examined by whom? Is it the Government or a private doctor?

The Speaker: The Honourable Acting First Official Member responsible for Internal and External Affairs.

Hon. Donovan W. F. Ebanks: My understanding is that examinations are done by the Government Medical Officer.

The Speaker: The Second Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman.

Mr. Lyndon L. Martin: In an earlier answer the Member referred to the police force as "unique"; given their risk and the need for physical fitness. The point made by the First Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman, is that it is not so unique. There is at least the Fire Service that has a sometimes greater risk and need for physical fitness. A request was made for some commitment by Government to review this, however no such commitment has been made.

I am asking for the Honourable Acting First Official Member responsible for Internal and External Affairs to give an undertaking to review two points: 1) the inclusion of the fire service under the agreement of early retirement; and 2) the possibility of the fire service and the police making a small contribution above that of the normal civil servant to their pension fund to ensure that they are paying for the extra benefits and not subsidised by other civil servants.

I would just like to clarify that I do respect the service provided by the RCIP and truly appreciate the uniqueness of that department and the special risk they take. I am just asking for equal respect and rights for their brothers in the fight against fire and other ailments in this community, the fire service.

The Speaker: The Honourable Acting First Official Member responsible for Internal and External Affairs.

Hon. Donovan W. F. Ebanks: I understood the Member to be putting forward a proposal or suggestion, which I told her I would note. If this Member is asking me to look into the inclusion of the fire service and the fire service and police service making a different level of contribution, I can give the Member a commitment to have those looked at.

The Speaker: Are there any further supplementaries? If not, that concludes Question Time for this morning.

Would Members prefer to continue on to 12.45, or take the break?

Hon. Roy Boddin: Mr Speaker, I think we should continue.

The Speaker: So be it.

BILLS

SECOND READINGS

THE PUBLIC MANAGEMENT AND FINANCE BILL, 2001

(Continuation of debate thereon)

Mr. Gilbert A. McLean: I rise to speak to a Bill for a Law to repeal and replace The Public Finance and Audit Law (1997) and its regulations to implement a new system of government accounting; to establish a new financial regime of financial accountability and responsibility for ministries, portfolios, government companies and statutory authorities; to re-establish the post, functions and powers of the auditor-general; and for incidental and connected purposes. This Bill is called The Public Management and Finance Bill, 2001.

I am glad to be a part of the elements that instigated this Bill. As noted yesterday by the Minister of Education, when he and I were both Backbench Members we brought a motion asking government to enact legislation designed from the New Zealand Law. At that time, it was marked and scoffed by the persons in government who considered themselves most brilliant in their ignorance.

We claim to be a country very much in the forefront of finance and banking and all those things that go along with financial management on an international scene. Yet, up until now we have in place a very antiquated Law that allows governments to use public funds and lawfully produce the annual audited accounts of any year; two years later. I suggest that that type of condition is one that is damaging to the best interest of the public good, particularly relating to the finances of a country.

If we as individuals would ever undertake to balance our chequebooks two years after we had written out all the money in it, we would most likely be in prison for issuing bad cheques. However, the process is completely different where government is concerned, and is a practice that I believe should have been stopped long before this time.

The Motion I referred to was back in 1995, six years ago. I think it is quite commendable that the present Administration has brought forward this Bill at this time. I think those persons who have been involved in its drafting and in all the deliberation that has gone on to get it to this stage are also due complimentary recognition.

The Bill before the House is quite comprehensive. One of the things I like about it is that it brings about accountability in Law. It is not something that continues in a fashion that it is just a nice-sounding buzzword. It is a Law and persons can be held accountable under this Law, except one, which I will speak about before I have completed my contribution.

There have been too many instances where government money has been spent where it was not approved by the Finance Committee, or approved for other areas and projects, and the time has run as long as one year before the Government brings it to Finance Committee, on the presumption that they have support in the committee to approve just about anything they have done. This Law will certainly put an end to that type of financial mismanagement.

One of the most important sections in this Bill is the section that requires a government—any government—to give complete economic forecasts and financial statements to the country prior to an election. In this country I have seen elections where internal memos from the Accountant General and Auditor General were used in manifestos to try to mislead the country into believing that the Government had what was termed by the Leader of that Government at that time, $60 million pure profit.

Hon. Roy Bodden: Recurrent profit!

Mr. Gilbert A. McLean: Thank you. Recurrent profit!

First of all, we never speak of governments making profits; we speak of governments having surpluses. That was blatantly done. There was no act or interception by the Governor of the day to clarify that situation and regrettably the Cayman Islands have never had $60 million profit or surplus.

I think the issues in an election should be those that persons who enter the election wish to bring to the attention of the public, as to what they would do and could do, if the people were to choose them. It would include the methodology they would use and what they would prioritise. We should remove from the political environment any opportunity for the Government of the day to mislead the public about the finances of the country.

The state of the finances of the country should be produced by persons whose profession it is to produce accounts and those accounts would stand for those persons contesting the elections. There would be no more opportunity for internal memos being stuffed in manifestos or waved on national television to try to mislead the public as to the state of the finances of the country. That is one of the things I see this Bill doing.

I have to believe that this Bill is a good thing when it can address matters like that! Thank goodness, it is not a regulation, because we know those can change from day to day behind closed doors and are at the disposal of the Government Executive of whichever government is in power. That is one area I greatly welcome.

For many years in the past, as a Member of this House and on political platforms, I have argued the point that I think we do not do ourselves justice by having our fiscal year end at the end of the calendar year that is, 31 December. It is a punishment on the administration of government.

I have been a civil servant for many years. I know what it is like come beginning of August, into September, then October and the excruciating pressure to prepare estimates for November to come before the House. That is the same time when most persons are under the pressure of what to get for Christmas! They have a life as well, and that makes the process even harder.

The way it is now, we know that most businesses and fees are supposed to be paid to government by 31 December. However this does not happen. We are well aware that people send to Government the fees due at year end, way down into the first half of any given year. It makes sense to me to change the fiscal year. This Bill provides for the fiscal year to change in the next two years to begin on 1 July and end on 30 June. I think there is something very positive in that because the people who manage the Government's finances will have had the opportunity to collect the fees that should have come in but may not have by June following. They would have a factual position as to what the money would be in that year, rather than having to guesstimate.

I see another positive. That is, any incoming new government would deal with a budget that is at least ongoing and they would have a six month leeway (as elections are normally every four years in November), to analyse, prioritise, work up a programme, to see how the money was coming in at that time and to be better able to set its agenda for the next fiscal year. I welcome that proposed change as well.

There is another part that grabs my attention. That is the public sector reporting. I have been around this Legislative Assembly for a number of years and I have seen time and again questions posed by Members trying to find out what is happening with the money which the House has approved initially, but the progress to which only the Executive Council is privileged. That will change under this Bill. The Government will be required to give quarterly statements—not if they choose to do so, they have to do so by Law.

Governments in the past seemed to feel that once they had approved a few hundred million dollars that it became their particular domain to let us, who approved it initially, have a little piece here and there. We are not supposed to know the whole picture. I think if governments were thinking smartly, they would understand that they may be spending money inefficiently and wasting it, and if that is not the case there are many factors over which they have no control. They cannot make money come in as fast as they would like or how they projected and it could largely be said it is no fault of theirs and they should be happy to share the information. Well, this Bill seems to make it possible that this information will be available to Members and the country. That is a good thing.

People involved with government administration, civil servants and the Members of Executive Council who are Ministers; each are called upon by Law to account for the way money is spent and what it is spent on. The Minister must set the stage for his policies and priorities. That is the way it should be. Permanent Secretaries will have to be responsible for carrying out those policies. They are referred to in this Bill generally by the term “Chief Officers.” No one is let off the hook for shirking his or her particular responsibilities.

However, there enters at this stage a bit of a problem. In our pitiful political society Ministers, while having high sounding names, have no administrative responsibility. In other words, Ministers cannot discipline those Permanent Secretaries and hold them to responsibilities which they should carry out, although the Minister has the responsibility to see that they do.

There are still eight people in this House who voted against the Constitution that gave that as far back as 1991 when we could have had Ministers with that power.

Hon. Roy Bodden: True!

Mr. Gilbert A. McLean: I do not want to hear anyone come bleating to me about the Ministers not having that power. We cannot complain about something that we need and when it comes to us, when we can have it, we turn around and say we do not want it and say we want it at the same time. Be fish or fowl!

I have said and will continue to say that Ministers of government should have administrative responsibility for the ministries and departments which they are held accountable for in this Legislative Assembly. It is unfair to the Ministers to come here when we Backbenchers demand to know what is happening in a particular ministry and ask them why it did not happen and to give us reasons why they did not do so and so. Then again, we have a mentality that likes to hide behind ‘I do not have responsibility for it. It is really the Governor.’

In the present system, the Minister cannot sign the performance bond as provided for in this Bill, it has to be signed on his behalf by a civil servant. However, the people of this country last November did not elect any civil servants! They elected the 15 of us and during election each one attempted to be seen as a bigger Goliath than the other!

Now, once we are here, we do not hear no barking, it is meow, meow!

[laughter]

Mr. Gilbert A. McLean: My friend to my right is saying I should speak for myself. I am sure he understands what I am talking about. We stand here as I am doing now and speak strongly about that which should be. However, the reality hidden from the people is that unless there is Constitutional change in this country they are not being represented the way they should, nor can they hold accountable the people who keep trying to be elected by them.

The Minister jogged my memory about the performance agreement which is something that I think is extremely necessary. It amounts to a contract. Long before the Law of contracts, even when we had that wicked polar bear, the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics; internationally there was one Law recognised and accepted by all nations—the Law of Contracts. In effect, it is a contract that indicates the Permanent Secretary is contracted to do a certain job. The Minister is part of that contract and the Legislative Assembly the ultimate boss, has given them certain authority to do certain things. In effect, we have a contractual relationship with them and they must answer to us, in a more meaningful way than what is presently done.

Just to add a little to this whole concept of the need for constitutional accountability and for responsibility under a constitution. If we want to see what a sad situation we are, in my opinion, we can turn to Section 77, which says, “(1) Nothing in this Law shall affect the constitutional functions or independence of the Governor, his office or support staff.” Now, is this not strange that we would use that awful word “independence of the Governor” yet none of us wants to feel independent? I marvel at that over and over again.

It gets better in 77(3), “(3) The office of the Governor shall not be required to comply with sections 42, 43 and 44 . . .” In other words, that office is above the Law.

Section 42 is the performance agreement. That office does not require any performance agreement, and it is immaterial how it performs, good or bad, it is above that Section.

Section 43, making quarterly reports, it does not have to do that and Section 44, annual report, it does not have to do that.

I want to make it very clear that I am one individual in these Cayman Islands, my home that I love dearly, who does not believe that anyone is above the Law. Worst of all, above the Parliament of which I am a part!

Last week at the Human Rights Symposium held in Cayman ... I hope it educated a few of our backward minds in this country. We heard some brilliant scholars from around the world keep hammering one thing: Parliament is supreme. Note that term: Parliament is supreme! If Parliament is seen as supreme, and they kept coming to the point that the Judiciary interprets the Law given by Parliament, but Parliament is supreme.

So now, I argue that the Cayman Islands have gone back to the time when Charles, King of England, lost his head by believing he was above Parliament. That is where we are because there are those persons who are above Parliament.

It really worries me that we as a people allow about half a dozen propagandists in this country to fool us and mislead us time and time and time again on this particular aspect. When everybody is worked up and agitated every four years, hating one another (in a nice way) to outdo one another, those people to represent them, then what are we when we get here? We know what we are supposed to be, but what are we? We make one individual in this country about whom we are not even consulted but comes here imposed by a Colonial power, to be above our Law which is legislated. These are some of the things that we as Members of this House need to think about very seriously, whether that is a good situation to be in and how that accords with human rights in this very Bill.

We had better get changes in the Constitution where Ministers have administrative responsibility. The civil servants who cannot deal with the changes are in the wrong place. Like my friend the Minister of Education said, they are dinosaurs. It is time for them to pass on anyway! Let the school children study about them in museums and on the internet.

Another part of this Bill that I like is found under "offences and penalties." I have been around several moons. I know of instances where you hear that serious amounts of government money is missing and the next thing you hear is that the person we know by organisational structure has to be responsible, rather than being penalised; gets promoted. Now we hear of another little person in the service, in the clerical level, who borrowed $20 and lost her job. No pension, nothing.

I see some penalties here that ought to let one and all think a little—fines of $10,000 and six months, or both; or fines of up to $100,000 and terms up to five years. There are others where there can be $10,000 for every day if the offence continues. That is real good stuff.

If there be any sense among the whole governmental process, that ought to make people think when it comes to doing anything with the money of the people except that which is required in Law.

There are other Sections of this Bill I could discuss, however I dare say other Members will be speaking about them. I will comment on only one more, and that is the budgeting process.

The budget process will go through four phases, a strategic phase; a detailed planning and budgeting phase; an Executive Council collective review phase; and a Legislative Assembly review phase. Budgeting as this Bill proposes will change forever, if accepted and implemented. It gives the complete scope for the involvement of everybody—the public, government, Executive Council, and the Legislative Assembly, which, if you believe those brilliant scholars that spoke last week it is supposed to be supreme. I hope this Bill will be passed and that it will be implemented. The one small complaint I have at this time is that I wish it could be enforced a bit quicker than the schedule set for it.

I must give this Bill my full support because it will move us into a better time in a better way.

Thank you.

The Speaker: We shall suspend proceedings until 2.00.

Continuation of the Second Reading debate on the Public Management and Finance Bill 2001.

Does any other Member wish to speak? (Pause) Does any other Member wish to speak? (Pause) Last call, does any other Member wish to speak?

The Second Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. Alden McLaughlin, Jr.: It would be remiss of me to allow a Bill as important as this to be brought to the Floor of this House without offering my views on it.

Mr. Speaker, this is a signal moment. This Bill entitled, A Bill for a Law to Repeal and Replace The Public Finance and Audit Law (1997 Revision) and Regulations made under that Law; to Repeal Section 74 of The Customs Law (1998 Revision); to implement a new system of government accounting; to establish a new financial regime of financial accountability and responsibility for Ministries, Portfolios, Government Companies and Statutory Authorities is something akin to a revolution in the way that this government conducts its financial affairs.

Key to the underlying principle of this Bill is the now often mooted concepts of accountability and responsibility, concepts which, while widely practised elsewhere, are novel concepts to the administration of government in the Cayman Islands.

The Bill has its genesis, as put by the Minister of Education yesterday, in the financial management initiative that was first brought to this House some six years ago by that Honourable Minister himself, and his colleague now on the Backbench, the Second Elected Member for Bodden Town. While I was not privileged to be a Member of this Honourable House at that time, I do recall that there was considerable resistance on the part of the then political directorate to this revolutionary concept. Which is that government should be accountable and the various arms of the Legislative Assembly, Executive Council and the Administration within the civil service should have specific responsibility for particular functions of government, in particular, of financial administration.

I view this Bill as the first of what I consider to be a compendium of progressive legislation that is absolutely critical if this country is to continue to succeed into the 21st century. I know that the concept continues to have its detractors. I know there are those within the civil service and without, and even some within these Chambers who are far more comfortable with the tried, though perhaps untrue, and who remain vetted to a concept of government and public administration that has long outlived its utility. However, we have to come to embrace new concepts, new ways of doing business that gives greater efficacy to the work and product of the public service. We have to come to a realisation that the public service, like every other institution, must have its worth judged by its performance.

The old system under which this country's finances are organised and run, and the way the civil service is structured to run and perform is, in my view, outmoded. There are no clear lines of accountability; there are no reference points by which the performance of a particular Minister—or a particular individual within a ministry—can be properly assessed. In this day and age, they are still operating the country's largest institution, the largest employer, the entity that has perhaps the largest budget in this country, on the basis of cash accounting. For anyone who has lived in an environment other than the public service, this is astounding!

We have before us now an opportunity to grasp what will bring the financial management of this country in line with the way business is conducted in the private sector of this country and elsewhere. I have gathered that there is still some resistance to this process. There are some good criticisms of the Bill and the structural framework it puts into place, which I shall deal with shortly. If there were no other reason to embrace and support this Bill, it is this: the Bill for the first time, I believe, will create the concepts of accountability and responsibility. It will clarify the roles of the different players in the system of government.

The Legislative Assembly, pursuant to this Bill, will have the responsibility of agreeing to the broad outcome goals proposed by Executive Council, it will continue to authorise government revenue and expenses and to review and monitor government performance. Executive Council is given the responsibility to establish both broad and specific outcome goals of the Government to determine policies that it will use to achieve those goals and agree with the Chief Officers the performance expected of the various ministries, portfolios, government companies and statutory authorities. Executive Council will also have the responsibility of monitoring the performance of those various agencies and of managing the finances of Government.

The Permanent Secretaries and their equivalents in the three portfolios will have the responsibility to deliver the performance agreed with Executive Council and to acquire and manage the financial inputs to do this. For the first time in the history of this country, this has the effect of establishing roles for the various parties involved in administering the affairs of this country. No longer will it be quite so easy for those who wish to avoid responsibility to say, 'Well, I do not have responsibility for that. I am unable to give you that information, you will need to seek that from someone else.'

As I alluded to in my opening, one of the key and most significant changes effected by this proposed legislation is to convert government's accounting system from cash to accrual. For us to begin to understand how significant that change will be, we need to understand how the current system operates.

The key difference between accrual accounting and cash accounting is that with accrual accounting transactions are recognised when the event occurs and not when the cash flow happens. This means that accrual expenses are recorded when the obligation to pay occurs, which is usually when an item is bought, or an invoice is received, whereas cash expenditure is only recognised when the payment is made. Under the cash accounting system it is also possible that non-cash transactions, such as depreciation of assets or unfunded pension liabilities, are only recognised when the cash flows, which is usually many years later. When we move to an accrual system, it will be required that the Government accounts for depreciation of assets and unfunded pension liabilities when they occur.

We have had much talk during the election campaign and in the subsequent months, about what the financial position of this country was when the last Government demitted office. There is nothing new about that. That is a situation obtained in my memory every time an election campaign comes around and more so when an administration changed.

There has been much talk by the former Administration—who still insists they left a Treasury flushed with funds. Those of us even on this side of the House who assumed the seats formerly held by many of those former Members know the reverse to be the truth. In fact, it is probably accurate to say that the country has never found itself in a worse financial position than that inherited by the current Administration.

The reason there can be such debate and argument about this issue is because under the current system, it is possible to pave $8 million worth of roads, not pay for it and because you have not paid for it, the Government balance sheet reflects an $8 million credit. Once we move to a system of accrual accounting that will not be possible. The particular expenditure will be booked at the time that Government's contractual obligation to pay arises.

I will go further than that. The reason for this country being in the precarious financial position that it currently finds itself, is in large part at least, due precisely to the system currently in place that permits kind of conduct. If we had an accrual accounting system in place in years past, it would not be possible for any government to commit the country to significant expenditure, have the work carried out, not pay the invoices and boast about a balance sheet which reflects monies that are yet unspent, but have long since been committed. I say again, that if I need only one reason to support this Bill that reason can stand alone.

The Bill is also designed to improve this much vaunted concept of transparency because it requires the preparation of reports of planned and actual performance by the Government and further requires that all of these reports be gazetted and or tabled in the Legislative Assembly.

Perhaps, and adjunct to that, it also requires that the Financial Secretary prepare financial statements in advance of an election. Therefore, we do not have to deal with what has become one bane of the election campaign process of these Islands; where there is dispute after dispute and memorandum after memorandum. Depending which side one is on, one paints the picture that either the Government has exercised good stewardship and has lots of money in its account; or if one is on the other side, one paints the picture that the country is not in a good financial position and that the Government has performed badly and is therefore responsible for that situation and should be voted out of office.

The pre-election economic and financial update required by Section 26 of this Bill will require the Financial Secretary to gazette a pre-election economic and financial update containing updated economic forecasts and forecast financial statements. This is critical and important. It is necessary that voters have access to reliable, accurate, up-to-date information about the Government's finances in the lead-up to an election. It is even more critical that this information is objective, free from the nuances and interpretations which those who stand for office are wont to place upon such documents.

If I do have one serious criticism of the Bill—and I hasten to add not one that will prevent me from supporting it—it is that it plainly has as a precedent or, let me rephrase that. This Bill and this concept plainly come from a jurisdiction that has a more modern constitutional framework than we currently have. There are certain points within the Bill where one can see that it has been something of a drafting and conceptual struggle to have the concept fit within our current constitutional framework.

The Second Elected Member for Bodden Town alluded to this as well. The problem has its genesis, as he accurately put it, in the fact that under our current constitutional arrangement; Ministers of Government do not have administrative responsibility for their ministries. The reality of that is that Ministers are therefore unable to properly enter into performance agreements with their Permanent Secretaries who are described as "Chief Officers" under this Bill. They have no way in that scenario of ensuring that their Permanent Secretaries carry out the terms of that performance agreement. Permanent secretaries have responsibility to and report to the Chief Secretary.

A way has been found which I believe meets with the approval of most Honourable Members of this Legislative Assembly by which the Chief Officers will execute performance agreements, with the three official Members of this Honourable House who do have administrative responsibility for their respective portfolios. Those three Members are also Members of Executive Council. We have the necessary links to ensure that these performance agreements have the necessary authority and accountability of those who do execute them on behalf of the various ministries.

There is another consequence that flows from our current constitutional status that makes the operation of this proposed Law somewhat more difficult than it might otherwise be. The whole concept of this Bill, as I have indicated earlier, is one of accountability and responsibility. Executive Council decides on policy in consultation with the Legislative Assembly; the Legislative Assembly votes funds to finance those policies. Executive Council enters into the performance agreement with the various ministries on the basis that the respective ministries will provide the outcomes which have been detailed and agreed upon for the particular sum of money or vote.

Executive Council is then responsible to ensure that those policies are affected, that those outcomes are achieved. They are required by the Bill to report to this Legislative Assembly on a quarterly basis as to how those outcomes are progressing and are accountable to the Legislative Assembly and to answer questions when things are amiss.

The Chief Officer, who is the Permanent Secretary, has entered into an agreement with Executive Council to carry out these particular functions and achieve these particular outcomes. However, the Permanent Secretary cannot do this alone. We therefore need to have a chain of command, a means of ensuring that those who work in the ministry and who report to the Chief Officer are on board with the programme. In short, they need to be in a position where they are responsible in every sense of the word for those personnel who work within their ministries, and are able to deal effectively and to discipline effectively. To recommend changes to personnel regarding persons simply not performing, not up to scratch, not delivering the product to which they should achieve as agreed by the Chief Officer with Executive Council.

As I understand the framework of this Bill and this concept, it must necessarily involve some considerable degree of decentralisation of the Personnel Department. Therefore, the Chief Officer becomes responsible for his personnel, in every sense of the word. If that does not happen, in my view the system as outlined as provided for in this Bill, simply cannot work. I understand there is considerable resistance at the senior level of the civil service to this concept of decentralisation of personnel. I also understand that if this Bill had to be held up to wait consensus on that issue, we who are here today may well have demitted office before any such consensus had been achieved. I believe that if this concept is to have any chance at all . . . maybe it is a question of the chicken and the egg and which came first.

Maybe (and this is what I am hoping) the implementation of this particular reporting and accountability structure and the clear lines of reporting and clarification of the various roles will have the effect of causing a decentralisation of personnel. This is designed to come into place over some four or five years to give the public service the chance to come to grips with what is for the public service a novel concept and to allow the Permanent Secretaries to become responsible, to develop authority to deal with the personnel who work in their ministry. Therefore, that system including the revision of General Orders and the creation of some other code of practice for civil servants, will have a combined effect on senior civil servants. They will have to execute these performance agreements; and the necessary authority and ability to ensure that those who work within their respective ministries are committed to the same process, are committed to achieving the performance goals outlined in the various performance agreements; which the Permanent Secretaries will have signed with Executive Council.

We have to accept as a country that we have to move from concepts that are comfortable and familiar, and under which we have operated for so long that we are scared to let go, if this country is to survive. There are real—not imagined — concerns about the growth of the civil service and about the country's ability to continue to fund it.

Many of us looking from the outside, and some who sit on the inside are of the view that the continued growth of the civil service is the result of the lack of accountability, responsibility, and clarity in the various roles of those who perform the various functions government has to play. When this Bill becomes Law and when ultimately all of its sections come to be implemented, I believe that it should have the effect of significantly shrinking the size of the civil service. The biggest problem I have at this stage is that I do not believe that given the situation we currently face, we can wait to see that happen as a result of this Bill. That is an aside.

The way this Bill is structured, Executive Council will buy from the Permanent Secretary a certain output or outcome. The price of that output or outcome will have to be approved by the Legislative Assembly of this country. The Legislative Assembly then has the ability to value what it is getting, how much is this particular outcome worth. Once that is agreed, we are away from the current situation of the Governor in his infinite wisdom, or the Chief Secretary, in his, deciding how many more civil servants they are going to hire during the course of a particular year because the Budget would have been agreed.

At the level of the Legislative Assembly, we are less concerned with how many individuals they are hiring. If they wish to take the money that has been approved and hire more people than they need, they are going to run into a major problem with the performance agreement they have signed because they would have used monies that should have been allocated to purposes other than to pay salaries of individuals that particular ministry could do without.

We had a grave revelation just yesterday that this Legislative Assembly passed a motion that payment of Contracted Officers Supplement (COS) in relation to new contracts should cease as of 11 May this year. We now know that notwithstanding that Motion of Finance Committee adopted by this Honourable House, His Excellency the Governor has renewed 40 contracts which attract COS, and has hired 48 new civil servants with contracts that also attract COS. That brings into real question the constitutional role this Honourable House has to play in the affairs of Government and in the administration of the finances of this country.

I raise that in the context of this debate because Section 77 of the proposed Bill, provides that, "Nothing in this Law shall affect the constitutional functions or independence of the Governor, his office or support staff." If we agree to this Bill in its current form, we are recognising the constitutional function and independence of His Excellency the Governor.

The Constitution itself assigns to us certain constitutional functions. One of the most important constitutional functions we serve is that we—and only we—who have been elected by the people of this country are entitled to raise taxes on the people of this country, or are entitled to approve the expenditure of the public purse. This is also referred to in the Bill before the House because it says that "Except as provided in sections 12 and 13 - (a) no executive expenses may be incurred; (b) no executive assets may be acquired or created, or loan made, by the Government; (c) no equity investment may be made; and (d) no borrowing may be undertaken by the Government, unless authorised by an appropriation." Neither Section 12 nor 13 confer upon the Gov-error any ability to expend the finances of this country.

If this Bill, which is to become Law, is to have any chance of success all of those who play roles pursuant to the Constitution and the provisions of this Law have to accept their particular role. We are prepared to pass into Law, legislation that makes plain that nothing in this Law and therefore nothing done by this Legislative Assembly will affect the constitutional functions or independence of the Governor. In the same way, it is absolutely critical to this country, to the workings of government, that even His Excellency the Governor, must understand that he is not to interfere with the constitutional functions or independence of the Finance Committee of this Honourable House and the Legislative Assembly of the Cayman Islands. We have distinct roles to play and we all must play by those roles, otherwise we wind up in a constitutional crisis with a country that derogates from the rule of Law.

I close my submission on this important Bill by again stressing as we march onward into the 21st Century it is very important for us to be progressive in outlook. To adopt principles and legislation which accord with the times we are in which reflect the sophistication of the environment we all operate. That will also reflect our willingness to embrace the new progressive and the type of legislative framework which is critical to our continued success.

One of the fundamental and indeed universal rules of nature is evolution or extinction. The Minister of Education spoke of a block of dinosaurs that still stand resolutely and firmly in the way of progress. The dinosaurs were creatures that failed to evolve. We have much progressive legislation that needs to come to this Honourable House. We have laboured for years and years as a country, impeded by individuals who believe that this country should forever remain stranded on the shoals of anachronism. They refuse to be part of or to promote a system which calls for accountability; that calls for responsibility; that calls for transparency; which keeps them from operating in the dark by hiding the truth. It is that attitude, approach and outlook that has brought us to where we are now.

Those of us who are here now, who have been entrusted with the responsibility that we wrested from those individuals, have a duty to ensure that during our tenure we do what is necessary to bring fiscal reform and fiscal management and accountability to the affairs of government. We have a duty to ensure that the human rights of every individual who lives, works or visits these Islands is protected and enshrined in our Constitution. We have a duty to ensure that these Islands never again face the national embarrassment we did recently at the Human Rights Symposium. To be shown up time and time again as one of the few countries in the modern civilised world that does not have a Bill of Rights.

We have a duty to talk to our people, to explain to our people the difficulties that we labour under as a country because of the constitutional framework in which we operate. We have a duty to make it plain to them that the system and the constitutional framework under which this country currently operates simply does not work anymore. As a country we have grown, and as a jurisdiction we have grown out of those constitutional clothes. It seems that we are impeded at every exercise we go through these days, our efforts are impinged upon because of the constraints of that constitutional framework. I sought to demonstrate how those constitutional constraints will affect the operation of the Bill currently before the House.

Mr. Speaker, I may well be here for just this one term. However, while I am here I shall continue to articulate the position that this country cannot remain vetted to concepts that have outlived their utility. We must embrace the new. We must embrace and develop and implement the necessary progressive legislative framework to enable this country to function, to progress and to move confidently into this 21st century.

Thank you.

The Speaker: We shall suspend proceedings for 15 minutes.

PROCEEDINGS SUSPENDED AT 3.25 PM

PROCEEDINGS RESUMED AT 3.50 PM

The Speaker: Please be seated.

Continuation of the Second Reading debate on the Public Management and Finance Bill 2001. Does any other Member wish to speak?

The Elected Member for East End.

Mr. V. Arden McLean: Thank you.

I rise to make a short contribution to the Bill currently before the House, a Bill for a Law to Repeal and Replace The Public Finance and Audit Law (1997 Revision).

Niccolò Machiavelli, in his book The Prince said “There is nothing more difficult to take in hand, more perilous to conduct or more uncertain in its success, than to take the lead in the introduction of a new order of things, for the reformer has enemies in all those who profit from the old order and only lukewarm defenders in those who might profit from the new.”

We hear about the dinosaurs and icebergs that have resisted change in this country. We hear the Third Official Member speak about the current cash financial system we operate under, (over 100 years old) which is focused on controlling behaviour and availability of cash.

We talk about the 21st Century and we want to be known as some of the pioneers of the 21st Century. If that is so, then it is time we moved towards the 21st Century and leave the old behind. Unfortunately, some of those who are enemies of the new will be left behind also.

This country has operated, politically in particular, with people fooling the populace or electors in this country, that they were fiscally responsible. I recall in the 1996 election they talked about the "recurrent profit." Now, I do not know where that came from because the little cash that came in they were spending.

The old way gave rise to many people—many politicians—trying to fool the people of this country in order to be returned to this Honourable House. Well, if this Bill is passed, those old politicians who were here will no longer be able to survive in this environment. The Bill makes provision for changing the fiscal year from January to December, to July to June. Those who would fool the people of this country can no longer do that. We usually have elections in November.

The people of the country will know exactly what the position of the country was in June. That in itself will bring efficiency and effectiveness to the people who operate and run this country. The Ministers who will come out and ask for another term to run this country will have to be efficient in order to be re-elected.

We constantly go back each election and blame the previous Government for the financial woes the country was left with. That is over! Everyone will know exactly what they are getting into because in June we will know the condition of the country. Unless, of course, those Ministers go on a spending spree as done in 2000; because that was done in some six weeks and there are five months between June and November! I doubt that will happen because the Bill also makes provisions for offences if there is mismanagement of funds. I will just say what the Second Elected Member for Bodden Town said, "That is very good, Mr. Speaker!"

It is time that whoever mismanages the public funds be punished. Anyone can manage; however, once you knowingly mismanage, then you must pay the price. That price must be high. The punishment must be equal to the offence.

The accrual system of management of accounting is something that most of us are used to because we came from the private sector. I know that there are career civil servants who are a little bit scared of it. My advice to them is that it will make their job easier. It will make you more accountable, but it will also give you more responsibility.

Civil servants for many years have complained of not having the authority to do certain things. Well, this new Bill gives them that authority. The one thing that I see missing with that authority and responsibility is performance incentives, which I am hopeful will be looked at by the Third Official Member and Government.

I have always believed in performance appraisals, performance agreements. The new Bill also brings performance appraisals and performance agreements into the forefront. This Bill gives what is called "Chief Officers" responsibility and authority. The responsibility has to be accompanied with the authority to control employees working for that individual. If the Chief Officer is required to perform, he must have the authority to also discipline his subordinates. I trust that everybody understands that we can no longer go to the Public Service Commission to get discipline if you are expecting the Chief Officer to perform his fiscal responsibilities. If we are asking the Chief Officer to perform and be accountable, then he must have some authority to have control over the people from whom he is expected to get that performance.

I know the civil service is filled with middle management intellectuals. There are lots of them. They are ready, willing and the majority of them support this kind of accountability. I do not believe that the Chief Officers will have a lot of problems with these new modernised minds within the middle management. I trust the Chief Officers will accept this and not be bogged down with their own refusal.

I trust that resistance to this change will not come from the high echelon of the public service. Certainly, it is something new and there may be some resistance from the lower echelon. The majority of human beings are afraid of change. Those who are not willing to change have lost the central piece of the jigsaw puzzle. They will eventually lose because the process of evolution is going to remove them from their positions.

Change is good, as long as it is embraced, as long as we recognise that some people embrace change much quicker than others do. Many people are slow to embrace change because they cannot see the benefit of it. I would direct them to a book I read some time ago entitled, Who Moved My Cheese? Maybe the Third Official Member would invest some money in buying that book and circulating it throughout the civil service, because with this Bill becoming Law, their lives are going to change. I am certain the Bill will get passage since the Second Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman got up and supported it!

One of the areas I specifically like in this Bill is for the quarterly reporting section to be published. I think it calls for eight weeks after the end of each of the first three quarters. I view that as a bit long. If this system is operated properly, within days following the quarter, you should be able to have an accurate report on the position of your budget. In eight weeks you will be looking at the end of your next quarter. That is long. Maybe that can be reduced to two weeks.

In the private sector, where I came from, within one week following the end of the month your financial department is required to produce accounts of each department's budget. I trust that that is not to hamper the process.

This Bill also brings the opportunity . . . and I did not know that Government does not have a fixed asset register. I am a little bit amazed that as many assets as government have . . . but as you know, Mr. Speaker, I should not be amazed. I recently had a glimpse of the communication report about radios and the like and it appears that not a lot is known about who has what. This Bill will require Government to have a fixed asset register, something familiar to the world.

I am sure that every company in the private sector has a fixed asset register where they know the value of the chairs, how many chairs they have, how many pictures on the walls, the value of those pictures. It is properly represented on their assets and depreciated on an annual basis and you know the exact book value of the company, be it in your assets, your cash—and Government does not.

It would be interesting to see whether or not government's assets outshine its value. That is serious. I am sure no one can even give a count as to how many chairs are in the Legislative Assembly. Therefore, we just buy and we buy and we do not know the value of it, except when we buy it, and then there is no—

The Speaker: I think what you are saying is your opinion. Inventory is controlled by the head of the department. Please continue, but you are stating your own opinion, not a factual situation.

Mr. V. Arden McLean: Well, Mr. Speaker, it may very well be my opinion, however, in the absence of a fixed asset register no one can tell me they know the value of anything.

It is impossible to know the value of a piece of equipment if you do not have a fixed asset register. That is a fact. That one is not an opinion.

The Speaker: I beg you not to challenge my ruling. I made a statement and I am sticking by it.

Mr. V. Arden McLean: I was not challenging your ruling, Sir. I was saying that once—

The Speaker: Please move on to another subject.

Mr. V. Arden McLean: Mr. Speaker, an asset register can be a valuable tool for any company to ascertain the value possessed by the company. I welcome that because this Bill will require each ministry, division, and department, to put that in place.

I think with the experiences of the Government in this area of accrual accounting, the country is poised to move forward in a new direction. This is the beginning of that direction, the introduction of this Bill.

This can be attributed to many before my time, such as the now Leader of Government Business and the Minister of Education and the Second Elected Member for Bodden Town. They were the architects of this movement bringing a whole new era in this country.

One of the things that I would like to briefly touch on is Section 77 of the Bill talking about the independence of the Governor. I understand—

The Speaker: I have to caution you in accordance with Standing Order 41—repetition of yourself or other Members. I think this issue has been thoroughly dealt with, so be careful. If you would like me to read that to you, I will.

Standing Order 41 says, “41. (1) The Presiding Officer, after having called the attention of the House, or of a Committee, to the conduct of a Member who persists in irrelevance or tedious repetition, either of his own arguments or of the arguments used by the other Members, may [and I emphasise “may”] direct the Member to discontinue his speech and to resume his seat.” I did not do that. Please continue.

Mr. V. Arden McLean: I really do not know how I will debate the Bill if I cannot speak on what had been said by other Members. I will try to put it into my own words, where I hope it is not repeating anything other Members have said. However, I respect your ruling.

The Speaker: Thank you. Please continue.

Mr. V. Arden McLean: Under the independence of the Governor, Clause 77 protects the independence of the Governor and ensures that he is not subject to the budgetary and accountability provisions of the Bill. While I understand that, I believe that the actual office of the Governor will be reported as it is now under Internal and External Affairs. There is very little change in that.

I think we witnessed recently how there is certainly some misalignment of power and authority. The country elects 15 members of their own to be responsible for the financials and then once the monies are voted by those 15 Members of Parliament in Finance Committee, the civil service may very well, under the direction of the Governor, spend monies or make decisions outside what was approved in Finance Committee. Once that it is done, it is then sent back to Finance Committee for approval and rubberstamping.

I hope this Bill will change that. We just witnessed where we approved 12 positions in government contracting COS and we learned yesterday that 48 were thus far hired. That says to me that the civil service can very well do as it pleases—after something different has been approved by the people's representatives.

Under the accrual system, approval will have to be sought first, prior to that being done, except in the area of emergencies like hurricane, refugees, the burning down of Northward Prison or something of that nature. There has to be some control put on all of the different entities. While there is separation of powers, we cannot just run wherever we want to and do whatever we want to do because at the end of the day it is the 15 duly Elected Members of this House that must give account to the general public as to how their money was spent.

I have never seen any civil servant or any Governor on a soapbox from June to November in any election year. Nevertheless, that arm has the authority to spend over and beyond what is approved in Finance Committee. The Finance Committee is then asked to rubberstamp it. By Law, this Bill puts some control on that. There are smart people who may very well know how to circumvent this Bill, however it is going to be a little harder than the current Finance and Audit Law.

Given Cayman's unique political structure, this Bill has had to be written to suit our own needs. It cannot be adopted from another jurisdiction where it worked. Certainly, due to the uniqueness of our political structure it is so difficult to write such a Bill, given the lack of authority given to the Ministers. They do not have administrative responsibility; therefore, they have to write an agreement between Executive Council, the Ministers and the ministries. That begs for constitutional reform.

If the country is expecting the people they elect to run the country, then the people who are elected into Executive Council need to have the administrative authority if they are going to get the blame. If they have to justify the expenditure of this country, they should have more control over it. There should not have to be a performance agreement between the Ministers and the ministries. The performance agreement should be the one they have with the public that is judged every four years. If your performance is not up to scratch, then you know what happens.

We need to have some kind of reform, some kind of constitutional amendment to rectify that situation. I suspect that we will have to amend this Bill to bring it back in line with that. Administrative responsibilities should then fall to the Ministers. When we get the separation of powers, as they currently are with the politician approving the budget and then the civil service under the leadership of the Governor changing the budget to whatever way they feel necessary . . . they need to change that!

MOMENT OF INTERRUPTION—4.30 PM

The Speaker: We have reached the hour of interruption. Will you finish within five minutes?

Mr. V. Arden McLean: Yes, Sir.

The Speaker: You may continue if you will finish within five minutes. I am giving you the choice of adjourning or finishing your speech. It is your choice.

I will entertain a motion for the adjournment.

ADJOURNMENT

Hon. Linford A. Pierson: Mr. Speaker, I move the adjournment of this Honourable House until 24 September 10 am Monday.

The Speaker: The question is that this Honourable House do now adjourn until 24 September 10 am Monday. Those in favour, please say Aye. Those against, No.

AYES.

The Speaker: The Ayes have it.

AT 4.31 PM THE HOUSE STOOD ADJOURNED UNTIL 10 AM MONDAY, 24 SEPTEMBER 2001.

OFFICIAL HANSARD REPORT
MONDAY
24 SEPTEMBER 2001
10.26 AM
Ninth Sitting

The Speaker: Good morning. I will invite the Honourable Minister responsible for the Ministry of Health and Information Technology to say prayers.

PRAYERS

Hon. Linford A. Pierson: Let us pray:

Almighty God, from whom all wisdom and power are derived: We beseech Thee so to direct and prosper the deliberations of the Legislative Assembly now assembled, that all things may be ordered upon the best and surest foundations for the glory of Thy Name and for the safety, honour and welfare of the people of these Islands.

Bless our Sovereign Lady Queen Elizabeth II, the Queen Mother, Philip Duke of Edinburgh, Charles Prince of Wales, and all the Royal family. Give grace to all who exercise authority in our Commonwealth, that peace and happiness, truth and justice, religion and piety may be established among us. Especially we pray for the Governor of our Islands, the Speaker of the Legislative Assembly, Official Members and Ministers of Executive Council and Members of the Legislative Assembly, that we may be enabled faithfully to perform the responsible duties of our high office.

All this we ask for Thy great Name's sake.

Let us say the Lord's prayer together:

Our Father, who art in Heaven, Hallowed be Thy Name. Thy Kingdom come, Thy will be done on earth as it is in Heaven. Give us this day our daily bread, and forgive us our trespasses, as we forgive those who trespass against us. Lead us not into temptation, but deliver us from evil. For Thine is the Kingdom, the power and the glory, forever and ever. Amen.

Proceedings resumed at 10.29 am

The Speaker: Please be seated.
 Proceedings are resumed.

READING BY THE HONOURABLE
 SPEAKER OF MESSAGES
 AND ANNOUNCEMENTS

APOLOGIES

The Speaker: I have received apologies for absence from the Honourable First and Second Official Members and the Honourable Minister responsible for Community Development, Women's Affairs, Youth and Sports who are off the Island.

Questions to Honourable Ministers and Members. Question 122 stands in the name of the Second Elected Member for Bodden Town.

QUESTIONS TO HONOURABLE
 MINISTERS AND MEMBERS

QUESTION NO. 122

No. 122: Mr. A. Gilbert McLean asked the Honourable Third Official Member responsible for Finance and Economic Development if there is an accounting system in place in Government which accounts for money received as a result of Government-to-Government cooperation in money laundering and drug confiscation cases and, if so, how does it work.

The Speaker: The Honourable Third Official Member responsible for Finance and Economic Development.

Hon. George A. McCarthy: Monies received as a result of Government-to-Government co-operation are credited to a Deposit Account in the Government's Treasury Department. The proceeds are paid into the Government's current Account at Barclays Bank.

Clause 8 of the Asset Sharing Agreement provides that "Each party will dispose of shared assets or proceeds in accordance with its own internal Laws, but will give special consideration to allocating the shared assets for use for Law enforcement purposes, including drug prevention and rehabilitation".

Expenditures that satisfy the above purposes are matched by an equal transfer from the Deposit Account maintained in the Treasury Department into General Revenue.

SUPPLEMENTARIES

The Speaker: The Second Elected Member for Bodden Town.

Mr. Gilbert A. McLean: Can the Member say if consideration is given to shared assets for the use of Law enforcement including drug prevention and rehabilitation in practice as set out in his answer?

The Speaker: The Honourable Third Official Member responsible for Finance and Economic Development.

Hon. George A. McCarthy: Yes.

The Speaker: The Second Elected Member for Bodden Town.

Mr. Gilbert A. McLean: Can he expand further on the statement where it says, "Expenditures that satisfy the above purposes are matched by an equal transfer from the Deposit Account maintained in the Treasury Department into General Revenue"?

The Speaker: The Honourable Third Official Member responsible for Finance and Economic Development.

Hon. George A. McCarthy: Under normal circumstances it would be easier for expenditure to be charged directly to a deposit account. Under the Public Finance and Audit Law and Financial and Stores Regulations that is not permitted. Therefore, if an expenditure is to take place and it meets the criteria as set out in Clause 8 and the expenditure comes up to say, $4,000, rather than debiting the deposit account directly; it is normally charged as an expenditure item. An equal amount is transferred out of the deposit account on the revenue side in order to create an offset.

Members will recall that where such items are not included in the Budget, it is normally brought to Finance Committee for approval since the expenditure will have to be run through Finance Committee.

The Speaker: The Second Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. Alden M. McLaughlin, Jr.: The answer referred to Government to Government cooperation in money laundering and drug confiscation cases. Can the Member say which foreign Governments are involved in this arrangement with the Cayman Islands?

The Speaker: The Honourable Third Official Member responsible for Finance and Economic Development.

Hon. George A. McCarthy: Mainly the United States of America.

The Speaker: The Second Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. Alden M. McLaughlin, Jr.: Do I understand the Member to say it is only the United States of America?

The Speaker: The Honourable Third Official Member responsible for Finance and Economic Development.

Hon. George A. McCarthy: That is the only country with which we have a formal agreement in place.

The Speaker: The Second Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. Alden M. McLaughlin, Jr.: The answer refers to proceeds being paid into government's current account at Barclays Bank. Can the Member say how much has been paid into this account over the last year?

The Speaker: The Honourable Third Official Member responsible for Finance and Economic Development.

Hon. George A. McCarthy: Over the last year or since the inception?

The Speaker: The Second Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. Alden M. McLaughlin, Jr.: I did say over the last year, however, if the Member is able to say from inception that would be a welcomed answer.

The Speaker: The Honourable Third Official Member responsible for Finance and Economic Development.

Hon. George A. McCarthy: Since the inception in 1992, the sum paid into this account is $4,602,666.30.

The Speaker: The Second Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. Alden M. McLaughlin, Jr.: Can the Member say what the current balance of that account is and what have the proceeds been used for since the inception of the account?

The Speaker: The Honourable Third Official Member responsible for Finance and Economic Development.

Hon. George A. McCarthy: The current balance is $2,952,498.82. I can provide the other information during the break.

The Speaker: The Second Elected Member for Bodden Town.

Mr. Gilbert A. McLean: Can the Member say if there has been any representation from the police or whatever other agencies we have? Do we have a three or four person committee that monitors this and decides the best way to utilise this money as far as Law enforcement and security goes, particularly in light of the times?

The Speaker: The Honourable Third Official Member responsible for Finance and Economic Development.

Hon. George A. McCarthy: Each request is dealt with through a submission to Executive Council. It is carefully examined to ensure that the requests accord with the terms under which the funds should be disbursed. This would therefore mean that the request would be examined by all Members of Executive Council.

In terms of the departments to which disbursements have been made, we have had requests from the judicial department, the police, national drug council and legal department.

The Speaker: The Second Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. Alden M. McLaughlin, Jr.: Can the Member say whether any of the proceeds of this account have been used for the prosecution of money laundering cases, and if so, how much?

The Speaker: I think we are getting somewhat outside of the substantive question, however if you wish to answer you may, Honourable Third Official Member responsible for Finance and Economic Development.

Hon. George A. McCarthy: The response is yes, funds have been allocated from this account for the prosecution of anti-money laundering offences. There is a provision in the Budget for the year 2001 at the request of the Attorney General and this will be a charge against this account. The amount is $600,000.

The Speaker: The Fourth Elected Member for West Bay.

Mr. Cline A. Glidden Jr.: Can the Member tell us who negotiates on behalf of Government during the Government-to-Government cooperation? What formula is used to ensure we are collecting the correct amount due to us and who is responsible for ensuring that we are collecting that amount or keeping track of monies owed to us from some of those ongoing transactions?

The Speaker: The Honourable Third Official Member responsible for Finance and Economic Development.

Hon. George A. McCarthy: According to the acting Attorney General, the amount normally paid over is in the range of 10 percent of the value of the proceeds. He further points out that whenever cases are underway for assistance, the need for sharing with the Cayman Islands is normally flagged during the course of the case being heard. After expenses have been covered, in relationship to the case, whatever the remaining balance of the funds, the Cayman Islands normally get 10 percent.

The Speaker: The Fourth Elected Member for West Bay.

Mr. Cline A. Glidden Jr.: Are we saying that from the inception we had some $4 million, so the proceeds would be some $40 million so far?

The Speaker: The Honourable Third Official Member responsible for Finance and Economic Development.

Hon. George A. McCarthy: The calculation by the Member is I think on target.

The Speaker: The Elected Member for East End.

Mr. V. Arden McLean: I am wondering if the Member can tell us if this is the only means of asset sharing the government is into with the US?

The Speaker: The Honourable Third Official Member responsible for Finance and Economic Development.

Hon. George A. McCarthy: As I said earlier, the only formal arrangement we have evolved from the Mutual Legal Assistance Treaty. There was a question answered earlier that established the element of sharing that takes place through police cooperation. However, I am not in a position to give the specifics of that. That is an area I would have to go into in order to set out a clear response.

The Speaker: The Third Elected Member for Bodden Town.

Mr. Anthony S. Eden: Does this indicate that the value of our assistance to whatever the transaction may be is only 10 percent? Is there anyway we can re-negotiate? What happens to the other 90 percent? Does it go to the other country or countries?

The Speaker: The Honourable Third Official Member responsible for Finance and Economic Development.

Hon. George A. McCarthy: Yes, that is the current arrangement whereby normally a minimum amount approximates 10 percent. I have been made to understand by the Temporary Attorney General that the remaining 90 percent does not necessarily go to the US Government's coffers; it is normally applied in the area of restitution in cases of fraud and other expenses.

The Speaker: The Elected Member for East End.

Mr. V. Arden McLean: The Member previously said there were other arrangements between police forces and he did not have much detail. Can he say where that money goes to?

The Speaker: The Honourable Third Official Member responsible for Finance and Economic Development.

Hon. George A. McCarthy: As the Member will recall, in response to a parliamentary question it was pointed out that there is a special deposit account set up under the control of the Commissioner of Police and that is allowed to hold funds to the value of $20,000. Sums over and above that go to the Treasury Department. It was also pointed out that monies received were also held by the Drugs Task Force. The details of how those funds are dealt with were gone into extensively.

It was also pointed out that the arrangements in place whereby those funds were held separate from the special account under the Commissioner of Police would cease, as of the date of that Parliamentary question being answered. All funds received as of that date and subsequently, would be paid through the special deposit account maintained by the Commissioner of Police. That means the sums in excess of $20,000 would be paid into the Treasury Department.

The Speaker: The Second Elected Member for Bodden Town.

Mr. Gilbert A. McLean: Does the Auditor General audit this account annually or regularly? Is he satisfied with all transactions, and does it show up anywhere in the budget?

The Speaker: The Honourable Third Official Member responsible for Finance and Economic Development.

Hon. George A. McCarthy: This deposit balance maintained by the Treasury and all accounts maintained in government fall under the purview of the Auditor General. He would have access to the account. I cannot say to what extent he goes into detail in terms of the disbursements or the specific transactions, however, I would want to believe this is being done by his audit office.

It is reasonable to assume that the activities of this account would have been scrutinised by the Auditor General during the course of his normal audit.

The Speaker: The Second Elected Member for Bodden Town.

Mr. Gilbert A. McLean: The Member was asked if it was possible to re-negotiate the percentage the Cayman Islands receives for cooperation in these areas, is this possible? Even taking into account that some of the money goes to restitution, certainly some of it goes to the Federal Government of the US and we are talking about drug cases. If they bust a drug dealer with $400 million, then it is to be assumed that it is illegal money and there should be no restitution.

The Speaker: The Honourable Third Official Member responsible for Finance and Economic Development.

Hon. George A. McCarthy: Since the responsibility falls under the Mutual Legal Assistance Treaty and related arrangements for asset sharing, I will undertake to bring this matter to the attention of Executive Council if it is the wish that this House that a message be passed on to the effect that this allocation should be looked at.

However, I should point out that given the level of scrutiny now paid to accounts being established in the Cayman Islands, it is likely that we will see less of questionable funds coming to jurisdictions such as the Cayman Islands. That is because it is well established that it is much easier to establish accounts in many of the onshore jurisdictions who under normal circumstances would seem to be paying less scrutiny to the details of the accounts.

The Speaker: The Second Elected Member for Bodden Town.

Mr. Gilbert A. McLean: Can I ask the Member to do as he indicated and follow through on that? I agree with him since only today there was an announcement on US television that the President of the US is freezing, I think 27 accounts of people with terrorist links. So, it seems that more bad money is there than in the Cayman Islands. I assume these accounts must be in the US if he can freeze them.

The Speaker: The Honourable Third Official Member responsible for Finance and Economic Development.

Hon. George A. McCarthy: Yes, I will undertake to do so.

The Speaker: The Fourth Elected Member for West Bay.

Mr. Cline A. Glidden Jr.: Can the Member tell us exactly how long this inception is? I know my perception was that we were talking about a lot more money than $4 million if this has only started lately. However, if we go back to recalling some of the big money laundering cases that were here, like the BCCI (Bank of Credit and Commerce International) one that was well documented in the papers, so much so that one of our local liquidators was one of the highest paid during that time in the world, we would expect that the monies received by Government would have been much more.

Then, when we look at the drug confiscation cases that we have assisted in the relatively recent past, it would be interesting to see how far back these agreements have been in place.

The Speaker: The Honourable Third Official Member responsible for Finance and Economic Development.

Hon. George A. McCarthy: The Mutual Legal Assistance Treaty was passed in this Legislative Assembly in 1986. However, that was not ratified by the US Government until 1989/1990. The details I have in front of me suggest that the asset sharing arrangements took life in 1992. What should be borne in mind is that the BCCI case did not result, as far as I am aware, with any funds being paid to the Government. I think that under the terms of the arrangements the liquidators were appointed to amass whatever funds were to be made available for distribution to creditors of that bank. Therefore, monies would have gone directly to persons who had a claim against the assets of BCCI.

One factor that should also be mentioned is that although a lot of attention is normally given to quite a lot of these money laundering cases, we find that the bulk of the funds in question are held elsewhere. For example, the recent case with the Bank of New York, where about $6 billion was reported to have been laundered through that Bank, it is to be recognised that the bulk of those funds were found to be within the onshore jurisdictions.

There was one account found here in the Cayman Islands with $3 million and there were no indications to suggest that the amount of money in that account was as a result of any questionable activities.

There was one case reported recently dealing with the Montacino affair and where the Government of the Cayman Islands is being called upon to provide assistance. However, that case is ongoing, and I do not think any decision has been taken. In fact, it has not been adjudicated as yet.

The Speaker: Are there any further supplementaries? If not, that concludes Question Time for today.

Moving on to Government Business, Second Readings, continuation of debate on The Public Management and Finance Bill, 2001.

The Elected Member for East End continuing.

GOVERNMENT BUSINESS

BILLS

SECOND READING

THE PUBLIC MANAGEMENT AND FINANCE BILL, 2001

(Continuation of debate thereon)

Mr. V. Arden McLean: When we adjourned on Friday, I had just a couple of more areas to touch on in relation to The Public Management and Finance Bill, 2001.

One of those areas is that of the provision made for proper accounting of non-government entities that get money from government. I believe it is only fair that non-government entities, NGOs (non-government organisations), give account as to how that money is spent, upon receiving a request from the Financial Secretary. I think that is under Clause 55, to which there is an amendment. Too often, we hear that Government is giving too much away and no one gives account for it. I believe the public demands of the politicians, in particular Executive Council, that they give account for the monies that the public have to pay into the coffers of this country through taxation. It is only fair that organizations, registered or not, receiving money out of those coffers be accountable to the people also, through the Financial Secretary.

The other area relates to the Auditor General. Provisions are being made in this Bill for the Auditor General's Reports to be delivered to the Clerk of the Legislative Assembly for presentation to the Legislative Assembly after which it shall be a public document.

Recently the Public Accounts Committee (of which I am a member) got into a bit of trouble with that when we wanted to deliberate in public. A ruling was made that the document was not a public document as yet. I support the Auditor General's Report being presented to the Legislative Assembly through the Clerk, which will then go on through the Speaker, in order to become public so that the investigation by Public Accounts Committee can also be made public and copies of that Report made available to the general public prior to the Public Accounts Committee doing its review and Government making its reply. I believe that is the only way to go in the interest of transparency.

Once the Auditor General has made his final Report, there is no reason why it cannot be made public. Currently, the Public Accounts Committee Report and the Auditor General's Report are made public at the same time. Therefore, I rush to support that provision in the Bill.

On the issue of transparency, provision is made in the reporting of planning and actual performance on a regular basis. That is timely. It is on a quarterly basis. The only transparency in the past has been the Public Accounts Committee Report each year. Under the accrual system, reporting will be done to the Legislative Assembly on a quarterly basis. That is encouraging and I welcome it.

Before closing, let me thank the many people who worked and put many hours in to get this Bill to this House. I thank Mr. Dale, who came all the way from New Zealand to assist us with this Bill. I would also like to thank Mr. Gough and his staff. I certainly thank the drafts-women who had to draft this Bill and get it put together for this Honourable House. However, I draw to the attention to the drafts people, or Mr. Dale or the Third Official Member that in the committee stage amendment (no. 2) being proposed in Clause 63(1) (d) where they are proposing to delete "...any member of Executive Council..." I also believe they should include the word "or" (the word after "council") into that deletion. I guess at committee stage we can include deleting "or" also.

I would also like to congratulate the Government. At least three championed the accrual system while on the Back Bench. Now they are fulfilling their promises made when they were Back Benchers.

I support the Bill. I ask all Members of this House to look at it objectively and to think about the future of this country and their responsibilities and the promises of transparency we all made to our constituents. This is another step towards total transparency, particularly the financial side of it. I wish this Bill safe passage.

The Speaker: The Fourth Elected Member for West Bay.

Mr. Cline A. Glidden Jr.: It gives me great pleasure to add a short contribution to the debate on this very important Bill, The Public Management and Finance Bill, 2001. Anyone who may have followed my team's campaign during the last election (The Better Balance Team) should not have any question as to whether we support the initiatives being attempted in this Bill. In fact, I think it is fair comment to say that most Members campaigned on accountability and transparency and open government.

I think this Bill, even in its infant stages, is taking bold new steps in accountability. I just want to say that since we debated a lot of the initiatives contained in this Bill during our campaign, I am going to be referring to our manifesto, as quite a bit of it is relevant to this Bill.

Not only did we discuss these as being pertinent issues to the country, we actually made a written commitment in our manifesto in a section called "Government Fiscal Responsibility, Management and Accountability." We also referred to it in a section under "Legislative Affairs and Sound Democratic Practice."

I think we are all familiar with the campaign fiasco that occurred just prior to the last election. Some 11 months after the election there are still discussions going on as to the reasons behind the current economic state of the country and who is responsible for getting it there.

Prior to the election, the Government of the day claimed the country was in a fairly healthy economic position. We have heard of all the capital works that were carried out just before the election, and the debts found after the election. There is still an ongoing battle as to who is responsible for that. Everyone blames the previous government and no one is exactly sure where the responsibility lies.

I am happy to see that after this Bill is passed into Law, the Caymanian public will know who is responsible. Clause 26 of this Bill states, "26. (1) Subject to subsection (4), not more than forty-two days, nor less than twenty-eight days before the day specified in a writ issued by the Governor under the Elections Law (2000 Revision) as the date for a general election, the Financial Secretary shall gazette a pre-election economic and financial update."

That update will include: "(2) A pre-election economic and financial update shall include- (a) economic forecasts for the current financial year and for the next two financial years." and there are several others. However, just to make the point that if we have a clear financial picture less than 28 days before the date specified, the country should no longer have to question the economic state of affairs for the country. Any new government coming in should not have to then lay any unfounded blame on previous administrations. Hopefully, the general populous who does not have access to all that information should no longer be left in the dark. That is a long way towards the transparency to which we all are aiming.

I will now move to page 12 in our manifesto. We stated that the Cayman Islands must remain vigilant and stand ready to defend itself in the face of the explosion of the global finance markets Cayman has found itself in. We also mentioned that one of the concerns we had was the situation with the Auditor General.

We said, "We should be working to strengthen the office of the Auditor General." We agreed to this prior to the November 2000 election.

Since then, I have had the privilege to sit as a member of the Public Accounts Committee working quite closely with the Auditor General. I have become even more aware of some of the difficulties he has in carrying out that very important and difficult job. I am even more committed to the need for strengthening his powers and his office.

I would like to go into some of the difficulties he has; but I know that the Second Elected Member for West Bay, who is the chairman of that committee, will be shortly tabling our first report, so I will await that report.

I am also happy to see that not only are the Auditor General's powers being strengthened, there is also a clear definition that empowers the audit office as well. I think this Bill is moving us along in the right direction.

We campaigned on this: "The Cayman Islands will need leaders of vision, integrity, and ability to keep the watch and ensure that our financial future is secure. This vision and integrity must be manifested in how we conduct our financial affairs, how we manage our agencies and departments of government—in short, how we govern the resources, both material and human, that we have been blessed with. The new Cayman Islands Government must be unlike any we have had in the past. It must be a proactive government, one that practices fiscal responsibility and management accountability and it must understand what this truly means. Only then will we be assured that our island home will increase in its capacity for growth and prosperity that will be sustainable for our children and their children." I am reading verbatim out of our manifesto.

Our plans of future government accountability and fiscal responsibility to be effective, stated, "Team Better Balance believes the following must occur." I will just pick out some of those points that I think are relevant to this Bill and are being accomplished by this Bill.

"To ensure a proper approach to government spending and developmental projects to ensure good value for money spent by the government whilst helping to enhance the country's growth."

"Government's reputation for inefficiency, mismanagement and budget deficits must be eliminated."

"Government managers, i.e., senior civil servants, to be held accountable for budget cost overruns and workplace performance standards."

"Multi-year revenue collection and spending plans where independent oversight committees monitor the implementation and effectiveness of such plans."

"Establishment of effective spending controls."

"Adoption of strategic planning with an emphasis on budget programmes aimed at reducing the seemingly out of control national debt and linking budgeting to actual performance."

"Encouraging government employees to explore best management practices by establishing a reward system for individuals and departments that improve efficiency while reducing costs. Also, hold individuals accountable for poor performance."

"Establishment of performance based contracts for all Executive Council Members, government department agency heads, along with quarterly evaluations based on these contracts."

"Completion of implementation of accrual accounting system which states the true cost of operating government departments and agencies."

"All government departments and agencies to adopt an accountability system to measure performance outcomes and to detect deviation from procedure."

"Encourage government department agencies where possible to operate as private enterprise where profit and customer service is the ultimate reward and by streamlining bloated and inefficient departments."

I read from our manifesto—

The Speaker: Would you be prepared to give a copy of your manifesto to the Clerk for the benefit of the Hansard Officer?

Mr. Cline A. Glidden Jr.: Yes, Sir. I have already given her one.

Mr. Cline Glidden Jr.: Although that was our manifesto, I must say it was a positive enlightenment to have in this new Bill so many similarities to what we committed as our policy document.

One thing I found interesting was the performance based contracts—something we all embrace because on 8 November we were all elected on a performance based contract, a four-year contract. If you do not perform, the penalty will be not being a representative after that. Therefore, I applaud the Bill. I look forward to everyone, especially those responsible for government finance, having the same performance issues where people can actually hold them accountable.

One problem I have with performance based contracts (and I know there are constitutional limitations to those) is the perception that Ministers have ultimate authority. Even though they do not have performance based contracts, I tend to have gleaned from public perception that the Minister's performance is very much based on what public perception sees as ultimate authority and ultimate responsibility. That is very evident when we have issues that are unpopular; for instance, when members of the public service are removed. Usually the blame for that is given to the ministry. The general public is not too receptive to the idea that this person was fired or hired but the Minister did not have anything to do with that. Usually accusations are made as to the reasoning, whether or not it was a political decision. There is always speculation.

This Bill does lend some clarity as to the powers Ministers really do have and it gives the responsibility to the Chief Officer, or in our case the Permanent Secretary. It is a bit disconcerting to me that these officers will be required to sign a performance based contract but will not have authority for the most important aspect of allowing them to complete the requirements placed on them, and that is the human resource aspect. It is fine for us to say that the Chief Officer, the Permanent Secretary, is responsible for a ministry and has a performance output, the requirements and what he will be measured on. However, if he is not able to control the staffing requirements, or to even keep charge or motivate staff, or to punish or penalise them, it is going to be difficult for them to achieve the performance expected.

However, I realise that although this Bill is not the be all and end all to the problems in our management system of government, it is a step in the right direction. Hopefully, it will be an evolving Bill and we will see amendments as and when necessary, and will move forward as we are moving forward now.

There is no benefit in having policies in place when there is no penalty for deviation from those policies. For example, the Government's policy as laid out in the 2001 Budget, as read by the Honourable Third Official Member. We noticed some specific defined policies on new staffing for the civil service. For many years people have talked about the growth of the civil service and how we are in a dangerous situation. I think approximately 50 percent of recurrent revenue is now utilised by personal emoluments in the civil service. We all recognised that this cannot be sustained, and accepted the need to have to do something.

When it came time to make the politically unpopular decision of raising revenue through tax measures and other methods, we all supported that; based on the fact that the Government of the day recognised the need for changes in the growth of the civil service. The policy made evident that it was recognised as an issue. I would just like to read from the “Main 2001 Budget Policy Decisions.”

“These policies include: Curtailing all new services except for new staff at the Bodden Town, Savannah, George Town, John A. Cumber, and Red Bay Primary and Lighthouse schools and staff for the Family Protection Unit and the Financial Reporting Unit ... Removing the amounts for vacant posts from the 2001 Budget except where recruitment is already actively underway; Implementing a moratorium on the creation of new posts for the remainder of 2001 except for absolutely ‘essential services’ staff for new capital projects and new leased sites which come on stream in 2001 and where there are direct revenue or expenditure blocking offsets; ... Implementing a moratorium on recruitment for the remainder of 2001 except for absolutely ‘essential services’ or where there are direct revenue or expenditure blocking offsets.”

This was listed as Government’s policy, but in an answer to a parliamentary question last week regarding posts attracting (Contracted Officer Supplement) COS; we were made to understand that there were 48 new employees for the year January to August that attract COS. History shows us that the number of employees attracting COS is a small percentage of the total number of employees. Since there has been so much discussion about COS I would assume that percentage would be getting even smaller. It was obvious that this House in Finance Committee did not support that. I would assume that if up until the end of August we had employed 48 people, it would mean we have quite a few hundred employees that do not attract COS. That would appear to be a deviation of the policy outlined in the government’s main policy address, that being the Budget Address of 2001.

Once again, it is fine to have policies, however, if we have no accountability to ensure those policies are maintained the policies really serve no purpose. It will be interesting to see who will take responsibility for that deviation. Will it be the elected Ministers of Government, the Honourable Financial Secretary, or the Chief Secretary, or maybe even the Governor? There have been no penalties for deviation of outlined policy in the past, so people are not too dissuaded to stick to policy. This Bill addresses that concern because there are stiff penalties outlined in this Bill.

I would expect that those penalties would now encourage responsible officers to stick within the policies and contracts agreed upon. If that is accomplished, I think we can all look forward to brighter days.

In closing, I just want to mention the fact that some Members see this Bill as going towards the separation of powers and a lot of reference has been made to what some may see as a crossover of those powers, during the Motion accepted by Finance Committee and the continued hiring of contracted officers or those attracting COS. I want to make it clear that I do not see that as being a solution to that problem. The Bill goes on to state that, “There is nothing in this Law shall affect the constitutional functions or independence of the Governor, his office or support staff.” And, “Nothing in this Law shall be construed so as to define the Governor as a ministry or portfolio or to require him to comply with any of the provisions of Parts III, IV or V.”

It goes on to state that, “The office of the Governor shall not be required to comply with sections 42, 43 and 44, but the outputs and ownership performance of the office of the Governor shall be included in the performance agreement and the quarterly and annual reports of the Portfolio of Internal and External Affairs prepared in accordance with those sections.”

I do not think anyone should misconceive that this Bill will restrict the Governor from doing what is allowed to him under our present Constitution, and changing the policy in regard to civil servants in any way. The Governor is still responsible for civil servants, and this Bill does nothing to change that. So, for those Members who felt that this changed the present relationship, I do not see this as being the solution to that problem.

I want to close by saying that this Bill is not a solution to all of our problems, but I think it is a step in the right direction. I am happy to see that many of the issues pertinent to good governance, which we committed to in our manifesto, are being covered by this Bill. I am sure the other Members of my team will note that fact. I am also happy that this Bill goes a long way to the accountability, transparency and openness that we all campaigned on, which is necessary for good governance.

The country needs proactive leaders! Leaders with vision, who are not afraid to go into those uncharted waters into which this Bill may be taking us. We know there will be forthcoming amendments, I think we have seen two or three so far and I look forward to this being a dynamic ever-changing Bill that will continue to keep pace with what is required by a modern and moving country. I think it is important for us as Members and Ministers of Government to recognise the need for this type of leadership that will give people confidence in the Government. It may not necessarily be perfect, but as leaders we are required to go forward and not be so afraid to take chances because we are afraid of making mistakes. If we are too afraid to take chances, we are stifling our movement forward. I think we should continue moving forward, making the mistakes along the way, but being proactive enough to realise that mistakes will come and not be so afraid of those mistakes, that we do not take any chances. Thank you.

The Speaker: Please be seated.

Continuation of debate on The Public Management and Finance Bill 2001. The Motion is open for debate.

The Second Elected Member for West Bay.

Mr. Rolston M. Anglin: Thank you.

Mr. Speaker, I am minded of your ruling on Friday about tedious repetition. Needless to say, much has been said about this Bill. By default, my comments will be brief.

The Speaker: Thank you.

Mr. Rolston M. Anglin: I can say up front that I will be supporting this Bill. As my colleague, the Fourth Elected Member for West Bay said, we campaigned on much of the theory behind this Bill. It goes without saying that my support is there.

I would like to throw a word of caution to everyone, those in this Chamber, to the civil servants, and to the wider community. Whilst this Bill has a lot of merit, it has much of what I would consider the financial and management infrastructure needed for this country to progress. Let us remember that there is much work to be done.

None of us would downplay the massive amount of work that has to be done, however, none of us should forget that when we speak to the core of this Bill and we go from accounting to management, to behaviour, that we are talking about a monumental task that will require will and resolve; that will require staying the course.

Just to briefly point out and remind the community that we first have to change the basis on which the Government accounts. That is a big deal that will require a lot of work, a lot of training and retraining of persons. I hope that the information technology systems will support this move in a cost effective way. In other words, the Government of the Cayman Islands over the last five years has spent a lot of money. We have made a lot of changes. We have an ORACLE based system. Until the first Budget is complete and the first set of financial statements produced, no one will know the challenges that await us.

Second, there has to be a great change in the mindset of civil servants. We are now talking about performance agreements. There are those of us who believe that people should be on contracted terms, not simply seeing employment in the civil service as a lifetime appointment.

One thing I will say is that change creates opportunity. I believe that this Bill has a lot of opportunity, once we start making the changes. We have to develop a national asset register. This is another monumental task. We have to cost things like roads, the hospital, schools and this will not be done overnight. Again, all this work is for the greater good and for putting Cayman where it needs to be in terms of accountability.

There will have to be changes in the way human resources within the civil service function. If we are going to ask people to sign performance agreements and if we are going to ask people to be truly accountable, we must say that they will have the opportunity to have an impact on the tools they will utilise to achieve the goals set down in their performance agreement. We cannot expect a person to sign a performance agreement and we (central government) simply give them the tools. They must be able to say when a tool is bad, when a tool has gone beyond its useful life and must be retired. I mean that not only in the sense of physical assets, but human assets as well, because human tools are what will drive this process. Physical tools and computer systems will be enablers, and the human tools will drive the process. We cannot expect that we will have this central way in which human resource decisions are made and expect to truly hold people accountable. It is unfair to expect to do that, in my humble opinion.

Another significant task is the costing of goods and services. Much has been said about outputs and was covered earlier by speakers. How are we going to hold people accountable? For example, we may say to the person who is going to be responsible for a school that we are going to hold him accountable and he develops all his costs, but there is a lot of information currently lacking. What is the true cost of garbage collection, for instance? I choose a service that it solely carried out by the Government of the Cayman Islands. We can compare that with any private sector company.

For some this will not be a major issue; for example the Auditor General, what will be the cost of his audits? Well, we have the big five accounting firms here, so we have information we can utilise. However, there are many services that the Government offer for which there is no comparable product in the private sector. In this whole change people are going to be managing cost and profit centres. The costing will be an integral part of the preparation of budgets and the development of their performance agreements. Without that we cannot complete this exercise.

There is much work to be done. We have to move from the cash basis accounting to accrual accounting. We have to have fundamental change in the civil service itself. There has to be costing of goods and services. There has to be fundamental change in the human resource structure and the hiring practices and protocols within the civil service. We have to develop a national register. It sounds simple, but the work to get there will be a task that will require all of us working together. I implore every civil servant in this country to embrace change because it will create opportunity. It will create opportunity for the civil servant, but more importantly, it will create opportunity for this country as a whole. None of us are bigger than our community.

We are sent here to represent the people. All civil servants must recognise that they are 'civil servants.' They are there to serve the public. In our capacity, we are here to pass Laws that we feel will help the public of this country. This is a Bill that I personally feel will help the public. If this Bill is passed, they then have to pick up the torch and implement it.

Let us start off with the basis of accounting. In the explanatory document, the guide to this Bill, the fundamental point is this: you can look at any authoritative body in the accounting world, and you cannot find any that apply to the private sector for which the cash basis of accounting is an accepted basis of accounting. In the US the generally accepted accounting principles, cash accounting is not an accepted basis of accounting. In other words, if an entity uses cash basis accounting, no auditor can issue an unqualified opinion on those financial statements. The cash basis of accounting is not a US generally accepted accounting principle.

I can go from country to country because most major countries do have their set of generally accepted accounting principles. I do not know of any that allow the cash basis accounting. In fact, even within Internationally Accounting Standards (IAS) cash basis is not an accepted basis or standard of accounting.

Put quite simply, governments—including the Cayman Islands and many others—still use the cash basis of accounting because of the monumental task change would bring about. It is fundamentally difficult and that is why so many municipalities, towns and countries, for so long, have not made this change. If we are going to be struck by fear (as my colleague, the Fourth Elected Member for West Bay said) we will not do anything that will be of substance. As with everything, there comes some form of reaction. It is high time that we move towards the accrual basis of accounting.

Much has been said about the benefits we will derive once we make that change. Certainly, those points do not require any repeating. I think they are clear and were brought forward in a very concise manner. There were a couple of areas that have not been covered as yet, which I thought were of interest and value, and on which meaningful comment could be made. One is the concept of trust assets.

We have one classic example of trust assets and what can happen to trust assets when we think about the immigration security deposits. There has been much debate about transfers that were made out of that account and whether or not the Government actually has an accurate reflection of what it is they actually owe to employers who have posted those bonds. In Clause 71, the Bill in dealing with trust assets says in sub-section (1), "The Financial Secretary may, for such periods and on such terms and conditions as he thinks fit, place trust assets con- sisting of money on deposit or investment with any bank."

I believe that this concept of trust assets and what powers we will give anyone, in this case the Financial Secretary, to have over the way in which these can be invested is one that we have to approach with much caution and care. When I read this Section, I interpreted it to be that in his capacity the Financial Secretary would be able to either place these funds on deposit or investment within a bank. Earlier on, I must add, the stage was set that those banks would be local banks. However, what the Bill actually speaks to in terms of "investment with any bank" is a phrase that I think could be interpreted in different ways. I believe that the spirit of this Bill is that these funds will simply be put in a bank account. I think that it would be more prudent for us to simply say that in Section 71(1).

When we speak to investment with a bank, we certainly would recognise that banks in Cayman have the financial and intellectual capability to come up with their own investment products, which are not deposits. I would not think that that would be the way in which trust assets would be desired to be invested.

When we go to the definitions, we see that the term utilised in this Bill is "generally accepted accounting practice." This definition and reference to that term seeks to illustrate and be precise in terms of what it is and what authoritative body will be utilised in terms of developing the accounting policy of the Government of the Cayman Islands. The primary point of reference is the Internationally Public Section Accounting Standards, issued by the International Federation of Accountants.

As a fallback, in (b) it is the International Standards issued by the International Accounting Standards Committee, and in (c) it says, "(c) where no guidance is provided by the standards referred to in paragraphs (a) and (b), accounting practice that is generally accepted within the accounting profession in the United Kingdom..." in other words the UK's (generally accepted practices) GAP.

Coming from the private sector I am not particularly well versed in the International Public Sector Accounting Standards. However, my research has told me that this is a movement that has been thrust forward by the International Accounting Standards Committee, being the first international accounting body to actually try to come up with an internationally acceptable set of public sector accounting standards.

The International Accounting Standards Committee is a well recognised body that has done much work towards trying to achieve the ultimate goal in the accounting world. That is to have a set of international accounting standards which a lot more countries will adopt in the future. In other words, countries like the US would adopt international accounting standards versus the US generally accepted accounting principles.

Most developed countries have their own set of accounting principles. A lot of countries, I think it is fair to say, had resistance in the first place when there was the thought process of internationally accepted accounting standards. However, the world changes. Finance changes. Technology changes and it has made this world a very small village in a lot of ways. Certainly, accounting is the tool utilised for the basis of investment.

I think it is fair comment to say that over the next decade, internationally accepted accounting standards will be an ongoing process, and will be a useful tool that will be used by many countries. I think we will find that to be so, simply because of technology, the way in which investment works and opportunities are known,— and not only in local territories. In other words, you will find opportunities in the far reaches of this earth, into which investors across the globe are becoming aware and want to put venture capital money. The key enabler will be accounting standards that persons will be able to give to their financial advisors and accountant. They will know what they are looking at and not have to worry about under what basis they were prepared and how the numbers can be interpreted. I believe this Bill is going in the right direction in terms of what standards of accounting practice will be used once we go to the accrual basis of accounting.

Schedule 4, sets out the annual financial statements that shall be included once this Bill comes into Law, and I think this is a comprehensive set of financial statements. I believe the information coming out of these will be most useful to everyone in this country, to us as Legislators, to the Government that has to make decisions and to the general public in terms of wanting to keep abreast of the finances of the country. I believe this is a comprehensive laundry list of accounting of financial statements.

I would call Members' attention to Schedule 5 "Ownership Performance Measures," in particular (2) which lists ratios. I would encourage the Government to revisit this list and come up with a more comprehensive list of more relevant ratios. The only two listed are current assets to current liabilities; and total assets to total liabilities. If persons who are not financial advisors or accountants or finance minded people are going to make meaningful use of the financial statements of the Government of the Cayman Islands, certainly a thorough ratio analysis would be a critical tool. I would think the Government should be minded to include in this list of things like the asset test ratio; debt service ratio; and other useful ratios that would allow us to be able to interpret better what it is the financial statements have contained in them.

Schedule 1 of this Bill "Economic Forecasts" is another critical area the Government will have to utilise in its decision-making process. Currently there are five items listed:

1. Gross domestic product.
2. Consumer prices.

3. Unemployment and employment.

4. Current account position of the balance of payments.

5. A statement of all significant assumptions underlying the above.

In a broad sense, this encapsulates the state of the local economy. I would encourage the Government to also be mindful of developing some other guides that may be a bit more useful in terms of being able to assess the condition of localising the local economy. I would believe that things like housing and housing starts in relation to the indigenous Caymanian population would be of relevance. That is just one example. There are other forecast indicators that Government may be minded to use.

I bring up housing in regard to local population because I believe that the average Caymanian not only wants a job, which point 3 speaks to, but I believe the average Caymanian wants a place of his own. That is certainly a useful indicator as to the strength of the local economy and would assist Government in its decision-making process. I note with interest the powers and duties of the Auditor General. This point has been raised by previous speakers. One thing that I would like to add is that under Section 59(c), at the request of the Legislative Assembly or of any of its committees or subcommittees, the Auditor General will have the power to conduct investigations.

However, when we go to Section 67(1) through (3), we see the notion of pricing that I spoke to earlier. Any of the audits or any other form of assistance given by the Auditor General on this Legislature's behalf, will have to be paid for. Going forward, we must recognise that when the budgeting process is being carried out, one of the key things will be sufficient funds being here so that if and when Members of this Legislative Assembly want to have investigations carried out, they will have the money to do so.

I can think of having major problems in this area if we had a government that wanted to limit what Back Bench Members or persons that were staunch Opposition Members sought to do. We must ensure that there are adequate funds to allow this body to be able to have its investigations carried out.

I support this Bill because it is a step in the direction of a government that is accountable. It is a step in the direction of open government and of being able to hold people. In a broad sense much of what is desired in this Bill will require constitutional change within this country. However, if the people want open and accountable government, then they must support the legal changes that go hand-in-hand with that. No person in this country should expect government to be accountable until we get to the place this Bill is seeking to take us, with Ministers having administrative responsibility.

I am quite aware that there will be those who will say it is a concept of the chicken and the egg, and which should come first. There may be those who will say that we should wait instead of first coming forward with this Bill before the constitutional change, which most of us advocate as being necessary. However, none of us knows what the future holds. I believe that with all the groundwork that needs to be done that this Bill is timely.

The benefits of this Bill, the actual core workings of this Bill will not happen once we take this vote. In fact, when you read through the Bill, much will not take effect until 2005. We have to start. I believe it is timely for us to start now. I do not want to leave our children and grandchildren the type of government that I have come into. We have to ensure that this country is put in the best possible position to be successful. I have said before that a man has to know his limitations. None of us who live in this country, none of us who are Caymanian, should become too comfortable with the standard of living we currently enjoy. I think we are closer to smoke-pot days than a lot of us want to admit to ourselves.

[Inaudible Interjections]

Mr. Rolston M. Anglin: I stand corrected. Smoke-pan days . . . because there are those who might take what I said to mean getting involved with some illegal activity!

Hon. Roy Bodden: Exactly!

Mr. Rolston M. Anglin: I am certainly not an advocate of smoke pot days!

[Inaudible interjections]

Mr. Rolston M. Anglin: We have to remember that tourists do not have to come to Cayman and investors do not have to place their monies here. Mutual funds do not have to register here. Captive insurance companies do not have to register here. As a government we must be diligent. I think it is a fair comment that most persons who come from the private sector have always looked at the inefficiencies that exist within the Government and recognised that unless we have fundamental change we will not be able to build the way in which we need to. It is my humble submission that the way in which we govern ourselves has been a contributing factor to the financial position we find ourselves in today.

As I said earlier, human beings are going to drive this process. There are those who will say that if we do not change the human beings we will not get the benefits. However, I think that this Bill is crafted in such a way that it will force people to change, that people will either have to change or they will be left behind, literally.

I believe that the public of this country have cried out for this financial reform initiative. I do not believe you can find any citizen that does not want transparent and accountable government. From where I sit, it is my humble submission that anyone who does not support this Bill would be going against a government that is held accountable. I do not believe there is anyone here who wants to send that message out to his constituents.

As I pointed out, there is still a lot of work to be done on the Bill itself. There is still a lot of thought that can go into specific areas. In terms of the broad concept, I would like to commend this Bill to all Members of this Legislative Assembly. I would like to congratulate all who have been involved with this reform initiative over the last few years.

A Bill for a Law to repeal and replace the Public Finance and Audit Law (1997 Revision) and regulations made under that Law, is a Bill that I am proud to be associated with and proud to support.

The last point I want to raise is one that has been raised a few times in this current Legislative Assembly, and that is this whole issue of the Public Accounts Committee. I am currently the Chairman of the Public Accounts Committee. I am quite aware of what Erskine May has to say about it in regard to having Opposition Members on the committee, and an Opposition Member as Chairman.

There are two points that we have to consider: 1) in the parliamentary seminar put on earlier this year it was pointed out by numerous, well experienced and well versed Parliamentarians from other parts of the Commonwealth, that there are respectable Parliaments that do not adopt that particular philosophy.

I say that to say that because we do not adopt that philosophy in Cayman in no way takes away from the respectability of the Public Accounts Committee. Anyone who desires to see that philosophy adopted locally, those people by extension would also support the type of constitutional reform we need. Second, we obviously do not have any formal political groupings in this country, so we do not necessarily have a formal Opposition. From where I sit, the Opposition is something that could potentially change from day to day. I believe this is a point that will be better addressed once we have gone through our constitutional exercise.

As a Legislature, whichever way we decide to do this, we have been shown examples of other Parliaments in this world that do not utilise this particular feature. I am quite certain there is the type of accountability and appearance of independence desired. I would be remiss if I did not admit that this concept does have merit.

I will support to repeal and replace the Public Finance and Audit Law (1997 Revision) and regulations made under that Law.

I thank you.

The Speaker: We shall suspend until 2.30.

PROCEEDINGS SUSPENDED AT 1.00 PM

PROCEEDING RESUMED AT 2.38 PM

The Speaker: Please be seated. Continuation of debate on The Public Management and Finance Bill 2001. The Motion is open for debate.

The Temporary Honourable First Official Member.

Hon. Donovan W. F. Ebanks: Thank you.

I could not let the opportunity pass to say a few words on what I consider this most momentous occasion. I think I will demonstrate that on the official rather than the elected clock, a few minutes will not take as long as the preceding speaker!

[Laughter]

Hon. Donovan W. F. Ebanks: Mr. Ted Gaebler, earned a reputation in the US, and a somewhat international reputation as well for his reform work in a small city in California called Sunnydale. He went on to use this as a platform to write a book entitled Reinventing Government, and said; in delivering the Keynote address at the Reinvention of Public Services Initiative at the Marriott in 1996, that the true test of insanity is to keep on doing the same things and expect different results. I am pleased to recognise that my colleague, The Third Official Member, has clearly failed that test and has in turn demonstrated not only his sanity, but in bringing us to this point has demonstrated far more.

I think the fact that we have this Bill before the House is due in large part to his commitment, his perseverance and determination to effect change in the area to which he is primarily responsible. He has varied the speed from time to time, but has certainly kept the course.

I do not expect him, when the opportunity for him to respond or sum up, to have much to say about his own role. However, I would like to place on record my assessment of the soundness of the strategy and the game plan that he followed. I think it is a model that all of us who aspire to effect change should be aware of and give consideration to emulating.

I think some time back in perhaps 1996 maybe early 1997, the Third Official Member, realising the need to make substantial changes to our fiscal system, took an approach often taken in governments. He made contact with a knowledgeable source in another country and engaged someone to look at what we did and in effect tell him what we should be doing differently. He no doubt would have been left to sell it to the public service, to the public and to this Parliament. It is a route that others have gone and unfortunately, a route that others have gone since.

After having been exposed to some of the reforms taking place elsewhere in the Commonwealth in early 1998, the Third Official Member, I think very wisely took stock and re-plotted his game plan. He brought in someone who served as a real evangelist in exposing both, members of the political arena and the public service and the community as a whole, to some of the alternative ways the public business could be managed. In particular, how the public finances could be managed. That person I am referring to was the former finance Minister from New Zealand, the Honourable Ruth Richardson.

That intervention set the base for broad consultation that yielded initially a diagnosis of some of what was wrong with our system that was shared widely. There was further consultation to come up with a description of what we should do, again that was shared widely. The result is that we get a product today, and it is fair to say that to a large extent, all those who wanted to see change and who wanted to be a part of that change had an opportunity to contribute to the development of this prescription and in turn the ability for us to refer to it as truly something designed to suit our needs. He has also been doing substantial preparatory work in terms of training the public service and in speaking in terms of outputs and their specifications from agencies managing under the new system and more recently training in accrual accounting.

None of this is to say that the introduction of this legislation will still not require substantial amounts of additional training and application. It certainly will. I think there is only so much of that that can be done in advance, and some of it rightly has to be done, as it were, on the job. That is where the timing of the coming into effect of the legislation will prove most beneficial. That is, it will paint the writing clearly on the wall to all that we have to make the adoptions necessary.

I am sure the Third Official Member will give acknowledgement to those who worked hard to assist him. I will stay away from that. However, I feel obliged to acknowledge the contribution of the cadre of young professionals who I know continue to be frustrated by the idiosyncrasies of our current system, have really worked hard and who are fully behind this initiative. Really, they are the future of our public service.

I still hold the view that our public service today is filled predominately with good people; good people who are often rendered less effective than they should be by the systems and controls we put on them. While there is a tendency to often blame individuals and impose more controls, seldom does that yield the result we are looking for. We hear comments, quite rightly so, about the size of the service and the growth in posts. In my view, that is clearly something that Members have a right to be concerned about. I think the numbers, however, are merely a symptom and are not the real problem. I do not know how many Members are aware, but a few years ago all in the interest of stemming this growth, we introduced a form from Head of Department on up, that requires about six signatures to get a post created. The fact that we required six signatures has certainly not stopped the growth. Often times we are simply adding layers and layers with no net positive benefit of having done so.

One thing that I personally look forward to, —with this legislation enabling us to do much better— is to objectively judge, evaluate, or assess, how well an agency is doing, and what kind of year an agency had. Government, as a holding company of 35 or 45 agencies or departments and whatever statutory bodies and government owned bodies, really need to have a mechanism to know when a department or an authority has had a good year and when it has not.

I often chided the Collector of Customs when he makes the front page because customs had a “record year collecting $90 million.” That is great, but does it mean the Treasury had a bad year because they paid out $190 million? Certainly, we expect one to collect and one to pay out. What is really of interest to me is how much it is costing us per dollar to collect and how much per dollar to pay out, and whether we are doing that any cheaper this year than last year.

This system, whereby we are actually costing the output of collecting revenue and various other outputs, will obviously allow us to objectively evaluate how agencies perform. The underlying principle of this legislation is to define clearly what is to be done, by whom and to what standards. This is not a how-we-do-it piece of legislation. I guess 20 or 30 years ago, if you were going to build a house, you would look for a good builder who would hire the men who would work with him. You were directly responsible for paying them and buying the materials and you looked to him for a materials list and you went over it with a fine-tooth comb, like we did the Budget about nine months ago. In effect, our budget system is really no different now than the construction industry was probably 30 years ago.

Today, if one of us wanted to build a house we would probably hire an architect to turn our ideas into plans and specifications. We would often also hire a quantity surveyor of some sort to value their work. Certainly, lending institutions like us to do that! If we do not have a lot more money than we need, it is probably wise that we do it in any case.

Finally, we would enter into a contract with a builder to build the house. In today’s world we expect that contractor to deliver the house we contracted him to build. We rely to some extent on the architect to ensure us that the work is being done according to the drawings and specifications. If it is not, we expect the contractor to correct it. We rely on the quantity surveyor to advise us how much we should pay him for the work he has done.

In the current scenario, where we have clearly set out what we expect the contractor to do and what we will pay for it, the contractor has an obligation to meet those expectations if he wants to get paid. At the same time, that contractor would not be willing for you as the homeowner to control how he uses his labour, or where he gets his material; as long as it meets our specifications and the work is done in accordance with our plans and specifications.

This legislation in concept really looks to move the administration of public business and the implementation of the policies of the Government of the day, into a similar structured arrangement—one of clarity, of definition.

I heard a couple of references to ‘administrative responsibility’ and I certainly do not claim to know precisely what the term is meant to entail. I have not come across it in any of my readings of the reforms in countries where the types of systems we are proposing to implement here have been introduced. In fact, I checked a couple of books over the weekend trying to shed some light on it. I do not have a clear understanding, but I take that it relates to ensuring that Ministers are better able to ensure that what they want done actually gets done. That is obviously a very legitimate concern.

I recall Ruth Richardson using the expression that when they came to power in New Zealand (a country where agriculture is a significant part of the economy) prior to the reforms there, she used the term of using the lever, and nothing happens. The public service simply was not as responsive as elected officials would like it to be. I would simply wish to say that I hope that whatever definition of ‘administrative responsibility’ we adopt and pursue is formulated in the context of the new system this legislation looks to bring into place, and not in the context of the old system that we are looking to abandon and which lends to tremendous frustration.

In summing up, I would like to thank all Members for their support. It is abundantly clear that the political leadership of these Islands is receptive to change and receptive to reform. I am also pleased to see that a number of Members have raised the fact that there are other fundamental changes needed. Indeed, there is much that remains to be done.

However, in thanking Members, I must also make the point that it is for us the public service, from top to bottom to seize the opportunity to get on with doing the things that need to be done. Thank you.

The Speaker: The Motion is open to debate. Does any other Member wish to speak? (Pause) Does any other Member wish to speak? (Pause) Does any other Member wish to speak? (Pause) This is my last call; does any other Member wish to speak?

The First Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman.

Mrs. Julianna Y. O’Connor-Connolly: Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

I rise to offer my contribution to The Public Management and Finance Bill, 2001. First, I concur with the two main objectives as stated in the Memorandum of Objects and Reasons—that it is seeking to modernise the Government’s financial management systems, which have been in dire need of modernisation for a number of years. Second, to establish an environment for improved performance, which I also believe would make Government much more efficient and effective.

These are quite broad objectives. However, I believe they are achievable, and those with which I can associate my concurrence. I can also support the concept the proposed Bill seeks to introduce, namely the concept of accrual accounting that seeks to replace our current cash accounting system. I am looking forward to speedy implementation of the said replacement.

This Bill also seeks to implement another new concept, which is the concept of Chief Officer. Throughout the entire Bill such an entity is mentioned. For example, in particular the case of the three Official Members, the Chief Officer in those respective portfolios; in the case of the Financial Secretary and the Chief Secretary, it would be their respective deputies; in the case of the Attorney General, it would be the Solicitor General.

This move I find quite interesting, especially in view of the fact that most, if not all of the members of Government and this House, have strongly advocated removal of two—or in some quarters, they propose three—of the Official Members when and if the constitutional change comes into effect. Based on the public debate I have heard, it seems there is very strong possibility of this occurring sometime in the future. I will not use this forum to debate the pros and cons of that particular concept because there will be many more opportunities to so do.

I wish to debate it from this angle, since the proposed Bill has specifically identified the two deputies and the Solicitor General as Chief Officers. I would seek clarification as to whether this would mean the deputies who have had the privilege and opportunity to receive years of experience and money having been invested in them for the financial and economic management of this new modern system; whether it would be prudent when the constitutional change is made for the said removal of the Official Members, for them to be replaced by the Solicitor General, the Chief Secretary and the Financial Secretary. One would think they would in the ordinary course of events, become the deputies under this new system. Perhaps some response can be given to that, if it is indeed a presumption that can be rebutted.

I also wish to draw some attention to the definition set out in Clause 3 of the Bill, which seeks to deal with the concept of borrowing. I beg your indulgence to quickly read the definition: “‘borrowing’ means any borrowing of money or other receipt of credit, whether secured or unsecured, and includes any hire purchase agreement or finance lease, but does not [and this is where I would like to put emphasis] include the purchase of goods or services on credit or the obtaining of a cash advance for a period of ninety days or less.”

It is my view that this would give one person total and absolute discretion to purchase goods or services on credit, or to move or to obtain a cash advance for a period of three months. It is therefore my respectful submission that if this is the direction the Government would like to take, then perhaps some consideration can be given to a financial ceiling or cap, whether it is $300,000 or $0.5 million, whatever is deemed prudent, to be put in place so there is early detection of any abuse in this area.

In fact, our present Constitution has no provision for administrative responsibility, a defect that has existed for some time. I trust that in the near future that will be a change that comes to fruition. Having had the honour to serve the country as a Minister of Government myself, I can attest to the frustration of being accountable to Parliament, and rightly so. Yet there is really no ministerial teeth by way of administrative responsibility to carry out the many diverse and onerous duties that a Minister has, once placed in a ministerial seat.

I would also like to draw Members' attention to the definition attributed to another term in Clause 3, which is “entity assets.” Like many of the definitions, it caught my attention. It is my humble view that this definition is also too wide, when one takes the time to read it and cross-reference it with Clause 35.

This brings me to another point. It was my understanding that the power to make regulations was vested within the ambit of Executive Council. However, when one takes a closer look at Clause 35, one sees a transition here, perhaps the introduction of a new concept, where the Financial Secretary, under this new provision, would be given the power to delegate. I do not have any problem with the transferral on the surface to the Financial Secretary. However, my clarification comes against the background of the legality of this whole concept of moving the power of making regulations in Executive Council to the Financial Secretary, and whether this particular Bill is the most legal and appropriate form of effecting that change.

Clause 35(a) not only removes that power from Executive Council to make regulations, I believe it also gives the power to collect information from non-civil servants. If this is not the intention, then it is my respectful view that thought should perhaps be given to the inclusion of the following words, “from civil servants” after the words “supplied” where it first appears in Clause 35(a) in the first line. I believe this would help to clarify from whom such information could be adduced.

I would also be grateful if the Government would take some time to clarify Clause 11 of this new Bill, which says they would be responsible for approving the permanent appropriations and to basically indicate who would be responsible for making these approvals.

I would like to move on to Clause 14. Again, we see another new concept. This seeks to introduce by virtue of Clause 14(1) that “The Executive Council shall manage the financial performance and financial position of the entire public sector in accor- dance with the principles ably set out in this section.”

While I believe in principle that although this concept is a good one, without Executive Council having vested in them the powers of administrative responsibility, how can they really be expected to hold the public service accountable? We all know the service answers to the Chief Secretary, and then perhaps on to His Excellency the Governor. They are also guided under the new arrangement by the Public Service Commission. I can clearly see with the further implementation of this Bill, that the Government of the day would also have to move to have a very close look at the necessity of the Public Service Commission. In fact, if this presumption is correct, then I think the onus shifts from the Government of the day to make this abundantly clear at this junction.

When we look at Clause 14(4), we also see that this gives Executive Council the power to actually depart from those well founded and tested principles that have been entrenched for some time now. These principles include not exceeding the magical 10 per cent; maintaining appropriate cash reserves and dealing with the actual financial risks, et cetera. Clause 14 (4) does give Executive Council the power to deviate or depart; although this is set out for a limited period. As I understand, all they would have to do in that particular set of circumstances is to lay a statement before this Honourable Parliament.

With that, I have two aspects to seek clarification on: First, as I understand it, statements are not actually “laid” in this Honourable Parliament, indeed, they are “made.” That, in itself, is not just a technical observation, but by virtue of our Standing Order 30(1). I beg to make reference thereto. It says, “A Member of the Government who intends to make a statement on a public matter for which the Government is responsible shall inform the Presiding Officer of his intention before the beginning of the sitting at which he wishes to make the statement.”

Second, and more importantly, as far as a Back Bencher is concerned, Standing Order 30(2) merely gives us an opportunity, based on you acting in your sole discretion, of merely putting “short questions” to the Member of Government. I believe that in the era of transparency those who are the movers and shakers of this proposed Bill may want to take a second look to see if this is the most appropriate means of bringing the transparency and accountability to be shared with other Members of Parliament.

I also took the opportunity to look at the situation if it came in the form of a paper, to which most Ministers of Government and Official Members often resort. Again we face technical difficulties in my respectful view, in that by virtue of Standing Order 19(2), no question can be put on any paper. It can merely be debated, which is a step better than the previous position, as the Bill actually states. Since no question can be put, merely debated, the House only gets a report on it. I think we need to clarify what is the intention of having the statement brought to the House. Is it going to be seeking the approval of Parliament? Is it just a reporting procedure? Or is it going to be in the form of a motion for the House to take note? Depending on either of the three options, it will, in my respectful view, translate to a level of transparency and accountability that the Bill actually proposes when we apply the peeling away exercise to the whole proposed Bill.

As you know, Mr. Speaker, a paper would perhaps be the more preferred option. Although I am going to allude to several points, this is really one of the points I would be grateful if an attempt were made by Government, to indicate what method will be used. In this particular area, where we are dealing with five fundamental economic and financial principles—which can make or break any government—I think it is a very crucial consideration for Government to intimate those to Members.

If we could now bring our attention to Clause 15(2) of the Bill, and I must apologise for going a bit slower than I usually do. I asked for an adjournment so that I could have an opportunity to go through the Bill, and although my motives were mooted and debated ... I have been sent here as a representative not in the form of a rubberstamp, so I felt it to be my duty and my honour, to take the time to analyse this. I had hoped that at the end of the day it would have proved to be purposeful adjournment.

Based on Clause 15(2), I would also be grateful if the Government would say whether or not this is a new concept whereby the Ministers will be given “All the rights and powers attaching to the shares in a government company, including the power of sale or disposition, ...” and how exactly this will work in the absence of a Chief Minister, who would have the power vested in him to actually discipline his Ministers.

As in most cases, if not all cases of Law, this is a very important power. The power of sale and the power of disposition, and we need to ensure that all the adequate checks and balances are there.

Clause 23 makes provision for a strategic policy statement. This has always been done by our most capable Financial Secretary. However, the proviso, as I see in this proposed Bill, appears to be a very clear departure from this tradition. I believe that when any government seeks to make departures, as such, the onus also falls on them to provide very clear justification and reasons for that departure to convince the public and Members of this House. This Bill provides for a Member of Executive Council to present the policy statement.

At this juncture of my debate, I will not go into the merits or demerits of whether or not a Member of Executive Council should be doing this as opposed to the traditional method of the Financial Secretary. However, if the Government of the day has so drafted this to allow the Leader of Government Business (or the Chief Minister, whenever the Constitution is changed), to be making this statement without a further change of the Law, in the interest of transparency, I believe that Government owes it to this country to say that it has so widely drafted this provision and likewise when the time comes to advance it with the Constitution we will not have to go back and make any further amendments. Indeed any Member, specifically the Leader of Government Business, or the Chief Minister would be able to stand up and make this policy on behalf of the Government.

I can also agree with Clause 26 of the proposed Bill whereby pre-election and economic updates will be printed in a local gazette. I believe that this, more than ever before, is something that has to be done. As my friend, the Second Elected Member for George Town, alluded to, this would certainly go a great distance in alleviating the stress or distress of conflicting financial reports coming from the various quarters of past or current governments. There would be an opportunity for an independent stature to produce an economic report prior to the elections.

On a closer analysis of this concept, one will see this is not a mandatory provision in its absolute version, but here we find another proviso set out in Clause 27(2), which says, "Subsection (1) does not apply to the extent that the Financial Secretary determines that compliance with that subsection will be likely to (a) significantly prejudice the economic interests of the Islands; (b) significantly compromise the Government in any negotiation, litigation, or commercial activity; or (c) result in a significant financial loss to the Government." Therefore, the Bill sets up three categories that are perhaps necessary categories. I mention that merely to say that although some Members seem to be of the perception that this was something the Financial Secretary had to do and it was an end-all situation. I wanted the public to be expressly clear that the Financial Secretary in this proposed Bill had these discretionary powers of not doing that before election.

There is another section that deals with that as well as to the period of time, which I believe is three months. Although one might not like to look at the worse case scenario, one would be remiss in making an analysis at this gestation period not to draw attention to the fact that the reports could be done before the three month period. We all know Parliament is prorogued in September and there is a long two months when Executive Council runs the country and there is no provision to get a full impact or review of the financial status of the country. Upon first inspection, this proposed Bill is not as clear cut as one would think.

I should also wish to draw some attention to Clause 28(1), which requires that Executive Council shall gazette a quarterly report for the entire public sector. I believe this is a good move because reporting has a history of forming a very tight and accurate check and balance in any system, even more so in a democratic system. It would also come in handy in situations, where there are discrepancies as to the accurate financial statistics of any given government; in that there would be an introduction of an independent report. I am grateful for this provision in the Bill.

There is also a reporting requirement for Executive Council in Clause 29, for an annual report for the public sector of the relevant financial year. I would like to go on record in support of this, as it is a good requirement. By virtue of Clause 29(5), "... the entire public sector annual report is published it shall be a public document and the Financial Secretary shall provide a copy to any person requesting one on payment of a copying charge..."

There are two comments I would like to make in this regard: First, I wonder if the wording of this section would have the effect of limiting the sale of multiple copies to a person, and if so, perhaps this restriction could be removed. Otherwise, perhaps the Honourable Third Official Member could clarify this when he winds up. As I read it, and perhaps I read it in the literal fashion, it would seem to imply that any one person could get one copy.

Second, is this a new policy, whereby the power for making the regulations will be taken from Executive Council and by statutory delegation, be given over to the Financial Secretary? I have no problem with the person who now occupies this position; however, because it is a new concept it would be good to hear the justification for these deviations.

In Clause 30, I am also in agreement with performance contracts after having worked in the private and public sectors. Taking that against the background of the many constraints on our financial resources—particularly since 11 September 2001—when contrasting that with the performance of our revenue, we cannot be too stringent with the way we exercise our discretion in the expenditure this year. One way of actually dealing with that is to move to this new concept of performance contracts.

I realise they will not be as effective as they could be in the absence of administrative responsibility. I hope that the movers and pushers of this modernisation, this piece of legislation, will also be there giving their full support when we look at the full modernisation of the Constitution. It is hoped that we will not revert to the 1992 Draft Constitution when at the very mention of the words "administrative responsibility" we had most of the service and the Public Service Commission up in arms about giving over that aspect. I believe that much support of this Bill is hinged on the premise that some form, if not absolute administrative responsibility, will be coming in short order.

In Clause 30, I would be grateful if the Honourable Third Official Member would intimate to this House whether or not the purchase agreements with non-governmental output suppliers will go out to bid. I was unable to find any provision relating to that. Perhaps there is a justifiable reason why, but I wish to know, if that is the case, what is the reason? In sub-clause (5) of Clause 30, will the purchase agreements be presented to the Legislative Assembly for approval, or will they merely be brought to Parliament for us to vote? In my view, the drafted clause is silent on this and perhaps some light could be shed in that regard.

Clause 30(3)(f) is also silent as to when amendments are to be presented to the Legislative Assembly, as related to purchase agreements. I submit that perhaps wording could be inserted into Clause 30(3)(f) that if submitted would say, for example, 'should be submitted the next sitting day after it has been signed' in order to give some urgency or some clarification as to the anticipated timeline required.

I have this very same concern as it relates to Clause 32(e), that is, that the Financial Secretary is required to bring to the attention of this Honourable Legislative Assembly any divergence between Government and the principles of responsible financial management as specified in section 14. It is my view that the Clause should specifically stipulate a time for bringing such an important matter to the attention of this Honourable House.

Clause 33 appears to give the Honourable Financial Secretary a power to delegate. Again, it is my respectful view that giving the Financial Secretary the power to authorise "another person" needs some fine-tuning. Who does this actually include? What category does "another person" catch? Does this mean "another person" in the public service, for example? Or does it include non-governmental persons we seek to do business with as well?

Should this be a general power of delegation of all of the Financial Secretary's powers and duties? Or should it be refined to include minor to medium powers and duties? Many of the powers given to the Honourable Third Official Member under this proposed Bill are very important and significant. One would not wish to know that a general power is given for him to delegate any or all of those powers. I would be grateful if Government would see fit to fine tune that, so that many of those powers actually rest in the Financial Secretary himself as opposed to his delegate.

I also came upon a new word, I have not been able to find the meaning, but perhaps in his response some clarity could be given, and that is the word "delegant." It seems to be a new creature. Was it meant to be "delegate" or is there another connotation to put to it? I believe there are two or three references to the word "delegant" in the proposed Bill.

Clause 36 also gives the Honourable Third Official Member some operational and managerial teeth as it relates to the respective chief officers that would fall under him. However, this overseeing power that is given has been restricted in my view, by not having a much closer management oversight of the chief officers. Perhaps that was the intent of the provision, and again I believe justification should be given for that.

The Chief Officers have been given in most cases near absolute powers under Clause 39. I believe that this is a most untenable situation. Let me explain why I have taken such a strong position on that.

I believe that when one relates this to Clause 39(2)(e), which is giving the power to the Chief Officer of a ministry or portfolio to, "dispose of its entity assets on such terms and conditions as its chief officer may authorise" it is my respectful view that this power should be given to either the Honourable Third Official Member or the Members of Executive Council; or even better yet, to the Legislative Assembly. Even if it means having to split or break the entity into varying categories according to the asset value or the importance from other values, as seen by the Government. Unless I am otherwise persuaded, I cannot concur with the power of disposition being given to the Chief Officer at this stage, not knowing what is going to happen with the modernisation of our Constitution.

I also understand that Clause 39 does not come to the implementation stage for another several years. I believe this is for two good reasons: First, given the capability and development reason, the Government and its relevant portfolios, ministries and departments will need a breathing time to actually get all the checks and balances in place. There are regulations needed to actually expedite this process, and a review of the General Orders, which seem to be taking an inordinate amount of time to modernise. Hopefully, this will act as a stimulus or catalyst for those who are indeed responsible for the General Orders and to bring it up to this modern era in the interest of the numerous civil servants and the effect it may or may not have on their performance.

With reference to Clause 55, I wish to cross-reference this with Clause 35 and especially Clause 75. So, there would be basically three Clauses that I wish to look at in concert—35, 55, and 75. Clause 55 gives the Chief Officer of the portfolio of finance (what we know as the Financial Secretary), the power to, and in my view the absolute power to make a request from Members of Executive Council, et cetera, including non-government entities. Clause 55 is in my view extremely wide. I believe that to include such information he (the present or future Financial Secretary) is required to make a very wide request. As the Bill is now set up, this does not seem right to me.

When one puts him, or that office, in perspective to the level of Executive Council, it places the Financial Secretary as a subordinate officer, and to give such a person a right to request, and failing to request, as we see under clause 75, can invoke some very strong penalties ranging from $10,000 up to $100,000; if a Member of Executive Council or that Chief Officer's very own boss, should fail to release this information ... it just does not gel, Mr. Speaker. I believe that the Government is perhaps taking this on board and I await the outcome of the committee stage to see if we end up with a satisfactory amendment to show not only respect but to give some order to the Honourable Third Official Member who I believe should, at the very least, have this power as opposed to the Chief Officer.

I can also see that this provision would create some difficulty, perhaps public embarrassment. Can you imagine the Chief Officer of the portfolio of finance requesting from the Honourable Second Official Member, information he feels that the Attorney General should not release, and then the Chief Officer seeking to invoke the Solicitor General's office to bring an indictment against the Attorney-General, which could attract $10,000 to $100,000? It just does not make sense in our present constitutional arrangement. I think it would do the Government good to have a close look at this and to make an amendment that would reflect the present constitutional arrangement so that we do not end up in such a precarious situation.

If we look at Clause 57, I am encouraged that this clause seeks to preserve the independence of the Auditor-General, which I believe should be an independent office. He or she should carry out his or her duties in an expeditious fashion. Sub-clause (5) also seeks to protect his well earned salary. I submit this is very vital in any democratic society. By the very nature of his job, the Auditor-General is often in direct conflict with the various entities within the public sector and we would not want a situation where his salary would be able to be attacked or not voted on, or any of those scenarios. That would begin to erode the very foundation of a democratic Westminster system of Parliament.

With reference to Clause 59(e), the power is given to the Governor to authorise the Auditor-General to conduct investigations into the financial management and affairs of persons, et cetera. I just wondered whether or not there were any justifiable reasons why this specific power was not given to Executive Council on a whole, as opposed to the Governor; unless it is intended that the Governor as it appears here, will mean the Governor-in-Council; perhaps that could be clarified.

In regard to Clause 63(1) the Auditor-General here is given investigative powers and the right of access to all—not some, but all—information held by Executive Council or any Member of Executive Council et cetera. I wonder whether or not this actually means that the need to require the requisite consent from His Excellency the Governor is now going to be negated, neutralised, or taken out completely. Once this Bill becomes Law, the Auditor-General will be able to get whatever documentation is placed before Executive Council and have access to it. Perhaps there are sufficient provisos in the Bill. If so, I would be grateful if they could be shared.

All and sundry will certainly appreciate that it is not a matter of attempting not to be transparent or accountable as far as Executive Council is concerned. However, there are many confidential matters discussed in Executive Council and one would not wish to fully reveal the confidential veil from that without having some checks and balances in place. Again, that is my own respective view.

Clause 67, once again we see the introduction of a new concept of the Auditor General being able to charge what is termed in the proposed Bill as a "fair price." An attempt has been made to actually define what a fair price would be. I trust that has removed some of the vagueness the term would otherwise connote. Persons, companies and bodies, investigated under this relevant Section of the Bill can be charged a fee. Is this to be the case in all circumstances? In practice, should the onus be upon the person being investigated to pay the "fair price" of investigation? If so, there are no provisos put in place. I can easily envisage an abuse of the system, politics being the animal it is, and someone requesting the Auditor-General, as has been done in the recent past, and that person at the end of the day could be found innocent, but still be charged for the audit. I think that perhaps some closer look should be taken if that is the approach.

I also found it quite interesting that not only could this happen to a non-governmental entity, as I read the Bill, this can also happen to a Minister or Member of Executive Council. One is left to wonder then, how could one be expected to accurately budget or forecast an expenditure head to cover this expense by the Auditor-General? Would Executive Council in concert have a vote to pay for these audits that the Auditor-General would carry out? Would the respective Minister have to do it? How would this actually work? It is an area that I would like to see clarified.

I am also seeking clarification on Clause 68(3), which purports to directly delegate administrative powers to Members of the Public Accounts Committee who are all Elected Representatives of this House. Again, without having administrative responsibility it is my humble view that at best this has to be a backdoor approach to reap the benefits of administrative responsibility. It seems somewhat inequitable (if I can use such a generous term) that the Ministers themselves on Executive Council will not have the privilege or liberty of administrative responsibility. Yet, the Bill appears to directly give a most direct form of administrative responsibility to the Members of the Public Accounts Committee. That is, according to what has been stipulated in Clause 73, they will actually do the terms of reference for the Auditor General, and perhaps the interviewing, and also set the budget for the Public Accounts Committee.

Correct me if I am wrong, but I cannot see a much more direct form of administrative responsibility. Again, I am not arguing the pros and cons; I am just saying that because our constitutional advancement is not where this particular Bill sets it, it causes some difficulty in trying to set up a modern system in our finances.

I notice it was first purported that the Auditor-General should report to the Speaker. Due to the Constitutional arrangement whereby the Speaker is not the head of the Legislative Assembly, that too caused great difficulties and the Government deemed it necessary, and indeed prudent, to move from that initial scenario. I guess the best they could do was to put it into the hands of the Public Accounts Committee.

I wonder if when the Member responds, he could indicate whether this is a transitory provision and if so, what would be his suggestion for a better situation where Elected Members of this House, by membership on the Public Accounts Committee would have direct administrative responsibilities and accountability with the Auditor-General. His office I think should at all times not only be an independent office, but have every appearance of independence. This is very crucial to the smooth running of any Parliament. Indeed it crystallises and cements the whole faith one has in the system being run above board in any modern democratic jurisdiction.

To a large extent, (although I have had several inquiries), I concur with the general concept and desire of the Government and the majority if not all Members of the Back Bench to see modernisation within our Public Finance and Audit Law. I reiterate that it would nonetheless have been remiss of me to remain silent and not seek clarification. I trust that the Government will take it in the same light and make a conscientious attempt to reply either here today, or in another more appropriate forum. These are genuine concerns. I am sure that if as an attorney, I had those concerns there are many persons in the public that share similar concerns. However, due to the whole mechanics will not or did not have an opportunity to articulate to the powers that be.

In concluding my debate, I wish to go on record to thank the Honourable Third Official Member for his perseverance with modernisation in this section. I know that with most change it is not always an enviable position. There is often opposition, for whatever reason, to change. That in itself is not bad because it forces the movers and shakers of change to actually stop and reflect, reconsider and amend. As other Members said, it is hoped that it will be a dynamic Bill (Law when it comes into force) and one that Members would not be hesitant to bring back to this Parliament for scrutiny, as no Law is perfect. However, I believe that attempts can be made to bring it as close to perfection as possible when we approach it with open minds, not only to praise it but to be open to what I hope I have contributed by way of constructive criticism as well as general support.

I look forward to hearing the Third Official Member's response. I ask him to convey to his team my appreciation and thanks for the valiant effort made in this regard. I would like to thank the gentleman from New Zealand who was very receptive and courteous with the enquiries I articulated to him. I trust that within the next three or four years, the proposed implementation stage, we would have at long last come full circle where there will be transparency. In the statement

I read a few months ago in some of my readings, that there is not government and transparency. However, there is an option, government or transparency, would indeed be put to rest by an example in this proposed Bill.

The Speaker: Does any other Member wish to speak? (Pause) Does any other Member wish to speak? (Pause)

The Third Elected Member for Bodden Town.

Mr. Anthony S. Eden: Thank you.

I rise to offer my contribution to The Public Management and Finance Bill, 2001. There is not much more to say on this very important piece of legislation. I have not seen where a Bill has drawn such scrutiny and the detail with which some of my colleagues have looked at it. I think this is the right way to go. As one of the victims of the old system for over six years and on Executive Council, I personally welcome this legislation changing from 'business as usual', and improving the way Government runs its financial affairs.

I found from my very first budget preparation in 1994, that it was a time of great frustration and an enormous waste of time and money. The Budget was done by junior officers. Then when September, October, November came, senior managers and members of the Budget Committee spent hundreds of hours going back over the Budget cutting out the details. Just last year we saw what happened. It was not just last year, the gap between balancing and what was brought to the Legislative Assembly came to light about three years ago—some $200 million to $300 million. I know the Financial Secretary was sick of my complaining that we needed to do something about the system of preparing our financial budgets for the year. Thank God that this piece of legislation will bring most of that to an end.

My good friend, Mr. Peter Gough, and others spent countless hours dealing with this in Executive Council. It was a process that had to be done and it was all done in a responsible manner and I must take my hat off to the Honourable Financial Secretary. It was always his dream and ambition, and I was pleased to hear the Temporary First Official Member speak on this, and the Deputy Financial Secretary (who is not here today) had many trips overseas to see about the way we were doing business here in Cayman. From back in 1996, everyone had concluded that the way we were going could not continue.

I am pleased to see in Clause 14(3)(c); “entire public sector borrowing should not exceed an amount for which the sum of interest, other debt servicing expenses, and principal repayments for a financial year are more than ten percent of entire public sector revenue (calculated using generally accepted accounting practice) for that financial year.” In Clause 14(d) “cash reserves should be maintained at a level no less than the estimated executive expenses (measured using generally accepted accounting practice) for the following ninety days.” When we see what is happening around us, this will be a challenge. However, over a period of time (as most of this will not come into effect until 2005), we will have time to work on this.

Some comments have been made about roads and capital works and as a Member of the last Government, I have no apologies. In my district of Bodden Town we had great separation from 1984, before and after, and some Members of this House may wonder why I feel so angry about it, but the district of Bodden Town was totally ignored.

As a matter of fact, one former Minister made the comment that as long as he was in the House Bodden Town would not get so much as a pothole fixed. This was certainly held up. I am pleased at the amount of roadwork we have done in these Islands. I feel good when I drive from West Bay to East End and know East End is not yet finished, but when I know the deplorable condition the roads were in.... I have heard Members talk about the amount of money we spent on the hospital. However, I know that my colleague from Bodden Town, the Second Elected Member for Bodden Town, will tell this House about the time his mother had to sit on a gurney in one of the hallways. Yes, we spent money. However, we can see the tangible leftovers of where this money went. It was not spent on some fancy scheme that the people of these Islands cannot enjoy.

As a member of the Public Accounts Committee, I would like to say that I have full confidence in the chairman we have. There is no question in my mind that he has done and will do an excellent job. There is no worry. We know there is no party system here in Cayman. It may have been suggested that the chairman of the Public Accounts Committee should be the Leader of the Opposition. However, in my working with the gentleman, I have found him to be of the highest integrity.

In closing, it would be remiss of me (and I beg for your patience) not to comment on a couple of articles that appears last week, one in the Caymanian Compass, in regard to the MRCU being out of spray, and the circular from the Treasury Department.

I know as a Back Bench Member that it is not within my ambit to comment on some of these things, but with all that is going on around us today, we need to be very careful. The circular from the Treasury Department is extending the pay date three to four working days, from the 24th to the 31st. I would have personally preferred an emergency meeting of Finance Committee to deal with this. We have to be careful about the message we are sending to the public and to investors, and being out of money for the spray for MRCU, which is something we desperately need and must have if we want to promote the development of tourism and other areas within our economy.

We do not have to be prophets of doom, when some Members of the Cabinet talk about the dire straits we are in financially. We know we are in a difficult time, but when you look at what regrettably transpired in the United States over the last two weeks, the leadership there talks about encouragement. They know things are rough; we know things are rough here. However, I would urge that we be more careful about the way we talk about the financial situation here in Cayman. The last thing we need is for the public to get scared and lose confidence.

I support this Bill. People might ask me why as a former Minister we did not bring it. I personally supported it and this Government is now bringing it. All I have to say is that he who knows how to do right and do it not, is a sinner. There are certain difficulties we will experience with this because of constitutional responsibilities.

I am pleased that Mr. Tony Dale sat down to try to make what we have here work within the Cayman Islands framework. I thank him and his team that has brought us thus far. My hat is off to the Honourable Third Official Member who has stuck with this through thick and thin and sat with me for hours on end over the last five or six years listening to my complaints about changing the system. Congratulations, Mr. Third Official Member. Well done!

The Third Elected Member for West Bay.

Capt. A. Eugene Ebanks: I too rise to offer my short contribution to this very important Bill. For far too long the public and government have realised the necessity of such a Bill, especially Clauses 30 and 42 which deal with the performance and output delivery. These have been topics of many, many people for far too long. It is about time the public got the best value for money spent.

I say short contribution because there are very few things that can be said that have not already been said. However, taking into account your mention of repetition, Mr. Speaker—not that I would be one to do that—I just want to thank all the drafts people and the Financial Secretary and all the Members who supported this Bill. I think it is timely and I too would like to support this Bill. Thank you.

The Speaker: It is now 4.15. Rather than expect the Honourable Third Official Member to start his reply, I would entertain a motion for the adjournment of this Honourable House.

The Honourable Minister for Health and Information Technology.

ADJOURNMENT

Hon. Linford A. Pierson: Mr. Speaker, I move the adjournment of this Honourable House until 10 o'clock am Wednesday.

The Speaker: The question is that this Honourable House do now adjourn until 10 o'clock am Wednesday. Those in favour, please say Aye. Those against, No.

AYES.

The Speaker: The Ayes have it.

OFFICIAL HANSARD REPORT
WEDNESDAY
26 SEPTEMBER 2001
10.30 AM
Tenth Sitting

The Speaker: Good morning. I will invite the Third Elected Member for Bodden Town to say prayers.

PRAYERS

Mr. Anthony S. Eden: Let us pray:

Almighty God, from whom all wisdom and power are derived: We beseech Thee so to direct and prosper the deliberations of the Legislative Assembly now assembled, that all things may be ordered upon the best and surest foundations for the glory of Thy Name and for the safety, honour and welfare of the people of these Islands.

Bless our Sovereign Lady Queen Elizabeth II, the Queen Mother, Philip Duke of Edinburgh, Charles Prince of Wales, and all the Royal family. Give grace to all who exercise authority in our Commonwealth, that peace and happiness, truth and justice, religion and piety may be established among us. Especially we pray for the Governor of our Islands, the Speaker of the Legislative Assembly, Official Members and Ministers of Executive Council and Members of the Legislative Assembly, that we may be enabled faithfully to perform the responsible duties of our high office.

All this we ask for Thy great Name's sake.

Let us say the Lord's Prayer together:

Our Father, who art in Heaven, Hallowed be Thy Name. Thy Kingdom come, Thy will be done on earth as it is in Heaven. Give us this day our daily bread, and forgive us our trespasses, as we forgive those who trespass against us. Lead us not into temptation, but deliver us from evil. For Thine is the Kingdom, the power and the glory, forever and ever. Amen.

Proceedings resumed at 10.32 am

The Speaker: Please be seated.
Proceedings are resumed.

READING BY THE HONOURABLE
SPEAKER OF MESSAGES
AND ANNOUNCEMENTS

APOLOGIES

The Speaker: I have received apologies for absence from the Honourable First and Second Official Members and the Honourable Minister responsible for Community Development, Women's Affairs, Youth and Sports, who are off the Island; and apologies for late attendance from the Second Elected Member for West Bay, the Third Elected Member for West Bay and from the Fourth Elected Member for West Bay.

Moving on to Government Business, Second Readings, continuation of debate on The Public Management and Finance Bill, 2001.

SECOND READINGS

THE PUBLIC MANAGEMENT AND FINANCE
BILL, 2001

(Continuation of debate thereon)

Hon. George A. McCarthy: Thank you.

I would like to thank Members for the contributions and constructive comments. It is very clear to the Government that Members recognise the importance of this Bill to good governance and the future of the Cayman Islands. I would like to respond to some of the comments and questions raised during the debate.

The first issue is the importance of managing the change carefully. The Government is conscious that people are often frightened of change and as a consequence, resistant to it. The implementation timeline for the reform has been put together with this in mind.

While Government would like the reform to progress as quickly as possible, this needs to be balanced with the ability of both the civil service and the Legislature to adapt to the new system and to develop the skills and capability necessary. Government is confident that the timeline makes the appropriate balance in this regard.

It is true that the Bill will require a total change in management culture and that this will be a significant challenge for the civil service as a whole. However, the change process has been underway for quite some time and quite a lot of work has already been done. This includes the specification of outputs, the development of initial outputs costing systems, the initial preparation of asset registers and the preliminary work on modifying our ORACLE Financial Accounting Software. I am sure the enactment of this Bill will provide added impetus to this work.

There are a number of specific changes that will be required over the implementation period. These include the move to output budgeting, the move to accrual accounting, the change of balance date and the transition from the existing Law to the new Law. Each of these changes will have its own challenge and will have to be managed well.

To ensure that this happens, a detailed implementation strategy has been developed. This identifies all the changes required and defines the critical part. In addition, a project team has been established to manage the implementation. This is overseen by a steering committee called the Financial Reform Team, or FRT. Elected Members of Executive Council and Members of the Legislative Assembly are both represented on this steering committee.

The project team has prepared a comprehensive training plan for the civil service for the duration of the implementation. Initial training on accrual accounting is already underway. This is but one of the ways in which the skills and capability of the civil service will be developed.

The second issue I would like to comment on relates to the principles of financial management. I share the views Members expressed as to the importance of the principles. In fact, I consider them to be one of the more important aspects of the Bill.

The Government is aware that it will take some time to transit from our current financial position to that required by the principles and it is for this reason that Clause 79 of the Bill provides a timeline of approximately eight years for the transition. Even that timeline is going to be quite challenging.

A third general issue Members raised, relate to the delegation of input authorities to 'Chief Officers' in Clause 39. As Members have noted, this is an essential part of the reform and is absolutely necessary if we are going to be able to hold Chief Officers responsible for output delivery. I would like to reassure Members that this delegation of authority has been carefully defined so that adequate control and priority are maintained. This has been done in a number of ways including, the important distinction between the Executive and entity resources. This will mean that only those assets that the ministry or portfolio uses for its output production will be controlled by the Chief Officer.

Major government assets such as Crown land, roads and most buildings will be controlled by Executive Council and the Legislative Assembly as at present.

Members also raised some specific concerns that I would like to comment on. The first of these relates to the abilities of ministries and portfolios to set fees for outputs they provide to the public. While the Bill will allow agencies to retain this income; if it is entity revenue, there is nothing in the Bill to override existing Laws or regulations that deal with fee setting. Therefore, the legislature will still be able to control the level of user fees through these legislative mechanisms. It will be up to this Honourable House to decide in which cases it is appropriate for it to do so.

A second specific issue raised by Members was whether Clause 12 is still necessary with the change in balance date. Clause 12 provides authority for the Legislative Assembly to authorise expenditure by resolution in advance of appropriation. The Government considers that this Clause is an important power of the Legislative Assembly that is required no matter what the balance date is.

While the equivalent provision in the existing Law has most commonly been used in an election year, it is easy to envisage other circumstances when this House might want to avail itself of the provision. For example, if a national or international disaster occurs while the budget is being considered and the House decide to adjourn before enacting the Appropriation Bill.

I would also like to clarify the position regarding the issuing of financial regulations. The Bill vests this power in the Financial Secretary. This is a continuation of the existing practice under the current Public Finance and Audit Law. I would note that the powers to make financial regulations under the Bill are more restrictive than under the existing Law.

I should further point out that in circumstances where regulations are required to be issued by the Financial Secretary; they are normally done after they are submitted to Executive Council and carefully considered. Members of the Legislative Assembly are also briefed as to what the regulations are about.

In relation to the power of delegation granted to the Financial Secretary in Clause 33, the authority in this regard has always been unclear under the existing Public Finance and Audit Law. The Government's view is that this authority should be made explicit. The extent of the delegation authority reflects current practice and the need for flexibility.

Some concern has been raised about the office of the Governor being exempt from the budgeting and reporting requirements of the Bill. This is not the case. While separate reports are not prepared, the outputs and ownership performance of the office of the Governor are to be included in the performance agreement and reports of the Portfolio of Internal and External Affairs. This will allow this House the opportunity to scrutinise the expenditure relating to the Governor's office.

Another issue raised was in relation to the investment powers of the Financial Secretary in relation to trust assets. The Government acknowledges this concern and committee stage amendment number 3 amends section 71 so that the investment powers are limited to bank deposits.

The Government also acknowledges the need to clarify the powers under the Bill to request information from Members of Executive Council. Committee stage amendment number 2 addresses this. I am grateful to the Members of this House that drew this to my attention.

I am also grateful to Members for their attention to the details of the Bill and committee stage amendment number 4, contains a number of changes designed to clarify potential uncertainties raised by Honourable Members during the debate. I should also point out that this takes into account a number of the issues raised by the First Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman.

When I introduced the Bill, I commented that the Bill was the result of an extensive collaborative effort by a wide group of Members of the Legislative Assembly, Members of Executive Council and the civil service. I would like to take this opportunity to recognise some of the persons who have made significant input at this time.

I would like to begin by acknowledging members of this House who pushed for and supported this reform over a number of years, particularly the First Elected Member for George Town, the Honourable Kurt Tibbetts; the First Elected Member for Bodden Town, the Honourable Roy Bodden; The Second Elected Member for Bodden Town, Mr. Gilbert McLean; and the Third Elected Member for Bodden Town, Mr. Anthony Eden, when a Member of Executive Council; and the Honourable Acting Temporary First Official Member responsible for Internal and External Affairs, Honourable Donovan Ebanks.

Secondly, I would like to recognise the contribution made by Honourable Ruth Richardson who visited the Cayman Islands in 1998 to discuss with us the implications of this reform and also the work of Mr. Tony Dale our consultant who has been visiting us since the beginning of this reform initiative.

Thirdly, I would like to recognise a wide group of civil servants who contributed to the design of the reform and the development of the legislation. These civil servants have had a very positive impact on the legislation we have in front of us today. I will start by recognising the Deputy Financial Secretary, Mr. Joel Walton; the Assistant Financial Secretary, Miss Deborah Drummond; the Assistant Financial Secretary, Mr. Ken Jefferson; the Accountant General, Mrs. Sonia McLaughlin; the Chief Accountant, Mrs. Deborah Welcome; the Director of Budget and Management Services, Mr. Peter Gough, who was also the chair of the legislative subgroup for the reform; the late Richard Roberts, the previous director of Internal Audit; Mrs. Ann Owens, the current director of the Audit Unit; the FMI Project Manager, Mr. Marco Archer and his team; Mr. Lee Ramoon; Miss Sonia Hunt, Mr. Kenrick Ebanks, Miss Natalie Curtis, and Miss Anita Lansell; the Auditor General, Mr. Nigel Esdaile, and his audit manager, Mr. Terrance Outar; the PS of Health and Information Technology, Miss Andrea Bryan; and I would also like to mention Mr. Kearney Gomez who has been very supportive as well, the Chief Engineer of PWD, Mr. Colford Scott, and recognition must be given for the laborious efforts expended on the Bill and also the several amendments to the first Legislative Counsel, Mrs. Myrtle Brandt.

Finally, I would like to recognise my colleagues on the financial reform team for the work they have done over the years and will continue to do in the future.

Thank you.

The Clerk: The Exempted Limited Partnership (Amendment) Bill, 2001.

The Speaker: The Honourable Third Official Member.

Hon. George A. McCarthy: I beg to move the Second Reading of a Bill entitled The Exempted Limited Partnership (Amendment) Bill, 2001.

The Speaker: Do you wish to speak to it?

Hon. George A. McCarthy: Thank you.

This Bill amends the Exempted Limited Partnership Law, 2001, by introducing an express fee for the expedited processing of applications made under the Law.

The express fee is for the registration or application services provided by the Registry by the end of the working day where the application and all fees are received by 12 noon or by 12 noon on the following day where the application and all fees are received after 12 noon.

The express fee for registration of an exempt limited partnership or limited partnership is $400. The express fee for any certificate requested is $25. These fees are in addition to the normal fee where the express service is desired by the applicant.

The express service has been well received by the Registry clients. Therefore, this Bill validates the making of the increase charges prescribed in the Bill as the charges were put into operation by the General Registry who were under the impression that they had been introduced by the Finance Law (1998). Thank you.

This Bill amends The Partnership Law (1995R) by introducing an express fee expedited processing of applications made under the Law.

The express fee is for the registration and certification services provided by the Registry by the end of the working day where the application and all fees are received by 12 noon or by 12 noon on the following day where the application and all fees are received after 12 noon.

The express fee of partnership is $400. The express fee for any certificate requested is $25. These fees are in addition to the normal fee where the express service is desired by the applicant.

The express service has been well received by the Registry since its introduction. Thank you.

THE HEALTH INSURANCE (AMENDMENT) BILL 2001

The Clerk: The Health Insurance (Amendment) Bill, 2001.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for Health and Information Technology.

Hon. Linford A. Pierson: I beg to move the Second Reading of a Bill entitled The Health Insurance (Amendment) Bill, 2001.

The Speaker: Do you wish to speak to it?

Hon. Linford A. Pierson: Thank you.

It is proposed that the Health Insurance Law, 1997, and the consequential changes to the Regulations be amended. The intent is to remove from the Regulations the exhaustive procedures for the Director of Health Services to draw down on the segregated fund to cover expenses incurred by the Health Services Department in providing medical treatment to uninsurable and partially uninsurable indigent persons.

For clarity and information, The Health Insurance Law, 1997, defines an indigent person as “one who in the opinion of the Minister for the time being responsible for Social Services acting on the advice of the Director of Social Services, is unable by reason of inadequate financial resources to pay for medical services.”

You will see there is a very fine line between the definition of indigent uninsurable person, and indeed an indigent person, the definition of an indigent person being, “one who in the opinion of the Minister for the time being responsible for Social Services acting on the advice of the Director of Social Services is unable by reason of inadequate financial resources to pay for health insurance or medical services.”

Though there is a fine line there, a number of problems have been found in being able to obtain funds from the segregated fund. Just to give an example, the present procedure involves the following circuitous steps:

1) The department has to provide evidence that two approved providers of health insurance have partially insured the person or have altogether refused to insure the person;

2) The Director of Social Services advises the Minister responsible for Social Services that such persons are indigent;

3) The Minister responsible for Social Services confirms in writing to the administrator of the fund, at present the Superintendent of Health Insurance the indigent status of the person;

4) The Director of Health Services submits an insurance claim to the fund administrator for reimbursement. This is limited to benefits provided for under standard health insurance contract; and

5) The fund administrator pays the amount of the approved claim to the Director of Health Services who deposits the payment into General Revenue.

You can see there is a very complicated and circuitous route that this amendment seeks to correct.

The proposed amendment to the Law and Regulations, is to make the fund applicable to all indigent persons so that we do not have the problem of whether the person is an indigent uninsurable person or otherwise. The fund will be available to all indigent persons who receive medical treatment through the Government's health care facilities including referral by the Chief Medical Officer to private providers of health care in the Cayman Islands and/or overseas.

The amendment will simplify the process by authorising the fund administrator, upon the commencement of the amended regulation to disburse to the Director of Health Services, all of the monies collected and the administrator, shall thereafter at the end of each month disburse all such monies to the Director of Health Services Department for the purpose of defraying the medical cost accrued by the Government on behalf of indigent persons.

The immediate effect, after the proposed amendments are approved by the Legislative Assembly, is that approximately $4 million will be paid into the Treasury Department during this financial year 2001. These are funds that have accumulated since the Law came into effect in January 1998. The current complex procedures have prevented these funds being used to offset Government's expenditure on indigent persons.

The Auditor General and the Superintendent of Health Insurance have been consulted and they both support the proposed amendment. Members of this Honourable House are therefore requested to approve the proposed Health Insurance (Amendment) Bill, 2001, and the proposed Health Insurance (Amendment) Regulation, 2001. Thank you.

The Speaker: The question is that a Bill entitled The Health Insurance (Amendment) Bill, 2001 be given a second reading. The Motion is open for debate.

The Second Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman.

Mr. Lyndon L. Martin: Thank you.

I want to thank the Honourable Minister responsible for Health for bringing the Bill at this time. I truly appreciate the difficulties that have been faced by the Health Services Department that has been carrying out services to those indigent individuals without being compensated.

As a result of a motion passed earlier this year in this Legislative Assembly, and the coinciding efforts by the Minister and the ministry, there has been an ongoing review of the Health Insurance Law of the Cayman Islands and a Select Committee has been formed. This particular issue has been noted as one of concern, and the ideal way of handling it would have been to encompass it under the review. However, I appreciate the need to have it resolved so that the funds, which are part of the 2001 budget, are able to be released to the Treasury.

I would not want the need for expedience to in any way impair the need for a long term solution. It is my opinion that the current procedure in which all insured individuals contribute part of their premium into a fund to cover the indigent is not the optimal way of handling this situation. It allows the insurance companies, which are risk balancers, to only insure those individuals in the community which are of a low risk situation.

The Law intended for the Health Services to bill the fund for the cost of services they rendered to particular individuals fitting the description of indigent, uninsurable individuals. However, this amendment assumes that the entire sum that has accumulated in the fund will be handed over, not necessarily on a case by case basis, not necessarily only on the cost of the services provided. The assumption I will have to make is that the fund is less than the total cost of the services provided by the Health Services Department or by the private practitioners for patients referred. Thus, the fund would only partially offset the cost.

However, I think in legislating we should be specific and where it is on a billed system, where the provider would bill for the services provided that would be covered under the remit of this fund. We could have a situation where the fund is accumulated to an amount greater than the cost of the service provided. We would not want to have an open-end ticket for the Government to draw the entire amount of the fund without consideration for the cost of the service provided, given the description of those covered under the fund.

It is also my opinion that Government should develop a master list of indigent individuals prepared by the Social Services Department and used as the master list, from which all related services are drawn, to ensure consistency in how we determine an individual's status as indigent. This would prevent the current type of system where Social Services use one means test and the Health Services uses another, and Education uses another. A standardised system of determining an individual need for government's intervention in providing transfer payments or other social assistance would ensure consistency.

I truly support the Minister in his statement that it is a very cumbersome, time consuming and difficult procedure to claim the funds under the current Law. I am prepared to support the Bill for a Law to amend The Health Insurance Law, 1997, in order to change the Law relating to the provision of health care to indigent persons and for the incidental and connected purposes. I am hoping he will take on board my concern; that the procedure under which the Health Services Department can claim under the funds should be on the basis of the cost of the service provided. That would be invoiced to the administrator of the fund, not on a blanket arrangement where the total balance of the fund will be handed over to the Health Service Authority. Thank you.

The Speaker: Does any Member wish to speak? (Pause) The Motion is open for debate. Does any other Member wish to speak?

The Second Elected Member for Bodden Town.

Mr. Gilbert A. McLean: I rise to support a Bill entitled The Health Insurance (Amendment) Bill, 2001. It is clear that the Minister in administering this Law has run into a problem with the definitions, which the amendment corrects.

I would like to echo the concerns of the Second Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman, that there should be a means test to determine the indigent persons in our society. It should be a master list used by all agencies of government. I understand that at present there are about three in use. I would also like to suggest that Social Services would ideally be the best of these entities to make this list and to make the determination as to the means of persons involved.

In my opinion it makes sense to implement anything that can be done to speed up the process and make it workable for the Health Services Department (that has to deliver health services) and the persons receiving the services. The Select Committee has started dealing with health insurance, so it is an ideal time for all areas to be looked at. Indeed, I have been encouraged by the level of deliberation that has gone on already in the Select Committee, already called for by the Minister. I believe it will continue, as it appears to be a concern of all Members to resolve this matter quickly.

I think a considerable call on Government's finances right now is via the area of providing health services. The sooner we can find a workable solution to this situation, the better it will be. Surely we need to work on this Health Insurance Law. However, I think this amendment needs to be done now to correct the situation. I give it my support.

The Speaker: Does any other Member wish to speak? (Pause) Does any other Member wish to speak? (Pause)

If not, does the Mover care to exercise his right of reply?

The Honourable Minister for Health and Information Technology.

Hon. Linford A. Pierson: I would like to thank the Second Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman for his very sage remarks and important input. I would also like to thank the Second Elected Member for Bodden Town, and all others who, by their tacit support, have given a stamp of approval to this amendment.

Before I deal with some of the points raised, I would like to say that today I have asked the Clerk — to the Select Committee studying the Health Insurance Law— to circulate to all Members of the House a Report that I had done for my ministry on Health Insurance and Health Fees Advisory Committee. This Report will inform the process and deliberations in the select committee.

Even though we have been working hard in Select Committee during the period we have been sitting, I have also had my technical people looking into the matter of health insurance and fees, indeed it is a very wide subject.

Under the Health Insurance and Health Fees Advisory Committee, I have set up four subcommittees that deal specifically with specialised areas. These subcommittees are the Health Insurance Self-funded Scheme Subcommittee; the Review of Health Services Fees Subcommittee; the Health Services Collections Subcommittee; and the Health Insurance Law and Regulations Subcommittee.

I believe the information contained in these various reports will answer a number of the questions that have been raised. Even though I am not proposing to table the document at this point in time, I have made it available to each Member to provide information on the process and provide for the thinking of Members once we meet again in the Select Committee.

There have been some major recommendations that have emanated from the four subcommittees, including: 1) that Government should ensure the establishment of the necessary cost control and cost containment mechanisms into the self-funded health insurance programme being proposed, and that it should also be in a position to collect sophisticated and reliable statistics. The lack of reliable statistics is a matter of grave concern.

2) To appoint a consultant, preferably a company not presently involved in the local insurance industry, to assist with policy preparation, to establish the reporting format to be used by the third party administrator and to assist in the tender process.

This is just to inform the House as to what is being done about the whole question of health insurance, even though I fully appreciate that the recommendation is dealing with an amendment to uninsurable indigents. Since the debate on this covered other areas, I thought it would be helpful and informative if I explained some of the work that has already commenced in dealing with this issue.

3) To introduce claims, diagnosis and treatment codes in the Government healthcare facilities. It is presently estimated that the health fees at the hospital could be some 30 percent less than in the private sector. We will be adopting a code similar to that used in Miami, but appropriate to the Cayman Islands, where we will use perhaps a 75 percentile of that amount and be applying this to a proper set of codes called CPT codes. When the patient walks into the hospital or private clinic he will have a fair idea of how much he has to pay for a particular service. This will discourage the private sector providers from charging a much higher sum than what they should be charging within that specific code.

We will also implement a charge structure that provides the flexibility to keep pace with the rapidly changing field of medicine. The new charge structure must be routinely updated to take into account new services and those services currently charged for. Additionally, we will ensure that the new fees structure is established at a level that provides sufficient revenue to support operations and allows for funding of care for indigents.

I wish to also inform the House that just within the past few weeks, I have commissioned the setting up of a Health Services Authority. We recognise that the standards of efficiency need to be improved. This is not to say that we do not have some very hard-working staff at the hospital. However, some of them need some guidance which we will provide. We are hoping that with the introduction of a Health Services Authority the medical department will be run in a more businesslike manner.

I know this will present some difficulties for some Members of this House because we will find that business will not be done as usual, once the Health Services Authority is introduced. We will attempt to avoid the situation we currently have where there is some $50 million owed to government. The only way the hospital can run properly is if we tighten up the efficiency in the department.

We have found cases where we do not even have addresses for some foreign patients we have treated. At present, we have some 25,000 outstanding accounts that comprise the $50 million. This is not to say that in certain cases these accounts are not being addressed or put on a loan basis and being paid off. However, they are few and far apart. If we had to look at those accounts tomorrow, it is very doubtful that we could obtain maybe more than 20 percent. We are looking at effectively writing off a huge and substantial amount of money. This cannot be allowed to continue. We have to tighten up the system. This is precisely what we will be doing and hopefully in the Select Committee Members will pay very close attention to the recommendations in this Report.

There are a number of very good recommendations. However, as I am not tabling this, I will not read any more. It was just to give an idea of some of the issues being addressed in this Report and that will be discussed in the Select Committee.

On the question of fees being paid into the segregated account and a carte blanche situation where the hospital receives all of it, that is not the system being applied. The amounts received will be supported by the proper statements. I really do not think the Member has to worry about that because since the segregated fund was established in 1998, we have a total of approximately $4 million. If the Member looks at the amount we have accumulated in outstanding hospital fees since 1 January 1998, he will see it is substantially more. I do not think there will be a problem. However, I will take his suggestion under consideration and will discuss this matter further with the Chairman of the Advisory Committee.

I believe those were the main issues raised and it only remains for me to thank Members for their support of this most important amendment Bill.

The Speaker: The question is that a Bill entitled The Health Insurance (Amendment) Bill, 2001 be given a second reading. If there is no debate, those in favour please say Aye. Those against, No.

AYES.

The Speaker: The Ayes have it.

AGREED: THE HEALTH INSURANCE (AMENDMENT) BILL, 2001 GIVEN A SECOND READING.

The Speaker: Bills, Second Reading.

THE COMPANIES (AMENDMENT) BILL, 2001

The Clerk: The Companies (Amendment) Bill, 2001.

The Speaker: The Third Official Member.

Hon. George A. McCarthy: I beg to move the Second Reading of a Bill entitled The Companies (Amendment) Bill, 2001.

The Speaker: Do you wish to speak to it?

Hon. George A. McCarthy: The purpose of this amendment is twofold: first, it seeks to rectify inadvertent omissions from the Finance Law (1998) and to validate the associated fees levied by the General Registry since 1 January 1999. In this case, the fees involved are 1) a reduction from $470 to $350 in registration fees for a resident company with a capital exceeding $42,000; and 2) the removal of the $10 fee for a change of name in Section 31 of the Companies Law so that it is chargeable at the same rate as other similar services under Section 219 of that Law.

Second, the amendment seeks to remove an anomaly in the Companies Law, being Section 168(3). Section 168(3) purports to deal with fraudulent preferences in the form of transfer of assets out of the reach of all except selected creditors. It is a vestige of the 19th century English Law which has been superseded in the UK by the more modern provisions of the Insolvency Act 1986. Similarly, in the Cayman Islands, the Fraudulent Dispositions Law introduced in 1989 supersedes the provision of Section 168(3). The defect in Section 168(3) is that it is too broad and catches perfectly normal and legitimate transactions in particular securitisations where an inherent feature is a transfer of assets that Section 168(3) prohibits.

Section 168(3) is therefore being repealed on the basis that it is defunct and dysfunctional. However, by virtue of Clause 5(4) of the Bill, the application of the Fraudulent Dispositions Law (1996 R) and any other relevant Law is expressly maintained to continue proper cover in respect of fraudulent transfer of assets.

I commend this Bill to this House.

The Speaker: The question is that a Bill entitled The Companies (Amendment) Bill, 2001 be given a second reading. Does any other Member wish to speak? (Pause) Does any other Member wish to speak? (Pause)

If not, does the Mover care to exercise his right of reply?

Hon. George A. McCarthy: Just to say thanks to Members for their tacit support.

The Speaker: The question is that a Bill entitled The Companies (Amendment) Bill, 2001 be given a second reading. If there is no debate, those in favour please say Aye. Those against, No.

AYES.

The Speaker: The Ayes have it.

AGREED: THE COMPANIES (AMENDMENT) BILL, 2001 GIVEN A SECOND READING.

The Speaker: We shall suspend for 15 minutes.

PROCEEDINGS SUSPENDED AT 11.32 AM

PROCEEDINGS RESUMED AT 12.08 PM

The Speaker: Please be seated.

The House will now go into committee to discuss a Bill entitled The Legal Practitioners (Amendment) Bill, 2001, and six other Bills.

HOUSE IN COMMITTEE AT 12.10 PM

COMMITTEE ON BILLS

The Chairman: The House is now in Committee. With the leave of the House, may I assume that as usual we should authorise the Second Official Member to correct minor printing errors and such like in these Bills?

Would the Clerk state each Bill and read its clauses?

THE LEGAL PRACTITIONERS (AMENDMENT) BILL, 2001

The Clerk: The Legal Practitioners (Amendment) Bill, 2001.

| Clause 2. | Amendment of section 3 (1) of the Legal Practitioners Law (1999R)—Admission of Barristers, Solicitors and others to practise as attorneys at Law. |
| Clause 3. | Repeal of section 18 and substitution—Legal Advisory Council.                                                                                     |

The Chairman: The question is that Clauses 1 through 3 do stand part of the Bill. If there is no debate, those in favour please say Aye. Those against, No.

AYES.

The Chairman: The Ayes have it.

CLAUSES 1 THROUGH 3 PASSED.

The Chairman: The Honourable Second Official Member.

Hon. David F. Ballantyne: There is a committee stage amendment to Clause 4 of the Bill. The principal Law is amended in Section 14(a) by inserting after the word “chambers” the words “or of a person instructed by or on behalf of the Attorney-General to appear for the Attorney General in any cause” or matter and who possesses the prescribed qualification.”

As I think I already explained to the House, this is to make express provision for the right of audience on the part of an attorney or council instructed by or on behalf of the Attorney-General in any cause or matter and who possesses the prescribed qualification. It is simply to make clear that any such person, in addition to any person from the public office of the Attorney General, may have audience in the courts of the Cayman Islands. I understand it has the support of the Judiciary and the Chief Justice, in particular, who has written to me on it and I do not believe it is contentious. Thank you.

The Clerk: New Clause 4. Amendment of section 14—Savings.

The Chairman: The question is that new Clause 4 do stand part of the Bill. If there is no debate, those in favour please say Aye. Those against, No.

AYES.

The Chairman: The Ayes have it.

NEW CLAUSE 4 PASSED.

The Clerk: A Bill for a Law to amend The Legal Practitioners Law (1999R) to change the qualifications required to practice Law in the Cayman Islands, to change the membership of the Legal Advisory Council, and for incidental purposes.

The Chairman: The question is that the Title do stand part of the Bill. If there is no debate, those in favour please say Aye. Those against, No.

AYES.

The Chairman: The Ayes have it.

TITLE PASSED.

THE STAMP DUTY (AMENDMENT) (NO. 2)
BILL, 2001

The Deputy Clerk: The Stamp Duty (Amendment) (No. 2) Bill, 2001.

Clause 1. Short title.

The Chairman: The question is that Clause 1 do stand part of the Bill. If there is no debate, those in favour please say Aye. Those against, No.

AYES.

The Chairman: The Ayes have it.

CLAUSE 1 PASSED.

The Clerk: Clause 2. Amendment of the Schedule of the Stamp Duty Law, (2001R).

The Chairman: I think we have an amendment to Clause 2.

Hon. George A. McCarthy: Yes, and in addition to the amendment that has been circulated, I would like to propose that the wording of the title be amended to remove the reference to “timeshares.”

Therefore, in accordance with Standing Order 52(1) & (2), I give notice to move the following amendment: That the long title of the Bill be amended by deleting the words “to repeal the stamp duty on documents relating to the grant, assignment or transfer of time shares”; and that the Bill be amended in Clause 2 by repealing paragraph (c).

I would also like to move that the semicolon after “timeshares” in the Title be removed as well.

The Chairman: The question is that Clause 2 be amended. Those in favour please say Aye. Those against No.

AYES.

The Chairman: The Ayes have it.

AMENDMENT TO CLAUSE 2 PASSED.

The Chairman: The question is that Clause 2 as amended do stand part of the Bill. If there is no debate, those in favour please say Aye. Those against, No.

AYES.

The Chairman: The Ayes have it.

CLAUSE 2, AS AMENDED, PASSED.

The Chairman: The Third Official Member, you moved the amendment to the Title, however, I would ask that you do it again.

Hon. George A. McCarthy: In accordance with Standing Order 52(1) & (2), I give notice to move the following amendment: That the long title of the Bill be amended by deleting the words “to repeal the stamp duty on documents relating to the grant, assignment or transfer of time shares”; and deletion of the semicolon after “timeshares” in the Title as well.

The Chairman: The question is that the amendment to the Title do stand part of the Bill. If there is no debate, those in favour please say Aye. Those against, No.

AYES.

The Chairman: The Ayes have it.

AMENDMENT TO TITLE PASSED.

The Clerk: A Bill for a Law to amend the Stamp Duty (2001R) to correct errors in the Schedule and for incidental and connected purposes.

The Chairman: The question is that the Title as amended do stand part of the Bill. If there is no debate, those in favour please say Aye. Those against, No.

AYES.

The Chairman: The Ayes have it.

TITLE AS AMENDED PASSED.

THE PUBLIC MANAGEMENT AND FINANCE
BILL, 2001

The Clerk: The Public Management and Finance Bill, 2001.

Clause 1. Short title.

The Chairman: The question is that Clause 1 do stand part of the Bill. If there is no debate, those in favour please say Aye. Those against, No.

AYES.

The Chairman: The Ayes have it.

CLAUSE 1 PASSED.

The Clerk: Clause 2. Commencement.

The Chairman: There is an amendment to Clause 2.

Hon. George A. McCarthy: In accordance with Standing Order 52(1) & (2), I give notice to move the following amendment to The Public Management and Finance Bill 2001, be amended by: (a) deleting clause 2 and substituting the following clause 2(1) “Commencement. 2. (1) Subject to subsections (2), (3) and (4), this Law shall come into force on 1 January, 2002.*”

“(2) Parts II, III, IV, V, VI and VII (other than sections 59(e), 63(3), 64, 67(1) (a) (ii), 67(1) (c), 67(2) and 67(3)), and sections 69, 70, 71, 72 and 73 do not apply to, or require any action by the Legislative Assembly, Executive Council, a Minister or Official Member, the Financial Secretary, a Ministry or Portfolio or its Chief Officer, a Statutory Authority or Government Company or its Board, the Portfolio of Finance and Economic Development or its Chief Officer, the Auditor-General or the Audit Office, or any other person in respect of any financial year commencing before 1 July, 2004.

“(3) Sections 39, 41(3) and (4), and 53(i) shall come into force on 1 July, 2005.

“(4) Sections 59(e), 63(3), 64, 67(1)(a) (ii), 67(1)(c), 67(2) and 67(3) shall come into force on the date that this Law is passed by the Legislative Assembly.”

The Chairman: The question is that the amendment to Clause 2 do stand part of the Bill.

The Elected Member for East End.

Mr. V. Arden McLean: In Clause 2, Section (3), I just wonder if it should be Section 39, 41(3) and (4) and 53(i) as opposed to 1 (one).

Hon. George A. McCarthy: It should be 53(i).

The Chairman: Any further debate? If not, I shall put the question that the amendment do stand part of the Bill. If there is no debate, those in favour please say Aye. Those against, No.

AYES.

The Chairman: The Ayes have it.

AMENDMENT TO CLAUSE 2 PASSED.

The Chairman: The question is that Clause 2 as amended do stand part of the Bill. If there is no debate, those in favour please say Aye. Those against, No.

AYES.

The Chairman: The Ayes have it.

CLAUSE 2 AS AMENDED PASSED.

The Clerk: Clause 3. Definitions.

The Chairman: There is an amendment.

Hon. George A. McCarthy: In Clause 3, in the definition of the term “chief officer,” by deleting paragraph (b) and substituting the following paragraph – “(b)(i) in the case of the Portfolio of Internal and External Affairs, the Deputy Chief Secretary; (ii) in the case of the Portfolio of Legal Affairs, the Solicitor General; and (iii) in the case of the Portfolio of Finance and Economic Development, the Deputy Financial Secretary;”.

In the definition of the term “financial year” by deleting “31 December” and substituting “30 June.”

By inserting the following definition in its appropriate alphabetical order: “‘public officer’ means any person employed in the Civil Service but does not include any Member of the Executive Council or Legislative Assembly.”

In the definition of the term “borrowing,” by deleting the words “or the obtaining of a cash advance.”

The Chairman: The question is on the three amendments as read to amend Clause 3. The question is open for debate.

No debate? I shall put the question on the three amendments to clause 3. If there is no debate, those in favour please say Aye. Those against, No.

AYES.

The Chairman: The Ayes have it.

AMENDMENTS TO CLAUSE 3 PASSED.

The Chairman: I shall put the question that Clause 3 as amended three times do stand part of the Bill. Those in favour please say Aye. Those against, No.

AYES.

The Chairman: The Ayes have it.

CLAUSE 3 AS AMENDED PASSED.

The Chairman: I am told there are four amendments, so I will have to put the question again. The question is on the four amendments to Clause 3. If there is no debate, those in favour please say Aye. Those against, No.

AYES and One Audible Abstention (Mrs. O'Connor Connolly)

The Chairman: The Ayes have it.

AMENDMENTS TO CLAUSE 3 PASSED.

The Chairman: I shall put the question that Clause 3 as amended four times do stand part of the Bill. Those in favour please say Aye. Those against, No.

AYES and One Audible Abstention (Mrs. O'Connor Connolly)

The Chairman: The Ayes have it.

CLAUSE 3 AS AMENDED PASSED.

The Clerk:

- Clause 4. Meaning of accounting terms.
- Clause 5. Accrual accounting.
- Clause 6. Meaning of controlling interest.

The Chairman: The question is that Clauses 4 through 6 do stand part of the Bill. Those in favour please say Aye. Those against, No.

AYES.

The Chairman: The Ayes have it.

CLAUSES 4 THROUGH 6 PASSED.

The Clerk:

- Clause 7. Law required for changes to coercive revenue.
- Clause 8. Appropriations required for various transactions.
- Clause 9. Resolution required for guarantees.
- Clause 10. Appropriations.
- Clause 11. Permanent appropriations.
- Clause 12. Authorisation in advance of appropriation.

The Chairman: The question is that Clauses 7 through 12 do stand part of the Bill.

The First Elected Member from Cayman Brac and Little Cayman.

Mrs. Julianna Y. O'Connor-Connolly: In relation to Clause 11, I wonder if the Third Official Member can say who would actually be making the permanent appropriation?

The Chairman: The Honourable Third Official Member?

Hon. George A. McCarthy: Permanent appropriations are by virtue of this Law and will be managed in the same way as statutory expenditure.

The Chairman: The First Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman?

Mrs. Julianna Y. O'Connor-Connolly: Thank you. I wonder if he would go on to say at what stage the Legislative Assembly would have an opportunity, if any, to debate, vote, and or comment on the permanent appropriations?

The Chairman: The Honourable Third Official Member?

Hon. George A. McCarthy: That would be part of the budget presentation, just as the provisions for statutory expenditure are now included as part of the budget process, this will continue to be included.

The Chairman: The First Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman?

Mrs. Julianna Y. O'Connor-Connolly: Am I correct in coming to the conclusion that; if it is a statutory entry allocating a permanent appropriation, in fact there would be very little discretion at the budget stage to change that?

The Chairman: The Honourable Third Official Member?

Hon. George A. McCarthy: The amount will be appropriated automatically, pursuant to the legislation itself.

The Chairman: Any further debate? If not, I shall put the question that Clauses 7 through 12 do stand part of the Bill. Those in favour please say Aye. Those against, No.

AYES.

The Chairman: The Ayes have it.

CLAUSES 7 THROUGH 12 PASSED.

The Clerk: Clause 13. Emergency expenditure.

The Chairman: The question is that Clauses 13 do stand part of the Bill. Those in favour please say Aye. Those against No.

AYES.

The Chairman: The Ayes have it.

CLAUSE 13 PASSED.

The Clerk: Clause 14. Responsible financial management.

The Chairman: There is an amendment.
The Honourable Third Official Member?

Hon. George A. McCarthy: In Clause 14(4), by deleting the words "statement laid before the Legislative Assembly" and substituting the words "paper laid before the Legislative Assembly for its information."

The Chairman: The question is that the amendment to Clauses 14 do stand part of the Bill.

The First Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman?

Mrs. Julianna Y. O'Connor-Connolly: Just to convey my thanks to the Third Official Member and his team for taking on board the suggested amendment. I viewed the amendment as significant in that it would allow Members of Parliament to have an opportunity to debate the paper as opposed to being left to short questions.

The Chairman: Any further debate? If not I shall put the question on the amendment to Clause 14. If there is no debate, those in favour please say Aye. Those against, No.

AYES.

The Chairman: The Ayes have it.

AMENDMENT TO CLAUSE 14 PASSED.

The Chairman: The question is that Clause 14 as amended do stand part of the Bill. If there is no debate, those in favour please say Aye. Those against, No.

AYES.

The Chairman: The Ayes have it.

CLAUSE 14 AS AMENDED PASSED.

The Clerk:

Clause 15. Shareholding arrangements for government companies.

Clause 16. Executive Council's power to direct.

The Chairman: The question is that Clause 15 and 16 do stand part of the Bill. If there is no debate, those in favour please say Aye. Those against, No.

AYES.

The Chairman: The Ayes have it.

CLAUSES 15 AND 16 PASSED.

The Chairman: I do not have a quorum. Please call another Member. (pause)

The Clerk: Clause 17. Budget process.

The Chairman: Honourable Third Official Member, there is an amendment?

Hon. George A. McCarthy: In clause 17(1), by deleting "1 April" wherever it appears and substituting "1 October."

The Chairman: The question is that the amendment to Clause 17 do stand part of the Bill. If there is no debate, those in favour please say Aye. Those against, No.

AYES.

The Chairman: The Ayes have it.

AMENDMENT TO CLAUSE 17 PASSED.

The Chairman: The question is that Clause 17 as amended do stand part of the Bill. Those in favour please say Aye. Those against, No.

AYES.

The Chairman: The Ayes have it.

CLAUSE 17 AS AMENDED PASSED.

The Clerk:

- Clause 18. Strategic phase.
- Clause 19. Detailed planning and budgeting phase.
- Clause 20. Executive Council collective review phase.
- Clause 21. Legislative Assembly review phase.
- Clause 22. Documentation phase.

The Chairman: The question is that Clause 18 through 22 do stand part of the Bill. If there is no debate, those in favour please say Aye. Those against, No.

AYES.

The Chairman: The Ayes have it.

CLAUSES 18 THROUGH 22 PASSED.

The Clerk: Clause 23. Strategic policy statement.

The Chairman: There is an amendment.

Hon. George A. McCarthy: In clause 23(1), by deleting "1 June" and substituting "1 December."

The Chairman: The question is that the amendment to Clause 23 do stand part of the Bill.

The First Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman.

Mrs. Julianna Y. O'Connor-Connolly: I was actually trying to catch your eye—not on the amendment, but on the clause in general.

The Chairman: I do not understand.

Mrs. Julianna Y. O'Connor-Connolly: I wanted to make a comment on the general clause itself.

The Chairman: The question is that the amendment to Clause 23 do stand part of the Bill. If there is no debate, those in favour please say Aye. Those against, No.

AYES.

The Chairman: The Ayes have it.

AMENDMENT TO CLAUSE 23 PASSED.

The Chairman: The question is that Clause 23 as amended do stand part of the Bill.

The First Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman.

Mrs. Julianna Y. O'Connor-Connolly: When one reads this, it seems to imply that it is a new concept that seeks to introduce any Member of Executive Council, on a specified date, to do the strategic policy statement. I just wondered if the Member would share the justification as to the deviation from the normal Financial Secretary doing it, or whether any thought was given to limiting it to the Leader of Government Business or Chief Minister, (whatever is in the making), to actually lay such a policy statement before Parliament.

Hon. George A. McCarthy: Since this is a new provision that is being made, it was put into the Bill in this manner to allow Executive Council to make a determination as to whom it would deem appropriate to present the strategic policy statement.

I can go on to say that the strategic policy statement would not only be dealing with financial matters, but would also deal with Government's expected outcomes as well as strategic policies.

The Chairman: The First Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman.

Mrs. Julianna Y. O'Connor-Connolly: Thank you.

Am I also to understand that we will perhaps be hearing the strategic policy statement from different Members of Executive Council, depending on what the consensus is, as opposed to the Leader of Government Business?

The Chairman: The Honourable Third Official Member?

Hon. George A. McCarthy: It is quite likely that once Executive Council takes a decision as to who will present the strategic policy statement, that that precedent will be maintained and not deviated from.

Hon. Linford A. Pierson: Mr. Chairman.

The Chairman: The Honourable Minister of Health and Information Technology.

Hon. Linford A. Pierson: On the question of the strategic policy statement, I believe if we look at 23(2) it states in precise detail what the policy statement will contain. Since 2(8) states a summary of the broad outcomes, specific outcomes and the links between them; the Executive Council intends to achieve those in the next financial year and for at least the following two financial years. Perhaps this is an area that Executive Council by consensus, could decide which Member of Executive Council will deal with this. However, I take the Member's point, that since it is indeed a financial matter, the Financial Secretary would normally be expected to deal with this issue. This is a matter that I believe the Financial Secretary could take under consideration for further discussion within Executive Council.

The Chairman: The First Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman.

Mrs. Julianna Y. O'Connor-Connolly: I wish to thank Mr. Pierson for that further insight, taking it against the background of the proposed modernisation of the Constitution. It would bring much more clarity if the move were toward a Minister of Finance rather than an open-ended position as it is now currently drafted.

The Chairman: Any reply to that?
The Honourable Third Official Member?

Hon. George A. McCarthy: I do not think she was expecting me to reply to that statement.

The Chairman: Any further debate? If not, I shall put the question that Clause 23, as amended, do stand part of the Bill. Those in favour please say Aye. Those against, No.

AYES.

The Chairman: The Ayes have it.

CLAUSE 23 AS AMENDED PASSED.

The Clerk: Clause 24. Annual plan and estimates.

The Chairman: There is an amendment.

Hon. George A. McCarthy: In clause 24(1), by deleting "5 November" and substituting "1 May."

The Chairman: The question is that the amendment to Clause 24 do stand part of the Bill. Those in favour please say Aye. Those against, No.

AYES.

The Chairman: The Ayes have it.

AMENDMENT TO CLAUSE 24 PASSED.

The Chairman: The question is that Clause 24 as amended do stand part of the Bill. If there is no debate, those in favour please say Aye. Those against, No.

AYES.

The Chairman: The Ayes have it.

CLAUSE 24 AS AMENDED PASSED.

The Clerk:

- |            |                                             |
|------------|---------------------------------------------|
| Clause 25. | Supplementary annual planning estimates.    |
| Clause 26. | Pre-election economic and financial update. |
| Clause 27. | Information to be included in forecast.     |
| Clause 28. | Entire public sector quarterly report.      |
| Clause 29. | Entire public sector annual report.         |

The Chairman: The question is that Clauses 25 through 29 do stand part of the Bill.

The First Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman.

Mrs. Julianna Y. O'Connor-Connolly: With specific reference to Clause 27 2(a). It is my submission that that is drafted much too widely in that it gives the Financial Secretary the determination not to actually do a pre-election economic forecast, if he is of the opinion that it would "significantly prejudice the economic interests" of these Islands, and because that is such a subjective test. I believe that this absolute power as drafted does not lend itself to the widely accepted concept of transparency.

The Chairman: Honourable Third Official Member?

Hon. George A. McCarthy: Mr. Chairman, 27(2) does not preclude the Financial Secretary from producing the economic forecast. What it does allow is the exclusion of information that would significantly prejudice the economic interests of the Cayman Islands.

The Chairman: The First Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman.

Mrs. Julianna Y. O'Connor-Connolly: That was precisely the ambit of my concern in that the tests at the juncture of the exclusion, in my view are extremely subjective. The public in an era of freedom of information has no way of ascertaining what was deemed to be significant prejudice to the economic welfare of these Islands.

The Chairman: The Honourable Third Official Member?

Hon. George A. McCarthy: The Member is correct in that this is somewhat subjective. However, this is a difficult situation to avoid because it is a judgment call that will have to be made. It is hoped that if a decision is taken not to include information that would be prejudicial to the economic interest of the Cayman Islands that where it is necessary to defend that decision and to explain in quarters whether the correct decision would have been made, that judgment will be brought to bear or it can be seen that the right judgment would have been arrived at.

This provision is necessary in that a judgment call will have to be made and cannot be left in a manner where this judgment on the part of the Financial Secretary, although subjective, cannot be exercised.

The Chairman: The Elected Member for East End?

Mr. V. Arden McLean: Specifically on 28(1), I am concerned that after the quarter it will take eight weeks to gazette a report to be published. Can the Member explain why it would take so long? Is there room to shorten that period?

The Chairman: The Minister of Health and Information Technology.

Hon. Linford A. Pierson: I just wanted to say that procedurally, maybe we should have tried to finish the point raised by the First Elected member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman, on Clause 27(2). I do not think that had been concluded yet.

I personally wanted to make a few comments on that before we___

The Chairman: Please go ahead.

Hon. Linford A. Pierson: Clause 27 deals with information to be included in the forecast and (2) says that "Subsection (1) does not apply to the extent the Financial Secretary determines that compliance with that section will be likely to significantly prejudice the economic interest of the Islands." I think that is most important. We would not want to be publishing anything that would significantly prejudice the economic interest of the Islands. That said, I think when reading Clause 27 it has to be read in conjunction with 24 and 26. Clause 24 deals specifically with the annual plan and estimate, while 26 deals with pre-election economic and financial update and a full detail is given on these two sections.

While taking the point made by the Honourable Member that we must do everything in the interest of transparency, I believe that this safeguard should be put in place in the event there was something that the Financial Secretary felt could be detrimental to the economic interest of the Islands. I also believe in the interest of transparency that this should be kept to the very minimum.

I would personally prefer to see this not included because if there is a matter that should be kept from the public, then that particular matter should be dealt with in some forum where Members of the Legislative Assembly would have the opportunity to speak on it. However, to leave the situation totally to the Financial Secretary to determine the non-compliance with the section is putting a lot of power into the hands of the Financial Secretary.

I just wonder if the Third Official Member has a comment on that. This is not to say that I do not support it. He knows I do. It is just to make a comment on the matter raised by First Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman.

The Chairman: The Honourable Third Official Member?

Hon. George A. McCarthy: I appreciate the point raised by the Minister of Health and Information Technology. This is a matter that will have to be examined further, as to whether too much authority is being vested in the Financial Secretary. During the normal course when matters are being discussed in terms of the forecast, this is handled by a body referred to as Executive Council. Although this makes specific reference to the Financial Secretary, it is unlikely the Financial Secretary would take a decision not to include information without appropriate consultation.

Given the spirit of transparency, often times we find ourselves in situations where it is not appropriate to publicise certain information. Prudence always dictates that a meeting be held to brief the Members of the Legislative Assembly. I think if we look at the strict interpretation of the provision and follow it, and to assume there is going to be no variation from it, then this would pose a problem. However, given the practice expected to be pursued in instances where matters are so sensitive and would significantly harm the economic interest of the Cayman Islands, I think the provision is appropriate.

However, as I said, I will make a note and will communicate the concerns as raised to Executive Council.

The Chairman: The First Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman?

Mrs. Julianna Y. O'Connor-Connolly: Thank you. I should also wish to make it abundantly clear that I have the utmost faith in the exercise of discretion of the present holder of that office. However, seeing that Laws are often drafted to anticipate change in occupation and otherwise, I made that comment. I just wondered if the Government would be prepared to consider adding words to the effect that the 'Financial Secretary "may" or "shall" consult with Executive Council?'

The Chairman: The Honourable Third Official Member

Hon. George A. McCarthy: The recommendation will be taken into consideration and will be communicated to Executive Council. I give that undertaking.

The Chairman: The Second Elected Member for George Town?

Mr. Alden M. McLaughlin, Jr.: I just wish to join voice with the concerns that have been articulated in relation to this provision. I think if this section is abused it can defeat the entire purpose of the requirement that a pre-election economic and financial update be published. One can easily conceive of situations where a government standing for re-election will come to the view that in that pre-election update it does not wish to be included, those decisions taken which are likely to have a material effect on the forecast given by the Financial Secretary.

If that is not done, it will significantly distort the true economic position and forecast. Therefore, we wind up with a misleading forecast.

While I have the utmost regard and respect for the current Financial Secretary, the reality is that decisions like these are decisions which are influenced heavily by what the Executive Council wishes to happen. For that reason, I do not regard this particular clause as appropriate to either the theme or objective of this Bill, which is underpinned by the premises of accountability, transparency and responsibility. Therefore, I would invite the Third Official Member to give consideration to proposing an amendment at this stage that will have the effect of deleting this particular clause from the Bill.

The Chairman: The Honourable Minister of Health and Information Technology?

Hon. Linford A. Pierson: I heard what the Second Elected Member has said, but I believe it would be somewhat short-sighted to just slash this Clause without allowing the Financial Secretary more time to consult with Executive Council. He has already given an undertaking to the First Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman that he will do that.

We need to sit down and look at this and weigh the ramifications of the whole Section and what it was intended to do. I join the other Members who agreed that it seems to create a problem in respect of transparency. This is precisely why Executive Council will have another look at it.

I think to suggest (and I am sure this was not his intention) that Elected Members of Executive Council are not as forthright as the Official Members, might be giving the wrong impression. It takes all Members of Executive Council to form the Government, and no Member of Executive Council can put forward a view or a policy without the concurrence of all Members. Although I appreciate that the Financial Secretary is a senior civil servant, under collective responsibility it takes all Members of Executive Council to agree on an issue. That is why this matter originally approved by Executive Council for consideration here in the Legislative Assembly should now go back to the Executive Council for further consideration.

The Chairman: The Honourable Third Official Member.

Hon. George A. McCarthy: Just to also mention that I do appreciate the attention and due care being given to the various clauses of this Bill by Members of the Legislative Assembly. I would just like to give Members the assurance that where reference is being made to the "authority of the Financial Secretary" being the holder of the post, I would not be in the least offended because at the end of the day I agree that the focus should not be on the person, but on the provision as allowed for in the Bill or Law itself. No human being—and I am one of those—has a lease on life. We want a Bill that is most appropriate in terms of serving the needs of the Cayman Islands.

I reiterate and restate my undertaking to bring this matter to Executive Council. Since this is a Bill in front of us, we know that there is no legislation that is sacrosanct. Since this will be a very dynamic piece of legislation, we can expect that as we continue to examine it carefully we will find areas that can be fine-tuned and amended.

The Chairman: The Minister of Health and Information Technology

Hon. Linford A. Pierson: I just wanted to say that if for any reason Members feel very strongly about this Section, then that particular Clause could be noted when voting on this Bill. However, it does not necessarily have to affect the whole Bill.

The Chairman: The Elected Member for East End.

Mr. V. Arden McLean: It appears that we all agree there may be a need for an amendment to that Clause. I wonder if it is not in the best interest to do it now. I concur with The First Elected Member from Cayman Brac and Little Cayman in that maybe there should be consultation with Executive Council. The written word should be put there to avoid any doubt. If this is not the right place to do it at committee stage . . . I wonder if it is not in the best interest to do it now rather than coming back in six months or one year to get an amendment approved.

The Chairman: The Honourable Second Official Member.

Hon. David F. Ballantyne: Thank you, Mr. Chairman. It is not possible to say whether or not circumstances may arise whereby the conditions mentioned in Clause 27(2) would not arise which effectively amount to considerations almost affecting the national interest. Where the clause could possibly be improved would be if some record were made of the reasons for the formation of the judgment by the Financial Secretary or whoever makes that judgment. Such record in due course would become available to whom I know not, but among others, for example, the Auditor General or Members of the Legislative Assembly. The difficulty being that a matter that might significantly prejudice the economic interest of the Islands would not necessarily last forever. That situation may only obtain for a period of time.

The difficulty about the Section as it stands seems to me, that the transparency of the issue is not assisted by the fact that there is no requirement for the judgment or the reasons for that judgment, being committed to writing. It may be that even if the matter has to be kept confidential it could nevertheless be committed to writing. I only offer that as a suggestion for consideration because that would at least afford the opportunity at a later stage to ascertain the basis on which the judgment was made at the time if the Clause is to remain in its present form.

The Chairman: The Honourable Third Official Member

Hon. George A. McCarthy: Since Members seem to have very strong views, I would propose that the amendment as proposed by the First Elected Member of Cayman Brac and Little Cayman, be made where she said that where it says "Financial Secretary" that the phrase be included "in consultation with Executive Council" or words to that effect.

The Chairman: Please state the number of the clause.

Hon. George A. McCarthy: In Clause 27(2), where reference is made that "the Financial Secretary determines", that it say "the Financial Secretary in consultation with Executive Council determines"

The Chairman: Before doing that, I would like to put the question on Clauses 25 and 26, that they do stand part of the Bill. Those in favour please say Aye. Those against, No.

AYES.

The Chairman: The Ayes have it.

CLAUSES 25 AND 26 PASSED.

The Chairman: I think this would be an appropriate time to take the lunch break, at which time this can be corrected. I would ask Members, if there is an amendment to a Clause, please call it when the number is called.

We shall suspend until 2.30.

PROCEEDINGS SUSPENDED AT 1.08 PM

PROCEEDINGS RESUMED AT 2.43 PM

The Chairman: Please be seated. Proceedings in committee are resumed.

The Honourable Minister of Health and Information Technology?

Hon. Linford A. Pierson: When we took the adjournment, the item under discussion was Clause 27(2) of the Public Management and Finance Bill, 2001. The area of contention was the section dealing with whether or not the subsection should only extend to the Financial Secretary or whether it should be in consultation with Executive Council.

However, in further discussion with Members of the Back Bench who have given this a lot of study, it was decided and agreed that we should leave it as the Financial Secretary. I believe the arguments put forward by the Members were very solid arguments, one being that we are talking about pre-election and economic update, and whatever statement is being made prior to an election should be as independent and show as much objectivity as possible.

It was felt that the Financial Secretary being a senior civil servant without any political leanings (we hope, and I know he does not), would give a very objective view on this situation and perhaps Elected Ministers on Executive Council should not be able to have any influence to bear on this. Therefore, the understanding I have is that Members would rather leave it as it is than to change it to read the Financial Secretary "in consultation with Executive Council."

The Chairman: The Third Elected Member for George Town?

Dr. Frank S. McField: I certainly would like to concur with the Minister. I know that his experience with financial matters is pretty extensive. I believe that we are trying to balance the whole concept of government's accountability, not to Members of Government but to the public. Especially at election time, information is power. Only if the public is given the correct information will they be able to assess the performance of the Government elected by them. Obviously, politics being what it is, I can imagine that if the Financial Secretary had to consult with Executive Council with regard to these conditions, it is quite possible that Members of Executive Council might see that the economic interests of the Island could be significantly prejudiced by revealing certain information. That information might be essential for the public to be able to scrutinise and judge the record of the past Government.

I believe it shows good faith on the part of politicians to be sufficiently cautious about the profession, to be able to say at this point that more honesty and transparency would be achieved by allowing a more neutral party to make a decision, based upon objective factors rather than bringing in political considerations.

I realise that although the Financial Secretary seems to have quite a bit of power here, obviously up until that particular point would have been seen as a person of trust. Therefore, there is no reason why one would not trust that particular Financial Secretary beyond that point to be able to make the proper reporting procedure.

I say that the Government and other Members who brought this issue up are pointing in the right direction in regard to openness and transparency.

The Chairman: Any further debate?

The Honourable Third Official Member, would you wish to withdraw the amendment then?

Hon. George A. McCarthy: Yes, in light of what has been said.

The Chairman: I shall now put the question that clauses 27 through 29 stand part of the Bill. Those in favour please say Aye. Those against, No.

AYES.

The Chairman: The Ayes have it.

CLAUSES 27 THROUGH 29 PASSED.

The Chairman: Out of an abundance of caution, I will put the question that the amendment to Clause 27 be withdrawn. Those in favour please say Aye. Those against, No.

AYES.

The Chairman: The Ayes have it.

AMENDMENT TO CLAUSE 27 WITHDRAWN.

The Clerk: Clause 30. Agreement in monitoring of output delivery.

The Chairman: Third Official Member, there is an amendment.

Hon. George A. McCarthy: In Clause 30 subclause (3)(f) by inserting the words "for the information of the Legislative Assembly," after the words "Legislative Assembly"; and (ii) in subclause (5) by inserting the words "for its information" after the words "Legislative Assembly."

The Chairman: The question is that the amendments to Clause 30 do stand part of the Bill.

AMENDMENTS TO CLAUSE 30 PASSED.

The Chairman: The question is that Clause 30 as amended to stand part of the Bill.

The First Elected Member of Cayman Brac and Little Cayman?

Mrs. Julianna Y. O'Connor-Connolly: When will the amendments be brought to the Legislative Assembly in relation to Clause 30(5) for information purposes?

The Chairman: The Honourable Third Official Member?

Hon. George A. McCarthy: Just allow me one minute.

Mrs. Julianna Y. O'Connor-Connolly: Perhaps I can assist. I direct his attention to Clause 30(3)(f) which stipulates that in that particular scenario it would come at the next Sitting of the day after it is signed. Rather than leave subclause (5) silent, would Government be minded to give an appropriate timeline as to when Parliament could expect to have sight of amendments made to the purchase agreement?

The Chairman: The Honourable Third Official Member?

Hon. George A. McCarthy: I have a thought on it; however, I am just consulting with the Government Bench to get their views.

(pause)

Hon. George A. McCarthy: As a follow up to the Member's suggestion, the Government is of the view that the amendment could take the form of saying that the agreement shall be brought within 30 days after it has been signed.

Therefore, under Clause 30(5), I would propose that the following words be inserted at the end of the sentence which reads, "within 30 days after it has been signed." Therefore, that sub clause will read, "(5) All amendments to a purchase agreement shall be in writing and presented to the Legislative Assembly for the information of the Legislative Assembly within 30 days after it has been signed."

The Chairman: On a procedural matter, I require that this be presented to Members in writing. I would ...

(pause)

Hon. George A. McCarthy: I understand the request you have made, that the amendment should be in writing. However, after reviewing it further, the Government is of the view, and taking into account the view of the First Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman, the suggestion of 30 days may be too stringent. It is being suggested that 60 days would be much better. It could be between Meetings of the Legislative Assembly, so a period of 60 days would be much better for the agreement to be brought, once it has been signed.

The Chairman: I have no objection to the change in the number of days. However, procedurally I must have a written amendment.

Hon. George A. McCarthy: Mr. Chairman, would it be acceptable to go on to the other amendments while this is being—

The Chairman: I cannot waive the two days' notice without an amendment. I have a procedural problem.

Hon. George A. McCarthy: Is it possible to move on to the other amendments while this is being typed?

The Chairman: We can, however it means that we will have to recommit this particular one.

Hon. George A. McCarthy: That will be fine, Mr. Chairman.

The Chairman: If the committee wishes, we can proceed to Clause 31, but procedurally, I must have that.

The Clerk:

- |            |                                                    |

| Clause 31. | Agreement and monitoring of ownership performance. |
| Clause 32. | Duties of the Financial Secretary.                 |

The Chairman: The question is that Clauses 31 and 32 do stand part of the Bill.

The First Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman?

Mrs. Julianna Y. O'Connor-Connolly: In Clause 32, we have a similar problem. Perhaps the Government would like to look at that in concert with the current amendment.

The Chairman: The Honourable Third Official Member.

Hon. George A. McCarthy: I am taking some advice on this, I will respond in a minute.
[Pause]

The Chairman: Honourable Members, there seem to be a substantial number of these Clauses to be questioned. Can we not do this prior to committee stage by a suspension or something where we do not have to stop after each Clause? There is no problem as far as I am concerned, I am just thinking about the time.

The Honourable Third Elected Member, do you have something you would like to say?

Hon. George A. McCarthy: Mr. Chairman, in responding to the Member, you could have the situation where if a divergence occurs which could have a major economic impact, often times just reporting on the divergence itself may not be necessary to set out what remedial action is being taken —although it provides information and I support that in the spirit of transparency for the effective management of the country. It is necessary at times to consult and seek advice as appropriate in order to achieve that end. Therefore, this is where attempting to specify a time may pose a problem.

However, I understand the concern raised by the Member. I just thought the reason a time has not been specified against this was because of a divergence occurring. Evidently this is one where it would be prudent to advise Members of the Legislative Assembly. However, stating the divergence and not the remedial action that will be taken to remedy that divergence would not be sufficient.

The Chairman: Is there any further debate?

I shall then put the question that Clauses 31 and 32 do stand part of the Bill. Those in favour please say Aye. Those against, No.

AYES.

The Chairman: The Ayes have it.

CLAUSES 31 AND 32 PASSED.

The Clerk: Clause 33. Delegation by the Financial Secretary.

The Chairman: There is an amendment to Clause 33.

Hon. George A. McCarthy: Clause 33 is amended by deleting in clause 33(1) the words “another person or the holder of any office” and substituting the words “a Member of the Executive Council or a public officer.”

The Chairman: The question is that the amendment to Clause 33 do stand part of the Bill. Those in favour please say Aye. Those against, No.

AYES.

The Chairman: The Ayes have it.

CLAUSE 71 AS AMENDED PASSED.

The Clerk:

- Clause 72 . Transfer of trust assets.
- Clause 73. Unclaimed trust assets.
- Clause 74. Bona vacantia.
- Clause 75. Offences and penalties.
- Clause 76. Offences by corporations.

The Chairman: The question is that Clauses 72 through 76 do stand part of the Bill an open to debate.

The First Elected Member from Cayman Brac and Little Cayman.

Mrs. Julianna Y. O'Connor-Connolly: In reference to Clause 73, I wonder if some consideration could be given to the addition in the first line of the words. It says, "Any trust asset that shall be unclaimed." My proposal for consideration would be the insertion of the words 'after it has become claimable for a period of six years.'

The Chairman: The Honourable Third Official Member?

Hon. George A. McCarthy: Just a moment to concur with the Government Bench.

The Government supports the amendment.

Hon. Linford A. Pierson: Mr. Chairman, I believe that is in fact the intention of the Clause. I would see no objection to that recommendation.

The Chairman: In view of the amendment to Clause 73, I shall put the question then that Clause 71 and 72 do stand part of the Bill. That is open to debate. If there is no debate, I shall put the question that clause 71 and 72 do stand part of the Bill. Those in favour please say Aye. Those against, No.

AYES.

The Chairman: The question is that Clause 72 do stand part of the Bill. Those in favour please say Aye. Those against, No.

AYES.

The Chairman: The Ayes have it.

CLAUSE 72 PASSED.

The Chairman: The Honourable Minister of Information Technology.

Hon. Linford A. Pierson: I was having another look at Clause 73(1) and wondered if it is not fairly clear there now that the trust asset would have to be claimable and would run from that period for a period of six years. It says, "... after having become transferable to any person entitled to the asset shall, together with any income payable in respect of the asset ... " I am wondering whether it would be transferable before it was claimable.

[Pause]

Hon. George A. McCarthy: Mr. Chairman, after some discussion, it is agreed that the Clause 73 should remain as is.

The Chairman: I shall put the question that Clause 73 do stand part of the Bill. Those in favour please say Aye. Those against, No.

AYES.

The Chairman: The Ayes have it.

CLAUSE 73 PASSED.

The Clerk:

Clause 78. Transition of accounts.
Clause 79. Transition to responsible financial management.

The Chairman: The question is that Clauses 78 and 79 do stand part of the Bill.

The First Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman?

Mrs. Julianna Y. O'Connor-Connolly: I wonder whether consideration could be given in Clause 78(1)(b) to refer this to Cayman Brac and Little Cayman account instead of just the Cayman Brac account, seeing that two Islands fall under the ambit of district administration?

Mr. Gilbert A. McLean: Mr. Chairman, I wonder if we could call it Cayman Brac and Little Cayman?

Hon. George A. McCarthy: The Government would be supportive of the amendment to refer to it as Cayman Brac and Little Cayman.

The Chairman: I think that can be done as a consequential amendment, because that is how they are supposed to be referred to. That can be done by the Second Official Member.

I shall put the question that Clauses 78 and 79 do stand part of the Bill. Those in favour please say Aye. Those against, No.

AYES.

The Chairman: The Ayes have it.

CLAUSES 78 AND 79 PASSED.

MOTIONS*GOVERNMENT MOTION NO. 9/01*THE HEALTH INSURANCE LAW 1997
THE HEALTH INSURANCE (AMENDMENT)
REGULATIONS 2001

Hon. Linford A. Pierson: Mr. Speaker, "WHEREAS the Health Insurance Law 1997 was passed by the Legislative Assembly on 19 June 1997;

"BE IT NOW THEREFORE RESOLVED that the Health Insurance (Amendment) Regulations 2001, having been laid on the Table of this Honourable House, be affirmed by the Legislative Assembly pursuant to the provisions of section 19(2) of the Health Insurance Law 1997."

The Speaker: Government Motion No. 9/01 is open for debate. The question is the Motion entitled the Health Insurance Law 1997, the Health Insurance (Amendment) Regulations 2001. Be it now therefore resolved that Health Insurance (Amendment) Regulations 2001, having been laid on the Table of this Honourable House, be affirmed by the Legislative Assembly, pursuant to the provisions of the section 19(2) of the Health Insurance Law, 1997. I shall put the question. Those in favour say Aye. Those against, No.

Do Honourable Members wish to debate it?

Is there no debate?

Hon. Linford A. Pierson: Mr. Speaker, we pretty well covered the ground this morning when speaking on the Bill. However, I can give a brief introduction for the reason the regulations are also being amended.

The Speaker: That is entirely your choice. If you wish to speak you may.

The Honourable Minister for Health and Information Technology?
