OFFICIAL HANSARD REPORT
STATE OPENING AND FIRST MEETING
FRIDAY
15 FEBRUARY 2002
9.42 AM
First Sitting

The Speaker: I shall now call upon the Reverend Joseph Crawford to say Prayers.

PRAYERS

Rev. Joseph B. Crawford: Almighty God, from whom all wisdom and power are derived: We beseech Thee so to direct and prosper the deliberations of the Legislative Assembly now assembled, that all things may be ordered upon the best and surest foundations for the glory of Thy Name and for the safety, honour and welfare of the people of these Islands.

Bless our Sovereign Lady, Queen Elizabeth II; the Queen Mother; Philip, Duke of Edinburgh; Charles, Prince of Wales; and all the Royal family. Give grace to all who exercise authority in our Commonwealth, that peace and happiness, truth and justice, religion and piety may be established among us. Especially we pray for the Governor of our Islands, the Speaker of the Legislative Assembly, Official Members and Ministers of Executive Council and Members of the Legislative Assembly, that we may be enabled faithfully to perform the responsible duties of our high office.

All this we ask for Thy great Name's sake.

Let us say the Lord's Prayer together: Our Father, who art in Heaven, Hallowed be Thy Name. Thy Kingdom come, Thy will be done on earth as it is in Heaven. Give us this day our daily bread, and forgive us our trespasses, as we forgive those who trespass against us. Lead us not into temptation, but deliver us from evil. For Thine is the Kingdom, the power and the glory, forever and ever. Amen.

The Lord bless us and keep us. The Lord make His face shine upon us and be gracious unto us. The Lord lift up the light of His countenance upon us and give us peace, now and always. Amen.

Proceedings resumed at 9.42 am

The Speaker: Please be seated. Proclamation.

PROCLAMATION NO. 2 OF 2002

The Clerk: Proclamation No. 2 of 2002 by His Excellency, Peter John Smith, Commander of the Most Excellent Order of the British Empire, Governor of the Cayman Islands.

"WHEREAS section 46 (1) of the Constitution of the Cayman Islands provides that the sessions of the Legislative Assembly of the Cayman

Islands shall be held at such places and begin at such times as the Governor may from time to time by Proclamation appoint:

"NOW THEREFORE, I, Peter John Smith, Governor of the Cayman Islands, by virtue of the powers conferred upon me by the said section 46 (1) of the Constitution of the Cayman Islands, HEREBY PROCLAIM that a session of the Legislative Assembly of the Cayman Islands shall be held at the Legislative Assembly Building in George Town on the Island of Grand Cayman beginning at 10.00 am on Friday, the 15th day of February, 2002.

"GIVEN UNDER MY HAND AND THE PUBLIC SEAL OF THE CAYMAN ISLANDS AT GEORGETOWN IN THE ISLAND OF GRAND CAYMAN, ON THIS 4TH DAY OF FEBRUARY IN THE YEAR OF OUR LORD, TWO THOUSAND AND TWO, IN THE FIFTIETH YEAR OF THE REIGN OF HER MAJESTY QUEEN ELIZABETH II"

The Speaker: The Honourable Leader, Minister responsible for Tourism, Environment, Development and Commerce, would you please move the Motion for the suspension of the House?

MOTION TO RISE AND AWAIT HIS EXCELLENCY THE GOVERNOR

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: Madam Speaker, I move that this Honourable House do rise to await the arrival of His Excellency the Governor and reassemble on his arrival to receive a gracious message from the Throne.

The Speaker: Thank you, Honourable Leader.

The Question is that this House do rise to await the arrival of His Excellency, the Governor and reassemble on his arrival to receive the gracious message from the Throne.

All those in favour, please say Aye. Those against, No.

Ayes.

The Speaker: The Ayes have it.

Agreed: That this House do rise to await His Excellency, the Governor and reassemble on his arrival to receive a gracious message from the Throne.

Proceedings suspended at 9.54 am

(The Governor's Aide-de-Camp gave three knocks on the door at 9.56 am. Procession enters)

The Serjeant-at-Arms: His Excellency, the Governor.

Procession:

*The Serjeant-at-Arms
The Honourable Speaker
His Excellency the Governor
Mrs. Smith
The Aide-de-Camp
The Clerk of the Legislative Assembly
The Acting Deputy Clerk*

Proceedings resumed at 10 am

INVITATION BY THE SPEAKER

The Speaker: Your Excellency, it is my pleasure to invite you to address our Honourable House with the gracious Throne Speech.

THE THRONE SPEECH

Delivered by

His Excellency the Governor,
Mr. Peter John Smith, CBE

Honourable Speaker, Honourable Members of the Legislative Assembly, it is with a sense of great honour, respect and humility that I present, again, the Speech from the Throne.

I would crave for indulgence from you just in case my voice falls apart. I am much under par today but because of those aspects of honour and respect to which I just alluded, I wish to do this myself today.

We have lived through a difficult and troublesome year, which has caused the world at large, not just Cayman, to take stock, to reflect and to move ahead a little more cautiously but a little more wisely. The impact of globalization, for better or for worse, has been brought home to us all. We now know, if we did not know before, that we are not immune from externally produced events, and indeed we are inextricably linked to the wider world.

However, I believe that overall Cayman will emerge stronger and wiser, and that lessons have been learned. We know that those who ignore history are condemned to repeat it.

Indeed, it is an exciting time for those like me who have a tendency towards optimism. The Constitutional Review Commissioners are shortly to present me with their Report and a draft modernised Constitution. I thank them publicly now for the professionalism and dedication that they have brought to this historic task. The Governance of these Islands could have a different complexion by next year. What a year for change 2003 will be! The 500th anniversary of these Islands gives us a golden opportunity, as the slogan says, to "Celebrate Cayman" and to ensure that we reflect on the past, evaluate the present and plan for the future.

You will hear references today to growth management, essential if we are to progress and develop in a balanced way; references also to e-business and a burgeoning number of websites as Cayman positions herself for the future. There are references to Vision 2008 showing that the spirit of the National Strategic Plan is alive and well across the Ministries and Portfolios. The public and private sector partnership that we hear so much about will be formalised in a National Advisory Council, and I pray that it will be allowed and encouraged to be effective.

Finally, I should like to thank the private sector for participating so closely in the efficiency scrutiny exercise of the Public Service that has just started. This exercise will continue as a rolling programme and will leave the Government machine in better shape to deliver those services that it is best equipped to deliver.

Let me now proceed to report on the activities and intentions of the various Ministries, Portfolios and Departments, starting with the Judiciary.

THE JUDICIARY

Legislation is presently being prepared for the establishment of Drug Courts to deal with those who commit offences because of their addiction and who are serious about overcoming their addiction. It will offer an alternative to imprisonment and will hopefully deter the commission of further offences.

Facilities are now in place to enable multiple users to view evidence documents on multiple screens in the Courtroom. Court reporters are now using real-time reporting, enabling judges, and eventually lawyers, to enjoy the advantage of viewing an immediate and ongoing record of Court proceedings.

The new Cost Rules, which came into effect on the 1 January 2002, promise greater recovery of costs for successful litigants. The Court's power to make appropriate orders as to costs can deter litigants from behaving improperly or unreasonably.

Progression of plans for a new Court building to house Summary Court in all its divisions: Criminal, Civil, Family, Youth, Coroners and Drug Court remains an urgent need.

PORTFOLIO OF INTERNAL & EXTERNAL AFFAIRS

The Portfolio of Internal and External Affairs will focus its attention on the much-needed Immigration reforms. The recently introduced machine-readable equipment for passports will be upgraded and passports will be produced in digitized form. This will allow Cayman Islands' passports to comply with international requirements and standards and will also prepare us to issue the new British Citizen passports in the future.

Royal Cayman Islands Police (RCIP) Service

The Royal Cayman Islands Police (RCIP) Service has a newly formed Joint Intelligence and Crime Management Unit which has improved the information flow both within the RCIP and between the other law enforcement agencies and should permit more effective deployment of scarce resources.

New computerised fingerprinting technology to be implemented this year will greatly reduce processing time, enabling the police to apprehend criminals more speedily.

The Police K-9 Section will be enhanced by an increase of 6 dogs, plus training, dog accommodation and other expenses donated by the Good Government Fund from the UK. The Drug Abuse Resistance Education (DARE) programme is extended to all public schools on the Island this year.

Frontline policing will be strengthened by the recruitment of Auxiliary Constables to release trained officers for operational duty. Additional recruitment of Special Constables will provide a more visible police presence at the community level.

Legislative Assembly

The Legislative Department will be pursuing the implementation of the Assembly's web-casts whose long-term objectives will be to provide video coverage of all House proceedings; to broadcast streaming video and audio over the Internet and archived video for downloading and viewing; to provide web access to proceedings; to build a web-based archive of Laws and Hansard Reports; and to build an online store to sell the Laws of the Cayman Islands and Hansard Reports of Parliament.

Personnel Department

Emphasis will be placed this year on improving the Human Resources IRIS database for personnel administration purposes to ensure that data and statistics are accurate and appropriate.

The Department will assist with the implementation, overview and monitoring of the administration of Government's provision of medical benefits to entitled persons.

Government Information Services (GIS)

Emphasis will be placed this year on training civil servants as departmental press officers, while strengthening media-relations skills among top civil servants.

The weekly GIS television programme will be re-instituted with more news and current affairs content. The video technology and manpower of the unit is being strengthened with the return later this year of a Caymanian staffer from the European Film College in Denmark with advanced qualifications.

PORTFOLIO OF LEGAL AFFAIRS

The Government's legislative programme includes social, financial, criminal, health and Merchant Shipping Legislation. The revision of the Cayman Islands Laws has been substantially completed and Laws will continue to be revised as appropriate.

Civil and Criminal Crown Council have been recruited to maintain and augment the work of the Courts and provision of legal advice to Government. An improved environment is being created to facilitate international requests for legal assistance.

There will be increased emphasis on upholding the interests of justice and its administration.

PORTFOLIO OF FINANCE AND ECONOMIC DEVELOPMENT

The Portfolio of Finance and Economics has set the following key objectives for 2002:

- ◆ Development and implementation of new Public Management and Finance Regulations to support the new law.
- ◆ Implementation of a debt restructuring package for Central Government debt.
- ◆ Full independence for the Shipping Registry and the Monetary Authority.
- ◆ Implementation of a refined approach to risk management issues in government.
- ◆ Continue development of a public sector investment programme for 2003 to 2005 and production of regular economic reviews.
- ◆ Publication of the 2001 statistical series and national income and labour force surveys.
- ◆ Collaboration with the private sector to secure access to new markets for financial services and maintenance of a proactive approach to international and domestic regulatory issues.

Customs

The Customs Department will work in collaboration with the RCIP and Prison Services in an attempt to further combat the illicit drug problem. The department has embarked on the joint K-9 project with the acquisition of three additional dogs and a 12-week training programme should be completed during the first quarter of 2002.

Treasury

Treasury is preparing an Integrated Resource Information System (IRIS) for the requirements of the Public Management and Finance Law 2001 (PMF Law). These changes will enable the new Multi-Organizational IRIS system, including modules for Purchasing, Inventory and Fixed Assets, to be ready for operation next January.

Statistics Office

The Statistics Office has reintroduced its Quarterly Statistical Bulletin and has been involved in data collection exercises aimed at monitoring the effect of concessions granted to the real estate sector. The Office will conduct two Labour Force Surveys this year.

General Registry and Shipping

The General Registry will focus on enhancing its private sector interface system to improve efficiency, integrity and depth in the information accessible at cost to its customers.

The Shipping Registry is scheduled to become a statutory authority, necessitating significant development, especially in the areas of automated billing and accrual based accounting. Development of the Registry's website will increase efficiency through automation and advance business development.

During 2002, it is proposed to submit some forty new regulations under the Merchant Shipping Law and the Merchant Shipping Marine Pollution Law, to give local effect to a range of developments in International Shipping Conventions that apply in the Cayman Islands.

The Registry will complete the preparation work necessary to achieve compliance to the International Safety Organisation (ISO) 9000/2000, a broader based standard than the ISO 9002 to which it is currently certified.

Budget and Management Unit

The Budget and Management Unit will implement the new budgeting and monitoring system as part of the Financial Management Initiative and review its organization and staffing to prepare for the new roles emanating from the Public Management and Finance Law.

Marketing and Promotions

The Marketing and Promotions Unit will organise the Caribbean Development Bank's 32nd annual meeting of the Board of Governors, which is currently under the chairmanship of the Financial Secretary. Approximately 200 high-ranking representatives from the CDB member countries are expected to attend the meeting in May.

Internal Audit Unit

The Internal Audit Unit will focus its 2002 audit plan on the Government's commitment on improving the collection of new and existing revenue.

Public Service Pensions Board

The Public Service Pensions Board will be carrying out an actuarial valuation for the three Government-sponsored pension plans. It is the Board's goal to provide annual benefit statements to all participants by September.

Cayman Islands Monetary Authority

In 2002, the Monetary Authority will become independent in its supervision and regulation of the financial services industry. This will place complete operational decision making in the hands of the Board of Directors of the Monetary Authority and will remove the need for the approval of the Executive Council for certain decisions, such as the approval of licences. Additionally, independence will increase the authority of the Monetary Authority in terms of its enforcement powers and will enhance the credibility of the Cayman Islands' regulatory regime.

MINISTRY OF EDUCATION, HUMAN RESOURCES AND CULTURE

The Ministry's work programme continues to be shaped by its Philosophy Statement and Guiding Principles, which stress the development of written policy statements and an effective legislative framework for each sector.

Education

Primary consultation has taken place on a new Education Law, and a White Paper containing the proposed changes will be circulated to the public in April.

Over the next three years the Ministry has proposed five key goals:

- ♦ To promote and support school improvement.
- ♦ To strengthen the opportunities and quality of provision for teacher training.
- ♦ To improve information, communication and technology skills at all levels.
- ♦ To enhance the provision for technical and vocational education.
- ♦ To establish citizenship education as an integral part of the curriculum at all levels of schooling.

In 2002, the technical and vocational curriculum will be re-tooled to make it more responsive to the needs of employers. A Skills Audit will be carried out, using international instruments and advice from the International Labour Organisation (ILO). The Ministry has taken account of the finding of the Committee of Inquiry into the Causes of Social Breakdown and Violence Among Youth in the Cayman Islands, which called for the Education Department: "to evaluate how and when vocational training can be most effectively offered and play an important role in promoting its value to the student and wider community". In keeping with this observation the first Technical and Vocational Trade Fair will be held in July with local business support.

The Ministry has taken on responsibility for the Cadet Corps and over three dozen young people have been recruited. The Cadet Corps Headquarters building is being refurbished, and the Commandant and Deputy Commandant have completed training at the Barbados Cadet Corps.

The Community College of the Cayman Islands will in September offer for the first time, certificate courses for pre-school assistants and classroom support staff. The College continues to work towards the introduction of four-year Bachelor Degree programmes in 2004.

Three schools are scheduled for full inspections in the coming year, Cayman Preparatory School, the Alternative Education Centre and West End Primary School. Triple C School, St. Ignatius High School and John Gray High School which have already been inspected will receive post inspection visits to monitor progress on their action plans.

In partnership with the Ministry and the Education Department, the Inspectorate will contribute to the development of a new national training programme for current and future principals by developing national standards for principals, a programme outline and course materials.

A taskforce to prioritise and cost recommendations from The Report of the Committee to Examine the Conditions Relating to the Recruitment of Caymanians into the Teaching Profession has been formed within the Education Department.

This year, decisions on the viability of maintaining three primary schools on the Brac where student enrolment is falling will have to be made. Similarly, a decision on the scope and future of educational services offered in Little Cayman will be considered. Public consultation on both these issues is ongoing.

The restructuring of the Department as recommended in the Millett Report has begun, and work has started on the corporate plan. Another recommendation of the Millett Report, the completion of an information technology audit in schools is to be carried out early in the year.

The re-structuring of secondary education is now under consideration and in this connection, in March, Professor Mark Bray of the University of Hong Kong and a world expert in Education Policy in Small States, will visit and give a "Distinguished Lecture" at the Community College, as well as hold several meetings with educators.

Employment Services

The Ministry's main legislative efforts have been carried out in the area of Human Resource Development, and this has led to the production of a White Paper, which is before the public for consultation.

Labour Tribunal cases still outstanding will be examined by an independent legal advisor whose work will be completed by March. With respect to new cases, the Employment Relations Department has sought assistance from the International Labour Organisation (ILO) on the establishment of an efficient case management system.

Following on the Syson report, increased attention will be paid to strengthening and expanding the conciliation service, which has now moved to the Employment Services Centre.

The Centre now has a Small Business Advisor who can provide personal business counselling and will also serve as a clearing house and licensing agent for training programmes being offered by colleges, various institutes and the Chamber of Commerce.

Progress has been made on the introduction of the Investors in People Programme, and the licence is expected to be signed in April. Implementation plans are going forward with our advisor, Wallace Walker, for the launch of the Investors in People Pilot Programme.

The Chamber of Commerce is mounting a Job and Education Expo in March, which is co-sponsored by the Employment Services Centre. This is the first time that the Ministry for Human Resources has been involved in this event, and their involvement has been welcomed and appreciated by the Chamber.

At the Expo the National Mentoring Partnership will be unveiled, and the latest edition of the Financial Assistance, Scholarship, Training and Education Guide will be released.

National Pensions Office

The Office of the Superintendent of Pensions in 2002 will fall under the new Department of Employment Relations, and its staff will have the additional responsibility for strengthening the delivery of benefits to the working community. In this regard the Pensions Office will encourage development of Retirement savings arrangements as viable alternatives to annuities.

The Supervisor of Pensions will continue with the review of the Pensions Law and recommended changes to the Law are incorporated in a White Paper published by the Ministry in January 2002. Proposals include the extension of pension provisions to provide disability and death benefits for employees and their families and changes to speed up action against defaulters.

Mr. Dick Richardson, Superintendent of Pensions, has announced his resignation after four years in the post and leaves at the end of March 2002. The Government is grateful to Mr. Richardson for his sterling work and wishes him well in his future endeavours.

Culture

Strategy Five of the Ten-Year National Strategic Plan - Vision 2008 called on the country to develop cultural awareness based on traditional Christian values and a strong family unit. To this end, the Ministry is developing a cultural policy which will help to enhance national identity, promote national integration and unity and maintain the harmony and values on which traditional Caymanian culture is based.

The Cayman National Cultural Foundation will again present the Annual Arts Awards to individuals and organisations nominated by the public as well as produce the seventh annual national arts festival, Cayfest.

Library Services

In conjunction with the Public Library Management Committee and the organisation's volunteer initiative, the Friends of the Public Library will focus on expanding its range of current children's and literary programmes.

It is anticipated that the West Bay district library will come on line this year. This will mean that all districts will be served with district library facilities.

Additionally, over the next several years, the parties will work to raise funds and resources to renovate the George Town Library starting this year with the construction of restroom facilities.

The owners of Harbour Place in George Town have offered a larger space to the National Gallery, and the move, which takes place in March, will greatly increase the Gallery's visibility and accessibility.

Native Done, a local artists co-operative displays and sells its work at the National Museum and the Old Savannah Schoolhouse one day per week. This joint venture, which includes both the Museum and the National Trust, has proven extremely successful, as evidenced by a waiting list of artists who wish to join.

The Art Magnet programme, funded by a grant from State Street Trust Company (Cayman) Limited is a new programme for at-risk teen youth where art is used to re-direct energies, build their confidence and improve their life skills. The National Drug Council, the Department of Social Services, the Lions Club and local teachers have all collaborated with the National Gallery on the project.

The third Art@government House was held at the end of January, and saw the largest crowds ever. This event is rapidly becoming a highlight of the Islands' cultural festivities.

National Archive

Computerised access to photographs is now available to the public in the Reading Room and this database will continue to be expanded to serve the more than one thousand researchers who use the Archive's resources each year.

During 2002 the National Archive will be closely involved in the publication of the new History of the Cayman Islands, as well as joining with other cultural institutions to develop the new cultural policy. The Archive is already playing a key role in preparing for the Quincentennial Celebrations in 2003, and this work will intensify during the year.

National Museum

The National Museum will develop an exhibition on the history of Cayman's maritime heritage for the Quincentennial Celebration and a Maritime Heritage trail is being planned.

MINISTRY OF COMMUNITY SERVICES, WOMEN'S AFFAIRS, YOUTH & SPORTS

Social Services

While the outlook for 2002 indicates an increasing demand for social work, probation and community development, the new framework this year is the planned finalization of two outstanding pieces of legislation – The Children Law, and the Adoption Law.

The Ministry will address the issues of detention and rehabilitation of delinquent youth by providing pro-social programmes that will include detention reform and will work through the Courts to establish alternative sentencing options. Already the Ministry has negotiated with Associated Marine Institute to revitalise the Cayman Islands Marine Institute (CIMI).

Community Development continues to forge ahead, promoting self-help and life-skills development, and staff are focusing on assisting with the establishment of a learning centre in East End within the first quarter of 2002.

The protection and care of our elderly remains a priority, and Community Development and Adult Special Needs units will be doing continuous public education programmes, addressing this issue in an effort to bring it into even sharper focus, and bring about some positive changes in our community.

Substance Abuse

The Department of Substance Abuse anticipates working closely with the Drug Court which will become operational in 2002. This will result in an increase of court referrals to both Caribbean Haven outpatient and residential services.

To combat the misuse of drugs among young offenders, the Government is committed to increasing treatment availability for youth via its ongoing collaboration with the schools, CIMI, RCIP and Social Services, concentrating on the younger children.

An evaluation of the Driving While Impaired Programme and the client treatment outcome study will be conducted in 2002. The Halfway House for males is expected to open in March and indications are that this facility will be well utilized.

Prison Services

For the first time, prison services are the responsibility of an elected representative. The Ministry views the prison services as an essential part of community services to facilitate the re-integration of offenders into society, in addition to its punitive function.

Over the last two years the Prison staff has had to concentrate its efforts on reconstructing Northward Prison and developing Fairbanks Prison. In 2002, emphasis will be placed on developing a positive regime based upon structure and discipline in the Prison Service. This will have as its foundation an Incentives and Earned Privileges scheme, which will clearly differentiate between those who choose rehabilitation and those who do not. Every effort will be made to ensure that prisoners are fully and constructively employed. To this end, further development is planned with the Prison farm and market garden area.

Funding will be provided to improve facilities and much needed additional accommodation in the Prisons. This will include a new cellblock with an appropriate regime to deter those who import drugs into the Cayman Islands. Prisoners will provide the labour for these projects. The completion of the new Visits Block and the provision of two sniffer dogs will further improve security.

Youth and Sports

Within the terms of the National Youth Policy, both the Cayman Islands Youth Assembly and the Youth Passport will be established this year. Three Youth Development Officers will be provided to assist the Community Development Officers in the districts.

The Ministry and Department of Youth and Sports will complete the National Sports Policy this year, and will also implement the newly formed National Football Academy, as well as User Fees for the Truman Bodden Sports Complex, the Ed Bush Play Field and the Lion's Pool. Support for sports development, recreational playgrounds and park construction and maintenance will continue.

In recognition and support of our international athletes, the Ministry will fund a second Goodwill Ambassador, Miss Cydonie Mothersill, who along with Mr. Kareem Streete-Thompson will represent the Cayman Islands in athletics overseas. The Ministry will continue to provide full and partial scholarships to young people engaged in sports or interested in a career in sports.

In a public/private partnership, the Ministry will assist in the provision of a park in the districts of George Town, Bodden Town and East End. Work will also continue on the Frank Sound Park, Hutland Park and the Cricket Pavilion in West Bay.

Sunrise Centre

The Sunrise Adult Training Centre faces the challenge of providing support services for adults with disabilities throughout the Cayman Islands. The primary goal will continue to be the development of a new facility with a broader focus than is possible at present, and community input and participation will be sought to find solutions that meet the current and future needs of our special citizens.

Ex-Servicemen and Seamen Benefits

The Ministry will continue to review benefits provided to ex-servicemen and seamen or their surviving spouses. New criteria will be developed to ensure that those in need will receive these benefits.

Women's Affairs

The Ministry will complete a National Policy on Gender Equity and Equality. The Policy will be finalized in July 2002 and will commence immediately thereafter.

In keeping with Vision 2008, the Ministry will continue to share co-ordination responsibilities for the Domestic Violence Intervention Training Programme with the RCIP.

The establishment of a place of safety for battered women and their children is in progress and we anticipate that this will be available in the not-too-distant future.

The Ministry will continue to be a major sponsor of the monthly FOCUS programme on CITN, addressing issues related to domestic abuse. The Ministry intends to collaborate on a programme within the secondary schools that deals with violence.

Women's Resource Centre

In an effort to educate and inform a wider audience, the Women's Resource Centre plans to launch its own website this year and to complete a Community Resource Handbook, which will benefit the public and all agencies and organisations that provide community services to women and families.

Water Authority

In the second quarter of 2002, pending successful negotiations with the lowest bidder, the Authority will commence construction of the long awaited 2.5 million gallons per day, Grand Cayman Wastewater Treatment Plant that will replace the current waste stabilisation ponds. With the completion of this new Plant, the Authority will be well situated to meet Grand Cayman's needs for proper wastewater treatment over the next fifteen to twenty years. The new treatment Plant is expected to be online by the end of 2003, and will provide additional treatment capacity for the booming West Bay Beach area, as well as the potential for incorporating new areas into the public sewerage system.

The Authority plans to double the production capacity of the water production Plant in the Brac within the first quarter of 2002, to ensure that the demand for trucked water during the dry season can be met.

Housing

Lack of affordable housing has been identified as one of the causes of social breakdown. The provision and maintenance of affordable, decent housing have been issues facing the Cayman Islands for quite some time now.

Using the experiences of previous housing initiatives, the Government has embarked on a programme to address the affordable housing issue in a multifaceted approach. This includes rehabilitation and repair of existing houses, provision of new houses, re-examination of laws and regulations, as well as other institutional barriers and opportunities that regulate housing construction and innovation in housing design, construction and financing.

MINISTRY OF PLANNING, COMMUNICATIONS, WORKS AND INFORMATION TECHNOLOGY

The Ministry has a number of key initiatives for 2002, including: -

- ◆ A review and Quantitative Risk Assessment of the current siting of petroleum storage facilities;
- ◆ The engagement of a Chief Petroleum Inspector to provide additional oversight of the bulk petroleum storage installations;
- ◆ In conjunction with the Ministry for Ports, the regularization of procedures and conditions applicable to all aggregate importers;
- ◆ An in-depth audit of the Caribbean Utilities Company (CUC) licence addressing key areas such as rate of return, capital and asset structure and fuel factor calculations; and
- ◆ The liberalisation of the telecommunications sector and enactment of the Information Communications Technology Law.

Environmental Health

The Department of Environmental Health (DEH) will continue to provide weekly basic food hygiene and safety training courses for food handlers and regular inspections of all food establishments. Similar surveillance and training will be provided to the health and beauty sector.

The DEH will undertake the establishment of new cemeteries in Bodden Town and East End.

Solid Waste Section

In preparation for the day when capacity will be reached at the George Town landfill and Cayman

Brac landfill in the near future, the DEH will prepare a closure plan for both. The plans will specify the method of closure and identify possible future land uses for the two sites.

In addition, the Department is prepared to commence the bidding process for a new disposal technology to replace the George Town landfill; and the development of a new site for Cayman Brac. For Little Cayman, the Department will prepare a solid waste management plan detailing methods for improving operations and maximising capacity at the existing landfill.

New residential collection routes will be established across the Island, consolidating seven routes into three. The new routes will result in a more efficient and timely collection system and will also allow for closer monitoring of collection crew performance.

Lands and Survey

Following the publication of the Official Street Atlas of the Cayman Islands, the Lands and Survey Department will consolidate its position as the provider of additional land-related information in the Islands. The year 2002 will see the migration of several software platforms in use within the Department, and it is hoped that the long delayed establishment of the delivery of services and information by Web technology will become a reality.

Mosquito Research and Control Unit

During 2002 the Mosquito Research and Control Unit will embark on an innovative research programme to analyze DNA from mosquito populations to detect the presence of West Nile virus and dengue virus. DNA analysis will also allow early detection of infestations from overseas of the yellow fever mosquito, a primary disease carrier, by positive and timely identification of mosquito eggs. This powerful research tool will clearly enhance MRCU's disease prevention capability, and can be readily extended to include malaria and other mosquito borne diseases.

Planning

The review of the Development Plan 1997 will be completed by the end of 2002 and should be tabled in this House in early 2003. The review will involve extensive and ongoing consultation with the public through the Development Plan Review Committee, District Sub-committees and Special Issue Sub-committees.

The Department's other strategic objectives for 2002 are: -

- ◆ A comprehensive review of the Planning Law, Regulations and Planning Appeals Rules,
- ◆ Completion of a land use inventory for the districts of Bodden Town and West Bay,

- ◆ To continue staff training throughout the year, including policy management studies, and undergraduate planning degrees,
- ◆ Completion of the Department's first strategic plan.

Postal Services

The construction of the new West End Post Office in Cayman Brac is scheduled for completion during the second quarter of 2002. The 3,500 sq ft facility is a long-awaited enhancement to the postal services for the residents of that area of Cayman Brac.

The completion of a design for the Savannah Post Office to serve the growing needs of that district with early future construction is a priority as is an extension to the West Bay Post Office.

Public Works

Buildings Division

Construction is planned to commence on the following significant capital projects in 2002: -

- ◆ The provision of low risk (Category D) accommodations, laundry and a remand facility for youth at Northward Prison.
- ◆ The provision of washroom facilities to the George Town Library and George Town bus depot at the old PWD compound.
- ◆ The fit-out of a new courtroom.

Design work will continue on the following major projects: -

- ◆ The proposed new government office building,
- ◆ The proposed new primary school in the Spotts area,
- ◆ The proposed new secondary school.

Roads Division

In the main road resurfacing programme, a one-mile section of road between Bodden Town and Breakers will be rehabilitated.

To relieve traffic congestion experienced by motorists travelling to and from the eastern districts, the intersection of Crewe Road and South Sound Road will be upgraded to a modern dual lane roundabout. It is expected that this will be done with assistance from the developer of the Grand Harbour property.

In the development roads programme, it is hoped that work will continue to complete phase one of the Crewe Road bypass to Bobby Thompson Way. Also planned is the gazetting, commencement of land acquisition and preliminary works to upgrade the Elgin Avenue roundabout to a modern dual lane roundabout and the upgrading of the intersection of Esterly Tibbetts Highway with West Bay Road to a mini-roundabout to improve traffic heading to West Bay.

Planning and gazetting of the future extension of the Esterly Tibbetts Highway and a new entrance scheme for the Hyatt Hotel will continue, as well as planning of future improvements for the road network to the eastern districts.

Computer Services

For 2002, Computer Services will work to provide more cost effective, reliable and responsive network data communication services to government offices in most outlying districts. This service will enable entities like the Prison and schools to take advantage of the technologically driven productivity improvements now being realised by departments located in central George Town.

Computer Services staff will work in partnership with non-government IT specialists to convert Government's accounting systems from cash based to accrual accounting.

The staff of Computer Services will also continue the development of the hugely successful Government Website portal www.gov.ky. Phase 2 of this on-going project includes the integration of a governmental recruitment Website and new Websites for high profile government agencies.

Information Technology Strategy Unit

The development of e-Business and Information and Communications Technology (ICT) continues to be a top priority for the Government, and the key to this, as well as to the development of these Islands, is the liberalisation of the ICT sector. Accordingly, the new ICT Bill will be brought to this Honourable House during this session to create the legal framework for the introduction of competition, and also to establish the independent statutory body that will be required to regulate the sector.

The aim is for this statutory body, to be known as the Information and Communications Technology Authority (ICTA), to be operational by August of this year. This, together with the conclusion of discussions with Cable and Wireless, should allow the first licences under the new Law to be issued in early September.

Very shortly, it is anticipated that negotiations for the transfer of the management of the Cayman Islands Internet Domain (.ky) to Government will be successfully completed. Once the ICTA is fully established, they will assume responsibility for this task.

During the first half of the year, Government, in conjunction with the private sector, and the Chamber of Commerce in particular, will launch a full marketing campaign to promote the Cayman Islands as an offshore e-business centre. This effort will include the launching of a website dedicated to the promotion of e-business, and the creation of a joint venture company to administer it. Of significance is the development of the Brac Informatics Centre in Cayman Brac.

Finally, the legislative programme will include discussion papers on a stand-alone data protection law, further protection for intellectual property rights, and the need for specific consumer protection and competition legislation in the digital age.

Telecommunications Office

Funding has been approved for the partial upgrade of a 12-year-old radio communication system that supports the emergency services and most other government agencies. The Telecommunication Office (OFTEL) will oversee this major project aimed at enhancing in-building radio coverage and digital communication security. Users of the old radio system will not need to replace their existing equipment as the new system supports both old and new radios, thus ensuring compatibility and reducing costs.

A public/private sector partnership between the National Hurricane Committee and the local utility companies, with the technical support of OFTEL, has now established a new Weather Radio Broadcasting station at 107.9 megahertz on the FM dial. Anyone with a FM radio can receive official national weather forecasts 24 hours a day, with frequent updates and official information broadcast during periods of tropical storm activity. The service, which is available in the Grand Cayman area, will eventually be extended to the Sister Islands.

MINISTRY OF HEALTH SERVICES, DISTRICT ADMINISTRATION AND AGRICULTURE

The Ministry of Health Services, District Administration and Agriculture anticipate the achievement of the following key objectives for 2002. The enactment of legislation to provide for Health Services fee increases, as well as the approval of the Legislative Assembly for the following legislation: -

- ♦ A revised Health Practitioners' Law and accompanying Regulations,
- ♦ A Health Services Authority Law,
- ♦ A revised Health Insurance Law,
- ♦ A revised Mental Health Law,
- ♦ A revised Pharmacy Law with accompanying Regulations,
- ♦ A revised Plant Law,
- ♦ Pesticide Control Law with accompanying Regulations.
- ♦ Oversee the initiation of a programme geared to increase patient satisfaction with services provided at the Health Services Department and the improvement of the fees and collections process.
- ♦ Implement a change in the organisational structure of the Health Services Department and monitor the implementation of a Strategic Financial Plan.
- ♦ Monitor the implementation of the Master Health Facilities Plan for the Islands.

- ♦ Support the continued upgrade of the physical infrastructure in Cayman Brac and Little Cayman, for example, Brac Museum, sports and recreational facilities and Little Cayman roads.
- ♦ Promote the development of procedures for food security and safety for the Cayman Islands and the health and wellness of our population and other natural resources,
- ♦ Ensure effective strategies are in place for Radio Cayman to increase revenue and become self-sufficient,
- ♦ Strengthen the measures to minimize passenger inconvenience at local airports while maximising aviation security,
- ♦ Review the management structure and regulatory processes of the Civil Aviation Authority.

Health Services

During the year a new fee schedule will be introduced in two phases to more closely reflect the cost of providing health care services.

Health Services Authority

It is intended that the Health Services will become a statutory authority by the 1 July 2002. The Authority will allow the services to operate as a business and ensure the sustainability of the health care delivery system that the community has come to expect.

Mental Health, Hospice and Geriatric Facilities

The provision of Mental Health, Hospice and Geriatric Services will be enhanced with the commissioning of new purpose built in-patient facilities scheduled for completion by the middle of 2002.

District Administration

Efforts to encourage private sector business investment on Cayman Brac will continue. The last quarter of 2001 saw the start up of a Credit Union Office and an insurance company branch office. It is hoped that this is just the beginning of a new trend.

A study of the endangered Brown Booby birds has been completed. A report is to follow and recommendations for protection of the birds will be implemented.

Expansion of Nature Tourism attractions will be undertaken for Little Cayman. The initial phase will be the installation of viewing platforms, signage and opening of historic footpaths. This has been made possible with a grant from the Foreign and Commonwealth Office and some internal funding.

Agriculture

and will demonstrate the potential for local aquaculture development. It is intended to stimulate further interest in the use of hydroponics in crop production at the level of commercial farmers and home garden enthusiasts.

Following the completion of studies and consultations with regards to the establishment of a Pesticide Regulatory Authority, a new pesticide law with its regulations will be presented to the Legislative Assembly. This will greatly enhance the protection of the health of persons, plants and animals and that of the natural environment.

Other legislative matters to be pursued include the amendments to the Animals Law and Regulations that will modernise the Law, especially in respect of animal owner responsibility and those matters that pertain to neglect of and cruelty to animals. Additionally, a Bill will be produced that aims to provide the Chief Agricultural and Veterinary Officer with greater powers over the importation of plants, soil and growing media.

On Cayman Brac, capital works will improve the infrastructure at the Spot Bay Office and also provide new crop demonstration activities for the benefit of growers in Cayman Brac and those who will visit from Little Cayman. Greater sharing of the Department's technical expertise between Grand Cayman, Cayman Brac and Little Cayman is also planned.

Radio Cayman

The focus this year will be to enhance Radio Cayman's operational plant and increase revenue, while maintaining an emphasis on local, educational, cultural, informational and interactive programming, for a better informed community.

Civil Aviation Authority

On the 28th November 1952, the first arrival of a land-based aircraft occurred on Grand Cayman. This event would set the stage for the buoyant development of air transport and thus tourism in the Cayman Islands. This 50th anniversary milestone will be celebrated throughout the latter months of this year and will include the involvement of the schools, churches and local industry partners. Historical aircraft exhibitions will be held, as well as special events involving the current aviation air transport providers. Additionally, the Civil Aviation Authority will host the first meeting of the Directors of Civil Aviation of the Caribbean Region organised by the International Civil Aviation Organization.

Efforts are continuing towards the preparation of a major development programme over the next few years to improve the aviation infrastructure at the Owen Roberts International Airport.

Following the targeting of aviation as a means of carrying out terrorist actions and threats over the past several months, expanded initiatives have been employed to strengthen the aviation security regime worldwide. The Cayman Islands are no exception and additional measures have also been implemented locally with directives and advice being provided by the UK Department for Transport, and local and regional governments.

While specific measures are being taken during this era of heightened security, such measures will become a normal part of the air transport processes from the 1 January 2003. To this end, the Civil Aviation Authority will redesign the passenger terminal affecting these processes in order to minimize passenger inconvenience while maximizing aviation security.

In keeping with the standards and recommended practices of international aviation, the structure of the management and regulation of civil aviation in the Cayman Islands will be taken into focus this year. Specifically, it is preferable if the entity providing aviation services were separated from the body responsible for the regulatory processes of aviation.

MINISTRY OF TOURISM, ENVIRONMENT, DEVELOPMENT AND COMMERCE

The Ministry of Tourism, Environment, Development, and Commerce is currently developing the guidelines and framework for the establishment of an Investment Bureau and a Growth Management Board.

In 2002, the Ministry will pursue initiatives aimed at facilitating the growth necessary to fuel the local economy while being mindful of the impact development has on the social and physical environment of the Cayman Islands. The Vision 2008 project highlighted that residents of these Islands are cognizant of the complex relationship that exists between progress and preservation and want a more concerted effort to ensure that these competing interests are openly and effectively managed.

Cayman Islands Investment Bureau

The Investment Bureau is due to be established by mid-year and will provide a one-stop-shop for those interested in investing in the Cayman Islands. The Bureau will provide prompt and efficient service that is client focused and responsive to business needs and trends. The Investment Bureau will also seek to maximize the return on the Government's investments to promote abroad its two main industries of tourism and financial services. To this end, it is the intention of Government to establish Cayman Islands Tourism and Investment Offices in London and New York by November 2002. This will make greater use of our resources abroad and, for the first time, include direct representation of Cayman's financial services in these two strategic foreign financial centres.

Cayman Islands Growth Management Board

It has become apparent that there is a real need to balance the competing interests of growth and preservation. The Growth Management Board is progressing in the developmental stages. The Board will be comprised of representatives from both the public and private sectors who are well respected in the following areas: Environment, Culture, Tourism, Planning, Finance, Human Resources, Legal Services, Customs and Utilities.

The board will consider potential development projects of a minimum value of CI$250,000 and provide comprehensive advice, in consideration of the disciplines represented at the board level, to the Executive Council. By consolidating representation from all of the requisite authorities, the board is geared to enhance existing safeguards, as all relevant authorities will have equal and simultaneous access to information. As an additional benefit streamlining the process will strengthen the jurisdiction's ability to promote itself as having an efficient business environment suitable for appropriate investors.

Tourism

The review and assessment of the Department of Tourism (DoT) that was initiated last year is continuing, and much progress has already been made. The key building blocks are already in place for the next phase of tourism management including the recruitment of a new Director of Tourism with extensive travel industry experience, and the restructuring of the US operations of the Department of Tourism. This ongoing restructuring has already resulted in a downsizing of the US staff from 50 to 35 with annual recurrent savings in salaries of over US$650,000.

The Strategic Objectives for 2002 include: -

- The development and implementation of an effective integrated marketing communications programme which recognizes the diverse needs of special stakeholders in the Cayman Islands, and the improvement, maintenance and management of those tourism products and services which provide the highest quality product experience for visitors.
- The establishment of a policy framework to guide the development, diversification and management of the industry to ensure the sustainability of tourism in the Cayman Islands for future generations.
- The Ministry of Tourism, in collaboration with the Ministry of Education, intends to develop and implement an effective hospitality training centre to provide the skilled, service oriented workforce necessary to support sustainable tourism in the Cayman Islands.

The past year was a difficult one for the local tourism industry but under new leadership in the Ministry and Department, the public sector is changing to meet the challenges and to attain a stronger, sustainable tourism sector for the Cayman Islands.

Quincentennial Celebrations Office

The Quincentennial Celebrations Project was officially launched in January 2002. Already, a draft programme is in place, the website has been launched and various activities are underway to solicit the widest public input for completing the programme for the year of celebration.

The programme is founded on the Office's mission statement, which seeks to plan and coordinate a dynamic and exciting celebration of the first 500 years of our recorded history.

The programme will provide events and activities, which cover our maritime heritage and our cultural, historical and social developments.

Tourism Attractions Board

The Tourism Attractions Board continues to tackle the challenge of making optimal use of Government owned land-based attractions while generating sufficient revenue to be self sufficient and relieve Government of its related financial obligation. The board has adopted site-specific measures to facilitate this objective in 2002.

Botanic Park

At the Botanic Park, the nursery is being expanded to increase local plant sales and fund raising events such as the Orchid Show in February and Mango Morning in August will be held.

During the year, Park staff will create a plant display house at the Visitors' Centre and widen the plant labelling process in the gardens.

In addition, the Orchid Society will build a small lab in the Nursery to facilitate orchid propagation. Cruise ship advertising began in January and efforts are underway to increase visits to the Park via the North Sound connection to Sand Point.

Pedro Castle

At Pedro Castle, the quadrangle will be roofed to create an intimate rental space for small groups. The Steadman Bodden House will be restored and offered for rent to wedding parties. Cruise ship advertising will run throughout the year and an economically produced information booklet on the site will be available free of charge shortly. Additional tour groups from the cruise ships are slated to begin this month and Disney Cruise Line visits starting in May are projected to increase visits by 30 percent.

Pirates Week

Efforts will be made, through the Department of Tourism, to resume overseas promotion of the National Festival through Pirates Week representation at travel promotions in the USA, and through discounted travel packages at festival time. Plans are in train to generate an economic impact study on the festival.

Cayman Turtle Farm

In light of the major damage sustained by the Turtle Farm on 4 November 2001 in the wake of Hurricane Michelle, the Government endorsed the Board of Directors' decision to relocate the Farm's existing seaside operation to the Farm's property on the land side.

A consortium of local firms has been commissioned to carry out the design work for the relocation and the application for outline planning approval has been made for this project. The initial objective is the completion by June of a new breeding pond to house the remainder of the breeding stock.

The Farm's secondary herd continues to be stabilised, evaluated and counted. In light of the losses suffered by the herd in November, processing has been reduced in order to provide the Islands' residents with a sustainable supply of turtle products.

Cayman Airways

In 2002, the Ministry, Board of Directors, and Management of Cayman Airways will continue to plan, evaluate and implement measures aimed at improving the airline's operations. The objective of the new Cayman Airways Board of Directors is to operate a financially viable airline, providing quality passenger and cargo service, promoting economic development in the Cayman Islands, while ensuring safety and reliability as our number one priority.

The board's immediate focus is on pursuing a turn around strategy and developing with the support of the airline's management, a six-month governance action plan which takes into consideration the airline's present precarious financial position and the economic environment in which it operates.

The board believes that in order for the implementation of any strategy to be successful, it is imperative that senior management of Cayman Airways Limited is involved in the development and execution. Consequently, the board has instructed management to develop a business plan covering 2002 and 2003 by February 2002. Future decisions on the airline are largely dependent upon the extent to which this primary task is met and complies with the mandate given by the Board.

Environment

In 2002, the Department of Environment will continue to assist the Ministry in the development and implementation of policies and legislation that afford protection to the environment.

In addition, the Department plans to build on, and complete, the 2001 Marine Parks Review through a public outreach programme and ultimately to implement those recommendations that will take the Cayman Islands' Marine Parks System into the 21st Century.

Agricultural and Industrial Development Board/ Housing and Development Corporation

The Cayman Islands Development Bank (CIDB) is now a reality—the law having been passed last December. It is expected that the Bank will be officially opened by March of this year.

The CIDB will continue in the tradition of its forerunners—the Agricultural and Industrial Development Board and the Housing and Development Corporation—in improving various Government-supported programmes such as the Guaranteed Home Mortgage Scheme, the Student Loan Scheme and the Scholarship Programme.

One of the emphases of the Development Bank will be on housing, as it utilises funds from the recently approved loan from the Caribbean Development Bank. The other is on providing credit, especially for micro-entrepreneurial projects. In both instances, lower income wage earners will be specifically targeted.

Port Authority

With the continued soft economy, the Port Authority forecasts no real increase in cargo tonnage in 2002 over the levels experienced last year. By contrast, the number of cruise ship passengers, which grew by 17 percent to $1.21 million in 2001, is anticipated to again reach record levels in 2002.

The Port Authority has reviewed and revised its plans for enhancing and expanding facilities at George Town. Given the forecasted increases in cruise ship passengers in the near future, the emphasis has now focused on upgrading our cruise facilities. To this end, plans are being finalised for a new cruise tender terminal, the Fort George Terminal, to be located at the site of the present Watler Building. As a second phase of development, the present North and South cruise tender terminals will be redeveloped.

It is expected that construction of the Fort George Terminal will begin in mid-2002. The Ministry, in consultation with the Florida Caribbean Cruise Association is looking at the feasibility of a cruise ship terminal in the district of West Bay.

It is the long-term vision of the Port Authority to utilise the George Town Port exclusively for cruise tourism. The cargo facility would be relocated to a suitable site subject to a feasibility study.

Fire Services

During 2002, in order to maintain the level of competence and efficiency required to meet international obligations, in particular the Airport Rescue and Fire Fighting section, two officers will be attending special advance courses at a recognized institution in the UK. In addition, efforts are underway to bring in a specialist trainer to conduct specific courses in Aircraft Rescue and Fire fighting Tactics and Techniques for the entire service. Staff in Little Cayman and Cayman Brac will be brought to Grand Cayman for refresher training.

The Department will continue to monitor closely for overcrowding in nightclubs and other liquor licence premises that routinely accommodate large groups of people.

The Department will continue to work with the proprietors of a local gas company to identify and upgrade premises not in compliance with adopted Liquefied Petroleum Gas standards and to implement a programme to address the growing problem of the improper use and storage of small liquefied petroleum gas cylinders, particularly among home owners.

Vehicle Licensing Unit

The Vehicle Licensing Unit is presently testing a new computer system in order to increase security and to discontinue time-consuming duplication of data input.

The antiquated cash and deposit procedures are also being reviewed to make them more efficient and secure. Consideration is once again being given to providing licensing services in Bodden Town.

CONCLUSION

Madam Speaker and Honourable Members, as I now conclude my third and final Speech from the Throne, I should like to record my thanks to the many persons who were involved in the compilation, editing and completion of the finished text.

As I shall not have the chance to address this House again, I also wish to record my appreciation of the courtesy and friendliness with which I have always been greeted within this Assembly, whether on official or unofficial occasions. I value my relationship with you, the Legislators, and wish you all well in your important work as the democratic process deepens and matures here in Cayman.

As you now embark on the First Meeting of this new Session of the Legislative Assembly, I pray that the wisdom and compassion of the Almighty will inform and guide the deliberations that will take place in this House. May the Lord continue to direct and nurture the people of these lovely Islands.

Thank you.

OFFICIAL HANSARD REPORT
WEDNESDAY
20 FEBRUARY 2002
11.40 AM
Second Sitting

The Speaker: I invite the Honourable Member for the district of East End to grace us with prayers.

PRAYERS

Mr. V. Arden McLean: Let us pray.

Almighty God, from whom all wisdom and power are derived: We beseech Thee so to direct and prosper the deliberations of the Legislative Assembly now assembled, that all things may be ordered upon the best and surest foundations for the glory of Thy name and for the safety, honour and welfare of the people of these Islands.

Bless our Sovereign Lady, Queen Elizabeth II; the Queen Mother; Philip, Duke of Edinburgh; Charles, Prince of Wales; and all the Royal family. Give grace to all who exercise authority in our Commonwealth, that peace and happiness, truth and justice, religion and piety may be established among us. Especially we pray for the Governor of our Islands, the Speaker of the Legislative Assembly, Official Members and Ministers of Executive Council and Members of the Legislative Assembly, that we may be enabled faithfully to perform the responsible duties of our high office. All this we ask for Thy great name's sake.

Let us say the Lord's Prayer together: Our Father who art in Heaven, Hallowed be Thy Name. Thy Kingdom come, Thy will be done on earth as it is in Heaven. Give us this day our daily bread, and forgive us our trespasses, as we forgive those who trespass against us. Lead us not into temptation, but deliver us from evil. For Thine is the Kingdom, the power and the glory, forever and ever. Amen.

The Lord bless us and keep us. The Lord make His face shine upon us and be gracious unto us. The Lord lift up the light of His countenance upon us and give us peace now and always. Amen.

Report of the Standing Orders Committee to Consider the Proposed Amendment to Standing Order 32(6) of the Legislative Assembly Standing Orders (1997 Revision)

The Speaker: The Honourable First Official Member.

Hon. James M. Ryan: Madam Speaker, on Friday, 15 February 2002, this Honourable Legislative Assembly agreed in accordance with the provisions of Standing Order 87(3), that Private Member's Motion No. 2/02, be referred to the Standing Orders Committee.

The Motion was accompanied by a draft of the proposed amendment which reads:

"BE IT RESOLVED THAT, in accordance with the provisions of Standing Order 87, Standing Order 32(6) be amended as set out in the attached draft proposal.

That Standing Order 32(6) which reads: "32(6) No Member at any one time may speak on any debate for any period of time which, exclusive of breaks, exceeds four hours", be deleted and the following substituted therefor: "32(6) No Member at any one time may speak on any debate for any period of time which, exclusive of breaks, exceeds two hours".

The Motion was moved by Mr. Cline Glidden, Jr., the Fourth Elected Member for West Bay and seconded by Mr. Rolston Anglin, the Second Elected Member for West Bay.

Minutes of Proceedings

The minutes of proceedings are attached to the report hereto.

Committee's Recommendations

The Committee met on Friday, 15 February 2002 and agreed by Majority that Standing Order 32(6) which reads: "No Member at any one time may speak on any debate for any period of time which, exclusive of breaks, exceeds four hours", be deleted and the following be substituted therefor: "32(6) No Member at any one time may speak on any de- bate for any period of time, which exclusive of breaks, exceeds two hours”.

The Committee agrees that this Report be the Report of the Standing Orders Committee to be laid on the Table of this Honourable House. Accordingly, I beg to lay the Report of the Standing Orders Committee on the Table of this Honourable House.

The Speaker: So ordered. Does the Honourable Member wish to speak thereto?

Hon. James M. Ryan: No, Madam Speaker, no further than I have already read the Report. However, with your permission I now wish to move the Motion.

The Speaker: So ordered.

Hon. James M. Ryan: Madam Speaker, in accordance with the provision of Standing Order 74(5), I move that the recommendations contained in the Report be adapted.

The Speaker: Is there a seconder?

Hon. Gilbert A. McLean: Madam Speaker, I beg to second the Motion.

Mr. Alden M. McLaughlin, Jr.: Madam Speaker.

The Speaker: Yes, Second Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. Alden M. McLaughlin, Jr.: The Report is opposed.

The Speaker: If I may refer to Standing Orders 74(5), it says, “The report or special report together with a copy of the minutes of the proceedings of a select committee shall be presented to the House by the chairman or Member of the committee acting on his behalf, and shall be recorded in the minutes of proceedings of the House as having being so presented and the chairman or any Member may, forthwith and without notice, move that the recommendations contained therein be adopted, modified or rejected, and if the Motion is seconded and unopposed the Presiding Officer may forthwith and without debate put the question thereon.”

The Motion has been opposed by the Second Elected Member for George Town. I shall put the question as the question is that the Report be hereby adopted.

All those in favour please say Aye. Those against, No.

Ayes.

Mr. Alden M. McLaughlin, Jr.: No.

The Speaker: The Ayes have it. Is there a call for a Division? Second Elected Member for George Town.

Point of Order

Mr. Alden M. McLaughlin, Jr.: Madam Speaker, on a point of order.

The Speaker: Please let me hear your point of order.

Mr. Alden M. McLaughlin, Jr.: It is in relation to the procedure which is required by Standing Order 74(5).

What the Standing Order, in my view, indicates is that if a Motion is brought moving the adoption, modification, or rejection of the report and the report is then seconded, it is only in a case where the report proceeds unopposed, that the presiding officer is entitled to forthwith and without debate, put the question.

Madam Speaker, the Report was opposed and therefore, in my respectful submission, before the question can properly be put, there has to be an opportunity for debate on the Motion.

The Speaker: I take your point of order Honourable Member. The Floor is now open for debate. The Second Elected Member for the district of George Town.

Mr. Alden M. McLaughlin, Jr.: Thank you, Madam Speaker.

When this Honourable House sat to hear the delivery of the Throne Speech last Friday, immediately following the delivery of the Throne Speech with very little notice to Members on this side of the Floor, Private Member's Motion 2/02 was moved by the Fourth Elected Member for West Bay and seconded by the Second Elected Member for West Bay.

That Motion reads as follows: -“BE IT RESOLVED that in accordance with the provisions of Standing Order 87, Standing Order 32(6) be amended as set out in the draft attached proposal”. Which reads . . .

The Speaker: Honourable Member, if I may, I would ask if you would exercise with caution and refrain from resurrecting the debate that ensued on a Motion that a vote has already been taken and passed, seeing that the Motion was passed unanimously and there was no division called on that particular Motion on Friday of last week. Please proceed accordingly.

Mr. Alden M. McLaughlin, Jr.: Thank you, Madam Speaker. I was simply trying to read the text of the Motion so that my debate would be understood. May I proceed to do that, Madam Speaker?

The Speaker: Honourable Member that Motion was discussed at length and has been put to bed. I would invite you to discuss on the relevancy of your objection.

Mr. Alden M. McLaughlin, Jr.: I am in your hands, Madam Speaker.

As a result of that Motion—on which there was no debate—the question of a proposed amendment to Standing Order 32(6) stood referred to the Standing Orders Committee. A meeting of the Standing Orders Committee was called immediately following the rising of the House. During the course of the deliberations of that Committee a number of issues were raised. The result was that a number of the Members of that Committee (the First Elected Member for George Town, the Elected Member for East End, the Elected Member for North Side and I) took issue with the proposed amendment. I should note that the Third Elected Member for Bodden Town was off the Island and therefore not in attendance.

Our position was that to amend the Standing Order in the manner proposed, which would reduce the length of time a Member is entitled to speak on any debate from four hours to two hours, without affording the Minority Members of this Honourable House some protection—some written assurance contained within the Standing Orders themselves—that their right to equal and adequate time to debate matters was a situation which we could not agree with.

Madam Speaker, generally speaking, none of us had any real issue with the reduction of the time. However, we felt that there were some Motions such as the debate on the Throne Speech and the Budget that may well warrant more than simply two hours. But our fundamental disagreement with what is being proposed is that we have sat on this side of this Honourable House and since the 8 November 2001, the Standing Orders of this Honourable House, which relate to the giving of notice, have been suspended 39 times. The alacrity with which the Government suspends Standing Orders, we fear, may well find us in the position that while we are limited in our debate to two hours, they have the ability under the Standing Orders to suspend Standing Order 32(6), thereby giving their Members the ability to debate indefinitely on any matter they so choose.

So, we suggested that to afford all Members of this Honourable House equal and adequate time to debate all issues—so that there would be no question that our right to speak would be curtailed, and the right of Members of the Government to speak would be capable of extension indefinitely—we should write into the relevant Standing Orders a provision to the effect that the suspension of that Standing Order 32(6) to extend the debate of any Member should be subject to your discretion. And that you should only exercise that discretion if you are satisfied that to do so would not result in an infringement of the rights of the Opposition to free speech and equal time to debate all issues.

We also noted that if in fact the time for all debates was to be shortened to two hours there should be provision for the borrowing of time between Members. This happens in some other parliaments. This provision would actually facilitate and expedite the business of this Honourable House, as both the Government and the Opposition would then be in a position to designate the Member who is best suited to debate a particular issue, knowing full well that that individual would have adequate time to deal with the matter comprehensively. And, if the two hours proved inadequate they could borrow their required extension from other Members who were like-minded on that particular Motion.

We put these points across and we were given leave pursuant to Standing Order 74(3)(h) to put in a concise written statement of our reasons for such dissent. That was on Friday evening. We went to work and we prepared that concise written statement of the reasons for our dissent and submitted it to the Clerk. The meeting which had been set up from the previous Friday was duly convened on Monday at 3 pm to consider our dissenting statement.

Madam Speaker, I know you are aware of this because you were there. Astonishingly, however, having considered the written statement that we had submitted in accordance with the relevant Standing Order, the Committee chose to reject it. There was an attempt by some Members of the Committee to incorporate some parts of the reasons for dissent. I am not sure where it would have been incorporated, but I believe they had in mind incorporating it into the main report. There were some who had fundamental problems with the proposal that the extension of the relevant Standing Order to give additional time to Members should be within the discretion of the Speaker.

And so I am still struggling to understand how we arrived at a situation, whereby leave is given by the Committee for us to prepare a dissenting report but because having seen the dissenting report it did not accord with what the Government wished. The report is not appended to the report of the Standing Orders Committee.

The Speaker: Honourable Member instead of referring to Government, it would be more accurate to say the Majority of the Committee.

Mr. Alden M. McLaughlin, Jr.: I am grateful to you Madam Speaker—the Majority of the Committee.

I suppose the problem is that the Committee seems to believe, or at least some dominant Members of the Committee seem to believe that the other Members of the Opposition, including myself, are only entitled to dissent if our dissension finds favour with them. That, in my respectful submission, makes a mockery of the whole process.

I did not, nor did any other Member of the Opposition, expect the Government to agree with the report that we have prepared. Neither did we expect our dissenting report to be adopted by the Committee. The whole point of the exercise and the whole reason why there is relevant Standing Order dealing with a dissenting report, is because the Standing Orders recognise that in a legislature which is supposedly governed by democratic principles, those who have the Minority view will always be out-voted. However, the right to put forward that dissenting view is championed and held sacred. The exercise by the Standing Orders Committee on Monday, in my respectful submission, has driven a coach and horses through this fundamental principle.

We are now at a point where our right to dissent and to have that dissension recorded and tabled in this Honourable House has been abrogated.

There are some Members of the Standing Orders Committee who have a skewed view of what democracy is all about. The only bit of it that they understand is that the Majority rules. I accept that. The Majority rules, but the protection of the rights of the Minority is critical to the whole democratic process. It is fundamental and when we become intolerant of the other person's opinions and views and intolerant of his right to state his views, we are walking down the road to authoritarianism.

Madam Speaker, there is a reason why we have Standing Orders. If the rules were pure and simple Majority rules we would need none of this. But every Member of this House is supposed to be governed by these rules. The reason they are there in writing is that when we start the game we know what the rules are and we are all supposed to play by them. The rules are not made for the Majority, in fact, their function is principally to protect the Minority because the Majority, as the Minister for Tourism and the Fourth Elected Member for West Bay are fond of saying, 'The Majority rules! They can do what they want'.

Point of Order

Mr. Rolston M. Anglin: On a point of order, Madam Speaker.

The Speaker: Please state your point of order.

Mr. Rolston M. Anglin: Madam Speaker, I have listened carefully to the Second Elected Member for George Town and we are supposed to be debating the Report of the Standing Orders Committee. He is talking about totalitarianism and all this stuff. The Member is way off the topic. He is doing as he did in his submission on Monday; talking about things outside the scope of the exercise and simply playing politics trying to rouse the public.

The Speaker: I have listened to your point of order. The Second Elected Member for George Town I would draw your attention to Standing Order 36(1) and ask that if it is your desire to continue your debate, to do so within the ambit of that Standing Order.

Mr. Alden M. McLaughlin, Jr.: Thank you, Madam Speaker.

As a result of this amendment, we are in a situation where we are without the ability given to the Chair; to you, Madam Speaker, which we sought—and given the propensity of the Government to suspend these Standing Orders, our right to dissent and to be given equal time to debate issues is at severe risk.

Dr. the Hon. Frank S. McField: Madam Speaker.

The Speaker: Is there a point of order?

Point of Clarification

Dr. the Hon. Frank S. McField: Madam Speaker, on a point of clarification, I would like to ask the Chair. . .

The Speaker: Would the Honourable Second Elected Member give way to the Minister of Community Affairs?

Mr. Alden M. McLaughlin, Jr.: No, Madam Speaker. If he has a point of order let him make it. I shall shortly conclude and then he can say what he wishes to say.

The Speaker: Please conclude, because under the provisions in Erskine May, if a Member stands to make for elucidation or clarification, one cannot make a quantum leap to go to a point of order unless it is a separate point of order. So please proceed.

Mr. Alden M. McLaughlin, Jr.: Madam Speaker, in concluding, for completeness I would refer to the minutes of the Standing Orders Committee of the meeting held on Monday, 18 February 2002. In particular to the Motion which was moved by the Honourable W. McKeeva Bush, OBE, JP, Minister for Tourism, to delete paragraph 3 of the dissenting statement and ultimately as a result of objections raised, the Motion was amended by the same Minister that the entire dissenting statement be rejected.

I wish to record that those who voted for the rejection of the dissenting statement were:

Honourable Juliana Y. O'Connor-Connolly, JP
Honourable W. McKeeva Bush, OBE, JP
Honourable Linford A. Pierson, OBE, JP
Honourable Roy Bodden
Honourable Gilbert A. McLean
Dr. the Honourable Frank McField
Mr. Rolston M. Anglin
Mr. Cline A. Glidden, Jr.
Mr. Lyndon L. Martin

Those who voted against the rejection of the dissenting statement were:

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts, JP
Alden M. McLaughlin, Jr.
Ms. Edna M. Moyle, JP
Mr. V. Arden McLean

Absent from the vote were:

Honourable George A. McCarthy, OBE, JP
Honourable David F. Ballantyne,
Capt. A. Eugene Ebanks

Mr. Anthony S. Eden [who was, as I said earlier, off the Island].

Madam Speaker, I believe I have now set the record straight. I believe we all now know what the Members on this side objected to, what they proposed as an alternative, and the view taken by the Standing Orders Committee.

Thank you, Madam Speaker.

The Speaker: The Honourable Leader of Government Business.

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: Thank you, Madam Speaker.

I doubt that this Government will ever do anything that those on that side [the Opposition] will agree to.

A Motion was brought and there was a unanimous decision to carry it to Standing Orders Committee. I do not need to go through all that happened but I can tell you that there was a tremendous amount of time on Friday and Monday on this matter. Approximately over five hours were spent haggling over a supposition on the part of the Opposition.

In the first instance in the meeting they had nothing to say. On the break they came back with a position that we must not cut from four hours to two hours but cut from four hours to three hours on the Throne Speech and Budget Debate. They also wanted to be able to use their terminology 'borrow time', which I believe that is done in the United States House of Representatives. I do not know about it being a Commonwealth procedure or a Westminster form of Government procedure.

Madam Speaker, they wanted an assurance that a Speaker should have the discretion to allow Members to speak longer than two hours. Well, this would be defeating the whole purpose of the action to cut down on the long speeches by the majority of us on every item in this Honourable Legislature to save time. That is the purpose of trying to cut back on the speeches.

However, we are not going to save time, as you can hear, because the Opposition speaks and counts every word; they draw out every item; they complain about every suspension no matter how well meaning it is or how much it is done to facilitate the Government, which must be done. Then there is the Member who just sat down who enjoys calling my Ministry or me into question and talks about democracy—however, whether we like it or not the Majority of Members form the Government.

The Government must be reasonable. That is the tenant of democracy but it does not say anywhere that a government must be kicked in the back; kicked in the face; slapped down every opportunity that the Opposition gets and we sit back and say, 'What nice guys the Opposition are and what bad boys we are as a government!' It does not work that way. The Majority is the Government and that is what democracy says in our Westminster style of government, and we must be reasonable.

There is no unreasonableness in what the Government is doing. In fact, we have talked about it for a long time, but no one had the gumption. We all wanted that same opportunity – to get up and make the long four-hour speeches. Who is to say if you give them the right in the Standing Orders to get more time – because they are afraid that the Government is going to stop them – that we are not going to get a Speaker at some point who will say to the Government, "No you should not have that same right" if you gave that prerogative to the Speaker.

There is no question before this Honourable House to take away any right of the Minority. The action taken to cut speeches from four hours to two hours binds the Majority (the Government) as it binds the Minority (the Opposition). Equal time will be theirs as it will be ours, no more, no less. That is what is contained in the amended Standing Order.

Madam Speaker, the confusion of borrowing time, what would it do for us? Confuse the whole system! We already have a shortage of staff in this Legislature and an abundance of committees and work that we cannot get to, yet they are stifling the work by talking about borrowing time?

This whole effort of theirs was to confuse the situation because they could not live with the two hours so they gave you several scenarios, knowing full well that the Government could not accept them. They think they are smart but they are no smarter than the Members on this side.

In the Select Committee I said that they could make a report, because that is what it contains; practice and procedure. Also Standing Order 74(h) of the Standing Orders specifically states that, "A Member of a select committee dissenting from the report of a majority of that committee may, by its leave, put in a concise written statement of his reasons for such dissent, and such statement shall be appended to the report".

The Committee allowed that by saying first of all that their statement had to be brought back so that it could be considered by the Committee. What else could happen? That is what is supposed to happen.

As a matter of administrative procedure and interpretation, it is clear that the intent of the Standing Order is to ensure that the dissenting member(s) of the Select Committee has the leave of the Majority of that committee to submit such concise written statement of his (or their) reasons for dissent. And that he (or they) would enjoy such leave at all times.

That is to say that the majority of a select committee may give leave to a Member(s) in the minority to submit a dissenting report, and that such consent or leave to submit the dissenting report must continue until such time as the final report is actually submitted or tabled.

It is unfathomable to suggest that where leave is given to submit a report, and such dissenting report is submitted with contents which would cause more division, which is derogatory, inflammatory, or otherwise inappropriately critical of the Majority's position, then it is within the remit of the majority of the Select Committee pursuant to Standing Order 74(h), in my opinion, to withdraw its leave consent, et cetera, for such dissenting report to be appended to the final report prior to the tabling of the Majority report.

To suggest that the majority of the Committee would not have this ability to withdraw the said leave in the circumstances outlined would be to render the Standing Order impracticable, insofar as dissenting Members would be completely at liberty to state in whatever manner desired, without the Majority of the Committee having any recourse whatsoever no matter how incorrect, divisive or inappropriate such dissenting report maybe.

Now, the Second Elected Member from George Town who somehow thinks that he is the 'Law Bible' in this House and who is really 'wet and green behind the ears, maybe green all over' must learn practice and procedure first. That is what binds this Legislature and all Parliaments.

Further, to suggest that the Government may, by suspension of Standing Order 32(6), abuse the time limit set out therein by allowing itself and its Members substantial extensions of time permitted for speaking while limiting the position of the Opposition to sufficient debating time, is to attribute the Government with undemocratic practice and label the Government as unfair.

Such a statement is—well, Madam Speaker, there you go [inaudible comment in background] — that is the type of person we have to deal with. Such a statement is further inflammatory as it seems to suggest that the Honourable Speaker's discretion in the matter of the suspension of the Standing Order will somehow be fettered. I think that is the most serious and inappropriate contention.

It was agreed at that meeting on Friday that the setting report of the minority Members of the Select Committee would be considered by the Majority of the Committee. Clearly, such consideration was to be given pursuant to Standing Order 74(4)(h) insofar as the Committee then intended to determine whether the dissenting report would be appended to the final report to be tabled. Had there been no discretion in the matter and no opportunity to consider the substance of their report, no opportunity for consideration would have arisen in the first place.

So, Madam Speaker, accordingly, Standing Order 74(4)(h) (read together with the fact that the meeting of Friday, 15 February 2002 provided for a consideration by the Committee of the dissenting report, and given the inflammatory content of the third paragraph of the dissenting report), gives clear substantial equivocal basis for the majority of the Select Committee to reject the appending of the dissenting statement prior to the tabling of the report of the Select Committee by withdrawing its leave so to do. It is absolutely clear and the Members on that side may huff and puff as long as they want, but this House of stone stands! And I hear them groaning, but they can continue to do that too.

Madam Speaker, the Member has once again tried to deride and cry down the Government by talking about the suspension of Standing Orders. But those Standing Orders, such as giving of notice to be able to take a matter through all of its stages, have not been done for the first time. I do not know how many times it was done during last year alone, but it was done a lot of times. This is my fifth term in this House and you can believe there have been many times when suspensions have been taken on many different matters, but never in recent times to allow anyone to speak longer. That is the crux of the matter. He would like everyone to believe that the whole legislature system is crumbling after he stopped running from the Back Bench on 8 November 2001. Madam Speaker, it is hard to believe, but I can tell you it will not happen.

So, I do not think that any right of the Minority is abused or taken away, or fettered in any shape or form, except the right to speak for four hours. And that right is also taken away from all of us on this side, every one of us. Now, I will wait to hear what the others have to say, but I do not think the Government is doing anything wrong here today. So, with that we would hope that the Report stands. Thank you very much, Madam Speaker.

The Speaker: Does any other Member wish to speak?

The Second Elected Member for the district of West Bay.

Mr. Rolston M. Anglin: Thank you, Madam Speaker.

This Report which is now before us has come about because there was a general feeling that the workings of the House needed to be more efficient in order to deliver to the public of these Islands more effective governance.

Certainly, most Members would agree that we do need to have a reduction in the time. When you set the parameters, what might ordinarily take a person four hours to say, if persons know they only have two hours they more than likely will get it all said. In my campaign manifesto on page 12, we campaigned on this exact issue saying that we would try to improve the efficiency within the Legislature by reducing the debate to two hours per Member.

Madam Speaker, there was much said by the Second Elected Member for George Town, some of which, if not replied to, would leave within the minds of those who do not understand the exercise that brought about this Report, a certain opinion or conclusion. In my humble submission that may not be accurate.

In fact, I call on the Honourable Minister for Education to quickly try to get within our school system some teachings of the way in which our country works.

For if we leave it up to the Second Elected Member for George Town, by the time we are through in November 2004 the public will be so confused that they would not know whether they are coming or going.

The Speaker: Is that your opinion Honourable Member?

Mr. Rolston M. Anglin: That is my opinion, Madam Speaker.

First of all, there was mention made to suspensions of Standing Orders. I believe it is true to say that the Standing Order currently being amended was not suspended in the year 2001. Where is the precedent, as lawyers would say, that led that Member to infer that other suspensions of Standing Orders would imply that the Government or any other government would suspend this particular Standing Order? In fact, I would dare say that if we checked the records this particular Standing Order has probably been waived once or twice over the last decade.

Madam Speaker, on the issue of borrowing time, those in the listening public who do not understand parliamentary practice need to understand that in places where time is borrowed, speakers, in comparison to those in Cayman, have an insignificant amount of time to speak in the first place. In the United States you can borrow time but each member can only speak for five minutes. That is why you borrow time because another Member may need to speak for, say, a half hour which would be a long time under their system.

Certainly we get a view of what the Opposition would seemingly want to provide to this country in terms of leadership if they were the Government. This shows a complete lack of understanding of parliamentary practice and procedure to imply that in a jurisdiction where there are two hours already for a Member to debate, that we are now going to allow the time to be borrowed.

Where time is borrowed, there is an insignificant amount of time allotted to Members in the first instance in relation to Cayman. The Members in those places, yes, they borrow time because their time is extremely short. Every other territory that hears of the speaking time in the Cayman Islands has a quiet laugh because they see it as being so ridiculously long.

Madam Speaker, the Standing Orders of this House should be clearly understood. They are the rules by which this House operates. They are not designed primarily to protect Minority Members. Provisions are in Standing Orders to protect every single one of us. There are provisions in these Standing Orders for us to make personal statements; to make statements of clarity; for Ministers of Government to make statements; there are rules of debate; there are rules for committees; the Standing Orders Committee, the Public Accounts Committee, the Business Committee, the House Committee. They are rules!

The inference by the Second Elected Member for George Town is that the Standing Orders, as he said, were there to protect the Minority. So, what will the public believe if we are here amending them? That the Majority of the Standing Orders Committee must be, if you are amending them, taking away that protection?

There is also another matter that the Member brought up when he said that some Members of the Committee seem to have fundamental problems with the Minority report. I was one of the Majority Members who voted for that not to be appended to the report. He read the list of persons who voted to not have that included in this report, I think it was some nine persons. All, not some, Members had a fundamental problem with the dissenting report.

I can say here in the record that I do have a fundamental problem with the way in which the Second Elected Member for George Town gets up in this House filibusters and misleads the public with this nonsense! I have pointed out three points, the foundation of his debate, none of which, in my mind, makes any sense and some of which are misleading. I repeat them, Madam Speaker. Firstly, Standing Order 32(6) was not waived. It was never requested to be suspended during the year 2001. So, in my humble submission, there is no reason for anyone to infer that this is now going to be the case. I challenge that Member to do the research and report back to this House how many times that Standing Order has been waived in the last ten years.

The issue of borrowing time has to do with jurisdictions where there is an insignificant amount of time anyway, and so when the parties involved seek to have one particular member speak on an issue, they do borrow time.

As I said, if you speak to most people in the Commonwealth, their Parliament allows one quarter of an hour of debate time, that is, 15 minutes. We are lowering debate time from four hours to two hours. Two hours is still a lot of time.

Madam Speaker, I have never been accused of being at a loss for words. I could easily have debated matters in this House beyond the four hours. I have gone the four hours on issues already. I could have said a whole lot more relevant matters in regards to certain of those Motions, but did I go and say to the Majority, "Well you know I could go on for another half hour or another hour, let us suspend the Standing Order?" No! This Standing Order is one that I think all reasonable Members of this House recognise as one that . . . Listen, there is no need for any suspensions; two hours are still more than enough time to debate any issue.

I would also like to say that where there is properly organised party politics you find that each Member of those parties gets up and makes a point. That is why they can survive with allowing their Members to speak for only five minutes—because each Member gets up and makes a separate point.

I believe there are still enough Members in this House to properly debate any issue that comes before it within two hours, per Member. That is more than enough time. There are five Members who are not on the Government Bench. Five times 2 make 10. That makes 10 hours for them to speak on a particular matter.

Madam Speaker, I would like to put this whole matter into some semblance of perspective. Under what was Standing Order 32(6), each Member could speak for four hours. Under the Standing Orders, Back Bench Members can bring three Motions per sitting to this House. There are 18 Members in this House. If 18 Members spoke for four hours that would be 72 hours. We work here for some four-and-a-half hours a day, that equates to somewhere around 15 days if each Member utilises his four hours. If each Back Bench Member were to bring three Motions, that would be 30 Motions. Thirty Motions, times 15 days, add up to a lot of days.

Within the provisions of our Standing Orders, if every Member brought three Motions, and if every single Member debated for four hours, we would be here for over a year. That is how we would run the country. Needless to say, there would be no running of the country. People do not go to the polls every four years to elect us for that. They elect us to come here to be concise and do their business: we are here at the will of the people. As I said earlier, this was in my campaign manifesto. So, I think it is clear that this is one of the points that I was elected on. The people want the country to be run more efficiently. We see that there is a need to improve in this particular area.

In conclusion I would like to say that the Report is the report of the Majority of the Committee. Nine persons voted against the dissenting Report. I think that the listening public would clearly understand that there is a need for us to be more efficient.

I admit I have spoken for four hours. I seconded this Motion. Two hours is more than enough time. There has been no infringement on the rights of the Minority. There is nothing here that would lead us to conclude accurately that there is anything undemocratic about this Motion or this Report. In fact, it is getting more towards what democracy should be.

It should be about efficient representation to constituents. It should be about us being in and out of here in a timely manner; being effective; being out there in our communities with our people offering them the representation that they deserve. Not to be in here filibustering; not to be in here misleading the public, but to be out there doing work for them. That is what we are being paid to do. Thank you, Madam Speaker.

The Speaker: Does any other Member wish to speak?
The Member for East End.

Mr. V. Arden McLean: Thank you, Madam Speaker. I rise to debate the Motion that is currently before us. That is to accept the Report of the Standing Orders Committee. I am cognisant of the fact that I am allowed four hours now, but I will not take that. I also recognise that I am 'wet behind the ears but I am certainly not green all over: today I am in grey. (Members' laughter) When I was elected to this Honourable House I too campaigned on the basis that time for debate must be shortened. I will not retract that because, other than being here, there is need to get on with the work of the country that is required of the 18 Members of this Honourable House. So much so, that I further proposed—and I had recent discussions with Members of the United Democratic Party, particularly the Minister for Health—the possibility of this House sitting later in the day to facilitate the Ministers and Official Members getting the work done. Of course, there are other issues that need to be addressed, but I say that only to point out that I support efficiency and effectiveness, which reducing the hours of debate in this Honourable House would bring about.

I did not, and I do not believe any other Member of the Opposition has any fundamental problem with reducing the hours of debate. My dissent was on the basis that there are times when one may find the need for an extended debating period and in those circumstances I still believe that the Presiding Officer should have the discretion, once petitioned, to extend it or not to extend it.

Madam Speaker, we are talking about how much time each Member is allotted (the two hours) and while I am no mathematician, I do know that if the five Opposition Members were to speak for two hours each on any issue that would equate to ten hours. However, if the Opposition elected to appoint one individual to speak on their behalf and the Presiding Officer has the discretion to extend that, for say, half hour, that would only be two and a half and there would be no repetition.

So, what the Opposition is driving at is to get that provision in to further save time and it would also save time on the part of the Government. That is how many parliaments are conducted.

The Second Elected Member for West Bay talked about the borrowing and the adding up of time, comparing it to United States of America and their Parliament, saying how much time we would be wasting in here if everyone exercised the right to bring the allotted amount of Motions and the likes. I would like to draw to the attention of this Honourable House that yes, in America there is a specific insignificant amount of time for debate. I believe it is somewhere around five minutes on an individual basis if they all speak.

Let us do some mathematics: I will show that you cannot compare the Cayman Islands with America when it comes to an individual debate because the House of Congress has 100 Senators. There are 500 minutes on each debate, eight days. The House of Representatives has approximately 324 members. So, on each debate, if the 324 members were given five minutes that would be 27 days. The reason it is lower there is because Parliament is bigger. Here Parliament is made up of 18 Members which justifies having the allotted time a little longer.

Madam Speaker, I totally agree that in other jurisdictions within the Caribbean it is even lower. For instance, in the Jamaican parliament it is one hour, but upon petition from the Leader of the Government, or the Leader of the Opposition, the Presiding Officer has the discretion to extend by half-an-hour. That is all we were asking. When we reflect on the past year there was no time in this Honourable House (that I am aware of, other than the Throne Speech and Budget Address), that the Majority of Members in this Honourable House spoke for four hours—very few times. So, there is no evidence to prove that anyone wants to stand up here for four hours under normal circumstances.

However, the provision that the Opposition wanted to ensure was that the discretion was available and that it is not subjective to the Majority giving it, which is how it is by the suspension of the Standing Orders.

I heard the Minister for Tourism say that this is the 'House of stone'. I say to the Minister for Tourism, the Leader of Government Business, that an injustice is an injustice and 'majority might does not make majority right'. I did not make that up. A very learned individual by the name of Robert A. Dahl in his book on Democracy said that.

I understand how this works. No one needs to tell me how the Majority and the Minority work. Obviously, the Government is the Majority and it is the Government's job to run the country. In so saying, the Government must have its way, but the Opposition (Minority) must also have its say. When the Minority's say is encroached upon and prevented, then we are no longer a democracy.

Madam Speaker, when the political leader of this country can get up in this Honourable House and say that this is a 'House of stone', it is not good for our people. I wonder how the Government thought that we, the five Members on this side of this Honourable House, came to be here. This is called representative government in this country. We went to the polls also and we were elected on the same basis that they were. We must be respected as such and when any man or woman or any Member enters into . . .

Point of Order

Mr. Lyndon L. Martin: On a point of order, Madam Speaker.

The Speaker: Please state your point of order.

Mr. Lyndon L. Martin: Madam Speaker, under 36(1) Relevance, the debate here today is on whether the time for debate should be two hours or four hours, not on the fundamentals of democracy.

The Speaker: I take your point Honourable Member. As a matter of fact, I was just at the point of calling that to the Member's attention. Honourable Member for East End, I would ask you to keep within the specific sphere of Standing Order 36(1) and please proceed accordingly.

Mr. V. Arden McLean: Thank you, Madam Speaker. But, the Minister for Tourism got up here and started talking about the Majority and the Minority.

The Speaker: Honourable Member, please if I may proceed. I have asked for you to continue in that vein and specifically put, I would ask that you refrain from bringing in any matter that is irrelevant. I have already ruled on what I thought was irrelevant so please do not re-enter that arena. Please continue.

Mr. V. Arden McLean: Thank you, Madam Speaker.

I was going on to say that whenever a dissenting report is submitted by any Member of this Honourable House it must be respected in that vein. The mere fact that a dissenting report we submitted asks leave of the Standing Orders Committee to submit a dissenting statement, that dissenting statement was not to dissent to the reduction. With your permission I would like to read it.

Point of Order

Dr. the Hon. Frank S. Mcfield: Madam Speaker, on a Point of Order.

The Speaker: Please state your point of order.

Dr. the Hon. Frank S. McField: Madam Speaker, the point of order has to do with relevance. The Member is now speaking about the procedures in the Standing Order Committee. We are here discussing the report of the Standing Order Committee and if we are to discuss the issues in the Committee then we might as well go back to the Committee.

The Speaker: Thank you, Honourable Minister Member for East End. I draw your attention to Standing Order 74 (h). I understood when you were speaking that you were doing so on behalf of others not dissenting to the report as such and I would ask if that is your position. Could you please repeat what you said?

Mr. V. Arden McLean: Madam Speaker, I said that we (the other Members who were dissenting with me) were not dissenting to the hours, we were dissenting to the Report because we had a difference in opinion and we wanted it to be known.

The Speaker: Honourable Members, I have listened to both sides and I have looked since Friday in particular, very carefully at Standing Orders 74(4)(h) and I would not only rule that it is irrelevant but I should also wish to state that dissent from the Report is an inherent right of any Member of the Standing Orders Committee. As I understand it and therefore rule, leave is for a concise written statement to be put in. But first there is a pre-condition that there is dissent to the report and the report was a specific item emanating out of a specific Motion.

So, it is against that background that I am asking you to keep it relevant to the Motion that was passed for that specific amendment of the reduction from four hours to two hours, and it is against that background only that I rule on the relevant aspect.

Mr. V. Arden McLean: Madam Speaker, I requested your permission to read the dissenting statement.

The Speaker: Order!

Please continue Honourable Member.

Mr. V. Arden McLean: Madam Speaker, I sought permission from your good self to read the reasons for the dissenting statement the lack of the Opposition. . .

Point of Order

Dr. the Hon. Frank S. McField: Madam Speaker.

The Speaker: Yes, Honourable Minister. Do you have a point of order?

Dr. the Hon. Frank S. McField: A point of order, Madam Speaker.

The Speaker: Please rise.

Dr. the Hon. Frank S. McField: The Honourable Member from East End was still on his feet so I delayed my . . .

Madam Speaker, again the point is one of relevance. The Member is asking the Chair to allow him to read the dissenting statement, which means that the Committee's rejection of that statement being part of the debate is irrelevant, then the Committee might not have met and made that decision. What we are here to oppose or to agree on is the question before the House that the report of the Committee be accepted by the House.

The Speaker: Thank you, Honourable Minister. Leave is not given to read any aspect of that dissenting report that has already been dealt with within the Select Committee. Please proceed.

Mr. V. Arden McLean: Thank you, Madam Speaker.

I draw to your attention that the minutes have been laid on the Table of this Honourable House and are now a public document. It reads as follows, "That a Motion was moved by the Honourable W. McKeever Bush, OBE, JP, to delete paragraph 3 of the dissenting statement, objections were raised and the Motion was amended by the same Minister that the entire dissenting statement be rejected". It is on that basis that I was moving in that direction. But I just wanted to draw the attention to that particular section of the minutes, which is now a public document.

I heard the Tourism Minister say that it was 'derogatory' and 'inflammatory' towards the Government. I certainly do not see anything inflammatory or derogatory about submitting a dissenting statement saying that...

Point of Order

Dr. the Hon. Frank S. McField: Madam Speaker, on a point of order.

The Speaker: Please state your point of order Honourable Minister.

Dr. the Hon. Frank S. McField: Madam Speaker, I do apologise. I am not trying to interfere, but I do think that it is important that the Member shows a certain respect for the ruling. And that he moves away from trying to use 'trickery' to introduce an argument in a debate that has to do with the question about whether or not the House accepts the report from the Standing Orders Committee: not whether the Standing Committee was right or wrong for not dealing with the dissenting report.

We are aware that the minutes do say that there was dissent but we are also aware that the Committee did not see fit to include that dissenting report as a part of the report to be debated here now. And I would ask that you ask the Member, humbly, to move away from that type of discussion.

The Speaker: Honourable Minister, I have already asked the Honourable Member for East End not to get into the contents because it was dealt with in an ordinary amount of time in the Select Committee. It was rejected by the Majority through the democratic process and I will not through trickery or otherwise entertain it by any Member, be it Opposition or Government. Please proceed.

Mr. V. Arden McLean: Madam Speaker, thank you.

I really and honestly was not trying to get back into that area because I respect your good self and your ruling. I was merely going to say, before I was interrupted on a point of order by the Minister for Community Services, that if the Opposition dissents to a report which is moving the Standing Orders debating time from four hours to two hours there should be some discretionary powers attached to it. I cannot see anything that is derogatory or inflammatory to the Government in that regard.

Point of Order

Dr. the Hon. Frank S. McField: Madam Speaker.

The Speaker: Honourable Member, please take your seat. I have made a ruling in that regard and I would draw your attention to Standing Orders 40 and 41 and ask you to take due cognisance. Please continue with your debate.

[Cross talk]

The Speaker: Order, Members!

Mr. V. Arden McLean: Madam Speaker, I know the objectives of the Government. It is a time-proven practice of raising objections on relevance to throw one off.

I think the listening public needs to know that all Members of the Opposition, like the Government, are in agreement with being more efficient in here. I think it is incumbent upon us that they know that it was not any trickery, or anything of that matter, on behalf of the Opposition to try and stall anything that was proposed in the Motion brought by the Fourth Elected Member for West Bay. Madam Speaker, when the majority speaks the majority rules.

What the Opposition was trying to do was to propose a section to the amendment similar to that in Standing Order 38 (Closure of debate) where the Presiding Officer has the discretion when a Motion is moved that the question . . .

Point of Order

Mr. Rolston M. Anglin: Madam Speaker, on a point of order.

The Speaker: Honourable Member, please state your point of order.

Mr. Rolston M. Anglin: Madam Speaker, we are here to debate the report of the Standing Committee of Standing Orders, not Standing Order 38. That was not included in the Report. The listening public needs to understand that what the Member for East End just said is a total lie. Points of order are for points of order in this House, not to stall any Member. In fact, any member of the listening public who is fair . . .

The Speaker: Can you please state whether or not that is your opinion Honourable Member?

Mr. Rolston M. Anglin: That is my opinion, Madam Speaker. Those listening will obviously see why we are reducing the debate time because the Member from East End, in my humble opinion, is sitting here wasting the time of the tax payers of this country. It is tedious repetition and irrelevant. If the Member has anything further to give to the report . . .

Point of Order

Mr. V. Arden McLean: On a point of order, Madam Speaker.

The Speaker: Honourable Member, for East End, let me just hear the conclusion and then I will come to your point of order. We cannot have two points of order at the same time. Please continue Second Elected Member from West Bay.

Mr. Rolston M. Anglin: Madam Speaker, the debate is on the Report of the Standing Orders Committee. It is not on Standing Order 38. Therefore, the Member from East End is introducing a matter that is irrelevant to the debate.

The Speaker: Thank you, Honourable Member. I will rule that it is irrelevant. I shall now call on the Member for East End to raise his point of order.

Mr. V. Arden McLean: Madam Speaker, the Member is imputing improper motives when he said that what I said was a lie.

Mr. Rolston M. Anglin: Madam Speaker...

The Speaker: Member for West Bay, just give me one moment please. I have listened to the terminology that you have used and I would ask that you be given time to give justification for that. If it is not a position that is factual, then I will ask you to withdraw it. So please proceed with your justification.

Mr. Rolston M. Anglin: Madam Speaker, points of order in the Standing Orders are for points of order in the House. The Member for East End said that points of order are used by the Government to stall and to interrupt speakers. If we want to go back to the tape we can do so. That is what the Member for East End said and it is not factually correct.

The Speaker: Honourable Member, it has been deemed that it is unparliamentarily to use the terminology 'lie'. You have opted to use other words that are representative of a nonfactual situation but I would ask you to withdraw the specific word 'lie' as it related to the Honourable Member for East End.

Mr. Rolston M. Anglin: Madam Speaker, I withdraw the word 'lie'. It was nonfactual.

The Speaker: Thank you. The Leader of Government Business, is there a point of order?

Hon. W. McKeever Bush: Madam Speaker, I just want to say to Members, that we are making a mockery of what we are trying to accomplish. Everybody has to have his say but when are we going to be reasonable? We are trying to cut down on the time because of everything that is happening. I am sure that both Government and the Opposition need time. Certainly, the staff of this House have more than they can take, so I am asking all Members to let us take into consideration what we are trying to do because it is making a mockery of what we have set out to do. Look at the time. I know we started late and I apologise for that. It could not be helped because of the reports that had to be tabled. We are really going far with it.

The Speaker: Honourable Member for East End, if it is your desire please continue.

Mr. V. Arden McLean: Thank you, Madam Speaker. To show my reasonableness and agreement with the Member for Tourism, I will close. I will say, however, that we will just have to see, Madam Speaker, how it goes. There will be times if it is necessary for us to bring a motion, or petition your good self to suspend the Standing Orders. The Minister for Tourism, the Leader of Government Business, has said that we will be supported in these endeavours. We will wait to see if that will be done.

Thank you, Madam Speaker.

The Speaker: Thank you, Honourable Member. Does any other Member wish to speak?

The Honourable Minister for Community Services.

Dr. the Hon. Frank S. McField: Madam Speaker, I understand that we need to get on and do our work, but I think it would be a great disservice to the public if we stopped at this particular note without someone trying to, as clearly and precisely as possible, explain what this debate has been about.

This debate has been with regards to a Private Member's Motion that was brought to reduce the time spent debating a specific topic from four hours to two hours. Most of us, including the Opposition, agree that four hours is sometimes lengthy. And when you have to sit and listen to the Members in here speak for four hours, even those of us who enjoy speaking for four hours realise that when we have to listen to it, it becomes tedious.

So, I think that we all in this House agree with the general public that it would be a good thing to reduce the speaking time from four to two hours. Why it has become a Motion that is being used to accuse others of being unfair and undemocratic only speaks to the intensity of the politics between the two sides in this Honourable House at this particular moment.

I would like to reiterate that what we are going to vote on now is that the time be reduced from four hours to two hours. And I do not think that anyone who has spoken here today has been in opposition to that and that is what we should have been speaking to from the very beginning.

Thank you.

The Speaker: Does any other Member wish to speak? If no other Member wishes to speak then I should now put the question. The question is that the recommendation contained in the report of the Standing Orders Committee, be adopted.

All those in favour please say Aye. Those against, No.

Ayes.

The Speaker: The Ayes have it.

Hon. W. McKeever Bush: Can I have a Division please?

The Speaker: Please proceed Madam Clerk.

[Pause]

The Speaker: Honourable Members, there is still a question as to whether or not the Second Elected Member for Cayman Brac was in his chair when the question was put. Could the Leader please clarify?

Hon. W. McKeever Bush: Madam Speaker, as you know we have a problem with the two microphones – the one belonging to the Honourable Minister of Community Services and the one belonging to the Second Elected Member for Cayman Brac. He said 'Aye'. The Clerk was writing and she did not look up. That was not heard because the microphone was not on. You first have to switch on both microphones. He was in the chair during the time of the calling of the division.

Ms. Edna M. Moyle: Madam Speaker, if I may.

The Speaker: Yes, Honourable Member for the district of North Side.

Ms. Edna M. Moyle: When you asked, the Second Elected Member [for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman] he said he was in his chair for the division—that is not being in the chair for the question when it was put, which is the same position that the Second Elected Member for George Town and the Member for East End were in. They were not in their chairs when the question was put. So, they were not asked.

Mr. Lyndon L. Martin: Madam Speaker, could I just address that issue?

The Speaker: Please do.

Mr. Lyndon L. Martin: Madam Speaker, I was in my chair at the time of the question and at the time of the division and I did answer when called for the vote.

Dr. the Hon. Frank S. McField: Madam Speaker.

The Speaker: Yes, Honourable Minister.

Dr. the Hon. Frank S. McField: Madam Speaker, the Second Elected Member for Cayman Brac did leave the room but he was in the room at the time of the question. He left the room after the question was put and came back before the division. He left to call the Minister for Education.

The Speaker: Honourable Clerk, I am entirely in the hands of the House because I did not see what the position was either as it related to the Member for George Town, East End or Cayman Brac. I would simply hope that we would believe each other in such a thing. What I would propose to do is go through each Member and all those who saw the Second Elected Member for Cayman Brac at the time the question was put to raise your hands at this time. It is unfortunate that we have to take such a route but I would ask. . .

Point of Procedure

Hon. Gilbert A. McLean: Madam Speaker, on a point of procedure. I think a technical point is being argued here and for the sake of recording this very important and historical vote, I would ask that whether or not a Member was outside at the time the vote was taken, if you will, Madam Speaker—and I think that the authority lies with the Chair—call a new vote and record the vote of every Member that is presently here, including Members of the Opposition who may not have been here. I understand that someone's name was not called because the person was not here. We are all here now. I would ask, Madam Speaker, if you would allow that.

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: Madam Speaker...

The Speaker: Honourable Leader.

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: I would like to agree with the Honourable Minister of Health so that every name could be recorded in this vote and there would be no question as to anyone being left out. If you could so use your discretion I would support that.

The Speaker: Thank you, Honourable Members. It gives me great pleasure to see that after such protracted debate we can conclude it with an agreement. I would so rule that all Members would have an opportunity to exercise their inherent right of voting on this most important piece of legislation.

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: See how much we like you?

The Speaker: I should put the question once again. The question is that the recommendation contained in the report of the Standing Orders Committee be adopted.

All those in favour, please say Aye. Those against, No.

Ayes.

The Speaker: The Ayes have it.

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: Can we have a Division, Madam Speaker?

The Speaker: Certainly, Mr. Leader. Madam Clerk, please call the Division.

Division No. 2/02

Ayes: 9

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush
Hon. Gilbert A. McLean
Dr. the Hon. Frank S. McField
Hon. James M. Ryan
Hon. David F. Ballantyne
Hon. George A. McCarthy
Mr. Rolston M. Anglin
Mr. Cline A. Glidden
Mr. Lyndon L. Martin

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts
Mr. Alden McLaughlin, Jr.
Mr. Anthony S. Eden
Ms. Edna M. Moyle
Mr. V. Arden McLean

Absent: 3

Hon. Linford A. Pierson
Hon. Roy Bodden
Capt. A. Eugene Ebanks

The Speaker: The results of the Division are 9 Ayes, 5 Noes and 3 Absentees. The Ayes have it.

It is now my proposal to take the luncheon break. We will reconvene at 2.45 pm.

Agreed by majority: That the recommendations contained in the Report of the Standing Orders Committee to consider the proposed amendment to Standing Order 32(6) of the Legislative Assembly Standing Orders (1997 Revision) be adopted.

Proceedings suspended at 1.45 pmProceedings resumed at 3.20 pm

The Speaker: Proceedings are resumed.

The Second Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. Alden M. McLaughlin, Jr.: Madam Speaker, I believe we need to suspend the relevant Standing Order so that questions can be taken after 11 o'clock.

The Speaker: Would you wish to move it?

Mr. Alden M. McLaughlin, Jr.: No, Madam.

The Speaker: Does any Minister/Member, seen that we have passed the hour of 11 o'clock, wish to move the suspension of Standing Order 23(7) and (8) so that the Members can ask their questions beyond the normal question time?

Honourable Minister for District Administration.

Suspension of Standing Order 23(7) and (8)

Hon. Gilbert A. McLean: Madam Speaker, I beg to move the suspension of Standing Order 23(7) and (8) so that questions can be taken after the hour of 11 o'clock in good faith showing the value of suspending Standing Orders to carry on the business of the House.

The Speaker: Thank you. The question is that Standing Order 23 (7) and (8) be suspended to allow Question Time to begin and indeed continue beyond the hour of 11 am. All those in favour please say Aye. Those against, No.

Ayes.

The Speaker: The Ayes have it.

Agreed: Standing Order 23(7) and (8) suspended in order for Question Time to continue beyond 11 am.

QUESTIONS TO HONOURABLE MINISTERS AND OFFICIAL MEMBERS

The Speaker: Second Elected Member for George Town.

Question No. 1

No.1: Mr. Alden M. McLaughlin, Jr. asked the Honourable Second Official Member responsible for the Portfolio of Legal Administration what are the terms of the agreement to retain the services of Andrew Mitchell, QC, in connection with the prosecution of the Euro Bank matter and, specifically—

- (a) when was he retained
- (b) what is his brief

- (c) on what basis is he being paid, ie, hourly rate, brief fee or otherwise
- (d) how much has he been paid to date; and
- (e) from what source of funds is he being paid.

The Speaker: The Honourable Second Official Member.

Hon. David F. Ballantyne: (a) Mr. Mitchell was retained in April 2000

(b) His brief is initially to advise generally on the Euro Bank case and further to advise on the gathering of evidence with a view to the case being presented in the Grand Court. Thereafter to have conduct of the trials and matters incidental thereto.

(c) He is being paid by the hour, or a daily court rate (when in court), there is no brief fee, no retainer. However, he is paid (in addition) airfares and accommodation.

The rates are:

- i. £3,200 per day based on £400 per hour with no further charges per day unless the hours worked exceed 8 hours in any day.
- ii. Reasonable expenses to include hotel or rental of an apartment, £50 per day general living expenses and business class travel.
- iii. No charges for weekends unless the days are worked or on travel days.
- iv. Travel days at 50 percent of the daily rate £1,600.

(d) He has been paid to date £374,463.66.

(e) Initially he was paid from the Attorney General's professional fees vote, and thereafter in 2001 he was paid from funds obtained by Government as part of its asset-sharing agreement under the Mutual Legal Assistance Treaty (MLAT).

The Speaker: Are there any supplementaries?

Second Elected Member for the district of George Town.

Supplementaries

Mr. Alden M. McLaughlin, Jr.: Thank you, Madam Speaker.

I wonder if the Honourable Second Official Member is able to give an indication of how much more it is likely to cost in terms of retaining Mr. Mitchell through the trial, which I believe is scheduled to start in May.

The Speaker: The Honourable Second Official Member.

Hon. David F. Ballantyne: Thank you, Madam Speaker. Mr. Mitchell was retained using the solicitors in London with whom the rates of retainer were negotiated to avoid anyone here, including myself, directly negotiating these matters, so I feel that the House should be aware of that.

The solicitors concerned are from a Firm called Tarlo Lyons. I would just mention that they worked with Mr. Mitchell before, and both Mr. Mitchell and this firm have been referred to us because they had been involved in money laundering cases in Turks and Caicos Islands. But to answer the supplementary question directly, an estimate was provided by Messrs Tarlo Lyons in June 2000 of the cost of the entire case right through to appeal, if necessary.

Those estimates have been revised and the estimate of costs outstanding in relation to the forthcoming trial, and I just want to make sure that I have this correct: this is in Pounds Sterling, in a figure of £450,200. That is allowing for trial preparation of 25 days, 100 court days, 10 travel days, an airfare round trip and subsistence. These are estimates of course. Some of the trial preparation has already taken place and that is confirmed by the case controller on the Euro Bank prosecution, which is another safeguard. In that, the professional fees that are incurred are required to be signed off by the case controller as having been appropriately incurred. I am grateful to both case controllers present today and for the information they have provided.

Just to complete the story: this House approved as part of the budget of the Legal Affairs Portfolio, a figure which represents the total of the figure that I have just mentioned and the figure for another related prosecution. Thank you.

The Speaker: The Second Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. Alden M. McLaughlin, Jr.: Thank you, Madam Speaker. I am grateful to the Honourable Second Official Member for that explanation because we were unable, during the course of Finance Committee, to ascertain those details hence my question.

I wonder if the Honourable Second Official Member can say if these projected costs for the £450,000 thereabouts, estimated to continue the retention of the services of Mr. Mitchell, are those inclusive of the cost of the solicitors to whom he referred or is that an additional expenditure that is not covered by those amounts?

The Speaker: The Honourable Second Official Member.

Hon. David F. Ballantyne: Thank you, Madam Speaker.

Initially we retained solicitors because we had no experience of running this kind of case. However, we were able to effect some economies in that regard and they simply continued in their role of advising on levels of fee. In fact, we employed the solicitor in question directly and saved a considerable amount of money as a result. Maybe there is some solicitor type cost but our aim has been to try to provide the solicitor type support from in-house. The case controllers are really performing that kind of role and there has been less need as time has progressed.

We have made it a specific objective to try to learn the skills involved in running these cases so that we do not continue to incur this kind of expense. However, since it is the first-off case and it is an important one, it was thought prudent to hire an expert (money laundering council) and also to have initial solicitors support. That support has now fallen away and is no longer considered necessary. Thank you.

The Speaker: The Second Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. Alden M. McLaughlin, Jr.: Thank you, Madam Speaker. I want to be sure that I understand the Second Official Member clearly. Am I understanding you, Sir, to say that the instructing attorneys for this case are/and are going to be at the trial, members of the Legal Department?

The Speaker: Second Official Member.

Hon. David F. Ballantyne: That is precisely correct. It may be that members of the Legal Department will also appear as Counsel. That is confirmed by those sitting behind me. The object of this is not to just conduct prosecutions; it is to build up our expertise in the running of these kinds of cases. One would hope they would not be frequent, but when they do occur they do need to be dealt with and they are fairly complex and lengthy undertakings.

Clearly we want to try to minimise all of that and the more expertise that we get and the better equipment that we have, the more able we are to do that.

I would simply add in relation to that issue, that from the solicitors' support that we have had, we took advice about document management systems. The Financial Reporting Unit (FRU) installed that kind of equipment and it has made the task of evidence-gathering considerably simpler. It has also facilitated the disclosure of information to the defence on CD and will have facilitated when the trial is conducted, the presentation of the evidence on the computer screen. Thank you.

The Speaker: The Member for East End.

Mr. V. Arden McLean: Thank you, Madam Speaker. Just to ask the Second Official Member if any efforts were made to retain Counsel for this case locally (that is Queen's Counsel) or within the Caribbean?

The Speaker: The Honourable Second Official Member.

Hon. David F. Ballantyne: Madam Speaker, the retention of Andrew Mitchell was a deliberate choice because of the expertise in anti-money laundering.

Without any disrespect to the local Queen's Counsel, I am not sure that either of those at that time would profess particular expertise in that area. And secondly, Andrew Mitchell was already involved in the region both in Turks and Caicos and in Trinidad and therefore had been acknowledged as something of an expert in the region.

One has to take a view about these things. My view was that we should do all that we could to try to ensure the success of these prosecutions. And given Mr. Mitchell's reputation in the United Kingdom, the fact that he was referred to us by colleagues in Turks and Caicos Islands, where he was funded by the British Government on a large case they had there, and given his international standing, he seemed to be an appropriate choice. It is not every lawyer who would hold himself out (as I am sure more than one person on the other side would acknowledge) as an expert in particular areas.

That is not to say that we would not consider it appropriate in the future to retain lawyers from within the region. But my preference would be that we do not retain any at all—that we seek to prosecute these cases ourselves. And that is why we have a local Crown Counsel as case controller. That is why we are trying to pick up on the experience of running these cases.

As I said at the outset, this is not intended to be a continuing arrangement but it is important when we have such a large case, that we apply what are thought to be the best resources to it, at least in the first instance. Thank you.

The Speaker: Are there any further supplementaries?
The First Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Thank you. Just for purposes of clarity: Where in the substantive answer, under (b) it says, “. . . Thereafter to have conduct of the trials and matters incidental thereto”. Could the Honourable Second Official Member explain, whether that means that the gentleman will be dealing with the trial himself and if that is the case who will be instructing him with regards to the trial?

The Speaker: The Honourable Second Official Member.

Hon. David F. Ballantyne: Yes, Madam Speaker, I can confirm that Andrew Mitchell, QC, will be leading for the Crown in the prosecution. He will be supported by both Crown Counsel and probably Junior Counsel, bearing in mind that each of the defendants is likely to be represented by Queen's Counsel. Therefore, it is thought at present that we need a team of three; that team of three includes the case controller who will be acting as instructing attorney in the case.

It would also be fair to say that other members of the Legal Department may contribute to this process. Some of us are involved in aspects of the management of the case. But the responsibility for the presentation of the case in court will be that of Andrew Mitchell, QC. He has the lead on the issue.

If I may just take the opportunity of saying what matters incidental to the prosecution are. For example, there have been many civil matters in which Mr. Mitchell is also experienced: that is quite unusual for a criminal practitioner. There have been restraint orders and there have been matters in connection with the ongoing liquidation proceedings, which have taken some of his time and indeed some of my own time. So, where we can, we are trying to use our expertise but where we need to learn and acquire experience we are using his. If there is anything else I can assist with I would be happy to.

The Speaker: First Elected Member for the district of George Town.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Thank you. Could the Honourable Second Official Member state—this perhaps is asking an opinion so it would be entirely up to him given the circumstances. And while we do not know what the end result of the case is going to be—is it certainly the intention of the Government to, if at all possible, recoup costs for the trial and if that is the case, how?

The Speaker: The Honourable Second Official Member.

Hon. David F. Ballantyne: I would not want to hazard an opinion but I can give you what my view is about the issue. It really would be for a court at the end of the day to take a decision and I would not wish to seek to venture an opinion about that.

The funding of the case, as the answer indicated, is presently funded from the confiscated asset fund and those monies represent money from previous law enforcement activities. Under the asset-sharing agreement with the United States and the only condition that they apply is that they should be used for law enforcement purposes. So, we are reusing monies, which are not part of Government's recurrent revenues to fund ongoing law enforcement.

As far as assets are concerned, there are funds restrained at present and if at the end of the day persons are found guilty of money laundering, and are found to have benefited from it, it is then open to the Crown to apply to the Court for the confiscation order in respect of any amounts that the court considers that they may have benefited from. I do not wish to predict that but I am merely pointing out that that is open and I believe that it is also open to the Crown, if successful, to apply for its costs. That is as far as I would wish to go if I may, at this stage. Thank you.

The Speaker: The Member for East End. I will allow one more supplementary thereafter.

Mr. V. Arden McLean: Thank you, Madam Speaker. In a previous answer to a supplementary I believe the Second Official Member said that Mr. Mitchell was previously in the Turks and Caicos Islands conducting a money laundering case and Her Majesty's Government had paid for that. I am just wondering if the Second Official Member could tell us if the Cayman Islands Government made any application to Her Majesty's Government to assist with this particular one that we are conducting, since it is our first one also.

The Speaker: The Honourable Second Official Member.

Hon. David F. Ballantyne: First of all, I would like to clarify that the activities of Mr. Mitchell were not during the time that I was there. Just for the record that is not the question, but the second part of it is: I believe that the matter in the Turks and Caicos Islands was of such a scale and their budgetary position was not in the same state as the Cayman Islands, therefore, it was considered. I do not wish to be quoted as an expert on the Turks and Caicos Islands budgetary position, but it is nowhere in the same league as the Cayman Islands and I can assure you that any such application would not have been met with success.

I wish I could tell you differently but I cannot. I think the view would be that we are able (for the reasons I have explained) to fund us not from recurrent expenditure but because law enforcement here has been successful in the past and has built up a confiscated assets fund which is designed to be used for this purpose. That is as helpful as I can be.

The Speaker: The Second Elected Member for the district of George Town.

Mr. Alden M. McLaughlin, Jr.: Madam Speaker, during a response from another supplementary the Honourable Second Official Member explained that Mr. Mitchell had been and is currently retained in connection with other matters outside the remit of this prosecution.

I wonder if the Honourable Member can say whether or not they are separate financial arrangements in relation to those other matters, which are not included in the figures that he has provided this Honourable House with in relation to the substantive question.

The Speaker: The Honourable Second Official Member.

Hon. David F. Ballantyne: Thank you, Madam Speaker. It gives me the opportunity to say that the funding from the Asset Confiscation Fund was approved by the Executive Council as far back as 31 October 2000. That was funding from the Assets Confiscation Fund is a separate account in the Treasury. When Council approved that funding, it also approved funding for the other main money laundering prosecution that is on the way which is the 'Cash for Titles' case, the case controller for which is also present today in anticipation of your being interested in any other matters.

That is the only other major matter in which Mr. Mitchell is instructed and he has the responsibility for advising on that case with a view to its presentation. How that case will be presented is yet to be determined but that is the only matter in which he is presently engaged. But if you would permit me: the funding is separate from which I have reported but it is coming from the same source. If that answers the question. Thank you.

The Speaker: Madam Clerk, next question.

Question No. 2

No. 2: Mr. Alden M. McLaughlin, Jr. asked the Honourable Second Official Member responsible for the Portfolio of Legal Administration what is the status of the Euro Bank prosecution?

The Speaker: The Honourable Second Official Member.

Hon. David F. Ballantyne: Madam Speaker, the status of the Euro Bank prosecution is as follows:

On 9 February 2000, Judith Donegan, Brian Cunha, Ivan Burges, all former officers of Euro Bank Corporation, and Melvin Taves, a resident of Grand Cayman, were charged with offences of assisting another to retain the benefit of criminal conduct contrary to section 22 of the Proceeds of Criminal Conduct Law 1996 (2000 Revision) and conspiracy to assist another to retain the benefit of criminal conduct, contrary to section 306 (f) of the Penal Code (1995 Revision). Charges were laid and warrants issued against a further five persons resident in this jurisdiction.

Additionally, on 5 July 2000 Donald Stewart, the former Chairman and General Manager of the said Bank was arrested and interviewed in connection with offences of Money Laundering. He was charged on the 26 October 2000 with the like offence of conspiracy to assist another to retain the benefit of criminal conduct, contrary to section 306 (f) of the Penal Code (1995 Revision) and is currently on bail. On this date also a similar charge was laid against Donald Fraser, (shareholder and non-executive director of the Bank, not resident in the jurisdiction) and further general charges were laid against Burges, Cunha and Donegan for like offences.

A preliminary inquiry was conducted in the Summary Court in the period January to March 2001 in respect of all individual defendants resident in the jurisdiction. Following upon a finding by the learned Magistrate that the evidence adduced was sufficient to put the accused persons on their trial all were committed to the Grand Court. Trial on indictment is scheduled to commence in that Court on the 27 May 2002. The defendants will have the right to elect trials by Judge or Jury. For money laundering offences, twelve jurors shall form the array.

On the 7 November 2000 the Bank, itself, was charged with eight offences of conspiracy to assist another to retain the benefit of criminal conduct contrary to section 306 (f) of the Penal Code (1995 Revision). Seven of the charges relate to specific accounts held by various overseas customers. One charge relates to the general activity of the Bank in relation to its customers. It alleges that between the 1st day of January 1996 and the 31st day of May 1999, Euro Bank Corporation conspired together with other persons to enter into or otherwise be concerned in arrangements whereby the retention or control by persons of property which was those persons' proceeds of criminal conduct was facilitated knowing or suspecting that those persons would engage or had been engaged in criminal conduct or had benefited from criminal conduct. A Preliminary Inquiry into these charges has not yet been conducted in the Summary Court.

The Speaker: Are there any supplementaries? Second Elected Member for the district of George Town.

Supplementaries

Mr. Alden M. McLaughlin, Jr.: Thank you, Madam Speaker.

From the answer it would appear that it is the intention of the Crown to proceed separately against the bank and that in fact it is not the intention of the Crown for the charges against the bank to be dealt with by the Grand Court at the same time as the other trial would commence on 27 May 2002. I wonder if the Honourable Second Official Member could confirm that that is in fact the case.

The Speaker: The Honourable Second Official Member.

Hon. David F. Ballantyne: Madam Speaker, while I have attempted to be as helpful as I can in relation to these matters, it will be appreciated that these matters are sub-judice. As a consequence I do not think it appropriate to indicate what the Crown's intentions are in relation to certain matters, some of which are presently the subject of appeals so that if the House will permit me I would prefer not to go into further details to avoid any possible prejudice to any matters which are before the courts.

The Speaker: Are you asking, Honourable Second Official Member for a ruling on Standing Order 35(1) which deals with content of speeches in particular to a sub-judice?

Hon. David F. Ballantyne: I would think that that Standing Order might be appropriate in the circumstances. Although I have emphasised my willingness to assist the House I think the interest of justice and the nature of the proceedings should take priority at this time. Thank you.

The Speaker: I am grateful. In accordance with Standing Order 35(1) it is the opinion of the Chair that any further matters as it relates to the trial which is pending for a judicial decision would be sub-judice and I will ask the Clerk to go on to the next question.

Question No. 3

No. 3: Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts asked the Honourable Minister for Health Services, District Administration and Agriculture to give an update on Aqua-culture regarding the ongoing discussions with the Harbour Branch Institute.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for Health Services, District Administration and Agriculture.

Hon. Gilbert A. McLean: There are no ongoing discussions with the Harbour Branch Oceanographic Institution. However, the Ministry of Agriculture is aware of proposals contained in correspondence from that institution, dated 1 November 2001, to the former Minister of Planning, Communications and Works. These proposals will be reviewed and a response forwarded to the institution in due course.

The Speaker: Are there any Supplementaries? The First Elected Member for the district of George Town.

Supplementaries

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Thank you. Can the Minister state, understanding what has been put forth on the substantive answer, whether or not at present the Committee which existed to develop specific policy on Aqua-culture is still functioning and whether or not there is any progress with regards to the specific policy forthcoming?

The Speaker: Honourable Minister responsible for Agriculture.

Hon. Gilbert A. McLean: Thank you, Madam Speaker. The subcommittee that was set up has been examining the . . . Could I have a moment please?

The Speaker: Certainly.

Hon. Gilbert A. McLean: Thank you Madam Speaker. I am advised that the Committee has been examining certain matters as raised by the Member and they should be producing some recommendations to the Ministry by next week.

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Thank you. Could the Minister state if there has been any correspondence with the Harbour Branch Institute since the last letter received on 1 November?

The Speaker: Honourable Minister responsible for Agriculture.

Hon. Gilbert A. McLean: Madam Speaker, no correspondence has been sent to that Institute. It is my understanding that the correspondence was directed to the former Minister but no communication has been made with them since.

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Thank you. Let me say quickly, that I am certain the Minister will understand the spirit I am in. That has been quite some time and not withstanding who the correspondence was addressed to and understanding that, perhaps it will be a little time before decisions can be made with regards to a way forward if there will be any relationship established between the Ministry and that Institute.

I would seek an undertaking from the Minister to look into the matter to see if it might not be prudent, even if there is no decision at present, to correspond with the Harbour Branch Institute just to retain the relationship, while needing the time to come to a decision as regards to what will be the way forward.

The Speaker: Honourable Minister responsible for Agriculture.

Hon. Gilbert A. McLean: Madam Speaker, I think I can give the undertaking to look at the correspondence and to get any information that I can from the sub-committee on diversification and Aqua-culture and make a decision then to correspond with the Institution along the lines that would be in keeping with what was originally communicated from it to the former Minister.

The Speaker: If there are no further Supplementaries we will move on to the next question. Madam Clerk.

First Elected Member for George Town.

Question No. 4

No. 4: Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts asked the Honourable Minister responsible for Community Services, Youth and Women's Affairs, what is Government's present policy regarding the provision of remand facilities for youth?

The Speaker: Honourable Minister for Community Affairs, Youth and Women Affairs.

Dr. the Hon. Frank S. McField: The Government's present policy regarding the provision of remand facilities for youth is that young offenders must be remanded when the Youth Justice, the Juvenile's and the Children's Law require it. However, we are also aware that the majority of our young people live wholesome, drug-free lives and we need to ensure that we provide prevention and (if they offend), rehabilitation services for them.

Government's position is that decisions to detain/remand should be guided by prudent assessments of risk to both the youth and society and should be restricted to instances of compelling evidence that there is a clear and present danger to the youth or the community; that the youth is likely to fail to appear for trial or sentencing; or that the youth will likely commit an additional violation before adjudication or disposition.

As a government, we have approved the National Youth Policy and endorsed the Report of the Committee of Inquiry into the Causes of Social Breakdown and Violence among Youth in the Cayman Islands. Both documents call for preventative action to be taken rather than remand alone. Both documents identify ways in which youth can adopt healthy lifestyles and increase their participation in pro-social activities, thereby reducing the risk factors associated with juvenile deviance. As a result this will decrease the need for an expensive remand facility.

Honourable Members of this Legislature are also aware that there was a proposed Secure Remand Centre, which was projected to cost some $10 million. Finance Committee has not supported this project since [the year] 2000. An alternative to this was the Orchid House Project proposal which would cost some $415,000 in renovations and another $600,000 in recurrent (operating) expenditure per annum. This would mean that we would be spending some $60,000 (excluding maintenance cost) per annum to remand each young person, as there were a total of 9 beds available.

Therefore, Government has made the decision to delay the construction of the Orchid House proposal. This would give the Ministry, for which I hold responsibility, time to examine alternatives in dealing with the need for secure remand facilities and how they can be integrated with rehabilitative programmes for juveniles who have begun to offend.

I also met the Director of Prison who looked at an alternative to Orchid House, which would basically make use of the "old" Women's section of Northward, retrofit it and secure it from the main prison. This would enable the young offenders to be segregated from the adult prisoners. The Ministry has also requested the Department of Substance Abuse to offer more programmes to young people to ensure that we tackle the problem of drug abuse, which is one of the main problems, which our young people face. Honourable Members were also briefed on the revised programme at the Cayman Islands Marine Institute in a statement in the Legislative Assembly on the 19 December 2001.

The Ministry and a representative of the Juvenile Court also had the privilege of attending the 2nd Annual Conference on Juvenile Detention Reform, which was at the invitation of the Annie E. Casey Foundation, through the Associated Marine Institute. On this visit, these representatives were able to gain valuable information on the alternatives to remanding juveniles. This was covered on a recent Public Eye Show. AMI has recently extended another invitation to the Ministry to travel to Tampa and review a programme designed for serious offenders that does not use a hardware secure facility. This invitation was also extended to the Minister of Education. A delegation with representatives from my Ministry, the Ministry of Education and the Chief Justice will make this visit to Tampa in about two weeks' time.

As can be seen from the above, the Government's policy is a multifaceted one that looks at a continuum of care by addressing the problems faced by young people and their parents or guardians. As a Government, we recognise that there are a few young people who will not respond positively to reform efforts and will need to be placed in a secure facility to pay their debt back to society and/or change their way of life.

As the Minister with responsibility for Youth, I am committed to ensure that those numbers are decreased and to support the mass of our youth population. This can be achieved by providing our young people with viable positive alternatives to juvenile deviancy thereby creating and encouraging future leaders and citizens of tomorrow, and not individuals whose only qualification is the ability to survive in a remand facility.

Our next initiative in this quest, based on the works occurring in the more progressive jurisdictions in the USA, and known by the stakeholders (including, judges, police officials, district attorneys, social workers, policy analyst and policy makers) as Juvenile Detention Alternatives Initiative, is to form a multi-agency Task Force that will be tasked with (1) Examining the Eligibility Criteria for juvenile detention; (2) Formulate a risk assessment regime to determine the level of custody that various youth offenders require; and (3) Develop a quality control/monitoring system to track issues such as consistency, accuracy and outcomes.

The Speaker: Thank you, Honourable Minister. Are there any supplementaries?

The First Elected Member for George Town.

Supplementaries

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Thank you. I do understand basically what the answer has stated with regards to policy but just so that the Minister will understand—and I will turn it into a question. When I spoke to the present policy I was thinking that perhaps with the multifaceted approach taking place, there will be an interim period when, while all that is happening – and it might take some time to see the results that the Ministry anticipates – there will be that need during that time. He mentions in the answer that he also met with the Director of Prisons who looked at an alternative to Orchid House, which would basically make use of the 'old' Women's section of Northward, retrofit it and secure it from the main prison. Is the Minister saying that that is proceeding on and during the interim period that is what will be used while the policy is being put into practice?

The Speaker: Honourable Minister for Community Affairs.

Dr. the Hon. Frank S. McField: Madam Speaker, that supplementary was almost as long as my answer. However, I believe that the Member is asking whether or not we will use the facilities at Northward.

The issue is that we do not believe that we should spend $60,000 a year on one child who comes from a family where parents are not even earning $15,000 per year. We do not believe that we can treat the youth in isolation from other factors like the community, the family or the school.

We therefore believe that it is important to try to avoid placing children in lock up. I have tried to understand the philosophy behind the original plans to build a $10 million facility in an island like this. This is not only illogical but the whole idea of building an alternative that would cost $600,000 a year for nine beds was also not the best way to use public funds nor to create the kind of safety, which we need because the safety for the general public will come from rehabilitation.

In instances where we have young persons who will not avail themselves, there is the opportunity for rehabilitation. Those young people will be kept in the secure facilities where the women's cells were at Northward Prison. We have again stated quite clearly that that will be totally physically and socially separate from even the older juveniles (17-25) that will be on the other side. It is a question of the efficiency and expediency of the issue. We would have had absolutely no funds to spend on preventive measures if we have tied this amount of money up in the Orchid House, which does not represent a solution to the people who need to have some type of assistance in dealing with the youth problems that they are experiencing in their families and their communities.

The Speaker: Are there any further supplementaries? If not we will move on to the next question.

The Elected Member for the district of North Side.

Question No. 5

No. 5: Mrs. Edna M. Moyle asked the Honourable Minister responsible for Ministry of Education, Human Resources and Culture if there is an Educational Psychologist on staff at the Education Department in Cayman Brac?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for Education.

Hon. Roy Bodden: There is no Educational Psychologist permanently stationed in Cayman Brac. However, the Brac does receive the services of an Educational Psychologist. These services are provided in a manner that is consistent with similar services in Grand Cayman. In the Cayman Islands, including Cayman Brac, Educational Psychologists are accessed according to a specified referral procedure in accordance with the Special Needs Policy.

According to policy and procedure, referrals to Educational Psychologists are co-ordinated by the Learning/Behaviour Specialists and approved by the school principal. In response to referrals (made according to the accepted procedure) an Educational Psychologist travels to the Brac. The travel budget provided for this service allows four visits per year (two to three days each). In the last four years between 15 and 20 referrals from Brac schools have been processed each year. Given that the total population of students on Cayman Brac is 329, this is in fact a higher degree of Educational Psychological service that is provided for a similar population of students on Grand Cayman.

It should be noted that Educational Psychologists sometimes receive referrals for assessment in intervention in cases that would ordinarily be managed by a School Counsellor. This has also been true for Cayman Brac. This is the first year that a full-time School Counsellor position has been assigned to Cayman Brac. While this is a greater allocation of counselling or resources per student population than is available on Grand Cayman, the Brac has fewer counselling or other Mental health resources. This means that the School Counsellor on the Brac is often dealing with some issues that would ordinarily be managed or supported by other agencies in the context of Grand Cayman.

The Cayman Brac staff have not submitted any referrals requesting services from an Educational Psychologist so far this year. This is possibly due to the fact that previous assessments are still current and that current special needs support staff (Learning/Behaviour Specialists and the School Counsellor) are able to meet local needs.

The Speaker: Are there any supplementaries?
The Member for North Side.

Supplementaries

Ms. Edna M. Moyle: Thank you, Madam Speaker.

I wonder if the Honourable Minister would say how many Educational Psychologists are on staff on the Cayman Islands Education Department (that is Grand Cayman and Cayman Brac) and if he is in a position to say at this time, how many special needs students are serviced by the number of Educational Psychologists that we have on staff.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for Education and Culture.

Hon. Roy Bodden: Madam Speaker, there are two Educational Psychologists permanently on staff. In answer to the second part of the question: I do not have with me at this time the exact number of special needs students that are serviced from time to time. But I can say that the Psychologists service special needs from the private schools when requests are made to the Education Department as well as public schools. I can also say that the number of students serviced will vary from time to time according to the assessments and the requests for the services.

The Speaker: The Honourable Member for North Side.

Ms. Edna M. Moyle: Thank you, Madam Speaker. I wonder if the Honourable Minister could say, given the population of the schools in the Cayman Islands, if two Educational Psychologists are sufficient even though three positions of Educational Psychologists appear in the budget?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for Education, Human Resources and Culture.

Hon. Roy Bodden: Madam Speaker, I am informed that two Educational Psychologists are indeed adequate. Although provisions have been made for a third post which is currently vacant. I think that Honourable Members need to bear in mind that requests are carefully monitored. Since these would involve some counselling, it is anticipated in most cases that with the assessment of the Educational Psychologists and Learning Behaviour Support Unit (and sometimes teachers at the school offering counselling) it is hoped that the majority of these problems can be overcome within a matter of months so that the needs should really be on a reduction basis, rather than increasing expedientially.

The Speaker: The Honourable Member for North Side.

Ms. Edna M. Moyle: Thank you, Madam Speaker. I wonder if the Honourable Minister would give an undertaking to provide the House with the number of special needs children that we have in the school system?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Education.

Hon. Roy Bodden: Most certainly, Madam Speaker. I will give the House that undertaking to provide this and I will make sure that it is categorised, but what I will not do is give the names of any children.

The Speaker: The Honourable Member for North Side.

Ms. Edna M. Moyle: Madam Speaker, I do not care to have the names of the children, I would just like the numbers please.

The Speaker: Are there any further supplementaries? If not Madam Clerk, call the next question.

The Honourable Elected Member for the district of North Side.

Question No. 6

No. 6: Mrs. Edna M. Moyle asked the Honourable Minister responsible for the Ministry of Education, Human Resources and Culture how many hours per week is each Government Primary School given by a speech pathologist.

The Speaker: Honourable Minister for Education.

Hon. Roy Bodden: There are four Speech Pathologists employed by the Education Department. One Speech Pathologist is based at the Lighthouse School to serve the children of the Early Intervention Programme. She also travels to Cayman Brac to provide the service to children referred by the Special Education staff there. The officer makes one visit every six weeks for four days.

Service on Grand Cayman is provided as follows: Each school receives an average of three and a half to five hours per day based on the stated needs of the children. Each officer is timetabled to schools each day as follows:

Name of Schools	Amount of Sessions	Total Hours per Week
Red Bay Primary	4	11
John A. Cumber Primary	3	9
George Town Primary	3	7 ½
Savannah Primary	2	5 ½
Bodden Town Primary	1	3 ½
North Side Primary	1	3 ½
East End Primary	2	5 ½
George Hicks High School	1	5 ½ per ½ term
John Gray High School	1	5 ½ per ½ term
Light House School	9	18 ½

Speech Therapy is not just total face-to-face contact with a child. A session may include planning or parent advice and recommendations.

The Speaker: The Member for North Side.

Supplementaries

Ms. Edna M. Moyle: Thank you, Madam Speaker. I wonder if the Honourable Minister would be in a position to say how many children at each of these Primary Schools are dealt with per session?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for Education, Human Resource and Culture.

Hon. Roy Bodden: Madam Speaker, it is my understanding that in most of these cases it is only one or two children. But the sessions do not exclusively include a session with a child or two children. Sometimes a session can include also working with a teacher and advising a teacher along with a student.

The Speaker: Are there any further supplementaries? The Member for East End.

Mr. V. Arden McLean: Thank you, Madam Speaker. I think the Minister just said that in most cases there is only one child. I take it that he is exempting the Lighthouse School because we all understand that. But if such is the case, why then would Red Bay School be having 4 sessions per week and a total of 11 hours and East End has 2 for a total of only 5½ hours. I wonder if the Minister could explain that to us.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Education.

Hon. Roy Bodden: Madam Speaker, this is a Specialist service, which is most effectively conducted on a one on one basis. And while one has to remember that there may be speech impediments, there are different types of speech impediments. So, it is possible, for example, that children having the same impediment, that one or two can be taken together.

The Speaker: Are there any further supplementaries? The Member for North Side.

Ms. Edna M. Moyle: Madam Speaker, I wonder if the Honourable Minister could tell me how many students at the North Side Primary School require speech pathologists?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for Education, Human Resources and Culture.

Hon. Roy Bodden: Madam Speaker, I would have to give the Member for North Side an undertaking to bring her that statistic as it is not available at this time.

The Speaker: The Member for East End.

Mr. V. Arden McLean: Thank you, Madam Speaker. If it is not available for the East End Primary School, I would ask the Honourable Minister if he would give the undertaking to provide that also.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Education.

Hon. Roy Bodden: Madam Speaker, it seems logical that I should bring the statistics for all of the schools listed here and I shall undertake to so do.

The Speaker: Thank you.
The First Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Thank you. In the substantive answer in the second paragraph it reads, "Service on Grand Cayman is provided as follows: Each school receives an average of three and a half to five hours per day based on the stated needs of the children". I am having difficulty understanding exactly what the statement means. Because if you simply take it to mean between 3½ to 5 hours per day if you multiply that by 5 days—but I do not think it really means that. I am just asking for clarification on that sentence so that we can have it very clear.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Education.

Hon. Roy Bodden: My apologies. That is a typographical error; it should have read 3½ to 5 hours per week.

The Speaker: Are there any further supplementaries? If not, we will move on to the next item of business.

STATEMENTS BY MEMBERS OF THE GOVERNMENT

The Speaker: I have received no statements for today.

GOVERNMENT BUSINESS

Commencement of Debate on the Throne Speech

The Speaker: We have almost reached the hour of 4.30 pm. Is it the wish of the House to commence debate on the Throne Speech, or should we reconvene tomorrow morning?

The Honourable Leader of Government Business.

ADJOURNMENT

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: Madam Speaker, we propose to suspend. I move the adjournment until 10 am tomorrow.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Education.

Hon. Roy Bodden: Madam Speaker, I wish to tender apologies for my absence for tomorrow and Friday, as I will be over in the constituency of Cayman Brac and Little Cayman on official business. I also have some questions scheduled for tomorrow, which I shall make arrangements for one of my colleagues to ask for your permission to withdraw until I return on Monday, God willing.

The Speaker: Thank you. Is it your intention to have him answer during this time?

Hon. Roy Bodden: We will defer them until Monday.

The Speaker: Thank you for the clarification. The question is that the House do now adjourn until 10 am tomorrow.

All those in favour please say Aye. Those against, No.

Ayes.

The Speaker: The Ayes have it. The House stands adjourned until 10 am. tomorrow.

At 4.28 pm the House stood adjourned until Thursday, 21 February 2002, at 10 am.

OFFICIAL HANSARD REPORT
THURSDAY
21 FEBRUARY 2002
10.28 AM
Third Sitting

The Speaker: Good morning. I will call upon the Third Elected Member for the district of West Bay to grace us with prayers.

and will not be here for today nor tomorrow. Madam Clerk.

PRAYERS

Capt. A. Eugene Ebanks: Let us pray.

Almighty God, from whom all wisdom and power are derived: We beseech Thee so to direct and prosper the deliberations of the Legislative Assembly now assembled, that all things may be ordered upon the best and surest foundations for the glory of Thy Name and for the safety, honour and welfare of the people of these Islands.

Bless our Sovereign Lady, Queen Elizabeth II; the Queen Mother; Philip, Duke of Edinburgh; Charles, Prince of Wales; and all the Royal family. Give grace to all who exercise authority in our Commonwealth, that peace and happiness, truth and justice, religion and piety may be established among us. Especially we pray for the Governor of our Islands, the Speaker of the Legislative Assembly, Official Members and Ministers of Executive Council and Members of the Legislative Assembly, that we may be enabled faithfully to perform the responsible duties of our high office. All this we ask for Thy great Name's sake.

Let us say the Lord's Prayer together:

Our Father, who art in Heaven, Hallowed be Thy Name. Thy Kingdom come, Thy will be done on earth as it is in Heaven. Give us this day our daily bread, and forgive us our trespasses, as we forgive those who trespass against us. Lead us not into temptation, but deliver us from evil. For Thine is the Kingdom, the power and the glory, forever and ever. Amen.

The Lord bless us and keep us. The Lord make His face shine upon us and be gracious unto us. The Lord lift up the light of His countenance upon us and give us peace, now and always. Amen.

Proceedings resumed at 10.31 am

SPEAKER OF MESSAGES
AND ANNOUNCEMENTS

Apologies

The Speaker: Please be seated. Proceedings are resumed. I have received apologies from the Honourable Minister of Education and the Honourable Minister of Planning who are both away on official business

Deputy Clerk: Questions to the Honourable Ministers and Official Members.

QUESTIONS TO HONOURABLE
MINISTERS AND OFFICIAL MEMBERS

The Speaker: The Honourable Member for the district of North Side.

Question No. 7

No. 7: Ms. Edna M. Moyle asked the Honourable Third Official Member responsible for the Portfolio of Finance and Economics, to give the terms of employment, including notice period, severance pay and the like, of the recent Head of the Monetary Authority.

The Speaker: The Honourable Third Official Member.

Hon. George A. McCarthy: Madam Speaker, cognizant of the importance of maintaining the highest level of stability within our financial industry, there was an understanding between the board of Directors of the Cayman Islands Monetary Authority and the previous Managing Director that the terms of his resignation and related severance pay would not be publicly discussed. I am prepared, however, to provide Members with the relevant details in a private meeting which could be arranged during this Sitting of the Legislative Assembly.

The Speaker: Are there any supplementaries?

The Second Elected Member for the district of George Town.

Supplementary

Mr. Alden M. McLaughlin, Jr.: Thank you, Madam Speaker. I would rather believe that defeats the purpose of Parliamentary Questions, but nevertheless, I wonder if the Honourable Third Official Member is in a position to say what prompted the resignation?

The Speaker: The Honourable Third Official Member.

Hon. George A. McCarthy: Madam Speaker, I do not understand the views expressed by the Honourable Second Elected Member for George Town but that could be a part of the information that will be shared with that Honourable Member in the private meeting that I have proposed.

The Speaker: Madam Clerk, next question.

The Honourable Member for the district of North Side.

(deferred)

No. 8: Mrs. Edna M. Moyle asked the Honourable Minister responsible for Education, to give a breakdown of the hours per week for which each grade receives computer instruction in Government Primary Schools.

The Speaker: Honourable Leader of Government Business, I believe it is the intention to defer by virtue of Standing Order 23(5).

Suspension of Standing Order 23(5)

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: Madam Speaker, another good reason for the suspension of the Standing Order.

The Speaker: The question is that Standing Order 23(5) be duly suspended to allow the deferral of Question No. 8 so that it can be answered at another appropriate time. All those in favour please say Aye. Those against, No.

Ayes.

The Speaker: The Ayes have it. The question will be accordingly deferred.

Agreed: Question No. 8 deferred.

Question No. 9

The Speaker: The Honourable Member for the district of East End.

No. 9: Mr. V. Arden McLean asked the Minister responsible for Tourism, Environment, Development and Commerce, what progress has been made on the implementation of Vision 2008?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for Tourism.

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: Vision 2008 continues to feature prominently in the Government policies and programmes as would have been noted from the recently presented Throne Speech and prior to that in the presentation and documents setting out the 2002 Budget.

As the transition from an 'input based' budgeting system to an 'output based' system continues in accordance with the recently enacted Public Management and Finance Law 2001 and the ongoing Financial Management Initiative (FMI), the Vision 2008 plan will continue to serve to better define what the Government is seeking to achieve.

In order to ensure the best possible compatibility between the Financial Management Initiative and the Vision 2008 plan, an exercise to be launched to effectively 'recast' the strategies proposed by Vision 2008 into measurable outcomes both broad and specific. In turn, when the 2003 Budget is prepared for the first time on an output basis all outputs will be required to contribute to achieving one or more of these measurable outcomes. In this way, the Government will be able to set targets for what it hopes to achieve in each outcome area and definitively give account of its implementation of the Vision 2008 plan.

The Speaker: Are there any supplementaries?
The Elected Member for East End.

Supplementaries

Mr. V. Arden McLean: Thank you, Madam Speaker. Some time last year there was an announcement that the Deputy Chief Secretary was to head the implementation of Vision 2008. Can the Minister tell us if there is an office established and how many people are working in that office?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for Tourism.

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: Madam Speaker, there is no office established other than, I am the Minister responsible for the implementation of Vision 2008 and the Deputy Chief Secretary is still involved and we are moving forward with the implementation as the answer to the question suggests.

The Speaker: Are there any other supplementaries?
The Honourable Member for the district of East End.

Mr. V. Arden McLean: Thank you, Madam Speaker. Can the Minister then tell us if it is the intent to establish an office and have other staff members assisting the Deputy Chief Secretary to implement this very important part of the country's future?

The Speaker: Honourable Minister for Tourism.

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: Madam Speaker, we see no need to create further bureaucracy. I do not think that would be wise. The strategies that are contained in Vision 2008 can be implemented in the budgetary processes of this country and that is what we are intending to do.

Madam Speaker, I can give Members some examples of the impact of Vision 2008 and Government policies. Strategy five of the Ten-Year National Strategic Plan, Vision 2008, called on the country to develop cultural awareness based on traditional Christian values and strong family units. To this end the Ministry of Culture is developing a cultural policy which will help to enhance national identity, promote national integration and unity and maintain the harmony and values on which traditional Caymanian culture is based.

Also, the initiatives by my Ministry [Tourism] towards the establishment of a growth management board, Vision 2008 calls for such a growth management board – although that is not the first time a growth management board has been called for. Vision 2008 was, and still is a ten-year plan. In order to be able to say categorically what progress is, or is not being made, it is essential that the strategies and action plans be recast into measurable outcomes and that is what we are attempting to do.

The Speaker: Are there any further supplementaries?

The Second Elected Member for the district of Cayman Brac and Little Cayman.

Mr. Lyndon L. Martin: Thank you, Madam Speaker. Could the Minister indicate if it is accurate that the Vision 2008 would be reflective of the wants and desires of the entire country for the future of the Cayman Islands?

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: Yes, Madam Speaker, I would say that is the aim and objective of Vision 2008. There are people who disagree with some of the areas in Vision 2008, but broadly speaking that is the aim and objective of the plan which was prepared by some 400 people.

The Speaker: The Second Elected Member for the district of Cayman Brac and Little Cayman.

Mr. Lyndon L. Martin: Thank you, Madam Speaker. Could the Honourable Leader of Government Business (the Minister of Tourism) confirm that the Government under his leadership has accepted the Vision 2008 as publicly stated in the press conference at the launch of the United Democratic Party as being the guideline for the development of policies under his leadership?

The Speaker: Honourable Leader of Government Business.

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: Madam Speaker, I can also confirm that.

The Speaker: The Member from East End.

Mr. V. Arden McLean: Thank you, Madam Speaker. I think we are some three years or thereabouts into the Vision 2008 ten-year policy. Can the Minister tell us if the Government is satisfied that the progress made thus far is reflective of the stage we are at now?

The Speaker: The Honourable Leader of Government Business.

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: Madam Speaker, I hope the Member appreciates that not very much was done before 2000. Last year we started and I can safely say that we are building on what Vision 2008 asked for. And while we are in some three years as he said, I think that I can say that my Government is moving in the right direction.

The Speaker: The Member for East End.

Mr. V. Arden McLean: Thank you, Madam Speaker. The Minister said that there was a period when much was not done and now we are moving. Is it the Government's intention to re-structure Vision 2008 to make up for the progress that was not made during that time? How would it be done?

The Speaker: The Honourable Leader of Government Business.

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: Madam Speaker, I know the Member was sitting there earlier when I said that an exercise is to be launched shortly to effectively re-cast the strategies proposed by Vision 2008 into measurable outcomes both broad and specific. And we do not propose to go back to the public as such. We are doing it through the Civil Service structure, Ministry by Ministry, department by department and each budget. That is what that means.

The Speaker: I will allow for one more supplementary following thereafter.

The Elected Member for East End.

Mr. V. Arden McLean: Thank you, Madam Speaker. I thank the Minister for restating that. I wonder if the Minister can say if it is anticipated that we will have to add on years in order to make up, and if so, how many?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Tourism.

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: Madam Speaker, I think I explained to the House what we are intending to do presently. But, next year we intend to revise the plan to deal with situations as we go along.

The Speaker: The Member from North Side.

Ms. Edna M. Moyle: Thank you, Madam Speaker. I wonder if the Honourable Minister would say the Vision 2008 is a revolving plan.

The Speaker: The Honourable Leader of Government Business.

Hon. W. McKeever Bush: Madam Speaker, that is what I have been trying to get across to them—that it is ongoing. As we move along and situations arise, of course we will try to deal with them – and it is a vision.

STATEMENTS BY MEMBERS OF THE GOVERNMENT

Revised Criteria for Seamen's Ex-gratia Benefits

The Speaker: I have received notice that the Honourable Minister responsible for Community Services wishes to give a statement this morning.

Dr. the Hon. Frank McField: Thank you.

Madam Speaker and Honourable Members of the Legislative Assembly, I would like to give a brief statement on the revised criteria for Seamen's Ex-gratia Benefits. There is no doubt of the worth and value of the contribution made by our Seamen to the development of these Islands.

In past generations local timber was used to build catboats and sailing vessels. They were used in the absence of paved roads, for transportation from district to district to do trading, gathering thatch and bark to make rope and dyes and even delivering mail. These boats were also used to catch fish, turtle and other seafood. Larger and larger vessels were built and sailed further from home. We know of the trips to Mosquito Cays, Cuba, Jamaica and other destinations to catch turtles and sharks, which were traded. We also know of the natural disasters and losses of life at sea and the many sacrifices these brave seamen made.

When the age of commercial shipping arrived, the reputation of our men as world-class sailors earned them quick acceptance to serve as crew on supertankers and other vessels sailing the Seven Seas. This is a history of which we are justly proud.

Of course, I must be gender sensitive and also give accolades to the women who managed the homes and businesses and raised the children in the absence of the men. Nevertheless, it is well documented that the financial allotment sent home by these seamen did keep the communities and government functioning in the absence of any other substantial foreign exchange earnings. The financial needs of ex-seamen have been recognized in the present time and have been dealt with by three consecutive Ministers in the Ministry for which I hold responsibility, as well as by all other Members of the Legislative Assembly.

In September 2000, Government introduced a scheme to provide benefits of $400 per month to Caymanian seamen or their surviving spouses over the age of 60 years. Upon taking up office in November 2000, the Elected Member for North Side, Ms.

Edna M. Moyle the then Minister responsible for Community Development, requested the Auditor General to carry out an audit of the benefits provided up to the end of December 2000. The audit highlighted the fact that quite a number of individuals were receiving other benefits from the Government, or were employees.

Additionally, there were quite a number of recipients of the benefits who were also either working, owned their businesses, or were financially secure. Ms. Moyle, the then Minister, asked the Honourable Executive Council to revise the criteria for the seamen's ex-gratia benefits and this was done in March and September 2001. This resulted in many seamen being denied needed and deserved financial assistance.

However, in January 2002, Honourable Members of the Legislative Assembly who are members of the United Democratic Party requested a meeting with the Ministry, for which I hold constitutional responsibility, to discuss the seamen ex-gratia benefits. At this meeting the Ministry answered questions on the history and philosophy of the benefits. It was agreed to review all beneficiaries and new applicants, using new criteria reflective of the decisions taken at that meeting with the Ministry and the United Democratic Party.

Some members of the United Democratic Party expressed concern that there were some recipients who had been, or would be, terminated and would be unable to meet their basic household expenses. Therefore, Government agreed that we should be assisting these individuals and that all recipients who are receiving an income up to $1500, inclusive of this and any other government assistance as total household income per month, would continue to receive the benefits.

In the past our recipients received $400 monthly, however, Government aid will now be limited to the amount needed to make up the shortfall of the $1500 total income, while the maximum amount granted monthly will still not exceed $400. This would have to be verified by a standard means test, normally via the Department of Social Services and/or accompanied by the relevant certified documentation which will include, where applicable, medical certificates, bank statements, titles of property, shares certificates, pension agreement and so on.

The Ministry has since revised eligibility criteria check list and application form to take into account the above and have had them approved by the Executive Council on the 9 February 2002. It should be noted that at present the Ministry of Community Services is providing benefits to 453 seamen, or their surviving spouses, at an annual cost of $2,174,400 and is unable to add any new eligible recipients at this time.

Once the Ministry has reviewed all existing recipients and new applicants using these revised eligibility criteria, I will update the Executive Council and Members of the Honourable House. It should be noted that there is a possibility that the Ministry may need to seek supplementary funds this year. The Ministry will inform all present recipients and future applicants of the revised criteria via the various media, radio, television and newspaper.

Recipients of the Government monthly check will be advised in the press release that their benefits are being reviewed and all are required to submit updated information and complete new application forms. The new form must be completed and returned along with relevant paper work such as property titles, medical certificates, pensions and insurance policies, as well as documents showing investment shares and salaries. Copies of this new eligibility criteria application form and checklist are available to Members of the Honourable House.

Madam Speaker, I thank you for the opportunity to share this statement with this Honourable House.

Statement by the Honourable Speaker regarding the approval by His Excellency the Governor on 20 February 2002 of the Legislative Assembly (Amendment) Standing Orders 2002

The Speaker: Thank you. Before moving on to the next item of business, I should wish to confirm for the record that in exercise of the powers confirmed on the Legislative Assembly by subsection (1) of 31, Schedule 2 of the Cayman Islands Constitution Order 1972 as amended, and in accordance with Standing Order 87 of the Legislative Assembly Standing Orders (1997 Revision), the following amendment to the legislative amendment Standing Orders (1997 Revision) was made by the Legislative Assembly on 20 February 2002.

As all Members will be aware, that specific amendment went as follows, 'No Member at any one time may speak on any debate for any period of time which, exclusive of breaks, exceeds two hours'. It was made by this Honourable House yesterday, being the 20th day February 2002, and approved with effect on the same day, being the 20th of February 2002, and signed off by His Excellency the Governor, Peter J. Smith, CBE, Governor of the Cayman Islands.

Please proceed, Madam Clerk.

GOVERNMENT BUSINESS

The Speaker: Honourable Leader of Government Business.

Suspension of Standing Order 14(3)

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: Thank you, Madam Speaker.

Today being Thursday, Private Members' Business has precedence over Government Business. In order to allow the Throne Speech to go forward as we usually do, we move under Standing Order 83 to suspend Standing Order 14(3) to allow Government Business to take precedence over Other Business.

The Speaker: Thank you. The question is that Standing Order 14(3) be suspended to allow the Government Business to take precedence over Other Business.

All those in favour please say Aye. Those against, No.

Ayes.

The Speaker: The Ayes have it.

Agreed: Standing Order 14(3) suspended.

Commencement of Debate Throne Speech Delivered by His Excellency, Mr. Peter J. Smith, CBE, Governor of the Cayman Islands, on Friday 15 February 2002

The Speaker: Does any Member wish to speak? Does any Member wish to speak? Last call. Does any Member wish to speak?

The Second Elected Member for the district of George Town.

Mr. Alden M. McLaughlin, Jr.: Thank you, Madam Speaker, for this opportunity to offer my contribution to the debate on the 2002 Throne Speech.

I am also grateful to you, Madam Speaker for reading the amendment to the Legislative Assembly Standing Orders that was approved by His Excellency the Governor, apparently yesterday, going by the date. I must commend him for the expedition and note that it would be marvelous if all matters of importance affecting the governance of this country were accorded such priority and given such swift treatment.

Madam Speaker, in the introduction to the Throne Speech, His Excellency noted that this is an exciting time for those like him who have a tendency towards optimism. I suspect that His Excellency's optimism is due in large part to the fact that he is leaving these Islands shortly and will not have the responsibility for dealing with the significant problems and issues that the country currently faces.

I am a bit saddened at the news that His Excellency will be departing these shores shortly. Indeed, I feel like a little old lady who attended the last church service held by the minister of her church. You see, she had gone to services at this church all her life and she sat in the same pew time after time, Sunday after Sunday, year after year. However, on this occasion as she attended the final service to be held by the good minister, as he talked about the time he had spent there, how sad he was to leave and what a wonderful replacement the individual was who would fill his shoes, she sat in the pew and she cried inconsolably throughout the service. And so, when the service was over and the minister was saying his final goodbye he said, 'Sister Mary, I have been in this church for four years and as I have preached, I have watched you Sunday after Sunday. We hardly spoke and I had no idea that you loved me so and that you appreciated my sermons so much. I am deeply moved, but never mind, the one who shall follow me is even better than I am'. She said, 'Aye, minister you see that is the problem.' He said, 'What do you mean sister?' She said, 'I have sat here for years and years and the reason I am crying, sir, is not that I love you so much; the reason I am crying, sir, is that in my experience every change has been for the worse'.

And so I feel a little like that old lady when I note the imminent departure of His Excellency. I feel a bit tearful.

His Excellency referred to the constitutional reform efforts which are underway and in particular the work of the Constitutional Review Commissioners who were shortly to present their report and draft modernized Constitution. I too would like to thank publicly the Constitutional Commissioners, Messrs. Arthur Hunter, Benson Ebanks and Leonard Ebanks for the tremendous amount of work that they have put into this exercise and the real efforts they have made to try to involve the entire community in the exercise.

I attended a number of the meetings and I must say that I was very impressed with the presentations by the Commissioners. However, I was disappointed by the responses of the audience. I believe the Commissioners were also disappointed that more people did not avail themselves of the opportunity to participate in the process by attending these meetings.

I believe that the Draft Constitution we will receive in due course for discussion, and ultimately for debate on the Floor of this Honourable House, will be the product of a very thorough exercise—one in which the Commissioners will have given a great deal of thought and conducted a great deal of research before that draft is produced.

I think that perhaps it is timely at this stage, even though we are yet to see the Draft Constitution, that I take this opportunity in debating the Throne Speech to explore a little of the elements of constitutional reform. In the current Constitution we have the Westminster system of government, and more specifically the tropical Westminster model, if I may call it that, which has generally been adopted within the Anglophone Caribbean over the course of the past 50 or so years.

During the very first meeting I held when I stood for election in the last campaign, I discussed the possibility and need for constitutional reform because I believe for all of us who have been interested in the political development of this country, we came to realize quite some time ago that the current constitutional document which governs the administration of this country is somewhat outdated. We have in many respects outgrown its tenets.

Madam Speaker, the events which followed the Election and indeed the way the entire Election campaign was conducted without any teams, parties and serious groupings were, I believe, clear evidence of the need for constitutional advancement. The controversy which followed in the effort to form the government that took office following the 2000 elections, again, I believe, highlighted the need for some system which involves discipline, which involves some element of certainty and predictability about the outcome of the process.

And then to a year—8th November of last year, made it plain to all in even more explicit terms that the system under which we currently operate is unsuited to deal with the level of political maturity and expectations that those who participate in the political process have.

Now, what transpired in November of last year did not sit well with the majority of the people of this country in my view, and it still does not sit well. Many of the people feel cheated in the sense that while there was a significant change in the government in November 2001, they did not participate in the process. Many believe that what transpired then was undemocratic, notwithstanding the fact that what was done was conducted quite well within the provisions of our current constitutional document. I have told many people, constituents and others, time and time again just that. What happened was constitutional, but it does not even begin to appease their outrage; the standard response is, 'Well the Cayman Islands Constitution needs to be changed then.'

So, with all of the problems that have ensued and all the controversies that existed and continue to exist as a result of that transition, if I may use that neutral term, I believe one positive thing has come out of that whole exercise—the general acknowledgement by the majority of people in this country that we need to advance or reform the current Constitution, and that we need to move to a system of more disciplined and predictable politics.

One of the problems that resulted because of what transpired and the way things transpired on the 8th November is in the minds of a significant number of people. There is a concern about moving to party politics, and that stems mainly, I believe, from the fact that most people see the party system as having been imposed upon this country because the United Democratic Party did not exist prior to the 2000 elections. No one voted for the United Democratic Party and its policies and philosophies, but the country finds itself in a situation where it is governed by a party which it did not vote for and many people have a fundamental problem with that.

For my part I accept the inevitability of party politics, but I also understand that the development of party politics is not a panacea for the problems that we have in this country. If we look around us we can find many examples—those who argue against the adoption of party politics will say, there is an example of what happens to a country when you develop party politics.

The Westminster style of government as it has evolved in the Anglophone Caribbean tends to develop divisiveness in the countries in which it has been adopted. It is not because the system is necessarily bad; it is because of the way politicians use the system.

And the problem is that many of the conventions obtained in the mother country from whence the system came, have not travelled well across the Atlantic. We have tended in this part of the world, certainly in Jamaica and the Eastern Caribbean, to do things which ensure party loyalty which create the problems that the critics of party politics can point to.

I am talking about patronage and the development of political tribalism because that is what created the garrison constituencies which are evident in Kingston, for example, where people will die for the Party, because when patronage develops and when there are limited resources (as there are always) the more limited the resources become the less people are able to share in that patronage.

In those circumstances what happens is, if you are not part of this Party you do not share in the largesse; you do not share in the limited resources of the country. The logical result is that because you are sharing in that, and because there is only so much to go around, you seek to ensure that whatever happens that Party remains in power. And if that Party ceases to remain in power your access to those resources and receipt of that patronage dries up.

In my respectful submission that is what has happened in Jamaica, Antigua, Dominica and other places. While there may be some discomfort in the minds of some on the other side, because of my saying these things, let me make it clear that I am not suggesting that that is the situation that currently obtains in the Cayman Islands. It does not; thank God it does not.

The point that I am seeking to make, is that we have a marvelous opportunity coming so late to the development of political parties. We have the benefit of the experiences of the rest of the Anglophone Caribbean to draw on, to look at and to say 'That is not what I want to happen to my country.'

Madam Speaker, one of the big problems with the way the tropical Westminster model operates in the Anglophone Caribbean is this practice of exclusiveness. If you do not belong to the party and you do not subscribe to its philosophies you are not included in the process.

The result of that, especially in an electoral system such as we have, the first-past-the-post concept, often in those situations the governing party holds fifty per cent of the popular vote or less in some instances. So you wind up with a party which governs the country constitutionally and in accordance with the relevant election law, but which does not have popular support—and if it does, such support is marginal. And then that party seeks to exclude from the consultation process all who do not subscribe to their philosophies. That contributes largely to the problems which are inherent in many of the other jurisdictions in the Caribbean who are full fledged political parties and a full-fledged party system.

What is often evident in those systems as well, is an intolerance of criticism and unwillingness to even allow a dissenting view. Yesterday when I sought to debate the Motion to reduce the hours of debate there were a number of persons on the other side who thought that my discussion of democratic principles and democracy were irrelevant to the debate on that Motion.

Now, while I have come to understand that the discussion of democratic principles and democracy causes certain members of the United Democratic Party indigestion, I do hope that they will not seek to advance the argument that discussion about democracy and democratic principles is irrelevant to a debate which involves constitutional reform.

So, if we are going to make this Cayman's model of party politics and seek to develop our own version of the Westminster model and not simply adopt what has happened elsewhere, those of us who sit in this Honourable House who campaigned for these seats are going to have to deal with each other in a different fashion than is the case in other jurisdictions.

We have to get used to the idea that the other man is entitled to his views even if he is critical of the government. We have to afford all an opportunity to participate in the process. We have to be mature enough to practice the politics of inclusion and tolerance. We have to avoid these cleansing exercises which are common features of the tropical Westminster model. When a new government takes office all the boards are cleaned out. In some cases even senior civil servants are asked to step down. We have to avoid the politicizing of the Civil Service. It is these things that have caused, in my respectful view, the problems which are inherent in other jurisdictions such as Jamaica.

If we look at the other jurisdictions and see what has become of them once they start to walk down this particular road, we should understand that if Cayman wants a different result we are going to have to act differently, and that what should be foremost in all our minds is not the preservation of our seats nor our power base but the preservation of peace, order and good government in this country.

For all the faults and with all the constraints that impinge upon our ability and willingness to do certain things within the parameters of the current constitutional framework, we still have a system which is essentially honest and devoid of victimization, which is essentially tolerant of free speech which is by and large devoid of patronage.

My appeal to all within and without the precincts of this Parliament who participate in the political process is to bear these things in mind when we seek to garner votes because that is what the political process is about.

There are rumours about proposals that will come. Some of them have even been elevated to the front page of the Cayman Net News. There are rumours about a proposed increase in the number of seats in this Legislative Assembly that at least two of the seats currently held by official Members will become elected bringing the elected Executive Council to seven.

There has been talk of an increase in the membership of the House. I have heard 21 and 22 as proposed numbers. Let me say this about those things: I believe that if we are to move forward to develop this fledgling democracy that we have, it is imperative that all those who make the decisions at this level should be elected and held accountable by the electorate for their decisions one way or the other.

I also believe that while it may be expensive in the view of a number of people, that the best way to ensure democracy is to ensure that we have sufficient numbers of people in the Legislative Assembly on the Back Bench to contain the Government.

If the Government Bench becomes too heavy and the numbers over there almost equal the numbers over here Government tends to become more authoritarian, less accountable to parliament. In fact, by and large, in those circumstances Government becomes the Parliament and Parliament becomes the Government and the system is not supposed to function in that manner.

I believe, even though no one has actually explained it to me, that the rationale for the increase to 22, assuming an addition of two members, would be elected to the Executive Council. We need to keep, in my view, the balance at about two-thirds that the Cabinet makes up roughly one third of the elected members and no more. Madam Speaker, assuming that one of our numbers would be elected to your Chair, I can understand why the number would be 22. I have no difficulty with that.

There is another rumour that there will be a proposal to extend the life of this House by one year, and that elections would not be held until November 2005. I have a major problem with that. I have a contract with the people of George Town when we signed the expiry date to be election 2004. It did not say 2005. I wish to make it plain that I have no fundamental problem with a five-year term because it is the norm in a number of other jurisdictions in this Region. I have no difficulty with that, but the people of this country must know at the time that they go to the polls the length of the term for which they are electing their representatives.

It is not within our trust to extend our term unilaterally, and I warn the proponents of that concept: if they think that they had objections and demonstrations when what happened on the 8 November last year, I am confident that any such proposal would be met with far greater objection.

I think I have said enough on that aspect of the Throne Speech. I will move on to talk a bit about the progression of plans for a new Court building to house a Summary Court in all its divisions; Criminal, Civil, Family, Youth, Coroners and Drug Court. His Excellency the Governor noted that the progression of these plans remains an urgent need. It was an urgent need also referred to in the Throne Speech in 2001.

The Speaker: Honourable Member for the benefit of the record would you indulge us in referring to the specific page number as you proceed thereon.

Mr. Alden M. McLaughlin, Jr.: Certainly, Madam Speaker.

That is under the heading of the Judiciary on page 2 of the Throne Speech. The need for more Court facilities was identified I believe a decade ago. Quite frankly, it has now reached a critical stage. Those who attended the opening of the Grand Court in January of this year will know that five out of the six persons who spoke on that occasion complained and highlighted the grave shortage of facilities. [pause] The Honourable Chief Justice devoted a significant portion of his address to identifying specifically what facilities were required.

Madam Speaker, he spoke about the Youth Court and noted that neither the Youth Court nor the Juvenile Court has a permanent base and because the Law requires that proceedings in these Courts are held in camera. This meant that many proceedings had to be held within the Court's building, sometimes at the Town Hall and sometimes at Kirk House. During his address he noted and I quote, "Concerns over privacy, security and proper administration will continue to hamper the ability to deal with these cases so long as they must be dealt with under the present inappropriate conditions".

Madam Speaker, he spoke about the need for more public space within the precincts of the Court. He spoke about the fact that there is little or no space for the sort of private interaction that is necessary between individuals who are involved in cases dealing with children and other family matters. He spoke about the matter of the lack of adequate holding cells for Prisoners. Noting that the current Court building was built some 30 years ago for the purpose of holding two Courts simultaneously. We now run seven or eight on any given day. He spoke about the lack of adequate registry staff to deal with the administration and he noted and again I quote, 'If these conditions persist for much longer, the timely and efficient administration of justice will be the ultimate victim'. Those are strong statements, Madam Speaker.

This is not a matter that we should take lightly. The functioning of the administration of the Justice system is as fundamental to good government as the running of this Parliament. The Honourable Chief Justice also noted that despite the fact that it was known that Court facilities were inadequate for more than a decade, and despite the fact that plans were drawn up and a sinking fund was agreed upon and that funds were ear-marked, during the course of last year those funds were diverted for other use in government. And the sinking fund that was to be established to form the base for the construction of new Court facilities has still not been established.

Now, I have knocked around those Courts for many years, 21 to be exact. I know from personal experience the changes that have occurred during that period. I worked there and I know that there is a general reluctance on the part of government, whichever government it is, to spend money on the judicial system, because it is not a revenue earner. It is one of those things that we have to have, but it does not produce anything.

If we continue to allow the facilities to worsen and allow the administration of justice to break down, all of these other institutions that we regard as being so much more important will be worth naught. Any country that finds itself without a functioning, effective administration of justice, system—might as well ‘close shop’ and go home. When people begin feeling that their rights can not be enforced, and that the system is inadequate to deal with those who break the Law, respect for the other institutions falls away and anarchy reigns.

There was a reason for my parliamentary questions about the Euro Bank prosecution, because I was trying to get some sort of handle on how much those kinds of operations are costing this country. I believe—and there are those who disagree with me—we have our priorities wrong. We have lost perspective. We do not have adequate funds to create the facilities which we need for the general administration of justice, but there were $600,000 in the Budget last year for money laundering prosecutions. The amount of $1.5 million is in the Budget for this year and based on what the Honourable Second Official Member said in his substantive response yesterday, and in his answer to some of the supplementaries, that does not include the cost of paying the QC from England who is going to run the Euro Bank prosecution during the course of this year. The cost of that Madam Speaker, is estimated at some £450,000 for this year.

Point of Order

Hon. David F. Ballantyne: Madam Speaker, a point of order if I may.

The Speaker: Please state your point of order.

Hon. David F. Ballantyne: My point of order is that according to my recollection the funding that is allocated for money laundering prosecutions includes the funding for counsel in this current prosecution. It is not exclusive; therefore, in my opinion it is incorrect to say that the money for Queen’s Counsel is separate.

Madam Speaker, while I respect the view of the House and leave matters entirely in your hands regarding the line of the contribution of the Honourable Second Elected Member for George Town, I have to be mindful of the possible effect on a pending prosecution and I would not wish to have it appear in any way that it was being suggested that the prosecution was misguided.

The Speaker: Thank you, Honourable Second Official Member.

Second Elected Member for the district of George Town, I would ask if you would confirm the fact that you did not make it inclusive in your original remarks. If that is the case, I would ask you to correct that position. And, being an Attorney yourself, I probably do not need to remind you, but will out of the abundance of caution, to tread carefully as you debate so that we would not infringe the sub judice ruling as is set out in our Standing Orders which we, in my opinion, we have not done thus far.

Mr. Alden M. McLaughlin, Jr.: Thank you, Madam Speaker. I certainly do not want to misrepresent the position at all and I am grateful to the Second Official Member for having said what he did. Maybe he can assist me again when I give him my understanding of this.

The reason I couched what I said in those terms was that in an answer to a supplementary, the Honourable Second Official Member said that last year the money for a QC was paid from a vote in his Portfolio, but that this year the funding would come from the asset sharing fund. Now, the asset sharing fund is not a part of this Budget, hence my conclusion that the monies provided for in here, which are $1.5 million is a sum over and above the £450,000, which, it is estimated will be required to pay Mr. Mitchell. I can sit down now and the Honourable Second Official Member can respond to this because I would like to make sure that we have it right.

The Speaker: Honourable Second Official Member.

Point of Clarification

Hon. David F. Ballantyne: Thank you, Madam Speaker. I will rise on a point of clarification in the circumstances. I think this is the case of one and one not making two. In fact, both propositions are correct: the money did emanate and does emanate from the Assets Confiscation fund, but it has to be brought into Government’s recurrent expenditure so it is one and the same money. Therefore it is not additional. The reason why it shows in the Budget is that it cannot be expended directly from the Asset Confiscation Fund; it has to be brought into government revenues first in order to do so.

The Speaker: Thank you for that expounding. The Honourable Second Elected Member for George Town, please continue.

Mr. Alden M. McLaughlin, Jr.: Thank you, Madam Speaker, I accept that explanation and in fact, I am somewhat relieved because it means then that we are talking of $1.5 million this year rather than $1.5 million plus £450,000 whatever that amount comes to.

As a matter of interest I wonder if the proceeds of the Asset Sharing Fund are shown in the revenue stream of government to balance the books, but I do not need a response to that now, it is just an observation.

I continue my debate and I am still making the point that whether it is $1.5 million we speak about, or $2 million dedicated to the prosecution of money laundering offences in the course of this year, I believe that we have lost perspective. We all know that figure is not representative of the true cost to Government. That does not factor in the Court time and the cost of paying the members of Government Legal Department who are engaged in that process. I am not in anyway diminishing the importance of prosecuting people for offences they have committed. But, when we divert the funds that were to be part of the sinking fund for the construction of a new Court facility for the purpose of prosecuting money laundering trials, and we have the grave circumstances which currently obtain at the Court, the lack of adequate facilities, I believe we have our priorities all wrong. And you see what happens as well is that these things take on a life of their own.

We do not have the means to establish proper permanent facilities for the Juvenile and Youth Courts but we somehow magically find the funds to fit out a Court room for a money laundering trial that is going to take six months. It is always a question of priorities.

When I raised the question in December about what was being done in relation to the undertaking which the Government had given some time back in September, I believe, about reviewing compensation for jurors, the Honourable Solicitor General who was then acting or temporary Second Official Member said the matter would be reviewed, but it was never the intention of those provisions to compensate jurors for the time they spend away from work.

Government had to bear in mind that this would have budgetary implications. All of that is absolutely right, but how can you take individuals away from their work and not compensate them adequately when it is estimated that the Euro Bank prosecution will take six months? In the context of a trial that is going to cost—and this is only my view and it is based on a number of suppositions—the best part of $3 million. We have our priorities wrong.

Point of Clarification

The Speaker: Honourable Second Official Member.

Hon. David F. Ballantyne: Madam Speaker, may I intervene on a point of clarification?

The Speaker: Would the Member for George Town give way? Please proceed.

Hon. David F. Ballantyne: It may assist the general understanding, but it is intended that a Bill should come forward in this Session dealing with the issue of payment of jurors, and therefore the matter is intended to be addressed. I do not think it is appropriate to say more until the matter comes to the House but I felt that the information would be helpful in order to deal with this. I should also say, while I am still on my feet, that I understand that the Courts, albeit operating within constraints, have been able to make provision to deal with the administration of this trial and I am on public record as of the opening of the Grand Court having committed myself to support the provision of adequate Court buildings. So, I do not want the impression to be left that I am not sympathetic to that. Indeed I am, because I have a responsibility to this House and to the Islands in my capacity to support the administration of justice because I am part of that process and part of that system.

I would also just add for clarification that I am not familiar with the details of the allocation of the asset confiscation fund, although I am aware that it was proposed that there be a sinking fund established. I am not aware that that has happened, but I would support it. What I am aware of is that the asset confiscation fund is intended to be used for law enforcement purposes, and therefore the purpose for which one can disagree on whether it should or should not be used for certain purposes. But I am simply saying the purpose for which some of these funds, and certainly not the whole of them, was for a law enforcement purpose. I hope that serves to clarify how the funding was secured and also to clarify my own position in so far as its relevance. I do not wish to take up any more of the Member's time or the House's time. I fully support the adequate provision of Court buildings because otherwise there is no point in having prosecutions unless you can have them properly heard, defended and decided. Thank you.

The Speaker: Second Elected Member from George Town.

Mr. Alden M. McLaughlin, Jr.: Thank you, Madam Speaker. I am grateful for that clarification and heartened that the Second Official Member has publicly stated his support for the development.

Point of Clarification

Hon. David F. Ballantyne: Madam Speaker, I am sorry but I need to say that this is not the first time I have said that. I did indeed say this at the opening of the Grand Court. I am sorry to interrupt but I just wanted to clarify that point. Thank you.

The Speaker: Thank you. I also noted from the Chair's perspective that the Member from George Town did take his seat which implied that he gave way to the Honourable Second Official Member to so expound. Please continue Member from George Town.

Mr. Alden M. McLaughlin, Jr.: Madam Speaker, again I am grateful to the Second Official Member for further clarification.

I do not want the Second Official Member to leave the impression that I never thought he supported these things. I know all of us, whether we are lawyers or not, understand how important it is that we have adequate facilities for the administration of justice to be conducted properly.

My argument, if it can be deemed such, is this question of priorities. Because what happens in life time and time again, in the little things and in the big things, is that the important things always give way to the urgent and that is when we lose perspective. And that is my point. I believe that with the assistance of the Second Official Member I have made the point on this matter and I am now going to move on to the other aspects of the Throne Speech. Perhaps, Madam Speaker, this might be a convenient time.

The Speaker: We shall suspend for 15 minutes and I would ask all Members to exercise due diligence so that we can have a quorum exactly in 15 minutes time.

Proceedings suspended at 12.14 pm

Proceedings resumed at 12.37 pm

The Speaker: Please be seated. Proceedings are resumed. Continuing the debate the Second Elected Member for the district of George Town with 53 minutes remaining.

Mr. Alden M. McLaughlin, Jr.: Thank you, Madam Speaker. When we took the break I had just completed my contribution relating to the Judicial department. I would like to move on now to address certain aspects of the speech from the Throne in relation to the Ministry of Health Services, District Administration and Agriculture. I note that one of the key objectives for 2002 is enactment of a Health Services Authority Law. I am pleased to see that. I have always believed and I believe that the experience in this jurisdiction demonstrates the worthiness of statutory authorities to deal with certain aspects of government responsibility. I think it is fair to say that generally all of the statutory authorities; the Civil Aviation Authority, the Port Authority, the Water Authority, have worked well and are by and large self-sufficient and in some instances actually contribute significantly to Government's revenue stream. I think that is principally because the relative smallness in size, as opposed to the big government machine, allows for more focused and efficient administration. Because they have a board of Directors, there is immediate accountability and because they are outside the ambit of the general orders that govern the administration of the Civil Service, they are able to offer more attractive salary packages and employment terms generally. I believe all of these things tend to contribute to a more efficient and focused machine. So I am happy to see that for the second time around, this country is going to have a Health Services Authority.

Madam Speaker, we all know that the administration of the Health Services Department has been problematic because it has been the subject of considerable debate and questions and answers in this Honourable House. There are huge sums of money outstanding to Government in respect of health services fees. I think the last figure I heard was some $60 million. Hopefully, the transition to a Health Services Authority will assist with bringing these sorts of outstanding fees and the inefficiency that is apparently inherent in the collection of them, under control.

There is a certain, almost tragic irony in what has happened with the Health Services Department and the Health Services Authority which was established by law in or about 1990 when Mr. Ezzard Miller was the then Minister of Health. I say that because those of us who were around may recall that following the 1992 Election which Mr. Miller lost, the new Minister of Health was the Honourable McKeever Bush, who is now Minister of Tourism in this Government and the Leader of the United Democratic Party which currently governs this country. The Honourable Minister for Tourism, as he now is, was fundamentally against the concept of a health services authority when he was Minister of Health in 1992.

Indeed, shortly after having assumed that office in early 1993, legislation was brought to this Honourable House which repealed the Health Services Authority Law and dismantled the Health Services Authority which had been established in 1990 under the leadership of Mr. Ezzard Miller, the then Minister.

I also recall that in the aftermath of that election there was a Royal Commission of Inquiry called to inquire into the conduct of the former Minister, Mr. Ezzard Miller, and others, who were involved in the Health Services Authority and in particular, the proposed development of the Dr. Horter Memorial Hospital which was to be developed and administered under the Health Services Authority Law.

An irony in all of that was that Mr. Eddington Powell, I believe, assumed the chairmanship of the Health Services Authority from the former Minister of Health, Mr. Ezzard Miller, prior to the Election in 1992. The irony in all of this, Madam Speaker, is that ten years later the Minister who was responsible for dismantling the Health Services Authority and who now leads the Government, is re-establishing it. And the Secretary of the United Democratic Party is none other than the former Minister of Health who had established the Health Services Authority in 1990, Mr. Ezzard Miller; and key player in the United Democratic Party, the former chairman of the Health Services Authority, Mr. Eddington Powell.

If it were not such a tragic and expensive lesson it would almost be comedic but it just demonstrates what politics can cost a country. In this case we have lost ten years. We have a Health Services system that has had serious administrative problems in not being able to collect huge sums of money owed to it by users.

Now, I am sure we all have learned lessons from this and apparently for all of us, rehabilitation and conversion is possible and it would appear that the Leader of the UDP has now been educated and converted. . .

The Speaker: Honourable Member, I would draw your attention to Standing Order 35(3) where no Member should use insulting and offensive language and to infer that someone is uneducated will not be allowed.

Mr. Alden M. McLaughlin, Jr.: Thank you, Madam Speaker. I wish to apologize profusely if I was interpreted as having said that, but I did not use the word 'uneducated'. With respect, I never used that word.

The Speaker: Please proceed.

Mr. Alden M. McLaughlin, Jr.: Anyhow, Madam Speaker, time I believe, teaches us all important lessons. In this case, it was an awfully expensive one. But I trust that the Health Services Authority will become established and that it will be structured in a way that it can deliver good, cost effective health care to the people of these Islands at a cost which the country can manage.

Moving on to deal with the Civil Aviation Authority, I note that this year is the 50th anniversary of the first arrival of a land-based aircraft in Grand Cayman. That is quite a milestone and one I entirely agree is worthy of celebration. I also wish to note the commendable position that, in my view, the Honourable Minister for Health Services, District Administration and Agriculture has taken in relation to the role of the chairmanship of this Authority.

I noted from an article in the Caymanian Compass some short while ago that the Honourable Minister for Health has come to the view that he should not as Minister chair this Authority and that to do so in his words, 'would be a conflict of interest'. That is a commendable position to take. It is a view I have held for a long time. One cannot effectively administer a ministry and at the same time sit as the chairman of statutory authorities that are supposed to report to the ministry. The ministerial position is one of oversight and policy-making; it is not a 'nuts and bolts' job. I believe the Minister of Health has understood that and I commend him for doing so.

In the same breath I note that this has not been the case in relation to the Port Authority where the Honourable Minister for Tourism and Commerce continues to remain as the chairman. While I am on the question of the Port—I will leave the delivery of the treatise on this important matter to my good friend, the Member from East End—I believe it would be remiss of me if I were not to offer my view in general terms about what is being proposed for the development of the Port facilities both in George Town and in East End. Madam Speaker, I believe we are all ad idem that the facilities for cruise ship visitors need to be improved. Over the course of the past couple months I have been in attendance at a number of meetings called by persons who will be affected by the proposed changes in relation to the cruise ship facilities. I recognize that these people are concerned because they have vested interests in what transpires because they have properties in the vicinity. And those on the South will say that the cruise ship facilities need to stay to the South because they have invested significant sums of money on that basis and it would be unfair and inequitable to now move the facilities elsewhere because the traffic of potential customers will be reduced. And those to the North will say that they are not sharing enough of the traffic because they are to the North. There are arguments one way or another and it is difficult for someone sitting where I sit to be able to come to a view about that aspect of it.

There are some Members who have written me a note saying they are hungry and have drawn my attention to the fact that it is now the luncheon time.

The Speaker: In light of the fact that we just had a break, I propose to continue unless you are having some physical problem with your throat or any other reason.

Mr. Alden M. McLaughlin, Jr.: No, Madam Speaker, not me.

The Speaker: Please proceed.

Mr. Alden M. McLaughlin, Jr.: Madam Speaker, might I have an indication as to when you would take the luncheon adjournment?

The Speaker: I should take it at 1.30.

Mr. Alden M. McLaughlin, Jr.: Thank you, Madam Speaker. So whatever position is taken by the Port Authority, and ultimately the Government, about the situation of the cruise ship facilities there is going to be controversy.

My view is that the objective of the exercise should be to achieve maximum utilization of the existing property and premises, minimum disruption in the services that are provided and minimum effect on the people of this Island who have to use those facilities and particularly, the facilities adjacent to the Port, the roads in particular.

I have heard concerns articulated particularly by the Minister for Tourism and Commerce about safety. I believe I recall him saying that he has nightmares about the fact that an accident may happen as a result of the cargo facilities being in close proximity to the cruise ship facilities. That is the situation that has existed ever since. There are proposals to remove the cargo facility from the George Town location and as His Excellency said in the Throne Speech it is the long term vision of the Port Authority to utilize the George Town Port exclusively for cruise tourism. I believe that is both impractical and unwarranted. There is an acknowledgment in the Throne Speech that the Port Authority forecast no real increase in cargo tonnage in 2002 over the levels experienced last year.

The view that I have as a result of speaking with many people is that the cargo facilities at the George Town Port are more than adequate and that they are generally under-utilized. I believe that on a regular basis two ships call per week.

Now, if there are genuine safety concerns about the operation of the cargo facilities in such close proximity to the cruise ship facilities, would it not make more sense if operations at the Port commenced when the cruise ships left in the evening and continued until the wee hours of the morning? Alternatively, instead of proceeding with the construction of another set of cruise ship facilities to the North, which I believe is to be called the Fort George Terminal, would it not make more sense to convert the current cargo facilities to cruise ship facilities and construct cargo facilities further to the North, thereby distancing them somewhat from the cruise ship facilities?

But what is being proposed now at least in the interim, is going to sandwich the cargo facilities between two separate sets of cruise ship facilities which is going to increase (bound to) the exposure of cruise ship visitors to potential accidents since that is the concern involving the cargo facilities or the trucks that go in and out of there. What is the driving need for new cargo facilities?

There are aspects of the dock that need improvement as a result of damage done during Hurricane Michelle. I know improvements are necessary but once improved, those facilities will be more than adequate for current and projected need. Not only is the cost of removal or relocation of the cargo facilities in George Town going to be a monumentally expensive exercise, but the reality is—and that has been a foregone conclusion for at least a couple of hundred years—that there is really no where else in these Islands which is eminently suited for the development of a port facility.

It is plain that the people of East End do not want what is being proposed, at least in general terms, at Half Moon Bay. I know they are preparing feasibility studies and viability studies but any of us who have been around this rock for any length of time will understand how impractical it is to propose a port facility at Half Moon Bay. Eighty, if not ninety per cent of the year it is too rough for ships to dock under normal circumstances. It will require some major artificial barrier or 'bulk-head' to even begin to think about doing what is proposed. And for what? In recent weeks I have been hearing little snippets about 'Well if it cannot go to East End we will put it in North Sound'. And that brings me to this general proposition, Madam Speaker, what is it —

Point of Elucidation

Mr. Lyndon L. Martin: Point of elucidation.

The Speaker: Will the Member give way? Please continue Second Elected Member from Cayman Brac and Little Cayman.

Mr. Lyndon L. Martin: Madam Speaker, for the benefit of the Member speaking and for the listening public I would like it to be known that those snippets of the Port possibly being located in North Sound was never originated from the Government nor any Member of the United Democratic Party.

The Speaker: The Second Elected Member from George Town, please continue your debate on the Throne Speech.

Mr. Alden M. McLaughlin, Jr.: Thank you, Madam Speaker, I never suggested they did.

But, I come back to this general proposition. What is it as a country that we are really trying to do? We cannot build an industry by destroying the very things that make it attractive; that bring people here; that cause us to want to live here.

There are sections of the Throne Speech that deal with growth management and development and I was pleased to see that. Whether or not they believe me it was not directed principally at the United Democratic Party Government; this is a phenomenon that has existed in Cayman for as long as I can remember. We seem to believe as a people that the only way the country can survive is by having more and more development; the more development the better. And Government's fortunes seem to have been inextricably linked to development for certainly the last twenty to twenty-five years.

Governments survive because of the stamp duty that is paid on material that is imported for development, material, food, the work permits for individuals to be brought in from abroad to help with these developments. And so we become married to this creature called 'development'. Everything is driven by numbers, particularly the tourist or tourism game.

But the problem with that concept, driven to extremes as it generally is, is that in creating this development, in trying to make the cruise ship facilities more attractive so we can bring more cruise ship visitors (when we really cannot accommodate those that come now when we have seven ships in the harbour at one time), we will go to East End and potentially destroy seven or eight dive sites which provide the attraction for thousands more who come on a regular basis and stay here. We have been doing this for as long as we have been trying to develop Cayman and we cannot build the country by tearing it down. We cannot destroy the things that make people want to come here and then have magnificent facilities to land, and when they get here what do they do?

God forbid, should the North Sound idea be floated again and finds fertile ground where it formerly found barren! We can 'kiss the marine environment of this Island good bye!' Those of us who know anything at all about the North Sound and about how it functions will understand how critical that is to the continued survival of our eco-system. Madam Speaker, I really hope that there is nothing more than rumours about that proposal. [Pause]

Madam Speaker, if I may have a moment.

The Speaker: Certainly.

Mr. Alden M. McLaughlin, Jr.: Madam Speaker, I also noted an article in the Caymanian Compass a short time ago in which the Minister of Planning, Communication, Works and Information Technology announced Government's intention to amend—I am not sure whether it was the regulations or the Development and Planning Law—to restrict those persons who can object to planning development generally.

I believe that proposal has come about as a result of a decision of the Grand Court here, which found that the current regulation or law, allowed a significant number of individuals and quite a broad category of persons to object to applications for development and planning approval. As I understood, it was to restrict the ability to reject a proposed development to persons who own property within a 1500-ft radius. That, Madam Speaker, is the current regulation and the proposal, as I understood it was to reduce that number from 1500 to 500 and thereby reduce the number of persons who could possibly object.

Now, Madam Speaker, that may seem innocuous but it is not. When one thinks of proposals such as the East End port project, if it becomes that, will affect the life of every person who resides in these Islands. But if this amendment comes into effect it will only be those who own property within a 500-ft radius who will have the legal grounds to object. Others can object, but they can do so through the medium of the press or written letters.

Point of Order

Mr. Lyndon L. Martin: Point of order, Madam Speaker.

The Speaker: Please state your point of order.

Mr. Lyndon L. Martin: Madam Speaker, I think the information that the Member has just provided regarding the change in the regulation from 1500 to 500 is not factually correct, and I wish for him to give the date of the Caymanian Compass in which he read it so that I can verify that that was a printing error by the Caymanian Compass.

The Speaker: In fact, Honourable Members just asked the Serjeant to get a copy of the Caymanian Compass if that is possible, and if not, the proposed amendment. There seems to be a discrepancy, so perhaps this is a convenient time for us to take the luncheon break. We will reconvene at 2.30 pm.

Proceedings suspended at 1.15 pm

Proceedings resumed at 2.48 pm

The Speaker: Proceedings are resumed. Continuing the debate the Second Elected Member for the district of George Town.

Mr. Alden M. McLaughlin, Jr.: Madam Speaker, when we took the adjournment the Second Elected Member for Cayman Brac had risen on a point of order and submitted that some of the information that I had provided in my contribution to the debate was not factually correct.

The excerpt of the Hansard has been handed to us and I believe we both have had the opportunity to speak with the Director of Planning to ascertain what the true position actually is in relation to this proposal. Madam Speaker, insofar as I said that the intent of the proposed amendment was to restrict the persons who had the legal ability to object to applications for development and planning approval to those who owned property within a 500-ft radius, that was, and is incorrect. However, the situation is actually more worrying from my perspective because as we have confirmed, the proposal is to restrict those who can legally object to a planning application to those who own property within a 1500 ft radius of the site of the proposed development.

As a result of a decision of the Grand Court which had defined the category of persons who could object to proposed developments far more broadly, the proposed amendment is now being brought to reduce that category as I have indicated—that is, to those who own property within a 1500 ft radius.

That reinforces my concern that the effect of this proposed amendment, if it is carried through, will be to prevent persons other than those who own property within the immediate vicinity of, for instance, the proposed port at East End, from being able to make objections about the proposed project to the Development and Planning Authority. And as I said earlier, projects of that size and nature affect every member of this community whether you live in George Town or East End.

In those circumstances all members of this community should continue to have the ability to make their objections to the Planning Authority and to have those objections properly considered in the whole process. I hope that I have clarified that ambiguity. I am grateful to the Second Elected Member from Cayman Brac for interrupting at that point so that we could set the record straight because it is the furthest thing from my mind to mislead the House or any one else for that matter. I am satisfied now I believe, as he is, that the record has been set straight.

Madam Speaker, I know that I am nearing the end of this new time limit. There are a number of other areas of the Throne Speech that I would have liked to make some observations about which I believe are demonstrative of the concerns that we referred to yesterday that there are times in this Honourable House—

Point of Order

Mr. Lyndon L. Martin: On a point of order, Madam Speaker.

The Speaker: Please state your point of order.

Mr. Lyndon L. Martin: The Member is attempting to revive a debate on a Motion that came to this House and was successfully passed to reduce the speaking time to two hours.

The Speaker: I have listened to the debate and thus far I think he skirted very close to the perimeter but has not entered therein so I would ask him to continue. I would also wish to bring to your attention Honourable Member that there are 16 minutes remaining. We did not include the clarification that you just made as a part of that.

Mr. Alden M. McLaughlin, Jr.: Thank you, Madam Speaker. I am again grateful to the Second Elected Member from Cayman Brac. He has again assisted in my deliberations.

So, I will move on to one of those other areas that I wish to say something about. [Pause] Early in his presentation of the Throne Speech, His Excellency the Governor referred to the efficiency scrutiny exercise of the Public Service that is currently underway. He posited that this exercise will leave the government machine in better shape to deliver those services that it is best equipped to deliver. I believe that that is a reference to the work of the Civil Service College who for some time now has been examining the Civil Service and its structure and administration generally.

I come back to what has become for me a familiar theme about the Civil Service and its efficiency and ability to deliver the services that the country needs in order to govern effectively. The number of persons employed by the Cayman Islands Government is now in the region of 4,000, give or take 10 or 20. I believe that there is no way that the country can continue to sustain a Civil Service of that size unless we come up with some other means of earning revenue for Government which has thus far eluded our predecessors and us. And, Madam Speaker, unless we find meaningful ways of reducing the services that the Civil Service provide to the community; unless our people come to understand that they cannot expect Government to provide all of these services to which the country has become accustomed.

Mr. Lyndon L. Martin: Madam Speaker, I bring to your attention that there is no quorum. There are five Members of Government and two Members of the Opposition present.

The Speaker: Serjeant, could you please bring in the relevant numbers to ensure that our quorum fits Standing Order 13(1). [Pause] Second Elected Member a quorum is now present. Please continue.

Mr. Alden M. McLaughlin, Jr.: Madam Speaker, I note that we started without a quorum so I am not sure why we needed a quorum to continue.

The Speaker: Second Elected Member, we started without a quorum because we have been having difficulty getting all Members within the Chamber within the specified time so I advised the Serjeant to take me into the Chamber. As I understand the Standing Orders, unless it is brought to my attention I have no need to question it unless there is a question that is going to be put at which time I will not call a quorum. Please continue.

Mr. Alden M. McLaughlin, Jr.: Madam Speaker, I was saying at the time it was determined that you were not quorate, the people of this country (all of us) have to come to the realization that we have to expect less of Government because there is no point in us saying, as I say so often, that we need to reduce the size of the Civil Service if the country and the political directorate still expect to deliver the level of service and the range of services that we currently provide. We cannot do that, Madam Speaker. I hope that part of the result of this efficiency scrutiny exercise will be firm recommendations to give effect to the philosophy that I have just advocated. I hope that this is not one of those academic exercises in which long reports are written and placed on a shelf somewhere to gather dust and business continues as usual.

I would like to conclude with a brief discussion about the Legislative Assembly, Parliament in general and how things work or how I think they should work in here.

Edmund Burke whom the Honourable Minister for Education is very fond of quoting said in a celebrated speech to the electors of Bristol in 1774: “Parliament is not a congress of ambassadors from different hostile interests; which interests each must maintain, as an agent and advocate, against the other agents and advocates; Parliament is a deliberative assembly of one nation, with one interest, that of the whole, where, not local purposes, not local prejudices ought to guide but the general good, resulting from the general reason of the whole”.

In this day and age and with the way that the legislative process has developed, this may be considered by some to be idealistic but it provides a good reference point from which we all should endeavor to work. Everything that transpires in this Honourable House should not be under hostile terms. We should be able, understanding the respective roles, to be able to treat those who play those roles with respect: if not for the individuals, for the positions they hold – at least that, Madam Speaker.

Madam Speaker, Bruce Golding said, “There is no joy in being in Opposition, you know. When you are in Opposition, you control nothing . . . If one is outside the ‘power loop’, one is ineffective and impotent despite the fact that one may be a duly elected representative of the people”.

That is probably the reality, but it is a reality that should not obtain. The Opposition has an important role to play in providing a check on the otherwise unrestrained power of the Government. It is worthwhile to those who respect the democratic process to give recognition to the role that those of us on this side play, give recognition and respect for our abilities. And endeavour inclusiveness in the exercise of the legislative function.

For my part, I am happy and proud to be a Member of the Opposition, frustrated though I get sometimes, Madam Speaker, when I feel that my ability to make a contribution is curtailed; frustrated though I become at times when I believe I could offer assistance and I am not called upon to do so. But, I want all Members of this Honourable House and the listening community to understand that I could not be prouder of being the Second Elected Member for the district of George Town. The people of this country, and my constituency in particular, can rest assured that as long as I have health, strength and life itself, and as long as I am here, I shall do everything in my power to represent them to the very best of my ability. Even when efforts are made to stifle what I have to say. If I am unable by one means or another to express that on the Floor of this Honourable House, it will be expressed and the people of this country will know what my concerns are one way or another.

Madam Speaker, I am grateful to you and all Honourable Members of this House for indulging by listening to my observations on the speech from the Throne. I hope that my contribution on this occasion has assisted the process; has provided another perspective; has provided the framework for contributions from other Members. And I hope it has helped to assist the whole process of Government, the whole process of this Legislature, and ultimately, with the better governance of these beloved Cayman Islands. I thank you, Madam Speaker.

The Speaker: Thank you. Just a bit of housekeeping: Honourable Member, I wonder if you could supply the Clerk with a copy of the last quote that you made, please. Thank you.

Does any other Member wish to speak? Does any other Member wish to speak? Last call. Does any other Member wish to speak?

The Honourable Minister for Community Services.

Dr. the Hon. Frank McField: Madam Speaker, I have finally come to understand the role of the Opposition and the ability of the Opposition to say absolutely nothing about what should really be done to improve the social and economic conditions of the people.

I was on that side in that same seat and the differences between me then and me now is that I really need to come up with social and economic solutions to the very extreme difficulties that the people are facing in this country today.

The last speaker, the Second Elected Member for George Town, spent an incredible amount of time trying to give the public the idea that they should have no confidence in this Government. I do not believe that Honourable Member's position is an objective one, because I sat next to him from the day of swearing in, in November 2000 until the 8 November 2001 (almost one year after the elections when the Government was changed) and that Honourable Member did not invest any significant amount of time in casting doubts and dark shadows on the will and the possibility for democracy to exist in these Chambers and outside. In my opinion he had a personal reason to support the last government and a personal reason to be against the support of this one, simply because the Leader of Government Business at that time was his friend.

However, that is not politics; that is ‘friend-friend’ government and I spoke about the ‘friend-friend’ government before and the inability of the ‘friend-friend’ government to really be a functional government in an advancing democratic country.

The fact that those relationships did not work is part of the reason for the bitterness in this House today, but I refuse to allow that Honourable Second Elected Member from George Town to make it seem as if the hostility that exists in here is simply because of the United Democratic Party politics. I think that what the United Democratic Party politics has brought to this Honourable House is a possibility for making decisions that will begin to positively impact young people's lives, old people's lives, women's lives, men's lives, given the kind of social and economic relief that the people so well need in this country today.

That Member spoke for two hours, carefully choosing his words in order to be able to twist the minds of the people towards believing that he and the Opposition, which he leads, are the only individuals in this country that are capable of being honest and sincere. This country has not just today gone according to favouritism (who likes whom) because that Member had a possibility to have voted for an Executive Council in November 2000. That was the same Member – the Second Elected Member for George Town – that made sure that I was not a member of the Executive Council at that particular time.

Did he see the fact that he changed his position as destabilising, as dishonest, as undemocratic, as full of resentment or whatever? It appears to me that that Honourable Member, that Second Elected Member for George Town has very limited memory, in my opinion. He needs to get away from the 8th November, just like I need to be able to remove myself from that day with the turtle meat and the breadfruit when the conceit began! We all need to go forward.

On one hand that Honourable Member is talking about the virtues of the Westminster system and the Party system. On the other hand the fact that the United Democratic Party was organised before he had a chance to organise his Party, he is using the United Democratic Party's existence as something that is negative. But had he and his friends created a team system or a party system in the 2000 Election rather than running numbers short, they might have been able to be in a position to lead the country in the way they believe the country should be led.

It is not my fault that their reign was short because I was willing to have gone on a political platform with them, giving them additional strength, but I was not good enough, Madam Speaker. There was something wrong with me then and there was something wrong with me in November when they sat down and ate turtle meat with me. And now they come here to accuse us of being undemocratic; of being unfair; of not representing the true wishes of the people as if they are the only ones who look like the people, who talk like the people, and that can truly be representative of the people.

I beg to differ this day with that group that calls itself a clean Opposition. I beg, Madam Speaker, to differ. I know where I have come from, I know where I have been and I thank God that I know where I am going. But I say there has been too much hypocrisy in this country. There have been too many attempts to 'sweep-sweep the conceitedness and the prejudice under the bed'. If we had been able to come together as a group in 2000 and work out an orderly way to run as candidates and to win and to form governments, we would not have been needing the United Democratic Party to come in order to have enough cohesiveness to make it possible for Government to make those decisions legal by having the maajority behind, supporting those decisions in this Honourable House.

I do not know who talked to whom in November 2000 and said that Frank McField was not good enough to be a member of the Executive Council, or why Gilbert McLean could not be a member of the Executive Council. I heard that people talked to people about that and that was the reason we got into the position of the 'horse-trading' going to West Bay. I did not cause that.

I have tried to tell people that I have not stolen anything, so when the Second Elected Member for George Town gets up and says how the people of this country are so upset by what happened on the 8 November and how undemocratic that was. He needs to remember that he was the one who put this entire process into gang! Phase one was at the house of the First Elected Member for George Town.

I do not necessarily want to go back to that situation again, when there are so many valuable things to be done in this country, but I refuse to stand by when that Member has this attitude as if he is 6 or 7 feet tall, hovering above us showing us how small and insignificant we are; how much more improved he is than we are. Why? Because his education makes him any better? I doubt so.

There are a lot of things that have gone on in this country that upset those persons who would prefer what I consider to be the status quo to continue to exist. I remember when I was a Member of the Opposition with the First Elected Member for George Town, the Lady Member for North Side, the now Minister of Education, and the Minister of Tourism. We were boisterous against the then government of Mr. Truman Bodden, just as the Opposition is against this Government of the United Democratic Party.

I remember the confrontations that took place here between 1996 and 2000, and I thought the reason this was happening was because there were people who were interested in getting power in order to improve the lives of our children, old people, the poor and the working and the dispossessed. However, it appeared that they were more interested in power for 'friend-friend' things and not the real people things!

That is why when I answered the question in here yesterday about remand facilities for youth, I commented that as a person who came out against the way our society refused to accept the fact that we had social problems, that we had poverty; that we had people who did not have the ability to communicate positive values to their children, I was fired from my job. And now I have the possibility to make a difference.

I come in and the first thing I must do is to build Prisons to put those children in who look like me and have my name! Why should I want to make that my historical legacy? Let it be the legacy of those who advocated it, and were willing to finance it. Not me! Not me! I want to find a much better way of dealing with our youth problems and that is why I was happy to be the chairman of the Commission of Inquiry into Social Breakdown and Youth Violence.

That is what we should have been talking about here today rather than how undemocratic we are simply because he happens to be sitting where I used to be and I am in this seat where he thought he should be. Well, let him wait until 2004, if that is the fate. But until then I will work to try to correct a lot of the social breakdown problems in this country by investing and having a hands-on approach to problem solving.

I have taken over one of the most difficult subjects in this country being that of Prison. And I believe that I have taken that on not because I believe that I can solve problems that others cannot, but my heart is with the people who are there, with the mothers who are crying, because the people who are there are not there because of any bad nature that they have but because of problems they have with drug abuse and use.

Madam Speaker, that is what I would like that Honourable Second Elected Member from George Town to be able to get up and speak with passion about his dedication and his feelings for what is out there today. Not what the Leader of Government Business is, on a personal level.

The Leader of Government Business is one among equals. We are all champions of causes and my cause might be a lot smaller than their cause but I am the champion of it. And I am proud that I have come this far believing that there are ways that we can begin to mend the social fabric in this country, which has been broken down because of rapid economic development that did not pay any attention to the changes in values. The impact that foreign values external to ours were having on our people, when there was no one there to counsel them and give them the feeling, is what we were criticizing between 1996 and 2000.

Now we get to 2002 and I am being told that the real problem in this country is me; my government; the government that I am a part of. Not the past, not the future, but now. But I believe, Madam Speaker, that we need to look closely at the need in this country not just for extended Court facilities as the Honourable Second Elected Member from George Town has spoken of. It shows his priorities.

Yes, law and order is necessary for good governance, but so is affordable housing; so are the benefits to our seamen; so are schools; so are all of these social amenities important to the maintenance of order. But he, coming from where he comes, picks out the Courts as that which is necessary for social cohesion in our society.

Madam Speaker, why did he not talk about the pre-school programmes; the after-school programmes; the need for us to continue to finance after-school programmes that were cut by the last administration between 2000 and 2001, at least until the 8 November. Why do we not talk about the priorities of that administration to go along with this 'arm-jerk' reaction and build a facility to lock children up and spend $60,000 per year to incarcerate a young child whose parents cannot even make $15,000 per year.

If I sound impatient it is because I see these problems and I feel these problems. They are happening to people who are like me. I have had no desire to remove myself from being able to see the suffering, and regardless of whether or not I am Minister for Community Services or not, I find myself in the same neighbourhoods speaking to people about the same problems.

Just this morning while I was going to my office to meet the new Chairman of the Adoption Board I stopped at the Police Station where the Cayman Islands Marine Institute was picking up children who were at the lock-up. I know these children and I stopped to talk to them. I am not just leaving it to the professionals; I am involved. I met one of the girls from the Marine Institute in here yesterday and said to her, 'We are here for you, we are on your side, we are willing to fight with you as long as you are willing to show us that the opportunities which we are offering you, will be taken seriously'.

We are trying to make sure that those children are not permanently locked up. Locking children up is not the way we intend to solve the problem. There are a lot of people who are saying that a secure residential facility will give us the possibility to solve the problems, but those people who are saying that know nothing about social development.

The majority of people that are informed about youth development will tell you that if you are going to punish children but never reward them, at the end of the day all they are going to do is become hardened to your punishment. They will learn like all human beings have learned—to adopt themselves to the conditions that you now mould them into.

All we have to do is look at war and look at areas in the world where people fight wars and we thought that they could not live under those conditions for so long. But we see how long people can live under these adverse conditions—how they can adopt themselves and tailor themselves to all kinds of conditions. It is the same with incarceration.

The child, even more so than the adult, will be able to condition himself to those particular types of environments. So, it is not a solution, and whose children are they? The poorer class people's children. The other people can get their children out of problems.

In doing our inquiry into social breakdown we found out that the problems of juvenile delinquency go across the social spectrum. It is not limited to any one particular area or any one particular group, but the point is that the resiliency of those particular families that are better off educated and financially, they are not going to allow their child to go through the juvenile justice system and end up locked up. They are going to get tutors and counsellors. They are going to fight to get their child out of that system because they know that to institutionalise them is to 'finish them off'.

So, we have no solution to juvenile delinquency in residential facilities. We have (as has been suggested by His Excellency the Governor in his Throne Speech) to look at alternatives. We must see detention not as a building, but as a continuum of supervision. We can go from zero supervision, where parents are not supervising their children – one reason why we have this breakdown – but should we go from zero supervision to the lock-up? Madam Speaker, what have we tried between that and the lock-up? Absolutely nothing!

The CIMI was a good experiment, but it has gotten really run down. It did not have the necessary manpower to have it functioning to benefit us at that particular time, so we lost a very important facility. We have done much already to correct that problem in the hundred days that we have been in office as the United Democratic Party Government. That is a much shorter time than when the friends of the Second Elected Member from George Town were in power. I have gone in there and have identified a lot that can be to improve social issues in this country because I did not have to wait to be elected to be interested. I did not have to wait to be elected to have knowledge of the problems that I would be dealing with. That has been my life long commission.

One of the first things we did in the Ministry of Community Services, Women's Affairs, Youth and Sports, is to convince the Executive Council (the United Democratic Party Government) that pro-social behaviour is something that Government must actively encourage. We can no longer have the laissez-faire attitude toward socialization and social control that we had before. Because there are circumstances that cause certain families not to be able or willing to look after the supervision and nurturing of their children. And as a result these children get involved in deviant behaviour. They learn it in their homes by seeing domestic abuse, by seeing parents resolving disputes through the use of violence rather than communicating and compromising.

So, we just cannot go into areas into our country where we know that these children are coming from and say, 'What we had to offer you is a nice little barbed wire fence for your children because we really believe that they will be safer there and the society will be more secure'. But what happens when they come out, Madam Speaker? They will come out one day, maybe twenty years down the line, and we still have to start at that particular point again trying to find some way of actually getting them to recognise their responsibility to themselves and to society.

So, pro-active pro-social behaviour is part of the whole objective of community development. We do not wait until we see the breakdown before we do something because community services for too long have been based upon reactions to problems rather than being proactive. If we go into neighbourhoods, for instance, and find that children are organised in sports; football, netball, basketball, one of the things that we can do is we can say, 'Look we are going to support sports but we find that we are spending at this time $200,000 more on youth and sports than we are spending on substance abuse services'. Substance abuse services are not necessarily services that are always preventative services. Many times it is a reaction to a problem that is already there and therefore, you invest nothing in actually trying to prevent the problem.

One of the first things that we did within the first thirty days of the new administration, after the 8 November, we went in and said that we wanted to talk with the Football Association (the players) to arrange a contract with them where National Team players become pro-social role models. So that we actually elicit them and support them financially, and as a result they behave, publicly, in a particular manner, not just on the football field but also off the football field. We also justified that due to the fact that football had been the national sport in this country as far as we are concerned. We also know a lot of football players from all the different districts, women and men who have brought football to a point where football activities can really work to create a kind of community bonding and wholesomeness that would act against the development of anti-social behaviour in our communities. And some communities, believe it or not, are more impacted by anti-social behaviour than others. So, the children in these communities are more vulnerable than the children in other areas, although children in other areas can and do get involved with asocial behaviour as well.

From the time I came back to this country in 1977 we have known that certain areas were more prone to suffer as a result of these types of asocial values and behaviours. Therefore, the children in those areas needed to have particular attention. From as far back as then I advocated a pre-school system. I do not know what I was called back then, but I do not think that I was many good things back then because I was 'racist', 'racialist', et cetera, because I was talking about those children. But all you have to do now is go up to Northward and see who is there. All you have to do is go and see who is at the Marine Institute to understand that until we get our thinking to a level where we can focus in on the people that are being affected by these particular vices in the society we are not going to be able to do anything.

So, we have decided as a Government to invest up to $182,000, I believe, in giving our national football players an opportunity to bring the standard of football and positive character to a new level. We are not saying that money by itself can accomplish those things. We do believe, however, that in a society where punitive reaction has been the norm it is time that we begin to set a new standard. One whereby a government minister feels that he is close enough to the people who have been affected by these issues, to try to more gently persuade them to comply with our general socialisation and social control policies.

Madam Speaker, knowing that the Second Elected Member from George Town is from a district that has a lot of social issues, housing is what I would have liked for him to talk about today. We have identified the lack of proper housing as one of the chief causes of social breakdown for the children who are giving us these issues in the schools and outside the schools. One of the reasons they are on the street is that there are too many people at home. It is crowded. If you go to poor countries you see a lot of people outside because there is more space on the outside than there is inside. So, being on the streets is just some time to develop some kind of individuality and to 'have some space', as we like to say, 'for yourself'.

There have been political talks about housing in this country for 'donkey's ages' and no government has been able to tackle this problem with any kind of commitment. This Government will do so. This Government sees that there is a need to change laws in order to make it more feasible for poorer people to be able to pass the Planning bureaucracy's obstacles to be able to own a piece of land.

Madam Speaker, if the size of the land has to remain the same; if the lay-backs have to remain the same, if the poor person has to fit the same conditions all the time; if we are going to legalise a particular standard of living, when people fall below that standard of living Government should have the resources to make sure that they get back there. So, if you do not have the resources to make sure that they can stay on that standard you have to become more flexible about those standards.

I believe that I bring a valuable perspective to this Government. That is a perspective that had been lacking for a long time. I believe that when I came in here in 1996 I brought it to the House. With no disrespect to the Minister of Tourism and Leader of Government Business who I think has done a tremendous job in concentrating on these issues, I think I have something also to offer. And since that Minister is interested in perhaps creating the foundation for us to be able to make the social changes, I believe that his job is best served out there in the front while we take care of these issues. Without the economic foundation and development, we cannot pay for these social programmes which we so badly need.

I see the Scranton area in George Town as an area that is filled with love and cohesiveness. People only need to go to functions there and they understand and all talk about how good the people are. We have social problems in those areas. We have youth problems, drug problems. Many of the people who seem to be there with the drugs are from outside the neighbourhood but they just go there to deal their drugs.

Madam Speaker, we need to get into those areas and do some urban renewal. My dream is that we will be able to go into the Scranton area and convince the larger families – communal families – that need to stay together and not move out some place to Bodden Town, East End or North Side, but instead to remain a part of that George Town community because that has been for a long long time a part of the George Town heritage. And the more I read our history the more I understand why it is important to keep those communities in tact.

Madam Speaker, I have this dream that we could go into the area and convince people to pool their land together that we will have land that Government will say, 'Here, let us have a housing Co-op in this area, you people will own it and Government will help you to achieve this and Government will put in a few million dollars maybe even the private sector and we will not have separate homes'. Because a lot of people have already learned how to live together and how to share, work and rare children together and how to build some nice town houses in that area. Maybe they will have a few little shops, and maybe even the tourists will find some attraction in that area.

That is the vision of the United Democratic Party. A vision about the development of people and not a vision about castigating people because one person who was a member of the 1992 government is now the Secretary of the Party. And because there was a disagreement about whether or not they should have a health authority board that should mean that these people should not get together.

The vision survives the death of the dream and I am happy that I find myself in Government at this particular time with a leader and with other Members who are socially conscious; who think about poor people and disadvantaged people. As Minister for Women's Affairs I believe that the gender policy is important and we just had the possibility to have a report on the gender policy to the Executive Council. I might say something more about that as I go on that the person we have responsible for the gender policy at the moment is Estella Scott.

We realise what gender consciousness means—the gender perspective. The Second Elected Member from George Town said that we have no perspective. That is not true. We have many perspectives. I have shown you the perspective on youth; I have shown you the perspective on housing; I have shown you the perspective on social development, and I would also like to tell you a little more about our perspective with regards to gender issues. A lot of us think that gender issues mean women's issues but gender issues are not women's issues; gender issues are about the relationships and the roles; the inequality in terms of the way in which the role between the two sexes are constructed which leads to a lot of abuse.

One of the main areas that we must address is the maintenance of children. That is a distressful area and I must say with all sincerity that in all of my struggles I have tried to stay away from the whole idea of fathering children, because I think it is important if you have children that they be your future and that your future should not be limited like your past. You have to be able to pass on something more important to your children than was passed on to you. It must be representing some progression. I have never talked about that before but I really take it seriously.

So this distortion in the relationship that occurs between the sexes causing men not to want to support their children, not only makes their children suffer, but also the women, and ultimately the country. And they suffer because they are not able to realise that from that incredible act the full potential and meaning of it is to carry themselves into the future in a more positive sense.

There is no point in doing it if we are involved in wars, et cetera. I think that when people take the time out to father children, they should take time out to cherish and maintain them and the law must reflect that. And we would like to see, as has been suggested by the gender policy, that that Law is looked at more seriously and that the amendments be made in order to get this.

Madam Speaker, I am a man and as a man I guess it is like everything—we always think as soon as someone accuses us of having an unequal relationship we say, 'No, no, no I am alright, it is not like that, it cannot be like that'. So, men are resisting the whole idea that somehow there is an inequality in the gender relationships. Just like there are those of us who still believe that to even mention the word 'race' in our society and the disadvantages that are sometimes dealt out to persons because of their complexion – not necessarily because of their race – that it is something we should not mention because we are pure and we do not want to be questioned about it. But, Madam Speaker, it is always useful to ask the question, 'Are we being as fair to each other as we could be, and if we were fairer would not our society be more beneficial to all of us?' So, I think those people who do not want persons to question on that level about these particular perspectives are not very fair. If we have nothing to fear then we should have no fear of questions.

It is important that the gender policy be regarded seriously whether or not we are dealing with the issue of Immigration. We find that domestics who come here and work in homes, they themselves have children who are becoming delinquent in another country and we have no sympathy for them because they are working in the domestic realm rather than the public realm. But without the domestic realm you would not have the public realm. So, why is it that because a woman works in the domestic realm she is paid nothing and she is treated in a particular way, while those who work in the public realm are regarded to be making more contribution?

All of those things are issues that come into play in the gender policy and those are questions that we need to ask. For instance when the domestic who is taking care of your children becomes frustrated because of poor living conditions and poor pay and her children in Jamaica or Honduras, or wherever, are worrying her the possibility is that she might not necessarily take care of your children in the right way. Making things right with people is important because it influences the way we interact and the way we contact. So, the gender policy is a worthwhile policy. Women's Affairs is therefore an important part of my Ministry.

In office I noticed that there was a plan for a house of safety for abused women. There was a plan to spend a million dollars, but I said that it would take a long time to get a million dollars to spend and that it might have been quicker to get a few thousand dollars. So, one of the things I did was to take this before the Executive Council where it was agreed that my Ministry could get $250,000 towards providing a shelter for abused women.

Madam Speaker, this is a policy that the UDP Government has made possible. We have identified the house—long before Christmas but this is being held up just a bit because of government bureaucracy. I am sometimes amazed at how that works. But it will be done: the vision survives the death of the dream. We will be able to get the community and the women's groups involved, including the Women's Resource Centre getting it to the level where people can feel safe if they have problems in their homes with their spouses. And the Police do not have to go in and pick the husband up and lock him up for the fear that something bad might happen. So, the possibility is that the woman could go to the shelter until she is able to sort out the next move to be taken in order to improve that relationship.

Madam Speaker, the Police have a family unit now which I believe would be totally ineffective if we did not have a shelter for abused women that the Police try to protect by going to the homes. It does not make any sense to put one piece in place and not the other piece, which is necessary. That is uneconomical.

So, the UDP saw fit to allow this to happen. Now this is happening within 110 days of our Government and I believe that is a very important test of our common sense approach to problem-solving. We have a hands-on common sense approach to solving problems. We are not waiting for everything to be big and gigantic for it to happen.

In all that the Second Elected Member from George Town has said, he has not once referred to anything that the Government has done that is positive. And he comes here today to talk about the needs of the Court. I am talking about the needs of abused women; I am talking about the needs of children; I am talking about the needs of single mothers who need the homes in Scranton and in Rock Hole and other areas.

Madam Speaker, if we the United Democratic Government do not bring in housing before 2004, then we should be voted out. If we cannot improve the behaviour of our young people, then we should be voted out; if we cannot do anything to curb domestic abuse, then we should be voted out. But because the Second Elected Member from George Town thinks that we are not acceptable people, should that be the reason why we are voted out? This Government still has two years and nine months or more. If that is the way he is going to bark he will be barking for a long time. He has to come up with something more concrete than the fact that he knows how democracy works.

Let me say something about democracy. There was democracy in this country before 1834, but before that time people like me could not vote. People like me could not sit in the democratic halls and that to me was not democracy. One man's interpretation of democracy is obviously not another man's interpretation of democracy. So, let us be very specific about this.

Whereas one person might think that we (the UDP) are the worst people in the world, others might think that we are paying attention to the issues and causing business persons to feel welcome to invest here. And that it is not about us cursing people about being bad simply because they are developers. As I have said, without the economic base there can be no positive social policies or changes.

I know the Elected Member from East End will get up after me and he will say certain things about the dock in East End because I went on the radio and said that I thought it was a good idea to build a dock in East End and how it would help to give the community the economic base to be able to develop socially. Now, that Member from East End is criticizing Government for everything but he wants to talk about housing and wants to know when are we going to build a park there for him so he can get the credit for it. So we must give him everything that he wants and he gets credit for that too while he continues to criticize us. What an ideal position! If I could have it I would go back on the Back Bench, but it did not happen in my time! I am always trying to find a way of getting those things but maybe my dear cousin is a lot smarter than I am. He knows how to work it because what happens here is, after he finishes in this Hall he comes and laughs and chats with me and gets me all 'sweetened up' on his side again just so he can get everything he wants, and comes in here and gets me the next day. [chuckle]. This is what my dear cousin does to me. Sure. But it is important for him to know that without the funds to invest East End cannot progress. He would prefer if those funds came from Government yet he is against the Government revenue measures.

The people from Dart Management Limited will be doing the park in East End. So, when people are talking about developers and development we understand that at the end of the day the same people who are complaining against development, they themselves need the developers to pay for the development that they want. It could not happen without someone paying for it. So, even if we have to take money from developers here to put into government coffers to pay for what he wants, or whether or not the developer, through some kind of corporate responsibility helps him to get it, ultimately it comes from the same source.

All of these things have to do with what we consider as the redistribution of wealth where somehow the richer people contribute either voluntarily or through government taxes to the general upkeep of the society. But interestingly, this question of the Dock as the Second Elected Member from George Town said—well, I am not going to say anything further about the Dock because there is a Minister responsible for those things.

However, I would like to say something because of the East End situation and because I was told that certain people think that maybe I spoke out of turn in saying that I believe that it would be good for East End. Madam Speaker, I cannot discuss the issues of the weather and all the other Marine issues, but I was speaking from the point of view of jobs. I heard that the Labour Department or the Employment Services Centre did a survey in East End and the unemployment rate there is alarmingly high. I wonder what industries will my good cousin get for his district soon in order to provide the economic base for the preservation of the social system and the social structure. Where is he going to get the development to provide the jobs to create the community base which is necessary in any society? For if George Town did not get any development, it would be a lot worse off too, but I have been told that one of the respects that a lot of my people in George Town have for the Honourable Leader of Government Business is that he does a lot of things for his district, and that we in George Town do not do enough for our district.

I would hope that the Members all understand that I intend to try to work along with the Leader of Government Business and other Members of the United Democratic Party to make sure that George Town benefits from the development of parks, housing development and that George Town comes first in terms of receiving these particular facilities or amenities for its people.

Now, I need to find out from the Second Elected Member from George Town whether his role will just be a role of Opposition or will he get involved with us in trying to provide George Town with parks, housing and to give George Town the kind of social face-lift by getting involved with sports and young people. I also want to find out whether or not he will assist us in achieving the revenue base which is necessary in order to accomplish these things.

Madam Speaker, prison is an important part of community services. It is necessary for us to see that if prisoners are only 'warehoused' (a term I got from the prisoners themselves and I am quite sure that it is used outside their fraternity), what they are saying is that if we just put them there for a certain amount of time to do time, and nothing is done other than time being lost, they come out and before long they go back again. So one of the problems the Prison has suffered is the inability to be able to compete with other priorities for revenue.

So, when the Second Elected Member from George Town gets up and talks about the Court, and although I realise that the Court needs and has needed for decades, when he was in charge of the government (sort of) from the Back Bench for that one year, the Court did not get anything. But we are in here for a hundred days and the Court is supposed to get. Now, I do not understand that too well. There was a whole year when the Court could have gotten when he had his influence and the Court did not get. I wonder why.

So, now that I am here I want to see the Prison get a little bit of the change too because that is where I am trying to turn things around. That is one of the reasons why it is changed to an Elected Minister to fight for funds for the Prison because, Madam Speaker, let me tell you, please, if we do not do something about the Prison, the Prison will do something about us.

We believe that discipline and structure should be the bedrock of the regime in the Prison. And since I have had responsibility for the Prison, each Friday morning I have met with the Director of Prisons. He gets more time than anyone else in my Portfolio does and we talk about things and he reports on things. I have said to him that I support the Director, I support the regime, and I do not support anyone trying to run it from the outside or the inside other than the regime. If the regime is weak then in time we will deal with the weaknesses if we can and will perfect them. But we will not make it stronger by the kind of interference which we have had over the years.

I know at least enough psychology to be able to figure out that if you do not support the man on the top you cannot support the man in the middle. That is the way it has to go. It is not that we are not aware of issues in the Prison but we have to take time to reform it in such a way that it will be meaningful and have that kind of impact that it should have in our community. That Prison also—if we had a Court system and the Court sent people to prison but there was no prison to take the people in, the Court would not be able to maintain its order and, therefore, the stability of the society would also be at risk.

Let us not take off the necessity for putting more money into the Prison. The Second Elected Member from George Town can be assured that what we want to do is to build a particular cell block that would be a hardened place for people who are trafficking drugs to this country. It will be built out of cement. They will not be able to put fire to it. We are going to build it in order to deter people from bringing drugs into our country. It is going to be a prison-prison block, a hard block.

Madam Speaker, we are fed up. With all the money we are spending on rehabilitation the people are just taking it in and nothing is being done. The approach to this particular problem of solving the drug issues in this country must be a multifaceted approach and the Prison has formed a very important part of the link in that particular approach. The UDP, believe it or not, this issue has been taken to caucus and the young democrats, especially in the Party from Cayman Brac and West Bay, have agreed that they want to see a much stricter regime there. So, every Friday when I meet with the Director I have to remember what they are going to tell me the next time I go to caucus with them. 'What is happening with the Prison? We hear this is happening, we want to make sure that the regime there is strict'. We want to be merciful to people, we want to give people the possibility to rehabilitate. We will provide those facilities but we must show people who are importing drugs into this country that they are not going to come here and get a seven-year sentence and then be out in two-and-a-half years because they sat in a place where they learned how to develop computers, et cetera, and then go back to their societies to be even smarter criminals. We want to make sure that when they go they do not want to come back because we are going to make our jail here just like their jail.

Madam Speaker, we want to make it known that as Minister that I have the backing of the UDP and I have the will to see this through because it is a very important part of our Prison reform system. That is what we want the Opposition to know; that is what we want the Opposition to support; that is what we want the Opposition to discuss. That is what oppositions are all about: to scrutinize the policies of government and not to get into the kind of situation that I heard the Second Elected Member for George Town get into. Basically, what has he said other than that we are no good? That we got here through illegal means and that the people disapprove of it, although he goes around explaining to them that constitutionally, what happened was legal. He still says, 'Well the people said no, it should not have happened'. He must be really in a good position because on one hand he believes it was constitutional and democratic but the people do not believe so.

Well then, he needs to show the people that democracy is about more than how we feel about people. Democracy is about rules and precedence and as long as you are within those rules and precedence when you do things, it is democratic: it is legal.

It is really a good position when you can say to people, 'Boy, you know what happen, the United Democratic Party took over the country and the people vexed with them boy. I know they are going to kick them out in 2004 and you could see me being minister in 2004'. Madam Speaker, do you know what is going to happen to those people? They are going to go simply because the people say what they did on the 8 November 2001 was bad. However, there must be some other standards that the Honourable Member attaches to us. It must be some other qualifications.

He must look at the record that we have already created. He must look at what we will do because we are not idlers. I did not spend my life trying to get here to do nothing and to have no impact whatsoever. He must totally underestimate me.

Madam Speaker, as a matter of fact, one of the things that I would like to do—all this talk about gangs in our society—is, I would like to see the real people that can reach the gangs work with them. We have this whole idea—and it is real funny—how everyone is so perfect. They can see the problem there and the perfection is here and there is no mixture. No mixture. No exchange. I want to get people from the neighbourhoods involved: people who know the children and whose children are their children too.

We have money to hire three youth officers but I will bet you that the general conception would be, 'Let us hire the people who are going to sit behind a desk.' And it would be just the same way – they still would not know how to get into and feel comfortable in those neighbourhoods'. But do you think that is going to happen with me as Minister? We are bringing in our youth officers on contracts; we are not bringing them in as civil servants for them to feel privileged that they have a job now and they are not going to do the job that they were hired to do because these children are too difficult. No, this is performance-based. They must show the result. Their contracts will only be as long as they can perform, and after that they can go some place else.

What happens is that Government is very quick to go and create, but it does not want to break down the camp and go somewhere else. Sometimes it is necessary, however, to shift in terms of your focus, so, you have to take resources from here and put them there in order to emphasize that.

We want to have people in the grass root communities working for this. Already I have instructed Rehoboth to take on one of the mothers in those areas to begin to work with children in those areas, and we are going to fund them with the money to be able to do that. I cannot sit down any longer and understand the dynamics of the situation and think that I am going to hire people on the other side of the fence to influence the people on that side of the fence. Our programmes are really pro-active programmes. The Second Elected Member for George Town needs to get involved with what we are doing in our communities.

So, I think that I am definitely excited about my possibilities to make a change. This is what I have been dreaming about. The vision, Madam Speaker, survived the death of the dream. The vision, Madam Speaker, is the United Democratic Party; a cohesive group of people who are social thinkers and social feelers. We come from the roots. If anything they can say about this Government is that these are people who are not privileged. They do not come from any privileged group and they have a love for the people, the common Caymanian folk.

Madam Speaker, my mother at her age (God bless her) is out again doing things and feeling excited. We want to get the older people into the community centres during the day. Not sitting at home and waiting for the burial but coming out and working with the youth and feeling that they are a part of the community again. This is what our Government is doing. This is what our Government should be held responsible for. This is what our Government should be criticised for not doing if we fail to do it. But not back to the 8 November again. We have gone beyond that. We are now at the point where we are doing these positive things in our community. It is time that all of the services—and as you can see Social Services is put within my Portfolio so that we could have more cooperation and coordination.

Substance Abuse Services cannot tell me that they are not going down to the Marine Institute to treat those children; one cannot tell me that he is not going to help a person who needs some help. But at the same time, I can talk to the Minister of Education who is also the Minister responsible for Employment Services so that we can help people to get jobs. But when it comes to a point they need to take responsibility because we are not developing a social welfare state. We certainly do believe that social welfare is an important part of our social control strategies and without it the society would have to solve its problems in too much of a confrontational manner.

We are going into communities like Scranton, Rock Hole, Banana Walk and Goat Yard. We are going into all of those communities not to fraternize with them: not to win their votes but to get them to follow us not politically, but to see the vision that we have for them. A vision where they will be able to live in their Cayman Islands community connected and not disconnected. It is not the development that the people fear; it is the fear of being pushed out not having any power, usefulness, benefits, or any relationships.

So, Madam Speaker, we need to recognise that the Portfolio of Community Services is what Government must depend upon to knit the social fabric back together again; to repair the damage that was done; to reform the social institutions; to extend the drive for co-operation and coordination; to make sure that development really impacts and improves the standard of living for the people.

Madam Speaker, I am a member of the History Committee and new history will be published next year. It will be interesting how people will react to that history. One of the things that I found interesting was, and probably I will be talking about that in my lecture during Black History Month, people think that if you are talking about Black History Month that what you are really talking about is divisions. I think what our history teaches us is that we started divided but circumstances and choices cause us to become closer and closer related.

It is interesting to see the role that religion played in the socialisation of our people and providing the foundation for them to be able to embrace and accept one another, thereby giving us cultural traits that were very similar, even though the complexions of the people differ. This was possible in a small society and one that was somehow brought together under one cultural umbrella by the Presbyterian, Wesleyan and Baptist churches.

Madam Speaker, I think we need to understand that all of these things that we do, including looking at our identity, are not useless, but rather positive. In remarking about that, for instance, one of the issues is that a lot of persons criticise the young people for looking at Black Entertainment Network (BET). They see how these children begin acting like black Americans in the urban or ghetto areas—because let us say that that particular group of people from the point of view of their class and the way they act is very varied.

But, Madam Speaker, that they would go and get an identity there, or identify with those people. How is it that they are talking to these children and getting their attention? We are not talking to these children and getting their attention simply because every time the child might even think so, we do not deal with those children about these issues. But of course children ask questions; of course children can see differences.

The fact that they do not have any sociological importance is different. So, maybe their attention was there simply because we never talked about it. Maybe we need to talk about it so they can have it in their heads the way we want and not the way someone else wants. That is the way I think we can become pro-active again. We should have been pro-active a long time. That is the usefulness that I find in being able to appear and do a lecture at the Black History Month. It is my perspective about it and not some American person who has had a different perspective about it. We condemn too many things and that is what we have heard here today.

Madam Speaker?

The Speaker: Thank you, Honourable Minister. We have reached the hour of interruption. I call on the Leader of Government Business to move the adjournment.

ADJOURNMENT

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: Thank you, Madam Speaker. I move the adjournment of this Honourable House until tomorrow at 10 am.

The Speaker: The question is that this House do now adjourn until 10 am Friday 22, February 2002.

All those in favour please say Aye. Those against, No.

Ayes.

The Speaker: The Ayes have it.

At 4.35 pm the House stood adjourned until Friday, 22 February 2002, at 10 am.

OFFICIAL HANSARD REPORT
FRIDAY
22 FEBRUARY 2002
10.24 AM
Fourth Sitting

The Speaker: Good morning. I shall invite the Honourable Member for the district of North Side to grace us with prayers.

PRAYERS

Mrs. Edna M. Moyle: Let us pray.

Almighty God, from whom all wisdom and power are derived: We beseech Thee so to direct and prosper the deliberations of the Legislative Assembly now assembled, that all things may be ordered upon the best and surest foundations for the glory of Thy Name and for the safety, honour and welfare of the people of these Islands.

Bless our Sovereign Lady, Queen Elizabeth II; the Queen Mother; Philip, Duke of Edinburgh; Charles, Prince of Wales; and all the Royal family. Give grace to all who exercise authority in our Commonwealth, that peace and happiness, truth and justice, religion and piety may be established among us. Especially we pray for the Governor of our Islands, the Speaker of the Legislative Assembly, Official Members and Ministers of Executive Council and Members of the Legislative Assembly, that we may be enabled faithfully to perform the responsible duties of our high office. All this we ask for Thy great Name's sake.

Let us say the Lord's Prayer together: Our Father, who art in Heaven, Hallowed be Thy Name. Thy Kingdom come, Thy will be done on earth as it is in Heaven. Give us this day our daily bread, and forgive us our trespasses, as we forgive those who trespass against us. Lead us not into temptation, but deliver us from evil. For Thine is the Kingdom, the power and the glory, forever and ever. Amen.

The Lord bless us and keep us. The Lord make His face shine upon us and be gracious unto us. The Lord lift up the light of His countenance upon us and give us peace, now and always. Amen.

Proceedings resumed at 10.26 am

The Speaker: Please be seated. Proceedings are resumed.

READING BY THE HONOURABLE
SPEAKER OF MESSAGES
AND ANNOUNCEMENTS

Apologies

The Speaker: I have received apologies from the Honourable Minister responsible for Planning and the Honourable Minister responsible for Education who are both off island on official business.

QUESTIONS TO HONOURABLE
MINISTERS AND OFFICIAL MEMBERS

The Speaker: The Second Elected Member for George Town.

Question No. 10
(deferred)

No. 10: Mr. Alden M. McLaughlin asked the Honourable Minister responsible for the Ministry of Tourism, Environment, Development and Commerce, What is the current employment status of the Director of the Port Authority.

The Speaker: Honourable Leader.

Hon. W. McKeever Bush: Madam Speaker, question No. 10 has to be deferred until Monday. The staff is not yet ready with the answer. I should say they were ready and there arose a legal question and they did not get the advice until this morning. Under Standing Order 23(5) I move that this question be deferred until Monday morning. Further, Madam Speaker, I ask that questions 11 and 12 also be deferred as the Minister is off the Island.

(deferred)

No. 11: Mr. Alden M. McLaughlin, Jr. asked the Honourable Minister responsible for the Ministry of Education, Human Resources and Culture –a) What is the current number of students at the George Hicks High School; b) What is the average number of students per class at the George Hicks High School; c) How many students are expected to enter Year 7 of the George Hicks High School in September 2002; and d) Is there sufficient space and staff at the George Hicks High School to accommodate the student intake in September 2002 and, if not, what plans are there to cater to the increase in student numbers.

Question No. 12
(deferred)

No. 12: Mr. Alden M. McLaughlin, Jr. asked the Honourable Minister responsible for the Ministry of Education, Human Resources and Culture – a.If Government still intends to restructure the John Gray High School and the George Hicks High School as parallel high schools both catering to years 7 to 12 as previously announced by the Honourable Minister of Education in July 2001; and

If the answer to (a) above is yes, when will this transition begin and what plans are there to cope with the additional staff and accommodation requirements.

The Speaker: The question is that Questions 10, 11 and 12 be deferred and set down for a later date with Question 10 being set down for Monday.

All those in favour please say Aye. Those against, No.

The Speaker: The Ayes have it.

Agreed: Question No. 10 deferred until Monday 25 February, and Questions Nos. 11 and 12 deferred.

The Speaker: The Honourable Member for the district of East End.

Question No. 13

No. 13: Mr. V. Arden McLean asked the First Official Member responsible for the Portfolio of Internal and External Affairs, If there are any plans to replace Mrs. Jennifer Dilbert as Head of the London Office and, if not, would the Honourable Member give a specific date of her anticipated return.

The Speaker: The Honourable First Official Member responsible for Internal and External Affairs.

Hon. James M. Ryan: Madam Speaker, there are no plans to replace Mrs. Jennifer Dilbert as Head of the London Office. However, Mrs. Mary Chandler-Allen has been appointed to act in Mrs. Dilbert's position for the duration of Mrs. Dilbert's absence.

Mrs. Dilbert has been seconded to the Monetary Authority until 30 June 2002, after which she will be taking a short vacation before returning to the London Office. The anticipated date of her return is 8 July 2002.

The Speaker: Are there any supplementaries? If there are no supplementaries, we will move on to the next item.

STATEMENTS BY MEMBERS OF THE GOVERNMENT

The Speaker: I have received no notice for statements by any Member.

GOVERNMENT BUSINESS

Debate on the Throne Speech Delivered by His Excellency, Mr. Peter J. Smith, CBE, Governor of the Cayman Islands, on Friday 15 February 2002

(Continuation of debate thereon)

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for Community Services. Continuation of the debate on the Throne Speech.

Dr. the Hon. Frank S. McField: Madam Speaker, I believe that I have some twenty or twenty two minutes left.

The Speaker: Twenty two, that is correct.

Dr. the Hon. Frank S. McField: Twenty-two minutes left to conclude my contribution to the Throne Speech. Since I have made most of the remarks that I felt I needed to make at this particular time, I would like to say again that two hours is a short time for a lot of us who have a lot of wind but I can live within the new restraints. I am sure that the Opposition agrees that it was a meaningful change because at least during the period of two hours we will perhaps listen a little bit more to each other and we will not become overburdened by speaking for the full four hours that we had before. Madam Speaker, changes like that to be made, can create such an issue.

It is interesting that the press also finds the opportunity to make the United Democratic Party look bad: they sit there judging us and seem to lack the understanding of parliamentary procedures and precedents. It would be good if they would take a look at Erskine May's and then make some of the editorials that they do like to make about the United Democratic Party Government.

I do not have too much faith in those people anyway and they know that. As a result of that I have been doing my Public Eye programme to give myself the opportunity to explain to people my positions and my understanding of issues. For if those 'good' people are to interpret for our people, then we will always be immature and we will always have a limited Colonial mentality when it comes to our understanding of our own will for self-determination and our own ability to be fair to each other.

Madam Speaker, that particular point I feel is necessary for me to make because there comes a time when we realise that change is not good (abstractly). Change affects different groups of people differently. Some are hurt by it; some are displeased; some benefit from it and some are pleased. However, change to me is one of the things I have always been dedicated to.

I really do find that the papers in this country are biased. The persons who are writing are not objective, they are not above the same petty politics that everyone else seems to be condemned to, according to them. And they are not in a position to sit and judge because they have to first of all prove that they are objective and to me they have not been able to do that.

I considered issues that have to do with the need of the country to mend its social fabric and to be able to reintegrate many of its citizens that have been alienated, separated from being able to benefit from development and to participate in living a standard of life that is an improvement on that which they were living many years ago.

Many of us have had economic rewards as a result of development but the social consequences have had traumatic effects on many of our citizens and their young people and as a result of that, may Portfolio (Community Services) have begun to put programmes in place that are focused on those persons who have been most adversely affected by development.

Madam Speaker, I like to use the remaining of my talk to again deal with the Second Elected Member for George Town, feeling that somehow the country is upset, the country is angry. I said that because during Christmas I received a Christmas greeting card from someone in the community. It was obscene, obnoxious, and pornographic. It suggested insulting things about my family and it made me feel vile and sick seeing that there are people in this society who would be succumbing to that way of reacting to things that they were upset with, if that is what they are.

Some ten Members of this Parliament (Members of the United Democratic Party) received those letters. I do not believe anyone else did. They talk about rumours—and we have my good friend from George Town who is a lawyer and we always say that hearsay should not go to Court but he talked about ‘rumours have it, rumours have this and rumours have that’. What I am talking about is not rumours at this moment. Those cards were disgusting!

Not only that: I have also received two additional letters that attempt to degrade my wife and me. Two additional letters that have been circulated. I have had people go to the extent to try to convince people and to prove that I do not deserve to be in this position that I am in.

So, I understand that there are some persons out there who are angry about the situation, but I do not believe this is the way that people should be able to voice their anger. We have been democratically elected. We are the persons occupying the high offices in this country at the moment, regardless of who likes it and there should be some respect shown to our families and us. Whether or not they had to send these letters to Radio Cayman—because they do send these letters to Radio Cayman Talk Today trying to scandalise people and make insinuations about people.

Today is exactly ten years since I met my wife Christiané in Germany. In contradiction to what some of those scandalous letters say, those scandalous letters, Madam Speaker, that try to pull me down into the mud that these people have tried to keep me in all these years in this country. Regardless of what those scandalous letters say, I met my good wife ten years ago at a restaurant where she was introduced to me by a practising Attorney and notary public who studied with me at the University of Bremen in the city of Bremen, Germany.

So, I do not understand why this campaign is going to this extent to discredit Members of the United Democratic Party. Why is it not happening to the other Members? It is well orchestrated, but I know that God has blessed me. I know that my mother has prayed for me and many other people have prayed for me. I am happy that I am beginning to experience the fruits of those prayers. And the fact that my wife is at this moment pregnant is something that I am very, very happy about. So, the fact that there are people in this place that continue to try to envy me and try to destroy my good feelings about my accomplishments, I think it is disgraceful.

It was so in the beginning when I came back here in 1977 with a PhD and they said, ‘No, no, no you do not have a PhD, you do not have no sense, you are a fool, you are from the bush of George Town’. And we still seem to have that attitude. People do not understand and will not understand, certain types of things, so I think that it is important that when people are given accolades to others for their staunch stance and their correct posture, that they remember that there were persons like myself that have been fighting in this country for many years for what I consider to be important. I know that I heard on the other side; when I was in Opposition with the other side, there for the four years, people emphasising the fact that we needed to do things in this country in order to prevent divisions between people.

Those things are still necessary today at least they are more necessary today. They were even a year ago, or a year-and-a-half ago when we were in Opposition preaching the need to get these things going. This is exactly what I believe I have been saying, that I am involved and getting things going.

I met again this morning with the Director of Prisons and it is absolutely essential that we spend time gaining support to be able to do the necessary reforms within the Prison system. But again, we are talking about how this Government is not fair. How this Government is not democratic, how this Government tries to prevent the Opposition from being able to make their speeches, to object to having a dissenting view or paper presented.

If the position of the Opposition will continue to be that of trying to prove that the individuals on this side are not fair then the debate will always be from this side to prove that we are fair and their side to prove that we are not fair. Therefore, the particular nature of the debate will be what it was.

However, if the position of the Opposition becomes that of showing us the faultiness of our strategies and our policies, then the nature of the debates will be different and so it is necessary for the Opposition when it starts the debate, to start the debate on a level that will have to do with policy issues, rather than to have to do with the so-called conduct of individuals and groups.

I believe that it is important to give the Opposition a chance to express their opinions. And I am one who will not attempt to stymie the Opposition's attempt to express their opinions because I have been in Opposition. However, I also remember that for one year before the change on the 8 November 2001, I was considered to be the Member to be the Opposition over there. I remember the decorum of this House at the particular time and there might be those who say that it was more improved than it is now, but the Honourable Minister for Health was also a part of that Opposition and we were not the same kind of Opposition. There were lots of attempts to at least co-operate and collaborate with the Government Bench. The Minister for Education, who was a Member of the Government at that time and the Minister for Health, who was on the Back Bench at that time, the fact that they ran together on the same political platform, made it difficult for the Opposition to remove itself completely from the Government.

The fact that I have spent four years on the Back Bench as an Opposition Member with many Members, at least four Members of the Government, made it difficult for me to disassociate myself with the policies that they were representing. So, is there really from a policy perspective that much of a difference between the Members of this House? No, Madam Speaker.

It was difficult for us to have the kind of Opposition with the same kind of intensity and conflict. It was impossible for the Second Elected Member for George Town to be an Opposition because his friend was the Leader of Government Business. Although he might have wanted to be a Member of the Opposition he would never oppose, because opposing the Government would be opposing his friend. However, now there is nothing restraining that good gentleman (the Second Elected Member for George Town) from opposing, from opposing, from opposing and so he opposes, he opposes, he opposes.

Madam Speaker, Opposition has to make sense and it has to have a constructive role. It is not so that the Opposition as he said in the words of one Jamaican politician, "is removed from power." The Opposition is a very essential part, a complementary part of the power configuration in a country.

The Opposition prepares itself to scrutinise the policies of Government and eventually to become Government. We have seen that happen. When that happens, they will begin to act the same way that at least two Members on Opposition acted when they were Government between November of 2000 and November 2001—which meant that they stopped opposing and they started trying to get the then Opposition, which included me, to co-operate with them in as many ways as possible to see what they were doing as being positive.

I must say that the demeanour of the Leader of Government Business at that time, assisted in the reconciliation between the two sides and helped to keep it from going to the point where we were opposing and opposing and opposing. So, we must make sure that opposition is not because of personalities, but opposition is because we are critical of the policies of the Government. Not because we might not like somebody in the Government or not because somebody in the Government might have done something to our friend or us that we did not like. Let us be sure that this is the point.

In my few remaining minutes, I would just like to come back to the idea of the dock in East End since I am sure that the Member for East End will begin his debate as I finish mine. It will give him at least the possibility to be a little bit more feisty when he starts (not that he needs help) but I would like to give him some assistance to let him think perhaps that he is only paying me back.

The survey that was done in East End with regards to unemployment is a serious issue. The fact that so many people are unemployed in that district is a serious issue. Social Services, housing projects and all of those that we have will be more taxed if people are not able to get jobs. I want the Member, when he stands to speak to give us an indication of what the Government can do specifically, to help to improve development in East End in a way that is acceptable to him and his constituency because development, regardless of what form it takes, will be a necessary condition for solving the problem of unemployment.

I am also interested in the fact that the Member for East End believes that docks can exist in George Town and not make the environment look or become worse. If a dock were to be in East End, however, some people are of the opinion that it would destroy some of the natural beauty. A dock has to be some place. Development has to occur someplace. Work has to exist some place whether or not it exists here in George Town, for them to come here, or whether or not it exists in Frank Sound for them to go there, or whether or not it exists in East End for them to be able to go there.

I do believe that a dock is a very important commercial entity within that whole framework of trade, which has to do with transportation. And when a dock is some place other institutions will grow up around it. So it will not necessarily be that you have a dock. You will have storage facilities, warehousing, secretarial services, booking agents or Customs Brokers, and a whole heap of industries that will spring up around it creating jobs. Perhaps a surplus of jobs for the people.

Obviously, not everyone wants to work within the Tourism Industry. Looking at the percentage of people working in the Tourism Industry who are Caymanians, not just in East End but in other districts, we cannot say that continue to develop Tourism in those particular areas is going to solve the unemployment problem in those districts.

So, the Member cannot get up and tell me that he is what he is going to be suggesting that to me solely. There must be other types of development that Member is speaking of as well.

Let us not condemn an idea simply because the Government has brought it. Let the Opposition not find fault with it simply because the Government has brought it. Let the Opposition do their research too. Let them not just depend upon likes and dislikes of people but also take into consideration seriously what the people can benefit from. Let them come with scientific reasons why something should not happen. Let them come and say the economic disadvantages of these things happening. Let them come with solutions.

I was on the Opposition; I had solutions a lot of the issues that I spoke about. Those solutions I am implementing now when I am dealing with youth facilities, housing issues, elderly issues, seamen's ex-gratia payments, prison issues, substance abuse issues, and this is how the Opposition will spend its three years in a useful manner if they become competent in showing us exactly, as a Government, how we can improve on our policies.

The working of the democratic system in this Parliament is an important issue, I realise that. But I believe that those who criticise it, those who write editorials about it should gain a better position on exactly what the procedures are here.

I heard for instance, on the radio yesterday the kinds of criticisms about the Speaker as the person who is like the Judge in this Court. We could not go and talk about the Chief Justice and we could not go and talk about the other Judges in this country to this extent, they would not write editorials about Judges in this country the way they write it about Government people in this country. They know that they would have to pay certain kinds of respect.

There is freedom of speech, there is freedom of the press but the press must be respectable and responsible. The press cannot (because it sees itself as a colonial institution) talk down to the Heads of Government of this country. And if other persons have been occupying this position maybe they should be a little more careful. Maybe they do not find the need to be careful because of some of us. And I will tell you, Madam Speaker, I do not feel the need to be careful in terms of how I rebuke. Because I will go on my TV show and continue over a period of time to be able to get a message across as to why it is the way it is. As to why the position is the way it is. Not simply because we have breached any democratic principle, not simply because we are against the functioning of democracy.

I feel that I have said enough and I thank you and this Honourable House for listening to me.

The Speaker: Thank you, Honourable Minister. Does any other Member wish to speak? Does any other Member wish to speak? The Honourable Third Elected Member for the district of Bodden Town.

Mr. Anthony S. Eden: I thank you for this opportunity that I can rise to speak on the Throne Speech which was delivered last Friday by His Excellency. I will go through and make comments on the different sections and departments within the delivery and I will leave the introduction until the end.

The Judiciary

I am pleased to see the introduction of the drug courts. This is something that I know that the Honourable Chief Justice has been working on for sometime. It has been tried in other jurisdictions and it has been proven quite successful. As a matter of fact when I was in Florida over the weekend the Miami Herald indicated that the daughter of the Governor of that state would be going through one of these drug courts and if successful in her efforts for rehabilitation when everything is finished there will be nothing against her in the records.

I have worked in the past very closely with the Honourable Chief Justice and as I said earlier, I salute his effort in this attempt. As we all know, this area of concern in Cayman is quite great and continues to grow. I will speak about this later when I come to the Prisons which my good friend, who just spoke, commented on.

Portfolio of Finance and Economics

In the area of the Portfolio of Finance and Economics, I look forward to the implementation of the debt-restructuring package for Central Government. For far too long these Islands have had to borrow money on short term and the interest rates have caused significant financial difficulties to the operation of these Islands as a Government. I am pleased to see the continuation of the collaboration with the private sector and I trust that this will be successful because without the private sector on board times can become very difficult.

The Customs Department

Recently in passing through the Customs Department I did not observe the presence of the drug dogs or the sniffer dogs, as they are called at times. On two different occasions within a month or so I did not see their presence. I do not know if this is because of the destination of the aircraft or whatever reason but I would certainly encourage the presence of these animals wherever.

The other observation I would like to make is in regards to Customs Department at the Airport where we go to pay duty on goods brought in. There is a line there when you have completed your tariff forms and then you leave that line and go and stand in another line to pay cash. I would encourage the Honourable Third Official Member to look at this and try and get this area streamlined. Everyone seems to be quite busy when you go there and I honestly feel this can be expedited.

Marketing and Promotions

I see that this unit will organise the Caribbean Development Banks 32nd Annual Meeting of the Board of Governors. I would ask a question on this in regards to obtaining funds from the Caribbean Development Bank. Will we be getting any new or preferential rates from this bank? As I recall, when I was in Government, it was indicated that it could be somewhat cheaper to go through the local banks to borrow. Has that philosophy changed?

Education

When the Honourable Minister responds to the Throne Speech I would enquire, what is the present status of the strategic plan for education?

I know in some of the schools it was still being developed I would like to know where it is at and what is going on if it is still being used? One of the areas that has been developed by this Honourable Minister is the Cadet Corps. I well understand the importance of this and what an asset this can be to our young people.

After spending three years in the United States Army I know without a doubt that at that formative stage it can be of great benefit to the children of these Islands. I also, continue to give my strong support to the Community College of the Cayman Islands and I am glad to see the attempts being made to make it into a four-year college. I would certainly encourage this where ever, as I honestly feel that if we can keep our children here to a certain age and at a stage of more maturity that it will be more beneficial to us. Not only that but the money that we give to the Community College would be staying and circulating in these Islands.

I note that three schools are scheduled for full inspection in the coming year and I would query, in regards to the post inspection report for the Savannah Primary School, what follow up has been carried out? There were several concerns by the schools inspectorate in a report in May, last year. I know a number of the parents in the PTA have shown that concern and I feel that eventually it will be addressed and I would just like to know what stage it is at

Ministry of Community Services, Women's Affairs, Youth and Sports

I am pleased to see that the Honourable Minister has given consideration to the closing of CIMI and has had the opportunity to see first hand some of the other services they use in their programmes. I had the opportunity back in 1993, with the present Minister of Tourism, who at that time was responsible for Social Services, to travel to Tampa, Florida. I was quite impressed by the alternative services that they used for rehabilitation and I always wondered why Cayman with its Maritime History and its background, did not utilise some of these services here. But I am very pleased to hear that the Honourable Minister will be travelling and looking at these in more detail and I can promise my support in these areas.

Substance Abuse

The area of substance abuse that is happening in Cayman is of grave concern to us. I noted in the paper the possibility of extending the hours for the sale of alcohol at night clubs. It is my humble opinion that most visitors would not be looking forward to staying out until 3 in the morning but whatever the majority say on this we have to abide by. One of oddities I noted was the noise going on around some of the premises that sold liquor. What do we expect when people are drunk or drinking? They are going to be noisy.

I look forward to the efforts that will be put in place to curbing this noise and I think we could have a good recipe for anyone in the world who can find a solution to this problem.

Yesterday, the Honourable Minister spoke about a new cellblock with an appropriate regime to deter those who import drugs in the Cayman Islands. This I welcome wholeheartedly. In the past it seems that we have been too soft on drugs, especially the pushers. I have no pity on them they should be given the maximum.

I wonder also about the murderers and other serious felons. It has always been my opinion in the past that there is not enough deterrent at Northward Prison and I welcome this new and bold move and I feel that this Legislative Assembly will support it. I know we will be hearing cries of human rights violations but it is time we take a stand in this area because there is not another area that can be more detrimental to the future of these Islands than the abuse of drugs including alcohol.

Once again I was pleased to see the servicemen and seamen's benefit clarification yesterday released by the Honourable Minister. A number of seamen have been asking about this and I think now that something definitive has been said and done, they will know where they stand. Have past recipients who are not entitled to it been notified that the benefit will be terminated? And how can others best receive this? I know, as has been indicated many of our Caymanians who went to sea and made significant contributions to the development of these Islands have looked forward to that.

Ministry of Planning, Communications, Works and Information Technology

I am most pleased to see, after many years of requesting that we will be considered for a new cemetery in Bodden Town. We have been waiting for this for quite sometime the existing one at Pease Bay is just about full and I was becoming quite concerned about its relocation or find another one in its place.

Also in regards to Postal Services, I see that plans will be looked at for the Savannah Post Office as we all know in this Honourable House that this area of the Island is one of the fastest developing and there is a great need. I am pleased to say that when I was in Government back from 1992 on, we had the ability to purchase the land around the Savannah Primary School for which this and other community facilities can be developed.

Ministry of Health Services, District Administration and Agriculture

I must say with all honesty that the new Minister has made significant strides in his first 100 days. I am pleased to see that a number of laws which have been in the process of preparation for some time, will in due course be brought to this Honourable House.

In regards to the raising of the fees, earlier this year many people were concerned. But I know from the time I was there that Central Government was subsidising health fees, probably to a tune of over 60 percent. This could not continue.

I also note that the Health Services Authority Law will be coming to this House later on this year. I am pleased to say that this was part of our health strategic plan which was drawn up a few years back. Certain comments were made about the Health Services Authority and why it was stopped the last time. A number of us were part of the government that did that Madam Speaker. If you remember, along with the Health Services Authority at that time, one of the greatest demonstrations ever witnessed in this Island was Motion 3/90 and the Hospital in the swamp. We had a mandate from the people and records will show that the present operation of that Health Services Authority at that time and seven consultants that were utilised, five of them were practically useless. But I feel sure a Health Authority can only be as good as the leadership and management that runs it and I have every confidence that the new Minister will bring that leadership in the Health Services.

Cayman Airways

I move on now to Cayman Airways and I would just like to know what is happening there, what is the status? This comes in under the Ministry of Tourism, on page 27. I have heard different talks and I know it was indicated that a study is being done, but we need to be updated as was the policy in the past. But sometimes we as the Back Benchers on this side need to be informed.

As I wind down my brief contribution to this debate on the Throne Speech I will now comment on Party Politics. Madam Speaker, what I have seen transpired in recent times in this House does not make me feel comfortable as was suggested in today's editorial of the Caymanian Compass which reads, "In the confrontational atmosphere which currently prevails in the House", and in the final paragraph it says, "It is of the essence of democracy that while decisions are made by the majority there should be ample opportunity for all opinions to be aired".

I encourage that this be looked at. It is inevitable for the development of these Islands as we go forward that party politics come on line. But I will say that it will not be the great solution to some of the problems that we go through. It is my humble opinion that the people of these Islands—and I will use the phrase from a former distinguished Member of this community, 'Some of them will be in for a shock of surprisiation when we go full party system.'

My feeling is that some of the problems we share here can only be solved with us working amongst ourselves. All of us working and putting our heads together. And in my brief observation of what I have seen here of party politics and inevitably if I continue to consider being a Parliamentarian I will be caught up into this. That is part of change and I will deal with that as I see fit.

The bitterness and anger exhibited should not be a part of our Parliament. I remember hearing the Honourable Minister for Education say, 'This is a fraternity' and we need to be able to live in a dignified manner amongst ourselves.

I still feel that Members of the public should have input as we go forward with changes as indicated by His Excellency in his Throne Speech. Looking back at the history of these Islands, we have come to be literally the envy of the world with the highest standard of living anywhere. Yes, we have had a number of people who had unique ways of getting the job done. Madam Speaker, I trust that this can be incorporated in the Party system and that the people will be able to make the contribution and the representation to their representatives and that they will be listened to above all else.

I am sad to say that not since 1992, when I became involved in politics, that I have had the significant representation from people throughout the Islands, especially when I go into the supermarkets and different places. The concerns that they are now expressing of their future, of their difficulty to make ends meet, I would encourage the UDP to listen to these people, I am sure they are also talking to them.

The concern is out there. Madam Speaker, the way forward—and this is not a scare tactic as you well know working with me in EXCO for a number of years and in this Legislative Assembly. I am only saying what has been expressed to me. We need to listen to what the people are saying.

Comments have been made in regards to the East End dock I am not putting it down. For these Islands to develop—and I have always said that Cayman is based on a construction economy and when that slows down everything slows down and our people hurt. But I do question the distance and I would suggest to the Honourable Minister for Community Development, in between 7 am and 8.30 am in the morning coming from North Side, East End, Bodden Town into George Town and then from 4.30 to 7.30 pm in the night, it is an absolute nightmare travelling on that road! I feel the people from East End and North Side will possibly now have to get up at 5 am to be on the road if when we see these big containers or whatever method of transportation, unless we might even get a train track. That is the only way that I see that we can keep sanity or as been advocated by myself for many years, moving some of the Government Services to the Eastern part of the island so that our workers do not have that long haul to make.

I remember on the West Bay road, how horrible that use to be but the thing is that is only one third of the distance as compared to coming from the Eastern districts. So I would ask that due consideration be given that the feeling of all the people be looked at in this. Yes, progress must come but at what price?

As I continue to wind down I, too, like the Minister of Tourism, am scared to death, but my scare is in regards to the financial industry slow down which could come. What if a number of these banks, when their financial year comes to an end next year decide to relocate?

This is not a rumour: I have had a number of people say this to me. What are our contingent plans to deal with this? It may have been easy in the past to get these institutions to come here but it will not be that easy to get them back. Cayman cannot live off of Tourism alone.

I would say again, make haste, slowly. We are at a crucial time in the development of these Islands and we must have as wide an input into its development of these Islands for the good of all of us.

I now go back to the introduction of His Excellency's final Throne Speech, and he says in the third paragraph, "We know that those who ignore history are condemned to repeat it". I do not know if this is a prophecy of the part of Revelation but I would just say to all of our leaders and us as Legislators, to remember the Bahamas approximately thirty years ago when certain drastic action was taken and the Cayman Islands benefited to the stage where we are today, as the fifth largest financial centre in the world.

He goes on to say in the next paragraph, "The governance of these Islands could have a different complexion by next year". Once again I say, make haste slowly.

Finally in my opinion, the monkey courts of history will try the leadership style of our present Governor and when the final chapter is written it will be found wanting and quite possibly the bananas will be finished. Thank you.

The Speaker: I propose to take the morning break for 15 minutes at this time.

Proceedings suspended at 11.30 am

Proceedings resumed at 11.53 am

The Speaker: Please be seated. Proceedings are resumed. Does any other Member wish to speak? Does any other Member wish to speak? Last call. Does any other Member wishes to speak? If no other Member wishes to speak, I shall call on the Leader of Government Business to wind up.

The Member for East End, is it your intention to speak?

Mr. V. Arden McLean: It is yes, Madam Speaker.

The Speaker: Please continue.

Mr. V. Arden McLean: Madam Speaker, thank you.

First of all I did not know there was a wind up period in the Throne Speech but I guess I am learning as we go along. I did not know that the Leader of Government Business would be representing the Governor in replying to the debate who made the speech on behalf of the country.

As I rise to debate the Throne speech of 2002, which was delivered by His Excellency The Governor on Friday, 15 February 2002, I am like the Third Elected Member from Bodden Town, a little amazed at some of the debate that has taken place and in particular that, that was done by the Minister responsible for Community Services and as I go on, I think there are a few areas that he addressed that I would like to reply to.

One of the things the Minister for Community Services spoke about was mine and his relationship as family and how I try to friend him up when I want something for East End. Well I have never once asked any Member of the Government in the—last year and some months, for anything for Arden McLean, I have always asked on behalf of the people of East End which is my responsibility.

When any Minister replies with whatever I ask of them, it is not for me and it is their responsibility to ensure that all peoples in this country are fairly dealt with.

I was taken aback to learn that the Minister has yet, it appears, to understand his responsibility of providing policies for this country. It is not for me. And when he talks about how I 'friend him up' I would remind my cousin that in our family charity begins at home. That was the training ground for all of us. We were taught to respect each other and to treat each other with friendliness in order that when we go out into the world we could carry that respect for individuals with us. Maybe he has been out of the flock a little too long and he had a memory lapse but that is the reason why I treat him with that friendliness. But he remembered, yesterday evening upon the adjournment he was very friendly to me in the parking lot also. So he remembers, he knows, but when the microphones are on we say anything. And I will remind him that he and I came from the same family and he knows that family was not a privileged family. By the sweat of the brow that family succeeded and in so doing, he and I have had to do the same.

I am concerned about the scandalous letters that he has received because I think that is ridiculous. It appeared that by inference he might have been indicating that Members of the Opposition may have had something to do with it. Well, that is not what I was taught. I, too, have received scandalous letters in my life but I did not go out and try to find out who it was or point fingers at anyone. I do not think it is fair for the UDP or anyone else to cast aspersions on any one family, because I do not want it and I am sorry to hear that that is what is happening. Also, I would caution anyone who is doing it that it is a serious matter.

Now that, that is clear, let me now move on to the Throne Speech. This is my second Throne Speech debate and it has given me much to think about. First of all, it is the last one for our current Governor. Since I have been elected I cannot say that I have had any relationship with the Governor because I am still to be officially introduced. But be that as it may, I have had audience with him. I cannot say that I have agreed with some of the things that he has ruled, the way he has governed in this country, but we all have our opinions on governance.

I specifically talk about such areas as the signing of the agreement with the U.S. on the tax agreement. While the political arm was involved in that, it was the Governor himself who signed it and Members of the Opposition who were not informed of it. Personally, I had to take it down off the Internet.

I believe that not only should we ask for the respect from the political side of the Executive, it is required from the Governor's Office also. When I came in to this Honourable House the buzzwords were, transparency and openness. Personally, it is my opinion that we have not been seeing a lot of that recently and in particular with that agreement with America, there was none.

The Governor in his throne speech also spoke of the Civil Service Review by the Civil Service College. Again we are, (the Opposition that is), awaiting the Governor's request/invitation to meet with us as to the status thereon.

I know as a fact that the UDP Government and its Members has been apprised but the Opposition is yet to be apprised on the status and what recommendations are coming from that review. The Members of the Opposition also represent some of the Civil Servants. I know recently having -

Point of Order

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: On a point of order Madam Speaker.

The Speaker: Please state your point of order.

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: Madam Speaker, I think it is a matter of misinformation—misleading the House.

The Speaker: Would you care to say on what point please?

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: Well, Madam Speaker, the Member speaking said that he knows that the UDP Members government have been informed. That information is not correct. What the situation is if the Member will allow, the Civil Service College Report, or the report being prepared by them, we have not yet seen, that I know about. It is being conducted and the status of any review we have not seen. Not that I know about.

The Speaker: The Honourable Member for East End would you just care, out of the abundance of caution, to repeat what you said please. Because at the time I was trying to get the attention of the Honourable Second Official Member and the Serjeant was not here to so do.

Mr. V. Arden McLean: Thank you, Madam Speaker. What I said, in essence, is that the Opposition has not been apprised of the status of the review of the Civil Service to date. But I am 100 per cent sure that the Government, the Members of the UDP have been.

Point of Order

Mr. Rolston M. Anglin: Madam Speaker, on a point of order.

The Speaker: One moment, Honourable Member, let me just revert to the Leader of Government Business. Is it your point of order, that what he has just said is misleading based on the fact that the Government has not been apprised?

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: Madam Speaker, I have not been given any report. I do not think that report is completed. We know as much as they know that it is being conducted and that is public knowledge but we have not been given any report. Nothing can be apprised on it, there is no follow up to it that I recall; unless the Member knows something that I do not know.

The Speaker: Honourable Member for my own edification would you please expound as to what the Government has been apprised of.

Mr. V. Arden McLean: Thank you, Madam Speaker. Some two weeks ago, I believe it was the 23 January, I came to this Honourable House to sign my questions and I was informed by the staff that there was a meeting of all Members to be held in the Committee Room with Mr. Cooper from the Civil Service College. Upon calling my other colleagues I was told that they were unaware of it also. I decided to stay to go to that meeting.

The Governor arrived at 11.30 with Mr. Cooper. I was invited into that Committee Room by your good self. When the Governor started his introduction, he said he had taken the opportunity to apprise the Government on the status of the Review of the Civil Service but he was not going to take anything away from Mr. Cooper's presentation, therefore he was turning it over to him.

I respectfully interrupted the Governor and asked if the intent was for all Members to be in that meeting. The reply was that it was the Government to be apprised. I respectfully withdrew and apologised to the Governor and all Members of the UDP who were present, that is, the Government Members and the Back Bench Members of the UDP and I explained to the Governor that I was told by the staff, I think mistakenly, because they understood Members. That is the reason I was in that meeting.

Now if that does not tell me that the UDP have been apprised of the Civil Service Review, then I do not know what that is telling me, Madam Speaker.

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: No, Madam Speaker.

The Speaker: Honourable Leader.

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: I take objection to that. That is why I wanted to hear and if I do not have the space or the time to do it here, I will certainly do it by way of a formal statement or in my speech but I can tell you Madam Speaker . . .

The Speaker: Will you give way Honourable Member?

Mr. V. Arden McLean: Madam Speaker, I do not understand. Give way to what?

The Speaker: He is not now on a point of order; he is standing to explain the position. Will you give way on a point of elucidation?

Please proceed, Leader.

Point of Elucidation

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: Madam Speaker, I do not know all about what the Member said, I know that a meeting was here yes, with the man [Mr. Cooper] on the process that it had started, but there is no report and there was no information given to us. It was to tell us the procedure on the way forward. But certainly there was no report, no information that could be given and that is basically what I need to say. That is the fact. The man [Mr. Cooper] came to tell us the process and earlier I must admit that the Member said that we were given some information on the Report that is what I take objection to.

The Speaker: I think the matter has been cleared as far as I am concerned in that the process was shared with the Members of the Government and Back Bench Members and I was also invited in as the Speaker. I can certainly clarify and confirm that during the time that I was there, there was not any conveyance of information as to what might have been in the Report but that a Report would be forthcoming. So, as far as the Chair is concerned the Members that were present at that particular meeting have no information as to the outcome or the possible contents of the Report.

Mr. V. Arden McLean: Thank you Madam Speaker, for that clarification and I respect the Leader of Government Business saying that he takes offence if I had said a report. I really did not say a report, I said whether they were apprised on the Review and that tells me that there has been.

My question is, why were we not (the Opposition) afforded the same privilege as the UDP? We represent this country. We represent our constituents and that is the very least that the Governor could have afforded Members of this Honourable House and in particular the Opposition. Madam Speaker, governance must be transparent.

Point of Order

Hon. David F. Ballantyne: Madam Speaker, I apologise for intervening on a point of order.

The Speaker: Please state your point of order Honourable Second Official Member.

Hon. David F. Ballantyne: May I refer to Standing Order 35(7) Madam Speaker, in relation to the conduct of the Governor. Where Standing Order 35(7) in my opinion indicated that, "The conduct of the... Governor.... may not be raised or impugned, except upon a substantive motion; and in any amendment, question to a Member of the Government or debate on a motion dealing with any other subject any reference to the conduct of any such person is out of order". I apologise to the Honourable Member for the intervention but the matter was drawn to my attention. Thank you.

The Speaker: Thank you Honourable Second Official Member.

Honourable Elected Member from the district of East End, I take the very valid and timely point by the Honourable Second Official Member and would ask you to take full cognisance that “The conduct of the Governor, the Royal Family, Her Majesty the presiding Officer, Members, Judges and other Persons engaged in the administration of Justice or Offices of the Crown may not be raised or impugned, except upon a substantive motion; and in any amendment, question to a Member of the Government or debate on a motion dealing with any other subject any reference to the conduct of any such person is out of order. And I so rule. Please continue.

Mr. V. Arden McLean: Thank you, Madam Speaker. I am very aware and I have tried to avoid that but as we move on, I think I can at least ask and find out when the Opposition will be apprised?

Whatever can be said about the former Leader of Government Business one thing will not be said and that is that he did not try to ensure that all Members of this House were properly apprised on all National Issues. [inaudible talking in background]

There were many meetings held between November 2000 and November 2001. I recall Cayman Airways, I recall OECD and FATF, and at that time I did not hear of any question of confidentiality. I believe it is given that all Honourable Members in this Chamber respect and understand the responsibility that has been laid on their shoulders by the people of this country.

As I move on I welcome the new Governor, Mr. Dinwiddy who is expected to take up office later on this year. I hasten to say to him that the people of this country, including myself, respect the position of Governor and regardless of what he has heard or will hear, he must form his own opinions of us after arriving here and living amongst us. That is, as a result of whatever he hears, try not to reach us with a preconceived opinion. We know, not only with Governors but also with anyone else coming to our shores, that is one of the possibilities when they are coached. I just say to the new Governor that we are good people who respect the Throne.

The Governor spoke on constitutional review. I would like, publicly, to congratulate the Commissioners. I look forward to their Report. I think most of the country is looking forward to a modernised Constitution.

The Governor said that the governance of these Islands could have a different complexion by next year and what a year for change 2003 will be. I agree with him, I support modernisation of the Constitution and it appears like there will be much. There has been much said about modernisation of the Constitution, in the sense of removing the Official Members, thereby allowing the House to be made up of all Elected Members that is a suggestion and a position that I support. I believe it is needed; therefore the country will not have a problem with me supporting that.

That is not to take anything away from the Official Members that are currently sitting in this Honourable House. But I believe that any Member who sits in here should be accountable at the polls and they should be removable. I do not wish to take anything away from those Official Members, I have the utmost respect for them, but certainly they are not accountable to the people of this country and that is the system as it is.

Now if we are talking about modernisation, we need to change it. We need to start moving forward. I know when I discussed this issue with the head of the Foreign and Commonwealth Office I could see him renegeing when we talked about the Attorney General our Second Official Member as it is, being removed from the Chambers . . .

The Speaker: Honourable Member could you please clarify that to say by virtue of the Constitution, because I would not want the impression to be given that we are seeking to remove the Attorney General from the Chambers.

Mr. V. Arden McLean: Thank you, Madam Speaker. That is exactly what I meant — that through the Constitutional Review the introduction of removing all Official Members, which I said earlier. I do not believe that Her Majesty's Government will be too receptive to that, but certainly Her Majesty's Government will want to ensure that there is some representative of hers in the Chambers. I guess we will cross that bridge when we reach it.

I know the Second Elected Member for George Town spoke on the rumours concerning the extension tenure by one year.

I would like to go on record as stating that I support five-year terms. I support five-year terms but, Madam Speaker, certainly not in the middle of a term we extend that term. It should be clearly known to the populous exactly how much time they are electing their representatives for at the polls. Yes, I am aware of it having been done one time. I know that will be the primary reason put forward if it is proposed. I will go on record also to let everyone know that I will oppose that. I am but one person in here and but one vote, but I will oppose that. I do not believe it is fair to the people of East End or this country [inaudible talking in background] for us to tell them that . . . Madam Speaker, I sat here and I listened to other debates and I did not interrupt anyone, but it appears that the Leader of Government Business is making sure that I am distracted.

The Speaker: Do you wish to call a point of order under 39?

Mr. V. Arden McLean: Yes, Madam Speaker.

Point of Order

The Speaker: I would ask that all Members remain silent while Members are speaking and not interrupt unless they interrupt in the accordance with Standing Orders.

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: Madam Speaker –

The Speaker: Yes Honourable Leader.

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: I was only informing the Member for East End, my good friend, that he will not have to worry about any five-year term, because we certainly will look into getting rid of him before 2004.

The Speaker: Members let us keep the debate to a high standard. Elected Member for East End please continue in your debate.

Mr. V. Arden McLean: Madam Speaker, you know I think it is somewhat unfortunate that here we have the “Majority might” again: getting up without the authority—or permission to get up and talk about getting rid of me. It is the people of East End who will get rid of me and that is their choice; it is not the Leader of Government Business.

[Inaudible cross talk and comments]

The Speaker: Order Members!

Mr. V. Arden McLean: Madam Speaker, it is not Members. It is the Leader of Government Business who needs to be placed in order.

The Speaker: Honourable Member for East End, please take your seat. I have asked all Members for order. Order is not only asked for the physical expressions, but I sat here this morning and saw various Members entering and leaving this Chamber without the decorum as is asked for in Standing Orders 39. I sat here and I saw Members having discussions in the quorum as nothing. I sat here and saw Members not acknowledging the chairs with the manner in which they sit in this Chamber. I sat here this morning and saw Members talking to each other, rising up without acknowledging the Chair, sitting on the Backbench and I have tolerated that in the interest of expedite of times. I have ruled and asked all Members and I have asked it against that background. I will once again say all Members exclusive of none. Please proceed.

Mr. V. Arden McLean: Madam Speaker, one day, one day.

The Speaker: Is that a threat Honourable Member?

Mr. V. Arden McLean: No, Madam Speaker, I am going into my debate.

The Speaker: Please continue.

Mr. V. Arden McLean: Madam Speaker, one day we will all go to the polls and the choice will be up to the people of this country. It is not up to me.

I would like to touch on a few things in the Throne Speech. First of all under the Portfolio of Finance and Economics it is interesting to see that this year we will see the full independence of the Shipping Registry and the Monetary Authority. I think the independence of the Monetary Authority was a condition of the agreements we made with the OECD and the FATF and I think we have all been looking forward to it. One of the things I would like to address under that Portfolio is that of insurance.

I know the increase in insurance recently and the 9/11 disaster (or so it is claimed) is causing insurance premiums to increase drastically. For instance, it is my understanding that the basic insurance now available is somewhere in the region of $81.70 and there is the intent to increase it to $155.24 by March, that is for one person, that is single. For two people it is currently $155.22 and it is going to be increased to $294 or thereabout. Then for a family it is $205 to be increased up to some $390. We know who and the areas in this country where the basic insurance coverage is bought for, or is more utilised, and that is in the lower paying jobs of the country and in particular the tourism industry.

We all know that those wages in the tourism industry are somewhat low. It is going to be extremely difficult for these people to survive. Now I just wonder what the Government is doing to try to discuss with the insurance companies what can be done to avoid such premium increase on the basic insurance coverage. It is going to be difficult for a lot of these people who make $4 to $5 an hour. Madam Speaker, the insurance companies are complaining of the increases in taxes and licensing, work permits, but for the basic to jump some 95 per cent is really ridiculous.

While I do not profess to be any insurance expert, certainly Government has to look into this and maybe they are looking into it but something needs to be done to ensure that our people do not suffer from this increase in premium. This also hurts the employers and if it is hurting the employers then the whole country hurts. I challenge the Government to start looking into it.

The Minister for Community Services said that we should talk and give Government alternatives on how to raise revenue. I suggested during the Budget debate on some of the areas that the country could raise revenue. One of the suggestions that Government made was that they are stopping the charitable organisations from getting exemptions on duties. Well I wonder what has happened with my suggestion on those concessions that were given under the Pioneer laws many years ago? Has Government looked into those to see which one can now be rescinded? These are ways that revenue can be derived and under the Portfolio of Finance and Economics I once again throw that out for the Government to seriously look into.

Ministry of Education, Human Resource and Culture

On the Ministry of Education, Human Resource and Culture, I hear the Minister again, of Community Services talk about how the employment services had done a survey in East End recently and there were some 31 people unemployed. I know that there is a lot of unemployment not only in East End but in this country. The Minister challenged me to come up with ways and means of getting the people of East End employed. I would like to say to that Minister and this Honourable House that those people were employed. Because of the recession the majority of them were put out of a job. I have done my part; I have tried to get these people placed in jobs but the Government's responsibility is to also make provisions for jobs in this country for the Caymanian people.

With no disrespect to any person living or working in this country, I would like to know what Government is doing. I am not talking about the dock in East End either because we are going to deal with that a little later.

We saw in the Budget Address and the Budget for this year (2002) that the Government has proposed increase in work permit fees again. The reason for increase in work permit fees is for revenue of course. We continue to issue work permits while our people are out of jobs so the Minister for Community Services cannot get up here and say that I must try and find ways of development to get these people in jobs when the same Government is getting revenue from issuing work permits which may very well be keeping our people out of work.

Point of Order

Dr. the Hon. Frank S. McField: Madam Speaker, on a point of order.

The Speaker: Honourable Minister, what is your point of order?

Dr. the Hon. Frank S. McField: Madam Speaker, the Member is misleading the House. The Minister for Community Services did not say that that Member should find ways to get these people work; the Member said Madam Speaker (and we can refer to the Hansard) that that Member should, when he gets up, suggest ways that the Government may use as an alternative to the proposed port facilities in order to create employment for the people. The Community Services Minister was asking that the Member assist us with some alternative—not that he should create the alternative employment for these people.

The Speaker: Madam Clerk, may I request the unedited version of the Hansard? And at this time the luncheon break will be taken until 2.30 pm.

Proceedings suspended at 12.50 pm

Proceedings resumed at 3.00 pm

READING BY THE HONOURABLE SPEAKER OF MESSAGES AND ANNOUNCEMENTS

Apologies/Condolences

The Speaker: Please be seated.

I would wish to record apologies from the Honourable Leader of Government Business as well as the Honourable Third Official Member who are both attending funerals and to record the condolences of this House to the Honourable Third Official Member who has lost his step-mother.

The Honourable Elected Member from the district of East End.

Mr. V. Arden McLean: Thank you, Madam Speaker. When we took the luncheon break, we were on a point of order brought by the Minister for Community Services on whether or not I had misquoted him. Having discussed this issue with yourself and the Minister we have agreed that I did not, but in the interest of harmony, I understand that I did not say that he was telling me to go out and get jobs for people, that was not my understanding of it; my understanding is that he wants to know (as a representative) what am I going to propose as development and the likes for people to get jobs in the country—and that I should propose alternatives.

Now, my alternative was the work permit issue. I am saying, why are we continuously issuing more and more work permits and more and more of our people are disenfranchised by not having a job? The Government needs to seriously look at stopping or reducing the amounts of work permits that are issued in the particular areas that we have sufficient work force in our country, in those areas where Caymanians can have jobs. Yes, Madam Speaker, the Department of Employment Services went to East End last Tuesday and registered some 31 people who were looking for jobs. That is a high percentage of the work force in East End, it really is.

While I applaud the Minister for such an initiative, one of the things that I took exception to was the fact that as a representative I was not informed. Having been off the Island from the previous Friday for medical reasons, I did not hear the announcements on the radio or through the media for that matter. I arrived here late Monday evening and then to hear that there was going to be a meeting on Tuesday evening, I was unable to make it there. I understand that the Minister was there and I applaud him for such an initiative as I said, but I would say that in the future maybe the Members of the Legislative Assembly for the respective districts could be informed in order that they may assist in the initiative and get it going a little smoother.

I think in the interest of getting on track and ensuring that we get the best possible timing and the maximum amount of people out—I know I could assist in the district of East End. Therefore, I am asking the Minister if it is a possibility for me to be involved.

I notice that we are looking at the viability of maintaining three primary schools on Cayman Brac and I trust that it will not put any student at a disadvantage if we reduce the number of schools. In the interest of efficiency, if it can work, certainly it will reduce some of the recurrent expenditure of the country.

On the issue of the school in East End, I am pleased to publicly thank the teachers of the school in East End. They are very dedicated teachers. I have seen (and also the people of East End) a tremendous improvement in that school particularly over the last year and a half. Not to take anything away from the teachers that were there before, but we have one of your own in our district who has now sort of become the 'pied piper' in East End and I applaud Mr. Tibbetts and the other members of staff also.

There is much to be done at the school. The Minister is very aware of it such as the canteen, more suitable staff quarters, there is a need for a playing field for the school. I have done as much as I can from a personal level and from donations from the general public, but there is need for more comfortable surrounding which will certainly be of benefit to the young children in East End. So much so that the East End school now has a computer lab with donations from Ernst and Young and I would like to publicly thank them on behalf of the people of East End.

Another partner in Ernst and Young who is an East Ender; Mr. Carlisle McLaughlin, has recently agreed to donate the remainder of the computers to make it a full Lab where all students in the classes will have access to a computer during the day. I would like to publicly thank these gentlemen and I must add that two of those gentlemen are also from your district: they are the two Scotts from Ernst and Young who are very good friends of mine.

I think they also donated to one of the Cayman Brac schools recently. This kind of partnership is needed between Government and the private sector and these young men (because they are all much younger than I am) should be applauded. They should be held high for making such contributions to their country. These are the Caymanians that I see out there deserving honours that are given once a year. Caymanians should not have to be in their old age to receive these honours. When these young successful Caymanians recognise the needs within the communities and step forward, we must give them every recognition possible.

I understand that the school in East End is quite some distance away. Certainly that does not take anything away from it but there are other areas needing to be addressed. Through the donation from other members of the private sector, recently I completed a long jump pit for the school. These are ways that I have tried to alleviate some of the recurrent expenditure that Government must face—capital expenditure.

So, when I get up here and ask the Minister for Community Services for something in East End, I have already done my part and continue to do. I do not believe we should hold our hands out to Government all the time. I believe that Legislators have a responsibility to go out there and look for alternative methods of getting these things for our districts and there are many companies in the private sector who will gladly give and I am tapping into every one.

Madam Speaker, when the Minister for Community Services talks about the park in East End, that the Dart Foundation is going to build, in my campaign I proposed a park in that same location. I did not know that the Dart Foundation was going to offer to build parks in the districts at that time, but I tell you, I am not going to turn them down because I believe that is what corporations in this country should do. They must contribute back to society. They live here, they conduct business here and the more they contribute to the society the better the society will be to live in and to conduct business in and I am not prepared to turn it down.

Now, many people within the district will contribute to that park. We have met many times, even met on the site. The same way the members of Scholars co-ordinated the one in West Bay, I am with the Dart Foundation trying to co-ordinate the one in East End. And there are certain things that if the people in the district contribute the better the park will be because we can spend money on something else to make it a better park. And we are going to do that: for instance, I have already gotten the rocks to build the landscaping beds. The money that would be used to buy those can be spent on something else.

So, I am doing work to try to prevent Government from having to be burdened with all of the expenditure. And the school will also be involved in it like it was done in West Bay (Scholars Park). As a matter of fact, Mr. Tibbetts and the whole school are excited about getting there to do work on weekends and the Community Development Action Committee (CO-DAC).

In the Throne Speech under the Community Services I noted that the Governor said that, "Community Development continues to forge ahead promoting self-help and self-skills development and staff are focusing on a system with the establishment of a learning centre in East End within the first quarter of 2002".

I understand the word 'assisting' to mean being a part of it. I do not know how that got in there I know that the Community Development officer is part of CODAC but it is the Community Development Committee that is doing that learning centre. The Government leased them the old Post Office. I just want to set the record straight because the public may believe that Government is doing it.

The Acting Deputy Clerk of this Honourable House is one of the members; as a matter of fact I believe she is the Treasurer of that Committee. Those people are working diligently to do it on their own they are all volunteering. I am assisting them, they are going out doing fund raising, and they are begging. I am going out there doing the same—begging here, there and everywhere. That way they want to feel that they are the ones who did it. They do not want Government to be involved, they want to be able to feel independent of Government and they did it for themselves, for their own district and I applaud them. Yes, it will be finished in the first quarter of this year but it will be run by those members of that committee and it will be for the benefit of our own people in the district of East End.

Maybe more like that should happen in this country. These people are very dedicated, so when it is said in the Throne Speech that the staff is assisting with it. I just want to get it clear that Government is not putting any funds in it; the real heroes of this cause are the members of the district development committee.

So no one in Government should take any big time credit for it once it is completed. People of the district should be given the credit; my people in the district of East End; the same people who will decide whether or not I am doing a good job come 2004.

The Minister of Community Services— and I am not trying to go at him in anyway—he got up here and said that I would come after him and talk about housing and the likes, and that is true. I will not disappoint him, I refuse to disappoint him. We are not in the business of disappointing our own family.

Housing for people in this country has been an issue for very long as we all know. I have offered my assistance to the Minister of Community Services. Assistance that I believe is valuable and he could use. He has yet to indicate his acceptance of that assistance but I am sure that as soon as he gets going, or I am hopeful that as soon as he gets going that he will ask for my assistance.

The mere fact that this is politics does not mean that we cannot work together. It really should not mean that because we are working for one cause. Our ways of getting there may be different, but it is for one cause the people of this country. The same way the UDP feel for the members of their constituency, I feel too and all Members of the Opposition. [Pause]

Madam Speaker, we all have the same passions and we all address politics with the go-at-it, with the same passion because we want to contribute to our country. I do not live off politics I live for politics. When the Government requests my assistance—and I believe that is so for any Member of the Opposition—it will be forth coming. Now I trust that it will work the other way also. If it is not a frivolous request then we expect that the Government will provide it. I know (and nobody needs to be reminding me) that I am not a part of the Majority, but we all represent individual districts and when a request is made of Government by the Minority (the Opposition) it must be at least reviewed and respected, and I am not saying it is not.

It is not about the individual. Every living being in these three Islands are entitled to the basic necessities that Government must provide. Now, yes, they may take other things from me or from any other Member of the Opposition. However, if they take the basic things from the Opposition, they are taking it from the same people that they represent. It is not me; it is not any other Member of the Opposition. It is the same people that we all represent. We represent the people of our country, so we have to stop this thing about what this one is going to get and what the other one is not going to get.

On the Ministry of Health Services, District Administration and Agriculture, I take note that the front page of the Cayman Net News during this week, was saying that there was going to be plans for an expansion of the Airport terminal facilities and in the Throne Speech His Excellency the Governor also mentioned the improvement of the infrastructure at the Owen Roberts International Airport. Contrary to belief that the Opposition will oppose just for opposition sake, that is not my intent. I think the country has long awaited a face lift of our terminal, I believe that we also need an extension to our Airport runway and I have always defended and believed that the Civil Aviation Authority should have spread its wings much wider a long time ago and reclaimed some of the swamp land that they have at the head of the Airport and build hangers that can be leased to private individuals for the aircraft. I have always defended that Madam Speaker.

I have also defended extending the runway out into the North Sound. If we are going to attract the tourists who we claim is one pillar of our financial success, then we have to provide the facilities for them as well as provide the facilities to keep our people safe at the Airport. I believe there are some 10 or 12 airlines currently operating in and out of Grand Cayman. It is impossible to accommodate them in the terminal that we currently have. We need to expand it and the Minister can rest assured that I will support the expansion of the terminal; the whole Aviation infrastructure if it comes to that. [pause]

Ministry of Tourism, Environment, Development and Commerce

I would like to now turn to the issue of the Ministry of Tourism, Environment, Development and Commerce and the big issue under there is the Port Authority.

And now we get into the famous or infamous dock proposal in East End. Much has been said about the construction of a full-fledged cargo dock in the district of East End in particular, the outskirts of the district at High Rock.

I know that anything can be done. I saw a documentary on the biggest oilrig ever built and it was built on land somewhere in Europe, I think it was Sweden and then floated it out into the North Sea. That was an undertaking of unbelievable magnitude but the cost is what they are talking about. I cannot say that the dock cannot be built where it is proposed to be built, but I can say it is going to cost this country a lot of money and as far as I understand the Government does not have any money to do it. There are a few little hiccups that need to be cleared up on how this dock is going to be built. There are a number of questions that need to be answered and the people of this country should not be fooled.

Firstly, the Government does not have any money to build it. If they did not have the money to build the proposed passenger liner dock in George Town I am sure, they do not have any to build a major dock in East End.

Secondly, who then is going to build it? There is a feasibility study underway financed by Mr. Ugland and I would like to publicly thank him for doing the feasibility study because the Government could not afford to do it. I just wonder why the feasibility study was not done elsewhere like the press release said.

Mr. Ugland then said he is not building it even though he has a tradition. His family tradition has been in the shipping industry, so he has a lot of expertise. Mr. Ugland says he is not building the dock, he is providing the feasibility study free of cost to Government which will encompass also looking for someone to finance it.

The question that is begged from that statement that Mr. Ugland is not building the dock, is who is buying up all the land in the immediate area? I do not know, but it has been sold. I think the people of this country need to know, is it Government? Someone needs to tell the country who has bought the land in the immediate vicinity of where the proposed dock is supposed to go.

If it is the "Majority might" to put the dock there then so let it be, but the people of this country, the people of East End in particular must be told; they must be respected—that is their home they have lived there all their lives. Did anyone consult with them? No, I understand that there is a petition against the dock going around in East End. I understand that the feasibility study should be completed first and one may say that the people have put 'the cart before the horse' but so did Government.

Government announced that the proposed dock was going in East End. The Minister for Tourism who is responsible for the Port Authority announced that in here recently—I believe it was in December, and he made a statement prior to that during 2001.

Now how can we say the dock is going to be built in East End when there has not been a feasibility study encompassing all the economic benefits, the disadvantages, the wishes of the people; all these things should be done.

Point of Order

Mr. Lyndon L. Martin: Point of order, Madam Speaker.

The Speaker: Please state your point of order.

Mr. Lyndon L. Martin: The Member is misleading the House. The Minister of Tourism stated that consideration will be given and the results of a feasibility study will be waited on to determine whether the port will be located in East End.

The Speaker: I would have to ask for a copy of the Hansard because I do not recollect. Member for East End is it your recollection that it was merely a consideration that it would go in East End?

Mr. V. Arden McLean: Madam Speaker, it really does not matter but my understanding was that the Government was looking at a site in East End to put the dock. Now, this was December in the statement—and prior to that, Madam Speaker, earlier on in 2000, the same Honourable Member made a statement also to that effect.

The Speaker: Honourable Member for East End can you recall the date the statement was made or general—whether it was the beginning of December so that we could ask the Hansard clerks to find it for us?

Mr. V. Arden McLean: No, Madam Speaker, I cannot remember the exact date or thereabout, but it was during the December Budget meeting that the statement was made.

The Speaker: Second Elected Member from Cayman Brac.

Mr. Lyndon L. Martin: Madam Speaker, if the Member would allow for a point of elucidation for me to simply set the record . . .

The Speaker: Will you give way, Honourable Member?

Mr. V. Arden McLean: Yes, go ahead, Madam Speaker.

The Speaker: Please proceed.

Mr. Lyndon L. Martin: . . . that it is Government's intention to await the results of the feasibility study currently underway by Burns Connolly and Associates and make a final determination as to the feasibility and the viability of the port being located at the proposed site.

The Speaker: Members in the circumstances I would propose to take an afternoon break and ask the Hansard clerks to retrieve a copy of the statements so that I can make a ruling accordingly.

Proceedings suspended at 3.45 pm

Proceedings resumed at 4.14 pm

The Speaker: Please be seated. Proceedings are resumed.

Honourable Member for East End, I propose to take the following course— I should first ask if you have in your possession a copy of the document to substantiate the statement that you did not have. In the event that you do not have it . . .

Madam Clerk, how many minutes are remaining please? [pause]

[Addressing the Member] You have approximately 36 minutes remaining. The hour of interruption is at 4.30 so I will give you an opportunity to—I understand you may have it at your residence to bring it Monday morning at which time I will make a ruling. So I will thereby be deferring my ruling on that point of order to give you an opportunity to supply the documentation because we do not find a statement in that regard in Parliament at this time.

Please, if you would then proceed with the debate as you were before we took the interruption.

Mr. V. Arden McLean: Thank you, Madam Speaker, I appreciate you giving me that opportunity and yes I am sure I will be able to find it among my records just for the sake of clarity.

While continuing on the proposal to build a dock in East End, I can say that the Caymanian Compass of Friday, 8 February 2002 on the front page, 'Minister Defends New Dock Plan'. In that article it says, and I quote, "Mr. Bush reaffirmed Government's support for the dock proposal and said the country cannot stand still, we cannot be stagnant; we will die if we think that only diving will sustain our tourism industry". That was in an address to the Cayman Islands Tourism Association.

The Speaker: Can you please supply the Clerk with a copy at the appropriate time?

Mr. V. Arden McLean: Yes, Madam Speaker. The Second Elected Member for Cayman Brac said that there are no plans as yet: the Government is awaiting the feasibility study. I too will await the feasibility study because as I said earlier, I do not know who is going to build this dock when the Government does not have the money, but certainly the country is going to have to pay for it unless, of course, we have someone out there who is that benevolent that they will give us the dock for free. If it is operated privately then the country will pay for it. Someone has to pay—the 'piper' has to be paid. He who plays the tune must be paid.

Now with regards to the proposed location, I grew up in East End in the days of plenty when you could do spearfishing along those shores. That was one area where only at specific times during the year could boats get around there, but as I said, I believe anything can be done. The cost is the key. There are people who say that is the best place to put it because it will be ashore in a short time, that is by bad weather. I cannot say that but I know that regardless of how this project is done, the people of the eastern districts are going to be inconvenienced.

Now, I understand this talk about when Quarry Products was at its peak of production—that the dock will only generate some 35 percent of that traffic. It is a completely different traffic! The trucks that haul aggregate are much smaller; very few semi-heads are used to haul aggregate. But hauling containers is a much more imposing type of traffic. Can you imagine all these trucks on the road through a predominantly residential area, that is, Breakers, Bodden Town, along the Cottage Road? The 1977 Development Plan did not make provisions for a lot of industrial zone, be it light or heavy, in the eastern districts, it was neighbourhood commercial on a limited basis.

I believe that the spirit of that Plan was to try to maintain some semblance of residential areas up on the eastern part of the Island. We had a recent review of that Plan and as far as I can understand, while the Report has not been completed, there are not a lot of proposals to change that, except in the sense of where there was a lot of agricultural residential we are now going to get low and medium density residential zoning. I support this, because one house per acre is not going to cut it any more in the agricultural/residential zones. We need areas for people to build affordable homes because land must be affordable.

We look at the transportation of fuel out of East End into George Town, because that is where the majority of the fuel is consumed on this Island and is sold. I know there may be talks of leaving the pipeline that is currently in place from Jackson Point up to Caribbean Utilities Company. That is all well and good, but we must remember that it is only an eight-inch pipeline and pumping a few million gallons of fuel through an eight-inch pipeline is going to take a very long time. The pipeline will need to be changed if it is going to be left there to service CUC. Who is going to pay for all of this if we relocate the fuel from South Sound, which we all agree is needed, and then take it all the way to East End, and have to truck it back into town to service the service stations?

As far as I know, there are just about four service stations on the eastern end of the Island: Bodden Town, North Side, East End and Savannah. I believe the areas are adequately served, but if someone wants to go into that type of business that is entirely up to them. I am saying that the majority of it has to be brought back out of there.

Why is it that we did not look at relocating the fuel farm from South Sound to the industrial area? That is somewhere behind the CUC Plant where there is much land. I know Cable and Wireless at one time was proposing to relocate some of their activities behind there. Why is it that we do not relocate to there? Yes, CUC might need to be expanded because that is the biggest single user of fuel on the Island, but that is an ideal spot to relocate the fuel, as it is already heavy industrial.

Why do we have to move the dock all the way to East End? I think it is 'penny wise and pound foolish'. The infrastructure from Savannah going into East End was never built to support that type of industry. The roads are narrow. In a lot of instances those roads are merely thirty feet wide. The Government will have to look at building a road to accommodate the additional traffic. At the very least, we need to look at a road to accommodate additional traffic.

Madam Speaker, we hear rumours of the "dump" being moved to the eastern end of this Island. Where are we going to put the dump? At the same time we hear that the Government is negotiating with the passenger liners out of Miami to build mooring facilities in West Bay. Nevertheless, we have Spotts which is the alternate place right now to the facility in town. Why is it that area cannot be developed?

Why is it, Madam Speaker, that the dock cannot stay right in George Town? We are talking about accidents. The dock right now is under-utilised. And when I hear about accidents, I take it to mean cargo and passengers coming off on the same dock. There is adequate room right here in George Town. The marine life is already destroyed here why go someplace else and destroy another set of marine life for miles? We can put the dock right here in George Town. It can be separated and then we will not have any sleepless nights about accidents happening and nightmares about it happening. I do not know why we have this idea of moving out there but I would like to see the feasibility study. Certainly, if anything is left out of it, we will see that too, because there is much to be studied on a project of this size.

I understand that there will be benefits derived from a dock being in East End, I understand all that, but will we be able to weigh them and say that there are more benefits than disadvantages? Will there be more advantages than disadvantages? I do not believe that there will be more advantages than disadvantages of removing the dock from town, a full-fledged cargo dock and putting it all the way in East End.

Who do we think is going to pay the additional cost to merchants? The same 'little man' whose cause we have championed. Those are the same people.

Someone said to me a few days ago, it would probably be cheaper to buy cows and milk them, than to go and buy milk from the grocery store. I cannot see the benefit—I will have to wait like everyone else—of putting a dock all the way in East End.

Now, if we think that the dock is getting opposition, we will wait until we hear the proposal for the Dump, then we will go into it! I recognise that East End has the greater land mass, but it is not any dumping ground! There are alternative ways of dealing with garbage and the Government was looking at those ways. I trust that those studies will also be produced, because it will be serious opposition to a regular dump in East End, where it is just thrown there and covered and thrown and covered and burnt – no, Madam Speaker.

I know they have said that George Town has hosted the dump for many years and it is time to move on and maybe it is time to see about putting it elsewhere. I think the Government needs to think twice about putting it in East End. Let us look at alternative ways of getting rid of all that is generated in this country, Madam Speaker, there are ways to do it.

Before I leave I would like to clarify something: In a recent meeting I had in East End the papers had a caption that ninety per cent of East Enders were against the dock. In the article they said that I said ninety per cent of the people I had spoken to were against the dock and that is true. Ninety per cent of the people (and maybe more) I spoke to in East End concerning the dock were against it. These people need to be listened to; they have to live in their own district. At least, respect their views; respect their opinions! I await the UDP Government response to that. I am not the only person to be listened to; I merely represent the majority wishes of the people. I believe the majority of the people have problems with the dock.

I have sailed all over. I have been to more docks than many in this Honourable Chamber have ever seen, that includes the Minister for Community Services. [Laughter] Madam Speaker, as I said, all the docks I have ever been to operate twenty four hours a day and the Governor in his Throne Speech says, "The Port Authority forecasts no real increase in cargo tonnage in 2002 over the levels experienced last year". So, why are we on this campaign to build another dock, Madam Speaker?

One of the things I have also said since the proposal came out is, that I do not see the conservationists from George Town saying anything about a dock in East End, but every time they go South Sound to cut one tree, we get a case in the Court.

The Speaker: Honourable Member for East End, is this a convenient time as we have reached the hour of interruption?

Mr. V. Arden McLean: Thank you, Madam Speaker.

The Speaker: Can we have a Motion for the adjournment?

ADJOURNMENT

Hon. Gilbert A. McLean: Madam Speaker, I move that this Honourable House, adjourn until 10 am on Monday, the 25th.

The Speaker: Thank you. The question is that this Honourable House do now adjourn until 10 am Monday, 25 February. All those in favour please say Aye. Those against, No.

Ayes.

The Speaker: The Ayes have it. The House stands adjourned until 10 am Monday, 25 February 2002.

At 4.36 pm the House stood adjourned until Monday, 25 February 2002, at 10 am.

MONDAY
25 FEBRUARY 2002
10.48 AM
Fifth Sitting

[Deputy Speaker in the Chair]

The Speaker: I invite the Honourable Third Official Member to say Prayers.

PRAYERS

Hon. George A. McCarthy: Let us pray.

Almighty God, from whom all wisdom and power are derived: We beseech Thee so to direct and prosper the deliberations of the Legislative Assembly now assembled, that all things may be ordered upon the best and surest foundations for the glory of Thy Name and for the safety, honour and welfare of the people of these Islands.

Bless our Sovereign Lady, Queen Elizabeth II; the Queen Mother; Philip, Duke of Edinburgh; Charles, Prince of Wales; and all the Royal family. Give grace to all who exercise authority in our Commonwealth, that peace and happiness, truth and justice, religion and piety may be established among us. Especially we pray for the Governor of our Islands, the Speaker of the Legislative Assembly, Official Members and Ministers of Executive Council and Members of the Legislative Assembly, that we may be enabled faithfully to perform the responsible duties of our high office. All this we ask for Thy great Name's sake.

Let us say the Lord's Prayer together: Our Father, who art in Heaven, Hallowed be Thy Name. Thy Kingdom come, Thy will be done on earth as it is in Heaven. Give us this day our daily bread, and forgive us our trespasses, as we forgive those who trespass against us. Lead us not into temptation, but deliver us from evil. For Thine is the Kingdom, the power and the glory, forever and ever. Amen.

The Lord bless us and keep us. The Lord make His face shine upon us and be gracious unto us. The Lord lift up the light of His countenance upon us and give us peace, now and always. Amen.

Proceedings resumed at 10.51 am

READING BY THE HONOURABLE
SPEAKER OF MESSAGES
AND ANNOUNCEMENTS

Apologies

The Speaker: Please be seated. Proceedings are resumed.

I have received apologies from the Honourable Speaker who is not feeling well and who is hoping to be able to join us for the afternoon session. I also received apologies for the Honourable Second Official Member, but I see that he has now joined us.

I would like to apologise for the late start of this Honourable House due to unavoidable circumstances.

QUESTIONS TO HONOURABLE
MINISTERS AND OFFICIAL MEMBERS

The Speaker: The Second Elected Member for George Town.

Question No. 10

(Deferred Friday 22 February 2002)

No. 10: Mr. Alden M. McLaughlin asked the Honourable Minister responsible for the Ministry of Tourism, Environment, Development and Commerce, what is the current employment status of the Director of the Port Authority.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Tourism.

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: Mr. Speaker, let me first of all clarify that the question is referring to the former Port Director, Mr. Errol Bush, and not the current Port Director, Mr. Paul Hurlston.

The former Port Director took up his position on the 1 January 1987 by way of a letter of appointment from the then Chairman of the Port Authority. His initial appointment was for a period of 5 years at an annual salary of $36,252.

On the expiration of his appointment he entered into a contract of employment with the Port Authority on the 1st January 1992 for a period of five years at an annual salary $60,600. His contract was renewed on the 1 January 1997 for a further three years at an annual salary of $80,856. His last contract commenced on the 1 January 2000 and was also for a period of three years. His annual salary was $112,536 and additional benefits were as follows: -

- a) An annual gratuity of 20% of his annual salary which was $22,507.20.
- b) On the third anniversary of this contract he was entitled to be paid the cash equivalent of three club or equivalent class airfares from Grand Cayman to London, England, which is approximately $10,000.
- c) The Port Authority was obliged to provide the Director with a motor car equipped with a cellular phone, and the Authority was responsible for all running costs and maintenance associated with this vehicle.

- d) Twenty-eight working days annual leave.
- e) Insurance in the sum of $500,000 while the Director was travelling on business, holidays or for medical reasons.
- f) Disability and Life insurance in the sum of $50,000, and
- g) Health insurance for the Director, his spouse and children and his contract requires and I quote, "The Director, his spouse and children shall remain beneficiaries of the said policy of health insurance notwithstanding the expiry of this agreement or the resignation of the Director at no cost to the Director".

Honourable Members will recall that before I took office in November 2000, there was a George Town Port redevelopment programme planned which the public objected to. Madam Speaker, Honourable Members will be aware that early last year we proposed the redevelopment of the George Town Port to enhance the cruise ship facilities and repair the finger pier for the cargo operations. There was some disagreement with the Port Director on the future of the Port, including where to locate the existing cargo operations within the George Town Port and it became obvious that it would not be possible to reconcile these differences.

I, along with my Ministry's Permanent Secretary who is also the Deputy Chairman of the Port Authority, met with the Port Director on 23rd August 2001, to discuss the issue. He advised us that he felt he would not be able to continue as the Port Director in the circumstances and that he would resign if the Port Authority would compensate him in accordance with his contract. He was told that the decision as to whether or not he would resign was a matter for him to decide but that as he was already on annual leave and because he had accumulated a total of 114 days annual leave, he should continue on leave until the matter was properly considered by the Port Authority. A letter was subsequently sent to the Port Director confirming our meeting and what was discussed.

On 23 November 2001, the Port Authority discussed the matter and unanimously decided to terminate the Port Director's contract and to compensate him in accordance with the termination provisions of his contract. The matter was referred to the Legal Department for their advice which was subsequently received and this confirmed that the Port Authority's decision was in order.

On 30 November 2001, the Port Director met with the Permanent Secretary in my Ministry who, as said before, is also the Deputy Chairman of the Port Authority, and was advised verbally and in writing of the Port Authority's decision to terminate his contract with effect from 31 December 2001. He was also advised of the decision to pay him in accordance with the termination provisions of his contract and for his outstanding annual leave. The total payment to the Port Director was CI$177,036.14, which was in accordance with his contract and this payment was handed over along with the letter of termination.

On 7 December 2001, the Port Director wrote to me as Chairman of the Port Authority claiming that he was entitled to severance pay and additional payment for being unfairly dismissed. He further claimed that his estimate for the cash equivalent of three club class airfares from Grand Cayman to London, England was CI$10,523.02 and as we had only paid him CI$10,000, he was requesting the additional CI$523.02. He also disputed the number of annual leave days which he had outstanding.

It was accepted that the Port Director was entitled to severance pay but it was not accepted that he was unfairly dismissed. The latter was referred to the Legal Department for their advice. The dispute with respect to the outstanding annual leave was referred to the Port Authority Administration for them to reconcile. The Port Authority Administration discovered that they had in fact made an error with his outstanding annual leave. The total amount of outstanding annual leave days were 32 and not 22, as was originally calculated by the Port Authority; nor was it 31 as calculated by the Port Director.

The Legal Department subsequently gave advice with respect to the former Port Director's claim of being unfairly dismissed. As a result there will be no additional payment with respect to his claim for unfair dismissal.

It follows that, in addition to the CI$177,036.14 which we have already paid the former Port Director, he will now receive an additional payment of CI$30,181.90 which is broken down as follows: - a) Severance pay of CI$25, 870.20; and b) 10 additional days outstanding annual leave which amounts to CI$4, 311.70.

Finally, Mr. Speaker, I can advise this Honourable House that prior to the Port Authority's decision to terminate the former Port Director's contract, we requested that the Auditor General carry out an audit of the Port Authority and report specifically on the following in addition to other things: -

- (a) Determine the current financial position of the Port Authority;
- (b) Review the situation relating to the acquisition of the computer system at the Port Authority which is reported to be an ongoing project that has cost the Authority in excess of CI$500,000; and
- (c) Review the operations of the Cargo Distribution Centre (CDC) in the Industrial Park (including the development of the administration building which is 2,400 sq ft and is reported to have cost the Port Authority almost $800,000.

Mr. Speaker, the audit is in progress.

Supplementaries

Mr. Speaker: Are there any supplementaries? The Second Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. Alden M. McLaughlin, Jr.: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. In the first paragraph on page 2 of the answer, the Honourable Minister said that the Port Director was told that the decision as to whether or not he would resign was a matter for him to decide. And then in the following paragraph it goes on to say that, "On the 23rd November 2001, the Port Authority discussed the matter and unanimously decided to terminate the Port Director's contract . . ." I wonder if the Honourable Minister could say what caused them to move from the position where the Port Director was told that whether or not he wished to resign was a matter for him (which was, I think around the 23rd August 2001, to a situation on the 23rd November 2001) whereby the Port Authority determined it should terminate his contract.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Tourism.

Suspension of Standing Order 23(7) and (8)

Hon. W. McKeever Bush: Mr. Speaker, before I go into that supplementary question under Standing Order 83, I think, I suspend Standing Order 23(7) and (8) in order to take questions after 11 o'clock.

The Speaker: The question is that Standing Order 23(7) and (8) be suspended to allow Question Time to continue beyond 11 am. All those in favour please say Aye. Those against, No.

Ayes.

The Speaker: The Ayes have it.

Agreed: Standing Order 23(7) and (8) suspended.

Hon. W. McKeever Bush: Mr. Speaker, I do not think I need to repeat what I said in the first paragraph on page 2, nor do I need to repeat what I said. However, I can say that once the matter got to that point where he was told, I felt like I had to go to the Port Authority and let them decide because the Port Authority is the governing Board.

The Speaker: The Second Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. Alden M. McLaughlin, Jr.: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I am grateful to the Honourable Minister for that response but it did not answer my question. I will repeat the question: On 23 August 2001 the former Port Director was told that the decision as to whether or not he would resign was a matter for him to decide. He then went on annual leave and on 23 November 2001, the Port Authority discussed the matter and unanimously decided to terminate his contract. The question is: What transpired between 23 August and 23 November which changed the position from one whereby the matter of whether or not he would resign was one for the Port Director, to a situation where the Port Authority terminated his contract?

The Speaker: The Minister of Tourism.

Hon. W. McKeever Bush: Mr. Speaker, I think that the answer to the question in the first paragraph is very clear and I will read it. "There was some disagreement with the Port Director on the future of the Port including where to locate the existing cargo operations within the George Town Port, and it became obvious that it would not be possible to reconcile these differences. It is obvious that there were differences of opinion. I, along with my Ministry's Permanent Secretary who is also the Deputy Chairman of the Port Authority, met with the Port Director on the 23rd August 2001, to discuss the issue. He advised us that he felt that he would not be able to continue as the Port Director in the circumstances and that he would resign if the Port Authority would compensate him in accordance with his contract. He was told that the decision as to whether or not he would resign was a matter for him to decide but that as he was already on annual leave and because he had accumulated these many days he would continue on that annual leave. I took the matter to the next Board meeting, which was my duty as Chairman, where it was discussed and unanimously decided to terminate the Port Director's contract".

The Speaker: The Second Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. Alden M. McLaughlin, Jr.: Mr. Speaker, the reason for the question was to determine why a decision was taken to terminate the Port Director's employment. I wonder if the Honourable Minister can confirm that had the Port Director resigned, rather than having been terminated, the Government would not have been liable to pay him severance pay.

The Speaker: Honourable Minister for Tourism.

Hon. W. McKeever Bush: Mr. Speaker, I cannot speculate as to what someone may have done. We took the matter as things progressed and I allowed the Port Authority to decide, although I should say that the Port Authority Board had not seen the contract—they knew nothing about what kind of contract existed—until I took it to them in that same meeting on 23 November 2001.

The Speaker: The Second Elected Member for Cayman Brac.

Mr. Lyndon L. Martin: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. As a follow up to the comments just made by the Leader of Government Business, could the Minister indicate who is responsible for signing the last contract which would have been the contract of the 1 January 2000 to 2003? since he said that the Port Authority Board did not see the contract.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Tourism.

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: Mr. Speaker, I think what is normal is for the Chairman to sign the contract after the Port Authority—or any authority—Board has gone through the contract and agreed on it. But the Port Authority Board did not see this contract until I produced the contract on the 23 November 2001. That contract was signed by the former Minister and Chairman of the Port Authority, Mr. Tom Jefferson.

The Speaker: The Second Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. Alden M. McLaughlin, Jr.: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. The substantive answer refers to an additional payment of $30,181.90 and of that, severance pay makes up $25,870.20. I wonder if the Honourable Minister could confirm that as a matter of law that severance pay would not have been payable had the Port Director resigned rather than having been terminated by the Port Authority.

The Speaker: Honourable Minister for Tourism.

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: Mr. Speaker, the Member is right. But had we forced him to resign the other section of the law would have talked about constructive dismissal.

The Speaker: The Second Elected Member for the district of Cayman Brac.

Mr. Lyndon L. Martin: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Returning to the point made earlier that the contract that we are now talking about whether it was terminated or not was signed by the then Minister, Mr. Tom Jefferson without the knowledge of the Port Authority Board. Can the Minister indicate whether the Board and his Ministry were fully aware of all the terms and conditions of the particular contract at the time of deciding its termination including the expiration date of the contract?

The Speaker: Minister of Tourism.

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: Mr. Speaker, in 2000 when I took over, I guess it was at the end of November or sometime in December (since my official visit) I visited the Port Authority with my Permanent Secretary to see what the situation there was and to see what the [Director's] contract was like. We had been told that I could see the various contracts including the computer contracts on other matters. But of course, nothing was forthcoming and nothing happened until later when I, with the present Permanent Secretary, had a chat with him [the Director] on the contract. He told us that the contract that had been terminated recently which was signed—I think I said on the 1 January 2001—was expiring at the end of last year which would have been January to December, a 12-month period then the full 2001 period (which was two years) and would have ended last year. That is what he told my Permanent Secretary and me. Up until then we still had not seen it. However, when we finally got a copy of the contract it showed that it was a three-year period instead of a two-year period, and as I said I had not seen the contract up until then.

The Speaker: The Second Elected Member for Cayman Brac.

Mr. Lyndon L. Martin: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I cannot help but be a bit disturbed at this matter which I think needs to be probed a bit further. Mr. Speaker, could the Minister indicate, if my understanding is correct, that no contract was produced to the Board or to his Ministry that stated the contract was for three years prior to talks of resignation and termination?

The Speaker: Honourable Minister.

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: I can confirm that, Mr. Speaker. Neither the Permanent Secretary nor myself had seen the contract until it was produced when it was time to add up the benefits.

The Speaker: The Elected Member for East End.

Mr. V. Arden McLean: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. The Minister said in the substantive answer that he was speaking of the Director. His last contract commenced on the 1 January 2000 and that the Port Authority's board members had not seen that contract, and the usual process is that the Chairman signs it following a review of it by the board members. Can the Minister tell us whether or not he is aware that the board members did not see it, and if those board members are the same persons that exist now under his Ministry?

The Speaker: Honourable Minister for Tourism. I will allow one more supplementary.

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: Mr. Speaker, the present board has a membership consisting of members of the old board like Mr. Dave Foster, Mr. James A. Bodden, the Collector of Customs, Mr. Colford Scott and various other persons, but it also has new members on it that were appointed early last year like Mr. Bing Thompson, Mr. Frankie Flowers and two other members. I took this matter to the Board and inquired of the old Board members and not one of them had seen it.

The Speaker: Second Elected Member for Cayman Brac.

Mr. Lyndon L. Martin: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I am sure that the Port Authority Board would have some form of legal vetting of contracts prior to entering into them. I would ask if the Minister could confirm that all necessary checks have gone through to ensure that the contract which only had the one signature was an authentic one.

The Speaker: Honourable Minister.

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: Mr. Speaker, in saying that the contract as signed by Mr. Jefferson only had one signature, I can confirm that the person who witnessed the signature was his personal secretary at the time. The Legal Department went through this and that is why we took some time to get the answer to the House. Several times, as Members will recall, it was deferred and I did report that the Permanent Secretary was working on it.

I can say to this Honourable House that in appointing the new Director, Mr. Paul Hurlston, the Port Authority of the Cayman Islands went through everything and agreed to his terms of employment.

The Speaker: The Elected Member for East End.

Question No. 14

No. 14: Mr. V. Arden McLean asked the Honourable Third Official Member responsible for Finance and Economics, if a system has been implemented to allow for the collection of the accommodation tax for time-share units, and if so to give details of the accountability process.

The Speaker: The Honourable Third Official Member.

Hon. George A. McCarthy: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. The 2002 Budget address outlined that a time-share fee would be introduced during the year which would yield revenue of $1 million. The authority for the imposition of a timeshare fee will be sought from the Legislative Assembly in the form a Bill which seeks to amend the Tourist Accommodation (Taxation) Law 1996 Revision.

The Bill will seek to charge a fee of US$10 for each night that a time share unit is occupied by the owner of that unit or by an 'exchanger' in the 'time-share pool' or by guests of the owner. The fee of US$10 has been discussed extensively with the local time-share industry operators and it has been agreed that this is a reasonable amount to charge without adversely affecting the industry.

The collection of the time-share fee will be carried out under the same regime as that used for Tourist Accommodation Tax Law.

Supplementaries

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Can the Honourable Third Official Member outline exactly what regime is used for the collection of the Tourist Accommodation Tax?

The Speaker: The Honourable Third Official Member.

Hon. George A. McCarthy: Mr. Speaker, the regime that is in place for the Tourism Accommodation Tax Law is as follows: Under the Tourism Accommodation Tax Law, tourism operators are required to keep details of the number of nights any of their units are occupied. These details are normally submitted with the monthly payment that will be remitted to the Tourism Department now instead of the Treasury department. Payments of fees are normally required 28 days after the end of a month to which the Tourism Accommodation Tax is collected. Late payment attracts a surcharge of 20 per cent of the fee that is payable for that period.

The Government has a right to obtain evidence (and this is normally substantiated by a copy of the Bill that is handed to the guests being submitted to the Treasury Department, accompanying the accumulated fee) and any misleading information carries a fine of $50,000 or three times the amount of fee that is due on payable, whichever the greater or an imprisonment term of two years.

The Speaker: The Elected Member for East End.

Mr. V. Arden McLean: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. When this question came up early last year we went through it extensively about that same process and accountability, and I think it was withdrawn. The House would not agree to it because an accountability process is not in place.

In so saying, Mr. Speaker, I wonder if the Third Official Member can tell us if there is an office within his Portfolio or elsewhere that audits this particular accountability for the collection of taxes, which is The Tourist Accommodation Tax.

The Speaker: The Honourable Official Member.

Hon. George A. McCarthy: Mr. Speaker, in terms of the accountability process the Department of Tourism, now the Collecting Agency for Tourism Accommodation Tax and will be in respect of timeshare, will verify the payment against the taxes that are stated on the timeshare bills or guests' invoices. These will accompany the total payment that will be made through that Department and will be passed on to the Treasury Department.

In terms of what the Honourable Member for East End said, it was not so much the accountability process that created a difficulty last year, but the attempt was being made to address this issue under the Stamp Duty Law. Between that time some thought had to go into the process in terms of what would be the best way of addressing this.

If the Honourable Member will recall, there was also the argument put forward that it would be based on the number of persons occupying a unit, and that in itself posed a problem. It was felt that the best way to do this and the best process of verification would be on the number of rooms in the unit.

So, this is why it has now been sorted out and has been brought to this level. Mr. Speaker, in terms of outlining the key features of accountability for the Honourable First Elected Member of George Town that was what has been set out for the timeshare, and I just introduced Tourism Accommodation Tax but I think for better understanding it will be much better if I were to just read specifically what will apply to the timeshare, if you will permit.

The key features of the accountability process under the Tourism Accommodation Tax Law 1996 Revision, will also be applied to the timeshare fee. These key features are as follows: -

1. Timeshare industry operators will be required to keep details of the number of nights that units have been occupied.
2. These details will accompany the monthly payment that will be made to the Government. This is to the Tourism Department for onward transmission to the Treasury. This will enable Government to determine whether the payment received is consistent with the number of nights that the timeshare units have been occupied.
3. Payment of timeshare fee will be required by the 28th day after the end of the month in which the timeshare unit has been occupied.
4. Late payments will be subject to a 20 per cent surcharge, and
5. The Government will have a legal right to obtain evidence from the timeshare industry operators to verify that the amount being paid is correct.

Mr. Speaker, the Internal Audit Unit, together with the Department of Tourism, will be auditing three hotels on a quarterly basis and this will allow for additional verification as to systems that are in place in order to support the detailed information that is being transmitted to the Tourism Department which in turn will be passed on to the Treasury Department.

The Speaker: The Elected Member for East End.

Mr. V. Arden McLean: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Can the Minister then tell us if the audit that he spoke to for the hotels will also apply for the timeshare establishments in the country?

Hon. George A. McCarthy: Yes, Mr. Speaker, it will.

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Thank you. Can the Honourable Third Official Member state if, as in his answer the very first paragraph which says, "The 2002 Budget address outlined that a timeshare fee would be introduced during the year which would yield a revenue of $1 million". Can he say when that revenue was projected, at what point in time during the year was it foreseen that the collection of this $10 per night would begin and if so, does it match up when it is anticipated to be collected now?

The Speaker: The Honourable Third Official Member.

Hon. George A. McCarthy: [Pause] Mr. Speaker, it was intended that the timeshare fee would have been in effect for the entire year. In the next question to follow, the proportionate amount that is likely to be collected during the course of 2002 will be shown and that will represent approximately 75 per cent of what has been due. The reason being as Honourable Members can appreciate, the numerous regulations and Bills that had to be worked on by the Legal Department.. The Legal Draftsman that has been assigned to work on these pieces of new legislation and regulations has been working since the Budget. We are hoping that this Bill, together with others that are due to allow for the raising of other areas of revenue, will be completed and presented during this meeting.

The Speaker: Are there any further supplementaries? If not, Madam Clerk.

The Elected Member for East End.

Question No. 15

No. 15: Mr. V. Arden McLean asked the Honourable Third Official Member, if there is an anticipated shortfall in recurrent revenue for the year 2002, and if so, why?

The Speaker: The Honourable Third Official Member.

Hon. George A. McCarthy: The 2002 Budget shows that Recurrent Revenue is estimated to be $335.1 million for the year. That figure is inclusive of a number of Revenue Measures that were detailed in the 2002 Budget Address.

Some of those Revenue Measures have not been implemented as yet and it is likely that any shortfall in revenue will be as a result of those Measures not yet in place as of the 1 January 2002.

The revenue measures that are not yet in place along with their associated incremental or additional revenue estimate for 2002 are as follows: -

Timeshare fee	$1 million
Local vessel fee	$0.5 million

Garbage fees	$3.8 million
Parking fees	$1 million

Mr. Speaker, brief comments on the implementation status of these Measures are as follows: -

- A Bill will be brought to the Legislative Assembly to implement the timeshare fee. It is envisaged that this will be done during the present Sitting of the House;
- A Bill will be brought to the Legislative Assembly to implement changes to local vessel licence fees. This is also likely to occur during the present Sitting of the House;
- Considerable progress has been made in the task of updating the Department of Environmental Health's billing database so that it captures the majority of the residential households in the Islands that receive garbage collection services;
- Progress has also been made in the process of implementation of parking fees. The areas in which charges will be levied for parking have been established; it has been agreed with the Police Department that the Department will enforce the Measure and price quotations have been obtained for the machines that are necessary in the implementation of this Measure.

Mr. Speaker, if a pessimistic view is taken of the amount of additional revenue to be derived from these Measures during 2002, the resulting amounts might be as follows: -

$0.75 million	In respect of the timeshare fee – being three-quarters of the full year's estimate, since it is expected that the Measure will be in place by April;
$0.25 million	In respect of the local vessel fee – which is 50% of the full year's estimate;
$1.9 million	In respect of garbage fee – which is 50% of the additional revenue budgeted for 2002;
$0.25 million	In respect of the parking fee – which is 25% of the full year's estimate.

These pessimistic estimates of additional revenue to be earned from these Measures during 2002, total $3.15 million

The 2002 Budget states that $6.3 million of additional revenue is expected from these Measures; resulting in a possible shortfall of $3.15 million.

To mitigate against this possible shortfall, Government has taken the sensible approach of 'reserving' the Capital Acquisition expenditure figure of $5 million that is contained in the 2002 Budget.

Government will also closely monitor actual revenue collection versus budgeted figures on a monthly basis. This was done for the month of January which revealed that by the end of January 2002, 18 per cent of the entire year's budget had been collected as compared to 12 per cent in January 2001.

I should mention that the $1.9 million that is suggested which is 50 per cent of the incremental revenue on garbage fee, is a very conservative position because at this time work has already commenced on putting in place the database in terms of meeting with the relevant agencies to get the relevant particulars so that it will be up and running as quickly as possible.

The Speaker: Are there any supplementaries?
The Elected Member for East End.

Supplementaries

Mr. V. Arden McLean: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I wonder if the Honourable Third Official Member can explain to us how the database that he just spoke of will be put in place, that is, for the garbage collection.

The Speaker: The Honourable Third Official Member.

Hon. George A. McCarthy: There is a committee that has been put together in order to review the relevant information concerning all households in the Island. Meetings have been held with CUC and they have provided us with details of all households that are presently in the Islands for which billings are being made. That information is being looked at very carefully and appropriate measures will be determined to decide on which bands.

Members will recall during the presentation of the Budget it was proposed that each household would fall within a given band. At that time it was envisioned that this would be based on kilowatt hours but kilowatt hours will not be the only criteria that is used; other variables will be looked at in addition to kilowatt hours in order to determine where a household is placed. At this time there are persons from the Portfolio of Finance and Economics, Lands and Survey Department, Planning Department, Environmental Health Department and Computer Services that are working on the information that has been gleaned to date with a view of putting in this database.

The Speaker: The Second Elected Member for Cayman Brac.

Mr. Lyndon L. Martin: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. In the answer given the Third Official Member detailed a pessimistic estimate of additional revenue to generate a shortfall of $3.15 million. He also detailed the fact that the Government has taken necessary action of holding back on capital acquisition of $5 million to ensure that the Budget remains balanced.

A latter part of the answer he detailed was that in January of 2002, revenue collection was 18 per cent of the entire year's Budget as compared to 12 per cent in January of 2001. This would suggest that where there are some items—they are shortfall—there must be other items that have a surplus of what was budgeted. Could the Third Official Member indicate if this is an accurate assessment?

The Speaker: Third Official Member.

Hon. George A. McCarthy: Mr. Speaker, I can confirm that the revenue measures are performing with the exception of the four that I have outlined but have not been implemented as yet.

In comparing the various categories, for example, we take Customs Import duty: for the month of January 2001 collected was $10,624,593. For January 2002, $8,298,582. Although the amount in 2002 is less than the amount collected for January 2001, there are elements in 2001 that are not in 2002. For example, the Import duty on gasoline: we know that whenever a tanker arrives the duty that is paid is quite substantial.

So, we have to be working on a cumulative month by month. We have compared the month of January 2002 with January 2001. At the end of February we will be comparing the cumulative position of January and February 2001 against January and February 2002. And if it is seen that the revenue areas are not performing as they should, and we project forward, let us say, any likely shortfall, for example, where the $3.15 million has been identified as not likely to be collected, the Government has taken a decision to implement measures in order to try and contain expenditure in that area so we move forward on a balanced budget process.

We take under what is called other charges—I am just giving the broad categories for January 2001 and January 2002.

JANUARY 2001	JANUARY 2002
Other charges $2,411,464	Other charges $1,966,055
Licences (Inc. Bank licence) $13,332,419	Licences (Inc. Bank Charges) $32,925,051
Fees $12,645,721	Fees $15,871,616
Total $39,898,065	Total $60,171,525

So what is being shown is that this is how this 18 per cent increase has been arrived at.

The Speaker: First Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Thank you. Mr. Speaker, with the greatest of respect, the Honourable Third Official Member not only remained on the periphery of the question but he has gone beyond the periphery. The question asked if it was sensible to assume that because it was 18 per cent in the month of January collected for 2002, and it was 12 per cent collected for 2001, that there would be a surplus. The Member has not answered the question and perhaps the Member should answer the question, or say he cannot.

The Speaker: Honourable Third Official Member.

Hon. George A. McCarthy: Mr. Speaker, I will say thanks to the Honourable Member for reminding me what the question was. I cannot recall that it was in those specific words. I cannot recall whether the Honourable Member for Cayman Brac asked if there was going to be a surplus because surely at this point in time one hopes for a surplus through prudent fiscal management. But I could not stand here, Mr. Speaker, and confirm that there is going to be a surplus at the end of the year. We are managing the finances of Government in such a way to achieve its surplus and the efforts that are being made at this point in time is to achieve that end.

The Speaker: The Member for North Side, then the Second Elected Member for George Town, the Third Elected Member for Bodden Town, and then the Second Elected Member for Cayman Brac.

The Member for North Side.

Ms. Edna M. Moyle: Mr. Speaker, if the Honourable Member has a follow up on the previous question I will give way because I intend to ask on another matter.

The Speaker: Thank you. The Second Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. Alden M. McLaughlin: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I would like to thank the Elected Member for North Side for her courtesy. In the substantive response the Honourable Member outlined four areas in which he says if a pessimistic view is taken of the amount of additional revenue to be derived from these measures, there might be a shortfall which he placed at some $3.15 million. I wonder whether the Honourable Third Official Member can say that these are the only four areas. Based on current trends there is a projection that there will be a shortfall in Government revenue for this year.

The Speaker: The Honourable Third Official Member.

Hon. George A. McCarthy: Mr. Speaker, we have only looked at one month out of the year so far (January). We are still in the month of February. We will not have the end of February's position until the end of February comes about. The Government is taking every precaution in terms of looking at the revenue flows on a month-to-month basis. Given what has occurred during the course of last year, this is the fairest means of assessing the revenue flows on a progressive basis.

Therefore, at this point in time, the Government cannot say that there are going to be specific shortfalls in other areas, and I would not want to run the risk at this early stage only to point out performance in terms of the actual results as at the end of January. I mentioned the Government will continue to monitor on accumulative month-to-month basis.

The Speaker: The Third Elected Member for Bodden Town, are you continuing on the same . . .

Mr. Anthony S. Eden: Yes, Mr. Speaker. Could the Honourable Member share with the House the information he read from earlier on.

Hon. George A. McCarthy: Yes, Mr. Speaker, I can share the details as to how the total of $60,171,525 compared to $39,898,065 for the year 2001, were arrived at.

The Speaker: Thank you, Honourable Member for Cayman Brac. Are you still on the same line or were you going on a . . . ?

Mr. Lyndon L. Martin: Mr. Speaker, I want to clarify as the First Elected Member for George Town has requested my earlier question. The Third Official Member detailed four areas in which they were expected to be a shortfall of some $3.15 million. I then asked—based on the information that January of 2002 was going to be 18 per cent of total revenue for the year where January of 2001 was 12 per cent of the total year—were there other items in the Budget that were surpassing that amount expected in the Budget estimate of 2002.

In the details provided earlier, the Third Official Member detailed particular items. But for the sake of emphasis I would like for the Member to restate what is the total revenue figure for January 2002 compared to 2001, and for the House and the general public to understand that the Budget of the year 2002, despite the shortfalls of four particular items is ahead of what it was in 2001.

The Speaker: The Honourable Third Official Member.

Hon. George A. McCarthy: Mr. Speaker, the details which I provided earlier in terms of those items that are ahead and those lagging behind are: -

Customs Import Duty
2001	$10,624,593
January 2002	$8,298,582
Charges
January 2001	$2,411,464
January 2002	$1,966,055
Licences
January 2001	$13,332,419
January 2002	$32,925,051
Sales
January 2001	$527,100
January 2002	$391,774
Fees
January 2001	$12,645,721
January 2002	$15,871,616

Fines
January 2001	$71,374
Services
January 2001	$130,797
January 2002	$157,308
Rental/Leases
January 2001	$26,332
January 2002	$22,670
Loans/Interest
January 2001	$60,963
January 2002	$40,056
Miscellaneous
January 2001	$67,303
January 2002	$390,061
Total
January 2001	$39,898,065
January 2002	$60,171,525

Point of Order

Mr. V. Arden McLean: Mr. Speaker, if I may, on a point of order.

The Speaker: Can I hear your point of order?

Mr. V. Arden McLean: Mr. Speaker, I appreciate the Third Official Member's answer but this same answer was given to us a few minutes ago. It is bordering on repetition.

The Speaker: I have listened to the Honourable Official Member and I do agree that it is. But I think the question was asked a second time for emphasis, so I am asking if the Honourable Third Official Member could complete his answer as quickly as possible so that we could move on the next supplementary.

Hon. George A. McCarthy: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I know I gave part of the information earlier but I was asked to restate the information. (Completes list of information)

The Speaker: Elected Member for North Side.

Ms. Edna M. Moyle: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I wonder if the Honourable Third Official Member, in his answer where he says, "The areas in which charges will be levied for parking have been established" could tell this Honourable House where those areas are?

The Speaker: Honourable Third Official Member. I have the Second Elected Member from the district of West Bay. After that I will allow for one more supplementary.

Hon. George A. McCarthy: Mr. Speaker, Honourable Members may regard this information to be somewhat tedious if I start to go through the details. I am wondering if the Honourable Member would accept a copy of what I have in my hand.

Ms. Edna M. Moyle: Mr. Speaker, I would like the answer on the floor of the House please. Thank you.

Hon. George A. McCarthy: Mr. Speaker, I will just have to repeat what I have here if you will permit that, Sir.

The Speaker: Could the Official Member try to make sure that it is concise as possible in regards to the question that was asked in relation to parking fees in particular.

Hon. George A. McCarthy: Mr. Speaker, I will just read as I have been doing earlier, not adding any information. Parking fees:

George Town (Elgin Avenue)

- ◆ Right side of the road, 6 North direction,
- ◆ Left side of the road 13 North direction. A total of 19 parking slots.

The Racket Club parking lot

- ◆ 300 or more are estimated.

Edward Street (from Scotia Bank to Courts Office)

- ◆ Left side of the road, 22 parking slots,
- ◆ The right side of the road 6 parking slots. A total of 28 parking slots

Albert Panton Street

- ◆ Left side of the road, 14 parking slots,
- ◆ Right side, 9 parking slots. A total of 23 parking slots.

Genesis Close

- ◆ Left side of the road, 14 parking slots.

Shedden Road

- ◆ Left side of the road, 7 parking slots,
- ◆ Right side of the road, 14 parking slots. A total of 21 parking slots

Cardinal Avenue

- ◆ Left side of the road, 15 parking slots,
- ◆ The back of Government Library parking lot, the left side of the road, 43
- ◆ On the right side, 73. A total of 116 parking slots.

Mary Street (next to Zepher House)

- ◆ Right side of the road 4 parking slots,

Fort Street (next to the Bank of America direction)

- ◆ Left side of the road, 11 parking slots.

Goring Avenue next to T-shirts of Cayman,

- ◆ Eastern direction, 6 parking slots.

The Royal Bank of Canada (along Elgin Avenue)

- ◆ Left side of the road, 4 parking slots.

The Post Office

- ◆ Right side of the road 3 parking slots.

This, Mr. Speaker, totals 264 parking slots.

The Speaker: Thank you. Elected Member for North Side is this a follow up?

Ms. Edna M. Moyle: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I wonder if the Honourable Third Official Member could tell the House how this fee will be charged. Will it be an hourly, daily, weekly or monthly charge and what the actual fee will be?

The Speaker: The Honourable Third Official Member.

Hon. George A. McCarthy: Mr. Speaker, it will be on an hourly basis, and at this time it is projected to be at a cost of $1 per hour. In terms of how it will be implemented, meter machines will be installed at various points, or machines that will allow for a person parking a vehicle to go and purchase a ticket for the amount of time that the user of the vehicle estimates that the vehicle will be parked by inserting whatever amount of money into the machine. That ticket will then be displayed on the windshield or dashboard of the vehicle.

The Speaker: The Elected Member from the district of North Side.

Ms. Edna M. Moyle: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I wonder if the Honourable Third Official Member could tell the House who will be monitoring? Will it be the Police or meter attendants placed in town?

Hon. George A. McCarthy: Mr. Speaker, two or three meter persons will be employed to monitor the meters on an ongoing basis. They will fall under the Police Department.

The Speaker: Second Elected Member for West Bay. The final supplementary.

Mr. Rolston M. Anglin: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. The Honourable Third Official Member has outlined certain financial information for the year 2002 (January 2002 versus January 2001). Could the Honourable Third Official Member confirm to the House that the exercise was to show a month and month performance, not necessarily to reflect on whether or not there will be a surplus at the end of the year, because that is impossible to do simply by looking at the months.

The Speaker: The Honourable Third Official Member.

Hon. George A. McCarthy: Yes, Mr. Speaker, it will be a month and month performance. But as I mentioned earlier, with the month and month performance seeing what the revenue flows are and looking at the level of expenditure that will be taking place, it will allow the Government to monitor expenditure against revenue flows and to make adjustments as appropriate in order to maintain a balanced budget position.

The Speaker: The Elected Member for East End.

Question No. 16

No. 16: Mr. V. Arden McLean asked the Honourable Minister responsible for the Ministry of Planning, Communication, Works and Information Technology, what progress has been made in regards to Government's announced policy decision to deregulate the telecommunication industry.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Planning, Communication, Works and Information Technology.

Hon. Linford A. Pierson: Mr. Speaker, substantial progress has been made. The Information and Communications Technology (ICT) Bill will lay the legal foundation for deregulation by establishing the necessary independent regulatory body, the ICT Authority. In addition, it will set the policy for such important issues as the new licensing regime, interconnection between suppliers' networks and the prohibition of anti-competitive practices. The drafting of this Bill has been completed and it will be brought to this Honourable House during this Meeting. Several preliminary discussions have been held with Cable and Wireless Cayman Islands Limited concerning the replacement of their existing exclusive licence with one or more non-exclusive ones. I am pleased to report that the Company continues to honour its public commitment to assist with the liberalisation process. Provided this degree of co-operation continues, I am confident that we will meet our target of September this year for the start of competition.

Supplementaries

The Speaker: The Member for East End.

Mr. V. Arden McLean: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Can the Minister tell us if the new draft Bill has been circulated for further public input?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Planning, Communications, Works and Information Technology.

Hon. Linford A. Pierson: Mr. Speaker, the draft Bill was laid on the Table of the Honourable House in November last year. Certain amendments have been made to that but not many of consequence. This Bill will be brought to the House, as I mentioned during this Meeting but the newly amended Bill has not been circulated.

The Speaker: Elected Member for East End continuing.

Mr. V. Arden McLean: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I wonder if the Minister can tell us when it is anticipated that this new draft Bill will be circulated.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister.

Hon. Linford A. Pierson: Mr. Speaker, I stated earlier that the Bill has been circulated and the final version will be brought to this House during this Meeting.

The Speaker: Elected Member for East End.

Mr. V. Arden McLean: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I appreciate the answer from the Minister but I asked about the new amended draft Bill. I am trying to ascertain when will that be circulated, and in particular to Members.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister.

Hon. Linford A. Pierson: Mr. Speaker, I am trying to be as clear as I can. I told the Honourable Member for East End that the original Bill was laid on the Table of the House in November, which gave ample opportunity to all stakeholders and the public for their input. We have received the input. The new finalised Bill will not be circulated again; it will be brought to this House during this Meeting.

The Speaker: First Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Thank you. In the process of deregulation, can the Minister state with the establishment of the new independent regulatory body whether part and parcel of its remit will be to have anything to do with price controls, or will it simply be a matter of allowing competition to dictate what the prices will be?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister.

Hon. Linford A. Pierson: Mr. Speaker, the role of the ICT Authority is defined in the ICT Bill. For information for the House I would like to state several points and they are: -

- (a) To promote competition in the provision of ICT services and ICT networks where it is reasonable or necessary to do so.
- (b) To advise the Minister on ICT matters including compliance with Government's international obligations, market liberalisation and competitive pricing.
- (c) To investigate and resolve complaints from customers and service providers concerning the provision of ICT services and ICT networks.
- (d) To determine the categories of licences to be issued under this Law and The Electronic Transaction Law 2000.
- (e) To license and regulate ICT services and ICT networks as specified in this Law and The Electronics Transaction Law 2000.
- (f) To collect all fees including licence fees and any other charges levied under this Law or The Electronics Transaction Law 2000 or regulations made there under.
- (g) To resolve dispute concerning the interconnection or sharing of infrastructure between or among ICT service providers or ICT network providers.
- (h) To promote and maintain an efficient economic and harmonised ICT infrastructure.
- (i) To carry out duties and responsibilities of the administrative point of contact of the top level of the global Internet domain name system as assigned from time to time to the Islands.

(j) To act on any matter referred to it by the Minister or the Managing Director.

(k) To carry out such other functions as are conferred on the Authority by or under this Law or any other law.

Mr. Speaker, to answer the question specifically, yes, the ICT Authority will be given the responsibility of collecting all fees including licence fees and any other charges levied under this Law or The Electronic Transaction Law 2000 or regulations made thereunder.

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Thank you. Can the Honourable Minister—perhaps if necessary and he can decide by examples—give us some idea of what might be encountered as anti-competitive practices.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister.

Hon. Linford A. Pierson: Mr. Speaker, such matters as—and this is not exhaustive, it is just an example—as predatory pricing; cutting below a certain level so as to keep out competitors, that type of thing. But they are all detailed in the Bill, which will be brought to the House during this meeting.

The Speaker: First Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Thank you. In the last paragraph of the Minister's answer when he speaks to the discussions that have been held with Cable and Wireless regarding the replacement of their exclusive licence with one or more non-exclusive ones, and he speaks to anticipating that if they remain on course with their public commitment to deregulation, that the time line of September can be met. If at any point in time this commitment by Cable and Wireless changes, does the Minister anticipate that there may have to be long legal drawn out processes, or has any thought been given to how that situation could be dealt with?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister.

Hon. Linford A. Pierson: Mr. Speaker, I am pleased to say that so far Cable and Wireless have given their indication that they plan to honour their commitment to Government: they plan to work with Government to establish a well-regulated and fair competitive market for telecommunications. I think it would perhaps be inappropriate and counter-productive to speculate as to what may happen if this communication and this co-operation did not continue. I would rather place the emphasis upon the co-operative discussions that are currently underway.

The Speaker: Before the Member continues, I would like to say that the proposed plan is that we carry on and finish Question Time since we started late this morning and then take the luncheon break. We are hoping that we will be finished by 1 o'clock.

The First Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Thank you. Mr. Speaker, I am going by memory so perhaps I might need to be assisted.

When the Honourable Minister outlined the sort of job description of the Authority, I think one of the areas that he mentioned when he was going through an alphabetical list was that the Authority would basically have the power to deal with any conflicts which may arise, regarding the use of infrastructure between competing parties.

I would like the Minister, if possible, to expand on that to make sure that I understand exactly how that would work, because in my mind, infrastructure would have to be owned by some of the parties. I just want to make sure that what is being said is that if there are arrangements that need to be made for sub-letting of some of that infrastructure to another one of the companies, and there are problems with regards to some amicable arrangements, if whether the Authority would then have the authority to sit down with both parties involved and decide on what is fair and whether both parties would be bound to abide by whatever the ruling of the Authority is in that matter.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister.

Hon. Linford A. Pierson: Mr. Speaker, I believe that the specific quotation was (g) – “To resolve dispute concerning the interconnection or sharing of infrastructure between or among ICT service providers or ICT network providers”.

The Law that is generally applied, not only will it be applied here but throughout the world, is that a telecom provider would have to agree for interconnection with other competitors coming in at an agreed fee. They cannot just refuse not to provide that interconnection to competitors. If there was some dispute, then that would be resolved by the ICT Authority in regards to the fee and also in regards to the interconnection of the infrastructure.

The Speaker: The Second Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. Alden M. McLaughlin, Jr.: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I want to follow up on the response to the final supplementary from the Elected Member for East End.

The Honourable Minister said that the final version of the Bill would not be circulated. I wonder if the Honourable Minister can say when Honourable Members of this House will have the final version of the Bill, and whether he can give me the assurance that we will see it prior to it being placed on the Order Paper, and us being expected to debate it.

The Speaker: Honourable Minister.

Hon. Linford A. Pierson: Mr. Speaker, as far as possible, as I have done in the past, I follow the Standing Orders by giving sufficient time for it to be passed out to Members. Certainly it will be before the Bill is taken by the House and he will have sufficient time to go through it. If that is not possible, I would just as quickly bring it at another meeting, but Members will have time to go through the Bill.

The Speaker: The Elected Member for East End.

Mr. V. Arden McLean: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I am glad that the Minister—maybe I was not asking my question clear enough. I did not really mean the public at large and I do apologise to you but I am thankful for your answer to the Second Elected Member.

Mr. Speaker, the First Elected Member for George Town asked a previous supplementary on the dispute between companies and the interconnection, infrastructure and the likes. I wonder if the Minister can tell us how that is all going to relate to physical infrastructure.

Will the telecommunication providers (be that Cable and Wireless or whomever else may come in) share the physical part of the Islands' infrastructure, be it Caribbean Utilities Company's (CUC) infrastructure with the poles, or, will they be putting down their own? Will the Authority also have responsibility for those sharing agreements, keeping in mind that CUC already has agreements with Cable and Wireless of which I am aware?.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister.

Hon. Linford A. Pierson: Mr. Speaker, normally the Authority would not get involved unless there is a dispute, but in sharing the infrastructure, whether it is cable or a mobile situation such as the AT&T is now sort of looking at, that is a matter that will certainly be decided between the provider and the competitor that is coming in. But this is not something that the ICT Authority would get involved in initially, unless of course there was a dispute in the matter.

The Speaker: Elected Member for East End.

Mr. V. Arden McLean: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. This may be asking the Minister's opinion but I would like to draw a little scenario and then ask him a question. In the instances where CUC and Cable and Wireless are now in an exclusive agreement to provide air space on their poles what would happen in the case where another provider comes in and wants to go into an agreement with CUC to work within that space for telecommunication? Would the Authority get in the discussion between Cable and Wireless on their exclusive agreement and the new provider?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister.

Hon. Linford A. Pierson: Mr. Speaker, I am assuming that the Honourable Member is considering the process of after-deregulation and not at this point in time with Cable and Wireless having an exclusive agreement. However, if it is after the liberalisation process kicks in, hopefully in September, as I mentioned earlier, this is standard not just will it be in the Cayman Islands but throughout the world where the incumbent or the provider in place would share interconnection with others. Only if there is a dispute would this matter come to the ICT Authority. It is standard that the provider in place would share the air space, or whatever, with the competitor that is coming in, whether this is a situation with Cable and Wireless and CUC, or just with Cable and Wireless alone.

The Speaker: I will allow two more supplementaries.
The Member for East End.

Mr. V. Arden McLean: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. With that exclusive agreement that currently exist between Cable and Wireless and CUC to operate and utilise Caribbean Utilities Company's infrastructure, if the Minister then can tell us: -

(1) Would he agree that exclusive agreements in the deregulation of the telecommunication industry certainly be anti-competitive, and

(2) If Government would allow those exclusive agreements to use the infrastructure to remain in place?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister.

Hon. Linford A. Pierson: Mr. Speaker, I would like to answer my Honourable friend but I would rather not speculate at this point in time.

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Thank you. When I was asking the Minister about the ICT Authority having some type of remit with regards pricing and the Minister's answer was speaking to fees that would have to be collected by the Authority, what I was really referring to at that time was actual charges that would be levied by the various service providers as a matter of them doing business at a competitive level. Would the Authority at any time be dealing with any prices, for instance, deciding if this price was too high, et cetera? I think the Minister mentioned, regarding anyone with anti-competitive practices under charging just to run other competitors out of business. However, on the other side of the coin will there be any situation where the Authority will be able to say, 'Well, this price for the service that is being provided is too high for the customer'.

The Speaker: Honourable Minister.

Hon. Linford A. Pierson: Mr. Speaker, I was trying to listen to two people at the same time but I believe I might have understood the gist of the Honourable Member's question. Could he just repeat whether he was in fact talking about the leasing arrangement for interconnection. [Inaudible response] Yes, Mr. Speaker, I think I got the gist of the Honourable Member's question. There will not be any price controls, but the ICT Authority will ensure, as I mentioned earlier, that there is no price-gouging or predatory pricing – that things are kept within competitive bounds. That will be the job of the ICT Authority.

The Speaker: I will allow a follow up. First Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Thank you. I understand what the Minister has just said and I am trying to get it pinpointed—because perhaps it is difficult to deal with it at this level at this time. The Minister said that there will be no price control but that the Authority will ensure that there is no pricing-gouging on the one hand, or predatory pricing on the other hand. Now I am trying to determine what the Authority will be using as a rule of thumb to strike that balance to determine what is within and what levels will go beyond either way.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister.

Hon. Linford A. Pierson: Mr. Speaker, the ICT Authority will be comprised of individuals who are experienced and knowledgeable in the telecommunication business. And they will have this necessary technical information available to guide them in deciding whether prices are too high or too low.

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for George Town.

Question No. 17

No. 17: Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts to ask the Honourable Minister responsible for Agriculture, to give an update on the restructuring plans for the Farmer's Co-Op.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Health Services, District Administration and Agriculture.

Hon. Gilbert A. McLean: Mr. Speaker, following on the recent approval by Finance Committee to restore Government's loan guarantee on behalf of the Farmer's Co-Op to its previous level of $150,000, the Co-Op is now finalising arrangement with its bank to convert a portion of its current liabilities into long-term debt. This will make funds more readily available in order to pay farmers on a more timely basis for goods supplied.

The Co-Op, with the assistance of the Ministry responsible for Agriculture, is also currently in negotiation with the Civil Aviation Authority for a long-term lease of property on which the Farmer's Market is located. Such a lease will put the Co-Op in a position to more easily access capital from commercial lending agencies, and will facilitate the further development of the site to take advantage of new business opportunities.

The Chairman of the Board of Management has already indicated that the Co-Op is prepared to move ahead with plans to construct a number of stalls on the Farmer's Market compound. These stalls will be leased to private individuals or groups for the sale of, for example, local handicrafts, home-made preserves and plants. Starting initially as a Friday/Saturday market, the long-term goal is to develop the Farmer's Market site into a truly National Market place and an attraction to residents and visitors alike.

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for George Town.

Supplementaries

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Can the Minister state what would be the current liabilities at present of the Farmer's Co-Op?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister.

Hon. Gilbert A. McLean: Mr. Speaker, at this time I cannot state what the current liabilities are, but I think they are indeed high—since I had the opportunity to briefly look over a file related to this matter which was part of the Ministry for which the Honourable Member was responsible only recently. It is quite a large sum and it is a matter that was being dealt with then, in an attempt to have it resolved. And certainly I will be following up on it.

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Thank you. Just to quickly say to the Minister – and I will turn it into a question – that the reason I asked him that question is because the answer speaks to the loan guarantee on behalf of The Farmer's Co-Op, bringing it back up to its previous level of $150,000. It is now finalising arrangements with its bank to convert a portion of its current liabilities into long-term debt. Point being that portion with whatever is available on the $150,000 facility is not (unless something drastic has happened in a very short period of time) a significant portion of that liability.

So, understanding that that is the case and agreeing with what the Minister said, the question is . . .

. Even if this were to happen, it will really not make a significant amount of funds more readily available in order to pay the farmers on a more timely basis and this has been a very serious problem. Can the Minister say if there are any other significant plans which would allow for this to really be the case? Because, while I appreciate that he has just stepped in there, the Minister is answering the question based on the information that is being provided.

The truth is, one might really misinterpret the answer the way it is. It might be interpreted to say that the problem will be solved and it truly will not. So, I am asking if there is anything else the Minister might be aware of to deal with that situation?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister.

Hon. Gilbert A. McLean: Mr. Speaker, to my knowledge there is no additional amount and I have seen where there was concern in the past about this situation. Truly it is something which has to be resolved whereby the entity of The Farmer's Co-Op will have to come in line with some sort of proper business practice. Only then could one realistically try to find a real solution. I have heard what the Member has said and in regard to the $150,000 it is also my understanding that this will not necessarily go very far.

The Speaker: First Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Thank you. I have known it to be a fact that previously The Farmer's Co-Op was losing significant sums of money on a monthly basis. Can the Minister state if there is information available that tells what the position is now with regards to its operational status? Is it still operating at a deficit? And if so, does he have any idea what that recurring amount is?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister.

Hon. Gilbert A. McLean: Mr. Speaker, at this point in time I do not have available the information as to what is the deficit of The Farmer's Co-Op, but I could attempt to get such information and make it available to the Member.

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I will be very careful not to speak too long on this matter, but I consider it a very important one for a specific reason. I certainly trust that the Minister will not misinterpret my pointed questioning for anything else but trying to bring about awareness within this Legislative Assembly so that Members might have an appreciation. That we can all put our minds at it to try to assist because it is going to need that type of effort.

The plans that are outlined in the substantive answer regarding the stalls are good plans. I believe that the quicker they can get to that point, the better the chances are for The Farmer's Co-Op to operate the market without having to do so on a deficit basis.

While it is necessary to pay off some of the bills, using funds from this facility—which is being restored by Finance Committee to its original $150,000 so that the farmers can become more current with the supplies that they bring—I am wondering whether or not the funds for the stalls project will also be used from this amount, or will it be done in another fashion with the stalls remaining as another pipe drain.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister.

Hon. Gilbert A. McLean: Mr. Speaker, I could not accurately answer the Member as to how much of this money will be used to pay outstanding bills to farmers – which I understand there are some – and how far they propose to use some of those funds to build the stalls. I understand that the plans, which I have seen would require about $15,000 to erect them. So, that not being such a substantial amount compared to the $150,000, I am not sure where they really want to go in that regard.

The Speaker: First Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Thank you. Could the Minister give an undertaking to try to make that determination with a view to ensure that is the way it is handled; that they do have sufficient funds to see that project through rather than to be with it on paper and not being able to fund it in a short period of time.

The Speaker: Honourable Minister.

Hon. Gilbert A. McLean: Mr. Speaker, I am advised that the Co-op proposes to take $15,000 out of that amount to do the stalls.

The Speaker: Elected Member for East End.

Mr. V. Arden McLean: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I think we all know that The Farmer's Co-Op has been losing money for many years and we have tried everything possible with it, or thereabouts. In talking with many of the Members they recognise it but they believe they need to expand it as a business. I wonder if the Minister can tell us if any consideration to assist The Farmer's Co-Op with the opportunity to spread its wings will be given, for instance, to set up little juice stalls at the new Turtle Farm, the rotunda on the Dock and passenger landing, the Pedro St. James, et cetera. This would promote the Caymanian way of life and its products, because I believe tourists come to this country to see what we are as Caymanians.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister.

Hon. Gilbert A. McLean: Mr. Speaker, consideration has been given to what the Honourable Member for East End said, and it is my understanding that that is the purpose these stalls, at least some of them, would serve to allow things like that to come together. That is why the decision has been taken that these are necessary. As I said in the substantive answer, it would become a truly national market place for attraction for residents and visitors alike. I think this is what the Honourable Member is thinking about from what he has said and that is one of the purposes that the stalls would serve.

The Speaker: Elected Member for East End continuing.

Mr. V. Arden McLean: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I thank the Minister for that answer but in addition to those on site, as I understand the substantive answer, I was expanding it a little bit and wondering if consideration has been given to putting stalls, for instance, at the new Turtle Farm or at Pedro St. James, The Botanic Park, the rotunda on the Dock, and the new proposed tourist development dock, et cetera, and decentralising it so that tourists and residents alike can enjoy it.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister.

Hon. Gilbert A. McLean: Mr. Speaker, since I have been assigned responsibility for this subject I have been told that a request was made by the Farmer's Market to do something like this, if I remember correctly, at the Dock. For some strange reason I understand that approval was not given. I gave an undertaking that I would speak with the proper authorities on this to find out why such a thing could not be, and to look into the possibilities of the Farm assisting in that regard for the promotion of the produce and juices the Member speaks about.

The Speaker: The Elected Member for North Side.

Ms. Edna M. Moyle: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I wonder if the Honourable Minister could tell the House if a proper accounting system is now set up at the Farmer's Market.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister.

Hon. Gilbert A. McLean: Mr. Speaker, I do not know how proper a system it is, but I am informed that there have been improvements in the accounting system there. And it is something that I will take a very keen interest in because I have seen a report from the Auditor General, for example, which has noted that it is very important, and I would certainly not recommend to Government nor to this Honourable House for continuing funds where there is no proper accounting system in place.

The Speaker: If there is no further supplementaries, at this time we will take the luncheon break and the House will resume at 2.30 pm.

Proceedings suspended at 12.47 pm

Proceedings resumed at 2.49 pm

[Madam Speaker in the Chair]

STATEMENTS BY MEMBERS OF THE GOVERNMENT

The Speaker: I have received no notice of any statements for this Sitting.

GOVERNMENT BUSINESS

Debate on the Throne Speech delivered by His Excellency the Governor, Mr. Peter J. Smith, Friday, 15 February 2002

(Continuation of debate thereon)

The Speaker: The Honourable Second Elected Member for the district of George Town.

Point of Procedure Regarding Reply to Throne Speech

Mr. Alden M. McLaughlin, Jr.: Madam Speaker, a point of procedure.

The Speaker: Certainly.

Mr. Alden M. McLaughlin, Jr.: Madam Speaker, during Friday I believe you indicated just before the Member of East End rose that if no other Member wished to speak you would call upon the Leader of Government Business to exercise his right of reply. I have done a bit of research on this matter and had some discussions with my colleagues and we would ask for a ruling on this point which I will shortly make. I think it is important for the benefit of all of us in this Honourable House that we understand this procedure.

As I understand it, there is no motion on the floor of this Honourable House. What transpired on Friday, 15 February 2002 was that His Excellency the Governor delivered the Throne Speech. The Leader of Government Business then rose and moved a motion for the House to record its grateful thanks to His Excellency the Governor for the address, and a further resolution that the debate on the address be deferred. As that particular motion was moved and voted upon, therefore, there is no motion currently on the floor of the House to which, in my respectful submission, the Leader of Government Business has any right to reply.

Obviously he can speak to the Motion in the same way as all other Members of this Honourable House, but I believe it is an important question which needs to be resolved because the right to reply is something that is given to the mover of a motion and the mover of the motion is necessarily the last person to speak. My submission is that in these circumstances the Leader of Government Business does not have a right to reply.

The Speaker: Thank you.

Honourable Member what I propose to do is to allow the Member for East End to continue his debate. He has about 15 minutes remaining, after which I will take a short suspension to give the matter some consideration and make my ruling immediately thereafter.

Member for East End, please continue. As I have indicated you have 15 minutes remaining.

Last Friday we had a point of order which I should wish if you would commence your debate and clarify that point so that I can make a ruling on that particular point, as I believe you wanted some time to search your places of abode to get verification of the statement of that which you sought to make during your last debate. So, if you would so continue.

Mr. V. Arden McLean: Thank you, Madam Speaker. I trust that the clarification will not be taken as part of my time. Is that my understanding?

The Speaker: That is correct. I have done the same for the Second Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. V. Arden McLean: Thank you, Madam Speaker. When we adjourned on Friday there was a point of order raised by the Second Elected Member for Cayman Brac on clarification, and I said that I would search my records to see if I found the statement. Unfortunately, I did not find the statement but I do recall that the Minister for Tourism did say at some stage during the previous year that there was a proposal to build a dock in East End. If it was not a statement (which I cannot confirm through a statement), as the Order Paper makes provisions for, I do believe then that it might have been during an answer to a substantive question or a supplementary. If the Second Elected Member for Cayman Brac chooses to confirm that then maybe we can clarify it from that position.

The Speaker: Honourable Member for the districts of Cayman Brac and Little Cayman.

Mr. Lyndon L. Martin: Madam Speaker, the Member for East End on Friday said there was a statement made in the Honourable House which would have been brought under Standing Order 30. There has been no statement provided by him, or in checking the records of the Legislative Assembly, no such statement could be found. I would then invite the Member to withdraw that statement from his contribution to the Throne Speech, if that is pleasing to your ruling. Thank you.

The Speaker: Honourable Member for the district of East End. Do you wish to continue on this?

Mr. V. Arden McLean: Yes, Madam Speaker. Thank you. While I may have said that it was a statement made under the provisions made on the Order Paper for the Ministers of Government to make statements, that does not necessarily mean that a statement was not made. While it may not have been made under that provision, a particular statement was made in this Honourable House concerning a proposal to build a dock in East End. So much so that I recall the Minister saying that the Member for East End would be apprised of the situation. Madam Speaker, it was a statement by the Minister.

The Speaker: Honourable Member, my ruling would be as follows:

Because it is a statement of fact that has been contested, it is my view that the onus falls on your good self to supply evidence of the same. Opportunity has been given for you to do that and, unfortunately, for whatever reason, you have been unable to come up with factual evidence. In the circumstances I would ask you to withdraw that, but I should also bring to your attention Standing Order 31 which gives provision to you with the leave of the presiding officer to make a personal explanation if in the future you would find such evidence.

Mr. V. Arden McLean: Thank you, Madam Speaker. I will research and find it, be it through questions or otherwise.

The Speaker: And the withdrawal was another part of the request.

Mr. V. Arden McLean: Yes, Madam Speaker, for now I will.

The Speaker: Honourable Member, you should know me well enough that I will not accept a conditional withdrawal. It must be an absolute withdrawal and that is what I am expecting from any Member. If there is going to be a withdrawal it must be absolute, otherwise it does not constitute a withdrawal. So I would ask you to so do please.

Mr. V. Arden McLean: Thank you, Madam Speaker, and I do.

The Speaker: Thank you. Please continue with your debate.

Mr. V. Arden McLean: Madam Speaker, the Minister for Tourism looks like he wants to get your attention.

The Speaker: Are you saying that the Minister has a point of order?

Mr. V. Arden McLean: I do not know, Madam Speaker. He was saying something and I thought there was . . .

The Speaker: Honourable Member, under the Standing Orders he can only do so with your leave, if it is on a point of elucidation under Standing Order 34 (b) or under Standing Order 34 (a) if he has a point of order. And I have not had any formal application for either of those Standing Orders to be implemented. So please continue.

Mr. V. Arden McLean: Thank you, Madam Speaker. As I move on with the final piece of time allotted to me I would like to briefly touch on an area that brought some contention on Friday, and that was during my debate on the Constitutional Review. I understand that the Constitutional Review is yet to be completed but when I spoke of rumours that is what I meant—rumours on the street. Madam Speaker, the Minister for Tourism, during that time, alluded to taking me out before 2004.

Point of Order

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: Madam Speaker, on a point of order.

The Speaker: Please state the point of order Honourable Leader.

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: Madam Speaker, the Member is misleading the House. What I said when they raised this issue of a 5-year term—and I want to state for the record that the UDP has not made any such statement—we would not want to wait for the five years (extra year) 2005 to face him because I intend to take him out by 2004. That is when the election is . . . 2004. They cannot read anything else into that.

The Speaker: I take the point of order with the cognisance that it was just stated, and as it was previously stated and it is not my view or intention to do anything more than at a general election. Please continue.

Mr. V. Arden McLean: Thank you, Madam Speaker. Can I then read from the Hansard of this Honourable House of the 22 February 2002?

The Speaker: If it is relating back to the point that I just ruled on then I will not allow it as I have made my ruling. If it is a new aspect then you can continue on that basis.

Mr. V. Arden McLean: Thank you, Madam Speaker. It is related, therefore I cannot read it. I wanted to read what the Minister said on that particular day regarding the discussion we just had. Nevertheless I am here to represent the people of East End and in the larger community of the Cayman Islands.

When I elected to run in politics no one pushed me; I did that all on my own. Madam Speaker, the people of East End chose me over two other candidates, and during my tenure, which is four years, I will represent the people of the district of East End and the greater Cayman Islands to the best of my ability. And at the end of the day it will be the people of East End who decide that I am not worthy and they will remove me; that will be left up to them. By the help of my good Lord I will be here until 2004. So when this country has to put up with the UDP until 2004, the UDP will have to understand that they have to put up with me until 2004: that is how it is going to stay. That is the arrangement that we all made with the people of this country and I am not going to change that. The people will change that. Regardless of the threats made against me, I am here to stay until I contest the next general elections in this country—my country—my district of East End.

Madam Speaker, I went on to Caypolitics this morning and I saw an article concerning the same matter and there were many replies to it.

Madam Speaker, I turn to the press. The responsibility of the press in this country or any country is to disseminate information. When we all elect to go into politics we do it knowing quite well that we want to be elected. Once elected, we must control our conduct: if we do not, it is the responsibility of the press to disseminate it. The press must also remember that it must practise responsible journalism. If the press makes a factual statement of what I have said, then I can blame no one for it. That is the situation, Madam Speaker.

In the last few minutes of my 15 minutes I would like to draw the attention to the delivery of the Throne Speech. While it was a longer speech than the previous year, I do not believe a lot of comfort was found in it by the people of this country. I do not know why the Chamber was not overcrowded again this year with people in anticipation of the Throne Speech, but it was very evident that something was wrong, because there were only a few residents in this Honourable Chamber. It was not very exciting. I understand that the Governor was a little under the weather, the flu I think. But the 'meat of the matter' in the Throne Speech did not give our people a lot to look forward to for the next year. We should have been addressing areas that the people are concerned about; specifically what we are going to do about the economy and carrying our people forward.

The UDP is responsible for the Throne Speech and it is their Throne Speech regardless of whether or not they try to get out of it by saying that the Governor delivered it. It is the policies of the UDP that the Governor delivered. It is the policy of the Government that the Governor delivered to the people of this country. And it was not and it did not have any future for our country. To say the very least, it was bland. But the UDP must put this country on course. Let us see what direction they have for our country.

I know that other Members of the UDP will now be getting up to reply; I await their reply. I say to this country that there will always be an alternative to what we have and we are talking about 2004. I would just like to let the country know, that we the Opposition will be—for the rest of our term, the Government in waiting—defending our people and we will be delivering it in a respectful manner.

I thank you and I now sit and await other debates from the UDP, and certainly I subscribe to the old cliché: 'If you cannot take it, you should not give it'.

Condolence

The Speaker: Thank you, Honourable Member from the district of East End. Before taking the break I should wish to inform all Honourable Members that I have just been told by the Honourable First Official Member that the mother of His Excellency the Governor who was ailing for some time has passed away in the United Kingdom at 7 p.m. yesterday. His Excellency has asked that all legislators be informed, and I am sure that all Honourable Members would wish for me, on behalf of this Honourable Parliament, to express our very deepest and sincerest sympathy to His Excellency the Governor and his family. May the God of comfort and peace be ever near to him during this time of great loss.

I shall now suspend for 15 minutes.

Proceedings suspended at 3.12 pm

Proceedings resumed at 4.03 pm

¹Speaker's Ruling on Point of Procedure regarding Reply to Throne Speech

The Speaker: Please be seated.

Members would recall that before we took the break I was asked by the Second Elected Member from the district of George Town to give a ruling on a submission that he had made. There is, in my respectful mind, no question that any Member may speak more than once, regardless of what view is taken as to whether or not there is a Motion before this Honourable House upon which the debate proceeds. Standing Order 33 would deal with this position, if there is no motion that seems to be reflected in the practice, otherwise the mover of the motion would have a right to reply. The issue, therefore, is not whether anyone may speak more than once; it is clear that any Member may only speak once. The issue, therefore, is whether it has been the consistent practice of this Honourable House which would allow for a representative of the Government to wind up the debate on the Throne Speech. This cannot be said without further examination of the Hansards, which I propose over a ten-year period. It is, therefore, my intention, with the assistance of the Clerk of this Honourable House to further research the matter in order to enable me to make a much more informed ruling if appropriate.

Does any other Member wish to speak? Does any other Member wish to speak? Last call.

The Second Elected Member for the district of West Bay.

Mr. Rolston M. Anglin: Thank you, Madam Speaker. It is good to have you back in the Chamber. I know you are not feeling well but I will make sure that from now until the hour of interruption that I do nothing to cause you any more duress.

As we look forward to yet another year, we are indeed in the middle of a recession within our country, and as a Member of the Government Bench the arrow is clearly pointed to us to implement strategies, policies and programmes that the country would need to find its way out of the recession. But while all of that is going on there still is looming over us many other major challenges.

Not too long ago all of us were out on the campaign trail trying to convince persons to vote for us; to vote for change; to vote for a new and dynamic way in which the country will be led. Madam Speaker, I did not meet many persons out there who did not feel that the country on many fronts was not in the best position. People had complaints about the financial state of the country – health services, education, the international initiative, the state of the economy at the time, immigration, policing.

I think it is fair to say that most of us also campaigned by promising the people that we would make the tough decisions. That while we recognised and acknowledged that much work needed to go in to making these Cayman Islands our home a better place to live, a better place to do business, that we would make tough decisions that would ensure that the things that had been ignored were not addressed as thoroughly as we may have thought and the public may have thought necessary, that all those matters would be addressed.

Madam Speaker, the one thing that I think all of us do recognise and would agree on is that when we go along that train of thought, that is, that we are going to make the country a better place to live, a better place to raise our children, a better place to do business, that we would stand ready to make those tough decisions. However, we also know how things are.

First of all, there is never a solution that is going to please everyone on any issue. Today, the United Democratic Party Government could present a new policy on immigration. Not everyone will be pleased. In fact, it goes without saying that that is an issue that will certainly cause much public debate; that is an issue that will cause many in the society to feel that what is being done is not in the best interest, currently or in the long-term of the country. I used that as an example, Madam Speaker.

We can look at many other decisions that need to be made in this country and the one thing that we have managed to do quite successfully over the years is to push back major decisions. Somehow we seem to believe that unless everything is exactly the way we want it; unless everything is exactly within what we believe to be right that nothing should be done.

Madam Speaker, that feeling is out there in the larger community. So, when you sit here and hold office and the pressures come to bear, one can quickly see why when it comes to a lot of the fundamental issues that have faced this country for so many years now, there has not been any real attempt to do something different; to be bold; to be creative; to do the very things that you campaigned upon. There is always that fear among politicians, because they know that within the next few years – a few short months – you will be back to the polls, back to the campaign season facing those same people.

I recognise and I accept the position that I am in, that is, to be a Member of the ruling Party, the Party that has the majority and therefore has to make these tough decisions. The one thing that I can say is that we are not going to back down from our responsibilities because of the fear of going to the polls in 2004. We will do what we feel is in the best interest, long-term, for the people of these Islands. We want to leave behind a legacy of well thought-out decision-making. We want to ensure that there is in train a legacy of making decisions. As a government, once you have made that decision there are those who are going to be for and those who are against.

It is from that exercise and from those dynamics that we build. There is no right decision. Who is it right to? There are critical issues that face us as a community; critical issues which we must face, that we must start working on and the first step in that journey is to make a decision and take a stand. That is what the people sent us here to do and they have given us a four-year contract in which to do it. And four years is not a long time.

We must continue to foster in these Chambers, and in the broader community, a sense of logic, a sense of point counterpoint, a sense of tangible measurable outcomes. And all those can only be reached through the decision-making process. Madam Speaker, within these Chambers we will have a Government and an Opposition and one of the things that I believe, and the Government believes, is the whole notion of coming here and debating issues. However, within the realm of the reality of politics within the Cayman Islands, issues often get pushed aside and personalities come into play.

Madam Speaker, it is healthy to have Members of the Opposition get up and give logic to why they disagree with the Government's position. It is healthy to have Members of the Opposition get up and give tangible alternatives to the Government's position because that makes all of us better. That makes the Government know that once they come to these Chambers with a decision that decision had better be well thought out, because we know the Opposition will make counterpoint—propose other ideology that somehow seems more preferable to the Government's.

I have listened to the debate so far and it is my humble submission that what we have continuing on within the Cayman Islands is that legacy of politics where it is personality based and not issue based. It is not presenting yourself as a real alternative because you have better ideas but it is presenting yourself as the Government-in-waiting simply based on personalities. 'I do not like him on the Government side because of x, y, z' Personal things, usually. Not coming up with real alternatives to the country.

Madam Speaker, this is something that I have spoken of in this Honourable House before. I have said it in different ways. For example, we just came through an election in 2000, some fifteen months ago, and no one ran on an economic plan, no one ran on a real economic policy for the country.

So now that the economic growth of the 1990s is over, the economic growth that mirrored the economic success of the United States is over, we find ourselves once again in a situation that is not unlike some twelve years where the economy was down and development was relatively low. And so whereas in the 1990s you could get away from the fundamentals because things were booming, Cayman was 'boom town' and when there is a 'boom town' people tend to forget some of the other issues and problems because the money is circulating. Now we find ourselves in a situation where we have to try to help turn the country around. But we cannot do it alone, nor can we do it without money.

Government by nature is not business and so it is quite easy to say that Government should be run like a business. The United Democratic Party believes that in Government endeavours we should employ government principles to derive efficiencies to make the Civil Service as efficient as possible. But by definition Government cannot be a business. How can you say that policing is business? How can you say that our education system is going to be business? There are certain services that Government must provide and there is a cost attached to providing those services.

As we move through the next few months, Madam Speaker, it is going to be critical that along with the Government policies we continue to build and forge relationships with the private sector. Indeed it is through their spending, that jobs are created. Jobs put money in people's pockets and put bread on people's tables. It is spending that will allow us as a small Island community to be able to get out of this economic recession.

Let us not kid ourselves: a lot is dependent on what happens to larger, more industrialised countries, which provide us with the investors into this Island. So, the very success of the United States to get out of the recession is going to go a long way in helping us here in the Cayman Islands.

When we look around at the current situation, not only are economic difficulties being faced by the country, but as I said earlier, there are numerous other matters that the Government is currently working on. For instance, the review of Immigration laws and the review of Immigration policies: we also have to deal with Education and how we are going to forge ahead in that regard. We also have to deal with the re-development of the Islands most popular tourism attraction, the Turtle Farm. We also have the reinvention of the Civil Service that is going on currently; we have to deal with the issue of housing; we also have to deal with the Civil Service review and the results of that and all intertwined in this is the impending report of the constitutional commissioners.

So, for a country that has traditionally been very conservative, where we as a people have always looked for the status quo to remain (because let us face the reality, we do not face change very well) we may not like our present position but as soon as change is recommended the outcry starts. We find ourselves in this peculiar quandary where the Island has grown by leaps and bounds; our population has gone through an 'artificial insemination' that is unlike most other countries; we have grown dramatically by the importation of labour; and we have the social issues that go along with that. Now we find ourselves in the situation where we must make the decisions and we must move ahead as a people.

READING BY THE HONOURABLE SPEAKER OF MESSAGES AND ANNOUNCEMENTS

The Speaker: On behalf of Honourable Members, I wish to express to the Fourth Elected Member for West Bay a very Happy Birthday and also to the Honourable Deputy Leader who I understand celebrated his birthday yesterday.

Honourable Members, we have now reached the hour of interruption and I will call on the Leader of Government Business to move the appropriate adjournment.

ADJOURNMENT

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: Madam Speaker, I move the adjournment of this Honourable House until Wednesday, 27 February, 2002 at 10 am.

The Speaker: Thank you. The question is that this House do now adjourn until Wednesday, 27 February 2002 at 10 am.

All those in favour please say Aye. Those against, No.

Ayes.

The Speaker: The Ayes have it.

At 4.32 pm the House stood adjourned until Wednesday, 27 February 2002, at 10 am.

OFFICIAL HANSARD REPORT
WEDNESDAY
27 FEBRUARY 2002
11.06 AM
Sixth Sitting

The Speaker: I invite the First Elected Member for George Town to grace us with Prayers this morning.

PRAYERS

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Let us pray.

Almighty God, from whom all wisdom and power are derived: We beseech Thee so to direct and prosper the deliberations of the Legislative Assembly now assembled, that all things may be ordered upon the best and surest foundations for the glory of Thy Name and for the safety, honour and welfare of the people of these Islands.

Bless our Sovereign Lady, Queen Elizabeth II; the Queen Mother; Philip, Duke of Edinburgh; Charles, Prince of Wales; and all the Royal family. Give grace to all who exercise authority in our Commonwealth, that peace and happiness, truth and justice, religion and piety may be established among us. Especially we pray for the Governor of our Islands, the Speaker of the Legislative Assembly, Official Members and Ministers of Executive Council and Members of the Legislative Assembly, that we may be enabled faithfully to perform the responsible duties of our high office All this we ask for Thy great Name's sake.

Let us say the Lord's Prayer together: Our Father, who art in Heaven, Hallowed be Thy Name. Thy Kingdom come, Thy will be done on earth as it is in Heaven. Give us this day our daily bread, and forgive us our trespasses, as we forgive those who trespass against us. Lead us not into temptation, but deliver us from evil. For Thine is the Kingdom, the power and the glory, forever and ever. Amen.

The Lord bless us and keep us. The Lord make His face shine upon us and be gracious unto us. The Lord lift up the light of His countenance upon us and give us peace, now and always. Amen.

Proceedings Resumed at 11.09 am

READING BY THE HONOURABLE
SPEAKER OF MESSAGES
AND ANNOUNCEMENTS

Apologies

The Speaker: Please be seated. Proceedings are resumed.

I have received apologies for late attendance from the Second Elected Member for the District of Cayman Brac and Little Cayman due to the illness of his son.

PRESENTATION OF PAPERS
AND OF REPORTS

The Development and Planning (Amendment)
(Height of Buildings) Regulations 2002

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for the Ministry of Planning, Communication, Works and Information Technology.

Hon. Linford A. Pierson: Thank you, Madam Speaker.

I beg to lay on the Table of this Honourable House, The Development and Planning (Amendment) (Height of Buildings) Regulations 2002.

The Speaker: So ordered. Does the Honourable Member wish to speak thereto?

Hon. Linford A. Pierson: Madam Speaker, I will reserve my few remarks until Government Motion 1/02 is being laid on the Table.

The Speaker: Thank you, Honourable Minister.

QUESTIONS TO HONOURABLE
MINISTERS AND OFFICIAL MEMBERS

The Speaker: The Second Elected Member for the district of George Town.

Question No. 18

No. 18: Mr. Alden M. McLaughlin asked the Honourable Third Official Member responsible for the Portfolio of Finance and Economics, As at 31 December 2001, how many of each of the following categories of licences were in existence –

Class "A" Banks and Trust Companies

Class "B" Banks and Trust Companies

Class "A" Insurance

Class "B" Insurance (unrestricted)

Class "B" Insurance (restricted); and

Since the increase in licensing fees provided for by the 2002 Budget, how many licences in each of the categories set out in (a) above have not been renewed?

The Speaker: Before calling on the Honourable Third Official Member, I will call on the Leader of Government Business to move the suspension of Standing Order as we have passed the hour of 11 o'clock.

Suspension of Standing Order 23(7) and (8)

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: Madam Speaker, under Standing Order 78, I move for the suspension of Standing Order 23 (5) for questions to be taken after 11 am.

The Speaker: The question is that Standing Order 23(7) and (8) be suspended in order to allow question time to go beyond the hour of 11.00 am.

All those in favour please say Aye. Those against, No.

Ayes.

The Speaker: The Ayes have it.

Agreed: Standing Order 23(7) and (8) suspended.

The Speaker: The Honourable Third Official Member.

Hon. George A. McCarthy: Madam Speaker, the number of banking, trust and insurance licences in existence as at 31 December 2001 and 20 February 2002 are set out in a tabular form below and reads as follows:-

Type and Class of Licence	Total Number of Licences at 31 December 2001	Total Number of Licences at 20 February 2002
Bank and Trust
Class "A"	31	31
Class "B" unrestricted	386	372
Class "B" restricted	10	9
Total Bank and Trust	427	412
Trusts-unrestricted	55	57
Trusts-restricted	63	64
Total Trust	118	121
Insurance
Class "A"	30	30
Class "B" unrestricted	467	472
Class "B" restricted	76	72
Total Insurance	573	574

Madam Speaker, the number of Class "A" Bank and Trust licences has not changed since 31 December 2001.

Records maintained by the Monetary Authority indicate that 19 Class "B" Bank and Trust licences were cancelled during the period from 1 January to 20 February 2002. These cancellations can be attributed to the following reasons:

- Physical Presence Requirements (Private Banks) - 4 cancellations
- Mergers within the global banking industry - 13 cancellations.

- Cancellation of inactive entities - 2 for a total of 19 cancellations.

None of the cancellations were caused by increases in license fees. Whilst there have been some cancellations since 1 January 2002, new licences have also been granted: four (4) new Class "B" Bank and Trust licences were issued in the period 1 January to 20 February 2002.

In net terms, since the 31 December 2001 the number of Class "B" Bank and Trust licences has declined by 15 - that is, the 19 cancellations mentioned previously less the grant of 4 new licences.

There were no cancellations of Trust licences between 31 December 2001 and 20 February 2002. The number of Trust licences has increased by three (3), from 118 at 31 December 2001 to 121 at 20 February 2002.

The number of Class "A" Insurance licences has not changed since 31 December 2001.

In respect of Class "B" Insurance licences, four (4) Restricted licences and five (5) Unrestricted licences were cancelled; the cancellations can be attributed to the following reasons:

- Revocation - 2 cancellations
- Voluntary Liquidations - 7 cancellations

Whilst five (5) Class "B" Unrestricted Insurance licences were cancelled, 10 new ones were issued in the period 1 January to 20 February 2002.

In net terms, the number of Class "B" Unrestricted Insurance licences has increased by five (5) since 31 December 2001.

Madam Speaker, in conclusion I am pleased to report that, to 20 February 2002, no licences have actually been cancelled because of fee increases.

The Speaker: Thank you, Honourable Member. Are there any supplementaries? If there are no supplementaries, we will move on to the next question.

The Elected Member for East End.

Question No. 19

No. 19: Mr. V. Arden McLean asked the Minister responsible for Education what is the written policy/policies with respect to the award of the "Cayman Scholar" programme.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for Education.

Hon. Roy Bodden: The award will be given once in every calendar year to an applicant who is under 20 years of age and who has graduated from a local high school and who is not currently attending university overseas. The recipient will be known as the Cayman Scholar. The decision of the Education Council is final.

Recipients must fulfil the basic qualifications and requirements to obtain a Government Scholarship.

In addition to academic qualifications as outlined, the following criteria will be taken into account: -

- A superior record in high school, as shown by both grades and scores on academic, aptitude and achievements tests;
- Participation in extra-curricular or community activities that shows evidence of a willingness to be active, involved and committed;
- Leadership ability or potential that has been demonstrated both within and outside the classroom;
- The energy and dedication to complete tasks; personal maturity that leads to self-discipline; and independence of intellect shown in the willingness to explore new ideas;
- The desire to accept, eagerly, new challenges and the drive to succeed in meeting those challenges.

The candidate will defend his/her application at the Education Council.

The award will cover all reasonable costs for up to five years of study, up to a maximum of CI$25,000 per annum.

The chosen institution must be approved by the Education Council and must be ranked at least "highly competitive" or equivalent.

Upon completion of study, the recipient is required to work in the Cayman Islands for at least five years and the Government, or a local non-profit organisation, approved by the Council, has first option to his/her services.

The award will be presented at a special ceremony in keeping with the prestigious nature of this award.

The Speaker: Are there any supplementaries?

The Elected Member for East End.

Supplementaries

Mr. V. Arden McLean: Thank you, Madam Speaker. Can the Minister tell us why were three awards issued last year, and why were they not given in the previous three years?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister of Education.

Hon. Roy Bodden: Madam Speaker . . .

The Speaker: Before so doing, in reflection you obviously can respond to the first part. The second part, in my view, is speculation, in that you have been Minister of a period lesser than the time required in the answer.

Hon. Roy Bodden: Madam Speaker, I can give an answer that I think should satisfy the inquisitiveness of the Member.

The Speaker: Certainly, please proceed.

Hon. Roy Bodden: Madam Speaker, it is my understanding that the Education Council undertook to re-draft the guidelines governing the award of this prestigious scholarship. During that time there was a hiatus of two years when the award was not given because the new guidelines were not ready. That being the case, the Council took the decision so as not to deprive deserving students to make up by awarding the scholarships for 1999, 2000 and 2001, when the guidelines were ready. And the announcement was made so that those students who would have applied, had the normal practice been in place, were not deprived of their abilities to apply.

The Speaker: The Member from the district of East End.

Mr. V. Arden McLean: Thank you, Madam Speaker. I thank the Minister of that explanation. My next question is: In the substantive answer the Minister says that, "The award is given once in every calendar year and the applicant must be under the age of 20 who has graduated from a high school and who is not currently attending university overseas". Can the Minister tell us if the three applicants who were given the scholarship last year were attending university or were they high school graduates?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for Education.

Hon. Roy Bodden: Madam Speaker, let me preface my answer by saying that the Council had revamped the guidelines, and it is now possible for a deserving student attending a university overseas to apply. Of those students who applied last year, one was a recent high school graduate, another was a recent graduate of the Community College, and the third was attending an institution abroad.

The Speaker: The Elected Member for East End.

Mr. V. Arden McLean: Thank you, Madam Speaker. Can I ask the Minister if the revamped guidelines can be presented to this Honourable House?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for Education.

Hon. Roy Bodden: Madam Speaker, it certainly is my intention to table the guidelines, not only for the Cayman Scholar Award, but also the new revamped guidelines for scholarships period. And I look forward to doing so in due course.

The Speaker: I will allow one more supplementary after this one. The Elected Member for East End.

Mr. V. Arden McLean: Thank you, Madam Speaker. Can the Minister tell us when the application criteria were revamped?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister of Education.

Hon. Roy Bodden: Madam Speaker, did I understand the Honourable Member as asking when were they revamped?

The Speaker: That was my understanding.

Hon. Roy Bodden: Madam Speaker, the Education Council went through great pains and took great strides to revamp this. I would say that from my experience, since I assumed the responsibility for the Ministry, about one year the Education Council took to revamp these guidelines. When the committee revamped the guidelines they were brought to the full Education Council for discussion, perusal, constructive criticism. I think we are well nigh on to that stage now where they are finalised and we can distribute them publicly subsequent to laying them on the Table of this Honourable House, and possibly taking them to the Executive Council for Ministers edification.

The Speaker: The Member for East End.

Mr. V. Arden McLean: Thank you. Madam Speaker, my understanding is that they [the guidelines] have not been completed. Not to say that I am against it, but could the Minister say whether or not the criteria given in the answer and laid on the Table was in place when the scholarships were issued? I am just trying to ascertain that.

The Speaker: Honourable Minister of Education.

Hon. Roy Bodden: Madam Speaker, either the Honourable Member does not understand the lingua franca that I am using, or he has a hearing problem. I said that the guidelines are in place and I also said that the new guidelines are almost ready for distribution. When I get them from the Secretary to the Council, I shall be glad to take them through the necessary procedures and lay them on the Table, hopefully, before this Sitting is over.

The Speaker: Madam Clerk.

The Speaker: The Elected Member for East End.

Question No. 20

(Deferred)

No. 20: Mr. V. Arden McLean asked the Minister responsible for Health Services, District Administration and Agriculture, if the Government has given approval to an overseas group called St. Matthew University to open an offshore tertiary facility in the Cayman Islands, and if so, what are the conditions under which it is given?

The Speaker: Honourable Minister responsible for Health Services.

Hon. Gilbert A. McLean: Madam Speaker, Question No. 20, as it deals with Education, is a matter that was referred to the Ministry of Education to the Honourable Minister and he would be responding to the question. I do not know if it is available at this time.

The Speaker: Honourable Minister of Education, would you have need for a deferral of the question?

Hon. Roy Bodden: Madam Speaker, I would appreciate if the House would grant me a deferral since we have received it from my colleague, the Minister of Health and I have been working on the answer but it was not ready to be tendered this morning.

The Speaker: Thank you. The question is that question No. 20, be deferred and set down for another Sitting. Would you please move it Honourable Minister?

Hon. Roy Bodden: Madam Speaker, I respectfully beg to move the Motion that the question which was seconded to the Ministry for which I have responsibility, from the Ministry of Health, be deferred until a later date.

The Speaker: Thank you. The question is that question No. 20 be deferred until a later Sitting.

All those in favour please say Aye. Those against, No.

Ayes.

The Speaker: The Ayes have it.

Agreed: Question No. 20 deferred to a later date.

The Speaker: The Elected Member for the district of East End.

Question No. 21

No. 21: Mr. V. Arden McLean asked the Honourable Minister responsible for Health Services, to give an update on the Nuclear Medical Unit at the George Town Hospital: Who are the principals of the contract/agreement; and what are the conditions of the contract/agreement.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for Health Services.

Hon. Gilbert A. McLean: Madam Speaker, following the approval of the Executive Council, the Ministry of Health entered into a contract with Cayman Heart Institute Ltd on 7 May 2001 for the provision of a nuclear imaging service at the Cayman Islands Hospital, Grand Cayman.

Cayman Heart Institute Ltd is a local company formed by three cardiologists affiliated with Baptist Hospital. To the best of my knowledge, nuclear imaging services are not currently available on the Island.

The contract allows the Cayman Heart Institute to operate in the Hospital rent-free and with no charge for electricity and water. In return Government entitled patients will be seen at a preferential fee. Additionally, in relation to the first 25 patients who receive the service in each calendar month, 5 percent of the fees will be collected by the Health Services and in relation to every other patient, 15 percent of the fee will be collected.

Cayman Heart Institute will make their own payments on telephone bills and for the insurance of equipment against damage or loss.

The Speaker: Are there any supplementaries? If not, that concludes Question Time.

STATEMENTS BY MEMBERS OF THE GOVERNMENT

Progress Made by the Select Committee of the Whole House on Revisions to the Health Insurance Law 1997 and the Health Insurance Regulations 1997

The Speaker: I have received notice of intention to make a statement from the Honourable Minister responsible for Health Services.

Hon. Gilbert A. McLean: Madam Speaker, thank you for allowing me this opportunity to update Members of this Honourable House on the progress being made with revisions to the Health Insurance Law 1997, and the Health Insurance Regulations 1997.

Members will recall that in June last year, I brought a Private Member's Motion requesting that a select committee of all the Members of the Legislative Assembly be set up to look at the problems being experienced with the workings of the Law and Regulations and to make recommendations for their revision. At that time the Honourable Linford Pierson was the Minister responsible for Health, and the former Speaker appointed him to chair the select committee.

Now it has come full circle and I am now the Minister responsible. Notwithstanding that fact, the Select Committee made significant progress under the former Chairman and drafting instructions were sent to Government's Legislative Drafting Department. I expect to bring a White Paper to the Legislative Assembly at the next meeting, which will be sometime in June this year, to invite further feedback on the proposed revisions to the Health Insurance Law and Revisions.

I thank the former Minister of Health for dealing so expeditiously with the Private Member's Motion and I commend him on the progress made by the select committee of the Legislative Assembly, which has been dealing with this matter.

Madam Speaker, at the time that I moved the Private Member's Motion I was not fully aware of the serious financial challenges facing the Government and the Health Services Department in particular. I realised that the fees charged on the Law by the Health Services Department needed to be increased as the gap between revenue and expenditure was too large. Should the fees have remained the same, the country would not be able in the very near future to afford the high quality of health care that we presently enjoy. I would like to draw the attention of Members of this Honourable House to the fact that the increase of fees in January 2002 was applied only to services that had not been increased since 1993

In addition, other services not previously charged for were introduced in the schedule at cost. Hence, there will be no further increase to those services at the next revision of the fee schedule. The focus of the second increase will be to adjust only fees that still need to be brought in line with the costs of providing the service.

Madam Speaker, there is clearly a close relationship between the fees charged by the Government's Health Services and the premiums charged by the approved providers of Health Insurance in the Cayman Islands. However, even without any health fees increases since 1993, there has been a steady climb in health insurance premiums since the Law mandating health insurance coverage came into effect in 1998. At a meeting with the Cayman Association of Health Insurance Providers in early April, I was told that a combination of factors influenced premium increases, and that the industry has recently experienced heavy losses. Of course, since then I have been receiving details of how the insured persons have been affected. In one case that I have seen, the premium has not been increased but the benefits have decreased. In another case I understand, the premiums have doubled.

Looking into the future, if the present situation persists, most persons in the Cayman Islands will not be able to afford health insurance. The high costs of premiums added to the demand by many health care providers for direct payment by the patient, who then has to wait for the health insurance to pay the claim, can severely restrict the disposable income of that person from month to month.

Due to this situation, I will be obtaining expert advice from one of the top accounting firms in these Islands, which will draw on its local and international experience to advise me more precisely on the relationship between health fees and health insurance premiums in the Cayman Islands. The firm will also be advising me on the other factors that may or may not impact health insurance premiums and the administration of health insurance claims.

The Government and people of these Islands must not be held hostage in this situation. Health fees must be increased the second time this year to bring all fees in line with the cost of providing the services. However, I intend to be fully informed as to the impact of the increases on the providers of health insurance before these health fees increases are made. And I shall not leave the door open for health fees increases to create another opportunity for the providers of health insurance to further increase health insurance premiums. This may mean further revision to the Health Insurance Law and Regulations that were not already anticipated by the select committee of the Legislative Assembly on health insurance. Madam Speaker, it is my intention to keep the select committee fully informed with the facts on this.

I wish to end this statement by reminding Members of this Honourable House and their constituents that to pay a health insurance premium each month is an investment in every person's future. Just as many of us put aside funds weekly or monthly for our car and home, we should put aside for the day when we will need to spend huge amounts for traumatic injury and life threatening diseases such as cardiovascular diseases or cancer. This is where health insurance coverage is absolutely necessary. However, we must attain the position where as a rule the person pays his premiums, the health providers accept the insurance and the insurers pay the providers.

I know what we have at present is far from perfect, but it is painful to see the emotional distress in persons who do not have the means to pay when illness strikes without warning. I am committed, and so is the Government, to finding solutions to the present problems being experienced with health insurance because I believe it to be necessary for every person to have one, including those who are presently deemed to be uninsurable. Thank you, Madam Speaker.

The Speaker: Thank you, Honourable Minister.

GOVERNMENT BUSINESS

Debate on the Throne Speech Delivered by His Excellency the Governor, Mr. Peter J. Smith, on Friday, 15 February 2002

(Continuation of debate thereon)

The Speaker: The Second Elected Member from the district of West Bay, continuing his debate on the Throne Speech.

Mr. Rolston M. Anglin: Thank you, Madam Speaker.

The Throne Speech as delivered by His Excellency The Governor, highlighted numerous points and numerous intentions that I believe are noteworthy and that I believe lends to the notion that there is indeed a lot to be excited about here in the Cayman Islands, despite the fact that we are still going through a recession in certain sectors of our economy, mainly within the construction fields. There is a lot to be thankful for and there are a lot of matters that we should eagerly look forward to in the coming year.

Madam Speaker, it seems quite interesting that to date we have had three Members of the Opposition speak and yet there has not been a lot of debate on the points within the Throne Speech. There has not been a lot of debate on what they would do differently. The Member for East End said that they were the Government in waiting, but if that Member is a part of a Government in waiting I would have thought that he would have gone through the Throne Speech and he would have come up with his alternatives. Of course, the Member said that there was nothing in the Throne Speech to be excited about. Maybe it was because when the Member went through, he realised that he could not come up with anything better. Opposition for opposition sake is what this country no longer desires in representation because we have had a real belly full of that so far; opposition for opposition sake.

I would like to go through some of the highlights in this year's Throne Speech. There is going to be an establishment of a Drugs Court to provide the possibility to give some assistance to a problem that is crippling our community. We have so many talented people in this community strung out on drugs. We have so many young people coming through who are going down the wrong path, and that for me is an exciting development.

This year it is intended that the Monetary Authority will become fully independent, which is a key component to our regulatory regimen here in the Cayman Islands, and that will give us the credibility that we need; another step toward the credibility that we continue to build in the international financial arena. The financial services industry is critical to the future of this country, but I suppose that is nothing to be excited about.

Education is the bedrock of any society. There is a proposed new Education Law that is going to be disseminated to the public in April of this year. Maybe that is not cause for excitement for the Elected Member for East End. But it causes excitement for me because his constituents, just like mine, are all Caymanians and education is the key to the way forward for us as a community. Maybe the Government in waiting should have given us their alternative but they have none.

Over the next three years the Ministry of Education is going to promote and support school improvement and do some other important things, but the one that really catches my eye is, enhancing the provision of technical and vocational training, something that we desperately need in this country. We need to ensure that when our children come out of school they have a tangible skill to take to the workforce! Not simply coming out of a system that is primarily geared towards academics when in fact, most people do not go that way. That is a fact of life. But maybe that does not give any cause for excitement.

We (the Government) are excited. I am so excited I could not get the word out as to the notion of technical and vocational training. But maybe the Member for East End does not place an emphasis on this. He may not see it as important so it was not exciting.

We have before us the report of the Committee of Inquiry into the Causes of Social Breakdown and Violence Among Youth in the Cayman Islands. I was honoured to be a member of that committee. That committee was chaired by the Dr. the Honourable Frank McField, the new Minister responsible for Youth. I think it is highly appropriate that the person who was chosen to be the Chairman of that committee is now the Minister to see its implementation. If he was chosen to be the Chairman of such an important committee to do this critical research that provides a basis for the way forward in regards to our youth policy in this country, which naturally will dovetail into the education policy of the country.

Is it not poetic justice that he now is the Minister responsible for its implementation? However, according to the Opposition that is not anything to be excited about. That same Minister, the Honourable Frank McField, is forging ahead at promoting a self-help and skills development and staff is focusing on assisting the establishment of a learning centre in East End within the first quarter of this year. The Elected Member for East End said that it is not anything to be excited about. Maybe he should bring that up at his next public meeting; maybe he should tell his people what his alternative is since he is the Government in waiting.

Point of Order

Mr. V. Arden McLean: Madam Speaker, on a point of order.

The Speaker: Elected Member from the district of East End, please state your point of order.

Mr. V. Arden McLean: Thank you, Madam Speaker. I did not say that it was not exciting; I made it quite clear in this Honourable House in my debate that it was not the Government doing it, it was the members of the community and I was assisting them.

The Speaker: Second Elected Member for the district of West Bay, could you clarify what you just said? Are you referring to the general comment that there was nothing in the Throne Speech that was exciting or to a specific comment?

Mr. Rolston M. Anglin: Madam Speaker, I was referring to the comment made when the Member was ending his debate that there was nothing in the Throne Speech. He also went on to say that there was no one in the galleries because there was nothing exciting in the Throne Speech.

The Speaker: Thank you, Honourable Member.

It is my recollection that a general statement was made at the conclusion of having the debate and it would not be a point of order because of that all encompassing statement.

Please continue, Member for West Bay.

Mr. Rolston M. Anglin: Thank you, Madam Speaker. That same Member (the Elected Member for East End) is the one who gets up in this House and casts aspersions all the time. He is the one who is always talking about, 'Oh if you can give it, then you have to take it'. I can remember not too long ago he stood there talking as if he were threatening someone on the Government Bench. All I can say is, if you can criticize, then take criticism.

We have the possibility of liberalising telecommunications in this country. Nothing has held back this country from forging ahead as an international player in e-business and e-commerce, nothing more has held us back than the cost of telecom. This is a known fact. We also know that within our major industries here in the Cayman Islands, especially within the financial services industry, the cost of telecommunication services are incredible when you look at the cost it takes for offices to have the dedicated Bloomberg Information System lines, to have their dedicated lines on Reuters for those who need dedicated links to their home offices for accounting and record-keeping purposes. Telecommunications are an incredibly high cost within this Island. It is a critically high component of the expense structure of persons doing business within the Cayman Islands.

So, Madam Speaker, it gives me great excitement that there is at least the possibility that we will have liberalisation within this market. As we have seen in other countries, liberalisation, without a proper regulatory framework, often leads to oligarlistic practices whereby you go from one exclusive service provider to two or three and they themselves collude to fix prices. This is the reason the Government is taking the holistic approach and is coming forward with an information and communications technologies office that will allow us, through the Information and Communications Technology Authority, to be able to grapple with the challenges that liberalisation will post. It is not as simple as a lot of people think. Just because you do not have a monopoly anymore does not mean that a lot of the benefits such as pricing and better service will follow. If the new entrance into the marketplace simply do what the old player used to do we are no better off. So that is why the United Democratic Party Government is taking this approach. That gives me great cause for excitement. I think if we were to go and call the financial controllers and accountants in the major companies within this Island, they would all tell us how expensive telecoms are.

We see that there has been and there continues to be a restructuring within the Department of Tourism, US operations. There has been a downsizing of staff members from 50 to 35 persons. This is what the country wants. The country wants an effective and an efficient Government bureaucracy; they want one that is responsive to their needs; they want one that does not continue to drain the resources and the proportions that it currently does. That is also cause for excitement.

It is easy to get up on the Opposition side and talk about people and talk about personalities—but about the alternatives? If you are going to be the Government in waiting, there must be alternatives. It is easy to go along and say, 'Oh, no more development in the Cayman Islands. We do not need any more development in the Cayman Islands'. It is easy to say, but as I am sure you are well aware, there is a very important thing here in Cayman called foreign exchange.

The foreign exchange of the Cayman Islands dollar to other currencies, especially the US dollar . . . the rate of exchange is critical right now. We have a strong dollar but what creates a strong dollar? Simply because it says Cayman Islands on it? Or is it because it is printed by the Monetary Authority of the Cayman Islands Government? No. Everything has supply and demand and the foreign exchange rate is the price of the Cayman Islands dollar. That is equivalent to what Foster's Food Fair would charge for a can of soda.

It is key that we recognise that the demand for the Cayman Islands dollar is driven predominantly by outside influences. There is a demand for Cayman and once there is a demand for Cayman there is a demand for the Cayman Islands dollar. When tourists come here and spend money, whether off the cruise ship or via air arrivals, that creates demand for the Cayman Islands dollar. When persons come here and seek to do developments such as building hotels, which create demand for the Cayman Islands dollar, that is what maintains our foreign exchange rate.

We have international firms within the financial services industry here. They are located here, they pay fees to the Cayman Islands Government. That creates demand for the Cayman Islands dollar. So when the United Democratic Party Government says that we are going to establish a Cayman Islands investment bureau and in conjunction with that a Cayman Islands growth management board, that is cause for excitement. The people of this country have cried out for years for sustainable growth and development and it is that same development that causes the demand for the Cayman Islands dollar that maintains the foreign exchange rate. We have a very interesting situation here within these Chambers. There seems to be an information vacuum on the Opposition side. I do not hear any of them talking about these important issues.

I can certainly tell the country that there are people here on the Government side who understand these issues and who have practiced in the fields of these issues; things like foreign exchange. Madam

Speaker, how do you maintain stability through a foreign exchange policy that is sound? Development is a key component and it is easy to get up and criticise every development that is coming through. However, you know what? It is not criticising the development because they are against the development; it is because they do not want to see the development under the watch of the United Democratic Party Government. How selfish! This is a benefit to the people of the Cayman Islands. It is important for all of our children and grandchildren to maintain the level of foreign exchange that we have in the Cayman Islands. It is a key component to the way forward but it is easy to get up and talk about these things if we truly understand them.

The United Democratic Party Government sees a lot to be excited about. Just a few short days ago we broke ground for the new Cayman Islands Turtle Farm. This Farm is the most popular tourist attraction on this Island under the leadership of the Minister responsible for Tourism and Leader of Government Business. We are taking the Farm and moving it across the road. It has sustained so much damage over the years either through hurricanes or bad northwesterers. This time they suffered great losses to the breeding herd. Did we simply put it back where it was? No, we have moved it across the street and if we have a northwester or hurricane that does significant damage to the Turtle Farm across the street, then we have a lot of other things to worry about here in Cayman. There is a lot to be excited about.

There has been so much talk about Cayman Airways over the decades. As a young man eleven years ago the first major audit that I went on as an assistant staff accountant was at Cayman Airways and I think it was on two other occasions. The national airline has and does provide economical benefit to this Island. The continuing debate has been: Do the benefits outweigh the costs? More importantly, could those same benefits be provided by another carrier?

The Leader of Government Business has made it quite clear that a mandate has been given in regard to the national airline. When we look at the last decade, from the bail out in 1991 of some CI$16 million to the annual subsidy . . . but more important than that, to the amounts that have been given above and beyond the annual salary subsidy, we see that we do have an entity—that without the support of the Government—would indeed go bankrupt. The United Democratic Party Government does not make rash decisions and just change for changes sake. At the same time we are quite aware that the national airline must be scrutinised and monitored closely.

I think there is a lot to be excited about. Just this morning in this Honourable House the Honourable Third Official Member answered a question in regards to the numbers of Class "A" banks and trust companies, Class "B" banks and trust companies, Class "A" Insurance providers, Class "B" unrestricted and restricted insurance providers. Much has been said over the last several weeks about the fees that form part of this year's budget, but there were many people who said that these fees were going to kill the financial services industry. There were many people who said that these fees were going to chase away all of our business.

I wonder what those people would say in regard to the international initiatives; to the independence of the Monetary Authority; to the need for more robust regulatory regime at the Monetary Authority. In other words, for the great need for the Monetary Authority to hire substantial amounts of staff over the next several years? There are significant costs that will go along with hiring the extra staff to bring the Monetary Authority up to a standard that will be internationally accepted. We do realise that we are going to staff up the Monetary Authority and the funding for that is not going to be an issue in the future. We on the Government side do recognise that it is of critical importance that the Cayman Islands Government which represents every citizen within these shores must be, in and of itself, a sustainable entity; it must be able to raise the funding required for it to operate.

There is much cause for excitement for the citizens of this country. We will forge ahead and the Government will continue to institute policies, once realised, that are going to bring about the type of economic activity that will allow us to stand here and say that we are no longer in a recession but our economy is expanding. I was speaking to an executive within tourism and he was remarking to me how surprised he was that we were bouncing back so quickly because there were so many 'nay sayers' out there painting doom and gloom pictures for tourism. There is much confidence in the Cayman Islands.

We know that Her Majesty's Government has said quite clearly on the White Paper, "Partnership for Progress and Prosperity", that her territories must continue to evolve and mature politically. This led His Excellency to appoint Constitutional Commissioners. I think the one thing that we can agree on here in these Chambers, irrespective of whether you are Government or Opposition, is that there is a dire need for our Constitution to be modernised.

There is also a dire need for us to continue to mature politically. We have seen within this small global village that we live in, that all the major Western contemporary societies have a well-structured system of politics. They have party politics in all the major countries. Much was said by the Second Elected Member for George Town about garrison politics and utilising certain examples within our Region, and talking about a tropical model. I have confidence in the people of the Cayman Islands. I am brimming with confidence that the people of the Cayman Islands have the ability to handle mature political structures. From my constituency, the district of West Bay, we have not had an independent win a seat in over two decades. We have had well organised politics within the district of West Bay for many years.

The people of West Bay have been educated that you do not send a broken ship to this Legislative Assembly and expect it to make a positive contribution. You send a united front, and I am confident that in the year 2004, they will send a United Democratic Party to these Honourable Chambers. It is important to note that the United Democratic Party has the confidence in the people of these Islands that we are not going to have garrison politics here. It is important for the people of the Cayman Islands to recognise that point. It is important for our citizens to recognise that they are the people who will decide how well we handle our new Constitution and the mature politics that go along with it. Her Majesty's Government has made it quite clear that we must have that as a way forward.

Madam Speaker, I was not going to sit back and watch events like November 2000 unfold continually in this territory. If we are going to talk about events that are destabilising, which cause concern, we have to look no further than November 2000. I am confident and the United Democratic Party is confident that the people of the Cayman Islands are more than ready to take up their positions in this world as being a mature democracy that fosters mature democratic principles.

In the 2000 election we had some 54 people run for 15 seats. We had some 22 in my constituency, run for seats. However, despite all that chaos, the people of West Bay still sent a Party to this Legislative Assembly because they recognised the need for persons who are like-minded to form the majority. I am certain that all our citizens recognise that need. When we look at the United Democratic Party . . . and what is a Party anyway? A Party is nothing more than a group of individuals who ascribe to certain broad principles in terms of governance. And that seems like a good thing to me. It seems like a good thing for people who believe in things that are similar to support and work along with one another. That is how societies are built. That is how the Cayman Islands have developed over the years.

What is our Christian heritage founded on? Groups of people who have similar beliefs. Why is it that generation after generation of certain families attend the same church? Because that is the denomination to which they ascribe in terms of their belief system. So, the Cayman Islands have practised a similar concept for many years.

When we look at the way in which the Party will conduct its affairs, you see a very sound set of rules, you see a very sound party Constitution. You do not just wake up one day and decide that you are going to be a candidate for the United Democratic Party; you must be nominated. If there are more persons nominated in a specific district who decides?

The people and the registered members of the Party vote and decide. There are a lot of people who have said for many years that they wish they had an input into who the candidates would be. We have all heard that. We have all heard people say, 'Well if I had my way he would not have run. Mind you, in any democracy there will be rules by which any person can run, so any one will still be able to run but when you look at the people who are like-minded with new philosophies; when you look at the people who you support; when you look at the people with whom you identify and are members of a Party, will the people decide who the candidates will be? The people, the membership of the Party also decides on whom the leader of the Party is going to be.

Before the people go to the polls, they would have had an input into who their candidates would be. They would have chosen their deputy leader and leader of their Party who is empowering the people. There is no select group that decides these things anymore; it is the people who decide. It is high time for the people of the Cayman Islands to have this fundamental power at their disposal. It is high time for the people of the Cayman Islands to decide who the Leader of Government Business will be before they even go to the polls. It is high time that we move forward and progress politically within these Islands.

The people of this country will handle the changes. Change is never easy, most of us resist because a lot of people look at life and say, 'Well, I know what I have now, but if we change I do not know what I am going to have.' But, it is all about education, it is all about learning, it is all about us growing and progressing together. It is all about politics being for the people! Not for certain people. It must be for all the people. How else could it be logical? Every single person must have that equal say before the polls and at the polls.

Within our Party we also have a young United Democratic Party because we see the importance of involving and hearing the voices of our young people. The person who is selected from among their peers to be the president of the young United Democratic Party sits on the general council of the Party. Young people's voices will be heard. We are paving the way and they are the ones marching on behind us. We cannot be so arrogant or so blind as to be looking forward and only thinking about ourselves and only thinking about today. We must be thinking about the generations that are coming behind. We must ensure that their voices are heard and heard loudly. In a nutshell that is what the Party system will give to the people of the Cayman Islands. That is certainly what the United Democratic Party will give to the people of the Cayman Islands.

We also see that we are going to have a hospitality training centre started that is going to provide the skill sets that are so critical in our service based economy. We are only as good as the service we provide whether it is in Tourism or our financial services for that matter but, within tourism we must get back to the basics and this training centre is going to provide that opportunity that is worth getting excited about.

There will always be opposition and there is nothing any government will do that is going to be whole-heartedly accepted by all the people, and that is healthy. It is healthy for a government to know that whatever they come forward with needs to be rationalised because we know that there are critics out there. In spite of the critics, I want someone to show a reason why we should not have a hospitality training centre in these Islands. There are so many good jobs within the hospitality industry that our people do not take up.

When it comes to our jobs it is most important to enjoy what we are doing, but at the end of the day we all have responsibilities and we all have to pay our bills. How sad it is to see young people continually rejecting the hospitality industry to be clerks and tellers within the banks. In my humble submission, once a person is making an honest living he is making a positive contribution to his society. The Government is seeking to broaden the horizons and open the eyes of more of our young people through the education system and through the hospitality training centre to show them the opportunities to be explored.

In my past profession whenever I audited the credit departments of commercial banks one of the things you do is a random sample of a certain section of the loan portfolio, and you do a stratified sample of another section of the loan portfolio and naturally you go back to the base document, that is, the client file. I would often be surprised to know what it is that waiters and waitresses, for example, in the popular restaurants within this Island take home in a year. The great majority of them make substantially more than a teller in a bank. They make substantially more than low-level supervisors within banks and trust companies.

The Government is excited about trying to steer our young people toward the hospitality industry. There are so many opportunities there and I find that very exciting. I find it very exciting to be a young person here in this Parliament and to be a part of a government that sees the necessity and is also willing to act on that necessity—that is putting action plans forward, and coming up with ways of transforming the talk into action.

As we move forward as a community into this new age and this new relationship with the United Kingdom, it is very important for the people to clearly understand how Government works and what sorts of powers we do have and what we do not have. Mention was made of 'unrestrained power'. At the end of the day Her Majesty's Government appoints a Governor who is the President of our Executive Council. When the Governor enters the room we get up and bow to the symbol of Her Majesty's Government. He is Her Majesty's representative. So, to somehow try and say that there is 'unrestrained power' within these Chambers, in particular on the Government side within these Chambers, is stretching the truth shall we say.

If the Elect persons (15 of them) among themselves elect five Council men—five Members of the Executive Council—five persons who will be the council men to the Governor, advisers if you would like, certainly the elected membership of the Executive Council does have real authority in terms of policy and procedure but it is a far cry from unrestrained power.

We have no control over the Civil Service. For example, the Governor makes it quite clear that the Civil Service is his area of responsibility. We still have three appointed Members of our Parliament. It is very important to always try to make sure that our people remember clearly how their own country works. And to just get up and make irresponsible comments saying that there is unrestrained power! when we look at our Chambers and we see a Government side and an Opposition side, we know that this is a House of politics that has its say. However, they have to understand that there is something called debate. Debate usually surrounds an issue. One side puts forward its point; the other side puts forward its point.

So when we have Members of the Opposition get up in regards to the Throne Speech and go out of their way to get off the point and to just get back to the personality politics and to just get back to attacking individuals, not issues, not policies, then they too must clearly understand that we on the Government side are not going to sit down and not defend themselves.

Much was said by the Second Elected Member for George Town and the Elected Member for East End about the dock. If I did not know any better I would believe that the Elected Member for East End never heard about any proposal about a dock in East End before very recent times. It has to be clearly understood that if other matters are going to be brought into the debate my job is to debate those matters as well. And so much was said about the Leader of Government Business and the Minister of Community Development! In fact, mention was made about the Minister of Community Development in regards to him having dialogue with Members of the Opposition. The last time I checked in here, we were Government and Opposition, but outside we are mere mortals. However, we will see that the Members of the Opposition approached those who have spoken so far, approached this Throne Speech debate and they came out attacking mainly personalities.

All the benefits that I have mentioned that are in the Throne Address, I did not hear a lot of people talking about those issues saying, 'Well I would not have done it this way, this is what I would do, showing the way forward, showing the country the alternatives.' Instead I heard things like Ezzard Miller; I heard mention made of Eddinton Powell; I heard wondering. So I think it is fair to say that we have a 'wondering' Opposition. Wandering aimlessly; hopelessly lost in the desert.

The Elected Member for East End was wondering who owns the land where the dock is being proposed. He was wondering in regards to something that is rather easy to find out. Any citizen can go to the Land Registry and do a title search. However, the Elected Member for East End decided to come into the House wondering. Wondering!

A 'wondering' Opposition?

More appropriately, a 'wandering' Opposition.

This is a full-grown politician who seemingly does not have the time to do his research before he comes here. The last time I checked that is what the people of the Cayman Islands pay me to do. Not to come in here and wonder. Certainly the Second Elected Member for George Town wandered through his debate as well.

We were paid to come in here and give responsible representation. If there is an issue to debate, you come to your debate with points and facts, you do not come into these Chambers wondering. The people of East End did not send the Elected Member for East End here to wonder about publicly available things. They sent him here to do work, not to get up to criticize and criticize. Come and present the facts, present your case! It seems to me there was no case to be presented.

The Speaker: Honourable Member for the district of West Bay, is this an appropriate time to take the luncheon break? I should wish to take the luncheon break.

Mr. Rolston M. Anglin: Yes, Madam Speaker.

The Speaker: We will now suspend for the luncheon break until 2.30 pm.

Proceedings suspended at 12.47 pm

Proceedings resumed at 3.01 pm

The Speaker: Please be seated. Proceedings are resumed.

The Second Elected Member from the district of West Bay continuing. I should wish also to bring to your attention that you have 44 minutes remaining.

Mr. Rolston M. Anglin: Thank you.

Madam Speaker, before we broke for lunch I had gone through the Throne Speech and pointed out some items that I believe to be noteworthy; to be positive for the country. We are at a critical stage in the Cayman Islands. We are at a stage where much is expected of Government, the private sector, and also much is expected more widely of all of us.

We have developed politically and socially in a very unique way here in the Cayman Islands. Certainly when we look around we can see much tangible benefit. However, there is much work to be done. We have not had to face some of the stark realities of life here in the Cayman Islands and sometime some of those realities would be things like companies downsizing, restructuring their operations and having people displaced from their jobs. This is something that happens on a fairly regular basis in most other countries. There are important social safety nets in place within those countries to assist their people at times like this.

We have been on an economic ascent for many years, in fact, it mirrored very closely the historic economic performance of the Clinton Administration in the United States. Now we are at a stage where companies are focusing a lot more on the fundamentals. Yes, they were making a profit before and business was booming. And this is not exclusive to Cayman, this happens all over the world when private sector companies are performing well financially, and then some market reality happens either within their specific industry, or within their specific country or some external factor. And once those events start to happen, the company begins to critique itself more vigorously than it had before, and inevitably, job lay-offs and redundancies.

During the boom, things were relatively good here in the Cayman Islands. A lot of the fundamental infrastructure that was necessary—for example a national database of employment—were never developed. So we find ourselves in quite a quandary. On the one hand we have thousands of persons in these Islands on work permits; on the other hand you have Caymanians being displaced from jobs. Many times the Caymanian has a skill set that they could take to another company and be able to replace someone who is here on work permit. However, when one speaks to the persons who are in Immigration, the system and the processes that the person has to go through are not quite so simple or seamless, and so it is important as we go forward, that those fundamentals start getting urgent attention.

I understand from the Department of Employment Services that this is exactly what they are embarking upon. They are embarking upon equipping themselves along with the Immigration Board with the information that would allow them ready access to employment statistics and to employment information. In other words, the vision is to have one main database of all persons living and employed here in the Cayman Islands. That is indeed a massive undertaking but one that is critical to the way forward.

The Government is committed to working along with the people in these Islands to try to make sure that during these critical times they are provided with a service that is flexible and able to assist. I will not go too much deeper into that because there is a Minister responsible, and certainly he will be able to enlighten us more on this particular topic. But it is one that is so important, that I needed to highlight and to assure the public that the Government is modernising and transforming Employment Services as quickly as possible, so as to be able to better serve the community as a whole.

We see a great need for the continued cooperation and sharing of information among the various departments within the Ministry of Social Services. It is quite important for those various departments such as Social Services, the Department of Substance Abuse Services, the Department of Youth, the Department of Sports and indeed the Ministry to work closely to share relevant information! To move forward a lot of the systems that are there so as to ensure that the service being provided is one that is user-friendly and one that allows the Government to effectively and efficiently deliver critical services.

Especially in this time of economic slowdown, there are things that are coming on stream that are going to assist the country. However, during these times we know that there will be persons who need critical assistance and there is, as I said, currently a lot of work happening to ensure that people are assisted in comprehensive and an efficient manner.

We have before us a Throne Speech that we will utilise as a catalyst for the upcoming year. The Government continues to work diligently to provide sound investment opportunities within the Cayman Islands. We will work diligently in tandem with the private sector in this regard. There are those of us who take very important the duty that we have been elected to do, and during these critical times that we demonstrate the leadership that is so badly needed. A leader is one who knows the way, who shows the way and who goes the way and that is what the United Democratic Party is doing.

Madam Speaker, as you and all Members well know, it is quite easy to 'tee off' on the Government and simply criticise, but it is quite something else when it comes to arriving at alternatives that would be needed.

So when we look at what has been said to date:

- We see a clear indication that Government intends to formulate a Drugs Court.
- We see that Government supports, and that it is moving ahead carefully with ensuring the full independence of the Monetary Authority.
- We see clearly that the Government sees the need for reinventing education, the way it is delivered, the types of programmes that are delivered such as technical and vocational training.
- We see the need for continuous training and re-training of the teachers who deliver the services.
- We see the importance of moving forward with the negotiations with Cable and Wireless in regards to liberalizing the telecommunications marketplace.
- We see the importance for moving forward with the Mental Health Hospice and Geriatrics Services.
- We see the importance of performing the provision of health care. We see the great need for a growth management board, for an investment bureau to have that one stop shop for investors.
- We see the great need to have a brand Cayman going out into the marketplace that not only promotes tourism and investment locally, but also the provision of financial services in the Cayman Islands.

These are important things and the Vision 2008 document clearly outlined the people's desire to move along those lines. It is a great desire to see some form of growth management strategy for these Islands.

Even in times of natural disaster, such as Hurricane Michelle and the devastating effects it had on the Turtle Farm, we see now the possibility for a new Turtle Farm—a refined and revitalised product in the Tourism marketplace. We see the need to work as much as possible with our people and with the private sector to provide some relief in regards to housing, because much of our social problems can be tied directly to the lack of proper housing here in these Islands.

We see that Her Majesty's Government is very serious about her relationship with her territories and so she is moving forward to modernise the very systems that we utilize to govern ourselves, of course, the fundamental system being our Constitution.

As is not unusual in life, there is much change. Change creates opportunity for a new legacy to be built, for a new legacy to be written, and that is, indeed, a perfect platform to be utilised to move ourselves forward politically.

It has been said by the Second Elected Member for George Town that we form the United Democratic Party in the middle of a term. Certainly, political parties were going to be inevitable within this country, and certainly I believe, and so do the Members of the United Democratic Party, that it is very important to do things in a manner that allows people of these Islands to grow, to build their knowledge base, and to become educated in the changes that are happening.

I, personally, could not see us going into the year 2004 expecting that we would, at that point, all of a sudden say, 'Yep, we are going to have party politics in the Cayman Islands'. Madam Speaker, those who scaremonger and do it well would have had a field day. Because no matter how much we talk, the people of these Islands want to see performance. They want to see things work. And so it is very important for our people to see how party politics work and see it work well; to see that from it flows benefits and that from it flows discipline from within the ranks of their elected representatives.

The United Democratic Party meets weekly to caucus—to discuss important issues, to put issues to a vote, to thrash them out, to decide whether or not we need further information and whether or not we need to call persons in to provide information. Information is king and certainly the United Democratic Party does not believe that we have any monopoly on information or knowledge. There is a lot of information and knowledge out there that a government must take into consideration when it is making its decisions to move forward. The people of this country, who become members of the United Democratic Party, have the opportunity and the possibility to have their say on a continual basis.

Each district is going to have a district committee. That district committee is going to have a district chairman, that district chairman will sit on the general council of the Party which formulates party policy. It is mandated in the Constitution that that district chairman must convene monthly meetings with his executive committee and quarterly meetings with his entire general membership, at which time he will take advice and seek information from the general public. People will have their input and it will flow up.

The Party Constitution brings discipline, it brings accountability, and it brings us closer to people. There are no longer loose alliances so there would be those who would resist it still because there are still many in this country that preys on opportunity; that preys on there not being accountability or structure; who prey on not having to be answerable to the public on a continual basis. Well, if there is anything that proves one of commitment to accountability, it is going through the exercise of sitting down and listening to the people. We have to sit down and have dialogue with the people. There is a formalised structure for doing it called a party constitution.

Those who share common philosophies there must be a formal way in which you have a connection to your elected representatives. However, as is the case in every other country that has party politics, party members still have the responsibility to govern and provide governance to their entire country. Once an election is over you go back to being primarily the representative of all the people, and of course you still continue to meet with your party. For all the people you represent—and when you are in your MLA office you represent everyone — that point drives to the core of the existence of the members of the United Democratic Party.

Over the next few minutes I would like to clearly demonstrate through recent history what is in fact at play within these Chambers. I welcome debate and I have always been a person who loves to sit down with my friends and colleagues and discuss issues. I suppose it became natural then that I would have an inclination toward politics and so when the Opposition gets up and gives us legitimate matters that challenge the position—our position—that is when we as a Government have to rise to the occasion and debate our position.

However, we have seen over the last couple of days that that is not the modus operandi of the Opposition. The Opposition is much more interested in talking about the Leader of Government Business and the Leader of the United Democratic Party: not their policies. They are much more interested in coming into this Honourable House and throwing aspersions and innuendoes.

In my view, we have had an unfortunate situation where the Elected Member for East End came into these Honourable Chambers and wondered who owns the land where the dock is going. As I said before the luncheon break, the Opposition seems to be 'wandering'. They seem to not have any clear direction and so that too makes life difficult on the Government Bench because we . . .

The Speaker: Is that your opinion, Honourable Member?

Mr. Rolston M. Anglin: That is my opinion, Madam Speaker.

We on the Government Bench, as usual, provide responsible representation. We do not come here and cast aspersions and innuendoes. We do not come here and talk about, 'I wonder who the land is for' but we are here to defend ourselves. I have a name and I will defend my name. I will defend the Party.

I wish to lay on the Table of this Honourable House what my research has unearthed in regard to the ownership of this property. It is very unfortunate that the Elected Member for East End could not take the five minutes to go over to the Land Registry and the Company Registry to see the same documentation that I have seen. This is all public information.

Point of Order

Mr. V. Arden McLean: On a point of order, Madam Speaker.

The Speaker: Please state your point of order.

Mr. V. Arden McLean: Madam Speaker, the Member is misleading the House because he does not know whether or not I went over to the Lands and Survey Department. He keeps saying that I 'wondered' as to who it was for, and that is not so. The records will bear out that I wondered if the UDP was going to let the public know. I know.

The Speaker: Honourable Member from the District of East End, Is that an implied request for us to look at the Hansard or do you have a copy there with you?

Mr. V. Arden McLean: I do not have a copy with me, Madam Speaker.

The Speaker: All right, perhaps it is time for us to suspend to look at the Hansard. I should also wish to indicate that when the House reconvenes the Deputy Speaker will be sitting in the Chair as I have a very important public meeting to conduct in my constituency tonight. We will suspend now for approximately five minutes.

Mr. Alden M. McLaughlin, Jr.: Madam Speaker.

The Speaker: Yes, Honourable Member?

Mr. Alden M. McLaughlin, Jr.: Madam Speaker, I wonder, respectfully, if you could let us know when we might have a ruling in relation to the point I raised on Friday as to whether or not the Leader of Government Business has a right of reply to the Throne Speech? I believe it is an important question in the context of what is transpiring.

The Speaker: Honourable Second Elected Member for the district of George Town, I am almost on the final stages of my report and it is my expectation that time permitting between now and the end of the business day tomorrow, that I should be in a position to so deliver, if appropriate.

Proceedings suspended at 3.38 pm

Proceedings resumed at 4.07 pm

[Deputy Speaker in the Chair]

The Speaker: Proceedings are resumed.

Before I call on the Second Elected Member for George Town to continue his contribution to the Throne Speech, I refer to the point of order that was raised prior to the break,

In the interest of transparency I would prefer that we leave the ruling, if necessary, for the return of the Speaker so that there is no perceived conflict of interest, since the Second Elected Member was the Member debating. Therefore, I ask the Second Elected Member to continue his debate and stay away from that point as much as possible.

Second Elected Member for West Bay continuing.

Mr. Rolston M. Anglin: Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

This is the final point that I will make during my second debate on the Throne Speech. It goes back to the whole issue of the need and desire to have properly organised party politics within these Islands.

I do not personally believe that we need to go any further than our recent history to realise why it is so important to have ourselves properly organized. The very political system and the very politicians themselves are transparent.

In the November 2000 elections, I ran on a team in West Bay that comprised of four individuals. We were not formally associated with any other group in the Island, thus we could not form a Government. We were the largest group to run collectively (the four individuals who ran together in West Bay) and the people elected us primarily on the fact that they knew the need to have people who had a common manifesto; who had a common vision; who were going to work together for the best interest of themselves, their children and grandchildren.

In the November 2000 election, we had, as I said, this real fractured approach to governance going into the elections in that state. How could anyone reasonably expect that we would have a smooth transition and a smooth working Government after that? You must have people out there telling the people that we are together. Here is our vision, vote for our vision. Taking politics away from this personal nature and taking it to a new level which all the people in the Cayman Islands deserve; a level that is about issues, vision, voting for a vision, voting for collective parties that have a well defined structure in place as to how they are going to bring that vision to fruition.

It has been said many times in this Honourable House, but I will say it one last time because it is very important that I remind everyone of one of the primary reasons why I support organised party politics. Other countries such as the United States, the United Kingdom, Canada, Bermuda and Barbados have organised politics where there is transparency. There are no deals cut here and there that the public do not know about. The public must know. The public deserves to know. They deserve to know who they will be working with and who they will be supporting. You must be together.

As we well know, there was an informal government formed and signatures taken that involved three persons: the First Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman; the Second Elected Member for Bodden Town and the Third Elected Member for George Town who did not wind up on the Government at that time. We cannot have a situation as we did in November 2000.

The people of this country deserve better. We must have transparency in our political dealings. I cannot be going to Bodden Town and cutting a deal with one guy, cutting a deal with his opponents, trying to hedge my bets because I want to make sure that whoever wins I will be able to put something together. Our people deserve better than that and our people are ready to take on this relatively new development.

There were parties in the 1950s, the Christian Democratic Party and one called the People's National Party, or something—the National Democratic Party and the Christian Democratic Party. There was not the constitutional basis to support such a move and it fell by the wayside. Here we are some 50 years later and yet we are still talking about the timing. We need to be organised; the people need to be told the truth when they are going to the polls. They need to know who you support. You cannot be with everybody because everybody has different opinions. You must be with people who you are philosophically on the same page with: people who you can work with and move forward with.

We, the people of these Islands, will move forward. We, the people of these Islands, together, will create the legacy that is worthwhile passing on.

I thank you, Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: Does any other Member wish to speak? This is the last call. Does any other Member wish to speak?

The Honourable Minister of Education.

Hon. Roy Bodden: Mr. Speaker, it would be most impolitic of me if I would allow the opportunity to pass without saying some important things which I believe will serve to inform and enlighten Honourable Members.

My contribution will be in two parts: firstly I would like to address some specific issues raised by other Members dealing with current political events and the evolution of party politics. During the second part of my debate I want to focus more keenly on developments within the Ministry for which I have been assigned constitutional responsibility.

I suppose it is accurate to remark that ever since the United Kingdom forwarded the document called Partnership for Progress (the White Paper which purports to outline the new relationship between the United Kingdom and the Dependent Territories) winds of change have been blowing in the dependent territories, and more particularly the Cayman Islands which is that territory to which I will confine my remarks.

In that document the United Kingdom put forward several suggestions for a more modern, more scientific and a more equitable type of partnership. In reading between the lines one could quite accurately come to the conclusion that one of the things that the United Kingdom wanted to encourage was government by a modern instrument, meaning that the United Kingdom encouraged the development of a modern constitution. Indeed, we have been told as much by dignitaries visiting the Cayman Islands from time to time and most recently. I remember dealing with a Mr. Alan Hoole and Jillian Dare who discussed with us some of the ramifications of this, and there were others as well. Emanating out of that was, among the informed, a mood change.

A change from the normally staid conservative and reserved to a more open and acceptable mood and discussion of the possibility of constitutional change, leading to constitutional advancement, meaning the possibility of a Chief Minister. We were well on the way towards a ministerial system and that is only reasonable that you have a Chief: someone to whom responsibility is trusted, someone who can accept responsibility for leadership, someone who is at fault when things are not going right and someone who has authority over his Ministers rather than having five people of the same parity with no specific defined authority to be responsible for keeping them in line.

As events transpired on the election of 2000, it was most unsatisfactory according to the opinions of many people, the way the Government was chosen. There were those 'prognosticators' who saw fit to think that it was an alliance, which for one reason or the other, would not last for very long. I heard someone remark the other day that they made a prediction that it would last but one year, if it did that. I am not saying that those 'prognosticators' were accurate; I am not saying that they were of the stature of the late 'Jimmy the Greek'; I am not saying that we should take advice from them prior to departing on some junket to Las Vegas, if that is the disposition.

What I am saying is that clearly it was an unsatisfactory way in the opinions of many people and time later bore that out. Though it is no one's fault, it just tells us that the time was ripe to have a more sophisticated, a more predictable and accepted way of choosing our government. No longer can we go on in the ad hoc way of building alliances, hedging bets—what I call, pirate politics—friend one minute with someone and at the next minute foe to them. That is clearly not good enough and the Westminster style politics and government is not predicated upon that and in all of its myriad variations, no Westminster style politics has that as its model.

The Westminster style is clearly defined in all its modifications and all its permutations. It calls for two clearly demarcated and divided bodies. I said this before in this House: the Opposition in the United Kingdom terms itself, Her Majesty's Loyal Opposition which means that they respect the Crown and all the nuances and accept the Government, while at the same time holding the Government to account and seeking an opportunity to legitimately and constitutionally replace the Government. That is the essence of Westminster style party politics.

So for anyone to convey the impression that what happened on the 8 November was evil and committed by ogres or some wicked people, is a travesty of justice and far from the truth, and it is gross irresponsibility.

The United Kingdom would not stand for any abuse of power in that regard—has never and will never. Even in countries that attained independence and are straying from the Westminster model, the United Kingdom can be rather heavy-handed.

I just heard on the BBC news that they threatened to impose Commonwealth sanctions on Zimbabwe because President Mugabe chooses to depart from the well-trod system. How much more would the United Kingdom let one of its dependent territories participate in something, which was un-parliamentary and foreign to the Westminster?

So, it has to be cast in the proper perspective. What happened was a natural follow up of dissatisfaction and the Westminster system makes ample provision for that. It happens in the mother of parliaments. It happened in the United Kingdom and there was nothing illegal or unconstitutional about that. What a lot of people are riled up against, is because they perceived, lost their advantage because, persons who came into the Government, were not persons whom for one reason or another they had befriended or maybe could even control or influence to the extent that they would. While it is true that the public did not have any say in it, to that extent, the public did not know before hand who (up to the time of the General Elections of 2000) the Ministers were going to be because there was no party platform.

What happened is a blessing in disguise because it has suddenly brought us to the realisation that it can no longer be politics as usual. We have come to that point of political maturity in the country where certain elements are ready for a full-fledged party system. Mr. Speaker, that is not foreign to me. I have always been an organisation man. I have always been a party man, I was one of the founding members of Team Cayman, the closest thing we have come to in the recent past to a full-fledged political party.

If those people who are opposing wished to be responsible they should galvanise themselves into a competing organisation to ensure that the proper balance is maintained. Because, Mr. Speaker, there is no way that an agglomeration of individuals is going to get the same political respect as a full-fledged, well-organised, political party. Good heavens! From earlier on in my political experience when the so-called Back Benchers went to the United Kingdom there were seven of us. I remember Mr. Walter Wallace, the constitutional advisor to the FCO, telling us at that time, 'You gentlemen, your cause would be better served if you formed yourselves into a Party, because the United Kingdom likes to deal with entities. As it is there are seven of you now, but you are nothing better than an agglomeration of individuals bound together by a common interest which may not exist tomorrow'.

Party politics, whether we like it or not, seems to be here to stay and it is gross irresponsibility for any one on the Opposition or in any other organisation to get up and talk about party politics leads down the road to destruction and garrison constituencies, and garrison this and garrison that. If we are responsible legislators . . .

Point of Order

Mr. Alden M. McLaughlin, Jr.: Mr. Speaker, on a point of order.

The Speaker: May I hear your point of order?

Mr. Alden M. McLaughlin, Jr.: Mr. Speaker, I never suggested any such thing. The Minister was not present and he clearly has not taken the time to read the transcript of the Hansard because I never said that. He is misleading the House and the country, Sir.

The Speaker: Honourable Member, I was listening quite carefully and I did not hear him refer to you having said anything. I heard him make reference to groups and other Members but I did not hear him make specific reference to you, nor the statement that was made.

Mr. Alden M. McLaughlin, Jr.: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. He said "Opposition" and the only Opposition Member who spoke in relation to party politics was me, Sir.

The Speaker: Honourable Member, when I was in this House, not as a Speaker but as a Member, I heard two other Members of the Opposition speak as well and they both mentioned parties. I feel that it is not a point of order.

Could the Member continue?

[Pause]

Hon. Roy Boddén: I would gladly go on, Sir, but it seems to be the hour of interruption.

The Speaker: It is, Honourable Minister. I wonder if I can have the Leader of Government Business move the motion for the adjournment, please.

ADJOURNMENT

Hon. W. McKeever Bush: Mr. Speaker, I move the adjournment of this Honourable House until tomorrow morning, Thursday, being the 28 February at 10 am. Thank you.

The Speaker: The question is that this House do now adjourn until Thursday 28 February 2002 at 10 am.

All those in favour please say Aye. Those against, No.

Ayes.

The Speaker: The Ayes have it.

At 4.31 pm the House stood adjourned until Thursday, 28 February 2002, at 10 am.

OFFICIAL HANSARD REPORT
THURSDAY
28 FEBRUARY 2002
10.37 AM
Seventh Sitting

The Speaker: I shall invite the Honourable Minister responsible for Education to grace us with Prayers.

PRAYERS

Hon. Roy Bodden: Let us pray.

Almighty God, from whom all wisdom and power are derived: We beseech Thee so to direct and prosper the deliberations of the Legislative Assembly now assembled, that all things may be ordered upon the best and surest foundations for the glory of Thy Name and for the safety, honour and welfare of the people of these Islands.

Bless our Sovereign Lady, Queen Elizabeth II; the Queen Mother; Philip, Duke of Edinburgh; Charles, Prince of Wales; and all the Royal family. Give grace to all who exercise authority in our Commonwealth, that peace and happiness, truth and justice, religion and piety may be established among us. Especially we pray for the Governor of our Islands, the Speaker of the Legislative Assembly, Official Members and Ministers of Executive Council and Members of the Legislative Assembly, that we may be enabled faithfully to perform the responsible duties of our high office.

All this we ask for Thy great Name's sake.

Let us say the Lord's Prayer together: Our Father, who art in Heaven, Hallowed be Thy Name. Thy Kingdom come, Thy will be done on earth as it is in Heaven. Give us this day our daily bread, and forgive us our trespasses, as we forgive those who trespass against us. Lead us not into temptation, but deliver us from evil. For Thine is the Kingdom, the power and the glory, forever and ever. Amen.

The Lord bless us and keep us. The Lord make His face shine upon us and be gracious unto us. The Lord lift up the light of His countenance upon us and give us peace, now and always. Amen.

Proceedings resumed at 10.40 am

ADMINISTRATION OF OATHS
OR AFFIRMATIONS

The Speaker: Please be seated. Proceedings are resumed. Although it is not appearing on the Order Paper due to extreme late notice, we will have the Administration of Oath by the Honourable Temporary First Official Member. I invite him to come to the desk at this time.

Oath of Allegiance

(Hon. Donovan W. F. Ebanks)

Hon. Donovan W. F. Ebanks: I, Donovan Ebanks, do swear that I will be faithful and bear true allegiance to Her Majesty Queen Elizabeth II, her heirs and successors according to law so help me God.

READING BY THE HONOURABLE
SPEAKER OF MESSAGES
AND ANNOUNCEMENTS

The Speaker: Honourable Temporary First Official Member, once again I wish to welcome you back to these Chambers and as always it is good to have you here with us.

QUESTIONS TO HONOURABLE
MINISTERS AND OFFICIAL MEMBERS

Question No. 11

Deferred Friday 22 February 2002

The Speaker: The Second Elected Member for the district of George Town.

No. 11: Mr. Alden M. McLaughlin asked the Honourable Minister responsible for the Ministry of Education, Human Resources and Culture:

- (a) What is the current number of students at the George Hicks School;
- (b) What is the average number of students per class at the George Hicks School;
- (c) How many students are expected to enter Year 7 of the George Hicks High School in September 2002; and
- (d) Is there sufficient space and staff at the George Hicks High School to accommodate the student intake in September 2002 and, if not, what plans are there to cater to the increase in student numbers.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for Education, Human Resources and Culture.

Hon. Roy Bodden: (a) The current number of students enrolled at the George Hicks High School is 864; (b) The average number of students per class is:
Year 7 –20
Year 9 –18
Year 8 –17

(c) Based on the current enrolment in year 6 in the Grand Cayman Government Primary Schools, 335 students are expected to enter Year 7 of the George Hicks High School in September 2002. Some additional 45 students may seek to transfer from private schools. This would bring the projected enrolment to 380.

(d) Currently there is an average of 20 students to each class in Year 7. In order to accommodate the projected intake of 380 students within the current structure of 16 sets and within the existing facilities, the average class (set) size would have to be increased to 24. There are plans to seek provision for some additional eight (8) classrooms in order to provide additional space if it becomes necessary in September.

Supplementaries

The Speaker: The Second Elected Member for the district of George Town.

Mr. Alden M. McLaughlin, Jr.: Thank you, Madam Speaker. In relation to the answer to part (d) of the question, the Honourable Minister has said the average class size would have to be increased to 24. May I ask the Honourable Minister whether that means that the average class size will be increased to 24?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for Education.

Hon. Roy Bodden: No, Madam Speaker. At this point I cannot be definitive because, as I said in part (c) of the question it hinges on at least one other contingency.

The Speaker: Are there any other supplementaries?
The Second Elected Member for George Town. I will allow one more supplementary.

Mr. Alden M. McLaughlin, Jr.: Thank you, Madam Speaker. The (d) part of the answer also indicates that there are plans to seek provision for some additional eight (8) class rooms in order to provide additional space if it becomes necessary in September. May I ask the Honourable Minister what provision is being made for these additional eight classrooms? Where is the funding to come from and where will the eight classrooms be located? Is it the intention to construct these additional classrooms on the site at George Hicks between now and September?

The Speaker: Honourable Minister of Education.

Hon. Roy Bodden: Madam Speaker, the Ministry and the Department being proactive, we have already begun to check out the feasibility of establishing temporary classrooms. So in the event that the enrolment meets what we would consider our worst case scenario we will be accommodating and there should be no crises because the additional enrolment will be accommodated in temporary classrooms.

The Speaker: Second Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. Alden M. McLaughlin, Jr.: Madam Speaker, may I ask the Honourable Minister where are these temporary classrooms going to be and how are they are going to be provided? Are they going to put up temporary structures or are they going to rent accommodation somewhere else?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for Education, Human Resources and Culture.

Hon. Roy Bodden: Madam Speaker, it is my information that on the George Hicks site, foundations are already in place for temporary classrooms. So we are not panicking at this point because according to our feasibility studies we can use these foundations to set up the temporary classrooms with no major disruption between now and September if they are needed.

The Speaker: Madam Clerk.

Question No. 12

Deferred Friday 22 February 2002

The Speaker: The Second Elected Member for the district of George Town.

No. 12: Mr. Alden M. McLaughlin, Jr. asked the Honourable Minister responsible for Education, Human Resources and Culture: (a) If Government still intends to restructure the John Gray High School and the George Hicks High School as parallel high schools both catering to years 7 to 12 as previously announced by the Honourable Minister of Education in July 2001; and (b) If the answer to (a) above is yes, when will this transition begin and what plans are there to cope with the additional staff and accommodation requirements?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Education.

Hon. Roy Bodden: (a) Government is still considering the feasibility of restructuring secondary education and is looking at all possible alternatives. Discussions are continuing to this end, including discussions with a consultant specialising in educational alternatives for small States. This is in keeping with the Ministry's priorities over the next three years, in particular school improvement and technical and vocational education. If restructuring is to take place, it will afford the Ministry the opportunity to assess the present curricula at both schools, and to propose a curriculum for the third high school, which is in the planning stages. Closer links with the Community College, as the provider of post-secondary education, and the avoidance of duplication of the curricula must also be worked out.

(b) Before a definite decision can be made and provision for staff and accommodation worked out, data must be collected and analysed. Some data has been collected and this is being used in discussions. However, the main issues under discussion are as follows -

- ◆ The curricula of the two schools
- ◆ Audit of all staff, teaching and non-teaching and their qualifications and experience
- ◆ Assessment of buildings and resources in both schools
- ◆ Provision for students with special education needs
- ◆ Analysis of number of students leaving school with certification, that is, drop-out rate

Once internal consultations have been completed, the Ministry is committed to the restructuring being presented for public consultation and feedback.

Supplementaries

The Speaker: The Second Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. Alden M. McLaughlin, Jr.: Thank you, Madam Speaker. I wonder if the Honourable Minister could provide any sort of time frame or estimated completion date for this study that is currently underway.

The Speaker: Honourable Minister for Education.

Hon. Roy Bodden: No, Madam Speaker, I regret that I am unable to offer the Honourable House at this time a definitive completion date, the reason being that this is a process which we have determined to hasten slowly because we have to take a significant number of factors into consideration. Once we have advanced beyond a certain point we recognise that the process will become irreversible and therefore it is incumbent upon us to get all our 'ducks' lined up properly in the first instance.

The Speaker: The Elected Member for North Side.

Ms. Edna M. Moyle: Thank you, Madam Speaker. I wonder if the Honourable Minister could tell the House where the Government is proposing to put the third high school which is now in the planning stages according to his reply to the question.

The Speaker: Honourable Minister for Education.

Hon. Roy Bodden: Madam Speaker, it gives me great pleasure to say that just yesterday I wrote a memorandum to my colleague the Minister in charge of Lands asking him to explore the feasibility and the possibility of procuring some land which was originally offered in the Frank Sound area. I asked my colleague to find out if this land is still available and to advise the Ministry as to the feasibility and practicability of obtaining for these purposes.

The Speaker: Member for North Side.

Ms. Edna M. Moyle: Thank you, Madam Speaker. I wonder if the Honourable Minister would say if it is the same piece of property that he and I wrote about to the past Minister of Education back in 2000.

The Speaker: Honourable Minister for Education.

Hon. Roy Bodden: It most certainly is, Madam Speaker, the said piece of land.

The Speaker: The Fourth Elected Member for the district of West Bay.

Mr. Cline A. Glidden, Jr.: Thank you, Madam Speaker. In answer to (a) where it says, "Government is still considering the feasibility of restructuring secondary education, and is looking at all possible alternatives", I wonder if the Minister could say whether the school inspectorate or any of their reports are having any input in the decision making process.

The Speaker: Honourable Minister for Education.

Hon. Roy Bodden: Indeed, Madam Speaker, that is a good question. Yes, the school inspectorate has communicated with the Ministry their disposition on this whole matter, particularly, in regards to curriculum and the development of a national curriculum and I take this opportunity to say that the schools' inspectorate is but one body external to the Ministry that we have received advice from.

Early next month, we will be visited by Professor Mark Bray who is a distinguished authority on the restructuring of secondary education. Professor Bray will be coming as a guest of the Ministry and will be giving a public lecture at the Community College. It is the Ministry's intention also to consult with Professor Mark Bray on this move because, I reiterate, it is of critical importance that we get this exercise done properly.

The Speaker: Are there any further supplementaries? If not, let us move on to the next question.

Question No. 22

The Speaker: The Elected Member for the district of East End.

No. 22: Mr. V. Arden McLean asked the Minister responsible for Health Services, if a new contract or agreement has been signed or entered into between the Cayman Islands Health Services Department and the Baptist Hospital Group of Florida.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for Health.

Hon. Gilbert A. McLean: To date the Cayman Islands Health Services Department has not signed a new contract with the Baptist Health Systems of South Florida. The current contract is due to expire on 16 March 2002.

As a temporary measure, a decision has been taken to extend this contract under new conditions. Presently, the terms of the contract are being re-negotiated in an effort to secure more favourable rates for services provided.

The Health Services Department will be in a better position to negotiate more effectively with other overseas service providers, after William M. Mercer, the consulting firm hired to advise the Government on establishing a self-funded health scheme, has completed its work.

Additionally, I may say that I am informed only today that discussions are underway with Baptist Health Systems of Florida and the negotiation seems to be going quite well on both sides. It appears that it will be possible to negotiate an extension at better rates.

Supplementaries

The Speaker: The Elected Member for East End.

Mr. V. Arden McLean: Thank you, Madam Speaker. Can the Minister define the temporary extension as to how long that is?

The Speaker: Honourable Minister for Health Services.

Hon. Gilbert A. McLean: Madam Speaker, we are expecting it to be a one year extension.

The Speaker: Elected Member for the district of East End.

Mr. V. Arden McLean: Thank you, Madam Speaker. In the substantive answer the Minister also said that the Health Services would be in a better position to negotiate more effectively with other overseas service providers after the William Mercer Consultant Firm has completed its work. Can the Minister then tell us when is it expected that the Mercer consulting firm will complete its work?

The Speaker: Honourable Minister for Health Services.

Hon. Gilbert A. McLean: Madam Speaker, we should have a report by the middle of this month on the first phase of the consultancy which has been the largely the data gathering and analysis thereof.

The Member also mentioned the fact that the substantive answer spoke about being in a better position to negotiate with other service providers, I can tell the House that what is seen to be a more favourable position is not to have an exclusive contract with any given facility in Florida but to seek the best value for money at what is termed 'Centers of excellence' where if a person goes for an ailment where cardiology is needed or if it is a cancer patient, they are sent to the best centre that can be found. They are referred directly to them rather than having an exclusive contract with one facility.

It is my understanding that this is the new road that is being travelled by health care facilities in the state of Florida.

Suspension of Standing Order 23(7) and (8)

The Speaker: Can I now call on the Honourable Deputy Leader, as we have now reached the hour of 11 am to move the suspension of Standing Order 23(7) and (8).

Hon. Linford A. Pierson: Madam Speaker, I move the suspension of Standing Order 23(7) and (8) to allow for Question Time to continue.

The Speaker: Thank you. The question is that Standing Order 23(7) and (8) be suspended to allow question time to continue beyond 11 am.

All those in favour please say Aye. Those against, No.

Ayes.

Agreed: Standing Order 23(7) and (8) suspended.

The Speaker: Are there any further supplementaries? The Elected Member for the district of East End.

Mr. V. Arden McLean: Thank you, Madam Speaker. Just to ask the Honourable Minister since it appears that the Mercer consulting firm is going to be shortly providing the reports and its recommendations, why then is the Government going into a one-year extension? Would it not be much better to shorten that period? I wonder if he sees it more feasible for one year or a shorter period of time.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Health Services, District Administration and Agriculture.

Hon. Gilbert A. McLean: Madam Speaker, the Mercer contract is in three phases. It can be terminated at any given phase and part of the work they are doing is looking at the contract with Baptist Hospital and it is they who are actually negotiating these rates and changes on our behalf and keeping us abreast of it.

The reason for the extension of one year is to have a continuum to keep things going until we are in a position to make a complete decision.

The Speaker: First Elected Member for the district of George Town.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Thank you. Can the Minister state if thus far there has been any report given either to the Health Services department or the Ministry (perhaps the Ministry more likely) with regards to any comparisons made with what charges are being levied now within the contract with Baptist compared to what obtains with other comparable institutions?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Health Services.

Hon. Gilbert A. McLean: Madam Speaker, that will be coming in the first report but there are indications that there can be improvements.

The Speaker: Are there any further supplementaries? If not, we will move on to the next question.

Question No. 23

The Speaker: The Elected Member for the district of East End.

No. 23: Mr. V. Arden McLean asked the Minister responsible for Community Services, what is Government's current policy in providing affordable housing?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for Community Services.

Dr. the Hon. Frank McField: The Government's current policy in providing affordable housing is multifaceted and includes: - rehabilitation and repair of existing houses, the guaranteeing of a part of a mortgage for the provision of new houses, re-examination of Laws and Regulations that regulate housing construction and housing design. We will also re-examine institutional barriers to innovation in housing design, construction and financing. The Cayman Islands Government will also use the experiences of previous housing initiatives, both locally and internationally to address the housing problem.

The Government is also very cognizant that the lack of affordable housing is one of the major contributors to social breakdown within the Cayman Islands. As Members are aware, many families do not qualify for funding for a house. A long-term goal of the Government is to provide opportunities for Caymanians to upgrade or to further their education and life skills and to review the minimum wage regulation. The Ministries of Community Service, Education and Tourism will carry out these initiatives.

The most recent initiative is the "HOME" Programme, which stands for Home Ownership Made Equitable. This programme targets those people unable to qualify for the Government Guaranteed Home Mortgage Scheme. Government has secured US$5 million from Caribbean Development Bank for this programme that will be administered by the newly formed Cayman Islands Development Bank. We are also currently reviewing various housing systems and financial options from the private sector as public-private partnerships are also largely a component of our housing strategy.

In 2001, Government contracted to purchase 11 acres of land in West Bay for a low cost housing development scheme by making a down payment of 50 per cent toward the purchase price of the land. The balance of this cost (in excess of $200,000) is due in 2002. (This land will eventually be vested in the CIDB). In addition, we have approximately 4.2 acres near North Sound Courts for low-cost housing construction.

It is the intention of the United Democratic Party Government's intention to make available approximately 200 low-cost houses for Caymanians to acquire over the next 12 months.

The Speaker: Elected Member for East End.

Supplementaries

Mr. V. Arden McLean: Thank you, Madam Speaker. Starting with the last paragraph of the substantive answer in that the Government's intention is to provide approximately 200 low-cost homes for Caymanians and then the Minister also says that there are 4.2 acres of property in George Town and 11 acres in West Bay. Is it the intent of the Government to purchase lands in the other districts?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for Community Services.

Dr. the Hon. Frank McField: Madam Speaker, I am happy to be able to say that the position of the United Democratic Party Government is to purchase lands in all the other districts. We realize that this is one of the great barriers that prevents people from being able to afford homes. It is not just construction cost and material that is expensive; land is also very expensive. Therefore, the majority of people are now being effectively alienated from the possibility of owning not just a house but a piece of land. We feel that we would like to purchase land in all the districts to make the whole process of affording a house easier for low-income members of our community.

The Speaker: The Elected Member for North Side.

Mr. V. Arden McLean: Thank you, Madam Speaker. Can the Minister then give an indication as to the time frame for buying these properties in the other districts and in particular East End?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for Community Services.

Dr. the Hon. Frank McField: Madam Speaker, we will be using of course the same time frame as we are using for the production of the 200 low-cost housing, so we are talking about within a year (time frame).

The Speaker: The Second Elected Member from the district of George Town.

Mr. Alden M. McLaughlin, Jr.: Thank you, Madam Speaker. I wonder if the Honourable Minister could give us a little more insight into how the HOME programme is going to operate. By that I mean, is it the intention that Government, or the Cayman Islands Development Bank, is going to build these homes on the property which Government has acquired and then lend money to the purchasers at affordable basis or is there some other scheme?

The Speaker: Honourable Minister for Community Services.

Dr. the Hon. Frank McField: Madam Speaker, as most of us are aware, the issue with regards to housing in this country really is that not only low-income people find it difficult to afford housing, we also have people who do not have an income or very little income. So, there is even a lower economic group than the low-income that we need to deal with.

There are also young professionals who are not making a lot of money who need to be assisted in terms of qualifying to enter into the private housing market. This is why we have the Government guaranteed mortgage scheme that continues to be a scheme that is feasible and that the Government sees as being important in terms of assisting a particular economic strata in being able to afford housing.

Now, we also have what we consider to be persons who are working but who are not above what we might define as the poverty line which is $1,500 per month income. Those would be persons we would have to create an additional scheme for—perhaps by assisting with the purchasing of land. For example, we might have a situation where we might actually purchase the land, the Government might actually build on it and then the person of course would be able to apply to the bank for finances for it, or we might have a situation where the Government might just have the land and the person might be able to get it and begin to build on it by contracting with the bank.

We will have situations that we have thought about where we might have someone who is developing apartments and selling for a particular amount but it is still not affordable for the particular income group that we are looking at. For example, if someone is developing apartments and putting them on the market for a price like $75,000, that might still not be affordable. So what Government would do is subsidize that price to allow the people to get in and start paying mortgage at a particular price.

We have not worked out the details of all of this because it depends upon the funds that we have available and although we have the $5 million from the Caribbean Development Bank not all of that will go towards housing. We are still actively looking at raising additional private sector support for our housing initiatives.

The Speaker: The Third Elected Member for Bodden Town.

Mr. Anthony S. Eden: Thank you, Madam Speaker. Can the Honourable Minister say what is the interest rate being charged by Cayman Islands Development Bank if he is in that position at this time?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for Community Services.

Dr. the Hon. Frank McField: Madam Speaker, that is not a question that I am able to answer at this particular moment but I am quite sure that the person who is more responsible for finances than I am, the Honourable Third Official Member would be willing to make a comment on that.

The Speaker: Honourable Member because it does not come directly out of the question I would much prefer either for a substantive question to be put to that effect or if it is agreed among Members, perhaps you can so direct it in writing to the Member who asked the question.

Dr. the Hon. Frank McField: Madam Speaker, I noticed there was quite a bit of movement as if 'Let us see what we can do here to find out what he is doing right or wrong'. I would just like to say to the Honourable Members that this is no idle situation here. I have always been a person who advocated the need for housing improvement and have always stressed the role in which the lack of affordable housing plays in creating some of the very difficult social problems that we have.

So the one hundred days or more that I have been in this Portfolio, I can assure the Members of the Opposition that we are very active in being able to provide our Caymanian people with affordable homes and we will and I reiterate have up to 200 houses on the market within the next year.

The Speaker: The Second Elected Member from the district of George Town.

Mr. Alden M. McLaughlin, Jr.: Thank you, Madam Speaker. May I ask the Honourable Minister whether or not it is the intention of Government to construct some significant portion of these 200 houses on the property that it has acquired, or is in the process of acquiring, and then to sell these homes through Cayman Islands Development Bank to approved home owners?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for Community Services

Dr. the Hon. Frank McField: Madam Speaker, I tried to give the answer to the substantive question which is, What is Government's current policy in providing affordable housing? The substantive answer I gave is stating the policy. Madam Speaker, I am not at this point, in the position to give legalistic details as to the policy. The policy is, I believe, that we are concerned with the fact that previous governments have not been able to deal effectively with the issue of lack of affordable accommodation for low-income persons in our community. And that we have envisaged that we will be able to put on the market within the next year up to 200 houses that would be considered low-income houses and therefore affordable to those persons who have been so far excluded from being able to participate in the housing market in our society.

The Speaker: The Second Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. Alden M. McLaughlin, Jr.: Madam Speaker, I do not need to be convinced any further of what Government intends to do. That is plain and I am entirely in agreement with that policy.

I am seeking (as is my right and duty) to find out how it is that Government intends to do this. We must have something that is more than a pipe drain. While the Honourable Minister may think that is legalistic, I think that the House is entitled to know how Government intends to put these 200 homes on the market and I would be grateful for a response.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for Community Services.

Dr. the Hon. Frank McField: Madam Speaker, I intend to prove to the Second Elected Member for George Town that that is not a pipe drain—that we have to put these 200 houses on the market within a year. He wants to know from me specifically how we intend to do so and what I am saying is that we are working at this particular time to be able to decide what strategies and what schemes we are going to use in order to be able to accomplish our objectives which have been defined in our policy. But we do believe that we have the capacity to be able to do so. We own land already, we have $5 million from the Caribbean Development Bank and we are at this moment actively looking at ways and means to be able to construct these homes.

The Speaker: The Elected Member for North Side.

Mr. V. Arden McLean: Thank you, Madam Speaker. I heard the Minister say that they do not have any specifics. In an earlier supplementary he said that the intent was to purchase properties within the same time frame of the 200 homes in all the districts. Can the Minister say if the intent is to have those 200 homes spread out throughout all the districts on that property?

[laughter]

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Community Services.

Dr. the Hon. Frank McField: Madam Speaker, I am still waiting to hear the question, How can that Honourable Member help to make this realizable? He has asked the question and I go back to the point that we have already given the substantive answer which I think includes a lot of information already. The specifics which the Opposition is at this time trying to ascertain are not necessarily details that we feel we can reveal at this particular time.

The Speaker: Member for North Side do you have a follow up?

Mr. V. Arden McLean: Thank you, Madam Speaker. For the benefit of the Minister . . . he knows that I have always been in support of housing in this country the same way he has. I do not want to embarrass the Minister: the proposal is 200 homes and I suspect that is the initial number that they are looking at. My question is, 'How is that divided up among the districts?' Maybe not specifically the number, but is it intended that the first 200 homes will be throughout the six districts? That is my question.

The Speaker: Honourable Minister for Community Services.

Dr. the Hon. Frank McField: Madam Speaker, he is getting closer to his real question and his real interest.

My interest is first of all to make it possible for the Cayman Islands to have an additional 200 homes for low-income families. How that will be divided into the districts will depend very much upon how that good gentleman is able and willing to support this particular venture.

The Speaker: First Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Thank you. I understand what the Honourable Minister has said about the present developing of some specific initiatives which might not yet have all of the t's crossed and the i's dotted. Can the Minister say, if when he speaks to the number 200 if there is any situation, given the land that is available now, which lends to what type of combination it will be? Will be all single family homes, or will there be both single family homes and multi-family dwellings?

The Speaker: Honourable Minister for Community Services.

Dr. the Hon. Frank McField: Madam Speaker, we will have, as I said before, many different types of needs so that although we have groups of persons that cannot afford to get into the private sector housing market they are still, when looked at, divided from the point of view of their ability to own and purchase.

We would not look at one particular way of creating those homes—when we say homes it also means apartments. We would be looking at, for instance, if you were developing a project of apartments and you were selling them at a reasonable price of $60,000 or $100,000 and someone could not pay into that and finds great financial hardships in taking over those types of mortgages—because our experiences are that a lot of people are trying to buy apartments that are being built by the private sector.

So, Government does not want to go and start building apartments by itself when it knows also it can buy in and therefore have greater disbursement of persons by using private sector dwellings as well as what Government might be able to construct. We would go in and say ‘all right, you are selling your apartment for $60,000 they can only afford to pay $30,000’. Government would of course subsidise that to a point.

There are all kinds of means test that have to be developed to decide categories a person would go into, therefore, what scheme they would go into. It would depend upon income and all of those details. What we know at this time is that we would be able to at least use those particular types of construction with the purchase and availability of land to be able to guarantee within that framework of time when we could have that number of affordable houses on the market.

The Speaker: First Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Thank you. My follow up supplementary will lead the Minister to where I was going. The way we have zoning in the Cayman Islands at present is going to be a great factor in the number of dwellings that can be built, given the size. So I was asking if specific areas are identified—if perhaps it would be looked upon to have a special type of zoning for certain types of accommodations. If we speak to the 15 acres for instance that the Minister referred to in the substantive answer, and we were speaking single family homes, we might be looking at somewhere between 50 and 60 homes at maximum. That is why I asked the question.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Community Services.

Dr. the Hon. Frank McField: Madam Speaker, actually this housing issue has not started with me of course. There has been the committee that was looking into a lot of these issues with regards to housing policies for government. One of their policies to provide low-income Caymanians with adequate affordable housing was to see that there was a minimum standard housing code. That is, we would have the possibility to change the Law with regards to what is acceptable. We see this as one of the institutional barriers that has prevented Government from developing affordable housing.

I know there will be a lot of criticism when Government starts to provide affordable housing because one of the handicaps that Government has experienced is that it is almost like the Government is saying itself that, ‘We cannot have these minimum standards . . . if we build houses they have to look like this’. The people who will benefit from these houses have also come and say, ‘Well if Government is going to build something for me I know it has to look like this’.

Right in front of my door where I live on Templeton Street is a nice little house that was put down there by the Rotary Club of Grand Cayman and they got that house from Mr. Lawrence Thompson. [inaudible comment] Well, I do not know about the Lions Club, but whoever helped, it is where I live, it is on my street. But the piece of land that the person put the house on cost $45,000. More expensive than the house! And it is ridiculous that the person has to pay $45,000 for a piece of land. That piece of land could be divided into four portions I assure you, or at least two, and it makes good sense.

I think that what we have to do is to bring this as a policy, change the laws to make it more possible for poor people to exist in our midst and not—like I said in my Throne debate, legislate to the point where they cannot exist. Our standards are much higher than they are able to achieve themselves. So, it is our intention to change the law in order to accommodate this type of development.

The Speaker: Are there any further supplementaries? If not we will move on to the next question.

Question No. 24

The Speaker: The Elected Member from the district of East End.

No. 24: Mr. V. Arden McLean asked the Honourable Minister responsible for Community Services, Youth and Women’s Affairs, when will a Coach/Sports Coordinator be appointed for the eastern districts?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for Community Services.

Dr. the Hon. Frank McField: The Department of Youth and Sports has hired Mr. Elbert McLean as Community Football Coach (through coaches’ subsistence) for the eastern districts. His schedule is as follows: -

Day	Time	Venue	Groups
Monday	4-8 p.m.	East End	Primary School, 14 and UI7
Tuesday	4-9 p.m.	Bodden Town	U12, U14, UI7 and seniors
Wednesday	4-8 p.m.	North Side	U12, youth and women
Thursday	4-9 p.m.	Bodden Town	same as Tuesdays
Friday	4-6 p.m.	Truman Bodden Sports Complex	Football matches
Saturday	9-11 am	Truman Bodden Sports Complex	Football matches

Mr. McLean has successfully organised the U14 and U17 Football Programme in Bodden Town, therefore, he will be spending an extra day in Bodden Town until the teams in the other two districts are organised.

In the past, the National Football Coach has tried to establish a Youth Football Programme in the districts of North side and East End, but the communities for continuing the programme did not share the responsibility.

Mr. McLean will assist the Department of Youth and Sports in finding the desirable person(s) to make this happen.

The Speaker: Are there any further supplementaries? If not, we will move on to the next item of Business.

STATEMENTS BY MEMBERS OF THE GOVERNMENT

The Speaker: I have received no notice of any statements by any Member of the Government.

The Speaker: Can I have a Motion for the suspension of Standing Order 14(3) to allow Government Business to take precedence over other business?
Honourable Minister for Education.

Suspension of Standing Order 14(3)

Hon. Roy Bodden: Madam Speaker, I respectfully beg to move the suspension of Standing Order 14(3) so that Government Business may be able to be conducted today being deemed Private Members' Motions day.

The Speaker: Thank you, Honourable Minister. The question is that Standing Order 14(3) be duly suspended to allow Government Business to take precedence over other business.

All those in favour please say Aye. Those against, No.

Ayes.

The Speaker: The Ayes have it.

Agreed: Standing Order 14(3) suspended.

The Speaker: Would the Honourable Minister wish to commence his debate now or would he wish for a morning break? I am entirely up to your wish.

Hon. Roy Bodden: Madam Speaker, I think it would be in the interest of the House to take the morning break and if it meets with your pleasure I would suggest a 10-minute break so that I can resuscitate myself somehow and resume thereafter.

The Speaker: Thank you, Honourable Minister. At this time we will suspend for 10 minutes.

Agreed: Standing Order 14(3) suspended.

Proceedings suspended at 11.43 am

Proceedings resumed at 12.05 pm

The Speaker: Please be seated. Proceedings are resumed.

Speaker's Ruling arising out of Point of Procedure regarding Reply to Throne Speech Raised by the Second Elected Member for George Town on Monday 25 February 2002

The Speaker: Before calling on the Minister of Education to continue his debate on the Budget Address, I was asked some days ago to make a ruling and I propose to do that at this time. That is the ruling asking who basically had a right of reply, if any.

Firstly, I propose to go through the past 10 years; set out the findings as I have found them and conclude with an analysis which I have made and then my ruling thereon.

▪ In 1992, the Honourable Thomas Jefferson, Leader of Government Business, moved the Motion of thanks and the vote was taken. He also concluded the debate on the Throne Speech, the question was again put on the Motion of thanks at the end of the debate.

▪ In 1993, the Leader of Government Business moved the Motion of thanks. The Financial Secretary also delivered his Budget Address and moved that debate on the Budget Address be deferred and that the Throne and Budget Addresses be debated together. The Leader was the last to speak before the Honourable Financial Secretary replied to his Budget address. The question was put that the Appropriation Bill be given a second reading.

▪ In 1994, the Honourable T. Jefferson, Leader of Government Business, moved the Motion of thanks. Financial Secretary wound up the debate as he replied to the Budget Address.

▪ In 1995, the Leader of Government Business moved the Motion of thanks. When the Leader got up to debate the Throne Speech the Speaker, the Honourable Sybil McLaughlin, said: "The Honourable Minister, who is the mover of the Motion . . . indicated yesterday that he leaves the Island tomorrow morning and will be gone for some time. In those circumstances, the Chair will not require him to complete the winding up debate because this is a Motion that does not call for a conclusion or action. It is just a Motion to debate the Throne Speech which is now taking place. Another Minister, as I understand, will do the closing remarks".

The Speaker did not put the question at the end of the debate but said and I quote, "That concludes the debate on the Throne Speech delivered by His Excellency the Governor. As there is no question for conclusion that terminates that issue".

▪ In 1996, the Honourable Truman Bodden, the then Leader of Government Business, moved the Motion of thanks. He also concluded the debate. The question was put at the end thereof.

▪ In 1997, the Father of the House, the Honourable John McLean moved the Motion of thanks. The Speaker called upon the Honourable Financial Secretary to reply as the Throne and Budget addresses were debated together. The question at the end of that Appropriation Bill was for it to be read a second time.

- In 1998, the Honourable Thomas Jefferson, Leader of Government Business moved the Motion of thanks. Two Members debated after the Second Member who was a Member of the Back-Bench at that time moved a closure Motion that the question be now put. The question was that the House records its grateful thanks was then put.

- In 1999 the Father of the House, Honourable John McLean moved the Motion of thanks. The Honourable Second Official Member concluded the debate. I should wish to refer the circumstances as set out in the Hansard for that year. The Honourable David Balantyne addressed the Speaker by saying as follows: “Mr. Speaker, I realise this is perhaps a break of tradition, but I do have one or two matters that I wish to bring to the attention of the House...”. He concluded by saying, “This is all I wanted to say, Mr. Speaker, I am grateful for the opportunity, even it is unusual, except to add that I personally want to offer my thanks...” It goes on to The Excellency the Governor.

- In 2000, the Father of the House, the Honourable John McLean. He also concluded the debate. The question was then put that this House records its grateful thanks.

- In 2001, the Father of the House, the Honourable W. McKeever moved the Motion of thanks. The Honourable Financial Secretary replied as the debate was on the Throne Speech and Budget Address. However, before putting the question on the Second reading of the Appropriation Bill, the Speaker said, “the House having recorded its grateful thanks to His Excellency the Governor for the delivering the Throne Speech on Friday, 9 March 2001 the question is that the Appropriation Bill 2001 be given a second reading.

I further broke down the information that I found and I will share as follows:

- In the Year 1992 the Speaker was the Honourable Sybil McLaughlin. The Motion was moved by Thomas Jefferson and the Speaker in that instance said and I quote, “[May I] ask the Mover of the Motion if he would like to conclude?” The Honourable Thomas C. Jefferson concludes.

- In 1993 the Speaker was the Honourable Sybil McLaughlin. Honourable T. Jefferson moved and he spoke before the Honourable Financial Secretary wound up as the question was put on the Appropriation Bill and both debates took place at the same time.

- In 1994 the Speaker was Mrs. Sybil McLaughlin. The Honourable Thomas Jefferson moved that the Speech from the Throne by Her Majesty the Queen, be taken as read and consideration be set down for Wednesday 2 March 1994. The last Speaker was the Honourable Financial Secretary, George McCarthy as it was again the Appropriation Bill and the Throne Speech together.

- In 1995 Honourable Sybil McLaughlin, [Speaker]. The Honourable Thomas Jefferson moved [the Motion] as in 1992, the Election year. The Speaker at that particular time said that the Honourable Minister, the mover of the Motion to thank His Excellency the Governor for his Throne Speech, indicated that he would leave the Island the next morning. In those circumstances, the Chair would not require him to complete the winding up debate because the motion “does not call for a conclusion or action. It is just a motion to debate the Throne Speech . . . Another Minister, will as I understand, do the closing remarks”. And the question was so put.

- In 1996 the Speaker was Mrs. Sybil McLaughlin. The Honourable Truman Bodden moved and he concluded.

- In 1997 the Honourable Mabry Kirkconnell was the Speaker. The Honourable John McLean moved and the Speaker called on the Honourable Financial Secretary as again it was the Appropriation Bill that was being dealt with together.

- In 1998 the Honourable Mabry Kirkconnell was the Speaker. The Honourable Thomas Jefferson moved. In this particular instance we saw that there was a closure Motion, which in my view was a nova actus interveniens and changed the situations so the debate was prematurely aborted.

- In 1999 Honourable Mabry Kirkconnell was the Speaker. The Motion was moved by Honourable John McLean. As I indicated earlier, the Honourable Second Official Member concluded but indicated that it was a move away from tradition.

- In 2000 the Honourable Deputy Speaker was the Honourable Edna Moyle. The Motion was moved by the Honourable John McLean and the last person to speak was the Honourable John J.B. McLean. The question was put.

- In 2001 the Honourable Mabry Kirkconnell was the Speaker. The Motion was moved by the Father of the House, Honourable McKeever Bush. The last person who spoke was the Honourable George McCarthy because once again it was the Appropriation Bill that was debated together.

Honourable Members as we can see from the research that I have done, six out of the past 10 years, the Leader of Government Business moved the Motion of thanks. Four out of the 10 years the Father of the House moved the Motion of thanks for the Throne Speech. During this period of research, 1992 to 2001, there are however, five instances in which the Throne Speech was made with the Budget address and in all of those instances the Honourable Financial Secretary exercised his right of reply as in my view, was appropriate for him to so do.

There are two instances where the Leader of Government Business moved the Motion of thanks and concluded the debate as well as in another instance delegated the right to conclude to another Government Minister.

There is but one instance that the Father of the House moved the Motion of thanks and also concluded the debate on the Throne Speech.

There is another instance within the 10-year period that the Father of the House moved the Motion of thanks and another Government Member being the Second Official Member concluded the debate which I have already dealt with. And I have already dealt with the last instance which was aborted by the fact that a closure Motion was moved by a Member of the then Back-Bench.

Therefore, Honourable Members, in 9 of the 10 years, the debate was concluded by a Government Minister or official member. The only exception during that period was the time that the closure motion was so moved on the Throne Speech by the Back-Bench Member.

It would appear from the research conducted that in the early days the Leader of Government Business moved the Motion of Thanks and concluded the debate other than when there was an Appropriation Bill when the right of reply by the Honourable Third Official Member was appropriate.

In more recent years, however, there is no consistency that it was the Leader of Government who concluded debate on the Throne Speech as it was moved toward the Father of the House having concluded the debates in the later years.

Since the Speech from the Throne is read by the Governor, but contains the Government's policies, it may not be unreasonable to allow a representative of the Government to conclude the debate since it may be in the public's interest for the Government to respond to matters that have arisen during the course of the debate. This, in my respectful view, does not confer an unfair advantage on the Government as it is the Government's policies that have been subjected to the debate and the practical outcome of the past practice is that Government has, in effect, a right to respond to any criticism of its policies which have arisen in the course of the debate.

Honourable Members, before the debate on this Throne Speech so concludes the Chair intends to invite the Government to respond to the Throne Speech. Obviously this is a right that the Government has a discretion whether or not to exercise: Herein lies my ruling.

The Honourable Minister responsible for Education continuing the Throne Speech Debate.

GOVERNMENT BUSINESS

Debate on the Throne Speech Delivered By His Excellency, Mr. Peter J. Smith, CBE, Governor of the Cayman Islands, Friday 15 February 2002

(Continuation of debate thereon)

Hon. Roy Bodden: Thank you. Madam Speaker, yesterday afternoon I expended some 12 minutes of my allotted two hours in my debate and at the conclusion I had drawn reference to a matter which gives me serious concern and which I deemed it necessary to make a reply distancing the United Democratic Party from the notion of garrison politics and garrison constituencies as espoused by Opposition elements.

Madam Speaker, overnight I thought about it and I wondered why would persons who purport to be responsible, introduce such alien concepts into Caymanian politics. 'Garrison' politics and 'garrison' constituencies basically mean that if you are in a garrison constituency and you represent a certain element or a certain party, your constituency is almost parametrically sealed against any outside political influence coming in to the point where violence is often exercised to keep that vacuum; to keep outside elements and ideologies which are different from what is espoused within the area.

My reading of 'Born fi Dead', the book, which details the birth and development of the Jamaica poses deals a lot with that. In my travels to and from Jamaica I sometimes hear of it and when I pass through it is often pointed out to me. But that has never been anything that has occurred or that the ground in the Cayman Islands is even fertile for, except to say that I notice—and maybe people are trying to give us notice—the Common Room is off grounds now to the Opposition. Even in my time here in the most heated debates, all Members of this Honourable House socialised in the Common Room.

Well, of course in a democracy people have freedom of choice but I just wondered if this whole notion of garrison communities and garrison constituencies has something to do with the boycotting of the Members' Common Room. Because if we purport to be responsible people, can we not distinguish and differentiate between the 'cut and thrust' of healthy parliamentary debate and our private virtues and prejudices, which should not be taken into our everyday activities of parliamentary affairs?

Madam Speaker, just like the Government has a responsibility to be frank, forthright and to be candid, so too does the Opposition have a responsibility to display maturity. They have a well defined role under the Westminster system with prescribed behavioural patterns.

They have to live up to certain expectations just like the Government has to live up to certain performances. The breakdown in the behaviour, as far as I am concerned, is quite clear and it seems to me that it is high time we begin to practise what we preach and come back to what was normal and accepted behaviour.

As I listen to the Talk shows and hear comments from time to time and particularly read what is carried on Caypolitics, I cannot help but be disturbed because it seems to me that since the birth of the United Democratic Party there are mischievous elements in the country who are bent on twisting, fermenting strife and destroying what has up to this point, been a peaceful, political transformation.

It is democratic right of persons to form associations; to form political parties and the persons who got together to form the United Democratic Party are exercising a legitimate, legal, constitutional and democratic right. With the formation of that party comes a mandate to foster the development and progress of the Cayman Islands which, in a way that I contend, can best be fostered through an organisation that is united common values and objectives made public espoused by the Members as to the direction in which they are taking the country.

Other individuals, if they are constructive, can form themselves into an entity and propose what they see as the imperatives and importance. But you know why that has not been done up to this point? Because certain persons here can only function as an agglomeration of individuals. This is an individualistic society and I have said that our downfall is the celebration of piracy and I am working to put pirate politics to an end. This whole business of friend today and foe tomorrow and 'when it suits me I am your ally and when it does not suit me I jettison you' has to end. This is the 21st Century. Piracy should not be practised or celebrated, least of all, under the Westminster system.

And so, I believe and I am convinced that the United Democratic Party as an entity has a role to play and thank God that there are those persons who are like-minded who believe that it is essential to galvanise ourselves into a unit to move the country forward, who are prepared to put up a manifesto, to stand by it to try to achieve housing; to try to achieve technical and vocational education, to try to achieve a proper health service with all its ancillary elements. That time has come and I am happy that history has afforded me the opportunity to be part of that bold vision.

Now, history is rife with nay-sayers and detractors. We shall have to leave them behind. Events must be structured so that the people can know. What we (United Democratic Party) are about is drafting a new social contract which is inclusive; a social contract which includes everyone even those who were hitherto disenfranchised, down-trodden, rejected and labelled. All inclusive.

And if the Opposition wants to play their part, there is a part for them to play. But they have to realise that it is a constructive and responsible part. You cannot criticise unless you have alternatives and I do not hear any alternatives. I just heard, 'There was nothing excited in the Throne Speech'. But I read the transcripts of what was said and I did not see any constructive alternatives offered because if they were offered a responsible government would have to be forced to take cognisance of them.

Political maturity is what it is all about and we have to practice what we preach! Therefore, we cannot rail about the possibility of 'garrison' politics and 'garrison' constituencies when we are boycotting the Common Room. That itself is a form of 'garrison' politics.

Madam Speaker, I want to turn now to equally important things. I want to turn to the Ministry for which I hold responsibility and developments and I want to speak about challenges for which appropriate responses must be crafted. I want to speak about the Government's vision of what it sees as the way forward in Education, Employment Relations, Human Resources, Culture: all those areas for which I hold responsibility.

The Department of Employment Relations

Firstly, I want to speak about employment relations because in many respects I think that is the easiest and it is the one that the positive results are more easily obvious.

The Department of Employment Relations (formerly the Labour Department) is responsible for assisting the Government in the formulation and implementation of sound labour and employment policies by promoting a stable work environment, training and career development, opportunities for employment creation and the necessity to employ best practices.

The Department has a staff complement of 17, which includes the Director and the Deputy Director. We have a new Director (new in the sense that the present Director is a civil servant of some years standing) brought back into the realm of the Civil Service after a two-year sabbatical in the private sector and this Director has come to the Department with a refreshing new vision and has made leaps and bounds to the point where we now have a draft discussion Paper (White Paper) on a new employment relations law which is a matter of pride because it encompasses not only labour, as we know it, but takes also into consideration pensions, health and safety in the work place, workmen's compensation, and aspects of the trade and business as it is applicable to employment relations.

The discussion Paper has met the approval of the employment forum which is that body representing all of the major employment sectors: the Chamber of Commerce, the Tourism Association, the Bankers Association, the Society of Professional Accountants, NACE, Human Resource Practitioners, the whole gamut. It has been taken to the Executive Council and has received its approval to be tabled in the House for public discussion for a period of three months. Thereafter, when we receive the feedback we will amend the discussion document and draft a Bill accordingly.

The law will be predicated upon certain things, not the least of which is an obligation by the Cayman Islands to meet with International Conventions, Standards and Regulations including those set down by the International Labour Organisation (ILO), but also those set up and expected from the International Convention on Social and Economic Rights, which specifically has to do with minimum wage legislation in the Cayman Islands.

It takes into consideration the whole development and future of the Tribunal system which has served the country well, but which is under review now with a view to improving that mechanism. We will still be using tribunals albeit on a much reduced scale to what was there and we will still have the Appeals Tribunal.

Improvements have been made, in that, we have removed the Appeals Tribunal from the sight where the Tribunals themselves have been housed. In this we have employed the consultancy services of Mr. Peter Syson whose Paper I tabled earlier in the Legislative Assembly and who is advised on arbitration, conciliation and consultation because we want to move away from a largely adversarial system to one of advice, arbitration and conciliation so that the employment relations climate becomes less contentious and more identifying the problems as they exist in the work place and trying to 'nip them in the bud'.

Most recently, the Employment Relations Department conducted an unemployment survey throughout the Islands. We did this because we were receiving complaints about significant unemployment among elements of the Caymanian labour force. Madam Speaker, I would like to share with your and the Honourable House some of the findings, because I believe this is significant in what we are trying to develop and significant and revealing in the way forward:

□ The total male persons seeking employment numbered 115 with 46 applicants or 40% of the total being in the age range of 18 to 25. And 23 persons or 20% of the total being in the age range of 26 to 35.

□ The total female persons seeking employment numbered 118 with 39 applicants or 33.92% being in the age range of 26 to 35. A total of 35 persons or approximately 30% being in the age range of 18 to 25.

It should also be noted that males exceeded female applicants in the over 55 age group. In the male category there were 11 persons who sought employment with the eldest person being 83 years of age.

There were several issues which were gleaned from this exercise one of which is that if we are going to be successful in our attempts to seek total employment for Caymanians we have to take into consideration certain factors and I will not elaborate on what those factors are at this point.

Suffice it to say that the Employment Relations Department has deemed it necessary to think about offering some courses in resume writing, deportment and hygiene and also punctuality and general interests. I would hope as the Minister that—and I certainly encourage the Employment Relations Department to take this information and sometime in the near future put together training seminars so that we can equip our people, not only ensuring that they have the necessary skills for what is offered, but also that they work in these other areas of resume preparation and give advice on deportment and appearance and so forth.

The next step in the presentation of these proposals I hope will be to address the Chamber of Commerce and that is after this discussion document has been tabled in this Honourable House. Education presents a rather more significant challenge and we have made some great strides, many of which have been mentioned in the Throne Speech.

I just want to say in conjunction with my interests and my objective of developing information and communications technology as a tool in education, that the Government has entered into formal discussions with IBM. It may be a matter of knowledge that late last year as Minister along with my Chief Education Officer we were invited to a seminar put on by IBM in Palisades, New Jersey and we attended. Emanating out of that came the interest to take matters further on a more formal scale.

We have been discussing with IBM the possibility of doing an information technology audit of our schools with the view to providing the most up to date information technology for everyday use in our classrooms. IBM as a company has informed me that they are interested in financing that national project. The Government is paying for the audit. When we ascertain exactly what the proposals are and have seen how it would fit our objectives, I would hope that it is a project that we can go forward with. Because at the end of the exercise it is our objective to ensure that every high school graduate in the Cayman Islands comes out computer literate.

I believe that the project, should we follow through with it, would mean that every student in the schools in the Cayman Islands has access to his own personal computer. The logistics and details are still to be worked out but certainly at the school which I visited in Gwinnett County, Georgia, I saw this practice in place and I can say that from discussions with the Principal and those staff members involved, one of the immediate benefits of this was that disciplinary problems in the school were lessened significantly by the availability of computers and a computer lab to these students.

So, we would expect to see almost immediate positive returns on such an investment if we were to take it up. But the die has by no means, been cast. There are many factors that we have to take into consideration such as the ultimate cost and if indeed we do take up the offer of financing by IBM we would have to ensure that the terms are suitable to us.

It is also my understanding from IBM that they have done this in Grenada and there is a proposal to do so in Puerto Rico and some of the other Islands of the Caribbean. It is something that we are looking forward to with great interest.

I am happy also to be able to report that the Cadet Corps is off and doing well. As is to be expected with the inception and implementation of any new ideas, we had our beginning challenges. I heard yesterday from the Chairman of the Advisory Committee and I heard this morning from the Administrative Officer in the Ministry whose responsibility is to liaise with the Cadet Corps on behalf of the Ministry that we have made great strides. There is now a female officer because we have about 20 male cadets and 16 female cadets. So, we have a full co-educational corps and we have a male commandant and female officer who will be assisting.

Uniforms have been procured and we are in the process of outfitting the youngsters. It is a four-year programme so we have started at the Middle School. The Corps headquarters is just over here in the lot adjacent to the Library and has been refurbished and indeed is still being worked upon.

I look forward to a passing out parade sometime, hopefully, before His Excellency the Governor's term is up in May so that he being a source of great encouragement, can have the pleasure and the opportunity of handing out the candidate Cadets their kits and their certificates of completing the initial training.

The Speaker: Honourable Minister, are you moving on to a new topic? Is it an appropriate time for the luncheon break?

Hon. Roy Bodden: It certainly is, Madam Speaker.

The Speaker: Thank you. We will suspend until 2.30 pm.

Proceedings suspended at 12.45 am

Proceedings resumed at 2.41 pm

The Speaker: Please be seated. Proceedings are resumed. The Honourable Minister responsible for Education continuing his debate on the Throne Speech.

Hon. Roy Bodden: Thank you, Madam Speaker. Prior to the luncheon suspension I was making some comments on the...

Point of Order
(Lack of Quorum)

Mr. Cline A. Glidden, Jr.: Madam Speaker, on a point of order.

The Speaker: Please state your point of order.

Mr. Cline A. Glidden, Jr.: We do not have a quorum. There are six Members from the Government Bench and there is only one Member from the Opposition.

The Speaker: That is a point of order under Standing Order 13(1), which says, "The quorum of the House and of a Committee of the whole House shall consist of eight Members in addition to the person presiding. (2) If objection is taken by any Member that a quorum is not present..." objection has been taken, so I would ask for the Serjeant to summon the relevant number.

[Pause].

The Speaker: Honourable Minister for Education a quorum is now present you may kindly continue.

Hon. Roy Bodden: Thank you. Prior to taking the luncheon suspension I was about to make the point that on the matter of Employment Relations is much work to be done in the country. Since assuming the Ministry there have been, to my disappointment, a significant number of instances of disingenuousness on the part of some employers as far as good practice and fair employment practices are concerned in their recruitment and treatment of Caymanians.

I believe that these are matters that should first be attempted at redressing by dialogue and discussion, but if that fails then I believe we should resort to the letter of the Law. I say that to say that some observations received regarding the current Labour Law is that it 'lacks teeth'.

We have tried in this draft proposal to strengthen and bolster those areas of weaknesses from experience in the present Law but there is still much to be done, so much so that it is proposed that there be a closer liaison between the Employment Relations Department, the Immigration Department and the Trade and Licensing Board.

The Immigration Trade and Licensing Board and the Employment Relations Department will have to work in closer liaison to ensure that the Law is upheld and that best practices obtain throughout the world of employment.

I do not want to elaborate and I am certainly not one to take tales out of school, but the occasion has presented itself where I have had (as the Minister) to call certain establishments and certain employers and remind them of their obligations under the Law to be non-discriminatory and to be fair in their treatment of Caymanians.

I cannot say that I have been successful on every occasion, but for the most part, the persons on the other end of the line left me with the impression that they were willing to work. It is incumbent upon us that we get this matter settled. That is why I would invite all persons concerned (stakeholders, employers and employees), to get the draft discussion Paper when it is made available to the public, peruse it and familiarise themselves with it and let us know of their concerns. We would like to build a strong tripartite system of employer/employee and the Government as a neutral party down the middle. It is incumbent upon us that we get such a practice in place.

We propose working in conjunction with the Chamber of Commerce and the Society of Human Resource Professionals to make available training and employment opportunities for Caymanians, so that Caymanians can avail themselves of opportunities in order that they can make the best of the employment opportunities available and that they can be upwardly mobile and keep abreast of modern international trends.

The Ministry is also in discussion with the Investors in People programme headquartered in the United Kingdom with a view to adopting that standard in the Cayman Islands. Indeed, we have been offered a full country licence. This will give us an opportunity to further train and professionalize employees. There are several international companies currently operating in the Cayman Islands, which are familiar with this standard. We believe that we have an obligation to ensure that 80 per cent of the businesses which employ 10 persons or less in the Cayman Islands are not disadvantaged. So much so, that the Employment Relations Department has bolstered itself by the acquisition of a small business advisor.

We intend to work in tandem and co-operation with the Ministry of Tourism and Commerce to develop a proper micro-finance initiative which involves proper advice and counselling and supervision on the part of the Employment Relations Department working with the Ministry of Tourism and Commerce which is going to provide the funding through, hopefully, the Cayman Islands Development Bank.

I pause here to put in a plug for the United Democratic Party because shortly after, indeed, even before we came as a government, the Minister of Tourism expressed an interest in this kind of venture. I told him that I was also interested in showing him some literature I had on micro-finance initiatives. On a visit, which we had to the Bahamas on Commonwealth Parliamentary Association business, we took the opportunity to visit the Bahamas Development Bank.

I am happy that the Minister persisted in going through with that idea and I am happy that history afforded me an opportunity to be a part of the United Democratic Party which has made a milestone in the Cayman Islands economic development by the establishment of the Cayman Islands Development Bank. I think it is something that the small and medium size entrepreneur can look forward to and I would implore them to take advantage of the opportunities to not only start their businesses but to further develop and improve them and to take advantage of the advice and the presence of the small business advisor at the Employment Relations Department.

A sore point has been the backlog of work from labour tribunals and I find it unfortunate and regrettable to say that all labour tribunals have not been as conscientious as they could be. There is an instance where I have written to the chairman of a labour tribunal who is also a Member of the Legislative Assembly. As the Minister who is responsible, I have received complaints from persons whose matters were discussed at labour tribunals and three years have elapsed in some cases and no decisions have been forthcoming.

Now, that is a most unfortunate situation because it is a situation where we cannot easily justify this. What has happened now is that parties are going to be objecting to the decision whatever way that decision falls.

The Employment Relations Department has come forward with a plan for addressing this backlog and I hope that we can get to this easily, but I do not want to leave before underscoring one point. I find it rather humorous that the UDP is being lectured to by one of these parties who is so busy that he could not find the time to put these decisions as they could have been put after such a long time has elapsed and is purporting to represent the interest of persons. Such delinquency cannot be equated to true representation.

Now, I do not want to call any name because it is not necessary, suffice it to say, that the person knows of whom I am speaking and will be receiving a letter because it cast me in an untenable light undeservedly so. I am being petitioned by persons on matters that should have been settled a long time ago and I am unfortunately and regrettably not in an enlightened position for the reason that I do not know about some of these things. Yet, as a Member of the UDP I am talked down to by that Member. I hope that we can get a satisfactory settlement to that soon.

We believe that the future is great for employment and employment relations and it would be remiss of me if I left this section without saying how proud I am of the efforts being put in by the new Director and his staff. It is these kinds of civil servants that make policy makers like me look good because they are able to take policy and implement it in such a way that it is acceptable and professionally done. I commend the Director and his staff and wish them well.

Education

Education is perhaps that part of the Ministry closest to my heart. We have several challenges in Education; some of them I am satisfied that we are moving as we should move towards meeting. Others, I am not so confident.

First of all, I want to turn to the challenges which emanate out of the Millet Report. I am disappointed that the Education Department has moved so exasperatingly slow with the implementation of those of the recommendations that we have accepted. I realise of course, that some things we have to exercise caution in, but a year has passed now and I think we should have been a little further.

I believe, Madam Speaker, as the Minister, that Education could do with a shake-up because without a shake-up it stands in jeopardy of being eclipsed by the efforts made by the Employment Relations Department. I would be happy to see my departments move in tandem. However, that is not to say that Education has not made some strides. I think, perhaps to put it into perspective I should say that much is expected of Education, if for no other reason than that is the avenue by which we expect to prepare and empower Caymanians to hold their own in Caymanian society.

So, Madam Speaker, I would encourage the Education Department, the Chief Education Officer, to accelerate the pace at which the Department is moving towards addressing those recommendations accepted in the Millet Report. I can say with some satisfaction that a committee has been set up comprised of Members of the Education Department to examine the Report of the committee to examine conditions relating to the recruitment of Caymanians into the Teaching profession with a view to recommending to myself as Minister what measures they think can be successfully implemented by the Government in terms of attracting and maintaining Caymanians into the Teaching profession.

Immediately arising out of that Report is the recommendation that we establish some sort of programme for certifying teachers' aides and the President of the Community College has been working in tandem with Mrs. Marjorie Beckles—I believe that she is the person the Education Department holds responsible for the development of pre-school curriculum and for the supervision of pre-schools. The President of the Community College, in conjunction with Ms. Beckles, has devised a two-year Associate Degree programme which will lead to the certification of teachers' aides.

This is an excellent exercise and I expect it to yield palpable and [sanguine] sanguinary results and I commend them for their efforts. Coming at a time when we are not in the greatest of position to offer incentives and these kinds of attractions, I believe that this is the way to go.

As the Minister, I have said to the Government that what I would like to see ultimately in terms of teacher education is a concurrent degree. This would afford the teacher a degree in a discipline which he/she would teach and at the same time a teacher-training certificate and degree, a Bachelor of Science, a Bachelor of Arts or a Bachelor of Education Degree which can be attained over a four-year programme to two degrees running concurrently.

I would hope that we can get such a programme implemented so that the Community College can play an integral part in the offering of this programme. I would like to set the wheels in motion to explore a collaborative exercise with preferably a Canadian University. If not, then we have to see what other universities might conveniently and affordably offer such a programme in tandem with our Community College.

I believe that if there is a weakness in what we have been doing, it is that we have not paid enough attention to the recruiting of young energetic and able Caymanians into the Teaching profession. In some instances this is the shortcoming of the Education Department, although it may be unfair and as a result of that I hope that in keeping with their adaptation of the recommendations of the Millet Report, the Education Department can better streamline itself to focus on recruitment of teachers, as well as all of the other important functions it performs currently.

The schools inspectorate is an independent body, which holds responsibility for ensuring that appropriate standards are met and maintained in Education. It is an organisation of which I am very proud. The members of staff are eminently equipped, well experienced, and thoroughly professional. All work that they have done and all advice that they have given is of the highest calibre. I commend them to maintain their excellent standards.

It is a source of pride for me when I meet the inspectorate staff: I engage them in discussions and conversations because they are knowledgeable and they express their opinions in an engaging way and they have the respect of all in the Education establishment. I look forward to their continued support and advice and, certainly as the Minister, I offer them my advice and the Government's support in ways that are important.

I have intimated that I am concerned about standards of literacy and numeracy in the Government school system. I want to be sure that with all the other attractions that we participate in that we do not lose focus on the three Rs. Just this morning I had occasion to remark to the Chief Education Officer that we should not lose sight of the fact. I say that to say that I am cognisant of the standards being set in some of the private schools and I am particularly anxious to know that the Government schools are in no way disadvantaged. This is why it is important that we get on with this business of a National Curriculum. Here again is an area that, as Minister, I must say I am a little disappointed, in that, we have not progressed any further and that we are moving at such a pedestrian pace.

I think that it is, as I echoed for some years while I was a Back Bench Member of this Honourable House, that when we entered into this business of a National Curriculum we did not quite think of all of the ramifications and implications involved. We have a system of education here where we do not have a roster of readily available supply teachers.

The problem we have in developing the National Curriculum, as I understand it, is that the same persons who are working on curriculum development are also full-time classroom teachers and often have to be relied upon to do work on weekends and sometimes on holidays. In other jurisdictions, these kinds of major undertakings are not handled in this way and persons who are working on major exercises such as the National Curriculum development would normally be freed from a fulltime teaching load. That work would either be done by supply or substitute teachers hired for a semester or two as the case might be.

So, there is a sense in which, although I am disappointed, I have to understand the circumstances and my impatience should not cloud my appreciation of the work these persons are doing. I am concerned, however, that we are lagging behind and if we do not do something to accelerate our pace, the time we take to complete the exercise we will have been overtaken by modern trends and changes so much so that our work may in the end be counter-productive.

I would hope, Madam Speaker, that we could find a way of accelerating the pace and one of the challenges that needs to be met is that we need to build up a roster of supply teachers who can be available not only on occasions like these, but on those occasions where we have emergencies that teachers have to leave their classrooms because of death, family illnesses or whatever, so that our children may not be disadvantaged and we do not have to do any doubling up.

There was a question this morning about the restructuring of secondary education. The restructuring of secondary education is an important tenet in the objectives which I have set myself. But it is not an easy exercise, nor did I believe that it would be. While I am of the opinion that it will make our system more efficient and for comparative purposes, ideally we will be better off when we have achieved three high schools with which to measure certain standards in academic performance, in sport, et cetera, it will strengthen our children and afford them greater opportunities for competition. It is something that we have to properly develop and think out before we can put it on line and into focus. Hand in hand with that has to be improved access to information and communications technology.

As Minister, I would really love to see information technology in our schools being accessible on a wider and more frequent basis than the way it is being handled currently. It is my ambition to explore the possibility of our children from even at the primary stage each having access to a personal computer and the business of computer labs as we know them now, be used to bolster and augment this exercise. I would love to see all subjects being made available through information technology from science, mathematics right up to social studies. Computer literacy and the ability to use a computer is in itself a marketable skill and that would bolster our children's marketability, coupled with the fact that as an educator, I am sure that it would change many of their attitudes towards school and learning. It would be a challenge both to teachers and students to do even better than we are doing now.

I want to say too, that this whole idea and philosophy of the way we approach teaching has to be rethought. Teaching must not be seen as a chore but as a learning exercise which is fun, challenging and which has rewards at the end; rewards which can be converted into many things not the least of which is an income.

Earlier, upon assuming office, I held dialogue with the Chamber of Commerce about building a private/public sector partnership and specifically about the introduction of a mentoring programme, which would be geared as the slogan says, Towards training the next generation of Caymanian business leaders. I am happy to say that the exercise has come to fruition and when the Chamber launches its job Expo early in March we will be launching the mentoring programme.

I would like to publicly thank the Chamber of Commerce for their interest, not only in this but also for accepting the invitation which I gave them to help us (the Ministry) ascertain what skills and knowledge are most desired by employers of Caymanian school leavers.

It is my hope that the information gleaned from this survey carried out by the Chamber of Commerce can be used to craft a matriculation examination which will enable every Caymanian high school graduate to leave with a certificate which will allow him or her to gain access to employment in Caymanian business.

Ideally, it will work something like this: the certificates will state that these holders have attained a minimum aptitude in the skills and knowledge listed. It will enable them to gain entry perhaps in such fields as bank teller, clerical officer in the public service, clerk in a law firm or accounting firm. It will not afford them entry to college or university, but it will be more than what is currently carried by many students who leave with only a leaving certificate, which if we were to know has little value other than being purely an attendance certificate.

I hope that one of these days we can develop this into something significant and substantial so that it will be recognised even as entry to Community College Associate level degree programmes. It certainly will give the holders a sense of pride and a sense of worth.

The greatest challenge in Education as far as I see it has to be an improvement in the socialisation of our children. I am going to tread now, Madam Speaker, in hither to uncharted waters. As a Minister I am preparing a paper to share with the caucus of the United Democratic Party and ultimately the Government, that we need to change the way we do business. I would like to speak from a position of authority when I prepare my paper to say that we need to revisit this whole business of requiring people coming on work permits with their children to send their children exclusively to private schools. It is a counter-productive exercise because what we are doing is really prejudicial and we are depriving Caymanian children of an opportunity of great socialisation with children from outside their jurisdiction.

Learning is an interactive exercise and when we do this we may think that we are helping our Caymanian children by this protectionist exercise, but in the long run we are depriving them of opportunities of association, sharing and socialisation with other children from different jurisdictions, different countries, different nationalities, different ethnic and cultural background. We are depriving them of a glorious opportunity to broaden their social horizons. But I caution: In order to do this the Government has to be in a position where it can quite comfortably accommodate these students those who are desirous of taking advantage of the opportunity to be schooled in the public system.

To this extent the Government will have to look at imposing some kind of fees (similar in nature to those in the private schools) on these students who (remember now) are not Caymanians so they will have to pay school fees. This is how the Government will have to receive its money for providing the space and maintaining the services.

It is a matter that I believe bears looking into because in this era of human rights and natural justice, people could quite logically, I would think, claim that they are being deprived of what for them should be a natural right and that they are being prejudiced against by this exercise, which right now, requires work permit holders to send their children to private schools.

It is a challenge for the future and it is one of those things that I have cursorily discussed with my technical advisors in the Ministry that we should set some time to investigate so that we can come from an informed position and see when we could implement, if feasible, such a change.

Some people may know, but I say it for the edification of those Honourable Members of the House who are not now familiar with it. The Government has received and accepted an application from an institution called St. Matthews University Medical School to establish a presence here in the Cayman Islands. We have upon investigation granted such approval because we believe that it is in the best interest of our educational developments. This is a medical school located from an offshore jurisdiction. Mainly it is a United States institution. Basically, it is expected to start up in May with an initial complement of 200 students. It is a reputable academic institution.

Some of the students have first degrees and many of them are brilliant students who, because of the quotas and the residential requirements, et cetera, were unable to gain admission into mainstream North American medical schools.

The University administrators have offered to give one qualified Caymanian student a scholarship per year. The idea is that these students will be residents at the institution in the Cayman Islands for two years thereafter they will go on to residency in a North American university. Most of the teaching will be done online and it is our understanding that one of the attractions of the Cayman Islands was the availability of Internet access.

In addition to the academic enterprise and academic prestige we believe that this can have great economic spin-offs for the Cayman Islands since each of these students will have a $50,000 scholarship or loan. So, it will afford Caymanians the opportunity to earn some money through apartment rental, et cetera, and it certainly will afford Caymanian merchants.

Students, as you will well know are not the stingiest of spenders and indeed surveys have shown that students are some of the most generous spenders in the economy. We look forward to the movement of this institution and we certainly encourage its development.

I am happy to say that the Ministry of Health worked in tandem with the Ministry of Education, which also worked in tandem with the office of the Chief Secretary. One of the proposals made by the administrators is that when they hold medical conferences and when they have visiting medical professors and doctors they will make available these services and this knowledge with our own health services here.

Finally, on the matter of education, the Ministry is working diligently on finalising the National Policy Statement on Education. We have circulated invitations to the various levels to submit their ideas and I hope before the end of this sitting that I can Table that document: certainly if not before the end of this sitting, certainly early in the next sitting. So, all who are interested may be able to see where we are going.

Education represents for the Cayman Islands that great tool, that great equaliser, that opportunity for our students to gain the necessary knowledge and skills to move forward. We are spending time on developing what we hope is a good plan for technical and vocational education. In July of this year the Employment Relations Department in conjunction with the Chamber of Commerce, I believe, and of course the Education Department, will be mounting the first technical and vocational trade fair to be held in the Cayman Islands. It is at this point that we hope to formally launch our initiative into promoting technical and vocational education.

Culture

I want to move on now to Culture and some of its areas.

Cultural development is an important aspect of the moving forward of this country. There is great debate and much contention to the question of our cultural development. Some people even go to the extent of asking, 'Does the Cayman Islands have a culture?'. Well, it most certainly does. But the point that I wish to make, and indeed emphasise and underscore, is that culture is dynamic, culture is ever involving—culture involves a mix and so when we speak of a Caymanian culture, we must also be prepared to take into account the fact that the Caymanian culture is influenced by other cultures and particularly, by the cultures of those persons who come to live amongst us, and with us, in significant numbers and with the kinds of interaction that some of their cultures and mores and behaviours will rub off on us. And there is nothing negative about this because that is how all cultures maintain their dynamism.

What is important is to ensure that those aspects of Caymanian culture, which are positive are in the mainstream and are given the opportunity to perpetuate themselves to such a point that we can have ease in transmitting them to the younger members of our society, and therein lies the challenge.

Earlier the Ministry held a retreat at the St. James' Castle in which we launched our National Cultural Policy initiative. It was a most interesting evening. There are certain areas that we do well in: the Cultural Foundation, the Museum, the Archives, but I must express my disappointment at music and entertainment.

One of the complaints that I frequently hear—indeed, I have at the Ministry a folder largely comprised of petitions I have received from musicians in the Cayman Islands—is that music or music produced by local musicians does not receive a fair share of air play on radio stations operating in the Cayman Islands. It is a complaint, which has legitimacy and while it is true that some of the music is not original to the Caymanian musicians, certainly their slant on it is basically a Cayman Islands slant and it has an islander slant. I think it is grossly unfair the way these musicians are treated. But it brings to my attention a wider problem, which is particularly permissive in the hospitality industry.

A few Saturdays ago I took the opportunity to take my children on a day out at Rum Point. We took the ferry and during that journey I realised how legitimate (in many instances) are the complaints we, as the representatives, receive from our constituents. On the ferry there was a crew of three but no Caymanians.

When we got to Rum Point, all of the persons serving were not of Caymanian extraction. Indeed, in all of the time I spent there I saw one person whom I believe had a Caymanian connection and there was another person; a gentleman of an Asian extraction, who was married to a Caymanian who I definitely know.

The musicians, I think one was a Scots man and two were Americans playing music. I thought that it was absolutely ludicrous probably something out of Alice in Wonderland playing music to a bunch of tourists who were accustomed to the kind of music they were hearing and had I not known better I would have sworn I was among the dead because the audience was not making any sound and was not participating in any way. And I thought how interesting it would be if someone came up here now with a guitar and began to hum or strum a calypso. I would bet my bottom dollar that the audience of people who were almost dead would rise up.

The musicians were entertaining themselves only they did not know it because they were talking and they were not getting any response from the audience. They were laughing and they thought they were doing well. I said 'my, my, my' absolutely unacceptable. But what took the cake was the fact that they were bragging about how they had headlined down at the Sea View Hotel for a group called America some weeks or months ago and this group had taught them a song, which they proceeded to reproduce with the same results that they were playing to the dead. I mean if they had gone to a cemetery they would have received greater response!

I want to say, does not somebody recognise that we need to change a little bit? How good and how different the response would have been if they had a Caymanian combo. Good Heavens! I see the Barefoot Man—he can make the lame dance when he plays! And these people—I stayed the whole day and they played Bob Marley songs (minus much of the lyrics) and certainly no, what we Islanders would call, Calypso at all! I thought, 'It is extremely difficult not to entertain complaints we get from our local musicians and from our people when they say they are being excluded from the hospitality industry.'

I want to tell you something interesting. I inquired as to why more Caymanians were not employed. You know what these people had the temerity to try to make me a Caymanian in his fifth decade, believe? 'Oh, Caymanians do not like to dress up in the sarong and these skimpy clothes and go about serving food.'

I said 'Well, assuming that that is the case, what you are telling me is that you are not prepared to make any modifications in your dress code. If you are correct in saying that the Caymanians do not like or want to or refuse to dress like that, what about those instances where I certainly have seen Caymanians serving in Bermuda shorts. What about those instances? What about modifying the uniform? Madam Speaker, I do not buy it!

One of these days the proprietors, themselves, are going to learn the hard way. Good Heavens! It is commonsensical! When people leave their homes in North America, or wherever they come from, they do not leave there to be served by the same people they left home. How interesting it would be to see a waiter or a waitress from the Island who could tell them and explain to them what they serve. But you know what? They serve the same North American cuisine by the same people and they listen to the same music. I mean, you do not have to be a rocket scientist to tell them that really and truly that is not what people are looking for.

Good Heavens! If you go to Jamaica it is an entirely different scene. I believe that it behoves all of us to tell these people that we need to change our modus operandi. Not only is it being exclusionary in terms of employing Caymanians who are looking to get into that industry, but they are not doing themselves any favour by offering the patrons the same bill of fare, the music as they have just left at home.

I would think that to be successful you would want to build first of all repeat business but if the people are bored out of their minds hearing Johnny Cash, they are not going to come back. So, I say all that to say that we have much work to be done and to make the point that Caymanian culture is beginning to come alive and we have to embrace it. And I hope before long that the movers and shakers in the hospitality industry are going to realise that. Some months ago we had a festival where we were able to attract Caribbean storytellers from around the world, one would have to say. Unique!

I went one evening when they were in Bodden Town. It is a unique exercise and I think that it is positive in the sense that soon we will be able to develop our own cadre of storytellers telling local stories. We have attracted people of the calibre of Paul Cain's Douglas. These are positive exercises.

In the world of Art we are doing excellently. Art at Governor's House the last time attracted 3,000 people and I would like again publicly to thank His Excellency the Governor and his good wife, Mrs. Suzanne Smith, for hosting this exercise and hope that his successor would see fit to continue this.

It is gratifying to realise the range and calibre of talent—some clearly professionals—that we have in these Islands as far as Art goes. We have young artists who can hold their own with artists internationally.

The theatre is doing well and I must say that I, as the Minister, have tried to give them all the encouragement and support that I possibly can. I would like to congratulate the board of the Cultural Foundation for their persistence and their dedication. But we have much to do and we have miles more to go in terms of the development and evolution of a Caymanian culture. I hope that the attempts by the Ministry to craft a national cultural policy can set us on the road to doing that.

Madam speaker, what I find encouraging about the Caymanian society is that the vast mix—the ability for us to develop a multi-ethnic, multi-national, multi-cultural society. I believe our strength in the future is a blending of the various elements in our society into a strong multi-cultural society, which leads me to the position that I have never been one who was one who was anti-immigrants. I have never been one who was anti-persons from outside. I have never been anti-expatriate. Indeed, I welcome an infusion and an influx because I think it is healthy in the development of our society into a vibrant, progressive society.

I say again, as I have said before, the best protection that politicians, governments and representatives of the people can give to Caymanians is to empower them by education and training and broadening their experiences to compete. This is a multi-cultural world. We are talking about a borderless world, we are talking about globalisation. The greatest protection we can give our people is empowering them by giving them educational opportunities, training opportunities and broadening their experiences to compete and cultivate in them a sense of open-mindedness so that they can rid themselves of prejudices and opinions which are destructive rather than constructive.

And it is to culture almost as much as it is to education that we have a vehicle in which to use to broaden and expand the minds of our people so that they can be fully appreciative of their work, their environment and their opportunities to associate with other people. That is why it is incumbent upon us to devise a strategy of assimilation and accommodation.

This leads me conveniently, perhaps, to one of the most important points that I wish to make that has to do with Education, however, I did not make it under education because I wanted to underscore its importance in the development of our country as a society with strong cultural leaning. It is the proposal of the Ministry to work in tandem with the Ministry of Community Services to launch later this year a national conference on citizenship education. It is our philosophy—and certainly it is something which the UDP is cognisant of—that the Cayman Islands must be encouraged to develop itself into a multi-cultural, multi-national society where we have full appreciation of citizenship and its rights and obligations.

We believe that the school and the community are the greatest places to develop such attitudes and knowledge. To this extent the Ministry of Education, Human Resources and Culture will be working in collaboration with the Ministry of Community Services, Women's Affairs, Youth and Sports to establish and launch this national conference on citizenship education. It is an exercise, which will take us beyond what was normally civics, into something broader, which has to do with our understanding of heritage and multi-culturalism as the key elements of citizenship. We will be focusing on democracy, good governance, transparency, human rights, tolerance, respect for others, rule of law, and conflict prevention and resolution.

There can be no better tools to prepare our country for the 21st Century world than to prepare our people for citizenship in a world where globalisation is taking priority and taking importance. It will make good citizens of Caymanians ensuring that those people whom we welcome and assimilate into our culture, respect our roots and our heritage. At the same time, it will allow them to recognise their own unique identities and their own national and cultural origins. This is the greatest way to build a multi-ethnic, multi-cultural and multi-national democracy. This has my total commitment.

The Speaker: Honourable Minister, is this a convenient time for the afternoon break?

Hon. Roy Bodden: It is. Thank you, Madam Speaker.

The Speaker: We will suspend for 15 minutes.

Proceedings suspended at 3.49 pm

Proceedings resumed at 4.10 pm

The Speaker: Proceedings are resumed.

Continuation of the debate on the Throne Speech by the Honourable Minister responsible for Education.

Hon. Roy Bodden: Thank you, Madam Speaker. In the time I have left I want to end as I have begun, by reiterating my faith in the process of party politics.

The Speaker: Honourable Minister, sorry to interrupt but just to indicate that you have 15 minutes remaining.

Hon. Roy Bodden: That is correct Madam. Our clocks are calibrated together it would seem. Thank you, Madam Speaker.

I would like to reiterate my faith in the system of party politics. I want to express my confidence in the ability of the United Democratic Party to lead this country forward in progress and prosperity in spite of the nay-sayers; in spite of those persons who call in on the radio station who anonymously leave all kinds of slanderous and defamatory comments on the Website operated by Caypolitics.

I want to say to the Opposition that they should use their good influence to encourage people to be participatory to move the country forward. We must not return to the era of 'turtle meat and breadfruit politics' in this country. We have move to go to the position where we have party conventions and when we appear before the people they know who their government is likely to be.

Representatives must be chosen on a more scientific way than the delivery of promises or of products other than education empowerment and opportunity. We shall have to ask ourselves when the 'chickens have come home to roost' whether we have not perpetuated an injustice upon our own people as well as upon those who have been living among us. Or, whether we are indeed acting in the best interest of civil society when we fool the people by giving them doles and hand-outs instead of opportunities for advancing and empowering themselves through education and training.

The United Democratic Party is an entity that is alive and well. It is viable and I would expect that the very dynamism and commitment of its Members suggest that it will be around for a long time. I hope that it pleases the Almighty to make it so—lest anyone thinks that I am so arrogant not to factor that in.

Members of the Opposition have said that there is nothing exciting in the Throne Speech. I say to those Members that they were not listening. I say to them that they are arrogant if they believe that there is nothing exciting in the Throne Speech. We have said what is exciting and what we are going to make even more exciting. And I would caution anyone who believes that they are going to stand in the way of progress or intimidate the Members of the United Democ-atic Party by any means that they have adopted so far including unflattering anonymous mail.

We have a mission and just like in other countries where these events have transpired before, there is certain inevitability about this and the Opposition would be wise to firm themselves up and prepare themselves. The Cayman Islands must sail confidently into the 21st Century under the leadership that is deliberative, deliberate, and democratic and that has the best interest of the majority of the people at heart.

The United Democratic Party Government offers for this country for the first time in its history the ability to cogently move the Cayman Islands forward in a way that all in the society can be confident, can be proud of, and can say that they have a vested interest and a stake in.

A new social contract has been written in ink, which is not going to fade! A new social contract has been written which guarantees for the young people of this country opportunities and it says to the middle-aged and elderly of this country 'you can be proud you will not be left out, you will not be disenfranchised'. I have my loudest and most resounding words to say that the Cayman Islands must move confidently forward in terms of an advanced and modern constitution which allows the citizens to participate to the fullest in what is the essence of democracy, that is, choosing the people who will govern them or lead them.

As I move around and watch what is written on the Website and occasionally, the letters to the Editor, and sometimes what comes up as subjects on the talk show, I have to remind myself that there must be something good about the birth of the United Democratic Party because never in the history of mankind since Prometheus stole fire from the gods and gave it to men has such a furore come about, than that which came about at the announcement of the United Democratic Party and the formation of this Government.

This is a parliamentary democracy. There is scope for a healthy robust Opposition but that Opposition must be constructive and must be prepared to offer constructive alternatives.

It will not suit the country and it certainly will not suit the Opposition if that Opposition encourages people to tear down the society and if that Opposition is consumed in idle talk about 'garrison' constituencies and 'garrison' politics. Garrison constituencies and garrison politics have no place in the Cayman Islands political arena. We must labour as we have laboured in the past in a constructive and united way—the Government to lead and the Opposition to hold the Government to account.

There is no one so mighty and no one should be so arrogant as to believe that they have all the answers; that they are the panacea; that they must be the ones to lead this country. I want to see the clause in Adam's Will that says that these people who have for so long represented interests which were inimical to the interest of the majority of the people should continue to lead this country. I can say without fear of successful contradiction; they have no chains or shackles on Roy Bodden. They cannot call in any favours from me! And I doubt if they can call any in from any of my other colleagues in the UDP.

The Cayman Islands for the first time in its history has an opportunity to move forward confidently. Not since the 1950s and the formation of the National Democratic Party have we had a greater opportunity to move forward in a Westminster style democracy together. I am convinced that this is our future. This should be the legacy we leave for those who come behind. This should be the tone we set instead of wasting time on divisive politics talking about nonsense, which exists in other jurisdictions and have torn other people down.

Let us build upon our unique Caymanian history and our unique Caymanian psyche and move this country forward. The Government is positive, we are united, we are coherent and we are doing the very best that we can.

In this Legislative Assembly the challenge is for all Honourable Members to play their roles and so it is not accurate, nor is it true to say that there is nothing to excite in the Throne Speech. There is much to be excited about and the only people who cannot get excited must be ghouls; they must be soul-less because those of us who have souls are excited. We are prepared; we are ready to work and to move forward. There is much that is positive in this country; there is much that is positive that the Government is doing. As I said, we have confidence, the chart is clear. We have a direction in which to take the country and it will be done so in a democratic and participatory way.

Madam Speaker, I have made my contribution and I have given account of my stewardship. I have stated the direction in which I would like to see the Ministry go. I want to end by saying that I am totally committed, ever faithful, firm and strong in my belief in my place in the Party. I am glad that history has afforded me the opportunity to be part of a progressive movement before my time in these hallowed Chambers expends. I will continue to promote the interests of the United Democratic Party because it is the only way for the Cayman Islands at this time. Those Members of the Opposition who are like Rip Van Winkel, asleep and cannot see this, that is to their detriment. Thank you.

The Speaker: Thank you, Honourable Minister. We have approximately seven minutes remaining. Is it the wish of the House for the debate to continue? Or is it the wish for adjournment?

Does any other Member wish to speak? Last call, does any other Member wish to speak? If not, I would invite a Member from the Government Bench to make the concluding remarks.

Hon. W. McKeever Bush: Madam Speaker, the consensus on this side seems to be that we close the debate, so I am going to proceed to do that.

The world is changing and the Cayman Islands find themselves having to make changes to contend with the effect of globalisation. I have listened to the speeches from Members and I can congratulate and thank Members from this side, Honourable Ministers of Government and other Members who spoke, because they took the time to go through the Throne Speech and deal with the problems of the country.

I listened to what the Opposition had to say and I found it so hard to believe that Opposition could base their debates on assumptions and rumour. While I was disappointed, I should have expected something to that extent because when we went through the change in November and I listened to what the Opposition Members said and saw how they acted, I knew that the venom that came across then would not change.

We had an Opposition who voted in block against the entire Budget—all the things needing to be done to schools and hospitals; all the initiatives; all the Civil Service matters even to Civil Service pay, including their own pay they voted against. I realised at that time that we had an Opposition that was going to be vicious, that was going to use any measure they could to tear down the Government.

This is not about the UDP; this is about the Cayman Islands. I have been in the Opposition before and I have had to use my Standing Orders, I have had to deal with the various matters before the House and issues affecting the country. There were bitter fights and bitterness to some extent still exists in some quarters because of the Opposition of previous years. That is true but...

Moment of Interruption

The Speaker: Honourable Leader, we have reached the hour of interruption. Would you please move the Motion for the adjournment?

ADJOURNMENT

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: Madam Speaker, I move the adjournment of this Honourable House until tomorrow Friday, 1 March 2002 at 10 am.

The Speaker: The question is that this House do now adjourn until tomorrow, 1 March 2002 at 10 am.

All those in favour please say Aye. Those against, No.

Ayes.

The Speaker: The Ayes have it. This Honourable House stands adjourned until the 1 March at 10 am.

At 4.31 pm the House stood adjourned until Friday, 1 March 2002, at 10 am.

OFFICIAL HANSARD REPORT
FRIDAY
1 MARCH 2002
10.19 am
Eighth Sitting

The Speaker: Good morning. I will invite the Second Elected Member from the district of George Town to grace us with Prayers.

PRAYERS

Mr. Alden M. McLaughlin, Jr.: Let us pray.

Almighty God, from whom all wisdom and power are derived: We beseech Thee so to direct and prosper the deliberations of the Legislative Assembly now assembled, that all things may be ordered upon the best and surest foundations for the glory of Thy Name and for the safety, honour and welfare of the people of these Islands.

Bless our Sovereign Lady, Queen Elizabeth II; the Queen Mother; Philip, Duke of Edinburgh; Charles, Prince of Wales; and all the Royal family. Give grace to all who exercise authority in our Commonwealth, that peace and happiness, truth and justice, religion and piety may be established among us. Especially we pray for the Governor of our Islands, the Speaker of the Legislative Assembly, Official Members and Ministers of Executive Council and Members of the Legislative Assembly, that we may be enabled faithfully to perform the responsible duties of our high office. All this we ask for Thy great Name's sake.

Let us say the Lord's Prayer together: Our Father, who art in Heaven, Hallowed be Thy Name. Thy Kingdom come, Thy will be done on earth as it is in Heaven. Give us this day our daily bread, and forgive us our trespasses, as we forgive those who trespass against us. Lead us not into temptation, but deliver us from evil. For Thine is the Kingdom, the power and the glory, forever and ever. Amen.

The Lord bless us and keep us. The Lord make His face shine upon us and be gracious unto us. The Lord lift up the light of His countenance upon us and give us peace, now and always. Amen.

Proceedings resumed at 10.21 am

READING BY THE HONOURABLE
SPEAKER OF MESSAGES
AND ANNOUNCEMENTS

The Speaker: Thank you. Please be seated. Proceedings are resumed. There are no messages or announcements. Madam Clerk.

QUESTIONS TO HONOURABLE MINISTERS AND OFFICIAL MEMBERS

The Speaker: The Elected Member from the district of North Side.

Question No. 8

Deferred Thursday 21 February 2002

No. 8: Ms. Edna M. Moyle asked the Minister responsible for Education, to give a breakdown of the hours per week for which each grade receives computer instruction in Government Primary Schools.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for Education.

Hon. Roy Boddan: Madam Speaker, all Government Primary School children have access to computers, mainly through the provision of well-equipped computer laboratories, and some schools have additional equipment in classrooms. These computers are available for use by all grades under the supervision of classroom teachers.

Additionally, the Education Department provides two peripatetic Information and Communications Technology specialist teachers who visit all primary schools on Grand Cayman on a weekly basis. As this service expanded during the past two years, the need for a third teacher became apparent. However, budgetary restraints have not permitted the employment of this person.

Consequently, not all pupils in Government Primary Schools receive instruction from these two teachers. Each school principal has the responsibility for deciding how best to deploy these teachers. The number of days (or half days) each school is visited is based on the school's population and is as follows:-

John A. Cumber Primary School: Two days per week each class gets one 30-minute lesson per week, apart from Year 1. In term 3, Year 1 will get one lesson per week and Year 3 will be taught, where possible, by classroom teachers who are capable of continuing the program.

George Town Primary: Two days per week—Each class gets one 30-minute lesson per week, except Year 1.

Red Bay Primary School: Two days per week—Apart from Year 1, each class gets one lesson per week of 30-40 minutes duration depending on grade level.

Savannah Primary School: One day per week—Some grades at this school receive instruction on a rotating basis. From September to mid-January, Years 1, 2, 3, 6 and the Learning Support Unit got one 30-minute lesson per week. From January until July, Years 1, 4, 5, 6 and the Learning Support Unit get one 30-minute lesson per week. The decision on which classes rotate was taken by the Principal, with the IT teacher recommending that Year 6 have access to the program all year round to ensure a smooth transition to George Hicks High School.

Bodden Town Primary School: One day per week—Apart from Year 1, each class gets one lesson per week of 30-40 minute duration, depending on grade level.

East End Primary School: One half day per week—Apart from Year 6, each class receives one 30-minutes lesson per week. Year 6 has one 40-minute lesson.

North Side Primary: One half day per week—Apart from Year 6, each class receives one 30-minutes lesson per week. Year 6 has one 40-minutes lesson.

Lighthouse School: There is one teacher specifically assigned for the management of Information and Communications Technology (ICT). No direct departmental support is provided for this school at this time.

Basic technical work, for example, setting up the network and workstations, and software installation, is provided outside school hours on a time available basis. All classrooms have computers, in some cases with specialised keyboards, and instruction is provided by the classroom teachers.

Cayman Brac Primary Schools: Cayman Brac Primary School pupils have received no visits from the peripatetic teachers. This is simply due to no funds being available for the teacher to visit those schools. Once funds are made available, the teacher will be scheduled to visit Cayman Brac once per month. This will correspondingly reduce the time the teacher spends in Grand Cayman schools. Recently, the ICT Specialist spent one week in Cayman Brac assisting with technical support. One school PTA (Spot Bay) offered to pay for the ICT teacher to spend a week at that school, but this has not yet been taken up.

Little Cayman Education Services: The teacher in charge is ICT competent and there are plans to strengthen this area in Little Cayman. There is one computer with Internet access at the facility. A computer which has been donated by a private company through The Computer For Kids Program is due to be installed within the next fortnight.

The Speaker: The First Elected Member from the district of George Town.

Supplementaries

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Thank you.

Can the Minister state if given as the substantive answer says, that the schools with smaller enrolments are the ones which receive less time from these two teachers is due to the fact that the time allocation is given on the basis of the number of students in the school?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for Education.

Hon. Roy Bodden: Madam Speaker, I believe that that was stated in the answer.

The Speaker: Are there any further supplementaries?
The Member for East End.

Mr. V. Arden McLean: Thank you, Madam Speaker.

Can the Minister tell us, in today's technological age, if it is the Government's plan to have a fulltime computer teacher on staff in all of our primary schools.

The Speaker: Honourable Minister of Education.

Hon. Roy Bodden: Madam Speaker, since assuming the Ministry I have made it clear in one of the five objectives I have set out for the Ministry of Education that it is the intention of the Government and the Ministry to make every child in the Government schools in the Cayman Islands, certainly by the time they graduate from the high schools, completely computer literate. I inherited a situation where rudimentary technology has been put in place and there are strides to improve the access. It is the situation that I can say I certainly am not satisfied with in a technological age, but I understand the contingencies and the constraints governing the complete access to information technology by all of the students.

That is why yesterday in my contribution to the Throne Speech I said that I have initiated discussions with IBM with the view towards, firstly conducting an audit to see exactly what is needed to make computers available to every student from primary schools in the government system, and what programs would be recommended. Then try to ascertain a costing of this so that we can be completely computer literate by providing each child with access to computers, not only during a half hour or a 40-minute or a 1 hour period once or twice per week, but it would be common place with the ideal being that each child would have her personal PC.

The Speaker: The Member for North Side.

Ms. Edna M. Moyle: Thank you, Madam Speaker. Could the Honourable Minister say that the Savannah Primary School, in particular the grades, 1, 2, 3, 6 that receive computer instructions from September to mid-January do not get any instructions again until September the following year?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister of Education.

Hon. Roy Bodden: Madam Speaker, I cannot say that that is the case because the school has a computer lab which would be available to those students under the supervision of the teachers. What may seem obvious is that they do not get the instructions of the peripatetic computer the ICT teachers. That decision was once taken by the Principal I am sure (I would hope) after discussions with her staff and the ICT people.

The Speaker: The Elected Member for North Side.

Ms. Edna M. Moyle: Thank you, Madam Speaker. Would the Honourable Minister say if he is in a position to tell the House how many of the teachers at these primary schools are computer literate and are going to the computer labs with these children for more computer instructions?

The Speaker: Honourable Minister of Education.

Hon. Roy Bodden: Madam Speaker, I do not have a specific breakdown of the number of the teachers in the schools who are computer literate. I could undertake to provide that information to the Honourable Member. What I can say is that some of the teachers are eminently equipped to supervise and to instruct on their own in the absence of the ICT peripatetic teachers. I will undertake to get the specific details requested by the Honourable Members in her question at a later date.

The Speaker: The Elected Member for North Side.

Ms. Edna M. Moyle: Thank you, Madam Speaker. Could the Honourable Minister say if he is in a position to say how many computers are in the North Side Primary School lab and how many students are there in each class?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for Education.

Hon. Roy Bodden: Unfortunately, I am again unable to provide that information at this time because I did not anticipate that it would be a part of the supplementary information requested. I can undertake to have it for the Honourable Member next week.

The Speaker: The Second Elected Member from the district of Cayman Brac and Little Cayman.

Mr. Lyndon L. Martin: Thank you, Madam Speaker. In reading the part of the answer referring to the lack of visits to Cayman Brac Primary schools, I was wondering if the Minister could give a commitment to liaise with the computer technician at District Administration to see if he would work in conjunction with the ICT teacher in Grand Cayman, and hopefully provide some service to the schools on a regular basis. This matter has been discussed with myself and the ICT teacher when he was on the Brac for the week and he supported the idea. I also mentioned it to the technician at the District Administration Building.

The Speaker: Honourable Minister responsible for Education.

Hon. Roy Bodden: Madam Speaker, I certainly would have no objection to exploring that as an avenue to boost the exposure of the Brac primary schools children to Information and Communications Technology. Indeed, I would be happy to do so. I think it is two recent university graduates from Cayman Brac, both of whom are working on the Brac and whom I believe would be willing to provide that information. I thank the Honourable Member for that suggestion and I certainly will be pursuing with at his concurrence.

The Speaker: Are there any further supplementaries? The Member for East End.

Mr. V. Arden McLean: Thank you, Madam Speaker. Earlier the Minister spoke of his hopes and his goals that every student in this country should be computer literate by the time they reach high school. Can the Minister then tell us what his time frame is for ensuring that our children are computer literate within a short time period to put the provisions in place to ensure that what his time frame is . . .

The Speaker: Honourable Minister of Education.

Hon. Roy Bodden: Madam Speaker, first of all I want to clarify that I did not say it was my hope and dream; I said it is my stated objective. The time frame is incumbent upon the audit which we have contracted with IBM to do. IBM has requested in that audit details of hardware, software, programming and costing. I would hope that well within—if we accept the proposals of the results of the audit which IBM has contracted to do—the next two years we can be on the road to this.

However, I would caution that it is a matter which is not entirely in the hands of the Ministry since the proposals would ultimately have to go to the Executive Council for its approval and probably come to Finance Committee if we accept the terms and conditions of the financing that IBM laid down. I would certainly anticipate that well within the next year we should know what we are going to undertake to do. Arising out of that IBM will be able to give us a timeline so that we are in a position to detail exactly when this computer literacy objective could be achieved.

The Speaker: The Elected Member for East End, do you have a follow up? Please continue.

Mr. V. Arden McLean: Thank you, Madam Speaker. Keeping in mind that I am not very computer literate but the Minister just spoke to the review being done by IBM. I recall from somewhere that there is a policy or a position that primary schools in this country use APPLE computers. I am just wondering if the Minister can say if there are any differences in those two and if the intent is to change to IBM in the primary schools?

The Speaker: Honourable Minister of Education, I think that takes somewhat out of the scope of the question but if you wish to respond, please proceed accordingly.

Hon. Roy Boddan: Madam Speaker, I too am aware that many of the primary schools have Apple computers and I made no dogmatic statement of any changes. Certainly, it is a matter that we have muted with IBM. I do not think the intention of the audit is to be disruptive and to be wide-sweeping; we are well aware of that but in the world of computers there are such things as compatible programs. So, there are other makes of computers called 'IBM compatible'. Nor, did I say that we are going to be using IBM equipment, for what is important in this exercise Madam Speaker, is not the hardware but indeed the compatibility of the programs which are going to be recommended.

The Speaker: First Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Thank you. The Honourable Minister stated in a previous supplementary answer that within the next year the Ministry should have a handle on the way forward. During that interim, can the Minister state if there is any intention to fill that third position of the peripatetic teacher that because of financial constraints did not allow to be hired this year?

The Speaker: Honourable Minister of Education.

Hon. Roy Boddan: Thank you, Madam Speaker. The First Elected Member for George Town being the former Leader of Government Business will know as well as other Honourable Members in the House that we really face some financial constraints and the bureaucracy has been increased in terms of forms you have to fill out, persons you have to convince if additional staff is to be taken on in the Civil Service. Madam Speaker, I would suppose that it would not be impossible to get that third post filled and it will quite rightly depend on:

1. The demand and whether an assessment is made that our children are being severely disadvantaged as a result of the need for a third person in the first instance. And that does not appear to be the case now.

2. It will also depend, to an extent, on what is contained in the results of the audit that IBM has been contracted to do.

The Speaker: The Elected Member for the district of North Side.

Ms. Edna M. Moyle: Thank you, Madam Speaker. Would the Honourable Minister say if the lack of a third peripatetic teacher is not affecting the Cayman Brac primary schools' pupils who have received no visits from those teachers?

The Speaker: Honourable Minister of Education.

Hon. Roy Boddan: Madam Speaker, certainly there is effect. I said there was no detrimental effect because in the case of Cayman Brac it is my understanding that there are classroom teachers who are quite capable of offering computer literacy and computer teaching in the schools.

The Speaker: If there are no further supplementaries, we will move on to the next item.

GOVERNMENT BUSINESS

Debate on the Throne Speech Delivered By His Excellency, Mr. Peter J. Smith, CBE, Governor of the Cayman Islands, Friday 15 February 2002

(Continuation of debate thereon)

The Speaker: The Honourable Leader of Government Business continuing the debate on the Throne Speech.

Hon. W. McKeever Bush: Thank you very much, Madam Speaker.

Yesterday afternoon when I started my contribution I noted the behaviour in this Honourable House by Members of the Opposition. I have entitled the contribution 'Vision, Accomplishments and Falling Arrow' because this Government (the UDP) has a vision. We have put that vision into workable plans and policies that will affect our people positively, and we have accomplished in these past 100 days—and while the Opposition has shot their arrows they have fallen. I can report that no damage has been done.

Before I move on I just want to take a few minutes to say that the Ministers of this Government are all doing what I think is an excellent job in each respective Ministry. The Minister of Education is a very capable person and we can see the results of his vision. The Minister of Communications and Planning is more or less a veteran and has been here before and has taken up the challenges and moving on areas that people would not touch before, but certainly that the country needs to hear about and needs to see changes in. However, I have to report to this Honourable House that the two new Ministers (Minister of Health and the Minister of Community Services) are really two good choices. I must say that their performance in the Executive Council is most commendable where everything is conducted in a most business like manner. I am glad to have them as Ministers because they are equal to the task before them and they are proving it to the country.

So, we work as a team and we are doing our best given the circumstances. I also would want to say to you as Honourable Speaker of this Honourable House how much I have admired your performance. You are fair and you are not treating anyone differently. I am certain that Members in the majority here can say that this House is being run in the fashion given the circumstances at times. I want to thank you for the way you endeavour to conduct business. At the same time I would like to—because while the Clerk (former Deputy Clerk) is not new to the Chamber and the new Deputy Clerk now, while not new to this Legislator they are new in these positions and are carrying out a commendable work. At the same time all Members of the UDP in this Honourable House, those on the Back-Bench are taking the work and while some people might not like what they say at times or what the UDP stands for, these Members are honest and working. I have never seen a Back-Bench so eager to work than they are. Madam Speaker, your colleague, the Second Elected Member for Cayman Brac and my three colleagues from West Bay are to be commended.

The Opposition, however, is engaged inside and outside of this Honourable House in gigantic propaganda drama of destructive misrepresentation. They are aided and abetted by vicious and unbalanced talk show where the daily dose is nothing but vitriolic attacks by persons of small venomous minds. I can say that I have proven in my life that strong criticism disappears when the facts catch up with lies. You can believe there has been a lot of that on the talk shows, the Caypolitics dirt and front-page rumours. The Opposition seems to be having a grand time doing what they do best . . . nothing! For I ask them and I ask the Second Elected Member for George Town and the rest of the Opposition, show me what they have accomplished for the country since they have been elected this term. Show me what they have accomplished for the people of the Cayman Islands since they have taken up their seats as Opposition Members and, in fact, for last year.

Let me deal with this constitutional matter of a five-year term—what I said in the cross talk is that I cannot wait until 2005 to face them. I would hope to get rid of them and I think the words ‘before 2004’ came in, but the next election was somewhere there about. They say that is a threat. Where do these people think they are going and what do they think they are doing to this country? A threat to campaign against them and assist in helping them to lose their seats! What else could I have meant? There is nothing else that I meant—let me get back to this five-year term. The Constitutional Commissioners were not put in place by the United Democratic Party, nor did I as the Deputy in the last Government of 2001 have any part to play in their appointment, nor are they my supporters or supporters of the UDP. At least two of them were, or are great supporters of the First Elected Member for George Town and the Second Elected Member for George Town. The third one ran against me in the district of West Bay.

I have not seen any report they have made nor do I know what is contained in the report, but already you hear whom it will affect and why it will affect them. As I said they are neither McKeever Bush’s supporters nor the UDP’s supporters nor did I as Deputy have anything to do with their appointment! When the report comes to Members of this Honourable House the UDP then can make its decision on what we would want to see in the Constitutional modernisation that the United Kingdom says must take place. I am not going to do what the Second Elected Member for George Town did in his speech. How could the debate have any integrity when the debate is pure conjecture, rumours and assumption on his part? It was a disgusting attack on a system that does not even exist in this country. But I am not surprised.

I heard them talk about (in his speech) politicisation of the Civil Service and that senior civil servants were asked to step down and a system free of victimisation and devoid of patronage. What kind of patronage is he talking about? I would suggest that he go back to last year and examine the records for Planning and Environment Departments and they might see where patronage lay. There is none carried out by the UDP other than to do what is right by the people of this country who have been suffering too long under certain circumstances, and we are doing it in a democratic fashion.

The privilege of this Honourable House while it ensures the freedom of speech and debate does not give any Member of this House the licence to do the kinds of things that I saw being done here the other day. Political language from any Member which is designed to make lies sound truthful and to give an appearance of expressing an opinion on matters before this Honourable House is pettifogger and danger as far as I am concerned. Rumours are not based on any true knowledge; mere gossip mongering in the disguise of debate is not the way to move forward together to conduct the people’s business and develop the fledgling democracy that the Second Elected Member for George Town speaks about.

The Second Elected Member for George Town talked about the need to move to a system of more disciplined and predictable politics. I agree with him on that admission and that is why the group that forms the UDP formed it. All the people need to know who will be the majority, who will form the Government, who will be responsible for policy, who will be responsible under our Constitution for the people of business? Perhaps some on the Opposition wanted to continue to wear, as someone termed it, ‘friend-friend; politics and ‘turtle meat and breadfruit’ politics so that we can have the chaos that existed after the election last year. I will not any longer serve under that kind of system because it does nothing for the people of this country. What it does is force people to join with people to get out and tell them, ‘Well they did not like me in the first place’. Because that is what the Second Elected Member for George Town said on the 8 November.

The Honourable Ministers in this Honourable House under our Constitution are responsible collectively and individually to lose his or their offices if they cannot retain the confidence of this Honourable House for the general policy of the elected government. This responsibility can be enforced by the Members of this Honourable House by Motion and direct vote of censure or want of confidence. This is the law as prescribed by section 6 and section 9 of our Constitution. That is what our democracy dictates regardless of who likes it. The UDP Members in this Honourable House intend to apply and will continue to apply the Westminster system of democratic constitutional government as has always been the procedure in this Parliament, not some other system, not what may be done in some vague and questionable constitutional practice in some other just as vague jurisdictions, but what is law and practice under our Constitution. That is why under the principles of our Constitution that the Second Elected Member for George Town says that he accepts there is an obligation for a Minister to resign his office when he loses confidence of his peers and not to get up and encourage marches and demonstrations. That is a system of more discipline and predictable politics that the Second Elected Member for George Town speaks of.

To introduce rumour; non-factual spin and then to blame the Government as the proponents of the concepts on which forms the basis of the rumour is not only un-parliamentary; it is not grasping the marvellous opportunity to make the mistakes as experienced by the rest of what the Second Elected Member for George Town call it the 'Anglo-Caribbean'. Is that what we want to have in here? No.

The business in this House since the 8 November 2001 has been done by the Government as efficiently and constitutionally as could be under the circumstances we face with effective elected colleagues, what was done on the 8 November 2001 was, in my opinion, to remove ineffective colleagues without bringing about the fall of the entire elected Executive Council which our Constitution allows. The United Democratic Party—and much has been said about it by two Members who spoke from the Opposition—does not relegate all the people's business to a mere game concealing the true bigger picture of the plight of all the people.

The UDP legislative Members do not and will not hide behind a smoke screen of words that we do not mean. One does not denounce tribal politics then ostracise themselves from their colleagues and refuse to shake their hands. One does not believe in political inclusiveness then perpetuate animosity. One does not believe in constitutional modernisation then become bitter and remorseful and dirty when one loses the confidence of their colleagues. What is factual is that some Members of the UDP in this Honourable House receive no respect or friendship from some Members who are now in Opposition but during last year and before the 8 November.

I ask only one thing if my colleagues in the realm of rumours which may be enjoyed by some do not bring it here and debate it and make it as the truth because it makes a mockery of our parliamentary process. They are running around saying, 'Where is the Leader of Government Business, where was McKeever'. I will tell them where McKeever was. He was busy conducting all the people's business. Or, I was at home tending to my family, or I was in my constituency working with the people.

As for rumours, I said to some of them already on the Opposition benches that they had better be careful because they live in glass houses and you know what they say about people who live in glass houses? They should not throw stones. I have also told them that they are not lily white. So, you let them continue down the road that I saw begun here. As I told the Second Elected Member for George Town I have been here long enough and I could see by the cut of their jib that they mean us no good. [inaudible comment] Well, I had that notion when we begun . . . make it rest. I had a notion, vision, accomplishments and falling arrows. It is time the people of this country—and it is not the majority, it is a few when you count the people you hear on the radio and you know what they say? They want the UDP to fire them. We have no authority to fire anyone. You know what else they said? "I bet the UDP put pressure on us then I can win my seat in George Town easily". That is not an elected Member saying that now; that is a Member of the press. This is where it has gone. They do not care what is printed on Caypolitics or they do not care what is said on national radio, when it should be to educate, in an intellectual way, the people of this country. To answer questions but to get up there and—I have heard . . . it goes worse than a committee because in Committee we can debate on matter after the next and we can speak several times.

I have seen a radio show where someone calls up and say something and then someone calls up and rebuts it and he calls back again. Talking all day long to hear themselves. Some of them call themselves Christian. My God. Especially the one who cries so often. As a politician I can be criticised and I believe that anyone who puts themselves in the public realm and offers themselves for public service will be criticised and I accept that, but what is happening on Caypolitics and on Radio Cayman is downright dirty. They have no regard whatsoever. I have been in Opposition and I have been on the streets, but why did Roy Bodden and I go on the streets? We went to remove a corrupt commissioner. Why did we move in the hundreds? Because the people told us they did not want certain expenditures made and they did not want Motion 3/90.

I have stood on the floor of this House and have expounded my belief in things but look at what it got us. All of that is in Government today, look at the things which we have accomplished. I end at this part of my speech by saying to the Opposition, show me what you have done for the people of this country since you have been elected. Show me what you have accomplished for the people of this country since the Opposition has been elected.

For clarity the Third Elected Member for Bodden Town has said he is not a part of them, he is no part of any Party.

The Speaker: Is this a convenient time for the morning break Honourable Leader? We will suspend for the morning break.

Proceedings suspended at 11.08 am

Proceedings resumed at 11.30 am

The Speaker: Please be seated. Proceedings are resumed.

Continuation of the debate of the Throne Speech by Leader of Government Business.

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: Thank you, Madam Speaker. The economy of the Cayman Islands is dependent on the service it provides in two main sectors for its well-being and viability. As we all know the two engines; the financial industry and the tourism industry are the spawning bids of all activity from which our people earn a living from Government gains revenue to provide essential services such as education, health care, social benefits, law and order and other services necessary for the proper working of a democratic free market society.

We as a people have been faced with substantial challenges which have been struck at the roots of the engines of our economy. The very unfortunate events of the 11 September and the aftermath have caused the economies of major developing countries to slow. This has not only affected travel but has had repercussions which have spread into all areas, including global investment policies, employment and capital mobility. This event and its repercussions came on the heels of European based initiatives aimed at reducing the competitiveness of free market economies and which was directed at Caribbean based financial centres and others. Most of these financial centres were too small and ill-equipped to address on the scale needed, the various non-governmental organisations that launched these various initiatives. The unfortunate result of the turn of the events has been a significant reduction in activity in the two main sectors of our economy somewhat, which the country relies upon to create economic activity.

These problems have focused attention on the reality that if the business of Government is conducted in the manner in which it was in the past, the country will continue its economic decline and its people will not be able to enjoy a reasonable standard of living and to participate in the technological advances which the rest of the developed and developing world will be enjoying. We risk again becoming an Island and people that time forgot. Our Government wasted its time and effort to rebuild the foundations of our economic well-being and I am proud to report that all Ministers of Government, together with many members of our dedicated Civil Service, have worked many long hours and more than often late into the night to plan, develop and lay a new foundation which is already having very positive effects, and which will be a spring board for our future advancement.

Let me offer a challenge at this point to all our people, citizens and residents alike to join this effort. As the Leader of Government Business, I am committed to this cause and committed to making decisions after examination of all facts and obtaining the people's input, which are for the long term benefit of our country and our people albeit that some may not agree with them at the time they are made.

I now turn to certain specific areas of our economy.

The Tourism Industry

As Minister I can say our Government as a whole has supported me in working to improve our product to add excitement and to ensure that we are offering value for money. We will continue to work with the private sector, roll up the red tape and roll out the red carpet to focus our marketing efforts, make it easier to operate and to save money by acting to cut wastes where it exists. New working relationships with the private sector are being developed and these can only result in a better product. I challenge each and every person, our Immigration and Customs Officers, our taxi operators, our water sports persons, other tour operations, workers in the rooms and the man on the street to become ambassadors of the Cayman Islands, to make every guest feel welcome and make every person leave this Island with a burning desire to return. Send the message that no place on earth exists where they could better enjoy their holidays, made to feel more at home or experience friendlier, warm treatment. The importance of the benefit of this effort cannot be over-emphasised, and this together with the work being done by Government will have immeasurable positive benefits.

We have secured a loan for the improvement of our cruise ship dock facilities from the various cruise ship companies. These facilities are essential for the long-term viability of our cruise ship tourism product and for the continuing ability of our people on all sectors from taxi, water sports and merchants to be to earn a living. Sight must not be lost that events point to a falling of the relationship between Cuba and the United States of America.

While we wish all the Caribbean the best for their own industry we must be prepared to meet the competition and offer a service which is better than the rest. We must improve our entertainment facilities and move into the 21st Century rapidly in that regard. To have a viable market, one must have a product for which there is demand and the product must constantly change to meet the demands of the market place. Failure to recognise this elementary principle will result in us having a product for which there is no market and the country and our people will experience a significant decline in their standard of living.

At a national level the tourism industry in the Cayman Islands has benefited from the Government's sustained focus on the challenges and issues facing this pillar of the local economy. The restructuring and the rebuilding of the professional infrastructure initiated in 2001 will help to re-tool the existing tourism organisation to make it better able to meet current responsibilities and market challenges while saving this country money.

I am reminded that the Opposition had said that there is nothing in this Throne Speech to be excited about. The key building blocks are already in place including the following: -

- The successful recruitment of business executive with extensive travel experience,
- The restructuring of the US Department of Tourism,
- The successful negotiations to relocate from costly leased accommodations in Miami and the move of the National Office to New York in order to better position the destination to attract business for the number one US metropolitan market for our local tourism.

At the first annual tourism conference which replaced the former Department of Tourism annual general meeting, as Minister of Tourism I continued my commitment to open and regular communication and reporting by incorporating the views of the past year and outlining the goals and operational expectations for the upcoming years.

In December 2001 new US Agencies for advertising and public relations presented the first draft of the 2002 Summer/Fall program to the private sector for its review. In January the new program, H2Go Cayman Islands, was unveiled in Cancun. This is an improvement to have our summer program ready and exposed to certain markets. This is an improvement over previous years. Already this year, as the new Director of Tourism shared with the Cayman Islands Tourism Association at its quarterly general meeting this month, the Department is moving to earn back market share by ensuring global strategic marketing programs are in place and are being executed. Most importantly, building (and the work done) over the last six months, the Department is striving to earn back the confidence of the industry's private sector and local community.

This year Cayman which has the world's only international Scuba Diving Hall of Fame inducted five of the most influential people in the field and received international recognition for her efforts. Earlier this month the Department of Tourism in collaboration with its partners in the private and public sector was pleased to be able to support and assist in the execution of the Cayman Cares program in response to the 11 September tragedies. This program which had three main components; the vacation for New York Fire Fighters and their families, the visit made by Caymanians to New York City and the check presentation were brilliant examples of what public and private sector can make happen for the destination when we work in unison and put the Cayman Islands first.

I would like to take this opportunity to commend all parties for a job well done, particularly, in the Cayman Cares committee and those generous sponsors who made this event possible.

On the 6 February the Department of Tourism updated the industry on the progress of the Summer and Fall program and at this stage both DoT and private sector are working to proof material and collateral before sending to production. At the end of February despite numerous set backs the Summer program is 90 percent complete and has deemed so innovative in its creative differentiation that the H2Go program has already received special mention in the leading brand magazine, Brand Week, over-shadowing the work of other regional destination and even the Caribbean's regional advertising campaign. That is a sign that the Government is on the right track and being noticed by industry observers. Throughout this current work process, the Department is gearing up for the Winter 2003 when concerns over US economic recovery and the war on terrorism are forecasted to have been sufficiently settled for there to be some meaningful recovery in the international tourism industry.

The Director of US Marketing and Sales has already begun preliminary stages of a re-branding process and consultation with other regional managers. This process will involve local consultation at the discovery, analysis and planning stages, then regular updates by the Director as she spearheads the DoTs country teams and agencies who will work to develop the specific market by market plans to execute the new brands strategy. The goal is for a re-launch in September in advance of the winter 2003 season when we plan to stage an aggressive comeback in the market place.

Madam Speaker, goals for the Summer campaigns are as follows: -

- Position the Cayman Islands as an attractive travel destination.
- Create incentives and time-sensitive reasons for travelers, trade and media to learn more about the Cayman Islands and differentiate the Cayman Islands from a cluttered competitive environment.

While the H2Go campaign is not the new marketing strategy or our brand identity it is the bridge campaign for 2002, as agreed by the Tourism Action Committee back in August 2001 with the interim Director at that time. This program is not a price-based or discounts driven program but does focus on offering Cayman's trademark. That is a high quality experience. With the renewed effort and vision, positive results are beginning to show. Again I draw Member's attention to the Opposition's statement that there was nothing to be happy about in the Throne Speech. Things were so happy in the Throne Speech that the Leader of Opposition forgot that he had to speak. And his deputy, the Member for North Side, forgot that she also had to speak and they never spoke because they could not counter what was in the Throne Speech.

The latest statistics showed that tourism in the Islands is on the rebound. For example, the average occupancy rate for hotels and condos in January this year was 49 per cent, which rose to 54 per cent in February and is projected to rise to 55 per cent in March. In such challenging times, even modest increases such as these are positive indicators. This is particularly true as in the past three years, tourism figures have been on a downward trend, and this is, 1999, 2000, and 2001 according to the occupancy statistics provided by the Cayman Islands Association.

So, while the 11 September had an effect, as we all know, tourism was already on a decline in the country and the statistics from the Tourism Association says so. In addition, that we can say positive things are happening, my Ministry has already increased airlift with the recent addition of ATA and coming in directly on a schedule flight from Chicago, not to mention Air Canada. We are actively pursuing with major US carriers additional direct service from the New York metropolitan area. So, we have taken a big lick. We can say that we are not building with bricks and mortars but we are putting in systems and programs in place that will benefit the country in the long term.

What we have to ensure is that when tourism goes back to the level we want it—and in the interim period that our people employed in that sector. The Minister of Human Resources is paying careful attention to that matter and we have said to the Immigration Board that when permits are being asked for—we are not against permits being given—they must ensure that our people are given the opportunity in this important industry. The sister Islands tourism is doing well and as far as occupancy and programs are concerned, it is well managed. We do have a problem, in that, Tiara Beach is given some notice of closure but we have always had trouble with Tiara Beach. Madam Speaker, it is not new but we have to take matters into our hands and I know that yourself and the Second Elected Member for Cayman Brac are very concerned about it and have taken steps to the point of inviting people there to look at it to see whether it can be re-developed. That was a good move on the part of the Second Elected Member, and the Speaker who is the First Elected Member from the sister Islands. Generally, tourism in the sister Islands is doing well.

The Cayman Port Authority

Since the tragic events of the 11 September the major cruise lines have re-deployed their vessels from the Mediterranean Sea to the Caribbean to create cruising comfort zones as passengers have expressed a preference to remain close to home—that is a fact. This has resulted in increased requests for Port calls to Grand Cayman for the year 2002. Consequently, the Port Authority is pursuing a means of properly developing its facilities to meet the demand and maintain Cayman's reputation as a first class cruise destination. After reviewing the plans to increase the size of the present cargo facility in George Town, the Port Authority Board made a decision to redirect their focus on expanding the present cruise tender facilities.

A local architectural firm was contracted to design a new cruise tender terminal at the present site of the Watler Building on North Church Street to upgrade the existing and South terminals and to repair the damage cargo finger pier. The new terminal will be named the Fort Street Terminal and provides adequate space off the street for buses and minivans to park. This redevelopment will bring the total complement of tender facilities to three. The design for these facilities incorporates Caribbean architecture and allows for the unimpeded flow of passengers to and from the terminals.

Financing for the redevelopment of the George Town harbour is being provided by the Florida Caribbean Cruise Association up to a value of some $10 million. Construction is expected to commence by mid 2002 and the new terminal will be ready for operation for the commencement of the winter season 2003. Again, I would like to thank my colleagues, the Elected Members of West Bay, the Second Elected Member for Cayman Brac, the Port Director and the Permanent Secretary who have been on these negotiations for several months now, and from last year in fact, for some of them. They were successful in gaining this agreement from the Florida Caribbean Cruise Association.

I hear that the Opposition is making much of it. They have not come out yet, I suppose they will send some forerunners either on Caypolitics or on the radio but I consider this a milestone for the Government. Also, included in this is an opportunity to have cruise ship into West Bay. This is not yet finalised but they have agreed to fund the development there. This is all good for the country and some of these achievements are blatant to the Opposition and that is why they are out there pounding and pounding on every area they can, because they see some optimism in the country. They see what is happening in the United States and therefore, they understand the United Democratic Party and this Government will turn things around and put our people back to work and bring investment. And so, the Opposition does not want that to happen because they will not be an alternative government.

In April 2002, the Port Authority plans to launch a new computer system that incorporates all of its daily operations. The system integrates all accounting features, container tracking, cargo delivery, vessel tracking and cruise ship scheduling.

Much has been said in relation to recent proposals about our commercial dock. Let me take a moment to set the record straight. Our belief is that the commercial dock facility has been outgrown and such facility is best relocated to an area which is remote from the cruise ship facilities and out of the centre of Town where George Town can be better utilised as a beautiful city; more properly planned where we can maximise road usage and pedestrianise certain areas.

A proposal from a private group was put forward and subject to studies which are being conducted on its viability from all aspects including the environment, a decision will be made after the necessary public input has been sought. No firm decisions have been made in this regard and when Members in this House or otherwise stand up here and try to make the people believe otherwise they are not doing any justice to the system and to the country. They are not even doing any justice to themselves when they dare go on public platform and say that they were not informed. The first time I heard about the East End site was a plan that was shown to people for aggregate because the aggregate study was saying that it must be moved out of George Town and out of the cargo dock. The Member for East End was one of those Members who saw it, and he did say to me at the time that he would support a situation of a dock in East End . . .

Point of Order

Mr. V. Arden McLean: Madam Speaker, on a point of order.

Hon. W. McKeever Bush: Madam Speaker, I would appreciate if the Member allowed me to finish making the statement and I will give way after that.

The Speaker: Please continue.

Hon. W. McKeever Bush: Madam Speaker, he then said that he would first want the public of East End to be consulted but he would want development in the area so he would support that facility—firstly was talked about anyway was a dock facility for aggregate.

The Speaker: The Elected Member from the district of East End would you kindly state your point of order.

Mr. V. Arden McLean: Thank you, Madam Speaker. The Minister is misleading the House and the public because I did not give any commitment to anyone on any dock East End. He did not show me any proposal, the Government did not show me any proposal and the private company, as far as I am aware who was proposing this thing had conception and that was it. My position to the Member and other Members including the Leader of Government Business at the time was that the people of East End must be apprised, and whatever the people of East End wants I will support.

The Speaker: Honourable Leader.

Hon. W. McKeever Bush: Madam Speaker, I did not say the Government showed it to the Member. The Government could not show it to him because the Government had nothing to do with it. The Government was being showed the dock as planned itself and I keep my ears to the ground and as Minister responsible for the Port and Transport I should do that. I should get information but I can tell this country that the Member did see that and he did say he would support it because of the development for East End but he would want the people to have their say in it. That is what he told me.

The Speaker: Member for East End.

Mr. V. Arden McLean: Thank you, Madam Speaker. I reiterate, I did not tell him that I was personally supporting any dock in East End. I told him the people of East End had to decide if they want a dock in East End. And if the majority of East End wishes I would go along with it. If that the supported then that is what it would be. If it is not support then it would not be supported by me.

The Speaker: Honourable Members, I have listened quite intently to both sides and I think it has been abundantly clear, although it has been said in different terminology that the Member for East End support was conditional under direction he got from his constituents.

Hon. W. McKeever Bush: Madam Speaker, thank you very much. What I am saying is that according to the Caymanian Compass it said that the Member said he knew nothing about a port up there and he was not informed. But I can say to this Honourable House that I have . . .

Mr. V. Arden McLean: Madam Speaker, on a point of order.

Point of Order

The Speaker: What is your point of order? Please state it.

Mr. V. Arden McLean: Madam Speaker, again the Minister is misleading this Honourable House. I said in my public meeting—and the Member must prove that I did not—I had no knowledge of any full fledge cargo dock in East End.

Hon. W. McKeever Bush: Madam Speaker, if I may. I was not at that meeting but I read the Caymanian Compass and if I recall

[Inaudible comment]

The Speaker: No cross-talk please.

Hon. W. McKeever Bush: Madam Speaker, I did understand what the report said and the Member said he did not know anything about it. I do not know if the Caymanian Compass is wrong. Maybe he could say. I think that is what the report said. That part is easy to prove but nevertheless I was not at the meeting. I heard there were not many people at the meeting and it was not the entire East End. That is not the point because all that exist now is a concept and whether it goes wherever it goes, the people of this country in different forums will have a say. This is all I have been saying.

The Speaker: If I may, Honourable Leader. Member for East End, is it your position that you did not say a full-fledge report, or is it your position that you at no time saw any report. Could you recall from memory exactly what your position is?

Mr. V. Arden McLean: Thank you, Madam Speaker. My reply to him saying that I did not know anything about a dock as reported in the Caymanian Compass is that I said the Minister said that a full fledged dock was being planned in the district of East End and I was to be apprised and I was not apprised.

The Speaker: Honourable Member, do you have a recollection of what was in the Compass? Did you read it yourself and could you please state what the Compass article carried?

Mr. V. Arden McLean: No, Madam Speaker, I have no recollection of what was in the Compass. It appears like the Minister has a very good recollection and he has to prove it.

The Speaker: Actually, I am not seeking to get a view, Honourable Member, as the maker of this statement. Could you give me an indication as to the date of your meeting so that I can actually look up the Compass report myself?

Mr. V. Arden McLean: Madam Speaker, as I recall that meeting was I think the 22 or the 23 January 2002. One of those dates.

The Speaker: Thank you. I will, when I take the luncheon break, try to retrieve that Compass and defer my ruling subsequently. And perhaps in the interim Madam Clerk can indicate to the Hansard Clerk that I would need some assistance with locating the necessary Compasses subsequent to the 23rd January 2002.

Honourable Leader, please continue with your debate.

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: Madam Speaker, the Member can twist and turn any way, the Opposition has been out there on a propaganda parade on this matter and they have been alleging all sorts of things about me as Minister and about other Members of this House. I have said what I have said in this matter that a decision will be made after the necessary input and proper procedure has been carried out. No decision has been made in this regard to put down a facility in East End. What I say is that the country is in dire need of a new dock and this is my vision. Because the country needs another arm of industry and a dock with all the facilities. Those who do not know should wait until a study is done and proposals are made for them to 'jump up and holler' and make accusations.

The Member for East End is still grumbling. I realise that he has been exposed a little bit but the truth is that Samson killed the Philistines with the jawbone of an ass and it seems like that jawbone is still working. Anyway, the Government is a Government of all the people. Despite the fact that the present representation from East End is in the Opposition and lends no support to the present Government and the UDP. We have approved the go ahead for a study on the project which if it were to be feasible would be the largest infrastructure project in the country. It would create jobs and significant benefits for all the people in the East End districts and improve land values, and it would be an improvement in the economy of the country.

This is the strongest indication that we are a Government for all the people. Projects which are for the benefit of the country and its people—irrespective of which district they are located, whether the representative from that district supports the Government or not—will be considered. If thought viable for the good of all, all the necessary support and steps will be taken to put those projects in place, irrespective of allegiances.

While the United Democratic Party is the Government of the day, we will represent all persons in a fair and equitable manner., Petty and dirty politics by the Opposition will not influence decisions for the good of the country.

On the radio show, the other day—and I loath to have to bring in these other entities because I have time for valuable things—there was an accusation made by someone who said he was calling from East End to say that he had seen my name on the property and made it out to be a point that it was my property. What rubbish! The closest property to East End that I have is down on the other side of the Island in Boltins Avenue, Katinalis Drive, Faith Villa, my home and the surrounding property. I own nothing anywhere else outside of West Bay.

I see that the Member for East End is saying that it was not him. Shaggy said that too, 'It wasn't me'. I did not say it was him. He did get up here after that statement was made and he clarified it to me. He said he had nothing to do with it. But what I am saying is that innuendoes are personal motives which are constantly being raised in relation to any projects which are being considered by the Government or projects which are approved, are unproductive, it is divisive and more than likely indicative of the baker's mind set and intention. The Holy Bible says, ". . . as he thinketh in his heart so is he". The problem with some of them is that if a dollar is made they make 75 cents out of it and no one else must get anything. That is their problem! It has always been their problem. Wait, I say until the study is done, we have no intention of running 'helter-skelter' with a program as important as the dock which I believe is important for a third arm of this country's industry, because we have no natural resources where we can draw money from or employ people when international problems hit us.

I own no land in East End but I took the trouble to ask one of my colleagues to get the documentation of who owns the property, and the Opposition could have done the same. If they did not, I do not know! However, you would believe, if they were honest, good, clean Opposition, they would have gone and ciphered it out and come back and say to the public, 'We know who owns these things because we have such interest, we have held meetings, we have talked about it, our supporters are talking about it, other people are talking about it. Let me go and say this to the public'. That is what a good Opposition does. I lay this on the Table of this Honourable House for all the world to see who owns it.

The Speaker: So ordered.

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: Madam Speaker, let me read it because the public will only hear it from the papers and the papers usually put their own spin on things. The letter of the 27 February says:- "I, Andreas Ovey Ugland, the undersigned hereby attest that I am the sole legal and beneficial owner of the above named company and that no other person(s) has any legal or beneficial shareholding therein". I lay these papers for the whole world to see. The company which owns the property is West Indian Group Limited. What is wrong with an investor who is clean and legal and who is doing good in this country, who has put in millions of dollars to develop for the good of the country which people are utilising? What is wrong with them owning property? I am not going to run away good, clean investors and I will not get drunk and run them out of my office either! I am going to do what the people brought me here to do. I will do what is best for the people of this country, but I am not going to allow anyone to shove me down because they have an ulterior motive. I have none. What I want to see, and the United Democratic Party wants to see, is for this country to move forward and to have good investment come in that our people can benefit from; that our people can be employed. That is what we want to see. We are about diversifying our economy. That is what I believe a well-built dock with the proper infrastructure can offer.

So, in spite of the Opposition declaring that there is nothing exciting in the Throne Speech, it is obvious that they are blind, deaf and dumb. It is even more obvious that they have been found wanting in their ability to pay attention to positive details. Rumours, yes . . . conjecture, yes . . . that is what they have been doing. Running up and down George Town like chickens without a leader talking and offering rumours.

Tourism figures are improving and the hard work being done by the private sector and the Ministry of Tourism is beginning to show some improvement despite poor economic performance in the world's major economies and lay-off which appear to be continuing.

The Second Elected Member for George Town who has done nothing yet since he has been here seems to take upon himself a delight to attack me wherever possible. He went on to question why are we doing all of this. Let him wait and see. I have told the public more or less why I would like to see it done. Let us wait and see what professionals who are in the know and have the technological ability to deal with it will say.

Let me deal with him for a minute about why we are doing something in West Bay. Why not? While he is questioning what I am doing in West Bay why is he not offering something for the people of George Town? Why not? A facility in West Bay will help people who would otherwise not be able to get into a business but would have another opportunity. What has he done for the people of George Town? Where are his plans to better off the people of this country and the people of George Town . . . to build another Court House so he can get up there with a wig and robe? That may need to be done maybe it is urgent that it gets done but what are his solutions to the problems that the country faces? He is good at criticising. That seems to be his long suit but where are his programs? Show me. Then that Member may have some reason to criticise the Government. However, when he sits down and does nothing besides (he says) giving away all his salary to his constituents, then he needs to do more. Obviously, what this United Democratic Party Government is about is offering long-term benefits that are going to help all the people. We give away some of our salary too, 'Mr. Member' but we are about giving them a future because the salary that comes from here is not known until the people have spoken.

Give them our salary? No. Give them a job, give them hope, give them some future and you can only do this by hard work; putting in long hours and the sense to carry out the programs and the initiatives that each Member of the United Democratic Party (or someone else if it is feasible) has proposed. That Member instead of asking about what is going on in West Bay should be walking the streets of George Town, all of them not just a few, (I know where he goes) and look at the dire need that the Minister of Community Services and the Minister of Planning are working at, trying to better people's chances in life. We talk about 200 houses and he immediately jumps up . . . wants to find out all about it before everything is ready so they can get out of here with rumour, conjecture, spin and blow it out of proportion. Let the Member be up and doing work rather than criticise.

Financial Industry

The importance of this sector to our economy cannot be over emphasised and the Government is committed to its continued growth and development. This industry bore the brunt of the emergency revenues introduced and their support and advice is very much appreciated. These were measures Government had to take, but up until we took office on the 8 November there was a $93 million gap and the Opposition has not yet come forward to say what their plan was. But you can believe this: no plan was in place.

The Government is committed to working diligently on its own problems to reduce the waste and expenditure, turnaround the economy and remove some, if not all, measures that affect all our people. The economy has to be turned around to where it is producing. Government has a surplus and that is the aim of this Government. We need to put aside for a rainy day. The Government will not introduce any further revenue measures on this industry in the foreseeable future. So long as I remain Leader of Government Business, efforts to do so will not be supported by me. This Government is committed to moving in tandem with them.

The industry has been under pressure from European based measures to harmonise tax rates globally and has been the subject from these organisations together with the negative publicity clearly generated to support their initiatives. This has been a destabilising factor in all Caribbean economies and it is hoped that capitalistic oriented economies, such as the United States of America, will take the lead to preserve its own well being and to address these initiatives. As Sir Winston Churchill once said, "The inherent value of capitalism is the unequal sharing of the blessings. Inherent virtue of socialism is the equal sharing of misery".

Colin Powell, Secretary of State in the United States of America has recently indicated in the Bahamas that the Caribbean was of strategic importance to the security of the eastern Sea Board of the United States of America. It should be evident to all that countries which are destabilised and their economic viability compromised by initiatives, which the proposers are not willing to put into place in their own countries, have the potential of causing long-term social problems that are extremely difficult for any government of the day to address.

We are proud of our leadership in the free market capitalistic world and are committed never to introducing any form of direct taxation. If we are forced to choose a model for our economy it will not be that one.

The IMF has launched on behalf of the financial stability forum a series of assessments, reviewing the financial structures and systems of all offshore centres. A number of jurisdictions including Cyprus and Belize have already been assessed and a number including but not limited to ourselves, the Channel Islands, Bahamas, Bermuda and Barbados have yet to be assessed.

The Government views this exercise as extremely important and has approved the establishment of a steering committee to oversee Cayman's preparation for the assessment. This committee is a tripartite one which will involve the Government regulatory and private sectors. At the moment, our assessment is proposed to take place early 2003. There will be opportunities to discuss the process further with IMF officials prior to that time, which we intend to avail ourselves of. The Cayman Islands has no difficulty with being assessed against standards and operation in the industrialised States.

Our aim will be to ensure that we are ready for the assessment and we will commit the necessary resources to this end. We are committed to having internationally agreed and accepted regulatory models with reasonable adjustments for small economies, but we are not committed to following European based regulatory initiatives designed to destabilise our economic well-being, which have not proven successful in their own countries. This is not our idea of a level playing field, neither is it that of our Caribbean neighbours nor apparently, the world's leading economic power (the United States of America).

The Monetary Authority will be made independent and Government believes that its Boards should be comprised of some persons who are recognised internationally in good societies. Again, in capitalistic societies as free market thinkers and leaders together with experts from our country. We will work with the members of the financial industry to do what it takes to remove unnecessary red tapes to business transactions, unnecessary regulatory burdens which exceed internationally recognised and accepted norms, and to assist the industry to grow in new areas. We believe that internationally recognised companies would welcome an opportunity to establish their head offices in the Cayman Islands. We see that as an important part of the industry and we will work together with the industry to encourage this additional type of business with smooth, efficient, hassle free operational assistance from various arms of our Government.

I would like to report to the House that as Leader of Government Business, with the Honourable Financial Secretary and the Deputy Leader, we have established bi-monthly luncheon meetings with various sectors of the financial industry. These luncheon meetings are also attended by other Ministers of Government to discuss any problems and any new initiatives which the Government may assist the private industry to introduce. We encourage members of the industry to let us have immediate indications of any problems which they may be experiencing and to take advantage of our offer of a new working relationship.

I would also like to report to this Honourable House that the Government has recently agreed on a new policy on work permits to be implemented in the very near future. This policy will establish a 21-day maximum time limit for work permits to be processed and issued. This is being done to facilitate and encourage business investment and local investment to settle here.

As a Government we are committed to obtaining expert advice both locally and abroad before taking any decisions on major issues which will affect the financial industry. We do not believe that unnecessary and burdensome regulation or red tape is conducive to growth. And we do not believe in extending international acceptable agreements in the area of exchange of information, the countries which have placed the Cayman Islands on their black list and whose legislation places us at a distinct advantage with others. While the Government is committed to complying with international standards we are not willing to compromise Cayman's competitive advantage.

Immigration

The strength of our country depends on the diversity of its peoples who live and work here. Most Caymanians are the product of diverse unions and mixes of nationalities from the beginning of our history. This unique feature added to our strengths over the last many years. Those who come to our shores and assist us in growing in our economy while participating in our social well being must be welcomed and made to feel at home.

For too long antiquated policies have produced counter-productive forces, and our Government does not support such policies which are not consistent with globalisation. We moved to grant status to those who have been here many years and who have demonstrated a desire to become part of our society, worked our economy, teachers who educated our children. We know there is still a large back log of such persons and today we are happy to be able to announce that the Government has agreed to extend an additional quota of 200 further grants of status. This is the right thing to do and for those who may be granted status, we welcome them.

In addition, the Government is expected to take a formal policy position shortly in respect of what consideration it would wish to see the Immigration Board extend to those individuals whose applications for Caymanian Status on the grounds of residence were unsuccessful late last year. It is possible that a directive could be issued. Advice on this issue is currently being prepared by the Portfolio of Internal and External Affairs and will be considered very shortly by the Executive Council. The advice will address the potential to afford these persons enhanced security of tenure in the form of permanent residency while taking advantage as far as possible of the substantial information that each had to provide with their application for Caymanian Status.

We believe that encouragement should be given to those who come here intending to make this their home and who make significant and major investments in our economy and behave themselves. To do otherwise would not only be internationally unacceptable but would be foolhardy. While some of our people will feel apprehensive they should not be too hasty to criticise the Government on this initiative.

While self-protection is paramount in most people's minds we cannot remain insular. In fact, the international community will not allow us to.

Our country does not have sufficient persons to meet our labour requirements in certain areas and provided that our people are given a fair and reasonable opportunity to advance and to work and to train and to pursue their hopes and dreams in a fair and equitable manner, all necessary permits will be made available in an efficient and fair manner. The dedicated staff at the Department of Immigration and the Boards appointment by the Government are re-energised to provide this efficient quality service and will welcome your suggestions in the manner in which they can better assist the public. In fact, in return we expect that all members of staff, many of whom are over-worked, will enjoy the public's respect, courteous behaviour and appreciation.

There is going to be soon the implementation of a new Cayman Islands landing card. The Cayman Islands Immigration Department is to introduce a new disembarkation card called the ED card next week to replace the current card which has been in place for over 20 years. In my Budget debate I made mention of this. The new card has been designed with the co-operation of the Department and the Ministry of Tourism in order to provide a card that provides tourism with more detailed and accurate data about visitors to these Islands, as well as allowing Immigration to properly categorise and process all persons who arrive at our ports of entry.

Some of the advantages of the new card are as follows: -

- Simplified layout allowing it to be filled in more quickly and accurately by arriving passengers.
- The purpose of visit section has been redesigned to allow, firstly, Immigration to classify the passenger as either a visitor, business traveler, person seeking employment, person taking up employment or a person in transit.
- It will allow tourism to categorise the details of a visitors vacation not only where they are from but whether it be purely leisure, dive trip, a wedding or honeymoon or simply visiting friends and family. This will allow more targeted efficient marketing campaigns to be undertaken and allow very accurate tourism statistics to be produced. The new card has been designed to be similar to the United States Immigration forms, in that, it is a single sheet of card with a tear off slip that the visitors keep with them until departure. It is felt that it will be more durable and easier to keep hold of than the current pink slip that all non-Caymanians have to keep with them.
- The new card also incorporates the Crest, logos of the Cayman Islands, as well as the Website of both the Tourism Department and the Cayman Islands Government. It was felt that in today's extremely competitive market every opportunity for branding should be taken.

- The new cards are cheaper to produce than the existing ones and a majority of the airline serving the Islands have undertaken to produce their own, thus reducing the cost to Government as a whole.
- The entire exercise of the development and implementation of these new cards has allowed the Tourism and Immigration Departments to work more closely together to produce a document and data that will be beneficial to the Government as a whole. This should allow both Departments to meet their objectives in a more efficient and effective manner.

I want to thank the Chief Immigration Officer, Mr. Connor and his staff for I think this is a timely initiative and this development is something that we have needed for some time. I am glad that it is now ready for publication. I certainly want to thank him and his staff.

The private sector has advised that the relationship building in many industries add to customer satisfaction, increased growth and enhanced business opportunities. So long as our country is unable to provide the needs of the various industries, locally and professional staff, or all of them I would say, and our people are given the necessary opportunities they deserve, the short supply in our labour market will be addressed. All necessary permits, as I have said, will be made available when needed. However, training for Caymanians must also exist, Madam Speaker. The Minister of Human Resources is well in advance of these initiatives.

Government Finances

The Government, in general, is committed to reducing costs and cutting waste from the government. All efforts are being examined to privatise services where this can be done efficiently and in a viable manner and this is ongoing presently.

Government cannot continue giving economic projections and conditions to grow at rates or exist in its present size. It is a simple fact. The simple fact is that there is no money to do so. Hard decisions will have to be made for the benefit of this country and our people. As Leader of Government Business I am prepared to make those decisions where I must to ensure a solid base for the future of our country and our children. The United Democratic Party is committed to this.

An examination of the entire Civil Service is being conducted through the Office of the Governor and all Members of the Executive Council (EXCO) are working extremely hard to identify areas in which Government may be made more productive and to cut costs. The Opposition has labeled me as being responsible for the removal of the so-called certain civil servants. Everyone knows, and any reasonable person understands, that the employment and termination of civil servants is the sole responsibility of His Excellency the Governor, or where the Government owns a corporation the Board of that corporation.

While the Opposition has engaged in its usual divisive propaganda, the truth is that as Leader of Government Business I and my colleague Ministers have embraced the Civil Service. I will lead the first policy discussion forum between the political directorate and the senior managers within the public service, statutory authorities and Government owned corporations to seek their input. The Minister of Education, the Minister of Community Services, the Minister of Health Services, the Deputy and all other Ministers will also lead in this forum.

We appreciate the role that the civil servants play as the people entrusted to interpret and implement the Government's policies. We must work together though because the country is faced with tremendous challenges that can only be addressed through a collective effort and that is what the United Democratic Party advocates. Nobody is trying to push civil servants around. Just think . . . a civil servant went on the talk show and lambasted us but it is strange. They had their say but I say that we must all work together. In my five terms in this House that is what I have tried to do to push Caymanians up whether they are in the private sector or in the public sector. I think that the Government as a whole supports that.

One of the biggest problems and the greatest hindrance to efficiency and performance in the public service is that there is hardly any co-ordination from top managers in what EXCO is doing. The carrying out of business is bound to suffer. Everyone is busy and there is much to be done but all of us as Ministers and managers could be more effective in getting decisions implemented and carry out our duties if there were modernised co-ordination. We are examining ways in which this can happen, in that, I believe a new Cabinet office needs to be set up properly.

The Cost of Public Service

Turning now to the cost of the public service. People have been working on this for some time and I have been talking about it for some time. Unfortunately, there is no longer the supply of money to support various aspects of Government services at their present levels. The losses in Cayman Airways and in the Health Service Department are being addressed together with other areas of Government expenditure and all decisions will be made with a view to the long-term interest of our country, our economy and our people. I am glad that the Minister who has just been elected for the Health Services has jumped right in and 'grabbed the bull by its horns'. As far as I am concerned, moving in the right direction regardless of what the Opposition wants to say.

We believe that Government must operate like a business, provide our people value for money, fast, efficient, address the needs of all and be an institution of which everyone can be proud to be a part of. Inefficiency should not be tolerated and the urgency of the situation is being addressed on a daily basis. Given the prevailing economic climate in the Cayman Islands and internationally, the Government out of necessity has sought means of stimulating economic activity. Inward foreign investment is an essential ingredient in the growth of our economy and provide jobs for our people and money for the Government to provide the necessary services that the public expects.

This investment must be encouraged, investors welcomed and projects dealt with in a manner to remove unnecessary roadblocks.

A new board (the growth management board) will be set up by the Government in the very near future to oversee this role and we look forward to its recommendations and to it playing a significant role in the development of our country. For those who in the past had preached that Cayman no longer needed investors and investment and who put policies in place to cause roadblocks and unnecessary divisive strategies in our country, the results are evident today. I heard the Second Elected Member for George Town talking about development. Although I do not believe he was able to develop all of his argument, he more or less questioned the need for it because of the cost to the country. That is what the Government has to balance but you cannot stand here and be divisive and cause doubt to be laid on everything and on people who are bringing in investment into the country. Or else we are going to wither up and die!

The world is moving on while the challenges and problems are there and we are being left behind. We have to get back to the point where we become a place where people want to come. We have to do that; we have to get the most out of it. That is what Government needs to balance.

There is unemployment presently and far too many of our people are out of work. Our people are having an extremely difficult time partly as a result of these policies. I know the Government is taking all possible steps to reverse that situation. Just a few years ago there was a big hue and cry about the Ritz Carlton that it was a bad thing. Of course, McKeeva was going to get rich out of it. You know that was the big story, that is what they like to pinch on. There was a big hue and cry about the Dart development. Now you run through the country you hear people saying, 'When are they going to start, when are they going to finish, we need work'. A few people running around the country who can get on the talk show or write dirty remarks on Caypolitics or who can get a rumour spread on the front page of a paper. They do not make up all the country neither does one Member of this House who gets up on a platform with twenty-five people to a meeting and say this is the people of this district.

I have been here long enough to know that when the chips are down; when the people need; when their business is suffering; when their children need; when they cannot pay their bills; when their mortgage is behind those who got out there and shouted were not in the majority. It is true that those who burned down the Fire Station are the same ones standing on the wayside asking what in the world is the Government doing to put out the fire. That is how it is. Therefore the Ministry of Development and Planning is working to establish the infrastructure required to attract and promote and encourage local and foreign investment in the Cayman Islands.

A major vehicle for driving this initiative is the new investment bureau working in partnership with the growth management board and the private sector. These bodies will seek and review proposals for major development projects. I am happy to report also that today marks the coming into effect of the Cayman Islands Development Bank (despite the Opposition's objections) and the dissolution of the AIDB and the HDC. This institution has within its budget $5 million earmark for housing in the Cayman Islands. A Motion will be brought to this House shortly to ratify the $5 million loan agreement for the good of the people. Yet they say there is nothing good to be happy about. Well, they do not have to grin but there are benefits for the people of this office.

The Speaker: Madam Clerk, could you please indicate how much time there is remaining? [Pause]

Honourable Leader there is 11 minutes remaining. Is this a convenient time for the luncheon break or would you wish to conclude your remarks? We will now suspend for the luncheon break and reconvene at 2.30 pm.

Proceedings suspended at 12.55 pm

Proceedings resumed at 2.50 pm

The Speaker: Please be seated. Proceedings are resumed. The Honourable Leader continuing his closing remarks on the Throne Speech. There are 11 minutes remaining.

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: Thank you, Madam Speaker. I would like to take a few minutes to deal with a few matters on the Turtle Farm.

The Turtle Farm

The Farm is moving ahead with a $8 million redevelopment program to enhance the Farm to move operations across the street from the ocean side. This also will provide a boost to the local economy as I understand the economist say that it is the multiplier effect. It is something like five times so that works out to be about $40 million in the local economy. I believe this comes at the right time when the economy is down although moving in the right direction. I want to say that local contractors and workers will get the work. I say that as Minister and as a representative of West Bay and as Chairman of the Board.

Although one local Jeremiah has been proclaiming on the radio show that the contract is already given out, nothing could be further from the truth. No contract has been given. We will ensure that local contractors and workers get the work. It gives me great pleasure to be able to say also that the Cayman Turtle Farm has commenced the process of applying to CITES to be registered or captive breeding status. This process was initiated after the Foreign and Commonwealth Office sponsored a visit to the United Kingdom in September last year to discuss environmental issues. Myself and the Director and the management from the Farm were present—the FCO for those discussions. At this time the Farm's status was discussed and the conclusion reached that the Farm now qualifies for captive breeding status. If granted the Farm will be able to conduct trade of its products on an international level. This is a welcome to us.

In closing I believe it is my duty to represent all the people and while I lead the United Democratic Party Government will also have that as its duty. To bring investment, protect the country, to bring prosperity for all. Put people back to work so they can pay their bills and raise their families with some satisfaction. What is the vision statement of the United Democratic Party? The UDP represents all the people in the Cayman Islands and provides an opportunity for equal participation in governing the Cayman Islands to reach its great potential as a country. The UDP will deliver this through contractual commitment and open communication with all the people of the Cayman Islands while providing opportunities for each and everyone's involvement in the successful completion of this obligation. That is our vision statement. That is what we are all about.

These are challenging times for the world and more so for the Cayman Islands devoid as we are of natural resources. Much is being said about development, about the dock and about higher buildings but one fact becomes increasingly evident to all of us who understand and care about these Islands. The Cayman Islands and the world will never be the same again. Gone are the relatively easy years of economic growth when investors lined up at the doors of these Islands and said, 'We are eager to put our money in your country'. We now have rough, tough competition internationally for money and markets.

I want the Opposition—the game they are playing is dangerous. I say to them in spite of our problems these Islands are not dead. We still have a lot going for us and it would be a tragedy of monumental proportion to have our economy, our competitive position for we still have an edge. Yes, our national unity was placed in jeopardy because during these times of constitutional reform, economic challenges, times of testing for all of us, we were unequal to the challenge. We had become unable to lift our sights and place the national interest before all other interests. I shall not be among them. I believe the good Lord will help us out of this situation if we do our part because that is what the good Book teaches us—if we do our part. However, we are not going to do that with the kind of Opposition I see being displayed. Opposition has to be reasonable; it must come with properly laid out plans. Not innuendo, gossip mongering, threats of demonstrations. The people of this country—not the United Democratic Party—cannot afford that in these challenging times. I say to them, be reasonable. It is no good of the leaders in this House standing or sitting and saying nothing while their supporters are doing the horse work or the donkey work or the dirty work. I knew when we got elected in 2000, that the people were looking, they were understanding, they were watching, they were listening to the programs, listening to what is being offered. I have the greatest confidence in the intellect and good, sound common sense of the people of this country. If that were not so I would not be here today because I had a lot going against me, in fact, eighteen candidates against the four of us. I speak of my constituency.

Opposition must be sound, fair, and reasonable. Opposition is good because that is democracy but so is responsibility. It carries with it responsibility and when I hear about people threatening other people and all other innuendo and foolishness that is going on in the country, it causes worry. But I do say that I believe the good Lord will help us out of this situation. I can say that I have proven—and I will say what I said in the opening this morning—that strong criticism disappears when the facts catch up with lies.

Vision, accomplishment, falling arrows. The United Democratic Party has a vision, we have accomplishments. Not so much in brick and mortar but systems and programs for the good of the country, long term benefit of the country. The Opposition has shot their arrows but they have fallen. I say again, no damage done.

I thank His Excellency the Governor for coming to this Honourable House to deliver the Speech as we see it. Thank you.

Indulgence by the Honourable Speaker

The Speaker: I crave the indulgence of this Honourable House to say a few words:

I speak from this Chair as Speaker and I am aware that this procedure has been set and, in fact, in the year 2000 the then Deputy Speaker, the Presiding Officer at the time during the Throne Speech on the 16 March 2000, set the local precedent. As I did not have an opportunity to debate this Throne Speech this year I now formally and respectfully request that all Honourable Members and Ministers, indeed the UDP Government, that they would continue to note the very necessary needs of my beloved districts of Cayman Brac and Little Cayman. There are obviously many wants that I would desire for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman but as a responsible representative, I am still fully cognisant that in a time of fiscal constraints which our country is now experiencing that the UDP Government as they are continuing to prioritise the national leads of our country, that Cayman Brac and Little Cayman will indeed form an integral part of the nation's priorities.

I would also respectfully request as I have done with past governments that before the Government makes decisions among its many varied and diverse, complex, local and international issues, that as much as possible, special attention would be given to the need and the desires of the constituents within the constituency of Cayman Brac and Little Cayman.

I should also wish to thank the Members of the UDP as well as all Honourable Members for taking the time out more in recent past for visiting the constituency of Cayman Brac and Little Cayman and indeed given the commitment to make regular and more often visits as has been the case over many decades. On behalf of my people I wish to convey their gratitude in this respect for this attention. Honourable Members, I should also wish at this time to once again draw to the attention of all and sundry that there are many pressing needs within Parliament itself.

During our tenure I hope that we would see the realisation of an independent Parliament, not only of Parliamentarians but indeed that of our staff. I should also wish to see a proper Library instituted here within our Parliament as I believe that if we are to continue with due diligence in carrying out our people's interest at the high level that is now expected, we must have not only the staff to carry out quick and efficient research, but also a Library that is up to date. Speaking of staff, Honourable Members, I would ask that amidst the fiscal constraints that special attention would be made to the lack of staff within this Parliament. I should also wish to draw to the attention of this Honourable House, as well as the listening public, the dire need for extra space for the Representatives within this Parliament, not only to conduct the affairs of this country but also to have the physical space to meet with any of our constituents who may come into this Parliament at any given time as the current situation does not speak good for the fifth largest financial centre within the world.

The other area I should wish to re-emphasise and draw attention to is that we have now entered the era of information technology, and I believe that it would be remiss of us, as this current generation of Parliamentarians, not to grab at the opportunity and bring our Parliament up to the age of information technology, whereby we can transact business, as the Deputy Leader has said many times into the e-business commerce. Government, I believe, should as well as with the support from all other Members in this House, give their 100 percent plus support behind this venture.

Honourable Members, I thank you for your indulgence. As I have said, I have not set a precedent, but I felt that we have now come into a realm, not only with looking at the modernisation of the Civil Service and indeed our Constitution, but Parliament must not be left behind. In so doing I would ask Members to take some time to review the Legislative Assembly (Immunities, Powers and Privileges) Law 1999 Revision because when one looks at a penalty of $100 for a fine for defamatory remarks made by the public, I think it is a joke and it is time that the Legislative procedure, upon the recommendation of this Parliament, set that matter right. I thank you.

That concludes the debate on the Throne Speech delivered by His Excellency, Mr. Peter J Smith, CBE, Governor of the Cayman Islands.

Madam Clerk, next item of business please.

PRIVATE MEMBERS' MOTIONS

PRIVATE MEMBER'S MOTIONS NO. 1/02

Amendment to the Marine Conservation Law (1995 Revision)

The Speaker: The Elected Member from the district of East End.

Mr. V. Arden McLean: Thank you, Madam Speaker. I beg to move Private Members' Motion No. 1/02 which reads:

"WHEREAS the Marine Conservation Law (Law 19 of 1978) (1995 Revision) (The Marine Conservation Law) was amended by the Marine Conservation (Amendment) Law 2001 ("the Amendment Law);

"AND WHEREAS clause 2 of the Amendment Law redefined 'speargun' in the widest possible terms so as to include, among other things, a traditional implement consisting of two prongs without barbs attached to a pole generally used for the taking of conchs and lobsters and commonly called a 'striker' or 'spike';

"AND WHEREAS a striker or spike is not generally or easily used to spear fish;

"AND WHEREAS many indigenous fishermen use a striker or spike to take conch and lobster for the purpose of bait and otherwise;

"AND WHEREAS the Marine Conservation Law now makes it unlawful to own or use a striker or spike without a licence;

"AND WHEREAS the requirement to obtain a licence for a striker or spike is viewed as unnecessary, restrictive, unduly onerous and cumbersome by traditional fishermen;

"BE IT NOW THEREFORE RESOLVED THAT the Marine Conservation Law be amended so as to exclude from the definition of speargun the traditional implement known as a 'striker' or 'spike'."

The Speaker: Is there a seconder?

Mr. Alden M. McLaughlin, Jr.: Madam Speaker, I beg to second that Motion.

The Speaker: Thank you. Does the Mover of the Motion wish to now debate?

Mr. V. Arden McLean: Thank you, Madam Speaker.

I do not propose to take a very long time on presenting this Motion because it is rather straightforward and I believe all Members of this Honourable House are aware of why I brought this Motion. One of the reasons was that during the Committee stage where I was supposed to bring a Motion, the Committee stage of the Amendment of the Marine Conservation (Amendment) Bill, we sort of went pass it so we could not go back to the Motion. Therefore, I thought it necessary to bring it to Parliament. Besides, the Bill has already been gazetted therefore, under the current conditions right now, it is illegal to use a strike or spike on the three Cayman Islands. Madam Speaker, just to briefly say that we are all aware that it is a traditional instrument used by our fishermen (anyone who goes fishing not for commercial purposes only) to retrieve conchs and lobsters. I agree that in more recent times this means of retrieving lobsters and conchs is not as widely used as before. I do not believe that it has ever been widely used in the two sister Islands as it was here in Grand Cayman. Nevertheless, it is a traditional thing and we still have members of the community using it.

I believe that it is necessary for us to exempt this spike/striker from the Law because most people and most of us should know how a striker is made. It is basically made with two unbarked prongs on a pole (a pole usually retrieved from the forest). The pole is unbarked before preparing the spike. I believe that at the time the Amendments were proposed to the Marine Conservation Law was overlooked maybe in the haste. Maybe it was not overlooked because I believe they were—having talked to some of the proponents of those Amendments—under the impression that the spike can be used to spear fish. To some extent I would want to agree with those who say that but certainly a spike cannot. And it is impossible for a spike to take as many fish as a mechanical speargun would. The amendment in clause 2 of the Amendment Bill was proposed and passed, which reads: “Speargun includes a mechanical speargun, a Hawaiian sling, a pole spear, a harpoon, a rod or any other device which may be used to take marine life by spearing it”. In the broadest terms that indicate that a spike would be considered illegal without a licence because conchs and lobsters are considered marine life.

I respect that, particularly the members of the Department of Environment. They are strapped and their job is to try and protect the environment. I respect that they will make every effort to ensure that provisions are in place in order that there are no loop holes and no fisherman or any resident saying to them, ‘Yes we caught all of these fish by using a spear’ when they should have had a licence for it.

I believe that there are sufficient people left in this country who can testify that when one says he has the allotted amount of fish under the Law by means of spearing, that those fish were not speared by a spike. I understand the excuse that is always given whenever the marine enforcement officers approach these individuals who go out and destroy the marine life: ‘Well it was not the spear we were using, we were using hook stick or we were using the harpoon’. Certainly the marine officers have to back off because there is no provisions in the Law. Therefore, the Department quite rightly proposed that we include everything and that is the way we would cover it. To some extent I agree that we need to make sure that we cover as many bases as we possibly can. In my humble submission, for those same individuals who claim that their taking of the marine life, in particular fish, with holes in them was done by a spike, if any jury or judge in this country sees a spike, I am sure they will conclude that it is impossible to take 300 fish with a spike within one day.

This is not something that we can dive under the water and stay down there for a long period of time and strike fish. It is not propelled easily and it is only used in shallow water . . . 10, 12, 14 feet maybe. To strike a fish with it the fish would have to be stopped and it would have to be in rather shallow water. We have many members of the community who fish not only for a living but as a hobby. These people in a number of instances, they are the older generation.

I can think of many in my constituency who are much older but have held on to the traditional way of fishing, that is, going out in their boats and retrieving their bait (conchs and lobsters). Then we have the younger generation who has caught up with the technology of today and they go and retrieve their conchs and lobsters as a means of bate by putting on diving gear and getting into the water. However, the older folk in this country cannot get over the side and dive for conchs so they rely on the little striker/spike to retrieve some of these conchs for bait.

There are provisions in the Law for taking certain amounts of conch and lobster and we cannot deprive anyone of that. In essence, if we left the provisions in the Law which makes a striker illegal then we are depriving those citizens who have hung on to the traditional way of retrieving conchs and lobsters. I am humbly suggesting to the Members of this Honourable House to consider that. Certainly I know the situation, like I said earlier, many of those who use spear fishing as a means of livelihood will try to circumvent that same striker and spike and say that they are capable of spearing fish with it. Well, I believe that if anyone claims to be able to do that then I think the jurors, the judges and the legislators should ask that individuals and the marine officers give a demonstration on how that can be done.

In all my years here I have never seen it done. Yet, certainly we will be learning every day. I respectfully submit that those individuals who will tell the marine officers that they use a spike to spear 300 fish in one day would be telling them a lie. That is one of my reasons for asking that the spike or striker, whichever we wish to call it, be exempt from the definition of a speargun for which a licence is required. I understand Hawaiian sling, pole spear, harpoon and the rod, but they also claim that they can skillfully take fish with the hook stick. Again, that is something I would have to see. Again, let me say that I wholeheartedly respect the members of the Department and the Ministry for their efforts to try and cover all the bases to prevent people from taking so much marine life. I applaud them and support them but that broad definition tends to encroach on some of our traditional way of doing things. I would respectfully ask the Members of this Honourable House to support this Motion because we certainly do not want to legislate laws to cause hardship on some of our older people who go there and use the traditional methods to live. They go and fish to sell it back.

Having said that I will sit down and await the Government's reply. Thank you.

The Speaker: Thank you, Elected Member for East End. Does any other Member wish to speak? The Leader of Government Business.

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: Madam Speaker, the Ministry sought direction from the Department of Environment on this matter, and I can certainly appreciate the sentiments expressed by the Mover and the Seconder of this Motion. I wish that it was not necessary to regulate fishing practices to the degree that we have done, but unfortunately there are certain elements in our society who make tight regulation a necessity. Nevertheless, I am confident that we can achieve the desired outcome of the Elected Member for East End and the Seconder of the Motion.

After consulting with the Department of Environment regarding enforcement issues surrounding this Motion, I am of the view that the Government can support the contraction of the definition of speargun. This would include a mechanical speargun, a Hawaiian sling, or any other device mechanically propelled to the water, provided that a new section is inserted in the Law that provides for a catch limit and possession limit for fish, which have been taken by a speargun as would be newly defined or any other device used to spear or impale a fish. I believe that this would address the concerns of the proponents of this Motion, in that traditional fishermen will be able to continue to use strikers to take conch and lobster without having to license them. The insertion of the new section would close the door on those people who are using implements other than spearguns to slaughter hundreds of fish and other marine life. So when we do this other amendments will be brought at the same time. The fact is that the Department having a tremendously hard time with the use of spearguns and other things that are being hand made locally to spear fish. When we look at all these pictures we see the amount of reef fish that are being speared and for who is going to need a meal that is not so bad but when we see hundreds of reef fish that have been taken and are fast disappearing. Sometimes the things that we do not normally eat here and we just allow them to do what nature has put them there to do in our marine environment.

So, on advice from the Department of Environment we have no problem with the request.

The Speaker: Does any other Member wish to speak? Last call, does any other Member wish to speak? If not, would the Mover wish to exercise his right of reply?

Mr. V. Arden McLean: Thank you, Madam Speaker.

First of all, let me thank the Minister of his contribution and the support that Government has indicated. I appreciate the Government's position and understanding on this issue and I want to let the Government know what any measure that tries to assist with the protection of our marine environment, I will be supporting. Certainly, he mentioned that there were things that we do not usually eat here that are being destroyed and I would ask the Government to include something that I learned since submitting this Motion. I was told recently by members of my constituency that the people are now taking all the sea urchins and the foreigners, in particular the Phillipino nationality among us—I recall when I was growing up you could not walk on the grass because of sea urchins and they just went away for a while. I do not know what caused that . . . maybe some disease that came through. All of a sudden, they are all back—and they are taking them by the 15-gallons, three 5-gallon buckets full and I know, Madam Speaker

Point of Elucidation

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: Madam Speaker, I wonder if the Member would give way and I would satisfy his concern.

The Speaker: Honourable Member, will you give way?

Mr. V. Arden McLean: Yes, Madam Speaker.

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: Madam Speaker, in the same discussions we had the Department is requesting that echinoderms be added to the list of prohibited species. This was omitted when the previous amendments were tabled. These include species such as the Member is talking about, sea urchins or sea eggs, star fish, sand dollars, and sea cucumbers. He is right, we are having tremendous problems with it and those are the other amendments that I said would be brought.

The Speaker: Thank you. Member for East End continuing.

Mr. V. Arden McLean: Thank you, Madam Speaker. I need not go any further on that then because I was going into all those that we call sea dumpling and the fish, et cetera. They are taking them and as I said in my debate on that amendment Law earlier on in the year, Caymanians do not eat those. Those are for the beauty of our marine life and as the Government brings it I can give them my support now and let them know that I shall be supporting it. The other Opposition Members certainly will be supporting any move in that direction. Thank you very much.

The Speaker: The question is that The Marine Conservation Law be amended so as to exclude the definition of speargun, the traditional implement known as the striker or spike.

All those in favour please say Yes. Those against, No.

[Laughter]

Ayes.

The Speaker: The Ayes have it.

The Motion is passed in its affirmative. I did mention that we would be seeking to modernise Parliament. [Chuckle] Perhaps that is the terminology that came out as a Freudian slip. The Motion is accordingly passed. We will now take the afternoon break.

Agreed: Private Member's Motion No. 1/02 Passed.

Proceedings suspended at 3.34 pm

Proceedings resumed at 3.55 pm

The Speaker: Proceedings are resumed.

Madam Clerk, the next item of Business.

GOVERNMENT BUSINESS

The Speaker: Honourable Deputy Leader of Government Business, I understand it is your intention to move a Motion.

Motion to defer Government Motion No. 1/02

Hon. Linford A. Pierson: Madam Speaker, I seek leave of this Honourable House to defer Government Motion No. 1/02 until a later Sitting during this Meeting of the House.

The Speaker: Thank you. The question is that Government Motion No. 1/02 be deferred until a later sitting of the House. All those in favour please say Aye. Those against, No

OFFICIAL HANSARD REPORT
WEDNESDAY
6 MARCH 2002
10.19 AM
Ninth Sitting

[The Deputy Speaker in the Chair]

The Speaker: I shall invite the Honourable Minister of Tourism and the Leader of Government Business to grace us with prayers.

PRAYERS

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: Let us pray.

Almighty God, from whom all wisdom and power are derived: We beseech Thee so to direct and prosper the deliberations of the Legislative Assembly now assembled, that all things may be ordered upon the best and surest foundations for the glory of Thy Name and for the safety, honour and welfare of the people of these Islands.

Bless our Sovereign Lady Queen Elizabeth II; the Queen Mother; Philip Duke of Edinburgh; Charles, Prince of Wales; and all the Royal family. Give grace to all who exercise authority in our Commonwealth, that peace and happiness, truth and justice, religion and piety may be established among us. Especially we pray for the Governor of our Islands, the Speaker of the Legislative Assembly, Official Members and Ministers of Executive Council and Members of the Legislative Assembly, that we may be enabled faithfully to perform the responsible duties of our high office. All this we ask for Thy great Name's sake.

Let us say the Lord's Prayer together: Our Father, who art in Heaven, Hallowed be Thy Name. Thy Kingdom come, Thy will be done on earth as it is in Heaven. Give us this day our daily bread, and forgive us our trespasses, as we forgive those who trespass against us. Lead us not into temptation, but deliver us from evil. For Thine is the Kingdom, the power and the glory, forever and ever. Amen.

The Lord bless us and keep us. The Lord make His face shine upon us and be gracious unto us. The Lord lift up the light of His countenance upon us and give us peace, now and always. Amen.

Proceedings resumed at 10.50 am

The Speaker: Please be seated. Proceedings are resumed.

READING BY THE HONOURABLE
SPEAKER OF MESSAGES
AND ANNOUNCEMENTS

Apologies

The Speaker: I received apologies for absence today from the Honourable Speaker; the Honourable Minister for Community Services, Youth and Women's Affairs; the Second Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman and the Honourable Second Official Member. I have also received apologies for the late arrival from the Honourable Minister for Planning.

PRESENTATION OF PAPERS
AND OF REPORTS

Cayman Islands Monetary Authority Annual Report 1999

The Speaker: The Honourable Third Official Member.

Hon. George A. McCarthy: Mr. Speaker, I beg to lay on the Table of this Honourable House the Cayman Islands Monetary Authority Annual Report for 1999.

The Speaker: So ordered. Would the Honourable Minister wish to speak thereto?

Hon. George A. McCarthy: My comments, Mr. Speaker, will be on both of the reports after I have tabled the one for the year 2000.

Cayman Islands Monetary Authority Annual Report, 2000

The Speaker: The Honourable Third Official Member.

Hon. George A. McCarthy: Mr. Speaker, I beg to lay on the Table of this Honourable House the Cayman Islands Monetary Authority Annual Report for the year 2000.

The Speaker: So ordered. Does the Honourable Minister wish to speak thereto?

Hon. George A. McCarthy: Mr. Speaker, before addressing the financial highlights of the Report (these are the Reports for the year 1999 and the year 2000) I would like to comment on a few of the noteworthy achievements by the Monetary Authority.

During 1999 Cayman was the host jurisdiction to the 17th Annual Conference of the Caribbean group of Banks supervisors, as well as the Annual meeting of the offshore group of insurance supervisors. Another significant event that also underscored the commitment of the Authority, to actively participate in cross-border supervision was the introduction of the Memorandum of Understanding signed between the Cayman Islands and Brazil.

As always, Mr. Speaker, staff development was a priority during both years with several employees successfully participating in training courses put on by the Federal Reserve of New York, the United States Security and Exchange Commission and other institutions.

The year 2000 was a challenging one for the Monetary Authority and the financial services industry as a whole. During that year, various international initiatives such as the Financial Action Task Force (FATF) Report on non-co-operative jurisdictions and the KPMG Review of the Caribbean Overseas Territories were the focus of all participants in the Cayman Islands financial sector.

In response to these initiatives, the Cayman Islands amended various pieces of financial legislation and enacted the Proceeds of Criminal Conduct Law Money Laundering Regulations 2000. The legislative changes made in 2000 made significant improvements to the Cayman Islands existing anti-money laundering legislation and regime.

The Cayman Islands received a favourable review in the KPMG Report published in 2000. The Report noted that Cayman's recent financial legislative changes relating to international co-operation and anti-money laundering, taken as a whole, were extensive and largely consistent with international best practice standards.

Financial statements included in the 2000 Report on pages 36 to 48 were audited by the Auditor General in accordance with the provisions of section 35(2) of the Monetary Authority Law 2000 (Revision) and section 45(1) of the Public Finance and Audit Law 1997 (Revision). The annual financial statements of the Authority as at the 31st December 1999 are also shown on pages 33 thru 43 of the 1999 Annual Report.

Among the financial highlights for the year 2000 are total assets of $69.8 million. For the year 1999 that figure is $71.5 million. For the year 2000 this included $68.8 million of currency reserve assets representing investments and current call and fix deposits. For the year 1999 that figure was $69.9 million.

Total liabilities of $55.7 million, which include $51.1 million of demand liabilities for currency in circulation, were fully secured by the currency reserve assets as required by section 28 of the Monetary Authority Law 2000 Revision. Total liabilities for the year 1999, when Members looked at the financials in the report, can be seen as $56.3 million and the full amount would represent the demand liabilities for currency in circulation that were also fully secured by currency reserve assets, as required, under section 28 of the Monetary Authority Law.

Total reserves and capital was $14.1 million. For the year 1999 $13.9 million and the general reserves is maintained at 15 per cent of the demand liabilities, as required, by section 6 and 8 of the Monetary Authority Law. The general reserve requirements were decreased by $800,000 in the year 2000. A similar decrease occurred in 1999, which amounted to $1.7 million. Net income for the year 2000 can be seen as $4.6 million and for the year 1999 as $3.2 million.

With respect to movements in statutory reserves the Currency Board approved a transfer of $100,000 to the currency issue reserve to provide for future reprints. A transfer of $50,000 was to the currency issue reserve to cover currency reprints also occurred in 1999.

Approval was also given for the transfer of $800,000 in the year 2000 and $250,000 in 1999 to the paid up capital account. After satisfying these requirements the Authority was still able to exceed its budgetary target of transferring, in the year 2000, $4.5 million and in the year 1999 $1.2 million to the general revenue of the Cayman Islands Government.

Mr. Speaker, I would like to express my appreciation to my fellow board members of the Cayman Islands Monetary Authority, as well as to the management and staff of the Monetary Authority for their continued hard work and dedication. Thank you very much.

Proposal for Establishing New Employment Relations in the Cayman Islands

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Education, Human Resources and Culture.

Hon. Roy Bodden: Mr. Speaker, I beg to lay on the Table the proposals for establishing new employment relations in the Cayman Islands.

The Speaker: So ordered. Does the Honourable Minister wish to speak thereto?

Hon. Roy Bodden: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I have a brief commentary, which I would like to make.

Mr. Speaker, this effort is the culmination of an exercise undertaken by the Ministry shortly after I was assigned responsibility for these matters. It is significant to note that the proposal is for the new Law to be called 'The Employment Law' as against 'The Labour Law' and the proposals include the establishment of a minimum wage advisory committee.

More significantly, the proposal attempts to amalgamate a series of laws into one instrument, which is not only comprehensive but which ensures and guarantees the protection under a tripartite system of employer, employee and government. Also significantly too, to bring the Cayman Islands in line with international obligations, including obligations from the International Labour Organisation and Obligations, which has to do with International Human Rights Conventions.

It is proposed to amend the Workmen's Compensation Law so that everyone including the poorest and most underprivileged members of the working community are protected. The Pensions Law, The Trade Union Law, The Trade and Business Licenses Law—these suggested improvements are going to bring the country up to the position where hopefully, we can include the Civil Service so that we no longer have one country—two systems.

Later today I will be addressing the Chamber of Commerce on issues contained in these proposals. I can say that to date what was the Labour Department has now been restructured and renamed The Employment Relations Department, and we have established an Employment Services Centre where the practices are significantly different from what transpired in the past.

It is proposed with this tabling that the public will have three months in which to submit their comments on this proposal. These comments will be taken into consideration and thereafter it is proposed that we will draft the Bill to bring to this Honourable House with the ultimate objective of drafting a new Employment Relations Law.

I look forward to receiving the comments from the public and from all those concerned. I also look forward eventually to the development of an instrument, which allows the Cayman Islands to meet international obligations but more importantly, lays out the understanding of the tripartite system and sets the tone for best practice between employer, employee and government. This instrument should ideally take the Cayman Islands into the 21st Century in terms of modern employment legislation. Thank you.

Suspension of Standing Order 23(7) and (8)

The Speaker: Before we go into questions, we have now reached the hour of 11.00 am. Is there a Motion to suspend Standing Order 23(7) and (8)?

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: Mr. Speaker, I move the suspension Standing Order 23(7) and (8) in order for questions to be taken after 11.00 am.

The Speaker: The question is that Standing Order 23(7) and (8) be suspended to allow question time to continue beyond 11.00 am. All those in favour please say Aye. Those against, No.

Ayes.

The Speaker: The Ayes have it.

Agreed: Standing Orders 23(7) and (8) suspended.

QUESTIONS TO HONOURABLE MINISTERS AND OFFICIAL MEMBERS

Question No. 20

Deferred Wednesday 27 February 2002

The Speaker: The Elected Member for East End to ask the Honourable Minister.

No. 20: Mr. V. Arden McLean asked the Minister responsible for Education, Human Resource and Culture if the Government has given approval to an overseas group called St. Matthew's University to open an offshore tertiary facility in the Cayman Islands and, if so, under what conditions was it given.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Education, Human Resources and Culture.

Hon. Roy Bodden: Mr. Speaker, the answer: In January of this year the Government gave approval to the St. Matthew's University School of Medicine to establish a Cayman Islands campus. The University's local representative was advised of this decision and authorised to begin the necessary paperwork with the relevant Government departments. Currently, the University is incorporated in Belize, but, as part of their proposal to the Government, the University agreed to become incorporated in the Cayman Islands.

As with the establishment of any new organisation of this nature the University must comply with the laws of the Cayman Islands. Since St. Matthew's is an educational institution, it must also be registered with the Education Council and this matter will be handled at an upcoming Education Council meeting.

The Speaker: Are there any supplementaries?
The Member for East End.

Supplementaries

Mr. V. Arden McLean: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Can the Minister say if the St. Matthew's University School of Medicine has affiliates in other countries other than Belize?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister.

Hon. Roy Bodden: Mr. Speaker, it most certainly does. It has affiliates and associate institutions in the United States, Canada and the United Kingdom.

The Speaker: Elected Member from East End.

Mr. V. Arden McLean: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Can the Minister say if this campus will be operated as a new campus being built or will utilise some of the Government's facilities, such as the Community College campus?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Education.

Hon. Roy Bodden: No, Mr. Speaker. This institution will be operating entirely independent of the Government Community College.

It is my understanding that space for classrooms and administration has been leased on the Safe Haven site and this is where the University will be conducting its classes and where it will have its administration offices.

I have been informed that commencing in May there will be 200 students coming to the Cayman Islands, who are registered to come here and start classes, and it is my understanding that within the next 12 months the enrolment will possibly be up to as many as 500.

The Speaker: The Elected Member from East End.

Mr. V. Arden McLean: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Can the Minister say if the Government of the Cayman Islands will be utilising this institution for nurses, et cetera?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Education.

Hon. Roy Bodden: Mr. Speaker, the University's authorities have generously donated one medical scholarship per year for qualified Caymanian students. In addition, the University's authorities have told us that they would like to enter into an understanding with our medical personnel here, whereby we can benefit from eminent professors, consultants and resource people that they bring down to hold conferences. They will be willing to share with us any development in the medical field and medical technology which can be of benefit to our community.

The Speaker: The Second Elected Member from George Town.

Mr. Alden M. McLaughlin, Jr.: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I wonder if the Minister can give us any details about the type of accreditation that this University has and whether or not he is satisfied that the University is competitive.

The Speaker: The Minister for Education.

Hon. Roy Bodden: Mr. Speaker, it is my understanding that this University is a reputable academic institution. Persons who particularly follow medical studies in the United States will know that it is extremely difficult for people to get access into medical schools in the United States. It is highly competitive and even in the States, in addition to the academic requirements there is usually a residential requirement where, for example, if it is in the State of Florida applicants who are normally residents in Florida will get consideration and priority over other qualified applicants from out of State. It is certainly nigh impossible for anyone who is not a United States citizen to gain access into a United States medical school for the first degree. However, for a qualification of the medical diploma at the postgraduate level it is a little easier.

This University, I am made to understand, is especially attractive to those students who have high caliber qualifications, many of whom have first degrees in ancillary fields, but have not been able, largely as a result of the highly competitive nature, to enter medical schools which are affiliated to the major universities.

Indeed, Mr. Speaker, some of the principals of St. Matthew's University Medical School are themselves eminent academics who, prior to this, were associated with prominent universities and medical schools in the United States. As far as their accreditation is concerned, I have on my desk at the Ministry, as we speak, a letter from the principals asking for certain recommendations from the Government so that the University can receive accreditation from their Accrediting Commission on Colleges of Medicine authorised by the United States Department of Education. It has already been approved by the Canadian Department of Education and its association with other various universities puts it in a good stead for national recognition and accreditation.

The Speaker: The Second Elected Member from George Town. I will allow one more supplementary after this one.

Mr. Alden M. McLaughlin, Jr.: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I wonder if the Minister could confirm if he is saying that as at present, the St. Matthew's University School of Medicine is not accredited in the United States.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Education.

Hon. Roy Bodden: No, Mr. Speaker, I did not say that because that would not be a representative of the facts. What I said is that it is currently pursuing accreditation from the Accreditation Commission on Colleges of Medicine, which is authorised by the United States Department of Education.

It is my understanding that throughout the United States there are various and varying accreditation commissions. There is an Accreditation Commission for Independent Colleges and Universities; there is the Accrediting Commission for Southern Colleges; there is the Accrediting Commission for Colleges in the Northwest, et cetera. So, I did not say that this institution is not accredited in the United States.

The Speaker: The Second Elected Member from George Town.

Mr. Alden M. McLaughlin, Jr.: Thank you, Mr. Speaker, but I am becoming increasingly confused. Maybe if I asked the question again in a more straightforward manner: Is or is not the St. Matthew's University School of Medicine presently accredited in the United States of America?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Education.

Hon. Roy Boddén: Mr. Speaker, it most certainly is, Sir.

Question No. 25
(deferred— Standing Order 23(5))

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: Mr. Speaker, I move that question No. 25 be deferred, as the Member is not in the House today.

The Speaker: The question is that in accordance with the provisions of Standing Order 23(5), question No. 25 be deferred until a later sitting. All those in favour please say Aye. Those against, No.

Ayes.

The Speaker: The Ayes have it.

Agreed: Question No. 25 Deferred.

Question No. 26

The Speaker: The First Elected Member from George Town.

No. 26: Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts asked the Honourable Third Official Member responsible for the Portfolio of Finance and Economics, to state government's position on the recently announced decision by local insurance providers to agree on the same rates.

The Speaker: The Honourable Third Official Member.

Hon. George A. McCarthy: Mr. Speaker, the answer is given in the context that the question refers to property insurance rates. The reinsurance market determines what is known as a 'base rate' for property insurance. This rate was increased in March 2001 and there was a further increase in October 2001 following the events of 11 September 2001. It is the fixing of this 'base rate' for 2002 that has probably prompted the question asked.

The 'base-rate' determined by the reinsurance market is specific to the Cayman Islands and it is understood that our rate is more favourable than that applied to others in the Caribbean region—reflective of the Cayman Islands' high standard of building construction and the assessment that we have a smaller chance of a direct hit from a hurricane, given our geographical location, than others in the region.

The general public will not pay the 'base rate'. Local insurance companies are free to charge any amount above this 'base rate' and the extent of the amount so charged will be a reflection of the risk assessment for the property being insured. As an example, it is expected that beachfront property where risk of damage due to storm action is greater than those properties further inland, will attract a higher premium than properties in a less exposed location.

The rates payable by the public for property insurance is therefore likely to vary from one insurance provider to the next, and even in respect of coverage provided by the same insurer there will be variation in the rates charged—to reflect differing assessments of risk on properties being insured.

In conclusion The Government recognises that notwithstanding that property insurance rates are determined by market forces, a small committee under the chairmanship of the Deputy Financial Secretary will be appointed to meet with the property insurance providers to discuss the basis of the recent increase and to report the findings to Executive Council.

The Speaker: Are there any supplementaries?
The First Elected Member for George Town.

Supplementaries

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Thank you.

If the Honourable Third Official Member might jog his memory he might remember that not so very long ago there was a news item where one of the insurance brokers publicly expressed disappointment in the coming together of the various companies to deal with these rates. My understanding at that point in time is not what the answer is giving here now and I am wondering whether there is absolute clarity with regards to the way the answer has been crafted and delivered.

My question is: Is the Honourable Third Official Member saying that there is no decision made by the various property insurance providers in the Cayman Islands whereby they are coming together to decide on rates that are across the board for all of them?

If you will bear with me, I just want the Member to know that I understand the difference between what is speaking to base rates and what over the counter rates are, so I do not need that to be clarified.

The Speaker: The Honourable Third Official Member.

Hon. George A. McCarthy: Mr. Speaker, I understand the question as posed by the Honourable First Elected Member for George Town. However, this is a matter that will be looked into under the chairmanship of the Deputy Financial Secretary in terms of whether there is any form of collusion that has taken place in this matter.

I recall the statement in question that the Member is referring to but I would rather the findings be arrived at through discussions that will be taking place by the Deputy Financial Secretary, his team and the insurance industry representatives before I can be specific in terms of the response. I know the answer that the Member is driving at but I cannot give an affirmative answer at this point in time until the discussions take place.

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Mr. Speaker, can the Honourable Third Official Member inform me as to whether this small committee was formed prior to him receiving this question or subsequent to receipt of the question?

The Speaker: the Honourable Third Official Member.

Hon. George A. McCarthy: Subsequent to the receipt of the question, Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: First Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Thank you. I will turn this into a question but I think it is important that all of us, and I am not pointing at the Third Official Member because he is the only one in the world who holds responsibility—but it is important for all of us to understand that if this is the case, or if it is anywhere near the case, everyday that passes, every single individual and entity in this country are paying the price for it.

I would ask for an undertaking from the Member that this matter be expedited as quickly as possible to come to a point where the Government can take a position.

The Speaker: The Honourable Third Official Member.

Hon. George A. McCarthy: Mr. Speaker, I understand what the Member is seeking for but although we have had fluctuation in rates there has been the reference to market forces, and quite recently I spoke to the representative of one of the insurance companies. In fact, this gentleman has been appointed by the industry to speak on their behalf. He gave me a statement, which if you would permit me to read the statement I would do so for the edification of this Honourable House, and also to Table a copy of this statement for the benefit of Honourable Members.

The Speaker: So ordered.

Hon. George A. McCarthy: Mr. Speaker, this statement was prepared by Mr. Danny Scott, president of Cayman Islands Insurance Company and it reads:

“General Insurance Industry Overview

Immediately prior to the unprecedented terrorist attacks in the United States on the September 11, 2001, the Global insurance industry was in transition between a severe soft market and a hard market. Insurance capacity had reached historically high levels in 1999, which led to downward pressure on premium rates; weakening investment performance coupled with higher than usual losses worldwide resulted in a period of declining profitability, as a result, insurance and reinsurance premiums started to rise towards the end of 2000 and continued into 2001, to meet shareholders demands for a return to profitability. Property rates in the local market rose steadily during this period.

It was at this critical period that the events of 11th September 2001 occurred. The event will produce catastrophic losses in several areas of insurance underwriting, and will impact all the major reinsurers worldwide, both directly and indirectly. With falling interest rates and uncertain investment returns, reinsurance premiums rose significantly, not only to generate a ‘payback’ for the September losses, but also to offset the decline in investment income that had been a major contributor to the ‘bottom line’ during the period of strong investment results. The reinsurers that absorbed the September 11th losses are the same reinsurers used by the local underwriters.

Local Market

Against this background, the local and regional insurers underwriting business in this market prepared themselves for the renewal of their reinsurance treaties. It is important at this juncture to address the country’s dependency on the reinsurance industry. Insurance companies in Cayman, presently underwrite property business in excess of $5 Billion. Because our Islands are exposed to the twin catastrophic exposures of hurricanes and earthquakes, the capital required by the local insurance industries to cover the potential losses could be well in excess of $2 Billion. With gross premiums of $62.5 Million, the required level of capital is unsupportable. But the need for capital is very real and this is provided to us by the reinsurance industry at a price that fluctuates from year to year. If the industry is not prepared to pay the price the capital/protection will not be available.

The renewal conditions facing the local insurance industry were not dissimilar to conditions in 1993 following the impact of hurricane Andrew of Florida (the largest catastrophic loss prior to September 11th). For the renewals following ‘Andrew’, the local insurance approached the renewal process as a fragmented body, very much maintaining the competitive spirit of looking for an advantage over the competition. The result of this fragmented approach was a falling away of support for many of the local underwriters, resulting in an upward spiraling of rates.

Remembering what occurred in 1993. The local insurance industry was determined to protect the local industry from the price gorging that occurred then. We (the insurance industry representatives) took the view that a more cohesive approach was required, we were aware that insurers would be seeking increased terms from us as they were from all insurers worldwide. Our approach took the form of a market agreement (gentleman's agreement) that provided for minimum rates to be established on a construction, occupation and location basis. Unlike 1993 all treaties were renewed successfully and the market shortfall that occurred in 1993 was averted and property rates should not reach the high levels experienced in 1993.

It had been agreed by all underwriting companies, that following the renewal exercise we [the insurance industry] would request a meeting with Executive Council to explain the rationale behind our collective approach to the reinsurance process. I wish to take this opportunity to request such an audience at a time convenient to Members. Accompanying me will be Mr. Bryan Murphy of the Island Heritage Insurance Company".

This was received recently and has not been passed as yet, to the Honourable Ministers of Executive Council but will be done. This was given to me by Mr. Scott, yesterday.

It is important to note what he has pointed out; that the insurance requirement in Cayman is in the region of $5 billion and with gross premiums of $62.5 million, obviously, the local insurance market is very much dependent on the reinsurance market. The reinsurance market is based outside of Cayman and they take into account all of the risks that they have to contend with on a global basis. Taking into account the events of 11 September 2001, plus other losses, this is what the local insurance industry said that has pushed the local insurance rates quite significantly, although we are still, notwithstanding that push, in a more favourable position in comparison to the other countries of the region. So, I do understand what the First Elected Member from George Town has said. Against this background I am not sure what can be done to influence any change but the Deputy Financial Secretary will be asked to expedite his discussions with the industry, as quickly as possible.

The Speaker: First Elected Member from George Town.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Thank you. Could the Honourable Third Official Member give an undertaking to have an independent fact finding assessment done with those other territories which he mentioned, in order to bring the rates to a single currency and, considering all the factors in those territories, make comparisons to see if it is indeed a fact that the rates charged in the Cayman Islands puts us at an advantage or a disadvantage?

The Speaker: The Honourable Third Official Member.

Hon. George A. McCarthy: I can give that undertaking, Mr. Speaker, and I will ask the Deputy Financial Secretary to encompass this additional expectation.

The Speaker: If there are no further supplementaries, we will move on to the next question.

Question No. 27

The Speaker: Question No. 27.

The First Elected Member for George Town.

No. 27: Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts asked the Honourable Third Official Member, responsible for the Portfolio of Finance and Economics, to give an update on the proposed bond issue announced in the 2002 Budget Address.

The Speaker: The Honourable Third Official Member.

Hon. George A. McCarthy: The Government received its first presentation on the details of a bond issue, and how it could assist the Islands with its finances, in October 2001. A second presentation was received on 20 November 2001 from a local bank. That local bank has provided updates to its initial presentation, as follows: on 23 November 2001; on 3 January 2002; and on 11 February 2002.

A third presentation was given to the Government in December 2001.

Mr. Speaker, the Government received details of another financing arrangement last Friday, 1 March. The Government has asked that a presentation be made in respect of this most recent arrangement.

The reason the Government is proposing to issue a bond is simply that it will assist the Cayman Islands in reducing the annual cost of its debt servicing over the medium term. Analysis done by the Portfolio of Finance shows that over the period 2002 to 2006, a bond issue would reduce the total debt service for those years by approximately $33 million.

Mr. Speaker, it is Government's current intention to take a substantial portion, if not all, of those debt service reductions into General Reserves. The Government plans to finalise consideration of the bond issue this month.

The Speaker: Are there any supplementaries?

The First Elected Member from George Town.

Supplementaries

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Thank you. Can the Honourable Third Official Member state what is the amount being sought for the bond issue is?

The Speaker: The Honourable Third Official Member.

[Pause.]

Hon. George A. McCarthy: Mr. Speaker, as I mentioned earlier, the bond issue under consideration, as I mentioned earlier, would generate a reduction in debt service payments of $33.3 million over the period 2002 to 2006, amounting to $143.5 million. That equals the public debt and self-financing loans as at 31 December 2001. This figure is being looked at because there are certain loans within the package, at this time, for which the Government is paying a minimal rate. It would be advantageous for the Government to continue to keep these loans separately. The direct public debt loan the Government is carrying at this time amounts to $129.5 million. The self-financing element amounts to approximately $14 million. Notwithstanding these figures, a determination can be made as to what the appropriate sum would be to include under the bond issue, and that will be finalised by the end of this month. Further presentations will have to be made between now and the end of the month in order to agree as to what firm figure the Government should be driving towards.

As I mentioned, the Honourable First Elected Member from George Town is aware of the composition of the package, because it was from his administration that the process was started.

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Thank you. Can the Honourable Third Official Member say what term is being sought for the bond issue?

The Speaker: The Honourable Third Official Member.

[Pause.]

Hon. George A. McCarthy: Mr. Speaker, the bond issue will be for a period of about 10 to 12 years. The recent rate (the one that we are looking at) is in the region of 6.27 per cent.

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Thank you. Can the Member state whether that is a fixed rate or a floating rate?

The Speaker: The Honourable Third Official Member.

Hon. George A. McCarthy: Mr. Speaker, it would be fixed over the life of the bond.

The Speaker: The Third Elected Member from Bodden Town.

Mr. Anthony S. Eden: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. On the first page of the substantive answer the Honourable Member refers to another financing arrangement last Friday. Does this also involve the issuing of bonds or is this another vehicle being used?

The Speaker: The Honourable Third Official Member.

Hon. George A. McCarthy: These are various institutions that have put proposals to the Government in connection with the bond issue.

The Speaker: The Third Elected Member for Bodden Town.

Mr. Anthony S. Eden: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Historically, over the last 30 – 35 years, governments have tended to shy away from the utilisation of bond issues. Is the approach now being changed?

The Speaker: The Honourable Third Official Member.

Hon. George A. McCarthy: Mr. Speaker, the Government has rightly shied away over the past years. At this point in time, if the arrangements were not as they are going to be prepared or considered, it would be something that would also be looked at very carefully, with caution. What the Government is proposing is to put in place a sinking fund, which means that, although the interest on the bond will be serviced over the life of the bond issue, when it comes to the maturity of the bond, sufficient funds would have accumulated in that sinking fund account to offset or settle the indebtedness.

This is a very carefully planned approach that is being taken. This is the approach that has been the concern of all past governments, and of the current Government. It is one that will be adhered to, and it serves the purpose of reducing the cash outflows by way of public debt payment at this point in time, while not putting the Government at a disadvantage.

The Speaker: Are there any further supplementaries? We will move on to the next question.

Question No. 28

The Speaker: Question No. 28.

The First Elected Member for George Town.

No. 28: Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts asked the Honourable Minister responsible for Health Services, District Administration and Agriculture, to advise on the status of the ongoing research being conducted by the Health Fees and Health Insurance Advisory Committee in conjunction with the William Mercer consultants.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Health Services.

Hon. Gilbert A. McLean: Mr. Speaker, William M. Mercer is contracted to examine the Government's current health benefits system for the population it currently assumes responsibility for, and make recommendations on its restructuring. The main focus is to set up a system to control health care cost and capture relevant data for future decision-making.

The consultancy which commenced in November, 2001 is due to be completed by the end of this year. The contract is divided into three major phases:

Phase I—Discovery and Analysis of relevant data.

Phase II—Strategy Mapping/Programme Redesign;

Phase III—Implementation and Procurement of a Third Party Administrator.

Government maintains the option of terminating the agreement at the completion of either phase.

Phase I is due to be completed on 15 March 2002 with a report being presented to the Health Insurance and Health Fees Advisory Committee. This Committee operates under the chairmanship of the Permanent Secretary responsible for Health Services.

Phase II is expected to end in May 2002. During this phase the results of the findings from Phase I will be used to create a comprehensive redesign strategy for the health insurance programme for the Government of the Cayman Islands.

Phase III involves implementing the redesign programme after appropriate groups and stakeholders have received and agreed the strategy for change. The Government may decide at this point to create a special task force to lead the implementation effort. The selection of a Third Party Administrator (TPA), a body whose responsibilities would include managing the processing and settlement of claims, accumulating health-care cost data and ensuring proper usage of the system will be made at this time. As claim experience becomes credible, Government will then be in a position to make decisions on shifting the risk for the healthcare cost to an outside vendor.

The Speaker: Any supplementaries?

The First Elected Member from George Town.

Supplementaries

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Thank you. The substantive answer given is concise and very clear. I hope that the Minister will allow me to stray a bit from the substantive question. In gathering all of this information in conjunction with the William Mercer Group, has the Ministry given any consideration in trying to capture data, which would give them some type of empirical evidence relating to health care cost and subsequent health insurance costs, to the public? This is certainly a huge question mark in the minds of many people understanding that the answer relates specifically to government's position with providing health care and health care costs of the Civil Service.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Health Services.

Hon. Gilbert A. McLean: Mr. Speaker, the process at the Hospital does allow for the capture of data as the Member has asked about. A new registration system, which in effect is starting as if from anew is capturing both data in terms of number and the types of services that are being sought at the Hospital, and based on that type of information (plus information presently available within the Hospital) costings are being examined in terms of cost of procedures. Also, the new computerised system, which is being examined, will also provide better capability for keeping that data, analysing it and being able to cost it.

The Speaker: The First Elected Member from George Town.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Thank you. As the Honourable Minister will appreciate, I am sure, the questions that will arise in the minds of the public, again straying, would be the cost of providing health care by the private sector and as a result the cost of health insurance charged by the health insurance providers. Similar to the question asked about property insurance some minutes ago, will this data allow Government to be in any position to be able to make some assessment as to what may seem to be fair or have dialogue with the providers of both health care and the insurance, with regards to making sure that the rates are regularised?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Health.

Hon. Gilbert A. McLean: Mr. Speaker, part of the phase I examination of Health services by William Mercer includes talking with private sector providers including getting data as to their costs and also the collection of data within the present health systems and the analysing of it. We are also at this stage already in a position to compare some of the costs in terms of what is being charged in the private sector for a particular procedure and we have comparisons with Baptist, for example, and what our own facility charges for a particular procedure.

The Speaker: Are there any further supplementaries?
The First Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Thank you. Getting back to the substantive answer in the very last paragraph, I think, where it says that 'Phase III involves implementing the redesign programme after appropriate groups and stakeholders have received and agreed the strategy for change. The Government may decide at this point to create a special task force to lead the implementation effort. The selection of a Third Party Administrator, a body whose responsibilities would include managing the processing and settlement of claims, accumulating health care cost data and ensuring proper usage of the system will be made at this time.' Can the Minister state if there are specific options which are being examined in regards to one course of action or the other, once the third phase of the study has been completed and the report has been made?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Health Services.

[Pause]

Hon. Gilbert A. McLean: Mr. Speaker, as each phase of the consultancy goes along data is being captured along the way and the health fees advisory committee is looking at all the information which comes into it. The Third Party Administrator seems to be the way to proceed with regards to getting best value for money. That is, choosing an administrator who will actually manage costs for us. It is my understanding that when this system works well, it is the type of administration that can actually compare costs and get the best cost. For example, if the Government Hospital does not offer a favourable price for a particular procedure then a civil servant may be referred to a private sector facility that gives a better price. Particularly, for overseas referrals, the Third Party Administrator would have to be an entity that had knowledge of costing and prices in various hospitals, at least in Florida that is near to us, and they would actually shop for the best price possible for a particular patient or procedure.

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for George Town. I will allow one more supplementary.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: This is my final one, Mr. Speaker, never fear. Thank you, I could sense it.

Again, knowing that this question is straying but certain that the Honourable Minister will appreciate the reasoning behind it. There is a category of persons in this country who are deemed to be uninsurable; some of them for various illnesses and some of them after reaching a certain age. Now, at present whatever level within the society that is, certainly that is expected to rise as time goes on. My question to the Minister is: In all of these dealings with regards to looking at the cost of providing health services and also the cost of insurance for the Government body (civil service), might the Government be seeking ways and means to address this specific situation, which certainly is getting more acute as time goes on?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Health Services.

Hon. Gilbert A. McLean: Mr. Speaker, already under the present Insurance Law we have a provision for taking in certain monies under the indigent and uninsurable fund, and it is money from this fund, which would be slated to actually cover the costs for the truly indigent and other persons who cannot get health insurance. It does appear that at some point everybody in the country is going to fall into this particular category. Under this self funding scheme it is forecasted now that it will provide sufficient monies to cover these people if and when they do fall into that situation and they do not have relatives who are able to assist them one way or the other. It does appear that the self-funding scheme, at some point in time, is likely to go outside of the Civil Service realm as it presently is, simply to be able to provide health coverage for the poor and the indigent.

The Speaker: Are there any further supplementaries? I had said one more after that one. If there are no further supplementaries we will move on to the next item of business.

STATEMENTS BY MEMBERS OF THE GOVERNMENT

The Speaker: I have been advised that Minister Bush, the Honourable Minister of Tourism and Leader of Government Business wishes to make two statements.

Cayman Airways Limited

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

On the 7 January the Cayman Airways Board held a strategic planning retreat, which I as Minister for the national Airline was invited to participate in. At that meeting I presented the Board with Government's position in respect to the Airline. Among the key directives that I presented were the following:

1. There must be a meaningful and measurable turn around to ensure the continuation of the Airline.
2. Government was willing to support Cayman Airways provided the Airline was deemed a viable entity. The Board was encouraged to be candid and objective in its estimation of the Airline.
3. There would be no consideration of new equipment until the Airline could produce a sound business plan and demonstrate an ability to live within its budget. The focus should be on the equipment facilitating the Business Plan rather than the other way around, as was previously being done.
4. Efficiencies must be made at Cayman Airways. Going forward Government intended to place a ceiling on the Airline's subsidy. This will only be done from an informed position. The Board was requested to provide guidance on this matter.

Based upon these objectives management was given a mandate by the Board to produce a business plan by mid-February, which was consistent with the objectives as laid down by Government. The Board recently presented the Cayman Airways Limited 2002/2003 Business Plan to Executive Council. This was formally accepted and approved yesterday subject to management meeting their objectives as set out in the Plan. The success or failure of this Plan will depend entirely on two key components. One component is the management's delivery of the key objectives of this Plan and another is the successful negotiation with the Pilots to restructure their contract of employment.

Mr. Speaker, clearly the Government supports the business plan for Cayman Airways, as it is now in the hands of the Airline's management as well as the Pilots to ensure its success.

Over the past several years, Cayman Airways has struggled to compete for its market share as major international airlines increased service to the Cayman Islands. The decrease in air travel after 11 September 2001 has made the need for rapid improvements at Cayman Airways critical for its survival. The primary objective is to implement a series of short-term reactions for 2002 designed to reduce the imbalance between revenue and expenses. The key priorities are to off set the expected decrease in revenue while reducing the operating costs. The Business Plan and 2002 Budget assumes that although gradual improvements will occur the travel industry will not fully recover from the effects of 11 September until the end of 2003.

Revenue Enhancement: Mr. Speaker, the Business Plan and 2002 Budget indicated an expected decline in total revenue of $1.7 million or 5 per cent compared to 2001. The decline is the result of the negative impact of 11 September 2001, partially offset by the 2002 Sales and Marketing Plan. Although the revenue is expected to decline by 5 per cent compared to 2001, the revenue per flight is expected to increase by 16 per cent as a result of the reduction in flights this year.

The Company's plan to minimise the revenue (declined in 2002) is comprised of an extensive list of projects. The projects include the launch of Internet bookings; introduction of electronic ticketing; development of a US base sales team; establishment of detailed sales targets for each sales representative; implementation of a code share agreement with a major US partner; establishment of significant discounts via Internet for week flights; working closely with local tourism industry members and improved customer relations. So, there is now an existing marketing plan and this will be complemented by an improved relationship with the Department of Tourism as mandated by me.

Mr. Speaker, the Department of Tourism and Cayman Airways must work together in the marketing and promotions of our tourism industry. This is a very sensible approach and it is rather unfortunate that such a relationship did not exist before. The decline in revenue will be greatest in the first quarter of this year due to a decline in traffic combined with reduced fares, and will improve steadily as the sales and marketing programmes begin to produce results.

Cost Reduction: Mr. Speaker, although the Airline's first concern is to enhance revenue, the Company must reduce the costs of operations. The Business Plan and 2002 Budget will produce a decrease in operating expenses of $7.7 million or 16 per cent compared to 2001. The 2002 budget reflects a reduction in salaries and wages of $1.8 million or 14 per cent over 2001. Based upon the reduction in staff, 46 per cent of the expected savings for 2002 have already been implemented earlier this year. Mr. Speaker, there were fluctuations in the number of employees between January and December 2001. At the 31st December 2001, Cayman Airways employed 292 fulltime employees. A further 16 positions have been identified for elimination in early 2002. Based upon the detailed analysis being performed, the Company expects to identify additional positions for elimination in May 2002.

The 2002 Budget reflects a reduction in other staff costs of $900,000 or 26 per cent over 2001. The large improvement reflects the reduction in total staff, as well as restrictive policies and overtime travel and related discretionary expenditures.

Mr. Speaker, this year's budget indicates a reduction in fuel expense of $1.1 million or 19 per cent over 2001. The improvement is mostly due to a 14 per cent reduction in flight hours combined with a moderately lower average fuel price. The 2002 Budget produce a $1.4 million or 42 per cent reduction in other maintenance expense over 2001. The reduction is due to changes in the policies and controls within the maintenance department. The 2002 Budget produces approximately $1.1 million or 87 per cent reduction in aircraft rental expense over 2001. The 2002 Budget reflects a reduction in all other expenses of $1.5 million or 7 per cent over 2001. Most of this decrease is due to operating 18 per cent fewer flights in 2002 compared to 2001. However, the reduction also reflects the savings of numerous smaller projects, such as closure of expensive leases and restrictions on telephone access.

The new co-schedule represents a 20 per cent reduction over last year and will eliminate all overnight flights to Cayman Brac. While these reductions have been difficult, they are absolutely essential to bring the national carrier back to sound financial ground. We are exploring other partnerships with Island Air in order to better serve the Sister Islands. Cayman Brac will have jet service on Monday, Saturday and Sunday mornings and on Friday and Saturday evenings. There will be no over-nighting in Cayman Brac.

Although the 2002 Budget produces a net loss of $2.5 million, Cayman Airways will not require any cash injection directly from the shareholder beyond the annual subsidy. The 2002 Budget represents an improvement to net income of over $6 million from 2001. I believe that it is important to underscore the significance of the change occurring with the Airline. In comparison to 2001, Cayman Airways has budgeted to reduce its operating expenses by $7.7 million this year.

I wish to particularly point out that for the first time in recent history, the Airline has included in its budget approximately $2 million to pay fees to the Civil Aviation Authority and other governmental agencies. It should be noted that were it not for this budgetary provision the net loss at year-end projected would be $500,000; a significant improvement over the past several years. Now, the Airline must deliver.

Public Relations Programme: There is now a new public relations programme. The critical first step is to restore customer confidence by initiating a turn around campaign in our local market. The over-riding objective is to reassure the public that the Airline will continue to offer reliable service. In addition, the campaign will seek to dispel some myths about Cayman Airways, for example, the myth that Cayman Airways causes higher airfares for all airlines operating into the Cayman Islands. The campaign will initially focus on staff in order to build consistent support for the programme. The campaign will involve working closely with the Cayman Islands Department of Tourism; focus on the North America travel trade and to pursue co-op promotional opportunities.

Beyond 2003: A critical task in 2003 will be a thorough strategic analysis and development of a strategic plan for the Company. The current fleet must be upgraded at some time in the near future if we are going to continue as an airline. The ideal time to upgrade the fleet would be 2003 because the existing fleet is scheduled to undergo significant overhaul expenditures in 2004. Prior to making a fleet decision a proper strategic plan must be developed and measurable strides must be made in the implementation thereof. Clearly, the events in 2001 will bring profound changes to the competitive landscape on which Cayman Airways must operate. Questions about the short-term viability of industry Titans like United and British Airways, will lead to realignments and restructuring that may provide new possibilities for small to mid size carriers.

Cayman Airways must continue to build a sound foundation in order to capitalise on emerging opportunities. The process of building a coherent network through the careful introduction of contingent routes combined with the formation of marketing alliances and co-chair agreements will continue. The Company should be in a position to finance a fleet renewal programme in 2004, which will require a profitable and efficient route network supported by a disciplined costs structure. Cayman Airways will continue to evolve a corporate culture based on accountability and achievement. Communication, training and succession planning will be an integral part of the evolutionary process.

Beyond the revenue that is collected by Cayman Airways, the Airline makes a significant contribution to the economy. Now, Cayman Airways has to undergo restructuring and face keener competition, but this is the reality of the world we live in, and Cayman Airways must be prepared and able to make meaningful change to compete in what is perhaps one of the most competitive industries. Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: Honourable Minister for Tourism your second statement.

American Airlines non-stop flights from New York to Grand Cayman

Hon. W. McKeever Bush: Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

I am pleased to advise this Honourable House that American Airlines confirmed yesterday that they will commence direct non-stop flights, twice weekly, from New York's John F. Kennedy (JFK) Airport to Grand Cayman. Effective 15 June 2002 the United States largest airline will begin its second route to the destination with service on Saturdays and Sundays. Flight No. 639 will depart JFK at 9 am arriving in Grand Cayman at 11.55 am. The return flight No. 662 will depart Grand Cayman at 1 pm arriving in JFK at 5.34 pm.

This new non-stop service from New York, the most important region of our most important market, the United States, will serve our tourism industry well and it underscores my statement made in this Honourable House, recently, that tourism is in fact on the rebound. We have worked hard over the past year to improve our airline industry relationships and we are pleased that we enjoy such a productive relationship with them and, in particular, with American Airlines.

I wish to point out that six major US airlines now provide scheduled non-stop service to Grand Cayman from key US markets. I can assure this Honourable House that I will continue my efforts to attract additional airlift to the Cayman Islands from other major US markets. I give my assurance to this Honourable House and to the public that I will provide up dates along the way.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: We will now take the luncheon suspension and we will resume at 2.30 pm.

Proceedings suspended at 12.24 pm

Proceedings resumed at 3.16 pm

The Speaker: Please be seated. Proceedings are resumed.

Suspension of Standing Orders 45 and 46(1)& (2)

The Speaker: Can I have the Minister move the Motion for a suspension of Standing Order 45?

Hon. W. McKeever Bush: Mr. Speaker, I move for the suspension of Standing Order 45 in order to take the Information and Communication, Technology Authority Bill 2002.

The Speaker: The question is that Standing Order 45 be suspended. All those in favour please say Aye. Those against, No.

Ayes.

The Speaker: The Ayes have it.

Agreed: Standing Orders 45 and 46(1) and (2) suspended.

The Information and Communications Technology Authority Bill, 2002

The Speaker: The Bill has been deemed to have been read a first time and set down for Second Reading.

SECOND READINGS

The Parliamentary Pensions (Amendment) Bill, 2002

The Speaker: The Honourable Third Official Member.

Hon. George A. McCarthy: Mr. Speaker, I beg to move the Second Reading of a Bill entitled, The Parliamentary Pensions (Amendment) Bill, 2002.

The Speaker: The Bill has been duly moved. Does the Mover wish to speak thereto?

Hon. George A. McCarthy: Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

This Bill for a law to amend the Parliamentary Pensions Law makes provision for the payment of a pension to any person who held the position of Speaker of the Legislative Assembly on or after 1 January 1991, as well as to make provisions for inflation protection on an annual basis in the same manner as found in the Public Service Pensions Law.

Currently the position of Speaker of this Honourable House is entitled to a pension only if the Speaker is also an Elected Member of this Honourable House. The House has in the past, seen Speakers who are in fact, not elected and were therefore not entitled to any benefit under the existing Parliamentary Pensions Law. The proposed amendments would allow for the pension benefits to accrue to any person who has held the position of Speaker of this Honourable House since 1991. If the Speaker was an Elected Member also, then the Speaker's pension would substitute for the Member's pension, and would be calculated in the same manner as that of a Member of the Legislative Assembly, being 1 3/60 of the Member's final average pensionable earnings for every month of service.

The proposed amendment would also serve to modernise the current law by changing the reference from widow to the gender-neutral term of spouse, thus allowing benefits to be easily applied to the male spouse of the female Member. The last component of this amendment will introduce an element of inflation protection to the Law. This has been modeled after the Public Service Pension's Law, which provides this benefit to retired civil servants. In the past such increases have been discretionary but this amendment would include them in the plan as a guaranteed benefit, based on the increase in the consumer price index of the Cayman Islands over the previous year. Pensioners are in the position of not being awarded increments, and as a result, the only increase that they would be entitled to is an annual cost of living augmentation. In times of high inflation this could be very important to the pensioners' ability to maintain his or her standard of living.

In summary, the amendment will do the following:

- ◆ Provide a pension for the position of Speaker of this Honourable House from 1 January 1999 forward at the same rate as the Member's pension.

- ◆ Modernise the wording of the Law by replacing the term 'widow' with 'spouse'.
- ◆ Introduce an inflation protection to the plan on par with that being provided to the Civil Service.

Mr. Speaker, there is an amendment, circulated to Honourable Members. They will notice that the age of retirement in the amending Bill says 60 whereby in the Law itself it is 55. This Bill makes the amending Bill compatible with the law. Thank you very much.

The Speaker: Does any other Member wish to speak? Does any other Member wish to speak? Final call, does any other Member wish to speak? If no other Member wishes to speak, does the Honourable Third Official Member wish to exercise his right of reply?

Hon. George A. McCarthy: Mr. Speaker, just to say thanks to Honourable Members for their tacit support.

The Speaker: The question is that a Bill shortly entitled, The Parliamentary Pensions (Amendment) Bill 2002 be given a second reading. All those in favour please say Aye. Those against, No.

Ayes.

The Speaker: The Ayes have it.

Agreed: The Parliamentary Pensions (Amendment) Bill 2002 given a Second Reading.

The Immigration (Amendment) (Immigration Appeals Tribunal) Bill, 2002

The Speaker: The Honourable First Official Member.

Hon. James M. Ryan: Mr. Speaker, I move the Second Reading of a Bill entitled, The Immigration (Amendment) (Immigration Appeals Tribunal) Bill, 2002.

The Speaker: The Bill has been duly moved. Does the Mover wish to speak thereto?

Hon. James M. Ryan: Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

As an introduction or a little bit of background to this Bill, the Immigration Law 2001 Revision empowers the Immigration Board to make decisions in respect to granting of granting Caymanian Status, Permanent Residence and work permits. The Law also provides that persons who are aggrieved by or dissatisfied with the Board's decision may appeal to the Governor. The Governor is defined as the Governor in Council.

In the year 2000 the Immigration Board considered over 20,000 applications for grants and renewal work permits or variations for work permits and permanent residents. Of these applications some 3,910 were unsuccessful and in turn appeals were lodged in respect of 231 of these negative decisions. Of these 14 related to applications for Caymanian Status, 36 related to Permanent Residence and 181 related to work permits.

During the last quarter of 2000 a fee of $100 was introduced in respect of appeals and it was expected that this fee would have had some dampening effect on a number of appeals, and of course, to help with the recovery of the cost associated with the appeal. In 2001 the number of appeals submitted was 199.

In taking the decision to bring this Bill it was felt that it is time to relieve the Governor in Council of the role of being the appellate tribunal under the Immigration Law and instead recommend to this Honourable House that legislative provisions be made for the establishment of an appeals tribunal. The Government has been guided by two criteria; the performing of a routine appellate role as a very costly use of Executive Council's time, and perhaps, the contamination of roles when the body setting policy (Executive Council) and the body appointing (the Immigration Board) are also serving as arbiter in respect of appeals.

Mr. Speaker, this Bill serves to introduce the concept of the appellate tribunal. The Memorandum of Objects and Reasons states: "The Immigration Appeals Tribunal shall consist of a chairman and a deputy chairman, both of whom shall be experienced attorneys-at-law and six other persons appointed by the Governor in Council." It goes on to say: "if a Member of the Immigration Appeals Tribunal has a personal or pecuniary interest, direct or indirect, in any matter, which is to be determined by the Immigration Appeal Tribunal, he shall, at the meeting of the Immigration Appeal Tribunal at which such matters is to be determined, as soon as practicable after the commencement thereof, disclose the fact, and shall not take part in the consideration or discussion of such matter or vote on any question with respect thereto. Appeals to the Immigration Appeal Tribunal shall be by way of rehearing and both parties to the appeal shall be permitted to address the Immigration Appeal Tribunal. Appeals may be made to the court against the decision of the Tribunal on a point of law only."

Mr. Speaker, I have given notice of a Committee Stage Amendment and that will come a little later on in the proceedings.

Finally, I would just like to say that I am delighted to be able to present this Bill to this Honourable House today. I believe it marks a substantial advancement in an important area of our service to the public, particularly, on Immigration related issues. As you know, those issues are important and are often very emotive. This proposed Bill makes a contribution to the advancement of the process of these types of matters. I therefore commend this Bill to all Members and solicit their support. Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: Does any other Member wish to speak? The Second Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. Alden M. McLaughlin, Jr.: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I rise to offer a few comments and my support to this proposed amendment to the Immigration Law.

This establishment of an Immigration Appeal Tribunal is a concept, which I articulated and supported during the run up to the elections in 2000, I have always felt, as was recognised by the Honourable First Official Member, that it is wrong in principle for Executive Council who promotes the legislation; who promulgates the regulations and who issues the directives to the Immigration Board, which it had previously appointed, to then assume the role of interpreter of that legislation, regulations and directives and then go on to also decide individual cases. Aside from the obvious and explained increased work load for Executive Council, it creates the perception of personal or political interference in the decision making process in relation to Immigration matters, particularly, work permits, Caymanian Status and the grant of Permanent Residence. That is a perception, which has been around for a long time to the extent that this proposed amendment will alter the perception and the reality; it is to be commended and certainly warrants support.

Mr. Speaker, there is long standing precedent for what is proposed here in the form of the Planning Appeals Tribunal, which has been around for a long time and in more recent times, the Labour Appeals Tribunal, which are structured in much a similar fashion. I think there is good sense in having the Chairman and Deputy Chairman of the Tribunal, to be both experienced lawyers. Because of their profession they will be able to ensure to a large extent that errors in procedures, in particular, are not made which would result in applications for judicial review of decisions of the Tribunal, in cases where the principals of natural justice were breached or decisions were found to be unreasonable, in the sense that no reasonable tribunal could possibly have come to the decision which that particular tribunal did. I believe that having them on board as chairman and deputy chairman, they will understand the significance of these principles and procedures which will do much to enhance the credibility and the work of the Tribunal.

I should also say that I am certainly in agreement with limiting appeals from the Tribunal to the court to points of law only. Knowing that they would have had a full hearing before Immigration Board; a re-hearing before the Appellate Tribunal, so to give individuals a 'third bite at the cherry' would only serve to slow down the process to have the whole decision making dragged on interminably and the system would then lack certainty, certainly for quite a long period. I believe that it is the right thing. I am happy that it has come about; happy that Executive Council has been relieved of this very difficult and time consuming responsibility; happy that there will be, I believe, an enhancement of the feeling that the system is fair; the system is unbiased; the system has little political interference in the individual decision making, and that Executive Council's role is limited to essentially, policy.

So, Mr. Speaker, with those few comments, which I trust may have added to the perspective given by the Honourable First Official Member, I can say to you, Sir and to all Honourable Members of this House that this is a Bill which I can support.

Mr. Chairman, I know there is a committee stage amendment, which is proposed and do have some concerns about, but I am cognizant, Sir, that I should not speak to that at this stage of the debate on the Bill. Therefore, I will limit my comments to the substantive Bill before the House.

I should also say before sitting down that the Bill has the support of all five Members of the Opposition on this side of this Honourable House. I thank you, Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: Does any other Member wish to speak? The Second Elected Member for West Bay.

Mr. Rolston M. Anglin: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I rise to offer very brief comments on the Immigration (Amendment) (Immigration Appeals Tribunal) Bill 2002, which is before us.

In all things we should not only have independence but also we should have the appearance of independence. I think it has been long recognised that there needed to be a fundamental shift in the way in which matters that related to Immigration appeals were handled within the Cayman Islands. Mr. Speaker, I think the Honourable First Official Member put it well when he spoke to there being contamination of the role in which Executive Council plays currently, in regards to Immigration, in particular, the appeals process.

I do believe that the Bill does have a sound basis upon which it sits. I believe that when we look at the composition, the Board as it is being proposed, we see a sound consideration for what should lead to an effective appellate body in the Cayman Islands in regards to Immigration matters. The Bill calls for the chairman and deputy chairman to have at least seven years and five years respectively, for being called to the Bar. So, we do have now that possibility of having well experienced practitioners of law actually carry out this very important function in regards to Immigration and appeals of decisions of the Immigration Board.

The Bill certainly has my support and certainly has the support of the Back Bench Members on this side and we do commend this Bill to the entire House. I thank you, Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: Does any other Member wish to speak? Does any other Member wish to speak? Last call, does any other Member wish to speak? If no other Member wishes to speak does the Honourable First Official Member wish to exercise his right of reply?

Hon. James M. Ryan: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I would just like to thank the Second Elected Member for George Town and the Second Elected Member for West Bay for their comments and for their support of the Bill. I want to thank all other Members for their tacit support and look forward to the Bill continuing through its various stages to its completion. I thank you.

The Speaker: The question is that a Bill shortly entitled The Immigration (Amendment) (Immigration Appeals Tribunal) Bill 2002 be given a second reading. All those in favour please say Aye. Those against, No.

Ayes.

The Speaker: The Ayes have it.

Agreed: The Immigration (Amendment) (Immigration Appeals Tribunal) Bill 2002 has been given a Second Reading.

The Animals (Amendment) Bill, 2002

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Health.

Hon. Gilbert A. McLean: Mr. Speaker, I beg to move the Second Reading of a Bill for a Law to amend The Animals Health Law (1999 Revision) To Provide For The Licensing Of Dogs, The Regulations of Dangerous And Prohibited Dogs; The Establishment of An Animal Welfare Advisory Committee; The Appointment of Animal Welfare Officers; And For Incidental And Connected Purposes.

The Speaker: The Bill has been duly moved. Does the Mover wish to speak thereto?

Hon. Gilbert A. McLean: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. This Bill amends The Animal Law (1999 Revision) ("the principal Law") in order to reform the Law under control and welfare of animals on the Island. The Bill also seeks to implement stronger measures to protect members of the public from dangerous dogs. The purpose of this Bill is to strengthen the existing Animals Law with respect to the proper care, control and welfare of animals in the Cayman Islands. Important benefits expected from this Bill include the protection of the general public and other animals from disease, the protection of life and limb, the improved welfare of animals through the strengthening of provisions to address cruelty to animals and the protection of an image of a more caring and responsible society.

Licensing of Dogs: Clause 3 addresses the licensing of dogs more thoroughly than previously addressed in the current Law. It was felt that the legal owner of a dog should be at least 16 years of age so that he or she could be held responsible for the proper care and control of the dog. This does not preclude children from having pets but to ensure that the overall responsibility for that pet lay with what could be termed a 'young adult'.

The regulations accompanying the Bill will seek a two-tiered licensing system in which dogs that are spayed or neutered will attract a lesser fee than dogs that are kept in tact for breeding. This should encourage responsible ownership through voluntary sterilization, one of the long-term measures needed to minimize the number of unwanted and stray dogs. Under the current law a dog in a public place without a collar and a licensed tag should be treated as a stray. This implies that once a dog is wearing a collar and a tag it can be allowed to roam in place of public resort.

Many cases of dog attacks and nuisances by dogs are caused by such dogs because they are not under proper control by their owners. The amendment addresses this by mandating that the owner of the dog or a person who has custody of the dog must ensure that while that dog is on a high way or other public place, it is on a lead and is wearing a collar with an identification tag bearing the license number.

Clause 4 of the Law addresses control breeding in order to deal with the problem of pet over population, which is affecting the Islands adversely. The number of stray and unwanted dogs continues to present serious challenges for the animal control unit of the Department of Agriculture and the Humane Society. Clause 4 inserts a new part which allows for the licensing and monitoring of businesses involving where animals are bred or kept, such as security kennels, pet stores or boarding kennels. Government wishes to ensure that such activity is subject to proper controls that these operations are carried out in a manner appropriate for the wellbeing of the animals that presents the least nuisance to the general public and protects the health and safety of the general public.

A person who wishes to carry out a business must be licensed by the Chief Agricultural and Veterinary Officer (CAVO). The Chief Agricultural and Veterinary Officer shall not issue such a license unless he is satisfied: 1) That the applicant is a suitable person to hold such a license. 2) That the premises where the activity will be carried out are suitable.

The license will be annual and subject to the payment of a prescribed fee.

Clauses 5 and 6 deals with dangerous dogs; prohibited dogs. Clause 5 repeals and replaces section 37 of the principal Law. The new section 37 provides that if a dog is dangerously out of control in a public place the owner, and if different, the person for the time being who is in charge of the dog is guilty of an offence. This section provides for stiffer penalties, which amounts to being guilty of an aggravated offence, for the owner of a dog that bites or otherwise causes injury to people, either in a public place or in a private place other than where it is permitted to be.

Members of this Honourable House will recall cases or hearing of cases of dog attacks on children, and indeed, attacks by dogs where the dogs were actually set on people by delinquents with criminal intent for the dogs to cause injury. Certainly, owned dogs that were not under proper control by their owners in some instances also caused these attacks.

Clause 6 inserts section 37(a), (b), (c) and (d). Clause 37(a) provides that where a person has been convicted of an offence against section 37 or (b) where he or she is made to appear to a Summary Court that a dog has been dangerously out of control on more than one occasion or is likely to spread disease to any person or animal then the court can order either: 1) That the dog be handed over to the Department of Agriculture for the immediate destruction of dog by the Department or 2) That the person who is keeping the dog observes such requirements in relation to the future keeping of the dog as the court thinks fit to specify in the order.

The section maintains the intent of the existing law by allowing a court of summary jurisdiction to order a dangerous dog to be either kept under proper control or to be handed over the Department of Agriculture for destruction, and enhances it by providing for the disqualification from having custody of a dog for a period of time. This is important, as there are no provisions in the principal law to address repeat offenders. Mr. Speaker, history has shown that the mere imposition of fines has not been effective. The Government believes that disqualification from having custody of an animal would be an additional means of protecting the public from the unwelcome behaviour of such offenders.

Section 37(b) defines muzzles and leads. It refers to a dog being muzzled and to it being securely fitted with a muzzle sufficient to prevent it from biting any person. Reference is also made to a dog being kept on a lead securely held by a person who is not less than 16 years old.

Section 37(c) is about fowling of public places by dogs. It provides that if a dog defecates at any time, on any public place, and a person who is in charge of the dog at that time fails to remove the faeces from the public place forthwith, that person shall be guilty of an offence unless he has reasonable excuse for failing to do so. Mr. Speaker, this is not an uncommon section of law in dealing with animals for this is in place in various jurisdictions; one I know of is New York City where if you see people walking their dogs they are carrying their apparatus with them to scoop as they go. I also understand that this is the case in the UK. We have had complaints from persons who live on the Seven Mile Beach where this happens. People tend to take their dogs and simply let them loose. This occurs and, of course, people have to deal with the unpleasant situation of stepping in the droppings where this occurs.

A person guilty of an offence under this section shall be liable on summary conviction to a fine not exceeding $2,000. Section 37(d) provides that the dog shall be regarded as being dangerously out of control on any occasion, on which there are grounds for reasonable apprehension that it will injure any person or domestic animal, whether or not it does so, do not include references to any case in which the dog is being used for lawful purposes by a constable or a public officer while carrying out his duties. Mr. Speaker, there are instances here where persons walk our streets with a dog and the dog is allowed to dash towards someone while the owner shouts in reassurance saying 'oh he is very friendly, he is not going to bite', but that does not help the person very much who is afraid of dogs and who feels very apprehensive that they are going to be attacked. So, this section also deals with that particular aspect of things.

Section 37(e) deals with prohibited dogs and section 37(e) (2) provides that no person shall-

- (a) breed or breed from a dog to which this section applies;
- (b) sell or exchange such a dog or offer, advertise or expose such a dog for sale or exchange;
- (c) make an offer to make a gift of such a dog or advertise or expose such a dog as a gift;
- (d) allow such a dog of which he is the owner or of which he is for the time being in charge in a public place without being muzzled and kept on a lead; or
- (e) abandon such a dog for which he is the owner or, being the owner for the time being while in charge of such a dog, allow it to stray.

Mr. Speaker, there is serious concern expressed in this country by many people about the different breeds of dogs, which by their nature are aggressive. Also, Members of this Honourable House, I am sure have heard of, or are aware of sections of this Island where dogs are kept by people who are alleged to be drug dealers. These dogs are kept for the sole purpose because of the fact that they are so very aggressive, they will warn of the approach of someone coming. Plus, even if those persons are police officers, the fierceness in these dogs, particularly if they are trained to attack, indeed endangers law enforcement.

The section I referred to a while ago also provides for the setting of a date by the Governor in Council, after which, the possession of dogs of this breed are illegal unless the dogs are registered in accordance with regulations as set down by the Governor in Council. The draft regulations provide among other things that for the purpose of section 37(e) of the Law, the following types of dogs are prohibited dogs:

- a) Malanoid
- b) Mastiff
- c) Dogo Argentino
- d) Chinese Sharpi

- e) Pit Bull Teria
- f) Rottweiler
- g) Japanese Tosa
- h) Phila Brazilerio
- i) Japanese Akita
- j) Any dog which is a cross breed of any of the types of dogs specified in sub paragraph (A) to (I).

Clause 7 deals with the sale of unclaimed impounded animal. This section addresses the administrative problems encountered in disposing of unclaimed impounded animals. Under the existing Animals Law, particularly livestock, it is often kept in the pound for extended periods. Since after, the impound period of seven days is passed, they must await the next publication of the Gazette for an auction notice to be published. In practice this usually means that the animal must be kept for at least three to four weeks before being offered for auction. Of course, during this time the animal has to be fed and cared and it is an expense on the public's purse.

During this time the animal must be kept in a way that would maintain its health so that there would not be a case against the Government, et cetera for its handling. It is not uncommon for animals when impounded to incur a larger expense than can be recouped at an auction. The amendment will reduce the mandatory time for keeping impounded animals to four days and will allow for notice of auction to be published in a local daily newspaper.

Clause 8 and 16 is about Animal Welfare. This section of the amendment allows for the establishment of the Animal Welfare Advisory Committee, made up of persons knowledgeable in the field of animal care and welfare. The committee will play a key role in matters relating to the care of animals and will strongly identify and deal with the issue of animal cruelty.

Mr. Speaker, far too many animals in the Cayman Islands are being neglected and left unattended for inordinate periods of time resulting in suffering to the animals. The Animal Welfare Advisory Committee will assume a role that will protect animals from such treatment and assist with bringing serious offenders to justice, while constantly providing opportunities for the education of the public in animal care and welfare.

Clause 9 repeals and replaces section 58 of the principal law and presents a more appropriate and modern definition of cruelty to animals, bringing it in line with today's attitudes towards animals. Significantly, it recognises that cruelty can be perpetuated, both by the commission of an act and equally by the omission of a basic need.

Clause 10 amends section 65, which provides the penalties for certain offences. It provides that the owner of any animal who has been found guilty of cruelty to the animal may be deprived of the ownership of the animal, and may be disqualified from having custody of any animal for such period as a court determines by order.

Clause 11 repeals and replaces section 72. It provides for the appointment of animal welfare officers who will replace game wardens by the Governor. This is an essential aspect of the amendment.

Clause 12 repeals and replaces section 73 and sets out the powers and duties of the animal control officer. This gazetted officer will have the responsibility of:

- (a) investigating, collecting evidence and reporting on cases of cruelty to animals;
- (b) educating the public of proper care and welfare of animals and of animal control issues;
- (c) capturing and detaining of any stray or vicious animals.
- (d) protecting some game animals, ensuring the preservation of protected animals and supervising the closed seasons;
- (e) when he finds a person is in contravention of this Law, notifying such person in writing of the possibility of prosecution;
- (f) testifying in court in any proceedings under this Law.

The enforcement powers conferred upon this officer will go a long way towards improving and changing the behaviours and attitudes of persons towards animals in the Cayman Islands.

Clause 13 repeals paragraph (j) and (l) of section 74 of the principal Law while Clause 14 repeals the power of search given to a game warden whose duties will be assumed by the animal welfare officer.

Clause 16 amends section 81, subsection (2) by increasing the general penalty under the Law from $250 to $500. Mr. Speaker, I must say that I found this Law well on its way to completion, which had been handled by the former Minister for Agriculture, and except for the inclusions of a few amendments, the Law was in existence to be brought to the Legislative Assembly, and I now have the duty of so doing. Mr. Speaker, I believe this proposed Law and the amendments will make a difference to the animals Law to cover areas that heretofore have not been addressed. In particular, it will address what is a growing concern in the country with regards to dogs, straying dogs, vicious dogs and those that create damage. Therefore, Mr. Speaker, I recommend this Bill to all Honourable Members of the House. Thank you.

The Speaker: Does any other Member wish to speak? The First Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

I certainly am happy to see this Bill before us today, and perhaps the most important aspect of the Bill in my view is the fact that it seeks to implement stronger measures to protect members of the public from dangerous dogs. That is not to discount the facts that it also has full intentions of addressing the control and welfare of animals in the Islands. I think the Minister has outlined well the various amendments being sought in the Bill and they have been explained. So, the fact is, I perhaps, do not need to go over and repeat but as it has come before the House, there are a few areas I would hope that the Minister would pay some attention to, as I speak. I do not really mean that I hope he will, thinking that he will not. I just am hopeful that we are able to do something about it before the vote is taken. Many times you can go over these things and something escapes you, and perhaps it is very possible that during the drafting stages what is intended is not how it is ended, so to speak.

Mr. Speaker, first of all let me draw attention to Members and perhaps legal opinion will have to be sought here, I am not sure, or maybe there is clarity and I cannot see it. Throughout the Bill we speak to licences and tags. There is a specific section in the Bill, which speaks to regulations. Page 10 of the Bill says: “The Governor may make regulations prescribing the forms of licence required under this Part, the fees for such licences and a form of identification tag to be issued to persons who have taken out a dog licence”.

I noticed the Minister, when introducing the Bill spoke to the fact that there would be a two-tiered system of licensing. Those animals that can still breed would cost more to license than those who have been incapacitated, so to speak. If we look in the Miscellaneous Provisions, Fees and Duties Temporary Law 1997, section 21 of that Law states that the licensing fee for dogs is abolished. Now, I was not made aware of this until not so long ago by my erstwhile colleague, the lady Member from North Side who is always taking the time out to make sure that the Ts are crossed and the Is are dotted. I am not sure there is a piece of legislation in place and I understand law to be primary legislation and regulations to be secondary. I do not know whether fees can simply be introduced without that being addressed. I cannot pass an opinion because I do know, but there seems to be a question mark in my mind. The fact is, we have a law in place, which says that licensing fees for a dog are abolished. So, someone needs to look at that.

While I am looking at that I also, just for information sake would like to know in the drafting, under section 28, page 10 of the Bill it speaks to “. . . the Governor may make regulations. . .”. Under section 29(a) on page 11, it also says: “. . . the Governor may make regulations. . .” but then we go over to page 15 and we look at 37(e) subsection 5 it says: “. . . the Governor in Council. . .” and I do not know whether that is intended to make a differentiation or whether it is simply saying the Governor (meaning the Governor in Council) and another time saying the Governor in Council. I am not so sure—I just wonder about that.

Now, Mr. Speaker, I also want to raise attention to part 3 of the Bill, which speaks to the fact that part 5 of the principal Law is repealed and the following is substituted; therefore, if we go into the original Law under part 5 which is the licensing of animals, section 24 says in the original Law, “Every person who keeps a dog of whatever description above the age of six months shall take out an animal licence in respect thereof which shall remain in force from the time it is taken out until the last day of the month of January following”. When we repeal that section and it is being replaced by the following section 24 licensing of dogs, the new section reads, “Subject to this section, a person shall not keep a dog unless-

- a) that person is sixteen years of age or older; [which is as the Minister described, the reasoning behind that. However, it says Subject to this section a person shall not keep a dog unless]
- b) he holds a dog licence for the dog”.

So, the question mark in my mind—in the original Law it speaks to the fact that within the first 6 months of the life of the animal a license has to be acquired. As it reads now in what is proposed in the Bill it says you cannot keep the dog unless you have a licence. It has no timeframe; it does not speak to the fact that when a dog is just born it is a puppy and it takes a while for the weaning process and know which one is which to be able to say ‘well that is spots or that is . . . whatever’.

So, I just wondered if it is not more in line if some specific time period is given because the converse to that is, while they say a person shall not keep a dog unless he holds a dog licence, one could get into many arguments deciding on what is ‘keeping the dog’. One could be facetious and if a query is made, one could say: ‘well I have had him for a year but I am just keeping him for somebody’. I am not saying that is the norm but I am just saying that there had to be a reason in the original Law for that timeframe to be there.

So, I do not see any reason why—although they say that you must have this licence, thinking of the reality of certain circumstances, if you are importing a dog or you are purchasing a dog it is a different matter and the dog is past the stage where . . . There are people who will have their own dogs; who will breed, but what do you tell them when they have to have a licence. That is where the question is in my mind. (Pause)

It has just been brought to my attention, Mr. Speaker, that under the Memorandum of Objects and Reasons it says that “clause 3 of the Bill repeals and replaces part 5” which is what I have just been addressing “of the principal Law and deals with the licensing of dogs. Only persons over 16 years of age may keep a dog and all dogs over the age of 4 months must be licensed”. So, if we compare what the Memorandum of Objects and Reasons states perhaps it just means that it has to be added in to the proposed Law. I did not notice that before. I was only querying the fact that one spoke to a time period and the other one did not. Perhaps that might be easy to fix.

Under section 25(1) it says, “The C.A.V.O. shall, at such place as he shall authorise, issue dog licences and identification tags” . . . and I do believe the Minister spoke to these regulations which will deal with fees. I was trying to listen to all that the Minister was saying but I cannot remember whether the Minister physically addressed these identification tags. I do not know whether the prescribed fee includes the cost of the tag or whether we have two separate charges. So, perhaps we might simply get that addressed. I just wanted to know that.

Mr. Speaker, under part 4 of the Bill it says, “The principal law is amended by inserting the following new part after part 5. That new part being part 5(a) Licensed Operations”. 28(a) sub section (i) reads, “A person shall not,

- (a) keep animals belonging to another person for which a charge is made;
- (b) breed animals;
- (c) sell an animal or act as broker in relation to the sale or transfer of animals; or
- (d) train or keep animals for guard duties other than the guarding of his own premises; unless he holds an operating license”.

Mr. Speaker, the key here is the very last part of the sentence where it says, “Unless he holds an operating license”. Now, let us take one step back to the new part 5. It says, “The principal law is amended by inserting the following new part after part 5”. Part 5, which I just spoke to, relates to the licensing of dogs and throughout the whole section we speak to dogs. Even in the old part 5 that is being replaced they speak to dog or dogs, but when we go to 5(a) we suddenly speak about animals. We do not say ‘dogs’ we say ‘animals’, which means we have to look at the very beginning of the Bill where we see the definitions. In the new Bill, section 2(a) where it says, “The Animal Law (1999 Revision) in this law referred to as the principal law is amended in section 2, “(a) by repealing the definition of ‘animal’ and substituting the following:- ‘Animal’ includes live mammals, reptiles (other than marine turtles) amphibians, birds, fish, invertebrates and insects””.

So, Mr. Speaker, if we take from the definition the meaning of the word ‘animal’ and we apply it to where it is used in this section 5(a), what we will see is that “a person shall not keep any animal belonging to another person; shall not breed any animal unless he holds an operating license . . .” I do not believe that was the intent of the legislation; that is not how I know it to be. I think, this was specifically applicable to certain types of dogs.

The Speaker: Honourable Members, we have reached the hour of interruption. I was not sure if you were going to wind up any time soon. Could I ask for a motion for the adjournment please?

ADJOURNMENT

Hon. W. McKeever Bush: Mr. Speaker, I move the adjournment of this Honourable House until Thursday 7 March 2002 at 10.00 am.

The Speaker: The question is that this House do now adjourn until Thursday, 7 March at 10 am. All those in favour please say Aye. Those against, No.

Ayes.

The Speaker: The Ayes have it.

At 4.30 pm the House stood adjourned until Thursday, 7 March 2002, at 10.00 am.

OFFICIAL HANSARD REPORT
THURSDAY
7 MARCH 2002
10.31 AM
Tenth Sitting

The Speaker: I will invite the Honourable Minister responsible for Community Services, Youth and Women's Affairs to grace us with Prayers.

PRAYERS

Dr. the Hon. Frank S. McField: Let us pray.

Almighty God, from whom all wisdom and power are derived: We beseech Thee so to direct and prosper the deliberations of the Legislative Assembly now assembled, that all things may be ordered upon the best and surest foundations for the glory of Thy Name and for the safety, honour and welfare of the people of these Islands.

Bless our Sovereign Lady, Queen Elizabeth II; the Queen Mother; Philip, Duke of Edinburgh; Charles, Prince of Wales; and all the Royal family. Give grace to all who exercise authority in our Commonwealth, that peace and happiness, truth and justice, religion and piety may be established among us. Especially we pray for the Governor of our Islands, the Speaker of the Legislative Assembly, Official Members and Ministers of Executive Council and Members of the Legislative Assembly, that we may be enabled faithfully to perform the responsible duties of our high office. All this we ask for Thy great Name's sake.

Let us say the Lord's Prayer together: Our Father, who art in Heaven, Hallowed be Thy Name. Thy Kingdom come, Thy will be done on earth as it is in Heaven. Give us this day our daily bread, and forgive us our trespasses, as we forgive those who trespass against us. Lead us not into temptation, but deliver us from evil. For Thine is the Kingdom, the power and the glory, forever and ever. Amen.

The Lord bless us and keep us. The Lord make His face shine upon us and be gracious unto us. The Lord lift up the light of His countenance upon us and give us peace, now and always. Amen.

The Speaker: Please be seated.

Proceedings resumed at 10.34 am

READING BY THE HONOURABLE
SPEAKER OF MESSAGES
AND ANNOUNCEMENTS

Apologies

The Speaker: I have received apologies for the late attendance for the Honourable Third Official Member and the Second Elected Member for the district of West Bay.

PRESENTATION OF PAPERS
AND OF REPORTS

The Development and Planning (Amendment)
(Height of Buildings) Regulations 2002 (Revised)

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for Planning.

Hon. Linford A. Pierson: Thank you Madam Speaker.

I wish to lay on the Table of this Honourable House The Development and Planning (Amendment) (Height of Buildings) Regulations 2002 (Revised) which replaces similar regulations laid on the Table of the House on Thursday, 28 February 2002.

The Speaker: So ordered. Would you wish to speak thereto?

Hon. Linford A. Pierson: Madam Speaker, I will speak to these Regulations when I move the Government Motion 1/02.

The Petroleum Fuel Storage and Handling on the Cayman Islands Government Agency Review -
July 2002

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for Planning.

Hon. Linford A. Pierson: Madam Speaker, I wish to lay on the Table of this Honourable House The Petroleum Fuel Storage and Handling on the Cayman Islands Government Agency Review - July 2002.

The Speaker: So ordered. Would the Honourable Minister wish to speak thereto?

Hon. Linford A. Pierson: Thank you, Madam Speaker.

In 1994 the Cayman Islands Government conducted an insurance audit which identified a number of areas of possible contingent liability. The propane operations and the petroleum refuelling terminals were highlighted as an issue due to their proximity to residential areas and the main school district. As a result of and arising from this audit, the Portfolio of Finance undertook to commission a review of the Islands' petroleum storage and handling operations and the related administrative and regulatory regimes. Partial funding for this project was provided by the Commonwealth Secretariat, and the successful bidder was Four Elements, now ERM Business Risk Solutions, a team based out of their Columbus, Ohio, USA office.

The then Ministry of Agriculture, Communications, Environment and Natural Resources was assigned to provide local project management for the exercise. The Ministry executed the contract with the consultants and provided the necessary direction, liaisons, briefings and our arrangement between the industry, the various Government agencies and the ERM project team. The qualitative review got under way in August 1999.

The project team visited the Cayman Islands on three separate occasions during the course of the project and met with officials of the Ministry. They also met with a wide cross-section of key Government agencies, such as Fire, Environmental Health, Planning, Civil Aviation, Port Authority, Public Works and the Water Authority. Inspections and meetings were held with the main bulk fuel installations and their management teams which included Esso, Texaco, Caribbean Utilities, Home Gas, Cayman Brac Power and Light and Pure Air.

Inspections included visits to all three Islands. Two draft reports were produced and submitted for comment, namely the Technical Appraisal and Government Agency Review. The relevant sections of the draft reports were submitted to the various agencies and industry partners for their review and comment. The Ministry provided all incoming feedback to the consultants.

Government also agreed to set up a broad-based, multi-disciplinary Government committee, The Petroleum Storage and Handling Committee (PSHC), to review and consider the consultants reports, chaired by the Ministry. Further meetings and briefings were held with industry individual government agencies, as well as with the PSHC. The consultants discussed the feedback with the industry as well as the Government and amended the draft reports as they saw necessary.

Madam Speaker, I should like to point out that the consultants did not necessarily agree with all the comments, and any points of contention were aired at the follow-up meetings. The consultants, however, ultimately made the decisions on what went into the final reports, as would be expected.

The basic findings of the study were that while private-sector entities all showed a positive attitude and commitment to improving standards, the consultants discovered a wide range in the level of operation and performance from exceptional to unsatisfactory. The statutory authority for enforcement of broad standards associated with safety and environmental management systems, does not exist within the current legislative framework. No single agency, or combination of agencies, currently has the skills and expertise to enforce such a mandate.

In May 2001 the Executive Council agreed with the advice of the Petroleum Handling and Storage Committee and accepted the reports from ERM Business Risks Solutions and that the following actions be taken:

1. Recruitment of a Chief Petroleum Inspector to allow for an overall co-ordination of government oversight role in the inspection of facilities and installations. To improve levels of health and safety at the various bulk fuel operations, both private and public.

2. Amend the Petroleum Handling and Storage Law. This is expected to establish a general duty for operators to handle hazardous materials in a safe and environmentally responsible manner and provide for a permitting board to regulate operations through the issuance of annual operating permits. The fees payable for the permits will be structured to cover expenses relating to the office of the Chief Petroleum Inspector and its related expenses.

3. Conduct a quantitative risk assessment QRA on the liquefied petroleum gas LPG plant and the petroleum marine offloading operations and terminal. This action is expected to help address the land use and planning issues regarding the location of hazardous industrious sites and provide policy and decision makers with crucial and detailed information on the risks associated with these installations.

As an update, Madam Speaker, I can advise this Honourable House that -

1. The post of Chief Petroleum Inspector has been established. A job evaluation has been completed and a job description prepared and agreed. Interviews of short listed candidates were ready to be placed last year; however, budget restraint measures did not allow recruitment to take place. Approximately 4 months of funding has been provided in this year's budget.

2. Drafting instructions have been submitted to the Legislative Drafting Department and it is hoped that the amendments can be brought to the Legislative Assembly in the near future.

3. The quantitative risk assessment is expected to be completed this year and funds have been provided.

Madam Speaker, this matter is a high priority project for my Ministry and for Government, as a whole, as it is clearly one of national interest. Ultimately, Government must decide whether or not these installations must be moved to an alternative site, and if so, exactly where. There are many factors to consider such as associated costs, timing, transportation, offloading and piping, zoning and land use requirements and the numerous other logistics issues which such a major and complicated relocation exercise would bring.

We cannot, however, compromise our number-one concern which is safety, and if it is determined that these installations can remain in their present locations, all facilities must be brought up to the highest and most stringent standards for health and human safety and the protection of our environment.

It is my intention to follow this matter through and to give it the very top priority within my Ministry. I thank you.

The Speaker: Thank you, Honourable Minister.

QUESTIONS TO HONOURABLE MINISTERS AND OFFICIAL MEMBERS

The Speaker: The Second Elected Member for the district of Cayman Brac and Little Cayman.

Question No. 25

Deferred Wednesday, 6 March 2002

No.25: Mr. Lyndon L. Martin asked the Honourable Minister responsible for the Ministry of Community Services, Youth and Women's Affairs; (a) What were the original criteria used to determine eligibility for the seamen's ex-gratia grant; (b) Why and how were recipients of the grant determined to no longer qualify for the grant in October of 2001; and (c) What are the new criteria for the seamen's exgratia payment?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for Community Services.

Dr. the Hon. Frank S. McField: The original criteria used to determine eligibility for the seamen ex-gratia grant, approved on the 5th September 2000 were: -

- The applicant (Seaman) must be Caymanian.
- ◆ The applicant (Seaman) must be retired from Sea.
 - ◆ The applicant (or surviving spouse) must be 60 years of age or older. If the seaman died at sea, the surviving spouse need not be age sixty (60) or over.
 - ◆ The applicant or surviving spouse MUST not be receiving the ex-servicemen's benefit.

(a) As Members are aware, when the original criteria were set up in September 2000, it was not known exactly how many seamen or their surviving spouses would qualify for the grant.

By the end of 2000, the Ministry responsible for disbursing this benefit had received over 900 applications. The Member will also recall that the Former Minister informed the Legislative Assembly, in an answer to a Parliamentary Question in March 2001, that the criteria were revised in March 2001 using advice given by the Auditor General's Office and the Ministry's staff. Between March 2001 and September 2001, all applications were reviewed using these criteria. Early in October 2001, seamen or their surviving spouses were informed, as in the case when they were informed in September 2000, that due to the local economic downturn, Government would be re-assessing their benefits based on need. The ex-gratia categories of seamen were taken off in October and November 2001:

- ◆ Seamen and ex-servicemen and/or their surviving spouses who are living overseas.
- ◆ Seamen and/or their surviving spouses who are gainfully employed, or those who own a business; and
- ◆ Seamen and/or their surviving spouses, who are receiving a benefit, pension gratuity or other form of subsidy or payment.

The Member is also aware that we have recently met with Members of the Legislative Assembly and have agreed to review all recipients of the seamen ex-gratia benefits using the new criteria. They will be used to assess new applicants as well. Additionally, it was noted that there may be some recipients who had been or would be terminated using the criteria who were not able to meet their household expenses. Therefore, Government agreed that we should be assisting these individuals and that all recipients who are receiving less than CI$1,500 (including any Government assistance) as household income per month would continue to receive the benefit. Therefore, the benefit could be granted at invariable amounts, with a maximum of $400 monthly and a total income of $1,500.

(c) The new criteria for the Seamen Ex-gratia benefits therefore are:

- ◆ The applicant (Seaman) must be Caymanian.
- ◆ The applicant (Seaman) must be retired from Sea.
- ◆ The applicant (Seamen) must have gone to sea for a period of not less than three years. If the applicant is not a born Caymanian he should have had Caymanian Status for at least three years of his/her seagoing career.
- ◆ The applicant (or surviving spouse) must be 60 years of age or older. The only exceptions are:
 - a. The applicant (Seaman) is unable to work due to medical reasons. This must be proven by a medical certificate from a recognised medical practitioner as registered by the Cayman Islands Health Practitioner's Board.
 - b. The applicant (Seaman) died at sea while on duty and the surviving spouse is unable to meet the needs of her and any surviving dependants.
 - c. Any benefit that can contribute to his/her income has been listed and is deemed to be insufficient to meet the needs in (b) above. Both (b) and (c) above shall be determined by a standard means test.
- ◆ He/she must not be receiving any income, benefit, gratuity or other form of subsidy or payment that totals more than CI$1,500 per month, inclusive of this grant.
- ◆ The applicant or surviving spouse must not own or operate a business.

The Speaker: Are there any supplementaries? The Second Elected Member for the district of Cayman Brac and Little Cayman.

Supplementaries

Mr. Lyndon L. Martin: Thank you, Madam Speaker. In the answer provided to (b) the Minister stated and I read, “Early in October of 2001, seamen or their surviving spouses were informed, as in the case when they were informed in September of 2000, that due to the economic downturn, the Government would be reassessing their benefits based on need”. My question is: In 2000 they were informed via written correspondence from the Ministry to the individual recipients that they would be receiving a grant. Can the Minister confirm that such communication was also given in October of 2001, to indicate that the Government would no longer be continuing a grant to these individuals?

The Speaker: Honourable Minister responsible for Community Services.

Dr. the Hon. Frank S. McField: My understanding is that persons had been informed in 2000 that they would receive grant payments. Once they were removed from the list of recipients they were not informed, and the Ministry is still in the process of getting this information to those persons who were removed as recipients of this benefit, in writing.

The Speaker: The Member for the district of North Side.

Ms. Edna M. Moyle: Madam Speaker, before I ask my question, if you will allow me, I would ask the Honourable Minister if he could check with the Permanent Secretary and the Senior Assistant Secretary to see if when I was Minister I did not give instructions for the seamen to be informed in writing. My question to the Honourable Minister, he is stating new criteria . . .

The Speaker: Honourable Member, do you wish for him to respond to that before moving on to a second question?

Honourable Minister responsible for Community Services.

Dr. the Hon. Frank S. McField: Madam Speaker, the former Minister, the Lady Member for North Side did, in fact, give instructions that persons should be informed. However, I have no evidence that they were and I was only able to report to the House the fact that the recipients, once they were removed from the list were not informed.

The Speaker: Member for North Side, please continue.

Ms. Edna M. Moyle: Thank you, Madam Speaker. I thank the Honourable Minister for that clarification.

My question to the Honourable Minister is with regards to the new criteria. If you would allow me, I would read from the criteria that was left there, “Eligibility criteria for seamen ex-gratia benefits.” It says the only exceptions to the above where you must be - “Caymanian: The seaman would have to have been Caymanian or to have had Caymanian Status at the time of qualifying service”.

“Qualifying service: Having been to sea for a period of not less than three years...”

“Seamen: A professional seafarer...”
“Surviving spouse of seaman”.

“Died at sea: To die at sea during active duty on a ship/ boat”. That was to clarify, when I was requested to consider someone who drowned out fishing to have died on active duty.

“The only exceptions to the above are:

- a) The applicant (Seaman) is disabled and unable to work. This must be proven by a medical certificate...
- b) The applicant (Seaman) died at sea while on duty.
- c) The surviving spouse is unable to meet the needs of her and any surviving dependants.
- d) Any benefit that contributes to his/her income has been listed and is deemed to be insufficient to meet the needs in (c) above. Both (c) and (d) above shall be determined by a standard means test.

The Applicant (Seaman) or surviving spouse must not be receiving any of the following:

- a) Ex-gratia Payment or pension from the Cayman Islands Government.”

Even though I found persons using the first name in one case to get one benefit and the second name to get the other were receiving both.

“Ex-servicemen benefit from the Cayman Islands Government.

- b) Seaman or Veterans benefit from any other country.

c) Social security...” And if you wish, instead of me going through this list, I will lay it on the Table of this Honourable House so that the Honourable Minister, if he cares to look at it, can. I would ask that he would clarify that some of these new criteria were at the Ministry when this new criteria was taken on.

The Speaker: So ordered. Honourable Minister responsible for Community Services.

Member for North Side, you can proceed once the Serjeant comes in to lay it on the Table.

Dr. the Hon. Frank S. McField: Madam Speaker, I would just like to confirm that Government is a continuous process and that part of the United Democratic Party policy is not to disrupt positive policies that were in place. Obviously, the former Minister began to realign the criteria with what the United Democratic Party feels is realistic in terms of basing needs in relationship to resources. Therefore, we have only adjusted the criteria that has been there in order to give the possibility for support for persons who have a household income of less than $1500 per month.

We feel that this was a significant change in that we were not going to just simply say, if you are receiving $800 from Government in benefits that you could not qualify; that if you were working you could not qualify. Those were the criteria that the past Minister had in place and that denied a significant number of persons who need it. We were in the process of reassessing these persons to make sure that their need (which means that they are making less than $1500 per month) is taken into account.

The Speaker: The Member for the district of North Side.

Ms. Edna M. Moyle: Thank you, Madam Speaker.

I thank the Honourable Minister for his very clear reply. However, I wonder if the Honourable Minister could say whether the reassessments that were previously done were based on the Social Services Department saying that once a person had $800 (receiving $800 per month) that they did their assessment based on an $800-a-month income.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for Social Services.

Dr. the Hon. Frank S. McField: Madam Speaker, I am not in the position to confirm the question because I have never been instructed by the Social Services Department, in my four months, that these should be the standards that we use.

I believe that the Ministry in setting policy decides whether or not it is $800 or $1500. The United Democratic Party decided that $1500 per month would be a reasonable amount of money for persons to exist. If they were making a total of household income of less than that, the Government subsidy should go to them. If they were making $1300 they could apply and still get $200. Those types of considerations we made, not the Social Services Department.

The Speaker: Second Elected Member for the district of Cayman Brac and Little Cayman.

Mr. Lyndon L. Martin: Thank you, Madam Speaker.

Could the Minister provide the House with how many persons are now receiving the seamen's benefit?

The Speaker: Honourable Minister responsible for Social Service.

Dr. the Hon. Frank S. McField: Madam Speaker, presently there are 453 recipients of the seamen ex-gratia benefits.

The Speaker: Second Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman.

Mr. Lyndon L. Martin: Thank you, Madam Speaker.

Could the Honourable Minister provide the House with the total cost to the Cayman Islands' Government for the provision of the seamen ex-gratia benefit, for the year 2002.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for Community Services.

Dr. the Hon. Frank S. McField: Madam Speaker, the total cost for 2002 is to be $2,174, 400, and this would be for the 453 seamen budgeted for this year.

The Speaker: The Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman, is there a follow up?

Mr. Lyndon L. Martin: Yes, Madam Speaker.

The Speaker: Please continue.

Mr. Lyndon L. Martin: Could the Honourable Minister indicate if the figure provided in the last question would alter as a result of the new criteria and if there is any estimate to that effect?

The Speaker: Honourable Minister responsible for Community Services.

Dr. the Hon. Frank S. McField: Madam Speaker, we are not able to give an answer with regards to how the amounts of money will be impacted by the new criteria. However, we know that we had a total of 188 seamen or their surviving spouses taken off from 2001 to date, and I will give a breakdown.

Two persons were not Caymanian at the time of sailing. Thirteen were Caymanians, living overseas. Seventeen government pensioners were receiving over $800. If they were receiving say, $900 or $1000 or $1100 they would then be eligible to receive now the $400.

So in this case we would, first of all, do a re-assessment in order to be able to ascertain exactly—we have announced, that persons should now reapply (those 188 people who were taken off) and once they begin the process, (many have already started to re-apply) we will do the necessary assessment. At that particular time we will come back to the House, perhaps the supplementary funds to deal with this particular requirement.

The Speaker: The Elected Member for the district of East End.

Mr. V. Arden McLean: Thank you, Madam Speaker.

The Minister in his substantive answer said that Government agreed that we should be assisting these individuals. All recipients who are receiving less than $1500, including government assistance as household income per month, would continue to receive the benefit. My question is, what criteria was used to determine that $1500 is the minimum income that one can live on in this country?

The Speaker: Honourable Minister responsible for Community Service.

Dr. the Hon. Frank S. McField: Madam Speaker, this is not an objective scientific evaluation. This was a response to what our common sense told us. Persons in our community need to exist at a particular standard of living and if the Member for East End queries that then he might tell me what amount he might think would be the appropriate amount.

Suspension of Standing Order 23 (7) and (8)

The Speaker: Before I call on the Member for East End, can I call on the Honourable Leader of Government Business to move for the suspension of Standing Order 23(7) and (8), to allow Question Time to continue.

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: Madam Speaker, I move for the suspension of the relevant Standing Order to take questions beyond 11 am.

The Speaker: The question is that Standing Order 23(7) and (8) be suspended to allow question time beyond the hour of 11 am.

All those in favour, please say Aye. Those against, No.

Ayes.

The Speaker: The Ayes have it.

Agreed: Standing Order 23(7) and (8) suspended.

The Speaker: The Member for East End.

Mr. V. Arden McLean: Thank you, Madam Speaker. In reply to the Minister's question to me, I do not know what that is. May I just ask the Minister if it is the Government's position that residents of the Cayman Islands should not be making below $1500 per month?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for Community Services. I will allow one more supplementary afterwards.

Dr. the Hon. Frank S. McField: Madam Speaker, I am sure that the Committee that is looking into the minimum wage will at one point be able to advise this Honourable House as to what should be the minimum amount that a working person should be able to earn for their subsistence.

The United Democratic Party felt that if the original intention of Government was to grant ex-seamen and their surviving spouses' assistance not based on need but based upon entitlement. If the past Minister, the Lady Member for North Side's opinion was that should not be the case but that people should be subjected to a means test based upon criteria that she brought to the Executive Council.

The United Democratic Party felt that we could do a bit better than that by allowing need to be based in a limited sense that we felt would, in certain cases, create hardship for persons. We raised the amount that the person could have as a household income to $1500. Remember that we started from them being able to have businesses; being able to make money—there was no limit. Somehow we feel that what we have done represents a compromise that is more acceptable and one that is still affordable.

The Speaker: The Elected Member for East End.

Mr. V. Arden McLean: Thank you, Madam Speaker.

If I could just ask the Minister, When was it that the seamen or their spouses become eligible for the ex-gratia payment who were employed or owned a business. Because he just said that we are coming from those who owned businesses to those who do not; and is it my understanding then that in both instances when the $800 was used and now that the $1500 is being used that the cost of living indices of this country was not used as a criteria?

The Speaker: Elected Member for East End, before calling on the Honourable Minister I said that I would allow one more supplementary. I believe you have quite successfully combined two, could you indicate perhaps which of the two you wish to be answered?

Mr. V. Arden McLean: Madam Speaker, either one he chooses to answer will be fine with me.

The Speaker: Member for East End, would you please state which question you are soliciting a response thereto?

Mr. V. Arden McLean: Madam Speaker, I will withdraw it, if that is alright with you.

The Speaker: Elected Member, it is your question and it is your choice. I am giving you the discretion to ask an additional supplementary. If you wish to withdraw it that is entirely your discretion, but I am not asking you to. I am asking you to choose one of two because I did state one more supplementary. In fairness to all Members, when I say one supplementary, I stick to one.

Mr. V. Arden McLean: Madam Speaker, I will withdraw that question and someone else can take that last supplementary.

The Speaker: The Second Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman.

Mr. Lyndon L. Martin: Thank you, Madam Speaker. I thank the Member for East End for allowing me to ask my supplementary.

Could the Minister indicate if there is a requirement under the new system for the recipients to be domiciled in the Cayman Islands?

The Speaker: Honourable Minister responsible for Community Services.

Dr. the Hon. Frank S. McField: Madam Speaker, the requirement will continue to have persons domiciled in the Cayman Islands in order to receive these benefits so persons/applicants/recipients must be domiciled in the Cayman Islands. We had a total of 13 that were overseas recipients and those persons were cut under the criteria introduced by the former Minister. We have decided that would remain as was in place before we took responsibility.

STATEMENTS BY MEMBERS OF THE GOVERNMENT

Amalgamation of Cayman Brac Primary Schools and Opening of Skills Development Centre

The Speaker: I have been given notice by the Minister for Education that he wishes to make a statement this morning.

Honourable Minister.

Hon. Roy Boddén: Madam Speaker, this statement concerns the proposal to amalgamate Cayman Brac Primary schools and the opening of a Skills Development Centre.

Following consultations with principals and senior teachers at a meeting with the Cayman Brac Education Board and PTA Executive Committees of Spot Bay, Creek and West End's Primary Schools in conjunction with the Cayman Brac High School, I have decided to withdraw the proposal to amalgamate the Cayman Brac Primary Schools and to turn the Spot Bay Primary School into a Skills Development Centre.

School rolls on Cayman Brac have been declining for some years. In January 2001 and January 2002 the rolls in the three primary schools were as follows: -

Schools	2001	2002
Spot Bay	47	43
Creek	76	79
West End	50	59

In a meeting to plan for the school year I met with the Permanent Secretary and the Chief Education Officer. At this meeting I was informed that with the anticipated transfer of year 6 to the Cayman Brac High School the enrolment based on birth figures and numbers at the pre-school for the Brac Primary Schools was anticipated to be;

Schools	No. Students
West End	61
Creek	77
Spot Bay	29

Spot Bay's anticipated enrolment gave us cause to discuss whether the school would be viable. I hasten to add that Little Cayman has an education service and not a school, meaning that we are not required to provide ancillary services and we are not required by law to admit any student to the Little Cayman facility as long as the option of a school place on Cayman Brac is available. Additionally, the matter of double or combined classes has been a cause for concern among Cayman Brac teachers and parents for many years. The anticipated numbers, and the numbers of registered students in the three primary schools combined, give the following class numbers:

Year	Amount of Students
Reception	22
Year 1	26
Year 2	15
Year 3	22
Year 4	22
Year 5	20
Year 6	35
Total Enrolment	165

With the amalgamation of the three schools into a small primary school on each of two sites, it would have been possible to create single classes of no more than twenty-two students and one teacher. Most importantly, there would have been no double classes. This amalgamation would have allowed time at the two sites from peripatetic staff such as the two special education teachers, the physical education teacher, the music teacher and the school counsellor. It was considered whether it would have been most advantageous to leave the Creek and the West End schools as is. However, it appeared that changes would have to be made at these two schools to achieve this amalgamation.

The proposal to amalgamate the three schools based on the economies of scale was first raised in 1994 as a recommendation in the five-year development plan for education 1995 to 1999. This proposal was not accepted in the plan as presented to the Legislative Assembly because, at that time, the rolls at each school were more than 50 children. This is the number of students that the Ministry and Department consider viable for the type of primary schools we have. Less than this number will occasion some change to staffing and how students are taught. We believe that the best interest of the individual student must always be served and that this proposal was in the best educational interest.

I should, through this medium, wish to reassure this Honourable House and the people of the Cayman Islands, particularly, of Cayman Brac, of my commitment to serving the educational needs of all the children of these Islands, regardless of colour, creed or district of residence. Cayman Brac has lost a wonderful opportunity to be the pilot for a project in modern technical and vocational education—an opportunity which would not only gear Cayman Brac students for the transition from school to work but would also provide great scope for training, retraining and skills development.

I trust that this statement has served to outline the position of the Ministry of Education, Human Resources and Agriculture further that the logic and reason for the consideration of this issue has been sincere.

I have brought the matter into full transparency, taken input from educators, parents and the wider public, and considered all relevant matters in the proposal. I have decided not to pursue the proposal to amalgamate the primary schools on Cayman Brac and convert the Spot Bay School into a Skills Development Centre.

The Speaker: Thank you very much, Honourable Minister.

GOVERNMENT BUSINESS BILLS SECOND READINGS

The Animals (Amendment) Bill, 2002

(Continuation of the debate thereon)

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for the district of George Town continuing his debate.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Thank you, Madam Speaker.

'At close of play' yesterday I started to speak to the area in the proposed Bill which addressed the licensed operations where the principle law is to be amended by inserting part 5(a) after the new part 5. The point I was making at that time, was that in the principle law, part 5 refers to dogs and in the new replacement part 5 it still speaks to the licensing of dogs. But throughout 5(a) reference is made to animals.

I had the opportunity to have discussions with the Minister this morning, and also, I think, the Chief Agriculture and Veterinary Officer was present, so I think that matter is cleared up. Nonetheless, it is worth mentioning so it is absolutely clear to everyone that if the intent which I am pretty confident was one which was only to deal with, if not dogs alone but pets per say, how the wording is now might have been a very serious problem. I am certain that was not the intent. Part 5(a) refers to a person not being able to breed animals or sell and animals. That could limit many of our traditional habits. For instance when we speak of Christmas beef we speak of someone borrowing the bull from the Agriculture Department to breed some of their cows. The way this is worded could have caused one to have to acquire a licence to be able to do that. So I think that was the point but I am pretty confident that the point has been taken. I just had to continue it because I was in the middle of it yesterday afternoon.

I drew examples of two sections referring to the Governor and a third section to the Governor in Council. I do not know the significance of that and I just wanted to make sure that that is remembered when a look is taken at it.

In section 37(d) of the Bill refers to when a dog shall be regarded as being dangerously out of control. The exceptions referred to in that section says, “. . . that it will do so, do not include references to any case in which the dog is being used for lawful purposes by a Constable or a Public Officer while carrying out his duties”.

Again, to any case in which the dog is being used for lawful purposes by a Constable or Public Officer. I am not so sure when reference is made in the Bill to a Constable or a Public Officer, whether that would include hired security guards. Because as we are well aware in this day and age there are many premises that have contracts with various security companies and what is used is a security guard accompanied by a guard dog. For instance if an incident were to occur where a prowler was caught in the act and the dog was used to help to apprehend the prowler, would that security guard be considered a Constable or a Public Officer? I just want to find out because I am not sure whether that is included in the matter. I think we need to have a little look at that.

If we look on page 20 of the Bill and we look at section 58 subsection 1(f)(3), that is kind of in the middle of the page. It speaks to, “The owner of an animal who leaves an animal on premises shall ensure that there is a person on the premises or a person who will visit the premises to maintain that animal and that the animal -

- a) has access to drinking water;
- b) has access to accommodation which is suitable as regards drainage, size, cleanliness and ventilation;
- c) is able to move freely; and
- d) has reasonable shelter against the sun and rain”.

This is perhaps almost jovial but I think the point is necessary. If I were an animal and they did all this for me and they never made sure I had any food, someone would be in trouble. So if we have a listing of all of the various items to ensure—all I am trying to say is, I think we had better include food in it, unless one of the words used in here would be interpreted to mean food. As I said it is a small point but I think if there is a listing in the proposed Bill, perhaps we could add that.

Finally, I do not know how we are going to get across this one because when we had examined the Bill this section 37(c) that is being proposed in the Bill, on page 14 was not included. This one is brand new to me.

I heard the Ministers arguments yesterday and I do not have a problem with the basic (if I may use the word), principles that he is applying when it comes to a dog defecating. Where I have a little bit of a problem is for instance in the middle of the George Town area you have someone walking a dog and the dog chooses to stop to do what he can only do for himself, I can understand quite readily that one would not want to have to encounter that situation. When the Minister spoke to it yesterday he referred to the kind of mess that it could cause on your shoes and I understand all of that. However, if we look at it from another view point, when we speak to a public place, how are we really going to—I mean people walk their dogs all over on public roads and subdivisions and quiet areas. My only question with that from a reality checkpoint is, Are we saying that wherever anyone has a dog he should travel with the necessary tools to pick up whatever, as was termed as the droppings? So it is a little bit funny but the fact of the matter is, it is legislation we are talking about and I want to raise the issue to ensure that when we talk of this kind of legislation we are not putting people in situations.

One might easily say the authorities might use their discretion in such instances, but I have seen discretion not being used where I thought it should have been used. I would wish that a look be taken to see if what the objective is in that section cannot be achieved without the law being crafted to be such far reaching in its scope. Perhaps I do not have the answer as to how to achieve what I think the objective is, but perhaps they can call on the drafting personnel to see if anything can be done. I foresee instances where people might find themselves in (for lack of a better term) very cute circumstances, if some authority wishes to act out what a law calls for, when it would probably be, in a lot of instances, undeserving.

So, before we pass the law perhaps we could have a look at that to see if there is another way to word it that it does not allow the possibility of the kinds of things that I am talking about. Certainly it would be the most desirable situation if the animals that we speak of (pets and the dogs) could understand everything that we say and you tell them to wait until they get home. But I do not think that we are in a position to be sure of that.

I have raised several other issues which I do not believe cannot be overcome. I think that between the various personnel, the resource people who are available, it can easily be straightened out.

I am confident that the Bill will have safe passage and the Back Bench Opposition certainly supports the Bill in its concept, except for the few things that have been aired. The points that have been aired are points which we all recognised when we ran through it and we just amalgamated them together and we are airing them as had just been done.

I will close by voicing support on our behalf, but I would ask the Minister, before we go to the vote, if he could try to get those issues addressed, perhaps with Committee stage amendments with your permission. I am certain the Minister would not have brought it if it was not supported by the Government. I trust that the Government would also see the wisdom of some of the little changes that we have mentioned. And as those issues are addressed we can move on to get the Bill to where it becomes a Law. Thank you.

The Speaker: Thank you. Dose any other Member wish to speak? Last call . . . does any other Member wish to speak? If not we will take a 15-minute suspension at this time.

Proceedings suspended at 11.40 am

Proceedings resumed at 12.15 pm

The Speaker: Proceedings are resumed. I now invite the Honourable Minister responsible for Agriculture to make his concluding response.

Hon. Gilbert A. McLean: Thank you, Madam Speaker.

I have taken note of the points made by the First Elected Member for George Town in regards to the Bill to amend the Animals Law (1999 Revision). I think that these matters which he has raised, including various sections of the amending Bill, bear merit and it is my intention in Committee stage to offer amendments to certain sections of the Bill.

I also welcome the stated support by the Opposition through the Member who spoke for the Bill generally. It is my belief that these amendments are necessary to rectify certain conditions which now exist in the society which were not covered in the Law when it was first passed. These amendments attempt to address these areas of concerns and needs.

Having stated what I have, I recommend the Bill and thank Members for their support.

The Speaker: The question is that a Bill shortly entitled, A Bill to Amend the Animals Law (1999 Revision) to Provide for the Licence of Dogs, the Regulation of Dangerous and Prohibited Dogs, the Establishment of an Animal Welfare Advisory Committee and the Appointment of Animal Welfare Officers and for Incidental and Connected Purposes, be given a Second Reading.

All those in favour please say Aye. Those against, No.

Ayes.

The Speaker: The Ayes have it.

Agreed: The Animals (Amendment) Bill 2002 given a Second Reading.

The Speaker: The Honourable Deputy Leader.

Suspension of Standing Order 46(4)

Hon. Linford A. Pierson: Madam Speaker, I beg to move the suspension of Standing Order 46(4) to allow for the Second Reading on the Information and Communication Technology Authority Bill, 2002.

The Speaker: The question is that Standing Order 46(4) be duly suspended. All those in favour please say Aye. Those against, No.

Ayes.

The Speaker: The Ayes have it.

Agreed: Standing Order 46(4) suspended.

The Information and Communications Technology Authority Bill, 2002

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for Information Technology.

Hon. Linford A. Pierson: Madam Speaker, I beg to move the Second Reading on the Information and Communications Technology Authority Bill, 2002.

The Speaker: The Bill has now been duly moved. Does the mover wish to speak thereto?

Hon. Linford A. Pierson: Thank you, Madam Speaker.

The process in the development and the formulation of this landmark piece of legislation did not come to fruition without some amount of controversy, and at times, threats of blackmail.

With your permission I would like to make brief references to some of the difficulties with which I had to contend, without taking any quotes from any particular documentation that may have floated through the mail or on the Website, et cetera.

Shortly after my announcement at the Chamber of Commerce luncheon mid last year of Government's intention to liberalise the telecommunication sector, I have been attacked by articles on Caypolitics, and by at least one letter sent to me through the mail. The article can be found in Caypolitics, dated 9th October 2001, and can be made available to Members of the House through the Internet. In my opinion, and in the opinion of a legal advisor, it was potentially libellous. I was accused in that article of accepting kickbacks from competitors. Also, the article stated that Cable and Wireless had given me free telephone and high speed ADSL, among other nasty remarks from that questionable source. However, that did not deter me from getting the job done as I was elected to do.

I received a nasty letter in the mail, threatening to blackmail me and to divulge certain sensitive information that they had on a member of my family if I did not give up pursuing the liberalisation of Cable and Wireless. This too, did not deter me and will not.

I think it is safe to say that most of the Cayman Islands, if not all, regard me as a man of honour and a man of integrity. I have established this position, not through hard work or through any special effort but through my ordinary daily life. When I am called 'Honourable Minister', to me it is more than a title because I endeavour to live an honourable life of integrity.

I view myself as not an opportunistic politician but as a statesman, and I attempt in my daily life to live as such. I have demonstrated on a number of occasions during my political career that I will not sell myself short, or that I will not do things just for political gains if it is against my best conscience. I think 1992 was a classic example, when I refused to move across from my colleagues on the Executive Council, when I was told that if I had done so I may have topped the polls in the 1992 election. Yet, because of my integrity, I stayed there and went down with the ship.

Some people may say that was stupid, but to me it is keeping my integrity in tact. That is why when I give my right hand to anyone they do not have to ask me to sign a document. I am from the old school and I believe that a man's word is his bond. When I give someone my word I believe that it means a lot. My integrity means more to me than any amount of money that this House or the private sector could ever pay me.

I am convinced as other individuals are, including the consultants, that my Ministry has employed from the UK LECG that this Bill is a sound piece of legislation.

The Speaker: Honourable Minister, are you going on to a new area as opposed to your introductory remarks? If you are I should wish to make a brief comment before you enter a new topic.

Hon. Linford A. Pierson: Thank you, Madam Speaker.

The Speaker: Thank you. I am grateful.

I should wish to draw to all Honourable Members attention, in particular that of the Press, section 18 (2)(a) of the Legislative Assembly (Immunities Powers and Privileges) Law (1999 Revised) which states:

“Whoever publishes any statement, whether in writing or otherwise, which falsely or scandalously defames the Assembly or any committee, or which reflects on the character of the Speaker or the chairman of the committee in the discharge of his duty of such;

(b) publishes any writing containing a gross, wilful or scandalous misrepresentation of the proceedings of the Assembly or a committee or of the speech of any Member in the proceedings of the Assembly or a committee;

(c) publishes any writing containing any false scandalous libel on any Member touching his conduct as a Member; or is guilty of an offence and liable on conviction before the Grand Court to a fine of eight hundred dollars and to imprisonment for twelve months”.

I wish to once again draw Members' attention to that section that I have requested to be looked at for modernisation.

I would state, quite emphatically, that the Members of this House are all considered Honourable Members. I, as Speaker, without fear of contradiction will not hesitate to impose any sanction that is legal in this jurisdiction against any member of the press or public who contravenes the Laws of this country. Parliamentarians are put here in a very high position and endeavour at all material times to so conduct themselves.

Please continue Honourable Minister.

Hon. Linford A. Pierson: Thank you so very much, Madam Speaker, for that intervention.

I do not intend to say anymore on the articles in Caypolitics as it is still my intention, notwithstanding assurance received from a senior member of the firm connected with Caypolitics, that they would look into this matter. I have still not decided whether or not I will pursue this matter. As a result, it could be regarded as sub judice for me to continue to say anymore on it.

I have received the compliments from a number of the stakeholders involved to be regulated under the legislation, but if I had received the compliments of everyone it would certainly be reason for me to be concerned. So, I am not surprised at all that at least the largest of the stakeholders, Cable and Wireless—and I note that their officials are in the gallery—are not one hundred percent happy with this Bill, because it is a Bill that will regulate them and other similar bodies. They have suggested to me that the Bill is somewhat harsh in relation to them. Then again, I got communication from another stakeholder who said I was going too easy on Cable and Wireless. So you never win in a situation. The most you can do is pray to God that you get the guidance to do what is right for these Islands and the people of these Islands and to be able to sleep at night knowing that you have done the very best job that you possibly could.

In this regard we did not—as I understand some of our neighbouring Islands have done—depend solely on our own local expertise because we realised that we were limited in that area. Thus, the reason we selected one of the very best, most experienced firms in the telecommunication business, LECG Limited telecommunications consultants out of the UK to assist us and they have been through the Bill, page by page, word by word.

I am not going to suggest here to Honourable Members that it is a perfect piece of legislation, but I am going to suggest that it is a very good piece of legislation. As can be seen, there is already one Committee stage amendment that has been circulated, that we intend to- I wish to make during the Committee stage of the Bill.

Indeed, I am looking for a second one, if it is appropriate, to make sure that it is as tight as possible. That second one has to do more with the regulation and control of the ky domain.

The term 'ICT' includes all the types of communications for use for social, business, entertainment and safety purposes, which are now routine features of our lives. Modern, efficient, innovative and inexpensive ICT networks and services are vital to the quality of life of people who live and work in the Cayman Islands, or who come here as visitors. What is more, they are fundamental to our economic success. Modern business relies critically on such networks and services to enable it to compete successfully with the best of other jurisdictions. If we fail to provide these networks and services the economic activities which rely on them can and will whither and may eventually leave these Islands. It is absolutely vital that we do not allow this to happen. Conversely, if we can develop a truly modern, efficient information communication technology sector the opportunities we have to attract new businesses will be immensely enhanced.

The evidence from around the world is that market liberalisation is fundamental to sustaining and developing the ICT sector. By liberalisation I mean an end to exclusive monopoly supply and the encouragement to competition in a range of services, quality of services, and above all in price. Nothing has been shown to be more effective in stimulating the sector than opening it up to multiple players.

Cayman will be following a well-trodden path, not embarking on untried risky techniques. It is not possible simply to abolish exclusivity and allow an immediate free-for-all. The transition has to be managed and the Bill not only enables competition but also provides the means whereby it can be brought about in an orderly and beneficial way.

Before moving on to discuss the key features of this important Bill, I would like to offer my sincere thanks to the many individuals and organisations that have contributed greatly to its drafting. First and foremost, I would like to thank the members of the Legislation sub-committee of the E-business Advisory Board, who laboured for many hours over a twelve-month period, not only to produce the consultative draft that was laid on the Table of this Honourable House last year August, but also review, comment on and in many cases incorporate the constructive comments and observations we received from Cable and Wireless and other stakeholders. I must also express my gratitude to the various employers of the sub-committee members for allowing them to donate their time without charge.

In particular, I should mention Broadhurst DaCosta, Cable and Wireless Internet Financial Services, Maples and Calder, Truman Bodden and Company and Walkers. I am also indebted to the many individuals and organisations that have reviewed the Bill at various stages including all stakeholders in the sector. Mr. William Wigglesworth, the Regional Telecommunications Advisor appointed by the UK Foreign and Commonwealth Office, the Telecommunications Advisory Committee and Government's ICT consultant, LECG Limited.

Finally, my grateful thanks go to the various Government Departments that contributed their expertise with particular mention going to Legislative Drafting and the Members of my own Ministry, all of whom have been working under considerable pressure for many months.

Thank you all again, and if I have omitted anyone by mistake, please accept my humble apologies.

Part (1)-Objectives of the Bill I would like to look at the objectives of the Bill, and I now turn to a more detailed consideration of the provisions of the Bill. As can be seen from the Memorandum of Objects and Reasons, the objects of this Bill are as follows: -

(A) to replace the existing Telephone, Broadcasting and Radio Laws with legislation that provides for modern Information And Communications Technology (ICT) services and networks in the Cayman Islands;

(B) to establish an independent regulatory Authority for the supervision of all ICT services and ICT networks;

(C) to enable the introduction of competition for the provisions of ICT services and ICT networks; and

(D) to protect the interest of consumers by -

- I. specifying standards for the delivery of ICT services and ICT networks.
- II. specifying a complaints procedure, and
- III. introducing measures to ensure their privacy when using ICT services and ICT networks.

Part 1 is introductory and includes the short title of the Bill commencements and definitions.

Part (2)- Establishment, Capital and Administration covers the establishment, capital and administration of the new ICT Authority. Clause 3 enables the authority as a body corporate. Clause 4 specifies that the Board of Directors shall consist of between three and five members with skills in one or more of finance and accounting, telecommunications, economics, law, information technology or related fields. To ensure the proper level of technical expertise, at least one of the Directors must be a person of recognised standing and experience in Telecommunications and one in Information Technology.

Clause 5 specifies that Directors should not represent any commercial or financial interest of which they may be connected, should be appointed for between three and five years and may be re-appointed and may be paid remuneration and allowances by the Authority. As the Managing Director will be an employee of the Authority the latter two provisions do not apply to him or her. Before he is appointed a director, a person is required to inform the Governor of any conflicts of interest and it is an offence if he fails to do so.

Clause 6 provides for the appointment of the Managing Director and specifies his duties and responsibilities. Clause 7 details the limited circumstances under which the Governor in Council may terminate the appointment of any director; and Clause 8 lays down that the Board shall conduct its procedures in accordance with the first schedule to the Bill. Clause 9, powers and functions of the Authority are defined. These are to:

(a) Allocate the electromagnetic spectrum for facilities and specified services within the Cayman Islands or between the Cayman Islands and elsewhere.

(b) Determine methods for assigning the electromagnetic spectrum.

(c) Issue licences authorising the use of specified portions of the electromagnetic spectrum including those used on any ship, aircraft, vessel or other floating or airborne contrivance or spacecraft registered in the Cayman Islands.

(d) Institute procedures for ensuring the compliance by licensees with any obligations regarding the use of the electromagnetic spectrum imposed by or under the licence any provisions of this Law or any regulations made here under.

And more specifically,

(a) To promote competition in the provision of ICT services and ICT networks where it is reasonable or necessary to do so.

(b) To advise the Minister on ICT matters, including compliance with Government's international obligations, market liberalisation and competitive pricing.

(c) To investigate and resolve complaints from customers or consumers and service providers, concerning the provision of ICT services and ICT networks.

(d) To determine that categories of licence to be issued under this Law and the electronic transactions Law 2000.

(e) To licence and regulate ICT services and ICT networks as specified in this Law and the Electronics Transactions Law 2000.

(f) To collect all fees, including licence fees and any other charges levied under this Law of the Electronics Transactions Law 2000 or Regulations made there under.

(g) To resolve disputes concerning the interconnection or sharing of infrastructure between or among ICT service providers or ICT network providers.

(h) To promote and maintain an efficient economic and harmonised ICT infrastructure.

(i) To carry out the duties and the responsibilities of the administrative point of contact of the top level of the global Internet domain name system, as assigned from time to time to the Islands to act on any matter, refer to it by the Minister or the Managing Director; and

(k) To carry out such other functions as are conferred on the Authority by or under this Law or any other Law.

The Authority may also regulate the rate, prices, terms and conditions of any ICT service or ICT network that is required to be licensed where the Authority is of the opinion that it is in the interest of the public to do so.

Clause 10 specifies that the Authority may summon and examine witnesses called for and examine documents, administer oaths and require affidavits, if it is necessary to do so in order for it to perform its functions under the law. Clause 11 allows the Minister to give the Authority directions of a general policy nature and states that such directions should be published in the gazettes.

Clauses 12 to 21 are standard clauses detailing the procedures to be followed by the Authority with regards to accounts and statements. These and some other clauses concerning accounting issues reflect current cash accounting practices, but will most likely amend prior to the coming into force on the 1 July 2004, or earlier of the relevant provisions of the new Public Management and Finance Law 2001. I therefore shall not go into any details concerning these clauses. Clause 22 gives the Authority to employ staff as it considers necessary, specified pension requirements and permits civil servants to be seconded to the Authority.

Part (3) - Licensing of ICT Network and ICT Service Providers: Part 3 of the Bill deals with the licensing of ICT network and ICT service providers.

Clause 23 enables the Authority to license such ICT services and ICT networks as are specified by notice published in the Gazette. It further provides that the ICT services or ICT networks, licensed under this Law, are exempt from the licensing requirements of the Trade and Business Licensing Law, and thus removes the necessity for a company to obtain two different types of licences for the same business. It also enables the Governor in Council to establish a class or classes of licence that are exempt from the local Companies Control Law when they consider it to be in the best interest of the Cayman Islands, as the requisite would not otherwise be made.

A licence shall specify the operations that the licensee may undertake and conditions to which the licence is subject the breach of which constitutes an offence under the Law.

Clause 24 provides that the Governor in Council may provide regulations relating to classes of ICT service which may be provided under a licence. Such regulations may provide for;

(a) The content of such ICT service and the times when they can be provided.

(b) The minimum amount of time on such ICT service a licensee shall devote to material containing matter of minority, cultural or educational interest and the times during which such matter shall be provided.

(c) The times within which advertisements relating to particular goods or classes of goods may be advertised and

(d) The maximum amount of time in any hour, which may be used for advertisements and the maximum amount of time which can be used for that purpose.

Clause 25 provides that the shares of a licensee, which is a company, shall not be issued or transferred without the approval of the ICT Authority. This is to prevent effective control of a licence being changed without the knowledge of the Authority, thus circumventing the licensing checks and procedures.

Clause 26 sets out the procedure for the grant or renewal of a licence and specifies criteria that the Authority should take into account when making their decisions and these include;

(a) Whether the applicant possesses the technical qualifications necessary to fully perform the obligations attached to the licence for which the applicant is applying.

(b) Whether the applicant intends to perform the obligations attached to the licence for which the applicant is applying, in a period of time which, in the opinion of the Authority, is reasonable.

(c) Whether the applicant is a fit and proper person to be granted a licence.

(d) Whether the interest of subscribers, purchasers and other users of ICT services or ICT networks will be protected.

(e) Whether competition among providers of ICT services and ICT networks will be promoted.

(f) Whether research, development and introduction of new ICT services and ICT networks will be promoted.

(g) Whether foreign and domestic investors will be encouraged to invest in the ICT sector; and

(h) Whether the public interest and the security interest of the Islands will be safeguarded.

Clause 27 provides that a person shall not assign a licence or any rights under such licence without the prior written approval of the Authority. Again this is to avoid a circumvention of the licensing checks and procedures.

Clause 28 provides for the duration of licences. Clause 29 provides for the renewal of licences. Clause 30 prescribes that each licence will be subject to a license fee payable to the Authority. Clause 31 sets out the procedures for the modification of a licence. Clause 32 sets out the conditions under which the Authority may suspend a licence and the procedures for doing so. Clause 33 sets out the conditions under which the Authority may revoke a licence and the procedures for doing so. Clause 34 provides for the keeping of a register of all applications for licences received by the Authority and all licences granted under the Law. This register will be available for public inspection and maybe available online. The aim is to provide a high degree of transparency.

Part (4)- Cease and Decease Orders deals with the cease and decease orders. Earlier clauses in this Bill give the Authority the power to suspend or revoke a licence. Such action is appropriate for major or repeated breaches of the conditions of a licence. Or, if a licensee blatantly breaks the Law. A much more likely occurrence will be, minor intentional or unintentional breaches of licences conditions. And the Authority requires a more credible sanction that it can apply in such circumstances.

Clause 35 therefore empowers the Authority to issue cease and desist orders; and Clause 36 provides that the Authority may apply to the court where a licensee;

(a) Has failed to comply with any term or condition of the licence, or

(b) Has failed to comply with a cease or desist order made under Clause 35; or

(c) Has contravened and provision of this Law or any regulations made here under.

Clause 37 sets out the powers of the court in relation to such an application.

Universal Service: Part 5 of the Bill deals with the Universal Service, Interconnection, Infrastructure Sharing and Numbering.

The concept behind the universal service provisions is that the Governor in Council may define a minimum level of ICT service that should be available to each of our citizens. As a condition of their licence, one or more service providers can be required to provide that minimum level of service. If the cost of providing the service is greater than the revenue it generates, the provider can be compensated from a fund set up for that purpose.

This universal service fund receives its income from contributions made by all providers of the type of service in question. The aim is to ensure that no service provider is unfairly penalised for having to provide uneconomic services specified by Government, but rather that the cost is equitably shared by all similar providers. Until the minimum level of required service has been defined and the Authority has had the opportunity to examine the true cost of provision of such services, it is not certain that a universal service fund will be required. To avoid work that might be unnecessary, the provisions contained in Clauses 38 to 43 will not come into force until the date specified by the Governor.

Clause 38 establishes the universal fund managed by the Authority. Clause 39 specifies the purpose of the fund. Clause 40 enables categories of universal service and categories of ICT service or ICT networks providers required to provide one or more such categories of universal service to be specified by regulations. Clause 41 enables the Authority to include the provision of one or more categories of universal service as a condition of licensing the services or networks provided by a specified category of ICT service or ICT network providers; and Clause 42 enables the Authority to include the provision of one or more categories of universal service as a condition of licensing a specified ICT service or ICT network.

Clause 43 prescribes the procedures for obtaining contribution to the fund by ICT service providers and ICT network providers.

I will now move on to the subject of interconnection and infrastructure sharing.

The Speaker: Is this a convenient time for the luncheon break?

Hon. Linford A. Pierson: Yes, Madam Speaker.

The Speaker: Thank you. We will now break for lunch and we will be back at 2.30pm.

Proceedings suspended at 12.59 pm

Proceedings resumed at 2.52 pm

The Speaker: Please be seated. Proceedings are resumed.

I will invite the Honourable Leader to bring a Motion for the adjournment.

ADJOURNMENT

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: Madam Speaker, because of a briefing on a financial management initiative for all Members of the House and another meeting after that, we propose to adjourn this Honourable House until Friday, 8 March at 10 am.

The Speaker: Thank you. The question is that this House do now adjourn until Friday, 8 March 2002 at 10 am.

All those in favour, please say Aye. Those against, No.

Ayes.

The Speaker: The Ayes have it.

At 2.53 pm the House stood adjourned until Friday, 8 March 2002, at 10 am.

OFFICIAL HANSARD REPORT
FRIDAY
8 MARCH 2002
10.31 AM
Eleventh Sitting

The Speaker: I call upon the Honourable First Official Member to say prayers.

GOVERNMENT BUSINESS

PRAYERS

Hon. James M. Ryan: Let us pray.

Almighty God, from whom all wisdom and power are derived: we beseech Thee so to direct and prosper the deliberations of the Legislative Assembly now assembled, that all things may be ordered upon the best and surest foundations for the glory of Thy Name and for the safety, honour and welfare of the people of these Islands.

Bless our Sovereign Lady Queen Elizabeth II; the Queen Mother; Philip Duke of Edinburgh, Charles, Prince of Wales; and all the Royal family. Give grace to all who exercise authority in our Commonwealth, that peace and happiness, truth and justice, religion and piety may be established among us. Especially we pray for the Governor of our Islands, the Speaker of the Legislative Assembly, Official Members and Ministers of Executive Council and Members of the Legislative Assembly, that we may be enabled faithfully to perform the responsible duties of our high office. All this we ask for Thy great Name's sake.

Let us say the Lord's Prayer together: Our Father who art in Heaven, Hallowed be Thy Name. Thy Kingdom come, Thy will be done in earth, as it is in Heaven. Give us this day our daily bread, and forgive us our trespasses, as we forgive those who trespass against us. Lead us not into temptation, but deliver us from evil: For Thine is the Kingdom, the power and the glory, forever and ever. Amen.

The Lord bless and keep us. The Lord make His face shine upon us and be gracious unto us. The Lord lift up the light of His countenance upon us and give us peace now and always. Amen.

Proceedings resumed at 10.34am

READING BY THE HONOURABLE
SPEAKER OF MESSAGES
AND ANNOUNCEMENTS

Apologies

The Speaker: Please be seated. Proceedings are resumed.

I have received apologies for the late attendance of the Honourable Minister for Education. I have received no notice for any statements this morning.

BILLS

SECOND READING

The Information and Communications Technology Authority Bill, 2002

(Continuation of debate thereon)

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for Information and Technology continuing his debate on the Bill.

Hon. Linford A. Pierson: Thank you. Yesterday, at the close of my debate on the Bill before us, I had reached the point of Interconnection and Infrastructure Sharing. I would like to now deal with the subject of Interconnection.

Interconnection

On the day that liberalisation of telecommunication commences, the incumbent telephone company will own all telecommunication infrastructures on the Islands and new providers will own none. It would clearly be both uneconomic and undesirable for each new provider to contract his own independent infrastructure. Moreover, a subscriber to one telephone service must be able to contact a subscriber to any other service. We require a facility whereby all network operators, including the incumbent (Cable and Wireless), must enable other operators to pass traffic over their own networks for a charge. This facility is called 'interconnection'. The ability to achieve interconnection at rates, terms and conditions that are fair and equitable, is key to the development of a competitive Information and Communications Technology (ICT) marketplace.

Clause 44 sets out the conditions for the provisions of interconnection between the public ICT networks and of ICT network providers.

Clause 45 prescribes that interconnection agreements shall be in writing; shall be lodged with the Authority and shall be available for public inspection. The clause enables the Minister to impose an interconnection rate if the parties cannot agree.

Clause 46 sets out the procedures for resolving disputes during negotiations for the provision of interconnection and,

Clause 47 sets out the criteria to be used when calculating the cost of interconnection.

Infrastructure Sharing

Infrastructure sharing means such things as the sharing of radio masks, ducts and other such physical assets which ICT networks require.

Clause 48 provides the clauses in this Law dealing with interconnection, shall apply equally to specified types of infrastructure sharing by licensees.

Numbering

Clause 49 prescribes the way in which the Authority shall establish and manage a national plan for the allocation of telephone numbers among licensees.

Service Standards and Data Protection

Clause 50 sets out the service standards with which licensees shall apply and comply, and enables the Authority to make rules and procedures for the handling of customer complaints.

Clause 51 specifies circumstances under which a licensee may refuse to provide, discontinue or interrupt the provisions of an ICT service or an ICT network to a subscriber.

Clause 52 enables the establishment and adoption of standards for the certification of ICT equipment and ICT technicians. Only equipment meeting such standards may be connected to ICT networks.

Licensees or Subscribers

Clause 53 specifies that it is an offence to intentionally intercept, alter, replicate, monitor or interrupt any messages transmitted over an ICT network by means of an ICT service. Exceptions are provided where the action is taken by order of the Governor or the Court. Madam Speaker, I should mention and in connection with this section I propose to bring a small amendment, as I will be seeking to amend clause 55, and 53 is connection with that clause also.

Clause 54 specifies that it is offence for a licensee to disclose any personal data of a subscriber and user. Limited exceptions are provided.

Clause 55 (creates some problems with myself and certain Members of the House and I am going to be proposing an Amendment to this clause). This clause enables the Governor to issue a warrant authorising the interception of a message transmitted by means of an ICT service.

I should quickly add here though, that this Authority is now given to the Governor under the Cayman Islands Constitution, so even if I amend this, the Governor will still have that authority under the Constitution. As we all know, the Constitution supersedes any other law passed or existing in this House. So, the Governor still has that same right under his reserve powers to have a message intercepted if he feels that it is warranted. This particular Clause (55) reads and I would like to read this so that it is understood. It states: "Subject to the provision of this section, the Governor may issue a warrant requiring the person to whom it is addressed to intercept, in the course of their transmission by means of an ICT service, such messages as are described in the warrant; and such a warrant may also require the person to whom it is addressed to disclose the intercepted material to such persons and in such manner as are described in the warrant".

Sub-clause (2) reads: "The Governor shall not issue a warrant under this section unless he considers that the information sought could not reasonably be acquired by other means and the warrant is necessary- (a) in the interests of the security of the Islands; (b) for the purpose of preventing or detecting an indictable offence; or (c) for the purpose of safeguarding the economic well-being of the Islands".

These same powers are contained in the Constitution; therefore the Governor already has these powers so it was considered that it would be duplication to have to again recite these same powers in this legislation. So, if the Governor feels that it is necessary for him to intercept any calls, whether it is being in connection with the commission of a crime or otherwise, he already has that power under the Constitution. So, I am going to be proposing to delete this paragraph since the power is already in the Constitution for the Governor.

Part (7)–Review of Administrative Decisions and Appeals

Clause 56 sets out the procedures for the review of any administrative decision with respect to licensees or licensing made by the Authority.

The Speaker: Honourable Minister you have some 1 hour and 29 minutes remaining.

Hon. Linford A. Pierson: Thank you, Madam Speaker. I would like to take the opportunity to say that the reserved powers of the Governor, is contained under section (7) of the Constitution.

Clause 57 sets out the procedures for an appeal to the Court from any decision made by the Authority.

I now wish to turn to part (8) which deals with the offences under the Bill.

Offence

This Bill creates a number of offences and they are as follows:-

Clause 58 defines various offences in relation to the inspection by the Authority of ICT installations, equipment, apparatus and stations.

Clause 59 creates an offence of engaging in specified ICT activities without a licence.

Clause 60 defines the offence of causing malicious damage to any ICT network or ICT apparatus.

[Pause]

Clause 61 prescribes that obstructing any investigation being carried out by the Authority under this Law is an offence.

Clause 62 defines the offence of refusing to produce, destroying or altering any physical evidence required to be produced under this Law.

Clause 63 defines the offence of giving false or misleading information to the Authority.

Clause 64 prescribes that failure to give evidence to the Authority is an offence.

Clause 65 defines the offence of sending a message that is dangerous to the security of the Islands or contrary to public order.

Clause 66 defines the territorial scope of inchoate offences.

Clause 67 creates the offence of using an ICT service to defraud, abuse, annoy, threaten or harass any person.

Clause 68 defines the situation which arises when an offence is committed by a body corporate.

Clause 69 prescribes that when a person is convicted of an offence under this Law, the Court may also make an order for the payment of compensation.

Under the general section of the Bill:

Clause 70 contains a general power to make regulations.

Clause 71 provides the Authority and its employees with immunity from any claim for damages resulting from the performance of their functions under this Law, unless it can be shown that their act or omission was in bad faith.

I should mention here, Madam Speaker that these clauses are references to the latest White Paper that was distributed, because that was what I laid on the Table of the House. Since then, I am aware that a Green Paper has been circulated and the numbering might be slightly out but I am following the Paper that was laid on the Table of the House.

Clause 72 and the second schedule set out the rights and procedures for the establishment of ICT installations on land.

Clause 73 and the third schedule make necessary amendments to The Electronics Transaction Law 2000. The substance of these amendments is to transfer to the ICT Authority many of the powers and responsibilities previously held by the Minister.

Clause 74 repeals the existing Broadcasting Law (1996 Revision); The Radio Law (1996 Revision); and The Telephone Law (1997 Revision) that are superseded by this Law.

Clause 75 which will be the subject of a committee-staged amendment specifies the transitional arrangement. The Amendment proposes to clarify the position with respect to existing licences by combining sub-sections (1) and (2). It states that, any licences issued under the old Radio Broadcasting or Telephone Laws shall remain valid until the 31 December 2002 or such later date as the Governor in Council may specify. Thereafter, new licences under the ICT Law will be required. The provision is to give time for the new ICT Authority to be established and staffed.

Sub-section (3) empowers the Minister as a temporary measure to issue licences under the new Law. This will extend only until such time as the Board of the Authority states that it is ready to assume this responsibility. The Governor in Council can appoint such persons, as he considers necessary to assist the Minister with this temporary task. The provision is necessary because there will be an ongoing requirement to licence, for example, radios, ships and aircraft. Such applications cannot be deferred until the ICT Authority is fully in place. Sub-section (4) ensures that all monies owed to Government under the old laws remain recoverable.

Finally, sub-section (5) deals with the special case of Cable and Wireless's existing telecommunications licences. As it is currently the subject of negotiations between Government and that Company, this licence will not be subject to automatic expiration on the 31 December, 2002, as will be the case for other licences. I would like to repeat that [repeated].

Rather, the termination date will be specified by the Governor in Council by notice published in the Gazette. While on the subject of Cable and Wireless, I must say that I am grateful to that Company for the many constructive comments they have made during the drafting of the Bill. However, in my opinion some of their suggestions and objections have been, not surprisingly, aimed at strengthening their own position. This is understandable and I do not blame them in the least.

I do have objections, however, when anyone raises issues solely for the purpose of delaying the implementation of this legislation or any other aspect of liberalisation. In this connection, I would like to inform Honourable Members that I am in the course of writing to Cable and Wireless's Regional and General Managers concerning the perceived delays and lack of co-operation the Company is giving to the special audit being carried out by the Auditor General.

Honourable Members may recall that this audit is being conducted so that we (and the public) can be assured that Cable and Wireless has accurately calculated the licence fees due to Government since 1992. It was authorised by His Excellency under section (46) of the Public Finance and Audit Law in the public interest. However, Cable and Wireless has refused to recognise this fact and has insisted that the audit be carried out under the terms of their licence.

This has placed restrictions on what the auditors can do.

This audit has been underway since August last year, whenever Cable and Wireless has granted access to the auditors. The Ministry and the Auditor General are most anxious to conclude this phase of the audit as soon as possible. However, as an example, the Auditor General has been awaiting information from the Company since November 2001. Once this information is made available phase one of the audit should be completed within 6 man-weeks.

Honourable Members may also wish to know that in another letter to the Company, I am advising them that any unreasonable attempts to tie up the market prior to the introduction of competition by, for example,

- ◆ giving incentives to customers to sign long-term contracts,
- ◆ bundling the provision of equipment and services, or
- ◆ purchasing band-width beyond their realistic needs will be considered anti-competitive practices that will be acted upon immediately by the ICT Authority.

I trust that Cable and Wireless will react responsibly to my comments and that our discussions on liberalisation will be the genuine negotiations that they have publicly committed to. Mere delaying tactics will not be acceptable to Government or the people of the Cayman Islands.

The orderly introduction of fair and equitable competition in the ICT sector is urgently required for the social and economic wellbeing of these Islands. This Bill provides the legislative framework for this to happen. I am therefore pleased to move the second reading of The Information and Communications Technology Bill, 2002, and I commend it to all Honourable Members.

Thank you, Madam Speaker.

The Speaker: Thank you Honourable Minister. Does any other Member wish to speak? The Elected Member from the district of East End.

Mr. V. Arden McLean: Thank you, Madam Speaker. The fact that I got the podium does not mean that I will be long.

I rise to make my contribution to the Bill for a Law to establish The Information and Communication Technology Authority and to vest property in the authority, and for incidental and connected purposes. At the outset, I think, I should make it abundantly clear that I and the Opposition supports—I speak on behalf of Members of the Opposition, as well, because I am aware that all five of us support deregulation in the telecommunication industry.

In my former life I too have been involved in deregulation in other places in the world where I have seen it done. I understand the benefits of deregulation, particularly, to the consumer and while I understand that, I also recognise that this is a very serious bill before us. My contribution to this Bill is going to take the form of constructive criticism and I trust the Government will view it as that.

There are a few areas I see in the Bill which I think the Government should look at. One of the questions I would like to ask the Government has to do with the Utilities Commission, which we have heard of for many years. How is this is going to synchronise with the existence of a Utilities Commission? Certainly, this Authority which is being formed would have some, if not total, autonomy. I know that there are Members of this Honourable House who believes in the Utilities Commission and if that comes into being then how does the ICT Authority work with the Utilities Commission? That is a situation in need of some consideration because a Utilities Commission is not only going to cover electricity and water, it should include also telecommunications.

First I will go to one particular area, which deals with the authority of the Governor. I believe the Minister in his presentation spoke of deleting one particular area; that is section 55 because he intends to bring a committee stage amendment to that. However, in the definitions under the Law, the “Governor” means the person for the time being holding the office of Governor of the Islands, and includes any person for the time being lawfully performing the functions of that office under section 1 of Schedule 2 to the Cayman Islands (Constitution) Orders 1972 to 1973...” Madam Speaker, there are a number of areas in this Law where the Governor is mentioned as having full authority and I am wondering if it was intentional or if it is a mistake. Under section 17 “The Authority shall pay into the Treasury, at such times and in such manner as the Governor may direct...” That is repayment of advances. Madam Speaker, I wonder why the Governor has to get involved? I appreciate the Governor in Council but why does the Governor have to get involved in repayment of advances?

I was just reminded to ask whether or not we are going forward or backwards constitutionally, especially now that the Constitution is being modernised. Further, if I may, please allow me to read section 17 which says: “The Authority shall pay into the Treasury, at any such times and in such manner as the Governor may direct, such amounts as may be so directed in or towards repayment or advances made to the Authority under section 16, and any sums issued in fulfilment of any guarantee given thereunder, and shall pay into the Treasury on what is outstanding for the time being in respect of such advances and of any sum so issued at such rate as the Governor may direct . . .” It has to be paid to the Treasury under The Governor’s direction and then the Governor sets the rate. Madam Speaker, I think that maybe it should be the Authority or Financial Secretary. The Financial Secretary is responsible for the monies in this country so, maybe it is a mistake there, but I certainly would like to think that the Governor has other things to do; therefore, we do not need him to control the monies of our country too.

Madam Speaker, we then turn to section 31 and it says: “A licence granted under this Law may be modified where the Authority and the licensee, by agreement in writing, agree to modify the licence.” That is 31(1). Section 31(2) goes on to say: “Notwithstanding the provision of subsection (1) and subject to any special conditions concerning modification in the relevant license, the Authority shall, on the direction of the Governor and without the agreement of the licensee modify a licence for reasons of security of the Islands.” Again, like the Minister elaborated on, that provision is already in our Constitution. I respect if there is going to be some kind of authority to modify a licence then I see no reason why the Governor needs to play a part in that. I respect, Madam Speaker, and I believe, that it should be, maybe the Governor in Council, which includes the Members of Executive Council. However, if he so wishes to consult with the Members of Executive Council then I respect that, but the Governor currently has that responsibility for security so, I see no need for it to be included in the Law. Certainly, I am sure the Minister will let us know how that came about and whether or not it is within the right place.

We go to section 32, again notwithstanding the provisions of subsection (1) which is revocation of licence says: “the Authority on the order of the Governor, shall without notice suspend any licence if the suspension is necessary for reasons of security of the Islands.” Again, Madam Speaker, I see no need to have it in the Law but someone can tell me why it is put in there. The Governor's office has the authority already enshrined in our Constitution; there is no need to have it rubbed in that he needs more.

Madam Speaker, moving on we go to section 53 and again, this is the one that refers to section 55 where the Governor has under the Law the right to intercept any telephone or transmission by means of an ICT service. So, in 53, it refers to: “A person shall not be guilty of an offence under this section if- (a) the message is intercepted, monitored or interrupted in obedience to a warrant issued by the Governor under section 55.” This, therefore, gives the Governor the right to do it. Like the Minister already said, the Governor already has all these reserved powers and again, I see no need to have him involved in the running or the application of a specific Law.

Next, we look under section 70 and it says: “Without derogating from the powers to make regulations conferred elsewhere in this Law, the Governor may make regulations.” I always thought it was the Governor in Council who would decide on the regulations, therefore, I am wondering if these are slip ups that were made, or if more power is being conferred again to the office of the Governor, whereby the Elected Members of Executive Council will have no say in the regulations.

I would like to make it clear that the reason I am questioning the position of ‘Governor’ being here in this Law so many times, is because it is defined in here as ‘Governor’, the person holding that office. It is no question of the conduct of the Governor; it is merely this Law.

We go to what is numbered in the White Paper 76 (but I believe will be renumbered to 75 section (2)). It says: “A concession, license, or authorisation issued before the commencement of this Law, under any previous Law regulating any aspect of ICT services or ICT networks in the Islands shall, to the extent of their consistency with this Law, be deemed to have been issued under this law until the 31 December 2002, or such later date as the Governor may, by notice in the Gazette, specify.”

Then, Madam Speaker, section (3) says: “The Minister may, where the Authority has not been established at the date of the commencement of this Law and until such time as the Board may specify by resolution, have the power to issue on any concession, licence or authorisation which the Authority is empowered by this Law to issue; . . .” I see that as one contradicting the other. The Minister has the authority and the Governor also has the authority. We have to decide which it is going to be. It then goes on to say, “. . . and the Governor in Council may, for such period of time as it shall determine, appoint such persons as it considers necessary to assist the Minister in carrying out such functions.”

I personally, would have liked to have seen the authority created in tandem with the passage of this Law. That is not to cast any aspersions at the Minister or anyone else, but I would have preferred to see them. Maybe we can put a time frame on when the authority must be in place. When we get to the situation where we are repealing the Broadcasting Law—the Radio Law; these are two areas that need to be monitored on a daily basis. We all know that the Ministers have their plates filled, as it is, and for one more Minister to take on monitoring the licensing of radios and the bands for one way radios, two way radios and so on, without any disrespect to the Minister, I personally feel that we need to have someone in place, as soon as possible. I would really have preferred to have seen the authority in place, or thereabout, even prior to this Law getting passage, or provisions made to have it in place immediately. So, maybe the Minister will assist us by giving us a time frame to get the authority in place.

I would like to turn now to Universal Service. While I understand that this section of the Law will not come into effect until later on, there are a few areas that I do not understand and I would like to draw them to the attention of the Government for clarification. When licences are issued to any licensee, provisions are made whereby under section 40 of the Law that states: “The Governor in Council may, on the recommendation of the Authority, by a regulation under this Law specify: (a) categories of universal service that are required; and (b) categories of ICT network providers and ICT service providers that may be required to provide one or more of such required universal services”.

As I understand it, this section is speaking about public telephones; emergency services; directory services; internet accesses for educational purposes; and health facilities. We all know that does not attract a charge so, I understand the universal fund being set up.

When we go to section 43 it says: “The Authority shall include a condition in the licence of each licensee that provides and ICT service or an ICT network specified under the provisions of section 40, that each such licensee shall contribute to the Universal Service Fund or any one or more sub-funds of the Universal Service Fund”. Let me draw a little scenario where the authority issues 20 licences for radio, et cetera. Ten out of those services are for telephone services and five out of those telephone services have a licence which says they must provide the universal service, whether it is each one have all, or it is divided amongst them, but only they must contribute to this fund; those five. The other five that are issued with a telephone licence not providing it, does not have to contribute to the fund. That is what it says to me and I do not think that is fair if that is the way it is intended. It does not say all licensees must pay into the universal fund. It is only those that the Governor in Council will specify. Therefore, it could be that the Governor in Council does not require certain licences to have that tag on to them.

Without trying to defend anyone, if I could, I will use, in comparison, Cable and Wireless with another company coming into the country providing telephone service. We all know that Cable and Wireless is the sole provider right now and their network goes throughout the three Islands. Certainly, it would be in the onset of Cable and Wireless providing all the public phones, et cetera; therefore if another company was to be given a licence and not be required to pay into that universal fund we would see an unfair situation with the current provider of telephone services. I am not saying that is what is going to happen, I am just drawing an illustration that it is a possibility. How the law has been written—maybe it needs to be changed to say that ‘all’ of those must pay it, or the universal fund services would be related to ‘all’ of those with telephone and internet services.

Now that we are repealing the Broadcasting Law and the Radio Law, it is my understanding that radios, television and so on, falls under this law and must be subject to the same license that the telephone companies would be subject to. Certainly, they would not be providing the public telephone for emergency services and things of that nature; or Internet access either. However, they will have to have a licence and in so saying, they will not be required to put in to the universal fund. Maybe it could be changed to say: ‘all licences will attract the universal fund’. It may not be the best thing to do, but I know that all of those who are providing telephone services in this country should attract the universal fund.

The other area I noticed, which needs some explanation, is under section 45 (5). Section 45 is concerning interconnection agreements and in subsection (5) it says: “Where parties cannot agree upon interconnection rates, the Minister may, upon the recommendation of the Authority, impose an interconnection rate”. Again, in this instance, maybe this should also go to the Governor in Council to get a broader view of the situation; not to say that any Minister would, out of aggravation or otherwise, do any thing that is not in keeping with the law or keeping within fairness, but I believe we should get a broader understanding of what is going on prior to making a decision of such magnitude where there is a dispute.

Another area is that of licensing. I have not found any provisions in the Law for the renewal of a license with provisions for charges to be applied because section 28 says: “A license granted under this Law- (a) shall be for the period specified in the licence and shall not be granted for a period longer than 15 years”. I believe those fifteen years were times when the Local Companies Control Law (LCCL) would be for long periods such as that. I really believe that provision should be shortened to say five years or there about. As we all know, and the Minister is well aware, that technology changes by the minute. Many years ago it was by the six months and then they started reducing that time and it is changing by the minute now-a-days. If we are tied in to any provider with specific conditions attached and a new technology comes on the market, we certainly would want to be the beneficiaries of that new technology. Even if we want to compromise and split the fifteen in two and say seven years, but it can be for a period up to fifteen years; it is not to say that it will be given for fifteen years. Certainly, with the fifteen years there, provisions are in there where it can be issued for fifteen years. I think it would be in the best interest to shorten that.

It is not only today that this Law is going to be legislated for. While the spirit of the Government of today may be not to issue a licence up to fifteen years, this Law will be in place forever and ever. I think we have a responsibility to ensure that certain safeguards are placed in the Law to ensure any future Ministers or Governments adhere to something reasonable ensuring that the people of this country gets full benefits. That is why I am suggesting a lower time-frame for the issuing of licence.

We are aware that the Caribbean Utilities Company (CUC) licence was for some twenty or twenty-five years. I think the licence that Cable and Wireless currently has is some twenty years also. The point is that I believe these periods are too long. Too long a period and there is nothing wrong with reducing the time. It does not mean that anything is going to happen; it can be renewed if the relationship is right; if the contract is being maintained in the proper manner. Certainly, the people of this country should have an opportunity to be able to go back in and renegotiate a contract in a shorter period of time if they are not satisfied with it. Yes, Madam Speaker, I know that the complaint is going to be about the returns on their money and that it is rather inflexible, because it does not give them enough time to get returns on what their investments are and so on. I understand all of that!

If any company is issued a five year licence and they are living within the guidelines of that contract maintaining an efficiency and effectiveness; giving the consumers their proper due, then they should not be afraid to go back to the negotiating table and renegotiate their licence. If they are in good standing with their contract it is given that their contract will be renewed. However, if we find a company not complying with the conditions of the contract and the Government walks in to negotiate that contract, they will be breaking the contract. We have much experience with breaking of contracts in this country and it costs the country more than it really should if the contracts were left to go their full course, therefore if we had a timeframe where we could reasonably go back to, then we would not get ourselves in those problems.

Another area I thought I would discuss is section 34—register of applications and licenses. Section 34 says: “The Authority shall cause to be kept a register of all applications for licences received by it and all such licences granted pursuant to this Law and such register may be kept in electronic form”. I just wonder what will be the content of the registry with regards to making it public and what will be in there. Will it be full details or pertinent issues relating to the application; the membership; the owners; or other related information?

Under section 35—the cease and desist orders says: “(1) Where the Authority is satisfied that there are reasonable grounds for believing that any conduct specified in subsection (2) is being carried out by any person, the Authority may issue a cease and desist order to the person concerned.

“(2) The conduct referred to in subsection (1) includes any operations in contravention of the Law or regulation made under this Law.”

Subsection 7 says: “(7) The decision of the Authority shall be notified to the appellant with the least possible delay.” Because it gives that, the person can appeal that cease and desist order. Now, I wonder if that is the final determination of that situation. Is there any further room for appeal? Would it go to the Governor in Council, or to the court, or to the Minister? It is the authority who makes the decision, but certainly a person should have the right to appeal further. It appears like the authority would be final.

Another section that seems to me, which needs some revision, is in section 44—interconnection and infrastructure sharing and 44 (1) says: “(1) Subject to the provisions of this section, a licensee that operates a public ICT network shall not refuse, obstruct, or in any way impede another licensee in the making of an interconnection with its ICT network and shall, in accordance with the provisions of this section, ensure that the interconnection provided is made at technically feasible physical points.” Then subsection (4) says; “(4) A request by a licensee to make any interconnection with another licensee shall be refused only on reasonable grounds and such refusal shall be in writing.” The fact that a refusal can be made under section 4, I wonder if it should not be mentioned in section 1 because a refusal is provided for in section 4.

Madam Speaker, if you will give me a minute I will wind up shortly.

As I said earlier, I support deregulation. Liberalisation is a new word for deregulation. As I know, it has always been deregulation, but as time goes on we change for more scientific words. Deregulation or liberalisation, which ever we want to call it, is good for any country. I recall many years ago in Australia, in one section, there were forty odd utilities and within a short time, as a result of deregulation that was down within a manageable amount of some fifteen utilities because of the merging of companies. In this instance, it is a little different because we only have one provider of telephone in this country. We are now going to spread it out a little more and I welcome that because the consumer the people of this country will benefit as a result of that.

For too long we have heard our people in this country talk about Cable and Wireless having the only say and they do what they want. We have heard that CUC is the only electricity provider and they do what they want. We are catching up with the rest of the world in deregulating these services. We have, over the years in this country, allowed five to six hundred banks to come in and compete amongst each other. I applaud the Minister for making such bold steps in coming forward and taking that plunge that no one else would do. Granted, in the day of Cable and Wireless and CUC those were the days when the Cayman Islands was a little place time forgot and no one else wanted to come here. We have to respect these companies and be grateful to them for what they have done and for their contribution to the development of this country. I believe Cable and Wireless and CUC is like the motto that Chevrolet uses in America; it is the ‘heartbeat of America’. I believe, these two utilities have been the heartbeat of this country. They have played a major role in the success story that Cayman boasts of today.

However, that is today and there is a new horizon; a new world and the Cayman Islands has to take its rightful place in that new order, and in so doing we have to move forward. To do that these companies must be encouraged to come with us but there are other companies who can provide services also. I am therefore certain that the Minister and all Members of this Honourable House respect Cable and Wireless; I do! I certainly would not do anything that would contribute to any unfairness to them. However, Cable and Wireless, as the Minister said, has been very cooperative and I now invite Cable and Wireless to embrace the opportunity of moving forward with us in this new order of things.

The people of this country are going to benefit as a result of this Law. Certainly, I would like to think that Cable and Wireless will benefit also. In a competitive world and a competitive environment here in the Cayman Islands, certainly Cable and Wireless will have to pull up their boot straps and be more efficient, more effective, in how they conduct their business.

I certainly would encourage the Minister, in his instructions to the Authority and his deliberations, to consider that Cable and Wireless has been here a long time providing local service in this country. I believe, Cable and Wireless has been complaining about having to subsidise locally for some time now. As little as I know about telecommunications, it is my understanding that the international market is where the money is at, and I believe, that it is fair to Cable and Wireless that any other providers coming in here have to share in providing the local service to our people.

I do not believe that any provider should come in here and exclusively have a particular section of the market and then the provider that was here all these years with us are left to provide that which needs to be subsidised. I respect that the universal fund will address some of that issue but I believe that there are other issues that needs to be addressed. I certainly feel that Cable and Wireless needs a fair shake at it to provide that and I am sure the Minister will give them that fair shake. Certainly, Cable and Wireless cannot in all fairness, expect to be protected forever and as a result of this Law, get anything in here that is going to wholly and solely protect their environment; the situation that they have lived through forever.

I welcome the deregulation because the cellular charges in this country are astronomical, which I have spoken about before. I cannot, in all fairness to Cable and Wireless say what is cost to operate that service. However, to me, as a user, it is extremely high. I have very little authority on telephone rates and with electricity I can match whomever when it comes to rate structuring, but with telephone rates I do not have that. I do know from a user standpoint that it is extremely high. As for the service, I have complained about this privately, publicly and on the Floor of this Honourable House; the service is not good and there are areas in this country where you cannot get service. I believe that is a failing in Cable and Wireless, which further compounds the complaints from our people when we have expensive cellular service and we cannot talk on the phone at certain points in this country. I find it extremely difficult to accept that a little Island some 20 odd miles long and we cannot have total coverage. I understand the capital investment required; I do not know how much it will be, but the fact is, that there must be some consideration for the end user where you are paying for the service and you are not getting it.

I trust and I hope that as a result of this deregulation, this will make Cable and Wireless pull their socks up—so to speak, because that is exactly what I believe will happen here.

I know the corporate world will applaud the Minister. The Minister spoke in his introduction of threatening letters because of his initiative to deregulate the telecommunication industry in this country. That is unfortunate because I believe, that we all come into this Honourable House to do what we believe is in the best interest of the majority of the people, and it has to be the minority who sends these threatening letters.

I trust that they have listened to your good self, Madam Speaker, when you read from the Immunities and Privileges Law, which governs this Honourable House and the conduct of Members of this Honourable House. We may disagree but people must have respect for others. I had the opportunity to read a letter showed to me by the Minister this morning, which he referred to. Certainly, it should not, and cannot be read into the records of this Honourable House. I can say that it was one of the most derogatory letters I have ever seen. That has to stop in this country. People must be respected; they must be opposed. Just because the Minister is going about his responsibilities to this country, someone would sit down and pen such a threatening letter—I cry shame on those people Madam Speaker. I encourage the Minister to take it to the extent of the Law. It is only $8 hundred but it would teach someone a lesson. I applaud you when you asked for some amendments to be made to it in your contribution to the Throne Speech.

I do not have a lot of problems, as I said, with the Bill, except those that I outlined. I still would like to ask the Minister to recognise the concerns that we the Opposition have with this Bill and accept them as they are given, as constructive criticism. I know I am no authority on the Law, and there maybe some things that I said that can be justified in a different form. We all look forward to hearing his reply and 'yes', while this Bill has been coming for a very, very long time it has taken the current Minister to bring it to this Honourable House; for that I applaud him and I give him my full support on any deregulation that is going to go on in this country to bring peace, quiet, harmony to the people of this country—peace of mind! Our people are crying out about the injustice as they see it, quote unquote 'injustice'. I guess we all are crying out about the high cost. I trust that the people of this country will all be a little better off as a result of deregulation. I thank you, Madam Speaker.

The Speaker: Thank you Member from East End. We will now suspend for the morning break.

Proceedings suspended at 12.02 pm

Proceedings resumed at 12.23 pm

The Speaker: Please be seated. Proceedings are resumed. Before we continue with the debate the Honourable Minister responsible for Community Services would wish to make comment.

Dr. the Hon. Frank S. McField: Thank you, Madam Speaker.

I would be grateful if you and this Honourable House would consider a suspension to allow us to attend the International Women's Day Ceremony that is being held at the Women's Resource Centre beginning at 12.30 today. So, we would like if you could agree with us suspending for a luncheon break at this particular time.

The Speaker: I am entirely at the will of the House but I should think that it would be a function that all Parliamentarians would wish to have a presence. It is my implied indication that all Members are eager to get to the function to show their solidarity and support, and with that in mind we shall now take the luncheon break. We shall reconvene at 2.30.

Proceedings suspended at 12.24 pm

Proceedings resumed at 2.41 pm

The Speaker: Please be seated. Proceedings are resumed. Does any other Member wish to speak?

The Second Elected Member from the district of Cayman Brac and Little Cayman.

Mr. Lyndon L. Martin: Thank you, Madam Speaker.

I only rise to give but a few comments on the Bill for a Law to establish the Information and Communications Technology Authority; to vest property in the authority; and for incidental and connected purposes.

This particular Bill has been worked on by the Minister responsible for Communication. The Honourable Minister in his introduction outlined the challenges he faced in deriving at the point we are at to where a Bill could be introduced. I praise him for the efforts and accept that the work commenced over a year ago, however, I would like to give recognition for bringing this Bill here today, not only to the Minister but to all his colleagues on Executive Council who vetted it and gave their support along with the supporting Members of the Back Bench. I also give recognition to the entire United Democratic Party for bringing this revolutionary Bill to the forefront.

The area that interests me most, which I will focus my attention on, is that of the universal service fund. Cable and Wireless, over the years of service, has not neglected to provide service for our district of Cayman Brac and Little Cayman. It has been admitted by the company that service is not economical and cost effective to provide, however, they have done so. It is important that this fund is in place which will allow for any new competitor coming into the market to provide service to the Sister Islands, all be it at some degree of loss, and will be compensated from the fund, if I understand the working of such a fund correctly.

The Sister Islands of Cayman Brac and Little Cayman have suffered as a result of high communication costs. We are on the verge of launching a new industry in the Sister Islands of informatics (Brac Informatics), a project in which I am extremely excited about and I am sure you are also, for it has great potential for the development of Cayman Brac.

Cayman Brac Informatics Corporation, which is a locally owned company, and for the sake of emphasis I would like to stress that it is owned by Cayman Brackers, when I say locally owned. This is a company that has a potential of employing up to some fifteen individuals when fully staffed. Just this past week, on Wednesday, I had the opportunity of touring the facility along with my colleague, the Honourable Minister for Community Service, and we were so impressed at the development and the rapid pace under which it is coming to fruition. From the onset, the sponsors of this project made it known that telecommunication cost between the Islands and between Cayman Brac and Little Cayman to the international world, was of great concern.

The liberalisation of telecommunication as provided by this Bill, will allow for a competitor to come in. I want to stress the fact that I am cognisant of the fact that not in all occasions will competition yield lower prices but it is historically the most significant tool in deriving a lower mechanism. However, industries such as telecommunication that requires certain economies of scale to operate, once that scale is divided over greater providers there is an adjustment period. A period of time that the community as a whole may not see the great reduction in price, and I urge the community not to set their expectations too high to understand that the process under which competition will lead to lower prices, is a timely one.

The industry that we are hoping to develop in the Brac is not completed just with Brac Informatics Corporation; it had a modular effect. It is an industry that can grow; it is an industry starting with two primary businesses, but has the ability to grow into a full fledged industry and curtail the continually declining economy that we have in Cayman Brac. It has been established by everyone who were involved in the project, including you, Madam Speaker, because telecommunication cost must be reduced for the viability of this industry.

In the early part of last year when the first proposal came out for this industry, I recall when you and I went over to the Brac and had an emergency meeting with a group of interested individuals; spear-headed by one of our own involved in the telecommunication industry here in Grand Cayman. Out of those meetings evolved this project that we have before us here today in our community; a project that has instilled a certain degree of hope. I thank the Honourable Minister and the entire United Democratic Party for spearheading this Bill to get it through, which allows for reduced telecommunication costs in the long run, but also provides the basis for the registration and licensing of this company.

I am committed to providing the Minister with the support necessary for the passage of this Bill. I thank the Members of the Opposition through their spokesman for giving their support to ensure that this Bill sees safe passage.

The Bill, as presented here, is one that will affect every member of the community. It affects not only the commercial side of this Island but also the residential; the parochial small man; man on the street. It provides us as a Government with one concrete tool that we can say we have accomplished something. We have not only planned and talked about the much needed liberalisation, but we have put in place the mechanism to achieve this. In adhering to the established policy of the United Democratic Party, of maintaining short contributions and allowing those who are sponsoring the Bill to talk on it, I have only filled in the gap that is relevant to our district in appreciation of the impact that this Bill will have on our district. I now take my seat and give the Honourable Minister my support.

The Speaker: Does any other Member wish to speak? The Fourth Elected Member from the district of West Bay.

Mr. Cline A. Glidden, Jr: Thank you, Madam Speaker. It gives me a great sense of pride today to be able to stand here in support of a revolutionary Bill, like this ICT Bill that we are discussing.

Deregulation and liberalisation of the telecommunication market here in Cayman has been discussed for quite a long time. I can remember it took up quite a bit of time during the campaign, not so very long ago, as to the recognised need for lower pricing in the telecommunications market to allow for the introduction and the establishment of new industries, like e-commerce and e-business. It gives me great pleasure to be a part of the United Democratic Party Government who has toiled long and hard to make this Bill a reality. Like the Minister said, there was quite a bit of trials and tribulations in getting it to the stage where it is at. Knowing a bit about telecommunications, I fully recognise that there will be a lot more difficulties with the road forward, but as we often say, the hardest part of the journey starts with the first step and since we have now embarked with that first step, I look forward to the ongoing liberalisation and the deregulation of the industry.

We all recognise the important role that telecommunication plays in our everyday lives. If we look at today's paper we see where the headlines of the paper talks about the reliability of Cayman's communication infrastructure has scored in a major acquisition—an international recognised Medical School. I think that highlights the facts that we have had for some twenty five to thirty years very good, stable, sound, high quality telecommunication service provided by our local company, Cable and Wireless.

Even though we may query and have some little pet concerns and pet peers at times, as to the quality of the service they provide, in general when we accept the economies of scale, I think it is an accepted fact that Cable and Wireless has done a remarkable job with providing telecommunications and have played a vital part in the development of Cayman. I say that, I guess, with a bit of bias, since I did spend quite a bit of my working career with them. I credit them for giving me quite a bit of training in communications and in business practices on a whole.

I am very happy to be able to play a part in this legislation and I look forward to continuing to work with the Minister and the whole United Democratic Party in the continued pursuit of the deregulation of this market.

I think it is noteworthy to say that when we started looking at telecommunications we were not exactly sure what would have been the best way to make the required changes in the telecommunications market. There were some discussions as to the fact of having a monopoly. We have evidence of other places like Isle of Mann where monopolies are not necessary to deregulate to end up getting or having the competitive prices or the quality that you may feel is required. On that basis we were able to enter into negotiations with Cable and Wireless in discussions as to what they were actually able to provide as far as more competitive rates, based on their years and experience here in Cayman.

We worked with them for quite a while and after they had made what would be considered their best offer, as far as the pricing structure would go, which involved quite a bit of re-balancing, the decision was taken by the Government that we would pursue the deregulation and the liberalisation. This would allow the market in as much as possible, to dictate pricing in quality of the services that are provided.

I think that the Second Elected Member from Cayman Brac, my colleague, made the point that liberalisation does not necessarily mean automatically better pricing. It is important to note that the Government itself does recognise that fact, and this is not the 'end all' and the 'be all' solution to what we are trying to accomplish. However, we do recognise that telecommunication does play an important role and a part in the cost of living and doing business in Cayman. It is a very necessary balance to have the balance of good quality service at a good cost and, of course, good cost is all relative because I am sure if you were to ask our local company now, they feel that the cost they are providing is at a good cost based on the economy scales. Only time will really tell as to whether the market will be able to dictate better pricing with the liberalisation of the market.

It is very important to note that we recognise the need for, not only low pricing, but good quality. Technology has allowed for some changes, as far as quality international services, and they are able to do a lot of innovative things with frequencies to allow for much more traffic at such a reduced price, but in many cases, a reduce quality as well. This Bill and the authority, which will be required to be established, will have to do quite a bit of policing to ensure that we do not lose the high quality we have gotten to expect and demand because of the need or the want of lower pricing. However, in many cases what we will hope to achieve as well, is a choice. In the free market when we have multiple carriers it gives you the option of choosing, if necessary, a lower quality. If that lesser quality is sufficient for your needs then you will have the choice, or the possibility is, you would have a choice for a lower price for your service at a lesser quality, which is still sufficient for your needs.

It is also important to note that Cable and Wireless has done a tremendous job, as far as training and the promotion of local Caymanians in the telecom industry. We have had the pleasure of seeing some of our own people actually being trained and going to represent as managers in different areas of the region. I am sure that accomplishment has served as a source of pride for all of us. I would only hope that any new players that come into the market in response to this deregulation of the market, would also recognise the need for them to not only be here to provide a service, but to also become good corporate citizens and play their part in the development, the same as Cable and Wireless has done. I think Cable and Wireless has been a role model for most of our big corporations and if more of our bigger companies would have taken an example from Cable and Wireless, as far as sponsorship and the involvement that they do, I dare say that our community would be a much better place.

I think that when the United Democratic Party was looking and pursuing this Bill, we also recognised the need for some entrepreneurial opportunities as well. We see the telecommunications market as being a dynamic and ever developing market. We do recognise that there is quite a bit of expertise in our small community and if the opportunities did arise some of those local people, many of them who were trained by Cable and Wireless, would seize the opportunity to provide some of the services that Cable and Wireless had a monopoly on and provided for many years. The Member from Cayman Brac mentioned the possibilities that exists now in Cayman Brac, we are encouraged and look forward to similar economic benefits and spurts from the deregulation of that industry.

It was interesting to hear the Opposition Member from East End who spoke so favourably of the Bill. It was really encouraging and for a minute there I was not sure that it was actually the Opposition Member speaking. However, it does go to show that this Bill has been researched; the work has been done by the Minister and his staff, and in all reality it appears that the Member did not have too many problems with Bill but he did have a bit of problems with the power that the Bill gave to the Governor. I do recognise that there are some proposed amendments in that way. I will repeat the other credit that the Opposition Member gave just in case the Minister was not in the Chambers at the time. He said that he (the Minister) had achieved something that no one else was able to do. I thought that was great thing for him to say and it certainly says wonders for the United Democratic Party and the Minister. In all the years and in all the discussions of deregulation and liberalisation of the important telecommunication market, along comes the United Democratic Party and now we have a landmark Bill that will move us forward in a deregulation process. That is a great achievement for the Minister who is an integral part of the United Democratic Party.

It goes to show that those difficult decisions that we all campaigned on; those achievements that we talked about as being necessary; those things have all become possible with the structured approach and the introduction of the United Democratic Party. A few months ago, there was a show of strength and unity when there was a budget which was presented that had a lot of opposition both internal and external; the Members stayed together and thankfully it does not appear that there is going to be too much internal opposition to this particular Bill. I am sure the Minister did not know that, at the time when he presented the Bill. Seeing the defamatory letters he got and all the other stuff that was coming from outside; the pressure that he was being put under, I know that he found it comforting to know that he had unified support on this side of the Legislative Assembly. I know that he found it heartening this morning to understand that the support extends to the other side of the Legislative Assembly. We do not expect that to happen too often but it was encouraging to have it happen today.

Having played a part as a member of the Telecom Advisory Committee, I am quite familiar with the Bill and like the Minister, accept that we do have some changes, some amendments that will be made over time. It is a dynamic piece of legislation and it will be changing, and as was said earlier in our truly responsible and united fashion, it is not usual for us to speak too much from this side since it is a Government Motion. However, I would like to say that in regards to the statement made by the Member for East End, where he questioned the need for fifteen years, I too had a problem with the licences that were granted in the past; the one for CUC and the one for Cable and Wireless, but I would say to him, once again the United Democratic Party has taken care of that problem.

Personally now we can go out and seek even longer licences. I would prefer to see a thirty-year licence instead of a fifteen-year licence. My only problem with that is that it is not an exclusive licence. If we remove the exclusivity, it then means that if a company is not providing the quality of service or the cost effectiveness which we would require, the market is open for another company to come in to provide it. However, I would like for companies like Cable and Wireless or CUC to be willing to make the fifteen year or the thirty year commitments to the country.

Telecommunications is an expensive commodity. In the past if Cable and Wireless (I will use them as an example) made an investment in the new exchanges for $30 million with a depreciation time of five to seven years on that $30 million, or on that equipment, and during that time new technology became available, there really was not a lot of encouragement or impetus on their part to now devalue that equipment quicker and replace it with the newer technology. However, in the free market where we have competition allowed, if they are not providing the newer services and the best price possible, it will allow the opportunity for another company to come in and provide those services. So, very quickly, Cable and Wireless, or the existing company, will recognise the need in having to make the additional investment as required to provide the services that we as a people will demand.

So, I have no fear of the 15-year contracts; I have no fear of longer ones. I fully recognise that being a highly capital intensive industry the companies will want a guarantee for the recovery of their investment.

The only other point that needs clarification is the part where we talk about allowing competition and not allowing competition in specific areas. I am not sure exactly how the authority will decide to deal with that. What I will say, is that if we are going to actively encourage competition I do not think that we can do that by expecting a company which is coming in to do business now, to come in and do what Cable and Wireless has had thirty years to do. So, if we are now expecting that company to come in and provide the same services that have been developed over the lifetime that Cable and Wireless has had here, I think it would be quite limiting to the new companies that would be coming in.

I fully expect that the Government will be approached, and in many cases provide some new services which Cable and Wireless do not currently provide, or maybe some services that they feel can be competitive to Cable and Wireless. I think the people of Cayman will benefit from allowing that to happen, which is the purpose of this legislation. We do accept that Cable and Wireless has been expected to provide full telecommunications in conjunction with the agreements that they currently hold but I think that it is also fair to say that they have had thirty years to recoup that investment they have made.

Even though they have played a vital role, I do believe, that it is fair to say that they have been good to the Cayman Islands and the Cayman Islands have been good to them. Now that we are finally catching up to what has been going on in the other territories, I do think that we have to be careful as to how much of an advantage or debt we still feel that is owed to the incumbent company. I do feel that it is very possible, based on the economies of scale that do exist in Cayman, that if we are going to be actively attracting other competitors, we may have to start to make some changes and some concessions in very much the same way that we have had to do in other industries to attract competitive business here.

Take for example, in one of our Sister Islands where they are actively and aggressively seeking competition, they told the incumbent provider that they were not allowing them to do any price reductions, they were allowing them to introduce any new services; they were basically putting a limit to what they were doing now—to give the new players an opportunity to get established as well. Those are things that would have to be decided as we move forward. I think that this is the first step in a long process, but towards a very important and much needed goal. I do feel that with the unified approach of the United Democratic Party and with the additional support of the Opposition Members, I think that we are starting down a good path. I promise my continued support for this and any other legislation that will benefit the people of the Cayman Islands. Thank you, Madam Speaker.

The Speaker: Does any other Member wish to speak? Does any other Member wish to speak?

The Honourable Minister responsible for District Administration.

Hon. Gilbert A. McLean: Thank you, Madam Speaker.

I wish to make a brief contribution to the Bill, which is before the House to establish an information communications Technology Law, and to offer my congratulations to the Minister who has brought this piece of legislation. I think it is quite historical in that it is the first such comprehensive piece of legislation dealing with information, communication and technology, at this point in time.

We have in fact, I think, been ushered in to a modern time through this legislation. It has to some extent brought us in touch with the reality of the digital age where we have been lagging to quite an extent. It has also addressed the question of liberalisation, or in more layman's terms, making it possible that the Cayman Islands will no longer cater to one exclusive provider but will make room for others which may choose to come in to compete. Competition, I think is good in all spheres of commerce in this society and elsewhere, because for one thing, and perhaps this is the main reason, the average consumer gets a better deal. We normally find that prices are better, that is lower, where there is competition because if entities are offering more or less the same service the one that is likely to succeed is the one that offers the best service, in itself, along with the idea that it offers the best price.

I am not one who supports monopolies. I do not think monopolies are good for anything except it serves the purpose of the entity of the person who has the monopoly. I am personally glad to see this Bill in that it has also brought into play the opportunity to change the situation in that regard. Of course, it also opens the swear of being able to compete in the business of e-commerce, which everyone is talking about and attempting to get in on, and certainly, it is one of the areas that the Cayman Islands could make some strides in.

I too, can say that Cable and Wireless, when it first came to the Cayman Islands started out real small but it stayed within the country and it grew from stage to stage until it has reached where it presently is; a major company in the Cayman Islands, which has, at least in the past employed many, many Caymanians. Also, it has provided training for them. I think the company is to be complimented in what it has done in that particular regard. It has been quite outstanding with the training of Caymanians. The part that I do not fully understand is that after having trained them, in recent times most of them were laid off or terminated. For example, in the case of operators, I understand they will be laid off from the service they provided, which will be, as it is termed, 'outsourced'. So, it seems to me that while operators in Cayman will have their jobs terminated, it is a likelihood that people who work as operators in Jamaica will have a greater opportunity of finding jobs.

Madam Speaker, I trust as well, that the people who are qualified and have had their employment terminated will be given every opportunity to offer those skills as independent individuals or independent companies here on the Island. I have had representation made to me that what is happening in some instances here, is that the company is hiring persons from abroad to do some of the technical work that some of its former employees could do and are willing to do. How accurate that is, I am not certain, but it is something that I intend to try to find out more about.

Another point that I would like to make, and certainly, I believe, the Honourable Minister moving this Bill would have thought of that. While competition can cause a reduction in prices where people truly compete, one has to be ever mindful and ever watchful that there is no collusion among companies that could cause prices to remain the same or indeed, even to heighten. This is another aspect that I am sure would need to be watched very carefully. In this Bill three pieces of legislation has been subsumed, that is the Broadcasting Law, The Radio Law and the Telephone Law. It might be necessary at some point, in the not distant future, to ensure through Regulation, but I think more ideally through Law a few things which were addressed in some of these Laws are also included in this one. For example, in section 12, subsection (d) of the Broadcasting Law says: "It is the duty of a licensee to ensure that the programs broadcast by him include no discussions or debates where persons taking part express opinions or put forward arguments of a political character which are not properly balanced by other opinions;"

This, in my opinion, is extremely important and the equivalent of this particular section in the United States, I think, is called equal time. If I have five minutes on the television or the radio, giving my side of the story then an opposing view has the same right to expect that. I have gone through the Law generally and I do not really see this specific requirement under the licensing requirement where it would relate, for example, to television and to a radio station. So, it is small items like this but, which are very important, that as time goes by, we will have to look out and make sure these are indeed covered. However, I would never be one to advocate, that at this time, this Bill should be held up to ensure that this particular item is put back in there right now. It is so very important for this to move forward.

With the coming of this Bill before the House, I think that the Honourable Minister moving it has given just about all of us who are presently Members in this House, the opportunity of fulfilling a promise that all of us made to the electorate back in 2000, when all of us generally campaigned and said that we would work towards trying to see that the cost of telephone service was reduced; at least the opportunity now comes into play. Telecommunications! In general we are now looking in the particular Bill and telecommunications generally to see a reduction in those costs and fees. This Bill gives all of us that opportunity to play our part in keeping that promise.

The last point I wish to make is that while Cable and Wireless continues to be the only provider for telecommunication service in the Cayman Islands, presently, the government must ensure, and I repeat that, it must ensure that any dues or fees owed to the government are paid. Whether this is ensured through negotiation or via legal means, that part of the contract also has to be balanced. That makes sure, again, that the people of the country are protected. They are those whom we serve and also the businesses, which contribute by also using telecommunications. Particularly at this stage when revenue in the government is so difficult to find to meet the needs of the country in general, this is a matter which we must insist upon; payment of any monies which may be due and paid in due time.

I believe that today is indeed a historical moment and, as it appears to me, this Bill has the general approval and consent of the whole House and I think, that is good in itself. I think that it shows a spirit of co-operation in more ways than one, in that the Honourable Minister has taken into account points made by the Opposition side, as well, and will be incorporating these into amendments at Committee Stage. I am pleased, Madam Speaker, in fact I am delighted to be in a position today to support and vote for this Bill, which is before the House. Thank you.

The Speaker: Thank you. Does any other Member wish to speak?

The Second Elected Member from the district of George Town.

Mr. Alden M. McLaughlin, Jr.: Thank you, Madam Speaker, for this opportunity to offer a few comments on the Information and Communications Technology Bill, 2002.

I should preface what I say by acknowledging the able, articulate and very careful analysis to which this Bill was treated by my good friend the Elected Member from East End who spoke on behalf of the five Members of the Opposition, as the Opposition chief spokesman on this important Bill. It is only as a result of some further thought that I have been designated to offer a few more observations in relation to other sections of the Bill with which he did not deal. So, I will not be rehearsing anything he said nor will I be dealing with sections which he has dealt with and that should shorten considerably what I have to say.

Before I go into the Bill itself, I just thought I should say something in relation to a few of the remarks made by the Fourth Elected Member for West Bay, particularly, in relation to his stated surprise that this Bill, in general terms, has the support of the Opposition. I suspect that it is simply a bit of political gamesmanship and that the stated surprise is in fact feigned surprise. Because, as Chairman of the ICT Committee, the Fourth Elected Member for West Bay knows full well that the prospect of liberalisation of information technology and communication technology in these Islands, was supported by every Member who sits on this side of this Honourable House. Indeed, both the Elected Member for East End and myself, were members of that committee, so I think, Madam Speaker, that the Fourth Elected Member for West Bay was simply playing the political game when he made those remarks.

He also noted that he would not expect such support to be generally forthcoming from the Opposition, but let me disabuse that Honourable Member and anyone else who shares his jaundice view of the Opposition. We have supported the Animals Law, which passed this Honourable House, this Meeting. We have supported the amendment to the Immigration Law and we are supporting this particular Bill. We have in each instance treated each of those Bills to careful analysis and offered constructive criticism of specific sections, with which we felt there might be some problems. In almost every instance thus far, the Honourable Minister responsible has taken on board those comments. That is the role and it is important that the Fourth Elected Member for West Bay understand the role of the Opposition, to offer constructive criticisms and that is why we get so upset when, as has happened in the recent past, attempts are made, we believe, to stifle our ability to make that kind of contribution.

The Members on this side of the Floor; the Members of Her Majesty's most loyal Opposition in the Cayman Islands, understand our role. We exercise it responsibly even in the face of attempts to prevent us from so doing. So, as I have had to deal with the Fourth Elected Member for West Bay and to, as I said, disabuse him of certain views he has, I believe I have now done that and I can turn my attention to the substantive Bill.

I would like to draw to the attention of all Members, section 23 of the Bill which deals with licensing. Section 23(1) reads as follows: "(1) The Authority may grant licences in accordance with the provisions of this Law."

Subsection 2: "(2) The Authority, by notice published in the Gazette, shall specify the ICT services and ICT networks that are required to be licensed."

And Subsection 3: "(3) Where a licence is required under this Law, no person shall a) establish or operate an ICT network; or b) provide any ICT service; without a current licence in respect of such network or service."

Section 74 (1) goes on to repeal the Broadcasting Law, the Radio Law and the Telephone Law. The effect of which will be, that upon passage of this legislation those laws will fall away. The difficulty I have seen with section 23, which deals with the licensing provisions, is that it does not say which licenses are required nor does it say what ICT services and ICT networks require licensing. The intention of this section is that the Authority, by notice, published in the gazette shall specify the ICT services and the ICT networks that are required to be licensed. So, upon passage of the Bill that will not have happened and arguably we will have a situation where there is a lacuna, a period when it is possible to argue that no one requires a licence to operate these particular ICT services.

If the services to be licensed are to be decided upon by the Authority, and then published in the Gazette, that has not happened at the passage of the law of this particular Bill. However, the laws which currently exist to regulate communication, broadcasting, telephone and so on, are repealed as a result of this, there is in effect no provision in any legislation which would then be operative; which would govern the licensing of these various services. So, Madam Speaker, I would draw that to the Honourable Minister's attention because I am certain that it cannot be the intention of the Government to create a legislative loophole that could possibly permit persons to operate an ICT network and provide ICT services without being required to have a license. I know that is not the intention and that is why I am bringing it to the Honourable Minister's attention, so that a means can be found to plug this loop hole, if he agrees with me that it is such a loop hole, prior to the passage of this Bill.

While I am dealing with this question of licenses, section 75 (3) provides that: "The Minister may, where the Authority has not been established at the date of the commencement of this Law and until such time as the Board may specify by resolution, have the power to issue any concession, licence or authorisation which the Authority is empowered by this Law to issue; and the Governor in Council may, for such period of time as it shall determine, appoint such persons as it considers necessary to assist the Minister in carrying out such functions."

So, what the Bill contemplates is that up to the point where the Authority becomes established and able to issue licenses, that the Minister may do so. However, that does not meet the point which I just raised Madam Speaker. In my view, the point is that when we repeal the Broadcasting Law, the Telephone Law the Radio Law, there will be no requirement until the Authority has actually published in the Gazette the ICT services and the ICT networks which are required to be licensed. There will be no requirement for any of these services to be licensed, so there is a void or a lacuna created upon the passage of this Bill. While I am on this point, I truly believe that it is an unsatisfactory situation to give the Minister (and this is a separate point) the responsibility and the authority to issue licenses.

I understand the objective because it is obviously recognised that there is going to be some time before the passage of this Bill and the establishment of the Authority, where the Authority will be in a position to be able to administer effectively the responsibilities that it is given under this particular Bill. It goes against the grain, certainly with me, for the Minister, whoever that Minister may be, to have the ability to issue licenses, concessions and authorisations, which this legislation clearly intends for the Authority to do. I believe, that this particular provision, while I fully understand why it is there, undermines the regulatory framework for licensing, which is the clear intent of the Bill and that is that licensing is a matter within the purview of the Authority, not the Minister. I believe that framework is necessary for very sound reasons.

It is, in my respectful view, to ensure that the granting of licenses does not become politicised and to ensure that the process of the issue of licenses is and is seen to be transparent and politically independent. This pertains not just to Telecommunications Licences but equally as importantly to Broadcasting Licences.

So, I believe that if the Bill is to be passed with this section remaining in it, that it is of critical importance that the Authority is established quickly and is able very soon to be able to assume this very critical responsibility. Indeed, it is perhaps arguable that we should have had an Authority prepared, if not running, at the passage of this Bill so that immediately upon this Bill becoming law that Authority would become vested with the powers that it is intended it should be vested with under this Law. It should therefore be able to administer the functions and responsibilities which are contemplated under this particular Bill. Again, I bring this to the Honourable Minister's attention.

Section 53—I think the Honourable Minister has recognised that there are some difficulties with this. I recall him alluding to some potential problems with section 53 (1) in particular, when he was introducing the Bill. Section 53 (1) provides that "Subject to the provisions of subsection (2), a person who intentionally intercepts, alters, replicates, monitors or interrupts any message (whether in whole or in part) during its transmission over an ICT network or by means of an ICT service by any means is guilty of an offence and liable for each such message—" Following are the fines of $10 thousand, $20 thousand et cetera, and imprisonment.

Subsection 2, "A person shall not be guilty of an offence under this section if- a) the message is intercepted, monitored or interrupted in obedience to a warrant issued by the Governor under section 55;"

Obviously section 53 (2) (a) would have to be amended and I believe the Honourable Minister has given an indication that he intends to do that at Committee Stage.

- a) the message is required to be intercepted, monitored or interrupted pursuant to a court order;
- b) the person by whom the message is sent or to whom the message is sent has expressly consented to the interception, monitoring or interruption;
- c) the message is intercepted, monitored or interrupted by the Authority for purposes connected with the execution of its functions under this Law;
- d) the message is intercepted, monitored or interrupted solely for the purpose of preserving the technical integrity of an ICT service or ICT network; or
- e) the message is intended to be received by the public".

Now, as I see it, the effect of section 53 (1) would make it an offence for any person, and that, I believe, would include the ICT provider itself, to intentionally intercept, alter, replicate, monitor or interrupt a message. I believe that section, as it stands, is problematic because it is bound to be necessary for service providers to monitor or interrupt message at some time during the transmission to be able to detect or investigate fraud, unauthorised access or unauthorised usage of the ICT service. Indeed, it is also bound to be necessary to be able to maintain the quality of that particular service or of the ICT network. There will be occasions when intentional interruption by the service provider is necessary to enable them to alter whatever infrastructure they have in place to be able to improve coverage, efficiency, quality, functionality of that particular service.

My reading of the exception (e), which I believe is intended to deal with these sorts of situations where the service provider finds it necessary to interrupt or monitor a message, does not quite go far enough; is not broad enough to cover the kinds of matters which I just referred to. What subsection (2)(e) deals with is the provision that an individual will not be guilty of an offence under this section if the message is interrupted, monitored or intercepted solely for the purpose of preserving the technical integrity of an ICT service or an ICT network. Doing things like upgrading, monitoring, interrupting or intercepting a service so that you can detect whether or not there has been fraud or unauthorised usage of it, I do not believe are covered within that particular exception. I also do not believe that it is the intention of Government to impose a criminal sanction upon a licensee in those circumstances (that is when a licensee interrupts the transmission for the purposes of upgrading or altering its network infrastructure). My reading of the section is that such interruption would amount to an offence against that section. Again, I draw that to the Honourable Minister's attention for consideration and if he is in agreement with me, I believe that the necessary amendments could be made during the Committee Stage of the Bill.

This same section, section 53 (1), on my reading of it, would appear to make it illegal for a licensee to monitor messages on its network in order to detect the various forms of network abuse, such as what is commonly called 'spamming'. Again, I do not believe that could be the intention of that particular legislation. I know that section 67 of the Law does impose criminal sanction on any person who knowingly uses an ICT network or ICT service to defraud, abuse, annoy, threaten or harass any other person, but that is an ability which is limited to prosecution through the court system. Madam Speaker, I believe, as has been the case in many other liberalised jurisdictions, that it should be possible for the telecommunication provider themselves to be able to detect and prevent these various forms of network abuse without falling fowl of the Bill, section 53 (1).

I note that while the Law provides for the licensing of ICT networks or ICT services that the Law itself does not deal with the question of fees, which is not unusual because the fees are usually included in the regulations. However, it would have been preferable if, at this stage, Honourable Members of this House could have been made aware of the proposed fee structure. I am inviting the Honourable Minister to deal with this if he possibly could in his reply in due course.

Those are really the key points which we felt we should draw to the attention of the Honourable House and, in particular, the Honourable Minister, in addition to the points raised by the Elected Member from East End in his very valuable contribution. Again, I can say on behalf of all Members of the Opposition, we have always supported the key objects of this Bill to replace the existing Telephone, Radio and Broadcasting Laws with modern legislation, and to establish an independent regulatory authority to enable the introduction of competition for the provision of ICT services and ICT networks, and to protect the interest of consumers.

As other Members have alluded to, this Bill has been in the offing almost since we were all elected to this Honourable House. It is one of those matters that while Honourable Members may have some differing views on the detail of the legislation, conceptually we are all committed to. Indeed, I believe, even the monopoly (Cable and Wireless) have publicly stated their commitment to the prospect of liberalisation. I believe it is in the overall best interest of these Islands that we do have competition in Information, Communications Technology. I trust that the contribution of the Opposition in this regard will find favour with the Honourable Minister. I can say to him, Madam Speaker, that he has our full support and co-operation in working out whatever quirks that might arise as a result of observations of ourselves or indeed, any other Honourable Member of this House.

I thank you, Madam Speaker.

The Speaker: Thank you. Does any other Member wish to speak?

The Honourable Leader.

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: Thank you, Madam Speaker.

Before I begin I want to alert Members that we intend to finish the Second Reading debate on this Bill today and to further take the Committee Stages when we come back. We propose to adjourn today and come back week after next. I think it is the 18 March and we would then finish the business on the Order Paper at that time. Some Ministers have to be away on official duty and other Members have to be away for other matters and therefore, we thought it prudent not to try to meet next week.

I rise to support the Bill and specifically to congratulate the Honourable Minister. I know that he has had many headaches on this matter; has put in many, many long hours into the Bill before us. He has worked tirelessly to get to this point. For many years, ever since I have been in this Honourable House, the public has asked to redress when it comes to certain monopolies in the country and this is a step in that direction. The proposed legislation provides for modern Information and Communications Technology services and network to these Islands, something that is very much needed as legislation is outdated, outmoded and in many instances, do not confirm to the times that we live in. Under this legislation, standards would be set as to the services offered by companies by the public, so it is a protection to the people of these Islands. It makes it possible that complaints against a company would have to be taken seriously.

I find it very, very satisfying indeed, that we can come to this point today - because as I said, ever since being in this legislature, and this is my fifth term, legislators are bombarded with complaints and all we can do is go to some desk of some company and sort of beg for mercy. Under this legislation the complaints would have to be taken seriously. The legislation breaks up the monopoly existing today, and because this Law will be put in place, the Treasury of this country will get more revenue because of expansion through competition. Members have mentioned and named companies and I can say that Cable and Wireless has done a tremendous job over the many years it has existed in this country.

I see the Opposition perking up. I do not know what he wants, but if he has something to say further he should really stand up and say it.

Anyway, that company has performed well and I offer them thanks because many people have received training, benefits and otherwise over the many years. However, it comes a time when we have to do what is best for the country as a whole, and breaking up the monopoly is best for the country.

Members have talked about the Authority; that will come in due course. We hope that they will support it when it comes. We are not here to support any one company and I am not going to talk out of both sides of my mouth. We are here to do what is best for all the people of these Islands because that is whom we represent.

So, this is the work of the United Democratic Party and we thank all those persons who have been involved and has made a contribution to get what I think is a good piece of legislation; modern legislation that any progressive country needs. We can find fault with anything that comes before the House and we can nit pick and pick and pick. What is important is that the Minister carried through on a piece of legislation that is needed, and no matter how much the Opposition say they are constructive, the fact is the United Democratic Party has fulfilled a need.

The Second Elected Member from George Town talked about how responsible they are. I do not know if we can call it that. I hear them putting credit in one pocket and taking it out of the next - on the other side over there, but that is what an Opposition is used to do. Their performance has been atrocious really, in this House, and has been so to the point that they voted against money for schools, for Social Services, for children in need; that is irresponsibility; that is not being constructive. So, we thank them for their 'tongue in cheek' support. I believe that the country will be much better with the legislation. It is a good modern piece of legislative work and I congratulate the Minister. Thank you.

The Speaker: Does any other Member wish to speak? Does any other Member wish to speak? If not, would the Honourable Minister wish to exercise his right of reply?

Hon. Linford A. Pierson: Thank you, Madam Speaker.

First I wish to thank all Honourable Members who spoke on this Bill; all of whom have given their support to the Bill. I want to thank particularly the Member for East End for the detailed summary he gave of the Bill. I wondered for a minute whether he was not somewhat connected with Cable and Wireless but I know that is not the case. [laughter] However, I must say that the points he raised were some valid points. Also it is the intention, as can be seen, by the committee stage amendments that some of the points he made will be incorporated into the Bill during the Committee Stage.

I also thank the Second Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman. I was particularly grateful to him for raising the point in regard to the advent of the Brac Informatic Centre. He is correct in stating that the Brac Informatic Centre promises to boost the economy of the Brac. It is necessary to have in place this legislation because it is under this legislation that the necessary agreement between the Brac Informatic Centre and Government will be drawn up. There is no question that it is hoped and expected that the telecommunications costs will be reduced as a result of possible competition following liberalisation. Also to congratulate the owners and operators of the Brac Informatic Centre who are all Caymanians, or more specifically, Brackers.

I will come back to the points raised by the Honourable Member for East End. I want to sincerely thank the Fourth Elected Member for West Bay for his kind remarks and the points which he raised during his contribution. I also want to thank him for the sterling job he did as Chairman of the Telecommunication Advisory Committee. Indeed, it was through that committee that we were able to tackle some of the very technical issues in regards to the Telecommunications Bill.

This morning during the presentation of the Bill I did in fact, thank all the individuals who had been involved. Madam Speaker, I would be remised if I did not make a special mention of the gentleman who has taken this Bill from the initial stages to where we are now and who I expect will carry it through even when we have an ICT Authority established. That gentleman is Mr. Dave Archibald who is the Director of the Information Telecommunication Strategy Unit. I want to thank him most sincerely because he has worked very long and tireless hours at bringing this to the point where it is at present.

The Honourable Minister responsible for Health Services, District Administration and Agriculture, my gracious thanks to him for his support. He has been a very strong colleague on the Executive Council and otherwise, even when he was on the Back Bench he offered some very, very good suggestions to this Honourable House and I want to thank him for the support that he has given on this piece of legislation. I was most touched when he mentioned that today is an historical moment and this is indeed true.

I want to thank all Honourable Members; those who have spoken on this Bill, and through their tacit support have given their approval. Also the Second Elected Member for George Town for his support on this Bill. He has raised a number of very interesting points in regard to the point he made under section 53(1). I would just like to make a comment that it is the view - and I have not yet discussed this with my Legislative Colleagues, but it is the view that service providers should not have the discretion to interrupt a transmission due mainly to a perception or a belief that a criminal offence has been committed. This indeed must be the work for the Police and the Police to the Governor who has the power under the Constitution to provide the necessary authority for this matter to be investigated, as the person with the reserve powers for the national security of these Islands. However, in regards to 53 (1)(e) I believe that provision is already there to protect service providers in respect of technical and other similar difficulties which they may experience. We have another chance to deal with this and in Committee Stage this matter can be further discussed.

In regards to the comments made by the Elected Member for East End, in his support for this Bill, I want to thank him again for his remarks. He expressed the hope that Government would accept his comments as being constructive, and indeed we do, in most of them. The first point raised by the Honourable Member concerned is the possible relationship between a Utilities Commission and the ICT Authority. As he is aware my Ministry has only recently assumed responsibility for CUC and water is the responsibility for my Honourable colleague the Minister for Community Services, Youth and Women's Affairs. I therefore, cannot yet give a definitive answer on this particular point to the Honourable Member.

There are certainly a number of possibilities that we can consider. There may be sufficient similarity between the roles of the ICT Authority and the Public Utilities Commission for the two functions to be combined. On the other hand, the required specialist expertise might be sufficiently different for the two organisations to co-exist; it is too early to say. In the short term there is no doubt that the ICT Authority will be fully occupied dealing with telecommunications and it would be a mistake to distract them by giving them responsibility for the regulation of other business sectors.

The Elected Member for East End then referred to a number of clauses in the Bill where the term 'Governor' is used and he felt that 'Governor in Council' would be more appropriate. They are as follows:

In clause 17 concerning the repayment of advances there are two references to 'Governor' and we agree that both should be amended to read 'Governor in Council'.

The references to 'Governor' in clause 31(2), 32(2) and 33(2) concerning modification, suspension and revocation of licenses for reasons of security of the Islands are correct as security of the Islands is a reserved power of the Governor.

We also believe that it is appropriate for these provisions to be spelt out in the law so that potential, new ICT Network and Service Providers clearly understand the position. I have already intimated that I would be bringing an amendment to delete clause 55.

There will be the following consequential amendments to clauses 53(2) and 54(3).

Clause 53(2) a), should be amended to read: 'the message is intercepted, monitored or interrupted in obedience to a warrant or other order issued by the Governor'. Again, he would be the person responsible for this under his reserved power under the Constitution.

Clause 53(2) (b) should be deleted.

Clause 53(2) will then be renumbered.

Clause 54(3) (e) should be amended to read: 'any disclosure which is made in obedience to a warrant or order issued by the Governor.'

In clause 70 (1), it is agreed that the word 'Governor' should be replaced by 'Governor in Council'. In addition it is proposed to amend clause 70 (1) (b) to delete the words 'authorising or', as 'authorising the bringing of, criminal proceedings' which is clearly the responsibility of the Honourable Attorney General who is the Second Official Member of this Government.

As I have already intimated, clause 76 is the subject of a committee stage amendment. This amendment will resolve the issue raised by the Honourable Member from East End concerning the existing references to Governor in sub-clauses 1 and 2 of the current version.

Turning now to the Member's other comments (the Member for East End) when he raised the issue of the temporary powers given to the Minister in clause 76(3), to issue licences until the ICT Authority is fully established. This matter was also commented on by the Second Elected Member for George Town. As I explained in my earlier remarks, this is necessary so that essential licences, such as those issues for radios in ships and aircraft, can continue to be processed. As a matter of fact I do this at present, but these matters are taken to Executive Council for approval and will be continued to be done in that manner. These functions are currently performed, as I said, by my Ministry and so the provision merely allows the current arrangements to continue until the Board of the ICT Authority confirms that it is ready to take over.

It is Government's intention that the ICT Authority should be established as quickly as possible. However, it is clearly impractical for them to be fully operational on the day that the new Law is passed. It should also be noted that the decision on when the Authority is ready to assume these responsibilities has been given to the Board of the Authority, not to the Ministry.

I believe the Honourable Member from East End may have misunderstood the provisions on universal service. If and when these provisions have been brought into effect it is indeed the intent that all providers in the same category should be treated equally. I believe his concerns will be fully alleviated once the categories are published by the Authority. The Honourable Member also made reference to the many different types of ICT Networks and Service Providers that will be licensed under this Law. We should be clear that the form and content of such licences will be quite different for each type.

The Member for East End could not find references to fees for the renewal of licences. This is covered satisfactorily in clauses 26(1) and 30.

Clause 28 refers to a maximum term for a licence and there may indeed be circumstances where the level of investment required justifies this length of licence. In response to his concerns, I would point out that non exclusive licences do not prevent other companies with newer technology from being licensed, and that if a licensee is not fulfilling the terms of his license, the Authority has the power to suspend or revoke that license at any time.

In clause 45 (5), I accept the Honourable Member's suggestion that the imposition of an interconnection rate should be a decision of Executive Council rather than the Minister and I propose such an amendment.

The details of the register of applications and licences mentioned in clause 34 will be specified and regulations prepared by the Authority. The intention is to be as transparent as possible.

The Elected Member for East End's observation concerning clause 35 about appeals against the decisions of the Authority with respect to cease and desist orders, I agree that it would be preferable to make specific provision for appeal to the court rather than depend upon judicial review. I therefore propose that clause 57 be amended to include a decision following review of the cease and desist orders.

Finally, with respect to clause 44 and refusal to provide interconnection, I would point out that the opening words of this clause are subject to the provisions of this section. I believe this answers the Honourable Member's concerns.

There will have to be certain consequential amendments to the numbering of some of the clauses due to the amendments that have been made, and in the usual fashion in committee stage, I am sure as Chairman you will no doubt invite the Second Official Member to act accordingly.

On the question of definitions the Member for East End had a concern about the difference between the meaning of deregulation and liberalisation. I can only say that a very short definition that I have come up with might satisfy his concern. Deregulation is the removal of regulations and restrictions. The result of which is liberalisation and this in turn leads to the introduction of competition.

I wish to also emphasise that transitional arrangements do not result in an automatic termination of the Cable and Wireless contract, but allow this to happen as soon as negotiations have been completed and that is spelt out also in the Bill.

As mentioned earlier there are 3 committee stage amendments. These have been circulated to Honourable Members.

I also take note that the Honourable Second Elected Member for George Town had raised a problem with clause 23, which he stated, poses some difficulty as it does not say which licenses or what ICT Network Services require licensing. This matter will certainly be given further attention, in particular during the committee stage of the Bill.

The Speaker: Honourable Minister we have reached the hour of interruption. If it is your intention to shortly conclude I will exercise my discretion not to have the interruption motion at this time but to allow you to continue.

Hon. Linford A. Pierson: Yes, Madam Speaker, I should be through in five minutes.

The Speaker: Please continue.

Hon. Linford A. Pierson: Thank you, Madam Speaker.

I would just like to quickly run through the notice of the committee stage amendment. It states that clause 76 be numbered as clause 75 and that such clause be amended by deleting sub-clauses 1 and 2 and by substituting the following: 75(1) any licenses or other enabling instruments issued to any person to provide any aspects of ICT Services or ICT Networks in the Islands in which are valid immediately before the commencement of this Law, shall continue to remain enforced and in effect and shall authorise the continued ownership and operation of the ICT Services and ICT Networks provided under such licenses or enabling instruments until 31 December 2002 or such later date as the Governor in Council may specify by notice published in the Gazette, and that clause 76 (now clause 75) be renumbered accordingly.

These other two Bills are somewhat lengthy. They have been circulated to Honourable Members and they will have sufficient time to study these. As I understand it, it is not the intention to deal with this until we return in a weeks' time, which will be on the 18 March.

I wish to thank you and all Honourable Members for their support of this most important Bill. Thank you.

The Speaker: Thank you, Honourable Minister. The question is that a bill shortly entitled the Information and Communications Technology Authority Bill 2002, be given a second reading. All those in favour please say Aye. Those against, No.

Ayes.

The Speaker: The Ayes have it.

Agreed: The Information and Communications Technology Authority Bill 2002 has been given a second reading.

The Speaker: I will now call upon the Honourable Leader of Government Business to move the motion for the adjournment.

ADJOURNMENT

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: Madam Speaker, we move the adjournment of this Honourable House until 10 am Monday, 18 March 2002.

The Speaker: Thank you, the question is that the Honourable House do now adjourn until Monday, 18 March 2002 at 10 am. All those in favour please say Aye. Those against, No.

Ayes.

The Speaker: The Ayes have it. The Honourable House now stands adjourn until 18 March 2002 at 10 am.

At 4.36 pm the House stood adjourned until Monday, 18 March 2002, at 10.00 am.

OFFICIAL HANSARD REPORTMONDAY*18 MARCH 2002

10.30 AM

Twelfth Sitting

The Speaker: I would invite the First Official Member to say prayers. The Elected Member from Cayman Brac was to say it but he is presently escorting His Excellency, the Governor.

to acknowledge and welcome the presence of His Excellency the Governor, Mr. Peter Smith.

PRAYERS

Hon. James M. Ryan: Let us pray:

Almighty God, from whom all wisdom and power are derived: we beseech Thee so to direct and prosper the deliberations of the Legislative Assembly now assembled, that all things may be ordered upon the best and surest foundations for the glory of Thy Name and for the safety honour and welfare of the people of these Islands.

Bless our Sovereign Lady Queen Elizabeth II, the Queen Mother, Philip Duke of Edinburgh, Charles Prince of Wales and all the Royal family. Give grace to all who exercise authority in our Commonwealth, that peace and happiness, truth and justice, religion and piety may be established among us. Especially we pray for the Governor of our Islands, the Speaker of the Legislative Assembly, Official Members and Ministers of Executive Council and Members of the Legislative Assembly that we may be enabled faithfully to perform the responsible duties of our high office. All this we ask for Thy great Name's sake.

Let us say the Lord's Prayer together:

Our Father who art in Heaven, Hallowed be Thy Name. Thy Kingdom come, Thy will be done in earth, as it is in Heaven. Give us this day our daily bread, and forgive us our trespasses, as we forgive those who trespass against us. And lead us not into temptation, but deliver us from evil: For Thine is the Kingdom, the power and the glory, forever and ever. Amen.

The Lord bless and keep us. The Lord make His face shine upon us and be gracious unto us. The Lord lift up the light of His countenance upon us and give us peace now and always. Amen.

Obituary

Captain Mabry Kirkconnell, OBE, JP

The Speaker: Honourable Members by now you would have all heard of the sudden passing of the late Honourable Captain Mabry Kirkconnell—our friend, our colleague and past Speaker of this Honourable House. Captain Mabry was a man who, in my view, pressed towards the mark for the prize of the high calling of God in Christ Jesus, and now that death; man's final enemy has come, Captain Mabry can surely say: 'Oh death where is thy sting; oh grave where is thy victory'. I believe that Captain Mabry would have also related to the words penned by Lord Alfred Tennyson in his poem: 'Crossing At the Bar' which reads:

“Sunset and Evening star,
One clear call for me!
And may there be no moaning of the bar,
When I put out to sea,
But such a tide as moving seems asleep,
Too full for sound and foam,
When that which drew out
From the boundless deep
Turns again home.
Twilight and evening bell,
And after that the dark!
And may there be no sadness of farewell when I embark;
For, thought from out our bourne of time and place
The flood may bear me far,
I hope to see my Pilot face to face
When I have crossed the bar.”

Captain Mabry was first elected in 1980 as a representative of Cayman Brac and Little Cayman and served in this capacity until November 2000. In 1986 he took on the additional functions of the high office of Speaker for this Parliament and continued doing so until his retirement on the 14 November last year. In November 1996, the beloved people of Cayman Brac and Little Cayman gave the late Captain Mabry and me, the distinctive honour of being their representatives and that afforded me with an opportunity to work professionally with him.

During his term of service we had an opportunity to have many discussions, negotiations, private talks, dreams, and we shared many stories of how the Brac and Little Cayman experienced many political and economic battles, yet somehow survived. So many times we took the flight together to and from the Brac in order to serve our people. At times when the flight was late and we were weary from a long adversarial day in Parliament, it was not unusual for us to catch a quick nod in the quiet corner of the Airport or to be greatly disappointed when a flight was cancelled, which left us feeling cheated because we would not be able to spend a planned weekend in our constituency, with our people in the Brac and Little Cayman.

As fate would have it, I went to the Brac a few weeks ago for a couple of hours to make a dental appointment, and after completing that appointment I learned that Captain Mabry was quite ill at the Faith Hospital. He was scheduled to leave the Brac that afternoon on Air Ambulance to Florida, in order to seek desperate medical attention. I immediately walked across to the Hospital to visit Captain Mabry. The Doctor on duty said that I could have but a quick visit because he was very tired and needed to rest before embarking on a journey to Florida. I am indeed grateful to Dr. Grant for allowing me that opportunity to spend a quiet moment with Captain Mabry. Since hearing of his death the memories that afternoon have played and replayed in my mind ever so vividly. I can almost see him now in response to his wife telling him that I was there, slowly coming out of the bathroom combing his hair, holding his bath robe securely, as it was always important for him to put the best foot forward. He made his way to the bed and slowly sat down and we exchanged greetings. When I was ready to leave I joined hands with Captain Mabry and his dear wife, Marilyn, and prayed with them. We hugged, I kissed him on the forehead and said goodbye. Little did I know then that that occasion would be the last moments that we would share together as friends, as Brackers and as colleagues. I thank Almighty God for affording me that wonderful experience and opportunity.

Captain Mabry, has no doubt by his way of life, shared many instructions on life with all of us here in this Honourable House. Yes, I believe that he would have also related to the dilemma instructions of life, and so I read:

- 1) Take into account that great love and great achievements involve great risk.
- 2) When you lose, do not lose the lesson.
- 3) Follow the three Rs – respect for self; respect for others; responsibility for all your actions.
- 4) Remembering that not getting what you want is sometimes a wonderful stroke of luck.

- 5) Do not let a little dispute injure a great relationship.
- 6) When you realise that you have made a mistake take immediate steps to correct it.
- 7) Spend some time alone everyday.
- 8) Open your arms to change but do not let go of your values.
- 9) Remember that silence is sometimes the best answer.
- 10) Live a good honourable life that when you get older and have some time to think back you will be able to enjoy it a second time.
- 11) A loving atmosphere in your home is the foundation for your life.
- 12) In disagreements with loved ones deal only with the current situation and do not bring up the past.
- 13) Share your knowledge. It is the way to achieve immortality.
- 14) Once a year, go some place that you have never been before and remember that the best relationship is one in which your love for others exceeds your need for each other.
- 15) Judge your success by what you had to give up, in order to get it.

On behalf of all Honourable Members of this Legislative Assembly, I wish now to convey the words of the poet, Emily Matthew to Mrs. Marilyn Kirkconnell and the other members of the family of the late Honourable Captain Mabry Kirkconnell:

“As You Face This Challenge
Listen for God’s Voice,
When you face this challenge
Or you need to make a choice,
Just say a prayer to God
Above and listen to His voice.
The voice of God that gives us
Hope and guides us through the days,
Is still small and comes to us
In countless different ways.
It may be in a song we have heard
A hundred times or more,
Or in a smile from someone
Whom we have never seen before;
It may be in sunshines warm
Or in a work of art,
But most of all and perhaps best of all,
We feel it in our hearts”.

We here in the Cayman Islands Parliament hope that God will especially be close to all of his family during this time and that he will give them all the answers they need just now.

As virtuous men pass mildly away and whisper to their souls to go, so let us melt and make no noise, no tear floods nor size tempest move.

I now call on each Honourable Member to rise with me as we observe a moment of silence to show our love and respect for the late Honourable Captain Mabry Kirkconnell.

[Moment of silence]

The Speaker: Thank you. As I understand it Honourable Members, tomorrow the late Honourable Captain Mabry would have been celebrating his 71st birthday. At this time I would like to light a scented candle in his memory and would ask that the Serjeant-at-Arms ensures that each morning the candle is rekindled until it burns out. As the sweet smelling aroma rises in this Parliament may we reflect on the time spent together with our colleague and friend. May we all work together towards receiving a crown of righteousness and celestial eternal life when we come to cross our bar. May his soul rest in peace.

Please be seated. I have also been asked by a member of the staff namely, Mrs. Tania Connolly, to read the following tribute:

“TO ONE WHO WILL LONG BE REMEMBERED

This morning my thoughts and prayers are with the loved ones of Captain Mabry Kirkconnell—especially his wife, Mrs. Marilyn Kirkconnell and adopted daughter, Otellia. I trust that they will draw comfort from cherished memories. May God who always knows best give them the strength they need to cope with their loss.

Captain Mabry was a man I held in high esteem. I found him to be a very kind man, a wise man, a Christian man and a gentleman in every sense of the word. He certainly made a deep impression on my mind and I, along with many other persons, will miss him greatly. May his soul rest in peace”.

I should also wish to seek the permission of all Honourable Members for their approval for me to present and to give to the wife of the late Captain Mabry Kirkconnell the ceremonial robe and wig. All those in favour please say Aye. Those against, No.

Ayes.

The Speaker: The Ayes have it. I shall do so on your behalf.

Honourable Leader of Government Business perhaps we should take a suspension at this time.

Agreed: Speaker’s ceremonial wig and robe to be presented to Mrs. Kirkconnell

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: Yes, Madam Speaker, we propose to take a break at this time so that this Honourable Legislature can receive the Constitutional report brought here by His Excellency the Governor. We propose to meet with him and we propose to return after that meeting.

The Speaker: The House will be accordingly suspended. I should not give a time except to say until the meeting has concluded with his Excellency and all Honourable Members.

Proceedings suspended at 10.46 am

Proceedings resumed at 11.45 am

The Speaker: Please be seated.

PRESENTATION OF PAPERS
AND OF REPORTS

Constitutional Commissioners Report

The Speaker: The Honourable First Official Member.

Hon. James M. Ryan: Madam Speaker, I beg to lay on the Table of this Honourable House the Report of The Constitutional Commissioners on the review of the Cayman Islands Constitution commissioned by His Excellency the Governor on 15 June 2001.

The Speaker: So ordered.

Does the Honourable First Official Member wish to speak thereto?

Hon. James M. Ryan: No, Madam Speaker.

The Speaker: Thank you.

Honourable Leader of Government Business.

Motion to Defer Debate on the Constitutional Commissioners Report

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: Thank you, Madam Speaker.

As agreed by all Honourable Members of this House, I will move that the Report of the Constitutional Modernisation Review be debated and, if agreed upon, adopted on 15 April 2002. Madam Speaker, I will give notice that at that time I will formally move the Motion.

The Speaker: Honourable Leader, is it the intention for the questioning to be put when you formally move the Motion for the substantive and to put the deferral at this time?

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: Yes, Madam Speaker.

The Speaker: The question is that the debate on the Constitutional Report be deferred and, if approved, for adoption on the 15 April 2002.

All those in favour please say Aye. Those against, No.

Ayes.

The Speaker: The Ayes have it.

Agreed: That the debate on the Constitutional Commissioners Report be deferred and, if agreed upon, adopted on 15 April 2002.

STATEMENTS BY MEMBERS OF THE GOVERNMENT

IMB Audit Consultants

The Speaker: I now call upon the Honourable Minister responsible for Education.

Hon. Roy Bodden: Thank you, Madam Speaker.

What I have this morning is not so much a statement as it is an invitation to all Honourable Members. Madam Speaker, you and all other Honourable Members might recall me making a statement earlier that it was the intention of the Ministry of Education to pursue an Information and Communications Technology audit with IBM. I am happy to report this morning that for several days now the IBM team has been in the Cayman Islands and has been conducting this audit. I have extended an invitation to Mr. Bob Gin and other team members to meet with Honourable Members today at 2 o'clock in the Committee room and I have received permission from you, Madam Speaker, for us to use this time and the facilities to so do.

I am extending this invitation now formally to all Honourable Members to join us in the Committee room at 2 o'clock this afternoon. At that time Honourable Members can meet the members of the technical audit team and the consultants from IBM when they have arrived here to pay a courtesy call on us, the Members of the Legislative Assembly. I thank you kindly, Madam Speaker, and my sincere invitation is extended to all Honourable Members.

The Speaker: Thank you, Honourable Minister.

Clause 3

The Clerk: Clause 3 Insertion of new sections—
Immigrations Appeals Tribunal.

The Chairman: I would like to call on the First Official Member who has an amendment.

Hon. James M. Ryan: Mr. Chairman, in accordance with the provisions of Standing Order 52(1) and (2), I, the First Official Member, give notice that I intend to move the following committee stage amendments to the Immigration (Amendment) (Immigration Appeals Tribunal) Bill 2002: That clause 3 be amended by inserting in section 10A (1) after the words "consists of", the words "the following members".

Mr. Chairman, shall I deal with the rest of the committee stage amendments now or shall I leave those until later?

Ms. Edna M. Moyle: Mr. Chairman, for clarification. I would think that this should have been done at the second reading that we would have been given notice and we would have had copies of the various amendments. I have not seen the amendments. Could we have copies of those amendments? To give notice at this stage is a bit late.

The Chairman: Your objection is noted. According to the Clerk the information is that the amendments were actually circulated on the 27th day of February. I am sure we can arrange to get you a copy of the amendments.

The Honourable First Official Member, we would appreciate if you would do the clauses as we call them. So, we will move on and when we call that clause you can do that proposed amendment.

Hon. James M. Ryan: Thank you, Mr. Chairman.

The Chairman: There seems to be a question as to whether or not there were two amendments or one that was circulated. Some of the Members are saying that they have the amendment to clause 5 but not of clause 3. Our information as here shows that they were both done together.

Hon. James M. Ryan: Mr. Chairman, they were both done together and I have a copy that is proofed by the Speaker on the 21st.

The Chairman: The amendment has been duly moved. Does any Member wish to speak thereto? If no Member wishes to speak, the question is that the amendment do stand part of the clause. All those in favour please say Aye. Those against, No.

Ayes.

The Chairman: The Ayes have it.

Agreed: Amendment to Clause 3 passed.

The Chairman: The question is now, that clause 3 as amended, do stand part of the Bill. If no Member wishes to speak I will now put the question that clause 3 as amended do stand part of the Bill. All those in favour, please say Aye. Those against, No.

Ayes.

Agreed: Clause 3 as amended passed.

The Clerk: Clause 4 Repeal of section 12 and substitution—Appeal from decision of the Board.

The Chairman: The question is that clause 4 stand part of the Bill. If no Member wishes to speak I will now put the question that clause 4 stand part of the Bill. All those in favour please say Aye. Those against, No.

Ayes.

The Chairman: The Ayes have it.

Agreed: Clause 4 passed.

The Clerk: Clause 5 Amendments of section 13—Conduct of Appeal.

The Chairman: I call on the First Official Member for the amendment.

Hon. James M. Ryan: Mr. Chairman, in accordance with Standing Order 52 (1) and (2), I move the following amendment to clause 5 that it be amended as follows: By repealing paragraph (b) and substituting the following- “(b) by repealing subsection (2) and substituting the following- “(2) On receipt of the notice of appeal, the Appellate Tribunal shall-

- (a) notify the immigration officer or the Board, as the case may be, of the decision against which the appeal is made and the grounds of the appeal and give the immigration officer or the Board twenty-eight days or such longer period as the chairman of the Appellate Tribunal may, for good cause shown, allow, to provide a written defence to the appeal; and
- (b) if the appellant has applied to be heard personally or by a representative, fix a time and a date for such hearing and notify the appellant and, as the case may be, the immigration officer or the Board thereof.”

And by inserting the following as paragraph (c) – “(c) in subsection (3), by repealing the words “if called upon by the Appellate Tribunal in that behalf.”

The Chairman: The amendment has been duly moved. Does any Member wish to speak thereto? If no Member wishes to speak the question is that the amendment stand part of the clause. All those in favour please say Aye. Those against, No.

Ayes.

The Chairman: The Ayes have it.

Agreed: Amendment to Clause 5 passed.

The Chairman: The question is that the clause, as amended, stand part of the Bill. All those in favour, please say Aye. Those against, No.

Ayes.

The Chairman: The Ayes have it.

Agreed: Clause 5 as amended passed.

The Clerk:

Clause 6	Insertion of new section—Decisions of the Immigration Appeals Tribunal
Clause 7	Amendment of section 14—Decisions to be administrator
Clause 8	insertion of new section—Rules relating to appeals.
Clause 9	Amendment of section 17—Acquisition of Caymanian status by grant.
Clause 10	Amendment of section 20—Loss of Caymanian status.

The Chairman: The question is that clauses 6 to 10 do stand part of the Bill. All those in favour please say Aye. Those against, No.

Ayes.

The Chairman: The Ayes have it.

Agreed: Clauses 6 through 10 passed.

Clauses 11 – 14

The Clerk:

- Clause 11 Amendment of section 33—Grant, et cetera of work permit.
- Clause 12 Amendment of section 37—Offence to engage in gainful occupation or to employ persons in contravention of this part.
- Clause 13 Amendment of section 76—Directions to board and chief immigration officer
- Clause 14 Amendment of section 77—Power to put questions and require production of documents.

The Chairman: The question is that clauses 11 to 14 do stand part of the Bill. All those in favour please say Aye. Those against, No.

Ayes.

The Chairman: The Ayes have it.

Agreed: Clauses 11 through 14 passed.

The Clerk: A Bill for a Law to Amend The Immigration Law (2001 Revision) In Order to Provide for the Establishment Of an Immigration Appeals Tribunal and for Incidental and Connected Purposes.

The Chairman: The question is that the Title does stand part of the Bill. All those in favour please say Aye. Those against, No.

Ayes.

The Chairman: The Ayes have it.

Agreed: Title passed.

The Animals (Amendment) Bill, 2002

The Chairman: The question is that clause 76 as amended do stand part of the Bill. All those in favour please say Aye. Those against, No.

Agreed: Clause 76 as amended passed.

Insertion of New Clause 68

The Clerk: Insertion of new clause 68.

The Chairman: The Honourable Minister for Communications.

Hon. Linford A. Pierson: Mr. Chairman, I beg to move that the Bill be amended with the insertion of the following new clause 68

The Clerk: New Clause 68 Unlawfully acting as the administrative point of contact or technical point of contact.

The Chairman: The new clause shall be deemed to have been read the first time. The question is that this clause be read a second time.

The Honourable Minister.

Agreed: The new clause read a second time

Hon. Linford A. Pierson: Mr. Chairman, I move that the Bill be amended by inserting the following new section— "Unlawfully acting as Administrative Point of Contact or Technical Point of Contact. 68 (1) Any person who, without the written consent of the Authority:

- a) acts or purports to act as, or holds himself out as being authorised by the Authority to act as, the Administrative Point of Contact for the top level of the global Internet Domain Name System assigned to the Islands; or
- b) acts or purports to act as, or holds himself out as being authorised by the Authority to act as, the Technical Point of Contact for the top level of the global Internet Domain Name System assigned to the Islands, shall be guilty of an offence and liable on summary conviction to a fine not exceeding $10,000 or on conviction on indictment to a fine and to imprisonment for a period not exceeding one year.

“(2) Any person who, without the written consent of the Authority—

- a) deals with or assumes any rights in relation to the top level of the global Internet Domain Name System assigned to the Islands; or
- b) makes or attempts to make any request to the Internet
- c) Corporation for Assigned Names and Numbers or the Internet Assigned Numbers Authority to re-delegate responsibility for the top level of the global Internet Domain Name System assigned to the Islands, shall be guilty of an offence and liable on summary conviction to a fine not exceeding $10,000 or on conviction on indictment to a fine and to imprisonment for a period not exceeding one year.

“(3) The Authority may bring civil proceedings against any person who contravenes this Law and the court may in such proceedings make such order as it considers appropriate including orders requiring compliance with any provisions of the Law and the regulations.

“(4) If a person does anything outside the Islands and his action, if it had occurred within the Islands would have constituted the commission of an offence under this section, he shall be guilty of the offence and liable to any of the penalties specified under this section.”

And by renumbering the clauses of the Bill accordingly.

The Chairman: The amendment has been moved. The question is that this clause as amended be added to the Bill as clause number 68 and that the subsequent clauses be renumbered accordingly. Does any Member wish to speak?

The Second Official Member.

Hon. David F. Ballantyne: Mr. Chairman, I think since there already is a clause 68 this should perhaps be clause 68A and then the renumbering will take effect when the Law is finally printed.

Hon. Linford A. Pierson: Mr. Chairman, I think the Member for North Side has perhaps found a solution to it. Since we are deleting clause 55 then the renumbering would take effect accordingly.

The Chairman: The question is that this new clause inserted as 68 be added to the Bill. All those in favour please say Aye. Those against, No.

Ayes.

Agreed: Clause 68 passed

The Chairman: The Ayes have it.
The Second Official Member.

Hon. David F. Ballantyne: Just to point out Mr. Chairman, that even though the renumbering took place we do have a clause 69 which would have become 68. I do not have a problem with the suggestion but we would still have a 68 already so I still think we need a 68A on reflection.

The Chairman: Could I just have someone to move a motion that it be renumbered as 68A?

Hon. David F. Ballantyne: Mr. Chairman, I move that the new clause 68 be renumbered 68A.

The Chairman: The question is that the new clause 68 be renumbered as 68A. All those in favour please say Aye. Those against, No.

Ayes.

The Chairman: The Ayes have it.

Agreed: Clause 68 renumbered and added to the Bill as Clause No. 68A.

New Clause 68A passed.

First Schedule, Second and Third Schedules

The Clerk:

First schedule	Proceedings of the Board, et cetera.
Second schedule	A code to govern the acquisition by licensees of rights over land and ancillary rights
Third schedule	Amended enactment

The Chairman: The question is that Schedules 1, 2 and 3 do stand part of the Bill. All those in favour please say Aye. Those against, No.

Ayes.

The Chairman: The Ayes have it.

Agreed: First, Second and Third Schedules passed.

The Clerk: A Law to establish the Information and Communications Technology Authority and to vest property into the Authority; and for incidental and connected purposes.

The Chairman: The question is that the Title do stand part of the Bill. All those in favour please say Aye. Those against, No.

Ayes.

The Chairman: The Ayes have it.

Agreed: Title passed.

The Chairman: The question is that the Bills be reported the House. All those in favour please say Aye. Those against, No.

Ayes.

The Chairman: The Ayes have it. The House will resume.

Agreed: That the Bills be reported to the House.

House resumed at 1.05 pm

The Speaker: Please be seated. Proceedings are resumed. I think it is appropriate at this time to take the luncheon break. We will resume at 3 o'clock.

Proceedings suspended at 1.05 pm

Proceedings resumed at 3.14 pm

[Madam Speaker in the Chair]

The Speaker: Please be seated. Proceedings are resumed.

REPORTS ON BILLS

The Parliamentary Pensions (Amendment) Bill, 2002

The Speaker: The Honourable Third Official Member.

Hon. George A. McCarthy: Madam Speaker, I am to report that a Bill entitled The Parliamentary Pensions (Amendment) Bill, 2002 was considered by a committee of the whole House and passed with one amendment.

The Speaker: The Bill has been duly reported and is set down for a Third Reading.

The Immigration (Amendment) (Immigration Appeals Tribunal) Bill, 2002

The Speaker: The Honourable First Official Member.

Hon. James M. Ryan: Madam Speaker, I have to report that a Bill entitled The Immigration (Amendment) (Immigration Appeals Tribunal) Bill, 2002, was considered by a committee of the whole House and passed with two amendments.

The Speaker: The Bill has been duly reported and is set down for a Third Reading.

The Animals (Amendment) Bill, 2002

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for Agriculture.

Hon. Gilbert A. McLean: Madam Speaker, I have to report that a Bill entitled A Bill For a Law to Amend The Animals Law 1999 Revision, to Provide for the Licensing Of Dogs; The Regulations of Dangerous And Prohibited Dogs; Establishment of an Animal Welfare Advisory Committee, The Appointment of Animal Welfare Officers; and for Incidental and Connected Purposes, was passed with various amendments.

The Speaker: The Bill has been duly reported and is set down for the Third Reading.

The Information and Communications Technology Authority Bill, 2002

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for Communications.

Hon. Linford A. Pierson: Madam Speaker, I have to report that a Bill entitled A Bill for a Law to Establish the Information and Communications Technology Authority and to Vest Property in the Authority; and for Incidental and Connected Purposes, was considered by a committee of the whole House and passed with various amendments.

The Speaker: Thank you. The Bill has been duly reported and is set down for the Third Reading.

THIRD READINGS

The Parliamentary Pensions (Amendment) Bill, 2002

The Speaker: The Honourable Third Official Member.

Hon. George A. McCarthy: Madam Speaker, I beg to move that a Bill soon to be entitled The Parliamentary Pensions (Amendment) Bill, 2002, be given a Third Reading and passed.

The Speaker: The question is that a Bill shortly entitled Parliamentary Pensions (Amendment) Bill 2002 be given a Third Reading and passed. All those in favour please say Aye. Those against, No.

Ayes.

The Speaker: The Ayes have it.

Agreed: The Parliamentary Pensions (Amendment) Bill 2002 given a Third Reading and passed.

The Immigration (Amendment) (Immigration Appeals Tribunal) Bill, 2002

The Speaker: The Honourable First Official Member.

Hon. James M. Ryan: Madam Speaker, I beg to move that a Bill entitled The Immigration (Amendment) (Immigration Appeals Tribunal) Bill, 2002, be given a Third Reading and passed.

The Speaker: The question is that a Bill shortly entitled The Immigration (Amendment) (Immigration Appeals Tribunal) Bill, 2002, be given a Third Reading and passed. All those in favour please say Aye. Those against, No.

Ayes.

The Speaker: The Ayes have it.

Agreed: The Immigration (Amendment) (Immigration Appeals Tribunal) Bill 2002 given a Third Reading and passed.

The Animals (Amendment) Bill, 2002

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for Agriculture.

Hon. Gilbert A. McLean: Madam Speaker, I beg to move that a Bill entitled A Bill For a Law to Amend The Animals Law 1999 Revision be given a Third Reading and passed.

The Speaker: The question is that The Animals (Amendment) Bill 2002, as amended be given a Third Reading and passed. All those in favour please say Aye. Those against, No.

Ayes.

The Speaker: The Ayes have it.

Agreed: The Animals (Amendment) Bill 2002 given a Third Reading and passed.

The Information and Communications Technology Authority Bill, 2002

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Communications.

Hon. Linford A. Pierson: Madam Speaker, I beg to move that a Bill shortly entitled, The Information and Communications Technology Authority Bill 2002, as amended be given a Third Reading and passed.

The Speaker: The question is that a Bill entitled The Information and Communications Technology Authority Bill 2002, as amended be given a Third Reading and passed. All those in favour please say Aye. Those against, No.

MOTIONS

GOVERNMENT MOTION NO. 1/02

The Development and Planning (Amendment) (Heights of Buildings) Regulations 2002

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for Planning.

Hon. Linford A. Pierson: Madam Speaker, Government Motion No. 1/02 reads:

“WHEREAS section 45(1) of the Development and Planning Law (1999 Revision) provides that the Governor in Council may make regulations;

“AND WHEREAS section 45 (3) of the said Law provides that no regulations shall be made pursuant to the said Law unless a draft thereof has been laid before the Legislative Assembly and a resolution approving the draft has been passed by the Legislative Assembly.

“BE IT NOW THEREFORE RESOLVED THAT The Development and Planning (Amendment) (Heights of Buildings) Regulations 2002, having been laid on the Table of this Honourable House, be hereby approved by the Legislative Assembly in accordance with the provisions of section 45 (3) of the Development and Planning Law (1999 Revision).”

The Speaker: The Motion has been duly moved and is opened for debate. Does the Honourable Minister wish to speak thereto? Please proceed.

Hon. Linford A. Pierson: Thank you, Madam Speaker.

Madam Speaker, the Development and Planning (Amendment) (Heights of Buildings) Regulations 2002, is an important initiative being proposed by this Government (the United Democratic Party), to address a number of areas of the regulations that have needed attention for some time, as well as to provide new incentive and stimulus to our lagging economy and the construction sector, in particular.

Definitions

The proposed amendments deal with a number of issues including the definition of height of buildings, General requirements for parking, setbacks, waterfront property, mangrove buffer zone, land for public purposes and the application fee for excavations.

The following explanatory information is provided for the benefit of Honourable Members of the Legislative Assembly and corresponds to the numerical sequence as contained in the amending legislation—

- 1) Title of the legislation.
- 2) (a) Adds definitions for general commercial zone 1 and 2 and a hotel tourism zone 1.
(b) Amends the definition of height of building as the current definition gives too much discretion to designers and/or the Central Planning Authority when determining the height of buildings. The existing definition does not specify where the height should be measured from and the proposed amendments will give a fixed reference point and can be located at any time. It will also afford designers greater confidence in the outcome of the CPA's decisions as the definition will now be clear.
- 3) (a) This amendment seeks to remedy the existing situation where the total number of parking spaces for a new development can be provided offsite in a nearby location. A nearby location has never been specified and has resulted in many people parking unauthorised in other spaces to avoid walking from the designated off-sight parking area. The off-sight parking sites have therefore never been fully utilised. It is hoped that by specifying a distance within 500 feet and the maximum percentage of spaces that can be accommodated offsite, 25 per cent that the unauthorised parking pressures can be reduced.
(b) Amends the maximum permitted height of buildings according to zones in an attempt to stimulate development.
 - ◆ General commercial zone GC-1 from five to seven storeys.
 - ◆ General commercial zone GC-2 remains at five storeys.

- ◆ High, medium and low density residential from two to three storeys.
- ◆ Beach resort residential remains at three storeys.
- ◆ Agricultural residential now specified at two storeys.
- ◆ Hotel tourism condominium height to increase from three to seven storeys.
- ◆ Hotels to increase from five to seven storeys.

General Commercial Zones—(CG)

The general commercial zone of George Town will now have two sub sections differing only in height restriction. All other regulations will apply as for general commercial. The boundaries of the seven storey sections for GC-1 can be described as follows starting from the North:

- I. Mary Street (to the junction Shedden Road including adjacent parcels to the North).
- II. Shedden Road to the junction with Thomas Russell Avenue, including adjacent parcels to the North.
- III. Thomas Russell Avenue (to the junction with Elgin Avenue).
- IV. Elgin Avenue (to the junction with Hospital Road).
- V. Hospital Road (to the junction with Walker's Road).
- VI. Walker's Road (to the junction with Boilers Road).
- VII. Boilers Road (to the junction with Harbour Drive).
- VIII. Harbour Drive (to the junction with Mary Street).

In order to maintain good aesthetic quality it should be noted that—

1. Buildings of three storeys in the residential and beach resort zones shall be designed so that no continuous vertical façade or elevation exceeds 25 feet or two storeys in height; and
 2. Buildings three or more storeys in the hotel tourism zone, shall be designed so that no vertical façade or elevation exceeds 33 feet or three storeys in height.
 3. Building in the general commercial zones shall not exceed the height limitations prescribed by the Director of Civil Aviation which is currently provided for, as well.
- (c) Repeals words "65 feet and five storeys" and substitute "80 feet and seven storeys" respectively.
 - (d) Specifies that set back, that is, building lines distances be measured from certain struc-

- tures including septic tanks, deep wells, cisterns, stairs and balconies.
- (e) Provides for maximum and minimum set backs for underground facilities and structures to be at the discretion of the CPA. The solid waste storage areas are set back a minimum of six feet from property lines and are screened with fencing and vegetation. Minimum set backs and minimum lot sizes of 20,000 square feet for new lots in the commercial and industrial zones.
- (f) Deals with waterfront property and provides for minimum set backs to now be measured in all cases from the high water mark as opposed to low water mark as is at present. In central George Town and in areas where the shore line is beach or mangrove, the minimum set back shall be 75 feet from the high water mark. In areas where the shore line is iron-shore, the amendment calls for 50 feet minimum set back from the high water mark. On canal and inland water ways a minimum set back is now being specified at 20 feet from the high water mark. In hotel tourist related zones the set back is being increased from 100 feet from the low water mark, up to two storeys with an additional 30 feet for every additional storey. To a 130 feet set back from the high water mark, up to three storeys with an additional 15 feet set back for every additional storey. In marine commercial and neighbourhood commercial zones the minimum set backs shall be 50 feet from the high water mark for buildings up to two storeys with an additional 15 feet for the third storey. All water front lots except in hotel tourism zone must be a minimum of 100 feet in mean distance from the road to the high water mark for development to be allowed. The same distance is currently measured from the low water mark.
- (g) This new section provides some discretion to the Central Planning Authority in granting water front set backs to a lesser extent, having regard to various physical features of the property and its environs including elevation of property, existing or protected reef, et cetera.
- 4). In the hotel tourism zone the density is being increased from current limitations of 20 apartments per acre, with 35 bedrooms to a maximum of 25 apartments only. This is proposed to compensate for the increase water front set back.

Clauses 5 to 11

- Clauses 5, 6 and 7 repeal other sections of the regulations that conflict with the changes above.
- Clause 8 amends the maximum width allowed to be cut through the mangrove buffer zone from 75 feet to 100 feet. Developers are insisting that this is necessary to allow safe passage of vessels.
- Clause 9 provides for the payment of money equivalent to the improved value of the land in lieu of setting aside land for public purposes in a sub division. This payment can be accepted if the CPA is satisfied that greater public benefit would be derived and that the sub division already has sufficient land set aside for public purposes. The amendment also specifies the use to which the funds can be applied, which are the acquisition of private land for public purposes and the improvement of land used for public purposes, including children's playgrounds, sports fields, parks, churches, community centres and recreation centres.
- Clause 10 provides for amendments to the First schedule as follows: Current fees for carrying excavation are levied at the lesser amount of 15 cents per cubic yard or $750 plus 10 cents per cubic yard irrespective of whether the project is approved. This amendment provides for a non-refundable application fee of $1,000 for Grand Cayman and $100 for the sister Islands to be paid up front. If planning permission is granted, an additional amount is levied at 15 cents per cubic yard or $1,500 plus 10 cents per cubic yard, whichever is less. A small amendment to the change of use of land which adds car parks, et cetera.
- Clause 11 insertion of a third schedule or map which creates two sub sections of the existing George Town central and general commercial zone into GC-1 and GC-2. The new seven storey height restriction will apply only to GC-1. Insertion of a fourth schedule for hotel tourism zone 1 which relates to zoning of hotel tourism zoning between the West Bay Cemetery in the North and the Dixie Cemetery in the South.

Madam Speaker, this is a most important amendment to the Development and Planning Regulations as the purpose of it is to assist with the stimulation of our lagging economy at this time, and I would ask all Honourable Members to give it their full support. Thank you.

The Speaker: Thank you, Honourable Minister. Does any other Member wish to speak?

The First Elected Member for the district of George Town.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Thank you.

Madam Speaker, in listening to the Honourable Minister's presentation regarding the proposed Development and Planning (Amendment) (Heights of Buildings) Regulations 2002, I wish to say that the intent of these amending regulations is understandable. Perhaps it is safe to say that the way in which times have changed, this too is an area that needed to be addressed. I will go through several of the sections and make comments. Like most other things in life it is always good to hear perspective from another angle. Maybe the combination might bring about the best results.

Proposed Heights of Buildings: The first instance I wish to address is perhaps one that may have been the most controversial, but it does not seem to be so because of the way it is being presented. However, it has to do with the height of buildings in the proposed schedules where we speak to Cemetery to Cemetery; hotels and condominiums being able to be built to seven storeys rather than existing five; and also commercial buildings in certain zonings being able to go to seven storeys. Some of the outside of the OPY areas will still remain at five storeys (from my understanding when reading the proposed amending regulations). There are two points when we speak to the hotels and condominiums, taking them one at a time.

Density Levels: My understanding is that the density levels in the land that is zoned for condominiums to be built, there will be an additional five units being able to be built per acre. When we look from Cemetery to Cemetery we will see that on the beach side the vast majority of the land is already developed. Some are much newer structures but some of the properties are, perhaps by now, as old as 30 years. If we were to look at those older structures especially, by now the vast majority of the individual units, if not all, will be owned separately by individuals and or other types of entities. A developer could try to put something together saying that these buildings are fairly old and rather than continue renovation, one might wish to redevelop the entire property.

However, it would certainly be a very difficult situation with the economies of scale to try and justify buying out existing investors and paying for the cost of constructing new buildings, which would mean trying to find new investors in these properties. Certainly, having to go through the procedure in that manner would almost inevitably double what they are costing now. As it is, we have already almost priced ourselves out of the market when we speak to other competitive jurisdictions. I am not speaking about the tourist trade either, I am speaking about the purchase of ocean front or beach front properties for developments.

So, Madam Speaker, being able to add five more units per acre certainly makes a difference with regards to how a potential investor would look at a property of that nature. Also, being able to go up to seven storeys one might also venture the thought that perhaps the land use could be applied in a manner which would allow for more of the ancillary purposes, not just the actual buildings. It would also possibly allow for an extra amount of parking, which I believe, consensus is that nearly all of those existing places, not only in the commercial areas but along the Seven Mile Beach, it would be very nice if more parking spaces were to be provided.

Aesthetics: There was a big question mark in the minds of many individuals which regards to hotels being allowed to seven storeys. One of the base arguments was the aesthetics of what existed along the Seven Mile Beach corridor presently, and how that would change the face if we had several new structures which were allowed to be seven storeys. I think if we are to be fair to the situation that exists or obtains, at present, it would have made a huge difference in times when more of the land was undeveloped. As it is now I do not see a huge difference. So, I do not think that point will actually stand as strong as it might have in times gone by.

There were huge questions in the minds of certain persons about hotels being allowed to be built with five storeys, at present, and these regulations will allow them to go seven storeys. If the densities were changed there is a huge question because the Esterly Tibbetts highway (what we know as the by-pass) is only completed up to a certain distance and there are gaps in between to get into West Bay. Many people thought that a proportionate increase in the number of rooms by being able to go two more storeys, would certainly have a very negative impact on traffic along West Bay corridor. This was simply because there was not another through route, not only to the district of West Bay, but to people being able to make a decision as to which route to take depending on where they were going and what was the purpose of their journey.

My understanding is that the density remains status quo as it was. To make sure that my understanding is correct I would like for the Minister to clear it up. So, if a property is one acre and what obtains at present is that it allows 65 rooms per acre, and is able to be built five storeys, then even if it is able to go up to seven storeys on that acre it is still only 65 rooms per acre. The Minister also mentioned the high water mark when it comes to set backs. At the end of the day that will allow more beach property to be preserved and perhaps less argument between those who own the properties and the public having access across those properties. There may be less argument if there is more beach property. Also, if the density is not increased and you are allowed to go up two more storeys, then certainly, you would have the ability to have more land mass that is not used for construction purposes, and perhaps create more parking and other amenities for the owners, tenants or visitors who come to stay for short periods of time. That, in it-self, as I understand it, would not have a negative impact on the lack of infrastructure that exists, that is, roads, et cetera. If how I understand it is correct, then certainly I do not think we can argue about that either. I have not seen the Minister nod so I guess I will just have to wait to see if I am right or not.

Commercial Buildings: I would like to go on to the commercial buildings to the areas that will now be able to go to seven storeys. There are arguments on both sides that could probably be given a plus as salient points, and while, as the Minister as presented his case, he speaks to the fact that this may well be an incentive for some increased activity in the construction industry and also development on a whole. The situation that exists now speaks to five storeys or 65 feet to the soffit. What is proposed at present is to move that in the scheduled area to seven storeys and 80 feet. The point that I need to raise with this issue is this: If we speak to multi-storey buildings and we go beyond five storeys, when we reach to buildings that are 70 feet high, the general term applied to buildings that height and over, I believe, is called 'high rise' buildings. When you speak to high rise buildings, what we have existing at present is a Fire code and the Building code, which speaks to various areas of safety et cetera, with regards to certain types of buildings and certain buildings with a certain height.

As already mentioned to the Minister, one of the concerns that we, on the Back Bench, have with the proposed amendment, is not about moving it from five storeys to seven storeys, but ensuring at the same time that as we have these proposed amendments to the regulations, we also have what is necessary to be put into the other two documents, which are, the Fire code under the Fire Brigade Law; the Building code which has each aspect; the Water Authority; the Building Control unit which oversees all the various aspects of the construction of a building and each department (electrical, plumbing, et cetera.) that takes care of each section.

So, let me try and get to the point of what exists. We have a Fire code and a Building code which only speaks to five storey buildings at present, and certainly, the requirements, once you go beyond that are different. I have no doubt in my mind that the intention is to address this. The big fear that the Opposition has at present, is going through with this legislation.

Forget about logic; forget about what we know should happen, let us deal with the Law. Here is an example: if we have these regulations and an applicant comes in short order for a seven storey building and one side of the coin has been addressed by allowing that seven storey building, but the other side of the coin has not been addressed with regards to putting teeth into the areas that teeth needs to be put into. With the requirements that are more onerous than what exists at present, because of the height of the buildings, what could very well happen is that the Central Planning Authority might find itself in a position of having to approve such an application because it meets all of the requirements of the Law and the regulations. As I said, throw logic aside because logic would tell you that you would not want to do that. Logic would also say to you that a developer who is responsible would not want to develop such a site and go seven storeys without meeting the criteria that is only sensible and safe for the long term.

The truth of the matter is that you cannot presuppose all of those things so I am saying that we need to have one in tandem with the other. I am certain that the Minister wants to see that happen and we just want to know how that is going to happen and what exactly is going to follow suit.

Parking: There is also a question of parking. I heard what the Minister said and there is merit to the specific areas that have been addressed. However, I still believe that there is a problem with the way the regulations are at present. Outside of the designated area of the OPY the parking requirements for commercial buildings is one parking space for every 300 square feet of building. In OPY it still remains as one space for every 500 square feet of building. One might well say that the vast majority of OPY is already built up, at present. That is not to say that older buildings in OPY might not be able to be, as said by the old lady: 'laid low level' to rebuild again and have the same parking requirements. The arguments that I have heard, thus far, centre around the fact that the land in OPY is so expensive that it would be more than onerous to speak to increasing the requirements for parking to be one for every 300 square feet. I have seen innovation where people actually go down below to create a floor of parking. If you are able to go seven storeys, then my view is that there should be one parking space for every 300 square feet.

We speak to one side of the coin to speak about trying to stir the pot to create some development and stimulate it. However, when we look at reality, notice the problems we have everyday in Town—every single day; it is not getting better. We talk about parking metres in designated areas and I will not get into a long debate on that to run the risk of having you deal with me, Madam Speaker. I use that to say that we certainly have major problems with parking. So, I believe, that while it is not addressed in these proposed amendments, a serious look needs to be taken.

I understand the counters to the argument that I have put forward but I do not believe that they out-weigh the sense of dealing with that in the same manner as other commercial properties on the periphery of OPY, whenever development takes place, which has to meet the requirement of one parking space for every 300 square feet. I am not sure how the Government is going to look at that view, but certainly it is put forward with the belief that it is in the best interest, especially for the long term, for us to be looking at it along those lines.

In commercial and industrial zones where we speak to the minimum road set back, it shall be 20 feet and the minimum side and rear set backs shall be six feet unless otherwise specified by the Authority. I served on the Central Planning Authority for several years and like others in here, I am certain, have their own experiences from the Brac and Little Cay-man with the Development Control Board. I really do not like how this is worded. It says: "the minimum side and rear set backs shall be six feet unless otherwise specified by the Authority". I see it as ambiguous and I always have a problem with what the requirements are going to be from the other agencies. In this specific instance again, the Fire Service with regards to access. The way this is worded it seems to me if the Central Planning Authority is so minded it can make it less than six feet. We have had problems in the past with this same situation. Now I am not absolutely sure what the intention is with how it says. The Minister will surely have an opportunity to clear the matter up. I raised the issue because what it is saying to me, is that the Authority can say that it should be more than six feet or it can say that it should be less than six feet depending on how the circumstances are viewed, at that point in time. Discretion is something that I know they need. Again, by experience, we found our hands tied on many occasions, even when we knew the right thing to do, but the Laws and the regulations would not allow us to do it.

I just flag that issue up because I believe the matter needs to be cleared up. I think that it should be clearly understood that my leaning is towards having something that is fixed based on what the safety requirements would be, given normal circumstances. Also, simple maintenance! Buildings require maintenance and while we have boom trucks in this day and age, there are certain types of maintenance that require space to be able to do. You cannot allow someone to build to his or her boundary and when they have to do maintenance they have to go over to somebody else's property to do it; that is not the right thing. So, perhaps we will hear exactly what is meant by the way it is worded.

Madam Speaker, I think that it is sensible in going back to the high water mark and to have looked at both sides of coin. It is obvious that if we did not deal with any densities for anything when people bought properties they would have bought given on the existing Laws and regulations. They would also have decided that the property was worth it based on being able to construct a certain number of units if that was what they were doing, or with certain densities, as is allowed by the Law now. Going to the high water mark, certainly would lessen their ability to utilise the landmass by a construction compared to what exist now. In doing one and compensating with the other was sensible. The positive result is if you have more land mass at the end of the day that you are able to utilise for other purposes besides actual construction and living space, certainly, that property must be deemed to be better designed for whoever owns it.

I want to move on now to section 8, which speaks to the principal regulations as amended in regulation 17(4) (c) by repealing the words "75 feet" and substituting the words "100 feet". The Minister basically explained and the marginal note speaks to amendment of regulation 17—Mangrove buffer zones. As the Minister has explained, the 75 feet width is in practical terms. For instance, we speak to a canal that may lead into the North Sound; the truth of the matter is that not only is it sensibly done by design in many instances to have a canal that is not straight but also sometimes the lay of the land calls for such a canal not to be straight. When the Minister spoke about safety when it comes to navigating vessels through those areas, the fact is that if it is not straight and you have curves in it (75 feet sometimes) creates a problem if you have two vessels going in opposite directions. The curve is just too narrow! It is almost like two cars on the road, opposite directions going around a narrow corner and there is not enough space to pass. It is similar to that.

While we would say that we do not want to have more than 75 feet as an access through a buffer zone for environmental purposes, I think, the better way to address that is to decide on how many accesses you will have and increase the access to a hundred feet for purposes of safety. I am saying, Madam Speaker, that proposed amendment we (the Opposition) all agree with and certainly, we do not have any problems with that.

We need to look very carefully at section 9. It says, "the principal regulations are amended in regulation 27 as follows— "by renumbering the regulation... and by inserting after sub-regulation (1) the following sub-regulations—'2) the Authority may permit an applicant in lieu of setting aside land in a subdivision under sub-regulation (1), to pay a sum of money not exceeding 5 per cent of the improved value of the land if the Authority is satisfied that – a) the subdivision has sufficient land set aside for public purposes; and b) greater public benefit would be derived from the payment.

Subsection (3) says: "Permission under sub regulation (2) may be granted subject to such conditions as the Authority considers fit".

It goes on to speak to money paid pursuant to sub regulation (2): "...shall be applied to- a) the acquisition of private land for public purposes; and b) the improvement of land used for public purposes, including children's playgrounds, sport fields, parks, churches, community centres and recreation centres".

I think that what is generally sought by these amendments is acceptable. For years we have had complaints from people about what we use to commonly call public open space, which I think is now deemed to be land for public purposes—seems like I am not too sure whether the two are the same, but anyway, I think they are the same—similar! Let us not say exactly the same, but similar. Lots of time we heard these complaints, not just from people driving across but from people who lived in these areas, that this public open space was not maintained. Unfortunately we have not come of age at present where it is very common for us to have what we call citizens association and homeowners associations when it comes to single family homes in a sub division. By the force of nature most of the apartment complexes have to have the strata organised because of payments common areas, et cetera. However, in sub divisions we do not have such an organised situation prevailing by and large, otherwise we may not have had that problem and people would take pride in taking over the property, maintaining it jointly so that there is no stress on any one individual as to who has to take care of it and to whose pocket the funds come from.

I have known of instances very recently, where developers have gone to the Planning Department to make application to Central Planning Authority to repossess such lots that were allocated to be public open space or land for public purposes, with a view of compensating in some other form or fashion. Now, there are many developments which presently exist that the majority of the lots are vacant. Some of them are not small developments; they are large developments. The majority of lots are vacant. Some people have already built houses there, but the fact of the matter is, if we look at how this is proposed to be applied, we could end up with families in sub divisions who have to make special trips, certain distances and have to allocate special times in their lives for their children to be able to utilise the playground.

One may want to use the argument and say that we do not have enough for them all around. I agree with that! As I said, by and large I do not have a problem with the principle that is being applied. However, I think we must look at that carefully because I do not believe that developers should be allowed to repossess those lots until individual situations are satisfied and looked at very carefully, and the home owners in that area wish for that to be done to put whatever Government gets from this as compensation towards a general situation. I sense that there will be more developers than it should be who may suddenly have the desire to do that.

Perhaps, if it takes five or seven years just using what I think to be a reasonable time span for a certain development to be almost fully developed, so to speak, where the majority of the lots have houses on it, what that lot can fetch today might be seen as a chance by the developer to simply make some more money. Sometimes depending on the size of the development it could be one single area that could be subdivided into three or four lots. So, that may be deemed to be looking at the dark side of it but I already have my ears ringing from two different individuals who are experiencing the situation in the sub division where they live. The truth is if it is done like this and the developers are able to do what I am speaking about then you cannot blame them for doing it. What I am saying is that we have to find a way to ensure that this is not how it happens. That is my point.

Again, depending on the size of the sub division or if the Central Planning Authority called for 5 per cent of the land mass to be designated as open public space or land for public purposes, and it is deemed that they really do not need all of that property to have a community park or play area, I do not have a problem with that. However, the point I am making is that we cannot take this up after it is approved and decide when an application comes in that we can say "well, I think you are right". I am saying that we have to find a way to understand each situation and make sure that we are doing justice to the people. Do not forget that the way this is worded does not speak to a homeowner having any right to say anything about this. Not for a minute does it speak to that. I do not see it anywhere here. It speaks to a relationship between the government and a developer. It speaks to the Authority having the ability to permit an applicant. In looking at it, one might say that this envisages new applications but the situation that I am talking about are existing sub divisions, so I do not know how that is being dealt with.

What I do not believe should happen is that while the Authority may have discretion, I do not believe the Authority should have that type of discretion; It is not a distrust with the Authority. I simply do not believe that, given those circumstances, because homeowners are not into the equation; if you see the point that I am making. I do not believe that that should be the case. It may sound like a small issue but I think we need to ensure that there is satisfaction with the way forward so that we do not have those types of problems.

Before I move away from that, section 9(4) speaks to: "(4) money paid pursuant to sub regulation (2) shall be applied to- a) the acquisition of private land for public purposes; and b) the improvement of land used for public purposes including children's playgrounds, sports fields, parks, churches, community centres and recreational centres".

Are we speaking of a segregated fund? How are we dealing with it? We speak to these monies being applied to certain things but—the Honourable Third Official Member, I am certain would bear me out—we have created similar situations of this nature and have no designated way forward of how to deal with them. We speak to these funds applied but I do not where the funds are going to go. I am not wishing to speculate but if that is the purpose of these monies that are collected then we must have the machinery in place to ensure that is what it is used for. I am being reminded of the environmental protection fund, which is still not sorted out, if I remember correctly.

Excavation or Dredging: The other area I wish to speak to, which has been a problem in the past, and which I have experienced, is under section 10 regarding the carrying out of an excavation or dredging. The Minister has explained the new way forward, which certainly makes life a lot easier than the way it was before. When I was referring to the Third Official Member just a while ago I did not call on the specific situation but it is this same situation that I was talking about.

What we have had in the past is where agreements were made through the Central Planning Authority and the Planning Department, with a developer doing excavation or dredging and having to pay certain royalties. The Planning department is saying that they Department of Finance and Economic Development is suppose to collect the money but that Department knows nothing about the money to be collected.

So, it totally depended on the good character of the individuals who were doing the dredging, for them to decide when they were going to come in and pay or if they should pay at all. We certainly do not want that to happen again. That I believe is of the past and the situation has been addressed, lest the Third Official Member thinks that I am just taking pot shots at him; certainly not so. I am using an example. I see his head bowed as if he is praying for me [chuckle].

This issue that I speak to speaks about an application fee of $1,000 for excavation or dredging in Grand Cayman and an application fee of a $100 for Cayman Brac or Little Cayman. What the Minister explained is that application fee is non-refundable. I think that is what he said, but it goes on to say: “If planning permission is granted— a. fee calculated at the rate of 15 cents in respect of each cubic yard to be excavated or dredged; or b. $1,500 plus a fee calculated at the rate of 10 cents at the rate of each cubic yard to be excavated or dredged whichever amount is the lesser”.

Madam Speaker, at that time a straight fee was charged if you were granted permission and it was 10,000 cubic yards, 10 cents per cubic yard, therefore it was $1000 then. So, what has obtained in the past is that by not having a separate application fee what happened is that when your application was granted because some of the excavations were huge amounts, which actually equated to fairly large sums of money it was felt that it was onerous to expect the applicant to pay all that money up front.

It was also thought that even though everything was well intended it was not impossible that sometimes what was anticipated to be excavated could not be had because of the type of land that they met up on when they got to a certain depth; whether it was hard rock or if blasting could satisfy it or whether it as not the amount that they thought.

Again, Madam Speaker, how this is worded those arrangements used to be where the Department sat with the person and made the arrangements. The way this is worded here, I am assuming that what this means is that you pay your application fee and it is non-refundable whether your application is approved or not. When your application is approved whatever is calculated here you are told that you have approval based on these conditions and one of those conditions will be this fee that you pay.

The other wording, while it left the whole thing open, was in a similar vain to this. My question is that does this give the Department or the CPA the authority to make arrangements of that nature? Is it the intention that this should not be allowed? Is the reason for separating your application fee with what your royalty fee is, just for that same purpose so that if someone is going to be allowed to excavate or dredge, whether inland or not, or to simply reclaim a project, or whether it is for sale or not, are there going to be arrangements that can be made which would allow for them to pay on time? I am not sure what the intention is and I believe that it should be made clear otherwise we can fall into the same situation that obtained prior to this. We need to be exact about the intention.

The Speaker: We have just about reached the hour of interruption. May I call on the Honourable Deputy Leader to move for the adjournment?

ADJOURNMENT

Hon. Linford A. Pierson: Madam Speaker, I beg to move the adjournment of this Honourable House until 10 am on Wednesday 20 March.

The Speaker: Thank you.

The question is that the Honourable House do stand adjourned until Wednesday 10 am, 20 March 2002. All those in favour please say Aye. Those against, No.

Ayes.

The Speaker: The Ayes have it. The House will be accordingly adjourned until Wednesday, 20 March at 10 am.

Before rising, just for information purposes, I should wish to convey that it is my understanding that Cayman Airways will be putting on a flight, this Saturday at 10 o'clock, departure time, to Cayman Brac for the purposes of the late Honourable Captain Mabry Kirkconnell's funeral and return to Grand Cayman at 7 pm.

Thank you.

At 4.29 pm the House stood adjourned until 10 am Wednesday, 20 March 2002.

OFFICIAL HANSARD REPORT
WEDNESDAY
20 MARCH 2002
10.25 AM
Thirteenth Sitting

The Speaker: Good morning. I will invite the Second Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman to grace us with prayers.

PRAYERS

Mr. Lyndon L. Martin: Let us pray.

Almighty God, from whom all wisdom and power are derived: we beseech Thee so to direct and prosper the deliberations of the Legislative Assembly now assembled, that all things may be ordered upon the best and surest foundations for the glory of Thy Name and for the safety honour and welfare of the people of these Islands.

Bless our Sovereign Lady Queen Elizabeth II; the Queen Mother; Philip Duke of Edinburgh; Charles, Prince of Wales; and all the Royal family. Give grace to all who exercise authority in our Commonwealth, that peace and happiness, truth and justice, religion and piety may be established among us. Especially we pray for the Governor of our Islands, the Speaker of the Legislative Assembly, Official Members and Ministers of Executive Council and Members of the Legislative Assembly that we may be enabled faithfully to perform the responsible duties of our high office. All this we ask for Thy great Name's sake.

Let us say the Lord's Prayer together: Our Father who art in Heaven, Hallowed be Thy Name. Thy Kingdom come, Thy will be done in earth, as it is in Heaven. Give us this day our daily bread, and forgive us our trespasses, as we forgive those who trespass against us. And lead us not into temptation, but deliver us from evil. For Thine is the Kingdom, the power and the glory, forever and ever. Amen.

The Lord bless and keep us. The Lord make His face shine upon us and be gracious unto us. The Lord lift up the light of His countenance upon us and give us peace now and always. Amen.

Proceedings resumed at 10.27 am

The Speaker: Please be seated.

READING BY THE HONOURABLE
SPEAKER OF MESSAGES
AND ANNOUNCEMENTS

Governor Designate of Bermuda

The Speaker: I have received no apologies for this morning's sitting.

I should also wish at this time to acknowledge the presence of Sir John Vereker who is the Governor Designate to the Island of Bermuda. I wish to welcome him to the Cayman Islands Parliament.

PRESENTATION OF PAPERS
AND OF REPORTS

Governor (Vesting of Lands) Law, (1998 Revision)
Report and Recommendation on the Crown Grant (Unclaimed) for Block 67(A), Parcel 5 (Part) to the Estate of George Dixon (Deceased)

The Speaker: The Honourable Deputy Leader, Minister for Planning.

Hon. Linford A. Pierson: Madam Speaker, I wish to lay on the Table of this Honourable House, Report and Recommendation on the Crown Grant (Unclaimed) for Block 67 (A), Parcel 5 (Part) to the Estate of George Dixon (Deceased). I have another report to lay and will speak at the end of those and at the laying of that other report.

The Speaker: So ordered.

Governor (Vesting of Lands) Law, (1998 Revision)
Report and Recommendation on the Request for Crown Grant (Unclaimed) for Block 87(A), Parcel 41 to the Estate of John Edward Ryan (Deceased)

The Speaker: Honourable Minister for Planning.

Hon. Linford A. Pierson: Madam Speaker, I also wish to lay on the Table of this Honourable House the Report and Recommendation on the Request for Crown Grant (Unclaimed) for Block 87(A), Parcel 41, to the Estate of John Edward Ryan (Deceased).

The Speaker: So ordered. Do you wish to speak thereto?

Hon. Linford A. Pierson: Yes, Madam Speaker.

The Speaker: Please proceed accordingly.

Hon. Linford A. Pierson: Madam Speaker, I wish to make just a short contribution on the laying of these reports.

I can confirm that as is required by the Law the details of the two proposed land transfers have been published in an extraordinary Cayman Islands

Gazette dated 25 February 2002 and a local newspaper namely, the Cayman Net News Issue No. 156, dated the 22 February to the 25 February 2002.

Also, as required by Law, three valuations have been carried out on each property. Each valuation report forms part of the overall report and provides an indication of the value of the lands that Government now proposes to transfer.

The first report deals with the requests for a Crown Grant (unclaimed) for what is now Block 87(A), Parcel 41, to the Estate of John Edward Ryan (deceased). The valuation on Block 87(A), Parcel 41, estimates the land value to be in the region of US $375 thousand.

This particular matter dates back to 1988 when Executive Council granted approval in principle for a Crown Grant of a portion of Block 87(A), Parcel 18 which amounted to 124.77 acres. There are numerous factors which have contributed to the intermittent action on this request over the years, so I will only highlight some of those issues for this Honourable House.

A survey was necessary to separate the 124.77 acres from the remainder of Parcel 18. In the late 1980's the survey was not prioritised because the swampy and overgrown terrain would have made the work lengthy, difficult and cost prohibitive to Government. In the mid 1990's with the introduction of the GPS the survey was finally completed and even then the job cost Government approximately $20 thousand. This severed section of land then became parcel 41.

After the survey was completed, former Governor John Owen refused to sign the transfer of title documents as Executive Council had only given approval in principal in 1988. The matter was therefore sent back to Executive Council in mid 1997 but the approval given was to refer the matter to the Legislative Assembly. Those were the early days of applying the requirements of the Governor Vesting of Lands Law and this contributed to a further delay in resolving this matter.

Last year Executive Council approved the request for a Crown Grant of Block 87(A), Parcel 41, to the Estate of John Edward Ryan (deceased). This approval was given after following the standard procedures for such matters. The claim was investigated by the Director of Lands and Survey. His report on the result of the investigation along with the evidence supplied by the claimant were then reviewed by the Legal Department and found to be in good order.

The other report deals with Block 67(A) Parcel 5, to the Estate of George Dixon (deceased). Madam Speaker, you may recall that in October 1999 the Standing Public Accounts Committee tabled its Report on the Special Report of the Auditor General on quarrying operations on Crown Land, namely Block 67(A), Parcel 5. The Public Accounts Committee highlighted the fact that back in 1984 Executive Council had approved a land grant to the estate of a deceased, yet it remained outstanding. However, it would have been difficult for the Ministry to action the matter before, now given that the administrator of Mr. Dixon's estate passed on after Executive Council's 1984 approval. The estate remained un-administered up to November 2000. Since that aspect has now been regularised this matter has been actioned in accordance with the requirement of the Governor Vesting of Land Law.

The valuation on the 10.3 acres of Block 67(A) Parcel 5 which is subject to transfer, estimate the value to be in the region of Cayman Islands $20,000 to $35,000.

As mentioned in my brief summary and presentation, extenuating circumstances have contributed to the lengthy delays in both of these cases. So, Madam Speaker, I would ask that you give this presentation and the laying of these documents your support, and ask for your permission that they be laid.

The Speaker: So ordered.

2001 Annual Report of Births and Deaths in the Cayman Islands

The Speaker: The Honourable Third Official Member.

Hon. George A. McCarthy: Madam Speaker, I beg to lay on the Table of this Honourable House, the 2001 Annual Report of Births and Deaths in the Cayman Islands for the year 2001.

The Speaker: So ordered. Would the Honourable Member wish to speak thereto?

Hon. George A. McCarthy: Thank you, Madam Speaker.

For the third year in a row the number of live births in the Cayman Islands exceeded 600. Between Chrissie Tomlinson Memorial Hospital and the Cayman Islands Health Services Complex, 607 babies were born including one baby in route to the Hospital, one born at home and 13 in Cayman Brac. There were a record number of 622 live births in the Cayman Islands during 2001.

The first Table of the Report provides a breakdown of the 622 births showing the total number of births each month by gender and the mother's reported district of residence at the time of the child's birth.

Table 2 provides and analysis by the recorded status of the parents. Caymanian parents refer to those births where both parents were reported to have Caymanian Status. The Caymanian mother, are births where the mother was reportedly a status holder and the father's status was not Caymanian or may have not been stated. Conversely Caymanian fathers are instances where the father has Caymanian status and the status of the mother was not Caymanian or not stated. Lastly, births recorded as non-Caymanian or unknown are those where appearance is recorded as having Caymanian status or births where the mother is non-Caymanian and the father who may have Caymanian status was not recorded.

During 2001 there were a total of 146 deaths registered at the General Registry. Table 3 gives details of these deaths for each month by gender and the usual residence of the deceased. Fourteen of the deaths (less than 10 per cent) were persons not resident in the Islands. The next table attached gives details of the 146 deaths by broad age groups and usual residence. There were twenty-one deaths recorded that occurred outside the Islands where the body or ashes were returned to the Cayman Island for burial or disposition.

Table 5 gives a breakdown by month of death, gender and usual residence of these persons while table 6 gives information regarding their ages. Based on our records, ashes from 3 cremations were buried while 1 was released at sea.

Lastly, during 2001 there were a total of 4 still births registered at the General Registry. A female still birth was recorded for a twenty-six year old mother in April. A male still birth for a twenty seven year old mother in June and one still birth each in July and December for a twenty eight and twenty nine year old mothers, respectively.

Further details on any of the information contained in the report may be obtained from the office of the General Registry. Thank you very much, Madam Speaker.

The Speaker: Thank you, Honourable Member.

QUESTIONS TO HONOURABLE MINISTERS AND MEMBERS OF THE GOVERNMENT

Question No. 29 (deferred)

The Speaker: Question No. 29. The Elected Member from the district of East End.

No. 29: Mr V. Arden McLean asked the Honourable Minister responsible for the Ministry of Tourism, Environment, Development and Commerce, if the Government has entered into any discussions with other entities or individuals regarding the sale of Cayman Airways Ltd.

Question No. 30 (deferred)

No. 30: Mr. V. Arden McLean to ask the Honourable Minister responsible for the Ministry of Tourism, Environment, Development and Commerce, what are the terms and conditions of the proposed entry of the Cayman Islands into the regional body known as the Caribbean Community or CARICOM.

The Speaker: The Honourable Leader, Minister for Tourism.

Standing Order 23(5)

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: Madam Speaker, I would have to defer answering both questions twenty nine and thirty as the written answers were not prepared. However, I can tell the Member if he so desires but I prefer to put it in writing and so I beg leave of the House to defer answering the questions under Standing Order 23(5).

The Speaker: The question is that questions No. 29 and No. 30 be deferred until brought back to the House. All those in favour please say Aye. Those against, No.

Ayes.

The Speaker: The Ayes have it. Elected Member for East End I will permit you to ask question 30 to put it in the record. Question 30. The elected Member from East End.

Agreed: Questions Nos. 29 and 30 deferred.

The Speaker: Thank you.

STATEMENTS BY MEMBERS OF THE GOVERNMENT

Cayman's first National Park in the area of Grand Cayman known as Barkers

The Speaker: I have received statements from the Honourable Leader of Tourism.

The Honourable Leader of Tourism.

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: Thank you, Madam Speaker.

I rise to inform this Honourable House on a matter which I am confident will receive the support of all Honourable Members as well as the general public. The matter to which I refer relates to the planned establishment of Cayman's first National park in the area of Grand Cayman known as Barkers.

Through the United Kingdom the Cayman Islands is party to a number of multilateral environmental agreements which place an obligation on us to create a national system of protected areas. In addition to the obligations placed on the Cayman Islands by the various international conservation agreements, this proposed project is consistent with the environmental charter which I signed on behalf of the Cayman Islands Government in London last year. The environmental value, geographic location, aesthetic appeal and cultural importance of the Barkers area make it an ideal candidate for our first such park.

It is envisaged that the Barkers Park would encourage appreciation for an understanding of Cayman's natural environment, thereby affording people the opportunity to make the connection between high environmental quality and their quality of life and so build and support for the concept of a national system of protected areas.

Last year the Department of Environment applied for and received a grant from the United Kingdom Government in the amount of 25 thousand 185 pounds sterling, to investigate the feasibility of the Barkers park concept. The feasibility component of the project is scheduled for completion in June of this year. So far, the Department has conducted an environmental inventory of the sight; mapped the environmental resources of the area and developed public outreach materials.

An initial valuation of the property within the proposed park boundaries had also been obtained from Lands and Survey. Land ownership information for this property has also been determined. The Department has also developed preliminary estimates of typical implementation costs that might be anticipated in establishing the Barkers National Park, broken down under four separate scenarios that corresponds the provision of increasingly higher levels of infrastructure, staffing and amenities over an initial three year development period. It is envisaged that initial funding for this project will be derived from the Environmental Protection Fund.

Yesterday Executive Council authorised the Department of Environment to proceed with the project's next stage which involves consulting the public in order to illicit peoples opinions and preferences on the concept of a National Park in Cayman at this time.

Public consultation will involve several stages. The first of which will be a public meeting at the West Bay Town Hall to disseminate information to local residents on the proposed National Park plan. Following this meeting, workshops will be held with stakeholder groups with whom it is anticipated the park will have an impact, to illicit their preferences and opinions regarding the National Park. Intended groups to be invited are the Cayman Islands Tourism Association and all businesses currently operating in the area. Focus groups and in-depth interviews will be set up for land owners and Elected West Bay representatives.

Running concurrently with the public meetings will be a survey directed at two groups; residents who live outside the West Bay district, and visitors. The survey is designed to illicit the public's opinion on the concept. All findings will be collated and summarised with the final report to the Government of the Cayman Islands.

Madam Speaker, in conclusion, as I have said previously, this project has the potential to assist the Cayman Islands in meeting obligations under a number of multilateral environmental agreements. In addition the Vision 2008 environment strategy (strategy

11) contains an action plan which calls for the protection of wetlands other than the Central Mangrove Wetlands, which are considered to be ecologically important through acquisition, utilising the environmental fund and then incorporating them in a national system or registry of protected areas. So, Madam Speaker, this project is also consistent with the wishes of the people as expressed in Vision 2008.

It is also important to note that the report summarising results of the West Bay District Development Plan Subcommittees vision for 2011, titled 'West Bay's Future', has as a key objective: 'Preservation of the Barcus (Barkers) Area for Evermore and for Everyone by developing a large national park with absolutely no development at the Head of Barcus'.

This project appears to already have the support of the community and as I have outlined, we intend to engage in even more public consultation on this issue.

If this park is established, it will form the cornerstone for the implementation of a system of protected areas in Cayman that will enrich the lives of all Caymanians and visitors for generations to come.

In addition, the park has the potential to generate sustainable income from the land based Nature/Tourism Industry. On site and outreach education for all generations would increase awareness and encourage appreciation and understanding of Cayman's wonderful, natural environment.

Finally, I wish to suggest that the development of this project is consistent with my 2000 General Elections manifesto. I quote from the environmental section of the manifesto. "If the Cayman Islands are to continue on a steady pattern of economic development, we must consider carefully the options available and implement long term strategic plans to protect our fragile environment. Without planned development and proper growth management, our society, like any other will stagnate. Yet, too much accelerated and unchecked growth will potentially smother a society with uncontrollable risks. With the increasing feeling in the Cayman Islands that accelerated growth in the recent years and the resulting destruction of irreplaceable natural resources is leading the loss of the indigenous Cayman natural environment, this team endeavors to maintain a balance between development and its effects on our natural resources". End of quote, Madam Speaker. This National Park also follows the resultant policy from this manifesto and the balance between development and the environment as I presented last year.

Madam Speaker, I commend this project to this Honourable House and look forward to the support to all Honourable Members as we continue to expand on and hopefully implement the concepts being developed by the Department.

Attached to this statement shows the area proposed park boundary and the current replenishment zone in that area. It shows also, what the Barkers peninsula here in Grand Cayman consists inside the park, in the water, wildlife and other activities. Thank you very much, Madam Speaker.

The Speaker: Thank you Honourable Leader. I will also call on the Honourable Minister of Health who also wishes to make a statement this morning.

Extension of the Contract between the Government of the Cayman Islands and Baptist Health Systems of South Florida

Hon. Gilbert A. McLean: Thank you, Madam Speaker.

Recently I responded to a Parliamentary question by the Elected Member for East End in which he asked and I quote, “If a new contract or agreement has been signed or entered into between the Cayman Islands Health Services Department and the Baptist Hospital Group of Florida.”

At the time I replied to that, as a temporary measure, a decision has been taken to extend the current contract under new conditions and that they were at that time being re-negotiated in an effort to secure more favorable rates for services provided.

Consultants from William M. Mercer Inc. contracted to advise the Government on establishing a sustainable self-funded health scheme and assisted the Ministry and the Health Services Department with the negotiations. A one year extension to the present contract was signed on the 15 March, 2002.

Some of the major issues and general terms that Baptist has agreed to are as follows;

1. Recoup overpayments on the part of the Cayman Islands Government. This provision will require both parties to correct under and over payments within 31 days of when they are identified.
2. Discount level. Based on the last three years of utilization and cost data we have calculated the average discount and instead of continuing the tiered discount arrangement, Baptist has agreed to simplify the contract by giving a fixed percentage discount for all claims.
3. Discount protection. Baptist has agreed to use their US fee schedule as the basis for charges.
4. Care Management. Baptist has agreed to assign a full time registered nurse to, on a daily basis to;
 - i Perform a clinical review of all inpatient admissions with respect to patients referred by the Cayman Islands.
 - ii Subject to the patients consent, provide the Chief Medical Officer with a medical status update on all patients referred by the Cayman Islands then in critical care; and
 - iii Visit all inpatients referred to them by the Cayman Islands to serve as a liaison between the patients and providers. Furthermore each

Friday and subject to the patient's consent, Baptist shall require this Registered Nurse to advise the chief Medical Officer of the medical status of all persons who are inpatients at Baptist during the week.

Finally, the Registered Nurse shall:

- (a) Assist inpatients referred by the Cayman Islands with discharge planning instruction.
- (b) Facilitate the issuance of discharge and consult summaries when such inpatients are discharged.

The last provision will give the Chief Medical Officer clinical information on a more timely basis, and allow him to participate in treatment decisions for patients from the Cayman Islands.

The Ministry of Health has received the first report and recommendations from William M. Mercer Inc. for implementing a more structured and sustainable self funded health scheme for Civil Servants, their dependents, public office pensioners, indigents and other persons for whom government provides medical benefits. They will be returning to Grand Cayman on the 27th and 28th of March to discuss the recommendations and decisions, which will be regarding the strategies to be followed. These strategies include the appointment of a third party administrator to:

- (a) Verify patient status so that claims are paid only for eligible beneficiaries.
- (b) To accurately adjudicate claims via an automated system.
- (c) To apply claim cost management system edits for things like duplicate bills, provider up-coding, provider unbundling, reasonable and customary charge limits et cetera.
- (d) To make claim payments of a timely basis.
- (e) To tract claim and utilization data.
- (f) To contract with a network of providers at discounted rates.
- (g) To offer care management programs to promote the appropriate use of health care services.

Although third party administrators generally charge administrative fees roughly equal to 10 -15 per cent of claims, the savings from claim costs management can be 10 - 15 per cent of claims. The savings generated from the ability to tract claim and utilization data and to make, design and program changes to address cost drivers cannot be quantified at this time. However, such management is an integral component of a sustainable program.

Madam Speaker, the Ministry of Health and the Health Services Department believe that we will be aiming to appoint a third party administrator by January 2003. It was not advisable to enter into another contract with a new provider of medical services overseas. This is especially true, as we expect third party administrator will be able to enter, on our behalf, into arrangements with several medical services providers of excellent reputation and standards at significant discounted rates. Thank you, Madam Speaker.

The Speaker: Thank you, Honourable Minister. Madam Clerk.

GOVERNMENT BUSINESS

MOTIONS

GOVERNMENT MOTION NO. 1/02

The Development and Planning (Amendment) (Heights of Buildings) Regulations 2002

(Continuation of Debate thereon)

The Speaker: The First Elected Member from the district of George Town continuing his debate thereon.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Thank you, Madam Speaker. When we broke on Monday, I had gone through various sections of the proposed amendments to the regulations, and perhaps, there is not a great deal more to go into detail about. However, I would like to spend just a few minutes in relation to how these proposed amending regulations will affect certain other areas, and to raise a few issues which I am confident the Minister will be able to reply to and clear up when he is winding up on the Government Motion.

There are, as I mentioned in my earlier portion of the contribution, two specific areas that I wish to speak to in this regard; that is, the Fire Prevention Code and the Building Code. As I understand it, the Fire Prevention Code is the regulations of the Fire Brigade Law - so to speak. There is also the Building Code, which is used as an integral part of the approval procedure for applications for buildings of whatever nature, whether they are single family homes, multiple dwellings, commercial buildings, condominiums or hotels, whatever.

We have had some informal discussions regarding the impacts that these proposed regulations would have on the Building Code and the Fire Prevention Code. I want to air a certain view that we have discussed (we, meaning the Opposition) and wish to put forward for the Minister's consideration.

When the Fire Prevention Code and the Building Code was being developed, some of us know about the bit of history of it and I can recall certain 'teething' problems for both of them but also in creating the two documents which were adapted from other documents; I cannot remember the exact name but if we look into the Fire Prevention Code of 1997, it refers to a certain North American document which the Building Code, for instance, has been adapted from - I believe, the South Florida building code. I think, other codes were tapped in upon to try to create the one document that would suit what the technocrats thought was the best for our situation. When those two documents were created, they were created based on the existing laws and regulations. Those existing laws and regulations will be impacted by what is being proposed presently. So, in general terms, it is obvious that those two documents will have to be revisited to reflect the changes in the Planning Regulations so that they are in line also.

I understand from the Minister that the Building Code is being worked on and perhaps, as I have checked, between Monday and this morning, the majority of changes to the Building Code may well have been looked at. However, I can safely say that certain areas in the Building Code have not been looked at with a 'fine tooth comb' yet, simply because time has not allowed it, even though there may be some changes that are made. I know for a fact that the Fire Department is not satisfied that it has been gone through as carefully as it needs to be.

The fire prevention code itself, is not looked at yet and certainly there are going to be several aspects of that code which will have to be revisited and the appropriate changes will have to be made.

As I mentioned earlier, both of these documents that I am speaking to were developed with any type of building being constructed in the Cayman Islands, having a maximum height of sixty five feet to the soffit and a maximum number of five stories high. What is being proposed, as I understand from the document, that certain types of buildings will be allowed to go to seven stories high and a maximum height of eighty feet to the soffit. That is what I understand.

Let us take a minute to look at the fire prevention code. You see, there is a principle applied, which I am told by those who know, that buildings below seventy feet are referred to as height restricted buildings. When you go beyond seventy feet you refer to those buildings as 'high rise' buildings. So, we are moving from height restricted buildings at present to high rise buildings, once these proposed regulations are put into effect.

I want to quickly use three or four areas just to show the difference in the requirements, and it is important to note that these examples I will show are simply to prove the point that one needs to work with the other. I am satisfied that the Minister agrees with that. I do not think there is a question there; it is just a matter of getting it done.

Let us look, for instance, at the fire equipment which might be available, at the present. My understanding is that the truck with the tallest ladder is a 12 year old vehicle with a ladder that can go up to 100 feet. On the surface if you are not careful you might say that it is not a big deal then if a building is 100 feet high, but we have to look at it as if we were drawing a triangle because the fire truck cannot and will not be able to fight the fire right up along side of the building. For the ladder to be able to work properly and for access to be gained you cannot simply climb vertically. So, the fire truck has to move away a little bit and then at the best leverage that can be used for the ladders there is an angle going up.

So, if we look at a right angle triangle and the vertical façade of the building is your line going straight up from ground level, then the ladder would be (I think the mathematicians call it) the hypotenuse, which is the longest side of any triangle. So, if your height is 100 feet, for instance, if your height of your triangle which is your building height, then you would need a ladder that is more than 100 feet to be able reach at the angle. At 80 feet it is workable for a hundred foot ladder but there are going to be problems if we try to go beyond that; that is from the point of view of being able to utilise the fire truck. That point needs to be made and made clearly.

Now the fire truck and the ladder are not just to service holding a hose to try and out a fire. There is also an evacuation tool, depending on what the specific circumstances are; depending on exactly what it is. I know that when we speak to other jurisdictions and other high rise buildings, we have buildings that go up over 100 stories and there is no fire fighting equipment which has a ladder that can actually do that; I understand all of that. However, you see, when we speak to our own particular situation and the type of equipment being used, it brings home the point, that if you only have limited equipment to be able to perform certain tasks in the case of a fire, then you also have to look at how your building is constructed when you speak to the safety of the occupants.

For example, if you have a seven story building that is built; whatever it is, whether it be a hotel or an office building or a condominium, however it is. Depending on the type of building it is, is largely dependent on how many bodies would probably be in the building at any one given time. The most densely populated one would most naturally expect to be a hotel. Let us use any one of them and if there were a fire on, let us say, the fourth floor; your fire fighting equipment would easily be able to access that floor to try to fight the fire, either from outside or perhaps depending on where the fire is, the fire fighters may have to go inside of the building for two reasons:- 1) To fight the fire; and 2) To get the people out.

Simple basics! The way that a building is constructed, if there is a fire on the fourth floor you have to have certain guarantees that the construction of that building allows for it to be fire resistant for a certain length of time; to either be able to have the fire men go in safely to fight the fire and or, to go in, and they will probably have to get beyond that fourth floor to help to evacuate occupants of the other three floors up above. If the building is not secure, it is possible that the fire might make that fourth floor collapse and then everybody is in trouble. I do not want to think any further than that but I used the example to make the point.

What the requirements are for up to five stories now will certainly have to reflect more stringent requirements if we are going up to seven. So, it has to be addressed. In making the presentation there is no suggestion that the technical people are not aware of this. When I am through with my line of argument the points will be clear, as to the direction in which I am headed.

So, in using those examples what it displays is the fact the both the Fire Prevention and Building Codes speaks to five story buildings and 65 feet maximum height to the soffits, and we are now proposing to go to eighty feet to the soffits and seven stories. This means that both of them has to be looked at carefully and certain expertise is going to have to be tapped in on, so that you can specify very clearly and articulate it in those documents exactly what the specific requirements are going to be. In doing this it should reflect the structural integrity of those buildings, to be able to be fire resistant for whatever periods of time are determined, to be correct and manageable in order to be able to deal with matters that might come in case there is a fire.

It also has to look directly to the Fire Service and the type of equipment that they must have. While we may be speaking to efficiencies and Government spending we cannot wait until the fire starts, to order the right equipment.

There is another matter also. If we are going to have certain types of buildings being built here, we are going to have to look very closely at personnel and; at training. I know that the Fire Service is certainly in good shape when it comes to their officers being trained but, I am also fairly confident that the type of training that they have at present, even though it might exceed what the requirements are; certainly, they would have to be looking very carefully at what the new requirements maybe for training and equipment, and also the number of personnel.

Again, this is simply the case of prevent rather than cure and you cannot wait until a catastrophe occurs to be able to say, well, this is exactly what we should do and then you speak to hiring how many people you have and training them, and necessary equipment.

I am certain that all of the things that I speak to have been thought about, but I am lining them up by showing exactly what I think need to be done.

When we speak to the Building Code and the Fire Prevention Code, we speak to new evacuation procedures. We speak to certain types of sprinkler systems, which would automatically trip in when there are fires. The higher the building; the more stories the building has, it is obvious, the longer it will take to evacuate people from the building because they have a longer distance to travel to get to safety. This means that whatever the requirements would have to be for those types of buildings, in the secured area allocated within that building for people to be able to evacuate, it is going to be expected for that specific area to be fire resistant for a longer period of time than what is required now. It is only natural that it would take longer for them to evacuate. So, those are the things that we have to be looking at very carefully.

I say again, I know that the Building Code has been examined and I know that personnel from both the Fire Department and the Planning Department have looked at that. However, I venture to say that not all of them are quite satisfied that it has been looked at as carefully as it needs to be looked at. The Fire Prevention Code has not been looked at. We have to be looking at what equipment may be necessary and we have to be looking at the personnel and training in that area. There are other aspects to be looked at but I just choose those areas to speak to the relevance of having to re-examine these situations.

So, what we have in front of us are proposed amendments to the Regulations and it is specifically called the Development and Planning (Amendment) (Heights of Buildings Regulations), and ideally what needs to happen is that whenever these Regulations are to come in force then the other matters need to be addressed simultaneously. We the Opposition hold the view that we do not wish to speak to not supporting these amendments, because we have gone through them; we see the merits and we see what is desired. What we are saying is that we want the assurance that these regulations are not going to be put in force until the other matters are addressed and once everything is lined up, all the ducks are lined up then everybody can be satisfied that what has to be done, has been done and everyone can move forward together from the various areas.

There will also have to be changes via this Legislative Assembly to Laws if it is looked at carefully. There are certain areas that have to be addressed so that what reflects in the documents proposed now will reflect in the other documents. I am not going to go into a lot of details with that but that can be looked at. So, those tidying up exercises also need to be looked because there is a question of possible liability here. Whenever lives are at risk or the possibility of lives being lost exists, there is always a question of liability, and it is incumbent on this Legislator to ensure that all of the legislation that is in place is in sync. Otherwise, if you have conflicting legislation then it is a pile of problems. I certainly know that those in here who speak to the legal terms (including your self Madam Speaker) will understand the point that I am making even though I may not have used legal jargon to explain it.

So, what we are seeking is to just have the assurance from the Government that we are going to get everything lined up and put in place in tandem. I think, not only will the various agencies who are worried at present—some of them are worried; simply because they want it right. Once all of that is done then I think everybody will be satisfied that we have made the right decisions and we are moving forward in the right directions.

Madam Speaker, one more point that I wish to reiterate is when we speak to the cemetery to cemetery situation on the seven mile beach. If I understand what is being proposed correctly, in a hotel/tourism zone, both hotels and condominiums will be able to move to seven stories high with a maximum height of 80 feet to the soffit. The difference is, there is an increase being allowed in the density for the condominiums, and I believe, if I remember correctly, that increase is five units per acre, but there is no increase in the density allowed for hotels. Whatever the figure is; if it is 65 rooms per acre that was allowed on property within these boundaries zoned for hotel/tourism before, for a hotel, then, it is the same amount that will be allowed per acre. That is perhaps the biggest reason why we are able to support going to 7 stories. What it means is that there need not be any tremendous impact on the infrastructure that exists at present. What it also means is that it will allow, by being able to go up higher, to have more land mass for central facilities, for parking and also perhaps, when we look at it, to be able to have (should I say) more depth when it comes to beach and beach access.

So, all in all I think our views have been put forward in a coherent fashion. I trust that it is understood clearly exactly what we seek when we have made the various points and once the Government is able to see the merits of those points and is able to respond in a positive manner then certainly Madam Speaker, we will find comfort in supporting the Government Motion. Thank you.

The Speaker: Thank you. At this time I will take the morning break.

Proceedings suspended at 11.29 am

Proceedings resumed at 12 noon

The Speaker: Proceedings are resumed. Does any other Member wish to speak? Does any other Member wish to speak? Last call, does any other Member wish to speak? If not I will call upon the Honourable Minister responsible for Planning, Deputy Leader, to respond.

Hon. Linford A. Pierson: Thank you, Madam Speaker.

I would like to take this opportunity to reply to the many important issues raised by the Honourable First Elected Member for George Town during his debate, on behalf of Her Majesty's Loyal Opposition. According to my notes the Honourable Member had concerns with several issues, many of which I concur on so I would just like to deal with them in the order, I believe, in which they were mentioned during his debate on this Motion.

The first issue I had here was dealing with the increase of five additional apartments per acre for apartments in the hotel/tourism zone. My response is that this additional density was seen as a means of giving developers an incentive to develop some of the older properties and to also stimulate additional construction. It was also an endeavour to provide some compensation for the increased set backs.

Another point raised was the increased height of hotels which would have an impact on the Esterly Tibbetts Highway, the corridor leading from the airport area onto the seven mile beach area. The increased height for hotels will have some impact on the highway, however, it is Government's intention to have the highway constructed through to Indies Suites within the next five years and this will give us the required road capacity. In the entry Government does not believe that the height increase will significantly impact the roads along the West Bay corridor. We remember most of the land along the beach side is already almost fully developed. So, any new development will be primarily redevelopment and this will indeed take some time. However, since there are no corresponding increases in the number of rooms per acre; it remains at 65 per acre, therefore it will only mean that properties will now be able to achieve the maximum density.

Of seven hotels built in the last twenty years, there is only one which was developed to its full density and I would just like to make reference to that. The Comfort Suites is built on 1.8 acres. They were allowed 117 rooms but built 110 thus using on a ration of .94 of the allowed number that they could build on. The density on this basis is therefore 61, so they did not reach the 65 per acre. As I mentioned there is only one of these numbers of seven that went perhaps a little over that ratio.

The Hyatt on the beach is also on 1.8 acres and they were allowed 117 rooms but only built 53, thus the density is 29 rooms per acre.

The Sunshine Suites built on 6.3 acres allowing them 410 rooms under the law but they only built 132; utilising an average of 21 rooms per acre. Way below the 63 per acre.

Holiday Inn, the new one is on 10.5 acres, they are allowed 683 rooms under the current law but built only 231 room thus utilising 22 rooms per acre.

The Marriott is the only hotel on that area that went slightly over the amount allowed under the Law. They are built on 4.6 acres and that they were allowed 299 rooms but built 309 rooms so they went over by .03 and the rooms per acre in that case were 67.17 instead of the 65.

In the case of the Westin Hotel, they are built on 7.8 acres which would have allowed them 507 rooms total but they built 365 thus having a density of 47 rooms per acre.

The Grand Caymanian is built on 6.7 acres which would have allowed them 436 rooms. They built 198 rooms, also showing a density of 30 rooms per acre, way below the 65 rooms per acre.

This gave an average room per acre on the seven mile beach of 35.4 rooms per acre, which is way below the 65 rooms per acre. So, it shows that even though the law as it stands allowed an increase in density up to 65 rooms per acre except for one hotel, none of the hotels on the seven mile beach have gone near that and the average density is 35.4 rooms per acre, way below the 65 allowed under the Law.

This situation of an average of the 35.4 room per acre is due primarily to height restrictions and the developers having to provide other onsite amenities. Being able to achieve maximum density will also mean that developers will be able to utilise economies of scale, and therefore make the jurisdiction more competitive. I am sure this is something the entire Island would want to do.

On the question of parking requirements as a result of the increased height, Madam Speaker, increasing the height of building in the GC-1 will not necessarily result in an increase in the number of parking spaces. Developments will still be expected to comply with the minimum requirements of the regulations. What it will do is enable developers to provide parking at grade plus any number of floors, if they so wish, and still have x number of floors for rental space. It will also result in sites being able to provide more parking on site as only 25 per cent will be allowed off site.

As an incentive to tenants developers will have greater flexibility in the amount of parking provided and may even result in developments providing excess parking. This excess parking is the amount that exceeds the minimum requirements; that is, Madam Speaker, one space for every 300 square feet outside OPY and one space for every 500 square feet within OPY. OPY is the triangle formed by Mary Street to Shedden Road and then back to Harbour Drive and North Church Street.

The point was also raised in regards to the impact of measuring setback from low water mark to the high water mark. Depending on the location of the site, the impacts will vary. For example, along Seven Mile Beach the difference between the two is about ten to fifteen feet (that is between low water and high water marks). This is because the slope of the seabed is steep. However, in other parts of the Island where the slope is more gentle buildings will have to be set back further from the sea. These sites will be compensated with increased building heights. The idea being that what is lost horizontally will be gained vertically.

I would like to remind Honourable Members of the recent passing of hurricane Michelle and the severe damage it caused to the western coast of the Island. This should be sufficient reason for us to revisit our regulations for set backs from the sea.

In regards to high rise buildings vis-a-vis our fire fighting capabilities, I would like to thank the Member for bringing up this most important issue. However, Government is cognisance that we cannot amend one set of regulations without amending complimentary legislation. We are therefore currently working with the Fire Service and I hope to bring building code amendments to this Honourable House during the June 2002 Meeting of the House at the latest. It might also mean minor amendments to the Fire Brigade Law and I will work with the Leader of Government Business who is responsible for that department, in that regard. The main details that remain to be worked out relate to three areas, firstly;

What is called dry risers - a dry riser is a four inch pipe in the stairwell of buildings that allows fire fighters to connect the fire truck to the ground floor connection and then the fire fighters can connect hoses at each floor. They are always dry except when there is a fire and are connected to the fire truck. In addition;

There is always required a sprinkler system and these are sprinklers in the ceilings of buildings and are connected to a fire pump system.

Is what is referred to as wet riser, and they are similar to the dry risers but always have water and are connected to the sprinkler system.

I have made this point to show that there is no need for any fear of a building going up to 80 feet because the fire department may not have the necessary equipment at present. Already these requirements of dry risers and wet risers are within the CPA or purview and they are already putting these in place. I also understand that very few of the firemen will, in any case, want to fight a fire at a 60 foot level above the ground. So, I believe that when we take this into consideration we also take the point into consideration that when we go abroad and see buildings 50, 60, 70, 80, 90, 100 stories, that it is impossible for fire men to fight those fires from a ladder regardless of what level or what angle that ladder is placed on. There are other means of fighting fire other than with a fire truck and going up on a ladder with a hose to fight those fires.

All newer buildings usually have one or a combination of any of the three systems which I have just mentioned. That is the dry risers, sprinkler system and wet risers; therefore it is not necessary to have fire trucks that can physically reach to the top of high rise buildings once there is other fire fighting equipment on site.

Yesterday the question of the submission of seven story plans now without supporting code provision was also raised. The question raised was: what happens if a potential developer submits a plan at this point but the code and fire requirements are not in place? I accept that this would create some cause for concern however, it is almost impossible for a firm to prepare a set of plans for a set of seven story complex, obtain planning permission and start producing the construction drawings within the next three months. Within that time, as I have said earlier, we hope to have all the necessary ancillary and complementary legislation in place. If someone is capable of doing that then they can refer to the 1999 version of the standard building code because it is this version that the House will be asked to approve shortly. So, there would be legislation or regulations in place.

Another point raised was under parking requirements in and outside of OPY. These amendments are those that were determined by the Central Planning Authority to be the most urgent. A comprehensive review of the Planning Law and Regulations is slated to be completed by year end or early next year. At that time, if Honourable Members wish that we could increase the parking requirements I would be more than happy to consider that request. Conversely, Madam Speaker, if Members are so minded, I would now instruct the Central Planning Authority to prepare the necessary amendments to be submitted also at the June Meeting. However, this is a matter I can speak with the Members about after I finish my contribution here.

This notwithstanding, I am fairly confident that we will not see too many, if any, new seven story buildings in the OPY area in the immediate future due to the current supply of office space on the market.

Another point raised was the minimum set back of the 6 foot in the commercial and industrial zones. The Honourable Member said he had some difficulties with this amendment since the Central Planning Authority could, at its discretion, adjust it up and down. That is the case at present under the law. This provision is currently under the law and since 1977 setbacks in commercial and industrial zones were always at the Authority's discretion. However, if we do not give the Central Planning Authority that discretion and someone wishes to develop a zero lot line (that is right at the boundary) they will not be able to do so. We have certain developments like that currently on the Island. The former Royal Bank building, Barclays Bank and the Bata Shoe Store building are all developed on the boundaries.

With the cost of land, the Government has to make it conducive to maximise their returns. Further developers will see greater utilisation of land since we have a finite amount of land for such development.

Another point raised was increasing the width for access through a mangrove buffer from 75 feet to 100 feet. I would like to thank the Member for supporting this amendment and he quite eloquently explained the justification for it, therefore, I will not take any more time from the House in expanding on this.

Land for public purposes referred to as LPP was formally known as public open space. The First Elected Member also had some concerns with this particular clause, which is Clause 9 (2) (b), namely that existing land owners need not be notified if the developer of a subdivision wanted to divest of the land for public purposes. I am reliably informed by the Chairman of the Central Planning Authority and the Director of Planning that the current practice is for land owners to be notified and the developer has to obtain a majority consent order before the Central Planning Authority would delete or reduce the amount of land for public purposes in a subdivision. This practice is to be continued. Again if Members so wish, I can, at a subsequent meeting consider an amendment so that it is a legal requirement for land owners to be notified and consent given before any changes are made to the status quo.

On the question of a fund, I think the Member mentioned a segregated fund for the LPP, which I refer to here as the land for public purposes (LPP) fund. Madam Speaker, the Ministry supports the establishment of such a fund, to ensure that the monies raised from the sale of these LPP sites will be used for the intended purposes. Again, I would be more than pleased to consider an amendment that would include inserting the requirements for an establishment of such a fund.

The excavation fee—currently an application fee for excavation can be in excess of $100,000; depending on the size of the excavation. If the application is refused the fee is lost, as application fees are non refundable; that is the position at present. In the past Executive Council has made arrangements with applicants to pay on terms but this has proven to be administratively inconvenient. However, the proposed arrangement is that there will be a processing fee and a royalty fee. If the application were refused the applicant would only lose the $1,000 in the case of Grand Cayman or the $00 in the case of Cayman Brac and Little Cayman. If it is approved, the applicant would then enter into an agreement with the Central Planning Authority to pay the royalty in instalments. This would make the system more equitable for all concerned.

Madam Speaker, I believe that I have touched on most of the points raised by the Honourable Member. So, all that remains now is for me to thank the Honourable Member for that very good contribution to this Motion, and all other Members who, even though they did not speak on this, has given their tacit approval to this Motion. Thank you, Madam Speaker.

The Speaker: Thank you, Honourable Minister.

The question is that the draft Development and Planning (Amendment) (Heights of Buildings) Regulations 2002, having been laid on the Table of this Honourable House, be hereby approved by the Legislative Assembly in accordance with the provision of section 45(3) of the Development and Planning Law (1999 Revision). All those in favour please say Aye. Those against, No.

Ayes.

The Speaker: The Ayes have it.

Agreed: Government Motion 1/02 passed

The Speaker: Honourable Members it is now 12.30 pm is it the wish of the House to take the luncheon break or should we commence on the next Motion?

We shall now rise to suspend for the luncheon break and reconvene at 2.15 pm.

Proceedings suspended at 12.26 pm

Proceedings resumed at 2.30 pm

The Speaker: Please be seated. Proceedings are resumed.

Suspension of Standing Order 24(5)

The Speaker: Honourable Leader of Government Business.

Hon. W. McKeever Bush: Madam Speaker, I move the suspension of Standing Order 24(5) in order to take the Motion before the House at this time.

The Speaker: The question is that Standing Order 24(5) be duly suspended. All those in favour please say Aye. Those against, No.

Ayes.

The Speaker: The Ayes have it.

Agreed: Standing Order 24(5) suspended to allow Government Motion No. 2/02 to be taken without the required five clear day's notice (SO 24(5)).

GOVERNMENT MOTION NO. 2/02

CARICOM Associate Membership

The Speaker: The Honourable Leader of Government Business.

Hon. W. McKeever Bush: Madam Speaker, I beg to move the following Motion: Government Motion No. 2.

“WHEREAS Cayman has held Observer status within CARICOM for several decades now and the Government is desirous of advancing that status;

“AND WHEREAS the Government of the Cayman Islands had made an application to CARICOM to become an Associate Member;

“AND WHEREAS the 13th Inter-Sessional Conference of Heads of CARICOM, held in Belize 3-5 February 2002 resolved to accept Cayman's application for Associate Member status within CARICOM under the terms and conditions to be attached;

“AND WHEREAS the Cayman Islands' participation and the regional sub-grouping of CARICOM will provide the greater benefit deepening co-operation thereby strengthening the collective ability of the region to influence the international approaches taken to resolve global issues such as international taxation and money laundering which directly affect Cayman's economic viability;

“AND WHEREAS Associate Membership within CARICOM will provide Cayman with direct access and participation on the community's subsidiary bodies, organs and its various programmes except those relating to Foreign Relations;

“BE IT NOW THEREFORE RESOLVED THAT the Legislative Assembly agrees to support the acceptance of the offer of Associate Membership within CARICOM under the terms and conditions attached by the community”.

The Speaker: The Motion has been duly moved and is open for debate. Does the Honourable Minister wish to speak thereon?

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: Thank you, Madam Speaker. There is the saying that ‘no man is an island’; this simple truth has become increasingly applicable to these, our beloved Islands, as we have become encompassed in various initiatives.

The fact is, that the Cayman Islands has not had to go out and search for such issues but rather these initiatives have found their way to our shores by their very scope; these initiatives has already demonstrated an ability to impact our interests on policies. In matters of great magnitude such as international taxation and money laundering, there are very real implications for industries in the Cayman Islands. As a developing country, particularly one with a mature international financial centre, Cayman must not pursue isolation but we should rather engage in dialogue with appropriate groupings, which will allow our small country to pool and leverage of our voice on matters of mutual concern.

By way of this Motion, the Government recognises that the time has come for Cayman to strengthen its ability to contribute to discussions and tackle challenges which relate to our own interests. Consequently this Motion seeks to advance the Cayman Islands long standing status as an observer within CARICOM to an Associate status, allowing Cayman to gain certain privileges. While information on this matter has already been widely disseminated, for clarity, I will reiterate the numerous benefits linked to gaining Associate Membership including the following:

1. Representation in forums and meetings currently not available directly to the Cayman Islands, such as the World Bank and International Monetary Fund.
2. Increased bargaining power and issues of common concern to CARICOM and the Cayman Islands like the OECD matters; CARICOM has established regional negotiating machinery for that purpose.
3. Participation in the various programs and working groups of CARICOM on issues such as AIDS, tourism development, disaster recovery, agricultural research, cultural development and drug interdiction efforts.

4. Direct access to technical assistance in areas mentioned previously.

Let me now say—should there be any lingering misconception about what Associate Membership means for the Cayman Islands—that there would not be any free movement of CARICOM nationals, goods or services across Cayman borders. There is no requirement for Cayman Islands to participate in the Caribbean Single Market and the economy. In this forum Cayman would not speak to foreign affairs, a responsibility which we all know is reserved for the United Kingdom. When contemplating this action the Government previously sought and received the support of the United Kingdom Government.

I see this as a very important development, as it will allow the Cayman Islands to move in tandem with others when there are international issues which affect the region as a whole.

One of the issues currently under discussion with the region is about it becoming part of the free trade agreement of the Americas and this is a proposal by President George Bush and will bring together a region with some 800 million persons if and when that proposal is finalised.

The Caribbean region has been seeking certain assurances to protect small countries and stand to enjoy benefits from inward foreign investment and other special benefits, which the members of the free trade agreement countries will participate in. It is extremely important that we are not left out of the loop as there may possibly be significant benefits to our people. I believe a voice with our neighbours on issues which affect the region, can only have long term benefits for our country and our people.

With the consent of this Honourable House the Cayman Islands will be among those overseas territories who have previously obtained Associate Member Status. In-fact, Madam Speaker, overseas territories such as Anguilla, the British Virgin Islands and Turks and Caicos Islands, already sit in this capacity, and I know that Bermuda has been accepted as well. As an Associate Member the Cayman Islands will be bound to identical terms as the other overseas territory members whereby we will be allowed to attend, to precipitate generally but not to vote and not to participate or take position on matters that are reserved for the United Kingdom.

For the sake of the record (to put on record) I want to read the agreement between the Caribbean Community and the Government of the Cayman Islands. This is what the agreement says:

“The Caribbean Community (herein after called “CARICOM”) and the Government of the Cayman Islands:

“HAVING REGARD to Article 231 of the Revised Treaty of Chaguaramas Establishing the Caribbean Community Including the CARICOM

Single Market and Economy which provides for Associate Membership of the Community;

“RECOGNISING the present constitutional restraints on the capacity of the Government of the Cayman Islands to participate in the decision-making process of CARICOM on matters relating to defence and foreign affairs;

“BEARING IN MIND the existing and the possible further involvement of the Government of the Cayman Islands in areas of functional co-operation within CARICOM;

“ACKNOWLEDGING that the Government of the Cayman Islands has received the relevant Instruments of Entrustment to enable it to participate as an Associate Member of the Caribbean Community; “HEREBY AGREE as follows:

“The Cayman Islands shall, in accordance with the decisions of the Conference of Heads of Government of CARICOM taken at its Thirteenth Intersessional Meeting held in Belize City, Belize, during the period 3 to 5 February 2002, become an Associate Member of CARICOM subject to the following terms and conditions:

- i the right of attendance by the Cayman Islands as an Observer at Meetings of the Conference of Heads of Government and the Community Council of Ministers;
- ii the right of participation (without the right to vote) in the deliberations of the Organs and Subsidiary Bodies of the Community, with the exception of the Council for Foreign and Community relations, in order to promote the interests of the Cayman Islands in specific programs and measures, including the right to propose programmes and measures or the modification of programmes and measures as well as to share in the benefits of all CARICOM regional programmes and measures, whether proposed by the Cayman Islands or not. It is mutually agreed and understood that the Cayman Islands will not participate in the discussions relating to Foreign Policy issues and any other organ of the Community;
- iii accession by the Cayman Islands to the Protocol on Privileges and Immunities of the Caribbean Community and other relevant Community Instruments, and enactment of national legislation necessary for conferring the required status upon the Community in its national jurisdiction;
- iv acceptance by the Cayman Islands of the Caribbean Community travel document (laissez-passer);
- v pursuant to the related provisions of the Treaty establishing the Community as amended, decisions of the concerned Organs and Subsidiary Bodies would continue to be based on the action of the existing full Members of the Community;

- vi the required quorum for meetings of the concerned Community Organs and Subsidiary Bodies would continue to be based on the existing full Members of the Community;
- vii payment of an appropriate contribution to the budget of the CARICOM Secretariat.”

That ends the agreement. So, Madam Speaker, with the support of this Honourable House the Government seeks to accede to associate membership in May 2002 when the Caribbean Development Bank Annual Board of Governors meets in Grand Cayman.

I proposed this venue for this document to be signed here in the Cayman Islands and that was done by the President of Caribbean Development Bank, the Chairman of CARICOM, the Honourable Said Musa, Prime Minister of Belize, and they agreed not to have a signing in Belize but to have the signing done here as I requested.

I think it most fitting that such a significant event should take place locally where all persons and all Members of this Honourable House could be a witness. Also I would like to take this opportunity to express my gratitude to those who have worked so hard to bring this to fruition. Over the past many years this was the responsibility of the Portfolio of Finance and Economic Development. The Deputy Financial Secretary, Mr. Joel Walton was the person who usually attended this meeting with me. In fact we attended it in the Bahamas last year and in Belize earlier this year.

So, Madam Speaker, we ask Members to agree to the resolution. Thank you very much.

The Speaker: Thank you, Honourable Minister. Does any other Member wish to speak?

The First Elected Member from the district of George Town.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Thank you, Madam Speaker.

In looking at the agreement, I think there are just two questions which we would like to make very clear in our minds, as we really have not had a chance to take a long look at it or do any research.

In principle I do not believe that any one of us have any problems with the Cayman Islands acquiring Associate Membership of the CARICOM body. However, when we look at the agreement, there are two sections as I mentioned. On page 2 of the agreement, number three in italics, I would just like for the Honourable Minister in his reply to expand on what we are dealing with when we speak to: ‘the enactment of the national legislation necessary for conferring the required status upon the community in its national jurisdiction’. Obviously for those who are familiar with CARICOM perhaps this might be very clear, but it is not absolutely clear to us and we would just like to make sure that we have a full understanding of exactly what it is.

For clarity, the other question is where it states: 'acceptance by the Cayman Islands of the Caribbean Community travel document (laissez-passer)'. I think that is how it is pronounced. (inaudible interjection) That is close enough I believe, Madam Speaker. Again, we would just like to be very clear with regards of what the Caribbean Community travel document is and it is simply for purposes of clarity. I think the other sections are straightforward to all of us but if we could have explanation of those two items just to be absolutely clear, the Opposition would be very grateful before the vote is taken. Thank you.

The Speaker: Does any other Member wish to speak? The Elected Member for the district of East End.

Mr. V. Arden McLean: Thank you, Madam Speaker.

I rise too like the First Elected Member from George Town to give a short contribution to this Government Motion on CARICOM Associate Membership.

Madam Speaker, it is like what the First Elected Member from George Town said; it has been recognised a very long time ago within the Cayman Islands that maybe the networking of all the Caribbean States would be a very good thing on the world stage, as well as within the Caribbean. We all know in the 50's the Federation started and it fell through but certainly times have changed and, in particular, when there are issues such as the Organisation for Economic Co-operation and Development (OECD) and Financial Action Task Force (FATF). I believe, it would be a very worthwhile thing to be able to network and know exactly where everybody is going.

When we speak about tourism we cannot operate in isolation as the Cayman Islands, when it comes to tourism in the Caribbean. Therefore, I think there will be benefits derived from it.

The First Elected Member from George Town spoke about the acceptance by the Cayman Islands of the Caribbean Community travel document. I too, have some concerns with that. I recently was informed that the Organisation of Eastern Caribbean States (OECS) was debating that same issue in their membership states. The Second Elected Member from George Town and I, had the opportunity to travel to the Island of St. Kitts recently, during the long break we had last week, which we did on our own in trying to find out what free movement was all about within the OECS States. Certainly, the OECS States are not as expanded as CARICOM but I believe, in essence, the movement within CARICOM would be similar.

It was interesting to hear the St. Kitts Parliament debate that issue. I believe to some extent it was reduced in content and in the extent free movement will be agreed upon from what the original intent was and I was very pleased to hear that the OECS is a little different. Their interpretation of free movement within the states is a little different from what I thought it was. It certainly is more restrictive than we initially understood.

My understanding from the OECS, as a result of that debate in St. Kitts, is that it is restricted to the point where it is similar to the US Immigration policy where, if you enter into America and you are considered of good standing, you will be stamped 6 months to stay within America. However, it does not prevent the work permit provisions from coming into play. The same is going to happen with the OECS states, whereby, I think most of them already had in their Immigration Laws that the Member State citizens could be issued by the Immigration Officer, up to 6 months entry visa. That is now changing where they shall give 6 months. It does not give that citizen of the other state the right to work within that state. What it does is give that citizen the opportunity to stay there unmolested for 6 months. They do not have to get their time renewed, and if by chance they get the opportunity to apply for a job, their prospective employer then have to apply for a work permit. Prior to that, I believe it was thought that free movement meant you could come in and work unrestricted within the other country and that is not so; not within the OECS states.

Now, the OECS is governed by a different organisation than CARICOM. Therefore, I think it is only fair and reasonable to ask the Government to explain to us (the Opposition) and the country, exactly what condition (iv) means, which states: "acceptance by the Cayman Islands of the Caribbean Community travel document". As part of that there is also within the OECS where they are going to develop a travel ID for all their citizens so that when it is presented it is recognised. There will be no need for the other travel document such as the country's passport.

Rightly so, I think the argument of the Opposition in St. Kitts was surrounding the concern of their own people losing jobs, and I believe that concern would be right at the forefront of the people of the Cayman Islands, as well. Certainly, it is a concern of the Opposition that the technicalities in how this is going to work has to ensure that the Caymanians are not put out of jobs and so on. I believe that the St. Kitts Opposition was quite clear in trying to determine how that is going to work. Likewise, I believe that we need to determine that also.

The conditions as was circulated earlier, and if I may pause here, Madam Speaker, because I am just a little bit baffled as to how a question that I submitted over a month ago could not be answered and had to be deferred but within three hours we have the conditions circulated. Nevertheless, I welcome these conditions that have now been circulated albeit immediately prior to the debate.

I am just reminded by my colleague about condition (iv), and I wonder if the Government understands or is in possession of any total conditions; if it is the same thing as the OECS or is it different with regard to travel amongst membership countries. I trust that the Minister in his reply will give us the information necessary because as we can appreciate condition (iv); it can mean a lot of things.

Certainly, I agree and I know that if we have to accept it then they would have to accept ours because if not, then we certainly will not be accepting theirs and recognising any other country that does not recognise us as Associate Members.

The other section that I thought needed some explanation on is (vii), which I would respect some explanation on this. That section states: "payment of an appropriate contribution to the budget of the CARICOM Secretariat". Now we have heard many times that Cayman is not privileged to any special concessions, particularly when we are borrowing money where we have to pay premium rates, and some believe that is a result of our own success. It would be interesting, and I am sure, that it would be appropriate for the Government to let us know what that contribution is that the Cayman Islands have to make to the CARICOM Secretariat, if they have that information.

Madam Speaker, as I said earlier, I believe that in the interest of a Caribbean Community partnership and networking, becoming an Associate Member is not all that bad. Certainly, the conditions must be looked at. We must ensure that the Cayman Islands will also benefit, not only from the networking and being amongst friends, having unity, which makes strength, but also to see what kind of effects it is going to have on the people of the Cayman Islands with regards to the travel within the Member States. In particular, the travel into the Cayman Islands; what those conditions are; how will the Cayman Islands benefit as a result; and last but not least, how will we be able to travel throughout.

I would like to think that the travel document of the Caribbean Community, which I suspect, that their travel document would have to be recognised by some symbol or whatever to be able to recognise it within the CARICOM States. I know that in all the CARICOM States when entering Immigration you will see a 'CARICOM State Members' line and that is a specific line. As an Associate Member will the Cayman Islands people be required to walk through these lines? Will there be a special passport? Will there be a special identification? All of these things, I think the people of the country needs to know. In the absence of all these things if these are not forthcoming I would venture to say that this may be a little premature to bring the Motion and ask for acceptance by this Legislature.

I believe all these things needs to be explained, not only to the Opposition, but more importantly to the people of the country, as to how it is going to work; what they can expect and what is expected of the people of the Cayman Islands. We are but a few, and the people need to know what to expect. I believe, if these are not forthcoming then, as I said, this may be a little premature and I would ask the Government to step back and wait until we are certain as to what these conditions mean; certain to the point that it is acceptable by the people of the Cayman Islands. Thank you, Madam Speaker.

The Speaker: Does any other Member wish to speak? Does any other Member wish to speak?

The Second Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. Alden M. McLaughlin, Jr.: Thank you, Madam Speaker for this opportunity to offer a few additional comments on behalf of the Opposition in relation to this Motion.

I believe that the Opposition is fully supportive of the Cayman Islands becoming more closely associated with our Caribbean brothers and sisters. We are also supportive of the move by the Cayman Islands Government to take the Cayman Islands out of the era of what I may term 'splendid isolation in the Caribbean'.

It is, I would note, an initiative which was begun when the First Elected Member for George Town was Leader of Government Business and I am pleased that the new leader and his Government have seen fit to continue to pursue this matter. However, like the First Elected Member for George Town and the Elected Member for East End, I have some concerns at the dearth of information that has been generally available to Honourable Members of this House and to the wider community in relation to the terms and conditions, consequences and ramifications of the Associate Membership of the Community, which this resolution seeks to effect.

As the Elected Member for East End indicated, I accompanied him on a trip to the Federation of St. Kitts and Nevis, and we had the opportunity to attend Parliament and listen to some of the debate on the issue of free movement amongst the organisation of the Eastern Caribbean States. We also had the opportunity to attend a public meeting where Members of the Cabinet of St. Kitts and Nevis answered many questions and addressed many concerns of the citizens of that Federation, regarding the consequences of free movement.

The question as to whether or not Members of the Caribbean Community will be able to travel to the Cayman Islands and stay for extended periods of time, or indeed, to work in the Cayman Islands as a consequence of this agreement, is one that the Government must address.

Members of the Opposition are certainly in favour of, as I said earlier, strengthening the ties and embracing other Caribbean nationals, but we can only do so to the extent that it is not to the detriment of the Cayman Islands. We certainly, in my respectful view, cannot at this stage, in a situation where the Cayman Islands is still perhaps one of the most attractive places in which to live and work, agree to provisions which would have the effect of causing the Cayman Islands to be required to permit persons who come from the wider Caribbean Community to work here without restrictions, simply as a result of the signing of this agreement.

To pursue the point raised by the Elected Member from East End, that is why it is absolutely critical that the people of this country and in the first instance, the Government of this country understands what is meant by clause (iv), that is the acceptance by the Cayman Islands of the Caribbean Community travel document (laissez-passer). We need to know and if the Government knows, we need to know what they know about what this particular provision means. I do hope that at this point the Government has understood what that means and if they have, Madam Speaker, we certainly would be most grateful to be enlightened by them.

The First Elected Member for George Town also asked what national legislation would need to be enacted to confer the required status upon the community in the Cayman Islands; that is provision (iii) of this Agreement. I am not sure what required status means and I would be grateful to the Honourable Minister if he could indicate to us what that means. What is the required status that needs to be conferred upon the community in the Cayman Islands and what will the effect of that be?

So, I reiterate those points which were dealt with to some extent, by the First Elected Member for George Town and the Elected Member for East End. For emphasis and to emphasise our concerns about these issues, I invite the Honourable Minister in his reply to provide some elucidation and to expand upon what he said when he introduced the Motion. I believe it is incumbent upon him and the Government, in a matter of seriousness and importance, to provide this Honourable House and the community at large, with sufficient information so that when this agreement is signed and when we become an Associate Member of the Community of CARICOM, including the CARICOM Single Market and Economy, that the country and all persons who are residents within the country fully understand what this means; what its effects are; what are the benefits and what are the consequences of this very important step.

So, with those few words I will thank you and resume my seat. Thank you, Madam Speaker.

The Speaker: Thank you Honourable Member. Does any other Member wish to speak? Does any other Member wish to speak? If not we will take the afternoon break, after which I shall call upon the Honourable Leader to do his reply if he so wishes.

Proceedings suspended at 3.22 pm

Proceedings resumed at 4.00 pm

The Speaker: Please be seated. Proceedings are resumed.

The Honourable Leader of Government Business.

Hon. W. McKeever Bush: Madam Speaker, the Government considers that this Motion; this agreement is not something that we just dropped in our lap and not something just thought up; this is something that has been around for many years. This, as they have said, has been around even last year when the First Elected Member from George Town was leading the Government.

While the Opposition says it wants to strengthen the ties and embrace other Caribbean nationals, they in many words, have done their best to create confusion and to use scare mongering tactics. They have also done their best to give the impression that the Cayman Islands, under the agreement before us, would be sacrificing its national sovereignty; some of them knew about this for a long time. However, nothing could be further from the truth, Madam Speaker, and the truth is that every one of them who spoke knows that what I am saying is correct. Responsible Opposition! They are responsible as two squabs.

First let me deal with this matter of the question on the Order Paper (question 30), as I gave an undertaking that the question was ready and it would have been here to be read today if the Permanent Secretary had not gotten sick yesterday and had to be at home. I think I intimated that to you, Madam Speaker, and there was some confusion as to where the answer was. Yes, the question could have been answered to an extent some time ago, but I had, as I suspect some of them might have had, the Anguilla Agreement. However, I had not gotten our Agreement and that Agreement is the same as Bermuda's, Anguilla's, Turks and Caicos' and the British Virgin Islands', it is the same and the British would not have allowed this Agreement if anything was wrong with it, because it would be taking away their sovereignty. That is why the question was not answered today—two things 1) the Permanent Secretary and 2) I waited until I could get our Agreement for Members to have so that they could see our Agreement, although it remains the same. I was trying not to let happen, exactly what happened. They get up; throw a lot of confusion into it; make a lot of noise; a lot of rhetoric politically to hear them-selves chat!

As to the contribution, the First Elected Member from George Town could have told them! When myself, and Mr. Walton came back from the Bahamas last year, we said to Executive Council that the contribution would be between $25,000 and $40,000. Maybe he will say that he did not remember, but he certainly was told. The whole of Executive Council was told because when ever we go on any meeting or conference for Government, there is a report to Executive Council, either verbally or written, in most cases, at least in this Government we do.

Let us get to the confusion they have created or are trying to create. They have questioned, in particular, clauses (iii) and (iv) in the Agreement. The Second Elected Member for George Town, who spoke specifically and timely, was doing his best to say that they do not know what they have done so we need to let the people know.

As I said, firstly the United Kingdom Government had to give its letter of entrustment and then they had to agree to the CARICOM Agreement. This Government would not have brought this Agreement here without legal advice and that legal advice came from the Solicitor General. This Memorandum to the Permanent Secretary, the Ministry of Tourism, Environment, Development and Commerce from the Solicitor General, dated March 14, 2002, subject: "Review of terms and conditions of CARICOM Associate Membership. I read:

"I refer to your request of the draft agreement between Cayman Islands Government (CIG) and CARICOM. I also refer to our subsequent discussions SG/Permanent Secretary, and the fact that your office is subsequently providing me with necessary documentation by way of memo of March 14, 2002 with enclosures.

"I have perused the above mentioned agreement along with the relevant provisions of the Treaty of Chaguaramas as amended establishing CARICOM, (hereinafter referred to as the "Treaty").

"I have also discussed (via phone) with the Deputy Financial Secretary the contents of the draft agreement and CIG's involvement to date with CARICOM.

"It is my understanding, having read the relevant draft Government Motion, that the Legislative Assembly will be asked to agree to support the acceptance of the offer of Associate Membership within CARICOM and to endorse the acceptance of the terms and conditions to be attached by the Community (CARICOM).

"I am of the opinion, that legally it is quite acceptable for the CIG to proceed with the draft agreement and its current form. Indeed, it is still in draft form and the Deputy Financial Secretary has confirmed to me that there will be further discussions/reviews prior to CIG signing off on the final document. Accordingly there will be further opportunities for the CIG to revisit the agreement and to suggest amendments if necessary.

"Additionally, although Article 30 (2) provides that on an application for Associate Membership the conference shall determine the conditions under which the applicant state maybe associated with CARICOM, there are adequate safeguards in place to protect Associate Members, an example is provided in Article 31 to the effect that decisions taken under the treaty requiring certain actions shall be subject to the relevant constitutional procedures of the respective Member States.

"Indeed the procedure has been that for Associate Institutions to operate in Member States, each Member State prefers to enact domestic legislation incorporating them as national institutions. For example the Caribbean Development Bank (CDB) Law, (Law 6 of 1970) (1997 Revision), Cayman Islands, the effect of which was to inter alia, provide statutory recognition of the CIG relationship with CDB.

"Finally in this regard, I am not unmindful of paragraph (iv) of the draft agreement (acceptance by CIG of CARICOM Travel Document laissez-passer). This again would be an area that would be subject to national legislation and therefore there would be adequate safeguards to protect against any possible unbearable cross-border human trafficking.

"In conclusion therefore it is my opinion that legally the current draft is acceptable. I would advise that there be a further legal review prior to CIG executing the final Agreement.

"Samuel Bulgin, Solicitor General"

Madam Speaker, I think that clears up the questions which were totally, in my opinion, unnecessary because the First Elected Member from George Town has been party to this for quite some time. If they are serious about being the Loyal Opposition that they say they are then they ought to behave in a responsible manner. To get up here and try to scare mongering, concerning the inflow and outflow of people - immigration into this country, it is most ridiculous and dangerous, but it shows an Opposition that is junior.

Immigration into the Cayman Islands is and always will be governed by the provisions of the Immigration Law. This Agreement or any other agreement will supersede the Immigration Law of the Cayman Islands if the United Democratic Party has anything to do with it. The Government has not and will never do anything to affect our people detrimentally.

The converse is true; we are here trying to bring us into a relationship with our Caribbean neighbours which will bring us benefits as a collective body, not available as a single member state. What are some of those benefits? I read those benefits but let me repeat them because after I read them they asked the question again; what are the benefits? There would be representation in forums and meetings, currently not available directly to the Cayman Islands; increased bargaining power and issues of common concern to CARICOM and the Cayman Islands, like the OECD matters. I should say, Madam Speaker, that the CARICOM has established an eminent negotiating team so that when they go to those various meetings, which we would not get into, they would negotiate and anything that is good we will get the benefit of it.

Benefits would be participation in the various programs and working groups of CARICOM, on issues such as HIV AIDS, tourism development, disaster recovery, agricultural research, cultural development and drug interdiction efforts. One of the things I know that CARICOM is looking at right now is a high security prison for the Caribbean. We would also have direct access to technical assistance in those areas mentioned.

Let me reiterate again, there should not be any lingering misconception about what Associate Membership means for the Cayman Islands. However, when I speak to the Opposition I know that they know, that there would not be any free movement of CARICOM nationals; goods or services across Cayman borders. Our national laws would always dictate. There is no requirement for Cayman to participate in the Caribbean Single Market and Economy, and in this forum Cayman would not speak to foreign affairs because the United Kingdom speaks on foreign affairs for the Cayman Islands.

They know all this but they have done their endeavour best, ever since this Government took over on the 8 November 2001, to everything that we have put forward except for a few. God only knows how those two measures got agreement; God only knows because they have criticised; they have spread rumours; they have said some of everything about what the Government has been doing. What we have been doing is trying to do good for the people of this country, perhaps some of the things that should have been done a year ago.

The other matter that they questioned, I believe that Mr. Bulgin cleared it up. However, the matter of the Immunities and Privileges—do not tell me that they say that they are a responsible Opposition; Her Majesty's Loyal Opposition, they say. They do not know what that is! This is no more than the Immunities and Privileges which exists to Members of this Honourable House; which should recognise this Agreement and respect the offices of CARICOM officials; that is what we should do. We should respect and recognise them and give them certain privileges when they come into the airport, for instance; why not?

Just let me say that nothing in this Agreement would come into being without the passage of national legislation if we do not already have it. However, this agreement will not come into play without national legislation recognising it; they know that!

What will happen from here is that we will sign it and participate in the things that benefit the Cayman Islands, and these are all good things. If they were as genuine as they claim to be and wanted to strengthened ties, they would not have tried to do what was attempted here this afternoon. I am no lawyer but I have good common sense, much more than some of them give me credit for, and I will tell you another thing, Madam Speaker, while I am at it, and I will close on this: There is a clause existing in the Constitution before us, which says that the Attorney General of this country can be appointed or must be a lawyer. Well I tell you this Madam Speaker, that clause would never get any support from McKeeva Bush.

The Motion is very clear; it has a lot of public discussion. The Agreement is very clear, it will not come into force without further review by the Legal Department, as Mr. Bulgin has said, and I invite the Opposition to come and witness the signing. Thank you Madam Speaker.

The Speaker: Thank you, Honourable Leader. The question is that the Legislative Assembly agrees to support the acceptance of the offer of Associate Membership with CARICOM under the terms and conditions attached by the Community. All those in favour please Aye. Those against, No.

Ayes.

The Speaker: The Ayes have it.

Agreed: Government Motion No. 2/02 passed.

The Speaker: Is it the wish of the House to move the Motion for the adjournment at this time or commence the new Motion?

Honourable Leader of Government Business.

ADJOURNMENT

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: Madam Speaker, it seems to be the wish to adjourn at this time and I so move the adjournment of this Honourable House until 10 am tomorrow morning being Thursday, 21 March. Thank you.

The Speaker: The question is that the Honourable House do now adjourn until 10am tomorrow, Thursday, 21 March 2002. All those in favour please say Aye. Those against, No.

Ayes.

The Speaker: The Ayes have it. The Honourable House stands adjourned until 10 am tomorrow, 21 March 2002.

At 4.24 pm the House stood adjourned until 10 am, Thursday, 21 March 2002.

OFFICIAL HANSARD REPORT
THURSDAY
21 MARCH 2002
10.30 AM
Fourteenth Sitting

The Speaker: Please be seated. I will now invite the lady Member from the district of North Side to grace us with prayers.

PRAYERS

Ms. Edna M. Moyle: Let us pray:

Almighty God, from whom all wisdom and power are derived: we beseech Thee so to direct and prosper the deliberations of the Legislative Assembly now assembled, that all things may be ordered upon the best and surest foundations for the glory of Thy Name and for the safety honour and welfare of the people of these Islands.

Bless our Sovereign Lady Queen Elizabeth II; the Queen Mother; Philip, Duke of Edinburgh; Charles, Prince of Wales; and all the Royal family. Give grace to all who exercise authority in our Commonwealth, that peace and happiness, truth and justice, religion and piety may be established among us. Especially we pray for the Governor of our Islands, the Speaker of the Legislative Assembly, Official Members and Ministers of Executive Council and Members of the Legislative Assembly that we may be enabled faithfully to perform the responsible duties of our high office. All this we ask for Thy great Name's sake.

Let us say the Lord's Prayer together:

Our Father who art in Heaven, Hallowed be Thy Name. Thy Kingdom come, Thy will be done on earth, as it is in Heaven. Give us this day our daily bread, and forgive us our trespasses, as we forgive those who trespass against us. And lead us not into temptation, but deliver us from evil: For Thine is the Kingdom, the power and the glory, forever and ever. Amen.

The Lord bless us and keep us. The Lord make His face shine upon us and be gracious unto us. The Lord lift up the light of His countenance upon us and give us peace now and always. Amen.

READING BY THE HONOURABLE
SPEAKER OF MESSAGES
AND ANNOUNCEMENTS

Apologies

The Speaker: Please be seated. Proceedings are resumed. I have received apologies for late attendance for the Honourable Minister responsible for Planning, Communications, Works and Information Technology, and from the Honourable Minister responsible for Education, Human Resources and Culture.

QUESTIONS TO HONOURABLE MINISTERS AND MEMBERS OF THE GOVERNMENT

The Speaker: The Elected Member from the district of East End.

Question No. 29

Deferred Wednesday, 20 March, 2002

No. 29: Mr. V. Arden McLean asked the Honourable Minister responsible for the Ministry of Tourism, Environment, Development and Commerce if Government has entered into any discussions with other entities or individuals regarding the sale of Cayman Airways Ltd.

The Speaker: Honourable Leader, Minister of Tourism.

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: Thank you, Madam Speaker.

The answer: The Cayman Islands Government has not entered into any discussion with other entities or individuals regarding the sale of Cayman Airways Limited.

The Speaker: The Member from East End.

Supplementary

Mr. V. Arden McLean: I wonder if the Minister can say if the Government has entered into any discussions regarding any other entity taking up the routes of Cayman Airways.

The Speaker: Honourable Leader.

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: Madam Speaker, the answer is 'No'.

The Speaker: Are there any further supplementaries? If not we will move on to the next question.

The Elected Member from the district of East End.

Question No. 30

No. 30: Mr. V. Arden McLean: asked the same Minister to say the terms and conditions of the proposed entry of the Cayman Islands into the regional body known as the Caribbean Community or CARICOM.

The Speaker: The Honourable Leader.

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: Thank you, Madam Speaker. The answer: The information which is being sought on this question was revealed yesterday when I presented the Government Motion concerning the Cayman Islands Associate Membership in CARICOM. I am, nevertheless, attaching the terms and conditions for our Associate Membership in CARICOM together with a memorandum, dated 14 March 2002, from the Solicitor General, which confirms that it is legally quite acceptable for the Cayman Islands Government to proceed with the draft agreement in its current form.

Also, I am going to ask the Serjeant to circulate a chronology of the events which dealt with the Cayman Islands' formal application for associate membership within CARICOM. If you would permit I will also read that chronology.

The Speaker: Please proceed.

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: The chronology states:

1. "The 5 April 2002, a letter from the Financial Secretary to the Secretary General CARICOM seeking advice on becoming an associate membership in CARICOM.
2. The 12 June 2001 a letter from the Secretary General to the Honourable Financial Secretary outlining the procedure.
3. The 20 June 2001, EXCO paper seeking approval for the Governor to approach the UK Government to secure Her Majesty's Government's approval and a letter of entrustment.
4. The 26 June 2001, extract giving approval for the Governor to approach the UK Government for its approval and also that a representative from the Cayman Islands to attend the CARICOM conference in the Bahamas as an observer.
5. The 27 June 2001, a letter from the Governor to the Foreign and Commonwealth Office seeking Her Majesty's Government's approval and a letter of entrustment.
6. The 28 August 2001, the letter of entrustment from Baroness Amos Foreign and Commonwealth Office to the Governor approving a proposal.
7. The 4 September 2001, a memo from the Governor to the Honourable McKeeva Bush copied to the Honourable Financial Secretary forwarding letter of entrustment. (That is because Executive Council had approved for me to attend the conference in the Bahamas).

8. The 10 October 2001, the manuscript note from the Financial Secretary to the Deputy Financial Secretary forwarding letter of entrustment.
9. The 24 October 2001, letter to Deputy Secretary General from Deputy Financial Secretary forwarding letter of entrustment.
10. The 11 January 2002, EXCO paper seeking authorisation for the Governor to make a formal application for associate membership.
11. The 22 January 2002, EXCO approved the above paper.
12. The 29 January 2002, a letter from the Governor the Secretary General forwarding formal application on behalf of Executive Council".

This is but a chronology of the events and not the documentation.

The Speaker: Are there any supplementaries? The Second Elected Member for George Town

Supplementary

Mr. Alden M. McLaughlin, Jr.: Madam Speaker, the document from which the Honourable Minister just read concludes (see attached documents 1 to 12). There are no attachments to the document and I wonder if the Honourable Minister could indicate whether or not we will have sight of those attachments referred to.

The Speaker: Honourable Leader.

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: Madam Speaker, I did say that this was just a chronology of events without the documents. However, I will attempt to get those documents once the Governor approves it. I so not see any reason why it cannot be given to Honourable Members, but up until the 24 October, the First Elected Member from George Town and the Member from North Side would have known of all of these events because they approved all of these events. As I said, I will seek permission from the Governor to distribute the documents.

The Speaker: Are there any further supplementaries? If not we will move on to the next item of Business.

STATEMENTS BY MEMBERS OF THE GOVERNMENT

The Speaker: I have received no notice of Statements this morning.

GOVERNMENT BUSINESSBILLS*FIRST READINGS

The Speaker: Honourable Leader could you move the suspension of Standing Order 46(1) and (2)?

The Speaker: The question is that Standing Order 46(1) and (2) be suspended. All those in favour please say Aye. Those against, No.

Ayes.

The Speaker: The Ayes have it.

Agreed: Standing Order 46 (1) & (2) suspended.

The Tourist Accommodation (Taxation) (Amendment) Bill 2002

The Clerk: The Tourist Accommodation (Taxation) (Amendment) Bill, 2002.

The Speaker: Thank you. The Bill has been deemed to have been read the First Time and is set down for the Second Reading.

The Speaker: The Honourable Third Official Member.

Suspension of Standing Order 46(4)

The Speaker: Honourable Leader.

Hon. W. McKeever Bush: Madam Speaker, I move the suspension of Standing Order 46(4) in order to take the Second Reading of The Tourist Accommodation (Taxation) (Amendment) Bill 2002.

The Speaker: The question is that Standing Order 46(4) be suspended. All those in favour please say Aye. Those against, No.

Ayes.

The Speaker: The Ayes have it.

Agreed. Standing Order 46(4) suspended.

SECOND READINGSThe Tourist Accommodation (Taxation) (Amendment) Bill 2002

The Speaker: The Honourable Third Official Member.

Hon. George A. McCarthy: Thank you, Madam Speaker. The users of timeshare units enjoy the same infrastructure such as good roads, good medical facilities, clean beaches, policing and other emergency services as tourists staying at hotels and condominiums in the Cayman Islands.

As Honourable Members and you, are aware, tourists staying at hotels and condominiums pay an accommodation tax. It is therefore logical to expect that the users of timeshare units should pay an accommodation tax since they too enjoy the same infrastructure and environment as tourists staying in hotels, condos and guest homes. This is a platform or rationale on which this Bill was developed.

A Bill for a Law to be entitled, The Tourist Accommodation (Taxation) (Amendment) Bill 2002, is now before Honourable Members. Its Memorandum of Objects and Reasons states that the purpose of the Bill is to amend The Tourist Accommodation Taxation Law, 1996, in order to extend accommodation tax to timeshare units.

Clause 1(1) of the Bill provides the title of the intended law.

Clause 1(2) states that, "This Law shall come into force on such date as may be appointed by order made by the Governor in Council".

The timeshare industry has stated that in order to significantly reduce the chances of the industry being damaged by the immediate implementation of the measure without prior notification to timeshare owners, the industry should be given approximately one month after the Bill has become Law to notify the many thousands of timeshare owners throughout the world of the tax existence.

It is envisaged that one month after the Law has been passed and gazetted it will be brought into force by an order made by the Governor in Council. This is the purpose of clause 1(2).

Clause 2 of the Bill provides definition of accommodation which is essentially the same as that under the principal Law timeshare and service; service being defined in the same manner as that in the principal Law.

Clause 3 of the Bill give details of how the Accommodation tax is to be calculated, that is, tourists staying in accommodation other than timeshare units will continue to pay an accommodation tax that is equal to 10 per cent of the charges made for that accommodation by its proprietors. This is detailed in clause 3(1).

Clause 3(2) defines the type of persons staying in timeshare units who will pay a flat accommodation tax of $10 per room. These persons are:

- a) the owner of timeshares;
- b) a guest of the owner of the timeshare; or
- c) a person who has exchanged his timeshare for that timeshare.

It is important to note that the $10 per night has been determined as a result of extensive consultation with the timeshare industry. The industry believes that this is a reasonable amount to charge while still ensuring that the local market remains price competitive.

Clause 3(3) provides that where timeshare units are occupied by persons other than those mentioned in clause 3(2) the rate of accommodation tax will revert to the familiar 10 per cent charge specified in clause 3(1).

Honourable Members asked how the collection will be pursued of the timeshare accommodation tax. This will be under the same arrangement as now exists whereby revenue in respect of tourism accommodation tax is policed and collected by the Department of Tourism. Previously, the checks together with supporting documents were submitted to the Treasury Department. While the Treasury Department also checked to ensure that the amounts agreed with the supporting documents, did not have all of the relevant records at hand in terms of all of the tourism accommodation facilities operating within the Cayman Islands. This should be helped significantly by the new arrangements that have been put in place since the latter part of last year, whereby the collection function has now been turned over to the Department of Tourism. They have records of all entities that are providing tourism accommodation arrangements in the Cayman Islands and should be in a better position to police the timeshare arrangement as well. This should enhance the collection process and ensure that monies due to Government are collected and remitted through the Department of Tourism to the Treasury Department.

I commend this Bill to all Honourable Members and I should mention that Honourable Members are aware that this is a part of the Budget package for the year 2002.

The Speaker: Thank you, Honourable Member. Does any Member wish to speak? If not I will call upon the Honourable Third Official Member to exercise his right of reply if he so wishes.

Hon. George A. McCarthy: Madam Speaker, I would like to say thanks to Honourable Members for their tacit support of this Bill.

The Speaker: I shall put the question that a Bill entitled, The Tourism Accommodation (Taxation) (Amendment) Bill 2002, be given a second reading. All those in favour please say Aye. Those against, No.

Ayes.

The Speaker: The Ayes have it. The House will now go into committee to consider the Bill.

Agreed: The Tourism Accommodation (Taxation) (Amendment) Bill 2002 given a Second Reading.

MOTIONS

GOVERNMENT MOTION NO. 3/02

The Loans (Caribbean Development Bank) Law (1999 Revision) Cayman Islands Development Bank

The Speaker: The Honourable Third Official Member.

Hon. George A. McCarthy: Madam Speaker, I beg to move Government Motion No. 3 of 2002, which reads as follows—

“WHEREAS section 28(1) of the Public Finance and Audit Law 1997 provides that the Government shall not borrow money except in accordance with a law;

“AND WHEREAS Section 3 (1) of The Loans (Caribbean Development Bank) Law (1999 Revision) provides that the Governor may, in such manner, on such terms and subject to such conditions as may be agreed between the Governor and the Bank, borrow from the Bank, from time to time, such sums as may be required by the Government not exceeding two hundred and fifty thousand dollars or, with consent of the Legislative Assembly, amounts in excess of that sum;

“AND WHEREAS it is proposed that the Government of the Cayman Islands shall borrow an amount not exceeding five million United States Dollars ($5,000,000) from the Caribbean Development Bank for the purpose of providing mortgage financing to assist in the purchase of newly constructed homes, the construction of new homes and the improvement of existing homes - the administration of which will be carried out by the Cayman Islands Development Bank as Executing Agency for the Government of the Cayman Islands;

“BE IT THEREFORE RESOLVED THAT this Honourable House, acting in accordance with section 3(1) of the Loans (Caribbean Development Bank) Law (1999 Revision), gives its approval to the Governor-in- Council to authorise the Financial Secretary to execute a loan agreement on behalf of the Government of the Cayman Islands and the Caribbean Development Bank for an amount not exceeding US$5 Million being advanced by the Caribbean Development Bank to the Government of the Cayman Islands to provide mortgage financing to assist in the purchase of newly constructed homes, the construction of new homes and the improvement of existing homes - the administration of which will be carried out by the Cayman Islands Development Bank, as Executing Agency for the Government of the Cayman Islands, together with the principal repayments, interest and any commitment and other charges in respect of the said amount of US$5 million.”

The Speaker: The Motion has been duly moved and is opened for debate. Does the Honourable Third Official Member wish to speak thereto?

Hon. George A. McCarthy: Thank you, Madam Speaker. As Honourable Members of the Legislative Assembly would recall the Honourable Leader of Government Business announced early last year a number of initiatives to address the tremendous housing needs existing among low and lower-middle income Caymanians.

The Government continues to recognise the inequity that has made it very difficult for the average person in this country to acquire adequate shelter and as part of its social responsibility it has sought to address this need from several angles. Government has begun to deal with some of these past obstacles and has put in place several mechanisms to facilitate greater access to mortgage financing.

First, is the establishment of the Cayman Islands Development Bank (CIDB), in which the legislation was passed in this Legislative Assembly of December, 2001.

Following on that is the launch of a homeownership improvement programme, which will give the opportunity to various persons who never had the ability before to own a property. Specifically, this mortgage programme was designed on the basis of feed back from various forums in the community, as well as from empirical evidence gleaned from submissions from the low-cost housing committee that was charged with the development of a multi-disciplinary approach to addressing this pressing issue.

In addition, the programme was reviewed, tested and evaluated by the Caribbean Development Bank. To fund this mortgage programme (Home Ownership made Equitable programme), the Government has sought and obtained funding from the Caribbean Development Bank for a loan of $5 million to address this serious social need.

The newly established Cayman Islands Development Bank will implement and manage this mortgage programme in its entirety and as such, will be the official executing agency on behalf of the Cayman Islands Government. Members of this Honourable House are therefore being requested to support the loan of $5 million from the Caribbean Development Bank for mortgage financing for low income Caymanians, with the Cayman Islands Development Bank acting as executing agency.

[pause]

Hon. George A. McCarthy: Madam Speaker, if you will permit, I think it would be useful for me to give some information on the terms and conditions of the loan to Honourable Members.

The Speaker: Please proceed.

Hon. George A. McCarthy: Madam Speaker, particulars of the loan from Caribbean Development Bank, as I said earlier, the loan will be for US$5 million the equivalent being CI$4.2 million to be lent to the Cayman Islands Government for use by the Cayman Islands Development Bank for mortgage finance lending. Repayment terms are as follows—

- Over a period of 13 years with principal repayment commencing five years after date of first disbursement.
- The interest rate will be 5.75 per cent per annum and this is a variable rate. There will be a 1 per cent commitment fee on un-drawn balances.

[pause]

Hon. George A. McCarthy: Madam Speaker, just asking if you could bear with me for a minute. I am just clarifying . . .

The Speaker: Honourable Member, perhaps this might be a convenient time for the morning break.

Hon. George A. McCarthy: Thank you, Madam Speaker.

The Speaker: We will take a break for about 15 minutes.

Proceedings suspended at 11.06 am

Proceedings resumed at 11.33 am

[Deputy Speaker in the Chair]

The Speaker: Please be seated. Proceedings are resumed. I will call on the Third Official Member to continue his debate.

Hon. George A. McCarthy: Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

Before the break I was attempting to share some notes that have been provided to me through the Agriculture and Industrial Development Bank (AIDB). They are in bullet point format and they were not clear in some instances. So, with your permission I will repeat some of the information that I gave earlier.

The amount of the loan, as I said, during the presentation is for US$5 million which converts to CI$4.2 million. This is to be lent to the Cayman Islands Government for use by the Cayman Islands Development Bank for mortgage finance lending. Repayment terms are as follows: The period of repayment is spread over 13 years with a 5 year moratorium on principal repayment. The interest rate per annum is 5.75 percent and that is variable.

Mr. Speaker, Caribbean Development Bank is not a deposit taking institution, and as a result, it is not affected by interest rate changes as would be found in an ordinary commercial bank. It normally raises the money that is available for unending through three sources: Firstly, on the open market by the issuing of bonds; secondly, from the paid up capital by borrowing member countries, and also contributions by non-borrowing member countries.

From time to time Caribbean Development Bank (CDB) reviews its rate structure and whenever it is in a position to give a reduction in interest rates, it normally does so to the benefit of its members. When the agreement was initially submitted to the Government it was showing an interest rate in excess of 6 per cent. After reviewing, and I would imagine, representation by its borrowing member countries the rate has now been reduced to 5.75 per cent. Although it is variable, it is anticipated that this will not be showing any changes in the short term. We do hope that the bank will be able to maintain this rate and if there are to be any changes that it will be lower rather than higher. Again, Caribbean Development Bank will have to operate as a viable financial institution. As a result of that it takes into account the costs of services provided to borrowing member countries and also the expected rate of return on capital. So, 5.75 per cent is the rate at which the loan will be made available.

There will be a 1 per cent commitment fee on un-drawn balances.

Key dates as shown on the loan appraisal document are as follows:—

- The first disbursement by CDB shall be made by the 31 March 2202.
- The loan is to be fully committed by the 31 December 2004.

- The loan is to be fully disbursed by 31 December 2005.

Conditions which are precedent for first disbursement are as follows:—

1. Approval of the Legislative Assembly for the loan (what is being sought by way of this Bill).
2. Evidence of appropriate financial and operational policies and procedures (in that, the Cayman Islands Development Bank (CIDB) must satisfy the CDB that it has appropriate arrangements in place in order to administer its affairs appropriately).
3. The Cayman Islands Government is required to contribute 3 per cent to the authorised capital of the bank which is $50 million. Three per cent amounts to $1.5 million and that is to be contributed in instalments as follows—
 - By 31 December 2002 $500,000
 - By 31 December 2003 another half a million dollars
 - By 31 December 2004 another half a million dollars.

This will allow for the $1.5 million or the 3 per cent contribution to the paid up capital of the bank or authorised capital of the bank to be achieved.

Specific conditions for unending of the funds by the Cayman Islands Development Bank: All homes under construction must be owner occupied. There are two categories upon lending—

1. Home acquisition
2. Home improvement

Home Acquisition criteria

Loans shall be for construction of a house on land owned or lease by the borrower or the purchaser of newly constructed homes. Only first time homeowners can qualify. There must be evidence that the home to be occupied will be used as a residence by the borrower(s) and/or his or her family. The maximum loan size would be the lesser of the following four amounts where applicable:

1. $95,000
2. 90 per cent of the market value of a newly constructed house, or
3. 90 per cent of the combined value of the market, value of the land, plus the cost of the house after construction.
4. 90 per cent of the improved property.

The monthly income shall not exceed:

- Individual $3,000
- Joint/combined $4,500
- Repayment terms 20 years
- Interest rate to be determined by the CIDB based on the cost of funds.

- Security must be adequate and must be subject to careful appraisal as to value.
- Insurance must be adequate and relevant.

Home Improvement

Home Improvement criterion shall only be for improvement, extension repair or maintenance and re-rofitting of a house on land owned by the borrower. The estimated cost of any improvement being requested shall not exceed $25,000 or two-thirds of the estimated value of the house or 100 per cent of the cost of improvement.

Monthly incomes shall not exceed:

- Individual $3,000.
- Joint/combined $4,500.
- Repayment terms 15 years.
- Interest rates to be determined by the CIDB based on the cost of securing funds.
- Security must be adequate and must be subject to careful appraisal as to value.
- Insurance coverage must be adequate.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I submit this Motion for consideration and support by Honourable Members.

The Speaker: Thank you. Does any other Member wish to speak? Does any other Member wish to speak? Final call; does any other Member wish to speak?

The Honourable Minister for Education.

Hon. Roy Bodden: Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

Mr. Speaker, this move by the Government to access funds for on-lending to Caymanians, so that we can have some system of affordable housing, particularly for the lower income bracket in this country is one that has been talked about for many years. Undoubtedly, there is widespread acknowledgement of the need to provide affordable and accessible housing to this sector of our society. The move to formalise this arrangement with the CIDB should be a move which is embraced by all Honourable Members, particularly if those Honourable Members are aware and have concerns for the addressing of this glaring need.

There are those of us who realise that the Caymanian society cannot continue to develop along the socially harmoniously lines that we have come to expect, if a significant portion of our people are deprived of the means to access adequate and affordable housing for themselves. It is a widely respected historical phenomenon that those societies are most stable in which the members of that society all have vested interests and there can be no greater vested interest than a person or a family owning their own home. So, this move is indeed timely and I look forward with great interest to its development.

I do not believe that it will service all of the needs in this area that we have in the society at this time, but it is certainly a worthy and commendable beginning effort and I hope we can take it from there.

The development and implementation of the CIDB through which these funds will be routed is, again, a commendable effort and an effort in the right direction. There are those of us who have been saying for years that we should have had such an institution. I am happy that these funds will be disbursed through this vehicle because it will enable the funds to be disbursed in such a way that politicians cannot be accused of peddling their influence or interfering in any way whatsoever. It goes further than that: It is also in keeping with business trends in the private sector, which have these kinds of vehicles incorporated specifically for this purpose. The strength of this is that if the Government were disbursing these funds through some other agency, there may be the temptation to circumvent the process by appealing to the political goodwill or political sentiments with a professional organisation whose business is the disbursing and collection of funds. Such a practice is not possible.

I look forward to the learning of these developments. I know there are many persons out there who are just waiting for this exercise to come to the maturity to where applications can be received for these loans. Everyday I get people coming to the Ministry, calling me or when they meet me on the street they ask when is something going to be done.

There are many persons, I believe, who are eminently equipped to enter this partnership. I like the conditions that all of the houses will have to be owner occupied. I also like the idea that the homeowners themselves will have a vested interest. I think it bodes well for the success of these operations when the persons themselves who are borrowers have a vested interest and have a stake in the development, either by ownership of the property or by some significant sum, which has to be deposited to the bank. This is long over due and I am happy that I could be a part of a prescient government who has sought to put the money where their mouth is, by making this available so that persons in the lower income levels of our society can benefit.

We will monitor this and see how it works. Perhaps, we will always have the option of expanding or seeking additional areas of finance if the situation warrants us going on. This is indeed a worthy effort and it comes none-too-soon and I give it my wholehearted support. Thank you.

The Speaker: Does any other Member wish to speak? The Elected Member for East End.

Mr. V. Arden McLean: Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

I rise to give a brief contribution to the Motion before us on the borrowing of US$5 million from CDB towards the building of affordable homes. Ever since I was elected to this Honourable House in November 2000, I have supported and I have championed the cause for affordable housing. When the current Minister for Tourism was responsible for Housing, he and I and your good self, Mr. Speaker, travelled at least once to look at housing. Events, since then, have made the Ministry reshuffle and there is a different Minister.

I am on record as offering any assistance that I could give with regards to affordable housing. I have offered the same assistance that I gave to the former Minister for Housing to the current Minister. Therefore, I have no problem with supporting the borrowing of US$5 million for the purposes of, hopefully, assisting the Caymanians who cannot afford to build or who need repairs to their homes, throughout the three Islands.

We know that Cayman has been described as one of the more prosperous countries in the Western Hemisphere. Nevertheless, we find that there are situations in our country where the gap between the haves and the have-nots continue to widen. I have always believed that the responsibility to stimulate and provide in the area of the have-nots should come from an initiative made by Government. Mr. Speaker, any country with too many have-nots will eventually fail. That is where we get our citizens feeling like they are not sharing in the prosperity of a country, in particular, the Cayman Islands. If we can boast of being the fifth largest financial centre in the world then our people must share in it. They feel, and rightly so, that if they are not sharing in it they are being left behind. Thus, they oppose the whole system in the country and then we get dissension in the country.

Any government's responsibility is to ensure that there is peace in a country, and if it takes for the Government to borrow monies to give our people a sense of belonging and owning something. I believe that the development of any child comes with seeing their parents owning a home where they can go to like all their peers; it makes them feel a sense of worth. If they do not then the animosity starts between the child who has and the child who does not have.

I am aware that the $5 million requested is but a mere drop in the bucket. Hopefully, the Government will see the need, ways and means of increasing that at a later stage. I see no need for revenue measures to support loans and payments made. It is loan; it is not for free. Certainly, there will be instances where government has to put in to the development bank to ensure its continuity. I believe that it is timely, particularly, in the recession that we are going through where we have a lot of small Caymanian contractors who would benefit from the building and repairs of these homes, or whatever the loans are for.

The Minister of Education indicated that this type of arrangement being talked about for years; I respect that and I know that, and yes, it has not happened, but there has always been a problem in our country which contributed to it not happening. I believe that the biggest problem was the lack of alternative methods of building homes; it had to be the conventional way. I recall many years ago when it was called prefab and all the contractors got up in arms against government allowing the importation of prefab. Nowadays it is called pre-engineered homes. Well, those were the days when it was plentiful in this country. I am sure they will now embrace alternative methods of building homes. Besides, time has passed and the pre-engineered method of building homes has improved as well. Therefore, because we are in the hurricane belt homes can now be built with the pre-engineered material, which can withstand the hurricane winds (whatever is required by the Planning regulations).

If I may, I will suggest one thing to the Government, and that is, not to let the same thing that detracted from this possibility years ago stop them at this time, that is, the pressures from contractors saying that they will not be making money out of these homes. I believe it is better for a contractor to make a few dollars and stay alive during a recession than for him not to make anything. The contractors and this country need to recognise that we have a problem on our hands and it is growing. The longer it is left without something being done, the worst it is going to become. Our people are going to be worse off. Therefore, the contractors must come on board and if they do not the Government will have to find other ways of getting contractors to build the homes.

Mr. Speaker, because of the need that is down on us so heavily, the Government needs to ensure that nothing stops them from going ahead with it. Recently, I asked a question on the Government's policy with regards to affordable housing and the reply from the Minister was that the Government was in a process of building a number of homes and they had acquired land in West Bay and George Town. I wonder if the intent now is to buy properties in other districts within the Islands, and in other areas of Grand Cayman. It was also said that these homes would be built within the next year. I believe it is somewhat aggressive but, certainly, if the Government can get it done within a year, then more power to them. In the reply to my question it was not clear as to how many homes will be built in the different districts but I suspect that between now and tonight we will know how many will be built in East End.

I am committed to whatever is in the best interest of our country; whether it is the UDP or any other government that brings something to this Honourable House during my tenure. For the betterment of my people and my country I will support it. It makes no difference to me where it comes from. If I cannot support something, then I will not, however, in this instance I fully support the borrowing of the US$5 million. We will just have to wait and see if it is sufficient and how it is distributed within the country. We must recognise that this need is throughout this country. It is not only in George Town and West Bay but it is in Bodden Town, North Side, East End and the Cayman Brac and Little Cayman (Sister Islands), as well. Further, it is not only where the UDP have members, it is the whole country that needs this. I am looking forward to hearing about the distribution and to see how the Development Bank will conduct the loaning of money. I have every confidence in the people who manage what will eventually be the Development Bank.

As I said, any time is the right time for the people of this country to have a sense of belonging and to be able to go home at nights and know that they are going to their own. Anytime is the right time. I believe I can speak on behalf of the Opposition that we support these borrowings and we look forward to seeing it become a success to the point where, at least, some Caymanians, even if the $5 million is not enough, will feel a sense of belonging to their own country. If I may I would just ask that the Government, regardless of how many homes that is intended, look and ensure that the whole country benefits as a result of the passage of this Motion. Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: Honourable Minister for Community Services.

Dr. the Hon. Frank S. McField: Mr. Speaker, I have heard so many persons outline their easy-arrived-at conclusions about the results of having society divided between the haves and the have-nots. There are so many examples in the world that show us that inequality and inequity in regards to the distribution of scarce resources, results with the society being polarised and many of the citizens being marginalised. So, the contribution of the Elected Member from East End is accepted as being another part of a long history of concerns. What we have not been able to address is the practicalities or approaches that can be and should be used to develop strategies that would prevent market factors from determining the relationships between people socially.

The Elected Member from East End mentioned that the construction of pre-engineered or prefabricated homes in this country has been opposed traditionally and that the Government should now not be deterred from finding an affordable solution to low income homes; I agree with that Member. The Elected Member from East End has also entered a dimension into this debate at this particular time, which I find strange. On one hand he is barking and biting and at the same time while suggesting this is a good programme, he is also insinuating that the United Democratic Party might not necessarily be the group we can trust to make sure that the distribution of these houses is fair and equitable across the districts. So, he wants to remind us.

The Member needs to know that I can understand English, not just from the text but the subtext, but from his body language, and his squeaky smiles; that he is intending to suggest to the general public that if his district does not get a certain number of projects it would mean discrimination against them because he is not a member of the UDP. That is the image that this good gentleman has tried to plant in the minds of persons. What he needs to understand is that from the point of view of the housing policy for this country, it would not necessarily mean that simply because we see a certain amount of money, which I also agree is a very small amount of money, we should start talking about how the money or the policy is going is going to be able to serve every district, or to boost the political ego of every politician at the same time. That is what has also contributed for there not being a much more consistent and defined cure to the situation of low income housing in this country. Politicians want to somehow gain credit and praise for the fact that they have understood that the division of society between haves and have-nots is not good and, therefore, we can bridge this gap by providing those persons who are making low incomes with assistance with housing and other resources.

I think what we need to make clear in the minds of the public is that this is not going to be a political fight about who gets what and who controls what. I would like to imagine somehow that we can have a housing policy that really seriously attempts to get something started that is feasible and sustainable. We need to have a sustainable housing development programme in this country for low income members of our society. Members who should benefit first of all should be low income persons, whether or not they come from East End or George Town.

Mr. Speaker, I think it is important that if the lowest income groups are supposed to be the ones to first benefit, we should take into account where the housing problem is most severe in this country and not what district he or anyone else comes from. So, we do not have in our resources something defined for Cayman Brac and something defined for George Town, East End or North Side. We have something for the people of this country and where we find the problems more severe; where the incomes are more stressed is where we should begin to attempt to deal with these issues.

My idea is that we need to be practical about this issue because if it was so easy to be solved it would have been solved by previous governments. There are issues here that are more complicated than just a situation of being able to put our hands on $5 million. If $5 million, for instance, is divided to produce houses that would cost $65,000, out of the million dollars how many houses are we looking at? We are looking at 20 houses, maybe less than that at $65,000 per house cost. So, at C$4.2 million you are looking at 61 homes.

We do not want to be talking about the fight of whether or not we are going to put three of those 61 homes here and three of those there. It might really be better from the point of construction and the development to concentrate on specific areas where the type of technology he is talking about (the pre-engineered housing), which we should not be discouraged in using, might better be managed.

There are technical issues that the people who are technically responsible and competent for answering should be involved in helping us to develop. We would not want to come to a point where we say that regardless of what money we have, at this particular stage, that it should be divided equally among the districts. It should be employed in such a way that we build a foundation for a sustainable development of low income housing for the persons who can least afford to become a part of the private sector housing market. That is what we need to do.

We need to realise also that this US$5 million, CI$4 million plus, which we are able to borrow from the CDB, would not have been possible to get if we did not have the CIDB put into law, which is the same attempt that the Opposition found objections to. I believe that there are steps we must take in making this a reality. One of the first steps is the establishment of a bank that will give the administrative possibility for us to be able to manage money for the development of low income affordable housing in the Cayman Islands.

So, we are now at a stage where we can attract attention because we have a bank. We can attract loans from other places that can come along with the $5 million to make it $15 million, $10 million or $20 million. However, $5 million is only going to create division, animosity, jealousy, envy and resentment if we do not see the $5 million as but the foundation of a future development. This is what the Elected Member from East End needs to make clear in his debate if he wants to help to facilitate consensus to approve of what it is we are doing.

If it is perceived from the very beginning, as if it is a shady exercise that is only going to be done to politically manipulate people at this time, then the public will be suspicious and the investors will not necessarily be encouraged to get involved. I hope that we will have additional investors who come to these shores to do their own commercial projects, see CIDB as a bank where they can lend money at cheap interest rates and the bank can then lend in return to persons who we classify as being in the low income bracket—persons who are making combined incomes of $4,000 or single incomes of $3,000, so that those persons will have specific access to it.

What happens also is that we need to look at a number of ways to deal with these issues. We need to look at our building regulations and see how they can be adjusted in order to allow us to be able to develop in specific areas affordable housing.

There is something called centralisation that built civilisation and it has created efficiency and affordability. A lot of people have this idea—even in our Party some people might not necessarily agree with me here, but I would like to say that this idea which we have in this country where everybody must be the same; everybody must have the same car to drive; everybody must have the same house to live in; is an idea that has caused us more suffering than any place else. Every place in the world that I have travelled to I have seen differences, not only between people, but between the neighbourhoods that the people live in. This is the reason that we do not have it yet. We have had residential segregation in this Island from day one. People have lived in neighbourhoods according to what they could afford, long before tourism came. Back in those days you would see the houses in South Church Street, central George Town and around the city areas. When you go back to where we call the bush, which is where I lived down off of Mary Street and places like that. You would see that the houses in the bush off of Mary Street, at that particular time, were different from the houses on Mary Street. There is such a thing as what you can afford and people should not necessarily feel less because they cannot afford more. It is only the start of their journey towards mobilising themselves forward to reach the goals they want to reach in life, to get the rewards which they feel should be at the end of that goal.

So, when we talk about upward mobility; social mobility; starting in a house that is small and when you get equity you might be able to build on to that house or sell that house and go on to a better house. We have to encourage our people to believe that this is the way the world is. Just because Government can only afford to give you some kind of foundation does not necessarily mean that Government is trying to say that you do not have any worth; that you do not mean anything to society, but it is trying to deal with what it is that we can afford.

If what we are willing to accept is not the end but the beginning in housing, we will see that the Government can produce the number of homes that they are talking about. If we focus, as legislators, and not just as a UDP, on this whole issue of creating this foundation for this sustainable housing development project, what we will eventually find is that a lot of our social problems will become more manageable.

We have so many single mothers. I was talking to one mother a while ago who was talking about the fact that she and her four children are going to be evicted from where they are staying. She works at Fosters; she is a working mother and every time that you go there you can see how hard she is working. We have no solution for her at the moment of the fact that she is going to be evicted and asking what we can do to help her. I am saying to her that we have a lot of people like her and we cannot do anything at this moment but we are trying to put something in place that will give us a possibility to help you.

We have people who are coming to us and saying that they heard we have a housing project going and I am saying that we do not have it going, but we are trying to get it going. This is our intention if people do not become too casual about the urgency; if people remember that there is a great urgency to provide affordable housing; provide housing for single mothers; for families that are working very hard but not earning enough, simply because the wage and the salary system does not allow them to be absorbed into the private sector housing market. Government therefore, has a responsibility and this is where the question of resources of government comes into being. This is where the whole issue of revenue enhancement comes into being.

The Elected Member from East End is saying that he does not see what government revenue has to do with this; that we can just go out and borrow and lend it again. That is ridiculous! The fact that that Member voted against the revenue measures and at the same time he knows about the division of the society between the haves and the have-nots. How are we going to bridge the gap between a have and a have-not without raising revenue to be able to put the programmes in place and redistribute the wealth at a particular base to have that happen? That is all rhetoric when they talk about division between haves and have-nots because the haves will remain the haves and the have-nots remain the have-nots. They do have any kind of power to change the position between the haves and the have-nots without the intervention of government. Government intervenes by being able to affect the way in which the resources of the society are distributed.

So, I want the Member from East End to remember that not all of us are in the position now, not to take a stand with regards to issues like the development bank; the improvement in the revenue. If we had borrowed money and not raise additional revenue we would not be allowed by the British Government or the Governor to be able to borrow this money in the first place from CDB. That Member must recognise some of the contradictions that come forward in the casual way in which he presents his position. It is true that had we borrowed more money for the running of the country we would not be able to borrow this money to help with low income homes. We therefore, do not want to separate those two issues because those two issues are very much tied together.

Now, I insist on saying that if we tried, whether or not we are from West Bay or George Town, to think that we should all have a piece of the pie for our constituents at the same time, we are going to run in a system in a very illogical manner.

The development of housing, from the point of view of policy, is what my Portfolio is charged with and I have an executive summary on low cost housing that was passed on to our Portfolio when we assumed responsibility for it. There are many points that were brought out by the committee on low cost housing because there was a committee that was set up. I am not going to bore this Honourable House with this information, but I would like to read the description of the problem as seen by the committee that investigated this.

“The issues associated with affordable decent housing have been problematic for the Cayman Islands for many years. The explosive growth of the Islands, the immigration of unskilled expa-triate labour and the changing demographics of families have generated a shortage of suitable housing for low to middle income Caymanians and expatriates.

Target Areas

“Target areas will be established through overlay districts to address certain areas that experience the most severe problems associated with low income housing. An overlay district is a geographical boundary outlining a specific area inside of which special regulations will be adopted to address the problem outlined in this paper.

Establishment of income levels and Eligibility

“Those in the lowest income brackets will receive the greatest benefits. Persons and families of moderate income will also be eligible for housing assistance, but not to the same degree as the lowest income Caymanian. Eligibility may be based on the following table”.

They go on to talk about income levels. Therefore, I think it is important for us to realise that I am not just talking about UDP policy. I am talking about a particular policy that has been developed as a result of the ongoing deliberations between Members of the Government and members of the private sector, in trying to arrive at useful definitions that would help us in our attempt to find a way out of this situation.

I want this to be clear from the very beginning because I do not want anyone to accuse me of trying to stop people from getting things in a particular district, simply because they are not Members of the UDP. It has to do with more than that; it has to do with the way in which some of the problems are going to be defined and the way we are going to go about solving these problems.

I want Members of this Honourable House to know that I have always been interested in this particular area of low income housing. However, I do not believe that it should become political in saying that “this person supports me and therefore they get a house and the other one does not support me so they should not get a house”. It should not be that way because the worst thing is that when we make people dependent upon us, we take away their choices. The point is that we want to give people the freedom to respond to their social, political and economic environment in a human manner. Therefore, it is not build dependence but to give people a start to be able to develop their full potential and the potential of their children. Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: Before I call on the next speaker, I want to get an indication as to whether or not we were getting close to a conclusion of debate or to take the luncheon break at this time?

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: Mr. Speaker, I believe that we could finish although there is the short presentation of a paper, which I will present later on, but I would think we could complete this quickly.

The Speaker: If that is the wish of the House I will call on any other Member who wishes to speak. Does any Member wish to speak?

The Second Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman.

Mr. Lyndon L. Martin: Thank you. Mr. Speaker.

Mr. Speaker, the concept of Government seeking methods of providing low income (affordable) homes is something that we as a Party has discussed extensively, and have not only supported it verbally, but have now put action in place to ensure that the people of this country will be provided with a relief. I take this opportunity to voice to the country the numerous occasions under which yourself and the Speaker of the House, my colleague, the First Elected Member from Cayman Brac have expressed your support for the country in finding a relief to the demand for affordable housing and low income housing; and also for the support from both of you for the Bill we are currently debating.

It is important to understand that one scheme alone will not solve all the problems that we face. There are varying levels of need and demand in this country. I recently accompanied Ministers on a series of evaluations on several different methodologies under which we think that as a Government we can assist the country. I pointed out at the time that within my constituency, Cayman Brac and Little Cayman that our greatest need was a source of finances. We have a significant portion of our population that have property either by inheritance or it was acquired through various attractive financing schemes that have been in place. I take this opportunity to give credit to Mr. Moses Kirkconnell who has been one of the largest contributors to young individuals of low income, by being able to acquire property as he launched an effort to finance property for these individuals who showed security of employment.

In that particular instance there is one scheme needed, which is looking at simply finding more affordable sources of funds. We have situations in other districts that exist where the individuals simply cannot afford to acquire land; this also exists in my district. So, the scheme must go to looking at the aggregate picture of providing property and housing. We have individuals who can support a normal mortgage financially, but cannot reach the required deposit into the mortgage programme. That is another such scheme. The Government is not fixated on one scheme but we are committed to providing a starting point. We are committed to looking at the current home ownership made equitable, and given our support it is a starting point but we are aggressively looking at other schemes.

I take the opportunity to read a couple definitions of what is called affordable housing. It says: "Housing for which the household pays no more than one-third or thirty-three and one third per cent of its gross monthly income for its monthly mortgage payments". That definition is provided by the committee in which the Honourable Minister spoke about during his contribution. That corresponds with the international norm as determined by the Housing Corporation of the United States which stated one third percent of the gross income.

Mr. Speaker, another category: Low cost housing is defined as— "Housing for which the construction cost are not in excess of CI$60 per sq ft."

Low income is also important to understand because that defines the target individuals that we are catering as being defined. This is perhaps the hardest term to define and it is defined as— "an annual income of $34,848". Below 50 per cent of the medium we have $1,452 monthly which would be $17,424 annually.

There is no question that we have a significant portion of our populace as provided in the recent census, that earning less than $1500 per month is some 52 per cent of our populace. The Honourable Minister for Housing, in his contribution, spoke of a housing scheme of $65,000 including property. It is my view that that should be our target as something that could cater to the general populace. Sixty five thousand dollars including property would work out to be $523 per person and to keep with the standard of 33 1/3 of the gross income that individual would be earning $1,743 per month to be able to qualify. As I said earlier, that is a middle scheme but there are individuals earning below that so we need to look for even lower schemes and maybe we can look towards some of the pre-engineered schemes.

There is no doubt that this Government under the umbrella of the UDP is committed to housing. We have stated it in our vision that we have made widely known; we have stated it in our aims and objectives and we have not only spoke about it; we have now come to the Honourable House seeking approval to put a scheme in place—the first Government to take housing to that dimension.

Talking about the desire to do something for your people—and I would particularly like to mention the Member from East End in his contribution. He exaggerated how involved he was with the past Minister in looking at the housing and how he would offer any assistance that he could to assist the new Housing Minister to achieve housing for the people of the Cayman Islands.

I must inform that Member that whether he realise it or not the people of his district have a great degree of common sense. They can certainly see through such political rhetoric. There are three conditions involved with the assistance of this US$5 million before disbursements; firstly it is the approval in the Honourable House for the loan which we are seeking here today and secondly, was evidence of appropriate financial and operational policies and procedures which is governed by the CIDB. The CIDB, which is listed on the loan agreement that we are talking about here today, is a loan agreement between the CDB, the Cayman Islands Government and the CIDB as the executing agent. So, if he really was committed to helping the people in offering such assistance, when he had the opportunity on the 5 December 2001, to vote for and support the CIDB, he should have done so. It would therefore have made it possible for the Government to do what it is doing here today; to go out and seek funds to loan to residents—and as he stated in his contribution—throughout this country, not in any particular district. He has asked and urged that before the end of the day that he be told how much would be coming to his district, East End, which he represents.

I remind him that the slogan of the UDP is "For all the people". The people of East End will be assured of that tonight at the UDP's meeting in that district. That Member, when he had the opportunity to support the very instrument that was a prerequisite for this loan and any other income that would be contributed to loan out to these individuals whom he admitted he cared so much about and sought, he did not vote for it. He did not vote for it! He and the Second Elected Member for George Town abstained and the Hansard of the Legislative Assembly will show you, they had an opportunity. This has become a regular pattern of that Member to vote against things and then get up in this Honourable House, misleading the House and the public into thinking that he genuinely supports the programme, when he is not willing to support the instruments necessary to implement these very programmes.

That is evidence and I would like to justify my statement because that very same Member has demonstrated this practice when he voted against the National Budget of the country. He talks about how he really supports extra policing in his district but voted against the Budget to put police on the streets in his district.

That Member goes to the schools and says he is interested in helping the students of East End but he voted against the $50 thousand in the Budget that was necessary to renovate the school in East End. This is a practice that I do not want to negatively impact the perception of the efforts of the UDP to provide low income housing. He is saying that he is speaking on behalf of the Opposition and gets up there to say that he will genuinely do everything to assist in providing housing, but he would not support the very bank necessary to get this particular facility in place.

Mr. Speaker, I apologise for my passion in this issue, but this is an issue that we truly believe in. The UDP is committed to it and would not allow the Opposition's normal methodology of spreading the propaganda that this is going to be limited to one such district or two districts in particular. The Minister of Housing clearly pointed it out. This is an issue that will be prioritised by need. I assure the people of my district and all other districts in this country that we will not allow for any district to be given any greater priority over the other. We will simply look at individual by individual irrespective of district boundaries because the UDP is for all the people.

I, like yourself, whole-heartedly give my one hundred per cent support for this Bill and for other initiatives of providing affordable low cost housing for this country, and I have been invited to express on behalf of my colleague, the First Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman.

I urge the Opposition in instances such as this that has such great national importance, which affects the very same individuals who we like to talk about so much, the poor man, the little man—to put politics aside and get up and give your support to this. Use this opportunity to show the country that we as legislators can lift political borders and work together for the betterment of our people. This is a great opportunity to forget about political alliances and work together. I note genuinely, of course, with interest how the Member from East End rose from his seat to make subtle remarks about his support in his contribution. I want it to be assured in my contribution and I am stating that I support it and will support it by not only talking about it but I will vote for it when that time comes. I urge the Members of the Opposition to do the same.

I will now ask for the country to be patient; to believe in the vision of the Government. We have stated quite clearly with a timetable of 12 months that we will deliver. We have stuck to the schedule that we have in place by coming here today to get the support for funds that will be disbursed on the 31st of this month (March). We ask the country to bear in mind that the US$5 million will not meet all the needs and that those in greater need must be served first. However, they must be rest assured because once they see the programme started they know that their turn will be coming.

I know that once my constituents see individuals getting it, who are in greater need, they will see that their turn will be coming and therefore, will be patient. They will see that the Government is committed to addressing their needs; they will see that the $55 million borrowed last year by the previous administration, did not prohibit this Government putting a budget in place that was minimal borrowing to a point that the United Kingdom (our mother country) could approve of us, and the CDB could approve of us to borrow such a sum to loan to our people.

On that point I bear your patience for it to be known that as the Honourable Minister for Housing pointed out, these issues are closely related; they cannot be separated. You cannot separate the finances of the country and the borrowing level of the country from what we are doing here today. What we are doing is setting up a loan. We are showing that the Cayman Islands Government is now in a position to go out and borrow money for a good purpose, not to balance the Budget; not to pay recurrent expenditure. We are in a position where the CDB will show the confidence in the Cayman Islands and the programmes that we are undertaking to loan such sums.

The borrowing of the $55 million in the year 2001 is something that this country must never forget about. This country must never forget about this borrowing; this method used to balance the Budget because it is important to understand the negative impact that this country has had historically from the largest borrowing package of this country when the country sees that the new Government; this Government came about and had to implement revenue measures; revenue measures versus the borrowing which has put us in a position where we can afford now to assist the people that truly need assistance in this country.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker and thanks to the Honourable House.

The Speaker: Does any other Member wish to speak? If no other Member wishes to speak, does the Honourable Third Official Member wish to exercise his right to reply?

Hon. George A. McCarthy: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. I would like to say thanks to all Honourable Members for supporting this Motion. I should mention that the arrangements for securing this loan was made during the attendance at the Caribbean Development Bank Board of Governors meeting in St. Lucia last year and there was a delegation that was headed by the Leader of Government Business. Also in attendance was General Manager, Mrs. Miller and the Minister of Tourism led the discussion with the CDB in order to put arrangements in place for the loan.

Once again, thanks to all Honourable Members.

The Speaker: The question is that this Honourable House acting in accordance with section 3 of The Loans Caribbean Development Bank, 1999 Revision, gives it approval to the governing counsel to authorise the Financial Secretary to execute a loan agreement on behalf of the Government of the Cayman Islands with the Caribbean Development Bank, for an amount not exceeding US$5 million being advanced by the Caribbean Development Bank to the Government of the Cayman Islands to provide mortgage financing to assist in the purchase of newly constructed homes, the construction of new homes and the improvement of existing of homes; the administration of which will be carried out by the Cayman Islands Development Bank as the executing agency for the Government of the Cayman Islands together with the principal repayments, interests and any commitment and other charges in respect of the said amount of US$5 million.

All those in favour please say Aye. Those against, No.

Ayes.

The Speaker: The Ayes have it.

Agreed: Government Motion No. 3 passed.

The Speaker: I call on the Leader of Government Business.

Hon. W. McKeever Bush: Mr. Speaker, I have given notice since last year on Proposed National Conservation Legislation. I have been waiting on a draft Bill since then and I have just received the draft legislation today. In order to start the process of public consultation I would like to lay on the Table of this Honourable House the White Paper on the proposed legislation. To do that I will ask the Honourable House to suspend Standing Order 14(1) (a) to (e) in order to take Presentation of Papers and Reports.

Suspension of Standing Order 14(1) (a) to (e)

The Speaker: The question is that Standing Order 14(1) (a) to (e) be suspended. All those in a favour please say Aye. Those against, No.

Ayes.

The Speaker: The Ayes have it.

Agreed: Standing Order 14(1) (a) to (e) be suspended to allow presentation of papers.

PRESENTATION OF PAPERS AND OF REPORTS

White Paper on Proposed National Conservation Legislation

Hon. W. McKeever Bush: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. This proposed Law provides the legislative framework within which environmental matters in the Cayman Islands will be regulated in the future. Regulations that give effect to the provisions of the Law are also currently being developed.

The following summarises the need for new conservation legislation and outline key elements of the proposed legislation.

The Need for National Conservation Legislation

Current environmental legislation in the Cayman Islands is outdated and does not provide Government and the Department of Environment with the necessary regulatory framework to adequately address current environmental issues. A review of the environmental legislation of the Cayman Islands is also legally required to help ensure that Cayman complies with its treaty obligations under the following International Conservation Agreements:

- i. The Convention on International Trade in Endangered Species of Wild Fauna and Flora, (CITES)—ratified 1976;
- ii. The Convention on the Conservation of Migratory Species of Wild Animals (Bonn)—ratified in 1985 with reservation on sea turtles;
- iii. The Convention on Wetlands of International Importance especially as Waterfowl Habitat (Ramsar)—ratified in 1979;
- iv. The Convention for the Protection and Development of the Marine Environment of the Wider Caribbean Region (Cartegena)—ratified in 1986.
- v. The protocol to the Cartegena Convention concerning Specially Protected Areas and Wild Life that is called (SPAW)—signed in 1990; and The Global Convention and Biological Diversity (CDB)—ratified in 1992.

The treaty obligations mandate that environmental legislation should have three overriding goals:-

- I. The integration of environmental consideration into the decision-making processes of Government
- II. The protection, conservation and enhancement of the environment and biodiversity; and
- III. The achievement of sustainable development, that is, development which meets the needs of the present without compromising the ability of future generations to meet their own needs.

In addition to the obligations placed on the Cayman Islands by the various international conservation agreements detailed above, the Environmental Charter between the United Kingdom and its overseas territories commits the Cayman Islands to a number of actions which will require legislative change.

Key commitments made by the overseas territories governments in the environmental charter are:

1. To ensure the protection and restoration of key habitats, species and landscape features through legislation and appropriate management structures and mechanisms, including a protected area, policy and attempt, the control and eradication of invasive species.
2. To ensure that environmental considerations are integrated within social and economic planning processes; promote sustainable patterns of production and consumption within the territory.
3. Undertake environmental impact assessments before approving major projects and while developing our own growth management strategy.
4. Commit to open and consultative decision-making on developments and plans which may affect the environment; ensure that environmental impact assessments include consultation with stakeholders.

5. Implement effectively obligations under the Multilateral Environmental Agreements already extended to the Cayman Islands and work towards the extension of other relevant agreements.

6.

It is envisaged that the new legislation will also take into account:

1. the culture and traditions of the Cayman Islands, the need for sustained economic growth and the preservation and enhancement of Cayman's attraction as a tourism and financial services centre;
2. the need to simplify and streamline decision-making procedures and to make them comprehensible and whenever possible, open to the public;
3. that new structures and procedures should stimulate and obstruct or be perceived as an obstruction to sustainable development.

Key elements of the proposed legislation are:

1. The establishment of a National Conservation Council which shall be responsible for the proper administration of the law and which shall exercise the powers and duties imposed on it by the law. The council will consist of representatives of various government agencies, private sector organisations and members of the public.
2. Mechanisms for the designation and management of protected areas.
3. Procedures for the nomination, designation and conservation of threatened and endangered species.
4. Regulatory procedures for the introduction of non-indigenous or genetically altered species of Flora and Fauna.
5. Statutory requirements for environmental impact assessments to ensure the environmental consequences of all major projects and plans are fully examined before their execution is authorised; and
6. Promotion of public awareness of environmental issues and encouragement of public involvement in the decision making process.

The proposed legislation envisages that the national conservation council will:

- a) promote the conservation and sustainable use of natural resources in the Islands;
- b) co-ordinate the establishment and adoption by both the public and private sectors of national policies for the conservation and sustainable use of natural resources including but not limited to—
 - i. use of wetlands and wetland resources, and

- ii. the excavation of aggregate and fill materials;
- c) establish and maintain protected areas and wild life management areas and conserve, maintain and wherever possible, restore their natural resources in accordance with part III;
- d) conserve, maintain and wherever possible, restore population and critical habitats of protected species in accordance with Part IV,
- e) promote the training of professional and voluntary personnel in the fields of research, management and wardening of protected areas, natural resources and protected species,
- f) process application for permits and licences under part V;
- g) hear and determine appeals under sections 31 and 32;
- h) promote public understanding and awareness of the significance of the ecological systems of the Islands, the benefits of conserving natural resources of the provisions of this Law and the Conventions and encourage public involvement in the conservation of protected areas and wildlife;
- i) promote the adoption of guidelines by government departments, agencies and statutory authorities for the integration of conservation issues into the decision-making processes and for the achievement of the sustainable use of natural resources,
- j) promote district, national and regional initiatives including co-operative enforcement measures and mutual assistance and the enforcement of national laws in order to further the objectives of the Conventions;
- k) provide such periodic reports as may be required from time to time under the Conventions or by the Governor,
- l) advise the Governor on the making of orders and regulations under this Law; and
- m) carry out such other powers and duties that may be required under the Conventions or by the Governor.

Some of the Council's functions will necessarily be delegated for the Department of Environment.

The Law proposed, National Conservation Legislation will replace The Marine Conservation Law (1995 Revision) and sections 66-79 of the Animals Law (1998 Revision).

Other laws that may require amendment (or consideration given to incorporating some of their provisions into the new legislation) are:

- Aerial Spraying Protection
- Law (1997 Revision),
- Development and Planning Law (1998 Revision),
- Endangered Species Protection and Propagation Law 1978,
- Explosives Law (1997 Revision),
- Hotel Aids Law,
- Land Acquisition Law (1995 Revision)

As I said the Government has been waiting for some time on this White Paper, the Proposed Legislation. Also, this is part and parcel of our 2000 election campaign manifesto and the policy, as enunciated by myself last year, and now the policy of the United Democratic Party. The proposed legislation will go out and I would hope to be able to present a law sometime in November this year, if possible, may be longer because there are several matters that will affect other situations such as the Turtle Farm. Therefore, it will have to be very carefully reviewed. All in all I am indeed very happy that I now have a White Paper to send out to the public for that process.

I want to thank you, Mr. Speaker, and also the House for allowing this to be laid at this time.

The Speaker: So ordered.

I think that brings us to the conclusion of the events on the Order Paper. Could I have the Motion for the adjournment?

ADJOURNMENT

Hon. W. McKeever Bush: Mr. Speaker, I move the adjournment of this Honourable House, and in so doing, I want to thank all the staff, including kitchen help and also the press for their kind assistance during this State Opening meeting. We propose to adjourn this Honourable House until the 15 April when we will come back here to begin discussions on the Report and the review of the constitutional order of the Cayman Islands. Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: The question is this House do now adjourn until 10 am on the 15 April. All those in favour please say Aye. Those against, No.

Ayes.

The Speaker: The Ayes have it.

Before we adjourn I would like to thank Honourable Members for their support and to also thank the staff and to wish everyone a happy Easter. I look forward to seeing you all on the 15 April. The House now stands adjourned until 10 am on the 15 April.

At 1.12 pm the House stood adjourned until 10 am Monday, 15 April 2002, for the purpose of commencing debate on the Report of the Constitutional Commissioners.

OFFICIAL HANSARD REPORT
MONDAY
15 APRIL 2002
11.18 AM
Fifteenth Sitting

The Speaker: Good morning.

I shall call on the Honourable Minister responsible for Education to grace us with prayers.

PRAYERS

Hon. Roy Bodden: Let us pray.

Almighty God, from whom all wisdom and power are derived: we beseech Thee so to direct and prosper the deliberations of the Legislative Assembly now assembled, that all things may be ordered upon the best and surest foundations for the glory of Thy name and for the safety honour and welfare of the people of these islands. Bless our Sovereign Lady, Queen Elizabeth II; Philip, Duke of Edinburgh; Charles, Prince of Wales; and all the Royal family. Give grace to all who exercise authority in our Commonwealth, that peace and happiness, truth and justice, religion and piety may be established among us. Especially we pray for the Governor of our Islands, the Speaker of the Legislative Assembly, Official Members and Ministers of Executive Council and Members of the Legislative Assembly that we may be enabled faithfully to perform the responsible duties of our high office. All this we ask for Thy great Name's sake.

Let us say the Lord's Prayer together: Our Father who art in Heaven, Hallowed be Thy Name. Thy Kingdom come, Thy will be done in earth, as it is in Heaven. Give us this day our daily bread, and forgive us our trespasses, as we forgive those who trespass against us. And lead us not into temptation, but deliver us from evil: For Thine is the Kingdom, the power and the glory, forever and ever. Amen.

The Lord bless and keep us. The Lord make His face shine upon us and be gracious unto us. The Lord lift up the light of His countenance upon us and give us peace now and always. Amen.

Proceedings resumed at 11.21 am

The Speaker: Please be seated. Proceedings are resumed.

ADMINISTRATION OF OATHS OR AFFIRMATIONS

The Speaker: The Honourable Temporary Second Official Member and the Honourable Temporary Third Official Member, come forward to the Clerk's table please.

OATH OF ALLEGIANCE

by Mr. Samuel Bulgin

Mr. Samuel W. Bulgin: I, Samuel Bulgin, do swear that I will be faithful and bear true allegiance to Her Majesty Queen Elizabeth II, her heirs and successors according to law, so help me God.

The Speaker: Members I think we all have the new Draft Constitution in our mind and we all forgot to stand but perhaps in light of that we should stand at this time.

OATH OF ALLEGIANCE

by Mr. Arthur Joel Walton

Mr. A. Joel Walton: I, Arthur Joel Walton, do swear that I will be faithful and bear true allegiance to Her Majesty Queen Elizabeth II, her heirs and successors according to law, so help me God.

The Speaker: Honourable Members once again I welcome you to the House and I trust that we will have a productive morning and continuation throughout this day. Please be seated.

READING BY THE HONOURABLE SPEAKER OF MESSAGES AND ANNOUNCEMENTS

Apologies

The Speaker: I have received apologies for the Honourable Leader, Minister of Tourism for his absence, as well as the Honourable Minister responsible for Community Services.

STATEMENTS BY MEMBERS OF THE GOVERNMENT

The Speaker: I have received statements from the Honourable Acting Leader.
Honourable Acting Leader.

Cable and Wireless

Hon. Linford A. Pierson: Thank you Madam Speaker.

I refer to the front page article of in the Caymanian Compass of 2 April 2002, as reported by Mr. John Redman and headlined "Cable and Wireless Rebuts Minister". I trust that this clarification will be given the same prominence by the Caymanian Compass.

It seems that Mr. Timothy Adam, General Manager of Cable and Wireless Cayman Islands Ltd., has taken exception to a number of matters that I raised during my recent speech in the Legislative Assembly, introducing the Second Reading of the Information and Communications (ICT) Authority Bill.

Firstly, he objects to me saying that some of Cable and Wireless comments on the Bill were aimed at strengthening their own position. Madam Speaker, I believe these words have been taken out of context. Having twice thanked Cable and Wireless for their constructive contribution to the drafting of the Bill, I said, and quote, “However, in my opinion some of their suggestions and objections have been, not surprisingly, aimed at strengthening their own position.” I went on to say, “This is understandable, and I do not blame them in the least.” This is hardly damning criticism, moreover, I see no rebuttal in Mr. Adam’s quoted response. Indeed I agree with the comments he makes.

With respect to delaying tactics my comments were accurately reported. As Mr. Adam well knows, I have articulated my policy on liberalisation on many occasions since first announcing it at a Chamber of Commerce lunch in July 2001. There is no policy vacuum. I also may have consistently stated that to date, Cable and Wireless have honoured their public commitment to fully co-operate with Government over the liberalisation of the ICT Sector. Nevertheless, I felt duty bound to advise the Members of the Legislative Assembly and the general public that such co-operation has not been forthcoming with respect to the ongoing special audit of Cable and Wireless being conducted by the Auditor General.

Mr. Adam chose to give some background information “to illuminate the basic facts of the matter”. He then gave his interpretation of these facts, not the facts themselves. I have no option but to respond in some detail to his comments as they omit several salient points and also call into question the independence of the Auditor General.

Let me make it quite clear that the Auditor General is an independent officer appointed under the Constitution of these Islands. The Auditor General reports to the Legislative Assembly, not to Executive Council or to me. Ministers do not direct or control his work in anyway. There is absolutely no question of Government using the Auditor General as some sort of tool in telecommunications policy.

Cable and Wireless is required under the terms of its current agreement to submit annual audited accounts to support the licence fees paid to Government. In his comments Mr. Adam omitted to disclose that his company failed to honour this obligation and did not submit accounts for the years ending 31 March 1997, 1998 and 1999. Thus, when the Auditor General commenced a routine audit of Cable and Wireless licensed payments in early 2000, there was nothing to audit and his work had to be postponed. Following representations to the company, the outstanding accounts for these years were eventually received in August 2000, some three years late. All of this occurred prior to the last Election and long before I announced Government’s telecommunications liberalisation policy.

In his report in February 2001, the Auditor General disclosed that what appeared to be large errors had been identified in the calculation of licence fees when compared to the audited accounts. The Auditor General staff therefore met with Cable and Wireless’s Financial Controller to request details of their licence fee calculations and explanations of other accounting matters. Shortly thereafter Cable and Wireless paid over $97,000 to Government as a “computational adjustment” which had previously been short paid by them to Government. The other matters identified have yet to be satisfactorily resolved. I therefore requested the Auditor General to carry out a comprehensive audit from inception of the current agreement in 1992. I have no power to direct the scope of his investigations or how they are carried out.

The Auditor General elected to augment his staff by engaging a firm of forensic accountants with experience in the telecommunications industry. He also sought and obtained the authority of His Excellency the Governor to carry out the audit under the provisions of section 46 of the Public Finance and Audit Law (1997 Revision). Mr. Adam questioned why section 46 was used and what public interest was being protected. Section 46 merely provides the Auditor General the same discretion and powers that are conferred upon him in relation to the audit of public monies and other public property. In order to discharge his functions properly, the Auditor General needs to have authority to examine records and obtain the information and explanation that he considers necessary. I agree with Mr. Adams that section 46 has never been used previously. The Cable and Wireless situation is unusual because their licence fee to Government is based on the company’s profit. These fees are public revenues. In my opinion, it is most definitely in the public interest that the Government satisfies itself that Cable and Wireless has paid the correct fees in compliance with their licence agreement. I do not think this is in any way unreasonable.

From the outset Cable and Wireless and their legal advisors resisted the audit being conducted under section 46 of the Public Finance and Audit Law (1997 Revision). They also strongly objected to the use of the external forensic accountants and told the Auditor General that they would not pay for the cost of the audit. Pending resolution of these points, the Auditor General was asked by Cable and Wireless to remove his audit team from the company’s premises.

Cable and Wireless management controls when the auditors can visit the company’s premises, which employees they can speak to, and which documents they can examine. They have questioned why the auditors want certain information and have even tried to establish terms of reference or boundaries to restrict the audit. More significantly, the auditors have experienced repeated problems in obtaining timely and complete access to information they consider necessary. That is the main reason why the audit is entering its ninth month.

I cannot say when the audit is likely to be completed much depends on issues that emerge as the audit proceeds and the degree of co-operation and assistance the auditors receive from Cable and Wireless. I am informed by the Auditor General that a number of significant issues have come to light during the audit. Most of these have still to be satisfactorily resolved. Many of these matters are complex and cover several years' operation.

I share with the Auditor General his frustration at the failure of Cable and Wireless to provide reasonable access to their information and premises. Nevertheless, I emphasise that there is no connection between the audit and the liberalisation process either can proceed independently of the other. I merely draw attention to Cable and Wirelesses refusal to co-operate with the Auditor General as an example of behaviour which I will not tolerate, and which I think this Honourable House should not tolerate, in relation the process of liberalisation. I also acknowledge that the audit has placed an additional workload on the company. However, this could have been avoided if licence fees had been correctly calculated and full, accurate reporting done at the proper time. The company's recalcitrant attitude, the delayed accounts, underpayments of licence fees and other matters that the audit has disclosed have served only to focus Government's attention on a possible lack of underlying integrity in the licence payments. In my opinion the unhelpful attitude of the company towards the legitimate activities of the Auditor General can only give rise to a suspicion that it has something to hide. If that is not the case, I urge the company in its own best interest to co-operate promptly and to the fullest extent with the Auditor General.

I want to reassure Cable and Wireless that the Government regards the process of getting to liberalisation and the audit of Cable and Wireless as distinct matters. I also want to warn them that this Government will take all necessary steps to ensure that the appropriate licence fees have been paid and to recover any underpayment. I urge Cable and Wireless to co-operate fully with the auditors so that the various matters under investigation can be resolved as quickly as possible.

With respect to Mr. Adams' final comment concerning anti-competitive practices, I consider it responsible to proactively advise Cable and Wireless that any unreasonable attempts to tie up the market prior to the introduction of competition would be considered anti-competitive practices that would be acted upon immediately by the new ICT Authority. No accusation was made but the rules were clearly stated in advance of them coming into effect. Surely this was the fair approach.

In summary, Madam Speaker, I can see no justification for Mr. Adam's remarks. Further the general public are likely to have been confused by the article. I hope that I now have clarified the issues. Thank you, Madam Speaker.

The Speaker: Thank you, Acting Leader. I believe it your intention to make a second statement. Please proceed.

Deferral of the Debate upon the Report of the Constitutional Commissioners on the Review of the Cayman Islands Constitution commissioned by His Excellency the Governor on 15 June 2001

Hon. Linford A. Pierson: Madam Speaker, on another matter; as all Honourable Members are aware of the adjournment of the House on the 21 March 2002, it was agreed to reconvene on 15 April 2002, today, for the purpose of commencing debate on the Report of the Constitutional Commissioners. Subsequent to the adjournment of the 21 March 2002 His Excellency, the Governor, has agreed to extend the time for public consultation of the Commissioners Report until the 19 June 2002.

Meanwhile we have been advised by the Portfolio for Legal Affairs that there is a need to amend the Judicature Law, as a matter of urgency. Accordingly, we propose to accommodate this request today. Thank you, Madam Speaker.

The Speaker: Thank you, Honourable Acting Leader. Madam Clerk.

GOVERNMENT BUSINESS

BILLS

Suspension of Standing Order 46 (1) and (2)

The Speaker: The Honourable Temporary Second Official Member.

Hon. Samuel W. Bulgin: Thank you, Madam Speaker. I beg to move a Motion for the suspension of Standing Order 46 (1) and (2) to provide for the First Reading of a Bill entitled The Judicature (Amendment) Bill 2002.

The Speaker: The question is that Standing Order 46 (1) and (2) be suspended. All those in favour please say Aye. Those against, No.

Ayes.

The Speaker: The Ayes have it.

Agreed: Standing Order 46(1) and (2) is hereby suspended.

FIRST READING

The Judicature (Amendment) Bill 2002

The Speaker: The Bill has been deemed to have been read a first time and set down for the Second Reading.

Suspension of Standing Order 46 (4)

The Speaker: The Honourable Temporary Second Official Member.

Hon. Samuel W. Bulgin: Thank you, Madam Speaker.

I beg to move a Motion for the suspension of Standing Order 46 (4) to provide for the Second Reading of a Bill entitled The Judicature (Amendment) Bill 2002.

The Speaker: The question is that Standing Order 46 (4) be suspended. All those in favour please say Aye. Those against, No.

Ayes.

The Speaker: The Ayes have it.

Agreed: Standing Order 46 (4) suspended.

SECOND READING

The Judicature (Amendment) Bill 2002

The Speaker: Honourable Temporary Second Official Member.

Hon. Samuel W. Bulgin: Thank you, Madam Speaker.

I beg to move the Second Reading of a Bill for a Law to amend the Judicature Law (1995 Revision) as amended, to ensure that employers pay their employees for the normal employment during the period in which employees are serving on the jury. It is also to provide for the payment of an allowance to employers in certain circumstances and to increase the panel of jurors, and for incidental and connected purposes.

The Speaker: The Bill has been duly moved. Does the Mover wish to speak thereto?

Hon. Samuel W. Bulgin: Thank you, Madam Speaker, I wish to.

There are essentially three proposed amendments to the Judicature Law that this Bill seeks to address. The first amendment is really to ensure that persons who are selected as jurors do not suffer any loss in income during the period when they are required to serve. Accordingly, a provision has been put in the Bill, which is intended to amend the Law, to provide that where employees are summoned to serve as jurors they would be entitled to their salary or wages during that period of service, as the case may be. If the employer suffers any hardship during the period when the juror is away from the place of employment, that employer is entitled to make a request to Government for compensation to offset the hardship complained of.

If I may, by way of example, just mention one. I can envisage instances where a juror is away from his or her place of employment for three or four months and it would be disruptive of the place of employment to have that juror coming in and working two or three hours per day. Instead what an employer might wish to do, is to employ someone as a locum for that period when the juror is away and would have to pay that person full salary for that period. In those circumstances it is envisaged that the employer would be able to may make a request to Government to recover the amount paid to the substitute employee during those periods because he would have been required to pay two sets of salaries during that time. So, this Bill would seek to address any hardship that would be suffered as a result of any such actions.

The Bill also seeks to increase the amount of jurors who can be summoned to serve on certain cases as the Law currently stands. Most cases except murder and treason would require seven jurors to serve. In cases of murder and treason twelve jurors formed therein. However, there are instances where there are complex fraud matters that have been coming before the court and resulting in protracted trials and during those trials, as is expected, members of the jury might become ill or have to be excused or discharged for a number of reasons. If the amount of jurors is reduced by more than two, the trial would have to be aborted and would then have to start over.

What this Bill seeks to do is to increase the number of jurors who can sit in complex trials and trials that are anticipated would be taking long periods of time to twelve. It is going to be a matter for the discretion of the trial judge, as to whether this is a case for twelve jurors to be empanel and having read the paper, make the determination as to the complexity and likely lengths of the trial. If twelve jurors have been empanelled and any member of the jury should become ill and have to be discharged, as long as the number is not reduced by more than five, then the trial will continue. In other words the jury can continue with up to seven jurors and in those circumstances there would be no need to abort the trial.

There is a trial which is intended to start on 1 May 2002 which is the Euro Bank trial and it is estimated to last any where between four to six months. It is anticipated that given all human frailties someone or a couple members of the jury might become ill during this period. This amendment is really a proactive approach to cover that eventuality where members of the jury might become ill, in that, no time and expense would be wasted in having to start a trial over. So, this Bill also seeks to address those concerns.

I must say that the issue of the compensation of the jurors was something that was highlighted by the Second Elected Member from George Town and my learning colleague, at a previous sitting of this House where there were certain amendments done to the Judicature Law to increase the array of jurors to serve in Money laundering cases. At that time an undertaking was given to have a look at the issues raised by him and to seek to amend the legislation to address those concerns. It is born out of that, those concerns raised by him, that we have decided to revisit the legislation and have a look at it, and the Government has agreed that it is quite appropriate to address these concerns so that people who were serving as jurors are not put in a worse position than they would have been, had they not been summoned to do their civic duty, which is jury duty in this case.

So, those are the amendments that we are proposing to the Judicature Law and I seek the support of Members of this Honourable House.

The Speaker: Thank you. Does any other Member wish to speak?

The Second Elected Member for the district of George Town.

Mr. Alden M. McLaughlin, Jr.: Thank you, Madam Speaker.

I rise to speak on behalf of all Members of the Opposition, in relation to this important Bill. I am grateful to my learned friend, the Acting Second Official Member and to his colleagues for moving this matter along in an effort to ensure that by the time the complex and expected lengthy Euro Bank trial begins these provisions will have effect.

I believe that the proposals contained in this Bill go a long way, in fact almost all the way to addressing the concerns, which I raised some time ago in relation to the compensation of jurors. As, has been alluded to, I believe that the Euro Bank trial is expected to last the best part of six months. It is critical that jurors who are empanelled and are required to serve during the course of that trial, are adequately compensated and be that they do not, as a result of carrying out this very important public duty, have cause for concern that a) they will not be adequately compensated and b) their absence from their place of employment might prejudice the future of their job. I believe that the latter concern is proposed to be dealt with in a Committee Stage amendment, which I have just received notice of from the Honourable Acting Second Official Member.

There is one aspect of this Bill which still gives us cause for concern, and the concern, I believe, arises more out of the logistics of having jurors receive the compensation than of any matter of principle. However, we believe it is important that this concern also be addressed.

Section 12 (2), provides that: “Each juror shall be entitled to an allowance of fifty dollars per day for his attendance at court together with a travelling allowance not exceeding one dollar for each mile travelled in order to attend, and the Clerk of the court shall issue to each juror a warrant, countersigned by the court, authorising the Treasury to pay each juror the amount so due to him.”

Subsection 3 of the same section continues and says: “Notwithstanding the excused absence provided for in subsection (1), a juror who is an employee shall be entitled to his usual compensation received from his employment less the allowance referred to in subsection (2).”

What is contemplated is that a juror will receive his salary or his wages from his employer less the $50 per day allowance plus the travelling allowance. What we see as problematic with that proposal is that it is not usual for the Treasury to pay checks for compensation for jury duty on a weekly basis. There are two instances and I shall deal with the first one first. If an employee is earning less than $50 per day and if this provision is not amended to ensure that an employer has a continuous obligation to pay that employee's usual salary during the course of his jury duty, we could run into the real problem that the juror might end up taking home no pay at all for some weeks, because the employer's responsibility and obligation under the proposed subsection is that he must pay the employee his usual compensation less the allowance of $50 plus the travelling allowance.

The other scenario is where an employee is earning more than $50 per day. Most of us live according to our means (many of us live above them). However, if one have a monthly budget which is based on ones usual income, of say even as much as two thousand dollars a month, but the amount which you would receive as an allowance as a juror is deducted from that on the basis of $50 a day, $250 per week, you could wind up at the end of the month with half of what you normally receive by way of income until you receive the check from the Treasury, which might be a month or six weeks down the road. So, in that situation an individual might find themselves, more likely than not, in some degree of financial difficulty.

What we propose to deal with this logistical problem is that subsection, section 12 (3), be suitably amended to impose upon the employer a continuous obligation to pay an employee who is a juror, his usual compensation received from his employment throughout, then place a corresponding responsibility or obligation on the employee to repay the employer the allowance he has received or the part thereof in the case where he is earning less than $50 a day plus the travel allowance.

We have thought about this matter and we do not wish to make a proposal, which would result in increasing Government's administrative responsibilities and creating more red tape or bureaucracy within the Civil Service. So, as we propose it, while the Law would place the obligation on the employee and make the employee liable to repay the employer, that would be a matter as between them and that Government's only responsibility would be to advise the employer that it had issued the check in whatever the amount was to the employee who had served as a juror. It would then be a matter for the employer and employee to resolve the matter as between them.

In many instances where the employee is earning more than $50 a day it would simply be a matter of the employee signing the back of the check and handing it to his employer. In those instances where the employee was earning less than $50 a day, then clearly the calculation would be done and the employee would pay the employer back that portion of the allowance which would properly be the employer's.

As I said, at the start, that is really a matter of logistics. However, it is a real concern and one can see the hardship that could come to bare upon employees if they were deprived of what is their usual income for even one week. Things are tough enough as it is.

There is another benefit arising from the proposed course of action, which we have just put forward. In every instance where pension and health insurance deductions are being made, in most instances the employer pays half of those premiums and if the employer continues to have the responsibility to pay the employee, the usual compensation under the terms of his employment in these circumstances, that administrative aspect of this matter can continue unbroken and without any difficulty or complications which might arise otherwise. In instances, for instance, where the employee is earning less than $50 a day the employee would, in those circumstances, have had to, not only have been out of pocket for the $50 per day, which he has not yet received from the Government, but he would have to find his portion of the premium payable in respect of pension. There also arises a question of how the deduction would be made for that individual's pension contribution in those circumstances.

So, for those reasons we offer our conditional support for this Bill. Conceptually it is what the Opposition has sought and we believe it will go a long way to alleviating the hardship and misgivings many in the community have for carrying out one of the most important functions in the judicial system; that of serving as a juror and entitling those who are indicted to a trial by a jury of their peers. I thank you, Madam Speaker.

The Speaker: Thank you, Honourable Member. Does any other Member wish to speak? If no other Member wishes to speak, I shall call on the Temporary Second Official Member if he wishes to exercise his right of reply.

Hon. Samuel W. Bulgin: Thank you, Madam Speaker.

I am grateful to the Honourable Second Elected Member from George Town, for his usual very insightful contribution to this debate and very important Bill. He has clearly raised some very important points and we intend to take those on board. It would be our wish that at some stage, prior to the House going into Committee that we have an adjournment, subject to the Speaker, of course, to have a look at these proposals to see how it can be incorporated into the Bill.

May I just—for the purpose of the record, highlight what I would have considered a major amendment to the Bill currently before the House, Madam Speaker? The position as it currently stands is that each juror is entitled to a daily allowance of $10. The Bill proposes to increase that to $50 per day for the daily allowance and in terms of the mileage, the juror is entitled to, I think it is 20 cents per mile for each mile travelled to attend court as a juror. The Bill seeks to increase that to $1 per mile and it is Government's view that this is more consistent with present day commercial reality, hence the reason for the increases.

The Speaker: At this time the House will be suspended for a short break.

Proceedings suspended at 12.07 pm

Proceedings resumed at 1.00 pm

The Speaker: Please be seated. Proceedings are resumed.

The Honourable Temporary Second Official Member.

Hon. Samuel W. Bulgin: Thank you, Madam Speaker.

May I express my gratitude to the Honourable House and to Honourable Members, and of course, to you, for the short adjournment to co-ordinate the proposed amendments to this Bill. I intend to move for these amendments at a committee stage and I have given the required notice to that effect.

The Speaker: Thank you. The question is that a Bill shortly entitled The Judicature (Amendment) Bill 2002, be given a second reading. All those in favour, please say Aye. Those against, No.

Ayes.

The Speaker: The Ayes have it.

Agreed: The Judicature (Amendment) Bill 2002 given a second reading.

The Speaker: The House will now go into Committee to consider this Bill.

House in Committee

COMMITTEE ON BILL

The Speaker: Please be seated. The House is now in Committee. With the leave of the House, may I assume that as usual we should authorise the Honourable Temporary Second Official Member to correct minor printing errors and in such, as in these Bills.

Would the Clerk please state the Bill and read its Clauses.

The Judicature (Amendment) Bill 2002

Clauses 1 – 3

The Clerk:

Clause 1	Short title.
Clause 2	Amendment of section 2 of the Judicature Law (1995 Revision) - definitions.
Clause 3	Amendment of section 10 - panel of jurors for court sessions.

The Chairman: The question is that clauses 1 through 3 stand part of the Bill. If there is no debate I shall put the question that clauses 1 through 3 stand part of the Bill. Those in favour, please say Aye. Those against, No.

Ayes.

The Chairman: The Ayes have it.

Clauses 1 through 3 passed.

Clause 4

The Clerk: Clause 4 Repeal of section 12 and substitution - allowance to jurors.

The Chairman: The Temporary Second Official Member, I believe there is an amendment proposed for this Clause.

Hon. Samuel W. Bulgin: Thank you, Madam Speaker. There was a notice that was signed initially, which was referred to as a first notice for the purpose of the records (Hansard). I wish to withdraw that notice so the amendments are all consolidated.

The Chairman: The question is that the initial amendment that was put, be hereby withdrawn. All those in favour please say Aye. All those against, No.

Ayes.

The Chairman: The Ayes have it.

Agreed: The original notice for amendment withdrawn.

The Chairman: Please proceed.

Hon. Samuel W. Bulgin: Thank you.

In accordance with notice No. 2, I as Acting Honourable Second Official Member, give notice that I intend to move the following Committee Stage Amendment to The Judicature (Amendment) Bill 2002 that Clause 4 be amended as follows – In section 12 (3) by deleting the words “less the allowance referred to in subsection (2)” and by inserting after the word “employment” the following words: –“an employer who refuses to pay an employee in accordance with this subsection or who terminates the employment of an employee on the sole grounds that the employee is serving on a jury, commits an offence and is liable to be dealt with in accordance with section 27 of the Grand Court Law (1995 Revision)”

Madam Speaker, may I just ask that where the word “sole” appears in that paragraph in the second line, that the word ‘sole’ not be included. So, it would be “. . .an employee on the grounds that the employee is serving. . .” Also, for the purpose of the record I would just like to make reference to what section 27 of the Grand Court Law states:

Section 27(1) provides: “without prejudice to any powers conferred upon the Court under section 11(1), the Court shall have jurisdiction to order the arrest of and to try summarily any person guilty of any contempt of the Court or in any act insulting to or scandalising the Court or disturbing the proceedings thereof, and any person convicted under this section is liable to imprisonment for six months and to a fine of five hundred dollars.” and of relevance, as well, is subsection 2 which says: “For the purposes of this section, contempt of court shall include any action or inaction amounting to interference with or obstruction of, or having a tendency to interfere with or to obstruct the due administration of justice.”

The Chairman: Temporary Second Official Member, with the request to delete the word ‘sole’ as it appears in your latest Committee Stage Amendment, the Chair is of the opinion that it is not a consequential amendment and would prefer that that be a motion to amend the amendment. So, let us deal first with the amendment on the Floor. We would put the question and then you would move for the deletion of that said term.

Hon. Samuel W. Bulgin: I am guided by you, Madam Speaker, thank you.

The Chairman: Were you finished moving the amendment as it was before the request to delete that.

Hon. Samuel W. Bulgin: I had completed the first amendment and was moving on with the leave to the other amendments: In section 12(4), by deleting the words "Financial Secretary" and substituting the words "Clerk of the Court"; and finally by inserting the following new subsection after subsection (4) – "When an employee receives the allowance of fifty dollars referred to in subsection (2) the Clerk of the Court shall notify his employer of such payment and the employee shall pay that allowance to his employer or, where the employee's daily employment compensation is less than fifty dollars, such part of such allowance as is equal to such daily employment compensation; and an employee who refuses or fails to pay his employer such allowance commits an offence." Thank you.

The Chairman: The amendment has been duly moved. Does any Member wish to speak further thereto? I shall put the question that the amendment do stand part of the clause. Those in favour please say Aye. Those against, No.

Ayes.

The Chairman: The Ayes have it.

Agreed: Amendments passed.

The Chairman: Temporary Second Official Member, perhaps at this stage you would move for the specified amendment, asking for the deletion of the term 'sole'

Hon. Samuel W. Bulgin: Thank you, Madam Speaker.

As alluded to earlier, in accordance with the relevant Standing Order I also move for an amendment to this amendment, which would delete the word 'sole' where it appears in the second line of that particular paragraph after the word 'the' and before the word 'grounds' so that the entire passage would read, "an employer who refuses to pay an employee in accordance with this subsection or who terminates the employment of an employee under on the grounds that the employee is serving as a juror, commits an offence and is liable to be dealt with in accordance with section 27 of the Grand Court Law (1995 Revision)." I so move.

The Chairman: Leave granted. The amendment has been duly moved. Does any Member wish to speak to it? If not, I shall put the question that the amendments stand part of the Clause. All those in favour please say Aye. Those against, No.

Ayes.

The Chairman: The Ayes have it.

Agreed: Amendment passed.

The Chairman: I will now put the question that the Clause as twice amended stand part of the Bill. All those in favour please Aye. Those against, No.

Ayes.

The Chairman: The Ayes have it.

Agreed: Clause 4 as amended passed.

Clause 5 – 6

The Clerk:

Clause 5 Amendment of section 16 - number of jurors in criminal cases.

Clause 6 Amendment of section 20 - Discharge of jury before verdict.

The Chairman: The question is that Clauses 5 and 6 stand part of the Bill. If there is no debate I will put the question that Clauses 5 and 6 stand part of the Bill. All those in favour please say Aye. Those against, No.

Ayes.

The Chairman: The Ayes have it.

Agreed: Amendment passed. Clauses 5 and 6 passed

The Clerk: A Bill for a Law to amend the Judicature Law (1995 Revision) to ensure that employers pay employees for their normal employment during the period in which employees are serving on a jury; To provide for the payment of an allowance to employers in certain circumstances; To increase the panel of jurors; and for incidental and connected purposes.

The Chairman: The question is that the Title do stand part of the Bill. All those in favour please say Aye. Those against, No.

Ayes.

The Chairman: The Ayes have it.

Agreed: Title passed.

The Chairman: The question is that the Bill be reported to the House. All those in favour please say aye. Those against, No.

Ayes.

The Chairman: The Ayes have it.

Agreed: That the Bill be reported to the House.

The Chairman: That concludes proceedings in Committee.

REPORT ON BILL

The Speaker: Please be seated.

The Honourable Temporary Second Official Member.

The Judicature (Amendment) Bill 2002

Hon. Samuel W. Bulgin: Thank you, Madam Speaker.

I have to report that a Bill entitled, a bill for a Law to amend The Judicature Law (1995 Revision) was examined by a Committee of the whole House and passed with 5 amendments.

The Speaker: The Bill has been duly reported and is set down for the Third Reading.

Suspension of Standing Order 47

The Speaker: The Temporary Second Official Member.

Hon. Samuel W. Bulgin: Thank you, Madam Speaker.

I move for the suspension of Standing Order 47 to provide for a third reading of a Bill entitled, The Judicature (Amendment) Bill 2002.

The Speaker: The question is that Standing Order 47 be suspended. All those in favour please say Aye. Those against, No.

Ayes.

The Speaker: The Ayes have it.

Agreed: Standing Order 47 suspended.

THIRD READING

The Judicature (Amendment) Bill 2002

The Speaker: The Honourable Temporary Second Official Member.

Hon. Samuel W. Bulgin: Thank you, Madam Speaker.

I move that a Bill to amend The Judicature (Amendment) Bill 2002 be given a third reading and passed.

The Speaker: The question is that a Bill shortly entitled The Judicature (Amendment) Bill 2002, as amended, be given a third reading and passed. All those in favour please say Aye. Those against, No.

Ayes.

The Speaker: The Ayes have it.

Agreed: The Judicature (Amendment) Bill 2002 given a Third Reading and Passed.

ADJOURNMENT

The Speaker: Honourable Acting Leader, perhaps we could have the motion for the adjournment.

Hon. Linford A. Pierson: Madam Speaker, I beg to move the adjournment of this Honourable House until 10am Wednesday, 5 June 2002.

The Speaker: The question is that this House do now adjourn until 10am Wednesday, 5 June 2002. All those in favour please say Aye. Those against, No.

Ayes.

The Speaker: The Ayes have it.

At 1.17 pm the House stood adjourned until 10 am Wednesday, 5 June 2002.

OFFICIAL HANSARD REPORT
WEDNESDAY
5 JUNE 2002
11.30 AM
First Sitting

The Speaker: Proceedings are resumed. I call on the Member for North Side to grace us with prayers.

PRAYERS

Ms. Edna M. Moyle: Let us pray.

Almighty God, from whom all wisdom and power are derived; We beseech Thee so to direct and prosper the deliberations of the Legislative Assembly now assembled, that all things may be ordered upon the best and surest foundations for the glory of Thy Name and for the safety, honour and welfare of the people of these Islands.

Bless our Sovereign Lady, Queen Elizabeth II; Philip, Duke of Edinburgh; Charles, Prince of Wales; and all the Royal family. Give grace to all who exercise authority in our Commonwealth, that peace and happiness, truth and justice, religion and piety may be established among us. Especially we pray for the Governor of our Islands, the Speaker of the Legislative Assembly, Official Members and Ministers of Executive Council and Members of the Legislative Assembly that we may be enabled faithfully to perform the responsible duties of our high office.

All this we ask for Thy Great Name's sake.

Let us say the Lord's Prayer together: Our Father who art in Heaven, Hallowed be Thy Name, Thy Kingdom come, Thy will be done, in earth as it is in Heaven. Give us this day our daily bread, and forgive us our trespasses, as we forgive them who trespass against us. And lead us not into temptation, but deliver us from evil. For Thine is the Kingdom, the power and the glory, forever and ever. Amen.

The Lord bless us and keep us. The Lord make His face shine upon us and be gracious unto us. The Lord lift up the light of His countenance upon us and give us peace now and always. Amen.

READING BY THE HONOURABLE
SPEAKER OF MESSAGES
AND ANNOUNCEMENTS

Apologies

The Speaker: Please be seated. I have received apologies from the Leader of Government Business, the Honourable McKeever Bush.

Matters Which the Chair Considers to be of Grave Concern

The Speaker: Honourable Members, I beg your indulgence this morning to express ruling on matters which the Chair considers to be of grave concern.

Firstly, I wish to commence with the following comments: Neither the Constitution nor the Standing Orders of the Legislative Assembly have specific procedures for dealing with proposals for constitutional change. Under the direction of the Governor, the Report of the Constitutional Modernisation Review Commissioners 2002, is scheduled for debate in this Honourable Assembly on 19 June 2002.

In the meantime, a Private Member's Motion has been submitted which seeks a resolution of this Honourable House to the effect that six stated questions in the Motion are of national importance; that in accordance with the Constitution a Bill for a Law to provide for referendum to determine the six issues be brought to this Assembly as soon as practical; that pending the referendum, debate on the Constitution Report be deferred; and the result of the referendum together with the Commissioner's Report and the Hansard record of the debate thereon, be forwarded to Her Majesty's Government.

Section 37(2) of the Constitution requires the recommendation of the Governor for the Assembly to proceed on any bill or a motion which, in the Speaker's opinion, makes provision for imposing or increasing any charge on the revenues of the Islands. Likewise, Standing Order 22(2) merely mirrors this stated position. A motion providing for a referendum, in my opinion, as I have ruled, would have the effect of imposing a charge on the revenue of these Islands in the form of the cost of holding the referendum. The shorter Oxford Dictionary, Third Edition, includes the definition of "Charge" as a "pecuniary burden or cost."

The responsibilities of modern Speakership are considerable. As the Presiding Officer of this Honourable House, the Speaker is the guardian of all of its privileges. According to the book, The Office of the Speaker, penned by Philip Laundry, the Speaker is elected for a constituency, like any other Member reaching parliament, and represents the interest of the community in like manner.

The Speaker's function is to maintain order by enforcing the rules of the House as necessary, to interpret the Standing Orders and the practice of the House, as well as to deal with points of order and to give rulings when called upon to do so. Rulings, once given, stand as precedence in this Honourable House as parliamentary case law, and it may be given publicly from the Chair or privately in response to Members so seeking.

For the record, the Speaker is equipped with disciplinary powers by which he or she can:

- (1) Call Members to order;
- (2) Suspend a Sitting in circumstances of grave disorder;
- (3) Order a Member to resume his or her seat, or withdraw from this Honourable Chamber; or
- (4) Name a Member of the House when a severe penalty is called for.

The Speaker has a particular duty to protect the rights of the minority, which no Speaker will ever fail to do—certainly, not this Speaker. In the exercise of impartiality, neither must he nor she, as Speaker, lose sight of the rights of the majority.

The Speaker is also equipped with powers to rule on admissibility of bills, motions and amendments. The Speaker's office is thus akin to that of a judge and lawyers have frequently, although not invariably, been selected to fit that office.

The office of Speaker, as set out by Philip Laundy, is one of great prestige and dignity and the exaltation is quite a deliberate one designed to sustain authority and honour and independence of that very position.

Honourable Members, let there be absolutely no mistake: As long as God grants me the grace and the honour of occupying this high office, I will not tolerate any reflection on the character of the Speaker or accusation of partiality in the discharge of my duties or any other Honourable Member in this House. In fact, Honourable Members, Erskine May, Twenty-second Edition, page 123 states the following: “In the same way, reflections on the character of the Speaker or accusations of partiality in the discharge of his duties . . . have attracted penal powers of the [House of] Commons”.

Honourable Members, a Private Member's Motion, which was untitled, was presented to Madam Clerk here in these precincts at approximately 9.05 am on Tuesday, 28 May 2002, being the last day according to Standing Orders for submission of motions. I returned from the United Kingdom on official Government business late that afternoon. To my great deprecation the movers of the said motion took a conscious decision to disclose this motion to the public, prior to obtaining the necessary consent from the Speaker. In my view, it is in breach of well-established procedural guidelines on this Honourable Parliament, despite a reminder from Madam Clerk to this effect.

Honourable Members, I duly considered the Private Member's Motion with utmost care, as it is my custom to do with all matters so appearing before me. As a result, I found the motion to be defective. Once I had made my decision, I notified the mover and the seconder of the motion that I wished to meet with them in the Speaker's office to convey my said ruling. Both the First Elected Member from the district of George Town and the lady Member from the district of North Side showed up.

The First Elected Member for George Town requested that they needed a few more minutes, which I granted.

I sat in my office only to watch, with my great dismay, the First Elected Member from George Town and the lady Member from North Side utilise this time to smoke outside my office and to converse with the Second Elected Member for George Town. Following that, the request came from the First Elected Member for George Town for the admission of his colleague, the Second Elected Member, to sit in and again I consented.

Honourable Members, I will now read the ruling which I have made, which was conveyed and explained to the First and Second Elected Members for George Town and the lady Member for North Side. The ruling is as follows: “I have duly considered the above Motion received in the office of the Clerk, 28 May 2002 and find that it contravenes the Cayman Islands Constitution Order 1972 and the Legislative Assembly Standing Orders 1997 Revision as follows:

“Whereas clause 7, is contrary to Standing Order 24(4); Resolve clause 2, is contrary to section 37(2) of the Constitution and Standing Order 24(2).

“Accordingly, the Motion in its current form [and the operative words are ‘current form’] is out of order. However, subject to it being satisfactorily amended in the Whereas clause 7 and Resolve clause 2 to comply with the provisions of the said Standing Orders and Constitution, it may be resubmitted to the office of the Clerk.

[Signed by the] Speaker of this Honourable House.”

Honourable Members, these expressed combined legal constraints (as set out in our Constitution and our Standing Orders) were what compelled me as Speaker to make my rulings. Nothing less. Nothing more.

What options did my ruling then present to the mover and the seconder of the motion? In my opinion, Honourable Members, the options were, and still remain available to the movers of the said motion, to either bring their motion in line with the current provisions of the Constitution and our Standing Orders, or, to keep their motion in the defective mode and play the role of victim persona. Each of these options is entirely in the movers' discretion. But make no mistake, Honourable Members, the latter option shall—and I repeat shall—not be taken at the expense of the office of Speaker or any Honourable Member in this Chamber.

Honourable Members, this Chair profoundly depreciates the statements made by the First and Second Elected Members from the district of George Town, which I saw and indeed heard on television last evening and again heard on Radio Cayman this morning. I find those statements to reflect upon the character of the office of Speaker and I place them within the well-defined category of accusation of partiality in the discharge of my duties as Speaker.

Accordingly, I now call upon the First Elected Member and the Second Elected Member from the district of George Town to rise and retract fully their statements with regard to my rulings with respect to their Private Member's Motion and to the office of the Chair and this Honourable House, offer an apology, unconditional, as I find your actions to be in absolute contempt of this Honourable Parliament.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Madam Speaker, if that is a decision that I decide not to take would you care to say what your recourse is? Or would you simply have to do what you have to do?

The Speaker: Honourable Member, I have asked for a complete retraction of the statements and an apology to the Chair, as well as to the Honourable House, as I have ruled that I find it in grave contempt of this House. It is entirely your decision which direction you shall take, and I will act accordingly.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Madam Speaker, I certainly cannot do what you say, so you will have to do what you decide to do.

The Speaker: Honourable Members, I will now take a suspension for 15 minutes at which time I summon all Members to reappear in this Chamber. Before so doing, is that also the position of the Second Elected Member? out of the abundance of caution.

Mr. Alden M. McLaughlin, Jr.: Thank you, Madam Speaker. The statements I made yesterday, I made advisedly and as a result of my grave concern about the conduct of the Chair.

The Speaker: So be it. We shall suspend.

Proceedings suspended at 11.53 am

Proceedings resumed at 12.30 pm

RULING BY THE SPEAKER

The Speaker: May I call on the First and Second Elected Members from the district of George Town to rise from their seats?

At this stage (in my opinion) the most offensive aspect of your statements were words to the effect that the Speaker was caused to make the ruling and that there are moves afoot to deprive democracy and to prevent debate on the floor, and that the only way this could be achieved was by refusing the Motion.

I have looked at these statements and others in their context and have confirmed my earlier position that it is in contempt of this Honourable House. I am minded to deal with this matter under Standing Order 40(4) which refers to disregard to the authority of the Chair and by virtue of Erskine May, page 123, where, in my view, reflections have been made on the character of the Speaker and accusations of the partiality in the discharge of my duties.

I have taken the opportunity to put both of you on notice of the said complaint and the specifics, and the way in which I intend to proceed. In order to ensure that I approach this matter in the most appropriate and considered manner, I propose to now suspend proceedings until 2.30 this afternoon with a view to dealing with the matter at that time. We shall reconvene at 2.30 pm today.

Proceedings suspended at 12.32 pm

Proceedings resumed at 3 pm

SPEAKER'S RULING

(continuing)

The Speaker: Proceedings are resumed. Please be seated.

Honourable Members, before taking the suspension I gave the First Elected Member and the Second Elected Member from the district of George Town an opportunity to withdraw their remarks and to make an apology. Before I proceed with my comments I shall once again offer both Members that opportunity.

The First Elected Member from George Town, the Second Elected Member from George Town, you are given a second opportunity to make an apology and to retract your words.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Madam Speaker, unfortunately the position stands as it was.

[Applause from the Public Gallery]

The Speaker: Order!

Serjeant, I would ask that strangers be withdrawn at this time from the Chambers as we shall conduct this Parliament as a House of Parliament.

[Pause - background comments]

The Speaker: I would accordingly draw Members' attention to Standing Order 85(4), which reads as follows: "Strangers shall withdraw from the Chamber and its precincts when called upon so to do by the Presiding Officer." I have so called and you are holding up the proceedings of the House due to your lack of conduct in this Chamber.

[Pause]

The Speaker: Honourable Members, I will take a suspension for five minutes, and five minutes only, to allow the officers who are given the responsibility for order to be conducted in proper decorum to clear the gallery. I would ask that Members remain in the Chamber for this to be done.

Proceedings suspended at 3.07 pm

Proceedings resumed at 3.20 pm

SPEAKER'S RULING

(continuing)

The Speaker: Please be seated.

Standing Order 41(4), (6), (7), (8), (9), (10), (11) and (12) reads:—

“(4) If a Member shows disregard for the authority of the Chair, or abuses the rules of the House by persistently and wilfully obstructing its business, or otherwise, the Presiding Officer shall direct the attention of the House to the incident, mentioning by name the Member concerned. The Presiding Officer shall then call upon a Member of the Government to move “That the Honourable Member for _____ be suspended from the service of the House”, and the Presiding Officer shall forthwith put the question, no seconder being required and no amendment, adjournment or debate being allowed.

(6) If a Member is suspended under any provision hereof, his suspension on the first occasion in any meeting shall continue for one day, on the second occasion for two days and on a third or subsequent occasion for the duration of that meeting and the subsequent meeting.

(7) Not more than one Member shall be named at the same time, unless several Members present together have jointly disregarded the authority of the Chair.

(8) A Member who is suspended under paragraphs (4) and (6) or is directed to withdraw under paragraph (2) shall forthwith leave the House and its precincts.

(9) If any Member who has been directed to withdraw or has been suspended under this Standing Order, refuses or neglects to obey the direction of the Presiding Officer in that behalf, the Presiding Officer shall call the attention of the House to the fact that recourse to force is necessary in order to compel obedience to his direction, and that Member named by him as having so refused or neglected to obey his direction shall thereupon, without further question put, be sus-ended from the service of the House during the remainder of the meeting or for ten days, whichever is the longer.

(10) If resort to force is necessary the Presiding Officer may suspend the sitting during the removal of the offending Member.

(11) A Member who is directed to withdraw or who is suspended under this Standing Order shall not be entitled to attend the sitting from which he was directed to withdraw or in the case of suspension, to attend any sitting or enter the precincts of the House until the termination of his suspension.

(12) On receiving from a Member suspended under this Standing Order a written expression of regret the Presiding Officer shall lay it before the House, and it shall be entered in the minutes of proceedings. On a motion being made for the discharge of the order of suspension the question thereon shall be decided without amendment or debate. If the question is agreed upon, the order shall be discharged and the Member readmitted”.

Honourable Members, I have come to the conclusion, after very careful consideration of the matters constituting contempt of this Parliament, that the Honourable House, having witnessed the total and absolute disregard for the authority of this Chair, I now have no choice but to rely on the provisions as set out in the Standing Orders (1997 Revision) to deal with this matter now at hand.

I now call and name Mr. Kurt Tibbetts and Mr. Alden McLaughlin. I ask you to so rise.

In accordance with Standing Order 41(4) and (7), I now call on a Member of the Government to move the appropriate Motion as set out therein.

MOTION TO SUSPEND MEMBERS

Standing Order 41 (4) and (7)

Hon. Linford A. Pierson: Madam Speaker, in accordance with Standing Order 41(4) and (7), I move that the Honourable Members, the First Elected Member for George Town, Mr. Kurt Tibbetts and the Second Elected Member for George Town, Mr. Alden McLaughlin, be suspended from the service of the House.

The Speaker: The question is that the Honourable First and Second Elected Members namely: Mr. Kurt Tibbetts and Mr. Alden McLaughlin, from the district of George Town, be suspended from the service of this Honourable House. All those in favour please say Aye.

Ayes.

The Speaker: Those against, No.

Madam Clerk, the next Item of Business.

Noes.

The Speaker: I think the Ayes have it.

Mr. V. Arden McLean: Madam Speaker, may we have a Division?

The Speaker: Most certainly.

Madam Clerk, would you call a Division? Honourable Members, you may kindly take your seat.

The Clerk:

Division No. 3/02

Ayes: 11

Hon. Linford A. Pierson
Hon. Roy Bodden
Hon. Gilbert A. McLean
Dr. the Hon. Frank S. McField
Hon. James M. Ryan
Hon. David F. Ballantyne
Hon. George A. McCarthy
Mr. Rolston M. Anglin
Capt. A. Eugene Ebanks
Mr. Cline A. Glidden, Jr.
Mr. Lyndon L. Martin

Noes: 5

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts
Mr. A. M. McLaughlin, Jr.
Mr. Anthony S. Eden
Ms. Edna M. Moyle
Mr. V. Arden McLean

Absent: 1

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush

The Speaker: The result is as follows: 11 Ayes, 5 Noes and 1 absent. The Ayes have it.

Agreed by majority: The First Elected Member for George Town, Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts, and the Second Elected Member for George Town, Mr. Alden M. McLaughlin, Jr., suspended from the service of the House.

The Speaker: I would accordingly ask the Serjeant-at-Arms to please escort the two Members from the precincts of this Parliament.

The lady Member for North Side.

Point of Clarification

Ms. Edna M. Moyle: Madam Speaker, if I may, just for clarity, how long is the suspension of these two Honourable Members and under what Standing Order?

The Speaker: I have already referred to it, but I have no problem [stating it] again. It is Standing Order 41, "If a Member is suspended under any provision hereof, his suspension on the first occasion [this being the first occasion] in any meeting shall continue for one day . . ." One day, commencing now at [3.20 pm]. The Members are free to return to the precincts at 3.20 pm on 19 June, being the next available day of Sitting.

STATEMENTS BY MEMBERS OF THE GOVERNMENT

Caribbean Utilities Co Ltd's 3 per cent Increase

The Speaker: The Honourable Deputy Leader.

Hon. Linford A. Pierson: Thank you, Madam Speaker. As the Government Minister responsible for electricity supplies, I would like to take this opportunity to respond publicly to the recent Press coverage and notification by Caribbean Utilities Company Limited (CUC) that they seek to institute a 3 per cent increase in electricity rates effective 1 August 2002.

With the current state of uncertainty in the global economy and the major issues being faced in our local economy as well, including recent unemployment reports, the Cayman Islands Government considers that a rate increase at this time is not reasonable.

In the financial year 2002, CUC's profits were broadly similar to those reported in 2001 at $19.275 million, but the Company's rate of return fell slightly to 11.87 per cent. I would like to make a couple of observations on these figures.

Firstly, the present licence that sets a 15 per cent rate of return was established in 1966. In recent years, company profits worldwide have been reduced. In today's market a 15 per cent return would be regarded as generous.

Secondly, the rate of return to CUC has fallen because the company's asset base has increased as a result of investment in generation, transmission and distribution capacity.

Thirdly, dividends to ordinary shareholders for fiscal year 2002 have increased by 13.2 per cent from 53 cents to 60 cents.

The Government is anxious to assure itself that CUC's current and future investment plans are equitable for all stakeholders including shareholders, employers, consumers and the Government. For this reason the Auditor General has been asked to conduct an operational review to address this issue.

Further, it was Government's understanding that last year CUC had agreed to forgo any further rate increases until the full allocated costs of service study had been completed and the Government had had the opportunity to review and consider the results thereof.

The Government is confident that Caribbean Utilities Company Limited will continue to fulfil its considerable community obligations as a leading corporate citizen and the exclusive provider of electricity on Grand Cayman, and will appreciate the Government's position in this regard.

Thank you, Madam Speaker.

The Speaker: Thank you, Honourable Deputy Leader. May I call upon you now to move the Motion for the adjournment?

ADJOURNMENT

Hon. Linford A. Pierson: Madam Speaker, I move the adjournment of this Honourable House until Wednesday, 19 June 2002 at 10 am.

The Speaker: The question is that this Honourable House do now adjourn until Wednesday, 19 June 2002, at 10 am. All those in favour please say Aye. Those against, No.

AYES.

The Speaker: The Ayes have it. The House is accordingly adjourned until Wednesday, 19 June 2002, at 10 am.

At 3.35 pm the House stood adjourned until Wednesday, 19 June 2002, at 10 am.

Second Sitting

The Speaker: I will now invite the Second Elected Member from the district of West Bay to say prayers.

PRAYERS

Mr. Rolston M. Anglin: Let us all bow our heads and hearts as we pray.

Almighty God, from whom all wisdom and power are derived; We beseech Thee so to direct and prosper the deliberations of the Legislative Assembly now assembled, that all things may be ordered upon the best and surest foundations for the glory of Thy Name and for the safety, honour and welfare of the people of these Islands.

The Speaker: Please be seated. I have received apologies from the Third Elected Member from the district of Bodden Town who is off the Island with his wife for medical reasons.

STATEMENTS BY MEMBERS
OF THE GOVERNMENT

Government's Position to the Petitioners for a Referendum

The Speaker: The Honourable Leader of Government Business.

Hon. W. McKeever Bush: Madam Speaker, having made a statement to the petitioners for a referendum yesterday, we think it appropriate to restate Government's position making absolutely clear the way forward for this process. And I will read exactly what I said to the petitioners: "I welcome all of you who are gathered here today to present the results of your petition on certain aspects of the Constitutional Commissioners' Report. The fact that you are here on this occasion suggests that you share our concern that the Constitution is a most important document, and that as Caymanians we all have a responsibility to make an input into what the Constitution will turn out to be. We can all agree that this process of reviewing our Constitution has generated a great degree of discussion and debate, both positive and negative. It is in recognising this and acting upon the wishes of you the people that we sought the Governor's permission to increase the period of consultation from the 5 April to the 19 June."

"We recognise, and I am sure you will agree, that one of the most important considerations in arriving at a modernised Constitution must be that it continues to provide a framework for the future prosperity of our Islands and that it promotes good governance and strengthens our democracy. But we must also ensure that in the final analysis the Constitution is uniquely ours; that it reflects our values and gives due recognition to the history, culture, economic and political structure of the Cayman Islands."

"Today you have exercised your democratic right to present your views through your petition. It is always good for the democratic process when the ordinary citizen from every walk of life can be motivated to participate in something as important as this. I commend all of you for taking part in the Constitutional review exercise in this manner and through the various meetings and submissions that have been part of the process."

"As you know there is broad agreement on most of the proposals in the Constitutional Commissioners' Report. And I wish to commend the three Caymanian Commissioners for a job well done.

"In accepting your petition as Leader of Government Business, I give you a commitment on behalf of the Government that it will receive our full attention and we will forward your petition to London for their consideration. Let me also further state that this Government is prepared to honour whatever decisions the United Kingdom Government makes regarding this petition.

"I wish to announce also that the Government will ask Her Majesty's Government to host a delegation comprising of Members of the Government and Members of the Opposition to discuss the Constitutional Commissioners' Report in London.

"Once again, let me thank you all for investing the time and interest in bringing this issue forward. I am confident that as a people we can and will all work together to find common ground during this process and trust that in the end we will all be proud of the Constitution that results from this exercise.

"I can also say that the Government, in an effort to be as inclusive as possible, intends tomorrow to suspend the proceedings of the Legislative Assembly until 3.30 pm so as to allow the two suspended MLAs for George Town sufficient time to have their suspension spent so that they may attend the Legislative Assembly to take part in the commencement of the debate of the Report of the Constitutional Commissioners.

"Thank you".

Madam Speaker, that ended the statement I made to the petitioners yesterday. But further, I can say that as a government we very much need to give this petition due consideration. We have said the petition will be sent to London. The procedure we have taken is that the petitions will be counted and recorded by the Election office officials and the names will be authenticated against the Register of voters. We expect we will have a report by Tuesday of next week. And as I have said we are duty bound to honour whatever position Her Majesty's Government in the United Kingdom makes regarding the petition.

Thank you, Madam Speaker.

Suspension of Standing Order 10(2)

The Speaker: Honourable Leader, I believe it is your intention to move the suspension of Standing Order 10(2).

Hon. W. McKeever Bush: Thank you, Madam Speaker. I move the suspension of Standing Order 10(2) to allow the proceedings of this Honourable House to adjourn before 4.30 pm.

The Speaker: The question is that Standing Order 10(2) is duly moved for the suspension of proceedings. All those in favour please say Aye. Those against, No.

Ayes.

The Speaker: The Ayes have it. Accordingly Standing Order 10(2) is hereby suspended.

Agreed. Standing Order 10(2) suspended to allow the proceedings of the Honourable House to adjourn before 4.30 pm.

The Speaker: May I now have the Motion for the adjournment, Honourable Leader?

ADJOURNMENT

Hon. W. McKeever Bush: Before I move the adjournment allow me to say that the debate on the Constitution is a most important matter. Because of the importance of this issue, and because the Government is keenly aware of the public's interest in this debate, it is only reasonable to expect that the public would want all of their elected representatives to have the opportunity to be present here in this Honourable House and to participate in this historical debate.

In view of the suspension of the First and Second Elected Members from George Town until 3.20 pm today we propose to adjourn until 3.30 pm today in order to afford them every reasonable opportunity to be present and to participate in this signal occasion.

Madam Speaker, at this time I move the adjournment of this Honourable House until 3.30 this afternoon to allow the George Town Members to be present here for this debate.

The Speaker: Thank you, Honourable Leader of Government Business. I shall now put the question that the Honourable House be duly adjourned until 3.30 pm today. All those in favour please say Aye. Those against, No.

Ayes.

The Speaker: Accordingly, the House stands adjourned until 3.30 pm today and not suspended.

At 10.37 am the House adjourned until 3.30 pm Wednesday 19 June 2002.

OFFICIAL HANSARD REPORT
WEDNESDAY
19 JUNE 2002
3.59 PM
Third Sitting

The Speaker: I will now invite the Second Elected Member from the district of Cayman Brac and Little Cayman to grace us with prayers.

PRAYERS

Mr. Lyndon L. Martin: Let us pray.

Almighty God, from whom all wisdom and power are derived: We beseech Thee so to direct and prosper the deliberations of the Legislative Assembly now assembled, that all things may be ordered upon the best and surest foundations for the glory of Thy Name and for the safety, honour and welfare of the people of these Islands.

Bless our Sovereign Lady, Queen Elizabeth II; Philip, Duke of Edinburgh; Charles, Prince of Wales; and all the Royal family. Give grace to all who exercise authority in our Commonwealth, that peace and happiness, truth and justice, religion and piety may be established among us. Especially we pray for the Governor of our Islands, the Speaker of the Legislative Assembly, Official Members and Ministers of Executive Council and Members of the Legislative Assembly that we may be enabled faithfully to perform the responsible duties of our high office.

All this we ask for Thy Great Name's sake.

Let us say the Lord's Prayer together: Our Father who art in Heaven, Hallowed be Thy Name, Thy Kingdom come, Thy will be done on earth as it is in Heaven. Give us this day our daily bread, and forgive us our trespasses, as we forgive those who trespass against us. Lead us not into temptation, but deliver us from evil. For Thine is the Kingdom, the power and the glory, forever and ever. Amen.

The Lord bless us and keep us. The Lord make His face shine upon us and be gracious unto us. The Lord lift up the light of His countenance upon us and give us peace now and always. Amen.

Proceedings resumed at 4.01 pm

READING BY THE HONOURABLE
SPEAKER OF MESSAGES
AND ANNOUNCEMENTS

Apologies

The Speaker: Please be seated. I have received apologies from the Honourable Third Elected Member from the district of Bodden Town who is off the Island due to medical reasons.

GOVERNMENT BUSINESS

Amendment to the Motion to Debate
The Constitutional Commissioners Report

The Speaker: The Honourable Leader of Government Business.

Hon. W. McKeever Bush: Madam Speaker, in accordance with the provisions of Standing Order 24(7), I, the Honourable Minister for Tourism, Environment, Development and Commerce and Leader of Government Business, seek to vary the terms of the Motion to defer debate on the Constitutional Commissioners' Report agreed by the House on Monday, 18 March 2002 which reads: -

"The Report of the Constitutional Modernisation Review be debated and, if agreed upon, adopted on the 15 April 2002."

i. by deleting the words "be debated and, if agreed upon, adopted on 15 April 2002" and inserting therefor the words "Commissioners 2002";

ii. by inserting at the beginning thereof the words "Be it resolved that this Honourable Legislative Assembly debates and takes note of" which in its varied form will read thus –

"BE IT RESOLVED THAT this Honourable Legislative Assembly debates and takes note of the Report of the Constitutional Modernisation Review Commissioners 2002."

The Speaker: The question is that the amendment as is now on the floor, be now debated.

Would the proposer wish to speak thereto?

Hon. W. McKeever Bush: Thank you very much, Madam Speaker. It is my privilege to move that this Honourable Legislative Assembly debate and take note of the Report of the Constitutional Modernisation Review Commission 2002.

As Members of this House well know, this historic debate is the culmination of several years of broad ranging discussions aimed at modernising our Constitution. For many Caymanians, reforming the Constitution may appear to be a technical exercise that has little connection with our daily lives. Of course, nothing could be further from the truth. The great and unprecedented prosperity that we have experienced over the past generation is certainly a product of the hard work and industry of ordinary Caymanians. But it has also depended to a significant degree on the confidence that foreign investors and visitors to our Islands have had in our political and legal stability.

We have a long standing and deserved reputation for an effective legal system, the protection of personal liberty and public order and an unwavering commitment to constitutional government. These values and commitments are the bedrock upon which our economic success over the past thirty years has depended and been built.

While our existing Constitution has certainly served us exceedingly well, formidable new challenges have emerged in the early years of this new century. Members of this Assembly are well aware of the significant threats to political stability and public security that have emerged in many regions of the world. The globalisation of the world economy means that international capital and investment are increasingly mobile and in search of stable and secure political and legal environments.

The Speaker: Honourable Leader, I take it you are continuing your debate to the amendment of the Motion?

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: Madam Speaker, I am debating the Resolution as I moved it.

The Speaker: Please continue your debate with the amendment.

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: Madam Speaker, the impact of globalisation is having disastrous effect on our economy. The financial industry has been affected negatively. Tourism was on a downward slide for the last two or three years. Then along came the disaster of 11 September last year, which added to a 'slowing' in the tourism sector.

The European Union and Britain's responsibilities in the Union cast shadows which are frightening for these Islands and here in these Islands we are arguing sometimes with much bitterness; much name calling; many accusations; arguing among ourselves about a few fireants while elephants are trampling us.

We must have the constitutional ability to deal with the various threats to our way of life and our prosperity. All we have going for us is political stability, the serenity and security of these Islands. If this political stability is shaken, then we will be the worse off for it and long will be our suffering.

The economy of this country and the needs of the people of these Islands are most important to this Government and demand all of our time and all of our efforts. We are not working just 8 hours but 14 hours and 15 hours a day. The problems are just that great.

Madam Speaker, we are facing hard times with much unemployment. We need investment and we need tourism. The state of affairs, this wrangling and jangling needs to stop. Already we are receiving many enquiries as to what is happening and whether it is safe to visit or to invest.

I can say to this Honourable House that we have put our PR agencies from Finance and Tourism to work to ward off as much damage as possible. In this unsettled world this must be a time to settle matters of contention around a table or in this kind of debate and it should not be on the street. In this kind of forum (this legislature)—and I say to those who wish to take part in the media—we must be guided by reason as to what we say and how we say it.

These new challenges we face make it essential that the modernisation of our constitutional arrangements be a top priority. We must ensure that our laws and our legal system keep pace with the challenging international environment of the 21st century.

I have always trusted the good common sense of the people of these Islands. All Caymanians understand that we cannot afford to be complacent or to rest on our laurels and falsely assume that our reputation and our proud history alone will automatically guarantee our future prosperity.

Indeed, the importance of constitutional reform in all the British Overseas Territories was recognised in the March 1999 White Paper issued by the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs, the Honourable Robin Cook. The Secretary of State noted that the partnership between Great Britain and the Overseas Territories creates responsibilities on both sides. The United Kingdom Government called upon the overseas territories to embrace constitutional and legal reforms so that the highest international standards of probity, law and good government would be reinforced and enhanced.

The Constitutional Modernisation Review process was initiated by His Excellency the Governor in May 2001, with the agreement of the then government. It was the Caymanian response to the Secretary's of State call for constitutional reform and modernisation in the Overseas Territories.

We now have in hand the 7 March 2002 Report of the Constitutional Review Commissioners—a Report which proposes the retention of the Westminster model with increased local autonomy falling short of full internal self-government. It is absolutely ridiculous for anyone, except for someone who cannot understand, to say that we are going into full internal self-government, or to say that the Government is taking us into independence.

The Government supports the broad direction of reform proposed by the Review Commission. We believe that the overall approach recommended by the Review Commission as well as most of their specific recommendations will result in a more responsive and accountable government for the people of these Cayman Islands. We are particularly supportive of their proposals to guarantee individual human rights, enhance protection for the rule of law, improve the functioning of the Executive Council and reinforce the accountability and impartiality of the public service.

Madam Speaker, in my remarks today I hope to achieve three objectives:

Firstly, I want to review the Constitutional Review process that has been followed thus far and remind Members of this Honourable House of the extensive consultation and opportunity for public debate that have preceded the tabling of the Constitutional Review Commission Report and the Draft Constitution.

Secondly, I want to review the proposal set forth in the Review Commission Report and Draft Constitution. I will explain why the Government believes that the vast majority of their recommendations are sound and if implemented, will advance the interest of the people of the Cayman Islands. I will also identify the relatively few areas where the Government takes a somewhat different view from that put forward by the Review Commission and explain the nature of the changes in their recommendations that we would propose. I will further deal with what we regard as a number of misconceptions that have arisen in some quarters since the release of these proposals in March of this year.

Thirdly, I want to speak to the future and the process that we propose to follow, in order to move ahead with the important task of modernising our Constitution. The Government believes that the task of modernising the Constitution is essential to securing our future prosperity—the prosperity of all the people of the Cayman Islands. We, therefore, wish to avoid unnecessary and needless delay in putting forward changes that will increase the effectiveness and responsiveness of our system of Government.

At the same time the Government recognises that certain aspects of the proposed Constitution have generated controversy and the Opposition has now called for a referendum on a number of specific matters.

Madam Speaker, while we do not agree with the Opposition on the merits of their specific objections, we also recognise that it is most important to find common ground and move ahead with a process that is seen by all to be fair and democratic. The Government believes that in constitutional matters there is no room for narrow, political partisanship, and that all Members of this House are obliged to put aside our differences and work together for the common good of the people we serve who elected us.

Let me now turn to a review of the process thus far. The Government believes it is important to recall the origins and the evolution of this debate and in particular the extensive consultation and public debate that has preceded the development of the proposals before this Honourable House. I have already mentioned the United Kingdom Government's March 1999 White Paper that initiated the current reform process, not unlike the debate review more than a decade ago of the 1991 Report of the Constitutional Commissioners, Sir Frederick Smith and Mr. Walter Wallace.

While certain proposals made by the 1991 Constitutional Commissioners were implemented successfully, a number of others were not. For example, the 1991 Commissioners recommended that a Bill of Rights be included in the Constitution noting that the Constitutions of most other British Overseas Territories included protection for fundamental rights and freedoms.

The 1991 Commissioners also recommended the creation of the position of Chief Minister and Leader of the Opposition arguing that these would enhance accountability and bring leadership and discipline to the functioning of the Government and of the Legislative Assembly.

Notwithstanding the fact that these and other proposals were the product of extensive debate during those years, they were ultimately not included in the Constitutional changes implemented in the 1993 Constitution order. The Westminster (UK) Government March 1999 White Paper picked up where the work of the 1991 Constitutional Commissioners had left off, in my opinion. It pointed out that Constitutional Modernisation is essential to protecting and enhancing the political and economic standing of the Overseas Territories. The White Paper identified a number of key challenges facing the Overseas Territories: these included adopting modern standards of respect for human rights, enhancing respect for the rule of law, promoting more open transparent and accountable government and improving the functioning of legislatures and executive councils, and the accountability and impartiality of the public service.

The proposals for Constitutional Modernisation set out in the 1999 White Paper were debated during the 2000 Election campaign. And anyone saying not fails to remember just how much was said about the constitutional development of this country and the modernisation of our present Constitution. It was debated in every district of these Islands and it was debated in various question and answer forums and other forums as well, because I held some forums in my own constituency. They then formed the framework for the Constitutional Modernisation Review Commission—which was appointed by His Excellency the Governor in May 2001.

The joint letter of appointment issued by the Governor, emphasised the importance of the Constitutional Modernisation process and the fact that it would set the framework for the future of the Islands. The terms of reference required that the Commissioners undertake a wide and comprehensive consultative process. And I dare say that the Constitutional Commissioners did that. Consistent then with that mandate, the Commissioners provided members of the public with as much information as possible about the current Constitution and specific proposals for change.

From June 2001 to March 2002 the Commissioners conducted a series of public meetings in all electoral districts and met with representatives of a wide variety of organisations, the Chamber of Commerce included, as well as with Members of the Legislative Assembly and elected Members of the Executive Council then, namely: the First Member from George Town, the Fourth Member from George Town, the Member from North Side, the First Member from Bodden Town, and myself—we met with the Constitutional Commissioners too. As His Excellency noted when he received the Commissioners' Report in March of this year, there could not have been more than a handful of people across the three Islands who were unaware of the Constitution Review process and the call for contributions for the public to have their say in their town halls or wherever they could meet the Constitutional Commissioners.

Moment of Interruption—4.30 pm

The Speaker: Honourable Leader before you so proceed we have now reached the hour of interruption. Perhaps if it is the intention of the House to go beyond 4.30 pm we could have a Motion in that respect.

Suspension of Standing Order 10(2)

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: Madam Speaker, as we had given our intention we intend to go until 6 o'clock this afternoon and I so move for that to happen.

The Speaker: the question is that the House continues its proceedings until 6 pm today. All those in favour please say Aye. Those against, No.

Ayes.

The Speaker: The Ayes have it.

Agreed: Standing Order 10(2) suspended to allow the House to sit beyond the hour of 4.30 pm.

The Speaker: Please continue.

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: Madam Speaker, following the release of the Report this past March, copies of the proposals were made available to the public and a number of well-attended public meetings were held throughout the Islands. Both the Government and Members of the Opposition agreed that the period for public debate and the proposal should be extended to nine weeks (that is until today) so as to ensure that all interested individuals and groups had more opportunity to comment on the various proposals. In short, it is hard to imagine what more could have been done to ensure public awareness and debate on the proposals before the House today.

The Review Commission Report

Let me now turn to the substance of what is being proposed. By way of introduction I want to indicate that the Government believes that the Report represents a sound basis for constitutional reform. While we certainly do not agree with everything in the Report we do support the general direction of proposed reform and vast majority of the specific recommendations of the Commissioners.

Members of this Honourable House are familiar with the Report and therefore I will just touch briefly on a number of the key proposals.

General Direction of Reform

First and most important the Commission proposes to retain the Westminster model of Government with increased local autonomy falling short of full internal self-government. The existing reserved powers of the Governor would remain intact as would the Governor's role and function in our overall system of government. We support this central foundation of the Review Commission Report unreservedly.

A Bill of Rights

Another key proposal of the Review is the adoption of a Bill of Rights. This is a direct response for the call for increased protection for human rights made in the 1999 White Paper as well as the earlier 1991 Constitutional Review. The proposed Bill of Rights is modelled on international instruments such as the European Convention on Human Rights and the International Covenant on Civil and Political Rights, as well as the United Kingdom's Human Rights Act 1998.

Implementation of this Bill of Rights would mean that Caymanians would enjoy the same freedom from arbitrary interference with their rights as now exist in democratic countries around the world. Some concerns have been raised with respect to the impact on existing religious groups of the proposal to entrench a guarantee for freedom of thought, conscience and religion. In recognition of these concerns the Government has proposed inclusion of a clause that would direct the courts to interpret the right to freedom of thought, conscience or religion with due regard for the impact on the rights of religious organisations and their members.

The wording of this proposed clause is identical to section 13 of Human Rights Act 1998 of the United Kingdom. We believe that such an amendment would address the concerns that have been raised in this regard. That wording is, "If a court's determination of any question arising under this section might affect the exercise by a religious organisation itself or its members of the constitutional right to freedom of thought, conscience and reli- gious, it must have regard to the importance of that right.”

We included that clause after much discussion in our public meetings and at least one religious group did talk to two Members of the United Democratic Party (the Deputy Leader, Mr. Linford Pierson and the Deputy Speaker, Mr. Cline Glidden, Jr.). And so we have done what they have asked us to do. We believe that this gives protection to our religious organisations in this country: our churches.

More generally, we proposed including the wording in section 1 of the Constitution that makes reference to the distinct history, culture, Christian values and socio-economic framework of the Cayman Islands. We believe that this wording will ensure that the courts will interpret the new Constitution giving due attention to the social, cultural and economic context of these Cayman Islands.

A Full Ministerial Style of Government

The Commission proposes that there should be a full ministerial style government with a Chief Minister and a Leader of the Opposition appointed by the Governor. Further, it is proposed that a No confidence Motion should be in respect of a lack of confidence in the Government as a whole rather than in respect of individual Ministers.

These changes are long overdue and would bring the functioning of the Legislative and Executive branches of the Cayman Islands into line with that in other Commonwealth countries. That is what the United Kingdom has said we must do. Other Commonwealth countries in particular the United Kingdom's Caribbean Overseas Territories have long ago moved to a system in which there is a Chief Minister. Since this form of government enhances the accountability of government to the voters.

With a Chief Minister and with a Leader of the Opposition, the people have the power to elect the government and determine its policy direction when they go to the polls to elect their representatives. Under that system when voters elect Members of the legislature they vote not just on a local representative but also on whom they wish to see as Chief Minister and Members of the Government.

Further, the various political parties of groupings are required to indicate to the voters the policies and programmes they propose to implement if they form the government. Once elected, they will be responsible for implementing those policies or face the wrath of the voters at the polls, as should happen. This is radically different from the current system under which voters elect individual MLAs who then enter into negotiations to decide who will form the Government. In essence, the difference is that whereas under the existing system the MLAs choose the Government, under the proposed system, the people would do so.

So, no one can say that we are taking any power from the public. Those that say that do not want any change. They only want to perpetuate what has been happening in this country where a minority not necessarily situated in any particular constituency but control – the people would choose. This is the democratic system that has worked effectively for nearly two centuries in Great Britain and in other Commonwealth countries.

Not only would it improve democratic accountability but it would also allow the Cayman Islands to speak more effectively and with one voice on the international stage instead of what [exists] now—going to Brussels or to the Treasury and hearing them say, ‘Who are you?’

‘Well, me ma’am, I am the equivalent—

‘Equivalent? Equivalent of what?’

‘Well, I’m equivalent to the Chief Minister of the BVI or Turks, or Anguilla—’.

Madam Speaker, I do not think that is where we want to continue to be. Indeed, the obvious importance and benefit of having a political head of Government is reflected in the fact that over the past decade the Governor has informally designated a Member of the Executive Council as Leader of Government Business. But as the Review Commission Report points out the fact that the current Constitution does not identify a political head of Government, has led to questions as to the constitutionality of the office and confusion over the powers of the holder.

I know that there have been some objections in the Press to the creation of the office of Chief Minister on the ground that the occupant of the office would supposedly have unlimited or dictatorial power. But anyone who has taken the time and trouble to carefully study the proposed Constitution will immediately recognise that these claims are entirely without substance.

Madam Speaker, apart from granting the Chief Minister the power to appoint and dismiss Members of the Executive Council, the chief Minister would function in a manner broadly similar to the existing post, or position, or appointment, of Leader of Government Business. All of the existing checks and balances and the powers of the Leader of Government Business, would continue to apply to the chief Minister. These include the continuing oversight role of the Governor and Her Majesty's Government in Britain, as well as the important constitutional guarantees of the independence and impartiality of the public service, of the Attorney General in the administration of justice and of the judiciary.

For example, the Draft Constitution proposes a public service commission with a chair appointed. . .

Ms. Edna M. Moyle: Madam Speaker.

The Speaker: Elected Member from North Side let me hear your point of order.

Point of Order

Ms. Edna M. Moyle: On a point of order. I would like to bring to the attention of the Honourable House Standing Order 36(1) says, “Except on a motion for the adjournment of the House the debate shall be relevant to the matter of question before the House or Committee . . .” And the question before the House or the Committee now is to amend the original motion that the debate on the Constitution be only noted—and 37(2) also says, “It is out of order to anticipate a Bill, a motion standing on the Order Paper or any matter of which notice has been given by debate upon an amendment.”

The Speaker: Thank you.

Honourable Members I did put the question to the Honourable Leader a few moments ago. He responded in the affirmative and until there is a deviation I have to take it that that is the course. I will on conclusion of his debate ask all other Honourable Members if they wish to speak to the amended Motion after which time I propose to put the question dealing with the amended Motion and again I will continue as set out in the procedure to ask whether the Mover wishes to speak to the amended Motion if it is passed. Obviously if it is not passed we will go back to the original provision at which time I will again ask any other Member if he wishes to speak to the Motion as amended and the Mover will then have a right of reply.

Honourable Leader, please continue on your debate on the amendment as proposed.

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: Yes, Madam Speaker, I thank you very much and I appreciate your grasp of the Standing Orders of this House.

In continuing, for example the Draft Constitution proposes a public service commission with a Chair appointed by the Governor acting in his discretion and an equal number of other Members appointed after consultation with the Chief Minister and the Leader of the Opposition—although we have not heard anyone talk about the powers of the Leader of the Opposition.

The power to make appointments to public offices and the exercise of disciplinary power over public servants are vested in the Governor, acting in accordance with the recommendations of this bi-partisan public service commission; a body which is clearly beyond the control of the Chief Minister.

A similar bi-partisan structure is proposed for the advisory committee on the prerogative of mercy and the electoral boundary commission. And in each case the Leader of the Opposition has the right to make the same number of appointments to these bodies as the Chief Minister. As for judicial appointments these are to be made on the recommendation of a judicial services commission; a body over which the Chief Minister has no power of appointment or control of any kind.

In short, the claims that have been circulating in the press and elsewhere, to the effect that the Chief Minister would exercise dictatorial or absolute powers, are unfounded to say the least. Even my brief discussion here makes plain that the proposed powers of the Chief Minister will be strictly limited. As in 1991 Constitutional Commissioners, Messrs. Frederick Smith and Walter Wallace commented that apart from the power to appoint other ministers, a chief minister has no authority other than that of his personality. “A chief minister could not act arbitrarily”, they noted “since to do so would be to risk loss of support and thus bring about his downfall”.

Indeed, the powers of the Chief Minister under the proposed Constitution would be far more limited than those exercised by prime ministers in most other Commonwealth countries including the United Kingdom. I believe that is where those who wish to confuse the issue took advantage of people who did not know the difference: for the Cayman Islands is not an independent country.

I know that in recent weeks there have been visitors to the Islands who have claimed that in other Caribbean jurisdictions Prime Ministers have exercised undue power or influence. I make no comment on whether such claims have any basis in fact, but would simply point out that they clearly have no application to the Cayman Islands situation, where the powers of the Chief Minister under the proposed Constitution would be narrowly and strictly defined. We would be a British Overseas Territory where the United Kingdom has a Governor who has power to veto anything he wants to veto in our present Constitution and the one that is proposed. And where the United Kingdom Government has the authority under their orders in council, which will remain, to keep peace, order and good governance.

The Executive Council

The Constitutional Review Commission has made other recommendations, which would improve the functioning, and accountability of the Executive Council, which we support. In particular, we agree that the Financial Secretary and Chief Secretary positions should be replaced with elected Ministers bringing the elected Members of Executive Council to seven, including the Chief Minister.

We also agree that in accordance with the move to a full ministerial system of government with collective responsibility, a No confidence Motion should be in respect of the Government as a whole rather than in respect of individual Ministers.

Term Limits

There has been some discussion of the idea of imposing term limits on Members of the Executive Council but in particular the Chief Minister. As the Review Commission pointed out term limits are not so democratic since they operate to deprive the electors (our people) of their choice of able and experienced representatives. This is not the United States where they have millions of people.

The Review Commission recommended against the idea of term limits and we think they were right to do so. However, we await what the United Kingdom will say about the petition after we have sent that to them.

Recommending and Advisory Bodies

We further endorse the Commission's recommendation to constitutionally recognise or establish a public service commission, an electoral boundary commission, a judicial service commission and an advisory committee to the Governor on the exercise of the prerogative of mercy. All of these bodies, except the Judicial Service Commission, would be constituted on a bipartisan basis. And we agree with this approach.

Provisions for Referendum

The issue of whether the Constitution should make provision for the holding of referenda was a matter of some concern to the Review Commission. The Review Commission pointed out that the Constitution already authorises the Assembly to enact legislation providing for referendum. And it regarded this provision as adequate and appropriate. We agree with the Commission's conclusions on this point.

The Commission also noted that there had been some suggestions made that the Constitution should permit citizens to initiate referendums. The Commission pointed out that if any such right were established it would be important to set out precisely the circumstances, terms and conditions on which such a referendum might occur. For example, it would clearly be inappropriate to permit a minority group to force a referendum on a divisive political or social issue.

The Commission concluded, and we agree, that any provisions for a citizen initiated referendum would require careful attention and this is a matter that should be regulated through enabling legislation rather than being included in the Constitution.

Areas of Disagreement or Areas Requiring Further Study

Madam Speaker, it is evident that the Government endorses the broad direction of reform proposed by the Constitutional Review Commission, as well as the vast majority of their specific recommendations. However, there are a limited number of proposals on which we take a different view, or, which we believe requires further study.

I want to briefly touch on the areas of disagreement and explain the nature of our concern.

Single-Member Constituencies

While we support in principle the Commission's proposal to introduce single member constituencies, we have concerns with respect to the specific proposals they have advanced. The Review Commission proposes to entrench in the Constitution a defined set of 17 constituencies with the precise boundaries for these constituencies attached as a second schedule to the proposed Constitution.

While the Commission was assisted in drawing these boundaries by the office of the Supervisor of Elections and the Lands and Survey Department, the Commissioners themselves recognised that their proposals required further study and revision. For example, the Commissioners seemingly failed to consider whether the proposed constituencies would serve to divide our people along racial, ethnic, social or economic lines. I am certain that this is a matter that would be of grave concern to all Members of this Honourable Assembly, since it would threaten the social stability and cohesion that have been so central to our reputation and past prosperity.

In fact, the Review Commissioners themselves proposed the establishment of an electoral boundary commission and mandated that as soon as practicable, following its establishment, the boundary commission should report to the Assembly on whether the proposed constituency boundaries ought to be changed.

When the United Democratic Party said that Bermuda is having problems we were laughed at, of course. But I ask Members across if they have not yet done it, to take the time out to do so. Find out what the difficulties are that Bermuda is having with this proposal. Find out if you think it is a joke.

We support the concept of modernising the electoral system in the general direction of single member constituencies as proposed by the Review Commission. However, we believe that the full implications of the Review Commission's specific constituency proposals require careful study and review. Therefore, in our view, it is premature at this time to move ahead with their proposals for 17 single member constituencies.

The Definition of 'Caymanian'

Madam Speaker, we also question the Review Commissioners' proposal to narrowly define Caymanian in the Constitution and to permit only persons who fall within that narrow definition to vote or to be eligible to be elected to the Assembly.

The Commission's definition would exclude any person who holds dual citizenship. We believe that this definition would unreasonably narrow the qualifications for elected members to the Legislative Assembly. If this proposal were adopted, many able Caymanians would be precluded from running for office or voting. We cannot and will not support that.

Moreover, we believe that it is highly unlikely that Her Majesty's Government in London would agree to this change since it runs counter to the direction or reform initiated by the White Paper and reflected in the British Overseas Territories Act 2001. It may be that such a limitation on the right to vote or to stand for election, would be contrary to the United Kingdom's Human Rights Act 1998 which prohibits discrimination on grounds of national or social origin. As well as contrary to the prohibition on discrimination in the proposed section 14 of the Caymanian Bill of Rights.

In our view, the qualifications for election set out in the current Constitution—qualifications, which were previously tightened significantly in 1987, provide a fair and reasonable balance of the interest of all the people of the Cayman Islands. We therefore, do not support the introduction of a definition of Caymanians as proposed by the Review Commission. Rather, we propose the following definition for a Caymanian. I quote, “a person who possesses British Overseas Territories citizenship, British citizenship or citizenship by virtue of birth outside the Islands and—

- (a) Who at the date of his birth had at least one of his parents or grand parents who was Caymanian as herein defined, and who was domiciled in the Islands at the date of such birth, or
- (b) Has Caymanian status.”

The Selection of Speaker and Deputy Speaker

We also do not support the Review Commission's recommendation that the Speaker and Deputy Speaker be chosen from outside the Legislative Assembly. In parliamentary systems the Speaker is more than likely a member of the Assembly. Our existing Constitution currently permits the Speaker to be chosen from outside the Assembly but does not require it. The Review Commission itself noted that this matter was not an issue that provoked a good deal of comment from members of the public.

In our view the flexible provisions of the current Constitution which provide that the Speaker may be chosen either from inside or outside of the Assembly ought to be retained. I cannot forget the battle we had to get a Speaker for the Assembly. That Motion, I believe, I moved at least three times to get the Governor out of the Assembly. We all know what a bad situation that was. The Governor was head of Executive Council and head of the Assembly. Does anyone believe that there used to be any right for McKeever Bush sitting down in that little corner? I remember well. You would go and talk to the Governor about a situation and he would go and talk to the Government! There was no impartiality in the Chair. And there was no separation of powers. Now they say we must choose someone from outside because that would be fairer. Madam Speaker, are we to believe that everyone does not have some opinion or appreciates one side or the other? We believe the current situation ought to be retained.

Implementation Process proposed by the Commission

The Review Commission proposed that the Revised Constitution should be debated in the Legislative Assembly and then forwarded to Her Majesty's Government for implementation. This was the same process envisaged by His Excellency the Governor when he released the Review Commission Report for public debate and comment in March of this year, and last year also. We did not hear a 'peep' out of anyone at that time about a referendum. At least, not those who sat in this Chamber . . . nobody!

The Government of the day was happy for the Governor to appoint those Commissioners and was happy for those Commissioners to go out and do their work and was happy to take the post that would have been given to them by virtue of a changed Constitution. But nothing was said about a referendum.

The Governor indicated that following a period of public comment the Review Commission Report would be debated in the Legislative Assembly. The Commission Report would then be forwarded to the Foreign and Commonwealth office along with a transcript of the debate in the House for appropriate implementation. That is what the Government then agreed on.

Although the Review Commission proposed that Her Majesty's Government proceeds to draft and enact an Order in Council, implementing their proposed amendments the Commissioners also proposed that their changes not come into force until just prior to the dissolution of the Assembly for the next general election in November 2004.

However, the Review Commission did not provide any explanation or reason for imposing this two-and-a-half year delay, assuming its proposals are acceptable to the Legislative Assembly. And for the record here the Commissioners were: Mr. Benson Ebanks, Chairman (and nobody has to ask whether he voted for McKeever), Mr. Leonard Ebanks (and he ran against me) and Mr. Arthur Hunter (who sat on the Opposition's platform). I needed to put that in the record because I do not remember saying before who the Commissioners were.

Broad Agreement on General Direction of Reform

Before I go on let me say that personally, in the final analysis, I could deal with any one of the three Commissioners. And I did talk to them and they talked to me as they did with other Executive Councilors at the time.

Despite the considerable public attention that Constitutional Reform has attracted in recent weeks, it is important not to lose sight of the fact that the vast majority of the proposals in the Review Commission Report seem to enjoy the support of the Opposition as well as the Government. I note, for example, that the Motion that the Member from George Town attempted to table on the 28 May identified five controversial issues that emerged from the Report.

What is significant is that these so-called controversial issues are quite narrow and specific and do not call into question the overall direction of reform proposed by the Review Commission. We see no reason to hold these other reforms in abeyance until after the next election. The simple reason why we cannot support such a two-and-a-half-year delay is quite practical. Constitutional uncertainty is costly not only in terms of dollars; everything else you can think about, more divisiveness in this House, more divisiveness on the streets and that has even flowed now into churches.

So, Constitutional uncertainty is costly. Hoisting the entire reform exercise into a state of suspended animation for two-and-a-half years will do nothing to enhance our international reputation. Not only with investors and the financial services and tourism industries, but also with the other nations of the world. The message that we would be sending to the world community is that the Cayman Islands is unable to bring closure to a Constitutional debate that already has gone on for over three years this time. And several years since 1991—well, that is a ten-year span. It will cause far too much internal bickering to the country's disadvantage.

As I said earlier, we cannot assume that global investors or perspective visitors to the Islands will wait for us to get our house in order. Some people thought that about development: "Oh we can chase away development because the Cayman Islands is so good that they will come back at any time". And what do we have? A floundering construction industry which really sets the pace for employment in the country. That is the mistake that we have made in the past. We cannot make that kind of mistake again. We simply cannot afford the luxury of sitting on our hands while our competitors in the rest of the world move ahead.

Madam Speaker, again I want to reassure the Opposition that they will have the opportunity to be participants with the Government in the discussions that will necessarily occur with the Foreign and Commonwealth Office when we visit London later during the year, and following this current process. A delegation composed of Members of the Government and of the Opposition meeting with the Foreign and Commonwealth Office so as to ensure that the implementing Order in Council reflects the views and interests of the Caymanian people.

In conclusion there has been some discussion on referenda and some people have signed the petition and delivered it to me as Leader of Government Business with the other Ministers in attendance. The Government is taking due regard of the people's petition for a referendum and some of the proposals.

At the time of receipt of the petitions I assured the public that it would receive Government's full and immediate attention. I further added that the petition would be forwarded to the United Kingdom for its consideration following a process to authenticate the names. And that the Government would be duty bound by the decision of the United Kingdom. In the interest of openness and transparency, I am hereby inviting two representatives of the People's Progressive Movement together with two representatives from the United Democratic Party to act as scrutineers during the process that is scheduled to commence this evening.

Madam Speaker, we expect that a report will be delivered to the Government by next week Tuesday. Following this, we will forward the petition along with the transcripts of the debate in this House to Her Majesty's Government. In doing so we recognise the people's submissions should be given the opportunity for consideration along with our own position and we are duty bound to accept UK Government's decision regarding this petition. The time for decision is at hand.

We have before us a package of Constitutional proposals, the product of an exhaustive process of consultation and public debate. No one can reasonably dispute the importance of this constitutional modernisation process and the need to provide for more responsible and accountable government for our people.

There is also broad agreement among all Members of this House as to the general direction that constitutional reform should and must take. We have had 171 years of representative government. The world has changed and the people's elected representatives must be given the Constitutional authority to deal effectively with the challenges that beset us. It is our responsibility as elected legislators to provide political leadership for our people.

It is also our responsibility in a debate of this kind to attempt to rise above partisanship and political posturing. The approach which the Government has today proposed, represents a genuine and constructive attempt to address the concerns raised by the Opposition and by members of the public. I expect the Members opposite to set aside partisan considerations and respond positively and in good faith to the proposals so that together we can proceed with the essential task of modernising our Constitution to better serve the interest of all Caymanians.

Madam Speaker, I thank you.

The Speaker: Thank you. Does any other Member wish to speak to the amendment? The First Elected Member from George Town.

Point of Clarification

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Madam Speaker, before we continue (and just to make sure that I clearly understand) would you allow me to ask a couple of questions on procedure so that I am clear?

The Speaker: Please proceed.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Madam Speaker, when the original amendment was moved earlier by the Minister, if I remember correctly, I heard you saying that the debate would continue on that amendment.

Obviously, the Minister has debated the Constitutional Report and the question I have is how do we proceed? Are we going to simply forget about the debate on the amendment and then go on to it? What we have now is an initial debate and believe me, although I do not have to do this, I am simply trying to understand clearly the way forward.

As I understand, what has just transpired is that the amendment was moved and in actual fact what was just debated was the Report of the Constitutional Commissioners. The amendment itself speaks to a change in the original Motion and it was read by the Minister regarding: “The Report of the Constitutional Modernisation Review be debated, and if agreed upon, adopted on the 15 April 2002.”;

And the changes that are proposed are “i. By deleting the words “be debated and, if agreed upon, adopted on the 15 April 2002” and inserting therefore words “Commissioners 2002”; ii. By inserting at the beginning thereof the words “Be it Resolved that this Honourable Legislative Assembly debates and takes note of”;

And the copy that we [received] reads: “which in its varied form will read thus—”

And it gives the amended version: “BE IT RESOLVED THAT this Honourable Legislative Assembly debates and takes note of the Report of the Constitutional Modernisation Review Commissioners 2002.”

My question is: Are we debating the amendments that have been proposed, or are we debating the amended Motion? The question, as I understand it, has not been put and we are supposed to be debating the changes. I am trying to get a clear understanding as to where we are going now.

The Speaker: Thank you, Honourable Member.

The precise juncture where we are in the proceedings thus far is that the proposer to the amendment has proposed the amendment and has exercised his right to speak to that amendment. I have now asked whether any other Honourable Member wishes to speak to the amendment. Once all Honourable Members [Addressing the Member for North Side: Lady Member I am speaking]—have exercised their democratic discretion to speak to the amendment, I will then ask the Mover of the amendment if he wishes to exercise his right of reply. Of course he can react accordingly.

I will then put the question to the amendment. If it passes, we will then move to the Motion as amended and debate thereon. If it fails, then we will be debating the original Motion.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Madam Speaker, having heard what you said, am I to understand then that the Minister who moved the Motion and the amendment has not debated the amended Motion and that entire debate was simply relating to the amendments that were proposed?

The Speaker: Honourable Member, as you have correctly stated in your preamble, I did specifically direct that question to the attention of the Honourable Leader, being the Mover of the said Motion. He responded in the affirmative that he so was and I have to take that word that he has. We will obviously see when it comes to the amended Motion whether or not he is prepared to debate that as well.

I am sure all Members will appreciate, I cannot by any method of extra sensory perception ascertain what the anticipated or projected debate of any Honourable Member will be but to take the Honourable Member's regarding of the Member's word, in this regard.

Thank you.

Are you now intending to proceed?

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Madam Speaker, I think I understand what you have said. But the reason why I asked the questions is that certainly in looking at the proposed amendments (and I will address them) I would have thought that the debate that was going to proceed, was going to be a debate on the merits and/or demerits of those specific amendments and there afterwards whatever the end result when you put the question, then the main debate would take place.

What seemingly has transpired—and the truth is we thought of that but we did not want to be seen in any way disruptive so to speak but we are now in a quandary as to exactly how to proceed with the debate. I am not really seeking your guidance, I am just trying to say that there is going to be a disjointed situation here because what was just dealt with now is not what I am going to deal with. Whether that was fate playing its hand, or whatever, is another matter.

But I am just letting you know now that what I will be debating will not be the issues that were brought by the Minister. Because as far as our understanding is, those issues relate to the substantive Motion, not the amendments.

The Speaker: Am I to understand Honourable Member that it is your intention to duly debate on the amendments? Please proceed.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Madam Speaker, are we closing at 6 pm?

The Speaker: That is the intention that was expressed by the House. Unless a contrary expression is -

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: That is fine, I just wanted to make sure.

Madam Speaker, when we look to the original Motion, which I quote from the Hansard of Monday, 18 March 2002, with your permission.

The Speaker: Please proceed.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: “Motion to defer debate on the Constitutional Commissioners’ Report;

“Honourable W. McKeeva Bush: Thank you, Madam Speaker. As agreed by all Honourable Members of this House, I will move that the Report of Constitutional Modernisation Review be debated and if agreed upon, adopted...”

The Speaker: Honourable Member, it has been brought to my attention that what you are seeking to use verbatim is an unedited version and, as you will know that is not permissible. I wish to thank the Clerk for her instructions in that regard.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Madam Speaker, as this is an integral part of my submission I would humbly ask for you to suspend that I would be allowed to get the edited version.

The Speaker: Madam Clerk? (Pause) Honourable Member, it is my understanding from the Clerk that there is a list (as Members will appreciate) to be able to get around that. What I would propose to do at this time is to ask the wish of the Members, if there are no objections to it being read into the records, seeing that the persons that the unedited Hansard would normally be sent to are all Honourable Members, for them to scrutinise it and return it to the Hansard.

So, at this time I would ask whether there are any objections from any Members present for it to be read in this form. All those in favour— the Honourable Deputy Leader?

Hon. Linford A. Pierson: Madam Speaker, I would suggest that in view of the fact that this quote here from the Honourable W. McKeeva Bush is pretty well authenticated—this is exactly what he said. Notwithstanding the provisions of the Standing Orders that unedited Hansard [reports] should not be made public, I do believe that in this case it would be in the interest of transparency and the interest of the good running of this House if we allow this to be accepted and for the Honourable Member to make this quote.

The Speaker: Thank you, Honourable Deputy Leader. Is that the general consensus of all Members present? Very well, I think that [Mr. Kurt Tibbetts interrupts. The speaker asks to wait one minute and continues] would be the most prudent way to go and let the records reflect that it is not a deviation from the existing rules of making unedited Hansard present. But as the Member whose quote it is deemed to be expressed has no objections to what has been said, we will take it that the record will reflect that that is the position.

You may now proceed Honourable First Elected Member from George Town.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Thank you, Madam Speaker. But with your permission I am being as candid as I can. Having heard what the Clerk has said and hearing your initial advice, I would rather not do this and I would rather get the edited version. If you would accommodate me, please.

The Speaker: Honourable Member, that would mean that we could not get it straight away. As you will appreciate that the Hansard reports are sent out to all Honourable Members. They are read, they are sent back and they are edited. It is not a matter of just retrieving a document and that has been the procedure. . .

[Inaudible comment from Mr. Tibbetts]

The Speaker: No, that is what I have been instructed from the Clerk.

There is no objection to it and I am prepared to proceed in that regard. If it were a matter of retrieving the document I would gladly suspend at this stage, but the Clerk—neither is any member of her staff in a position to get an edited version at this stage because that is not how the normal procedure works, I am afraid.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Thank you, Madam Speaker.

In reading the unedited version of the Hansard, with your permission and the permission of this Honourable House . . . As I continue on, reading the Daily Journal [Hansard] of Monday, 18 March 2002. “Honourable W. McKeeva Bush: Thank you, Madam Speaker. As agreed by all Honourable Members of this House, I will move that the Report of the Constitutional Modernisation Review be debated and if agreed upon, adopted on 15 April 2002. Madam Speaker, I will give notice that at that time I will formally move the Motion.”

Speaking as I quote, “The Speaker: Honourable Leader is it the intention for the questioning to be put when you formally move the Motion for the substantive and to put for the deferral at this time?"

"Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: Yes, Madam Speaker."

The Speaker then says, "The question is that the debate on the Constitutional Report be deferred for debate and if approved for adoption on the 15 April 2002. All those in favour please say Aye."

Madam Speaker, the amendments that are proposed as I read before, call for the new version of the Motion to read as follows— "BE IT RESOLVED THAT this Honourable Legislative Assembly debates and takes note of the Report of the Constitutional Modernisation Review Commissioners 2002."

So, I will proceed to debate the proposed amendments. Let me say first of all that the sole objective of our group is simply to play our role to ensure that the changes which are suggested and sent to London, reflect the views and have the support of the majority of the people of the Cayman Islands. Let that not be misunderstood at any time.

The Honourable Minister who last spoke, did so on several issues and he has referred to all Legislators coming together—paraphrased: 'to find common ground to be able to move the process forward'. That too is our intention. It certainly has not been our intention during the process to simply 'stall' as has been suggested, or simply to play politics as has also been suggested.

But there are some fundamental differences in the process, which we believe, first of all, have to be ironed out. Those are the issues which I want to address long before we deal with the Motion itself and/or what we agree on; what we disagree with, as has been put forward by the Minister.

When we go back to the beginning of the process (not in 1991) but the process that began last year and the Constitutional Commissioners were appointed, at that time when they began their task and they began to set out scheduled meetings and such the like, in order to try to accommodate as many of the citizens of the country as possible, to take input and to interact and share views, there may have been seemingly a way forward that was announced. But certainly to my mind, there was no clarity as regards to step by step until the conclusion of the Review process and the end result.

When we knew as to exactly what the entire procedure was going to entail, was when we spoke to the Governor after the Constitutional Commissioners had completed their Report. He had spoken about it on more than one occasion, but there was no detailed outline of what it is. Let me say here today that while some people may subscribe to the thought that all of this is crystal clear and we have to move forward and such the like, the fact of the matter is that many situations have unfolded during the process. It was only after the fact that it became clear as to exactly where the problems were in the process itself.

When he explained to us—and this was not long before he left—what was going to transpire, his explanation the way forward from here, is as I am going to explain. He said to the Legislators that when the Report is debated in the Legislative Assembly, the Hansard or the transcripts from that debate would be forwarded along with the Report and the Draft Constitution prepared by the Commissioners along with whatever other relevant documents were supposed to be attached and then on to London.

The Constitutional experts in London would then use all of that to prepare a Draft Constitution, which would be sent back to Cayman. The hope was that at that time there would have been very small changes to it. And if that were the case, then perhaps by telephone those issues could be cleared up. If there were difficulties with any areas of the proposed Draft Constitution from London which were not able to be cleared up that easily, then a team would be sent to the Cayman Islands to discuss those issues with the Legislators and whatever other groups or organisations that were deemed of value to the process. And at the end of that, hopefully, they would be able to go back and complete the process and have the final document prepared.

He did say to us that when the debate took place, the process was by no means over. I must admit I do remember hearing him say that. And we have several issues at hand that we now, as representatives of the people, have to deal with.

We do not take the view that regardless of the process that has gone on, that we simply must move the process forward now, even if we are not truly satisfied that what we are putting forward reflects the wishes of the majority of the people. I am pretty sure that I can safely make this statement this evening that while we have our own opinions, either singly or in groups, about which options we should be taking up in proposing the changes, none of us, singly, or in groups, or all together can truly be satisfied in our minds that whatever we are proposing at this point in time, reflects the wishes of the majority of the people. There is a fundamental difference in the approach.

Madam Speaker, I do not have a problem with the views that have been aired and if anyone explains why they think this should be the case. That is a part of the process. We do not have any problems simply with that. What we have to go by—even as I have explained what the former Governor has explained as the process from here on in for us—what we have to go by is what our understanding is of the process that is required. And certainly it is absolutely important to us that the wishes and aspirations of the people must be reflected in what we send to London.

I want to refer—and I have said this certainly before now—to the Constitutional Modernisation Checklist which was sent from the Governor's Office to us some months back, simply to give us an outline of what the various criteria were under which the entire process would take place and that . . .

The Speaker: Honourable Member, is it your intention to lay the said document on the Table?

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: I do not have a problem with that except I need to get it copied.

The Speaker: That is fine. You can refer to it and then subsequent to that the Serjeant will ensure the necessary copies are made.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Thank you. This checklist as I said was given by the Governor, has a list of 18 different scenarios that are put out. They range within a very wide ambit when we speak to the review process and if these are to be followed exactly what has to be done.

The very first one is a statement saying, "The proposals should be consistent with the United Kingdom's international and treaty obligations." It goes on with all the rest of them. But I will not read them all out because I do not think that is necessary.

The one that I wish to speak to is number 18, the very last one of the Checklist. And bear in mind we have absolutely no communication from any quarter, which tells us that there is a difference—that something has changed. We do not have anything that says that. Number 18 reads, and again with your permission I quote:

"1) Do the changes suggested by the Overseas Territories Government [and obviously from how that reads, this Checklist was given to all of the overseas territories during the Modernisation process.] Do the changes suggested by the overseas territories Government [which in this instance would be the Cayman Islands Government] have the support of the majority of the population?"

"2) What is the evidence for such support?"

"3) Has there been "extensive" local consultation (with or without the assistance of a Constitutional Commissioner or Commission) followed by a debate in the legislature in which the suggested changes have been approved by Motion".

This is not my checklist but this is what we have had to go by. My first question throughout this procedure is: Are we taking note of the Checklist that we are supposed to follow? Are we dealing with the specific questions that I have just asked? The amendment that is proposed in the Motion will cause the Motion to read: "BE IT RESOLVED that this Honourable Legislative Assembly debates and takes note."

In number 18 of the Checklist. It refers to— followed by a debate in the Legislature in which the suggested changes have been approved by Motion, not taken note of.

So, the picture that needs to be painted with number 18 is, whatever changes which are being proposed in the Legislature, first of all, all of the Legislators must be convinced that they have the support of the majority of the population. That is the first thing that we have to ensure. It begs the question; what is the evidence to prove that? If we are convinced that what is being proposed has consensus from the majority of the people, and if we are satisfied that we have evidence that can support that, has there been extensive local consultation? We can answer that one. Has that been followed by a debate in the Legislature in which the suggested changes have been approved by Motion?

After we are convinced that what we are proposing has the majority support, we need to find a way to ensure that we are satisfied that we can provide evidence to prove this. We have had some wide consultation and then the Legislature needs to approve those proposed changes and then go off to London.

What we are saying that is fundamentally the problem with the process is, at present we cannot say yes to three out of the four questions in number 18. How are we going to get to that point? Or, are we not going to have regard for number 18 in the process?

What this tells my colleagues and me is that London truly does not want to get into any huge back and forth with us. Our responsibility is to be able to arrive at a consensus over whatever those changes are. Once we arrive at a consensus, we send them off to London that they can basically take that along with whatever other documentation must be sent and then take the whole mix and produce a draft. Because in this manner they do not foresee much of a problem after they do that draft for what has been sent to them has basically been agreed upon by the majority.

Now, we can say as long as we wish to truthfully say—I do not have a problem with the question at hand—as the Minister said that the Constitutional Commissioners made every attempt within the time frame that they had to be able to meet and discuss the issues with as widespread a number of the population as possible. I do not argue that. We can extend the thought further and say that it is the responsibility of the citizens of this country to have participated in that process once they were allowed the opportunity. We can say that too.

The question is, in matters like this, and because of the seriousness of the nature of the steps that we have to deal with, Are we going to leave it like that and say that having done that now we must send something forward? Are we going to go back and ask the question whether or not we reflect the wishes of the majority or not?

That is where there is a fundamental departure. The difficulty that we have is whether the onus supposedly rests on the citizens or not. The fact is that if the majority of them have not taken up the opportunities that were provided for them in the process, two things are missing: the majority of citizens have not expressed their wishes in this instance. One could say that if you are going to get that to happen it would take forever. One could take that view. But this is not any and every situation where there is a piece of legislation and you are going to think it through the best way and you are going to move forward with it.

The Speaker: Is this an appropriate time now Honourable Member as we have reached the hour of 6 pm? Are you now in the position to lay the document you referred to on the Table, or do you need to refer to it tomorrow morning as well?

So ordered.

Can I have a Motion then for the adjournment?

ADJOURNMENT

Hon. W. McKeever Bush: Madam Speaker, I move the adjournment of this Honourable House until 10 am tomorrow, Thursday 20 June 2002.

The Speaker: The question is that the Honourable House be now adjourned until 10 am tomorrow, Thursday 20 June 2002. All those in favour please say Aye. Those against, No.

Ayes.

The Speaker: The Ayes have it.

At 6 pm the House adjourned until 10 am Thursday 20 June 2002.

OFFICIAL HANSARD REPORT
THURSDAY
20 JUNE 2002
10.26 AM
Fourth Sitting

The Speaker: I will now invite the Member from the district of North Side to say prayers.

PRAYERS

Ms. Edna M. Moyle: Let us pray.

Almighty God, from whom all wisdom and power are derived; We beseech Thee so to direct and prosper the deliberations of the Legislative Assembly now assembled, that all things may be ordered upon the best and surest foundations for the glory of Thy Name and for the safety, honour and welfare of the people of these Islands.

Bless our Sovereign Lady, Queen Elizabeth II; Philip, Duke of Edinburgh; Charles, Prince of Wales; and all the Royal family. Give grace to all who exercise authority in our Commonwealth, that peace and happiness, truth and justice, religion and piety may be established among us. Especially we pray for the Governor of our Islands, the Speaker of the Legislative Assembly, Official Members and Ministers of Executive Council and Members of the Legislative Assembly that we may be enabled faithfully to perform the responsible duties of our high office.

All this we ask for Thy Great Name's sake.

Let us say the Lord's Prayer together: Our Father who art in Heaven, Hallowed be Thy Name, Thy Kingdom come, Thy will be done, on earth as it is in Heaven. Give us this day our daily bread, and forgive us our trespasses, as we forgive those who trespass against us. And lead us not into temptation, but deliver us from evil. For Thine is the Kingdom, the power and the glory, forever and ever. Amen.

The Lord bless us and keep us. The Lord make His face shine upon us and be gracious unto us. The Lord lift up the light of His countenance upon us and give us peace now and always. Amen.

Proceedings resumed at 10.29 am

The Speaker: Please be seated.

READING BY THE HONOURABLE SPEAKER OF MESSAGES AND ANNOUNCEMENTS

Apologies

The Speaker: I have received apologies from the Third Elected Member from the district of Bodden Town who is still off the Island with his wife for medical reasons. I have also received apologies for late attendance from the Honourable Third Official Member who will be arriving much later this morning.

GOVERNMENT BUSINESS

Amendment to the Motion to Debate the Constitutional Commissioners' Report

(Continuation of debate thereon)

The Speaker: The Honourable First Elected Member from the district of George Town. For the record, you have spoken for 22 minutes and you have a period of 1 hour and 38 minutes remaining.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Thank you, Madam Speaker.

When we adjourned yesterday afternoon I was dealing with number 18 on the Constitutional Modernisation Checklist, and I want to pick up from there because as the arguments flow this morning they will continually come back to the point at hand in that section of the Checklist.

Number 18 again reads, "Do the changes suggested by the Overseas Territories Government have the support of the majority of the population? What is the evidence for such support? Has there been 'extensive' local consultation (with or without the assistance of a Constitutional Commissioner or Commission) followed by a debate in the legislature in which the suggested changes have been approved by Motion?"

What we are debating now is an amendment to the original Motion. For ease of reference I will speak to it as the original Motion dealing with adoption of the Report and the amendment dealing with taking note of the Report.

When we look at it, although the Minister moving the Motion has not thus far explained the purpose of the amendment, we have to assume certain things. I believe that if we try to follow the situation logically, it is fair to say that we cannot change the Commissioners' Report. And if Britain has asked if the changes suggested have been followed by a debate in the Legislature in which these suggested changes have been approved by Motion, then to me it puts us in a quandary with regards to the process.

Obviously from the Minister's delivery yesterday afternoon, the Government has some varying views from what the Commissioners recommended. He outlined and explained the position so I would believe then that the Government, having the majority, would not be in a position to adopt the Report because there are some differences.

If we are going to take note of the Report, to me there is a fundamental flaw in the process and it comes back to the question that we have been asking. When the Minister referred to 'we', I am assuming he speaks to the Government and the United Democratic Party. I cannot assume that when he says 'we' he speaks to the majority of the people of the Cayman Islands. As I said yesterday, I do not think any one of us is in a position to proffer any position that we can safely say at this point is what the majority of the people of the Cayman Islands desire as any change to our existing Constitution.

When we look at what number 18 on the checklist says, if this debate which supposedly is centred around the Commissioners' Report is not one which is going to be approved by Motion, my question is, what are we going to send to London?

We hold the view that the reason why London has set out the parameters under which the Review could be conducted and where recommendations could be made to them, is because they believe that it is not only our right but perhaps almost to the level of an obligation on our part to be able to arrive at a consensus. So when we send what the country wishes as any changes to our existing Constitution, all they have to do is to utilise their Constitutional experts to look at the broad principles that need to be looked at within a Constitution. To examine all of their obligations with regards to the very first one on the Checklist which says, "The proposals should be consistent with the United Kingdom's International and Treaty obligations."

At that point in time when it is sent back to us, they do not have to decide for the Cayman Islands what is best. If what we are sending to them does not reflect the views of the majority and we cannot prove that what we are sending reflects the views of the majority, what is the basis on which they are going to craft a new Constitution? It begs the question, which is fundamental to me and to the entire process.

Now, Madam Speaker, throughout this whole Review process that has taken place, I am advised that the Constitutional Commissioners had this Checklist and in their review they examined all of the points which would be relevant to their portion of the process. They have said that based on the input they have received this is what they believe should be the recommendations.

They have also said that they are satisfied that those recommendations reflect a broad based consensus of the population, even though they qualify by speaking to numbers that they had opportunity to interact and dialogue with and take input from. And I believe that while they have not pointedly stated so, they recognise that those numbers in proportion to voters of the country were small. So they worked with what they had and presented what they thought to be the views of the majority.

We are at a point now where we have the Government proffering some differences in what the Commissioners have reviewed. The question now is, Which view reflects the view of the majority? We come right back to the view that we should send the views of the majority and that we should have evidence to prove that.

We contend this morning that regardless of what someone might say, the process has dragged on. It is time to move on, and all people want to do is to stall it. The fact remains that whatever comes out of this debate cannot be said truthfully to reflect the views of the majority, and that is what London wants. Somewhere along the line, regardless of whether we all have to take responsibility for it or not, we have failed in the process because we are not at the point where what we are sending up reflects the views of the majority.

We have made attempts when the Report was published, to try to meet with as many people as possible to talk to them, to get their views; to explain some of the things that they may not know that we might have had knowledge of; to learn from them because some of them had their views and many of them came up with thoughts that had not crossed our minds, which is exactly what the process is all about. But we still have in mass the cry from the people of this country that we want more time.

Where we draw the line is a very serious question to ask. No one is subscribing to the belief that it should drag on and on. That is not what we are saying by any means; we are saying that this is perhaps the most important time that we have faced. Even if some people do not subscribe to that view, what we believe is that no matter what the desired end result, we must find a way whereby the majority of the people can be satisfied that it is their views that are being sent to London. Regardless of what arguments are put forward today, it is our contention that we are not in a position at this point in time to say that whatever goes up to London is the view of the majority.

The Minister, when he was speaking yesterday, spoke to perhaps a delegation going up to London with representatives of the Government and representatives of the Opposition to speak to London regarding what they should use as the base to build upon and create a Draft Constitution. I thought about that at length last night. It is not unfair from the point of view of making sure that both sides are heard. I have no problem with that. My problem is that it comes back down to the fundamental reasoning that we have not yet achieved consensus in this country as to what we should tell them.

So, what are we going to tell them? All we would tell them is our opinion. It is unfortunate. And again, regardless of the question of where the responsibility lies, what has really transpired through this process after the Commissioners' Report was completed is, we were not able to devise a way when we noticed the reaction of the people to line the situation through that they could have their own opportunity to give their input after that and be able to gain consensus.

If the Government contends that that is not the way the process should work, that is up to them. Our contention is that as representatives of the people, our job is not to take our opinions and give those on behalf of the people. Our job is to ensure that what we pass on, are the opinions of the people. I grant that there are many people in this country, who for more than one reason are not 'up to speed' so to speak, with matters concerning the Constitution: perhaps that is consistent throughout any territory. The difficulty with the whole situation and the whole process is that because we might accept that to be a fact, does not mean that we should not stop and find a way to get to them so that the majority can understand and form an opinion so that we are sure that that is what they want.

With regards to the matter of petition: there is an excess of 7000 signatures on a petition that basically calls for two things: 1) It wants for the debate, the transcripts from which are going to be sent with the Constitutional Commissioners' Report along with other recitals and opinions from other groups and organisations and perhaps from individuals. It wants for that debate to be deferred. The reason why they are asking for that debate to be deferred is because they themselves are still trying to sift through to understand and to say this is what they want because they have not reached that point. That is the first thing. 2) And they are saying because there is no way in the process thus far, which guarantees that on certain of the issues that are raised, that the opinions that are put forward to London are going to be those of the majority. Let the majority decide by a Referendum. That is what the people are saying.

Madam Speaker, regardless of the thoughts, this is not about us. A new Constitution when it is over and done with (while it will be agreed upon by the representatives of the people), that will not be something that is owned by the representatives. That will be the Constitution of the people. If we look to the fundamental issue that we are faced with, I believe that all of us want at the end of the day for the right thing to happen. I believe that. But the question that keeps coming up is what I believe to be the right thing—the same thing as what the majority of the country believes to be the right thing.

We can come back to the principle that the people elected us. So, as their representatives, we should be with the authority to speak on their behalf. This is not one of those instances. We were not elected with the matters of the Constitution and the issues that have come about that are in question at this time, as part of an election campaign.

If that were the case there would absolutely be no problem. If it had transpired in that manner that there was a review going on and individuals or groups had come out to the constituents and said, this is our position on what is being proposed; if we are elected this is what we are going to suggest to London that should form the framework for a new Constitution. And whoever the people voted in, it is a fair comment and absolutely correct to say that they were elected on that mandate so they have a mandate. But none of us in here has that mandate today and we want to put forward the thought that the Foreign and Commonwealth Office recognises that that is not the case. To speak to evidence in our checklist can only lead to one alternative about certain of the issues if they are contentious and not able to be agreed upon by all concerned. And that method can only be via referendum.

The question comes: When do we do a referendum? It can be debated back and forth as to at what point in time, if there is to be a referendum, it should be done. I know that. But I come back to point 18: London has clearly stated in their checklist that when they are going to draft a constitution they want the changes that are suggested to show evidence of the support of the majority of the population. And there should be a debate in the Legislature in which the changes that are suggested have been approved by Motion obviously meaning, by majority. Taking note, as is in this case, in no way complies with that, unless the Government knows what we do not know. That has to be the basis of our argument as representatives of the people.

We have no other evidence to go by; if London has changed its mind the country should have been advised. Not just me, not just the Members on this side of the floor but the whole country should have been advised. Let me explain this: Regardless of who does not agree or like the argument, the reason why so many people are asking for this debate to be deferred is because they believe that whatever is sent now is going to be it. They do not think they have had the opportunity to give input in the right way yet. That is what they believe and based on what they had to work with and their understanding of the process, what else can they believe? They have clung to the Referendum issue, because if that is the only sure way to know the opinions of the majority, let the people speak in that method [referendum]. That is where the whole argument is.

If the process is not what I have just said it is, then the country needs to know: the people need to understand. As I understand it, and with your permission I quote from a meeting that was held in Cayman Brac quite recently—this was simply one of the speakers explaining the process as he understood it, I am sure. It reads: “Once this issue is debated, this House will take note, send the Hansard which is a copy of the minute, through His Excellency The Governor to the Foreign and Commonwealth Office and they will look at the Commissioners’ Report, the letters that came from Chamber of Commerce, The Cayman Ministers Association, The Caymanian Bar Association and anyone else who made representation including the petition.

“The United Kingdom, not the UDP, not Lyndon or Julianna, will draft what they see fit as being a Draft Constitution. When that comes back that is the document that will be the guiding document for the final version. It is at that time we will come back to you the people and explain the position and if there are positions to be discussed, for example if the UK Government comes back and accepts the One Man One Vote principle. . . that is the time that we need to do the petition and the referendum. . . not waste money now and then have to do it again when it comes back.”

The Speaker: Honourable Member is it your intention to lay that on the Table seeing that you have referred to it verbatim?

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: I certainly can, Madam Speaker. It was, as I understand it, a tape with that section that was just transcribed. I do not have a problem with that.

The Speaker: So ordered (for the laying).

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: The reason why I quoted what I just did, was because that was the only time that I heard what might have been an identification of the process by a representative of the United Democratic Party. So, what that is saying is, Is the process certainly going counter to what the Checklist says? Again it begs the question, Has the process changed, and if so, are the people aware of any changes in the process?

We on this side of the House, the Members of the People’s Progressive Movement, (the Movement that the Second Elected Member from Cayman Brac calls the 'PP Movement,') do not wish to, in any way, stymie the process, but we would be failing our duty as representatives of the people if we do not hear what they are saying. We have to act in accordance with that and that would appear to be the fundamental difference in how we view the process going through as to how the Government views the process.

There was a question raised yesterday and the Leader of Government Business spoke to when the Review was announced and the then Governor had talked about the process that the Government at that time was not speaking about any referendum. And when the Government at that time thought of the positions—I cannot quote him verbatim but I speak as my understanding is of it—that would have been available, no one said anything about it. I want to make it absolutely clear today with no reservations whatsoever that I, being a part of the Government at that time, and the Representative from North Side, did not envisage any change to take place in the Constitution before the next Election. I do not care what rumours are put out.

There is a major difference in how people think (and I am singling myself out.) There is nobody in here who can go into my mind and say something and truthfully know what is in there. However, that was not a point that was laboured, so I will not labour it. But I had to take this opportunity because I know how it works. Some see it a very integral part of the political process to keep whittling away at an individual's credibility and other things. That is the way you get rid of them and it has worked; I know it has worked. But I know me.

Getting back to the point: We come to the juncture where there is a fundamental difference in how we see the people being involved in the process and what would appear to us to be a departure from that principle to see whether or not the process can continue on because the people have already had their say.

Perhaps a better idea is, rather than a delegation going to London to speak to them, why not as the former Governor suggested when he explained to us what the process would be, ask London to come here that they can hear what the people have to say? Let us do it like that and then there is no chance for any one of us, who might be on such a delegation, not being sure of what we are saying reflects the views of the majority. Let us think of it like that.

I come back again to number 18. We really would like to know how Her Majesty's Government is going to react when they get the Hansard of this debate and whatever else accompanies the Report. And when they look at their checklist and ask themselves the question: 'Do we go by the opinions put forward with the majority of the legislators as has been put forward in the presentation yesterday because that represents a majority in the House?' 'What evidence do we have that those views reflected by the majority within the Legislature also reflect the views of the majority of the people?' 'The Motion is a 'take note' Motion, so what is it that the Legislature have approved to be sent to us?'

I can only see with good reason that those questions will be asked and we contend today that if there is no change in the Checklist, London is not going to be able to use the Report and whatever else accompanies it to be able to draft a Constitution and be satisfied in their minds that the draft that they have completed is going to reflect the views of the majority.

The only thing that they can be absolutely sure of, given the scenario that we have now, is that whatever they draft will comply with it being consistent with the United Kingdom's own international and treaty obligations: nothing else.

Madam Speaker, I want to get back to the issue of referendum—if I understood the Leader of Government Business correctly when he spoke to the petition by saying that the petition will be forwarded to London and that the Government would honour whatever London says. Again, not quoting verbatim, but that was my understanding of what he said, I can only conclude from that statement that the petition along with the signatures would be sent to London to ask London the question, Should we do a referendum or not?

If that is the case, then I contend London is going to reply by saying 'That is none of our business, it is yours.' We have at present the provisions in the Constitution for a referendum to take place. Those provisions call for a resolution to be passed in this House which would trigger for a Bill to be brought specifying what should take place. And once the Bill is approved the referendum takes place, the issue is dead until the next time around. That is the way it works now.

We made an attempt that was unsuccessful, but it does not matter who does it. What has to be decided is whether this Legislature accepts that it is the wish of the people to go that route. It does not matter what the results are at present. It is totally possible that we might have a position on an issue that if a referendum took place the majority of the people hold the opposite view. We would have to respect that.

So the call for a referendum has no bearing on what we want to be the results. We simply want the results of whatever the people say, regardless of what their individual views are. The key to that in the whole process is to ensure that the people of this country understand the issues. What we are quite prepared to do, as we have been making attempts to do in the past, is not to try to inculcate in the minds of the people what they should do about the issues, but rather to discuss them and show them the merits and the demerits as we see it; to hear from them and to allow them from an informed position to be able to make their own decisions. That is what the process is all about. That is what we contend.

Even though we identified certain specific issues it need not be held to that position. We are not averse, if other issues are in the fore, to deal with those also. I do not have a problem with that. So, we have to decide whether or not we accept the wish of the people and go that route. If we do not go that route, then the Government has to determine a way to ensure that the views of the majority are what they send to London.

Madam Speaker, let us look at the timing of things, albeit arguments can be put forth as to why this last minute effort. That is the way life is.

The Civil Service: It was decided that in the petition which was calling for an action on the part of Government, and because General Orders stated that they could not participate in a petition which called for an action of the Government, the Civil Service cannot participate in the process.

There are perhaps (without being exact but close enough to use the figure when all are considered) some 4,500 civil servants. If we want to get very technical—and I do not want to blow the word ‘Civil Servants’ out of proportion when I say 4,500. I mean Government employees or quasi Government employees. I think all of those numbers put together come up to about 4,500. By percentages that we know in the past it is easy to say and not be far off that somewhere between 2,500 and at least 3,000 of those are voters. We do not know what their thoughts are on a referendum because they were not allowed to participate. I get to understand that they are doing something internal. Just to get a feel as to whether they would like to see a referendum take place in this situation. They will not know that until the 24th.

The Chamber of Commerce is sending out numerous questionnaires. That too will take some time but I do not know the deadline for that. I do not know when they are going to have the results of that.

So, we are right now in the middle, on top of the signatures that are on a petition of trying to determine through other means whether that is what the country wants or not. Do we as representatives of the people take it on our own to say that is not the route to go?

The Speaker: Honourable Member is this an appropriate time for us to take the morning break?

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Yes, Madam Speaker.

The Speaker: We will suspend 15 minutes for the morning break.

Proceedings suspended at 11.17 am

Proceedings resumed at 12.01 pm

The Speaker: Proceedings are resumed. Continuing the debate the First Elected Member from the district of George Town with a remaining time of 52 minutes.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Thank you, Madam Speaker.

As I continue on—and I think we are nearly there now—I just want to touch back on the Motion and the amendment because it struck me as I read the original Motion, which as I read from the Daily Journal [Hansard] of March 18, the Minister says, “I will move that the Report of Constitutional Modernisation Review be debated and if agreed upon adopted on 15 April 2002”. We know that that time was extended so naturally that time would change. The amendment will cause the Motion to read, “BE IT RESOLVED THAT this Honourable Legislative Assembly debates and takes note of the Report of the Constitutional Modernisation Review 2002.”

So, the original Motion would have lent to the possibility that if it was not agreed upon that the Report could not be sent. The amendment calls for taking note obviously allows the Report to be sent but with whatever other opinions that may vary from the Report being allowed to accompany it.

As we have contended before, looking at the amendment and the original Motion, and what the amended version would be like, makes it impossible on our part to support the amendment. Especially since that is what we are dealing with as it does not confirm, as I have said before, to number 18 of the Constitutional Modernisation checklist. Madam Speaker, forgive me if I keep referring to that. It is because it is a little bit long and it had three or four different questions in it, and focus has to remain on those questions in outlining the arguments as to why we cannot support the amendment.

It was not long before we took the break that I referred to the referendum and the fact that the Civil Service was conducting their own survey among the civil servants (Civil Service Association) to try to determine what their views were.

There is also the Chamber of Commerce survey. Timing has a lot to do with all of what we have talked about if we are going to be sure that what is sent to London reflects the wishes of the majority of the people. Some questions come to mind: Are we going to take notes of the results of these two surveys? When is the collated package going to be sent to London? It is my understanding that His Excellency the Governor will have a say in when this goes off to London. I do not know what his views are as to when that timing should be, or what he will deem [necessary] to be included in the package for London to consider. What we do know is that we contend that whatever that combination is, there must be a clear message as to what the wishes of the majority of the people are. That has been the focus of the debate with regards to the Motion. The amendment that we speak to now does not allow at the conclusion of the debate for what London wants to operate with to be sent to them. Because there will have been no debate in the Legislature in which the changes have been approved by a Motion.

So, it seems like we are beating the same horse all the time. There is a reason for that because we still hope that we can find a way that all of us can be satisfied that the views of the majority have been heard and taken on board.

There was mention made yesterday that even the churches are getting involved in the process. The churches are like any other entity and those people who are members of the churches, by and large, will find themselves as citizens of the country. So, although the Church is an institution that is looked at in a different light in most instances, there is absolutely no reason why members should not be able to express their own views. Much concentration has been regarding the Bill of Rights but that is not their only concern. They are but one of the many groups and individuals who, at this point in time, are not satisfied. That regardless of the process that they have had chance to fully understand the proposed changes and to air their views as to whether they agree with those changes or not.

If London wants a clear message and the Report of the Commissioners says one thing—the Government has offered the position that in many of the areas where changes are suggested, they are on board, but in some areas they are not.

The Commissioners have said that they are satisfied their proposals represent what the majority want. The Government is contending that in certain areas they do not agree with it. Someone tell me, what evidence do we have to show who is right? The fundamental reasoning behind the process calls for, at the end of the day, the majority view, which should be presented to London. How do we fill that void? How do we make it happen? I contend today that it is incumbent on all of us here to ensure that that happens however it does, but that it happens and it has not happened yet.

The petition is calling for a referendum to fill that void. If the Government does not agree that that should be the case, then they have to devise a method to satisfy the gap because our sole intention is for that to happen.

Speaking about referendum, there have been some arguments proffered about a 1999 Motion which in essence called for the Constitution to be changed to allow for a people-initiated referendum, as the situation that obtains presently does not allow for that. As I explained earlier, it has to be done by a resolution through this Assembly.

It has been said that if persons like myself were so interested in referendum, that during the time that I was on the Government Bench, why did I not cause that to happen. The fact of the matter is, when the Motion was approved in 1999 after the then Leader of Government Business had brought some amendments to it, it rested with the Government. I distinctly recall on more than one occasion after that Motion was approved in the Legislative Assembly enquiring as to what was being done.

For purposes of clarity, what had to be done was that a similar exercise of going to London seeking the change would have had to take place. But it did not at that time because we had the Elections. Some have said when the new Government took over why did I not cause it to happen? 'Madam Speaker, for whatever penalty I have to pay for it, I am not going to make up any stories about it. Two arguments came forth at some point in time: (1) a Motion was approved in the Legislative Assembly; (2) the Assembly was dissolved so the Resolution died.

If that were the case, then the onus would have been to bring it back and start the whole process over again. That is the way I understand that process. And if it were not the case, then it would mean that one would have to initiate dialogue with London to cause it to happen.

Madam Speaker, the fact is, for whatever may be said, that there was so much going on, on a continuing basis that I had no indication from anyone about it and I personally did not think of it to do it. In the arguments they can say whatever they wish to say after this about it. I am simply telling the truth about it. That is what happened.

When the talk came to me about the Motion falling away and all of this sort of thing, my mind was that in this process it could be addressed, as we have addressed it, because we have put forward the case publicly that we certainly believe that a new Constitution should include provisions to allow a people-initiated referendum. And that a Law should be made which would set out the terms and conditions and that would be in our own domestic legislation. The Constitution would call for it, the Law would be made so that people would know under what terms and conditions a referendum could be initiated if it is to be initiated by the public.

So, there is no question of whether we support it or not. If the argument is brought forth that I was negligent or that I thought otherwise then it makes no sense in me trying to go with a long slew of reasons why I did not personally put it forth. It is exactly as I have said it. Of course by now I am used to how arguments are going to go and today I am but a messenger. I would hope, while I have my own personal doubts about it, that we could be dealing with the message because that is what is important. If that gets lost in the way then it would be easy to understand what is more important, the message or the messenger.

The arguments have been put forth. We believe that the public at large in this country is not satisfied notwithstanding the process that was outlined and is ongoing. We believe that the public is not satisfied that they have had ample chance to digest and give their views. However, they want to air their views before sending anything to London. We are of the view, with whatever we have before us, that London wants it to be the views of the majority of the people.

We are totally satisfied at this point in time that we do not have that position at hand. We have not reached to that stage regardless of whether or not we should be (or the process has allowed for it or not) the fact is, we are not at that stage. People have asked for more time, which is the reason why the petition has asked for deferral of the debate.

The people have also asked for a referendum in order to ensure a clear message from the majority as to their views are on the issues where there is a difference between what the Constitutional Commissioners' Report says and what the Government has proffered as an opinion; and perhaps, what we may even have as opinions. So, it is impossible for us to participate in the debate of the Report because to do so would not be representing the wishes of the people as we see it.

Certainly, if a way cannot be found to get the people of this country to the point where they are satisfied that they have given their input, and that what is going forward is the view of the majority then we will have no choice. Notwithstanding the fact that we have not participated in the debate but we will have no choice. But based on representations that we have received, based on the input that we have received; and based on the interaction where we have tried to meet with as many individuals as possible to get their feedback, we certainly will have no choice but to collate and pass that information on to the relevant authorities as our part of the contribution. While making the statement of not participating in the debate, we certainly would not, not participate to the point where we would not want to proffer what the views are that we have gleaned thus far. So we will not participate to that level. We are certainly going to do that if that has to happen.

What we are asking for is that the Government find a way to involve the people rather than proceeding with this debate and sending that along with the Report to London for them to draft the Constitution. That is the basic view.

It seems that the debate is going to follow on the Report of the Constitutional Commissioners. And if the amendment is approved the vote will be taken on whether or not to 'take note' that the position that has been offered by Government (the majority) will be debated and note will be taken. Our understanding is, that will go to London with whatever else. We believe that that exercise is certainly futile if we accept the principle that number 18 of the checklist calls for whereby it asked, if the changes that are suggested have the support of the majority, where is the evidence and such the like?

Obviously we have to subscribe to the belief that at this time the process is flawed if the people of the country are not satisfied that they have had their say in that process. It is fundamentally flawed as I have said before because the process that is on the way goes counter to the criteria that are required by London as they put forward the checklist. Perhaps I might note how many times I mentioned clause 18 but as I said to you earlier this morning, clause 18 underpins much of the arguments that I would have brought forth.

I ask the question, how can the Government; how can we; how can anyone else at this point in time say that the changes that are proposed by the Commissioners—if the Commissioners are satisfied that those are the views of the majority and there are suggested differences between what the Commissioners have said, it has to mean that the Government is not satisfied with those areas that the Commissioners have expressed as the views of the majority. It cannot mean anything else other than that. And if the Government is saying that we do not agree with that and this is the way that we would like to see it, then they are either not concerned about whether that is the expressed wish of the majority or they are saying that the message they send is that of the majority of the people. If they are only referring to what they think then that thought is also flawed because what London wants is not what we think but what the majority of the people think. If they say that that is what the majority of the people think then begs the question, where is the evidence?

They speak to supporters who support whatever side. I am not concerned right now about supporters. That is for another forum. I am concerned with what we are hearing the people say. Now after we proffer these arguments and the line up counters all that we have said I want someone to seriously ask me what is the test that tells anyone of us that the message that we send to London is the majority of the people! They say what they have to say. . .we might say what we have to say but the fact of the matter is, the reason why we are not moving forward in proffering our opinions on those areas is simply because at this point in time we have to accept what people are saying: that they want more time before they form their opinions. After we have interacted with them more on those areas where there seem to be some disagreement, let them decide on which way they want to go. Unless there is another method that can be put forward the only answer to that, as we see it, is by a referendum.

The Government has spoken and asked for us to basically put aside differences and find a way forward and I say again, we have no problem with that. Contrary to what some may believe I am quite easy, and I am sure my colleagues are, to sit and find a way. All we are saying is let us make sure the people are satisfied, even if they wear you down. It is frustrating because I have experienced it. We have experienced it and I am sure Members of the Government have experienced it. Someone has an issue and they will not leave that issue. Sometimes they do not even want to listen as to what the other side of the coin when you might want to take a different perspective. Those experiences we will have, but unfortunately, those are some of the things that we have to agree on and put up with. For everybody has the right to air his or her opinion.

I do not know right now how else we could ensure that the process is one that is satisfactory to the public. As I said earlier on, an Election is nearly two and a half years away. These issues cannot be the subject of an Election for people to decide via what opinions are proffered by candidates to give a mandate as to what should be done. So, in the absence of that I see no other way but a referendum.

Madam Speaker, the question again, what is the purpose of the amendment? For us to take note of the Report when London has clearly called for assurances that what is being sent has the support of the majority? That there is evidence of that support, widespread consultation and debate in the Legislature in which the suggested changes have been approved by Motion? If London has changed its mind as to the process that it wishes for us to comply with then we need to know. If it has not changed its mind then there is something wrong with the process that we are going forward with.

We are quite willing as representatives of the people to participate in a process, which includes the people to the point where by and large they are satisfied with what is going to be sent to London. We do not wish to associate ourselves with any process that goes counter to that. Regardless of what may be said as to why we do not want to participate, the fact of the matter is, as representatives of the people, in this instance, it is not our job to simply use what we believe should be the changes as the guiding light for London to draft the Constitution. Rather it is what the majority of the people wish as the changes that we should put forward as suggestions. This process that continues now as far as we can understand and think through will not allow for that to happen. Thus, we find great difficulty with it. We do hope that we will find a way and I am certain that there is a way. The question is, Where do we find the common ground to move forward?

Madam Speaker, our position is not one that simply wishes to go against the grain of what is happening now. It is obvious to us that for it to move forward; for it to be a situation where the public's fears are relayed that they are satisfied in the process. As of now we contend that they are not satisfied that they have had their say. I would hope that in dealing with this amendment that Government would explain because usually when an amendment is brought to Motion or a Motion is brought in moving either of the two, the Mover would explain the purpose so that if there is debate, it can ensue based on the intent which is explained by the Mover.

We have not had that opportunity yet and I think that we deserve to understand the intention of this amendment. As I understand it that will be the first vote that is taken as debate continues on conclusion of that amendment. If the Government chooses to continue on to deal with the bigger picture, as I said, we certainly cannot participate. I must also say that we cannot support the amendment as a matter of principle because of all of the points that I have explained thus far.

Finally, Madam Speaker, our sole intention is to ensure that the process concludes to the satisfaction of the people of this country. It is our considered view that if that is to happen then their wishes must be heard, as frustrating as it may be, because they must be satisfied that they have had their say. Thank you.

The Speaker: Thank you Member. We will now take the luncheon break and reconvene at 2.15 pm.

Proceedings suspended at 12.40 pm

Proceedings resume at 2.23 pm

The Speaker: Please be seated. Proceedings are resumed. Continuation of the Debate on the Amendment. The Honourable Deputy Leader.

Hon. Linford A. Pierson: Thank you, Madam Speaker.

After today nobody in this Honourable House, or indeed any member of the listening public can say that you are not a fair Speaker. Because in all my years in this House I have never seen so much latitude given to a Member of the Opposition, or any Member of the House involved in tedious repetition—in contravention of Standing Orders 41(1). Madam Speaker, you are to be congratulated for the patience that you showed today.

The Motion before this Honourable House seeking to amend the substantive Motion by introducing the amendment to take note, rather than to approve the Report of the Constitutional Commissioners was carefully considered prior to submission. It would have been impossible to approve the Commissioners' Report and Draft Constitution for the simple reason that the Report and recommendations of the Constitutional Commissioners did not receive the full support of any Member of the Legislative Assembly.

We are unable to approve this Report because there are parts with which we do not agree. And we cannot disapprove it because we agree with the majority of the Report. That is quite a conundrum. Thus, the reason for the introduction of a 'take note' Motion.

The 'take note' Motion in its amended form reads, "BE IT RESOLVED that this Honourable Legislative Assembly debates and takes note of the Report of the Constitutional Modernisation Review Commissioners 2002."

Again, I want to mention and emphasise that point because the 'take note' Motion is referring specifically to the Report of the Constitutional Modernisation Review Commissioners and Draft Constitution.

On page 441 of Erskine May Parliamentary Practice, Twenty-second edition, in the section dealing with Motions 'to take note' it states and I read, "The formula is regularly based on select committee reports. It is also appropriate for use by a Minister when he wishes to put down a neutral motion; a motion for papers would be inappropriate in this case, since papers can be laid only by the Government".

The important part is that this formula enables the House to debate a matter without coming to any positive decision. As we said, this was the only appropriate method to use because some of the Constitutional Commissioners' Report was acceptable by the Government and other sections were not. So, it could not have received an affirmative position or be taken on the affirmative Motion.

From the very first meeting held by the United Democratic Party (UDP) on the Commissioners' Report and Draft Constitution, the UDP was quite clear on the issues which we agreed and disagreed and our proposal for changes. I will just pause here to say that it is somewhat disgraceful that on a matter as important as this, that no Member of the Opposition is present while this matter is being discussed from the Government Bench.

We sat here out of respect for this Honourable House today and listened ad nauseam as the First Elected Member from George Town spoke on and on, on the same issue—tedious repetition—and we did not object to it because we felt that he should have been given the latitude in this House. And Madam Speaker, you were kind enough to allow him to continue with his tedious repetition. It is disgraceful to see that those Members (who are being paid the same as the Members on this side of the House) have ignored the House and walked out. There is not one of them here to listen to this debate and that is what they call good representation of the people. It is a disgrace. This is what they should be telling the public: the way they represent the people in this House and the disregard they have for the Honourable Legislative Assembly.

Our proposal took into account and reflected the views submitted to us by various individuals and groups including members of various churches. We consistently articulated our position at all of our meetings in each district in Grand Cayman and Cayman Brac, which were reported on in the Media.

It can therefore be reasonably concluded that the Cayman population has known from the initial stages of the consultation process of the proposals of the UDP. Again, as we moved from district to district we took on board the views of the public, which on balance, are reflected in the UDP's position paper that will be spoken about later on in the debate.

The process of seeking the views of the public cannot reasonably be regarded as an exact science. I would like to repeat that: the process of seeking the views of the public cannot reasonably be regarded as an exact science. The Commissioners' Report reflected the views of what they regarded as stated by them as a majority of a representative sample of the population.

The proposals in the UDP's position paper also reflect what we regard as the views of a majority of a representative sample of the people whom we have reached.

Therefore, it can be concluded that the process followed by the Commissioners and the United Democratic Party complies with section 219 of the Foreign and Commonwealth Constitutional Modernisation Checklist dated October 1999 in respect of the question, Do the changes suggested by the Overseas Territories Government have the support of a majority of the population?

I would reiterate that the process undertaken by both the Commissioners and the UDP reflect a representative sample of the views of the majority of the population. At this point I wish to table a copy of the original Constitutional Modernisation Checklist received from the Foreign and Commonwealth Office dated October 1999.

The copy that was tabled by the First Elected Member for George Town yesterday was just a reproduction or edited copy that was provided by the Government Information Services (GIS) and I am not here to say that it contained any wrong information. I am tabling this because this is a copy of the original paper that was sent from London.

The Speaker: So ordered.

Hon. Linford A. Pierson: The section 18 that was referred to in the paper that was read from by the First Elected Member for George Town is the equivalent of section 19 of this paper. Except the paper that was tabled yesterday left off some very important information.

Madam Speaker, on page 1 of the paper, which was perhaps inadvertently omitted from that other paper, it states in paragraph 1.3 (and I would like to read this and have it recorded in the Hansard), "In order to help OT Governments to review their Constitutions and to see if any changes are needed a checklist has been drawn up which gives an indication of the standards which OT should seek to achieve, the obligations which they should strive to meet and the expectations of HMG in key areas of constitutional modernisation. OT Governments are asked to consider the checklist when making proposals for constitutional change and either to incorporate suitable measures in their proposals to meet the requirements of the list or explain why a particular requirement should not apply to their territory."

It is a pity that the First Elected Member for George Town did not read that information in because it states quite clearly that this checklist is being given to Overseas Territories as an indication of the standards which they should seek to achieve, and that Governments are asked to consider the checklist when making proposals for constitutional changes. That shows the flexibility in the checklist that was sent to the Overseas Territories.

We have heard much said by the Opposition about the process, which they employed in order to obtain the views of a majority of the population. But it is quite clear from the results—I am not putting down the results because I know that a number of very good citizens signed the petition—some were properly informed about it, others were not. We are not quite sure how many of the 7,000 are perhaps visitors off the cruise ships or other people coming here on very short visits. But I am sure that the authentication process will distinguish those that should be on it and those that should not. I have every faith that that would be done properly. Nonetheless, it is quite clear that the numbers that signed the petition are not a majority of our population. I would like to focus on that particular point notwithstanding that it is a significant number. We are talking about a majority and there is no way—unless the Opposition has done a different arithmetic from mine—that 7,000 people out of 40,000 can form a majority. I would go further to say that it is presumptuous for the First Elected Member for George Town, or any other Member of the Opposition, to get up in this Honourable House and suggest otherwise.

It could just as reasonably be concluded that the 33,000 (that is, 40,000 less 7,000 remaining 33,000 plus) members of the population who did not sign the petition do not want a referendum, if that logic was extended. Further, it could also be reasonably concluded that the 33,000, which represent the vast majority agree with the position consistently made public by the United Democratic Party. Accordingly, the legislative group of the United Democratic Party have all signed a position, which sets out the views and recommendations of the United Democratic Party. And this was done after very close and careful consultation with the public and incorporating the wishes of the public where appropriate. This can particularly be seen in the section dealing with Human Rights.

Madam Speaker, I suggest and submit that what has been done to date by the United Democratic Party complies fully with section 219 of the checklist which questions whether the local consultation process has been followed by a debate in the Legislature in which the suggested changes have been approved by a Motion. This procedure will be followed. I will not say any more on this particular point at this point in time.

I believe it would be good to have the Members of the Opposition here so that they could hear the other side of this and not walk out of the Assembly when a Member of Government is speaking with a different view. This again, Madam Speaker, I would like to repeat, is not only an insult to the person speaking, but it is also a disgrace in this Honourable House. Again, I wish to point out in my short contribution on this that the process followed by the United Democratic Party has fully complied with all aspects of the Foreign and Commonwealth Office Checklist.

I thank you, Madam Speaker.

The Speaker: Thank you, Honourable Deputy Leader. Does any other Member wish to speak on the amendment? The Honourable Minister responsible for Community Services.

Dr. the Hon. Frank S. McField: Madam Speaker, it is said that there is no point in preaching to the converted. And I believe that this is the reason why parliaments are usually made up of opposing views in order that each side will be given the opportunity to debate issues and thereby arrive at some consensus. This is obviously an opportunity that has been denied this Parliament by the action of the Opposition here today.

[Member in background: "Hear, hear!"]

Dr. the Hon. Frank S. McField: For if Parliament was basically a House where there would be no disagreement then we would be able to say that we have a dictatorship, and that we have a one-party state. Thank God that in this country debate is alive and well. But healthy debate, although it should exist on the outside of Parliament is more useful in Parliament because it is the consensus that is arrived at in the Parliament that will later on help to form the basis for the actions and the rights and privileges of citizens.

I have had a very difficult time understanding exactly what it is that the Leader of the Opposition, the First Elected Member from George Town has been saying. He says that he would like the people of these Islands to have a say in the constitutional process at this particular stage but he should also be the voice of the people. What he says should somehow represent what the people are saying. The reason why we have Parliament as a separate entity from the outside is so that we can have democracy that could not exist without the rule of law; without precedence and procedures conducted in an orderly fashion.

So, I would assume that the Members of this Legislative Assembly must be capable of speaking for the people. Therefore, the fact that the Leader of the Opposition is not here means that he has already spoken for the people. And as a result of having said what he had to say for the people he has left because he is not to be persuaded by argument. His opinion is the only opinion that counts in this Parliament and once he has broadcast his opinion he gets up and walks out.

Madam Speaker, just imagine that we were playing a football game. . .he scored one goal and he gets up and walks out yet the time has not expired. He would be representing his team very poorly if that were the way he would conduct himself on a football field. But then again anyone who bats and gets someone to run for him, in a gentleman's game such as cricket, must lack a particular understanding of the kinds of institutions that we are dealing with here.

The 'take note' Motion being brought as an amendment to the present Motion is asking for a decisive vote on the part of this Honourable House. It makes even more sense when we listen to the position of the Leader of the Opposition who tells us of the many people who are now wanting to become involved in the constitutional consultative process. The reason why it is important that we have a Motion that takes note and therefore gives us the possibility to debate the issue contained in the Constitutional Review process, rather than to have to agree or disagree with the Constitutional Commissioners is, we are lending a further hand to the process of consultation which the Members of the Opposition have agreed should not be concluded at this particular time. But when they get up and walk out of this Honourable House what are they telling us? That the only place they will continue this process is on the streets with wheel barrows, making jokes and having fun and giving the wrong impressions about the seriousness of politics in this country.

Madam Speaker, there are certain people who because of where they come from believe that however they act, whether or not it is in a bar room or outside, it is acceptable. But there are certain people that because of where they come from even when they go around acting like gentlemen they are not perceived as being such. That type of perception is misled. It is time that we called the spade the spade. It is time that we realised what kinds of tactics are being used and the reason why they are being used at this particular time.

Why come in after it had been told to the general public that the Opposition would boycott this Honourable House in its discussion on this particular issue, hug up the TV time and take up all of our time. Then after having made a few statements they leave to go out to do exactly what they had already planned to do, meaning, that this side (Government side) would have no opportunity to debate with them through this dialogue to arrive at a common ground and a common understanding.

I have asked the question where on the Checklist does it say that the Government should use referendum to ascertain the views of the majority of the people. Where on the Checklist can we find this information?

An Hon. Member: It is not there.

Dr. the Hon. Frank S. McField: Madam Speaker, the Leader of the Opposition and First Elected Member from George Town used his time always referring to number 18 of the GIS Checklist. I would like to also state that it says, "the GIS Checklist" or "GIS" at the end of Constitutional Modernisation checklist. It did not say "Her Majesty's Government" as it is in the case here [separate document shown] where it says "Overseas Territories Department Foreign and Commonwealth Office October 1999". This is the original unabridged version that the Deputy Leader of Government Business referred to.

Whenever we have information we should always know the English language is sometimes so ambiguous that unless we understand the source of the information we shall become confused by it. I think it is the case where it says here in the GIS Checklist 18, "Do the changes suggested by the Overseas Territories Government have the support of the majority of the population?" What does that mean? We understand that the Constitutional Modernisation process is not a process that was driven by the Cayman Islands Government in that sense but it was driven by the Overseas Foreign and Commonwealth Office through the Governor's office here.

So, Commissioners were set up by the Governor so they would be able to gather the opinions of the people with regards to constitutional change. If the United Kingdom wanted to get the opinions from the politicians they would not have had any logical reasons for establishing three independent constitutional commissioners to consult independently, and uninterrupted by Government members with the people.

Now, the process might not have worked perfectly because no formula, especially when they are devised on the other side of the ocean, works perfectly. But the intention can obviously be seen here. There was no urgency on the part of the 1999 Government (led by the Honourable Truman Bodden at that time and opposed by the Honourable First Elected Member from George Town) to make constitutional modernisation a priority. And therefore, it was not an initiative that the Cayman Islands Government got involved with.

Had the Cayman Islands Government decided, like some other governments, that they were going to take the initiative in modernising their Constitution, then this checklist would have been a list that would have applied to them. The British Government wanted to make it obvious what their standards and criteria were so that no one would misinterpret exactly what they would be accepting in terms of constitutional changes or advancement.

So, what I am proposing is, Do the changes suggested by the Overseas Territories Government have the support of the majority of the population? And I would say do the changes suggested by the Cayman Islands Government have the support of the majority of the population?

What we are debating here, from the point of view of the Commissioners' Report, is not the Government's report, it is the Constitutional Commissioners'

Report and the Constitutional Commissioners have reported that what they have suggested have the support of the majority of the people. The Opposition has questioned this to a certain extent that maybe the Constitutional Commissioners did not have the type of support from the public that they needed. Therefore, they did not get the input that was necessary.

Maybe constitutional change was not the most important thing to the citizens of this country at that particular time. I can understand that. Politicians were not involved and people were not emotive and they did not get involved. But the point is, given the circumstances which existed over the nine-month period that the Constitutional Commissioners carried out the mission, which was given to them by the last Governor, they were able to say certain things.

Now, we have points that are considered in the Constitution where it appears as if the Government (the United Democratic Party (UDP)) and the Opposition (People's Progressive Movement (PPM)), are in agreement regarding the general direction of the recommendations by the Commissioners. And all that really needs to be resolved at this particular time are some six issues that the PPM, in relationship to other free-spirited citizens exercising their democratic right, seem to have flagged up as issues that need to be discussed again.

I am hearing that people are saying, "We are not satisfied that we agree on these six issues". It is interesting that one of those six issues happens to be: Should the Speaker come from inside the elected membership or outside? This is put down as an issue of national importance. How do we get to the point to decide what is an issue of national importance? Is it because the PPM people say so?

What is an issue of national importance? And if it is an issue of national importance can it be decided on by a yes and no answer? My contention is that if the Speaker is to come from outside then my next question would be, if I vote and say, "Speaker comes from outside and I am satisfied now, I had a referendum". Now, whom do I give that answer to? The Government, the Constitutional Commissioners? The United Kingdom? Where does it go?

I would assume that since it is a referendum what people would be trying to do is to [take] it to the Government. The Government could then say, "Ok, if the Speaker is to come from outside who will elect the Speaker?" The people from inside or the people from outside? And if the people from the outside will elect the Speaker, then the Speaker will have to run in the elections just like everyone else. But, if the people from the inside will elect the Speaker, then there is a possibility (as I have suggested in another forum), that the person who is chosen for Speaker by the people from the inside, will also be someone the majority of the people from the inside are familiar with in some way. Therefore, there is a possibility that that person might later on be criticised for being biased once there are persons who do not agree with the ruling of the Speaker.

Now, the Speakership is something that a lot of people seem to have not understood too well. They understand that there is someone who comes to this Legislative Assembly called 'Speaker' who rules on decisions, but as we go along we learn that the Speakership is a very ancient position and it has a specific meaning within the parliaments within the Westminster system. And that the Speaker takes with him or her complexities of procedure and precedence and statutes that are developed so that the Speaker is, in a sense, a lawgiver or lawmaker.

So, the complexity of the Speakership is something that we need first of all to be educated about before we can decide to vote yes or no. Therefore, if someone is arguing by the question that the answer should be that the Speaker should come from outside, that person who is arguing that way can no longer come in this Legislative Assembly and say that they do not have a position—the position that they have is just that the people should have a say.

We have a responsibility also as those persons who help to form consensus. We not only take the views of the public, we influence the views of the public as well and that is part of what we are supposed to do to help to create consensus. That is why we have all this time and why we are paid so well. We have time to think about these issues when the public is out working and doing and thinking about other issues—The division of labour it is called.

It is not presumptuous on the part of a parliamentarian to think that they might be a little bit more advanced in a particular debate than someone in the general public, simply because that parliamentarian is paid to research; to debate and to have knowledge of the wider connotations and denotations and ramifications of these issues.

So, we can no longer believe that the issue is about a referendum here. It is a more complicated issue because if we are going to have referendum we must also talk about the educational process that is necessary in order to make that referendum meaningful. And this will take time and involvement and it will take a little bit more than people standing around and saying, 'Bobo, why I want to stay around and hear what you have to say is that I do not really have an opinion myself, although you pay me to have an opinion I do not really have an opinion. I want to hear what you want'.

Madam Speaker, I do not think that certain people have a problem with leading because they always find themselves in front of the pack. They are always there: the upfront person—the spokesperson.

How am I supposed to forget the fact that if all the six issues that were put down and signed—I hear people say to me that I voted for the referendum Motion in 1999. Yes, I have the same support for the concept of a people's referendum but that is completely different because I am debating that or supporting that when it is a question of national importance, not when it is a trivial issue. Not when it is an issue that could be resolved through a different process, perhaps through discussion and debate and a little bit of education.

This situation that people are asking me to agree to, to spend the country's money on when we do not have enough money to hire even a house manager for the substance abuse services outpatient residential facilities; when we do not have enough money to make sure that Northward Prison has the kind of security that it should have; when we do not have enough money to pay the seamen that have contributed to this country; when we do not have enough money to help the poor old ladies that are out there; when we do not have enough money to be able to do with the youth the things that we want to do so that they can be a part of the future, we must spend money on a referendum. They are asking us to make a very important decision. So we have to be convinced that this is the only way that the decision could be made. And I am saying that the further we go into this process the more complicated it will be.

Take for instance, the question of multi-constituencies—the principle of 'one man, one vote'. . . I agree. The United Democratic Party has said it agrees. A lot of people say, 'Oh well what is happening is, George Town is taking a piece of Bodden Town and I know the people in Savannah do not want that, so how are we going to cut it up?' How are we really going to separate the people in George Town? How are we going to stop from getting into the poor areas—nobody ever say black and white areas because we do not use that kind of word in Cayman—black areas and white areas, poor areas and rich areas, expatriate areas and Caymanian areas. It does not say that it cannot work but every system that you build brings its own weaknesses to the forefront. There is no perfection (or very little) in human society. Every institution has its weakness.

So, there will be a weakness in the new system just like there are weaknesses in the old system. There will be strength but there are weaknesses and we must be prepared to deal with the weaknesses and this is the reason why the United Democratic Party suggested that we take our time and advance ourselves towards the 'one man, one vote'. That we can get it right; that we do not get all the weaknesses that we see in Jamaica and other places, where you have these little poor constituencies; where politicians are gods. It is not as simple as it seems, and the Opposition would have been well-placed to be here to begin to listen to what we are saying. Not to agree but to help us along perhaps in our journey of trying to find out what is best.

We only started with a position where the United Democratic Party says we disagree with the Commissioners in these areas. And it is the areas where the United Democratic Party had disagreements with the Commissioners that they have chosen to have a referendum about. But the point is: if this is the position of the Constitutional Commissioners, it is the same position that they would like to have a referendum about. And I believe that they would like to have a referendum because a lot of them believe already that people would vote to say let the Speaker come from outside the House. But if the Constitutional Commissioners are saying that the Speaker should come from outside the House and the Opposition believes the Speaker should come from outside the House, or the people believe that the Speaker should come from outside the House, then what is the point in spending all this money to have a referendum?

I still do not get the logic to prove who is right. There is no perfect, exact science when it comes to dealing with people's opinions because people's opinions are not always something that is static. They change and they can do so as a result of people having new information to process. That is one of the reasons why we were hoping that the Opposition could be here—so that they would have some additional explanation as to why we feel the way we feel with regards to bringing an amendment to this Motion. An amendment to the Motion provides us with the possibility to discuss the issues that we feel there is still disagreement on.

First of all, I would like to know from the Opposition whether or not they believe the Speaker should come from the inside, as we believe. Or, whether or not the Opposition believes that the Speaker should come from outside. And when did the Opposition come to that position?

An Hon. Member: We have never seen their position.

Dr. the Hon. Frank S. McField: We have never seen a position from the Opposition. Why is it that they continue to believe somehow that they can lead by reaction; that they can lead from behind? But that is the style of the First Elected Member from George Town. Leading from behind! And that is one reason why the Referendum Motion that he brought in 1999 with the Honourable Roy Bodden, Minister responsible for Education, sat, not being acted upon, because he had to lead from behind. But if he had been leading the way he should have, as Leader of Government Business he would have had the time and opportunity to bring that Motion into law and therefore, to have created the bedrock for what is now being asked to happen, to happen.

It is easy for people when they are not in the position to make the decisions to criticise other people for not making the decisions, but when they were in the position to make the decisions they did not make those decisions. I would still like to be told what is the position of the PPM with regards to these six issues where there seems to be a disagreement between the Constitutional Commissioners and the UDP—a disagreement that is quite alright. There is nothing wrong with disagreement and I am quite sure that the United Kingdom was not expecting that all the people in the Cayman Islands (including all the politicians) would agree on the same things. There are differences in points of views because there their perspectives are different. This is only human.

But when they sit down in the United Kingdom to evaluate the differences in opinions, they will be able to say, 'Well, this is what the Commissioners said; these are how many people the Commissioners said they interviewed; this is what the Opposition has said; this is how many Members of the Opposition; this is one of the Members of the Opposition who got a certain number of votes at the polls in 2000 . . . very popular person although he is no longer the Leader of Government Business we still give him a certain amount of credibility. He is the Leader of the Opposition and he is a credible person on that particular point. Let's look at the Government's position—the motives it might have. And let us look at the motives the Opposition might have and see how we can frame a Constitution that they all can live with that can be a good instrument of Government for the Cayman Islands people'. It is not something that is going to be perfect again because there are going to always be issues. Like some politician said, it is not just a Constitution; it is the people that you have working in the system as well.

So even if we say that the Speaker should come from outside the House, we put that in our Constitution and tie ourselves to that, and we found that there was a situation where we could not find a Speaker outside and we had someone inside that could and would serve, our hands would be tied because we cannot find a Speaker. Parliament cannot operate, as you know Madam Speaker, without a Speaker. The Speakership is a very important position.

All I am saying is that a 'take note' debate would help us to agree because we would not be disagreeing; because there is no reason to disagree; because there is no vote to win. All you can hope is to make your argument as logical, precise and as clear as possible. But there is no winning in a 'take note' debate.

If we had come here and not amended this Motion and had voted to say that we should not accept these six points as represented by the Constitutional Commissioners the Opposition would jump and say, 'You see that, they are against the people, they are voting against what the people want because they know that they have the numbers in here'. We are not going to use our numbers to vote in that sense! We are going to use the strength of our argument, our ability to be persuasive. They get up and they walk out because they realise that their only useful tactic is to confront! confront! confront! It is just like when I used to visit the bar rooms and drink — that is exactly how I used to be: confrontational! confrontational! confrontational! But I do not visit the bar rooms anymore! And my tactics have changed! Thank God for that. I remember! When you drink that alcohol it stays in your system for a long time and a long time you will be making alcoholic decisions and you have not even touched the bottle. We have to be careful.

All I am saying is that my tactic today is to try to keep the debate open. I think it is absolutely necessary that people out there realise that they do have the right and that this Government respects their right to have a say. But sometimes we do get a little confused because we see other people abusing the rights of those people who do not necessarily know as much as they know about some of these issues. We see them feeding the [people with] misinformation. For instance, when we get here and we see that they have not tabled the Constitutional Modernisation Checklist from the Overseas Territories Department Foreign and Commonwealth office October 1999, but they chose to table an abridged version, done by the GIS, which means in every case they are taking us away from the original things and taking us away to something that is abridged and something that is a diversion.

We said that we had some problems and we would allow them by adjourning the House to allow them to join the debate rather than to start it without them. And they come and slap us in our face by walking out of this Honourable House after we had delayed the people's time just to accommodate them. That is not the tactics of a sober person! There are people who come and tell me that, 'Well . . . you do not go along with them you are not going to get elected again.' There are people who say I do not remember where I come from and I say, 'Ask my mother if you do not think I remember where I have come from. You ask Mama'.

The most important thing for me is that I feel that I am part of a government that would like to pay attention to the people. I realise that the Constitution is important, but I would like to be at the Glass House at this particular point dealing with how I am going to try to reform and restructure the whole care that we have for juveniles in this country to a point where we are getting results from these kids so that they can become real investors in this country.

I would like to be getting out there to see what we are going to do about housing but I am tied up over the last months now in a battle about a Constitution. Madam Speaker, I could have still used this present Constitution. Like I said, I did not initiate the process, I am part of the process and I am trying to do my part. My part was that I went out with a party that I am a member of into the district of George Town. We had a meeting with the Minister for Communication and Works and we had it televised so that we could explain our position. He spoke with members of the clergy and some of their arguments were integrated. But, Madam Speaker, I do not want to take up the whole time going on and on about all these things that can be talked about when we come to the debate on the substantive Motion.

I am really here to say that I am very disappointed in the way the Opposition always plan their tactics to obstruct the possibility for debate in this House. Madam Speaker, the Opposition does not have lunch with us since the 8 November. Even when I called Mr. Truman Bodden whatever it was when I got suspended, we always still had lunch back in there. There were rough days in 1999/2000. My first term here as a freshman, I created enough problems for the Speaker and I never thought the Speaker was ever right. I always thought I was right. But one learns. One can be right and still wrong at the same time.

The confrontational attitude and the arrogance apparent in the Members of the Opposition when they refuse to take tea with us and now even refuse to debate with us: while they may not be paid to take tea with us, they are certainly paid to debate with us. Now, judge the book not by the cover, but by the content of the character: If we cannot talk to them in the Common room—because they are not there to have tea with us; we cannot talk to them here on this Constitutional issue; they will not talk to us period, then where are we going to talk to them about trying to find some common ground to this situation?

[Members' inaudible interjection/suggestion]

Dr. the Hon. Frank S. McField: (response) Well, it is not going to be there because I do not go there anymore. Madam Speaker, I have to conclude by saying that because I disagree with the Opposition does not mean that I feel that I am against the people. The Opposition has made the case that they from the 8 November last year did not agree with this Government being the government and that they intended to use whatever means necessary to make sure that this Government does not complete its business.

So far they are trying to involve the entire population, if possible, in order that they succeed in doing so. But the people will be the worse off if they forget that we do not live by words or politics alone but we also need a little bit of bread. We therefore, need to make sure that our economy is going and that people have jobs. And that those people who are disabled and cannot take care of themselves are given some kind of support.

This is the main issue in this country whether or not the Speaker comes from inside or outside the Legislative Assembly. When unemployment is rising; when the Cayman Islands' ability to produce and export does not exist; [when] we are totally dependent upon foreign economies that are having a rough time because of their own issues: this is the most important issue. When the European tax initiatives are being driven and our financial institutions are again being threatened and we must stand together to make sure that we protect it: this is the most important issue.

A Constitution of a country is important. It should embody the soul of the people. The spirit of the people should be inflamed in the Constitution. But a Constitution has to be something that we understand and will at the end of the day be only as good as those persons who are willing to be ruled by it. For if we come to this Honourable House and will not accept the spirit of debate, then, Madam Speaker, we are talking to the chairs.

Here I am either preaching to the converted or talking to the chairs because the Opposition has held this Government in so much contempt since the 8 November last year that they will not even sit down to talk to this Government to hear what we have to say and bring their arguments against what I have to say.

That is one of the reasons why I believe that their tactics are not sober tactics. You know what happens when tactics are not sober . . . they end up in the wall. There is no way that after going around this point number 18 . . . "Do the changes suggested by the OT Government have the support of the majority of the population? What is the evidence for such support? Has there been extensive local consultation with or without the assistance of a Constitutional Commissioner or Commission?"

The extensive local consultation was with the Constitutional Commission but you see the way that it is written—"Has there been extensive local consultation with or without the assistance of a Constitutional Commissioner or Commission?" We had three Commissioners so the extensive consultation was there.

Now it says, ". . . followed by a debate in the legislature in which the suggested changes have been approved by a Motion". They are arguing because we are not going to vote on the suggested changes that that should make null and void their participation. We are discussing them. There has been extensive consultation with Commissioners. The people are supporting the changes. Because of the Government's difference in opinion with that of the Constitutional Commissioners regarding the six items and because of the role of the Opposition in attempting to boycott Parliament it is the decision of Parliament to amend the Motion to allow the debate to take place without the alienation of any side of this Honourable Parliament.

The United Kingdom can make a decision as to whether or not the lack of the vote in this Honourable Parliament on these specific items should be deemed as sufficient reasons to reject the Constitutional Commissioners Report. For the Report for Constitutional Modernisation is not coming from the United Democratic Party Government, it is coming from Constitutional Commissioners. It is not coming from the street, it is coming from an orderly process that was set up by the Governor and accepted by the last Leader of Government Business, the First Elected Member from George Town as a way in which we should go about ascertaining the public's opinion.

Madam Speaker, with that I would say that I support the amendment and reiterate that it is the most civilised and sensible way of trying to mend the fences and to gain a common ground with regards to the positions of the different persons in the Legislative Assembly.

The Speaker: Thank you, Honourable Minister. Does any other Member wish to speak? Second Elected Member from the district of West Bay.

Mr. Rolston M. Anglin: Madam Speaker, I rise to offer a few brief comments on the amendment. Also in the spirit of debate, to clarify certain positions that have been put forward. I have heard so much recently about education of the public that I think it is important to clearly state that the main reason for electing a representative government is so that those persons can come to the place designated for you (the people) to be represented, that is, the Legislative Assembly. That is where the people of this country send us to do their work. But so many are tied up in bar room politics and getting up in this House and casting aspersions on this side that they do not have time for meaningful representation.

Madam Speaker, debate is about points and counterpoints. I have said that before and I will show through these brief comments that a story always has two sides. There are some that say there are three sides, the two opinions being proffered into truth. But I will let the record of this House (the Hansard) and the listening public judge for themselves.

The First Elected Member from George Town as has been alluded to by the Honourable Minister for Communication and Works, has a way of standing up and talking for two hours about a point that could have been said in five minutes. In doing that you encapsulate and throw aspersions that deviate logical minds from the issue at hand. Circular debate is what it is called.

The First Elected Member from George Town talked about what would come after he spoke; talked about knowing the game. I know. He seems to know so much, yet he has nothing in terms and opinion to bring to the people. He does, however, have one unique talent: he knows how to cause strife and how to come here and cast aspersions. If that is what the people of George Town want in a representative, keep him! But if they want leadership and true representation they need to rethink the position.

The Member got up and talked about 'eating away at credibility'. Does the Member forget what he did to Mr. Truman Bodden in this House all those years? Does he forget that that is all he did? I remember listening to it on the radio. At every opportunity he battered and beat Mr. Truman Bodden's credibility. He did it over and over until the people of George Town made him king—set him as the man! Unfortunately, there is an old saying that goes, Leaders know the way, leaders show the way, leaders go the way. Madam Speaker, for one whole year the First Elected Member from George Town could do neither of the three listed above and now in this important debate he gets up and plays games again with the people saying that he needs to hear their opinions.

Let us face reality: There are people who, even if you could pay them, are not going to care about certain issues. Two days ago before this debate started, I visited three households in my constituency and talked to every single person: (1) One lady wanted to talk about her wages so she wanted to know more about minimum wage. (2) There was a gentleman who wanted to talk about his arthritic knees—how they are causing him not to walk and what the Government can do for him. (3) There was another person who wanted to talk about how he could deal with certain planning provisions. They did not want to talk about the Constitution. They looked me squarely in the eye and said, "That is why we elected you . . . that is why when you got up and told us your qualifications and told us why you should be one of the four sent to represent us, that is what you are paid to do". They said, "Rolston what is all this noise about a referendum anyway? You tell us".

Madam Speaker, Leaders know the way, they show the way, and they go the way.

The First Elected Member from George Town led his Opposition marching out of the House away from their jobs. I take it they are on strike. Maybe a provision should be in the new Constitution to deal more effectively with these sorts of Members who want to play politics with everything—do not want to stay here and debate the issues. I sat in the Common room on my break and listened painfully to the First Elected Member from George Town go around the point—just like a child. You know when you are playing a game of marbles and you get mad and you grab your balls up and go home? See where that is going to get them.

Madam Speaker, I know I am pretty young but the strength and character of a man is in his actions and not his words. So, I do not need to stand here and question his credibility. His own actions do all the speaking that no one in this world could ever do.

Madam Speaker, I refer to a very interesting term in the Oxford Concise Dictionary of Politics, called "rhetoric" and with your permission I quote.

The Speaker: Please proceed.

Mr. Rolston M. Anglin: "Rhetoric accordingly came to be seen as the unnecessary or misleading embellishment and corruption of language". It gives the traditional definition of rhetoric and also the more contemporary definition. This is yet another tactic that the First Elected Member from George Town uses quite well. Rhetoric. Let me remind Members of this Chamber and any one who is listening that it "came to be seen as the unnecessary or misleading embellishment and corruption of language".

Those of the public may be wondering how on the one hand I have said he was talking in circles and was not making any points and then I said I listened to him in every point that I moved in this Chamber, it is for that same reason. I have learned in these 20 months that I have been here that the First Elected Member from George Town is filled with 'rhetoric and so I make it my duty when he speaks, if I am here, to listen to every single word. Because 'rhetoric' is "the unnecessary or misleading embellishment and corruption of language".

Let me point out how the First Elected Member from George Town is filled with rhetoric: He went to great pains to bring in the Civil Servant issue regarding them not being able to sign a petition. He said that someone took the decision to not allow them to participate. On the face of it that seems like a perfectly reasonable statement, but the word 'decision' is a very critical word in that sentence. 'Decision' means that someone wilfully acted in a way to deprive civil servants.

Madam Speaker, I beg to correct the Member and to correct the minds of the listening public: No one took that decision. The Honourable First Official Member, the Chief Secretary did not take a decision. It is clearly entrenched in the General Orders that civil servants cannot take part in a petition that is petitioning their employer, that is, the Governor in Executive Council. All the Chief Secretary did was to interpret the General Orders because someone who was uninformed got up and asked the question. He did not take a decision.

But you see, that is the crafty rhetoric that the First Elected Member from George Town is accustomed to getting away within this House. But whenever he decides to come back he had better remember that as long as I am here and there is strength and breath in my body I will listen to every word that he says. And once he is finished I will then get up and interpret it for the common man and the citizen on the street. For it is filled with rhetoric, insinuation and malice.

This is a House of politics, yes. We are dealing now with the Constitution. We should be dealing with issues, positions, point and counterpoint. We should be providing the listening public with positions to help educate them. So, how are they going to have a referendum and vote in the first place if their representatives do not even have an opinion to give them—to educate them on the issue? You want a referendum? Really . . . It seems that once again rhetoric is used.

Madam Speaker, if the First Elected Member from George Town says in his debate that all he is talking about is a referendum, Why did he not amend the Motion that he submitted to the House on your suggestion so that the issue could have been put out clearly to the public? Maybe it is because he really does not want a referendum. Maybe he forgot as he did the year he was Leader of Government Business—he forgot about the important Motion he had brought in 1999. I am simply saying what the Member said he forgot.

There are people who may have questions as to why I was the Mover of this Motion of the 8 November 2001. I am too young and I have too much at stake and I have too many friends with too much at stake to wait to act. I was not going to wait around until 2004 to talk about him. I dealt with the issue when I saw it. And just like how he forgot that, many other things were being forgotten.

But then again, there are certain things that we are born with, or without. A leader knows the way, he shows the way, and he goes the way. Not forgetting his roots, not forgetting the people who put him there, not forgetting that it is representative government. Representative government is a fascinating term.

The First Elected Member from George Town says the people may not have had an opportunity. The Leader of Government Business, the First Elected Member from West Bay made it his point from during the campaign to bring lawyers to West Bay in the school hall to have a constitutional meeting on the White Paper, to talk to the citizens in West Bay about these important things.

We, the West Bay Members of the United Democratic Party, ran on a platform that said that we were going to hold quarterly public meetings with our people. Unless someone can correct me, I do not think the First and Second Elected Members from George Town had one public meeting during their first year in office. Not one! When important issues would come up like Cayman Airways issue all they could do was to get mad with us because we would go and talk to the public. And now they and their puppets are going to get up and say that we are an arrogant Government? And talk about us being the dictatorial Government, yet we continue to talk to the people? What funny dictators we are! We give them a radio station to 'beat us to death' and talk about us. We provide every medium for them to criticise us and we are dictators?

I tell you what: if I were judging us on dictatorship 101 I would not even give us a grade. Fail. We would get a 'U' as it was in old O level language. Our paper is ungradeable. I have a terrible problem with dictating. Some people do know how to dictate. Some people do know how to get up and irresponsibly rile up the masses in this country, to do things they ordinarily would not do. But I will get to this in the substantive Motion.

Madam Speaker, I would like to end off by countering another point that was brought up by the First Elected Member from George Town. He read—as has already been described adequately by the two speakers before—from a document that is not the official document. So, first of all that automatically makes his argument extremely flawed if not incorrect.

But then to open his debate, he walked the public through what the Governor said the rules were. It is one thing to have a checklist—if you talk about a checklist and to table a checklist, but a checklist is paper; it is paper from 1999 that has been alluded to. The former Governor, Peter Smith, told us the way. He got up and said the Governor told us the new way. Then he asked the question if someone has changed he did not hear about it. Madam Speaker, is that sober talk and sober judgement? The Governor told us the way. Let me reiterate the way the former Governor told us.

The Governor said that we were going to have a debate in the Legislative Assembly; the report along with the verbatim debates would be sent to the United Kingdom Government; the United Kingdom Government would then draft the Constitution (because they are the only ones who can draft the Constitution for us); they would then send us the Draft Constitution and if it met with support with minor differences it would be settled by telephone. If it were not met with support then a contingent would be dispatched from Her Majesty's Government to the Cayman Islands to settle the differences. That is a clear deviation from the Checklist.

That is Her Majesty's representative telling us what is going to happen. That is the authority of the Governor. He can tell us how it is going to happen. Madam Speaker, that is precisely what you and the Second Elected Member from Cayman Brac got up and said at your public meeting, which he quoted from. You quoted what the Governor said, yet there are now two things that were used as political rhetoric by the First Elected Member from George Town. First of all that Member said that he did not know that anything different was the case, yet he stated the difference. Then of course, he insinuated that by that being said in the meeting in Cayman Brac that somehow we knew about changes, or we were proffering changes, and saying how the way forward was. The Governor outlined the way forward for us—The First Elected Member for George Town was in the meeting in that Committee room so much so that he could stand in this Chamber and quote what the Governor said.

Madam Speaker, he and the Second Elected Member from George Town and the Member from East End like all these fancy little sayings . . . but this is a dark day in democracy when rhetoric is going to be used to justify these sorts of actions. We have an amendment before us that levels and takes the edge off this whole issue. It allows us to take a step back and say forget about it now, we are not voting on anything.

Let us just utilise another form of motion that is at our disposal that says we are going to take note. We are telling the UK Government 'here are the sides, just take note. We are going to give you a position paper' . . . they have alluded to giving a position paper. It is all sent off. We can get past this adversarial role of having to say we are going to be posturing for position and vote. We are now saying let us just bring logical reasoning and argument to the Chamber. But the Opposition cannot support that.

What times we live in! If there is one thing I am going to make my job for the next 24 months if God spares my life, is to continually expose the actions of the people that call themselves and proffer themselves as Opposition. For I do not see anything that is opposition about this. This People's Progressive Movement (PPM) is downright arrogance at its highest form. It is high-handedness at its highest form. Five of them want to talk about personality and 'friend-friend' politics. 'Personal Power Movement'—that is what the PPM is. All about power and dragging the common citizen into this with misinformation.

If they wanted to educate the people what better forum there is than to come in the Legislative Assembly where we are looking eye to eye debate. Not one saying something at a meeting on Thursday night, another one saying something else at the meeting the next Tuesday night, someone else comes back at a next meeting—No! that is why democracy is supposed to be around these Chambers. You can say all the rhetoric you want out there but when you come here and you put your position forward and let the chips fall where they may. Let the people judge what they are hearing and also be educated. Let us all grow together.

This Chamber serves as more than just a place you come and you vote. There is a lot more involved in the Legislative Assembly in governance than voting—governance—improved governance is what we want. This amendment seeks to provide a way for us to move forward in a way that is in the best interest of our citizens and ourselves. Where we can now take a step back and just debate. I would like to thank you Madam Speaker for allowing me those brief comments in this Chamber and that is a very important comment that I do not want missed by the ordinary citizen. I would like to thank the Speaker for allowing me—because the Speakership is a very important institution and the education of that is best effected from here where the people can hear and see exactly what the Speakership involves. . . that you are not just going to pluck someone out of the air and pull them off the street as they walk down Fort Street and say 'come in here, you are going to be Speaker'. This is an involved intricate profession. From what I understand it is the third highest in order of precedence in this country and I can tell you, Madam Speaker, no one has yet shown me any reason we should give that sort of power to someone other than an elected representative; other than someone that the people have sent here. The people should send the Speaker to this Legislative Assembly.

I would like to thank you again and to thank my Members for indulging my brief comments. Thank you.

The Speaker: Is it the wish of the House to take an afternoon break or would we proceed to ask another Member to speak? Does any other Member wish to speak? The Honourable Minister responsible for Health.

Hon. Gilbert A. McLean: Madam Speaker, I would be prepared to take a break if you wish.

The Speaker: I am entirely at the wish of the House. So be it. We shall suspend for 15 minutes for the afternoon break.

Proceedings suspended at 4.06 pm

Proceedings resumed at 4.32 pm

The Speaker: Proceedings are resumed. The Honourable Minister for Health.

Hon. Gilbert A. McLean: Thank you, Madam Speaker. I rise to speak to an amendment to the substantive Motion moved by the Honourable Minister for Tourism and Leader of Government Business some several months ago which would allow the Legislative Assembly to debate the Report of the Constitutional Commissioners and to take note of its contents and the views of Members of this Honourable House.

I support this change in the Motion for various reasons some of which are the fact that to debate and take note gives every Member the opportunity to express his view on the Motion to debate on the Commissioners Report; to state their agreements with the sections on which they agree and to state their disagreements with the sections on which they disagree. And of course, give their reasons for it in both instances. This amendment would allow us to find a peaceful and forthright way of dealing with this Constitutional Report.

In fact yesterday the First Elected Member for George Town accurately stated what the former Governor said to us concerning the debating of this Report. He expected all of us to do so and indeed it would have taken place way back in April of last year had we not agreed to extend the time for consultation some nine and half weeks.

When we debated the Report he would get the Hansard of exactly what we said and send that along with the Report to the United Kingdom Government. The officials there would have the benefit of seeing what everyone in the House said and also what the Commissioners said. Out of the debate and the findings of the Commissioner they would be able to arrive at a solution as to what the Constitution should be. He accurately stated that and I agree that that was said. Also, the part that states if there was some disagreement once the United Kingdom Government had drafted a Constitution that it could possibly be settled by telephone calls between the United Kingdom and the Cayman Islands legislators. Or, if it were something bigger he would bring those in to discuss it.

Moment of interruption—4.30

The Speaker: Honourable Minister, we have now reached the hour of interruption. May I have a Motion to suspend Standing Order 10(2) to allow the debate to proceed until 6 pm today?

Suspension of Standing Order 10(2)

Hon. Gilbert A. McLean: Madam Speaker, I would like to move the relevant Standing Order to permit debate to go beyond the hour of 4.30 until 6 pm.

The Speaker: The question is that Standing Order 10(2) be suspended to allow the proceedings of the House to continue until 6 pm today. All those in favour please say Aye. Those against, No.

Ayes.

The Speaker: The Ayes have it.

Agreed: Standing Order 10(2) suspended.

The Speaker: Please continue Honourable Minister.

Hon. Gilbert A. McLean: Thank you, Madam Speaker.

I was commenting on the fact that what the First Elected Member for George Town said yesterday was correct in terms of what we had been told by the Governor. I dare say that there are those who believe that we in this House can write our own Constitution. Or, there are those, perhaps, in this country who believe that because we the people may have a particular view the United Kingdom Government must accept and adopt that.

That, Madam Speaker, as you would be aware, and all Honourable Members here know, is absolutely not the case. The Constitution of the Cayman Islands at present is something that was given to this Island by the superior parliament in the United Kingdom. And anyone that we will get after this will be exactly the same. Even if there was one of an independence type of Constitution it still would be drafted by the United Kingdom. So, the point I make—and I fearfully use the word ‘independence’ because tomorrow I dare say you would hear that I said we need an independence Constitution—is that the Constitution is absolutely the business of the United Kingdom Government, no more and no less.

We get the opportunity to talk about it and what we would like to see in it. Personally, I have been very clear over the past 20 plus years on what I think about the Constitution and where it should be and where I think responsibility should lie, and the responsibilities that Ministers should have. Regrettably, if the Government of the day had adopted the 1992 Constitution we perhaps would not be here now talking about this whole matter. Certainly, I can say now seeing it from the side of a Minister, that life would be much easier in attempting to get one's policy moved forward than what the present Constitution allows. Be that as it may.

Madam Speaker, I am not in the least bit surprised at what has taken place in the past two weeks in the country. I was just as sure that there would be some kind of political disruption by the element that is disrupting the process. I feel just as sure as I have to die. I knew it. I did not know exactly how it would come about but I knew it would happen and indeed it has happened.

We have the Commissioners' Report. We gave nine-and-a-half weeks after we read it ourselves, took it to every single district and all the rest of it. Initially, we met and looked at it and thought it seemed straightforward to accept it. Other parts we had disagreement with. We knew that we could not change it, we could only come in Parliament and offer our views on it and say we agree or disagree, with the hope that the United Kingdom Government would take note and act accordingly.

We too heard the words of the people, in fact, there are nine of us who have heard from the people, which is almost twice the number on the Opposition side. We heard what the people said about the various things such as 'one man, one vote' dividing up the country and all the rest of it and we have reflected it in the Paper which we have prepared as a result of the various meetings. I am sure we will come to the fore in the House at some point in this process.

The thing that struck me was that if we were to believe for one minute what the five Opposition Members are saying, the only people who have ears to hear and determine what national issues are would be them. Forget about the rest of us . . . we cannot hear; we cannot discern; we cannot analyse; the people are not talking to us. They think—but they are and they have been and they continue to do so. We hear, we know.

Madam Speaker, just to choose one item and it is certainly of no disrespect to the Chair but the issue of Speaker is a subject that has been belaboured by so many people who do not have a clue as to what the Speakership in Parliament is! I feel obliged, since that is an Office in this Honourable House, that I should address it briefly. In my time I have never yet heard of a ruling of the Speaker affecting any price in any of the supermarkets here, or that the ruling of the Speaker affecting what happens in Barclays Bank, CIBC or any of the banks in the country, or what happens in any one's home, or in any restaurant. Certainly not—because of one basic and fundamental reason, which is: The Speaker's business is absolutely confined to the Chamber and the precincts of this Honourable Parliament. Parliament stands alone in its autonomy. It is supreme; it judges itself; it disciplines itself; it appoints Speakers or it removes Speakers. Only the Parliament can do it.

I have listened in considerable outrage and also today as I drove I listened to an individual who (like the hymn "Count Your Many Blessings, Name Them One by One") seemed to count his many words and named them 'one by one'—talking and disrespecting the Speaker of this House, which is in contempt. But how do you get into the minds of people who do not know the concept of contempt? They have no respect; they do not even respect themselves. And they do not even know that they do not know, so that they could try to find out what the situation is.

The radio stations, including the government's radio station, deal with this type of thing every day. It is the means by which unknowing people are constantly disrespecting the Office of Speaker and this Legislative Assembly. Those people who do not know would not understand that they are messing with the very heart and soul of democracy! Ignorance is killing us! This is where democracy lies. It does not lie within the other departments of Government. It lies here! If it goes wrong here it is wrong everywhere else. It does not lie in the courts—the courts cannot proceed until we create laws for the land. Ignorance is rife.

Tomorrow Government will be accommodating the ignorant again to further disrespect—they will be talking about what I said too and it comes down to a situation: Where does it end? Where does it become a situation where there is a systematic action that is inciting the public in the wrong manner? It has to have a legal interpretation somewhere along the line. At some point the Government and the Governor must be obliged to take a careful look at what is happening now. I have my own ideas that I will give them at the right forum.

I chose one and that was the question of Speaker so, Madam Speaker, I do not accept that the question as to whether the Speaker comes from within or without the House is one of major national concern! It would be ignorant to believe that. We are simply copying and following what is done in the British Parliament, which is a superior parliament letter for letter. And that has been going on for hundreds of years. We are here doing nothing differently from what is happening in all the other Commonwealth countries of the world regarding the Speakership.

It is not a question of how the Speaker is chosen; it is all personal; disgustingly personal. As a people we are killing ourselves because we cannot detach ourselves. I listened to someone who every-day he skips from one radio station to the other in the morning and in the evening to further promulgate his foolishness; where he systematically chooses the man who presently holds the position of Leader of Government Business in the Parliament and he personally disrespects and castigates him. Now, it does not matter to me personally if he may not like the individual . . . that is his personal business but when he does it to his official office it is my business! It is the business of this House! It is the business of every Minister in this House when that type of thing happens. It is a break down of law and order! What they are doing in the United States? Whether they choose Senator A or B would a radio station [the host] sit back and accommodate them to personally attack them? Of course it would not happen. It is not civilised.

Look at the uncivilised thing that is happening in this country and I bleed as I think of it. Those are the reasons why our colonial masters and the industrialised countries put us all under one blanket term, 'natives', which means ignoramuses; people who are not civilised; no social graces, no sense to detach the professional from the personal. That is why it happens and it gives me the gravest concern.

The people are supposedly leading the charge on behalf of the people are 'latecomers'. I have led the charge on behalf of the people 30 years ago when the Law, like the Planning Law for one thing, came as a real result of me demonstrating the streets so people could keep their land. And everyone did not need five acres to build a house on. So, they have come in late. They do not know anything. Life has been too easy. And if all that they can do is to further put misinformation in the minds of people who already do not understand, it is a shame and I think it is a crime—a disgrace.

Madam Speaker, I will not try to speak about the other six things, which are listed here because we have dealt with all of them in our position as a Government. We are putting our views forward to the United Kingdom and they can do what they want and they will.

What I hope that the United Kingdom Government will take serious note of is what is happening here on the ground in Cayman. I have no knowledge of what is transmitted to the United Kingdom via His Excellency the Governor, but I know he is sending dispatches. And I sincerely hope (and I believe he does) that he is giving the United Kingdom the true picture because they can miss it. The reason I say that is because we are talking Constitution again—when we were talking it in 1991, I was over on that side and I was beat to pieces by the government of the day led by Mr. Truman Bodden. So, I know how these things go and I know that there was a collusion between the British Governor of the day, Mr. Michael Gore and the then government which did not allow the 1992 Constitution at all to be debated in this House. I do not know if the British know that, but that is a fact.

I worry what will happen out of this one and whether the British Government will be persuaded that a loud minority makes a difference. I have in my hand the Hansard report from that time and only [portions] of this reach this floor. So, I wonder what is happening. What I am saying is generally based on the concern of what will happen.

I know that the British Government has a responsibility to the United Nations and indeed they seem to be taking it seriously, at least, under the Labour Government . . . the White Paper, etc. One of the things that they have said is that there is to be a modernisation and the last Governor appointed Commissioners to do the job. I think they were able persons and I think they did the job well. While I disagree with some of their recommendations, I attended those meetings in three different districts and I heard people say, 'We want a definition for Caymanian and it must be Cayman, you have to put that there'. They said it and the Commissioners did it.

The fact that I disagree with that does not mean that I disagree with the fact that the Commissioners heard it and wrote it down. I disagree with it from a broader perspective because if we were to accept this—and I hope that the United Kingdom does not accept it. . . very strange for this nationalistic person to say, but we ourselves had taken steps to include more people living in our country under something called Caymanian status. So, I cannot rationalise how we suddenly say, 'I am a Caymanian but I exclude those that I created before'. It does not make sense to me. So, it is on those grounds that I disagree. It has to be sensible, rational, logical to me.

But I would not say that the Commissioners were not told that, because I heard that they told that in different districts when listening to the people. That is what this debate was supposed to be all about; that each one could give his view on this particular matter. But what happened instead? The previous Government that is now the Opposition, who was removed from the Majority and put in the Minority wants to find something to whip up the emotions of the public on. What has that come down to? The Government supposedly does not want the people to have a referendum.

Madam Speaker, the absurdity and again the ignorance of some of the population to understand that whether or not a Motion comes from the Government side or from the Opposition side, it has to be submitted to the Clerk who will duly stamp it and the Clerk must pass it on for the acceptance or rejection of the Speaker. I have had many [Motions] that I had to change. Mr. Speaker sends it back, 'I will not accept this in this form. Should you change it I will accept it'. And I moved dozens of Motions in my career here. That was the case and you, Madam Speaker, found defects in it and you told the two people who brought it to change it and resubmit it. Now, instead of doing that, look at the incredible, dirty thing that was done.

Out on the steps of our Legislative Assembly the First Elected Member for George Town, his henchman buddy and the rest of them called up the press, 'See here, look what they did to us, they would not accept our Motion, they do not want you the people to have a referendum'. It is despicable.

If the First and Second Elected Members of George Town and the Member from North Side wanted to have a Motion in this House to debate referendum, all they had to do was to correct the Motion and resubmit it. Why was that not done? You know why Madam Speaker and Honourable Members? They did not want to do it; they wanted to do exactly what they did and they had so many friends who joined the fray. That seriously angers me and disturbs me because it is wrong. What bothers me even more is that there seems to be so many people in the public who do not even understand how they have been used. It really disturbs me.

I have been an Opposition Member for the most part of my time in this House and whoever followed it over the years knew that as sure as the name Gilbert McLean went on a Motion it was going to be rejected by the Government. It was a joke! It could have been something that would have told us about a ladder going to heaven if my name was there it was going to be rejected. The record shows it but I knew the only way—and in some instances I was the only single Opposition Member in the House—that I could get across the view that I wanted was by getting a Motion so it could be discussed. What did it do? It forced the government to debate it. I had the opportunity to say I wanted to say even though the government shot it down. Did they want a Motion about referendum? No, they wanted to create a situation in the Cayman Islands where people, even overseas, believe that our parliamentary process is falling to pieces. And they, 'Poor, poor pitiful me'—that song by Linda Ronstadt—they are applying that lavishly to themselves.

What I guess 99 per cent of the country is not aware of is that there is already a provision in the Constitution for referendum. Madam Speaker, there is already provision in it to call for a referendum. So, all that was needed to bring a Motion for a referendum to this House was for those people to correct the Motion and bring it and it would have to be debated. It is section 29 of the amendments that came about in 1993.

I hear the First Elected Member for George Town who I understand is the declared interim Leader of the PPM says that how do we know what the majority is thinking. One minute he is saying that he and his colleagues absolutely have the word of the majority and then he is questioning his own statement. Which one of us can say we know what is the view of the majority? Well, which one is it? Do you have it or do you not know it. It is very typical of that Member's political posture. The posture of the Opposition is: 'We do not have any opinion, we want to know your opinion'. Well, if they do not have an opinion about something as important as the Constitution why are they there? Are they really serving the people? The people voted them in because they believe they knew about the Constitution, et cetera, and could indeed put forward views unassisted by the public on every issue. They do not have any view on the Constitution.

Of all these recommendations made by the Commissioners they could only find six. They do not have any view about single membership constituencies or about continuing things the way they are. What kind of people are they? The kind of people who are now creating in this society a degree of unrest and uncertainty and it is not even helping them—some of them have business interests—because an uncertain population does not help anyone.

Talking about majority: Who is the majority; who has the majority; what is the majority view? I have heard statements like, 'Why don't we call a referendum and put this to rest once and for all'. I have heard it on the radio and read it in the papers and heard it espoused by some of these people in the media. Does a referendum put things to rest once and for all? A referendum is like a poll that runs in similar lines as an election. But let us say they put the question of the Speaker's job to a referendum and 51 per cent says that it should be someone from the outside. Does it mean that the 49 per cent were wrong? Or, what would be the view three months later when something happens, would it be the very same view? Not necessarily so. That is what 'gallop polls' are about. People's thinking and things change daily, weekly, monthly, yearly as the case may be. Circumstances drive it and the circumstances that are driving all of the 'hullabaloo' right now is that these people who do not have a view are able to [influence] certain people in this country to believe we here are stopping them from having a referendum.

Madam Speaker, it is quite incredible; it is deception that is afoot. I was not on the Island when the big announcement came out in the papers but I came back to see a front page—and the media accommodated it—'This is not a political party Bobo, this is a political movement'. This is a political organisation'. Whoever heard foolishness like a political movement inside of a Parliament? You can have a political organisation but the only type of political organisations that Parliament understands and regard is a Party. That is the universal word for it. 'But we are not a political Party, we are a Movement'. It is all deception and it is amazing how many people can be deceived. Why is that being used? I suggest that it is being used because the people of that Movement are trying again to play with the minds of the unknowing that parties are those bad things that happen in Jamaica. 'And you know, everything that happened in Jamaica is going to happen to us'. That is exactly what it is about.

You see political meetings in the middle of town on the steps of the Court House where elected Members get up and say they are proud to be a Right Winger. I wonder if they have any clue about the things that are attached to those terms. I do not believe so. When you are an extremist Right Winger it means that you are a racist; you are everything. They use words and they do not even know. I hope they do not know what the implications attached to them are. They choose some real psychological places though. When it is not the steps of Parliament it is the Court House. It frightens me.

Madam Speaker, if the Opposition wanted a referendum they could have had a referendum by bringing the Motion. And if, like they said originally, their people told them not to come to the Legislative Assembly because it would have been a slap in their faces, they have some peculiar ways of thinking. The cost to the country for this month for those five Members who do not slap the people in the face by not even coming and planting themselves in those chairs is $36,970. I wonder what they are doing now. I wonder where they are now. Like the saying, 'Parents do you know where your children are?' This is the cost to the country.

As for the Checklist that they are talking about that Checklist was but for our guidance as legislators and indeed the Commissioners. This section 18 that supposedly has driven them to the lengths that they cannot grace the people of this country—and I hope they understand that it is more than their people that are paying taxes and paying them—where it says, “Do the changes suggested by the OT Government have the support of the majority of the population?” Personally, I would say yes because I think the Commissioners discovered what was the majority view. They did not do any referendum either but certainly they went to every 'nook and cranny' in this place. They even put out what could be considered a questionnaire in the newspaper that you could fill in and send back. “What is the evidence of such support?” The Commissioners have stated the number of persons that they interviewed who came to them; who sent in the questionnaires; who met them in every district over nine months. Now, when we are supposed to be debating this to move it forward to send it to England suddenly we must have a referendum. What a real sad situation. “Has there been 'extensive' local consultation (with or without the assistance of Constitutional Commissioners or Commission . . .)” There has been extensive consultation with the Commissioners, with us the Members of Government. And if we are to believe the Opposition, they too. “. . . Followed by a debate in the legislature in which the suggested changes have been approved by a Motion”. Indeed the Motion is here. It is a 'take note' Motion and that was the amendment that the Leader of Government Business moved so that we all have the opportunity to debate and take note of it. If they wanted to have a Motion where something is adopted or approved then had they stayed around they might have had that.

Madam Speaker, I support this Motion and I think it is a very serious time in this country when those of us in Government worry about the revenues of the country; worry that we are feeling the effects of the slump around the world, in our tourism; worried that we cannot sustain the level of unemployment among our people. Some of them are getting off on whether the Speaker of the Legislative Assembly must be chosen from the outside or from the inside or be a Member of a Party. Or, whether or not the people should initiate a referendum. England says no! So, what am I to do? We have no power to do otherwise. If as long as we say that our political condition in our Constitution is what it is and that is the way we want it then that is what we get—as simple as that.

In these instructions to the Commissioners the British made it very clear that in making any recommendations or changes, it cannot affect the power, which they themselves, by law, must hold and wield directly and through their Governor. So, what are we supposed to do? What we are supposed to do is what the Government has done today, which was agreed by all 18 Members of this House: to come here today on the 19 June to debate this matter and to send our views to the United Kingdom. I am very glad to see that there are Members in this House who take that duty seriously and I certainly stand with them. I support the amendment, which has been requested by this Motion and when the time comes to vote for it I most surely will.

The Speaker: Thank you, Honourable Minister. Does any other Member wish to speak to the amended Motion? The Honourable Minister responsible for Education.

Hon. Roy Bodden: Madam Speaker, I wish to register a few comments on this amended Motion and in so doing I will try my best to avoid repeating arguments that have already been excellently articulated by my colleagues who preceded me.

Before I get into that I wish to indulge your attention to raise a concern. That concern is, from the time I have been here I have never seen this kind of politics in the Cayman Islands. If God spares my life, the year 2004 will be sixteen years since I have been a Sitting Member. I have seen many wars including 1990, the period that we call the 'dirty war' but I have never seen this kind of confrontational politics where people insist on involving and bringing people in from the streets upsetting the country; taking advantage of their position, and the trust people have placed in them. We contained our differences within these Chambers and even when there was reason for protest the protest lasted only as long as was necessary. There was no barbarous whipping up the people and bringing them day after day platooning them. I am registering my concern because I am worried about this trend. These things have a beginning and I do not like what I am witnessing.

The debate; the question; the issue; the amendment is straightforward. I have to say that the Opposition by exercising its choice to boycott this session has committed a serious abdication of responsibility to the very people they claim to represent, and I hope that those people take note. For debates of this nature are not carried on at the Seaview or the Sunset House, they are carried on in this Chamber. If the people's representatives are not in this Chamber when they are supposed to debate then the people's voices, expressions and positions cannot be recorded.

I would think that any reasonable person would understand the reason we cannot vote on the matter is because there are elements in the Review that we agree with but there are elements with which we do not agree. If we vote yea or nay we will be boxing ourselves into an unfavourable position. Therefore, the most logical position to take is the position where we take note and register our agreement with the things which we can agree and register our disagreement with the things which we are not prepared to accept—that is elementary.

Is the Opposition by their absence saying that they do not wish to take part in this debate? Are they saying they considerate it inconsequential, irrelevant, and unimportant? Or, are they saying that their absence is a downright contempt for Parliament and the procedure? They will have to explain that to the people whom they claim to represent. I notice that at some stage in the First Elected Member for George Town contribution that he clearly and unequivocally claimed to be representing the majority of the people. I hope those people hold him to account.

This exercise is so important that we should not sacrifice our long-term objectives for the short-term glamour of a false success. This exercise is not about who can have the greatest number of people demonstrating before the Glass House. It is not about who can bring the largest number of people to the galleries of the Legislative Assembly. It is not about who can bring eminent speakers from independent countries to advise on Constitutions. It is about, honestly and conscientiously, seeking to accede to the wishes of the Caymanian people as to what is best for them. But in so doing we have to recognise that the Government must always—because that is what the Westminster White Hall system of democracy is predicated upon—maintain the ability to govern. The government must always be in a position to exercise its majority. Under the Westminster White Hall system the sanction that the Government faces is that the next poll if they run into disfavour they will be turned out from office. But the Government cannot be intimidated by the Opposition; the Government cannot be manipulated by the Opposition; the Government cannot accede to the unreasonable wishes of the Opposition in all cases. The Government must exercise its majority and this Government has not only been exercising its majority but it has been exercising conscientiousness, honesty and diligence. We must not be intimidated by duplicity.

Clearly this exercise started a long time ago and when it originated the present Government had a different Leader who is the First Elected Member for George Town who purports to be the interim Leader of the People's Progressive Movement [the Opposition]. That gentleman was the same gentleman who moved the Motion calling for the implementation of a referendum law. Now, the question I wish to pose is this: If that gentleman's intentions towards establishing some mechanism for a referendum in this country were so genuine why then did he not follow through when he was Leader of the Government; commanding the majority to have a clear and unequivocal instrument calling for a referendum; implement it as a law in the country?

The second question is: When his Motion was tendered and the Honourable Speaker suggested that it could not be accepted in the form in which it was submitted, but would have been readily accepted had it been modified, why was it not modified to accommodate the wishes of the Speaker so that it could be accepted as an instrument of debate in the Legislative Assembly?

Madam Speaker, you know what I do not like? I do not like Jekyll and Hyde personalities. I do not like people who blow hot and blow cold, and I do not like people who do not know whether they are fish or fowl. I fail to see now how certain people can arise as champions of referendum when they had two clear chances of doing what could have been done. You know what is true? This whole business is not about referendum. If you get to the bottom of it, it has little or no basis even in the Review of the Constitutional Commissioners. This whole business is about power! It is about leadership! It is about who should be here and should not be here. I could tell you—if would not be such an exposé—what it has its other basis in and it is obvious for all to see.

I hear some people threatening, 'Two years . . . all they have is two years'. Madam Speaker, if men were angels there would be no need for government. And that is what Alexander Hamilton, one of the founding fathers of the United States, had to say. I do not think any Member on this side, whether he is a Minister or supporter of the Ministers or Members of the UDP, is afraid to face the polls.

I say again, we cannot sacrifice the long-term objectives of giving this country a modern instrument of government as per the wishes of the United Kingdom as expressed in the Partnership for Progress (the White Paper as we call it) for the short-term glamour of a false success to accommodate any ambitious leader who blew his chance of leadership.

Madam Speaker, there is no other way for us to deal with this Motion than the root upon which this amendment sets us. But I want to say something else too: While the Opposition is successful in distracting the national attention by telling them that we must have a referendum the Government is occupied with trying to keep the economy of this country on a sound footing.

We are facing for the first time serious unemployment. Construction is just now beginning to show some signs of coming back to life. I do not hear the Opposition with any alternate plan of ensuring continuing economic progress. I do not hear them with any plans for employing the young people who are now graduating, returning from studies abroad. I do not hear them with any plan of how the Government can kick-start the economy by embarking on any Public Works project that is going to bring money into the country for the local people. I do not hear them with any plan of incentives for attracting outside investments. I only hear them challenging the Government and encouraging people to vote with their feet trying to topple the Government before its natural term of office is up. It is the height of irresponsibility. It is nothing but a power play. Their intentions are not honourable. I say this without fear of successful contradiction.

We shall have to ask ourselves when the chickens have come home to roost whether this behaviour that the Opposition has embarked upon—and is insistent upon perpetuating from one end of this country to the next and onto Cayman Brac and Little Cayman—is in the best interest of the development of this country. Or, whether we are doing ourselves a great disservice and a great disservice by introducing into Caymanian politics an element that has hitherto never been experienced. We are on the threshold of garrison politics! Because I have never seen such a relentless display of power and arrogance, and such a promotion of hatred in all of my time in this Legislative Assembly. Madam Speaker, I am saying that if it is not curbed it will lead us down the path to which we should not go.

I stand by this amendment; I believe that what the United Democratic Party Government is doing is in the best interest of the country at this time; I believe it is in keeping with the wishes of the United Kingdom; it is completely legal; it is parliamentary; it is democratic. If the Opposition wanted to display maturity and responsibility they should be here now listening to the Government Bench and coming up with a counter argument, so that their position is recorded in the Hansard of this House and people who they claim are in the majority could be sure that they are being represented.

It is the first time in the history of the Parliament of this country that a boycott of this nature on such an important issue has been carried out. It is cowardice but I believe the reason why they are not here is because they do not have a solution. And all they are harping upon is the numbers of people behind them. Might is not always right! And they may have a very vocal minority but I remain to be convinced that they have the majority. I know the constituency from which I come have always exercised sound judgement. My people call me every day to say that they are sensible and discriminating and that they are worried about the path that some people would have us embark upon.

I give my support to this amendment and I give my pledge to always put the interest of the people first as I have always done. I believe that all of us in the Government of the United Democratic Party have exercised judiciousness, responsibility, democracy and respect. I will encourage my colleagues to continue to do that but I—and I crave the licence of my colleagues to include them at this time—will be no part of destroying this country with an element of politics that hitherto have not made its presence known in these good Cayman Islands. Thank you.

The Speaker: Thank you, Honourable Minister. Does any other Member wish to debate the amendment? If not I will now call on the Mover should he wish to exercise his right of reply, the Honourable Leader of Government Business.

Hon. W. McKeever Bush: Thank you very much Madam Speaker.

I want to thank all Members for participating in this debate thus far. Because the original Motion is intended to be amended which would really give me four chances to speak I do not intend speaking for so long at this point. However, the PPM debate a while ago was so 'wishy washy' that the vast majority of it does not deserve to be replied to.

I must speak on some areas, in particular the matter of why we amended the Motion. The original Motion, which was amended, was talked about by the First Elected Member from George Town and Leader of the PPM. I know other Members have spoken about it here on our side but let me repeat: Had I left the Motion as was originally planned I would have had to reject the Commissioners' Report totally or adopt it totally. We could not do that because we agreed with certain parts and disagreed with other parts. Besides that, we here in this House have no power to amend the Report.

We, as Elected Members, will have an opportunity to accept it or reject it when the United Kingdom, Her Majesty's Government, has put a new Constitution before us. But outside of that we have no power to do otherwise.

The First Elected Member from George Town and Leader of the PPM talked for a long time about referendum. I too want to say that no one could ever say that you are unfair because that Member really debated the Motion that they had originally planned. But you gave them the widest latitude to do as he did. Other Ministers and Members, including myself, here have congratulated those genuine persons who thought it necessary to sign a petition. That is people's right if they so choose so I have no problem whatsoever with that. However, I do have a problem with the PPM who saw a referendum as their way out of tabling their position in this House. I have a problem too with those persons who misled people around the country on this matter of a referendum.

Madam Speaker, we must all remember that no one on this side started that Review. It came about because of the new government in the United Kingdom (the Labour Government) with their publication of the much-touted White Paper (Partnership for Progress and Prosperity). And it comes about, I believe, because of the United Kingdom's great responsibilities to the International Treaties that they are signed on to. Being part of the European Union they are all embroiled in that Union. So, they initiated the need for modernisation of the Constitution and a modernisation of the entire Government including the Civil Service.

Madam Speaker, last year when the Governor appointed the Review Commissioners, I, as Deputy Leader at the time, did not know who had been appointed. But I can tell you that at all material times the First Member from George Town, who was then the Leader of Government Business, knew who the Governor was going to appoint. As I said yesterday, none of them voted for McKeeva: none of them were on any of our platforms. And so the First Member from George Town was well embroiled in the whole aspect of getting this Constitution reviewed. You did not hear 'quey hey' about it because he was going to be the all powerful person that they claim; he was in the driver's seat; he was going to be the Chief Minister and there was nothing wrong with that. You did not need a referendum—he suddenly forgot about the Referendum Law that he should have brought during the course of the year . . . as he said this morning he forgot about it . . . he forgot about it. Madam Speaker, people must be truthful. When they take a position they must stand up to that position and say to the country, 'Ladies and gentlemen of the Cayman Islands this is what I stand for'. And the day that you cannot do that you should get out of politics; you should get out and cease being a representative of the people.

What I do not appreciate with the whole referendum effort is that the PPM is telling people now that, 'Look it is not my effort you know, this is the people's effort, we are doing what the people want and we did not start this, the people started it'. That is the biggest lie that has ever been told in this country! Because all the movers and shakers of the 'majority'—those who came with those wheel barrows; People for Referendum, from West Bay to Cayman Brac—are all part and parcel, if not members of the PPM.

What I did not appreciate was when they went around to people, for instance in West Bay and said 'You can sign this, it is not about Mac [McKeeva] this is about independence so we want you to sign this'. Of course, at the time I was off the Island trying to take care of some business that the former Leader—which I am going to talk about later on—should have done. But had I been here in my constituency they would not have gotten away so easily because the people would have been more active. It was definitely wrong for the PPM to tell the public that everyone could sign this kind of petition, a petition which depends so heavily on being constitutionally correct. They (PPM) knew that only people on the electoral list would be counted in this instance. They also knew that if people signed the petition they would feel that their names must count. But this is not a game as the Minister for Education said. This is not a game that you play in a bar room or around a domino table. This is a most serious business.

The Opposition knew that children could not sign the petition because it is not legal. They knew that tourists could not sign the petition because it is not legal for persons that have no right to vote to be involved. They knew that, but did they try to tell the people that? Of course not. The only aim and objective of the PPM and the Leader is to get people worked up; put their names on the paper and then feel committed against the Government. That is the aim of the Leader of the Opposition. The only aim and objective of the PPM is to get the people worked up and then feel committed to them (the PPM) as an alternative.

I believe there are genuine people who believe a referendum is the way. But how can you go out and take a vote on so many issues? It is not practical and it would have been better if the Opposition had done their job and explained that and put the position before the people of the country.

I do not support the referendum but the truth is, the Member leading that group had time last year to bring the law. And since he asked: For one, when Truman Bodden was the Leader he should have done so. But you see, Madam Speaker, that is how they operate; criticise; whip up and say all manner of things as he is doing now when he is not in the position. But when he could have done it if it meant so much to him, he failed to do it—he did not remember—conveniently did not remember.

Madam Speaker, it is a poor situation for them. I have also been listening very keenly to what was said and is still being said about the Constitutional Review. There have been many valid points made but I sincerely wish that a higher ground had been taken by the Opposition. I wish they had taken the time to educate, to put forward their views on issues and questions and to explain to the people. However, they did no such thing for the vast majority of the time. Rather they just took a position that says the people need time. Well, we agreed on that too that the people needed more time but they still did not put their position. They then brought in someone from an independent country to tell them how an independent country works because he could not tell them out of experience how Overseas Territories and dependent countries work. He is the Leader of the Opposition in Barbados, which is an independent country.

Instead of educating and correcting, where they know that people are not drifting in the right direction, what I have been hearing, Madam Speaker, and I also read in the paper by the Leader of the Opposition who is now absent is, 'Oh that McKeeva Bush is arrogant'. The Leader of the Opposition says that I have taken a high-handed approach and that there is victimisation. Then you hear them talk about dictator.

I do not tout or blow my own horn because everyone knows McKeeva and anything bad that they could say about me they have said. And I also believe they have said as much good as they want about me. But just let me say this is my fifth term in this Legislative Assembly—an unbroken tenure unmatched by few in this country! Why? Because I have served the people honestly and I have done what I could for them at all times.

I challenge the First and Second Elected Members from George Town and their cohorts in this House or outside to say how much they have done for the country. I ask them to say when this Member has ever not done what the people asked me to do and what I have thought was in the best interest of all the people. I challenge anyone to say on what issue, subject or policy have I ever done the people wrong in this country.

The newspapers want something to write—that is something for them to question. Tell me when I have stood in this House or made policy outside to do people harm. The people in the Opposition making the accusation of arrogance should examine their own lives. Does it look like a dictator to agree on the boundaries commission of which the Leader of the Opposition, although he is not saying anything about it, would have equal power of appointment of Members of the Public Service Commission. No! Of course he would not do that; he would not want to draw any attention to himself because he does not want anyone to start asking him, 'Well, Mr. Tibbetts what are you going to do about it?' He will do about that what he did about the economy last year: Borrowed $55 million to slam it and would not take advice against what he was doing.

Is it dictatorial powers to make place for the appointment of the judicial Commission? If the United Democratic Party was trying to take away power from any situation . . . well what about those sections of the Constitution, which are in fact, some of the major clauses in the Constitution? And, Madam Speaker, save but one, the Leader of the Opposition has the power to appoint Members to all of them just the same as the Chief Minister would. Did you hear him come and educate the public on his powers as Leader of the Opposition? No. He spends a lot of time talking about the powers of the Chief Minister and blowing them out of proportion. They have spent time scare-mongering, trying to make people believe that something is wrong and something bad will happen if the modernisation of the Constitution takes place.

The Review certainly gives the Chief Minister less powers than the last review. For instance, there is no appointment of magistrates and judges as was in the last review. They are just blowing things out of proportion and it is all because they are not there now. They have been accusing us of victimisation—victimisation against whom? You mean because some people's little kingdom was pulled apart? It was not doing the country any good. But I challenge the Opposition here today, each of them, to say what or whom in this country has been victimised. I challenge them. The day that they name someone then perhaps more will be exposed than they want.

I have always acted in the best interest of the Cayman Islands. They talk about high-handed manner: have we not all agreed on the things the public asked for, which is more time?

The Speaker: Honourable Leader, it is now 6 pm. Is it your desire to continue the debate or would you wish the adjournment at this time as we originally decided.

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: Madam Speaker, I do have a few areas left and perhaps I might do it in 10 minutes but I do not think I could do it otherwise.

The Speaker: I am in a position that I can stay as long as the House is desirous. Is it the general consensus that we continue until the question is put on the amended Motion this afternoon? Please proceed accordingly.

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: Madam Speaker, thank you very much and I thank the Honourable Members for continuing.

I do not know anything about being high-handed because we as Ministers cannot just get up and do things. We have the Civil Service to go through and we have His Excellency the Governor to go through when it comes to civil service matters and departmental matters. Now, there will be accusations but the truth is what counts and not what some people get on the 'Talk Show' and talk about. I do not know anything about high-handedness, but I can tell this country that because of the bungled incompetence of the last Leader of Government Business the present Leader and the Government are spending a lot of time and money trying to fix situations to put the Cayman Islands in good standing. Because of his inaction and incompetence for one year, it will cost this country plenty and has done irreparable damage to this country's financial industry. He did not know what to do. You could not tell him anything and he would not listen to the Financial Secretary.

The European Tax saving initiative is being forced down on us. The Government before knew about it from 1999 and they did nothing about the Union's decision, which is now causing the European Union Tax Saving initiative to be forced on us. If the then Leader of Government Business in November 2000-2001, the First Member from George Town, had done what he was supposed to do when he was made aware of it sometime last year, and had he sent the letter that was given to him, we would be in the same position as Bermuda in the matter—not being affected. The decision does not apply to them because they asked to be left out.

Yet he as the Leader of the PPM had the audacity; has the nerve; the shamelessness to make accusations against us. This country will suffer because he did not know what to do and would not listen. He had no initiative. The European Union OCT decision will affect this country in many ways to our detriment.

The difference between my capability and style, and his, is that I know what to do and will take advice from my colleagues and take direction from the people in charge of the areas that are not under me.

Madam Speaker, while all that has happened we are not going to roll over and play dead. This Government will find a way. I am talking about a draft letter to the Baroness Scotland that was given to the then Leader of Government Business last year. He did not sign it nor did he send it. It was critical at that time to register our concerns and our position as the matter was going to be concluded by August last year. He did not do anything and today we must now fight this issue.

Just let me tell this country how serious it is: Added to the administrative burdens of our financial industry to collect the necessary information to give effect to the taxation of savings directive, giving an advantage to our competitors, it will affect not only banks but mutual funds, administrators, the insurance industry and other areas of our financial industry. It is a most wide-ranging effect of our financial industry. Now, I, along with my colleagues, have our advisory council trying to deal with it. And we hope to prevail, as I said, we are not going to roll over and die. They talk about my style but as I said, I will take advice and when I believe I have the right advice I will move and that is what I did.

I was in Brussels and found out what the position on what is happening. As you know, Madam Speaker, you being part of the delegation that went to London, we are facing hard times and that is why I keep saying we are here arguing and spending time talking about a few fire ants while the elephants are trampling us.

I sat here listening to the Leader of the PPM saying how he is doing what the people want and that we must have a referendum. I have to ask the people of this country if the First Elected Member from George Town truly believes what he said why then did he (last year) preside over a position of putting this country into further debt of $60 million for Cayman Airways? Why did he not go for a referendum then? Why did he not? Why? Much is being said about the referendum but do they really want a referendum, or are they trying to build membership for the PPM?

I believe that this country must have an Opposition but it must be a responsible Opposition; it must offer constructive leadership; it should not be capricious and opportunistic. What we are seeing today it seems like the duty of Opposition is to oppose. And it seems that this Opposition has that as their first duty; as their second duty; their third duty and right down the line—their duty to oppose. But you tell me what have they done for this country. You tell me the plans that they have put forward to rectify some of the problems in this country. What kinds of plans are they coming up with to deal with the issues that we are facing? They cannot. They know the issues are there but you know what? That is one of the reasons why they want this argument on the Constitution to continue because that would take pre-eminence in this country.

But this Government is not going to allow that to happen. We must put it to rest so that the United Kingdom can deal with it. It will come back to us and we will have our say at some point. The Government will seek permission for that to happen.

Madam Speaker, there is no doubt the Constitution is important but the Review is not asking for independence. My greatest concern by far is not about the Constitution and a referendum, least of all. My over-riding concern is about the economy; saving people's businesses; getting our people back to work; getting them jobs; saving our financial industry; getting good investors here; getting our housing scheme in place. The scare tactics that the Opposition and the extreme protest that they are employing is designed to stop the impetus that has begun in turning around our economy and any duck worth its salt should appreciate that.

I too want to decry the campaign of hate that the leaders of the PPM and some of their followers are employing. It is most serious but I think it is wrong to suggest something is happening when it is not—to attack by misrepresentation as they have been doing to Elected Members' families in the press. Those are all signs of a desperate attempt to get power in their hands. Surely, these are signs and methods of the kinds of systems that all good men and women must condemn. Would to God that the people had a more responsible Opposition!

All this racket that the Opposition is causing is not about the people as they say. At the meetings by the Court House steps by the Opposition, the Second Elected Member from George Town said to the people and I quote, “You must take back the power they took from you last year”. I repeat that: “You must take back the power they took from you last year”. Now, Madam Speaker, what are they talking about? That is the ‘crux of the matter’. That is the problem with the Opposition. Their Leader was disastrously ineffective and incapable of dealing with the problems of the Cayman Islands. He is good in Opposition but he will not and cannot deal with the problems of this country! He is incapable of doing so. Government was getting no where so he was moved and that is the power that the Second Elected Member from George Town says was lost last year and must be gotten back.

This is not about referendum or about the people. It is not! It is an age-old problem with some people here in this country where they do not want the shades of Linford Pierson; or McKeeva Bush; or Gilbert McLean; or Roy Bodden; or Dr. Frank McField to be here and direct policy! I have had to put up with it all of my life. As long as I was pulling someone's bag McKeeva was the best person in this world but the day that I got up and said I want a pension for the people of this country; the day that I got up and said that I want a labour law for the people of this country; the day that I got up and said that I want housing for the people of this country then he was a bad person.

This is not about referendum. This is not about the people. It is about that group losing their seats on Executive Council and it is because of their friends no longer being able to come to the Glass House—and do you know that some of them are calling, 'Well, Mr. Kurt you cannot let that happen'.

I said what?

'Who is this?'

'This is Mr. McKeeva Bush, the Minister of Tourism.

'Oh I am sorry, we thought it was the Leader of Government Business'.

Madam Speaker, I do not victimise anyone. I have put my political career in standing up for what I believe is right for the people of this country, and I will not do things to satisfy a group who really are not concerned about whether we have a Chief Minister. They are concerned about who is the Chief Minister. That is what their concern is.

If the Opposition, in particular the Leader, had put as much effort last year into doing the things that the country needed as he is putting negatively into this issue, the Cayman Islands would be much better off today. I can say to them that unfortunately there are international issues and policies bearing down on us which demand the Government's and the country's focused attention. Otherwise, we do not have the luxury of debating local government issues for such an extended time such as the timing of the Constitution. Or, for any of the causes they have asked.

Look at the things . . . is that what we are here having to go through this extended debate about? Those few things? What about the bigger picture; those issues that we have raised? And I say again, it is not about a referendum, it is about people that had control and do not have it now and they are not prepared to wait until 2004 to see whether or not they have another opportunity. They want to disrupt the working machinery of Government at this time but we will not bend because while he was elected all of us were elected. He is no different and he did not have any more prerogative of being there than any one of us. Now we are trying to get a system that will stop what happened in 2000. When they offered the [position of] Speaker and said listen, 'I have been in the Assembly for five terms now, I do not want to go in the Speaker's seat, not now. I want to be able to complete an agenda for the people'. Even though it is one of the highest positions in the country and a very meaningful one. But that is what it is all about for them. I am not about power. I am about getting things done for people and doing good for people.

How can any Member of this House get up and talk for so long on such an important matter and not put forward their position? Do they have a position on the Constitution? Or, are they only interested in getting people against the United Democratic Party? I have seen it before and I say it again: The people who burn down the fire station are those who stand on the sidewalk saying 'Where is the government and what is the government doing about it?'

Madam Speaker, I know I have been longer than the 10 minutes and I had better stop at this time. I want to thank all Members for this historic debate and we are not going to fail the Cayman Islands. This is for the long term good of the people of these Islands whom we all love. Because this is where our ancestors come from. This is where their bones lie and this is where we want our bones to lie—here in these Cayman Islands!

Thank you very much.

The Speaker: Thank you, Honourable Leader. I shall now put the question that Government Motion be duly amended as is set out in paragraphs 1 and 2, the varied form of effect would be, "BE IT RESOLVED THAT the Honourable Legislative Assembly debates and take note of the Report of the Constitutional Modernisation Review Commissioners 2002."

All those in favour please say Aye. Those against, No.

Ayes.

The Speaker: The Ayes have it. The amendment is carried and the Motion stands amended accordingly.

Agreed. That the Government Motion be duly amended as set out in paragraphs (i) and (ii). The varied form of the effect being "Be it resolved that this Honourable Legislative Assembly debates and takes note of the Report of the Constitutional Modernisation Review Commissioners 2002."

The Speaker: May I now have the Motion for the adjournment?

ADJOURNMENT

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: Madam Speaker, I move the adjournment of this Honourable House until 10 am tomorrow, Friday, 21 June 2002.

The Speaker: The question is that the Honourable House is now adjourned until Friday, 21 June at 10 am. All those in favour please say Aye. Those against, No.

Ayes.

The Speaker: The Ayes have it.

At 6:22 pm the House stood adjourned until 10 am Friday, 21 June 2002.

OFFICIAL HANSARD REPORT
FRIDAY
21 JUNE 2002
11.53 AM
Fifth Sitting

The Speaker: May I invite the Honourable Minister responsible for Planning, Communications, Works and Information Technology to say prayers.

PRAYERS

Hon. Linford A. Pierson: Let us pray.

Almighty God, from whom all wisdom and power are derived; We beseech Thee so to direct and prosper the deliberations of the Legislative Assembly now assembled, that all things may be ordered upon the best and surest foundations for the glory of Thy Name and for the safety, honour and welfare of the people of these Islands.

Bless our Sovereign Lady, Queen Elizabeth II; Philip, Duke of Edinburgh; Charles, Prince of Wales; and all the Royal family. Give grace to all who exercise authority in our Commonwealth, that peace and happiness, truth and justice, religion and piety may be established among us. Especially we pray for the Governor of our Islands, the Speaker of the Legislative Assembly, Official Members and Ministers of Executive Council and Members of the Legislative Assembly that we may be enabled faithfully to perform the responsible duties of our high office.

All this we ask for Thy Great Name's sake.

Let us say the Lord's Prayer together:

Our Father who art in Heaven, Hallowed be Thy Name, Thy Kingdom come, Thy will be done, on earth as it is in Heaven. Give us this day our daily bread, and forgive us our trespasses, as we forgive those who trespass against us. And lead us not into temptation, but deliver us from evil. For Thine is the Kingdom, the power and the glory, forever and ever. Amen.

The Lord bless us and keep us. The Lord make His face shine upon us and be gracious unto us. The Lord lift up the light of His countenance upon us and give us peace now and always. Amen.

The Speaker: Please be seated. Proceedings are resumed.

ADMINISTRATION OF OATHS
OR AFFIRMATIONS

The Speaker: I will now invite the Honourable Temporary First Official Member [responsible for the Portfolio of Internal and External Affairs] to come to the dais.

Oath of Allegiance

Donovan W. F. Ebanks

Mr. Donovan W. F. Ebanks: I, Donovan W. F. Ebanks, do swear that I will be faithful and bear true allegiance to Her Majesty Queen Elizabeth II, her heirs and successors according to law, so help me God.

The Speaker: On behalf of this Honourable House I welcome you once again the Honourable Temporary First Official Member, and I invite you to take your seat at this time.

READING BY THE HONOURABLE
SPEAKER OF MESSAGES
AND ANNOUNCEMENTS

Apologies

The Speaker: I have received apologies from the Third Elected Member from the district of Bodden Town who is still off the Island with his wife for medical reasons.

I have also received a letter from the Parliamentary Opposition giving apologies -

“Dear Madam,

“This is to advise that as publicly stated and reiterated on the floor of the Legislative Assembly, the Members of the Parliamentary Opposition will not participate in the ongoing debate on the Constitutional Commissioners' Report and will not attend the current meeting while that debate is underway. Our colleague, Mr Anthony Eden, is off the Island and has already conveyed his apologies to you. We would be grateful if you would direct the Clerk to advise us when the debate on the Constitutional Commissioners' Report has concluded in order that we may participate in the Other Business of the House scheduled for this meeting.

Yours faithfully,
D. Kurt Tibbetts, JP
Edna Moyle, JP
Arden McLean
Alden McLaughlin”.

STATEMENTS BY MEMBERS OF THE GOVERNMENT

Petition made by certain group employees of the Public Works Department regarding vacation pay and the change made to their workweek in 2001 from 44 hours to 40 hours

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for planning.

Hon. Linford A. Pierson: Thank you, Madam Speaker.

As a result of a petition made by certain group employees of the Public Works Department (PWD) in regards to vacation pay and the change made to their work week in 2001 from 44 hours to 40 hours, I would like to make the following statement:

In 2002, the practice of advancing vacation salary to PWD Group Employees at the pay period just prior to their vacation was discontinued. This was done as part of the shift to the Integrated Resources Information System (commonly known as the IRIS accounting system) over the past two years, and it has resulted in significant increases in inefficiencies in the payroll unit within the PWD Accounts Division.

The new procedure ensures that employees' salaries are banked on a regular basis, similar to monthly employees, both while the employee is at work and also during vacation periods. And any authorised deductions and/or payments to financial institutions are made on time without disruption. When an employee's vacation salary is advanced all at one pay-period, financial institutions must be notified so that authorised deductions and payments may be made at that time. Or, there is the possibility that the deduction or payments due during the vacation period will not be made, and will therefore be late, after the employee returns from vacation.

PWD Management also sees the new procedure as one that assists group employees to better manage their finances. Under the old practice, at the pay period just prior to leaving, an employee going on four weeks vacation would receive six weeks pay at the pay period just before leaving, and the next pay period for that employee would be seven weeks later, three weeks after returning from vacation.

Madam Speaker, following objection to the new procedure from a number of Public Works Department employees in the form of a petition, the Ministry of Works and the Public Works Department Management have agreed to revert to the previous procedure of advancing vacation salary at the pay-period prior to vacation.

The changes in group employees workweeks from 44 hours to 40 hours was as a result of Personnel Circular #4 of 2000 issued in May 2000. This was to bring all group employees working hours in line with General Orders 19.10, which states: "The normal working week shall be one of 40 hours. An employing officer may arrange hours of work in accordance with the need of the service".

All Government Departments have adjusted their group employee work weeks to conform with General Orders 19.10, with the Public Works Department being the last. Public Works completed their exercise in 2001. Public Works group employees were awarded 2 increments to compensate for the reduction in their work week.

Thank you, Madam Speaker.

The Speaker: Thank you, Honourable Minister.

GOVERNMENT BUSINESS

Suspension of Standing Order 24(5)

The Speaker: It is my understanding that the Honourable Deputy Leader, Minister of Planning has a Motion to submit at this time.

Hon. Linford A. Pierson: Thank you, Madam Speaker.

In accordance with the provisions of Standing Order 86, I seek to suspend Standing Order 24(5) to enable me to bring two Government Motions before the House, namely:

- (i) The Development and Planning (Amendment) (Height of Buildings) (No. 2) Regulations 2002; and
- (ii) The Building Code (Amendment) Regulations 2002.

Thank you, Madam Speaker.

The Speaker: I shall now put the question that Standing Order 24(5) be suspended to allow five clear days for the Government Motions to be submitted to this Honourable House. All those in favour please say Aye. Those against, No.

Ayes.

The Speaker: The Ayes have it. Accordingly Standing Order 24(5) is hereby suspended.

Agreed: Standing Order 24(5) suspended to allow five clear days for the Government Motions to be submitted to this Honourable House.

Amended Motion to Debate and Take Note of the Report of the Constitutional Modernisation Review Commissioners 2002

The Speaker: The Honourable Leader of Government Business and Minister for Tourism.

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: Thank you, Madam Speaker.

I beg to move the amended Motion, which reads as follows:- “BE IT RESOLVED THAT this Honourable Legislative Assembly debates and takes note of the Report of the Constitutional Modernisation Review Commissioners 2002.”

The Speaker: The Motion has been duly moved. The Motion is now open for debate. Does the Mover wish to speak thereto?

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: Thank you, Madam Speaker.

I beg to lay on the Table of this Honourable House the Position Paper of the United Democratic Party (UDP) on the Report of the Constitutional Modernisation Review Commissioners 2002, and Draft Constitution for the Cayman Islands.

The Speaker: So ordered. Please continue Honourable Leader.

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: Thank you very much, Madam Speaker.

Having laid on the Table of this Honourable House the Position paper, I will now read that paper into the records of the Legislative Assembly.

The Speaker: Please proceed accordingly.

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: Madam Speaker, as Members know, when the Report was laid on the Table of this Honourable House by the Chief Secretary in April, we then proceeded to hold public meetings in every district where we informed the public on the various points of the Review. And we also informed the public on what our position is. Certainly, at each of those meetings we listened to the views of the people in attendance.

As we went from district to district we revised our position according to what we were hearing from the people in the districts. We also met with various groups including the senior class from one of the schools. At those meetings it was clear to us what the people were saying about various issues.

In the district of Cayman Brac (where it was proposed to cut Cayman Brac in two) I can say that we had what I thought was a tremendous turn out in the Ashton Ruttly Centre. In fact, every single person in that meeting said, unreservedly, that they did not support the Constitutional Review on the suggestion for single Member constituencies. They did not support Cayman Brac being split in two. As I went from district to district that was the same message we received. As far back as 1986 or 1987 in the district of West Bay I had opposition to the same idea. The people did not support single Member constituencies.

It is worthy to note that the Opposition seems to have found the same problem in Cayman Brac. Ac-ording to the news report they said that they would try to do something different for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman. So, if you support for instance, single Member constituencies, how then are you going to deal with Cayman Brac and Little Cayman? Except to either agree with them in not instituting it or going against their wishes and putting it in place. I thought I would say for the record that we have gone through every district and we have held meetings that have been well attended. We have received a tremendous amount of input from the public, not only at those meetings, but also through letters.

Pastors of certain churches have complained about the Bill of Rights. They want to safeguard the churches' position and of course, we agreed with them. We make reference to that and also put in a specific provision because we asked London whether that was possible. London agreed because that is the wording in the Bill of Rights Law. I quote; “If a court's determination of any question arising under this section might affect the exercise by a religious organisation itself or its members of the constitutional right to freedom of thought, conscience and religion it must have regard to the importance of that right”. That section safeguards the churches against any intrusion and I think this is good. So, we listened to other groups. I received a letter from a number of the private schools talking about the Bill of Rights and I believe that their concerns are addressed in our position.

I can say without fear of contradiction that each Member has done his best to go out, after the Commissioners had gone forward, to get our own feedback and discussion with the people of this country.

It is not a good thing to mislead anyone. It is certainly not a good thing to mislead the public on matters such as the Constitution. I repeat: 'this is not an Independence Constitution for people to be worried about, nor an Independence question where you could easily have a referendum and say, 'do you want independence, Yes or No?' That is an easy answer but I maintain that it is going to be a difficult thing to register six, ten or eighteen questions because who is to say that people do not want more than one point answered.

It is difficult to do that in a vote and the Commonwealth has been around not just today. The Commonwealth and the United Kingdom have been around for many, many years; much more than the great United States who was once a colony of Great Britain. This Westminster form of Government that has been adhered to throughout the Commonwealth for all these many years that has served us well; has not failed. As Sir Winston Churchill said, 'you might not like democracy the way we have it but it is still the best form of Government'. It is still the best system.

The system in the Commonwealth that all of us have grown up with; have known and has served us well has not been to our detriment. The only time that there have been problems with the Westminster form of Government is when that system had been corrupted to something else. You can go through the Commonwealth and you can tell the countries which have had problems.

Referendum has been used very scarcely in the Commonwealth and it has been [used] for much greater issues than asking whether the Speaker should be from inside or outside the House. I repeat: if it were something asking for independence, which this is not by far. It does not even propose full internal self Government. We are not even going near it. What is being proposed is getting the Constitution to fit modern day Government; modern day expectations; modern day responsibilities; the challenges and the pressures that the Cayman Islands face so severely.

Madam Speaker, we have not done the public any wrong. It is very easy for people to get up and say 'I want to go and have my say'. Well, the process is there and will be there for several more months for people to have their say. I want to say this in the strongest terms: the debate here in this legislature is not the final say. The United Democratic Party nor the People's Progressive Movement (PPM), nor anyone else, can write a Constitution for us. Nor can we vote for a Constitution to put it into effect. That is the prerogative of the United Kingdom. We have never been able to do that because the United Kingdom is the administering power for the Cayman Islands. We are an Overseas Territory; that is what we are—a Crown Colony, a Dependent Territory, now an Overseas Territory of the United Kingdom.

So, for people to make anyone believe that we can write our own Constitution and put that into effect is certainly doing a grave disservice not only to present day Cayman but also to our posterity.

Madam Speaker, we are not about keeping anyone from having his say. We did not—and I repeat this—we did not appoint any Commissioner. These Members on this side had nothing to do with it. Yesterday I said that because of the international responsibilities that the United Kingdom faces, their representative the previous Governor [Mr. Peter Smith], appointed the Commissioners. At all material times he said that the then Leader of Government Business, now the Leader of the People's Progressive Movement and still the First Elected Member for George Town who now chooses to boycott [the Constitutional debate] in this Honourable House, knew who was going to be appointed.

The Governor laid out the position clearly and we should not try to confuse that either. But as we have seen, they have attempted to do that if my Honourable colleague (the Deputy Leader) had not [received] the Position paper that was sent from the United Kingdom without any abridgement—in its raw form.

So, why is all of this happening? Why is this clamour now for delay? I said yesterday and I would like to repeat that without being too tedious: It is not because of anyone on the outside. It is the Parliamentary Opposition who is utilising these efforts for their own aggrandisement; for their own situation to build their own party. I dare say, had they been the Leader of Government Business and been on Executive Council the process would have continued in this country without this furore. They would have been here debating it; they would have carried it through because they would have been in the position. Of course they do have people who support that position because they do not support us and they never will.

Madam Speaker, all of us have our short comings. There was only one perfect person who ever lived—the greatest, Jesus Christ the son of the Almighty God who was sent into this world! And they crucified him!

I do not listen often because I am just too busy. Perhaps, when I am in my car or if someone tells me what is being said on the media, the Internet or the radio station. But I have, in driving, listened to certain people tear down the Speaker. I do not understand where they are going. I have had my differences with Speakers and governors and I thought that the governors should have been out of this House and that was accomplished. I have had my differences with Speakers and certainly, the United Kingdom saw fit to agree that the Governor should no longer sit in the legislature because it is not democracy. It does not give the necessary separation of powers that a democratic country should have.

I cannot understand why people choose to go on the radio and say the things that they do and I cannot understand where is the responsibility of those in charge of the media allowing this to be pursued day after day. Is this what the Cayman Islands want? Is this the kind of confrontation; name-calling; accusation; the hype, the constant calling from morning until noon? Is this what we want? With all the problems that we have, can some of these people who are doing this do something more constructive?

Madam Speaker, I ask you to hold your head high because you have done and are doing one of the best jobs that I have seen done under the circumstances. I have seen you make decisions quickly: right decisions, thinking on your feet, which is needed in that Chair. You do it as quickly as you and the Clerk can confer at times, which is supposed to be done.

And I do not think that it is anything to do with referendum or anything about 'strangers'. An unfortunate situation, an unfortunate word and I understand how people can get upset about that sort of thing. But it is the correct word that was used. People say, 'throw it out'. Well, when you go to Grand Court do you stop saying 'Ma Lord'? Do you take off your wig and throw away your robe? Must all of the practices and conventions of the Honourable Court be thrown out too? This is Parliament and if we are striving to be better and perform better then we must follow the long standing traditions that have bode well for every country that has used them.

I, for one, am not going to shift to any presidential style of governance. I do not believe in it. I do not believe that the United States has the best system. I believe that the Commonwealth has bode us well for hundreds of years and Parliamentary democracy has bode us well for hundreds of years. I am not going to shift from that. Each to his own, but I prefer that and I think that there is no reason for all the things that I hear going on, on the radio.

I say again that while the media pipes up and prints about responsibilities and accountability, the media has one of the most important roles in the country . . . in any country; and that is to be fair; to be impartial and to print the truth especially when you have two sides—each side should be given fair opportunity and fair coverage.

I have had my problems with them, but I can live with them. There are many good articles and some very good journalists in this country. I have seen the Opposition accuse me of all sorts of things on the front page of the paper. I answer and it gets put somewhere else; it does not get the same treatment. The media have to be eternally vigilant. They should never let their likes and dislikes of who they support cloud the very and most important aspect in the country: that of reporting news—reporting what people say especially, because that can do eternal damage to an individual.

Government's own radio station . . . Is that the purpose of it? Do we need the moderator of any radio show, 'Oh, you going to the meeting tonight right?', 'Yeah', 'alright boss that is good', 'yeah it is going to be a good meeting'. What are we doing? It is not both sides getting this treatment; it is all one side.

We cannot build a country on that type of situation. And if people believe that they are harming McKeeva Bush when they are one-sided they are making a big mistake. If they believe that they are harming the Speaker in her person, they are making a big mistake. They might cause us to be jeered at; to be booed; for people to have whatever opinion, but the damage is much bigger and much greater than that because these are some of the most important institutions in a country. When they go that low who does it hurt in the end? Our own beloved country. Here where we were born; where we work and live and move and have our being; where all of us, I believe, have an eternal love. Who are we hurting? Our own children, grandchildren and the future generations.

None of us is perfect, but do not tell me that we cannot improve step by step. Whether we like people or not; whether we like how someone talks; whether we like the pigmentation of their skin; whether we like the family they come from; whether they come out of Old Bush or Spot Bay or Watering Place or wherever; when we can all stop that, then we are moving little bit by little bit toward what we should be—decent human beings!

Madam Speaker, personally I take great umbrage to when a newspaper, or any news media, mentions my family. And if I ever 'see red' about anything and get my 'ire up', it is then! I have a decent family structure—my wife and I have tried to do our best. And I take this opportunity to say that, because people just go too far and the media goes too far when it allows this to happen. Why? Just to tear me down, personally? Why? Because I am here in this seat as Leader of Government Business? If I were in Opposition with the shoe on the other foot, perhaps you would not hear a thing about it. I take great umbrage—and from this forum I beg the media to be the institution it is supposed to be.

There is every reason to have outlets for people's expressions. But they must sit down and look at the fairness of what is happening. And those that are perpetuating this name-calling and accusations—allowing people who really do not have enough common sense to balance a straw, to get on the radio to 'educate'—that is what is happening, because when someone says something everyone else gets it and it is gone out—about people being paid off and making all sorts of accusations, do you know what the truth is? The truth is, that is all that is in their minds. But you know what the Bible says about that: "As a man thinketh in his heart, so is he".

I have worked for myself from the time I was 13 years old, had to move out of a Government system, which was inadequate, did not have enough space. But I have constantly and honestly tried to live my life to what I think would please myself, my God, my people that I represent and my family. As I said yesterday, I challenge them to point to any one area that I have done the people of this country wrong. I challenge any of the Opposition to say what good they have done for the public of this country as against my records in this House and my record of administration. I am not saying that I did not make mistakes. But when I made mistakes and fell down, I got up and walked and tried. That is what people elected me to do. People knew; still know that I do not have a university education; that I did not go to Oxford, I did not go to any. But I will tell you this: I will match my own performance with some of theirs. Let us see.

But that is enough on that. I will end by saying that this is not what it is all about where Julianna O'Connor comes from or where McKeeva Bush comes from, or where Linford Pierson or Dr. Frank McField come from. No, that is not what it is about. It is about performance; it is about the good that has to be done for the people of the country and who can do it best, and who can get the job done. That is the task. That is the question.

Madam Speaker, I will rue the day that we have a situation in this country where only a certain few have the wherewithal—the ability to get elected to this legislature. Because we had it; we had the 'plutocracy' situation; we had the slaves, but not any more. That has been gone and thank God people of common background that come from poor families have an opportunity to be the people's elected representatives and can stand and palaver with some of the highest in the land and in the world, for that matter.

Madam Speaker, if anything pains me in this whole situation is to see those kinds of situations arising again—hearing people saying, 'Where McKeeva come from' or 'Where Julianna come from'. I really thought that had all been put away in this country; that those kinds of prejudices had been forgotten about and that we have become Christian enough and good enough in our own heart of hearts, to accept people for what they can do and for what they mean to other people.

It is like this: if I see you doing something good for someone else, even though you might not like me, I am proud because a fellow Caymanian or a fellow human being is being lifted. Not to go back to the days where you had to go with your cap in hand bowing and begging. Is that what they want? Do they want people in here that only they can control? [People] that are controlled by a 'moneyed' few. My life and our lives are open books.

The Speaker: Is this a convenient time for the luncheon break Honourable Leader?

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: Thank you very much, Madam Speaker. I think so.

The Speaker: At this time we will suspend until 2.15 pm.

Proceedings suspended at 12.46 pm

Proceedings resumed at 2.35 pm

The Speaker: Please be seated. Proceedings are resumed. Continuation of the debate by the Honourable Leader of Government Business.

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: Thank you, Madam Speaker.

I propose now to read into the record the Position Paper I tabled earlier.

"Position paper of The United Democratic Party on The Report of the Constitutional Modernisation Review Commissioners 2002 and Draft Constitution for the Cayman Islands

"The undersigned Legislative Members of the United Democratic Party ("UDP") having reviewed and considered in detail the Report of the Constitutional Modernisation Review Commissioners 2002 and draft Constitution for the Cayman Islands dated March 7, 2002 (the 'Report and Draft Constitution'), and having made presentations in public meetings, met with a number of constituents and taken into consideration many views put forward by them, set out hereunder our considered joint position on the main changes proposed in the Report and Draft Constitution.

"1. Fundamental Rights and Freedoms of the Individual (Bill of Rights) (pages 10-24).

"We believe that every person in the Cayman Islands should have his fundamental rights and freedoms protected and it is most fitting that these fundamental rights and freedoms of the individual are enshrined in our Constitution. These fundamental rights and freedoms are:

- i. Protection of Right to Life
- ii. Protection from Inhuman Treatment
- iii. Protection from Slavery and Forced Labour
- iv. Protection of Right to Personal Liberty
- v. Provisions to secure Protection of Law
- vi. Protection of Right of Prisoners to Humane Treatment
- vii. Protection for Private and Family Life and the Privacy of Home and Other Property
- viii. Protection of the right to marry, etc.
- ix. Protection of Freedom of Conscience
- x. Protection of Freedom of Expression
- xi. Protection of Freedom of Assembly and Association
- xii. Protection of Freedom of Movement
- xiii. Protection from Discrimination on Grounds of Race, etc.
- xiv. Protection from Deprivation of Property.

"We wish to see a provision inserted in the 'Bill of Rights' which would draw attention to the unique social and cultural identity of the Cayman Islands and to ensure that this identity is not ignored when the Constitution is being interpreted by the Courts. We suggest that section 1 of Part I of the Constitution should begin:

"Whereas the Cayman Islands is a Caribbean territory with its own distinct history, culture, Christian values and socio-economic framework, every person in the Islands is entitled to the fundamental rights and freedoms of the individual, that is to say, the right, whatever his race, place of origin, political or other opinion, colour, creed or sex, but subject to respect for the rights and freedoms of others and for the public interest, to each and all of the following, namely:

- "a) life, liberty, security of the person and the protection of the law;
- b) freedom of conscience, of expression and of assembly, movement and association; and

- c) protection for his privacy and family life, the privacy of his home and property and from deprivation of property except in the public interest and on payment of fair compensation.

“We also recommend that the definition of ‘Islands’ contained in section 107 of the draft Constitution be amended to read ‘the Islands means the Cayman Islands as described in section 1 of Part I of the Constitution’, and that wherever the phrase ‘reasonably justifiable in a democratic society’ is used, that phrase should be amended to read ‘reasonably justifiable in the democratic society of the Islands’. We further recommend that the following provision on thought, conscience and religion become an integral part of this Section:

“‘If a Court’s determination of any question arising under this Section might affect the exercise by a religious organisation (itself or its members) of the Constitutional right to freedom of thought, conscience and religion, it must have regard to the importance of that right’.

“2. The Public Service Commission (PSC) be established in the Constitution (page 66- section 87).

“The Legislative Members of the UDP agree that the role of the PSC should be enshrined in the Constitution, but in conjunction with this and in line with ongoing modernisation in the civil service, we believe that the PSC should be freed from the day-to-day recruitment functions and become an Appellate Body.

“3. The posts of Acting Governor and Deputy Governor be held by a Caymanian (page 27- sections 20 & 21).

“We agree with this recommendation, but within the definition of ‘Caymanian’ proposed in section 14 by the undersigned.

“4. Establishment of an independent Advisory Committee in relation to the Governor’s power to pardon (page 30-section 26).

“We agree with this recommendation which reads in section 26 of the Draft Constitution:

“‘There shall be for the Islands an Advisory Committee on the Prerogative of Mercy (in this section and section 25 referred to as the Committee), which shall consist of the Attorney-General, the Chief Medical Officer and four other members of which two shall be appointed by the Governor after consultation with the Chief Minister and two after consultation with the Leader of the Opposition’.

“5. Retention of the Westminster form of Government with increased local Autonomy but falling short of full internal self-government. A full ministerial style Government with a Chief Minister and Leader of Opposition (Chap. 3, page 6- para. 2) and (page 32-Part III).

“We agree with the Commissioners’ recommendation for a full ministerial style government with a Chief Minister appointed by the Governor on the recommendation of the majority of the elected members of the Legislative Assembly, and six Ministers appointed by the Governor, acting in accordance with the advice of the Chief Minister, from among the elected members of the Legislative Assembly. We also believe that in order for the full ministerial style government to work smoothly, provision should also be made for a Deputy Chief Minister and Deputy Leader of Opposition.

“6. A no confidence motion should be in respect of a lack of confidence in the Government as a whole, and not to remove individual ministers (page 33-section 32).

“We agree with this recommendation which reads in section 32 (1) of the Draft Constitution to the extent that:

“‘The Governor shall subject to the provisions of subsection (2) of this section revoke the appointment of the Chief Minister if a motion that the Legislative Assembly should declare a lack of confidence in the Government of the Islands receives the affirmative vote of not less than ten of the elected members thereof’.

“However, we recommend that where such declaration of a lack of confidence in the Government is affirmed by the Legislative Assembly, the Governor shall allow the members of the Legislative Assembly the opportunity to form a new Government prior to dissolving the Legislative Assembly and before calling a new General Election.

“7. The Financial Secretary and Chief Secretary positions be replaced with Elected ministers (Chap. 3, page 7 & page 32-section 31).

“We agree with this recommendation of the Constitutional Commissioners, subject to section 8 below.

“8. The Attorney-General shall be either an elected member of the Legislative Assembly entitled to practice as an Attorney-at-Law in the Islands in which case he shall be appointed by the Governor in accordance with the advice of the Chief Minister or a public officer (page 69- section 92).

“We believe that since the Report and Draft Constitution envisage a move to a full ministerial system that the Attorney-General should also cease to be an ex-officio member of the Legislative Assembly and Executive Council. We propose there should be an elected Minister responsible for legal affairs, and a senior civil service post of Attorney-General which, where possible, should be filled by a Caymanian.

“9. The Speaker and Deputy Speaker be chosen from outside the membership of the Legislative Assembly (page 42-section 46).

“We do not support this recommendation and propose that we retain the provisions of the current Constitution which state that the elected members of the Assembly should elect -

“a) a Speaker from among the elected members of the Assembly, or persons qualified to be elected members of the Assembly, other than members of Executive Council;

“b) a Deputy Speaker from among the elected members of the Assembly other than members of Executive Council.

“10. The introduction of 17 single-member constituencies for the Islands (page 52-section 67).

“Although we support the concept of modernising this area of the electoral system, we believe that the full introduction of single-member constituencies and the ‘one man one vote’ which proposes to divide the Cayman Islands into 17 constituencies is, at this point in our development, premature. We believe that a better system would be to gradually phase in this concept.

“11. The introduction of an Electoral Boundary Commission to draw the electoral boundaries (page 52-section 68).

“We believe that it is important that a Boundary Commission is established as early as possible. This would be particularly necessary if there were a gradual phasing in of the single-member constituencies.

“12. The inclusion of a Judicial Service Commission to advise on the appointment of judges of the Grand Court as well as magistrates, registrars and other officers of the Court (page 65-section 85).

“We agree with this recommendation of the Constitutional Commissioners.

“13. Expansion of the Oath of Due Execution of Office to include the people of the Cayman Islands as well as to Her Majesty the Queen, Her Heirs and Successors (page 83-First Schedule).

“We agree with this recommendation of the Constitutional Commissioners.

“14. The Commissioners have given a narrow definition to ‘Caymanian’ in the Constitution which is separate and apart from ‘Caymanian Status’ (page 79-section 107).

The Commissioners have defined ‘Caymanian in Section 107 of the proposed Constitution to mean:- “A person who possesses British Overseas Territories Citizenship by virtue of a connection with the Islands and who:

- a) was born in or outside of the Islands and at the date of his birth had at least one of his parents or grandparents who was Caymanian as herein defined and who was domiciled in the Islands at the date of such birth, and
- b) possesses no other citizenship and is pursuing no claim to any other citizenship for which he may be eligible.

“There are 4 places in the proposed Constitution where it is necessary to be ‘Caymanian’ under the above narrow definition, namely:

- (i) to act as Governor
- (ii) to be Deputy Governor
- (iii) to be an elector, and
- (iv) to be a member of the Legislative Assembly.

“This definition excludes anyone holding dual citizenship. We believe this is an unreasonable departure from the provisions of the current Constitution which allows for dual nationality by virtue of birth outside the Islands.

“The Constitutional Commissioners’ proposals have unreasonably narrowed the qualifications for elected membership to the Legislative Assembly. Many able Caymanians will be precluded from running for office. We believe that the qualifications which are now contained in the current Constitution provide a reasonable balance where someone may stand for election if he (i) has Cayman Status and is 21 years or over, (ii) is domiciled and resident in Cayman, (iii) has British Overseas Territories Citizenship due to a connection with the Islands, (iv) has no other citizenship (except by reason of birth provided he has a Cayman born and Status holding parent or grandparent) and (v) meets the required residency period.

“We believe that an area of the present Constitution which requires further specific attention and amendment is the question of citizenship in light of the conferral of British Citizenship on British Overseas Territories Citizens under the new British Overseas Territories Act. Caymanian BOTCs are now entitled to full British Citizenship and passports with the right to live and work in the UK and European Community. We do not believe it is appropriate that someone who takes advantage of the new British Citizenship should be precluded from running for elected office.

“The narrow definition for a ‘Caymanian’ will also negatively affect electors. This will unnecessarily exacerbate the non-inclusive nature of the electoral system in the Cayman Islands and lead to an even smaller percentage of the long-term resident population of the Islands participating in the electoral process. We do not believe this is desirable. We therefore recommend the following definition for a ‘Caymanian’ :-

“A person who possesses British Overseas Territories Citizenship, British Citizenship, or citizenship by virtue of birth outside the Islands and who:

- (a) at the date of his birth had at least one of his parents or grandparents who was Caymanian as herein defined and who was domiciled in the Islands at the date of such birth, or
- (b) has Caymanian Status’.

15. Inclusion of constitutional control on public debt (page 76-section 103).

Under Section 103(3) of the Draft Constitution the Constitutional Commissioners have recommended that:

‘The Islands shall not (at any time after the appointed day) borrow money to a total amount larger than that which can be repaid as to both principal and interest (calculated from the date of draw down on the loan, whether or not a moratorium on repayment is given) by not more than ten percent of the Islands annual recurrent revenue (excluding money actually received from Loans) for the preceding financial year’.

“This provision is already contained in the Public Management and Finance Law and therefore we believe that a similar repetition in the Constitution is inappropriate and unnecessary.

16. Provision for Referenda (page 45-section 50 (2)).

“Provision to enable a referendum law to be enacted now exists under the current Constitution, but no such law has to date been enacted. The Constitutional Commissioners have also included this provision under the proposed new Constitution, but have added a proviso that the question of whether the Islands should seek an amendment to the Constitution that may result in the independence of the Islands shall be a matter of national importance.

“We agree with this recommendation of the Constitutional Commissioners”.

Madam Speaker, that is the total of the United Democratic Party’s position on the Report of the Constitutional Modernisation Review Commissioners’ 2002 and Draft Constitution for the Cayman Islands.

It was signed by all of us [the United Democratic Party Members] on 12 June 2002, and I name the signatories to this Position Paper.

- ◆ The Hon. W. McKeever Bush, OBE, JP, Leader of Government Business
- ◆ The Hon. Linford A. Pierson, OBE, JP, Deputy Leader of Government Business
- ◆ The Hon. Roy Bodden
- ◆ The Hon. Gilbert A. McLean
- ◆ Dr. the Hon. Frank S. McField
- ◆ Mr. Rolston M. Anglin, MLA
- ◆ Mr. Cline A. Glidden, Jr., MLA, Deputy Speaker of the House
- ◆ Capt. A. Eugene Ebanks, MLA
- ◆ Mr. Lyndon L. Martin, MLA

Madam Speaker, these are the total signatures on the United Democratic Party’s Position Paper.

I began by saying that this is a historic time for us. I also pointed out the many challenges we face. I talked about the current situation (the climate) that is being carried out and prolonged and I believe that we should bring closure as soon as possible to this debate on the Constitution. A Constitution is not something that should be hanging in the air for months and years in a current debate. I believe that to do that it would damage the country by causing confrontation and more friction.

I believe that we should all try to work together although the Opposition is absent. They should endeavour to come to this House and put their position on this review of the Constitution. This is their duty, whether they had a chance or not to debate a referendum—the Leader of the PPM debated it in any event. And they have stated their reason for that, but that is confusing also. They should come to the Legislative Assembly—as they are paid to do—to debate the Constitution. But if they are not here Parliament duties must continue. We must do our work. We have no authority to amend the Constitutional Commissioners' Report. We have to put our position. And as I said before, the Government has given an undertaking to send it to London with the debate and with the results coming from, and recorded by, the Electoral office. We will ask for a delegation to London.

Now, just to show how contrary and opposite the Opposition wants to be: I believe that it is a given that the United Kingdom will accept our request to have Members of Government and Members of the Opposition around a table talking to them at the Foreign Office, where they have not one or two but several Officers and their legal advisers to call on. But the Leader of the Opposition had said No. He wants them to come here. Why be that opposite? Why not say, 'that is a good idea; that gives us a chance'. They have a lawyer on their team. Why say that they must come here? Going to London and talking to them—they will have their officers, they will have one, two or three people there to call on. They will have all of their legal advisers and they could be prepared for any matter that may arise and could be answered there and then.

Well, the Opposition is the opposition and it seems that it is their duty is to oppose—first, second and third duty also. But the Government must govern according to our Constitution and according to what we believe are the wishes of our people. And that is what the United Democratic Party Government is doing.

Madam Speaker, I will stop at this point. I do thank you.

The Speaker: Thank you Honourable Leader. Does any other Member wish to speak? Is it the wish of the House that we take the adjournment at this time? The Honourable Leader of Government Business.

ADJOURNMENT

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: Thank you, Madam Speaker.

It seems that it is a general agreement that we adjourn the House at this point, that is, that some Members have some pressing engagements and that is the preferred route. So, I move the adjournment of this Honourable House until Monday, 24 June 2002, 10 am.

The Speaker: The question is that the Honourable House be now adjourned until Monday, 24 June 2002, 10 am. All those in favour please say Aye. Those against, No.

Ayes.

The Speaker: The Ayes have it. The House stands adjourned until 10 am Monday 24 June 2002.

At 3.07 pm the House adjourned until 10 am, Monday, 24 June 2002.

OFFICIAL HANSARD REPORT
MONDAY
24 JUNE 2002
10.48 AM
Sixth Sitting

The Speaker: I will now call on the Honourable Second Official Member [responsible for the Portfolio of Legal Administration] to grace us with prayers.

PRAYERS

Hon. David F. Ballantyne: Let us pray.

Almighty God, from whom all wisdom and power are derived; We beseech Thee so to direct and prosper the deliberations of the Legislative Assembly now assembled, that all things may be ordered upon the best and surest foundations for the glory of Thy Name and for the safety, honour and welfare of the people of these Islands.

Bless our Sovereign Lady, Queen Elizabeth II; Philip, Duke of Edinburgh; Charles, Prince of Wales; and all the Royal family. Give grace to all who exercise authority in our Commonwealth, that peace and happiness, truth and justice, religion and piety may be established among us. Especially we pray for the Governor of our Islands, the Speaker of the Legislative Assembly, Official Members and Ministers of Executive Council and Members of the Legislative Assembly that we may be enabled faithfully to perform the responsible duties of our high office.

All this we ask for Thy Great Name's sake.

Let us say the Lord's Prayer together: Our Father who art in Heaven, Hallowed be Thy Name, Thy Kingdom come, Thy will be done, on earth as it is in Heaven. Give us this day our daily bread, and forgive us our trespasses, as we forgive those who trespass against us. And lead us not into temptation, but deliver us from evil. For Thine is the Kingdom, the power and the glory, forever and ever. Amen.

The Lord bless us and keep us. The Lord make His face shine upon us and be gracious unto us. The Lord lift up the light of His countenance upon us and give us peace now and always. Amen.

Proceedings resumed at 10.50 am

The Speaker: Please be seated. Proceedings are resumed.

READING BY THE HONOURABLE
SPEAKER OF MESSAGES
AND ANNOUNCEMENTS

Apologies

The Speaker: I have received apologies from the Third Elected Member from the district of Bodden

Town, who is still off the Island with his wife for medical reasons. I have also received apologies for the late attendance of the Honourable Third Official Member this morning.

STATEMENTS BY MEMBERS OF THE GOVERNMENT

The Speaker: I have received no notice of statements for this morning's sitting.

GOVERNMENT BUSINESS

Amended Motion to Debate and Take Note of the Report of the Constitutional Modernisation Review
Commissioners 2002

(Continuation of debate thereon)

The Speaker: Does any other Member wish to speak? The Honourable Deputy Leader of Government Business.

Hon. Linford A. Pierson: Thank you, Madam Speaker.

Before getting into the text of my debate I want to make a quick reference to today's paper, the Caymanian Compass, in the Editorial section entitled "Rules of the House," and just to say that it is refreshing indeed to see such a positive statement being made in acknowledgement of what the Government and this Honourable House are doing to bring the debate on the Constitutional Commissioners' Report to everyone that we possibly can reach.

In this connection it also offers me the opportunity to briefly draw the attention of those individuals who have received the licence, whether it is a TV licence or radio licence, that they have certain procedures and guidelines that they should follow. As the Minister with responsibility for this subject, I think it is timely and opportune that I should do this at this point with your permission.

The Speaker: Please proceed.

Hon. Linford A. Pierson: I would like to draw attention to section 12 of the Broadcasting Law (1997 Revision) captioned "Duties of Licensees" to all of the licensees under the Broadcasting Law. This Law has now been subsumed in the Information and Communications Technology Authority Law (ICTA) that was recently passed in this House. It reads: "It is the duty of a licensee to ensure that the programmes broadcast by him—

- a) include nothing which offends against good taste or decency, is likely to encourage or incite to crime or lead to disorder or to be offensive to public feelings or which contains any offensive representation of or reference to a living person;
- b) maintain a proper balance in their subject matter and a high general standard of quality;
- c) present with due accuracy and impartiality any news given therein;
- d) include no discussions or debates where persons taking part express opinions or put forward arguments of a political character which are not properly balanced by other opinions; and
- e) comply with this Law and the regulations”.

Madam Speaker, I would like to make the point that this is not a regulation or law that has recently been passed by the UDP. This Law, in fact, existed for a very long time and was recently revised in 1997. So, this has been on the books for a very long time and I hope that I do not later hear that I am warning the media or in any way threatening them. I am just drawing this section of the Law to the attention of the general public, including the media.

During my career as a civil servant, the years spent in the private sector and also my years as a representative of the people, I have always held that integrity and honour are the two most important elements in one's life. Thus the reason I have always used as my personal motto, integrity and honour in all things comes before all else.

During my 16 years in the Civil Service I reached the positions of Deputy Financial Secretary and of a Permanent Secretary. And, God willing, at the end of my present term in office in 2004, I will have served my people for a further 16 years. During this period of public service never once have I used my position to unfairly promote my civil service or political career. This level of honour and integrity was also the hallmark of my private sector career. In short, I have always endeavoured to provide my people and my country with the best and most honest service that I could possibly give. That is the legacy by which I wish to be remembered.

Madam Speaker, I have always demonstrated in my daily life that I am a man of honour and integrity. Specifically was this evident when in 1992 I declined to walk out of Government on my Executive Council colleagues in the interest of political expediency, though at the time I strongly disagreed with a particular issue being dealt with by that Government. I therefore feel that it is most unfortunate when the peace, tranquillity, stability and good order of these beautiful Islands we all call home, should be disrupted by a group of individuals whose only aim appears to be the satisfaction of their own political agenda.

I am most concerned that the First Elected Member for George Town, together with his Opposition colleagues, would subject these Islands to a state of instability for selfish political reasons. It seems that the argument being propounded by the Opposition is that their refusal to comply with the Standing Orders and Constitution is because you, Madam Speaker, are being unfair to them.

As explained by me in a public statement made on Tuesday, 11 June 2002, you, Madam Speaker, bent backwards to accommodate the Opposition's motion for a referendum. Not only did you point out to them that their motion was defective, you also explained to them what needed to be done to correct their motion.

Around the same time, you similarly had to refuse a motion from two Members of the Government Bench, which you also found to be defective. However, in contrast to the action taken by the First Elected Member for George Town, the two Members of the Government Back Bench graciously accepted your ruling and amended their motion in accordance with proper parliamentary procedures.

What a contrast from the high-handed and arrogant attitude taken by the First Elected Member for George Town and his Opposition colleagues—who decided that instead of complying with proper parliamentary procedures they would hold a press conference during which time they completely misled the people of these Islands on the truth in this matter.

To add insult to injury, the First and Second Elected Members for George Town made some very derogatory remarks about you as Speaker which led you to cite them in contempt of this Honourable House, as well as to call upon them to make an unconditional apology for their disrespect to the Chair of Speaker.

Madam Speaker, upon their refusal to retract their statements and to unconditionally apologise to this House, you quite correctly suspended them from this House in accordance with the provision of our Standing Orders. You, Madam Speaker, are to be congratulated for the fair and professional manner in which you handled that matter.

The Opposition also had ample time to reconsider their position in regard to the referendum motion, but refused to do so. It was quite clear that to have done so would not have suited their political agenda of upsetting and inflaming the emotions of our people.

The question that remains to be asked is whether the First and Second Elected Members for George Town and their Opposition colleagues seriously wanted to have a referendum motion amended and debated in this Honourable House, or whether they intentionally misled the public in believing that you had refused to accept a properly constructed motion which complied in all respects with our parliamentary procedure.

It is against this background that I have reached the conclusion that the First Elected Member for George Town and his Opposition colleagues had no intention of having this referendum motion debated in this Honourable House, but rather used the opportunity to score political points and to build the image and membership of the People's Progressive Movement, regardless of the damage that this has caused to the economic social and political stability of these Islands. This behaviour equates to selfishness and arrogance at its worst.

Further, when the House reconvened at 10 am on 19 June, the Government adjourned the House until 3.30 pm of the same day to allow the First and Second Elected Members for George Town and their Opposition colleagues an opportunity to be present to debate the Constitutional Commissioners' Report, because the First and Second Elected Members for George Town had been suspended until 3.20 pm that afternoon.

The Hansard [reports] of this Honourable House will show that following what can only be described as a misleading and tediously repetitious debate from the First Elected Member of George Town, he gave notice that the Opposition would not remain for any further debate on the Report of the Constitutional Commissioners. Again, one has to ask whether those Opposition Members really have the interest of the residents of these Islands at heart, or whether their main interest is building up their own political interests.

What makes me angry, Madam Speaker, is the wilful and calculated attempt by the Opposition to mislead so many innocent and hard working residents of these Islands into believing that their right to bring a referendum motion was being denied. I wonder whether the instigator of this misinformation was the same person who during the 2000 General Elections kept saying at his public meetings, and I quote, "It is truth time Cayman". Either the First Elected Member for George Town has a reckless regard for the truth or really did not understand the meaning of the slogan, "It is truth time Cayman."

I feel it is important that all our people should see the Opposition for what they really are. I have the highest regard for those individuals who have been misled by the Opposition, but I feel that it will not be long before our people find out that they were misled by the First Elected Member for George Town and his Opposition colleagues.

I know that it is unparliamentary to call them a bunch of liars, and I will not say that in this Honourable House, and I am still trying to find the proper synonym to describe this group. Not only have they attempted—and in many cases succeeded—in misleading our people, but they are now also attempting to influence our civil servants and others in high places.

Madam Speaker, I believe that it is generally felt that the political vendetta of the First Elected Member for George Town and his colleagues began in earnest on 8 November 2001, which was the day when he was removed as the Leader of Government Business because of his ineptitude as the then Leader of Government Business.

The First Elected Member for George Town, notwithstanding his popularity within the Islands . . . because I have to tell you that I envy him for his cooking abilities . . . but I was not brought into this House to cook; I was brought here to represent the people. I have to say that it was a lack of his leadership ability that led to his removal as Leader of Government Business.

Madam Speaker, that Honourable Member had a golden opportunity to have provided sound leadership within these Islands, but he blew that opportunity. As a territory founded on Christian principles, it is also totally unacceptable to give the appearance that the Government of these Islands is run from a barroom. Why is the First Elected Member for George Town and his colleagues so bent on regaining power? And in the process, destabilising the economic, social and political framework of these Islands? When given the opportunity in the year 2000 he was incapable of providing proper leadership.

Again, in reference to the referendum, it is quite obvious that the Opposition's role in this matter is the satisfaction of their own political agenda to the detriment of the peace, harmony and stability of the beautiful Cayman Islands. Therefore, Madam Speaker, I call on them to put the interest of our people first and their own personal political ambitions second.

Madam Speaker, I wish to now comment briefly on the Constitutional Modernisation Checklist, which the First Elected Member for George Town in his debate on Thursday, 20 June, commented on at length. In particular, section 18 of the GIS (Government Information Service) which is the equivalent of section 2.19 of the original Checklist from the Foreign and Commonwealth Office dated October 1999.

Even the very simple comments that I made in this Honourable House in regard to the Checklist, were this morning on the Cayman Islands Television Network (CITN) breakfast show distorted by the Second Elected Member for George Town. I can only say to the Second Elected Member for George Town that if he does not fully understand the workings of our Parliament at this point in time, he should give himself a little time. He is still green and wet behind the ears, so he needs time even though he feels that he knows everything about everything. When I was growing up in East End, the old people would refer to him as a 'fop'.

Madam Speaker, the Checklist that I refer to . . . I do not mislead anyone in this House. What I was reading from in this House was the original Checklist from the Foreign and Commonwealth Office received in October 1999. And for him to go on the television show and suggest that I was lying because what he had read in [section] 18 did not compare with [section] 2.19 is, again, misleading the public.

What I did say—and the Hansard will show—is that it was a different version but that section 18 was similar or the exact version of section 2.19, and that they had failed to read a most important section which was 1.3 on page 1 of the original Checklist. I repeat that: I find it somewhat surprising that the Second Elected Member for George Town would not have had a copy of this when in fact his Leader—the Leader of the People's Progressive Movement (PPM)—was then the Leader of Government Business. So, if he was not privy to this then, he has to talk to his Leader because his Leader got a copy of this Checklist the same time that I did.

What I read a while ago about equal time—I will have my equal time on CITN tomorrow morning. So, I would like that Honourable Member to listen to what I have to say and perhaps he will learn something. No longer am I going to sit in this Honourable House and allow people like the Second Elected Member for George Town, who is just a young and hurry-come-up politician still wet behind the ears, mislead the public on issues that I deal with in this House. My record speaks for itself. My contributions to these Islands speak for themselves. And when he has contributed as much to these Islands as I have, then he can start being critical of me.

Madam Speaker, before commenting on section 18, which, as I said, is the equivalent of section 2.19 of the original Checklist, I wish to once again say that I find it most incredible that the First Elected Member for George Town would not have used the copy of the original Checklist received from the Foreign and Commonwealth Office, when this should have been available to him. And I repeat: he was the Leader of Government Business when this Checklist was received from the Foreign and Commonwealth Office.

Further, it seems rather convenient that he would have omitted to refer to section 1.3 of the original Checklist which very clearly explains that the Checklist had been drawn up by the Foreign and Commonwealth Office to give an indication of the standards, which the Overseas Territories should seek to achieve.

It further states that the Overseas Territories Governments were asked to consider the Checklist when making proposals for Constitutional change, and either to incorporate suitable measures in their proposals to meet the requirements of the list or explain why a particular requirement should not apply to their territory. Madam Speaker, I submit that the Honourable First Elected Member for George Town was given this paper at the same time that I was given the paper as a Member of Executive Council. So, there is no excuse why he did not read from the original paper notwithstanding the abridged format that was published by the GIS.

To make abundantly clear what section 1.3 of the Constitutional Modernisation Checklist states in its entirety, I will read this short paragraph: “In order to help OT Governments to review their Constitutions and to see if any changes are needed a checklist has been drawn up which gives an indication of the standards which OTs should seek to achieve, the obligations which they should strive to meet and the expectations of HMG in key areas of constitutional modernisation.”

It went on to say, “OT Governments are asked to consider the checklist when making proposals for constitutional change and either to incorporate suitable measures in their proposals to meet the requirements of the list or explain why a particular requirement should not apply to their territory.”

That statement shows a lot of flexibility in the thinking of the Foreign and Commonwealth Office. And further, the Checklist is not a law; it was a guide given to us, an indication for guidelines as to what we should follow.

In my opinion, the Checklist has been compiled with by the United Democratic Party as is evident in the Position Paper which was laid on the Table of this Honourable House by the Leader of Government Business last Friday – 21 June.

It is the view of the United Democratic Party that this Position Paper fully reflects the comments and views, both written and verbal, of a very wide cross-section of our Islands' community, and thus, complies with the Foreign and Commonwealth Office Constitutional Modernisation Checklist.

I now wish to comment specifically on section 18 of the Checklist referred to by the First Elected Member for George Town, which, as I stated, is the equivalent of paragraph 2.19 of the original Checklist received from the Foreign and Commonwealth Office in October 1999.

The first question in this section of the Checklist is, “Do the changes suggested by the OT government have the support of the majority of the population?”

Madam Speaker, I submit that from the Report of the Constitutional Commissioners, who took some nine months to conduct their review, and from the feedback obtained by the Legislative and other Members of the United Democratic Party from the meetings we held in each district in Grand Cayman and in Cayman Brac, it can reasonably be concluded that we obtained a representative sample of the views of the majority of the population. These views were obtained under very calm and stable political conditions and nobody was rushed or pushed into expressing them.

They were not subjected to a charged and emotionally influenced atmosphere to which the Opposition has subjected some of our people and during which the group calling themselves 'People for Referendum' chose to circulate their petition. Madam Speaker, that contrast should be noted. Accordingly, it stands to reason that any referendum or petition encouraged and supported by the Opposition in such a politically charged atmosphere cannot pass the test of impartiality and would most certainly compromise the integrity of such an exercise. It therefore follows and stands to reason that such a petition calling for a referendum can only serve to reflect the political aspirations and wishes of the Opposition and not what is in the best interest of the people of the Cayman Islands.

The second question in paragraph 2.19 of the Checklist is: “What is the evidence for such support?” Madam Speaker, as stated earlier, the Constitutional Commissioners gave the public every opportunity to have their views made known as did the United Democratic Party—not only at public meetings but also at private forums. The Constitutional Commissioners have stated quite clearly in their Report that they are satisfied that they obtained a representative sample of the population of our Islands.

Similarly, the United Democratic Party is satisfied—through our public meetings, as well as public pronouncement through the media—that we too obtained a representative sample of the majority of the population, which is reflected in the Position Paper tabled in this Honourable House by the Leader of Government Business.

It seems somewhat ludicrous and politically self-serving that the Opposition Party, the People's Progressive Movement they call themselves, can reasonably conclude that the approximately 7,000 signatures (I understand that when this is truly authenticated it might be 50 per cent or perhaps a little more of this figure, but certainly not the 7,000) represent a definitive indication of the views of our population. Our population consisted at the last census of near 40,000 people. Seven thousand—and if the figure is authenticated, say even 60 percent of that . . . say 4,200, cannot by any stretch of the imagination represent a majority of the population of these Islands.

Further, it is totally unfair that the petitioners are still being allowed to collect signatures to add to their petition. That should have stopped the day that they handed in their petition to the Government. When are they going to put a halt to the collection of all these signatures? I repeat: this process should have ended when the petition was submitted to Government on Tuesday, 18 June 2002.

I also feel that it is grossly unfair to the whole petition process that individuals other than registered voters should have been asked to petition the Government on an issue which they would not be able to vote in a referendum. It seems to be totally irresponsible that the Opposition would encourage other groups, such as The People for Referendum, to obtain the signature of everyone they could find regardless of the tenure of those people in these Islands.

It is my considered opinion that the process undertaken by the People's Progressive Movement and the People for Referendum does not reflect the majority support for a referendum on the six questions raised by the Opposition. More importantly, it is my considered opinion that not one of the questions raised in the Opposition's referendum Motion can qualify as a matter of national importance. Madam Speaker, I will repeat that. It is my considered opinion that not one of the questions raised in the Opposition's referendum Motion can qualify as a matter of national importance. There lies the crux of the whole matter. This is what the referendum motion is all about.

The third question in paragraph 2.19 of the Checklist equates to the section 18 referred to by the First Elected Member for George Town. It reads: “Has there been extensive local consultation. . . ?” I believe that even the Opposition would agree that there has “been extensive local consultation with or without the assistance of a Constitutional Commissioner or Commission.”

In the fourth and last question in section 2.19 the FCO questions whether the consultative process has been “followed by a debate in the legislature in which the suggested changes have been approved by motion.” The Hansards [reports] of this Honourable House will show that there has been extensive debate on the suggested changes including the tabling of the Position Paper of the United Democratic Party on these changes. All that now remains to be done in this regard is for this Position Paper, which includes the suggested changes, to be approved by a motion, which I feel will be done before we move from this item on the Order Paper.

If time permits, it is my intention also to expand on various recommendations contained in the Position Paper of the United Democratic Party, which, as stated, was laid on the Table of this Honourable House on Friday, 21 June 2002. However, before so doing I wish to refer to page 45 section 50 (2) of the Draft Constitution proposed by the Constitutional Modernisation Review Commissioners 2002. This section states: “. . . a law may make provision to enable the holding of a referendum amongst persons qualified as electors in elections to the Assembly on a question declared by resolution, adopted by a majority of the Elected Members of the Assembly, to be a matter of national importance provided that the question of whether the Islands should seek any amendment to this Constitution that may result in their independence shall be deemed to be a matter of national importance.”

An important issue to examine is whether or not the six points raised in the referendum motion that were being proposed by the Opposition comply with the criteria of being matters of national importance. This, as I stated earlier, is the crux of the whole matter. Are these issues, indeed, matters of national importance? Let me once again state that the proviso made by the Constitutional Commissioners is that the independence of these Islands would be an example of a matter of national importance.

I can think of other examples, such as the $60 million, which the former Leader of Government Business—the First Elected Member for George Town—incurred on behalf of Cayman Airways during his short tenure as the Minister with responsibility for Cayman Airways; and, indeed, the $55-plus million of debt which he incurred on behalf of Government to balance Government's recurrent and capital budgets. They are matters of national importance!

It is this type of poor leadership direction that caused the Foreign and Commonwealth Office to send their economist down to the Cayman Islands to check on the fiscal affairs of these Islands. And I would point out that this action by Her Majesty's Government was unprecedented in the history of the Cayman Islands.

These issues are further examples of matters of national importance that could properly have been made the subject of a referendum motion, as provision is currently made in our present Constitution for calling for a referendum when and if required. Why, then, did not the First Elected Member for George Town call for a referendum on these most important issues of national importance during his tenure as the Leader of Government Business? Surely, the foregoing issues would have to rank much higher in prominence than the six questionable issues the First Elected Member for George Town is now suggesting should be considered as matters of national importance. During my debate I propose to show that the whole question of a referendum based on the six questions contained in the referendum motion is flawed in that those questions do not satisfy the criteria for an issue of national importance, particularly when this criteria is based on the example given by the Constitutional Commissioners, namely: the Independence of the Islands. Therefore, it will follow that calling for a referendum on these six issues is similarly flawed as it is likewise based on the flawed premise that these issues constitute matters of national importance.

The First Elected Member for George Town (who was shown as the mover of the referendum motion) failed to properly advise the public that the motion was deficient in this respect. Even if the Leader of the Opposition was unaware of this, certainly his legal and constitutional advisers within the Opposition group should have advised him correctly on this point.

Madam Speaker, I wish to deal with the six issues in the numerical sequence in which they appear in the referendum motion the First Elected Member for George Town and the Elected Member for North Side sought to have approved by you, Madam Speaker: “Can it truly be said that the questions regarding the concept of ‘one man, one vote’ and the creation of 17 single member constituencies is a matter of national importance? When, in fact, the present system has worked so well over the past years as is evidenced in the socio-economic and political development of these Islands, compared with those Islands that have adopted the concept of single member constituencies?”

Madam Speaker, let me read that over so that I can clarify that particular point I am questioning myself: “Can it truly be said that the questions regarding the concept of ‘one man, one vote’ and the creation of 17 single member constituencies is a matter of National importance? When, in fact, the present system has worked so well over the past years as is evidenced in the socio-economic and political development of these Islands, compared with those Islands that have adopted the concept of single member constituencies?” I think the answer to that question would have to be in the negative.

The Mover and Second of the motion have not provided any justification as to why the single member constituency should be rushed into rather than being phased over a period of a few years as recommended by the United Democratic Party. If time permits, I intend to go into more detail to support that position.

The question that arises is whether this concept is being promulgated by the Opposition Members out of their own personal interests. Could it be that they feel that such a system might enhance their chances of success in the 2004 General Elections? If this is indeed their motive, could this then be properly regarded as a matter of national importance, or one that will satisfy their personal political agenda?

The second question, Madam Speaker: “2. Should the Speaker of the Legislative Assembly be chosen from outside the elected membership of the Legislative Assembly?” Similarly, this cannot, by any stretch of the imagination, be regarded as a matter of national importance. The Opposition has proffered no justification to suggest that such a matter would be a matter of national importance.

On the other hand, the UDP has shown in a wise and level-headed manner that provision should be made in the Constitution for the Speaker of the House to be chosen from within the Elected Members of the House (with the exception of Members of the Executive Council), or from outside the House. This provides the flexibility for the Office of Speaker to be filled by the most qualified and experienced person that can be found within the Cayman Islands, whether from inside or outside the House.

Anyone who has had the opportunity and privilege to listen to your rulings, and see the manner in which you have conducted the affairs of this Honourable House since you took that Chair, would have no doubt that the selection of you, Madam Speaker, was indeed a very wise decision. As with the case of question 1, this cannot reasonably be regarded as a matter of national importance.

Question 3 of the six questions states: “Should the proposed changes to the Cayman Islands Constitution be implemented between the dissolution of the current Legislative Assembly and the next General Election in 2004, as is pro- posed in the Report, or should the proposed changes be made as soon as possible?”

It is my view that there is no good reason why the Constitution should not be brought into effect as soon as it has been approved by Her Majesty's Government.

Without wishing to get embroiled in the speculation as to why the Opposition is raising this question (and this was also raised by the Constitutional Commissioners) I can only assume that it must be because they would not wish to see any Member of the current administration (and in particular the Honourable Leader of Government Business) become the first Chief Minister of these Islands—notwithstanding that that Honourable Minister has demonstrated far superior leadership abilities than his predecessor in office.

Could it be that the People's Progressive Movement is a right-wing political group, as was publicly stated by one of their Members at a meeting held by them on the steps of the Courts Office in George Town? The Third Elected Member for Bodden Town stated at that time that he was proud to be a right-winger. Some of the persons in history who publicly stated their position as right-wingers and being part of a right-wing movement were people like David Duke, Hitler, Mussolini, LePen, Melosivich: they are the type of people that we put in that category.

An honourable Member: Racists!

Hon. Linford A. Pierson: But, knowing that Honourable Member as I believe I do, I would prefer to take the view that the Third Elected Member for Bodden Town does not fully understand the philosophy and ideologies of a political right wing individual or group. If I am wrong, and he does understand what this means, then it would certainly clarify why some of the Opposition, and many members of the public who think like them, would not wish to see Caymanians such as the Honourable Leader of Government Business, myself and some other Elected Members of Executive Council fill the positions that we now fill in Government merely because we do not fit a certain profile and therefore would not be accepted by a right wing movement.

Madam Speaker, if we took a profile of each Member of the Opposition and compared that with the Elected Members of this Government and their Back Bench supporters, I think it could very quickly and easily be seen that the Elected Members of Government and their Back Bench supporters, individually and as a group, are better qualified to run this country than any of the Members of the Opposition.

The Speaker: Honourable Deputy Leader, is this a convenient time for the morning break?

Hon. Linford A. Pierson: Thank you, Madam Speaker.

Proceedings suspended at 11.50 am

Proceedings resumed at 12.23 pm

The Speaker: The Honourable Deputy Leader continuing his debate.

Hon. Linford A. Pierson: Thank you, Madam Speaker.

When we took the break I was making reference to a remark that had been made by the Third Elected Member for Bodden Town at a public meeting in George Town, when he said he was proud to be a right winger. I did, in fact, graciously give him the benefit of the doubt that he could not have understood the meaning of that phrase; otherwise I hoped that he would not be associating himself with such a group.

Madam Speaker, before I continue I wish to state that the contents of the referendum motion which I referred to—the Private Members' Motion with the six points—is not yet a document of this Honourable House even though it was publicised by the movers of the motion. And it is now public knowledge. So, for the sake of the debate I wanted to have that injected in the Hansard.

Picking up where I left off: one has to question what would be the motive of either the Opposition or indeed others for not wanting to have the present government in power when the new Constitution is brought into effect. I hope that I am totally wrong in my assessment of this situation because this is one instance when I would like to be found wrong, especially in the interest of the peace, tranquillity and sustained development of these Islands.

Number four of the six questions contained in the Opposition's referendum motion asked the question: “Should the Cayman Islands' Constitution contain provisions to permit the electorate to initiate a referendum?” We are blessed in the Cayman Islands. As a British Overseas Territory, we have been practising the Westminster style of a democratic government since 1831 (I think), and ever since we have had representative government. Under this system the elected representatives represent the electorate. Accordingly, the electorate has always had a direct link, an available contact with their representatives. The logical extension is that there is already a provision to permit the electorate to initiate a referendum through their representatives. In this connection there would therefore seem no need to alter this well-established Westminster system of government which has worked well within these Islands.

Again, this question cannot reasonably be regarded as a matter of national importance.

Number five of the six questions is: “Should term limits be placed on the holder of the office of Chief Minister?”

I would say definitely not as this could prevent individuals who are best qualified for the position from filling this most important office. I would advise all those who advocate such a change to understand that our system of government is not the same as that which obtains in the United States of America, where term limits are placed on the office of the President of the United States. Again, in my opinion, this cannot be regarded as a matter of national importance.

The last of the six questions the referendum motion suggests are matters of national importance, states: “Should a person who holds a nationality in addition to British Overseas Territory Citizenship by virtue of a connection to the Cayman Islands and British Citizenship be permitted to be elected as a Member of the Legislative Assembly?”

This, too, cannot be regarded as a matter of national importance within the criteria suggested in the Constitutional Commissioners’ Report. As stated in the Position Paper of the United Democratic Party, we regard the definition provided by the Commissioners under section 107 of their proposed Constitution as being much too narrow as their definition would preclude many able Caymanians from running for Office.

I further believe that the definition recommended by the United Democratic Party in their Position Paper is a much more inclusive, just, and equitable position, whereby those who would be eligible as Members of the Legislative Assembly, as well as electors, are being recommended.

The United Democratic Party’s definition is, and I quote: “A person who possesses British Overseas Territories Citizenship, British Citizenship or citizenship by virtue of birth outside the Cayman Islands and who;

“a) at the date of his birth had at least one of his parents or grandparents who was Caymanian as herein defined and who was domiciled in the Islands at the date of such birth, or

“b) has Caymanian Status”.

We feel that this is a much more inclusive definition of ‘Caymanian’.

Madam Speaker, having covered these most important issues stated earlier, it is my intention to now turn to the following recommendations of the Constitutional Commissioners, which the UDP found to be the most controversial during our various district meetings. The four issues include:

1. Fundamental rights and freedom of the individuals. (The Bill of Rights, pages 10-24 of the Commissioners’ Draft Constitution).
2. Introduction of single member constituencies (page 52, section 67).
3. The narrow definition of Caymanian (page 79, section 107).
4. Provision for referenda (page 45, section 50(2)).

The United Democratic Party supports the recommendation of the inclusion of the Fundamental Rights and Freedoms of the individual, also known as the Bill of Rights.

On the question of Human Rights, the White Paper stated: “The record of many Overseas Territories is positive but further work would be needed to ensure compatibility with the commitments which Britain has made on their behalf.”

It is my opinion—shared also by my colleagues—that perhaps one of the most important recommended changes to the Constitution is the inclusion of the Bill of Rights. Every person in the Islands should have his fundamental rights and freedoms protected, and it is most fitting that these fundamental rights and freedoms of the individual are enshrined in our Constitution.

Madam Speaker, to emphasise the point that has already been made by the Leader of Government Business, permit me to just refer again to these most important fundamental rights and freedoms. They are:

1. Protection of right to life.
2. Protection from inhuman treatment.
3. Protection from slavery and forced labour.
4. Protection of right to personal liberty.
5. Provisions to secure protection of law.
6. Protection of right of prisoners to humane treatment.
7. Protection for private and family life and the privacy of home and other property.
8. Protection of the right to marry etc.
9. Protection of freedom of conscience.
10. Protection of freedom of expression.
11. Protection of freedom of assembly and association.
12. Protection of freedom of movement.
13. Protection from discrimination on grounds of race, etc.
14. Protection from deprivation of property.

While it is appreciated that these fundamental Rights and freedoms of the individual will bring the Cayman Islands in line with the international obligations of the UK, we, the Members of the UDP, would nonetheless wish to see a provision inserted in the Bill of Rights that would draw attention to the unique social and cultural identity of the Cayman Islands, and to ensure that this identity is not ignored when the Constitution is being interpreted by the courts—with the suggested change in section 1 of part I of the Constitution, which would read: “Whereas the Cayman Islands is a Caribbean country with its own distinct history, culture, Christian values and socio-economic framework. Every person in the Islands is entitled to the fundamental rights and freedoms of the individual, that is to say, the right, whatever his race, place of origin, political or other opinion, colour, creed or sex, but subject to respect for the rights and freedoms of others and for the public interest, to each and all of the following, namely:

- a) Life, liberty, security of the person and the protection of the Law;
- b) Freedom of conscience, of expression and of assembly movement and association; and

- c) Protection for his privacy and family life, the privacy of his home and other property and from deprivation of property except in the public interest and on payment of fair compensation.”

In addition it is suggested that the definition of the Islands in section 107 of the Draft Constitution be amended to read, “‘The Islands’ means, the Cayman Islands as described in section 1 of part I of the Constitution.”

It is also suggested that wherever the phrase “Reasonably justifiable in a democratic society” is used, that the phrase be amended to read, “Reasonably justifiable in the democratic society of the Islands.”

It is suggested that these changes taken together would oblige the courts to give due attention to the social, cultural and economic, as well as the legal and judicial context of the Cayman Islands. Madam Speaker, I wish to pause here to congratulate those members of the Cayman Ministers’ Association and other churches for the input that they have given to Members of the UDP, much of which has been incorporated to become an integral part of the Bill of Rights for the Cayman Islands.

It is also recommended that the following special provision on freedom of thought, conscience and religion become an integral part of the section as was done in the UK. There was a similar request made when the Human Rights Act was being formulated by the Ministers’ Association in the UK and they were able to get their particular section included in their Act that we are requesting be included in our Bill of Rights, namely, “If a courts determination of any question arising under this section might affect the exercise by a religious organisation (itself or its members collectively) of the Constitutional right to freedom of thought, conscience and religion, it must have particular regard for the importance of that right.”

Madam Speaker, it is my submission that if the Bill of Rights is adopted without such changes it could eventually conflict with Vision 2008 and the National Strategic Plan. These documents stress the importance of basic human rights but place them within a Caymanian context.

For example, they speak of Cayman as a God-fearing country based on traditional Christian values, as a community protective of traditional Caymanian heritage and the family unit, which seeks to manage growth to prevent the degradation of our Caymanian culture, environment and socio-economic framework. They describe Cayman as a country with an Immigration system, which protects Caymanians and gives security to long-term residents, which seeks to develop an awareness of our Caymanian culture which is based on traditional Christian values and a strong family unit. These aspirations and values are not protected by Part One of the Draft Constitution as it stood, but are now included in the Position Paper of the United Democratic Party.

It is acknowledged that the remaining parts of the Constitution generally represent political advances that subject to further changes as we have mentioned in our Position Paper, will generally be welcomed by most people and political groupings in the Cayman Islands. These changes will move the Cayman Islands further along the road of political responsibility and maturity and give Caymanians a greater measure of autonomy and control over their own affairs. Part One, left unchanged, could nullify this process of political advancement.

Changes will give to the European Court of Human Rights the power to strike down any Law, which contravenes the Bill of Rights. Non-Caymanian judges will be able to override the wishes of Caymanians as expressed to their Elected Representatives had we not made this amendment to the Bill of Rights as was given to us initially by the Constitutional Commissioners.

The political gains represented by Parts Two through Eight of the new Draft Constitution could be reversed by the judicial force of Part One had we not incorporated those sections which I referred to. It is therefore incumbent on Caymanians to make every attempt to ensure that the Bill of Rights and its interpretation reflects and respects the history, culture and value of these Islands.

The next fairly controversial point that we had to deal with was the question of the introduction of single member constituencies, page 52, section 67, of the Draft Constitution.

While I, along with Members of the UDP, support the concept of modernising this area of the electoral system, I believe that the full introduction of single member constituencies and the ‘one man one vote’ which proposes to divide the Cayman Islands into 17 constituencies is—as was mentioned earlier by the Leader of Government Business in tabling our Position Paper—premature at this point in our development.

I believe that a better system would be to gradually phase in this concept. For example, rather than have six single-member constituencies in George Town, we could perhaps start with two or three constituencies until the voting population becomes more acquainted with the system. Then we could move to single-member constituencies with the principle of ‘one man, one vote’—similar to what was done in Bermuda.

Although the argument could be advanced that the North Side and East End districts already have single-member constituencies, it is important to note that the ‘one man, one vote’ that applies to these districts applies to the whole district and not to divisions within the districts, thus avoiding the danger alluded to in regard to those larger districts such as George Town, West Bay and Bodden Town, being divided into smaller constituencies.

I submit that in these districts, which now have multiple representation, such as George Town,

West Bay Bodden Town and Cayman Brac to a certain extent, that the introduction of the single-member constituencies should be phased in to avoid any socio-economic or racial problems.

The Speaker: Is this a convenient time for the luncheon break, Honourable Deputy Leader?

Hon. Linford A. Pierson: Yes, Madam Speaker.

The Speaker: We shall now suspend for the luncheon break and reconvene at 2.15 pm.

Proceedings suspended at 12.46 pm

Proceedings resumed at 2.44 pm

READING BY THE HONOURABLE SPEAKER OF MESSAGES AND ANNOUNCEMENTS

Apologies/Congratulations

The Speaker: Please be seated.

I have received apologies from the Minister of Education and the Minister responsible for Health who will be in their constituency this afternoon with His Excellency the Governor.

I would also wish on behalf of the Legislative Assembly to express our deepest congratulations to the Honourable Minister responsible for Community Services and welcome together with him and Mrs. McField, the birth of their son.

At this time I will call upon the Honourable Deputy Leader to continue his debate.

Hon. Linford A. Pierson: Thank you, Madam Speaker.

At the lunch break I started the process of the wind down on my debate and I was highlighting four of the issues that I considered had, perhaps, caused the greatest amount of controversy during the district meetings that were held by the United Democratic Party. I had covered two of those four areas: the fundamental rights and freedoms of the individuals also known as the Bill of Rights, and also the introduction of single-member constituencies. I now wish to turn my attention to the other two areas: the first one being the narrow definition given by the Commissioners to 'Caymanian.'

The Commissioners have given a narrow definition to 'Caymanian' in the Constitution, which is separate and apart from Cayman Status found on page 79, section 107. The Commissioners have defined 'Caymanian' in section 107 of the proposed Constitution to mean: "A person who possesses British Overseas Territories Citizenship by virtue of a connection with the Islands and who:

- a) was born in or outside of the Islands and at the date of his birth had at least one of his parents or grandparents who was Caymanian as herein defined and who was domiciled in the Islands at the date of such birth, and
- b) possesses no other citizenship and is pursuing no claim to any other citizenship for which he may be eligible."

There are four places in the proposed Constitution where it is necessary to be 'Caymanian' under the above narrow definition, namely:

- "(i) to act as Governor;
- (ii) to be Deputy Governor;
- (iii) to be an elector; and
- (iv) to be a member of the Legislative Assembly."

This definition excludes anyone holding dual citizenship. This in my view is an unreasonable departure from the provisions of the current Constitution, which allows for dual nationality by virtue of birth outside the Islands.

The Commissioners have distinguished in their definition between persons who are Caymanians and persons with Cayman Status effectively relegating status holders to a position of second class citizens. This backward step certainly cannot be the intention of the Commissioners when in fact they were commissioned to modernise our Constitution in keeping with the UK White Paper. There is no necessity to introduce this definition or references to the term.

The qualifications for elected membership to the Legislative Assembly as set forth in the 1987 Constitutional amendments have been unreasonably narrowed. Many able Caymanians will be precluded from running for office. This will be to the detriment of the Cayman Islands. The 1987 qualifications provided a reasonable balance where someone may stand for election if he –

- (i) has Cayman Status and is 21 years or over,
- (ii) is domiciled and resident in Cayman,
- (iii) has British Overseas Territories Citizenship due to a connection with the Islands;
- (iv) has no other citizenship (except by reason of birth provided he has a Cayman born and Status holding parent or grandparent); and
- (v) meets the required residency period.

An area of the present Constitution which requires further specific attention and amendment is the question of citizenship in light of the conferral of British Citizenship on British Overseas Territories citizens under the new British Overseas Territories Act 2002. Caymanian British Overseas Territories citizens are now entitled, and this entitlement has been conferred since the 21 May 2002. The question is: Is it appropriate that someone who takes advantage of this new British citizenship should be precluded from running for elected office? Certainly this is an area that requires much more thought and thus the reason why we, the United Democratic Party, have incorporated in our Position Paper what we regard as a suitable definition for 'Caymanian'.

As in the case of the qualification for elected membership to the Legislative Assembly, the narrow definition given by the Constitutional Modernisation Commissioners will also negatively affect electors. This will unnecessarily exacerbate the non-inclusive nature of the electoral system in the Cayman Islands and lead to an even smaller percentage of the long-term resident population of the Islands participating in the electoral process. Madam Speaker, this also cannot be desirable.

The definition of 'Caymanian' which I will repeat, and which the UDP has put forward in our Position Paper, reads as follows:- "A person who possesses British Overseas Territories Citizenship, British Citizenship, or citizenship by virtue of birth outside the Islands and who:

- a) at the date of his birth had at least one of his parents or grandparents who was Caymanian as herein defined and who was domiciled in the Islands at the date of such birth, or
- b) has Caymanian Status."

We feel that this definition is much more acceptable, just, and equitable to those individuals—particularly to those who decide to have the British Citizenship conferred upon them and decide to accept this—and, indeed, those individuals who because of medical reasons or otherwise had their birth outside of the Cayman Islands, for example, in the United States of America. We know that if for medical reason or otherwise a child is born in America, he automatically obtains American citizenship. But that would not make him any less Caymanian.

The last of the four areas that I wish to comment on has to do with the provision of referenda which I have spoken on at some length but wish to comment on a little further at this point and time. It is found on page 45, section 50 (2) of the Draft Constitution.

It is important to note right up front on the question of referenda that provision to enable a referendum law to be enacted now exists under the current Constitution, but no such law has to date been enacted. The Constitutional Commissioners have also included this provision under the proposed new Constitution. But they have also added a proviso (referred to earlier) that the question of whether the Islands should seek an amendment to the Constitution that may result in the independence of the Islands shall be a matter of national importance. Madam Speaker, we, the Members of the United Democratic Party, certainly supported that recommendation.

It is most interesting as it seems that only after certain Opposition Members not now within the House started speaking about referendum that the Opposition Members within the House thought that was a very good issue to discuss and decided to make it a major issue in their meetings.

It is important to note that if the purpose of a referendum is to obtain the precise views of the voting public, it necessarily follows that the subject on which the referendum is called must be broken down into sections so that each individual issue raised by the subject is capable of receiving a Yes or No answer.

For example, it would not be useful, and no doubt confusing to the voter, to ask the question 'do you support the Bill of Rights?' when the Bill of Rights as contained in a Draft Constitution is made up of 14 different sections—each of which would need to be broken down into several constituent parts in order to fully and clearly ascertain the views of the individual voter.

If so much difficulty would be presented by one section of the Draft Constitution, such as the Bill of Rights, imagine the confusion that could be caused if the various sections recommended by the Opposition had to be similarly broken down to obtain a Yes or No answer. It therefore baffles me why any well-thinking representative of the people would wish to put them through such a difficult and frustrating process when they have yet to show any justification where such a process is in the interest of the wellbeing of the people of these Islands.

I have always held, since the first meeting I conducted in the George Town Town Hall, that a referendum is most effective when it deals with individual and specific issues. It would not provide correct results when multiple issues are involved.

Madam Speaker, in coming to a close I wish to reiterate some of the points raised during my debate on the amended Motion before the House today, which reads: "BE IT RESOLVED THAT this Honourable Legislative Assembly debates and takes note of the Report of the Constitutional Modernisation Review Commissioners 2002."

In listening to the Opposition in their attempt to sometimes make light of the 'take note' Motion, I have to wonder whether they really fully understand what it means. The 'take note' Motion as previously explained in this House—which I will repeat again, especially for the sake of the Opposition—enables the House to debate a matter without coming to any positive decision (Page 441, Twenty-second Edition of Erskine May). This type of Motion was necessary to overcome the conundrum facing Government, in that we were able to accept parts of the Constitutional Commissioners' Report, but we were unable to accept other parts of it. Thus, it would have been very difficult to have had an affirmative Motion on the Commissioners' Report. We were unable to vote 'Yes' on it and we would have been unable to vote 'No' on it, thus the reason we took the view and the route of preparing a Position Paper from the UDP which examined all areas of the Report and gave our views on each area.

Madam Speaker, I believe that when and if a Motion is taken on this to approve it that it will then form the basis of the position of the majority of Members of this House if indeed it is approved.

I trust that short explanation, once again, will enable the Opposition to understand why the Government (the UDP) decided to take the route of using a 'take note' Motion on the Report of the Constitutional Commissioners rather than an affirmative Motion in this House.

Again, I wish to take the opportunity to congratulate you as the Speaker of this Honourable House for the professional manner in which you have conducted the affairs of this House ever since you became Speaker, and, in particular, the very unbiased and professional approach in the handling of the disgraceful behaviour by the First and Second Elected Members for George Town. Your action can only be described as admirable.

We have seen in many countries, including the great United States, where the popularity of many key people, like presidents, tends to soar during a crisis time. I think this is so well known, that movies have also been made on such a political sort of policy that is followed by many politicians. We have seen it recently with the President of the United States (George Bush) how his popularity soared following the 9/11 catastrophe when he decided to put troops into Afghanistan to root out the Taliban and the Al-Qaida groups. This type of policy is well known throughout the world and we are now seeing a similar situation in the Cayman Islands. I submit, and verily believe, that the whole objective of this furore that we have seen recently was to improve the political standing of the Opposition in developing the membership of the People's Progressive Movement. As I said earlier, what makes me angry is that they believe that by fooling the people they would be able to accomplish their self-political ends.

I contend that the last thing in the minds of those individuals was the interest of the people of these Islands. Had they seriously intended to bring a referendum motion to this Honourable House they would have done what each of us (including myself) have had to do over the years, and that is comply with the ruling of the Honourable Speaker of the House. It is disgraceful the way that those two Members—and by extension the Opposition—behaved, and the derogatory remarks they had to make about you and this Honourable House at their public meetings.

I say again, and I hope that the public understands precisely where I am coming from, I do not believe that the First Elected Member for George Town and his cohorts and the Members of the Opposition, had any serious intention of having the referendum motion passed. What did they do? They decided not to comply with the rulings of the Chair. They went out and held a meeting and told the people, 'See what the Speaker is doing to us; see what the UDP is doing to us; they will not allow you to have your referendum; they are impeding your rights.'

Nothing could be further from the truth. We would have been happy to debate them on a referendum motion had they brought the referendum motion in the proper form. But they deliberately decided to flout the rules of the House so that they could create a crisis and, therefore, get a following with the expressed intention of developing the newly formed People's Progressive Movement, for their own selfish political agenda. This is my own considered opinion and I believe that it is shared by many well-thinking people.

They knew that the motion they brought was flawed. They knew, because they seem to know everything. So they had to know that neither one of those six issues they recommended to be considered as national issues could qualify under the criteria that had been provided by the Constitutional Commissioners in the Constitutional Review when they used as an example of national importance the independence of your country—something that will change the course of your country and will have a significant impact on your country. Putting on the shoulders of the people of this country $55-plus million onto our already heavy public debt; that is a matter of national importance.

Provision was made at the time that the former Leader of Government Business brought this to the House. Why did he not ask the people their opinion before he put the country into such heavy debt? Why did he not ask the people's opinion about the $60 million that he raised for Cayman Airways that will become a continuant liability of the Government? He is playing games, and he should be truthful. He is the one who is going out there talking about, 'It is truth time Cayman'. He had better start practising what he is preaching!

The whole exercise—the whole socio-economic and political unrest that we see in the country today is through political one-upmanship, trying to meet a certain political agenda. It has nothing to do with the betterment of the people of these Islands. It has only to do with their own selfish political agenda—with one eye on 2004.

I believe that the process carried out by the UDP has been done in accordance with the terms of the White Paper (Partnership for Progress and Prosperity), which was given to all of the UK Overseas Territories. Within that was the directive to Overseas Territories to modernise their Constitutions. I do believe that the UDP has complied in every area with that directive. I also believe that these Islands will be better off as a result of the action that the UDP has taken in this respect, and can only call on the Opposition to cease in their attempt to destabilise the country through their efforts of inflaming the passions and emotions of our people. I would again ask them to put their own political agenda on the backburner and think of the interest of the people of these Islands, especially during this economic downturn that we are now experiencing.

Finally, I wish to congratulate the previous Governor who has been relegated by Members of the Opposition. But I think in the process of this Constitutional Modernisation Review he was pivotal and did a good job. I believe I know why there is such hatred from the Opposition for him. It is obvious that he would not be the biggest fan of the First and Second Elected Members for George Town, as it was during his tenure that the First Elected Member for George Town was removed as Leader of Government Business. I know they have not forgiven him for that. So I do not expect that they will be out there singing his praises. But, Madam Speaker, he did a very good job in assisting with this Constitutional exercise. I want to also thank him for agreeing to extend the consultative process by some nine and a half weeks.

Thanks also to my colleagues for extending the time even further (for another half day) to convene the First and Second Elected Members for George Town, who had been suspended from the House until 3.20 pm of the day we were supposed to recommence, but decided to adjourn so that they could attend.

The Speaker: Honourable Deputy Leader, you have four minutes remaining.

Hon. Linford A. Pierson: Thank you, Madam Speaker.

I support the Position Paper which has been presented by the Honourable Leader of Government Business, as evidenced by my signature appended thereto, and I look forward to voting for its approval as the majority position in this Honourable House.

I thank you, Madam Speaker.

The Speaker: Thank you.

Does any other Member wish to speak? The Fourth Elected Member from the district of West Bay.

Mr. Cline A. Glidden Jr: Thank you, Madam Speaker.

It is a great privilege to stand here to do what I feel is my duty as a representative of the people: to express their opinions and their feelings—opinions that have been expressed to me and other Members of my party, the United Democratic Party (UDP), on an issue as important as this one.

At times when it is convenient, the Opposition Members of the People's Progressive Movement (PPM) take great interest in saying that this issue (the Constitution) is of national importance. But it is hard to believe that they could genuinely feel that this issue is of national importance [because] when they had the opportunity to stand here and debate the merits and demerits of the proposed Commissioners' Report they instead used this opportunity to gain some political mileage by boycotting the debate and doing less important things—I am not sure whether it is going around stirring up people, going fishing, or planting some produce to give away at the Glass House.

The Speaker: Honourable Member is that your opinion?

Mr. Cline A. Glidden Jr: Yes, Madam Speaker. I am just stating the possibilities—my opinion.

It really bothers me that having been accused of being a part of a Government that uses such heavy-handed techniques—we made a very considered decision to not only suspend the sitting of this Honourable House to allow two Members who had been [suspended]—again in my opinion, correctly suspended—to be a part of this very important debate

It amazes me that during the time after their suspension at a meeting in North Side, I heard that they were saying the reason for their suspension is that the Speaker wanted to restrict their opportunity to debate this important issue. We made sure that there could be no justified accusations of that being the case. Even after going to the great extent to adjourn the House to allow those Members to be a part of this historic and important debate, they still insisted that they would not come and represent their people. What even makes that more amusing is that according to them they represent the majority view. If they have been given that mandate; if they have the majority view to represent, how could they feel that they are good representatives by not representing those views?

I am real proud to be a part of a Government that not only took into account the suspension of the Opposition Members, but also the perception that could have been acquired by people who are concerned about an important issue such as the Constitutional debate, feeling that in some way maybe the views of the minority, even though the verbatim Hansard is going to be forwarded to the United Kingdom. But there could have still been a perception that the views of the minority would not have been taken into account. For if we look at the way that normal motions are debated in the Legislative Assembly, usually the importance of those motions is gathered from the resolution, and if the motion passes with a majority it is very possible that the minority's views would be understated or be ignored.

In consideration of that fact, the UDP made a decision to amend the motion that we would no longer have to vote on or the Opposition feeling that they had to win the debate. There were no winners or losers in the debate because we amended the motion to say we would debate and take note of the motion. So, regardless of whether there was one Member's opinion, or whether there were the nine Members of the UDP, it made no difference as far as numbers were concerned. And even with an attempt to give that consideration to the Opposition they not only criticised that decision, but decided to boycott the debate.

I think this goes along the continued path that the Opposition (the PPM) have expressed as being their modus operandi. It is really saddening to see that the PPM, along with the People for Referendum (PFR) tried to make a separation of the two of them. I guess it is supposed to be coincidence that the members of the PFR are all members of the PPM. They try to give themselves some more independence and credibility by saying, 'This is not our referendum, this is the referendum for the people and this is the People for Referendum that are out getting these signatures'. I think we all know that the PFR and the PPM are one and the same. The irresponsible actions by those members have gone a long way in having a detrimental effect to the destabilising of our country.

One of the things that Cayman is known for is a very stable government. They were making it seem as if there were questions as to the state of democracy in the Cayman Islands. We were told that the Department of Tourism office was getting many calls with concern as to whether or not it was now safe to visit Cayman; or whether all of the activity that was going on made it unsafe for our tourists, that we spend so much money attempting to get to come to Cayman. To believe that five Elected Members and a group of their followers would be involved in something that would have a negative impact on the Cayman Islands . . . it is really amazing and very disappointing!

If it were not bad enough that they would bring questions on the stability of the country, they decided to make a joke of it going through the streets with wheelbarrows and ground baskets—with something that they saw as important as the referendum.

Now, Madam Speaker, you have travelled quite a bit, and I know the rest of us have too. On many occasions I have spoken to people who have not been to the Cayman Islands and only know it as being a Third World Country. They refer to the way the natives live and sometimes perceive us as living in grass huts and swinging from trees. I am sure that when such people saw on the front page of our newspaper in the international headlines our representatives and their supporters going down the main street with wheelbarrows and ground baskets that did not do too much to help dispel that notion of the uncivilised nature that some people see Cayman as.

We have to ask the question, Is this a testament as to how the PPM or the PFR feel about the majority of the population? It could be questioned as to whether they actually want to keep the country in the Dark Ages by providing the populace with misinformation and riling them up in the emotive way that they did.

It is amazing and real discouraging for me to be a part of this Honourable House—to have worked with Members of the Government and now to see them [the Opposition] in what appears to be an attempt to stagnate the progress of our beloved country at a time when we have so many issues that we have to deal with; at a time when we are facing unheard of ratios of unemployment, when people are worrying about their children finding employment when they come out of school and when those who had steady jobs are being laid off because of the big accounting firms closing down, people being relocated; at a time when there are cries for education reform; at a time when we are still fighting with the best method to provide housing for the many underprivileged people who have not been able to find decent living accommodations; at a time when the Social Services [Department] is being stretched and strained to try to provide for the needy; at a time when there is over-crowding at our prisons where we are looking at ways and means of trying to deal with the overcrowding before we get into a disastrous situation; at a time when we are suffering the scourges of drug abuse and the need for drug rehabilitation; at a time when we are under tremendous strain trying to rebuild our tourism product and try to get people back into Cayman spending money, when we are trying to encourage foreign investment to come to the Cayman Islands when all around the region and around the world there is so much competition for that foreign investment dollar—that at those times we could have supposedly responsible parliamentarians taking to the streets to make a political issue of something like our Constitution just to gain political mileage.

When they get up on the steps of the Court House and talk about democracy under attack and freedom under threat and how they could be put under the prison, and that they are proud to be right wingers, I believe they honestly do know the effect that has on our beloved Cayman Islands. I find it real disturbing that knowing the detrimental affect that it is having they are still willing to sacrifice the serenity and stability of Cayman for their political motivations.

Madam Speaker, it was a lot of talk concerning the proposed referendum and, again, it is amazing to see that something as important to the people as the referendum, something which many Members in this House expressed their support of before, could attempt to be used in such a political way. I cannot believe that they are so selfish that they would rather disrupt the country for their political gains instead of working with the Government to make the country successful.

When we speak about the referendum, that there were Members before the United Democratic Party that supported the referendum, I know that there has been much talk as to whether or not the Members that brought the motion genuinely wanted the motion to succeed. But even the question of referendum (that question of national importance) . . . I know that the PPM tend to feel that they have a monopoly on intelligence and they feel that they can make a verdict as to whether something is of national importance or not, but if we were discussing—and many Members over here have said before that they support a referendum on items of national importance and the question has been asked what could be more important than the Constitution.

We all agree that the Constitution is very important, but what was interesting was that this referendum was not on the Constitution. It was not about whether or not we should have a new modernised Constitution. If the referendum was being proposed to say whether the Cayman Islands wanted a new Constitution, I do not think anyone would be able to argue that that is a matter of national importance. But when we in our wisdom choose six items of the proposed Constitution and we decide that those six items are of national importance, who gives us the authority to decide what areas of our Constitutional modernisation are of national importance?

The churches had a lot of concern about the Bill of Rights. I am sure if you speak to them they would say that the inclusion of the Bill of Rights is an issue of national importance. But here we have the People for Referendum. Their proposal is calling for a referendum on the Constitution, but there is no inclusion of the Bill of Rights. Does that mean it is not an issue of national importance? It was so obvious to see how the PPM made a calculated attempt to get people involved in this referendum issue. Again, not based on anything to do with the Constitution but because they saw this as a way of gaining the support of what they felt would be a majority of the voting populace through emotive means.

We have people in West Bay who have come to us and said, 'They came and asked me to sign the petition and I told them I did not want to sign it and they told me this has nothing to do with our support for Mac, this is against independence'. They said 'this is nothing to do against the Government; this is because the United Kingdom wants us to go independent and this is showing that you do not support independence, so sign the petition.'

I stood at a gas station in George Town and overheard a person who was trying to get another individual sign the referendum saying, 'If you support Kurt sign this referendum, if you support Mac then do not sign'. I have also heard persons saying, 'If you support the decision to suspend the two Members then do not sign, but if you think that that decision was wrong, then sign the petition'.

Now, these were supposed to be people that were responsible for seeing whether or not the general populace was supportive of the Constitutional Review; seeing whether or not they were supportive of the modernisation as proposed by the review. But it has been taken to a level where there is no discussion of the values of the Constitution—the merits and demerits. It is getting down to strictly politics; it is going right back to 8 November 2001, when there was a shift in the power base. Now, our Opposition Members see this as a possible opportunity to regain some power so they use whatever means available to them on such an important issue as our constitutional modernisation.

Madam Speaker, it really bothers me to hear them purport to be representing a majority of the people. As we can see in this debate they are representing no one. But suppose their intelligence has [shown] that they have the majority of support. I really have great difficulty with the method of calculating that majority. But, again, maybe they know something that we do not know.

Suppose there were 6,500 petitioners that signed saying that they wanted a referendum on the Constitution before it was debated. If we have 6,400 residents (and we just had a census a few years ago that shows that we have 40,000 residents) it is amazing to me how anyone can determine that 6,400 would be a majority of 40,000. I have heard about creative accounting before, but this brings it to new levels.

We have gone over and have tried to authenticate those versus the register of voters and I think there are some 12,000 registered voters. My information tells me that there should be around 50 per cent of the 7,000 would actually be registered voters. That would be 3,500 of 12,000 if we look at registered voters. But yet we have the PPM claiming to have representation from the majority of the people to say that they want a referendum.

Now, if I have 33,000 people out of 40,000 that have not signed the petition and have therefore said, 'No, we do not want a referendum' or, if I have 9,000 of the 12,000 registered voters that have not signed the petition and have therefore said 'No, we do not support a referendum', as a good responsible Government I think that is a clear indication as to where the majority of support lies.

Also, taking into account all the emotions that were running rampant during the time when this petition was going forward. If there was ever a time that an Opposition could have [received] the majority of support, it should have been then. But even with all the concern over the Members—and this happens to be the Member that was the most popular in George Town, our biggest constituency!—I think he got 3,000 votes. Now, even with all of that they were only able to get less than 25 per cent of whichever number residents or persons on the voters list. So, there we have 75 per cent. What is really encouraging is that 75 per cent of those people—even the 25 per cent did not take a position as to whether or not they supported the Government or the views put forward by the PPM. But it would have been hard for them to say whether they supported that because until now no one knows the position of the elected representatives. We still do not know whether or not they support the Constitutional Review; we do not know whether or not they support the modernisation; we do not know what recommendations they support.

Up until now we have not received a position paper from them. This is the time when they should be here debating their views and make the opinions of the people known (that they represent) for all to hear.

But they have decided that they have something more important to do with their time.

When we talk about the undermining and the destabilising, it is important for us to note that something as serious as the Constitution, it had broad ranging effects. It even went as far as causing division in some of our churches because it is a very emotive topic, especially the Bill of Rights. The United Democratic Party got representation from members of various churches as to their concerns about the way that the proposed Constitution would change and affect the way of living for many Caymanian people, especially the negative effect it would have on our religious beliefs.

While it was interesting and very helpful to gain the views of members of the clergy, it is very hard to get a presentation from a minister with his concerns and to then take those presentations as being unbiased and objective—only to have a minister from the Cayman Islands Ministers' Association stand up in town and encourage people to come to a political meeting.

When the ministers took a decision to get involved politically (by obviously taking sides and not only inviting people to come to the meeting but also getting on the platform and speak at the meeting) it is almost impossible for any rational thinking individual to then assume that their opinions are non-political; that their opinions are still unbiased and that they have any objectivity. So, it makes us question what were the motives behind those recommendations. How much weight can we place on those recommendations?

Any time you have to start questioning members of the clergy who get up and preach love and unity, preachers who would know that taking a stand on a political issue stands a chance of dividing a congregation, it is real hard to accept representation from those individuals. You then tend to look at it in the same way I would take it as coming from any other Member of the Opposition. I would look and take account of it and say, 'Yes, this is possibly a good idea or bad idea'. But I also place quite a bit of weight on the political aspirations of those individuals.

Now, this debate on this issue has caused us to have to do a similar thing with some members. I am happy to see that it was very limited as to those preachers and pastors who felt the need to get involved at the level that they did, but it was saddening to see that some made the decision to.

It is very similar to the unsuccessful members that ran in West Bay. I think West Bay had the most candidates; we had four seats and twenty-two candidates. It was amazing to see that all of those people (prior to the election) felt like they had something positive that they could contribute. They all felt that, If the people of West Bay decide to elect us as their representatives, we have something positive that we can contribute to making Cayman a better place for us all to live. But then after the election process and four Members were elected, the other eighteen persons who had so much to offer, all of a sudden it appears that they have nothing to give except criticism. There is never any positive solution or proposal.

In West Bay we make a point of having quarterly meetings and those persons do not even attend the meetings to offer any suggestions. But as soon as there is an issue that becomes what they see as possibly an issue where the Government of the day is taking a bit of political battering, they all of a sudden jump up. We start seeing them in marches; you hear them on the 'Talk' shows criticising what a bad job the Government is doing—never anything constructive! All of a sudden they have gone from being able to offer the people a positive contribution and making a positive contribution to Cayman, to only criticising the current Government!

Talking about West Bay, I remember right after the election one of the unsuccessful candidates started a district council. He had a lot to offer. He did not want to join the district council that was already started so he decided that he was going to form his own. There was a lot of PR about the district council and the value it would bring. But since that time we have neither seen nor heard anything about the district council again. Actually, we have heard nothing about the individual either, but now I happen to see him in this march with the People for Referendum. All of a sudden he is using this opportunity again to jump up and criticise the Government.

One of the individuals who writes in the newspapers all the time (I think his name is Mr. Dexter Rivers) . . . after the elections he sent me an email offering me congratulations saying, 'I was on the opposite side but I just wanted to know whether this avenue was available so that we could have some constructive debate and so I could give some suggestions'. Madam Speaker, I did not receive any more email. I did not get anymore discussions and it is amazing to see that he as well used this opportunity to get up and call for this referendum—but during the rest of the time, nothing positive to contribute.

One of the candidates who is now calling for a referendum—she debated the Constitution at every one of her meetings. She called for the cancellation by the UK of the Order in Council and we all know that the only time that the UK will give up that kind of power is when the UK gives us independence. Even with all the criticism that we took during the elections of being radical, the UDP Government has never talked about wanting or supporting independence. It just goes to show, even with the monopoly on intelligence, it is very easy to get caught up and say things that we feel are going to be popular. We talk about the UK cancelling the right to provide for the Order in Council. That same individual spoke about the need for full internal self government and the difference between full internal self government and internal self government. She challenged the father of this House to a debate on the issue. Again, she knows everything about the Constitution—she knows everything about everything!

A few days ago I heard her on the radio criticising the Minister for Education because he mentioned that referendums throughout the world tend to be more specific only on a few topics—three the maximum. She disagreed with that. Her information tells her that it is normal to have referendums on a whole slew of items.

It is amazing that six months down the line, even after we got over the switch in power on 8 November we are still back to the personality politics. On every issue that we get a little opportunity we always go back to 'McKeeva versus Kurt; West Bay versus George Town; black versus white'—these issues that really have nothing to do with the Constitution.

I think the main problem with the PPM goes back before the election in 2000, because the First Elected Member for George Town had associations with other Members. I guess his chief advisor (the brain of the group) decided that even though we were getting close to the election and fifteen people would be elected, their intention was to become Leader of Government Business and, I guess, Deputy Leader of Government Business—I am not sure exactly what else, but I know that the main emphasis was getting Leader of Government Business. Even though he needed a majority of support for that he was able to advise him at that time to not make any affiliations with anyone else—once you have me, you have all that you need. I am all that you need out of the fifteen Members once you and I get elected.

I guess it is that same fuzzy math that calculates what is the majority of the population. But a majority was calculated to mean two of fifteen being a majority. And so they did not form any alliances, they got elected and then the game started. They ran from West Bay, to George Town, to East End, North Side, back and forth trying to form a Government that would allow them as two of them, as a minority, to form the Government.

We all know the scenario that was played out. They were able to somehow get a majority and get Leader of Government Business. It meant that they got Leader of Government Business but they did not get two seats on Executive Council.

A lot of the problems that started were because the brain of the group was not only happy with getting Leader of Government Business but he also had to dictate who the other Ministers would be. He was operating very much like how the proposed Chief Minister position is in the new Constitution. He was the real power broker—he would decide which other Members . . . 'West Bay, you got four together in a group but you do not deserve to have any Ministers in Council, and Cayman Brac you have two and you do not deserve to have any, and George Town you have one and maybe if you all are nice to us we will give you another one'.

Finally, after much ado, the Government was formed.

Well, within a very short time that marriage of convenience started to show signs of weakening and the problems became evident. And the lack of leadership abilities became evident and the majority that had formed the government and chosen the Leader of Government Business, once again in this great democracy that we have, decided that we needed a change in leadership.

The country had been stagnant for too long. There had been too many issues like the proposed referendum that had been forgotten. The Leader had forgotten too many things and so we wanted a change. Even though we sat in a room and the majority decided that we wanted that change, the brain of the group again—the chief legal advisor—advised his client, 'do not worry about what the majority says, you got me on your side again, do not listen to them, they are telling you to step aside and take a position, to give the leadership up, they only have the numbers, we have the intelligence on this side, they cannot do it. What we are going to do instead of taking the advice and doing the obvious thing, we are going to the people and try to stir up some civil unrest and we are going to start doing some marches and some demonstrations because that is the way that we know politics should work'.

The Speaker: Honourable Member, when you refer to the chief legal advisor, out of the abundance of caution so that there would be no confusion with the principal Legal Advisor, the Chair would appreciate if you would identify the person to whom you refer in such reference.

Mr. Cline A. Glidden Jr: Madam Speaker, I was speaking about the chief legal advisor for the PPM. I am not sure exactly who that is any more. I am just assuming that there was some legal advice based on the procedures and the events that followed. So, I could assume that person happens to be the Second Elected Member for George Town. Just in my opinion.

The Speaker: The Second Official Member.

Hon. David F. Ballantyne: Perhaps I could clarify that, to the best of my knowledge, part of my responsibilities is to act as principal legal advisor to the Government. I did not take issue with my colleague because I did not think there was any difficulty in disassociating myself from the subject of his remarks.

Thank you.

The Speaker: Thank you Honourable Second Official Member.

Please continue Fourth Elected Member from the district of West Bay.

Mr. Cline A. Glidden Jr: Thanks so much for that clarification and I really appreciate the Second Official Member's acknowledgement. And I clearly want to state that when we talk about chief legal advisor it was to the PPM or to the First Elected Member from George Town who was the Leader of Government Business and not to the Government.

Madam Speaker, it appeared that what they felt the best course of action was, instead of accepting what the majority wanted, the majority of the elected Members who elected and chose the Leader of Government Business at that time, they decided that once again they would go to the people and stir up a lot of emotive issues. There were a lot of people that voted for the First Elected Member for George Town. Those people would be upset to have him removed so that is the method that they would use to stop the democratic process.

Thankfully, democracy prevailed; the majority won and that Member in all of his wisdom, failed with his advice that was given. We all know that egos make it difficult to accept failure and so we stood by the wayside and waited for the next attempt. 'When can I stir up some more civil unrest, when can I cause some more pressure on the Government again?'

He did not have very long to wait because before we knew it the 2002 Budget was here. Again, because of the indecisive nature of the previous Leader, we found ourselves in a very dire situation where the country was faced with some $90 million shortfall between revenue and expenditure.

After much belt-tightening and sharpening of the pencils, it came down to some $54 million. The United Democratic Party Government decided that we could not tax the common man anymore—the only way of doing that would be to raise license fees. And we would have to make some significant adjustments to the license fees in the financial industry.

Well, he took that opportunity again to jump up and down and talk about how this was going to ruin our financial industry; how the banks were going to leave; how our people would be unemployed; all doom and gloom: companies would leave. Once again working on those emotive aspects of the populace, but in the meantime offering no possible solution.

By the previous year's indication, his proposal would have been to go and borrow to increase the public debt. So, he again tried to rile up the crowds to bring the country into a state of unrest as any radical would do. Thankfully, again, he failed.

Now we get to the situation of the Constitutional Review debate: very important and emotive debate. Madam Speaker, I know you were involved in politics for a while. In 1992 there was a debate on the Constitution that has always been an emotive aspect. I know especially in your constituency any time there is a discussion on the Constitution the people's concern is always whether we are going to have any advancement towards the modernisation or towards independence and so it is very easy to stir the masses again.

In true fashion, being the radical that he is, he produced what was being referred to as a "water-tight" motion calling for referendum on six issues of national importance. This motion was brought in the name of the First Elected Member for George Town, but when the motion was discussed with you, of course his chief legal advisor (that is, the chief legal advisor to the First Elected Member from George Town), that person being the Second Elected Member from George Town. I am sure he is also their Constitutional advisor—he was asked whether he could be allowed to come in to the meeting with you to discuss the motion.

What we found was that the motion was not as "water-tight" as he said it was. We found that the motion was a little bit porous and it was quite a bit of problems with that motion. And you in your wisdom, Madam Speaker, and in your kindness, you attempted to assist the Member by making the recommendations as to what could be done to make the motion acceptable—as we all expected any responsible parliamentarian to do, to have the motion amended.

But in true radical fashion, continuing with the modus operandi, once again the decision was made to take it to the streets. 'Let us go out and rile up the crowds again, let us go out and slander the name of the Speaker, let us go out and slander the Government, let us go out and slander the House and talk about the integrity of the Speaker'—once again playing on the emotions of our people and at all times very cognisant of the detrimental effect that this is having on our beautiful, serene Cayman Islands. Very cognisant of the fact that when you try to encourage investors and foreign investment to come into the country that all of these indications of instability do a lot to run away those investors to some of the other more competitive jurisdictions.

Thankfully, once again his attempt failed. When the failures as responsible representatives were exposed and you asked them to apologise, you gave them the opportunity on many occasions when they could have very easily apologised. They knew that was the decent thing to do; they knew that was the right thing to do; they knew that was the responsible thing as representatives elected by the people to do; to show honour and respect to the position of the Chair. But once again they made that choice that would be too easy to do, and that would save the country of too much embarrassment. What did they choose to do? It should not be hard for anyone following the story to know what to expect.

Once again they went back to the people and riled them up. They went so far . . . and I want to congratulate and give you credit for the foresight and judgment you made because we had a situation that could have become even more volatile than what did occur. For when they recognised that they did have some people whose emotions were stirred up who were out there cursing and calling for someone's head, they decided to have a public meeting to continue the process. They felt that you in your power, recognising what was being done and the abuses that were taking place, that when you exercised the punishment that you could have exercised, that once again that might have been the straw that broke the camel's back and that might have caused the type of unrest and disturbance that they wanted.

I would just like to use this opportunity to refer to where—because I think a lot of the listening public does not recognise how far they did push and how far the power of the Chair does extend—and I quote from the Immunities Powers and Privileges Law (1999 Revision) section 18(2): -“(2) Whoever-

“(a) publishes any statement, whether in writing or otherwise, which falsely or scandalously defames the Assembly or any committee, or which reflects on the character of the Speaker or the chairman of a committee in the discharge of his duty as such;

“(b) publishes any writing containing a gross, wilful or scandalous misrepresentation of the proceedings of the Assembly or a committee or of the speech of any member in the proceedings of the Assembly or a committee;

“(c) publishes any writing containing any false or scandalous libel on any member touching his conduct as a member; or is guilty of an offence and liable on conviction before the Grand Court to a fine of eight hundred dollars and to imprisonment for twelve months.”

Madam Speaker, when it talks about—“ . . . or which reflects on the character of the Speaker or the chairman of a committee in the discharge of his duty as such;” I think we could all agree that there were grounds, at least for that to have gone to . . . I want to put a little caveat in there that says: - “19. No prosecution for an offence under this Law shall be instituted except with the written sanction of the Attorney-General.”

Madam Speaker, with all that was being said at the time it is (at least in my opinion) very possible that those sanctions could have been brought. But I feel that if such had occurred we would not be enjoying the stability and serenity that we currently enjoy. And I feel that the wisdom of all who were involved was very clearly expressed by not attempting to bring the penalties that may have been possible, but allowing it to play itself the way it did; allowing those people who wanted to have a say, to have a say.

The Speaker: Honourable Second Official Member.

Point of Clarification

Hon. David F. Ballantyne: Madam Speaker, I have no desire to unnecessarily interrupt the proceedings but I am slightly concerned about the . . .

The Speaker: Is it a point of elucidation?

Hon. David F. Ballantyne: Point of clarification.

I think reference to possible exercise of discretion on the part of the person occupying the position which I do, perhaps should be avoided. If I may just offer that observation. I do not propose to comment any further on the circumstances. But I would prefer that the Chair make clarification if appropriate.

The Speaker: Thank you, Second Official Member.

Fourth Elected Member from West Bay, I think the point has been taken and you did make an attempt to bring it to [the attention of] Members and the wider listening public section 19 which stated that; “No prosecution for an offence under this Law shall be instituted except with the written sanction of the Attorney-General.” The Honourable Second Official Member has amplified that, and we are grateful for that, so perhaps if you could move on from that point.

Mr. Cline A. Glidden Jr: Thanks so much for that clarification. I just wanted to make sure that everyone is aware of the powers that are available there.

The Speaker: Is this a convenient time for the afternoon break? Or would you wish to go on to a new point?

Mr. Cline A. Glidden Jr: It is a good time.

The Speaker: We shall now suspend for the afternoon break.

Proceedings suspended at 4.17 pm

Proceedings resumed at 5.05 pm

The Speaker: Please be seated.

Proceedings are resumed. We have passed the hour of interruption. May I call on the Honourable Deputy Leader to move the suspension of Standing Order 10(2)?

Moment of Interruption

Suspension of Standing Order 10(2)

Hon. Linford A. Pierson: Madam Speaker, I move the suspension of Standing Order 10(2) to allow for debate pass the hour of adjournment.

The Speaker: Thank you.

The question is that Standing Order 10(2) be suspended to allow the House to continue its business until 6 pm this afternoon. All those in favour please say Aye. Those against, No.

Ayes.

The Speaker: The Ayes have it. Accordingly, the House will continue business until 6 pm today.

Agreed: Standing Order 10(2) suspended to allow proceedings of the House to continue until 6 pm.

The Speaker: Continuing the debate, the Fourth Elected Member from the district of West Bay.

Mr. Cline A. Glidden Jr: Thank you, Madam Speaker.

When we took the break I was emphasising the irresponsible actions of the PPM, and more specifically by the First and Second Elected Members from George Town and the way that they have attempted to stir up the populace and cause civil unrest and to change the serene and safe Cayman Islands into being something a lot less attractive.

I was going over the method of operation that they have been using before the 2000 Election right up until the last attempt. And I am real proud to be able to say that with all that has been happening the majority of people of Cayman have once again shown their intelligence and their astuteness as to what is really happening. They recognise the need for us to have stability and that democracy is alive and well in Cayman even though there are some of the Elected Members who would like to make people believe that there is what they call a threat on democracy.

The final attempt that they used during their contribution to the amendment to the motion—even after threatening to boycott the debate, they decided to come into the Legislative Assembly just to make their position known. And Madam Speaker, they chose to base their one line of reasoning on a document, namely, the Constitutional Modernisation Checklist but not as would have been expected by responsible representatives.

The document they chose to use was not the original document, but one that had apparently been amended, I can only assume for brevity. It clearly stated on the bottom of that the source was GIS (Government Information Service) and they were very proud to table that document knowing full well (I assume that as representatives they knew) that the source for such a document, Constitutional Modernisation Checklist, could in no way be Government Information Service. I would assume that as representatives they would know that GIS does not have the authority to issue a Constitutional Modernisation Checklist. If they were really interested in giving the correct information they would have done a little bit of research to get the original document (which a Member of the UDP tabled already) that shows the origin as being the Overseas Territories Department of the Foreign and Commonwealth Office.

Now, I have been told that attempts have been made to insinuate that in some way the United Democratic Party (the Government) was given preferential treatment and given access to this document when they [the PPM] did not have access to it. Once again, instead of accepting responsibility for their lack of research and ability in obtaining the correct document, they are trying to say that there is something underhanded in the way this document came about.

I can understand their concern because it has to be really embarrassing to come into the Legislative Assembly and submit a good hour and a half or two hours of argument basing it on a position in a document when the original document has been left out. And the Government of the day has to come afterwards and expose this weakness in their research and in their argument. I can fully understand why they would be looking somehow to place the blame on someone else as to who gave them the wrong document.

It was interesting to note that section 18 that the First Elected Member for George Town referred to so much in his debate when he referred to the fact that the Government was not following the Checklist, and when the preamble in that reads that the, “. . . Checklist has been drawn up which gives an indication of the standards which OTs should seek to achieve, the obligations which they should strive to meet and the expectations of HMG in key areas of Constitutional Modernisation. OT Governments are asked to consider the Checklist when making proposals for constitutional change and either to incorporate suitable measures in their proposals to meet the requirements of the list or explain why a particular requirement should not apply to their territory.”

I think it is important to note that this Checklist which was presented in 1999 to all the Overseas Territories very clearly states that this is a Checklist to be used when the Government is making proposals for Constitutional change. I think what has been missed is that we (as a Government) are not making proposals for Constitutional change. The United Kingdom Government decided back in 1999—they gave notice in the White Paper that constitutional modernisation was necessary. And then through their representative here, being the Governor, they appointed three independent Commissioners to go through a commission to make recommendations on constitutional modernisation that in no way can be seen as the Government making proposals for constitutional change.

Madam Speaker, I daresay that my interpretation of what this refers to is, if the Territories themselves choose to make some change in the Constitution—not a full revision of the Constitution using Constitutional Commissioners—to include, let us say, a Chief Minister's position, then I can understand the point that the First Elected Member from George Town made on his section 18 which on the original document is actually 2.19 and it says, "Do the changes suggested by the OT government have the support of the majority of the population? What is the evidence for such support? Has there been extensive local consultation (with or without the assistance of a Constitutional Commissioner or Commission) followed by a debate in the legislature in which the suggested changes have been approved by motion?"

Madam Speaker, if we arbitrarily decided to make a change in our existing Constitution, I can see the relevance of the question as to whether or not it has the support of the majority of the population and what is the evidence of that support. Because at that stage you would want to know that there were Commissioners or referendum or something to show that that was the case. But when we all accept that the United Kingdom Government has initiated this proposed change; they have initiated the commission, why then would this section of the Checklist be relevant to ask the question, "Does it support the majority of the population and what is the evidence for such support?"

Once again the Opposition has failed in their responsibility as representatives of the people. When they based their whole argument as to the reasons for not attending and supporting the amendment on a document, and they only came and laid a portion of the document on the floor of the Legislative Assembly—the Honourable Minister for Planning having to lay the full document including the preamble—I see where their embarrassment came. The preamble was very important to the document because it explained the reason for the Checklist; it explained the context in which the Checklist should be used.

Once again they have attempted to cloud the issues by using a very irresponsible approach. They are trying to fool the people into becoming emotionally concerned and upset which would cause unrest and instability. They have attempted so many times to do that. If I had to give them a grade on attempting to rile up the people and them emotionally involved, I guess they would have received a very good grade. But if I had to give them a grade for providing good responsible representation for their people I would have no choice but to give them a failing grade.

It is very easy to speak to people and make reference to the need for referendum because if we went on the street tomorrow and asked people whether or not we should have a referendum, I can think of about 15 or 20 very emotive issues that we have had to deal with lately that people would want to have a referendum on.

When we had to raise license fees, I am sure we could have had a referendum for that. When we had to raise Hospital fees I am sure we could have asked for referendum on that. When we talked about a housing program (there are some of the wealthier people here that feel Government should not be providing low cost housing) I am sure we could have referendum on that, or whether or not we should build a new school. There was an issue the other day on whether to allow cruise ships on Sunday. There is an issue as to the number of cruise ships. We could have had a referendum on that as well.

Madam Speaker, there was a real heated topic in your constituency on groupers. I am sure we could have riled people up to say that we needed a referendum on the grouper limits, the increase in building heights, whether or not we should build a new cruise ship dock, whether or not it should be on the North or South because we have mixed feelings. Even though everyone agrees that there should be a new dock we cannot come to a consensus as to whether or not it should be North or South.

I could go on and on about all the things that the people would like to have referendums on: Cayman Airways; the talk of lottery; extension of liquor licensing hours; minimum wage, et cetera. My constituents tell me that those are the issues they elected me to represent them on. They do not expect that every time I have a difficult decision to make I am going to say, 'I am not sure what I am going to do, you all tell me what to do.'

The PPM still has not decided on a position for the Constitution. They have not expressed their views—their thing is, 'You all tell us what you want us to say'. So different from when the First Elected Member from George Town (the then Leader of Government Business) had an emotive issue like Cayman Airways—it was not, 'you people tell us what to do'. It was, 'We are going to make a decision'. I can remember we decided to have a meeting in West Bay to try to find out from our constituents what they wanted. Oh, that was a terrible thing to do! We are showing up the Member responsible for Cayman Airways because we are having a meeting and going to the people. But all of a sudden they have changed their style of leadership and now instead of telling the people and representing the people in making decisions, they are really the people's representatives; they are going to find out from the people what they want.

If we had to go to the people for every one of those issues we figure the referendum would probably cost around $500,000. Those 20 items that we just referred to that happened in the past six or eight months—$10 million on referendums. The irony of the whole situation is that there is a great possibility that even after holding that referendum we still would not have a clear consensus as to the wishes of the people. A good indication is the petition on this proposed referendum that they wanted. Let us say that was the referendum and we got 3,500 people out of the 12,000, or, the 7,000 out of the 40,000 people—would they then be satisfied that that was a clear representation? Or would the argument then be, a lot of people did not show up? We still do not know so we need to do another referendum.

Now I know there are people who will say that I cannot use that example because there is nothing as important as the Constitution. I agree that there is nothing as important as the Constitution but the proposed referendum that we just went through was not on the Constitution. It was not whether or not we should change the Constitution. It was on six issues in the Constitution that the Opposition in their wisdom has decided are the six issues of national importance. If they say we need to have a referendum on whether or not we want constitutional change we could not argue that it is of national importance. For we all agree that the Constitution is of national importance. Our argument is that the six specific points that they talked about. The six points that they wanted a referendum on, none of those six points can be considered to be of national importance.

If we were talking about a change to independence or in the style of Government—even if we want an issue as Chief Minister (in 1992 apparently that was a very significant issue), if we wanted to talk about terms of office of elected individuals; if we wanted to speak about rights and freedoms; maybe the make-up of the Legislative Assembly; selection of the Judicature—many issues we could see as being issues of national importance. And so when we hear people on the street saying, 'oh, those guys were just giving 'lip service' to referendum, they really do not believe in a referendum because there is nothing that is more important than a Constitution'. Once again they are muddling the point. They are trying to confuse the issue because the proposed referendum (that we were not in support of) was not a referendum on the Constitution; it was on six selective points in the Constitution.

The six points from the proposed referendum—we talked about the concept of 'one man one vote' that is number one. “Should the Cayman Islands adopt the proposal contained in the Report with the respect for the concept ‘one man, one vote’ and the creation of seventeen single member constituencies?”

Madam Speaker, we have made our position very clear but we are still not sure what the PPM's position is on that. We do have a concern with the segregation; we do have a concern with the immediate implementation of the 17 single member constituencies and we have explained in detail our concerns for that—the racial segregation, the economic . . .

I was speaking to someone a few days ago who said to me, 'George Town right now is unique, the Ministers for George Town represent the very wealthy people in South Sound and the less wealthy people in the other areas of George Town'. They have to be able to understand and relate to all segments of society and so when there are needs, for example, the housing need that currently exists, the Minister for George Town can relate and he can come to this Honourable House and beg for housing for the poor people. If we had a section that was only representing, for example, South Sound—it would be real hard for the representative of South Sound to understand the need and value for low income housing. How could that person be convinced that that is a need for the country when the little area that he represents really has no need for housing? He would find a lot of other things that that money could be spent on. But with the present system the Representatives for George Town have to have a grasp on all of the sectors of society. And they have to be able to balance . . . because they have constituents that are not so well off and they also have constituents that are well off.

So, while we believe in the final answer being the advancement to 'one man one vote', we feel that jumping from what we are in now to that is a bit premature at this stage. We feel that it would be better to phase it in and we have made our arguments for that and have laid it out in the Position Paper of which I am a signatory and give full support to.

The second item on the Referendum petition: “Should the Speaker of the Legislative Assembly be chosen from outside the elected membership of the Legislative Assembly?”

It is interesting to note that this issue all of a sudden is so important that they have decided that it should be a matter of national importance and that out of the six items, that should be an issue on the referendum. According to the Constitutional Commissioners there was not very much public input, but now all of a sudden it has become a matter of national importance.

There are a lot of logistical problems with that question. When I speak to some of my constituents and they ask me what do I think about the Speaker. I say to them, 'You tell me, should the Speaker come from the inside or the outside' and they say, 'Maybe from outside' and I say, 'Well, if they are chosen from outside who should elect that person?' They say 'the Members of the Legislative Assembly should still elect them.' I say, 'If we elect that person what is going to satisfy you that the person is independent?' Some say, 'The Speaker should be elected from outside of the House.' Then we go into the problems of that person having to run for office and all that goes along with that.

Madam Speaker, I also ask the question since we have now reached the stage of party politics—we have two clear parties even though it appears that only one party is represented in the Legislative Assembly. There are supposedly two parties and so if the person is chosen from outside of the Legislative Assembly, does it mean that that person cannot be a member of the United Democratic Party or that person cannot be a member of the PPM? Because if they are members, whether they are Members that are elected, or members that are not elected, people are still going to perceive that there is some partiality. So, all of those are additional questions that need to be added to this one question that they have on the referendum.

They have not addressed it here, but what is the status of the Deputy Speaker? Where should the Deputy Speaker come from? According to the Constitutional Commissioners' Report they recommend that both of them should be from outside. For some reason that is not an issue of national importance. It is only the issue of Speaker that is of national importance according to this petition. "Should the proposed changes to the Cayman Islands Constitution be implemented between the dissolution of the current Legislative Assembly and the next General Election in 2004, as is proposed in the Report, or should the proposed changes be made as soon as possible?"

Again, how can I see that as being an issue of national importance? If the United Kingdom Government recognised that we needed modernisation—the Commissioners went around and got agreement—I do not see anywhere in the Report a big consensus on people saying that we should not get modernisation. We recognise all the benefits that may be brought to the Island through modernisation. Why then should we have to wait to recognise those benefits until 2004?

The Speaker: Honourable Member you have 30 minutes remaining.

Mr. Cline A. Glidden Jr: Thank you, Madam Speaker.

Question No. 4 is: "Should the Cayman Islands Constitution contain provisions to permit the electorate to initiate a referendum?"

There are provisions made now and I think the legislation needs to come forward. We heard from the past Leader (the First Elected Member from George Town) who said that even though he brought the Motion when he had the opportunity, he forgot the importance of that. He forgot the need to bring the legislation but how could he forget something that is so, all of a sudden, nationally important. It is nationally important but during his years there when he was in a position to implement it he forgot it.

We ask, "Should term limits be placed on the holder of the office of Chief Minister?" Here we have an issue—we do not even have the provision yet for a Chief Minister. We have not discussed the importance of that. That is not an issue of national importance but the term limits of Chief Minister is all of a sudden of national importance.

Then, "Should a person who holds the nationality in addition to British Overseas Territory Citizenship by virtue of a connection to the Cayman Islands and British Citizenship be permitted to be elected as a Member to the Legislative Assembly?"

I think that we all have made our points on that, but even to have such a question I think is very limiting and hypocritical, to say the least. We have other nationalities that would confer citizenship based on birth. And so we could have someone that was born outside of the Cayman Islands. For example, during the period of economic difficulty in Cayman when many of our fathers went off to sea to provide for a better life for our families, there were some of us who (through no control of our own) were born outside of the Cayman Islands. Being born there to Caymanian parents who, as quickly after birth as possible, decided to move their family back to the Cayman Islands; who helped in building the Cayman Islands by going off to sea and sending back money to the Islands—I think it is hypocritical to even discuss that that should remove someone from having the possibility of running for office and to make mention of the fact that only people who have Caymanian status or people who were born in Cayman should be able to run for office.

We as a country do not give status based on birth. So, are we then saying that everyone born in Cayman should have the right to run for office in the Cayman Islands? Because that would be a bit different than how it currently exists where we have people born in Cayman but are not even considered to be Caymanians. How could we then discriminate against someone who was born elsewhere if they satisfy all the requirements to have Caymanian status?

Madam Speaker, even though all attempts were made going house to house and trying to get signatures, the fact that only 7,000 out of 40,000 people gave their support, it is obvious that the majority of the people in Cayman do not support and do not see these issues as being nationally important.

I am reminded that there are not only 40,000—that was 40,000 residents—but there are indications to show that there were also tourists that were allowed to sign the referendum. So, the number would go a lot higher than 40,000 if we took that into account. Actually on any cruise ship day the People for Referendum could have simply gone down by the dock and got some signatures there. Sometimes we get about 10,000 people coming off the cruise ships.

Madam Speaker, on the question of the Referendum these six points of national importance—when there is so much concern in the country, I really find it difficult to justify spending $500,000 on a referendum to tell me whether or not the Speaker of the Legislative Assembly should be chosen from outside the elected membership?

I was in my MLA Office on Wednesday when a lady came to see me. She had fears of losing her house because she is only making $2.65 an hour. When they come to ask for my help to get a job for their sons because they are graduating from school; when a lady comes to me with her three children who are living in a house with a roof that leaks and when it rains sometimes the house gets flooded . . . How can I justify to those people spending $500,000 or more of the Government's money on a referendum for these six issues? We would have to borrow the money to do it. This is not in the Budget.

How could I justify borrowing at least $500,000 for this? In all honesty if we were to leave these six questions; if we were to say to the United Kingdom 'we cannot find satisfaction, let us leave them as they are, let us leave them status quo', which one of these six items would affect the way that any of our people live, whether negatively or positively?

As a good Government how could I justify being part and parcel of a Government that would spend $500,000 on a referendum instead of using that money to provide our young people with scholarships to further their education? How could I justify not using that money to help our needy; the seamen and the veterans that help build the country that we have had to take off the list of the little stipend that some of them depend solely on to survive?

How in the world could we as representatives of the people justify for those six questions? We could use that money to provide better classrooms for our children's education; to provide counselling for the many young lives that are being lost to drugs; to help our young parents deal with teenage pregnancies; to put more Police in the districts to deal with crime; to provide the much needed vocational training for our future generations; to provide housing for our people that are living in squalor and poverty; to provide after school programs to keep our young people off the street; to provide training in the tourism sector to ensure that our visitors to the Cayman Islands have a good experience and that they want to come back and spend money and use it to provide good health services to our people, et cetera.

There is no way that with the proposed changes to the Constitution; with the fact that the Opposition and the Government agree on all the major points of the Constitution . . . on these six issues we seem to have a bit of disagreement. But that disagreement should not equate to instability in the country; it should not equate to us running away the foreign investors; it should not equate to people marching up and down the streets with wheelbarrows and ground baskets. As responsible representatives we need to be able to do a better job of coming together and facing the issues together.

We need to provide a strong footing for Cayman at this time when there are concerns and questions to our stability. We need to show the outside investors and the visitors that are coming here that Cayman is safe and stable.

The UDP has gone throughout all of the districts and spoken to many people. And believe it or not the people have said that with all of the issues that are facing the country we are spending too much time on the Constitution. There are only six points of contention. It is time for us to sit with the Opposition (supposedly the people's representatives) and get pass those six points so that our Ministers who were elected can get back into the Glass House and do the work that is required of them.

We do not want a year from now—or maybe the Opposition does want a year from now to get up and ask what the Government has done. Maybe that is the whole reason for this 'stalemate' position. Maybe they see their interests as being better served by continuing this debate on the Constitution so that none of the other issues are addressed. But I would like to believe that even as radical as the picture that I painted a little while ago, and even as irresponsible as I sometimes feel that those other Elected Members are, I still believe that they do not genuinely want the affairs of the country to go unattended. I feel that we must be able to get together but it is going to be real difficult to achieve that when we have something as important as this debate and the [Opposition] Members refusing to attend.

Mention was made a few days ago to the fact that the Opposition Members do not even come to have tea. We only have one Common Room in this Legislative Assembly and as far as I understand (I have not been here for a long time) the norm has always been that all Members meet in the Common Room. They eat and watch television, they talk, joke, row a little bit, but they were all able to spend time together. I know that it has had a positive effect on the relationship that I have gained with some of the Members because upon getting elected and coming here there were some of the Members that I hardly knew. And during the period of time of spending eight hours a day and nine hours a day and spending the little breaks in-between with those Members I was able to build relationships. You would be able to put aside some of the differences. But since the 8 November we started on a different trend where the Members of the Opposition do not even come in the room and if that was not bad enough they have now refused to come into the building.

Madam Speaker, it is really going to be difficult for us to have any kind of real debate. We were looking forward to the debate. We feel that we have just as strong debaters on this side as they have on that side. We feel that we do not win the debates based on numbers. We can win the debate on the quality of the debate and that is why we were confident in changing the motion to be a motion to take note so that the numbers would be nullified. The fact that we have nine Members and they have five would not make any difference. Let us win the debate on the merits of our debate. And then they got up and said, 'Well we cannot debate it because the Speaker suspended us.' So, we said alright we will adjourn the House and change the rules to make sure that they could play the game.

But they still decided to carry on. I can remember going to play football and we did not all have balls at the time. So, there was only one child that had the balls and we would beat that child or score a goal on his team. What he would do to punish you is that he would take up the ball run home so no one else would get to play. Now, those are the little things that I remember from my childhood. I did not expect to get elected to come here and get the same kind of actions by the representatives—the people that were elected by the people to represent them; the people that take so much pride in saying that they are the people's representatives; that they represent the majority and yet they cannot come in here and debate.

I heard someone on the Talk show this morning saying that it is embarrassing to hear the debate that was carrying on. What is going to be real embarrassing for me is when the Hansards [reports] go to the United Kingdom Government and they see that there was no debate at all from the Opposition. The Opposition refused to come to the Legislative Assembly.

Now, I could understand if the Opposition just chose not to debate, but they take any opportunity to debate this issue in public at whatever location they find themselves. Yet they are not willing to debate it in the House of debate! If I had (it so happens that I did not) voted for any of those Members I would feel short-changed. I would feel that I am not getting representation.

In closing, Madam Speaker, I have a little recommendation: It appears that we have a group called the People for Referendum whose intent is, supposedly, to express the wishes of the people. Maybe they should go out on a referendum to find out whether the people want a refund on the salaries of those people that are not representing them in the Legislative Assembly. Maybe those people who are boycotting and deciding that their job is to debate the issues somewhere else, the People for Referendum should ask the question of the populace whether or not they feel that that is good representation.

The issue of the Constitution . . .

The Speaker: You have 10 minutes remaining.

Mr. Cline A. Glidden Jr: Yes, Madam Speaker, I do not expect to take that long.

The issue of the Constitution has been here for a while. We debated that issue during the 2000 Election. One of the lady candidates in West Bay based her whole campaign on her prowess of the Constitution. Before the Election when the White Paper came out, we brought guests down to explain the ramifications of the White Paper and what should be expected from the UK. The Constitution Report, as we all agree, is a very good document. It is a document that will move the Cayman Islands forward constitutionally. We all support the modernisation—both sides of the House and the majority of people. There is an old saying about 'throwing out the baby with the bath water' and that is what we need to be aware of. If we recognise that the Constitution Modernisation is what we need and we only have a very limited . . . Even if we do not agree on the national importance of those six issues, but we do place some importance, they should not stagnate the country from gaining the benefits of a modern Constitution.

My request is that the Opposition Members and the Government try to put politics aside and work together in some way. We have expressed our willingness to do such. The Leader of Government Business has expressed the invitation to those Members to form a part of a delegation to go to the United Kingdom to discuss the contentious issues. But in the same confrontational style instead of them accepting the invitation they are saying, 'No we cannot go. You bring the people from the UK here!' — Just in an attempt to be confrontational!

I can only hope that time will show to the Opposition Members that they can be much more useful and constructive than they have exercised in the past. I do feel that they have a responsibility to offer constructive criticisms and options to the Government.

But, Madam Speaker, this kind of representation I dare say is not helping any one; it is not helping the Cayman Islands. Even though those Members may have seen this as being politically expedient at this time, hopefully, time will show them that even though they were gaining the mileage the tide is now changing. Hopefully, people are starting to understand that the UDP are not dictators; that the UDP is offering good representation for the people. And I think that with a good Government like the UDP, working together with a credible Opposition, the country has a lot to benefit from. I look forward to playing my part in moving the country forward.

Thank you, Madam Speaker.

The Speaker: Thank you. Is it the intention for another Member to commence debate? or may I have the motion for the adjournment at this time?

ADJOURNMENT

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: Madam Speaker, we propose to adjourn this Honourable House until 10 am Wednesday, 26 June 2002.

The Speaker: Thank you. The question is that this Honourable House do now adjourn until 10 am Wednesday, 26 June 2002. All those in favour please say Aye. Those against, No.

Ayes.

The Speaker: The Ayes have it.

At 6 pm the House adjourned until 10 am Wednesday, 26 June 2002.

OFFICIAL HANSARD REPORT
WEDNESDAY
26 JUNE 2002
10.55 AM
Seventh Sitting

The Speaker: I will now invite the Honourable Minister responsible for Education to grace us with prayers.

PRAYERS

Hon. Roy Bodden: Let us pray.

Almighty God, from whom all wisdom and power are derived; We beseech Thee so to direct and prosper the deliberations of the Legislative Assembly now assembled, that all things may be ordered upon the best and surest foundations for the glory of Thy Name and for the safety, honour and welfare of the people of these Islands.

Bless our Sovereign Lady, Queen Elizabeth II; Philip, Duke of Edinburgh; Charles, Prince of Wales; and all the Royal family. Give grace to all who exercise authority in our Commonwealth, that peace and happiness, truth and justice, religion and piety may be established among us. Especially we pray for the Governor of our Islands, the Speaker of the Legislative Assembly, Official Members and Ministers of Executive Council and Members of the Legislative Assembly that we may be enabled faithfully to perform the responsible duties of our high office.

All this we ask for Thy Great Name's sake.

Let us say the Lord's Prayer together:

Our Father who art in Heaven, Hallowed be Thy Name, Thy Kingdom come, Thy will be done, on earth as it is in Heaven. Give us this day our daily bread, and forgive us our trespasses, as we forgive those who trespass against us. And lead us not into temptation, but deliver us from evil. For Thine is the Kingdom, the power and the glory, forever and ever. Amen.

The Lord bless us and keep us. The Lord make His face shine upon us and be gracious unto us. The Lord lift up the light of His countenance upon us and give us peace now and always. Amen.

Proceedings resumed at 10.58 am

The Speaker: Please be seated. Proceedings are resumed.

READING BY THE HONOURABLE
SPEAKER OF MESSAGES
AND ANNOUNCEMENTS

Apologies

The Speaker: I have received apologies for the late attendance of the Honourable Third Official Member as well as for the absence of the Third Elected Member from the district of Bodden Town who is still apparently off the Island with his wife for medical reasons.

I have also received apologies from the Leader of Government Business who is off the Island attending a family member's funeral.

STATEMENTS BY MEMBERS OF THE GOVERNMENT

The Speaker: I have received no notice for Statements for this sitting.

GOVERNMENT BUSINESS

Amended Motion to Debate and Take Note of the Report of the Constitutional Modernisation Review
Commissioners 2002

(Continuation of debate thereon)

The Speaker: The debate is now open for continuation. Does any other Member wish to speak? The Honourable Minister responsible for Education.

Hon. Roy Bodden: Thank you, Madam Speaker.

It is almost true to say that there has not been such contention and furor on earth since Prometheus stole fire from the gods and gave it to man, as there has been in the Cayman Islands over the recent tabling of the Constitutional Commissioners' Report.

That furor and all of the attention which has been aroused by the tabling of that Report is not in and of itself, bad, disconcerting or alarming. Rather, what is disconcerting and alarming is all the misinformation – misguided motives and the deliberate attempts to mislead the public by what I would term 'mischievous elements', who seek for their own aggrandizement, warped and untoward intentions, to take advantage of the sentiments of a concerned public.

There has been little or no attempt by the Opposition elements, both inside the Honourable Legislative Assembly and their supporters outside, to offer truly informative and uplifting debate so that the public may be informed and maybe made wiser in their choices and understanding of the process. Perhaps this reflection [goes back] to the past where political directorates and elements, when it suited them, sought to give certain twists and slants so that they could gain an advantage, sometimes most unfairly over the other persons who propounded the obverse arguments. But this is no time for political 'one-upmanship'. This is a serious time because the Government needs to get this business of the Constitution behind it so that we can concentrate on governing the country in a way that is beneficial to the majority of its citizens, particularly in these challenging economic times.

I have to remark that Cayman – in spite of all of the down-crying that I hear from certain people; in spite of the cries of the Government being undemocratic and unsympathetic—is still one of the most open societies in the world. For there are persons who live Monday to Friday to get on the talk shows: they open on the earliest one and go on to the second one and finally wind up on Talk Today at the Government station. People are blaming the Government saying that the Government is undemocratic. Some of the comments I have heard about Government Ministers and accusations made about your Honourable self would only be tolerated in a society like the Cayman Islands. It is downright disgraceful and unacceptable! And yet these people persist! But what is alarming to me is that many of these comments are made for and on behalf of the Opposition Members in this House, who choose at this particular point to abnegate themselves from the responsibility of coming in here representing, as they claim, the majority—by boycotting!

Madam Speaker, it is gross irresponsibility and I hope that the persons whom they purport to support take note that when their representatives should be in here articulating, debating and defending their positions, they are absent by choice. I find it alarming and I have to remark that this is the introduction of political tribalism into the Cayman Islands and it should not be allowed to take root.

From the time I have been here this is the first that I have seen persistence of this nature: People threatening violence; people passing all sorts of uncomplimentary remarks about Members of this Honourable House; about yourself, Madam Speaker. It is the height of disrespect. And any element, be that element an individual or an agglomeration of individuals, that tolerates and encourages this kind of behaviour is doing the Cayman Islands a grave disservice.

Madam Speaker, I say this soberly and under advisement. You know what it reminds me of? I shall tell you from the annals of history what it reminds me of. It reminds me of the beginning of this kind of politics in Jamaica in the 1960s when a fiery brash young man got up saying that he would fight fire with fire and it would be blood for blood and stone for stone. And wisened old Norman Manley got up and said, 'Who is this young brash person introducing these kinds of politics that is foreign to the nature of the political society? Will no one stand with me to rid this country of this brand of insidious politics that is threatening to creep into our society?'

Now, Madam Speaker, I hear them say that they have to have 'one man, one vote' because they do not want the Leader of Government Business bringing in four people 'on his back'. 'One man, one vote' is the essence of democracy, I agree, but what we have to consider is that 'one man, one vote' is not the panacea. There are many other things to consider. None of the advocates who are advocating this separation of the electoral districts as they are presently into 17 constituencies—I have heard no one articulate the economics of this exercise because the economics are going to change drastically. For then you are going to have 17 constituencies; it is expected that you are going to have 17 constituency offices; it is expected that those constituency offices will have to be manned. So, now not only have you 17 different Members, but those Members are going to have to service their constituencies by holding surgeries; they are going to have to have persons in the office available either on full or part time basis, and they are going to have to have a physical presence.

Now, is anyone calculating how much more expensive that is going to be on the coffers of the country? There are other areas to consider and I tell people that we are going to come face to face with certain stark realities which are not facing us now if we opt for this 'one man, one vote'. How are we going to divide the constituencies so as to totally eliminate having constituencies which are all black or all white, which are rich obviously and which are poor obviously? These are contingencies, which we do not have to face under the current system. There are social, political and economic consequences. Are we considering these? For these kinds of divisions have been the root cause of political upheaval in other jurisdictions. And then there is going to be the constant call for changing constituency boundaries and accusations of gerrymandering.

Madam Speaker, I am saying that it is the ideal objective to aspire to 'one man, one vote' and in the Cayman Islands we already have some examples and perhaps we should consider it. But I am also saying that any consideration should be tempered by the fact that we need not hasten into that. We should first articulate and ensure that the divisions are going to be of the greatest benefit for the constituents.

Madam Speaker, I will give you a sociological phenomenon too: People in the Cayman Islands vote personality above all else; above education; above good looks; even in some instances, above wealth. When you divide a country or a jurisdiction without taking into consideration these kinds of contingencies, what kinds of divisions are you going to have? You are likely to have people who refuse to participate in the system because the people they like and have been supporting have been so disadvantaged now that they can no longer represent a certain area.

Madam Speaker, I think we should take it one step at a time. What we need to do is concentrate on the development of party politics and ensure that another party comes up to balance the present United Democratic Party (UDP) and continue on the slow pace at which we have been going.

I want to say also that I have heard people, even on the talk show this morning, talking about term limits. From the time you speak of things like term limits in a small jurisdiction like the Cayman Islands, you are disenfranchising several people. We are not like the United States with three hundred million people that you can say no president should serve longer than two consecutive terms. They have 'umpteen' people with the qualifications, the ability and the disposition to make the sacrifice to set themselves up to run for president.

But in the Cayman Islands there is a limit to the pool from which people come forward for public office. I think in a democracy the greatest limitation is held in the hands of the people themselves. You set yourself up for public office and if the people do not want you they will not elect you, irrespective of how well qualified you are, irrespective of how wealthy or pretty or handsome you might be: that is the greatest limiter of any tenure in politics and in any democracy.

I recall during the Constitutional Review in which Commissioners Walter Wallace and Sir Frederick Smith undertook. The question arose then as to term limits. They made it quite plain: In a jurisdiction like the Cayman Islands it is almost ridiculous to impose term limits because you are drawing from a small pool. Secondly, they argued that the voters are the greatest determinant of how long anyone will stay in politics. If you convince them that you are efficient they will keep returning you. So, we have to be careful.

As I listen, it is difficult for me not to get emotional about certain things. Sometimes I wonder about the genuineness of people who set themselves up to be advisors and consultants. I pose a simple question: There are people who I hear on every talk show yet they do not participate in the process. They have voluntarily chosen to extricate themselves from the process of voting and participating in a representative democracy. They claim that they will have no part in an elected dictatorship yet they are the premiere advisors, advising people on what to do – experts on referendum. But they themselves do not participate. Only in the Cayman Islands would such persons be regarded as genuine . . . believe me.

Madam Speaker, a profound change is taking place in the Caymanian society and this change has been occurring for some time now but it is just now reaching its zenith. It has its genesis in the fact that the economics are changing. The Cayman Islands, whether we like it or not, are moving away from a society in which finance and financial affairs was the imperative to a society where service and service orientated industries are appearing to be the imperative. And by that very nature the behaviour of the population will change. It is going to change in a way that the movers and shakers of the past will not necessarily any longer have a monopoly on the movement and shaking of the society.

Caymanian people from the grass roots, through the middle class and straight to the top tier are taking more interest in the country and its well-being. The middle class itself, by virtue of the fact that we have a steady pool of young Caymanians going abroad to universities and coming back, is changing. The middle class is becoming vibrant; they are becoming competitive; they are becoming demanding; they are becoming discriminating and they are becoming interested in how the country is being governed.

No one seems to want to acknowledge that the Cayman Islands, just like many other Caribbean societies, has its tinge of class and racism. I have reason to believe (and I say this as a commentator without fear of successful contradiction) as I listen and read the nuances of the positions of many of the persons who object that their positions are not a little influenced by the fact that they realise that the society is changing in a way which they were not accustomed; that the children of the middle classes; that people who are dark of the sun are coming to prominence, power and position.

But no one talks about how many persons you have in the Government who are college or university educated or who are experienced. They only talk about, 'Can you imagine being led by so and so?' We have to shed those prejudices. Even in the deepest South they have shed them; even in apartheid South Africa those kinds of prejudices no longer exist. I am saying that part of the basis for the objection is not necessarily exclusive about referendum, or the need thereto, or about the Chief Minister, it is about who has chance to be. Can you imagine? I have friends who may be of the colour but do not share the sympathy, and they tell me, 'There is a sense of non-genuineness about some of the objections, Roy, because it has nothing to do with ability but rather has a lot to do with colour and class'. Madam Speaker, you cannot blame us if our parents had the foresight to stress education. It is time that we put aside these differences and get on genuinely with the direction in which the country should move.

Madam Speaker, I cringe when attempts are made to politicise the Civil Service. The Civil Service under the White Hall Westminster system is neutral, faceless, impartial, and it should be efficient. The Civil Service mandarins should be willing to serve whoever comes in as a political directorate dispassionately, efficiently. They should not care. Politicians come and go.

Their job is to ensure that the government bureaucracy runs efficiently. There should be no sentiments attaching them to anyone. I do not see any clause in 'Adam's Will'. I have not read anywhere in the Bible that says the Civil Service should only be loyal to this person or that political directorate. Even experts more eminent than I, concur that this is the essence of the White Hall Westminster system. The British have always left a legacy and it is only where that legacy has been broken by partiality and by loyalty to a certain element that the society has broken down. Anywhere else the society runs efficiently.

I would like to quote from a text called, "Winner Takes All". The Westminster Experience in the Caribbean, written by Selvin Douglas Ryan. On page 2 this is what he says about the Westminster White Hall paradigm. "The model assumes that officials who administer the state, and whose role in the main is a regulatory one, would not have to be replaced when power changes hands, but would loyally serve the incoming political elite. It is in fact assumed that civil service mandarins would already have made themselves familiar with the basic policy prescriptions of those challenging the ruling party, and would have put themselves in a state of readiness to implement their manifesto or parts thereof should they become the newly elected government. They would also, as a matter of course, have prepared briefing papers in the event that there was a change of government. In short, they would not assume that the party in power had a permanent stranglehold on the reins of power or that it was 'the natural party of government'".

The converse is also true: They should not assume that the Opposition is necessarily the replacement in the immediate of the government and be disloyal to the government or the political directorate in power. Selvin Douglas Ryan goes on to say, "Most important is the assumption that the society is socially and institutionally homogenous and that its basic values, myths and codes are widely, if not universally shared. Political change is therefore about tinkering and making marginal or incremental adjustments to a system in which the fundamentals are agreed upon and where there exist no major sub-cultural cleavages or violently opposed and partisan tribes". That is a characteristic of the Westminster White Hall model or paradigm. That is also characteristic of the model under which we operate in the Cayman Islands.

Therefore, how can it be that persons who by their pristine asseverations set themselves up to be the guardians and the protectors of the people's right; tramp around from jurisdiction to jurisdiction saying otherwise; accusing the government of not allowing them full time to express their opinions; whipping up the people, taking polls and censuses about referendum issues which are not clearly demarcated and which are clouded in ambiguity. Madam Speaker, these persons are misleading the country and the majority of people should not follow them. I remain to be convinced that they have the majority of persons following them.

As far as this Report of the Constitutional Commissioners is concerned, the Checklist has been followed. People were allowed opportunity; the United Democratic Party Government extended the consultation period; persons were invited by the Constitutional Commissioners and were given 'umpteens' chances to express their positions.

We are nearing the point where we have to put debate, discourse and discussion to rest and get on with the business of sending the document and the relevant Hansard debates to the United Kingdom for the formation of a Draft Constitution. When this Draft is received I would expect if practice and procedure are adhered to, that there would be further discussion as to what we are going to adapt and when. And then we get on with the process.

The Opposition, however, seems to be caught up in a never-ending spiral of stymieing the process and crying 'foul' anytime they believe that they are not having their way.

There is another attempt on the part of the Opposition. And when I say Opposition I am including the legitimate Opposition inside the Legislative Assembly – although they are boycotting at this moment – and their followers outside. I am disturbed at their attempt to involve His Excellency the Governor. The Governor cannot rescue them and if they knew about the functioning of the Westminster White Hall paradigm they would not even try to include the Office of the Governor – they would not try to gray the area by saying that they are calling upon the Governor.

The Governor's responsibility, in this instance, is to ensure that peace, order and good government prevail; that the government of which he sits as head (president) of the Executive Council has a majority, so what when we come here with legislation we have the requisite numbers to pass it. But until that time, what transpires in the Legislative Assembly, the Governor has his hands off, especially if it complies with parliamentary procedure.

I see them now calling and writing to the Governor. I heard one of the representatives this morning on a talk show [saying] that he is writing to the Governor. Well, that is a good exercise to keep the Governor apprised, and I am happy that they are doing that, but I hope that they are not expecting the Office of Governor to interfere in what is to this point, an orderly and understandable process under the Westminster system.

Madam Speaker, Government and Opposition both went to the people. Both espoused their sides in the public forum. It was expected that those treks and those trips and that exposure would climax in a debate in this Legislative Assembly. Let me tell you why the Motion has to say 'debate and take note'. It has to ask that the Review be debated and note be taken because not all of the points put forward by the Constitutional Commissioners met with full and total agreement of the Government. Neither did all of these points meet full and total agreement from the Opposition. Therefore, to have done otherwise, would have meant locking one's self in a position in which there was no room to maneuver.

We have to debate and take note because there are certain issues that we accept and there are certain ones that we do not accept. Debate at this time allows us to say what we accept and why, and what we do not accept and why we do not accept it. The results of these debates will then go to the United Kingdom for their constitutional and legal advisors to read and to say in our draft, "Here is what we need to take note of; this is what they accepted; this is what they rejected; this is what we are going to send in a draft". That is the reason and it is a perfectly sound reason.

I have to interject at this point that I believe the Constitutional Commissioners were fair and forthright in what they did and their exercise is a commendable one. They have given us a document which is a basis for us to launch forth. The Opposition is also trying to make people believe that the Draft Constitution which the Commissioners forwarded is the Constitution. It is not, Madam Speaker! It is not! It is their model! It is meant to be a basis for discussion and nothing else.

Certainly the people at the Foreign and Commonwealth Office are not going to stamp their approval on that and send it back and say 'Here is the Constitutional draft'. I would be very surprised. They are going to take that along with other parts of the Review, as well as the Hansard [debates] and any other depositions that they may receive, and from that they are going to extricate points upon which to use as a Draft Constitution. That is the way it was done when we had the review in the 1990s.

But I am happy that there has been this furor; such emotionalism; because until the events of the 8 November and the launch of the United Democratic Party, Caymanian people had looked upon politics as nothing more than a necessary evil. And they 'took it or left it' in the most part, that is, except for the six-week period from September to mid-November when we had elections (every four years). Now, Caymanian people have come to the reality that politics is life; that politics happen every day; that they should be interested in the Government every day; that they should be interested in the persons who represent them every day of the year. For that is life and that is how it is done in sophisticated societies. So if nothing else is achieved, it has brought us in Cayman to the point where we have been forced to mature; to take an interest in the government; in the people who represent us and in what they do.

But, Madam Speaker, I am alarmed at the behaviour [of those] elements who seem intent on exaggerating the differences between us rather than accentuating the similarities. And there are those persons who, for their own selfish motives, would focus on the differences; would try to make it seem like those persons who are in Government are some evil creatures—some ogres—who do not deserve to be there. And only they and their supporters and followers have a monopoly on what to do and what is right. Why, Madam Speaker? Why is this being perpetuated? What is wrong with Members of the Government [inaudible - voice faded from microphone]? I am alarmed at the behaviour, Madam Speaker.

Some of these people are exhibiting their prejudices every day they call on the radio station; personalising, tracing persons background and then they come and tell me, 'Oh Roy, it is not you, we do not think of you like that'. But I am in the company of the persons who they are describing and putting down! Do they believe that I am so ignorant that I do not think that when they are out of my earshot that they do not include me in the group? Madam Speaker, I am not so naïve. My parents did not give birth to any idiots. So, I cannot accept that.

I do not hear them talking about positive steps the Government is making. I do not hear them saying, 'What a tolerant government, we put them down everyday on the talk show and they still strive diligently to make the country operate in the way that it should operate. And they do not victimise us and they do not single us out for official opprobrium'.

As far as I can glean, much of the content of a majority of the callers are little more than political 'hog wash'. There is plenty of talk and there is no shortage of those persons whom I describe as 'presumptuous elites' who put themselves forward to represent special interest. But they come from a background that has little of what Alexander Pope talked about.

There are those persons to whom a little learning is a dangerous thing and they try to mislead and to perpetuate and they talk about referendum. And they quote, Madam Speaker—as I saw a double-page flyer in a paper about those who supported referendum. I am one of the foremost proponents of a referendum just like I am one of the foremost proponents of the office of Ombudsman, and the Bill of Rights, and the Freedom of Information Act! I still stand by those positions but I say that the six questions that I read being put forward by the Opposition are not national issues, therefore, they are not fit to be subjects of a referendum.

While on this, let me as Minister of Education say I shudder when I hear people talk about 'referendum'. The last time I checked my dictionary, which was before I left the Ministry this morning, I did not see any such word as 'referandum'. [The word] is referendum if it is one; if it is more than one, it is referenda. So, I wish they would use the English the way they should use it and the way it exists. I am not a snob but when people come to me and they cannot pronounce the word in the way it should be pronounced they certainly are in no position to advise me or to dictate terms to me.

It is not a question of the Government being against referendum but the Government is wise and correct to appropriate the posture that it has put forward. And the behaviour further alarms me because it makes me realise that we have been remiss in not educating and informing our people as to what is appropriate conduct, including appropriate conduct in Parliament. I was taken aback by the fact that the Opposition would be so irresponsible as to populate the Chamber with their supporters and not to inform them of the rules of conduct in the House.

I heard some comments that all I could say is 'My, my, my, I have been remiss in my obligations'. Because this Legislative Assembly and the House of Parliament has a code of behaviour to which all and sundry have to subscribe. It is indeed the House in which you, as Speaker, are in charge. Even myself as a Member have to show respect and behave with decorum to the Chair at all times. Indeed, were you to tell me to sit now I should have no choice but to sit. How much more so then that persons who are not Members, should have to subscribe? Of course, it is their House; of course we are their representatives because they put us here, but it does not mean that because it is their House they should come and order you around or take over the House. Then, procedure would have broken down; sanity would have been lost and anarchy would have been the order of the day. That is why we have Standing Orders—which are the rules governing the behaviour and conduct of the Parliament, including conduct of debate—that we refer to from time to time. And when our Standing Orders are silent we refer ultimately to Erskine May, the 'bible of behaviour' in the Legislative Assembly.

Of course, visitors are welcome to sit in the gallery but not to take notes and make noise, and even to intimidate Members by harsh looks. In some jurisdictions in which I have been resident, to get into the Parliament without being introduced by a member or an officer of the House would be an exercise in itself. By the time you get through the security and explain who you are—unless it was a prearranged visit but for someone to come off the street, you could not just walk in. I am happy that we can do that here; that our people can come in as they wish, to see their representatives. But I am surprised at some of the caliber people that I heard making snide remarks, passing disparaging comments and belittling their representatives. Madam Speaker, do they not realise it is a reflection upon their very selves? Are they not voters? When they discriminate and trace and belittle is that not saying something about their mentality? About their attitude and the level of their intelligence? We should not, in the interest of democracy, resort to that.

On the day that the petition was handed in I heard some people shout, 'Yeah two more years'. I can only speak for myself: Everyday I give thanks for the people of Bodden Town for I am only here because they have entrusted me. It is not any seat that I have ownership of; it is not any seat that I bought or any seat that was passed down to me through heredity. It is a seat which I hold in trust and I know, because we discuss, that all of the Members of the United Democratic Party know that and feel the same way. We are grateful, respectful and obligated to our constituents (the voters) who put us here. But because they have put us here is no reason for them to in turn curse us and threaten us. Yes, threaten . . .

because there were those in the crowd who said that they should run a bulldozer through this House; who said that they should 'put a bomb in their car'. It is alarming!

I am displeased and hurt. I would like this to be noted: We did not go to the police with any comments because these people can be identified . . . I know them. We prefer to turn the other cheek and say probably it was said in the heat and frustration of the exercise. I pick up the newspaper and see them plain as daylight up front. But you know what is the paradox? Those are the same people who come to us with their complaints seeking favours and wanting us to mediate and help, and we help them. We do not change and say 'Well what about the other day?' Heaven forbid.

So, I want to say that it is democratic to express a position. It is commendable when you have a belief and hold firm to that belief. That is what democracy is about but it is undemocratic, unhelpful and destructive when you curse, slander and threaten your representatives, irrespective of whether there was a personal vote or not. And that can only malign and destroy the society. The Government is responsible; we have been responsible. There are persons who support us who wanted to demonstrate too in our support and we said, 'No, it is not necessary at this time'. We do not wish any confrontations. We are confident that our behaviour will prevail; that the positions we have taken will be seen in the end to be correct; to be appropriate; to be informed. We do not wish to be confrontational and we have exhibited mature behaviour because our arguments are sound, contained and controlled.

The Constitution is the single most important document of the country; it is indeed the soul of the nation. It is that document upon which all other laws hinge and emanate from. In a sense it must be almost sacred and sacrosanct but it should not be drafted in such a way that it is untouchable. It should always be made to work with the least interference. But that does not mean that in every situation it is going to prove as the ideal document,

So, Madam Speaker, I come to an important point: Why is it necessary to have a Constitution prefaced by a Bill of Rights? A Bill of Rights in its most fundamental definition protects the citizen against the government. It offers protection to the citizen against certain intrusions by the government: Freedom of speech; freedom of association; freedom of arbitrary arrest; freedom to own property. And these kinds of freedoms are entrenched so that the State which has a monopoly on the coercive force; which has a monopoly on the social control agencies cannot come in the middle of the night and kick your door down and drag you out of bed and say you are under arrest without due cause and convincing reason. The State cannot tell you that you are not free to associate. As the Minister of Human Resources people tell me that they do not want trade unions in the country. I said, 'Excuse me!'

'Oh no, we do not need them here.'

I would have taken leave of my senses if I passed down any decree saying people were not free to associate or to form themselves into collective bargaining units if they so felt the reason.

'Oh well the Cayman Islands is not this kind of place, we have never had that.' Madam Speaker, these are different times. And I remember very well when it was first muted about a Bill of Rights. There were several objections then as there are now. But the Cayman Islands have international obligations. The world is globalised. We are but one part and we had better inform ourselves that we need to comply and that a Bill of Rights will have to be inclusive. It cannot give you certain freedoms and then arbitrarily exclude those, which some people by their very ignorance and prejudice do not wish included. No!

The Speaker: Honourable Member is this a convenient time for the morning break or would you wish to proceed?

Hon. Roy Bodden: Break . . . thank you.

The Speaker: Accordingly, we shall suspend for 15 minutes to accommodate our morning break.

Proceedings suspended at 11.50 am

Proceedings resumed at 12.21 pm

The Speaker: Please be seated. Proceedings are resumed. Continuation of the debate by the Honourable Minister responsible for Education. I am advised that there are 51 minutes remaining Honourable Minister.

Hon. Roy Bodden: Thank you, Madam Speaker.

In the time remaining I wish to specifically address certain matters which have arisen as a result of public meetings and of issues which I have gleaned from callers on the talk shows, as well as issues which have emanated as a result of Honourable Members' of the Legislative Assembly positions.

It is appropriate to begin with political disposition. I have reason to be alarmed at the behaviour of representatives of the people who get up in a public forum and proclaim that they are proud to be Right Wingers.

The political spectrum has two polls: The extreme left and the extreme right. The extreme right is commonly called the Right Winger. There are other refined distinctions and definitions. And of course, to the extreme left you have the Communist and various forms; the Maoist, et cetera. The accepted position on the political spectrum is the centre. So, you have reasonable people and reasonable government certainly in westernised democracies. And in many countries of the world people would describe themselves as 'Centrist'. That means they are neither Left nor Right but in the centre. So, for people to get up and proclaim they are Right Wingers, according to my interpretation, that means they are similar to Slobodian Melosovich, Adolph Hitler, Mussolini, to name a few. Just like if someone said they are Leftist they would be of the bent of a Joseph Stalin or a Gracchus Babeuf or a Robespierre or some of these other persons who history has condemned.

Now, in the Cayman Islands you mean to tell me these kinds of persons who proclaim their affinity to the Right Wing; the Fascist, the Nazi—they have followers in Cayman? I am both surprised and alarmed. I certainly did not realise that there were any Right Winger Members of the Legislative Assembly. But all I can say is that there are yet many things that I need to learn that I am not aware of. And I keep learning. But I do not believe that it is any badge of pride for anyone in the Cayman Islands in this day and age to get up and say they are a Right Winger. I am alarmed that they had people in the crowd who cheered. For these are the people who are now appearing in Europe before war crimes tribunal in The Hague. These are the kinds of people who go down in history as terrors, suppressors of the people, destroyers of order and society.

I do not believe that our Constitutional Review necessitates such extremities one way or the other. And I know that the correct line to take is the line through the centre where the vast majority of people in western democracy in any open society whether it be from the west or east espoused. That is what I am saying . . . that is the reflection of the position that I support. That is why the position of the United Democratic Party is the appropriate position to take and that is why I support the Checklist.

Indeed, I am a signatory of the points put forward by the UDP as being the foundation and elements upon which a new Constitution must emanate. That leads me to discuss a point I heard this morning raised by a caller on a talk show. He is saying that we (the UDP Government) are dictating to the Foreign and Commonwealth Office (FCO) how we want this process to go. Madam Speaker, where ignorance is bliss it is folly to be wise! Can you imagine any of us on this side dictating to the FCO what we want done? What path we want followed? What procedures we would like to see? That person is most ill informed. I can assure that caller that in practice it works the other way.

So, that tells me that when the Opposition says they have the majority—first of all they do not have the majority. Secondly, the Opposition is at fault for not informing many of the followers as the UDP has through avenues opened to it like the Public Eye show that Dr. Frank McField hosts. We have tried to inform, not only our followers and supporters but also the general public as to these procedures.

It is wise to be discriminating and to listen carefully and to weigh and search before we blindly follow people who themselves, it would seem, have neglected to be self-informed. It is a cause for concern because it strikes me that some people believe that the monopoly on political leadership must not be based on the qualifications, formal or even informal, or experience in government service, or ability to serve. But rather on other criterion. Perhaps they would like to see birth and status and all that thing.

It is our duty as responsible Members of the Legislative Assembly who put ourselves forward to educate and inform our people. Madam Speaker, Honourable Members and yourself must be tired of hearing me quote Edmond Burke, but I like Edmond Burke and on these occasions he is one of the historical figures I like to draw upon. This is what this quintessential historian and representative of the people had to say about leadership and the behaviour of persons like us in times like this: “Your representative owes you not his industry only, but his judgement; and he betrays instead of serving you if he sacrifices it to your opinion.” I say this to say that the Leader of the Opposition has said he does not have an opinion on the Constitution, he is waiting to hear from the people.

The Speaker: Honourable Member before you proceed would it be befitting to request for a photocopy to be made since it was a verbatim quote for the future records of Parliament for you to lay it on the Table?

Hon. Roy Boddan: Madam Speaker, I shall be happy to do that but this little book I just read from is my book of quotations. When I read other books and find these quotations I write them down in this book but I have the source at home and I shall be glad to bring it tomorrow, Madam Speaker. Thank you.

So, if a representative is waiting to hear from his constituents their opinions—can you imagine fifteen hundred different opinions? How am I going to come here and represent my people if I do not have a basis upon which to inform them? The reason they elected me is because they trust my judgment. Of course they inform me of their positions and I must temper my judgement on the feedback which I get from them. But the predication is that I will have a position of my own. It is impossible to speak to the majority of them every day so my being here as their representative is predicated upon the fact that I must have the ability and my own position, which will be largely reflective of theirs.

Indeed, I would think when we have meetings, as the UDP did, we let them know what our positions are and why we believe that such and such should be the case. So, the Opposition (as is to be expected) is not making good sense.

They have, through an organisation called People for a Referendum, attempted to poll the people . . . an ‘A’ for effort . . . that is good to have taken a poll but here is what they expect will happen—a perpetual polling. They petitioned one day and we as Ministers of Government assembled in front of the Government Administration Building and received the petitions. I would have thought that upon the presentation and receipt of those petitions that would be the end of the exercise. For if we model it off our elections at the close of polls, whether you voted or you did not vote, that is the end. When that hour comes on that given day . . . too bad. The Elections Office did not say, ‘Well if you did not vote you can come tomorrow or the next day’. So, I thought that when they delivered the petitions that was the end of the exercise, only to hear that they have eight hundred more and they have this hundred more. And so they must have thought that the Government would be [unmindful] as to be receiving them at their convenience without any cut off point. Not so. I am happy that that process has been, by their own admission, legitimate, transparent, accountable and acceptable. For the UDP Government in its wisdom requested of the Supervisor of Elections to enact measures appropriate to handle this business so that no one could say there were any improprieties.

I heard representatives on the talk show saying, ‘We are satisfied that the process is entirely acceptable’. Madam Speaker, such is the nature of the Government; to be responsible, accountable and transparent.

But it is unrealistic to expect that the exercise would be extended to ad infinitum. There must be a cut off point. I emphasise this to show that the Government is not only responsible but it is also democratic, and contrary to what they are trying to purport, completely cooperative. But we cannot be expected to continue to receive petitions and so we await the findings of the officers from the Elections Office.

Then they say, ‘Oh no we did not give you any petition to send to the United Kingdom so you should not send them’. Well, Madam Speaker, are they in this exercise or not? In my mind it would bolster their position to have the results included in the package to go to the United Kingdom. Are they fearful of something? I am now beginning to question their motives.

Now I understand why they did not amend the Motion as the Honourable Speaker recommended in order to have the debate in the first place. For the object of the exercise is not exposure, airing and debate, it is to stymie; stop; confuse; obfuscate and create disorder! You tell me if their intentions were honourable why are they not here now? Why are they not answering to these charges that I am laying? Why are they not here now espousing their positions, as we are our position? This is the House of debate, not outside; not in the Civic Centre in North Side; not in Ashton Ruddy Centre in Cayman Brac; not on the byways and highways and the Sea Inn and the Turtle Inns and all the other Inns . . . Here! in the Legislative Assembly of the Cayman Islands!

Their charges are unsubstantiated. We have extended the time and we have received their petitions and we did not drive them out of debating. So, when the exercise reaches finality and all this material goes to White Hall and their position and the people's position, whom they purport to represent, is excluded by virtue of their behaviour, what is their excuse? The persons whom they claim to represent should see through that. They should put pressure on them to say, 'Listen we are not pleased'. You voluntarily extricated yourself from being in a position to say what we were concerned about'.

Madam Speaker, this is the first time that I have seen such action displayed in such an important issue as this. Even in the previous exercise since I have been here those Members who objected stayed and argued their points and expressed their objections. They did not, like a spoil brat, take the football put it under their arm and went home because a goal was scored on their team. That is really not mature behaviour.

I am glad that the UDP is of such a mind that we would not sacrifice the long-term objectives for the short-term goals of a false success. I am glad that we did not yield to their call unfounded for a referendum based on six hypothetical questions that could in no way pass as issues of national importance. I am glad that we did not entertain that and I am confident that when the count is made the results will bolster our position.

The Government has a mandate to govern and it should not yield that to an unorganised Opposition. The Government is abiding by parliamentary procedure; it is carrying on the business of the country in peacefulness and good order and it has the confidence of the majority of the people.

Madam Speaker, let me now turn to the challenges which I see facing us. As a UDP Government we must continue to stand by the Checklist that we have submitted. We must continue to encourage our supporters to stand behind us on these issues. We must continue to articulate these positions, which we have taken with the confidence that they are in the best interest of the long-term development of this country. We must also continue to avail ourselves of the opportunity to educate and inform our people.

I am happy to say that as Minister of Education, working in collaboration with the Ministry of Community Services, Youth, Sports, and Women's Affairs, we will be launching in November a citizenship education programme. We want to teach in the schools citizenship and human rights. We want to inform Caymanians, particularly the young, about the Constitution; about the type of Government it has; about civic and moral responsibility; about rights; about a plural society and the demands of a plural society; about how we have to be inclusive.

We knew for a long time that concerted efforts had to be made to rid the country of this void to let people understand there is nothing wrong with politics and politicians; to let the people understand that government is a necessary instrument for orderly existence; that good people must set themselves forward to help them differentiate between the rabble-rousers and sincere performers.

Also, to help them understand and appreciate, that circumstances of birth and growing up does not necessarily mean that anyone is more advantaged or less advantaged than anyone else; and that the criterion is integrity, honesty, dedication and ability; and that there is no clause in Adam's Will that says anyone of any colour has a monopoly. Or, anyone of any wealth or standing has a monopoly more than anyone else.

I am glad that the UDP Government stands on the principle that it cannot accept the definition of citizenship, which the Constitutional Commissioners recommended, because we believe it is too narrow. We believe it must be more inclusive, we are more broad-minded than that and we would like to see that modified to be more reflective of the society as it is today. We have made attempts to address these challenges.

The Opposition, however, has challenges also and they have failed in the most obvious one: To be responsible for taking their position to debate and offer counter arguments. I would have welcomed the opportunity to sit down and listen to a Member of the Opposition take my arguments and refute them if they thought that necessary.

They also have challenges to participate in the education of the Caymanian society but they cannot do that by absenting themselves from the House of debate. They will not be effective if they only stand on the side of the road and 'susu' with a couple of people. To put it in street par lance they are not ready.

The Opposition is not ready for responsibility; they cannot replace the Government. Apart from the fact that they are shy on numbers, their attitude is poor. They lack the maturity because you cannot be a good leader if you do not understand the position of a follower. You cannot be a representative of the majority if you squander the minority position and if you lack maturity.

Finally, when the chickens have come home to roost we shall have to ask ourselves whether we have done the people whom we purport to represent, a service by our behaviour; by our participation; by our willingness to learn by listening to one another; by our ability to convincingly put forward our points of view, or whether we have perpetuated the old 'Massa' system as it existed in Caymanian society, by absenting ourselves and crying 'foul' when we think we have the sympathy of the majority of people.

We shall have to ask ourselves when the chickens have come home to roost whether playing victim persona as it seems the Opposition Leader has taken on to himself, is in the best interest of the development of Caymanian society. Or, if it would not have been more appropriate; more representative and more beneficial to stand tall in here and listen to the arguments put forward by the Government, and convincingly represent the people who have faith and trust in them.

Madam Speaker, the only way for the Cayman Islands to go at this point is to have a modern instrument of government—an instrument that takes us into the 21st century. We can no longer abide by the document, which allows us to form governments over a pot of breadfruit and turtle meat. Our people deserve to know from the time of going to the polls what is the likely position; who is likely to emerge. They need to be able to analyse the political manifestos of the various entities. You cannot wait until election when everyone is toing and froing and you cannot have this marriage of convenience or what my colleague, the Minister of Health, described as ‘an unholy alliance’ that is going to break asunder.

The people of the Cayman Islands have to be at the level of political maturity to know that leadership is bound to change. Even in the political party the members might say, ‘Mr. Leader we do not have any confidence in your leadership’. I posit, Madam Speaker, that if we had had a party structure what happened on the 8 November would never have been a public spectacle because we would have retired to the party headquarters. And the announcement would have been made that afternoon 5 o’clock or 6 o’clock by the public relations officer for the party saying ‘Mr. X, after a party reshuffle, is now the Leader’. We would have come here the next day—it would have been family business taken care of in house in the Party office.

Look at what happened to Margaret Thatcher, the most dynamic leader in the western world at the time when her Party members said, ‘We are sorry Iron Lady we would like someone else to lead us now’. So, there is no use in anyone trying to put forward the events of the 8 November. But the reason I am worried about it is because the prominent Member of the Opposition has been recorded to say, ‘Let us take the power back that they took from us on the 8 November.’ We did not take any power from anyone on the 8 November. That is why I question their motives. They do not want to participate sincerely in the constitutional exercise. What they want to do is to bring down the Government and call for new elections. But Madam Speaker, it shall not happen because we will not give them any reason. And I contend that the United Kingdom Government not wishing to set unanimous precedent will turn a deaf ear to their demands. The Government is functioning; we support Constitutional Modernisation and we have sent in our Checklist and we stand by them. So, let us now get on with the process. Thank you.

The Speaker: Honourable Member was that an indication that you are ready for the luncheon break or have you concluded?

Hon. Roy Bodden: No, Madam Speaker, I have concluded. Thank you.

The Speaker: We will now suspend for the luncheon break and reconvene at 2.30 pm.

Proceedings suspended at 1.07 pm

Proceedings resumed at 3.13 pm

The Speaker: Please be seated. Proceedings are resumed. The continuation of the debate. Does any other Member wish to speak? The Second Elected Member for Cayman Brac & Little Cayman.

Mr. Lyndon L. Martin: Good afternoon, Madam Speaker and all Honourable Members of the Legislative Assembly. I rise to make a short contribution to the most important debate in the history of the Cayman Islands, that is, the Motion for the Government to ‘take note’ on the Commissioners’ Report on the Constitution.

Like my colleagues who have preceded me I am equally disappointed that the Members of the People’s Progressive Movement (PPM) have decided not to fulfil their obligation to their constituents and to the people of this country by being here to debate this very important Motion.

I also take this opportunity to join with my colleagues in congratulating the Commissioners on doing an excellent job on a very daunting task, one of which the effort was to come to a consensus on what the populace of the Cayman Islands wanted on a topic that is seldom understood.

Madam Speaker, the constituents which you and I represent have always shown great interest on constitutional matters. From that perspective we have a great responsibility to fulfil our role as representatives: Educating the people on the changes of the subject of the Constitution and the Report of the Commissioners to all districts in our constituency; going on a series of five meetings dealing specifically with the Constitution. Even going into the high school on our Island and explaining the Commissioners’ Report and the impact.

I come now before the Honourable Legislative Assembly to represent the views that we have canvassed from our population and as the duly elected representatives for the sixth electoral districts that is something we can do: Represent the majority of the populace.

Madam Speaker, a Constitution is the framework that defines the relationship under which a government has with its people. In the context of the Cayman Islands, an Overseas Territory of the United Kingdom, it goes even further because it outlines the relationship under which we would have with the mother country, the United Kingdom.

In my contribution I will attempt to outline the framework under which we find this constitutional modernisation exercise both in the context of the democratic evolution within the Cayman Islands, and also from the perspective of the change in the United Kingdom from being a great Empire to now being a member of the European Union; the fall of the Empire and now a Member State where decisions are not made in London but rather in Brussels; the United Kingdom now being obligated to various international Conventions and consequently, the Cayman Islands being part and parcel of those obligations.

Firstly, I would like to take a look at the change that the United Kingdom has experienced. In the 18th and 19th centuries great efforts were made at the building of an Empire. It was fashionable and power was determined by landmass and population. The UK found itself at the end of the 19th century as being the world's great power; an Empire on which the sun never set. Up until the 1940s the map used in Britain to educate its students was one that showed Great Britain at the centre and its Empire highlighted in pink to show the great prominence of the UK. However, that Empire has now changed but that Empire was built to determine and establish a source of cheap raw materials and also a source of market for the products and services of the UK.

The justification put forward for an Empire of this nature by the overlords of colonialism was one that was a white man's burden to care for less advanced civilisations. It is important that we understand the impact that this colonial mentality has had on the development of all British subjects. This submission that was made and so often articulated as the justification for the British Empire was strengthened during Winston Churchill's time as the Prime Minister of the UK, the magnificent leader who fought to maintain the Empire. But the white man's burden; the colonial racist attitude has always been part of colonial exploitation and repression of the grass root populace. That is a fundamental part of understanding the remainder of my contribution.

After the 1940s and the War under which the UK showed its might, the UK found itself where the maintenance of an Empire was extremely costly. Civilisations that were deemed to be less advanced started to become a little bit more educated and liberated, and started to seek destinies of their own. This resulted in the need of establishing strong military presence to maintain this Empire, and the War had placed taxes on the UK's revenue.

The UK had become dependent on loans from the United States of America. Then after Churchill and the reign of Atlee, there was a serious consensus shift under the Labour government, which resulted in an exorbitant amount of money being spent on social programmes. The UK was no longer able to maintain the Empire. The Empire slowly started to fade away and transformed itself. We find ourselves in the remaining countries that are attached constitutionally to the UK as being part of the Commonwealth.

It is my submission here today that the Commonwealth such as the Empire time is also challenged. The UK is seeing that the Commonwealth which meets twice annually to share ideas and debate uncommon issues—that again is a costly exercise and is starting to question the merits and benefits of having the Commonwealth.

The greatest challenge to the concept of the Commonwealth is the increased involvement of the UK in the European Union. You cannot serve two lords. The UK is now a Member State of the European Union and consequently has to bear the image and adhere to the statutes and conventions of the European Union. It is no longer an empire onto itself but now has found itself as part of a greater Empire that of the European Union.

So much of what occurs in the UK and the change in attitude and expectations have direct impact on the Cayman Islands. We must make ourselves well versed on the occurrences and the happenings in the UK. Madam Speaker, the UK now imports more than 50 per cent of its food products. It imports all raw materials with the exception of coal. And up until the 1970s it imported all its oil. The UK is a country with its own internal economic problems, and we will note through the future a continuation of this change where the UK will be looking more internally at its own problems.

We in the Cayman Islands have seen the White Paper (Partnership for Progress and Prosperity) where the UK has made it clear that it must be conscious of the contingent liability that its dependent territories face. They must take action to ensure that the governments are run in a manner that is not a liability to Great Britain. The Constitution (the framework that outlines that relationship) is directly relevant to this subject.

We must prepare ourselves as a nation to deal with the local and international challenges. We must take on an identity of our own. We as a nation, including our constituency of Cayman Brac and Little Cayman, have been the most patriotic part of the British Empire and the Commonwealth. And we remain committed because we as intelligent people see the benefits of being a British Overseas Territory—the added stability that it brings. But we do not control our entire destiny. We must monitor carefully the change in the country of Great Britain. And we must note that we are no longer a great asset; we are no longer of strong economic value so we must progress carefully with our negotiations and encounters with the UK.

Madam Speaker, the Labour Government that commenced the exercise following the failure of Churchill of breaking down the Empire is once more in power. We must look carefully on the Labour Government's philosophies; their approach to governance because it directly impacts us as a nation. I must make it quite clear (as stated in my manifesto and at every political meeting that I have had) that I firmly believe that we must maintain our relationship with the UK as long as practically possible.

It is a two-side partnership and we might not control all of the cards, so let us be careful with some of the statements that we make. When we talk of democracy in this country we not only talk of the local democracy and our relationship with the populace but we must also consider that a fundamental part of maintaining our democracy and our stability is the relationship with the UK.

I cannot help but make note of recent times I have seen deterioration in the respect that has been exhibited by certain Members of the Parliament from the PPM in regards to the UK's representative in the Cayman Islands. I note—and I have stated this at public meetings—with interest the Second Elected Member from George Town when he stood in this Parliament, putting this Parliament through a very boring and non-enlightening story about a church service that he attended and a lady came to him crying that the Pastor was leaving. And his point was that she was not crying about the Pastor leaving but she was crying about what was to come. He made that analogy to that of the Governor leaving and his fear of the new Governor to come because as he stated, it seems to be that all governors that come keep getting worse and worse.

I note with interest the Third Elected Member from Bodden Town at his public meeting that he boasted of the fact that he did not show the past Governor any respect by going to the Airport to bid him farewell.

We must understand that in this Parliament the Mace represents the Queen and in this country the Governor is the Queen's representative. I am fearful that the radical nature being displayed by the PPM at this time when the UK is going through its own internal challenges will not be tolerated by our mother country: She will not tolerate continually being slapped in the face by Members of the PPM.

I would now like to turn to the local democracy. The situation that we find ourselves in today is so closely tied to the historical evolution. It alarms me that we find ourselves with a Government (Members of Executive Council) who collectively represent 72 years of parliamentary experience at the end of 2004. We have individuals here with their Masters and Doctorate degrees, a Government with a vast amount of experience and qualifications yet there is something that underpins a degree of resistance; something that prevents a certain portion of the populace to accept this Government. It is obviously not their experience and their qualifications.

Madam Speaker, I will try in this portion of my debate to highlight what I think are some of the underlying reasons why this Government is so unacceptable by a certain portion of the populace. We must remember from where we have come. We have come from a past of where our populace has had to be very reliant on a particular class of the community that controlled a significant portion of the resources.

Our people had to go to sea to make a living whether it was from the days of turtling or from the merchant shipping. And the vessels were owned by this class. They had to leave their families behind who relied on the merchants to supply them with their daily needs based on credit, or as we term it 'trust'. And when the seaman returned he would settle the bill with the merchants. But on most occasions his bill was greater than his poor settlement, leaving him indebted to the merchant. And the merchant rejoiced at the situation. On many occasions debts were settled by the merchant convincing the hardworking seaman to give up his property and on most occasions at a value far less than what he could have gotten on an open market: going further to secure and embed the control that this particular class had in this country. In those days government was simply selected from among these individuals.

A statement made recently by the Members of the PPM is that 'Democracy is under trial' and that is so true. However, I do not agree with the Member from East End that 'Democracy is under trial and the UDP is in the judgment chair'. No, democracy is under trial because the fundamental rule of democracy is being challenged: the majority rule. For they are accustomed to the days when this merchant class would have controlled the resources and were able to successfully indoctrinate and convince the seamen and the hardworking people (the grass root Caymanians) that there was some degree of superiority in this class. So often it was stated that they would have to be smart to become so rich. It created a culture in which our people felt subservient to the merchant class (the establishment) in this country. They felt a need that their first acquisition when they went to sea was a three-piece suit so that when they came home they could stand around and look like a merchant. That is what made them feel important. They wanted so much to be like a merchant.

This culture is not one that we left behind in the 1960s; this subservient behaviour is something that we continue to experience in this country in modern day. On the night of being elected after gaining my first success as being a representative, I started to feel the pressure of this establishment. They started to call me to say congratulations. Throughout the campaign they were not calling me but now they needed to maintain their control so I became of significance.

We are going through a shift in paradigm in this country and it is being met with resistance from those who would not benefit under the new paradigm as they have benefited under the old.

Madam speaker, we must understand that this referendum being sought on the Commissioners' Report is not all about the merits and demerits of those subjects. It is all about the shift in the power base from that of a few in the establishment to the majority in the working class. The merchant class controlled the resources to get themselves elected.
