FRIDAY
2 JULY 2004
9.30 AM
First Sitting

The Speaker: I invite the Rev. Joseph Crawford to lead us in Prayers.

PRAYERS

Rev. Joseph Crawford: Shall we pray?

Almighty God, from whom all wisdom and power are derived: We beseech Thee so to direct and prosper the deliberations of the Legislative Assembly now assembled, that all things may be ordered upon the best and surest foundations for the glory of Thy Name and for the safety, honour and welfare of the people of these Islands.

Bless our Sovereign Lady, Queen Elizabeth II; Philip, Duke of Edinburgh; Charles, Prince of Wales; and all the Royal family. Give grace to all who exercise authority in our Commonwealth, that peace and happiness, truth and justice, religion and piety may be established among us. Especially we pray for the Governor of our Islands, the Speaker of the Legislative Assembly, Official Members and Ministers of Cabinet and Members of the Legislative Assembly, that we may be enabled faithfully to perform the responsible duties of our high office.

All this we ask for Thy great Name's sake.

Let us say the Lord's Prayer together:

Our Father, who art in Heaven, Hallowed be thy name. Thy Kingdom come, Thy will be done on earth as it is in Heaven. Give us this day our daily bread, and forgive us our trespasses, as we forgive those who trespass against us. Lead us not into temptation, but deliver us from evil. For Thine is the Kingdom, the power and the glory, forever and ever. Amen.

The Lord bless us and keep us. The Lord make His face shine upon us and be gracious unto us. The Lord lift up the light of His countenance upon us and give us peace, now and always. Amen.

Proceedings resumed at 9.34 am

The Speaker: Please be seated. Proceedings are resumed.

"WHEREAS section 46 (1) of the Constitution of the Cayman Islands provides that the sessions of the Legislative Assembly of the Cayman Islands shall be held at such places and begin at such times as the Governor may from time to time by Proclamation appoint:

"NOW THEREFORE, I, Bruce H. Dinwiddy, CMG, Governor of the Cayman Islands, by virtue of the powers conferred upon me by the said section 46 (1) of the Constitution of the Cayman Islands, HEREBY PROCLAIM that a session of the Legislative Assembly of the Cayman Islands shall be held at the Legislative Assembly Building in George Town, in the Island of Grand Cayman beginning at 10:00 am on Friday, the 2nd day of July, 2004.

"GIVEN UNDER MY HAND AND THE PUBLIC SEAL OF THE CAYMAN ISLANDS AT GEORGETOWN IN THE ISLAND OF GRAND CAYMAN, ON THIS TWENTY-NINTH DAY OF JUNE IN THE YEAR OF OUR LORD TWO THOUSAND AND FOUR IN THE FIFTY-THIRD YEAR OF THE REIGN OF HER MAJESTY QUEEN ELIZABETH II."

MOTION TO SUSPEND PROCEEDINGS

The Speaker: I now call on the Honourable Leader of Government Business.

Hon. W. McKeever Bush: Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

I do move that this Honourable House rise to await the arrival of His Excellency the Governor and reassemble on his arrival to receive a gracious message from the Throne.

The Speaker: The question is that this House do rise to await the arrival of His Excellency the Governor and reassemble on his arrival to receive a gracious message from the Throne. All those in favour please say Aye. Those against, No.

Ayes.

The Speaker: The Ayes have it.

Agreed that this House do rise to await the arrival of His Excellency the Governor and reassemble on his arrival to receive a gracious Message from the Throne.

MESSAGE BY THE HONOURABLE SPEAKER

The Speaker: Your Excellency the Governor and Mrs. Dinwiddy, Honourable Madam Justice Levers, Honourable Leader of Government Business and Mrs. Bush, Honourable Official Members and Ministers of the Cabinet and spouses, Honourable Leader of the Opposition and Mrs. Tibbetts, Honourable National Hero, Mrs. Sybil McLaughlin, Honourable Members of the Legislative Assembly, Associate Members of the Cayman Islands Branch of the Commonwealth Parliamentary Association, Distinguished guests, ladies and gentlemen:

This Legislative Assembly Building was officially open and dedicated to the people of the Cayman Islands in July 1972. Since that time, some 32 years hence, there have been no major renovations carried out on this building until 2003. It was therefore not surprising that the renovation work, which commenced in February 2003, has taken some 17 months to complete, at a cost of approximately $2.3 million. The initial survey and estimates could not possibly have envisaged the amount of deterioration discovered once the renovation works commenced. The increased cost is therefore commensurate with the amount of work required to properly renovate this 32-year-old building.

Despite certain difficulties encountered along the way, with the renovation works, I am sure that you will all agree that these Legislative accommodations have been much improved. We now have a facility of which we can all be justly proud, though there are a number of items still remaining to be completed by the contractor, McAlpine.

These prestigious accommodations are in keeping with standards expected in a jurisdiction that boasts the high level of sophistication that exists in these Islands. It was with this most uppermost in mind that I recently spoke in the House, and subsequently wrote to His Excellency the Governor, of the need of the Legislative Arm of the Government to be made an autonomous body. More importantly, such autonomy properly recognises the constitutional division of powers between the Executive, Judicial and Legislative branches of Government. Further, when the question of Legislative autonomy was first raised by me in this Honourable House, it was quite clear to me that most, if not all, of the Honourable Members present (including Honourable Members of the Opposition) were supportive of such autonomy. It is therefore my view that a restructured Legislative Department would run along similar lines as the Judicial Department, thus clearly defining the separation of the Legislative and Executive Arms of Government.

It is my understanding that the original structure was built with certain materials which were symbolic of our past and present constitutional connections to Jamaica and the United Kingdom. For example, the beautiful mahogany strips that adorned the wall behind the Speaker's Chair, came from Jamaica and the slate that covers the interior walls, came from the United Kingdom. Unfortunately, the Jamaica mahogany strips were not secured and thus had to be replaced with the beautiful mahogany panelling that forms the backdrop to the new Speaker's Chair.

We owe a debt of gratitude to the Honourable Leader of Government Business, Hon. W. McKeever Bush, OBE, JP, for his kind donation of the new Speaker's Chair, which I will shortly invite him to present to this Honourable House. There is no doubt that its splendour and magnificence will add to the dignity of these hallowed chambers. May I also thank him for his intervention in securing the necessary funding from Government to provide the beautiful mahogany finish on the wall.

Before calling on the Honourable Leader of Government Business to make his presentation of the new Speaker's Chair and on Rev. Joseph Crawford to offer the re-dedication prayer for this newly renovated building, I would take this opportunity to thank all those individuals who were directly or indirectly involved with the renovation works. For fear of omitting anyone, I have decided not to do individual recognitions. I would, however, be remiss if I fail to appreciate and recognise our hardworking Clerk and her dedicated staff, the Chief Secretary, the Deputy Chief Secretary and the project managers for their invaluable contributions and the contractor McAlpine. Also, my thanks to Mr. Horace Ingram for his work on the mahogany panelling and the new Speaker's Chair. His dedication to completing this work within such a short time frame is highly commendable and I wish to thank him most sincerely.

When the Legislative Assembly was forced to find temporary accommodations at the commencement of the renovation works in February 2003, the Honourable Chief Justice came to our rescue by allowing us the use of Court 5, where we remained until the end of March 2004. We then moved across to Cayman Corporate Centre, on Hospital Road, where we shared accommodations at the offices of the Cayman Islands Investment Bureau. May I, once again, thank the Honourable Chief Justice for allowing us the use of Court 5, the Honourable Leader of Government Business for allowing us to share the offices of the Investment Bureau and the Honourable Financial Secretary for making available to us other space at the Corporate Centre to accommodate our staff over the past few months. My grateful thanks are also extended to Mr. Peter Young, Managing Partner of Rothstein Kass & Company for allowing the departmental staff and myself the use of his boardroom on Monday mornings to conduct our weekly devotions. Of course, my heartfelt thanks to all Honourable Members and our staff for so graciously coping with what, at times, was less-than-ideal working conditions. It is certainly good to be back home.

Your Excellency, ladies and gentlemen, it now gives me much pleasure to call on the Honourable Leader of Government Business to make his presentation, followed with the re-dedication prayer by Rev. Crawford.

Thank you.

PRESENTATION OF SPEAKER'S CHAIR

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: Thank you very much.

Mr. Speaker and Honourable Members, it is a privilege for me to stand here today as Father of the House, that is, the longest serving Member present. It is an honour to serve the people of these Islands. In particular, I pay tribute to the people of West Bay, my constituency, but indeed, all the people of these Islands who it has been my pleasure to serve these past 20 years.

Today, my family and I donate this magnificent Speaker's Chair and its accompanying pieces. We give it, not as a gift to the Legislative Assembly or its Members, but as a gift to the Speaker and to all the people of the Cayman Islands as a mark of thanks for the trust they have vested in me over the years.

This trust has not been taken lightly, and with it comes great responsibility. Throughout my time as a Member of this Honourable House, I have striven to promote the interests of the Cayman Islands and its people. I have also done my utmost to protect and promote the democratic values which we hold dear.

The Cayman Islands, as you know, is a country with a long and proud tradition of democracy, dating back to 1831. I have worked, as others have done, to uphold and promote the Westminster system of Government in the Cayman Islands and with it democratic choice, freedom of expression and civil liberties.

Mr. Speaker, the Father of another House, Sir Winston Churchill, once said, "It has been said that democracy is the worst form of government except all the others that have been tried." No system of government is perfect and it is the responsibility of all of us to continue to work and make our democratic system open, accountable and responsive to the people. We here must always be vigilant in our defence of our democratic system and civil liberties.

During my tenure, I have endeavoured to establish and entrench more freedoms for the people of the Cayman Islands. Most recently, our Government has made preparations to establish the office of a Complaints Commissioner and appointed an officer to investigate cases of alleged maladministration. We can today announce that a budget has been ring-fenced for this important position and our first Complaints Commissioner has been chosen by His Excellency the Governor.

During my time as Leader of Government Business, I have opened up new opportunities for our people to contribute to our political discourse and comment on our Government's policies. This has meant being more transparent and open than we have ever been before. Inevitably, such openness can and has encouraged criticism of Government, Ministers and, in particular, of the party in power, but that is the nature of a mature democracy and we accept it as such.

We are not, and should not be, afraid of responsible debate and constructive engagement. I am proud to say that we now have the most open, civil society ever enjoyed in the Cayman Islands, although I must add that the open radio shows are still not as educational or, perhaps, even impartial as they should be.

The Mahogany Speaker's Chair, it is my honour to present this to the people of the Cayman Islands today. It has been built here in our country by a Jamaican master craftsman, Mr. Ingram, and is a testament to the quality craftwork and attention to detail that can be accomplished in these Islands, but more than that, it is a demonstration of the resourcefulness and aptitude of our people. If I should say so, it is a magnificent piece of workmanship and a tribute to our people, traditions and history; and while the mahogany that stood at the back of the wall was a gift and came from that country that we have been part of all of our life, although some people refuse to accept that, even our ancestors. Mine go way back to Westmorland and others I know to St. Elizabeth, when the Cayman Islands were annexed to Jamaica and the Cayman Islands were part and parcel of the Parish of Westmorland. While that mahogany is gone, the Speaker's Chair has been built by a Jamaican craftsman who learned and was taught the trade in Jamaica but lives here and is a part of us.

Mr. Speaker, we are entering an important stage in the development of our Islands. We have benefited, and will continue to benefit, from a rich and varied political, economic and cultural heritage. Political parties are now again in operation. It is a good system if its members are unified and allow it to work.

I now ask the Caymanian public to allow the system to work, to be a part of it and to help give it their best effort. Every Elected Member needs to work together.

This party system government has existed for hundreds of years in the United Kingdom, Canada and Bermuda, to name just a few. We in the Cayman Islands need constitutional modernisation. The party system is needed to work the modernised constitutional system. I have maintained over my political life that the Constitution, as has been proposed and that would be proposed, will not work with independence; it cannot and has not worked over time. One of the good things about the party system is that it allows all the people to be a part of a system that gives them the opportunity to affect decisions of the Government without waiting four years. That is the reason I keep asking the question, why independence?

We have worked long and hard in the past three years on Constitutional modernisation. I will soon put to the United Democratic Party, then to the House, our proposals which will be debated upon in the coming General Election, and hopefully put in place a modernised constitution, which will strengthen and safeguard our democracy. Among those safeguards are –

1. A bicameral system, that is a Legislative Assembly as we have now with a small senate where the country can benefit from the energy and experience of younger people and others;
2. An expanded Cabinet that will still include the Governor but not as Chairman, as the Chief Minister, whoever that will be, will take on that responsibility. It would include the Chief Secretary, the Financial Secretary and the Attorney General who will continue to be Members with the Attorney General retaining his vote and the others ex-officio only;
3. Including the protection of our financial and monetary systems, shipping, civil aviation, tourism and other key components of our economy;
4. Critically, immigration will remain under the control of the Cayman Islands Government;
5. It would offer financial sovereignty and protection against European expansion;
6. It gives us a new definition to His Excellency the Governor's authority and gives the Islands more say in foreign affairs and international agreements which affect us.

Some say the Bermuda model is where we should go, but I think that what I am outlining is where we should go.

Our relationship with the United Kingdom has been the bedrock on which our development has been built. However, more than at any other stage in our history, our destiny is now in our own hands. We must trust our people to shape this destiny on the way to being full craftsmen of our own faith.

On the evidence of our Islands today, I do not doubt that our future with challenges will be prosperous indeed. The economy is now strong and growing stronger. Our own people are investing in the country, and all of our people are enjoying what is beginning to be a good time again for the people of these Islands, and with the guardianship of Almighty God to steer the good ship Cayman Islands, I know that these Islands and its people will prevail. I find that this is a good time to be here, in this place, in these Islands, among our people. For that, we will work for our people.

Mr. Speaker, you are the fourth Speaker, and I thank you for the excellence you have put into that post. I agree with you as we have agreed that it is time that the work of the legislature be looked at in a different way and perhaps become more independent from central government. That is, perhaps, another debate.

My family and I are privileged to present the Speaker's Chair to the people of these Islands.

Thank you very much.

RE-DEDICATION OF THE LEGISLATIVE ASSEMBLY

Prayer of Re-Dedication

Rev. Joseph Crawford: Honourable Members and friends, may I invite us to stand for the Prayer of Re-dedication.

Almighty and Eternal God, Sovereign Lord over all your creation, who's loving kindness never fails, who rules both in heaven and in earth, graciously vouchsafe your presence as our prayers are offered for the re-dedication of the Legislative Assembly Building, this building that has stood for over three decades as a bastion of hope for all; this building where laws have been formulated and enacted; this building which has served as a cradle for the democratic process. This building that has supported the exercise of free speech and the cross-fertilisation of ideas. This building that has served as an impartial arbitrator in the defence of the civic, social, political and religious interest of the peoples of these Islands.

Sovereign Lord, we would this day re-dedicate not only this building but also the dreams and aspirations of your servants, whose collective wisdom has been the driving force behind this institution. We re-dedicate this day the renewed efforts of His Excellency the Governor, Members of the Cabinet and Members of the Legislative Assembly. May there be a doubling of the resolve to serve with distinction and true nobility the peoples of these Islands.

In the name of Almighty God we re-dedicate this building and all who labour within its bounds, through Jesus Christ our Lord. Amen.

READING BY THE HONOURABLE SPEAKER OF MESSAGES AND ANNOUNCEMENTS

Apologies

The Speaker: Please be seated.

Before calling on His Excellency the Governor, I wish to extend apologies for the absence of the Member of North Side and the Third Elected Member for Bodden Town.

Invitation by the Speaker

The Speaker: It now gives me much pleasure, Your Excellency, to call on you to deliver the Throne Speech.

THE SPEECH FROM THE THRONE

INTRODUCTION

His Excellency the Governor: Honourable Speaker, Honourable Members of the Legislative Assembly, it is a great honour for me to present to you my second Throne Speech, in this finely refurbished Chamber.

I feel that we have come a long way since my first Throne Speech, presented in Cayman Brac nearly 16 months ago. We have successfully managed, even if not totally eliminated a tension which had arisen shortly before that time in Cayman's relations with the United Kingdom. We have achieved this, despite the problems posed for Cayman's financial services industry by the European Union Savings Directive and the failure to bring to a conclusion the negotiations with the United Kingdom on a new Constitution.

I remain conscious that a key part of my role as Governor is to provide a bridge between George Town and London. That bridge and its supporting structures were largely designed many years ago, some would say in another age. Some changes are long overdue. And I strongly believe that is in our joint interest to continue to work for Constitutional reform, even if there are different perceptions about how far it should go. I hope that opportunity will be taken during the forthcoming election campaign to take forward debate in Cayman on this, and to ascertain more clearly what proposals the electorate would like the new government to make to London next year.

Meanwhile, this occasion gives me the opportunity to pledge my continuing commitment to work with you all, with the public service, with the private sector and the wider community, to the best of my ability and within the parameters prescribed by the Constitution, for the benefit of our Islands and our people.

To this end, I am glad that public sector reform has been further advanced since I first addressed this Honourable House, after my swearing-in, in May 2002. The Public Finance and Management Law poses some big challenges, and I commend the many people, including Honourable Ministers and other Members of this Assembly, who have striven so hard to meet them. I believe there will be substantial benefits, in terms of improved public service and better value for the money voted by this House for public expenditure.

I hope that the reforms associated with the Financial Management Initiative will soon be complemented by reform of personnel management in the civil service, through the passage in this House of a new Public Service Law.

I meanwhile take this opportunity to pay tribute to the Honourable James Ryan, CBE, Chief Secretary, who will be retiring at the end of October after ten distinguished years in that office. We wish Mr Ryan a long, healthy and happy retirement. I announced earlier, in this year, that he will be succeeded as Chief Secretary by the Honourable George McCarthy, OBE, whose place as Financial Secretary will be taken by Mr Ken Jefferson. These two appointments will take effect on 1 November.

I turn now to report on the activities and plans of various Ministries, portfolios and Departments, starting with a new Department, the Cabinet Office, which is already strengthening our machinery of government.

CABINET OFFICE

The Cabinet Office which in July 2003 replaced the office of Executive Council is guiding coherent and informed policy-making across the whole range of government activity by coordinating the development and implementation of policy between Ministries and Portfolios and across the wider government domain.

JUDICIARY

The main objective for the Judicial Department with the support of the Government is to expand the Court premises. The Courthouse was built in 1972 and is now grossly inadequate for the judiciary's needs. Government property at Half-way-Pond has been identified as the site for the new Summary Courts Building.

The Judicial Administration, the Attorney General's Department, the Administration of the Legislative Assembly and the Government Information Services Department will make a collaborative effort to establish a Cayman Islands Judicial and Legal Services Website in 2004.

PORTFOLIO OF INTERNAL AND EXTERNAL AFFAIRS

The Elections Amendment Bill 2004 will be presented to the House during this meeting. The amendments will introduce much needed changes to the law.

PERSONNEL

The Personnel Department is looking forward to the enactment of the Public Service Bill and will develop Regulations to complement this.

GOVERNMENT INFORMATION SERVICES

The overall goal for 2004/05 for the Government Information Services will be to continue strengthening the quality of its services.

Major focus will continue on identification and training of civil servants as departmental press officers, while strengthening media-relations skills among top civil servants.

GIS will also be refining its internal systems with regard to its revenue earning capacity. Introductory efforts in 2004/05 will include offering chargeable training workshops to the private sector in areas such as media relations, speechwriting and public speaking.

ROYAL CAYMAN ISLANDS POLICE SERVICE

The Police Department will commence this financial year with a full establishment of officers. To complement our high-quality local personnel, experienced officers were recently recruited from the United Kingdom, the Caribbean and Canada. Additionally, the Police and the many Security Firms in the Islands are working on an accreditation scheme to include security guards as an extension to the RCIPS. They will also acquire a mobile Police Station to provide a police presence where required.

The Police are taking forward these initiatives with enthusiasm. I share the Commissioner's vision of a more professional, effective service enjoying the full confidence of the public, with a well resourced work force, well trained and well equipped, making the best use of technology and enjoying strong leadership and effective management, all aimed at reducing crime and the fear of crime and improving the quality of life in our community.

They are also considering ways of strengthening our capability for coastal surveillance with the possible purchase of new equipment for drug interdiction and search and rescue.

LEGISLATIVE DEPARTMENT

There is another challenging year ahead for the Parliament and its officers. The Department has recently returned to its newly renovated building though certain items still require completion. The building was shut down in February 2003 for major renovations.

Under the auspices of the Commonwealth Parliamentary Association, arrangements have been made to hold a Post-Election Seminar for all sitting Members of the Parliament in February 2005.

Also the Legislative Assembly's website is currently being designed, in collaboration with the Judicial and Legal Departments. It is planned, through a link to the Parliamentary website, to make laws available online.

IMMIGRATION

A major focus of the Immigration Department in 2004 will be the introduction and application of the new Immigration Law and regulations.

The Department will also focus its enforcement efforts on detection of undesirable persons through the use of intelligence and enhanced information systems developed "in house".

At the airport, the Department will extend expedited immigration clearance to frequent visitors, including those who own homes in the Islands, through the Caypass system successfully launched in late 2002.

THE PORTFOLIO OF LEGAL AFFAIRS

The Portfolio of Legal Affairs will continue its efforts to enhance Cayman's ability to participate in the global fight against money laundering and the financing of terrorism. All our anti-money laundering legislation will be consolidated to provide for a single regime.

The portfolio in consultation with the Judiciary is committed to ensuring that the criminal justice system continues to work efficiently and fairly and in the course of the year will introduce legislation to further this aim. It will include amendments to the Penal Code and new legislation to provide for alternative sentencing in the form of community service orders, conditional sentences, and measures to deal with certain drug offenders.

The Legislative Drafting Department expects an extremely busy year, and will be focusing on legislation in Social, Education, Financial, International and other fields.

The Law School will reinstate a redesigned Professional Practice Course, which will be more skills based and supported by locally produced course manuals.

THE PORTFOLIO OF FINANCE AND ECONOMICS

The implementation of a major public relations campaign to heighten awareness within the global financial services market place of the significance of the Cayman Islands as an international financial centre and to demonstrate the relevance of its contribution to commerce within the global financial community will continue in 2004/2005.

Also, the Portfolio will continue to participate in influencing existing and emerging international standards being promulgated by standard setting bodies to ensure their consistency with practices deemed appropriate in fostering the continuing growth and development of our financial industry.

In relation to fiscal affairs, one of the key undertakings of the Portfolio during the fiscal year 2004/2005 will be to manage the issues which may develop as a result of accounting for the activities of Government in accordance with the Public Management and Finance Law.

Two of the three phases of the Financial Management Initiative have been completed. The third and final phase is the delegation of greater input decision-making authority to Chief Officers. This is scheduled to take effect from 1 July 2005.

Other notable undertakings for the Portfolio during 2004/2005 include the establishment of a Revenue Unit. Its initial focus will be to enhance revenue collection from existing sources. In the medium to longer term, the Unit will examine possible new revenue sources for Government as well as develop, in conjunction with other Government agencies, revenue behaviour models.

CAYMAN ISLANDS MONETARY AUTHORITY

The Authority intends to nurture the continued growth of the financial services industry, and to enhance legislation to ensure that it continues to meet international regulatory standards.

The outlook for business activity during the upcoming fiscal year remains good, with signs of significant growth, particularly in the insurance, mutual funds and fiduciary services sectors.

On the international front, the Authority will address issues arising from the International Monetary Fund report to ensure that the jurisdiction continues to be supervised in accordance with international standards.

GENERAL REGISTRY

Prospects for the registration of new companies in the fiscal year 2004/2005 look bright.

The web-based Cayman Online Registry Information System that was launched in September 2003 will receive further enhancements. An exercise to update the Registry's electronic database with companies' officers and directors has just begun.

SHIPPING REGISTRY

The Shipping Registry will expand its representative office in Greece to include on-site survey capability. It is exploring the possibility of opening offices in Germany and the Far East.

CAYMAN ISLANDS STOCK EXCHANGE

As of 4th March 2004, the Cayman Islands Stock Exchange was granted "recognised stock exchange" status by the UK Inland Revenue. This will increase the number of companies wishing to list on the Exchange. The Exchange will continue in 2004/2005 to pursue further recognitions from overseas regulators.

THE SECRETARIAT

The Secretariat will continue its monitoring, analysis and reporting functions with respect to opportunities and challenges for the financial services industry, especially in the area of international initiatives, including those originating from the OECD and the EU.

BUDGET AND MANAGEMENT UNIT

The Budget and Management Unit will work to enhance the capability of the Civil Service in Strategic Management, Financial Management, Personnel Management and Production Management.

The Unit also plans to assist in the preparation of legislation and regulations relating to public authority reform to ensure consistency with the Public Management and Finance Law, the Financial Management Initiative and Personnel Reform.

INTERNAL AUDIT UNIT

The Internal Audit Unit will focus on revenue systems within government agencies, statutory authorities and government-owned companies in order to help strengthen internal controls and improve the collection of revenue.

TREASURY

The commencement of accrual accounting took effect from 1 July, with the Government's financial transactions now recorded and reported on that basis. The Entire Public Sector Reporting Unit is now fully staffed to deal with the new challenges of accrual accounting.

The processes of the Treasury's Cash Management Unit are being redefined and enhanced to provide for the additional requirements under the Financial Management Initiative in forecasting and managing Government's working capital.

CUSTOMS

The upgrading of the Department's automation project continues, the primary objective being to create an interface through which traders can speed up the process of declaration and clearance of goods whilst enabling the Department to produce new reports which provide relevant statistical information for all stakeholders.

The Department is also preparing to host the 27th Annual Caribbean Customs Law Enforcement Council (CCLEC) Conference during November 2004.

ECONOMICS AND STATISTICS OFFICE

The Economics and Statistics Office will concentrate on strengthening the collection and dissemination of statistics that matter and research that counts. The office will also provide Cabinet with regular updates on the domestic and international economic climate.

MINISTRY OF TOURISM, ENVIRONMENT, DEVELOPMENT AND COMMERCE

CAYMAN AIRWAYS

Although it was a challenging year for the airline industry, the results for 2003 – 2004 are a strong endorsement of Cayman Airways' strategy: The airline carried nearly 31,000 more international passengers than in the previous year.

Cayman Airways is committed to further increasing air arrivals by maintaining low fares and adding flights to existing and new destinations. In 2004 – 2005, the airline will introduce a second Boeing 737-300 into the fleet. The 737-300 aircraft can carry more passengers and more baggage, is more fuel efficient, and is able to fly to more distant locations than the 737-200 aircraft. The new aircraft will be used to improve customer service and will allow the airline to launch direct scheduled service to Boston in October 2004. The addition of direct service to this major US gateway is expected to be a major boost for tourism in the Cayman Islands.

TOURISM ATTRACTION BOARD

The Tourism Attraction Board will develop policies for its attractions that will enable them to become more competitive. It will develop long term strategic plans and new marketing strategies, and seek to improve and enhance its attraction products. The board also intends to seek new partnerships with cruise lines and tour operators and privately owned attractions, in order to increase the number of visitors to its sites.

The Tourism Attraction Board has been designated to assume responsibility for the management of a new craft market, which will be located in George Town. This is expected to be completed early in the financial year.

PEDRO ST. JAMES

Pedro St. James "Castle" has added to its historical and cultural appeal with the addition of two new exhibits entitled "How Cayman Was" and a "Cayman Stamp Collection." Both exhibits are on permanent display in the Resource Centre Room.

In the new financial year, Pedro Castle will strive to increase its portfolio of weddings and special events.

BOTANIC PARK

With the extension of the Water Authority's services to the Eastern Districts, the Botanic Park will soon have piped water delivered to its property. This will provide the Park with a dependable supply of water and reduce operating costs.

There are plans for a new Palm Garden by the end of 2004. Funding has been received from an anonymous donor to replace signs throughout the Park and this exercise should be completed early in 2005.

PIRATES WEEK OFFICE

Popular support for the Pirates Week Festival continues to grow. As no admission fees are charged for the events downtown, the festival critically depends on corporate support, in cash and kind. Efforts are underway to secure a major sponsor for the Festival. A new feature, offering humorous presentations, will be introduced in the Float Parade event. Apart from providing an outlet for individual creativity, these smaller presentations will also give a promotion opportunity to small businesses.

HOSPITALITY SERVICES TRAINING CENTRE

The John Silvers Inn in West Bay has been purchased by Government and will be developed into a Hospitality Services Training Centre.

The Ministry is working with the New England Institute of Technology to develop a programme to progress this project which will facilitate greater Caymanian involvement in the tourism industry. It is expected that the centre will focus on the vocational disciplines of the industry.

CAYMAN ISLANDS DEVELOPMENT BANK

The main thrust in the first quarter of 2004/05 will be to raise new funds in order to meet the growing demand for development financing. The CIDB is expected to finalise new funding arrangements for on lending to its target sectors.

While the CIDB will continue to offer development financing for projects in the housing sector and for human resource development, it will concentrate primarily on the advancement of the small business sector by offering creative and relevant financial products as well as actively promoting the spirit of entrepreneurship within the community.

CAYMAN ISLANDS INVESTMENT BUREAU

In the new world economy, the importance of cooperation and partnerships with other organisations is becoming paramount to the success of inward investment. The Investment Bureau will continue to set policies and implement programmes that will enhance Cayman's comparative economic advantages as a domicile for business. Included in the Bureau's promotional strategy will be the launch of a website, the production of new collateral materials and a full schedule of financial marketing conferences.

A highlight of this year's programme will be the official opening of the Investment Bureau's office in Hong Kong.

DEPARTMENT OF ENVIRONMENT

In 2004-2005, the Department of Environment will continue to assist the Ministry in the development and implementation of policies and legislation that afford protection to the environment. Among other initiatives, in collaboration with the National Trust, the Department will compile existing and new information on native flora to generate a comprehensive "red list" for those species in need of urgent conservation planning.

The Department will continue to assist the Ministry of Environment with the acquisition of land and implementation of plans for the proposed Barkers National Park.

PORT AUTHORITY OF THE CAYMAN ISLANDS

The successful implementation of new mandatory International Security Procedures by 1 July 2004 has recently dominated the attention of the Port Authority of the Cayman Islands.

The capital development work on the Royal Watler Cruise Terminal will continue this year with the marine works scheduled for completion in October 2004 and the upland works in December 2004.

The land acquisition for the West Bay Cruise facility has commenced and it is expected that ground breaking will take place in August 2004.

VEHICLE LICENSING AND TRANSPORT UNIT

Government has acquired property in Bodden Town next to the Civic Centre and intends to establish a sub-unit on this site to further decentralise its services to the Eastern Districts.

The Unit's plan for 2004/2005 includes the further development and strengthening of the Traffic Law and related legislation. This includes legislation for people who are physically challenged and enforcement in relation to their designated parking spaces.

The unit will also play a central role in the development of plans for public transportation in line with Vision 2008 and the more recently adopted National Tourism Management Policy.

CAYMAN ISLANDS FIRE SERVICES

In order to maintain the level of competence and efficiency required to meet international obligations, particularly with respect to the Airport Rescue and Firefighting section, nine officers will attend special courses for certification and re-certification at a recognised institution during the 2004-05 financial year.

An order has been placed for a new airport crash tender for Grand Cayman, to be delivered in mid 2004. This vehicle will upgrade the level of fire protection and ensure compliance with the International Civil Aviation Organisation's Requirements due to come into effect on 1st January 2005.

The Department is also pursuing the purchase of a new 135 ft ladder truck to cater for the higher-rise buildings now being constructed. Plans are in place for a new fire station in Cayman Brac to enhance existing fire services on that Island.

A Liquefied Petroleum Gas (LPG) bulk storage facility has been installed by Home Gas Ltd in Cayman Brac. The department is pleased that the proprietors are working in tandem with the department to ensure that the installation of the facility complies with all aspects of the adopted National Fire Protection Association Standards. There is also an ongoing programme between Home Gas Ltd. and the department to identify and upgrade premises not in compliance, including small private dwellings, with the growing problem of the improper use and storage of small LPG cylinders.

CRISIS READINESS

We are all aware of the growing number of world crises. Our economy and reputation in the global community, and our relationships with key stakeholders are directly impacted by these events and how we prepare to respond to them.

The new reality of risk requires a new standard of leadership on our part. We must bring to these challenges a vision; a new approach and shared commitment that will raise the bar of excellence for government as well as businesses.

Building on our long established hurricane preparedness procedures, the Government will this year inaugurate "a Cayman Islands Crisis Readiness Programme." This will enable public and private organizations to better prevent, prepare for, respond to and recover from all kinds of potential threats including:

- Financial services threats (e.g. imposed external legislation or international accounting scandals)
- Industrial accidents (e.g. oil spills)
- Technology failures (e.g. damaging power outage)
- Public health threats (e.g. SARS)
- Terrorism (e.g. bombings)

The Government is considering entering into an agreement with the Marsh McLennan group of companies who will work closely with the Cayman Islands' government and business community to develop and implement this programme.

MINISTRY OF HEALTH SERVICES, AGRICULTURE, AVIATION AND WORKS

During the 2004-05 Budget period, the Ministry of Health Services, Agriculture, Aviation and Works will continue to enhance its strategic policy advice capability. Steps will be taken to refine internal processes to ensure the Ministry is able to effectively meet its goals and manage any necessary changes.

HEALTH

The Strategic Plan for Health that was successfully developed along with action plans during this past year will be implemented by partners within the health service industry. Maintaining rates of preventable diseases within the World Health Organisation standards will remain a priority. Focus will be on coordinating health promotion activities to emphasise the positive aspects of life-style that can reduce or prevent, for example, the onset of cardiovascular disease, diabetes, hypertension and some forms of cancer. The National Strategic Plan for HIV/AIDS will be incorporated into the National Health Plan.

HEALTH INSURANCE COMMISSION

The establishment of an office and the appointment of two inspectors along with the recent amendments to the Health Insurance Law and Regulations, enable the Health Insurance Commission to carry out its remit of monitoring and regulating the inurance industry. A comprehensive public education programme will be undertaken.

HEALTH SERVICES AUTHORITY

The following three key strategic goals and objectives for the 2004/5 financial year are part of the Strategic Plan, which has been developed for the Health Services Authority:

- Ensure the provision of patient-focused care that complies with internationally accepted standards;
- Improve the cost effectiveness of the Health Services Authority and the services it provides;
- Create a stable, motivated and empowered workforce.

The recent opening of our Women's Health Centre (the first in the region) and a purpose built In-patient Mental Health facility allows for enhanced services to these priority groups of customers. The services on Cayman Brac and Little Cayman have been enhanced by the recent recruitment of a full time Surgeon and Obstetrician/Gynaecologist. The Little Cayman Health Centre, which has recently been relocated to a new site will also be offering expanded Medical and Dental services.

A significant accomplishment that will assist the Authority in achieving its goals is the capturing of data, which started since the implementation of a new integrated health information system (CERNER) on 28, October 2003. The Cayman Islands National Insurance Company will also be receiving claims electronically from the Health Services Authority. In the next year reliable statistics and trends will be available.

CAYMAN ISLANDS NATIONAL INSURANCE COMPANY LTD (CINICO)

CINICO supports government's goal of ensuring all residents have access to affordable health insurance coverage. The Company (established as the most effective governance structure) manages government's healthcare liability and offers an insurance product to persons unable to afford or access coverage in the private sector.

AGRICULTURE

The Ministry and the Department of Agriculture will engage in the development of a national agricultural plan that will refocus and realign activities in keeping with recent 21st century developments.

CIVIL AVIATION AND AIRPORTS AUTHORITY

The Airports Authority Law, 2004 and the new Civil Aviation Authority Law, 2004 came into effect on 15th June 2004 effectively segregating the provision of air transport facilities and the regulation of their use. In keeping with the policy directives of the Cayman Islands Government, the construction of a new airport in Little Cayman will begin this year.

RADIO CAYMAN

It is expected that later this year, Radio Cayman will become a Statutory Authority. Work on this has already commenced.

NATIONAL ROADS AUTHORITY

The National Roads Authority Law, 2004 was passed in June. The Roads Division of the Public Works Department becomes the basic resource of the new authority. The Authority is charged with the responsibility for ensuring the effective and efficient management of all public roads including planning, design, construction and maintenance.

PUBLIC WORKS DEPARTMENT

Public Works will continue to provide project management, architectural, quality surveying and construction management services to government departments and authorities. Following the major refurbishment of the Legislative Assembly, the main capital building projects this year include the new Prospect Primary School and the completion of the refurbishment and expansion of the West Bay Post Office.

The Buildings Division of the Public Works Department is currently undertaking several other projects for 2004. These projects include the Island's first Abattoir, the Savannah Post Office, the conversion of the West Bay Town Hall to a District Library, the extension to the Savannah Primary School, hurricane upgrades to Fire Stations at Cayman Brac, Frank Sound and West Bay and finally, generator upgrades to three hurricane shelters.

MINISTRY OF EDUCATION, HUMAN RESOURCES & CULTURE

The Ministry considers Education and Human Resources to be the building blocks to mould, develop and nurture the people of the Cayman Islands. In the same vein, Culture is the central interface, the tool to inform the life choices of our people, and the mirror for self-reflection.

During the 2004/05 financial year, the Ministry will introduce key initiatives in all of its three core areas of responsibility. At the same time it will strengthen and consolidate initiatives already in hand. This reflects the commitment of the Ministry, and its various departments, sections and units, to help realise the goals of Vision 2008, and the promise of:

-a world class education system; and
-a multi-literate, productive, adaptable workforce and community, which will seize opportunities for life-long learning and demonstrate pride in self and country and "a job well done".

EDUCATION

School Improvement

In 2004, the Ministry will also build on its work in school improvement, with the establishment or continued implementation of the following key initiatives:

1. The introduction of a comprehensive and modern Education and Training Law. Drafting instructions for the new law are to be scheduled shortly, and the Ministry aims to present an Education and Training Bill to the House in September 2005.
2. The continued implementation of the ITALIC (Improving Teaching and Learning in the Cayman Islands) programme. ITALIC is designed to improve teaching and learning in primary, middle and secondary schools through enhanced use of technology in the classroom and education sector.
3. The development and introduction of a parallel phase of the ITALIC programme, ITALIC TOO. This initiative will focus on Years 11 and 12, post-secondary education and the community and will ensure continuity and progression of the work being covered through ITALIC.
4. The development of an educational strategy for technical and vocational education at secondary and post-secondary levels. This strategy will draw on the findings of the recent inspection report on technical and vocational education in government secondary schools.
5. The National Educational Leadership Programme (NELP).
6. The Development of a new School Improvement Planning model.
7. The appointment to the Education Department of a School Development Adviser in September 2004.

University College

In September 2004, the University College (formerly the Community College) will offer its first four-year degree courses, in the areas of: economics, business management, accounting and finance. This represents significant progress towards the Ministry's goal of improving access to tertiary education for the people of the Cayman Islands.

School Construction and Development

The pressure for places in government schools continues to present challenges. The Ministry is working to accommodate this demand, while ensuring that there is no compromise in the quality of education provided for our students. The Ministry will be pursuing the following capital works projects for education:

1. the delivery of the new Prospect Primary School, on time for a September 2004 start;
2. the construction of a new Primary School in West Bay to open in September 2005;
3. the start of the redevelopment of the George Town Primary School, with the first classroom block to be completed by September 2006;
4. the purchase of land and the design and other preliminary preparations for the building of a new High School, for delivery in September 2006;
5. the purchase of four temporary classrooms for John Gray High School, one for North Side Primary and one for Cayman Brac High School, for September 2004.

Cayman Islands Cadet Corps

The work of the Cadet Corps will be further strengthened by the introduction of an externally accredited course, allowing cadets to earn a vocational qualification accepted in the UK as equivalent to 4 'O' level passes.

HUMAN RESOURCES

Pensions

The review of the National Pensions Law, announced in December 2003, will result in a white paper, which will be circulated to the general public for comment.

Human Resources Development and Training and Labour

As part of the ITALIC TOO initiative, the Ministry will facilitate the development of a Human Resources Development and Training Policy.

The Department of Employment Relations plans to coordinate the production of a National Labour Market Information Plan and the establishment of a Labour Market Information Library.

Investors in People

The implementation of the Investors in People Programme (IIP), an internationally recognised management standard, was launched in 2003 with both government and private participants. In 2004 it is projected that around nine of the pilot organizations will be assessed against the standard and an additional 15 will be signed up for the pilot programme.

Technical and Vocational Education

A National Training Board will be established, as part of the new Education and Training Law, to advise the Minister on policy, accreditation arrangements, standards and other matters relating to training in the Cayman Islands.

A second TVET (Technical and Vocational Education and Training) Fair is planned for the last quarter of 2004, to highlight the career opportunities and training available.

CULTURE

Initiatives in 2004 and beyond, with culture as the primary driver, yet appropriately linked to education and human resources, include:

- continued development of the National Cultural policy framework by the Taskforce;
- the awarding of a cultural scholarship; and
- development of cultural facilities.

National Archive

Construction of an Extension to the National Archive will begin in 2004, and is scheduled to be completed by December 2005. The extension will provide secure, cost-effective storage for the nation's archives and official records, specialist facilities for government's central computer equipment and vital records, and a Reading Room where school groups, students and the public will be able to do first-hand research on the history of the Cayman Islands. The building is designed to be an emergency operations centre for senior civil servants in a post-hurricane situation.

National Museum

During 2004, the second phase of the Maritime Heritage Trail and Shipwreck Preserves will be developed.

National Gallery

Work continues to raise funds for a locally designed purpose-built facility for the National Gallery, to be located off the Harquail Bypass.

Library

With the contributions of private sector partners, the Ministry is anticipating that construction will commence in 2004 of a 3-storey extension to the George Town Public Library. This new facility will triple the usable floor space of the current library and provide modern facilities and easy access to a wide range of resources, including internet-enabled computer stations. Work will also proceed in 2004 on plans to network district libraries.

MINISTRY OF COMMUNITY SERVICES, YOUTH, SPORTS AND GENDER AFFAIRS

The Ministry's goal is a healthy population in a safe and secure country for residents and visitors, achieved through cooperation and collaboration of all departments and agencies.

The Ministry of Community Services, Youth, Sports and Gender Affairs has embraced the concept of community-based collaboratives, which are focused on comprehensive service integration to address the root causes of people's need for assistance, rehabilitation or being mandated to services or custody. The following highlights the objectives to be achieved in 2004 –2005:

Develop appropriate legislation to safeguard the rights of dependent persons, review legislation governing the Adoption Law and the Review of the Maintenance Law, and develop regulations for the Children's Law 2003.

Decentralise the Department of Children and Family Services with fully functional District Offices in George Town, West Bay and Bodden Town.

Develop and implement the National Parenting Programme to strengthen the parenting abilities, discipline methods, and responsibility of parents.

Create a National Advisory Board and provide tutors to assist with the implementation of the Commonwealth Youth Programme. This programme will train people working with youth by offering a two-year Diploma in Youth Development Work at the University of the West Indies Distance Learning Centre.

Implement changes suggested by the Parole Commissioners' Board using a collaborative approach that involves the Prison Services, Probation and Aftercare Unit, Department of Substance Abuse Services (DOSAS) and the Department of Children and Family Services (DCFS) to reform the Parole System. Create a therapeutic approach in the rehabilitation of inmates sentenced for substance abuse or drug related offences, or who have been assessed to have a substance abuse problem.

Address the comprehensive needs of youth involved in the criminal justice system by using standardised assessment tools, specially trained youth counsellors, family therapists and psychologists in order to reduce the likelihood of these troubled youths going into the prison system as adults.

Extend services of the Department of Substance Abuse, the Women's Resource and Crisis

Centres and Probation and Aftercare services to Cayman Brac.

Assist the National Housing & Community Development Trust in providing Affordable Housing to qualified applicants.

Investigate appropriate housing or group homes to enhance clients' transitioning from the treatment process or support systems.

Implement a Public Education Programme on the initiatives and projects of the Ministry to gain better understanding and cooperation of the community.

Continue with programmes such as Super Saturday, monthly town hall meetings, the Youth Flex radio show and the Commonwealth Youth Club's Ambassador Programme to empower young people and allow their voices to be heard.

Continue sports coaching in local communities and schools recreationally and within the sports associations for the training of national athletes to represent the country.

Organise a National Sports Award Ceremony and a Regional Sports Ministers Conference.

Continue extending the water distribution system throughout the eastern districts in Grand Cayman.

Review the feasibility of extending the piped water supply in Cayman Brac.

Complete the new wastewater treatment plant project.

MINISTRY OF PLANNING, COMMUNICATIONS, DISTRICT ADMINISTRATION & INFORMATION TECHNOLOGY

The Ministry of Planning, Communications, District Administration and Information Technology expects a very challenging year ahead in 2004-2005. The Ministry's main focus will be on fostering the continued liberalization of the telecommunications market, the granting of a new non-exclusive licence to Caribbean Utilities Company Ltd and providing a legislative framework to allow for future competition in the electricity sector. The aim in both telecom and electricity sectors is to reduce rates for the public while maintaining a healthy and viable competitive environment.

Another key area for the Ministry will be furthering the provision of Government office accommodations. The current situation is most unsatisfactory and the Ministry will continue to actively pursue various options to find the most satisfactory and economical solution or combination of solutions to this pressing issue.

CAYMAN BRAC POWER & LIGHT

Following the signing by Government and Cayman Brac Power & Light of a non-exclusive licence for electricity supplies in the Sister Islands, which caps prices over the next 15 years (save for direct fuel price increases), the Ministry continues to work with the company for the relocation of the facility on the Bluff, to provide for increased safety from storms and hurricanes.

CARIBBEAN UTILITIES COMPANY LTD.

Government and CUC continue to work in earnest on reducing electricity rates on Grand Cayman and to introduce future competitive bidding in new generation capacity. It was recently announced that a Heads of Agreement on the way forward had been reached. A final agreement is hoped within a short period of time.

TELECOMMUNICATIONS

The Office of Telecommunications is embarking on several new technology projects in 2004/5 that will enable agencies, especially the emergency services, to take advantage of new and improved capabilities in the area of radio-communications.

A $1.8 million project with Motorola to upgrade the radio-communication system has just been completed. Users of the system will now benefit from enhanced signal transmission that ensures they will be able to maintain radio contact when operating inside concrete/steel buildings and other structures.

In accordance with a new Government policy that promotes the sharing of technical infrastructure, OFTEL's radio towers are being made available to private sector Information and Communications Technology (ICT) licensees. This provides Government with a new source of revenue and enables ICT licensees to launch new services more quickly, without the time and expense of erecting their own radio towers.

In the Sister Islands, the national radio-communications system is benefiting from a new tower in Little Cayman. This provides users in Little Cayman with full coverage and also provides an important back-up facility to users in Cayman Brac.

EMERGENCY 911 COMMUNICATIONS

The Department now has its own Training Officer who is a certified First Aid and CPR Instructor as well as Emergency Medical Dispatch Instructor. He is also a certified paramedic.

ENVIRONMENTAL HEALTH

The Department of Environmental Health (DEH) will continue to work towards the selection of the most appropriate solid waste collection, treatment and disposal system for Grand Cayman.

POSTAL DEPARTMENT

The Postal Department will be focusing on two main projects:

- The implementation of a postcode for the Cayman Islands; and
- the construction of a post box kiosk at the Airport Post Office.

Much development work has already taken place on the creation of a postcode -- known as a zip code in the USA -- and will continue over the next few months. The Postmaster General anticipates that a major public education campaign will be part of the implementation of the postcode, so the public will hear much more about this project in the near future.

Subject to approval of capital development funds, construction of the new Post Office in Savannah will get underway during the year. This new facility will offer 1100 more post boxes than the present Savannah Post Office, as well as a Post Shop.

To better streamline postal operations across the three Islands and in accordance with the Cayman Islands Postal Law, the postal staff in Cayman Brac and Little Cayman has been brought under the direct supervision of the Postal Services Department as of 1st July 2004.

DISTRICT ADMINISTRATION

With further upgrading of nature sites and expansion of the number of attractions, hopes are still high that late 2004 will see day visits of cruise ship passengers to Cayman Brac.

Expansion of the National Airline, Cayman Airways and introduction of Cayman Airways Express, along with Island Air, gives visitors a wider choice of access to the Sister Islands. Visitors to Little Cayman will now experience greater comfort following the recent rehabilitation of the Edward Bodden Airfield.

Economic activity continues to show promise, with the opening of several new businesses and one office complex expected to open later in the year. Liberalization and expansion of telecommunications is expected to complement other private sector and government initiatives.

Suitable land has been identified and will be purchased early in the financial year to allow for the construction of affordable homes. Land has also been identified and will be purchased in 2004 to allow the construction of a new Fire Department sub-station in the eastern district of Cayman Brac.

INFORMATION COMMUNICATION TECHNOLOGY AUTHORITY

The Information Communication Technology Authority will continue to develop the regulatory environment for telecommunications, sound and television broadcasting, all forms of radio operations including amateur radio, and the .ky Internet domain. Additional regulations will be proposed as required, following comprehensive consultation with the various stakeholders and the general public. Steps will be taken to educate consumers on the competition and consumer protection provisions of the ICTA Law, both of which are new concepts to Cayman.

The Authority is already one of the most open and transparent organizations in Cayman. All its decisions, and the reasons for them, are published on its web site, as are its consultative documents and all responses received from interested parties. The complete text of all licences issued is also available online. Over the next 12 months, the Authority plans to further enhance these facilities by making publicly available all submissions received from licensees, together with the Authority's responses.

LANDS & SURVEY

The Department's new e-business web-site caymanlandinfo.ky was launched on 17th June. The variety of products and services made available through this medium will increase during the year and it is planned to offer full credit card payment facilities online in the near future. This will be a first for a government department.

The Department recently commissioned new aerial photography of all three Islands to permit the preparation of a new set of ortho-rectified images. This data will be utilised in the production of the Second Edition of the Cayman Islands Street Atlas, which will be released early in 2005.

Global Positioning System (GPS) coverage to aid with the accurate surveying of land will be extended to the Sister Islands. Both public and private sector surveying services in the Sister Islands will thereby be greatly improved.

A new unit in the Department will take over full Facilities Management responsibilities for several large Government buildings.

COMPUTER SERVICES

The management and staff of the Computer Services Department recognise that effective and efficient Information Technology is a key ingredient in achieving a cost effective and highly productive Government.

The Department's focus continues to be on the advancement of Electronic Government or E-Government. CORIS (Cayman Online Registry Information Services), the Government's first E-Government implementation developed in partnership between General Registry and Computer Services, has been very successful. CORIS makes available online to clients, both locally and worldwide, the registries, good standing certificates and payment of services for Companies, Trusts, Partnerships, Patents and Trademarks.

CORIS has paved the way for E-Government in the Cayman Islands. But this is just the beginning. The Computer Services Department in partnership with the Customs Department are working diligently to deploy electronic declarations for major importers and customs brokers.

In order to fully embrace E-Government, the Computer Services Department will work towards the cost-effective and secure implementation of electronic payments for government services by means of online processing of credit cards, debit cards and other means of electronic transactions. This will not only improve government's cash flow, it is likely also to lower the cost associated with traditional invoice, cheque and receipting systems.

MOSQUITO RESEARCH

The Mosquito Research & Control Unit will continue the ambitious new programme of pre-emptive mosquito control begun in May 2004, by means of greatly increased applications of larvicide pellets. Designed to prevent the emergence of mosquitoes, this strategy will build on successes already achieved and will be sustained through 2004 into the 2005 mosquito season.

The Department will complete construction of a new Operations Building & Pesticide Store and commence construction of new Laboratories & Offices. The Operations Building will greatly improve workers' health and safety, as well as helping provide better services to the public. Additional laboratory space will allow scientific staff to conduct research work designed to better safeguard Cayman against the threat of mosquito-borne diseases such as West Nile Virus, Dengue Fever and Malaria.

PLANNING

The proposed amendments to the 1997 Development Plan should be tabled in this Honourable House in the near future. Once approved there will be amendments to the Planning statutes to ensure the implementation of the policies of the new Plan. Simultaneously, the 1975 Guidelines for Development Control in Cayman Brac and Little Cayman will be replaced by policies and guidelines more reflective of current events.

The Planning Department will continue to re-evaluate its business practices to ensure that they are responsive and appropriate to the needs of its customers.

The Department's other strategic objectives for 2004/2005 are:

- To finalise the Procedures Manual so that internal processes continue to meet customer expectations;
- To continue improving the Express Review procedure for houses and other routine applications to reduce the amount of time taken to review these;
- To continue staff training to equip Caymanians to assume increasing responsibilities;

- To complete Area Plans for Bodden Town and West Bay;
- To complete a Development Plan for Little Cayman and Cayman Brac; and
- To introduce a Voice Response System for the planning application and building permit computer Trak-It system, allowing contractors to request inspections over the phone and query the status of projects.

Honourable Speaker, Honourable Members of the Legislative Assembly, as I come to the close of my second Throne Speech, I wish to thank the many people who played a part in preparing it. I also thank all those who work so hard to prepare this Legislative Assembly Building for its reopening today.

My references earlier in the speech to crisis readiness are a reminder of the manifold blessings that Almighty God has bestowed on these beautiful Islands, which with His help it is our duty to protect.

As you embark on a new Session of the Legislative Assembly, a Session which will necessarily be relatively short as we prepare for elections to this House on 17 November, I pray that God will continue, during the coming months and in the longer future, to watch, preserve and prosper these Islands and all who live in them.

[The Throne Speech was laid on the Table]

DEPARTURE OF HIS EXCELLENCY THE GOVERNOR

His Excellency the Governor, preceded by the Serjeant-at-Arms and the Honourable Speaker, followed by Mrs Dinwiddy and the Aide-de-Camp depart from the Chamber

His Excellency the Governor, Mrs Dinwiddy and the Aide-de-Camp proceeded to the Speaker's Chamber

ADJOURNMENT

The Speaker: Honourable Leader of Government Business.

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: Mr. Speaker, I move the adjournment of this Honourable House until 10 am Wednesday, 7 July 2004.

The Speaker: The question is that this Honourable House do now adjourn until 10 am Wednesday 7 July 2004. All those in favour, please say Aye. Those against, No.

Ayes.

The Speaker: The Ayes have it.

At 11.44 am the House stood adjourned until 10 am Wednesday 7 July 2004.

OFFICIAL HANSARD REPORT
WEDNESDAY
7 JULY 2004
11.42 AM
Second Sitting

The Speaker: I now invite the Member for North Side to lead us in prayers.

PRAYERS

Ms. Edna M. Moyle: Let us pray.

Almighty God, from whom all wisdom and power are derived: We beseech Thee so to direct and prosper the deliberations of the Legislative Assembly now assembled, that all things may be ordered upon the best and surest foundations for the glory of Thy Name and for the safety, honour and welfare of the people of these Islands.

Bless our Sovereign Lady, Queen Elizabeth II; Philip, Duke of Edinburgh; Charles, Prince of Wales; and all the Royal Family. Give grace to all who exercise authority in our Commonwealth, that peace and happiness, truth and justice, religion and piety may be established among us. Especially we pray for the Governor of our Islands, the Speaker of the Legislative Assembly, Official Members and Ministers of Cabinet and Members of the Legislative Assembly, that we may be enabled faithfully to perform the responsible duties of our high office. All this we ask for Thy great Name's sake.

Let us say The Lord's Prayer together:

Our Father, who art in Heaven, Hallowed be Thy Name. Thy Kingdom come, Thy will be done on earth as it is in Heaven. Give us this day our daily bread, and forgive us our trespasses, as we forgive those who trespass against us. Lead us not into temptation, but deliver us from evil. For Thine is the Kingdom, the power and the glory, forever and ever. Amen.

The Lord bless us and keep us. The Lord make His face shine upon us and be gracious unto us. The Lord lift up the light of His countenance upon us and give us peace, now and always. Amen.

Proceedings resumed at 11.45 am

The Speaker: Please be seated. Proceedings are resumed.

ADMINISTRATION OF OATHS OR AFFIRMATIONS

Oath of Allegiance

(Administered by the Clerk)

By Mr. Donovan W. F. Ebanks, MBE

The Speaker: I call on Mr. Donovan W.F. Ebanks, MBE to take the oath. Please all stand.

Mr. Donovan W.F. Ebanks: I, Donovan Ebanks, do swear that I will be faithful and bear true allegiance to Her Majesty Queen Elizabeth II, Her heirs and successors according to law so help me God.

The Speaker: On behalf of this Honourable House I welcome you and ask you to take your seat as the Temporary First Official Member.

Oath of Allegiance

(Administered by the Clerk)

By Mr. Kurt DeFreitas

Mr. Kurt DeFreitas: I, Kurt DeFreitas, do swear that I will be faithful and bear true allegiance to Her Majesty Queen Elizabeth II, Her heirs and successors according to law so help me God.

The Speaker: Mr. DeFreitas, on behalf of this Honourable House I welcome you as the Temporary Second Official Member and invite you to take your seat. Please be seated.

READING BY THE HONOURABLE
SPEAKER OF MESSAGES
AND ANNOUNCEMENTS

The Speaker: I have received apologies for absence from the Honourable Leader of Government Business, the Honourable First Official Member, the Honourable Second Official Member, the Second Elected Member for West Bay and the Third Elected Member for Bodden Town.

STATEMENTS BY MEMBERS OF THE GOVERNMENT

The Speaker: I have received no notice of statements by Members of the Government.

GOVERNMENT BUSINESS

Commencement of Debate on the Address delivered by His Excellency the Governor on Friday 2 July, 2004

The Speaker: The Throne Speech is open for debate. Does any Member wish to speak? The Honourable Leader of the Opposition.

Hon. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Thank you Mr. Speaker.

"By their fruits ye shall know them."

This verse, taken from the Gospel of St. Matthew, instructs us to pay far more attention to what people actually do than to what they say they have done or what they say they are going to do.

I must confess that ever since I listened to His Excellency the Governor, Mr. Bruce Dinwiddy, deliver the Throne Speech last Friday, the Bible verse has come to me again and again as I have pondered the speech and what I, as Leader of the Opposition, should say in response.

Indeed, "By their fruits ye shall know them."

Although His Excellency delivers the Throne Speech, that really is the extent of his involvement with it. As I have always understood, the Throne Speech is supposed to be about the Government's plans for the year. It is supposed to be the policy document that puts flesh on the proposals set out in the Budget Address and its accompanying documents such as the Annual Plan and Estimates. It is supposed to explain, in some detail, how the Government is going to spend the country's money. It is supposed to demonstrate some cohesiveness between the various initiatives, projects and programmes of Government so that after hearing or reading it, one is able to see with some clarity where the Government intends to take the country and the Government's vision in the short-, medium- and long-term.

Sad to say, after hearing the speech delivered by the Governor last Friday, Mr. Speaker, we are now all in huge quandary. The question is: what is the Government's policy? Is it what is contained in this rather bland, often vague and disjointed document called the Throne Speech? Or, is it what was set out in the grand policy statement delivered by the Leader of Government Business on the occasion of the Budget Address less than two months ago?

If the answer is that the Leader of Government Business articulated Government's policy in his policy statement, then I ask this morning, Sir: what was the purpose of the Throne Speech? Was it merely to fulfil a ritual since nearly a year and a half has passed since we last had the Governor read a speech in the Honourable Assembly?

It certainly seems to me to be little more than a ritual since, as was also the case when the Budget Address was being debated; the Leader of Government Business is again off on one of his many excursions while the Throne Speech is being debated.

That aside, Mr. Speaker, we are again left to wonder (and I must use this word because it is the most appropriate one I could think of) at the schizophrenic nature of the Government. Do they have a plan or not? If so, what is it?

By this point, I believe that the country has become used to the sensationalistic nature of this United Democratic Party administration; to their seizing of every public opportunity to announce some way out, far-fetched but sweet-sounding initiative or programme designed to snatch the headlines and clutter the airwaves and create the impression that a great deal of good is being done. Therefore, given this proclivity of the Government, the most remarkable thing about the Throne Speech is that five months away from the elections the Government seems to have recognised and acknowledged that many of the promises it has made remain unfulfilled and cannot and will not be achieved during this administration.

It seems as though the Government had decided to distance itself from the Grand Policy Statement delivered by the Leader of Government Business on the occasion of the Budget Address (which was less than two months ago, as I said).

Notably absent from the Throne Speech are any of those Don Quixote-like proposals which we have become used to with this Government. Such is the huge dock situated in Half Moon Bay, with a possible inland basin of 90 acres. That area, Sir, is one of the most weather-exposed areas in Grand Cayman. We hear talk of a new airport in East End and three more five-star hotels for Grand Cayman. That is just to mention some of the more recent pronouncements by the Leader of Government Business.

Could it be that the impending elections have tamed the rhetoric and this more realistic approach was adopted deliberately so as to create as little opportunity for controversy and debate as possible? Or, is it that the Government has finally realised that it takes money to transform proposals from mere headlines to reality? Or, is it a bit of both?

Let me pause here to say to you, Mr. Speaker, that I speak to you directly, Sir. However, I do not expect any response.

When one examines previous Throne Speeches and Budget Addresses, the number of unfulfilled promises and proposals by this administration almost knocks you off your feet. In many instances, each year's Address simply moves forward the commencement or completion date of a project, plan or programme without even so much as an acknowledgement that what was stated there was, a goal for the present year was also a goal for the year before and the year before that and sometimes even the year before that.

This is so, not only in relation to proposed major capital projects—such as the proposed new Government administration complex that I hear being talked about on the marl road (I understand we are moving that to West Bay too, where there is another matter) the new facilities for the Summary Courts, the development of an alternative solid waste facility to replace the current landfill site, the implementation of a comprehensive road improvement programme, the proposal for a craft market in George Town and the construction of another High School—but also with respect to important matters such as the preparation of legislation to establish a Drug Court, amendments to the 1997 Development Plan and a revision of the public schools curricula to address the need for technical and vocational training. Mr. Speaker, the list goes on. I will give a few detailed examples.

The Government undertook to construct $13.38 million of roads in 2003/2004. This, it was stated, would include $7 million for Phase 3 of the Esterley Tibbetts Highway from the Galleria to Indies Suites. Importantly, the 2003 Throne Speech noted: “This extension is urgently needed, as growth in traffic volumes since 1998 has resulted in traffic congestion on the southern end of West Bay Road returning to the unacceptable pre-1997 levels.”

I really hope to God, Mr. Speaker, where they are talking about for the new Government administration complex is not anywhere near what that Report is speaking about.

Also planned for 2003/2004 was $800,000 worth of works to extend the Linford Pierson Highway from Bobby Thompson Way to Walkers Road.

Needless to say, as far as I can see on driving to these locations, neither of those proposals has transpired. They, again, still remain as proposals in the 2004/2005 Budget but are not even mentioned in the Throne Speech.

The First Throne Speech delivered on behalf of this Government in February 2002 by our wonderful former Governor stated, among other things, that design work on the proposed new secondary school would continue during the course of that year. That was February 2002. The 2003 Budget Address, delivered in November 2002, again made provision for design work on the new secondary school. The following Budget Address, delivered in June 2004, prophesied that the new secondary school would be completed by September 2005. The 2004 Budget Address, the latest one, now contemplates the completion of the new secondary school for delivery in September 2006, although after all these years I still do not know whether the land has been purchased. I know there have been funds in the Budget for the purchase of the land prior to this, but I do not know whether that deal has been consummated.

In the meantime, the George Hicks High School will be forced to accommodate some 1,100 students at the start of the school year this coming September; many in temporary classrooms, five of which were ordered last year. A further five temporary classrooms have also been ordered to accommodate the burgeoning school population at John Gray High School, Cayman Brac High School, and the North Side Primary School, while Bodden Town Primary School received a temporary classroom at the start of the last school year, that is, last September.

Despite assurances and reassurances given by the PS (Permanent Secretary) during the recent meeting of the Finance Committee, I am firmly of the view—and I believe all objective observers are too—that the education plant in the Cayman Islands is bursting at the seams and many of the school facilities are in need of rehabilitation and renovation. I want to give a quick example.

Because of the problems with the physical plant at the George Town Primary School, when the Prospect Primary School is finished and ready for September, Years 3 and 4 that would be going into the George Town Primary School are now going to have to be moved to the same new school. You hear about ready-made families, they have ready-made Years 3 and 4. There is no choice now and we understand and accept that this is what has to be done.

Thus, in September 2004, the George Town Primary School is going to have Years 1, 2, 5 and 6. The Prospect Primary School is going to have Years 1, 2, 3 and 4. We understand that is what obtains now and nothing can be done. However, look at what it does when you have inter-primary sports, when you have the various sporting competitions, when you have the Festival of the Arts and CayFest and such like. For quite some time, both of those schools are going to be at a huge disadvantage.

People like me are not supposed to say anything about that because everything that can be done is being done. Not only is there insufficient space, but in a number of instances the accommodations are substandard. There are schools which require science laboratories, schools which require canteens, schools which require libraries, and there are schools which, in the absence of other schools, simply need more classroom space, which is not the ideal situation either.

They can come after me and say what they wish. However, for those who did, instead of beating up on the principals who were caring and courageous enough to speak out at those recent graduations about the inadequacies and the lack of attention being given to the school system, the Government should simply put their tail between their legs and take immediate remedial action. That is what should happen.

As has been explained and pontificated upon by the Government when they are ready, every time I bring it up, it is not as though this is a new problem or a new issue. This is a problem that we have all seen coming for many years.

The current Minister of Education was on this Back Bench for 12 years, and I had eight of those years with him, fighting this same cause. We fought the former Minister (and I use the word “fought” in our language, Mr. Speaker. I mean on the Floor of the Legislative Assembly) for his mishandling of the education system and the continuous complaint about inadequate facilities and his failing to plan for the future, something which was continually levelled at the former Minister. If the now Minister was right to criticise him then, as I am certain he was, then, for whatever might be taken personally or not, I ask him how he can look in the mirror now. If I were to be fair, I believe that he wants what is best. I do not know what is stopping it.

Quite frankly, in a country which has the per capita income and the standard of living which we boast, and with a Government which is, this year, pounding their chests about an operating surplus of $45 million, the overcrowding in the government schools, the lack of amenities and the substandard nature of many of the schools are, in my view, nothing short of a national disgrace. As far as I am concerned, the Government is even more culpable than previous Governments because every one of them, except the freshmen, were in this Legislative Assembly going through those same wars, chanting the same songs about what we had to do. It is a wonder—

Hon. D. Kurt Tibbetts: When you were there, what did you do?

They better forget about my 11 months Mr. Speaker, because they have gone on for three years. Do not come at me for my 11 months, hog-tied. I will not even go into that. They have three years to talk about, so the comparison is nowhere near level. Let them keep on chiming about my 11 months and forget about the three years.

Hon. D. Kurt Tibbetts: If education was a priority with this Government, they would have taken steps last year when it was apparent that the fiscal position of the country was improving to address some of these inadequacies. I do not mean the little surface ones. I mean we would have seen meaningful steps taken to address some of the inadequacies that I have pointed out.

It is nothing new with Government and the Opposition. The Opposition is going to say what they have to say, and if they have convictions and are convinced, they will keep saying it. Of course, the Government must find itself in a position that it has to deny it. I do not expect them to agree with me, but I want them to stop the flowery words and prove me wrong. That is what they need to do.

Delusions? Never had one in my life. Cannot say the same thing for many others.

With the exception of the new Prospect Primary School by a previous administration, and which is slated to come on-stream in September of this year, nothing of consequence has been done to address the serious problems that exist as a result of overcrowding at many of the public schools. In fact, whatever we have had to face for it, I believe that if the Opposition had not constantly harassed the Minister and the Government about this, perhaps we would not see it coming this September either.

Although in the 2003/2004 Budget the Honourable Third Official Member boasted that borrowings would be restricted to $8 million over the course of the year, the Government actually borrowed some $36 million. I am not with full knowledge as to how much has been drawn down, but the Government had the authority, during that fiscal year, to draw down $36 million in loans. You know the system like I do, Mr. Speaker, where you do not draw down this year, once you have the authority you can draw it down sooner or later, right? Do not answer me, Sir.

Despite these additional loans, which are more than four times what was budgeted, the Government still has not addressed the urgent need for improvement of the school facilities in these Islands. If we look through the Annual Plan and Estimates, we will see that the vast majority of the additional $28 million has instead been allocated to other, as far as the Government is concerned, seemingly, more important matters.

Before I get to this year, Mr. Speaker, they will come back again and pump out these percentages of the entire cost of the outputs that is being spent on education. I am not denying all of that. What I speak to is not to cloud that issue of the outputs that need to be purchased, which, in the olden days, were current side of the budget. I am talking about the capital investments in the physical plant that we need and there is a huge difference in what I speak to. So do not come and cloud the issue about how much money being is spent on education. That is what has to be spent every year to keep the schools open. I am talking about the physical plant.

This year the Government has budgeted to borrow a further $37 million, but still our children—in fact, those who will be fortunate enough to be accommodated—will be forced to learn their lessons in temporary overcrowded classrooms. I have to conclude that education, pure and simple, is not high on this Government's list of priorities.

I understand that sacrifices have to be made. I know that there is not a tree that the Government can go and shake in the backyard and get any money they want, and I know that those sacrifices have to be made and that prioritisation is absolutely necessary on the part of the Government. However, I believe that this Government has it all wrong.

I pledge to the people of this country that a PPM administration, under my leadership, will make education a priority. It will make it the priority that it deserves to be and we will do whatever is necessary and possible to ensure that every child in this country is afforded a decent education with all the opportunities that can be made available in an environment that is conducive to learning. It is not the case today.

It should not be—and by the time I finish using these examples it might brush a few corns, but I am going to say them because they need to be said—that we can find the money to host receptions or parties wherever they are—in New York or anywhere else—and fly a whole entourage of people from Cayman to these events at government's expense. However, at the same time, we do not have the money to improve the science lab facilities at John Gray High School. The first month I sat in this Legislative Assembly that was talked about and that was in November 1992. It might have been early December, after the elections when we had our first meeting. I remember that distinctly, twelve years ago, and the lab is still in the same condition.

Mr. Speaker, it is unfortunate that when it gets like this we start to deal with one another. I am talking about the science lab and no man can tell me that I do not have a right to say it. If I was there and nothing was done then I would take the beat-up, but the facts are the facts. One can argue the length of tenure or anything they wish, but I just finished dealing with priorities.

Where are the priorities? How is it that we can, recently, host a jazz concert that was great entertainment for those who went? I have heard good things about it. I understand it cost hundreds of thousands of dollars, but at the same time, the Member for East End is arguing, as he has been from the time he got elected, 'Can you please give the primary school in my district a canteen?' Mr. Speaker, with the greatest of respect, I know we needed a Parliament and I know the Parliament needed renovations and it looks absolutely beautiful at this point in time, but where are our priorities? That is my question.

Mr. Speaker, as a matter of first priority, our administration will rationalise the high school system, provide the facilities for an additional high school and, lest it be forgotten, running right behind the heels of that is the desperate need to modernise the two present campuses. I have heard the Minister himself say the ideal situation is to knock down John Gray High School flat and build another one elsewhere. That means we need two and not one. You understand what I am saying, Mr. Speaker? It is not a joke anymore, it is a serious matter.

We cannot and will not accept the position of the Government that temporary classrooms are adequate for the children of this country. We will work to bring all the public schools, the primary and secondary, up to par as quickly as is physically possible.

Mr. Speaker, the neglect of the education plant is perhaps, in my view, the most patently obvious evidence of this Government's insensitivity and lack of understanding of what is truly important to the health and wellbeing of this little nation. However, I believe that it speaks to a more fundamental problem. All I can see is that this Government is made up of a group of individuals, each in pursuit of their own goals. What they speak to is just that what they speak to; there is no shared, coherent vision which guides choices and the setting of priorities.

It cannot be the case unless all that I just spoke to is a figment of my imagination, and it is not. The result is a seeming inability to see beyond the end of this political term. For all that they say about policies, and all the nice things, it does not seem to me that, as a collective group, they have a long-term plan. It does not seem to me like there is any foresight or desire to examine the impact of their decisions today on the future of this country and on the future of our people.

Sore topic, Mr. Speaker, as an example: how could the Government grant Caymanian status to just under 3,000 in the course of six or seven months and not have any understanding, whatsoever, that this would seriously impact the social and education systems of this country? However, of course, as they did from the very beginning, they twisted and turned it to try to tell these people that persons like me do not want them to have status, which is absolutely not the case. Thank God the people know better now. I will return to this issue in a little bit, but I thought it useful to cite as an example of the short-sightedness and obvious crisis-driven nature of the Government's policies and their decisions.

I contend that the Government is incapable of understanding the critical importance of education, social development, environment and population management to the overall health and wellbeing of the nation. Nor, in my view, does the Government appear to be able to see the interrelationship between these subjects and their link to the overall development and prosperity of the country.

It seems to me like the Government appears to have bought into the Leader of Government Business' philosophy, that is, we must embrace wealth indiscriminately or reap poverty inevitably. That approach seems to guide the general decision-making of the UDP Government, in particular, when it comes to setting priorities.

I am absolutely convinced that the approach to development by this Government is woefully wrong. If they are left to administer the affairs of the country after November, the result will be very serious education, social and environmental problems.

Mr. Speaker, in my contribution to the Budget Address less than two months ago, I devoted a considerable amount of time to an examination and analysis of the two most important elements of our economy: tourism and the financial industry. I made it plain then that I believed that the Government's approach to the tourism industry is unsustainable, particularly in relation to the cruise industry and that I had very serious concerns over their handling of some of the aspects of the financial industry, notably the EU Savings Directive.

I do not intend to rehearse those remarks in detail here today, but I am forced to remind the Government and, in particular, the Minister of Tourism of the folly of their ways. Tourism is barely even mentioned in the Throne Speech and then when it is mentioned, only in connection with the Tourism Attraction Board. Perhaps the Minister is basking in the fact that stay over visitor numbers have started to show a modest increase and thus he does not believe that we need to address the fundamental problems that underlie our tourism product.

In his Budget Address, Mr. Speaker, the Honourable Third Official Member went through great pains to point out that tourism is one of the pillars of our economy and that over two million tourists visited the Cayman Islands during last year. He boasted that this figure represented an increase of 12.5 per cent over 2002, but was forced to concede at that time that air arrivals had continued their downward trend during this period, falling by a further 3 per cent in 2003.

Mr. Speaker, tourism is the lifeblood of this country and of its economy. It is estimated that it contributes anything from 30 to 50 per cent to our gross domestic product, and it is also estimated that foreign exchange earnings from tourism could be as much as 70 per cent of the total. However, the tourism industry's history of continued growth and prosperity is no longer a given; not just because of international factors such as the aftermath of 9-11 but for reasons also to do with both the quality and the cost of our tourism product.

Bluntly put, the widely held perception is that Cayman is an overly expensive destination and the quality of its tourism product is declining. To a large extent, Sir, we are at the mercy of the external factors which impact that industry. There is certainly—while that is the case—much that we can do about the quality of the product we offer and also the widely held perception that the Cayman Islands are no longer as good value for money as they used to be.

My contention is that Government is simply not doing enough to address the problems with this critically important industry at their root cause. Sure, we are treated to a regular diet of press announcements about some novel initiative that is going to develop a new niche-market for the industry. However, in reality, little or nothing has been done to address the underlying problems with our tourism product. Those problems, Sir, are eating away like a cancer at the long-term viability of the industry.

In my contribution to the debate on the Budget a short while ago, I referred at length to the report of the tourism company out of London on the state of our industry. That report recognises what all sensible people in these Islands already knew: it recognises that tourism cannot be left to develop unchecked; it recognises that tourism needs to be managed in a sustainable way, that a policy framework is needed to ensure that every one involved in the industry is aware of the overall goals and the parameters and that everyone is pulling in the same direction. Mr. Speaker, we cannot say today that that is the case.

On the issue of sustainability, the report confirms what has been widely believed, that as the number of cruise ship visitors has skyrocketed, the number of stay over visitors has correspondingly diminished. The report noted the concern at the decline in the number of stay over visitors and the impact that this is having on the national economy. There is also concern that the proportion of visitors to Cayman Brac and Little Cayman remains very small at 3 to 4 per cent of the total stay over visitors, while over in those two Islands, they have approximately 7 per cent of the available bedrooms in the entire Cayman Islands.

The Report also acknowledged that the growing imbalance between the two visitor types is one of the overriding issues raised by tourism stakeholders in the Cayman Islands. Such large volumes of relatively low-spending visitors are seen as deterrent to stay over visitors, as well as cruise ship visitors themselves, seriously diminishing the quality of the experience in George Town and at the key attractions, for example, Stingray City. It is also seen as a major contributor in congestion and the reduction of the quality of life for those of us who actually live here. Importantly, the report noted that recent research suggested that while the Cayman Islands continued to enjoy a positive image, especially with regards to safety and the friendliness of our people overall, the tourism product was deteriorating.

So you see, Mr. Speaker, it tells a tale that the problems are problems which can be managed and fixed. We still have the two very important ingredients and if you lose them, you lose all – safety and the friendliness of our people.

The current image—and everything I speak here is manifested in the report itself—associated with the Cayman Islands is one of expensive living, over-development, traffic and people congestion, notably on the western end of Grand Cayman which is exacerbated by the cruise ship issue. Our image is being diluted by perceived poor service in some instances, narrow product offerings in other instances and a product that has become more a North American product than a Caymanian product.

The report sounded some warnings. It warned that the short-term strategy of increasing the number of cruise ship visitors to compensate for the loss in stay over visitors was, at best, just that – a short-term, stop-gap measure, which is likely to be temporary and which may actually compound the problem in the long-term. So it is saying we have to be extremely careful because if we get embedded in this short-term measure to fill the gap, we are going to be our own un-doing.

More importantly, Sir, in the long-term, the unconstrained growth in the number of cruise ship visitors, the report says, will strangle the tourist industry as the built and environmental infrastructure is overwhelmed by the sheer number of bodies forced upon. It is for this reason that the report recommended that the Government limit the number of cruise ship visitors to 9,200, or four ships per day. In December 2000, when the report was presented, the Port was then working to thresholds of up to 14,000 passengers per day, with projections that this would continue for the next two to three years.

In page 54 of the report it expressed alarm that the real concern is that this growth is happening without a clear understanding of the impacts or a long-term strategy for managing these visitors. It also sounds the following warning, by saying Cayman is in a position to negotiate controls as long as it remains a special destination. It will not be if that advantage is lost. The question today after all of this: where are we?

It is now plain that despite the recommendations of the report, the Government has decided that mass tourism is the way to go for the Cayman Islands. Quite frankly, Mr. Speaker, a mass tourism policy for Cayman, in my view—and I have said this before and I say it again—is nothing short of madness. It is not sustainable. It is going to further erode both the natural and built environment, it is going to significantly reduce the appeal of these Islands to affluent stay over visitors and it will negatively impact the quality of life for all of us who live here, and Sir, that includes you and me.

Mr. Speaker, it is our position, the position of the PPM, that the future of the tourism industry and, by extension, the Cayman Islands themselves, does not lie in mass tourism. We cannot allow ourselves to be fooled by what seemingly is the short-term gain. Every one of us wants to live long so we have to think long, Mr. Speaker, and I am serious about that.

The future lies in preserving, improving and marketing those natural gifts that this country has been blessed with. We all know that the Cayman Islands—between the three Islands, there is a small and finite land mass. Our unique appeal for tourism lies in our natural beauty and climate; the quality of the marine environment; our mixed way of life and our special character. We cannot hope nor should we wish to compete with major resorts on the mainland or with larger islands. Our future lies in being different and unique.

We must work on making the Cayman experience more Caymanian, less North American or simply just another Caribbean small island. We have to come to appreciate the importance of Caymanians interacting with our visitors as part of the visitors' overall impression of their holiday experience. This all comes down to pooling and equipping our Caymanians. This means that we must concentrate on getting more Caymanians into the industry, not only because it should provide good and well-paid employment to our people but because our own people are critical to the quality of the tourism product itself.

In my view, we have to make greater efforts to protect, preserve and promote our natural environment by limiting the number of persons who visit places such as Stingray City and certain other dive sites. If that environment were not so fragile it would not matter, but, Mr. Speaker, it is like other populations of shellfish and marine life in the Cayman Islands.

The reason why we have these laws that we keep coming to Parliament with and saying that we have to restrict the numbers that you take is because the numbers are not infinite. The numbers are finite and if you just indiscriminately take all that you want, pillage and rape, none of us will soon have any. It is the same principle when we speak to the natural beauty that is part and parcel of the sell job of our tourism product and we must appreciate that. We cannot look to speak to, in two years, how much money we are going to make because of the number of people you can get on your boat, and the bigger boat that you buy, the more bodies you can dump out there. What happens after that when there is nothing to go to?

That is why the people in this country cannot continue to think that while I get it I am going to get all that I can get, because nearly all of us have children and they are going to have children and how selfish can we be? We get up and speak to these big, bold things that we are going to do for this country with no thought to the long-term negative effects.

Mr. Speaker, we have to educate our people and our visitors of the importance of our environment to the overall quality of life in this nation, including the tourism industry. We have to create more open spaces and more greenery in the urban areas. For example—and others have spoken to this—there are some people who are convinced that it is reasonable and sensible to think this way. It might well be that the best thing is to convert George Town into a friendlier shopping environment. We have spoken about different things and a few things have been tried, but I think that if we stayed with it long enough we can make it come alive at night. I am not talking about ten more nightclubs; that is not what I mean. I mean, come alive at night with wholesome family distractions and attractions.

We have to manage the industry, not allow it to manage us. We must control development. Each time we utter that we must control development, somebody takes and twists it and says that we do not want anything to happen in the country. Nothing can be further from the truth. However, the sooner we accept this—and they can say what they wish to say, but I have lived in this land long enough to know that I am telling the truth. If we simply cater to the indiscriminate huge developers, the moment it goes sour they are gone with what they made off of us and not only have we lost them but we lost what we did not get out of it.

So the marriage must be equal. Nobody intends for them not to get healthy returns on their investment, but we must allow that type of development to take place in an atmosphere that is conducive and our people reap as much of the benefit as anyone else. It can be done quite easily because somebody else is doing it now.

Cayman will never be a low-cost destination, nor should we strive for it to be, but what we have to do is provide good value for the money spent. We have to, therefore, improve the quality of the tourism product, excel in the performance and service, and we have to rid ourselves of the prevailing image of being overpriced.

So, Mr. Speaker, as we move on I would like to say that I am fully aware of the critical importance of a strong economy. What I referred to earlier on about my 11 months there, I was there when the horrific events of September 11th 2001 occurred, and I know firsthand the impact that they had on our economy. I was also the Leader of Government Business when the decision was taken—and you will remember this—in the aftermath of 9-11 to reduce the stamp duty and building permit fees to encourage land sales and construction to boost the economy.

So I can easily and truthfully say that I am capitalistic in my outlook. I have been working for myself the greater part of my adult life and I am now 50. So, no one need fear otherwise, about me or the Opposition, nothing like that. A buoyant and sustainable economy is of critical importance. It is the utopia that we must seek.

We only have to look around at other countries in the region to see that a floundering economy prevents effective solutions to social problems. We know that, in fact, a floundering economy creates and aggravates social and political problems. Without a healthy and vibrant economy, people are unemployed and social woes simply increase. Without that same healthy and vibrant economy, Government's revenue is greatly reduced and Government's ability to intervene and provide needed social programmes and support is severely hamstrung. If Government tries to make up the deficit by increasing fees and taxes, that makes our industries less competitive and so the vicious cycle continues to be created.

I know that we must take care of business, encourage sound investment and development to stimulate our economy and keep it robust. However, I also believe that we must seek to develop this country in a way that is sustainable in the long-term; that improves the lot of our own people not just in the short-term; that gives them the best opportunities possible to participate in the wealth that is being created; and that helps our social problems, or at least it does not make them any worse.

Our people can only truly and earnestly benefit from development in this country if they are equipped with the skills to take advantage of the opportunities which development presents. The reality is that too few of our people currently have the skills, resources and education to properly avail themselves of the employment and entrepreneurial opportunities which this market offers.

The Speaker: Honourable Member if this is a convenient time for you to take the break; we will take the luncheon break at this time to resume at 2.30 pm.

Proceedings suspended at 12.50 pm

Proceedings resumed at 2.40 pm

The Speaker: Please be seated. Proceedings are resumed. The Honourable Leader of the Opposition continuing with his debate.

Hon. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. When we took the luncheon break I was going on to say that our people can only truly and earnestly benefit from development in this country if they are equipped with the skills to take advantage of the opportunities which development presents. The reality is that too few of our people currently have the skills—

The Speaker: Honourable Member, if you could give me one minute, please.

[Pause]

The Speaker: Thank you so much. Please continue, Honourable Leader of the Opposition.

Hon. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Thank you. Mr. Speaker, I was saying our people can only truly and earnestly benefit from development in this country if they are equipped with the skills to take advantage of the opportunities which development presents. The reality is that too few of our people currently have the skills, the education and the resources to properly avail themselves of the employment and entrepreneurial opportunities which this market offers. For that, I believe government must bear the responsibility, not just this Government but certainly including this Government for, in my view, they have done very little to improve the skill sets of those of our people who are already in the workforce or to present more and better opportunities for our youngsters who are still within the education system.

The reality of our Caymanian society is that we are producing a significant number of professionals each year, Mr. Speaker, and for that, all of us are very happy and proud. In fact, I am willing to wager that the numbers are well above what one would expect from such a relatively small population base. The number of Caymanian doctors, lawyers and accountants, in particular, is impressive by any standard. However, I maintain that where we are failing, and where we have been failing for perhaps more than a generation, is in producing artisans, technicians, mechanics, plumbers, carpenters, masons, tradesmen and the like.

If we try to be objective, step out of the box, there are perhaps a number of reasons for this phenomenon, including, very likely, a cultural bias against doing those types of jobs. I believe that this bias derives, in large part, from the lack of attention and value given to the trades and vocations by the educational system that has obtained in the Cayman Islands for all of these years. Academic achievement is the standard by which just about everyone is judged, and thus the trades and vocations are not looked upon as favourable by the establishment; by parents or by many of the students.

So, in this regard, I believe that Government must lead the way in dispelling the stigma attached to these technical and vocational options and careers that the students have. I believe it must do so by actively promoting the trades and the vocations, and I want to hasten to add that simply hosting a trade fair annually is not sufficient. Mr. Speaker, technical and vocational training must form key components of a high school curriculum in this country. They must be made available to as many students as are so inclined.

Mr. Speaker, to interject here, I do not profess to be an educator; neither do I speak because I wish to be the Minister of Education. However, there are some matters which pure logic stare you straight in the face with, regardless of your individual abilities or qualifications. The reality is that two-thirds of the students who graduate from high school will not have the academic qualifications to pursue the professions. Many of those two-thirds, if not the majority of them, would be better suited to technical and vocational careers and should be given every opportunity, encouragement and, indeed, inducement to do so.

I am aware that some courses are offered in the government high schools, but I am of the view that both the number of courses and the number of spaces within the classes are far too limited to satisfy the numbers that I speak to.

Further, Mr. Speaker, I also hold the view that the availability of technical and vocational training outside the high school should be improved and promoted. I must confess that while I welcome the evolution of the Community College into a university college which will offer four-year courses, I am also concerned that this might well result in further reduction in technical or vocational courses. I do not know that.

Some three years ago the Government announced that it had purchased the former John Silvers Hotel to be used as a hotel training school. Quite what has become of the idea I really do not know, but certainly the government now owns the property. It is an initiative that must be pursued and with vigour. Mr. Speaker, I say today, this Government has not done near enough, nor is it at present proposing to do near enough, to equip the local population, and particularly our young people, to share in the opportunities which the Cayman economy presents.

When are we finally going to realise that we should be developing and training our own people to take advantage of the lucrative technical and professional careers that people come from all ends of the earth to pursue? How is it that when the economy of these Islands was at the bottom of the trough following the 9-11 sequence of events and hundreds of Caymanians were unemployed—the records will bear me out—there were still in excess of 12,000 work permits at that time? When is it that the penny is going to drop that the principle reason for this was that these Caymanians who were unemployed were not skilled while those persons who retained their employments on those work permits were tooled?

The Ritz-Carlton has been under construction for, I think, perhaps two years. In his policy statement just after the Budget Address by the Honourable Third Official Member, the Leader of Government Business spoke about three more five-star hotels being proposed. Sounds wonderful but I ask, Mr. Speaker, what is the point in us—and some of us always like to refer to nation building—building the nation, more and more hotels if we have to import labour not just to build them but to man them once they are built? Not because we do not have a sufficient level of people to do the jobs; that is another matter, but because our people are not equipped with the skills to do the jobs.

So, you see, Mr. Speaker, we ask the question: are we truly benefiting our people the way we should when we present that scenario? If the majority of our people have such opportunities, take advantage of them, find their own niche and exercise their potential in a manner that sets them certain standards of living because they are dealing with optimising their aptitude and their abilities, then when you have to import labour—and I have to stop to explain this a second—no one has a problem. We say these same things year in, year out, and we hear all kinds of things that are being done. Why is it the same thing year in, year out, if everything is being done to solve the problem?

If we continue to do this, I liken it to a tub of water and we have just all that the tub can hold and we keep putting into that tub of water other stuff. Sooner or later that other stuff is going to displace the water and it is going to spill over and continue to do so as much as you put more stuff in it. We displace our own people because they do not have the skills and because the way the world is today, the demands are such that these skills are required because private sector and the public sector are involved in a world that is totally competitive. So when we create this wonderful economy and the majority of individuals who we call our own continue to be displaced, and they keep getting to the bottom of the ladder all the time and they keep multiplying, and we have heard this and I have said this in a thousand different ways, what kind of society are we creating for tomorrow?

Everyone will not like the scenario because it does not paint the pretty picture of all the different interventions and actions that are being taken to work, but there are some basics that we cannot hide. You cannot hide those fundamental issues and continue to say that all of these steps we are taking are going to deal with the issue when they are only remedial. They are only patchwork because you have not gotten to understand and you are not going to solve it overnight. However, the longer we continue doing it the same way we do it, the more those people are going to multiply and there is no denying this.

Perhaps there are those who will say that this is all I can talk about. However, the fundamental reason I place so much emphasis on this—and I do not profess to have all the answers—is because I truly believe that living in this society—and I do not live at the top end—I know what is going on because I talk to people, I live with people and I clearly understand the problems these people have. We cannot solve them by fixing them up for a day or helping them to pay a light bill. That is all well and good, right there and then, but there are reasons why they continue to get into those problems and we have to look into those reasons.

While I have to live it and I am not afraid to talk about it publicly, I do not enjoy the thought of keeping a nation just with the dribbles so that I can be seen to be God. That is absolutely nonsensical to think. However, I raise the point because today I wonder if there are any among us who might think otherwise. I referred earlier to the lack of any shared vision or coherent plan on the part of the Government. This is clearly a dangerous and expensive way to administer the country.

I will speak briefly to handling of the so-called Affordable Housing Scheme. I say here today, because I have read all the speeches and I have listened to all the logic, if this initiative had been properly thought through and administered, I believe that much greater benefit would have accrued to the various communities and the project would now have the full support and confidence of the country.

This project is expected to cost the country $29 million, plus the other government subsidies which are not included in those borrowings. I do not know what all of these subsidies are. I presume some of them are the cost and value of the land that they are built on and perhaps material being allowed to come in with the duty waived and I do not know what else. However, this project, which is US$29 million plus those other costs, is being built by a foreign contractor, principally with foreign labour of materials which are—the only word I can use—alien to Cayman and which cause doubt to be cast on the quality of the finished product.

I have said from the outset—and we hear all kind of names being called and we must get beyond these things Mr. Speaker—that the local contractors ought to have been given the opportunity to bid on the project. If this had been done and they were given the same playing field, if they could not be competitive then no one could come and say a single word. However, it seems inconceivable to me that a project involving the construction of 400 individual homes, no matter their size, would not have been sufficiently attractive to local contractors that they would not be falling over themselves to bid for the job or to jointly bid for the job as has been done on many occasions before with sizeable jobs. No matter what is said when I sit down, the reality is and the fact is, the local contractors were never given the opportunity to bid for the job, no matter who the contractors were.

The Minister has said that the Affordable Housing scheme is not about providing jobs for Caymanians, it is about providing homes for Caymanians. I say, sure it has to be about providing homes for Caymanians, but if in the same breath you could provide jobs for Caymanians and it does not cost anymore, why not?

This attitude and this approach is what I speak about when I refer to the individualistic nature of the Government and the lack of any coherent plan or any shared vision. Here we have a perfect opportunity to have Caymanian contractors and workers benefiting from a long-term project that will produce affordable homes for other Caymanians. Yet, the job is given to a foreign company which principally employs foreigners. I might add somebody would have to prove it to me that the money these people are making off this project is stuck here in Cayman.

The Minister, in his statement on the Affordable Housing Initiative on 20 May 2004, when he referred to the cost of the project, said that the total cost of the homes, excluding government subsidies—we are not 100 per cent sure exactly what they are, but I am certain this would refer to any waiving of duty on materials and the value of land—is estimated at a certain cost. He referred to the residential units and the total, not when he was referring to the entire project but to a certain section. He says that the total habitable area of Phase 1 of the initiative is so many square feet. Given the cost, it equates to construction costs of CI$50.11 per square foot. “Private-sector-for-profit residential development construction costs for equivalent finished specifications would, at this time, be unlikely to be less than CI $75.00 per square foot.”

He can say “unlikely” and that is not an unfair comment, but he would have been a lot better off if he could have said that everyone had been given an opportunity and this route was taken because it was more cost-effective.

However, Mr. Speaker, when he refers in his statement to the likely cost being $75 per square foot, surely he could not be including if local contractors were allowed to import the materials duty free because that would be a noticeable percentage of the total cost of construction and surely that cannot be apples and apples.

As I said, the Minister noted in his recent statement that “Private-sector-for-profit residential development construction costs for equivalent finished specifications..." where he speaks to equivalent, if orthodox methods and standard materials were being used by Caymanian contractors, it would have been better than the equivalent because the walls would have been thicker, for one "... would, at this time, be unlikely to be less than CI $75.00 per square foot."

You see, Mr. Speaker, the Minister's statement is speculation, and he kind of admits that, because he has not tested the market to determine what the local contractors could or would build 200 or 400 standardised two- or three-bedroom houses for. He has not determined what the per-square-foot cost would be if local contractors were able to import all of their materials duty free as the now contractor has been able to do on the project. He could keep getting up and talking about how we are telling people not to buy the house and all that. It has nothing to do with that. It has simply to do with what is a fact.

The Minister is not comparing apples with apples because there is no doubt in my mind that if local contractors were asked to build these homes or to bid to build these homes, they would be built of concrete and steel with shingle roofs. There would be no concern either about the safety or the durability of the homes or their aesthetics.

However, I say that because of the irrational and individualistic approach of the Minister and his Government, today the project is embroiled in controversy which he says I created. As I speak, not one of the homes is occupied. I do not know how much money has been expended thus far. I think Finance Committee recently approved a bridging finance of over US$11 million which equates to just over CI$8 million.

I say today that a People's Progressive Movement (PPM) administration would never pursue such a course of action. We fully support the concept of affordable homes for the people of these Islands. They must be homes that our people can be proud of and feel safe in. As far as is physically possible, unless proven otherwise, I say they ought to be built by Caymanian contractors, local contractors. If Government is going to have to subsidise the construction of homes for our people, our own contractors should be the ones to benefit, not some other contractor that we knew nothing about until we saw something in the paper with a contract being signed.

I have spoken earlier, Mr. Speaker, about the lack of vision, the short sightedness and the individualistic nature of the Government. Nowhere is that more apparent than in the handling of the immigration issue. I move on. Mr. Speaker, the People's Progressive Movement and I have had all manner of evil said about us because of our opposition to the way the Government treated this very sensitive issue, and we spoke what we had to say publicly. However, you see them over on that other side of the fence, Mr. Speaker. I am here to tell them that there are some of them who have personally said some things behind the scenes that if I were to play them a tape recorder they would run in some corner and hide. They stand up and tell me that I must not say anything and I must not do this. Mr. Speaker, never again! This boy has learned his lesson.

The Government claimed we were anti-foreigner and prejudiced, but for those who wish to conveniently forget, both my colleague and I in George Town campaigned on a platform for immigration reform. We were of the view that the situation which had obtained for many years in this country, whereby hundreds and, perhaps, thousands of persons were permitted to remain here for extended periods of time but were denied security of tenure, had to be addressed. However, at the same time, we were very conscious of the legitimate concerns of Caymanians about becoming outnumbered in their own country.

As Leader of Government Business, I appointed the Immigration Review Team (IRT) which was charged with responsibility to review the existing immigration legislation and circumstances and produce recommendations for a new immigration policy and a new immigration law. The IRT did its work and, indeed, the first interim report which set out the framework for the new immigration policy and law was tabled in Executive Council shortly before I was ousted. The plan was that their reports would be considered by Executive Council, as it then was, and if accepted in whole or in part, these would form the basis for the new immigration legislation.

So, against this background and in the absence of the proposed new legislation, when I was asked by the now Leader of Government Business to participate in the process of circumventing the Immigration Board and to nominate persons to be granted status by Cabinet I declined, more so, because we were asked to decide out of all the people in George Town to give the Minister a list of 30 people. The PPM strongly protested the course that the Government was taking with this issue, and indeed we brought a censure Motion to this Honourable House against the Government which, predictably, failed. However, many people felt that we ought to have done more. I am not quite sure what else we could have done at the time, but many people were so outraged and angry at the Government that they felt there must be something we could do.

On the other hand, some recipients of the grants by Cabinet were understandably upset and concerned that we were opposed to the Government granting them status. Mr. Speaker, despite the fact that to us it was a seemingly no-win situation, whichever way you went, we stuck to our guns because we believed that we were dealing with the situation in the proper and right manner. We warned the Government that the action they were taking was irresponsible and would create many more problems than it solved, particularly in the social and educational arenas.

We were particularly concerned that the worthy recipients of those grants—that is, those persons who would have obtained status through the Board in any event, just perhaps taking a little longer period of time—were not prejudiced as a result of these actions. We refused to participate in the legal action brought against the Government to revoke the grants because we believed, as we still do, that the worthy recipients ought not to have their lives put in jeopardy because of the actions of the Government.

Our position, Mr. Speaker, remains the same on this issue today. However, just as we predicted, adverse social consequences are manifesting themselves as a result of the sheer number of persons who were granted status in such a short period of time.

A factor, which the Government failed to address was the reality that many of the recipients of Caymanian status had children and have children, and under the new immigration legislation, once those children become legally and ordinarily resident, they become entitled to Caymanian status as well.

Further, and perhaps more importantly, in the short-term it cannot be right to prevent a Caymanian parent or parents from having their non-Caymanian minor child come and live with them. These children ought to attend school but many of them so far have been prevented from doing so because they are not entitled to a student visa under the new immigration law. Conveniently, the new law only allows for a student visa to be granted to an individual who is 18 years or older, which means it is designed for someone who is seeking to attend a tertiary institution.

Despite being aware of this difficulty created by the new legislation, the Government has thus far not remedied the matter because it is one that is very difficult and it is also one that none of us really knows the true numbers we are dealing with. So now we have minor children in the Cayman Islands whose parents are Caymanian who are not allowed to attend school. So what is the Government going to do? They have little or no room in the schools. Are they going to continue to prevent minor children of Caymanian parents from residing in the Cayman Islands and thus continue to separate Caymanian parents from their non-Caymanian children? What about the human rights issue? We will see how that situation unfolds and manifests itself.

Mr. Speaker, there is another issue which I wish to address: Not very long ago the new Employment Bill was passed in the Legislative Assembly after a number of Committee stage amendments. The most talked about point during the debate was the question of how many hours constituted the work week and at what stage would employees have to be paid overtime.

At that time I raised the concern of the possibility of employees being negatively affected if employers opted to reduce the number of working hours in certain sectors. We moved from a proposed maximum number of 40 hours per week to the point where the work week is 40 hours, but employers and employees can mutually agree for employees to work up to 45 hours per week without being paid overtime.

The Director of Labour informed us that the new legislation would impact some 12 types of businesses negatively, and after gathering some data we saw that a number of employees could stand to lose an average of approximately $150 per month, based on the number of hours per week they were working at the time if those hours were cut to 45. The director was charged to meet with samplings of these 12 types of businesses to ensure that this would not have the possible negative impacts that were thought of at the time.

Mr. Speaker, I personally followed up on this afterwards and I spoke to the director on two occasions. Seemingly, at that time, the situation was stable. However, since that time I personally have received numerous complaints from both employees and employers, and I can honestly say as I stand here today that I do not believe that the plan is working out as had been hoped. I also believe that many people are being negatively impacted by it.

We well understood at the time the reasons given, such as some employees being exploited, but if the end result is that hundreds, and not impossible perhaps thousands, of people earning just about $1,500 per month are going to be earning $150 less on a monthly basis then, in an attempt to solve one problem I believe we have created a bigger one. I say “we” because the Opposition supported the Bill, but at the time we did raise the concern.

In his winding up on the Bill, the Honourable Minister heard the concern and assured us that nothing was cast in stone and that he would be monitoring the situation closely. I wish to say clearly now that I believe we need to reassess the situation. The new law will soon be coming into effect and already—and I do not make these stories up—I have had many, many people coming, almost crying and hearing all kinds of stories about the fallout. We need to look at it very carefully.

Mr. Speaker, I do not know about the Government, but I know the Opposition does not want to be responsible for such a state of affairs in the work force. So that one is not one that we are taking the Government on to task about anything, but it certainly warrants being looked at much more carefully to make sure that the situation is not as I feared.

On a separate note, the matter which I am about to speak to has been raised before but now that the Public Management and Finance Law is almost in full effect it bears even more relevance. I speak to the matter of the awarding of contracts.

As it stands now, we have the Central Tenders Committee, which deals with the business of awarding government contracts beyond certain limits, and there are established guidelines which cover the process. The legislation applies to core government. However, statutory authorities and government owned agencies and companies each have their own individual set of rules, not all of them with proper checks and balances to ensure the transparency and accountability which needs to be displayed.

The current state of affairs not only permits government-owned companies and statutory authorities to opt out of the tendering process but is also susceptible to abuse, as was recently the case when the contract for excavation and filling the sites for the affordable housing scheme was awarded.

The Public Management and Finance Law calls for annual reporting during the budget process of all government entities as a part of government accounts. On top of this, we have just appointed a Complaints Commissioner and that office will be up and running very shortly, as I understand it.

We have to now regularise the tendering process for Central Government and all government entities and departments. The process must be one which can withstand any scrutiny and it must not be one which leaves any doubt about its integrity.

I just mentioned the appointment of the Complaints Commissioner. I really wonder how His Excellency the Governor and the Government expect that office to function properly without freedom of information legislation being put in place. Surely, we cannot expect the Complaints Commissioner to use his own judgment all the time to decide what information should or should not be made available to the public. While we know that this will not be his only function, it will certainly form an integral part of his duties.

When the former Governor announced his intention to appoint someone to this post, a post which we all know is enshrined in our present Constitution, I personally reminded him of the need for the freedom of information legislation to be in place if such an office were to run smoothly and efficiently.

The Speaker: Honourable Member, you have ten minutes remaining.

Hon. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Since then the Leader of Government Business has promised that too, but like most other things, it is not in sight yet. Still off to the horizon like so many other stacked-up sunsets.

Mr. Speaker, the HSA will have to deserve some special mention because it is difficult to conceive of any government entity or agency whose staff and clients have been so traumatised and pulled from pillar to post. In the two years since the HSA was created, the provision of Health Services in this country, in my view, Mr. Speaker, from the complaints that I keep getting, has declined, not because of the quality of efforts of the staff but because of a certain level of poor management and cost cutting exercises conducted so as to make the hospital operate as a business.

We have had three CEOs before they finally realised that the kind of expertise we needed had always been on staff, willing and able to do the job. One of the former CEOs, Mr. Michael Elliott, I think his name is (I never did get to know the gentleman), apparently was paid so much money that even now the Honourable Minister appears to be a little bit embarrassed to reveal the sum.

Now that the HSA is being run by three able, committed, long-serving Caymanian women, it is to be hoped that it will emerge from the mire in which it has been placed as a result of obvious previous mismanagement. I do hope that they will be given the support that is necessary by the HSA board and that the board, or at least some members of the board, will desist from interfering in the day-to-day management of the hospital, as I have been advised that they have done in the past.

Mr. Speaker, in the Throne Speech, His Excellency the Governor noted that it is in the joint interest of the UK and the Cayman Islands to continue to work for constitutional reform even if there are different perceptions about how far it should go. He expressed the hope that opportunity will be taken during the forthcoming election campaign to take forward debate in Cayman on this and to ascertain more clearly what proposals the electorate would like the new Government to make to London next year.

We, Sir, have been intimately involved with the constitutional reform process from the very beginning. We have fought tooth and nail to ensure that constitutional changes were not made without support of a vast majority of the electorate. We were determined to ensure that what we regarded as the undemocratic appointment of a chief minister did not occur without the benefit of a general election.

We have always been very cognisant, Sir, that none of us who were elected in 2000 were elected on any mandate which called for major constitutional change. Yes, I certainly acknowledged during the campaign the fact that constitutional modernisation was being proposed by the UK. However, the precise nature and extent of such modernisation was not discussed, as far as I am aware, by any successful candidate in the last elections. For that reason, Mr. Speaker, the PPM has maintained that any changes to our Constitution should have the support of the majority of the population.

Indeed, this position is entirely consistent with the constitutional modernisation checklist which the UK issued at the very start of the review process. That is why we call for a referendum to determine, what is considered to be, the contentious issues arising from the Commissioner's report. That is still our position.

The changes which are to be made to the Cayman Islands Constitution must have the support of the majority of the electorate. I acknowledge that the parameters of the debate on this subject have altered significantly since the process began. This is due, in large part, to the revelations in relation to the Euro Bank trial and the conduct of the then Attorney General, Mr. David Ballantyne, and the former head of the FRU, Mr. Brian Gibbs.

Subsequent events such as the refusal of the UK to allow the Cayman courts to be responsible for making wire tapping orders, and the UK's insistence that the Governor be given that power, has also significantly altered the attitude of many people in Cayman towards the mother country. The UK's treatment of these Islands in the context of the many super-national initiatives, but in particular, the EU Savings Directive, has also caused many of our people to re-consider our constitutional status.

Against this background, Mr. Speaker, the visit last year of Ambassador Earl Huntley, who was the then chairman of the UN Committee of 24 on decolonisation, was certainly timely and appropriate. As a result of Mr. Huntley's presentations, it has become clear that the UK has an international obligation to provide its territories with the degree of self-determination they wish and that it cannot force territories to become independent but must permit them the level of autonomy which they desire.

The Speaker: Honourable Member, you have three minutes remaining.

Hon. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Mr. Speaker, the UK has been less than enthusiastic about this revelation, but the issue is actively being pursued by a number of private-sector entities. Our broad position on the constitutional change is as follows:-

- Any significant constitutional change must have the support of the majority of the electorate, who must be given the opportunity to consider and discuss the proposed changes.
- Independence is not an option for the Cayman Islands. In a world that is becoming increasingly independent, and in which surviving means joining, trading and bargaining blocks, there are real and tangible benefits in fostering and improving our constitutional link with the UK.
- The UK's ability to legislate for the Cayman Islands and to bind us to agreements and conventions arising from the UK's obligation to the European Union should cease.
- The UK should continue to be responsible for external security and external affairs with the knowledge and approval of the Cayman Islands Government. The legislature should increase in numbers to 17, elected from single-member constituencies.
- We do not support the concept of a senate consisting of unelected persons as we believe that this will result in another layer of bureaucracy and additional expense which the Cayman Islands can do without at this stage.
- There should be a Cabinet of seven elected members, one of whom should be named minister of finance together with the attorney general.

- There should be full ministerial government, with a chief minister appointed by the Governor who should be the elected member who commands the support of the majority of the Elected Members of the House. The other ministers should be appointed by the Governor acting on the advice of the chief minister.
- The attorney general should not be an elected member but be appointed on the advice of the chief minister.
- Protection of the rights of the minority in the Legislative Assembly should be guaranteed.
- There should be a bill of rights which offers protection of the fundamental rights and freedoms of the individual.
- There should be provision for binding people-initiated referendum.
- There should be provision for freedom of information; freedom of the press should be guaranteed.

Generally, Sir, this is the PPM's position on constitutional reform at this stage, but we are fully aware that there are other views and that the situation is dynamic. Our views are not cast in stone, and following the election we expect that there will be further discussions and opportunity for the electorate to make their views known. If even at that stage a referendum is necessary, so be it. However, the country can be assured of one thing: the PPM administration will not impose any Constitution on the people of this country against their will.

Mr. Speaker, the final issue that I want to quickly raise with regards to the constitutional matter was one that you raised, and I will only take two seconds to do so. It was a matter that you raised earlier about the autonomy of the Legislative Assembly and the arrangements that exist at present, which call for the Legislative Assembly to be under the arm of the Honourable First Official Member.

We speak constitutionally and otherwise to the separation of powers, and there is a separation of powers of the judiciary, the legislature and the executive. If the legislature is to truly enjoy the autonomy that we speak to with regards to separation of powers, then certainly we need to have a Legislative Assembly that does not report to another arm of government but rather directly to whoever is in charge of the government which is, at this point in time, the Governor.

Mr. Speaker, unfortunately I am out of time but I am certain my other colleagues will fill any gaps that I may have left. I want to say today that as I sit down what we have expressed from the PPM as to the positions we have taken are those that are well considered, informed positions. Certainly, while we know some things will be refuted, we trust that they are refuted with the facts.

Thank you.

The Speaker: Does any other Member wish to speak? Does any other Member wish to speak? Does any other Member wish to speak?

The Honourable Minister of Education.

Hon. Roy Bodden: Mr. Speaker, I was thinking that this time is the time when the poet in Alice in Wonderland wrote, when he said, "The time has come," the Walrus said, "To talk of many things:" However, more appropriately, when I listened to the Leader of the Opposition, I was reminded that it is also a different time. It is a time of talk, there shall be plenty, and there will be no shortage of those presumptuous elites and special interest groups and parties puffed up by that quality that Alexander Pope wrote about when he talked about "a little learning".

It is the duty of the Opposition, and the responsibility of any opposition worth its salt, to paint the bleakest picture possible. It is the duty of the Opposition to make it seem that the Government is disjointed and it does not know what is it doing and is running off in every direction.

It is the responsibility of the Government, on the other hand, to espouse its policies in confidence and to speak boldly and convincingly of its achievements. I hope that when the Government speaks, that it receives the same courtesy as it gave when the Leader of the Opposition was speaking. I hope that when the Government speaks its truths, that the same rapt attention is paid. There is a certain disadvantage for the Government because perhaps we do not have access to the kind of expertise and spin-doctors and speech writers and consultants and advocates that the Opposition has access to, according to my information.

However, what we have the benefit of is a good proven track record. Action speaks louder than words and the Government is one of action, and so it seems appropriate to begin at the beginning. I am going to leave, as I promised myself, the most important, as far as I am concerned, topic for the finale.

I want to begin by saying that I think it is appropriate to make the comment that, in spite of all the bluster and furore and the war of words, the surroundings which we inhabit now are appropriate; and I want to commend yourself and those persons, notwithstanding that there will be those who will take umbrage and difference with the amount of money spent, but a country's Parliament is just that. It is the foremost institution in the country, and I was just remarking that some people may not choose to acknowledge that there is a divine being but they have to live by the laws of the land, otherwise they will get into trouble.

So it seems fitting that the institution from which the laws originate and to which Members are entrusted in making, these laws reside, work and operate in comfort, dignity and convenience. I am proud that we have such a noble edifice and I thank all those who were concerned, sensible and visionary enough to see that we have at last an edifice of which we can be proud.

Mr. Speaker, Caymanian society is in the best hands it could be in at this time. There is for those who can see the signs all around to attest to that fact. In spite of the last speaker proclaiming that the sky is falling, people are employed; buildings are being built; there is law and order in the country. People feel generally optimistic, sure-footed, satisfied. I would hate—heaven knows—to be an Opposition member now because the only future is more years in Opposition. There is no way that people are going to change from a Government which has delivered to a Government which is writing promissory notes which have no value.

Mr. Speaker, the fact is that the person last speaking had an opportunity to make the significant difference, and what happened? He dithered and froze, so much so that there were those who were dissatisfied with the lack of progress and they exercised their democratic right and changed the leadership because they realised that the time had come to move the society forward.

So, Mr. Speaker, do you believe that person is so convincing now – for he is not Cicero; he is not Josephus; he is not Thucydides that he is so convincing now that he is going to let people believe that so quickly after making a change for the sake of action, to put him back at the helm. No, Mr. Speaker, I do not believe that. He will have to plead some more and that is good because it is a kind of seasoning; it is a right of passage and perhaps the time will come but the time will not be 2004.

That is still the UDP's time, the time for actions speaking louder than words. I listened to every facet of his debate and there is nothing that I heard new, which was convincing, which even bore the semblance of anything that anyone could hope for. It was more sizzle than substance.

I said before that I know all the tactics; I spent 12 years over there. I spent time with that honourable gentleman; I was his best buddy. I do not know now how the honourable gentleman believes that after trying so hard I am going to come and make him knock me off the block because he would like to be the Minister of Education. He has not put forward any plans that make sense, not even in the creation of crabs because all I heard him talking about was buildings, but what about programmes?

I hear him talking about temporary classrooms. That is not a phenomenon common only to the Cayman Islands. That is not the worst sin someone can commit. It is just that – temporary. However, I did not hear him talking about the ITALIC programme, the Cadet Corps. He admitted he did not know much about the transformation of the Community College into the University College. I heard him fleetingly mention technical and vocational education and casting some snide remark by saying it is not good enough to hold the trade fair each year.

Mr. Speaker, there is a scientific basis for what we are doing and that is what I was trying to let the Leader of the Opposition understand. However, it escapes his comprehension because all of his focus is on what the people can see. Put up a building! Build a building. I have never used as an excuse the fact that when I came to this office in 2000, I inherited a Herculean mess. I went about the business as I knew best.

Let us take Labour, which he last mentioned. Everyone knew that the country was in need of new and effective labour legislation. This has always been, traditionally, a difficult challenge to meet, a difficult task to initiate. We spent time reforming the Department, creating an Employment Relations Department. We set about setting up a taskforce which we called the Employment Forum, in preparation for the development of a new law. The Bill was brought to this Assembly and passed into a Law, but it still has not come into effect.

I heard the Leader of the Opposition mention the necessity to arrive at a definitive number of hours for a work week and to deal with this phenomenon of overtime, and yes, indeed it is true. I gave the commitment that the matter would be under review and so we have been reviewing the matter. I, myself, have spoken with persons at the managerial level, trying to come to some sensible and acceptable position regarding the number of hours.

However, Mr. Speaker, I have to say that I was puzzled when I heard the gentleman say that he had been approached by large numbers, perhaps hundreds, of people complaining that they are inconvenienced, they are off-put and they are losing income by the situation which exists.

To this present time I have no knowledge of any such furore or problem, and I spoke to the Director of Employment Relations up to this morning and no one has come to me complaining about such a terrible inconvenience. I have not heard it from the Employment Relations Department staff. What I will do again, when I go back to the office this afternoon, is make an effort to contact the Director to ascertain exactly if and what numbers of complaints he has had.

I know that there are ongoing and engaged discussions on this matter and if it needs readjustments, we shall make them. The purpose of the Law is to serve the interests of all involved in the tripartite system. However, I have to record that I am mystified by the Leader of the Opposition, unless he operates the same way he used to operate a couple years ago; he knows all the information and the rest of us are ignorant. Unless it is the rounds he makes and the journeys that he embarks upon, he gets the information and no one else knows. I do not know, Mr. Speaker, because I have not been privy to it.

We are committed to leaving modern labour legislation in the country, legislation that is fair, practical and workable. I say again, the Law is not etched in stone nor is it written in blood. I give that commitment so that will not, and need not, be a great hindrance.

The constitutional position which I espouse will be that of the United Democratic Party and we are going to put out the constitutional position. It will be a position that is sensible, practical and realistic. I can say one thing now: it will not be a constitutional position which supports independence because none of us is advocating that, but it will be a position which will give this country a sensible and workable instrument by which the Government can govern the country.

It is clear, as we travel throughout the Cayman Islands, that people are generally satisfied. They are employed. I heard the Leader of the Opposition try to dodge and jettison his culpability in the whole immigration fiasco by saying that they were not encouraging anybody to sue the Government. Mr. Speaker, to sin by silence is just as big a sin as when we protest. I will leave that for the Leader of the Opposition to ponder.

I am not sure that elements within the entity called the PPM were not fomenting mischief by encouraging people to challenge the Government. If they would wish—as they are saying—to say that mistakes have been made, that is their opinion; they are perfectly entitled to it. What I want to ask the Honourable Leader of the Opposition is: he was there for one year, what did he do besides appoint the Immigration Review Team?

I remember the situation vividly how this problem had its genesis in the fact that shortly after we were appointed I said, as the Minister of Education, we could be doing ourselves a great service by making all these teachers who had been here for all those years have some kind of security of tenure. I made lists of some of those persons, their dependents and even whether they had any kind of proof of domicile; that is, house, land, or something else which was tangible.

Mr. Speaker, as I recall it, all the Leader did was dither. Nothing was done. So now when an entity comes along and does something, what is he complaining about? If he had done what he should have done, there would be no need for chaos and disorder, as he claims there is now. He had the opportunity to set the trend, to establish the method of operation and by dithering and procrastinating, time and events caught up.

There was an admitted urgency to deal with this matter and it was dealt with; but I suppose one could say it was dealt with in a way that stripped away the advantage that would normally have been held by other people; so there are reasons for disgruntlement. I do not believe that it is the end of the world.

Countries have to deal with this all the time. How do they deal with it? Is it by putting management strategies in place? Even the United States, Canada and other countries which are countries of mass migration and countries to which many people emigrate, have to, from time to time, deal with this. Mr. Speaker, it is no reason to foment the ideas and to stir up that Caymanians are outdone and disadvantaged and sold out because that is not the absolute truth.

The best way that we can protect our people, because we have an obligation to them, is to prepare them to compete, to be competitive and to train them so that they can take their rightful places and make use of the opportunities which are in this country to be grasped by them. You cannot have one country, two systems. No one will accept that. That is intolerable.

So, I do not believe that it is the end of the world, and to stretch the truth and insinuate that because of that the Social Services cannot deliver and children cannot go to school because the classrooms. There is no empirical evidence, no scientific evidence to establish that as a fact. It is pure speculation and it exists only as a figment of the Leader of the Opposition's mind. Perhaps, Mr. Speaker, that may be his hope because he will think that someone's chaos will allow him to assume leadership, but it will not happen on the UDP's watch, no sir! One thousand times no! He will not come by that kind of default.

The challenges which we face we can deal with and I heard him level criticism at the low cost housing and there is an element of disingenuousness in these positions because he knows. Why did these contractors not come forward before? Why? You see, Mr. Speaker, in this rush to judgment to proclaim that this project is doomed to failure, there is a lack of foresight in the overall project.

It is not only about building houses, it is about creating a community. It is about gentrification; it is about offering hope; it is about building self-esteem; it is about giving people a sense of self-worth. So it does not matter if the house is made of concrete, what is important is the psychology of what is being achieved. These people are being removed. They are being up-lifted. They are being given a sense of dignity and self-worth. However, shallow-minded people cannot grasp the significance of that because they only say, 'Oh! But that is not a concrete house'. They do not understand that it is a community. It is this whole business of associating, building family, kinship and creating dignity, self-worth and gentrification.

So, Mr. Speaker, of course they will come, the undiscerning, and say, 'Well, that is not what we in Cayman have come to', never seeing that there is a deeper purpose than how a house looks. Never understanding that what is being done here is giving all these people a sense of hope, giving them a sense that 'I am worth something. My child(ren) now have a chance. This is our community, this is where we live, this is what we have to do and we have to bond now and we will use this'. It is not intended for all those people to stay there all their lives. They are going to move on upwards and onwards. That is the idea and that is what a responsible Opposition would see and try to promote.

In spite of what the Leader said, the Health Services in this country is better now than they have ever been. Who he should be seeking to cast judgment on is the person who sits with him and was responsible before my colleague took it. Those people who gave the insurance companies carte blanche! 'Write your policies, man! Write out them poor people'. If you were too tall you were excluded; if they thought you were one pound overweight; if you have hypertension – 'Take who you want. Charge what you would like'. No, Mr. Speaker! This Government is making insurance and Health Services available and affordable and that is commendable. I give my colleague my full support because it makes sense.

You know, Mr. Speaker, the challenge because you were on the way to sorting it out. It is not as the PPM would make it out to be, that the sky is falling and that everything is a mess. Things are progressing, but we on this side understand. We do not expect that the Opposition is going to be as gracious as to tell us we are doing well, everything is fine, 'Your policies and programmes are yielding results. People are benefitting'. We know that they are going to paint the picture as bleak as they can. They are going to use all the greys and dark colours and make it as pallid as it can be, but we shall continue to do well.

I did not hear him talk about the parks that our people can go in now and relax on the weekends. I did not hear him talk about all the green spaces where people can go with their families and breathe fresh air – North Side, West Bay, throughout the Island. I did not hear him mention these things. I did not hear him mention the prospects people have for employment; only the doom and gloom. Even in this election year that will not get anywhere because too many people know different. They know that they have a Government which is capable of dealing with the challenges.

I would like to say, Mr. Speaker, that culture too is alive and vibrant; the arts, because that is important. I heard him talk about education but he did not make any connection between education and culture. He did not talk about the vibrancy of the cultural product and how it should emanate out of the educational product. He did not talk about that because he is so narrow-minded, insular and unidimensional, he believes that education is only to provide a job and money in the pocket. He does not understand that there is a connection between education and culture. Not only must the person be able to get a job, but he or she must be able to fit into the society.

They must know who they are. They must develop an appreciation for the aesthetics, for the performing arts, for the visual arts. They must be able to participate for we are talking about the rounded citizen. We are talking about a new kind of Caribbean person. That is why you cannot just look at the physical facility of the affordable housing; that is why you cannot just set up a building and say, 'This is a school'.

There is an interconnectedness. That is what we are working on. We are creating a soul in the society, not just individuals but people who are linked to the society; who have a common umbilical chord; who understand what it is to live in this society, to be a Caymanian and live among Caymanians – not just someone who is like an automaton, who goes to work and comes home, not just some ghoul who just exists, but someone who says 'This is me. I am a Caymanian' – that interconnectedness between all these things.

That is why, Mr. Speaker, the UDP has the health policies, community development policies and education policies the way they are. We recognise that there is this interconnectedness; there is this necessity to create intelligent persons in the society, not a community of philistines whose only purpose is to amass riches and grow wealthy, but people who have a sense of altruism, a sense of community and a sense of obligation to their brothers and sisters, especially those who are less fortunate than they are.

That is what we are about, for all the people. That is the major distinguishing difference between us, the UDP, and the PPM – a dynamic vision that brings hope and aspiration which aspires people to be a part of the community which we are trying to build and we are doing well. I do not see any crisis in health. In spite of what the Leader of the Opposition said, there is no crisis in education.

Mr. Speaker, I will put this to you: if there was a chance that what I am saying about the educational system bore any inaccuracies or bore any untruth, there was a time when that would come out because I was not at the Finance Committee. I was stricken with a most terrible flu. I listened on the radio subsequently. There was a chance then. The Permanent Secretary was the one who represented the Ministry, and it was, by any account, a most thorough grilling. However, no one was able to find any inconsistencies or inaccuracies because the Ministry is sound. The policies are sound and effective.

I chuckled when I heard the Honourable Leader of the Opposition make reference to that. I heard him with some nonsensical reference about persons who complained about teachers taking political positions.

Let me say something, Mr. Speaker. I am of the school that believes that the Civil Service should be sacrosanct. It should be sacred from the arena of politics. That is what the Westminster system is predicated upon. Civil Service should be a faceless, anonymous organisation out of the realms of politicians. However, there are those persons who would like to politicise the Service for their own ends. Mr. Speaker, it is not—trust me—the best thing to happen unless you want to be like Mobutu in Zaire and all these other African people who foment and experiment and contaminate and pollute the democracy.

I do not encourage any kind of fraternisation between the politicians and the civil servants beyond what is necessary. My job is to formulate policy, not to dabble into the runnings and befriend and compromise. I am a strict professional and I keep a stiff upper lip and so it should be. I do not condone, indeed I take a dim view of those persons who try to do otherwise.

Things happened and I never said anything because, Mr. Speaker, I am seldom ruffled by these things. When you are seasoned like me, you have to have the skin of an armadillo. I get insults all the time, and there were occasions when I know that it was a mistake. It could not have been a mistake, but I do not mind about protocol and who calls who before whom. Trust me, I just do my job. I have no ego to stroke but the same does not go for other people, my colleagues included.

So, when someone is invited to a function and insulted by someone who feels they have a licence because they are the principal or acting principal or a civil servant, to give a lament, which is unfounded, just because it is detraction or an insult, I cannot condone that! However, it is not my business to sanction anyone even for such grossly improper behaviour. It is within the realms and ambits of the civil servants to do that, and I hope that note is taken because we do not want any politicisation. There should be no greying of this kind of area. I would prefer it to remain as it has been for a long time.

I do not associate myself with the comment that people should run with their tail between their legs and curl themselves up. I think that people have a right, if they are insulted on those occasions, to express their dissatisfaction and their discontent. They should demand that the lines of separation be clear and obvious, always remaining that way. I hope, Mr. Speaker, that with that, we have put this kind of behaviour behind us and that we can get on in our usual professional way of acting and delivering.

Mr. Speaker, I want to devote a fair amount of time to talking about education and training and this whole business of where we are, where we are going and how we are going to get there. I listened to the Leader of the Opposition and I wonder—I do not want to be uncharitable—if the comments and criticisms were his; if he was the author or he had some assistance. If he had assistance, I hope it was not assistance for which he paid money because someone has robbed him, seriously. If it is a case where he paid for that advice, he should go and reclaim his money.

READING BY THE HONOURABLE SPEAKER OF MESSAGES AND ANNOUNCEMENTS

Apologies

The Speaker: I would just mention that I have received a note this afternoon that the Honourable Minister for Planning was unavoidably absent today and I would like the Hansard to so reflect that.

ADJOURNMENT

The Speaker: Honourable Minister, if this is a convenient point, I would call on the Honourable Deputy Leader of Government Business for the Motion for adjournment.

Hon. Gilbert A. McLean: Mr. Speaker, I move the adjournment of this Honourable House until 10 am tomorrow, Thursday 8 July 2004.

The Speaker: The question is that this House do now adjourn until Thursday 8 July 2004 at 10 am. All those in favour please say Aye. Those against, No.

Ayes.

The Speaker: The Ayes have it.

At 4.31 pm the House stood adjourned until 10 am Thursday 8 July 2004.

OFFICIAL HANSARD REPORT
THURSDAY
8 JULY 2004
10.32 AM
Third Sitting

The Speaker: I now invite the Honourable Minister responsible for Education, Human Resources and Culture to lead us in Prayers.

PRAYERS

Hon. Roy Bodden: Let us pray.

Almighty God, from whom all wisdom and power are derived: We beseech Thee so to direct and prosper the deliberations of the Legislative Assembly now assembled, that all things may be ordered upon the best and surest foundations for the glory of Thy Name and for the safety, honour and welfare of the people of these Islands.

Bless our Sovereign Lady, Queen Elizabeth II; Philip, Duke of Edinburgh; Charles, Prince of Wales; and all the Royal Family. Give grace to all who exercise authority in our Commonwealth, that peace and happiness, truth and justice, religion and piety may be established among us. Especially we pray for the Governor of our Islands, the Speaker of the Legislative Assembly, Official Members and Ministers of Cabinet and Members of the Legislative Assembly, that we may be enabled faithfully to perform the responsible duties of our high office. All this we ask for Thy great Name's sake.

Let us say The Lord's Prayer together: Our Father, who art in Heaven, Hallowed be Thy Name. Thy Kingdom come, Thy will be done on earth as it is in Heaven. Give us this day our daily bread, and forgive us our trespasses, as we forgive those who trespass against us. Lead us not into temptation, but deliver us from evil. For Thine is the Kingdom, the power and the glory, forever and ever. Amen.

The Lord bless us and keep us. The Lord make His face shine upon us and be gracious unto us. The Lord lift up the light of His countenance upon us and give us peace, now and always. Amen.

Proceedings resumed at 10.32 am

The Speaker: Please be seated. Proceedings are resumed.

READING BY THE HONOURABLE
SPEAKER OF MESSAGES
AND ANNOUNCEMENTS

The Speaker: I have received apologies for absence from the Honourable First Official Member, the Honourable Second Official Member, the Second Elected Member for West Bay and the Honourable Leader of Government Business.

Also apologies for late arrival from the Second Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman and the Minister for Community Services, Youth, Sports and Gender Affairs.

STATEMENTS BY MEMBERS
OF THE GOVERNMENT

The Speaker: I have received no notice of statements by Members of the Government.

GOVERNMENT BUSINESS

Debate on the Address Delivered by His Excellency the Governor on Friday 2 July 2004

(Continuation of debate thereon)

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister of Education, Human Resources and Culture continuing with his debate.

Honourable Minister, you have one hour and 15 minutes remaining.

Hon. Roy Bodden: Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

When we took the adjournment yesterday afternoon, I was remarking that if the Honourable Leader of the Opposition had paid for advice and consultation (which I believe he received in preparation for his contribution to the Throne Speech) he should seek a refund of his money because his advice was indeed worthless. Anyone offering such advice would have to be investigated as being an impostor. Political positions notwithstanding, I would not like to see advantage taken even of my political adversary. So the advice I would give the Honourable Leader of the Opposition is that he should seek to recoup his expenses from that advisor, and he would be well served looking in other directions where the advice would be more sound and appropriate for someone of his aspiration.

I came this morning equipped with facts because I want to make a clear and unequivocal refutation of the idea proffered by the Honourable Leader of the Opposition that the schools are in chaos and there is indeed a shortage of space.

Nothing can be further from the truth. It is a known fact that in one school, namely the George Hicks High school, which was, I understand, built 25 years ago for a complement of 400 students, we will have to this point 1,087 students enrolled. I want to make a comment on that. I believe that as in many aspects of our planning in this country, educational planning is weak. It has been weak for some time and we are trying to strengthen it.

No one who is right thinking would expect to put up a building such as a school without making provision for expansion. I pause here to say that this is exactly the argument I, as Minister, find myself involved in now. I believe like Churchill said about war, it was too important to be left to the generals. I believe that educational planning and the building and construction of schools is too important to be left solely to the whims and fancies of the architects and designers.

The Speaker: Honourable Member, if you can give me one minute, please.

[Pause]

The Speaker: Please continue, Honourable Minister.

Hon. Roy Bodden: Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

I was saying that it is a challenge for education policymakers and planners because it seems often when we are talking about designing and construction of schools and school buildings that the architects, designers and people who are responsible for articulating the project have their own ideas, which may not be necessarily in tandem with those of the administrators. We are building a new high school. I say that high school should be built to house at least 1,000 students, although we recognise that the capacity at the beginning will probably be in the vicinity of 500-700.

I also mentioned to some persons involved in the development of the plans that I would wish for the school to have an auditorium which seats 5,000 people. That indeed is not far fetched when you come to realise that currently when we hold high school graduations for the George Hicks and John Gray High Schools, invitations to the graduates are limited to four per person because of lack of space.

Most recently, I learned that in the case of the George Hicks High School, which has a band of some 90 members, when they were assembled on the platform of the Agape Worship Centre there was no room for the distinguished delegates – Minister, Permanent Secretary and all the other persons on the platform. This is the situation that is most untenable and certainly unacceptable!

If we are building a new high school, it should be built so that it can comfortably hold functions like the school graduation. What if the high schools have combined events, which is not farfetched? Where would we hold the people? I am holding out and advocating that the new high school be built with an auditorium which seats at least 5,000 people.

It goes even further. I enquired and to my pleasant surprise I found out that there is no convention space currently available in the Cayman Islands that would accommodate 5,000 people were there to be a convention of that magnitude. So, a little economics comes in here because under our present financial and management system, the schools could rent this space out to conventions and make some money.

So it makes sense for us to develop a more sophisticated planning mechanism so that we can avoid these kinds of problems in the future. To revert to my original point, there is no crisis as the Leader of the Opposition pointed out because in some of the schools we will have fewer students as of September than we had for the last school year. The outgoing classes were larger than the intake as of September according to figures which we have.

While it is true that enrolment in many cases has closed, that is not unusual. The law gives a specific window in which enrolment must take place, and there is an obligation to accommodate Caymanian students at whatever time of the year; they have to be enrolled. Mr. Speaker, I know of no cohorts who have been turned away because of no space.

For the Leader of the Opposition to try to promote the case that the Government is in chaos, or to promote the idea that the schools are in crisis; that the Minister of Education does not know what he is doing; that the Government is floundering in its education policies, is irresponsible and patently fallacious. I might even say that it is disingenuous because the Honourable Member knows better and that is not the case.

I do not know, as he does not know, what numbers there are as a result of the recent status grants. I have to interject this: it seems as if that exercise is blasphemy to many people. I believe that there could be a more accurate, scientific basis for us to arrive at the numbers of children who are school age arising out of those grants, but in light of the circumstances under which the grants were given, we do not have that information now. So what should we do? Sensible people will try to cope as best they can, but it seems that the Opposition is rejoicing at this predicament, as if when they become the Government it would not be their predicament too.

I am not an alarmist and I do not believe that the situation is out of hand. The question I pose is this: if the people who are trained and educated as administrators cannot manage education, how are the people who are not going to manage it? If it is in chaos now under the United Democratic Party, who has the most qualified educational administrator available from the political field, then tell me who on their side is going to do better? Who are they going to draft or co-op? Certainly not the people who are advising him based on what I heard him reading yesterday because that is hogwash and nonsense. More sizzle than substance!

All the Leader of the Opposition bases his criticism of education on is the absence of buildings. Education is about more than building school buildings, it is about programmes and I am going to talk about some of the programmes that we have in place. Not only is it about programmes, it is about interlocking with other ministries, like the Ministry of Community Development, and taking a holistic approach to the development of the individual child and families.

I did not hear him talk anything about that, and do you know why? That is foreign to his genius because he cannot make that kind of connection; otherwise, he would have been making it. I heard him say something about whether there have been any transactions which would lead us to believe that there will be a new high school. I have given my word, the land has been purchased, but I just want the Leader of the Opposition to do this: he has to eat some crow now because he is the same one that said there would be no new Prospect Primary School come September.

I want to take him to the pile of crow and push his head in it and let him eat it. When he has finished eating that pile, I want to take him and let him eat a bigger pile because there will be a new high school in Frank Sound. The land has been purchased, 26 acres, so the UDP Government is doing what it said it would do.

I want to say this again: there has been no reluctance on the part of the United Democratic Party to support my educational policies and to meet my educational requests. There has been none. I have had unstinting support. So any criticism which is purported to be levelled at the Government I have to take personally because my position and the position of the Government as far as Education is concerned are one and the same. I cannot say that there has been a lack of educational support.

I heard the promise which he made and I would just like to ask when and if he takes over the Government, if the only Ministry is going to be Education. I would like to know how he is going to deliver all he says he is going to deliver in Education when he will have Community Development, Planning, Tourism, and also Health to service.

I know that there are educational needs. I inherited from my predecessor a list for $60 million in educational infrastructure. Indeed, I seem to recall before that Parliament was prorogued that $10 million was voted purportedly to be spent on the development of educational infrastructure. Regrettably, it went on asphalt on the roads and so we were that much further behind in the development of our educational infrastructure.

Under the United Democratic Party Government, at the same time, we are building buildings because in four years we have a new primary school in Prospect. We had an unexpected disaster with the ceilings dropping at the Middle School, and we were fortunate to escape with no injury to students or staff.

At the same time, we are redeveloping the George Town Primary School site, a school site that had been flood prone for years, as you will know, Mr. Speaker, because it was during your tenure as Minister that we talked about really developing and set about concretely developing this site. So nobody can make me feel embarrassed or can give short shrift to the United Democratic Party Government's support for education.

We have a plan and we are redeveloping the George Town Primary School site to eliminate the flooding and while we are doing that there will be no inconvenience because we are moving some of those cohorts of students on to the new Prospect School, three year groups of them. At the same time, we are opening a section of the Prospect School as a new school. We have given ourselves two years to complete the redevelopment project.

I want to say something about redevelopment since we are on that. When we have completed the redevelopment of the George Town Primary School site, we will then be tackling, as we are discussing now, the redevelopment of the John Gray High School site because we know too that that needs redevelopment.

We are working with a plan and a system because I do not believe in adhocracies. I do not believe in break and patch. I am a professional educational administrator and a policy maker second to none in the Cayman Islands and I put my record alongside any who profess, and even those who do not profess, those who pretend and I dare them to find it wanting. So, there is a system. These things have to be done with a minimum of inconvenience and disruption to students and staff.

So we will be getting a new high school in Frank Sound. It is only left for me to wrangle as to whether I can get the auditorium to seat 5,000 or otherwise. Mr. Speaker, I guarantee you that I shall go down fighting on that point.

In addition to this, what about the programmes that have been delivered? What about ITALIC—Improving Teaching and Learning in the Cayman Islands? Most recently we came to Finance Committee to get money to buy 280 computers, the last set of computers for teachers who have been through the 40-hour training. That will mean that when we are finished, every teacher in the Government school system will have his or her own laptop computer with which to aid in the instruction of our children. It is revolutionary. It is so revolutionary before I end my contribution I will tell you how famous we are becoming. We are becoming a model because that is my objective to make the Cayman Islands educational system so excellent that it is a model for the region and beyond. In four years we are on our way to becoming that.

Technical and vocational education, which is everybody's whipping boy now, I know that this needs addressing but what are you going to do? What are you going to say, technical and vocational education, we will do it? I heard the Leader of the Opposition make fun and say, technical and vocational education is more than holding a technical trade fair. I wonder where his plan is. What is his alternative? We know it is more than holding a technical and vocational trade fair every year.

We have completed and commissioned a work-force skills assessment survey. We know where the skills are lacking. We know what needs to be done and we are doing it because one of the first things we found out is that there is a weakness and employers tell us that we need to do something with the work ethics. So come September every school in the Government system up to the University College will have a module of work ethics in the curriculum. Every day there will be at least five minutes dealing with the development of work ethics, punctuality, deportment, respect and cooperation.

So you think you can just take these things in isolation? There has to be continuity, they work along a continuum so before you get people ready for all of this stuff, you have to prepare them and that is what we are doing. Simultaneously, we are strengthening the curriculum because it needs to be strengthened. The mistake that was made is that we were trying to introduce technical and vocational education at too late a stage and in isolation. There was a stigma attached to it and there still are some cultural nuances that we have to overcome in order to let people understand that it is okay to work with the hands.

Our approach is to jettison the old methodologies and we will use the same information and communications technology methods and strategies to teach technical and vocational education as we use them to teach the academic subjects. This year for the first time from the Community College we have eight students going away to take courses, degrees and certificate in technical and vocational studies. Some are scheduled to go to the British Columbia Institute of Technology; the others are going to the New England Institute of Technology. So while we are working from the top we are also working it from the bottom to strengthen the curriculum.

We will have an articulation agreement between the High School and the University College which will ensure that the High School sends to the University College a cohort of students who are prepared and who appreciate technical and vocational studies. So it is not as if nothing is being done.

The difference is we are taking a modern management approach to the problem so that when we get the results, they will be sustainable, continuous and quantifiable. I am not into applying a Band-Aid just to stop the bleeding, and then underneath the wound is still festering. These things take time. They have to evolve over time and if you study the countries that have these successful programmes, one will see that that is the same approach they took.

So we are working on these things. I did not hear the Leader of the Opposition talk about what exists now – a gender gap between male and female students in performance. It was brought home to me most clearly it is not only a Caymanian phenomenon but a Caribbean phenomenon that we as Caribbean Ministers of Education and educators have to work to solve. Girls outperform boys in significant and alarming ways and we have to redress that, but I did not hear him talk about that. He does not know about it! It was brought home most clearly a few nights ago at the George Hicks graduation where there were 18 students who would have qualified as honour students, and among them there were only five males which is not even one third.

The same phenomenon existed when I went to the University of the West Indies graduation last December. Among the cohort of honour students, 80 per cent were female. Among the graduates, 60 per cent were female and 40 per cent were male. It is one of those things I have down as a priority to address if I am to return in the November Elections because it has to be redressed. I did not hear him speak about that.

I did not hear him speak about programmes we have such as the Cadet Corps. Our Cadet Corps is chosen as a pilot by the Cadet Corps of the United Kingdom so that our cadets have the possibility of taking GCSE; four subjects in things that they do. This Sunday evening we will be having a passing out parade of some 40 cadets.

I did not hear him talk about the mentoring programme, the coaching for success programmes that the United Democratic Party under this Minister brought in to offer as constructive activities so that our young people could have alternatives away from criminal gang activities.

The Cadet Corps was started in 2001. It was a vision of this Minister and happily it is still going well. It is growing from strength to strength, as well as the National Mentoring Programme which we operate in conjunction with the Chamber of Commerce. For the Coaching for Success Programme we recruited from Birmingham a special person who had experience in dealing with these kinds of youth. These programmes are working.

I never heard the Leader of the Opposition talk about this. He is only talking that schools are overcrowded and there is a crisis and the buildings are dilapidated. It is true that we have at the George Hicks School a challenge, but minds are being developed. We are moulding successfully the future leaders of this country, the future Ministers of Education, maybe even the future Speaker of the Assembly. We are moulding and doing well and working to staunch the flow of those who fall through the gaps.

The Education Department has a closer liaison now with the Community Development Services because we have taken a holistic approach. We want to identify these students from the earliest stages so that we can work with them and rehabilitate them.

Mr. Speaker, God willing, in September we will have an opportunity to have a modern Education Law. I promised in 2002 that I would give the country before my tenure was up a new Education Law. The Bill is now ready, only to be approved by the Cabinet, and then to go out for public information, comment and criticism. I will table it, hopefully next week or the week thereafter so that it can be a public document that people can see.

It sets out in clear and modern parameters the responsibilities of all the players involved in the education establishment: the Ministry, the Education Department, teachers, parents and the students themselves. It is an important modern instrument of which we can all be proud, developed under the auspices of this Minister, with the support of the United Democratic Party.

This year, a record 76 tertiary level scholarships have been granted. Every year since 2000, there has been a record number of overseas scholarships given and also scholarships to our Community College, which will soon be a University College, and that itself is another achievement. Why do we have to do this? It is necessary because at the rate in which we are sending our qualified students abroad for tertiary level education, it would soon become unsustainable under our system of financing.

On each student, we expend, on average, US$20,000 per year four years. When you consider that the tuition fee in the United States rises by an average of 10 per cent per year... at one time I calculated we had 199 students studying abroad on government scholarships. So when we calculate that, we would find that it would soon become unsustainable and we have no reason to believe that there will be any decrease in the numbers. The trend shows that there has been a steady increase. In my most recent research, I found that over the last year university tuition fees in the United States have increased by 35 per cent, so we realised that something had to be done to make available to our students the same excellent opportunities for tertiary level education.

So when the board of governors of the Community College wrote to me in 2001 requesting that consideration be given to transform the Community College into a University College, I took the request on their advisement, research and study and I discussed with them what they had in mind. I am happy that tonight will be the last commencement exercise of the Community College as an entity of the Community College.

Future commencement exercises will include the University College of the Cayman Islands offering Bachelor of Science degrees in economics, finance, accounting, and information and communications technology. Next year will include teacher education and some other disciplines, the most popular disciplines according to the surveys that we have, which are in demand in our economy. The degrees will be offered in association and upon licence of other universities, which the Community College has articulation agreements with, not unlike the evolution of the University College of the West Indies when it started as an associate institution of the University of London.

So, Mr. Speaker, education is moving, but it is moving in a systematic and planned direction. Every facet and aspect of education is moving in that direction. I am confident that my stewardship is the stewardship that the country, when it comes to make assessments, will see and understand.

I want now, Mr. Speaker, to address the business of the lack of Caymanians for skilled areas. As I have said, we have just had this work skills assessment survey, which the Employment Relations Department commissioned and which we hope to use as a basis to arrive at some comprehensive training policy and strategy for persons in the technical and vocational area. However, I caution—and it is a caution based upon experience—that when we have our students trained and prepared, they are going to come upon the same obstacle which many of our students returning from universities in the professional fields come upon now. Employers are going to tell them that they do not have the experience. They are not going to make way by getting rid of the people on work permits to give the Caymanians a chance.

Mr. Speaker, there is a kind of hypocrisy which exists in this society and it frustrates many of our young people. I am incompetent, unable, as the Minister of Employment and the Minister of Education, to deal with this because it seems that there are forces greater than mine. What happens? Someone has expatriate employees and for their own reasons they do not want to get rid of them. When a trained and qualified Caymanian employee applies for the job, all kinds of excuses are given. We have to find a way to rid ourselves of those kinds of hypocrites and that kind of hypocrisy in this society because it is not going to bode well for the continuing cordial relations which we have. So any successful, technical and vocational training plan will have to be balanced by the guarantee that when we have trained Caymanians they will get the opportunity to exercise their training by getting employment.

I do not know how we are going to deal with that. It is a situation to which I grant the greatest level of seriousness and I am well aware of the games that are played. I have had opportunity to summon, on occasion, several persons to my office and to let them know. However, as I said, in many instances, I am unable to successfully address the situation because these people have their ways and means and sometimes they have a way of gravitating to higher beings than me.

Mr. Speaker, I am satisfied, and the records will bear me out, that at the end of the day it can be truthfully said the United Democratic Party is a party which supported the establishment of a sensible, credible, effective education system and I welcome the challenge of further developing our system. As I said, I have set for myself this business of redressing the gender disparity.

I am also concerned about the fact that not enough is being done in the schools as far as HIV and STD education is concerned. I am in dialogue and contact with the Red Cross here, and the Red Cross officers tell me about their efforts to promote awareness in the schools. I believe that we have some work to do given the fact that outside of sub-Saharan Africa, the Caribbean is the next major affected region.

I would like to see a robust educational awareness programme in all our schools. I give a commitment, if I am returned that I am going to work with the Red Cross to develop that programme because we have to prepare our young people for this awareness. We have to educate them to take the best care of themselves. I am concerned because Cayman stands on the confluence of a rapidly traversed geographical area from all points and the best protection that we can give ourselves is to educate our young people, and it should start in the schools.

I will continue my robust schools improvement programme. Permit me to bring closure to this business of education and education developments by saying if our system was as bad as the Leader of the Opposition makes it out to be, if our system was in such chaos, you tell me, Mr. Speaker, how the Government of Morocco can make enquiries about our ITALIC programme. You tell me how Anguillian educators would travel to the Cayman Islands to learn about our model of transforming the Community College into a University College and ask us to help them set up their college along these lines. You tell me if our education was in the chaos and crisis that the Leader of the Opposition would have it to be, why the Minister of Education for the Bahamas would travel to the Cayman Islands to meet with me and why we would go there to consult with them about our educational initiatives. If what we are doing is so bad, you tell me how the people from the Turks and Caicos Islands would want to study our labour legislation as a model for modernising theirs. Tell me how the people of the British Virgin Islands would send their representative, Ann Hale-Smith, to look again at our ITALIC programme.

Finally, Mr. Speaker (this is the kicker!) when I came to the Ministry I told the United Democratic Party that part of my educational policy would be to establish a citizenship and human rights module in the curriculum. I did that and I am proud to say that Mr. James Watler and Ms. Bobeth O'Garro are two of the developers recognised by a Commonwealth organisation in the United Kingdom. If our system were so bad, you tell me how the Cayman Islands Citizenship and Human Rights curriculum would be chosen as a model for the whole Commonwealth. I want the Leader of the Opposition, and any pretender that he may be in association with, to answer these questions and then come deal with me one-on-one as an educator.

I could be uncharitable but I will not because I know him well and I know how close he skirts to the wind. If I were thin skinned, I would regard many of the things he said as personal affronts, but you know what? I have him out. You see, he is not here today because he can give but he cannot take! I am ready to meet him and any cohort that he may have with him and to debate with them. The difference between me and them is the only paper you see me read off of is when I read the facts and the figures. Everything else is in my cranium! I know about democracy and I know the risks. I tell people I live like a soldier. Any day you go to battle you can be shot. So any election you go in you can lose; that is the democratic right of the constituents. However, I tell you this: the country will see that they had a good Minister and they will understand that the United Democratic Party Government was interested in education because they brought forth, not only the best in the party but the best that was available!

That is the difference. I have confidence in what I do, I believe in what I do and I do not go around politicising civil servants. All I ask of them is, perform and carry out my policies. They do not have to love me. I wish that he were here so that he could see the level of my righteous indignation for him.

Mr. Speaker, I would love to win again and I am going to fight hard and I am not surrendering to the (PPM) People's Progressive Movement. That is out of the question. I will fight with my colleagues as a phalanx moving forward, to give this country the kind of representation we believe it needs that we can deliver, because actions speak louder than words! The UDP has left a legacy of action.

I know that when you are a Minister, you are tied down. It is not like when we were MLAs and we were available and could visit our constituents every day and every week. We do not have so much time now, but we run surgeries in the constituency when we can. No one can say that our constituencies are neglected. For the first time we have been able to accomplish things in Bodden Town that needed to be accomplished. In a few weeks' time we will open a computer learning centre, second to none, with the best equipment and programmes available, a pilot programme.

I traverse every day with certain realities, but I am not going to let detractors propagandise the country into believing that the Minister of Education squandered his time and that his party did not give him support. Nothing could be further from the truth. I say this: I do not see anywhere that I would be now except firmly in the ranks of the UDP because the PPM does not hold any future for me, and by inference it does not hold any for Cayman.

So as I said, although it was not like when I was an MLA, that I could be traversing every day the highways, byways and back roads of Bodden Town, I have still delivered for the people of Bodden Town. I have delivered good schools, good education system, scholarships and I have even ensured that they have proper health care and affordable insurance by supporting my colleagues. I have supported my other colleagues in the other Ministries to make the Cayman Islands the place it is today, where everyone who wants to work, can work and where we have certain freedoms.

I will tell my people these things. I will remind them and there will be many who will come, because this is the time of talking with promises and platitudes and swaying arguments and maybe even songs, but the discerning people will understand.

I hope when all is said and done that those who follow talk sense. I hope when all is said and done that those people who would wish to assume the Government realise that talk is cheap. It is easy to sit on the Back Bench and criticise; I did that for 12 years. It is much more difficult when you have to prioritise, make plans, juggle objectives and decide which policy should be implemented first.

Before I take my seat I would wish to say, for me it is nothing personal, it is just politics and the defence of an immaculate record and a declaration of association; that is all it is, spoken with the sincerity and commitment of one who believes in what he says.

I look forward to the next little while. I think that Cayman is in good hands, despite what detractors and naysayers may say. The record of the performance of the United Democratic Party is unchallengeable. We have done things that needed doing that no one dared to do, and sometimes when you do that you expose yourself to criticism. But thank heavens I have never been one to sit around in that grey area, inhabited by timid minds and feeble souls.

I want to leave on this note. I would humbly seek the support of my constituents for myself and my colleague, and my policies are not the timorous etchings of an uncertain artist; mine are the bold stroke of a maestro. I say that until the PPM comes up with a more credible education plan, the plan that I espouse is the plan.

Thank you, Sir.

The Speaker: Honourable Members, I propose to take the morning break at this time and resume in 15 minutes.

Proceedings suspended at 11:34 am

Proceedings resumed at 12.05 pm

The Speaker: Please be seated. Proceedings are resumed. Does any other Member wish to speak? Does any other Member wish to speak? The Elected Member for East End.

Mr. V. Arden McLean: Mr. Speaker, prior to the resumption of this Honourable House this morning, my colleague from the other side reminded me, in a nice way, of the adversarial nature of the business called "politics" and I took it in good faith. It was said jokingly, but I recognise the seriousness of that statement.

In starting my contribution to the 2004 Throne Speech, I echo a closing comment by the Minister of Education when he said that it is not personal; it is all about politics. I trust that we do not take it personal as it is all about politics.

Since the topical subject matter is education, maybe I should start on that subject so that we do not lose the train that has been going on.

The Minister of Education ended his contribution on the defence of the UDP Government, and I think that it is quite appropriate that I begin mine on the defence of the People's Progressive Movement.

This Government which came to power, quite controversially, on 8 November 2001 has, in my opinion, missed the central piece of the jigsaw puzzle when it comes to governance. Priorities are wrong, contrary to what the Minister of Education said that the Government supports his every effort towards education. It certainly is not borne out in what he is doing.

The Minister spoke of how incompetent he was when it came to trying to get employers in this country to hire young Caymanians who have been recently trained but lack the experience. That incompetence is exactly why he has to say to the UDP, 'You make your bed, you lie in it.'

His very subject of the inability to protect young Caymanians has been going on for a very long time. In particular, there are very large law firms in this country, who in recent times as I understand it, have gotten rid of at least three young professionals and Government has done nothing about it! Absolutely nothing! The managing partner of that particular law firm seems to be god in this country. That is what the UDP Government needs to work on. If you stop one, the others will not do it. Put the brakes on one.

You know what we did in response to their actions and their indiscretions? We went and gave all of them Caymanian status! That is what the UDP Government did. I say today that a Government made up of PPM Members will not address it in that manner. I understand politics.

I know that the Minister of Education spoke of the separation between politics and civil servants and I agree with him. But I know what, there is no separation here and contrary to his belief I can take it as good as I give it, and when they are ready to reply to me it is entirely up to them because I am saying what I have to say. So I want to make that clear. They can say what they please in reply.

Let me stop for a second and talk about the Minister of Education. Last year the Minister of Education brought a report and it was entitled, "Report Card". Mr. Speaker, as I recall it, the Minister said that report card would be what he would be measured on for his stewardship. I am here to tell the Minister that there is a big 'F' in red across that same report card that he brought here. How that came about I do not know. He claims to be a professional educator, he claims that he is capable of dealing with education and he also claims that the Government has supported him in everything he wanted to do. It is not showing up. One of those has failed. It is either the Government is not providing him with what he needs for it for education, or he is not a good administrator. The country has to decide that, and I am going to show that either one of them is his fault, it is not mine. I am going to show that most of what he got up here and replied to the Leader of the Opposition, the Leader of the People's Progressive Movement is total hogwash.

It is quite interesting to compare the Throne Speech of 2003 with that of 2004, keeping in mind that the Throne Speech of 2003 was delivered some 16 months prior to 2004. We take a glimpse under "Education" and compare them. I am going to show you where the hogwash comes in from the Minister.

Under Education Law in 2003, I read, "In 2003, the Ministry will focus its efforts on the need for a revised Education Law. This was recommended in the Millet Report, tabled in the Legislative Assembly in 2001. The Revised Law will constitute the Schools' Inspectorate and its powers, address the issue of home schooling, establish an Appeals Tribunal and incorporate other recommendations from the Report."

In 2004 under "Education"- "In 2004, the Ministry will also build on its work in school improvement, with the establishment or continued implementation of the following key initiatives:

1. The introduction of a comprehensive and modern Education and Training Law. Drafting instructions for the new law are to be scheduled shortly, and the Ministry aims to present an Education and Training Bill to the House in September 2005."

In two years all we have ever heard from the UDP are promises and goals to better, the lives of the people of this country and they are yet to be realised. The Minister also said anyone who wants a job in this country can have a job; that is how buoyant the economy is. I am here to tell him that he is not in touch with the local man, the small man, because I hear it every day. There are many people in this country that are not working, but I have a dream that one day these people will be liberated from the governance as such they have now and only the PPM can bring them out of that bondage.

I think what has happened with the UDP Government is that they have missed the fundamentals of democracy governance. One of the fundamentals is that the people elect representatives albeit to tax them, the same people who voted for them. However, with that authority comes the responsibility to utilise that money to provide the services for the betterment of their lives. The UDP has missed that. They want to boast of the $40 million that they have accumulated as a result of those taxes, the surplus. Then we turn to the issue of providing facilities for our children, and I am going to go very parochial at this stage.

Just in case anyone in this country thinks that I am not doing what I was elected to do, I will enlighten the general public and remind the Minister of the education woes in East End. Mr. Speaker, I beg your permission to read from some letters that I wrote the Minister. In October 2002 I wrote:

"Dear Sir,

"Re: East End Primary School.

"Further to our conversation concerning the East End Primary School needs, I confirm the following. The school is in dire need of a cafeteria which will allow for the proper preparation and consumption of meals in an environment that is conducive to proper hygiene.

"Currently the kitchen comprises of equipment suitable for home use only and meals are served and eaten outside under a passageway.

"There is a need for proper staff offices. Currently staff is occupying a small one room office which is limited in space and does not facilitate the efficient and proper management of the institution. As you are aware these issues have been outstanding for many years and on our visit during 2001 we were both sympathetic and committed to addressing the situation. It is my understating that the Public Works Department is in possession of proposed architectural drawings detailing these enhancements.

"I hereby request your attention to these very important matters which once addressed will enhance the school, pupils and teachers success."

Mr. Speaker, to the Minister's credit he replied to my letter. This is the key and he writes:

"Dear Mr. McLean,

"Re: your letter dated October 17, 2002 East End Primary School.

"I have read your letter and write to inform you that at the earliest convenience I shall be taking up your request with the Permanent Secretary and the Chief Education Officer. While I give my undertaking that every effort will be made to be as accommodating as possible, I also remind you that we are in a time of fiscal constraints.

"As soon as I have completed discussions with regards to your request, I shall communicate the decision to you."

The decision has not been made, Mr. Speaker. Now, the Minister talks of how if there is any fault to be levied it should go to him. He said that in his contribution to the Throne Speech earlier. He also said that the education policies of this Government are alive and well. In 2003, the Minister budgeted $5,000 for the canteen in East End for plans, and at the recent Finance Committee for supplementary funds it was removed. Is the Minister telling us that he has a policy in place, a plan in place to give the people's children the proper facilities? He talks about the plan in schooling and how we as Opposition constantly bemoan it. The programmes cannot be done without the plans. We cannot implement the educational programmes without the plans.

Going back to the East End school, this school is 30-odd years old and here we are with no canteen. The Minister in early 2001 toured the East End school with me and other members of his staff, and to this date there is no canteen. Tell me where the policy and the plan are from the UDP for our children in this country? Someone needs to tell me that. Or, is it because it is East End? Again, I remind them of that fundamental right of every citizen of this country to share in the proceeds from the taxation.

East End is no different. Yes Arden McLean has a big mouth, but it is not me. It is not my money; it is not for me; it is for the same people that we tax and ask to share in providing the services of this country and for them. Yet, the Government and their select few is where it is done. That is where it is shared.

So the Minister cannot get up in this Honourable House and try to convince the people of this country, in particular the people of East End, that he is doing everything for education. It is absolute hogwash! He must have plenty of pigs on his farm!

Mr. Speaker, it was I who went and begged for the computer lab in East End, and you are telling me the Government is doing things for the people of this country? No, it is a select few.

I bring another incident to your attention on education again. On 28 June of this year, again I wrote the Minister and I read:

"Dear Sir,

"Re: East End Primary School.

Further to our conversation of Friday, 25 June 2004 regarding the repairs being carried out to the East End Primary School, I confirm the following. I had discussed it quite briefly with him by phone prior to writing the letter.

"During an unrelated visit to the school on Friday I observed certain repairs being carried out, in particular the retiling of the restrooms. Upon enquiring of Mr. Bodden of Public Works Department and Mr. Smith of the Education Department as to whether any of the toilets would be replaced with the lower profile type and if the full doors to the cubicles would be changed to lightweight half doors which would be more suitable for the children, I was informed that there were no plans for such changes.

"Upon additional review of the premises, I further observe that there are a number of windows to be replaced of which I also enquired into and was told that there are no immediate plans to continue the change-out programme which commenced some two years ago.

"As you are aware the East End Primary School has been lacking repairs for many years. The toilets and doors thereto have been in place since it was built. In recent times the school has added a reception class with children from the age of four years.

"To expect these youngsters to continue to use these high and cumbersome toilets would be inhumane and unconscionable. I therefore see no reason why during the repairs that at least two in the girls and one in the boys bathroom cannot be changed to low profile type and the full doors changed to lighter half doors to prevent the children from being locked in accidentally.

"Additionally it seems commonsensical that we should have the windows in the school changed to hurricane ready type as soon as possible.

"Other than new windows being more energy efficient, the school is designated a hurricane shelter; thus the need to have these windows installed.

"In view of the school closing shortly for summer, I respectfully request that you intervene and have these necessary repairs effective prior to the start of the new school year.

"Yours sincerely,

"Arden"

Mr. Speaker, the Minister did not have the opportunity to reply to me but that is fine. What I am saying is there is no plan. These toilets in East End have been there since it was built. They have to be at least 18 inches high. I have never, in my adult years, seen toilets of that nature.

I will tell you what happened. They returned every one to the original spot. We all as adults have lower profile toilets in our homes, but our four-year-olds in East End cannot have them. Do you think that is right? Do you think there is a plan? There is no plan! Or, if there is one it excluded East End. In any event, I am here to defend East End and someone is going to hear it over on that side. They may not adhere to it but they are going to hear it. The Minister has failed the government as a result of his association with the UDP, and as soon as the principal and the senior staff with authority in these schools starts complaining in public, it is like they want to lynch them from the nearest tree. Well, lynch Arden McLean now because they are going to hear it. I have had enough.

The Government would not provide the playground set in East End. I had to go out and beg for it. That is the nature of the beast. They have carried the politics too far to try and damage me, but they are damaging our people.

The Minister and the UDP Government are treating the people of East End like step-children, and it is really ridiculous and unreasonable. When I was elected to this Honourable House, the principal and the deputy principal of East End School had just arrived and the school was not doing as we would have liked. Today, it is one of the better schools in this country thanks to the principal, the deputy principal, Mr. Tibbetts, and the other faculty. They have had to use everything in their personal arsenal to get that school the way it is today and I thank them.

There is a change coming soon in the staff. The principal is leaving to go on to the alternative education section and Mrs. Frederick will now be principal. Mr. Tibbetts, who is the little golden-eye young man in this country, has had to struggle. He is everyone's golden-eye boy and the whole country needs to use him as an example. The Minister needs to use him as an example to encourage other young Caymans to go into the time-honoured profession. But do you know why they are not going? It is because of the same Government. They went into power promising to give the teachers of this country better conditions and better salaries, but they are not doing it. What we have to understand is that three Members of Cabinet have been through those hard times, with a lack of proper compensation for teaching. I cannot understand how the three of them can be so insensitive and not control Cabinet and say, 'We need to increase people's wages.'

I know that it is the responsibility of the government, but the political directorate can recommend it. However, I will bet you that they have not recommended it and they got to vote and bring the funds here. The UDP Government, and in particular the Cabinet, are not in tune with what this country needs. The PPM is.

Mr. Speaker, the Minister went on to talk about his ITALIC system. In 2001 the Minister promised that he would have computers on every child's school desk in this country. I do not see them yet, but nevertheless, they are embarking on an ITALICS (II) and have not finished (I) yet. What kind of governance and management is that? Three and a half years later and the Minister and UDP Government have done absolutely nothing!

The people of this country must leave them in here with the stranglehold they have on them. My appeal to the people of this country: get rid of them. The Minister is going to jump up here about his abilities, and he will not be coming with the PPM after the Election. We do not want him! We have no need for him if he is going to be doing with us what he is doing over there. He can stay there and languish in the Opposition the next time. That is where he going to go. We are going to do him what Mr. Haig said he was going to do him, leave him up there in Bodden Town.

He is out of hand and he comes talking about this grandiose pilot project in Bodden Town with a computer learning centre. The irony of that is, when I opened mine in September 2003, that was the pilot project in this country and he called it that at the opening. However, all of a sudden, now it has become Bodden Town has the pilot project in the country. You cannot have two pilot projects. Maybe you will have one for Bodden Town, but not for the country.

It is not a pilot. He is pirating mine but that is good because I have an obligation to the rest of this country, not only East End. Anything I can do to help the rest of this country I will, but he must not come in here about "pilot project in the country" Besides, while I commend them for doing it—

Point of Elucidation

Mr. Lyndon L. Martin: Point of elucidation, Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: There is no such thing, unless the Honourable Member wants to give way. Is it a point of order you are asking for, or asking the Member to give way for elucidation?

Mr. Lyndon L. Martin: I am asking the Member to give way for a point of elucidation.

Mr. V. Arden McLean: No, Mr. Speaker, he can sit down.

The Speaker: The Honourable Member refuses. Please continue, Honourable Member for East End.

Mr. V. Arden McLean: He has two hours to refute anything I have said on this side. He can wait over there and get up after me, but I have had enough of it!

I commend them for doing this, and as I said, anything within my power for the people of my country is what I swore to protect and to serve. They have forgotten that because they have forgotten East Enders, but they will not be there long. Then East Enders will have someone in the position capable of delivering for them.

My record stands the same way the Minister of Education can get up and appeal to the people of Bodden Town about hope when he gets back in. I hope that the people put enough trust in me to return me to this Honourable House also, but it is their choice, not mine, and if they are not satisfied with me they will elect someone else. However, he got up in here about how much he has done, promises, many promises that never came to fruition.

I applaud the Cadet Corps, these are the type of things, but if the Government is only going to get one out of a million, that is poor management.

Mr. Speaker, the Minister spoke of how the UDP will leave a legacy of action. I would advise him to review that because it is leaving him in a position of inaction. That is what is happening with him and it goes for many others on that side too. He must learn to take it as good as he can give.

He spoke of how weak the education plan in this country has been for many years. He seems to have weakened it even further. Nothing of any substance has been done to help our children. The grandiose scheme of turning the Community College into a University College, oh yeah! No egos to stroke? He has said that many times. There is serious caressing somewhere.

The job of the Opposition, as he quite rightly said, is to show the lack of priorities on the part of the Government; it is for them to say what they have done. I know what I feel and see, and I know that the people of East End are suffering under this Government and the people in the wider community of the Cayman Islands are suffering under this Government! Very few people can go out and defend the UDP Government, but we must succumb to them? No, I have the right to say, with respect, what I want in here. When the time comes for them to reply they can do so. If they so choose to call it the beginning of the campaign, so be it because with God's help and the help of my colleagues and the people of this country, I am going to see to it that they do not return. They have failed us and our country suffers as a result of their governance.

I think another issue I would like to turn to is— it is unfortunate because of my illness I did not get to reply to the Budget Address; therefore I have to bring everything in now and I will.

The Government went off recently to start talking about a dock and airport in East End. Let me first address the dock. I would like to take us back in time some 20-odd years ago when the owners of Quarry Products came to this country. They proposed a quarry right where the Leader of Government Business and his cohorts are proposing a dock. The people of East End objected to it then. When the subject came to the forefront again sometime during 2002, I went out and I tried canvassing the people of East End. I would venture to say that 95 per cent I spoke to said no.

The people of East End asked me to assist them in writing a petition to the Governor and I did that. Mr. Speaker, some 500 signed against the dock being placed at Half Moon Bay. It is not for me to tell you the reasons why all of these people signed, it is their personal position which I need not try to determine.

I wrote the then Governor, Governor Smith, with the petition and signatures attached, albeit a couple of days prior to his departure, thank God. The Governor replied the day before he left saying that he would pass it on to his successor. It seems to have died a natural death. I am yet to have anyone sit me down and say this is what it entails, and I believe the same is true for the majority of East Enders. There were a number of questions asked: Who is going to pay for it? Is it going to be the Cayman Islands Government? Where are we going to get this kind of money? To top it off, the Government then said they would build a main arterial road from East End to West Bay from the material dug.

Personally, I do not support a dock in that pristine area of East End. I support development but very importantly, we as a country, Government, Cabinet over many years have had a policy that we do not dig over the fresh water lens and I support that. This piece of property is close to the fresh water lens. I cannot say that it is over the lens but I know it is extremely close, if not over. I do not support it. That is one reason. The other reason is it is pristine. On any day, you can find at least five dive boats from the diving industry in East End and George Town within that immediate vicinity, right where they would have to cut a channel through. They come all the way from George Town to East End for the diving.

Anyway, it died a natural death and all of a sudden the dragon rises again. The papers reported—and I do not think I am speaking out of turn but as far as I saw in the papers—that Mr. Imperato had bought the property and there were plans to again revive the dock issue. It is my opinion (and I will hold fast to this) that the purpose of digging up there is not to build a dock. There is some rat here and it stinks. I am going to prove my theory.

Since then the Leader of Government Business has announced that the Government is looking favourably at putting an international airport somewhere on the eastern end. It is my humble submission that no dock is going up there. It is my position that the intent is to put another crater in the middle of East End, but I will tell this Honourable House it will not be on my watch. It is up to the UDP Government to make sure that my watch finishes soon if they want to put a dock in East End. They really need to do that; and until I get an indication from the people of East End that they are supporting a dock in East End, I am not going to support it! I will not! If the majority of people in East End say, 'Yes we want the dock,' then I will have to eat crow, like the Minister of Education said he wanted the Leader of the Opposition to do. It will be a big pile of crow for me to eat, but I will eat it because that is what representation is about and that is what I call representation. Personally, until I get that, no bulldozer will be starting.

I propose to take the luncheon break at this time and resume at 2.30 pm.

Proceedings suspended at 1.00 pm

Proceedings resumed at 2.43 pm

The Speaker: Please be seated. Proceedings are resumed.

The Elected Member for East End continuing with his debate. Honourable Member, you have one hour and five minutes remaining.

Mr. V. Arden McLean: Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

Although that is not going to be enough time to finish what I have to say and finish this indictment of the UDP, I will try my best.

When we took the luncheon break I was on the subject of the dock in East End, and I will like to come back to a section of that but I would also like to go back, very briefly, to education.

While we were taking a break the Sarjeant delivered a letter to me, which in reply to that letter I spoke of concerning the repairs being done to the East End School. It is the Minister's reply to my letter and I thank him for that. However, in his usual way, it does not give any comfort to me or anyone else. If I may, I will read it because it is only two lines.

Dear Mr. McLean,

"Thank you for your letter 28 June 2004 regarding repairs being carried out at the East End Primary school." That is one line. The next one is, "I will investigate your concerns and respond to you shortly.

Yours sincerely."

If I follow 'response' from anything that the Minister is going to investigate as history will prove with regards to East End School, the cows will all come home before I get that response. That has been the way that it goes so I guess we will have to deal with that one.

Three years or thereabouts, I have written him about the canteen and this year we are no closer to getting a canteen in East End. The PPM Government will do that. We will ensure that the people of East End, and in particular, their children are in comfortable surroundings.

I would now like to conclude my remarks on the airport. There seems to be something in the Government's way of managing this country that says to me they throw these things out just to hear what people have to say and then they use that as a means to reverse their proposals.

Mr. Speaker, personally I see no reason for an airport to go to East End. However, I will support an executive airport in the eastern districts. Demographically, the airport should remain where it is. I guess this is another red herring to dig a crater in the middle of East End in order to build this airport. It takes a long time to build an airport so the country need not worry about that now. I believe we need to upgrade the current airport facility. I believe we need to ensure that the airstrip is longer to accommodate aircraft from further distances so that we can expand our tourism market, and I support that but I believe it can be done satisfactorily where the airport is at. That will be a subject of another debate.

I mentioned at the beginning that all the Throne Speech did, in my opinion, was repeat everything that was to be done in 2003, which were the promises the Government made and it has taken them 16 months to realise that they could not fulfil the promises; unfortunate but true.

There are many things in this Throne Speech that repeats the 2003 objectives and goals. I would like to point out a few of those in order that the country and those who did not have the opportunity to read the Throne Speech and compare it with the one which was delivered in Cayman Brac and Little Cayman in 2003. For instance, under "Culture", in 2003, the Government gave us a glimpse into the main library in George Town. It says, "In 2003, work will begin on a 3-story extension to the George Town Public Library. In addition to tripling the usable floor space of the current facility, this will include internet-enabled computer labs. Students will finally have access to a library whose mandate is to be the "local centre of information, with all kinds of knowledge and information readily available." These additional facilities will allow the library to better complement other ministry initiatives such as ITALIC." Then in 2004 under "Library", the Governor has reported, "With the contributions of private sector partners, the Ministry is anticipating that construction will commence in 2004 of a three-storey extension to the George Town Public Library" again 16 months later.

The Government continues to make these promises and not fulfil them. This is the same management style that the Minister of Education talks about that is alive and well and the UDP is the best thing since sliced bread. He talked about the action legacy that they will leave behind. When that same Minister was on this side of this Honourable House, on 16 June 2000 said, and with your permission I quote from the Hansard of 16 June 2000.

The Speaker: Please continue.

Mr. V. Arden McLean: "Has it not also struck you, Mr. Speaker, that we don't have a national library per se? We don't have a sophisticated building where we could in a quiet sober atmosphere concentrate and do some extensive research on a project? Have you ever wondered, Mr. Speaker, why? Yet, we had a big debate here (you will recall, Mr. Speaker) when it was proposed that we set up a National Gallery. We are building a National Gallery but we don't have a national library. Have you wondered why?"

"Mr. Speaker, has it ever dawned on you that there is a contradiction of sorts in saying that we have a perfect educational system but we don't have a library where somebody can go on a Saturday morning to satisfy his curiosity in a particular subject, where he can read a journal or go and research a particular text in an area in which he may have an interest?" Four years later we still do not have the National Library that he envisioned then.

I have always said and I continue to hold fast to the belief that there is a thin line that separates Opposition and the decision-making process.

I go now further to say that the UDP has not made that transition well. We can speak of it here, but are they still in that mode of opposition over there? It is a different ball game; they have to now make the decisions that are in the best interest of the people of this country; that is what it is all about. They ask us our plans. How are we going to produce plans, as the Opposition, for them to do? It is their job to find innovative, creative initiatives for the betterment of the people. They assumed that position on their own voli-tion, nobody pushed them there. Nevertheless, they are talking about the decisions that they have made; the action. They left off the 'in' on the front of 'action'.

Under PPM administration, all these things will come to fruition. Is it not a downright disgrace there are four computers with internet access in all of our public libraries in this country? I did not say so; the UDP Annual Plan and Estimates for the Government of the Cayman Islands for the financial year ending 30 June 2005 said so. Now let me help the UDP Government. I am going to put internet access in the East End Library. I have already secured the computers, and with the permission of the Minister of Education I will do that. However, I hope that he does not have to make a decision on whether or not we can do that because we will never get them in there. I have them; they are in my office in East End. That is what good representation is all about; if you do not get it one way, you do it the next, getting things done. I hear they are up in East End trying to revive one of those old 'has been' politicians too, campaign coming.

One thing I can say in defence of the Minister of Education, he sits here and takes it as well as he gives it, although he is leaving now but I did not intend to run them all out of the Chamber and I am not going to call for a quorum. I will not do that because, at the end of the day, it is all about politics. So if they do not want to listen that is fine. I will sit and listen when they are ready to reply. You know, when it burns you, you have to leave. Two out of nine is not a good record.

Let me go on to another glaring example of how this Government has made promises and is yet to fulfil those promises.

Under Community Services, Youth, Sports and Gender Affairs—

The Speaker: Honourable Member, if you could refer to the pages as you go along it would be helpful to follow you.

Mr. V. Arden McLean: On page 13 of the Throne Speech of 2003, the Governor reported on Cayman Brac and Little Cayman, "After much delay, a revised Children's Law will be presented to the Legislative Assembly during the first half of 2003. This will replace the 1997 law, which proved administratively cumbersome. The review of the current Adoption Law will also be finalised. These legislative advances will allow Social Services to concentrate more clearly on children's services, the goal always being to solve the problem in a way that allows the child to remain with the parent(s) where possible." And on page 19 of the 2004 Throne Speech, the Ministry is going to, "Develop appropriate legislation to safeguard the rights of dependent persons, review legislation governing the Adoption Law and the Review of the Maintenance Law, and develop regulations for the Children's Law 2003." Here we go again; the Government sits down and does not try to fulfil the promises and the goals of our people.

We recognise the urgency to have some of these laws reviewed. What have they been doing? Where have they been? Is it jet-setting all over the world? Europe, Cuba, America, Canada? It is too much jet-setting. We must concentrate on the needs of our people and the UDP Government has failed—another big 'F' for them too.

Now that we are on that subject, the Ministry of Community Services, Youth, Sports and Gender Affairs, I think it is necessary that I turn to housing issues.

Mr. Speaker, when the current Minister assumed responsibility in late 2001, he made a promise to this country that within one year he was going to have 200 affordable homes available for those who could not, under normal circumstances, own a home. I have always applauded any initiative for those less fortunate people that he was referring to.

Two years later on 20 May 2004, the Minister reported as an update on the housing initiative that the estimated latest date of occupation of the homes in West Bay would be 15 July 2004. That date is fast approaching and I hope they are available. However, what is unique about that is that the homes in Windsor Park, in George Town were the first to start. I wonder how the West Bay homes will be completed before those in Windsor Park. Is this the power of the great one? The great one has instructed that those in West Bay be completed first? More power to him. Thus our contention of a long time ago is that the Government consists of five different Governments and one leader, who directs the others as to what to do and the others sit down and close their mouths and he does as he pleases. That is what this country is faced with. The country has the opportunity on 17 November 2004 to stop that, and I plead with them to remove the Government because they honestly need to be removed.

After the much delayed housing initiative, I waited like everyone else for these homes, and on 11 August 2003 I wrote the Minister. With your permission I would like to read that letter.

It said:

"Dear Sir,

"Re: Affordable Housing.

"Having had to opportunity to examine the building materials being used to construct the affordable houses in the Windsor Park area, I wish to make the following observation and suggestions on materials suitable for building as it relates to the district of East End.

"As you are aware, the district of East End is extremely vulnerable to the easterly prevailing winds which brings with it air borne salt spray. The situation invariably causes corrosion with the resulting long term effect of extensive maintenance costs. The materials used for the housing initiative seem to be of a composite of metals not widely used in the Cayman Islands and thus without any proven resistance to these harsh weather conditions necessary for longevity.

"For this reason alone, the material being employed in the current initiative may not be suitable for construction within the district.

"In view of the foregoing I respectfully ask that you and I discuss at your earliest convenience a suitable housing initiative for the people of East End. In addition, upon review of the housing needs of the district it is my position that a start with approximately 30 affordable homes will suffice at this time.

"I look forward to your earliest reply."

That was 11 August 2003. On 16 September 2003, which I suspect was the earliest possible reply time, the Minister replied.

"Dear Mr. McLean,

"I am late in replying to your letter of 11 August partly because it challenge Government's Affordable Housing Programme in so many ways that I could not figure out whether you were just being political. However, after listening to your Leader, Mr. Kurt Tibbetts, speak on 6 September I must now conclude that the remarks in your letter were very much along the lines of his criticism of Government's initiative.

"If your Party is not satisfied by what we are doing to make housing affordable, there is very little, if anything I can do about this aspect of the PPM's political strategy. Nevertheless, I will await with great anticipation the suggestions you will make for your district and I look forward to your suggestion in writing as soon as possible.

"Yours faithfully,

"Dr. the Hon. Frank McField."

Suffice it to say, my letter did not warrant such a reply and I did not reply to him. Therein lies the problem that this country faces under the administration of the UDP. Everything they do is political and about their re-election, unlike the Leader of the Opposition, who is a statesman, politicians they are made up of, look about re-election. The Leader of the Opposition looks for the next generation!

[Applause]

Mr. V. Arden McLean: Therein lies the difference between the UDP Government and the PPM Opposition. One day because the PPM, the same way the UDP is not going away—except they will come back in smaller numbers, that is a maybe—the PPM will also be on that side and then we will lead this country into that same millennium that the Minister of Education talks about.

Mr. Speaker, we cannot have politics involved in this. My job is to represent the people of East End, and when I write a letter the Minister of Housing needs to understand that we went through the same process to get here. There is no difference in me and him and our election to this post and it has nothing to do with me. It has to do with our country! This is our country, but the UDP Government seems to think that it is theirs to do what they want. No such thing! They are mere trustees for four years and this is the last of the four years. It is over!

The fat lady has reached the stage and I am handing her the microphone and the song she is singing is, 'Shall we gather at the river to say farewell and cast our wreaths into the water to be carried away into oblivion.

[Laughter]

Mr. V. Arden McLean: This is the attitude of the Government of the day. Everything the Opposition proposes or asks for is denied. My pockets are not lined with anything other than emptiness; it does not go into my pocket! I do not know whose pocket it goes into, but I know it is not mine and I am not asking for anything for me. I have come here with one promise to the people of East End; to do the best I could while I can. I believe that I have brought to the attention of the Government of the day the needs of the people of East End. However, the UDP Government have worked me right to death. I had to go out and beg for everything.

There are two truths about life that I know: hard work never killed anyone and crying never killed anybody either. I am going to cry because I will stop crying one of these days when we get on that side. Hard work and crying never killed anybody and I am not afraid to do either of them.

You know what is true about the UDP? Many of them are afraid to lose. Too much at stake! Too many promises made and to the wrong people too! I trust they understand that they will not be able to fulfil them after 17 November; we are going to see to that.

Some may think that I am poking fun at it, but that is not the case. Sometimes one should not take kindness for weakness. That is not true because if it is anything Arden McLean has, it is the ability to talk. If it was left to some of them on that side they would have my tongue hanging out of my head and cutting it off, but then I will mumble it and write it down.

The Government will tell this country anything, but if the truth be known, very much has been done in the form of assisting the greater numbers of the people. I will not blame them when they get up and say that people have been helped, but I want the people of this country to understand that they are talking about a select few.

I move on to the issue of policing and protection of our people in this country. A recent spate of crime in a particular area in George Town brought to the forefront the lack of properly equipping our Police Force. On page three of the 2004 Throne Speech under "The Royal Cayman Islands Police Service", the first sentence says, "The Police Department will commence this financial year with a full establishment of officers." The third paragraph down, "They are also considering ways of strengthening our capability for coastal surveillance with the possible purchase of new equipment for drug interdiction and search and rescue.” At least they are warning us that it is only possible. The Government is warning us that this time it is only possible and they might buy it. With the PPM, it is going to be done!

Mr. Speaker, I have begged and beseeched the Government to do something about drug interdiction. We know that our coast line is about one hundred miles. It is impossible for me to appreciate why we cannot cover our coastline more adequately. It takes political will. It appears that the political will now is that that can wait; there are other things that we need to do. It cannot wait! This is endangering our children, the same children that we have no classroom and canteen for. This is an extension of disenfranchising them by the Government not doing something about it.

The whole country knows where the drugs come in yet we cannot catch them. The occasional time we find 2,000 pounds on the beach, we recognise that was already delivered and we were fortunate to pick it up.

Again I make the call to this country and this Government, the same $40 million that is in surplus let us buy a helicopter, boats and a fixed wing plane, and forever the response has been too much recurrent expenditure. How much is too much? No matter what it is, if it saves one life it is worth it. The Minister says it is Alice in Wonderland; he is coming out the door, I am only just going in.

I must commend the Commissioner of Police publicly for the three officers that we now have in East End. I have some very enthusiastic young men who are ready and geared up, getting introduced to the residents of East End, and they are approaching it from a different perspective than many other police who have arrived in the district of East End; not that I believe they did wrong, they had no other way of doing it. The relationships are now being developed with these young men and I am thankful for that and I applaud the Commissioner and the three young officers in East End. They are doing a tremendous job and I think it will continue because some of them are even helping us with projects within the district.

The Budget this year makes provision for the renovation of the Police Station in East End, and I am sure that is as a result of my asking a question about it on this honourable floor. I want to see when repairs will commence.

Mr. Speaker, on a different note, that is also a requirement of the people of East End with regard to Public Works and the likes, we have asked the people and so have I, it was reported in the papers today, a caption on Thursday 8 July 2004 states, “East Enders Slighted”. We have asked for traffic calming devices, particularly along John McLean Drive and there is no response from Public Works and I trust that the Minister will respond to that.

There are many other needs, like roads, in East End. Last year the Government used the maintenance vote to try and repair the main road at Tortuga Club, but this year they have gone elsewhere. That road needs to be properly paved. I know that it will not be in this fiscal year or under this administration, but under the next we will get there.

Before my time is expired there is another subject that I need to get in prior to—

The Speaker: Honourable Member, you have 21 minutes remaining.

Mr. V. Arden McLean: Thank you, Sir.

There are a couple of other subjects that I need to get in before I conclude. However, the one that is very important and dear to my heart at this time is the appeal that your good self made to this country about the separation of the legislature. I wholeheartedly support you with your position on that matter. I believe we may be the only country in the Commonwealth. I am not certain about this so I am subject to correction, but certainly if we are not the only one, there are not many more sharing the same fate where the Speaker has no autonomy.

The Speaker must have autonomy and the staff must be managed by the Speaker. You cannot have the Speaker, who has the responsibility to manage the affairs of the highest office in this land, with no administrative responsibility nor authority. The most appropriate place to put it is under the Speaker. I am not calling for anything new; this is the way it is done in any jurisdiction. The Speaker must have full authority and responsibility. He sits in the Chair and manages parliamentary procedures, but he cannot manage a budget. We need to remove that quick o' clock; not only quick o'clock but before the next General Election. If they do not do it, when we are returned, the first order of the day will be to separate the legislature and let it have full autonomy.

Another area which I would like to touch on is that of the ICTA (Information Communication and Technology Authority). I was as excited about deregulation, liberalisation in this country as anyone else and so the country knows it was started under your and the now Leader of the Opposition's watch in ExCo (Executive Council) at the time. In recent times, however, I have become a little concerned about what has transpired particularly in the telecommunications industry. I thought what we would have done while formulating the liberalisation process was to say to the incumbent provider, 'You cannot and you will not, in the interests of anti-competition, put your rates any lower than providers that are coming in.' That is the commonsensical way of doing it, but it appears like that is not what we did. I know the problems we will have with dominance in the market and the abilities of that established provider and the possibility of them dominating a particular market; but it appears to me that the only persons being disenfranchised here are the people and they have no choice but to go to another provider.

I believe that the services should have dictated who the consumers go to. I want to make it abundantly clear that I hold no brief for anyone other than the consumer, unlike many people who appear to hold briefs for other people. One day, we will all have to disclose our interests.

I do not have all the information on it, but I certainly know from the perspective of seeing the headlines of Wednesday, 23 June 2004, "Cable & Wireless Prices Hiked". The ICTA is ordering them to hike their prices and they are going to court. I recognise I am on thin ice with sub judice but I do not hear it cracking yet.

I am concerned that we may very well be in a situation where, in the not too distant future, many of the services that Cable and Wireless were providing to liberalisation will be higher than what they were pre-liberalisation. I am concerned about that and I draw that to the attention of the Government because they have to be extremely careful. You cannot expect one provider to tow the line on the basis of advice from another provider. I will watch it very keenly.

Point of order

Hon. Gilbert A. McLean: Mr. Speaker, on a point of order.

The Speaker: Honourable Member, would you state your point of order?

Hon. Gilbert A. McLean: If I heard the Member speaking correctly, he has said that the ICTA is regulating telephone rates here on the advice of another, and I think that is extremely erroneous and if that is what he intended to imply, he should withdraw that statement.

The Speaker: I think you have a very valid point, Honourable Member. Having been involved in the process myself, I do know that the ICTA is in collaboration among major providers—Cable & Wireless (CI) Ltd, AT&T Wireless and Digicel—and they have discussed these matters. However, the basis of cost is not on the basis of what another provider is providing but on the basis of what it costs the provider to produce a particular service and that is how it is done.

It would not be done on the basis of one provider recommending to ICTA that they adopt a particular price. That is, in fact, not the proper procedure that is followed and I happen to know that that is indeed a fact. I know that reference is made to the newspapers, but here in Parliament we do not accept the report of newspapers as authentic and that is indeed not the correct procedure.

The Honourable Member may state that, in his opinion, that is the way that it goes, but to say that it is indeed authentic because he has read it in the newspaper is not indeed proper.

So, Honourable Member for East End, if you could qualify what you have said by stating that was the information you received in the newspaper. You cannot prove that is indeed a fact but that is what was published in the newspaper.

Mr. V. Arden McLean: Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

With your permission I would like to qualify what I said and I would like to read from the Caymanian Compass of Wednesday, 23 June 2004.

The Speaker: Honourable Member, when you say that you are qualifying what you said is to the extent that the information you have passed on is not categorical but in accordance with what has been published in newspapers.

Mr. V. Arden McLean: Yes, Sir. I have no empirical evidence in my hand, but what I do have as empirical is the fact that ICTA did not object nor refute what was said in the papers.

There has not been any retraction as yet but please allow me to read a section of this paper.

The Speaker: Please continue, but try to move on.

Mr. V. Arden McLean: Thank you.

On Wednesday, 23 June 2004 The Caymanian Compass says, ICTA on the other hand said that the latest rate reversal was ordered based on not only Digicel's protest and consultation with other telecommunication rivals but also on late information supplied by Cable and Wireless which pointed to earlier faulty data given to the Authority. I am saying that part and parcel of the decision was based on the protest that Cable and Wireless was anti-competition. That is all I am saying.

The Speaker: Honourable Member, I think we have dealt with this particular issue. If you would please continue...

Mr. V. Arden McLean: Thank you, Sir. I will keep a keen eye on the future of what happens in the telecommunication area.

On the subject of CUC, while that is my forte, I am yet to see any final agreement so I cannot, with any authority, comment on what the final results are going to be. It may be a perfect time for me to pause here and pay tribute to Mr. McRob, who was the manager of lines at CUC who passed away a few nights ago doing the job that he does best and loved. He is a good friend of mine and I pay tribute to his contribution to the continuing electrification of this country and to his commitment to contributing to the society. He was always out in the forefront, especially in the CUC community team effort and I pay tribute to my good friend, Mr. McRob.

The Speaker: Honourable Member, you have five minutes remaining.

Mr. V. Arden McLean: Thank you, Sir.

On the issue of CUC, I would like to hope that there are a number of issues involved in the final agreement that will further reduce rates in this country.

We saw in the papers recently that CUC released 11 of its employees and that is a fact, but that is a result of liberalisation not only in the Cayman Islands but anywhere. All shareholders want the same bottom line, so that is what we can expect. I do not know how Government is addressing that, but certainly we now have Caymanians, as a result of liberalisation, out on the streets without a job. Hopefully, they will find jobs soon.

The price of liberalisation has reached us. I would warn the Government in the competition for power generation to be extremely careful with those who would come to compete in this market; be careful with the types of equipment that they bring into this country. I know there are people out on the periphery waiting to bring in used equipment in our county. That is a serious matter and used equipment comes from different sources such as many companies in America that no longer have contracts and are closing down and they have the equipment there with no returns being made on it.

The other issue the Government should consider is removing some of the taxes on diesel to CUC. Right now the tax is 50 cents per gallon on fuel and the cost of fuel makes up about 20 per cent of your bill. It always ranges between 18 and 23 per cent, depending on the cost of fuel. If we are really in tune and want to ensure our people get the benefits, that is where Government can do it; give the country back because CUC was burning around 24 million gallons of fuel. That is $12 million a year that the Government puts in its coffers at 50 cents per gallon.

The Government need to look at that and give back to the people. In other eastern Caribbean countries (I am very knowledgeable of this) there are no duties on fuel, albeit that Trinidad makes fuel. There has always been a concession on import duties for the generation of electricity, and I implore the Government to look at that. If we need to find taxes elsewhere, then we need to do it because this is the one utility in this country that affects everybody. Many people do not have telephone or running water, but they have electricity and that is where the greatest benefit from deregulation, liberalisation, or whatever we want to call it, can be derived for the people.

Mr. Speaker, I thank you and this Honourable House for your indulgence. I know that this is the house of politics, I sincerely respect that. It is a house of debate and counter debate, a house of opinions and I have tried to get my opinion across as best as I can, and I will continue to do that as long as I remain a representative of the people of East End and the wider community.

I take my seat and I expect to take it as well as I gave it. I have no personal animosities against anyone. Whatever they refute it is up to them.

The Speaker: Does any other Member wish to speak? Does any other Member wish to speak? The Second Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman.

Mr. Lyndon L. Martin: Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

I rise to make my contribution to the Throne Speech delivered by His Excellency the Governor, Mr. Bruce Dinwiddy. I will restrict my contribution to the subject matters brought forward by His Excellency and to those added by those who have contributed since his delivery.

I first start my contribution by joining the others by congratulating all that has been part in the renovation, remodelling, refurbishing of the Legislative Assembly. I would like to especially give thanks to you for the final touch that you have added to this beautiful Parliament of ours. I safely say that once more we show that, collectively, we can bring about great things for this country. The original design of this building still stands and we have just added a degree of elegance to the Parliament to make it befitting to the role that it plays within our country.

With that said, I must say that it is unfortunate that within the first sitting in this beautiful, elegant Legislative Assembly that the Elected Member for East End has demonstrated such hogwash as he added to our allowed dictionary in Parliament. He stood here over the last couple of hours and delivered what I can say has been probably his most articulate delivery during his tenure here in Parliament. It is unfortunate that it had such little content.

The people of the good district of East End are very close to me simply because the district in which I represent, we share a lot in character, in culture, and in tradition. I recall when I first moved to Grand Cayman in 1987, when I felt extremely homesick, I felt I needed to go to East End whether that was because I was a little closer home or a little closer to people that I felt were like my people.

The people of the good district of East End deserve good representation. They deserve to have a Member in Parliament that comes and argues on their behalf and represents their issues. They have grown accustomed over the many years of having strong representatives, but more importantly, statesmen. More importantly, individuals who understood the art of politics; understood that when they came here that it was much more than simply writing letters with wish-lists, but came here to Parliament representing the issues of their district, understanding the issues of the nation; understanding the restrictions fiscally as well as understanding the numbers in Parliament.

They understood that relations were an important part in gaining for their district. They understood that diplomacy was extremely important in obtaining good for their district. They did not come here and simply read off what their computer printed out and sent through Her Majesty's mail, but they came here and worked within the political arena; worked with the Government to say, 'I will assist you by supporting the money that you need in order to deliver the service that I am requiring.' They did not come here with a wish-list printed out and at the same time saying, We should also reduce duty to CUC; we should also not increase licence fees on banks.' To simply come and say, 'These are the things I need and I have done my job because I have put it in writing to the Minister,' is inadequate and the people of East End deserve better.

The Member from East End stood here with his folder, outlining the numerous letters that he has written. However, the one thing he cannot outline to the people of East End is that he has actually delivered because he has failed in utilising diplomacy, utilising the art of negotiation, utilising the skill of relation-building to gain for his district. He has proven what they have said about him, all over the years, that Arden is a little too hardened.

Mr. Speaker, the Member stood here today and delivered evidence to this fact. He stood here and showed his parochial politics as he stood here and talked of something that will affect everyone in East End – the school. It is an important issue. It is an issue that I share his concern with; it is an issue that is important for the representatives of each district to look at the education institutions that mould and create our young people into young adults.

I am here to say that this Member stood up here and talked with such vigour and zeal about the need for a cafeteria. I understand, of course, that the people of East End deserve a cafeteria at their school, but it is important that what the Minister of Education has always said is that we should not over focus ourselves just on the physical plant but we must look at results.

We must look at the fact that East End Primary School, under the leadership of the Minister of Education, in the Key Stage Examinations have improved year after year. Why does he not get up there and mention that the UDP Government has equipped the school to bring about results that are positive to the people of East End? Why is it that we do not mention that East End Primary School is considered a "Star School" for the ITALIC Programme, all achieved under the UDP Government, who, he claims, because of him are trying to victimise the people of East End? So far could be from the truth. Why does he not, when he is making those claims, talk of the fact that the good Minister of Community Development (the one he likes to call cousin from George Town), drove across Bodden Town, which does not have a community park, to put a community park in East End? Yet this is the Government who is victimising the people of East End?

I understand that the Member is a little bit edgy about the cracking ice under his feet come 17 November, and looking for all political avenues to strengthen that ice, but the facts are the facts. We have done a lot for East End. Oh! Mr. Speaker, I really apologise for making the Member so nervous he turned up his water, and I will continue.

I would like the people of this Country, especially the good people of East End, to remember that we have identified the concern of East End; we have identified that we need a cafeteria. I remember the list even including new pianos. I remember all of the issues for East End, where we put them in a grand-priority listing. No one could have predicted that the roof would have caved in at our Middle School. No one could have predicted that these things would have altered your priorities, shift around money.

I would like to remind the Honourable Member from East End, the Member of the People's Progressive Movement, that along with his colleagues on 31 December 2001, in this Honourable Legislative Assembly a division was called on the vote of the Appropriation (2002) Bill, 2001, by the Minister of Tourism, Environment, Development, and Commerce. That particular Appropriation included money for the East End cafeteria. The votes were 12 Ayes and five Noes against a budget that included the cafeteria that he stood here and said was so important for his district. The Noes against that budget were the First Elected Member from George Town, the Leader of the Opposition (Mr. Speaker, he was not the Leader of the Opposition at that time, he is now), the Second Elected Member for George Town, the Third Member for Bodden Town, the Elected Member for North Side and the Elected Member for East End.

In representative democracy, the voice that we have in this Parliament on the needs for East End, we would normally hope to rely on this Member here for East End. Luckily, we are a little bit wiser to understand that we cannot rely on the Member from East End to represent all the issues from the district of East End because we know it is important, and we are still committed to bringing about that cafeteria. If my memory serves me correctly, the last budget, the one that just ended on the 30 June, also included a token amount.

Mr. Lyndon L. Martin: I make my statement accurately. There was a sum of $5,000 for the development of plans for the East End cafeteria, in which, I agree Members, it was withdrawn during Finance Committee. At the time it was presented in the Budget, were the Members present to vote for it? Mr. Speaker, as I said, if my memory serves me correctly—and I challenge the Member for East End to show me wrong—at the time of the presentation, even the token amount of $5,000 for the plans for East End, the Member from East End was not present.

Mr. Lyndon L. Martin: The Member for East End who spoke on behalf of the Opposition, as they have adopted as their normal practice, stood up here and talked about the need for a National Library. This is the Government that has delivered a plan for a National Library. We have approval in principle for a National Library. We have taken what they can only talk about and put it into action. We are simply, at this moment, awaiting the necessary logistics over the ownership of the buildings, which will have to be demolished and the bus depot will have to be relocated in order to carry out this joint public and private sector partnership for a National Library to bring about what this country deserves, and what the United Democratic Party is in a position to be able to see that it is needed, not only to talk about it, but to deliver it.

Mr. Speaker, when that Member stands in this Honourable Legislative Assembly and talks about how bad things are in this Country, how poor the governance and management the United Democratic Party is delivering to the people of this country, who is he expecting to believe him? The people out there who are now in work when they were not working under his PPM leadership? Is he expecting the many hoteliers who saw their figures declining, the workers who saw the lack of development in this country under their leadership, under their style of management, to believe him? Or, the United Democratic Party who is now delivering jobs, who is now delivering an economy that is robust? The people of this country can feel secure about their future.

When we remember back in 2001, there was just negativism all over. Everybody felt it. All of us felt it because we were concerned about it. He cannot certainly be expecting the intelligent community of this country to believe that because he gets up in this Legislative Assembly and screams that things are bad, that they are going to believe it when they know differently. Mr. Speaker, we are gifted to have a population that can see through such political rhetoric.

The Leader of the Opposition spoke and in his contribution he started by saying that funds are required to put plans into action. So true! We accept that on this side, but we quantify it even further, because funds alone do not put plans into action. From our side, it is funds derived from the correct source. Simply going out and borrowing against future generations, where my children, your children, your grandchildren will have to pay for our benefit here today is not adequate.

It is important that we always match the project that we are doing to the financing that we are funding it with. If we are going to fund the road that we are going to get benefits for the next 20 years, yes, it is okay to get a 20-year loan to fund it, to distribute the cost along with the period of the benefits – basic finance principle. I really wish that under the leadership of the now Leader of the Opposition that he had understood that to go out and fund day-to-day activities through borrowing way into the future was simply a disaster, a recipe for failure.

I am so happy that the United Democratic Party, which I am a founding member of and a proud founding member of, saw an opportunity to save this country from that type of leadership and within a very short timeframe has turned the country around into what we can now boast about, and he criticises, a surplus position.

It is simply two different philosophies of governance. We believe that we must live within our means. We believe that if our means need to be increased to bring about the benefits to our people, that then we must look at ways of doing that in a sustainable manner through responsible and careful consideration. We picked, we selected to increase licences on financial institutions because we believed, and time has proven us correct, it was the way that we would be able to fund the very same things that we are talking about here today without having an overall negative impact.

The people of this country have seen the results of that action. We here in the Legislative Assembly who are willing to admit—and I am not expecting the Opposition to be willing to admit—will see that it has proven to be correct. The country is in a much better financial position, so now we can address the issues at hand. We had three years to clean up the mess that they created in one year. I will not put all the blame on them because they inherited a lot of it from a colleague out in George Town and in West Bay.

It would be a fearful day; it would be a day that I would really dread if those who were responsible for that inherited problem in 2000, when we came in here that we all know about and those who were there from 2000–2001 and worsened that problem were to get together and form a government.

Mr. Speaker, I really hope for the sake of this country that we call home that we do not see that happen. I have great trust, great hope and great belief that the wisdom of our people will not allow for that to happen.

So much of the PPM's political rhetoric centres around education. So much centres around the only Minister of Government that has been supported by both sides of this Chamber to become Minister of Education. He is the double Minister of Education. So much has been attacked. So much has been said about his style of managing education resources of this country.

When I was an Opposition Member, elected in 2000, when I sat on the other side, the Minister of Education at that time gave me an opportunity to be part of the education process of this country by appointing me as a Member of the Education Council and Chairman of the Cayman Brac and Little Cayman Education Board. This provided me an opportunity to work side by side, in many cases, with the Minister, to understand his education policy and his direction for education in this country.

Mr. Speaker, I will be the first to tell you, there have been many cases during that tenure of time that we have had our differences; but I am the first to tell you also that the one thing that I have never disagreed on is that education now has direction. The Minister has a plan for education and he has achieved a tremendous stride towards his ultimate goal for education in this country. Just within my district, in my constituency, I see the benefit of having the combined Spot Bay and Creek School.

I do not partake in cross-talk, but it was a point that I was going to talk on anyway. As I stated, throughout the tenure of time that I have worked in education with the Minister, we have had our differences. One of our differences was about the combined school with Creek and Spot Bay; with the closure of Spot Bay. The records of this Parliament and the records in the Caymanian Compass and CITN that carried the public meeting in the Brac will show that I fought vigorously against the closure of Spot Bay Primary School. I stand on that record strongly.

However, what is now in place is a completely different ballgame. All schools are open; all children are benefiting. There are no more double classes in Spot Bay and Creek. Everyone is benefiting and we are seeing positive results. That is the type of management of education that the Minister brings along. When he walked into that office after being elected as a Minister of Education, he walked in with a briefcase, but more importantly, a head full of knowledge about education and a vast amount of experience over his shoulders.

We have an opportunity to transform education through the passage of a new education law in this country, which I have spent many days in the Education Council along with the other hardworking Members of the Council working on this law with the Minister who chairs the Council; working diligently. I am sure that the Members who got up here and talked about the long time that this law has been talked about, once they see the comprehensiveness of this piece of legislation, once they take time and read it, they will truly understand why something that is so dynamic would take a lot of time.

I can tell you and I can tell this Honourable Legislative Assembly that the Minister of Education is committed to transforming education; is committed to ensuring that the students who come out of our high school are well prepared for the workforce. He is a Minister who is committed and understanding that there is much more than just the academic side but also the vocational side. He is a Minister who has seen, during his tenure, record numbers of tertiary scholarships granted, an opportunity to develop the University College of the Cayman Islands where our young parents can go and further their education without going overseas; where those in the workforce can go and pursue higher learning without going overseas; where even you in your spare time may go and lecture in accounting in our University College. It is a fabulous development. It is one that should never be belittled. It is one that should never be overlooked, and that happened under the leadership and through the desire and hard work of the Minister of Education, our Minister of Education.

Questions have been put about the support to the Minister. The Minister receives all the support necessary from the Back Bench and from the Government. The Minister of Education is the first to get up and argue for education, but he also understands that for the country, as a whole, there are priorities all over and he ensures that, at all times, education remains the paramount importance to the United Democratic Party.

So I take this opportunity of sharing with you and the Honourable Members of this Legislative Assembly my experience in dealing with the Honourable Minister of Education, a man who is shiny with words but even more profound with action, a man who is committed to ensuring that his children, your children, all of our children get a good education, a man who is committed to ensuring that parents take responsibility for their children.

I am saddened by the quality of the Opposition that they could come up in this Honourable Legislative Assembly where they know better and the centre focus of their debate would be on the poor job that the Minister of Education is doing. They know better; they see the results; they see the Key Stage Examinations; they see that our children are performing.

Mr. Speaker, three Fridays ago I attended the first and only graduation in Little Cayman. What an opportunity that was to see one student graduate from the education service of Little Cayman!

I would like to remind this Honourable Legislative Assembly, as I reminded the people present at the graduation service which was well attended in Little Cayman, that that education service was first created by a Member of the United Democratic Party and is now being supported by the Honourable Minister of Education. So, I feel great pride when I see the results in Little Cayman because a school is absolutely important for any community to develop. We now have young people in Little Cayman, living in Little Cayman and building their homes in Little Cayman because there is an education service present there.

The Member from East End also spoke of the proposed dock for East End and, as he termed it, the proposed airport for East End. He talks of his 500 signatures on a petition against the dock. I think the petition was limited to the dock, not the airport. Mr. Speaker, in the same instance when he stood and talked of why he does not want the dock, why he does not want that development in East End, he talked about the hardship of the people of East End. He talked about the neglect the United Democratic Party gave to the people of East End. Mr. Speaker, how could he do that all in one breath?

We are focusing our attention on bringing a major development to the district that would create many jobs, not just the jobs at the dock but the many auxiliary services around, the gas stations that would benefit and the restaurants that would benefit from having that increase in population in that area during the work day. How can he say that this Government is neglecting East End? So far could be from the truth. However, the Honourable Member is a friend of mine and I am confident that he knows better, nevertheless, politics make people say strange things. I urge the Honourable Member for East End to give careful consideration and reconsider what he has said here today, reconsider the attacks that he has made on the good Minister of Education and remember that he himself previously supported the very same Minister for the Minister of Education.

I would like to now move briefly to a subject even more important to me, but I thought it appropriate to deal a little bit with the Member from East End – the district which I have had the privilege of representing for the past three-plus years.

The district of Cayman Brac and Little Cayman has bestowed upon me one of the greatest privileges that I have had in my life. I spent many years of my life pursuing tertiary education to that of a Master's level, but I can easily say that the three and a half years that I have spent here have taught me more than any degree could teach me.

It is an obligation that I feel within myself to continue to offer myself as a candidate in the upcoming election for re-election on 17 November 2004.

I looked carefully over the past three and a half years at the major developments and achievements that we have made. I would like to focus the remaining contribution to this Throne Speech on what I consider to be the major achievements for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman and the ongoing plans for its continual development.

I take this opportunity to thank you, Mr. Speaker. During your tenure as the Minister responsible for Planning, you brought about the ad hoc Development of Cayman Brac 2003 – 2007 report. From that report and the follow-up report done by Deloitte & Touche, as well as ongoing work done by the Tourism Enhancement Committee and the District Administration Office, there is much wealth of information at our disposal to understand better what is necessary to make Cayman Brac and Little Cayman a sustainable, viable partner in the Cayman Islands.

For the remaining time, I would also like to look at the Constitution issues and how they affect Cayman Brac and Little Cayman. Mr. Speaker, I will beg your indulgence and beg this Honourable Legislative Assembly's indulgence that we look collectively at ways that we can support the Government in ensuring that Cayman Brac—especially Cayman Brac—is put on strong, firm economic standing.

Currently, the people of Cayman Brac are looking for ways of improving its economy, and I hope to focus the remaining time on some of those ideas. I also look forward to those who speak after me to not focus on ways that they can attack me, but ways that they can make positive contribution to the debate and dialogue on the economic development of Cayman Brac.

I bring to your attention that we are approaching the adjournment, and I will be moving on to a new section in my contribution. I am happy to commence a new section but I leave that to your discretion.

ADJOURNMENT

The Speaker: I think this is a good time for us to take the adjournment. We have just five minutes to go, but we would like to accommodate the Honourable Member. So, I would now call on the Deputy Leader of Government Business to move the Adjournment Motion.

Hon. Gilbert A. McLean: Mr. Speaker, I move the adjournment of this Honourable House until Monday at 10 am.

The Speaker: The question is that this House do now adjourn until 10 am on Monday, 12 July 2004. All those in favour please say Aye. Those against No.

Ayes.

The Speaker: The Ayes have it.

At 4.26 pm the House stood adjourned until 10 am Monday, 12 July 2004.

OFFICIAL HANSARD REPORT
MONDAY
12 JULY 2004
11:00 AM
Fourth Sitting

The Speaker: I will invite the Elected Member for East End to lead us in Prayers.

PRAYERS

Mr. V. Arden McLean: Let us pray.

Almighty God, from whom all wisdom and power are derived: We beseech Thee so to direct and prosper the deliberations of the Legislative Assembly now assembled, that all things may be ordered upon the best and surest foundations for the glory of Thy Name and for the safety, honour and welfare of the people of these Islands.

Bless our Sovereign Lady, Queen Elizabeth II; Philip, Duke of Edinburgh; Charles, Prince of Wales; and all the Royal Family. Give grace to all who exercise authority in our Commonwealth, that peace and happiness, truth and justice, religion and piety may be established among us. Especially we pray for the Governor of our Islands, the Speaker of the Legislative Assembly, Official Members and Ministers of Cabinet and Members of the Legislative Assembly, that we may be enabled faithfully to perform the responsible duties of our high office. All this we ask for Thy great Name's sake.

Let us say The Lord's Prayer together: Our Father, who art in Heaven, Hallowed be Thy Name. Thy Kingdom come, Thy will be done on earth as it is in Heaven. Give us this day our daily bread, and forgive us our trespasses, as we forgive those who trespass against us. Lead us not into temptation, but deliver us from evil. For Thine is the Kingdom, the power and the glory, forever and ever. Amen.

Proceedings resumed at 11.02 am

The Speaker: Please be seated. Proceedings are resumed.

READING BY THE HONOURABLE
SPEAKER OF MESSAGES
AND ANNOUNCEMENTS

Apologies

The Speaker: I have received apologies for the late arrival of the Minister of Education, Human Resources, and Culture, the Honourable Leader of the Opposition and the First Elected Member for George Town. Also apologies for absence from the Second Elected Member for West Bay.

STATEMENTS BY MEMBERS OF THE GOVERNMENT

The Speaker: I have received no notice of statements by Members of the Government.

GOVERNMENT BUSINESS

Debate on the Address Delivered by His Excellency the Governor on Friday 2 July, 2004

(Continuation of debate thereon)

The Speaker: The Second Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman continuing with his debate.

Mr. Lyndon L. Martin: Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

I would like to first commence by apologising to you and the Honourable Members of the Legislative Assembly for my late arrival to the Legislative Assembly this morning. It was beyond my control as the plane was delayed in Cayman Brac. However, Mr. Speaker, I am happy and express my gratitude to the Legislative Assembly for awaiting my arrival to allow me my opportunity to continue this very important debate and contribution to the Throne Speech.

Mr. Speaker, when I concluded on Friday I undertook that my housekeeping exercise of cleaning up some of the inaccuracies conveyed by the Member for East End had been concluded and I would go on to dealing with the issues of my district of Cayman Brac and Little Cayman. However, Mr. Speaker, one more point. During the Member's debate, on the Throne Speech, I attempted to rise on a point of elucidation. However, he exercised his right under our Standing Orders of not giving way and encouraged that I deal with that point of elucidation during my contribution.

Mr. Speaker, I was a bit dismayed at the Member's claim of the Learning Centre of East End being the pilot programme. I do not dispute the fact that it is the pilot programme, but he claimed it as his learning centre. I take great disrespect to that Member for proclaiming that the Learning Centre is his rather than that of the people of East End. I think they equally contributed to its development and formation and ultimately should be the beneficiaries of that learning centre.

Mr. Speaker, the Member also went to great lengths to attempt to paint the United Democratic Party (UDP) Government as one who was ignoring the people of East End, referring to the United Democratic Government as treating the people of East End as stepchildren. Mr. Speaker, in my contribution on Thursday, I stressed the fact that one part of the evidence of the inaccuracy of that claim is the contribution made by the Ministry of Community Development to that district's quality of life through the development of a very beautiful park. Mr. Speaker, that Member, who rightfully so in an election year attempted to play a lot of parochial politics – district based politics – I would like him to remember the controversy that surrounded the naming of that beautiful park in the district that he represents. I understand from the Minister, as well as others very involved in the district of East End, that there could be no more appropriate name. I think it is the grandfather or great-grandfather of the Member for East End, yet we are the ones who are being claimed as victimising him. The United Democratic Party is punishing the people of East End because of him. Mr. Speaker, nothing could be further from the truth.

I celebrated my 34th birthday yesterday. I am very happy to find myself in this position at this very young age, with an opportunity to represent what a good friend of mine, Mr. Steve Foster, refers "God's gifted land of Cayman Brac and Little Cayman". I find it a great privilege to be along with such great company in the United Democratic Party as I undertake to fulfil my commitment to the people of Cayman Brac in providing them with strong, fair, reasonable, representation in the Legislative Assembly.

Mr. Speaker, I ask and invite this Honourable Legislative Assembly to take the issue of Cayman Brac's development very seriously. Understand that this goes beyond just politics and who has the upper hand. Cayman Brac is a beautiful Island with a population of somewhere around 1,400 or 1,500 people with modern telecommunication service with a great, modern road network; with jet service coming into the Island three days per week, and on many occasions, four days augmented by two Twin Otters and Cayman Airways three times per day; Island Air Service three times per day. It is a recipe for success. The Island's infrastructure is greater than you would expect for an island of that size. We have a hospital in Cayman Brac, the Faith Hospital that has a full array of service – it is not just a clinic, it is a full hospital – with, and the Minister of Health can correct me, I think four or five doctors. There are four doctors, specialists at Faith Hospital.

Mr. Speaker, it is an Island with a modern dock facility, all of the ingredients for a successful Island economy. However, in comparison with the people of Grand Cayman, the people of Cayman Brac are not enjoying the growth, the prosperity that we would have expected given the infrastructure. It is every individual's goal, aim, and aspiration to leave behind something greater than he inherited. That is a challenge for everyone in Cayman Brac because the economy of Cayman Brac is not as strong; the population is not as large as it was twenty years ago.

Mr. Speaker, we must search deep and hard to understand the roots behind the problem with the economic situation in Cayman Brac, and it requires dynamic management and change to the economic structure of Cayman Brac to bring about the type of recovery necessary. Just a few weeks ago, 14 graduates from Cayman Brac High School all faced the challenge, Monday morning, following their Saturday graduation, of how do they earn a living. Inevitably, 60, 80, 90 per cent of them will have to leave.

Mr. Speaker, it is a problem, one that should concern every Member of the Legislative Assembly, because an island economy such as the Cayman Islands, it is so small and our land mass and in our population and all of our resources must attempt to utilize every component of our resource, including Cayman Brac. We must seek ways as a Legislative Assembly, collectively, to bring about that recovery, to bring about a change in the whole economic structure, because to simply allow what is there to grow is not enough. We must ultimately change the whole platform to which the economy stands in Cayman Brac.

The people of Cayman Brac are proud people; we are hardworking people; we are people that have been able to stretch our dollars and all of our resources farther to meet the multiple needs of this small economy. It hurts me, not only as a representative but as a Cayman Bracer, when I hear constant questions and concerns. I remember it being voiced by the same Member from East End of why such large percentage of the road budget should be allocated to Cayman Brac and Little Cayman.

Just this past week Friday when we were in Little Cayman driving through the unpaved roads, it hurt me that these Members do not understand that we are on a completely different level of economic development. That it will require a greater proportion than normal to bring Cayman Brac and Little Cayman to the same economic platform as that of Grand Cayman. I urge the Honourable Members of this Legislative Assembly to thoroughly familiarize themselves with the needs and issues of Cayman Brac. I will attempt, in the remaining time to outline some of those as well as some of the options available and attempt at any occasion to highlight the contributions made to Cayman Brac and Little Cayman's economic development under the leadership of the United Democratic Party.

Mr. Speaker, I want to briefly touch on the Constitution. I will not attempt to go into all of the details of the Constitution, just that of which I would like considered and potentially debated during the upcoming election to provide us with some good working information; once we the United Democratic Party, return to office on 17 November.

Mr. Speaker, Cayman Brac and Little Cayman are very different from Grand Cayman. The events, the challenges that they face on a daily basis are very different from what you face over here in Grand Cayman. Mr. Speaker, I am of the strong view that the Islands of Little Cayman and Cayman Brac need to have, within the Constitution, some availability, some provision that allows for a district council; that allows for a group of individuals who select two representatives or if the Legislature of the Cayman Islands is kind enough, maybe three to come over to represent the issues of Cayman Brac and Little Cayman.

This Council would be the body that is drawn from all the districts of Cayman Brac and Little Cayman and ensure that all of the opinions, views and issues are dealt with on a domestic basis that it has some power, some authority that allows for some of the decisions that now have to be made over in Grand Cayman to be made by this district council. This is no new concept but it is a concept that I think needs to be added to the array of subjects to be debated under our Constitution and the need for a modern Constitution. Mr. Speaker, from the time I entered the Legislative Assembly, I have constantly thought about the difference in our economy that is brought about by the fact that Grand Cayman operates on a twin-pillar economy – that of tourism and financial services.

Our entire structure of taxation, or the absence thereof, our basic consumption tax is predicated on the need of protecting and ensuring the financial industry and I believe it is absolutely necessary to continue that structure. However, as you will know (and this Honourable Legislative Assembly will appreciate) that particular structure is one that does not discriminate against those who have wealth and those who are in our lower income level. A consumption tax system is one that taxes across the board, which has a negative impact of the economy of Cayman Brac and Little Cayman. That is, we have a significant percentage of our population in the lower income level and we still have incomes at our hotels in the Brac that are in $2 or $3 an hour. However, the benefits from the financial industry that creates the need to have this system are not realised in Cayman Brac, they are simply centred in George Town.

In 1996 and in 2000 I advocated the need for looking at creating a separate registry in Cayman Brac; one in which is aimed after the other sectors of the Global financial industry that our premium financial centre is currently not attracting. There are many financial structures that need to be created on a short-term basis that currently the Cayman Islands does not benefit from simply because we are a premium centre. We are a centre that is not the most cost effective – not the least expensive centre to form companies—so we lose some of that business which goes to some of the lower-cost jurisdictions. I believe that we can have the best of both worlds because there is a lot to be said about having a company registered in the Cayman Islands. That company earns international respect.

At the same time I do believe that there is a market that could allow some of the financial services business to be done in Cayman Brac at a lower cost, as is the structure of most Government licenses and registrations. Mr. Speaker, this would create some white-collar work, much needed in any economy. Currently, our domestic economy in Cayman Brac does not allow for (I would not say) healthy or mediocre domestic commerce. Mr. Speaker, the population is too small and the income levels earned within that population are too little.

Over the years there have been many studies conducted that have one common conclusion. If action is not taken urgently the economy is faced with many challenges and the Governments are faced with many decisions. The provision of the offspring financial services business . . . and we would not be any originator of that thought. Many twin-island states who offer financial services will have different fees, different rules, different regulations that will govern them according to the two or three different islands that make up that island state.

Mr. Speaker, recently I had the privilege of travelling with my good friend like I often do, the Member from East End, and we were in Nevis (the year before we were in St. Kitts) and we learned of the uniqueness between those two islands that carry one government. They have the ability to actually offer a full array of financial services each and independently, and in many cases competing with each other. I think there is much to learn from that type of structure and I think it is something that we need to look at and pursue.

I mentioned the financial services at this time when we are talking about the Constitution because for this to occur, the district council is necessary. The district council in Cayman Brac would be responsible for the establishment of the regulations for the industry in Cayman Brac. Additionally, the mention of the financial services is important when talking about the Constitution because as we have seen over the recent years, many of the initiatives that are imposed upon us by our Mother Country or other entities such as the (Organisation for Economic Cooperation and Development) OECD, are based on the financial industry. They are based on imposing regulations according to the sponsor of these that will create an even playing field. Mr. Speaker, where currently in Cayman Brac and Little Cayman there is no financial services, we are exposed to all of the same pressures that is felt in Grand Cayman because of the financial industry. We are not in a position to be able to predict the future. We do not know what manoeuvres, what decisions will have to be made in the future to protect the financial industry. I think it is time that a provision is placed within our Constitution that allows for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman to determine its future on its own.

A provision is allowed in the Constitution that allows for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman through some form of referendum; make their own decisions about its future, where decisions are made in Grand Cayman to protect its financial industry or to protect some other form of interest that might not be in the best interest of Cayman Brac and Little Cayman that currently do not have the financial industry.

Mr. Speaker, as I commenced my contribution I stated that Cayman Brac's recovery is not a simple one. If it was simple it would have been done a long time ago. Many governments have tried it over the past twenty years and have not been successful. It requires some dynamic changes.

I would like to move on to a very important sector in Cayman Brac and, to a lesser extent, Little Cayman, the agriculture sector. Mr. Speaker, in an earlier occasion in this Honourable Legislative Assembly, I had an opportunity to thank the Minister of Agriculture for his contribution to that particular sector within Cayman Brac. For the first time, under his leadership, we now have an agriculture ground; and an annual agriculture show that has just seen its second successful year under the leadership of the Honourable Minister of Agriculture. That in itself, of creating an opportunity for our farmers to showcase their produce, their animals; is an opportunity that has worked on encouraging agriculture. However, the Minister and the United Democratic Party did not stop at just creating the show; the entire Department has been revamped, retooled. We have seen the produce during the yam harvesting double, quadruple, because of better pesticide programmes.

We were plagued in Cayman Brac with various diseases that were eating away at the yams. Due to the retooled Department of Agriculture an intensive programme was carried out to spray thousands of gallons of pesticides to bring this disease under control. We have now seen the benefits of this programme. This is the sort of thing that goes with the fundamentals of agriculture – it is management, understanding the issues that are being faced by your farmers and aggressively providing the expertise and the resources to counter some of those challenges.

We have seen under the leadership of the United Democratic Party, a large animal pound developed on the Bluff and a small animal pound developed behind the Agriculture Department. These two facilities together allow the Agriculture Department to better manage the stray animal population on Cayman Brac. This does not only affect the livestock farmers, it also affects the produce farmers, who experienced these cows getting out and eating their produce. Under the leadership of the United Democratic Party and the Minister of Agriculture, a large animal pound has been completed, developed, it is there. It is working and a small animal pound is operational and now the Humane Society has what they have been requesting. I take the opportunity to give credit for the lobbying efforts made by the Humane Society of Cayman Brac to have these pounds in place.

These are some of the developments that have been done. We have a programme by the development of a holding tank that is about to be embarked on to assist the farmers on the Bluff with water. The public will be able to get water with a floating valve system, hooked to a small motor to a well that will keep topping up the holding tank and allows the farmers to get access to better quality water for their animals on the Bluff. Mr. Speaker, as you and everyone else in this Legislative Assembly can imagine, the challenge of getting water on the Bluff is a daunting one, and many of our farmers, especially during the prolonged drought, had many challenging days. This is an opportunity that I understand will be available to them within the very near future. The exact location and the mechanism of doing so have been identified, and I look forward to seeing it.

Mr. Speaker, I call upon the Government to continue their efforts in providing abattoirs in the Cayman Islands. It is my opinion and my position that adjacent to the large animal-holding pound is the ideal location for the development of a small abattoir for Cayman Brac. We have the facility already in place, property is already owned; it does not have to be extravagant, it just has to be a hygienic environment for our local farmers to butcher and properly hold their livestock. Mr. Speaker, I know that this is not an original idea, because I know it is one currently being looked at by the Ministry and the Department. So much of farming and agriculture is about education and the more farmers know about their particular produce or animal and how to care for those animals, the better you will get in product.

Cayman Brac is still free of liver fluke, whereas we have a controlled problem here in Grand Cayman. Liver fluke is one that is still not present in Cayman Brac and Little Cayman and it is important that we educate our farmers along the way of how important that is; why it is necessary to quarantine animals when they are shipped to our Island. It is hard sometimes to understand. You are coming from within the country. Why do you have to quarantine them? However, it is important. We have farmers that are keeping animals too long, too old. We need to continue to educate them. We must understand that farming is about gaining a greater yield than the cost put into that animal. There comes a point where the growth of that animal multiplied by the price per pound does not exceed the cost of getting that pound of growth.

Mr. Speaker, I hear many arguing that the Government needs to do more in agriculture by providing lower cost animal feed. The feed in the Cayman Islands is subsidised already, and in Cayman Brac it is double subsidised because it is sold at the same price here in Grand Cayman, which is already sold at a loss. It is provided. What we need is an education programme to ensure that the farmers are feeding the appropriate feed for their animal. There are only two types of cow feed provided in Cayman Brac, and there are over eight provided in Grand Cayman according to the different growth rates of the animals, types and requirements. It is important that we educate our farmers along the way to ensure that agriculture continues its positive development.

Mr. Speaker, de-worming is a necessity in farming because an animal infected by a worm can be fed as much as he wants and he will not grow. We need to educate our farmers along the way to ensure that there is a proper systematic programme in place to de-worm our animals.

As I started on the subject of agriculture, I stated that the new Agriculture Department (and I term it as new because even the old school building that they occupy looks new) is nicely painted up; the yard has been redone; it has new sand, addition, air-conditioned; and more importantly, it is now tooled and equipped to address these issues. It has its resources available. Mr. Speaker, I was amazed recently at some of the abilities that are available right there on Cayman Brac, some of the capabilities of the Agriculture Department to scientifically determine particular species so they can better select the remedies.

Mr. Speaker, I take this opportunity to once more thank Mr. Telford Miller for his contribution to the development of agriculture over the last couple of years. He has done a lot of work in Cayman Brac. I also would like to thank the long-term serving member of Agriculture Department, Mr. Melvin MacFarlane, who is the most skilful human being I have seen in the field. There is no one who can herd up a group of cows, sneer them and put them in the trailer, and treat them like I have seen Melvin do on several occasions.

Mr. Speaker, I conclude my section on agriculture by once more thanking the Honourable Minister who has taken agriculture to a new level in Cayman Brac through the introduction, for the first time, of an Agriculture Show on an annual basis, and I thank the United Democratic Party for supporting this venture and the agriculture sector of Cayman Brac. Mr. Speaker, not to neglect Little Cayman, because, as mentioned recently in Finance Committee, there is a request before the Ministry in which I understand will hopefully reach some positive result for a pig farm in Little Cayman adjacent to the garbage dump area. Farming agriculture is an important sector for any economy.

I now move to our single pillar, our foundation for survival in Cayman Brac and Little Cayman—Tourism. Mr. Speaker, so much has been done and it is important that I take the opportunity to outline some of the achievements for tourism in Cayman Brac and some of the things in the works in tourism for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman. I urge the frequent callers to the talk show that have nothing more to do than to complain and to take an opportunity to attack the Leader of Government Business about tourism, about cruise ship business for Cayman Brac, to take time and understand what is being done and what is in the works. Mr. Speaker, it is my opinion that one of the greatest opportunities available to tourism in Cayman Brac right now is an initiative that was authored by the Leader of Government Business, the Minister of Tourism. The day trips of cruise ship passengers I have mentioned in this Honourable Legislative Assembly before, but it is one that needs to be elaborated upon.

When I first had the opportunity to meet with the Florida Caribbean Cruise Ship Association (FCCA) on the invitation of the Leader of Government Business, the Minister of Tourism, I will never forget it because the Honourable Leader, the United Democratic Party Leader, suggested very strongly to the FCCA; you need to talk to the Second Elected Member for Cayman Brac because you need to do something over there to assist them with getting cruise ship business to Cayman Brac.

I mentioned in this Honourable Legislative Assembly last Thursday the importance of diplomacy, negotiating skills and highlighted the absence of those skills in the Elected Member for East End—the man who is termed as being too hardened. Mr. Speaker, the Leader of Government Business, when negotiating with the FCCA utilised every form of negotiating skills that the textbook would describe. He utilised every form of diplomacy to say, 'You want to continue to do business with us, and we want to continue to do business with you. However, we need to ensure that all of our people benefit.' As a result of his effort and the continual effort of the United Democratic Party, we had a visit from a team from the FCCA to Cayman Brac. They viewed the proposal and made a report back to the Government to say that, 'We see what you have and your proposal is one that would better augment the offerings of the Cayman Islands and one that is workable.' I think 6 October is the date of the Florida Caribbean Cruise Ship Association conference to be hosted here in Grand Cayman, and it is the position of those involved in the project of daytrips to be represented there to showcase this project and to have it launched.

Mr. Speaker, the daytrip is one that has so much offspring; so many positive side effects. These passengers would arrive in George Town—and we looked at the statistics of how many passengers on the cruise lines are repeat customers who came last year and saw Stingray City; went on the Hell tour; went to the Turtle Farm and are looking for something new. This is an opportunity where they could board a bus in George Town and take a ride way out while getting an orientation of Cayman Brac to the terminal to be boarded upon one of the jets to fly over in the only opportunity, the only tour in the Cayman Islands that allows you to see the three Cayman Islands. We would fly over Grand Cayman; Little Cayman; the east part of Cayman Brac as they come back to land at the west end of Cayman Brac and then to board and undertake one of two tours.

The tours are defined by the level of excursion – two different levels – one being a hiking tour and one being a more tranquil museum and heritage house, some of the scenic sight tours. However, Mr. Speaker, it means that the plane that went over at nine o'clock in the morning to carry these passengers would then be available to bring passengers out of Cayman Brac [between] 9.30 and 9.45, an ideal time to catch into the traffic hub here in George Town for our passengers who are living at our hotels. It is important to see the positive impact that this programme could have on stay-over visitors because they would not have to leave out at 6.30 in the morning, they could leave out at 9.45 in the morning and catch into their ongoing traffic. Then the plane that would be coming back over to Cayman Brac to pick up these passengers at 2.30, 3.00, and 4.00 o'clock in the evening would then be available to bring passengers over who arrive in during your midday hub of arrivals.

Day trips do not only have a potential of creating some ten jobs – and ten jobs in Cayman Brac is a major, major achievement – but also assisting the restaurants because they would buy lunches at the restaurants; souvenirs, t-shirts, spend money in the economy; and what an opportunity that would be for us to advertise our product; to showcase our product for the four, five or six hours that they are on our Island.

On the way going back over to Grand Cayman on the 18-minute flight, they would be told of ways that they can come back and spend a week; spend two weeks; possibly be given a token that they could use towards their return trip. Mr. Speaker, it is a fantastic opportunity to build upon the tourism industry for Cayman Brac, and it also has positive impact on your domestic traffic because it is a good time to fly.

I have stated in this Honourable Legislative Assembly before that when you start from nothing and you increase, it is okay, it is good. When you start from a history of having jet service, it is hard to adjust backwards. So, Mr. Speaker, I understand: the figures; the need to make it viable; why it is not viable to have jet service five days, seven days of the week to Cayman Brac; why we needed to refocus on the days that we have enough traffic. I understand that, however, this programme would allow for Cayman Airways to make jet service to the Brac a viable option every day of the week when they are carrying the cruise ship passengers to and fro Cayman Brac.

Mr. Speaker, continuing on with Tourism, my good friend from East End always converses with me – and he has said it in this Honourable Legislative Assembly – that domestic tourism is very important to Cayman Brac. He is so correct in this instance, as we all know there are many instances (most instances) he is not. However, in this instance he is very correct.

Mr. Speaker, domestic tourism. This upcoming weekend is Jet Around Cayman Brac. I assure you and I assure this Honourable Legislative Assembly that all flights will be full; all cars will be rented; all hotels will be occupied, when you have an event like this that draws traffic from Grand Cayman; and this is just one event. We have the Agriculture Show for which you have special jet service to carry people over and bring them back because of the amount of people that want to go. We have Pirates Week celebrations. We have ongoing events such as the fishing tournament.

It is absolutely necessary that we plan every long weekend with a theme. Every opportunity, every seasonal downturn in our economy, in our tourism figures we should plan an event to supplement that by domestic tourism because, I can tell you as an entrepreneur within that community, domestic tourism pays, domestic tourism spends. When the visitors come from Grand Cayman we feel the impact – the grocery stores, the supermarkets, the gas stations, the car rentals. Everyone experiences the benefits of that domestic tourism. We must understand that when the very valuable stay-over visitors come from North America or wherever, most of the time they are restricted or they stay at the hotels and most of the benefits are accumulated at the hotels. However, this domestic tourist business . . . and I must once more highlight the impact of when the footballers come over . . . the sports people, the cricketers come over, it is a major, major contribution to our society. When we have domino tournaments and the East Enders come over to play, we can feel it. It helps, it contributes to our survival.

What we need to do is to ensure that we have the capability, the resources that allow for us to target particular weekends, particular periods of time throughout the calendar year and have it well promoted in advance that this is going to be the Brac Jackpot; the Barracuda Bonanza; the time for the Jet around Cayman Brac; and it is well known. A community calendar is produced in Cayman Brac and these events are highlighted and there are special air, accommodation and rental packages that are put together to encourage visitors to come over. Many of the 40,000 plus people in Grand Cayman have never been to Cayman Brac. Many of the visitors that come here, if they knew about these events and about Cayman Brac and Little Cayman, would take that opportunity to include it into their visit. There are many work-permit holders and retirees here in Grand Cayman that have never been to the other parts of the Cayman Islands, and in my opinion, the most precious part of the Cayman Islands, the jewel that is unspoiled. Mr. Speaker, I say that and I am sorry if I offend anyone, but it is how I feel.

We need to see bulletin boards at the airport promoting Cayman Brac and Little Cayman to our stay-over visitors here in George Town. We need to see them visible in the Caymanian Compass promoting them right here in Grand Cayman, and to do so we need to have an organisation, an entity physically present on Cayman Brac to deal with this. The Department of Tourism has gone a long way under United Democratic Party Leadership by having an officer devoted to Cayman Brac and Little Cayman. As I am here to advocate for employment in Cayman Brac and Little Cayman, I would like to see those officers responsible for the promotion and the maintenance of the tourism industry, physically present in Cayman Brac. I take it even further. When you leave Cayman Brac's airport, in front of you is a small sign that says, 'Welcome to Cayman Brac,' and a site that was previously occupied by two old buildings that has recently been reduced to one old building that is not occupied. I would love to see the Department of Tourism building that is currently all the way to the west point of the Island (which was previously a Port Authority building) transported down there. I would like to see that relocated on this piece of property, and as you exit the airport with a nice white-sand yard [you see] this old Cayman-style building with a white-sand yard with some conch shells and some hibiscus plants that says, 'Welcome to Cayman Brac. Bring your comments, suggestions or concerns to the Department of Tourism' and we would have dedicated tourism officers within that unit that would see about things, like promoting domestic tourism, better orchestrating our marketing campaign internationally.

Mr. Speaker, although I do not have any empirical evidence before me here today, when it comes to spending on promotion for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman, I can risk saying that we the United Democratic Party, have put more in the coffers for promoting Cayman Brac and Little Cayman than any Government in the past.

Mr. Speaker, I thank the Leader of Government Business, the Minister of Tourism. I have made these suggestions for ways that I think can improve our administration of that very important industry. It is not a large industry. In total we have some 300 rooms available. It is imperative that we continue to promote the full occupancy of those rooms and we continue the effort made so far by the Leader of Government Business, the Minister of Tourism and attracting new rooms, new hotels. It is absolutely necessary that the industry grows. If we stay stagnant, we shall die.

There is an ongoing concern regarding who is interested in providing a new modern facility. The two hotels that have contributed to our success to date are dive resorts, with a focus on dive. We have all accepted that the dive industry is one that we need to grow beyond. We need to have diving as a strong pillar, but we need to have nature tourism as our second pillar within tourism.

It is commonly accepted and much has been done to improve upon the attraction of Cayman Brac and Little Cayman for nature tourism. I believe that within the international arena, when you look at the growth of tourism, the development of tourism, that nature tourism is a major growing sector in the tourism industry. I believe that Cayman Brac and Little Cayman offers some of the greatest opportunities for the Cayman Islands to capitalise on some of that nature tourism business.

I believe that the ongoing efforts by the Honourable Minister to attract European visitors, who spend long times on vacation and are greatly appreciative of nature tourism, would also be a great benefit to Cayman Brac and Little Cayman's nature tourism project. I believe that the various arrangements of routing European passengers through neighbouring destinations to get them here is a viable option and one that could have positive impact on the nature tourism product of Little Cayman. However, Mr. Speaker, once you get them here, you must have proper accommodations in which to put them. Some of our European visitors or some of our U.S. visitors may want a five-star hotel.

We need to continue the efforts and we need to roll out the red carpet for these developers who are coming forward with various projects including the most recent of the development on the Bluff, and that goes on to the next point I would like to mention. Mr. Speaker, for the red carpet to be laid out, we need to have the investment officer for Cayman Brac appointed immediately. We need to have an investment bureau officer who will be that person to lay out the red carpet; to remove some of the red tape. Mr. Speaker, I assure this Honourable Legislative Assembly that all efforts are being made by the Government to see that happen as soon as possible.

It seems that governance is very good as a theoretical basis, however in reality you buck into many obstacles and I want to stress that we need to have that investment officer. There is a vacuum, there is an absence there. We need to have someone who is the buffer between the admin building and the investor. Once we are able to attract a visitor to Cayman Brac we then need to ensure that that visitor, when he is leaving, is planning his return.

We have a major problem with ponds on Cayman Brac and Little Cayman. The scent that is emanating from these ponds that are the natural linkage, the natural cleaning mechanism, is now not operational. We need to manually clean these ponds out. There was a Dr. Ricardo Jones who was affiliated with the Water Authority, consultant of some nature to the Water Authority, who visited and went to each of these ponds in Cayman Brac. (He did not, to the best of my knowledge, visit the one in Little Cayman.) He looked at these ponds and carefully reviewed the cause of the problem of the stench and made recommendations to how to remedy these ponds. I look forward to some of these actions coming into place.

There is much bureaucracy to go through when you want to actually physically go in and clean the pond in which the National Trust have some ownership over. Mr. Speaker, it is an issue that is facing us daily. It is an issue that every time I drive across the pond I wonder how our tourists do not complain more about it. Mr. Speaker, the saltwater pond has such great potential, such great opportunities. I have seen an artistic rendition of that particular pond cleaned out with fishery added to it with a water fountain in the middle of it with lights to aerate it, to move it, to circulate it. I have seen it with a walkway, a running path around that pond with rope railings. It had a coffee shop on one corner and I do not consider these things outside of the remit of reality. I think it is so easy.

We need to look at the salt water pond. We need to look at the West End pond in which man fought nature by blocking off the pond. We are putting in the asphalt plant with the road that went through the middle of the pond and stopped the circulation. We need to address those issues. Those ponds are right in front of our hotels, in our hotel district, so we need to look at them carefully with a degree of urgency.

I will not forget the verbal recommendations made by the visiting specialist and I can safely say they were all very affordable, very simple options and we need to look at them.

Cayman Brac is gifted with an opportunity for cliff climbing. We had a book published recently, maybe a year or two ago, on cliff climbing on Cayman Brac. It published all of the paths that had titanium anchors placed in on these paths. It is my understanding from those in the know in this particular industry that we offer world-class cliff climbing in Cayman Brac. I was present at the Sister Island Tourism Association meeting when one of the hoteliers expressed that they had qualified instructors on staff and all they needed was authorisation to pursue this.

When the visitors came from the Florida Caribbean Cruise Association, they expressed that the Carnival Cruise Line and some of the other cruise lines had vertical walls that they could do cliff climbing onboard the ships and their passengers would welcome an opportunity when they come on their day trips to turn their very controlled cliff climbing environment into a practical hands-on one on some of our novice routes on Cayman Brac. The face of the Bluff is Crown property and there are various liabilities associated with individuals relying on these anchored bolts in Crown property, however, Mr. Speaker, diving to the bottom of Crown ocean is also risky and we do that through a liability waiver.

Mr. Speaker, I beg upon the Government to articulate a particular policy for cliff climbing. I can tell you, without doubt (because I have had this conversation on numerous occasions within the Department and the Ministry) the Ministry clearly understands the importance and significance of cliff climbing as an opportunity to improve our offering on Cayman Brac and the Minister of Tourism is supportive of any initiative that has positive impact on tourism on Cayman Brac.

What we need is a formal written policy to the Department of Tourism for the promotion of cliff climbing as a viable alternative on Cayman Brac. I can see young guides. When I look at Mr. Civic, the tour guide in Cayman Brac, how committed he is to that job; how knowledgeable he is as a young Cayman Bracer to carry people around our nature offerings and showcase our product in Cayman Brac, I can see more young men like him offering guides along the cliff climbing routes. I look forward to this introduction and development.

None of Cayman Brac's problems, challenges or issues can be solved until we have more people. An increased population is absolutely necessary. I live there; I love it; and I would not want it to change either, but we need a greater population base. Now I would not want to see it overpopulated, I am not advocating that, but we do need an increased population. Mr. Speaker, 3,000 people on Cayman Brac, we would not notice the difference.

We need an increased population base, and the United Democratic Party is not just talking about it. The new immigration regulations that came out also on 18 May (the Law came about on the 31 December) specifically provide for incentives for permanent residents in Cayman Brac and Little Cayman by reducing the dollar value of the non-mobile assets necessary and reducing the amount of disposable income required in order to make it more advantageous for individuals to assume permanent residence in Cayman Brac – permanent residence where they can build their home, live there, but not as tourists that have to keep going to get their passports stamped every month, two months, 16 weeks, 18 weeks, whatever amount of time that they get. They could build their homes; shop at our grocery stores; support our gas stations; support our domestic commerce. These are not individuals who are coming to take away jobs. Because of the age stated for permanent residents, most of them are retired.

Considerations include the amount of dependents under the age of 18 to ensure that these individuals are not coming in to take away jobs, but are coming to create jobs. It took the United Democratic Party to bring about this fundamental change, and it is there. Now we need to find a way of packaging that information and promoting it to the right audience; to quality individuals that we want to come and become a part of our community. I believe strongly that this same very entity in the Department of Tourism . . . because these individuals will need information they could call an established 1-800 number and hear a friendly Cayman Brac voice at the other end of that line, in that beautiful Caymanian-style building in front of the airport. They could get information about Cayman Brac. Your investment officer would be able to assist them with information also to ensure that when they come they come fully ready to be a productive member of society.

I recently had an opportunity, an experience that I would like to share with this Honourable Legislative Assembly; and it is appropriate to share. Mr.

Speaker, there were two individuals, a husband and wife, whose attorney (a friend of mine in Grand Cayman) called me to say that they were coming to Cayman Brac on their seventh visit last year. They were visiting with the intention of creating Cayman Brac as their permanent place of abode. That individual was able to give me some background information and when they landed in Cayman Brac, they were greeted, they were provided with an opportunity, they met with the Leader of Government Business, who took the opportunity to shake their hands and welcome them to Cayman Brac. Then the ambassador of Cayman Brac, Mr. Linton Tibbetts, took them on a tour of the Island, and then took them out to dinner that night. Mr. Speaker, what a welcome that was for that couple. Now they have their home completed in the Brac; they are driving a car with yellow license plates – not white; they are there; they are part of our community; they are supporting our community. They are not there to take away any jobs, they are there to help. It is through such proactive initiatives that we will gain that goal of having a larger population base.

Mr. Speaker, I would never expect or plan that for every visitor that comes to Cayman Brac that I would have the opportunity of having the Leader of Government Business greet them. However, it was much appreciated and it shows the quality of that individual that he took that occasion to do so. However, Mr. Speaker, it does not say that that same unit, that entity, that Department of Tourism, and that beautiful Caymanian-style cottage could not have greeters to assist with these individuals in making their transformation, coming from their society where they are used to different availability of resources to learn the society, learn the system. We could have greeters, Mr. Speaker. When I talk about greeters, I do not want anyone to create the image of people with flowers around their necks and dancing to music. I am talking about Department of Tourism officers in their beautiful uniforms greeting these individuals and welcoming them to Cayman Brac and offering opportunities to assist them.

Mr. Speaker, being small can be advantageous. It can be very advantageous because it allows us to do things that the big Islands cannot do, and one of those things is greeting our visitors and saying, 'Welcome to Cayman Brac', or 'Welcome back home'. I am strongly of the view that the new provision in the Immigration Law will see positive benefits.

Additionally, the United Democratic Party has seen to it that the duty concessions on building materials are extended again for Cayman Brac. Therefore, we now have concessionary requirements for you to become a permanent resident and we have duty concessions on your building materials to allow you to build your home. Then we have people calling in to the talk show and standing in this Legislative Assembly that say the United Democratic Party is not doing anything; so far from the truth.

Mr. Speaker, the unfortunate part of the political arena that we stand in is that those with wisdom, like the United Democratic Party, that invests in the long-term development of Cayman Brac may have to wait two, three, or four years to see the true benefits of this increased population, but we are going to be judged on 17 November. I trust that the people of Cayman Brac and Little Cayman will see the future; will see and share in the vision of a better improved Cayman Brac and Little Cayman where we can all raise our children and hope that when they graduate they are going to still stay on our Island and become productive members of our society.

Mr. Speaker, when we are looking at improving and increasing the number of permanent residents, increasing the size of the population of Cayman Brac, we must look at various quality of life issues. I try to imagine myself as someone coming from a busy New York life or from the streets of London or somewhere else and coming to Cayman Brac and making that transformation. What would I want? I would want nice parks that I could go and picnic. I would want good access to the beach to ensure that I can always get to the beach. I would want to know that I have a society that I am becoming part of that is welcoming to me. All of those things are present in Cayman Brac. All of those things are available in Cayman Brac. We have the recipe; we have the ingredients to make this work.

It has been recently confirmed to me that the Ministry of Lands is currently charting the beach access to ensure that those are protected in Cayman Brac and Little Cayman. That is very important. I have heard Members of this Legislative Assembly make comments about the great number of parks in Cayman Brac. Mr. Speaker, it is very important. On the 28th June I enjoyed celebrating my son's birthday at the West End Park; a beautiful facility with the barbecue grills and restroom facility. I enjoyed seeing the other cabanas with some of our permanent residents and some of our senior citizens sitting back enjoying the cool breeze. Cayman Brac even has a public access pool that the community shares. All of this goes into the package of what we offer. However, one other ingredient goes into it – the Health Services that we offer.

Individuals looking at retiring and establishing permanent residence want to ensure (and some of them are actually required through their overseas insurance providers) the availability of good medical service. Mr. Speaker, it is the United Democratic Party that has seen Faith Hospital transformed, and there is much more to be done. There is much more to be done. We now have the equipment, we now have the facility, we now have the doctors, but we need to change the culture. I say that without attempting to offend anyone at the hospital, but we need to ensure that there is a welcoming culture. There is a culture that is ready to accept change. There is culture that is simply necessary in the provision of health services. Mr. Speaker, when the United Democratic Party took office, there was no dentist in Cayman Brac. Mr. Speaker, I must also give you credit because it was under your watch that you started to talk about a permanent dentist for Cayman Brac and now he is there. I had the unfortunate experience of having to utilise him, however, he is there.

These things all come together to improve what we have as a society and to be able to attract a larger population that is absolutely necessary for the economy to be at a level that we can ensure that our young people have jobs when they graduate. The United Democratic Party has made those connections and understands that you do not simply get up and talk about creating jobs for graduates. You talk about the cause of the problem to ensure that jobs are available for graduates; and those who have had to leave Cayman Brac to return home.

We have two beautiful young ladies who have left Cayman Brac probably a decade ago, who will be returning shortly, one to take up employment – I think both are at the hospital . . . one for certain at the hospital. These are great achievements and, as I said earlier, being small is advantageous. Having two people with their kids come back home makes a difference in Cayman Brac. I remember as a young man when one family left – Mr. & Mrs. Tibbetts and their children – and you could feel the difference of one family out of the society. It is so small that everything matters.

So the United Democratic Party addressed the health issues of Cayman Brac. We also looked at the other issues that affect the quality of life, that affect the Island's ability to grow, and that is the education system of Cayman Brac and Little Cayman.

Mr. Speaker, we have seen the first graduation in Little Cayman. A young man graduated under the United Democratic Party from the nice education services offered in Little Cayman.

We have seen major transformation in how education is administered in Cayman Brac because the greatest challenge that we were facing was double classes. It was articulated to us that, 'We do not want double classes because it is too hard for one teacher to teach two curriculum.' Mr. Speaker, we were wise in how we went about it because we understand the permanent cure for removing double classes is a larger population base that allows you to have a teacher for every class. We understood that that is not something you can just leap to overnight, so you needed to have remedial action. You needed to have action today to ensure that the students that we were producing were leaving school ready to go on to high school and the double classes were a challenge.

Therefore, the Minister of Education saw it necessary to combine the Spot Bay and the Creek School to remove double classes. However, we have not altered our capacity so that when we come about future population growth, which is predicted through the various changes put in place by the United Democratic Party, the capacity is there, the school buildings are still there, the class rooms are still there. It was an ideal remedy for a bad situation and I give credit to the Minister of Education for his leadership in seeing that done. I stress, once more, that we did not assume that the declined population was final and reduce our capacity of accepting enrolment in the future. No, Mr. Speaker, we solved the problem and maintained the capacity. It is through such dynamic management, as the Minister of Education talks about, that the Member for East End had the inability to understand the dynamic management that he was referring to.

Education is also being looked at by utilising some of our technology. The Minister has seen about the University College of the Cayman Islands, but he has not forgotten about Cayman Brac. We know that through some of the achievements of the (Improving Teaching and Learning in the Cayman Islands) ITALIC programme and the ability of having on-line learning with the requirement of coming over for a weekend here and there to supplement your on-line learning, that much of what is going to be offered at the University College could be made available in Cayman Brac and in Little Cayman to some of our lifetime learners. We have many in the community that would like to get a degree, but they have bank loans, they have children. We need to pursue every initiative to ensure that they have an option. The Community College already has a representative in the Brac by the name of Mr. Lazzari, and this would also just be an extension of that service. Mr. Speaker, it offers great opportunities and we look forward to pursuing it jointly with the Minister of Education.

Recently, I had the privilege of sponsoring a motion in the Legislative Assembly that called upon the Government to consider acquiring acreage of land to be used for agriculture purposes. That was accepted by the Honourable Legislative Assembly and I truly believe that this type of availability would offer . . . not simply for development within agriculture because there is a sector of our community, there is a group of young men and women that are entrepreneurial by spirit. They have inherited that and are looking for ways, looking for initiatives that they can get into something. One thing we must accept (when we talk about the Cayman Islands as a whole, but more so when we talk about Cayman Brac), we have a very mercantile community.

We have a community which, historically, families have controlled the business sector and they pass that on to their children and on to their children's children. I do not accept that every young person in Cayman Brac cannot have a dream or a vision to own their own business, to own their own venture. I do not accept that only those of a select few—and, Mr. Speaker, with the greatest of respect to those families because they have made great, great contributions to the Island that I have called home over the years.

However, I am of the strong view that we must find ways of ensuring that capital, advice and expertise is made available to various young people to ensure that they can pursue a venture, and one of those ventures might be an agriculture-based venture. We have seen the impact on these young people in the schools as they have gotten exposed to hydroponics. Maybe one of them would like to lease a small piece of land and run a little hydroponics plant on in.

Mr. Speaker, I would like to return briefly to the day trips. Mr. Speaker, once you have day trips, once the passengers have come over and we have developed our capacity to handle visitors and we have demonstrated to the Florida Caribbean Cruise Association that we can handle the visitors, we can then incrementally build the business by saying, 'Okay, not just one jet, maybe two jets,' and then we can say it is time to actually dock a ship off of West End, Scott's Pier. Then we will be at a capacity because we have slowly built the industry to ensure that we do not have a failure because within that business one failure is all it takes.

Mr. Speaker, can we not see a day when those passengers come and our entrepreneur utilising little agriculture properties leased to them by Government, could be growing fresh fruits and selling to that same industry? This could be set up at the Heritage House or some other site selling fruit juices from their papaya trees. Can we not see young people in Cayman Brac with the ambition, desire, and availability of capital to launch some of the electronic telecommunication or some of those other high-tech business ventures? Mr. Speaker, when we look at the opportunities available in this country, I do not limit those in Cayman Brac and Little Cayman who can take advantage of them, or only to specific families. Anyone should have those dreams; anyone should have the ability to pursue them.

Mr. Speaker, continuing on to the lifestyle, quality of life issues that will affect the desirability of making Cayman Brac and Little Cayman one's choice of a permanent place of abode. Recently, and included in the Throne Speech, is an undertaking by the Government to conduct a feasibility study on piped water through Cayman Brac. The discussion of this issue was as a result of a question posed by myself and an answer provided by the Honourable Minister of Community Development. It was suggested that the feasibility study be done on incremental stages. We looked at whether it was viable. Is it feasible to pipe water to the hospital? Is it viable to pipe it up to the high school? Is it viable to pipe it up to Tibbetts Turn? We will keep looking at it until we find out where it is viable, and I urge the Honourable Ministry that when we look at viability and feasibility that we do not only look at financial returns. We should also look at some economic returns, at how the provision will affect the availability of good quality water; affect the economy of the country? How would it affect the quality of health in the country? We look at some of the non-financial variables in determining whether it is viable, whether it is feasible.

Mr. Speaker, I have great confidence that the Member for East End, who stated that the United Democratic Party treated East End like stepchildren, will appreciate that we do not have piped water in Cayman Brac. However, a priority was put to pipe water to East End. That seems to be a reasonable Government; one that is not victimising the people of East End. I see that it is now down to go to Frank Sound. This seems to be a government that is very, very reasonable and very, very thoughtful towards the people of East End.

Mr. Speaker, the United Democratic Party also looked at air service as being a very important concern for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman – the availability of reliable, cost-effective air service to Cayman Brac and Little Cayman. Currently, we are realising the benefits of the decision made by the United Democratic Party to lease two Twin Otters. I flew down on one today; I fly back on one this evening. Mr. Speaker, they are comfortable, conveniently scheduled, not as affordable as I would like them but they are priced to be competitive as well as to realise a reasonable break-even on the aircraft. I believe we must continue to look at the air service. However, I can stress, and I assure the people of Cayman Brac and Little Cayman and the people of this country, that the Twin Otters introduction has made a major, major, positive contribution to Cayman Brac and Little Cayman. Gone are the days that we were slaved or hung on a monopoly providing service during specific days or where we could be held at ransom. Mr. Speaker, this Government carries one characteristic throughout its body: it is that we like competition and we believe it brings about positive results. All airlines are now smiling and welcoming their customers. Competition brings about great results. All of these ingredients go into making us attractive.

Mr. Speaker, I need to now turn briefly to an obligation I feel I have, one in which I will pursue with great sensitivity. It is imperative that I clarify the situation to the Members of the Legislative Assembly and to the people of Cayman Brac. Mr. Speaker, a year ago – one calendar year ago – I made a statement to the Caymanian Compass of the need for Government to look carefully at the licence of Cayman Brac Power & Light Co Ltd. It was my recommendation to only issue a one-year temporary licence until the review of Caribbean Utilities Co Ltd (CUC) is completed in Grand Cayman; the price model determined (be it price cap, be it competition) where the prices and rates charged by Cayman Brac Power & Light Co Ltd could then be capped to reflect the rate established in Grand Cayman, plus an acceptable difference for the difference in cost of operating in Cayman Brac.

Mr. Speaker, it was within hours of the appearance of that statement that mechanisms went in place that I was told that I was seeking for Cayman Brac Power & Light Co Ltd to be closed for (CUC) to take over the provision of power in Cayman Brac. Nothing could be further from the truth. The mechanisms went in place to say that with a one-year licence, depending move, relocation of Cayman Brac Power & Light Co Ltd from Stake Bay up onto the Bluff could not be done because they needed to go and raise capital to make the move and they could not do it on a one-year licence. So my suggestion would prevent the move from Stake Bay up to the Bluff. The mechanism was saying that I had a vested interest in (CUC) and was seeking to gain by punishing Cayman Brac Power & Light Co Ltd so that (CUC) could take over.

Mr. Speaker, I have a vested interest in no power company. These mechanisms went out. We remember the full-page advert was put out. When I see one year later when that licence would now be coming in for renewal—that one-year licence that I suggested—the power company is still at Stake Bay, has not been relocated on the Bluff (although they have their licence), they still have not gone out to raise money). So the doom that was being spread by my advocating that they only be given a one-year licence (so that the people of Cayman Brac could benefit from having the reduced utility rates as we are seeing in Grand Cayman and capped); that could not be done because they needed to raise money. A year later, I understand that conceptually the move has now been approved.

The Speaker: Honourable Member, you have three minutes remaining.

Mr. Lyndon L. Martin: Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

Mr. Speaker, I strongly believe, wholeheartedly believe, that when we look at Cayman Brac and Little Cayman's economic situation that it is important that we understand that the second largest sector of anyone's budget is the payment of electrical bills. I believe wholeheartedly that if the Company had co-operated with the Government and a one-year licence was issued, we could have an opportunity to enter into a capping mechanism, not competition. The market is too small and to cap at the reduced rate rather than what is currently accepted as a price would be way above that of (CUC). Mr. Speaker, it is my view that that provision, that statement and claim that I made, is one that would have been to the benefit of the people of Cayman Brac and Little Cayman. I have even been told with the mechanisms that because of my stance against Cayman Brac Power & Light Co Ltd that they are going to even attempt to take my seat. If I have to lose my seat because I stand up for the people of Cayman Brac, I will lose my seat.

Mr. Speaker, in conclusion, I would like to say that Cayman Brac—

Point of Elucidation

Hon. Juliana Y. O'Connor-Connolly: Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: Honourable Minister of Planning.

Hon. Juliana Y. O'Connor-Connolly: Mr. Speaker, by virtue of Standing Order 34(b), on a point of elucidation. I wonder if my friend and colleague would give the—

Mr. Lyndon L. Martin: Certainly, Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: Honourable Minister of Planning, the First Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman has given way for you to elucidate.

Hon. Juliana Y. O'Connor-Connolly: Thank you Mr. Speaker.

Mr. Speaker, seeing that the point that the Second Elected Member for Cayman Brac is making is such a significant one, I wonder whether he would inform, for the sake of clarity, the Honourable House who put in place the mechanisms to which he is referring.

The Speaker: Thank you, Honourable Minister. The Honourable Member has one minute remaining to clarify, but since some time was taken away we will just stretch for two minutes, the maximum.

Mr. Lyndon L. Martin: Mr. Speaker, I thank you for the extra minute, and I think that is very reasonable.

Mr. Speaker, I would like it to be very clear, the mechanisms that I talked about of creating and spreading the propaganda are mechanisms that I consider to be directly affiliated with the company in question. Mr. Speaker, I say that with whatever risk it exposes me to. However, the company that provides electricity for Cayman Brac—and has done so at a very good quality for some years, and I appreciate the role that that company has played—when I took my stance against Cayman Brac Power & Light Co Ltd, the company came out at me furiously. So, the mechanisms that I refer to are simply those of the Company and I do not in any way suggest that anyone currently politically oriented was responsible for that. The mechanisms were the Company.

Mr. Speaker, in my remaining minute and a half—

The Speaker: Honourable Member, you have used up your two minutes, so if you would take the half minute and wind up, please.

Mr. Lyndon L. Martin: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I just want to thank the people of Cayman Brac and Little Cayman, and I have used this opportunity to share with this Legislative Assembly some of my views. I also would like to thank the staff in my office for assisting me in collating some information.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: Honourable Members, we would normally take the luncheon break at 1.00 pm. We have 15 minutes and I wish to . . . if it is the will of Members, that we take it at this point, we would do so and return at 2.30 pm. This House is suspended until 2.30 pm.

House suspended at 12.45 pm

House resumed at 2.38 pm

The Speaker: Please be seated. Proceedings are resumed. Does any other Member wish to speak? Does any other Member wish to speak? Does any other Member wish to speak?

The Fourth Elected Member for West Bay.

Mr. Cline A. Glidden, Jr.: Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

Mr. Speaker, as I rise to make my contribution to the Throne Speech delivered by His Excellency The Governor, I first have to take note (like other speakers before me) of the much more pleasant surroundings that we now have, and give credit to all of those who have worked so arduously to make sure that the Chamber and the building were ready for the opening of the session. I know there was a time that some of us were not sure that it was going to be ready. However, with the commitment of all those involved, we are happy to see that we are in such nice accommodations.

I want to give special credit to you, Mr. Speaker, for the change that was made at the end that has brought such an enhancement to the other fine work done. That final touch, Mr. Speaker, and I guess I had the pleasure of speaking a bit later, because there has even been a lot of work done since last week and it looks like every day that we come in here it is just getting better and better. Therefore, Mr. Speaker, even though there has been much criticism, I must say that I am quite happy to be in a building that is so befitting a Parliament for the Cayman Islands.

Mr. Speaker, since we are in an election year, and since the United Democratic Party Government (of which I am so happy to be a part of), has done such a fine job, I was kind of hoping that the Opposition would not have had a lot to say and we would have had a short sitting. Although there was not a lot of substance to what was said, they made a lot of accusations, which I think it would not be right for us not to answer, just in case there are members of the general public out there who might not be sure as to how incorrect those statements were.

Mr. Speaker, before I get started on my contribution, I also want to make mention of and give congratulations today being 12 July, and also being the first day that one of our local West Bay young professionals has started up the important role as Chief Immigration Officer. That is, Mr. Franz Manderson, of whom we are all very proud.

Mr. Speaker, we have those criticisms of the Government that Caymanians are not being prepared and the education system is leaving our people and not preparing them to take up the right role in our Caymanian society. There we have evidence again, Mr. Speaker. We also have a Chief of Police, Mr. Buel Braggs, who is a Caymanian, the Commissioner, and we are very proud of him. I guess I have a bit more pride in the fact that he is from the district that I represent, the district of West Bay. We also have, just today, Mr. Franz Manderson taking up his role. This is a good example of a Caymanian and the important role through the preparation that the Government has allowed our Caymanians to reach the heights of leadership in the country.

While we may be thinking that it is just the upper echelon that are getting promoted and taking up their role as civil servants in Cayman, I am happy to say that the information that I have been provided with says that as of the 10th January 2004, the civil service was made up of 70 per cent Caymanians. That has increased steadily from 2001, where it started out on 10th January, the percentage of Caymanians was 56.7 per cent, and on the 10th January 2004, Mr. Speaker, the civil service, with a total of 3,199 employees, 70 per cent is now Caymanian. I also know that those that get up after me will say that the Government had no part in that. It appears that if you listen to the Opposition, anytime it is anything that is bad it is the Government; but anytime it is anything that is good it is the Governor. However, Mr. Speaker, again I feel confident that the general populous will understand that with such an increase —and those figures bear repeating, Mr. Speaker. The 10th January 2001, 56.7 per cent, and the 10th January 2004, 70 per cent is quite an accomplishment, Mr. Speaker, once again, under the leadership and direction of the United Democratic Party Government.

Mr. Speaker, I hope that my contribution today can be a short contribution. What I intend to do is to (using the Throne Speech as delivered by His Excellency The Governor) go through and show the commitment of the United Democratic Party to the enhancement of life for the Cayman people since coming into power some three years ago. Mr. Speaker, the Members on the Opposition seem to be keen on criticising the Minister of Education.

Thankfully, the speakers before me have cleared up, I think, some of the accusations that were made. However, one that comes to mind is a criticism that has been tried continually. I guess it started in September of last year, and now it has continued right up until the Leader of the Opposition spoke. That is, they keep referring to the overcrowding of the schools. A few days ago at their public meeting on the Court House steps, they were telling people how the schools were going to be overcrowded because of the status grants. They continued throughout the year saying how detrimental the effects were going to be, leading right up until this Throne Speech.

In Finance Committee, there were still accusations as to whether they were going to be able to register all the school children and how the children were not going to be able to have space. In Finance Committee, the Minister himself was sick and the Leader of the Opposition and the Second Elected Member for George Town went to great details, grilling the Permanent Secretary for the Ministry of Education regarding the enrolment. She answered all the questions admirably, I would say, especially considering the late night that we were in. As far as I remember it was around 10.30 or 11.00 o'clock when they were giving her the grilling on education, and she had the statistics available based on registration.

Mr. Speaker, she explained to them that, first of all, there were no children that had attempted to be registered that were not allowed to be registered; that there was no crisis, they were preparing to deal with some 1,100 children in the high schools, and at that stage when registration was closed there was some 1,080. She answered all the questions that were put to her and what I thought would have allayed any of the fears, if they were genuine fears, which the Opposition may have had about the situation that existed with the schools. Mr. Speaker, she even went into the primary schools and showed that in most of the primary schools, there were fewer children that were being enrolled than those that were graduating, so the number was actually decreasing. Now, after she did such a good job, we could have given some credit to the Leader of the Opposition, and if he had left it there we could have said he had a genuine concern.

Politics being what it is like, he did not accept the explanation from the politicians and so he was not satisfied. So, he had to get an explanation from the civil service (namely, the Permanent Secretary) and we would have expected that if it was genuine that he would have been satisfied with the explanations that were given.

Instead of that, Mr. Speaker, he comes to this Honourable House and starts the same line that they have been out there promoting; that there is a crisis in the education system, that the schools are not going to be able to accommodate the many children that are there and so many people that were new recipients of status grants cannot get into school and saying again, some of the children in the primary schools will probably not be able to get an education. Mr. Speaker, it is obvious that that Honourable Member is not interested in the truth. It is obvious that that Honourable Member only wants to stir up problems, even when the person—the Chief Officer—that is directly responsible sits and gives a commitment, an explanation, that there is no crisis, no problem. He still gets up here and criticises the Government and talks about the crisis in education.

A foundation that they have used for the crisis in education has been what they call a “schizophrenic” or “haphazard” approach to the immigration situation with the long-term residents. On many [occasions] they have criticised the Government for taking an action which gave Caymanian Status to many long-term residents of the Cayman Islands. They have said that it was done with no consideration for the effects that it will have on our education system or on the social system. Mr. Speaker, when the decision was made, everyone recognised that this had been a long-growing problem, and a decision was made that while this might not be a perfect solution, something had to be done and that the situation was not getting any better with time and so it was important that the Government take some action.

In doing the research for this Throne Speech, I decided to look back up in the Hansards because I know much had been said for many, many years by different Governments and Members on the Back Bench concerning the critical stage that our immigration situation had evolved to; how the lack of action by any Government had added to that crisis that we had found ourselves in. While I read quite a few of the Members' speeches, one that really stuck me, Mr. Speaker . . . and I am going to ask for your indulgence so that I can refer to the Hansard debate of the 28th February 2000, of Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts.

The Speaker: Twenty eight February, what year?

Mr. Cline A. Glidden, Jr.: Two thousand.

The Speaker: Two thousand?

Mr. Cline A. Glidden, Jr.: Yes, Sir.

Mr. Speaker, to make my point, I will have to refer a bit extensively to this Hansard. I am reading what would have been his final contribution to the Throne Speech in 2000, prior to the election.

Mr. Speaker, I will start where he says, “But, I am also known (as I will say today) to have a belief that the many long term residents in this country—and when I say ‘long term’ I mean long term, people who have made here their home; people who have been accepted in this community; people who have bore children here; people whose children have gone through the school system here, have grown up here and are working here—cannot be left as they are. I hold that view out of a sense of natural justice, but also because the fact is are we going to tell them they have to leave the country?”

“We [have not] done so thus far. In fact, it seems pretty obvious that government has found itself in a situation where it is such a difficult task to tackle that in its eighth year as the government it [has not] done anything about it at all.”

Mr. Speaker, he says, “Here are the facts as I know them. While many of us will agree that these very long term residents should be dealt with, because they are not going anywhere, and if they are going to be part of this society they may as well feel themselves part of the society, to be able to be the productive members of society we would like them to be,” he says, “then if we even take those away, and we want to talk about, let us say people who have lived here between five and 15 years...”

Now, Mr. Speaker, I need to stop and make the point that one of the criticisms that have been made is that they did not have a problem with the people that had been here, what they called the “deserving people”, people over ten years. However, in this debate, he has gone down now to talk about people who have been here between five and fifteen years. He goes on to say, “...but who may not have permanent residence at present, but who consider themselves to be permanent residents of the country because they are acting the role of permanent residents—they are buying homes, and all of those types of things, those people in that category are several thousand people.”

Mr. Speaker, he says, “In fact, I believe that we are looking in excess of 10,000 individuals—not counting children. They are making children! We are not talking about one person.” Mr. Speaker, he goes on to say, “... when we look at that type of stuff, Mr. Speaker, we have to consider how we want our country to be within ten years, within 20 years.” The keynote that he said is, “We have to begin to make some decisions.”

Now, Mr. Speaker, he acknowledges that we have, in his own quote, an excess of 10,000 individuals, not counting children. Mr. Speaker, this ties in exactly to where the criticism was made that there was no consideration by the Government and that there is no consideration now being given in the current Throne Speech, which is the Government’s policy on education for the masses or for the many new Caymanians. Mr. Speaker—

The Speaker: Honourable Member, if I might make the point . . . I know you are quoting from the Hansards, and I assume it is perhaps an unedited version of the Hansards. However, I have seen a number of requests from Members from the Hansard Office asking for unedited portions of the Hansards. Therefore, the same latitude I give on those I will give to you; but I will ask you to bear in mind, if it is an unedited version of the Hansard . . . it is an edited version?

It is indeed an edited version of the Hansards, but I have had requests for up-to-date Hansards which, of course, would be unedited, so the same latitude I will give to all Members.

Mr. Cline A. Glidden, Jr.: Thank you so much, Mr. Speaker.

Mr. Speaker, I need to repeat, it does not say “Unedited”, it just says “Hansard” and it is from the 28th February 2000. So, we are assuming that it is the edited version.

Mr. Speaker, to continue the reference that I am making to the contribution by the Honourable D.

Kurt Tibbetts on 28th February, 2000, and his position on one of the main concerns, which was the long-term residents that were here. He says, “When we look at the kind of numbers we are talking about, we will have one arm of the society saying, with a valid fear, that Caymanians are already beginning to be outnumbered. Then, you look at the wider ramifications and you think of the business world in this country. While the people involved in business may want to agree on the one hand about Caymanians being outnumbered, if the facts are put to them, for those businesses to function the way they are now, and to have any chance of continuity, you cannot displace these people out of society. Not only do these people work in these businesses, but their earning power is just as important as any other segment of this society to keep business rolling. It’s not an easy task.”

He goes on to say—and this is the part that I find really ironic . . . in 2000 that Member recognised how important this was, or I can only assume again that he was genuine in recognising that. He goes on to say, “Some people will make political hey-day out of this situation...” and here we go in the year 2003 and 2004, that same Member doing his utmost to make political hey-day out of this important situation, and the unfair situation that so many people have found themselves in.

The funny thing is that they criticise the numbers that were done. If my recollection serves me, it is 2,600. He made mention that as far as he was concerned, there was some 10,000, not including children that needed to be dealt with. Mr. Speaker, the only thing that we can call that would be hypocrisy. He said, “Some people will make political hey-day out of this situation, trying to grasp opportunities when they hear certain things being said just for political expedience. In my view that is so irresponsible it is not funny!”

Mr. Cline A. Glidden, Jr.: Now, Mr. Speaker, I need to remind the Members that I am quoting from Mr. Kurt Tibbetts, the Honourable Leader of the Opposition, and I am having a little difficulty, because on the 28th February 2000, he was not the Honourable Leader of the Opposition. So, Mr. Speaker, as long as it is clear to all who I am referring to, I am referring to the current Leader of the Opposition, the First Elected Member for the district of George Town.

“In my view, [Mr. Speaker, this is what he said] that is so irresponsible it is not funny! This is a serious situation.” Mr. Speaker, how times have changed. “We have people who have made their lives here over many, many years, who you find it difficult not to be willing to say we have to do something about these people. I don’t care from what angle you look at it.

Mr. Speaker, I need to repeat the point that he made that this was such a critical situation and that even though people were going to use it for political expedience that, in his view, it was not funny. “This is a serious situation.” He says that, “... we have to do something about these people. I don’t care from what angle you look at it.”

The Government has now come along and made a decision (exactly what he was calling for in 2000) however, with much less numbers and therefore much less ramifications than he was expecting it to be. From his own words, some 80 per cent less than the 10,000 that he expected it to be. Mr. Speaker, 10,000 and he specifically said, “not including children”, and yet here he goes on now. I guess all of a sudden he has decided that it is funny. Although he said it was irresponsible at the time to try to gain political expedience, we all recognise that he has decided that it is something to make political hey-day out of.

Mr. Speaker, he goes on. He says, “Let’s get this very clear now. Government has taken it on its own to put some fancy thing in the paper about this interim report...” He says, “The fact is that the report is just that—a report.” He says, “But no one is saying that there is a hard and fast circumstance coming out of that report, which is what any amending legislation is going to bring.”

Mr Speaker, he was so strong at that time in saying that he was not happy that the Government just had a report. A report was not satisfactory to him. Something had to be done for those poor people. The people were poor in 2000; however, now that something has been done, it is a terrible thing that has happened; it is the worst thing for the country. All of a sudden, the education system cannot accommodate it.

Mr. Speaker, he says, “I will tell you that I think it is very important for everyone in considering this situation to have the ability to look at the wider picture to make sure that, as difficult as these decisions are, at least we get it as right as we can before we move on.” Mr. Speaker, I could not agree with him more. His thinking in 2000—now I can see why I was willing to be part of a Government with him, because the way he was thinking in February 2000, I am sure that is the same way he was thinking in November 2000. He said, “What would be the worst to come out of this is for nothing to be done.” He did not say that what would be the worst is that the Government would give 2,600 people out of the 10,000 Caymanian status. He said, “What would be the worst to come out of this is for nothing to be done.”

Mr. Speaker, I will not get into saying that if he really felt that way, that in the year that he had as Leader of Government Business he would have done something. Again, talk about how hypocritical it is that he makes these types of statements. However, what is worse is if he cannot make the decisions and we all recognise that he was not the type of leader that would make those difficult decisions, and after we moved him as leader and we got a Government that was able, capable and willing to make those difficult decisions for him to get up and criticise the Government for doing it. He should have been happy that he did not have the will or the wherewithal to make the decision and someone came along to do what he supposedly wanted to do. That is, take care of all of those people that needed something to be done for them.

Mr. Speaker, I need to repeat because even in repeating this I find it hard to believe that this is the same gentleman that I hear getting up, criticising the process. He said, “What would be the worst to come out of this is for nothing to be done.”

[Laughter]

Mr. Cline A. Glidden, Jr.: Mr. Speaker, you know when he said that—and I am quoting from the Hansard—even the Speaker said, “I agree.” The Speaker of the House at that time is quoted in the Hansard as saying, “I agree.”

The First Elected Member for George Town goes on to say, “That’s what would be the worst, for nothing to be done—as has been the case for many years.” So there he is criticising the previous Governments for doing nothing. “I contend that because nothing has been done for many years is why the decisions that now have to be made are that much more difficult—simply because you are looking at larger numbers of people.”

Mr. Speaker, now I am in a bit of a bind because he spent so much time speaking about the situation, so passionately speaking about the situation, and yet he goes on to be so critical. It is not only him. It is the (People’s Progressive Movement) PPM in general. Their administration is talking about how terrible the country is. They are not saying how the economy has picked up, how those people are now working and feel that they are contributing to a part of the country that they now call home. They are not saying that those people are now buying homes and land instead of sending their money off the Island. The banks are swamped with requests for mortgages; the economy is booming, Mr. Speaker. All of a sudden in 2004, they are not giving any credit now to the Government, who—like Mr. Tibbetts said made sure that what he referred to as being the worst thing that could happen, that nothing to be done—made sure that that was not the case.

The United Democratic Party Government made sure that even though Mr. Tibbetts recognised the worst thing, according to his quotes in 2000—when he got elected with an overwhelming majority in George Town when he formed a Government and was the Leader of Government Business—he had forgotten what the worst thing would have been. He forgot those poor people that he had spoken so passionately about, that when the United Democratic Government got a chance they made sure to take care of the inadequacies that were there. Instead of him being happy that someone else had the foresight and the courage to deal with what he called a “very difficult situation” that had been ignored by previous administrations, he should be giving the UDP honours. They were willing to do something that he recognises needed to be done but did not have the courage to do himself.

Mr. Speaker, I know that you are already aware, but as a young Member in this Parliament, I do the research and see what the country has been liberated from on 8th November 2001. I had no knowledge that the Leader of the Opposition had spoken so passionately. He would have convinced anybody that he was genuinely concerned about the situation of the long-term residents here. I need to repeat, according to the people that he is talking about, he was saying residents from five to 15 years. Mr. Speaker, now when I see that he did nothing about it and then criticised it so heavily, I realise now it was a good decision. It is a continual learning experience. You know when we had to make that decision in 2001, we were not sure if it was the best thing for the country, but now seeing the lack of leadership that was evident, I can only imagine where we would be now if we were still toiling under that kind of leadership for the last three years.

Mr. Speaker, this issue is such an important issue. The immigration issue ties in to the election process. I will quote again from another issue to show how important this was to the Throne Speech. If you are following along, Mr. Speaker, it is page 78 on the bottom of the page where it goes on to say by The Leader of the Opposition, “But, on the other hand, if we look at the broader picture—and this is going to be shocking, but mathematically it is correct—and we do nothing for the next 15 years...”. Now, Mr. Speaker, that was 2000. We are now talking about 2004, so we are four years into his 15-year crisis period. There is only ten years left to go, and he says, “... and we do nothing for the next 15 years . . . if we do just as we have been doing now, we are going to have a population in this country where 70% of the voting age people will not be able to vote, but they will be residing here on what they call a permanent basis.”

Mr. Speaker, I need to remind the Members because some are asking me. This was the Honourable Leader of the Opposition, First Elected Member for George Town, on the 28th February, 2000, making his contribution to the Throne Speech, just before the General Elections of 2000, and these are his views and opinions as expressed to get the people of George Town to elect him for another term.

Now we all recognise that that position has changed significantly because of the criticism that he has placed on this Government for doing something about the situation. He said, ‘regardless of whatever angle you want to deal with it from; whatever you have to do, just be sure to do something.’ Those were his words, Mr. Speaker. He says, “... they will be residing here on what they call a permanent basis. You will have a government and a Legislative Assembly that basically represents 30 % of your population. That’s the big picture!”

Now Mr. Speaker, these are the same people that sit back and criticise the Government and say that they operate in crisis management. They do not understand the big picture; they do not understand the ramifications of the decisions they make and yet their current leader, only a short four years ago, talked about “the big picture”. He was begging, Mr. Speaker, for anything to be done. However, if nothing is done, as has been done in the past, this is “the big picture”. He says, “I may not have all of those figures right down pat, but mathematically, the way the trend has been I am not far off.”

Now, Mr. Speaker, it even gets worse, according to him. He was talking about “the big picture” then, however now he says, “Let us examine the wider ramifications.” I can only assume that he is expecting that to be bigger than the big picture. It goes on to say, “Any country in the world (Cayman being no exception) cannot survive or function with a population with that type of ratio.” Mr. Speaker, at this point I need to ask the good people of George Town that are going to be listening to this debate, if the Member in 2000 recognised that the country could not survive, recognised that something had to be done and said that regardless of what, something had to be done. Do they think that he is a responsible representative having tried to do nothing about the problem and now criticising? He said the country cannot survive; he was talking about the very survival of the Cayman Islands. In his own words he says the country, “... cannot survive or function with a population with that type of ratio.” He should be thanking the Government for saving the Cayman Islands.

Hon. W. McKeever Bush: You are right. You are right.

Mr. Cline A. Glidden, Jr.: The UDP should be heroes to him, Mr. Speaker. If he was genuine in his statement of saying that the country could not survive—

Mr. Cline A. Glidden, Jr.: If he was genuine, Mr. Speaker.

Mr. Cline A. Glidden, Jr.: He said, “Let us look at some very basic problems that creates.” Mr. Speaker, now we are going into the fundamentals of the Constitutional change – the democracy here in the Cayman Islands and the makeup of this Parliament. He said, “Let us look at the makeup of this Legisla- tive Assembly, if that were allowed to happen.” He said, “People who seek to be representatives are only naturally going to expend their energies in the areas that matter at the [polls]. That’s only natural.” He said, “Mr. Speaker, do we realise what kind of country we could have then? And then you look at 70% of the population that feel totally disenfranchised. How can they function in this society? How can they feel they are part of a society and still be expected to function by being good citizens, by making the sacrifices they should make to have their country in good shape?” He says, Mr. Speaker, truthfully, “You couldn’t expect that.”

If I did nothing else in this Throne Speech, I felt it was imperative to show the hypocrisy and the type of people that are offering themselves up as being the leaders of this country. Mr. Speaker, I know I do not hear any challenges coming from the other side of the floor, because it is hard for them to challenge. This is the edited Hansard. I am quoting from his speech. This goes to show what that Member will do; what the PPM will do to try to get a political advantage. Mr. Speaker, I need to repeat. He said, “Some people will make political hey-day out of this situation, trying to grasp opportunities when they hear certain things being said just for political expedience. In my view that is so irresponsible it is not funny!”

Mr. Speaker, how can the people of George Town, how can the people of the Cayman Islands hear what this Member is saying on one hand. There are a few changes. Am I to assume then that his colleagues, the other Members of the PPM, have changed his position so significantly since the 28th February, 2000? I know that there have been some changes in his Members on the Opposition. If he was genuine then, Mr. Speaker, it is obvious that his position has now changed. What has caused that change? Why is it such a terrible thing? Is he complaining that we only dealt with the 2,600 people, whereas, he saw it as being necessary to deal with 10,000 plus their children? Is that his concern? If he was criticising the Government to say, ‘You know gentlemen, you did a portion of the job, however, there is still, according to my information, some 7,000 people out there plus children that you all need to do something about.’ then you could say that maybe he has a genuine gripe. At least it was consistent with his position, however, to now be critical.

Mr. Speaker, what did he expect was going to be the effect of (according to his numbers) something being done with the 10,000 people? What was going to be the effect to the education system if he had done what he was crying for the Government of that time to do for these people? Mr. Speaker, 10,000. He recognised it was a problem. It cannot even be that we are saying, ‘Well maybe the Member did not understand how serious the problem was. Maybe the Member thought that the system could accommodate them.’

He was begging for something to be done; acknowledging that there are 10,000 of those people; and now he is criticising the Government for dealing with a quarter, or less than a quarter of those people, saying how detrimental and terrible it is and it is the end of Cayman.

Mr. Speaker, even though I am sure the other Members are telling me how enlightening . . . because four years is a long time, I guess, and plenty happens and you do not expect that people’s positions would change that conveniently. You do not expect that before an election people catered to the political directorate in 2000 sung so passionately about their care for all of those people and now get up and using his term “making political hey-day out of the situation”. It is not expected and I am sure that is why Members are surprised that we can have the Leader of the Opposition’s position so different from the one he had a few short years ago. He went on to say, “Now, what I just said . . . chances are that half the world that might hear this statement will say that I am a mad man.”

[Laughter]

Mr. Cline A. Glidden, Jr.: He said, “I am not!”

Now he is saying the same thing that the Opposition is saying now. The country is in crisis; the Government did not know what they were doing; the Government must be mad for making those kind of decisions. Here he is justifying his statements, Mr. Speaker, and saying “I am not mad!” He said, “I am not known to make those kinds of statements off the cuff. I am much too cautious for that.” Mr. Speaker, and this is the crux of the matter. I would like to hear the PPM’s position. He said, “I am [much too cautious for making these kinds] of statements off the cuff. I have thought about this. I have looked at the numbers. I have been scared you know what, and still am...”

Mr. Speaker, that is why we had to help him out. He got in the position and he was scared, he froze up, he did not know what to do. The UDP came along, relieved him of his scare. He should be happy he was not in the position. We gave him a year to make these tough decisions. We recognised that he was not capable of doing it and we decided that we had to make a change.

For that one year, I apologise to the Caymanian people. I was a part of the decision that put him in that position of leadership for the year. After knowing about these kinds of statements, I thought we were doing the right thing, Mr. Speaker. However, as soon as we recognised that he was not capable, we made the change. So, he acknowledges that he was scared. He said, “I have been scared you know what, and still am, because I (admittedly so at this very minute) am still not 100 percent sure of the correct direction. But, as I said, what I know we can’t do is nothing.”

Now, here he is telling us he is scared, he is telling us he does not know the exact solution. However, he does know that the one thing that we cannot do is nothing. Whatever angle we take it from, whatever the ramifications were, something had to be done, otherwise, the country was in a state that it could not survive. The well-being of the Cayman Islands was at stake.

Therefore, really the PPM's only criticism that they should have, according to them, is that we have not dealt with the full problem, because according to them there was 10,000 that had to be dealt with. We only dealt with 2,700, 2,600 whatever the number was. He admits that he was scared. They put him in a position . . . Mr. Speaker, in hindsight, I guess we heard him admitting that he was scared even when he was in that position and he was only criticising the Government. He was scared at that time. I can only imagine how scared he was when he actually got in the position where he was expected to do something about it. As soon as we recognised that he was not going to do it, we moved him. Along came the United Democratic Party and, in his own words, made a decision that allowed the country to survive. Mr. Speaker, for doing that, they have gone out and raised up all sorts of ruckus, made all sorts of noise, how bad the country is, how the schools cannot function, have the teachers talking about the overcrowding in the schools.

According to the Leader of the Opposition, there is 10,000 plus children. All I can say is that he did acknowledge that it is touchy. He goes on to say that, "It's touchy. It's very difficult to deal with. And most of us are afraid to pass opinions for fear that we have more against that opinion than we do for it. But when I talk about the composition of society over an extended period, and I think if I am correct, the facts will be made known to the public in very short order." He said, "... let us look at work permits, and let us look at the numbers of those work permits and which categories constitute the larger amounts of bodies. These are just hard core facts, no emotion." Mr. Speaker, because I have used so much of my time with this, I will try to go through. It says, "... we have to create a balance in our society. We cannot simply look at if any decision that is made is going to perchance financially impact negatively any sector of society. This decision has to be made based on the big picture." Therefore, Mr. Speaker, he says once again, "We cannot simply look at if any decision that is made is going to perchance financially impact negatively any sector of society."

Now he gets up in this debate and says that some of those people that were just granted Caymanian Status are competing with the local people, however in 2000 he was saying that it did not matter. Something had to be done. He said it cannot be made based on that; this decision has to be made based on the big picture.

Mr. Speaker, you know, all this brings to my memory is that he opened his statement with, "By their [fruits] you will know them." Here we have the Leader of the Opposition, his words in this Legislative Assembly some four years ago. It goes on to say that it is a very important part of it. "But it also extends itself to our ability to educate the Caymanians. And not only the Caymanians, but also those others who are here to stay whether we like it or not."

In 2000 the Member was even worried about those who were not Caymanians; he was even worried about their education at that time. He was worried about how important it was that we make sure, because they are here to stay whether we like it or not.

Mr. Speaker, it amazes me how a Member elected by the people can get up—and I am sure those people heard this statement. They heard him out there espousing his concern for those people in 2000. I am sure they went out, rallied, supported and did whatever they could do to make sure that this man (who was saying how concerned he was about the long-term residents here, the imbalance in society and about the fact that if something was not done, the country could not survive), and they elected him, Mr. Speaker, and what has he done?

What has he done to ensure the continued survival of the Cayman Islands that he is so concerned about? He says, "People might not want to talk about this." I need to remember this is the Leader of the Opposition; the First Elected Member from the district of George Town. "People might not want to talk about this. They might not want to address it. They might think that because it is not looking at the day after tomorrow that we can just shove this aside and make somebody else deal with it. I ain't planning to go anywhere right now. I think we should have dealt with this a long time ago."

"Every day that passes and we don't try to make conscious and informed decisions about this situation makes it more difficult and makes it have less chance of us doing anything right about it."

Mr. Speaker, he says, "I, for one, hold the view that if we drew a line, created a perspective, and put the majority of the people in this country on a course with their lives, that everyone would want to protect the future of this country all the more. Right now, we don't have that." Mr. Speaker, he says, "We cannot create policy or direction in this area by listening to one person regarding a certain issue." He refers to this thing he likes to refer as, Mr. Speaker. "We have to be looking at the whole big picture." He says, "I don't think we are in a position any longer to simply just sit and hope for the best because the best will happen. It's not going to happen."

He was telling us at that stage that you needed dynamic leadership, like the United Democratic Party. If I did not know better, I would think he is a prophet. He was prophesying that he needed the UDP to come along and save the country, because if that did not happen, it was not going to happen by itself. Mr. Speaker, he says, “We cannot make decisions any longer in an insular fashion just to get this person or that group off our back. Everyone’s responsibility—including ours—is to ensure that we look at the entire picture when we come to make these decisions, and we have to begin to make them. We can’t get scared and use avenues and methods to hold off on these decisions because it makes our life easier. That is what has been happening for too long.”

Mr. Speaker, he said, that had been happening for too long. I could go on. The only other point that I need to make on this is that he goes on to say, “I mentioned that I considered it to be one of the most,” and he was speaking about immigration, “one of the most aspects of consideration we have to deal with now as a country.” He says, “I would just like to make a point that it is of vital importance, from my perspective, that we decide the composition of the society that we wish.”

“I don’t subscribe to the view that we should only allow professionals to remain in the country for extended periods of time because they are ‘professionals.’” Mr. Speaker, here he is going on to say that it should not only be professionals. At that time, the helpers, the domestics, the gardeners, the mechanics, all the people that help make up these beautiful Cayman Islands, that help build these Cayman Islands, he was being all encompassing. He said, “That, in itself, can have a negative impact on your society because if we look at it from that point of view we could end up in both the medium and long term with a lot of dissatisfied Caymanians considering themselves displaced in certain types of occupations.”

“But neither do I subscribe to the opposite view that relates to the composition of the society we want. If we turn the coin and say that we don’t want the professionals, and all we want are certain other unskilled categories by numbers, that will create its own problems. It is not an easy decision.” Mr. Speaker, we did recognise that he was aware of the problem. It was a scary problem, and he recognised that it was a problem. He did not have the full solutions to the problem either; however, what he did know was that it was such a significant problem that if something was not done the country could not survive.

I am happy to say that based on the Leader of the Opposition’s statement that something had to be done, I am happy to have been a part of the United Democratic Party Government that did something to make sure that the country survived. Mr. Speaker, he says, “... it doesn’t necessarily mean that we plan for that rate of growth to continue. [At] the same time ...” Mr. Speaker, this part of this I have a difficult time because it talks about the runaway development train the country is on. He said, “[At] the same time, we don’t want to talk about slowing the economy down to a grinding halt because the Caymanian society is not prepared for that, and that could spell more doom than anything else.”

Mr. Speaker, since I have reached that far in immigration I need to make the point that when the United Democratic Party made the decision, it did not only deal with the long-term residence. It dealt with our future as well by putting into place an immigration law that had with it a fixed-term policy. It had a fixed-term policy that would ensure that we do not find ourselves in the same situation that the Leader of the Opposition was referring to us in that time.

It was a fixed-term policy that would say yes, we welcome people to come here and make their contribution. However, do not come here and sell your homes overseas or bring your children into the schools from overseas because you are here for a fixed period of time. It was a law that made it clear for those people that make a decision to come and work here. That unknown situation that occurred where some people were here for ten, 15, 20, years, it was so sad, Mr. Speaker.

Some of them would come on a one-year permit. Before you knew it they were here two years, three years and four years. Then they would say, ‘Well, I have been removed from my family, I do not know how much longer I am going to be here,’ so they bring their wife down, they bring their children out, they take them out of school. Before you know it they say, ‘Well, I am renting a place here and I own a home back where I am coming from. I might as well sell that because I do not know how much longer I am going to be here.’ Before you knew it, they had moved all their belongings. They had made Cayman their home, and they were here making a contribution but unsure of their future.

Mr. Speaker, the United Democratic Party has changed that situation – the Immigration reform. People now know that there is a fixed-term policy. You are welcome to come and stay here for seven years. In that time we expect you to train our local people. At that time you need to move on and hopefully, we have a Caymanian that can replace you, which ensures that our Caymanian people getting out of school now have the opportunity to still continue to receive their training and also have an opportunity for advancement. Mr. Speaker, that fixed-term policy did cause some concerns, because there are certain sectors of our society that Caymanians are not qualifying in fast enough. For example, I use teachers and I use our counsellors, and I use our preachers, and I use doctors, and those types of people, Mr. Speaker, who in seven years time we still will not have a Caymanian replacement for. Some people have a family doctor for 20 or 30 years. You do not want to be changing them every seven years, so it required some of those people needed to be given a security, because when you are talking about nation-building and you are building a society, it takes all types to build a society.

So, in the case, for example, that there was a preacher that was not here the ten years or there is a teacher who may have looked at it and said, 'Well, I am only here for a seven-year period and so, these children are not going to be my problem. I am going to be gone after seven years and may have only taken it as a job.' Now, to those people Cayman is home. They now have a vested interest in making sure that that child that they are teaching is going to be a productive member of society, because this is a society that they now call home. So, yes, there were some people that did not meet the ten-year requirement – a small percentage of the people who the Government of the day looked at and said . . . and taken into account the reasons for the grants.

Let us look at what is special to us. Let us look at what will help make Cayman a better society. Let us not look at . . . as the Leader of the Opposition said; at just the professionals. Let us look at those people (our caregivers, our caretakers) that we need to make Cayman a better place to make Cayman their home for, as he said, the country to survive. The Government took a wholehearted approach. They dealt with the long-term residents, and they dealt with the fixed-term policy to ensure that Caymanians—

Mr. Speaker, a person now . . . I hear some of the criticisms in the law firms and in the accounting firms. If we look at the average one of those partners or senior members there now in there (40 or 45) and they are going to be retiring around age 55. If we have a child in school now, he is graduating now, he has four years of college, will have to get his professional degree (whether it is law, his CPA or whatever), that is at least another one to two years. We are now at seven years. Then they have to come home and get at least three to five years' experience. Mr. Speaker, we are talking about a 15-year cycle as to when that person would be ready to take up their roll as a partner or the manager of those firms. We have said that people that are coming now can only stay for seven years.

Mr. Speaker, moving right on to education, the Government has also recognised the need to allow for further education, and because of the expense incurred with having to send students overseas, we created our own University College of the Cayman Islands. Therefore, when we were spending around $3 million on 70 or 80 scholarships to send overseas, we can now use that same money and educate around three times that amount of people; our own Caymanians. Government can now afford for three times more the number to get an education, to get a college degree; to prepare them to take up the correct roll for our Caymanian people in society. That is a forward-thinking Government.

Mr. Speaker, I am also proud to be a part of the United Democratic Party Government, which has, continuously, issued a record number. Every year it outdoes itself with a record number of scholarships for our people ensuring that our graduates have a chance to further their education. The Minister of Education went on and clarified his record on education. Before I come off of the topic of education, Mr. Speaker, I just need to make sure . . . because I was asked, only yesterday, by a Member for the district of East End if I could repeat what they had heard in the debate by the Second Elected Member for the district of Cayman Brac and Little Cayman, because they were so amazed and shocked they figured it had to be wrong. Mr. Speaker, I reminded them that the Standing Orders allow for Members to challenge if any of the statements are incorrect.

The area that they were concerned with was education, and they were telling me how they were sitting there and they were listening to the Member for East End, how he criticised the Government for not looking out for East End and for treating them like stepchildren was what he said. He explained to me, Mr. Speaker, how he was so amazed afterwards to hear that the Government in 2001, when they were putting together the 2002 Budget, they put $25,000 in the budget for the East End Primary School renovation programme.

Where the surprise came in was not that the Member for East End was criticising the Government for not doing enough for East End. They were really surprised because the Member got up and criticised the Government. When the facts were written, when the facts were read, what came to light was that that Member, knowing that that money was in the budget for the renovations, voted against the budget. Therefore, Mr. Speaker, here we go. We have the Member for East End getting up, criticising the Government for not doing anything.

The Government, in its first budget, puts money in the budget to help the school in East End, which he again got up and talked so passionately about. However, when the Government tried to do for East End's primary school, the Member then got up and voted against. Mr. Speaker, what is scary about that is that there was a division taken. The division number is 22 of 01. There were the 12 Ayes (which was the Government); [under] the Noes were [recorded] the First Elected Member for George Town, the Second Elected Member for George Town, the Third Elected Member for Bodden Town, the Elected Member for North Side, and the Elected Member for East End. So not only is it that the Member for East End did not care about the Primary School, but the whole PPM administration voted "No" against the budget, knowing that there was a provision in there for the Primary School. If the United Democratic Party Government is treating them like stepchildren, what would the Member say about the way that the People's Progressive Movement is treating them? There was also money, I understand, in there for the Gun Bay Cemetery.

Mr. Speaker, it is important that the people of East End know that the United Democratic Party Government, even after its elected representative got up and voted against the money to fix their school, gave them an extension of their place for burial. Even though he got up and voted against it, the United Democratic Party Government still recognised the need, not because of the lack of representation that the Member for East End came with. The people of East End have to recognise that even though there was inadequate representation on the representative's part, the United Democratic Party Government still recognised the need of the people of East End and continued forward. I can only wonder if it was the Government—I hear them keep talking about under a PPM administration. Mr. Speaker, I dare say that the Member that talks about his good track record, the track record that is there will show that if the people of East End had to bear it under a PPM administration there would be that thing that we talk about, 'Dog eat their supper.'

It would be a sad day for the country for the track record shows, Mr. Speaker. The track record shows that the People's Progressive Movement track record on doing things for the district of East End is "No", "No", "No", "No", "No". Five Noes, Mr. Speaker. What is sad again is that it is important, and I have to take my time to remind the people, because that Member got up, and once again, if you had heard how passionately he spoke about his concern for the East End Primary School, no one would believe that he then turned around and voted against the funds to try to do those same repairs. No one would also believe that in the following budget after that one, the PPM administration did not even debate the budget. They were not even there for the vote. You could not even have a division because they were not there.

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: They walked out.

Mr. Cline A. Glidden, Jr.: Mr. Speaker, and the Member has the nerve to talk about having a good track record because he gets up here and can read from the letters saying that he asked for it. He asked for it, the Government put the money in the budget, and he gets up and votes against the money; and he says that that is a good track record. It is really a confusing state. It is confusing to see that those kinds of things would go on in the House of Parliament, and if the general public did not know, Mr. Speaker, they would think that it was genuine.

Me, myself, Mr. Speaker, if I did not have the facts sitting in front of me when I heard him there with his loud, boisterous approach, I would have thought that it was genuine. However, records are a good thing and it goes to show—and that is why when we talk about a track record—the United Democratic Party Government, this same Government that the Member for East End criticises so much, has a beautiful park. I heard the Minister of Health and the Minister of Education saying how the Minister of Community Affairs went passed Bodden Town and did a park in East End, a beautiful park in East End, that the residents in East End tell me they use on a regular basis. However, they talk that United Democratic Party Government has done nothing for East End.

I was up there a few days ago. I was there for the opening of the pipeline, the water, in East End. Mr. Speaker, the residents of East End now have access to piped water by the Cayman Islands Water Authority. The Minister that got so criticised doing nothing for East End. And the list just goes on and on.

I was at a function on Saturday night, the Cayman Islands Football Association awards function, 350 plus people at the awards, where the President of the Association said that a year ago he had sat down with the Minister of Sports and told him that he wanted some help for the district of East End. The Minister of Sports, with no hesitation, gave him a coach for the district of East End. He had given a challenge to the Minister to say that he wanted to have an under-14 football team. One year later, he announced that East End has a team in the school league (and this is from recollection, so I stand to be corrected) an under-14 team, and as far as I can remember an under-17 team, and for the next football season they will have a team in the senior league. In one year's time, under the United Democratic Party Government, under the Minister of Community Affairs, the same Minister that that Member gets up and says does nothing for the district of East End. Under the same Government that he says treats the people of East End like stepchildren.

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: He does not know because he is not there.

Mr. Cline A. Glidden, Jr.: Mr. Speaker, I do not know if that could be the problem. If that is the problem, I apologise to the Member. If it is that he does not know what is going on in the district because he is not there, then I cannot really blame him. The only thing I can blame him for is for getting up and talking facts that he does not know about then, especially, when he does it so boisterously and so passionately. Mr. Speaker, maybe this is an education for him as well. Maybe he does not know all the positive things that are happening in the district of East End.

In reference to the Football—

Mr. Speaker, I have to take away that credit that was given because the Member is now acknowledging he knows about it. So he is saying to me that he was being dishonest in getting up here and saying that nothing was being done—

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: That is right.

Mr. Cline A. Glidden, Jr.: —because he just acknowledged that he knows that all of these good things are happening. He just did not want to give credit to the Government for doing the stuff. I kind of figured that is what is was, but I did not know it until he actually acknowledged it himself.

Mr. Speaker, while I am on football, it is important that I also quote . . . because sports are a very important part of my life. I have played football and had the pleasure of representing the country, worked on the football administration at an executive level and I am still active with my sports club, Scholars. Football and sport as a development and a continuous learning tool for life for our young people is something that is very close to my heart.

At the presentation on Saturday night, it was recalled to me how far sports have come in this country. The president of the Football Association was talking about how positive the Government is towards sports, how dynamic the Minister is. He even said that he did not want to give a challenge because it did not make sense to challenge, because if given the Minister has filled it before he could even recognise it. He said he challenged the Minister about a Sports Ministers' conference. He said within three weeks he saw an announcement on the front page of the paper that Cayman was hosting the Sports Ministers' Conference.

What was very telling to me is the direction that we have come under the United Democratic Party Government. That was in his speech. He said to the crowd that 20 years ago, when he first went with the late Ed Bush (who was the President of the Association, Mr. Webb was then the Vice President of the Association) and saw the then Minister of Sports to ask for some support for the development of football. Mr. Speaker, I cannot say who it was, but 20 years ago . . . Mr. Speaker, the Member is asking me who the Minister for Sports was 20 years ago. From the records in here it would show that that was Mr. Benson Ebanks, at the time.

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: Yeah, part of the PPM. Part of the PPM.

Mr. Cline A. Glidden, Jr.: The same gentleman I think that is helping to put together . . . Mr. Speaker, helping to put together a team of candidates in the election for this year.

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: It was not me.

Mr. Cline A. Glidden, Jr.: Mr. Speaker, what Mr. Webb told us that was so telling, is that he said, when he went and sat down with the Minister of Sports at the time to try to get some support, the words that were quoted were that 'Any money spent on Sports was a waste of money.' As a sports person, that really threw me for a loop. It threw me for a loop that only twenty years ago we would have a Minister of Government at the time with the mentality that any money that was spent on sports was a waste of Government money.

Mr. Speaker, thankfully, like the Minister of Sports, Dr. the Hon. Frank S. McField, in his contribution, said that, thankfully, again the good people of Cayman recognised the need for a change and they got the now Leader of Government Business who started a programme in 1992 that has made sports for all. We have playfields, coaches, and programmes in place that have been carried on admirably by the now current Minister of Sports, the Third Elected Member for George Town. When I hear the Member for East End compare and say he has a good track record—

Mr. Cline A. Glidden, Jr.: I can only imagine what his track record is because he has made some requests. He could get up and read from letters that he had requested things to be done and, Mr. Speaker, it was clear he only requested things to be done for the district of East End.

Now, compare that with the record of the United Democratic Party Government. Compare that to the fact that now we have our swimmers competing at world levels. We have Olympians. Mr. Speaker, we have boxing. The only challenge I would ask for the Minister to do now is make sure that we have a nice professional boxing fight here in Cayman.

You see, that is why it is so scary to challenge that Minister. I just challenged him to have a professional boxing fight, and he tells me they have one scheduled with Charles Whittaker in August.

Mr. Cline A. Glidden, Jr.: Mr. Speaker, the United Democratic Party Government—

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: Listen to what the man is saying. He runs the Government.

Mr. Cline A. Glidden, Jr.: We have Charles Whittaker, who is sponsored by the Ministry, and before I can even get the challenge out, the Minister is telling me that we have a professional fight, right here in Cayman in August so that all of those people who want to get a chance to see their very own, Charles Whittaker, fight who could not afford to go overseas could now stay at home and come out and support. That is the kind of Government that we have, Mr. Speaker.

Track and field. The Minister . . . Mr. Speaker, I am going to run out of time just on the Sports Ministry. The Minister has just announced upgrading of the track for our young people. We have softball, we have flag football, we have parks in every district and they tell me that the crown jewel of the parks is going to be in George Town on a waterfront piece of valuable property that the Government has not used. The Government is giving that to the people of George Town as a community park, Mr. Speaker,

The Speaker: Honourable Member, out of your two hours; the two hours will take you to 4.38 pm. I propose at 4.30 to ask for suspension so that you may complete your speech if you are still speaking at that point. Please continue.

Mr. Cline A. Glidden, Jr.: Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

We all know about the great things, and I know the Minister of Health is going to be coming shortly to speak about how concerned and what the Government has done, by providing insurance for our senior citizens, people that were not able to get insurance; another milestone in this country. The Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman spoke of Agriculture and the fact that we also have a Caymanian taking up the head of the hospital. We were talking about Caymanians earlier on, Mr. Speaker. Therefore, I too just want to say how happy I am to be a part of a Government that has done so much in education and labour; has done so much for community affairs and sports.

Mr. Speaker, I did not even get a chance to speak on housing. I cannot pass without housing. With all the criticisms that are there, we have just been told that the houses in West Bay are ready to go. Hopefully, by the time the Minister of Housing gets up to speak, we will have some of the residents in those houses. I can only say what an excitement this has brought to my constituency.

I can only say how many people have come to me that now see themselves with the possibility to own a home (not what they see as being a life-long home, rather a starter home) something that they are now able to go out get and stop paying rent, and actually own themselves. They were so excited to say to me that if the economy continues under such a good Government, they only expect themselves to be there for a short time. However, they are happy to know that when they are ready to pass it on, the Housing Trust is going to be there willing to buy back their home. They do not have to worry about it being on the market, because sure enough the Trust knows that there will be somebody else coming along the ladder who needs a starter home.

Mr. Speaker, a well thought-out programme again. A programme again that might not be perfect, but something is being done for many people who had no other chance, no hope of owning their own house.

Mr. Speaker, I am now going to move on to Tourism just briefly. It is important once again, to show how removed the People's Progressive Movement is from the realities of tourism as with the other topics that have been addressed.

All we can hear about now is that the tourism numbers are up. When you look down West Bay Road, all you see are people walking the streets. Yet, the Leader of the Opposition will get up, once again, and refer to a report that was made, I think it was in 2002 (I am not sure of the exact date), a report that he has referred to on numerous occasions. Mr. Speaker, the only difference with the reference at this stage was that up until about six months ago, when he would refer to that, and the punch line in that was that, as the numbers of cruise ship arrivals increase, the numbers of stay-over tourists—and, Mr. Speaker, I am quoting from my head, I have heard him say it so much that I can quote it—the number of stay-over visitors decrease. I could understand in 2002 when he was saying that, and I could understand sometime in 2003, but not for him to get up and use them in this Throne Speech to make the same reference. Earlier, he had said that tourism air arrivals/stay-over tourists were up as well, proving the fact that the report either has lived its time or was never correct.

What it has proved is that the Member needs to stop trying to scare people about mass tourism and that it is the cause of decline in stay-over tourists. What we have now for the last four or five months—actually, since January or November, I do not even remember the numbers—is an increase in cruise arrivals and an increase in air arrivals. So, Mr. Speaker, it is time for that Member to stop quoting from an outdated report. The facts are the facts now. He cannot use those scare tactics anymore to try to scare the people into believing. If the trend had continued up until November, he may have been able to fool some people.

However, every day we get a report in the newspaper saying the numbers are up and all projection is up in both, and that Member will still get up and start referring to a report saying that you cannot have one and the other. The cruise ship arrivals are proportionately deteriorating the product so much that the stay-over arrivals . . . is he saying that the report is faulty? Or, is he saying that the Department of Tourism, under the Leader of Government Business, is doing such a good job that he has reversed the trends and has even made the report faulty?

What is it that he is saying? He acknowledged that both were up. He acknowledged that air arrivals were up. Mr. Speaker, you know, the United Democratic Party Government is doing such a fine job that even when the Leader of the Opposition tries to criticise what they are doing, he gives them credit. He criticises using this report only to say that the numbers are up.

The Government . . . I do not remember who the author of this report was, but I would imagine it is someone that is renowned in tourism. The United Democratic Party under the leader of the Minister of Tourism, the First Elected Member for the district of West Bay, has proven the report wrong. We have arrival numbers up in stay-over and arrival numbers up in cruise, once again, showing you, showing the country what dynamic leadership will do.

We also are happy to see that investor confidence in the Cayman Islands is up. We have new developments going along. That Member said, in 2000 (I do not know if his position has changed since then, but he said) we do not want to slow down the economy because of the potential negative effects. Sadly, in 2001 the economy was slowed down, but happy to say we got out of that rut, we made a change. We got the United Democratic Party on board and now we have progressive Government, and the Island is moving forward.

Investor confidence is at its highest. Mr. Speaker, the confidence is so good that we have people like the Florida Cruise Ship Association (FCSA) willing to build and finance a port. That is great for the long-term future of the Cayman Islands. It shows that they are so confident in the Cayman Islands that they are willing to make long-term investments, long-term financial investments. I am sure it had something to do with the fact that they recognised the type of leadership the country was under now. They recognised that the country would take and do something innovative to help solve the problems, like the cargo operations at night do to relieve some of the congestion on our existing port.

Mr. Speaker, I am happy that the district of West Bay is also benefiting. I am happy to hear and to know that we have in place plans for a new school for the district of West Bay. I am happy to know that again, the Ministry of Tourism has been revitalised and we have a new project, the Cayman Islands Turtle Farm, a $36-million investment going forward in the district. It is providing great employment, even in its construction stages and we look forward to future employment in the operational stages.

I am happy to see that we are moving forward with a dock in the district of West Bay, which again will allow some of the economic success from tourism to be passed on directly to the district of West Bay. I am happy to see that we have a new post office and that today, construction started on our new library in the district.

Mr. Speaker, regardless of what the Opposition tries to say, things are going well in the Cayman Islands. The people of the Cayman Islands are back on track. They are working, they see a chance, and I am confident that that hope will continue after the November election.

I now move on to another topic that is near and dear to my heart, and that is your previous Ministry, Mr. Speaker, the Ministry of Planning, Communications and Lands. I am happy to see that we do have a liberalised telecoms market. Obviously, telecommunications, the liberalisation of which is not without its difficulties and that there was never an expectation that it was going to be smooth all the way. We knew we were going to reach difficult times; however, I have every confidence that the (Information Communication and Technology Authority) ICTA will continue to oversee and to regulate as they are allowed to do in the law.

Mr. Speaker, the only thing that I would like to say about that process at this time is that it is important that when people question the rights and the privileges and what some see as an abuse of power by the regulator, by the Authority, it is important to note that Cable & Wireless (CI) Ltd, the incumbent company at the time, was instrumental in the legislation and the law bringing into place the ICTA.

It is important for the public to know that the provisions for dispute resolution were agreed upon to the satisfaction of Cable & Wireless (CI) Ltd, that if the Authority was doing something that they were out of line with doing, that Cable & Wireless (CI) Ltd was satisfied that they would have recourse. That is where I gain my satisfaction. I do not know the day-to-day running or how it works. My involvement was at the negotiation stage with Cable & Wireless (CI) Ltd at the time while they still had a licence by the Government. I do know that Cable & Wireless (CI) Ltd was satisfied that if the Authority tried to do something that they felt was not reasonable to them that they do have ways and means of settling the dispute, which was satisfactory to them. Therefore, I feel that if the Authority is doing something that is outside of their scope, or outside of their authority, I have every confidence that Cable & Wireless (CI) Ltd will take the appropriate action to remedy that situation.

Mr. Speaker, I need to make a point on another key, what I would term, "success story" of the United Democratic Government. We have heard the criticisms earlier on how terrible it was going to be when the United Democratic Party Government, while you were the Minister, brought forward a proposal to change the heights of buildings. At the time, the Government felt that that would go a long way in stimulating the economy and allowing re-development. We have seen that that has proven to be the case. We have seen that those steps, along with others, have made development, once again, attractive on our beautiful Island and once again the country is reaping the benefits. Planning applications are at record levels.

Mr. Speaker, one of the things less talked about by the critics is that in allowing additional stories to the building, the Government also got greater setbacks from the sea. We have always been criticising and saying, 'We have made these developers build too close to the sea.' Once again, through the art of negotiating what was said was, 'Okay, you can go higher but we need you to give back more space. We need to have more space for our residents to be able to enjoy the beach.' We had some people who said that the movement of sand on the beach is because of the buildings being too close, so this Government again changed the regulations to allow taller buildings and made the setbacks from the sea greater.

Mr. Speaker, I now move on to Caribbean Utilities Co Ltd (CUC), another area in that Ministry. I am proud to have played whatever part in allowing an agreement with (CUC), after difficult negotiations, that they were willing to give up an agreed rate of return of 15 per cent in return for a price-cap proposal, which does not allow them to be raising fees before May 2008. Mr. Speaker, before, every year (CUC) was getting a 3 per cent. I need to quantify that . . . with the price-cap mechanism, it is only if the cost of living increases significantly, which would mean that it would move somewhere more than 10 per cent. No increases. So, again, we can look at the future and plan. Businesses can plan; homeowners can plan, whereas, before they planned every year for around a 2.5 – 3 per cent increase. What this Government has achieved is a rollback of 3 per cent, a reduction of approximately 4 per cent, and the introduction of competitive bidding that would allow even further reductions again.

Mr. Speaker, yet the Opposition will get up and say that the Government has done nothing. You know, if we look at just the decrease, the 2.5 per cent reduction for this year, and we take the 3 per cent from last year, that would have been a 5.5 percent reduction. If we take the 3 per cent every year—and (CUC) has shown their figures to show that they were entitled under the existing agreement for another 3 per cent increase—the 3, the 2.5, 5.5, the 6 per cent that did not happen, is an 11 per cent swing. The United Democratic Party Government got a 5.5 per cent decrease instead of getting a 6 percent increase, even before the introduction of competition.

Now, I am not going to say too much on (CUC) because I was intimately involved with that and I do not want anyone to feel that I might be blowing my own horn. However, I do want to say that I am proud to have been a Member of the Government that gave me an opportunity to use my experience and my expertise to be a part of that group that negotiated the agreement for (CUC).

Mr. Speaker, what really concerns me—and if for no other reason why I find the need to run again, to offer myself for election—I listened to the Opposition side. I listened to their solution; I listened to the Member for East End and he was not quick to give praise to the reductions, or quick to come up with any great solutions. After coming with a wish-list and saying all the things that the PPM administration would do, his solution regarding the problem with (CUC) and the ever increasing electricity rates was that Government should reduce duty.

Mr. Speaker, how innovative is that? We are going to do everything and, like I said, be all to all, but a solution to reduce duties? I think he said the Government may be getting approximately $12 or $20 million every year from duties, which pay for our education, pay for our senior citizens and build the roads. His solution is not to get (CUC) shareholders to earn less on their investment; his solution is that the Government should take less. I have to ask the question: Where is his loyalty, to the people of Cayman, or is it to (CUC) shareholders? A reduction in duty will have given a reduction, but is it to the foreign, majority shareholder, Fortis Company, or is it to the Caymanian people who elected him to represent them?

Mr. Cline A. Glidden, Jr.: To come out and ask for the Government to reduce duty as a solution to our high electricity bills. Where are we going to get that money from, Mr. Speaker? According to him, we need more schools; we need better roads; we need to do more for our senior citizens. Where is that makeup? That is what happens when you make hollow promises. There is no thought. You get up and say, under a PPM administration, 'We will do this. We are going to provide everything and then we are not going to charge those foreigners any duty either. We are not going to make our money from foreign investors, but we are going to make sure that Caymanians have everything they want.'

Moment of Interruption—4.30 PM

The Speaker: Honourable Member, we have reached the hour of 4.30. However, as I said earlier, the Honourable Member speaking has eight minutes remaining in his speech, and I think it would only be reasonable if he is allowed to complete his speech with only eight minutes remaining. I therefore call on the Honourable Leader of Government Business to suspend Standing Order 10(2) to allow the Honourable Member Speaking to complete his speech.

Suspension of Standing Order 10(2)

Hon. W. McKeever Bush: Mr. Speaker, I move the suspension of Standing Order 10(2) in order that the Member making his contribution can complete it.

The Speaker: The question is that Standing Order 10(2) be suspended to allow the Honourable Member to complete his speech. All those in favour please say Aye. Those against, No.

Ayes.

The Speaker: The Ayes have it. So ordered.

Agreed: Standing Order 10(2) suspended.

Mr. Cline A. Glidden, Jr.: Thank you, Mr. Speaker, and I want to thank the House for giving me this opportunity to continue.

As we took that short break, I was questioning the rationale and the thought process behind the People's Progressive Movement. All I can say, I am happy that for the last three years, as a Caymanian with two young children that have a great future in the Cayman Islands, I am happy that we have had progressive-thinking individuals. Progressive individuals by name and thoughts, who would look for creative and innovative solutions to the problems of and ending the existing monopolies, like the telecommunications and electricity monopoly; to still allow the company that has served the Island quite well, provided training for many Caymanians and who gave me my opportunity to go off to do my training.

What we have been able to achieve is a relationship with those companies where they can continue making a reasonable return on their investment; a return that they were happy to negotiate. We did not go into any court, or go through any court battles, and nothing was thrown on them by the Government. It was a mutual agreement that would allow them to continue making satisfactory returns while allowing the Caymanian people to have a new system. The system that was there had served its time. It was time for a new relationship. This Government was able to go in and negotiate an agreement that will benefit the people of the Cayman Islands and still meet satisfaction with the shareholders.

Mr. Speaker, that is a difficult thing. If I was the owner of (CUC) and I still had eight years left on my agreement where I was guaranteed a rate of return of 15 per cent, you can only imagine how difficult it would have and must have been to get them to agree on a different arrangement with eight years of a guarantee left. Mr. Speaker, you know how difficult and how hard those negotiations were, but again, with the support of the Government, we were able to come through that. I can only imagine—actually I do not have to imagine, I see the kind of line. If the People's Progressive Movement administration was in power, their solution would have been, 'Okay, (CUC), keep your guaranteed rate of return, but we are going to reduce duty so the Government is going to give up $20 million, but we are not asking you to give up anything'. No, Mr. Speaker, not the United Democratic Party, not the Government, that I am so proud to be a part of. I think that when the record is shown as to the accomplishments of this Government in the short time, in the very tumultuous and turbulent world condition, that this Government has stood up and represented its people well.

We expect the Opposition to criticise, and I guess truthfulness is too much to ask, especially, in an election year. I was hoping that by now we would have seen a difference. Mr. Speaker, I can remember the first relationship, the first exposure I had to that administration right after the Government was putting together the 2002 Budget. The Government, instead of going out and borrowing the $56 million, decided to take another one of those hard decisions and to go out to the financial industry and to get the money from the financial industry. What the People's Progressive Movement (the Opposition) said at that time was that we were going to destroy the country—

The Speaker: Honourable Member, you have two minutes remaining.

Mr. Cline A. Glidden, Jr.: Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

The country was going to go. We were going to lose our financial industry. The banks were going to shut down. Their only solution at that time, I guess, was to borrow again. We have moved passed that. The banking industry is vibrant and strong as far as the local controls go. We do have international challenges. The banks have paid those fees; the law firms have paid those fees; the Government had some $40 million to continue doing business that it did not have. It did not have to go out and borrow. It did not have to put additional debt that my children are going to have to worry about. At that time, the People's Progressive Movement was not progressive enough to see the benefit of that. I guess that is why they voted against it, because it was a balanced budget and they are not used to seeing balanced budgets.

Mr. Speaker, I assume that by now they would have been, with such good teachers as the United Democratic Party Government. I would have even felt better if the evidence showed that they had learnt something in their three years, for if we had to grade them, they would have a big failing grade. It is obvious that the country cannot afford to change the United Democratic Party Government and put the current Opposition in place. Mr. Speaker, we see that there are all sorts of games being played. The Lady Member for North Side told me about West Bay. We see that there are games being played there where there are two members of the People's Progressive Movement and two members that are not. Mr. Speaker, I have full confidence—

The Speaker: Honourable Member, you have 30 seconds.

Mr. Cline A. Glidden, Jr.: Mr. Speaker, I have full confidence that the people of West Bay, the smart people of West Bay, have good common sense and will once again not be taken up with any of that kind of tomfoolery. They said no to the tomfoolery in 2000 and I am sure it is going to be the same in 2004.

Mr. Speaker, I thank you for your indulgence, and I thank all Members and I look forward to the continued contributions to the debate.

ADJOURNMENT

The Speaker: Honourable Leader of Government Business, I call on you for the adjournment Motion.

The Speaker: Honourable Leader...

Hon. W. McKeever Bush: Mr. Speaker, I took a little while because the Lady Member for North Side was aggravating me and we know what the PPM is all about—People Provoking McKeeva—and that is exactly what she was doing.

Mr. Speaker, I move the adjournment of this Honourable House until 10.00 am, Wednesday 14 July, 2004.

The Speaker: The question is that this House do now adjourn until 10.00 am. on Wednesday, 14 July, 2004. All those in favour please say Aye. Those against, No.

Ayes.

The Speaker: The Ayes have it.

At 4.40 pm the House stood adjourned until 10.00 am Wednesday, 14 July 2004.

OFFICIAL HANSARD REPORT
WEDNESDAY
14 JULY 2004
11:45 AM
Fifth Sitting

The Speaker: I will invite the Honourable Minister for Planning to lead us in prayers.

Member for Bodden Town. I notice that that Member is present.

PRAYERS

Mrs. Juliana Y. O'Connor-Connolly, JP: Let us pray.

Almighty God, from whom all wisdom and power are derived: We beseech Thee so to direct and prosper the deliberations of the Legislative Assembly now assembled, that all things may be ordered upon the best and surest foundations for the glory of Thy Name and for the safety, honour and welfare of the people of these Islands.

Bless our Sovereign Lady, Queen Elizabeth II; Philip, Duke of Edinburgh; Charles, Prince of Wales; and all the Royal Family. Give grace to all who exercise authority in our Commonwealth, that peace and happiness, truth and justice, religion and piety may be established among us. Especially we pray for the Governor of our Islands, the Speaker of the Legislative Assembly, Official Members and Ministers of Cabinet and Members of the Legislative Assembly, that we may be enabled faithfully to perform the responsible duties of our high office. All this we ask for Thy great Name's sake.

Let us say The Lord's Prayer together: Our Father, who art in Heaven, Hallowed be Thy Name. Thy Kingdom come, Thy will be done on earth as it is in Heaven. Give us this day our daily bread, and forgive us our trespasses, as we forgive those who trespass against us. Lead us not into temptation, but deliver us from evil. For Thine is the Kingdom, the power and the glory, forever and ever. Amen.

Proceedings resumed at 11.48 am

The Speaker: Please be seated. Proceedings are resumed.

READING BY THE HONOURABLE SPEAKER OF MESSAGES AND ANNOUNCEMENTS

Apologies

The Speaker: I have received apologies for absence from the Honourable Third Official Member, and apologies for the late arrival of the Third Elected

STATEMENTS BY MEMBERS OF THE GOVERNMENT

The Speaker: I have received no statements by Honourable Members of the Cabinet.

GOVERNMENT BUSINESS

BILLS

Suspension of Standing Orders 45, 46(1), (2), & (4) and 47 to allow the National Roads Amendment Bill 2004 to be read a first, second, and third time

The Speaker: I call on The Honourable Deputy Leader of Government Business to move the Motion for the suspension.

Hon. Gilbert A. McLean: Mr. Speaker, I beg to move the suspension of Standing Orders 45, 46(1), (2), and (4) and 47 to allow the National Roads Authority (Amendment) Bill, 2004 to be read a first, second, and third time.

Mr. Speaker, in that other amendment, very briefly is to be included the words, "and one shall be from Cayman Brac or Little Cayman". This is being done. I could proceed on the Bill; however, I could not give you or the House the exact time when that will be available here in the Chamber for circulation. Thus I could begin, but if it would please the House or yourself, Mr. Speaker, we could pass over this perhaps and begin the debate and at an appropriate break in that time, we could deal with this. However, I am in your hands. I can start it because it is very, very simple and straightforward.

The Speaker: Thank you. The suspension will provide the sort of latitude that may be required for that to be accomplished.

The question is that Standing Orders 45, 46(1), (2), and (4) and 47 be suspended. All those in favour please say Aye. Those against No.

Ayes.

The Speaker: The Ayes have it. Standing Orders 45, 46 (1), (2), and (4) and 47 are accordingly suspended.

Agreed. Standing Order 45, 46(1), (2) and 47 suspended.

FIRST READING

The National Roads Authority (Amendment) Bill, 2004

The Speaker: The Bill has been deemed to have been read a first time and is set down for a Second Reading.

SECOND READING

The National Roads Authority (Amendment) Bill, 2004

The Speaker: The Honourable Deputy Leader of Government Business.

Hon. Gilbert A. McLean: Mr. Speaker, I beg to move the Second Reading of a Bill entitled the National Roads Authority (Amendment) Bill, 2004.

The Speaker: The Bill has been duly moved. Does the Honourable Minister wish to speak thereto?

Hon. Gilbert A. McLean: Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

As the Honourable House knows, just a few weeks ago the National Roads Authority Bill, 2004 was debated and passed and it has since been published as the National Roads Authority Law, 2004 – Law 10/04. This was published in supplement No. 1 in the Extraordinary Gazette No. 23 dated 30 June, 2004.

Mr. Speaker and Honourable Members, when the various administrative actions were being taken, it was discovered that there was an oversight in the Bill where it made it somewhat impossible to proceed further until it was corrected. The problem was in Section 7(4) which dealt with the appointment of directors to the board, and in particular Sections (c) and (d) where the Law said, “The Board shall consist of not less than twelve nor more than thirteen directors of whom –

“(c) one who has demonstrated to the satisfaction of the Board substantial knowledge of and experience in planning, design and development of public roads, shall be the Managing Director;

“(d) one who has demonstrated to the satisfaction of the Board substantial knowledge of and experience in planning, design and development of public roads shall be the Deputy Managing Director;”

Such persons were to be appointed as directors of the board but in section 11(1) the Law says: “The person appointed to be a director under section 7(4)(c) shall be appointed by the Board to be the Managing Director of The Authority, at such remuneration and on such terms and conditions as the Board may think fit.”

So, the problem was the Law said that the persons had to be appointed as directors of the board and then had to turn around and appoint themselves as managing director and deputy managing director. It was an oversight in that this was changed as a result of debate on the Bill where it was the Governor doing these appointments. Therefore, to correct the situation in the way it presently stands is why the amendment is before this Honourable House.

What has happened is that the managing director and the deputy managing director have been removed as directors of the board and they are, in fact, employees of the Authority appointed by the board. That is what this amendment is to accomplish. Therefore, the post of managing director and deputy managing director have been removed from the board of directors and there are two staff members who would be appointed by the board.

Mr. Speaker, the number on the board has been reduced to not less than nine or more than 11 directors. In the Amendment Bill before the House in 4(f) where it says, “the others shall be no less than two but not more than four individuals” added to (f) would be the words, one of whom shall be from Cayman Brac or Little Cayman. That brief amendment is now with me and I would like to sign same, and if you would so authorise it could be circulated to Honourable Members and it could be dealt with at Committee stage.

Mr. Speaker, may I take this opportunity to briefly say that the idea of the National Roads Authority has been one that has been around for a very, very long time. You, as Minister with responsibility for roads, knew of it when it was in its infancy. The idea was to create a body where the subject of roads could be addressed specifically. It was also the intention and the objective to be able to specifically assign certain revenue streams for the development, maintenance and repair of roads, which would be dealt with by the Roads Authority. Like all the Authorities, the Authority assumes responsibility nationally and it would also include responsibility for roads for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman.

On that latter point, I would like to make the point that I personally see no change in the present arrangements on Little Cayman and Cayman Brac in terms of the people who work there in the roads section. They would be assigned, specifically, the work on roads on Cayman Brac and Little Cayman.

One individual, be that whomever, would be specified as the lead person there. I would not know who that would be as that would have to be done administratively and ultimately agreed by the Governor. It would give that individual some prominence as being specifically the senior person to carry out the work on roads on Cayman Brac and Little Cayman.

I could not conceive now, or in the future, any road development on Cayman Brac and Little Cayman that would not include the views and the opinions of the elected representatives of Cayman Brac and Little Cayman as is presently done. In fact, I think to do otherwise would be ignoring a very fundamental principle of democracy which is that the people elected by the people have the right to represent the views and wishes of the people. To amplify that thought, the addition of the words as previously quoted, “one of whom shall be from Cayman Brac or Little Cayman.”

Therefore, that is the position, and the monies which have been assigned for roads on the Cayman Islands in the 2004/2005 Budget would be spent on the Brac on the projects to which it has been assigned for this year and in the future it would similarly be done.

I think it is very important that the Brac must be included from the beginning regarding the planning and determination of what roads are to be fixed, how much money will be spent and the actual execution of the work to be carried out in completing the road works for the Cayman Brac and Little Cayman.

Mr. Speaker, there is little more I can say to this because it speaks for itself. It is simply an attempt to clear up what was overlooked when the amendments were being made, when the Bill was being debated and, ultimately, passed. As such, I recommend it to Honourable Members.

The Speaker: Does any other Member wish to speak? Does any other Member wish to speak?

The Elected Member for East End.

Mr. V. Arden McLean: Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

Mr. Speaker, I rise to make a short contribution to the amending Bill before us.

I think it is a well-known fact that the Opposition supports a National Roads Authority because of our previous record when the Roads Authority Bill was brought to this Honourable House. However, there are a couple of things that I think we have missed in this new amendment.

One in particular is that this amendment will remove the managing director and deputy managing director from the board entirely. In most instances, when it comes to the authorities, the managing director and deputy managing directors, those authorities are appointed to the board by virtue of their position and it could be as serving in the capacity of ex-officio members in most instances. As far as I am aware, there is no provision in the Law or in the amendment now to say that they will be appointed to the board as ex-officio members. As a matter of fact, the amendment removes them from being board members. Therefore, our concern is, what functions and relationship will their positions have as managing director and the deputy managing director with that of the board of directors. I believe that those two positions and the individuals therein being the daily operators, so to speak, of the Authority, the directors would not need their advice and expertise in making their decisions. Now, the Minister may have something to discuss on that section because I cannot, for the life of me, find it in the Law.

Now, under Part II of the Law, Personnel of the Authority, Section 12(1) & (2) lay out the functions, powers, and duties of the managing director. It specifically says, “The Managing Director shall manage road operations and procurement on behalf of the Authority, subject to the directions of the Board, and to this end shall -” the one in particular is “(a) oversee the technical operations of the Authority related to planning, demand forecasting, construction, upgrading, rehabilitation or maintenance;” It goes on, Mr. Speaker, to state the other responsibilities that the managing director has; however, it is all operational and I believe some place we need to ensure that the managing director and/or the deputy has some position on the board or to give advice to the directors.

Certainly, under the amendment there is no mention of anyone to be appointed with the expertise in the building or design and operations and the likes of roads in the country. It is:

“(4)(a) one, not being a public officer, shall be chairman;

“(b) one, not being a public officer, shall be deputy chairman;”

“(c) one shall be the Permanent Secretary or his nominee;

“(d) Financial Secretary or his nominee;

“(e) three shall be individuals who have demonstrated to the satisfaction of the Governor substantial knowledge of and experience in one or more of the following areas –

(i) tourism;

(ii) law; and

(iii) environmental matters; and

“(f) the others shall be not less than two but not more than four individuals.”

I understand from the Minister there is an amendment to that to say “one from Cayman Brac”. Therefore, there is no provision to have that expertise on the board at this time when it was brought prior to this amendment.

The Minister also spoke of someone being appointed from Cayman Brac and he mentioned that it would be unfair (undemocratic I believe he said) that the representatives of Cayman Brac were not allowed to be on the board. I do not know if that was specifically what he meant, but I assume that is what he meant, Mr. Speaker. If such is the case, then I would invite the Minister to give some specific reasons why an Elected Member would have to be on the board rather than an ordinary person, public officer or an elected officer.

Certainly, as I understand it now, there is an Elected Member from Cabinet responsible for district administration, and if that continues to hold true in the future of all Cabinets, then certainly I suspect that that person would be the person if that is the case. However, I do not know. Maybe the Minister can explain that to us.

I understand the dilemma we put ourselves in when it comes to Cayman Brac being removed from us and some liaison has to be carried out between Government and that Island. I see the necessity in that, Mr. Speaker. Certainly, that too can be carried out with someone other than an officer or an Elected Member of the Legislature. We have the same being carried out with the Immigration, Planning and Development Boards and Planning.

Point of Elucidation

Hon. Gilbert A. McLean: Mr. Speaker, on a point of elucidation, if the Member would give way.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Health Services.

Hon. Gilbert A. McLean: Mr. Speaker, so as not to draw this debate out—unless that is the wish of the House. I have all day and I can talk as much as any other one. However, I want to make it absolutely, utterly clear I did not say—and if the Member understood me saying that an Elected Member from Cayman Brac and Little Cayman should be on the Board, I did not say that, nor would I move to appoint the Elected Members from the Brac to the board.

The whole idea is to put technical people on the Board. Therefore, the person from the Brac would be an individual chosen in consultation with Members in the appointment. It does not intend or include the appointment of any Members. If that was the case, then the same thing would apply to every other district. We would have to appoint one from every other district, and I would certainly not go that route.

I thank the Member for giving way, and I hope that has clarified the point.

The Speaker: Thank you, Honourable Minister for that elucidation.

The Elected Member for East End, please continue.

Mr. V. Arden McLean: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I thank the Minister also for that because, like I said, I did not know what he meant when he said it would be undemocratic for the representatives not to be involved in it. I thank him for that.

Mr. Speaker, I guess there is not much more for me to say other than ask the Minister to reply and to respond to my inquiries on the appointment of the managing director and/or the deputy managing director to the board for their knowledge and expertise.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: Does any other Member wish to speak?
The Honourable Leader of the Opposition.

Hon. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Mr. Speaker, if I may, for a point of clarity, Sir, I just want to make sure.

We have a Committee stage amendment that has been brought. I am wondering whether we are debating the issue separately, or we are debating the original amending Bill and the latest amendment together, Sir. I was not quite sure about that.

The Speaker: It would seem to make sense if the amendment is debated concurrently with the Bill that is before the House since it is very much a part of that Bill. I so rule.

Does any other Member wish to speak? Does any other Member wish to speak?

The Honourable Minister for Planning and District Administration.

Hon. Juliana Y. O'Connor-Connolly: Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

I rise to give what I would hope to be a very brief and frank contribution to the Bill now before this Honourable House entitled, "The Roads Authority (Amendment) Bill, 2004".

I will not go into the temptation of repeating facts that have already been made. The position has already been put for the justification of the National Roads Authority Bill and, as the Minister responsible, I have always supported him in whatever he has brought before the House or in Council or otherwise. I believe that he is the best person to make the judgement as it relates to having a Roads Authority, certainly for the jurisdiction of Grand Cayman.

Suffice it to say, as the Minister with the collective responsibility for the district of Cayman Brac and Little Cayman, I believe that I would indeed be completely stifling my conscience if I did not make the following remarks.

I feel that history has shown that the Public Works Department, as in the case of many other departments in Cayman Brac, has worked tremendously well taking into consideration that we are separated by some 90 miles of water. I believe that my conscience could not allow me to support such a move this morning, and within the restrictive ambit which I operate as being a Member of Executive Council, I will not at this time go any further except to say that I would much rather go down fighting for the people of Cayman Brac and Little Cayman than be a 'yes' person.

May it please you, Sir!

The Speaker: Does any other Member wish to speak?
Does any other Member wish to speak?

The Honourable Leader of the Opposition.

Hon. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Mr. Speaker, thank you very much.

My colleague, the Elected Member for East End, when examining the Bill, which we had but a few minutes to look at, explained some of the concerns and perhaps those concerns can easily be rectified in the wind up. However, in listening to the First Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman, the Minister of Planning, in her contribution to the amending Bill that is brought, has confused us on this side. That word 'confused' is perhaps, not quite appropriate, Mr. Speaker, rather befuddled because it is obvious that there is not unanimity with the Government with the move.

If I were to examine what obtains at present, as memory serves me, when it comes to the functions of the Public Works Department in Cayman Brac and Little Cayman, and District Administration and the relationship with both the representatives and Cabinet, as I understand the functions now, the district representatives are in consultation with whoever the person is, whether it is an official or Elected Member of Cabinet who is in charge of District Administration. District Administration encompasses Works which includes road works. Therefore, the Minister or Official Member—at present it is a Minister, in times gone by there were occasions when it was an Official Member—who would be responsible for District Administration would also have the relationship with the Public Works Department over on Cayman Brac who would be under District Administration by way of direction.

The final amendment that we have just seen—and I can only go from what I am reading because I have no knowledge of anything that is behind the scenes. This Committee stage amendment says, "That the Bill be amended in clause 2," with your permission, Sir, in the new section 7, subsection (4) proposed for insertion of the principal Law by deleting paragraph (f) and substituting the following paragraph: "(f) the others shall be no less than two but not more than four individuals, one of whom shall be from Cayman Brac or Little Cayman."

Therefore, I listened to the Minister when he was dealing with that very brief Committee stage amendment that is being proposed. As I understand from what he is saying, the person who would be on the board, of these two or four that they speak of which would be from Cayman Brac and Little Cayman would be the point person for the functions of the Roads Authority in Cayman Brac and Little Cayman. I am trying to get it clear in my mind how this is going to work from here on because it means that the Roads Section of the Public Works Department in Cayman Brac is going to be separated as an entity from how it is now in the same manner that the Roads Section for the Public Works Department on Grand Cayman has been hived off to form a National Roads Authority. As long as the functions are clear, I do not see that as being an impossible task if they are on the same compound. I see some physical difficulties given, not only the location and how they function on Cayman Brac and Little Cayman—and I say this with the greatest respect—but also with the people involved, how it is going to work. I do not know if anyone has thought about anything like that.

The Minister has said that he has all day. I do not want to take all day; however, this is new. By now I am known to be cautious, and I really want to get a clear understanding as to how this function is going to take place.

You see, the original amending Bill itself does not seem to be anything that one needs to really wonder about because the amendments are very straightforward. However, when we look at the last Committee stage amendment that "one person shall be from Cayman Brac or Little Cayman", what I want to get is a clear understanding of is how the functions are going to be there. That is, if this is the case, and the intent is to make sure that there is representation from Cayman Brac and Little Cayman, then although the Minister has said a few words about how it works, I think it requires a lot more than what I have heard to understand how it would function.

I do not profess to have the clearest knowledge of all the functions, but I have had my own experiences and I have a pretty good feel of how it works at present. So if the arrangement now is satisfactory but the National Roads Authority—if in the Minister's judgment it should be all clearly separated from other entities, and everything else including Cayman Brac and Little Cayman, then I desire for him to put forward, with clarity, the reasoning to justify why that is what is being thought.

From the Opposition's point of view, I want to have a clear-cut understanding as to exactly what this whole thing is all about because, obviously, the Government is divided on the issue. Where they are divided and to what extent I do not know, but certainly there is one. For the Opposition to participate in a vote of this nature we must have a clear understanding, and obviously we do not know all of the ramifications because we have only seen it this morning. It is one of the 'drop on your desk' ones that you deal with right away. We do not want to try and perceive what might not be there, but the mere fact that there is not unanimity with the Government on the matter, we would like to have a very clear understanding of the whole intent of the amendments in order for us to make informed decisions when it comes to the vote.

There is not much more for me to say at this point in time because I do not want to conjecture and I do not want to presuppose anything when the fact is we do not know.

Therefore, taking it on the surface, and what the two amendments read, we certainly wish to have the entire picture very clear in order for us to make a sensible determination with regards to the vote. I hope the Minister would take the time out to do that in his winding up.

The Speaker: Honourable Members, I concur with the sentiments that have just been expressed by the Honourable Leader of the Opposition. I believe that it might be helpful for the Government to meet and further discuss any areas that they may not be fully in agreement on. Accordingly, I propose to take the luncheon break at this time to allow for such concurrence between the Government Members.

We will return at 2 pm.

Proceedings resumed at 3.40 pm

The Speaker: Proceedings are resumed. Does any other Member wish to speak on the Bill before the House? Does any other Member wish to speak? Does any other Member wish to speak? If not, would the Honourable Member for Works wish to wind up on this Bill?

Hon. Gilbert A. McLean: Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

Mr. Speaker, over the years I have seen numerous occasions when something which was supposed to be extremely simple came to the Legislative Assembly as a bill or an amendment, or whatever. It has taken some strange and unexpected pathways.

This matter before the House is one of a small amendment. Mr. Speaker, I would just like to briefly read for the benefit of all, even though we are all supplied, but perhaps history will mark this occasion and it will be good if it was in the records.

It is "A Bill for a Law to Vary the Composition of the Board of Directors of the National Roads Authority; and for Incidental and Connected Purposes".

"1. (1) This Law may be cited as the National Roads Authority (Amendment) Law, 2004.

"(2) This Law shall be deemed to have come into force immediately after the coming into force of the National Roads Authority Law, 2004. The National Roads Authority Law, 2004, is amended in Section 7 as follows -

(a) by repealing subsection (4) and substituting the following subsection -

"(4) The Board shall consist of not less than nine nor more than eleven directors of whom-

- (a) one, not being a public officer, shall be chairman;
- (b) one, not being a public officer, shall be deputy chairman;
- (c) one shall be the Permanent Secretary of the Ministry responsible for roads or his nominee;
- (d) one shall be the Financial Secretary or his nominee;
- (e) three shall be individuals who have demonstrated to the satisfaction of the Governor substantial knowledge of and experience in one or more of the following areas -

(i) tourism;

(ii) law; and

(iii) environmental matters; and

(f) the others shall be not less than two but not more than four individuals, ..."

Mr. Speaker, I had circulated an amendment which would add to (f) the words "one of whom shall be from Cayman Brac or Little Cayman".

It goes on to say: "to be appointed for not less than three years by the Governor, but who shall hold office at his pleasure.";

(b) in subsection (5) by repealing the words "under subsection (4)(g) or (h)" and substituting the words "under subsection (4)(e) or (f)"; and

(c) in subsection (9) by repealing the words "appointed under subsection (4)(e) or (f)".

3. The National Roads Authority Law, 2004, is amended in section 11 by repealing subsections (1) and (2) and substituting the following subsections -

"(1) The Board shall appoint such individual to be the Managing Director of the Authority, at such remuneration and on such terms and conditions as the board may think fit.

"(2) The Board shall appoint such individual to be the Deputy Managing Director of the Authority, at such remuneration and on such terms and conditions as the board may think fit."

Mr. Speaker, that is all before this Honourable House - an amendment Bill.

Mr. Speaker, I would like to say to Members that this Bill was sent here to the Legislative Assembly from last week and I apologise that it was not distributed. I inquired about it and I was told that there was a problem with a virus in the computer system and so it was not available to be distributed until yesterday, if I am not mistaken. So I apologise that it was brought here in the way it had to be brought today.

It is quite critical that it was brought because Honourable Members will understand that you could hardly have a managing director and a deputy managing director appointed as directors of a board, and then turn around and have that Board appoint the same two directors again as the managing director and deputy director who would report back to that same Board. Therefore, it was critical.

Further, Mr. Speaker, the Financial Secretary has set up a special account for the funds of the National Roads Authority. They, in fact, were set up from 1st July; this is the 14th and, Mr. Speaker, things need to be in place for the board to be appointed and for a managing director to be appointed and a deputy managing director to start the function of the board and to carry on the business it is supposed to perform.

I do not believe in coming at the last minute to this Honourable Legislative Assembly with anything, and I do not like suspending the Standing Orders.

However, it has to be done in some instances and this was clearly one that I think was justified for the reasons. I do not have control over how fast a piece of legislation is prepared, and even when we bring it we miss certain things.

This National Roads Authority Law was passed in that congested place over in the building opposite the Government Administration Building, commonly known as the 'Glass House'. There were numerous amendments which I was happy to bring about raised by various Members including the Opposition and some on the Government side. It slipped me, the Permanent Secretary, Legal Drafting—everybody that was there—the clear need to bring about an amendment to section 7, as is proposed today, had not been done. It is as simple as that.

Mr. Speaker, the fact that it specifies, particularly, a person from Cayman Brac and Little Cayman, it is, in fact, an exception, or it is especially put in there to make sure that Cayman Brac and Little Cayman is not left out. I would never consciously leave Cayman Brac and Little Cayman out of any dealings that I have to deal with in my present capacity as a Minister. I say that having had the honour to be a district commissioner and a two-term representative there, and I believe I would have been a third-term representative had I chosen to stand, which I did not. I took the decision not to.

Mr. Speaker, my good friend, the Minister of Education tells me that I do not stand up for myself enough. Every now and then he tells me. I think it might be good if I make a note of something that is an irrefutable fact. I am the only living or dead individual that has ever served in this Legislative Assembly that has been elected both in Cayman Brac and in the district of Grand Cayman. The fact that I was elected in Cayman Brac, there were some who referred to me as 'that foreigner'. Those things do not happen lightly, and anyone who believes that is easy ought to go and try and do it. Therefore, I do speak with certain authority, although, I do not like to talk about it too much or blow my horn. It is just a fact.

The last thing I need, Mr. Speaker, is to take on any more responsibility than I have. I have more than my share and I take it deadly serious. There is no Minister of Government that works any longer hours than I do. Everything that I do, I do to the best of my ability and it does not serve a particular group, it serves this Country on a whole as best as I can understand it. So it is important that Cayman Brac and Little Cayman are taken into account.

I went on to say that I saw no changes in what was presently happening there. The same people who are doing there jobs on the road I said—like Joel Scott, Myron, and Don Tatum—would continue to do their jobs. There would be no changes. Why would there be a change? They are fixing roads, something they have done for 22 to 25 years. Why would there be a change? Perhaps others thought that there would be.

Again, I do my best to deal from position of fact and knowledge.

I invited Mr. Colford Scott of the Public Works and Mr. Peter Gough to come here to the Legislative Assembly during the past hour, and all of the Members of the Government, at least, were invited to pose questions to them. Let me now, for the benefit of the Leader of the Opposition, and the Elected Member for East End and for everybody in the House, enlighten this Honourable House as to how money is allocated and how action on roads is to be done.

All roads in the Cayman Islands appear on the Cabinet's Balance Sheet. Mr. Speaker, you, being an accountant, will know exactly what the accrual system is all about. The Cabinet, as everyone knows, is made up of eight people: the Governor, the Chief Secretary, the Attorney General, the Financial Secretary and five Ministers. Therefore, that means that everybody has a say into that particular budget. There are three sets of money in the Cabinet's budget and that total budget is $8.4 million. A breakdown for money that is unspecified for road works: $500,000 for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman; and $300,000 for road works on Grand Cayman; a considerable difference. I personally claim, and it is true, that it should be $500,000 for Cayman Brac. I was the one who recommended it when the allocation was $250,000 at the time because no one else seemed, at that point in time, in that meeting to want to speak up on it.

Now, the National Roads Authority—because of the way the accounting now goes and the outputs purchased by the Ministry for which I hold responsibility—only has responsibility for Grand Cayman. The money which it has for maintenance of roads in Grand Cayman is $5.1 million. For construction and maintenance on Cayman Brac and Little Cayman there is $3.9 million that District Administration will do with as it sees fit. I, thankfully, do not have to have any say or dealings, nor do the National Roads Authority in that regard.

I am also informed by Mr. Colford Scott that even prior to this change in the Public Management and Finance Law, the Public Works Department here contracted with District Administration to do certain roads, although it was public revenue being used. However, the allocation of those monies was seen as the Public Works here contracting for that work to be done. Mr. Speaker, I think and I hope that information that was given by Mr. Gough and Mr. Scott has put everybody's nerves at ease. It has not surprised me, and surely it has not disappointed me. I am just glad that the situation is known.

This is July 2004; this is an election year. I do not know, maybe it is about 120 something days left until elections. Everyone is posturing, and if I want to be in this game I have got to do a certain amount myself. However, I try to keep mine in a more constructive manner. I believe many things I see in the Bible about truth is like a two-edged sword and that is why I like to tell people the truth, because, particularly my enemies,

I know it hurts them. You see, it cuts them. Either way it goes it cuts them. So, Mr. Speaker, I do not make statements about things to satisfy an ego drive. When I come here and bring business to this House, it is government business that I want to get dispatched, and the quicker the better. That is not necessarily the case of everyone else.

I observed how quickly the Leader of the Opposition smelled blood in the water, today and what—

Hon. D. Kurt Tibbetts: It was your blood.

Hon. Gilbert A. McLean: Yes, maybe it was. He quickly rose to require me to explain what the situation was in here based on what was said and happened. He spoke about dropping this Motion on his desk, which he has a right to say because it was something which was done quickly. I explained the difficulties that prevented it from getting here, but the rest of it did come down here.

He says that he observed the mere fact that there is not unanimity within the Government on the matter, that is, the roads business here. Therefore, I should give an explanation so that the Opposition would get the whole intent.

Now, Mr. Speaker, I contend that what I said was absolutely clear and my mission is absolutely clear as to what I wish to achieve. Therefore, if the Leader of the Opposition, or indeed the other Opposition Members, believes that there is not unanimity in the Government or the Government has created confusion, then I am afraid I cannot help them with an explanation. It will be necessary for them to seek explanation from the sources that may have caused them to get that impression.

Mr. Speaker, I did not wish for this to be a long and protracted debate. Certainly, there is nothing to say that anyone's rights will be taken if Honourable Members so wish it to happen. However, I will say that while I know it is the season of politics, I believe that we have to maintain certain respect and regard for one another, and I prefer it that way. I do that regularly and that is why when someone attacks me, I feel absolutely free to go out and give better than what I got, because I do my best to treat everybody with a certain level of regard and respect. That is the way I was raised, that is the way I was taught.

So, while I have no doubt there is treachery afoot, near and far, east and west, north and south, in the country at this time, I also do my best to know who the Brutuses are. I keep ears and eyes wide open and I will do whatever is necessary to defend myself against any unwarranted attack or misunderstanding, or whatever and that I intend to do, Mr. Speaker.

As for the question raised by the Elected Member for East End with regards to the managing director and the deputy managing director not being on the board, I would just say that it has never been the intention that the managing director and the deputy managing director would be members of the board.

There will be people, I have no doubt, who have engineering skills and knowledge of roads, or whatever the case may be—road design and so on—and the board will need the expertise of these persons to guide it.

Then the Member for East End raised the question if they were taken off would they no longer be associated with the board. Mr. Speaker, in Section 11(3) it says “The Managing Director and the Deputy Managing Director shall be answerable to the Board for their respective acts and decisions, shall both be full time officers and employees of the Authority and shall render their services exclusively to the Authority.”

One of their duties, Mr. Speaker, would necessarily be that they would need to serve the board as technical advisors. Under Section 6(1) the Law says, “The Minister may, after consultation with the Board, give such general and lawful directions in written form as to the policy to be followed by the Authority in the performance of its responsibilities, functions and duties, and the board shall give effect to such directions.”

“(2) Any direction given or decision made by the Minister which affects the members of the public and which is not of an internal or administrative nature, shall be published in the Gazette; but no such direction shall apply in respect of a matter pending before the Authority on the day on which the directions are published.”

I can assure the Member for East End that I will be more than happy to direct the Authority that when the managing director is not available the deputy managing director should serve as a member of the board without voting rights as soon as it has been set up, which I hope it will be after this amendment has been passed. I could have brought an amendment to say that in this Law. However, I fear that if I was to bring such an amendment here, or ask for it to be brought, we might be here at least a week debating this issue. Therefore, I will not ask Members to suffer through such a thing.

Mr. Speaker, I have answered, I think, all the queries, which were put and I have expressed my view on the conditions surrounding this. I have informed this Honourable House what I have been informed of by the bureaucrats as to the way the money is going to be handled and who is supposed to do the job and who is accountable for what. Therefore, Mr. Speaker, I recommend to this Honourable House, the National Roads Authority (Amendment) Bill, 2004.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: The question is that a Bill shortly entitled the National Roads Authority (Amendment) Bill, 2004 be given a second reading. All those in favour please say Aye. Those against, No.

Ayes.

The Speaker: The Ayes have it. The National Roads Authority (Amendment) Bill, 2004, as amended, has been given a second reading.

ADJOURNMENT

The Speaker: Honourable Members, it is now 4.20 pm, our normal time for adjournment is 4.30 pm, which gives us ten minutes. Perhaps Honourable Members would wish to take the adjournment at this point. I am certainly open to your recommendations and suggestions on this. What is the will of the House? I think the will is that we should adjourn at this time.

The Honourable Leader of Government Business.

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

Before I move the adjournment, I would like to say to Members that there will be a presentation to all Members of the Assembly on the Parliamentary Pensions Plan on Monday, 19 July, 2004 at 9.00 am. Therefore, Members could make provisions and fix their business so that they could be here at 9.00 am.

Mr. Speaker, I move the adjournment of this Honourable House until 10 am tomorrow.

THURSDAY
15 JULY 2004
11.06 AM
Sixth Sitting

The Speaker: I now invite the Elected Member for North Side to lead us in prayers.

PRAYERS

Ms. Edna Moyle: Let us pray.

Almighty God, from whom all wisdom and power are derived: We beseech Thee so to direct and prosper the deliberations of the Legislative Assembly now assembled, that all things may be ordered upon the best and surest foundations for the glory of Thy Name and for the safety, honour and welfare of the people of these Islands.

Bless our Sovereign Lady, Queen Elizabeth II; Philip, Duke of Edinburgh; Charles, Prince of Wales; and all the Royal Family. Give grace to all who exercise authority in our Commonwealth, that peace and happiness, truth and justice, religion and piety may be established among us. Especially we pray for the Governor of our Islands, the Speaker of the Legislative Assembly, Official Members and Ministers of Cabinet and Members of the Legislative Assembly, that we may be enabled faithfully to perform the responsible duties of our high office. All this we ask for Thy great Name's sake.

Let us say The Lord's Prayer together: Our Father, who art in Heaven, Hallowed be Thy Name. Thy Kingdom come, Thy will be done on earth as it is in Heaven. Give us this day our daily bread, and forgive us our trespasses, as we forgive those who trespass against us. Lead us not into temptation, but deliver us from evil. For Thine is the Kingdom, the power and the glory, forever and ever. Amen.

The Lord bless us and keep us. The Lord make His face shine upon us and be gracious unto us. The Lord lift up the light of His countenance upon us and give us peace, now and always. Amen.

The Speaker: Please be seated. Proceedings are now resumed.

Proceedings resumed at 11.06 am

READING BY THE HONOURABLE SPEAKER OF MESSAGES AND ANNOUNCEMENTS

Commencement of Sittings

The Speaker: Honourable Members, I wish to request that we try to meet in the Assembly at the time stated here, in order for proceedings to continue as efficiently as possible.

I notice that we are again lagging in our promptness; and we had been doing pretty well. So, I ask that we try to meet here at the times that are stated. It is now after 11 o'clock and we should have started at 10 o'clock. We cannot start without a quorum so we need to have at least eight people in the Chamber to start promptly. Thank you very much.

Apologies

The Speaker: Honourable Members I have apologies for absence from the Honourable First Official Member who is acting Governor until 20 August. I have also received apologies for late arrival from the Second Official Member and the Minister of Planning, Communications, District Administration and Information Technology.

ADMINISTRATION OF OATHS OR AFFIRMATIONS

Oath of Allegiance

(Administered by the Clerk)
Mr Donovan W F Ebanks, MBE

The Speaker: Honourable Members, please stand.

Mr. Donovan W. F. Ebanks: I, Donovan Ebanks, do swear that I will be faithful and bear true allegiance to Her Majesty Queen Elizabeth II, her heirs and successors according to law so help me God.

The Speaker: Mr. Ebanks, on behalf of this Honourable House I welcome you as the Honourable Temporary First Official Member and invite you to take your seat. Please be seated.

STATEMENTS BY MINISTERS AND MEMBERS OF THE CABINET

The Speaker: I have received no statements from Honourable Members of the Cabinet.

GOVERNMENT BUSINESS

Debate on the Address Delivered by His Excellency the Governor on Friday 2nd July, 2004

(Continuation of debate thereon)

The Speaker: Does any other Member wish to speak on the Throne Speech Address? Does any other Member wish to speak?

The Third Elected Member for West Bay.

Capt. A. Eugene Ebanks: Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

Before I begin my contribution to the Throne Speech, which was delivered by His Excellency the Governor, Mr. Bruce Dinwiddy, CMG, at the State Opening on Friday 2 July 2004, I too would like to publicly recognise the Clerk of the Legislative Assembly and her dedicated staff for the way they have handled the gruesome task of having to move three times in the last year and a half. We all know that this has not been easy for them, but somehow they have managed to cope with all the packing and unpacking while still allowing Parliament to carry on uninterrupted. Although the work has just begun for them with getting everything back in place I am sure they are relieved that they are finally back home.

Mr. Speaker, the building certainly needed repairs after some 31 years without undergoing any major renovations. And now we can all be proud to be sitting in very comfortable surroundings. In my opinion, this Parliament building is rated amongst the top Parliament buildings in the region. Many thanks to you, as well, Mr. Speaker, for the last minute colour change on the wall directly behind you. The Members of this House are grateful for that change, it certainly gives warmth to the Parliament and we would like to publicly thank you for the last minute changes.

The Governor's Throne Speech certainly outlines some of the many projects that will shape, not just our economy, but also some of the lives in our community. Plans indicate that much action is in the works and I dare say it is most refreshing to see so much progress on so many fronts. Right now new homes, new companies are being started, new businesses are popping up everywhere and the Island is experiencing a construction and development boom. New roads are going in; new sub-divisions are being built and now there are also plans, according to the recent publication in the paper, of another major hotel being built in the eastern districts. Above all, it goes to show that investor confidence is returning to this Island.

Mr. Speaker, the late Richard Nixon, 37th President of the United States once said, and I quote: "With all our differences whenever we are confronted with a threat to our security we are not republicans or democrats, but Americans, we are not 50 States but the United States."

Just as the United States and other nations throughout the world are faced with their differences, challenges and threats, so are we too here in the Cayman Islands. As we draw closer to the November general elections tempers are already on the rise as can be seen. However, as difficult as it gets at times let me remind the United Democratic Party (UDP)

Members and the People's Progressive Movement (PPM) Members that we are all privileged Caymanians who were elected and sent to this Honourable House by the people of these Islands, to work together, for the common good of these beautiful Islands and all the people who live in them.

Mr. Speaker, as I sat and listened to Members of the Opposition stand across the Floor of this Honourable House and try to discredit and tear down the United Democratic Party Government of all the many achievements that have been accomplished in the short 2 ½ years that we have been in power, I have to ask myself: if they are living on the same Island I am living on or if they are living in another country. I am sure, Mr. Speaker, they are not blind; they can see what is happening as everyone else is seeing what is happening. However, I do realise it is the job of the Opposition to make the Government look as bad as possible. There is no denying the fact that we are experiencing a development boom and the economy is on the rebound.

Mr. Speaker, I cannot help but think that the main goal of the PPM is to do their best to destroy what progress that has been made thus far. Are they trying to put the economy back in the same position we were in back in 2001 when the Islands were in a state of depression? So were the people when they could not meet their financial commitments because there was no work for them. We do not want to go back there and I would hope that the Opposition would not want to see us back in that position either. We all clearly recall the limited funds that we had back in 2001 when nothing was going on. The whole Islands stood at a standstill; people were desperate for jobs. Today, Mr. Speaker, the unemployment is way down and just about everyone who wants to work there is a lot of work for them. There is no reason for them not to work when there is work available to them. However, we know there are some people who do not want to do anything unless they can get exactly the kind of job they want. I should remind those people that sometimes we have to do whatever is necessary to keep ourselves happy and meet our financial commitments. With much determination and perseverance the United Democratic Party Government can be credited. We have to take the credit for turning around the economy of these Islands.

Whenever I listen to the Opposition getting up and beating themselves on the chest, and making all kinds of allegations, I am thinking that they must be talking to themselves because they have not convinced me and many people of the public who I have spoken to certainly do not believe what they are saying; they know different because they can see what is happening; they are not blind. So, I do not know who they are trying to convince but they are not fooling the public.

Just to set the record straight I would like to outline just a few of our achievements to date that has helped to make life more enjoyable and affordable for the people of our Islands. For example, Cable and Wireless – the Opposition said we could do nothing about that. They also said we could do nothing about CUC but I ask the Opposition today to compare their telecommunication rates and their electricity rates now to two years ago. A lot of credit has to go to my colleague from West Bay, the Fourth Elected Member and the negotiating team for their skilful negotiation. He was the Chairman of both of those committees and he deserves a lot of credit because without his guidance we would not be in the position we are in today.

I can recall when you were head of that Ministry, I remember you talking to the Fourth Elected Member saying: “Why not take on the chairmanship? With your background I am sure you could be an asset”. So he took it on and I want to publicly thank him and his negotiating team for bringing rates to a much more affordable figure where we can say we have made some savings.

Mr. Speaker, with your indulgence, Sir, I would like to read the Editorial of yesterday’s (Wednesday) Caymanian Compass entitled, “Making the Price Right.” It says: “News of lowering cost to consumers on any product is usually greeted gleefully. Over the period of the past year, the market for telecommunications has been flung wide open and there are agreements in the making to ensure the same applies to the area of electricity supplies. Depending on the level of consumption some phone users have been seeing mammoth savings while others realise little savings based on their usage. Consumers of electricity were in 2003 relieved of the 3% increase that the power company exacted almost every year to make up for what the Firm said was diminished income. Added to that there is another schedule rate cut of 4.5% this year.”

Mr. Speaker that is 7.5 per cent we are talking about. That is a considerable savings when you are talking about hundreds and thousands of dollars in light bills every month. “While the upcoming rate cuts are a straightforward exercise, the futuristic plans that go along with the liberalization agreement points to more savings through a complex mechanism that enables price capping.

Announcement last month of the power supply price capping methodology and a system for competitive bids on new electricity generation contracts along with those up for replacement of generating units, answered the curiosity possessed by many on how would competition in this service work.

Based on the emerging information it now appears that the approach to reduction in fossil fuel prices would be consistently innovative as that taken in seeking reduced electricity supply charges. It is through the introduction of more competitive supplies of petroleum into the market where dealers can be induced to look towards sales of products in their convenience stores for their meaningful profits and maintain low fuel prices, so be it. All the customer cares about is splendid service and lower cost for essential goods leaving them the choice of whether to make the impulsive buying decision on items found in the store that forms part of the petroleum station.

Mr. Speaker, not enough can be said for how well this has been received by the public of these Islands and as it goes on we are expecting to see more savings.

It was then an issue of health insurance, the insurance companies did as they please for years, insuring mostly healthy individuals and whenever the individual became ill they would discontinue the coverage (depending on the illness) saying that they were uninsurable. Mr. Speaker, the Minister for Health Services heard the cries of the public and the people of these Islands, and CINICO were introduced. Now all of the uninsurable persons (according to the other big insurance companies) are now insurable at affordable rates. Those three issues should keep the People’s Progressive Movement (PPM) from saying that we are doing nothing. They cannot argue with the facts because they are there. We are a Government that recognises the needs of our people and care about those needs and provide for those needs. We are a Government that our people can truly say cares about them. That is what the United Democratic Party is all about—a responsible caring Government.

Because of our good governance and representation the economy is booming again and the country is in very good financial shape. However, we cannot become complacent, we must be vigilant. There are still many challenges out there and we have to be ready to face those challenges and that is what we are doing, getting ready to face the challenges that are looming ahead of us.

Mr. Speaker, take a drive around the Island, see the amount of construction that is going on, small businesses that were struggling two to three years ago are now doing well. Without a stable, proactive Government, a Government of action who are doing something now and planning for the future, this could not have happened. It took a lot of thought, a lot of work, but I we are starting to see the fruits of our labour.

I would like to touch on the Police Service. I am most grateful to the new Commissioner; he seems to really get a good grip on what is going on and is taking action in many fronts. I cannot commend him enough for continuing his district meetings; there was another one in the yesterday’s paper where he was having in the Brac. Also for his innovative thinking on ways of joining some of the security guards companies with the Royal Cayman Islands Police (RCIP) in an effort to have a better visual presence. We need that extra presence. In my opinion it can only help to deter possible offenders. I am also pleased to know that the Commissioner is continuing with the hiring of additional officers to help the officers who are working now for long hours to help relieve some of their workload.

I would like to touch on tourism for a moment. It is most encouraging to see that the tourism figures continue to climb and that unemployment is down. It was recently published that tourism numbers are up 22 per cent and the statistics now show that the month of May marked the sixth straight month that arrivals surpassed the year before.

I know that the Cayman Islands remain a popular destination; this is due in part to the friendliness of the people and the cleanliness of the Island. The feeling of being safe is as important to our visitors as the hospitality they find on the Island among the local people or whoever they come in contact with on the Island. The issue of safety is of paramount importance and that is why it is so important that the Police Service continue to increase their presence and their staff to help keep this Island as safe as possible. It is very important that when the visitor steps off the airplane at the airport that he feels relaxed and safe; he can take his family out and not have to worry about being mugged or hassled on the street, or of someone trying to sell him drugs. These are big issues with the visitors who come to our Island. Therefore, it is very important that the police continue their good work to ensure that these Islands remain a safe clean and friendly destination.

There are also plans for additional road signs and this has been a complaint of the visitors. There are not enough directional signs and another complaint is about the speed limit signs. We know if we see 40 it means 40 miles per hour but it does not say that; it could mean 40 miles per hour, 40 kilo-meters, 40 knots; I think it should be spelled out. There have been complaints that the visitors on the Island drive too slow most of the time. Sometimes they drive too fast and when stopped by the police, they say that they did not know what the 40 sign was for. There is no excuse for the local people but for the visitors it creates a problem. We have to specify on the signs what mph means in order to avoid that problem. When they are putting up the directional signs they should say if they are leaving Cayman Kai and heading to George Town. The sign could read: 'North Side 6 miles, George Town 27 miles' because I think that would help the visitors. I saw a recent publication that stated the Department of Tourism and Development Service Product Unit are coming up with new signs to help with that.

With the opening of the Ritz Carlton later this year, Cayman is undoubtedly expecting a busy upcoming season. Recently the Ritz Carlton held a career fair where some eight hundred jobs are now available at the Ritz. We all know that there will not be eight hundred Caymanians employed at one time, but the fact of the matter is, there are jobs available for people in the hospitality industry at the Ritz, if they so choose to work there or if qualified for whatever position is open.

There is no reason why we should have any kind of unemployment with the amount of development, construction and all classes of development that is happening on the Island. The last figure I saw for unemployment went from 8 per cent down to 3.5 per cent; now it should be 0 or 1/2 per cent, but no more than that. If the people who are not working really wanted to work I feel that there are jobs out there that they could do if they applied for it, and if they also applied themselves to do the job they could remain employed.

I would like to touch on Cayman Airways, which is very near and dear to me. Cayman Airways does continue to face challenges but remains committed to maintaining the best possible fares, service and most flights to and from the Cayman Islands. This is very important when you think that tourism is one of the two main legs of our economy; it is absolutely important that we have an air service which we can depend on. I must say that Cayman Airways, even though not a money making company is a necessary company, in my opinion. It is necessary for us to have that kind of reliable link to the outside world.

As a former airline pilot, with Cayman Airways I have flown every type of aircraft in the fleet during the time that I was there. I have flown a DC-3 all over the Caribbean and there was no auto pilot, very little navigation aid, but we flew to San Andres, Swan Island, Cayman Brac and Little Cayman, Kingston, Montego Bay and an occasional charter to Mexico. Those were the days I remember with Cayman Airways. Next we went to the DC-6, DC-9, BAC-111 and my last aircraft that I have flown was a Boeing 727. After that they changed to the Boeing-737 and I have not flown a 737, but every other kind of aircraft in the fleet, during the time that I was there, I have flown. So, I can tell you, first hand, that Cayman Airways has come a long way and we have to give them a lot of credit and support them as much as possible so that they can continue to offer the kind of service they are offering, which can only enhance the Islands as a tourist destination.

When I think back, in 2001, we had consultants to show which way we were going to go; we had a meeting with members of the private sector to see how they felt about it; and we had some serious proposals to close the airline down. However, the Leader of Government Business, at that time, did not do it and I thank him that he did not. However, thinking back of where I started and where it is today, we can truly say we have come a long way.

Mr. Speaker, it would be remiss of me if I did not give much credit to the management team, and of course, without the United Democratic Party to support the management team it would not be a success either. Especially, Mr. Mike Adams, CEO who has stuck with this airline through thick and thin and who continues to be one of the best ambassadors for Cayman. I have been in many meetings with him and I can tell you that he is well respected throughout the airline industry and much credit is due to Mr. Mike Adams.

Education continues to be high priority. However, the Minister of Education should be commended for the great strides he has taken in improving the quality and level of education in Cayman since he has taken office almost four years ago. Maybe it was best said when the Minister of Education defended the education system in the Caymanian Compass on 9 July when he said, "I think it is only fair that this is repeated and aired over the air waves". Mr. Speaker, I think it is absolutely fair to him that we repeat it so that those who might have missed it in the newspaper, but listened to the radio, might be able to appreciate what the Minister said. So, with your permission, Mr. Speaker, I would like to quote the Minister of Education's Statement. He said: "The administrators of education are working to a system adequately taking care of the present needs while ensuring that plans for future school accommodation are adequate for expanding needs."

"Conceding that there are areas for improvement, he said this was owed to practices of the past. "As in many aspects of planning in our country, education planning is weak and we are seeking to strengthen it."

He went on to say: "The 25-year-old George Hicks High School was cited as an example of past weak planning. That school was built to accommodate 400 pupils and now caters to 1,087, but more space cannot be obtained on the building because it was not built to expand with Cayman's growing needs."

"He said in the ministry's changed approach, the planned new high school will be constructed to accommodate 1,000 pupils though 700 are expected." You see, Mr. Speaker, he has made plans for future expansion. "He reported recommending to the architects that the auditorium be designed to comfortably hold 5,000 because high school graduation invitations [are] currently limited to four for each graduating person, owing to cramped conditions for such ceremonies of the George Hicks and John Gray high schools."

He confirmed that land has already been purchased for a new high school which is slated for North Side. He went on to say, "the Opposition's contention that schools are being pressured by the added enrolment numbers largely because children of persons who received grants of Caymanian Status are entering the system, Mr. Bodden said the opposite is happening. "In some of the schools we would have less students as of September than the last year," he said and added, "I know of no cohorts who are being turned away".

"Included in a number of initiatives he said was undertaken by the Education Ministry during his tenure, Mr. Bodden pointed to the ITALIC programme that enables teachers to [assist] school pupils with the aid of computers. He said that his ministry had recently got from the Finance Committee money to buy 280 more computers for teachers. "That would mean every teacher would have his or her own laptop computer to aid in the instruction of children," he said.

"Further defending Cayman's education system, Mr. Bodden pointed to a number of countries seeking advice of his ministry.

"If our education system was as bad as the Leader of the Opposition made it out to be ... how come the Government of Morocco can make enquiries of our ITALIC programme?"

"He listed Anguilla, the Bahamas, the Turks and Caicos Islands and the British Virgin Islands among those countries seeking Cayman's advice on education."

Mr. Speaker, the last paragraph of the Minister's Statement speaks volumes for the system. This makes the Cayman Islands, once again, a leader in the Region.

I would like to read a copy of a petition that Members of the district community presented to the Commissioner on 5 August 1927. Mr. Speaker, with your permission I would like to read the petition to H.H. Hutchings by the residents of West Bay. After I have read the petition I would like to lay it on the Table of the Honourable House because I feel it is a part of our rich history for the district of West Bay.

The Speaker: So ordered.

Capt. A. Eugene Ebanks: The petition dated 5 August 1927 reads:

"To His Honour, H.H. Hutchings, Commissioner Chairman of the Board of Education

"The Humble petition of the undersigned parents, guardians, property holders and tax payers in the district of West Bay, herewith;

- 1. That at present there are in the vicinity of ninety children of school age who are deprived of the privilege of the public school at West Bay.
- 2. That the public school of West Bay is very crowded which makes it impossible for the admission of any more scholars.
- 3. That most of these children who are deprived of the privilege of public school live a long distance away and as the roads are in such bad condition it is impossible for the children to attend the public school, even if there were convenience there for them.

4. That we the parents, guardian, property holders and tax payers contribute our fair share to the revenue of this Island and yet are deprived of a decent school to send our children to.
5. That the erection of a schoolroom at a point between Boatswain Bay and the West Bay school room would relieve this condition and afford these children the great privilege of attending school and thereby becoming better citizens.
6. That the time has now arrived when this matter should receive full consideration and steps taken to erect a suitable schoolroom and supply a teacher for the benefit of the children if they are to grow up in anything but ignorance.
7. We therefore pray that the Board of Education will give this matter the serious consideration that is due and in the near future take steps to relieve this condition and your petitioners as in duty bound will ever pray."

Mr. Speaker, that was read exactly as it was written and the names signed to it are as follows: "John Rivers, Susanah Ebanks, Laton Ebanks, Banker Ebanks, Elridge Rivers, Ashley Ebanks, Ira Rivers, Philp Anglin" (the great, great grandfather of my colleague the Second Elected Member for West Bay), "Ceylina Parsons, Joseph Parsons, Lazuras Ebanks, Reginald Ebanks Snr., Ales Powery" (again, the grandfather of the Second Elected Member for West Bay) "Ahazirah Ebanks" (that is my grandfather on my mother's side), "Jonah Ebanks" (the uncle of the First Elected Member for West Bay and Leader of Government Business) "Osborne Ebanks, Gamaliel Ebanks, Henry Ishmael, Charlie Ebanks" (again, my grandfather on my father's side), "Robert Rivers, Elridge Ebanks, John Ebanks, Bucher Ebanks, David Rivers, Leslie Rivers, Cleophas Ebanks, Annie Bazar, Munsy Ebanks" (Mr. Speaker, I am sure you have heard the song 'Munsy boat in the sound'; that is the Mr. Munsy), "Fredie Ebanks, Olinda Ebanks, Mythou Ebanks, Charlie Orrieth, Ustus Bush," (again, Mr. Speaker, the uncle of the First Elected Member, Leader of Government Business), "Joseph Anglin" (the other grandfather of the Second Elected Member for West Bay) and "Abraham Ebanks."

Mr. Speaker, there are thirty eight (38) names in all. These are only for the northern area of the West Bay district, which back in 1927 would have probably been a couple of hundred people for that section and to see that the parents, guardians and grandfathers would take such an interest to pursue education in that manner, speaks volumes for our forefathers.

With your indulgence I would like to read the response to the petition which is also handwritten and dated 7 November 1927.

It reads: "Gentlemen, I have the honour to enclose for your information; a copy of a petition asking for the establishment of a school for the benefit of children in the northern part of the West Bay district.

"The Board agreed to the appointment of a committee to consider and report, and I have in consequence, appointed Misses N.C. Watler and Misses J.S. Ebanks, E. M. Ebanks of West Bay, E. S. Parsons, and yourselves with myself as Chairman, as such committee.

"I regret neither of you was able to be present at the meeting today. I should be glad to hear from you prior to the meeting of the Committee any suggestions you may offer as to the process of taking local opinion and of viewing the countryside affected. Thanks, H. H. H., Commissioner."

Mr. Speaker, when the Commissioner replied to the petition he asked for local input; he asked them to go out and inspect areas that they might consider using to build the school room. They also wanted to find a location that was more central and it is my understanding that the school room referred to in this petition was near where the Powell's Museum is today. So, for the children of Boatswain Bay, Northwest Point, Birch Tree Hill and Barkers, it was a long distance. It is my understanding that it is because of the petition why the West Bay Town Hall is built where it is today in that location, which is more the centre of the hub of West Bay.

So, when the Opposition gets up and rants and raves about school overcrowding—this is 77 years ago back to our great grandfathers when there were only, in that area, according to this, ninety children and we had overcrowding from then. I am very concerned about overcrowding; I want to be sure that every child has the kind of attention that they deserve, let us say, twenty five students for every teacher; that would be great. However, because of the lack of planning or inaction of past administrations for so long, the situation has come to a crisis level.

The Minister of Education, in his three and a half years has provided for an additional school that will be ready, according to the contractors, in September, which is two months away, or less, depending on when the school opens. He has provided additional programmes, computers and has purchased land for another high school. The Minister deserves a lot of credit. He has done a lot; he is planning ahead and he is trying to deal with the existing situation. He has also brought in temporary classrooms because there were no funds or they could not get the schools built fast enough, so he had to have someplace so that the kids could continue school. The Minister has done a lot and he needs to be commended instead of criticized for not doing anything. He has done a lot! However, when you think that the Opposition is there to make us look bad, I can understand that, that is what they are suppose to do. Nonetheless that does not change the fact that the Minister, in my opinion, has made great strides in the Education Ministry.

Unless some of the facts are laid out, the public can be misled by what the Opposition has said, but when the facts are put before them they can see both sides of the story; they can understand what the Opposition is trying to do. It is like what the Elected Member for East End said, that is politics, but nonetheless, we have to give credit where credit is due.

On a whole, I am pleased that the Island has seen some remarkable turnarounds in the economy. Development is on the increase; tourism is on the increase. In my district, the district of West Bay, the district has come alive, again; the town centre has received a major facelift with the construction of the Centennial Towers. This development has brought many job opportunities and new businesses to the area. We now have a bank, pharmacy and a doctor's office; that is just to name a few. We have a new post office, even though that is not a part of the Centennial Towers development. Now it takes a lot of time off the West Bay Road by the residents of West Bay because they do not have to go to town for everything that they want, they can do their banking, go to the pharmacy, doctor and most anything that they want to do now, they can now do in West Bay. We have a Licensing Department for car inspection, so there are not too many things that the West Bayers have to come to town for unless they are working in town.

Mr. Speaker, without investor confidence none of this would have happened. Investor confidence comes because of stability and of the Government who are responsible. There is no denying that the United Democratic Party has made major improvements with the direction this Island was going.

Community affairs: The redevelopment of the Cayman Turtle Farm is already on the way and is providing many jobs for Caymanians. Believe it or not there are a lot of West Bayers who do not want to leave West Bay to go to work so they can now find work in West Bay now. As an active Board Member of the Turtle Farm, I can assure the listening public that our goal is to develop the Turtle Farm into a world class facility where parents can take their kids, schools can go on field trips and they would find it a most enjoyable and educational experience. When that development is completed it will be second to none in the Caribbean and I am looking forward to the next phase coming on line. I understand that next week they are going to start the third phase of it. With that kind of development happening in our district we have a lot to be thankful for. We are also widening and resurfacing the roads in West Bay and wherever residents have requested for lights to make their area safer we have done that.

With school out we have youth programmes in place; we also have schools and churches offering vacation bible school programmes, and I cannot thank the many volunteers who dedicate their time and energy to make these facilities possible where the kids can be in a safe environment, feel like they are a part of a family and not roaming the streets getting into trouble. A lot of these kids are for single parents and the kids are left to their own for the greater part of the day. This gives those children a great opportunity to interact and to feel like they belong to the community and make them more productive and responsible citizens of our district.

As we stand on the threshold of the 2004 General Elections, let me say that it is incumbent upon us to campaign on our achievements and the issues at hand. I prefer to see harmony even though I know that it not always possible, not discord. I challenge my colleagues to take a strong stand on the issues that are at hand. Mud slinging and name bashing is not necessary. When we do that most of our potential supporters will not look as favourably as they would if they were more realistic in dealing with the issues at hand and not making allegations; they would prefer to see us as a candidate taking that stance rather than getting up and bashing one another because at the end of the day we still have to live on the Island, we have no where else to go. So, name bashing and mud slinging will get us nowhere, therefore, I challenge my colleagues, on both sides of the House, to conduct themselves in a manner, becoming of who we are and of who the public would like to see us be. We are big men and big women in this Chamber and we must lead as an example. We cannot get up and say one thing on the Floor of the House and go out on the street and turn the opposite direction; we have to lead as an example. So, remember that it is not only what we say on the Floor of this Honourable House, but also what we do in public that matters. It is a small country and everybody knows everybody. With three telephone companies now news travels fast, so it is not many things we can do that people will not know about it.

I strongly support the effort put forward recently by the Ministers Association in bringing in the code of ethics to the forefront of the upcoming election. As an active Association they are doing their part in making sure that everything we do as candidates is carried out in an honest God fearing fashion and manner.

In closing, Mr. Speaker, I trust that the people of these Islands would see that much has been accomplished today when taking into consideration the many set backs that we have experienced in 2001. I am confident that the people of these Islands are aware they have a Government that is working for them and with them. We are certainly far better off now than we were in 2001.

The past four years have certainly not been easy and we continue to see those mountains looming up in front, but I am here to say that we are committed. Whatever we have to do to ensure that the lives of our people are made better, we are prepared to do it.

With all that I have just reported and with so much more in the works, I fail to understand just how the Opposition can say that nothing has been accomplished and perhaps they could tell me what they would have done differently if they were on this side of the Floor. We are here for the long haul and I pray that the Almighty God continues to bless our Cayman Islands, and I ask for his guidance throughout the rest of my tenure in this Legislative Assembly. Thank You.

The Speaker: Does any other Member wish to speak? Does any other Member wish to speak? Does any other Member wish to speak?

The Elected Member for North Side.

Ms. Edna M. Moyle: Thank you Mr. Speaker.

As you mentioned 'the Member for North Side' I noticed the Chamber doors opened and persons who were not in the Chamber before have all come in; I appreciate that. It is not my intention to stand here this morning and lambaste anyone. I am going to make my contribution, as I have always done, based on the different sections as they are contained in the Throne Speech.

The last Member speaking, I would not mind if he would let me have a copy of that petition and the reply because history is one of my subjects.

We have heard much about the economy of the country but one must remember that if the United States economy sneezes, the economy of the Cayman Islands catches a cold. I say, as I watched the news in the United States that preparations are being made for conventions of the Democrats and later in the year of the Republican Party, that security, because of the chatter that the Government is hearing, has to be extremely high. Let us as a country pray that there is not another terrorist attack on the United States because the economy will return where it was in 2001 and God forbid.

Royal Cayman Islands Police Service

The first section of the Throne Speech that I will speak about this morning is the Royal Cayman Islands Police Service. I had hoped that when the Throne Speech was delivered in 2004 that the Government of the day would have put in place twenty four hour police coverage in the eastern districts with the police stations being opened in those districts.

I know when I said this, I think it was in the Budget Debate at that time, I was accosted because I said I was a lone voice crying in the wilderness over the past ten or eleven years asking for the North Side Police Station to be opened on a 24 hour basis. I was accosted and I will not get into it too and fro, and I will not say by whom because the person who did it knows who it was done by. Why did I not achieve this in 2001? If it has not been achieved in 3 years I really do not know how I was expected to achieve it in less than twelve months.

My concern and why I have been constantly asking for the North Side Police station, and the other police stations in the eastern districts to be opened on a 24 hour basis, is the fact that when something occurs in those districts and we have to call and if there is no one covering the Bodden Town District, we have to await arrival from George Town. I think that one of the one of the problems in the past with the drug problems in the eastern districts was back between 1988 and 1992 when the Government of the day took the decision to close the eastern district police stations. I believe, Mr. Speaker, and I will continue to believe that when I am a part of the next Government we will give the eastern districts 24 hour police stations.

I have read that the Police Department will commence this financial year with a full establishment of officers; that is very good and those officers are needed. However, we bring more officers into the Royal Cayman Islands Police Service to offer more services but yet we are not giving the Police Department the necessary equipment to offer those services. I am at the present time having talks with a car dealership to see if they are prepared to donate a used car to the Police Community Officer in the district of North Side, and if I am successful I will then go to the Government and ask if they will accept it. It is impossible to put a Police Community Officer in a district without the necessary vehicle or other mode of transport for that officer to be able to do his duties.

Mr. Speaker, I have always been a Member of this Parliament who believes that the visibility of the police is a deterrent to crime; it is a deterrent to speeding; and this is what we need to do: Instead of us having police officers hiding on the side of the road in the mornings to catch someone speeding who is trying to get into Town, either from West Bay, Bodden Town, North Side or East End, to give a speeding ticket, it is my belief that speeding would be controlled if those police cars were visible in the traffic.

It is my understanding that the Police have requested vehicles as they have been asked to provide more services and that some 19 vehicles were requested. It is also my understanding from looking at the Budget that the Police Department, I think, has been granted only four, five or maybe six cars. It is my knowledge that some of those police cars have been in accidents just recently written off. Some have over 200,000 miles on the dash, and to ask for increased services and to cut the number of motor vehicles required to provide those services does not make sense. In my opinion, it puts the Police at a disadvantage. We cannot expect our Police Officers to work and live up to the expectations that we expect of them in protecting communities unless we give them the necessary equipment. So, I call on the Government that in order for the Police of the Cayman Islands to be able to carry out their duties, and I particularly stress the eastern districts, that they be given the necessary equipment.

I am not one who will not say thank you if I have been rewarded for something that I have requested for my district. Just recently, in the Budget, when there was a debate about the number of police in the districts of East End and North Side, within short order after that debate, East End had a Community Officer and two Police Officers and a vehicle and the district of North Side had the same, and I say thank you to the Royal Cayman Islands Police.

I love to hear the Leader of Government laugh because it comes from way down.

Legislative Department

I would like to join in complimenting those involved with the renovation of the Legislative Assembly Building. We all know that this Building was built in 1972. I had the opportunity of being the Deputy Clerk at that time and we know that there was not many repairs and maintenance carried out, so I too would like to compliment you, your staff and other persons involved on a job well done.

I also join you in bringing about that the Legislative Assembly Department becomes an autonomous body. It is something I have argued and have suggested for many years and if it becomes a reality Sir, we are all indebted to you as the Speaker who has brought it forward. I am almost positive that there are Members of the Government who have been seeking for the autonomy of this body for a long time.

We speak about the separation of powers, the executive, judicial and the legislative and I agree with you one hundred per cent. How can we truly have separation of powers when the Chief Secretary is still responsible for the staff of the Legislative Department? If this is brought about it is to be hoped that the Speaker will have more authority in that the Speaker needs to be able to be in a position to consult with The Leader of Government, or whatever that title may change to after the next General Election, to be able to sit and set dates for Parliament to meet.

It is totally impossible to expect Members of the Legislative Assembly to work around being told one week before Parliament is going to open and to get their lives arranged around that. Mr. Speaker, I use myself as an example, I had a plane ticket to go to my niece's graduation when the Budget Session came about; I lost that money because my duty was to be in Parliament. Had I been told of dates prior I would have known I could not do it. I did not get to attend the opening of this Parliament on 2 July because I had made prior bookings to travel to Kansas City to my niece's wedding and I really wanted to be at the opening after the renovations. So, it is to be hoped that once this Parliament becomes an autonomous body that The Leader of Government Business and the Speaker can work together to set proposed dates and inform Members so that they can build their lives around the proposed dates of Parliament meetings. I think every one of us in here, whether Government or Opposition, we are here for the same reason and we all take our duties seriously.

I notice under the Legislative Assembly, under the auspices of the Commonwealth Parliamentary Association, arrangements have been made to hold a Post Election Seminar for all sitting Members of Parliament in February 2005, I think this is a very important Seminar for old Members who will be returned or new Members coming on board.

I had hoped to have seen something under the Legislative Department so that we could achieve having the Hansards of this Parliament more current. We need to find out if it is a shortage of staff, shortage of equipment but I do believe that the Hansards of the Legislative Assembly need to be more current.

Immigration

I sat and listened to the Fourth Elected Member of West Bay when he made his contribution to the debate and I would say ninety per cent of his contribution was based on the now Leader of the Opposition's contribution to the Throne Speech or to the Budget Address, I do not recall which one back in 2000. Everything that was quoted that the now Leader of the Opposition said at that time he has not denied the since the issuing of Caymanian status; he has stood by his convictions of 2000, 1999, 1998, 1997 and back to 1992, but he said he did not agree with the process that the Government used. So, we must not speak in parables to mislead the public. He has constantly said the process was wrong.

Point of Order

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: Mr. Speaker, on a point of order

The Speaker: Honourable Leader of Government Business, please state your point of order.

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: The Member has said that the Member was misleading the House and the public; maybe she can show where the Member was misleading when he was reading the Hansard.

The Speaker: Honourable Leader of Government Business and Honourable Members my understanding of the debate from the Elected Member for North Side is that whilst she agreed with a lot that the Fourth Elected Member for West Bay said is correct, there seems to have been some omissions from what was said, so I am not sure that that was misleading unless we go back to the Hansard.

I recall reading the Hansard as the Member for West Bay spoke, and I know he did not read everything that was in the Hansard; but he did, in fact, read the high points of the Hansard. So, I do not think that this would constitute misleading the House in any way. I have made a statement on what constitutes misleading the House and I have also stated that the question of "misleading the House" as such is not a point of order unless it can be proved that it is done fraudulently. In this case I would say Honourable Member for North Side, please be very careful in the remarks that you make, but so far I cannot say that this has been a fraudulent misleading of the House.

Please continue.

Ms. Edna M. Moyle: Mr. Speaker, I listened to your ruling, Sir, but I must say I did not use the words misleading this House, I said nothing about misleading the House.

The Speaker: Honourable Member for North Side, I have made my ruling and I would ask that you continue with your speech please.

Ms. Edna M. Moyle: Mr. Speaker, I bow to your ruling, Sir, but the Hansard will prove that I did not use the words "this House".

What I was referring to was misleading the public to believe that the now Honourable Leader of the Opposition did not still believe that we had to deal with the immigration problem; that is what I was referring to, Sir. He still believes that we must deal with it and that is why he set up the IRT so that we could do it properly. He still believes, as well as the Opposition, that the process was incorrect!

Mr. Speaker, my other point on immigration will be put in the form of a question, that when the Leader of Government Business replies to the debate on the Throne Speech, I would like an answer for the people of these Islands. We watch television daily; we read the newspapers daily and we are constantly seeing nationalities of countries in the region being deported from the United Kingdom, the United States, and my question is, do we have in place, at our Immigration entrance, at the airport, any equipment that can give us the fingerprints or photographs of these people that we can identify any of these people? I put it in the form of a question because we need to know.

The Portfolio of Legal Affairs

I think the present Honourable Attorney General is the second Attorney General since the Penal Code Law went to a committee of the whole House. I think Mr. Richard Coles was the Attorney General at that time. I do not recall when Mr. Coles was here, but I recall several Committee meetings on the Penal Code Law. In 2004 the Honourable Attorney General is promising us that this year we will introduce legislation and it will include amendments to the Penal Code and new legislation to provide for alternative sentencing in the form of community service orders, conditional sentences and measures to deal with certain drug offenders. I hope that the Honourable Attorney General will be in a position to go back to the Report of that Select Committee of the whole House on the Penal Code and include all of the amendments that were recommended at that time.

We hear a lot of talk of the family unit—I too am a family person. Seeing my family and other families live like family is a great achievement for me. Because of my concerns for families, that was the reason I brought the Motion in 1999 to set up the Family Protection Unit. That is why I am a little bit disappointed that under the Portfolio of Legal Affairs I see no mention of the Government setting up a family court. I see the need for the drug court but I also see a great need for a family court in these Islands. When we have family disputes, assault on women and rape, I really do not believe that these persons should be in an open court with all and sundry to hear if that is how it exists. So, I call upon the Government to do whatever is in their power to have a family court set up in these Islands.

Cayman Airways

I will only be making one comment on Cayman Airways as I would like to declare that I do have a son and a nephew in the cockpit. However, I do have some concerns and the Minister in winding up, I am sure will pit me straight if I am wrong. I have concerns with the expansion of the fleet. Why do I have concerns? I would like to know what research has gone on to say that Boston, Chicago and other gateways are going to prove valuable for Cayman Airways.

The purchase of new aircraft concerns me in that once again when you watch the United States news and you hear of the possibility of one of the largest US airlines which may have to go bankrupt and shut its doors unless it joins with another major airline, gives me concern at this time, because the airline business is not yet out of the doldrums. It reminds me of the Government who, between the years 1988 to 1992, purchased aircrafts and at the end of the day we ended up in London with a lawsuit and $52 million in debt.

Mr. Speaker, I personally would like to see Cayman Airways work, I have always supported it and I will continue to support it but I do have these concerns.

Tourism Attraction Board

I would have loved to have seen in the Throne Speech the Policy Document of the Government; of how the Government could get the Botanic Park, particularly in my district, whereby we could get some of the cruise ship passengers, even though their time on the Island is short. I am certain that if could put in place an arrangement to some bus owner, whereby these trips could be sold on board so that when these people land they are collected and taken to the Botanic Park because the Botanic Park is a beautiful park.

Cayman Islands Fire Service

Mr. Speaker, somewhere I thought there would have been some mention of a fire station that I think was proposed by the Government some time ago to be built in the district of Bodden Town. If I remember correctly, land was identified for the building of this Fire Station in Bodden Town. I know we have the Fire Station on Frank Sound Road that covers from Morritts Tortuga to Savannah and to Rum Point, but the district of Bodden Town is the fastest growing district in these Islands, in my opinion. I do believe that a fire station in that district should be a priority of any Government.

Health Insurance Commission

Once again Members of the Government who debated got up and praised the Minister of Health for putting in place the Health Insurance Commission. The Opposition played a great part in bringing about that Law. Had it not been, and I am sure that the Minutes will bare me out, for the Opposition being present at almost every meeting of the Committee; the Committee could not have completed its business. So, the Opposition is happy that the Health Insurance Commission is in place.

Health Services Authority

It is with great pleasure that I read, "The recent opening of our Women's Health Centre, the first in the region, and a purpose built in-patient mental health facility allows for enhanced services to these priority groups of customers. The Women Health Centre, and anyone that cares to go back through the records of this Parliament, have heard me call for this for many years.

My first contribution to a Throne Speech in this Parliament in 1993 I called on the Government at that time for a proper mental health facility for our mental people.

I would like to say to the Honourable Minister and the Health Services Authority 'thank you' for putting in place the Women's Health Centre, which was a great need in these Islands.

Under the same Health Services Authority I now call on the Minister responsible for Health and the Government because I believe that we owe the people of the eastern districts the same with our health care centres as we owe them with our police station—longer hours. Whether we open those clinics from 8.30 am to 7.00 pm or whether we open those clinics from 11.00 am to 8.00 pm it does not matter to me. I believe that the people of the eastern districts deserve more. If a mother arrives in North Side, after a full days work in George Town in the bumper to bumper traffic and she gets home, leaving work at 5.00 and gets to North Side at 6.30 or 7.00, and the baby has a cold and is running a temperature, if we open our clinics and offered this service to single mothers or otherwise, to the mother, if she can find someone at the clinic who could give her some cough medicine or something for the fever instead of having to turn around, go back to the George Town Hospital, we would be giving the people of the eastern districts a service that they need and deserve.

We need longer or more hours of a doctor in these district clinics. I speak personally of the district of North Side and I am certain that my colleague of East End can say the same of his Health Care Centre.

I believe the Dica Brown Health Care Clinic in the district of North Side is used by the elderly, the young and by mothers when it is open. We must find more uses for these facilities—uses for them that will offer the people a benefit that they deserve.

I call on the Honourable Minister to do whatever is in his power; whether we must do a survey or study in order to allow the clinics in the eastern districts more doctor visits, longer hours by doctors and the clinics opened longer.

The Speaker: Is this a convenient spot for the Honourable Member to break? If so, we will take the luncheon suspension at this time until 2.30 pm.

Proceedings suspended at 12.59 pm

Proceedings resumed at 2.50 pm

The Speaker: The Elected Member for North Side continuing with her debate. Honourable Member you have 1 hour and 23 minutes remaining.

Ms. Edna M. Moyle: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I am sure I will not use that amount of time.

There was a journalist who once told me it is not the amount of time that you speak which really counts, it is what you say.

When we took the luncheon suspension I was dealing with the Ministry of Health Services, Agriculture, Aviation and Works.

Agriculture

Agriculture is a subject very dear to my heart. Many may say: why? I am the daughter of a farmer and a building contractor so I spent many hours helping him till the soil and reaping the crops. I came from a family that lived from the ground, sea and cattle.

Today when I look around the Island and see the number of persons involved in agriculture I am proud. I know the property where my home is supplies the Farmer's Market with a tremendous amount of fresh food. Caymanians call it provisions, today I guess they will refer to it as vegetables. We supply them with tomatoes, sweet potatoes, plantains, bananas, peppers and you name it.

To walk out on a farm and see the provisions that are being grown and see it harvested is a pleasure. When I look at the Throne Speech under Agriculture, the Ministry and the Department of agriculture will engage in the development of a national agriculture plan that will refocus and realign activities in keeping with recent 21st century developments.

The one comment I make on that—it is to be hoped that the Minister responsible for Agriculture will call upon the local farmers (and there are a tremendous amount of them in the eastern districts, particularly East End and North Side) to contribute to the drafting of this National Agriculture Policy. These are the people who have worked with the soil in these Islands; these are the people who know the crops that do best; these are the people that can have a tremendous amount of input into any agricultural policy. I call upon the Minister responsible for Agriculture, I know there is a small amount of money in this year's Budget for agricultural roads, I call upon the Minister that if needs be that the Minister has to go back for supplementary appropriation then so let it be, but there is a tremendous amount of farm land that has no access roads for the farmers of Grand Cayman, I say Grand Cayman because I am not familiar with the situation on Cayman Brac and Little Cayman, but if the need exists there I say let us get whatever funds are necessary and open up these interior lands. Because the closer we get to feeding our own people the better off these Islands will be.

Mr. Speaker, before I move on to the Public Works Department, I spoke about a fire station for the district of Bodden Town and someone called across the floor and said there were funds in this year's Budget. Well I have looked through the Budget and I do not want to stand on the Floor of this House and say things that are not true so if there is anyone else who can locate the funds in this year's Budget for a fire station in Bodden Town I will appreciate being corrected. I find under new entity capital expenditures for the year – under fire services I find Bodden Town fire trucks $1,450,000.00 but I find no funds for a Bodden Town fire station.

Public Works Department

I have one suggestion for the Minister responsible for Public Works. I think he is the same Minister responsible for the Gazetting of public roads. Again, I must speak of my district because this is the district I am most familiar with. There are roads in subdivisions that were started many years ago, some of them, I think, twenty years. Some of them the Government have even built the roads, the Government has continued to maintain the roads but they still remain private roads.

I had one young man come to me just recently in the district. His grandfather was giving him a piece of his property where he has built a little house and he wanted to get the necessary documents and have the property put in his own name. When he brought in surveyor it could not be completed until the young man got permission from the private owner of that road that this Government has built and has been maintaining for years.

This is why I call on the Honourable Minister, I think the same situation exists in his own district because I had someone originally from that district who has been living in my district for some time, trying to sell a duplex that he owned for some time at the end of a road in Bodden Town, has a purchaser who have sent plans to the Planning Board to be told, unless he gets access over the road leading to that property they cannot approve the plan because this road also still remains a private road, even though the Government maintains this road also.

So I ask the Honourable Minister to look into the matter of these roads that we as a Government maintain or have built with a view to having them gazetted as public roads.

Ministry of Education, Human Resources and Agriculture

I now move to the Ministry of Education, Human Resources and Agriculture. Very obviously missing from the Government's Policy Statement under this Ministry is the Employment Law.

The Employment Law was passed in March 2004 with 12 ayes and 5 absentees. Mr. Speaker, I asked the question of the Honourable Minister: Has the Governor assented to the new Employment Law? If he has, why has the Law not been gazetted? If he has not, I call on the Honourable Minister to tell this Honourable House why the Governor has not assented. If he has assented, I call on the Honourable Minister to make a statement to this House saying why it has not been gazetted.

This Law was long in coming and I would like to use the words of the Minister responsible for Community Affairs, Gender, Youth and Sports in his debate on Monday, 15 March 2004 of the Hansard. "I want to say from the beginning that I support this Bill and I would like to give particular emphasis to the fact that the Minister responsible for Employment Relations has not wavered in his attempt to bring a more modern Employment Law to our country that will allow us to not only treat the private and public sectors equally under the Law but also to remove some of the difficulties with regard to enforcement, which were obvious during the time that I dealt with a lot of employment issues in this country.”

He goes on to say. “In attempting to solve the general good it will always be possible and necessary for us to sometimes make legislation that does not really please some groups and individuals in our society.” I call on the Minister to tell this House why the Employment Law that offers a tremendous amount of benefit to the employees in these Islands has not been gazetted. Could it be because of these same groups and these individuals in our society? We need to know.

He further goes on to say, “Therefore the Government is doing a good thing by being led by its conscience, by being led by what it knows is good for all rather than what is good for a particular segment of society.” I would love for the Minister to tell this House and this country in a statement with the support that he had of the Minister responsible for Community Affairs and the other eleven persons who voted ‘Aye’, the Hon. Gilbert McLean, the Minister himself, the Hon. James Ryan, the Hon. Samuel Bulgin, Hon. George McCarthy, Mr. Cline A. Glidden, Hon. D. Kurt Tibbetts, Mr. Alden McLaughlin, Mr. Lyndon Martin, Mr. Anthony Eden, Ms Edna Moyle and Mr. V. Arden McLean, with absentees begin five, Hon. W. McKeever Bush, Hon. Juliana O’Connor – Connolly, Dr. the Hon. Frank McField, Mr. Rolston Anglin and Capt. A. Eugene Ebanks. Twelve Members of this Parliament supported a piece of legislation for the employees of these Islands. We need to know why if the Governor has not assented to the Employment Legislation. If he has assented, why has it not been gazetted?

Education

I move on to Education. I ask of the Honourable Minister two questions: Has all the recommendations contained in the Millett Report on the education system of these Islands been implemented? The second question - the Honourable Minister stood on the Floor of the House, sometime back with the answer to a question and said we would have a 21st Century education policy shortly. I am now asking the Honourable Minister, where is the Education Policy?

The High school in Frank Sound is dear to my heart. I campaigned on a high school in the Frank Sound area from 1984. I would love to have seen the Frank Sound High School come on line in 2005, the reason—the district of North Side has a very small population, and I think it is some 508 persons as of now on the voters list. I have attended primary school graduations in that district on numerous occasions. Some years the classes are five, nine and this year the class reached sixteen. When you take a student from a district that has a total of just over 500 persons and a school graduating class of sixteen, and you put that child into the George Hicks School with over eleven hundred students, he or she is moving into an environment that is totally new. They get lost in the system somewhere.

I watched the graduation of John Gray High School some weeks ago and, I think, it was three children who I recognised from the North Side Primary School through the system, walking to receive their certificate. This is why I think if we can get them into a school that is smaller and nearer to their district we stand a better chance of these children not being lost in the system.

Mr. Speaker, the North Side Primary School, in my opinion, is one of the best equipped primary schools in these Islands. It has not been easy; it has been a fighting task but it has been achieved. I was so pleased at the North Side Primary School’s Graduation when the Principal made her Report and said that some of the North Side children had been tested based on the Education Department’s tests and they came very high amongst all of the primary schools students. She put it down to having a teacher for every class in the school.

We can go back and walk through the Hansards of this Legislative Assembly and every year it will show that I asked to have a teacher for every classroom. Finally we have achieved that and the results are speaking for themselves.

Mr. Speaker, my colleagues across are not going to get me into a cross talk but I have to say, had I not stood on the Floor of this House every Budget session and insisted that we get a teacher for every classroom would this have been achieved? I say ‘No’.

Ms. Edna M. Moyle: Mr. Speaker, the North Side Primary School has outgrown its size. Again, I say as the Minister of Health said yesterday, I do not stand up here and blow my bugle, but I guess there comes a time when you have to. What has helped the North Side Primary School was in 1992 when we could bring back the reception class to the North Side Primary School and East End because I remember fighting for the one in East End since the Minister at that time, the past representative said he was a part of the Government; anyway I did not mind. Mr. Speaker, bringing back those reception classes in those two schools has allowed the school enrolment to grow.

So, I read school construction and development: Although I would have preferred to have read that there was going to be a classroom built and the school was going to be extended with a classroom, I am seeing where North Side Primary School will be receiving one of the temporary classrooms.

The Cayman Islands Cadet Corps – it was indeed a pleasure for me to see the Cadet Core camping on the school grounds of my district and using the facilities of the Cradock Ebanks Civic Centre over the past two weeks, and I had cause to interact with these young men and women and it was a pleasure to speak to them. I had one concern, which was also brought to my attention by people of the district. I was driving into George Town one morning and these smart young men and ladies were marching up the road and the one concern that was brought to my attention—I know that the guns are not loaded but they had ammunition with them. I do not know if this is the rule of the Cadet Corps, I am not that familiar with it but I thought I would bring it to the attention of the Honourable Minister.

I now come to the Ministry of Community Services, Youth, Sports and Gender Affairs.

[Background interruption]

Ms. Edna M. Moyle: Mr. Speaker, I have no intentions of standing here and getting involved in crosstalk. My job as a representative in this Parliament, whether I am there or I am here, is to represent the people of the Cayman Islands.

Community Services, Youth, Sports and Gender Affairs

Very obviously lacking from this Policy Statement is no mention of a policy on women or gender. Now I know it is going to be called across the Floor “why didn’t you do it the year you were there?” Eleven months! The eleven months I was there I left in place all the good things that the present Minister has been able to bring. However, the lack of a gender policy, the parks was a policy decision taken when I was there but they all stand and take the praise for it.

The Speaker: Order!

Ms. Edna M. Moyle: The Policy Paper did not come to Council when I was there? It did not? I have always heard that some people are economical when it comes to the truth, but be that as it may, God is on His Throne.

The lack of a gender policy after almost three years speaks of the respect for women. It speaks volumes. If there is one it was started under the Honourable Juliana O’Connor when she was the Minister, and when I came in it was continued and was supposed to be completed by June 2002. This is July 2004. Mr. Speaker, I read: “Develop appropriate legislation to safeguard the rights of dependent persons, review legislation governing the adoption law and the review of the Maintenance Law and develop regulation of the Children’s Law 2003.” Three years later and we are going to hear, “why didn’t you do it in your eleven months?” Yet, they are the ones with the doctorates and long term service and they have not done it in three years.

Decentralise the Department of Children and Family Services with fully functional district offices in George Town, West Bay and Bodden Town. Mr. Speaker, the lack of community officers in the eastern districts after the Third Elected Member for Bodden Town—they are always saying across the Floor, “you should ask the Third Elected Member for Bodden Town, he was the Minister there”—but we got together and that Minister had community officers appointed in each district. Where are they today?

We are being told that the Social Services Departments will be in George Town, West Bay and Bodden Town and Bodden Town will service North Side and East End. We should have put those in place before we removed the Community Officers from those districts. Up until a few days ago I asked if the office of the social workers for Bodden Town who will also service the eastern districts had opened their office and I was told they were still operating out of George Town because the office was still being renovated.

I have every respect for the Social Workers in these Islands but we must have community officers in the eastern districts because it is totally impossible for the social workers to deal with the schools and other social matters that will face them in those three districts.

I would like to have seen in this Policy Statement where the Government was going to undertake a country poverty assessment so that we can actually find out and plan ten to twenty years down the road as to what the position is going to be. People are living longer; new people are joining us so we need to know what the poverty assessment of this country will be. I know, again, I am going to hear, “why didn’t you do it when you were there?” Well in my eleven months I did obtain a copy of a country poverty assessment study that was done by one of the British Overseas Territories and it was my intention, had I remain, that a country poverty assessment would have been done so that these Islands know exactly what we would be facing down the road.

Mr. Speaker, we speak about the Prison—I even understand that the Chaplin has resigned; I do not know for a fact, I heard it and I do not even know who he is. When we had the riots at the Prison, and I can hear now the Minister responsible at the moment for Prisons, calling on the Chief Secretary to be relieved of his duties because of the riot. If I had been in charge of the Prison and a prisoner out of work duty committed a crime in broad daylight, I would not have waited to be asked, I would have given my resignation at that time.

Dr. the Hon. Frank S. McField: Mr. Speaker, on a point of order.

Point of Order

The Speaker: Would the Honourable Minister please state his point of order?

Dr. the Hon. Frank S. McField: Mr. Speaker, I think that one is innocent until proven guilty so I do not understand how we can, in this Honourable House, actually do the trial and judgment of someone who has allegedly been accused by the Police.

The Speaker: Honourable Minister if you are suggesting that the case is before court it then becomes a sub-judice matter and I would ask the Honourable Member for North Side to move away from the subject if indeed it is sub-judice.

Ms. Edna M. Moyle: Mr. Speaker, I bow to your ruling, Sir, but I was not getting into the court case.

In this Policy Statement I see very little about that necessary facility on the grounds of Her Majesty's Prison, Northward – Eagle House. I am still waiting on a reply from the Budget when I asked if we had sufficient officers who are trained to deal with young people and I still have not been answered.

Do we have the necessary equipment at that facility to assist these young people? Continue sports coaching in local communities and schools recreationally and within the sports associations for the training of national athletes to represent the country.

The question I pose here is: How can the eastern districts be able to bring athletes to reach the national athlete level? Mr. Speaker, I would love to have seen either in the Budget or in this Policy Statement of the Government, a swimming pool in the eastern districts to allow the children in East End, Bodden Town and North Side to be able to develop their potential as swimmers. Some will get up and say that they can use the ocean, sure but it does not work that way.

Someone murmured from across that side, and I am going to answer that question—that I do not support the summer programmes. We need to get something very straight: This particular program that is being spoken about is the football camp that was ran last summer by none other than the Manager of FC Football Club who called me on the telephone to demand that I am responsible for my district to go and find persons to sponsor the football camp. When I told the young man there were three companies in North Side that I would speak to, I spoke to them and one asked for a letter to be written; whether he wrote the letter or not I do not know. The next telephone call I got from this young man, being awfully rude, was telling me that I control my district – more or less I must go and demand sponsorship. I am not afraid to tell anyone that I hung up the telephone on this young man. Prior to him calling me, I saw him in the newspaper with the Honourable Minister responsible for Sports giving him a donation for that football camp. So, I support in my district what I am asked to support but I am not going to support anyone that is downright rude and I have no apologies to make to him.

Mr. Speaker, continue extending the water distribution system throughout the eastern districts in Grand Cayman. The question I ask here that it is my understanding, and I do not know why, is that Morritts Tortuga Hotel will not be connecting to the Water Authority System throughout East End. I do not have a clue why but I need to know why the work has stopped going into the district of North Side. If it has not stopped, it either starts after I leave my district around 9—9.30 in the morning and finishes before I return between 5.30 and 6.00 in the evening, or it goes on into the night. They were working on Frank Sound Road and I would ask under the water plan (the original one) water should have reached North Side in 2005, therefore I ask the question: Will the people of North Side get piped water by the end of the year 2005?

I had responsibility under the Ministry that the Governor gave me responsibility for; for water. You know there is an Opposition Member running in the district of North Side who has taken me on and I want to let this country know that why this young man is running— I am not saying that he is running with UDP or that he is running independent, I do not think he knows what he is running. I want to make it very clear, I am not here beating up anybody, I am here defending Edna Moyle because I was raised by a father—no mother; she died when I was seven—who said, 'your name is better than silver or gold, never lose it'. This Young man seems to be going around the district talking about this water system and that it is only because of him why it is coming to North Side. Mr. Speaker, what that young man should tell this country is when he wanted me to insist that the Water Authority Board be instructed by me to only purchase his waste water tanks; that people could only purchase his waste water tanks in Cayman and that is something I will never stoop to.

If everybody had everything they said in here written in black and white, they would not get up and speak; we all would sit down.

Ministry of Planning

I now come to the Ministry of Planning and there is only one question I have to ask the Honourable Minister responsible and that is under telecommunications, and I have spoken to her on this matter.

At present the North Side Post Office is used for the payment of garbage fees and the payment of electrical bills. I have written to Cable and Wireless and asked them if they would start correspondence with the Honourable Minister with a view that telephone bills could be paid at the North Side Post Office. I would extend to the Honourable Minister, although I have said North Side, in the negotiations, maybe we can extend it to all the eastern district post offices. I do not think CUC took up the main Post Office in George Town and I think when I started correspondence with them in 1995 they said they would do Bodden Town, North Side, East End and Savannah but they would not take George Town and I do not recall if they took up West Bay. I ask the Honourable Minister if she would meet with Cable and Wireless, once they contact her, with a view of telephone bills being paid in the district of North Side. There are a number of people in North Side who only leave that district to come into town to pay a bill.

When I went through the Throne Speech and I see all of the things that are going to be achieved and all the things that are going to be done, the persons who will assist any government in achieving their policy statement are those people we call Civil Servants. Mr. Speaker, there is a matter that has been with me for some time and that is the matter of sick leave for Civil Servants. I know that there is a new piece of legislation coming to the public sector and I am going to call on the Government today. We know that Civil Servants are allowed ten days sick leave and it is not allowed to be accumulated, but that the Government seriously look at putting in that legislation whereby sick leave that is not used can be accumulated to be used—God forbid, it happens—for some Civil Servant who has a long term illness. I think as it exists now they are allowed their 10 days and they can get extended sick leave, but I think if they had it in legislation that their sick leave could be accumulated in case of long-term illness, they would feel much better.

The district of North Side—I saw no funds in the Budget for the upgrading of the North Side football field. I know not whether the Football Association has called upon the Honourable Minister responsible for Sports or not, but I know they have brought it to my attention and I have actually seen it. There are no changing rooms and in the original plan there were supposed to have been changing rooms in the bathroom block but there are none. I have seen the female football teams change on the outside of the building, therefore I call upon the Minister responsible for Sports and the Government to find funds to provide the North Side football field with changing rooms because it is one of the fields that is used by the Football Association quite often.

Mr. Speaker, I have heard the Government side speak about employment, that the only people that are not employed are the people who do not want to be employed. There were about eight young men in North Side without jobs and I have found jobs for two. Luckily Public Works took one on and the Water Company took one on but I have called Public Works, the Water Authority and different places to find employment for these young men. I know not where to go now. I did tell them that I would see if the Minister would arrange for someone from the Employment Offices to meet with me to see if we can find some type of employment. It hurts when they say to you, 'I will take anything'. So, my last resort will be to meet with the Honourable Minister to see where he can guide me through his employment section to find some employment for these young people.

Mr. Speaker, the Senior Citizens Centre in the district of North Side has suddenly become the number one political campaign issue. The plans for the Senior Citizens Centre in the district of North Side, has been on Government's books since the Third Elected Member for Bodden Town was the Minister responsible for Social Services. Each year there used to be a certain amount of money put into the Budget but I have looked and I cannot find it this year, but you know, I am going to give the Government a challenge now. This Member in my district who is out there campaigning the main issue is the Senior Citizens Centre for the district of North Side, is telling people that he has offered his mother's property to the Government for a senior citizens centre. Mr. Speaker, he wrote me a letter when I was the Minister for the same property but he wanted $1.2 million for it and it was supposed to be a gift and the renovations would have taken another $700,000, so as the Minister, I wrote back and said that at the present time and the economic situation the Government was not in a position to purchase this property. However, there are people still coming to me saying that he is saying he is waiting on the Government to come and do whatever.

I say to the Government: If it is free, take it! The senior citizens of North Side do need a place. The property is there and owned by the Government; the plans are there, Public Works drew them because at the moment we have our Senior Citizens at the Pines and at the Senior Citizens Centre in East End. So, it is something that is needed in the district.

This brings me to the end of my contribution to the Throne Speech. I will be accused that I speak and leave but there is a reason that I need to be in my district with my family, as there has been a death of an uncle, so I will wait and listen to the radio tonight rather than sit here while my duty calls me in the district with my children. I will listen and answer because I do not have Public Eye, but I will be carrying my own television programs in the elections also.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: Does any other Member wish to speak? Does any other Member wish to speak? Does any other Member wish to speak? If not would the Honourable Leader of Government Business wish to exercise his right of reply?

[Pause]

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

Members have spoken and the Opposition have been their usual self—criticize, criticize, criticize but offer no solutions to the challenges we face as a country and as a Government. Their usual has been to ask for expenditure—spend, spend, spend and some worthy requests, but offer no solution as to where we can get money, no suggestions even. Firstly I will deal with the Leader of the Opposition.

The Leader of the Opposition berated the Government for having a Throne Speech. According to him it should not have been here because projects like the Port and other things were not in the Throne Speech. In dealing and putting together the Throne Speech the Governor told us that he wanted to deal with new items, projects and other matters, which had already been announced in a budget or a throne speech and which would not necessarily have to be dealt with, as they were already announced as a policy and been dealt with as a government policy. so he would deal with new items. With the exception of a few areas the Governor spoke on new matters going forward.

I did not need to talk about the port in East End. I said before that when I get to the point that I can give more concrete information then I would. However, I cannot see the big worry from the Opposition about the Port not being in the Throne Speech when they do not support the Port. That is not unlike the Leader of the Opposition, they really do not know where they are going and it is typical of his leadership.

It is most challenging to respond in a constructive way to a speech that in no way can be described as either constructive or coherent. So, the Leader of the Opposition was his usual self, on the one hand this and on the next hand that and still saying he do not have the answers.

Contradictions and vague accusations criss-cross each other in his speech with no apparent aim or purpose except to say, while admitting the successes of this Government that something better could have been done but offering, as usual, no concrete proposals, solutions or suggestions.

The Honourable Member says that he has made the same speech less than two months ago so he would not rehearse again those remarks. Perhaps if he had rehearsed they might have made more sense to this House.

[Pause]

Hon. W. McKeever Bush: Mr. Speaker, I did rise unexpectedly and I am not that prepared but I will try to do my best here.

The Speaker: Would the Honourable Leader like a ten minute break?

Hon. W. McKeever Bush: Yes, because of papers that I need. I will continue for a while then ask for a break shortly. There were some things that I need to get information on so I will continue for a while.

The Speaker: Please proceed.

Hon. W. McKeever Bush: One of the things that the Lady Member who just left— if there was ever a good campaign speech made in this House it was that one. As I said she has honed in on some good areas and some that I have not heard for a long time. Of course, it is typical at election time to raise the ghost of Cayman Airways and all sorts of other things, as she did.

I did not appreciate her criticizing the President of FC Football Club. I think that young man can be given much credit in this country and maybe people do not like his politics, if he has any, or the side he supports, if he supports any, but when you look at him he is a very decent young man who works hard at what he does and his family, as well. I do not like what that Lady Member was trying to do. I know some of that story because several things were said from the Budget debate and she told him that she would get even with him in the Throne Speech debate, which she attempted to do. He has worked hard at the football club and in trying to build up his business. He did ask the Member from North Side for help when he was doing the North Side FC Football Camp, one that many children attend; dozens if not over one hundred. He did ask her for help but she outright refused because she thought he was supporting another side, and then, to come here to tell untruth about the young man, Mr. Speaker, is a disgrace! The other side of the story is that when he called her for assistance being in her district, she roughed him up saying that sports was not doing North Side any good and hung up on the young man and then he called her back and told her that she had a responsibility for North Side.

They should stop telling one sided stories and trying to destroy everybody that they can destroy, something that they try to blame the United Democratic Party for and talk about how vicious we are. What I heard here today was nothing short of a disgrace!

Let us get something straight here, Mr. Speaker, when we talk about health insurance and she is saying that if it were not for the Opposition the Government would not have a Law; that is their duty! I have seen time and time again where they refuse to come in and make up quorum because Government is busy doing something else. They say: "you are the Government and if you cannot bring a quorum I am not making it up". I have heard them say that, and I should say not the Third Elected Member for Bodden Town because the truth is when he is here, he is here.

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: Yes, you just come back in now but you were a part of the walk outs and that sort of thing.

Their job is to be here, that is what they are paid for! I be here when I can and when I am not on other business I am here. As far as them making up the numbers on the Committee on health insurance, that is their job. They are not doing Cayman a favour; they are not doing the United Democratic Party or the Minister any favours; they are doing their duty, which is to be here to discuss the affairs before them.

If they are good at anything it is propaganda and stirring up trouble as you just heard the General Secretary, the Second Elected Member for George Town saying—“we did not support the Minister” but that is not the case. I told the Minister I could not be there especially at the times that it was called because there were other things going on. If we have five Ministers and three can be present, and others have something else to do, maybe that is what happens at times. Certainly there was representation from Government and Back Bench. Their job (the five of them) is to be at anything that is called to be present!

The Member for George Town is grumbling but he should have gotten up and spoke. He will not speak in this debate again though. Mr. Speaker, I do not mind them hackling me after twenty years because they have nothing to offer so they have to do that.

There are some other areas that the Member for North Side spoke about that I am going to deal with later on in my speech.

Look at how petty they can be and complain about everything. She complained because she was not here for the opening of this House and the opening of the Throne Speech. She had a family commitment and took it. Nobody made her do that; all of us had to shift things, and the truth is if we do not watch out this meeting will lead into the next one. That is what will happen.

Whether he considers that we manage things in a good way or not, the fact is that a lot of time has been wasted and I am not pointing at either side but we had to start the House when we did because of the Throne Speech. When we took the Budget Debate I said that it would be somewhere around the first week of July and that was from 7 May, because at time they were complaining about bringing the Budget at that time. They have not given credit to the Government; they have not been generous and sensible enough to realise that there are situations and whether they are in Government or we are in Government, or somebody else in Government, there are situations which will arise that you cannot do anything about.

We came into a situation where we were changing our fiscal year and that affected the presentation of the Budget. Because that happened the State Opening is close to where the House is going to be dissolved.

They said that they were going to get rid of me. Well, I told them earlier one thing they are not making me do is lose any weight and that is the bad part of it, so they can talk. I can tell them that in my twenty years a lot thought they could get rid of me but I am back. Arden you are not even going to get a seat!

Mr. Speaker, I think why the Opposition is in trouble is because the economy of this country is doing so well. The economy is strong and everywhere they go . . . Mr. Speaker, I see the East End Member is holding up his fist at me but that does not mean that is going to do him any good. The economy is strong and getting stronger and that is because we have managed well and we have worked hard to make this happen. It did not take only one of us but all of us working together to make this happen.

The financial industry is doing well and I do recall and I am sure from another vantage point you will remember, Mr. Speaker, what they said about that when we increased the fees. We were going to destroy the finance industry in 2001, when they sat down and did nothing but to increase our loan portfolio, borrow and borrow and we took the position we had to raise some fees. They said: “you are going to destroy the economy” and while we have challenges and I say the biggest challenge is yet to come, the financial industry is doing well in spite of the Opposition’s cry that we were destroying it. Unemployment is at three per cent, this is a big record and we are proud of it. We have been good managers of Government’s finances. So, we have worked hard; Government has made some money and we have been judicious in our management.

When we took over in 2000 the bottom line is that Government had $2.5 million to its good; when you take our drafts and the cash balances, the balance was 2.5, and we know that the man who would be all to all in the kingdom of everything did nothing to help the situation although he is trying to take credit for a few things now. However, I will deal with that because the truth needs to be told. As of the end of the financial year, June 2004 our preliminary finding figures are $89.6 million to the good. The economy is doing well and the outlook is prosperous because people have confidence in this country and in the management of it.

They will say that Caymanians are not getting anything out of it; that was the gist of the Leader of the Opposition’s speech, who I will deal with tomorrow. We can point to employment which means people are doing better, we can say that Caymanian companies are doing better because they are employing people. Caymanian houses are being built and I gave those figures earlier. If you think it is only two hundred houses being built then after going out there you are not living in this country, as the Third Elected Member of West Bay said in his speech.

Caymanians are finding it much easier to borrow because the economy is better and the banks can therefore loan them money, that is why, if you did not know that. There are numerous apartments being built, Caymanians again are investing in their country, which means they have confidence in the country. New Caymanian Companies are being formed. I can tell you about others we had here back in the 1970's that you might remember and I might tell you about a few more that is close to you too. So, I will deal with that matter of Cayman status later on, Mr. Speaker.

The truth is the new Caymanians that have been granted status are doing better and I am going to defend the housing as well too. Caymanians are investing in development with the assistance from the Cayman Islands Development Bank. Over $6 million in small business loans to Caymanians— do not tell me that Caymanians are not getting something out of this. I know of at least two factories that Caymanians have invested in through the Development Bank and I remember the licking that it took from the Second Elected Member from George Town. One thing I can say about the Development Bank is that they have to streamline their operations and recognise that they are not a commercial bank; they are there as a Development Bank assisting small entrepreneurs.

When you look at the joint investment by the Fosters and the Kirkconnell families that is another sign of a better investment climate that the country is doing better and when they criticize cruise tourism, do you believe that they would have invested the millions of dollars on the waterfront, which was invested recently, probably in the region of $25-30 million. Is that not a good thing for a small Island like ours? It is a good thing!

When you look at education, hundreds of scholarships, local and otherwise have been granted to Caymanians. Last year we did nine scholarships for tourism, the most in any recent time. This year again, we are granting nine tourism scholarships. Do not tell me that this is not good. I would have liked to increase it but we could not. It is very topical to talk about temporary classrooms but why not talk about enhancement and curriculum? Why not talk about the enhancement and scholarships?

So, Mr. Speaker, I can face the Opposition, whether they are in my district or anywhere else from an upbeat perspective because our record is good. Do not tell me where I am going to campaign as they are trying to do over there, I am going to Bodden Town, East End, North Side and George Town to tell the country the Government's position because for far too long, we have left the PPM to tell the country their view of the situation, which has never been factual!

I have dealt with tomfoolery before and I will ignore it. So, they can talk about that team they are putting together in West Bay instead of talking about who is going to fix me in West Bay, well let them fix me. I understand that they are saying, since they talked about that team, that it is the dream team from the right side of the street, can you imagine a slogan like that, 'the dream team from the right side of the street'. It is a mixture—one who is the First Vice President of the PPM, their district Committee Chairman, the former Minister of Tourism and I do not know if they have anybody else but it is that trio.

I do not have to worry about where I come from and they can put together any team to beat me because of where I come from, the other side of the street; they can do anything! I trust the common sense of the people of these Islands; I have always trusted it and I do not believe that that group is going to go anywhere because people know their record. While I have mine I can defend it! My record is good in assisting Caymanians all over and nobody has been pushed away from my door no matter the numbers, where they come from, or what time of day it is. While I cannot be out there walking the streets of West Bay now because I have an executive position in George Town, doing what the people put me to do you can believe they are not going to have an easy time! I am not going to let them, the country or the district of West Bay forget that under the previous Minister of Tourism that the numbers were fudged, he was not counting the visitors alone, he was also counting Caymanians going and coming. He could do it because the figures went to him. The figures that are counted today by the Department of Tourism are sent to the public on the website before I know anything about them; I receive the figures days after they are counted.

I am going to remind them— they talk about Caymanians not getting anything out of it. No Caymanian small water sports operator can go in any one of the hotels—not the Hyatt, Westin, Marriott, Royal Reef, or Morritts Tortuga. None! They could not go to get any business. I simply said while I support the Ritz Carlton, I will make sure that Caymanians get something out of it. That water sports license is going to a Caymanian group where the small operators are going to be involved. What did the previous Minister of Tourism do, give access only to his friends and possible business partner, formed a shipping company and spent nearly $3 million of the Port's money to pay for a crane. His shipping company could expand but the crane was the wrong size and could not run on the finger pier until ten years later when I expanded and repaired the Dock, then the crane could run all the way on it.

Mr. Speaker, I do believe, the people of this country has had enough of tomfoolery, no matter how much the PPM hollers.

We have made great strides in all areas. I did not knee-jerk, I have been criticized and I will go into some more detail and answer some of that criticism tomorrow, but we did not knee-jerk when we took over. We had already started to deal with the problems in Tourism but when 9/11 happened we did not knee-jerk and run here there and everywhere. We put in place programmes such as television. Cayman had not been advertised on television for years and we put it back in place.

A big complaint had been that we were not showing Cayman culture by helping our artists or musicians and I can say that we have done that in the Tourism and in the Ministry. We have taken our people overseas, it cost us money but we have taken them to showcase Caymanian culture, and the Ministry of Education has been working with the artists and musicians as well. So, from both ends we have been working and assisting our local people to be involved.

When since have you seen a local person on national television in the United States; a Caymanian and Caymanian voice? It was this Government under my administration! You know what really galls me, they say how much I dislike the girls; if I dislike the girls my policy would have been not to use them but use somebody else. Nothing like that, Mr. Speaker! It is a matter that we are doing good things for Caymanians with Caymanians, no matter what side of the street they come from or which party they support, or who they may like or dislike.

Mr. Speaker, we have done well and we are not scared of facing the public of this country. The public of this country will choose whom they see best fit to represent them. I am convinced that they are not going to be fooled by all the stories and rhetoric. I am convinced that the Caymanian people will make a fair judgment on who they think is best to represent them, they have always done it. They are not going to be fooled by the scandal and the bar room talks that I know are going on. Up until last night I heard about it, but they can do as they please. They are not fooling the sensible people of this country. Let them scandalmonger and spout their rhetoric; let them down talk and badmouth the country as they have been doing. You know what is true, I have never heard an opposition in any country badmouth their country, and did not realise that they were doing it, like some Members of the Opposition.

I do know that the Opposition begun by criticising that I had to be away. When are they going to learn and be sensible enough to say that it might be me there next time and if I am there I will have to be at those meetings as well and travel as well. Why try to make the public believe that I am, as he said, off on some jaunt. They believe that travel is easy today, no, Mr. Speaker, it is not. You have to be away from your family, but the fact is this is work and I will say again, as long as the Cayman Islands is under threat by European expansion and United Kingdom's cooperation with Europe and all of the other institutions they cooperate with, Government Members will have to travel, and as Leader of the Government my position is taken very seriously, no matter how much fun they try to make of it and belittle it.

For far too long these Islands suffered and our key industries of financial services and tourism were shackled at times with some of their candidates in West Bay because certain leaders did not attend the meetings, or in the case of the Leader of the Opposition now, who forgot to send letters to foreign Governments at the right time, as did the Leader of the Opposition on the European Union Savings Directive. He should hang his head in shame when he talks about anybody travelling from Government.

I do not know what he is going to do if he becomes the Leader, he does not like to get on a plane; he does not like to travel and he would have to travel eight hours at a time and sometimes more, so what is he going to do, get drunk, have a hangover and say 'Bobo' I forgot about it? No! Or is he going to send the Member from North Side, who, when she goes to the meetings do not even say 'quehey'? My position is when the Cayman Islands' name is called at the table, if I am the one that has to go I will answer or somebody will have to answer; I will debate and negotiate in the best interest of these Islands.

So, Mr. Speaker—

The Speaker: Honourable Leader of Government Business we have reached the hour of 4.30, if this is a convenient point for you to break.

I will call on the Honourable Leader of Government Business to move the Motion for the adjournment.

ADJOURNMENT

Hon. W. McKeever Bush: Mr. Speaker, before I move the adjournment I would like to remind Business Committee Members that we will hold a meeting directly afterwards.

I move the adjournment of this Honourable House until 10 am, 16 July 2004.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: The question is that this Honourable House do now adjourn until 10 am, 16 July 2004. All those in favour please say Aye. Those against, No.

Ayes.

At 4.31 pm the House stood adjourned until 10 am Friday, 16 July 2004.

OFFICIAL HANSARD REPORT
FRIDAY
16 JULY 2004
2.11 PM
Seventh Sitting

The Speaker: I now invite the Second Elected Member for West Bay to lead us in prayers.

PRAYERS

Mr. Rolston Anglin: Let us pray.

Almighty God, from whom all wisdom and power are derived: We beseech Thee so to direct and prosper the deliberations of the Legislative Assembly now assembled, that all things may be ordered upon the best and surest foundations for the glory of Thy Name and for the safety, honour and welfare of the people of these Islands.

Bless our Sovereign Lady, Queen Elizabeth II; Philip, Duke of Edinburgh; Charles, Prince of Wales; and all the Royal Family. Give grace to all who exercise authority in our Commonwealth, that peace and happiness, truth and justice, religion and piety may be established among us. Especially we pray for the Governor of our Islands, the Speaker of the Legislative Assembly, Official Members and Ministers of Cabinet and Members of the Legislative Assembly, that we may be enabled faithfully to perform the responsible duties of our high office. All this we ask for Thy great Name's sake.

Let us say The Lord's Prayer together: Our Father, who art in Heaven, Hallowed be Thy Name. Thy Kingdom come, Thy will be done on earth as it is in Heaven. Give us this day our daily bread, and forgive us our trespasses, as we forgive those who trespass against us. Lead us not into temptation, but deliver us from evil. For Thine is the Kingdom, the power and the glory, forever and ever. Amen.

The Lord bless us and keep us. The Lord make His face shine upon us and be gracious unto us. The Lord lift up the light of His countenance upon us and give us peace, now and always. Amen.

The Speaker: Please be seated. Proceedings are now resumed.

Proceedings resumed at 2.13 pm

READING BY THE HONOURABLE
SPEAKER OF MESSAGES
AND ANNOUNCEMENTS

Apologies

The Speaker: Firstly, I wish to apologise to this Honourable House for the late start today which was an occasion due to a very urgent meeting that had to be called this morning by the Cabinet.

I have a number of apologies here, but I believe that those Members have since arrived.

STATEMENTS BY MINISTERS AND

The Speaker: I have received no statements from Members or Ministers of the Cabinet.

GOVERNMENT BUSINESS

Debate on the Address Delivered by His Excellency the Governor on Friday 2 July 2004

(Continuation of debate thereon)

The Speaker: The Leader of Government Business, the Honourable Minister responsible for the Ministry of Tourism, Environment, Development and Commerce, continuing his reply.

Hon. W. McKeever Bush: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I too want to add my apology for the late start. We were ready to start this morning and we had an urgent Cabinet meeting which held us up. It was in connection with the Constitution and Citizenship and that matter will come before the House this afternoon, sometime before we adjourn.

We do apologise to the House, the Press and others who were here.

The Speaker: I remind you, Honourable Leader that you have one hour and nine minutes remaining.

Hon. W. McKeever Bush: I have quite a bit to say and I do not know if I can get through it in that time.

When I was debating yesterday before the adjournment I was dealing with the Opposition Leader, who is absent from here, and is absent every time I speak. I was commenting on his criticism of the Government's administration and in particular my Ministry and my work as The Leader of Government.

I believe that everyone understands that as long as the Cayman Islands is under threat by European expansion and the United Kingdom's cooperation with Europe, the Financial Action Task Force (FATF) and the Organisation for Economic Cooperation and Development (OECD), Members of the Government will have to travel quite a bit and as Leader of the Government my position is taken very seriously.

I believe, for far too long these Islands suffered and our key industries of financial services and tourism were shackled at times because certain leaders did not attend the meetings, or in the case of the Leader of the Opposition, forgot to send very important letters to the Foreign and Commonwealth Office at the right time, as he did with the European Union Savings Directive.

My position is, when the Cayman Islands' name is called at the table, if it is me that have to travel then I will have to answer and I will continue to do that; I will debate and negotiate in the best interest of these Islands.

I have my responsibilities as the Leader of the Government and I have my responsibilities as the Minister of Tourism, matters of trade and commerce. So, this time I had to be away as there was a seminar in Brussels and we had to be in Brussels to attend that seminar where I was asked to give our position. It was a good thing that we were there and we have been told that the Cayman Islands should stick to tourism; that is how they feel about us. We have no business in business, according to them, and the financial industry and matters of that nature belongs to them. That is why, Mr. Speaker.

I have been in politics long enough to take the barbs, licks and it sometimes hurts when the Opposition Members who are supposed to understand and know, get up and make the kind of remarks that they do. Because if we are not there then we will get included in things that are not in Cayman's best interest and that is what happened in the Fiera Accord, and I do not have time to get into that today. Had the leadership at the time, Mr. Thomas Jefferson, being one, had attended that meeting then perhaps Cayman would be where Bermuda is, not called upon. Bermuda simply said to them 'we do not want to be a part of it', and they attended that meeting. Cayman was included because nobody from Cayman was there and so we have to put up with the expense, and not only the expense, but the fall out is going to come from the Savings Directive.

Mr. Speaker, I have said the biggest problem we have to deal with is the European Union and its expansion and Britain's collaboration with Europe. That is why we have taken a more serious attitude about foreign affairs and dealing with foreign affairs.

I keep saying that while the Opposition is here talking about too much cruise tourism and dreaming up all sorts of things, that is not a big issue to us and are managed locally, while we are arguing about fire ants, elephants are getting ready to trample us.

When we look at the world order the modern world moves quickly; nation states are increasingly interdependent. Developments and computing are an example of this interdependence. The cost of computing power is one thousand times less now than it was in 1970. If you apply that to cars then a car would cost around $5. Fifteen years ago if you wanted instantaneous global communications you had to be a big company; small companies did not stand a chance. Now anyone in our Islands can have access to global communications for a few cents. This Government has done well and I want to thank you as former Minister and the present Minister for telecommunications and I want to give some credit to my colleague the Fourth Elected Member for West Bay, somebody of his intellect and background, who was the Chairman that had the ability to skilfully and technically bring the negotiations with Cable and Wireless and Caribbean Utilities to a successful conclusion thus far. So, when we look at the world that we have to dwell in today, the Cayman Islands have been a driving force in this trend to globalisation and our economy is a beacon in the world economy.

We realise that global capital has common sense; it flows to stable and friendly markets where it can earn a favourable rate of return and be repackaged at low cost. It then goes back to those countries that are trying to kill our industry. It does not stay here, it comes and they neatly package it and send it back where it works for them.

So, Mr. Speaker, it is no longer enough for our Government to just look at our domestic politics and policy, we must be vigilant and look internationally and engage on foreign matters. The distinction between foreign and domestic policy is certainly lessening and our country's success, our financial industry is dependent on being networked into the latest trends.

Our bankers, lawyers and insurers are all networking with their counterparts abroad in order to do the jobs. International security, regulators network to follow the entities that they regulate. Even judges at the Court network internationally. The Supreme Court of Canada sites judges at the South African Supreme Court, the US Supreme Court has, for example, the European Court of Justice, the French Constitutional Court and the Indian Court. Judges used to be domestic but they too operate in a global economy. So, Cayman have to look out for ourselves; we need to be at the table.

Let us look, for a moment, at the most important thing that is happening geopolitically in the world and that is the development of the European Union. The European Union has gone from a tariff zone to include political and economic issues as well as justice and foreign affairs. The European Union is certainly growing in power and we need to recognise that the European Union will matter more and more to our economy, country and way of life.

The Opposition failed somehow to grasp this key matter and will fail our country because they are advised by the wrong people, if they are continuing to be advised by their consultant, the man from Barbados, Mr. Henry, who they had sometime ago. We have to look out for ourselves; we recognise that nobody is going to look out for us as well as we look out for ourselves.

I have recognised the potential impact of the European Union and as it grows geographically and deeper in terms of its policy reach, its powers and influence increases. That is why I have zoned in on a different constitution altogether but some economists suggest that the world's reserve currency, currently the dollar, could become the Euro; this will take many years but already people are talking about it. Back in the 1980's it was recognised what Europe was doing and that the OECD would come so it is not farfetched what some economists is suggesting. The European Union is now twenty-five states. Five hundred million people and a gross domestic product similar to the United States, just last month agreed a new draft constitution. Furthermore, most people under thirty-five years old in the European Union Member States will now also consider themselves partly European, that is even to the United Kingdom, which whom we belong to or administers us. They attach themselves to the concept of Europe and it is crystal clear to me the direction in which the European Union is going. The train has left the station and is travelling at 60 miles an hour. The problem for us is that Europe loves regulation. They have over eighty thousand pages of rules and regulations in the European Union Commission. We need to be aware of what is going on in Europe. Our business community needs to be aware.

The new Constitution belonging to Europe also broadens the concept of an outermost region; that is an overseas territory of a member state can, if they wish, become associated to the European Union. At the moment the Overseas Territories can choose, but what if the European Union decides that all member states should seek to include their overseas territories as outermost regions? That is not farfetched. We are now all British Citizens whether we like it or not, even if we you do not have a passport that does not mean anything, the passport only tells you and shows publicly that you are a British subject. However, on the books we are all British subjects whether we want to be or not, we are all British subjects. So, when they decide to do something and we have no Constitution to stop them, we cannot.

The European Union's history has been characterised by periods of aggressive expansion in terms of policy. I expect the EU to focus on ensuring the recent expansion works in the immediate terms. I caution this House however, that it will not be long before the commission turns to its next phase of expansion, be it geographically or in policy. Either way, this country will be affected tremendously. They have told us in Britain at the last seminar "you stick to tourism; that is your business because we are coming after insurance and aviation". They have already told us that we can be in charge of that no more and they are going to come after shipping and mutual funds. These are the things that they will come after.

The Cayman Islands share much with our Mother Country, the United Kingdom, and other countries like the United States, particularly, with regard to our commitment to free markets and our joint efforts to combat crime. The latter priority is strongly held and it is clearly demonstrated by our robust regulatory system and commitment to international financial initiatives. However, the influence of the European Union is gaining. The European Union Savings Tax Directive was a wake up call to the Cayman Islands. It was a piece of legislation imposed on us by London and Brussels to which we have never really agreed. We are concerned that London, under pressure from Brussels, will be increasingly prepared to impose European legislation on us regardless of how undesirable it may be for the people of the Cayman Islands.

In a high level meeting, the one I attended in Brussels last week, I did ask the Commission officials explicitly why Bermuda was not within the scope of the current Savings Tax Directive, and I received no satisfactory reply because they will tell you one thing, but they did say that Bermuda was at the meeting where the Fiera Accord was agreed and simply asked not to be a part of it. I also asked whether there were any plans to extend the Directive to other forms of income other than savings, again they said they could not tell me that then but they were mentioning other things saying that we should not be in those businesses. So, what is that telling us? We are not blind, dumb and stupid! I expressed in no uncertain terms to the Commission how unjust I believe this lack of a level playing field to be. I emphasised in the meeting that any further attempts by Brussels and London to intervene in the Cayman Islands economy would damage not only the Cayman Islands and our people, but also the world economy, simply because of the role that we play in world finance.

The Commission said it would soon begin negotiations with further countries including Singapore, Hong Kong and Dubai. The Commission, however, was unable to offer any firm information as to when this process would begin or how their lack of a strong negotiation position would force these third countries to sign up to the European Directive.

When we look at how they are treating Gibraltar who is also an overseas territory, but yet part of the European Union because of its geographic position, the relationship between the UK Overseas Territories and the European Union is a complex matter because with the exception of Gibraltar, since the European elections last month, they have no representation in the European Institutions except through the UK Council of Ministers. This means that as we see the powers of the European Union grow ever greater, the Overseas Territories have almost no influence over the development of regulations and treaties.

Gibraltar is a British Overseas Territory; it is a Member of the European Union, yet makes no contribution to the European Union's Budget and falls outside many policy areas. Amazingly it does transpose European Union obligations and duties into Gibraltar's Law, even when that Law cannot apply to Gibraltar. That is an enormous burden. The people of Gibraltar see themselves as culturally, socially and economically part of the Continent of Europe. For the first time this year Gibraltar voted in the European Parliamentary Elections, the votes being added to the southwest of England's constituency. This solution, from my point of view, is not appealing to the Cayman Islands. We are geographically remote from Europe and our free market approach to economic management is far removed from the continental socialist, interventionist approach. We do not depend economically on Europe. We face the world and we are also inevitably influenced in terms of trade and economics by the $10 trillion economy of the United States, which is only 480 miles away. We value our links to the British Crown but we must increase democratic control over fiscal policy matters in order to protect our economy, Mr. Speaker.

We are not talking about independence, we are simply saying that the Cayman Islands people must be able to control more of our future than we are today for more reasons than one. Our Government believes that it is unacceptable that the British Government has exclusive power to determine which European Union regulation and treaties should apply to the Overseas Territories, and which should not. It cannot be right that this Government, freely elected by the people of the Cayman Islands, should be obligated to implement the unilateral decisions of the Colonial power. We are not a part of the European Union and we receive no benefits from it.

We look to the way forward. I believe that the UK is still not paying enough attention to the views of elected representatives of the Overseas Territories. We must strive for the UK Government to undertake considerably more consultation with ourselves over the formation of treaties and other agreements. We are deeply disappointed by the lack of consultation on the Savings Directive.

Turning away from the European Union for a moment—A host of international bodies now exists which seek to exert an influence on the Islands, the Organization for Economic Co-operation and Development (OECD), International Monetary Fund (IMF), Financial Action Task Force (FATF), Financial Stability Forum (FSF), International Organisation of Securities Commission (IOSCO), International Association of Insurance Supervisors (IAIS), Basel Accord and the World Bank are just some of the non-governmental bodies currently influencing world opinion and having an effect on these Islands. These agencies are beginning to dictate standards of financial services. I want to emphasise that where there are clear and ambiguous global standards we are prepared to accept and recognise these. However, there is no one regulator to which all jurisdictions in the market commit, and consequently there are no real established international standards in terms of financial regulation which, we say, is an ambiguous concept, to say the very least.

There is therefore a strong case for us, in particular, for us to have self determination on all fiscal policy matters and also to take a greater role in selected foreign affairs matters on international organisations in order to protect our interest. The Cayman Islands have a history of international co-operation and certainly we do not need European Union interference to enforce standards.

Mr. Speaker, it is not possible to build the world's fifth largest financial centre if the standards of governance, regulation and law enforcement are not also world class. So, across the globe there is improved regulator to regulator disclosure, more cross border transparency and improved application of the principles of corporate governance; these are developments we should all welcome.

What is the responsibility of the Cayman Islands in foreign affairs? We are a small Island nation; small in the number of our people and the number of our land but our role in the world is significant. If we accept the principle of my earlier reference to networks then we will realise and recognise also that Government too, operate through networks. We all understand in this House that a strict interpretation of our Constitutional position would lead us to conclude that the British Government is responsible for our foreign affairs, but networks are where conversations are held, brainstorming sessions undertaking and decisions are made. We cannot expect or hope that the British Government, UK, would protect our interest as we would in all of these networks; they would not, because they are in competition with us.

Much of our Government does operate through networks. The Cayman Islands need to play its part and attempt to shape the new world; small as we are we need to be a part of it; we should not shy away from it and we have to be at the table when our name is called. We must locate our national interest in the wider international community. We need to engage in multilateral partnerships. An example is the effort to unite the economies of the Western Hemisphere into the single free trade arrangement was initiated at the Summit of the Americas some years ago. So, we need to build our allies and we need to work in partnership with others who share our ideals and our vision to ensure our survival and success.

The United Kingdom was so successful in managing their empire by applying the old Roman idea of divide and rule. Many would say that those skills are alive and well in the foreign office in London. As Churchill said: "Having allies sometimes mean that they might have other opinions". So, we need to recognise that we need to work hard with our friends to argue our ideas and come to a common position. If we can agree on our objectives we should use each others capability in a complimentary way, each of us acting to the best of our abilities.

In conclusion on this aspect the Cayman Islands are fully committed to appropriate and timely international obligations. One need only to look at our commitment to and involvement with the likes of the OECD, IMF, FATF and Caribbean Action Task Force (CATF) and others to witness evidence that we are happy to engage with international bodies. The Cayman Islands and its principal political representatives, whoever that may be, at whatever time, need to take a great role in our foreign affairs to protect our interest, the interest of the Cayman Islands and we will consciously protect our economic success from the high tax tendencies of the European Union. So, Mr. Speaker, while they question why I am not at a particular meeting and have gone abroad, these are challenging times and we need to ensure that we remain alert and determined towards those challenges ahead of us.

Mr. Speaker, the Leader of the Opposition went on about development and about tourism. He went on to say that we were basking in the fact that stay over visitor numbers have started to increase; well, what else should we do? Instead of rightly congratulating the Government for taking action during the most challenging time that this industry has ever faced and that we are already seeing the benefits from our clear and decisive actions, the Member go on at length to describe how crucial tourism is to our economy; we know that! Then he goes on to say that we face challenges to the future of that industry, as a result of a negative perception of the quality and value of our product. He says that he contends the Government is not doing enough to address this problem. However, rather than offer any suggestions or proposals, he then goes on to say in the same breath, that we must not let development go unchecked. I will come back to this point if I have time so I would ask Members to remember the Leader of the Opposition views in this area.

He then go on to say in a variety of ways that somehow all cruise ship arrivals are a bad thing and that we should be ashamed of trying to work with this industry to bring tourists to our Islands. I am sorry, but unless I am sadly mistaken, one of the key jobs of the Tourism Department is to bring tourists to our Islands because without them we have no industry. The Leader of the Opposition also goes on to make a typical sweeping unsupported statement concocted of gossip and misinformation that is norm with the PPM, that there is somehow a direct connection between increased cruise arrivals and decreased stay-over visitors. As I said earlier, he is speaking about 2001 and 2002, perhaps when we had not yet taken off and all of our reinvention in the tourism sector and the work that we had done from that infrastructure's point of view had not yet begun to kick in.

My Ministry is very aware of the delicate balance that must be maintained between cruise arrivals and stay over visitors and rather than just talk, as he is doing, and not making any suggestions, we have taken steps to deal with this in a balanced and constructive way. If we had not taken the bold action we took post 9/11 we might not have any tourism industry at all to be discussing, and the many Caymanians who have invested their lives and depended on this industry would be in a sorry state if we had followed the Leader of the Opposition's "do nothing approach" to pressing issues.

The country is now starting the crest of another tourism boom and it is easy to forget how only a few short years ago we were wondering if we would survive at all, yet, the Leader of the Opposition would have us believe that the things which helped this country stay afloat are now to be ridiculed. Say what you like, but if we did not have cruise tourism when there were no planes coming here, where would we have been? What would have happened? At least some people, those who work the waterfront, even if they do not get all that they want and cry for, they had something coming in at that time.

The Government's record is strong in this area and although we are keenly aware of the balance that must be maintained between cruise arrivals and stay over visitors, and as the market shifts, we must adjust to meet it. It seems that we have become a boiling pot of complaints because people can complain and feel they have that right, not even stopping at times to think what damage they might be doing. I heard a letter read over the airways from a tourist who comes here from listening to some of the complaints on the radio as if it is all Caymanians who are complaining ; that is not so and why I say it is not all good what you hear on the radio sometimes. This Government's record is strong in the area that I am talking about. We brought in the people to help keep the many Caymanians and local attractions going during rough and tough times and we have engaged the cruise industry in a positive way to reduce the number, but increase the quality in the future and to do so in a tangible way to ensure that the benefits spreads to as many Caymanians as possible.

As evidence of our balanced approach, Mr. Speaker, you can see that not only have we worked to keep the traditional tourism industry centered around long stay-over visitors, but we have the dock going and we have also worked to move Caymanians into a position to capture its place at the top of the tourism market. The real impact and potential for the Ritz Carlton has been felt in all sectors of our economy and day by day this impact increases in a very positive way.

If the Leader of the Opposition understood tourism and the region, and I know that he does not understand tourism, he would know that this type of project is the dream and envy of the entire region and is much harder to come by and takes more support than he may have bothered to consider.

The Leader of the Opposition went on into a lengthy rambling warning of the risk of not planning and taking action to safeguard our product and its underlying appeal. All that can be drawn from this is that the Leader of the Opposition thinks it best if we strive, in tourism, to not encourage anyone to come and visit our Islands, and it is important to note that the Member seems to have just discovered the idea of planning, balance and taking actions to achieve those plans. If he had been watching this Government he would have seen those principles in action.

The Member discusses the key nature of protecting our marine environments. Perhaps he should have added that this Government and my Ministry have been the ones to take the critical bold steps to do this. We have moved beyond talking and started to take concrete action on the Sandbar and made moves to see that it is both protected and used in a way that benefits local Caymanians; the first time ever! We have taken the steps to introduce our Marine Protection Bill, to ensure that the treasured marine environment is there for generations, even when they came here and asked us to give them more conchs.

I said earlier that I would come back to a number of points in the Leader of the Opposition's speech that revolved around control and controlling of both tourism and the economy, as he has talked about. I believe that all of us in these blessed Islands recognise that a co-operative approach between the public, private sector and the whole hearted support of free enterprise and capitalism are the bedrocks of our financial and social success. We have seen the damage that he has talked about; we know what happened with that; we know what happened to the economy when every law suit was flying right, left and centre and nobody could do anything, no investor could come in lest they were ran out, accused and or taken to court after they had bought land—all sorts of things. Yet, despite all of that, the Member repeatedly talked about the needs to control development to manage the industry to check development because he knows that is a buzz word. The sum total though, of these statements is both a sad misunderstanding as to how the economy and business works and a disturbing preference for Government interference and intervention, as he talked about.

We need only look around the region of the world, for that matter, if we do not want to look at our own case, in the last two years to see the complete failure of countries and societies that attempted to implement outdated and discredited socialist approaches of Government control in our economic forces. Yet in the face of these realities the Leader of the Opposition persists and says that it can be done easily because somebody else is doing it now. If that Member knows how to control and manage the economy easily, he would be the first in history to do so and if he knows of someone who is doing it now I would ask him to let us know, as I would be very interested to meet this first of its kind person.

The truth that the Leader of the Opposition has failed to grasp is that the world has moved on beyond an individual approach between business and Government. In fact the Cayman Islands can be proud that we led the way in this regard and that the cooperative balanced approach that this Administration have worked for is the way forward, and the way this brings the most benefit to the people of these Islands.

The Leader of the Opposition is obviously aware of this and nervous enough about his position that he feels compelled to reassure this House that he and the PPM are indeed capitalists. He accused me of being right of centre. If we are right of centre and he is complaining that we must have all of these controls and do all of these other things, then what is he, right of centre too? No, he has to be left of centre, has to be if that is what he is saying.

He went on to describe his own business life as an example, the way he made his money, but really, that was not in the free market of real economic competition because that was monopoly where the contracts were not tendered for some ten years as they were required to be and now he is talking about the tendering process? How dare him! He has the nerve to talk about Central Tenders Committee and what is not going there now; when that is the way he made business happen? Stop talking out of both corners of your mouth!

The Member moves from what he called the utopian dream, and with the PPM it could only be a dream because if you listen their reality would be a nightmare for the people of the Islands. To talk about Government's power to intervene and the best he can promise us, in his vision, of a sustainable economy is not one that makes life better for all Caymanians, but with regards to our social problems, he says that at least, it does not make them any worse. Is that all he can promise? Mr. Speaker, if you trample with the progress in any country and you have no solutions, as I have not heard any from him, then what happens is that we stand still. Our quality of life cannot remain as it is if this country stands still, because the business dynamics are too different. You cannot stand still and remain at the standard of living which our people have, even though some may say that we are not doing as well off, we should be thankful. Thank Almighty God that we are not starving and while we have challenges we are doing better than most countries.

If you stop or slowdown progress; if Government intervenes and slowdown progress, as he is saying that they are going to do if they gain power, the only thing that can happen is for people to be worst off; they cannot get better off. This is a sad reflection on what the Opposition feels that economy has to offer to our people, and one, that under this Government has not been the case, people are better off than when he was in office. In fact, the Leader of the Opposition goes on to talk about the need to bring newer and broader opportunities to Caymanians in all fields.

I would point out to the Leader of the Opposition that yet again, despite his providing nothing more than vague and pessimistic criticisms to the Throne Speech and Government's administration, this Government has been taking action on the issue at heart and showing real results; results that affect the lives of Caymanians everyday in a positive way. The Government has encouraged, in a co-operative way, technical training and advanced programmes in the construction and hospitality field as a ministry responsibility for training which the Ministry of Education has done along with the Ritz Carlton project. Of course, if you follow the suggestions of the Opposition we should spend public money to train people with skills they could not use because we would have no development and no jobs for those people to go to; that is the sad thing about it. We hear talk about training, and on the other hand, they are saying not to do anything, leave everything as it is; we are getting too much. How can we have these newer and broader opportunities for Caymanians? They are whistling in the wind, if not in the dark. No matter what they say we should not stop development and the progress going on at the time, for what then, would we be training people for?

The Leader of the Opposition complained early in his speech about our encouraging cruise arrivals but later in his speech he criticizes my support for other luxury hotels that will encourage stay-over visitors and move us towards our goal of quality over quantity in the tourism market. You cannot have quantity if you only have one or two four star hotels. We have to move to a higher level and I believe that hotel which is now going to move forward under Mr. Naul Bodden and others, is going to do better for us. We need these kinds of five and six star properties.

How can the PPM criticize Cayman as being a mass tourism destination? That is their accusation because that is not a fact. However, how can they say that and then say on the same hand that we should not have the hotels which can bring the quality over the quantity?

Hon. W. McKeever Bush: Your Leader did! You do not know; you were sleeping or outside smoking. Hush! Rest me!

All that I can conclude is that the Leader of the Opposition is encouraging this Government to take his approach and do nothing, all the while trying to be all things to all people. That is where he has failed in his political life. He has been a failure. He bamboozled Truman Bodden, but he cannot do that to McKeever!

The Honourable Member tries to make sense out of his rudderless approach with a tub metaphor, if we remember him using, wherein he worries that the water will get to full and people will somehow wash out of the tub. In that metaphor for tourism and development where water appears to be investment and visitors, the only way to achieve what the Opposition Leader wants, apparently, is to turn off the tap, stop the water then we will all be equally bad off. I suppose the Member think that it's Government's role to intervene to ensure that everyone is equally poorly off. I find further proof of this in the Member's closing remarks on this section where he wraps up but finally admitting clearly: "I do not profess to have all the an- swers." In fact, it would seem that the Leader of the Opposition has none of the answers, but that is his modus operandi at all times!

They are trying to make a big issue out of the status issue but when you look at what he said, that was some of the things he said in this matter on status. He went to great lengths in February 2000 to say that we needed to do something about the status situation and the many people who were here. He never talked about ten years, he talked about five years and over. I quote him on that debate: "I hold that view out of a sense of natural justice, but also because the fact is are we going to tell them they have to leave the country?" We have not done so this far in fact it seems obvious that Government has found itself in a situation where it is such a difficult task to tackle in its eighth year, at that time, as a government it has not done anything about it. He goes on to say: "some people will make political hay out of this situation trying to grasp opportunities when they hear certain things being said just for political expedience. In my view, that is so irresponsible! It is not funny. This is a serious situation. We have people who have made their lives here for many, many years who you find it difficult not to be willing to say we have to do something about these people. I do not care from what angle you look at it." Again I go on to quote him, "what would be the worst to come out of this is for nothing to be done. That is what has been the worst, for nothing to be done as has been the case for many, many years. I contend that because nothing has been done for many years is why the decisions that now have to be made are that much more difficult simply because you are looking at larger numbers of people."

But on the other hand if you look at the broader picture, and this is going to be shocking but mathematically it is correct, and we do nothing for the next fifteen years, hear this carefully" and I can see him now saying, hear this carefully, "If we do just as we have been doing now, we are going to have a population in this country where seventy per cent of the voting age people will not be able to vote, but they will be residing on what they call a permanent basis; they will have a government and a legislative assembly that basically represents thirty per cent of your population. That is the big picture."

Mr. Speaker, people are going to get this to read and I am going to make sure of that because I contend that the PPM is a bunch of hypocrites and that this country cannot afford to put that team back in Government with any mix outside of people who are saying that we are independents. That cannot be because when you read this of that situation and when you go on to hear what they have done with this issue, going all over the place making people believe that Cayman is going to die and Caymanians were going to be destroyed, and yet, you heard this Member say this kind of thing. What then can they expect from a Government made up with them however they are trying to put themselves together? I know what they are doing in West Bay—they call themselves the dream team from the right side of the street, it must be the right side of Elm's Street, a nightmare.

What I believe is true; they cannot be trusted when they object to a situation, as always, when they find out that the Government has not feared as badly, or that the PPM are on the losing side, they find all kinds of excuses. That is what happens, you know; they started off making people believe all sorts of things. Remember that meeting on the Court House steps? They have gone all over the country on the radio shows saying all sorts of things, well, they found out different and started to back pedal, and I will get to that—because he did so in his speech again. Anyway they found out that they were losing support so they started to back pedal and speak out of both sides of their mouths in order to secure votes. They went out of their way telling the Press, the Caymanian Compass, that one and all could get status which started a stampede. All kind of things were said on the radio shows. They had a meeting where they made Caymanians believe that our world was falling apart and I could go on and on about the irresponsibility of the PPM and the status matter.

Mr. Speaker, we need to expose further the Leader of the Opposition's ability or inability to stay the course and tell the truth on a subject, on the issue and his fickle and shifty stances. The other thing is true! They will twist the truth when it suits them. He said I told him that they could get thirty people to give status to. I wrote to him twice and did not specify any number; just roughly a month was given to give their recommendations to Cabinet for anyone who he believed it should be granted to. I will come to their position because the Member for North Side, as usual, rose to his defence saying it was about the process, so I will get to that.

They went all out and are going all out. They said it was going to overcrowd the schools, but the facts are, there needs to be work done on schools, as is always at this time of the year and the Ministry has said what they are doing. We have told the Minister for Education that whatever he needs for education he will get it and the Permanent Secretary has said the same. Now, look at what he is saying today about the process! Let's be sensible! According to him we must make those children, the children from the parents who gained status, go to school. He said it is a human right—well tell me this! I would like to ask the PPM how is it a human right to make the children go to school when we do not have the space, but it is not a human right to give the parents Caymanian status after being here for over eight, thirty, twenty or fifteen years. How is it a human right? Here are the facts on the status issue.

What the Government did was legally and morally correct and from a human rights standpoint, we are safe from international fallout because we did what was right. However, we cannot take the children at this point in time, who are overseas, and I know parents where they may be disappointed, they understand and are grateful to be settled here. They now have Caymanian status without the fear of being kicked out of a job and lose their permits after fifteen, twenty and thirty years.

If a few people have slipped through the cracks there are thousands of good deserving people who received Caymanian status and now our country can grow, as he said in 2000. We do have a good Immigration Law, which makes everyone know where they stand from day one while protecting Cayman as has never been protected before. The truth is, while I know that there are some people in West Bay who got it, as one of them was quoted in the paper, when they were giving their friends from the United Kingdom and from wherever they were who their friends, nobody knew about it because it did not come out or hit any paper. They are big advisors today of the PPM and trying to put together teams in West Bay saying that they have to get rid of me; well, they will have a fight on their hands.

When they were in Executive Council doing and hiding it from the people, it was a good thing. We have done the right thing. I like to say this because the Member likes to claim credit for a few things in ExCo. When we decided to get a new Immigration Law and deal with this issue, he did not come up with the idea of the Immigration Review team, he said that we would go back and look at all of the Committees and set up a committee. We said and remember carefully, Mr. Speaker, we said in Executive Council there is no need to do that because we have had many committees over the years and we have all of those reports, let us get people to look at it. That is how the idea came. Yes, it was done while he was Leader of Government Business, but it was not his idea!

I know that this is one of the big issues they are trying to put forward, the Caymanian status issue, but Caymanians are not stupid and even if some of them do not like the idea they recognise that something had to be done and we did what was right. No election is going to be won on this one issue.

The United Kingdom was saying that people from five years must get it and the Governor at the time was doing it by himself because they had been here five years, so he was giving them permanent residence! So, do not talk about some of them who got because they were here less than ten years as there were few who did, and as I said, some may have fallen through the cracks—I do not know! There was a moratorium which was put on and whether we had a board to deal with the matter there was a court case that said what was happening was wrong; the moratorium was illegal. People who make good contribution to our country and are good people; why not?

The PPM went overboard and they are back peddling now, saying that the children must go to school and talking that they are not a part of the court case; what a bunch! Can you believe that? When you have the General Secretary, the Chairman and another high power member of the PPM, three of them in the Cayman Bar Association pushing the issue to go to court, they dare to come out now and say that they are not part of it! They are not part of it? They are the rascals behind it! However, when they found out that they would be most affected in George Town where there were 800 Jamaican nationals on the voters list then they started back peddling and worrying even more. Mr. Speaker, I have no great amount in West Bay. West Bay did not benefit from any of this but the whole country benefited because those people have made a contribution and they have helped kick the economy into where it is going now. The Jamaicans that the PPM complains about were on the voters list before the status grants. I say again, it was one high powered member of the PPM, a lawyer, and you saw him on the front page of the Caymanian Compass with the General Secretary the night of their scandalous meeting—

The Speaker: Honourable Minister you have five minutes remaining.

Hon. W. McKeever Bush: You are not giving me much time, Mr. Speaker.

It was the General Secretary, the Chairman and that member, the three of them from the Bar Association who pushed the idea forward.

Mr. Speaker, I want to refer for a minute on the speech from the Member for North Side where she criticised Cayman Airways in a nice way by asking some dirty questions.

Significant achievements have been made by Cayman Airways in the last three years including strengthening the role the Airline plays in tourism, expanding the routes, launching reliable service to all three Islands and embarking on equipment modernisation. Cayman Airways is faithfully pursuing its mission to be the pre-eminent air service provider to and for the interest of the Islands and each year strategic planning sessions are held and a business plan produced, which details key objectives and reports on progress made. The routes selected were the result of considerable analysis and we have systematically identified, analysed and pursued a short list of short markets which showed the greatest potential. This process resulted first in the launch of Chicago and I should note that while Chicago is a developing market we anticipated this. Management has confirmed that the traffic generated in Chicago since the launch in December 2003 is meeting strategic objections and that is the same with Boston. We have analysed it and that is where a great part of the people are now coming from in the northeast US market.

I should also mention that in addition to relying on our season experts within Cayman Airways the Department of Tourism and our local private sector, when necessary, Cayman Airways has referred to external experts for a sounding board on aviation management.

In terms of the modernisation of the fleet, Cayman Airways undertook extensive analysis of the matter before selecting the 737/300 and this type of plane was selected, not based merely on the plane's technical specifications, but more importantly on how well the equipment facilitated the company's long term goals as identified in the Business Plan. A further plan was pursued to upgrade the fleet by leasing two of the aircrafts at competitive lease rates well below expectations. For the first time in a very long time the Airline has clearly defined objectives and its resources have been directed at achieving optimal results. While I wish that these positive results would yield an immediate profit for the Airline, I do take pride in knowing that these results are yielding profits for the Cayman Islands' economy and the many persons who directly or indirectly depend on tourism.

The Speaker: You have one minute remaining Honourable Minister.

Hon. W. McKeever Bush: Mr. Speaker, we are doing well and I am proud of our Management Team, the Board. I would ask the Member for North Side not to make it a political one and anytime she has to say anything about it, not to put her children or family in front of it because I know that they stay out of this issue and she should not do it.

Mr. Speaker, I have not dealt with all the things that I wanted to but I believe the Government is doing well. I think the Minister for Housing and Sports is doing an extremely good job. On housing, I wish that when I was growing up and had to sleep under a leaky roof on a plantain trash bed that I had to keep slipping—I remember this time of the year, the rainy months, how my mother used to worry about those months. I wish to God that at that time we were able to get this kind of house that Government has put forward for people who in that bracket need a house. In growing up I wished so many times for a better place. It pains my heart when people pounce on this to take it out of context. I remember when I was Minister; you could not get any construction company to build small houses—do not talk about giving it to the local contractors, when I went to them they told me they to bring in houses; they told me they could not build them and for ten years, from 1992 or 1994 to 2004 where were all of these people who could do it? They still have time to do it if they can!

Mr. Speaker, I can go in and on but I am having a public meeting Tuesday night and it will be on National Television and Radio. I will have my say on the things that affect the people of this country in a positive way, and I will deal with the Opposition's propaganda, be they from George Town, North Side, East End or from the Dream Team on the right side of the street in West Bay.

The people of West Bay have good common sense and I am not worried about elections. The people can throw me out if necessary. I am concerned about whether we are going to face Europe with the machinery to deal with it because the challenges are coming and while we are rowing about fire ants, elephants are getting ready to trample us.

I think Members of the Government have defended our position very well.

The Speaker: Honourable Members this concludes the debate on the Throne Speech. I now call on Madam Clerk.

PRESENTATION OF PAPERS AND OF REPORTS

The Education and Training Bill, 2004—Drafting Instructions

The Speaker: I call on the Honourable Minister responsible for the Ministry of Education, Human Resources and Culture.

Hon. Roy Boddén: Mr. Speaker, I beg to lay on the Table of this Honourable House the drafting instructions for the Education and Training Bill 2004.

The Speaker: So ordered. Would the Honourable Minister wish to speak thereto?

Hon. Roy Boddén: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. As Honourable Members will be aware the Educational Law 1999 (Revision) has become obsolete over time and has been overtaken by events and development.

The Education Law of the Cayman Islands must reflect the priority which the Government places on education and training of the people of the Cayman Islands. The Cayman Islands as we well recognise is a major centre of global finance and economics and our people must be adequately educated and trained to compete in the existing world market and to be prepared for the demands of competition in the future.

In 2002 I made a commitment to deliver to the country a new Education Law designed to provide the maximum educational advantage possible to students of all ages. As a former educator myself and consistent with Vision 2008 I adhere to the concept of life long learning. This proposed new legislation provides opportunities for all students to reach their maximum potential.

The proposed legislation sets out lofty goals for education in this country but it provides the means to implement them, not only through academic emphasis and changes, but through technical and vocational emphasis as well. Goals and objectives such as the establishment of a varied relevant and comprehensive education system characterised by excellence and the promotion of education of the people of the Cayman Islands, by the establishment of educational institutions for the purpose of fostering the spiritual, cultural, ethical, moral, intellectual, physical, social and economic development of the country outlines the essence of this proposed legislation. The goals are broad based and balanced, again reflective of the strategic planning of Vision 2008.

This Legislation presents many changes, some of which are summarised as follows:

1. It is incumbent on the Minister to encourage the development of basic knowledge and skills in all persons including literacy, numeracy and information technology, competency in leadership, teamwork, responding to change, problem solving, creativity, critical thinking, flexibility and decision making. Entrepreneurial skills needed to support economic development and understanding of the role of labour and business in the society and the importance of a positive and productive work ethic.

2. It makes the Minister in concert with the recommendations of the Education Council responsible for establishing strategies to develop an increasingly effective education system to achieve the goals stated above and makes him responsible for the development of a national curriculum, and for providing for its regular reviews and assessments.

3. It addresses basic curricular requirements and requires that in all schools the curriculum shall be broad based, balanced and relevant to the needs of all students. It will promote equality of access and opportunity for all students and prepare them for subsequent stages of education, training or employment and for opportunities, responsibilities and the experiences of adulthood.

4. It defines the key stages in education and provides for assessment at each stage in all schools whether public, private or assisted private schools.

5. It provides for the formal establishment of the school's inspectorate and gives the Chief Inspector responsibility for inspecting all schools, educational institutions and programmes within the remit of its independent office.

6. It creates the responsibility in the Chief Inspector to undertake research and advise the Minister through the Chief Officer on key regional and international trends, developments and research findings in education.

7. It provides for inspection of schools and other educational institutions as mentioned above, but the unique aspect of this process is that it is designed to offer support for the institutions as well as monitoring their performance. This process will offer assistance to principals and teachers in promoting effective learning and high standards of achievement by promoting effective teaching, by helping them respond appropriately to inspection findings and by promoting self assessment and planning.

8. It establishes a school's improvement unit within the Education Department, whose function is to focus on raising standards, improving teaching and learning, monitoring students' rate of progress and helping schools to address areas of underachievement or poor performance, particularly, prioritising areas of need identified through the inspection process.

9. The Education Council is given the responsibility of advising the Minister on policy relating to preschool, primary, secondary and post secondary education. The licensing of teachers, establishing priorities for the educational system development and for the disbursement of scholarships grant monies.

10. This proposal establishes in law professional responsibilities for teachers and principles and provides for disciplinary action for failure to perform the duties and responsibilities as required.

11. It provides not only for students rights to an educational programme appropriate to their needs, but also gives them responsibilities incumbent upon them under the Law. They must observe the codes of conduct established by the Ministry as well as by each school. They must attend classes regularly and punctually; they must be diligent in pursuing the curriculum set out for them and must observe the stated standards of deportment. This proposal gives students the right to be treated fairly and with dignity and the right to be freed from discrimination of any type.

12. The proposal abolishes corporal punishment in schools.

13. It provides for the discipline of students through a clearly defined system of suspension for a limited period of time and for the exclusion of students whose actions are so unacceptable that it would be unreasonable and or unsafe to allow them to remain in the school. Alternative education programmes are provided for in this proposed Law to accommodate those students of compulsory school age needing an environment outside the traditional school setting. This proposal provides for a system of appeals for those wishing to challenge suspensions or exclusions.

14. It provides for the rights and responsibilities of the parents. It specifically makes parents responsible for the attendance and punctuality of their children. The proposal also makes parents responsible for the torts of their children causing injury to others. Parents are specifically given the right to have a voice in their children's education and to participate in classrooms when it is convenient with the teacher and principal, and when not disruptive of the education process.

15. The proposal requires that Parent Teacher Associations or Home School Associations be established in all private, public and assisted private schools and makes it incumbent on principles to establish these where they do not exist.

16. It provides for early childhood education services suitable to the needs of children three to five years of age. It provides for the inspection of these institutions and requires that they follow a curriculum prescribed by the Education Department and requires that they be insured for any loss whether personal or property. It also provides for the appointment by the Minister of a council on early childhood education services. It provides also for the option of home schooling for parents not wishing to send their children to school in a regular setting. It places conditions on the provision of this option and requires that an educational plan be submitted which is based on an approved curriculum.

For children in junior high and upwards a licensed and certified teacher must be used for the home school option. Termination of this programme on an individual basis is provided for if the student is not meeting the standards achieved by students in public schools. It establishes a national training board to advise the Minister on policy relating to technical and vocational education and training in accordance with national policies and economic needs; the implementation of standards for technical and vocational education and training; training priorities, qualifications and accreditations, testing, safety and welfare, scholarships and grants, assessing training providers and work based initiatives and a national strategy for technical and vocational education. This proposal also establishes an education appeals tribunal for the settling of any disputes related to education. The tribunal will consider in determining the outcome of an appeal the educational interest of the student who is the subject of the appeal as well as the impact of the decision of the class or school as the case may be. A decision of the Appeals Tribunal will be final and binding and filed with the Clerk of Courts.

An important aspect of the miscellaneous section is the strong prohibition against the sale, use, distribution or possession of any illegal substance or paraphernalia on or around the premises of a school. The penalty is a $10,000 fine and up to 1 year in prison upon conviction.

The proposed legislation is comprehensive and most importantly, it is implemental. It is a giant step towards academic and training excellence for all people of the Cayman Islands. In keeping with the Ministry's pledge for consultation on new legislation these drafting instructions has been compiled with the assistance of the Education Council.

I should like to thank the Members of Council and the Secretary for their dedicated work which will give us a modern Education Law. I should especially like to thank Mrs. Patricia Slocum who has again acted as our bills officer to accomplish the research and the wording of these drafting instructions.

The drafting instructions will now be circulated to the public and in particular, the education sector for comments for a period of four weeks after which the green bill will be prepared for the September Meeting of this Honourable House.

Mr. Speaker, I commend these drafting instructions to this Honourable House and to members of the public and look forward to receiving constructive criticism although, I know that in this year of election there shall be no shortage of those people who believe they have answers and who are puffed up by that quality which that modern Tory Alexander Pope described as 'a little learning'. Thank you.

The Speaker: Honourable Members, I propose to take a fifteen minute afternoon break. I would ask you all to reassemble promptly at 4 o'clock.

Proceedings suspended at 3.46 pm

Proceedings resumed at 4.52 pm

The Speaker: Please be seated. Proceedings are resumed.

I will call on the Honourable Leader of Government Business to suspend Standing Order 10(2) so that the business of the House may proceed beyond the hour of 4.30 pm.

Suspension of Standing Order 10(2)

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I so move the suspension of Standing Order 10(2) to conduct business after 4.30 pm.

The Speaker: The question is that Standing Order 10(2) be suspended in order that business may continue beyond the hour of 4.30 pm. All those in favour please say Aye. Those against, No.

Ayes.

Agreed. Standing Order 10(2) suspended in order for business to be conducted beyond the hour of 4.30 pm.

The Speaker: The Honourable Leader of Government Business.

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: Mr. Speaker, in accordance with Standing Order 86 I wish to move the suspension of Standing Order 24(5) in order to bring a motion as a matter of urgency.

The Speaker: So ordered. The question is that Standing Order 24(5) be suspended. In accordance with Standing Order 86. All those in favour please say Aye. Those against, No.

Ayes.

Agreed. Standing Order 24(5) suspended in order for Government Motion No. 2/04 to be brought before the House.

GOVERNMENT BUSINESS

MOTIONS

GOVERNMENT MOTION NO. 2/04

Amendment to Section 18(2) of the Cayman Islands Constitution Order 1972

The Speaker: Honourable Leader of Government Business.

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I move Government Motion 2/04 which stands in my name and it reads –

“WHEREAS, the effect of the British Overseas Territories Act 2002 is among other things, to automatically confer British Citizenship on certain categories of persons, including those of the Cayman Islands, who were British Overseas Territories Citizens prior to the commencement of that Act;

“AND WHEREAS as a result thereof the provisions of the Cayman Islands (Constitution) Order 1972 require amendment to ensure that persons who qualified for elected membership to the Cayman Islands Legislative Assembly prior to the coming into effect of the British Overseas Territories Act 2002 continue to so qualify;

“AND FOLLOWING correspondence between the Attorney General of the Cayman Islands and the Deputy Legal Advisor of the Foreign and Commonwealth Office in London, UK;

“BE IT THEREFORE RESOLVED that this Honourable House recommends to Her Majesty’s Government that section 18 of the Cayman Islands Constitution Order 1972 be amended by adding at the end of subsection (2) thereof the following sentence:

‘In this subsection the words “other citizenship” do not include British Citizenship acquired by virtue of the British Overseas Territories Act 2002.’”

The Speaker: The question is: BE IT THEREFORE RESOLVED that this Honourable House recommends to Her Majesty’s Government that section 18 of the Cayman Islands Constitution Order 1972 be amended by adding at the end of subsection 2 thereof the following sentence: “In this subsection the words ‘other citizenship’ do not include British Citizenship acquired by virtue of the British Overseas Territories Act 2002.”

The Motion is now open for debate. Would the Honourable Leader of Government Business wish to speak thereto?

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: In being very brief just to say, this morning that the late start of the House was due to an urgent Cabinet Meeting and a matter to do with British Citizenship and the Cayman Islands Constitution.

This Motion is now aimed at getting the consensus of this Honourable House to recommend to the United Kingdom Government that the language of the Constitution be amended to ensure that all those who were qualified to be elected prior to the 2002 British Overseas Territories Act continues to be eligible.

The Speaker: Does any other Member wish to speak?

The Honourable Leader of the Opposition.

Hon. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

In reflecting on the Government Motion I had to smile to myself to think that it was entirely possible that the status quo remained with the Constitution that none of us here might have been eligible for election in November of 2004.

Just to say that the amendment to section 18(2) certainly is an order and the Government has said what the intention of it is. The Opposition has certainly reached consensus with regards to the proposed amendments and certainly we trust that London will speedily see the matter through to its end.

Thank you.

The Speaker: Does any other Member wish to speak? Does any other Member wish to speak? Does any other Member wish to speak? If not would the Honourable Leader of Government Business wish to exercise his right of reply?

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: Mr. Speaker, I think that this matter has the full support of all Members and therefore I do not have anything to offer other than what was said.

The Speaker: The Question is: BE IT THEREFORE RESOLVED that this Honourable House recommends to Her Majesty's Government that section 18 of the Cayman Islands Constitution Order 1972 be amended by adding at the end of subsection (2) thereof the following sentence:

"In this subsection the words 'other citizenship' do not include British Citizenship acquired by virtue of the British Overseas Territories Act 2002."

All those in favour please say Aye. Those against, No.

Ayes.

Agreed: That this Honourable House recommends to Her Majesty's Government that section 18 of the Cayman Islands Constitution Order 1972 be amended by adding at the end of subsection (2) thereof the following sentence: "In this subsection the words 'other citizenship' do not include British Citizenship acquired by virtue of the British Overseas Territories Act 2002."

Government Motion No. 2/04 passed unanimously.

ADJOURNMENT

The Speaker: I would now call on the Honourable Leader of Government Business for the adjournment but before doing so, I would just remind Honourable Members that the Financial Secretary has asked that you attend a meeting here at 9 am on Monday, 19 July for discussion on pension matters.

Honourable Leader of Government Business.

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

We are going to propose that the House meet at 11 am in order to conduct the briefing that we proposed to do from 9 am on Monday.

Before I move the adjournment I would like to say to Members that we intend to work late this coming week in order to complete business before us; several Bills, various Papers and some Private Members' Motions, all business before the House to be completed. We would not work past 10 pm but perhaps up until 10 that night.

I move the adjournment of this Honourable House until 11 am Monday, 19 July 2004.

The Speaker: The question is that this House do now adjourn until 11 am on Monday, 19 July 2004. All those in favour please say Aye. Those against, No.

Ayes.

At 5.00 pm the House stood adjourned until 11 am Monday, 19 July 2004.

OFFICIAL HANSARD REPORT
MONDAY
19 JULY 2004
11:30 AM
Eighth Sitting

The Speaker: I invite the Third Elected Member for Bodden Town to lead us in prayers.

apologies for late arrival from the Second Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman.

PRAYERS

Mr. Anthony S. Eden: Let us pray.

Almighty God, from whom all wisdom and power are derived: We beseech Thee so to direct and prosper the deliberations of the Legislative Assembly now assembled, that all things may be ordered upon the best and surest foundations for the glory of Thy Name and for the safety, honour and welfare of the people of these Islands.

Bless our Sovereign Lady, Queen Elizabeth II; Philip, Duke of Edinburgh; Charles, Prince of Wales; and all the Royal Family. Give grace to all who exercise authority in our Commonwealth, that peace and happiness, truth and justice, religion and piety may be established among us. Especially we pray for the Governor of our Islands, the Speaker of the Legislative Assembly, Official Members and Ministers of Cabinet and Members of the Legislative Assembly, that we may be enabled faithfully to perform the responsible duties of our high office. All this we ask for Thy great Name's sake.

Let us say The Lord's Prayer together: Our Father, who art in Heaven, Hallowed be Thy Name. Thy Kingdom come, Thy will be done on earth as it is in Heaven. Give us this day our daily bread, and forgive us our trespasses, as we forgive those who trespass against us. Lead us not into temptation, but deliver us from evil. For Thine is the Kingdom, the power and the glory, forever and ever. Amen.

The Lord bless us and keep us. The Lord make His face shine upon us and be gracious unto us. The Lord lift up the light of His countenance upon us and give us peace, now and always. Amen.

Proceedings resumed at 11.32 am

The Speaker: Please be seated. Proceedings are resumed.

READING BY THE HONOURABLE
SPEAKER OF MESSAGES
AND ANNOUNCEMENTS

Apologies

The Speaker: Honourable Members, I have received apologies for absence from the Honourable Minister for Education, Human Resources, and Culture; and

PRESENTATION OF PAPERS AND OF REPORTS

The Water Authority of the Cayman Islands Annual Report 1999 - 2000

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister of Community Services, Youth, Sports and Gender Affairs.

Dr. the Hon. Frank S. McField: Mr. Speaker, Honourable Members of the Legislative Assembly, I am pleased to lay on the Table of this Honourable House the Water Authority's Annual Report for the years 1999 and 2000. Both years were successful for the Water Authority as the Company further expanded its services and addressed the water and sanitation needs of the Cayman Islands.

Mr. Speaker, Honourable Members of the House, on behalf of the Water Authority, I acknowledge that there has been some delay in the laying on the Table of this Honourable House of the Annual Reports for 1999 and 2000. The Authority accepts responsibility for this delay that was due to a number of unavoidable reasons including the implementation of a new billing system and the delay in completing the 1999 audit until 2001. However, Mr. Speaker, I am pleased to report the Authority expects to be up to date with all the remaining reports during the September sitting of this Honourable House.

The Speaker: Honourable Minister, I take it that you have laid the paper on the Table of the House and it is so ordered.

Please continue.

Dr. the Hon. Frank S. McField: Mr. Speaker, during the years 1999 and 2000 the Authority continued to grow and meet the challenges of the rapid development of these Islands with regards to water and wastewater infrastructure and services.

I am pleased to say that the water and wastewater services provided to the people of these Islands may be compared favourably with that found in the industrialized world. Of that, we can all be justly proud. Access for all to a wholesome supply of water and proper treatment and disposal of wastewater is a vital investment in our Public Health as well as our environment.

The Authority continues to provide good and affordable service to its customers and to generate capital for expansion of services in the outer districts and Sister Islands.

Mr. Speaker, I will now give a brief overview of the accomplishments and activities for each year. The Year 1999 brought all into the area of Y2K compliance and the Water Authority was no exception. One of the challenges for the Authority in the year was the upgrade of the accounting and billing software to Y2K compliant systems. This was a complicated process and was carried out successfully. In terms of 1999 financial performance, I am pleased to report that the Authority maintains a positive financial position with growth operating profits increasing by 15 per cent although the net profit remains about the same as 1998 – namely CI$3.2 million and CI$3.6 million. Reflecting the higher administrative expenses relating partly to additional staff they needed to cope with the growing numbers of customers as well as increase in utilities, legal fees, and depreciation expenses.

Other activities of the Water Authority in 1999 included the expansion of the water supply system from Frank Sound up to the Blow Holes in East End. To meet the needs of the rapidly increasing demand for water supply infrastructure, the Authority increased water production capacity in Grand Cayman and installed additional storage capacity in Grand Cayman and Cayman Brac. In addition, the Authority continued its search for suitable property in North Side where water production and a storage facility would be located. Preparing for the long-term, the Authority was fortunate in 1999 to purchase 7.5 acres of land adjacent to the Red Bay Water Works for future expansion of the public water supply system in Grand Cayman at a cost of CI$1,750,000.

In reference to wastewater, the existing wastewater treatment facility in Grand Cayman reached the end of its useful life earlier than expected in the original 1986 design. From 1998 plans were in motion to replace the plant with a more resilient and expandable plant that would be capable of meeting the expected wastewater flows in Grand Cayman for more than 15 years. In 1999, the Authority continued working on the engineering design and on obtaining financing for the multi-million dollar project. The Authority continued in 1999 to support training opportunities to staff as the Authority recognises its employees as its greatest asset. I am pleased, Mr. Speaker, to report that in 1999 the Authority continue to carry out its statutory function with regards to ground-water protection.

In the year 2000, again the Water Authority experienced a substantial growth in demand for public water supply – an increase of about 16 per cent over 1999. The Authority was continually challenged to ensure it could keep pace with the water and waste water infrastructure required to meet the Islands' needs. Also, in the year 2000 the Water Authority maintained a positive financial position. Operating revenue and overall revenue increased by 13 per cent from 1999. However, with the acceleration of depreciation of the sewerage treatment works, operating expenses increased. Net profits decreased by four per cent from 1999 reflecting the higher expenses.

The Authority received approval to enter into the US$12.8 million loan with the then CIBC Bank & Trust Company (Cayman) Limited for financing of the Grand Cayman Wastewater Treatment Works Project. The Agreement was signed in December 2000.

Mr. Speaker, also of significance this year, 2000, is that the Authority after several years of discussion with the Government was able to reach an agreement on the matter of contribution to Government revenue. The Executive Council and the Authority's Board have approved the formula that sets out the amount the Authority would be required to contribute, because this will impact the availability of retained earnings for capital projects, the Authority and Government have entered into discussion on a set amount of contributions for the next two years. The Water Authority and the Cayman Islands Government agreed that the Authority pay a dividend of $150,000 per year.

Following successful negotiations with Ocean Conversion Cayman Limited on the terms of the water production license for the Red Bay Reverse Osmosis Plant, the Authority was able to secure a saving of up to $800,000 per year on water purchased that was effective 1 December, 2001 after refurbishing of the Plant.

Another significant development was the completion of the master plan for the Red Bay Gate site to include the additional 7.5 acres of adjacent property purchased in 1999. The investment in this property was timely and allows the Authority to plan water production and storage facilities for the long term. Mr. Speaker, in terms of the installation of water infrastructure, the Authority made good progress with the East End Extension Project from the Blow Holes into the middle of the District. The Authority continued to review its options for a facility in North Side/Frank Sound area. The Authority continued to develop its operations in Cayman Brac with a construction plant for storage building and a successful completion of repairs on the 500,000 U.S. Gallon Reservoir.

In October 2000, the Authority underwent a change in top-management when previous Director resigned to take up a position with Consolidated Water Company. The Board was very pleased to promote the Deputy Director, Dr. Gelia Fredrick Van Genderen to Director.

I am pleased to report, Mr. Speaker, that the Authority continued to invest significantly in training and development of personnel and continued to support various sports and activities related to young people as well as other charitable organisations within the local community.

The Authority continued to carry out its statutory functions with regard to protection of ground-water resources through monitoring of quarry operations ground water abstraction, ground water pollution incidents, development control and effluent disposal.

Mr. Speaker and Honourable Members of the Legislative Assembly, I look forward to the continued success of the Water Authority. It is important to recognise that a public utility, and in fact, any organisation which serves the people, must never become complacent and should endeavour to meet the challenges of the future with planning and preparation. The Report before the House, Mr. Speaker, demonstrates the considerable achievement of the Water Authority as it keeps pace with the needs of our Islands. I would like to thank all of my colleagues in the Cabinet and Legislative Assembly for their continued support.

Thank you.

Personnel Department Employment Information and Personnel Activity Report

The Speaker: The Honourable Temporary First Official Member Responsible for Internal and External Affairs.

Hon. Donovan W. F. Ebanks: Mr. Speaker, I beg to lay on the Table of this Honourable House the Personnel Department Employment Information and Personnel Activity Report for 2003.

The Speaker: So ordered.

Would the Honourable Member wish to speak thereto?

Hon. Donovan W. F. Ebanks: Mr. Speaker, just to say that the Report contains a wide assortment of statistical information on the activities, the human resource aspect of the Public Service engagements, promotions, terminations, whatever. It has been developed to a large extent as a proactive response to the curiosity of Members and the public as to what goes on within the Public Service. I trust Members will find it useful. It requires the background to consider in matters that come to their attention in relation to the Public Service.

Thank you.

The 2003 Annual Report of the Central Planning Authority and Development Control Board

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for Planning, Communications, District Administration and Information Technology.

Hon. Juliana Y. O'Connor-Connolly: Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

Mr. Speaker, I beg to lay on the Honourable Table of this House the Annual Report for the Planning Authority for the Development Control Board (DCB) as well as the Central Planning Authority (CPA).

The Speaker: So ordered.

Would the Honourable Minister wish to speak thereto?

Hon. Juliana Y. O'Connor-Connolly: Yes, thank you, Mr. Speaker.

Mr. Speaker, as you would well know, having been the former Minister responsible for this Ministry for a number of years, Section 50 of the Development and Planning Law (2003 Revision) requires that the Authority submit a report to the Governor in Cabinet for the information of the Honourable Legislative Assembly containing and account of activities during the past 12 months ending on 31 December of the previous year.

Highlights of the 2003 Annual Report include reference to the very positive increases in development activity, proposed revisions to the Development Plan 1997, the Sister Islands ad-hoc Committee for Sustainable Development, and work with the telecom providers on infrastructure sharing. Government is extremely proud and pleased with the economy, and this is certainly borne out in the Planning Statistics for 2003. There was a significant overall boost in development with increases in 2002, levels of 19 per cent in planning approvals; 13 per cent in value of projects; 44 per cent in building permits; and 37 per cent in certificates of occupancy.

The review of the Development Plan for 1997, Mr. Speaker, was also a primary focus on the Central Planning Authority in 2003 and the proposed amendments were sent to the Development Plan Tribunal in April 2003. The Tribunal subsequently released its findings and the Central Planning Authority carefully considered the recommendations. The final proposed amendments were then forwarded to the Ministry in the first quarter of 2004, and it is hoped that they will be brought to this sitting, June 2004 Meeting of the Legislative Assembly.

As Honourable Members will be aware, the Development and Planning Law mandates that a Report of Survey be conducted every five years. Government also established the Sister Islands' ad hoc Committee for Sustainable Development and this Committee was chaired by the Chairman of the Development Control Board with the Director of Planning as Secretary. The Committee's Brac Report 2003 – 2007 was accepted by Government and tabled by the Legislative Assembly in June 2003 by your good self. The Report is now available to the public on the Planning Department's website. Mr. Speaker, I also ask that Honourable Ministers and Members note that the Ministry of Planning, Communication, District Administration and Information Technology has now established the Steering Committee to move forward on the implementation of the recommendations in the said Brac Report 2003 – 2007. This Committee is now chaired by our District Commissioner and meetings have commenced. Both the CPA and the DCB has spent a considerable amount of time on cellular phone tower applications where staff and other agencies worked with applicants, both the incumbent provider as well as new entrants, to encourage infrastructure sharing between providers in order to prevent the proliferation of towers. In short, 2003 was a very successful year, both for the CPA and the DCB.

Mr. Speaker, I would like to take this opportunity to sincerely thank you, as the previous Minister responsible for Planning, as well as the Members of the CPA, DCB, and the support staff from the Department of Planning for the hard work and dedication. I now look forward to continuing to build on the positive foundation and performances of 2003.

I thank you, Sir.

The Report & Recommendation of the Minister responsible for Lands on the Vesting of Crown Land, Block 4E, Parcel 201, to the Church of God Chapel, Town Hall Road, West Bay

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for Planning, Communications, District Administration and Information Technology.

Hon. Juliana Y. O'Connor-Connolly: Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

Mr. Speaker, I seek permission to lay on the Table of this Honourable House one Report on Crown Property that has been prepared in accordance with the requirements of the Governor (Vesting of Lands) (Cap. 1) Law (1998 Revision).

The Speaker: So ordered.

Would the Honourable Minister wish to speak thereto?

Hon. Juliana Y. O'Connor-Connolly: Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

Mr. Speaker, I can confirm that as required by the said Law, the details of this land matter has been published in the Cayman Islands Gazette Issue Extraordinary No. 6 of 2004, dated 9th February, and a local newspaper – namely, The Caymanian Compass on the 10th February, 2004. Also, as required by Law, three evaluations have been carried out on the subject property. Each valuation report forms part of the Overall Report and provides a general indication of the value of the property that Government now proposes to vest.

The Report deals with the vesting of Block 4E, Parcel 201 to the Church of God Chapel, Town Hall Road, West Bay. This property is located on the Town Hall Road, as I said, in West Bay, south of the Church. The parcel is approximately quarter of an acre in size, and due to its small size and the fact that the land does not adjoin any other Crown Property, Government has decided to vest the property to the Church. The Church plans to use the land for additional parking. To this end, the Governor in Cabinet has agreed to dispose of Block 4E, Parcel 201 to Church of God Chapel, Town Hall Road, West Bay. A report on this matter was duly considered by the Governor in Cabinet, and after careful analysis and consideration of the Reports provided by the Director of Lands & Survey, the Governor in Cabinet determined that it should dispose of the Property to the Church of God Chapel, Town Hall Road, West Bay for a peppercorn.

Mr. Speaker, I ask permission to now get the Sergeant to accept it for the laying on The Honourable House Table.

The Speaker: So ordered.

The Royal Cayman Islands Police Service Annual Report 2002

The Speaker: The Honourable Temporary First Official Member responsible for Internal and External Affairs.

Hon. Donovan W. F. Ebanks: Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

Mr. Speaker, I beg to lay on the Table of this Honourable House the Royal Cayman Islands Police Annual Report for 2002.

The Speaker: So ordered.

Would the Honourable Member wish to speak thereto?

Hon. Donovan W. F. Ebanks: Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

Mr. Speaker, only to offer some apologies on behalf of the Royal Cayman Islands Police who are regretful for the delay in this Report, and have assured us that the 2003 Report is well on the way and will be presented to this Honourable House in a little more timely manner.

Nevertheless, I trust that Members and the public will find the public will find the Report useful. It does provide substantial information – over 100 pages of information – on the activities, the diversity, and various statistics related to the activities of the RCIP. I recommend it to Members for their perusal and hopefully their edification.

Annual Economic Report 2003

The Speaker: The Honourable Third Official Member responsible for Finance and Economics.

Hon. George A. McCarthy: Mr. Speaker, I beg to present to this Honourable House the Annual Economic Report 2003.

The Speaker: So ordered.

Would the Honourable Member wish to speak thereto?

Hon. George A. McCarthy: Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

Mr. Speaker, this Annual Report highlights the Country's overall economic performance across various sectors. The year 2003, reaffirmed a solid turnaround of the Cayman Islands Economy and signals that the country is well positioned for continued economic health and vitality.

Turning now to some highlights on World economy. The global economy grew modestly from three per cent in 2002 to 3.9 per cent in 2003 with most regions experiencing accelerated growth. The main impetus for this improvement was a continued expansion in consumer spending and a recovery in the business spending, particularly in the second half of 2003. During this period, most Governments adopted supportive fiscal and monetary policies to strengthen their economies. The U.S. Economy grew by 3.1 per cent in 2003, up 2.2 per cent in 2002. Consumer spending remained strong last year fuelled by federal income tax cuts, mortgage financing, and home equity lines of credit.

The labour market showed some weakness however, the United States unemployment rate increased from 5.8 per cent in 2002 to 6 per cent in 2003. The United States dollar fell against major currencies for the second year in a row. This appreciation resulted from a low U.S. interest rates and a growing current account deficit. Another concern in some quarters was the growing federal deficit, particularly in light of tax cuts that the Bush Administration wants to make permanent. The United Kingdom's economy showed greater resilience than other Western European Countries.

Gross Domestic Product went from 1.7 per cent in 2002 to 2.3 per cent in 2003. Economic Growth in the Euro area, as a whole however, slowed from 0.9 per cent in 2002 to 0.4 per cent in 2003. A turnaround in the business investment and export to the United States and China led to a 2.7 per cent expansion in the Japanese economy. While this was a significant improvement over the 0.3 per cent contraction experience in 2002, there are fundamental structural problems still plaguing the World's second largest economy. Developing Asian economies continued to show strength in 2003. China's growth, driven mainly by inward investments, accelerated from 8 per cent in 2002 to 9.1 per cent in 2003. Strong demand from China for raw materials has impacted positively on resource-rich countries. The Indian economy also accelerated from 4.7 per cent in 2002 to 7.4 per cent in 2003, benefiting from the outsourcing of services from the United States and other countries.

Closer to home—Latin America and the Caribbean grew by 1.5 per cent in 2003, reversing the decline of 0.4 per cent experienced in 2002. The rebound in Tourism, particularly in the English-speaking countries led to an expansion in the Caribbean Economies in 2003. Strong prices and higher volumes also benefited commodity-exporting countries.

I now turn to the Domestic Economy. Mr. Speaker, the Cayman Islands, in 2003, experienced high growth, lower unemployment, and a lower inflation compared to 2002. It was a solid economic performance for our Country. Real Gross Domestic Product Growth for a consecutive year accelerated from 1.7 per cent in 2002 to 2 per cent in 2003. This upward trend mirrored the performance of the Global Economy. Gradual improvement in the Caymanian Economy was reflected in the buoyant activity in local construction industry, higher imports and increases in Government revenue.

Consumer inflation increased by 0.6 per cent in 2003 compared to 2.4 per cent in the previous year. The inflation rate was influenced by price increases for medical services, household equipment, food, and education. These increases were offset by declines in other areas, namely – housing, clothing, and personal goods and services. Another positive indicator of the continued improvement in our economy was a reduction in the unemployment rate. The December 2003 labour-force survey results placed the unemployment rate at 3.6 per cent, a tremendous reduction from 7.5 per cent unemployment in 2001. I will now provide an overview, Mr. Speaker, of the performance of key economic sectors of our country. The financial services sector recorded positive results in most areas in 2003. Growth was seen in Mutual Fund registrations, Insurance Company registrations, Insurance Premiums, Stock Exchange Listings, Stock Market Capitalization, and New Company Registrations.

One notable exception was the decline in the number of Banks and Trust Licenses, which fell by thirty four. This reduction was owed to consolidations within the Banking Industry and the cost implications of establishing physical presence, as required by law.

I am pleased to report that despite challenges posed by international initiatives, the Cayman Islands remained the jurisdiction of choice for investment and retained its position as one of the World's leading Financial Centre in 2003. External assets of banks in the Cayman Islands stood at US$1.06 trillion in December, 2003; up by $43.7 billion from December, 2002 position. The total number of insurance licences increased by 672 in 2003; this was primarily due to a rise in the number of Class B Captive Licenses. Class B Captive Licenses increased by 44 to 644 in 2003. Medical malpractice lawsuits in the United States continue to be the driving force behind the growth in Captives followed by Workers Compensation. Total premiums for Captives grew by US$700 million in 2003 to US$4.9 billion.

Mutual funds are another Cayman success story. With a significant percentage of the World's Hedge Funds registered in the Cayman Islands we remain the leader in this segment of the Global Financial Market in 2003. Fund registrations increased by 523 or 12.2 per cent to 4,808 in 2003. The Cayman Islands Stock Exchange Listings grew by 735 in 2003, an increase of 25 from the previous year. Between 2002 and 2003, market capitalization rose by a healthy 20.9 percent to US$43.9 billion.

Total Company Registrations increased to 68,078 in 2003 or by 2,819. New Company Registration rose for the first time in three years. The continued strengthening of the Global Economy had a positive impact on registration.

Ship Registrations totalled 1,473 in 2003 with gross tonnage amounting to 3.2 million. The number of new registrations in 2003 amounted to 186 including 152 pleasure yachts.

Over two million tourists visited the Cayman Islands during 2003. This figure represented an increase of 12.5 per cent over 2002. Cruise ship visitors increased by 15.5 per cent to 1.8 million, while air arrivals declined by 3 per cent to 293,000. It is important to note that the declining trend in the air arrivals started to reverse in the latter part of 2003 and the Cayman Islands registered a positive growth of 4.9 per cent in the last quarter of 2003 compared to the last quarter of 2002.

Real estate also performed well in 2003. The value of properties transferred grew by 19 per cent to $326 million in 2003. Investment in real estate was stimulated by historically low interest rates and the Government Stamp Duty concessions.

The Construction Industry benefited from strong housing demand and tourist related investments. Planning Approvals rose from $243.9 million in 2002 to $273.9 million in 2003. However, given the substantial progress on several large projects, building permits fell by 26.9 per cent to $177.6 million.

Utility consumption grew in 2003. Water consumption increased by 15.6 per cent from 1,164.7 million gallons in 2002 to 1,198,000 gallons in 2003. Total electricity usage rose by 4.4 per cent, moving to 444.3 million mega watts in 2003. Migration to greater use of the internet resulted in a 3.4 per cent decline in telephone/fax paid minutes.

Mr. Speaker, I would now also like to acknowledge that 2003 was a milestone for telecommunications in the Cayman Islands with the start of the liberalisation of the Telecommunications Industry. I think, Mr. Speaker, you will be quite pleased to hear that fact being reported given your involvement in the process.

Economic Report and Economic Outlook: Mr. Speaker, since 2001, there has been a steady improvement in economic conditions. Global growth is projected to accelerate from 3.2 per cent in 2003 to 4.1 per cent in 2004. Real growth in the United States is projected at 3.9 per cent in 2004, up from 3.1 per cent in 2003. The Cayman Islands will benefit from continued strengthening of the United States Economy in the form of inward investments and visitor spending. Real Growth for the Cayman Islands is projected at 2.8 per cent in 2004, up from 2 per cent in 2003. Unemployment is expected to hold steady at 3.6 per cent in 2004. Inflation is projected at 2 per cent up from a low of 0.6 per cent in 2003. As we know, the outlook for tourism, both cruise and stay-over visitors is strong growth in 2004. The construction industry also continues to fuel the economy as is evident throughout the country. Investments in telecommunications are significant this year. All in all, Mr. Speaker, it is shaping up to be another year of strong economic performance; that is, the year 2004.

Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker.

QUESTIONS TO HONOURABLE MINISTRES AND MEMBERS OF THE CABINET

Mr. Speaker: I would, at this point call on the Honourable Leader of Government Business to move the Suspension of Standing Order 23(7) and (8) to allow question time to be taken beyond the hour of 11 a.m.

Hon. W. McKeever Bush: Thank you, Mr. Speaker.
I move the suspension of Standing Order 23(7) and (8) in order to take questions after 11 a.m.

Mr. Speaker: The question is that Standing Orders 23(7) and (8) be suspended to allow Question Time to be taken beyond the hour of 11 am. All those in favour, please say Aye. Those against, No.

Ayes.

Agreed. Standing Order 23(7) and (8) suspended to allow Question Time to continue beyond 11.00 am.

Question No. 1

Mr. Speaker: The Second Elected Member for George Town.

No. 1: Mr. Alden M. McLaughlin, Jr. asked the Honourable Minister responsible for the Ministry of Tourism, Environment, Development, and Commerce to explain the nature of Government's involvement in the development of a port facility in the Half Moon Bay, High Rock area of East End, stating specifically whether it is intended to construct the facility on Government-owned land.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for the Ministry of Tourism, Environment, Development, and Commerce, and Honourable Leader of Government Business.

Hon. W. McKeever Bush: The East End Port Project is still in the discussion stages.

The Speaker: Are there any supplementaries?
The Second Elected Member for George Town.

Supplementaries

Mr. Alden M. McLaughlin, Jr.: Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

That I could not describe as being the most forthcoming of answers. Mr. Speaker, I wonder if the Honourable Minister could give us some enlightenment about the nature of the discussions: What are the likely properties on which this is going to be developed, if it is going to be developed? He has in the past made far more fulsome statements about Government's intentions in this regard and I believe the country as a whole would benefit from some further edification, particularly at this stage of his term of office, Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: Honourable Leader of Government Business.

Hon. W. McKeever Bush: Mr. Speaker, the Member is right. I have already given a tremendous amount of information, which is already public knowledge under the Standing Orders. Just to say, Mr. Speaker, there are significant considerations yet to be decided and, therefore, at this point, I cannot give anymore information than what I have already said publicly.

The Speaker: The Second Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. Alden M. McLaughlin, Jr.: Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

Mr. Speaker, there has been much talk around about the excavation of some 90 acres of land, which, as it has been described to me, sits over one of the principal water lenses in the Island behind the area known as High Rock. Therefore, from this excavation a significant amount of fill is to be used for purposes not connected necessarily with the Port Facility, which is being proposed, and there is to be a development of a huge lake, sub-division and all of those various things. It is to those specific aspects that I would ask the Honourable Minister to turn his attention to and provide us with some sort of response.

The Speaker: The Honourable Leader of Government Business.

Hon. W. McKeever Bush: Mr. Speaker, the Member is right; there is much talk. I am awaiting further information. I know earlier – months back when we gave a tremendous amount of information on this, in this house and otherwise, there were no plans for the proposal to reach anywhere near the freshwater lenses. So, Mr. Speaker, I cannot tell the Member anymore than what I have already said publicly. When I get full information I am going to make full disclosure at that time, but presently, I cannot say anymore than what has already been gleaned publicly.

The Speaker: I will allow one more supplementary.

Mr. V. Arden McLean: Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

I know the Minister says that at this stage he is still at the discussion stages but I wonder if the Minister can tell us and the country, with whom is the Government in discussions with to build this proposed dock in East End.

The Speaker: The Honourable Leader of Government Business.

Hon. W. McKeever Bush: Mr. Speaker, in keeping with the Standing Orders, that Member himself was on a public platform discussing who owned the property or who had purchased the property. So, Mr. Speaker, it would be whom we would have to have the discussion with if the project goes ahead; if we support the project once the owner of the property gets going. That is already public information made known by the present Member from East End.

The Speaker: This is the last supplementary.
The Elected Member for East End.

Mr. V. Arden McLean: Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

I do not know where the Minister is getting his information from, but it is my understanding from the papers that the ownership of that property has changed to that of Joe Imparato. Now, if that is what he is referring to, fine. However, can the Minister say if Joey O'Brien is a part of that discussion also?

The Speaker: The Honourable Leader of Government Business.

Hon. W. McKeever Bush: I do not even think I know the man, but I do .....

Hon. W. McKeever Bush: Well if I do know him then that is something new to me. They are saying I know him and maybe it is someone that I do know, but I certainly do not know who they are talking about. I have heard the name, but we are having no discussions with such persons; no discussions!

Mr. Speaker, if the Member knows something, then he should get up and say so because I do not know. I know that the current owner is talking to us regarding the project and I have given tremendous amount of information in regards to the project. We have not gotten any further, Mr. Speaker, therefore I cannot give anymore information, but if he knows something, then he needs to say so. Maybe there is something that I should know that I do not know.

Question No. 2

The Speaker: The Second Elected Member for George Town.

No. 2: Mr. Alden M. McLaughlin, Jr. asked the Honourable Minister responsible for the Ministry of Tourism, Environment, Development, and Commerce to explain the process by which the contract for The Royal Watler Port Project has been awarded.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Tourism, Environment, Development, and Commerce and Honourable Leader of Government Business.

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: The project was tendered by the Project Manager, the Burns Connolly Group, to six local contractors as a Design/Build Project. That means the design and the construction would be completed by the contractor. The Design/Build contract was recommended as the fastest process for delivering the project and most similar marine works around the World are carried out using this type of contract.

The following local contractors were requested to tender and all received tender documents: Arch & Godfrey (Cayman) Ltd.; Hadsphaltic, Ltd.; Hurlstone, Ltd.; K-Coast Ltd.; McAlpine (Cayman), Ltd.; and UBC, Ltd.

Shortly after the tender issue, Hadsphaltic informed the Project Manager that it was withdrawing from the tender proceedings and documents were returned. Additionally, Arch & Godfrey and McAlpine requested to tender jointly as one team; this was allowed by the Project Manager. The tenders were ultimately received and the remaining contractors had all selected to joint venture the marine works with overseas companies with the relevant technical expertise. Thus, the final bids were received from the following four groups:

1. Arch & Godfrey/McAlpine;
2. Hurlstone/Misener Marine of Florida;
3. K-Coast and a company out of Florida;
4. UBC and a company out of Trinidad.

The tenders were opened and recorded in the presence of Port Authority management. The tenders were reviewed by a select Technical Committee of the Port Authority Board and the Project Manager.

It was clear from the initial submissions that the quality, and in some cases, quantities proposed in the tender submission, was significantly different from contractor to contractor. Additionally, the methodology of each contractor was different, some even disrupting the operation of the Port Authority on its day-to-day operation.

The Technical Committee requested that the Project Manager interview each team and clarify the differences between the tenders. Interviews were held with all parties. At the end of the interviews, the Project Manager prepared a list of clarification questions that were sent to each team for response. All teams submitted responses. The responses were tabulated and reviewed. The technical Committee rated the four contractors based on information submitted and requested that the Project Manager report the findings to the Port Authority Board.

The contractor team of Hurlstone/Misener were chosen based on proven experience methodology, lack of disruption to the daily operation of the Port Authority, the quality of their proposed design and construction, and best value and best quality on material.

The Port Authority Board accepted the Hurlstone/Misener and recommended that the marine portion of the works for the cargo pier be started immediately by Misener as the cargo pier was in urgent need of repair and widening. Discussions continued with the team to finalize the details of the tender pier portion of the works and the buildings. The cargo portion of the works was completed ahead of time and on budget and has been in use for over seven months. Ultimately proposals from Hurlstone and Misener for work to the bulkhead & tender pier and facility buildings were technically reviewed, finalized, and contracts let for the works.

Currently, the Project has received all costal-works licenses and Planning Permission. The Hurlstone team is finalising the detailed technical drawings and are proceeding with demolition and fill on-site. The marine portion by Misener is on schedule with construction due to be completed this October.

The Speaker: Are there any supplementaries?

The Second Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. Alden M. McLaughlin, Jr.: Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

Mr. Speaker, I wonder if the Honourable Minister can tell us what the contract price was, and also if there were significant differences in terms of costs between the proposals of the four companies. Could he also explain what those differences were?

The Speaker: The Honourable Leader of Government Business.

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: Mr. Speaker, the Project Manager is here and I am going to have to get some of this information from him.

The Speaker: Please continue then.

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: Mr. Speaker, on the supplementary, while the Misener/Hurlstone initial tender was the highest, upon review of the details the quality and scope of works of that team far exceeded any other bidder and importantly did not disrupt the lifeline operation of the Port Authority.

Prices varied from $10.9 million to about $17 million prior to analysis. The cost from Misener was approximately US$10.2 million and Hurlstone C$5.2 million. Mr. Speaker, the difference was that not all bids were for the same amount of work and the quantities of work was different from what we were asking for, in fact. Certainly, if we had taken the bids of the others, while they were a bit lower, in the long run it would have cost the Port much more; more in maintenance because nobody could quantify it when we asked them; disruption – more in cost of disruption to Port Authority operations; and they did not guarantee completing pilings without extra costs, so that was an unknown amount of money, which they had not told in the bid; and the design had greater risks to the environment.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: The Second Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. Alden M. McLaughlin, Jr.: Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

Mr. Speaker, as I have understood the Honourable Minister, the Misener bid was $17 million.

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: No, I did not say that.

Mr. Alden M. McLaughlin, Jr.: Perhaps the Honourable Minister, before I proceed could clarify that. To remind him of what he said—he said that the bids ranged from $10.9 million to $17 million and that Misener's bid was the highest, hence my conclusion.

The Speaker: The Honourable Leader of Government Business.

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

Mr. Speaker, as I said, I have the Project Manager here and I had to discuss it with him, but as I said, prices varied from $10.9 million to about $17 million prior to analysis. I said, Mr. Speaker, that Misener was approximately US$10.2 million and Hurlstone was C$5.2 million. They bid together; that is what I am saying.

The Speaker: I will allow two more supplementaries.

Mr. Alden M. McLaughlin, Jr.: Mr. Speaker, just trying to do it roughly here. It seems like the total for that joint bid is somewhere around $13.5.

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: Total for the joint bid was US$16.6.

Mr. Alden M. McLaughlin, Jr.: So, Mr. Speaker, I take it that that was the contract price. I do not want to lose a supplementary by having him respond to that.

I wonder then, Mr. Speaker, if the Minister can say who comprised the Technical Committee and also who determined ultimately who the contract would be awarded to, and confirm this was not something that was dealt with by the Central Tenders Committee.

The Speaker: The Honourable Leader of Government Business.

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: Mr. Speaker, the Technical Committee consisted of the following persons: Mr. Wilbert Thompson, Mr. Frank Flowers, Mr. Rayburn McLaughlin, Mr. Clement Reid, Mr. Paul Hurlstone, and Mr. Burns Connolly. The Board of the Port Authority made the final decision.

The Speaker: The last supplementary.
The Elected Member for East End.

Mr. V. Arden McLean: Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

Mr. Speaker, as I understand it, the Minister, in a previous reply to a supplementary said there were a number of factors that eliminated the other contractors, such as the quality of material, the disruption that would be possible to the Port and the likes. Can the Minister tell us if these other contractors were not made aware of the requirements to not have any disruption, the type of materials that was required, and if so, why was it that they did not bid on that basis.

The Speaker: The Honourable Leader of Government Business.

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

Mr. Speaker, I have told the House that it is – and I have said this to the Country already – a design/build contract, which means that the contractors made the proposal. The Technical Advisory Committee analysed what was submitted, so I do not know why they did not include all those things, but certainly the Technical Committee analysed what was submitted. These are the main issues, the ones that I have already reiterated to the House. For instance though, Mr. Speaker, such things like the second bidder, which was McAlpine, would have put the crane on the dock and built out rather than from a barge as Misener did, which would have disrupted the entire works of the Port.

So, these are the issues, Mr. Speaker. It is a design/build, and if they are asking why it did not go to Central Tenders, it was because the Port took it and went this route with it as this was the best way to go with it. Mr. Speaker, I should remind them that there were other matters that did not go to Central Tenders, so they should probably ask those people why they did not go to Central Tenders. Nevertheless, this money is not Government's money, this is money from the Florida Caribbean Cruise Association, and again, I will repeat, if we had taken their bid, the various bids, while they were a bit lower, in the long run it would cost the Port much more and the main issues I have already reiterated, Mr. Speaker.

I can say no more on this.

The Speaker: Honourable Members, this ends question time. I propose to take the luncheon break at this time and suspend until 2:30.

Proceedings suspended at 12.44 pm

Proceedings resumed at 2.48 pm

STATEMENTS BY MEMBERS AND MINISTERS OF THE CABINET

Strategies and Methods to Enhance Positive Social Change and Address Negative Social Factors

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Community Services.

Dr. the Hon. Frank S. McField: Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

Mr. Speaker, if I could I would like to make a few brief remarks before I begin to read from my statement. I would say, Mr. Speaker, it has become apparent to me that many of my colleagues here in the Legislative Assembly are not aware of many of the accomplishments which have been made in my Ministry over the past two years. As a result of that I am thankful for your indulgence in order that I might be able to read this statement.

INTRODUCTION

The Ministry of Community Services, Youth, Sports and Gender Affairs is responsible for strategies and methods to enhance positive social change and address some of the negative social factors. At-risk persons and their families have multiple needs and inter-related problems that are not likely to be successfully addressed by single-response, stand-alone initiatives. My Ministry has embraced the concept of community-based collaborative, which are focused on services integration or case management, parental involvement, using volunteers for tutoring or mentoring, implementing marketing and fundraising activities, and monitoring and evaluating programme outcomes. Research has shown that implementing community-based collaborative can be difficult. However, this has not required additional major funding since we have reallocated existing funds in an effective manner that eliminates duplication and creates a comprehensive continuum of care.

To this end, the Ministry embarked on a restructuring programme for the departments and units within the Ministry to achieve its vision of a multi-disciplinary approach to service delivery. Change occurs on a daily basis and is necessary in order to cope with the changing demands of Cayman's society. My Ministry convened a series of one-day retreats this year to continue communicating the vision to staff and to allow them to identify the strengths and processes or programmes that need to be improved or changed within each department as we move forward.

The fact that changes have taken place does not mean that additional changes are not viewed as necessary. It is important that we all adapt quickly to meet the changes in our society, monitor these changes and be ready to quickly change again if required. Communication through a multi-disciplinary team approach is allowing us to achieve this in the most comprehensive and cost-effective manner. These changes include:

The Department of Social Services began major organizational changes including:

- The name of the Department of Social Services (DSS) was changed on July 1, 2003 to the Department of Children and Family Services (DCFS) to better reflect the new client-based focus and service delivery strategies.
- After receiving feedback during several working sessions with social workers, it was determined that the best approach would be to decentralise the department so that services can be delivered to the community on a district level. It was also decided that social workers would specialise their expertise to better advocate for those services with clients. The Ministry has started to operationalise these plans, which is taking effect as we speak.
- A Special Projects Coordinator and a Training Specialist were employed to assist with the integration of services and necessary training of staff to develop a continuum of care within the social services arena and to guide the restructuring of the Department of Children and Family Services.
- Children And Youth Services (CAYS) Foundation continues to evaluate and adjust its services for troubled youth. CAYS were established in the latter part of 2002 as a not-for-profit public/private partnership managed by a board of persons from the government and private sector. Their purpose is to provide residential and day services to children who are court involved.
- The Probation and Aftercare unit was removed and placed as a separate agency to provide more autonomy and to better position this agency to work with the Criminal Justice System.
- The Community Development Unit was initially placed with the Department of Youth and Sports, and later moved to the National Housing and Community Development Trust. This was done to ensure that the new Affordable Housing Initiative has a system in place to determine a cross-section of people to qualify for the homes and to maintain a healthy social structure within these housing communities.

ACCOMPLISHMENTS

HOUSING

- The National Housing and Community Development Trust, a government owned company, was set up to construct and maintain affordable homes and provide housing finance with easier qualifying terms than are currently available commercially.
- This offers a greater variety of housing options and will be augmented by life skills enhancement programmes such as childcare, finance management and others identified as necessary for social interventions.
- The officers of the Community Development Unit were seconded to the National Housing and Community Trust to assist with the social/community work. This will ensure that these new communities represent a cross-section of populations who will have access to needed social support programmes. A Caymanian with a Master's Degree in Social Work was promoted in June 2003 to head the Community Development Unit.
- They started the construction of 200 affordable homes in George Town (two sites) and West Bay. Progress on delivery of the 200 houses comprising Phase One of the Ministry's Affordable Housing Initiative is ongoing and delivery of all 69 homes in West Bay has taken place. Road works in West Bay has commenced. The water main has been connected and arrangements for utilities are being put in place. It is our intention to have the West Bay homes occupied within the next month. We have taken delivery of 6 homes in Windsor Park and we are scheduled to take possession of the balance of 57 homes over the next month, which will total 132 homes out of the 200. The road and utility hook-ups will begin as soon as this takes place. Eastern Ave and Windsor Park communities will be occupied within the next two months.
- We already held an Open House at the Windsor Park Site.
- We secured offices for the National Housing and Community Development Trust.
- We hired a Caymanian as Manager for the National Housing and Community Development Trust.
- We hired a Caymanian as the Works Manager.
- We have transferred the land for the fourth community (68 homes) at the Fairbanks Site. This was signed by the Health Services Authority and The National Housing and Community Development Trust and work is due to commence as soon as Planning Permission is granted.
- Regular Board meetings are being conducted.

Accounting software has been identified and will be installed this month.

Bank accounts were opened and all payroll and other expenses are now being paid directly through the Trust instead of through the Ministry.

Bank financing has been arranged through a Bond Issue arranged by Scotiabank and interim financing is currently in place which paid out the Cayman Islands Government advance of CI$8.8Million. The Bond Issue should be in place by end of July and the interim finances will be paid out.

The three sites currently being developed were named by the Board as follows:

Windsor Park – God's Will Eastern Ave – Lord's Will West Bay – Promise Will

- Over 350 applications have been taken to date. These are currently being reviewed and recommendations are being prepared.

PRISON SERVICES

- The Ministry established weekly briefing sessions with the Director of the Prison Services to keep abreast of issues and concerns in the Prison Services, to communicate the Ministry's policy and to develop initiatives to increase the efficiency and improve the effectiveness of the Prison Service.
- The Prison Services put new procedures in place to enhance the performance of the Parole Board.
- They hired a Personal Development Manager to assess the inmates and determine what type of rehabilitation/education would best reduce the chances of recidivism.
- Began construction of a Therapeutic Community to address the high rate of substance abuse among the inmates.
- Presented the Sir David Ramsbotham's Inspection Report of the Cayman Islands Prison Service System to Cabinet. This Report will be tabled for the next sitting of the Legislative Assembly.
- Opened the new Prisoner's Reception and Stored Property Building in December. This replaces a building destroyed in the 1999 riot and was built by the Prison using recycled and donated materials and prisoner's labour.
- Opened the new Visits Block in April 2003. This was originally scheduled to be built in the early 1990's. It was constructed from recycled and donated materials and became operational in June. Cameras that were funded from the U.K. have been installed and the Canteen has been moved into it from a temporary container outside the prison.
- Reconfigured "A" wing, including the construction of a secure exercise yard into a Basic Regime Unit with a regime for securing disruptive prisoners.

This was done in December 02/January03 and has been a major success.

- In co-operation with the Probation Services the Prison has increased the pre-Release and Out-worker Programmes including setting up a multi-disciplinary committee to coordinate the preparation of Governor's Pleasure prisoners for reintegration into the Community.

- Purchased Furtherland Farms, which is being used to provide work for the prisoners as well as a wilderness camp which is being planned for the rehabilitation of young offenders and juveniles. Partnerships are also being sought with private sector entities to utilize areas of the property for agricultural purposes and simultaneously employ and train incarcerated offenders' and released offenders.

- There has been a major reduction in violence and abuse to staff.

- Training of staff has increased. Training figures have increased to 5.3 days per member of staff.

- Participated in multi-disciplinary team to reform the parole process.

- Opened Eagle House, a separate Unit outside of Northward.

- Developed a "Local Prison Inspectorate" to assist senior Prison staff with management issues and to rectify any mismanagement to certify that the Prison is managed according to Law and International Standards.

- Promoted local persons to head of the Prison Services.

- To protect the Public's safety and carry out the order of the Courts, the prison provides regimes that are workable, culturally applicable to address offending behaviour, improve education, work skills, development of civic pride and cause prisoners to lead a more responsible and law abiding life after release.

- The prison average population continues to show a reduction when compared to the same period last year. The male population showed a reduction of 10% at the end of April over the average population for the same period of 2003 and a 14% reduction over 2002.

- Strengthening of the drug detection capability with an additional officer and dog.

- Installed additional cameras.

- Installed computerized pegging clock.

- Developed a prison database.

- Introduced additional programmes related to the inmates offending behaviour.

- Developed structured vocational training.

- Commissioning of the Experimental Tilapia Farm at Fairbanks.

- Improved and increased staff training.

- Developed the Investors in People Initiative.

- Developed a staff recognition and award programme.

- Began construction of inmate's all-weather exercise area.

- Comprehensive repairs to the roof of the gate-lodge and inmate's living units.

PROBATION AND AFTER CARE UNIT

- The Probation and Aftercare Unit promoted a Caymanian to Head this Unit in October 2003.

- The Probation and Aftercare Unit has been re-located and is being supervised directly by the Ministry. This was necessary to allow for a proper review of the Unit, the Parole System, and the practices and procedures from other jurisdictions.

- Ongoing participation in multi-disciplinary team to reform the parole process.

- The second Community Service Coordinator began employment in March 2004; the second Administration Worker/Accounts Officer began in April 2004. A Caymanian Probation Officer began in May 2004, and a Caymanian University Graduate is to begin in August 2004. Based on the new Budget, there will be a post for a Probation Officer for Cayman Brac in the near future.

- The Probation and Aftercare Unit continued ongoing supervision of persons on Parole Licences after release to reduce the risk to the community. Life skills courses are being offered to parolees to reduce the risk of re-offending behaviour.

- The ongoing use of Community-based Orders as an alternative sentencing option through the Courts. Orders such as Probation and Community Service (alternatives to prison) are focusing on rehabilitation while persons remain in the community. This also contributes to the efforts to minimize overcrowding in the prison and reduces the cost of jailing offenders. It also prevents the negative socialisation and promotes the positive socialisation of offenders.

DEPARTMENT OF CHILDREN AND FAMILY SERVICES

Ongoing restructuring of the Department of Children and Family Services, formerly the Department of Social Services, to make it more efficient and effective. Some of the major changes are:

- Renaming it the Department of Children and Family Services.

- Developed a Satellite Office in West Bay, at the previous location of the Sunrise Training Centre that opened in April of this year and one in Bodden Town, at the Brightday Plaza that is projected to open later this month. The George Town Satellite Office will be located at the Mirco Centre and is projected to open in September. This decentralisation will better meet the needs of clients in each district. These offices will also have evening hours scheduled to provide services and workshops.

- A change in philosophy and focus of the Department is being implemented to better understand and address the root causes of people in need of temporary financial assistance. By helping these adults become more self-sufficient, they will be better positioned to fulfil their financial and emotional needs and those of their children. This approach will reduce the number of repeat clients and reduce the likelihood of people becoming dependent on financial assistance.

- A Coordinator was hired for the STARSS (Support Towards Autonomy Retraining and Self-Sufficiency) Project.

- Social workers are being assigned specific issue areas for case assignments. This enables them to specialize and become more familiar with each community's needs. This will also aid in the development of prevention strategies by identifying trends within each district.

- An additional section of the Department is focusing on the Poor Person's Relief for the elderly and disabled. Prior to 1st July, 1997 when the National Pensions Law 1996 came into force, it was not mandatory for local businesses to have a pension plan in place for their employees. The National Pension Law exempts persons over 60 years of age from contributing to any pension plan. This has resulted in many of our citizens who are over 60 years old not having a pension. With this in mind, the Government provides financial assistance of $400 per month to many of our elderly who have very little or no pension at all. These funds are provided under the Poor Persons Relief Law to elderly and or disabled persons who are deemed indigent based on the completion of a needs assessment. The current number of recipients is seven hundred and sixty nine (769).

- The renovation of a home in Bodden Town, which will offer day-care services for the elderly and provide another community resource facility was completed. This home will operate in association with the Bodden Town Park.

- A Family and Parenting Centre is being developed to better facilitate several components of the new focus. This is part of the National Parenting Initiative that is using a multi-disciplinary team approach to involve people from Education, Health, CAYS, CASA, RCIP, National Youth Commission, Young Parent Programme, and Youth Church Leaders.

- Child Abuse/Neglect Prevention Committee has been meeting and will launch a public awareness campaign in September. This is also a multi-disciplinary team.

- The Young Parents Programme graduated ten young women; seven are currently employed; one is returning to John Gray High School and the staff will be working with the other two graduates to assist them in obtaining employment.

- Three Social Work Assistant trainees were recently hired and will begin on the job training this month. This will enable the social workers to spend more quality time with clients rather than as much time on administrative tasks.

- The Ministry values the contributions that our elderly have made and continue to make to our country. With this in mind, we continue to provide home-care for those that are unable to care for themselves. We currently have three homes: The Golden Age Home in West Bay; the Sunrise Home in East End; and the Kirkconnell Home in Cayman Brac. This year we have upgraded a Home in Bodden Town, which will provide day-care facilities for the elderly in that district. There are many of our elderly who do not have families that are able to care for them, and the Ministry wants to ensure that they are taken care of. The Ministry also utilizes the Pines Retirement Home to place some of our elderly who are unable to care for themselves. We also assist the NCVO by paying the salaries for the Managers of the Pines, NCVO, and the staff of the NCVO Foster Care Home.

- The Children and Youth Services (CAYS) Foundation is providing services to Bonaventure House and the Frances Bodden Girls Home. The management of the Bonaventure Home was taken over by the Foundation on the 1 January, 2003. As of 1 July, 2003, CAYS Foundation was fully responsible for the Frances Bodden Girls' Home and the Hope Centre.

EX-SERVICEMEN AND SEAMEN

- The Ex-servicemen's benefit is given to those who served in the Merchant Marines, Home Guard, World War I and World War II or their surviving spouse, common-law wives or widows. This assistance was based on a Private Members Motion in the Legislative Assembly in June 1994. This benefit of $400 is given to 384 recipients.

- The Seamen's ex-gratia benefit is given to seamen or their surviving spouses and is given on a sliding scale up to a maximum of $400 per month. This benefit started in November 2000. At present there are:

- 547 persons receiving $400 per month
- 8 persons receiving $300 per month
- 1 person receiving $250 per month
- 8 persons receiving $200
- 3 persons receiving $100
- 1 person receiving $60

SUBSTANCE ABUSE SERVICES

- Promoted a Caymanian to Head the Department of Substance Abuse Services in September 2002.

- Caymanian promoted to Clinical Supervisor of Outpatient Services in 2002.

- Hired two counsellors specifically for youth.

- Hired a Counsellor specifically to provide drug and alcohol counselling to the Prison population (male & female) in March 2004.
- Continues to participate in monthly multidisciplinary team meetings to address issues related to parole and services within the Prison system.
- Revised the Residential Treatment Programme to extend 4-week treatment programme to an 8-week intensive live-in treatment programme.
- Re-instated services to the Sister Islands by hiring a qualified addiction counsellor in September 2003.
- Hired a Halfway House Manager to provide therapeutic programming in conjunction with support services offered at the Halfway House.
- Commenced ongoing discussions in March 2004 with Computer Services regarding the design of a data management system that will enable us to gather statistical data and engage in ongoing research.
- Trained selected staff in March 2003 from the Outpatient and Residential Treatment Programmes in relationship mediation to work with those clients experiencing relationship and marriage breakdown.
- Trained selected staff in March 2003 from the Outpatient and Residential Treatment Programmes to provide career development plans for our clientele.
- In April 2004, provided systems-wide training in Co-Occurring Disorders.
- Youth Counsellors began providing drug and alcohol counselling in May 2004 to young men in the recently opened Eagle House at the Northward Prison.
- Youth Counsellors continue to provide assistance to local schools and caring homes for youth identified with addiction issues.
- Participated in multi-disciplinary team review of Disability Legislation from other countries in May 2004, so as to make recommendations for the establishment of similar laws in the Cayman Islands.
- Provided Departmental training initiative for all clinical staff from February to June 2004.
- Redesigned the 8-week Residential Treatment Programme to provide a more comprehensive treatment experience. Consequently, clinical staff posts have been reduced and more employment opportunities were created for Caymanians.
- Established a Departmental public relations task force to design and implement a comprehensive public relations campaign in 2004.
- In April 2004 negotiated the purchase of the license for two standardised internationally recognized assessment tools to assist with the development of dual diagnosis capability of all clinical staff and the organisation as a whole. Actual purchase is currently being finalised.

SUNRISE ADULT TRAINING CENTRE

- Leased a larger facility for the Sunrise Adult Training Centre, which can house up to thirty-eight people. The new facility has allowed the Sunrise Adult Training Centre to admit ten new students bringing its total number of clients up to thirty-four. The Centre is within an existing community, which is an ideal environment for people to come and visit. The new facility comprises a new life-skills area, two kitchens, a living and dining room, recreational area, a medical centre, and larger office space for staff.
- Held a retreat re: the re-Development of the Sunrise Adult Training Centre.
- Developed a new Mission Statement and a Strategic Plan for the next year.

WATER AUTHORITY

- Completed the extension of the public water supply (1.5 miles) to Castaways.
- Completed water supply on the Lyndhurst Avenue and Bobby Thompson Way (Linford Pierson's Highway).
- Improved the water quality to the residents of West Bay by negotiating an agreement with Cayman Water Company to double-pass their filtration of water through the membrane.
- Extended piped water into Frenchman's Crescent.
- Work will commence on the water supply to North Side in about one week from today.
- Doubled the water supply capacity of the plant in Cayman Brac.
- Completed phase 1 of the Grand Cayman Wastewater Treatment Works by the end of the year.
- Completed Lower Valley piped Storage and Workshop Facility.

During the first eight months of the 2003-2004 fiscal year the public water supply system was extended using the Authority's New Works pipe-laying crew into the following areas:

- Side roads in Gun Bay and John McLean Drive in East End, just over 0.8 miles of 4-inch and 3-inch water mains at a cost of $202,400.
- Main road between Frank Sound junction and Botanic Road in North Side, just over 1.5 miles of 12-inch water mains at a cost of $214,900. No pipe-laying had been carried out on the North Side extension since 8 April, 2004 due to other commitments of the New Works pipe-laying crew. However, pipe-laying has been completed and the pressure test and disinfection up to the Botanic Road is currently being carried out.
- Poindexter Road, 0.5 miles of 12-inch mains installed at a cost of $93,900.
- Phase 2 of the Linford Pierson Highway (0.4 miles of 12-inch water mains) at a cost of $66,800.
- The Authority successfully completed the polling process and obtained planning approval for development of property just off the Botanic Road to be used to locate water production and storage facilities in the Eastern Districts.

- The contract to construct the Grand Cayman Wastewater Treatment Works was awarded to the lowest bidder, Hadsphaltic International Ltd. and Wharton Smith, Inc., as joint-contractors for US$17.2 million in September 2002. By the end of July 2004, the contractor is anticipated to have completed phase 1 of the contract. Wastewater has now been diverted to the new treatment plant and the existing waste stabilisation ponds have been decommissioned. The estimated expenditure for the above activities by the end of July 2004 is expected to be $11.3 million.

- Following a competitive tendering procedure, a contract was awarded to Petro-Tech Engineering & Industrial Services Ltd. to install 680 linear feet each of 16-inch and 12-inch PVC pipe work in the proposed Galleria Roundabout at a cost of $54,000. This pipe work will be used to transmit raw sewage from West Bay to the Grand Cayman Wastewater Treatment Works and to transfer treated effluent for irrigation purposes. This project has now been completed.

- Re-design of existing workshop/storage building in Cayman Brac to accommodate administrative office was completed.

- The contract for professional design services for the extension (estimated 10,000 square feet) to the administrative building was awarded to OBM Ltd. The conceptual design and preparation of the contract documents are almost complete. The construction documents have been forwarded to the Planning Department.

- On the public water distribution system, the Authority's Water Supply Department completed upgrading between approximately 0.5 miles of Shamrock Road between Soto Lane and Spotts-Newlands Road from 10-inch water mains to 12-inch diameter; 0.1 miles of 6-inch mains in Huldah/Elgin Avenue were upgraded to 12-inch diameter mains; and approximately 0.4 miles of 6-inch water mains in the Spotts-Newlands Road from the Shamrock Road Junction to Raven Avenue were upgraded to 10-inch diameter. The total cost of these upgrades was $176,000 or approximately $35.00 per foot.

- The Authority's Water Resources Department substantially completed installation of 26 new monitoring wells in the East End and Lower Valley water lenses at a cost of $31,000.

- The Authority, in conjunction with the Department of Environment, prepared Terms of Reference for an anti-degradation study to be carried out by the Cayman Turtle Farm and Dolphin Discovery-Cayman.

- In May 2004, the Authority's Water Supply crews commenced work on the section of North Church Street between Mary Street and Eastern Avenue to upgrade the mains from 8-inch to 12-inch diameter. The second phase of this project from Bodden Road to Tricia's Roses was completed and back in service on 9 July, 2004. The third phase will commence on 26 July, 2004 and is expected to be completed by the second week in August 2004.

  - Provided funding for athletes to attend the CARIFTA Games; the Central American and Caribbean Championships; the PanAm Games; and this year's Olympics.

GENDER AFFAIRS

- Changed the name of the Ministry from Women's Affairs to Gender Affairs to coincide with the Ministry's goal of implementing the National Policy on Gender Equity and Equality, which has been presented to Cabinet and will be presented to the Legislative Assembly in this sitting.
  - The Cayman Islands Crisis Centre, which is a place of safety for victims of domestic violence and their children, began operating in March 2003 out of the Long Celia Memorial Home. This house was purchased by Government and is leased to the Cayman Islands Crisis Centre Board. The Government provides an annual grant of $200,000 to this Board.
  - The Ministry coordinates the Domestic Violence Intervention Training Programme for frontline officers from the RCIP, Customs, Immigration, Health Services Department, Department of Children and Family Services, Fire Department, Education Department, HM Prison, Department of Substance Abuse, and other departments. For this year, three training sessions were held during which a total of fifty-five officers from the various Departments received certificates upon completion.

WOMEN'S RESOURCE CENTRE

- An official ceremony was held to launch the month and mark the 5th Anniversary of Honouring Women's Month (HWM) in March of this year.
- International Women's Day (March 8th) was recognized with a fundraising walk/run for the Women's Resource Centre.
- This is the first year that HWM workshops were held in Cayman Brac. Workshops were held entitled Girl Talk (for high school girls) and Juggling Work and Family (for women).
- The grand finale for HWM was Honouring Cayman's Women ~ A Quincentennial Celebration. At this event, five women – Annie Huldah Bodden, Frances Louise Bodden, Clara Editha Scott Leitch, Olive Miller and Mary Evelyn Wood – were presented with the Quincentennial Distinguished Woman Award to recognize their accomplishments and contributions towards the development of the Country. A brochure has been printed detailing the lives and undertakings of these women, and it has been distributed into the Government and Private School Systems and throughout the Community to be used as an education tool for the youth and the general public.

GENERAL PROGRAMMING

In July 2003, the Women's Resource Centre partnered with the new Women's Health Centre to offer monthly education sessions that focus on women's health issues. The Women's Resource Centre (WRC) continues to co-ordinate various other programmes such as the Legal Befrienders, self-help workshops, individual counselling, and other services throughout the year that aim to inform and empower women and families.

In late 2003, the WRC and the Department of Substance Abuse Services began working together to provide the public with confidential, drop-in information sessions on domestic abuse. This joint initiative is held the third Wednesday of each month at the WRC.

In December 2003 with the support of the National Gallery, the Women's Resource Centre held a ceremony to launch the first Annual Clothesline Project display in the Cayman Islands. Fifty one shirts were displayed in this forum, which is an artistic way for all victims of various forms of abuse to express their experience publicly.

The WRC is in the process of compiling a Community Resource Handbook. The goal of this project is to compile a comprehensive listing of all of the services and programmes available in the community. Persons working in the helping professions (i.e. counsellors, social workers, community workers, police officers, medical workers, clergy, etc.) within public and private sector organisations and the general public are the audiences specifically being targeted to utilize the Community Resource Handbook. This handbook will be printed in 2004.

Mr. Speaker, I thank you and Members for their indulgence to allow me to give the Honourable House and the general public a list of some of the accomplishments in my Ministry, and I hope that at this particular point that we will not have the people from the Opposition saying that nothing is being done in East End and North Side with regards to social development and youth issues.

MOTIONS

Government Motion No. 1/04

Amendment to the Development Plan 1997

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for the Ministry of Planning, Communications, District Administration, and Information Technology.

Hon. Juliana Y. O'Connor-Connolly: Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

Mr. Speaker, I beg to move Government Motion No. 1 of 2004 and it reads:-

"WHEREAS in April 2003, the Central Planning Authority received an application for the rezoning of Registration Section, West Bay Beach North, Block 11D, Parcel 36, from Neighbourhood Commercial to Hotel/Tourism;

"AND WHEREAS at a meeting of the Central Planning Authority dated 11 June, 2003, the Authority resolved to proceed with the amendment to the Plan, to wit:

To change the zoning of Block 11D, Parcel 36 from Neighbourhood Commercial to Hotel/Tourism;

"AND WHEREAS in accordance with section 11 of the Development and Planning Law (2003 Revision), Public Notices of the Authority's intention to amend the Plan, were published in the Cayman Netnews on 8, 9, 14 and 15 July, 2003 and further the proposed amendments were on public display at the Planning Department from 8 July through 13 September, 2003;

"AND WHEREAS no objections were received within the statutory period of two months;

"BE IT NOW THEREFORE RESOLVED THAT in accordance with Section 10(2)(b) of the Development and Planning Law (2003 Revision), the Central Planning Authority hereby recommends and submits to the Legislative Assembly the following proposal for alteration to the Development Plan 1997, a summary and map of which are attached hereto, and the Legislative Assembly hereby makes the following alterations, additions, and amendments to the Development Plan 1997 in accordance with the said summary and maps which shall come into force seven days after the passing of this resolution;

“AND BE IT FURTHER RESOLVED that Registration Section, West Bay Beach North, Block 11D Parcel 36, be rezoned from Neighbourhood Commercial to Hotel/Tourism.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: The question is BE IT NOW THEREFORE RESOLVED THAT in accordance with Section 10(2)(b) of the Development and Planning Law (2003 Revision), the Central Planning Authority hereby recommends and submits to the Legislative Assembly the following proposal for alteration to the Development Plan 1997, a summary and map of which are attached hereto, and the Legislative Assembly hereby makes the following alterations, additions, and amendments to the Development Plan 1997 in accordance with the said summary and maps which shall come into force seven days after the passing of this resolution;

AND BE IT FURTHER RESOLVED that Registration Section, West Bay Beach North, Block 11D, Parcel 36, be rezoned from Neighbourhood Commercial to Hotel/Tourism.

The Motion is opened for debate. Does the Honourable Minister wish to speak thereto?

Hon. Juliana Y. O'Connor-Connolly: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Just to say a few comments, Sir.

In April 2003, the Central Planning Authority received a rezoning request from a company known as Mayo Limited regarding the above-mentioned lands. The application requested that the subject parcel located along the West Bay Road, situated across from the Westin Casuarina Hotel, be rezoned from the current zoning of Neighbourhood Commercial. The subject property is currently part of the development known as the Cayman Falls Shopping Centre and contains various retail shops and restaurants. The nightclub on the second floor was recently converted to apartment accommodations and, accordingly, we received notice from the applicant's agents to rezone and we are now seeking to facilitate this said rezone.

It is expected that it is to include the further development, which will be three- or four-storey apartment buildings with a centre, courtyard, and pool area. The subject parcel, Mr. Speaker, is surrounded largely now by hotel and tourism zoning, and there were no issues or concerns raised by the various Government agencies that reviewed the said application.

The Central Planning Authority duly considered the application on the 11 June, 2003, and they resolved to initiate the rezoning process.

In accordance, therefore, with Section 11 of the Development and Planning Law (2003 Revision), the application was advertised in the Cayman Net News for the required amount of times and the proposed amendments were on public display, again for the statutory requirement for notice.

No objections, Mr. Speaker, were received within the statutory period, being a period of two months. Then, at a meeting on 10 December, 2003, the Central Planning Authority resolved to advise the Ministry for which I hold responsibility. The Ministry supported the application by forwarding it to the Governor in Cabinet. We are here today because on 23 March, 2004, Cabinet approved the rezoning application and we now have the matter before us today. I would seek all Honourable Members to lend their support for this rezoning application, which now has to take this final process.

May it please you!

The Speaker: Does any other Member wish to speak? Does any other Member wish to speak? Does any other Member wish to speak? If not, would the Honourable Minister wish to exercise her right of reply?

Hon. Juliana Y. O'Connor-Connolly: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Just to say that I am indeed grateful to the Government and Members for their tacit support. We look forward to another development, which will assist in contributing positively to the economic development within these Cayman Islands.

The Speaker: The question is that BE IT NOW THEREFORE RESOLVED THAT in accordance with Section 10(2)(b) of the Development and Planning Law (2003 Revision), the Central Planning Authority hereby recommends and submits to the Legislative Assembly the following proposal for alteration to the Development Plan 1997, a summary and map of which are attached hereto, and the Legislative Assembly hereby makes the following alterations, additions, and amendments to the Development Plan 1997 in accordance with the said summary and maps which shall come into force seven days after the passing of this resolution;

AND BE IT FURTHER RESOLVED that Registration Section, West Bay Beach North, Block 11D, Parcel 36, be rezoned from Neighbourhood Commercial to Hotel/Tourism.

All those in favour, please say Aye. Those against, No.

Ayes.

Agreed. BE IT NOW THEREFORE RESOLVED THAT in accordance with Section 10(2)(b) of the Development and Planning Law (2003 Revision), the Central Planning Authority hereby recommends and submits to the Legislative Assembly the following proposal for alteration to the Development Plan 1997, a summary and map of which are attached hereto, and the Legislative Assembly hereby makes the following alterations, additions, and amendments to the Development Plan 1997 in accordance with the said summary and maps which shall come into force seven days after the passing of this resolution;

AND BE IT FURTHER RESOLVED that Registration Section, West Bay Beach North, Block 11D Parcel 36, be rezoned from Neighbourhood Commercial to Hotel/Tourism.

Government Motion No. 1 of 2004 passed unanimously.

PRIVATE MEMBERS' MOTIONS

Private Member's Motion No. 1/ 04

Reviewing Laws and Policies to Enhance the Ability of the Royal Cayman Islands Police

The Speaker: The Second Elected Member for West Bay.

Mr. Rolston M. Anglin: Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

Mr. Speaker, Private Members' Motion No. 1 of 2004 standing in my name entitled Reviewing Laws and Policies to enhance the ability of the Royal Cayman Islands Police reads:

"BE IT RESOLVED THAT Government consider reviewing applicable laws and policies to enhance the ability of the Royal Cayman Islands Police to more effectively and safely carry out their duties.

The Speaker: Is there a seconder?
The Third Elected Member for West Bay.

Capt. A. Eugene Ebanks: Thank you, Mr. Speaker.
Mr. Speaker, I beg to second the Motion.

The Speaker: The question is that BE IT RESOLVED THAT Government consider reviewing applicable laws and policies to enhance the ability of the Royal Cayman Islands Police to more effectively and safely carry out their duties.

The Motion is open for debate. Does the Mover wish to speak thereto?

Mr. Rolston M. Anglin: Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

Mr. Speaker, before presenting some of the specific points that I have in mind in regards to this Motion, I wanted to just take a small step back and remind all of us of our incredible duty as non-executive Members of this House; that is, Members of the House that are not Members of the Executive, in bringing motions that are relevant, and bringing motions that are the concerns of our constituents. Because, Mr. Speaker, if Parliamentary Democracy is going to work, it must be that we who are elected come to this House and represent the views and interests of the public who sent us here.

Mr. Speaker, some might say that is very simplistic in getting back to the fundamentals of why we are here. However, I think it is very important for all of us – because none of us are perfect – to reflect on the duty that we have, because often times, once elected, you get so caught up in all of the activities that are involved with being elected and that includes from the person who calls you on the phone with a specific issue to the person who comes to your home at extremely early hours of the morning, sometimes before the roosters that so many people seem to be complaining about these days have even crowed. So, a lot of times the stress and the amount of work that goes into being a MLA, even in a small Island like Cayman, does keep you burdened and extremely busy. However, this is our obligation, the obligation of speaking with your constituents and gleaned from them what is important, what is a concern and coming to this Legislative Assembly for us to debate that topic. Out of that debate we hope to achieve an action and ultimately, that action must move us forward in building a better, safer, more productive society.

I recall about two years ago, the Third Elected Member from West Bay and I brought a motion. People called in to the talk show asking why such a motion was being brought. In fact, that motion had to do with persons playing loud music in their cars and driving through the Islands with that booming music all hours of the day, all hours of the night, all hours, Mr. Speaker, and not having the ability to get our hands around that issue and trying to solve it. Some people see issues that others bring as petty, but if there is any issue that our constituents bring to us, we are duty bound – once they are important and they can help improve life in these countries – to bring them here to this Parliament to debate them. Now, Mr. Speaker, not every Motion brings about the change that you would like to see as swiftly as you would like to see it and, indeed, Mr. Speaker, some motions call for actions that are difficult to get our hands around and get a handle on.

I believe that policing and the ability to create a safe and secure Island is of paramount importance. I can remember when I was first elected back in 2000 and my first few debates. I always used the phrase 'everything affects everything'. Whilst there are some issues that certain people feel are more important than others, at the end of the day I do not think anyone can argue that safety has to be a primary focus of all of us in this Legislative Assembly. The physical safety and physical well-being of our constituents must be high on the priority list. I would have to say that starting off on that platform I feel it gives both sides of this house the opportunity to instantaneously agree. As I look across at my colleagues on the other side, I know that they agree and see that this debate, once I have finished, will be able to provide a platform that allows us to have better policing, but not only better policing but that it can keep police officers safer.

Mr. Speaker, in the district of West Bay, we still have large tracks of land, very often in residential areas—right behind or adjacent to peoples' homes—that unfortunately get used for illegal activity. If you go through the land or go through those pieces of property, it is quite obvious that drug activity is going on. Even with an untrained eye, once you go into some of this property and you see the empty drink cans with holes in them, no one has to guess what that is used for. Everyone knows that once that can has holes and is bent in the middle, it is used for the smoking of crack cocaine. I beg to say to this House that the use of crack cocaine is probably our greatest threat and greatest challenge from a legal standpoint and from a standpoint of the destruction of families and young lives within our community.

Mr. Speaker, hopefully people will resist the temptation to make this a political issue, because we know – those of us who have lived in this Island – the crack epidemic started in the Cayman Islands from the late 1980's. So, it has been around a long time, and I do not think that we should seek to blame anyone, any government, any current or past administration. That does not help us go about getting down the road to addressing the issue.

Now, I will be the first to acknowledge that policing deals with the end result. By the time people who are involved with drug abuse and who are drug addicts, by the time they interact with the police a lot of times they are already addicted. So, yes, I will quickly acknowledge that the work within the Ministry responsible for Substance Abuse Services is of paramount importance and, in fact, one element of policing that does assist with trying to avoid people getting hooked on drugs is the Drug Abuse Resistance Education (D.A.R.E.) Programme. However, at the end of the day, the reality is that we have a serious drug problem within every single district in these Islands. This is not a West Bay issue; this is not a George Town issues; this is a Cayman Islands issue and we know, everyone of us know, how it has ravaged so many young lives and so many young families. How it has ravaged older people. So many times you hear about somebody who is using drugs and you say, 'Wow, they are so old, they seem to have everything together in their life'. One thing is for sure, drug addiction is not age, race, class, district prejudicted. It reaches every single nook and cranny within this Community.

We have in these Islands, many, many empty lots of land that the police will tell you they have great difficulty penetrating and going into for fear of their personal safety. Because when you are going into an area, if you know that there is drug activity and that there is a lot of money to be made with drugs, and therefore, you know there are people with incentives to ensure that they can keep up their trade, therefore the police officers know that they can come in harms way. Not only do you have the persons who are actively involved in the trade of drugs, you also have the drug users who when under the influence of drugs will carry out actions and activities that they would not normally do when they are sober. So, Mr. Speaker, we do have a serious issue when you are going to talk about policing and policing in those types of conditions.

I am not going to stand here and expect any Honourable Member to accept the notion that clearing lands solves the drug problem and certainly, if one was to take that argument and extend it, one would say that we would cut down every empty lot in Cayman but that is not the idea. In residential areas especially, when your constituents call you and you go to their houses and look through the bushes seeing the activity and the people in there, and your constituent says to you: 'I am no longer letting my children out in the yard to play because we do not want them to see that sort of behaviour'; you then know that is a serious issue. Which one of us in this Chamber would want our children to step outside the door and see people (adults) moving around on an empty lot of land next door to our house?

Mr. Speaker, that particular issue is one that strikes home because I can tell you and this Honourable House—I do not know if other Member has had these complaints—but certainly the four Elected Members from West Bay has as we have had this complaint time and time, and time again. Right now, I have three parcels of land that I am actively trying to get the police and Public Works to assist in clearing it. Now I know that there is a challenge when it comes to going that route, and I will tell the Country we have had had instances where the red-tape has bogged us down and we have gotten private heavy equipment operators in the district of West Bay to assist. They usually ask, as a condition, for the police to be there. I know of a report on one instance where the heavy equipment operator was in a particular area where we knew drugs were being stored and one of the people who is suspected, and I would dare to say well-known in the district, as being a drug pusher did come out and approach the bulldozer driver. However, he did not know that the police were there and when the Police made their appearance he quickly backed down. However, that is what is happening in this country. So, when we look at various sections in the Mosquito Research and Control Law and the Public Health Law, we see that the police do have opportunity within those two laws to be able to more efficiently expedite what is considered strategic land clearing.

As I have said many times in this House, I am not going to pretend to be a police or be an expert in policing, but Mr. Speaker, we do have a Police Force and I think we owe it to our constituents and to them and their families to be able to try to ensure that we create as much flexibility within reason for them to be able to carry out their work efficiently and effectively.

There was one instance where a particular piece of land was being used—not suspected of being used—was being used for drug activity and the land owner was not in Cayman; he was overseas. That created a great challenge because the police prefer to go through the proper channels and write to the landowner to get permission to clear the land, and I must say in most instances landowners are very receptive; once they understand what is happening on that piece of property they are very, very receptive to having the land cleared. However, Mr. Speaker, I will give you an irony: I know of a person who owned a piece of property and drug activity was not going on within this particular piece of property, but the neighbour wanted to have the property cleared because they were saying it was blocking the breeze and they were not getting proper ventilation within their home. I do not know how long it took because I do not know when the neighbour initiated the action, but certainly the landowner got registered mail from the Department of Environmental Health telling them that within, I think, 21 days of receipt of that letter, they had to make provisions to have their land cleared.

So, Mr. Speaker, I say that to point out that if the Department has that authority already in law, I do not think it is such a farfetched idea to look at the law and to sit down with the police and see whether, within reason, we cannot have this area strengthened to allow the police to move a little quicker and a little more efficiently in regards to some of these land clearings, because some do get bogged down sometimes in the red-tape of trying to get the particular piece of land cleared.

Mr. Speaker, line of sight—the ability to know where you are going and see what is there—is of utmost importance to the police. My contention is that with over-grown land, the police often get put at a great disadvantage and, in fact, a lot of times are unnecessarily put in harms way. I think all of us understand quite clearly the dynamics that have festered within our communities in regards to the public and the police, and the public's confidence in the police. We do need to have a continued emphasis on the police being able to execute some of the things that the public sees as simple. The public looks at these and says, 'this is a simple issue'. If you know drug activity is going on within a particular piece of land then it should be cleared and you should be able to get it sorted out.

What is ironic about one of these pieces of property that we had cleared, I think in 2002, which has grown back up again, is the fact that this piece of property is about half a mile from the West Bay Police Station. Within that half a mile, not only is there this particular piece of property, but there is also a well-known crack house in the district. Certainly, as I move through the district, you hear the public talking about why is it that just on the doorstep of the Police Station there is a crack house and certainly, within a stones throw from there is an empty vacant lot, which everyone knows is being used for drug activity. Naturally, this does cause a lot of members of the public to have questions in their mind as to the confidence that they have in the police. We have to ensure, as much as humanly possible, that we turn around that trend of people in this community not having the type of confidence that they should have in the people that we pay to serve and to protect. That is a very, very serious issue. It leads to many difficulties, such as people's willingness to cooperate. The police will quickly tell you that they cannot police any community effectively if they do not have the assistance of the public. They must have the assistance, Mr. Speaker, but a lot of times to have the assistance, you do need to have that confidence in terms of people feeling that everything they do and say will be followed up on and they will see action.

We have heard of cases in this country where homes, structures, or dwelling places have not met certain planning criteria and standards having been torn down. This is a very delicate and ticklish issue. I am not standing here advocating giving the police any sort of sole discretion in being able to do this, but we must have a situation where we look into these problems a little deeper and see what can be done within reason, because it has to be reasonable. When you are talking about clearing, and I do not take the clearing of empty lots lightly; I do not take going on to any private citizens' property lightly, because that is an incredibly important aspect of having a free and democratic society. People must not feel that there is undue pressure or that there can be an ease in which their property without their consent can be cleared. Of course, I think within reason and from the discussions that I have had with many people in our district, there is broad-based support for the notion that we must do and create the possibility for doing as much as humanly possible to ensure that the police are better able to carry out the type of work they need to, especially in the areas where you know drug trade is happening.

Mr. Speaker, I can remember, as a young boy, the days when the majority of drug use and drug pushing was done way in the bush, but these days, it is right on the sides of major streets. This particular home and empty lot that I am speaking about which is within half a mile of the West Bay Police Station are on Reverend Blackman's Road, and that is a main road in West Bay. So, we have gotten to the point where the public feels very, very frustrated, very frustrated that criminal activity is taking place right on the major roadsides or just off them in the bush. That again erodes public trust and public confidence. We have to be realistic about these things, and let me make it clear that I am not here criticizing or lambasting any police officer or any police administration. However, we have to come to this Parliament and air the concerns and the realities that are presented before us as members of our Community and those that are told to us and shown to us by our constituents.

Just a few months ago, in that same crack house I am talking about, a murder took place! A murder, Mr. Speaker! I can remember so many people making the comment: 'Now look at that, right on the doorstep of the Police Station'. Mr. Speaker, these are delicate matters to talk about, very sensitive matters to talk about. However, I understand that we have gotten a new type of element of crime in this community, and so I thought very long and hard about what I was going to say and how much I was going to say on the Floor of this House. I say and submit to this House that the day we start to stifle our own voices as representatives of the people and stifle our own conscience that will be a great victory for crime and lawlessness. I think, my record stands very, very, very clear in terms of how I feel about crime and punishment. There are those who criticise me and say I am a hardliner, and yes, I am, yes, I am. Because to sit down and whine and complain gets nothing done. Serious crime requires serious policing and we cannot, we must not allow ourselves—because the buck stops here—to not speak out about these issues or to simply do so in private with our constituents.

At the end of the day, we continue to grow as a community and our awareness as to who we are continues to grow day by day. I say that in any country which has free elections and people who go and represent people, then the buck has to stop in the peoples' house. Now, I know that none of us go out day-to-day and execute policing strategy or are police officers and so there are variables that are obviously outside our control – outside the control of the executive arm of government. Ultimately, this is where the buck stops. We are the House. If that is not the case then why are we here? Why?

I understand that government has gotten in problems. I can remember, in fact, since being elected us having to ratify in Finance Committee, a settlement with a landowner where some property was cleared and, I think, it was some fruit trees and other valuable trees that were cleared. However, for the most part, a lot of this land is empty land. Now obviously, we should go along within the guidelines of what Planning tries to do when they approve any sort of development and that is to encourage the mature trees to remain and not to just go in and flatten things out completely, but even having said all of that, the safety and integrity of our Communities come first.

Mr. Speaker, the Public Health Law (2002 Revision) Part 3 (12) reads that "The officer for the time being in charge of the Government Department responsible for public works shall comply promptly with any request made to it by the Chief Environmental Health Officer under this Part." Part 3 deals with nuisances. I think it would be putting it lightly that vacant lots of land being used for drug use to call it a nuisance. I call it a threat; I call it a threat to law and order; I call it a threat to families; I call it a threat to the neighbours, because you do not know the day when someone could be standing innocently in their yard and you have people in that bush trading drugs and some conflict arises and a firearm is used and some innocent person loses their life or gets seriously injured simply because there is an empty piece of land which provides the perfect cover for using and trading drugs. Some might say that is farfetched, but I do not think it is farfetched at all, not one bit. In regards to use of firearms, I think that is a debate and I should not anticipate, but that is a debate for another day.

Mr. Speaker, the Mosquito Research and Control Law, Section 10 entitled "Bush Clearing on Premises" reads that owners and occupiers of premises shall keep trimmed and cut all trees, shrubs, plants and ripe grass from their premises in order to discourage mosquito resting and increase the efficiency of methods of control. We see that already there is an intention within current legislation where property should not become a nuisance or serve to encourage what all of us has come to consider nuisances, and most people consider mosquitoes as nuisances. We have to act. Let us not take it lightly; let us not laugh at it; let us not laugh at the Motion, and then one day when something happens that we all did not think would ever happen happens, then we rush down here to the Legislative Assembly and say, 'Boy you know we really got to try to do something about this. We really got to try and ensure that next to peoples' homes there is not the type of behaviour that is currently taking place.

I am going to move on to another point that I have personally observed and find it to be most disturbing. When you move around the community and you see people who you know are not going to die from hard work; it is not hard work, Mr. Speaker, that is going to kill them, yet, they are riding around the community, riding through the streets with a machete stuck between the small fork at the back of their bicycle. We know that they are not going to chop any bush. They are not going on their way to work; work? I think most of them have a very, very severe, severe, severe, and I could say severe all day, allergy to work. Mr. Speaker, if hard work was to hit them I feel sorry for those poor souls, because they are going to go away very, very quickly and I feel sorry for the work as well, because that work is not going to get done.

So, a compliant that I have gotten, not only from constituents who have observed this but in speaking to police officers also, because truthfully, when I first saw it I had to do a double take and make sure that is what I was seeing. On the face of it, one would think this is a very simple issue to be solved. But as soon as you are talking to the Police officers and find out again about all the red-tape they have to go through to prove that this person is not on their way to work, that is 'where the rubber starts to meet the road'. I can tell you that the only rubber that is meeting the road is these guys' bicycle tires all over the community and the machetes are sitting in the back. We know that they have those machetes not to be used for any gainful employment, but to intimidate and possibly be used in terms of criminal activity. All of us read the papers and we understand clearly that it seems as though the machete is one of the weapons of choice these days. How many times do you read a grievous bodily harm case and the very next sentence says 'with a machete'?

Mr. Speaker, I say that we must take on board as the most important thing and that is keeping our citizens safe. When I say citizens, I include the police officers. They have families and they put themselves in harms way on a daily basis in carrying out their duties and we are duty bound in this Legislative Assembly to do as much as we can do to ensure that they are kept safe when they are out there doing their job of keeping all of us safe.

I understand that the police have already taken this issue up with the Legal Department and have gotten a Legal Ruling. Unfortunately, that ruling has not increased the hand of the police. Mr. Speaker, in other words, the ruling does not allow the police to do what they would like to be able to do, and that is to not have people who are able to simply ride around with a machete stuck in the back of it. I say this issue needs to be revisited. If we can save one person in this community from having to go through what must be one of the most awful experiences and that is to have someone attack you with a machete. If we can save one, it will have been worthwhile. I understand clearly, that in all of these things there is a fine line and we have to ensure that the public continues to have certain freedoms. We cannot have ourselves decay and I am not promoting any sort of rigid police state, but I think that all of us know where I am coming from and where I would like us to go.

The Speaker: Honourable Members we have reached the hour of 4.30 pm, and I have received notice that it is the wish of Members that business of the House should continue until 5.00 pm this afternoon. I would, therefore, call on the Honourable Minister for Tourism to move the suspension of Standing Order 10(2) to allow the House proceedings to continue till 5.00 pm.

The Honourable Leader of Government Business.

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: Mr. Speaker, I move the suspension of Standing Orders in order to do business after 4.30 pm; Standing Order 10(2).

Mr. Speaker: The question is that Standing Order 10(2) be suspended to allow the proceedings to continue until 5.00 pm.

All those in favour, please say Aye. Those against, No.

Ayes.

Mr. Speaker: The Ayes have it. The House will continue proceedings until 5.00 pm.

Agreed. Standing Order 10(2) suspended to allow the proceedings to continue until 5.00 pm.

The Speaker: The Second Elected Member for West Bay continuing.

Mr. Rolston M. Anglin: Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

Mr. Speaker, as I said earlier, I think all of us understand quite clearly that there are situations that exist in our communities which you cannot justifiably point any finger at political directorates and blame. I think the issues raised thus far are things that exist, but with a little more cooperation and a little more emphasis, and I think, as I said earlier, the buck stops here. So, that is why I believe we need to give a little emphasis to certain matters. That is why we are the Legislative Assembly. That is why we are here to represent our constituents.

There exists in The Town and Communities Law a lot of old and archaic terminology and principals. I think that became very clear to myself and a lot of us in this Honourable House when the Honourable Third Elected Member from West Bay and I did move the Motion that I spoke to a little bit earlier, in regards to loud music in automobiles. This piece of legislation is designed to try to ensure that peace and tranquillity and productive living is the order of the day within the districts. So, when I continue to get complaints from constituents in regards to that ever frustrating and ever moving target of the people who have about ten nightclubs wrapped up in the backseat or the trunks of their cars that is such a vexing issue, because truthfully, number one, they are a moving target. Therefore, when the innocent person in whatever street in Cayman is awoken at whatever hour – two, three o'clock in the morning because someone has driven by their house with this loud, vexing music, by the time they call the police, the person is gone. Truthfully, even if they knew what car it was, by the time the police catches up to the person, the music is off or at a very generous or reasonable level.

Now, Mr. Speaker, I know this one is, again, a little delicate because I think there are many of our citizens who feel it their mission in life to deafen themselves. They believe that it is quite cool to blast the music louder than the other guy, to have the muffler that you can hear him when he takes off in East End and only God can help your ears by the time he arrives in West Bay. They have these special exhaust mufflers that they put on cars and trucks or vehicles, to make them scream as loud as they can. Years ago, you had to have a hole or had to have the silencer on your exhaust system fall off to even come close to making the noise that these cars make. However, they are built and designed to make this noise.

Mr. Speaker, there will be those critics who will say, 'Now listen to this. On the Floor of the Parliament we are talking about noise in cars.' Unfortunately, we have people who live on certain main roads; not everyone is lucky enough to live a little off a main road. There are still many, many, many homes that were built on the traditional main roads throughout these Islands. Therefore, every one of those citizens, at some time or another will have to have been – I am confident – disturbed by the loud obnoxious noise that comes from passing vehicles. Again, Mr. Speaker, we brought a Motion in regards to it. In sitting down with the police, we understood how difficult an issue it is from a policing perspective. The people who practice this are not only trying to make themselves deaf, but are a real threat to emergency vehicles when they are on the roads. How can anyone argue that with the volumes that they have music at, combined with these mufflers or exhaust systems, no one can convince me that when an emergency vehicle is approaching them that they are going to have the ability to hear them. It is impossible, Mr. Speaker, impossible! In fact, I think that if you are driving in another vehicle close enough to them, you might not hear the emergency vehicle that may be approaching you, especially when it is approaching you from behind where it is not in your line of sight.

So, I acknowledge that that vexing issue still exists; however, I acknowledge that it is a very, very difficult one for the police to get their hands around. However, every other country faces this issue and I am sure that somewhere with a little research, we will find that there are moves elsewhere to try to tackle this particular issue.

Mr. Speaker, I still say The Town and Communities Law is a useful piece of legislation for the police and citizens, but it does need—and I call upon the Government to have it reviewed with a view to making it modernised. We still have provisions in this Law that if a person is disturbing the peace, and with your permission, Mr. Speaker, I quote from Section 16, which deals with street musicians etc. “Any householder, personally, or by his servant or any constable may require any street-musician, juggler, dancer, actor, or showman to depart from the neighbourhood of the house of such house- holder; and every person who sounds or plays upon any musical instrument, or makes any other noise or disturbance in any thoroughfare near any house, after being so required to depart, is guilty of an offence and liable on conviction to a fine of twelve dollars.” Twelve dollars, Mr. Speaker, one, two, 12; let me make that clear, $12.00! So, when you look at some of the fines and the terminologies, this piece of legislation, whilst it is there, it does need to get a little more teeth in it because this is yet another vexing issue for a lot of people in our communities and for the police in dealing with this whole issue of people's right to be able to have a good night's sleep and other people seemingly feeling confident that they can blast music at any volume, up to any hour of the morning.

Let us turn our attention to another small issue – on the face of it – in the Traffic Law. I think that we will find in that Law that there is no requirement for police to take a breathalyzer of a person who is involved in a major accident. I have had personal experience some 19 years ago. I know you should not make politics personal and debate personal but hear me out, Mr. Speaker and Members, because it is a serious issue. My eldest brother died in a motorcycle accident. Many people told the family and the police afterwards that one of the persons involved with that accident was drinking. However, there is no requirement; it is at the discretion of the officer to take a breathalyzer when major accidents happen. I think whilst that term 'major' is subject to some interpretation, I think, most of us know what I am driving at.

More recently, I had a constituent tell me that they were involved in an accident and luckily they did not get a lot of personal harm but their car sustained a lot of damage and they were convinced that the person who was involved with the accident had been drinking. However, the officer at the scene, using his discretion, did not think that the person was under the influence and had any substantial level of alcohol in them. That is not something that you can readily avail by just looking at a person, because each person has a very, very different level of tolerance to alcohol and other substances. So, one person may get a 'whiff' of a glass of wine at a party and be drunk and somebody else may have half a bottle and not appear to be under the influence. Therefore, Mr. Speaker, I think this too is another issue in speaking to the police that they readily acknowledge and would allow them to more effectively police and not have instances where the public looks at a situation and feels as though something unfair has transpired. What you do in a case like that, in my view, is not to put the police in the untenable position of having to make a judgement call which is open to critique. As I said, this is when you have serious accidents. I think when there is a serious accident, you must err on the side of caution, and again, I believe this would assist the police greatly.

Mr. Speaker, when we look at the Police Law itself, we see that the Governor is the Post to whom certain discipline goes. I believe that we have moved in this country that certainly when there are allegations made against an officer up through the ranks of Chief Superintendent that the Commissioner of Police should rightly be the person who investigates those cases. Then, if need be, for the time being, those could be appealed up to the Governor if the person who is being investigated feels aggrieved. This element of policing is very important; it is critical to the police themselves, maintaining a certain feeling of equity as to what happens within their own ranks.

Just last week Monday, the four Members from West Bay were invited to attend a meeting that was organised by some residents of our district. They had invited us and the police. Three officers came, there were about six residents and they wanted us to come and see and talk to them about a situation that exists in their neighbourhood. For easily 15 to 18 years we have had a particular individual in a particular residence who is involved with the drug trade. Things have gotten to the point where people on this particular street, a small side road, keep their children at home and do not allow their children to venture too far out because these guys hang out on the side of the street. These guys often block peoples' access; they just blatantly stand in the middle of the road when people are going home or leaving; they try to intimidate the children and the residents.

Mr. Speaker, they had become successful at it because in speaking with one of the officers on Saturday – the meeting was on the 12th – I was delighted to hear that the garbage truck was now going back into that road, because the situation had gotten so bad that all the residents had to take their garbage from their homes out to the main road, because the garbage trucks were no longer going into the road. These guys have taken that road for themselves. Again, there is a large vacant lot of land right next to their residence where these guys hide stolen goods and drugs. Imagine this, Mr. Speaker! Some of the residents have called the police to come and recover stolen vehicles from that vacant lot of land. It is vacant lot, but they have cut out certain small paths in it.

The people in that area have come to ask their representatives to try to assist them in coming up with an alternate road to get to their homes. They are so frustrated and do not feel safe driving by this yard any longer. Mr. Speaker, there are illegal buildings in that yard; the road is extremely narrow and has become even more narrow over the years because an illegal structure is on what should be the road; and one of the residents who was very, very agitated was straightforward and put the police who attended 'on the spot' all night because he wanted to deal with 'the bottom line'. He had copies of police reports as to when he had gone to the police. Sure enough, there it is in black and white – he had called, he had come by the station – he had made the Report, nothing improving.

Now, Mr. Speaker, knowing that road and knowing that area, if I was to put myself in the shoes of the police, I would think twice about going in, because I know that I would be putting myself in harms way if I were a police officer. So, I am not trying to blame anybody, but it is a good example, a classic example of why it is so important that we move forward in trying to ensure that the police in this country have a greater possibility to shut down the known drug selling yards and the known crack houses. If we did not know where it happened, it would be a completely different debate, but when we know, when everybody knows then it becomes an even more vexing situation.

Another complaint that you get from the police is the number of ferocious dogs that the owners of these drug yards have. Again, this makes it extremely difficult for policing purposes. Again, I move back to another Motion that was brought to this House. I cannot remember precisely who brought it but I am confident that the record would bear out that there was a combination of myself and the other Elected Members from West Bay. Again, we received a lot of criticism for bringing about that debate, but I am not reviving that debate but I am pointing to an example of one of the real issues that these Cayman Islands face.

We know how a lot of these dogs are bred. I am not going to blame the breed of dog, because we had three meetings after that Motion that did educate us a little more in terms of some of these breeds of dogs, and so whilst many people have their own opinions as to whether or not the breed itself is ferocious, that is neither here nor there. The bottom line is that many of these drug pushers have in their yards, ferocious animals roaming freely knowing that this will frustrate the police in their efforts to try and shut them down.

Simple, Mr. Speaker, a shop owner has a door and a lock on his business, and a lot of times an alarm system. They want to protect their business. Drug pushers want to protect their business as well, and so they utilise ferocious dogs in a lot of instances and this makes it virtually impossible for the police to effectively deal with policing those yards. Now, my understanding is, and maybe after this Motion we will have dialogue between the Portfolio of Internal and External Affairs and the Portfolio of Legal Affairs, and my next statement may prove to be incorrect, but to the best of my knowledge, the police does have sophisticated enough equipment to be able to prove that there is illegal activity going on through surveillance techniques. So, Mr. Speaker, the question is begged, asking if you can prove through surveillance techniques that illegal activity is going on, we must do what it takes to ensure that the police are more able to deal effectively with these yards.

The Speaker: Honourable Members, we have reached the hour of 5.00 pm, and I would now call on the Honourable Leader of Government Business to move the Motion for the adjournment.

Hon. W. McKeever Bush: Mr. Speaker, I move the adjournment of this House until Wednesday at 10 am.

I understand there will be another meeting, which all Members should be at 9.00 am and then the House will resume at 11 am.

The Speaker: The question is that this House do now adjourn until 11 am on Wednesday, 21 July, 2004.

All those in favour, please say Aye. Those against, No.

Ayes.

The Speaker: The Ayes have it. This Honourable House stands adjourned until 11 am on Wednesday, 21 July, 2004.

At 5.00 pm the House stood adjourned until 11 am Wednesday, 21 July, 2004.

OFFICIAL HANSARD REPORT
WEDNESDAY
21 JULY 2004
11.13 AM
Ninth Sitting

The Speaker: I would invite the Honourable Third Official Member to lead us in prayers.

PRAYERS

Hon. George A. McCarthy: Let us pray:

How good and pleasant it is when brothers live together in unity! It is like precious oil poured on the head running down on the beard, running down on Aaron's beard, down upon the collar of his robes; it is as if the dew of Hermon were falling on mount Zion for there the Lord bestows His blessings, even life forevermore.

Eternal God and Father is in whose presence our souls find delight: We beseech Thee so to direct and prosper the deliberations of the Legislative Assembly now assembled, that all things may be ordered upon the best and surest foundations for the glory of Thy Name and for the safety, honour and welfare of the people of these Islands.

Bless our Sovereign Lady, Queen Elizabeth II; Philip, Duke of Edinburgh; Charles, Prince of Wales; and all the Royal Family. Give grace to all who exercise authority in our Commonwealth, that peace and happiness, truth and justice, religion and piety may be established among us. Especially we pray for the Governor of our Islands, the Speaker of the Legislative Assembly, Official Members and Ministers of Cabinet and Members of the Legislative Assembly, that we may be enabled faithfully to perform the responsible duties of our high office. All this we ask for Thy great Name's sake.

Let us say The Lord's Prayer together: Our Father, who art in Heaven, Hallowed be Thy Name. Thy Kingdom come, Thy will be done on earth as it is in Heaven. Give us this day our daily bread, and forgive us our trespasses, as we forgive those who trespass against us. Lead us not into temptation, but deliver us from evil. For Thine is the Kingdom, the power and the glory, forever and ever. Amen.

The Lord bless us and keep us. The Lord make His face shine upon us and be gracious unto us. The Lord lift up the light of His countenance upon us and give us peace, now and always. Amen.

The Speaker: Please be seated. Proceedings are now resumed.

Proceedings resumed at 11.16 am

READING BY THE HONOURABLE
SPEAKER OF MESSAGES
AND ANNOUNCEMENTS

Apologies

The Speaker: I have not received any apologies for the absence of Ministers or Members of this Honourable House. I have, however, been told that the Honourable Minister for Education is off Island on official business.

PRESENTATION OF PAPERS AND OF REPORTS

The Traffic (Public Transport Appeals Tribunal) Regulations, 2004

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister of Tourism, Environment, Development and Commerce and Honourable Leader of Government Business.

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: Mr. Speaker, I beg to lay on the Table of this Honourable House the Traffic Law (2003 Revision), the Traffic (Public Transport Appeals Tribunal) Regulations, 2004.

The Speaker: So ordered. Would the Honourable Minister wish to speak thereto?

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. The Public Transport Board was established several years ago to manage and regulate a public transport system for the Cayman Islands. However, the Law is broadly ineffective in the absence of a clearly defined appellate process, thus the reason for the Traffic (Public Transport Appeals Tribunal) Regulations, 2004.

The main problems being faced by the Board are as follows:

a. There is no properly constituted tribunal appeals process.

b. There is no clear system in which decisions may be appealed after the Board's decisions.

c. The Regulation is long overdue and will add credence to the appeals process of decisions made by the Public Transport Board. Therefore it will remove the Cabinet from being the apparent appellate body for aggrieved or dissatisfied individuals. In so doing those persons would now have recourse of appeals through the Public Transport Appeals Tribunal.

d. This Regulation is modelled after the Immigration Appeals Tribunal Regulations. Therefore to address the outlined deficiencies of the Law it is desirable that the composition of the appellate body be structured so that the appeals making role is separated from the Cabinet and the Public Transport Board whereby the body has similar stature to that of the Immigration Appeals Tribunal. The attached Regulations provide the teeth necessary to allow the body to function in an autonomous manner.

The economy is doing well and whilst the deficiencies in the Law affect licence holders or persons desirous of getting a transport license in good or bad economy, we find today that many Caymanians are affected because they want to get into the transport business. The smallest of an issue at times affect them. We have had persons with a conviction who got a license while others were turned down. My advice is that the Cabinet cannot be the appellate body therefore it is judicious for us to have an established appellate body to deal with such matters and address the concerns of various applicants and matters connected to transport.

Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker.

The National Gender Policy

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for Community Services, Youth, Sports and Gender Affairs.

Dr. the Hon. Frank S. McField: Mr. Speaker, and Members of the Legislative Assembly it gives me great pleasure to present to the Honourable House, the Cayman Islands National Policy on Gender Equity and Equality.

The Speaker: So ordered. Would the Honourable Minister wish to speak thereto?

Dr. the Hon. Frank S. McField: Mr. Speaker, the Cayman Islands began work on the development of this document in June 2000 under the guidance of the Research and Development Team chaired by the Permanent Secretary of the Ministry and the assistance of two experienced external advisors. A list of the Research and Development Team (R&D Team) is attached to the Policy as Annex 4.

Many hours of research and dedication of the Research and Development Team, over a period of two and a half years went into this document. I would like to thank the advisors, the Research and Development Team and the Ministry's staff for their dedication in getting this document to the Legislative Assembly.

I would especially like to mention Mrs. Marilyn Conolly, the First Officer responsible for Women's Affairs (now renamed Gender Affairs), for her dedication in the initial stages, and Miss Estella Scott, and Mrs Tammy Ebanks-Bishop for seeing this project through to its final stages of development.

However, none of this would have been possible without the Government and the full support of the Legislative Assembly. I would like to thank the two lady Members of the Legislative Assembly, both of whom were Ministers during the development of this Policy—the Honourable Juliana O'Connor-Connolly, JP and Ms Edna Moyle, JP for their dedication to gender issues.

Mention would also be made of the various women who served in this Honourable House and in their communities, many of whom have passed away and who were instrumental in insuring that the rights of women and families were always at the forefront of the needs of the people of the Cayman Islands. Special mention of these women is made on pages 23 to 35 of the document.

The development and production of this policy by the Cayman Islands Government is a significant milestone towards sustainable human development in our country. We can proudly be recognised as the first Caribbean country to produce a gender policy document. Gender equity is the process of being fair to women and men. Despite the effort made by the Government in the public sector there is still some work to be done, both in public and private to ensure that women and men are operating on a level playing field. This policy seeks to improve gender awareness among policy makers, planners, implementers and the general public in order to achieve equity, equality for men and women, boys and girls.

The ability to view issues from a gender perspective is imperative if policy makers, planners, administrators and society at large are to understand the underlying causes and find adequate long-term solutions for crucial national and global issues such as labour, trade and immigration migration problems.

Implementation of this Policy will produce a partnership between our men and women, not a division. Therefore politicians and the people of the Cayman Islands must see this as a positive undertaking, for the future depends on maintaining mutual respect between women and men who raise our families, which are the foundations upon which our country will continue to develop.

Mr. Speaker and Members of the Legislative Assembly, I would now like to draw your attention to the major issues and highlights of this Policy.

Part A : The Policy Framework and Formulation Process of the Cayman Islands National Policy on Gender Equity and Equality.

This part covers the following sections:

Section 1 – Principles, Vision and Aims

- Pages 8-16, covers the principles, vision and aims of the Policy. Important aspects of this section are the strategic objectives of the Gender Policy on pages 11 and 12.

- The strategies to achieve policy objectives – pages 12 and 13.
- The role of the National Machinery and the roles of other institutions – pages 14 to 16.

Section 2 – The Consultation Process

- Pages 17-19, explains the consultation process that was carried out to produce this document. Annex 3 at the back of the Policy document shows the wide range of persons and organisations that were consulted during the formulation of the Policy. It also outlines other consultative means of information gathering for the Policy.

Part B

The Local and International Climate

- Pages 20-42, this part covers the enabling environment, section 3 and the international context, section 4.

Section 3 – The Enabling Environment

As mentioned in the introduction, section 3 speaks of the efforts made in getting the issues of women and families brought to the stage that we are at now in the Cayman Islands.

We all are aware of the importance of the Caymanian women in keeping many of the families strong and I am sure that many of us are aware of the saying: “the hands that rock the cradle rule the world”. I do believe that we join the rest of the world with saying that our women rank with some of the strongest, smartest and most competent in the world. I will not single out any of these women mentioned as they all played vital roles in advancing the Cayman Islands to the stage where we can have a policy that deals specifically with gender issues. I would like to thank them all from the bottom of my heart for their stalwart and selfless efforts.

This section also speaks to the establishment of the Woman’s Resource Centre on pages 35-37. I would like to publicly thank the program manager, Mrs. Tammy Ebanks-Bishop and her staff, as well as the many volunteers and donors for making this an important and effective part of our struggle to equip women to deal with issues surrounding families, many of whom are working mothers. On this I would like to reiterate that this Centre will continue to be called the Women’s Resource Centre as a specific, if not exclusive needs of women, such as child maintenance and domestic abuse are still, unfortunately, existent in our society.

I do, however, recognise that there are issues and needs of our men that we must address and to this end I am in the process of developing a family and parenting centre, which will address many of the needs of the family. In addition, as the Policy calls for a male support officer to be part of the gender management team on pages 74, 75, and 77, I am quite competent that in implementing this Policy the issues that affect the men will also be addressed.

Section 4 – The International Context

Section 4 speaks to the international context. Of particular importance is the Convention for the Elimination of All Forms of Discrimination Against Women (CEDAW), which is covered on pages 38, 39, 40, 41, and 42 of the document. I am pleased to inform this Honourable House that I will be seeking your support in having this Convention extended to the Cayman Islands during this sitting of the House.

Part C

Analysis, Policy and Implementation

This is the most important part of this document as it clearly outlines what is needed in order to ensure that this Policy is implemented. Of importance is section 6, the Cayman Islands Policy and Gender Equity and Equality pages 53-71. This section clearly outlines what is required from various sectors of our society for this Policy to be fully implemented.

These sectors include the family, household, housing, immigration, labour, health, education, religion and constitutional and legislative framework.

Section 7 – Strategies for Implementation

Section 7 outlines the strategies for implementation pages 72-77. This is summarised in Annex 2 - Action Plan and Indicator Matrix.

In conclusion I would like to again thank all the persons that were instrumental in getting this Policy to the Legislative Assembly. I would like to thank my colleagues of the Cabinet for their support in having this document brought to the Legislative Assembly.

Mr. Speaker and Members of the Legislative Assembly I thank you for your support in having this document supported by the Legislative Assembly and we look forward to seeing this Policy implemented. Thank you.

STATEMENTS BY MEMBERS/MINISTERS OF THE CABINET

The Speaker: I have received no statements by Honourable Members or Ministers of the Cabinet.

GOVERNMENT BUSINESS

BILLS

Suspension of Standing Orders 45, 46(1), (2) and (4) and 47 to allow the Bills to be read a first, second and third time

The Speaker: I call on the Honourable Deputy Leader of Government Business to move the suspension of Standing Orders 45, 46(1), (2) and (4) and 47 to allow the Bills to be read a first, second and third time.

Hon. Gilbert A. McLean: Mr. Speaker, I beg to move the suspension of Standing Orders 45, 46(1), (2) and (4) and 47 to allow the Bills to be read a first, second and third time.

The Speaker: The question is that Standing Orders 45, 46(1), (2) and (4) and 47 be suspended to allow the Bills to be read a first, second and third time. All those in favour please say Aye. Those against, No.

Ayes and Noes.

The Speaker: The Ayes have it.

Hon. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Mr. Speaker, could we have a Division please?

The Speaker: Madam Clerk.

Division No. 1/04

The Clerk: 6 Ayes, 4 Noes and 7 Absentees

The Speaker: The Motion is carried for the suspension on the results of 6 Ayes, 4 Noes and 7 Absentees.

Agreed by majority: Standing Orders 45, 46 (1), (2) and (4) and 47 suspended.

FIRST READINGS

The Penal Code (Amendment) Bill 2004

The Speaker: The Bill has been deemed to have been read a first time and is set down for Second Reading.

The Elections (Amendment) Bill 2004

The Speaker: The Bill has been deemed to have been read a first time and is set down for Second Reading.

SECOND READINGS

The Penal Code (Amendment) Bill 2004

The Speaker: The Honourable Second Official Member.

Hon. Samuel W. Bulgin: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I beg to move for the second reading of a bill entitled a Bill for a Law to amend the Penal Code 1995 (Revision) and for Incidental Purposes.

The Speaker: The Bill has been duly moved, does the Honourable Mover wish to speak thereto?

Hon. Samuel W. Bulgin: Yes, Mr. Speaker, thank you.

I must apologise to Honourable Members for the relatively short notice in taking this particular Bill, but I think circumstances cannot be attributed to anyone in this House why this matter is being dealt with now, and it is probably to our credit that we are seeking to address what is a long outstanding issue and to bring closure to this matter.

This matter has its genesis in a number of select committees in this Honourable House and a number of recommendations were made in the 1990's for the Penal Code to be amended. At the time, Honourable Members put forward very useful suggestions which would enhance the capabilities of the investigative, prosecutorial and indeed judicial arm of these Islands to deal with certain criminal matters, thus enhancing the criminal justice system and the legal systems.

The recommendations were put forward and enacted in the 1998 Penal Code. They are as relevant now as then. However, in the 1998 Penal Code Amendment Law which was assented to on the 19th of this month, there was a particular provision which would have the effect of abolishing common law offences. After the Law was passed and before it was assented to there were conflicting views as to the correctness, for the want of a better word, of seeking to abolish common law offences and so there were ongoing debates, and at the end of the day, the Bill was never assented to.

A decision has been taken, by the Government that it would be unwise to seek to abolish common law offences. It is a tool that every civilised society wishes to have up its sleeve in dealing with crime. So, in order to address the issue, the amending Penal Code Bill before this Honourable House, when it is enacted, has the effect of repealing section 3 of the 1998 Penal Code (Amendment) Law, which has the effect of abolishing common law offences. Therefore, it was thought that it was best to bring the 1998 Bill into affect virtue of assent by His Excellency the Acting Governor and seek to enact this Amendment Bill, which would remedy the problem this contravenes without common law offences and hence the whole objective of the Bill currently before this House.

Mr. Speaker, I need not remind Honourable Members that the 1998 Penal Code Amendment has some extremely useful provisions, for example, if a person is found guilty by committing a category A offence for the second time, the Court may in its discretion sentence that person to imprisonment for life for that second offence. There are also provisions dealing with obtaining services by deception, obtaining a money transfer by deception; provisions which in today's commercial world are very important. We have incidents of mortgage fraud taking place globally and in some instances we have our own problems domestically. So, these provisions are aimed at addressing contemporary issues. I therefore seek the concurrence of Honourable Members of this House in putting forward and agreeing to the enactment of this Bill.

I must also say that during the hiatus, between 1998 and 2004 there were certain amendments that were made to the Penal Code, a number of them are dealing with sexual offences concerning young people. Those amendments were made and are in effect since 2000 and 2001. Although they were also reflected in the 1998 Law what will happen is that when the 1998 Law is brought into force, because it is a later Law, there will be implied repeals and so where there are duplications they will be addressed by way of a revision exercise and avoid difficulty with duplications and so on.

Mr. Speaker that in a nut shell is the spirit and intendment of the Bill before the House and I seek the concurrence of Honourable Members in its passage.

The Speaker: Does any other Member wish to speak? The Honourable Leader of the Opposition.

Hon. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Thank you.

Mr. Speaker, lest it be misunderstood, the Opposition's vote of no for the suspension of Standing Orders to allow the two Government Bills to come forward, and in dealing specifically with the Penal Code (Amendment) Bill was not because we did not welcome not only the fact that the 1998 Law will come into effect, but the fact of the matter is that we have a very serious question with the regards to the procedure.

The Honourable Second Official Member has outlined the reasoning for the new amendment to the Law and we understand that. We understand the difficulty with the original repeal of the words common law, which would cause for voids in certain areas. So, this new amendment brings back the words common law into section 2A so that it fills the gaps that were created. However, the coveting letter, first of all, the 1998 Penal Code amending legislation, we have just seen it this morning, and the covering letter says: "To All Honourable Ministers, Official Members and Elected Members of the Legislative Assembly: Attached is the copy of the 1998 Penal Code which the 2004 legislation (circulated on Business Paper No. 9) proposes to amend.

I have been advised by the Attorney General that the Law was assented to on Monday, 19 July 2004. Although the Law has not yet been gazetted the Honourable Attorney General desires the amending Bill to come forward as soon as possible." The Honourable Second Official Member explained that in his presentation.

If we look in the Interpretation Law section 15(1) reads: "Every Law shall, unless it is otherwise therein expressly provided, come into operation on the day of the publication of the notification of assent." What we are not sure of is if procedure actually allows for us to be doing what we are doing now. This Law has not been gazetted as the cover letter has said and the Interpretation Law speaks to notification of the assent.

My understanding, and I could be incorrect, is that the publication of the notification of assent would be the gazette. I do not know any other method where the notification of assent is published, so there is a question there. Under the Memorandum of Objects and Reasons of the new Bill, the very last line says: "This Bill will come into force immediately after the 1998 Law comes into force." We need to know whether the 1998 Law is in force or not and go back to the Interpretation Law and understand whether this can be done.

If the 1998 Law is interpreted that it has come into force on the Governor's assent and this piece of Legislation says the Bill will come into force immediately after the 1998 Law comes into force, then what we are expected to do is pass retrospective and retroactive legislation, if that is the case; I am not saying that is the case.

So, if as the letter states, the Law was assented on 19 July 2004, today being 21 July 2004, therefore we are only speaking of two days but it is two days. If that is the case, perhaps one may say that we should be looking at this, but what happens to an offence that was committed between then and now?

Mr. Speaker, there is another point and I will come to that but I was just making the point that it is entirely up to what the proper interpretation is. 1. If it is interpreted that the Law came into force when it was assented to on the 19th and the fact is that what is before us is on the 21st and it is said that this amending piece of legislation will come into force immediately after the 1998 Law comes into force—I will quickly repeat that. If it is interpreted that the Law came into force when it was assented to on 19 July 2004 then this amending legislation which is suppose to come into effect immediately after that Law comes into force causes for it to be two days retroactive; that may not seem to be a point but the Honourable Second Official Member needs to address that. If that is not the case, and the 1998 piece of legislation has not come into force yet, but will only come into force upon publication of notification of assent, which we interpret to be the gazette, then we are dealing with amending a piece of legislation that has not come into effect. I do not believe that we can do that.

If we look at the Interpretation Law, to make the point clearer, I quoted section 15(1) I will now quote section 14 to have a clearer understanding. Section 14 reads: “In the case of every Bill, which may hereafter may be passed in the Islands the Governor shall, on assenting thereto, or on to receiving official intimation that the Bill has been duly assented to, cause a notification of such assent to be gazetted.” Clearly section 14 speaks to the gazette.

Section 15(1) reads: “Every Law shall, unless it is otherwise therein expressly provided, come into operation on the day of the publication of the notification of assent.” We are dealing with two pieces of legislation. The 1998 legislation has run its natural course and was assented to on 19 July 2004. There was no indication in that Law—as in this Bill, which specifically states: “This Bill will come into force immediately after the 1998 Law comes into force.” The point cannot be argued with this Bill but the fact that, as I understand from the cover letter where it reads: “Although the Law has not yet been gazetted” we are to assume that the Law is not yet gazetted therefore we have to assume that the Law is not in force. So how can we amend a law that is not in force? That is my question.

If it has been gazetted since we received this letter then maybe we do not have a point, but I am going by the information that is in front of us. The point about being retroactive is a valid point because on many occasions we have had to argue that and the principle that is always applied is that retroactive legislation as a rule, is a no, no.

I remember a case many years ago, in my early days in this Honourable Legislative Assembly, when a Bill was brought to amend a Law; it had to do with a yacht being seized by the Court. I do not remember the details of it but retrospective legislation had to be passed for it to be legal to seize the yacht with some drug business or something. That is the only time I remember this Honourable Legislative Assembly getting together and understanding the specific circumstances, agreeing unanimously to retrospective legislation.

This situation, in my view, is not similar and should not run that course. What I argue may seem to be of no consequence but we have to be absolutely clear in what we are doing. As I said, we are only going by the information that has been handed to us today so we will have to hear what the Government or the Honourable Attorney General says in order for the matter to be cleared up.

Clearly for it to be into force the 1998 Law has to be gazetted. So, unless it has been gazetted since the letter then the point needs to be addressed.

Thank you.

The Speaker: The Honourable Leader of Government Business.

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

I intend to be brief. What we understand is that the 1998 Law had not been assented to but on Monday, 19 July 2004, it was assented to and as the House saw it, they got the Bill in May. So, the Bill was here from May.

The Members of the House did not get the Bill until this week but a law will come into force when it is gazetted. The importance of what we are doing here is that it becomes law when the Governor assents to it. The publication is only to say it has been assented to. From what I understand of something being retrospective is when we backdate something and we are not doing that. So, Mr. Speaker, perhaps it is a storm in a teacup.

The Speaker: Does any other Member wish to speak? Does any other Member wish to speak? Does any other Member wish to speak? If not would the Honourable Second Official Member wish to exercise his right of reply?

Hon. Samuel W. Bulgin: Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

Before I respond, may I point out that I have given notice of a Committee Stage Amendment to deal with the transitional provision?

I have listened to the observations of the Honourable Leader of the Opposition. The position is and has always been that a bill becomes law when it is assented to by the Governor. Section 39 of the Constitution says: “A Bill shall not become a law until (a) the Governor has assented to it in Her Majesty’s name and on Her Majesty’s behalf and has signed it in token of his assent; or (b) Her Majesty has given Her assent to it through a Secretary of State and the Governor has signified Her assent by a Proclamation.” That is, in itself, a complete act; that is when it becomes a law and cannot be changed. Section 39 of the Constitution says that it becomes law when it is assented to by the Governor. The publication of it merely signifies to the public that it is in operation. It is a notification to all in sundry that henceforth, and as of this day, the law that has been assented to by the Governor on the 19 July, is now in operation.

Mr. Speaker, we are not unmindful that the issue might be raised. As a matter of fact, when the Bill came to this House in May, and since it has been here, there has been correspondence between my office, the Legislative Drafting Department and the Clerk of this Legislative Assembly, as to how best to address this matter and deal with it, and our research took us all the way to the UK. They were kind enough to write back to us and say to us in terms and I am paraphrasing that there is nothing to prevent the Bill from being debated even though the Penal Code Law has not been assented to. There is a question as to what is the best practice, but there is nothing unconstitutional about the issue; there is nothing unlawful and there is no issue as to retrospection in those circumstances respectfully.

May I make the point about retrospection because I have heard it being said on the Floor of this Honourable House on numerous occasions that there cannot be retrospective legislation; that is not what the Law says. The law has always been that a law ought not to be interpreted or deemed to be retrospective unless the Legislative Assembly expressly so provides. The Legislative Assembly can make retrospective legislation but it must be expressly so provide. The caveat is always in respect of criminal matters because there is a canon of interpretation, which says it is undesirable to have a retrospective criminal offence so that a person is not prosecuted for committing an offence when on the date when the offence or transaction took place it was not an offence.

The law has always been that it can be retrospective as long as the Parliament expressly so provides. That has always been the canon of construction, but in this case the issue does not arise because the Law was assented to on 19 July and it becomes Law and the publication of it and the notification to the public as to the existence of it is what the gazette is all about. It is a procedural requirement.

So, I hope I have laid the fears of the Leader of the Opposition in that regard but there is nothing either in Erskine May, the Constitution or Standing Orders, which says that it is unlawful and constitutional undesirable practice to amend a law that has not yet been in operation. I use the word "law" advisedly because it is a Law as of the 19th. Once it is a Law it can be amended and that is what is being done here. I am sure, Mr. Speaker, you are not unmindful of the recent incident where the Public Management and Finance Law where certain provision of it were amended before it came into effect. It was a law but was not published but amended to deal with certain incidents interpretation sections. I am only saying that it is not unprecedented and it is not unconstitutional or illegal. It is a Law, it is amended and what will happen is that it is hoped that there would be at least a day that separates the publication of both of them.

What we are trying to avoid is to have a situation where we go months or weeks without having common law offences on our books, because God forbid that something happens, which is not covered by the four corners of the Penal Code, then a useful fall back has always been the Common Law and so we would like to have that as part of our fall back position.

So, what is hoped is that the 1998 Penal Code (Amendment) Law will be gazetted probably a day before the 2004 amendment, if it is enacted, so that the period of hiatus would not be so great as to cause any lacuna in our crime fighting. Thank you.

[Pause]

Hon. Samuel W. Bulgin: May I just crave your indulgence, Mr. Speaker? Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

The proposed amendment speaks for itself. What we are hoping to do is to make sure that with the passage of the 2004 Amending Law and the coming into effect of the 1998 Law, that no trial, which is currently ongoing, would be affected by any of those amendments so that the position of persons who are currently before the court will not in any way be prejudice by any of these amendments. They are perspective rather than anything else. We are trying to preserve a person's position up to the date of the coming into effect of these laws.

Whatever the system, penalty and provisions are as at the date of the amendment, those defendants or accused persons will continue to enjoy those rights as they existed prior to the date of these amendments, and hence no retrospection.

The Speaker: Honourable Members having read the Interpretation Law (1995 Revision) I am inclined to concur with the explanation given by the Second Official Member, especially on the strict reading of section 15(1) of the Interpretation Law which states: "Every Law shall, unless it is otherwise therein expressly provided, come into operation on the day of the publication of the notification of assent." I understand the point being raised on the question of the publication of the notification of assent but I am also mindful of the section which states: "Unless it is otherwise therein expressly provided", which in the Bill it states that this Law will come into force immediately after the 1998 Law comes into force, which is expressly worded.

I have no hesitation in supporting the explanation that has been given by the Honourable Second Official Member.

Accordingly I propose to put the question on the Bill at this time. The question is that a Bill shortly entitled the Penal Code (Amendment) Bill 2004 be given a Second Reading. All those in favour please say Aye. Those against, No.

Ayes.

Agreed. The Penal Code (Amendment) Bill 2004 read a second time.

The Elections (Amendment) Bill, 2004

The Speaker: The Honourable First Official Member.

Hon Donovan W. F. Ebanks: Mr. Speaker, I beg to move the Second Reading of the Elections (Amendment) Bill, 2004.

The Speaker: The Bill has been duly moved. Does the Mover wish to speak thereto?

Hon. Donovan W. F. Ebanks: Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

Unlike the previous Law that was being dealt with, I am sure all Honourable Members are fully familiar with the Election Law because of the rules of the game that get people here, and in this pre Olympic/pre Election season obviously all contenders are very much aware and interested in any changes to those rules.

We think that the Bill being brought to the House today is one that will enhance the Election process. I do not expect that it will provide all that each Member may wish to see in terms of changes, but I think that the net effect will be a better Law and hopefully for a more efficient process.

As a bit of background, there was an independent review commissioned by the Supervisor of Elections after the last election. The Supervisor and his staff have always been keen to try and learn from the experiences of each election, I think that we all agree that these Islands are fortunate to have well established organisation and machinery that manages the election process. To this end a gentleman by the name of Mr. Carl Dondus who is a very prominent authority, both regionally and internationally, visited and in consultation with the supervisor's office, produced a report making various recommendations on possible changes and the Government endorsed the sharing of these recommendations with all Members. I think all Members some time ago had an opportunity to see that range of suggestions that were being put to the Government and obviously, what is in the Bill today is not a duplicate of that. The Government has listened to the reaction of Members and while there were things in the Report that some Members would have wished and things that others did not agree with, the Government has taken its position of what we feel is the most essential and appropriate changes to look at and make at this stage. That does not preclude the fact that other changes can be made in the future, but the changes being suggested now are aimed at generally remedying some of the deficiencies and improving the overall timeliness and expediency of dealing with election, and in particular, the results after. There are some other changes and I will touch on them briefly.

It is proposed to make clear provision for the appointment of more than one deputy supervisor, and in fact, to appoint three, one of whom would be responsible for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman and eliminate the need for a supervisor to be scuttling to and from here to Cayman Brac to perform certain functions.

One of the most significant areas when I mentioned efficiency and expediencies, the whole situation whereby in a country this size it has taken us about 24-27 hours to get the results in the two larger districts. That certainly seems unacceptable for a jurisdiction that is outstanding on other areas such as business and governance as a whole to be still having to take that long to arrive at the results at an election.

To this end it is proposed to appoint additional deputy returning officers and provide for the establishment of additional counting stations so that ballots can be counted at more than one counting station in an electoral district at the same time and those results can then be assimilated.

The Election Office feels that with these provisions a 24 to 27 hours wait can be reduced to within 6 hours and hopefully by midnight on the day of elections, even in those two larger districts, we can have results. That would certainly be a worthwhile accomplishment and a tremendous relief for both electors and candidates in those districts.

There is also a requirement that the revised electoral list is posted on a website to be decided by the Supervisor of Elections, but basically a requirement to make information that previously had been available only in a physical visible form at an office or some other prescribed location is to be made available electronically. Related to that likewise, a provision that allows the Supervisor of Elections to, at a cost commencing with the provision of the register or a copy of the register, to make such copies available for sale to those who may wish the convenience of having their own rather than having to go look at it somewhere else or print it off a computer, or whatever. It is basically to cater to the fact that some people would wish the convenience of having a list. The information is public information so why not provide it at a cost commensurate with producing it.

There are also provisions for the registration of political parties, which are now relevant and required. There are new provisions in relation to election expenses, some of those provisions are aimed at clarifying the period to which expenses relate. The current Law had a very cumbersome definition of 110 days before during and after, whereas it is aimed now to be very clear that expenses become relevant when a candidate becomes a candidate, which is the nomination day. There is a set period after the date that the results are determined within which claims are to be made (21 days after the results are determined), which closes off the period when expenses can be lodged. There is also similar clarity to when the time frame within which those are to be settled, which is within 7 days after that or 28 days after the result, and also, a very rigid provision in terms of a requirement for the reporting of expenses to the Elections Office within a further 7 days. There are also penalties introduced for those who contravene any of these whether elected or not.

A provision is there to ensure that individuals do not seek to be candidates in more than one electoral district, as unfortunately, is possible under the Law, as it currently stands. There is also a provision to regulate political broadcasts, which have become very popular and quite appropriately so. The expanse to the audio/video media has afforded the opportunity for a lot of people who previously may have found it impractical or difficult, for whatever reason, to attend political meetings, to now see and hear what goes on. This provision is simply intended to afford some basic discipline as to what is allowable and not allowable, and hopefully to ensure the quality of . . . perhaps not to ensure, but the potential by-product is to the extent that we regulate what is broadcast and we will enhance the quality of what previously had not been broadcasted. Hopefully our meetings will be conducted obviously at a standard that meets the broadcast standard.

Mr. Speaker, none of these provisions that were mentioned impact electors or voters directly, and even though it is relatively late in the day that we are bringing these amendments, we do not foresee the need to embark on any major public education campaign, or that the changes will in anyway negatively impact the ability of people to take part in the process as they have always done. Rather they are aimed at enhancing the machinery and improving the efficiency of it.

At the outset I said that there are some changes that some Members would like to have seen that are not a part of this package. I trust that the Members would find the package overall one that can only make the process better and that they in turn will support the Bill.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: Does any other Member wish to speak? The Honourable Leader of the Opposition.

Point of clarification

Hon. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Craving your indulgence, not to speak but for an explanation.

We have met on more than one occasion as an informal committee about this matter and the last time that we met I understood that there were several changes to be made to the document that we received. I say this looking you squarely in the eye, Sir—we do not know what to debate because we do not know what the final product is that the Government is bringing. Is it the document that we received and nothing more? If so, that changes the picture and we would very much like to know that before we participate.

The Speaker: The document that has been given the Second Reading has been moved by the First Official Member and is the document before the House. I would however, ask the Honourable First Official Member if he would wish to make a comment based on the point raised by the Honourable Leader of the Opposition.

Hon. Donovan W. F. Ebanks: Thank you, Mr. Speaker, and I thank the Honourable Leader of the Opposition for making the observation that he made.

At the meeting which he referred to yesterday afternoon, there was an undertaking that there were a couple of changes that would be put forward as committee stage amendments and I have belatedly, this morning, tabled with the Clerk two such amendments which he may have not seen as of yet.

The Speaker: Thank you Honourable First Official Member. Does any other Member wish to speak?

The amendment spoken of by the Honourable First Official Member is now in circulation. Does any other Member wish to speak?

Hon. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Mr. Speaker, if I may?

The Speaker: Please continue.

Hon. D. Kurt Tibbetts: I crave your indulgence as this is an important matter and we would like to debate from an informed position. The proposed Committee Stage Amendments while they are Committee Stage Amendments may well have specific bearing on our line of debate and our content of debate. So, if you would permit, Sir, to take the luncheon break, which would give us an opportunity to have sight of these amendments and be able to place our thoughts in perspective.

The Speaker: The request made by the Honourable Leader of the Opposition is a reasonable one.

I will accordingly take the luncheon break at this time to allow Members to study the amendments that are now being circulated of which they have not yet had the opportunity to study and we will resume at 2.30 pm.

Proceedings suspended at 12.33 pm

Proceedings resumed at 3.17 pm

The Speaker: Proceedings are resumed.

The continuation of debate on the Elections (Amendment) Bill 2004. Does any other Member wish to speak?

The Second Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. Alden M. McLaughlin, Jr.: Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

There is before this Honourable House a Bill shortly entitled the Elections (Amendment) Law 2004. As I commence the debate on this important Bill, the elections are, by my calculations, 119 days away.

We were delivered a copy of this Bill on Monday afternoon (just passed). Notwithstanding the fact that the issues in relation to the current Elections Law have been well known to all of us in this Honourable House and to the Elections Office for a long time. I have in my possession a document shortly entitled "Comments on the draft amendments to the Elections Law" that bears on its last page the following, Carl W. Dundas, Election Consultant, 1 September 2003. I also have in my possession, Mr. Speaker, a document entitled "Memorandum to the Permanent Secretary, Planning, Communications, District Administrations and Information Technology" copied to the Honourable Acting Chief Secretary from the First Legislative Council, dated 11 December 2003. Subject: The Elections (Amendment) Bill 2004. Attached to it is a document which has at its top: "Preliminary Draft—This Draft does not contain any amendments relating to electoral district constituencies—10 December 2003."

I have been struggling in my mind to recall when these documents were handed to us by representatives of the Elections Office and the Legislative Council, and discussions first ensued about proposed amendments to the Elections Law. I am reminded by my colleague, the Elected Member of East End that it was in March of this year. I say all of that to say that it is nothing short of a disgrace. Forget about the disservice, inconvenience, difficulty to us the Elected Members on this side of the House, Members of the Opposition, for us to have yet again to deal with a matter of such importance, 119 days before the Election, on such short notice.

Why is it that it has been left by this Government on virtually the eve of the Elections, to now come with substantial amendments to the Elections Law? We were elected more than three and a half years ago. Then they send the poor Deputy Chief Secretary, the Honourable Acting First Official Member, to this Honourable House to present this Bill, thereby, in my view, giving the impression that this has nothing to do with the elected Government, this is the official arm of Government doing this, but we all know better!

What is before us is what the United Democratic Government wants to happen. The delays which has occurred; the rush which has become one of their trademarks in relation to important legislation is their responsibility and no one should proceed on any other premise. We are left to believe and to feel that they think that there is some tactical advantage in springing this sort of legislation on the Opposition, rushing it through the House suspending Standing Orders to obtain what they think are the best provisions in this Elections Law.

There are a number of proposed changes, which in the short time that I have had to look at this and from discussions with the Deputy Supervisor of Elections and other Members of staff, we certainly understand are important and necessary to make the functions of the Elections Office and the operations, particularly on elections day, that much easier, more effective and also assist with protecting the integrity of the whole process. However, our point is that these changes ought to have been brought to this House a long time ago. I am not going to deal with those, what I shall term, technical amendments to the Law; I simply have not had the time to analyse them in the way that I would like. Some of my colleagues on this side will no doubt have their comments to make and will address some of these, but I can say that by and large we understand their importance and the need for them and those particular provisions do have our support.

In our view, there are two fundamentally important areas that I am going to address. The first is the absence from this Bill of any provision to deal with mobile polling stations. In the comments on the draft amendment to the Elections Law, which appears to have been prepared by Mr. Carl Dundas, the Election Consultant—it certainly bares his name at the end of the page, although it is not signed—there are some very useful comments, observations and recommendations.

He notes on page 2 that, quote, "The concept of mobile polling stations is well known and widely used in different jurisdictions for different reasons. It may be for topographical reasons or increasingly to offer better quality election service to remote dwellers, the disabled or the infirmed. The key elements of the successful use of mobile polling have been taken into account, in particular, appointment of teams and team leaders for the purpose. Timely publication of the times and places when voters can expect to attend these stations and the voting materials and supplies necessary for the station's operation." So, when Mr. Dundas made those observations he also attached to that document some proposed amendments, which would give effect if accepted to those recommendations.

If you would give me a moment, Sir, to turn to the section that relates to mobile voting, I will read what the proposed amendment was. I am quoting from that text and it says: "Mobile polling stations may be used to take the poll at a hospital, rest home or other such institution or geriatrics at home. The supervisor subject to the approval of the Governor may appoint persons to be mem- bers of a mobile polling team and in respect of each team, a person to be a team leader. The supervisor may by notice published in the gazette:

- A. At any time determine the places that will be visited by the mobile teams,
- B. Determine the time of the visit to each such place,
- C. Give public notice of the times and places.

“Each Mobile team when it is in place for the purpose of taking votes in an election shall have ballot boxes, ballot papers and such things that are necessary for the votes of electors to be taken.

“Every registered person listed at the mobile station is entitled to have his or her vote taken.”

Sub-section (5) of the proposed section – “Agents of candidates and political parties shall be entitled to be present at the voting at every mobile polling station.”

So, there is their set out in a very lucid and logical way, provision for what I think is a very useful proposition, the creation of mobile polling stations.

For reasons which I am sure are known only to the Government, that very forward thinking and very progressive provision is omitted from the Bill, which is before this Honourable House. The question is why? Why is the Government resisting such a provision? We all know who have been around the elections process for any length of time and I have been involved in every election campaign since 1992, that one of the most troublesome, difficult, time consuming, and one of the areas that is most fraught with suspicion is the whole question of postal ballots.

The provision in our legislation which would have permitted mobile polling stations would to a large extent mitigate and alleviate those concerns. It would significantly reduce the number of postal ballots which are cast, and for those of us who have been involved in the counting process we know the length of time it takes to count postal ballots; it is a very involved process. Further, Mr. Speaker, I know this one from personal experience, the postal ballot system does permit persons to know who voted for whom. I am not asking anybody if that is the case. I can relate to an incident which occurred during the last election campaign that brought a tear to my eye; it was a very poignant moment for me because I knew a person who had died since she voted, who had voted for me and I knew by virtue of that process which vote was hers. The reason I knew was because of the witnesses. I knew because I had spoken to her a week before she died, I knew where she was and who lived in the house with her and during that process of counting postal ballots the persons who signed the forms their names were read and I knew that was her ballot. That is a fact, as I said it brought a tear to my eye as she was very dear to me but it told me that the process that we have— nothing to do with the Elections Office being right or wrong, it is that the system which we have does permit, if you know certain information you can know who voted for whom, as far as the postal ballots are concerned.

There is absolutely no reason why we should not seize this innovation of mobile polling stations, which will permit the Elections Office and their staff and agents of candidates or candidates themselves to go around at prearrange times in advance of Election Day to places like the Pines, Hospital and places like the Sunrise Cottage in East End and elsewhere where people have great difficulty in being able to get out. To shut-ins at homes people would be given advance notice that this is going to happen and that they ought to make an application to the Supervisor of Elections to be permitted to vote in advance of Elections Day at a mobile polling station. It is something that is done in other parts of the world; it is a recommendation by Mr. Dundas, the Election Consultant to whom we have paid good money for good advice.

The Speaker: Honourable Member I need to enquire whether that document has yet been tabled in the House. I am not sure if it is available to all Honourable Members. If not, I would ask the Honourable Second Elected Member for George Town to table it.

Mr. Alden M. McLaughlin, Jr: Thank you, Mr. Speaker, I am happy to do that. Just to explain, this is something that was handed to all Elected Members who were present when the discussions took place. I think all Members do have it but nonetheless, I am happy to table it, Sir.

The Speaker: Thank you very much.

Mr. Alden M. McLaughlin, Jr: Mr. Speaker, in the document which was just tabled, there is an indication that countries which have used mobile polling stations include India, Malaysia, Guyana, Australia, Namibia and Zambia, but that is not the entire extent of countries that have employed this innovation. We know on this side from a recent visit to Dominica, when Members of the Opposition attended the funeral of the late Prime Minister, Pierre Charles, that they were then in the process, at that time, of conducting mobile voting, two weeks in advance of the by-elections which would be held to replace him upon his sad demise.

So, it is employed in the region and I have not heard one creditable reason proffered as to why it ought not to be employed in Cayman. I have been around the elections process as long as I can remember. My grandfather served many years as a vestryman in this Honourable House, my uncle Haig, and many more as well. From the moment I was old enough to be involved I was involved in one way or another, and I am well aware of the rumours of untoward practices that occur in certain districts in relation to postal ballots.

I remember a scandal, of course, in these things most of the time nothing is ever found, but I remember well a scandal, quite some years ago when there were allegations that postal ballots were being sent to a certain candidate's post box in West Bay. If this proposal for mobile polling stations were employed it would limit the extent of the use of postal ballots, it would restrict the opportunity and occasion for suspicion and concern about the use of postal ballots to wrongly influence the result of an election. The public would be far more content as a result of that. It would reduce the length of time it took to count postal ballots following the taking of the poll on Election Day.

There are numerous reasons, everyone good, why this ought to be employed and I am hoping that at some point in this exercise the Government would explain why despite the far reaching provisions, some of which I will come to shortly, that are being proposed in this Elections Amendment Bill, why something as innovative, useful, proven as a system of mobile polling station is not being proposed.

Mr. Speaker, I am not seeking to anticipate a motion which I am bringing to this Honourable House, but I am going to say that I am giving the Government notice now that the Opposition, with your permission, is going to propose an amendment to this Bill, which will include mobile polling stations.

Point of Procedure

Hon. Gilbert A. McLean: Mr. Speaker, on a matter of procedure.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Health Services.

Hon. Gilbert A. McLean: Mr. Speaker, I question the debate on the document which was prepared by the Boundaries Commissioner. That was not a document which had to go to Cabinet to be decided upon, it was but a report to the Supervisor of Elections and so it was not tabled in this House and the fact that it is tabled now I do not argue with. However, I think from a procedural point of view it needs to be noted that this is not a document on which Cabinet was required to take a decision and so it should not be implied that something was overlooked in terms of the procedure or the way it has been handled.

The Speaker: Honourable Minister I agree with the point that you have raised. If indeed this document has not received the approval of Cabinet then it is hardly a valid document to be brought to the House as Government's position.

I am not sure that the Honourable Member speaking was implying that it was indeed Government's position but a document that was prepared by Mr. Carl Dundas, and I believe the Honourable Member made that point that it was a document handed out at a meeting to members of the Legislative Assembly but has not yet received Government's approval.

We need to bear in mind when any reference is made to this that it is not Government's policy as yet but a report made by Mr. Carl Dundas, the Election Consultant to Government.

Please continue Second Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. Alden M. McLaughlin, Jr: Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

Just to clarify, Mr. Speaker, I have never suggested that it went to Cabinet or it was Government's policy. In fact, quite the opposite, my point was that notwithstanding this sage advice the Government appears by virtue of having omitted such a provision from the Bill to have rejected it.

No doubt the Minister who is very able will get up and articulate the Government's position when I sit down.

Mr. Speaker, I have been assisted by my colleagues who have pointed out to me that in the Memorandum, which I referred to a little earlier, to the Permanent Secretary of Planning, Communications, District Administration and Information Technology, copied to the Honourable Chief Secretary and the First Legislative Council on 11 December 2003 has attached to it a preliminary draft of the Elections Amendment Bill 2004 providing at section 45A for mobile polling stations to be part of our Law. So that everyone is clear, this is the draft that was presented to us when the Elections Office and the Legislative Council with the Government in attendance, and the Chief Secretary, attended a meeting Chaired by the Honourable Chief Secretary when we were over at Kirk House in March of this year.

So, the Government may use as many semantics and technical points as they wish but I think it is beyond doubt that at the very least they were fully aware of those provisions and the proposal that they be part of our Elections Law.

I think I have exhausted that point. The other matter which we take great issue with is the question of Election expenses. Election expense is a troublesome area all over the world when it comes to these matters. The current legislation I acknowledge right from the start, is one that is unsatisfactory, has led itself to much abuse and confusion and it ought to have been addressed a long time ago before we began the "silly season", which we are now in. the reason it lent itself to so much confusion, and I believe it has never had the effect that is ought to have, was for a number of reasons. To begin with, the sum to be spent by any candidate was limited to $10,000. Section 61 of the current Election Law says: "No sum shall be paid and no expense shall be incurred by a candidate at an election less than one hundred ten days before, during or after an election on account or respect of the conduct or management of the Election which will exceed in aggregate

$10,000 and a candidate knowingly acting in contravention of this section is guilty of an offence and liable in summary conviction to a fine of $5000."

It talks about any expense incurred by a candidate at an election less than one hundred and ten days before, during or after an election. So, it created a period of one hundred ten days before a certain date and one hundred ten days after; that date being the Election Day, whenever that was. The result of that was that you can go and spend as much money as you wished outside that one hundred and ten day period, pay for t-shirts, television coverage, bookings on the radio, advertisements in the newspaper or whatever, buy whatever paraphernalia you thought necessary to advance your cause in the campaign outside that one hundred and ten day period.

There was a further problem with it. It says in the definition section that a candidate means a person who is elected to serve in the Legislative Assembly at an election or a person who is nominated as a candidate at an election, or is declared by himself or others to be a candidate on or after the day of the issue of the writ for the election. So, as long as you were not a candidate you could spend as much money as you wanted to spend and you only became a candidate at the earliest when the writ of election was issued, which is seven days before nomination day.

There were no end of problems in terms of determining what money could be spent and when it could be spent as a result of the current situation. So, we acknowledged, in fact, from the day that I saw this, which was a long time ago, I remember I was asked to give an opinion on this in connection with the 1996 Elections. I have been of the view that this was very poor drafting; it certainly did nothing to restrict what persons could spend and created all sorts of confusion and concern. This needs to be fixed and should have been fixed a long time ago.

Having said that, Mr. Speaker, what is being proposed, in this legislation, is even more alarming. In my view, what is being proposed here is a license to spend as much money as you possibly can find and gather in the run up to elections and not have to account to a penny of it before nomination day. Anything spent before nomination day does not count and nomination day is a mere six weeks from election. Those of us who have been around this for any length of time we will know that virtually anything that you were going to spend or buy, you had better do so before nomination day because there will be no space left on the television for any advertising; you might get something squeezed into the newspaper. Every available minute that you can get on the radio—although these days I should perhaps not say that so categorically because it seems like every day we have another radio station. We should be able to find space on the radio stations so I will conceive that. However, what I would call the serious radio stations, will no doubt, well in advance of nomination day, have every available slot booked and paid for. This is the season when everybody involved in the media walks around with a permanent smile.

So, what is being proposed here is $35,000 per candidate, if you are standing alone, or $30,000 per candidate if you are standing as a part of the political party or team. For those who do not think that what they are trying to put together is going to be a political party, this legislation says that teams for all intents and purposes are political parties for the purposes of this Law.

In the multi member constituencies if you are running as a party or a team, it is going to be $30,000 per candidate and single member constituencies it is $35,000 per candidate. For George Town if you are running four candidates that is $120,000 available to spend from 6 October to 17 November and whatever you have spent before does not count. Further if it is a political party, which you are a part of, you then get to spend a further $10 per elector in your electoral district. George Town will have around 5000 voters that is another $50,000. So, in George Town the two political parties will be able to spend $170,000 between 6 October and 16 November.

Mr. Speaker, our view is that the Government is seeking to create a situation where they can throw loads and loads of money at this election campaign, in advance of nomination day and not have to account to the Supervisor of Elections or anyone for it. That is dangerous and those sorts of provisions ought not to appear in this Law. What we ought to be doing—

The Speaker: Honourable Member did I hear you say that was your opinion?

Mr. Alden M. McLaughlin, Jr: Yes, I said it is the view of the Opposition.

I see my friends on the other side getting very antsy, but those are our views.

In our view, what we ought to be doing is creating legislation which places a reasonable cap on election expenses; not the nonsensical $10,000 figure which appears in the current Law, but a reasonable figure which will place everybody on a level playing field with the sums that any party or independent can spend are the same and that any which is expended in furtherance of the election campaign is accounted for.

This charade which we are seeking to create in this Law ought not to be allowed and the Government ought to be ashamed to seek to introduce provisions in the Law, which have little or no effect at all on capping election expenses in reality! We are creating a system by which candidates are almost completely unaccountable to anyone from the sources which they get money, the amounts they get from an individual and how much they are going to spend in furtherance of the election campaign. You are only called to account for money received and spent from 6 October until Election Day; it is wrong, wrong, wrong! We are setting this up, in our view, to a situation where the Elections can be bought and paid for; where you can go to any source or any source can come to you and dump thousands and hundreds of thousands of dollars on candidates and they can spend it at their will in furtherance of the election campaign and are not called to account for it. I am here to say, on behalf of the Opposition, that as long as this provision is in this Law we will not be supporting this Bill despite whatever good it has in it. This is one of the greatest threats to democracy and to independent candidates being able to stand up and be a part of the system which is a level playing field.

When we create a situation whereby nobody is called to account until the nomination day and whatever money they spend, from whatever sources does not matter, we have destroyed the level playing field and that, in my view, goes to the heart of the democratic process. This Opposition, of which I am proud to be a part, will have no part of this and will not support a Bill which does not call on every candidate to account for all money spent in furtherance of the campaign, whatever reasonable sum the Law provides for in that respect! This is dangerous, deadly stuff and I really hope that the Government did not believe that despite the shortness of time that that would have escaped our attention.

There are a number of other aspects of the Law which calls for examination and analysis in debate, but on this side of this Honourable House that is going to be left for some of my other colleagues. I have dealt with the two fundamental matters of great concern to us and in case the Government did not understand, we are not supporting the Bill in its current form.

The elections are eminent and are of critical importance. All Members in this Honourable House, I believe, with the notable exception of your good self, Sir, will seek to be returned and we ought to accept that each individual and each party are going to seek to advance their positions and campaigns in the most vigorous way they can; that is all a part of the democratic process. However, we who are here, at the moment, charged with the trust and responsibility to continue to support the democratic principles on which this country has been built, should not be party to an exercise, which in my view, seeks to undermine the elections process.

I want all Honourable Members of this House to look within themselves and think, beyond their return to this Legislative Assembly because the day will come, shortly for some, but eventually for all, when we will leave this Honourable Chamber and others will replace us. Let the legacy we leave be one which promotes and enhances the democratic process. Even when some of us may feel that we need to sure up our own positions, let us resist that urge by making these sorts of proposals to amend critical legislation like the Elections Law.

We have a long and proud history in this country of free and fair elections. I am not aware that there has ever been any serious challenge of the integrity of the electoral process in these Islands, but I say that provisions such as this will serve to weaken that process. To admit elements of doubt whether the process is truly democratic, can everybody who wishes to participate in the process really believe that they are getting a fair shake or that the playing field is level, or that all Members and candidates are accorded the same opportunities.

Mr. Speaker, we ought not to get to a point in this country where the elections are won and lost on the amount of money you spend. Money has to be spent in an election campaign and nobody is trying to pretend otherwise, everybody need to get the message across, but we do not need a situation which admits of the possibility of millions of dollars being spent on an election campaign of a political party or grouping and as the proposed legislation stands it admits of that possibility.

Mr. Speaker, I am saddened that it has come to this point where one hundred and nineteen days before the elections, this Honourable House and this country is faced with this sort of possibility. I am hoping as one who never gives up hope, that the Government will hear my voice and that they will not, in their typical manner, simply rise to beat me up for what I have said but that they will perhaps look again at the legislation; look within themselves and ask themselves if this is really the sort of legacy they want to leave; do they want it said about them that they opened the election process in these Islands up to the highest bidder? I am trusting, hoping and praying that good sense and reason will prevail on the other side and that they will seek to amend, redraft those provisions particularly in relation to the election expenses.

The Opposition reaches across the Floor of this Honourable House to say to the Government, as we have said to them before, that we are prepared to sit down with them and try to arrive at some arrangement, which will cap election expenses in this country. Following the meeting that we had in March, we were promised that we would have another opportunity to discuss this matter. That did not transpire although we did have the benefit of a presentation by the Elections Office yesterday evening. What is necessary is dialogue, discourse and discussion, not a presentation, if we are going to be able to reach any agreement on this.

The Government have the numbers, we acknowledge that, and they will have their way, but if they want consensus on this Bill they are going to have to go back to the discussion table with the Opposition because we are not going to support what is proposed here.

Mr. Speaker, I thank you for your indulgence, Sir. I will now resume my seat and listen to what the Government has to say in response. Following that I believe others of my colleagues have a number of points which they also wish to advance.

Thank you, Sir.

The Speaker: Does any other Member wish to speak? The Honourable Minister for Health Services.

Hon. Gilbert A. McLean: Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

Listening to the Second Elected Member for George Town reminds me of the days when I was in Opposition, where I spent most of my time in the House and if you wanted a motion to fail all had to be done was to let me move it.

The Member is attempting to give that kind of impression where the Government is concerned and that is unfair and it gives the wrong and erroneous impression.

The first point I would like to make is that the only Law in effect now is the Election Law (2000 Revision). What is being attempted is to bring an amendment to this Law. Therefore, most of what the Second Elected Member for George Town says really does not exist at this point in time and certainly, the spin which he put on it is so far fetched that one should not, in reality, believe that particular spin.

I would like to point out that after every General Election in the Cayman Islands the Supervisor of Elections does a report to the Governor, which he did after the 2000 Election. However, the Report that the Second Elected Member for George Town was referring to, was one that was prepared by Mr. Dundas, as he said, and Mr. Dundas was the Boundaries Commissioner; the Commissioner who was hired to look at single member constituencies, who made a report and who was asked to make certain recommendations in his Report, which he did. This Report might never have made the light of day with any group except the executive, had it not been that the executive of the present Government took the position and agreed with the Chief Secretary that all Members should get a copy of this Report, and so it was done. As the Second Elected Member for George Town has said, we all met and it was distributed and some discussion took place on this particular Report.

This Report did not make it to Cabinet as any submission to Cabinet for a decision to be taken on it, we simply all had it and knew what its contents were. What did make its way to Cabinet were the amendments here. Various amendments were recommended to the Cabinet, which were originally distributed and it was the view of Cabinet that it was too wide and encompassing for the same reason that the Member cited, in that the time before the election was too short and the matters could be very controversial. I am the first to admit that these amendments ideally should have been here long before now but they are here now and I believe that the amendments in this Law deals with matters which are some of the areas that need to be revised in the present Law. That is why these sections are here.

Only yesterday all Members had the opportunity of sitting in the conference room with the Deputy Supervisor of Elections and other election officers, to look at a highlighted copy and it showed what was in the original draft and what was acceptable to the various persons. Both the Opposition and Government Members were there. I had to leave around 4.30 pm, I do not know what happened after that but everyone had the opportunity of looking at this matter and discussing it.

I hear grumblings from the other side that it did not include all of the originals. Well, I would not try to stand here and say there were seventy originals and that maybe eight or ten had not been taken out; I am not saying that. I am saying that the document which the Government has been working from and has looked at with the view of accepting or rejecting, which the Government executive is suppose to do, is the document which the Opposition also had access to yesterday.

The marked up copy would be what a revised law would be like if everything was accepted, which included the old law and the amendments combined.

The Second Elected Member for George Town knows that what he said about the elections and the election expenses being calculated on the basis of the number of electors in that electoral district, multiplied by a factor of ten, is not the case. That is what was in the amendment originally and the acting Chief Secretary has circulated an amendment for committee stage which takes that out. Personally I do not think it should have been in there in the first instance. I can also say that I have moved different amendments and bills in this House with the best intention and later discover some of the things in it and wonder how on earth they got there and how were they missed. At least I do not think it is any skin off my nose when I come back to amend them and I have done that.

This particular part here, if I am not mistaken, I heard an Opposition Member in the dining room speaking about this and it really caught me by surprise. I can only recall that when we went through this if you were an independent candidate you would be allowed $35,000 and if you were with a party it would be $30,000. So, I would like to clarify that the sections which the Member raised as if that was being proposed for passage is not so because there is an amendment which says that the Government and the Mover proposes to remove that section. The Member knew if of course, but be it far from him that he would have clarified it as I just did.

I do not see any grave problem with making the Report, which the Member has tabled, available to the press, media and so on, because those are the views of Mr. Dundas and the media, therefore himself and anyone else can have their views on it. Again, the Second Elected Member for George Town and all Members of this House know that any Government executive, be it whichever, is charged with making decisions in regards to what comes to the House and what should not otherwise it does not come when it comes down to legislation.

Again, this Government is accused and it is implied, through innuendo, this thing about undemocratic. I think if there is one thing that I would accuse this Government of is that it is too open. There is too much openness. Let me explain a bit on that, Mr. Speaker. We go to an extent that virtually everything that the Government is dealing with the Opposition is brought in on it. How many Bills come here of significance, including this one, that has not been made available to the Opposition.

Mr. Dundas' Report has been made available to it. It is a basetting sin of the United Democratic Party Government that we show our opponents everything and like the Second Elected Member for George Town, he has a favourite saying, and he has left the Chamber but he says no good act goes unpunished; they sure punish us for it. Too open is what I say! So, he or his colleagues may try to refute that but that is something that I think we do repeatedly, maybe we like the beatings that we get, I am not sure, but every time we do it we sure get what the old people use to call, a 'tallawapping'.

Mr. Speaker, on the question of—

The Speaker: Honourable Minister, we have reached the hour of 4.30 pm, it is my understanding that it is the wish of Members to continue beyond 4.30, perhaps until 8 pm. At this time I will call on the Honourable Leader of Government Business to move the suspension of Standing Order 10(2) to allow proceedings to continue beyond 4.30 pm.

Suspension of Standing Order 10(2)

Hon. W. McKeever Bush: Mr. Speaker, I move the suspension of Standing Order 10(2) so that business can be conducted after 4.30 pm.

The Speaker: The question is that Standing Order 10(2) be suspended to allow for the proceedings of the House to continue beyond the hour of 4.30 pm. All those in favour please say Aye. Those against, No.

Ayes.

The Speaker: The Ayes have it.

Agreed. Standing Order 10(2) suspended to allow proceedings to continue beyond 4.30 pm.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Health Services continuing.

Hon. Gilbert A. McLean: Mr. Speaker, just too add another point to the business of openness. Up until today and Monday we were having presentations on another Bill and it is not something that has been due process in here by other governments, from what I can well remember. We sat down with other Members of the House and discussed these with power point presentations and the fact that they can accuse us truthfully of openness, sometimes work to our detriment. I see the Member for East End making gesticulations and I hear him saying that he is not going to anymore of those presentations.

Mr. Speaker, on the matter of Election expenses, the Second Elected Member for George Town correctly cited that in section 61 of the Law it sets a ceiling of $10,000 that a candidate can spend, and I agree with what he said that the way it was generally drafted thereafter left it to an open exercise of attempting to find out what the Law was really attempting to achieve.

I was in this House as a Member representing Cayman Brac at the time when these amendments were passed and it came about because it was the desire of Members then to put limitations on this and to set up a process by which candidates would have to report on how much they had spent, what they had spent it at and where the money came from. If I remember correctly, one had to report on as little as $5, I do not see it here immediately but I do not think I am dreaming it, we had to report on as little as $5. So, the Member should not attempt to give the impression that it was a wide open situation even under the present Law.

What is proposed is that in the proposed new section 61(1), "Election expenses shall not exceed the sum stipulated in subsection (2)." In subsection (2) it says, "The maximum amount of election expenses to be incurred in respect of a candidate at an election shall;

- a) where the candidate does not belong to a political party, or there is no other candidate belonging to the same party at an election in an electoral district, thirty-five thousand dollars; and
- b) where the candidate is not the only candidate belonging to a party at the election in an electoral district, thirty thousand dollars."

(3) "In determining the total expenditure incurred in relation to the candidature of that person at any election, no account shall be taken of-

- a) any deposit made by the candidate on his nomination in compliance with the Law; or
- b) any expenditure incurred before the date of nomination of the candidate with respect to services rendered or materials supplied before such notification."

Mr. Speaker, it has been questioned by many, this present existing requirement about the one hundred and ten days after the writ has been issued.

That created a situation whereby one had to start keeping account one hundred and ten days before a person was nominated. I argue and I do believe it is rational that irrespective of what one might say about a person being a candidate, I hold that that person is not a candidate until they have gone in and paid the returning officer that $1,000 then they are officially a candidate. Anyone can say that they are a candidate prior to nomination day and not even nominate, in fact they can nominate and drop out of the elections. So, it is wide open and flexible to the whim and fancy of the person who wishes to get into the election process.

We all know, and certainly, I would like to draw to the attention of Members, particularly the Opposition if they do not know, that the Election Law applies to the Government and the Opposition, and indeed to anyone in the country who wishes to get into the election process. Therefore, as the Second Elected Member for George Town claims, people who are running on the Government side could spend all sorts of money, but the Opposition is under the same law and could spend all sorts of money too. I believe that they represent certain sectors of this community where they would have more money than the people in Government to spend.

Hon. Gilbert A. McLean: Mr. Speaker, having made that irrefutable point, with what the Second Elected Member for George Town was trying to do, anyone who considers that fact, has no argument.

The other fact that I would like to make is, the Government nor this Honourable House has not created any change whatsoever up to this point in time. It is a Bill before the House and one Member of the Opposition has spoken and made his views known and I suspect there will be others.

Speaking about the undemocratic process and this creating a situation of undemocratic process in this country where tons of money can be spent, that applies to everybody in it and I hope the Second Elected Member for George Town would bear in mind that it also applies to him. So, no one should attempt that those of us on the Government side has any greater or lesser ability to spend more than the $30,000 proposed in the amendment because we are a party. Anyone who runs as an independent can spend $35,000.

I would like to postulate that the election process this year is one that is moving very slowly; it is very unusual and I think I understand it somewhat. It is because the country is doing so well; employment is so high; the business sector is so happy that it makes it difficult for any Opposition to criticise the Government, unlike the days when I use to be the Opposition where there was always something that you could beat the Government to pieces about. In truth, the challenges that have been outstanding for years and have popped up during the course of a year that this Government, whether it wanted to or not, had to face and did face, and I believe, generally made the right decision, has made a situation where any reasonably citizen understands that they are enjoying a time of good governance. Definitely! The Second Elected Member for George Town said that the United Democratic Party ought to be returned, definitely, Mr. Speaker.

Hon. Gilbert A. McLean: Mr. Speaker, I would suspect that both parties and indeed even those who will run as independents have been attempting to buy their t-shirts and so on ahead of time because until now the one hundred and ten days do apply. Also buying the space on television and all the rest of it is a natural process which is to be done, so I suppose that has been done by most candidates. The only thing is that there will be a longer time for such undertaking for spending to be done. I suspect that the election in this country will really start on nomination day and I do not necessarily believe that it is going to be any more respectful this year than it was in the past. In fact, there are people who are in the process which I have heard about that makes me believe it will be muddy.

I do not for one minute accept the point made by the Second Elected Member for George Town that the Government, in any way, has any advantage by anything that will be in the Law because whatever is in the Law will apply equally to the Opposition Members. So, the Member's attempt is pretty much lost in that regard.

I would like to say on a more serious note that unlike other countries which we like to emulate, where you hear of 'hanging chads' and where people win by two votes—the popular vote goes one way and another vote goes another way; I have never heard of that in Cayman. The only challenges I have heard as such are when people, during an election, get accused of a cow that fell in a well and the person turned around and sold it for beef; those are the type of things that I hear about in Cayman. In all of my time I can only recall one instance where there was a contested election where supposedly certain ballots that should have been in one box turned up in another and the court did not find on behalf of the plaintiff; in fact, it turned out that it was a slight of hand that someone flicked one book into the other box. So, we have to be very careful when we use these highfaluting words about democracy is challenged and a breakdown of democracy that we truly do not break down what we have in these Islands.

If we had gotten President Carter to come in here I do not think that he would find anything that he could report on to find that democracy in its truest sense does not prevail at the polls in the Cayman Islands. I would say to all of us let us be careful that this argument is not taken too far to give the impression to people who do not know and understand our political posturing, to believe that our election process is one that in anyway would be questionable.

The other sections of this Law I do not choose to comment on because it is quite straightforward and it allows certain opportunities including people being able to put their own ballot into the box that we have not had ever; that was done by a presiding officer and so on. It is such things as that in these amendments. All of those things are improvements including where there is more than one counting station; that makes sense to me and the opportunity of having additional agents, it all makes sense. It makes sense that there are more deputy supervisors also and these are the type of amendments in the Bill before the House. I support the Bill with the amendments which have been circulated by the Honourable Acting First Official Member and I believe that rather than doing harm it will do considerable good for this country and the election process.

Mr. Speaker, I think I have completed what I wish to say in refuting the mischievous spin that has been brought by the Honourable Second Elected Member from George Town. Thank you.

The Speaker: Honourable Members I propose to take the afternoon break at this time and resume in fifteen minutes.

Proceedings suspended at 4.51 pm

Proceedings resumed at 5.21 pm

The Speaker: Proceedings are resumed. Does any other Member wish to speak? Does any other Member wish to speak? Last call, does any other Member wish to speak?

The Second Elected Member for West Bay.

Mr. Rolston M. Anglin: Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

I think it is fair to say that all of us, Government and the Opposition, but especially those who are either in the executive or on the Back Bench that lend support to the Members of the Government, find ourselves in a position of disadvantage to be debating this Bill at this time.

I think it is fair to say that given the fact that we are less than four months from the General Elections, having to debate an issue that all of us, other than your good self, have a vested interest because we are going to be standing for Elections back to this Honourable Legislative Assembly. So, just from that perspective this is one of those Bills that I think all of us have been very anxious about getting here, because the closer you get to the date of the Elections the more you are going to be criticised and accused of amending the legislation that deals with the process under which all of us have to operate to try and get back here.

There are a number of new ideas in the draft bill before us; a lot of which I think are relatively uncontroversial. It will be new but I think when the public understands what is being sought and what will be achieved once they are passed into Law, will by and large agree with. There are some that are contentious but I think some that are contentious often become more contentious once a particular perspective or as most of us call it, a spin is put on it.

Mr. Speaker, having gone through the 2000 Election process it is fair to say that this whole business of the amount of money that candidates are allowed to spend does cause difficulties. All of us will quickly agree that the amount in the existing legislation of $10,000 is woefully inadequate and needed to be increased. When it comes to the issue of campaign financing we will find that the Cayman Islands is not alone in trying to come to grips with this issue. I think it is fair to say that probably there is not any country, any democracy on this earth that has the right system.

The United States is looked at by many as one of the global pillars of democracy and certainly they have struggled with this issue. We have seen the controversy of the former Vice President, Mr. Al Gore and we have seen on the media all that was made about him visiting the temple of monks and who gave and did not give to the Democratic Party. Go to all of the countries—look at the G8 countries; they have not come to grips with this issue.

Quite recently the United Nations finally got its long awaited charter in regards to corruption. We all know that the United States is the main player in the United Nations and the United Nations did not sign that charter until they took campaign financing off the table. So, for us to sit here in Cayman and believe somehow that we are going to get this perfect system that everybody is going to look at and agree with, I do not think is rational or reasonable.

Now, Mr. Speaker, as responsible legislators we have to give it our best effort. I had a discussion yesterday evening with a senior member on the elections team and it revolved around this whole issue of treaty because I did hear mention, thus far, in the debate about this issue of spending large sums of money to win the election. The typical campaign expenses are manifestoes, t-shirts, caps, television appearances for public meetings and advertisements, radio advertisements and meetings being aired live on the radio. Those are the bulk campaign expenses and certainly when the average person on the street hears about spending large sums of money to influence and win an election, my read of the public of this country really are not talking about those bulk standard items. I do not think they are thinking about manifestoes, television appearances and advertisements, t-shirts, radio appearances and meetings being aired live on radio, I do not think that is what they are talking about so if we are going to debate this issue then we might as well throw all of the cards on the table and talk about what the public talks about.

You hear it on the radio, you see it in the newspapers with the letters that are written talking about this one, warning the public—do not fall prey to those who buy you fridges and stoves and does this and that. There is an old train of thought that somehow politicians are so magical and mystical that when a constituent comes to you for help and you help them— I do not think there is any Member in this Chamber, or certainly a majority of Members in this Chamber that can truthfully say that constituents do not come to them for assistance and we assist them, therefore people somehow draw the conclusion that what that does is equates to what they term buying votes.

Mr. Speaker, people seem to think that once someone declares for politics that means they are absolutely brain dead because everybody on the outside can do it better than all of us; they can do it better than Government and its Back Bench supporting Members, and better than the Opposition. All of the experts are always outside of this Legislative Assembly. So, they all look down on us as though we are these lowly creatures who when someone comes to us in need and we assist them that somehow we are so ignorant to believe that that is getting support. All of us have been around politics and we understand that they not only come to us but they go to the other guys as well, especially during a political campaign! Once you hint that you are going to be a candidate, the time that you get treated as a candidate is once you have made it public; any utterance that you are going to be a candidate they come and ask.

So, how can it be if they come to me and I offer assistance that the guy down the street who also offers assistance as well, may not be seen to buy a vote? I do not subscribe to that notion whatsoever! When we are going to talk about the whole issue of campaign financing we need to start talking about what people really perceive as the challenge. I do not believe the challenge is the standard items that we all pay for. We all will get the television time and manifesto and have it printed really nice so you know it is going to cost a decent amount of money. We all get different things that have to be purchased. So, this business of people being able to spend large sums of money, millions on an election and somehow this is what is going to influence, I think it truthfully degrades a lot of people in this country. I say that because like anywhere else the Cayman Islands have people who are poor, people who are in need and people who are rich, like any other country we have it all in terms of the types of people that our community contains.

As far back as I know and when I listen to the older people from various districts, in particular West Bay, this whole issue of politicians and candidates being approached by people and assistance being offered have gone on for years and years in this country. I understand from the time shop-keepers were still adding up your bill on the back of a brown paper bag the wink was given and the customer walked out without paying anything for their groceries. That has been going on for a long time, we are going back decades! There will be those who will look at it and continue to make the argument and say, 'well politicians and would be politicians should not take part in it' and that is their right to say that. However, I think that all of us in this Chamber understand, with the exception of one or two of the districts, I think the issue may vary a bit from district to district, but I think in general terms it is pretty much the same where we will all quickly admit that this is something that goes on all year and all term, so it does not end. It is not like it starts during the election— whatever people want term the election season or process. It goes on from one election straight through year one to three of a term and right into the next election.

I am not sure what is going to be proposed but certainly if you were to extend the argument we certainly could not say that we are going to propose that such monies are going to be reported by a candidate because some people see that as buying votes therefore it would qualify as treating.

Let me get back to a conversation I had with one of the senior election officials. We also know in this community that when the Election season comes you get those who ask who truthfully come and treat us because they come and the first thing that is asked before any problem or issue is discussed is, 'what ya say the Elections is in November?' So, as far as I am concerned, every one of us has been through that and everyone of us who is going to be truthful knows that what I am saying is true. Therefore, I say that we need to think carefully about what we are going to call campaign financing and campaign financing reform and how it is going to be approached. To simply get up and say that because anything spent before the day of nomination could amount to exorbitant sums I do not think addresses the issue of what the people of the community are talking about.

It is easy to not get up and talk about this and in an open forum, like the Legislative Assembly, it is difficult to because you know the spin the Press and others can put on things. I think most in this House know, whether to my demise or detriment or not, I get up and speak from my conscience and of what I see as the reality that exists in this country. I say that irrespective of what is the cut off or of what the sum is, that what is being spoken to and what will be reported has absolutely, positively nothing to do with what I consider others in the community believe to be the items that influence the decision.

Looking at it from a slightly different angle I believe and I assist people on the basis that I think they truly need assistance. It is a tradition in this country and it is one that is not going to be broken tomorrow. You get people who come to you and say that none of you should do that and everybody should sign a pact to not do it, it should not happen. It is a good theory but it ends there and truthfully speaking when you look at the conditions that some people have to operate and live in within the community (as I said, we do have poor in this country), I do not believe that any of us can truthfully say that a lot of the people are not in genuine need and therefore for us to assist them is something that just from a humanity standpoint is the right thing to do. There will be those who will abuse and lie but I do not think that any of us are the judges of that and can accurately judge that because we do not know precisely what every person situation is we can only go on what we believe and try somehow to use our conscience at that particular level.

When you talk about this issue and get political posturing, all sorts of things can be accused and planted in people's minds. You can easily get up and talk about millions being spent and this that and the other, but truthfully I do not think collectively between the Government and the Opposition that we have the wherewithal to spend millions of dollars collectively on an election. So, in my humble submission that sort of reference is really irresponsible. I can accurately, honestly and truthfully say that I know that on the Government side there is no access to funding to spend millions of dollars on any campaigns. Political posturing always enters debates because I am as I am always reminded 'this is a house of politics'.

I do not believe that any Member in this Honourable Chamber is so misinformed or under any such delusion that any assistance they offer a person is going to secure them support. I do not believe that and what is even worst is that you just do not get asked by people in your own district, but you also get asked by people in other districts and the last time I checked all of us are going to be running in one district. So, if I am running in West Bay and somebody who is living in North Side, Bodden Town, East End or George Town or Cayman Brac and Little Cayman ask me for assistance and I think it is a genuine case and I assist them, what vote am I buying? They cannot vote for me because they are not registered as an elector in the district of West Bay, and certainly the politicians from the bigger districts, George Town and West Bay, all of us have had people from other districts ask us for assistance. I think we can all say that. We need to openly and frankly talk about this myth, as I believe it is, about buying votes. I do not see a huge issue with what is being proposed here. I do not believe that the references which are being made are valid references when it comes to this issue. I really do not believe it, Mr. Speaker. I do not believe it!

Mr. Speaker, what is being proposed is that you can spend certain sums and it gives you until nomination day to do so and after nomination day you have to account for certain sums that are spent and it puts a certain amount. I think there may be some who could make a valid argument and say that anything which is a benefit that accrues after that day should be reported but that opens another can of worms. Using the example of manifestoes and t-shirts, certainly when we print our t-shirts (speaking for myself and my colleagues in West Bay) that has on it "vote for Rolston Anglin, McKeever Bush, Eugene Ebanks and Cline Glidden", most t-shirts are going to be worn before and after nomination day. So, what are we going to do, take it from the day of purchase and you amortise based on the number of days from the day that the person first put it on up to nomination day and anything before that is not counted then from nomination day onward you take those number of days and those then get counted. I think we all just have to be real about the issue. I do not think it is fair comment to say that the problem is the sum or that some people in the community perceive that the whole issue is from what date you have to report.

I know after this you are going to get all sorts of mouth champions writing in the newspaper and on the radio talking that they cannot believe that a Member of the Legislative Assembly would get up and say what I said. Well let the truth be known about the majority of them, especially those who are going to be candidates; let the truth be told. It is easy to say but they themselves, if they are not, they are going to be under the same pressures.

Mobile voting versus postal ballots—this issue was raised and a passionate plea was put forward by the Second Elected Member for George Town in regards to all the virtue that there is in regards to the mobile voting system. Whilst that is his opinion and there are those who say that there are issues surrounding the system as it is, at the end of the day there are still going to be people for whom postal ballots must be prepared. With four months before this general election I cannot say that it would be prudent or wise for us to now put forward something that is completely brand new to many citizens who voted by postal ballots in the 2000 Elections and previous elections and will do so again in this election, God's willing. This is the sort of thing that need public input and they need to have wide public consultation because the public needs to know and feel comfortable with what is being proposed.

If the Opposition feels strongly about this point then I implore them to get their own education campaign going and do what representatives do; that is to represent the public. You go out and explain it to people, get examples of how it would work; go ahead and do that. Let us get the public education process so that the public knows what it is because we are less than four months from the day of the general elections and therefore we need to ensure that whilst we have some changes that we do not believe somehow that we can just push any and every idea that come from another country onto the public in the Cayman Islands.

In regards to the charge that was made that during some election large amounts of postal ballots was sent to a candidate's post office box. I say therefore that it is incumbent upon the Elections Office to scrutinise and ensure that they are sending postal ballots to the right location. Surely if you see a large volume of postal ballots going to a particular post box in a particular district that it is incumbent upon the Elections Office to ensure that is where they want it to go.

Taking this argument one step further, I say to the Second Elected Member for George Town and the entire Opposition, so what, if fifty or one hundred people want their postal ballots mailed to a particular post office box? That is up to them, that is their right. I do not think anybody can tell people where to send their mail. Further, there are many of people who have general delivery and no post boxes. For years there were many people in our district who did not have a post office box and still do not have one. So, it is easy to throw these little sound bites out there for the press and the public to pick up on to try to make it look as though something that is untoward is what is going here. I like to look at things and scrutinise them and certainly, I am not going to stand, argue and defend any position that runs contrary to what I believe to be right and wrong. I think I am as honest as any other Member in this Chamber and as good a judge to see what is right and what is wrong.

The people of West Bay did not send me, or the people in any district did not send any of us here to stifle and vote against our conscience, but at the same time, they also sent us here to be responsible legislators on their behalf. It is a representative form of government; you are the voice of the people.

I believe that it is easy to throw out the juicy sounding stuff because we know human nature is human nature. You can put a million positive stories in the Compass, the radio and on the television and they will get the lowest ratings and readership ever, but as soon as you talk about a piece of juicy gossip then you are appealing to the masses. That is why soap operas are so popular. Are any of us surprised that soap operas are so popular? Soap operas are popular because people like gossip, rumours and all of that stuff; they feed on it and there is no better aroma than to say that the MLA's are doing something that they should not be doing. The depth upon which people do look at issues and that there is that sort of feeling and mentality in the community is really so sad.

Before you are a politician you are the nicest guy; most honest and upright fellow, good guy, parents raised him good, did good and if you were fortunate enough to get an education, got an education and doing good, but as soon as you get elected then you become such an awful creature. That is very sad because what it does is continue to keep good people, young and old, but especially young, away from the political process either as candidates or just being involved. That is what it does, it drives them away. They know how people are going to look at them; they know what people are going to say about them and they know how people are going to feel towards them, unjustifiably.

As I have heard it called, I am not supportive of any such progressive thought or any such radical shift. I am not going along with any of these radical shifts at this particular point in time without having the benefit to have gone to the public to make sure the public understood what we were talking about and made sure that the public are comfortable with the system; after all democracy is about the people not about us. Democracy is about what the people feel. We are simply here to represent their views and we cannot truthfully say that any of us have any evidence whatsoever that would support us coming forward with the view that that is what the majority of the people in the country would want. I know that all of us have to look at things rationally and as representatives look at things and use our own good judgement. We cannot relinquish that because I believe that when an elector relinquishes good judgment then he or she has failed as a representative. So, I think we just have to be careful with those sorts of shifts that would be sudden and unfortunate because the public would not have had the opportunity to have seen, learnt and heard about what it is.

Mr. Speaker, there is a small point that I have not seen come around yet as a proposed committee stage amendment and it is in 34(1)(b) which deals with polling and counting agents. 34(1) says: "A candidate may at any time, after being nominated but at least ten days before the commencement of the poll, appoint;

- a) Two polling agents to attend a polling station and;
- b) two counting agents to attend at the counting of the votes, being persons who are entitled to vote in the same electoral district as that in which the candidate has been nominated."

It all makes sense. However, if we look at 34(1)(b) more closely one would infer that it has to mean for those two agents to attend the counting of the votes, because of the fact that the vote counting is now going to change, we are going to be counting at the respective polling stations. We are going to break down and count there to allow the count to be more efficient. It is not going to be like it was before where you would go to one central location and count there. I think out of the abundance of caution and to make this absolutely clear and not open to any interpretations, we should say here that we are talking about two counting agents to attend at the counting of votes at each of the stations. It may sound like a spoiled point but we are doing the Law now so let us get it as right and specific as we can get it because we would not want to have any sort of question arise about that. Let us just make it clear, Mr. Speaker.

In regards to some of the other major items covered in this Bill, I think the Acting First Official Member has spoken adequately to a number of those. One of the things I like about debate is that others will speak so it does not make sense for me to go through a lot of them because I am sure that as others speak a lot of these other points are going to be raised. We cannot anticipate, but I would encourage all Members to take a close look at the committee stage amendments that has been circulated, especially the one that has to do with form 16A because I think we do have some potential issues there, which will need to be addressed. In reading through this and knowing the exercise we went through last Friday in regards to the short Motion we passed in this House saying to Her Majesty's Government just what we were recommending in terms of the minor change to the Constitution, I think somehow this amendment may very well have caused some problems with that particular move because that change is not yet in the Constitution. As of today it is not, and our understanding is that the Privy Council is meeting July 24 or 27th and so it is not going to be a part of the Constitution for a good number of six more days.

Mr. Speaker, we are in an election season; we are winding down our term; everyone is posturing for themselves to be returned as the majority so that they can form the Government. So, there is also to temptation to utilise anything that comes through these Chambers to further that. I think that in my contribution, not yielded to that temptation, I have pointed out certain items that were flagged up by earlier speakers, but I think I was very fair in my analysis of what I think is responsible and constructive debate. Everyone might not agree with it but I believe that we are in a most unfortunate situation to have to be debating this Bill at this particular point in time, simply because of the perception that will be out there, that all of us, especially those on this side of the Floor, are sitting Members of the House and that somehow any change we make will enhance our possibility to be returned. I say that I have not lost that much faith in the Caymanian public.

I still believe that at the end of the day when people get into that polling station by themselves and nobody else is there, no candidate is there looking over their shoulder, I believe that when they get into the voting booth by themselves they ultimately vote for who they want to freely and who they think is going to do the best job. That in my humble submission is the essence of democracy. Say what you want about all of the other things that are going on. Once people are going to the polls and they are not under any influence inside that polling station, and they are voting for those they think are the best people for the job, who they want as their representatives; that is what they are doing, they are choosing who their voice is going to be in this Legislative Assembly. Once that is the case we have a lot to be thankful for in this country and I think all of us would agree that that is how our elections are administered. I think we have a very good elections staff, a very good election team, a good Superintendent of Elections, experienced and I think they do an exceptional job. I therefore look forward to the day when all of us are going to be judged and have our ultimate account to the people.

So, with those short words I now eagerly await the remainder of the debate because I am very interested to hear what all other Members are going to say and what items they will focus on in regards to this Bill.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: Does any other Member wish to speak? Does any other Member wish to speak? Last call!

The Elected Member for East End.

Mr. V. Arden McLean: Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

Compared with the Second Elected Member for West Bay, I rise to make what I consider a short contribution to the Amendment Bill of the Election Law that is before us.

There are a number of issues and a number of proposed amendments to the Election Law in this amendment, which I personally support. There are two major issues, as the Second Elected Member for George Town said, which we do not support in the current form. We support the concept of change but we do not support it in the manner in which it is currently proposed. I will touch on those even though those who have spoken before me have made their contribution.

Many of the proposed amendments, such as electronic names for the distribution of the list of electors and the sale of electors and the like, should have been done a long time ago. We are now in the electronic age and I believe it is to the government's and the country's benefit if we do that.

I must record my disappointment in the manner which all amendments were brought about and the end result, that is, what we currently have in front of us. Some time ago when this amendment to the Elections Law was talked about, and the as the Second Elected Member for George Town said, it was earlier this year, we were invited to a meeting called by the Honourable Chief Secretary and we attended that meeting. At the end of that meeting we were told that we would have subsequent meetings in order to reach consensus on what the changes would entail.

I know the Minister for Health spoke of it and he said that I said that I would not be returning to anymore meetings. I still consider myself a freshman in politics especially when I compare myself with you, Sir and other Members of this Honourable Chamber. However, my record will stand in here, and that record is that I am always on time and I am always present at any meeting held. There are a number or reasons for that, but in particular, the main reason is that I made the people of East End a promise that I was going to represent them for four years and I believe that is representation. The other thing that could be considered primary is that I am very afraid to miss anything. I like to be involved because this is my country and it is part and parcel of the people I represent, and whatever is in the best interest of this country I am going to be there.

Mr. Speaker, I always believed that the reason for these meetings was to reach consensus. I am not overly excited about those meetings because on a recent parliamentary seminar in England one of the things discussed was that the Labour Party in England is creating committees so that when the conservatives get on the floor they cannot argue with the Labour Party because there is consensus already. So, I am a bit skeptic to why the Government usually brings them. Nevertheless, I think they served their purpose. However, it is obvious, as was the case with the Election Law, that there were a few differences at the word 'go' in the meeting and the time which was allotted to that meeting expired. It was decided that other meetings would be held, and I thought that was the right thing to do. Up until this week there were no other meetings held. I am very concerned about that because it appears that there was not a genuine effort made to take input from the Opposition to reach consensus and our ideas put into this amendment to the Election Law.

The Second Elected Member for West Bay spoke of how it affects us all and the Minister of Health spoke of how the Bill and in particular, the Election Law, affects us all. Therefore I thought it should have been absolutely necessary for the Government to show a little more respect for the Opposition in getting their views prior to the completion of the amendment to this Law. It certainly would have been a lot less adversarial if that was done but it appears that the Government is going to do what they are going to do regardless of who says 'no' and thus, we have an amendment to the Election Law.

Contrary to other Members in this Honourable Chamber saying that East End deserves better, I know what they are promoting is not better than me because I am here and I do my job while making worthwhile contributions to anything that goes on in this Honourable House. They cannot say that I am absent; look at the records of others. The other districts deserve better than what they have now also. I am leaving that as is; I am not going any further. So, all of those who talk about East End deserves better, they had better think about their own district and whether their district deserves better.

Anyway some of the things I thought we would have also included in the Election Law is about fraud. People who are convicted of fraud should not be allowed to run in a General Election in this country. I believe if we did have the meetings that were proposed, all of these things would have been discussed prior to us coming here to the Floor of this Honourable House.

I move on to the areas in the amendments that I believe are not in keeping with what is in the best interest of the election as proposed by the Government. The Minister who spoke first from the Government spoke of how the Government is transparent and how the initial draft amendment did not reach Cabinet. I am not trying to refute the Minister's argument that it did not reach Cabinet but certainly, Cabinet knew of that first draft. There were a number of other amendments in that which were proposed by the Supervisor and his able deputies after enlisting the assistance of an able consultant in the form of Mr. Carl Dundas.

If that first draft did not reach Cabinet and the second one that we are now debating did, I wonder who omitted things like the mobile polling stations; unless, of course, the Supervisor of Elections had a change of mind and I will accept that as an answer, but within a year the Supervisor of Elections, if you can extrapolate from what the Minister said, that it did not reach Cabinet. That means that the Supervisor of Elections changed his mind for a very good provision to be put in the amendment and eventually in the Law. That has to be the answer; it cannot be that the Government saw it and decided that it was not because it did not reach Cabinet. It disappeared on paper. However, it is for the Government to explain to the county why it is not so.

Mr. Speaker, I would like to turn to section 21 of the amendment. The change proposed is: "Any person whose name appears on the Register of Electors and who changes his name, occupation or street address shall-

- A. Within six weeks of such change, give to the registering officer for the electoral district in respect of which he is registered as an elector, notice in writing in Form 13 together with such supporting documents as the registering officer may require;"

Section 21 in the current Law says: "Any person whose name appears on the Register of Electors who changes his or her name or place of residence shall, within twelve months of such change give notice in writing in Form 13 to the registering officer for the electoral district in respect of which he is registered as an elector. . ." and it goes on and on. I believe that a year is reasonable and to propose six weeks is absolutely unreasonable.

We know that there are many people in our country who live in a rental apartment and they shift from one apartment to the other. To ask a person after six weeks to change his registration on the Elector's Register is rather unreasonable when six months later he may move to a different district. I can appreciate that someone has a contract for at least a year but six weeks is a little unreasonable. People move from one district to live in another district with family and they may stay two or three months and go back to the other district. Are we are going to have people changing constantly? It is unreasonable! That proposal is highly unreasonable and maybe the Government will consider doing something about it. The next section I would like to address is section 60 which says: "Unauthorised expenditure". Maybe I should read both sections, 60 (1) and (2).

"60. (1) Where an expenditure is incurred in contravention of this Part, the person by whom such expenditure was incurred and the candidate in connection with whose candidature it was incurred shall in addition to any other penalty to which either of them may be liable, be deemed to be guilty of an illegal practice.

" (2) No candidate shall be deemed to be guilty of an illegal practice by reason of any other person having incurred any expenditure in connection with the candidature of the candidate in contravention of this Part, if the candidate proves that such expenditure was incurred without his knowledge or consent and that he took all responsible steps to prevent the incurrence of such expenditure." I understand the attempts and what they are trying to achieve but I do not know, if on the face of it, that that is the total intent of that provision.

I would like us to think that yes, if someone goes out and promotes me and I know nothing about it then certainly, I have not committed an offence. It is highly unreasonable to expect me to pay the price for someone promoting and advancing my cause when I knew nothing about it. However, the flip side of that is that you could have a candidate who has a trusted lieutenant whom you allow to promote your cause, but then the candidate could stand up and say that he does not know anything about it. How am I going to prove as a candidate that I did not know? The burden of proof is going to be on me and it should not be on me. The only way I can prove that the gentleman down the street who was wearing my t-shirt, passing out one hundred dollar bills or buying drinks is to say I did not know. I did not know! I did not send him there and he cannot say that I sent him there; what proof does he have? However, I have to prove that I did not because the person does not have to prove that I did; I have to prove that I did not send him and how am I going to prove that? All I can do is to stand under oath and say I did not do it, I knew nothing of it. Is that sufficient proof? Is that what we are asking for? I am sure that is not what this wants.

The onus must be on the person laying the charge, not me. Maybe nobody saw the flip side or maybe they did, I do not know. I certainly know that this needs to change to prevent the same expenditure that others have talked about because if you think a candidate would not be able to get rid of some money in any election, think again. This is the same refrigerator that we were talking about a while ago. If you have a trusted lieutenant you can give him the money to expend on your behalf and all you need to say is: "I did not know"; claim ignorance and that is it. They are asking me to prove that I was ignorant of the fact when the third party accused someone else of furthering my cause. That is the way it is going to come out. A third party would say that that other individual was doing it on my behalf and then all of a sudden I have to prove that I knew nothing about that second individual doing it. No, Mr. Speaker, something is radically wrong with that. Whilst there needs to be provisions to protect the candidate from such, this does not do it and we need to start drafting something different.

Mr. Speaker, under section 61 where limitation on election expenses are covered it is interesting that we are proposing to remove subsection 4. Please allow me to turn to the limitation on election expenses. Like all other Honourable Members, all fair thinking members of this society have been aggrieved by what currently exists in the Law. Ten thousand dollars is absolutely unreasonable to expect and the one hundred and ten days on one side of the election and the other side of the election is totally unreasonable as well. There needs to be change! However, when we look at what is proposed, $35,000 for independent candidates and single member constituencies, and $30,000 for multi member constituencies if you are with a party; that is pittance on what can be spent in a general election under this proposal. I agree that every country in this world is grappling with election expenditure reform; in America, everywhere, however, they are tightening theirs in and we are loosing ours up. It appears like this is Government's way of legitimising what they have already spent prior to nomination.

Point of Order

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: On a point of order, Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: Honourable Leader of Government Business, please state your point of order.

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: I think the Member is imputing the conduct of Members with his innuendoes. He has gone too far this evening in any event!

[inaudible interjections]

The Speaker: Order please! Honourable Members I would draw your attention to Standing Order 35(4): "No Member shall impute improper motives to another Member." I do not need to do that because I know Members are well acquainted with the Standing Orders on points of order. I have distributed them to Members in addition to them being contained in our Standing Orders so I would ask Members to please make every effort to comply with the Standing Orders. I know it is getting late and perhaps Members are getting a little edgy but let us do our best to work within the Standing Orders of the House.

Honourable Member for East End please continue.

Mr. V. Arden McLean: Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

The General Elections is one hundred and nineteen days away. Under the current Law any money spent outside one hundred and ten days you do not have to give account for. So, nine days from now up to the Elections and thereafter under the current Law you would spend only $10,000. If we are bringing those one hundred and ten days to nomination day, which is 6 October, we are legitimising what is spent prior to 6 October. That is what we are doing! We are legitimising it! Who is going to spend it is entirely up to anybody else who wants to say that.

So, the Minister cannot jump up on a point of order when he has no point of order! Talking his rubbish!

The Speaker: Honourable Member for East End I have made a ruling on this matter, I would ask you to move away from the point of order that was raised. Please continue with your speech and do not question the ruling that was made on the point of order.

Please continue with your speech and move away from that position.

Mr. V. Arden McLean: Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

As the Second Elected Member for George Town said earlier, we cannot support something in the Election Law that gives free reign for expenditures; there needs to be a cap. What that cap is, I do not know. If it is $50,000 we need to come up with some formula that is reasonable which includes all expenditures relating to furthering your cause during an election.

We cannot leave so many loopholes. It is like the Second Elected Member for George Town said, independent candidates are an integral part of the system and it is highly unfair for two or three parties to financially blow them out of the water. People have choices, they do not have to join parties, this is a democratic society and they can run on their own and once you have qualified to run in the General Election you do not need to run with a party. There are no such draconian laws in this country but all those, including the PPM, would have so much more resources available to them than an independent candidate. If you pool your resources, yes you are going to have more but when you go out there and receive donations we need to cap expenditure. Those two provisions are not capping it, particularly the one where someone can spend anything they want on behalf of the candidate. The Minister of Health said: "who said so". Obviously Cabinet did not see this here.

I propose that we go back to the Table and start discussing the possibilities of capping expenditure for elections in this country. It is a dangerous thing and not all candidates, in any election, have the same resources available to them. We all know it is not unique to Cayman. I saw on more than one occasion in the last few months where the Republicans and Democrats raised hundreds of millions of dollars.

If there was independence there the independents who run for the presidential position in America are billionaires themselves so they spend their own personal money. However, I believe that there is a need to cap it off and I cannot support that section of this Bill and by extension I cannot support the Bill.

The other area I would like to discuss is that which the Second Elected Member for George Town covered quite a lot, but I think I should come back to it and that is the mobile postal ballots. As we know them now, they are absentee voting. Many countries—

Point of Order

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: Mr. Speaker, I rise on a point of order.

The Speaker: Honourable Leader of Government Business please state your point of order.

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: I seek your advice. The Member has been going on quite a bit this evening and perhaps others did as well in regards to this Report. We are not debating the Report that Mr. Dundas made, we are debating a bill before the House and I think the Standing Order says that we should be debating what is before the House.

I seek your guidance, Mr. Speaker. Maybe I am wrong but I am wondering whether we are debating the Report or the Bill.

The Speaker: Thank you Honourable Leader of Government Business.

Honourable Members earlier I called on the Second Elected Member for George Town to lay on the Table of the House the Dundas Report because he had made reference to it. It is now available for all Members to make reference to but I take the point made by the Honourable Leader of Government Business that we are indeed debating the Election Amendment Bill 2004, and whilst I would expect some latitude to be given to reference to any materials that has been laid on the Table of the House I feel that we should move back and I would ask the Elected Member for East End to stick as closely to the contents of the Bill before us.

Honourable Member for East End please continue.

Mr. V. Arden McLean: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I was not going to refer to that Report but since the Minister brought it up I think I will.

What I was going to say is that when Members of this Honourable House was presented with the original draft of the Election (Amendment) Bill 2004, sometime earlier this year, the proposal in that was to amend the principal Law after section 44 and include 45 (a) mobile polling stations; this is on page 13 of the initial draft amendment. So, what I was going to say was that somehow this one vanished in thin air. I am not here to cast any aspersions on anyone, any one candidate or a group of candidates that have ran in any election in this country, in the past or for the future. However, I must say that we have enjoyed for many years the privilege of having what we consider fair elections and I pray to God that continues.

However, there is one area, I believe, that is open for abuse and that is absentee ballots. I really believe that needs to be tightened. There are so many capabilities of abuse and whilst the Election Office try to do their best, and they do a good job, there is opening for abuse in that particular section of the election process, and I believe we need to close it out. In many other countries, as I understand that was the area that was most vulnerable, in fact, no one in the majority of the Caribbean countries can vote by absentee ballots. Even the attachés from the independent countries must return home on the day of election. As far as I am concerned that might be taking it a little too far because we have students overseas and certainly we do not want to disenfranchise anyone and ask them to travel from their school to come home. Certainly for those who will be in the Cayman Islands on that day there needs to be another method of allowing them to exercise their democratic right to vote and it is not through absentee balloting. There are many ways that it can be done but the one that was proposed was mobile polling stations. As far as I can see it is a simple procedure, you travel with the agents and the returning officer and all the necessary people who will also be at the elections that say and they conduct the voting for those individuals in their place of abode.

Mr. Speaker, in many of the other Caribbean countries the emergencies service people are given a particular day to go to vote before the General Election, like the day before, and they stagger it so all of them are not off from their post at the same time. On the day of Elections they are at their post. So, these are different ways that we can graduate to and since we are now amending the Law that we should look at these things. The hospital, nurses, we cannot have all of them going the same day. For instance, the nurses work a twelve hour shift, 7 in the morning until 7 at night. Their chances of going to the polls is probably about an hour and the Election Law says that employers have to let off the employees; they are required by Law to do that to allow them to vote. I am saying that there are other ways that we can get these people to vote prior to the General Election Day and the Election Office can have these boxes in safe-keeping, but nobody wants to do that. We are talking about modernising the country to meet with the 21st Century, then let us do it, let us make it that much easier for our people.

The police, nurses, doctors, firemen, prison officers, employees of Caribbean Utilities Company (CUC) who work in the engine room, people at the Pines, those that are shut in— these people can all vote prior to the election and these are the people we need to ensure are not disenfranchised and there is no need to send a postal ballot out to them in order that there is no chance of abuse. That is the only area in the process that I see where there is a possibility of abuse. Over the years we have heard the allegations of it. Others can talk of allegations but no one else can, there are plenty of those flying around here.

Mr. Speaker, the issue of buying votes, as is commonly termed, was brought up by the Second Elected Member for West Bay. That is where we will get our problems with giving someone money. Not all people are honourable and we can find candidates who are not honourable in any place, not only Cayman, and they will use whatever means available to them to their own advantage; any loophole! People who are dishonest will find the loopholes long before anybody else finds them.

I really believe that there is a need for tightening and I would invite the Government to consider: Tightening up the allowable expenditure section and the inclusion of some means of getting those people who are not capable of getting out to the polls to vote other than by absentee ballots. It is absolutely necessary! We cannot afford to open this up further to future possible abuse.

Mr. Speaker, as I said earlier, unlike the Second Elected Member for West Bay, I am not going to stand here long. I believe I have touched on the critical sections of this Bill; the other sections of it are fine by me. It is a means of cleaning and tidying up, and tightening up the reporting of expenditures and I believe that is welcomed and I welcome it. However, it does not make sense to tighten that up and we are letting the candidates go elsewhere to spend as they please.

I trust that my contribution has been taken in the spirit that it was given. Thank you, Sir.

The Speaker: Does any other Member wish to speak? The Honourable Minister for Community Services.

Dr. the Hon. Frank S. McField: Mr. Speaker, I would like to make some comments in relation to the proposed new Election (Amendment) Bill 2004.

It is a bit unfortunate that we are addressing the issue of an election law so close before the General Elections, but it quite obvious that this Honourable House has been very busy and that the Government has also been very busy, and it is up to the Government to bring the legislation here.

The Opposition had the opportunity to bring as a private members motion amendments to the Election Law and it appears as if they have an amendment which they were suggesting at this particular time and not before. So, they too seem to have not been able to get anything to this Honourable House before this particular time.

What is disturbing about the Opposition's position that has so much time to create mischief is that they politicise, especially at this time, every single issue brought before this Honourable House except the issue that might have disqualified them from being Members of the Legislative Assembly, simply because of the British Nationality Act which granted British citizenship to the dependent territories in 2002. So, when it came to jumping together to make sure that everybody could run, including them, there was no opposition.

With regards to the Election Law it would be good for them to get up and try to somehow insinuate that the Government and its Back Bench that brings this Bill is doing so in order to create an unfair advantage.

The Government is capable of running under the present Election Law and still whopping the Opposition, simply because the Government's performance has been excellent. I would say that the Opposition's intention is to try to make the public believe that there is something unfair about the spending policies being suggested in this particular Law. They too understand that they should be honest with the general public because many members of the general public who are listening know Members of the Opposition and they know exactly what they do and do not do in an election. So, do not try to fool the general public.

Mr. Speaker, I would repeat again that the Members of the Opposition are known by the general public and that the general public know exactly what is spent and what is not spent by Members of the Opposition, at least during the last election.

When I hear people talking about buying votes I can only say that when I started off in 1996 I had no money to buy any votes and I had not accumulated any money in 2000 to buy votes, and I did not top the polls so I obviously can say that I did no such thing. So, if the Opposition wants to insinuate that this is what is happening— What I want the Opposition to admit is the fact that they know that the amount of money that is allowed to be spent is not the amount of money that they spent in the last election.

The Opposition knows very well—

Point of Order

Mr Alden M McLaughlin, Jr: Mr. Speaker, on a point of order.

The Speaker: Second Elected Member for George Town please state your point of order.

Mr Alden M McLaughlin, Jr: Mr. Speaker, the Honourable Minister has just stated as a fact that the Opposition Members have spent money in contravention of the Law. That is the impact of what he just said and he must withdraw that remark. He is effectively charging us with a criminal offence. He stated it as a matter of fact.

The Speaker: Honourable Minister for Community Services, was that a categorical statement or your opinion you were stating?

Dr. the Hon. Frank S. McField: Mr. Speaker, I am not going to say it is a categorical statement, I will say that it is my opinion that the Members of the Opposition know, in my opinion, that they spent more than what was allowed to be spent.

The Speaker: Please continue.

Dr. the Hon. Frank S. McField: With a little bit of confession I guess this is one of the reasons why we are coming before this Honourable to make it possible for people to genuinely spend on their campaign without hiding what they are spending in any matter. The sense of this particular amendment is to allow people to genuinely, above board, honestly spend on their campaigns.

I remember that I did some commercials with the television stations and the radio stations and we now have two newspapers, so I know that it is very difficult to reach all of the people, and even when you spend with all of the media, people will still say: "I did not know that you were having a meeting; I did not know what it was that you stood for, tell me what it is that you are standing for". So, to be honest we know it takes more than the $10,000 that was allowed to be spent for an election campaign therefore many people would rush to buy t-shirts and other items that they would use in the election campaign before the one hundred and odd days that the Member for East End was talking about.

The truth of the matter is, especially in the districts of George Town and West Bay, I have knowledge that people do come to politicians to ask for certain favours and that nobody is sitting there keeping any record, so why is it that the Opposition seems to have this attitude that the Government here is any better at doing that than they are? That is what I want to know. Do you think I am better at doing it? No, I am not better.

The Speaker: Order! Please continue Honourable Minister.

Dr. the Hon. Frank S. McField: Mr. Speaker, I do not want to bring the level down to the level it is at. I just want people to be aware of the fact that when they get up and cast aspersions at this particular side of the House, suggesting that people will buy votes or they will use money to create unfair advantages, they have to remember who we know that has the money. If they do not have it now they had it then. So, I will not stand here and be accused as the one who was successful because of any use of any monies.

Mr. Speaker, I think it is time that we were able to make it a little more above board, at least for this election, the amount of monies that could be spent legitimately by candidates. I think part of the reasons why we did get into researching the amendment possibilities to this Election Law was in order to make sure that candidates in the 2004 Elections were able to pay the cost of their elections, and that we recognise as a Government, as a Legislative Assembly that the cost continues to escalate; the cost of advertising in the papers, of having television shows, having television advertisements, of printing manifestos and of printing t-shirts, all these costs add up to much more than were originally thought of. I never supported the idea that people should be restricted in any way.

I was one of the persons who argued in our deliberation on this Bill before it came to this House that perhaps people should be allowed to spend the amount of money that they were capable and there should be no cap. My argument was, why tempt people to be dishonest. Why assume that because you can put more commercials on there that you will be able to win an election? If there is no substance to what you are proposing then I think that regardless of how much you go on there people at the end of the day will walk away from you. So, there is no proof that money itself is what causes people to be elected. There has to be some political substance in what the candidates or the particular parties are advocating. So to make the emphasis money is something that is very subjective because some of us will believe that money does play a role and some of us will believe that the role in which money has is incidental and not the primary role. It is absolutely necessary for us to think about our program.

There will be those of us who will say the United Democratic Party won the Election by a landslide simply because the United Democratic Party had access to money because the United Democratic Party knows business people. That is what they are preparing to say because they are trying to find an excuse for why they will lose the election. That kind of psychology is very bad for them because they are programming themselves to fail and I do have some respect for some of the Members of The Opposition and would like to see them back as Members of The Opposition, but if they continue to programme themselves to fail by having these excuses for why the United Democratic Party won, then they are going to be in serious difficulties.

So, Mr. Speaker, I am saying this to say that let us go in with the idea that if I have to spend $35,000 for my election campaign, that is a big sum of money, and obviously, I would not be able to put my hand in my pocket and do it all by myself, but we are accepting the fact now that the role a candidate plays is more than a role he or she is playing for himself or herself. We are playing a role for other members of the society who also have self-interest and general interest in making sure that the conditions to get somebody elected are there. Therefore, we would expect that people would be donating to the different parties, and I am quite sure that some of the PPM supporters have so much money that the PPM will not have a problem finding the money. What they will have the problem with is finding the substance to put the money behind. It will be like putting a lot of money on television ads, but all they can say on the television ads is why there is something wrong with us rather than showing what is good about them then people will understand, at the end of the day, there is no substance behind the PPM and therefore the PPM will not benefit from the fact that they have very, very, very rich supporters.

Mr. Speaker, if we look at just the amount of money that you pay for a live broadcast these days I think there are some people out there in the journalistic world who are just waiting for us to charge us high prices for this and charge us high prices for that. I do not know whether or not speech writers will be paid in this election and whether or not people will be declaring what they pay speech writers; I do not know if that will be part of what people will be declaring; I do not know whether or not they will do this; at what point they will start making those declarations as to what amount those persons are being paid, but there are so many things that you can pay for in an election campaign. People can come and put out chairs for you and you have to pay for that . . . so there are a lot of expenses. So, what I am saying is that at the end of the day, let us be realistic about what it is that people can legitimately spend.

I will assure this Honourable House that Members will find that they are going to exceed, in many cases, the allotted amount of money, and when they exceed it, they will conceal it. Therefore, it is my philosophy that there should not be any caps on what you are allowed to spend. Perhaps, there should be some direction as to how you can spend it, but not what you can spend if it is all above board because the voters themselves will see when you are going overboard and when you are trying to be too greedy in terms of 'hogging up' all the time and space in the different newspapers. However, the majority of Members in this Honourable House disagree with my position. I go along with the majority on the side of the Government that has brought this Bill that says there should be a cap at C$35,000. However, the Member from East End has gone beyond in criticising the Government even for the fact that that starts at the date of nomination. Much attention had been given to that, because if what you want is to control what people spend rather than create a fair playing field, there is a difference. If you want to create a fair playing field, Mr. Speaker, be fair and realistic about the amount of money that will be needed to effectively get your message across to the general public and you allow that to be spent by candidates, and if you are going to put the amount in Law, then when you put the amount in Law, please be as realistic about that as possible.

Now, what is being suggested is that at this particular point or at least in a few days under the present Law, that the new amendment should also include that whatever a person spends up until the date of nomination, from a few days from now, should also be calculated as part of what they spend for their election campaign. Now, what it creates is a great policing problem in terms of how do you control how people spend. What you will be controlling is what people spend on advertising, on obvious things, but not what people spend on light bills and refrigerators, on stoves and different things like that. So, let us be careful how we make the assumption that somehow the Government is not concerned about spending at this particular point and somehow that the Members of the United Democratic Party will be spending in such a way to create an unfair advantage to the independent candidates and the PPM candidates as well.

I remember one person who was in an election here in the district of George Town who bought the T-shirts long before the period began. So, although the period might begin from now for the 2004 November Elections, some people would have six months ago bought up everything and it would not have counted anyway. So, at what position do we have to be in terms of controlling spending to be able to manage it in such a way that it does not create an unfair advantage? If somebody has already, for instance, spent $100,000 on T-shirts, pens, hats, and all of those things, and on electricity bills, and all that sort of stuff, it does not start off so it avoids that particular thing. People find ways around these things; people find ways to achieve what it is that they want to achieve, which is to influence voters to vote for them; they find ways of doing that.

There is also, in some countries, where you have organizations that are willing to pay for ads and just say, 'Okay, this organization is for Progress and Prosperity and we would like to sponsor the United Democratic Party or the PPM Party or this individual', therefore somebody is paid out of their amount and you have not paid anything yourself. These are situations where they are called soft advertising or something like that in the United States. So, there are always issues for Government as to how to make it fair and how not to get into a situation where the Election Office has to become so bureaucratic and so staffed to be able to follow politicians and make sure that this one is not doing this that is wrong, and the other one is not doing this thing that is wrong in order to create these unfair advantages. At the end of the day, I do not think that there is any solution to these problems. All we can do as legislators is to set the moral and legal foundation for the procedures that people ought to follow, but we cannot make people good. We can only make the criteria for them to follow that we think is the correct criteria at that particular time. That is what we are doing here.

If people choose to find ways to destabilise the Election Laws by spending more money in these particular ways that we know that people do spend money, there is not very much that the Election Office and those people who are responsible can do. Of course, if we get people who are willing to adhere to the particular principles that they are advocating in here today, then there is nothing to worry about; the Law would have set the foundations and we would have taken instructions from the Law; we would have abided by the Law and we would follow the Law regardless of what the consequences will be with regards to outcome of the election.

So, I am just up to say that although it is being suggested by the Opposition that this Law again is an indication of this Government's – United Democratic Party's Government's – inability to be fair—that it is absolutely the wrong interpretation and it is only being done in order to again inflame that small segment of the population that they speak to and for.

Mr. Speaker, this Law comes late! Again, I say that, but the Opposition had its time to have brought amendments that they thought were desirable. They have failed to do so up until this moment, therefore, it shows something about their concerns, their preoccupations, because obviously, if the Election Law had been so much of a concern and a preoccupation of the Opposition, they would have brought amendments before now and those amendments would have been addressed in this House because each Thursday when this House sits we have priority given to Private Members' Motions. Saying this, therefore, I would say, Mr. Speaker, they have benefited very little in terms of their political gesturing by trying to do what they have done here, suggesting that they cannot vote for this Bill. This House should at least try to be unanimous when it comes to an Election Law that will govern the conduct of all candidates in the General Election. To give the people, at this time, the idea that the Government again, must pass this Law by itself with the support of the backbench, when I know that the UDP did not devise this Law.

I, therefore, would like to extend my thanks and my gratitude to the people from the Election Office who worked so hard to develop this Law, to make the relevant amendment and to be able to introduce to this Honourable House, not by the United Democratic Party Members, but by the Acting Chief Secretary who brought it to this Honourable House. So, there is no way that the Opposition should sit there and try to get the general public to believe that the people in the Election Office are so dishonest that they have not given good thought and consideration to this piece of legislation that is being brought here today. It is a shame from them because they are so disadvantaged when it comes to having things that are relevant to say that they come up with this kind of situation.

People like Mr. Orrett Connor, Mr. Kearney Gomez, and Mr. Colford Scott, those types of people have helped. I have not had very much to do with this particular piece of legislation because it was not something that I had time to get involved with. I would just like to say that the people like the Honourable Chief Secretary and all of those persons who worked so hard, would have felt that their work would have been in vain if we were not able to take this up in this sitting and pass it so that it would be able to be used for the upcoming elections. So, let us not see this as a Bill that should divide this House again, and it should divide this House, Mr. Speaker, only if the Members of the PPM Opposition feels that they have to think so low in order to make political mileage.

Thank you.

The Speaker: Does any other Member wish to speak? Does any other Member wish to speak? Last call, does any other Member wish to speak?

The Honourable Member of the Opposition.

Hon. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

Clearly there are a few facts that need to be cleared up from, first of all, what the Minister for Community Affairs just spoke about and I am going to try to remember, perhaps not in sequence, but as they come to mind.

First of all, none of the speakers from this side of the House, in anything that was said, either by innuendo or any direct accusation levelled any criticism or anything of the sort at the people who work in the Elections Office.

The Minister for Community Affairs, in his own way, spoke to what other Member speaking before me on this side may have said, as if it were demeaning to the Supervisor of Elections or any of the other members of the election staff, and that is certainly not the case. He went that route because he said that the Bill before us was prepared by those people, so any criticism of the Bill is criticism levelled at them.

We need to understand very clearly that the original proposal from the Elections Office was a document which headlined itself by saying that this document is not to be submitted to the legislative assembly, and we understood that. That was the document which we originally received sometime in March when we first met and that document was accompanied by what you have termed, Sir, as the Dundas Report, which has been the object of some crosstalk between Members here today. Our side has spoken to the original document, which obviously took into consideration the Dundas Report, all of the experiences of the Supervisor and his staff and their exposure in other jurisdictions, which many of them have simply to ensure that they are up to scratch with procedures here and what some might call 'the cutting edge' when it comes to keeping abreast of standards.

So, what we got originally when we had the first meeting, at which point in time many concerns were raised, and what we end up seeing here now is not the same, which includes some of the provisions made in the original document prepared by the Elections Office after Cabinet had discussed and decided what should be the final version coming to the Legislative Assembly. It must be clear and understood that the Minister for Community Affairs cannot try to say that the entire process was one corralled by the Elections Office and they brought the big document first, then they sat by their little selves, decided it was too much and slimmed it down to this, and then gave it through the Honourable First Official Member's office to be presented to the House. That is the way the Minister for Community Affairs presented the case and it is not so. Absolutely not! What was presented by the Honourable Acting First Official Member is obviously as a result—I hear the Leader of Government Business saying, I would know. Whether he likes or admits it or not, the little time that I was there I did learn some things and his deputy in the subsequent presentation was very precise in outlining to those of us who were at the presentation what the procedure was, so it was very clear to us.

First of all we need to establish and understand that the Bill before us, which we are debating, is what the Government thinks should be the amendments to the Elections Law which come to the legislature at this time seeking passage. Let us have that crystal clear.

In looking at the Bill that has been presented and my colleagues have raised some issues, which are of concern to the Opposition, it is very obvious that some of the issues which have been raised are perhaps going to have to be raised again for all speakers and different input put towards this. I will do my best not to be tasked with tedious repetition. Before I get to the concerns I am going to take a couple of minutes to speak to a few of the proposed amendments and the vast majority of them are amendments which we the Opposition, clearly support. We accept that the existing legislation needs to be changed to suit the times.

The clause under the Memorandum of Objects and Reasons where it speaks to Clause 9 on page 4 of the Bill itself, I want to raise attention. I did have a short conversation with the Deputy Supervisor of Elections. Clause 9 in essence, repeals and replaces section 21 of the principal Law. To shorten the time frame within which a person whose name appears on the register of electors must notify the registering officer of a change in his name or street address. Notification in a change of occupation would also be required.

Mr. Speaker, with your permission, so that everyone is clear on it, I want to take just a minute to compare the now legislation with what is proposed.

In the existing Law section 21—the marginal note for section 21 speaks to the change of electors name or residence and it reads: “Any person whose name appears on the Register of Electors who changes his or her name or place of residence shall, within twelve months of such change, give notice in writing in form 13 to the registering officer for the electoral district in respect of which he is registered as an elector and shall where the change of residence is from one electoral district to another, at the same time, send a copy of such notice to the registering officer for the electoral district within which the new place of residence is situated and shall also, where the change is from one electoral district to another or from one polling division to another within the same electoral district, return his elector registration card to the Supervisor for it to be altered accordingly and replaced.” It is proposed for that section which I read, to be repealed and for the following section to be substituted. The marginal note with what is proposed will now read: “Change of elector’s name, occupation or street address.” The new section 21 will now read: “Any person whose name appears on the Register of Electors and who changes his name, occupation or street address shall;

(a) within six weeks of such change” that is compared to twelve months. It now requires instead of the original Law for a change of name or address. In the Law it reads, “name or place of residence.” What it now requires or what it will require with the new change will be the name, occupation or street address within six weeks of such change rather than twelve months. That person must give to the registering officer for the electoral district in respect of which he is registered as an elector, notice in writing in the same form together with such supporting documents as the registering officer may require.

Where the change of street address is from one electoral district to another he must also send a copy to the registering officer for the electoral district within which the new street address is located, and where the change is from an electoral district to another or from one polling division to another within the same electoral district, he must return his electoral registration card to the supervisor for it to be altered accordingly and replaced.

So, Mr. Speaker, when we compare those two I am presuming, Sir that the addition of occupation and street address in the new section 21 is to not only comply but to ensure that the database for the Elections Office for each of the electors is kept up to date and correct. I do not think there is any question as to what is required there. If I may take a minute here to say this for the benefit of the public; The reason, as I understand from the supervisors of the Elections Office, for wanting to update the electors ID card is because the existing voters registration cards, which all of us voters have, does not have a street address on it and it is the intention of the Elections Office to be able to have a database and to be able to correctly locate all of its voters, and the new voters registration card is going to have a street address on it; hence whenever there is a change of address you need to go in and notify and get a new ID card, which will change that address.

I take the moment because unfortunately many members of the public are gaining the impression that if you do not change the existing voter registration card you will not be able to vote during the elections. I want to categorically state having spoken with the officers that this is not the case. Electors are encouraged to change their cards and the Elections Office staff are going out to various locations on given dates and times to accommodate the public and they are really making a strong effort to get as many, if not all, of the voters registrations cards changed to have the street address on it. The fact of the matter is that by Law if you go to the polls and you forgot your voter’s registration card, once you have a method to prove your identification and the officer is able to find you on the voter’s list they cannot prevent you from going through the exercise of voting. So, I want to make sure that the public do not continue to believe that if you do not change the registration card or if you do not have it that you will be prevented from your right to vote. Nevertheless, I also take the same opportunity to encourage people to change their voter’s registration card and get it updated with their street address because it only means smoother operations for the Elections Office and for the voting process to be able to flow smoothly on that day.

The question I have with section 21 between the Law which exists and the law that is proposed is simply the timing. It is twelve months that exists and what is being proposed is six weeks. I am not quite sure where this proposed time limit has come from. What I readily accept is that the twelve month period is not practical because while it may seem advantageous or disadvantageous, depending on how you look at it, if a person has made a conscious decision and changed where they reside and have become a part of a separate community, their demands on their representatives are most likely going to relate to the communities in which they live. Therefore the voting process that they should participate in should be for whoever is going to represent where they live. I think that is logical and make sense, but if you have an entire year in which to make that change you could physically be living in another district or another location for just about that same period of time and still be able to vote in wherever you were voting before. It exists up until now and we hear of many cases like that. People might prefer to do so and in some instances it is beneficial to some of the candidates and the opposite for some, but I am not looking at it from that angle so I am just looking at what is practical and what I think should exist.

So, the fact that they should notify the office and make the change there is no question there. The only question of timing whether it is a year or six weeks. I personally think that six weeks might be too short a period of time. Mr. Speaker, I perhaps will need a few more moments to do this so I would be very happy to continue to tomorrow, Sir.

The Speaker: Honourable Members we have reached the hour of 8 pm, the hour of adjournment. Before calling on the Honourable Leader of Government Business to move the motion for the adjournment I would take this opportunity to remind all Honourable Members and through this medium also all associate members of the local branch of the (CPA) the Commonwealth Parliamentary Association of the CPA's Annual General Meeting (AGM) scheduled for 4 pm tomorrow, 22 July 2004.

It is proposed to adjourn the House at 3.45 pm tomorrow to allow for the CPA AGM to hopefully start properly at 4 pm.

The Honourable Leader of Government Business.

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: Mr. Speaker, I know that we have those other meetings scheduled for tomorrow and I had not adjourned and set a date at 8 o'clock. I simply said to carry on business after 4.30 pm and seeing that we have quite a bit of business left and just a few of us left that may want to speak on this I think that we should finish this because it cannot be that long and at least tomorrow all we would have to do is go through the committee stage of the Bill.

I think we should do that—I am sorry but I think that we need to continue and we did give the House an indication that we would continue sometimes until 10 pm and we do have a lot of business left.

Hon. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Mr. Speaker, if I may.

The Speaker: The Honourable Leader of the Opposition.

Hon. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Mr. Speaker, we had notice from your good self today that we would go on until 8 pm. I then set a meeting for 8 o'clock which people are waiting for us to attend and I am—

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: Lying.

Hon. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Mr. Speaker, the Leader of Government Business has just said that I am lying and I am not lying. I am telling the truth, Sir.

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: You did this more than once and you did not have any meeting, I know that to be a fact.

The Speaker: Honourable Members I had given notice that we would end at 8 pm but as the Honourable Leader of Government Business has stated we are close to completing the debate on this Bill. I am completely in the hands of the Member of the House; if you wish to continue until we finish this I would be happy to do so.

Honourable Member please let me have your wish on this matter.

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: Mr. Speaker, I did not realise that you had given them some notification of 8 o'clock, but I will tell this House how I feel.

The Opposition has made too many attempts to stretch out the meetings of this House; they stay outside when we need quorums and they say that they set meetings and I see them going somewhere else, not for meetings but I will give them the benefit of the doubt and since you had given an indication we have to abide by that therefore I will go along with that

We have a lot of business to conduct. We have so much business to conduct that pertains to the House.

ADJOURNMENT

The Speaker: Honourable Members please stop the crosstalk.

If it is the wish of Members we will adjourn at this point.

Honourable Leader of Government Business, please move the motion for the adjournment.

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: Mr. Speaker, I move the adjournment of this Honourable House until 10 am tomorrow morning, being Thursday morning.

The Speaker: I would just like to again repeat—please remember that there is a CPA meeting tomorrow afternoon at 4 pm but we plan to adjourn at 3.45 pm so that Members can assemble and we can start promptly at 4 pm.

We will not be coming back but adjourning at 3.45 pm.

The question is that this House do now adjourn until 10 am, tomorrow Thursday, 22 July 2004. All those in favour please say Aye. Those against, No.

Ayes.

The Speaker: The Ayes have it.

At 8.04 pm the House stood adjourned until 10 am Thursday, 22 July 2004.

OFFICIAL HANSARD REPORT
THURSDAY
22 JULY 2004
11.13 AM
Tenth Sitting

The Speaker: I invite the Honourable Leader of Government Business to lead us in prayers.

PRAYERS

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: Let us pray.

Almighty God, from whom all wisdom and power are derived: We beseech Thee so to direct and prosper the deliberations of the Legislative Assembly now assembled, that all things may be ordered upon the best and surest foundations for the glory of Thy Name and for the safety, honour and welfare of the people of these Islands.

Bless our Sovereign Lady, Queen Elizabeth II; Philip, Duke of Edinburgh; Charles, Prince of Wales; and all the Royal Family. Give grace to all who exercise authority in our Commonwealth, that peace and happiness, truth and justice, religion and piety may be established among us. Especially we pray for the Governor of our Islands, the Speaker of the Legislative Assembly, Official Members and Ministers of Cabinet and Members of the Legislative Assembly, that we may be enabled faithfully to perform the responsible duties of our high office. All this we ask for Thy great Name's sake.

Let us say The Lord's Prayer together: Our Father, who art in Heaven, Hallowed be Thy Name. Thy Kingdom come, Thy will be done on earth as it is in Heaven. Give us this day our daily bread, and forgive us our trespasses, as we forgive those who trespass against us. Lead us not into temptation, but deliver us from evil. For Thine is the Kingdom, the power and the glory, forever and ever. Amen.

The Lord bless us and keep us. The Lord make His face shine upon us and be gracious unto us. The Lord lift up the light of His countenance upon us and give us peace, now and always. Amen.

The Speaker: Please be seated. Proceedings are now resumed.

Proceedings resumed at 11.16 am

READING BY THE HONOURABLE
SPEAKER OF MESSAGES
AND ANNOUNCEMENTS

Apologies

The Speaker: I have received apologies for absence from the Second Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman, and apologies for the late arrival of the Honourable Third Official Member.

Change in Adjournment time

The Speaker: There is a change in the time that was stated for the adjournment for today's meeting, which was announced last night. This change is from 3.45 pm to 8 pm this evening. The House will suspend as was announced at 3.45 pm to commence with the CPA Annual General Meeting at 4 pm and it is planned to reconvene at 6 pm to continue the proceedings until 8 pm this evening so as to get through with as much on the work on the Order Paper, as possible.

QUESTIONS TO HONOURABLE
MEMBERS AND MINISTERS OF THE CABINET

Suspension of Standing Order 23(7) and (8)

The Speaker: I call on the Honourable Leader of Government Business for the suspension of Standing Order 23(7) and (8) to allow questions to commence and continue beyond the hour of 11 am.

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: Mr. Speaker, I move for the suspension of Standing Order 23(7) and (8) in order for questions to be asked after 11 am.

The Speaker: The question is that Standing Order 23(7) and (8) be suspended to allow question time to commence and continue beyond the hour of 11 am. All those in favour please say Aye. Those against, No.

Aye.

The Speaker: The Ayes have it.

Question Put: Agreed. Standing Order 23(7) and (8).

Question No. 03

The Speaker: The Second Elected Member for George Town.

No. 3: Mr Alden M McLaughlin, Jr. asked the Honourable Minister responsible for the Ministry of Education, Human Resources and Culture, in light of the closure of registration at the George Hicks High School, what is being done about students who are unable to be given a place at that school?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Education, Human Resources and Culture

Hon. Roy Boddén: Mr. Speaker, there are no outstanding applications for places at George Hicks High School. Twelve applications were received after the deadline for the closure of registration. These were processed and students were placed in their respective grade levels.

The Ministry has set the cut-off point for enrolment at 1100. The early indications from the principal are that this number of places will be sufficient.

The Speaker: Are there any supplementaries?

If there are no supplementaries I will ask Madam Clerk to continue.

STATEMENTS BY MEMBERS/MINISTERS OF THE CABINET

The Speaker: I have received no statements from Honourable Members or Ministers of the Cabinet.

GOVERNMENT BUSINESS

Suspension of Standing Order 14(3) to allow Government Business to take precedence over Other Business

The Speaker: I call on the Honourable Leader of Government Business.

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: Mr. Speaker, before I move the suspension of Standing Order I would say to the House that we are not going to move into the Elections Bill first, we have some amendments to do so we will take the continuation of the Elections Amendment later on so we can move to other business.

I move the suspension of Standing Order 14(3) to allow Government Business to take precedence over other business.

The Speaker: The question is that Standing Order 14(3) be suspended to allow Government Business to take precedence over other business. All those in favour please say Aye. Those against, No.

Ayes.

The Speaker: The Ayes have it.

Agreed. Standing Order 14(3) suspended.

The Speaker: Honourable Members I also wish to draw the House attention to Standing Order 14(4) which states; “Subject to paragraphs (1) and (2), Members of Government may place notices of motions and orders of the day on the Order Paper in any order they please.”

Honourable Leader of Government Business.

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: Mr. Speaker, we do not intend to move with the next suspension but we intend to go right to Motions, Government Motion No. 3/04.

MOTIONS

GOVERNMENT MOTION NO. 3/04

The Convention for the Elimination of all forms of Discrimination Against Women

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for Community Services, Youth, Sports and Gender Affairs.

Dr. the Hon. Frank S. McField: Mr. Speaker, I beg to move the Motion on the Convention for the Elimination of all forms of Discrimination Against Women.

“WHEREAS the Convention for the Elimination Of All Forms of Discrimination Against Women was adopted by the General Assembly of the United Nations in December 1979 and came into force on 3rd September 1981;

“AND WHEREAS as of 26 March 2004, 177 countries -over ninety percent of the members of the United Nations are party to the Convention and an additional one has signed the Treaty, binding itself to do nothing in contravention of its terms;

“AND WHEREAS the United Kingdom and Northern Ireland which ratified the Convention on 7th April, 1986 included several overseas territories in its instrument of ratification;

“AND WHEREAS the Convention was not extended to the Cayman Islands; and the question has arisen as to why the Convention was not extended;

“AND WHEREAS the Government of the Cayman Islands, on its own initiative, has requested that the United Kingdom extend the Convention to the Cayman Islands.

“BE IT THEREFORE RESOLVED THAT this Assembly requests that the Government of the United Kingdom and Northern Ireland, extend its ratification of the Convention to the Cayman Islands before its next Report to the Committee on the Elimination of Discrimination Against Women.

The Speaker: The question is that BE IT THEREFORE RESOLVED THAT this Assembly requests that the Government of the United Kingdom and Northern Ireland extend its ratification of the Convention to the Cayman Islands before its next Report to the Committee on the Elimination of Discrimination Against Women.

The Motion is open for debate; does the Honourable Minister wish to speak thereto?

Dr. the Hon. Frank S. McField: Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

On 18 December 1979 the Convention on the Elimination of all forms of Discrimination Against Women were adopted by the United Nations General Assembly. It entered into force as an international treaty on 3 September 1981 after the twentieth country had ratified it. By the 10th Anniversary of the Convention in 1989 almost 100 nations have agreed to be bound by its provisions.

The Convention was the accumulation of more than 30 years of work by the United Nations Commission on the status of women, a body established in 1946 to monitor the situation of women and to promote women's rights. The Commission's work has been instrumental in bringing to light all the area in which women are denied equality with men. These efforts for the advancements of women have resulted in several declarations and conventions, of which, the Convention on the Elimination of All Forms of Discrimination Against Women is the central and most comprehensive document.

Among the international human rights treaties the Convention takes an important place in bringing the female half of humanity into focus of human rights concerns. The spirit of the Convention is rooted in the goals of the United Nations: to reaffirm faith in fundamental human rights, in the dignity and worth of the human person in the equal rights of men and women. The present document spells out the meaning of equality and how it can be achieved. In so doing the Convention establishes not only an international bill of rights for women, but also an agenda for action by countries to guarantee the enjoyment of those rights.

In its preamble the Convention explicitly acknowledges that extensive discrimination against women continues to exist and emphasises that such discrimination violates principles of equality of rights and respect for human dignity. As defined in Article 1, discrimination is understood as any distinction, exclusion or restriction made on the basis of sex in the political, economic, social, cultural, civil or any other field. The Convention gives positive affirmation to the principle of equality by requiring States parties to take all appropriate measures including legislation, to ensure the full development and advancement of women for the purpose of guaranteeing them the exercise and enjoyment of human rights and fundamental freedoms on a basis of equality with men.

The agenda for equality is specified in fourteen subsequent articles. In its approach the Convention covers three dimensions of the situations of women; civil rights and the legal status of women are dealt with in great detail. In addition and unlike other human rights treaties the convention is also concerned with the dimension of human reproduction as well as with the impact of cultural factors on the gender relations.

The legal status of women receives the broadest attention. Concern over the basic rights of political participation has not diminished since the adoption of the Convention on the political rights of women in 1952. Its provisions therefore are restated in article 7 of the present document thereby women are guaranteed the rights to vote, to hold public office and to exercise public functions. This includes equal rights for women to represent their countries at the international level – article 8.

The Convention on the Nationality of Married Women, adopted in 1957, is integrated under article 9 providing for the statehood of women, irrespective of their marital status. The Convention thereby draws attention to the fact that often women's legal status has been linked to marriage making them dependent on their husband's nationality rather than individuals in their own right.

Articles 10, 11 and 13 respectively affirm women's rights to non discrimination in education, employment and economic and social activities. These demands are given specific emphasis with regards to the situation of rural women whose particular struggles and vital economic contributions as noted in Article 14, warrant more attention in policy planning.

Article 15 asserts the full equality of women's civil and business matters, demanding that all instruments directed at restricting women's legal capacity shall be deemed null and void.

Finally in Article 16 the Convention returns to the issue of marriage and family relations, asserting the equal rights and obligations of women and men with regards to choice of spouse, parenthood, personal rights and command over property.

Aside from civil rights issues, the Convention also devotes major attention to a most vital concern of women, namely their reproductive rights. Their preamble sets the tone by stating that "the role of women in procreation should not be a basis for discrimination". The link between discrimination and women's reproductive role is a matter of recurrent concern in the Convention. For example it advocates in Article 5, "a proper understanding of maternity as a social function", demanding fully shared responsibility for child rearing by both sexes. Accordingly, provisions for maternity protection and child care are proclaimed as essential rights and are incorporated into all areas of the Convention, whether dealing with employment, family law, health care or education.

Society's obligation extends to offering social services, especially child care facilities that allows individuals to combine family responsibilities with work and participation in public life. Special measures for maternity protection are recommended and shall not be considered discriminatory - article 4. The Convention also affirms women's' rights to reproductive choice, notably it is the only human rights treaty to mention family planning. State parties are obligated to include advice and family planning in the education process - article 10.h; and to develop family codes that guarantee women's rights to decide freely and responsibly on the number and spacing of children and to have access to the information, education and means to enable them to exercise these rights - article 16.e.

The third general thrust of the Convention aims at enlarging our understanding of the concept of human rights, as it gives formal recognition to the influence of culture and tradition on restricting women's enjoyment of their fundamental rights. These forces take shape in stereotypes customs and norms which give rise to the multitude of legal, political and economic constraints on the advancement of women. Noting this interrelationship the preamble on the Convention stresses "that a change in the traditional role of men as well as the role of women in society and in the family is needed to achieve full equality of men and women". State parties are therefore obligated to work towards modification of social and cultural patterns of individual conduct in order to eliminate prejudices and customary and all other practices which are based on the idea of the inferiority or the superiority of either of the sexes, or stereotype roles for men and women. Articles 5 and 10c - mandates the revision of textbooks, school programmes and teaching methods with a view of eliminating stereotype concepts in the field of education.

Finally cultural patterns which define the public realm as a man's world and the domestic sphere as women's domain are strongly targeted in all of the Convention's provisions that affirm the equal responsibilities of both sexes in family life and their equal rights with regards to education employment. Altogether, the Convention provides a comprehensive framework for challenging the various forces that have created and sustained discrimination based upon sex.

The implementation of the Convention is monitored by the Committee on the Elimination of Discrimination Against Women (CEDAW). The Committee's mandate and the administration of the Treaty are defined in articles 17 through 30 of the Convention. The Committee is comprised of twenty three experts nominated by their Governments and elected by the state parties as individuals "of high moral standing and competence in the field covered by the Convention".

At least every four years the States parties are expected to submit a national report to the Committee indicating the measures they have adopted to give effect to the provisions of the Convention. During its annual sessions the Committee members discuss these reports with a government representative and explore with them areas for further action by the specific country. The Committee also takes a general recommendation to the State parties on matters concerning the elimination of discrimination against women.

Mr. Speaker, it is possible for Members of the Legislative Assembly who would want to have the full text of the Convention on the Elimination of All Forms of Discrimination Against Women, to have that document. I have already outlined many of the Convention's attempts to assist with ways to eliminate the discrimination against women. Having been responsible for bringing the Cayman Islands National Gender Policy to this Honourable House I now take the opportunity to suggest to Honourable Members of the Legislative Assembly that in fact, the Government of the Cayman Islands has not only asked to be included in this Convention but the Government, as I stated yesterday, is one of the first countries in the Caribbean to develop a policy specifically related to the issue of gender bias and equality.

Mr. Speaker, many times when we tried to break down the Convention to the laymen, as I will try to do now, is that many men in our society feel that they have issues in dealing with relationships between men and women. Our society sometimes take for granted that this very important aspect of societal relationship is natural and because it is natural there needs to be no input from the various institutions in the society that have an interest in the family and family relationships. For this reason we sometimes do not pay enough attention to the issues of bonding between the members of the different sex that will then be responsible for creating the marital relationship; that will then be responsible for crating the homes and the households in our country; that will then become the primary socialisation agents in our society; that will determine whether or not the values of the society are carried forward and supported or not. Therefore when they hear people talking about equality between men and women the assumption is that there is a natural spontaneous instinctive reaction from some men; that there is no need for Government to get involved in the domestic realm in the public realm with regards to the issue of status of men and women in the society.

Many men also believe that there is no imbalance between the status of men and women in their society. I know some men who have said that they have difficulties in accepting voting for me because I seem to be biased towards the women because of the programmes in which my Ministry have been responsible for developing, which specifically attempts to monitor and assist with issues we feel are negative, not just towards women, but towards the children who women reproduce and assist with in the socialisation process. Our concerns are not totally altruistic, in other words, it is not totally because of an interest in women, it is also because of a greater interest in the society. Without the recognition that women play an equal role and should have the rights to the same humanity, the same support that men have been given through custom and tradition in our society and in other societies, then we cannot deal with some of the more challenging, social, educational and cultural issues which we have in our society.

The fact is that we understand the same men who would criticise us for providing shelter for women that are being abused are the same men who have great respect for their own mothers and love their mothers like they love no others. Mothers are women too! So, when we are talking about the protection of women we are not just talking about the protection of someone's girlfriend or wife because of a dispute, but we are talking about the protection of women.

We know that in the domestic realm most people who have issues with domestic violence have also experienced some form of domestic violence as children. Many of us Caribbean males have not been spared this experience of having been exposed to domestic violence, so we accept that from a cultural and social perspective that those very men who would now challenge me to say that I am trying to create shelter for their women; that we are trying to give the women all the power, must recognise that we are trying not to give women power but we are trying to give the society the power to be able to reproduce, for future generations, the types of people we all know are necessary to create a harmonious and God fearing society.

Mr. Speaker, I wrote extensively on the issue of domestic violence. In my plays, Time Longer dan Rope; Down Side Up, those issues reoccurs. What I attempted to do in those plays is to show the fact of the traumatic effect that a fight between members of the family, say the father and mother, and the grandmother getting involved as in the case of Time Longer dan Rope—the traumatic effect it has on children; the fear the child feels when he or she experiences, feels, sees or imagines that the father is going to physically hurt the mother or that the mother will physically hurt the father. That is what those plays attempted to bring as a message to this society in part many years ago.

The fact that I felt that a crisis centre was something that I wanted to see come under my administration and that I made all efforts to get going, does not necessarily mean that I as a man feel that somehow that there are not things in me that causes me to sometimes become temperamental and tempered and want to hit somebody. I know where I come from, I know my culture and I know the influences, but it does not mean because the influences are there that we should not set goals and ideals beyond the position that we are coming from. That is why we can climb up from the pit that we find ourselves at because we look towards the stars. We do not let our ideals be our feelings or imagination, as they are limited by our social, economic and spiritual circumstances.

We allow ourselves to be guided by higher principles and ideals and so sometimes when we find, for instance, the Convention of the Elimination of all Forms of Discrimination Against Women, this is a higher ideal that has been accepted by members of the world community, and we in the Cayman Islands should strive to use this as the yardstick and not our culture and tradition with regards to women, and the relationship between women and men. This is not to say that the Cayman Islands do not have, perhaps, a better tradition than most countries when it comes to relationships between men and women. We have had our troubles and traumatic periods as well, in families, in some classes in the Cayman Islands. I cannot speak for all of the social groupings but I know that I can speak for some groups where they were very much of this type of traumatic domestic arguments and domestic violence, as we call it today.

There are some places where women are sold and places where women have no possibility to choose their mates. These are extreme countries and we can see why countries of the world would want to bring this as an issue where discrimination is more pronounced, serious, institutionalise and more a part of the culture and tradition of those countries. However, that does not go to say that the Cayman Islands still does not have issues with regards to discrimination. We also bring the convention not because there are cases where we can obviously prove discrimination, but because we know that we want to make sure that there is no discrimination if there is attempt by people if they think there should be. We also want to support those countries in the world who know that we need to stand together as a global village to say that we do not accept the discrimination against women in any of these areas.

I think that the challenge which we have in the Cayman Islands is a greater challenge in terms of having the issue of men who are many times less educated than our women. We have a phenomena in our society where many of our able bodied men are not as competitive in the new system, therefore they are finding themselves at a disadvantage and people are talking and asking: "How can you talk about discrimination against women when it seems today that there is more discrimination against men?" They seem to always be willing to take the woman's position when she goes to the police rather than take the man's position when he goes to the police.

So, there are concerns in our society that perhaps more has to be done to achieve the end of the gender policy, which is to establish equity and equality between men and women. It also means working with men to make sure that men are able to fulfil their role as men, fathers and uncles in a society and therefore in order to do that we must become educated. We must pay special attention to the education of these men to make sure that these men can be partners to these women who are now becoming educated and so professional.

Perhaps when we are talking about the gender policy it is necessary for us to communicate the fact that the gender policy is a very advanced way of thinking about human relationships. That the Gender Policy accepts the fact that there are inequalities that are developed, not just because of discrimination, but inequalities can be developed also because of the fact that people were given privilege positions. The mere fact that a man might be seen as privileged might not cause him to get the same tools, pay attention to getting the same tools that he needs in order to continue to be competitive with his female counterpart. So, at the end of the day because we were protected, to a certain extent, we felt we were men and could get anything we wanted; we felt strong and gifted in whatever way, but we felt that we were so special that we could survive and be head of the family and still command women and be in this kind of prestigious position, only to find at the end of the day the women needed to work much harder to be accepted to have public and professional positions, and they knew that. They started at a very young age to work hard and as a result, because of the system we have that values people according to their productivity and their ability, they have found themselves in positions we might consider to be economically and socially advantageous.

We still have to look at tradition and the Convention tells us about traditions and customs. Although a woman becomes professionally more qualified than perhaps her male counterpart, the woman will find herself in a situation where the challenge to her position, as being more qualified, becomes even more intense. So, men and women start arguing and having quarrels and fights based upon the fact the man feels that he has to challenge her to show her that she does not wear the pants and is not the boss. This is where tradition and custom continues to play roles in structuring the relationships between men and women and causing it, at the end of the day, to be something that we need to definitely look at regardless of whether or not we think that women are educated and not discriminated against; that in itself is a form of bias as a result of gender issues.

We need to make ourselves more gender conscious of the real need to have equity and equality between men and women and we are not just talking about in the public sector but also in the domestic sector realm. Even when we go back to the 1970's to the girls who were working in the banks because the men had gone to sea and they were still oriented towards that. The girls got the jobs in Royal and Barclay's Banks, bought the nice Toyota cars and would drive the boys. There are different things there where again, the men feels that that is their privilege and right to have them do things for them because they have a good job. The men look at it in way of saying that the women should support the children because they work in the banks. I only have this little job and she has this good job so she should be supporting the children.

The idea is to have everybody, male and female, regardless of the occupation or educational level, to recognise that there is a need for the co-operation and collaboration between the two sexes in order for the reproduction of the society to take place, and the proper socialisation to happen.

Mr. Speaker, it is something that we need to continue to examine. The Gender Policy, in looking at the historical development of women in the society and looking at women becoming involved with the educational, public, political and other systems, and looking at discrimination as something that is institutionalised is a mistake to think that discrimination only exists in its institutional ways and that you cannot have discrimination if it is not institutional. A lot of discrimination happens whether or not there is a law that says you can and cannot do this. Whether or not the system allows you to pass through there is still a lot of discrimination because it is a social psychological part of your value system and of your culture and tradition. Even when you cannot act it out in a public sector you go back to the domestic realm and act it out.

What we are talking about is the rearing and education of men that whether or not we are in the private, public sector or in the domestic realm that we pay attention to the fact that tradition has created in us certain biases. It is not for me to come here and be pretentious like I am bringing this because I think I have escaped my tradition and heritage, I am only saying that if we only look beyond our own social and cultural limitations and have ideals that will lead us forward, then my son perhaps will have a chance and opportunity even if I was not that kind of person.

Society takes time to change and it takes generations to change. Social change is slow but we have to create the framework and the foundations for it to take place for people to be guided and activated and involved in that particular change. We perceive that the change in the relationships between men and women to a point where they can be harmonious, supportive relationships is one of the fundamental needs of our society.

It is important to see that the development in the area of gender affairs in our country has been related to developments in other parts of the world; that it has been based upon the whole concept of the elimination of discrimination. When we therefore look at the issue of maternity leave in our laws; when we look at the way in which women are discriminated against by men in the workplace because of maternity, which is what the Convention is saying—that because a person is the primary agent for reproduction does not necessarily mean that they should be put at a disadvantage in the workplace. So, women have certain issues that are women issues, even certain biological and physiological issues that are specifically women's issues, the result of them being women. If they were not women then nature would not have a way of reproducing itself therefore they should not be discriminated against because of those issues. Those issues should not be viewed as issues that make them inferior or disadvantage; those issues should not create disadvantages for them and therefore, sometimes in the workplace although there is not an outward way of saying: "Look! this is so". We know that some people would say if you go to get a job tomorrow and you were pregnant, because at a particular point they would recognise that and probably say: "We are not going to hire her because she is pregnant and before you know it she is on maternity leave". We are talking about that sort of thing; the discrimination could be like that.

There could become a point for promotion and some people might say: "Well she has two children already and if we promote her she might have a third one and might not be as good as she is now". So, she might not be as good as she is if she starts having children. Although there are people who would say: "Yes, we will give her a job", but as soon as the point comes where she might want to start having children it becomes an issue. So, these are the areas of the definite non-institutionalised discrimination because there is nothing in the Law that says that can happen. As a matter of fact, the Law says it should not happen but people through their customs and their traditions in the workplace practice that kind of situation.

There is also a note here where for instance, if a man would have a child out of wedlock there would be a certain degree of acceptance of that in the Caribbean, whereas if a woman is to have a child there would be a certain penalty. I have seen that with regards to the school system, where the school have penalised women who have been young and decided to have a child and because the child is not in a marital situation they have been penalised. We have also seen that with regards to young mothers where when they get pregnant they are asked to leave school, whereas the fathers of those children were able to continue and therefore had no responsibility. That is what we are talking about when we talk about gender bias and discrimination; those are all the areas.

I am sure that many of us can sit down and think about it because the interesting thing about it is that we have to accept the fact that our culture is a culture of gender bias. Whether or not we want to recognise this is beside the point, it is a culture that is biased towards a particular sex, just as it is a culture that is biased towards a particular race. We know this to be the fact and it has its social consequences and many psychological consequences as well.

We have been doing a lot to try to develop equal opportunities for women and men by making sure it is like they have talked about; what is in our text books and that our text books are not depicting that stereotypical division of roles between women and men, but making it clearer to young women from the very beginning that their role is not in the domestic realm only, but also in the public realm. Therefore making it known to young men that their role is not just in the public realm but also in the domestic realm, that they also can learn how to cook, sew, change diapers and do things like that without being sissies.

There is a necessity for us to also look at the macho men image that many of us portray in our society and to give boys the confidence that because they hold a book in their hands does not necessarily mean that they are girly, girly and sissies. We have noticed a very interesting thing in the theatre and it is that a lot of people acquaint people in the theatre with some feminine type of moves and it is hard to get male dancers in our society. Males will go to the disco tech and dance but will not dance with girls in any kind of formal setting; that is for girls to do. So, our dancers in the national dance troops are in the majority women.

We also look at the primary schools and we see that when the little girls are doing the quadrille there are no boys doing it with them. The girls have to dress us as boys so these are issues. The Lady Member for North Side is saying, not North Side, well I do not think North Side is any different from any other side. The point I am trying to make is that in the majority of instances this is the case. I guess she is saying that because I am making such a good case for what she has always tried to make a good case for, and she probably feels a little jealous because I am making that case. She thinks I do not have any sense but the point is I am trying to make the case so that at the end of the day we know that the culture and the tradition is something that we must pay attention to, and we know that the Gender Policy assist us in being able to do this.

My Ministry, which is responsible for gender affairs, changed it from women's affairs to gender affairs because we understood that it was not the issue of women we were dealing with only, but in order to deal with the issues of women we had to deal with the issues of men as well. We cannot talk about women's issues without talking about men. We cannot correct the situation without looking at the weaknesses that men have also inherited because of this hierarchal structuring of the society traditionally. So some of us have weaknesses as a result of the way in which the hierarchy has been constructed.

We are asking that this all be seen by the general population, by men out there. I know people who came to us and said: "Why should there be a women's resource centre, why should there not be a parenting centre". We have said that we understand parenting is very important and an important part of parenting should be to ensure that men and women learn how to communicate with each other. A lot of times I have noticed that is something not being taught to kids; it is like a foreign language— how do kids learn how to relate to each other; how does a boy learn how to relate to a girl and how does a girl learn how to relate to a boy. Do we teach them or do we let them figure it out for themselves by watching those people who do it sometimes in a very negative way? I heard something on the radio yesterday where girls were saying that good girls like bad boys. A nice little girl, she had the voice of a Barbie doll or a little angel, it was just beautiful and she was saying that good girls like bad boys. I think this is very telling about what I am trying to say here and how the tradition continues to play a role in making choices about relationships— how some girls would prefer to have a guy that is very masculine who might even hurt them rather than have a guy who looks a little more feminine that might be able to understand and communicate with them, and even carry their books. So, we have to understand how these choices in terms of partnerships and relationships are being informed by the gender issues in our society.

To let the Member for North Side know that I have done some thinking about the issues while I have been the Minister responsible for gender affairs. I have tried my best to participate in whatever events, whether or not it be the sixteen days of activism against violence or whatever it is I have to do, I have done it as a Minister responsible and as someone who also recognise the fact that there are issues in our society that have to do with gender that we must deal with. Coming to the point again, it is not to ignore the cries of many of our young men in our society for help.

There is one situation I would like to mention: There is somebody serving time now at Northward Prison for an offence against a girlfriend and that person came to me on two occasions to say it is unfair the way the Law is. It is unfair that she can do this to me and if she does not stop doing this to me this is what I am going to do to her. If you or Government does not do something about it I will do something about it because it is unfair that she can take advantage of me in the way in which she is. First of all when I found out that the person had committed this crime against this woman I felt bad in a way because I felt that I should have known that he would have done something and I should have done something, but my question is: What was I suppose to do?

When a person enters into a relationship with someone I always tell them, they chose that, it is their choice, the Government does not say marry this one or do not marry this one or we think this. These are personal choices that people are making so I am thinking that if we could help people to be able to choose the people that they could get along with, a little better we might be able to improve the outcomes. If someone decides that he or she is going to be with a certain person then there are consequences that come as a result of relationships and, especially the negative consequences because of the lack of ability to communicate. Sometimes some men really have problems with communicating and it is not because we do not know the language, we know the language but we do not know the emotional language to be able to communicate and it is the emotional language that we need to have.

Without the ability to sit down sometimes and say I think this is what is wrong at this point, let us do something about correcting it before it goes any further; that is what some of the men in our society needs to do. So, we recognise that from the point of view of gender policy there is going to have to be policies that deals specifically with our young men in aiding them to be able to better understand their role in society and the role of women in society, and what must happen specifically when they come together to create a household and in order to be able to further some of the dreams and desires they have.

Mr. Speaker, the fact that we are not at this particular point ignoring women's issues simply because men have issues, does not mean that we are not getting ready to prepare to also get programmes ready to help make our society as a whole more susceptible to the changes, which need to happen in women and men relationships in society because they are so important in terms of determining the future outcomes of society. Without women and men being able to come together to mutually support each other in equity and equality, we cannot hope to have the kind of parenting which we so badly need in order to reinforce the positive norms and values of our society.

Mr. Speaker, the Gender Policy is something that took some time to develop but it was timely in coming because it will give us something concrete to work with when the Report is done by the Committee with regards to this particular Convention. Since the Honourable Roy Bodden, Minister of Education, Human Resource and Culture is the Chairman of the Human Rights Committee here, I will be recommending that rather than form a separate committee to deal with the Convention for the Elimination of All Forms of Discrimination Against Women that that would be one of the areas which they would be reporting back to the United Kingdom on as well. I think that would work perfectly in terms of the fact that we do have the Human Rights Committee established. We do now have the application for the Convention on the Elimination of All Forms of Discrimination Against Women being made, and we are making it at a time that we are also tabling our Gender Policy. With the House acceptance of this Policy we are on the way to moving forward to make sure that we can actively participate in this very noble attempt.

As the Honourable Members of this House are aware, the Cayman Islands being a British Overseas Territory and not a Sovereign State cannot itself ratify the Convention on the Elimination of All Forms of Discrimination Against Women. I have been advised that the Government of the United Kingdom and Northern Ireland, when it ratified the Convention on the 7 April 1986 did not include the Cayman Islands in its list of Overseas Territories in its instrument of ratification. The instrument of ratification, I am also advised that this can be extended to include any or all of its Overseas Territories. This was done after the 7 April 1986 to include the Island of Hong Kong. We therefore, on our own initiative, without any outside pressure, want to be counted among the State parties to CEDAW Convention. Again, it is important to say that without any outside pressure we want to be considered to be parties to the Convention for the Elimination of All Forms of Discrimination Against Women and I am asking that the Legislative Assembly unanimously affirmative this Motion.

Thank you.

The Speaker: Does any other Member wish to speak?
The Second Elected Member for George Town.

Mr Alden M McLaughlin, Jr: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I welcome this opportunity to offer some comments and observations on the Motion that is before this Honourable House.

Mr. Speaker, the right not to be discriminated against on the basis of gender is a fundamental human right. Discrimination against women is not unique in any culture and efforts to eliminate such discrimination must be described as noble.

There are those who have pretended that in this culture, jurisdiction and in this country and community, that such discrimination either did not exist or that if it did it was a benign discrimination which did not really affect women badly. I am proud to say that I come from a line of very strong women who worked out of the house in this community at a time when that was something unusual. My paternal grandmother, Ethel Connor, was a school teacher. My maternal grandmother, Lizzy Bodden, raised two children and her husband died when my mother was five.

My own mother worked as a dispenser, nurse, sometimes doctor and pharmacist for 36 years at the Government hospital, the only job she really ever had. I know, particularly from my mother's experiences the difficulties and the discrimination that women in the workplace encountered. My mother often reminds me of a situation she went through when she was pregnant with me, in which the doctor she was then working for and who would also be the one to deliver her, caused her to work until 12 that afternoon then she went into labour and produced me some 3 hours later. So, this situation in relation to maternity and the rights of women and discrimination, or perhaps they would not have said it was discrimination, but just a lack of regard for the condition in which the woman finds herself at that time. I say all of that by way of background to make it very clear what my view is on women and on the rights of women, as half of humanity to be entitled to certain rights and privileges and, in particular, not to be discriminated against.

I wish to take this opportunity to refer to and compliment the tremendous efforts of my colleague, the Member for North Side and the huge role she has played in developing gender consciousness in this country. I believe that the Honourable Minister did refer to that role when he laid the National Gender Policy document earlier this week. However, I do not believe that sufficient acknowledgement for the contributions of the Elected Member for North Side's role, in bringing gender consciousness to the stage it is in this country have been sufficiently acknowledged. I was pleased when I had a brief look this morning at a document entitled "Historical Antecedents in the Development of a Gender Consciousness in the Cayman Islands" which was prepared by Dr. Patricia Mohamed and Mrs. Marilyn Connolly, to see extensive reference, not just to the work and efforts of the Elected Member for North Side and Mrs. Berna Thompson Murphy MBE, who was then the Third Elected Member for George Town, but also to the point made as to the significance of the efforts that were made by these two women in 1995 when they first brought a private members motion to this Honourable House for the Government to give early consideration to the establishment of an office for women's affairs. In reality that was the genesis of the development of this issue of women's affairs, rights and issues forming part of a subject within a ministry.

Mr. Speaker, I have had a look at the National Gender Policy and I have also had a look at the Convention on the Elimination of All Forms of Discrimination Against Women. I should say that in her various contributions in this Honourable House and in particular, in relation to that motion, the Elected Member for North Side called on the then Government to seek to have this Convention extended to the Cayman Islands. It was pointed out by the then Attorney General, Mr. Richard Coles that the mere fact that the United Kingdom Government had acceded to the Convention did not automatically extend its provisions to these Islands. I am going to suggest that part of the reason for that was that the United Kingdom were not satisfied that the Cayman Islands could give effect to the provisions of the Convention because we did not have the necessary institutions or legislative framework in place to give it effect to what the Convention requires.

The only problem I have with what the Minister is proposing—it is not a sufficient problem for me not the support the Motion—and that is that we still do not have in this country the necessary legislative framework and supporting institutions to give effect to the far reaching provisions of this Convention, and I am going to further say that we are unlikely to have those institutions and legislative framework in place, as required by the Convention, in time to avoid being found in breach of it. I will go through some of the provisions of the Convention in a moment but the Convention provides that all states to which it has been extended must have in place these necessary provisions, legislative framework and institutions within one year of the Convention having been extended to it.

I have had a look at the National Gender Policy and in there, these are not my conclusions, which the Minister himself has brought to this Honourable House, there are identified a number of failings, a number of areas in which legislative changes have to be made to bring the gender issue to where that needs to be. I am going to go to those but that, I believe, is a fundamental problem and I am going to refer to what happened in Hong Kong, which is also referred to in the National Gender Policy and the importance of having the country ready for the implementation of provisions of the Convention. I believe that that is the mistake the Honourable Minister is making. I know that Election is impending and that the Minister wants to get certain things done before we have to face the people on 17 November. I am going to support his motion but I think he ought to bear in mind that we are going to have some difficulty, in my view, and the next Government is going to have some difficulty in meeting what the Convention requires within the time frame.

Mr. Speaker, I am well aware of the Children's Law which was passed in September of this year. It is a substantial piece of legislation; it makes some far reaching proposals and has far reaching effects in relation to the welfare, care, custody and rights of children. It is an important piece of legislation, one I fully support and debated, but in order for it to be effective it needs resources allocated and creation of institutions and supporting institutions and offices and people. It was passed September of last year. We are almost at the end of July and the Law still has not been brought into effect and it cannot be brought into effect until we have in place the necessary framework in which it can operate.

Mr. Speaker, it was assented to by the Governor on 4 September 2003. I want us to understand that what we are proposing now is no panacea in itself to ensuring the elimination of discrimination against women. It is an important step and says something about the country and its views and desires to eliminate discrimination against women but without the supporting legislation it is going to be a very difficult and uphill task. As the Minister has correctly said, it takes generations to transform cultural norms; he is absolutely right about that and simply the acceptance of this Convention and the passing of the necessary legislation will not eliminate discrimination against women over night, but they are important steps. I keep reinforcing that I support what the Minister is seeking to achieve, I am just pointing out that in some instances he is running ahead of himself and the danger with that is that we create unrealistic expectations.

On page 39 of the National Gender Policy under the section entitled "The International Context there is a discussion about CEDAW and National Laws, something called "The Case of Hong Kong". I will read from it; "In the late 1980's, following the events in Beijing's Tiananmen Square and in the anticipation of the 1997 transfer of Hong Kong from British to Chinese rule, human rights activism intensified in Hong Kong.

"The 1991 Bill of Rights Ordinance, based on the International Covenant on Civil and Political Rights, failed to provide significant protection for women's human rights. The Coalitions of Women's Organisations began lobbying for the ratification of CEDAW, the passage of anti-discrimination legislation, and the creation of a Women's Commission.

"The Hong Kong Government was convinced through the advocacy of the Coalition to give its Agreement in Principle that the CEDAW should be extended to Hong Kong and its agreements to seek approval for the extension from the Chinese Government. Advocacy efforts also persuaded the Hong Kong Government that it had to pass a domestic sex discrimination law to respect the obligations it would be taking on under CE-

DAW." That is an important point. "Powerful and comprehensive draft bills for this Law came to the Legislative Council, which stated explicitly that the Courts were to use the Convention when interpreting the Law. The Government then introduced its own sex discrimination bill in order to pre-empt this proposal.

"In 1995, it was the Government's bill, which ultimately passed into law although not in its original form. The Legislative Council sought to have it strengthened and the bills scope was broadened in several important ways. The prohibition against marital status discrimination was extended past employment and education. (Article 1 of CEDAW does not restrict it to these areas). The concept of 'hostile environment' was added to the sexual harassment provision (CEDAW's General Recommendation 19). As well, the Bill provided that special measure taken to ameliorate past discrimination would not be considered discriminatory." This is the important bit, Mr. Speaker.

"These changes also met with two very important criteria: (1) congruence- the legislation was congruent with the requirements of the Convention." That is the legislation which had been passed in Hong Kong coincided with the requirements of the Convention; "and (2) Preparedness - the Government was in the position to meet its commitments the moment CEDAW was extended to Hong Kong."

So, that is the concern I have. The Government of this country is not in a position, if the Convention were extended to the Cayman Islands tomorrow we would immediately be in breach of its provisions.

The National Gender Policy also talks about the local relevance of CEDAW and refers to the Constitutional Modernisation exercise which has been ongoing for almost four years and it notes: "Constitutional Modernisation is a process, not an event. That process is ongoing in the Cayman Islands where a major issue for advancement relates to the Fundamental Rights and Freedoms of the Individual (Bill of Rights). The modernisation process seeks to keep pace in this area with the international obligations to which Britain is subject such as the European Convention on Human Rights and the UN International Covenant on Civil and Political Rights.

"Although the Report of the Constitutional Modernisation Review Commissioners 2002, makes no reference to the Convention on the Elimination of All Forms of Discrimination Against Women, this omission in no way reduces the relevance of the CEDAW instrument to constitutional modernisation processes."

Mr. Speaker, I want to mention in that context that I was quite alarmed to hear the Leader of Government Business recently on the Radio Cayman Talk Show suggest that in his Government's proposed Constitution that the Bill of Rights would not feature. I must say that I was absolutely stunned then I listened a bit more and gathered that what he was suggesting is what is termed fundamental rights and freedoms of the individual ought not to appear in the Constitution but be relegated to the status of domestic legislation. The reason why that was positive was because it would be easier for us to change, amend or delete them as the case may be, if they were a matter of domestic legislation. That is a fact! But ought we to be construing fundamental rights and freedoms in a way that they are of the same level, status and stature as domestic legislation? We are talking about the fundamental rights and freedoms of the individual including the right for women or men not to be discriminated against on the basis of their gender.

One thing for certain is even if (which I doubt) the United Kingdom would countenance such a preposterous proposal; if this Convention is extended to these Islands, we will not be able to mess with that. We have no say at all in what is in that Convention; that is something that is agreed between the United Kingdom Government and the other contracting states. We ought to recognise that and ought not to have this schizophrenic approach to fundamental rights of the individual, and to understand that we need to accord fundamental rights and freedoms of the individual a certain degree of sanctity.

I would ask the Honourable Minister responsible for this Motion to bear that in mind with the Leader of Government Business and ensure that they are on the same page when they are seeking to advance human rights.

Mr. Speaker, I promised that I would refer to the Convention itself; Article 2 of the Convention provides:

“States Parties condemn discrimination against women in all of its forms agreed to pursue by all appropriate means and without delay, a policy of eliminating discrimination and to this end undertake-

(a) to embody the principle of equality of men and women in their national constitutions.”

The Leader of Government Business says that the fundamental rights and freedoms of the individual, known colloquial as the Bill of Rights ought not to be in the Constitution. That is a fundamental requirement of the Convention. “The principle of equality of men and women must be embodied in their national Constitutions.

(b) To adopt appropriate legislation and other appropriate measures including sanctions where appropriate prohibiting all discrimination against women.”

So we have to pass a piece of legislation prohibiting discrimination on the basis of sex. We do not have that.

(c) “To establish legal protection of the rights of women on an equal basis with men and to ensure through competent national tribunals and other public institutions the effective protection of women against act of discrimination.”

Not only do we have to create the legislative framework but we have to develop a system of tribunals or otherwise whereby women can mane complaints when they feel they are being discriminated against on the basis of gender. We have not done that.

(d) To refrain from engaging in any act or practice of discrimination against women and to ensure that public authorities and institutions shall act in conformity with this obligation.”

Government itself is going to have to look at its General Orders, make sure that there are not any provisions in there which make life more difficult for women than they do for men.

(e) “To take all appropriate measures to eliminate discrimination against women by any person, organisation or enterprise.

(f) To take all appropriate measures including legislations to modify or abolish existing laws, regulations, customs and practices which constitute discrimination against women.”

So we have to modify or abolish not only laws and regulations but customs and practices which constitute discrimination against women. All of these things have to be done by the Cayman Islands when this Convention is extended to us.

Article 11 deals with the field of employment. “State parties shall take all appropriate measures to eliminate discrimination against women in the field of employment in order to ensure on a basis of equality of men and women the same rights. The right to work as an inalienable right of all human beings, right to the same employment opportunities including the application of the same criteria for selection in matters of employment. . .”

I think we have gotten somewhere there if we could ever get the Employment Law brought into effect. The comprehensive piece of legislation which was passed by this House still has not been brought into effect. Assuming this Government still has the political will to bring the Employment Law into effect, most of this aspect of the Convention we probably have the legislative framework on place.

“The right to free choice of profession and employment; the right to promotion, job security and all benefits and conditions of service and the right to receive vocational training and retraining, including apprenticeships. . . We do not have that on, it is sadly missing. “. . .advance vocational training and recurrent training;

“The right to equal remuneration. . . ,” which is still a problem. . . including benefits and to equal treatment in respect of work of equal value; as well as equality of treatment in the evaluation of the quality of work;

“The right to social security, particularly in cases of retirement, unemployment, sickness, invalidity and old age and other incapacity work as well as the right to paid leave;

“The right to protection of health and to in safety working conditions, including the safeguarding of the function of reproduction.

“To prohibit subject to the imposition of sanctions, dismissals on the grounds of pregnancy or of maternity leave and discriminations and dismissals on the grounds of marital status;

“To encourage the provision of the necessary supporting social services to enable parents to combine family obligations with work responsibilities and participation in public life, in particular through promoting the establishment and development of a network of child-care facilities.”

We have a long way to go on those fronts, Mr. Speaker. For completeness—Article 18.

“States Parties undertake to submit to the Secretary General of the United Nations, for consideration by the Committee, a report on the legislative, judicial, administrative or other measures which they have adopted to give effect to the provisions of the present Convention and on the progress made in this respect-

- (a) within a year after entry into force for the state concern; and
- (b) thereafter at least every four years and further whenever the Committee so requests.”

Mr. Speaker, it is not simply a question of having the Convention extended to us, we raise our hands and say yes, we are on board, we have the Convention. There is a process by which those who administer the Convention seek to ensure that its provisions are being complied with. I am not sure of the consequence if you are found to be in breach of its provisions, but I am certain, as a United Nations Convention there must be a sanction and the sanction, I believe, would not be one that was imposed on the Cayman Islands Government directly because we are not a state, a state is the United Kingdom who would no doubt take the steps that it wants to take these days, whenever it believes that its international obligations are at risk because one of the overseas territories is not doing what it ought to do.

We need to understand that we are going to have to move with all dispatch to ensure that when this Convention is extended to the Cayman Islands that we do what we have to do to put in place the necessary legal framework and supporting institutions to comply with the Convention so that we are not found to be in breach of it; within one year!

Earlier I alluded to the pieces of legislation which had been identified by the Ministry as being in need of modification, amendment or improvement. These are not my findings but findings of the Ministry itself. They are on page 69 of the National Gender Policy under the heading of Constitutional and Legislative Framework. It commences:

“Legal issues are very closely linked to Constitutional rights.

“The gender policy advocates that in the absence of constitutional rights to gender equality, gender-based rights should be enshrined in a written Bill of Rights or in a Human Rights Act. The gender policy deems constitutional and legislative affirmation of gender equality as imperative.

“The gender policy views as an imperative the extension of ratification of the CEDAW by the UK to the Cayman Islands. As an international bill of rights for women, the CEDAW is a tool dedicated to the elimination of all forms of discrimination against women. It encompasses all the civil, political, economic and cultural rights, which every human being ought to enjoy throughout her/his life cycle. Essentially, the CEDAW reiterates the belief in the dignity and worth of the human person, through the enjoyment of equal rights by men and women.

“In light of the Constitutional Modernization process undertaken by the Cayman Islands Government and with particular regard to Fundamental Rights and Freedoms of the Individual, the gender policy advocates that the CEDAW be cited in the text. In this connection, the CEDAW is seen to be most pertinent in strengthening Protection of Rights to Personal Liberty and Protection from discrimination on grounds of race etc.

The policy advocates that the Women's Convention, The Universal Declaration of Human Rights, The European Convention on Human Rights, the UN International Convention on Civil and Political Rights and the Rights of the Child become an integral part of the human rights culture of the Cayman Islands. Public education about amended legislation and new legal entitlements must be systematically introduced to develop and sustain a human rights culture.”

It then proposes what is called the Summary Policy Objectives re Legislation. It lists the various pieces of legislation that the Ministry have determined that are in need of reformation. These are:

“To reform the Maintenance/Affiliation Law.

- To expand the jurisdiction of the Summary Court to make committal orders.
- To ensure progressive, enforcement alternatives for violations of the law e.g. the suspension of driver's licences or notes on credit reports.
- To ensure available Legal Aid to assist with pursuing maintenance/affiliation arrears in Grand Court.
- To incorporate parental rights (parental responsibility to visitation and access) with consultation with the parents, child, social services, judiciary and any other relevant agency.

To reform the Domestic Violence Law so that effective prevention and protection measures obtain for victims thereby ensuring that they are able to participate equally in the rights and freedoms afforded to all.

- To expand the law to protect not only married couples or persons living together as husband and wife and children within these families but to include the range and variety of relationships that currently or previously existed regardless of the current residential relationship between the two parties.
- To ensure affordability of remedies such as the granting of Legal Aid in Grand Court for restraining orders.
- To ensure mandatory counselling and sentencing alternatives
- Compensation orders
- 24 hours remedies involving the police and judiciary.

To implement the Children's Law and to expand the concept of parental responsibility, especially between unmarried parents.

To reform the Penal Code.

- The Penal Code under which the legal minimum age of sexual consent of boys is 14 years and of girls it is 16 years highlights the interrelationship between the Family and Legislation. The law sets a double standard that reinforces the association of sexual prowess with masculinity, modesty and caution with femininity without appreciation for the immaturity and vulnerability of both genders. The gender policy advocates for changes in the law to 16 years for both genders so as to protect both.

To reform Labour/Employment Law.

- Maternity Leave, Family Sick Leave, Paternity Leave and Equal Pay are all areas for improvement in the law.
- To expand remedies for breach of anti-harassment discrimination legislation - include civil remedies-
- To expand on anti-discrimination provisions.

To pass legislation on Sexual Harassment and Sexual Legislation. As indicated above under Labour, refer to CARICOM model legislation in these areas.

- To make sexual harassment and stalking a criminal offence with penalties.

- To ensure equality in penalties for sexual abuse against children of either sex."

Mr. Speaker, that is from the National Gender Policy and are areas identified by the Ministry, which require attention to get the whole question of gender relations and the ancillary concerns thereto resolved.

I do believe that the Ministry understands that a tremendous amount of additional work must be done on this area and so, as I said, the Opposition and I are prepared to support the Government's Motion on this most important matter. We must do all that we can to eliminate all forms of discrimination against women. We would not want the Honourable Minister, the Government or the country as a whole to come away from this debate and the passage of this Motion contented that we are all right as a country. It is doubtful, in my view, that any Government will be able to meet the requirements of the Convention in the year provided for in the Convention Document itself, but we must do all that we can to bring the Cayman Islands, its legislation, its society and culture up to speed as quickly as we possibly can.

In this day and age when human rights are more and more at the forefront of people's consciousness, it has taken more than fifty years since the Universal Convention on Human Rights was signed following the end of the last World War. Cayman as a sophisticated society as we have become, as a leader in the region almost always on the cutting edge when it comes to legislative reform and other matters, we really must do all that we can to eliminate discrimination against anybody on the basis of age, sex, gender, race, religion, creed, all of those things which the smallness of the human being insist upon still making distinctions about, and which many of us find necessary to trod out every time we feel that we have been wounded as a result of something that someone did or said—they said that to me because I am black, they said that to me because I am a woman'. We need to get to a point where those sorts of basis for treatment that people receive no longer have any real credence.

This sort of approach to human rights will go a long way in bringing us where we ought to be in relation to discrimination against women, and for that, I commend the Motion subject, as I said, to the concerns we have about ensuring that we can actually comply with its provisions.

I thank you, Sir.

The Speaker: Honourable Members I propose to take the luncheon break at this time and resume at 2.30 pm.

Proceedings suspended at 1.01 pm

Proceedings resumed at 2.55 pm

The Speaker: Please be seated. Proceedings are resumed. Does any other Member wish to speak?
The Honourable Minister for Planning.

Hon. Juliana Y. O'Connor-Connolly: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I rise to lend my support to Government Motion No. 3/04 specifically as it relates to the Resolve which states that this Assembly requests that the Government of the United Kingdom and Northern Ireland extend its ratification of the Convention to the Cayman Islands before its next Report to the Committee on the Elimination of Discrimination Against Women."

As one would see, when one takes the time to peruse the said documentation, the Convention which, in particular, women have become customary, referring to CEDAW, which stands for the Convention on the Elimination of All Forms of Discrimination Against Women, was first adopted by the United Nations General Assembly in December 18, 1979.

The spirit of the Convention takes its genesis from the goals of the United Nations, which, I believe, is to reaffirm the faith in the fundamental human rights and the dignity and worth of the human person in equal rights of men and women. In fact, the Convention establishes not only an international Bill of Rights for women but it sets out an agenda for action by the various countries concerned.

Article 1 of the Convention defines what it meant by the term discrimination and out of the abundance of caution I wish to state it because various persons over the decades have conceptualised various connotations for the said terminology. Therefore, specifically speaking, discrimination in this instance refers to any distinction, exclusion or restriction made on the basis of sex, in the political, economical, social and cultural or any other field. Under this Convention Article 3 specifically requires that Member States or States Parties take all appropriate measures, including legislation to ensure the full development and advancement of women for the purpose of guaranteeing them the exercise and enjoyment of various human rights and fundamental freedoms on the basis of equality with men.

The Convention also seeks to encompass in the various Article 3 situations, as it relates to women, including civil rights and the legal status of women. The legal status of women appear to receive, from what I could find, the greatest attention as the basic rights of political participation and has not been diminished since the Convention of Political Rights for Women were established in 1952. Nonetheless, Article 7 of the Convention states that women are guaranteed the right to vote, to hold public office and to exercise public functions. This equal right for women must and does include the right for a woman to represent her respective country on international levels as well as to participate in international organisations and can be found in Article 8 of the Convention.

Another significant milestone, where this Convention is illustrated in Article 9, wherein the Convention on the Nationality of Married Women was integrated and which therefore cements and, I believe, preserves the statehood of women irrespective to a woman's marital status. Special emphasis is also given in the Convention to women having equal rights in several areas but in particular education, employment, economic and social activities and the significance is also seen in Article 15 of the Convention. This makes provision for women to assert full equality in civil and business matters and therefore demands that all instruments directed at restricting women's legal capacity shall be deemed null and void.

The Convention also devotes major attention to women's reproductive rights, in fact, we can see easily in the preamble of the Convention that the role of women in procreation should not be on a basis for discrimination.

Article 5 advocates a proper understating of maternity as a social function, demanding fully stated responsibilities for child rearing by both sexes. I am sure that the women would greatly appreciate that, those of us that have had the privilege of having children, for the assistance that is necessary in today's world from our other counterparts in rearing children. I am always thrilled as I walk up and down the community to see not only the modern day Cayman men but also many of our traditional Caymanian men taking a much more active role in the psychological and physiological development of the girls and boys. This was the way the great creator intended it to be and we will see many statistics derived from various studies throughout the past decades that those children who had the honour and privilege of being reared in a home where there is both father and mother that they often have many more opportunities. I am grateful that there are also the exceptions where women have had to struggle and raise their children by themselves without the male presence there and have also been able and blessed by God to bring their children up without them becoming deviants within our society.

Mr. Speaker, I believe that this Government understands that it does have an obligation to extend services such as social services, especially for child care facilities and programmes. However, I do look forward to the day when not only Government but indeed the private sector will graduate to a stage whereby sufficient and appropriate child care facilities can be part and parcel of the edifice just as one would plan for the provision of bathrooms, and as time progresses the provision of handicap access to buildings. The child-care facilities should also be an integral part of such development planning, and I hope that when we do arrive at the day that we can have the long awaited Government offices for our civil servants that sufficient emphasis would be put into ensuring that wherever the location end up being that there is adequate ancillary facilities, which would indeed augment our development socially.

Often times I am amazed to see the amount of time that many of our civil servants and indeed private citizens, in particular, women who have to spend going back and forth from the day care facilities when it would be so much nicer having to work longer hours that your children were much closer and you can have that affiliation with them during the course of the business day.

I am happy to say that we are not too far off of that utopia position, as it relates to my own constituency, that of Cayman Brac and Little Cayman, in that in close proximity to the District Administration Building we have been able to establish a day care facility right next to the Library as well, and together these three most essential services within our community have blended and worked well. It is not unusual to see many of our civil servant women attending the day care during the lunch time hours helping with the facility there and helping with the social programmes, including taking them next door to the Library to read a storybook or get on the internet online to some of the children's programmes that are available there. It is much better for the development of the child on the whole and it is one example of the Government taking the holistic approach towards development of, not only the woman, but the man and his child altogether.

We also see in Article 10 of the said Convention that it is the only Human Rights Treaty to mention family planning in the education process. It also requires that family codes should be developed to guarantee women's rights to decide freely and responsibly on the number and spacing of their children, to have access to the information education and a means to enable them to exercise these rights.

Certainly with the anticipating passing of this and with the extension to the Cayman Islands jurisdiction we would have come a long way from the late 1950's when women first struggled to have a right even to vote here in the Cayman Islands, the country we have come to love.

The third thrust of the Convention aims at increasing our cognisance of the concepts of the human right as it seeks to give formal recognition to the influence of culture and tradition on restriction of women's enjoyment and their fundamental rights. We as a Government also concur with a preamble to the Convention, which stresses that a change in the traditional role of men, as well as the role of women, in our society and family is indeed necessary to really achieve full equality for men and women.

Article 10 of the Convention, mandates that it will be necessary to revise textbooks, school programmes and teaching methods with a view of eliminating stereotype concepts in the field of education. The Convention also requires and indeed it states that parties are expected to submit a national report to the Committee indicating measures that the state have adopted to give effect to the various provisions of the said Convention.

Mr. Speaker, the Government is indeed convinced that full and complete development of any country, including the Cayman Islands will require the maximum participation of women on equal terms with men in all fields, bearing in mind that our women in the Cayman Islands have enjoyed far more rights than many of our counterparts around the world. Nonetheless, we pause to carry out what I term as, the peeling away exercise. We will see that women in the Cayman Islands still have many barriers to cross, hurdles to jump and attitudes to change in our journey towards equality, parity in our country. It goes without saying that there are still forms and manifestations of discriminations against women in our beautiful Islands.

To provide a recent example, emanating from within my own constituency, I have become aware of a situation where two of my Brac women constituents who have been working, one in excess of eight years and one approaching five years, at one of the oldest resorts on the Island, have been recently informed by management that not only would he be seeking to bring in an expatriate man, at a much higher salary to head their particular section of the resort, but because, what he deemed as being the slow season, their time would be cut and they would now be required to work night shifts. When they attempted to appeal, what I would term a discriminatory situation, he responded by saying that if they did not like what his actions were they could do their next best. Mr. Speaker, I must say at this juncture that I am waiting with abated breath to see whether or not the Immigration Work Permit Board would endorse this type of discriminatory action in our community. I have advised the two ladies concerned, they have thus far taken the advice and I am confident that with the calibre of persons and with the integrity of persons that we have on our Work Permit Board that such an endorsement will not occur. I believe that this debate is happening at a most important time because that is only but one of the many instances that our women have to endure, even in today's modern Caymanian society.

I am sure that that particular case is not an isolated case. Having been a woman and blessed by Almighty God to perhaps penetrate many un-chartered frontiers as far as being the first woman, in many regards, I can attest as I am sure the other Lady Member for North Side can, that Cayman, although much advanced compared to places like India, Asia and China, we still have a long way to go in being able to achieve the level playing field as far as it goes with equality and parity in the women's world.

I can remember quite vividly, having been the first elected woman from my constituency, and having to be subjected to many remarks like, what is a woman doing in a man's world and she has no business competing with the men who have ran the country well all of these years. One interesting bit of statistics is, in my constituency for sure and I am sure in many others in Grand Cayman, there are more women voters than men. So, that just shows that the influence is there. Although the women who have been given the power since the late 1950's they are still today voting for men. Let me hasten to qualify that statement; I am certainly not now advocating nor have I ever advocated that a person should vote for another individual candidate purely on the basis of them being a female or on the flipside because they are a man. I believe that any good government with the belief that democracy should be of paramount consideration and for the sustainable of good governance within this jurisdiction, the Caymanian populous should continue to look at candidates based on their characteristics and their ability to perform, rather than having a prerequisite that they should be of a particular sex.

I can also vividly remember that after having the opportunity to become the first elected woman Speaker of the House, a particular gentleman within my constituency, passed the remark, which I am sure he knew that it would come back to my ears, that the Speakership had been disgraced by the fact that a woman had been put in the Chair. That was a mere two years ago so we still have quite a bit of discrimination. It is a topic that is quite sensitive and many persons choose not to speak about it. I can certainly write many stories about the hurdles and the discriminatory remarks that I have had to endure in my journey towards making a living for myself and my immediate family.

Mr. Speaker, I take much consolation in many books that I have had the opportunity to read, but in particular, one by Nancy Regan when she referred to the analogy of a woman and said " A woman is like a tea bag, you never really know her strength until you place her in hot water". I believe that is a most true concept and women in Cayman, as in many other countries have, in many circumstances, been placed in hot water and we have the option of folding up crying and becoming the emotional creature that we have been stereotyped to be. However, once a woman realises what the goal is, that the ultimate goal is not to surpass the man, but indeed to respect the man for what he is and in turn be respectful for her own self and her counterparts, one can rise to the occasion and meet whatever challenge there is and at the end of the day unite to form a formidable partnership that would not easily be broken.

Mr. Speaker, 'the good book' tells us that some persons plant the seeds, some water and most times many will come and reap but in the struggle for equal rights for women I believe the fundamental objective goal should not be one whereby the process or the methodology that is used to achieve the outcome should be one that we give much consideration. I believe as women, regardless of the person in the drivers' seat, we should all come together and give support, be it male or female, if the end result is one that was our objective in the first place.

I wish also to join my colleague, the Second Elected Member for George Town, at this juncture, to acknowledge and congratulate the efforts by the Lady Member for the district of North Side and the then Lady Member from the district of George Town who pioneered, from a legislative perspective, the Motion in this Honourable House to bring the issues relating to women to the forefront and indeed, the Motion received majority support in the House, which showed that the men counterpart was not an adversarial counterpart, certainly not when it come to the vote, I might add, and it did see safe passage.

I wish also to acknowledge the contribution of the Honourable McKeeva Bush who was the first Minister who had the responsibility from a Constitutional perspective to be in charge of women's affairs. I also wish to acknowledge thanks to Almighty God for allowing me the opportunity for three years to be the Minister responsible for women to see the establishment of a women's office in George Town, to put in place other policies. I also wish to acknowledge the contribution by my friend and Government colleague, the now Minister responsible for women, gender affairs for his continued commitment in seeing this process through.

Several years back when we had the opportunity to attend the first ever conference in the British Virgin Islands dealing specifically with CEDAW, it was the beginning of the conceptualisation that Cayman had an opportunity to have this Convention extended to our jurisdiction. We did indeed make efforts back then to have it extended but the legal opinion felt at that particular time was that because Cayman did not have enshrined Human Rights by law or by constitution, it was their opinion that to bring in the CEDAW Convention would in fact result in a most idiotic conclusion in that they felt the women would surpass the rights of the men, which certainly would not be the intention, but that was the legal opinion given at that time, hence the reason I could not get safe passage of the paper to do what my friend and colleague is doing here today.

I am happy to see that after several years we have finally reached this juncture. I wish the Honourable Minister, now responsible, the best of luck as he forges forward to expedite the process to ensure that the Convention is extended to the Cayman Islands jurisdiction. I know that it will take additional funding and additional resources and certainly, commitment. I believe the latter perhaps is the most fundamental one because where there is a will there is a way, and I know from having discussions and working along with the Honourable Minister that indeed, not only will there now be a way, but there is also the necessary requisite will to see this process to conclusion.

Mr. Speaker, I have always been a strong advocate that performance rides on commitment. I believe that the Government is indeed committed to see this process through and therefore I can anticipate that there would be no other conclusion but a successful performance. I am happy that this is one of the few matters we can have collective agreement on because we all take full cognisance that such an extension within all of the ancillary finances and resources put in place, will only result in a positive improvement of all of the people in the Cayman Islands, Caymanians and residents alike.

I was also privilege to have been at the conference which was conducted in the British Virgin Islands and they, like Cayman, seems to have similar problems with the discrimination. It was quite humorous when the then Honourable Chief Minister, Ralph O'Neil who opened the Conference got up to say that as a Rotarian he was one who fought vigorously to ensure that women was not admitted within the club there in the Virgin Islands. I can almost now hear the disgruntlement from the women who were at the Convention, over one hundred of them, with the tone he had chosen to set there at that conference.

I am happy to say that the Rotarians here within the Cayman Islands jurisdiction have had the good vision and sight, including, I am sure, much of your own vision and encouragement, to have women within your club. It was a delightful opportunity and privilege a few weeks ago when we both had the opportunity on the Brac to be a participant and observer at the historic occasion when we had the first ever woman being installed as the Rotary President for Cayman Brac. So, we can see that there have been some positive strides in the fight towards a level playing ground for equality and parity, as far as it relates to women in the Caymanian jurisdiction and we are indeed grateful for each positive step we make forward.

I believe that it is just as good as any time to say, without any fear of contradiction, that just as it is necessary to have the extension of the CEDAW Convention to our jurisdiction, it is also necessary for us, as women and human beings, to commit and be determined to work together in a united fashion. Regardless of whatever conventions, directives, regulations, treaties or legislation we have, at the end of the day it will be us as human beings who will determine whether or not any such instruments will result in success.

I believe that a woman will only become fully successful when she takes the time to educate herself; when she operates with a manner of decorum that can only result in positive stimuli; when she acts with the utmost decency with honesty, integrity and with respect for her neighbour, as she would have for herself, that we can truly come and rise to the occasion and expect and deserve to have equality and parity within this world as we sojourn.

I also believe that for women sometimes we are perhaps our worst enemies. I can speak from within the areas that I have worked in the community and in the church. Often times we get more support from our male counterparts than we do from our female counterparts, and this do not happen all of the time, but I am sure if you speak to the Lady Member and other Members of Parliament, churches and clubs they have been involved in, most of the time our biggest adversaries are other women themselves and if we are to truly be successful we must overcome that sense of insecurity or jealousy, or whatever inferior sense that may rise to a conspicuous element. We must look at the wider picture and see that this is a fight we must unite to be in and at the end of the day we are fighting for our children and grandchildren, in particular the girl child, to have a better environment as we pass on from this scene in Cayman.

The desire and the struggle for the attainment of equal rights for women and men should never become a man bashing exercise. Each sex have their respective roles in our community and in conclusion, if you would permit me, I am sure you will not be surprised when I ask to refer to God's word, in particular, as we see in 1 Peter 3:5 and 6 where it tells us that wives should be subject to their husbands and husbands should honour their wives. One may quickly say how can you be asking for equal rights on one hand and saying that the wife or woman should be subject.

It is easy to be subject in a situation when there is honour, which is reciprocal. I am not advocating that the woman should be subjected to domestic violence, neither am I advocating that a woman should be subject to any form of abuse but what I am advocating—and as ideal as it may sound—is for arrangements for relationships whereby there is a mutual understanding that there can be a relationship and partnership if love is at the foundation of it. We see in particular as we look at 1 Peter 3:6 to 16 where it says: “Even as Sarah obeyed Abraham, calling him lord: whose daughters ye are, as long as ye do well, and are not afraid with any amazement.

“Likewise, ye husbands, dwell with them according to knowledge, giving honour unto the wife, as unto the weaker vessel as being heirs together of the grace of live that your prayers be not hindered.

“Finally, be ye all of one mind, having compassion one of another, love as brethren, be pitiful, be courteous:

“Not rendering evil for evil or railing for railing but contrariwise blessing; knowing that ye therefore called, that ye should inherit a blessing.

“For he that will love life, and see good days, let him refrain his tongue from evil, and his lips that they speak no guile:

“Let him eschew evil, and do good; let him seek peace and ensue it.

“For the eyes of the Lord are over the righteous, and his ears are open unto their prayers: but the face of the Lord is against them that do evil.

“And who is he that will harm you, if ye be followers of that which is good?

“But if ye suffer for righteousness' sake, happy are ye: and be not afraid of their terror, neither be troubled; But sanctify the Lord God in your hearts: and be ready always to give an answer to every man that asketh you a reason of the hope that is in you with meekness and fear:

“Having a good conscience; that, whereas they speak evil of you, as of evildoers, they may be ashamed that falsely accuse your good conversation in Christ.”

Mr. Speaker, with those words I encourage all of us to support the Motion but even beyond that, let us take the greater call to live as best as we can with one another regardless of the sex.

May it please you!

The Speaker: Does any other Member wish to speak? Does any other Member wish to speak? Last call, does any other Member wish to speak?

The Honourable Minister for Education.

Hon. Roy Bodden: Mr. Speaker, I rise to give my support to the call for support of the Convention for the Elimination of all Forms of Discrimination Against Women.

As I was reflecting on the Motion and listening to some of the debates I am reminded that anthropology tells us that the struggle for equality for women had its genesis way back from the time ancient cave-man emerged with a club on his shoulder from a cave with only grunts as his method of communication.

I was also thinking that it is somewhat paradoxical in a society and with a history of matriarchy as the Cayman Islands and the Caribbean where emanating out of slavery women assumed certain responsibilities and certainly, in the Cayman Islands during the time our men were at sea, women ran the show and yet here we are today ensuring by Convention that women are accorded equality of status. This is a universal phenomenon. Even in developed countries there has to be conscious efforts to ensure that the rights, responsibilities and respect of women are firmly entrenched and that we are constantly reminded that women must be accepted as equal partners. It is my understanding that even among developed countries there are few countries where women are fairly represented in the respectful roles to which many of us expect them to participate and to be accorded.

Some years ago I had the privilege of being invited to be a participant at a conference at Wilton Park Sussex. The Conference was entitled Women Public Life and Democracy and I learnt then that there is only one country in the developed world, Finland! Finland leads the world in the representation of women in comparison to the roles they play vis à vis men. According to the formula that I learnt then in our Parliament of fifteen elected Members there should be five women, at least, for proper representation based on the universal established ratio. Even in the United Kingdom, France, and West Germany all of these countries fall behind in respect of the representation of females, but not only in politics and parliament also in other vocations and professions. My brief experience as Minister with responsibility for human resources or labour as we tend to call it, has led me to realise that there is an alarming amount of discrimination in our society against women in the world of employment.

Some people are unashamed of their expressions of prejudice and some of the discrimination is so blatant that these people do not realise that what they are doing is a contravention of international obligations and responsibilities. So, I am happy that we are bringing this call for the ratification of this Convention at this time, because it is a necessary reminder that we in the Cayman Islands have much work to do and it is also fitting that the call should come from an august body, as this Parliament, because we should set the examples here.

I am also happy to realise as I listened to the contribution of Members that this is a continuous effort. It is an effort which was started by others and I recall the Lady Member from North Side and a Lady Member who is no longer here, Mrs. Berna Murphy-Cummings, spearheaded the effort to get the Office of Women's Affairs set up in the Cayman Islands. This bodes well and now we have the current Minister taking it a step further, ratchet it up; that is good because it tells us that the best efforts usually arise out of this kind of co-operation. However, I want to say that we can begin and we must begin by examining our policies, and perhaps even in the Government.

I was reminded by a question poised to me earlier by the Honourable Attorney General about some policies. Certainly, when I came to the Ministry of Education I can remember years ago when I sat as a member of the Education Council in a particular meeting where a young lady was up for a scholarship award and some people wanted to disqualify her because she had a child out of wedlock. I said that cannot be. How can you pass a sentence on someone for something like that, which in many areas is not even considered a crime? We have to examine our dispositions towards these kinds of things. In some instances, in the education establishment there was objection to teachers who had children out of wedlock and coming back to the classroom. On one occasion I had to pose the question, if someone does that, that should not be the only deciding point as to whether they should continue into teaching or not. Were they good teachers? If they were good teachers and we need teachers, I think that they should continue.

I am happy to say that the policy with regards to teenagers getting pregnant is a little more enlightened. It is not that anyone is encouraging this kind of behaviour but we have to be pragmatic, and above all, we have to be absolutely sure that we are not blatantly discriminatory. I am happy to see that at long last we are coming face to face with this phenomenon and trying to do something about it. This is a society where women have held up their share of responsibility, as far as the development of our society goes. I want to take it a step further and say that we should use this occasion to enlighten ourselves as to our international obligations and responsibilities by acknowledging and being party to these types of Conventions. Often when these things come up and are discussed in some circles some people proffer the position and the argument that we do not have to subscribe to that. That is for the United Kingdom; that is for the United States and for the developed countries; we have our own system in the Cayman Islands and we have to abide by it. Nothing can be further from the truth. These are international Conventions arrived at by all of the countries who are members of the United Nations, which say this shall be the standards subscribed to by countries and nations of the world.

So, we should do that and I think that all those who had any part to play in coming to this Assembly from those who were instrumental in getting the most rudimentary beginnings when the Motion was brought here for the establishment of an office of women's affairs, right up to this point, are to be commended. As an educator and a Minister of Government, and as an enlightened citizen above all, I lend it my support and I am happy that there seems to be a level of unanimity among the Honourable Members of this House on this important issue.

Many people will not understand the significance of this but it is important and I wish the ratification of this can lead to a more enlightened society, a society in which women are encouraged to come forward and participate in the development of our yet fledgling democracy and contribute to the fullest to not only the economic and social development of our society but also to the political development.

As the old adage goes, 'brevity is the soul of wit'; I want to lend my support and I conclude by saying that all who had any responsibility or part in this Motion coming to the House should feel proud and I commend them as I commend the Motion to the support of all other Members.

Thank you.

The Speaker: The Honourable Leader of Government Business.

Hon. W. McKeever Bush: Mr. Speaker, I am mindful of the time and I will not be long, but I rise to add my support to this request that the Government of the United Kingdom and Northern Ireland extend its ratification of the Convention to the Cayman Islands for its next report on the Committee on the Elimination of Discrimination Against Women.

Mr. Speaker, we have come a long way and while we have come a long way there are many things yet to be done. When our men went to sea, (fathers, grandfathers, uncles and brothers) it was the women of these Islands who held the country together. They were the Sunday school teachers, school teachers and on a whole they played a big role in the civil governance of this country.

The United Democratic Party is fully behind this request and thus the Cabinet is in full support. To day we have women playing a tremendous role, we are not backwards in that because we have many women in leading roles in the commerce of the Islands. We have women playing important roles as justices of peace and women teachers in education and I can credit our Government with being the first to take a woman to assist in negotiating internationally as our Cabinet did with the Minister of Planning. I can say that there have been more young ladies given scholarships by this Government than any other in recent times. So, we have much to do and we have to be careful and work at the areas that perhaps are new and new ideas, and see that what is extended is something that we in the Islands can work with that can enhance the position of women in these Islands.

Mr. Speaker, both parties have women candidates and that is commendable. We know that not all of them will be elected—and there are women independent candidates also, but it is commendable that women continue, from the early days of Ms. Evie to take a political life of these Islands and do stand a good chance to be elected.

As I said, the United Democratic Party and our Cabinet is fully behind the Minister and his work, and I want to congratulate him in bringing this forward. It is no election gimmick; it takes time to get these things done so I congratulate the Ministry for bringing this item as it did.

The Speaker: Honourable Members as stated this morning we propose to suspend the House at 3.45 pm, which is just about the time, to enable us to hold the annual general meeting of the Commonwealth Parliamentary Association at 4.00 pm.

It is also proposed that we will resume at 6 pm so that we may continue the proceedings of this House until 8 pm this evening. So I will suspend at this time.

Proceedings suspended at 3.44 pm

Proceedings resumed at 6.04 pm

The Speaker: The continuation of the debate on Government Motion No. 03/04; the Convention of Elimination of all Forms of Discrimination Against Women. Does any other Member wish to speak?

The Elected Member for North Side.

Ms. Edna M. Moyle: Thank you Mr. Speaker.

I will start my short contribution this evening, as I started my debate on Government Motion No. 01/95, which has brought about several matters affecting women in these Islands in the past years. It is Norman Hardy's Women's Creed, and I live by this: "We affirm the story of women as the story of humankind. Food gatherers and farmers; child bearers and teachers; pioneers and policy makers; needle workers and textile makers; home makers and factory workers; parents, scientists, doctors, housekeepers and economists, givers of life and creators of art and thought; unpaid hidden workers at home and paid members of the workforce outside."

Contrary to what some Members may think, this evening that I will get up here in a diatribe because the Convention known as CEDAW was not brought in the short eleven months when I was a Minister. This Convention goes way back and I stand here this evening to say history is being created today. I am proud to have been a part of this history. CEDAW is a Convention on the Elimination of all Discrimination Against Women.

For those who remembered my debate on Private Members Motion No. 01/95 seconded by the Third Elected Member for George Town, Mrs. Berna Thompson, mention of this particular Convention was made at that time. Mention was also made of the Convention on the Elimination of Violence Against Women, the United Kingdom had extended to us and I think it was under the now Leader of Government Business when the then Governor, Governor Gore, brought a proclamation extending that Convention to the Cayman Islands. My concern for CEDAW goes way back through a question to the Honourable Minister for Planning who holds responsibility for Women's Affairs. She did say it in her debate when I posed the question: What was the Government doing about the extension of this particular Convention? Her answer to me at that time is exactly as she relayed it today. The then Attorney General's reply was that women would probably end up with more rights than men.

Mr. Speaker, I have said from Private Members Motion No. 01/95 we want no more benefits than men; we just want equal rights and we want those equal rights achieved through a partnership and if one would care to go back to my debate those words are there. CEDAW coming to this Parliament today reminds me of the words of Ms. Polard when I brought the Motion and the then Minister, the now Leader of Government Business, brought Ms. Polard to these Islands to conduct a survey on issues affecting women. I recall her words very clearly at the function that was held for her: "The women of the Cayman Islands should be justly proud that a motion has been brought for the setting up of a women's affairs office in order to bring issues affecting women to the forefront." I felt proud then and I feel proud today because in those eleven months that I spent in that Ministry with responsibility for women affairs I had the opportunity to sit with a gentleman from London to talk about this Convention. I will not go through the Articles as my colleague, the Second Elected Member for George Town, did an excellent job on the things that must be put in place. As a matter of fact, I did, at that time, request the Legislative Drafting Department to research the necessary legislation that we would have to put in place should we get this Convention extended to the Cayman Islands.

I build up my praises in Heaven because what I do as a politician for the people of these Islands, particularly women, once the women see the results of what I bring to this Parliament I need no praise for that; it is my job. I would like to thank the Honourable Minister for Planning and the Minister for Education who has recognised my commitment and my contribution to women issues in these Islands. The Cayman Islands, as the Minister of Planning said before, we are a little ahead to a lot of countries, but we still have a long way to go to bring women equal to their counterpart, the men.

The Cayman Islands Education System offers girls equal opportunity. I know that girls are taking up every opportunity to further their education and I am justly proud but I am concerned, although I deal with issues affecting women and girls, I am seriously concerned and I have said it in this Parliament before, we must find out why our young boys who are graduating from high school are not taking up the opportunities to further their education. Some of them are and I say to them congratulations, but I feel that many more can go and take up further education. It is a matter that any government that is in power must look into. We cannot afford to lose our young men because then our young women will be all alone without an equal partner.

On the issue of health care in these Islands, I was very happy when I found out that the Women's Health Care Clinic was set up at the George Town Hospital. Our women have free prenatal and postnatal services at the Hospital, so these Islands are way ahead of many other countries. Had the Motion to set up the Women Affairs Office had not been brought about we would not have put in place these facilities for women.

When I hear the Honourable Minister say that he got this Convention and I could not, Mr. Speaker, these are the little things that bring that breakdown between the male and female in these Islands. I say, do not consider me a politician when I am dealing with the issues affecting the women of these Islands, deal with me as another woman. When we as politicians, in this Parliament, can appreciate the contributions of the female politicians in here we would have broken down a barrier between women and men in the Cayman Islands. To stand and make such remarks, I do not think there is a call for this. The important thing is we are here debating the CEDAW with a view to having it extended that the women in these Islands will benefit from this Convention. Let us not make these remarks to one another.

This CEDAW Convention has gone through four Ministers of Women Affairs; the now Leader of Government Business; the Honourable Minister responsible for Planning; myself, for less than one year that I was there, and now the present Minister. Had there not been a beginning towards extending this Convention to the Cayman Islands back in 1995, we would not be here today in 2004 accepting a motion to request the United Kingdom Government to extend this Convention to the Cayman Islands.

Mr. Speaker, I go back, when I introduced Private Members Motion No.01/95 to set up a women's affairs office; if one cares to go back to the Hansard you can. A report back in 1995—the United Kingdom's Law on Labour gave women the right to a minimum of fourteen weeks maternity leave with pay, with a maximum, under certain conditions, of forty weeks. Yet we are doing for women, we claim, things that no other Minister has done. I want to stop here and congratulate the Honourable Minister for carrying on to where he has gotten to bringing this Convention to the Floor of this House. However, you know, Mr. Speaker, the new Employment Law of these Islands has just recently increased maternity leave to four weeks on pay and four weeks on half pay and, as of today, as far as I am aware, the Government has not gazetted that Employment Law to bring it into operation where these women would get the benefit of longer time for maternity leave on pay.

We talk about a crisis centre; the Honourable Minister said that he was able to put in place a crisis centre; great! We go back to Motion No. 01/95 and in that debate it was spoken of a place for domestic abuse. A motion was brought to this House by Miss Heather Bodden, who was a Member at the time, for the Government to build a crisis centre or a place of safety for abused women and children, which was seconded by me. The now Honourable Minister responsible for Planning, during her time, when she was responsible for women affairs, had plans drawn up, which I was looking at to continue and to purchase a place. So, let us not stand here and say we have been able to achieve this, let us be honest and give credit to the other Ministers who have served in these same positions. That is all I am saying, Mr. Speaker. Prior to Motion No. 01/95 statistics were not even kept of domestic violence, there were no separate statistics kept on abuse, assault or anything to do with women. Much has been achieved on issues affecting the women of these Islands, but as I said before, we have a long way to go.

We now have our women in professions such as legal, accounting and these are professions that were previously dominated by men. We have doctors and we even have some that have gone into engineering. We have gone a long way. In the political field there is much to be done. The majority of voters in these Islands, as has been said by a previous speaker, the Honourable Minister of Planning, the majority are women, yet some nineteen women ran in the 2000 Election and only two of us were successful. So, we have a long way to go in educating our women that they can take their rightful place in the political arena in these Islands. Many of them have reached top positions in the public service; many of them have reached the middle level in the private sector but I do not think today we have a female bank manager. I am being told from across the Floor that we do have one. I am talking about a Class A bank.

There is much to be done in other areas. We may put in place CEDAW, and I am sure that it is going to be passed unanimously but there is still going to be a tremendous amount of work done in these Islands to educate our women that you can become equal to your partner and perform at a level as high as any male.

If all parents could afford to send their children to boarding schools it would be an excellent experience. I know there will be some that will say, 'you were lucky, you had a silver spoon in your mouth'. I have heard that from parliamentarians here before. I was lucky in that I had a father who was committed to educating his children, even if he had to leave these Islands to seek employment. At the young age of ten he packed me up, put me on a flight by myself and sent me to a Cayman Brac lady, Mrs. Hunter, in Jamaica whom I had never met in my life before, to be put on a train the next morning in Kingston to go to Spaldings to attend boarding school. When I said "I cannot do this by myself" his answer was, "God sent you into this world alone; you are not a twin." It is an experience that has carried me to where I am today. I think we as mothers have got to be involved with our daughters to let them understand there is nothing that if you want to achieve it, you cannot. We cannot let them, any longer, hide behind this thing of 'I am a woman and I am not suppose to do this'; those days are gone.

Mr. Speaker, I say to the Government, we are today accepting CEDAW and asking the United Kingdom to have this Convention extended to these Islands. It was back when the Opposition brought the Motion concerning the grant of Caymanian status by Cabinet, and in that debate I said what is going to happen to the children of these mothers. Someone said that they would not be able to come. I said at that time human rights does not allow you to separate a child from a parent. Not being a lawyer, I guess someone will explain this if I am incorrect—Article 9 Sub Article (2): "States Parties shall grant women equal rights with men with respect to the nationality of their children." My question is now that we have granted these women from other countries Caymanian status, prior to being granted that status they were not allowed to bring their children and that was understood, now we have given them Caymanian status, will this now allow these mothers to bring their children?

We must look carefully at the Articles of CEDAW and we must put in place the necessary legislation and the necessary resources because as my colleague, the Second Elected Member for George Town said, I think, it was one year that we have to comply.

Mr. Speaker, every time I speak the Honourable Minister for Community Affairs seems to get upset. I am not speaking to upset anyone. I am saying it the way I see it. When he gets up to reply he has every opportunity to prove to me that I am incorrect.

There is an issue in these Islands that concerns me greatly and it is on the rise—the defilement of young girls. Every time we read the newspaper we read about the defilement of a young girl child. We hear stories of rape of young girl children and we hear stories of incest. We need no convention to put in place necessary legislation, education or whatever it takes to eradicate this from our society. This is a matter that has to be dealt with urgently. I personally would support any legislation coming to this House to deal with persons who defile young children, whether it be a young girl or boy, that these persons be put on a list that this country knows who they are and whether they are living next door to me who may have my young granddaughter living with me. We can no longer hide the names of these persons. It is now reaching to the stage that it is becoming very serious.

Mr. Speaker, we watch television often about sex offenders of the United States. I ask a question: Are these sex offenders our own Caymanian men or are they persons coming to these shores? Could they be sex offenders where they are coming from and we have no knowledge? It is a serious matter and it must be dealt with now.

The Penal Code amendments that have just come here as law, I have not had the time to read that Law to see if included in that were the recommendations that were actually made by the Select Committee who went through that Law because there were some serious terms in that Law for these types of crimes. If we do not have the proper sentencing we must put it in place.

I will briefly make one comment on maintenance of children. I think there is a motion before this House and I do not want to get into a matter that will be coming before the House. This is another matter that must be dealt with equally. We constantly hear of deadbeat dads, I am not saying there are not some deadbeat dads but I speak the truth in saying there are some deadbeat mothers. I have heard fathers who are paying maintenance for their children and are not allowed to see that child, this is not right and these matters we have got to deal with. Some of these men refuse to pay the maintenance that the Court orders them to because they have no access to the child; that is not fair and in this day and age when we are promoting the family unit I think we must address this issue.

I support the Motion before us and I look forward to the reply from the United Kingdom Government that this Convention has been extended to the Cayman Islands, and I am sure that many women will be happy and look forward to the extension of this Convention.

Thank you.

The Speaker: Does any other Member wish to speak? Does any other Member wish to speak?

The Honourable Second Official Member.

Hon. Samuel W. Bulgin: Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

Not even the subzero temperature could prevent me from contributing to such a motion as important and on the Floor of this House. The enthusiasms that has greeted this Motion is, in my view, a confirmation of the fact that all forms of discrimination, wherever it exists, should be in the words of the honourable Robert Nesta Marley, should be totally discredited and abandoned.

Needless to say, I rise to lend my support to the Motion and to attempt to put a number of things in perspective so that we can clearly understand what we are getting into and what to expect at the end of the day.

Let me point out that the extension of the Convention to the Cayman Islands—the passage of this Resolution is the first step; the exercise is a work in progress and there are several stages to this exercise. At the moment what we are really doing is passing a Resolution, which will say to the United Kingdom that the Cayman Islands are asking for the CEDAW

Convention to be extended to these Islands. Thereafter there are a number of legal issues and things that needs to be done in order to give efficacy to the Convention itself. The UK ratified the Convention on 7 April 1986 and at the time when it did so, the UK did not have in place a written Bill of Rights. The UK Human Rights Act came into being in 1998. So, the point I am making when the United Kingdom ratified the Convention it was recognised that there were certain institutions that were not in place and there was some work to be done.

Point of Elucidation

Mr Alden M McLaughlin, Jr: Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: Second Elected Member for George Town, are you rising on a point of order?

Mr Alden M McLaughlin, Jr: Elucidation Sir. If the Honourable Second Official Member will allow me—it is not elucidation on my part but I am asking for elucidation on his part.

The Speaker: Honourable Second Official Member will you give way?

Second Elected Member for George Town please continue.

Mr Alden M McLaughlin, Jr: Thank you, Mr. Speaker, and my thanks to the Honourable Second Official Member for having given way. I think it is an important point I am asking him to clear up.

In the Motion itself the last recital says: “AND WHEREAS the Government of the Cayman Islands, on its own initiative, has requested that the United Kingdom extend the Convention to the Cayman Islands.”

When the Honourable Member was speaking a short while ago I gained the impression that he was proceeding on the premise that that exercise had not been done and would not occur until the passage of this Resolution. It is a matter of some importance to Members on this side and would be grateful if he would clarify that for us.

The Speaker: The Honourable Second Official Member.

Hon. Samuel W. Bulgin: Mr. Speaker, I am not sure if I am saying anything different from what is in the Motion itself. The point I was making is that it is an ongoing exercise. It is not simply a matter of asking the United Kingdom to extend the Convention to the Cayman Islands and it is extended, and it simply means that we are expected to be in compliance with everything immediately.

This is illustrated in the fact that the first report is required twelve months after the extension comes into effect. The first report will froze up certain institutional and legislative weaknesses in a particular country. Thereafter a report is due four years later and it is at that stage that an assessment will be again made to show the progress and whether there are still outstanding weakness substantial or significant non-compliance with the Articles of the Convention.

I made the point to illustrate that we are talking about equality of men and women; that is what the Convention is about. It has always been accepted that one of the surest ways of ensuring equality is to have a Bill of Rights. In some constitutions it is enshrined. The point I am making is that in the UK in 1986 there were no written Bill of Rights at the time. If you look at some of the other legislations that have been passed in the United Kingdom to give effect to the Convention, they were all post 1986; the Sex Discrimination Act; the Protection Against Harassment Act. All of these things were passed, post 1986. So, it is really an ongoing exercise and you assessed your position as you go along and you put in place institutions and legislation to strengthen the process so as to give effect.

May I point out that in the Cayman Islands we do not have a Bill of Rights and in my research I have not been able to find legislation which discriminates against women. I have looked at section 80 of the Labour Law and it says, “No person (whether an employer or an employee) shall discriminate with respect to any person’s hire, promotion, dismissal, tenure, wages, hours, or other conditions of employment, by reason of race, colour, creed, sex, pregnancy, or any reasons connected with pregnancy, age, mental or physical disability. . .” This is the existing Labour Law. So, there is a provision which forbids discrimination but it goes back before that. Someone had the foresight in 1964; I do not know who it was. I do not know whether it was a reaction to anything that was happening then or if it was a proactive approach at the time but a piece of legislation was enacted by this Legislative Assembly and it is called the Sex Disqualification (Removal) Law. It was originally enacted as Chapter 157 on 1 January 1964. Section 3 is very short and with your permission I will read it. It says. “This Law may be cited as the Sex Disqualification (Removal) Law (1998 Revision).

“A person shall not be disqualified by sex or marriage from the exercise of any public function, from being appointed to or holding any civil or judicial office or post, from entering or assuming or carrying on any civil profession or vocation or for admission to any incorporated society (whether incorporated by Royal Charter or otherwise), and a person shall not be exempted by sex or marriage from the liability to serve as a juror or to pay any tax.” Someone had the foresight at the time to put this piece of legislation in place.

In recognition of that I can say that we have come a long way. One of our Grand Court Judges is a lady, three magistrates are all women, we have women in the medical profession, they are in abundance in the legal profession and they are elsewhere and it argues well for our country. I think it was the Chinese who said ‘the journey of a million miles begins with the first step’. I think we have passed the first step and we are well on our way to achieving equality. As a matter of fact, for some of us I would prefer if we were standing here debating a reaffirmation of equality of gender.

The Convention, as we understand it, contains broad definition and you have heard several speakers refer to the definition, which encompasses any distinction, exclusion or restriction made on the basis of sex, which has the effect or purpose of nullifying the recognition, enjoyment or exercise by women irrespective of their marital status on a basis of equality of men and women of human rights and fundamental freedoms.

The obligations placed on State Parties by the Conventions are also extensive. Indeed it includes the incorporation of the principle of equality of men and women in their legal systems and abolishing all discriminatory laws. It is a binding treaty and it is necessary to ensure that the Laws of the Cayman Islands provide full protection and the rights guaranteed under the Convention itself.

The Convention of significance contemplates that additional State Parties are expected to take what they call other types of action beyond establishing a neutral legal playing field. State Parties are expected to establish tribunals and are the public institution to ensure the effective protection of women against discrimination, and to ensure all acts of discrimination against women by persons, organisations or enterprises, which both entail positive advances in the promotion of equality. At a glance these requirements might seem somewhat burdensome however, I might urge Honourable Members to bear in mind that they should be viewed in the context of the mechanisms contained in the Convention itself, which is necessary for its supervision.

The approach advocated is to encourage, by way of gentle persuasion, the promotion of the rights and principles embodied in the Convention through the submission of national reports. You have heard other speakers mention, in particular, the Honourable Minister, that these reports are to be made at least every four years and should include any relevant information on measures that the state party has taken to comply with the Treaty itself. Accordingly, the Convention extends, in my view, the carrot as opposed to the stick in requiring compliance. In my view, the invasiveness of the obligation is tempered by the less oppressive sanction.

Honourable Members might wish to bear in mind that the ratification of the Convention does not necessarily entail its incorporation into domestic law and without it being embodied in domestic law it is not necessarily enforceable in our Court, so the ratification and the consequential extension might not provide the immediate panacea to our problem. The more accepted method is a formal compliance procedure is what I have referred to earlier on as the reporting obligation; that is how compliance is monitored. May I also observe that in addition to the reporting obligation, the statue of the Cayman Islands, as a UK overseas territory, can be seen as an informal level of monetary as well.

As far as the existing laws of the Cayman Islands are concerned, I am not aware of any which are currently enforced that discriminate against women. I am aware that the Convention speaks of practices and customs. We have already heard in this House speakers mentioning that they are in fact practices that are discriminatory and I would not, in any way, attempt to refute that. What we need to do is to put in place and encourage the best practices to get those who are involved to desist from such practices.

The fact that I am not aware of any existing legislation that discriminates against women means that the Cayman Islands would have met at least the first obligation, as contemplated by the Convention. I am aware that this is not the sole focus of the Convention, the absence of discriminatory legislation is not the sole focus of the Convention there are other things that need to be done.

They need to ensure the non-existence of discriminatory legislation is really a starting point and I would dare to say it represents the level at which the UK is prepared to submit itself and its overseas territories to international scrutiny, in this regard.

I started by saying that it is a work in progress, so to stand and proclaim that there are no legislation that I am aware of that discriminates against women is not the end process. Those who have spoken before me recognises the fact that there is the need to build an existing institution to put in place, where necessary, additional legislation/framework to give effect to the Convention itself.

Let me pause at this stage to make reference to a point made by the Second Elected Member for George Town when he spoke. He read from the Gender Policy Document that was presented to this House and he made reference to page 39 saying that we should draw on the experience of Hong Kong in this regard. He goes on to say as well, that the moment the Convention is extended to the Cayman Islands we would be in breach or words to that effect. However, let me point out that on a close examination of the Gender Policy Document, page 39, the caption is "CEDAW and National Laws: The Case of Hong Kong". "In the late 1980's, following the events in Beijing's Tiananmen Square and in the anticipation of the 1997 transfer of Hong Kong from British to Chinese rule, human rights activism intensified in Hong Kong." Now the operative words here are "in anticipation of transfer of Hong Kong from British to Chinese rule" we know that China was a communist country. Hong Kong was under British rule and has all the trappings of western democracy. The fact that it was going to be transferred back to China where it was a communist regime means that civil liberties would not be available to the people of Hong Kong. It was in anticipation of this eventuality why activism started. Whilst it is important to cite the case of Hong Kong, it must be made clear that it is quite distinguishable from the position that obtains in the Cayman Islands. There is no parallel as such.

Mr. Speaker, in some other countries, relative to their population there is under-representation of women in politics; there is the issue of discrimination of women in the workplace and indeed closer home, the issue of violence against women and the absence of institutions expressly tasked with the responsibility of promoting equality. These are some of the issues that are forever being highlighted in these reports and the workings of the Convention itself.

The Cayman Islands has in place a Human Rights Committee; there is a Complaints Commissioner; there are non governmental organisations and I dare say there are legislators who are extremely vigilant in protecting and promoting the rights of women. Therefore, the extension of the Convention to the Cayman Islands is appropriate. We have the basic framework, legislative institutions, relevant concerns, vigilance and foresight to ensue its compliance and it is in that spirit that the Motion seeks to confirm to the United Kingdom the intention of the Cayman Islands to have the Convention extended to us. We are cognisant of the fact that it is a work in progress and that it will be monitored by virtue of regular reporting, therefore in due course, like the other countries it will be in full effect and there will be full compliance.

I hasten to add that when it was ratified in 1986 the only two overseas territories that it was extended to at the time were the Turks and Caicos Islands and the British Virgin Islands. I doubt very much that they had in place all the legal and institutional framework to give effect to it. So far we have not seen any kind of criticisms as to the efficacy or the workings of the Convention in these two overseas territories. So, we are confident that with the passage of time and with the level of enthusiasms and foresight, the spirit and intendment of the Convention will be jealously guarded in these Islands.

I commend the passage of the Resolution to this Honourable House.

The Speaker: Does any other Member wish to speak? Does any other Member wish to speak?

The Second Elected Member for West Bay.

Mr. Rolston M. Anglin: Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

I rise to offer brief words in regards to this Government Motion that is before us. I do understand that much work has gone in to paving the way that has led us to the point we are at. I think both the Lady Minister responsible for Planning and the Lady Member from North Side, have both acknowledged their involvement, commitment and work that went on in years gone by that highlighted the great need to institutionalise the issue of women's rights and how women are treated and dealt with by way of formal government policy that would change where necessary behaviours in civil society as it relates to women.

I suppose I am fortunate that I have come from a new generation of Caymanians who, I think, in general terms, see and value women slightly differently than they were in the past. I am lucky that I had a great influence in my life, in terms of a mother who always talked about judging people on their character as to who they are, what their principles were and how they lived life irrespective of what they looked like, whether man, woman or where they came from.

I must agree with a very relevant point that was raised by the Member from North Side, as it relates to academic achievement and the ratio of females versus male academic achievers within our school system. One would have to be blind if one attended any graduation and did not take note as to the number of females versus males when best reports or any other academic achievement awards are being presented at those ceremonies. Mr. Speaker, I was not able to attend the John Gray High School graduation this year however, at the George Hicks graduation of the fourteen or sixteen young persons who were given awards for being academic achievers, best report recipients, only two were male. At the West Bay Primary graduation when you look at the top students again of the nine recipients for the top three in each class, I think again, of those nine that two or three were male. Certainly, this is not a today trend. When I graduated from high school in 1988 and attended sixth form the majority of our sixth form class by far were female. So, we are talking about an issue that has been in existence for decades. There is no easy solution; in fact, let us not even talk about the solution, there is no easy answer as to why this is taking place. You see it in the number of persons who get scholarships as well, and who are receiving a college education. I do not want to sidetrack a very important debate that we are having, to bring up a male issue, or seem to be complaining about a male issue, but the Lady Member brought the point up and I think it is a very important point.

What is also important is what happens to females after they get their education and get into the work force. Are they marginalised? Are there certain glass ceilings that are put in place beyond which they cannot go? Are employers creative in their dealings with the needs and wishes of women? As a classic example, as much as a man may want to he cannot have a child himself. Technology is changing and I know that we are in the information technology age but I do not think they are going to change that one. I am not going to say definitely because we do not know what the future holds but I would wager a bet that that one is not going to be changed. Therefore, you are going to have women who are qualified in whatever spare of life, whether it is a college degree or if they are working as a waitress or someone in a hotel room; they will bear children and they will have that awesome responsibility. How is it that that is accommodated by the private sector? Some companies will be creative and some will see it as a non issue; some will say that is the way life is.

The Honourable Second Official Member made mention of a section of the Labour Law which specifically states that persons are not supposed to be prejudiced against because they are pregnant. I think all of us know and I have had experience with young ladies in my constituency who have been laid off from their jobs after becoming pregnant, and have been disenfranchised in terms of seeking employment. The biggest curse, as I have seen it, is to be a female pregnant and try to get a job. So, that is an issue that needs to be looked into, no doubt about it. A lot of employers do not look at things in terms of long term, they look at the hear and now, saying to themselves that this particular individual has not been in my employed for a substantial period of time so why should I employ her now at the most costly time of her working life, which is when she is going to get maternity leave from me?

I think there are good examples out there, I know of an employer of a professional service firm who is actively putting together a programme for young professional working mothers who have decided for whatever reason, and it is usually because they place family more important than monetary reward and are taking more time off to be with their children. This professional service firm is coming up with programmes within their firm so as to how to employ those young professional working mothers at peak busy times and allow them to not have to be employed at that firm when the non-busy season is on. Those are the types of efforts that are commendable because a lot of people come from backgrounds where even though they have a husband who is working they still do not have that ability to instantaneously adjust their lives once a family is started and children come into the picture. These are initiatives that need to be encouraged and fostered. In fact, I would say that they need to be actively sought out and wherever you can give favourable consideration on the part of government to do so we have to be creative. Companies that do those sorts of things could be given certain breaks, whether it be trade and business license breaks or what, but incentives put in place because those are things that help build the community and those are things that also allow employers to better manage themselves and their resources. So, they need to be encouraged.

Mr. Speaker, I have been influenced in my life to have a particular position when it comes to crime and punishment and I do not think that anyone in this House has doubts of where I stand on those sorts of issues. When the Lady Member mentioned the issue of certain crimes against females I was heartened because just three short years ago, in fact the Bill was passed on 4 July 2001, certain amendments came into the Penal Code that were as a result of a Private Members Motion that the Third Elected Member for West Bay and myself brought to this House in the March sitting of that year, which deals specifically with issues she mentioned in terms of incest and enhancing the ability of judges to increase penalties for those sorts of crimes. It did not speak to the other specific issue that she raised in regards to identifying certain individuals but it has dealt with defilement and incest. That strengthening has happened and if you look at the Bill it is the Penal Code Amendment Law 2001 that covers those instances and types of crimes she spoke about.

I am proud that I can say I was here as a legislator at this particular time to have assisted in the passage of this important piece of legislation. I think one of the things that have happened in terms of the development in Cayman is that we have been very much americanised in terms of business practices. Because this push took real root in the 1960's in the United States I think you will find that Cayman has progressed a lot. I would venture to say a lot more than our neighbours in the Caribbean on this front.

I can remember back in the 1990 and, Mr. Speaker, you would quickly identify this story—In the United Kingdom one of the major accounting firms were sued by a senior manager who had been passed over time and time again for admission to the partnership and she won and was awarded a substantial amount to damages. The Courts went back and went into the accounting firm's records and calculated what her share should have been had she become a partner from the time she was unfairly passed over. We fast forwarded that in 1990 and there were no female Caymanians as partner in any of the major accounting firms. Today we have one firm with a Caymanian female as a partner. We had another firm who had a female partner that was from the Bahamas and she is no longer here and we do have managers and senior managers in some of those firms. It is the same thing in Law. We see major law firms with female partners. It is the same thing with the architecture firms. I can remember a big firm announcing about a year or two ago announcing their management reshuffle and a young lady who had graduated from high school with me, a very young lady being appointed to head up one of the major sections in that firm.

A lot of strides have been made and I think we are on the right track. As the Honourable Minister has pointed out, in his presentation of this Motion, there is much work to be done. However, I think this is an important and significant day.

Mr. Speaker, I think as we continue to build the systems and the infrastructure that is needed to move the process forward there is going to be continued call on the Government to act and do things.

I would like to end with this—as much as possible I think we need to work with the private sector and try to provide as many incentives as we can to not only give women a fair opportunity, but also the possibility to contribute at differing levels based on their choice as to how they want to live their lives. I can tell you this country is going to lose a substantial amount of knowledge and skill, as a lot of young ladies who are becoming educated, continue to have families and more and more of them are not given a possibility to take part in the economic life of the country simply because people are not being creative enough to incorporate the particular lifestyle that they want to now lead, in terms of not wanting to put in forty hours a week or forty hours plus overtime in a lot of professions and be able to still have the type of family life they so desire.

Mr. Speaker, I congratulate the Leader of Government Business for the work he did in this area when he was Minister. I congratulate the Minister for Planning for the work she did, the Member for North Side for the work she did as a Back Bench Member and as a Minister, and most importantly now, the Minister with responsibility for this subject for the emphasis he has placed and the amount of opportunity he has sought to give women in his Ministry to head very important sections. I think if you look at his Ministry and look at the heads of departments and heads of particular agencies, you will see that he has surrounded himself with a very strong team that has a lot of females doing very important work for the country. I am confident that the whole process will be moved forward. Over his term as Minister a lot of those opportunities were given and females were given the opportunity to rise to the occasion and take up these very substantial and important posts.

With that said I lend my support to the Motion and I thank you, Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: Does any other Member wish to speak?
The Elected Member for East End.

Mr. V. Arden McLean: Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

I rise to lend my support to this very important Government Motion before the Honourable House on getting extended to the Cayman Islands the Convention for the Elimination of all Forms of Discrimination Against Women.

I must say that the Cayman Islands have come a long way in my short lifetime and continues to flourish in the area of equality when it comes to women. I know all of us are aware that there was a time when the Cayman Islands were almost entirely, on the civil front, ran by women. I know I was raised by my mother almost entirely because my father had to go to sea to send money home for her to be able to raise me and all of my peers were in the same position. However, I do not believe that in those days there was any equality because the men in this country still were the head and clearly defined as the head.

We know how our country in those days were and it is beginning to change but in those days the men would buy or inherit a lot of land and on that plot of land his children would build around the main house but he was still in charge even though he had his children with their individual family on that property. So, the men were still very much in charge.

In recent times it is changing and I am glad for that. Women are recognising more and more every day that they have and should have an equal step alongside the men. I do not believe any woman wants to step out of step with the man and be in front of his steps but they certainly want and deserve to walk alongside their men.

Recently I was at a gathering at which I spoke, and I commented that I had to be careful of what I said because all the women in my life were there; the women who raised me, including my teachers from cub scouts, boy scouts, and all of my other life teachers. It was the women that raised us all. Fathers provided the necessities like financials for the women to be able to take care of the children.

We have come a long way but there is much to be done for gender equality in this country.

In my former profession I was a seaman and one of the amazing things that I witnessed and experienced was to see women as—I have to be careful how I say this because I cannot use the word seamen—but Swedish women have sailed for many years on their ships. I have not worked alongside women on the Swedish ships but I have been on board my ship alongside Swedish ships with women on board as captain, engineers, deck hands and mates [background laughter]— Mr. Speaker, it was not ‘sweetish’; it was Swedish and the same with the Norwegians as well. As a young man that was a new experience for me to see the kind of gender equality that was being practised in those countries.

I changed my profession and became an electrical engineer and started working at CUC. At the time I started working at CUC I was not very proficient in hard electricity, that is, high voltage electricity, so I had to get a lot of training and I remember particularly going to do bare hand training on 230,000 volts where you work without insulation on your hands, no gloves or anything. It was a new technology that had just come out and there were women as participants amongst that training group. My experiences with women being in the same field started very early in life.

Today we see women in all professions. It is like the Lady Member for North Side said, electrical engineering, all engineering professions and other professions, which were traditionally considered men dominated, the women are now coming forward and recognising their abilities and their need to be involved in these professions.

Government in this country has been the leader in gender equality when it comes to the workplace. We see at least two permanent secretaries out of five; we see the Director of Tourism, the Accountant General and many more women in the government services that are holding positions which were traditionally held by men and we have to applaud that. However, in the private sector we have not seen them come of age as quickly as the government/public sector.

We hear cries from the women that they are not allowed to go out to collect their children; we hear cries from women that they are discriminated against whenever they are pregnant. There is still gender discrimination within the Government sector but not as much as, I believe, is in the private sector. A few days ago a young lady came here to me seeking assistance to get a job and when I ask her where she applied to and if she had registered with the employment agency, her reply was that she had but they told her to come back when her baby was six months old. I would like to know who is going to feed that lady and the child within those six months. That is the type of discrimination that is so subtle that the rest of the country is not seeing it. It is visited upon individual women, but it is discrimination. It is absolutely discrimination! The United Nation Convention against discrimination of women will protect them against that and they will have ways and means to address it.

Mr. Speaker, it is as said before, women are surpassing men in this country; educationally they are. Thank God we have come of age where women are getting opportunities. The same women that raised us could not get those opportunities because they had to stay home and raise us. In those days there was not much here. In 1959 adult suffrage for women came into being in this country.

One of the concerns that I have is that women are not supporting their own. As much as women have now become liberated statistically the population is made up more of women than men. Nevertheless we go to the Elections, which are a prime example and we see women offering themselves to contribute to this country through the political process and they are not elected. Theoretically there should be more women in here than there are men. So, my appeal to women is to support their own. Once it is justified, to support their own.

I recall in the last Election the women theme song was ‘women are going to rule this country’. I think that was made popular by a Calypso artist from the Eastern Caribbean. Until women start to recognise that they can support their own, it does not make any sense—the Convention’s extension to the Cayman Islands is not going to assist that, it has to come from within.

I too witnessed a situation in Africa during the plenary of the CPA, and my understanding from other participants was that it happens all the time, in that the African delegates who were women stood up strong for women’s rights in Africa. They came out and when I spoke to some of those women I understood the reason why they were coming out so strongly in the defence of their own. We are fortunate in this country that we recognise the values that women play; the importance of women in all aspects of life in this country. In Africa it is not so.

At that plenary, with the exception of a few female delegates, they all spoke on equality for women and their appeal was to the CPA to assist with gender equality. So, I am glad that I am in a country where we treat women with a little more respect. I view women as another human being, another individual who is as capable or more so in many things that I am and I hope other men in this country do the same. Unfortunately it is an exercise we need to undertake to teach men of the respect they must have for women.

I recently read an article in the paper where even China is now trying to get away from the old tradition of boy babies being more important than girl babies, and are trying to bring some gender equality to their way of life inline with the rest of the world.

I believe that the extension of this Convention to the Cayman Islands is a step in the right direction. I recognise that the process is a continuing process and eventually, in the not too distant future, we will be able to legislate laws to support equality.

I too would like to congratulate all those, particularly the Ministers, who have played a part over the last ten years in the promotion of women; the Leader of Government Business, the Minister of Planning, the current Minister for Gender Affairs and Mrs. Moyle, the Elected Member for North Side and all those in the Ministry. There are many women in the Ministry, particularly the Ministry, which is responsible for gender affairs, present and past who have worked diligently to ensure that this day would come to pass.

Mr. Speaker, I congratulate them and thank them because not only is it for women, but my mother will be proud to know that even at her ripe age of 81 that at long last there is some gender equality in this country, which makes her equal with any man regardless of how she felt prior to that day, which I trust will soon be here.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: Does any other Member wish to speak? Does any other Member wish to speak? Does any other Member wish to speak? If not would the Honourable Minister responsible for Community Services wish to exercise his right of reply?

Honourable Members I realise that it will perhaps go beyond the hour we had announced but I think it is fair and reasonable that we allow the Honourable Minister to wind up his Motion.

Dr. the Hon. Frank S. McField: Mr. Speaker, I am very happy that so many Members of the Legislative Assembly found the desire and the words to speak on this Motion. Those who have not spoken, we understand that they are trying to spare this Honourable House some time but they also agree with much of what has been said on this Motion.

It again puzzles me though why the Opposition in responding to this Motion to extend the Convention on the Elimination of all Forms of Discrimination Against Women; why they feel that they must create this kind of anxiety in people by making people believe that this extension will cause the Cayman Islands not to be prepared and therefore, cause us to sin even more than we are sinning by not having this Convention extended to us in the first place.

I was therefore very happy to hear the capable Honourable Attorney General's reply to some of the accusations that was being made by the Opposition, in saying that the Government is coming to extend this Convention but the Government have made no proper preparations for it to work properly, and therefore, the Government is taking the people again into another crisis.

I have heard often about them shooting the messenger but I have not heard about shooting the messenger and saving the message. Because what I believe the Opposition was trying to do was to shoot the messenger and somehow save the message and say they are responsible for the fact that the message is here today.

I am not a woman and therefore I do not really represent that group. I cannot stand here and say that my understanding of gender issues or women issues is sufficient for me to be the sincere representative of women in this country. I am only doing my constitutional job by trying the best that I can to represent what some women in this Legislative Assembly, sometime back in 1995, found was necessary to bring to the consciousness of the general public the desire or the need for people in this country to be more aware of gender biases in our society, therefore assisting us by being more vigilant with regards to the issue of discrimination based upon sex.

The fact is that I do not intend or have intended to discredit the contributions which were made by previous Ministers and Members of the Legislative Assembly, most of who were women that tried to help these issues to progress. The situation is that actions speak louder than voice. I see myself as a Minister of action and regardless of what any prior Ministers or representatives might have done I was crediting myself with the fact that at least we have seen during my tenure the manifestation of many of the ideas and ideals that were discussed and that were already placed on paper.

I am happy that I know my shortcomings and that I cannot speak subjectively from the position of being a woman; that I therefore do not know the seriousness of discrimination; I do not know from a personal point or from urgency behind trying to get solutions to these issues. However, I think as a child of a mother and as the husband of a woman that I have some experiences that tell me that I should do my part in trying to realise what we are now trying to realise which is to establish the beginning of stages of development that will improve human relationships in the Cayman Islands.

The fact that we have the Opposition suggesting that we have ill thought out our actions, that our actions were like our actions with immigration issues; were all done wrongly. In fact we get the same typical Opposition argument: 'We agree with what you are doing we just do not agree with how you are doing it'. That is what we hear all the time; they agree with what we are doing, they just do not agree with how we are doing it. Therefore, when the Second Elected Member was making his contribution he was trying to convince the general public that he is on the side of women's rights, he is against the discrimination of women and he feels that this Convention should be extended to the Cayman Islands, but he would be giving too much credit to the Government and he would be giving too much credit to the present Minister if he said that somehow when it is extended it would be a new beginning and things would be progressively better for all involved, including the administrators of these particular policies and strategies.

We understood that very well when he talked about legislation and the lack of legislative framework and we understand we are not a country that lives without laws. We have the foundation and laws and natural justice and all the other justice that we all feel we benefit from in a democratic society like the Cayman Islands. The Honourable Attorney General has pointed out that his research shows that there are no laws in the Cayman Islands that are of the nature that the Convention really is against. One of the Members of the Opposition also spoke about Africa and the way in which women are ordered in Africa and other countries of the world, to show that there is extreme discrimination against women in the world to the point where Conventions like this was conceived necessary and many countries ratified this Convention.

We have been able to distinguish the difference between us and those other countries that severely discriminate against women. The fact that we recognise that although we might have been progressive we can also read of legislation dating back to 1964, which is against discrimination against women or which prohibits the discrimination based upon sex; the fact that we can see ourselves as progressive does not necessarily mean that culturally and socially they are still not issues of discrimination against women that tends to be more subtle.

These are the issues that our gender policy seriously intends to address. That is the reason why we signify that the development of the gender policy and having the gender policy here, at this particular time, creates for us the administrative mechanism to begin to deal with some of the more subtle forms of discrimination against women in this country. Because of the cultural bias, of the language which we have learned and because we are paternalistic in a sense towards women, when we, as men, get up to speak, we are in fact, a product of that discrimination and we are also expressing the fact of discrimination. So, I am not here to make apologies for the fact that I am a part of a male culture that has discriminated against women and have seen women not always to be equal. After making that confession we are here to begin to establish stages of a development process that will begin to attack the basis of that physiological, social, cultural and political form of discrimination.

The fact that the Member from North Side and I do not seem to get along has nothing to do with my feelings about my job as the Minister responsible for Gender Affairs. Sometimes I feel that the heated exchange between that Member and I has nothing to do with the fact that she is a woman and I am a man but it has more to do with the fact that I was the one who assumed her job! Therefore, I can say or do very little in this Honourable House that that Lady Member would agree with. That does not necessarily mean that I view that in any other terms than it should be viewed. She is my political opponent and it is her job to make me look bad even when I try my best to make the country see in fact that I am performing. That was the reason why I had to do an hour talk on the accomplishments of my Ministry where I could show her that if she had been involved with her district that she would have understood what my Ministry was doing in her district, in order to improve the lives of young people, seamen and other persons in her district.

I am quite content with the debate and understanding now, that what we are doing in extending this Convention to the Cayman Islands is giving ourselves a conscious awakening. We are putting ourselves on a watch, to watch for incidences of gender bias, discrimination, and of incidences where we feel that we need to bring to the attention of all the people in the private and the public sector as what they could do to assist in the improvements of these conditions.

Mr. Speaker, all we have to do is go through the Gender Policy to know that resources will be needed; additional administrative personnel will be needed. The Gender Policy is the big challenge we have here today. The Convention reaffirms that we will do our best to make sure that all forms of discrimination against women are eliminated in the Cayman Islands. We will continue to research to make sure that our laws are in compliance with this Convention. We will also move towards the reporting session, as the Honourable Attorney General has said, the first report is requested twelve months after the Convention comes into effect. After signing the next report will be four years after that.

Many of us in this Honourable House are familiar with human rights conventions and the process of reporting is really the obligation. We are an associate member of the fraternity and when you become a member of a fraternity that is against discrimination against women in any form. Once you become a member you pledge that this is what you will strive to achieve; the elimination of all forms of discrimination against women. It does not mean that you are pledging that there is no discrimination against women. You are beginning a stage, a process and a journey rather than what the Members of the Opposition tried to prove, saying that we are going to have chaos and we are going to have the human rights coming down to say, 'what about the children of those women who were granted status, why are you not allowing them to enter into your country?' These are the ways they begin to reintroduce arguments in debates to try to convince the people somehow that the Government is not working on a sound footing.

When they think that it is violation of the children and the parents human rights, the children are not allowed into the country or that they cannot go to school, but yet these human rights that these people now have is a result of the Government's action to give them rights in this country in the first place, which was criticised by the Opposition. If the Government did not give the people human rights there would be no complaints about the violation of human rights. It is great to be a Member of the Opposition because you can criticise anything in this world because there has been nothing that has been perfect and everything is open to criticism and ridicule, and we see that the Opposition is so very good at criticising and ridiculing, especially me for what I try to do in the areas of assisting the development of this country in the social, spiritual and economic sense.

Mr. Speaker, we believe that Mrs. Berna Thompson-Cummings contribution in 1995 should be amplified in this Legislative Assembly at this time. We know and listen to the debates from the outside at that particular time, at least I did, as I was not a Member of this Legislative Assembly, and I know that she participated and contributed in terms of getting that particular consciousness going; what would you expect from a lady like Mrs. Berna Thompson-Cummings.

Before I conclude I must say that I had some experiences here today. Because in fact the Private Member's Motion of 1995 was a signal, not that we were just changing in our attitudes towards women issues, but in 1995 we were also making the preparation to change with regard so many issues in this country because in 2000 we were actually able to remove the then Leader of Government Business and past Minister of Education, Mr. Truman Bodden. I am saying that to say that actions speak louder than voice. I think since he has been gone out of this House we have been able to achieve so much and even though the Opposition might seem sometime to be people who are trying to stir up the people and make the people feel that the United Democratic Party Government is taking the country into crisis, I think that Mr. Truman Bodden is even better at doing that. If I had to choose between the Members of the Opposition and Mr. Truman Bodden, I do not know what the United Democratic Party Government would prefer, but I would prefer the Members of the Opposition to him.

With that, Mr. Speaker, I would like to say while closing, that I think we as a Legislative Assembly can all positively affirm that we do believe that all forms of discrimination against women should be eliminated here and elsewhere, and we congratulate the Opposition at least for wanting to save the message even though they are willing to kill the messenger.

The Speaker: The question is BE IT THEREFORE RESOLVED THAT this Assembly requests that the Government of the United Kingdom and Northern Ireland, extend its ratification of the Convention to the Cayman Islands before its next Report to the Committee on the Elimination of Discrimination Against Women. All those in favour please say Aye. Those against, No.

Ayes.

The Speaker: The Ayes have it.

Agreed, Government Motion No. 03/04 passed.

ADJOURNMENT

The Speaker: Honourable Leader of Government Business please move the motion.

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: Mr. Speaker, it has been a long day and a very interesting debate. I want to agree with everything that the Minister of Community Affairs has said but with one caveat and that is, I want nothing to do with both of them, so I hope that he as the Minister of Community Affairs understands where the United Democratic Party is coming from.

Having said that I move the adjournment of this Honourable House until tomorrow morning 10 am

The Speaker: The question is that this House do now adjourn until tomorrow Friday, 23 July 2004 at 10 am. All those in favour please say Aye. Those against, No.

Ayes.

The Speaker: The Ayes have it.

Agreed, at 8.14 pm the House stood adjourned until Friday, 23 July 2004 at 10 am.

OFFICIAL HANSARD REPORT
FRIDAY
23 JULY 2004
10.48 AM
Eleventh Sitting

[Hon. Cline A. Glidden, Jr., Deputy Speaker, in the Chair]

The Deputy Speaker: I will invite the Honourable Minister of Community Services, Youth, Sports, and Gender Affairs to lead us in prayers.

PRAYERS

Dr. the Hon. Frank S. McField: Almighty God, from whom all wisdom and power are derived: We beseech Thee so to direct and prosper the deliberations of the Legislative Assembly now assembled, that all things may be ordered upon the best and surest foundations for the glory of Thy Name and for the safety, honour and welfare of the people of these Islands.

Bless our Sovereign Lady, Queen Elizabeth II; Philip, Duke of Edinburgh; Charles, Prince of Wales; and all the Royal Family. Give grace to all who exercise authority in our Commonwealth, that peace and happiness, truth and justice, religion and piety may be established among us. Especially we pray for the Governor of our Islands, the Speaker of the Legislative Assembly, Official Members and Ministers of Cabinet and Members of the Legislative Assembly, that we may be enabled faithfully to perform the responsible duties of our high office. All this we ask for Thy great Name's sake.

Let us say The Lord's Prayer together: Our Father, who art in Heaven, Hallowed be Thy Name. Thy Kingdom come, Thy will be done on earth as it is in Heaven. Give us this day our daily bread, and forgive us our trespasses, as we forgive those who trespass against us. Lead us not into temptation, but deliver us from evil. For Thine is the Kingdom, the power and the glory, forever and ever. Amen.

The Lord bless us and keep us. The Lord make His face shine upon us and be gracious unto us. The Lord lift up the light of His countenance upon us and give us peace, now and always. Amen.

Proceedings resumed at 11.47 am

The Deputy Speaker: Please be seated. Proceedings are resumed.

READING BY THE HONOURABLE
SPEAKER OF MESSAGES
AND ANNOUNCEMENTS

Apologies

The Deputy Speaker: I have received apologies for absence from the Honourable Speaker; and apologies for late arrival from the Minister of Planning.

QUESTIONS TO HONOURABLE MINISTERS AND MEMBERS OF THE CABINET

Questions Nos. 4 and 5
(Withdrawn)

No. 4: Mrs. Edna M. Moyle asked the Honourable Minister for Community Services, Youth, Sports, and Gender Affairs to give the proposed date for the completion of The Young Offenders' Facility at Northward Prison, and if The Young Offenders' Facility is not yet completed, where are juveniles and young offenders being held.

Seeing that these questions appeared on the Business Papers since February and I have read in the newspaper that this facility at Northward has been opened and juveniles are now being housed there. So, I seek permission of this Honourable House to withdraw these two questions.

The Deputy Speaker: The Honourable Leader of the Opposition.

Hon. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Thank you. Mr. Speaker, I beg to second that.

The Deputy Speaker: The question is that this Honourable House does withdraw Questions No. 4 and 5.

All those in favour please say Aye. Those against?

Ayes.

The Deputy Speaker: The Ayes have it. Questions 4 and 5 are thereby withdrawn.

Question No. 6
(Withdrawn)

The Deputy Speaker: The Second Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. Alden M. McLaughlin, Jr. asked the Honourable Minister for Community Services, Youth, Sports, and Gender Affairs to state what the cost of the Affordable Homes is. However, this has been answered in a statement by the Honourable Minister, delivered to this House some weeks ago. So, I beg leave also to withdraw that question.

Mr. V. Arden McLean: Mr. Speaker, I beg to second that.

The Deputy Speaker: The question is that Question No. 6 be withdrawn.

All those in favour, please say Aye. Those against, No.

Ayes.

The Deputy Speaker: The Ayes have it. Question 6 is thereby withdrawn.

STATEMENTS BY HONOURABLE MINISTERS AND MEMBERS OF THE CABINET

The Deputy Speaker: I have received no notice of any statements.

GOVERNMENT BUSINESS

BILLS

Suspension of Standing Orders 45 46 (1), (2), (4) and 47

The Deputy Speaker: I call on the Honourable Leader of Government Business for the suspension of Standing Orders 45, 46(1), (2) and (4) and 47.

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: Mr. Speaker, I move for the suspension of Standing Orders 45, 46(1), (2) and (4) and 47.

The Deputy Speaker: The question is that Standing Orders 45, 46(1), (2) and (4) and 47 be suspended.

All those in favour, please say Aye. Those against, No.

Ayes.

The Deputy Speaker: The Ayes have it. Standing Orders 45, 46(1), (2) and (4) and 47 are suspended.

Agreed: Standing Orders 45, 46 (1), (2) (4) and 47 suspended.

FIRST READING

The Community College (Amendment) Bill 2004

The Deputy Speaker: The Bill has been deemed to have been read a first time and is set down for the Second Reading.

SECOND READING

The Elections (Amendment) Bill, 2004

The Deputy Speaker: I call on the Honourable Leader of The Opposition for the continuation of his debate.

Honourable Leader of The Opposition, I just want to remind you that you have one hour and thirty nine minutes remaining.

Hon. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker.

Mr. Speaker when I finished off on Monday evening, I was closing off on the point where in the main Law, section 21, the amendment in Clause 9 of the new Bill, seeking to change the time from twelve months to six weeks in regards to an elector who changes his or her name or address of residence having to give notice in writing in Form 13 to the registering officer for the electoral district in respect of which he is registered as an elector and shall, where the change of residence is from one electoral district to another, at the same time send a copy of such notice to the registering officer for the electoral district within which the new place of residence is situated.

Mr. Speaker, to finish off that point, I do not know where the time of six weeks has come from, and in looking at the committee stage amendments that have been put forward so far, I do not see any committee stage amendments to that timing; but I want to suggest that the time, while I accept, twelve months is a bit long. I would think that the time for this to occur should be at least three months and not six weeks. So, I am making that suggestion with the hope that those who are taking notes might wish to add that as an amendment.

You see, the new amendment, when you place that into the principal Law, the Law itself says "you shall", so you do not have a choice in the matter. However, it does not draw any penalties. So, there is a bit of impotence as it is and it is really left to the will and direction of the individual, while the Law itself says "you shall do so". I would think that in many instances it is not at all times that people are building a new house and moving from George Town to Savannah or some other location. People do rent and from time to time they move for various reasons. So, the truth is there are individuals who, in between an election, may move three or four or five or six times. So, I do believe it should be a period of more than six weeks, and I am suggesting three months for that period.

Mr. Speaker, I was thinking about it after we closed off on Monday evening, and I was remembering what the Minister for Community Services spoke on and some of his line of debate. While it is fresh in my mind this morning, I need to make a comment or two on his line of debate because one of the comments he made was referring to the fact that he was not a First Elected Member in here. Obviously, he is speaking about multi-member constituencies, and he was not one of them who spent the most money in the last election. I am not so sure where he was going because he stopped short of making any direct comments, but I have two comments to make about that. One, I so happen to be one of those Members in here who is presently a First Elected Member, and if he was pointing his comments at me personally that is a different matter. However, if he was making a general comment, then all I should tell him is that he needs to look across and behind him and he will understand that on this side there is only one First Elected Member and on the Government side there are three in the multi-member constituencies.

So, if by innuendo he was making any negative comments, I surely know that he would not wish to make them against his colleagues so he had best be careful. However, if he was speaking to me personally and singling me out, the other comment that I have to make about that, Mr. Speaker, is that the 2,753 people registered in the District of George Town that voted for me last time, I am absolutely certain do not take kindly to any insinuation that they voted for me because I spent a whole pile of money. I certainly do not believe that he would want them to think that he thinks they do not have good sense. Therefore, when he is making his rash comments, he had best think twice about how he makes them. I know that the people know me just as well as they know him, and he keeps talking about who is going to get whopped. November 17th is coming, and the good people in the district of George Town and indeed in the Cayman Islands will decide, and whoever they decide, they will get the government they deserve. I certainly am not one of them who are going to pre-empt that situation by trying to tell them how they should think, because I know they have good sense. I wish he would make sure that he understands that himself.

Mr. Speaker, there is another question before I finally move off of the amendment to Section 21. If we leave this at six weeks, and when this Law is passed and comes into effect that six-week period exists. How is it going to affect those individuals who have been registered in a district but have moved into another district for less than a year? They are going by the Law as it exists, so during the registration period, because the time is less than a year unless they had a keen desire to do so, they did not think that they needed to change their address. There is still the period of objections facing us and if this Law remains at six weeks, I wonder how that is going to affect those individuals. Those are matters that need to be thought out very carefully, Mr. Speaker, because we would not want for any reason to disenfranchise anyone's ability to cast his or her vote.

I am pleased to see that section 42 in the Amending Bill, which seeks to remove an Agent's right to keep a written record of persons who present themselves as electors have been moved as a Committee Stage Amendment to remove that Clause from the Bill. Those of us who have been directly involved in the process over the time understand very clearly that even if the thought is extended, if you keep a record in the various polling stations of the individuals who come to vote and you have a voters' list in front of you and you keep ticking it off, at the end of the day you know who did not attend. Everyone has a free choice and the argument cannot be put forward that if you are allowed to keep that record you will know who did not come out to vote, so, therefore, if there is something you might hold against them or an individual holding office, I hear that argument but I would like to believe that we are not as petty as that. If someone did not come out to vote, regardless – first of all you really do not know when they go inside who they are going to vote for so one cannot make assumptions as to why the person did not come out. Truth of the matter is that the only sensible thing to do would be on the occasion that may arise for you to have the opportunity to speak to that person that you simply try to find it out because it may be something you were lacking with why they would not come out to vote. So, I am glad that the committee stage amendment has been made with that.

Mr. Speaker, the very troublesome area of election expenses, Part IV of the Amending Bill, which seeks to replace the old Part IV in the principal Law. As everyone who has spoken has said, I think we all agree that there are certain Sections in Part IV, which at present are unrealistic.

I want to start off, Mr. Speaker, with your permission, Sir, examining an article on the front page of the Caymanian Compass dated today, which is headlined "Elections Law Debated". The very first paragraph reads: "under proposed changes to the Elections Law a candidate would be allowed to spend up to $35,000 for election expenses up from the present limit of $10,000. The new spending limit is one of the numerous changes in an amendment bill brought to the House on Wednesday, just 119 days before the 2004 General Elections."

Mr. Speaker, if one were simply to read that on its own, one would get the impression that there is a finite limit of $35,000 for an individual to spend as compared to the $10,000 limit which exists now. Here is where I go into my contribution to this section, Mr. Speaker: What is being proposed is from the date of nomination of candidates, from that day when the Country know these are the candidates for the various electoral districts, which I think, happens to be October 6, 2004 for this election, between then and polling day, for individuals who are independent candidates that is, not part of any group coming together, there is a $35,000 limit. For individuals who form part of a group or a party, the individual limit is $30,000. That amount is what individuals can spend from nomination day up to, but not including November 17.

What is being proposed that it does not address and which the article in the newspaper might confuse people with, is that prior to nomination day, it absolutely matters not how much either an individual or a group spends. As the point has been made before, when one thinks of the vast majority of activities and paraphernalia that will be dealt with by candidates – T-shirts, television time, space in the printed media, radio time, bumper stickers, signs, billboards, and the list goes on and on – those items would perhaps make up, if I am to wager a percentage, easily between 85 and 90 percent of the cost of running an election campaign.

The way it is being proposed now, once one has the ability prior to nomination day, then one can easily spend and pre-book and pre-purchase all of these items, all of this time, all of this space. So, the $35,000 that is being proposed for individual candidates and $30,000 for those what are in a group really has no reflection on true campaign expenses. Therefore, if we pass these amendments as they are, what we are doing is simply saying that you can spend all you wish up to nomination day, but from nomination day to Election Day, you have $35,000 to spend.

While others who may have spoken before will speak to who has more money than others and all of that, the important aspect of this point is this, in my view: Far be it from me to agree with the Minister for Community Services where he speaks his solo point that if it were left to him, he would have no limits for expenditure during an election campaign because whoever has the resources, you spend whatever resources you have and the people will decide. My view with that, Sir, is that – let us step back for one second and look at other jurisdictions.—The vast majority of jurisdictions in some form or fashion in various ways set campaign expenditure limits. There are many reasons for that. Depending on the jurisdiction, there will be reasons that are more relevant to that jurisdiction than to another jurisdiction.

One of the quick comparisons that all of us will look to is a place like the United States. There are limits that are set and there are various reasons. One of the biggest reasons in that jurisdiction, Mr. Speaker, is the many special interest groups and they have lobbyists all the time. You have various large, either institutions or bodies whom the candidates seek to gain support from publicly, not hidden. Some of those bodies and institutions' pockets are very, very deep and if you did not set limits, it would simply be a matter of who could spend the most money. Obviously, those bodies or institutions are not going to spend that kind of money to get a party or a group or an individual elected if they did not know that that individual was sympathetic to whatever their objectives were, either in business or whatever else. It does not have to be business though. You have bodies like the National Rifle Association (NRA) and other bodies that have their own particular agenda and interest, whether it is good or bad is another matter, which I am not concerned with at present.

So, with all of those ingredients, when it comes to electioneering and the monies that are spent to elect people there is an obvious need to restrict the level of spending. Let me immediately say that while that is a principal that I firmly believe in, I also believe that one has to be realistic with the times. So, I accept the $10,000 limit is absolutely not realistic. Everyone has had problems with it prior to this.

Where we have a huge problem, Mr. Speaker, and personally, I believe it is for this reason why it has come forward this way. While there may be difficulty in physically monitoring the situation and being sure that everyone who is involved in the process is adhering to what the legislation calls for, because it is difficult to monitor it, one simply cannot throw their hands up in the air and make it very easy by simply saying that you can do what you wish before nomination day but as of nomination day you have to produce a record after the election, which accounts for all of your expenditure and it must not exceed $35,000. That, in my view, is very simple, very easy for the authorities to monitor and once the returns are in, quite easy to go through, justify, and vet and make sure it is right. However, before that, I really think there is a problem, and as a country I do not believe that because of these difficulties we should be inviting the possibility of such situations, as I have given examples of to be occurring.

In every debate we have here we speak about this Global Village. The Cayman Islands are not segregated from the rest of the World and the activities that go on in the rest of the World. I am here to say that I believe if we are to simply allow this amendment to go through in that vein, then it is going to—whether by perception or by reality or some of both—create a circumstance where any type of special interest situation can be lured to incur expenditure on behalf of certain candidates and huge amounts of expenditure once they are satisfied that if they get this group in or this individual in that the individual or group is going to press for their cause, whatever that is. One might say that is how the world works, yeah, but because that is how the world works does not mean that this is how we want Cayman to work, and we all say that in our own way on different occasions, Mr. Speaker.

Let me just step back and try to be a good boy and not speak to any situation that exists among us and the competition that is there and the rivalry and sometimes the acrimony. I am just being realistic and I am saying that it does not matter to whose advantage one might seem that it might lean to on any given occasion or at any particular time, but just looking at it, purely stepping out of the box and looking at it in that fashion, I have a great difficulty with our legislation allowing for such a possibility. Simple as that! I think that is were we have to be careful when we have our deliberations in that manner. It does not matter how much we argue among ourselves or positions the Opposition or the Government takes and everybody doing their job because it is the Opposition's job to do such and such and it is the Government's job is to bring forth policy and to implement and whatever. This is a situation that will affect everyone and we cannot look at today for that situation, because we create this legislation two or three terms hence when all of us here now are not in here. We are the ones who will have created that legislation and I am not going to be a part of it and that is where I have the difficulty. When we leave here the legislation is still here and I have great difficulty with that. I am not even going to encourage that and I am not even going to be part of allowing the possibility of that happening! Not in my country!

The other Members of the Opposition who have spoken have been putting forth the arguments and I say this very seriously, we can argue amongst ourselves, counterpunch for counterpunch in here with logic, which is the way debate is supposed to be and that is fine, but we need to step back and understand the implications if we do this. It makes our life easier right now but I am saying today that we are inviting plenty trouble if we leave this proposed amendment in this form. There has to be a finite period of time in which one is allowed to spend whatever the limit is. I am going to go a little further. Do you see this $35,000 limit? I for one am not going to argue if that limit is raised because I am realistic and I too have been involved in this process for four Elections and I must know something about it. I have also been involved in it in the largest district of all. So, I am saying that I understand that without any of the funny business, just the normal course of events to be able to get your message to be able to meet as many individuals either face to face or by some media to try to convince them that you are the right person or group to vote for, that it costs money. I would much rather us go back to the drawing board and raise that limit, but have a specific time period and under specific conditions than to simply leave the limit at $35,000 from nomination day to election day and the build up period from the day after the elections straight to the next nomination day, which is four years less six weeks you can do what you want.

I say to everyone in this Chamber we need to think about that. No one needs to tell me that nobody is thinking about it so they do not know why I brought it up to put it into everyone's head. That has been there forever. I am not afraid to stand in this Chamber, I have been exposed to it, I have had my offers and refused them because people know what I will and will not do, and that is why I am standing here today saying it. I do not want any part of it! This does not have anything to do with anybody at all.

Mr. Speaker, if I have to implore on the Government to rethink that position, I am going to do that but I can say on behalf of the Opposition that if there is no reconsideration for this section, all of the other sections we can use logic and everybody will have their own ideas, no venom and no animosity but the Opposition is not going to participate in this and they cannot say that we have not explained why. I take all of the personal issues out of it to guarantee that there is a chance for simple good Caymanian common sense to prevail.

I could go on and site all kinds of horrendous examples; I do not want to do that; I simply want to leave my line of argument to the principle that I speak to and I say in my final comment on this section, we must not allow ourselves to be exposed to that, even if we know nothing on the horizon of what might happen, we must not expose ourselves to that. It has too many far-reaching implications and in matters like these we might be simply speaking to election expenditure but we all know, you not being an exception, matters like these stretch themselves into every single sector of society that you can think about and I am not having any part of that.

I was hoping when we had our first meeting and we were told that there was going to be another meeting that we would have had time to sit down and amongst ourselves, even with the differences, and sensibly get through it and come up with an arrangement that we were not uncomfortable with. I do not care who has more than who to spend. The good people of the country are going to elect who they wish and whatever happens with that we have to face that whichever way it goes. If some of us have to go home then we go back home and regroup, but we must be careful with this; very, very careful with this! I am not going to comment anymore on the point because I think it has been made before, but that is our position, Sir, and they cannot say that the position has not been explained.

Mr. Speaker, another point I wish to speak to— clause 27 as proposed in the Law seeks to amend Section 72 in the principal law. Section 72(1) of the principle law says; “No intoxicating liquor shall be sold, offered for sale or given away at any premises situate in any electoral district in which an election is being held, to which a license issued under the Liquor Licensing Law (2000 Revision) applies, at any time between the opening of the poll and –

- (a) in the case of a hotel, one hour after the close of the poll; and
- (b) in any other case, the declaration of the results by the returning officer.”

How it reads at present is, one hour after the polls close, in the case of a hotel, that hotel may commence selling alcohol but all other premises whether retail or wholesale or whatever category of liquor license there is, including restaurants, no alcoholic beverages can be sold until after the results of the Elections are declared in whatever district that is.

In the smaller districts it did not present a problem from the timing point of view but for many of the businesses, as I understand it, in speaking to the persons from the Elections Office, in asking the reasoning behind the proposed amendment. They seem to have had representation from establishments who believe they are disadvantaged, especially because of the fact that the hotels are allowed to do so. If no one were allowed to do so then it would be okay but they seem to think that it is not fair. It will not be such a bad situation when we think of it, the fact that some of the amendments contained in the Bill allow for, especially in the larger districts, the number of counting stations to increase. West Bay and George Town in that order always take a long time. I have known the results in George Town to take from 27 to 28 hours, so if the polls close at 6 o'clock one evening you are into 9 or 10 o'clock the following night before you have the results, and West Bay not so far behind or ahead depending at how you look at it.

If we are going to have additional polling stations and the objective is to have that situation to where by midnight of Election night all the results are compiled, completed and declared then I do not think that this is a situation that we want to argue with and say that it is such a bad situation. So I do not have a problem with the logic that is being applied here and I think the only other way to handle it is if it is not wanted to happen then nobody can do it.

I can hear the logic from the hotels because of the tourism industry; the people who are here during that time are not interested in our elections, they just want to have their fun. Understanding that we do not want to go that route, then to be fair to all concerned, we are not going to argue against that amendment.

Some persons may have the desire to have no alcohol to be dispensed, and certainly, they will have that right and I can understand their thoughts also. Being practical about the situation, I believe, it is something that we have to seem to be fair even if it is not something that everyone agrees with in decisions regarding that.

Clause 26 seeks to provide for the regulation of political broadcast and the new part 4(b) comprised of Sections 65(j) to (m) providing for the regulation of statistical information. In Section 26 there are various improvements proposed, which outline specifically what one is allowed to literally say and do and it sets the tone for the behaviour of candidates during the campaign. All of us who have been there know that in the heat of the moment have, on occasions, said things that even though we publicly will not admit, we might regret, and that is because of someone saying something that you did not like and then you say something worse than that, and it takes on its own life. These additions to the Law will give us a good guideline as to our behaviour, especially during the Elections and the Campaign when all of us 'are in the silly season', as my colleague the Second Elected Member for George Town speaks to.

The vast majority of the proposed amendments in this Bill are amendments which we can subscribe to and which we can agree to. There are a few which I have mentioned, some of them we feel more strongly about than others, which we take issue with and would hope the Government would be prepared to again look at the situation to see if we can come at, not just an arrangement where it satisfies the Opposition, but come to a situation that is as practical as possible, but at the same time, giving us the comfort that if we are to cast a vote in this Legislative Assembly, whichever way we go with it, we can believe that we are doing the right thing.

Mr. Speaker, perhaps others will speak, I am certain the Government is going to respond and I once again ask for them to have a serious look at some of the points that have been made and not think about us and them in this, but to look at the circumstances under which we bring our positions and to examine clearly the logic that we have applied.

We on this side will wait to hear what the Government's disposition is and that will guide us into the way that we cast our vote, which we know is in the minority.

Thank you.

The Deputy Speaker: Does any other Member wish to speak? Does any other Member wish to speak? Does any other Member wish to speak?

I recognise the Honorable Minister for Education.

Hon. Roy Bodden: Mr. Speaker, I wish to make a few brief comments on the Elections (Amendment) Bill, 2004.

Perhaps the most important comment I should like to make is that there is an inherent danger in trying to amend a bill that is as important and as controversial as this at this the eleventh and three quarter hour. I cannot say that I am entirely happy with such an undertaking at this time of short notice because I believe that democracy and efficiency would have been much better served had we more time to debate, study, ponder and discuss these issues. Nevertheless, having registered my personal disposition I want to move on to address some concerns.

Contrary to what the Opposition tries to portray, I believe that the electoral system we have here is a good system. Comparatively speaking we experience none of the problems that are experienced in other jurisdictions where politics often times take a violent turn.

I was listening last evening to some Members of the Opposition and I believe it was the Second Elected Member for George Town talking about the issue of postal ballots and insinuating that there is an inherent danger in the way postal ballots were handled and indeed I believe he drew reference to some situation, which according to what I inferred from his contribution, bordered on corruption or illegal practices.

Certainly the Member was right to express what he considers his democratic opinion. Just like there are problems with postal ballots so too are their problems with their proposal of mobile voting and there is no way that I, in my right senses and having knowledge of what I have about mobile polling stations in other jurisdictions, is going to allow that kind of insidiousness to creep into our system, which thus far has been free from the ramifications and the outcomes of what mobile polling stations can lead to. I say that to say that there is no system that offers perfection if we are talking about a democracy. Just like beauty is in the eye of the beholder sometimes these problems are in the eyes of those who perceive them. Certainly, that is the case with what I heard the Second Elected Member for George Town try to articulate about postal ballots.

There are some things in the Law that gives me concern. One thing that comes to mind and I am going to say: I believe that if we are talking about a mature democracy—I was just chuckling to myself because in every jurisdiction of the world that I know political polls are allowed to be taken. I do not see anything wrong when taking political polls once the pollsters identify themselves and publish the results. The democrats have their pollsters and the republicans have their pollsters, indeed people who are conscientious welcome this because it gives them a mark to measure their performance by vis à vis that of their opponents. If you have a machinery or any kind of political organisation just because someone lag behind in the poll might not necessarily mean that they are going to lose. What I would legislate against is mischievous, unlicensed, uninformed and uneducated persons taking polls and publishing them.

In my organisation I will have polls taken because I believe in scientific management and I believe that is the way to go. It is personally for my own edification and I certainly will not be publishing them but I do not really care because I remember vividly the last election, a poll was published saying that my colleague and I were not going to win, the results proved otherwise. I say that to say that sometimes we have to weigh very carefully what we are trying to preserve and protect against.

I see the logic, sense and necessity to guard against mischievous people and people who are unlicensed or uninformed publishing results to create mischief. If we have pollsters who are licensed and who are neutral parties then I do not know if there is anything wrong with that. As I said, in most of the developed countries that I read about they have them in political parties; commission them and if individual people want to do so as long as their names and addresses are indicated so that if there is any mischievousness proven they can be taken to court. I think that is all that one need ask for.

I listened to other areas of contention by the Opposition and the insinuation regarding the expense limits and the whole management of expenses. The expenditure of monies and political campaign is the source of concern all over the world but there is no overriding evidence to say that the Cayman Islands is worst off than any other jurisdiction where this is concerned. Indeed I believe that we are much better off than many other jurisdictions and it is an absolute impossibility to believe that we can, by legislation, contrive a perfect situation.

What I think is necessary in this regard is to arrive at a reasonable limit of expenditure and structure it so that it covers the critical period. What I fear happening is that in our haste to do good we put the situation so that it is out of limit of those who may seek to gain public office by making the terms and conditions onerously difficult so that individuals and candidates of a humble origin find it difficult, if not impossible, to contest the election because the Law is so constructed they will not be able to comply. That is a danger that we should pay credence and attention to. Of course, I believe that campaign expenses should be regulated and I listened carefully to the insinuation made especially by the Leader of the Opposition.

I do not know if any evidence exists to say that any people are bought in the Cayman Islands. I certainly do not know of any and if the Opposition knows then they are duty bound to say, but I refrain from insinuation and casting aspersions because if the truth be known there is no evidence to say that anything irregular or illegal has transpired in the elections up to now, or is about to transpire in the forthcoming election. I suppose it is the Opposition's job to say that there is a boggy man around every corner. I believe that if we incorporate we can get a liveable law, even at this hour and I would think that is what we should strive to do. We have a responsibility to debate passionately and to present our causes as truthfully as possible and if we do that then, even at this late hour, I believe that we can have an Elections Law that all of us can accept.

The Deputy Speaker: Does any other Member wish to speak? Does any other Member wish to speak? Third call, does any other Member wish to speak, if not I call on the Government to wind up?

Point of Procedure

Mr. V. Arden McLean: Mr. Speaker, on a point of procedure.

The Deputy Speaker: Member from East End.

Mr. V. Arden McLean: Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

Mr. Speaker, procedurally the Honourable Temporary First Official Member introduced the amendments to the Elections Law and he is not here so procedures require the Mover of any motion or bill would reply to the debate thereon. So, I wonder how that transpires now with him not being here.

The Deputy Speaker: Honourable Member for East End my understanding is that in the event of sickness, death or other misfortunes there are provisions made for a deputy from the Government side for the completion of bills when they have been moved.

My understanding from the Government is that in the absence of the Temporary First Official Member the Leader of Government Business has been asked to respond on behalf of the Government.

Dr. the Hon. Frank S. McField: Mr. Speaker.

The Deputy Speaker: The Honourable Minister of Community Affairs.

Dr. the Hon. Frank S. McField: Mr. Speaker, it surprises me that the Opposition is not in the position to understand that the work of the Government must continue and the fact that we do not have the individual who originally moved the Motion does not take away from the fact that it is the Government that is moving this Motion in the Legislative Assembly and therefore, it is up to the Government in the absence of the individual who has been chosen to move this motion to choose another person to do so, and this is exactly what is happening in these circumstances.

I also do not understand what worry is that the Opposition has.

Mr. V. Arden McLean: Mr. Speaker.

The Deputy Speaker: Member for East End.

Mr. V. Arden McLean: Thank you, Sir.

We are merely trying to get clarity on this. On public bills Standing Order 44(4) says; "A Member submitting such a Bill for presentation shall be known throughout the subsequent proceedings as the Member in charge of the Bill." So, we were trying to get some clarification and I am very glad that the Government and, in particular, the Minister for Community Affairs has now, finally, admitted that this is the Elected Government that is bringing this Bill, because in his debate he said that the Civil Servants were bringing it through the First Official Member. We thank him very much.

The Deputy Speaker: Thank you very much Honourable Member for your observation.

Dr. the Hon. Frank S. McField: Mr. Speaker, I would just say, and I am not going to continue this back and forth, but to just say that the logic of the Member from East End is that he is trying to do a one-upmanship. They got up not on a point to try to prove something about myself, but got up on a point to try to question the fact that the Leader of Government Business was doing a response. Now that they understand that they do have a right to do so I am willing to sit own in my seat and be quiet.

The Deputy Speaker: I recognise the Honourable Leader of Government Business.

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: Mr. Speaker, the Member from East End jumps up at every occasion and the truth is that I am sympathetic to his misunderstanding of things that he does not comprehend.

I am not amazed by the debate on this Bill, but as usual, I am concerned with the type of debate and I do not know why the Opposition deems it necessary to carry on the way that they do. I recognise that there is an election before us but do they really have to try to make a crisis out of everything that comes before this House. Let me begin clearly by saying that the Leader of the Opposition, the First Elected Member for George Town, asked us not to rebut as if it is an us and them. He should have talked to his mates before they spoke because that is how they debated the issues. So, he should have asked that of his colleagues before, but of course, he wanted them to do all of the donkey work and carry on the way they carried then he comes behind and tries to be Mr. nice guy like he had not ran in an election before. All that his team mates did was to try and blame the Government for everything.

Let me move to this thing about whose bill it is. There is nothing in this Bill for me to shirk from. I saw two things happening in this debate, the Dundas Report, which was not made to the Cabinet and was not before the House, and in my opinion should not have been debated. Nevertheless, Members were made to refer to it. The other issue was the Law. The amendments before the House were sent to Cabinet and everybody had those amendments and in March the Chief Secretary at KirkHouse, distributed them and there was a meeting with every Member. Before it came here the matter was with the Elections Officials trying to get to various amendments and other people were talking to them and, of course, they were looking at how best to make the electoral process better, and just last week we dealt in Cabinet with these matters.

When we addressed and talk about time, why they are here and who they belong to, the amendments came from the Cabinet. The Law is that we see the needs that exist and the need to help make better our electoral process. There is nothing being hidden here as to who this belongs to. The Report of Dundas was made to the Election Office, not to the Cabinet and what was presented to Cabinet was the draft amendment, no report, and that Report had never been laid here as a policy because we, the Cabinet and the Government never adopted the Report. They have had some time and that has been a ploy of the Opposition, so I am not going to get riled up about that. They need something to chat about and they do that like a super boiler. I am not concerned about that but what I am concerned about is the various references made by several of them, not the least the Second Elected Member from George Town, the General Secretary of the PPM.

There is no obstruction to justice in these amendments and democracy is more alive in this country today as it has ever been. While some people are talking about the party system, the party system has given us more democracy than has ever been and it will continue to do that if we abide by the rules of our parties, stick together on one side of the party, working with the party and involve the public, it will be a democratic process.

So, when I look around and see the things that make our democracy better; we have a Complaints Commissioner who has a law degree behind him that he has to depend on and with which he will work with. Do not say that the Government is hiding or trying to hide anything! We would not put a Complaints Commissioner in place if we did not intend for the Government or the Civil Service to be accountable, whichever way we look at it. When we speak about moving the Bill, I believe the Minister for Community Affairs was actually thanking the Civil Service and the Elections Officials who did the work on this, and also the Official Member who moved the Bill.

There is now and has always existed, room for where if one Member of Government moves a bill another can be deputised to reply for him in the same way that we do questions. If a Member is not here he can deputise someone to either ask that it be put over for another day or that it be answered by that Minister or person. So there is always room and there has to be because work has to go on. You do not sit still as the Minister of Community Affairs has said. So, I do not understand all of the flux going on over there with the Members from the Opposition and the point raised by the Member from East End who did not know what he was doing.

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: Mr. Speaker, the Member is saying that I am in charge of everybody, let me address this because that is what they go out and say publicly. We have to act for one another in the Cabinet when we are not there. So, the Member can carry on and open his mouth as much as he likes but he is talking nonsense and he must recognise that he is taking nonsense! I only act for my Ministry and when I am asked to act for another Ministry. I have no powers over the other Ministers of Cabinet, no more than they have over me. So, do not get out there— I know that they talked about this dictatorship and dictatorial this and dictatorial that, I cannot do one thing unless I have the support of Cabinet! I cannot go further unless I have the support of this Honourable House! Does that make me a dictator? The Member from East End never usually knows what he is saying when he is standing—and less when he is sitting down, because when he is sitting down he is sitting down on his sense.

When the Opposition makes the kind of innuendoes and outright accusations, they are not hurting the Government; they downright hurt these Islands. I had to raise that point yesterday in the CPA meeting, I said to them: Remember when you go together overseas, or by yourself you are not representing the PPM or the UDP, you are representing the Cayman Islands! When they rise here they can say they are representatives or belong to a party, but they are also representatives of these Islands and when they make the kind of accusations and innuendoes that have been made here over the last three years, and in particular, some of what has been said recently in the debate on this Bill, is downright disloyal to the country! No wonder so much can be said elsewhere.

Their speech made here was only made to inflame and create doubt as if the Government were doing those things, like they talked about, taking away a level playing field. I think that came from the two Members on the front bench now, when in fact what this Legislation is doing is making a level playing field for everybody; we are making a level playing field. I am not surprised by their debate; it is only part of what I have come to expect from the Opposition as they exists.

While I am on it, they are talking about elections; I am not scared of election. I heard the Leader of the Opposition and all of them that spoke refer to the coming elections, I am not scared of that. I have faced the elections since 1980 and I have done well because I think the people see that and I trust the good common sense of the people of these Islands. So, I am not concerned about the ranting and ravings of the Opposition. It seems that they believe that is going to cure everything. That is not going to cure the problems of this country; I can tell the world and the Cayman Islands that. I can tell the people of these Islands and the people of George Town that if they want to try to cure some of the problems they should really look at whom the Opposition and the Government exists of, but the Opposition as they stand are offering nothing to cure the problems of the country. Everything is blown out of proportion and you do not govern like that.

In dealing with the level playing field, what was outlined by the Second Elected Member from George Town is not new. When he outlined is in the present law that anyone can spend— this is one of the things the Leader of the Opposition pitched on— anyone can spend whatever amount before the cut-off date, which is one hundred and ten days before polling day when the stipulated amount a candidate can spend kicks in. This is not new and that particular clause does not give anyone on this side a greater advantage than it gives the PPM or any other group or independent candidate; that has been and is in the present law. The fact is you are not a candidate until nomination. I do not know how they are going to address this and I heard the Opposition Leader trying to make much of that.

Prior to nomination it does not matter what amount and if he can come up with a formula where we can govern someone's expenditure before they become a candidate, because you are only a candidate on nomination day, if they can come up with a formula and if they have it they criticise it, of course, as they usually do! If they can come up with a formula where the elections officials can advise the Government that we can govern someone before they become a candidate on expenditure, then let them bring the formula. You will be trampling people's rights if they want to go out there before they announce their candidacy and actually sign the nomination papers and spend their money—you would be trampling on their rights if they want to build a community centre and say, 'I George Jones built that community centre and I am asking you to vote for me'.

If they want to spend their money and put down a road or if they want to spend their money and buy a boat or send someone on cruises, as I hear they are doing now, then that is their business! You cannot tell people what to do, but the Opposition got up here and made all sorts of racket. I do not think that I can refer to the East End Member who keeps chatting over there like a washing machine; I am not going to pay him any mind. They have been in the game, they have been in the process but the Bible says, 'as a man thinketh so is he'.

The definition of a candidate currently includes a sitting member of the Legislative Assembly who is disadvantaged because of the one hundred and ten days factor before an election; this includes them also. He must give an account for one hundred and ten days. Do not say that what we are doing is wrong; we are trying to level the playing field. The prospective candidates who are not sitting members only become an official candidate on nomination day, which is approximately forty-two days before elections day. What we are proposing is to give a level playing field to everyone because the expenditure kicks in the same time for everybody.

Not many jurisdictions set limits, so do not try to sell the Cayman Islands short. The Cayman Islands is one of the few that do and I think that we are doing the right thing. We have to be realistic though because if you are going to be a candidate there is certain expenditure and I do not think any one candidate in the last election spent $10,000. It is very unrealistic with all the expense in advertising and so on. I do not understand where the Opposition is going with that one.

Mr. Speaker, I have represented the people of West Bay and of these Islands for 20 years and throughout that time if I was asked for something I evaluated the request, but if I could help I did so. I have never shirked from assisting people in need. Some people only know other people in need at election time, they forget about them all year round, some of these so called candidates. As a Back Bench Member or a Minister in Cabinet I have never shirked.

Unfortunately, there are those who believe if you help someone, no matter when, then you are buying votes. I have seen some written by that; I see one person who will always oppose me, he is not from West Bay but he lives in West Bay and he just has to chew on it because he cannot get me defeated. So, he will have to live with that. I do not think that the people should listen to him, I see him writing letters and saying all sorts of stuff about people buying votes, he must know who bought votes and I do not think that I should listen to him. I recall that he sat an entire day with a fork trying to scrape an old wife [fish]. I have no intention to ever listen to that man who is an "expert" on everything.

So, they try to make it be that you cannot help anyone at all, at election time and even when you declare it they say that you are buying votes. I will say this, they must remember that elected members of Cabinet are representatives and remain so until a new Cabinet is sworn in. I will continue my work as I have always done.

On the matter of mobile voting, I do not think that is the right thing to do and they can throw any innuendo, say as much as they want and make any accusation but mobile voting, in my opinion, takes away the right of secrecy. As it is now when a postal ballot is sent to one person then one or two persons might see who that person is voting for but on the mobile vote every candidate agent, to be fair, would need to be present thereby taking away the secrecy of the vote.

I hear the Second Elected Member for George Town saying that is not correct; maybe he can tell me why it is not correct but I would think so. If they are saying that we should send out a mobile unit to get people votes then you are going to have to have several people present. I would dare say to be fair to the candidates, that you would have to have their agents present. I heard them talking about they went to several boxes—I guess they must know what happened in George Town. I do not think that is the evil part of it but the Law provides for an improved system and I thank those people.

Except for the count, I think that the Cayman Islands have the best system in the region. If we did not have the best system then we would not be called upon to help other jurisdictions. I have had requests where people have talked to me saying that we should have electronic voting. We live in a world of technology but you only have to take a look at Florida and see what happened. Now in the United States they are going to internet voting, how much complaints and petitions that is bringing about. I think we have the best. We have people who volunteer to be an election official and they are known citizens of this country; people who are trusted and have a good name and they sit there and conduct the polls. I think we have done well over the years.

The greatest fault I find is the matter of the count because it takes a long time, and as far as I am concerned, it takes too long, but as long as we need to take we should do it to make sure that all things are done and we are doing it manually, and everything can be checked back and proven. Even in the midst of the vote when you are challenged—the last time in the midst of one box they challenged my vote and when they recounted I had two more. So, I do not mind that, but it is a long time and I think what is proposed now will make it better. You will be able to have counting at each polling station and tabulated at the main polling station and that is very good, we will get out of there quicker and it will be less punishing for some.

The matter about the agent and I can see the Member from East End flinging his hands in the air saying this is a bad thing. If you had an agent—

[inaudible comment]

Hon. W. McKeever Bush: Because you would not keep your mouth shut when you were supposed to.

When you have an agent and you give him or her instructions to follow from the law and he or she goes off and does something wrong, that is not the candidate's fault. For example, if someone wants to set up a candidate by saying that he gave something to the agent for the candidate, the candidate would have to prove otherwise. Agents, in my opinion, when you appoint one, must be able to be called to account. So far I do not think that they mind that, those who want to get involved and offer themselves to their candidate of their choice to be an agent, they do not mind being called to account.

On the matter of independence, I cannot see what we are doing here is an advantage over them. I do not know why the Opposition would raise that because the independents can spend $35,000 and if I am a party candidate or group candidate I can only spend $30,000 I cannot see that as an advantage over the independent. If he chooses to be independent then he is by himself and he must recognise that.

Mr. Speaker, I have signed amendments for the Mover of the Bill. The amendment proposed in relation to clause 3 of the Bill is in the deletion of section 4(2) for the purpose of providing three deputy supervisors without restricting one to responsibility only for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman.

The amendment proposed in relation to Clause 10 of the Bill is to change the start time in a political and a political party cannot be registered from the issue writs for a general election to nomination day.

The reason for the change to Clause 12 is to remove the provision for nomination deposits to be paid before nomination day.

The amendment to Clause 16 makes it clear that two counting agents can be appointed by each candidate to attend the counting of the votes at each counting station.

The amendment to Clause 19 enables agents and candidates to retain written records of the persons who present themselves at the polls.

The amendment to Clause 25 of the Bill is various changes in relation to election expenses. The changes proposed are as follows: A returning officer would no longer be required to give public notice of the names and addresses of election agents and to replace section 58(5) with the provisions of section 60(5) of the current Elections Law (2000 Revision), and to remove the regulation of the relationship between the candidate and his election agents, particularly, in relation to the employment of others in respect of an election and to remove various provisions that made an election agent responsible for a candidate's election expenses, and to remove the provision for the incurring election expenses of political parties based on the number of electors in a district.

The amendment to Clause 30 is for the purpose of retaining the existing nomination form-16 in the Elections Law (2000 Revision) until the requested amendment to the Constitution of the Cayman Islands is approved. The declaration in relation to not possessing any other citizenship would be invalid.

My last point before I take my seat. Members spoke of the taking of polls. I do not mind people taking polls but I believe that they should be accountable as to how those polls are taken and to be able to give as they are called upon, scientific research, and they should be able to be held accountable if they give a poll. I have seen polls when they came up with the percentage; it is more than 100 per cent. I have seen it! I am not worried about those who are taking polls to say that I am going to lose because they said that the last time; they had me down as number five. I knew that that was not the way that it was going to happen. I am not really burdened down because they take the poll. What must happen though is that they must be able to be held accountable if they give wrong and misleading information. Just as there are other wrongs in the election process then that would be counted as wrong. People are mischievous and do and say all sorts of things. For instance, I never dreamed that I would have a team to contend with to say that they are the dream team from the right side of the street. I never thought that anyone in the Cayman Islands would do that but to each his own and we shall have to wait to see whether it is the dream team in regards to my constituency or whether it is a nightmare on Rose Garden Street.

Mr. Speaker, I think the Temporary First Official Member, in moving the Bill laid the ground work well, and I think we can move to the Committee Stage where if anything else needs to be trashed out we have the Elections Officials and the Legal persons here and we could take it at that time.

Again, I thank the Elections Office, all of them but in particular, Mr. Gomez, Mr. Connor and Mr. Scott for their work on continuing to help us keep the best system in the region. Some people blow it out of proportion and that is what the Opposition has done. We do not have those kinds of situations here. I have seen results in some territories where they have ten thousand people and end up with twelve to fifteen thousand votes.

[inaudible comments]

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: Mr. Speaker, I am sorry that the Member for East End feels that way. [background inaudible comments] Well you should not be uttering those things.

As I said earlier, they should remember this is the Cayman Islands we are talking about and when you mention those things you are actually carrying down the people who vote. Do not think that they are fools and that they are out there downright dirty and could be just bought—they should never make those kinds of remarks. I have always credited our people for being good honest people. So, if they know of wrongdoing put it on the Table of the House or run to the newspaper with it otherwise stop making those kinds of innuendoes on the people of these Islands, because that is who they are making to look dirty, the voters.

Mr. Speaker, I would also like to thank Mrs. Myrtle Brandt who worked with us tirelessly on these amendments and amendments to the amendments, and who has stayed here late at night with us even in times of illness. So, I would ask all Members to now go into Committee and ask the Opposition to behave themselves.

The Deputy Speaker: The question is that a Bill shortly entitled the Elections (Amendment) Bill, 2004 be given a Second Reading. All those in favour please say Aye. Those against, No.

Ayes and Noes.

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: Mr. Speaker, can we have a Division please.

The Deputy Speaker: Certainly! Madam Clerk.

Division No. 2/04

Ayes:

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush
Hon. Gilbert A. McLean
Hon. Roy Bodden
Hon. Juliana O'Connor-Connolly
Dr. the Hon. Frank McField
Hon. George A. McCarthy
Capt. A. Eugene Ebanks

Noes:

Hon. D. Kurt Tibbetts
Mr Alden M McLaughlin, Jr
Mr. Anthony S. Eden
Ms. Edna M. Moyle
Mr. V. Arden McLean

Absent:

Hon. Donovan W.F. Ebanks
Hon. Samuel Bulgin
Mr. Rolston M. Anglin
Mr. Lyndon L. Martin

The Clerk: Seven Ayes, five Noes, four absent.

The Deputy Speaker: The Ayes have it.

Agreed by majority: The Elections (Amendment) Bill, 2004 given a Second Reading.

The Deputy Speaker: At this time I propose to take the luncheon break and we will resume at 2.30 pm.

Proceedings suspended at 12.37 pm

Proceedings resumed at 3.00 pm

The Deputy Speaker: Please be seated. Proceedings are resumed.

The Community College (Amendment) Bill, 2004 (White)

The Deputy Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Education.

Hon. Roy Bodden: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I wish to move the Community College (Amendment) Bill, 2004 (White).

As Honourable Members would have realised by now, the Community College has entered its transformation stage and will be a University this September. Before that transformation can successfully take place there is needed, some amendments to the current Community College Law (1999 Revision). The transformation has become necessary for a number of reasons, not the least of which is the fact that the Community College as an existing institution has achieved, over the years, an excellent academic record. Its students receive acceptance and in some cases advance standing in even the most prestigious of international institutions and indeed the graduates of the Community College of the Cayman Islands attend universities in the United Kingdom, United States and Canada, and equip themselves well.

The University College, like the Community College must maintain its comprehensive role, that is, the University College must continue to offer to the Caymanian community opportunities for academic, professional and continuing education.

Mr. Speaker, in moving this amendment I would like to lay the groundwork for a broader understanding of what is undertaking and in so doing I will try to be brief but comprehensive because I believe that that will, in addition to making the amendments clear and understandable to Honourable Members, it will also allow for the listening public to understand what is being undertaking and it will give me the opportunity to do a little public relation work for the soon to be University College.

The Deputy Speaker: The Bill has been duly moved, does the Mover wish to speak thereto?

Hon. Roy Bodden: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. The first thing that will need to be done in this exercise is for us to change the name of the institution from the Community College to the University College.

I have told the Board of Governors that the College must maintain the role that it has cast for itself and which has come to be accepted in the Cayman Islands. We are especially concerned that the College offer opportunities for Caymanian students to pursue their interests in technical and vocational education. Some people will be curious to find out how a university college can also be a college which offers scope and opportunities for technical and vocational education. This, Mr. Speaker, is not a new phenomenon. Throughout the Caribbean, Barbados, Antigua, Jamaica and in several of the other Islands the Community Colleges are being transformed into university colleges and there is an outstanding institution in Barbados, which was formally known as the Samuel Jackman Prescod Polytechnic Institute, specialising in technical and vocational education, which is, as we speak, being transformed into a university college. So, it is possible for an institution such as a university college to offer academic courses as well as courses in technical and vocational education.

I was saying in my introductory remarks that the Community College Board of Governors have accepted the fact that the Institution must maintain its comprehensive focus providing opportunities for those in the Caymanian society to access not only academic education but also professional, and continuing education and those persons who have an interest in technical and vocational education, as well as those persons who would wish to pursue interests that would be classed as hobbies.

We have, I might add, made several remarkable articulation agreements with premier institutions offering technical and vocational education, one being the British Columbia Institute of Technology. This is a large institution of some 35,000 students offering the full spectrum of courses and degrees in technical and vocational education. Most recently I visited the New England Technical College, or as its official name is, the New England Institute of Technology because shortly we will be sending eight students who most recently graduated from the Community College to the New England Institute of Technology to pursue degrees in applied technology, electronics and electrical engineering, building technologies, architecture and drafting. There is even scope for those students wishing to pursue advanced studies in the automotive technologies. This is in recognition for the need to place greater emphasis on technical and vocational training and education in the Cayman Islands.

I have said before that we are considered to be doing very well in the academic areas where about 30 per cent of our students excel and go on to tertiary level education. At the technical and vocational level we have to build up our cohorts of students and provide them opportunities to qualify and advance themselves in these areas. However, in order to be completely successful we realise that we must strengthen the curriculum at the High School and must initiate an articulation agreement between the High School and the Community College. We have put the necessary mechanisms in place to strengthen the curriculum of the High School and we will shortly be entering the articulation agreement phase between the High School and the Community College. It is proposed to start this exercise from year seven at the George Hicks High School so that by the time the students reach year seven and are ready to go into the High School they will have been firmly grounded in the rudiments of technical and vocational education in those areas, which they wish to pursue so that we can have a seamless transition from the High School to the Community College on to the degree granting institutions.

Our Community College, soon to be University College, will start with five areas of concentration in the field of business. Business management, accounting, finance commerce and banking and I am made to understand that it is proposed to set up a business institute. The President has told me that he expects that within a year or two we will be able to offer the CPA degrees here at the University College. However, there is another reason why we must go this route. That reason is, we are sending ever year more and more of our students on to tertiary level education mainly in the United States and Canada but significantly too, the United Kingdom. Within the United States especially, I have read that college tuition fees rise on average of 10 per cent per annum. Just this past year I am informed from the academic journals that tuition fees in the United States rose on an average of 35 per cent. We calculated at one stage there were one hundred and ninety nine Caymanian students studying abroad on scholarships. Each student, except in the cases of the Cayman Scholar, receives on average US $20,000 per annum. So, we can see that if the numbers keep increasing we will soon have an amount which is unsustainable. The challenge therefore, would be to continue to send all deserving students who have made successful applications on to tertiary level education ensuring that they get the best. This does not include the students whom we would normally send to the Community College to grant associate degrees.

This past year the Education Council awarded 76 scholarships to Caymanian students studying abroad for tertiary level degrees. We have yet to complete the processing of those who are applying to go locally to the same University College. Additionally, all students going to United States institutions will have to go to Jamaica to get their student visas. This, Mr. Speaker, is an added expense on the students and it is also an inconvenience and there is absolutely no guarantee that the students who apply are going to get the visas in the first instances of application, for part of the application has to be done on line and the interview must take place in person at the United States

Embassy in Kingston, which will necessitate the students getting up and getting in line from five o'clock in the morning. I say all of that to say that this move to transform the Community College into the University College of the Cayman Islands is a move in the right direction, especially as it enhances the ability of Caymanian students to access at the same time and in the same numbers, technical and vocational education as they can access academic education.

Mr. Speaker, we realise that we live in a credential society. We went to great pains to ensure that those students studying in technical and vocational areas would be no less qualified and no less trained and educated than those going on to the academic streams. I am happy to say that the students pursuing technical and vocational education at the University College level will be getting Bachelor Degrees in applied technology with a major in electronics and electrical engineering, and a major in building technologies and a major in autotronics. We also have additional areas coming on line such as medical technologists, architecture and drafting.

The University College will be offering in the first year Bachelor of Science Degrees in the five areas that I have previously outlined. In addition to that, next year teacher education and information and communications technology will be coming on line. As we speak, we are conducting negotiations for an articulation agreement with a Teachers College in Massachusetts to begin our teacher training programme in September of 2005. We have the necessary administrators in place; we have faculty and the President of the College has told me that he is pleased at the increase in the ennoblement, thus far, as a result of interest and enthusiasm for the degree granting programme.

This will offer opportunities for those Caymanians who may be mature and working to attain degrees by part time studies because the College, as has been established and is its tradition will be offering opportunities for those who wish to avail themselves of the opportunity to study part time to take degrees. Already we have had approaches from various corporate entities within the employment sector wishing to pursue specialist training for some of their staff. This is indeed a momentous occasion and another step in the provision of excellent educational opportunities to the people of the Cayman Islands, courtesy of the United Democratic Party Government. This is a vision, which has come to reality, and I would hope that Honourable Members, when they receive their invitations for the charter service and for the launching and transformation of the Community College to the University College, will come and share some of the joys and success and the pomp, pageantry and ceremony that will be available during this full week of transformation.

There are about nine short clauses, all of which are designed to make this transformation more easily understood.

We are amending the name from the Community College to the University College and we are making further minor changes, which have to do with the relation of the Community College being transformed into the University College. Changing the number of members on the Board of Governors and making a change, which will allow the institution to provide tertiary level education.

Clause 6 repeals and replaces Clause 9 which gave limited immunity from suit to members of the Board of Governors so that employees can also enjoy immunity and make the whole provision clearer.

In Clause 7 we add degrees to the academic qualifications of the College.

Clause 8 replaces the current Section 17 for the appointment of up to two vice presidents because quite naturally if we are increasing the number of students we also have to change up the administration and improve the bureaucracy.

I commend these amendments to my Honourable colleagues and would invite them, if there are any areas which they would seek enlightenment, understanding or clarification on, to raise it in their debate and I shall be willing and happy to clear up and inform them of what is being done.

Thank you.

The Deputy Speaker: Does any other Member wish to speak?

The Second Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. Alden M. McLaughlin, Jr.: Mr. Speaker, if I had not sat here in this Honourable House for nigh on four years now and listened to the guilt edge tongue of my good friend and colleague the Minister for Education, for all of those years, I might perhaps have been persuaded this afternoon that the Honourable Minister was actually getting something done. For almost four years now the aircraft of educational reform has been sitting on the tarmac revving its engines just about for takeoff.

The speech which the Honourable Minister just delivered in large part, if one were to close your eyes and go back to early 2001, one could have perhaps perceived that that was his maiden speech when he took up the mantle of Education Minister. That certainly would not be the sort of speech one would be expecting from a Minister who has had the reigns of this Office for now nearly four years.

I think the Honourable Minister himself summed it up very accurately. He spoke about pomp, pageantry and ceremony and in my view; those are the trademarks of that Minister and of the Ministry during his tenure. We have had lots of that, but when it comes to actual achievements the Minister has been tried and found wanting.

We all know that we are on the eve of Elections and that every opportunity will be seized by the Government to trot out some proposed new reform, project or plan but that is not what the country ought to be treated to at this time by this Government. What ought to be pointed to is the track record. We are not at the stage where the Ministers ought to be getting up saying what they are going to do so please forgive me Mr. and Mrs. Electorate for what I have not done, will you elect me again. That is what we have been treated to this evening in relation to this matter.

If this were earlier in the term those of us on this side who have been proposing and pushing for reform, particularly in relation to technical and vocational training in this country, for all of the years I have been here and the many more years before that my colleague, the First Elected Member for George Town and Leader of the Opposition has been, we would have been happy to hear about proposals now that finally technical and vocational training is going to be introduced as part of the curriculum at George Hicks High School. Assurances that the whole thing is going to be looked at and that John Gray High School is going to expand its availability of those programmes, courses, resources and all of those things would have filled our hearts with delight—

Hon. Roy Bodden: What do you think articulation means?

Mr. Alden M. McLaughlin, Jr.: I know what articulation means—

[Inaudible comments]

Mr Alden M. McLaughlin, Jr.: Mr. Speaker, I am sorry that I have discomfited the Honourable Minister but as he says, he will have an opportunity to get back up and whip me.

All of those wonderful things he has now proposed that are going to happen if he is re-elected—he did not say that, but that is essentially what he means—are matters that ought to have been addressed in his four-year tenure and in this Government's almost four-year tenure. That is the point we are making. Talk is cheap and the Minister is very good at that, but what has actually been done? This is what the country needs to understand. What has been done to improve the educational plant in this country? That is the question that ought to be answered, not what you are going to do if you are re-elected.

We have been saying on this side of this Honourable House, over and over again, and it seems it has finally started to resonate, a little late in the day, with the Honourable Minister— that between 25-30 per cent of those who graduate from High School have the academic ability and inclination to be able to take up academic scholarships and tertiary education at colleges. The other 70 per cent have been failed by consecutive Ministers of Education in this country who have not provided them with the necessary resources to be able to develop their vocational and technical skills to take their rightful place in this community. The First Elected Member for George Town has been saying that for about 12 years. The irony of it all is that for a large part of that time the Honourable Minister of Education who then sat on this side of the House was his cohort. What has happened in those almost four years that have passed between November 2000 and now? An account must be given for those years and for the absence of any such programmes. That is what the Honourable Minister ought to be addressing when he gets up, not to beat me for being a fop, as he has said I am.

Mr. Speaker, the fallacy of this all is this: Over the course of the past 20-25 years this country has gone through tremendous development. We have had to import labour from all quarters of the globe to be able to help create this economic miracle. The population of this country has increased from approximately 10,000 in 1970 to somewhere between 45 and 50,000 in my estimate, at this point. Most of that increase is due to immigration and that has helped to make the Cayman Islands what it is, in most ways I would hasten to say, a better place, but in some ways, a lesser place. The point is that through all of this as a community and as a country and in my view, government after government have failed to place sufficient value on technical and vocational qualifications and we have failed to communicate to our people, to the children and to the parents of those children, the importance of the value of technical and vocational skills and careers. So we wind up year after year graduating students through the system, 70 per cent of whom are ill suited to pursue higher academic training. That 70 per cent which are left behind are left by and large without any basic skills. They are always simply entry level individuals who by and large command the lowest wage there is.

At the same time, as of now we still have some 15,000 persons, or thereabouts, on work permits. Those persons come in with their technical skills; the full range of construction trades, masons, carpenters, plumbers, bricklayers, air conditioning technicians, you name it; earning significant sums of money, commanding $18 and $20 per hour and our own people are left without those skills, without access to institutions which would enable them to acquire these skills and more fundamentally with this view, this cultural perspective that somehow to engage in those sorts of activities and vocations is demeaning.

I am not blaming the Honourable Minister for all of that, he has only had four years, but my point about the Honourable Minister's tenure is that nothing has been done. It has been more of the same; it is as bad as it was when Mr. Truman Bodden was here and I hear he is trying to come back again too. What has been done to address these things?

We are going to change the name of the Community College and call it a University College and I do not have any difficulty with that. We are going to offer a few degrees, I do not have any problem with that, but nothing I have heard convinces me that there is any real initiative to make technical and vocational training a major focus of that institution or any other.

If we go to Tourism and the hotel industry and the ancillary industries related to tourism, you are hard pressed in this country to walk into a tourist related facility and meet a Caymanian face and hear a Caymanian voice. Again, I am not placing the blame on the Honourable Minister; he has had four years and there were a lot before him. Again, the same cultural prejudice against engaging in those sorts of jobs — and I am not speculating or reading from any book that tells me about that cultural prejudice because I grew up in this society and I know where it springs from and it is understandable.

My parent's generation did not have access to the sort of educational facilities that were available when I was growing up. There was a limit to the level of education you could get in this country and few people had resources to go elsewhere. So, when the boom years started my parents' generation could not seize most of those opportunities because they required skills, professional training and university education, which none of them had. So, that generation said: 'my children are not going to work in the hotels and they are not going to do these various other demeaning jobs because we had to do that in order to raise them and we sent them to school to get the best education they could get so that they would not have to do that.' So, that is where the cultural prejudice comes from. I am very well aware of that, but what we have done over the past 30 years or so is to fool ourselves and all of the people in this country in believing that unless you put on a white shirt and a pretty tie and walk into one of the banks and stand up and say, yes Sir, take their money and change their cheque that you do not have a good job. The educational system has been structured in a way in which the academic students are segregated from very early, placed in their little niche, promoted and given every benefit and privilege they can to do as well as they can and the other ones, well, they will be come through and be all right and find their place. For a long time when the population was quite small that sufficed. It was never fair, it was never right!

However, we have reached the point now, Mr. Speaker, where there is a significant sector of this community without any skill-sets that enables them to function, other than just above the bottom of the ladder. They in turn have children and the reality is, those people at that level tend to have more children and they come up and face the same challenges and it just gets worse and worse and worse. What makes it even more worrying, is that they look around and see "foreigners" taking their jobs. The reason the foreigners can take their jobs and have to take their jobs is because by and large they do not have the necessary skills to be able to engage in a proper way in whatever industry they would like to work in; and that is what we have to address,

Mr. Speaker, it is encouraging to hear the Minister say that they are now going to seek to introduce this whole question of technical and vocational training from George Hicks, which is a junior high school. However, my indictment, Mr. Speaker, is this: Why is it being announced now? This is the sort of initiative that the Minister ought to have not just spoken to, but to have taken off with at the start of his term of office.

The Hotel industry, Mr. Speaker, that I started to mention just a moment ago — we have had a hotel training school here, it came and it went. The then Minister said, if I recall him correctly, that it was a lack of interest; that might well be the case because that in large part, I believe, is due to the cultural prejudice, which I also referred to earlier. However, it is the duty of the Government to develop the necessary educational programmes to articulate a philosophy, which gives value to service based jobs.

This Government, Mr. Speaker, in addition to what facilities exists at The Community College bought what was formerly the John Silvers hotel, ostensibly for use as a hotel training school. We are now almost at the end of this Government's term and as far as I know all that has happened is that money has changed hands and Government has taken possession of John Silvers and bailed the former proprietor of it out of the terrible financial mess he was in, in relation to it with Caribbean Development Bank and the place just sits there. That is the extent of what has been done about a hotel training school in this country under the term of this Government and of this Minister.

Mr. Speaker, do we not understand that in addition to providing good remunerative labour and employment opportunities to our people, that our Caymanian people's involvement in the hotel industry is critical to its viability? People do not come to the Cayman Islands because they want to be served by persons from all over the world. If that were the case they would have gone to some place that had one of these "It's a Small World After All" — sort of exhibits where you can go from place to place and meet everybody from all over the world, all of the global citizens. They come to Cayman because they want a Caymanian experience. So, the things are interlinked.

We have to get our people involved in working in the industry, particularly the tourism industry in these Islands in a meaningful way. I have heard people say that they have come to Cayman and gone through an entire week on the Island and never met a Caymanian. If we want this country to succeed and survive as a tourism destination we are going to have to look at some of the things that are fundamentally wrong with the product we are trying to market. It is all well and good to talk about us having cruise ships booked here until the year 2010, and we need these people to come, but what are these people coming for? They come for the Cayman experience and part of the Cayman experience is meeting Caymanians being served by Caymanians in the restaurants and bars!

Mr. Alden M. McLaughlin, Jr.: I am debating the Bill— it is very uncomfortable for you I know but I am debating the Bill.

Mr. Speaker, we are going to support this Bill, no question about it because it is an advancement of the College, but we are pointing out again to the Honourable Minister what needs to be done in addition to address the 70 per cent of graduating students who will not be inclined to take advantage of the academic opportunities provided by the College. That is what my debate is going to.

I had the benefit of attending the Cayman Islands Law School. I started there 21 years ago. I believe that the Ministry of Education ought to be working with the Portfolio of Legal Affairs, which still has responsibility for the Law School, about the need to develop facilities and resources for that very creditable, useful and successful institution. At this stage I just had the occasion to visit the Law School and to enter into the office of one of the lecturers and I was aghast at the state of the place, which is over at the Tower Building. The conditions certainly in that office, I thought were deplorable and none of us would want to work in such conditions.

The attendance at the Law School has increased phenomenally; I think the compliment is now over 100 students—

[Inaudible comments]

Mr Alden M. McLaughlin, Jr.: It ought to be in this Bill! Mr. Speaker, I would be grateful if the Honourable Leader of Government Business left me to my debate, Sir.

Point of Order

Hon. W. McKeever Bush: No. Mr. Speaker, he cannot be left to wonder all over the place and that is why I rise on a point of order. Whether he believes these things, and I agree with him that that building is lacking, he cannot debate that in this Bill, he is straying too far. Whether you believe that or not, this Bill has nothing to do with it.

Mr. Speaker, I am saying that the Member ought to stick to the Bill before the House. He has traversed all over the world now, so it might be tertiary education but it has nothing to do with the Community College Bill before the House and I draw your attention to the relevant Standing Order; I believe that I am right in saying that the Standing Order which says that you must debate what is before the House is not being followed.

The Deputy Speaker: Honourable Leader of Government Business I have listened to your point of order and Honourable Member I have listened intently to your debate, and I have keenly listened to your involvement from an educational standpoint, and as to what would be considered to be relevant to the Bill that is currently being debated. I would ask you to pay close attention to the challenge on relevance as you continue your debate.

Mr Alden M. McLaughlin, Jr.: Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

As far as the Law School goes there have been arguments and discussions about whether it ought to be brought under the umbrella of the Community College, now to be called the University College for some time. There are strong arguments that because it is really the pre-eminent institution of tertiary education in this county with a track record of 22 years that its involvement as part of the development of the University College would do much to enhance that institution.

There are also arguments that it ought to continue to be sited in central George Town, particularly so that those who work in the Legal Department would have access to its resources, such as the library and the availability of academics close at hand to be able to offer an opinion or view on a particular issue or matter. There is strength in that argument, but I believe that after careful consideration and having sat as a member of the Legal Advisory Council for a number of years, my view has come to the point that giving the direction the Law School has taken in terms of its development and the number of foreign students that currently benefit from an education that it really ought to develop into a proper academic institution. A college attached to the University College of the Cayman Islands, as is to be, I believe both would have great benefit to the other.

As far as the Law School is concerned it is operating in substandard accommodations and straining to be able to do what it is doing very well, which is offer a first class legal education to the persons who attend there. There is a clear need for it to have new and more expansive accommodations and to have the support of a larger institution and access to facilities, which the University College would obviously provide.

So, in this country we have to get away from thinking about education in isolated terms because it is a legal education then that is separate and apart. If we are truly going to develop a university, to which the University College is a step along the path to, then I believe we ought to explore the opportunities for the Law School to be brought under this umbrella of a university. It already has a long standing arrangement with the University of Liverpool which confers the degrees. That arrangement is almost 20 years old.

When the Minister is talking about articulation agreements we have a very good example of how good these things can work. I have no doubt that I would not be standing here if it were not for the Cayman Islands Law School, and while some that are on the other side who are grumbling might have been happy if that had been the course of my life, nonetheless I am very grateful for what my time at the Law School has permitted me to be able to do with my life.

So, I am asking the Honourable Minister to bear that in mind; take that into consideration and when he is planning, as he seems to be doing, his maiden speech upon his re-election as the Minister of Education, he can put that into his plans for the next term.

Mr. Speaker, I am grateful for the opportunity to have made a few points on this Bill and as I said, we on this side are happy to support it. We are happy to support the advancement of the Community College to a University College. We are grateful to and compliment those at the school who have worked so diligently over the course of the years to turn it into the credible institution, which it is, particularly those who have worked to make this transition from a community college to a university college where it will be able to offer instruction and ultimately degrees.

This transition will not come to fruition overnight. The pomp, pageantry and ceremony are all good and help promote its profile but we do hope that come November and under another administration that we will be able to move the educational structure, plant and philosophy of this country beyond pomp, pageantry and ceremony to a point where there is reality and hope for the prospects of Caymanians.

I thank you, Sir.

ADJOURNMENT

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: Mr. Speaker, at this time I am going to move the adjournment of the House until 10 am Monday morning, and I am asking all Members to let us try to get our business in order so that we can complete the business of the House this coming week at some point. We have a lot of private member's bills and various other matters to deal with and if we are not careful we are going to run into the next meeting and that is what has been happening. I am not laying blame on either side because it is a matter of fact and we need to be a little more conscientious of time. So, I move the adjournment of this Honourable House until Monday morning at 10 am.

The Deputy Speaker: The question is that this House do now adjourn until 10 am Monday, 26 July 2004. All those in favour please say Aye. Those against, No.

Ayes and Noes.

Mr Alden M. McLaughlin, Jr.: May we have a division please.

The Deputy Speaker: Madam Clerk a division please.

[Inaudible comments]

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: We have asked for the adjournment at this time for the reason stated. So, I say yes.

Division No. 3/04

Ayes:

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush
Hon. Roy Bodden
Hon. George A. McCarthy
Capt. A. Eugene Ebanks

Noes:

Hon. D. Kurt Tibbetts
Mr Alden M McLaughlin, Jr
Mr. Anthony S. Eden
Ms. Edna M. Moyle
Mr. V. Arden McLean

Absent:

Hon. Gilbert A. McLean
Hon. Juliana Y. O'Connor-Connolly
Dr. the Hon. Frank S. McField
Hon. Donovan W.F. Ebanks
Hon. Samuel W. Bulgin
Mr. Rolston M. Anglin
Mr. Lyndon L. Martin

The Clerk: Four Ayes, five Noes, seven Absent.

Hon. Samuel W. Bulgin: Mr. Speaker, I do not think I was in here when the vote was taken is that correct?

The Deputy Speaker: Correct.

The Noes have it and that means that the House shall continue until 4.30 or another motion for the adjournment.

Negated by Majority: Adjournment motion failed.

The Deputy Speaker: Does any other Member wish to speak? Does any other Member wish to speak? Last call. Does any other Member wish to speak?

The Honourable Leader of Government Business.

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: Mr. Speaker, it seems that all kind of games can be played, this is not the first time I have seen it and the records will bear that out, but let it be recorded.

Mr. Speaker, I wonder if we can take a suspension. I wonder if they will object to that.

The Deputy Speaker: We will now take a 10 minute break and return quarter after four.

Proceedings suspended at 4.06 pm

Proceedings resumed at 4.25 pm

The Deputy Speaker: Please be seated. Proceedings are resumed.

The Honourable Leader of Government Business with the motion for the adjournment.

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: Mr. Speaker, let us see if they are going to object to this adjournment. It just shows you how if those guys get control of this country what is going to happen here.

I move the adjournment of this Honourable House until Monday morning at 10 am.

Just to say that some of our Members had to be off and I knew that the Member from East End, which I thought he said he was leaving this afternoon and he could not stay beyond 4 pm. Anyway, nevertheless, they objected to the adjournment and I hope that at this point in time they are ready to adjourn.

The Deputy Speaker: The question is that this House do now adjourn until 10 am Monday, 26 July 2004. All those in favour please say Aye. Those against, No.

Ayes

The Deputy Speaker: The Ayes have it.

At 4.30 pm the House stood adjourned until 10 am Monday, 26 July 2004.

OFFICIAL HANSARD REPORT
MONDAY
26 JULY 2004
10.50 AM
Twelfth Sitting

The Speaker: I will invite the Honourable Leader of the Opposition to lead us in prayers.

PRAYERS

Hon. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Let us pray. Almighty God, from whom all wisdom and power are derived: We beseech Thee so to direct and prosper the deliberations of the Legislative Assembly now assembled, that all things may be ordered upon the best and surest foundations for the glory of Thy Name and for the safety, honour and welfare of the people of these Islands.

Bless our Sovereign Lady, Queen Elizabeth II; Philip, Duke of Edinburgh; Charles, Prince of Wales; and all the Royal Family. Give grace to all who exercise authority in our Commonwealth, that peace and happiness, truth and justice, religion and piety may be established among us. Especially we pray for the Governor of our Islands, the Speaker of the Legislative Assembly, Official Members and Ministers of Cabinet and Members of the Legislative Assembly, that we may be enabled faithfully to perform the responsible duties of our high office. All this we ask for Thy great Name's sake.

Let us say The Lord's Prayer together: Our Father, who art in Heaven, Hallowed be Thy Name. Thy Kingdom come, Thy will be done on earth as it is in Heaven. Give us this day our daily bread, and forgive us our trespasses, as we forgive those who trespass against us. Lead us not into temptation, but deliver us from evil. For Thine is the Kingdom, the power and the glory, forever and ever. Amen.

The Lord bless us and keep us. The Lord make His face shine upon us and be gracious unto us. The Lord lift up the light of His countenance upon us and give us peace, now and always. Amen.

Proceedings resumed at 10.52 am

The Speaker: Please be seated. Proceedings are resumed.

READING BY THE HONOURABLE
SPEAKER OF MESSAGES
AND ANNOUNCEMENTS

Apologies

The Speaker: I extend the apology of the Clerk who is representing the Commonwealth Parliamentary Association (CPA) at the Regional Conference in Grenada and the Second Elected Member for West Bay who is also a delegate at that Conference.

I have also received apologies for absence from the Honourable Temporary First Official Member.

I wish to take this opportunity also to thank Ms. Kathleen Watson and Miss Nana Bothwell for sitting in as procedural Clerks this morning. It is a new experience for them but I feel certain that they will handle it and I am sure with your support they will do very well indeed.

I am also saddened to announce the death of one of our stalwart politicians, Mr. Craddock Ebanks. As many of you know, Mr. Craddock served these Islands in general but in particular, his constituency of North Side for many years. I think at one stage he was known as the Father of the House and we want to extend our sincere condolences to the family of Mr. Craddock Ebanks and indeed to our Acting First Official Member, Mr. Craddock's son, as he mourns the death of his dear father.

I am not sure whether the date for the funeral has been announced but I understand it is possibly on Saturday and I would hope that as many Members of the Legislative Assembly would make every effort to be present at his funeral.

Again, our sincere condolences and I would ask the House to rise at this time as a tribute of our respect as we observe one minute of silence.

[The House observed one minute of silence in memory of Mr. Craddock Ebanks]

The Speaker: The Lord giveth and the Lord taketh away, blessed be the name of the Lord.

Please be seated.

STATEMENTS BY HONOURABLE
MEMBERS AND MINISTERS OF THE CABINET

The Speaker: I have received no statements from Honourable Members or Ministers of the Cabinet.

The Community College (Amendment) Bill, 2004

The Speaker: The Honourable Leader of Government Business continuing with his debate.

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: Mr. Speaker, I am not going to be long. I rose to speak on Friday afternoon when the House was suspended and then adjourned.

I believe what Government is doing with the Community College and the presentation of this Bill is a good day for education.

No two ways about it there is much to be done and Government has always recognised this. There is much to be done about our in-education but there is a lot already done, and while the Minister is criticised for what is not being done, why not give some credit for what is being done. I believe that we have come a long way on matters of education. As I said, there is still a lot to be done and we recognise that. Anytime the Ministry or a department requires something and it comes to Cabinet, it has the full support of Cabinet Ministers, Members and Civil Servants that sit with us in Cabinet; I have said this before.

When I think of the amount of scholarships both local and overseas that this Administration has approved, I have to say that we are fortunate.

I know when in this country that scholarships were given to the favoured few; I know when only certain politician children could get scholarships; I know when you could not even get a place in High School. I had to go through that; they created the Secondary Modern School and if you had a chance to speak to people before they passed on, like Mrs. McCoy, she would have said what an injustice that was to the country. I remember distinctly that she was one of the teachers who were against that system. We do not favour when it comes to scholarships.

Even at times I am not satisfied with enough because sometimes I believe that the Council could do better, but when we find that out and believe that, then we implore on the Permanent Secretary and the Minister to look at the cases we have been informed about. However, when I think that we have given over one hundred—for this year already; there is approximately seventy six overseas scholarships granted and probably an equal amount for the local because we also grant scholarships for the Community College. When I see some of the people who oppose me and I look at their children and see that they were educated through Government and then they have the nerve to criticise Government about education. This is not being personal in any way, I am talking about fairness. I know many good children in this country who were qualified to get scholarships but did not get any. I know!

I took the position that my two children were going to be educated by my wife and myself; we had to borrow save and do what we had to do in order to do so and thank God we did so. There are many who are not in my situation or in my position, and as I said, there is no favouritism and I do not believe that there is any because one of the people who is running against me in West Bay— top student granted tourism scholarship, but that is as it should be. While they criticise some of the things that need to be done, for God's sake repeat some of the things that are being done. When a child has done well the country should offer some assistance if that is the system.

Mr. Speaker, schools needed to be upgraded and new schools were needed because the schools were dropping down on the students. It is true that you cannot get everything done one time and I know while everybody feels that some matter is important to their particular situation and education is important, you cannot get everything done one time. Remember when the school ceilings were falling in on the classes? This was not the doing of this Administration, it is a build up over the years, but corrected by this Administration.

The new Prospect Primary School— I have not heard one of them get up to say thank you Government for getting this done. We started on the way to the new high school in Frank Sound and the West Bay School is in progress to be completed next year. Do not say that work is not being done, we just cannot get everything done. I do not know about the pomp, pageantry and ceremony, I only know of that at graduation time but that is normal— I see the Member for North Side is saying something maybe she has something to tell me, I do not know.

I do not want to continue seeing the politicisation of the system because that cannot help our children! It is a complete insult for what I saw go on in some of the graduation exercises this last time. It was very, very political and very unfortunate. I do not believe that is the right way to go and I do not think the principal needs to do that. I do not think that is what the graduation exercise is for and I do not think that small children understand or appreciate it but it is election time and it is nothing but politics being played.

I will tell the world this; they can say what they like about McKeeva but in my district, what I did when I found something was wrong or somebody said something was wrong at the school, and I have paid attention all during my political career and before, to the John Cumber Primary School, I did not become involved and get on this Floor and make a big pile of noise, I went to the Principal and she would tell me that she was talking to the Ministry and once she talks to the Ministry she would get back to me. That is how it has worked from Mrs. Bernice Levy, Mr. Hubbard Crawford and Mrs. Shirley Kidd's time. Twenty years I have served the district of West Bay and they would always say I am going to the Department or Ministry and once I have done that I will speak to you as a representative. I appreciated that and I paid attention to it but if something go wrong now and the Ministry, Permanent Secretary or I do not know anything about it then how are we to get things done?

You cannot play politics and too much of that is going on! It is not good for the schools and I know the Permanent Secretary is in these Chambers and I will ask her and the Minister to take note that that has to stop! You cannot continue doing that and believe that all is going to be well because you are dealing with human beings, and sure enough when you have people in the audience who do not like the Government and people in the audience who like the Government, there is going to be a clash. What I saw on television during the graduation is unbelievable! It is unbelievable! You then see the connecting attacks in this House. You know that there is discourse between them because you know that some of them are not smart enough to find out the details unless they have done the work with the Civil Servants! I say that it is a bad, bad step to take and politicise the Civil Service in the way that I believe that some of the Opposition might be attempting! Remember, today it is this Government and tomorrow it could be you.

It is not right and there is work to be done in education and if they need money they only have to ask for it but there is no reason for the kind of politicisation that I see taking place, none whatsoever! You cannot embarrass the Minister with some of the things that I saw taking place. Civil Servants should not be doing that; it is not right! It is not right when the Chief Secretary is present to not acknowledge him or acknowledge him last. You cannot do these sorts of things! I have reported to the Governor what I saw taking place. Graduations, to me, are solemn occasions and yes it is one of joy because children are moving from one stage to another and going out either to the world or to another school because I did not get that opportunity. When I go there it is with a lot of joy to see how Cayman is progressing and how some of our children are doing so well. We have to be thankful!

Yes, there is work and I keep repeating that but think of where we came from. Today children are sitting in an air-conditioned classroom and they talk about the temporary classrooms as if they are a caboose. They are no caboose! I wish that I had had a room like that to grow up in when I was a child; not go to school in, grow up in! I say it again, and although people think it is a glamorous thing, it is no fun and not glamorous to lie on the floor on a plantain trash bed. When rainy weather came and the house is leaking and you are slipping the bed up and down, like this time of year, which my mother dreaded because of the rain, heat and the mosquitoes. We cannot forget where we come from and all of us as parents cannot forget to tell all our children, we must imprint on their minds where we come from and say thank God that we have come far. While there are bumps and things that are needed the education system has come a long way.

Small countries like ours are simply not scaled down versions of large countries but we require distinctive strategies for our educational development and this is what was said by one of the Reports "Goals for 2000-2004". Anything that you do should have a good foundation. While one of the Opposition Members talked about things that do not exist before 2001, he should understand that building curriculum and the right program is the right place to start. You can put any willy-nilly programmes in place and it not be effective. I will tell you in regards to the Tourism School, they thought it would be the best thing in the world to put that school at the College but it did not work. They had the best kitchen and equipment, better than some hotels but it did not have the atmosphere and ambiance and people.

Most countries have gone to places where people can stay to train the students and I would have liked to have had a school up and running but I am more satisfied that we are taking the time; we have purchased the building already (a 12 room hotel, the previous John Silver's Inn) and now we are moving forward to work with the University College, which will dovetail with the New England Institute of Technology. It will have a sound foundation to begin on and work from, I would think, at least the Middle School level, and probably the last two classes from the Primary School before they go into Middle School to get a proper grounding on the assets of the tourism industry.

Back in the 1960's and 1970's they want to see Caymanians in the industry and that is a big 'sing song'. How are we going to get Caymanians in the industry if Caymanians do not want to go there and they can find better jobs outside, or at least, they thought they could find better jobs outside? I worked in the tourism industry; I went to school half a day Friday and came out and went to the hotels with my uncles and aunts and worked on Saturdays and Sundays. I was glad to work all day to get it. I did not recognise that that could have been a good career, I went out and tried to do something else and that is what the majority of Caymanians in the late 1960's and early 1970's there were a tremendous amount of Caymanians in the tourism industry. They were good people in the industry too.

Today a bartender can make between $60,000 - $70,000 a year. Executives can make much more but there was a feeling that you can only work in the banks and financial industries and companies, so everybody gravitated to that and every mother felt proud when their son went out with a necktie to work. However, most people did not think that they could have made a grand career out of the tourism industry so we now have to import far more workers. With a small population with the standard of living which we have, we are going to have to do that anyway and people who preach about sustainable development and that we are going too fast et cetera, the day that they slow it down and stop it then our standard of living falls so expect one or the other.

We are well on the way; we have purchased a property and I am glad that we are taking the time and I hope that if the people see fit to return us that school will open next year some time and I hope that if the people do not return us the new administration will continue the work.

Bringing the educational system into technological age preparing for the 21st Century, computer technology and the likes— this is the stuff that has been going on. From what I understand, the curriculum has been strengthened, subjects added to improve the ability of students to do better in core subjects, math, English and even mechanics; these have to be completed for the student to graduate. They are core subjects so let no one skin up their face and make a big noise at this time because they believe this is election year and we can say anything while beating up on the Government. That is getting us nowhere.

Mr. Speaker, I did not even plan to speak on this because I thought it would be sufficient for the Minister to open the debate and for the people who wanted to say anything to say it for him to reply. However, I had to make those remarks after the attack was made from the Opposition on Friday.

Let us think of where we came from and now we are going to have a university. Think of it! I remember the days of Secondary Modern School with Mr. McHale, teacher McField and all of those who have gone on to their eternal rewards but I remember them saying 'we are looking to better times'. We should thank God for the foundation they helped us to build. So, we are coming into our own.

We talk a lot saying that we do not like what the United Kingdom is doing to us and some even talk of independence and we have already said where our Party stands on that. Well, if we do not build up our academics we cannot go. It is no use of us talking of independence. So, I am glad that we are finally moving in the right direction and I want to thank the Minister. We say publicly the United Democratic Party is willing to spend any amount that we can spend if we have been asked to do so.

The Speaker: Does any other Member wish to speak? Does any other Member wish to speak?

The Honourable Minister for Community Services.

Dr. the Hon. Frank S. McField: Mr. Speaker, I would like to enter into the records a short defence of my colleague the Honourable Minister responsible for Education.

I understand that this is four years since there was, in this Honourable House, a tremendous amount of criticism of the educational system in this country and one of the main critics of the educational system of this country was the present Minister of Education and also the First Elected Member for George Town and Leader of the Opposition.

I recall those debates and the fact that we in this Honourable House had the possibility four years ago, almost exactly, to see the wish list of the then Minister of Education, and it was a substantial list that called for a tremendous improvement in the physical infrastructure within the educational system. What we did not see from that Minister, who was then responsible for education, was a wish list dealing with the educational infrastructure, the real building that you need to do within the school system.

It is unfortunate that again, we have this overemphasis on buildings rather than the emphasis on the building of people. The educational system is not just about creating places for children to occupy, but it is about providing those minds with the kinds of activities that will make them useful throughout their lives. It is about the issue of continuing education or education through life, which is impossible without a higher educational system being developed in this country. Therefore, I think it is unfortunate if those persons that were to grade the educational system, of course the Opposition have graded the educational system of this country and have decided to give the Member responsible for Education an 'F', but would they understand what precisely education is then they would not be so hasty to give the Minister of Education an 'F'. If we were to go back to the original people who tried to decide what education is, what usefulness or utility knowledge education development have, we will find out that from the very beginning there have been no complete agreement as to what education is and the purpose of education.

So, when we come to grade people with regards to the educational success many people differ. The educational system is about more than children passing exams at the end of a defined period, even if we were to ask the questions: Is education really successful or is the education system successful simply because kids are made to pass exams? Is that the true value or is that the true judge of the success of the system? Sometimes it is difficult to define what period it is that the person should really show what we might consider to be development. Some people are early in the terms of their accomplishments and some people are a little later, but because someone may not be able to pass an exam at one particular stage does not mean that system has been unsuccessful.

Judging human beings is a very difficult task. The fact that the educational system in this country has been able to show good academic results at an early stage in many of our children who have qualified to go on to further learning, again, is a sign that the system has a good foundation and that the present administration has not taken it backward but, in fact, have moved it forward. We understand that not all of the success in the educational system at this time is a result of the Minister's effort just like all of the weakness that we might continue to identify is not his doing as well, but we do recognise that his concept of education is wider than that which we had to work with before. It is not a narrow defined system that is just looking at the passing of exams but he is also talking about the improvement of the students as citizens in the country. He is talking about the establishment of a cadet core within the educational system, which gives kids the possibility to look towards service of country as one of the foremost principles of showing that one is civilised or educated. Therefore education is not just a technical vocational tool but about creating citizens that will have usefulness to their society.

I think that this Minister more than any minister of Education understands the sociological importance of viewing education as a broad multidisciplinary approach to the development of our society and of those future members of our society.

We have enjoyed the papers which the Minister of Education brought to Cabinet. We have sometimes questioned some of his papers, simply because of his foresight and incredible general knowledge of all of the issues that he tackles. The Minister has spent an amazing amount of time at conferences, which some people on the Opposition tend to ridicule, but without us being exposed to the various developments in education we would not be able to plan the educational development in this country in such a way that we would keep our people abreast of what is happening in the world, and therefore, be able in such a globalise period of history to be able for them to be in the forefront rather than the background.

The fact that the Members of the Opposition continue to ridicule the Minister in terms of his travels and try to somehow suggest that it is a waste of public funds rather than seeing the fact that the Minister is a hard working Minister who, when he travels, delivers to the Cabinet a report on his travels showing exactly what it is that he has achieved. I think that he has spent his time very well in terms of helping us to be able to come to an understanding of what education is. I would like to stress that again. If we were only to look at the buildings rather than look at the citizens that we are building we would misunderstand exactly what the thrust of this Government's education policy has been.

Of course, I understand and see that the school in Prospect is being developed and, as I speak, I note that the Bill which is before this Honourable House with regards to the College really needs no other defence other than that which the Minister has put forward. The point is that a Member of the Opposition deflected from this very important Bill by dealing with certain wider and more general issues that they have with regards to education. I submit that is no more than politicising this issue because people continue to see the importance of education which is extremely important in society and people are going to vote according to how they think the future of their children are being looked at. An education is that vehicle which gives people the social and economic mobility, which everyone in our society is looking for. Every one in our society should have the right to have and I think the Minister has done a tremendous job.

The school that is being built in Prospect will help to house some of the kids from the George Town Primary School; that is criticised. If he did not house the kids there what would he do while he seeks to give the George Town constituents a new primary school? It goes to show again how the Opposition makes crisis out of everything the Government does. I continue to stress that the Opposition tries to create a crisis out of every single thing that the Government does. They try to turn it upside down and turn it on its head creating a crisis on it. This Bill that the Minister has brought to advance further education in this country is stood on its head to create a crisis again.

With those few words I would like to enter into the records of this Honourable House my support for the Minister of educational policies and I hope that the Lord would continue to bless him and give him the kind of wisdom which he needs in order that he can serve in this capacity. Thank you.

The Speaker: Does any other Member wish to speak? Does any other Member wish to speak? Last call, does any other Member wish to speak? If not would the Honourable Minister for Education wish to exercise his right of reply?

Hon. Roy Boddan: Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

In an ideal world this debate on the Community College (Amendment) Bill would have long been finished, and we would have moved on to other business because it is a simple request, straightforward and easy to understand. But I am not so naive to believe that we live in an ideal world and, in any event, I am constantly reminded of the political one-upmanship practice by the Opposition so as to gain an electoral advantage.

I was not completely surprised but I was a little taken back at the vitriolic campaign mounted by the Second Elected Member for George Town and I know, because I have studied their characters well and know that the Leader of the Opposition was in on the conspiracy. So, I take it personal as a matter of honour and respect and I have to defend my integrity and my ability as the Minister of Education. I have already told people that my style is always to extend the velvet glove but I keep behind me at all times, the male fist ready to strike so I am going to strike today and strike hard.

I have never been an intellectual snob but I resent people who are my intellectual inferiors to challenge my ability and capacity to deliver, people who could not enter where I have exited, to try and put me down to say that I have not delivered. It comes down to this, when they can place on the table what I can place on the table plus a successful record then they can question me and take me to task, but I refuse to be dictated to, to be insulted by people who I consider to be of lesser intellectual ability than myself!

I have already said in debates that there is a big difference between armchair quarterbacks and the guy who go on the field and can win the game. Anybody can be an armchair quarterback, anyone can criticise the Sunday night game on the Monday morning, but when they get on the field and have to call the signals, I want to see what they are going to do. Are they going to freeze and let people tell them 'you been there for a year and did not do anything, give me this thing boy, let me lead'?

Mr. Speaker, debate by the Opposition Members fall into two categories, the preposterous and the illusionary, but the debate delivered by the Second Elected Member for George Town was a combination of both in an effort to make the Caymanian people believe that this Minister has frittered away for four years and not delivered an educational product. I am sorry that he is not here but that is the character of them, they are cowards! They can give what they cannot take; would that he was here to hear what I have to say today, but perhaps, his colleagues can take the message to him because I am drawing a line in the sand.

Mr. Speaker, I say without fear of successful contradiction that what has been done in education under my tenure is remarkable. I will pit against anyone's because I have sense. I came in with a plan and I want, with your permission, to draw reference to the manifesto which my colleague, Gilbert McLean, and I had in the Election of 2000 under national goals. The very first goal says, "Encourage the development and enhancement of education in both the academic and vocational fields with increased emphasis on the latter while promoting teacher training for Caymanians and ensuring the availability of adequate classroom space, teaching aids and materials."

Mr. Speaker, we took the Vision 2008 document and drew from that on what we wanted to deliver to both constituency and country. Shortly after coming to office I attended the 14th Commonwealth Ministers of Education Conference in Nova Scotia and from that I drew a platform of five objectives; teacher training, schools improvement, information technology in the schools, citizenship and human rights education, and technical and vocational education. That is the plan which I worked to for the four years that I have been in office. All these things have to be done simultaneously with all else that is going on.

We know that we have a system that delivers well academically; we know that we have a system that does well for the top 30 per cent and we know we have to strengthen the remaining 70 per cent, but it is not easy to do that because at the same time you are bolstering and strengthening that 70 per cent you have to ensure that the standard of excellence for the 30 per cent continues, and that is what we have been doing and improving upon that. You cannot just stop everything now and it is technical and vocational education—I am not a crisis manager, Sir! I have to keep a broad and comprehensive view on the system and we are doing the things that are necessary to develop technical and vocational education.

We have to ensure that we have a sound curriculum, we have to ensure that there is articulation and continuation and we have decided that we have to begin from the Middle School to the High School and into the soon to be University College. However, there is one thing more, technical and vocational education has changed in the way it had been delivered and it is no more greasy mechanics and no more pounding like they use to. Everything is delivered through the latest in information technology, through computers.

In autotronics it is analysers, this equipment costs lots of money so we have also to factor in what we are going to do so that there is no duplication of resources but so that we get optimum and maximum use of the resources. Do you think that is accomplished by someone just getting up saying that the Minister of Education is not doing anything about technical and vocational education and we get in we are going to do it? Who over there is going to do it? Where is their plan? Who is qualified? Talk is cheap! I want to see if those who talk the talk can walk the walk but they will have to wait their turn just like I had to wait mine. So, in the main time they can be building their plans.

Talking about the equipping of the laboratories, we are talking about $250,000. On a visit to the Samuel Jackman Prescott Polytechnic Institute in Barbados, when the Permanent Secretary and I went to the air-conditioning and refrigeration unit, we were told that the analyser equipment and instruments cost $350,000; that was just one section. When you think of autotronics, electronics and electrical engineering, anyone—even Slocum in Breakers—can spout off that we need technical and vocational education, but we need planning to get to the point where we make the maximum effort out of the delivery of the system and that is where we are heading. It is my responsibility to take the baton from the point at which I received it to the next point. That is what we are doing in a systematic and effective way.

As we speak, we are preparing to send eight students, recent graduates of the Community College to the New England Institute of Technology or New England Tech, which it is preferred to be called. At the same time we are looking to strengthen the curriculum and to enter into articulation agreements with the high school and the middle school so that we are building up a system because that is what it takes. It takes scientific management, not crisis management, nothing could be further from the truth than what the Second Elected Member for George Town had to say the other day and his efforts however valiant were unconvincing. Therefore he cannot make anybody believe that what he said was anything other than hot air. He cannot let us believe that that was, as the French say, 'une vraie scandale'. That was not a true scandal at all, it was a figment of his imagination and he knows that.

I want to mention something that I did not mention before, which I said I was not going to mention because it really does not bother me, I have no ego to stroke; I heard the Leader mention it and I noticed it. When I talk about pageantry, ceremony and pomp they had better learn it because Cayman is the only place in the world where the Minister of Education is in a formal function and the Leader of the Opposition is mentioned before the Minister of Education by his own teachers. If that were to happen in Jamaica, in the United Kingdom or the United States somebody would be in trouble! So, those people who are politicising these things had better learn and I know there are such things as protocol and respect and honour, and it is not about me but about the office held. It is not about the Leader of Government Business but it is about the office held. The old adage says, 'respect begets respect'.

It is clear that the PPM is operating in a realm of educational blur for I do not understand how they believe that I am going to let them kill me like they killed my predecessor. No, Mr. Speaker, no! Every time I am charged I am going to mount and offer a robust defence and so I am standing this morning shoulders squared and head unbowed in the full confidence that no one on the side of the People's Progressive Movement can do for education what has been done in the last four years by this Minister with the help of his colleagues and the United Democratic Party Government; none!

May I remind them that when we announced that we were building a school in Prospect they said it could not happen. They were trying to make hay out of the fact that we told them a high school is going to come on line in Frank Sound and that is happening. So, we are moving forward. I would like to know what their plans are because they have not said anything other than get up and criticise to try and make me look like an amateur and like I do not know what I am doing. It is downright patently fallacious, disingenuous and duplicitous the arguments that the Second Elected Member for George Town gave concerning educational achievements and accomplishments! I am sorry that he is not here, he could learn effective opposition because when my colleague the now Minister of Health and myself were Opposition Members, only two of us—every time we gave criticism we were in our seats to hear what the Government had to say, not drop the pile and leave it. Sometimes I am not inclined to take them seriously because if you give you have to learn to take and they could be edified and enlightened by my defence!

Mr. Speaker, I am not, and I do not care whether it cost me friendship or money, I do not care, I am speaking the truth and I am going to speak that forcefully and loud. It does not matter to me because I believe in what I am saying and I know it to be the truth. It is character and not circumstances that maketh a man!

The Second Elected Member for George Town should listen to his contribution and to the number of times he vacillated—towards the end he tried to retreat. He should listen to some of the disingenuousness and duplicity that went on in his speech. Mr. Speaker, in the end he tried to be apologetic as if to believe that would buy any favours with me. I know that I am in a war, I have been in many, many wars and I know what my responsibility is here and I know what this business is about. There is no one more gentlemanly than me, I can even be saintly when the necessity arises, but oh, Mr. Speaker, on the other hand, there is no one who is more passionate about defending himself than I am, especially when I know I have done my best and that other people have been saying what is not representative of the facts.

Mr. Speaker, I listened to his debate and perhaps his colleague, the Elected Member for East End can help him out. I am going to give them an old proverb that says: 'La boca y traidortorre du lo corre'—'the mouth is traitor to the heart'. You cannot say that you are supporting something if you are not supporting it in your heart and that is just what he did towards the end.

The Second Elected Member for George Town and the People's Progressive Movement cannot speak out of the two sides of their mouth; they cannot because they know they are going to be exposed; they know that they are going to be taught and reminded of what is true. I heard them in debate after debate, I have never heard them give credit where credit was due and even me, during my most grudging years was careful to be fair, I was careful to say this is good and this is good but this is not so good. They have never! All they have come out with is the Minister of Education has produced a litany of evil! Nothing could be further from the truth. I have never heard them say the Minister of Education must be doing something right. We do not hear anymore about this flare-up of criminal gang activity in the schools. I have never heard them talk about the mentoring programme, the Cadet Core, coaching for success or about bringing youngsters back into the school. I have never heard them talk about these things; all I hear them talk about is the evil that Minister is doing us, bringing temporary classrooms, overcrowding the system, but never one credit.

Is that the role of a conscientious Opposition? Do you believe that the role of a conscientious Opposition is not also a role where they should also be fair, balance, objective and where there should be conscientious? You do not need those kinds of people in the Government. If they cannot acknowledge that there has to be a balance and there must be some good, even in the most evil of persons. Irresponsibility, duplicity and disingenuousness; those are not the characters of a responsible opposition but the characters of people who are seeking power. I want to warn them that power has a way of mocking those who seek it so they had better beware.

In an effort to improve the system on what we are doing, the Employment Relations Department carried out a work skills assessment survey and we found out the most sought after skills and we found out other things. We found out that many employers have a view that there is a poor to non-existent work ethic among Caymanians. We went to the greatest expert that we knew, probably the greatest expert in North America, Dr. James Bridges and will be, come September, introducing work ethics into the curriculum of our schools from the primary schools up to the University College. Is not that moving to address the needs and improve the educational product? I did not hear the Opposition talk about that and certainly they must have known.

I do not hear them talk about these things. I do not hear them talk about how the Cadet Core is producing rounder, more full citizens of the youngsters who embark on it; you know why? It is because their view of education is narrow and see education only as producing a community of Philistines who's intention and objective is to mask personal wealth while I see education as the production of citizens who are altruistic; who have a community view; who have a sense of obligation and a moral responsibility to not only uplift themselves, but simultaneously, uplift their community, c'est la difference. That is why education is best left to the educators. My philosophy and my view of education is starkly different from theirs. I believe that our youngsters who graduate from this system must not only be able to help themselves economically, but also must feel that they have an obligation and a responsibility to help the community, to uplift the community, to help those who are less fortunate to do something to make their community better. That is the kind of system that this Minister is trying to promote and perpetuate.

Mr. Speaker, I see myself as the father of a new genre of education ministers that will view education in its broadest sense and be able to cater to those who are average and weak just as efficiently as those who are excellent. That is what we are trying to do. But to build up any good system takes time. It is a painstaking exercise, which is sometimes fraught with trial and error and taxes the patients but no one can say truthfully that the system has not improved; that the system is not improving or that we are not adequately addressing the programmes. Otherwise why would we have students to send to a technical college at this stage? Why? At the same time that we are strengthening the curriculum, introducing new programmes, we are taking care of the physical infrastructure.

What the Opposition does not seem to realise is that even those who are rooted to technical and vocational education must also, as the Leader of Government Business alluded to, be proficient in the core subjects of mathematics, English and social studies; they must also do well in that. No mention was made of the cultural prejudice. I did not hear the Second Elected Member for George Town mention the notion we have to get over of cultural prejudice, people are saying, I know I do not want you to do this—

Point of Order

Mr Alden M McLaughlin, Jr: Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: The Second Elected Member for George Town, do you have a point of order?

Mr Alden M McLaughlin, Jr: Yes, Sir. The Honourable Minister is deliberately misleading this House. He was either sleeping or was out of the Chamber when I was debating because I went into the whole question of cultural prejudice at great length.

The Speaker: I have circulated to all Honourable Members what constitutes a legitimate point of order. I have also gone to great lengths to explain that 'misleading the house' is not a legitimate point of order unless it can be shown that the Member knowingly and maliciously misled the House thus constituting a fraudulent point of order. Therefore I would not consider that a legitimate point of order but I would ask the Honourable Minister to make his comment on what was just raised by the Second Elected Member for George Town.

Hon. Roy Boddan: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Far be it from me to wish to take anything away from the Honourable gentleman and if he said that he mentioned cultural differences then I proffer my apologies for accusing him of not mentioning them.

The Speaker: Thank you Honourable Minister. Please continue.

Hon. Roy Boddan: Mr. Speaker, cultural prejudice is an important factor to consider in us offering technical and vocational education because we have to find a way to let our people understand that service does not mean servility and that it is okay to work with the hands; that those persons who do work with the hands are no less intellectually superior to those who do otherwise. So, what we are talking about is that at the same time we are promoting technical and vocational education we have to be removing hurdling and alleviating these cultural prejudices and they are not easy.

The final thing I wish to make on this business of offering technical and vocational education, in this way, is that perhaps the third piece of the puzzle is the most critical. When we have trained our people in technical and vocational fields, we have then to ensure that they get the jobs for which they are trained. I can tell you as Minister with responsibility also for human resources or labour, this is not easy.

We are training our people to replace expatriate labour. It is not easy in many instances to have this done because the employers who have this expatriate labour are reluctant to get rid of these persons to hire Caymanians for obvious reasons, not the least of which is the fact that in some instances the Sword of Damocles is held over the expatriate labourers head and they are meant to take on tasks and to work under circumstances that the Caymanians would not work under. It is not as simple as it might appear to be.

Mr. Speaker, finally, when the chickens have come home to roost, as they certainly are coming now, it is incumbent upon us and we shall have to ask ourselves whether it was worth being disingenuous, duplicitous, mischievous and misleading just to gain a political advantage or whether when we speak, we speak from the heart knowing full well and feeling that we have the ability, wherewithal and the skill to deliver what we know needs to be delivered. I say without fear of successful contradiction that I have done and will continue to do my best. I have the support of my colleagues and surrounding staff, and I am delivering an excellent product and if given the opportunity I will continue to deliver excellence, but I am not going to compromise my position nor sacrifice my integrity just like I am not going to let people beat me down with what I consider is less than the truth and facts. Enough said on this matter.

Mr. Speaker, I am happy and relieved to finally reach the point where I can conclude the work on the Community College (Amendment) Bill. I am happy for the support of this Honourable House because I believe that this move to transform the Community College into a University College is the right and appropriate move to make at this time, and it is a move which bodes well for the future development of this country.

It would be most remiss of me if I would conclude this debate without paying tribute to the President and his staff. The Community College of the Cayman Islands is an institution of excellent repute respected by its sister institutions in the rest of the Caribbean and respected indeed, by all those institutions of higher education which accepts the student graduates of the Community College. The President and his staff has taken the College from a fledgling institution to a University College, no small order, and this gentleman who has a persuasive way about him has laboured diligently and assiduously over the years to manage the staff, including the junior staff at such an expert level where he could bring, with the encouragement of his Board of Governors, his institution to this level.

My sincere congratulations go out to this gentleman and his staff. Also to the Board of Governors who had the vision to see that this was the next logical move in the development and life of the Community College of the Cayman Islands and I am happy that it happened under my watch. It is fitting for me that it happened under my watch because I supported the college from the very beginning and I take great pride in my vision as an educator. I take greater pride in my ability to help develop the people of the Cayman Islands to become not only economically self sustaining but to have a sense of themselves and a sense of a community. This institution and the nobility and sense of community, which it will bring, will enhance the opportunities for Caymanians. It will be a comprehensive institution catering not only to those cohorts of students who are immediate graduates of high schools, but even to persons of maturity who wish to continue their education and in an era of life long learning this is indeed noble and commendable.

I would wish for the President and his staff God's speed and I look forward to further working with them to build on the excellent reputation that he has laboured so assiduously to achieve for his Institution. The entire Cayman Islands can be proud and I extend an open invitation to the Members of this Honourable House and to all those in this community on Charter Day, which I believe is 28 August, to come and witness this ceremony because history will be in the making, a history of which we can all be proud. I thank you.

The Speaker: The question is that a Bill shortly entitled the Community College (Amendment) Bill, 2004 be given a Second Reading. All those in favour please say Aye. Those against, No.

REPORTS ON BILLS

The Penal Code (Amendment) Bill, 2004

The Speaker: The Honourable Second Official Member.

Hon. Samuel W. Bulgin: Mr. Speaker, I beg to report that a bill entitled the Penal Code (Amendment) Bill, 2004 was considered by a committee of the whole House and passed with one amendment.

The Speaker: The Bill has been duly reported and is set down for Third Reading.

The Community College (Amendment) Bill, 2004

The Speaker: As was previously mentioned the Elections (Amendment) Bill 2004 has been deferred from Committee Stage through the Reporting Stage and the Third Reading. On the Community College (Amendment) Bill, 2004 I call on the Honourable Minister for Education.

Hon. Roy Boddén: Mr. Speaker, I beg to report that a bill for a Law to amend the Community College Law was considered by a committee of the whole House and passed with minor amendments.

The Speaker: The Bill has been duly reported and is set down for Third Reading.

The Penal Code (Amendment) Bill, 2004

The Speaker: The Honourable Second Official Member.

Hon. Samuel W. Bulgin: Mr. Speaker, I beg to move for the Third Reading of a Bill entitled the Penal Code (Amendment) Bill, 2004 that it be given a Third Reading and passed.

The Speaker: The question is that a Bill shortly entitled the Penal Code (Amendment) Bill, 2004 be given a Third Reading and passed. All those in favour please say Aye. Those against, No.

Ayes.

The Chairman: The Ayes have it.

Agreed. The Penal Code (Amendment) Bill, 2004 was given a Third Reading and passed.

The Community College (Amendment) Bill, 2004

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Education.

Hon. Roy Boddén: Mr. Speaker, I beg to move that a Bill entitled the Community College (Amendment) Bill, 2004 be given a Third Reading and passed.

The Chairman: The Ayes have it.

Agreed. The Community College (Amendment) Bill, 2004 was given a Third Reading and passed

The Speaker: The Honourable Leader of Government Business.

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: Thank you, Mr. Speaker, I would ask if you can take a suspension at this time to allow the cleanup on the Elections Law to take place. It should be completed in a couple of minutes.

The Speaker: Honourable Members accordingly we will suspend for 15 minutes to allow the Legal Draftsman to complete the Committee stage amendment to the Elections Law.

House suspended at 3.05 pm

House resumed at 3.55 pm

THIRD READINGS

The Speaker: Please be seated. Proceedings are resumed. The Honourable Leader of Government Business.

ADJOURNMENT

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: Mr. Speaker, there are numerous amendments to the Elections Law and the Elections Officials have finalised and reworked them, and I believe it would be better if we adjourned the House at this time, as much as I hate to do that seeing that we have things to be doing. Nevertheless, to give Opposition Members time to peruse and examine the amendments, I believe it is better to adjourn until Wednesday at 11 am. Members here have a meeting at 10 am with the Members of the All Party Parliamentary Group.

The Speaker: The question is that this House do now adjourn until 11 am Wednesday, 28 July 2004. All those in favour please say Aye. Those against, No.

Ayes.

The Chairman: The Ayes have it.

At 3.55 pm the House stood adjourned until 11 am on Wednesday, 28 July 2004.

OFFICIAL HANSARD REPORT
WEDNESDAY
28 JULY 2004
12.20 PM
Thirteenth Sitting

The Speaker: I will invite the Honourable Second Official Member to lead us in prayers.

PRAYERS

Hon. Samuel W. Bulgin: Let us pray. Almighty God, from whom all wisdom and power are derived: We beseech Thee so to direct and prosper the deliberations of the Legislative Assembly now assembled, that all things may be ordered upon the best and surest foundations for the glory of Thy Name and for the safety, honour and welfare of the people of these Islands.

Bless our Sovereign Lady, Queen Elizabeth II; Philip, Duke of Edinburgh; Charles, Prince of Wales; and all the Royal Family. Give grace to all who exercise authority in our Commonwealth, that peace and happiness, truth and justice, religion and piety may be established among us. Especially we pray for the Governor of our Islands, the Speaker of the Legislative Assembly, Official Members and Ministers of Cabinet and Members of the Legislative Assembly, that we may be enabled faithfully to perform the responsible duties of our high office. All this we ask for Thy great Name's sake.

Let us say The Lord's Prayer together: Our Father, who art in Heaven, Hallowed be Thy Name. Thy Kingdom come, Thy will be done on earth as it is in Heaven. Give us this day our daily bread, and forgive us our trespasses, as we forgive those who trespass against us. Lead us not into temptation, but deliver us from evil. For Thine is the Kingdom, the power and the glory, forever and ever. Amen.

The Lord bless us and keep us. The Lord make His face shine upon us and be gracious unto us. The Lord lift up the light of His countenance upon us and give us peace, now and always. Amen.

Proceedings resumed at 12.22 pm

The Speaker: Please be seated. Proceedings are resumed.

READING BY THE HONOURABLE
SPEAKER OF MESSAGES
AND ANNOUNCEMENTS

Apologies

The Speaker: Honourable Members, firstly, I wish to apologise to the Honourable House for the late start, which was due to certain important issues having to be resolved prior to the opening this morning.

Also, I have received apologies for absence from the Honourable Temporary First Official Member and the Second Elected Member for West Bay.

PRESENTATION OF PAPERS
AND OF REPORTS

Attorney General Review 2003

The Speaker: The Honourable Second Official Member responsible for Legal Affairs.

Hon. Samuel W. Bulgin: Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

I beg the leave of this Honourable House to lay on the Table the document entitled "Attorney General Review 2003 Portfolio of Legal Affairs".

The Speaker: So ordered, would the Honourable Member wish to speak thereto?

Hon. Samuel W. Bulgin: Yes, very briefly.

Mr. Speaker. Let me hasten to say that there is no legal or indeed any requirement for the Attorney General's Portfolio to undertake documents and lay an annual review before this Honourable House. However, given the unsettling events of early last year I am persuaded that consistent with the notion of openness and transparency it would be an excellent gesture to undertake the publication of an annual review of the Attorney General's Office.

This publication is therefore an effort to convey to the public in a general way who we are and what we do. As Honourable Members are aware, it is not uncommon or unreasonable for the role of the Attorney General's Portfolio to be misunderstood. Some people often associate us with only busily prosecuting offenders to be sent off to Northward Prison.

We are about much more than that and we have a much wider focus. Accordingly, Sir, we have attempted to set out in this Review some of the functions of the office. The contents of the Review are merely indicative and is in no way meant to be exhaustive. I commend it to Members of this Honourable House. It is an inaugural publication; it is historic, significant and indeed timely. It is meant to be as opened and informative as we are allowed to be, and it touches on areas such as the prosecutorial functions, advice to Government on civil matters and indeed all matters; it touches on the Financial Reporting Authority (FRA), the Law School and Legislative Drafting.

Our vision is to continue to promote law and order, adequate and proper administration of justice in these Islands. We are about providing quality legal services in a timely, courteous and efficient manner whilst at the same time upholding professional ethics in the conduct of our duties.

In keeping with our mission, which includes providing the Government of the Cayman Islands with sound legal advice, representing the Government and the Crown on civil and criminal litigation, and doing so with the level of skills and professionalism required, and indeed, expected in an increasingly sophisticated commercial environment and by the widening sphere of crime in such a manner as to positively influence the administration of justice in these Islands, we are committed to promoting law and order.

I wish to reiterate that the publication is not an individual effort on my part; it is a team effort and I wish to extend my appreciation to members of my staff and to Government Information Services (GIS) for their effort in assisting me to put this document together.

Thank you.

Discussion Draft White Paper on the Traffic (Amendment) Bill, 2004

The Speaker: The Honourable Leader of Government Business and Honourable Minister for Tourism, Environment, Development and Commerce.

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I beg to lay on the Table of this Honourable House a Bill for a Law to Amend the Traffic Law (2003 Revision) to further regulate the grant of driving licenses to teenagers; and for Incidental and Connected Purposes.

The Speaker: So ordered. Would the Honourable Minister wish to speak thereto?

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

Mr. Speaker, I had hoped to be able to bring this Bill and take it through its normal passage in the House, but the people who have been advising me on it wants further clarification on certain things and therefore I propose to bring it in September or if there is any meeting before when I complete my discussions with them then I will do so.

The Bill is an important one as for a long time the public have talked about the need for a revision to take into consideration the age of teenagers and in particular, recent times when Mrs. Patricia Ebanks spearheaded a certain organisation and done quite a bit of education on the matter. I believe the time is right.

There are numerous problems with the aspect of the licensing presently. The fact that teenagers get them at a very young age people feel that age should be increased. To provide a learners license to a teenager is valid for 18 months and maybe reviewed for a further period of twelve months but thereafter no renewals should be permitted unless the applicant, since the last renewal, has taken at least one driving test relating to the grant of a restricted drivers license. The Bill provides and what has been recommended is that we look at this aspect of licensing at the age of 16 and 17.

Many teenagers have had their lives taken and I am so conscious of it because I have been to so many funerals just to see these young lives that had so much hope wiped out. I just went to a very well attended funeral of a young person killed in a car crash and as a parent when these sorts of things happen you think you know what the parent is going through.

One of the other problems that we have to address is the new import cars that are being so easily modified; this is a big problem and the community is crying out for changes.

As I said, I would have hoped that I could have taken this through all its stages but I am going to lay it on the Table for public input so that Members of the House would have much more time and bring it back as soon as possible. I hope nothing happens before then because this is long overdue.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

STATEMENTS BY HONOURABLE MEMBERS AND MINISTERS OF THE CABINET

Purchase of a Crane for the Port Authority in George Town, Grand Cayman

The Speaker: The Honourable Leader of Government Business.

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: Mr. Speaker, we are now in a time when people are starting to electioneer. In my constituency there is a team, as yet, being hid from the public that consists of Mr. Leonard Ebanks, Former Constitutional Commissioner and candidate in 2000, Mr. Thomas Jefferson, former Minister of Tourism, and although they say that they are not supporters of a party system, they have enjoined themselves to Mr. Mario Ebanks, First Vice President of the PPM, and Mr. Dalkeith Bothwell, a senior member of the People's Progressive Movement. It would be a rather immaculate birth for this alliance not to produce a PPM party slate, but I guess they believe that the people of West Bay and indeed the Cayman Islands are easily deceived.

Mr. Jefferson (the former Minister of Tourism) recently called into Radio Cayman Talk Show and then wrote a letter to a newspaper about my comments on the Port's development at my recent public meeting, and took offence to what I had said about the cranes and their inability to be used on the finger pier.

He said, and I quote, "I did not buy the crane, the Port Authority did". Here he is trying to shift the responsibility for his dastardly acts to the Port Authority. He was the Minister responsible for the Port Authority and he was the Chairman of the Port Authority. He cannot run and try to hide from the facts nor can he try to shift the blame to anyone else. As the old saying goes, "the bucks stopped with him".

The facts are that he orchestrated the purchase of the Manitowoc 250 Crane in 1997. He brought into the country a new shipping company, his own; ran out the private sector cranes on the Dock because he said his ship was not being treated fairly. After this crane was purchased it was discovered that it could not operate on the 200-foot finger pier for two reasons. First, the pier was not structurally able to support the weight of the crane's 300 tonnes and secondly, even if the pier could have supported the weight the tracks are too wide for it to be operated on the pier, nor could part of the boom of the crane be operated. It is still stored away and cannot be used; it is useless. The operations of the crane were therefore limited to the solid portion of the dock.

Mr. Speaker, allow me to repeat what I said again for the benefit of the Caymanian people and also for Mr. Jefferson who continues to say, and I quote, "May I ask Mr. Bush how then did the ships get unloaded?"

In 2003 the finger pier was upgraded to a solid structure and widened to 65 feet. These two actions have resulted in the utilisation of the entire 200-feet of the finger pier by the cranes. Put simply, there is now 440 continuous feet of dock that can be utilised by the cranes. In so doing ship sizes calling at the Port in 2004 were increased from 260 twenty foot equivalent units (TEU) capacity ships to 515 twenty foot equivalent units, capacity ships, to meet demands.

He goes on to say that from 1997 until 2000 (when the people finally caught on to what was happening), that the annual operations of the crane were profitable. Again, please allow me to set the record straight.

The crane operations on its own have never produced a positive cash flow for the Port Authority. For example in the year 2003, a typical year, crane revenues were $445,080 and expenses including crane operations and stevedores, wages, pensions, medical, maintenance, parts and loan payments were $917,316. This produced a negative cash flow of $462,236 for the crane operations. Crane revenues are derived from direct charges to the shipping companies that use the Port services and these were set at $15.00 per lift per TEU. Coincidentally this rate was set in 1997 when the new crane was purchased.

Mr. Speaker, there are two basic reasons why the crane operation do not produce positive cash flows. First, the crane charges of $15.00 per TEU were arbitrarily set. Secondly, Stevedores services by the Port Authority are free and were never factored into crane charges when they were initially set. Less it is said otherwise, our George Town Port is comparable with major ports in the number of lifts per hour, and indeed exceeds many other ports.

The former Minister tries further to take credit for our new security procedures, as he alludes to the fact that the Port Authority had trucking personnel removed from the port operation. There were no security challenges in 1997 that compares to those we face since 9/11. The new security measures announced had nothing to do with the limited type of security concerns that were in 1997. The International Community of Ports took three years to formulate into practice this new system. We are now operating under this new port security system, which far exceeds anything Mr. Jefferson said he had tried to implement.

The former minister tries to further take credit for the trucking operations. This operation was put in place in 1989 although it came into effect in 1991 and we all know that Mr. Jefferson was not responsible for the Port Authority's expansion at that time. If I may say so, Mr. Speaker, it was yourself who was in charge of the Port at the time. Also the trucking operations between the Dock and Cargo Distribution Centre has worked well over the years but has never produced a positive cash flow until 2002 when we had to adjust the trucking rates to better reflect the true cost of the service, we had to increase the cost.

Therefore, I expect no better from the former Minister of Tourism, who led our tourism industry, which had started to take a downturn in 1998, who had no television advertising in the United States, our biggest trade market, no tourism management policy and no summer programmes. Yet he had a budget of over C$25 million. This Ministry have been operating in my time with a budget of $19-20 million. Mr. Speaker, he went to great lengths to hide the true tourism arrival figures by manipulating the statistics. He did this by including local travelling residents.

When he said that the country was receiving 430,000 people, that actual number was closer to 300,000 or below. This could not have been so because in 2000 the hotels were empty, there were no cars being rented, restaurants were empty, including his own, no charter boat business and what cruise ship business that did come into the country was given to the bigger operators and no small water sports operators were allowed to conduct business with the major hotels under his watch. He simply did not take care of the needs of the people, but more specifically, he did not look after the small water sports operators from West Bay, and he was dishonest in putting out wrong information as he was informed was wrong.

How can you expect openness, care or concern from this ex-minister who has done those things? This is the same ex-minister who cannot give a proper account of the $11 million that was used for the Pedro Castle Project. This project, where container loads of mahogany disappeared; this project, which the Public Accounts Committee has been unable to get to the bottom of concerning the expenses; this property, Pedro Castle Project—which he said that when it was built would make millions of dollars—deceived Executive Council. Instead it has been in deficit from the beginning some 7 years ago.

The country should well remember the fiasco surrounding the Pedro Castle Project where no relevant bills could be produced for the $11 million of expenditure and perhaps the Opposition, who seeks to change the Government over mismanagement need to look at their new found running mate in West Bay; the same running mate that they campaigned against in 2000.

Mr. Speaker, I trust that this detailed description of the events and circumstances of the Port Operations under the former minister Mr. Jefferson, will finally educate him on the condition that he left the Port Authority in, as he surely had no clue about the operations when he was the Minister.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: Honourable Members I will take a two minute suspension to clarify an issue with the Leader of Government Business and I will ask Members to please sit in their seats.

Proceedings suspended at 12.51 pm

Proceedings resumed at 12.52 pm

The Speaker: Honourable Members proceedings are resumed.

I would like to say that we did start very late this morning and it is now 7 minutes to 1 o'clock, which is our luncheon period, but instead of taking the usual one and a half hour for lunch I am proposing that we take only one hour and return to start promptly at 2 pm, if possible. So, we take the luncheon suspension at this time.

Proceedings suspended at 12.53 pm

Proceedings resumed at 2.10 pm

The Speaker: Proceedings are resumed.

GOVERNMENT BUSINESS

BILLS

The Speaker: The House will now go into Committee to consider the Election Amendment Bill 2004.

House in Committee at 2.10 pm

COMMITTEE ON BILL

The Chairman: Please be seated.

The House is now in Committee, with the leave of the House may I assume that as usual we should authorise the Honourable Second Official Member to correct minor errors and such the like in these Bills.

Would the Clerk please state the Bill and read its Clauses.

The Elections (Amendment) Bill, 2004

The Chairman: Honourable Members are aware that an amendment, Amendment No. 5 to this Bill, was circulated which subsumes the details contained in amendments 1 through 4. So, the previous amendments 1 through 4 are no longer required, they are all included in amendment No. 5. I want to thank the Honourable Leader of Government Business for making it much simpler and easier to deal with just one amendment that all of the committee stage amendments are now included in the one amendment.

The Honourable Leader of Government Business.

Withdrawal of Committee Stage Amendments 1 through 4 to the Elections (Amendment) Bill, 2004

Hon. W. McKeever Bush: Mr. Chairman, I would like to move that Committee Stage Amendments 1 to 4 which had been circulated be withdrawn, as you have already explained to the Committee and I will stop there.

The Chairman: I had also given you the green light on this so I will order accordingly.

Madam Clerk please read the Clauses.

Clauses 1 and 2

The Clerk:

Clause 1	Short title and commencement
Clause 2	Amendment of section 2 of the Elections Law (2000 Revision) – definitions and interpretation

The Chairman: The question is that Clauses 1 and 2 form part of the Bill. All those in favour please say Aye. Those against, No.

Ayes.

The Chairman: The Ayes have it.

Agreed: Clauses 1 and 2 passed.

Hon. Juliana O'Connor-Connolly: Mr. Chairman. I just want to make a quick observation, which would not change the vote. In Clause 2 on page 10 where it refers to in Section 2(1) the last line of that section where it says, 'in the opinion of the supervisor', as a reminder under the old Law Section 56(1) previously said 'the Old Governor' and I think this is yet but one example where the move has been made by the Government to keep the separation of powers in this section.

The Chairman: Thank you, most kindly. I will bring this comment to the attention of the Second Official Member and ask him to deal with it accordingly.

Clause 3

The Clerk: Clause 3 Repeal and substitution of section 4 – appointment powers and duties of Deputy Supervisor.

The Chairman: Honourable Leader of Government Business.

Clause 25

The Clerk: Clause 25 Repeal and substitution of part 4 – election expense.

The Chairman: The Honourable Leader of Government Business.

Hon. W. McKeever Bush: Mr. Chairman, the amendment to clause 25 has various changes proposed in relation to election expenses. The proposed changes are as follows –

- (i) in the new section 58 (3) proposed for insertion in the principal Law, by deleting the words “, and the returning officer shall forthwith give public notice of the name and address of every election agent so appointed”;
- (ii) in the new section 58 (4) proposed for insertion in the principal Law, by deleting the words “who shall forthwith give public notice thereof”;
- (iii) by deleting the new section 58 (5) proposed for insertion in the principal Law and substituting the following –

“(5) Where any act or omission of an association or body of persons, corporate or unincorporated, is a offence under this Law, any person who at the time of the act or omission was a director, general manager, secretary or other similar officer of the association or body, or was purporting to act in any such capacity, shall be guilty of that offence if it is proved –

(a) that the act or omission took place with his consent or connivance; or

(b) that he failed to exercise all due diligence to prevent the commission of the offence as he ought to have exercised having regard to the nature of his functions in that capacity and to all the circumstances.”;

- (iv) in the new section 58 proposed for insertion in the principal Law by deleting subsections (6), (7), (8) and (9);
- (v) in the new section 59 proposed for insertion in the principal Law by deleting subsections (1), (2), (3) and (4);
- (vi) in the section 59 (5) proposed for insertion in the principal Law by deleting the words “by the election agent” and substituting the words “by the candidate”;
- (vii) by deleting the new section 60 (2) proposed for insertion in the principal Law and substituting the following –

“(2) No candidate shall be deemed to be guilty of an illegal practice by reason of any other person having incurred any expenditure in connection with the candidature of the candidate in contravention of this Part, unless it is proved that such expenditure was incurred with his knowledge or consent or that he did not take all reasonable steps to prevent the incurrence of such expenditure.”;

- (viii) in the new section 61 proposed for insertion in the principal Law, by deleting subsection (4);
- (ix) in the new section 65 (1) proposed for insertion in the principal Law by deleting the words “shall keep an account book in which shall be recorded –” and substituting the words “shall keep an account of –”;
- (x) in the new section 65 (4) proposed for insertion in the principal Law by deleting the words “the account book” and substituting the words “the account”;
- (xi) in the new section 65 (5) proposed for insertion in the principal Law by deleting the words “a constable” and substituting the words “the Attorney – General”; and
- (xii) by deleting the new section 65 (6) and (7) proposed for insertion in the principal Law and substituting the following-

“(6) The Supervisor shall keep a copy of the return at his office until the close of the poll for the second general election that takes place after the date on which the Supervisor received the return, and at the expiration of that period the Supervisor shall cause the copy of the return to be destroyed.

“(7) Where a provision of this Part would be inconsistent with the register of Interests Law, 1996, the Register of Interests Law, 1996 shall to the extent of the inconsistency prevail over that provision of this Part.”;

The Chairman: The question is that the amendment form part of the Clause. All those in favour please say Aye. Those against, No.

Ayes.

The Chairman: The Ayes have it.

Agreed: Amendments passed.

The Chairman: The question now is that the Clause as amended form part of the Bill. All those in favour please say Aye. Those against, No.

Ayes.

The Chairman: The Ayes have it.

Agreed: Clause 25 as amended passed.

Clause 26 and 27

The Clerk:

Clause 26 Insertion of Part 4A and part 4B – political broadcasts, publication of statistical information.

Clause 27 Amendment of section 72 – intoxicating liquor not to be sold or given.

The Chairman: The question is that Clauses 26 and 27 form part of the Bill. All those in favour please say Aye. Those against, No.

Ayes.

The Chairman: The Ayes have it.

Agreed: Clauses 26 and 27 passed.

The Chairman: I will again take a brief suspension. I think we have an amendment to Clause 28 that is now being circulated.

Proceedings suspended at 2.30 pm

Proceedings resumed at 2.31 pm

The Chairman: Madam Clerk.

Clause 28

The Clerk: Clause 28 Amendment of section 83 – illegal practices and penalties.

The Chairman: The Honourable Leader of Government Business.

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: Mr. Chairman, in accordance with the provisions of Standing Order 52 (1) and (2), I move the following amendment to The Election (Amendment) Bill, 2004, that the Bill be amended in clause 28 (b), in the new section 83 (1a) proposed for insertion in the principal Law by deleting the following words - “or both (unless otherwise expressly provided); and in addition to any other penalty, such person shall be incapable during a period of five years from the date of conviction of being registered as an elector or of voting at any election, or of being a candidate for election to the Assembly, or, if elected before his conviction, of retaining his seat as a member”

The feeling is that the provision in the amendment, which is dealing with minor offences, is draconian and it is already covered in Section 82 for major offences for whoever has been convicted of bribery, treating, undue influence or personating or aiding, abetting, counselling or procuring the commission of any of the said offences. So, it is covered for the major ones and that is how it should be.

The Chairman: The amendment has been duly moved does any Member wish to speak to this? If no Member wish to speak the question is that the amendment forms part of the Clause. All those in favour please say Aye. Those against, No.

Ayes.

The Chairman: The Ayes have it.

Agreed: Amendment passed.

The Chairman: The question now is that the Clause as amended form part of the Bill. All those in favour please say Aye. Those against, No.

The Chairman: The Ayes have it.

Agreed: Clause 28 as amended passed.

Clause 29

The Clerk: Clause 29 Amendment of Section 90 – power to make rules.

The Chairman: The question is that Clause 29 form part of the Bill. All those in favour please say Aye. Those against, No.

Ayes.

The Chairman: The Ayes have it.

Agreed: Clause 29 passed.

Clause 30

The Clerk: Clause 30 Amendment of Second schedule – Forms.

The Chairman: The Honourable Leader of Government Business.

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: Mr. Chairman, the amendment to Clause 30 is for the purpose of retaining the existing nomination Form-16 in the Election Law 2000 (Revision) until the requested amendment to the Constitution of the Cayman Islands is approved. The declaration in relation to not possessing any other citizenship would be invalid. – In clause 30 by deleting paragraph (h).

The Chairman: The question is that the amendment form part of the Second Schedule. All those in favour please say Aye. Those against, No.

Ayes.

FIRST READING

Public Service Pensions (Amendment) Bill, 2004

The Clerk: The Public Service Pensions (Amendment) Bill, 2004.

The Speaker: The Bill was deemed to have been read a first time and is set down for second reading.

SECOND READING

Public Service Pensions (Amendment) Bill, 2004

The Speaker: The Honourable Third Official Member.

Hon. George A. McCarthy: Mr. Speaker, I would like to seek the leave of this Honourable House to defer the debate on the Second Reading of the Public Service Pensions (Amendment) Bill, 2004. The reason being, I would like to take it at the same time that the Parliamentary Pensions (Amendment) Bill is set down to be dealt with. That Bill will be brought to this Honourable House this afternoon. The Senior Legislative Council that worked on the Public Service Pensions Bill is currently working on the Parliamentary Pensions Bill, and as Honourable Member will note, it is the practice of in this House to have the Legislative Council who has dealt with the Bill to be on hand when the Bill is being debated.

The Speaker: The question is that the Second Reading on the Public Service Pensions (Amendment) Bill, 2004 be deferred. As a consequence we cannot go into Committee on it so therefore the deferral would also apply to the Committee Stage on the Bill. All those in favour please say Aye. Those against, No.

Ayes.

The Chairman: The Ayes have it.

Agreed: The Second Reading on the Public Service Pensions (Amendment) Bill, 2004 deferred.

The Speaker: Madam Clerk, we will now move to Item 6 on the Order Paper.

OTHER BUSINESS

PRIVATE MEMBERS' MOTIONS

Private Member's Motion No. 1/04

Reviewing Laws and Policies to enhance the ability of the Royal Cayman Islands Police

The Speaker: Honourable Members the Second Elected Member for West Bay is away on official business but he has requested the Fourth Elected Member from West Bay to carry his Motion through. (I would have checked on those details) I now call on the Fourth Elected Member for West Bay to continue.

Mr. Cline A. Glidden, Jr: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I thank this Honourable House on behalf of my colleague, the Second Elected Member for West Bay, for their assistance in allowing the business to be continued even though he has had to be off the Island on official business.

In speaking to my colleague he felt that he had sufficiently moved the Motion and in the event that he is not here for the winding up or the answer to any questions that may come during the contribution of other Members, I will attempt to do that on his behalf.

The Speaker: Does any other Member wish to speak? Does any other Member wish to speak? Does any other Member wish to speak?

The Second Official Member.

Hon. Samuel W. Bulgin: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I rise to accept the Motion on behalf of the Government and to make a few observations in doing so, with the leave of this House.

In his debate on this Motion the Member covered a number of areas and has made a number of observations on these issues. I would like to say that I have taken a look at the Police Law in preparing to respond to this Motion. It, in part, says that the functions of the police include the maintenance and enforcement of law and order, the preservation of the peace, the protection of life and property, the prevention and detection of crime and apprehension of offenders.

On the issue of the remit and response of police in certain circumstances, I wish to make the observation that sometimes it is really a question of the police trying to determine whether they are empowered to act in certain circumstances and if they are, to what extent are their powers. It is not unusual for police officers to seek clarification from the Government Legal Department on certain issues. I would say that this approach should be encouraged as it helps to clarify their role and the state of the Law as it relates to a particular incident.

Police officers, like most of us, are creatures of statute and their powers and the phase of it are defined and contained in the four corners of the Police Law. I say 'on the face of it' because initially that is how it appears. There are certain powers that the police enjoy, which are not necessarily written in the Police Law. The Common Law is part of our system and there are certain instances where the police, even though the Police Law may not expressly so provide, the police can act in certain circumstances. An example of that is, the police have power which is part of their duty to prevent breach of the peace and the police takes the view that they are not empowered to enter private premises out of fear that they may be held liable for trespass, but the Common Law has always been that if the police has reason to believe that a breach of the peace is about to occur or is taking place, even though it is private premises, the police is empowered to enter those premises and prevent or try to put an end to such breach. If you pick up the Police Law and look in it you would not see that sort of language expressly provided therein, but it is power that the police also enjoy and they need to bear this in mind.

The Member, in his debate, also touched on individuals riding around on pedal cycles with machetes and what appear to be offensive weapons being openly displayed. The position is that the Law has provided certain definitions for offensive and prohibited weapons and there are certain latitude provided to the police in dealing with these matters. If a person is riding around with a machete on his bike and the police have reason to believe that the machete is not being used as part of the person's profession or trade or for domestic use then the Law deems that in those circumstances it might very well be an offensive weapon. It goes further than that. If the police has reason to suspect that the person who is riding that bike or carrying a machete, intends to use it to cause harm to another person, the police does not have to wait for the person to act they are empowered in Law to arrest the person for being in possession of an offensive weapon and to confiscate the weapon pending the outcome of the hearing.

I know as a matter-of-fact that the police are uncertain in most instances dealing with machetes being conveyed in cars or on pedal cycles. It is not unusual for them to call the Legal Department to find out whether they have the power to seize machetes or any such weapons. The law makes it quite clear that unless it is being carried for use in the profession or trade or for domestic use and if the police have reason to believe that it is likely to be used to cause injury to any person then it is deemed to be an offensive weapon and should be confiscated and the person should be arrested in those circumstances.

I am not faulting the police for that but I am saying that maybe what we need to do is to look at the language of the legislation and see where we can make it much clearer so that all can follow readily.

Mr. Speaker, the Member also makes reference to big boom boxes or portable disco techs in cars. I, like all Honourable Members of this House, would readily concede that it is a colossal nuisance and needs to be dealt with. I recall having discussions last year with a certain Chief Inspector of Police on this matter and the instrument that was to be used to measure the decibel levels, and as I speak, I am aware that the issue is under review. I intend to take up the issue again with Chief Inspector Myles to see how we can further advance this matter. It ought to be dealt with because not only is it a danger but it is a nuisance.

On the issue of whether the police has the discretion or whether it should be left to the discretion of the police officer, where there is a serious accident to request samples of breath— I looked at the Traffic Law and it does provide that the police has discretion to do so. I believe that it was deliberately worded that way because it does not follow that if there is a serious accident then one or both drivers are necessarily inebriated or intoxicated. So, I think it is a matter of judgment call for the police who are trained in these matters to determine whether they should ask for a sample.

I take the Members point that maybe it should not be left to the discretion of the police but I would say, at this stage sir that it is something that needs to be looked at a little more carefully. I undertake to have discussions with the Commissioner of Police and Legislative Drafting Department, and certainly with Cabinet colleagues, to see whether it should be a mandatory requirement that samples of breath be taken on every occasion where there is a serious accident.

The other thing I recall from the debate with the Member was that he had touched on the issue of complaints and discipline of police officers, and whether it should be the Governor or the Commissioner of Police who should have the powers to discipline officers of a certain rank once the complaint has been made. He opined in his debate that it should be left to the Commissioner of Police who should be seized with the authority to do so.

I wish to make the observation that there are as many views on that as there are Members in this House; some of us who are of a different school of thought. I will tell you that my personal opinion is that there should be an independent body that is established to deal with complaints against the police; a body of three or four individuals who are not members of the police force or of the Government, but should be a police complaints tribunal authority or something, which would deal with these things. That is my opinion and I have not articulated that in any other forum but the Member from West Bay made the suggestion and we intend to have a look at all of this. May I just add that it is really a matter that comes under the remit of His Excellency the Governor but it is something that has been noted before and one that we intend to look into and take on board the suggestions by the Member in his debate.

The Motion is quite timely. There are weaknesses to be addressed and issues that need to be looked at which would help to enhance the Police crime fighting abilities and I am happy to accept the motion on behalf of Government and to look into these matters and see how we can advance the cause.

Thank you.

The Speaker: Does any other Member wish to speak?

The Second Elected Member for George Town.

Mr Alden M. McLaughlin, Jr: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. When the Second Elected Member for West Bay moved this Motion, I believe it was last Thursday; I was struck with the irony of what was transpiring during the course of the same day. Earlier that morning the Honourable Minister with responsibility for Community Services had read at length, for the best part of an hour, a statement on the accomplishments of the Ministry of Community Services and the Minister spoke at length about the achievements of his Ministry in relation to the question of Social Services and Prison Services and generally spoke, as he likes to say, from a sociological point of view.

[Laughter]

Mr Alden M. McLaughlin, Jr: The Minister outlined many of the programmes and initiatives that his Ministry has undertaken, been involved with and promoted and continued over the course of his three year tenure.

One of the things that the Minister has been fond of saying, not just on that occasion, but in the past, is that the numbers of persons who are incarcerated at Northward Prison and Fairbanks, are on the decline. When his colleague and Back Bench supporter, outlined the basis upon which this Motion is being brought, a motion to review laws and policies to enhance the ability of the Royal Cayman Islands Police, I was struck by two things. One, the approach to dealing with these antisocial issues is markedly different between the Minister and the Second Elected Member for West Bay.

The Minister for Community Services says over and over again—and he has been consistent on this point—is that the answer to most of the problems that we are facing in terms of increase in crime and growing antisocial attitudes, is not by incarcerating people or giving them longer sentences, putting them away. The approach of the Second Elected Member for West Bay seems to be one of enhancing the power of the state and the security services to give the police greater ability to deal with those who do not conform to societal rules, regulations and laws. That again I thought spoke loud and clear as to the certain division in approach between the Government and its supporting Back Bench, at least that Member and presumably the Member who seconded the Motion. It also spoke with certain eloquence about the actual state of affairs that obtains in the Cayman Islands and in particular, West Bay. On the one hand you have the Honourable Minister setting out his accomplishments and painting a picture that the society as a whole has improved generally as a result of his stewardship. On the other hand we have the Second Elected Member for West Bay saying and setting out in great detail the fact that the use of drugs and the violent crime, and the attendant to other offences of burglary and threatening violence, and those sorts of offences have increased in West Bay, to a point where they believe that the police need additional powers and abilities to be able to cope with the growing crime wave.

So, the Government needs to decide what the position is. We cannot on the same day have the Minister boasting about his accomplishments saying that the incarceration figures are down and that generally speaking, the overall social position in these Islands has improved, then have his supporting Back Bench Members to approve a motion to give the police more power to cope with growing crime in West Bay.

The Speaker: Honourable Member would you please give me a minute.

I would like to let all members in the precincts, whether you are sitting in the gallery or within the Chambers, to know that you must obey the normal decorum in the Chambers. Thus there will be no answering of phones or eating while sitting in the gallery whether you are members of the Press or otherwise. I expect the same decorum from you as I expect from the Members within the immediate Chambers.

Please continue Second Elected Member for George Town.

Mr Alden M. McLaughlin, Jr: Mr. Speaker, I was saying that the sort of approach and forked tongue with which the Government speaks is further evidence of the schizophrenic nature of this Government. I would ask that at some point the real Government stand up and say what the true position in relation to crime in this country is.

I have spent a lot of time with police officers socially over the course of many years and I do it quite often, so I generally have a feel for how the rank and file within the police force are feeling about their job and the situations in the Islands generally. My assessment is that at this point the police are generally happy with the way things are going and with the legislation they have, which enables them to carry out their duties.

They have concerns about lack of certain equipment, particularly safety equipment, and the situation they have to face in Cayman becomes increasingly more violent and those concerns grow. However, they believe that they are properly staffed and are concerned about not having sufficient vehicles and vehicles that can give good service and are in good condition. However, from my assessment and discussions with police officers the police are generally satisfied with their ability to carry out their job. I have not heard officers complain about not having the legal jurisdiction to arrest people or to enter premises or confiscate offensive or dangerous weapons. I have not heard those sorts of complaints at all. I am not saying that they do not exist but I am not aware of them.

We have to balance in this country like everywhere else, the rights of the individual and be careful that we do not create situations whereby people start to believe that perhaps this is the beginning of the a police state and the police have too much power, that they are oppressive and not friends of the people.

I am not at all averse to us reviewing the laws and policies but I would caution us against creating a situation where the legislation and thereby the Police may be accused of being overbearing. We need to continue to have the check of the legislation and of the courts to ensure that access to people's premises is not generally available in all circumstances. There is a good reason why there are search warrants and why a certain hurdle has to be overcome before a magistrate or Justice of the Peace will sign a search warrant in certain circumstances. It is because we need to continue to ensure that the fundamental rights of people to privacy to the sanctity of their homes is not just washed away in this effort to ensure that no criminal gets away. We have to balance those competing interests and that is what the current legislation and the Common Law has developed over times.

Yes, there are times and circumstances when one needs to enhance security when there are threats and we have seen with the tragic events of 9/11 and all that have followed from that, that circumstances will dictate how much liberty people have, how far the state is prepared to go to invade those fundamental rights to ensure the overall safety of the nation. I acknowledge that but I do not think that we are at that stage in Cayman. I would really caution this Honourable House that when we are looking at the Laws and policies, as the Second Elected Member for West Bay has asked that we do, to bear in mind the importance of those principles; the sanctity of ones home and ones person that the police have an important function and role to play but there ought to be certain basic triggers, which are in place before anyone is open to just indiscriminate search and seizure.

I believe that generally speaking the legislation that obtains in Cayman coupled with the Common Law do provide that necessary balance with the Court sitting as arbiter. I am not convinced by anything that the Second Elected Member for West Bay has said in saying that we are in grave risk of being overrun by the criminal element because the police do not have the necessary equipment or the supporting legislation to enable them to carry out their job properly. I think that sometimes we cause the police not to exercise their own judgement and discretion because we are so critical of what they do.

The Honourable Minister for Community Services has a book called "The Death of Common Sense" and I think that is often what is overlooked when we give people jobs to do. All Legislatures are far too prone to seek to remove any element of discretion of good judgement of the exercise of common sense from persons who are required to carry out various functions and duties under the laws.

I hear talk about the need for the Legislature to increase sentences in relation to certain offences and essentially to tie the hands of the Judiciary because we supposedly, who sit here in this Honourable House know better than the judges what sentences should be given for certain offences. I know first hand that any Judiciary deeply resents that sort of encroachment on the exercise of their discretion and their judgment. As far as the police are concerned often we are far too critical and too willing to say what ought to happen. The Second Elected Member for West Bay spoke about the question on whether or not someone should be breathalysed following a serious car accident. He suggested in his debate that it ought to be a matter of law. That again removes any exercise of judgment or discretion on the part of the police.

We have to understand that when we invest people with responsibility and authority they are not robots and if we want people to carry out jobs properly we have to give them the ability and support to make professional judgment in relation to matters otherwise we demean the office they hold, they believe that their views do not really matter in the exercise of what they are doing and they are bound to have less pride in the job that they carry out. There has to be an element of exercise of common sense. If common sense is dead, as the book that the Minister has seems to suggest, we ought not to be burying it. If there is somewhere that it can be resuscitated, invigorated and given a second life then that is what we ought to be doing.

The Second Elected Member for West Bay also spoke about the inability of the police to clear property in which criminal activity is being perpetrated. There is a piece of legislation called the Town and Communities Law, which I think is Law 7 of 1895, if I remember correctly, that allows the clearing of property when there is a perceived nuisance. We need not go across special legislation to clear a couple pieces of property in West Bay; there is legislation which provides a basis for it, but you have to follow the process.

I am alarmed that West Bay has been experiencing such a crime wave. I say that the Second Elected Member for West Bay and his colleagues ought not to have left the situation until now before any action is attempted to try to address these concerns. There are clearly fundamental issues at work in Cayman generally, but specifically, in West Bay which this Government seems to have been either unwilling or unable to properly address. Here we are now three and a half months before the general elections debating a motion brought by the Second Elected Member for West Bay to review laws and policies to enhance the ability of the Royal Cayman Islands Police to deal with these issues.

It reads “BE IT RESOLVED THAT Government consider reviewing applicable laws and policies to enhance the ability of the Royal Cayman Islands Police to more effectively and safely carry out their duties.” If I were a cynic I would conclude that the purpose of that Motion was simply to create a platform to be able to articulate concerns about the district of West Bay and to create the impression that the Government was really concerned about these issues and is doing everything it could to ensure that things were put right.

Mr. Speaker, I have listened very carefully to what the Honourable Second Official Member has said and though he couched it in more diplomatic terms than I will, sitting where I am, I believe that he too is concerned to ensure that we do not so inhibit the ability of the Police to be able to deal with these matters, to tie their hands in the exercise of discretion. That he is also concerned that we do not upset a balance that has been established over a long period of time.

With him on that side and having expressed those views I do derive some degree of comfort that nothing too radical or extraordinary is likely to emanate from the Government Bench in terms of an amendment bill. Perhaps with having the benefit of his sage advice and following his restraint, the other more zealous Members of the Government might be persuaded that we need not create a police state in order to seek to address some of these growing problems in relation to crime in the Cayman Islands generally.

Mr. Speaker, there is no doubt in my mind nor do I believe there ought to be any doubt in anyone's mind that while the overall statistics might indicate, as the Minister for Community Services has indicated, that the number of crimes are on the decline. There are a number of offences that are clearly on the increase and are causing great concern to members of the community and to the police.

The Minister for Education has said that gangs are no longer an issue in the schools. That maybe the case, although I do not think that is entirely true, but the activities that were carried on by school gangs are on the decline within schools but what is clear is that over the course of the four years that this House has served the incidents of gang activity and violent crimes involving even death have significantly increased. I am not attempting to lie that at the foot of the Honourable Minister but it is a symptom of the society in which we live. The Minister was appointed as a chairman of a committee before he was a Minister to examine the causes of youth violence. I have forgotten exactly what the name of the committee was; it was rather a long name. I know he carried out various enquiries and sessions with persons and he produced a report.

We have had violent gang related deaths in Cayman, but in particular, George Town in the recent past. I myself have attended two such funerals and in each instance I left there so distressed, worried and concerned about the future of this country and the young people that in both instances I had to go home and lie down. The last one, in particular, that I attended, I believe I was the only Elected Member there, I did the obituary and I spoke to those people and I know that I upset some of them because word came back to me, about the consequences of living this kind of lifestyle that this is how it is going to end. To see how unrepentant members of one gang were, touch me to my core. I experienced fear, concern, grief, every range of emotion you can consider except anything that feels good, to see them sitting there in their regalia staring me and the rest of the platform down as they laid to rest one of their soldiers.

As a Caymanian—forget for the moment of my being a representative—that gave me a feeling I cannot describe. The fact that two persons died in that spate; that we put in a police post there temporarily, which calmed the situation down and which to a large extent have quelled the anxieties of those good people who live in that neighbourhood is a good thing, but the underlying problems, cancer which is there in relation to the drug trade and to gangs is still there. So, we ought not to pretend for a moment that this has all gone away because things are quite. Those of us who move about in this country and frequent local places and talk to the ordinary folk, as I know the Minister does, understand that there are still fundamental underlying problems.

So, Mr. Speaker, while we really ought to support any measure which will allow the police within reason to be able to deal with these things, the answers to the fundamental problems do not lie, in my view, in an increased police presence or a heavily armed police force, or a police who have an enhanced ability to walk into people's homes and search people indiscriminately. The problems which are fermenting and have been fermenting for many years have, as the Minister for Community Services has said, a deeper more inherent basis. This superficial approach of the Second Elected Member for West Bay to enhance the abilities of the police is not going to address the problem. It may temporarily frighten certain elements that might change their tactics or adopt a lower profile for the time being until they understand how the system goes and how it works, but it is not going to address the fundamental problems which are sociological problems.

In the Royal Cayman Islands Police Service's Annual Report 2002 which we have just received, the police have spoken about the increase of certain offences. They talk about domestic violence, page 36, paragraph 33; "Unfortunately, the year in review saw a significant increase in the number of reported incidents of domestic violence for the year. There were 1,517 compared to 1,211 in 2001, which was an increase of 25.2%." Paragraph 34; "Whilst a number of these domestic violence incidents did not involve any physical abuse, there were 2 incidents in which there were attempts to murder the victims and 6 in which grievous bodily harm was inflicted. In these cases, sentences of imprisonment ranging from 5 to 7 years were given to the perpetrators. In addition to these incidents there was, regrettably, a significant overall increase in the number of occasions in which the victims received injuries of varying degrees of seriousness. Assaults causing actual bodily harm rose from 10 in 2001 to 299 in 2002 and wounding rose from 3 in 2001 to 5 in 2002."

Mr. Speaker, there is evidence of an increase in seriousness offences, in particular, violent offences. There is also evidence of an increase in sexual offences. Paragraph 56 of the Royal Cayman Police Service Annual Report 2002 states as follows: "During 2002, young girls continue to be sexually preyed on by older men. There was a marked increase in the number of reported incidents of Defilement of girls under the age of 16 years. There were 27 such incidents being reported in 2002 compared to 19 in 2001. Two of the victims were girls under the age of 12 years. Alarming, the ages of the perpetrators of these defilement cases continue to rise with men as old as 37 cultivating sexual relationships with girls as young as 11 years. In addition to the defilement cases, there was one report of a case of 'gang' rape of a 13 year-old girl. Other matters which the Family Support Unit dealt with were 2 cases of Incest and 14 cases of Indecent Assault against girls under the age of 16 years and 1 case of Gross Indecency against a boy under 14 years."

While one can perhaps paint a prettier picture by going to the fact that there is an overall reduction in offences, the reality of the Cayman in which we live is that serious crimes, particularly crimes against the person, are on the increase and arming the Police with more guns and with greater abilities to go into people's homes, without a warrant is not going to address those fundamental problems.

There is no magic wand or silver bullet to deal with this problem, and I am not suggesting that the Honourable Minister is responsible for these increases; I am just seeking to deal with the assertion or the image that things are better because clearly they are not. There may be less people in Northward, and that is a good thing perhaps, but the incidents of serious crime is on the increase and those sorts of problems to which I just referred are problems that go to the core, to the heart and to the being of the society. The increase of sexual predators, the increase in violent crime all speak to some serious problems within the family unit and society as a whole.

While I, like the Second Elected Member for West Bay, have grave concern about the state of this country and the growing increase in serious crime, I do not believe that simply reviewing the laws as the Second Elected Member for West Bay has suggested, with a view to enhancing the ability of the police is going to answer the fundamental problems. I am all for giving the Police whatever equipment they need; I know there are safety gear that they are concerned about, those who have to go into difficult situations ought to be given as much protection as they can get. They need to have the support of the establishment and the society to enable them to do the job that they are bound and required to do.

I would not wish for anything that I have said to be construed as unwillingness on my part or on the part of the Opposition to support the police in carrying out their lawful duties but I am equally anxious to ensure that civil society does not begin to feel that it is being subjected to oppressive and boundless actions or actions that do not have any legal parameters by the police in carrying out their duties. I would not want us to go down the road of creating something which some might consider and seize upon as the beginning of a police sort of state approach to it. Cayman has always been known—there are always questions, concerns and criticisms about the judicial system and the police force. I believe that we have a very good system, a time tested system, a system based on due process. Sometimes the system does not work as good as it ought to but everyone, everything and every system have some fallibility. I believe that we ought to be concentrating principally on trying to root out and find out what it is that is causing the increases in serious offences in these Islands and seek to address those sorts of things.

In terms of drugs, we need to place more emphasis on what is now termed demand reduction and the various programmes that we are doing, the Quest Programme, which I am very familiar with as a Lion; the 'DARE', which I know the police are doing; all to teach the youngsters in our society the dangers that are inherent in taking a certain path in developing a certain lifestyle. I believe that we ought to be trying to focus more of our energies and more of Government's resources on these sorts of preventative programmes rather than creating a situation where what we believe is going to keep people from engaging in this sort of behaviour is a heavily armed and always present police force.

Mr. Speaker, I believe I have traversed all the areas of this that I would like to. I am sorry that the Second Elected Member for West Bay will not be here himself to respond but no doubt his colleagues on the other side will be able to do so properly. I hope that they have taken on board what I have said and that they viewed what I have said as constructive, and that when they get up to respond they will be able to have given some thought and some analysis to the overall situation and perhaps the matter might move from simply being a platform for essentially a good discussion on matters such as these just prior to the elections to something where we might actually be able to achieve some positive result.

I thank you, Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: Does any other Member wish to Speak?

The Honourable Minister for Community Services.

Dr. the Hon. Frank S. McField: Mr. Speaker, it would appear that some great wind blowing in fresh servility has entered these Chambers.

Listening to the Second Elected Member from George Town saying some very constructive things and at the same time mooting in fact that perhaps the Government could do more, but not recognising the fact that even from a legal perspective you cannot blame the Government of this country and you cannot blame the present administration of this country for the fact that it seeks to produce the number of inmates in Northward Prison and that we view the decrease as something that is positive.

We know the 1999 riots (according to the experts who did the evaluation of the causes leading up to the 1999 riots) were caused mainly as a result of overcrowding. The Government, of course, has choices and we could take the monies that we spend in giving increases to the old aged persons in our society, seamen and others and we could build prisons to hold young people, or we could try by our social strategies to reduce the numbers of persons reaching our prisons and the number of recidivism which we encounter.

We must always bear in mind by using our common sense that each Government and country only has so much available and that at no particular time will we be living in a utopia. No society will be without a social individuals and actions. We have tried to stress that we are seeking ways to manage the social development and the social crisis in our society so as to minimise the cost which it has to those individuals and to our society as a whole, but in no way are we pretending that by reducing the numbers at Northward that there might not be manifestations of a social and criminal behaviour in other areas.

We are not saying that the numbers at Northward reflect the criminal activities of the society; we are saying it reflects the fact that our orientation and belief is that we are not solving the problem simply by locking people up. Regardless of how many people will try to knock me in the head to get me to change, I think it is common sense, it has been proven all over the world through the ages that prison, by itself, does not act as a deterrent to persons who are already misguided, who already have wrong values as a result of the primary and secondary socialisation.

We are not saying that people who are misguided should not be punished we are simply stating that once you punish them you have still not corrected their misguided values. Simply, that is what I have been trying to communicate to this Honourable House and to this country.

I do not think that I have a conflict with the Second Elected Member from West Bay simply because he is calling for the Government to consider ways of strengthening the laws in such a way that the police would have an easier job or be more efficient or effective in dealing with a job, or dealing with those persons who commit crime. My job is not the job of the person responsible for policing policies; I am responsible for social policies which takes place before and after policing.

We feel that if we do our jobs well enough from the social point, the police will have an easier job. So, we have emphasised to the Government that they should put more resources in prevention and intervention strategies, therefore our housing community projects and the whole idea of trying to regenerate the kind of sharing/caring communities that we have would help to mitigate against those individuals that would be thinking about committing crimes or having or feeling that they have a need to commit crime.

Mr. Speaker, I think that we are doing this but at the same time our Government believes that the Police should be given more or as much support as they can be given in order to fight crime. We understand that we live in a democracy and in a democracy people have certain rights and you cannot violate those rights even if you want to safeguard your own safety. That is the unfortunate part of being free because it means that you take a certain amount of risks with your brothers and sisters that you live with in society. So, it is true that in our society the police always react. In many cases crimes are committed then the police go after the criminals because they are not criminals until they have actually done something that is criminal.

In many instances we fail to understand or notice that the police are also very much involved in protective and intervention strategies in terms of deterring people from committing crimes by actually being involved with the community and in trying to get positive values and norms across to the young people. We see this with the DARE programmes which the police are involved with in the primary schools and they are beginning to try and teach and guide young people from a very early age. So, preventative work is a very important part of policing. Information gathering is also a very important part of policing. So, the police, from an intelligence perspective, are always involved in gathering information and profiling potential criminals and criminals, in order that should there be an attempt to commit crime that they have a possibility to intercede at a much faster rate and solve the problems with regards to acts that have been committed.

If the Second Elected Member from West Bay is asking that the Government consider ways to assist the police in doing their jobs and being able to deal with some of these issues, I am quite sure that what the Second Elected Member from West Bay is dealing with is specifically the issue of what the Second Elected Member from George Town was suggesting. Although we know that there is a decrease in criminal activity it does not necessarily mean that there has not been an increase in serious crimes. So, just like the Second Elected Member from George Town has noticed that and has shared that with this Honourable House, we are saying that the Second Elected Member from West Bay is also aware of the fact that there are certain crimes occurring and the police needs to be given additional assistance, and if he is saying some legal assistance in dealing with this then we are not going to fault him for saying so; we are not going to suggest that he trying to create a police state nor are we going to say that he is interfering in the jurisdiction of the courts because the laws that guide the Courts are made here in this Parliament and not in the Courts.

It is true that drugs are responsible for the most serious crimes in our society. It is true that in the district of West Bay they have particular issues with the trafficking, use and sale of drugs and that the drugs subculture that has built in that community is also policed by a criminal element that takes control of those particular substances and creates policing problems. So, to say that if we have a rise in serious crime, namely robberies and murders, that the society is alarmed. This does not necessarily mean that we are not doing a good job in terms of the more gentle type of socialisation and persuasion and policing; it does not mean that, but we do recognise at the same time the serious criminals are not people who grew up overnight. Serious criminals start to display their criminal characteristics from the time they are in primary school and they were people who were not caught by the system as the system was organised before we came on the scene. So, they are out there and they are not going to go away and perhaps what the Second Elected Member from West Bay is suggesting is that we need to get serious about that particular element and we need to do something to remove them from our society one way or the other.

I do not think anybody in this society would be opposed to the fact that we need to be serious about these types of persons because these types of persons, as the Second Elected Member from George Town stated, they are of a particular mentality that offends, him, me, the Second Elected Member from West Bay and all of us. There is no way that we can be on par with them in any way, there is no way that we can have sympathy for them; they are not even the people we are trying to rehabilitate through our soft, gentle and persuasive policies. These are not the people we are talking about. We have to decide that criminals and criminals have to be categorised in such a way that we say these are the ones we are going to try to rehabilitate and these are the ones that we are going to put aside and deal with because they are not willing to be repentant. They are not willing to respect society; they are not willing to respect their brothers and sisters and therefore there is only one way that you can deal with these types of people.

If I had the money there would be a separate prison for them; they would not even mix with the others that we are trying to do something with. We understand that we cannot throw away 100 per cent of those persons who have gone bad because many of them will be able to do better with assistance, but it is that per cent that you can do absolutely nothing with. These are the ones who continue to commit the crimes in our society; continue to commit and manage the most violent crimes in our society and I believe that the Second Elected Member from West Bay is addressing this issue. What are we going to do to give the police the kind of powers which they need to deal with these rotten apples before they get our country to the extent that we see in other places in the world? These people control and intimidate everybody. They intimidate everybody; they are out there. Some of them are in jail but a lot of them are out there and even when they are in jail they have ways of dealing with the jails so that they can continue to communicate. I apologise to the general public for the fact that I have not found a way of being able to get those persons who are in control to be of one mind and be able to have a regime that would shut them out from the decent community that we represent.

I will say this, Mr. Speaker, the police are afraid in certain instances and that is one of the reasons why we think that the fact is that perhaps we may want to have a bit more support for them from the point of view of them getting enough bullet proof vests; we might want to think about some police having access to guns a bit more readily rather than going through the procedure to produce the weapons, simply because we know that many of the persons tell us that they bury their weapons so close to where they operate that they can get them easily and have no problems in getting these weapons.

So, I am saying that when the question to this House is being asked in the way in which the Second Elected Member from West Bay asked and that is "BE IT RESOLVED THAT Government consider reviewing applicable laws and policies to enhance the ability of the Royal Cayman Islands Police to more effectively and safely carry out their duties." When we use the words "safely carry out their duties" I am thinking of the fact that it would mean from a law perspective that we give them the benefit of the doubt when it comes to confrontations. He also is foreseeing that if they challenge certain criminals in certain areas the result of that would be armed confrontations. We are looking of the growth of trees and bush in certain areas where people hang out to do what they do and again it becomes very dangerous for police to go in there especially when people know the area a little better than they do. Again, he is talking in terms of, could it be in the law that they would be required to keep the property at a certain level.

I think that the Second Elected Member from George Town mentioned the Towns and Community Law, of course, which might already have given us the possibility to do that, but I think what is happening is that we are sharing with one another, to a certain extent, the need for us to recognise that although the Government is doing a good job after three years in terms of addressing some of the more serious issues in the country; although the Government continues to build the infrastructure to be able to address issues of addiction, issues of recidivism and crime and juvenile delinquency, there are some serious problems that the country did not manage over the period that persons like myself were not allowed to talk about—social plans and issues. Those problems have given us the serious criminals we have in our society today. These serious criminals need to be dealt with and if there is anything that any of us can think about of how to make this happen, this would be the time for us to suggest it.

I know that we have advocated and when I say "we" I mean the Minister of Education has been advocating this before I entered this Parliament, where there are sub police stations/sub, sub police stations; those police stations are so sub that you may find that they are little boxes where the person might be contained in or can be safe in and you have these posts. It is not a situation of the British style policing where you are waiting at the station for a call and as soon as you get the call you move out to the area and by the time you get there everything has already moved; the criminal moves. Whereas if you have someone there until the majority of the troops get there then you know that you are in a strategic position to accomplish something. There are certain risks to officers who are in these situations, but the point is, it is known that they will see and hear something and you do not have to start from the beginning when your police officers get there because you have the advantage of being on the turf at that particular time.

We saw the example of what happened in the Scranton area with the police being allowed to use the Arthur Martin Creative Empowerment Youth Centre. We saw that immediately it meant that the activities that were going on there ceased and people had to go find other areas. The point is, we are not saying that because the police go there that crime is no longer, but we say that we put the criminal on guard to know that the criminal is at least prohibited from committing crime in that specific area and they have to go someplace else, and you keep moving after them until you minimise the areas that they can operate in or from, and that in itself is an accomplishment. I still believe that it goes to show that people are going to do things that are bad when the police are not around but if you can have a few police men around it would cause people to think twice about doing something like that.

I am saying that if we are looking at ways to improve the way in which the police can do the jobs, we will be looking at recommending, at least, to the people who are responsible for policing in this country, that what we need to be doing is setting up these small police areas. We have also suggested— why is it that we have to always have police as regular police? Why can we not have police as people from the community as well? We have the Special Constabulary but we are talking about going one step beyond that. We are talking about one or two persons in the neighbourhood, a little bit more than Neighbourhood Watch because it is formalised a little bit more, even if you have to give some people in the neighbourhood a formal title and a stipend. People talk about informants well these would be informants that are wearing a badge or uniform and are recognised and not the underground informants.

There is no society that is going to deal effectively with crime without people watching people and until we get to the point to understand that if we want to be safe we have to allow people to spy on other people. That is the price you have to pay. The trust between the police and the general public will develop as the result of people actively working alongside of the police in the community.

Most democracies in the world suffer from the same crime; you do not see the crimes in the more totalitarian states. I am not taking up the position as someone who wants a police state but I am saying to you that the crimes exist in the so-called capitalist democracies where people think that their individual rights means so much. At the end of the day they complain about crime but as soon as you do the watch they say: "What are you doing outside my neighbourhood and what are you doing this for and why are the police here? Let them go!", then when crime increases it is the Government that is responsible for crime. I am saying that we could minimise crime by minimising the areas that criminals could effectively operate from providing that we are willing to spend money in enlisting people in the communities in a real crime watch force, meaning that we would give people some kind of badge, respect and a title. They are called in other places "Secret Police". From the point of politics it is a completely different thing but if you are talking about crime and if you have a few secret police in the area from the point of view of crime and not from the point of view of politics, then that is a good idea. After a while people do not feel as safe in the neighbourhood doing the things that they want to do.

One of the things that we also saw going on in Scranton is that a lot of the people in the area were complaining about what was going on and a lot of us saw it. The Second Elected Member from George Town is laughing but he has been there a lot of times and seen it, he knew what was going there too but it continues. It continues because the people do not feel they have the support. If you have people in the community who are like leaders in resisting and fighting against crime and taking an active role then you will find that the confidence of the community will be higher therefore the trust in the police will also be higher.

The issue of the code of silence where people feel that if they say something they are going to offend family and friends and you are going to send somebody to jail or hurt somebody, or ruin their life by sending them to jail; there is a whole dynamic here and many times there is not enough sociology applied when dealing with the issue of crime, criminal activities and policing. When we get Community Beat Officers and we are paying them to go into the Community what is that if it is not the same idea? What about a person who is already in the community who does not need to get to know the community because he or she already knows the community, being brought forward to the police? Sometimes we have the problem that in order to be a police officer you have to have a particular kind of qualification; you have to know how to right essays and know how to do this or that. Do you know the amount of people who have lost the possibility of being policemen in this country because they could not pass the English test but could pass every other test? So, there are also people who have been in trouble when they were younger and could not make it into the police but there are strong men in our community who would take up a much more active role in policing if they were encouraged to see how they could be officially integrated and a stipend given to them for whatever they are doing.

So, 'yes', if what we are talking about in this Motion is looking at how the Law or how the approach to entire policing could be altered in order for this to be done more effectively and safer. These are ways I suggest again, that our greatest asset when it comes to policing is through members of the community that is being policed. I think that it would be good if we would look in this particular way to try to solve these problems.

I also noticed that the Second Elected Member from George Town mentioned the gangs at the schools and that the Minister for Education said that they were no longer a problem. What the Minister of Education is saying is that there are always gangs in schools. We could call them groups but the natural thing is that people gang or come together. It is a natural impulse that we have. We are social animals and come together, group or behave in a particular way but it does not mean that it has to be negative or encourage negative values or activities— positive peer.

For persons who look at gangs and ask: "How do you get rid of a gang?" You do not try to get rid of a gang but you try to change the values and orientation so rather than them being a negative group, they are a positive group doing positive things involved. If three or four kids hang out together and are with one another all the time, are they a gang? They become a gang when they start to operate in a particular manner based on a kind of structure and philosophy. When they structure themselves and operate in a particular way. The transition from group to gang could be overnight. So, if something at the school were to flare up tomorrow it would not necessarily mean that the Minister would have been wrong in saying that at this particular time we do not have a problem with this issue. It is very possible for them to make that transition depending upon many things.

The Commission of Enquiry into social breakdown and youth violence found that it is very difficult to say at what time you are going to have an upsurge in gang violence because it is hard to predict it. So, the recommendations is that we always be vigilant because it could always happen so we always set in motion things that would prevent it from happening because it could happen overnight; they do not need ten years to organise because they, in their very social existence, have all the tools and characteristics of what we would call a gang. Therefore it is when they begin to act a certain way that it has an adverse effect on society.

In closing, it is good to hear the Second Elected Member from George Town speak so calmly when addressing a Government's Motion. Although he is saying that the Member bringing the Motion and myself might be in disagreement because he thinks that I am peddling a liberal philosophy and the other Member is peddling a more reactionary philosophy. I say to the Member from George Town that is not the case. I peddle a liberal philosophy for those people whom I can help and I peddle a different philosophy for those people we have decided that we cannot help because they do not want us to help them; they think the greatest help is to rob and kill people. So, I do not have the philosophy that will hand out the same humanity to them. I hand out humanity to those people who are looking to society for some type of help when it comes to changing their lives and to realising their full human potential. We see them as fathers, brothers, sisters and as people we should continue to try and help. However, for those persons that are on the level that we are talking about when it comes to this Law, then I think that we must always hunt them out and always make the community and society stronger in being able to stand up to them and give the police the kind of information which they need to get to them and do what they have to do in order to protect the society.

Thank you.

The Speaker: Does any other Member wish to speak?

The Elected Member for East End.

Mr. V. Arden McLean: Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

The Minister in closing sounded like one of my very good friends who is a former legislator when he said that there is a generation we had to right off in this country because they do not want and accept any assistance from anyone—I did not say that is what he meant but it sounded so much like that.

I understand where he is coming from because there are a number of people in this country, particularly in the drug trade that we cannot help in any manner because they do not wish in any way to be helped and certainly the police is the buffer between them and us. I believe it is incumbent upon us to ensure that the police is properly tooled to carry out their respective responsibilities.

The record will speak for itself that ever since coming to this Honourable House I have advocated the police being given better tools to do their jobs and I have not reneged on that and I continue to hold fast that is one of the answers to the reduction in crime in this country.

It was interesting to look at the crime statistics in the Police Report of 2002, particularly how crimes reported and detected were related in that whilst 2002 the crimes reported and detected overall was lower. In all instances the relationship between those reported and those detected, the detected crimes have been much lower than those reported in 2001. So it something tells me that the Police do not have the necessary tools to detect some of these crimes.

It was interesting to look at the offences involving drugs (ganja and cocaine). In 2001 there were 647 offences reported involving ganja and 647 detected also. Offences involving cocaine were 409 reported and 409 detected. I cannot say one way or the other what that reflects and when we look at miscellaneous drug offences there were 146 reported and 146 detected. Then in 2002 when we look at the drug related crimes, the ones involving ganja 464 were reported and 458 detected, and with cocaine 302 reported and 293 detected. The miscellaneous drug offences was 68 reported and 67 detected. I am not trying to make a big spin out of that but we see the crimes reported have decreased and those detected have decreased, but the correlation between them compared with the previous year, there seems to be a reduction in those that were detected by the police. How that happened is not for me to say.

For four years I have been calling, as I said before, for the necessary tools for the police. The introduction of the Second Elected Member from West Bay was primarily surrounding drugs and what we need to do to assist the police to detect and remove people from neighbourhoods and the likes, like clearing vacant lots and the likes.

I support what the Second Elected Member from West Bay said however, the people of East End and I have also experienced an increase in the use of drugs. It is not going to be reported in the Police Report but everybody knows that there is a problem. In 2002 during my absence from the country the Minister for Community Services went on television and said that I was doing nothing about it. So, we all know that there is a problem with regards to drugs in East End. However, the use of drugs in East End is not as rampant and dangerous as the importation through East End. The reason for that is the deserted and uninhabited coastline we have. We know it is happening; every brother and his sister know that this is one of the main sources of importation into this country. They have become very brazen with it because they come right up to the Government Dock and unload it. I am not saying anything that is not true and that the people of East End do not know but the truth must be told.

I too, like the Second Elected Member from West Bay, have worked along with the police, I have people in the police force that I trust, but in the absence of the necessary tools to assist the police officers they can only respond to very little that is happening to prevent the importation of drugs along that deserted coastline. The district of North Side also experienced this as well, maybe not as much as East End because we have the channels which are much more accessible to the Sound than North Side has.

I have called for more boats, for aircrafts, and for bullet proof vests for the Police Force. If we cannot give a man the tools to do his job we cannot blame him for not doing his job.

The Speaker: Honourable Members we have reached the hour of 4.30 pm and I call on the Honourable Leader of Government Business to move the suspension of Standing Order 10(2) to allow us to continue with the debate on this Motion or until 5 pm whichever is earlier.

Suspension of Standing Order 10(2)

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: Mr. Speaker, I move for the suspension of Standing Order 10(2) in order to take business after 4.30 pm. We will continue until 5 pm.

The Speaker: The question is that the Standing Order 10(2) be suspended to allow for the proceedings to continue until 5 pm or the earlier completion of this Motion. All those in favour please say Aye. Those against, No.

Ayes.

The Speaker: The Ayes have it.

Agreed. Standing Order 10 (2) suspended.

The Speaker: Please continue Honourable Member for East End.

Mr. V. Arden McLean: Mr. Speaker, when we stopped for the suspension I was talking about tools for the police officers. I am no expert on this but I am nevertheless convinced that with the availability of the necessary tools the police in this country would be better equipped and more efficient in the detection and interception of boats, aircrafts or whatever is being used for the importation of drugs.

It is incumbent upon us as legislators to take monies from the people of this country to be utilised in their best interest. I believe that monies spent on the necessary tools for the police force of this country is money well spent. If we spend $10 million and save one child's life it is money well spent. If it cost $2 million of recurrent expenditures each year to maintain this equipment, it is money well spent. I have always said that a helicopter can serve more functions than just drug interdiction. For instance someone lost at sea or on land, general searches or for whatever, even transportation for the Commissioner and other officers, surveillance.

We must wake up and smell the roses in our country and start doing something about putting the mechanisms in place for the preservation of our people. I cannot, in all honesty, stand here and blame the Government over there because successive Governments have done nothing to put the proper tools in the hands of the police. I can blame the Government of the day when the now Minister for Health and I moved the Motion in Finance Committee in 2001 to give to the police bullet proof vests made from Kevlar and that was a motion for every police officer to have. To this day I do not believe that has been completed. The officers of the Drugs Task Force are in harms way everyday. We cannot expect our police officers who are on the front-line to forever put their lives on the line without the necessary tools to get the job done, and they have their children and families to go home to.

Mr. Speaker, if you notice I am not going into the legal aspect of this as the Second Elected Member from George Town and the Second Official Member did because that has been covered. I am talking about the physical tools necessary and I know the Minister of Education has said that we talk about the physical plant, but in this sense with regards to the police the physical plant is absolutely necessary. If we think that those criminals out there who are in the drug trade, in particular, if we think they are not armed then we should think back about a year and a half ago when they started shooting at the police boat that was in chase around the East End coast. If we think that they are not as well armed as our police force, which is our only means of protection then we are making a big mistake.

The world knows this drug trade makes more money than any government anywhere in the world; they have their own armies. I trust that we will never reach that point here but if anyone for a second thinks that they are not going to protect their trade then they have made a big mistake. If they are going to protect their trade then we have to protect our policemen that we put on the frontline to protect us. It is fair, reasonable and expected of this country regardless of which government sits in those seats across this isle.

It was interesting for me to read the Mayor of New York, Rudy Giuliani's book entitled Leadership. One of his greatest achievements in New York was the reduction of crime and it was very interesting to read his autobiography, particularly the area of how he reduced crime.

I mentioned this to a senior Police Officer but was told that hopefully one day we will get a similar system. What Giuliani did was that he developed a computer programme which the New York Police Department did input of every crime that was committed in that city, granted that they did not have a base to compare it to so it took a few years for them to get a base in able to compare it to. They then took reports from that computer programme and went out and saw where the reported and detected crimes were being committed and they started targeting those areas and it was not anything about only the areas where murders were being committed but it was the small petty crimes like someone speeding, someone breaking a glass in a building and they starting setting police in these neighbourhoods and anyone who committed a crime was arrested. Petty crimes will stop it from escalating into major crimes thus his success over the eight years as Mayor of New York.

We need to give the police of this country the necessary tools to have their statistics available. Yes, I see the statistics of the police reports but certainly when we see a report for 2002 being completed in 2004 obviously they do not have the necessary tools available to get that information in a timely manner, immediately, in order for them to make necessary plans and be more efficient and get out there and target those petty crimes.

When one commits petty crimes like speeding or vandalism (breaking one or two windows) they start thinking that they can get away with that. We know that it is going to escalate and get bigger and bigger and in a society like ours we are saddled with a situation where everybody knows everybody else and we run the risk that they are not going to report your crime.

I think this is a good point to talk about the trust between the police and the public. I said earlier that we are trying to develop trust between the new police officers in East End and the general public. I would love to see this trust developed so that the general public knows that if they call—and the police has made every effort to try and develop that by the Crime Stoppers Hotline but there is a certain element of mistrust in the people of this country which prevents the police from getting the assistance which they require. I agree with the Minister for Community Services, we need to be spying on each other to ensure that our safety is put in place.

We need to assist the police. Our police officers need vehicles. I saw some police vehicles with over 200,000 miles on them. We need to change these vehicles. During Finance Committee I questioned the life of those vehicles on the Asset Registry and the Financial Secretary at the time told me that they varied from 3 to 10 years; the Commissioner of Police vehicle would have a longer life than the patrol car. However, we need to start somewhere on the Asset Registry and remove all the vehicles from the police force that have 200,000 miles. They are no earthly good other than to fill the dump. They are broken down. We cannot expect our police officers to do the job because we need to bite the bullet and replace all of their equipment.

I do recognise that the Asset Registry has now developed a procedure to replace these vehicles but certainly some of those vehicles are still going to be in service for too long, but at least we started. I believe that we should have taken all of them to the dump and cover them over. The other thing is, we expect our police officers to drive around in Luminas that ordinary citizens drive around in. That is not a police car. I now notice that we are putting the screen between the back seat and the police officer because before there was no protective screen for the officer. Police officers are our next door neighbours. Their children play with ours. They come next door to us to have lunch. We know who they are, they are human beings and we need to ensure that they are protected so that they can return home to their children.

I certainly do not advocate a police state where they are breaking down doors, but certainly if they are concerned about their safety and their abilities to go back home at the end of their shift, do you think that they are going to break down a drug dealer's door without the necessary tools? They cannot and we should not expect them to do that.

I know we have talked about the Laws to enhance the police's ability to do their jobs and for them to become more efficient and the Second Official Member has given an undertaking to review those Laws, but a very simple part of the police job they cannot do is because of the lack of the necessary legislation, according to them. The Second Official Member in his capacity as Attorney General has said that they can go into parking lots and prosecute people for parking in handicapped parking spaces.

Therein is another problem in this country. People are encroaching on other people's rights and privileges, such as the handicapped parking spaces. It really aggravates me when I see someone parking in the handicapped space next to the door and when the person gets out of their car it is a young person who has no disability other than something wrong with their brain because they should have seen the blue or yellow and they did not see it. This is another area that we need to ensure that the police are not afraid that it is a waste of time if they prosecute someone in a parking lot. It aggravates me so much that every time I witness it I approach the person and I quietly ask them, "is there something wrong with you other than your eyesight?" that could be the only reason they are parked in the handicapped parking and if their eyesight is that bad then they should not be driving.

The reason the police are not addressing these issues is because the police are afraid it is a waste of time and when they get to court the cases may very well be abandoned. We need to protect these types of people from these predators. They rush for the handicapped spots and if you call the police they are not going to come because it does not make sense from their perspective.

Mr. Speaker, the people of East End have experienced the lack of response from the police. There are a number of reasons for the lack of response. One is the lack of staff in that particular department and two is the lack of vehicles. That says to me that something in the tool department is lacking. These are the root causes of some of the crimes in this country. If we had a helicopter do you think all of those boats would be coming in around Colliers Point? No, they would know that we have a helicopter and that the Police officers could be dispatched in 2 or 3 minutes and be in East End in 5 minutes but when they have to go on the Cayman Protector, she is as fast as molasses rolling up hill in dead winter. We need fast response time with our equipment.

I am going to leave the rest of this debate for others because those were the areas I wanted to highlight.

Mr. Speaker, I applaud the Police Department because they work under some adverse conditions and I cannot blame anyone in particular, but I certainly believe that we as a Government and people need to do more. It is not only on parade day the Police should be out here in shining colours. We need to give them dull colours, which are the tools to get the job done. They do a good job under the conditions which they have to work under and I applaud them for all of their efforts. Many of them go out and buy their own tools to do the jobs. They should not have to do that because that is our only means of defence; if anything happens in this country we are going to be pushing these police officers in the front between the perpetrators of anything against this country and us. We cannot ask them to be there if we do not provide them with the tools. My appeal is to everyone to support the police in acquiring what is needed and they are the best to tell us that. When I talk about a helicopter I have no authority on that but I know from a commonsensical view point that seems to be one of the tools missing in the drug interdiction.

I support the Motion brought by the Second Elected Member from West Bay and maybe the Government will see fit to give the Police Force the financing to do their jobs better. Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: Honourable Members although we have just one minute to go before 5. pm it is the wish of Government that we try to complete the Motion before the House and before adjournment. I will continue to open it for further debate. Does any other Member wish to speak?

The Third Elected Member for West Bay.

I think it is only fair to Members if we take a 5 minute break and ask all Members to please be back in 5 minutes.

Proceedings suspended at 5.00 pm

Proceedings resumed at 5.23 pm

Capt. A. Eugene Ebanks: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Much has been said on the Motion which was brought by the Second Elected Member from West Bay and seconded by myself. However, it only bears out the fact that we do have a problem in the Cayman Islands with the inability of the police to carry out their duties effectively because of the way the laws are at this time.

The Caymanian Compass front page of 21 July is headed: "Drugs a West Bay Issue". It is not just a West Bay issue but a national issue. I think maybe because of the demographics of West Bay and East End they are a little more assessable to drug runners because of the easier access by boat bringing drugs to this Island. However, we need to have a look at the laws to enable the Law Enforcement Officers to be more effective in carrying out their duties.

I would like to share with Members of this Honourable House some of the representations I have received from concerned members of the public, especially in West Bay so that everyone listening might understand better why the Second Elected Member from West Bay and I brought this Motion. If I should repeat anything that has already been said then it only bears out the fact that we have been having representation of the same nature, even though sometimes it is the same members of the public calling or wanting to see us because of their concerns for their safety.

About two weeks ago the four Elected Members of West Bay were invited to a meeting that was being held in a neighbourhood community in West Bay of parents and concerned residents. At that meeting there were also three police officers present so there was good dialogue and exchange of information, and a very interesting meeting. However, one thing that was evident and expressed was the frustrations of the police officers not being able to do more to help the neighbours when they complained about certain issues. We had neighbours who were afraid to go down the main road where they live because of encountering certain individuals on that street. They have called the police and they show up but by the time the police get there they have walked off the street so there is nothing the Police can do. Unless they stays in that location 24 hours a day, the neighbours are really concerned about their safety, not only by the amount of drug use but the amount of drug dealings in the area.

These are some of the reasons why we have brought this Motion. We have to give the Law Enforcement Officers the necessary tools to be effective in doing their jobs. Just like a carpenter, mason or a soldier, you have to give them the tools they need otherwise they will not get the job done. You cannot send a soldier to war without his weapons and you cannot send a carpenter to do a job unless he has his tools and the same applies for our police officers. We have to do whatever is necessary to allow them to be effective to carry out their duties. They are only human beings like the rest of us and they are also concerned about their safety. They know that most of these drug users and pushers are armed and if they go to make an enquiry or arrest they do not have the weapons or security to defend themselves; they feel threatened and at a disadvantage. I am not here to say that is the answer to all of the problems, I am only making a point to say that the police are feeling that way because they have expressed it to us. I am not advocating that we send out armed police, but we have to do whatever is necessary to enable the police officers to carry out their duties. When we went to the meeting they wanted us to meet with them because they could not get the kind of help that they needed and the police were there and said that their hands are tied because the way that the law is they could not do certain things and this only manifested itself when we were at the meeting because they showed their frustrations as well.

The law abiding citizens of this country need our help and it is up to us to give them the kind of help that they deserve. Mr. Speaker, we have to put teeth in the laws to allow this to happen. Without doing that the Police are helpless and I do not want to keep repeating myself but it is a fact, Mr. Speaker. We have to make the amendments by doing whatever is necessary for the Law Enforcement Officers to be able to get out there and make some effective arrests where the charges can stick and take some of the criminals off the street. Until that time our Island is not going to get any better. We have to do whatever we can if we intend to enjoy our tranquillity and feeling of secure neighbourhoods then we have to do whatever necessary to maintain that.

I am sure that the time has come for us to stop talking and start doing something. There is an old saying which says "a biting dog do not bark and a barking dog do not bite" we have to stop barking and do some biting and get some action, law and order back in the communities to let the neighbourhoods feel safe.

We have copies of written complaints from concerned citizens who wrote to the police asking for help and the police in very sympathetic terms says "yes we understand but there is not much we can do because our hands are tied". These are the kinds of situations we are faced with and we cannot afford to let this continue indefinitely; we have to take action to prevent it from escalating.

We are told of certain streets that the law abiding citizens cannot walk across because the drug users and pushers are sitting in the streets and will not let them past. We have had a situation where the garbage trucks refuse to go down certain streets because of being confronted by these individuals. This is the kind of situations that are existing in our country. What has our Islands come to? These individuals are intimidating the neighbourhoods. I cannot say it enough but we have to find a way to put a stop to this.

Mr. Speaker, it is imperative that we do something about this situation. I have heard arguments from both sides of the Floor however, the fact remains that we have a problem and we have to do something about it. Without repeating what has already been said, I am going to urge all the Members of this Honourable House to support this Motion. Thank you.

The Speaker: Does any other Member wish to speak?

The Second Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman.

Mr. Lyndon L. Martin: Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

I rise to give my support to this worthy Motion brought to this Honourable Legislative Assembly by the Second Elected Member from West Bay and the Third Elected Member who just spoke.

Mr. Speaker, I think it is safe to say that all Honourable Members of this Legislative Assembly truly appreciate the changing dynamics of our society and the need for there to be a dual approach to the rise in criminal activity. As mentioned by the Second Elected Member from George Town, it is very important that we deal with the social aspect that is causing these changes and I think it is safe to say that the records of the United Democratic Party under the leadership of the Minister of Community Developments has various programmes in place and in the works to address some of the social causes behind the increase in serious crime. So, this Government is committed to dealing with crime seriously from both angles, addressing the causes and symptoms but also from the policing perspective.

The caption mentioned by the Third Elected Member from the district of West Bay from the newspaper or drugs being a West Bay issue, he accurately pointed out that it is not just a West Bay issue. So often I hear my good friend, who is not present at the moment but was here earlier, from the district of Bodden Town, the Third Elected Member from Bodden Town, always referring to drugs as being one of the greatest threats in this country and something that must be addressed with a great degree of seriousness and I give him credit in that respect.

Drugs are an issue in the district for which I represent of Cayman Brac and Little Cayman. I would like to take this Opportunity to thank the Honourable Minister for Community Development for having a curative measure in place in Cayman Brac in the form of a drug counsellor and I thank the United Democratic Party for making that possible.

Mr. Speaker, it is important when looking at these issues that we understand the full scope of the issue at hand and we, the Member of the United Democratic Party, understand fully that there must be a curative and educational component to reduce drug demand, but at the same time policing is of crucial importance. The United Democratic Party has seen the need of increased police presence in Cayman Brac. We have made available the funds to increase the number of constables on the streets on the Brac. Even after the increase in officers we have seen the need to have a greater presence by the soon to be opening of a sub-station of the police force within the district of Spot Bay to increase the presence of policing within that district.

So, the United Democratic Party is well aware of the necessity of properly funding and equipping the police but in all cases there is room for more. The police officers on the Brac, included in their 2002 Report, recently have made a plea for new vehicles. I join with them today in making that plea. I also use this opportunity to give credit to the community police officer for the Brac, a fine officer by the name of Mr. Dave Asher who have worked diligently since his appointment to build up a good rapport, not only with the youth but with the general community as a whole, and has been very successful in this regard.

There is a need within policing to better understand and grasp better, from my perspective, as a member of the community and as a general citizen, of what justifies sufficient grounds of suspicion to conduct a urine test or some other form of determining whether drugs is in ones system or not. I have had this dialogue with the previous Commissioner of Police and with the Chief Inspector of Police in Cayman Brac. In many instances members of the community will see gathering of individuals and see reasons to suspect that drug use has been taking place and will call the police but upon the response of the police, howbeit quickly or over a longer period of time, when they get there these guys are quite slick and fast and the substance has disappeared. However, it is my belief if those individuals are tested you will find more than adequate proof within their system but there has to be grounds of suspicion for that test to take place.

Somehow we need to lower that threshold of what is considered as reasonable grounds of suspicion because in many cases I have seen what myself as a layman would consider more than reasonable grounds of suspicion, be it the behaviour of the individuals, the odour in the air or the reports from general citizens of the society who have seen activity and have these guys tested. We know what they are doing but because the substance is a consumable one it is consumed and gone before the police arrive and there is nothing there for the police to find. That is representation that has come to me so often that the police respond but when they get there nothing can be done because the drugs have disappeared. I believe wholeheartedly that there is a need to have protection of one's rights that there is not miscellaneous or frivolous testing of an individual in violation of his rights. However, that threshold seems to be extremely high.

I also would like to comment on the need of expedience within the judiciary. So often these cases are prosecuted by the police but it gets tied into the system for so long and the individual remains on the street continuing in his behaviour. This can go on one year or two years. I remember the incident of a police being beaten on Cayman Brac and the case going on for a two year period prior to there being a conviction.

Mr. Speaker, it is very important that the motivation for these police officers who put themselves out on the line and go to a point of conviction that they see that that effort has been met by appropriate and suitable treatment within the judiciary. It seems to be a regular practice for the continual deferral. I would not want to suggest that anyone is not eligible or deserving of a fair hearing. I am simply speaking from the Police perspective; it has to be demoralising to see the cases that they have put before the system go for such a long period while they have to deal with the same individuals day after day on the street.

The district of Cayman Brac and Little Cayman still remains to be a fairly crime free jurisdiction. A jurisdiction where most people feel safe, most people live in harmony and we look forward to— (pause). Mr. Speaker, the beautiful Islands of Cayman Brac and Little Cayman has to continue its efforts to maintain that tranquil crime free environment. To do so we need to properly equip the police officers, not only physically but ensure that issues such as conflict resolution techniques are properly entrenched into the officers when they are dealing with issues such as domestic violence.

The Police Report that has been mentioned in this Honourable Legislative Assembly today, highlights the fact that for the first time we have a native born Cayman Bracer in the ranks of Sergeant in Cayman Brac and that is something that we are quite proud of and he brings to the job a great wealth of experience, some 19 years of policing in the Brac and a great understanding of the general community and the necessity to work along with the people.

Before I resume my seat I would like to commend that officer and his constables that work along with him and to also make a commendation to a group of young men, it was captured in the Caymanian Compass about a year ago when a group of young men in Cayman Brac took it upon themselves—I played only the role of offering transport to them—and identified a particular site that was not only a sore eye in the community but it was a sight that was rumoured to be used as a drug haven. Those young men did not only go to that site and demolished the old house that was there, with the owners permission, and removed all the debris, they went a bit further and beautified the area to turn what was a sore eye into a beautiful location where I have seen individuals go (it is on the beach side) and watch the sunset in the evenings.

Those young men made me feel very good because so often young men are categorised into that group of unproductive, uncaring individuals but they took interest, on that early Saturday morning, in their community and went in with sledge hammers and even machetes because we were not properly equipped and demolished the precincts. So many members of that community came up to us that day and said we are so happy. It was more happy for me to see that we had an opportunity where the Community Police Officer, Mr. Dave Asher, some young men who were serving community time as well as some young men in the community who genuinely went out there to better their community to demolish that structure and beautify that particular area. In the space of an 8 hour day they had transformed one particular site in Cayman Brac. I say that to say that we must be realistic with the problem at hand but also in instances such as this provide hope that there is a future; that there is a strong good element within our community that if groomed and cultivated in the right direction can give us hope for there being a day that we can once more return to a drug free Cayman Islands.

Mr. Speaker, with those words said, I pledge my support to the Motion, the Mover, Seconder and the deputed responder.

Thank you.

The Speaker: Does any other Member wish to speak? Does any other Member wish to speak? Does any other Member wish to speak?

The Honourable Leader of Government Business.

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: Mr. Speaker, I intend to be brief.

Mr. Speaker, I believe that the Government has a fair understanding of what the Motion is seeking. There are far too many instances when the police are called but not able to meet the situation because there needs to be more clarity in some laws to meet that situation. Members have traversed this title of the Law more than what the Motion says. I would say that given the circumstances which the Police must operate, I believe that they are doing a sterling job. Of course there is room for improvement and I believe the team that we have now, Commissioner Braggs and Deputy Commissioner Dixon and the rest of them, are trying to deal effectively with problems that while they might have been evident to the community, governments in the past would not take and place in a full and frank manner. Now when you listen to others speak out and when you move around, people are not so afraid to try to address the matter, although I believe that the community needs to be more cooperative with the police. The police cannot be everywhere; they cannot be at Morgan's Harbour and Boatswain Bay or Vicks Ville where a boat might come in; it is just not possible. Perhaps if we put in the capabilities then people will have to expect that we have to pay for these things.

So, I believe that the Government is doing its best in assisting the police and I think that the top brass is moving in the right direction. I do not think that anyone here, in this House, can honestly say that the police service is shackled. As I said, there are many needs all around and the Government is addressing them as best as we can.

One must look at the success of the Service in dealing with criminal activity. You cannot point to criminal activity in this country and not point to the success of the Police Service. I believe that the service is much more successful today than at any other time and I know that we are doing our best to help them to be successful.

Last year's Budget provided additional funding to the police to allow increased foot and bicycle patrols. While we clamour about cars, on this small Island, I think as much as they can use them around the community it is much better. No, you cannot use them in a chase but for policing the community I think bicycles is a good option because people get to see the police, they get to talk to them and get the feeling that the police are around.

Mr. Speaker, my good friend from East End is grumbling as usual as if he is in pain and I say to him that if he is in pain he should take some sort of tablet or medicine or something that would make him keep his mouth shut! If his head hurts it is because he has so much rubbish in it.

An amount in excess of $1.7 million has been allocated for police interception equipment and for the upgrading of the East End Police Station and the new Drugs Task Force Facility at the Marine Basin. We agreed on DNA testing some time back and it is moving forward. That will help the detection rate in this county a lot better and it will be much easier for the police force.

I recognise that drug usage continue to plague us as it is doing so many other societies. Over the years and since 1993 we have tried to educate and offer residential treatment centres locally. I remember well the accusations and licks I took in purchasing the Holly Estate for $600,000 at that time to get three homes and between 7 to 8 acres of land to put in place a treatment centre and a halfway house. I remember quite well the licks that I took for it; now that is in use today and there is nothing said about it. The Treatment Centre exists today. Today more than ever programmes and centres exist for those that want to be treated. A lot of people say that there is nothing for young people to do but this country have more programmes, centres and places that are positive for young people than I believe any region in comparison to our size. There is a tremendous amount of things for our young people to do here and parents need to get involved with their young people as much as possible and of course parents have to work, and we are mindful of all of that. After school programmes are put in place so that when parents have to be at work at the crucial time when the young people are left alone they have a positive venue to be at.

A lot is being done and accomplished but the countries that produce drugs can do so much easier and export more effectively than the world can effectively and proactively treat the users, unfortunately.

I believe that the country's borders need to be well protected. I have said that and have come up with an idea of creating a home guard, and I thought that we could use some of the more elderly folks to assist with it but when I took advice on it I had to look at it again, and that is not to say that it will never happen, but we have to look at the technology that is available today. The Commissioner of Police, the Cabinet Secretary, the Financial Secretary, Mr. Jefferson, and I were in London to a meeting about security. We went to Portsmouth to look at equipment and they have radar equipment; they have a plane that from 10 miles away the bales can be seen in the boat. They also have several vessels that can move quickly. I do not know how much we can afford because when we check the radar and the plane that goes with it, it is well over $10 million. I believe that this country is going to have to do it and I believe that we can get good terms. We can probably have two radars, one in Cayman Brac or Little Cayman and one on Grand Cayman. It picks up a drum in a 7 or 10 foot sea. It is so accurate.

Mr. Speaker, when I look at the things that this country needs and to think where we came from in 2000 with only available cash of $2.5 million we have good cash today by good management. Yes, the last count was $89 million but that could easily go down so we have to be very careful in expenditure. We do not know what is going to happen. The United States is predicting a terrorist strike and heightened levels of terrorist activity. We pray to God that nothing like that happens because we are just beginning to turn our economy around and get back at proper levels of our various accounts.

When we look at the needs that we have, we could spend $50 million on education and schools and when you only look at this one, for instance, we know that the country has to have something like this, it will cost over a period of couple years between $10 to 14 million. However, the country's borders must be protected. As the Member from East End said, when you find boats coming in right there in East End shooting at the police, we are going to really have to prioritise but we are going to have to buckle down, bite the bullet and get something done about the protection of our borders. If we cannot do the home guard, which I believe would have offered some employment and service with pride by some of our older people given minimum equipment, it would take a lot of people to patrol the borders of these Islands and it would probably be more costly because you are then dealing with human resources, which will be a costly item.

It is not easy and I hear the genuine cries from the other side and from our side about what is needed, and it is a juggle we are going to have to do to find the money to be able to deal with some of these issues. That is one, interdiction and education, but I believe that punishment must fit the crime too. I am one who believes in capital punishment and I know when we had it on the books, I remember back in the 1970's there were about 13 unsolved murders, so we can say that maybe it was not so effective, but we know when we built the gallows at Northward, just go back and see what the criminal rate was. Today your life does not seem to be worth very much and it is sad to say that in our small Islands it is so, but it is so.

There is no scare of the police to an extent by some of the criminal elements. I believe, and I have said this to the Governor, we need that body that we had created some time back where they go out and deal with the criminal elements to keep the streets clean. We dare not let crime get out of hand in these Islands. People have to understand that if they do the crime then they will have to pay for it.

I believe that there needs to be harsher treatment; we cannot take a liberal stance and I have said this before, in the presence of the Governor, publicly. From my point of view, the United Kingdom is liberal. One only has to study what they do, how they are treating their laws and prisons and so forth. Prison must be a place that people fear to go. To day they are saying that you have to educate, that is expenditure and we are doing that, but that is part of the treatment and other things have to be put in place. We in this House have to accept and should accept that the punishment must fit the crime. We are not going to be safe unless we let the criminals know that they might be big and bad but we are not so scared of them that we are afraid to do what is right to let you understand that this country is not going to be taken away.

So, Mr. Speaker, I listened to this debate and you can hear the fluff from people coming across but you could tell the times when they were genuine about crime and what we are facing. I do not think the Motion is out of place but the Government understands what they are trying to do. It is the actual motion and I believe some of that needs to be done, and as the Honourable Attorney General has said, I recognise that as well. So, from our point we know that if we are going to keep down crime we are going to have to take some extra strong measures in punishment and we are going to have to spend money for interdiction.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: Does any other Member wish to speak? Does any other Member wish to speak? Last call, does any other Member wish to speak? If not, would the Fourth Elected Member for West Bay wish to exercise his right of reply on behalf of the Second Elected Member for West Bay who is the Mover of the Motion?

Mr. Cline A. Glidden, Jr: Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

The House can already see the benefits of a good party structure where even though the Second Elected Member from West Bay had to leave because of the unified position on this side, we can respond on his behalf. In responding on his behalf I want to ensure to the Members that have stayed at this time of the evening that I will try to be briefer than my colleague, the Second Elected Member from West Bay is known to be.

I have the pleasure of responding on behalf of the Second Elected Member from West Bay and I expected the task to be an easier one after the great detail my colleague went into when introducing the Motion. I too want to say that as a representative of the district of West Bay and in speaking to some of my constituents, they were a bit disturbed with the headlines, "Drugs a West Bay Problem". I was happy to hear that the other Members in this Chamber recognise that it is a national problem, at least in the majority. For a while when I heard the Second Elected Member from George Town, I really felt that he was detached from his constituency and did not recognise that it was a national problem since he tried to paint the increasing crime as being something that was more dominant in the district of West Bay.

I am happy to have heard the Honourable Second Official Member acknowledging the possible need for clarifications in accordance with the respective laws, which would make it clear to the police as to what their rights would be in the event that there is some confusion as to exactly what right they do have in enforcing the law. I am sure that the residents of all districts in the Cayman Islands will be happy to hear that the review is ongoing concerning the noise from cars in relation to the boom boxes that we are all familiar with. I want to thank him for his enlightening remarks concerning the existing laws and acceptance by him of looking and reviewing as the Motion calls for the applicable laws and policies to enhance the ability of the Royal Cayman Islands Police to more effectively and safely carry out their duties.

In picking up from where the Second Elected Member from George Town spoke about in what could be seen as a difference in policy between the Ministry of Community Affairs and what was presented by the Second Elected Member from West Bay when it came to assisting the police. I want to make it clear that he seemed to believe in some way that greater policing or enhancing the ability of the police to do their jobs would lead to increased incarceration in the prison, but as the Member from East End made the point as to Mayor Giuliani of New York. The purpose of assisting the police could have the effect of being a deterrent, which would then stop the crimes from being serious crimes and in that way it would cut down the incarceration in the prison.

I am sure that those Members who are fair would understand that this is the position my colleague, the Second Elected Member from West Bay, made when we talked about increasing the ability of the police to do their jobs and assisting them in doing their jobs.

The Second Elected Member from George Town made reference to the Annual Police Report 2002 on page 36, paragraph 33, he quoted where it said, "Unfortunately, the year in review saw a significant increase in the number of reported incidents of domestic violence for the year." I do not want to assume that he was trying to be mischievous and blame the Government but for some reason he chose to stop where it said that was an increase of 25.2 per cent. If he had carried on reading that same paragraph it also says, "The reason for this increase may be attributed to the continuing public awareness programmes on domestic violence such as the monthly televised FOCUS, the Caribbean Regional Domestic Violence Intervention Training and the Business and Professional Women Club's Annual "16 Days of Activism Against Gender Violence" campaign. These initiatives are vital in the fight against domestic violence as their objective is to educate the public on the effect domestic violence has on the victim, the fabric of the family structure and the entire community." There we have what could be seen as a double edge sword because the Minister who has the responsibility for Community and Women's Affairs is what this falls under.

What the Report is saying is that there is not an increase in crime. Basically what the Report is saying is that the potential is that the crime was always there but because of education— Mr. Speaker, if the Member from North Side would listen to what I am saying, all I am saying is that the increase in crime could necessarily be attributed to greater education where we have more people coming forward reporting crime. I know she was defending the position as to who started those programmes and I am not getting into who started them. I am just saying that because of an increase in the education and this is coming out of the same report that the Member from George Town read from. So, if the fact was that the crimes were being committed prior to that but were not being reported because of a lack of education, then it is interesting to see how those statistics could be used to say that the Minister is not doing a good job because now it appears to be that there is more crime.

I just wanted to make sure that in the full interest of disclosure, the entire paragraph, which the Member made reference to, was read for the public so that they could understand exactly what was said when it came to increases in domestic violence.

Growing up and living in the district of West Bay I too have seen first hand the effects of drugs specifically to the potentially positive people that could have made a significant contribution to the Cayman Islands. Almost on a daily basis I see friends of mine with whom I have grown up and spent much of my younger years with who have now succumbed to the deadly and destructive ills of drug use. Like the Second Elected Member from George Town said, I have to give thanks to my mother and father for making sure that I had such a positive influence and the other good people in the district of West Bay who was able to give me a positive influence and keep me away from where I have seen so many of my close friends end up. I fully recognise that the issue is a big problem; the issue is even made much bigger due to the fact that it is such a profitable business. I think that all sides of this Honourable House recognise, like the Member from East End said, he has more of a problem of importation, and in West Bay we are dealing with the problem that is caused by that importation with the consumption and the ill effects that we have there.

As representatives on many occasions we have worked with the police to try to assist them, whether it was clearing property, speaking to land owners or whatever assistance that we could offer to them. I think that is important as a role. It is not a popular or positive thing to get up and talk about and we see how the press made it to be an issue for the district of West Bay. We recognise that it is hard for politicians to get up and speak about those issues that could be seen in such a negative light. As responsible representatives I think it is commendable that my colleague the Second Elected Member from West Bay, even in an election year, is willing to get up and talk about the problems and concerns that the people of the district that we were elected to represent have expressed to us, and to ask the Government to reconsider doing whatever can be done to improve that situation.

Mr. Speaker, the Second Elected Member from George Town criticised the Member for saying that it has only been at this time that he brought the Motion. I would like to remind the Member who is representing a bigger district that I am sure has significantly higher increases in crime, that even though he may consider it to be late it is still earlier than what that Member, the Second Elected Member from George Town has done.

So before we get up to criticise and say that it has taken four years the Member should look back and realise that if the Member from West Bay had not brought the Motion he would not have gotten the opportunity to stand and discuss it. For whatever reason he did not appear to believe that it was an important enough issue concerning the district of George Town, I assume, for him to bring a similar motion.

Mr. Speaker, listening to that Member discuss the possibility and discuss how we were going to turn the Cayman Islands into a police state and to go on to talk about the rights and freedoms that have to be afforded to everyone, if I was a cynic I would have thought that the Member did not realise that he was no longer being paid to represent that aspect of society as in his previous profession, but is now being paid to represent the people of George Town who as a majority are all community minded and law abiding citizens. Since I am an eternal optimist even for that Member, I will chalk it up to political posturing since it is an election year, and an attempt by that Member to not only gain the support of the law abiding citizens of George Town but also to gain the support of those who may be involved in criminal or deviant behaviour, which I assume could be seen as a desperate position or it could be that the Member did not recognise who he was representing.

Mr. Speaker, I have to agree with the Member for East End on the calls he has been making for the police assistance. However, when he said he cannot blame the Government because previous governments had neglected and done nothing and that he could blame the Government for when the now Minister of Health and himself brought a motion in 2001 asking for more to assist the police, I need to remind him that if he was bringing it with the Minister of Health it would not have been this Government at that time.

So, I accept fully what he said that he blames previous administrations and obviously by the acceptance of governments, at this stage, the Government is cognisant, prepared, willing and able to do something about this Motion. Even though the Member was saying only two, it is obvious that those two must have made a difference.

While this may not be well received by the Members of the Opposition, I only felt that it would be my duty to represent— not having the Second Elected Member from West Bay here and having all of the pot shots that were taken to him, it was my duty to adequately defend the position that was taken. I know that in the interest of the party system if he had to do the same for me I would feel confident that he would do it.

So, Mr. Speaker, the credit that I must give the Second Elected Member from West Bay for bringing this Motion, which the Second Official Member titled a timely one, would be the comparison the Member from East End made with Rudy Giuliani and his foresight in solving the problem in New York City.

What my colleague has asked for in helping the police do a job which we all recognise as being a difficult, demanding and thankless job in the protection of these beautiful Cayman Islands is to assist them by reviewing any laws that may need to be reviewed to allow them to better do their job in a safer and more efficient manner. That is what the good people of West Bay elected us as representatives for, to recognise the problems that they are facing; to be willing to come and acknowledge the problems that the district is facing and be willing to be part of a group of a Government, namely the United Democratic Party, that is willing and able to do something about the problem.

Taking the ostrich approach of burying our heads in the sand and say that everything is well and try to be everything to everyone is not the approach of this Government of which I am proud to be a part of.

I am happy to hear the Leader of Government Business giving the information concerning the options that have been explored for national security and border control and I have full confidence, as I am sure the rest of the people of the Cayman Islands does, that the United Democratic Party Government who has achieved so much in such a short time will do its utmost best to deal with this most troubling situation as soon as it is possible to do so.

Only the very unreasonable people could expect such a turn around in the economy; such work from the international perspectives; such work with insurance and all of the other issues and to try and deal with the significant crime issues, but as I said, Rome was not built in a day, there is a lot of work to be done and I am sure that is why the people of the Cayman Islands will elect the United Democratic Party come 17 November, so that they can continue the much needed work that is to be done and all of the work that has been started to be addressed under this administration.

Mr. Speaker, I do hope and fully expect the full support of this Honourable House after listening to the debate. I want to thank all the Members who have debated on his behalf and I thank them for the positive contributions that have been made, and I look forward to the support of this Motion. Thank you.

The Speaker: The question is BE IT RESOLVED THAT Government consider reviewing applicable laws and policies to enhance the ability of the Royal Cayman Islands Police to more effectively and safely carry out their duties. All in favour please say Aye. Those against, No.

Ayes.

The Speaker: The Ayes have it.

Agreed. Private Member's Motion No. 1/04 passed.

The Speaker: The Honourable Leader of Government Business I call on you for the motion for the adjournment.

Hon. W. McKeever Bush: Mr. Speaker, we thank the House for its indulgence and staff for staying late.

I would like to say that I am wondering if we could fly the flag at half mast on Friday, 30 July 2004 in memory of the late Mr. Craddock Ebanks, a past Member of Parliament.

The Speaker: Honourable Leader of Government Business I think that is a reasonable, timely and proper request for this Honourable House. I am sure that there is no objection from Members. So accordingly I order that the flag be flown at half mast on Friday.

Hon. W. McKeever Bush: Having agreed on that, thank you very much. I move the adjournment of this Honourable House until 10 am tomorrow morning Thursday, 29 July 2004.

The Speaker: The question is that this House do now adjourn. All in favour please say Aye. Those against, No.

Ayes.

The Speaker: The Ayes have it.

At 6.38 pm the House stood adjourned until 10 am Thursday, 29 July, 2004.

The Speaker: I invite the Elected Member for North Side to lead us in prayers.

have apologies from the Honourable Second Official Member for the late arrival.

PRAYERS

Ms. Edna Moyle: Let us pray.

Almighty God, from whom all wisdom and power are derived: We beseech Thee so to direct and prosper the deliberations of the Legislative Assembly now assembled, that all things may be ordered upon the best and surest foundations for the glory of Thy Name and for the safety, honour and welfare of the people of these Islands.

Bless our Sovereign Lady, Queen Elizabeth II; Philip, Duke of Edinburgh; Charles, Prince of Wales; and all the Royal Family. Give grace to all who exercise authority in our Commonwealth, that peace and happiness, truth and justice, religion and piety may be established among us. Especially we pray for the Governor of our Islands, the Speaker of the Legislative Assembly, Official Members and Ministers of Cabinet and Members of the Legislative Assembly, that we may be enabled faithfully to perform the responsible duties of our high office. All this we ask for Thy great Name's sake.

Let us say The Lord's Prayer together: Our Father, who art in Heaven, Hallowed be Thy Name. Thy Kingdom come, Thy will be done on earth as it is in Heaven. Give us this day our daily bread, and forgive us our trespasses, as we forgive those who trespass against us. Lead us not into temptation, but deliver us from evil. For Thine is the Kingdom, the power and the glory, forever and ever. Amen.

The Lord bless us and keep us. The Lord make His face shine upon us and be gracious unto us. The Lord lift up the light of His countenance upon us and give us peace, now and always. Amen.

'A Cayman Islands Constitution for the future'

The Speaker: The Honourable Leader of Government Business.

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

In December last year when we called off the trip to London, we said that we would come back to the public on Constitution matters and to tell the people where we were at. We did not go to London because we felt that the Foreign Office was leveraging the constitutional talks against the European Union Savings Directive.

The Cayman Islands' relationship with the United Kingdom dates back around five hundred years when Jamaica became independent in 1962. We decided to retain direct links of the Islands to the Crown and became a separate British Crown Colony. We continued to value our links with the United Kingdom and with the Crown, and our present Constitution took effect in 1972 with numerous revisions made since then. We have a long and proud history of political stability and economic dynamism coupled with a strong tradition of political and civil rights. The Cayman Islands have been a Parliamentary Democracy since 1831 when the first Government of the Cayman Islands was established.

The present Constitution established the Cayman Islands as a British Dependant Territory, now a United Kingdom Overseas Territory and these arrangements were reviewed by the Constitutional Modernisation Review Commission in 2002. It is our belief however that the proposals put forward by the Commissioners did not advance the Constitutional arrangements of the Cayman Islands sufficiently and that they too closely resembled those given to British Colonies seeking independence in the post second World War era.

The Cayman Islands should aim to modernise and advance its constitutional arrangements. This is especially needed in this era of globalisation and also given the United Kingdom's membership of the European Union, the expansion of the European Union in terms of policy and the United Kingdom's compliance with European Union's legislation and regulations that will adversely affect these Islands and have a significant impact on our economic well-being. We aim for a more progressive partnership with the United Kingdom. The Cayman Islands need a constitution fit for the twenty first century and we desire a step change from the existing colonial constitution. However, I must stress that the United Democratic Party has no desire to seek independence from the United Kingdom; that is not at question. Our main objective is to ensure that we establish a system whereby we have greater control over our destiny. We cannot allow the United Kingdom to make unilateral decisions, signing up to initiatives without first consulting us. This is totally unacceptable and we will do everything within our powers to ensure that the interests and wellbeing of our Islands are always taken into account. I am not going to stand idly by and have anyone impose unilateral regulations and laws which will have a detrimental impact on our country's economy.

We will promote a positive alternative to the current Constitution to ensure the Cayman Islands have a modern Constitution to reflect the needs and ambitions of the people of these Islands. We want a constitution that will not only serve our Islands tomorrow, but one that will serve our children and our children's children. In the immediate term however, we shall also work with respected third parties to clarify any existing ambiguity around the existing constitution. The Legislative Assembly is an important body and its Members carry a heavy burden of constituency and legislative work. In order to address this matter we believe there is merit in moving from a unicameral to a bicameral system with the Legislative Assembly remaining the prevailing House. An additional chamber would promote political engagement and improve scrutiny of legislation and proposed agreements.

Our people have expressed a desire to be involved in the decisions that affect our country and the Senate will provide the ideal medium of fostering and encouraging more open dialogue. Most importantly, it will provide the Government with a wider cross section of views when legislation or international treaties are being discussed or contemplated. The creation of a second chamber or senate, offers the following benefits to the people of the Cayman Islands: Improved decision making; a greater variation of views; a more balanced representation of competing interests; increased accountability; a bicameral system is more open to the public and would improve engagement, public debate and citizen engagement, and improved legislative authority. The Senate would be responsible for studying legislation and making recommendations. All legislation except for financial resolutions would be submitted to the Senate for consideration. The Senate would not have the power to block legislation indefinitely though they would be able to delay for a finite period before it is reintroduced to the Legislative Assembly.

I stress to Honourable Members that this Assembly would be the prevailing House and would be supreme in law making matters; the majority in the Legislative Assembly would have the final say on legislation. The Senate would be comprised of nine appointed Members, or it could be comprised of nine appointed Members by the Opposition as well as by the Government. Senators would be appointed after each general election and could serve for that legislative term with party affiliations or without party affiliations.

The Senate, once appointed, would represent or would elect a presiding officer from among its ranks and a leader of the majority would be selected to become the chief government's spokesman. They would be responsible for leading and directing the business of the Senate. There would be no limits on the number of terms that could be served by Senators. Senators could be removed in the event of criminal behaviour or gross misconduct or by their appointing party.

Membership of the Senate would be restricted to citizens of the Cayman Islands only. Senators would have limited contact with civil servants, with the right only to request information and they would not hold cabinet posts. Senators could be appointed to the newly created position of Parliamentary Secretary and could be invited to the Cabinet to discuss a specific issue on a non-voting basis when their expertise would be valuable and they could contribute to decision making in that way.

A senate would provide an opportunity for professions and industry sectors to be engaged further in decision making. The chamber would also allow young Caymanians to become involved in public life without getting involved in electoral politics, if they so choose. The cost of the Senate would be limited. The Senate would be housed in the existing Legislative Assembly facilities and would use the building when the Legislative Assembly is not in session. Furthermore, Senators would not be expected to rely on their legislative role for their primary source of income and only an attendance allowance would be paid. This proposal, we believe, would cost no more than creating two new Legislative Assembly seats and in a best case scenario, could cost less.

I am sure Honourable Members will agree with me that a strong and effective opposition is essential to the successful working of a parliamentary democracy. Oppositions have a responsibility to question and challenge Government on matters of substance. The electorate expects the official opposition to engage the Government in issues of policy. Its primary role has to be to offer an alternative program to the one offered by Government. As is expected of Government Ministers and Backbench Members, it is incumbent on elected members and Officials of the Opposition Party to commit to widely accepted principles of public life including selflessness, integrity, objectivity, accountability, openness, honesty and leadership.

We recommend that the post of Deputy Leader of the Opposition should be formally established to further create proper constitutional protocols. This will in turn foster greater political maturity and organisation amongst the principal Opposition Party.

Elections

The Constitutional Review Commission examined our electoral system and recommended in a draft constitution that the existing six electoral areas would become seventeen single member constituencies. After much consideration we believe that there needs to be further extensive research and dialogue on the principle of single member constituencies before any decision is taken as there was very little support for this methodology of voting and representation. In fact in some districts there was absolutely no support for this methodology of voting and representation. We recommend that the current electoral system is maintained until there is widespread support for an alternative.

The Governor

I want to turn now to the constitutional role of the Governor.

The position of Governor in the Cayman Islands is long established and represents the connection to the United Kingdom. The Governor in Cabinet is also an important constitutional convention. In a modern democracy however, the role of Governor needs to be clearly defined. The Government believes that the Governor plays an important ceremonial role, but the Governor's day to day position in some matters of Government is outdated.

The United Democratic Party does not want independence. The United Democratic Party, like the vast majority of the people of the Cayman Islands, greatly values our ties with the United Kingdom and the mutual benefits that flow from this relationship. However, it is important that we examine this relationship to ensure that the Cayman Islands are not disadvantaged.

We are content for the Governor to continue to have responsibility, working closely with the Public Service Commission, for appointing the Attorney General, the Auditor General, the Police Commissioner and the Judiciary. In the appointment of the Attorney General the Cabinet must be consulted and consensus sought. The Governor following advice from the Chief Minister and Cabinet on a vote of no confidence in the Legislative Assembly would be able to dissolve the Legislative Assembly and require a general election. That is as it is right now, however while we are told, it is not discussed amongst us.

We believe that he or she, should continue as an important channel of communication between the Cayman Islands and the United Kingdom, and should maintain a role in monitoring governance and providing advice. However, the Governor's role in Cabinet should be advisory and non-voting. Governors should not be able to override democratically elected leaders or retain total control over any area of domestic policy. In addition, the Chief Minister should preside over the Governing Council in place of the Governor. In most cases however, the Governor should act only after consulting with various governmental bodies which would de facto mean receiving the recommendations and obtaining their approval.

Her Majesty the Queen would continue to appoint the Governor on the advice of the Foreign and Commonwealth Office. However, the preferred candidate put forward by the Crown should be selected jointly by the Foreign and Commonwealth Office and elected representatives of the Cayman Islands Government. The Governor currently has the right to refuse to sign Bills passed by the Legislative Assembly. The power to block the wishes of the people's democratic representatives is considerable and must be kept in check. It is essential that measures are put in place to ensure that it is not abused and to protect the democratic rights of the people of the Cayman Islands. We cannot have the Governor decide to stop legislation that is in the best interests of the Cayman Islands.

Personally, I cannot continue to stand by and allow anything to happen which will threaten the long term viability of these Islands. If the Governor twice refuses to sign a significant Bill, one that impacts greatly on the economic well-being, human rights, religious rights and livelihoods of the Cayman Islands passed by the Legislative Assembly, the Bill will be sent back to Parliament for a third time.

If the Legislative Assembly passes the same Bill the third time with two thirds of those Members voting in support of the Bill the Governor would be required to sign the Bill into law or he or she should resign. This will ensure that the Governor will have greater accountability and responsibility to the people of the Cayman Islands while providing the United Kingdom with a level of control.

The issue of telephone tapping is a blatant reminder to the people of these Islands that the current situation cannot continue. The United Kingdom's approach to phone tapping legislation is exactly what the elected officials of these Islands requested. Yet, the United Kingdom has refused to grant us the same rights that they enjoy.

The Eurobank fiasco is a clear example of where the Rule of Law was abused. We must find a mechanism to ensure that this is not repeated and the Rule of Law is protected and individuals' rights are not violated at any time.

Matters of revenue and expenditure in particular, will continue to be the sole responsibility of the peoples elected representatives. The Governor's current power to authorise public expenditure without the consent of the elected Government should no longer exist. The Governor should not be able to decide on public expenditure such as was done in January 2003 during the Eurobank case. In this instance the Governor decided to approve expenditure, which cost the country million of dollars, against the wishes and recommendations of the elected representatives.

The Cabinet

We have decided not to increase the size of the Cabinet. However, the Cabinet in a new constitutional arrangement, where there is a Chief Minister and that Chief Minister is the political head of the Government, together with his or her party would select the elected members of the Cabinet from the Legislative Assembly. The Chief Minister will be the leader of the majority party in the Legislative Assembly and would be formally appointed by the Governor. There would be no term limits restricting the number of times that any Member of the Legislative Assembly could serve as Chief Minister. Through their support of a political party the electorate should have the right to choose the number of times that any one individual may serve as Chief Minister, very much like the situation in Bermuda.

The post of Deputy Chief Minister should also be established in the Constitution to assist the proper functioning of the Cabinet. This position should be formalised and officially appointed by the Governor. Cabinet Ministers would be appointed by the Chief Minister and his party.

We believe that the Cabinet should consist of the Chief Minister, four elected Ministers, one of whom should be the Deputy Chief Minister, the Attorney-General and the Governor or in his absence the Deputy Governor, the Chief Secretary and the Financial Secretary. The Governor, the Chief Secretary and the Financial Secretary should be non-voting members.

Parliamentary Secretaries

The Constitutional Review Commission recognised the large workload currently managed by Cabinet Ministers. Along with limiting the Legislative Assembly to fifteen members, and the number of Cabinet Ministers to four, excluding the Chief Minister, additional measures or resources will be required to provide assistance. This will be achieved by the appointment of Parliamentary Secretaries. In order to lessen the burden on Cabinet Ministers the Chief Minister together with Cabinet would be able to appoint Parliamentary Secretaries from either the Legislative Assembly or the Senate to lead on a number of policy issues within the Ministers department. The Parliamentary Secretaries would be answerable to their respective Ministers and the Minister would be accountable to the Legislative Assembly and through it, the people.

Cabinet Meetings

It is crucial that Ministers have the ability to bring forward whatever business they see fit, to conduct their role in Government effectively. Therefore, the Governor will not have the right to refuse a question by a Member of the Cabinet as he does now. The Governor will no longer have the power to stop a Minister from adding items to the Cabinet's agenda.

The Cabinet's Secretary and the Cabinet's Office should have responsibility under the authority of the Governor and the Chief Minister for the co-ordination and implementation of government policy. That is as it is presently.

Constitutional Relationship with the U.K.

The Cayman Islands' Government applauds the commitment of the British Government to support overseas territories in respect of self-determination, mutual obligations and responsibilities, freedom of the territories to run their own affairs to the greatest degree possible and assistance in promoting economic development. At the most recent meeting of the Overseas Territories Consultative Council in December 2003, I delivered a joint statement in which the overseas territories all recognised the responsibilities incumbent upon them as a consequence of their relationship with the United Kingdom. This affirmed the objective also held by the United Kingdom Government of delivering high standard of governance on behalf of our citizens.

The priority therefore, is improving accountability in our relationship with the United Kingdom's democratic accountability so that our people can run their own affairs. This Government and the United Democratic Party do not want independence. We, like the vast majority of the people of the Cayman Islands greatly value our ties with the United Kingdom and the mutual benefits that flow from this relationship. However, in line with International Standards and the requirements of the twenty first century it is now time to review the details of this relationship.

Foreign Policy

The Cayman Islands Government, any Government of the Cayman Islands, should take a greater role in foreign affairs. This would become increasingly important in relation to various international organisations whose standards impinge directly on the Cayman Islands.

The Cayman Islands Government represented by a senior member or senior members of the Cabinet should engage in those international bodies and groupings that affect the Cayman Islands. We have some strong objections to the way in which the British Government approaches the application of International Treaties to its Overseas Territories. We believe that the United Kingdom is still not paying enough attention to the views of the elected representatives of the Overseas Territories and would hope to ensure that in future the United Kingdom's Government will undertake considerably more consultation with ourselves over both the formation and implementation of Treaties.

In order to protect our interests it is imperative that we maintain a strong presence in all organisations and groups that could potentially implement policies which could have a direct impact on our economy. Without our participation we will leave the future of our Islands in the hands of others; this is not acceptable and we will ensure that we maintain our presence in all the international forums to protect the interests and wellbeing of our Islands.

The Role of Britain

It is right that the United Kingdom should continue to play a role to ensure good governance in the Cayman Islands as an overseas territory. However, there must be a constitutional mechanism which would prevent the United Kingdom from imposing legislation on the Cayman Islands without the consent of the people. Britain could therefore maintain powers in the following distinct areas.

Firstly, with external affairs the United Kingdom Government should continue to represent the Cayman Islands before foreign governments through the Foreign and Commonwealth Office and Britain's diplomatic missions abroad. There must, however, be greater consultation and consent between the United Kingdom Government and the Cayman Islands on diplomatic issues.

Furthermore, external affairs must exclude fiscal and tax policies, which must remain within the control of Cayman Islands politicians and officials.

Secondly, defence matters should remain the responsibility of the United Kingdom Government through the Governor. In addition, the Cayman Islands continue to appreciate the security guaranteed provided by the U.K. Government through its armed forces.

Finally, Britain could maintain powers in relation to law enforcement including the maintenance of domestic order and the role of the police, the Governor would have powers of appointment over the police.

The Governor and the Cayman Islands Government; on these three reserved matters an advisory council chaired by the Governor, comprising the Chief Minister, the Finance Minister, the Chief Secretary and the Attorney General should, after consultation with Cabinet, advise the Governor on policy. This Advisory Council must be consulted by the Governor in advance of any matters relevant to the Cayman Islands being discussed or determined by the U.K. Government.

Furthermore, the Governor should be able to delegate certain powers to the Cayman Islands' Government such as matters relating to police. Powers should be retained by the Cayman Islands and in all other respects the Cayman Islands should be self-governing with executive powers vested in the Cabinet. Key aspects of the economy including laws and taxation, rights of property, environmental law, business law, regulation of shipping and civil aviation, the regulation of the tourist industry, social policy, monetary policy, financial sovereignty and insurance industry policy should be the sole preserve of the Cayman Islands Legislative Assembly and would therefore be protected by constitutional provision. Furthermore, the free market heritage of the Cayman Islands should be protected by constitutional provision preferring the current capitalist model over a socialist system. The Cayman Islands should continue to control its own fiscal policy with the Government being entirely responsible for its own budget. Law enforcement should be financed by the Cayman Islands as should the office of the Governor itself. That is, Mr. Speaker, as it is currently.

Legislation and the Role of the United Kingdom

As a free market democratic country the Cayman Islands should have the power to pass legislation as it sees fit for the benefit of the people of the Islands. Therefore, the Constitution should not, as a matter of principle, contain a clause which would allow the United Kingdom to refuse to grant assent to legislation due to an inconsistency with a United Kingdom treaty obligation.

Modern rights - A Caymanian Bill of rights

There are a great many benefits to enshrining the civil liberties enjoyed by the people of the Cayman Islands in a Bill of Rights, which would in turn be part of the Constitution or separate law. These would include entrenching the enviable rights of all Caymanian citizens; enhancing the Cayman Islands' reputation as a jurisdiction, which respects and defends the rights of individuals in line with the Internationally Recognised Standards and consolidating the Cayman Islands' reputation as a business friendly jurisdiction where property rights are respected and protected by the full force of law.

The United Kingdom has expressed its desire that the Overseas Territories including the Cayman Islands sign up to a model charter and fundamental rights. The Government will work with the British Government to ensure that fundamental human rights and civil liberties are enshrined in law following the implementation of the new Constitution.

Improving Community Engagement

We will also consider the most appropriate ways to improve community consultation. The United Democratic Party is keen to ensure that local communities are consulted in advance of any policy change and that the views of people in districts are taken into account by policy makers. We would also wish to establish a series of district councils aligned with one legislative assembly constituency, that is, one in each district, or a collection of constituencies, as the case may be.

Voluntary and unpaid counsellors would be appointed by the Cabinet in consultation with local elected representatives; that includes the Government and the Opposition. Counsellors who would be well connected and respected figures in their communities would meet regularly to discuss issues of interest in the local community. Their deliberations would be channelled into Government decision making by the Members of the Legislative Assembly for that particular district. This is all part of our strategy to ensure that our people at a district level are afforded an opportunity in governance which affects their lives.

In conclusion, Mr. Speaker, we are a proud and historic people. Our Islands still contain to be the fifth largest financial centre in the world and we are the envy of our neighbours. We must now move forward from the Constitution signed in 1972 that is outdated and cannot deal with the many challenges we are facing today. Essentially, we need a constitution more suitable for the twenty-first century. To get that, Mr. Speaker, we need to be innovative.

We believe that the strategy I have outlined to you today will provide such a system. We propose that we will open discussion for feedback and input with all stakeholders, which includes the Chamber of Commerce and other Non-Governmental Organisations (NGOs). After full and frank discussion with all relevant parties and stakeholders in every district we will make this a key aspect of our election manifesto.

Thank you Mr. Speaker, and of course it will be distributed as it usually is.

The Speaker: Honourable Leader of Government Business may I just clarify with you that this statement is being done under Standing Order 30, which is a statement and not under a Presentation of Paper.

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: That is correct Mr. Speaker, thank you kindly.

The Speaker: The Honourable Leader of the Opposition.

Hon. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Under Standing Order 30 subsection (2), I crave your permission to ask two short questions on the statement that was just made, Sir.

The Speaker: Before granting such permission may I read into the Hansard and for the benefit of Members and the listening public precisely what Standing Order 30 (1) and (2) states. It has to do with statements made by Members of Government.

Standing order 31 states: “A Member of the Government who intends to make a statement on a public matter for which the Government is responsible shall inform the Presiding Officer of his intention before the beginning of the sitting at which he wishes to make the statement” Just to inform Members that this provision was complied with.

In regards to 30(2) it states: “No debate . . .” and may I underscore- “No debate may arise on such a statement but the Presiding Officer may, in his discretion, allow short questions to be put to the Member making the statement for the purpose of clarification”.

Accordingly, I grant permission to the Leader of the Opposition to ask two short questions.

Short Questions

Hon. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Thank you.

Mr. Speaker, this is simply for purposes of clarity. In listening carefully to the Minister's statement, I just wish to understand from this side whether the statement is a statement made on behalf of Cabinet; whether it is made on behalf of the Government or whether it is made on behalf of the United Democratic Party, or both, and if it reflects the position of all of the above.

The Speaker: The Honourable Leader of Government Business.

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: Mr. Speaker, it is a statement made by the United Democratic Party.

The Speaker: Second question please.

The Honourable Minister for Health Services.

Hon. Gilbert A. McLean: Thank you Mr. Speaker.

As a Member of Government and Cabinet, I need to clarify that the statement which was just read by the Leader of Government Business, is one which was not dealt with in the Cabinet nor does this bind me in any way to the proposals put forward in this document. In fact . . .

The Speaker: Honourable Minister, would you turn that into a question? No debate shall be entertained on the statement.

Hon. Gilbert A. McLean: Mr. Speaker, in fact, I received it this morning in my office. I wonder at what point the Leader of Government Business decided for it to be presented today, as I was unaware that this would be presented to the House this morning.

The Speaker: The Honourable Leader of Government Business.

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: Mr. Speaker, this paper was put to a general meeting of the United Democratic Party and it was then agreed to be sent to the United Democratic Party Executive. That was done, and, as I said, this is not made on behalf of Cabinet. I think you have made that absolutely clear when you said it was not a paper, it was a statement I was making, and I think that was the answer I gave to the Leader of the Opposition. That is what I can say about it.

Since the Minister is asking questions, let me clarify. As I said, when I opened the Statement that we pulled out of the talks in London, we said that we would come back to this House; we said that we would come back to the people; we said that we would make it an election campaign issue. Through this medium we are making it available after we have gone through the party process for those who wanted to be involved.

Through this medium we now put in on the Table for the public. We intend to talk to NGO's or at least let me put it this way, I intend, which I feel is a duty that I have, to talk to the Chamber of Commerce, the Bankers Association, People for Referendum and any other NGO that might wish to be talked to in regards to what is before the House or what I have laid on the table.

The Speaker: Are there any other questions? I will entertain one question from the Second Elected Member for George Town and three other questions from individual Members, but no more than one question from each Member.

Mr. Alden M. McLaughlin, Jr.: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Perhaps we could be guided by you Sir, in relation to this matter. This seems to me to be highly irregular.

I have had a look at the Standing Orders and the Standing Order that you referred to Sir; Standing Order 30 sub-order (1) speaks about a Member of the Government making a statement on a public matter for which the Government is responsible. I also have had a look at the document which the Honourable Leader of Government Business has passed out and it is not presented in the way that Statements are normally presented in this Honourable House. It is captioned 'Draft; A Policy Paper; Protecting, Enhancing and Promoting the Cayman Islands; A Cayman Islands Constitution for the Future.'

The guidance I am seeking is whether or not it is appropriate for a statement to be presented here by a Minister, given what the Honourable Minister for Health has now indicated, which is clearly not a position of the Government's, Sir. I seek your guidance on that point.

The Speaker: Honourable Members, to clarify the point raised by the Second Elected Member for George Town. I indeed satisfied myself that the Honourable Minister and Leader of Government Business had cleared this matter with His Excellency the Acting Governor and I was satisfied on this.

When a statement comes to me to be read here, if you read Standing Order 30 (1), and I will read it again:- "A Member of the Government who intends to make a statement on a public matter for which the Government is responsible shall inform the Presiding Officer of his intention before the beginning of the sitting at which he wishes to make the statement." By the time this statement reaches the Presiding Officer it is assumed that all of these procedures have already been met.

Do I have another question? The Honourable Minister for Education.

Hon. Roy Boddin: Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

Could the Leader say when this document was discussed yesterday if there were Members or Ministers who expressed reservation about its public airing and tabling at this time?

The Speaker: The Honourable Leader of Government Business.

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: Yes, Mr. Speaker, but that is no more than normal with the Ministers who have raised the question. I explained to them that we expected the House to close its business today, and, this being July, we needed to get this matter aired if we are going to discuss it.

Mr. Speaker, where the Member considers it irregular . . . I am glad you have explained the position. I spoke to His Excellency, the Acting Governor, and I will just say that this matter went through the United Democratic Party Executive and that this was the medium we sought to put it out.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

Mr. Speaker: I will allow one more, short question from the Opposition, and one from the Government side. The Elected Member for East End.

Mr. V. Arden McLean: Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

I wonder if the Minister can tell us in view of his explaining that this is not from a government position – and obviously since the other Ministers seem to have some disagreement with it, it is not—if this really is the appropriate place to make a position of a party be known? Is it not more appropriate to have this as a platform subject during a campaign?

The Speaker: The Honourable Leader of Government Business.

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: Mr. Speaker, I am a Minister of the Government. The United Democratic Party makes up the majority of the Government. It went through the processes of the United Democratic Party and we are responsible for the Constitution whether some people agree or not. We are the Government and while it did not come as a Paper as such, but came as a statement from me and there are disagreements, the people will decide when this goes out for discussion and all Members will have their say, as it is their democratic right, whether it is the Party, or whether it is Government mixed. I do not see how we can shift the two; we are the United Democratic Party; we are the Government.

I thought that this was the best medium since I had promised to come back to the House and explain where we were going. This is formally where we intend to go and now the public of this country can have a discussion and they can say to us, 'We do not believe A, B, or 1, 2, or 3 items are right, we should do it this way.' They will now discourse upon it, discuss on it and then we can then take input from there. I think this is the best place to have done it, and of course when I put the matter as to whether it should be a Paper, I discussed it with His Excellency, the Acting Governor and told him that we had disagreements on it and he thought the best thing to do was to make a statement on it. Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: As I said earlier, there is one more, short question and I see this is coming from the Second Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman.

Mr. Lyndon L. Martin: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I noticed that the paper circulated is captioned as a 'Draft Paper'. I am hoping that the Honourable Leader can provide whether this would indicate that he would be receptive to changes as a result of public input.

The Speaker: The Honourable Leader of Government Business.

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. That is correct.

This is a Draft Paper and that is what I just explained. I thank the Member for raising that. It is a Draft Paper because we do not have closed minds; we want this to be as much as a democratic process as it can be. I just said that we intend to go the full gamut of civil society to get the necessary feedback so that we can know what we are campaigning on.

Perhaps people want to be nebulous, but I am not going to be nebulous in this campaign. I am going to say, "1. This is the fact. 2. This is the fact. Here is what we are trying to do about it."

The Speaker: Madam Clerk, please call Item 4 on the Order Paper.

OTHER BUSINESS

PRIVATE MEMBERS' MOTIONS

Private Member's Motion No. 2/04

Consider Strengthening Legislation Related to Crimes (Deferred)

The Speaker: The Fourth Elected Member for West Bay who has been authorised in writing by the Second Elected Member from West Bay to deputise for him in his absence.

Motion to Defer Private Member's Motion No. 2/04

Mr. Cline A Glidden, Jr.: Mr. Speaker, in the interest of time and in consultation with my colleague the Second Elected Member from West Bay, I ask for the leave of this Honourable House to defer this Motion No. 2/04 to another sitting of this Honourable House.

The Speaker: Honourable Member, I understand that you are moving a motion for the deferral of Motion No. 2/04. Do I have a second to that Motion?

Capt. A. Eugene Ebanks: Mr. Speaker, I beg to second the Motion.

The Speaker: It has been moved and seconded that Private Member's Motion No. 2/04 be deferred. All those in favour please say Aye. Those against, No.

Ayes.

The Speaker: The Ayes have it.

Agreed: Private Member's Motion No. 2/04 deferred until a later sitting.

Private Member's Motion No. 3/04

Standardisation of Consumer Loan Documentation

The Speaker: The Fourth Elected Member for West Bay.

Mr. Cline A. Glidden, Jr.: Thank you Mr. Speaker. On behalf of my colleague the Second Elected Member from the District of West Bay, I move Private Member's Motion No. 3/04, Standardisation of Consumer Loan Documentation which reads as follows:

"BE IT RESOLVED THAT the Government, through consultation with lending institutions, develop a framework that seeks to standardise the loan documentation to consumers; and

"BE IT FURTHER RESOLVED THAT such documentation would include a projected amortisation schedule."

The Speaker: Is there a seconder?

Capt. A. Eugene Ebanks: Mr. Speaker I beg to second the Motion.

The Speaker: The question is, 'BE IT RESOLVED THAT the Government, through consultation with lending institutions, develop a framework that seeks to standardise the loan documentation to consumers; and 'BE IT FURTHER RESOLVED THAT such documentation would include a projected amortisation schedule.'

The Motion is open for debate. Does the Honourable Mover wish to speak thereto?

Mr. Cline A. Glidden, Jr: Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

Again, on behalf of my colleague, the Second Elected Member from the District of West Bay, I am pleased to bring forward a motion on his behalf, in his absence due to him being overseas on official business. When consideration was being given to the long time that we spent in this Honourable House during this sitting, it was discussed as to whether this Motion as well, should have been deferred, but due to the fact that there has been so much representation made to us as representatives over our last three and three quarter years, we felt that it was imperative that the request of the nature this Motion seeks was made at this time.

We have been besieged by requests for assistance from so many of our constituents who have run into difficulties with that area of life that is so universal to all of us. That is lending and borrowing to try to secure a better future. So many of our people have come forward and the main complaint has been from people who have gone out to get mortgages for homes whereby entering into agreements for whatever reasons which are not clear to them at the time of them entering into the agreements. They get involved in the agreement; live in their homes, five, ten, twenty years down the road and then find that what they agreed to was not exactly what they understood it to be. Through no intentional fault of the lending institution or the individual involved with the financial arrangement, in most cases being a mortgage or some type of loan, that through to a lack of understanding at that stage, difficulties are encountered that cause significant harm and grief to our citizens.

This is not a situation that is unique to the Cayman Islands and for that reason, in other countries of the world there are significant acts and legislation which ensures that whatever possible protections, without being too cumbersome, are provided. Because of these acts and legislation when borrowings are encountered there is certain disclosure and agreements legislated that would ensure a certain amount of protection for the consumers.

As responsible representatives we fully recognise the important role that the financial institutions of the country do provide, both internationally and nationally, and we feel that with some dialogue, and if we look at the text of the Motion it says: "BE IT RE-

SOLVED THAT the Government, through consultation with lending institutions, develop a framework that seeks to standardise the loan documentation to consumers."

The intent of the Motion would be to give some examples of the documentation and legislation that is in place in other countries to provide for, in some cases, truth and lending practices that if the Government could enter consultation with the lending institutions it would be in the best interest of Cayman as a whole, both on the part of the lending institution as well as the consumers, that it was stipulated as to what information was actually presented to the consumers prior to entering into these long term and in most cases life changing agreements, and every attempt is made to make these agreements a positive life change.

With that short introduction as to the reasons for the Motion, I just want to use some examples taken of information received from other countries of legislation that is in place for the benefits of providing what I refer to, as much as possible, the required information to ensure that these agreements are done in such a fashion that will not negatively impact anyone unnecessarily.

Mr. Speaker, I refer first to the Equal Credit Opportunity Act. The Equal Credit Opportunity Act says that lenders cannot discriminate. This Act has been enacted in the United States. It says that this federal legislation ensures that all consumers are given an equal opportunity to obtain credit. The Law says that a creditor may not discriminate against you because of your sex, age, marital status, race, colour, national origin, the receipt of public assistance or because you may have exercised your rights under consumer protection laws. Lenders cannot, by law, say or write anything in advertising or other documents that would discourage a responsible person from applying for credit.

It gives a list as to what creditors cannot do. It says creditors cannot ask for the sex, race, colour, religion or national origin of an applicant. They can however, ask about your permanent residency or immigration status. They cannot ask about your plans for raising or having children. The creditor can however ask about the number of dependants and dependant related financial obligations. They cannot ask whether you receive alimony, child support or separate maintenance payments unless you rely on that income to pay back credit but the lender must first explain that the income from these sources need not be revealed unless the applicant wishes to rely on it to establish creditworthiness. They cannot discount or refuse to consider income because it comes from part-time work, pension, or retirement benefits. They cannot discount income because of your sex or marital status.

It says, for example, that a creditor cannot count a man's salary at 100 per cent and a woman's at 75 per cent. A lender may not assume that a woman will stop working to raise children.

What creditors can do: Creditors can ask about your marital status if you are applying for a joint account or one secured by property, or if you live in a community property state. They can request information about a spouse if any of the following apply: If you live in a community property state, the spouse is a co-applicant; the spouse will share use of the account; if you rely on your spouse's income; or if you rely on child support or alimony from your former spouse. They can ask whether you pay alimony, child support or separate maintenance payments. They can ask the names under which you have previously received credit. They can ask an applicant to list any account upon which the applicant is liable and ask him to provide the name and address of that account.

The Equal Credit Opportunity Act obviously is to ensure that there is no discrimination. We see specifically, no discrimination as to gender, in the event that there may be been the possibility for discrimination if a woman was to seek credit and the lender may have felt that being a young woman the plans were that she may stop working at some stage during the period of repayment of that credit, and there could have been some form of discrimination and the Equal Credit Opportunity Act is designed to ensure that such discrimination does not exist.

I can honestly say that there has not been too much representation made to me concerning discriminations, but we have had more examples of information where the interest rates that were agreed to in the early stages of the mortgage may not have been adequately explained as to how those rates may change. Or, in specific instances, people have said that while the bank has agreed to lend them money as well as to pay for things like insurance, it was not clear to them how that additional expense would be amortised and which would either increase their payments or increase the period of time. In many cases it was only after long intervals had expired and the individual expected that his debt would have been reduced significantly more that it was that they have actually realised the outcome of that addition to the initial premium that was borrowed.

'The Truth and Lending Act' is designed to ensure that certain information that is deemed to be critically important when the decisions are being made that that information is clearly defined so that there would not be any surprises at any given point during the period of the agreement.

'The Truth and Lending Act' says that you need to be able to compare the cost of borrowing to paying cash and compare the cost of borrowing from different lenders. To ensure that consumers can do that the Federal Government mandates that lenders disclose certain costs and terms. You usually get these Truth and Lending Act disclosures when you receive an application for a loan and you will get additional disclosures before the plan is open. This would go a long way if the Government through consultation with the lending institutions could define or design something similar to the Truth and Lending Act that has been implemented. We feel that this would go a long way to helping ease the pain and considerations that many of our constituents have represented to us with the difficulty they have found themselves in after entering into these agreements.

I will go into the details of the 'Truth and Lending Act' just to use as an example of some of the legislation that is used in other areas of the world and things that the Government can consider if the Motion is accepted during their consultations with the lending institutions. 'The Truth and Lending Act' requires lenders to disclose the terms and costs of all loan plans, including the annual percentage rate, points and fees, the total of the principal amount being financed, payment due date and terms including any balloon payment where applicable, late payment fees, features of variable rate loans including the highest rate the lender would charge, how it is calculated and the resulting monthly payments, total finance charges, whether the loan is assumable, the application fee, any annual or one time service fees, pre-payment penalties and where applicable, confirm for you the address of the property securing the loan.

It says that in general neither the lender nor anyone else may charge a fee until you have received this information. Lenders who advertise must meet Truth and Lending Act disclosure requirements with respect to the loan rate and terms. These include specific credit terms in the advertisement must be made available to applicants. If an advertisement includes a rate it must state the rate as an annual percentage rate using that term. This rate takes into account additional costs incurred such as fees and points in the first year of the loan. If the annual percentage rate may be increased after the loan is closed the advertisement must state that fact. The only other rate allowed in the ad is a simple annual rate or periodic rate that is applied to an unpaid balance. It may be stated in conjunction with, but not more conspicuously than the annual percentage rate.

It says where the Truth and Lending Act applies: In general this regulation applies to each individual or business that offers or extends credit when the credit is offered or extended to consumers. The credit is subject to a finance charge or is payable by written agreement in more than four instalments where the credit is primarily for personal, family or household purposes if the loan balance equals or exceeds $25,000, or is secured by an interest in real property or a dwelling.

Obviously they have taken into consideration it only applies to significant loans. When we look at the ceiling of $25,000 it is not meant to be overly cumbersome for small personal loans, but for more significant loans, for example, mortgages where you are looking at the effect of twenty or twenty-five years. It is specifically catering to those longer term agreements and loans where there is the chance of significant changes occurring to the agreed practices or interest rates during that period.

It says the Truth and Lending Act also provides consumers with substantive rights in connection with certain types of credit transactions. Those include the right to cancel certain real estate lending transactions within three days, the regulation of certain credit card practices and a means for fair and timely resolution. It ends by saying the Truth and Lending Act is something that can help you every time you apply for credit, no matter what sort.

When we talk about the Truth and Lending Act it requires meaningful disclosure of credit terms and reflects a shift in emphasis from the traditional 'Let the buyer beware' to more 'Let the seller disclose' and it is designed to protect consumers against inaccurate and unfair credit billing and credit card practices.

The purpose of the Truth and Lending Act is that economic stabilisation and competition is strengthened by the informed use of credit by consumers. It applies to each individual or business that offers or extends credit to individuals and some of the statements required is that disclosure must be made clearly and conspicuously in meaningful sequence, in writing and in a form the consumer may keep.

This specific Motion, as can be seen by the Acts that have been established in other areas recognises that lending, being such a significant part of everyday life, which affects just about all of us, it is important to ensure that when agreements are entered into with the intent to better our lives, it is important that full disclosure is made at those times and that when entering into those agreements you have full knowledge of what you are entering into.

Many times entering into your first home mortgage or even a car loan one has to be careful; for example when an individual gets out of school and they have no experience or expertise in that particular field and because of the excitement involved with the achievement that you have obviously made into either buying your apartment or your house when getting the documentation finalised and obtaining ownership, it is only after the excitement wears off and you have been making those payments that you sometimes then realise that what you understood when you were signing that agreement is not what has actually transpired.

Mr. Speaker, as a growing country it is important that we learn from mistakes that have been made. Other more developed and older countries have recognised the need for such legislation and where practical we should apply those in the best interest of the people of the Cayman Islands. Obviously we cannot take legislation word for word and apply it in the Cayman Islands because we are unique in many ways. However, if we recognise that other countries have seen the need for protection for both sides, not only for the consumer but for the business as well, and that they have been able to address that through the various Acts, some of which, I have mentioned, we feel that the time has come that as a country we should also ensure that our consumers have those same benefits as well.

Mr. Speaker, that is the reason for the Motion. I spoke to some folks who heard we were trying to mandate interest rates and there were various assumptions made as to the intent of this Motion was. Hopefully, now that I have explained all of what we are attempting to do, which is to ensure that the disclosure given at the time of entering into loan agreements or credit agreements between consumers and the lending institutions that there is a certain standard set to ensure that all institutions provide relevant information whereas the choice that is made, the choice as to which institution, as to the period of time, whether it is a fifteen, twenty or thirty year loan, the choice as to interest rates, whether it is fixed or floating; all those choices will be up front and clearly defined in agreed format with the individual so that the experience of lending can be as beneficial and pleasant as possible for all involved.

We hope this will be one of those motions that will receive the support of the whole House; that will not be seen as being as too controversial, and I will be able to gladly relay to my colleague, the Second Elected Member from West Bay that the Motion has received safe passage through this Honourable House. Thank you, Mr. Speaker, and I look forward to the comments and contributions from other Members.

The Speaker: Does any other Member wish to speak?

The Honourable Leader of the Opposition

Hon. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Thank you.

Mr. Speaker, I listened carefully to the Fourth Elected Member of West Bay in presenting the Motion on behalf of his colleague and I hear the intent of the Motion and certainly we on this side do not have any problems at all with the intent of the Motion. However, in hearing the intent of the Motion and in reading the Motion I see a major problem and I am going to explain why.

In reading the Motion, Private Member's Motion No.03/04 entitled 'Standardisation of Consumer Loan Documentation'. So we are speaking to consumer loans and it reads: "BE IT RESOLVED THAT the Government, through consultation with lending institutions, develop a framework that seeks to standardise the loan documentation to consumers; and

"BE IT FURTHER RESOLVED THAT such documentation would include a projected amortisation schedule."

Mr. Speaker, the institutions that the Motion refers to are institutions that are all in competition. It might be said by some of us that in certain areas they may actually collude. While it may be seen by some to be such a thing as collusion the fact is, in this day and age for any one of us who engage in borrowing at various institutions, it is easily seen that it is a very competitive market in all areas, consumer loans being no exception. With the intent of the Motion, as I understand it being, to ensure that the borrower before signing the dotted line and actually engaging in the loan has full knowledge of all terms and conditions of such loan. We certainly agree that we want to make that happen.

In wanting to make that happen, I believe that when the Mover or the Presenter spoke to the 'Truth and Lending Act', that type of situation would better ensure the intent as espoused by the Fourth Elected Member from West Bay. I do not believe that you could sit with these institutions and simply develop a framework which seeks to standardise the documentation to consumers. Because all of the information that is being spoken about, it is almost impossible to say that you are going to 'standardise' the documentation to have that information. To me, it would be better seen if one were to say that you would create legislative framework if it is so desired that you would actually create legislation, which would simply call for the various listings of facts that are to be presented to the borrower, to be included in that documentation.

There mere fact that there is the competition, there are all types of gimmicks that are used nowadays. If you are going to get a consumer loan, there is a 'special' on, and it is not far fetched to hear if you engage in a certain type of loan that is being offered that you receive a gift certificate to get something at a hardware store for $500.00. There are all kinds of activities going on in that competitive field. It is not going to be a practical and easy task, in my view, to get these people together who are in competition as long as they are open. I do not mean like how it used to be in the 1970's; it is real now, because each of those institutions are competing for the individuals to get these loans.

So, to get them together and say that you are going to 'standardise' a form is one thing, but the intent as I understand the Motion, is to be able to ensure that your consumer is with full knowledge and making a decision about a loan from a totally informed position, which tells them all of the ramifications of the loan. As I see it, the intent is perhaps what we want to agree with but I cannot understand, as to how the Motion itself is worded, is going to achieve its intent the way it is worded.

Mr. Speaker, the presenter is perfectly right. In many, many instances because the individuals are so happy if they know that the loan that they desire is approved they are not even interested for one minute until long after they get the proceeds to find out what is the interest rate. Perhaps the furthest they would go at the beginning is how much you paying a month to make sure that they figure they can pay that, while the institution will ask all of these questions. It is true! The Presenter made mention of a first vehicle or a first home, and all of us who are in here if not experiencing it ourselves have experienced our constituents who find themselves in such instances. So, we fully understand and it would be real good to know that there is a mechanism in place, which ensures that these individuals, before they go as far as to collect proceeds and engage in the actual loan, are with full knowledge of the ramifications.

Mr. Speaker, lest it be misunderstood, I believe personally that in the vast majority of cases the people at these institutions do explain all of these ramifications to the individuals, but in the heat of the moment to get the money they are not listening; it does not matter to them then, it is after they get the money. So, we understand where the problem lies, but standardising the documentation I do not see how that is going to achieve the end that you are seeking.

The second part of the Motion resolves that such documentation would include a projected amortization schedule. Lest there be any arguments about my qualifications today, I never professed to be an accountant like your goodly self or the Mover but I know what I know, and I have worked in such institutions in another life. When you have a consumer loan there is absolutely no way under the sun that you could have an amortization schedule attached to it. Ninety nine times out of a hundred it is pegged as a floating interest rate. Sometimes depending on the institution and the relationship with the customer and depending on the advantage the customer will receive where London Interbank Offered Rate (LIBOR) is used. On most occasions it is what we all commonly call prime as the base rate. If it is prime plus two or if it is prime plus three or with consumer loans in most instances, the minimum is prime plus four; lots of time it is more than that depending on how the institution feels they have the customer, whether they have them by the 'short and curlies' or not. Now I am not pulling that one back because I know that that is a fact.

[Laughter]

Hon. D. Kurt Tibbetts: That was not meant to be disrespectful; that was just the quickest way to explain it. When that happens, an amortisation schedule would have to be set out that you have four or five different scenarios. Whatever the prime rate is today because it is very low if the loan is for five years, what kind of projections could anyone make to say what the rate is going to be in the fifth year, meaning you set a certain payment level. The point I make is not to decry the Motion. If there is some way for us to find an answer to assist the consumer, the ordinary person who works hard for a living has to use a lending institution to get along in life because their disposable income does not allow them to purchase all the things and the creature comforts that they want or need, we certainly want for them to be totally informed of what they are getting into and I think that is the intent of the Motion and we accept that.

However, I am throwing the arguments out in this manner because what the Opposition does not want to do is participate in a motion of this nature and it gets passed, and everybody feels good about it and it ends right there. When we look at what the Motion itself is calling for we just cannot grab on to the Motion itself and seeing that achieving what the objective is. The Fourth Elected Member for West Bay has quite eloquently spoken as to what that objective is and we do agree with that.

So, I do not know how it can be looked at as to whether there is a way to word it differently to achieve the same means or whether the Government will speak to it as to accepting its intent and saying what they are going to do, but you see it has some specifics in it, which are little bit worrisome because it calls for the Government through consultation with the lending institutions to develop a framework that seeks to standardise the documentation. We say standardising the documentation is not necessarily going to achieve what the Mover spoke to.

If you standardise the documentation and you fill in the blanks as you go along and everyone has the same thing, and just pop in what the rates are, what the schedule is; it still does not make the consumer leave the institution engaging in the loan with more knowledge than before. We have accepted and I see the heads shaking when I say, and I heard the Mover mention, many of the individuals who go to get a loan, because they are so excited about trying to get that loan they really do not listen to all of the terms and conditions of the loan and it is after the fact that they realise certain things.

What the mover would speak to about years later with a loan, the most common cause of that is because the loan is pegged at a floating interest rate, in today's world when prime for instance is, I think, 4.25 per cent at present and its prime plus three or four, so in today's world the interest rate 8.25 per cent, lets say for instance of the loan and then three years from now prime is 7 per cent. Then because of the way it is structured the interest rate three years from now on the loan is going to be 11.25 per cent and there can be a serious difference when it comes to how much that is. What they usually do is not put a ceiling on your payment, they tell you what the payment is now, but because of how much has to go on the principle and how much the interest is because the rate has increased, you might find three years from now that the payment increases from what it was today and you will wonder why saying: 'well I was always paying this, why am I paying more?' When it is explained to you, you will realise that it was pegged at prime with a floating interest rate and because interest rates rose then your payments increased accordingly. This is really a difficult one for us but to simply agree to the Motion as it is worded, in our view is not in the spirit of the intent of the Motion.

Perhaps it is a situation that it would be in order for the Honourable Third Official Member who may, once, as I am certain he has listened to the motion in understanding the technical expertise, may be able to perhaps give guidance as to the type of methodology that may be employed to achieve what the Motion wants and maybe that would make everybody at ease.

I found it very necessary to throw out the issues that I have thrown out because again, as I said, it is something that we would very much like to take on board and not argue about why we did not bring it, but to say that understanding the spirit of the Motion and its intent we would like to be able to participate and support the Motion. However, we wanted to point these things out because I believe we need to get to a type of understanding with the intent of the Motion that we would be able to come up with what we really think is something that is workable.

It may be argued that in standardising the documentation the intent of the Motion could be achieved, but physically I just do not see how. Because it does not matter what you have in a set of documentation, it does not change the fact that unless the consumer is 'educated', and that is quote, unquote, Mr. Speaker, enough to be discerning enough to make sure that he or she understands all of these ramifications before rather than afterwards. Then it does not really matter what we do.

So, understanding the potential difficulties in how we arrive at it, Mr. Speaker, I believe the Mover is clear on the points that I am trying to make. Let us hope that as we sit and listen that we will find a way to move forward with the Motion and get it in a practical way that we believe when we take the vote that everyone is convinced it could actually make a difference and give some direction towards alleviating the problems that the Motion itself brings to light with regards to the consumers, which in the majority of instances will be the constituents.

I do trust that the replies we hear and the Mover in winding up will be able to look to the arguments that have been put forward and will be able to put the matter to bed in such a manner that all of us can be satisfied in the way forward. Thank You.

The Speaker: Does any other Member wish to speak? The Honourable Leader of Government Business.

Hon. W. McKeever Bush: Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

We believe there is a need for the Motion before us. We believe there is need to enhance the efficiency of financial markets in the Cayman Islands, so as to promote lower spreads between savings and lending rates. As you know the rate on bank deposits has fallen well below 1 per cent. The rates on commercial bank loans have proven much stickier downwards, with the prime rate as high as 4 per cent on mortgages at 7 per cent. We hope this measure can help us do something.

There has been a high level of liquidity in the commercial banking system in recent times. Indeed the supply of deposits to commercial banks far exceeds the demand for loans from them. In the jargon of economists the demand and supply for loanable funds are certainly not in balance; are not in equilibrium. Largely responsible for this situation has been the extremely low rates of interest prevailing in the United States making it difficult for Cayman Islands banks to significantly enhance earnings by moving their funds into the U.S.A financial markets and they have therefore tried to sustain their profitability by keeping interest rates on loans high. This situation is likely to occur from time to time in a small and wealthy open economy like ours, with a high per capita income but with a small domestic economy. As it is now, the Cayman Islands boast about per capita income of US$35,000, one of the highest in the New World.

It is not surprising that our citizens should build up such a high level of savings deposits in the commercial banking systems. At the same time since services account for 95 per cent of the Gross Domestic Produce (GDP) and is financed primarily through large scale foreign investments, the scope for domestic business investment is therefore quite limited. Moreover, the small size of the population, less than 50,000 people, also limits the extent of consumer finance operations. The spread between bank deposits and bank loans is determined by the efficiency by these markets and the spread in highly efficient markets are narrower than they are in less efficient markets.

In the U.S.A. where the number of commercial banks is about 12,000 and where there are a large number of powerful corporations with considerable bargaining power, financial markets are highly competitive and the spread between the cost of funds and return on loanable funds are correspondingly very narrow.

In the Cayman Islands however, there are only six commercial banks actively participating in the domestic market. On the other hand the vast majority of potential domestic borrowers are households with little bargaining power and hardly any ability to shop around for better bargains. It is well established in economic theory that a monopolist, if you want to call it that, or those six, are able to obtain higher market prices than firms operating in highly competitive and efficient markets. I am not saying by any means that our commercial banks wickedly collude in the setting of interest rates, but economic textbooks do tell us that firms naturally earn higher profits in these markets than in highly competitive markets.

Commercial banks will be pleased to hear that the proposal is not the thin edge of the wedge, leading to government regulation of interest rates in the Cayman Islands; that is not what we are saying. Government understands only too well that the establishment of the bureaucracy for such regulation would not only lead to an increase in public expenditure but also to increase cost of commercial bank operation, and eventually to even wider spreads between deposits and loan rates. Government also fully understands that reduced opportunities for making lucrative business loans domestically and for the laying off of surplus funds abroad has put pressure on commercial bank profitability making even break-even results difficult. Moreover, we fully understand that the fixed costs of remaining in business, that is, salaries utilities, license fees and so on do not fall pari passu with the decline in lucrative business loans opportunity. That is why the proposal approaches the problem of excessive market spreads from an entirely different angle.

We noted that the more efficient the market, the narrower the spread between deposit rates and lending rates. For example where the spread between saving deposit rates and the prime rate is over 7 per cent in Cayman, corresponding spreads in the U.S.A. are just over 3 percentage points and even less in the case of mortgages. Indeed millions of Americans were able to refinance their mortgages cashing out large sums because large financial markets like those of the United States are naturally more efficient than small ones; for example, the Cayman Islands. We cannot hope to achieve the spreads as narrow as those in the U.S.A. but we should be able to do a lot better than we are doing at present.

We can assign great importance to the reliable flow of information to consumers of financial products, mortgages, consumer loans and to the transparency of financial transactions. It is important that would-be borrowers obtain full and clear information about financial products and that those financial transactions are borrower friendly. Too often on financial documents the most important information is to be found in the fine print; that is why this standardisation of loan documentation to consumers is important.

Borrowers who have available full disclosure of costs, maturities and a variety of loan options may be able to shop around and sometimes maybe even bargain for lower rates or even refuse certain terms. The intention of Government is to try to level the playing field for financial institutions and those who consume these products, the borrowers. In the United States the borrower making a mortgage loan has before him a range of options, fixed rates, for ten, fifteen, twenty or thirty years even, adjustable rates with various features rates and maturities and so on and he or she is then able to select the one that suits him best.

The United States Government through the division of finance and corporate securities of the Department of Consumer and Business Services expends great effort and resources to ensure accurate information flows to consumers of financial services and on their general education. There is for example, 'Truth in Lending Legislation' to ensure that the quoted interest rates on loans are in fact the true rates; that is in the United States. In 2002, the Consumer Information Program was established to provide education and information to consumers who are in the process of purchasing or refinancing their homes. The coordinator works closely with first-time and low-income borrowers who are seeking to obtain a mortgage loan. The United States authorities obviously understand that the more informed the participant the more efficient their market. So, the purpose of this proposal may then be described as the education of the public and the simplification and transparency of financial transactions.

The more available the financial information and the more simplified and transparent the transaction the more efficient the financial market of the Cayman Islands will be and in time the spread between savings and loan rates will be narrower. This goal cannot be achieved overnight, and we must recognise that the longest journey begins with a single step. We believe this can be a cooperative effort.

The program that this Motion seeks to initiate is much more challenging. For one thing, the technical resources for such an exercise will have to be developed, they are not readily available. Moreover, it is the policy of Government to involve affected parties in any program in which their interests are at stake and therefore it is the intention of the Government to invite lending institutions to participate in the development of a framework that seeks to standardise the loan documentation to consumers and which would include a projected amortization schedule.

We are not mandating interest rates but I tell you that we need to ensure at some time, if a person has borrowed $60,000 after ten years of payment, it could not, it would not be still $60,000! I have seen where sometime ago a newspaper, running for about three or four months, sometimes double pages, full of homes taken away for sale. We, in this Legislative Assembly have talked about it long enough and now have to try to find a way forward. We believe in the discussion of this framework; we can come to grips of framework for the standardisation with a course of action that can remedy the situation.

Mr. Speaker, I have seen it. People have come to me and said that they have been paying for nine, 10, sometimes 12 years; it is a serious problem with a lot of people and I know other MLA's have been talked to as well. I have heard people say: 'I have been paying my loan for these past 12 years and I borrowed $65,000 and it is only now down to $60,000'. I have had to go to court with people to plead with the Court not to take their home and to not just take the institutions situation and say after this non-payment you now have to go this route through the Court. I have had to go and plead for persons and say do not take away this from the person; just look at the other side, take a chance Court and look over time and at what the person is saying, how much they have paid. There has to be something radically wrong here, and that has happened in this country many, many times. As I said, I have newspapers that have double pages of advertisements of homes; that can do our country no good, not in a time when we say we are prosperous and have such a high per capita income. Of course, we know that all income is relative.

For one, we will support the Motion as it is because we believe that we need this framework, and that from that framework we can get a measure or a course of action to deal with some of these problems. It think it is worthy, Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: Honourable Members I propose to take the luncheon suspension at this time, and we will return at 2:30 p.m.

Mr. Alden M. McLaughlin, Jr.: Mr. Speaker, I have the honour of delivering the obituary for the late Capt. Carl Bush this afternoon at three o'clock, and I can see the way that the way this debate is going this is likely to conclude shortly after the lunch is over and we resume. There is also an Order Paper, some government business, the Parliamentary Pensions (Amendment) Bill, and the Public Service Pensions (Amendment) Bill.

The Speaker: Honourable Member, not to cut you, but I think I see the drift of your discussion and it would only have been necessary to come and I would have tried to rearrange the items on the agenda. What I think we can do in your case, because I think this arose yesterday, and it is only reasonable that we should try to accommodate your situation. I am not sure what time the funeral starts; is it at three o'clock? At three o'clock we could rearrange the Order Paper so that we take your two Private Member's Motions after the Government Motions on the Paper and that should certainly give you sufficient time to be able to be back and take your Motion. If this is satisfactory we will go until the Order Paper is completed.

The Speaker: Honourable Leader of the Government Business.

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: Yes, Mr. Speaker. Mr. Speaker, I think that your proposal is acceptable. We certainly would agree with the Member. I would have liked to be able to attend and if I can I certainly will be. Even if we will go on with other business and when the Member returns we will then go on to his business because as we said from yesterday we want to try to finish up tonight. So, we will work with him on that.

The Speaker: As most of us know, any Member of Government can rearrange the order of items. The Leader of Government Business has stated that he is quite happy to rearrange the items on the Order Paper. So, we will take the luncheon suspension at this time.

Proceedings suspended at 12.58 pm*Proceedings resumed at 2.59 pm

The Speaker: Please be seated. Continuation of the debate on Private Member's Motion, No. 3/04— Standardisation of Consumer Loan Documentation. Does any other Member wish to speak? Does any other Member wish to speak?

The Honourable Third Official Member.

Hon. George A. McCarthy: Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

Mr. Speaker, the Honourable Leader of Government Business has already indicated that the Government will be supporting this Motion. However, I will just offer a few comments in addition to those that he shared with this Honourable House.

The Motion reads: “BE IT RESOLVED THAT the Government through consultation with lending institutions develop a framework that seeks to standardise the loan documentation to consumers; and

“BE IT FURTHER RESOLVED THAT such documentation would include a projected amortisation schedule.”

Mr. Speaker, at times we are all aware that borrowers may find themselves in difficulties after obtaining a mortgage loan for defined duration and at fixed repayment sums. Oftentimes, if a loan is given or obtained for a period of 15 or 20 years it is not unusual to hear some borrowers saying that at a point midway through the loan, if it is a 15 year loan after a period of 10 years, if they borrow, let us say for example, $100,000 and would have expected that the balance would have been reduced significantly, they are very much surprised that it is almost at the same level of the amount that was originally borrowed.

Oftentimes various actions are ascribed to the lending institutions to say that there could be things that are wrong or incorrect actions on the part of the lending institution that would have contributed to this and this oftentimes, or most times is not necessarily the case. What is absent from the process is the education exercise that should have been gone through to assist the borrower in coming to an understanding as to the circumstances that can bring about the situations that they often experience. Oftentimes we know that loans or mortgages that are granted to borrowers are not at fixed interest rates, and the rates fluctuate because oftentimes we are being guided by what takes place within the United States of America. We do find for example, when the interest rates were quite low or are quite low at this time, a borrower may obtain a mortgage and a given amount is stated to be the sum that will constitute the amount to be repaid on a monthly basis. If the interest rate is set at 'X' percentage it will then be worked out by the lending institution to say that 'Y' amount out of the sum to be paid will be applied to interest and the remainder will be applied to the reduction of the principle.

We do know that in circumstances like this, we find that at the beginning of the mortgage period, we know that the bulk of the money paid out normally goes towards interest with a small amount towards the principle reduction. There are certain events that can occur during this time that can have an adverse impact upon a borrower's mortgage balance. As I mentioned earlier, and the Fourth Elected Member from West Bay made reference to this point, we could have fluctuation in interest rates and we could also have a requirement for the property to be kept fully insured. Oftentimes if the borrower does not cover this insurance himself or herself, the lending institution will normally go ahead and cover the cost of the insurance premium and this is added onto the mortgage balance.

There is another situation that can arise and this is where borrowers are not often punctual with the making of their monthly repayments and a number of them miss repayments, and this in itself results in the interest that would otherwise be payable being added on to the mortgage balance. What is important Mr. Speaker, and all Honourable Members, the Fourth Elected Member from West Bay together with the Honourable Leader of Government Business and The Honourable Leader of the Opposition have all made reference to the point as to a need for lending institutions to ensure that borrowers are properly informed as to the risk associated with obtaining a mortgage.

The point made by the Fourth Elected Member for West Bay in respect of the legislation which exists in the United States, which is the 'Truth and Lending Act', in my opinion, I cannot see the local financial institutions having a difficulty in terms of looking at this piece of legislation and the requirements for borrowers to be informed. I am prepared on behalf of the Portfolio of Finance and Economics acting on behalf of the Government, to also give an undertaking that I will contact, or the Portfolio of Finance of Economics will contact the clearing banks to invite them to look at this piece of legislation and to see if certain aspects of it can be adopted and if need be, if they would be prepared at the end of the dialogue to see whether it would be useful for legislation to be introduced making this a requirement. Because at the end of the day, as the Honourable Leader of the Opposition pointed out in his remarks, oftentimes these individuals are so enthused in terms of getting access to the funds that they do not take into account the risk associated, or let us say, asking for all of the information that would be useful in terms of assisting them in avoiding some of the pitfalls that they encounter later on.

The Honourable Leader of Government Business made reference to the point earlier that we always find that deposits in local institutions oftentimes exceeds amounts that are being loaned out to the public. However, we know that given the size of the Cayman Islands market and the various economic reports that have been tabled in the Honourable House in the past; given an indication in terms of the amount of funds that have been loaned out to the public and we know that that is quite substantial relative to the indigenous currency in circulation. As a consequence we know that the amount, the monies that are being loaned out oftentimes are denominated in US dollars. These are funds where certain amount of the deposits will be generated locally as well as others which will arise from elsewhere making their way into the local institutions. As a result of that we do find that when loans are made, although these loans are given in Cayman Islands dollars the documentation often makes reference to the fact that the monies can be called upon to be repaid in a foreign currency, for example, United States Dollars. That in itself aligns itself to the movement that takes place with the interest rate factor in the United States.

We know that in large countries such as the United States we do find that oftentimes loans can be made available with fixed interest rates for a defined period of time. Oftentimes this is not the case within the Cayman Islands. What is important is that financial institutions should point out to borrowers that fluctuation in interest rates will have an impact in terms of how much of the monies that they are being repaid will be applied to a principle reduction and to point out the add-ons that can occur that will keep the balance much higher than what it should be. Wherever significant changes are coming about in interest rates where the bulk of the funds that are being repaid on a monthly basis will be used up in terms of meeting the interest cost, I think it would be useful for institutions to inform their borrowers that this is taking place so that if the borrowers are in a position to increase their monthly repayments that that can be done.

Again, I think there has to be some responsibility taken as well, on the part of the borrowers to ensure that they keep themselves apprised in terms of what is happening with their mortgages. Because to get a loan, say for example, in year one but not to find out that very little movement is taking place in the principle balance until year five or year seven suggests that this person may not be as attentive as he or she should be.

I think what this debate is proposing here today, is one where dialogue should commence, to inform the public in terms of the process; inform the public in terms of the risk involved of borrowing from any source, any local financial institutions and also to invite the institutions as well to engage in greater dialogue so that borrowers are apprised in terms of the events that are likely to occur that when an amortisation schedule is given to say that if you repay 'X' amount of dollars over a period of 15 years with this being fixed on a monthly basis that your loan will be repaid. However, they should go on to point out that this will be subject to all of these factors remaining constant but if not and these variations were to occur it would mean that certain adjustments would have to be made to the monthly repayments.

So, Mr. Speaker, with those remarks I endorse the position indicated earlier as to the Government's support for this Motion, Mr. Speaker. Thank you.

The Speaker: Does any other Member wish to speak? Does any other Member wish to speak? Last call, does any other Member wish to speak? If not, would the Mover of the Motion, the Fourth Elected Member for West Bay wish to exercise his right of reply?

Mr. Cline A Glidden, Jr.: Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

Mr. Speaker, I first want to thank the Members of this House who have spoken in favour and added their support to the Motion. The Third Official Member just addressed I think, some of the concerns of the Honourable Leader of the Opposition who expressed support but who also had some concerns and questions exactly as to the operation. I also want to thank the Leader of Government Business for his acceptance of the Motion.

In winding up, in reference to the point the Leader of the Opposition made concerning the lending institutions being in competition with one another, which we are quite happy to have, we would never want to remove any of that individuality or competition that exists amongst the institutions. What we meant when we said to do in consultation with the lending institutions was—and I think the Leader of Government Business made the point—that since they are going to be the affected parties to ensure that they have a say and are comfortable with whatever changes or proposed legislation comes forward. I fully understand where the Leader of the Opposition was going when he said that to try and get a standard, to get them all to agree to standardised documentation would remove some of the advantages; some of the incentives that the institutions may give to try and encourage business. The intent was never to standardise and say that basically everyone had to offer the same thing.

An example that was used again is information from the Truth and Lending Act. It says that the typical disclosures that would standardised would be to ensure that in all cases the identity of the creditor is disclosed, the amount financed, the itemisation of the amount financed, the annual percentage rate including applicable variable rate disclosures, the finance charge, the total of payments, the payment schedule, if there is pre-payment or late payment penalties, and if applicable to the transaction total sale costs, demand feature, security interest insurance, required deposit and reference to contract. The idea was just to standardise that all the institutions would give at least consistently that information. There is nothing to stop certain institutions from offering more information; there is no intent to stop the institutions from offering additional incentives or additional information to that. We just wanted to make sure that as a minimum there was a standardised minimum that all institutions would agree that as a minimum this would be what was given as far as information and disclosure.

Again, I understand fully when the Leader of the Opposition said that being in competition, we do not want to take away their ability to be able to aggressively pursue the business by giving incentives or even giving lower rates or whatever they may do. However, I think we could agree on some minimum standards of information that would be disclosed.

The other point that the Leader of the Opposition made was concerning the amortisation schedule and he is right in saying that there could be a fluctuation, and depending on what rate is used, whether it is prime or whether it is LIBOR the idea was that the amortisation schedule be given as a projection. However, as the Third Official Member just said, given the possibilities and information there were variables that could make a change to that if there was some schedule as to when amortisation schedules would be given, possibly on an annual basis of four or five years. What could be given as well is a range, they could say this is the amortisation schedule at the current rate in using historical trends and this is the amount of variance we expect for the period of time.

He is right the rates do change; they do fluctuate. What we were attempting to get is some indication so that the consumers would have an idea taking into account what we could have with a minimum change and with what the maximum has been in the last 10 or 15 years. So, we could give two amortisation schedules, saying what a best and worst case scenario would be.

Those schedules would obviously go a long way to assist consumers in knowing at any given point in time or having a good idea at any given point in time as to the position of the individual in relation to their payments. In addition, the amortisation schedule on short term loan would have less variance because of the amount of fluctuation and changing of interest rates for that period; let us say a three or five year car loan would be much less susceptible to the changes and variation.

Mr. Speaker, I think the Leader of Government Business made the point that we have seen in the recent past that so many foreclosures on homes have been done and homes that have been repossessed by financial institutions. In many cases those individuals may, for whatever reason, have not been able to meet, because of changes in their circumstance, but in some cases regrettably those foreclosures came about because of a lack of planning or lack of information, which caused a lack of planning on the individuals' behalf. So, the hope would be that with the support of this Honourable House, the undertaking that was given by the Third Official Member and what I expect to be the support of the private sector and those lending institutions, that working together we could standardise the process to the extent that would allow for a bit more information and disclosure for those consumers who are seeking credit and mortgage assistance.

Mr. Speaker, it is all an attempt to make life here, in the Cayman Islands, as good as we can make it. I hope that this Motion which obviously has the support of the Government and the Opposition will hopefully assist the residents of this beautiful island. Mr. Speaker, I thank all the Members that have spoken for their support and for those that have not spoken for their tacit support. Thanks again.

The Speaker: The question is that 'BE IT RESOLVED THAT the Government through consultation with lending institutions, develop a framework that seeks to standardise the loan documentation to consumers, and BE IT FURTHER RESOLVED THAT such documentation would include a projected amortisation schedule.' All those in favour please say Aye. Those against, No.

Ayes

The Speaker: The Ayes have it.

Agreed. Private Member's Motion No. 3/04 passed.

The Speaker: Honourable Members, as was agreed prior to taking the luncheon suspension, Private Member's Motion No. 4/04 and 5/04 would be deferred until later on in today's Sitting when the Honourable Mover of the Motion has returned from an unavoidable engagement. I call on Madam Clerk to read item five.

GOVERNMENT BUSINESS

BILLS

Suspension of Standing Orders 45, 46(1),(2) and (4)

The Speaker: The Honourable Leader of Government Business.

Hon. W. McKeever Bush, OBE, JP: Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

I move for the suspension of Standing Orders 45, 46(1), (2) and (4) to allow the Parliamentary Pension (Amendment) Bill, 2004 to be read a first and second time. And also Mr. Speaker, we believe that we should take it through all its stages inclusive of the Third Reading, that particular Bill.

The Speaker: So, we will have a Third Reading on the Parliamentary Pensions Bill.

Hon. W. McKeever Bush: I am going to ask that Standing Order 47 also be suspended in order to have that Third Reading of the Parliamentary Pensions (Amendment) Bill 2004.

The Speaker: The question is that Standing Orders 45, 46(1), (2) and (4) and Standing Orders 47 be suspended to allow the Parliamentary Pension (Amendment) Bill, 2004 to be read a first, second and third time. All those in favour please say Aye. Those against No.

Ayes.

The Speaker: The Ayes have it.

Agreed. Standing Orders suspended.

FIRST READINGS

Parliamentary Pension Bill, 2004

The Clerk: The Parliamentary Pensions Bill, 2004.

The Speaker: The Bill is deemed to have been read a first time and is set down for Second Reading.

SECOND READINGS

Public Service Pensions (Amendment) Bill, 2004

The Speaker: The Honourable Third Official Member.

Hon. George A. McCarthy: Mr. Speaker, I beg to move the Second Reading of a Bill entitled the Public Service Pensions (Amendment) Bill, 2004.

The Speaker: The Bill has been duly moved, does the Honourable Member wish to speak thereto?

Hon. George A. McCarthy: Mr. Speaker the purpose of this Bill is to bring greater clarity to the rule of the Public Service Pensions Board and Cabinet as it relates to the administration of the Public Service Pensions Law (2004 Revision), hereinafter referred to as the principal Law. Mr. Speaker, clause 2, sub-clause (1) the Bill amends section 3 of the principal Law, firstly by repealing and replacing the current definitions of "contracted officers supplement", "employers", and "other public service" in order to cover the participation of the government companies in the plan.

The new definition of "contracted officer's supplement" provides for the requisite exemption of employees of these entities who are paid contracted officer's supplement. Whereas the definition of "employer" and "Other Public Service" replaces the "approval of the Board" with the "approval of the Governor in Cabinet". Clause 3 amends section 5 of the principal Law to make it clear that the responsibility of the Board of Directors is also to include the establishment of policies for the general administration of the Board. Additionally, the Board is to ensure compliance with provisions of the Public Management and Finance Law.

Clause 4 makes a minor transitional amendment to section 6 of the principal Law by substitution the word "persons" for the "participants" to cover those persons who are former employees of the government, and who are recently granted pension entitlement under the Public Service Pensions (Amendment) Law 2002.

Honourable Members should note that Clause 5 of the Bill amends section 11 of the principal Law to change the financial year end, from the 31st December to the 30th of June to align the Public Service Pensions Board fiscal year end with that of the Government. In addition, it shortens the period for the preparation, certification and tabling of the financial statements of the Board to this Honourable House. This will result in the financial statements being tabled in this Honourable House in a shorter period of time after the close of the Board's financial year end.

Clause 6 amends the principal Law in section 12 by repealing and replacing subsection (3) to bring balance to the powers of the Board of Directors. This amendment seeks to allow the Board of Directors to recommend to the Financial Secretary changes to the current contribution rates structure after the appropriate actuarial valuation has been carried out. This clause further provides that the Financial Secretary, after considering the Report shall submit it to Cabinet, at which time the Cabinet can accept the Board's Actuarial Report or approve the recommended changes to the contribution rate structure, or require that a separate actuarial valuation be carried out.

After the acceptance of the actuarial report and contribution rate by Cabinet the Financial Secretary is required to immediately lay the Report on the Table of the Legislative Assembly for twenty-one days and then the Actuarial Report will be Gazetted.

Clause 7 amends section 17 of the Law to require that contributions be paid into the fund within 15 days after the requisite pay period, so that the contributions can be invested in a timely manner.

Clause 8 amends the principal Law in section 27 to provide that persons who were employed in a pensionable post for a period of 10 years or more be paid a pension of not less than $400 per month or not less than the minimum ex-gratia pension payable under the Public Service Pensions (Ex-Gratia Pensions) Regulations, 2002; whichever is the greater. Clause 10, amends the law in section 38 to provide for circumstances in which an employee upon reaching maximum pension eligibility in the defined benefit part of the plan, prior to normal retirement age, can have his or her defined benefit calculated and frozen, and immediately commence participation in the defined contribution part of the plan until he or she retires. At retirement, the retired employee will receive both benefits accrued under the defined benefit and the defined contribution part of the pension plan.

Clause 11 makes minor amendments to section 39 of the Law, to widen the category of persons who are entitled to a minimum pension. This is to ensure that more equitable benefits are paid, specifically, to include the deferred vested participants and permanently disabled pensioners.

Clause 13 amends the First Schedule of the principal Law to allow the Board to appoint a secretary. The secretary will not be a Director Board.

Clauses 14, 12 and 9 are simply transitional clauses.

Mr. Speaker, I have submitted to the Clerk of the Legislative Assembly notice of a committee stage amendment to the Bill. This, Mr. Speaker, with your approval has been circulated. The main purpose of the amendment is to redefine 'participants contribution account' to recognise benefits accrued under the defined benefit part of the plan for service rendered prior to the commencement of contributions into the fund on the 1st of January, 1990. This, Mr. Speaker, in essence is the substance of the amending Bill before this Honourable House and I would invite Honourable Members to give their support to this Bill.

The Speaker: Does any other Member wish to speak? Does any other Member wish to speak?

The Honourable Leader of the Opposition.

Hon. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Thank you.

Mr. Speaker, in looking through the Bill and comparing it with the existing legislation and improvements which are being proposed, I just want to speak shortly to the comments made by the presenter, the Honourable Third Official Member, to say that generally the Opposition certainly has no problems with what is being proposed, and it certainly, in most instances, brings clarity and clearer definition to various existing sections.

I note for instance, that Clause 9 of this Bill proposes an amendment to section 29(3), which in the principal Law reads as present, with your permission Mr. Speaker . . .

The Speaker: Please continue.

Hon. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Thank you.

It reads: "An active defined benefit participant who transfers from the service to a non-participating Statutory Authority may, with the approval of the Board and the employing Statutory Authority, continue as an active defined benefit participant."

That is somebody in core government who was under the defined benefit scheme and who may, for one reason or another, be transferred to a government owned company. The principal Law only refers to statutory authority and the amendment in the Bill simply states that the principal Law is amended in section 29(3) as I just read it, by inserting after the words "Statutory Authority" wherever they appear the words "or Government company." It is certainly a necessary amendment because you would not want someone who was under the defined benefits scheme moving over into a government company, which is not necessarily a statutory authority, but could be moving from one department to another agency of government, which is not an authority but is still a government owned company. You would not want that person to be deprived of being into the same scheme of things as was his or her original terms of employment. I just use that example to say that it is matters like these that certainly do need clearing up, because you would not want individuals to get caught. We will notice that as is called for by the times, you have more authorities being formed and you will have more government companies, not just being formed but operating and with the advent of the Public Management and Finance Law, which brings all of the Governments' statutory authorities and the companies under the one umbrella especially with the reporting through the legislative process with the financial reporting.

You may well from time to time find individuals who are in core government now as time goes on; you will have had some examples but probably not many. However, as time goes on we will find that employment opportunities may well occur within these government companies and people in core government who may well be qualified for these positions would wish to transfer over into these companies. You certainly would not want their pensionable benefits and arrangements to differ and for that to have an adverse affect on them desiring to seek the opportunity of either upward mobility through moving to a government owned company, or for instance, during the period of time of their employment with core government they may have had some specific training, which is more relevant to the government owned company than the actual job description which they hold at present. It is instances like these where we see good sense in the amendments.

If we go through the Memorandum and Objects of Reasons, we also see where Clause 6 amends section 13 of the principal Law, to amend the process relating to changes in contribution rates. The principal Law speaks to, and with your permission, Sir . . . section 13(1) reads: On the coming into force of this Law and such other times thereafter as it deems appropriate, but in no event later than the three-year anniversary of the last review, the Board shall cause a review to be carried out to assess and evaluate the assets and liabilities of the fund in order-

- (a) to determine whether it remains capable of meeting its liabilities for the following period of at least 40 years at the rate or rates of contribution then in force;
- (b) if it is not so capable, to ascertain what rate or rates of contribution would be required to reinstate that capability; and

(c) to determine the amount to be reflected on the balance sheet, and the first of such reviews shall assess the assets and liabilities of the Fund as at 1st January, 1999.

The amendment specifies the type of review which has to take place as it speaks to in the marginal notes. Where the principal Law only now has "actuarial valuation", this amendment will cause the marginal note to read "actuarial valuation and contribution rates". Without reading all of the specifics in the proposed amendment to section 12, what this does is clearly set out the process, not in generic terms as obtains in the present Law but with specific time lines, not just a three year period. As I understand it, Sir, the experience that we now have with the actuarial reviews that have taken place, lead us to be able to be much more pointed in specifying the process and that is how you would wish for it to be. For years we have continually been plagued with past service liability and the public service pension fund being underfunded tremendously causes for a contingent liability of several million dollars. I do not even wish to quote the figure at this point in time.

If we reflect on the past, by continually not addressing it over extended periods of time, we find that when you do go to address it the amount of actual money that you have to deal with and the rates of contribution that gets proposed, in order to bring it back in line, are rates that the Government does not even wish to have entertain because the money comes out of general revenue. If I am not mistaken, at present the government has to consider an actuarial review which might propose prohibitive contribution rates.

I remember a question being asked very recently in the Legislative Assembly and the Honourable Third Official Member referred to the question by saying that the review was being considered by Cabinet at that point in time, and the answer alone told us that obviously it is not an easy one, the way the answer was given to us. I do not know what has happened since then with regards to Cabinet's consideration.

I only bring that as a point to say that it is good for us to be looking at making these amendments to the Law so that for future generations by pinpointing exactly the process that has to take place you will not get into extended periods, and for Cabinet to be considering actuarial reviews for two or three years hence. It has a tendency to happen; not because you do not want to address it, but because when you look at the actual monies that you speak to; when you speak of an entire public service, it can be a very serious drag on government's revenue, and I know that I am correct in speaking to that.

The only true answer as you fight that uphill battle is to not put it aside at any one time but to grab it like you grab the bull by the horns and deal with it. Otherwise it is going to get to where you will have another untenable circumstance, which prevailed probably some ten or twelve years ago, when what is considered now to be the past service liability; ten or twelve years ago the figure was probably more than what it is now and in relative terms that was a tremendous amount. That was when we had the readjustment in short order, when the contribution was four plus four and it moved fairly quickly, as a result, to six plus six.

There is no sense of us not dealing with the matter. The fact of the matter is how the Government has had to handle the situation is, while not being able to physically give civil servants the type of raise in salary that they would wish, but the salaries are calculated and worked out so that the entire contribution, which is now 12 per cent comes out of general revenue and is calculated in that manner so that it did not adversely affect the actual take home pay of the civil servants. That is as I understand it. The point that I make with that is that if we do not address that in short order we might find ourselves in untenable circumstances and it is only the civil servants who will feel the negative effects. So, in saying all of that, section 2 especially, is in order to be amended.

There are several other sections calling for some minor amendments and perhaps having listened to the Honourable Third Official Member, I need not make any specific reference to any one of these sections because we find all of them to be reasonable amendments and amendments which will tidy up the Law, for the Law to be much more workable, not only for the contributors to the fund but also to the Board who administers the fund.

Mr. Speaker, by just citing those few examples I just wish to point out specifically the reasons why the Opposition finds itself able to support the proposed amending legislation, and certainly, we look forward to seeing the amending legislation to the passed and the necessary adjustments, physical and otherwise made to accommodate and comply with the new legislation. Thank you, Sir.

The Speaker: Does any other Member wish to speak? Does any other Member wish to speak? If not, would the Mover of the Bill, the Third Official Member wish to exercise his right of reply?

Hon. George A. McCarthy: Mr. Speaker, I would like to say thanks to Honourable Members for their support and for the points that have been made by the Honourable Leader of the Opposition. He, like other Members of this Honourable House recognise that we have come a long way since 1990, with what has been done by the Government with the establishment of a pension fund. Not only for the public service as such, but we have also got for the Parliamentarian and for the Judiciary. That is very useful because where other countries have gone ahead and have decided to look to meeting their annualised cost from their budget on an annual basis the Government has been quite prudent in establishing this fund and committing itself in addition to the payment of salaries to making significant contributions into the fund.

At this point in time the contribution rate across the board equals 22 per cent, 6 per cent by the employee, 6 per cent by the employer and 10 per cent going into the past services liability account fund. That is quite a substantial sum of money when that is added on to the salaries that are being paid by the Government. By no means can I indicate today that the piece of legislation even with the amendments that are in front of us will make it as perfect as it should be, but it gets it closer to being a more workable and acceptable piece of legislation. What is very good is the responsiveness of the House that when changes are required to be made we will have such response as we have had today and Members having a very good understanding at what is being attempted to be achieved.

I would like to say thanks, Mr. Speaker, to all Honourable Members.

The Speaker: The question is that a Bill shortly entitled The Public Service Pensions (Amendment) Bill 2004 be given a Second Reading. All those in favour, please say Aye. Those against, No.

Ayes.

The Speaker: The Ayes have it.

Agreed. The Public Service Pensions (Amendment) Bill, 2004 was given a Second Reading.

The Speaker: The Honourable Third Official Member.

Parliamentary Pensions Bill 2004

Hon. George A. McCarthy: Mr. Speaker, I beg to move the Second Reading of the Parliamentary Pensions Bill.

The Speaker: The Bill has been duly moved. Does the Honourable Mover wish to speak thereto?

Hon. George A. McCarthy: Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

Mr. Speaker, Honourable Members should note that the purpose of this Bill that is in front of them today, is to provide pension benefits for parliamentarians that are equitable and in line with best practice.

I am very much conscious of the fact that this is an election year and Honourable Members are somewhat reluctant in terms of wanting to deal with this very important piece of legislation that may be seen as accruing benefits to Honourable Members. I will not treat their contribution lightly because I have been in this House and in Cabinet, and seen what is required of them. They have given of their best and I think it is only reasonable and equitable that the Parliamentary Pensions Bill Law that has been so archaic and out of date for quite some time be dealt with today.

Mr. Speaker, Honourable Members should note that this Bill seeks to repeal and replace the Parliamentary Pensions Law (1995 Revision), which as I mentioned is quite an archaic piece of legislation. In order to develop an entirely new framework, the language and structure of the Public Service Pensions Law was used as a model for more effective administration of the Parliamentary Pensions Plan. The proposed new legislation introduces provisions to the Parliamentary Pensions Plan that are modern, equitable and more in line with the defined benefit part of the Public Service Pensions Plan. Please note that a full alignment with the Public Service Pensions Plan was not desirable nor was it practicable that this could be achieved recognising the differences in the category of membership. The provisions are being laid out more clearly in such a way that the legislation will not be subject to varying interpretations.

After successful revision of the law governing the public service pensions, the need for the update of the Parliamentary Pensions Law was highlighted by the managing director of the Public Service Pensions Board. The Managing Director is Mrs. Jewel Evans-Lindsey. Mrs. Lindsey identified the need for this revision for quite some time. The parliamentarians have now recognised that the Parliamentary Pensions Law contains provisions that do not allow for a secure means of financing or proper administration of the Parliamentary Pensions Plan. Hence the commencement of a comprehensive review of the pension benefit provisions under the current Law.

It should be noted that the principle legislation dates back to 1984. There have been no major revisions to this legislation since that date. There are numerous changes being made through the Bill that are vital to the conversion of the principle legislation into a modern practice model ensuring that different provisions are not subject to differing interpretations. Further, there is a need to formalise the financing and administrative arrangements. These required enhancements make the need to repeal and replace the principle legislation imperative.

The changes to the Parliamentary Pensions Plan put to Honourable Members by way of this Bill are as a result of collaboration between the Pensions Board and its consultants Watson Wyatt Worldwide Organisation. I wish to outline the major improvements to the Parliamentary Pensions Plan. These are: early retirement at age 50 with actuarial adjustments as shown in Clause 28; the reinstatement of the commutation option for participants in Clause 34 as well as the extension of this same option to surviving spouses under Clause 38; the Plan has been enhanced by the removal of the provision in the previous law, which prevented continuation of spousal benefits after remarriage.

The Plan has also been enhanced by the removal of the provision of the previous law, which prevented a retired parliamentarian in receipt of his or her own pension to also receive a pension arising from the death of a spouse who was also a parliamentarian. Clause 2 under the definition of a child, provides for the continuation of children's pension after the attainment of age 18; provision of more equitable pension benefits for children in the case of no surviving spouse is set out in Clause 37(5); provision of benefits for designated beneficiaries is set out in Clause 21; Clause 25 provides for the protection of participant rights; minimum pension benefits of $1,000 per month are provided in Clause 33; provision is made in Clause 27(2)(c) for participants who attain maximum pension entitlement, that is two-thirds of salary to be paid such pension and thereafter continue as a defined contribution participant until he or she ceases to be a parliamentarian subject to the pension eligibility provision of Clause 20.

Provision is made in Clause 30 for disability retirement benefits to commence upon certification by the Chief Medical Officer. Provision is made in Clause 27(2) (a) and (b) for participants who have attained pension eligibility, who are age 55 and at least one full parliamentary term to elect for the commencement of their pension benefits to be paid and for participation in the defined contribution part of the plan.

It is generally accepted and agreed that the Public Service Pensions Board is in the best position to administer the Parliamentary Pensions Plan and the Board is indeed currently carrying out the necessary administration although there is no provision in the Law that provides for that to be done. There is a need now for this to be formalised in the proposed new legislation. In addition, this proposed new legislation clearly establishes the Public Service Pensions Board as the governing authority for the Parliamentary Pensions Plan and this is set out in Clause 4.

The Bill in Clause 17(2) allows for the Parliamentary Pensions fund to be pooled with the Public Service Pensions fund for investment purposes in order to maximise asset returns. Please note however, Mr. Speaker, Clause 9 of the Bill also requires that separate financial statements for Parliamentary Pension funds are maintained for submission to the Honourable Cabinet and subsequent tabling in this Honourable House.

Members of this House should also note that over the past decade, active participants of the Parliamentary Pensions Plan have been paying a contribution of 6 per cent of salary and the Government has been matching it with a 16 per cent contribution, that is, the other 6 per cent plus the 10 per cent for the past services liability to cover the employer and unfunded past service liabilities.

Clause 10 of the Bill formalises the requisite financing arrangements of the Parliamentary Pensions Law. Clause 10 further requires that an actuarial valuation be carried out on the 1st July, 2005 and for further actuarial valuations to be carried out periodically to determine the adequate employee and employer contribution rates. This Bill, although it is a re-vamping of the existing legislation, again will by no means be error free or perfect, but it will mark a significant improvement over the existing piece of legislation. I have pointed out the salient points of this Bill and I would invite Honourable Members to give this Bill their support, because their support in putting forward this Bill is one that should in no doubt be questioned as one that is very deserving.

The Speaker: Does any other Member wish to speak? Does any other Member wish to speak? Last call.

The Honourable Leader of the Opposition.

Hon. D. Kurt Tibbets: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker.

Mr. Speaker, the Honourable Third Official Member is very correct in his early statement when he was presenting this Bill, that it is certainly not a good time for us to be having to deal with it because it is the Parliamentary Pensions Bill of 2004 and it is all to do with those of us who are elected to this Legislative Assembly; all to do with those who will be elected in future and those who have been elected presently receiving some type of parliamentary pension, and those who in future will receive some type of parliamentary pension.

Most of us were familiar with the legislation which obtains presently and in making some of the comparison with the legislation that is proposed, we on this side were very careful in making the assessments with the changes that have been proposed to ensure that what was being proposed in the various sections could not be interpreted as those of us in this Legislative Assembly seeking any advantage for ourselves, simply because we are the individuals collectively dealing with the Bill. Certainly there were some glaring inadequacies in the present legislation, some of which the Honourable Third Official Member has pointed out as part of the proposed amendments. There was even what was obviously a gender discrimination in the Legislation, which is being corrected and it is also being proposed in the, I think, new section 20, where prior to this, one could not physically name a beneficiary to the pension benefits that one might receive; one could not name a beneficiary on ones passing. The truth of the matter is that there are certain circumstances which, I think it is section 21, not section 20. There are certain circumstances which should allow for a beneficiary or beneficiaries to be named. The new section 21 speaks to each participant being given the opportunity to designate a beneficiary or beneficiaries who shall be entitled to receive benefits pursuant to this Law in the event of a participant's death.

In the existing legislation Mr. Speaker, without physically looking at it but just going by memory, I think what the existing legislation allows is for individuals to be entitled to benefits who are the spouse of a beneficiary or the children under the age of majority of the beneficiary, and there was a designated amount and proportions which each of these were able to receive. However, there are individuals who may not be married and you would not want the legislation to dictate that if you want for someone to be a beneficiary you would have to marry that person. It is quite as simple as that, and that is the way it was prior to this. So, those are matters which we believe are not only fair but that should be addressed.

If we also look at section 17, the Honourable Third Official Member addressed this area also, and I really want to question this because it is not that I do not appreciate the purpose but I want clarity in how it is being done. The new section 17 speaks to the fund investments and with your permission, Sir I forgot the last time, but I will not forget again, if I may . . .

The Speaker: Please continue.

Hon. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Thank you.

Section 17(1) and (2) reads: “17(1) The Fund shall be invested by the Board in approved investments as set out in Schedule 2 of the Public Service Pensions Law (2004 Revision) and for the purposes of this section, subsections (2) to (4) of section 16 of the Public Service Pensions Law (2004 Revision) shall apply.”

“17(2) The Board may, with the approval of the Financial Secretary, pool the monies of the Fund with the monies of the fund under the Public Service Pensions Law (2004 Revision) and invest such monies in accordance with the provisions of that Law.”

As the Honourable Third Official Member said when he was presenting the Bill Mr. Speaker, the purpose of pooling these funds would be to maximize the benefits from the investments. I really have not carefully looked at the various sections and subsections of the Public Service Pensions Law (2004 Revision) which are referred to in section 17(1) and (2), so I am not quite sure what they say. However, we would like to be very clear as to what type of accounting would be done with regards to when such funds are being pooled. I am certain that it would be a method that is clear, but I would just like to hear from the Honourable Third Official Member exactly how it would be done.

Second question that comes to mind is while we appreciate the thought of pooling funds to maximize returns, if those funds are being invested in, what I would want to term as ‘safe investments’ meaning investments that are less risky, which naturally, the less the risk the less the returns that are expected; then there is certainly is no question, but one would want to hear a little about how the funds are being invested. If we speak to simple certificates of deposit, which we know because of interest rates being very low now, term deposits do not really attract any reasonable interest rates and your rate of return is very poor at present. While that is considered a safe investment, especially during this period of time, those who administer the Fund may well be looking to other types of investment and I am certain that they are with more knowledge than we are of what is and is not safe; what is volatile and what is less risky. I want to hear some more about that so that we can have a better idea of exactly how that will work, seeing as how the Law, which we operate under presently, does not allow for all of this to happen.

In section 18, again with your permission, section 18(1) and (2) states: “Participants shall contribute to the Fund at the rate of 6% of their pensionable earnings and any change in such rate shall be prescribed by the most recent actuarial valuation pursuant to section 10(1).”

“The Government shall contribute to the Fund at the rate prescribed by the most recent actuarial valuation...”

How this actually reads is: “Government shall contribute to the Fund at the rate prescribed by the most recent actuarial valuation pursuant to section 10(1).” Section 10(1) reads, and again with your permission. Before I actually read that let me say, as I dealt with the actuarial assessment in the previous amending legislation I bring to bear the discussion on the actuarial assessment here too because it is extremely important that we get it right when we speak to these actuarial assessments and the reasoning behind them being done within the third anniversary of the previous one, and the reason why you want to follow the recommendations once they are prudent. Mr. Speaker, again with your permission, and referring to section 10, subsection (1) reads: “On the commencement of this Law, and at such other times thereafter as it deems appropriate, but in no event later than the three-year anniversary of the latest review, the Board shall cause a review to be carried out to assess and evaluate the assets and liabilities of the Fund in order-

- (a) to determine whether the fund remains capable of meeting its long term liabilities at the rate or rates of contribution then in force;
- (b) if it is not so capable, to ascertain what rate or rates of contribution should be required to meet its long term liabilities; and
- (c) to determine the amount to be reflected on the balance sheet and the first of such reviews shall assess the assets and liabilities of the Fund as at 1st July, 2005.”

If memory serves me right without referring directly to the Public Service Pensions Law and the amending Legislation, this is very similar. The observation that I wish to make about this is that this legislation under section 18 tells me nothing about Cabinet approving anything. What this says is that the Government shall contribute to the Fund at the rate prescribed by the most recent actuarial valuation pursuant to section 10(1), which I just read, that only speaks to a timeline.

I would really like for the Honourable Third Official Member to take the opportunity to reply to this and while I know that I may be outside the ambit I would also wish for him to do that because I did not realise it until I was standing here reading this. I need to understand the relationship between Cabinet and the decision making process with the actuarial assessment both for the Public Service Pensions Fund and for the Parliamentary Pensions Fund. I would wish to have that clarified. I am certain there is logic to the reasoning behind it but the way the legislation is drafted does not clearly outline the process and whether it is a policy decision or not, it is a matter that should be cleared up. The proposed section 19 of this Law, again with your permission reads: "The Board shall determine the financial impact of all amendments to this Law and the regulations and shall advise the Governor in Cabinet of its findings prior to such amendment being considered by the Governor in Cabinet or laid before the Legislative Assembly."

Now one may have said that I just answered the question that I asked. However, I am not satisfied that this section 19 really should refer to the actuarial assessment, because as I have just read, the Board shall determine the financial impact of all amendments to this Law and the actuarial assessment each time it is completed does not call for an amendment for the Law. The Law simply states that the Government shall adhere to the findings. So, I do not believe that this section 19 refers to that and I quoted section 19 because as I understand section 19, what that will mean is if the formula which determines the pensionable benefits to Members is changed from the one that obtains in the Law or if it is proposed to be changed, then naturally that would have a financial implication, and I think that is what section 19 would refer to. So, therefore at that point in time the Governor in Cabinet would have to be advised before bringing that to the Legislative Assembly.

However, I do not see where an actuarial assessment would fall into the same category. I bring the point out to say that when I referred earlier on to the Honourable Third Official Member in answer to a recent question, saying that Cabinet was considering the actuarial assessment, I want to know the relationship between what this legislation is proposing and Cabinet having to consider actuarial assessment. Because while one is under the Public Service Pension and this is the Parliamentary Pension, I want to understand clearly whether there is a difference. When an actuarial assessment is done of the Public Service Pensions Fund, does . . . [Pause]

Pardon me, Mr. Speaker, but I am being shown the Public Service Pensions Law which outlines the difference, but it does not change my argument because the question that I want to ask is: Is there a specific reason why the actuarial assessments for each of these funds is handled differently? I understand that the ramifications would be different because the Parliamentary Pension Fund involves fewer individuals than the Public Service Pension Fund and the beneficiaries thereof. So, I would like very much for the Honourable Third Official Member to show us the reasoning.

My good friend, the Lady Member from North Side, has just pointed out to me the section in the Public Service Pensions Law; section 12 and the various subsections of that section, which outlines how that actuarial assessment is treated. My question is why are both treated in a different manner? Because what is proposed to us is really telling us that if an actuarial assessment is completed and it tells us that the contribution rate has to rise from 6 per cent plus 6 per cent to 15 per cent plus 15 per cent, the Government simply has to do it. That is how I understand the legislation. Now if that is the case, then I want to know that that is the case, and if it is the case why is it the case and it is different from the public service pension fund actuarial assessment.

Mr. Speaker, with your permission, to show the relevance in referring to the Public Service Pensions Law, what it calls for, for the actuarial assessment to the Public Service Pension Fund is a report of the actuarial review carried out under the subsection relevant shall be made to the Board, which shall send a copy to the Financial Secretary and the Governor may cause his own actuarial valuation to be carried out if he determines that there is good reason to do so. Then the Financial Secretary shall immediately after he receives it lay the actuarial report on the Table of the Legislative Assembly for 21 days and such report shall be gazzeted.

Even when I look at the sub-sections down below, which are similar, that is the sub-sections for the Parliamentary Pensions Bill, which says to me . . . I am just looking to see exactly which one it is, if you would permit me a minute. [Pause]

If we look at the Parliamentary Pensions Bill with all of these subsections and we compare it to the Public Service Pensions Law we will see that while there are many similarities to the process . . . Let me try to tighten up my argument so that it is not misunderstood. While there are many similarities to the process the fact is that the final part of the process, which is called for in the Parliamentary Pensions Bill, is a bit different from the procedure in the Public Service Pensions Bill and if I am not with clarity in it then all I would like to happen is for the Honourable Third Official Member, when he is winding up, to clear the matter up. I do not have a problem with that, but in reading both of them my interpretation shows a few differences and I would wish it ensure that both of them are in entrain because the comparisons between the two with most of the other amendments that have come certainly would more likely fall in line than the way I see this one.

The Speaker: Honourable Members, we have now reached the hour of 4:30 pm and it is my understanding that it is indeed the wish of Members that we should continue with the proceedings until the Order Paper has been completed. I would therefore ask the Honourable Leader of Government Business to move Standing Order 10(2) accordingly.

Hon W. McKeeva Bush: Mr. Speaker, I move the suspension of Standing Order 10(2) in order to take business after 4:30 pm. We expect, as we said earlier, to complete business today as soon as the Second Elected Member from George Town gets back so that he can move with his business, so we expect to complete and hopefully Members will be in agreement and we will try to finish as quickly as possible.

The Speaker: The question is that Standing Order 10(2) be suspended in order that the proceedings of the House may continue beyond the hour 4:30 pm. All those in favour, please say Aye. those against, No.

Ayes.

The Speaker: The Ayes have it.

Agreed. Standing Order 10(2) suspended.

The Speaker: The Honourable Leader of the Opposition.

After his contribution we will take 10 minutes suspension, the afternoon break.

Hon. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Mr. Speaker, just to cap off this point, where there is a difference and the Honourable Third Official Member has seemingly pointed it out. Where it refers to section 10, where section 18(1) speaks to: “Participants shall contribute to the Fund at the rate of 6% of their pensionable earnings and any change in such rate shall be prescribed at the most recent actuarial valuation pursuant to section 10(1). (2) The Government shall contribute to the Fund at the rate prescribed by the most recent actuarial valuation to section 10 (1)”. Seemingly, the subsection may be incorrect and there may be an amendment to be made, but the Honourable Third Official Member can clear that up Mr. Speaker, because it just appears how it is that one is directly saying that this is what shall be done and the other one outlines an entire process. I want to be very clear because I really do not see any reason why there should be any difference between the process with the actuarial review and how the final decision is made when it comes to any change in the contribution rates being made. I do not see why there should be any difference in the process between either one of the funds, whether it is the Public Service Pension Fund or the Parliamentary Pension Fund.

Mr. Speaker, there is perhaps the only controversial point that may have come forward where there may be varying views. I am not going to refer to the section yet, someone is looking it up for me rather than waste time. The way it obtains now as I understand it, Mr. Speaker, and I am speaking to Members of the Legislative Assembly—I found it Mr. Speaker, so I can be very specific. What is proposed with your permission, Mr. Speaker, in section 27(1) on page 22 of the amending legislation: “A retired participant who is receiving a pension and who is subsequently re-elected to the Legislative Assembly or re-employed as Speaker shall continue to receive that pension without interruption upon such re-election or re-employment and he shall continue as an active defined contribution participant upon his return.” What I understand that to mean, Mr. Speaker, is that if anyone has met the requirements where he or she shall receive a benefit and has reached the age of retirement, and is no longer a serving Member or a Speaker, it means then that the calculation will be made by the length of time the person was a Member; what the salary was and all of the different ingredients to the formula. Once it is two months after an election takes place, then that individual will begin receiving whatever the amount is, pension benefit-wise on a monthly basis.

If that person who is receiving that pension seeks to be re-elected at a later time, when and if that person is re-elected and becomes a Member of the Legislative Assembly again, regardless of what position it is, then that person will continue to receive the same pension benefit and the person of course, will receive the salary, whatever it is, whether it is as a ordinary Member or a Member of Cabinet.

Mr. Speaker, it does not specify an age now; it says that person then, once he begins to serve again as a member in whatever capacity, will then become party to the defined contribution scheme and will begin to make contributions to that. At that point in time I do not see exactly where it says when those benefits will trip in, whether it is when that person retires again or whether the people do not return that person again or at what age. Obviously, I do not remember exactly, but it is a little bit, not really complicated, but perhaps convoluted.

I believe in the private sector people cease to make pension contributions at sixty, if I am correct. I am not 100 per cent sure, but I think that is how it is. I am not sure whether that is mandatory or not or whether it is by choice. As I understand it. Mr. Speaker, an individual could be 55 years old; could be receiving a pension; could then begin to serve again and if the people so elect that individual, that person could serve for another 10, 12, 16 or 20 years, and at that point in time, the same pension benefits accrue that he was receiving from the very beginning and he now during that time of his next stint, as a member, he is then contributing to the defined contribution scheme. I do not know when those benefits will trip in after that.

Mr. Speaker, the point I wish to make is that we have to not get lost in the valley here, because the truth of the matter is, if one wished to argue the contrary point to that, it could be seen to be a disadvantage to the individual of the fact that his or her pension is calculated at the rate of his first stint when he becomes eligible. Whereas if he was not collecting a pension during his second stint and he so desired to wait until that stint was over and the entire period was calculated together, when he does begin to get a pension it would be certainly be a pension that is noticeably more because for every term that one serves the formula and the equation changes noticeably when it comes, until you are fully vested. I believe the way the law is now would be five terms of service, which would equate to 20 years.

So, you see Mr. Speaker, if somebody served for 8 years first and became eligible for pension and either did not seek re-election at that point in time or lost an election and the pension tripped in, the pension would be calculated on the 8 years of service at whatever the highest salary was that point in time. The person might come back and serve 12 more years and if the pension were to trip in at 12 more years rather than what the 8 year stint was, it would be certainly more than twice. Of course, we would have to factor in that is 12 more years gone, which means 12 years less of life for the individual when they start collecting so there are varying ways to truly look at it, Mr. Speaker.

If we make comparisons, because I did a little check Mr. Speaker; for instance, in the United Kingdom if civil servants are pensionable and they start to collect a pension and are rehired into the civil service, while they are collecting a salary the pension stops. However, how it works, while they are not collecting the pension, the fact of the matter is that they are not drawing it, it accrues more benefits and they do contribute again. So, unless they stay there under normal circumstances, it is more beneficial to the individual at the end of the day using that formula.

So, Mr. Speaker, on the surface one might quickly say that it certainly does not seem to be right if someone came back in as an elected member collecting a pension to be getting the salary and the pension also. Frankly, Mr. Speaker, for us, it does not matter which way it is, I am only trying to lay it on to show that in actual fact the benefits that could or would be received can vary depending on the individual, the person's actual age, the length of service, because if the person serves 8 years and then serves another 4 or another 8 he is going to be at a disadvantage. If he has served 16 and served another 4 and he is collecting, then it is going to be to his advantage. It just depends on how many years of service before the person is eligible for pension. Some of us are elected under age 30; some of us are elected over 50; some of us do not leave here until we are 60 big odd. Some of us leave and have to wait a few years until we are able to collect because we are not quite 55. So, it is one of those things that you cannot make any assessment based on any other but the individual. Of course, you cannot cater to any individual either one way or the other, neither can you spite an individual one way or another. So, you have to look to do it in such a way that however it is, it is and the actuarial assessment has to be able to be done on a formula not on an individual basis.

So, Mr. Speaker, this is one of the slight difficulties that we have here but maybe the Honourable Third Official Member might want to comment on the varying scenarios. Truthfully Sir, to simply lay it on the line, I for one am not 100 per cent sure exactly how is the best way to deal with that. As I said, who gets the benefit of it more, whether it is the fund that benefits more or the individual that benefits more, depends on the individual, his or her age and the length of time the person serves, it is just one of those funny ones.

It also refers to the Speaker, Mr. Speaker. For instance, in the amending legislation it speaks to the fact that on the dissolution of the Legislative Assembly that is not the date on which a Speaker's term ends. It is obvious there is a reason for that, because when a new election takes place and a new Speaker may be elected and appointed, you certainly do not want the Legislative Assembly to be without a Speaker during that interim. So, you would not want to say that the Speaker only holds office until the dissolution of the Legislative Assembly. So, there is reason and rationale behind the thoughts of the amendments.

As I said, Mr. Speaker, the other amendment that I want to speak to is the amendment which allows for the parliamentary pension benefits to fall in line or parallel to the public service pension benefits where individuals can opt for a lump sum on the beginning of receipt of the benefits and a lesser monthly pension benefit, or to leave it at just a monthly sum, which would be a larger amount. The fact is that it is done in such a way at the end of the day it is fair to do it like that because in the scheme of things and in the long run it balances itself out when it comes to any impact on the fund itself. All it means is that at some interim and it is not going to happen every day. At some interim whenever somebody becomes eligible they might choose to take the lump sum and receive less on a monthly basis. In the whole big scheme of things that really is not detrimental to the fund itself. What it does, it gives the individual the option depending on his or her age or his or her state of affairs to choose. If the person is older it is quite likely the person is going to look for the lump sum. If the person is just eligible, it is very likely under normal circumstances if the person is healthy he or she might not desire the lump sum but rather the increased amount on a monthly basis over an extended period of time.

So, with all of these varying options, Mr. Speaker, the Honourable Third Official Member has generally outlined the amending legislation for the parliamentary pensions, which would repeal the existing Law and put a new law in force. As I pointed out, the only one that we see a bit of difficulty with, simply because of so many different configurations, is the one where an individual might come back to the Legislative Assembly and still continue to receive the pension. Mr. Speaker, by and large the other parts of the proposed amending legislation are not ones which will have any noticeable negative impact on the fund itself and would give clearer definition to how beneficiaries can operate. It would also in my view, take care of many of the question marks that individuals might have because the former legislation, or the legislation that exists at present, in several instances, is not very clear and one really has to make a judgment call as to if you were in this situation what would it be, or how would it be and I think this gives clarity to that.

So, Mr. Speaker, I look forward to reaching the point where the Honourable Third Official Member would wind up and the questions that I have asked of him I would seek clarity to those. If the answers are satisfactory then perhaps there will be no problem when the vote comes. We shall listen and wait and see. Thank you.

The Speaker: Honourable Members, as mentioned, I propose to take the afternoon break at this time. Fifteen minutes but I would ask that all Honourable Members make every effort to be back here in fifteen minutes, we still have a lot of work before us, before the Order Paper is completed today. Fifteen minutes break.

Proceedings suspended at 4.49 pm

Proceedings resumed at 5.22 pm

The Speaker: Please be seated. Proceedings are resumed. Debate continuing on the Parliamentary Pensions Bill 2004. Does any other Member wish to speak?

The Honourable Leader of Government Business.

Hon. W. McKeever Bush: Mr. Speaker, just to be very brief on this.

Mr. Speaker, this amendment will address some inequities and matters that are long outstanding and should have been dealt with long time ago; one is the aspect of widows. Mr. Speaker, it will better improve their widow's pension and a Member would be recognised for one full term, while not a full pension, nevertheless he would still be recognised. Mr. Speaker, that is as it should be. If a person is here for four years and pays their parliamentary pension then they should have an opportunity to get whatever levels of pension that is offered. That is not the way it is, but that is as it should be.

So, I am content that this Bill addresses those concerns and many of the issues that have been pointed out by the Leader of the Opposition Mr.

Speaker, deserved attention, as I said, and the Bill covers them.

This was a matter where members were in a committee on this and sat down and walked through it, and I believe that the House should pay due deference to such aspects as widows and the other aspects as named earlier. Thank you, Sir.

The Speaker: Does any other Member wish to speak? The Second Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. Alden M. McLaughlin, Jr: Mr. Speaker, just briefly to make one or two observations, which do not deal with the specifics of the Bill I think, though the Honourable Leader of the Opposition has dealt with those very extensively, comprehensively and very ably. It is an observation about the appropriateness of this Honourable House actually passing legislation, which deals with pensions or benefits that relates to Honourable Members of this House. That is always a ticklish subject, Mr. Speaker, and one that is open to great criticism from the general public for it may be perceived that Members are looking after themselves, so to speak.

Mr. Speaker, I know that in some other jurisdictions they have created committees or boards or some statutory creature which actually examines things like parliamentary pensions and makes recommendations as to what changes ought to be made to the relevant legislation. It then becomes simply a case of almost, I hate to use the express 'rubber stamp', but it becomes almost simply a formality for those recommendations to actually be put into effect.

I think that this Honourable House and the Government ought to consider the creation of that sort of a committee or board or whatever, to have things like the Parliamentary Pensions Law examined from time to time and to make recommendations. As we continue to grow up as a democracy, I believe, Mr. Speaker, that it is important that not just the transparency aspect of these matters are looked into, but the overall fairness of what is being proposed. I do think it puts an undue burden and opens the Legislative Assembly up to undue criticism, or I hope it is undue criticism anyhow, in relation to these matters when we are expected to vote funds for what are essentially benefits for Members of the Legislative Assembly or former Members of the Legislative Assembly.

Certainly, Mr. Speaker, I know this term is winding down, but if I am around following the elections it would be one of the things that I would like to see and to advocate that we seek to do to distance ourselves from such matters. I know all Members of this Honourable House share that concern, the general nervousness about dealing with these matters, particularly so close to the elections, and it ought not to be that way, these things out to be dealt with in a manner and by virtue of a system which does not open us up to concern and criticism in relation to these matters.

So, as I said I do not have anything specific to say about the Bill itself but just to make that general observation. I am not even urging this Government at this time to deal with it; I know they are in their last days so it will be a matter I believe, Mr. Speaker, that this Honourable House should consider following the next general elections in November. I thank you, Sir.

The Speaker: Does any other Member wish to speak? Does any other Member wish to speak? Last call! Does any other Member wish to speak? If not, would the Honourable Third Official Member wish to exercise his right of reply?

Hon. George A. McCarthy: Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

I will be addressing some of the observations that have been made by the Honourable Leader of the Opposition, but I would just like to comment on the observations by the Honourable Second Elected Member for George Town on the comments he has just made. Mr. Speaker, the comments of that Honourable Member, I think, would mirror the thinking of all other Honourable Members of this House, in that often times, like most persons who are quite altruistic in their thinking, always think in terms of dealing with benefits that would accrue to them but they are reluctant to do so.

Mr. Speaker, as I mentioned earlier, this is not a Bill that has been spearheaded by the Members of the Legislative Assembly, it is one that I would say the catalyst for this would be the ever vigilant Managing Director of the Public Service Pensions Boards, Mrs. Jewel Evans-Lindsey who has recognised that moving forward with the amendments to the Public Service Pensions Law would be quite a disparity for something not to be done to deal with the need to address the parliamentary pensions legislation and the archaic provisions of that legislation. I will say that I am quite happy to be bringing forward this Bill at this time.

For example Mr. Speaker, I know that you are a very modest individual, but I remember the many years that you have served in your capacity as a member of the civil service, subsequently as a Member of this Honourable House, currently in your position as Speaker and there are other Members here in this position as well, Mr. Speaker. At the end of the day I know the sacrifices that have been made by persons such as yourself and Honourable Members, and I think it is only fitting that adequate provisions be made for the payment of pensions to persons such as yourself and Honourable Members when the time comes for that to be done. So, what we are now doing, Mr. Speaker, is to address the requirements of the Parliamentary Pensions Law in order to make it more up to date; make it more equitable in its provisions and to address the inequities and, as one Honourable Member mentioned earlier, certain discriminatory practices as set out in the legislation.

The Leader of the Opposition, Mr. Speaker, raised the question as to wanting to get clarity on the investment provision or the investment funds and how such will be dealt with as provided for under section 17 of Parliamentary Pensions Law. Section 17(1) reads: “The Fund shall be invested by the Board in approved investments as Schedule 2 of the Public Service Pensions Law (2004 Revision) and for purposes of this section subsections (2) to (4) of section 16 of the Public Service Pensions Law (2004 Revision) shall apply.” That, Mr. Speaker, is a very good observation, because with monies being paid out and set aside to accumulate a fund to defray the cost of pension, I think it is only wise to find out what the rules and procedures are governing the investment activities of that Fund.

The reference to section 16 of the Public Service Pensions Law I will just read at this time for the benefit of Honourable Members. These are procedures and rules governing the investment of the Fund. Section 16 of the Public Service Pensions Law states: “The Fund shall be invested by the Board in approved investments as set out in the Second Schedule”; that is 16(1). Section 16(2) says: “The Board may appoint one or more investment managers to whom the Board may delegate any of its investment duties hereunder.”

Section 16(3) reads: “The Board shall invest the Fund in such a manner to ensure that there is no undue risk of loss or impairment to the Fund and pursuant to the advice of any investment managers appointed by the Board under sub-section (2). Sub-section (3) Mr. Speaker, I would say should be the pivotal and focal point, because what it does is impose an obligation on the Board of Trustees to be ever vigilant and alert recognising that the duties imposed upon board members are quite onerous and it is a responsibility that they should take quite seriously.

For the benefit of Honourable Members I will read it again. “The Board shall invest the Fund in such a manner to ensure that there is no undue risk of loss or impairment to the Fund and pursuant to the advice of any investment managers appointed by the Board under sub-section (2).” So rather than relying on the limited expertise that board members may have, again, this sets out a requirement that the Investment Manager should be appointed and this has been the direction in which the Board has moved.

Subsection (4) “the Board shall exercise the care, diligence and skill in the investment of the Fund that persons of ordinary prudence would exercise in dealing with the property of another.” So, it means Mr. Speaker that this should not be taken for granted and I will just go to section 16(3) Mr. Speaker, the sub-section (2) that is referred to in terms of the . . . The Schedule that has been referred to Mr. Speaker, in section 17(1) of the Parliamentary Pensions Bill, sets out the approved investments into which the assets of the Parliamentary Pensions Fund should be invested in, like the Public Service Pensions Fund.

Schedule 2 itemizes the following investments:

- (1) Cash, including Certificates of Deposit.
- (2) Treasury bills.
- (3) Foreign government issued bonds.
- (4) Investment grade corporate bonds.

The policy of the Board has been to support investment in double A investment schemes and upward.

(5) Equities and debt securities of companies that are traded publicly.

The policy of the Board is to ensure that equities and debt securities of companies that are traded publicly are those that are so traded on recognised stock exchanges.

Mr. Speaker, turning now to section 18, I would like to say thanks to the Honourable Leader of the Opposition in making the observation in terms of the cross reference to section 10 because had it remained as is, it would have created a disparity between the provisions in the Public Service Pensions Law and the Parliamentary Pensions Law when it is introduced. So, there is an amendment now that removes the restrictive reference to section 10(1) and the reference now, as Honourable Members will note from the amendment that has been circulated, it is pursuant to section 10. If that Honourable Member will now look at section 10, which starts on page 15, it mirrors identically the provisions in the Public Service Pensions Law as amended.

In respect of section 27, which deals with a Member who retires from the Legislative Assembly and at that point in time, a pension is determined and if this person is subsequently re-elected as a member to be able to enjoy the benefit of their pension while at the same time receiving a salary, Mr. Speaker, this is a matter that there are various views that have been advanced on this. The Honourable Member has pointed out that in comparison with the United Kingdom whenever such occurs the pension would cease and then the person would receive a salary and after the end of the person's parliamentary term then the pension would be re computed.

Mr. Speaker, this would lead oftentimes to a more enhanced pension but this is an option that a Member who is so re-elected may seek for. However, what it does is that if a parliamentarian's pension is determined, rather than having the pension continuing to vest under the defined benefit scheme, the person when upon being re-elected while receiving a salary and a pension for the new period in the parliament would in effect be accruing pension rights under the defined contribution scheme. This means that the parliamentarian would have had his or her pension assessed based on the previous parliamentary term and would also be enjoying the benefit of the salary, but rather than having that pension's provision enhanced at the expiration of the parliamentary period, would in effect be receiving a pension for the period that this person was just re-elected for, and based solely on the contribution that that pensioner would have been made during that period. To the extent that the person's pension will be enhanced it will be by the additional contribution that this individual would be making into the defined contribution scheme.

Mr. Speaker, the Honourable Leader of the Opposition will recall there was quite an extensive debate on this and there is no easy way of addressing it, because at the end of the day it would mean having to derive certain assumptions. I am sure that the actuaries would be able to do so in the case of, lets say, members had elected that their pension would cease and they would only be receiving a salary and at the expiration of the new parliamentary period that they pension be recomputed. That in itself could be accompanied by certain difficulties, but bearing in mind the suggestion by the Honourable Second Elected Member for George Town, that there may be a need to look at a different arrangement to address the requirements of parliamentary pensions; that there could be a committee or board established. At a future point in time this can be looked at and addressed but I would ask Honourable Members to support the Bill notwithstanding the fact that there may not be absolute acceptance at this time of this provision under section 27.

The committee stage amendment that has been circulated, Mr. Speaker, has also looked at section 39, which was somewhat limited in scope and the new provision reads: Section 39(a) "Where a participant dies with no spouse and no children surviving him, the amount payable under section 35 and 37 shall be paid in a single lump sum to the participant's designated beneficiary or if his designated beneficiary has predeceased him the amount shall be paid in a single lump sum to his estate." This is only equitable, Mr. Speaker, and I think it corrects the defect as it now stands in that section.

As the Honourable Leader of Government Business pointed out, there are certain inequities in the existing Bill that are now being addressed with the Bill that is presently before this Honourable House. I think his comments do not need to be expanded on because I agree with them entirely and I am sure all Honourable Members will agree with the comments that he has offered.

Mr. Speaker, I think I have covered all of the points of substance that have raised by the Honourable Leader of Government Business, the Honourable Leader of the Opposition and the Honourable Second Elected Member for George Town. I would like to say thanks to all other Honourable Members for their support.

The Speaker: The question is that a Bill shortly entitled the Parliamentary Pensions Bill 2004 be given a second reading. All those in favour please say Aye. All those against, No.

The Clerk: Part 6. Special rules regarding Pensions Payments.

Clause 40

Clause 40 Payments under the Plan, conditioned on periodic certification.

The Chairman: The question is that Clause 40 stands part of the . . . The Fourth Elected Member for West Bay.

Mr. Cline A. Glidden, Jr: Mr. Speaker, just a little clarification on Clause 40(2). Where it refers to the signature on the certificate, we are talking about the Parliamentary Pensions Bill and it still includes a Member of the Legislative Assembly. Is that intentional or is that a . . . .

The Chairman: The Honourable Third Official Member.

Hon. George A. McCarthy: Mr. Chairman, I am going to ask if that Honourable Member would repeat the question again, as I was . . .

Mr. Cline A. Glidden, Jr: On page 29 section 40(2) where it speaks to: "The signature on the certificate shall be witnessed by a Justice of the Peace, a Notary Public, a Minister of Religion, an attorney licensed to practice law in the Islands, a Member of the Legislative Assembly . . ." Seeing that we are talking about parliamentary pensions, I know that is a standard section in most certifications, but if consideration might want to be given since it is going to be the parliamentarians that you are considering, you may want to not have a member of the Legislative Assembly.

The Chairman: The Honourable Third Official Member.

[inaudible mumbling]

Hon. George A. McCarthy: Mr. Chairman, this is merely a signature to witness a certificate and that is in order. The Honourable Attorney General has taken a look at it and he thinks that..

Hon. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Mr. Chairman, if I may when he is through, Sir.

The Chairman: The Honourable Leader of the Opposition.

Hon. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Mr. Chairman, just to say I hear the concern and (1) the person who is receiving the benefits, who has to provide the certificate is a retired person and is no longer serving in the Legislative Assembly. The Member of the Legislative Assembly who would be allowed, by this section, of the Law to be a signatory verifying the retiree's signature, would be one who is serving as a legislator at that time. So, there is a vast difference, and a serving legislator certainly would not put signature to someone who has not been a legislator and is receiving the benefits. So, while I hear the point I think it would more questionable to exclude a legislator rather than to exclude from the list of names who could attest to the signature for the certificate.

The Chairman: Fourth Elected Member for West Bay is that satisfactory? If so, I put the question. The question that clause 40 stand part of the Bill. All those in favour, please say Aye. Those against, No.

Ayes.

The Chairman: The Ayes have it.

Agreed: Clause 40 stands part of the Bill.

The Clerk: Part 7 - General.

Clauses 41 through 43

Clause 41	Regulations.
Clause 42	Repeal.
Clause 43	Conflict of laws.

The Chairman: The question is that clauses 41, 42 and 43 stand part of the Bill. All those in favour, please say Aye. Those against, No.

Ayes.

The Chairman: The Ayes have it.

Agreed: Clauses 41 and 42 passed.

Hon. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Mr. Chairman.

The Chairman: The Honourable Leader of the Opposition.

Hon. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Mr. Chairman, I truly forgot in my debate and I did not catch you before you actually said that 41, 42 and 43 form part of the Bill. I was wondering if you would allow Sir, just for a clearer understanding, if they Honourable Third Official Member could simply clarify what would be the need for section 43. Just so that we might clearly understand what might conflict with this Law and the Public Management and Finance Law.

The Chairman: Since there is a question raised on 43, I will put the question on 41 and 42 that clauses 41 and 42 stand part of the Bill. All those in favour, please say Aye. Those against, No.

Ayes.

The Chairman: The Ayes have it.

Agreed: Clauses 41 and 42 passed.

The Chairman: Honourable Third Official Member there is a question on Clause 43.

Hon. George A. McCarthy: Mr. Chairman, the advice that has been given me is that this provision is made that in the event there is a conflict in the administration of public funds then there is no question in terms of which law will prevail and that will be the Public Management and Finance Law and this is specifically allowed for because we are dealing with public funds.

The Chairman: Honourable Leader of the Opposition is that a satisfactory answer? Do you have any further supplementary?

Hon. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Mr. Chairman, perhaps by the time I think about it tonight I will have a clearer understanding so I will not question it any further.

The Chairman: If there are no further supplementaries I will put the question on clause 43. The question is that clause 43 stand part of the Bill. All those in favour, please say Aye. Those against, No.

Ayes.

The Chairman: The Ayes have it.

Agreed: Clause 43 passed.

The Chairman: I will now take the new clause, clause 39A. Would the Honourable Third Official Member please move that Motion.

Hon. George A. McCarthy: Mr. Chairman the new clause reads that the Bill be amended by inserting the following clause after clause 39: "Benefit paid to designated beneficiary or estate if no surviving spouse or children."

39A Where a participant dies with no spouse and no children surviving him, the amount payable under section 35 and 37 shall be paid in a single lump sum to the participant's designated beneficiary, or if his designated beneficiary has predeceased him, the amount shall be paid in a single lump sum to his estate."

The Chairman: The question is that clause 39A stand part of the Bill. All those in favour, please say Aye. Those against, No.

Ayes.

The Chairman: The Ayes have it.

Agreed: Clause 39A passed.

The Clerk: A Bill for a law to reform the law relating to the payment of parliamentary pensions and for incidental and connected purposes.

The Chairman: The question is that the Title stands part of the Bill. All those in favour, please say Aye. Those against, No.

Ayes.

The Chairman: The Ayes have it.

Agreed: Title passed.

GOVERNMENT BUSINESS

MOTIONS

Government Motion No. 4/04

Amendment to the Development Plan 1997 Proposed rezoning- Vista Norte

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Planning.

Hon. Juliana Y. O'Connor-Connolly: Thank you Mr. Speaker. I beg to move Government Motion No. 4/04, an Amendment to the Development Plan 1997.

The Speaker: So ordered. Would you like to move the. . .

Hon. Juliana Y. O'Connor-Connolly: Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

Just to say, Sir, that in October of 2002, the Central Planning Authority received an application for the rezoning of several parcels of land namely, Block 10A Parcel 49 REM1, Parcels 50 through 55, 57, 58, 46, 47, 192 and 226, and also Block 9A - Parcels 130, 270, 272 and finally Block 10A - Parcels 38 and 39 which was currently low density residential neighbourhood commercial and Mangrove Buffer. It will now be sought to be rezoned to Hotel Tourism.

At a meeting of the Central Planning Authority, Mr. Speaker, dated the 14th May, 2003, the Central Planning Authority resolved to proceed with the amendment of the development plan whereby they would make the said changes. Therefore, Mr. Speaker, in accordance to section 11(2) of the Development and Planning Law, public notices of the Authority's intention to amend the plan were published in the Caymanian Compass on the 15th, 17th, 22nd and 24th January, 2003. Also in accordance with section 11(3)(a) the proposed amendments were on public display at the Planning Department from the 16th January to the 25th March, 2003.

One objection was received, Mr. Speaker, within the statutory period of two months but was subsequently withdrawn on the 8th day of May, 2003. I would therefore urge Members to support the resolution which says that in accordance with section 10 of the Development and Planning Law (2003 Revision), the Central Planning Authority hereby recommends and submits to the Legislative Assembly the following proposals for alteration to the Development Plan 1997. Members would have seen a summary and map which was attached and already circulated to the Legislative Assembly and which would hereby make the following alterations, additions and amendments to the Development Plan 1997 in accordance with the said Summary and Maps, which will come into force seven days from the passing of this said resolution. Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: The question is: 'Be IT THEREFORE RESOLVED THAT in accordance with section 10 of the Development and Planning Law, 2003 (Revision), the Central Planning Authority hereby recommends and submits to the Legislative Assembly the following proposal for alteration to the Development Plan 1997. A summary and map is attached hereto and the Legislative Assembly hereby makes the following alterations, additions and amendments to the Development Plan 1997, in accordance with the said summary and maps, which shall come into force seven days after the passing of this resolution. That Block 10A Parcel 49 REM1, 50 through 55, 57, 58, 66, 67, 192 and 226 and also Block 9A Parcels 130, 270, 272 and Block 10A - Parcels 38, 39 from Low Density Residential Neighbourhood Commercial and Mangrove Buffer to Hotel/Tourism.'

The Motion is open for debate. I know that the Honourable Minister has already made certain comments.

Does any other Member wish to speak on the Motion? Does any other Member wish to speak? Does any other Member wish to speak? If not would the Honourable Minister for Planning wish to exercise her right of reply?

Hon. Juliana Y. O'Connor-Connolly: Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

Just to say that in passing there was an informal inquiry as to what would be happening to the Mangrove buffer if any, and I am happy to say that I am reliably informed that the property in question ranges to a height of 15 feet iron-shore, and although it was so designated, it would not be applicable in this particular circumstance and I thank Members for there tacit support.

The Speaker: The question is: 'BE IT THEREFORE RESOLVED THAT in accordance with section 10 of the Development and Planning Law (2003 Revision), the Central Planning Authority hereby recommends and submits to the Legislative Assembly the following proposal for alteration to the Development Plan 1997. A summary and map is attached hereto, and the Legislative Assembly hereby makes the following alterations, additions and amendments to the Development Plan 1997, in accordance with the said summary and maps, which shall come into force seven days after the passing of this resolution. That Block 10A - Parcels 49 REM 1, 50-55, 57, 58, 66, 67, 192, 226, Block 9A - Parcels 130, 270, 272 and Block 10E - Parcels 38, 39 from Low Density Residential, Neighbourhood Commercial and Mangrove Buffer to Hotel/ Tourism.'

All those in favour, please say Aye. Those against, No.

Ayes.

The Speaker: The Ayes have it.

Agreed. Government Motion No. 4/04 passed.

Government Motion No. 5/04

Amendment to the Development Plan 1997 Godfrey Nixon Subdivision

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Planning.

Hon. Juliana Y. O'Connor-Connolly: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I beg to move Government Motion No. 5/04 Amendment to the Development Plan 1997.

Mr. Speaker, whereas in July, 2003 the Central Planning Authority received an application for the rezoning of registration section George Town Central, Block 13D - Parcels 323, 352 through 360 and 365 through 367 from high density residential to general commercial. At a meeting of the Central Planning Authority dated 6th August, 2003 the Authority resolved to proceed with the amendments to the plan to wit; to change the zoning of Block 13D, Parcels 323, 352 through 360 and 365 through 367 from high density residential to general commercial. In accordance with section 7 of the Development and Planning Law public notices of the Authority's intention to amend the plan were published in the Cayman Net News on the 28th and 29th August, 4th and 5th September, 2003, and further, the proposed amendments were on public display at the Planning Department from the 5th September through 5 November, 2003.

No objections were received within statutory period of two months. On the 12th November, 2003 the Central Planning Authority reconsidered the application and resolved to recommend that the rezoning be forwarded to the Legislative Assembly for approval. Now be it therefore resolved that in accordance with section 10(2)(b) of the Development and Planning Law 2003 (Revision), the Central Planning Authority hereby recommends and submits to the Legislative Assembly the following proposal for alteration to the Development Plan 1997. A summary and map are attached hereto and the Legislative Assembly hereby makes the following alterations: Additions and amendments to the Development Plan 1997, in accordance with the said Summary and Maps which will come into force seven days after the passing of this resolution. That registration section George Town Central, Block 13D, Parcels 323, 352 through 360 and 365, through 367 be rezoned from high density residential to general commercial.

The Speaker: The question is 'BE IT NOW THEREFORE RESOLVED THAT in accordance with section 10 (2) (b) of the Development and Planning Law (2003 Revision), the Central Planning Authority hereby recommends and submits to the Legislative Assembly the following proposal for alteration to the Development Plan 1997, a summary and map of which are attached hereto, and the Legislative Assembly hereby makes the following alterations, additions and amendments to the Development Plan 1997, in accordance with the said summary and maps which shall come into force seven days after the passing of this resolution;

AND BE IT FURTHER RESOLVED that Registration section, George Town Central, Block 13D, Parcels 323, 352-360 and 365-367 be rezoned from High Density Residential to General Commercial.'

The Motion is open for debate. Does any Member wish to speak? If not, would the Honourable Minister wish to exercise her right of reply?

Hon. Juliana Y. O'Connor-Connolly: Thank you Mr. Speaker. Just to thank Members for their support and to perhaps draw the attention of members of the public who may be listening that the subject parcels are part of a 21 lot commercial sub-division on the Eastern Avenue vicinity. Thank You.

The Speaker: The question has been put on the Motion. All those in favour, please say Aye. Those against, No.

Ayes.

The Speaker: The Ayes have it. Government Motion No. 5/04 is duly passed.

Agreed. Government Motion No. 5/04 passed.

The Speaker: Madam Clerk we will now revert to Private Members Motion 4 and 5.

PRIVATE MEMBERS' MOTIONS

Private Member's Motion No. 04/04

Amendment to the Elections Law

The Speaker: The Second Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. Alden M. McLaughlin, Jr: Mr. Speaker, I beg to move Private Members Motion No. 4/04 entitled 'Amendment to the Elections Law'. It reads as follows:-

"BE IT HEREBY RESOLVED THAT the Elections Law (2000 Revision) be amended to provide for mobile voting units to enable persons who will be present in the Cayman Islands on the day fixed for the upcoming General Elections, but who are unable to attend at a polling station because of infirmity or other good reason to vote prior to the day of the General Elections otherwise than by absentee ballot."

The Speaker: Is there a seconder?
The Elected Member for East End.

Mr. V. Arden McLean: Mr. Speaker, I beg to second the Motion.

The Speaker: The question is: 'BE IT HEREBY RESOLVED THAT the Elections Law (2000 Revision) be amended to provide for mobile voting units to enable persons who will be present in the Cayman Islands on the day fixed for the upcoming General Elections, but who are unable to attend at a polling station because of infirmity or other good reason to vote prior to the day of the General Elections otherwise than by absentee ballot.'

The Motion is now open for debate. Does the Honourable Mover wish to speak thereto?

Mr. Alden M. McLaughlin, Jr: Yes, thank you, Mr. Speaker.

This Honourable House has recently amended the Elections Law. Mr. Speaker, this Motion which deals with a specific aspect of the elections machinery was filed in this Honourable House prior to the Government bringing the Elections (Amendment) Bill. It is based Mr. Speaker, on not just general concern, which I know members of the public and of this Legislative Assembly have had for some time about the system of postal or absentee ballots, as they are called. Also, Mr. Speaker, on the Report, which I believe you, Sir, has dubbed 'The Dundas Report' tabled by me during the debate on the Elections Bill earlier last week. Despite the observations, comments and suggestions made by me and other Members of the Opposition during the debate on the Elections Law, the Government did not see fit to include a provision in the Elections Law for the use of Mobile Polling Stations or Mobile Voting Units. This continues to be a matter of great concern to the Opposition and from comments, which we have received from the public at large, I think there is a certain constituency of support among the general populace for such provision as well.

Mr. Speaker, in the Dundas Report, Mr. Dundas had the following observations in relation to Mobile Polling Stations as he termed them. He said, and I quote from the second page of that Report, paragraph 4— “Mobile Polling Stations. The concept of Mobile Polling Stations is well known and widely used in different jurisdictions for different reasons. It may be for topographical reasons or increasingly to offer better election service to remote dwellers, the disabled or the infirm. The key elements of the successful use of Mobile Polling have been taken into account; in particular, the appointment of teams and team leaders for the purpose of timely publication of the times and places when voters can expect to attend these stations and the voting materials, and supplies necessary for the station’s operation. Mr. Speaker, Mr. Dundas noted that countries that have used Mobile Polling Stations include India, Malaysia, Guyana, Australia, Namibia and Zambia.” As I indicated in my earlier debate on the Elections Bill, we on this side are aware of its use in the Eastern Caribbean, at least, certainly in Dominica.

During the debate on the Elections (Amendment) Bill I noted in particular, the observations of the Leader of Government Business who raised concerns about the lack of secrecy or anonymity, which, in his view, would tend to be created by this system. Mr. Speaker, I am not certain whether the Honourable Leader of Government Business really understood or if he really understands how this concept will work. It will improve those very aspects, which he is concerned about; that is secrecy and anonymity. The current system of postal ballots or people voting by absentee ballots is neither secret nor does it create anonymity or permit anonymity and that is because of the system requiring witnesses who must sign the various forms to ensure the authenticity of the vote. As I related during that debate Mr. Speaker, I am aware by personal experience that it is possible to determine who has voted for a certain candidate or candidates by virtue of who signs the witness forms.

It occurred in circumstances where I was fully aware who the person was when a certain postal ballot was counted during the last elections, because I knew the old lady very well, I knew the house in which she lived, I knew who she lived with and I knew who it was that was likely to witness the forms that were necessary when she voted. I knew when her ballot was counted Mr. Speaker. So, aside from all of the inherent difficulties and complexities that are involved with the issuance of postal ballots or absentee ballots the execution of them, the return to the Supervisor of Elections and then the counting following the close of the polls. There is that question, Mr. Speaker, of secrecy, which is a very important aspect of the elections or the electoral process.

Mr. Speaker, we are well aware, as long as I have been around this process which is almost as long as I have been able to understand about it, there have been allegations time and time again about abuse of the system of postal ballots. There have been allegations that postal ballots have been sent to the post box of a certain candidate in one instance. None of these things as far as I know Mr. Speaker have ever been proven, but there is scope, and the fact that there is scope for such abuse must, Mr. Speaker, cause us to think about reducing the use of postal ballots as far as possible.

They really, Mr. Speaker, ought to be used only in circumstances where persons are off the Island. In cases where persons are infirm and unable to leave their home or The Pines, or the hospital, as the case may be, there ought to be provision in our law as there is in other legislation in other jurisdictions, which will enable a team from the Elections Office accompanied by the candidates or agents of the candidates to attend at places like The Pines or the hospital or person’s homes on predetermined days, at predetermined times for the purposes of having the persons who are eligible to vote there to exercise their franchise.

Mr. Speaker, this would be in advance of election day, elections office would keep the boxes safely as they do otherwise they would be properly sealed and they would not be opened, Mr. Speaker, until the count is taken following the close of the Poll on Election Day. I do not understand the reluctance of the Government, the resistance of the Government to such a progressive and useful provision being placed in the Elections Law. Mr. Speaker, you have been around this process, not just around this process, but involved intimately in this process for many, many years. I know you aware, Sir, more so perhaps than even I am, of the length of time that it takes to count postal ballots following the close of the Polls. It takes hours, Mr. Speaker, in the case of George Town— hours to count 300 or 400 ballot. There is absolutely no reason why we should put the officials through that process, the candidates through that process, the agents through that process, when a much better result which would preserve secrecy and anonymity is available by use of Mobile Polling Stations.

I have not yet one good reason proffered as to why this ought not to be part of our Elections Law.

Nor, Mr. Speaker, more to the point, do I understand why the provision contained in one of the early drafts called "The Preliminary Draft" of the Elections Law, which was circulated to Members of March of this year and which makes provision for the use of Mobile Polling Stations, was deleted in the Bill that came down to the Legislative Assembly and which formed the basis for the recent debate.

Mr. Speaker, I am trying to turn up now that particular provision but it is simple, straightforward and eminently sensible. It is, Mr. Speaker, Clause 19 in that preliminary bill and it provides that the principal Law is amended by inserting after section 45 the following section.

"Mobile Polling Stations - 45 (a), subsection:

(1) Mobile Polling Stations may be used to take the poll at a hospital, rest home or other similar institution or in relation to geriatrics at home.

(2) The supervisor subject to the approval of the Governor may appoint persons to be members of a mobile polling team and in respect of each team a person to be a team leader.

(3) Mr. Speaker the supervisor may be notice published in the Gazette specify (a) the places that will be visited by the mobile teams and (b) the time of the visit to each such place.

(4) Each mobile team when it is placed for the purpose of taking votes at an election shall have ballot boxes, ballot papers and such things as are necessary for the votes of electors to be taken.

(5) Every elector listed at the Mobile Station is entitled to have his vote taken.

6) An agent shall be entitled to be present at the taking of the poll at a mobile polling station."

Mr. Speaker, it is simple; it is straightforward; it is not convoluted; it is eminently sensible; it urges itself upon us. There are numerous reasons why the current system ought to be modified. Reduce the number of votes to be counted as postal votes following the close of the polls. Improved secrecy and anonymity reduces the possibility of fraud, suspicion, allegations of fraud; all very powerful and compelling reasons why this provision ought to be part of our Elections Law. It is not too late for it to be included, Mr. Speaker, and to have effect in the upcoming elections. Not at all!

Mr. Speaker, I know that I have had to by necessity to repeat much of the argument that I made during my debate on the Elections (Amendment) Bill, so I am not going to take it further than I absolutely have to in presenting this Motion. However, I am going to ask Mr. Speaker, the Government to please explain to this Honourable House and to this country why there are resisting the inclusion of such a provision in the Elections Law when we have made far more radical, far-reaching, and from the Opposition's point of view, alarming changes to the Law in relation to election expenses over the course of the past week. So, I am going to sit down now, Mr. Speaker, and hear what they have to say. I do hope that they have thought a bit more about it than they did before they got up to speak in relation to this point during the debate on the Elections Bill.

I thank you, Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: Does any other Member wish to speak? The Honourable Leader of Government Business.

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: Mr. Speaker, as the Member has said, we have taken, I think, probably three days at revising the Elections Law. It was the view of the majority of this House that the Law would not be amended to give effect to mobile voting but rather the provisions in the current Law relating to postal ballots would remain intact.

Mr. Speaker, the Government has already put forth its arguments during the extensive debate both in the House and at committee stage on the Elections Bill, which was just passed here. Members queried why are we resisting the changes—because we feel, Mr. Speaker, that the current Law is sufficient. I will take the time out to read the current legislation, Mr. Speaker, Arrangements for Postal Voting from the Elections Law (2000 Revision), section 46(1): "Subject to this section:

- (a) Where an elector is unable or likely to be unable to go in person to the polling station for one of the following reasons-
  - (i) The general nature of the occupation, service or employment of the person in question;
  - (ii) That person's service as a member of any of Her Majesty's Forces;
  - (iii) The particular circumstances of that person's employment on the date of the poll either as a constable or for a purpose connected with the election by the Supervisor;
  - (iv) At a general election, the candidature in some other electoral district of that person or that person's wife or husband;
  - (v) At a general election, the fact that that person is acting as returning officer for some other electoral district; or
  - (vi) At a general election, the particular circumstances of that person's employment on the date of the poll by a returning officer for some other electoral district for a purpose connected with the election in that electoral district;
- (b) an elector is unable or likely to be unable by reason either of blindness or any other physical incapacity to go in person to the polling station or, if able to go, to vote unaided;

- (c) an elector is unable or likely to be unable to go in person to the polling station due to his absence for whatever reason outside the Islands;
- (d) an elector is unable or likely to be unable to go in person from his qualifying address to the polling station without making a journey by air or sea; or
- (e) an elector is no longer residing at his qualifying address.

That elector may vote by post if, in the prescribed manner and within the prescribed time, he applies to be treated as an absent elector and furnishes an address in the Island or overseas to which the ballot paper is to be sent for the purpose and if his application is allowed by the registering officer under section 47.

(2) At an election for which a person's application to be treated as an absent elector is allowed he shall not be entitled to vote in person under section 43.

(3) Nothing in this section shall be taken as conferring a right to vote on a person not having the right apart from this section.

47(1) An application to be treated as an absent elector shall be made to the registering officer and shall be allowed by him if he is satisfied that the applicant is, or will, if registered, be entitled under section 46 to vote as an absent elector.

(2) The application shall be for a particular election only, unless it is based on-

- (a) the general nature of the applicant's occupation, service or employment;
- (b) the applicant's physical incapacity;
- (c) the necessity of a journey by sea or air to go from the applicant's qualifying address to his polling station; or
- (d) the ground that the applicant no longer resides at his qualifying address.

(3) An application based on one of the grounds in subsection (2) shall be for an indefinite period, but where such an application is allowed the applicant shall cease to be entitled to be treated as an absent elector in pursuance thereof if-

- (a) he applies to the registering officer to be no longer so treated;
- (b) he ceased to be registered at the same qualifying address; or
- (c) the registering officer gives notice that he has reason to believe there has been a material change of circumstances and the prescribed period elapses after the giving of the notice.

47(4) The registering officer shall keep a record of absent electors and of the addresses furnished by them as the addresses to which their ballot papers are to be sent. "

Mr. Speaker this is all the determination of a right to be treated as an absent elector. Mr. Speaker, the Election Law even provides for spoilt postal ballot voting.

In section 48 it says: "An absent elector who has inadvertently so dealt with his ballot paper that it cannot conveniently be used may restore it or cause it to be restored by hand to the returning officer, who shall cancel it by writing the word "spoiled" across the face of it and forthwith placing it in a sealed packet. The returning officer shall then, unless such ballot paper is restored to him too late, for another ballot paper to be delivered or sent to the absent elector before the close of the poll, deliver or send another ballot paper to him."

Mr. Speaker, the Government believes that these provisions are sufficient and that it sufficiently provides for the handling. I know years ago Mr. Speaker, when you took the count, there was a postal ballot envelope, which was opened and then put into one basket, and there was another envelope that you would put into another basket and then I think the postal ballot went in another basket. There were at least four baskets and that took up so much time, but that was reduced in the last revisions that came before the House and it made the task much easier at the count.

Mr. Speaker, the argument that the Member is proposing I guess, is that he is saying it gives people a better chance and it cuts down the chance for fraud and these sorts of things. The postal ballot system has worked in this country, as it is in other territories. You send it out to the person, either through their box or someone who they have named and so, Mr. Speaker, what happens is, that the person makes the vote as they so please. We know we have had accusations but people will make accusations and, Mr. Speaker, they make accusations sometimes because they do not know what happened; that is, someone may be an aggrieved person, not necessarily the candidate and not necessarily the elector, the person who asked for the absentee ballot.

Mr. Speaker, now the ballot is in private. One of the greatest things is the privacy in all this and it will not be so if we go that route of postal voting. You go there with a mobile machinery ballot box and what happens then, all of the election officials has to go, maybe that is three people. So, to be fair Mr. Speaker, candidates' agents are going to have to go.

[Background comments]

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: Yes, to be fair! Yes, but that takes away the privacy, Mr. Speaker.

[Background comments]

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: How?

Because presently candidates' agents do not have to go to where a person has asked for a postal ballot, and so you are taking away that privacy from the individual. Now you imagine in a place, Mr. Speaker, like West Bay who could probably end up with 15 candidates, maybe more, last time we had 21! So, if you are going to send your agents there how people is that going to be? They have to be fair and the Mover has acknowledged that to be fair the agents need to be there.

George Town may be another district that has an equal number of candidates and everyone has to go out to every postal ballot; to every person that would seek a postal ballot. I do not think that is necessary on this small Island. I think that the system is much better defined, because even now postal ballots are not sent to candidates' postal boxes, whereas years ago that was the case, but that is not so today. That cannot happen today! It has to be sent somewhere else, but certainly not to the candidate. So, it lessens even the perception of anything untoward, Mr. Speaker. I do not believe that that postal voting is something that will work right for these Islands. As I said, for one the secrecy is going to be taken away from the person, far too many people are going to have to see what happens there. Mr. Speaker I believe today that police officers who are involved can get their postal ballot and vote beforehand; I think I was told that. Also for anyone who knows that they are going to be working and cannot get to the poll, they can get their postal ballot and get it in on time.

The things that concern me about postal votes, Mr. Speaker, are those going overseas and not being able to get in time because it is far too many of them that goes overseas, and because the process is the way it is, we cannot get it back in time and sometimes we get it back days after and all this sorts of things. It never gets back in time for the actual counting procedure. So, those are the things that concern me, but I did not know what you would do with that situation, other than to send the person the ballot and try to get them to send it back as quickly as possible.

I believe that we have provisions and it is fair, and while people may make accusations and so on, Mr. Speaker, I do not think that we just need to up and change the system because some people make accusation and the witness, Mr. Speaker I can only . . . I heard the mention, I think of something about a witness, but the witness, I do not know of any witness, certainly candidates cannot witness anybody's postal ballot, I know that to be a fact. That is in the Law now! For example, Mr. Speaker, if my mother who is in a wheelchair and my stepfather, because both of them would have to get a postal ballot, they would need one witness to their postal ballot, so somebody would have to do that, and I certainly cannot do it. Candidates cannot do it for anyone.

So, I think there is protection already in the system to stop anything untoward. The person who actually witnesses the postal voting (there is only one witness) cannot go out and say, 'well I saw her mark for a certain person'. However, if I am correct, Mr. Speaker, I think that you witness the paper because there is a paper that comes with the ballot, but you do not necessarily witness the ballot; you would not know unless that person would show you who they voted for, and then maybe that person might go out and say, 'I saw, or he said they voted for so and so'. Outside of that it is still completely a secret ballot. I think the process is still one that should not be changed at this time as it would become cumbersome, Mr. Speaker, and certainly, the privacy of the ballot would be taken away.

The Speaker: Does any other Member wish to speak? The Honourable Leader of the Opposition.

Hon. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Thank you.

Mr. Speaker, I listened to the reply from the Government and I am with absolute certainty that my colleague, in his winding up, will deal with some of the issues. I just wish to make some brief comments and I want to set the tone of my short commentary, Mr. Speaker, by referring not to the Dundas Report, but to the Preliminary Draft Bill, with your permission. Just so that it will be clear that the document I read from, Sir, this draft, does not contain any amendments relating to electoral districts/constituencies. It was the Draft Bill Mr. Speaker, which was originally presented to us along with the Dundas Report. My colleague referred to that Report. This . . .

The Speaker: Has this Draft Bill that you are referring to been superseded by the Bill that we have just passed?

Hon. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Yes, Mr. Speaker, but notwithstanding that, I will show the relevance of my using the document Sir, with the point that I wish to raise.

The Speaker: Please continue.

Hon. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Thank you very much, Sir.

This Draft Bill, and let me read the Memorandum that was attached to it so we can be clear what it is all about. The Memorandum is to the Permanent Secretary Planning Communications District Administration and Information Technology otherwise known as the Supervisor of Elections. There is a copy to the Honourable Acting Chief Secretary and it is from the First Legislative Council. The subject is the Elections (Amendment) Bill. "Further to our telephone conversation forwarded herewith is a Preliminary Draft of the above mentioned Bill. This Draft contains no amendments relating to electoral districts or constituencies".

Mr. Speaker, this document was the original document, Sir. It was handed out to us when we started the discussions originally regarding proposed amendments to the Election Law; 'we', meaning the Members of the Legislative Assembly. This was given to us at the very first meeting which the Honourable Chief Secretary chaired. This document was prepared originally after the first legislative council took instructions and input from the Supervisor of Elections and his deputies, Mr. Speaker. I am referring to this because there was a section in this, and with your permission Sir, I would like to read it and what I want to show so that you will see the relevance before you. My question is whether you would allow me to read it.

The point that I want to make is that the elections staff in proposing these amendments were (1) of the view that they were relevant; (2) obviously they had to be convinced that it was workable otherwise they would never have suggested it to us. Mr. Speaker, it is obvious that based on their own convictions they thought this was the route to take. So, I am again seeking your permission simply to read from this new section to prove the point that I am making about it. Thank you very much, Sir.

Section 19 of that original proposed Draft Bill reads: "The principal Law is amended by inserting after Section 45 the following section with the marginal notes reading Mobile Polling Stations." That new section would be Section 45(a).

Section 45(a)

- (i) Mobile Polling Stations may be used to take the poll at a hospital, rest home or other similar institution or in relation to geriatrics at home.
- (ii) The Supervisor subject to the approval of the Governor may appoint persons to be members of a mobile polling team and in respect of each team a person to be team leader.
- (iii) The supervisor may, by notice published in the Gazette, specify
  - (a) the places that will be visited by the mobile teams
  - (b) the time of the visit to each such place
- (iv) Each mobile team when it is in place for the purpose of taking votes at an election shall have ballot boxes, ballot papers and such things as are necessary for the votes of electors to be taken.
- (v) Every elector listed at the mobile station is entitled to have his vote taken
- (vi) An agent shall be entitled to be present at the taking of a poll at a mobile polling station.

So, Mr. Speaker, in reading from that document, that document as I said, being the very first one we had sight of, was coming mostly from the thoughts and the deliberations of the elections team. I am presuming, and I think fair assumption is, that that would have been in consultation with the document that has been tabled already and referred to as the Dundas Report. So, I want to get past the point, Mr. Speaker, about the practicality of Mobile Polling Stations. It is obvious that those who are going to work it Sir, were satisfied that it was practical otherwise they would not have recommended it. That was the reason first of all for reading it, Sir; there lies the relevance in that point that I am making. So, I think it is safe to say that we are now beyond whether it is practical or not.

Mr. Speaker, the Leader of Government Business when he was bringing his argument forward on behalf of the Government, and I wish not to take any opportunity for my colleague, the Mover of the Motion, not to reply, but I think there are some tie-ins. When he was speaking to that, Mr. Speaker, to his arguments as to why this should not be, he mentioned privacy. It does not matter if a hundred people are around you because if you are going to vote and you have the ability to personally cast that vote, the methodology that would be employed with a mobile station is that you would have the privacy to cast that vote. You are not going to cast a vote and pass the ballot paper around to people. People are not going to be standing up over your shoulder watching where you mark your 'X'. So, that argument falls through the window Sir, because I am absolutely certain that the elections officials would not operate a mobile polling station in a manner that the elector would not have the privacy or as it is termed the 'privacy' to be able to vote without anyone knowing what the votes were.

The other point, Mr. Speaker is, in some instances there would be individuals who would need help and in any instance they would need that help, whether it was via postal ballot or not. For instance, a blind person or a person who is for some reason or the other, not able to read or write properly and, Mr. Speaker, who would be more neutral than the people that we have appointed as our election officials? So, there cannot be an argument that will hold water or a point that is salient to latch on to, which speaks to privacy.

Mr. Speaker all of the sections that were read by the Leader of Government Business in the exiting Law, section 46, 47 and 48 and all of the subsections outlined by himself, in my view when he read all of those it really proves our point more so. The spirit and intent of those sections originally, Mr. Speaker, when it comes to a postal ballot is just that; a postal ballot for individuals, first of all who for one reason or the other are not going to be on Island with the ability to cast their vote on elections day. The exceptions Sir, for instance with the individuals who may be working the elections, or police or those type of individuals to have the ability to cast their vote otherwise than the normal method on an election day. That is understandable and that is fine.

However, where this section originally brought as a recommendation speaking about mobile polling stations, the mobile polling station in that subsection speaks to a hospital, rest home or other similar institutions, or in relation to a geriatric person at home. That is what this Motion is speaking to. This Motion is no very wide in its ambit; it is speaking to those same types of individuals referred to in that. When it comes to an individuals right to vote and right to vote by secret ballot we respect that that is almost sacred, but Mr. Speaker, the way it obtains now there is absolutely no way to even begin to guarantee that, the way it is open now.

[Background comments]

Hon. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Let me make it very clear, Mr. Speaker, all I am saying is that what obtains in the present Law . . . Let me, for instance read out 47(4) and I am going to read it very clear.

Section 47(4) says: “The registering officer shall keep a record of absent electors and of the addresses furnished by them as the addresses to which their ballot papers are to be sent.”

Mr. Speaker, one would assume that things run true in these instances, but there is no guarantee. Some of these people that we speak about may not have the ability to themselves provide these addresses and in many cases I am absolutely certain that they cannot, for one reason or another. Whatever address is provided to the registering officer, the registering officer sends the postal ballot to that address. I am not going to extend the argument into trying to physically point out exactly what can happen, Mr. Speaker, but I know that I have made my point. All I am saying about it is that if we had mobile polling stations and they were able to get to the individuals and allow them to physically cast their ballot in secret, into a ballot box with proper systems and security in place, which does not seem to be insurmountable, the mere fact that the election officials are satisfied it is workable, then there is absolutely no reason, Mr. Speaker, why one would not pursue that method to allow these individuals to vote.

With all that one might say or one might think, the notion behind this Motion; the thought behind it; the objective is simply to take away any perception that the way it works now is possibly methods or ways and means for something untoward to occur with one or more of the postal ballots. That is all it is, nothing else. It is not a big deal.

So, the Government has said that they are satisfied that what obtains now is in order and sufficient, and I think, Sir that the arguments put forth thus far say the opposite. Obviously at this point in time we do not expect the Government to change its mind, but we bring the Motion; my colleagues have, not with the intent just to bring it for bringing its sake, but to prove a point. We believe Sir, that if a point is proven well enough, the Government should reconsider. Whether that happens or not remains to be seen. However, I just wanted to used the reference of that document Sir; first of all to make it clear that obviously this is not a situation that seems to create any difficulty for the election officials to manage and to operate. Secondly, the point of privacy is not one which holds water, because it could easily occur where the individuals have the ability to vote in private.

There were arguments put forward about candidates and their agents and that is not, well what is proposed in the Law would allow for an agent to attend and in the extreme circumstance you may have quite a few of those depending on how many, because examples were cited and in the larger districts especially, you might have that many. I do not know how many candidates would ensure that there is an agent for that to happen, but even if it did happen, Mr. Speaker, then so let it be. In any other forum they have that same right also when it comes to an individual voting. The way it would work you see, Mr. Speaker, is regardless of who is gathered around it, it does not prevent the individual from voting in secret, which is the object of the exercise. So, Mr. Speaker I reiterate that point so that what was put forward as one of the arguments why it was not practical, should fall away, if we speak to sheer logic.

Mr. Speaker, the Mover of the Motion has made his points very clear. The Government has stated why they do not support the Motion. I think there is ample reason for them to reconsider and I do believe that it would be a safer way to allow electors in the circumstances spoken to in this Motion, to cast their votes and they would feel more comfortable once they get used to doing it in that manner. Like everything else, if it is new it might have a few hiccups but that is not something that should deter you from going that route if you know that it is the best route to go Sir. So, we hold true to our argument and we will see how many more arguments are brought forth and the Mover, I am certain, will be able to deal with whatever other counterpoints may be brought. I really hope that the Government would be mindful to look at this again, Mr. Speaker, because I know that the election officials were keen to get this off the ground because they felt it would bring more creditability to the process that they conduct, Sir. . .

[Background comments]

Hon. D. Kurt Tibbetts: I am going to leave my arguments there and we will see what else transpires during the debate. Certainly, we will all keenly to hear what else is said. Thank you.

The Speaker: Does any other Member wish to speak?

The Honourable Minister for Education.

Hon. Roy Bodden: Mr. Speaker, I have listened to the arguments put forth by the Mover and his colleague, the Honourable Leader of the Opposition but I can find within those arguments no convincing reason why we should add mobile voting to what is an already adequate system. Mr. Speaker, the system we have in place now caters to the spectrum of voters that we would have, for the postal ballots services and serves the students and those persons with the ability to vote, who, for whatever reason, is absent from the jurisdiction on polling day. Now to add a third dimension, mobile voting stations, which I hasten to point out, is an importation from other jurisdictions, jurisdictions which are much larger in geographical scope than what we have. Jurisdictions in which the communication is different for there may be areas which are not as easily accessible on polling day as our polling stations are, and our ability to circulate postal ballots and have them returned by that day.

Above all, Mr. Speaker, it carries with it a dimension of the sacrificing of the privacy of the whole occasion because I concur with what the Leader of Government Business said. You cannot have people in mobile voting stations casting their votes without also having agents and representatives of the various candidates who are contesting the election in that area. So, it is possible to have a whole slew of people and I do not know where the voting is going to take place, whether it is in a wagon, whether you are going to do the voting in somebody's drawing room or living room, or whether you are going to do it in the middle of the yard. There is also the added dimension of the curiosity of neighbours if it is a situation where we have close proximity.

So, what we are doing, Mr. Speaker, is adding a whole new dimension, which is taxing the social control, the secrecy of the exercise and the security of the exercise also. Right now our system, which is the system of voting in person at the polls or postal ballots for all of those not at the polls in whatever category they may be, is an adequate system. To add now, mobile voting is more expensive, it means that the election office are going to hire additional staff and they go through training and then they are going to have to hire security too, either security guards or policemen are going to have to go with those mobile wagons.

The system, Mr. Speaker, while it may be appropriate in other jurisdictions, is not appropriate in our jurisdiction, and I heard allusions and aspersions to the practice of postal ballots not being completely above board. Mr. Speaker, the amendments we have made recently to the Election Law were designed to eliminate this and I am satisfied that we know have in those amendments a foolproof system of postal balloting. Therefore to add this now is going to be an added dimension of confusion, because we would have to define the categories eligible for mobile voting and are not those categories the same categories now covered by postal ballots?

I listened particularly, intently, to the Second Elected Member for George Town saying he was able to identify one—and I noticed he said one. It is possible to be able to identify who one ballot was cast for, but I bet you he could not say that he could identify who one hundred ballots were cast for because I know the system well having gone through it some six times. I know the system well and it is well nigh impossible unless of course one specializes in some form of snooping and espionage to know exactly who a postal ballot is cast for. This is the most insulated system that I have ever, Mr. Speaker, come across, so just like one swallow does not a summer make, so too does not one knowing the identity of one ballot. It does not mean that the system is fraught with porousness or that the system has no secrecy. I do not believe that, Mr. Speaker.

I want also to say that I know in many cases change is good and change is appropriate but it was never intended for us to import every idea that is recommended to us. Never intended, Mr. Speaker! I agree that we have to make adjustments and keep up with modernity and modern practices but I am saying in our case this is completely and entirely unnecessary, and the Government is right and appropriate to stick by the system we have, which has taken us thus far beyond any significant point of contention.

Mr. Speaker, I would suspect the reason why it was followed through in the preliminary draft and not carried to its finality is because it was just a recommendation and later on the persons who recommended it may have realised and certainly, would have realised that it was entirely unnecessary. That is why it did not come out in the final draft. It is cumbersome; it is expensive; it does not guarantee Mr. Speaker. I know the nature of the beast—pulled up in a neighbourhood with a mobile voting van and that is excitement around the neighbourhood, Mr. Speaker.

Hon. Roy Borden: What are you going to do? It is going to necessitate the police; it is going to necessitate some kind of security and what size is the ballot box going to be? Is it going to be the conventional ballot boxes or is it going to be a special ballot box designed for 10, 15 or 20 votes? That is another problem. What times are these mobile vans going to make their runs? Are we going to have a schedule that they will all be out at 8 o'clock in the morning? Mr. Speaker it is fraught with cumbersomeness, difficulties and sometimes downright danger! Then of course once you run on the road there is always the possibility of accidents. Heaven forbid! Then what happens? Mr. Speaker, we had better be wise and stick with the system that we have. I know that the Opposition is anxious to contribute something constructive, but this Mr. Speaker, cannot pass as that. Thank you.

The Speaker: Does any other Member wish to speak? Does any other Member wish to speak? Last call! Does any other Member wish to speak? If not would the Honourable Second Elected Member wish to exercise his right of reply?

Mr. Alden M. McLaughlin, Jr: Mr. Speaker, I have to confess, that in the nearly four years I have been in this Honourable House, I have never heard such wind. Mr. Speaker, with all of that rhetoric and all of that noise neither the Leader of Government Business nor the Honourable Minister for Education have answered any of the questions that have been put, have raised one good reason why we ought not to employ this very progressive and useful provision, which the government consultant they hired has recommended and is contained in the Draft Bill prepared on the instructions of the Elections Office.

Mr. Speaker, the Honourable Minister of Education stands up on the Floor of this House and says that the recent amendments to the Elections Law will cure all of the perceived and real concerns about the operation of postal ballots. I wonder if he even looked at what the Elections (Amendment) Bill contained. There is not one provision in the, . . .

Mr. Alden M. McLaughlin, Jr: . . . I do not know how many amendments to that Bill, which addresses postal ballots.

Hon. Roy Bodden: Mr. Speaker!

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Education, are you rising on a point of Order?

Hon. Roy Bodden: Mr. Speaker, yes Sir. I think that the Honourable Second Elected Member is now misleading because I did not say the immediate recent, I said the recent amendments made to the Elections Law, before this one, covered all of the concerns we had.

[Inaudible interjection]

The Speaker: Honourable Member we seem to have reverse situation here, because just last week, I overruled the Honourable Second Elected Member for George Town for rising on a point of order under the caption of misleading the House, and similarly there is no such Standing Order pointing to misleading the House as a point of order. However I will ask the Honourable Second Elected Member for George Town to take into account the explanation that the Honourable Minister for Education has given, that he was not referring to the immediate amendments to the Bill, but indeed previous amendments to the Elections Law.

Mr. Alden M. McLaughlin, Jr: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Far be it from me to suggest, the Minister's argument was weak enough as it stood. I would not want to weaken it by ascribing to him things he did not say or mean. So, I will move on, Mr. Speaker, without saying more.

The reality is, Mr. Speaker, and that I believe, would become clear to anyone listening to the Leader of Government Business reading those long, extensive, convoluted, complex, laborious provisions that are contained in Section 45, 46 and 47. That is how many sections are currently required to deal with this whole question of postal ballots; it runs to three pages in the Law. Mr. Speaker, I hesitate to use the term nonsense, but that is the only that I have been able to come up with to describe what has been said in relation to the question of privacy, the question of secrecy in relation to the carrying out of the poll, at a mobile polling station.

Mr. Speaker, there is no question of the candidates or the agents being present and watching the elector mark his or her 'x'. Their function at a mobile polling station will be the same function they carry out at the established polling stations. They are there to ensure that the person who is voting is someone who is qualified and registered to vote; that the person actually marking the 'x' is the person who is entitled to vote. That is their function, pure and simple. All of this nonsense about crowding into people's yards and homes and neighbours seeing what is going, I have not heard such absolute nonsense since I have been in this Honourable House, Mr. Speaker.

Mr. Alden M. McLaughlin: It points, Mr. Speaker, to the weakness, to the lameness of the arguments put forward resisting this, and, Mr. Speaker, one has to ask oneself, why is it that the Government objects so strenuously to such a provision.

[Inaudible interjection]

Mr. Alden M. McLaughlin: Mr. Speaker, we speak about cumbersome. Let me just ask this Honourable House to be patient as I review the various forms that are necessary before (a) a postal ballot is issued and then what has to be done when it is executed; when it is returned; when it is opened, and we will understand what cumbersomeness is!

Mr. Speaker, in the Law which was just amended, under the Appendix, there are a series of forms. Form B is entitled 'Application to be treated as an Absent Elector', so you first have to make an application to be treated as an absent elector. The declaration by the applicant reads as follows:

"I, A. B. of _____ do solemnly and sincerely declare that the information contained in the above form is correct to the best of my knowledge and belief" In the form you have to say what is the electoral district for which you are registered, the reasons why you are making the application and the address to which it should be sent. This then has to be signed by the applicant and signed by a witness. Then, the person who assists the absent elector has to sign as well, stating a document in the following terms: “I _____ of _____ do solemnly and sincerely declare that I assisted the applicant by filling out and/or signing the above form in the presence of the applicant on behalf of the applicant, and that in doing so I did not influence the applicant in any way, but accurately recorded therein the wishes, information and reasons stated by the applicant, and that the information contained in the above form is correct to the best of my knowledge and belief.”

Form C, which is the ‘Declaration of Identity’ state the following terms: “I hereby declare that I am the person to whom the ballot paper numbered as above and the envelope in which it was enclosed (both of which I now produce) were sent. The abovementioned, who is personally known to me has produced the ballot paper and the envelope referred to and has signed the above declaration in my presence.” You have to sign it, find another witness again and then there is a whole list of instructions to the elector, Mr. Speaker, which takes up an entire page. I will not trouble this Honourable House by reading all of that, but it gives instructions how the form ought to be signed.

You then go to Form D which is called ‘A Declaration of Secrecy’: “I, A. B. of _____ being a person attending the proceedings on the issue or receipt of postal ballot papers do solemnly and sincerely declare that I will keep secret all matters coming to my knowledge in the course of such proceedings, and that I will not divulge them to any person in any manner whatever save as required by the due process of law, and I realise that any breach of secrecy under this declaration makes me liable to the penalties prescribed in rule 10(3) of the Elections Rules.” Signed and witnessed again.”

Mr. Speaker, tell me if we can possibly create a system that is more convoluted and more cumbersome than this one. The whole objective of Mobile Polling Stations is that it reduces the number of persons who would have to vote by postal ballot. We say that the only persons who ought to be voting by postal ballot are persons who are not on the Island at the time the elections take place and know sufficiently in advance that they are not going to be here so they can apply for one. In every other instance we ought to be making the effort to give people the opportunity to exercise their franchise personally.

How are we increasing the risk of fraud, of irregularity by letting people mark their own ballot papers and in the presence of the candidates or the agents, and the elections officials who place it in a ballot box themselves? Without the need for all of these forms and declarations of secrecy and certificates; I am the person that this ballot paper has been sent to, et cetera, et cetera, et cetera. So, that the government might finally get the point and it will reduce the number of postal ballots that are counted and the long, laborious, tedious process, which I know from personal experience have the possibility of persons being able to know who voted for whom.

What is the problem with what is being proposed? I must say that I will draw my own conclusions from the reluctance and downright refusal of the Government to accede to this Motion and I am certain that the general public will also draw their own conclusions, and I can say, the conclusions that I draw are not favourable ones.

Mr. V. Arden McLean: ‘Tell ‘em ‘bout it brother’.

Mr. Alden M. McLaughlin, Jr.: Mr. Speaker, I know the Government will have its way, at least for some little time further. Whether or not we have mobile polling stations this time round, I know that the electorate of this country will shortly have the opportunity to call this Government to account; not just for their attitude in relation to this but to their stewardship generally and all I wish to say in conclusion is, ‘hasten November 17, hasten’.

[Background comments]

The Speaker: The question is that ‘BE IT HEREBY RESOLVED THAT the Election Law (2000 Revision) be amended to provide for Mobile Voting Units to enable persons who will be present in the Cayman Islands on the day fixed for the upcoming General Elections but who are unable to attend at a polling station because of infirmity or other good reason, to vote prior to the day of the general elections, otherwise then by absentee ballot’. All those in favour please say Aye. Those against, No.

Ayes and Noes.

[Laughter]

An Honourable Member: The Ayes have it.

The Speaker: The Ayes have it.

An Honourable Member: No the Ayes do not have it, Mr. Speaker

Hon. Juliana Y. O’Connor-Connolly: Mr. Speaker, can we have a Division?

The Speaker: I have to admit Honourable Members that I intended to say the Noes have it, but I did in fact say the Ayes have it. So, we will have a Division please.

[Laughter and inaudible interjection]

Division No. 5/04

Ayes: 5

Hon. D. Kurt Tibbetts

Mr. Alden M. McLaughlin, Jr.

Noes: 6

Hon. W. McKeever Bush

Hon. Gilbert Mclean

Mr. Anthony S. Eden
Mrs. Edna M. Moyle
Mr. V. Arden McLean

Hon. Roy Bodden
Hon. Samuel Bulgin
Hon. George A. McCarthy
Hon. Juliana Y. O'Connor-Connolly

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: Mr. Speaker, Members are questioning where some other Members are and we do know, Mr. Speaker...

The Speaker: I have already received the explanation for their absence.

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: Yes, the two of them have gone to the police station in West Bay.

The Speaker: Madam Clerk would you please read the Division?

The Clerk: The results of the Division: 5 Ayes, 6 Noes and 6 Absentees.

The Speaker: Private Members Motion No.4/04 has failed.

Madam Clerk, would you call the next item please?

Negated by Majority: Private Member's Motion 4/04 failed.

The Clerk: Private Member's Motion 05/04

Private Member's Motion No. 5/04

Review and amendment of Maintenance and Affiliation Legislation

The Speaker: The Second Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. Alden M. McLaughlin, Jr: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I beg to move Private Member's Motion 05/04, entitled Review and amendment of Maintenance and Affiliation Legislation.

"WHEAREAS concern has been expressed recently about the provisions of the Affiliation Law, the Maintenance Law and other companion legislation relating to both financial and other support of and access to children;

"BE IT HEREBY RESOLVED THAT the Legislation in the Cayman Islands dealing with the financial and other support of and access to children be reviewed and where necessary amended to provide for:

- (a) non discrimination between the rights and or entitlement of illegitimate and legitimate children;
- (b) improved enforcement of Maintenance and Affiliation Orders;
- (c) access to children by putative fathers."

The Speaker: Is there a Seconder?

Hon. D Kurt Tibbetts: Yes Mr. Speaker, I beg to second the Motion.

The Speaker: The question is: 'BE IT HEREBY RESOLVED THAT the Legislation in the Cayman Islands dealing with the financial and other support of and access to children be reviewed and where necessary amended to provide for:

- (a) non discrimination between the rights and or entitlement of illegitimate and legitimate children;
- (b) improved enforcement of Maintenance and Affiliation Orders;
- (c) access to children by putative fathers.'

The Speaker: The Motion is open for debate. Does the Honourable Mover wish to speak thereto?

Mr. Alden M. McLaughlin, Jr.: Yes, thank you, Mr. Speaker.

In recent times there has been a great deal of concern expressed from various quarters about the whole question of child support. The discussion has evolved into a somewhat broader subject which deals generally with the welfare of children and the access to them principally by their fathers.

The Minister for Community Services recently laid on the Table of this Honourable House the National Gender Policy. We also recently, at his bequest, acceded to a motion asking for CEDAW or the Convention in relation to non-discrimination of all types against women for a motion, which would permit the Government to request the United Kingdom to have Convention extended to the Cayman Islands. All of those things are very positive, very good things and the Minister has boasted on more than one occasion about the efforts he has made and the achievements of his Ministry in relation to improving this society and particularly the family.

It is therefore somewhat surprising that notwithstanding the fact that these issues in relation to children have received such prominence recently but the Government has remained completely silent about them. I am also even more surprised and disappointed that the Honourable Minister is not present this evening although, notice that this Motion would be dealt with this evening, I believe, was served on all Members of this Honourable House. Notwithstanding that I do hope there is someone on the Government bench who is equipped and prepared to respond.

The legislation dealing with children in this country has never been in a worse state than it currently is. What we have now are at least five different pieces of legislation which purport to deal with children's issues. You have to search if you are unaware of these, to find which piece of legislation applies to you and in some instances Mr. Speaker, you actually discover that despite the fact that legislation has been passed for nearly a year it has not been brought into force. So, you may get a bit excited by some of the provisions of the Children Law 2003, for instance which has some very useful provisions and which seeks to deal with the whole question of the welfare of children in a comprehensive manner, and then you discover that despite the fact that the Law was assented to on 4th September, 2003 it still has not been brought into effect.

This Law, Mr. Speaker, would repeal a number of pieces of legislation including the Guardianship and Custody of Children Law, the Juveniles Law and a certain section of the Education Law once it came into effect but thus far, it is not in effect. We also have the status of Children Law, 2003 which is a piece of legislation that evolved out of a Private Member's Motion that I brought to this Honourable House back in March of 2001. This has the effect of removing the distinction between legitimate and illegitimate children for all purposes in the Cayman Islands. Indeed, Mr. Speaker, Section 3(1) of that Law provides that subject to subsection (2), for all the purposes of the laws of the Islands a person is a child of his natural parents and his status as their child is independent of whether he is born inside or outside of marriage and all other relationships shall be determined accordingly. This piece of legislation was assented to on the 5th of January 2004, and I am pleased to say that following a parliamentary question which I submitted, it has now been brought into effect, with the effect from 1st June.

The question now is, Mr. Speaker, what is the impact of those provisions on provisions in other legislations such as the Affiliation Law and the Maintenance Law, which continue to make distinctions based on the legitimacy or otherwise of children and make different provisions in relation to their entitlement to receive financial support based on whether or not the child is a legitimate child or a child born out of wedlock? Mr. Speaker, in the National General Policy which I referred to at some length in another debate recently, it has been identified by the Ministry that the Maintenance and Affiliation legislation needs to be amended and addressed. It is therefore even more surprising that no steps appear to have been taken thus far to deal with these issues to bring the legislation in relation to children, to a point where if it is not a single piece of legislation, at least the provisions are consistent, their provisions are consistent. So Mr. Speaker, when I drafted the Motion I had that particular issue in mind as well.

Now, Mr. Speaker, the Affiliation Law, and for the purposes of those who might be listening and who might not understand the difference; the Affiliation deals with children who are not the product of a marriage and the Maintenance Law deals with a number of issues but for the purposes of my discussion and my debate this evening, it deals with children who are the result of a lawful marriage. Mr. Speaker, to add to the confusion we have got the Guardianship and Custody of Children's Law which also addresses not financial support in a specific sense, but addresses matters of custody and generally the upkeep of children and their education.

Now, Mr. Speaker, I am going to turn to specific problems with the two pieces of legislation, the Affiliation Law and the Maintenance Law. Mr. Speaker, the Affiliation Law allows in Section 3 any single woman who is with child or who is delivered of a child to make a complaint for complaining that someone is the father of the child and that he ought to be ordered to pay financial support. Now, Mr. Speaker, there are a number of, this comes from rather ancient legislation and from another time and another era. One of the fundamental problems with this piece of legislation, Mr. Speaker, is that the woman has to be a single woman. Firstly, if a woman has a child and then subsequently marries someone who is not the natural father of the child, she cannot seek support for the child from the natural father of the child.

Secondly, any application must be brought within twelve months of the delivery of the child unless the father has left the Island or he has been paying some sort of maintenance or support in the interim because that is taken as acknowledgment of his responsibility. Therefore, the continued presence of these sort of provisions operate unfairly in relation to the support of children because, Mr. Speaker, as has been acknowledged in the Children Law, the paramount consideration must be the welfare of the child, and a father having the ability to rely on a technical provision that the application has not been made within twelve months of the child's birth is really, Mr. Speaker, not fair to the child. After all, the child cannot make the application itself in all instances.

Mr. Speaker, I can remember something from many years ago, and it is one of those things you have to do professionally that haunts you forever. I represented a man who I would have to say now is a very callous individual and whose instructions to me were that he was not prepared to support his two children and the mother had not made the application within twelve months of their birth. He had not paid her any money and the children were at this point, I think 8 and 6 years old or something. It was my professional duty to represent him in these proceedings and it was a case before the Magistrates Court as these matters generally are, so the magistrate had to agree with my technical argument that there was no jurisdiction for her to entertain the complaint because it had not been made within the time specified in the Law. Now, as I said Mr. Speaker, that is one of those matters that you do because it is your professional duty but many years later and I can say it is more than 10 years ago now, I still feel badly about the result. So, Mr. Speaker, those sorts of provisions must be changed.

Mr. Speaker, the Affiliation Law also provides that the court making the order may direct that the payments be made on a writ in respect of a child to continue until the child attains the age of 15 years. There is also a proviso which says that in certain circumstances the court can vary that order to direct that the payments be made up to the age of 17. Whereas in the Maintenance Law, which deals with children of a married couple, the provision only relates to the age of 14 although there is provision that in certain circumstance the court may vary the order. I am not certain, Mr. Speaker, whether that variation also relates to the age, in other words not just the terms of the order but that payments may be ordered to be made when the child is beyond the age of 14 years. It is not clear to me from simply looking at the section, I do not know whether there has been any decided cases in relation to it or not. However, even as it stands it is not consistent with the provisions of the Affiliation Law, and as we now have the status of Children Law in effect, which says that all of the Laws of the Islands are to be interpreted in a way in which there is no discrimination between children born within or outside of a marriage. So, clearly we need to address those provisions and those two laws.

Now, Mr. Speaker, having had a look at what I shall call the offending pieces of legislation, I would like to refer to the local circumstances and positions that have been taken by the proponents of reform of this legislation, as well as to have a look at what has been done in some other places. Mr. Speaker, it is interesting to note that the Women's Resource Centre which I believe falls squarely under the responsibility of the Minister of Community Service, recently carried out a poll and if I might have leave, Sir, to refer to that poll which is available on the www.gov.ky website.

The Speaker: Please continue.

Mr. Alden M. McLaughlin, Jr.: It reads Mr. Speaker, and for good measure it says: "Women's Resource Centre Community Services, Youth Sports and Gender Affairs". This is clearly the Ministers responsibility. The theme of honouring Women's Month this year was "Challenges, Solutions and the way forward". The purpose of the poll was to find out what the public both youth and adult populations feel are the biggest challenges women are experiencing in the Cayman Islands today. The results of the poll were used as guiding information for a panel discussion held on the HWM, Honouring Women Month theme, Challenges, Solutions and the Way Forward, which took place on Thursday, 11th March at 6:00 p.m. at the George Town, Town Hall. Now what they did was to vote for issues which posed the biggest challenges to women. Votes—76 persons voted domestic abuse, which included financial, verbal and sexual abuse; 53 persons voted single parenting issues, difficulty collecting maintenance, absent fathers. So, of the 10 issues put forward, second with the most votes as a real issue affecting women was the whole question of single parenting and specifically collecting maintenance and absent fathers.

So, Mr. Speaker, the Honourable Minister has absolutely no excuse in my respectful view Sir, for failing to address this matter. The evidence which his Ministry or agents of his Ministry have collected has told the Government clearly, and his Ministry specifically, that this whole question of collecting maintenance and absent fathers is a critical issue second only to the question of domestic abuse in the eyes of women in this country. Yet, almost three years after he has assumed the mantle of that Ministry nothing has been done by the Government to address this issue, and then Mr. Speaker, they have the nerve to come down here and read off for an hour 13 pages of achievements of the Ministry of Community Services! Sometimes, Mr. Speaker, I almost become sick thinking about I ought not to say that word because it is unparliamentary; thinking about—I better leave that, Mr. Speaker.

Mr. Speaker, the Caymanian Compass has carried a number of articles and letters on the efforts that are being made by a very small group headed up by Mrs. Patricia Bryan Rodrigues. This group has been seeking to address this whole question of child support and the difficulties that women are experiencing in this country, principally women in getting fathers to pay for child support. Also, Mr. Speaker, included is the ancillary issue of fathers being part of the child's growing up years; being part of the child's life and having access to the children. With your leave Sir, I would like to read some excerpts from one article and from some of the letters because I believe they are instructive. . .

The Speaker: Please continue.

Mr. Alden M. McLaughlin, Jr.: . . .and will perhaps, give the Government, which seems to be unaware of this issue a little more insight into what is being experienced by women and the children in this country.

The Caymanian Compass, Friday 2nd April, 2004 Mr. Speaker, an article entitled 'Child Support, Better Laws, More Staff Needed' by Ms. Carol Winker, who, coincidentally Mr. Speaker, happens to be seated in the gallery. It reads: "Existing laws need more teeth and the court system needs more staff to deal with the problem of 'deadbeat dads' or parents who do not provide child support." These were two of the conclusions reached at a meeting on Wednesday evening at the Mary Miller Hall. Organized by Ms. Patricia Bryan the meeting was attended by 30 women and 5 men. Three of the women had been invited by Ms. Bryan to facilitate discussion. Then, Mr. Speaker, it refers to the women who were there and I think because the effort is so commendable I ought to perhaps mention them, although I will not read the whole article. They were attorney Stacey Park, from Brooks and Brooks, Ms. Sandra Catron, from the Institute of Legal Training, and attorney Margita Facey-Clarke, who has her own law firm.

Mr. Speaker, here are some of the concerns outlined: Different laws that apply to children born in or out of wedlock; persons who are afraid to go to court by themselves even though the Maintenance Courts are not as formal as regular courts. Another problem was the length of time it takes to get a matter to court and dealt with before any support money is received. One reason was said to be the small number of staff dealing with such matters. Women should rally for a few more officers to deal only with support matters so that the system could work more quickly, it was suggested. Former maintenance officer, Ms. Judy Ann Frederick, said that some fathers had told her they were not paying child support because the mother did not let them see their child. She urged mothers to let the dad spend time with the child if he wants to; support is just not financial it is also emotional, she pointed out. These are explanations that were given.

Other suggestions dealt with using the existing law to get support payments deducted from the parent's wages, getting access to his bank account, making failure to pay child support socially unacceptable. Mr. Speaker, a number of those points were points which, certainly in relation to the problems of the current legislation and the fact that it continues to discriminate based on whether or not the child is born within or outside a marriage, were matters that I outlined earlier.

There is also a number of letters and one is a letter dated 15 May 2004 to the Caymanian Compass written by Ms. Patricia Bryan Rodrigues. I am not going to read the whole thing again, but I think it is important that I do read some of it so that perhaps the Government might come to understand some of the real concerns and the strength of feeling and frustration experienced by women in this country in their efforts to get support for their children. Quoting from the letter, Mr. Speaker, she says: "Certainly the issue 'deadbeat dads' has again resurfaced. As a matter of fact it has never subsided nor laid to rest. This just as strongly as domestic violence or incest, child abuse, defilement, which are other detrimental issues that have to be addressed and brought to the surface has always been an underlying condition from the beginning of time. But just as the time arrives in life for each social situation to be addressed, so the time has arrived for this issue to be addressed."

She then goes on to explain that she has been the organiser of this effort. She says: "It is a tug of war, this child support issue, and will always be as with all issues in life we will never truly set up a system that will solve each or all of the problems facing mankind, but the Cayman Islands is certainly one of the backward countries of the world, it has taken a stand for protecting children and having them receive what is rightly theirs, receiving support from their parents. . . Whether this is the father or mother. . ." It is difficult to read, Mr.

Speaker, because the photocopy is not very good and that is why I appear to be struggling here. "...does not make any difference, at least not one (I think) just as long as it is being received."—meaning the payments.

Then, Mr. Speaker, there is a letter from another individual who wrote on Thursday, 10th June, 2004 and she says: "These deadbeat parents are prevalent around the world and right here at home, but before we go any further let us ask ourselves who are deadbeat parents and how can they be identified? Is it a person who suddenly disappears or runs off after the birth of the child or after the divorce? Is it the person who occasionally pays child support? Or is it the person we consistently have to remind what the child's needs are to be nourished, to attend school, to be told that they are still loved no matter what the circumstance? The list is endless. I was married and had a child. Not only were we obligated to raise our child in a safe and loving environment, we were to support the child both emotionally and financially. The only difference is the father, the 'ex', who forgot a few things along the way, his financial obligations. So off we went to court and he was ordered to pay a substantial amount for support. I had the judges ruling, the guidance of our attorneys, the support of our families, but it made no difference. He continued to make sporadic payments barely enough to feed, clothe and shelter our child. By the time we attended the third hearing and against the advice of my attorney I was resolved that this would be my last appearance. That was eighteen years ago, and my child is now an adult."

Mr. Speaker, she goes on and she takes quite a few serious swings at the Legislature I have to say, because she does not make a difference between the Government or the Opposition. She says: "Everyday we read about the modernisation of telecommunications and our heading into the 21st Century, yet some of our laws remain so 18th Century, so primitive and outdated for this rapidly developing nation. Whilst we have several supporting units to turn to for temporary assistance we need to find permanent effective solutions. So, here we are today, an election year where there will be ample opportunities for the incumbents and newcomers to spread news of what they have accomplished and what the future plans are for our Islands. So before you promise to pave a hundred roads with miniature roundabouts or issue another 3000 pay as you come status grants, please readdress these issues, stringent legislation for deadbeat parents, domestic violence, child abuse, incest, rape etc. Tell us what other plans are in place to improve and expand our schools, more teachers, teacher aides, better wages for teachers, nurses, etc. and most importantly how can we the UDP and the PPM work together to rejuvenate the val- ues of family life. By addressing some of these issues your voters registration could climb even higher and you may just get that vote you're looking for." She goes on, Mr. Speaker.

The point, I think, Mr. Speaker, has been made. There is a high level of frustration, anger, disappoint out there principally among women of children who do not feel that the welfare of their children is the paramount consideration of the system. Who do not feel that the system is able to cope adequately with persons, men principally, who do not meet their financial obligations to their children. Now, Mr. Speaker, so that everyone will understand and so that I cannot be properly accused of simply taking the side of women in this matter, we are aware, all of us, and all of the persons to whom I have spoken in relation to this matter who are principally women, understand that there are women who do not utilise the monies which they derive from fathers in the appropriate manner and in the best interest of the children.

There are also instances, Mr. Speaker, where men, fathers, willing fathers, loving fathers are denied access to their children by women; there is no doubt about that. Unfortunately when relations break down and there is anger and resentment, ill-feeling between the parties, oftentimes, even persons that we would consider to be mature and above that, use the children as some sort of leverage, or some sort of pawn in a very, very terrible game trying to either hurt the other individual or get the other individual to do something that they otherwise would not do; that is the reality of life. I have had many men over the course of the years I have been involved as a lawyer, come to me sometimes even in tears because they are prevented access to their children. Mr. Speaker, the Children Law, if it ever does get implemented, will go a long ways to enable the courts to make the requisite orders so that parental responsibility can be properly shared, even in circumstances where the parties are not and have never been married.

However, in the absence of that Mr. Speaker, unless a father who is not married and has never been married to the mother can make an application or is prepared to go through all of the problems to make an application to the court for guardianship or custody, essentially, fathers of children who have never been married to the child's mother do not have a right of access to the child. They have an obligation, once they have been adjudged to be the putative father of the child, to pay the child's financial support, but they do not have a right of access to the child and that, Mr. Speaker, while it is wrong, wrong, wrong, to withhold payment on the basis that you cannot see the child, human nature being the way human nature is men are going to resort to whatever avenue is available and in most cases they feel that is the only way, unless I refuse to pay her, she is not going to make me see the child. I am not speculating about that, nor am I relying on what these individuals have told me. I have had, I cannot tell you how many men,

Mr. Speaker, tell me or say things like that to me in relation to this situation. I have to say that I am generally very unsympathetic to men who come with any reason why they cannot support their child.

My view about children is, they are the innocence. When you were having your fun or whatever you were doing, which has resulted in their being present on this earth, you ought to have given thought to how you were going to assist in raising them. So, do not tell me that you cannot pay your mortgage because it costs too much to raise the child. You should have thought about that before. The welfare of the child is of paramount consideration and ought to be. So, as I say Mr. Speaker, and I know this will not make me, and has never made me popular in certain instances, except I suppose, I have never said it quite so publicly as I am this evening, but I have no sympathy at all for men who do not make an effort to meet their financial obligations to their children; none whatsoever! Whatever this House can do and the Government can do, ought to be done to facilitate children getting what is their just due; that is the financial support of both their parents. Mr. Speaker, that brings me conveniently to really the last aspect of this which is the whole question of enforcement.

Now, Mr. Speaker, I have tried through various sources to identify what really are the problems with the current system. On the face of it the enforcement system seems to be reasonably good, but something seems to be lost between the making of the orders and the actual enforcement. There are provisions in the Law which enables the court to make, what I think are called in Cayman, 'Attachment of Earnings Orders', which (those provisions are contained in the Judicature Law) enables the court to make an order requiring an employer to deduct a certain fixed sum from the employees salary and remit it either to the court funds office or directly to the mother. Mr. Speaker, this is touchy ground because I cannot say that I have the best evidence of this, but what has been indicated to me, by talking with a number of women, is that it is generally felt that many employers resent having to do this exercise. While there is provision in the Judicature Law for the courts to force them to do it or failing that the employer will commit a criminal offence. It seems based on such information as I have, and I have not checked the statistics, Mr. Speaker, so I know I am on somewhat tentative ground here, but it seems, or the perception certainly is that the courts are reluctant to coerce employers into making these deductions which ought to be made. There is also, Mr. Speaker a view, that even that is inadequate and we need more enforcement provisions which actually bite and make the recalcitrant father, principally, a little more willing to meet his obligations.

In the state of Florida, Mr. Speaker, they have adopted some fairly serious provisions. Mr. Speaker, if I can refer to something that I got off of the internet entitled "State of Florida Department of Revenue, Child Support Enforcement Process". It says, under that heading: "Non-custodial parents who do not pay child support established by court order are subject to enforcement measures to collect regular and past due payments. The Department has brought authority to collect and enforce the payment of child support although we do not take an enforcement action on a case unless the non-custodial parent is 30 days late in the payment of support. Our remedies include, suspending Florida Driver License, suspending other licenses such as hunting and fishing licenses, occupational and professional licenses".

These are fairly radical steps. "Intercepting IRS tax refunds, intercepting Florida lottery winnings over $600.00; unemployment compensation and workers compensation; requiring employers to deduct child support from non-custodial parents' wages". Well we have that provision here. "Cooperating with the court in the issuance of writs also known as arrest warrants, placing liens on real property, homes land and personal property such as cars and boats; reporting the child support debt to credit bureaus which can affect the non-custodial parents' credit rating and placing bank account levies and garnishments".

Mr. Speaker, in some other jurisdictions they actually make the non-payment, or the non-financial support of children a criminal offence and prosecute the offending person who I am afraid to say is generally the father, for what is called criminal non-support of children. I do have the provision somewhere among my many papers here, but Mr. Speaker, what is notable is that this seems to be a very, very effective measure. It is one thing to come to court and get berated by the judge and threatened with various things if you do not pay; it is another entirely to be prosecuted as a criminal for not supporting your child. The document which I have seen has indicated that this is proving to be a very effective means of coercing fathers into paying child support.

The other point that the document noted was that in the view of that jurisdiction the failure to pay child support is as serious an offence as domestic violence, because in many instances its effect is as grave, the fact that you do not give your children the financial means to be able to live a decent life and to share in the opportunities of their friends and colleagues can have serious and damaging effect on that child on that person for life and the opportunities which they are able to avail themselves of, not just when they are children but as they grow up. So, it is treated as a very, very serious matter.

So, Mr. Speaker, for all those reasons I am asking the Government who I notice have almost completely disappeared, to give careful consideration and thought to what this Motion seeks to achieve and to offer it their support. I will sit down now, Mr. Speaker, and listen to what is said and hopefully this Motion will fare a bit better than the one which preceded it. I thank you, Sir.

The Speaker: Does any other Member wish to speak? The Honourable Leader of Government Business.

Hon. W. McKeever Bush: Mr. Speaker, I cannot help but think of the Member's last remark that the Government disappeared. He knew that we were all here, in fact I had to leave the chamber for a minute and I asked him how long he was going to be and they said I could go outside. (Laughter)

Mr. Speaker, firstly I want to say that the Minister is not here because he could not be here, he had to be at an important meeting at Cayman Against Substance Abuse (CASA) and he asked me to reply for him, because we are supporting the Motion. I wish Mr. Speaker that the Member had thrown out the other motion and dealt with this one, because this one is so productive; the other one was pure politics, I cannot help anybody.

Government is very much aware of the need to reform legislation to safeguard the rights of dependent persons. The throne speech delivered just last month which begins the year, spoke to the Government proposals to develop appropriate legislation, that is the Adoption Law and the review of the Maintenance Law and develop regulations for the Children's Law 2003. This is the throne speech, Mr. Speaker just delivered. So, Mr. Speaker, I cannot really beat up on the Minister in question and second guess what he is trying to do, because to be fair to the Minister and the departments and the Ministry as a whole, they have dealt with a tremendous amount of issues that relates to children, families, and in particular, to women and many more than probably what the Opposition would agree, but nevertheless, Mr. Speaker, they have done it and the truth has to be told.

Mr. Speaker, far, far, far too many men bring children into this world and then forget that the child has to live, has to be fed, has to be housed properly, has to be schooled properly, and they fail to give them love, care and attention, what a little child needs. My position to date has always been and I have never been afraid to speak it, Mr. Speaker, because I am an outside child and I have said that dozens of time here, when I was the Minister; when I was a backbencher, so I know, Mr. Speaker. My position is and I am not scared to speak it, whether it is election year or not or close to an election or not, the facts are the facts. The laws need to be improved to ensure that all those things happen which I have just pointed out. Laws need to be improved to ensure access to children and stop the abuse of the child for the sake of the other parent.

Mr. Speaker, we cannot stop human nature, we know that, but we can make it possible for us to safeguard their little children who did not ask to be brought into this difficult world in which they must exist. Everyday we are confronted with problems that affect single parents; their family has spilt and the husband goes one way and the wife goes one way. We are confronted with all those things, Mr. Speaker, everyday and it seems that our people are not learning enough. In this day and age it is sometimes asked—why did that person have a child? In this day and age of birth control and all the advice they can get, the various programs. Even after the child comes here, after that happens, after conception, after birth, you would think that people are learning and that they just cannot bring children into the world and then expect to dump them on grandparents or somebody else or worse than that, then come to the state and then the state must take care of them and I have had them tell me that—‘I voted for you and you have to take care of my child’. I have had them to tell me that. So, Mr. Speaker, it is as the Member from George Town has articulated about many, many cases, many instances...Sorry?

[Inaudible interjection]

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: Yeah, he is my cousin, I do not know if he will say that publicly, but it is true. [Laughter] Mr. Speaker, I better drink some water...

[Inaudible interjection]

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: Sorry, Mr. Speaker.

We, as representatives now need to move forward with the necessary legislation. As I said, in the throne speech we have said the direction the Government is headed and the laws that we recognise needs to be amended to clarify, to give the court more authority, more power to deal with fathers or parents who . . . because sometimes it has to be not just the father. Mr. Speaker, I have known cases where a man go pay in the money, the woman gets the money and she goes to buy new clothes; she goes to get a loan, then she got to take that money, $600.00 that that man pay in for his children and go to buy a new car by getting a loan to buy the new car; I know all that happens. I have seen it. Then they come to me to help pay the loan or go cuss the man, say he not doing nothing, or go tell the world that the man not doing nothing.

So, Mr. Speaker, we are besieged with these kinds of situations and the one thing that I find most disturbing in my after twenty years and seeing that we live in the kind of modern world that we do, our people are still not learning and not grasping. You can talk about parenting and parenting programs and the churches I know preach from the pulpit and they have programs and sometimes you just feel like throwing up your hands and say why in the world are we here anyhow because it does not seem like we are getting anywhere. The people keep doing the same things over and over, even when you try to counsel them and as I said, all these things that are happening should have taught them, giving them some lesson.

So, Mr. Speaker, we are not only sympathetic to the cause but we are going to do what is necessary. ...Sorry?

[Inaudible interjection]

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: I am not getting into that tonight, but anyhow . . .

There have been motions, as the Member from North side is just reminding me, that in the past to address this and practically every government. . . , and you know what if our people do not learn, Mr. Speaker, every successive government is going to have to be doing what the Member from George Town done, because we can bring all the legislation and we can take the action that is necessary, as he has pointed out, but our people need to learn to accept responsibility, man and woman, that is the first. So, the Government is accepting this Motion. As I said, we did say in the throne speech where we were going and I know that the Minister, giving him his right, Mr. Speaker, is hard at work, maybe not as fast as the Second Elected Member for George Town would wish but he is doing and dealing with all the relevant things that will make for better procedures to deal with those problems that we are facing. Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: Does any other Member wish to speak? The Elected Member for East End.

Hon. Roy Boddin: Oh no!
Boy, try not to be long.

Mr. V. Arden McLean: Thank you, Mr. Speaker.
Mr. Speaker, the Minister for Education says I should try not to be too long, and I will not be long, Mr. Speaker but . . .

[Inaudible interjection]

Mr. V. Arden McLean: I rise merely to lend my support to the Motion before us, Mr. Speaker.

Since I have been in this Honourable House there has been a number of occasions when the same matter came before this House, in particular; support of children in this country and the lack thereof by fathers. Mr. Speaker, someplace, somehow, we have to educate the men in this country that they have half of the responsibility for the birth of a child. Until we understand that, we are not going to get anyplace in this country with the responsibility that is required by men to take care of their children. Yes, Mr. Speaker, I hear the Second Elected Member for George Town and the Leader of Government Business talk about women. Women have a responsibility too and there are a number of those that go out there and take the monies that the good men are providing and do things that is not in the interest of the child. Mr. Speaker, I have been divorced over ten years, and I knock on wood, thank god my two children are by two mothers who take care of them. However, we cannot all say that.

The Leader of Government Business talked about programs that the Minister is putting in place. Mr. Speaker, the only people I see turning up to the programs are the people who are already supporting their children; we need to get people into those programs that are not supporting their children.

Some of these men around here have five, six children by different women all over the place. Mr. Speaker, we really cannot blame the women; they do not even know about the other children, in some instances. They go about their lives driving their nice fancy cars and then they start crying when the writ comes to them to appear in court. Well, they are going to have to go to court. Mr. Speaker, I have a very good friend who right now has changed his residency and his change of residency is right in the middle of Bodden Town, in Northward because of the identical thing that we are talking about, Mr. Speaker, but I cannot go to visit him Sir, because nobody is going to come visit me.

Mr. Speaker, I have seen it, especially in the last four years I have seen women in this country suffer. Maybe, Mr. Speaker, it was there before and I suspect it was there before the last four years, but I have seen more of it; it has become more apparent to me because of my involvement and it is a sorrowful sight, it is a disgraceful sight. You know, Mr. Speaker, the day is long gone where the neighbour would feed those kids; it is long gone, unfortunately. Who has to pay? I heard the Second Elected Member for George Town, the Mover of this Motion speak about the provisions that are in place in Florida. Maybe we need to put some in place here, like selling their properties! Repossessing their cars and selling it off, auctioning it off! Mr. Speaker, even your good self would buy one of those cars—Mercedes Benz, Corvettes. [Laughter]

Mr. Speaker, it is time for radical action to ensure. The same kids that we are talking about are the ones that develop and get into that illegal element in this country. Those adolescents that we have out there who are giving us trouble; check it out, Mr. Speaker. I know where my 12 year old son is at night. I wonder how many fathers who are not supporting their children know where theirs are at. They walk the street. You know why they walk the street? It is because the mothers have to work two, three, four jobs to be able to support those kids in the absence of their father and the father out making more, making more children. Mr. Speaker, we need to stop them. If it means the intervention of the Government, let us do it. Let us pass the Motion and by September, before the Government is not returned, let them do something good for once before they are not returned.

Mr. V. Arden McLean: Mr. Speaker, this is such a serious matter in this country. It even transcends on to the portfolio of the Minister for Education, in that he has the problems in the schools, because the kids do not come, truancy! Mr. Speaker, where do we think that comes from? It is the lack of involvement from the parents. The mothers having to work and there is no father. The kid gets on the bus, goes and gets off the bus before it stops at the school and they are gone. If the fathers see them on the road, they probably do not even know that it is their kid. Mr. Speaker, we cannot and no government is going to be the answer for everything, but we can curtail some of what is happening. This 'Attachment of Earnings'—nah! That is a farce. They jump from job to job to avoid it. There are so many of them that do not work. Out there selling their drugs, dress up like pimps all day. Let us pimp them in Northward prison too. Let us see what kind of pimps they are going to be up there for their lack of maintenance of their children.

Mr. Speaker, sometimes you have to say what you have to say and I have never asked anybody to like me; show me the respect that I show you. That is all that is necessary, and I have a right to say it. We have to do something in our country to save our country. That is the generation that is going to destroy this country if we do not arrest the problems now. It will destroy us! It is destroying us! I have no intention of preaching gloom, but Mr. Speaker, these things are necessary to be said. Somebody's head has to be trimmed a little closer to the wind so they will understand the direction this country is going in, the sails have to be trimmed; too much of it is happening. It is no particular district, this is something that is happening throughout the country, and we see it everyday and we turn a blind eye. Every one of us turns a blind eye because we are afraid to approach it. In many instances! My same friend who has changed his address, I have sat him down and talked to him numberless times about it! Mr. Speaker, hands off now, there comes a time when I may have to support some of those children, sure! Not him! Mr. Speaker, I applaud the Second Elected Member for George Town for bringing the Motion.

You can walk over to the Courts Offices and they are listed there for maintenance, and then they go inside and they plead to the Magistrates about the hardships that they are going through and the reasons why they cannot pay to support their children, and as they get outside they jump in the Mercedes Benz and drive off.

An Hon. Member's comment: The Baliff should be out there to put locks on the wheels.

Hon. V. Arden McLean: We need to arrest the cars and auction them off, and their nice cell phones on the side that they call their friends from and tell them how they outwit the magistrate and the system. Mr. Speaker, it is not fair. Do they think they have won?

They have not won! In their evening of life, those same children that they have neglected will have destroyed this country so bad that they cannot live as older folks, senior citizens in the country that they abused because that is what it is heading for, but they cannot see any further than the top of their noses. One day, one day, Mr. Speaker, just as sure as time passes by and they are alive they are going to get old. I wonder who they are going to depend upon then. I am sure it is not going to be the child who has been successful that they neglected. I hope not! I have hopes that this Government, or when we take over in November, we will put the necessary provisions in place. Draconian they may be, but it is time for draconian measures with these situations, Mr. Speaker. It is time that we put the provisions in place to stop these people and it is time that we stopped calling children illegitimate also. I prefer to say that they were born out of wedlock. The fact is that it is a human being.

I just do not understand how most of these men who neglect their children do not have or cannot embrace that feeling of having created a human being. That is a serious responsibility to have created a human being. The only being I know who has ever done that prior to man, was God! You have created a human being, a live human being that you are responsible to ensure you guide them in a manner in which they will contribute to society, and they will continue that reproductive cycle and pass on principles and responsibilities that was passed on to you.

We have a different generation coming up here now. Maybe I came from the old school where you were required to take up your responsibilities seriously. I do not know how we are going to get back to that point, Mr. Speaker. Having said all that I have said, all is not lost. We as representatives, as politicians can legislate laws that will stop them in their tracks which will ensure that the children in this country are giving their rightful due. Mr. Speaker, it is no longer about tying the hands of the judges. This is a perfect example that we must tie the hands of the judges to ensure that they have to put it on them! They have to administer the Law to ensure these rogues who will not support their children, will be required to do so.

Mr. Speaker, I could go on for the rest of the evening but I notice all the Ministers are looking at me a little cockeyed so I shall take my seat and thank the Government for at least once recognising the validity of this side, and the legitimacy of this side, as the Opposition, and recognising that we too are very capable of bringing motions like their back benchers motions; motions that are worthy, but of course it is up to the Government to accept them, and that is not to say that the Motion that the Second Elected Member for George Town and I brought was not valid, just because they turned it down, that is their opinion that it was not. Mr. Speaker, I thank you, Sir.

The Speaker: Does any other Member wish to speak? The Elected Member for North Side.

Ms. Edna M. Moyle: Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

Mr. Speaker, I did not intend to join in the debate on this Motion but as I sat here and read the Motion over once again I felt that I had to make a contribution. This Motion deals with the most important section of society and one of the greatest assets of any country when it deals with children. Mr. Speaker, I am glad that the Government has accepted this Motion, and since I have been in this Parliament I have been trying to have the word 'illegitimate' removed from all legislation in the Cayman Islands. I do not know of any other Member within this Parliament who, when they look through a window and see 10 or 20 children playing, do they see legitimate children, do they see illegitimate children, or do they just plainly see children? That is all that I see. So, Mr. Speaker, I am very happy and, I look forward to when that legislation is brought to this Parliament to have that word removed from all legislation.

I agree that we must improve the enforcement of maintenance and affiliation orders and I will go one step further. We hear of the deadbeat fathers of the day, and I agree with the Members who have said we have some deadbeat mothers also. However, Mr. Speaker, is this a stigma that has been passed on through a cycle to these men and women where they have seen within their own families the absence of their fathers and have they now passed this on to their children. So, Mr. Speaker, as I have argued for years, in domestic violence there is a cycle that must be broken and I believe, and maybe I am wrong and maybe I will stand alone, that there is a cycle and it must be broken and we must, Mr. Speaker, I believe, educate our young men and women as to the responsibility of having a child.

Mr. Speaker, this education process must start within our schools. Mr. Speaker, a comment or a referral that really grieves me as a mother is when I hear a young girl refer to 'my baby father'. You know Mr. Speaker, we must put within our school system sex education where we teach not only our young girls the responsibility of having a child before they have become women themselves. We have a situation in this country where children are having children and I know, and I must give credit where credit is due, I think it is the George Hicks High School that has a program for young girls within that school, teaching them how to care for a baby.

I had the opportunity of being at a family's home just before Christmas when they lost a loved one. Three young ladies arrived with these, I actually thought that they were actual babies, and I looked and I said to myself, 'but these young girls cannot be any more than twelve, thirteen maximum'. I then heard the baby cry. I actually went over to the young girl to try and help her sooth this child, because I thought it was actually a baby but apparently it is a program with a doll that these girls take with them if they go out, which teaches them the responsibility of caring for a child. It cries when it needs a bottle, it cries when it needs to go to sleep. Mr. Speaker, here again we stereotype; it is only the girls that walk with these babies and in my humble opinion we must also teach our young boys the responsibility of having a child, not only our young girls. So, Mr. Speaker, this Motion, with the legislation, it is going to have to be combined with our education system whereby we can deal with these problems and break the cycle. Until we do that we will constantly be facing the same issues.

Mr. Speaker, on the third point in the Honourable Members Motion, 'Access to Children by Putative Fathers'—I believe any man who maintains his child must be given access to that child. We cannot use children against the mother or father, these are children. Mr. Speaker, if a father is responsible enough to maintain his child, certainly, and I am a woman, Mr. Speaker, but I speak the truth, the woman must allow the father access to that child. We constantly preach that the family unit is the most important thing, and we constantly hear that the fathers will not do this and they will do that, but Mr. Speaker, when they do, we as women tend to not want for them to have the proper access to their children. This is wrong and as a woman I say, wrong, wrong, wrong. If we as women want maintenance for these children, certainly the fathers want access to those children and they must be given access to their children.

So, Mr. Speaker, with those few short words I support the Motion 100 per cent and I hope that it is not just being accepted and no action will be taken because it is a very, very important Motion.

The Speaker: Does any other Member wish to speak? Does any other Member wish to speak? Last call, does any other Member wish to speak? If not, would the Honourable Mover of the Motion wish to exercise his right of reply?

Mr. Alden M McLaughlin, Jr: Mr. Speaker, non support of children is a crime which causes poverty. It is a crime that is at the root of many of the social problems that exist in any society. We can have as many programs as we want; we can have as many youth programs and sports programs, football leagues and basketball leagues and youth flex and all of those wonderful things that the Minister of Community Services boasts his Ministry has done, but unless we create a system whereby children have access to the financial support that is necessary to get them through daily life, all the rest of it is in vain.

I thank the Government, Mr. Speaker, for having acknowledged the importance of the Motion and I thank the Leader of Government Business for what he has said in relation to this. However, Mr. Speaker, it is going to take more than simply accepting this Motion and passing legislation, because this Government is wont to pass legislation and create the appearance that things are being done, but the Children's Law stands in mute testimony as an example of passing major, important legislation without having the necessary support institutions in place to be able to give the law effect. Hence, almost a year after that Law has been passed the Law still sits in abeyance, waiting, Mr. Speaker, on I know not what.

So, Mr. Speaker, I am hoping that the Government by agreeing to this is also agreeing that it needs to get on the ball, review the legislation, and decide what measures are going to be implemented to make the current system better and more effective. Put it into legislation, make sure we have the support mechanisms in place and give effect to the Law, not just bring it down here, pass it and hold it up as another example of a wonderful achievement of the Ministry of Community Services, which is the way things, in my view, are generally done.

Mr. Speaker, there is nothing that moves me personally more than children. I have two of my own and it makes me so angry when I understand as I do, more so as an Member of the Legislative Assembly than I did in my other life, how many children in this country do not have the financial support of their parents to enable them to be able to just enjoy what is supposed to be the most precious period of their life, being a child. Mr. Speaker, whatever we have to do as a legislature, as a people, as a community, as a country to make sure that we reduce the instances of financial deprivation of children in this country, we are going to have to do.

Mr. Speaker, other Members have alluded to the need for other support, emotional support of parents in the raising of children; that is critical. I firmly believe that a large part of the problems that this society experiences is because children are deprived of the kind of emotional support of their fathers, in particular. I know that with my two sons I cannot conceive of them growing up without my presence. Therefore when I know of the number of instances in which children never see their father or see him so rarely that he is some sort of stranger, Mr. Speaker it tears my heart apart and we have got to find a way; it is not a perfect world and we cannot pass legislation which is going to make fathers give children the sort of emotional support that they need and I am not suggesting that we can pass legislation which will do that but we have got to find a way, Mr. Speaker, to encourage more of that. We cannot get blood from a stone and I am not trying to pretend that we in these hallowed halls can make that sort of thing happen, but we have got to find a way.

I am not sure what programs there are or whether we need to specifically address these issues in schools and perhaps that is the road we need to go done, but I have not really done the necessary research on that issue. We have to find a way to pick up on the point from the Elected Member for North Side, to make parental responsibility a critical component of the education and I am not talking necessarily about just in the schools, the education of children and young people in this country. As the Elected Member for East End has said, if we do not find a way to give them what they ought to get as children, as young citizens of this earth, they are going to grow up having been deprived of these things which are so necessary to their overall development. They are going to grow up with voids in their being which are going to contribute to them becoming more antisocial.

Some of us, Mr. Speaker, some people, some children overcome these things and become wonderful citizens and great achievers, overachievers in many instances but I am certain that if we did a survey we would find out that that is the exception rather than the rule, and that children who grow up deprived of financial and emotional support are more likely to fall victim to a whole lot of problems and issues down the road, and to create further strains on the social system; further strains on the community; create all sorts of problems for themselves and their families and society at large.

So, Mr. Speaker, while I am not for one moment easting the Government up about the need for them to do what has to be done to give effect to all of these wonderful words that have been said on both sides of this Honourable House this evening. I do hope that this debate will serve a broader purpose as well, and that it will enlighten the community; that it will make the community at large feel that the legislature is aware of these issues, is concerned about these issues and really, it will help to shape and to mold some of the societal views and perceptions and perhaps, Mr. Speaker, even mores.

So, Mr. Speaker, it has been a long day and this has been, I believe, a very intense and hopefully very profitable debate. I thank all Honourable Members for their support and those who did not speak for their tacit support of this. Mr. Speaker, I commend this Motion to this Honourable House. I thank you Sir.

The Speaker: The question is: 'BE IT HEREBY RESOLVED that the legislation in the Cayman Islands dealing with the financial and other support of and access to children be reviewed and where necessary, amended to provide for:

(a) Non-discrimination between the rights and/or entitlement of illegitimate and legitimate children;

(b) Improved enforcement of maintenance and affiliation orders; and

(c) Access to children by putative fathers.'

All those in favour, please say Aye. Those against, No.

Ayes.

The Speaker: The Ayes have it.

Agreed. Private Member's Motion No. 5/04 passed.

ADJOURNMENT

The Speaker: Honourable Members, I have been informed by the Honourable Leader of Government Business that the Elected Member for East End will want to say a few words on adjournment and the Honourable Leader of Government Business will make a few comments on the remarks made. I now call on the Honourable Leader of Government Business for the adjournment.

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: Mr. Speaker I move the adjournment of this Honourable House to a date to be fixed.

Mr. Speaker, before I sit down, just to say that this has been a long meeting and I would like to thank the staff who have been here late at night with us and yourself, Mr. Speaker, and indeed the media and all the officers and staff of the legislature.

The Speaker: Thank you most kindly for those remarks.

The Elected Member for East End.

PERSONAL STATEMENT

Development of a Hotel in the District of East End

Mr. V. Arden McLean: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. First of all let me thank you for giving me the opportunity to make a short statement on what I think is a relevant subject relating to East End.

Mr. Speaker, as a result of recent media reports surrounding the proposal to build an upscale hotel in the Little Bluff area on the North East coast, I find it necessary to make this statement in order to help dispel some of the controversy which has developed as a result. Mr. Speaker, the location of this proposed hotel is situated in the electoral district of East End. Accordingly, I consider it incumbent upon me as a duly elected representative for East End, to inform this country of my position on this said development. Mr. Speaker, since the media reports containing the mentioned controversy, I have, to the best of my ability, tried to get the feelings of a cross section of the residents of my constituency. As a result I am convinced that there is sufficient support for such a development amongst the residents and by extension that gives me sufficient reason to confirm my support in principle for a tourist related development in the East End electoral district. I say in principle because I am at this stage unfamiliar with the intricacies of the proposed development.

It is important that it be known that my position has been reached not because of any brief that I hold for any individual or individuals, but rather, from my responsibility as a representative, and I stress, 'representative'. My commitment is to ensure that the constituents benefit from any development in that constituency. There are many benefits to be derived from the introduction of such an upscale development; employment, infrastructural upgrade and business opportunities to name a few. As I understand it, the calibre of clientele that this particular development attracts is much needed in this country to boost our stay over tourists and the economy on a whole.

In closing may I point out that during my efforts to ascertain the feelings of the people, which I mentioned earlier, many indicated that they prefer developments of this nature than, that is, tourists related, over that of a cargo dock in the constituency. I look forward to an overall inspection of the overall proposal in order that, if necessary I will be able to submit input on behalf of the people of East End. I trust that the forgoing adequately sets out my position and also satisfies all those who have questioned my silence thus far. Mr. Speaker, further, I have no intentions of getting into any sabre rattling with anyone particularly those who think they have the authority to decide what development will take place in East End. I thank you, Sir.

The Speaker: The Honourable Leader of Government Business in reply.

Hon. W. McKeever Bush: Mr. Speaker, the proposal to which the Member speaks is that of the Mandarin Hotel Development in East End, and as I understand it, it is not in North Side but in East End. The Mandarin Hotel is an upscale property, five star, and from what I see this could be counted as six star according to the American registration.

The developers are people who are knowledgeable in good high end development and there are Caymanians involved who are reputable people. There is no question in my mind as to whether they should be allowed to develop this hotel. I have said it is our policy to support sustainable development. I have also said that the country, while even the management policy did speak about no more hotels, we see that there could be a Four Season on the West side and there is still room for a good hotel development in the Eastern districts, and I think there is one that could be done in the Bodden Town area. There have been other proposals and this one has our full backing. I am glad to hear the East End Member say he supports it and that he is not going to get into the sabre rattling either.

The question of the cargo dock I have already elaborated upon, and we believe that it is important for the country. We are studying the ramifications and looking at the necessary and attendant infrastructure to be put in for that dock, and when the time comes I will come forthrightly, as I usually do, to the people of these Islands including the people of the good district of East End to state the position.

I think I said that the development has our full backing and the Government is going to do all that is in our power to see that the development of the Mandarin Hotel go ahead. We believe that a country that stands still will wither away and die. We cannot do as has been done in the past where good developments were thrown out the door or were given such a hard time that they went elsewhere and then we have seen the need of such development today. While they would have to import people, the fact is that Caymanians will benefit also. We are a small country and the day that we try to stop development that I hear being pushed around, then your standard of living will go down because that is what keeps the standard of living the way it is. Let us not forget that when we are debating measures or talking about general development at any point. The day that you stop development, Mr. Speaker, your standard of living will go down because that is what keeps it at the level it is.

I say one more thing to the Member for East End and to this House, the question about who you are developing for is for the present and future people of these Islands and the needs and welfare of this country can only be met if we have money in government and money in the government comes in a great part from development. All we need to do is make sure that the regulations are in place and that they are paying attention to the rules and regulations that exist and what they need to do to safeguard aspects of the environment and so on.

So, I am glad that the Member for East End raised it. We are in full support of the development. Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: The question is that this Honourable House do now adjourn until a date to be fixed. All those in favour, please say Aye. Those against, No.

Ayes.

The Speaker: The Ayes have it.

At 9.43 pm the House stood adjourned until a date to be fixed.

OFFICIAL HANSARD REPORT
MONDAY
20 SEPTEMBER 2004
3.15 PM
First Sitting

The Speaker: I will invite the Honourable Second Elected Member for West Bay to lead us in prayers.

PRAYERS

Mr. Rolston M. Anglin: Let us pray. Almighty God, from whom all wisdom and power are derived: We beseech Thee so to direct and prosper the deliberations of the Legislative Assembly now assembled, that all things may be ordered upon the best and surest foundations for the glory of Thy Name and for the safety, honour and welfare of the people of these Islands.

Bless our Sovereign Lady, Queen Elizabeth II; Philip, Duke of Edinburgh; Charles, Prince of Wales; and all the Royal Family. Give grace to all who exercise authority in our Commonwealth, that peace and happiness, truth and justice, religion and piety may be established among us. Especially we pray for the Governor of our Islands, the Speaker of the Legislative Assembly, Official Members and Ministers of Cabinet and Members of the Legislative Assembly, that we may be enabled faithfully to perform the responsible duties of our high office. All this we ask for Thy great Name's sake.

Father we ask thee also in these most trying and challenging times to bless us and keep us as a country. Lord, we thank thee for the blessings that you have bestowed upon us that during the passage of this devastating storm that we did not see the massive loss of life that we would have thought when we look around at the devastation around us. Lord you are our Sovereign Creator and it is only through your guidance and love that such a miracle could have taken place.

Lord, we thank you for your many blessings that you continue to bestow upon the people of the Cayman Islands. We honour you and we lift up our hearts to You for your mercy upon us.

We ask thee Father to bless our people. Give us strength wisdom, patience and endurance. Let us continue to lift our hearts to you and seek thy grace as we continue to build and repair our Island. We thank thee for sparing our Sister Islands, Cayman Brac and Little Cayman. We see how great a refuge they have become for many of the residents of Grand Cayman. We ask thee, Lord, to give us strength.

Let us say The Lord's Prayer together: Our Father, who art in Heaven, Hallowed be Thy Name. Thy Kingdom come, Thy will be done on earth as it is Heaven. Give us this day our daily bread, and forgive us our trespasses, as we forgive those who trespass against us. Lead us not into temptation, but deliver us from evil. For thine is the Kingdom, the power and the glory, forever and ever. Amen.

The Lord bless us and keep us. The Lord make His face shine upon us and be gracious unto us. The Lord lift up the light of His countenance upon us and give us peace, unity and strength now and always. Amen.

Proceedings resumed at 3.21 pm

The Speaker: Please be seated. Proceedings are resumed.

READING BY THE HONOURABLE
SPEAKER OF MESSAGES
AND ANNOUNCEMENTS

Message – Hurricane Ivan Strategic Recovery Process

The Speaker: Honourable Members, it is certainly good to see each one of you here today and I trust that you and your families are doing well. Also to our hardworking staff and the people of Grand Cayman, in particular, we are grateful to God that there was no major loss of lives.

Though we as a people have suffered tremendous loss of property, the feedback that I am getting is that we are determined to pull through this problem together. I am convinced that with the help of God we will be up and running before too long.

May I extend the sincere thanks of this Honourable House to all the service agencies for getting us up and running. In particular, I wish to give thanks to the Public Works Department for all that they have done in this regard and of course the National Hurricane Committee. Also to Caribbean Utilities Company (CUC) Ltd. for having us hooked up with lights and air-conditioning in this Honourable House.

My sincere thanks, also, to all Honourable Members for their understanding and cooperation at this historic meeting. Historic it is, in that it is perhaps the first time in our parliamentary history that the dress code has been altered due to conditions brought upon us by a hurricane—Hurricane Ivan. The Honourable gentlemen of this House were requested to divest themselves of their jackets and ties and they have complied. In my opinion, this is appropriate in the circumstances as it would seem out of place for Honourable Members to be parading around town dressed in suits and ties at this time while the country suffers under these dire circumstances. More importantly, when I issued the directive I was not sure that we would have had lighting and air-conditioning restored to the Legislative Assembly at this time. So, please let no one for a minute feel that we have lowered the standard or dignity of this Honourable House. Until some degree of normalcy has been restored we will continue on an informal basis and later on revert to a more normal dress code.

Honourable Members, let us continue to help others wherever possible. I must say that I am very pleased to see both the Government and the Opposition working together to restore our physical and economic infrastructure as soon as possible.

I am aware that the Honourable Leader of Government Business has a statement to make which will no doubt address some details of some of the strategic issues that Government has been discussing. I will not say more on this at this point.

In closing, Honourable Members let us continue to look to God for guidance as we are a resilient people and with the help of God we will be up and running in Grand Cayman before too long and in the not too distant future. I thank you, Honourable Members.

Apologies

The Speaker: Also I have received an apology from the Honourable Third Official Member who had to be out of the Chamber at this time looking about official business.

PRESENTATION OF PAPERS AND OF REPORTS

The Speaker: I would like to mention to Honourable Members that there is an amendment to the Order Paper in that Item 5 will not be taken after Item 4 (that is Statements by Members of the Cabinet), and we will move straight to Item 6 which is the adjournment. It is proposed on the adjournment to adjourn until 10 am Wednesday, 22 September; this will allow all Honourable Members to have the opportunity to address the nation on the state of the various constituencies in particular. There might be other items that the Business Committee comes up with but this will give them that opportunity.

If we move along in an expeditious manner we should be out of here in a short while as when we leave here we have another meeting to attend.

Madam Clerk, please move to Item 3.

The Emergency Powers Regulations 2004

The Speaker: The Honourable Second Official Member responsible for Legal Administration.

Hon. Samuel W. Bulgin: Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

Before I begin, let me with your permission use a few seconds to reflect on the enormity of the disaster that has afflicted these beloved Isles. Let me also, Sir, reflect on the strength, resolve, the grit, spirit, tenacity and endurance of our people to climb back from what has happened. I am confident that we will overcome. As legislators we share the pain of all residents we also share their resolve and determination to fight on with God's help.

I would like to use this opportunity to commend all Honourable Members of this House for the leadership that has been displayed during this difficult period. I would also like to pay homage to the hundreds of volunteers; to His Excellency the Governor; and all those who comprise the National Hurricane Committee for their tireless and unselfish effort in trying to move things along. It would be remiss of me not to recognise the outpouring of love and support from those abroad who have provided us with vital supplies to keep us going during these difficult times.

The House is convening today for a special reason. The Emergency Powers Law requires that when a proclamation of emergency has been made by the Governor, the occasion shall forthwith be communicated to the Legislative Assembly.

Today, in all of the circumstances, it is the first opportunity for this Honourable House to convene to be so notified. I therefore invite this Honourable House to formally take note and with your leave, Mr. Speaker, I wish to lay on the Table of this Honourable House a Proclamation dated 11 September 2004 signed by His Excellency the Governor declaring a state of emergency.

The Speaker: So ordered.

Hon. Samuel W. Bulgin: I also, with your leave, wish to present the Emergency Regulations 2004—

[Pause]

The Speaker: The Honourable Second Official Member continuing.

Proclamation No. 5/2004

Hon. Samuel W. Bulgin: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I was about to, with your leave Sir, table the Emergency Regulations 2004 promulgated by His Excellency the Governor on 11 September 2004 pursuant to the Emergency Powers Law (1997 Revision).

The Speaker: So ordered.

Would the Honourable Member wish to speak thereto?

Hon. Samuel W. Bulgin: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. As I mentioned in my opening remarks, the Emergency Powers Law requires that when a proclamation of emergency has been made by His Excellency the Governor, the occasion shall be forthwith communicated to the Legislative Assembly. Today, in all of the circumstances, is the first opportunity for this Honourable House to convene to be so notified.

I therefore invite this Honourable House to formally take note of the fact that on 11 September 2004 with Hurricane Ivan bearing down on the Cayman Islands, His Excellency the Governor, having been so advised, was indeed satisfied that a state of emergency existed and consequently by way of the Proclamation dated 11 September, he declared a state of public emergency.

The preconditions for the declaration of a state of emergency are to be found in section 3(1) of the Emergency Powers Law (1997 Revision). Section 3(1) says; “If, at any time, it appears to the Governor that a public emergency has arisen as a result of the occurrence of any earthquake, hurricane, flood, fire, outbreak of pestilence, outbreak of infectious disease or other calamity, whether similar to the foregoing or not, or that any action has been taken or is immediately threatened by any person or body of persons of such as nature and on so extensive a scale as to be likely to endanger the public safety or to deprive the community or any substantial portion of the community of supplies or services essential to life, the Governor may, by Proclamation, (hereinafter referred to as a proclamation of emergency) declare that a state of emergency exists.”

The Law goes on to provide, in section 3(3) that; “No proclamation of emergency shall be in force for more than one month, without prejudice to the issue of another proclamation at or before the end of that period.

“(4) Where a proclamation of emergency has been made, the occasion thereof shall forthwith be communicated to the Legislative Assembly . . .” there are other matters in that section which is not of immediate relevance to this occasion.

Mr. Speaker, concomitant with the declaration of the state of emergency and pursuant to section 4 of the Emergency Powers Law, His Excellency the Governor promulgated what is known as the Emergency Regulations 2004. The reason for having such regulations are also provided for in the Law itself and it says in section 4 (1) “Where a proclamation of emergency has been made and so long as the proclamation is in force, the Governor may make regulations for securing the essentials of life to the community, and those regulations may confer or impose on any Government department, or any person in Her Majesty’s service or acting on Her Majesty’s behalf, such powers and duties as the Governor may deem necessary for the preservation of the peace, for securing the public safety, the defence of the Islands, the maintenance of public order, the suppression of mutiny, rebellion or riot, for securing and regulating the supply and distribution of food, water, fuel, light and other necessities, for maintaining the needs of transit or locomotion and for any other purposes essen- tial to the public safety and the life of the community, and may make such provisions incidental to the powers aforesaid, as may appear to the Governor to be required, for making the exercise of those powers effective.”

The Regulations, Sir, have just been tabled with your leave.

A necessary adjunct to this particular section on the regulation-making provision, Mr. Speaker, is section 4(3) which is probably one of the reasons why we are here. It says; “All regulations made under this Part shall be laid as soon as may be after the making thereof before the Legislative Assembly and shall not continue in force after the expiration of seven days from the date when they are so laid before the Legislative Assembly, unless a resolution is passed by the Legislative Assembly providing for the continuance thereof, and in default of such resolution for the continuance of such regulations, the proclamation shall cease to have force and effect.”

Mr. Speaker, the regulations that have been made provide for a number of things. For example, Regulation 3(1) provides for the appointment of requisition officers for all purposes essential to the public safety and the life of the community.

I shall not in any way attempt to go through the various Regulations, Sir, except I would say that Regulation 3(2) sets out who those requisition officers are and they are listed there and include members of the National Hurricane Committee, all Constables, members of Special Constabulary and all members of the Fire Brigade among others.

Regulation 4 stipulates that the Governor may impose a curfew to maintain public order and this Honourable House is aware of the existence of a curfew that is currently in place, I think the hours are from 8 pm to 5 am.

Regulation 8 deals with the issue of transportation, a matter of vital importance under the prevailing circumstances.

Regulation 11 deals with the issue of enforcement by creation of certain offences if the Regulations are transgressed. You will see the marginal notes that deal with the powers of arrest without a warrant, breach of curfew, obstruction and interference with officers and attempt to commit offences and assisting others to commit these offences. All of these are necessary powers in order to enforce the Regulations promulgated as a result of this occasion.

I just mentioned that Regulation 4(3) provides that once the Regulations are laid they shall not continue in force after the expiration of seven days from the date when they are so laid. So they can only continue in force, if this House so agrees, until the 27 September 2004 unless there is a resolution for the continuance.

The effect of that is that if there is no resolution for the continuance beyond the seven days then the proclamation shall cease to have force and effect, this is what the Law says.

The Law provides in section 4(3) that on default of such resolution they shall cease to have force and effect. It is a matter for this Honourable House whether Members wish for them to continue in force beyond the seven-day period. So, Mr. Speaker, one of the things that this Honourable House is being called upon to decide is whether by resolution or motion there will be an extension.

Might I also sensitise Members that under section 3(3) of the Law, which deals with the life of the Proclamation, that the Proclamation itself is in force for a month unless the Governor on or before the expiration of the current Proclamation, issue another proclamation or as is also stipulated in law, whether His Excellency the Governor revokes the proclamation earlier.

Mr. Speaker, another thing I wish to mention in dealing with this is Regulation 6. Regulation 6 gives this Honourable House, through its Members, the power to add, alter or revoke by resolution this regulation. So this gives Honourable Members to revisit, if they so desire, any provision in the existing regulation. It might very well be that Members think there are aspects of it that are no longer relevant or needs to be continued. It is entirely a matter for this Honourable House how to deal with these things.

Those are some of the details that I would like to bring to the attention of this House in the presentation of the Proclamation and the accompanying Regulations that were issued on 11 September 2004.

I thank you.

STATEMENTS BY MEMBERS OF THE GOVERNMENT

Hurricane Ivan

The Speaker: I call on the Honourable Leader of Government Business.

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

Unfortunately, the Cayman Islands have experienced the sixth worst hurricane on record. As a result of this catastrophic storm, our people have suffered severe damage to their property, extended disruption to basic living and intense emotional stress. Tragically there has been even loss of life.

I wish, on behalf of Government, to thank the many volunteers from all walks of life, who, despite great suffering and inconvenience to themselves, have worked around the clock to provide assistance, security and needed relief. At the forefront of this effort are the civil servants who work in essential services. All branches of the Police; Fire Department; Medical personnel across the three Islands; Immigration; numerous other Government agencies; the incredible management and staff of our national airline, Cayman Airways; friends; family and business partners overseas.

Without this enormous effort which even included friends and business associates who flew in jets and private planes at their own expense, we could not have been in our present state of recovery which, when we realised where we were on Sunday 12 September, and where we are today, is in itself remarkable given the short span of time since Ivan's departure.

However, as remarkable as the progress to date has been, as a result of the superhuman effort locally, it continues to be my steadfast belief that despite the assistance we have received, we need much more assistance for disaster relief and recovery.

The people of these Islands—including all of us in this House—have suffered tremendous losses. Unfortunately, the United Kingdom has only seen fit to offer us very limited assistance at this time of great need. I should say that I have received a letter from Minister Bill Rammell, and I indeed spoke to him today. He did enquire as to our situation and said that his prayers are with us and that he will tell his colleagues in the United Kingdom of our situation.

It is important to remember that prior to the arrival of Hurricane Ivan that His Excellency the Governor invoked his emergency powers and under the provisions of the relevant Emergency Powers Law the Elected Representatives of the people, regardless of party affiliation, have not been in a position to make decisions on behalf of our people. Had the Government's powers not been removed, as Leader of Government Business, I would have immediately and formally requested the necessary assistance from the United States Government with whom we enjoy an excellent relationship. Regrettably, I believe that the Government's and the Opposition's advice to do so has not been implemented.

There is no truth to any rumour that the Government of this country turned away any aid. Thank God that we have friends in the region and further afield from St. Kitts, Belize, Honduras, Jamaica, and our brother and sister overseas territories British Virgin Islands, Turks & Caicos and Bermuda but there have also been companies and other agencies in the United States.

As the Leader of Government Business, months before Hurricane Ivan, I put a recommendation to Cabinet that an internationally recognised company with comprehensive experience and expertise in the area of disaster preparedness and recovery be retained to develop a comprehensive plan for the Cayman Islands. Marsh and McLennan, one such company prepared a comprehensive plan for the Cayman Islands to equip us to better deal with the current type of event which we have experienced and is still experiencing. An outline of the proposal was presented to Cabinet, the Governor and whoever advised him made the decision made the decision not to proceed with the development of a full disaster recovery ery plan. It is my opinion, that had this been done that our country would have been in a much better state of preparedness to deal with the aftermath of Hurricane Ivan.

Mr. Speaker, we should all realise that not only have our people's lives been severely disrupted but the twin engines of our economy—which provide jobs and critical revenue sources for the Government to provide infrastructure, health and educational services, facilities and social relief programmes—have been jeopardised, and the ability of our people to enjoy a normal life has been stalled. I say stalled because we will rise again, we must all work together to repair the situation and to seek whatever governmental and professional assistance is necessary to ensure this restoration of basis standards of normal living happens in an expeditious manner.

I speak personally as the Leader of Government Business and a Caymanian. I can no longer stand by patiently and watch as our people continue to suffer. I believe all Members in this Honourable House feel this way. The United Kingdom, for reasons best known to themselves, has only been able to offer us very limited assistance and your Elected Representatives have been stripped of their powers to request assistance from others to an extent unless His Excellency the Governor orders so. That was done when I signed the letter to Bermuda a few days ago.

However, a disaster of this magnitude requires expertise from all aspects in order to alleviate extensive suffering. For the above reasons it has been recommended that it would not be prudent nor in the best interest of the people to extend the full powers of the Governor. It has been decided that on Wednesday at 10 am we will come back here to move a motion to give such effect, if by then His Excellency the Governor has not exercised his authority under section 2 of the Emergency Powers Law and revoked the proclamation giving effect for a state of emergency.

Mr. Speaker, in talking to His Excellency the Governor I do not think it will be a hard job to convince him of that. People feel that we must now get back to a system where the elected representatives of the people are able to make decisions which are in the best interest of all our people. In order to do that we will develop an all-encompassing strategy that addresses all aspects of the recovery plan.

The strategy would include economic recovery plans for the tourism, financial industries as well as a comprehensive plan to deal with the very important environmental damage and public health that has been created by the Hurricane.

More importantly, we must develop a plan to assist the less fortunate and poorer individuals so that they too can recover and start to have a more normal life. These things we must and will do. We have again given His Excellency the Governor a strategic recovery plan which will deal with clean up and disposal, water, food and essential services, building supplies, infrastructure facilities (roads, CUC, telecommunications) and an economic recovery strategy.

This afternoon at 5.30 pm (I can say to this Honourable House) the private sector stakeholders in the tourism industry will meet. We are determined to rise and restart the engines of economic growth and bring back our tourism industry. Our Government will immediately put into place the necessary requests for assistance and the necessary measures to assist our people to return to a normal way of life. We believe that consideration for assistance and duty relief for persons and businesses who have lost their houses and equipment, sustained property damage and lost the core systems necessary to carry their operations, will be given.

It is good to know that a report from the Public Health Department says that there is no disease in the country post Hurricane Ivan.

Mr. Speaker, it is for us now to move this country forward, to do that we have to work together in unity. Government and Opposition alike in partnership with our people as I have seen so many Caymanians and other residents assisting each other unified, and being their brothers keeper. This is truly a time for us to be strong together in this House.

Mr. Speaker, perhaps we are distressed but not defeated; we may be in crisis, but not conquered and so help us God we will rebuild to take care of our people.

I thought about what I would say when we met here after this disaster. I do not profess to be a born again Christian, but I remembered what one of our Sovereigns said in a New Year's message, and I quote, "I said to the man who stood at the gate of the year, 'Give me a light that I may tread safely into the unknown,' and he replied, 'Go out into the darkness and put your hand into the hand of God: that shall be to you better than light and safer than a known way.'"

I can say no more at this time but that we will trust Almighty God and rebuild, and rebuild.

The Speaker: Thank you, Honourable Leader of Government Business.

I would invite the Honourable Leader of the Opposition to make a few comments also.

Hon. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

I am very grateful to you for allowing me to say a few words on the adjournment on behalf of the Opposition, albeit you did say that we would be able to return on Wednesday and everyone would have an opportunity to speak to the Nation and express our individual feelings.

On behalf of the Opposition I wish to record our gratitude to Almighty God for sparing our lives during the terrible devastation of Hurricane Ivan. If any one of us had any doubts at all about a Superior Being, the last week has been more than ample proof that there is one.

The people of the Cayman Islands have lived through an experience which none of us have witnessed before. I am confident that there would be no contradiction of that. While today we grieve at the very few lives that were lost, we have to be and we are eternally grateful to the Father for sparing us the ordeal and anguish of loss of any others—especially given the tremendous devastation and damage to properties, buildings and, I daresay, to the country's entire infrastructure.

We here are all very sensitive to the extreme conditions under which most of us—if not all of us—now have to survive. However, I can say with confidence today that I firmly believe that this is but temporary, and if we continue to unite as a people we will be able to rebuild in relatively short order. That does not mean that everything will be fixed, but I say that because when we look around at what obtains now it is quite easy to despair. But we have not—and we will not. The ever resilient spirit of our people is shining now and this time of adversity, I believe, will only serve to make all of us stronger.

Special thanks must be expressed to the hundreds of individuals who have volunteered and who have rallied to the challenge and who have assisted the nation at this time. Our hearts must go out to them as they continue to serve. Even though some of them have literally lost everything—and I know this by speaking to some of them. This is nothing short of being what I call amazing.

We must also thank the many individuals, businesses and countries who have continued to assist in the aftermath. As the Leader of Government Business stated earlier, much more of this is going to be needed. However, I am confident today that we will get much more help because there are many, many people out there who know our plight. There are many who have been through this before and are in the position to help and want to help.

Mr. Speaker, we need to unite now more than ever, and I know that this we will do. Times are hard but we will see it through. Our people just need to continue to have the patience that they have displayed and as the hours and days pass—just as they have done since Ivan crossed us—we will see things slowly and surely getting better. We will rebuild this country. People will get their homes back and I say today that we will be the envy of many other countries. Together we will once again have our country back to where it was.

Thank you.

ADJOURNMENT

The Speaker: I now call on the Honourable Leader of Government Business for the adjournment.

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I move the adjournment of this Honourable House until 10 am Wednesday 22, September 2004.

The Speaker: The question is that this Honourable House do now adjourn until 10 am Wednesday, 22 September 2004. All those in favour please say Aye. Those against, No.

Ayes.

The Speaker: The Ayes have it.

The Speaker: I ask members of the Business Committee to come together after this meeting to plan the agenda for the Order Paper for Wednesday and also ratify today's meeting. The dress code will be as it was today. Until we get back to more normalcy, I will not impose a heavy dress code on Honourable Members.

At 4.15 pm the House stood adjourned until 10 am Wednesday, 22 September 2004.

OFFICIAL HANSARD REPORT
WEDNESDAY
22 SEPTEMBER 2004
12.04 PM
Second Sitting

The Speaker: I will invite the Second Elected Member for George Town to grace us with prayers.

PRAYERS

Mr. Alden M. McLaughlin: Let us pray.

Almighty God, from whom all wisdom and power are derived: We beseech Thee so to direct and prosper the deliberations of the Legislative Assembly now assembled, that all things may be ordered upon the best and surest foundations for the glory of Thy Name and for the safety, honour and welfare of the people of these Islands.

Bless our Sovereign Lady, Queen Elizabeth II; Philip, Duke of Edinburgh; Charles, Prince of Wales; and all the Royal Family. Give grace to all who exercise authority in our Commonwealth, that peace and happiness, truth and justice, religion and piety may be established among us. Especially we pray for the Governor of our Islands, the Speaker of the Legislative Assembly, Official Members and Ministers of Cabinet and Members of the Legislative Assembly, that we may be enabled faithfully to perform the responsible duties of our high office. All this we ask for Thy great Name's sake.

Let us say The Lord's Prayer together: Our Father, who art in Heaven, Hallowed be Thy Name. Thy Kingdom come, Thy will be done on earth as it is in Heaven. Give us this day our daily bread, and forgive us our trespasses, as we forgive those who trespass against us. Lead us not into temptation, but deliver us from evil. For Thine is the Kingdom, the power and the glory, forever and ever. Amen.

The Lord bless us and keep us. The Lord make His face shine upon us and be gracious unto us. The Lord lift up the light of His countenance upon us and give us peace, now and always. Amen.

Proceedings resumed at 12.07 pm

The Speaker: Please be seated. Proceedings are resumed.

Item number 2 on today's Order Paper, Reading by the Speaker of Messages and Announcements.

READING BY THE HONOURABLE
SPEAKER OF MESSAGES
AND ANNOUNCEMENTS

Message—Hurricane Ivan Strategic Recovery Process

The Speaker: Honourable Members, on Monday last in this Honourable House, the Honourable Leader of Government Business provided us with a fairly comprehensive outline of the strategic recovery plan, which I understand has now received the green light from Government. I believe that such a plan is a move in the right direction. I am very pleased to see the close bipartisan approach that has been taken in addressing the pressing issues, in the rebuilding of our beloved Grand Cayman.

As the Honourable Leader of the Opposition said in his remarks last Monday, we will rebuild this Island. He repeated we will rebuild this Island. Honourable Members, I too share those laudable sentiments. We will rebuild Grand Cayman! There is a lot of work ahead of us and although the rebuilding process will not be easy, I am confident that with the help of God and the resilience of our people, we will return to a level of normalcy in the not too distant future.

It is roughly estimated that Grand Cayman suffered some $2 billion worth of property damage; some people say it could be more. This is a huge burden for these small Islands to carry. We will meet the challenge. The rebuilding process will be costly; however we are already seeing funds being made available from various sources for the rebuilding process.

Post Hurricane Ivan economic recovery process requires guidance from experienced and knowledgeable individuals. I am aware Government is endeavouring to obtain the very best expertise available for this purpose. The recovery programme is multi-faceted and will involve the joint efforts of our bipartisan working group and the multi-disciplinary and experienced team from overseas to guide the programme.

I support the view that an urgent, major initiative is required to make any form of significant impact on the aftermath of this major catastrophe and all Honourable Members, regardless of party affiliation, including the Honourable Speaker's need to unite in this recovery process.

This is no time for us to question political motives of any of our colleagues. We cannot for example, wait for weeks and weeks for electricity and water to be supplied, or garbage removed, throughout the Island, while our people suffer. Thus the need for a joint team comprised of our local resources and any technical assistance we can obtain from abroad to expedite the recovery process.

I have been questioned as to my role at this time as the Speaker of this Honourable House. My short answer is that, in addition to being an elected Member to this House, I am more importantly an elected representative for the constituency of George Town. As such, it is my intention to do all I possibly can in the recovery process. It does not matter to me very much if my actions are questioned or viewed as political, as I am satisfied that I will, as the Honourable Speaker of this House, continue to exercise the very highest of probity and impartiality equally towards both sides of this Honourable House.

My biggest regret at this time is that I am unable to be more visible within the various areas of George Town, and indeed throughout the Island, due mainly to the long hours I am spending in meetings with the Steering Committee of the Recovery Plan. However, I am sure that most of my people understand that it is most important for us to find ways and means of addressing the dire needs throughout the Island as soon as possible. I am attempting to do that with other Honourable Members of this House, together with other individuals from the private sector. On the question as to whether or not the situation resulting from the ravages of Hurricane Ivan has changed my retirement plan, I can only say that the furthest thing from my mind at this time is retirement. My only thought at this time is to relieve the suffering of our people for whatever period the recovery process takes.

I have been an elected representative for my people for almost 16 years and I have no intention of abandoning them when they need me most. Duty and responsibility has always been and still is, to provide my people with the best representation that I can offer. I have been meeting with the Recovery Committee almost on a daily basis—the Honourable Leader of Government Business, the Honourable Leader of the Opposition, Members of this Honourable House, His Excellency, the Governor, and individuals from the Private Sector. I will continue to do so as long as I am needed. Whilst this is no doubt the worst disaster of the century on these Islands in terms of property damage, I am confident that with the joint efforts of all of our people, the assistance from overseas and more importantly through the help of God, we will rebuild this beautiful Island. Every person I have met, Caymanians and expatriates, is committed to the rebuilding process.

There is no truth in the unfounded rumour that assistance has been turned away. To the contrary, we are trying to obtain assistance whenever and wherever possible. Last Monday the Honourable Leader of Government Business spoke at length on this matter and I trust he has put this rumour to rest. Let us therefore as a people spend our energy and efforts at this time in getting involved in the rebuilding of this Island, rather than listening to wild and unfounded rumours. Only this morning I was asked by a respected member of this community, who had heard wild rumours, if there was any truth that the Honourable Leader of Government Business was put under house arrest by the Governor. These unfounded rumours must cease, especially at this time. Nothing could be further from the truth, the Honourable Leader of Government Business has been at every meeting and working harder than most of us. I had to tell him he needs to watch his health more closely. For example, last Monday when we left here at approximately 4 pm, we went straight into another meeting that ended perhaps at 9 pm. The Leader of Government informed me that he was going into another meeting. This is what each one of us out there should be doing, instead of spreading rumours.

I have not always seen eye to eye with the Honourable Leader of Government Business; at one stage he was in the Opposition from me. The truth is, however, that we have to tell the truth about things regardless of whether we like somebody or not and I am really getting a little angry when I hear these rumours flying all over the place.

Similarly, I have to say that His Excellency the Governor must also be congratulated because he has been present at every meeting of the Steering Committee and other committees, trying to get as much help for us as possible. I want to congratulate him for that and he has also been trying his best to deal with these issues.

In closing let me say that I am more proud now than ever in my life to be a Caymanian. This Island is, and with the help of God will continue to be, my home. Let me therefore encourage all residents of the Cayman Islands to continue to work together in the rebuilding process. Above all, let me repeat that we must never question our faith in God, for He will never fail nor forsake us. I truly believe that with the help of God we will emerge a stronger and better people. May God continue to bless these beautiful Cayman Islands.

Thank you Honourable Members.

Apologies

The Speaker: I also wish to extend apologies for the First Official Member who is out of the Chambers on very urgent business.

I have been advised that the Honourable Leader of Government Business wishes to make a statement.

STATEMENTS BY MEMBERS OF GOVERNMENT

Letters of Support and Verbal Assistance from Various Countries

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Thank you for your message to this Honourable House which I hope gets carried by the national press.

I rise to inform the House of letters of support from various countries. First, I would like to read the letter from Mr. Bill Rammell, from the Foreign and Commonwealth Office (FCO):

“Dear McKeeva,

“I would like to say how very shocked I was to hear about the impact of Hurricane Ivan on the Cayman Islands. The scenes of devastation that I have seen are truly horrific. I can only imagine what you and the people went through the hurricane itself. It must have been an appalling experience. You and all the other people of the territory are very much in our thoughts.

“However, I would like to congratulate you on the very thorough preparation which you undertook in advance of the hurricane. I am sure this is the reason casualties were kept to such a low level. I am glad that HMS Richmond and her fleet auxiliary vessel were able to land personnel on the Island and that they have been able to assist you in dealing with the aftermath of the hurricane. I also know that the Department for International Development is working extremely hard to provide you with essential supplies.

“In the light of this traumatic event, I, of course understand that you are unable to attend the Overseas Territories Consultative Meeting next week. You will have the support of all the other territory governments. I hope that the damage incurred can quickly be repaired; and that the territory will soon return to functioning as normal.
“Yours sincerely,
“Bill Rammell.”

Mr. Speaker, I also received a letter from Mr. Eddie Tatum, the Honourable Mayor of Guanaja, Bay Islands, Honduras. He is here on the Island and I saw him last night. He has written:

“Dear Friends:

“We, the people of Guanaja, are saddened by the destruction caused to your Island by Hurricane Ivan.

“As we see the destruction, we are reminded of the destruction caused to our own Island during the passage of Hurricane Mitch.

“We are also reminded that you the people of the Cayman Islands were among the first to come to our assistance.

“On behalf of the Municipality and the people of Guanaja, we hope that you will accept this small token of love.

“We pray that God will help you to a complete and speedy recovery from this disaster.”

“Sincerely,

“Eddie Tatum

Mayor of Guanaja

Honduras, Bay Islands”

From the Falkland Islands Government:

“Dear Mr. Bush,

“I write on behalf of the Government and people of the Falkland Islands to offer our sincere commiseration for the devastation that has affected your Islands as a result of Hurricane Ivan.

“The scale of the damage and disruption to your homes and lives is hard to grasp. Jan Cheek and I will be attending the Overseas Territories Council next week and hope to be able to talk to you or your representative about any practical assistance we may be able to offer from the Falkland Islands which will help in the process of rehabilitation.

“In the meantime, we send you and all the people of the Cayman Islands our full support as you endeavour to return to normal.

“Yours sincerely,

“Councillor Norma Edwards ”

This is from the Island of Jersey, the Bailiff of Jersey:

“Dear Mr. Bush:

“I write as President of the States of Jersey and on behalf of the people of Jersey to convey to you the sympathy of the Assembly, following the destruction wrought in the Cayman Islands by Hurricane Ivan earlier this week.

“In the States Assembly yesterday Senator Frank Walker, president of the Policy and Resources Committee, registered on behalf of all members the universal sense of shock which has been felt as news has emerged of the widespread loss of possessions, property and essential public services.

“We express the sincere hope that operations to restore normal life on the Islands will proceed apace and that the personal sufferings of Islanders, will be relieved as swiftly as possible in these very difficult times.

“Yours sincerely

“Philip Bailhache”

Mr. Speaker, there were also messages of support for the Cayman Islands, from the Royal Family. From His Royal Highness, the Prince of Wales, “I was horrified to hear of the dreadful devastation which has been inflicted upon the Cayman Islands by Hurricane Ivan and wanted you to know how deeply I feel for those who have been affected by this appalling storm. My heartfelt sympathy and prayers go out to all those who have lost their loved ones and whose properties and livelihoods have been destroyed. “

The Earl of Wessex who knows the Cayman Islands well and visited last year to celebrate the quincentennial anniversary. Their Royal Highnesses, the Earl and Countess of Wessex, Edward and Sophie, asked the Governor to “Please convey to the Government and people of the Cayman Islands, our concern at the devastation caused by Hurricane Ivan. Our prayers are with you all especially those who have suffered bereavement or damage.”

The British Virgin Islands and Chief Minister have been in contact with me every day since the hurricane and have offered certain assistance. We are getting police and other assistance from them. The Turks and Caicos Islands, Bermuda have offered certain assistance through the Bermuda Defence Force and other special considerations of assistance. We want to publicly thank all of them.

Mr. Speaker, I listened to your statement, Sir, and I see that even in this time of catastrophe with resultant stress and need, the dirty rumour mills, disloyalty, treachery and in fact, machinations which will not bring about the unity that the recovery will require, is ongoing. I thought that in these difficult times people's hearts would have changed somewhat and that they would have put their feelings, whatever they were, aside and the acclamations of unity would really be there.

From Thursday, September 9, I resigned myself to the fact that we were going to have trouble with that hurricane and on the Sunday of the hurricane, I knew that all of us would need to work to take this country to recovery. That is all I am asking Caymanians, I do not care really at this time what they say about me, whether they go to press with it or just spread rumours. I am a man of action and I believe what needs to be done we must do. I believe that all of us must do it together as much as the Parliamentary democracy allows. That is all that I want and I think that is all the Government wants. We want to work together. Let us show those people on the outside that had begun to distrust the political arm, be it the Opposition, or Government, that we in this House can set an example by truly working together for the good of all our people.

We have been working hard out there, I know. Members on both sides feel for each other, I can see it, Mr. Speaker. I know when people are genuine; I say let us continue that. If we stick to our guns, regardless of the political divide, and whenever, as they say in another country close to us, whenever they fly the gate then we will have to do what we have to do as politicians. We need to work together; we need human resources to get this done. It means most of all financial—that is going to be the true test—financial resources to get this work done. The mammoth job cleaning and bringing commerce and the health, welfare and education, social services and tourism industry back to where our people are enjoying that standard of living that we have enjoyed.

Mr. Speaker, I am sorry at this point I am speaking without written notes to you, but I had to make those remarks after the statement about the rumours in this country. I think that all those who want to start those rumours should be helping other people. That is what needs to be done. There is enough to do without idle talk and chat and they should take the “old carnality” out of their hearts and put aside their foolish ways to rebuild and rebuild.

Waiving of Loan and Mortgage Repayments until January 2005

Hon. W. McKeever Bush: We need to thank the retail banks for the compassionate gesture of waiving mortgage and loan payments until January 2005. However, if that period of interest is not waived or spread over the longer period . . . and there have been conflicting reports, Mr. Speaker, and that is why I am taking this opportunity . . . We as the elected Government would further request of the banks to consider a formula, a form of payment, that is London Interbank Offer Rate (LIBOR) plus one per cent that would take care of the administrative costs and at the same time would ensure that no customer would have to make a larger than affordable payment in January.

This is especially significant when we consider that the first payment would come due immediately following the Christmas season which is traditionally the time when people find it most financially awkward to have disposable cash. I know the Financial Secretary is still awaiting some information and we know that there has been what I call the “compassionate gesture,” of waiving of mortgage and loan payments. We are hoping, Sir, that interest payments are included, or the spread of that over the longer period, so that in January there will not be a lump sum payment—a wave that will crush people.

Mr. Speaker, I thank you for your indulgence and we move forward to the rebuilding period. Thank you for your offer of assistance.

The Speaker: Honourable Members, I want to let you know before Madam Clerk calls Item 4 that it is my intention to give sufficient latitude to Honourable Members, so that they are able to express their views and sentiments on the situations that obtain within their various districts. We do not have a motion to that effect as it would be difficult to raise a question or do a resolution on that motion. So, I have taken it on myself, within the powers that I have under the Constitution in the Standing Orders, to give sufficient latitude so that Members can include existing situations.

These are not normal times, Honourable Members, so we will not stick rigidly to the Standing Orders and the Constitution, as can be seen by our dress code. However, we would like to finish today, so I would ask Members to not exercise their right of speaking for two hours; this is not necessary because the whole situation is well known to all of the population. So, work with us so that if possible we can get out of here today. I have not yet asked the Honourable Leader of Government Business if on adjournment we will be adjourning until the day to be set, or whether we will continue today's meeting.

Honourable Leader of Government Business.

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: Mr. Speaker, we have not discussed this aspect, but as I see it in these times we would like to finish today so that we can move forward. However, these are not normal times that we are living in and I would not want to recommend that we put ourselves in the position where we would have to go through a longer process to get the House restarted. Perhaps we will move an adjournment that will allow you to call us back when, and if necessary.

The Speaker: Which will be sine die, until a day to be fixed.

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: Sine die.

The Speaker: Thank you, very much.
Madam Clerk?

The Clerk: Item 4 Government Business, suspension of Standing Order 45, 46 (1) (2) and (4) to allow the Police Amendment Bill 2004 to be read a first and second time.

GOVERNMENT BUSINESS

BILLS

Suspension of Standing Orders 45, 46 (1),(2) and (4)

The Speaker: It is my understanding that the Honourable Second Official Member will be presenting this Bill and if so I will call on him to move the necessary motion for the suspension.

Hon. Samuel W. Bulgin: I beg to move the suspension of Standing Orders 45, 46(1) (2) and (4) suspended to allow the Police (Amendment) Bill, 2002 to be read a first and second time.

The Speaker: The question is that the Standing Orders 45, 46(1) (2) and (4) to be suspended. All those in favour please say Aye. Those against; No.

Ayes.

The Speaker: The Ayes have it. Standing Orders 45 46(1) (2) and (4) are accordingly suspended.

Agreed: Standing Orders 45 and 46 (1), (2) and (4) suspended.

FIRST READING

The Police (Amendment) Bill, 2004

The Clerk: First Reading, the Police (Amendment) Bill, 2004.

The Speaker: The Bill is deemed to have been read a first time and is set down for Second Reading.

SECOND READING

The Police (Amendment) Bill, 2004

The Clerk: Second Reading. The Police (Amendment) Bill, 2004.

The Speaker: The Honourable Second Official Member.

Hon. Samuel W. Bulgin: Thank You, Mr. Speaker. I beg to move for the Second Reading of a Bill, short title, A Bill for a Law to Amend the Police Law 2004.

The Speaker: The Bill has duly been moved. Does the Honourable Member wish to speak thereto?

Hon. Samuel W. Bulgin: Yes, Mr. Speaker, briefly. Thank you.

Honourable Members of this House are aware that 11 September 2004, or 9/11 if some Members wish to say so, with Hurricane Ivan bearing down on these Islands, His Excellency the Governor issued the proclamation declaring a state of emergency. The emergency was, among other things, to regulate public safety and the essential supplies to life. Simultaneously with the declaration of the state of emergency, Sir, the Governor promulgated the Emergency Regulations 2004 for regulating and securing the essential supplies of life to the community, preservation of peace, securing public safety, maintenance of public order. Pursuant to these regulations, no. 4 to be precise, His Excellency the Governor imposed a curfew throughout the Cayman Islands.

The dust having settled, it is felt that some of the powers that have been imposed pursuant to the Emergency Powers Law and the Regulations might no longer be necessary in all the circumstances. This feeling is informed by among other things, a recognition that there is a need to try to restore normality where possible as soon as can be. This would include Government departments and agencies reverting again where possible to pre-hurricane mode.

Accordingly, Mr. Speaker, as a precursor to consideration being given to lifting of the state of emergency, there would need to be legislative mechanism in place. This would allow the Commissioner of Police to impose a curfew where necessary, to regulate the movements of the public and for certain incidental purposes, such as stop and search and other things. Therefore, the Bill before this Honourable House seeks to enable the Commissioner of police to impose a cordon and/or curfew where the situation so demands. For the benefit of this Honourable House and the wider public, I will seek with your leave to read the relevant provisions of the Bill to best articulate the purposes of the Bill.

Clause 2 of the Bill seeks to amend the Police Law to insert a new section 29(A) and would read “Where it appears to the Commissioner of Police that having regard to the nature and extent of criminal activity there are reasonable grounds to believe that in the interest of public safety and public order or for the purpose of preventing crime or detecting crime it is necessary so to do, the Commissioner of Police may:

- (a) establish a cordon around certain localities; or
- (b) with the written permission of His Excellency the Governor, impose a curfew in any such locality between such hours as may be specified, requiring persons within that locality to remain within their premises during the hours so specified, unless authorised in writing by a constable who is in charge of enforcing the said curfew.”

May I just say, Sir, that I intend that the relevant stage and with the necessary leave of the Chair to move a Committee Stage amendment to a certain section of this.

It continues, Mr. Speaker, with (2) “Where a cordon is imposed, the cordon shall endure for a period not exceeding twelve hours (3) where a curfew is imposed, and a curfew shall endure for a period not exceeding forty-eight hours.” May I just say that the “forty-eight hours” there simply means that the curfew can be re-imposed from time to time following an assessment of the security threat or other needs. So, if necessary, after an assessment has been made the Commissioner of Police can seek further approval from the Governor for renewal of the curfew. That would be entirely a matter for Honourable Members whether they think it is appropriate in the circumstances. However, the Bill will be open for debate and for suggestions in that regard.

The Bill also provides that “29B (1) a constable may stop and search a person whom he reasonably suspects to be in contravention of section 29(A) [which is really in contravention of the curfews.]

29B(2) The search of a person under this section shall be carried out by a constable of the same gender.

There is an enforcement provision in 29C for “A person who contravenes section 29A, is guilty of an offence and liable on summary conviction to a fine of one thousand dollars and to imprisonment for six months.

29C (2) Where a constable with reasonable cause, suspects that section 29A has been contravened [that is violating the curfew], he may arrest without a warrant anyone whom he, with reasonable cause, suspects to be guilty of the contravention.

Where a person is guilty of contravening section 29A states that “the Court may order that any goods or money in respect of which the offence was committed and in his possession shall be forfeited to the Crown.”

Mr. Speaker, specifically I think it is aimed at looters and if such persons are apprehended and items found that are suspected to be proceeds of looting, the Court has the discretion to have these things forfeited to the Crown.

If this House approves the amendment to the Police Law then even after the state of emergency has been lifted it simply means that the Commissioner of Police will have the necessary powers to impose a curfew either throughout the entire Island, or in designated areas, according to assessment made on the ground by the security officers themselves.

I, therefore, Sir, with this short outline commend this Bill to this Honourable House.

Thank you.

The Speaker: Does any other Honourable Member wish to speak?

The Second Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. Alden M. McLaughlin, Jr.: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. A grave calamity has been visited upon these dear Islands we call home. Our people have been subjected over the course of the past week and a few days, to experiences which none of us who are alive today, I believe, could have contemplated in our wildest imaginations. When hurricane Ivan lashed these Islands with a force that was unreal, all of us were filled with great fear, trepidation — concern at that point I believe, mainly at the loss of our lives and the lives of our dear ones.

When we emerged from the storm early Sunday morning—really Monday morning—and it became clear to us the extent of property damage that had occurred, rumours circulated very quickly of tremendous loss of life on these islands. I too was overwhelmed at a rumour that as many as two hundred persons might have died.

However, when things calmed down, when matters subsided to a point where we started to get reliable information about what damage, particularly the fates of our fellow citizens and residents, and we understood initially that there had been no loss of life, everyone I spoke to, bar none, could only say this was a miracle.

As events have moved on and the days have rolled on, we have come to learn that there has indeed been loss of life. We are nevertheless again overwhelmed with gratitude to Almighty God, that loss of life has been limited to two persons, whose demise can be directly attributed to the storm.

Mr. Speaker, this morning when I arose quite early and thought about what I would say in this Honourable House, I went over to my office at home to look at one of many books with various quotations. My office had been treated to a good dose of salt water like everywhere else in Prospect Park, and I had managed to have it cleaned out.

There on my boardroom table was a Bible. It is my Bible and I have it with me; it is a bit damp. It was opened to Ecclesiastes—and I have to confess that I am not much of a Bible reader. I say that apologetically, with a certain sense of shame and I have not spent a great deal of time reading the Bible. So, finding Bible verses is not something that would come that readily to me and because I saw the Bible opened, I decided to look at that chapter.

Ecclesiastes speaks about a number of things: A time to every purpose; the vanity of life—it speaks to the vanity of riches. Nothing in the initial chapters of Ecclesiastes leapt out at me that I thought was appropriate to this occasion. However, as I read on swiftly, and reached chapter seven, I found some verses that seemed to give some meaning; they give some purpose to the terrible events that have occurred over the course of this past week, ten days since Ivan. Which I believe ought to guide our deliberations, guide our action and inform our own purposes as we go about the rebuilding exercise. I believe in these words there is a message for these people of these Islands. With your permission, Sir, I would like to read these short verses.

The Speaker: Please do.

Mr. Alden M. McLaughlin, Jr.: Ecclesiastes, Chapter 7, verse 3: “Sorrow is better than laughter: for by the sadness of the countenance the heart is made better.” Then from verse 10, “Say not thou, What is the cause that the former days were better than these? for thou dost not enquire wisely concerning this.”

Verse 11, “Wisdom is good with an inheritance: and by it there is profit to them that see the sun.”

Verse 12, “For wisdom is a defence and money is a defence: but the excellency of knowledge is, that wisdom giveth life to them that have it.”

Verse 13, “Consider the work of God, for who can make that straight, which he hath made crooked?”

Verse 14, “In the day of prosperity be joyful, but in the day of adversity consider: God also hath set the one over against the other, to the end that man should find nothing after him.”

Verse 18, “It is good that thou shouldst take hold of this; yea, also from this withdraw not thine hand: for he that feareth God shall come forth of them all.”

The message that I get from all of that is simply this: These Islands have been the source of great pride on our part and envy on the part of the rest of the world, particularly the rest of the region, for now more than a generation. We have taken great pride in pulling ourselves up by our own bootstraps and making this place the wonderful home that it is to so many indigenous and those who have come here and decided to sojourn amongst us. There has been plenty for a long time.

Caymanians, by and large, have not had to face adversity for more than a generation. Those of my father's generation understood adversity in a way that my generation did not, and certainly my children's generation does not.

However, in building these Islands and enjoying the fruits of those efforts in many instances, Mr. Speaker, I believe we have lost perspective; we have lost some of our humanity; we have certainly lost to a large extent our faith and trust in the Almighty. It has taken an event such as this to make us all come to realise our humanness, our mortality and just how pitiful we are as beings.

When we sat inside our homes filled with fear, completely overwhelmed and overtaken by the power of this 'thing' that was howling outside our doors, ripping our roofs off, pouring the sea into our most precious and safest homes or abodes, all of us I believe were humbled. All of us have been humbled and have come to understand that no matter how much money we have, no matter how wealthy we are, there is nothing that can withstand the force of nature. Some of the wealthiest persons in these Islands are homeless: no question about it. They are staying with friends.

That is the power and might of nature. The Great Architect is responsible for all. So, I believe that is the lesson that comes out of Ecclesiastes 7: In times of prosperity be joyful, in times of adversity remember, remember your Creator.

Mr. Speaker, I would like to spend some time discussing what has transpired, particularly in my constituency; how I view the recovery process; what needs to be done; and make some suggestions and recommendations as to the way forward in that respect. However, I would like to address the real matter before this House this morning, which is the proposed amendment to the Police Law. This amendment would invest the Commissioner of Police with powers he does not currently have. He would be able to cordon off certain areas and also impose curfews in certain situations and for certain lengths of time. That proposed Bill is one that has my complete support. Everyone needs to understand, in particular the listening public, why this is necessary because it is an invasion of personal liberty—or restraint on personal liberty—which is extraordinary. However, these are extraordinary and difficult times.

We have since September 11 been operating under a state of emergency as a result of a proclamation by His Excellency the Governor, under the Emergency Powers Law. Now, that state of emergency cannot continue indefinitely. Under the Law, unless there is a resolution of this Honourable House, it cannot and will not continue beyond Monday of next week.

The reason for that is that the Law requires that this Honourable House be informed, by his Excellency the Governor, of the making of the proclamation of a state of emergency, and that the regulations which are promulgated as a result of that, be laid on the Honourable Table of this House. Also, that the state of emergency will not continue seven days after the laying of those regulations unless this Honourable House passes a resolution that the state of emergency should continue beyond that point.

I do not believe, Mr. Speaker, that it is the desire of this Honourable House for the state of emergency to continue beyond that seven-day period, which I think expires on Monday next. If the state of emergency expires as I expect it will, it will mean the elected Government will resume such powers and authority as they normally have under the provisions of the Constitution. Some of those powers and that authority have necessarily been in abeyance with the making of the proclamation of a state of emergency. I think we all agree that the resumption democratic government is something that should happen as soon as possible.

Notwithstanding that, there are still a number of concerns as a result of the unusual circumstances in which we have to operate, following the passage of Hurricane Ivan. Mr. Speaker, one of my greatest concerns is the question of security if the state of emergency continues. I believe most, if not all, Members of this Honourable House share that concern. Certainly the Elected Government has shared that concern which is the reason we have before us an amendment to the Police Law. This would allow the Commissioner of Police to continue the curfew and to establish cordons where necessary.

I know that the curfew does irritate some people because having to be home by 8 o'clock is considered unreasonable. Perhaps if circumstances permit and proper assessment is made, the curfew can be extended to 9 o'clock. Certainly, I would not have any difficulty with that. However, I believe, given the conditions under which we are operating—with most areas not having any power, and lighting being a real issue—and the fact that many people's properties, homes in particular, have been damaged by the hurricane, it is therefore not as safe as it would otherwise be. This coupled with the reality that in the absence of electricity and in the middle of summer, it is indeed unbearably hot if one were to try and lock oneself up in the house with windows down and doors shut.

Due to the unsafe conditions in which many of us now live, it is critical that the police are able to ensure that any one who is out and about beyond the curfew is someone who has the requisite pass and authority to be there. If they do not have those things, without asking any more questions the police are able to say "You ought not to be here, come let me take you to a safer place."

So, I want all of us in the country to understand why it is necessary for this sort of invasion or restraint to be there on private liberty. It is to make sure that the good people of this country are as safe as they possibly can be in these conditions and that the unsavoury characters who insist on going about doing ill deeds, making everybody's life miserable and destroying and looting, that the police have the wherewithal to limit their ability to do that.

For those reasons, Mr. Speaker, I support this proposed amendment to the Police Law. The task ahead of us to rebuild this country is monumental. I believe, having talked to many people that the enormity of this task has not registered with everyone. However, a tremendous amount of progress has been made over the course of the past ten days or so.

I must tell you, Mr. Speaker, one week ago I was very, very concerned about us having civil disorder in this country because of the lack of access to water and food, in particular, with the concern for fuel being of a lesser degree. Due to the efforts of many, many people over the course of the past four or five days, the situation with water and food are a lot better than they were one week ago. There is still an issue with food and water but the tensions have been significantly reduced.

Mr. Speaker, as big as George Town is, I have been to every community since the passage of Hurricane Ivan. I have a good feel now about the various concerns in different areas. In the inner city areas of George Town, not so much Central which has access to water from Flowers and others, drinking water is still something of an issue. Food is still something of an issue. There are those who even if they can get to the stores, because they have been unable to work for some ten days, do not have the means to buy food. So, we are going to have to ensure that all persons in Grand Cayman—Cayman Brac and Little Cayman are separate issues—do have access to food. It will not be caviar, or in many situations cooked food, but we have to ensure that no one in this country goes hungry.

A great deal of effort has been made by Elected Members from both sides of this Honourable House. I have seen them out doing their very best to distribute food and water, battling to get access to it in many instances, in order to keep the population fed and prevent them from going thirsty.

I believe that despite all the obstacles, hurdles and misunderstandings, that we have reached a point where if the current regime continues, the elected Members will continue to be able to spearhead the distribution of food and water, especially to the vulnerable areas in their respective districts.

Now that the food and water concerns have been abated, the concern is about shelter. I do not want to hazard a guess about how many people in George Town are homeless, let alone, know the rest of the country. However, I have to tell you Mr. Speaker, my heart is full, as we say in Cayman. The number of instances of persons who have lost everything; the number of persons who have literally cried in my arms about their families being torn asunder; the fact that their families have been torn asunder because they have three children and everybody cannot go and stay with the same cousin, aunt or friend; you have one child over here and one child over there; Mommy staying with her sister and Daddy staying with his family.

We have got—and this is no criticism, because I understand the practical difficulties of us immediately addressing the concerns about persons who have lost everything. We cannot do it immediately, however, we are going to have to find a way as quickly as we possibly can, to get families back together in a place where they can call home. A place where they can have their children and spouses around them. That is a tremendous social issue that we are going to have to face swiftly. That is the extreme end.

Mr. Speaker, I went to an area in George Town yesterday — I will not say where because I do not want people to feel I am singling them out. The Minister of the Opposition and I had been there on the evening the hurricane struck, helping those people by ensuring that they had their places boarded up. Yesterday I went to check on the people to see if they had water and how they were doing. There were a number of houses in the yard; the house that had been out front was pushed up in a pile. There was absolutely nothing and of course as soon as the lady saw me she started to cry.

Everyone is looking to us, as elected Members, to assist with finding them a new home. Mr. Speaker, this is going to be the toughest one of all for us. We can clear the roads and rebuild them. However, for those people who had a little place and that was all they had, they have no significant income, they had no insurance, I believe—and some may say we will create a social state. However, I believe we have a duty as a government to do whatever we can to help those people get back a place in which they can live again. There are no 'ifs' 'ands' or 'buts' about it. We already have a serious problem with people trying to get affordable housing. There are those who have scratched through all of their lives, a little bit here, pinched a little bit there and are now in their 50s and 60s and in some cases beyond that.

The day before yesterday I spoke to an old lady who said, "Mr. Alden, I am eighty years old and my house is gone." She seems to be in good health, but how can we expect her to go and rebuild her home on her own? I am not suggesting that people who are in the prime of their lives, have a good job or prospects of a good job, that they should not be required to help build back their own lives. That is a given. I am talking about the vulnerable, infirmed, aged, indigent who will never, ever again be able to get back a proper shelter over their heads without assistance.

In the short term—I mean today, tomorrow and next week—we are going to have to find a way to get people 'dried in', as we say in Cayman—that is, those who have liveable standing structures, where water is not pouring on them every time it rains. It seems that to the added misery of Ivan there is more rain almost every day since then. Those things require immediate action. I know that meetings are necessary to plan to strategise, however I have had it up to my neck with meetings. We need to be out on the road, assessing the situation and finding means of relieving and alleviating the people's suffering. We have got to do it. While I know there are some who resent the elected Members being involved, I am here to challenge all and sundry that there is nobody else who knows better the vulnerable areas, than their elected Members of this Legislative Assembly.

[Applause comments]

Mr. Alden M. McLaughlin, Jr.: I can tell you Mr. Speaker, that they can say what they want but I know that in the height of the hurricane, when it was blistering out there, 7.30 or 8 o'clock in the morning, people were calling or texting me and calling other elected Members. They called 911 but they could not come for them but they wanted their elected Members to find a way to save them.

Now, Mr. Speaker, that was impossible as 911 or no one could have gone out in that tempest. I am not suggesting... The point I am making is that it is to the Elected Members, that people in the community look for assistance in whatever happens. That is right and proper because we are the persons who they elected, who are accountable to them and anyone from anywhere else who thinks differently had better think again. I have said this in some meetings and will say it again. I do not care who tries to keep me from representing my people and accessing supplies or whatever is necessary to alleviate their suffering. I am going to do whatever I have to do lawfully, to make sure that my people get access to these things. I am going to do whatever I have to do.

[Applause]

Mr. Alden M. McLaughlin, Jr.: Mr. Speaker, we are on the front line and that is as it should be. The people have elected us. People know who Mr. Alden is, who Mr. Kurt is, who Mr. Roy is, who Mr. Rolston is, who Ms. Juliana is ... they know who we are. We are not nameless or faceless. We have made a lot of progress over this last week to get the powers that be to understand the role that we are not only duty bound to play but willing and desirous of playing in the rebuilding. We are not in the rebuilding exercise yet: the alleviating of misery is where we are.

We have to understand that until the people reach a certain comfort level, where water is not pouring in on them every night or where they do not have to think where they are going to get something to eat tomorrow, whether they will have water to drink or to bathe with, until they reach that level, nobody is thinking about rebuilding. The rebuilding they are thinking about now is whether they can get some tarpaulin, tarpaper or a piece of zinc to put on their roofs to stop the leaking. That is the extent of the rebuilding. We are not as a nation ready for rebuilding until we address the basic needs of our people.

I have been a member of the financial industry for twenty years as at June 1 since I joined my firm. It was to that I owed my existence; my ability to earn a living derives from there. So, no one ought to try to tell me that I do not understand the financial industry and that it is not a major concern of mine. It is my bread and butter. However, if we focus—as I have heard some say—thank God not the majority—only on ensuring that the financial industry of these Islands is up and kicking, presenting an image to the rest of the world that we are business-as-usual in the Cayman Islands and we ignore the basic needs of our people, there will be no financial industry because there will be no Cayman Islands. Some people had better come to understand that. We have to address the basic needs of the people of this country, first and foremost.

Our people are living by and large in great hardship, suffering great deprivation and doing it with a brave face. We have to encourage them; we have to let them know that we are making real efforts to get their lives back to some sense of normalcy. What I am feeling and facing when I am out there is—“What are you all doing about this and about that?” By and large, I do not know. That has been my complaint about this from the beginning.

This is not the time for recriminations and blame. I am not going down that road but I am making certain points and drawing certain markers because it is important that those who make decisions on our behalf, understand that the elected membership of this House is not going to sit on their hands while their people suffer. We have to get back to the point where people are comfortable going back to work. Mr. Speaker, often I think that people believe when we talk like this, that we are just talking about the labourers. That is, the few who go and get a few days work here and there:

I am talking about people who work in banks, trust companies, law firms and accounting firms. They have expressed to me that they have great reservation about going back to work when they have to be at home worrying about whether or not they are going to be able to get something to eat, and water still pouring on them. That is the reality. As long as people still have to line up to get food and are limited to CI$50 we are not operating in a normal environment. This is not saying that things are not going fast enough or that people are not trying to get things better. I am not trying to say that at all. A lot of people have worked and are continuing to work unreal hours to try to get things back to normal. The point I am making is that it seems to be in some quarters, a view that things are okay now—people have access to food and water so we can just get back to business and make everything happen. We have not reached that point and still a good distance from that point. That is what I am trying to say.

Mr. Speaker, the fuel situation has improved tremendously and that has reduced tensions immensely. I think that will continue to get better. If I were satisfied that the food and water situation had reached the point of the fuel, I would be a lot more relaxed this afternoon than I am. I think they have done a monumental job in getting people access to fuel. People are not worrying about having to go to the gas station every day and wait hours and hours. That is a big part of the battle: Once people get comfortable and feel that when they need something they can get it, a lot of tensions and concerns will go away.

Mr. Speaker, I maintain that there is a real need for outside assistance. I was encouraged by what you said this morning, that there has been no refusal of outside assistance. I must say that after the Leader of Government Business spoke on Monday, in which he outlined a situation with—I think the name was Bob Livingstone at the State Department. If I recall him correctly, he said Mr. Livingstone had indicated that his office was willing to offer assistance but the United Kingdom was unwilling for them to do so. Mr. Speaker, that has almost filled me with despair; however, if that is not the case that is marvellous news. I caution us, Mr. Speaker. I know a number of us are upset with the UK and are willing to rail at what is perceived to be the lack of assistance by the UK in this our hour of need. I do not have the information and I am not part of the information loop. I only have to operate on what I hear and ask questions as to whether or not that is the case.

Certainly, there is a widespread perception out there that somehow the UK is not prepared to give Cayman the assistance which most people feel we ought to receive. I do not know what they have done. I gather they have sent water, medical supplies, there was a war ship, an auxiliary vessel offshore and I gather some of the personnel came off shore—how long they were here and what they did I do not know.

I do know, however, that our Police Force (in particular) is stretched to the limit. They are tired, weary and worn—we need assistance on that front. We need people who are able to spell out those police officers who have operated courageously and worked so hard over these past eleven days. I seriously question why we have not received them. I heard about twenty-five coming and was part of the briefing with Mr. Covington. Quite what twenty-five officers will do to alleviate the situation here I question. We need to get sufficient officers here to make sure that security is not an issue. I have heard from certain sources that officers are not showing up when they are supposed to show up because they are exhausted, they are unable to function. I cannot say that is a fact, I do not know it as a fact; all I can say is that the source from which I received it is a source I trust.

However, I think the country deserves answers to those questions.

People need to know. I think that is a big part of the battle of recovery. People need to know that the country is safe and secure and that when there is a curfew there are sufficient personnel to ensure the curfew is observed. We need regular, informative releases, not general stuff, not platitudes and generalities which talk about what a wonderful job we are doing and security is not an issue anymore. Deal with specifics: tell us how many personnel will be here, what is being done. That is what the country needs now: assurance, tangible stuff—not as my good friend the Minister of Education talks about, not 'lecture theatre stuff'.

Mr. Speaker, we need a visible presence of people who are here to assist in the recovery process. I know there are some that have pushed out their chests and said Cayman can take care of itself, we are going to do this ourselves. We might be able to do this ourselves but it will take another generation. I do not want to wait for another generation to get Cayman back to where it should be and I do not think anybody else does.

We need workers—aid workers—people to assist with rebuilding with security, with the monumental task that is ahead of us. I am astounded that they are not here in legion, and someone in authority—the Governor, or one of his assistants. Somebody needs to tell us why that has not happened. Why is it that the ships have left with their personnel? We are still in very, very dire straits. We need as many experts as possible here who can assist with disaster recovery.

Now, Mr. Speaker, the National Hurricane Committee did a phenomenal job in hurricane preparedness. As a writer of one of the letters read by the Leader of Government Business said, he was certain our preparation had a lot to do with the number of casualties we had. I am convinced that is absolutely the case.

Mr. Speaker, none of us could have conceived the magnitude of the damage and destruction this country has faced. None of us have the relevant experience in coordinating all that has to be done. We simply do not have it. All of us are giving our best but it is a 'fly by the seat of your pants', make a decision based on common sense and your own experiences which are not the experiences that we currently have. It is a huge learning curve for us. We have to get people here to help us with the recovery process.

Mr. Speaker, I do not believe—I cannot fathom the fact—that the UK is going to be so heartless that they are going to say to us "you guys get on with it yourselves". I just do not believe that is possible. I do not believe that they could stand up and face the community if that were the case. Someone, the Governor or one of his delegates, must tell this country why it is that the UK is not doing any more than she is doing.

I am not seeking to engage in any confrontation. I understand the importance of diplomacy, tact and these things. However, we are an Overseas Territory and they have a constitutional and a moral responsibility to us. We need this sort of assistance and we need it swiftly because it will bolster confidence in our effort to rebuild this country. The last thing we need now is for our people and outsiders who have invested, or have interests here, believe we are not up to the task and that things are not moving swiftly enough.

Mr. Speaker, you can only expect our population, as patient and long suffering as they are, to exist in these dire conditions for a short time. We have to get people back to a point where they have shelter, access to food and the basics of life and we are not there. People are still living in shelters and Lord knows how many hundreds in George Town are living with some friend or family, whose patience and charity is only so long. Those are the kinds of issues that some of the people in the key places really do understand. It is more than clearing the roads and getting electricity back in certain key areas, which is important and necessary. However, these are the other issues that worry me, worry me and worry me day and night.

Mr. Speaker, schools: Many people have taken their children off the Island to schools, and I am sure when the First Elected Member for Cayman Brac speaks, she will address the situation in Cayman Brac, which is a consequence of people evacuating Grand Cayman. We have to find out how quickly we can get the school system operational and how quickly we can get our children back into school. That is a major source of concern for parents for practical consequences which may not appear obvious to some people.

It is not just the fact that children ought not to lose a term or more of school, but what do parents do with school-age children? If parents have to go to work, leave their places unsecured (many people do not have helpers), what are they going to do with the children? It is a major issue. Those who can afford or some that can ill-afford it have taken their children off to school in Canada, the United States, Cayman Brac, Jamaica and to Barbados. We need answers to those questions and we need those answers swiftly. It is not a question of being impatient. These are hard questions we have to face.

Mr. Speaker, the Tourism industry has taken a huge hit and the reality is that it will be a long time before we have such a thing again because unless we get the Islands back to a state where people desire to come here, there will be no Tourism industry. All of the other ancillary industries that rely on the Tourism industry are also not going to be able to survive: restaurants, bars, rental cars, hotels—and the hotels are directly related to the Tourism industry—will face huge issues.

My question is: Where is the assistance? Where is the requisite help and expertise to get us through these matters? We all recognise that there is going to be (even if we did not have the huge outlays of cash which is going to be a necessary consequence of Ivan, even if we did not have to spend our own money to rebuild), there is going to be a shortfall as far as the budget is concerned. How will we get through these things? We are going to need outside assistance.

Sanitation has already become an issue. In some places including the area in which I live, the fly population is increasing daily. We are relying on the Department of Environmental Health to deal with all of these issues and I gather there is a plan.

My point is, Mr. Speaker, with the best will in the world, the greatest effort, all of which I concede are going to be given to this exercise, we do not have the local resources to adequately deal with this sanitation issue in this country. This is not a problem that we can wait for another month to resolve, we need people picking up all of the garbage now. I know trucks have been deployed and certain areas have been served, but I can tell you no garbage has been collected in my area for ten days. That is not a complaint about anything as far as the Department Environmental Health is concerned. It is that they do not have the resources necessary to carry out this job. We have to get machines, and get people in here to help get these things done swiftly before there is an outbreak of something or the other. We cannot rely, as some seem to think, on local resources to be able to do all that has to be done. These things cannot wait for a month to be done; these things need to be done now.

Mr. Speaker, I want to offer a few recommendations and suggestions about the rebuilding programme now. As far as rebuilding is concerned, we need to have the town to the point where the Government can function with a roof over their heads and an office to work from. We have to accept that those things have to be done. We have to find the quickest, possible route to repair the damage done to the roofs and structures of privately owned buildings, residential and commercial. Insofar as possible we have to seek to utilise methods that would do better in future hurricanes.

That means, in my view we are going to have to import additional expertise and labour temporarily. However, I hasten to say that we have to ensure that we make full use of the existing work force and that we give local contractors all the work they can possibly handle, if they are competitive in terms of price, speed and quality of workmanship.

Mr. Speaker, we are going to have to deal with some of the impediments, which are the result of some of the protective legislation we have in place. Some of the existing laws will delay the achievement, and will delay the objective of speedy rebuilding unless, the Governor uses his emergency powers, or the Governor in Cabinet uses ordinary statutory powers to shortcut the licensing and other requirements.

I have had a look at some of those pieces of legislation and the following laws contain exemption powers, which would enable a speedy way of getting the requisite licences and permits: The Immigration Law; The Local Companies Control Law; the Trade and Business Licensing Law; The National Pensions Law and The Customs Law. We are going to have to cut through all of the bureaucracy and in my view, vest in Cabinet the ability to quickly make the necessary grants to get people, companies in here to do what has to be done.

We are going to have to identify the workforce; establish a register for persons able and willing to do the reconstruction work; and make a note of their particular skills. We should use the radio to encourage registration and as soon as we get the written press up to their previous level of operation also include them.

We need to work, although I know some of this is already going on with the Contractors' Association, so that we can advise ourselves of what the intentions and capabilities of existing contractors are; we could also investigate technology for temporary solutions pending the availability of funds; and also look at the feasibility of higher construction codes. Although I hasten to say that given the immensity and strength of that hurricane, I believe that generally speaking, Cayman has stood up better than anywhere else would have, including South Florida.

We have got to expedite bank finance and insurance settlement, I know some efforts are being made on that but we have to really press those things on.

We should allow existing contractors to bring in temporary labour, on the basis of a single permission from the Governor in Cabinet, rather than individual work permits, charge a nominal fee and provide exemption from the Pensions Law, so that there is less burden on employers.

I bear in mind, Mr. Speaker, that of course you have to ensure that these people who come in to work also have adequate housing and food. The contractor would be required to ensure to the satisfaction of the Government that those were available. I would suggest a maximum of ninety days for these permits and of course, whatever other conditions are deemed necessary to suit the particular cases.

Mr. Speaker, it might well be that we have to import foreign contractors to do some of these jobs and I would not be adverse to that as long as we have satisfied ourselves that we do not have the adequate resources or expertise here to get it done. By that I mean our local contractors will be stretched beyond their limits to be able to deal with the tremendous amount of reconstructing that is going to be necessary in the immediate term.

Once we have determined that we need them, for the time being we need to do away with the provisions of the LCCL and the Trade and Business Licensing Law and ensure that these people are able to get the necessary permissions swiftly. We need to expedite customs clearance, and I think in some of the meetings we have agreed to waive duty on materials and equipment required for the Ivan reconstruction effort.

Mr. Speaker, I think the last point I want to deal with is to address concerns that have been raised with me about price gouging. Government must do everything it possibly can to discourage price gouging and Mr. Speaker, if notwithstanding public statements by the Government about its disapproval of merchants increasing prices on goods, to take advantage of the shortage in supply and the need for people to have these goods, then this Legislative Assembly ought to pass the necessary legislation to ensure that that does not happen.

I have had reports of certain goods being marked up significantly since the passage of Hurricane Ivan, notwithstanding the fact that no new goods and supplies had arrived since then. At this point I have not confirmed these reports, therefore I will not identify what the goods are, for fear that what I may say may not be true but it perhaps may cause people to think it is from a particular store. The last thing I wish to do is to malign any merchant or anyone for that matter.

There are concerns in the community about certain merchants taking advantage of the situation and unduly increasing the prices on certain goods. I do know that has occurred, because of a personal experience before the hurricane, in relation to the sale of plywood. That one I am not asking about, I had that personal experience. The same plywood which had been sold for $25 per sheet the day before, I bought for $32.50. However, I really do believe that a strong statement must be made about the disapproval by the Government, and this Legislative Assembly, of those sorts of practices and the willingness of this Honourable House to pass the necessary legislation to criminalise that sort of behaviour in the aftermath of the greatest disaster these Islands have ever suffered.

I believe that I have covered just about all of the areas I wanted to address on this occasion. I just wish to say as I close that this experience has brought us closer together as a nation, a people and as legislators in this Honourable House. While I go through my constituency each day, as I am sure all other Honourable Members of this House do, I never cease to be amazed at the resilience of our people; of the strength of character, will and the indomitable spirit of our people. These are times of great adversity; there is no question about it.

People are suffering great deprivation and still they have banded together, they have bonded together, they are helping each other, helping themselves, they are looking to us for leadership, direction and guidance. We as Elected Members must not allow anyone, or any institution, to wrest or seek to wrest our responsibility away from us to ensure that our people have whatever is available to them, particularly in these difficult times. It is to us the people look and rightfully they should. We must be in a position to be able to say to them what is going to happen, when it is going to happen. We must be in a position to ensure that the resources, though limited, are available to all of our people.

When the state of emergency expires, as I expect it will on Monday, the elected Government will resume the helm of this country and responsibility for the allocation and distribution of resources. I expect that as the Second Elected Member for George Town, to be fully involved in matters involving my constituency in particular. I pledge my support and assistance, and willingness to offer my views and recommendations to the broader recovery programme as well.

In particular, at this point I am gravely concerned about my constituency the district of George Town. I do believe that I can rely on the good judgment of the Cabinet to ensure that both myself and the Leader of the Opposition, the First Elected Member of George Town, will be consulted on a regular basis in relation to matters that affect the district of George Town and that we will be involved intimately in whatever is done in relation to George Town, whether it be the distribution of supplies, the rehabilitation of private homes and businesses, reconstruction of roads, whatever is happening in relation to George Town. As I said, I do believe we can rely on the good judgment of the Cabinet to ensure our continued involvement there. My colleagues from the other districts, will I am sure when they rise to speak, indicate their desire to be so involved in their districts.

This is a time for national unity, it is a common purpose, a common cause, and despite the political differences which we have, all of us are here I believe because of a sense of duty, responsibility and a willingness to represent the people of this country and to lead the people of this country. That calling, Mr. Speaker, becomes even more honourable in times of adversity. It is easy to be in charge when all is going well. The true test is those that can rise to the occasion in times like these. I stand ready, as I am sure do my colleagues on this side, to do our part in these tough times; to do our part in rebuilding these beloved Islands we call home, the Cayman Islands.

I thank you, Sir.

The Speaker: Does any other Member wish to speak?

The Honourable Minister for Education.

Hon. Roy Boddan: Mr. Speaker, I rise to make my contribution to the debate on this Bill, a Bill for a law to amend the Police Law (1995 Revision) for the purpose of ensuring the maintenance of public order and public safety and for incidental and connected purposes.

This is one time when I can say, Mr. Speaker, that I envy my colleagues who are assembled here under these extraordinary circumstances because, Mr. Speaker, when Hurricane Ivan struck I was in Geneva on official business. So, I cannot claim to be like my colleagues, a veteran survivor. However, I can assure you that I did not take any comfort in the fact that I was thousands of miles away out of the destructive path of Ivan, because I was only physically in Geneva: mentally and spiritually I was in the Cayman Islands. It was here that my family, friends and colleagues were and I had great fear and trepidation because following the hurricane, I understood, realised and expected that if that hurricane had struck—and I am still thankful for the miracle—that there would not have been much left of the Cayman Islands.

Therefore, I have a special commendation and respect for those of my colleagues who were here and lived through what must have been a most frightening experience. You too, Mr. Speaker, because it seems to me, as I arrived a few days after that there was no one in the Cayman Islands unspared and untouched by the destructiveness and devastation.

So, I should begin by thanking God and by commending the people of the Cayman Islands for standing so courageously and for those members of the National Hurricane Committee who laboured before and indeed are still labouring, to bring some semblance of order, comfort and hope back into our lives.

Mr. Speaker, we are assembled here under most extraordinary circumstances, because for the first time since World War II, the Cayman Islands has been placed under curfew, and the Governor for the first time in recent history has invoked Emergency Powers Regulations 2004. This law covered under the Emergency Powers Law (1997 Revision), allows the Governor to suspend the Cabinet and to rule without the advice of his constitutionally appointed Ministers. Such an action also bypasses the democratically elected Legislative Assembly and allows the Governor to rule as he sees fit.

Quite conceivably, this state of emergency must concern anyone with a sense of democracy and a sense of what an elected legislature conveys. All of the Members are concerned with the maintenance of law and order in the country and with the maintenance of standards of conduct as we move about trying to reconstruct our lives in the way in which we went about them prior to Ivan striking on 12 and 13 September.

However, we are also concerned with the suspension of democracy and the suspension of rule, laws and regulations, as we have come to expect. So, quite naturally we are here to debate, to discuss, to discourse returning to normality and returning to life as we knew it before, giving the Elected Members of the Legislative Assembly and the Cabinet, their responsibility. We as Elected Members are particularly concerned with our ability, as was articulated by my colleague the Second Elected Member from George Town, for meeting the needs, servicing and having the access to those things which would enable our constituents to live under a semblance of normality and to restore to them the hope that is so critically needed in these kinds of times.

So, we have come to debate this law to amend the Police Law, to enable a curfew to continue so that we may be assured that no one is in a position to take advantage of the unfortunate and devastating situation in which we find ourselves. Mr. Speaker, during the course of my articulating the necessity and of outlining my support for this Bill, I will touch on a number of things. I have to say that not surprisingly, I wish to associate myself with many things so ably articulated by the last speaker, the Second Elected Member from George Town. These are times, not for political partisanship, but for a time of unity, a time for articulating our common concern as we are stirred by the bond that binds us together in this time of adversity and challenge.

I was particularly heartened by that Honourable Member's concern with how we develop. He was concerned that we must not develop now, or seek to restructure, leaving out those of our constituents who need shelter, regular access to food and other necessities. It would enable them, as we move forward, to live in dignity and to live with conveniences that are as necessary as the conveniences of those who labour in the financial sector.

The Cayman Islands have never witnessed devastation of this magnitude and I hope we will not have to witness that again. I have always said, Mr. Speaker, that Cayman is a frontier society, so it should not come as any great surprise that we would have this kind of challenge in the existence of the Cayman Islands as a society. What we need to do now is to find a way to rise to this challenge, so that we can develop stronger bonds, a more cohesive society, and a more understanding and deeper appreciation of our fellow men. Whether it be those of us who are established, as I consider myself, or whether it be those persons who have come of a more recent time and have not reached a point to where they can be described or classed "as established as yet".

As I traversed Grand Cayman, I was appalled and taken back, humbled by the magnitude of destruction. I particularly single out the constituency of Bodden Town which I represent, and then that of East End. The geography, and by inference the demography, of these communities have changed and are bound to change. Perhaps it would be wise to consider, before any rebuilding takes place, resurveying these constituencies to ascertain what, if any, physical changes have taken place and to ensure that the old established boundaries are still relevant and appropriate. Particularly, Mr. Speaker, on the seaside of these districts, significant physical changes have taken place. It would not be the most far fetched idea, as to suggest that literally, physical boundaries have been significantly altered. I would seriously advocate that as early as is convenient, some attempt be made to resurvey, to ascertain that properties, its size and boundaries as we knew existed pre-Ivan, are very relevant and appropriate before any rebuilding.

The times call for a unity of effort. We are entering the rebuilding phase now and it is time for those persons, who best know what is needed to come forward. Those persons, beginning with Honourable Members of this Honourable Legislative Assembly,

Other organisations and bodies, particularly the National Hurricane Committee, have done well, and have made it possible for us to come this far without an apparent loss of life. Now is the time for the leaders of the country, those leaders elected by the people themselves, to take over the reins and to say as legislators and elected Ministers of Cabinet what must take place from here on in, what must be priority. Of course, Mr. Speaker, we are here to debate what we consider an important priority; the maintenance of law and order. Beyond that, also how must we prioritise development in terms of a regular and constant supply of food, water, electricity and how we must dictate the rebuilding of the communities in terms of making assessments as to which is the worst and prioritising.

It is now necessary to think about moving our people out of the public shelters back into the domains of their own houses and surroundings. Mr. Speaker, sociologists and psychologists tell us that people who are housed in these kinds of communal circumstances for a long time, begin to adopt a certain kind of psyche and personality which does not bode well and which does not easily enable them then to move into surroundings where they can re-establish their independence and their own identity.

I have heard my colleague, the Second Elected Member from George Town, speak about schools. I am going to say what I believe needs to be done. However, before I say that, let me assure him that as soon as the authority reverts back into the hands of the Elected Cabinet Ministers, I am prepared to, after discussing with my Cabinet and outlining what I think the priorities and the way forward should be, consult with all Elected Members of the Legislative Assembly as far as possible, educational and school developments as I see it so that each district and area representative can have his or her input into what is going on. What should be the policy with regards to the development of education and the placement of our children back into schools?

Mr. Speaker, we must move forward in a united way because I would suspect we will have to reorder some of our budgeted priorities. In this regard it will be necessary to have the support of all elected Members to enable us to understand this to sell it to the wider constituency and society. Simultaneously, with that, we have to understand that we cannot concentrate exclusively on getting the business community going without ensuring that the people who work in the industry [Applause] are comfortably housed and have transport to and from work, that they can be reasonably assured that their dependents are taken care of. I caution against any restructuring that does not give account for this and I can say unequivocally that I will not be a part of any reorganisation or redevelopment of this society that focuses exclusively on getting the business community up without taking care of the social and human needs of the populous at large.

[Inaudible crosstalk]

Hon. Roy Borden: Mr. Speaker, we are appreciative of those countries, jurisdictions, agencies and individuals which came forward with assistance and are still supporting us morally, spiritually and literally with and offers of, their resources.

It is now time for the Elected Legislature and Elected Cabinet Ministers to begin to reorder the development of this society and jurisdiction, particularly of Grand Cayman. I see a need now for less talk and more action. I see a need for less meetings in boardrooms in corporate offices and more meetings in the Cabinet office and the headquarters of the Government, with the Elected Members of the Legislative Assembly huddled in consultation with the Cabinet. I see a need for less agendas and more action. I see a need for the priorities from here on forward to be set by those persons constituted and entrusted by the society to so do, namely the Elected Cabinet Ministers with the Legislative Assembly Members throwing their support.

Mr. Speaker, I am watching closely to see that there is only one agenda mounted, and that agenda is a development policy and a reorganisation and a restructuring policy that benefits all and sundry. Not just one or two sectors, or one or two sets of individuals, but all and sundry, simultaneously, equally—that is, equally according to the development of the whole of Grand Cayman. I can say from what I have experienced that we have done well. However, as we drive, meet and speak with people now we can understand there is a need to move to the next level.

I want to commend the forces of law and order as I understand they have been working under the most trying of circumstances, just like I wish to record my concern and disappointment that little else but platitudes and moral support have been forth coming from a certain quarter. Mr. Speaker, I have to say that I am not totally surprised because anyone who knows me would know that my expectations from that quarter are low indeed. It is true I am not, have never been, nor will ever be, a good colonialist. It does not surprise me that all we have is the little we received from them that their 'thoughts were with us'. So too were the thoughts of a billion Chinese.

We, the Caymanian people, will have to labour to rebuild our society and with the help of God, we shall so do. That is why, like other Members of the Legislative Assembly and the elected Cabinet, we realise that for the time being we are going to have to put aside political differences and personal differences, and as the old maritime phrase goes "put our shoulders to the wheel". Perhaps there are some who would believe that we are going to stay down. However, let me assure them like the phoenix we will arise from these ashes and with the help of God ensure that our financial services and tourism sector is once again up.

Mr. Speaker, now to the import of this Bill: It is necessary for the curfew to continue because as is realised we do not have full electricity restored. I am reminded that a fundamental source of security is light. There are communities, only a pocket in George Town now, which have what could be considered a full source of electricity. In the outlying areas indeed even in outlying parts of George Town, there is still no electricity. It is necessary to regulate the movements of people so that after certain hours only authorised persons have full freedom of movement. We know that there are those who are opportunistic and would avail themselves of the cover of darkness, and also in the absence of law-abiding and lawful persons, help themselves to whatever is available.

I was appalled yesterday as I visited the Constituency Office in Bodden Town in the commercial complex in which it is situated, to learn from some of the business people who share that complex, that there were elements who smashed the glass and looted some of the stores. I understand that the business lady who occupied the store at the very front of the building, close to the road, had to take her goods out of the building and abandon the premises because she had been visited by looters. I was saddened and dismayed because this is the main street in the Bodden Town community.

So, if that is happening there, I can imagine what would happen in more isolated areas. It is therefore necessary for the forces of law and for the extension of the curfew. I think it is only right and fitting for those persons found with no authority breaking this curfew, to be dealt with to the full letter of the Law.

I am happy, Mr. Speaker, that we can so regulate it so that the curfew and the state of emergency do not have to exist any longer than what we deem is possible. The Bill before us allows us that opportunity and that flexibility. I would hope that when the Bill is passed and assented to, that if there are unruly elements that they would understand the significance of what we are doing and the message we are sending.

Now, I will move on to more general matters.

The Speaker: Honourable Members, I want you to know that we are having a little difficulty in having the lunch sorted out, but it should be here within a few minutes. So, please continue to be patient, these are not normal circumstances. It is now 3.20 pm and as soon as it is here, I will take the luncheon suspension.

Honourable Minister of Education, please continue.

Hon. Roy Boddén: Mr. Speaker, the only problem with that is that the longer I go, the more hungry I become and a hungry man is not the most logical of thinkers.

Anyway, Mr. Speaker, I want to address what I would consider the most important matter first, since it is a matter for which I have ministerial responsibility.

It seems to me that before we can sensibly rebuild, we must take stock and come to some decision in our rebuilding and restructuring. In so doing, I would hope that after we have arrived at that, we can then make assessments to see what, if any, labour or expertise we will need to bring in from outside. I was listening to the Second Elected Member from George Town, and I have to agree with him. Indeed, I stated yesterday that one of the first things I would like to do is to direct the Employment Services Department to cause a survey to be made to ascertain what labour we have available, district by district in categories so that we can inform ourselves of what persons we have available locally to be employed in the rebuilding and restructuring.

I believe out of this adversity can come many benefits and many good things to our people. I believe that those persons in the communities should be employed as far as possible in the rebuilding of their various communities. I certainly would not agree to any large scale import of labour without first being assured that such is not available locally at this time.

So, I would like to see [this happen] as early as is reasonably possible [through] the Director of Employment Services. It would be his decision whether he does so in tandem with the Chamber of Commerce or with any other body or non-governmental organisation which is equipped to do so and would be something to which I would not object. I think this is necessary, sound and sensible and I certainly would encourage it because in this redevelopment Caymanian people must benefit. We must not make the mistake we made in the past when throwing the immigration gates wide open to accumulate persons that we will later not be able to accommodate, or not be able to get rid of as will be necessary.

Mr. Speaker, I took the time to personally visit each of the Government schools on Grand Cayman and made notes of the damage as far as I could ascertain. It is safe to say that the only school which was untouched by Hurricane Ivan was the Prospect Primary School, which was (as you would know, Mr. Speaker) most recently handed over and also served as a hurricane shelter. That school is still in excellent shape. All other government schools, it is safe to say, from my eye (I hasten to admit), suffered damage from extreme to minimal. That is, they suffered damage in ways that will need weeks of repairing, or, at a minimum one week's repair.

I know that it is a concern for our people because after they have settled themselves they must be enquiring as to what is going to happen to the children. It is my understanding that many children have relocated to Cayman Brac and most of them have been accommodated. I commend the school authorities in the Brac but the schools there cannot absorb all the children of Grand Cayman who are going to need to be accommodated.

Mr. Speaker, as you would know, I do not yet have the authority to make decisions regarding education. Until the Governor removes the state of emergency, my authority and position does not hold sway. However, I can assure you that when the situation reverts back to normality and I again, as Minister of Education, have the authority, I have some ideas and solutions which I am going to discuss with my Cabinet colleagues and later with Members of the Legislative Assembly, as to how we can get education back on track.

I am concerned that Ivan may have set us back some significant amount because we have students who are going into exams next year. We will not have the facilities up and ready to accommodate all of the students in the Government system, to the point at which they were accommodated prior to Ivan. We were just setting priorities and said we were going to commence the building of a new high school in Frank Sound, simultaneously with a primary school in West Bay.

Concomitant with all of this Mr. Speaker is the responsibility we have in helping the private schools. As I understand it, Triple C School has been damaged to such an extent that there will be no classes held there for the balance of this year. Damage has also been done to Cayman Prep and High School, and the St. Ignatius and Baptist schools. As Minister, I cannot say that I know of any approach made by these private schools to the Government yet. However, it would not surprise me if they have.

So, while we have responsibility for government schools first and foremost, there is a sense in which we have a moral responsibility to help the schools in the private sector which have come to rely upon a certain amount of government support. I say all this to say, Mr. Speaker, that the position of the Government schools is compounded by what will be this expectation. If we do not quickly come to some acceptable solution we shall lose the advantage that we had in our education system.

I can say, however, that all temporary classrooms have held up reasonably well. We may have in the interim to consider the establishment of more temporary classrooms until we can come to some decision with regards to prioritising our permanent physical development in school buildings. I have to say from a list I received yesterday from the Government education establishment headquarters, over at the schools' inspectorate, that almost every teacher in the Government system has been affected. Some of them have been left homeless, lost all their possessions and some of these teachers were newly recruited teachers.

So, in that regard, it is not only that we have suffered devastation in the physical facilities but our personnel. I gave this list to the Honourable Leader of Government Business with how the teachers were affected, their contact numbers and with that went a plea from me for the rendering of any assistance to these teachers that was available. When I went over to the schools' inspectorate yesterday, there was great concern on the part of the Permanent Secretary and some other officials about the urgency to help these teachers. Mr. Speaker, teachers are like anyone else in these kinds of circumstances and conditions. Nor did we wish it to reach the point where they would begin to become forlorn and lose hope that they would be assisted in their time of need. I reiterate that apart from the restoration of the physical facilities, we also have to ensure that our teachers are reasonably accommodated.

I spoke with the principal of the John Gray High School a few days ago and I went to visit that site myself. That site is really, physically, not the strongest of facilities and I fear for the worst in terms of it being in any position to be usable soon. This means that we must make some decisions of exigency. If we are unable to operate in any reasonable standard, the school that produces our cohorts who move on to college and university, I fear that we are going to have a breakdown and a setback in our system. This is what I mean when I say that Ivan may have set us back significantly in terms of our educational development. So, we shall have to huddle to see how we can quickly come up to the maintenance of some semblance of continuity as far as our high school students are concerned.

I then visited the George Town Primary site, which we had most recently earmarked for physical redevelopment. Mr. Speaker, it took my heart out because as bad as it is, if it can be believable, trust me, it is worse. I do not know how we are going to any time soon restore any semblance of normality up there. Fortunately for us, when the Prospect School is able to revert to its exclusive use as a school, we may have to move even more of the children from the George Town Primary. I said "we may"—emphasis on "may"—because I have not discussed it yet with the experts. Even what was not earmarked for immediate restructuring at that school has been damaged.

That brings me back to the point that it is a critical necessity that as soon as is humanly possible, we move the people out of the schools, which are now being used as hurricane shelters. In the case of North Side, "out" may be "out of the North Side Community Centre", as this may have to be used as a school so that we have these spaces available.

It strikes me that we may have to operate our schools on a shift system, if we are in the interim to accommodate all of our students. This is not really strange in some jurisdictions, although it would be strange in the Cayman Islands. It would seem to me to be a decision of exigency, which we may have to consider. That is, allowing a certain number of students to go to school in the morning and then another set to go in the afternoon. It would be interesting to find out how acceptable this would be and this is one of the things that I intend to discuss with my colleagues and fellow Members of the Legislative Assembly.

I believe that in the case of George Town, it may be something we have to consider. Quite frankly, I do not believe that the Red Bay School, what is left of the George Town Primary School and the new school in Prospect, can comfortably accommodate the cohorts of students who would be primary school age in George Town.

We also have the cohorts of Triple C, that we will have to accommodate and we are going to have to think of utilising the teachers as best we can. Some teachers may have left the jurisdiction, I am not certain because I have not received any report from the Chief Education Officer, however it would not be far fetched to expect that some would have left. There is also the question of whether those who have left will be returning and returning to what. These are things that we are going to need to work out in the immediate interim, the sooner rather than later.

I can offer a ray of hope to the parents. I spoke yesterday with the Permanent Secretary, and we agreed that we are going to get the educational establishment up and running and children accommodated by 30 October. By my reckoning, that gives us from five to six weeks so we shall have to be working diligently. It cannot be expected that parents of school age can perform at their regular jobs if there is uncertainty as to the accommodation of their children and since everyone in the Cayman Islands at this time is education conscious, it is incumbent upon us to see that we have satisfactory arrangements made.

So, I reiterate we have given ourselves until 30 October to have some acceptable format where we can accommodate the students in our system, from the premise that we will give priority to exam level students first. However, it is our objective to ultimately accommodate and incorporate all of the cohorts of students.

Mr. Speaker, I want to speak a little about district matters now. Valiant efforts have been made by many persons in the district which I represent, to get things functioning. I want to say that there has never been at any time, since I have been a Member representing the constituency of Bodden Town, that there have been differences between the elected Members. I want to say that even more than before, at this time, that the three Members, in addition to members of their respected political support committees, family members and well wishers have banded together and worked together to ensure that food supplies, water and other necessities were dispensed without fear, favour, or political partisanship to members at residences of Bodden Town. MLA Anthony Eden, my colleague the Honourable Gilbert McLean, and myself, with well wishers, supporters, family members, and friends, worked as best we could.

[Inaudible interjection]

Hon. Roy Bodden: Well, it is true, that was not only in Bodden Town, but I am speaking of Bodden Town.

[Inaudible comments]

Hon. Roy Bodden: It is not over yet and that is true.

Mr. Speaker, it was heartening to see how much was done by so many diligent persons in so short a time, sometimes in rain. Could more be done? Of course, more could be done. Are there people who are unsatisfied? Of course, there are, but more could not be done by us and those who were supporting us and we made and are still making— even as I speak there are people carrying on the dispensation and help and support.

It made us also aware though that there are areas which need to be addressed because it appeared that the conditions of our residents brought sometimes a testiness that perhaps we had not been so keenly aware of. This brings me, Mr. Speaker, to mention again, as I visited the building in which our MLA Office in Bodden Town is housed, about some complaints which were experienced by persons outside the shelter and which are simultaneous and similar to complaints which I heard from persons inside the shelter. Under these circumstances anything that can go wrong will go wrong.

The Speaker: Honourable Minister, is this a convenient time for you to take a break?

Hon. Roy Bodden: Mr. Speaker, this is a most convenient time because my breakfast this morning was a little dry cereal, a peach and a glass of water. Although I am of the age that I have seen lean times in the Cayman Islands, I do not want to test myself. Thank you, Sir.

The Speaker: Honourable Members, I wish to ask you to take one hour for lunch. It is now 3.02 pm and if you could be back here by 4 o' clock. Remember, we are trying to finish the debates today so it is quite possible we may have to go beyond 4.30. It is really left in your hands.

Thank you Honourable Members. We will take the luncheon break at this time.

Proceedings suspended at 3.02 pm

Proceedings resumed at 4.30 pm

The Speaker: Please be seated.

The Honourable Minister for Education continuing.

Hon. Roy Bodden: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I promise you as Henry VIII promised each of his wives, "I shall not keep you long."

Mr. Speaker, I wish to say that I have come to the point, where having regard for time and the urgencies of yourself and Honourable Members, I want to wind up by focusing on lessons to be learnt out of this experience. I am happy to say that this experience has brought us as a community much closer together, for Ivan has spared no one. As I move about there are persons whom I have encountered on previous occasions who had no time even for the briefest of salutation and expression or regard, now extending a hand and a hug and proposing brotherly love. I can only hope that it continues long after the memories of Ivan have faded.

Mr. Speaker, there are other lessons too for us to learn with regard to the development of this country—its physical development. I hope that we take cognisance now of the opportunity to improve our building structures, learn where to build, where not to build, what to build and what not to build. However, the greatest lesson of all that I think we have to learn is that all of us in these Cayman Islands form interdependent entities. We have, as we move about our social and working lives, always to give respect and cognisance to our fellow citizens.

Mr. Speaker, finally, this, with regards to social control: Many years ago it was proposed in this Legislative Assembly by me and by at least one other Member that I can recall, a motion calling for the establishment of a national identification system. If there is any lesson that I have learnt from the experience with Ivan, is that it is necessary for us sometime in the near future to have established in this society a system of national identification where every Caymanian citizen has a national identification card.

Mr. Speaker, we are talking about a curfew. It makes it easy for social control; it makes it easy for dispensing all of the kind of assistance that we need to dispense now. I have seen on occasions, far too numerous to elaborate now, how if we had such a facility in place it would make it easy when our people are queued up. In every society under these circumstances certain people must come first. I hope that the powers that be can understand that is necessary and I would hope that either a bill or a motion comes to this Legislative Assembly establishing such.

In conclusion, we cannot be cynical. Those of us who are Caymanians have always leaned on our closeness to the Almighty. I believe, Mr. Speaker, that that closeness continues. We will build back the Cayman Islands. I cannot refrain, however, from remarking that Caymanians are alarmed that some people on whom they bestowed privileges, saw fit to desert us. I hope, Mr. Speaker, that a record has been kept of those persons who would use our hospitality for convenience and that when they attempt to return there could be some stark reminder of the unwelcome that awaits them as they try to move back into the communities which they left.

The Cayman Islands were not built by cowards, nor were they built by people who would use the kindness, generosity and hospitableness of the people for convenience and for advantage, but were built by people who were bound by sincerity and a camaraderie which is still in the veins of their progeny. Mr. Speaker, I know some of them and they cannot get my respect again.

By God's will we shall continue to thrive after Ivan and we will rebuild the Cayman Islands to the status which we held pre-Ivan. I implore my colleagues in the Legislative Assembly to continue on the path we have continued on. Later there will be time for separation, for distinction and for politics. However, right now the immediacy of the moment calls for a working togetherness to build the Cayman Islands and then of that we can all and shall all be proud.

Thank you.

The Speaker: Honourable Members, it was the intention that we would complete the business on the Order Paper today, however, this is not possible, especially due to the very unsafe driving conditions on the roads and in particular staff and Members of the House who live in East End, Queens Highway and that area. It is very unsafe driving there late in the evening. So, at this time I propose to call on the Honourable Leader of Government Business to move the adjournment.

ADJOURNMENT

Hon. W. McKeever Bush: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I move the adjournment of this House until 10 o'clock tomorrow morning, Sir.

The Speaker: The question is that this Honourable House do now adjourn until 10 am tomorrow, Thursday, 23 September. Those in favour please say Aye. Those against, No.

Ayes.

The Speaker: The Ayes have it. This Honourable House stands adjourned until 10 am tomorrow.

At 4.35 pm the House stood adjourned until 10 am Thursday, 23 September 2004.

OFFICIAL HANSARD REPORT
THURSDAY
23 SEPTEMBER 2004
12.37 PM
Third Sitting

PRAYERS

Capt. A. Eugene Ebanks: Let us pray.

Almighty God, from whom all wisdom and power are derived: We beseech Thee so to direct and prosper the deliberations of the Legislative Assembly now assembled, that all things may be ordered upon the best and surest foundations for the glory of Thy Name and for the safety, honour and welfare of the people of these Islands.

Bless our Sovereign Lady, Queen Elizabeth II; Philip, Duke of Edinburgh; Charles, Prince of Wales; and all the Royal Family. Give grace to all who exercise authority in our Commonwealth, that peace and happiness, truth and justice, religion and piety may be established among us. Especially we pray for the Governor of our Islands, the Speaker of the Legislative Assembly, Official Members and Ministers of Cabinet and Members of the Legislative Assembly, that we may be enabled faithfully to perform the responsible duties of our high office. All this we ask for Thy great Name's sake.

Let us say The Lord's Prayer together: Our Father, who art in Heaven, Hallowed be Thy Name. Thy Kingdom come, Thy will be done on earth as it is in Heaven. Give us this day our daily bread, and forgive us our trespasses, as we forgive those who trespass against us. Lead us not into temptation, but deliver us from evil. For Thine is the Kingdom, the power and the glory, forever and ever. Amen.

The Lord bless us and keep us. The Lord make His face shine upon us and be gracious unto us. The Lord lift up the light of His countenance upon us and give us peace, now and always. Amen.

Proceedings resumed at 12.40 pm

The Speaker: Please be seated. Proceedings are resumed. Item number 2 on today's Order Paper, Reading by the Speaker of Messages and Announcements.

READING BY THE HONOURABLE
SPEAKER OF MESSAGES
AND ANNOUNCEMENTS

Apologies

The Speaker: I have received apologies for absence from the Honourable First Official Member.

STATEMENTS BY MEMBERS OF GOVERNMENT

The Speaker: I have received no statements by Ministers or Members of the Cabinet.

GOVERNMENT BUSINESS

BILLS

SECOND READING

The Police (Amendment) Bill, 2004

(Continuation of debate thereon)

The Speaker: Does any Member wish to speak?
The Third Elected Member for Bodden Town.

Mr. Anthony S. Eden: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I rise to offer my support to this proposed legislation before this Honourable House. I would like to say how sad it is for these Islands, the traumatic experience that we have all gone through. However, as I go from one area of the Island to another, it gives me a great deal of satisfaction to see the unity this has brought to us. The way we have worked, crossing all party lines: thank goodness no politics have been brought into this. This has truly brought out the best in Caymanians and residents.

Before I touch on a few areas on my district, I would like to comment on the Bill to amend The Police Law, I would ask the Honourable Second Official Member to give consideration to a small amendment in 29(c)(1), if permissible and I do know that there are certain limitations and restrictions. I will read 29(c)(1), "A person who contravenes section 9(a) is guilty of an offence and liable on summary conviction to a fine of $1000 to imprisonment of six months." The reason I am saying this, is because of some of the things I have seen and heard on the Island, I would add here "and where relevant, be deported."

I have been hearing and witnessing some horror stories in our district. We need to put our feet down and stop pussyfooting. Too many people are in need and I do know that, generally for deportation to take place, the sentence has to be over twelve months. However, these are difficult times and we need to stand up. Too many people are suffering and others are taking this frivolously; they are not dealing seriously. We need to help each other and stop taking advantage of the situation.

My specific concern now is in the area of Bodden Town. What bothers me a lot is the disposal of garbage. It is now going into two weeks since I have seen the trucks in Bodden Town, Savannah, Breakers and Lower Valley and I have been made to understand that garbage in certain areas in George Town and other districts has been picked up twice, since the hurricane. There are mounds and mounds of garbage and I am concerned. We know what could happen; rodents can cause diseases. I remember a few years ago one of my good friends developed leptospirosis and this spread through the droppings of rats in the water. There are many rats around this Island at this time and we have to be extremely careful. It is a disease that affects the liver and if not caught in time with the proper medication, it can be fatal. I am begging the sources that can deal with this to do so.

My other concern is that in Gun Square and Cumber Avenue there is still a significant amount of standing water. The mosquitoes there are in hoards. A few years ago we had to treat the water with a bit of diesel at times. I would urge the powers that be to look into this problem as soon as possible and wherever we see standing water to have it treated as soon as possible.

As I continue into Bodden Town, I remember last Monday or Tuesday my other two colleagues the Honourable Minister of Health and Minister of Education. It pained me in the rain when packing bags, preparing supplies for distribution the next morning, when the people distributing went back, the bleach and liquid detergent and many of the bags had disappeared. No one seemed to be accountable for that. Mr. Speaker, this cannot be tolerated. It seems that those who already had were getting more. We need to show compassion and share with those who really need help especially the older people and those bound to their houses.

Yesterday my colleague, the Second Elected Member from George Town, touched on price-gouging and I am hoping that as soon as this House has the opportunity to reconvene and get going and get over this crisis, that proper legislation is brought to deal with this. I can tell you that we personally experienced going into the stores, looking for a submersible pump and on the shelf it was $60 and when we went to check out it was $85. We went back to check, it was $60 yet people were trying to charge $85. This is intolerable, Mr. Speaker. For whatever reason when people are most vulnerable we cannot allow some of these merchants to get away with it because what else can we do but pay what they ask.

I am pleading and hoping that as soon as we can get this legislation dealt with, it will give the power back to the Ministers, to start cleaning up especially on Spotts straight where Mariners Cove and Ocean Club used to be on the other side of the road. It would be such a relief on the human psyche to just see some of that debris moved, and as my other two colleagues spoke, this is of the magnitude that I firmly believe we cannot deal with locally.

We must look at bringing in equipment quickly like grab trucks that can stay in the road and reach over in these areas; because debris is on both sides of the road as far as you can see into the bushes and it will expedite getting this removed. It is incredible what this will mean to our people to just see something like that. We met with Caribbean Utilities a short while ago and they have given us some positive feelings but it is a long struggle ahead and we can deal with it. However, we must accept that we need outside help and it must not come in letters sympathising with us, as seen coming from the Mother Country.

[Applause]

Mr. Anthony S. Eden: There are a number of us sitting here, and I will cast your memories back to when we had 1200 refugees pouring into this Island. I will never forget that as long as we live. Our dear Mother Country sent us a few tents. We remember when we came to Finance Committee and everyone raised holy hell about having to appropriate funds for something of this magnitude and they gave us some tents. That is not good enough. As I said then and I will say now, if my dear deceased Mother had treated me the way the Mother Country is treating these Islands, I would never have survived.

[Applause]

Mr. Anthony S. Eden: Mr. Speaker, these are trying times, however I know and see the resolution of the Members in this House, those who have worked so hard, the Hurricane Committee, the Reconstruction Committee, Ministers the MLAs, and we have that responsibility. I would like to personally thank all of those ... and the names are numerous but I will call a handful of names of those we saw in the district.

While we as MLAs are in here trying to arrange for things and distribution, a number of people are out there day and night. I will call out a few names and the others will please forgive me; Mark Scotland, Crosby, Jerry, Carter, Cindy, Carolyn, Steve McField, Kendall, Ossie, Chuckie, Charlie and Tony Powell, special thanks to Cayman Imports and Progressive Distributors for all the help they have sent into our district, Gilbert, Roy, Woods Furniture, Public Works for transportation and as I am gently reminded, my dear wife, who as many of you know is not well. However, she has made me proud. She is out there right now and up to last night we were down in Newlands and different areas and I understand how some of our constituents feel when we are not there personally delivering.

However, as legislators, we have to make the arrangements for distribution and the provision of these supplies and cannot visit the households personally, seven or 8000 or more in Bodden Town. It is our intention that as time progresses, we will literally be visiting every house, making assessments and finding out what is needed. In closing, I would like to urge, beg and plead to please do not forget the three Eastern districts. I know this will not happen and as I see the Minister of Tourism enter, we need to help him in providing whatever assistance necessary to get this Island cleared up. As I said specifically earlier on, the Spotts straight, I do not have to tell anyone that the tourists will not come here and look at this debris, we must get it cleaned up.

Finally, in closing, I would like to thank God for all the mercies he has placed upon us. Let us encourage our people to turn around our sometimes evil and wicked ways. We must refocus and realise that seeking the pleasures of this world is not everything. It is time ... as we remember, and all of us here of age, remember the respect we had for the Lord, how He has spared us so many times as I reflect back to hurricane Gilbert, Mitch, recently Charley; that went between Grand Cayman and Little Cayman is beyond my comprehension.

I heard certain explanations from meteorologists but I am not convinced that that was exactly what it was. However, we have an opportunity to get back to the days that made the Cayman Islands the most successful small island country in the world. It can only be done through the respect and love we have for our Heavenly Father. He is the one that will provide for us and as we go forward I urge us all to work together and we will rebuild our beloved Cayman Islands. May God bless us all.

The Speaker: The Elected Member for East End.

Mr. V. Arden McLean: I too rise to give support to the Bill to amend The Police Law, to ensure the maintenance of public law and public safety. Similar to previous speakers, I will not dwell too much on that Bill and speak in general terms on the devastation that has been visited upon us in this country. First, let me give thanks to God for sparing us, that is, the loss of life was minimal in such a devastating storm.

Mr. Speaker, I do not believe any of us could imagine the devastation this country experienced as a result of Hurricane Ivan. Certainly, we were not prepared for such and to this day we struggle to try to put the pieces back together—in particular, my constituency of East End.

On Monday when I reached the Police Station in Bodden Town I found that the roads were totally impassable. I had to find a way into East End and I started walking. After walking for a while I met a friend with a loader and that is how I got into East End; by constructing a road into the district. East End was totally cut off from the rest of the country. Upon reaching East End and since that day, tears have stained my cheeks from the sorrow and empathy for the people of East End.

One who was familiar with the district of East End would find themselves lost in that district because of the extent of damage.. People are displaced, property is gone, homes are destroyed, and there are over 100 of my people displaced and still in shelters. Mr. Speaker, I dare say many tears will continue to flow for a long time yet. I had an opportunity to speak with some of the older folks since then and they reminded me of the 1932 and 1944 hurricanes. However, they have never seen anything as devastating as we have just witnessed. Thank God, we have survived and only by the grace of God.

As I go around East End, and I have been there since the Monday following the passage of Hurricane Ivan; we hear of the acts of bravery of people during that hurricane. People left shelters to go out to rescue other people; they were swimming in twelve feet of water right in the middle of East End where the Capt. George Dixon Park is located. There will be time to thank these people and I will. They were young men, foreigners who went out and risked their lives to save others. On behalf of this country, I thank them from the bottom of my heart and there will be a proper time to thank these people publicly.

Since then we have had many acts of generosity in that district. As soon as the storm was over and I went to East End, I found a way to get to a lady in East End, and I know that this lady is a very private person, but these stories of generosity in these times must be told. Mrs. Susan Olde, has lived in that district for the past 7 or 8 years, and I went to this lady for help for the district of East End. Without question, she offered financial assistance. What was so interesting about me finding Mrs. Olde, was that she stayed here and she battled that storm with the people of East End. Thus far, there has been over $200,000 of aid sent to the district through this woman. Mr. Speaker, directly given by her and she has committed $3 million to the rebuilding of East End. [Applause] There must come a time in the life of the people of East End we when we honour that family and if I am around something must be named in their honour in that district.

While the National Hurricane Committee prepared us well for the storm, they have become overwhelmed with the aftermath of this Hurricane Ivan. We could not have handled it. East End was cut off, and if it were not for the generosity of this woman we would have still been in East End, scrambling, trying to get food into East End. I am eternally grateful to this woman.

What is more interesting is that we just got an update from CUC and we are talking about 8 to twelve before we get power in this country and 8 to ten before we can get it to East End. Mr. Speaker, do you know what this woman has done? She has bought 200 generators, one for every household in the district East End. If you think that is not generosity—and feelings for the people that she and her children are living among. That woman, the Trust that runs her life (and she gave me permission to say this) since her husband died, sent a plane to this country to take her out before the storm but she refused to go. That is what we need. Those are the types of people we need more of in this country.

I know there are people here in this country with the financial wherewithal that can do the same thing and my appeal to them is to now help us rebuild our Country. I have a few words for Mother Country and I will take my licks for this one. I have broad shoulders and have never once shirked my responsibility and never once been afraid. In 1999, England made a big thing about how they were going to give us citizenship, non-reciprocity, but we would have all the privileges of an Englishman.

During the same time, England brought upon us another impending disastrous situation. When they supported FATF and OECD, to take our feet from under us, we survived—but barely, because of the struggles, the fight that we as a people put up against England and her G-8 friends. We survived them then.

They claim that the Cayman Islands is one of their prized possessions. Here we are devastated by an act of nature and England sent two of their warships and then after a few days withdrew them. I would like to know where that British citizenship has come from and of what value is it to us?

The Leader of Government Business read a letter from Mr. Rammell. The whole world has sympathised with us and if that is all England can do then I say something is wrong with that. You sympathise with us? Maybe our biggest downfall has been our success. Every country in this world has experienced disasters and all the other countries come together to assist them and here we are an overseas territory and England has done literally nothing to support the Cayman Islands, although I do not know but understand there is a rumour that they sent a former governor from BVI to assist the current governor. Is that what they think we need now? We do not need that now. We do not need that, we have sufficient support here for the current governor, what happened to the Chief Secretary? We do not need that, we need support, security and financial support and if they intend to help us I would like to see it very soon.

I wonder if they recall the war in Falklands and people of this country went from house to house collecting $1, $10 bills and $20, from the little old ladies. This was sent to England to support their war against Argentina. Those same old ladies have now lost their homes. Where is England, Great Britain? We helped them with $1 million dollars to maintain sovereignty over Falklands. Here we are devastated, not one leaf on the tree and they are not sending one pound of fertiliser to get the green leaf back. One pound of fertiliser cost less than $1 million, send us something, send us a gallon of water. The people of this country, my people, must know that England is doing nothing to help us. We are too afraid and do not speak from our hearts. The time has come, the time is nigh that England step up to the plate and we are not only here to cut our feet from under us in our financial industry but also when the time comes that we need help, they must respond. If they want to talk in the G-8 about their country in the Caribbean then they must help us rebuild it. Let us rebuild it.

My message to England is very simple. It depends on who you talk to, either an Arabian or Egyptian bird, named the Phoenix. It is so ironic that that mythical bird lives for 500 years then sets itself on fire rising renewed from the ashes. Why is it ironic? We just celebrated 500 years of existence and here we are, we did not set ourselves on fire but we have been burnt. My message to England is that we are going to rise from the ashes like the phoenix does and we are going to do it by ourselves. The same determination, commitment that our people had for the past 500 years have been passed on to us and we are going to do it. Surprise, surprise, it is not going to take 500 years to do it. In the next 500 years we will do it again and we will rise again. We are going to be the “phoenix” of the Caribbean; we are going to rise from the ashes and we are going to spread our wings even further than we did before.

I know that my people are ready, willing and very able. Those people from the past, our ancestors were in the days when it was wooden ship and iron men and that is what they have passed on to us, through their actions and the spoken word. While England is thousands of miles away, we have learnt well from our ancestors and we will do it, I promise you, Mr. Speaker. It will be in our lifetime, mine and yours. We will do it; that is my message to England. We are the phoenix, the phoenix of the East, the phoenix of the East has arrived in the Caribbean, and if it means I have to work my hands to the bones that is what I will do to bring this country back from the ashes. The ashes will not keep us down. I think that is enough for England.

Mr. Speaker, I would just like to turn to other areas that I feel need to be addressed. As I said earlier, neither the National Hurricane Committee, nor anyone else in the country has been prepared for the aftermath; it was impossible. However, the time has come for us to stop the meetings. By now we should have understood, or maybe we have not yet understood the enormity of what we have to do. I see it every day I am in East End. This morning at 6 o'clock I was at the door of the Second Elected Member for George Town, to get him to accompany me to Progressive Distributors to get food for my people in the shelter so that they could get breakfast by 8.30 or 9 o'clock. We did that and that is how it has been going because travelling into East End is extremely difficult. The roads are destroyed, it is a makeshift road and it is dangerous.

Mr. Speaker, you mentioned it yourself yesterday that you wanted to adjourn to allow Members and staff to make it over that almost impassable road, as a result of Ivan. The time has come to refocus. There was a point when the issue was food and clean drinking water. As far as I am concerned, I feel that I have that under control in East End. There are other places that we need to pay more attention to but right now every day in East End, food is distributed between 8 and eleven o'clock in the mornings, and more on the weekends. One of the things I implore from the people of these Islands, is to have a little patience. Nothing will be the way it was before and if we have to eat a few corned beef, sausage and chunky beef from the cans for the next few weeks that is what we will have to do to survive. That is all I am eating, I am eating that at home, I do not even have hot water to shave. There has to be some patience exercised in this process; I implore the people to be a little patient.

To the people in my district, I want them to come out every morning and get whatever they need from the distribution point at the Civic Centre. That brings me to a convenient point about the importation of goods to this country and the commandeering of goods. I know we under a state of emergency and whatever is needed the Government has the right to commandeer stuff in the best interest of the public and requisition officer that are civil servants. I understand that, but I know when I started this process Tuesday last, there were a number of looters in the street on Sound Road. I went to East End and brought some people down to get the container through. That is an unfortunate state of affairs in our country. I will speak briefly on the security and how our people are feeling at this stage, but first, let me explain, that is not the Cayman way. That is not the Cayman culture. While we may get upset and we may get disrupted, agitated and whatever adjective you may want to use to describe us, we do not do that. There were no Caymanians there; there were other nationals that were in the street. I had to stand very firm with those people to get them out of the front of this trailer, and the driver was not excited about getting through but I was, because I was delivering food to my people in East End. That is a serious state of affairs but nonetheless it was delivered to East End.

Returning to the requisitioning of goods and officers, within the next few days I am going to have at least six containers assigned to me. I have been hearing that we are requisitioning stuff coming into the country. Did they all hear that East End is cut off and I cannot get any food to East End? Do they understand that of all that over $200,000 worth of food stuff gone to East End, not one gallon of water has gone into Arden McLean's house? It is going to the people of East End, it is not mine. I am trying to ensure that the people of East End, during this time of misfortune, they are relieved of that pressure and that I make them as comfortable as possible. Mr. Speaker, this is not a good thing, I do not have any shop, I am not selling generators or flour, and we are giving it away. I would implore all those who have any authority to tell them to let us through, to go to East End. There is no need for it to go anywhere else and if anyone else gets stuff donated, please let it go.

The best people to know what is needed are the 15 people who were duly elected in the country; those are the ones who must do the distribution in the country. The National Hurricane Committee has done well, but we are now reaching that phase where we need help: we need to get help in here. We need our MLAs who are willing to help and those who are capable, we need to get them involved. For too long, we have been left out on the sidelines.

I do not know what is going on, but I am getting food and what they need, to East End. We need to get every body involved, get the Members of the Legislature involved. This is not about politics; this has bridged the divide; the dynamics of politics has changed; Hurricane Ivan has changed it. There will be times when we will argue again, after we have made sure that our people are back on their feet and comfortable.

The time is now fast approaching that we need to get people back into their homes, even if it was not as good as it was, that is, someplace they can feel they are back in their environment and in control. They cannot survive in those shelters for very long. It is cramped quarters and while they may be living among friends, it is not theirs and the time has come when Government must support. We need the roads built back in East End. We hear CUC saying it is difficult for them to get in there because the roads are destroyed and we have put up with it for a week and a half. It is time for rebuilding and in particular, my district. Many of the Members might not have had an opportunity to reach East End yet, but it is bad, it is destroyed. I would invite any Member to go to East End to see the devastation that has been brought about to that district. I am going to need as much help as possible, to rebuild that district and I am glad there is no divide in this Honourable House now, in that I will get the support that I need to rebuild that district.

There is much to be done, but no matter how we do it, there will be those distracters, but they should come out to help instead of walking around shelters at night when they think the politicians are not around. They should come out and help the people of this country, and stop spreading rumours. Get up at 4 o'clock in the morning and go to George Town to get turkeys, chicken, bacon, beef and potatoes, so that the people in the shelters can be fed; that is what they must do. When I am having 20 hour days, they are sleeping.—that is what they must—stop distracting and spreading vicious rumours, about me putting money in my account. This is not the time for it. If you want to help, help. Spreading rumours about the Leader of Government Business and Leader of the Opposition, under house arrest must stop. Start helping! Go and pull one or two tarpaulins over somebody's house, pull some bush, clean rubbish out of the yard, get a chainsaw in hand and stop dragging around mouths and doing nothing about it. This is what is happening. This is the time to rebuild and we have to stop it. This is the time for us all to come together, come together as one and when the time comes for campaigning we will do that — not now there is no time for it.

There is no time for abundance of meetings; it is time for action, action. I hear that in the pre-campaign phase, a few months ago, the two Ministers from Bodden Town say that actions speak louder than words, and it does. It does and the actions by some of the distracters around here speak much louder than words. They have to stop it and get out there like the rest of us.

Security: I know that the Police Force is stretched beyond its limit; much needs to be done but we need more help with security in this country.

Our people are concerned about looters. I know, I hear them; they are afraid to leave their houses and I am not saying that looters are still out there in all places. However, I believe that the police have put that under control to a greater extent but as soon as looters hear on the radios that within a week, which I heard last night from press release, that they are going to release some of the people from Turks and Caicos and the other countries; this is not over, this has only just begun. It is not over, and we need as many as we can in this country now, we cannot afford and I believe we need to bring some people in to help us.

It is impossible for the Department of Environmental Health to do what they have to do in such short time; it is going to take years to clean this place up because DEH cannot do it in a very short time. I am mindful of time, but there is so much that needs to be said.

Mr. Speaker, I look forward to the lifting of the state of emergency, but certainly, I believe that the curfew is necessary. We cannot afford to have our people walking the streets all hours of the night, when they will upset the restoration process and it gives those unsavoury individuals—because we have them still, they have not gone any place and some of our own people are like that and if we do not keep the curfew in place they are going to hit the streets and their apprehensions on our people will be worse than experienced prior to the hurricane coming to this country.

It is frightening. We need to keep them home and the curfew must stay in place, regardless of what time we compromise. We need to ensure that it stays in place, thus, my reason for supporting the amendment to The Police Law.

Mr. Speaker, I would like to thank all those people in East End and this country who have helped—in particular people in East End shelters. People have been there: Support staff have been there around the clock for days and have not gone back to their homes. The churches are having churches in the shelters. Many of our churches are destroyed and have no place to worship; they now go to the shelters to worship.

I have a situation where the Alden McLaughlin, East End Civic Centre has no air condition because the generator is too small and today I am going to look for a generator to get air condition in this place. Mr. Speaker, I do not know what more I can do. I have done it all since last week Monday evening. I have had two and three hours sleep per night, but that is what it takes if we are going to do it. Fortunately, or unfortunately, for me East End was cut off so I had to take the helm. There was no one else available to help me; the National Hurricane Committee could not get there, their officials could not get there nobody could get to East End; I had to take it over. Thank God, I did.

One of the things I have always said about myself is that I do not like following too much because when you are behind the scenery never changes; you have to be up front for the scenery to change. Thank God, I am made like that or East End would have been in total chaos: no grocery stores, nothing in that district. We know we are in for a long haul, between Darrel Rankine, Oswald Rankine, Jeva Powell, Augustin Powell, we can do it and we are going to do it. Delmira Bodden and her brothers, heroes in that district to name a few; Donna Conolly, Ann Kirchman from the Lands and Survey, have worked until you can see the red in their eyes. I thank God for all of them and the unnamed ones. I trust they will not hold it against me, if I did not call their names because there are so many, too many to name and let them know we are on the block and we are going to do it, if it means our entire lives need to be dedicated, we are going to do it.

We just need a little assistance from the Government because no matter what assistance Mrs. Olde gives us, we will still need Government. We need to have Government, we need to rebuild the district and there is so much to be done. I ask for the support of the Honourable Members here and I know if I complained any other time . . . This time the Members are listening to me. They know how badly East End has been hit and how much destruction has gone through that place.

I would not advise too many sightseers to come up there because the roads are too bad and we really do not need sightseers in East End right now because we cannot even get across to Tortuga Club. The roads are blocked with 5 feet of sand, it will take us 3 weeks to get it cleared, and we do not need sightseers because the little restoration effort that Public Works is doing, will be disrupted. Stay at home and pray for us and whatever little donation you can give, please give it into the Government, we need it because our Mother is not sending us anything. We are going to have to do it ourselves.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: Honourable Members, before I call on the next speaker, I would like to take two minutes suspension to speak to you on a matter off the air.

Proceedings Suspended at 1.44 pm

Proceedings Resumed at 1.49 pm

The Speaker: Proceedings are resumed. Does any other Member wish to speak? Does any other Member wish to speak? If not, I would ask the Honourable Second Official Member to reply.

Hon. Samuel W. Bulgin: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I only rise to thank Honourable Members for their support of the Bill and I have taken on board the comments made by Honourable Members, and where possible those will be reflected in other legislation in due course. I thank you, Sir.

The Speaker: The question is that a Bill shortly titled The Police (Amendment) Bill, 2004 be given a second reading. All those in favour, please say Aye. Those against, No.

Ayes.

The Speaker: The Ayes have it.

Agreed: The Police (Amendment) Bill, 2004 given a second reading.

House in Committee at 1.51 pm

COMMITTEE ON BILL

The Chairman: May I assume that as usual we should authorise the Second Official Member to correct minor errors and the like in these Bills.

Would the Clerk read the clauses?

The Police (Amendment) Bill, 2004

Clauses 1 and 2

The Clerk:

Clause 1	Short Title
Clause 2	Insertions of sections 29A, 29B and 29C into the Police Law (1995 Revision) Emergency Powers

The Chairman: The Honourable Second Official Member.

Suspension of Standing Order 52 (1) and (2)

Hon. Samuel W. Bulgin: Thank you, Sir. Mr. Chairman, the usual thing is that we would type and circulate a Committee stage amendment notice. Given the circumstances and pursuant to Standing Order 52(1) and (2), I seek leave of the Chair to move Committee stage amendment and to waive requirement of written notice to be provided.

The Chairman: The question is to suspend Standing Order 52(1) and (2). All those in favour, please say Aye. Those against, No.

Ayes.

The Chairman: The Ayes have it.

Agreed: Standing Order 52(1) and (2) have been suspended.

Hon. Samuel W. Bulgin: Thank you, Sir. Mr. Chairman, In accordance with the relevant Standing Order, I seek to move the following committee stage amendment: That clause 2 of section 29A(1)(b) be amended by deleting "in any such locality" and substituting the following:

- (i) throughout the Cayman Islands;
- (ii) in respect of any district or place within any district on any of the Islands.

The Chairman: I will put the question on Clause 1 first and then since it is Clause 2 that is amended we will deal with the amendment to that. The question is that Clause 1 forms part of the Bill. All those in favour, please say Aye. Those against, No.

Ayes.

The Chairman: The Ayes have it.

Agreed: Clause 1 passed.

The Chairman: You have heard the amendment made by the Second Official Member on Clause 2. The Second Official Member.

Hon. Samuel W. Bulgin: Mr. Chairman, there is another amendment to clause 2, that I would seek the leave to propose as well. The other amendment is in respect of section 29C(3) where it appears in the Bill to delete "shall be forfeited to the Crown" and substitute instead the following words, "may be forfeited to the Crown or otherwise disposed of as ordered by the Court."

The Chairman: The Honourable Leader of the Opposition.

Hon. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Mr. Chairman, the Honourable Second Official Member stated in that amendment he just read if I am remembering it exactly “may be forfeited by the Crown or otherwise disposed of as ordered by the Court”. Does the word “may” . . . is it implicit that that does not apply to the second phrase in that amendment?

Hon. Samuel W. Bulgin: The objective is that it may be forfeited—

Hon. D. Kurt Tibbetts: One or the other?

Hon. Samuel W. Bulgin: It may be forfeited to the Crown or otherwise disposed of. The objective—the thinking there, Mr. Chairman is that for example, if someone loots someone’s property—

Hon. D. Kurt Tibbetts: That they can get it back.

Hon. Samuel W. Bulgin: It does not necessarily go to the Crown. If the owner can be traced then it can be returned.

Hon. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Mr. Chairman, that is not my point, though.

Mr. Chairman if I may, quickly, what I am trying to ask is . . . the way it is worded says “may be forfeited to the Crown”, my question is: Does it mean ‘or may be’ again. In other words — I am just speaking to the wording when you make the correction. Would you read it just one more time?

Hon. Samuel W. Bulgin: “May be forfeited to the Crown or otherwise disposed of as ordered by the Court.”

The Chairman: “...ordered by the Court.”

[Inaudible crosstalk]

Ms. Edna M. Moyle: ... That “may be” would not refer to that. The Court order will tell you where it will go.

The Chairman: Are you satisfied with that explanation?

Hon. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Mr. Chairman, I am outnumbered, but not satisfied.

Hon. Samuel W. Bulgin: I would like to assist if I can, so please direct the question again.

Hon. D. Kurt Tibbetts: I hear what the lady Member from North Side is saying and it is just a question of wording—not one of intent. We know that the intent is that the Crown will forfeit if not or it will be appropriately disposed of elsewhere. If it is someone’s property it will be returned. I am speaking about the wording. It begins—

The Chairman: May I suggest that for the wording you and the Honourable Second Official Member could clarify that, in the interest of time.

Hon. D. Kurt Tibbetts: That is fine.

Hon. Samuel W. Bulgin: That is okay.

The Chairman: If I may now put the question on the amendment to clause 2. The question is that the amendments form part of the clause. All those in favour, please say Aye. Those against, No.

Ayes.

The Chairman: The Ayes have it. The amendment forms part of the clause.

Agreed: Amendment forms part of the clause.
